Retiring from sheriff's office
Since 1977, Eva McKnight has handled a variety of duties as a Deaf Smith County sheriff's deputy. Next month, she'll retire and take on the task of re-decorating the first house she and her husband, Tex McKnight, have bought since their marriage in 1951.

Long-time sheriff's worker to turn in badge, microfilm

McKnight reflects on years of service

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When Eva McKnight became office manager and records clerk in the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department, there were 17 four-drawer file cabinets stuffed with documents that needed microfilming.

"When I took the job, the microfilm camera and retriever were new," she recalled. With a wry smile, she said it took "years" to get caught up.

In less than a month, McKnight will retire, knowing that she accomplished a big job.

"I never let more than two file cabinets fill up now," she laughed.

When she ends her career in the sheriff's department next month, McKnight will take pride in the work she has performed since Sept. 30, 1977.

McKnight's official retirement date is Nov. 30 but her last day will be Nov. 4. That day, her friends and co-workers will honor her with a brunch, from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

She started as secretary to the sheriff at the time, Travis McPherson. After about two and a half years, she became chief dispatcher, then moved to office manager and records clerk.

McKnight is a sheriff's deputy but declines to wear a gun while on duty in the courthouse, but it's never very far away.

"The gun is my most unfavorite part of the job," she admitted with a chuckle.

Records related to every person who is processed by the sheriff's department wind up on McKnight's desk, sooner or later. To keep individual records together on microfilm, she must splice the microfilm at appropriate places.

While that sounds like a fulltime job in itself, it's not all.

McKnight enters all arrest records into the computer, microfilms all department records and reports, maintains an identification and mug file, orders office supplies and files fingerprint cards.

And, that's not all. When asked for information by the immigration service on applicants for U.S. citizenship, she sends appropriate letters.

She also keeps time cards for the department and hires and supervises dispatchers.

And she wants to retire? Assuredly, she's looking forward to turning in her badge and doing other things.

One of the first items on her agenda is redecorating a house she and her husband, Tex McKnight, are buying.

"We're excited about the house," said Eva McKnight. "It's the first home we've ever owned. They've been married since 1951.

For 29 years, they've lived in a Deaf Smith County-owned house at Ford. Tex McKnight began a maintainer operator for Precinct 4 and has been foreman for many years. He's looking at retirement in the near future, also.

The couple's plans include some traveling and continuing their interest to bluegrass music.

Eva McKnight plays a mandolin in bluegrass music groups and enjoys playing the piano and mountain dulcimer. She has set herself the task of learning to play a hammer

Deaths in Israel spoil Nobel Prize, show peace in area is still afar off

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - The deaths of a kidnapped Israeli soldier, an Israeli commando and three kidnappers in a failed rescue mission demonstrated how distant peace remains between Israel and the Palestinians.

The violent conclusion Friday to Cpl. Nachshon Waxman's kidnapping by radical Palestinians spoiled the awarding of the Nobel Peace Prize earlier in the day to Israeli leaders Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres and PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

But the incident may also strengthen the fragile cooperation between Israel and the Palestinian autonomy government. Palestinian police mounted a serious campaign to find Waxman when it was believed he was in the Palestinian-controlled Gaza Strip.

Waxman, 19, a dual Israeli-American citizen who was kidnapped Sunday, was killed when Israeli commandos stormed an isolated safe house in the West Bank where the Islamic group Hamas was holding him hostage. One Israeli commando was killed and eight were wounded. Three kidnappers died.

The crisis weighed heavily on Israeli-Palestinian peace efforts. On Tuesday, Rabin suspended talks with the PLO on extending the five-month--old Palestinian autonomy in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho to the entire West Bank.

He declared Arafat responsible for Waxman's life, insisting the captive was being held in Gaza.

Rabin conceded Friday that intelligence had been wrong and said he ordered the operation after he got firm word Friday morning that Waxman was being held in the West Bank village of Bir Nabala, only two miles from Waxman's Jerusalem home.

The raid occurred about 90 minutes before the 9 p.m. (3 p.m. EDT) deadline kidnappers had set for killing Waxman, and amid reports that Israel was negotiating for his release and that the kidnappers' deadline had been extended for 24 hours.

"I would say that I would be happy to give back the Nobel Peace Prize to bring back to life both of the soldiers who fell," Rabin told a late-night news conference at the Defense Ministry.

Waxman disappeared the same day Islamic extremists killed two bystanders in a midnight shooting spree in a crowded Jerusalem pedestrian mall. His abductors released videotapes showing their dazed captive pleading for his life.

Rabin revealed that at one point, when he still believed the soldier was being held in Gaza, he had been willing to "seriously consider" an offer to trade Hamas founder Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, whose release the captors were demanding along with 200 other prisoners, for Waxman.

One kidnapper was captured along with an accomplice who rented the hideout.

United Way officials evaluate fundraiser

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

On Sept. 15, the United Way of Deaf Smith County officially kicked off its annual fundraising drive, ready to raise $150,000 to benefit local charitable agencies.

Now, halfway through the campaign, there are bright spots and not-so-bright spots as United Way leaders sat down recently to evaluate the status of the drive.

Originally, a highlight of the drive was to have been Care Walk 1994, in which campaign chairman Wes Klett and local residents walked through town on a marathon walk to raise money for United Way.

However, only eight people participated and the walk raised $476 -- far short of the amount raised last year when Klett walked to Amarillo.

To date, said executive director Sally Nolen, "we're still at 20 percent of our goal."

However, she said, the campaign is kicking into high gear over the next two weeks, with major company drives starting and United Way volunteers scurrying from one employee meeting to another.

"The next two weeks we're just swamped," she said, noting that the Hereford ISD campaign has just begun, as have other company drives.

But, he noted, there is still a problem getting enough volunteers to take pledge cards out to companies and to make sure those are picked up.

"We were short on volunteers all year long," he said. "That's one of the reasons we're so slow," because board members and a limited number of volunteers are forced to do more work.

Still, Mrs. Nolen said this year's campaign is off to a better start than last year's, "mainly because Seniors are doing so much better."

As of Friday, the Senior Citizen Division, headed up by Lester Wagner, had raised 95 percent of its goal of $11,233.

"Seniors are doing a bang-up job and that's off a year when they were ... way under the goal," Hatley said, praising Wagner and assistants Wayne Amstutz and Mary Edwards for their efforts.

Only three other divisions of United Way had reported significant contributions through Friday, Mrs. Nolen said.

The Non-Profit Division has a goal of $8,216, with $3,000, or 37 percent, raised.

The same percent has been raised by the Agriculture Division, which is comprised of area farmers. They have a goal to raise $4,635.

The Pacesetters Division is a new one for United Way this year. It is comprised of the 10 companies with the top employee giving totals from last year.

As of Friday, they had collected 19 percent of their $42,800 goal.

But that includes the Hereford ISD, which Mrs. Nolen said is just beginning to conduct employee campaigns.

The schools goal -- just for teachers -- is just over $13,000, which Mrs. Nolen said does not include any student contributions.

Other companies in the Pacesetters Division are: Hereford Regional Medical Center, SPS, Frito Lay, First National Bank, Hereford State Bank, City of Hereford, Gearn Industries, White Implement and Arrowhead Mills.

The new division was formed, Mrs. Nolen said, to give those companies with the highest employee giving records "a little recognition for their efforts."

Overall, said Hatley, these 10 companies will raise some 28 percent of the total $150,000 United Way goal by themselves.

The other United Way divisions have not got going very well as yet, with Mrs. Nolen reported they have about $100 or so reported.

She stressed, however, that volunteers are working on those divisions and donations will increase.

The other United Way divisions are: FIRE (Finance, Insurance and

Wednesday first day of early voting here

Early voting for the Nov. 8 general election will begin Wednesday in the courthouse office of Deaf Smith County Clerk David Ruland.

Voters requesting ballots by mail have until Nov. 1 to contact Ruland's office.

He reminded that only persons who over age 65 or disabled are eligible for mail ballots if they are county residents and will be in the county on election day.

"People who expect to be out of the county on election day must provide a mailing address other than Deaf Smith County," Ruland added.

Early voting in the election will continue through Nov. 4. Ballots by mail must be received no later than election day.

Counseling center will fill need of families in Hereford

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

With the opening of the Family Growth Center in Hereford this week, a void that has existed in marriage and family counseling is being filled. Purpose of the center is to provide counseling for personal, social, emotional and spiritual problems.

Director of the center is Dr. Guy Greenfield, a retired pastor and a certified pastoral counselor. His experience includes 25 years of pastoral work, college and seminary teaching, private practice as a marriage and family counselor, and authoring five books dealing with marriage, family and psychological counseling issues.

The Family Growth Center is located at 805 N. Main St., and the phone number is 364-7870. Persons can call the center and make an appointment for counseling, which is strictly confidential.

Pastoral counseling is a method by which a clinically trained clergyman seeks to help a person cope with concerns, including marriage and family problems. Pre-marital assessment and counseling is also available by referral from local pastors who perform the wedding ceremony.

Dr. Greenfield was brought to Hereford as a part of the ministry of the Fellowship of Believers. The center is interdenominational, however, and the director is responsible to an independent board of directors, established to provide financial stability for the center.

"The Family Growth Center is not a church and we are not here to take the place of one's local pastor," says Greenfield. We will attempt to provide services for those persons who may or may not have a pastor, or for those persons whose pastor may feel we can render additional help."

He added that "it is a simple fact that many pastors have neither the training nor the time to do intensive counseling...we serve as a supplement and support to their ministry."

Greenfield stressed that counseling is based on a strong belief in God, but the center accepts persons who have no church relationship at all, as well as those from any and all churches. "We are a ministry to the entire community and region."

Payment for counseling services will be arranged on the ability to pay. A sliding scale fee will be suggested on the first session based on the individual's income, explained Dr. Greenfield.

Drawing on his 42 years of experience in the ministry, his education and his writing and research, Dr. Greenfield knows something about how people get along...and how they don't get along.

His specialty is families, specifically husbands and wives. The five books he has written on relationships have sold more than 50,000 copies.

"Many marriages are in very bad trouble in this society of ours," says Greenfield. Families are dysfunctional; children feel unsafe, insecure and unstable.

"Both parents work. Mom and Dad come home at the end of the day tired. They've been fighting stress at work and they do good to have a civil 10 minutes with their children," he said.

"You know you're in trouble when you're always

The shot clinic will be from 7 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 5:45 p.m. Only people over age 21 are eligible for shots. Charges will be based on income and on a patient's ability to pay.

Football queen to be named

The Hereford High School football queen for 1994 will be announced a special pep rally on Thursday, Oct. 20. The rally will be at 3:10 p.m. in the high school gym. Candidates for queen are: Brooke Bryant, Clarissa Ramirez and Beth Weatherly.

Combest schedules visit

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, has announced he will be in Hereford on Oct. 25 for a Town Hall Meeting. The session will be at 9 a.m. in the Community Center. The visit is a rescheduling of a previous meeting that had to be postponed due to continuation of Congressional debate.

City posts agenda

Hereford City Commission at a meeting Monday evening will award bids on equipment for the aquatic facility, consider a change in the ordinance related to the golf course advisory committee, consider appointments to the board of adjustments and planning and zoning commission and receive a request for an agreement with Tascosa Industries. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the commission chamber at City Hall.

County Commissioners to meet

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will meet Monday at 9 a.m. in the county courtroom of the courthouse. Business items on the agenda include opening bids for fuel for the next year, consideration of the retirement plan, discussion of the salary supplement for employees of the district attorney, discussion of a new vehicle for the extension office and discussion of an allowance for the county clerk's office for elections and voter registration.

TAAS test scheduled

The fall session of the exit level Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) will be held this week. The writing portion will be on Tuesday, Oct. 18; reading on Wednesday, Oct. 19; and math on Thursday, Oct. 20. Students who are enrolled and in the 11th or 12th grade are eligible to take any sections of the test they have not mastered. Tests will be conducted at the HISD administration building and transportation will be provided. Students taking the test must be at the school by 8:20 a.m. each day. For more information call HHS at 363-7620.

Yearbook prices to increase

The 1995 Hereford High School yearbook Round Up will be available for sale until Monday at the regular price of $18 without a name or $20 with a name. After 8:30 a.m. Monday, the price will go up to $25. Students may put down a $10 deposit to get a yearbook at the lower rate. They are available from yearbook staff members or from yearbook sponsor Laurel Horton.

DAR award presented

Laura Leigh Blackburn(left) of Friona was presented a special achievement certificate Thursday from the Los Ciboleros chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Kathryn Ruga, DAR chapter regent, made the presentation in appreciation for a quilt that Blackburn made for a fundraiser. Joe D. Rogers, HHS history teacher, was guest speaker at the meeting, telling about a trip his family made along the original Oregon Trail.

Haitians welcome their leader home

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - A joyful, singing Haiti opened its arms to welcome Jean-Bertrand Aristide home today, three years and 15 days after the slum priest was driven from the presidency of his beautiful but luckless land.

Atop trucks laden with sacks of rice, jammed aboard rainbow-colored "tap-tap" buses, by dirt-caked car, on foot, Haitians streamed into central Port-au-Prince and to the airport to greet the returning president.

"He is our savior!" shouted one old man toting a picture of the little bespectacled priest.

Aristide took off from Washington this morning with his own saviors - representatives of a U.S. government that forced the ouster of the Haitian generals who had ousted him on Sept. 30, 1991.

"Because of your leadership, President Clinton, you helped us restoring democracy," Aristide said before boarding the plane. "Be assured on our side, we will keep our commitment. You will succeed, we will succeed and the world will celebrate this wonderful way to build a new world."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher accompanied Aristide on his flight home, leading a delegation of Americans attending a National Palace ceremony, where Aristide was to once again address his nation. Among those on the guest list were such prominent Americans as Jesse Jackson and entertainer Harry Belafonte.

And hundreds of thousands of ordinary Haitians.

By late Friday, they were streaming onto the lawns and roadways of the Champ de Mars park for an overnight vigil before the domed, brilliant white presidential palace. Some 5,000 danced past midnight to a band playing a hybrid of Creole-rooted music with rock'n'roll.

"I haven't been able to sleep since Father Aristide left the country," he said, then smiled. "But I'll be able to sleep tonight."

But many Haitians were nervous, too, on the eve of Aristide's homecoming, fearful that his remaining political enemies - especially in Haiti's right-wing paramilitary groups - might disrupt it with new bloodshed, or his supporters might turn violently vengeful for three years of repression.

The 20,000-member U.S. military force here was on heightened alert. More than two dozen Sheridan light tanks took up strategic posts in the capital, and U.S. helicopters crisscrossed the skies. American troopers manned sandbag positions atop the National Palace.

MCKNIGHT

dulcimer, an instrument that has 50, or more, strings. Her husband plays the upright bass.

They are active in the Panhandle Bluegrass and Old-Time Music Association and have held offices in the group. She was president last year and is treasurer this year. The first Saturday of each month they gather at the Western Cowpunchers club in Amarillo. In July every year, they go to the Mobeetie bluegrass festival.

With bringing up a family of five children and working, Eva McKnight said she and her husband haven't had much time for other things.

"There are lots of places we haven't seen," she declared. "We want to get ready and go do them."

But, first things first. "I want to get my house straighted up," she laughed.

The house they're buying is in Wildorado and she's planning the work that should be done.

"The kitchen is the first thing," she said. "And, we're going to take out a partition so I'll have a dining room."

She's set aside an "old room," which will be decorated with antique family pictures and a bedspread she crocheted.

Eva McKnight is looking forward to retirement although she takes pride in her work for Deaf Smith County. Only three elected officials, District Judge David Wesley Gulley, County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley and District Clerk Lola Faye Veazey, and Ray Quillen, district court reporter, have been at the courthouse longer that she. Tex McKnight has been a county employee longer than anyone on the payroll.

Through the years, Eva McKnight has worked to improve operation of the county's law enforcement office.

"When I came here, there was no bookkeeping system at all, no organization," she recalled. All that has changed.

Her successor, Leslee Backus, will have a good road map to follow as she performs some of the duties. Part of McKnight's job will be handled by another department employee, Sharon Pennington.

A couple weeks ago, the records department was moved into an expanded area adjacent to the sheriff's office.

The former location of the office afforded Eva McKnight a unique opportunity to serve Deaf Smith County residents.

"Being next door to the jail, I often has people come in an talk to me about their kids or friends," she said. "They needed someone to talk to and I was handy."

UNITED WAY

Real Estate), Business and Industry, Commerce, Corporate Gifts, Professionals and Public/Federal/State.

As for the rest of the campaign, Hatley said the key to a successful fundraising drive is simply getting in the doors of companies.

"If we can just talk to employees, we feel like we're going to be successful to a certain extent," he said, especially in areas where United Way is not collecting anything at this time.

Mrs. Nolen said that employees or owners of companies that don't currently have United Way drives, but who want to give, can call the United Way office and get a pledge card.

Company owners who want to set up an employee drive also may call. The number is 364-5220.

Volunteers also are needed to help out with the last three weeks of the campaign -- although both officials said it is likely the drive will continue after the official Oct. 27 ending date.

Last year, Hatley said, the United Way raised $128,000 "on roughly 60 percent of our cards."

If all volunteers who say they will work pledge cards would do so, he said, the drive will be more successful.

Mrs. Hatley said United Way board member Don Cumpton came up with a simple formula to help the United Way.

If every person in Hereford who has a job -- roughly 9,500 people -- gave up one soft drink a week (at 50 cents each) for one year and gave that money to United Way, the total raised would be $247,000.

Hatley said donors sometimes don't realize that United Way serves 12 agencies and give United Way volunteers the same donation they would to a single charitable agency collecting funds.

"I would just dare somebody to say they're not involved with one of the United Way agencies," he said. "It's pretty hard not to be affected by one of the United Way agencies, either directly or indirectly."

Mrs. Nolen said she is optimistic about this year's drive, despite the slow start.

"I'm excited about it. I think we're talking to more people. ... I'll be surprised and disappointed if we don't do better than years past."

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSERAND
Mayor, City of Hereford

I hope that you have been keeping abreast of some of the exciting things happening in your City. But just because some of these are so exciting, I thought I would mention right now a few of them in which you possibly might have an interest.

As many of you know, we just completed our neighborhood parks meetings and just last Monday, we had our planning session to assign priorities to the park projects suggested by the neighborhood groups.

Of all the things we have done recently, I think our park improvements are going to be some of the most beneficial for our citizens. At least you can reach out and touch them.

For all of you who took part in the neighborhood parks meetings, I say thank you from your City Commission. We appreciate your input. If some of you don't know what our projects are and how we adopted them, I would be happy to discuss them with you, or you could stop by City Hall and pick up a copy of what we're doing.

Thursday, Don Kundert started pouring concrete for our new aquatic center. As we move forward on this project, it is thrilling to watch, and I encourage all of you to stop by and see what Don is accomplishing through the efforts of his staff. I think that when all of the work is done for the aquatic center, you will be real proud of this wonderful opportunity for each of us.

As you know, we recently established the Hereford Economic Development Corporation Board. I asked five persons to serve on this initial board: Shirley Garrison, president; Dr. Cliff Skiles, vice president; Don Graham, secretary-treasurer, and members Rosendo Gonzalez and Jerry Stevens.

These men have accepted a tremendous challenge on behalf of all the people of Hereford, and let me suggest that as you see these fellows around town you take time to thank them for the donation of part of their lives to help the City of Hereford.

While I'm on the subject of the Economic Development Corporation, I know there have been a few questions about the budget; and the way it was presented to the board and subsequently presented to the public might cause some confusion. As you will recall, we have estimated total revenues for a year to be somewhere between $300,000 and $350,000.

The budget as proposed showed only a revenue stream of $187,963, a long way from $300,000. What I'd like to point out is that the estimated revenue simply covered the period from Jan. 1 through July 31, and Mike Hatley, the interim director, used a five percent reduction in estimated income simply to be on the safe side.

On the other hand, the operating budget of $84,740 is for a 12-month period, beginning Oct 1, 1994, and running through Sept. 30, 1995. What we have is a 12-month expenditure budget and a seven-month revenue budget. I think this gives one a little better idea of the expected operation of the board. I know the board is looking at the possibility of at least three different economic opportunities for Hereford and Deaf Smith County, and, hopefully, one or more of them will develop in the next few months.

I'm happy to report that our youth seem to be respecting our juvenile curfew. Since its implementation on Oct. 1, we have had reported only six citations. When I visited with the chief of police, he told me that as far as he knew from the reports of his officers, not one of the parents of the children involved knew that their children were out on the street.

This is one of the purposes of the juvenile curfew -- to make sure that our family members know where their children are, but also to protect our children. At least after the first 15 days of the curfew, we'd have to say it is worthwhile. I hope as we move forward here in Hereford, our youth will continue to realize that this curfew is for their protection and will be a positive tool in the interaction between parent and child.

As always, if you have questions or suggestions about the operation of your city, I encourage to visit with me and your city commissioners. We truly are interested in what you see that would make Hereford a better place for all of us to live.

GREENFIELD

exhausted; you're not happy; you can't get along and your life is going nowhere. You wake up one day and realize you don't even know your kids," continued Greenfield.

He tells couples they must learn to accept one another and their differences. Work, play and worship together. Consider the family members as teammates, not as competitors.

"If things are okay at home, they'll be okay elsewhere. If you can cope at home, you can cope in the workplace. If you've got a home you can go to in the evening, a home that's happy and nurtured, then the next day you can face anything at work," Greenfield said.

Before coming to Hereford, Dr. Greenfield was pastor of Eastern Hills Baptist Church in Albuquerque, N.M. He retired as a pastor on May 31, 1994. He most recently was director of a Pastoral Counseling Center at Sandia Baptist Church in Albuquerque.

He is a former pastor of Baptist churches in Los Alamos, N.M., West Palm Beach, FL., College Station, TX., and Grandfield, OK. He also served as an interim pastor at several churches, including a brief period as interim pastor at First Baptist Church, Hereford, in 1982.

Born Aug. 17, 1931 in Frederick, OK., Greenfield earned his BA degree at Oklahoma Baptist University; and received a master's degree in sociology/family counseling at Texas Tech University in 1970. He also has Ph.D and a master divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, a clinical pastoral education certificate from Palm Beach County Medical Center, and post-doctoral fellowships from Oxford University and Texas Christian University.

In addition to authoring five books, he has written numerous articles in various publications. He has also written numerous Sunday School lessons for various periodicals. His latest book, "Re-Igniting Love and Passion in Your Marriage," is to be released in 1995.

Dr. Greenfield and his wife, Carole, were wed in 1952. They have three grown children--Mrs. Paige Polson of Midland, Nelson of Dallas, and Todd of Fort Worth.

Mrs. Greenfield has over 18 years experience in preschool/children's ministry and has authored several articles for magazines. She has been a speaker for women's conferences and retreats on themes of spiritual growth and family life.

Court action affects trio

Terms of probation of two defendants were modified and probation of another defendant was revoked during a session of 222nd District Court Friday. Judge David Wesley Gulley presided.

Maria Bustos Chavez, originally sentenced to seven years' probation, was ordered to serve a five-year term in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division. She was convicted of theft, over $750 but under $20,000.

Probation of Adolfo Cadena, convicted of credit card abuse, was modified. He was ordered to the Taylor County Restitution Center. On completion of the term, he will be placed on three months intensive supervision.

Michael Hubbard, 22, was placed on probation for seven years on revocation of deferred adjudication probation. He was convicted of burglary of a motor vehicle. He will go to the Brownfield Restitution and Treatment Center.

Justice Department to continue probe of Cisneros

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department has found the allegations that Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros misled the FBI about how much he paid a former lover specific and credible enough to warrant additional investigation, Cisneros' lawyer announced Friday.

The decision to open what is known as a preliminary inquiry gives the Justice Department 90 days from now to decide whether to ask for the appointment of special prosecutor to conduct a full investigation.

For the last 30 days, Justice investigators were trying to decide merely whether the allegations were specific and credible.

"It doesn't at all surprise us given the limited nature of the language in the statute," Cisneros' lawyer, Cono Namorato, said of the decision. "We remain very confident the investigation will go nowhere."

Investigators have been looking at whether Cisneros understated the amount of the payments during background interviews with FBI agents as part of his nomination to be HUD secretary.

Cisneros, who is in Oakland, Calif., for a community development symposium, relayed a statement through his lawyer:

"While I had hoped that this matter would end during the first stage of the inquiry, given the limited scope of that stage I understand why it has moved into the next phase. I have made mistakes in judgment in my personal life, but I have always adhered to the law.

"I have not allowed this matter to distract me from my duties. My lawyers will deal with this matter while I continue to focus on the housing problems of our nation's communities."

The inquiry centers on taped conversations between Cisneros and his former lover, Linda Medlar, in which they fretted over whether his nomination would be derailed once FBI agents learned of the payments.

"The issue now is not whether assistance was provided to Ms. Medlar, the propriety of such assistance or the secretary's disclosures about those matters," Namorato said. "The focus of the investigation appears to be the details of the timing and amounts of the assistance."

Medlar sued Cisneros for fraud and breach of contract in July, alleging he reneged on a verbal agreement to pay her $4,000 a month until her teen-age daughter graduated from college. She sought $256,000 and unspecified punitive damages.

Cisneros, the former mayor of San Antonio, denied having an agreement with Medlar, a former San Antonio political consultant who now lives in Lubbock, Texas. He said he gave her money out of compassion.

Medlar contends that Cisneros has paid her about $200,000, a figure Cisneros has not disputed. He says he is uncertain how much money Medlar got because he did not keep accurate financial records.

Cisneros' bank records show he wired $40,873.45 to Medlar in 1993, and used a cashier's check to make a final $15,000 payment. He acknowledged paying Medlar about $50,000 on three occasions after he took office, using money from the sale of assets he relinquished to join the Clinton administration.

"Secretary Cisneros was forthright at every stage of the vetting and background process about this difficult personal matter," Namorato said. He said Cisneros will continue to cooperate with the Justice Department.

Namorato said the department had followed requirements of the law that authorizes special prosecutors for top government officials and notified a special three-judge panel of its decision to move to a broader inquiry. That panel would name a special prosecutor if a full-scale investigation is found to be necessary.

The move probably postpones a resolution of the case until after the November elections.

Republicans had already begun to express concerns about the Cisneros case.

Sen. Lauch Faircloth, R-N.C., a member of the Senate Banking Committee, asked the FBI for its background report on Cisneros, saying he was "extremely troubled" by allegations that Cisneros may have lied to FBI agents.

"It just makes common sense that no one is above the law and that anyone who would lie to the FBI, especially a Cabinet secretary, has no place serving in high office," Faircloth said.

Medlar's attorney in Lubbock had no comment on the continuing inquiry.

TCTA president talks to teachers about block scheduling at school

Richard Gutierrez, president of the Texas Classroom Teachers was in Hereford on Thursday and briefed local educators on several techniques being implemented at his home school in El Paso.

He directed his remarks to the concept of "block scheduling," which involves holding classes for more than a traditional 55-minute class period -- sometime up to three hours a day.

At Montwood High School -- where Gutierrez teaches social studies, U.S. History, government and economics -- block scheduling was first implemented in the spring of 1990, when staffers determined students would perform better with longer periods.

An initial trial was made with three-hour classes, but that has since been modified to two-hour blocks.

As a result, Gutierrez told the teachers and administrators, Montwood High School completes a year-long course in half a year, then offers another block-scheduled course the second half of the year.

There are, he noted, many different forms block scheduling can take, including variants on the length of class and the weeks to complete a course.

HJH principal Marylin Leasure opened the meeting by explaining that the school is looking at block scheduling as a way to possibly offer an expanded curriculum to the children.

Business author has new book available

Don Taylor, director of the Small Business Development Center at West Texas A&M University, has co-written a book that is bound for its second printing just weeks after its release.

The book, "Up Against the Wal-Marts," was written by Taylor and Amarillo consultant Jeanne Smalling Archer.

Taylor's popular business column, "Minding Your Own Business," appears in The Hereford Brand as well as a number of other newspapers.

The gist of Taylor's book is to give small retailers a step-by-step approach for competing in a retail environment dominated by the mega-retailers, said the author.

"It's not our intention to paint Wal-Mart as the bad guy," he said. "It's just the environment we must compete in today." In fact, Taylor reports he has a framed letter from the late Sam Walton, Wal-Mart founder, which comments favorably on one of his columns, "Co-existing with Wal-Mart."

Taylor was in New York this week for an interview on a CNN television show. He is also speaking to and book sellers association in Chicago and preparing for a six-city book tour arranged by his publishing company.

Taylor said he and Smalling each wrote six chapters for the book, then each edited the other;s chapters. "The end result is a combination of our styles," said Taylor.

The hardcover book sells for $21.95 and will soon be available at Hasting's in Amarillo. It may also be carried at the University Bookstore on the WT campus.

TWO INCOME FAMILIES

Q. My wife recently got a job. Won't this additional income make it easier for us to qualify for a mortgage?

A. Indeed it will! Housing laws include a provision which requires a lender to use both incomes when figuring a couple's eligibility for a mortgage. Of course there are many other considerations: Such as other financial commitments, size of your family and length of employment to mention a few. If you would like any additional information, just give us a call. If your read our column we appreciate your comments.

Texas, as well as other states, has poured money into the educational system to improve and equalize the education of our children, but little progress has been shown.

Outside of the big funding battles and court cases, there have been some weak voices crying that money will not improve education...it's up to the parents.

"Eleven years after the landmark report "A Nation at Risk" alerted the American people to the importance that families can play in the education of their children, it still hasn't received the attention it merits.

"Thirty years of research show that greater family involvement in children's learning is the critical link to achieving a high-quality education and a safe, disciplined learning environment for every student.

"Three factors over which parents exercise authority--student absenteeism, variety of reading materials in the home, and excessive television watching--explain 90 percent of the difference of high and low test scores across the nation, not school facilities, not higher paid teachers, not big or small school budgets.

"Family participation improves students' learning whether the child is in preschool or the upper grades, whether the family is rich or poor, whether or not the parents finished high school.

"High academic success of students from Asian countries is attributed to the priority their families give to education.

"The big obstacle in this nation is overcoming our own third generation welfare, which has discouraged both work and education. But there are many other families outside of the welfare system that have not played a proper role in the education of their children.

1. Take a time inventory to find the extra time you need so the family can learn together. Commit yourself to learning something with your children.

2. Commit yourself to high standards and set high expectations for your children--challenge them in every possible way to reach for their full potential.

3. Limit television watching on a school night to a maximum of two hours, even if that means that the remote control may have to disappear on occasion.

4. Read together. It is the starting point of all learning.

5. Make sure your children take the tough courses at school and schedule daily time to check homework.

6. Make sure your child goes to school every day and support community efforts to keep children safe and off the street late at night.

7. Set a good example and talk directly to your children, especially your teenagers, about the dangers of drugs and alcohol and about the values you want your children to have. Such personal talks, however uncomfortable they make you feel, may save their lives.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

You know, as I walked around downtown Hereford this week, I looked at buildings and thought about some stuff.

(If you must know, I was walking because our oil leak reappeared and the car was in the shop!)

Anyway, I noticed some interesting stuff.

If you want to learn the history of downtown, just park your car and walk around for a while and look.

I saw painted on the back of one building an old sign that read "Hereford Grocery Store," with the telephone number listed as "112." I don't know what the building is now, as it faces U.S. 60, but I know now that it has been here a while.

Still another had a doorway and several windows bricked over and the whole area painted white. I wonder what that one looked like in its heyday.

Then, as I meandered back toward the office from the library, I got to thinking about one thing that would really help the downtown area.

As far as I know, there are only one or two eating places in downtown proper.

Wouldn't it be nice if someone were to come in and open a restaurant somewhere else in downtown, one that would provide a close dining alternative to people who work in the area?

I see something that is not fast food, but also that is not haute cuisine (i.e. expensive), where you could get a good meal quick, then head back to the office.

Seems to me such a place would become very popular in a hurry, since there are many people who for one reason or another are not able to leave downtown, or who want to be able to walk to lunch.

* * *

On the same subject, I have thought about other restaurants that it would be nice to have in Hereford that could provide some shopping variety and keep more money in town.

While the Mexican food in Hereford is very good, I would really enjoy seeing a Taco Bell come to town. I understand there had been the possible of that happening a while back, but apparently the deal fell through.

Another delicious addition would be Burger King (again, there are lots of hamburger places here, but one more won't hurt).

In other cities, the joke is that the Methodists (or Baptists, depending on your denomination) dismiss early in order to get to the Furr's (or Luby's, or whatever) first. Not having such a place really puts a dent in our inter-denominational relations here!

Now please don't think I am putting down the restaurants we have here. I enjoy eating out in Hereford and try to patronize most of the restaurants at one time or another.

It just doesn't hurt to have a little more spice in the soup pot (or whatever).

* * *

Finally, on a related subject, my daughters have been after me for months to write a column about a pressing need in the community.

They have decided we need to have playgrounds at our fast food restaurants.

I really think they're right.

After all, Dameron Park and the others with their good play equipment are fine, but play equipment at the fast food restaurants would not only provide an alternative form of entertainment for children, it would be a plus for people traveling through town as well.

If you've ever traveled with young children, you know how nice it is to eat lunch at a place where the kids can run off some energy before another stint in the car.

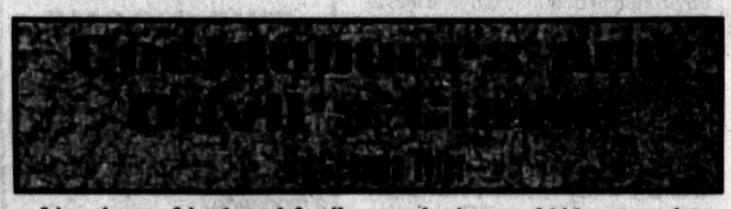

Hereford lacks such a place and I think our income from passers-through has probably suffered as a result.

It's something to think about -- now if I only knew how to do something about it!

* * *

Well, that's it for this week.

Have a good week and, remember, you only get out of life as much as you put in.

Listening to friends and family members bemoan the trials and tribulations of teaching school only proves to me that every era has its special problems, educationally.

Remember when the Soviet Union put that first satellite into orbit -- the year was 1957. I remember it well.

As it happens, my first, last and only experience as a teacher was during that particular time. Assigned to a fourth grade class in El Paso, I had as much business being in a teaching position as your dog does running a business.

But, El Paso schools were hard up for teachers. A journalism graduate should be able to teach fourth grade. Right? W-r-r-rong.

Because of scheduling, I found myself teaching all the fourth grade subjects in my room, except language arts. The boys' P.E. teacher had that class while I had a planning period.

While my students went to physical education classes, I sauntered down the hall to a sixth grade room where I was supposed to teach art and spelling.

Art? That was a joke. There were no textbooks and I have not an artistic bone in my body.

So, we did lots of spelling. That should have been the best bunch of spellers ever to finish sixth grade at that school. We did everything the book had to do and some I made up.

That fall marked a new experiment in El Paso schools. Fourth graders who scored above average on some kind of test were placed in a special class. They were supposed to be challenged to high achievement.

Since I probably couldn't even score as high as those kids did, it's a good thing they put me in a class of also-rans. Mostly, though, it was just a typical roomful of nine-year-olds.

The fourth day of school, one boy played hookey and took a classmate with him. A few weeks into the semester, the nurse invited all the students to her room for a head-check. I itched for weeks.

Academically, we were swimming along. No one had drowned. Even I was dog-paddling through the maze of curriculum.

My class was peopled with the usual mixture of kids, some short, some tall; some thin, some pudgy; some quiet and some full of mischief.

One afternoon as they collected their belongings from lockers at the back of the room, I was startled by a girl running to my desk, proclaiming that "they've closed Rufus up in a locker."

Sure enough, I found he was wedged into a small locker with the door closed. His body was crammed against the latch.

After some instructions to him to lean away from the door, we got it open and he stepped out, a little scared but otherwise okay. I never learned, for sure, who thought up the caper so it went down as an unsolved crime in my teaching career.

As weather turned chilly -- understand, though, that El Paso hardly ever goes beyond the chilly stage -- my social studies unit involved gravity, the solar system and heaven only knows what else. I just remember that we drilled for days on gravity.

We talked about Mr. Newton and his apple. We talked kites and balloons going up and coming down.

Everything was wonderful on a Friday afternoon as we finished gravity and went home for the weekend.

Then it happened. Sputnik was launched by the Russians and was circling the globe. It was not, repeat, NOT, falling back to earth.

Monday morning, I went to school under the mistaken impression that fourth graders would have paid little or no attention to Sputnik.

None other than my locker kid, Rufus, stood up before I had checked the roll.

"Why doesn't that thing come back down?" he demanded.

Not being a physicist, I stumbled around, finally deciding they wouldn't know the difference if I was wrong.

"Because it left the earth's gravity," I announced with great authority but much trepidation.

Those fourth graders thought I was a genius. I learned later that I was close to being right.

An AP news analysis

Taking a look at Clinton's psyche

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - First it was open season on Bill Clinton's legislative plans. Now even his psyche isn't safe.

According to the latest armchair diagnoses in national magazines, Clinton is:

- A premature adult who felt "primal abandonment" and used his rage "to drive forward, mediating ever-higher levels of conflict." - Mother Jones.

- A co-dependent enabler suffering from "Multiple President Disorder," who is "so open to suggestion as to be practically an empath." - The New Yorker.

- An obsessive-compulsive incapable of creativity, logical thought or firm decisions, utterly dependent on his wife to "compensate for that helpless state" and on the public for approval and validation. - Reason.

George Bush probably spoke for all presidents past and future in his distaste for what he called "going on the couch."

That doesn't stop amateur analysts - and some professionals - from expounding on the inner wiring of chief executives. But practiced from a distance, often by partisans, it's a dangerous game.

"The field quickly lends itself to garbage," says Princeton scholar Fred Greenstein, author of two books on presidential leadership. "It can readily become sheer bashing rather than character analysis."

Bruce Mazlish of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology probed the political psyche in pioneering biographies of Richard Nixon, Henry Kissinger and Jimmy Carter during the 1970s. Early in the decade Duke University's James David Barber published "Presidential Character" featuring psychological profiles of presidents from Taft to Nixon.

Now it's a rare political figure who hasn't been stretched out on the figurative couch, often posthumously. Just this week a public television documentary on Franklin D. Roosevelt examined the impact of his domineering mother, his infirm father, his isolated childhood and his dour wife.

Clinton is undergoing contemporaneous, mostly hostile dissection on a par with Nixon. The mood of the times and Clinton's elusive nature are two reasons.

"The more jagged and complicated the figure is, the more tempted people are to become overwrought in their analyses," Greenstein said. "Nobody tried to be Freudian with Jerry Ford. It wasn't worth it. But there was an enormous body of work on Nixon."

This month's New Yorker piece by Michael Kelly, his second lengthy excavation of the president's psyche, postulates a pathological relationship between Clinton and Carter.

Kelly also contends that Clinton's moods swing from bellicosity to indecision and speculates that this may be the first administration with more top aides who've gone through therapy than military service.

An even more negative analysis is found in the November issue of the conservative magazine Reason. Author Edith Efron tries in more than 20 pages to prove Clinton is mentally impaired.

She claims his tortured decision-making, perfectionism, over-concern with details, inability to set priorities and hunger for approval all are clinical symptoms of obsessive-compulsive disease.

Greenstein said Clinton's flaws may be real, but they are "garden variety" problems - not signals to bring on the Prozac or the straitjacket. The real illness "is unbelievably incapacitating," he said. "Clinton is a person of enormous vitality and resilience."

The liberal Mother Jones magazine might be expected to interpret Clinton's psyche sympathetically. But its November-December issue charges that "in countless tiny ways, Clinton has proven himself a man not to be trusted."

That's mild stuff compared to Efron's contention that Hillary Rodham Clinton "is to Clinton's mind what a pacemaker is to a heart."

Houston Chronicle on the Republican "contract."

Some 300 Republican candidates for the U.S. House recently signed a "contract with the American voters" specifying what policies they would pursue if the GOP wins a majority in Congress. The plan's drafters deserve an "A" for candor but an "F" in arithmetic.

Like Caesar's Gaul, the GOP plan can be divided into three parts: tax cuts going largely to the well-to-do, benefit cuts for the poor, and a collection of crowd-pleasers such as term limits and a balanced-budget amendment.

Americans who closely examine this document cannot fail to notice similarities between it and Ronald Reagan's supply-side, trickle-down economic policies. Those who surmise that the GOP plan also would lead to huge and ever-mounting federal deficits would be right on the money.

If the next Congress enacts the GOP plan in toto, the effect on the national debt would be catastrophic. Even if all the welfare and other cuts specified in the plan were achieved, the deficits would again spiral out of control.

El Paso Herald-Post on libel and the Supreme Court:

Book reviewers and sports columnists are breathing easier since the Supreme Court's latest pronouncement on libel. For that matter, even average newspaper readers should welcome this victory for freedom of the press. Had the court's ruling in Moldea vs. New York Times Co. gone the other way, the heart could have been cut out of opinion writing.

If the court had sided with author Dan Moldea and allowed him to sue The New York Times, he conceivably could have won his suit; then the floodgates would have been opened to lawsuits by writers whose works were unfavorably reviewed - even when reviewers supported their views with reasoned arguments. Criticism would have been tamed to the point of paralysis. ...

US wants security council vote against Iraqi troops

UNITED NATIONS - The United States is pressing for a Security Council vote today to ban elite Iraqi troops from near the Kuwaiti border after declaring it was prepared to use military force to remove the Iraqis.

A draft U.N. resolution warns Iraq of "serious consequences" if it fails finish pulling back the troops whose deployment caused the latest Gulf crisis. Russia, continuing its own Gulf diplomacy, urged delaying a vote until Monday.

The resolution does not say what the United Nations will do if Iraq doesn't comply, and some members of the 15-member Security Council are reluctant to endorse the use of force against Iraq unless it again invades Kuwait.

But whether the U.N. acts or not, Defense Secretary William Perry on Friday threatened American military action to remove the more than 10,000 Iraqi troops he described as "dangerously close to Kuwait."

"We're talking about military action," Perry said in Kuwait after visiting U.S. troops in neighboring Saudi Arabia. "I won't go beyond that to describe what form of military action."

U.S. soldiers continued to move into Kuwait and Saudi Arabia as a deterrent against any Iraqi attack - or for possible use against Iraqi forces deemed to be digging in too close to the border. The U.S. ground force in the region is to grow to 30,000 within a week.

In Washington, President Clinton said the deployment of U.S. troops will continue. "Let there be no mistake, the United States will not allow Iraq to threaten its neighbors," he said.

New U.S. aerial intelligence indicated that more than 10,000 soldiers of Iraq's Republican Guard may be entrenching in the city of An Nasiriyah, about 90 miles from Kuwait, Perry said.

From there, they could be back near the Kuwaiti border in a flash if Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein gave the signal.

The desert city is linked to the border region by a modern four-lane highway and a rail line that would provide quick transportation for any troop movements.

Iraqi troops used the road when they massed for their Aug. 1990 invasion of Kuwait, which triggered the Gulf War in which a U.S.-led coalition defeated Saddam's forces and ejected them from the tiny, oil-rich emirate.

Trying to end the crisis through diplomacy, Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev traveled to Kuwait and urged support Friday for Hussein's offer to recognize Kuwait's sovereignty in exchange for easing a crippling U.N. embargo on Baghdad.

"I have brought good news to the people of Kuwait and the emir that the independence of Kuwait is now reinforced," he said. Getting Saddam to recognize Kuwait - which Baghdad considers an Iraqi province - is an important condition for easing the sanctions.

But a Kuwaiti Cabinet statement issued several hours later said easing the embargo of Iraq after the latest escalation would be "a reward for Iraq and encourage it to violate international resolutions."

Russia urged a delay in voting on the proposed U.N. resolution until Kozyrev arrives Monday to brief the council on his meeting this week with Saddam, diplomats said.

Judge refuses to probe leaks in Simpson case

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Leaks of false information haven't damaged O.J. Simpson's right to a fair trial, and the unmasking of lies may have helped his case, a judge said Friday in refusing a defense request to explore news leaks.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito also dealt a blow to the prosecution. He refuse to reopen the issue of whether there were tactical delays in sending evidence out for DNA testing.

Ito said he had clearly indicated to the prosecution's DNA expert, "You are about to lose" and she had failed to present further arguments to dissuade him from throwing out some of the evidence.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark, apologizing for the arguments of Deputy District Attorney Lisa Kahn, said, "We ask the court to be forgiving and let us supplement the record. We ask the court's indulgence."

"How often do I have to hear these arguments?" he asked.

He promised to rule Monday on whether the DNA tests on the blood from glove, blood in Simpson's Bronco and blood on Simpson's driveway will be allowed.

Ito also refused to convene a hearing on a defense a motion to find the source of persistent news leaks.

"Before conducting a hearing I would have to find some prejudice to the defendant or that his rights are being trampled upon," Ito said. "I think it is to his benefit that false reports in the press have been unmasked, from the ski mask to the entrenching tool to the false DNA reports."

Ito refused to compel KNBC-TV reporter Tracie Savage to testify about her Sept. 21 story on DNA test results from a bloody sock found in Simpson's bedroom, a report the station later acknowledged was erroneous.

Savage was pleased with the ruling. "I'm glad I'm not going to be spending the weekend in jail."

Railroad companies pursue merger plans

WASHINGTON, D.C.--Burlington Northern Inc. and Santa Fe Pacific Corporation this week formally requested approval from the Interstate Commerce Commission to merge and combine the two railway companies.

The merger will mean a stronger, more competitive rail industry for America and efficient service for shippers, state officials of both corporations. The combined railroad system would be known as the Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Company(BNSF).

The timeframe for consideration of the merger has been established by the ICC at 535 days from the date of filing. If approved on that schedule, the merged operations could begin at the end of the first quarter of 1996.

"This merger will keep rail transportation focused on service and growth in the competitive marketplace of the 21st century," said Gerald Grinstein, BN chairman and CEO. "The combined system will provide shippers with efficient seamless transportation for bulk commodities, raw materials, finished industrial goods and consumer products through its integrated rail network."

S-Fe chairman and CEO Robert Krebs said "when the consolidation is fully implemented, the new railroad will generate a projected $560 million in additional operating income. The end-to-end merger will link all major West Coast and Gulf ports with the Southeast, Midwest, Southwet and the Pacific Northwest."

While employment reductions are planned at each of the four administrative facilities at Fort Worth, St. Paul, MN., Schaumburg, IL. and Topeka, KN., each facility will continue to play a vital role in operating and managing the new railroad.

It is estimated that the overall net positions reduced will be approximately 2,750 employees--about 6 percent of the combined employment level of nearly 45,000 people.

BNSF will spend an additional $90 million to link the railroads in Galesburg, IL., and in Fort Worth and to increase capacity by extending or building sidings and upgrading tracks and facilities.

Chiropractor says people don't maintain good health

As part of activities celebrating Spinal Health Month, Hereford chiropractor Dr. Todd Gray said Americans are not taking care of their health.

"In this country, we have excellent health practitioners and we know all the rules for maintaining good health, but we just don't pay enough attention to health," said Gray, a member of the American Chiropractic Association and the Texas Chiropractic Association.

"Isn't it strange that we have our cars tuned up and checked regularly to avoid breakdown, but we can't find the time or desire to have our health checked periodically to avoid illness," he said.

Gray said most people seem to take their health for granted and don't become concerned until it's too late.

"Although health-care specialists can correct many problems, the negligence of delay can often allow the illness to reach a point where normalcy can never be achieved," he said.

Gray recommended that a periodic spinal examination be made part of the family's routine. With a program of balanced living and maintenance of normal nerve function, good health can be maintained until a ripe old age, he noted.

Doctors of chiropractic are celebrating Spinal Health Month in October as a period to alert the public to the benefits of neuromusculoskeletal spinal health.

— YOUR EYES —

WHAT DOES MEDICARE COVER?

Medicare is designed to cover the cost of health care for senior citizens--and that includes eye health care, too.

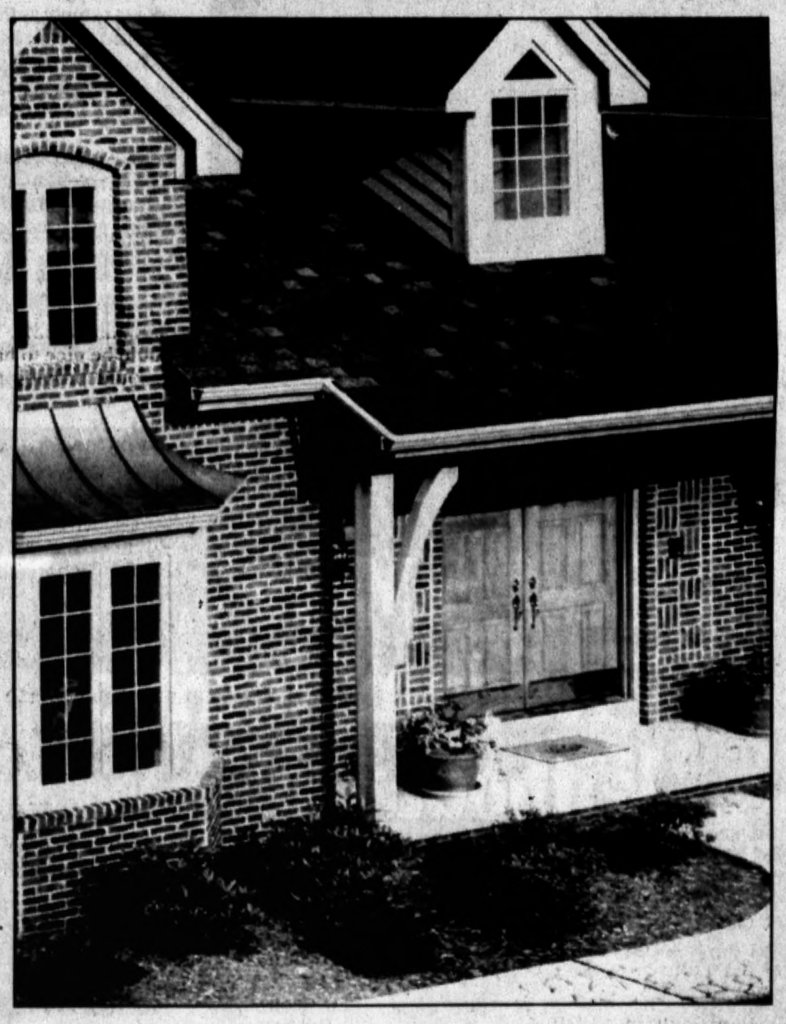

As long as the care of a licensed optometrist is necessary for a health-related condition, symptom or complaint, Medicare will pay for the visit, or part of it. Anyone with a history of diabetes or headaches, for example, would be covered for the cost of an eye examination. Blurred side vision, which might indicate glaucoma, should signal a visit to the optometrist; the eye examination, including a glaucoma, should signal a visit to the optometrists; the eye examination, including a field test for glaucoma, would be covered. Likewise, testing for cataracts is a Medicare expense. So are the glasses and contact lenses needed after cataract surgery.

In many states, optometrists may be permitted to treat eye conditions as well as diagnose them. Where this is allowed, Medicare will cover the expense. If you have any questions about what eye health expenses Medicare will cover, discuss them with your optometrist.

Lost in West Texas

Looking for secret to a region

EDITOR'S NOTE - Early explorers described a vast and barren chunk of Texas as the closest thing to hell, deservedly ignored. But the few people who live there now see only heaven; one native son reveres it as God's very abode. What secret does this lost and lonely land hold? A curious visitor's search.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

JAYTON, Texas (AP) - A century and a half ago, an Army explorer stumbled onto a hauntingly remote and desolate chunk of Texas prairie and was not much impressed.

W.B. Parker branded the hills and plains "inhospitable" and declared:

"Destitute of soil, timber, water, game, and everything else that can sustain or make life tolerable, they must remain as they are, uninhabited and uninhabitable." He vowed never to return.

Well, that relentlessly raw land was eventually settled, if sparsely. But major highways bypassed it, other Texans ignored it, and it remains today a region with little population or prosperity and no name or identity of its own beyond a few hardscrabble farms and ranches and small and struggling towns.

Joy Cave, a Guthrie schoolteacher, put it this way: "We don't belong to anybody. We belong to ourselves." Then she added:

"Guthrie is the geographical center of nowhere ... but something has kept me here. I just love it."

So where is "here?"

It is an ill-defined territory, well west of Fort Worth, where the West purportedly begins. It lies north of Interstate 20 within a triangle connecting Wichita Falls, Abilene and Lubbock.

A true map of "here" probably would include all or large parts of nine West Texas counties and bits and pieces of five others. That's roughly 8,500 square miles, an area larger than the whole of Rhode Island, Delaware and Connecticut.

Fewer than 25,000 people live in this phantom state within a state, many on small farms and larger ranches where the earth yields few crops and a relative trickle of Texas crude.

There are no tourist attractions, no daily newspapers, no television stations. Jobs are scarce, health care erratic, the population aging and declining. Many schools have closed. Others, unable to field 11 players, play six-man football, sometimes in front of an audience of pickup trucks.

What does the citizenry say of this geographic dead zone?

They boast that drugs and crime are pretty much nil, that the people are close and caring and, most of all, that it's a great place to raise kids.

"It's God's Country," insists Janelle Barry of Spur, which is about as close as any to being this region's quasi-capital.

"The Big Empty," native son Jim Corder jokes.

"I'm always looking for West Texas or my part of it, and not finding it," writes Corder in "Lost in West Texas," a whimsical and charming book that deals largely with his nameless homeland.

"My part of West Texas doesn't show up much in books," thus leaving a "hole" in Texas, he grumbles. Outsiders, he says, "miss the strange and lonesome beauty: the view one sees of the Double Mountains down the Salt Fork from the highway bridge between Swenson and Jayton; the first dramatic drop into the deep of the Croton Breaks..."

Corder, an English professor at Texas Christian University, was born near Jayton, but even he cannot pinpoint the boundaries of his province. "It just doesn't have any identity, except in the minds of the people who live there," he told a reporter recently.

Corder figures W.B. Parker and his expedition leader, U.S. Army Capt. Randolph Marcy, flirted with his province when they ventured many years ago into what is now King County.

As quoted by Corder, Marcy was even less impressed with the region than Parker. "It is, in almost every respect, the most uninteresting and forbidding land I have ever visited," the commander grumped, and spoke harshly of its "barren parsimonious soil."

Still true. This place is too dry, too dusty and hammered too often by winds from hell.

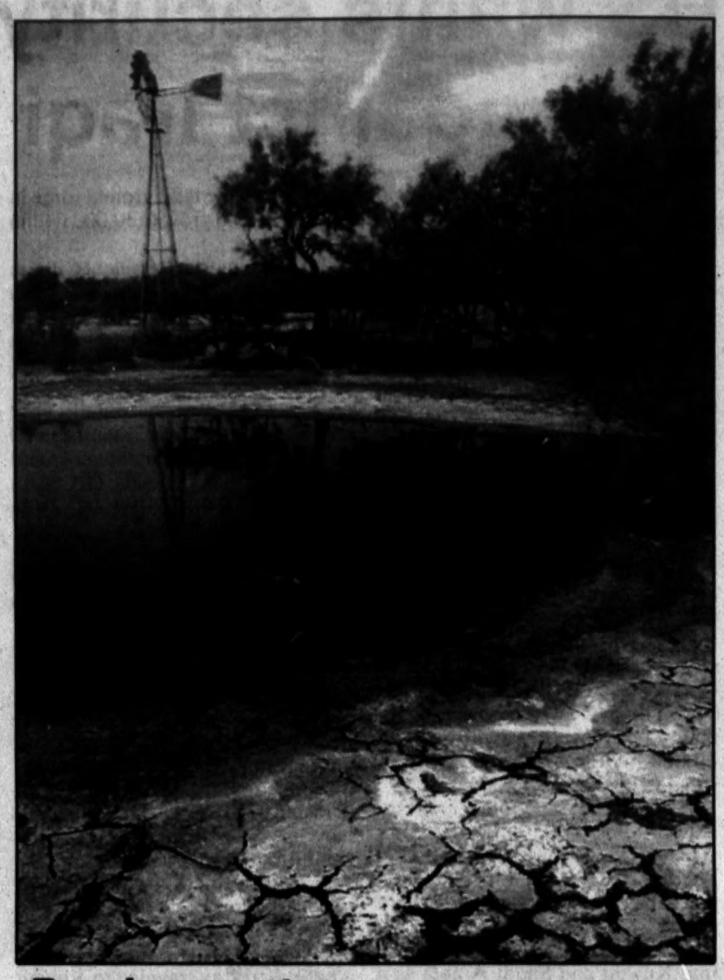

The prevailing south winds are lashing gnarled mesquite trees as a visitor arrives in Rule, population 783, on the southeastern edge of Jim Corder's cosmos.

The playground at Slim Sorrells Park is as empty as the Western Winds Motel and the Rule Memorial Museum, which is "Open by Appointment" only. The Rule drive-in picture show is open weekends from April "until it gets cold."

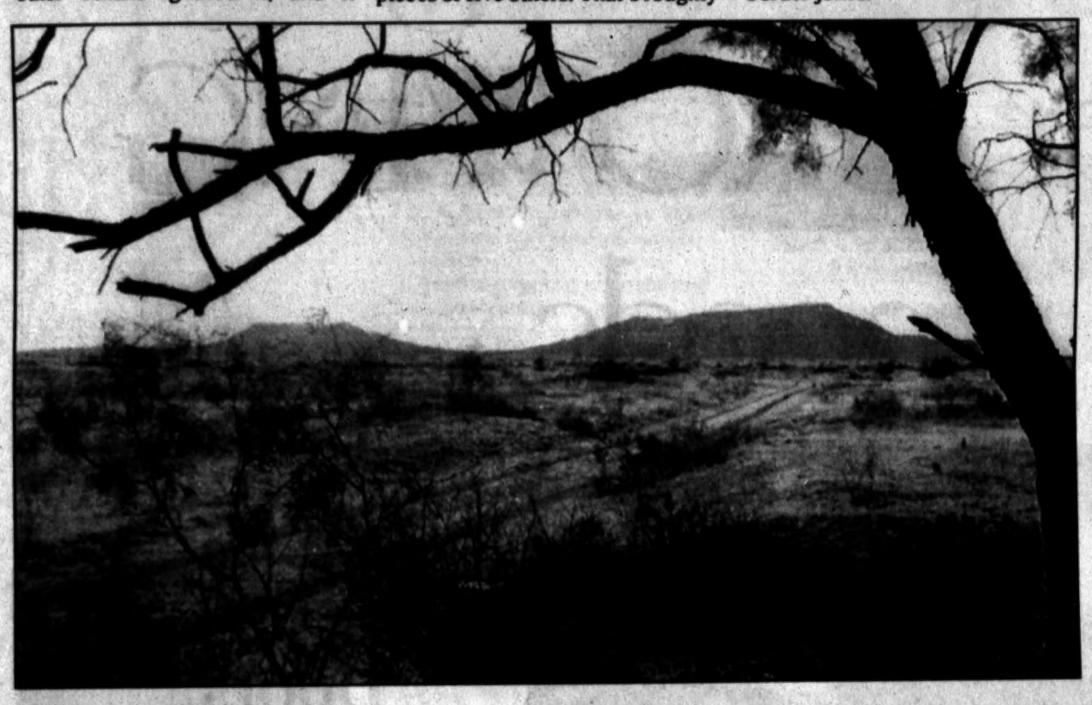

Across the Double Mountain Fork of the Brazos is a German settlement once named Brandenburg but, for patriotic purposes, became Old Glory in 1918.

An American flag still flutters in the center of what is now little more than a shell of a town. Its school shut down eight years ago, the grocery--

A Message to Pet Owners and Pet Food Buyers

Garth Merrick, President
Merrick Petfoods, Inc.
Hereford, Texas

Merrick Petfoods began in the mid-1980's with one goal in mind – produce the finest quality pet foods using as much pure beef as possible and market the products at a fair price.

Have we met our goal? You have to be the judge of that, but based on what thousands of current customers say, we've lived up to our commitment.

Beef 'n More® products are indeed the finest quality you can buy. Our location in Hereford, Texas, gives us access to the finest beef and grain products grown anywhere in the world...and being centered in the nation's beef capital allows us to utilize more beef in our products than is utilized by any other dry pet food company. Of course, it's no secret that dogs and cats love the taste of beef.

Regarding the issue of fair price, we believe pet owners are paying too much for premium quality pet food. So we work very hard to continually improve efficiency and keep our costs low. That means people who buy Beef 'n More products get more for their money.

I invite you to try one of our Beef 'n More products. Please judge its quality and value, and let your pet judge its taste and nutrition. Thank you for your business.

Sincerely,
Garth Merrick

WEST TEXAS

service station more recently.

In nearby Aspermont, population 1,214, the most arresting feature is a cheerful home surrounded by a most curious fence.

The fence is made of bedsprings and wrought-iron bedposts. It guards such treasures as old farm machinery, petrified rocks, wagon wheels, nail kegs, milk cans and, finally, a plaster duck and ducklings.

Down the road is Swenson, named for the once-great Swenson ranching empire. Fat cattle wearing the famous SMS brand once roamed ranches in central, west and northwest Texas.

Now Swenson is a ghost town, its most forlorn remnant a red brick bank, founded in 1911. The hot Texas sun peers through holes in the roof. Over the doorway an awning of metal and wood hangs like something dead.

Few natives know the country better than Gene Swenson of Stamford.

"There's a lot of this damn land that the only thing you can do is run a cow on it," he says, and even then it sometimes requires 35 acres per cow. "Basically, this is ranch country," he says. "In my opinion, some of it was plowed up that shouldn't have been."

In Jayton, the walls of the shuttered Barfoot Hotel are cracked and the paint has peeled. The weekly Jayton Chronicle is moribund, too, even though the town has fared better than most. Mobil Oil and the highway department are active employers, and there is a Chevrolet dealership.

A downtown historical marker reveals that the Double Mountain Salt Works was located along the Brazos River on the "Indian-infested frontier" and was the northernmost business in Confederate Texas.

Jayton also is the county seat - but that was not always so.

According to one juicy tale, cattle trucks whisked the county records from the original courthouse in Clairemont, a mysterious fire destroyed the building and the records emerged in Jayton. So would a new courthouse.

"That makes a good story," laughs librarian Micky Parker, but no such raid occurred. Furthermore, it was an electrical fire during a sandstorm in the drought-ridden '50s that demolished the Clairemont courthouse.

There is no mystery about the Jayton school system, which is first class.

"When my brother played football at Jayton," he wrote, "I remember watching the principal draw off the yard markers in the dirt with a hoe."

Jayton High's Jaybirds once played eight-man, then 11-man and now six-man football.

Don Richards, a Lubbock attorney, played on Jaybird teams three decades ago and plans to return for this year's homecoming game and his 30th class reunion.

"It was a great place to grow up," he says.

He remembers having to travel to Aspermont for the movies and to Spur to shoot pool. And mischief in those days was faking late-night accidents to stop truck drivers on U.S. 380 and driving a car across the train trestle at the Brazos River.

Ironically, Jayton's superb educational system is now threatened by the state's so-called Robin Hood school finance plan, which funnels tax money from rich to poor districts.

As a school official once explained: "Our people are very poor. We just happen to have a pool of oil in the center of the county."

Knox City, population 1,440 and the county seat of nearby Knox County, is also something of a paradox. Debbie's is a friendly catfish and chicken fried steak place, but the Oil Patch Cafe is closed and abandoned.

The golf course looks prosperous, and the main street is shaded by sycamores and leafy pecan trees, but J.D.'s Oil Field Construction Co. sports a "For Sale" sign.

A church marquee captures the flavor of this entire region: "Like Life, Few Gardens Have Only Flowers."

On Ranch Road 222 to Guthrie, home of the famous Four Sixes ranch, the terrain turns hilly and rocky but an oasis, the Chaparral, appears out of nowhere to offer wine, beer and liquor.

Purple wildflowers, defying all odds, sprout along the road, a lonely cow is wedged under a shade tree in a faraway field, and civilization is not much in evidence.

The road feeds into U.S. 82 and, after crossing the South Wichita River, which is bone dry, leads into Guthrie past the King County Courthouse and up to the headquarters of the 6666.

The Texas Almanac puts the county population at 367, not quite half of it in Guthrie.

Although Guthrie is little more than a ranch supply center, there is a library next to the courthouse, and "Lost in West Texas" was afforded lofty display this summer.

Along the highway from Guthrie to Dickens temperatures hover near 100 degrees and wind kicks up distant dust devils. This is truly the wide-open spaces. An occasional windmill interrupts the monotony.

Only 322 people call Dickens home, but they have the essentials of all West Texas towns: a Church of Christ, a Baptist church and a cemetery.

The drive-in is history, so Dickens has a youth-oriented video business operating out of a house.

They bring quilts, pillows, candy and soft drinks along with 50-cents admission, and flop down in front of a television screen equipped with a VCR.

"We've got 25 kids in town and we've been having about 30 show up," chuckles proprietor Mike Porter. "So we think it's a success."

Up the highway, the Double H Motel has rooms with refrigerated air, electric heat, phones and truck parking.

In neighboring Spur, a garbage company once announced in the weekly paper that trash would not be picked up as scheduled because of a holiday. It added:

"The whole town will be picked up on Tuesday."

Jim Corder returned to his homeland in the '80s and wrote wistfully of the Croton Breaks, Golden Pond and other special places in his childhood "cosmos."

"When you get to Aspermont, you're there," he wrote.

There?

"There," he said, "is just around a curve on the other side of town. There, off to the left in the blue distance, blue above the broken plain surrounding them - the Double Mountains."

God lives atop the Double Mountains, Corder insists.

"The Double Mountains are not only the dwelling place of God, but also, as the markers of my province, they are the first boundary of the cosmos," Corder wrote grandly.

Stopped by fences, ravines or a gate marked "Posted," Corder's approach to the Double Mountains was stymied.

A more recent visitor, completing his own quest, circled the mountains for three days. Like Corder, he never reached them, so he could not confirm that God lives there.

But Sammy Baugh does. The former TCU football great and pro Hall-of-Famer owns a ranch that backs up to the southern edge.

Five percent of all Americans 40 or over have never married.

Judge rules Rostenkowski can be tried

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Constitution does not protect Rep. Dan Rostenkowski from prosecution on charges of political corruption, a federal judge ruled Friday.

Rostenkowski's appeal of that ruling could delay any trial for several months, and more than a year if the matter goes to the Supreme Court.

U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson turned aside defense arguments that the government's case was an unprecedented intrusion on Congress' constitutional authority to police its own rules. Also rejected was the claim that Rostenkowski, D-Ill., was improperly being prosecuted for official legislative acts protected by the Constitution.

"But precedent seems to be lacking for the proposition that immunity attaches to a congressman's decision to hire employees whose duties consist of photographing his daughters' weddings, mowing the grass at his summer house or other personal duties," Johnson said.

Howard Pearl, one of Rostenkowski's attorneys, said, "We intend to appeal." Expressing disappointment with the ruling, Pearl added, "There are significant constitutional issues presented by the nature of this indictment because it is based on violations of House rules and not on criminal statutes."

The U.S. attorney's office had no immediate comment.

Prosecutors had contended that the constitutional provisions and internal rules of Congress "simply have nothing to say about common thievery."

"Certainly, none creates the virtual license to steal that the congressman has imagined for himself," they had argued.

The ruling came a little more than a week after oral arguments on the defense motion.

Rostenkowski was indicted on 17 felony counts May 31. He is charged with converting $636,600 in federal funds and $56,267 in campaign funds to his personal use.

Johnson rejected Rostenkowski's arguments that the charges relating to ghost employees should be dropped.

Herd uses open week to prepare for Borger

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces football team had the week off--but only on the schedule.

The Herd has a stern District 1-4A test coming up Friday, when Borger comes to town, and Hereford coach Danny Haney is using the two weeks to prepare for the Bulldogs.

Borger is 2-1 in district and 5-2 overall after beating Dumas 56-21 Friday night. Hereford is 1-1 and 3-3.

"We were able to get some film on Borger, and we put together a game plan last Saturday," Haney said, adding that he still needed to see film of Borger's latest games with Randall and Dumas. "We cut workouts back to about an hour a day (from 2 1/2 on some days), and we've been working on fundamentals in relationship...to what Borger's going to do to us."

The extra week has given Haney a chance to work on some things that he hasn't been able to get to as much as he'd like, for example pass protection for different fronts.

"We're taking off some of the rough edges that have developed along the line," he said, "some things that you don't have time to work on during the week when you're preparing for a game."

Hereford virtually has to beat Borger to keep its playoff hopes alive in the tight district. With wins Friday, Randall went to 3-0 (and 7-0) and Pampa went to 2-0. Hereford has games left against Borger, Canyon, Pampa and Caprock. With three or four games left for all seven teams to play, its too early to list playoff possiblities, but to simplify: if Hereford wins out, it probably goes to the playoffs; if Hereford loses again it probably doesn't.

"The first two games between the four you look to win this district have been close," he said, referring to Randall's 21-16 win over Hereford

The Herd has come a long way so far this year, Haney said. The special teams have improved noticeably. Opponents had great success on kickoff returns in the first three games, but the Herd seems to have corrected that in the last three games. and Randall's 6-3 win over Borger. Those three, along with Pampa, were the four favorites for one of the district's two playoff spots.

Haney hasn't seen Pampa but he feels "very strongly that they'll be like the other teams," he said, meaning Randall and Borger.

The team is beginning to gel, Haney said.

"Offensively and defensively, right beford the Dumas game, I saw things come together for the players: understanding what to do and how to do it," Haney said. "We've got to do this, got to turn the corner this week."

"We've got Borger, Canyon and Pampa back-to-back, finishing up with Caprock," he said. "I believe very firmly, if we win four games, we'll be in the playoffs."

Pampa, Borger, Randall win big

There were no surprises in the three District 1-4A football games played Friday night--unless you count the severity of the beatings.

Pampa and Borger both topped the half-century mark, as Pampa blew out Caprock 55-6 and Borger whipped Dumas 56-21.

The district matchup that seemed to have the best chance to be close, wasn't, as Randall beat Canyon 28-0 in the first-ever meeting between the two Canyon Independent School District teams.

Randall scored on a 76-yard pass play late in the first quarter, then scored again when Canyon set the Raiders up by fumbling the ensuing kickoff. The Randall defense limited Canyon to 129 yards total offense to earn the shutout.

Borger rolled up 555 yards of total offense--154 on the ground by tailback Cornell Jones alone.

Pampa totaled 589 yards and got 208 yards rushing from fullback Matt Garvin. Pampa did not have to punt to Caprock at all, because of the potent offense and four fumbles.

No. 1 Thorndale routs Bartlett

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

Before this weekend, Bartlett had not given up a point to any of its Class 1A district rivals since 1992. Part of the reason for that success was Thorndale spending the last two seasons in Class 2A.

In their first meeting since Thorndale returned to Class 1A to once again be Bartlett's district rival, top-ranked Thorndale scored on its first four possessions Friday night en route to a 45-0 victory over No. 6 Bartlett.

"I knew we were banged up and not hitting on all cylinders, but I didn't think we'd play this poorly," said Bartlett coach Terry Cron, who suffered his first district loss since 1990.

Class 3A's sixth-ranked Carrizo Springs was the only other ranked team to lose, although three top teams were involved in ties.

Class 5A's No. 8 North Mesquite tied DeSoto 17-17 and No. 9 The Colony tied Flower Mound Marcus 28-28. Class 4A's No. 7 Bay City tied El Campo 10-10.

Also worth noting was another shutout by 4A's unranked Little Cypress-Mauriceville, which has allowed only nine points and one touchdown in seven games.

The other four top-ranked teams joined Thorndale with impressive victories. Class 5A's Abilene Cooper had the closest call with a 17-7 victory over Odessa.

Thorndale's victory marked the first win by a home team in more than a decade in "The Battle of the Bulldogs," a rivalry between two teams who share a nickname and have combined for three of the last five Class A titles.

"We talked to the kids about having slow starts against talented people and they really responded," Thorndale coach Dick Cowan said. "We know we'll see them again down the line, so we really can't dwell on the score."

A future meeting would be the state quarterfinals, where the Bulldogs have held a rematch of their district battle twice since 1989. Thorndale won the state title that year and Bartlett was the 1A champion in 1990 and 1992.

Bartlett has been rebuilding with an extremely young squad since its last title, and the youths proved no match for the more experienced Thorndale.

Twone Simmons began the scoring with an 18-yard run on the first drive. The next possession ended with a 50-yard TD pass from Anthony Dominguez to Jody Broxson.

Simmons then ran in from 15 yards and Joel Simank caught a 5-yard TD pass from Dominguez for a 26-0 halftime lead. Simmons and Simank scored again in the second half, as did Michael Calvin.

Also in 1A, No. 2 Sudan beat Smyer 67-0 and No. 3 Crawford defeated Bosqueville 52-0.

In No. 4 Burkeville's 67-2 victory over High Island, running back Jeff Spikes had another standout game with 318 yards rushing on 13 carries. He scored TDs of 82, 37, 76 and 64 yards.

Longhorns suspend seven, including Pinkney, Adams

AUSTIN (AP) - Star wide receivers Lovell Pinkney and Mike Adams are on the No. 12 Texas Longhorns' suspension list for the second time this season in a round of disciplinary action that also hit five other players.

None of the seven can play in Sunday night's game at Rice Stadium, turning staffing plans upside down for the Longhorns' nationally televised game.

Coach John Mackovic announced the ousters Friday evening, saying the players broke regulations.

"We have few team rules, but these guys were out way beyond what a normal college football player in the middle of a season should be," he said.

Also suspended were wide receiver Wane McGarity, linebackers Jonathan Hickerson and Dwight Kirkpatrick, running back Darrell Wilson and defensive back Shunte Hall.

Adams, who was recovering from a sprained right knee, had been listed as questionable for the Rice game and McGarity, Wilson and Hall had been listed as injured and not among the squad traveling to Houston today.

Officials said Adams and Pinkney missed a required check-in at the Texas coaches' office between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. Friday.

Mackovic said he requires the weekly check-in to "make sure they're up and moving on Friday. Friday's a day when they usually catch up on business.

"Mike and Lovell were not completely truthful regarding some issues and that's troublesome," Mackovic told the Austin American-Statesman.

Adams had a car wreck just before dawn, said UT spokesman Bill Little.

"He did go to sleep at the wheel and apparently ran his girlfriend's car off the road," Little said.

Adams told officers he fell asleep while driving. He escaped injury when the car he was driving struck a light pole and street sign and crashed into a photography studio, police said.

Mackovic said the players' reinstatement to the team would be on a "case-by-case basis." The coach planned to meet with each suspended player Monday.

Tech raises hoop ticket prices

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - It'll cost more this season to attend Texas Tech basketball games.

The Tech board of regents voted Friday to increase ticket prices for both men's and women's contests.

Tickets will rise to $7, $9 and $10, depending on the seating section. Prices for men's games have been $7, $8 and $9 since 1983; prices for women's games were $7 last season.

Officials said the increase would yield $201,000 for the athletic department.

Surprising 4-1 Eagles to challenge Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It's just like old times with the Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys at each other's throat for the lead in the NFC East. The only things missing are Buddy Ryan and Jimmy Johnson.

The surprising Eagles come calling at 3 p.m. Sunday with the division lead on the line and Dallas coach Barry Switzer said their 4-1 start is no fluke.

"Well, they're No. 2 in the NFL in defense and they'll be the best team we've played all year," Switzer said. "They've upgraded their talent better than anybody in the league. They are truly a talented team and much better on defense than they were a year ago. They are not the same team the Cowboys ran on last year. They will be our biggest test."

Switzer said Philadelphia coach Rich Kotite has the Eagles cranked to a high level.

"About 90 percent of how good you are is how good you think you are," Switzer said.

Switzer will get his first sideline look at Philadelphia quarterback Randall Cunningham.

"I see he's back doing those acrobatic flips," Switzer said. "It will be a challenge for our defense to stop him."

The Cowboys Troy Aikman comes into the game on a hot streak and Switzer said it will be fun to watch the two different styles.

"Troy is more consistent and Randall is more of a risk taker," Switzer said. "Randall tends to run hot and cold."

Kotite said he is eager to see if the Eagles have closed the talent gap between themselves and the Cowboys.

"It will be a barometer," Kotite said. "They're at a level all by themselves right now. I don't know if we've gained anything. We'll find out. The Cowboys are the best team in football and I don't think any other team comes close right now."

The Cowboys have the top-ranked defense in the NFL and will be charged with stopping rookie running back Charlie Garner, who has produced back-to-back 100 yard rushing games. Garner has been hampered by a cracked rib.

Dallas needs to get its running game cracking, although it has the league's highest scoring offense. Emmitt Smith, searching for his fourth consecutive rushing title, has missed the second half of the last two games. He's been bothered by a pulled hamstring and the Cowboys had such big leads they didn't need him.

Smith is in sixth place in the NFL in rushing with 474 yards. He's 248 yards behind leader Barry Sanders. Smith missed the first two games last year and came on strong to win the rushing title.

"Hopefully, my leg will be OK and I can starting making a strong run at the rushing title," Smith said.

The Cowboys have swept the Eagles in each of the last two Super Bowl championship seasons. Dallas hasn't lost to Philadelphia since October, 1992.

Dallas was an eight-point favorite over the Eagles, who lost their opener 28-23 to the New York Giants. The Cowboys (4-1) only defeat was in overtime 20-17 to Detroit.

PREP

a big impact was Pearsall's Rocky Hernandez, who ran for 129 yards and two TDs in a 21-6 upset over No. 6 Carrizo Springs.

Cuero quarterback Clint Finley rushed for two touchdowns and threw for a third to lead the No. 1 Gobblers to a 49-0 victory over La Vernia.

Second-ranked Sealy beat Hallettsville 55-20, No. 3 Jefferson defeated Mount Vernon 28-6, No. 4 Sweeny pounded Van Vleck, 63-6 and No. 5 Gainesville topped Pottsboro 46-7.

Abilene Cooper had nearly two weeks to prepare for its first game since 1979 as the state's top team in the top class. Coach Randy Allen feared that may be too much time.

But his Cougars forced three Broncho turnovers, including one at the Cooper 1-yard line to kill an early-fourth quarter drive and preserve a 17-7 lead that became the final score.

"Our defense made the big plays to seal the win," Allen said. "We bent, but we didn't break."

Third-ranked Deer Park scored 31 unanswered points in a 38-18 victory over Pasadena, No. 4 Plano East stopped Richardson 27-0 and No. 5 Aldine MacArthur defeated Aldine 21-6.

Seventh-ranked Arlington Lamar beat Arlington Martin 23-12, and No. 10 A&M Consolidated handled Huntsville 41-7. On Thursday, No. 2 Austin Westlake defeated Austin Crockett 37-14.

Second-ranked Waxahachie beat Waco University 42-21, No. 3 La Marque downed Dickinson 33-12 and No. 4 Gregory-Portland used an 83-yard touchdown drive in the final two minutes to pull out a 22-21 victory over Kingsville.

"We all looked each other in the eye, and we knew what we had to do," said G-P quarterback Travis Bush, who set up his 31-yard TD pass to Jody Boren with a 34-yard run. Ramiro Lopez sealed the victory with a two-point conversion run.

El Campo had no interest in going for the win against Bay City. Already ahead on penetrations, the Ricebirds settled for the tie with a 27-yard field goal by Wade Speckels with 11 seconds left.

Class 2A's top-ranked Schulenburg used a 25-point second quarter and 416 yards rushing to beat Weimar for the ninth straight time, routing the Wildcats 52-13.

Second-ranked Archer City saw its unscored upon streak end at 26 quarters in the third quarter of a 51-6 victory over Electra.

Electra quarterback Joe Coffer handed off to tailback Richie Hernandez on a simple trap play that went 74 yards for the streak-breaking touchdown.

Third-ranked Goldthwaite, the defending 2A champion, crushed Florence 40-0, and No. 4 East Bernard beat Shiner 17-13.

Helton faces task of reviving UH

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Four years ago, the Houston Cougars were near the pinnacle of college football - ranked in the nation's top 10 and steaming along with a space age offense and a flashy coach who loved to score points.

"I still dream of it sometimes," said Eric Harrison, a freshman in 1990, recalling the big-time atmosphere of a showdown against Texas. "I was almost awestruck."

The Cougars were still in the afterglow of the Heisman Trophy season of quarterback Andre Ware in 1989 and they had another promising slinger, David Klingler, to quarterback them to the top.

Houston ended 1990 with a 10-1 record, ranked No. 10 in The Associated Press poll.

Then, the free fall started. There were back-to-back 4-7 seasons before coach John Jenkins resigned amid allegations of NCAA violations and other improprieties, although he never admitted any wrongdoing.

Poor eligibility rates cut drastically into the Cougars' numbers, as players failed to make their grades and dropped out, leaving the resources bare for coach Kim Helton when he took over for the 1993 season.

"For whatever reason, the guy who was here before did a lousy recruiting job," Helton said.

Houston went 1-9-1 last season and they were 0-5 and counting going into Saturday's game at Southern Methodist, a team Helton now compares to the struggles Houston is experiencing.

How far have they fallen?

Houston has a 10-game losing streak that equals the longest in school history and ties Navy for the longest current NCAA Division I-A losing streak in the nation.

The Cougars averaged an NCAA record 53.6 points per game in 1989. Now they rank near the bottom in all NCAA Division I-A statistics.

It was cause for celebration last week they lost to No. 7 ranked Texas A&M by only 38-7 and broke a two-game scoreless streak.

Houston's groping offense didn't cross midfield until the third quarter and didn't break up the shutout until late in the fourth quarter.

"Right now, we're in a situation where it's extremely hard to be a Cougar player," Helton said. "It's tough. You don't have any substitutions and the guy playing next to you is 17 years old.

"You can only get through it by fighting."

Attrition is Helton's biggest enemy in trying to rekindle the Cougars. He has 64 players on scholarship, 21 below the NCAA limit of 85. After this season, 55 will be returning.

Helton intends to resist the urge to rebuild quickly with junior college transfers. He's seeking strength in numbers.

"We're going to sign people that are freshmen and we're going to have a bunch of them playing again next year," Helton said. "You'll have guys going through some growing pains but when the light comes through, those people will be better."

When Helton took the Houston job, he compared his rebuilding challenge to Miami's return to national prominence. Helton was an assistant at Miami under former coach Howard Schnellenberger.

"At Miami, we started with more than 60 scholarship people," Helton said. "We didn't have a young football team when we got there. Jim Kelly was a red-shirt sophomore.

"There were a lot of pros that left there from that group. I think seven defensive personnel went to the pros so that's not a bad group to start with."

Helton has a sense of what SMU went through when it received the only death penalty ever handed down by the NCAA.

"It's not like UH had the death penalty like SMU, but when you look at the numbers, we've got about the same amount of players that had to go through that situation," Helton said.

Houston's failure to get an invitation to the expanded Big 12 or Western Athletic conferences doesn't bother Helton. The schedule is the thing, he says.

"The schedule dictates whether you can recruit or not," Helton said. "A conference means financial security but the opportunity to compete against the best schools is what interests football players.

"I think playing in high profile arenas is more important than saying you're in the Big Eight."

Unfortunately for the young Cougars, they've been drilled two straight years by Michigan (42-21) and Ohio State (52-0).

Helton keeps looking for progress in whatever small increments he can find and so far, hasn't put himself on a timetable.

"You have to have the personal satisfaction of seeing signs of improvement," he said. "When I quit coaching hard and they quit playing hard, then we're on a timetable."

Hard To Double

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - A golfer who wins the Masters Tournament has to be euphoric for quite a while. It can be hard to focus.

In the past 30 years only two golfers have combined a victory in the Masters with a triumph in the next event on the PGA Tour.

In 1978 Gary Player doubled in the Masters and Tournament of Champions. In 1985 Bernhard Langer scored in the MCI Heritage Classic, one week after his Masters win.

Nation's top-ranked team makes 900-mile trip only to lose in Gordon

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

GORDON, Texas (AP) - Hours before the big game, Bill Keck leaned against the freshly painted white post outside his Gordon Insurance Agency and marveled at the number of cars and people filtering through this tiny community's downtown.

"In as many years as I've been running this place, I've never seen so many people," he said, gazing at about 20 parked vehicles and maybe 100 people milling through the three-block-long shopping district.

It may not seem like much, but in this rural town on the eastern edge of West Texas with 516 residents and no traffic lights, it meant big things were happening.

The first attraction was an inaugural citywide garage sale held at about 30 local homes.

But the main drawing card was a six-man football game pitting the top-ranked team in the country from Revere, a consolidated school district in the flatlands of northeast Colorado, and the Gordon Longhorns, ranked 10th in the nation.

Still, that was the importance it took to both communities, especially the 100 or so Revere backers who made the 900-mile trek from Colorado towns like Ovid, Julesburg and Sedgwick to watch the unique interstate matchup.

"This is the chance of a lifetime for all of us," said Barb Ortiz, who drove 16 hours with her husband Steve to watch their son Anthony play for the Revere Raiders. "We wouldn't have missed it for anything."

The game was arranged by Tommy Wells, a sportswriter for a nearby newspaper who fell in love with the stripped-down version of football about 10 years ago.

Wells began setting up the game about a year ago when he heard Gordon had an open week. A few phone calls later, he learned that Revere coach Dave Rice also was looking for an opponent.

Revere is the type of team schools don't play unless they have to. The Raiders came to Gordon with a national-best 36-game winning streak and they had won three straight Colorado six-man titles before spending the last two years playing eight-man.

This matchup originally was to be part of a double-header in Nebraska featuring four six-man schools from three states. But Gordon school officials nixed that plan because they were worried about liability.

"Then I met with coach Rice, offered for him to come here and he loved the idea," said Wells, who estimated he'd be kicking in $2,000 of the Colorado school's travel expenses.

Rice still loved the idea on game day, despite the frantic pace he maintained right up to kickoff.

Anyone would be worn out considering what he'd been through: a 160-mile bus trip to Denver Friday evening; a 4:30 a.m. wakeup call Saturday to fly to Dallas with 20 kids, most of whom had never flown; another two hours on a bus to the ghost town of Thurber for lunch; and now, finally, it was almost game time.

"It's been hectic, but I'll cherish these moments forever," Rice said. "It's been a real learning experience. We'll gain and grow from this, win or lose."

Local folks had this day circled on their calendars for months. Seeing it as a chance to show off their community, they planned other events around it like the garage sale.

Among the people cruising down Main Street were players. Like movie stars arriving at a Hollywood opening, the kids rolled through town waving and smiling, occasionally stopping to accept good luck wishes.

Running back Michael Reed came by Keck's shop to visit shortly after meeting his soon-to-be opponents.

Reed's first impression was that "they were kids, just like us," although a few differences stuck out.

They shook hands funny - "you're in Texas now; grip it!" a Gordon player told a Revere player - and they said "you guys" instead of "y'all," Reed reported.

"The pressure is on them," said Reed, who was admittedly nervous because he didn't know what to expect. "We're just No. 9 in Texas (according to another poll), so we don't have anything to lose."

Coach Campbell knew the players were nervous, yet he challenged them by adding more pressure with the fake claim of this being a national championship.

"Nah, there's probably some teams in Texas better than we are," he said with a slight grin during pregame warmups.

Still, there was some pride on the line for Campbell, a homegrown product who made the rare leap from six-man football in high school to playing for Texas Christian University.

Campbell returned to Gordon as a coach in 1981, Thornton's junior year on the team, and he's led his alma mater to the playoffs all but one year since.

"Football is supposed to be fun and this game should be fun," Campbell said. "It's unique because it's a big game, but it's not a rivalry and it doesn't count in the district standings."

Soon, his words were drowned out by a constant rhythmic boom-boom-BOOM sound of two claps and a thigh slap by Revere players as they approached the field.

They marched along the backside of the end zone where Gordon was stretching, turned up the sidelines, cut back across midfield, then scattered so they could get loose.

Elsewhere in refurbished Longhorn Stadium, the three Revere cheerleaders who made the trip were going over their routines as Gordon's faithful followers took their seats before the rest of the crowd filled in.

By kickoff, more than 3,500 people from Colorado and all parts of Texas crammed onto the two sets of metal bleachers on each side of the field or grabbed a spot along the chain-link fence surrounding the track.

Many of them were getting their first dose of six-man football. To them, the game resembled kids playing during recess - just more organized because they wear uniforms.

The field is 80 yards long and 40 yards wide. It takes 15 yards to get a first down. After touchdowns, teams get one point for running it in and two for kicking it.

Another difference from 11-man is that two people other than the center must touch the ball in the backfield before crossing the line of scrimmage; basically, that means the quarterback can't take the snap and run.

Games generally are high scoring, and often only one team does much of the scoring. To keep things from getting too ridiculous, there's a 45-point rule similar to the 10-run rule in some baseball leagues.

Each of the roughly half-dozen states playing six-man have their own rules, and the local rules meant Revere had to make some adjustments.

They now could block below the waist and backfield handoffs were allowed. They could not, however, throw two forward passes behind the line of scrimmage. This ain't Colorado.

The game began sluggishly, a tenseness neither team would be able to shake throughout the turnover-filled contest. The score was 0-0 after one quarter, a nearly unheard of tally in a state where one game this season finished 102-72.

Gordon, dressed in bumblebee gold and black, went ahead 2-0 with a safety on the first play of the second quarter. Jim Kostiha got the points by jumping on Revere's J.R. Garcia after Garcia had picked up a fumble in the end zone.

Two possessions later, the Longhorns made it 10-0 when Reed zipped 9 yards for a touchdown and Timmy Jackson kicked a two-pointer.

Revere appeared to have answered as Brandon Mollendor returned the ensuing kickoff for a touchdown. But Thor Johnson was flagged for a personal foul, the score was waved off and Johnson was tossed from the game.

Another big disappointment came later in the half for the blue-and-white Revere Raiders, whose helmet lettering looks straight from the movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

On fourth down, Skye Hothan threw a perfect pass to Garcia across the middle at the goal line. As Garcia and a defender went for the ball, their feet got tangled and both fell. No flag was thrown.

"We came all this way for this crap!" screamed Revere assistant Brad Heinz, veins bulging in his neck.

The third quarter was another scoreless period, although Revere lost another touchdown because of a penalty. This one was for throwing two passes behind the line.

Oops. Remember, that's OK in Colorado.

Reed scored again on a 25-yard run in the fourth and another kick made it 18-0, which became the final score.

"I thought we were just as good as them or better," said Rice, who before the game predicted fatigue and different rules would cost his team three touchdowns.

Even Reed agreed Gordon probably didn't see the best Revere could play, although he said they trash-talked pretty well.

"They were good; very good," Reed said. "If we met in the middle, maybe the result would be different."

There is some talk about a rematch next year in Colorado.

As for this game, the memories will linger. They could rehash every play, wonder what it would've been like with their rules and even think about a better travel schedule next time.

But no matter what, they're not likely to forget their time in Texas.

"Oh well," sighed Steve Ortiz with a faint smile as he waited for Anthony after the game. "It's going to be a long ride back."

By BRAD TOWNSEND
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS - The time, the place and the situation seemed likely to create apprehension, especially for a rookie out of the University of Missouri-Kansas City. That kind of college pedigree doesn't prepare a player for his first NBA training camp.

But for Tony Dumas, the biggest adjustment through six days of Mavericks camp has been fitting in, not proving he belongs. Dumas already has shown he can create, and consistently make, his own shots. He already is one of the more athletic Mavericks on the floor.

Dumas' biggest problem is deciding when, and how often, he should shoot.

"It's a tough transition," Dumas said. "The level of talent is so much higher. It's easy to get lost. You've got to get used to being like the 10th option on the court instead of the first.

"Sometimes I take a couple of bad shots. That's from four years of shooting all the time. They (the veterans) just let me know, 'Hey, I was open. Pass it here next time.' "

If the veterans don't remind Dumas, coach Dick Motta does. Motta historically targets at least one rookie on his teams to serve as an example. And since top pick Jason Kidd so far has been the model member of camp, Motta's attention could turn to the small-school, flashy, always-smiling other first-round (No. 19 overall) pick.

But so far, Motta said Dumas has been everything the Mavericks thought he would be and more, the reason director of player personnel Keith Grant was adamant in selecting Dumas over players such as Dickey Simpkins, Wesley Person and Greg Minor.

Already, the 6-6 Dumas has joined Jamal Mashburn as the best pure shooters on the team. That doesn't surprise Motta because Dumas averaged 21.8 points at Missouri-Kansas City.

"He runs his offense," Motta said. "He's got work to do with his body. But he's trying to pick up the tricks and do the things that fit in with the team. He's going to play this year, I would think."

When they selected Dumas, the Mavericks thought he might be able to play backup small forward in addition to backing up Jim Jackson at shooting guard. But Motta said Dumas' lack of muscle (190 pounds) leaves him at least a year from trying small forward.

That means Dumas and last year's second-round pick, Lucious Harris, probably will compete for backup minutes behind Jackson. So far in camp, Harris has shown significant improvement from last year, hitting his jump shot more consistently.

"Me and Lu are friends," Dumas said. "I'm not sure how much he played (last year). It's up in the air right now. We're all just working to try to learn the system. it's too early to worry about that type of competition."

Dumas has bigger concerns, he said, such as trying to learn as much as possible about the NBA, and listening to Motta.

"He stops me every time I do something wrong, but that's just for my benefit," Dumas said. "He tells you in a way so that he doesn't want you to make the same mistake twice. I know he's not trying to single me out. I just make a lot of mistakes."

Of course, there is the other rookie "treatment" to consider - the treatment rookies get from veterans. So far, the veterans have been eerily quiet in that regard.

"They haven't done anything yet," Dumas said. "I think they are, though. Because they keep saying they're going to have a rookie party, where we've got to do a bunch of dumb stuff. I guess we'll see."

From 1901 through 1905, Michigan's football team won 55 of 57 games, scoring 2,821 points to 40 for the opposition.

Top Ten Teams

By The Associated Press

Here is how the teams ranked in Top 10 of each classification in The Associated Press high school football poll fared this week:

Class 5A
1. Abilene Cooper (6-0) beat Odessa, 17-7
2. Austin Westlake (7-0) beat Austin Crockett, 37-14
3. Deer Park (7-0) beat Pasadena, 38-18
4. Plano East (7-0) beat Richardson, 27-0
5. Aldine MacArthur (6-0-1) beat Aldine, 21-6
6. Houston Cypress Creek (6-0) vs. Klein, Sat.
7. Arlington Lamar (7-0) beat Arlington Martin, 23-12
8. North Mesquite (6-0-1) tied DeSoto, 17-17
9. The Colony (6-0-1) tied Flower Mound Marcus, 28-28
10. A&M Consol. (6-1) beat Huntsville, 41-7

Class 4A
1. Stephenville (7-0) beat Joshua, 62-15
2. Waxahachie (6-0) beat Waco Univ., 42-21
3. La Marque (7-0) beat Dickinson, 33-12
4. Gregory-Portland (7-0) beat Kingsville, 22-21
5. Sulphur Springs (6-1) beat Paris, 35-7
6. Sherman (6-1) beat W. Falls Hirschi, 31-7
7. Bay City (6-0-1) tied El Campo, 10-10
8. Austin Reagan (6-0-1) beat Austin Anderson, 44-3
9. Denison (7-0) beat Wichita Falls, 42-24
10. CC Calallen (6-1) beat Rock.-Fulton, 54-0

Class 3A
1. Cuero (7-0) beat La Vernia, 49-0
2. Sealy (7-0) beat Hallettsville, 55-20
3. Jefferson (7-0) beat Mount Vernon, 28-6
4. Sweeny (7-0) beat Van Vleck, 63-6
5. Gainesville (6-1) beat Pottsboro, 46-7
6. Carrizo Springs (6-1) lost to Pearsall, 21-6
7. Alvarado (7-0) beat Glen Rose, 47-0
8. Ballinger (7-0) beat Abilene Wylie, 16-12
9. Marlin (7-0) beat Waco Robinson, 35-0
10. Columbus (6-1) beat La Grange, 39-20

Class 2A
1. Schulenburg (7-0) beat Weimar, 52-13
2. Archer City (7-0) beat Electra, 51-6
3. Goldthwaite (7-0) beat Florence, 40-0
4. East Bernard (7-0) beat Shiner, 17-13
5. Pilot Point (5-0) at Prosper, Saturday

Anatomy of an addiction to woodworking

EDITOR'S NOTE - Every do-it-yourselfer knows how the addiction works. It begins with a cutting board or spice rack and before you know it it's a coffee table and then a ... a ... a table saw and a router and a drill press. There's no cure. Give up. Build a rack for the monthly woodworking magazines.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The machinery of do-it-yourself can be as comforting and nurturing as a mother's breast. Or as harsh and final as a hanging judge.

The basement or garage woodworking hobbyist finds solace where'er he or she can. For every project butchered, there's always another tree growing out there. And, faced with ultimate disaster, he (or she) nonetheless starts out with one more finger than a cat does lives.

The economics might seem irrational. The $5,000 home workshop proudly turns out weeks later a coffee table that goes for $199.95 at the discount furniture store.

Pride of authorship? Dr. Peter B., a young obstetrician who turns out newborns and woodworking with comparable skill, was asked if he ever made anything inanimate from trees that did not contain a mistake. The burled maple dining-room table for his wife? The pencil-post beds for his sisters? The sailboat? The post and beam addition to the house? Cupboards? Countertops?

"No," he finally said.

The many trials and even more numerous errors of home woodworking may result in nothing more than bulky kindling for the wood stove. But they do produce that rarest of commodities in an over-hyped universe: candor. Hobbyists dwell not so much on the glory of their completed handiwork as the stripped screws, mismarried dowels or puttied-over gouges encountered along the way. The footstools and headboards are loved the more for their imperfections, a personal acknowledgement of fallibility.

Norm Abram seemingly can turn out a Shaker armoire on TV's "Yankee Workshop" in half an hour. The average hobbyist embarking on a new project can't even find where he left his marking gauge from the last one in that time span. (He also knows that if you believe everything on TV there's a bridge in Brooklyn for sale by the Tooth Fairy you might want to invest in.)

Do-it-yourself seems like a new craze only because the foundries of Taiwan and Malaysia have put the sophisticated tools of the trade within reach of even moderate budgets. Actually, it's nothing new. What is most commonly found in caves of Paleolithic man? Tools. Hand tools. These instincts endure today. Hardly a man alive - and some women - can enter a hardware store and exit unencumbered. He may never use that tennoning jig - the instructions are in Chinese - but it's THERE in his very own cave.

Damned if I remember what Mr. Besson taught us in third grade. Fractions, I suppose. But I have total recall of Paul Runyon's manual training classes where we sandpapered everything in sight. Death awaited if you put a block plane down on its cutting edge instead of its side. (Some guy in "Fine Woodworking" said this was a fetish. A plane is meant to cut wood. Sure, if what you're resting the blade on IS wood. If not? Death.)

Higher education neglects refinement of these early skills, totally overlooking that much of a successful life is avoidance of paying someone $60 an hour to make or fix something you could do if you hadn't been dulled by Latin I-II and "Silas Marner."

Familyhood, out of necessity and nesting instinct, usually awakens the dormant Paul Runyon within. Junior pegs a snowball through a window late Saturday. You either fix it or spend a tanker load of oil heating the outside until Monday and a $45-an-hour glazier comes around. A leg on grandmother's heirloom end table goes adrift or a rotund guest leans back too far in the Windsor chair. Challenge and response, as primeval as the woolly mammoth.

By now you have a shelf of such household first aid as hammer, glue, three screwdrivers and a 67-foot folding ruler with six inches broken off. One day you have a 2 x 6 and need a 2 x 4. You gulp, take the egg money down to Sears and buy a table saw and there's no turning back.

Table saws take extreme caution and sometimes fingers. Band saws don't, not often. Play safe. Get one. You discover that a router can make molding a lot cheaper than you can buy it at the lumberyard.

Drill presses drill straighter than your hand-eye. Like wire hangers mating unseen until closets are overflowing, your tool racks become densely populated with generations of screwdrivers, chisels, gouges, planes, punches, nail sets, knives, squares, files, cement trowels, spacklers, tighteners and looseners. You are sinking ever more deeply into tool catalogs, at least three of which arrive weekly. What once was rationalized as nest maintenance now is addictive. Self-justification - that you really acquired this mess for a purpose - compels the next step: remake, enlarge, create. Coffee tables are a good place to start. The legs are vertical, the top horizontal, everything's a right angle or should be and the end result will be out there in plain sight for everyone to admire.

What wood to use? Mahogany. Works easily. Takes a nice varnish finish which resists stains. The specialty hardwoods people sell luscious slabs of Honduran mahogany quite a bit cheaper than a moon rocket and not much more than a heart bypass. (Years after manual training, Paul Runyon, who repaired classic furniture for the Metropolitan Museum and was a famous maker of miniatures, gave me a piece of 75-year-old Cuban mahogany that was quite simply sensuous to work

Such wood saws like butter. That's the trouble. One slip refining a piece with a router or shaper or planer and in an instant you're left with a small fortune of stove wood. Electric woodworking tools turn at furious speeds and are less forgiving than Socrates' wife, the ultimate shrew Xanthippe. The risk only multiplies as piece is added to piece and you approach the finished whole with an apprehension doubled with a tensity of nerves such as racked William Tell drawing a bead on the apple atop - only barely - his son's head.

Pushing the envelope, you decide to inlay the edges of the top with contrasting wood. Above the shrieking of the router you hear a door slam. The momentary distraction leaves a small crescent in what was to have been a straight channel. Nothing to do but change router bits and cut a larger channel on all the pieces successfully machined already, compounding the risk of subsequent error. (That's why Dr. Peter B. meant in his confessional - the best laid plans, etc.)

Well, the average house only has room for so many coffee tables. Like Alexander the Great looking for more worlds to conquer, you lift up your eyes to the house itself. This is high-stakes Las Vegas because this is, literally, where you live.

The nice thing about houses is you don't rout them, inlay them or French-polish finish them. A miscut by a sixteenth of an inch is not the end of the world. You can, of course, underestimate load factors and get snow all over the new coffee table when the overburdened roof collapses.

But then if it doesn't, and Mrs. D. asks you to make her a coffee table just like yours, you can share a satisfaction common to the lowliest house wren. You feathered your own nest.

DOE proposes new lab to be located at Pantex

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The U.S. Department of Energy has proposed building a $5.2 million lab for further tests of high explosives and environmental samples at the Pantex nuclear weapons plant.

Officials say a new analytical lab would help monitor conditions of soil and water at the Texas Panhandle site where America's nuclear bombs are disassembled.

A DOE report published in August describes a 16,400-square-foot structure containing seven labs, a "Boom Room" for explosives and a staging area for hazardous waste.

The proposed "Environmental, Safety and Health Analytical Laboratory" would replace an existing lab that officials say is too small and needs maintenance. They want to start construction by January 1996.

"Is the current facility incapable of doing the work?" asked Beverly Gattis, president of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping. "Have they been running with insufficient capability? Or is it a reflection of work they think is coming?"

The workload at Pantex - employer of about 3,100 people some 17 miles northeast of Amarillo - picked up in recent years when the U.S. and Russia agreed to shrink their nuclear stockpiles.

But no new lab has been built at Pantex since the 1960s, said Arnie Duncan, sectional scientist in applied technology.

Duncan said the lab would allow workers to test materials used in weapons and to monitor the chance of contamination at the 16,000-acre Pantex site.

Many chemicals and small quantities of high explosives would be used there. Emissions from fume hoods and generation of waste ash would increase slightly, according to the DOE's environmental assessment.

-- The existing lab's deteriorated floors, outdated ventilation systems and limited capacity to incorporate new technology

-- Great projected demand for testing and analysis

The proposed lab could be running before April 1998; officials estimate they'll use it for 20 years.

Mark Ellis, project manager with Pantex's capital projects division, said a Virginia company has started the design phase.

Ellis estimated that the entire project - from construction of the new lab through demolition of the existing one - could cost $9 million.

Boyd Deaver, Pantex projects manager for the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission in Amarillo, said the state has no concerns about the proposal.

"They're taking an antiquated lab and just updating it ... just like building on to their own home," Deaver said. "Everything they've got is still going to be handled according to regulations."

But Ms. Gattis, president of STAND, questioned whether the lab was approaching construction just because it had been discussed for several years, and not because Pantex needs it.

"As you look at the future of the plant," she said, "you hope it makes sense for a comprehensive whole."

Candy recalled due to high lead in wrappers

AUSTIN (AP) - State Health Commissioner Dr. David Smith on Friday ordered four kinds of candy, made in Mexico and sold throughout Texas, be removed from sale because of lead contamination from the wrappers.

Smith ordered that the candies be cleared from store shelves and either destroyed or returned to the manufacturers.

Anyone who purchased the candy is being warned not to eat them or make them available to children.

Laboratory tests by the health department show the candies' cellophane wrapper contains high levels of lead, Smith said.

"The lead in these wrappers can rub off on the hands and be absorbed into the candy, creating a serious health hazard, especially to children," he said.

"Exposure to lead in the environment is a leading cause of health problems among children. The metal can cause permanent developmental damage, and no level of exposure is considered safe," he said.

The four contaminated flavors which so far have been found in Texas are:

- Vero Elotes, made by Dulces La Fresa and described as a dark brown, hard candy corn lollipop which is wrapped in red and clear cellophane. The cellophane has a picture of two corn cobs with yellow printing.

- Vero Mango made by Dulces La Ibro and described as a dark brown, hard candy mango lollipop, wrapped in red, yellow and blue cellophane, picturing a yellow mango on a stick.

- Vero (watermelon) Rebanaditos made by Candy-Pop SA De CV, which is described as a dark brown, hard candy watermelon lollipop, wrapped in yellow and clear cellophane, picturing a watermelon on a stick.

- Vero Paletas, made by Candy-Pop SA De CV, described as a dark brown, hard candy lollipop, wrapped in white cellophane with red printing, and picturing a smiling cat.

Weaver, Gililland present skit for study club program

Joe Weaver and Amy Gililland presented an informative skit on Thomas Jefferson when the Lone Star Study Club met in the home of Wilma Goettsch. A question and answer session followed the skit.

The meeting was called to order by Betty Jo Carlson, vice president, who led the group in the club pledge. The financial report and minutes of the last meeting were approved after being read by Byrdie Fellers and Wilma Goettsch, respectively.

Refreshments were served to Mildred Fuhrmann, Oneita Davidson, Naomi Hare, Margaret Ann Durham, Roxie Phipps, Marie Harris, Quinta Waits, Birdene Huff, Ruby Stevenson, Byrdie Fellers and Wilma Goettsch.

JAMIE MORGAN, DENNIS PAETZOLD

Couple to marry

Jamie Lynette Morgan and Dennis James Paetzold, both of Hereford, plan to be united in marriage Nov. 26 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Hoy and Rosemary Morgan of Route 3, Hereford, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of James Paetzold of Route 3, Hereford, and Sylvia Paetzold of 222 Aspen St.

Miss Morgan is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School and Paetzold graduated from HHS in 1986. He also graduated from N.E. Iowa in 1989 and is employed by M&M Dairy in Summerfield.

Pilots of the Month announced

Brenda Thomas was announced as the Pilot of the Month for September and Irene Mullins was given the honor for August during the Tuesday morning meeting of the Hereford Pilot Club.

Yvonne Simpson opened the meeting with a prayer and Sue Hyer led the Pledge of Allegiance. Claudia Smith read the minutes from the previous meeting which were approved.

Patsy Giles won the Hereford Bucks for attendance.

A report was given on the club's recent Mexican Stack supper and Vesta Mae Nunley reported on the pecan sales.

It was announced that there will be a "42" tournament from 7-10 p.m. Oct. 20 at the Hereford Community Center.

The conservation topic was "A cleaner world; if it's to be, it's up to me." Members also discussed how and when to plant fall bulbs for spring blooming. Robinson read the history of the tulip.

The next meeting will be Nov. 10 in the home of Wilma Bryan. Members will meet Dec. 3 at West Gate to decorate the halls for Christmas.

The Northern Zone meeting will be at the Amarillo Garden Center on Nov. 2. Members voted to pay expenses of Phyllis Brown, Northern Zone chairman.

Extension News

Now is the time to begin preparing your beds for planting spring flowering bulbs.

Dig your beds deeply, adding organic materials if needed. Materials such as peat moss, cotton seed hulls, leaves, or compost will help hold moisture in the soil and aid in keeping the soil free from becoming hard and packed.

When digging the beds, add bone meal to the soil. Bone meal is an organic fertilizer that will not burn the bulbs and it promotes root development over the winter, which is what you want.

A strong root development leads to increased bloom production in the spring. The bulbs will be growing roots all winter, preparing to feed the bulbs during and after the blooming period next spring, so anything you do to help them along will pay off with increased blossoms.

When you order your bulbs or purchase them locally, keep in mind how early they bloom, how tall they will get, and what colors they are. You don't want them to clash with other plants in the area or grow up and hide somthing behind them.

Plant he bulbs far enough back from the edge of the bed so you can plant some annuals in front of them and hide the dying foliage. Never remove the drying foliage from the bulbs when they are through blooming.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Yes! It's a new fiscal year which means we can buy some new books now...and we have! I'll tell you more about some of them in a little bit, but let's discuss some other things first. The Family Film is this Thursday. In Your Wildest Dreams is our feature for October. Eighteen year old Mark Andrews "accidentally" makes a million dollars in the stock market, bringing a host of problems he hadn't counted on. His dilemma is compounded by his girlfriend and his little sister. Show time is 7 pm. The film is free and popcorn is 25 cents. The Family Film is sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

Speaking of the Friends...I hope you made it to the book sale last weekend, but IF YOU DIDN't there are still a few tables left up, and we probably have exactly what you have been looking for. You can also update your Friends membership anytime at the library circulation desk.

Our October displayers are recognizing October as Fire Prevention month. (I know it's actually Fire Prevention WEEK, but we're displaying all month anyway). Veronica Perez has been collecting dalmatians for about three of her ten years and she has dalmatians of all kinds! She even has a real one called Patch, but we decided we had better leave it at home. Veronica is the daughter of Janie and Gerald Perez, and is in the 4th grade at Bluebonnet.

Jonathan Formby is displaying his collection of plates with dalmatians and fire truck scenes. He has been collecting for over a year, and his favorite is the scene of a boy and a dog in fire coats. Jonathan is almost six and attends kindergarten at St. Anthony's. The son of Chip and Lisa Formby, he also takes violin lessons and sings int he preschool choir at First Baptist Church.

Okay, okay, you've been real patient, so I'll tell you about some of the new books.

Love, Alice is Audrey Meadows' reminiscences of Jackie Gleason and their years together as Alice and Ralph Kramden on "The Honeymooners." The book gives an inside view of one of America's most famous couples. I remember "The Honeymooners" (in reruns, of course), and their still great comedy, but, for me anyway, this book is lacking and I can't quite put my finger on it. Maybe someone a little more familiar with the show and the times would enjoy it more. Meadows does seem to use too many show-biz terms or other colloquialisms that I don't understand. If you're looking for a book that paints Gleason as an ogre, though, this is not the one. "Alice" soundly affirms that Jackie was always a gentleman (well, almost always) and even begins the book with a love letter to him. (If you read Parade magazine, you may remember a recent vignette about Elvis, and how the Colonel pacified him with a candy bar. That story comes from this book).

A Son of the Circus, by John Irving, was reviewed last Sunday in the Amarillo SUnday News Globe, and I'm grateful because that means I don't have to read it. It has something to do with a host of--shall we say "nonconformist" (read "misfit")--characters and an orthopedic surgeon who was born in India but ow lives in Canada and...see? It doesn't even make sense when I try to explain it. Circus has been ont he best seller list for a number of weeks, now and Irving is a celebrated author, so what do I know?

Patrick McManus is well known as a humorist and outdoor writer, combining the two successfully enough that he could give up a career as an English professor to write and hunt and fish full time. His past works include Never Sniff A Gift Fish and A Fine and Pleasant Misery, but apparently Ol' Pat's turning a little more introspective in How I Got This Way. Don't misunderstand--he's no less funny, he's just telling a little more about himself, and well, how he got that way!

Other new books that have been requested are:

Dolly: My Life and Other Unfinished Business by (who else?) Dolly Parton

Hollywood Kids by Jackie Collins

More ideas for Christmas gifts and decorations.

Who???Last week I was dressed as Johnny Appleseed for a program at Bluebonnet. As I passed one classroom, a child near the door pointed and exclaimed, "It's...it's...it's Johnny B. Goode!"

Hoffman gives book review to study club

"Legacy of Laughter" was the subject of the program for the Pioneer Study Club during its recent meeting at the King's Manor Retirement Home.

Oleta Hoffman reviewed a book, "Family: The Ties That Bind...and Gag" by Erma Bombeck. The book relates the experiences of a grown family that comes together for a weekend.

"It is a group who share the same genes and last name, but never have eaten the same breakfast cereal, watched the same tv shows, liked the same people, or spoken the same language. They discuss what kind of children would bring parents into this crazy, mixed-up world, and the horrors of what happens when parents come face to face with technology," reported Mrs. Hoffman.

With much love and, perception and irreverence, the author presented an American family challenged in a way no one would have thought possible to survive. Mrs. Hoffman said the book is not a definitive work on the family..."it only covers everything you can laugh at."

Roll call for the meeting was answered with each member telling a funny joke or relating an amusing story or incident.

Mary Jane Burrus presided over the business meeting. She reminded members of the district board meeting in Amarillo on Oct. 15. She will attend as president. Also attending will be Maria Escamilla, chairman of the Top of Texas district fundraising, and Mary Panciera, who serves as chairman of the Texas Women's Library Program for the district.

Members were reminded of the annual book sale at the library and members were asked to contribute books, and some club members will assist in the sale. Pioneer Study Club is a 100-percent member of the Friends of the Library.

The meeting was adjourned with the club motto in unison. Luncheon was served in the King's Manor dining room to the following members: Burrus, Nell Culpepper, Escamilla, Catherine Gripp, Hoffman, Billee Johnson, Panciera and Rosemary Thomas.

How to decorate and cook with flare and ease was the theme of Toujours Amis recent study club meeting, which was held in the home of Donna West.

Members heard Cynthia Miller, owner of Interiors, present ideas on how to use existing pieces of furniture and have a totally new look. She also gave a helpful hint: Compromise with your husband's tastes; you may get that redecoration job done a tad faster!

The business portion of the meeting included a report on the success of the "Crepe booth" at the Jubilee and a financial report.

Members were served refreshments by hostesses Donna West, Kim Bigham and Lisa Formby.

Cooking and using helpful utensils was enjoyed by members when "The Pampered Chef" made her appearance at the home of Kim Porter. Tasty dishes were prepared while demonstrating the merchandise.

Husbands and children may be delighted when mom serves a new yummy dish that was prepared with more ease because of the Pampered Chef(Wendy Roberts).

Business included discussion of the Christmas project which is just around the corner. The fall social was also discussed as committee members met to plan and organize a couple's party to be held Oct. 22.

Hostesses for the latter meeting were Kim Porter, Judy Barrett, Lauri Paetzold and Rhonda Banner.

Festival set

Wesley United Methodist Church will be hosting its 14th Annual Festival of Arts and Crafts from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Dec. 3 at the Hereford Community Center.

Men with working wives make less, study shows

By RAVI NESSMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Men with children and working wives earn less than fathers with stay-at-home spouses, two studies of corporate managers found.

One study surveyed 348 married fathers in management at 20 Fortune 500 companies, and found a wide gap between the salaries of men with stay-at-home wives and those in two-income families. The other study looked at the earnings of men who held master's degrees in business and found a similar disparity.

The researchers in business management speculated that the upper ranks of corporate America favor men whose wives at.stay home.

They also suggested that such wives actually further their husbands' careers by relieving them of the demands of raising the children, and by entertaining and building social networks.

"It is also possible that dual--earner husbands self-select into jobs that are not quite so fast-paced, not quite so high-risk," said Northwestern University Professor Jeanne Brett, co-author of the Fortune 500 study. "They may not be on the fast-track."

That study did not rule out the possibility that wives of higher-earning husbands are more likely stay at home because they can afford to, Brett said. However, all the men in that study earned so much it was doubtful their wives needed a job, she said.

With Loyola University Chicago Professor Linda Stroh, Brett analyzed the salary progressions of mid-level managers from 1984 to 1989. They found that pay for fathers in two-income families rose 59 percent in the five years. Salaries of fathers who provided all their family's income climbed 70 percent.

The other study, by Pace University Professor Frieda Reitman and Rider College Professor Joy Schneer, analyzed salaries of 231 men who received MBAs in the late 1970s. The average pay for fathers in two-income families was $95,140 in 1993. Men who were the sole provider made $124,510 on average.

The Chamber and You

BY MIKE CARR
Executive Vice President

The holiday season is quickly approaching. Activities planned for Hereford are being finalized and it looks as though November and December will be very busy.

Mark your calendar for Nov. 6 from 1 to 5 p.m when the merchants of Hereford and our flower shops will host their Holiday Open House. The theme this year is "A Bag Full of Christmas from Hustlin' Hereford."

Once again, the Chamber will have a holiday give-away of $500 of prizes in a drawing from people who get their entries validated at participating stores. This is always a fun and exciting day as we kick off the Holiday Season. Plan now to be involved in this special promotion.

The 1994 "Eat-Your-Heart-Out Neiman-Marcus preview night and Fun Breakfast at the Hereford Community Center is set for Nov. 16-17. Merchants will set up their booths Nov. 16 to display their special merchandise and services. This "preview night" will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. and will include turning on of the Christmas lights, singing, refreshments and, of course, the arrival of good old Santa Claus.

The evening will be lots of fun and we plan to have special entertainment for your enjoyment. In addition, the Chamber will be giving away $100 to some lucky person who attends.

And then, the big "Eat-Your-Heart-Out Neiman-Marcus" Fun Breakfast will be held the next morning, Thursday, Nov. 17. This is always a fun time as we will be giving away prizes galore, meeting new residents and Chamber members, hearing about upcoming events, and awarding the "Honorary Bull Chip" to a local resident.

The Fun Breakfasts are open to all residents, so if you haven't ever attended or are new to Hereford, please accept this invitation to attend our Chamber breakfast. Please tell us if you're new to Hereford so we can be sure to recognize you!

Call the Chamber office at 364-3333 to make your reservations to attend, participate or for additional information.

Congratulations to Walco International on their new location at 200 W. 1st St. The new and expanded facility is a plus to Hereford....A ribbon-cutting ceremony for Godfather's Pizza was held Friday. Located adjacent to Town & Country Food Store, they are open seven days a week. Best wishes to Godfather's and manager Monica Shackelford....North Gate Plaza Shopping Center is nearing 100 percent occupancy with the location of Dollar General and a new leasing company that will rent furniture and appliances.

Dates to note: Country Bazaar, sponsored by First United Methodist church will be Nov. 4; Election Day is Nov. 8; King's Manor Founders Day is Nov. 10; King's Manor Open House is Nov. 13; Country Christmas Bazaar 12; Festival of Trees at Senior Citizens will be Nov. 17-20; Wesley United Methodist Church Fall Craft Show will be Dec. 3; pheasant season opens Dec. 10 and ends on Dec. 25; the LaMadre Mia Tour of Homes will be Dec. 4.

Let's all support the merchants and the organizations of Hustlin' Hereford and make this a great Holiday Season! Have a good week!

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Have you ever told someone to think for themselves? In Romans 12:2, we are reminded, "Don't let the world around you squeeze you into its own mold." Sometimes this happens in the area of education.

Don't ever be surprised if things aren't what you think they are. This six-week period is really only five weeks long. How about that?! (And I was on the calendar committee). Anyway...progress reports will be handed out next week.

Receptions for students who are on the honor roll will be held Tuesday, October 18. Parents are invited to these activities.

Pride Certified Assembly was held Thursday for students who had met the requirements for this program.

Seventh grade science classes are involved in a project on the Plant Oobleck. Activities include using scientific methods to explore the properties of Oobleck, conduct a science convention to decide how to get to Oobleck and design a spacecraft to get there and back. Finally, on the return to Earth, they will describe the "creatures"; and life, found on Oobleck.

My Texas history classes are learning their ABCs! Actually, they are studying Texas cultures--art, music, literature, movies and TV and are going to construct an ABC book or chart depicting this area of Texas history.

Junior Historians are making plans for the Homecoming Float. Several members gather each morning to work on projects that they have undertaken for the year. Geography Bee members meet each morning, also.

HJH faculty members have been gathering information about "block scheduling" which is being considered for implementation in HJH within the next year or two. This is similar to college class scheduling in that students would meet classes for a longer period on an every-other-day basis. We plan to visit with others who have experienced this type of scheduling as we need to review both the pros and the cons. If you have any input on this, especially if you have children that will be involved, we need to hear from you.

I think that you'll agree that the mass media gives young people a distorted view of what life is all about. Our youth need help in developing attitudes and skills for being able to set and achieve goals, enjoy feelings of self-worth, to enjoy satisfying relationships, and, yes, to think for themselves.

Keep tailgate party menus simple

By The Associated Press

When hosting a tailgate party, the best strategy is to keep the menu simple. Choose foods that are easy to make, transport and serve. For a sweet ending, serve cocoa crunch cake.

Touchdown Cocoa Crunch Cake

1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1/4 cup cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup water plus 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 tablespoon white vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Broiled topping (recipe below)

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Grease and flour an 8-inch square baking pan. In large bowl, stir together flour, sugar, cocoa, baking soda and salt. Add water, oil, vinegar and vanilla; beat with a spoon or whisk just until batter is smooth and ingredients are well blended. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Meanwhile, prepare broiled topping; spread on warm cake. Set oven to broil; place cake about 4 inches from the heat. Broil 3 minutes or until top is bubbly and golden brown. Remove from oven. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Makes 9 servings.

Broiled Topping

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter or margarine, softened
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
1/2 cup coarsely chopped nuts
1/2 cup sweetened coconut flakes
3 tablespoons light cream or evaporated milk

A special pictorial cancellation of the long awaited "Legends of the West" stamp will be held at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon Tuesday.

The museum and the Canyon and Amarillo post offices are offering the cancellation feature from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. A special dedication ceremony will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Chris Leonard and Pat Varner were presented top honors during the recent Area III Evaulation and Humorous Speech Contest held at the Hereford Community Center. Hosts for the event were members of the Hereford Toastmasters Club.

Participating in the evaulation concert were Pat King, Chris Leonard and Kay Noe. Humorous speech contestants and their titles were Pat Varner who spoke on "That Transplanted Yankee" and Joe Reed who spoke on "A Secret Weapon."

Leonard and Varner, members of the local Toastmasters Club, will advance to the Divison Contest and the Area Governors Speech Contest in Amarillo. Winners of the area contest will then advance to the District Contest Nov. 4-5 in Lubbock.

The invocaton was given by Jigger Rowland the pledge was led by Joe Weaver. Rick Jackson served as presiding officer; Robert Moore was target speaker for the evaulation contest; and Syndi Phillips was the chief judge for the contest.

Other guests were Dr. Milton Adams, past international director; Jigger Rowland, current district governor; Rick Jackson, Area III governor; Linda Minchew, district treasurer; and Joe Weaver, district bulletin editor.

The responsibilities of motherhood do not come all at once. By eating wisely during your pregnancy, you are nurturing your fetus and getting in the best possible shape to take care of your baby after birth.

Your goals should be to gain the right amount of weight for your body type, to make sure what you eat "counts" in terms of nutrition, and to avoid foods that may be unsafe for you or your fetus.

How much weight should you gain? It depends on your body type. Women of average size should gain 5-35 pounds, but not all at once. Slow and steady weight gain is important-about a pound per week during the second and third trimesters.

You only need about 300 extra calories per day, but these should be chosen carefully to give you extra amounts of certain vitamins and minerals. Calcium for your baby's growing skeleton and iron to enrich its blood supply are the most important. Pregnant women also need additional folic acid, which is a B vitamin, daily to help protect their baby against birth defects.

A quart of skim milk per day provides you with adequate calcium, as well as the extra protein per day you also need. Good sources of both folic acid and iron are leafy green vegetables, dark yellow fruits and vegetables, liver, legumes (beans and peas), and nuts.

Certain foods can harbor harmful bacteria to which a fetus is not immune. Avoid dishes prepared from raw meat or seafood, uncooked eggs, and unpasteurized dairy products. Safe food handling is important. Wash your hands and all the utensils after preparing raw poultry, seafood, or meat.

Too Many People Suffer Back Problems

Back problems are the most commonly suffered maladies in our society and there is a reason! Modern society has become highly complex, not only in the workplace, but in every area of the human environment. Technological changes and their effects on the human being have created new stresses, many of them related to body and structure. At its best, this results in discomfort, dissatisfaction and limited performance; at its worst, is results in serious health problems. You can do something about that back problem. The doctor of chiropractic is a physician who considers the human as an integrated being, but gives special attention to spinal mechanics and neurological, muscular and vascular relationships.

October is Spinal Health Month. Take care of your Back!

Hereford Regional Medical Center employees recently completed a 10-week-long "Dump Your Plump" program, and 13 of the 60 people participating met their goal weight by the end of the period.

Deciding that they, as hospital employees, need to be healthy if they expect patients to stay healthy, the employees formed teams and embarked on the contest.

Two individuals reached their goal weight within an eight-week time frame. They were Linda Trevino and Karen Haigood. Each received a two-month membership to the YMCA.

The first place team was the EMS. They named themselves ACLS, which is hospital language stands for Advanced Cardiac Life Support. But in Dump Your Plump language, it stood for Accelerated Cellulite Loss System. Six of the seven members met their weight goal by the end of 10 weeks, and all team members exercised every week. They received a plaque.

In addition to Linda and Karen, who reached their goal in eight weeks, those reaching their weight goal by the end of the 10 weeks were: Karen Ward, Debbie Foerster, Mary Alaniz, Katherine Brand, Paula McGinley, Mike Foster, Terry Hazlett, Ed McGinley, Sharon Pennington, Minnie Roddy and Crystal Backus. They were awarded pens from the hospital.

All employees who participated were given a certificate of appreciation. Other prizes include two heart-lite meals from K=Bob's, three video rentals from Silver Screen, two insulated mugs from Allied Pharmacy, and basket of No Fat goodies from Mountain Man Nut & Fruit Co.

Throughout the 10 weeks, hospital employees were given weekly newsletters with helpful hints on eating right, exercise and loss weight, and they were kept up to date on team standings.

The main emphasis, however, was on exercise. For instance, they were told if you continue to eat like you currently do, but walk for 30 minutes a day, five days a week, you will lose 15 pounds over a year.

All of the employees who signed up for the program stayed with it until the end. Prizes and awards were presented at a picnic.

The team standings: First--ACLS; 2nd--Butt Busters; 3rd--Texas Tons; 4th(tie)--Honey Buns and Ms. Fits; 5th(tie)--Tons of Fun, Pretty Porkers, the Munch Bunch; and 6th--The Lean Machines.

Ideas offered for selecting, preparing fresh cucumbers

By NANCY BYAL
For AP Special Features

Cucumbers have earned the reputation of being the cool guys in the hothouse. Their juiciness is not surprising, since cucumbers contain about 95 percent water. Their crispness makes them a crunchy addition to salads and sandwiches. Even better, in fall before the first frost, cucumbers abound in home gardens, farmers' markets and supermarkets, making them a great value for eating or preserving. To make sure you're cool on cucumbers, stash away these tips for buying and preparing them.

Quality Checklist

Supermarkets tend to sell three types of cucumbers: regular or slicing cucumbers, English or greenhouse cucumbers, and pickling or Kirby cucumbers.

Field-grown slicing cucumbers grow to a fairly large size (8 inches), and they retain their green color for a long time. They have a dark green, slick skin. You'll find them only during warm weather months because they won't survive even the lightest frost. English cucumbers are longer (12 to 15 inches), thin-skinned and virtually seedless. Pickling varieties are small (2 to 4 inches) and don't keep their green skin color. And yes, as their name suggests, pickling cucumbers are for making pickles.

Avoid overgrown cucumbers that are large in diameter and have a dull yellowish color. Withered or shriveled ends are signs of toughness and bitter flavor.

Store eating cucumbers in your refrigerator for up to two weeks. For crisp results, pickling cucumbers should be picked and preserved the same day.

Cucumber-Fresh Ideas

Sometimes the cucumber peel tastes bitter, but to peel or not to peel is totally up to you. Enjoy the top-notch taste of fresh cucumbers in these simple ways:

-Stir chopped cucumber and parsley into chilled cooked rice or bulgur and add a splash of vinaigrette for a salad pilaf.

-To make a tangy yogurt sauce to accompany lamb, burgers or fish, stir chopped cucumber and snipped dill into a little plain yogurt.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I got divorced when my son was a baby. Even though I had the marriage from hell, I never let my son Steve know how awful it was. For the next 15 years, he enjoyed his father's love and companionship.

Last April, Steve went for his regular every-other-weekend visit to his father. While the two of them were bike riding, Steve was hit by a truck driven by a 19-year-old. He was killed instantly. No recklessness or alcohol was involved. No charges were filed. The young driver was heartsick. This accident could have happened to anyone.

The media was absolutely heartless. The pictures in the newspaper were enough to sicken any mother who saw them. Photos of the accident were on TV less than 45 minutes after was told about it. When I went to my mother's home to notify her, she was already watching it on the news.

For weeks, I would not look at a TV for fear of seeing Steve's crushed bicycle. I thought the worst was finally behind me, but last week, I received a phone message saying one of the news stations was doing an interview with my son's father. I turned on the TV, and there was my child's crushed bike and the accident scene I had tried so hard to avoid. All those hideous memories I had succeeded in putting in the back of my mind came rushing forward.

I am heartsick. My son was every mother's dream of a child. Is "news" that important? Do people really enjoy tragedy that much? Where has compassion gone? I need some answers.--Lisa Daner in Midlothian, Va.

DEAR LISA: I shall not attempt to apologize for what often appears to be crass insensitivity on the part of the media, but I will try to explain it. Ratings are the life's blood of the television news business. In order to get viewers, the TV reporters go after the sensational, the dramatic--a story that has a great deal of human interest. They are not concerned about the families of the victims. Cold? Ruthless? Yes, but TV news is a business.

I often have deplored close-ups of mourners at the funerals of celebrities, but those shots are the ones that TV, magazines and newspapers are interested in because the public laps it up. Tabloid journalism grabs the readers. It's as simple as that.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter you published a while back from an overweight woman who was offended when asked if she was pregnant reminded me of an experience I had many years ago.

My two granddaughters, ages 5 and 6, were told that their aunt was going to have a baby. They both were aware of "the facts of life." Later I overheard a conversation between the two of them that went something like this:

The 6-year-old said, "Do you believe Auntie Lu is going to have a baby? She is so skinny."

The 5-year-old replied, "I could believe it a lot better if it was Grandma."[[Still Laughing in California

DEAR ANN CALIFORNIA: And I am "Still Laughing in Chicago." Thanks for a delightful letter. It is sure to give my readers a lift.

Gem of the Day: Don't assume everyone is a Sunday driver. It might be a Friday driver still looking for a place to park.

Is Life Passing You by? Want to improve your social skills? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.15 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Bullock, Lezar square off in Lt. Gov. race

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock is never boring.

Weeks after Bullock's heart surgery on Sept. 16, Republican challenger Tex Lezar questioned the 65-year-old's physical fitness and called on him to release his medical records.

Bullock responded that he would abide by his doctor's orders to rest, took his 40-point lead in the polls and said goodbye.

To Bullock watchers, the snub of Lezar was classic Bullock.

The veteran Democrat has been at the center of hard politicking and hard living for decades, and by many accounts he's the most powerful person in Texas politics.

As lieutenant governor, Bullock presides over the Senate, makes committee appointments, sits on several key boards and committees and controls the flow of legislation in that chamber.

Last year, he oversaw legislation that included school finance and criminal justice reforms. In addition, he hammered out compromises in several long-running disputes.

And when lawmakers start the regular legislative session next year, he said he is considering giving Texans the chance to vote on term limits for officeholders and promises there will be no new taxes.

He is dramatic. "I have no agenda but what's good for Texas. And I have no love but Texas," Bullock says in speeches.

In 1991, shortly after being elected lieutenant governor, Bullock came out in favor of a state personal

Three years later, Bullock has won praise for holding the line on taxes and establishing a constitutional ban on an income tax without voter approval.

During his career, Bullock has developed a reputation for hiring the best people and using the most up-to-date technology. The so-called Bullock alumni serve in key positions throughout state government.

Bullock first was elected to office in 1957, when he served one term in the Texas House. He then went into private law practice but returned to state government in 1967 as an assistant attorney general and as an aide to the governor in 1969. He was secretary of state in 1971 and 1972.

In 1974, he was elected to his first of four terms as state comptroller, the state's chief tax collector.

In 1984, Bullock abandoned his goal of running for governor, because, he said, Texans just didn't want him. Three years before the 1990 campaign season, Bullock issued a short statement that he would run for lieutenant governor.

He has been married five times, is constantly trying to quit smoking cigarettes and underwent voluntary treatment for alcoholism in 1981. He was treated for physical and mental depression in 1977 and had a heart attack in 1979 before undergoing his heart bypass surgery this year.

In 1978, two of his aides urged him to quit for unspecified "actions that could be considered wrong legally or morally." A grand jury investigation into allegations against Bullock, including use of state aircraft, returned no indictments.

In 1972, about one-third of his right lung was removed in an operation to take out two nonmalignant tumors.

Once when asked about his health, Bullock said, "I'm so busy I ain't got time to die."

Lezar wants to change the state's most powerful office

By TERRY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Things have changed in the four years since Tex Lezar finished a distant third in the Republican primary for attorney general.

This year, the Dallas lawyer won the GOP nomination without opposition for what many consider the most powerful office in state government: lieutenant governor.

Bob Bullock has been hardened in 20 years of statewide political warfare, the last four as lieutenant governor.

The power that he wields as the presiding officer in the state Senate is so formidable that eight of the chamber's Republicans attended a campaign fund-raiser for him.

Lezar, 46, says that power is not always used for the benefit of the public at large. He says Bullock cannot and will not be the instrument of change the times and the people demand.

"The lieutenant governor is the most important official in state government. If they're not friendly to the change, it can't happen," he said.

The most important change would be to allow Texas voters the right to citizens' initiatives, referendums and recalls, Lezar said. That way, if the Legislature fails to act on the public's agenda, the public can act on its own.

"I want to reform the way the government works. People are alienated from their government. Initiative and referendum is, I think, the single most important thing that has to happen for the people to feel government is responsive," Lezar said.

The Texas Constitution would have to be amended to give voters such rights, and that requires legislative and statewide voter approval.

Lezar also advocates limits, not only on the number of terms officials may serve in one office but on the aggregate terms they can serve in successive offices.

Lezar also said the governor deserves more power.

"I think the lieutenant governor has incredible power. It's a historic oddity. I think we need to move more toward a cabinet for the governor," he said.

Lezar's campaign has been complicated by Bullock's recent heart bypass surgery and subsequent decision to end campaigning. Bullock said he was confident of his lead and would mostly rest for the balance of the campaign on doctors' orders.

But Lezar has been around politics for much of his adult life and has held a variety of high federal appointments.

Starting as a speech writer for President Nixon, he served as chief of staff to Attorney General William French Smith under President Reagan and as an aide to former Texas Secretary of State George Strake.

Lezar has said throughout his campaign that he is counting on a Republican sweep prompted by dissatisfaction with the policies of President Clinton and Gov. Ann Richards.

"I think there is a sweep developing that is the opposite of 1974," he said, referring to the year when public outrage over the Watergate scandal at the national level and the Sharpstown banking scandal at the state level brought a flood of young, reform-minded Democrats to power.

Lezar insists that political sea change is about to occur. If it does, he insists he will become the first Republican lieutenant governor to preside over the Texas Senate since Reconstruction.

The flamboyant Puerto Rican golfer was picked to be grand marshal of the 106th Rose Parade and the Rose Bowl game this January.

He said that kids from his background should know that anything is possible if they put their minds to it.

Rodriguez, 58, grew up in poverty, but went on to earn more than $6 million as a professional golfer. He was inducted last year into the PGA World of Golf Hall of Fame.

"Hopefully, I can somehow become a role model," he says. "They can read about me and I know they can say, 'If Chi Chi made it, I can make it.'"

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Al Joyner is going for the gold again, now that he's collecting a little silver from the Los Angeles Police Department.

On Wednesday, a federal jury awarded $51,501 in damages to the 1984 Olympic gold medalist, who sued police over an unjustified arrest in 1992.

Joyner said police forced him to kneel at gunpoint and handcuffed him in front of crowds on Sunset Boulevard just because he was a young black man driving a nice car.

Instead of asking for his license and registration, the police treated him as a "high-risk felony suspect" and caused him "unbelievable humiliation and terror," Joyner said.

When the officers finally ran a proper check on his special Olympic license plate, it showed the car was registered to his wife, track star Florence-Griffith Joyner. He said he was released without a citation or apology.

His lawyer sought $4.5 million; the department's lawyer asked the jury to award him $1.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

SEEKING LEGAL ADVICE

The decisions of whether to hire a lawyer, how to select the right one and how to minimize legal expenses are difficult ones for most small business owners. Yet common sense and experience tell us it is better to prevent a legal problem than to solve one.

I am not an attorney and I do not give specific legal advice. However, I am often asked questions that require the help of a professional. Sometimes if the nature of the question is general and might help others, we will contact an attorney for the answer. More frequently, we advise our clients to seek legal assistance directly.

Though many business situations do not require specific legal advice, there are some areas where it is wise to seek legal counsel. When laws are complex and issues are sensitive, you should consider consulting an attorney.

Common legal areas

• Drawing up contracts. Many businesses require contracts to clarify details of their dealings with other businesses, customers and vendors. A well-written contract will spell out definite considerations, and can eliminate needless misunderstandings. While a little planning and common sense can go a long way in negotiations, contracts can help.

• Selecting a business structure. Weighing the advantages and shortcomings of corporations, partnerships, sole-proprietorships, and limited liability companies often requires legal assistance. You should carefully consider tax consequences, liability issues, cost of maintenance and the effect of a structure on your ability to raise money.

• Real estate leases and purchases. Lease agreements are often complex and difficult for a lay person to fully understand. Purchase contracts and all of the trappings such as deeds, titles, easements, environmental surveys, title insurance and tax liens, are best handled by professionals.

• Filing or defending lawsuits. You can often avoid a lawsuit with mediation or alternative dispute resolution. However, when these methods fail, most business owners will find it advantageous to secure legal representation before appearing in court.

• Other common areas. Issues such as employment disputes, patents, trademarks, permit applications, bankruptcy and copyrights are also areas where seeking advice usually is the proper course.

Finding the right help

Finding the right legal assistance is a perplexing problem for most small business owners. Here are some tips from the experts:

• First determine the type of help you need. Then contact other business owners you know and see if any of them have had similar problems. If the same name or firm comes up frequently, start there.

• You can also use the local bar association, lawyer referral service or phone book. Your goal is find a professional who communicates well with you, and who appears to share your ethics, priorities and methods of operation.

• After you have narrowed the field to two or three, contact them directly. Explain that you are a potential client. Ask if they have time to answer a few basic questions and if there is a fee for the initial conference.

Find out if the attorney is qualified in the problem area and familiar with your industry. A lawyer who knows your industry may save you more than the amount of the fee. Ask about the basis for fees and charges.

When you've found the right one, ask for a brief written agreement detailing fees and charges for the nature of the work the attorney is to perform. Confirm deadlines and indicate dates for receiving working drafts of documents.

You can keep fees to a minimum by doing your part. Explain what you want. Be prepared for every meeting. Organize records and documents and make copies prior to the meetings. Don't waste time and do keep appointments.

Finally, review your bill as soon as you receive it. If it contains errors or seems unreasonably notify the lawyer immediately.

INDEPENDENTLY FUNCTIONAL PRACTICAL PLAN

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

The dining room also enjoys the luxury of a vaulted ceiling and leads direct to the well planned kitchen. A special pantry is shown at the garage entry and a private stair is provided for access to the future game room or bed room over the garage. The laundry is a separate room in this area.

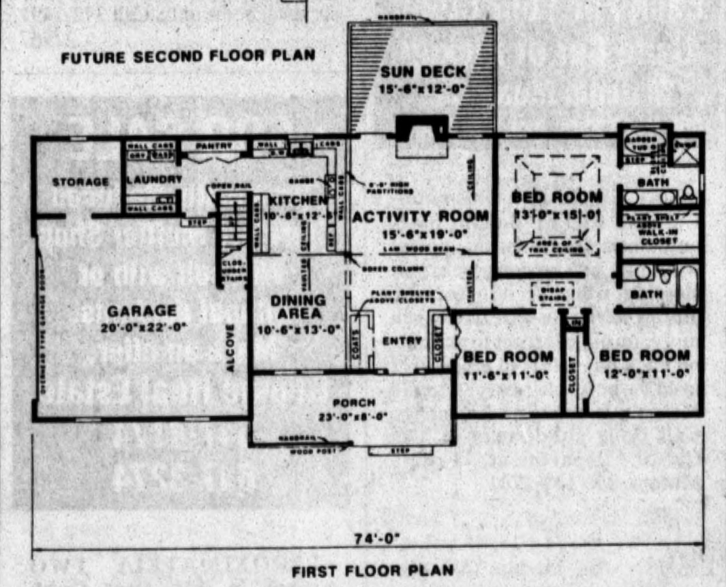

The master bedroom suite is especially distinguished by a tray ceiling, compartment bath and a nuge walk in closet. A central bath services the remaining two bedrooms and a disappearing stair to attic storage is from the central hall. Linen storage is also provided.

The country exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding and enhanced by a real front porch and high pitched gable roof. The plan is available with a crawl space or slab foundation

The plan is Number Z-518. It includes 1,595 square feet of heated area, the future game room adding 324 square feet. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Property rights coalition announces endorsements

AUSTIN - A broad coalition of farmers and ranchers from across the state has announced endorsement of state and federal candidates considered to be strong on private property rights.

The announcement came as the group, Farmers and Ranchers for Property Rights, began an effort to educate Texas voters about the importance of property rights.

Candidates on both sides of the political spectrum are among those endorsed by the coalition.

"There is no single issue as far-reaching as government infringement on private property rights to be considered when looking at candidates for state and federal office," said Tom Beard, an Alpine rancher who serves as president of Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

"The basic tenets of property ownership upon which our great democracy was established are being threatened by state and federal government actions,"he continued, "and the choices Texans make at the ballot box in November will have a direct bearing on whether this problem gets better or worse."

Thirty organizations, representing Texas farmers, ranchers, wildlife groups and rural groups, established the property rights coalition in August to educate the public about their concerns.

Impetus for the founding of the organization was the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announcement that a large area of Central Texas could be declared habitat of an endangered species, the yellow cheeked warbler.

Goals this year are to eduction the public, watch passage of legislation in the next state Legislature and provide input on reauthorization of the Federal Endangered Species Act and Clean Water Act.

Several of the participating organizations have prepared a listing of candidates who have been endorsed. Approximately a million cards listing the endorsements have been printed and are to be distributed through these organizations statewide.

"Never in my lifetime have I seen such a grassroots firestorm as I have recently witnessed on the issue of private property rights in Texas," said Bob Stallman of Columbus, president of the Texas Farm Bureau.

"This issue really has folks out in the country stirred up and they're definitely heading to the polls in November," Stallman said. "Since being strong on property rights has become so popular among elected officials recently, we thought it would be helpful to let voters know which candidates were strong on property rights even before it became popular."

Statewide candidates endorsed include U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison, gubernatorial candidate George Bush, Lieutenant Governor Bob Bullock, Comptroller John Sharp, Land Commissioner candidate Marta Greytok, and Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry.

In the Oct. 8 sale, top prices paid for pigs were $3,500, $2,800 and $2,300.

Researchers develop new breed of apricot

By KIMBERLY A.C. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Don't pull out your pie tins and canning jars just yet, but the Agriculture Department has developed a new breed of apricot that could make tomorrow's tarts tastier.

Helena is a new apricot with a more colorful skin, plumper flesh and sweeter taste.

"Helena apricots," said Craig Ledbetter of the Agriculture Research Service's Horticultural Crops Research Laboratory in Fresno, Calif., "are big and juicy, with deeper orange skin than most apricots. The flesh is firm and sweet, not mealy, so Helena is ideal for eating fresh or adding to summer salads.

"We expect this apricot will also make a delicious pie, cobbler, tart or jam, though we haven't tested it yet for baking or preserving."

Low in calories and a good source of vitamin A and potassium, about $10 million worth of apricots were sold last year for the fresh-fruit market, according to an article in the October issue of USDA's Agriculture Research magazine.

Ledbetter has worked with about two dozen farmers in California, the nation's biggest producer of apricots. In their San Joaquin Valley orchards since 1987, he has tested more than 2,000 pounds of the Helena apricots. Although only tested there, the trees may thrive in Washington and Utah and other states where the fruits also grow, Ledbetter said.

The new variety can self-pollinate, meaning it can bear fruit without needing another variety nearby to provide pollen.

That's especially important because it ripens between two other popular varieties in early June, before Patterson and after Katy. Helena is larger and more flavorful than the Patterson type, Ledbetter said.

All cuttings of the Helena variety, formerly known only as K210-35, originate from a single tree. A now-retired USDA stone fruit and grape breeder, John Weinberger, chose to test this small tree out of hundreds of others in a research orchard in the 1970s. Ledbetter's development continues Weinberger's research.

But don't look for Helena in your neighborhood supermarket just yet. That will take another few years, Ledbetter said.

To obtain clippings from the limited number of Helena budwood available, contact Ledbetter at his Fresno laboratory. For details, call (209) 453-3064.

Higher estimate made on sugar production

By MICHAEL LANDWEBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. sugar production during the 1995 fiscal year is forecast at 7.84 million tons, up 2.2 percent from the June estimate, the Agriculture Department says.

This total for the 12 months beginning Oct. 1 will be 4.1 percent higher than the fiscal 1994 production, the department predicted in a report Monday.

Much of the increase is due to a record year for beets, with 4.5 million tons of beet sugar produced, a 450,000-ton improvement over the previous year.

Beet farmers harvested a record 1.44 million acres this year, a 2.6 percent increase from a year earlier. Other factors contributing to the rise in production include better yields and improved sucrose recovery.

Production of cane sugar in fiscal 1995 is expected to drop 4 percent from 1994 to 3.34 million tons. The planned closing of three Hawaiian sugar mills accounts for the 140,000-ton decline.

The department estimates that 873,000 acres will be devoted to sugar, with an expected yield of 28.4 million tons of cane. Average sucrose recovery is foreseen at 11.8 percent, even with 1994 levels.

Americans are expected to consume 9.28 million tons of sugar in fiscal 1995, an increase of 1.4 percent over 1994. That is 64.7 pounds of sugar for every person in the United States, according to the forecast.

Although the increase continues an upward trend of the past six years, the rise of 125,000 tons is less than the average gain of 144,000 tons seen over this period.

U.S. sugar stocks are expected to total 1.47 million tons at the end of fiscal 1995, according to the estimates, up 7.7 percent from 1994.

Revised estimates for fiscal 1994 put sugar stocks at 1.37 million tons, up 12.3 percent from the previous forecast made in June.

U.S. prices for raw sugar in the first half of September averaged 21.80 cents per pound, a slight drop from the previous month. Sugar sold for an average of 21.84 cents in August, 22.72 cents in July and 22.23 cents during the April-June quarter.

New director joins board of S&WCD

A new director, David Wagner of Vega, has been elected to the board of the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District.

Re-elected to the board was Jerry Homfeld, Zone 1. Also serving are Bill Walden, Nick Yosten and Carl Kleuskens.

Wagner fills the Zone 2 position previously held by Carl Strafuss, who retired after 28 years of service.

Purpose of Tierra Blanca SWCD is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on agricultural lands.

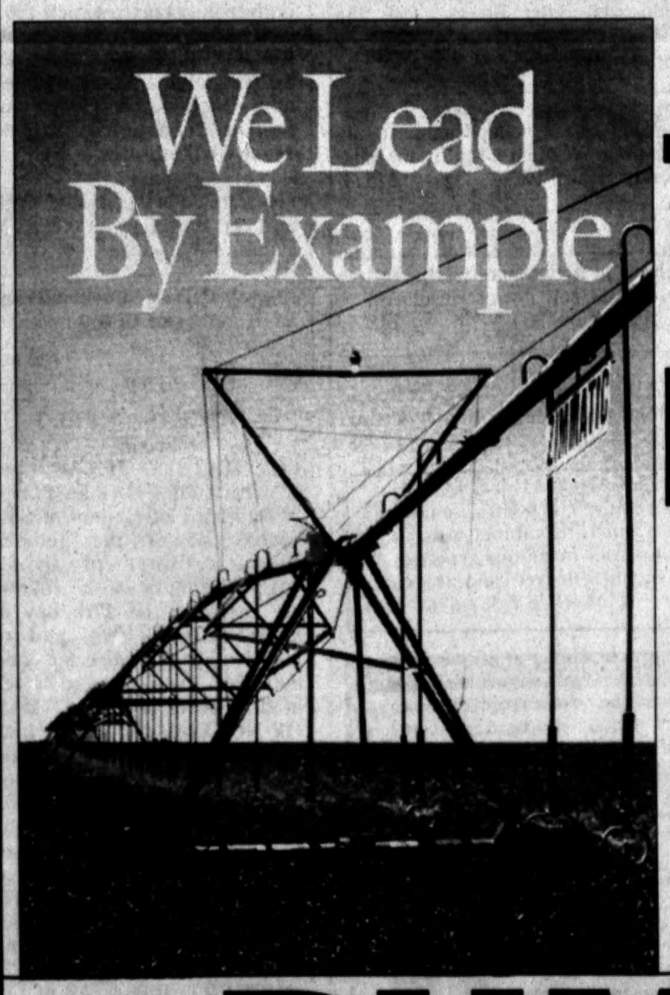

The board coordinates conservation efforts involving local, state and federal agencies. Directors are responsible for policies and procedures for carrying out the district program.

Tierra Blanca SWCD is one of 213 similar districts in Texas. Although a legal subdivision, a soil and water conservation district has no power of taxation or eminent domain.

Viewers are sure to become 'mad about' Friends

BY JOHN CROOK

Paul and Jamie Buchman (Paul Reiser and Helen Hunt) of Mad About You have some new friends in their Manhattan Thursday-night neighborhood.

The six single Friends in the Thursday night sitcom of that name don't just occupy a time slot immediately following the hotter-than-ever Mad: The characters also live within blocks of the Buchmans – and that setup offers all sorts of surreal possibilities for crossover references.

Consider this: Lisa Kudrow, who plays New Age waif Phoebe in Friends, also will continue her hilarious cameos in Mad About You as archditz Ursula the waitress. The Friends writers already are having fun with that element by having Phoebe reveal in a recent episode that she has an estranged twin sister.

That's only one reason that Friends is an oasis in an otherwise tepid landscape of new sitcoms. The brainchild of Marta Kauffman, David Crane and Kevin Bright (creators of HBO's Dream On) and directed by TV sitcom veteran James Burrows (Taxi), this new series premiered with a bang and has become even better in successive episodes. Friends sports six vivid members of Generation X and is wittily written and deftly performed by a genuine ensemble cast.

In addition to Kudrow's funny and touching Phoebe, the friends include:

–Monica (Courteney Cox of Family Ties), a self-confident, successful chef who nonetheless can be reduced to emotional rubble by a visit from her domineering parents (guest stars Elliott Gould and Christina Pickles of St. Elsewhere);

–Rachel (Jennifer Aniston of Mud-dling Through), a pampered daddy's girl who is rooming with Monica as she tries to establish some beachhead of independence;

–Ross (David Schwimmer, featured last season on NYPD Blue), Monica's older brother, who is infatuated with Rachel but coping (badly) with the fact that his pregnant wife has just left him – for another woman;

–Chandler (Matthew Perry from Home Free), Joey's roommate, currently employed in data entry but essentially a professional "slacker."

Friends is that rarity, an authentic ensemble comedy like Taxi and Cheers in which multiple story lines are juggled deftly like balls in an upscale circus. The dialogue is as frisky as any on TV (Phoebe declines an invitation by saying, "Oh, I wish I could, but I really don't want to") and Burrows hasn't lost any of his facility for keeping at least three plot line plates spinning at once.

Most important, perhaps, is the fact that Friends is hip, very much a creation of its time. Consider, for example, this analysis of "dating language" among singles in the '90s.

Monica: "We should do this again" means "You will NEVER see me naked."
Joey: "It's not you" means "It IS you."
Chandler: "You're such a nice guy" means "I'm going to be dating leather-wearing alcoholics and complaining about them to YOU."
Phoebe: "I think we should see other people" means "Ha HA! I already am!"

Garth flies over the cuckoo's nest in Without Consent

BY PETE BUCCI

Without Consent, airing Sunday, Oct. 16, on ABC, is a tense and fast-paced thriller about a young woman caught in a nightmarish psychiatric center.

Jennie Garth (Beverly Hills, 90210) stars as Laura Mills, a high-school senior who is committed by her parents to Meadowbrook, a privately run psychiatric hospital for teens.

Laura's parents, Michelle and Robert, played by Jill Eikenberry (L.A. Law) and Tom Irwin (My So-Called Life), are urged to do this by a school guidance counselor after her grades decline and discipline problems emerge.

Michelle, a relentlessly driven real estate agent, alienates the others with her unrealistic expectations of them. She drives Laura's brother David, played by Eric Close (McKenna), from their home. Emmy nominee Eikenberry gives a strong and convincing performance in this role.

Robert, meanwhile, divides most of his time between work and extramarital affairs. While he does not always agree with his wife's parenting style, he lacks the backbone to take a stand.

After Laura damages the family car in an alcohol-related accident, her parents decide to put her in Meadowbrook for a "two-week program."

After making sure the Mills' insurance will cover the stay, the reassuring Dr. Winslow (Paul Sorvino), head of the hospital, assures them that Laura will be treated well.

On the inside, Meadowbrook is a virtual prison. The staff uses drugs, intimidation and physical abuse to control the patients and keep them committed until their insurance is drained. Both the setting and the mood bear much resemblance to that of the 1975 Oscar-winning film One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

Johnny Galecki also stars as Marty, a manic-depressive who was admitted to Meadowbrook after attempting suicide. Laura and Marty form a bond of friendship, which they must keep secret because the staff forbids it.

Oct. 16 - Oct. 22 HOROSCOPE

By C. C. Clark

Aries (March 21 - April 20)
The opportunity to travel lies in your future. There could be many changes coming about, and you should be ready to move quickly.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)
You will soon find a way to surmount limitations or obstacles, as well as a way to realize your dreams. The contents of a package may surprise you.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
You will have a more positive outlook on life in general. You may not always get what you want but can make do with what you have.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)
Some battles will be won, but others will be lost. Avoid dwelling on the negative side of everything. You will need to be more self-reliant.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)
Things will work out much better than you expected. Try not to repeat your mistakes. You could receive a generous offer or gift.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)
A troubled time is coming to an end, and problems will be solved one by one. Luck will be with you in reversing a negative financial trend.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
It is important to wait in a situation until a clear direction is revealed. Success will come through your own ingenuity. You will learn a valuable lesson.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)
You will have a chance to go on a pleasure trip or shopping spree with someone special. Things will take an upward swing where business is concerned.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)
It will be impossible for you to miss the results of an important event. A new start will work out in your behalf. A negative situation will end.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)
Challenging situations and conflicts will arise, and you will have a difficult time. It is imperative that you get others to understand your way of thinking.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
You will be detached and guarded where romance is concerned. A nagging health condition needs immediate medical attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)
You will be deeply moved by someone who shows you great kindness. It will be necessary to take care of any long-standing debts.

HIGHLIGHTS

BY AMY HIBBERT

The moving, real-life account of a contemporary American Indian woman's triumphant journey to spiritual awareness amid the bloody turmoil of the historic 1973 siege of Wounded Knee, S.D., comes to TNT, Sunday, Oct. 16.

This movie, Lakota Woman: Siege at Wounded Knee, is based on Mary Crow Dog's autobiography and recounts her coming of age against the backdrop of that event.

She says her most powerful memories of Wounded Knee are the sense of unity and the feeling of spirituality that existed.

"We really were one," she says. "It was a real tight bond. And there was a great sense of spirituality. We started every day with a prayer, and we could feel the spirits of our brothers and sisters who were massacred at Wounded Knee back in 1890."

This powerful drama gives a detailed account of an event that is still strong in the minds of the participants. It is honest, if not brutal, at times.

The virtually all-American Indian cast worked with a crew that was 44 percent Indian-the highest proportion of Indians who have ever worked behind the cameras on a major film.

LET'S TALK

Cole to be a big-screen Brady; Sagal, Seagal not related at all

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: I am a big fan of Gary Cole, who starred in Midnight Caller and co-starred with Clint Eastwood in In the Line of Fire. Where can I write to him and is he planning any projects in the future? –Cindy McKay, Fallon, Nev.

A: Cole is set to star as Mike Brady (the role formerly played by the late Robert Reed) in the big-screen adaptation of The Brady Bunch. Try writing to the actor C/O The William Morris Agency, 151 El Camino Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Gary Cole

Q: A frozen yogurt is riding on this. Is the actress who plays Peg Bundy on Married... With Children the sister of actor Steven Seagal? –Bob Kujala, Hiram, Ohio.

A: Katey Sagal (note spelling) is unrelated to the actor, but is the sister of twins Jean and Liz Sagal (Double Trouble) and the daughter of the late filmmaker Boris Sagal.

Q: I love The X-Files. Could you tell me where I can write to stars David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson? –Lisa H., Vidor, Texas.

A: I keep repeating this address and almost every day someone asks for it. Write to them C/O their series at Fox Broadcasting Co., 10201 W. Pico Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90035.

Q: I was a big fan of the soap opera Santa Barbara until they took it off the air last year. You get kind of depressed when you've watched your favorite soap since it began and then, all of a sudden, they take it off the air. Are they ever going to bring it back? –Miranda Smith, no address.

A: No way, Miranda. Daytime TV critics hailed the sometimes flaky soap for its offbeat style, especially when Lane Davies and Nancy Lee Grahn were a team as Mason and Julia, but ratings, which were never good, steadily declined. All the cast and other creative forces are scattered to the winds at this point and would be unlikely to return to a project that already failed once.

Q: I see what looks like an unbelievable resemblance between actor Val Kilmer and actress Nancy McKeon. Are they related? –Carla Jones, Zavalla, Texas.

A: You're right, Carla, they do look a lot alike. But they're not related. Nancy, however, is the sister of actor Philip McKeon (Alice), who seems to have dropped out of sight.

Q: I saw a movie many years ago and I can recall the screams from the packed movie house. I have wondered why I never see it on TV. The title I remember is Daddy's Gone A-Hunting, but I could be way off. It was about a divorced man going after his baby. Can you help me find it? –Joan A. Beaulieu, West Plains, Mo.

A: You have the title right, and this 1969 thriller starring Carol White, Paul Burke and Scott Hylands, has, in fact, turned up on the tube over the years. It also is available from Warner Home Video Inc., 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, Calif. 91522.

Q: I heard that the host of The Late Show, David Letterman, is Italian and that "David Letterman" is just a stage name. Is this true? –C.J.M., Beaumont, Texas.

A: No, that's his real name.

Q: I heard that Garth Brooks has retired. Is that true? Also, can you give me an address to write to him? Is he in any movies that are available on video? –N.S., Fallon, Nev.

A: Brooks at least temporarily has retired from touring, not performing altogether. Write to him C/O Liberty Records, 3322 West End Ave., Nashville, Tenn. 37203. I know of no movies on video featuring him.

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Armin Shimerman as Quark

The producers of syndicated hit Star Trek: Deep Space Nine are offering fans an opportunity to go where no Trekkie has gone before – into an episode. Those interested in making Star Trek history need to enter the Design an Alien Contest by March 31, 1995.

Entry forms are available in Playmates' collectible Star Trek toys. Entries will be judged on creativity, artistic and descriptive detail and appropriateness to the series. Final judging will be done by producer Rick Berman, actor Armin Shimerman (Quark), costume designer Bob Blackman, makeup supervisor Michael Westmore, fan club president Dan Madsen and TV Guide sci-fi columnist Glenn Kenny.

The grand prize winner will portray the alien of his or her design in a future episode of Deep Space Nine. Four runners-up will receive cash prizes of $500. May the Force be ... oops, wrong galaxy.

Actor James Stewart will be honored on Friday, Nov. 18, in Beverly Hills, Calif., as the first recipient of the James Stewart Service of Honor Medal from the newly dedicated American Air Museum in Britain. Stewart, who played aviator Charles Lindbergh in the film Spirit of St. Louis, was an officer in the U.S. Air Force during World War II. The museum is located in Duxford, England.

PBS has set a January premiere date for American Cinema, a 10-part series to air over five weeks. Clips from more than 200 movies are mixed with interviews of Hollywood luminaries such as Brian De Palma, Harrison Ford, Nora Ephron, George Lucas, Julia Roberts, Martin Scorsese, Steven Spielberg and Oliver Stone, with narration by noted actors and actresses. Each hour focuses on a particular subject, including "The Studio System," "The Western," "Film Noir" and "The Film School Generation."

As a sign of their commitment to the subject, the series' producers are making a $100,000 donation to the Museum of Modern Art for the restoration of five American films.

TRIVIA

MONDAY

HIGHLIGHTS

Nova presents the story of a girl called "Genie" in "Secret of the Wild Child," airing Tuesday, Oct. 18, on PBS (check local listings).

Genie had been locked in a room and socially isolated for most of her life. With footage never before seen on television, Nova tells the remarkable and compelling story of her rehabilitation and explores how and when people learn the skills that make them civilized.

TUESDAY

HOME BIJOU

Maverick offers sluggish but enjoyable ride; Bertolucci's Buddha distracting, disappointing

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

Richard Donner's Maverick was first out of the summer chute and, while no landmark, has its merits. Chief among them is the underplayed turn by James Garner as a seemingly stolid lawman with a telling twinkle in his eye.

Mel Gibson takes over Garner's TV role as Bret Maverick and is suitably slick and silly, if a little stiff in his first scenes. Most surprising is Jodie Foster as a sexy cardsharp. Who would have guessed the two-time Oscar winner of The Accused and The Silence of the Lambs could be so funny?

If only Donner and writer William Goldman had exhibited more faith in their players. Instead, they cram in a needlessly complex story and an ending that goes on at least two scenes too long. And, in a movie that cries out for rapid-fire editing, the first half is positively sluggish.

Sad is the best way to describe the painfully unfunny Beverly Hills Cop III. With movies like this, Eddie Murphy's return to network television can't be far behind.

Bridget Fonda and Chris Isaacs struggle mightily with their roles as the bewildered parents of a Seattle youth whom a cadre of Tibetan monks suspect is their reincarnated leader. But Bertolucci's convoluted script and Look-Ma-I'm-an-Epic pacing undermine what might have really worked as a suspense story.

As for Keanu Reeves in the role of the young, evolving Prince Siddhartha, (whose story is told in distracting, elongated flashbacks) he tries gamely and looks great, but with little effect.

His penchant for branching out is admirable (he was fine in Much Ado About Nothing) but his talents only really shine in entertaining no-brains-required outings such as River's Edge, Permanent Record and Speed.

HOME BIJOU

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

This month sees the release of Steven Spielberg's dino-sized blockbuster Jurassic Park. It's a safe bet the film will cause as big a stir (or bigger) on home video as it did in the theater.

The technological achievements of the film are, of course, stupendous. The raptor and tyrannosaurus are quite chilling, but it was the graceful herd of small something-saurs that race across an open field early in the movie that really takes the breath away. Perhaps the best compliment to be paid is that one is likely to forget – for the duration of the picture, anyway – that they are just special effects.

The humans, however, are less convincing. Sam Neill is as solid and reliable as ever, and Richard Attenborough is a scenery-chewing gem as the romantic-notioned genius behind it all. But Laura Dern is shrill and unbelievable as Neill's lover-colleague, and Jeff Goldblum dispenses with real acting altogether in favor of his smart-aleck shtick. The considerable talents of B.D. Wong and Samuel L. Jackson are largely wasted.

On paper, the casting of Meryl Streep, Jeremy Irons, Glenn Close and Winona Ryder in a prestigious project like a film of Isabel Allende's sweeping The House of the Spirits sounds like a sure-fire artistic triumph, if not a box office champ.

But then, that would be making the erroneous assumption that the film would be interesting. Read the book instead.

Some months ago, cable channel TNT produced a version of David Mamet's A Life in the Theatre. Adapted by Mamet himself and directed by Gregory Mosher, the film stars Jack Lemmon and Matthew Broderick, both of whom know their way around a stage and a movie set. But somehow, Mamet's rich script loses its bite and, worse yet, its humor in the transition to celluloid.

Two ex-Dallas stars join All My Children

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Some familiar faces are popping up on All My Children. Former Dallas stars Kimberly Foster and Steve Kanaly have joined the show as Liz Sloane and Seabone Hunkle.

Foster's character, Liz, is a waitress at McKays. She will be responsible for shaking up the lives of several Pine Valley residents. She also will be a volunteer for Edmund's (John Callahan) campaign for Congress.

Seabone is Del and Dixie's father. When Jenny told Tad that he was going to have to help Dixie through some tough times soon, she wasn't joking – Dixie will be confronted by the father who deserted her to go live with his other family.

On Dallas, Kanaly portrayed Ray Krebs, one of the Ewing brothers. Foster played Michelle Stevens, the woman responsible for the death of Sheila Foley (Susan Lucci, who plays Erica on AMC).

Dear Candace: I can't believe how great Loving is getting. I've always loved the show and never understood why it was so low in the ratings. But now it is even more exciting.

This whole twin brother thing with Jeremy and Gilbert has been fun. I think Jean LeClerc (Jeremy/Gilbert) is very talented.

The only complaint I have is that I would like to see Dante (Thom Christopher) return to the show. He was so good at being evil. Tell your readers to tune into Loving. It is great! –Theresa in New York.

Dear Reader: Christopher is back on Loving for a short time appearing in a series of flashbacks. He said he would like to return to his role on One Life to Live as Carlo Hesser.

Dear Candace: I watch Days of Our Lives every day. I am a big fan of Carrie (Christie Clark), Billie (Lisa Rinna) and Austin (Patrick Muldoon). Could you please tell me where I can write to them? –Karie Seilberger, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Dear Reader: You may write to your favorite stars at Days of Our Lives, NBC-TV, 3000 West Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.
