Four Korean ministers die in bombing

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan, who narrowly escaped a bombing in Burma that killed four Cabinet ministers, blamed North Korea for the attack and returned to Seoul today for emergency meetings with government leaders.

Chun Doo-hwan

The bombing Sunday was "a barbarous crime, unpardonable by the conscience of all mankind," Chun said after returning to his mourning nation, cutting short a planned 18-day, six-nation goodwill tour that began with the Burma visit.

Meanwhile, more than 7,000 people took part in rallies in Seoul and seven other cities to denounce North Korea. Similar rallies were planned for Tuesday, when the bodies of the 16 South Korean victims are to be brought home for a "national funeral service." The service is tentatively set for Saturday with burial in the National Cemetery.

A government spokesman said most sporting events and various cultural and folk festivals would be postponed until after Oct. 20.

The explosion shattered the roof of the Martyr's Mausoleum outside Rangoon, sending up a billowing cloud of smoke and engulfing most of the South Korean delegation waiting for Chun to arrive for a wreath-laying ceremony, officials said.

The blast shook buildings a mile away in the Burmese capital, killed 19 people, including the South Koreans, and wounded 19 others. It was not clear what type of explosive was used, but South Korean news agencies said it may have been a time bomb planted in the ceiling of the one-story shrine.

The victims included South Korea's deputy prime minister and foreign minister.

Witnesses said Chun's limousine was three minutes away from the memorial site and immediately wheeled around and fled the area. One report said the president and his wife had been delayed because the car was tied up in traffic.

After arriving at the heavily guarded airport in Seoul, Chun said his government "will study all possible countermeasures in punishing such injustice and violence" although he gave no specifics.

"It will not only be our people alone who point to the North Korean communist group, the most inhumane on earth, as the mastermind of the crime (which) perpetrated an extremely atrocious sin in an attempt on my life," he said.

Watt calls it quits

Interior Secretary James Watt reads a copy of the resignation letter he sent to President Reagan to a small group of reporters and photographers at the Barrack Ranch in Santa Ynez, Calif. At

Search starts for Watt's replacement

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Watt, the victim of a mouth that misfired once too often, will give up his job as interior secretary as soon as a replacement can be found by the president and confirmed by the Senate. The search begins today.

Watt gave up an 18-day struggle to hold onto his Cabinet post Sunday but vowed to never abandon his crusade for spiritual freedom and political liberty.

Standing in a California cow pasture, Watt read his resignation letter to a small band of reporters Sunday, his voice quavering at times. His wife stood at his side, holding the reins of their horses.

President Reagan accepted the resignation "reluctantly" and an aide said the president hoped to nominate a successor in one to two weeks.

"The time has come," Watt said. "It is my view that my usefulness to you in this administration has come to an end."

Reagan praised Watt for the "outstanding" job he had done managing the country's natural resources and said his "dedication to public service and his accomplishments as secretary of the interior will long be remembered."

Neither man in their formal statements mentioned Watt's wisecrack Sept. 21 in a U.S. Chamber of Commerce speech in which he referred to "a black, a woman, two Jews and

...a cripple, and a missonist. But asked what he would do if he were president, Watt said he would prompt the resignation of any cabinet member who did not meet his standards.

Watt, jokingly, answered reporters' questions about his horses, saying he had accomplished more in his 18 days as interior secretary than in his 18 years as secretary of the interior.

Asked what he would do if he were president, Watt said he would prompt the resignation of any cabinet member who did not meet his standards.

Watt refused to comment on a suggestion that he might be asked to return to the job. He did not discuss his resignation with telephone interviewees today.

Reagan's spokeswoman said he would not discuss the search for a replacement until it was complete. She said the president would announce the name of the new secretary of the interior within two weeks.

Grayson County law enforcement officials look over the hangar in Sherman where four men were found murdered Saturday night. Three of the four men had gone to the hangar to negotiate the sale of an ultralight plane.

Four men slain execution-style

SHERMAN (AP) — Three men whose friendship grew with their love of ultralight aircraft were killed execution-style with a bullet in the head and another friend was shot to death as he ran from a hangar where they were to sell one of the small, noisy and colorful aircraft.

Authorities, who declined to speculate on a motive, said three of the men were shot in the head and the fourth — who may have surprised the killer — was shot twice in the back as he apparently ran for his life.

"We know we've got four dead people. And we know a .22 was probably used... and that's about it," said Grayson County Sheriff Jack Driscoll.

"It is not like when somebody walks into a 7-Eleven and shoots a clerk in the head. You know what the motive is then. It's the money. With something like this, you don't know. There is no reason," said Driscoll.

Three of the four had gone to the hangar Saturday at a North Texas ranch to discuss selling one of the planes to a fifth person.

Driscoll said ranch owner Bob Tate, 51, Grayson County deputy sheriff Philip Good, 29, and Jerry Brown, 51, were shot in the head and their bodies were found covered by a tarp a few feet away from a pool of blood on the floor and a car.

side door. He had been shot twice in the back.

A friend of Mayes, who asked not to be identified, said they had talked during the week about the execution-style slayings of five people abducted from a fast food restaurant in Kilgore.

"We were talking about Kilgore at work last week," and Ron said. "They'd have to shoot me in the back. There's no way I'd stand still and wait for it to happen," said the friend.

Driscoll said the bodies, which were taken to Dallas for autopsy, were all warm. It had not been long.

He said investigators found 11 .22 caliber shell casings scattered around the hangar.

Investigators also found money ranging from $13 to $100 in the men's wallets and all still wore their jewelry, Driscoll said.

Wife-beating most under-reported crime, says FBI

Editor's Note: From the newborn to the elderly, from the poor to the wealthy, abuse is found in every category of human life. This six-part series explores various forms of abuse and the impact on its victims. Where first names of the victims are used, these names are fictitious. But the stories are true. This article looks at spousal abuse.

Abuse

The unreported epidemic

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

She searched her mind for a reason. Could it have been a bad day for him? Or, maybe the kids made too much noise.

Whatever the reason, when Nancy's live-in partner hit her, she was left with a black eye.

It was a rainy August afternoon in Abilene. Her three children, all under 7, romped through the house. No harsh words passed between the 30-year-old woman and her partner.

After dinner, Nancy cleared the table. Then it happened. The impact made her head pound. She felt faint. It took a minute before she realized her boyfriend's fist caused the pain.

Unlike most women, that's all it took for Nancy to leave. She gathered her three children and sought refuge at a shelter for battered women.

Because the Abilene center was full, she came to Midland, where she is staying at the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

BATTERY IS the major cause of injury to women, and some 2,000 to 4,000 women are beaten to death annually, according to statistics. The FBI considers wife-beating the most under-reported crime in the country, with one beating every 15 seconds.

Nancy reported her beating. But not all women do. The Texas Council on Family Violence includes wife battering as part of the "unreported epidemic." Midland Assistant County Attorney Diana Anderson estimates that a small percentage of spousal assault cases go through the judicial system.

"Abused women rarely go through the criminal justice system," Ms. Anderson said. "It's usually a husband or boyfriend who has abused her and she doesn't want to press charges. They won't leave the guy. If they do press charges when they're mad, they usually drop them later."

"It's frustrating a lot of times," she added.

WIFE BATTERING is everywhere. It's not new. It covers all socio-economic levels, according to Irene Clouse, director of Midland's shelter.

"I've had a judge's wife, a doctor's wife, an oilman's wife and a policeman's wife at the center."

But men are also abused, according to experts.

"I really don't like to make this a feminist issue," Ms. Clouse said. "We're dealing with people — male and female. Generally, the male is so much more forceful, larger, but women can also batter."

"I'm convinced there are battered men," said Dr. Jim Olson, a Midland psychologist. "But the battered husband is still in the closet. It's going against his masculinity to affirm he can't handle the little lady."

Midland District Attorney Vern Martin added that "men can be emotionally battered and are as frequently as women."

But until statistics are completed, most of the information available on spousal abuse pertains to women.

According to the Texas Council on Family Violence in Austin, one out of every four women over 18 years old has been abused by her husband or live-in partner. Two out of three families are seeking emergency refuge from a violent home.

"A month ago (August), we had 50 people here," Ms. Clouse said. "Women are realizing they can leave, they have alternatives."

Four Sherman men slain execution-style

Relatives said an ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar. And Driscoll said several people told investigators there should have been more than one plane in the hangar.

"I understand you could take one down and put it in a compact position in two hours," said Driscoll. He said the main hangar doors were locked but a side door was not.

Brown's daughter, Lynn, said Brown, Good and Tate had gone to the hangar at 4 p.m. to meet a man from Dallas who was going to buy the plane for $4,000.

Mayes, who lived within sight of the Tate ranch, knew that the men were in the hangar, became curious when they never opened its doors and went over to investigate, said his uncle, George Barbee of Dallas.

His body was found by Tate's wife and son, who had gone to the B&B Ranch about 8:30 p.m. Saturday when Tate failed to return home when expected, Driscoll said.

Sheriff's deputies found the other three bodies lying side-by-side on blue carpeting and covered with more pieces of carpet. Each had been shot once in the head.

A man who lives near the ranch told investigators he heard shots about 8:30 p.m., but Driscoll said the shots may have come from hunters.

Driscoll said he was certain the slayings took place in the hangar because of the amount of blood present and said the scene was undisturbed except for a chair tilted against a table.

Good, a licensed pilot, and Mayes were members of Brown's Sunday school class at a Sherman church. Brown, a deacon, talked the two into visiting the West Sherman Baptist Church where Good and Mayes later became members.

"He (Brown) was the kind of people who was always inviting people to come to church," said the Rev. Danny Wood.

Tate, Good and Brown flew the plane "ever chance they got, every time the wind was out," said David Watkins, Tate's son-in-law.

Mayes lived nearby and was friend with the other three, but he did not fly in the ultralight aircraft.

He was "scared of those things and hated to fly," said a friend of Mayes' who asked not to be identified.

A relative of Tate's who asked not to be identified said Tate would "buy and sell anything. He's a wheeler-dealer."

She said Tate had told another relative the name of the man he was going to meet.

Watt's supporters not surprised

By The Associated Press

Supporters of Interior Secretary James Watt were disappointed but not surprised at his resignation Sunday, partly blaming the media for his demise, while his opponents, although pleased, said the real problem lies with President Reagan's land policies.

"I think it's sad that he had to resign because of saying something that was obviously unfortunate and poorly said," said former Interior Secretary Stan Hathaway, who was appointed by President Ford in 1975 after a stormy confirmation hearing and resigned for health reasons just five weeks later.

"He's done a good job but that's the way it is in government service today. We won't remember what he did, we'll remember what he said. Most politicians react to reporters, that builds the fires."

"I'm pleased to see James Watt gone, but to a certain extent, Watt got a raw deal," said Dr. George Hulse of Norman, Okla., a member of the board of directors of the National Wildlife Federation. "He was simply doing what Ronald Reagan wanted done as far as conservation is concerned."

"Although Watt has some peculiarities and suffers from hoof-and-mouth disease, what should be repudiated is Ronald Reagan's conservation policies."

Peter Anderson, president of the group Wisconsin's Environmental Decade, also said Watt was merely following Reagan's bidding.

Resignation is "cause for relief for all those distressed by his policy of exploiting our natural resources. However, the real James Watt is actually Ronald Reagan, who has steadfastly supported Watt in all of his activities except, perhaps, for his dislike of the Beach Boys. Thus, the big question mark is who will replace Watt at Interior," he said.

"We are obviously pleased. But we're still concerned about really changing the policies of that department and not just the standup comic," added Phil Hocker of Jackson, Wyo., national treasurer of the Sierra Club.

Watt, who at one point was given a model foot with a hole in it by Reagan because of his penchant for controversial remarks, resigned two weeks after a comment about members of a federal advisory panel. His characterization of them as "a black... a woman, two Jews and a cripple" was widely denounced.

Reagan, who accepted Watt's resignation, praised the secretary for doing "an outstanding job as a member of my Cabinet and in his stewardship of the natural resources of the nation."

Dr. Richard L. Gordon, a member of the Federal Coal Commission who has a paralyzed right arm, said Sunday night that although he had been "distressed" at being described by Watt as a "cripple," he was indifferent to the news of Watt's resignation.

"My reading of this is, it's a general reaction to Secretary Watt's cumulative actions," said Gordon.

"I think it's a tragedy that Watt quit, if we're going to start losing people because of what they say," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a leading conservative whose state is one of those most affected by Interior Department decisions.

"I don't like what he said," Goldwater said, but added the remark was similar to one that was "for months going around Washington as a joke. He just said it in public, and that was a mistake."

Rep. Manuel Lujan Jr., R-N.M., who has been one of most ardent backers of Watt and has been mentioned as possible successor to Energy Secretary Don Hodel if Hodel gets Watt's post, said: "I'm sure that Secretary Watt did what he thought was best for the country. I hope that we can now move forward on interior issues that are critical. He had a way of being the issue rather than discussion on the policies themselves."

Clifford Hansen, a former Wyoming governor who served two terms in the U.S. Senate, has also been mentioned as a possible successor to Watt. He is a strong advocate of both Reagan's and Watt's policies, and said Sunday: "Jim Watt was a dedicated American who served the president faithfully and served America well. It's just too darn bad that he concluded he could serve best by leaving."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said, "For everybody, and for the country, this is a good thing. There has been 'too much polarization,' he added.

John Rhodes, the ex-House Minority leader from Arizona, was mentioned by several people, including Udall and Goldwater as a good choice to succeed Hodel.

New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, frequent Watt critic, said: "I think it's for the good of the country, for the good of the West and for the good of New Mexico that he is no longer be in office."

"We must, however, be skeptical of who the president will replace him with," he added, noting that Reagan stood by Watt and his policies for almost three years.

Richard Viguerie, founder and president of The Viguerie Co. an publisher of "The Conservative Digest," said he was saddened at Watt's resignation.

"He was the most outspoken conservative and born-again Christian in the Reagan administration," said Viguerie, adding, "It is becoming apparent that it is very difficult for any outspoken conservative to long remain in this administration."

Watt's parents, Lois and William Gaius Watt, live in Denver. Mrs. Watt, reached by telephoned there said, "I don't see that it has anything to do to us; she's a mature man."

Asked if she thought critics had been unfair, she said, "It wouldn't do any good to make any comment... I think we'll just have to leave this up to James."

Sen. Alan Simpson, a close personal friend of Watt's, said the beleaguered Interior Secretary seemed relieved to have made his decision.

Reagan begins search for Watt's replacement

Asked if he or other administration officials had tried to talk Watt out of resigning, Meese said by the time Watt called, the interior secretary had made up his mind.

Both the president in his statement and Meese in an interview praised Watt for carrying out Reagan's policies.

"We wanted to support him and keep him in the job," Meese said. "I don't think any Cabinet member has done more than he had toward achieving the president's goals."

Meese said the search for a successor would begin today and he expected Reagan would announce his choice in a week or two. He said the White House hopes the Senate can confirm the nominee before it goes home, probably in late November.

While Meese said no list of possible replacements has been drawn up, speculation in the administration and on Capitol Hill has centered on former Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., who was Reagan's first choice for the job in 1981; former Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y.; Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M.; Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, and Interior Undersecretary J.J. Simmons III.

Meese said Watt sounded relieved and "certainly not downbeat" in his telephone conversation. However, a longtime friend, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., described Watt in recent days as "in anguish" as more and more former supporters attacked him and called for his resignation.

Watt issued an abject apology to Reagan the day after the remark and then dropped out of sight, hoping to ride out his latest gaffe as he had so many in the past. For the past five days, he had been secluded at the Thomas J. Barrack ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif.

But the storm didn't subside and, unlike past controversies, a substantial number of Republicans joined Democrats in denouncing Watt. Facing certain passage on Oct. 17 of a Senate resolution calling for his dismissal for conduct "unbefitting a senior Cabinet member," Watt chose to resign.

Watt's departure was hailed by environmentalists, who have spent

2 1/2 years attacking his push to develop energy and other resources on the federal lands.

William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society, said the 43 men who have served as secretary of the interior, Watt was the "worst of all."

Rafe Pomerance, president of Friends of the Earth, said, "The general in charge of Reagan's war of the environment may be gone but the commander-in-chief and just about all the officers remain."

But Richard Viguerie, the conservative direct-mail fund-raising king said he was saddened by the departure of "the most outspoken conservative and born-again Christian in the Reagan administration."

More shelters for battered women needed

By GAIL BURKE Staff Writer

In the 1800s many states had a law which allowed a man to beat his wife with a switch — as long as it was no wider than the thumb.

Today women are giving a thumbs down sign to the "Rule of Thumb" law.

Shelters for battered women and their children have cropped up throughout the U.S. In Texas there are 35 shelters for family violence victims. And that's not enough, according to studies by the Department of Human Resources.

About two-thirds of Texas women and children requesting shelter are turned away. In his 1984-85 budget speech to the Legislature, Gov. Mark White said: "Currently, the victims of family violence in most areas of the state have nowhere to go in times of crisis. This budget includes funds to help provide 12 additional shelters for those shattered by family violence."

It was recommended the number of shelters should be increased to 44 and the level of state support should be raised from 26 percent to 75 percent. The Legislature approved to increase funds 45 percent over 1983 and the goal is to have five to seven new shelters in 1984.

In Midland the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children is funded 60 percent by the DHR, the Texas Council on Family Violence and United Way of Midland. The other 40 percent is from private contributions.

Before 1979, a small trailer in Midland offered support and refuge for battered women. Then, a four bedroom house was purchased, providing refuge, counseling and referral information.

According to the shelter's executive director Irene Clouse, the Midland center provides a safe, temporary emergency shelter for female victims of domestic violence and their children.

Additional objectives of the center include:

- Professional and lay counseling
- Rehabilitating the victim for self-identity, education and employment.
- Assisting in moving the victim to another shelter.
- Providing transportation to appointments and from the police station in an emergency situation.

Irene Clouse

Wife-beating under-reported crime, says FBI

IN 1983, Midland's center sheltered 444 women and children. According to Ms. Clouse, as of July there have been 452 people who have passed through the shelter. She estimated 20 to 25 women come to the shelter each month.

"We're talking about a love-hate relationship," Ms. Clouse said. "When you have a stressed family — pushed by society to stick with it and work it out — then you're going (family). "The women we get here have little or no education. Their husbands are generally economically stressed. The women have no cars. The family doesn't have any money. And the women fear their husbands."

Why do women stay with men who abuse them?

"We're talking about a love-hate relationship," Ms. Clouse said. "When you have a stressed family — pushed by society to stick with it and work it out — then you're going to see women staying."

The women who do not try to get out of an abusive relationship say to themselves: "I love this person, but I really wish he wouldn't do this to me again."

Ms. Clouse said most spouse abusers are "very apologetic after the battering. They make a multitude of promises and they mean it. But they're out of control."

"Anyone can provoke anger," she added. "But violence is the responsibility of the person who strikes."

According to a study of behavioral characteristics of domestic violence the batterer has an explosive temper, is jealous, has low self-esteem and is emotionally dependent. Also the batterer believes forcible behavior secures the family and controls a partner by threatening homicide or suicide.

"The battered woman has figured out it's all her fault," Ms. Clouse said. "But it takes two people to get into a rage."

Bombing in Burma kills four Korean ministers

The South Koreans offered no proof to support their allegation, but they frequently have accused North Korea of terrorist plots to destabilize their non-communist system ever since the Korean peninsula was divided following World War II.

North Korea reported the bombing without comment. The official (North) Korean Central News Agency, quoting foreign news reports, said Chun was "greeted with a strong bomb explosion in Rangoon."

Chun met for about an hour with government officials at the airport and then went to the Blue House presidential residence for another emergency session, officials said.

Earlier, Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup ordered a national alert for the armed forces and sent an emergency medical team to Rangoon to care for the wounded South Koreans. The government also sent a team of investigators to work with the Burmese officials in probing the blast.

The government urged the public to remain calm, saying the military and police were prepared to guard national security. Many people interviewed by domestic television and radio stations said North Korea should be punished.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said today there were no reports of unusual activities along the 151-mile armistice line separating the South from the North. A U.S. official said no special alert was issued to the 39,000 American troops in South Korea.

Despite the deaths of the government leaders, South Korea's basic economic and diplomatic policies were not expected to change.

Flags flew at half staff throughout the country and people filed past an altar set up at the national cemetery outside Seoul, bowing in tribute to the victims. Television and radio stations canceled their regular programs and played solemn music interspersed with news accounts of the bombing.

The city government in Pusan, 230 miles south of Seoul, asked residents to wear dark clothing and black ribbons as a sign of mourning.

The four Cabinet members killed were Deputy Prime Minister Suh Suk-joon, 45, who also headed the Economic Planning Board; Foreign Minister Lee Bum-suk, 58, who in the 1970's played a leading role in attempts at talks between South and North Korea and who later served as Ambassador to India; Commerce and Industry Minister Kim Dong-whie, 51, and Energy and Resources Minister Suh Sang-chul.

Also killed was Kim Jae-ik, 45, a secretary for economic affairs and a leading architect of this country's economic policies. Lee Kye-chul, South Korea's ambassador to Rangoon, died, as did Hahm Pyung-choon, chief presidential secretary who once served as ambassador to Washington.

In Rangoon, South Korean diplomatic sources said today the Burmese government formed a special committee to investigate the explosion. Burma has diplomatic relations with both South and North Korea.

Burma was the first stop of a scheduled tour that also was to have taken Chun to India, Sri Lanka, Australia, New Zealand and Brunei.

The news of the bombing was the second shock for South Koreans in little more than five weeks. On Sept. 1, a Korean Air Lines jetliner was shot down by a Soviet jetfighter over the Sea of Japan, killing all 269 people aboard.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Sue Pittman said the Reagan administration was "shocked and saddened" by the explosion. Mark Weinberg, White House assistant press secretary, said it did not affect President Reagan's plans to visit South Korea next month.

Septien gives Dallas 27-24 win

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

DALLAS — It was almost as though Dallas and Tampa Bay had cooked up something special just to cap off Roger Staubach's halftime induction to the Cowboys Ring of Honor, that magic circle of ex-Cowboys greats.

Dallas' 27-24 overtime victory Sunday was a chapter right from the Staubach story, a bit of deja vu for the Cowboys record-setting quarterback who brought Dallas from behind to win in the last two minutes 14 times from 1969 to 1979.

It was a bit more than Coach Tom Landry had envisioned or, perhaps, expected. The vehicle's ending was artistic enough, but the Dallas coach wasn't enthralled by the overall production, a matter about which the Cowboys will undoubtedly hear more this week.

"I think Roger was more worried by the end than he had been about getting the award," Landry said after the game. "It was a two-play game, the one where we let them go for a touchdown to take the lead in the fourth quarter and then the one where they let us go down the sidelines to tie it up."

It was James Wilder's 23-yard run up the middle that propelled winless Tampa Bay, the team humiliated a week ago 55-14 by Green Bay, that put Tampa Bay ahead, 24-17 with 8:53 left in the game.

TIMMY NEWSOME, playing because Tony Dorsett was hurting, converted a dumpoff pass into a 52-yard scoring play with 43 seconds left to tie it just when it seemed Dallas had little hope left.

Then in overtime, Rafael Septien kicked a 42-yard field goal 4:38 into the overtime to win it.

But that only hints at the drama of the closing minutes.

The Cowboys' last hope seemed to have evaporated when quarterback Danny White's pass into the end zone on a first down from the Tampa 18 was intercepted by defensive back Cedric Brown.

Only 1:53 remained and Dallas used up all of its time outs during Tampa Bay's possession.

The hopelessness after the interception was reflected in Texas Stadium aisles where fans were fleeing to the exits to beat the crowd out of the parking lot now that the game was lost.

When the Cowboys finally got the ball again, it was at the Dallas 26 and only 1:19 remained. The Cowboys worked the ball to the 47 and only 57 seconds remained.

WHITE, downfield receivers blanketed, went to safety valve Newsome in the left flat. A defender missed by a hair of dashing in front of Newsome and intercepting for a gimme touchdown.

"I never saw the defender until after I caught the ball," Newsome related, and it's probably a good thing. If he had caught sight of him out of the side of his eye, it might have ruffled his concentration and caused him to drop it.

"I turned and took two steps to see what I had. When Donley (wide receiver Doug) threw that tremendous block, that's when I knew I could score."

Newsome fled down the sidelines, hurdling one would-be tackler at about the 25, barely staying in bounds on the 53-yard journey.

"No, I don't think he was trying to knock me out of bounds," Newsome analyzed. "He didn't want to stop the clock and that's where he made his mistake. No, I never ran track in college. I hated track."

IN OVERTIME, it was a roughing the kicker penalty that gave Dallas a second chance after Septien had missed a 50-yard field goal. The Cowboys drove from the Tampa 33 to the 24 from where Septien got another chance.

"I'm disappointed I didn't make the first kick," Rafael apologized. "I wasn't performing like a winner. But the second time I had more confidence."

The excitement was tarnished by a combined 26 penalties for 294 yards. From the number of penalties, you could say this was not a well played game. Landry rebuffed, "we could have gotten beat. We weren't ready to play, but you have a hard time being ready for this type situation. We heard all week how easy it was going to be."

Dennis Thurman summed it up pretty well after the game. "This was the toughest since that Redskin game in 1979 when we came from behind to win 35-34 after trailing 34-21 with two minutes left. And Tampa Bay isn't an O-6 team and the way we've been playing we're not a 6-0 team. We could easily be 4-2."

Bills edge Miami, 38-35

By The Associated Press

The Buffalo Bills shut out 120 in their last meeting with Miami, edged the Dolphins on Joe Danelo's 36-yard field goal. Joe Ferguson also was a hero for the Bills as he passed for 419 yards and five touchdowns, completing 38 of 54 passes against the NFL's No. 1 pass defense. Ferguson's scoring passes went nine and 30 yards to Byron Franklin, 11 yards to Booker Moore and four and one yard to Joe Cribbs.

Danelo's game-winner came after Miami placekicker Uwe von Schamann missed on field goal attempts from 52 and 43 yards in OT.

Ferguson's fifth touchdown pass of the game, a one-yarder to Cribbs with 23 seconds left in regulation, tied it 35-35. Miami had gone ahead for the first time on rookie Dan Marino's 14-yard pass to Mark Clayton with 3:06 remaining.

Clayton earlier threw a touchdown pass to Mark Duper on a reverse play. Duper also caught a 63-yard TD bomb from Marino, who was making his first NFL start.

Matt Bahr, booted a 44-yard field goal as time ran out to lift the Browns over the Jets in Cleveland. A wind listed at 16 mph but gusting off Lake Erie helped push Bahr's longest field goal of the year through the posts. The other scores came on Bobby Jones' diving first half reception of Brian Sipe's 32-yard pass for the Browns, and Richard Todd's 15-yard TD toss to Bruce Harper with 1:28 to go for the Jets.

Like Bahr, Morten Andersen was a last-second hero, kicking a 35-yard field goal to lift the Saints over the Falcons, who had blanked New Orleans in its last two trips to Atlanta. Andersen kicked four field goals and gave the Saints a 4-2 record, the best start in their 17-year history.

Washington won its eighth straight road game as John Riggins ran for 115 yards and three touchdowns and Joe Theismann passed for two scores. Riggins carried 22 times to become the league's fifth all-time leading rusher. It was the Redskins' 13th victory over the Cardinals in the last 15 meetings.

Houston lost its 13th in a row as visiting Denver, ranked 28th in the NFL in total offense with an average of 245 yards, had 262 at the half. Steve DeBerg, replacing No. 1 draft pick John Elway at quarterback, threw for two scores. Rich Karlis kicked four field goals and Sammy Winder rushed for 165 yards for the Broncos.

Minnesota was unusually effective on the ground as Tony Galbreath ran for 104 yards and Darrin Nelson added 78. Nelson broke a 56-yard scoring run for his first NFL touchdown and Galbreath had a 52-yard TD jaunt. Walter Payton finished with 102 yards for the host Bears.

At Pontiac, Mich., rookie fullback James Jones ran for three touchdowns and Eric Hipple passed for two others as the Lions snapped a four-game slide. Jones' three TDs tied a club record shared by six others.

Surprising Baltimore won its third straight as Raul Allegre snapped a 77 tied with a 52-yard field goal, and the hometown Colts added a safety when Donnell Thompson sacked Steve Gregor for a safety with two minutes left. Allegre has hit 13 of 14 field goal tries and three from over 50 yards.

Ron Jaworski threw two touchdowns passes to Mike Quick and Tony Franklin kicked a 25-yard field goal for visiting Philadelphia. Quick caught a five-yard TD pass from Jaworski, then made a one-handed catch of an 18-yard touchdown pass as the Eagles pulled ahead 14-6.

Rookie Eric Dickerson, the NFL's leading rusher, picked up 142 yards and the visiting Rams' only touchdown. Chuck Nelson kicked a 41-yard field goal for LA and Ivory Sully blocked Ray Werschling's last second field goal attempt.

At San Diego the Seahawks built a 21-0 margin, but the Chargers charged back. Andre Young streaked 40 yards with an intercepted pass to score the winning touchdown with 2:04 to go. Quarterback Dan Fouts, playing his third game with a broken wrist, ignited the 21-point second-half rally by hitting Bobby Duckworth on a 56-yard TD strike in the third quarter.

Marcus Allen recovered teammate Frank Hawkins' fumble in the Kansas City end zone with 8:29 remaining to lift the host Raiders over KC. Hawkins was hit at the Kansas City one and the ball rolled into the end zone where Allen fell on it, capping a comeback from a 14-0 deficit.

Akers carries on Texas tradition

AUSTIN (AP) — Make no mistake about it, says football coach Fred Akers, coaching isn't as easy as it was in years gone by, but he wouldn't trade his job at the University of Texas for anything.

The Akers era at Texas began in mid-December 1976, after Darrell Royal — the coach some Longhorn fans called "Saint Darrell" — had resigned, stating, "There's more to living than football."

Royal's career at Texas included national championships in 1963 and 1969 and a 30-game winning streak in 1968-71.

His winning percentage of .762 over 20 years was the best of any college coach for that period, and his teams won or shared in 11 Southwest Conference championships and went to 16 bowl games. He was immensely popular.

It was a hard act to follow, and the comparisons of Royal and Akers were inevitable. But Akers, then 38, now says, "In my way of thinking, that kind of thing goes with the territory."

Akers had been at Wyoming for two years, after nine years as Royal's assistant, when UT president Lorene Rogers notified him in a phone call that the Texas job was his if he wanted it.

He said when he was being considered for the Wyoming position he was asked if he viewed it as a "stepping stone" to a larger football power. "I told them there were two schools that I would be interested in if the opportunity came about — one was Texas and the other was Arkansas."

No other school, such as Oklahoma?

"Texas or Arkansas," Akers said in a recent interview, "and I don't mind telling you I had other job offers while I was at Wyoming."

His hiring was so unexpected that The Austin Citizen, which later went out of business, gambled and printed a front-page headline — "It's Mike" — hours before the announcement.

Mike Campbell, an assistant to Royal all 20 years at Texas, was thought to be the odds-on favorite to succeed his former boss, and Campbell himself said, "I thought it would be just a matter of formality."

Royal had salvaged a 5-5-1 record his final season to keep intact his amazing record of never having a losing season in coaching.

He also left behind great players, such as running back Earl Campbell and defensive tackle Brad Shearer. The cupboard, Royal said, was not bare.

Akers scrapped Royal's wishbone-T and had Earl Campbell running out of the Veer and T formations, and plugged in a more reckless defense to replace the successful bend-but-don't-break defense Royal had favored.

Akers' first game as Texas head coach was a 44-0 home victory over Boston College, and it remains one of his favorite victories. "It was a new system, a new program and it was successful," said Akers. "That was very satisfying."

His first team in 1977, with Campbell winning the Heisman and Shearer the Outland Trophy as lineman of the year, was 11-0 but lost a national championship when Notre Dame whipped the Longhorns in the Cotton Bowl 38-10 to give the Irish the national title.

"I think the two teams were comparable, but they weren't better than we were — they were that day, which is all that counts," says Akers, who was coach of the year.

One story that reflects, perhaps, Akers' personality had him in the dressing room, 1½ hours after the loss, still courteously talking to a University of Houston student reporter.

Since Akers' first year, the Longhorns have consistently ranked in the top 10 among college football teams and persistent firing rumors surfaced only once — in 1980, after Texas lost its final three games and finished 7-5. Regents and school officials quickly squashed the rumors.

The next year, Akers reinforced their support by winning the Cotton Bowl over Paul "Bear" Bryant and Alabama 14-12. "Already they're calling it a classic, one of the Cotton Bowl true classics," says Akers.

Without much notice, Akers, 45, has compiled a 58-16-1 record in six-plus years, which at 773 is the best winning percentage ever for a Southwest Conference coach who stayed at least five years.

The pressure to win doesn't bother him, he says. "That's part of being in this business, and if outside pressure affects you, you don't need to be in this business."

Asked how he relaxes, Akers said, "That's another way that people differ. Darrell was a big golfer, a very fine golfer — he loved it, and he came along when that was a popular thing to do. But I think Darrell's generation of coaches — the Frank Broyles and a few others like them that were really active in golf — I think that's the last coaching generation that is going to experience much time on the golf course. Recruiting rules have changed, limits (of recruits) have changed, we're called on more to make personal appearances before our ex-students over the country. And you simply don't have much time to spend on the golf course."

"I like family things when I get a chance to relax. I enjoy being with my family. And it doesn't necessarily have to be an action-packed agenda," says Akers.

He and his wife have bought a 120-acre ranch about 30 minutes from the office for an occasional weekend out.

Buffalo's Joe Danelo jumps for joy after hitting an overtime field goal to give the Bills their first win against Miami in the Orange Bowl since 1966.

Iraq wants 'natural right'

KUWAIT (DPA) — Iraqi Foreign Minister Izzat Aziz has warned that Iraq will not accept Iran continuing to enjoy the smooth export of its oil through the Persian Gulf while Iraq is being denied what he called its similar natural right.

In an interview published here Sunday by the Kuwait daily "Al-Anbaa," Aziz said "We do not deny the aggressor this right, but it is not acceptable that Iraq be deprived of similar rights which are directly linked to its own vital interests."

Referring to the call last June by Iraq President Saddam Hussein for a halt to military operations in the gulf, for gulf nations to be able to use their ports for trade and oil exports, and for free navigation, Aziz said the call "was in the interest of all parties including Iran" and for the industrial and non-industrial world.

Observers here point out that Iran is still using the gulf for its oil exports, while Iraq's Basra oil terminal, located on the northern tip of the gulf, has been closed since the outbreak of the Gulf War three years ago.

Iraq also used to export its oil through two other terminals through pipeline that runs through Syrian territories. But Syria, which sides with Iran, shut off the flow saying that a dispute over taxes first had to be settled before allowing the oil to flow again.

Iraq's only oil export is being made through a pipeline that runs through neighboring Turkey.

Amid reports that five French Super-Entendard jet fighters have been delivered to Iraq, Aziz said that Iraq's relations with France were good, and he expressed the belief that "France is determined to support Iraq not because of favoring one party over the other but because Iraq has a good and clear stance."

As to Iraq's relations with Egypt, the Iraqi foreign minister told the newspaper that the special ties with Cairo did not constitute a departure from the decisions of the 1978 Arab Summit Conference held in Baghdad in which Arab countries decided to boycott Egypt for signing the Camp David peace accord with Israel.

Jobless rate hits lowest level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's jobless rate fell to 9.3 percent last month, the lowest in 17 months.

The Labor Department said Friday that total U.S. civilian employment rose by 382,000 in September to a record 101.96 million. At the same time, the labor force increased by 107,000 to 112.37 million people.

That left 10.4 million Americans still unemployed nine months after the recession peak of 12.5 million out of work last December, for a jobless rate of 9.3 percent last month compared with 9.5 percent in August.

The unemployment rate was 10.8 percent in December, the highest level in 42 years. By comparison, the rate was 7.4 percent when President Reagan took office in January 1981.

The latest report said unemployment rates dipped last month to 8.7 percent from 8.8 percent for adult men and to 7.8 percent from 8 percent for adult women. The two categories are most likely to include family breadwinners.

For other categories, the rates were — Teen-agers: 21.8 percent, down from 23 percent in August.

— Whites: 8.1 percent, down from 8.2.

— Blacks: 19, down from 20.

Wilson shows student Bruce Darling the basics of another defensive technique called the "gaun sau" block.

Wing tsun kung fu instructor Ron Wilson, right, demonstrates the "bong sau," or wing-arm, block against an attack by fellow instructor Gilbert Leal. While warding off the attack, Wilson is simultaneously counter-attacking with his leg.

Kung fu

Legend has it that the soft, fluid movements of wing tsun kung fu originated when the Buddhist nun who developed the form in China 400 hundred years ago observed a snake and a crane locked in combat.

To her, the snake represented the traditional, brute force style of kung fu in vogue at the time.

The crane, however, displayed the graceful, elusive qualities that are the hallmark of wing tsun, which Bruce Lee studied prior to his coming to the United States.

"Wing Tsun relies on wisdom and skill, not power," said Daniel Abeyta, who is establishing a wing tsun school in Midland — the second of only two such schools in Texas.

"Wing tsun is not only a way of fighting, it's a way of thinking. It's new to this country and wasn't taught outside of China until 1950. Bruce Lee was among the first to study the form."

Lee, who went on to popularize the martial arts in movies, studied in Hong Kong under wing tsun grand-master Yip Man.

Dr. Leung Ting was the last to study under Yip Man and is credited with spreading the form to about 20 countries, including the U.S.

Dr. Leung, who lives in Hong Kong, is scheduled to conduct a 10-day seminar in San Antonio, where the only other wing tsun school in Texas is located. The seminar is to begin Friday.

The basic principle of wing tsun that distinguishes it from other forms of kung fu is the "center line theory," which divides the body vertically from head to groin.

"Basically," said Abeyta, "you defend that center line and don't have to worry much about the rest of the body. Other forms generally rely on a sideways stance."

The advantage is that you can use both limbs at once without having to twist or turn the body into position.

"The hands are positioned in such a way that offensive blows are easily deflected, and you use the other person's momentum against him."

Another difference is the unique "rolling arm" exercises that, once perfected, allow the hands and arms to function automatically, without conscious thought.

"Other forms can be likened to a bull," said Abeyta. "Wing tsun can be likened to a matador, who uses quick, very small movements instead of brute force to overcome his opponent."

Noting that wing tsun was created by a woman, Abeyta added: "Since it uses soft, flexible movements and requires no rigorous physical training, it is easily adopted by women and the elderly. Our intention is to promote it in Texas."

Abeyta and his students practice Mondays and Wednesdays at 7 p.m. in Dennis The Menace Park on South Garfield Street. When the weather turns bad, they'll move the 1½-hour sessions to his garage.

"It doesn't take much space," he noted.

Wilson and Midland wing tsun school operator Daniel Abeyta, left, show student Roger Gose the proper position for executing the "gaun sau" block. Abeyta's school is one of only two such schools in Texas.

Darling, his wife Diane, along with Gose and Leal, practice the "Siu-Nim-Tau," or "little idea" — the first of three basic forms that must be mastered in learning the wing tsun system of kung fu.

'West Germany, U.S. Stranger brings terror to man's life have traditional ties'

DALLAS (AP) — The United States and West Germany share a friendship and tradition that allows the two countries to count on each other for economic growth and mutual defense, West Germany's president says.

Karl Carstens, speaking Sunday during German Day at the State Fair of Texas, said he hoped that "the friendship between our two countries, which has lasted 300 years, lasts another 300 years. This is what I wish for us all."

Carstens, whose post in the West German government is primarily ceremonial, was in Dallas for 12 hours midway through his nine-city tour of the United States marking the tricentennial of German immigration.

Thirteen Mennonite families seeking religious freedom fled Germany in 1683 and landed in America. They founded Germantown, which is now part of Philadelphia.

Carstens emphasized the dependence of West Germany on the United States and other allies for its national security.

"We in the Federal Republic of Germany know that defense and security have their price," Carstens said. "In a world full of tension, the alliance with the United States has given us a peace and security for three decades."

Another West German official told a news conference here Sunday that the scheduled deployment of U.S. missiles in West Germany is essential to the country's security.

Berndt von Staden, state secretary of the Federal Office of the West German government, said his country would support deployment if the Soviet Union does not make concessions in ongoing arms limitation negotiations.

"Neither you nor we love missiles," he said. "That is not the point."

Von Staden also said West Germany sees growing economic ties developing with Texas.

"Your economic growth is obviously strong," he said. "I have no doubt the economic relations will grow."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Reuben Moore says a stranger he gave shelter to became such a good member of the community he first seemed sent by God. But then he brought terror to Moore's life. The stranger — Henry Lee Lucas — has since claimed to have killed as many as 150 women, and an official said Lucas explained that he killed because he enjoyed sex with the dead.

STONEBURG, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas was clearly a man in need of help when Reuben Moore first saw him standing with a young woman and a pile of luggage beside a Texas highway in the hot sun of an early summer day.

Moore, a gentle-spirited man of God accustomed to helping troubled strangers, never hesitated. He eased his car to a stop and opened the door.

It was the first step of a journey into darkness for Moore and for the small community in the rolling ranchland of North Central Texas.

Within months, Moore and his wife, Faye, would be living with fear, working for God by day and huddling, armed and alert, behind locked doors at night. Henry Lee Lucas was about to give the Moores and, eventually, the rest of the world, a glimpse into the twisted underside of human character, a vista of perversion and death.

Henry Lee Lucas is led to district court on June 23, 1983, in connection with the death of a Ringgold, Texas woman. Lucas claims to have killed 156 persons, and is in the Montague, Texas county jail.

the world the day Sheriff Conway came to the church. He said he believed Lucas killed Mrs. Rich. Lucas, said the sheriff, was a dangerous man, but he could not be arrested because there was no evidence and no charge. During the discussion, Mrs. Moore mentioned the .22 pistol.

Conway slapped his knee. "That's all we need. That's a felony."

As an ex-convict, Lucas could not own a gun in Texas.

LUCAS WAS arrested on the weapons charge. At first he would say nothing. But then, like a dam bursting, he began to talk. He confessed to killing Mrs. Rich and begged details of other killings.

He had stabbed Mrs. Rich, said Lucas, and stuffed her body in a casket. Later, he said, he had carried parts of the body back to his apartment at the House of Prayer and burned them in a wood stove.

He led officers to a field in Denton County where the scattered bones of Frieda Powell — "Becky" — was found. Officers learned she was a 17-year-old Florida runaway, and never married to Lucas.

And there were other slain women, perhaps as many as 150 Lucas claimed, in 17 states. Lawmen from all over the country began checking for a Lucas connection with their unsolved murders. Lucas was taken to several counties in Texas, leading lawmen to sites where bodies were found.

Victims' lives became intertwined over hobby

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Philip Good and Ronald Mayes would normally have been sitting in the Sunday school class of a Baptist deacon whose friendship they had made over their hobby of flying ultralight aircraft.

But their lives ended tragically in the small hangar outside town where the friendship had blossomed.

Bodies of the deacon, 51-year-old paint contractor Jerry Brown, Denison builder Bob Tate and Good were shot execution style under a pile of carpet beside one of the planes.

Mayes, who lived within sight of the hangar, lay 36 feet away with two gunshot wounds in his back. Family members think he surprised the gunman or gunmen who had slain his friends.

"They had gotten to be very good friends," Brown's daughter Lynn said of the four.

They and Tate flew the planes "every chance they got, every time the wind was out," said Tate's son-in-law, David Watkins. "They are what he (Tate) bought this place for."

Miss Brown said her father became interested in the hobby a year ago after reading a newspaper advertisement placed by Good, a sheriff's deputy who sold the planes. Brown, 51, later met Mayes, a friend of Good's, and Tate.

Tate, also 51, had bought a small 20-acre ranch outside Sherman two years ago and built the hangar to house his ultralight planes. He was building a new home up the road from the hangar.

Brown, a deacon at West Sherman Baptist Church, later talked Good and Mayes into visiting the church where they became members earlier this year, their pastor said.

"He was the kind of people who was always inviting people to come to church," said the Rev. Danny Wood.

Good and Brown had both owned planes and flew them regularly during the summer, Wood said. "During the early part of the summer they were going out every weekend."

Saturday, Tate, Good and Brown went to the hangar to talk to a Dallas man about buying Tate's plane for $4,000. The plane was missing Saturday night when the bodies were found, family members said.

BUT FOR MOORE, on that May afternoon in 1982, Lucas was just a man in need.

Lucas said he had been working as a handyman at the ranchhouse of Kate Rich, an 80-year-old woman who lived near Ringgold. Mrs. Rich's daughter had told him to leave and now, said Lucas, he and his wife were trying to hitchhike to California. It seemed a good place to go.

But Moore had another suggestion.

A year before, the 52-year-old Moore had bought a failed chicken ranch, a cluster of long, tin-roofed barns between Stoneburg and Ringgold. He had placed a plywood steeple atop one of the barns and created a church he called the House of Prayer for All People.

FOR THE NEXT three months, Lucas became such a valued member of the community, Moore was sure he had been sent by God.

"He was friendly and quiet and as good a worker as I've ever seen," recalls Moore. "I needed help and he was a real help. I thought I was really lucky to have him."

Lucas did carpentry and other work around the one-time chicken ranch, helping to turn it into a comfortable residence and a well-appointed church. He quickly became popular with the neighbors, according to Moore, because he helped with chores and never accepted money.

Lucas often attended Moore's church services and, after a few weeks, he "confessed," announcing to the congregation he was a sinner, but was resolved to improve his life.

THE MINISTER and his family were thrilled.

"I don't think Henry knew God until he came here," said Mrs. Moore.

For three months the contented idyll continued, though Moore says now there were things about Lucas that puzzled and worried him. One was Becky, the young woman Lucas claimed as his wife. She appeared to be 19 or 20 and Lucas was 47. They seemed a strange pair.

THE SEIGE OF terror for the Moores began on Aug. 20, 1982. Lucas and Becky announced they were going to Florida.

"Becky said she had kinfolks there," recalls Moore. "Henry said he couldn't let her go by herself. They were going to hitchhike."

The next day, Lucas came back to the House of Prayer in tears.

"He was crying," said Moore. "He told us Becky had run off with a truck driver. As soon as he could, he said he was going to go looking for her."

Lucas continued to work around the church, but he stopped bathing or shaving, and wore the same clothes day after day. Moore noticed that Lucas was awake at all hours and never seemed to sleep.

A FEW DAYS LATER, Lucas left again, but returned very soon. He said he had found Becky in a San Antonio motel with a truck driver and that their marriage "was over."

Slowly, Moore's impression of Lucas changed. He began to notice that Lucas would have "spells," sudden changes in countenance that Moore began to fear.

"He couldn't sleep because, he said, 'that woman would come into my mind,'" Moore recalled. "He didn't explain."

Another time, said Moore, Lucas offered, "I'm bad and I've got evidence to prove it." Again, he didn't explain.

IN SEPTEMBER, Moore, who also is a roofing contractor, accepted a job in Altus, Okla. Lucas worked as part of the crew for four days and then went back to the church in Texas. He cleaned himself up and got a ride to nearby Bowie, Texas, where he bought new clothes. Then he dropped out of sight.

That night, Kate Rich disappeared.

A few days later, Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway called on Moore, looking for Lucas. The sheriff said Lucas was a suspect in Mrs. Rich's disappearance.

Lucas called Moore from out of state in October and asked for money. Moore sent $100 and Lucas showed up a few days later with two friends who left after a time.

SHERIFF CONWAY came to the church and arrested Lucas on stolen car warrant from Maryland. When Maryland refused to extradite him, Lucas was released.

But Conway and Moore now knew who Lucas was. He was a native of Blacksburg, Va., one of two sons born to a woman who cleaned houses and made whiskey so she could feed her children and a crippled alcoholic husband. Lucas, the Texas authorities learned, had been convicted of killing his mother in 1960 and had served time for the crime in a Michigan prison and in a mental hospital.

He also had been in prison for auto theft, burglary and for kidnapping of a young girl. They also learned that Lucas married the widow of a cousin, but the marriage ended when he made advances on his wife's three daughters. He also threatened to kill his half sister, dated his nephew's wife and attempted to run away with a niece.

But he didn't tell Lucas to leave because, "I was afraid he would sneak back during the night."

ONCE, LUCAS sat down within view of Mrs. Moore and watched her, staring intently, for a whole day. The next day he did it again, and the following day once more. Staring, staring, staring.

Sheriff Conway and his deputies kept a watch on Lucas. Moore said the lawmen's cars often drove past the lonely chicken ranch and sometimes parked nearby.

Moore got a pistol and began going armed whenever he noticed Lucas "spells."

"There were times when he was normal," said Moore. "There were times when you knew he was dangerous."

THE NIGHTMARE ended for the Moores and started for the rest of

ON THURSDAY in Conroe, Lucas was indicted on three counts of capital murder after he led officers to Montgomery County to wooded sites where the bodies of three women were found.

He was charged with murder in Hale County, where a headless body had been found last year. The head, apparently a grisly companion in a cross-country trip, was found in Arizona. In Ector County, Texas, Lucas was charged with the 1981 strangulation of Beverly Joyce Luttrell, 46 of Odessa, and in Williamson County, with the strangulation of an unidentified woman whose body was found last month. He also was charged with murder in Fort Bend County, in the stabbing death of Delon Marie Wilkinson, 22, of Houston, and in Monroe, La. in the murder of Kathy Whorton, 19, of Baton Rouge, La.

Why, he was asked, did he kill so many?

"It was a sex thing," said an official who was familiar with the case. "He enjoyed sex with the dead. It called necrophilia."

IN INTERVIEWS and affidavits given to officials from several counties, Lucas told how time after time he would first kill then rape, said the official, who asked not to be identified by name. Some victims were strangled, others stabbed, others cut apart. Lucas said his motive in the deaths was sexual gratification, the official said.

For Reuben Moore and his wife, there was relief, and sadness, and tinge of guilt.

The last time they saw Lucas, he told the Moores, "I'm sorry it all happened on your place."

Then he looked at Moore with the one eye and added: "I gave you every possible clue. I don't know why you never caught on."

Democrats pick Dallas for 1984 gathering

EL PASO (AP) — Texas Democrats, wanting to capitalize on the media attention that Dallas will receive during the Republican National Convention next summer, have decided to hold their 1984 state convention in Dallas two weeks later.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, in a 32-24 vote Saturday, picked Dallas over Austin for the site of the Sept. 7-8 political gathering.

"National attention will be on Dallas, so why move it to another site when it is so easy to keep it there?" Dallas County Democratic Chairman Bob Greenberg said at the meeting.

The Democratic presidential nominee and his running mate are expected to attend the Texas gathering.

The Aug. 20-24 Republican National Convention is expected to draw 25,000 visitors and bring more than $35 million to Dallas, city officials have said.

The Democratic meeting could bring the city as much as $15,000 more from the 12,000 Democrats and visitors expected to attend.

Greenberg said the "eyes of the nation" will remain on Dallas after the Republicans leave and the second convention will allow Democrats to show the difference between their party and the GOP.

Travis County Democratic Chairman Walter Richter labeled Greenberg's argument "a bunch of hogwash." He said Austin would be more convenient and less expensive as a convention site.

Richter and other Austin Democrats noted that the state capital has not hosted a party convention since 1974 and that Dallas was the gathering's site in 1982.

County disputes transsexual's license to wed

FORT WORTH (AP) — A marriage license issued to a woman and a transsexual who now identifies himself as a man is being challenged by Tarrant County attorneys who say it is not clear when a sex change operation takes effect legally.

Tarrant County Clerk Madrin

Huffman said he sought guidance from the district attorney's office when he was told that a license was issued Aug. 6 to the couple.

The pair was married soon after receiving the license by Peace Justice Gary Ritchie.

"At what point, if ever, does a person who has undergone a sex change operation actually change their sex?" asked Assistant District Attorney Dalton Gandy.

"The question in this case, as I see it, is whether this person is a male or a female, how we're going to determine that, that's the knotty problem," he told the Fort Worth Star Telegram. "Our position is that both parties are female. The parties don't agree to that."

According to records in the district clerk's office, the man was born in Weatherford as a woman and had his name legally changed July 22,

Children slip, drown

MARBLE FALLS, Texas (AP) — Swift currents from a flooded creek crossing pulled two children from their father's arms as the man attempted to carry them to safety from the family car, authorities said.

The bodies of Jessica Neal, 9, and Benjamin Neal, 3, were recovered Sunday morning, officials said. The victims were the children of Kelly and Jill Neal of Granite Shoals, Texas, who had moved there recently from Cheyenne, Wyo.

Neal, 22, drove his 1973 Ford into a low-water crossing at Camp Creek on Farm Road 1431, six miles east of Marble Falls, about 3:30 a.m. Sunday, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

Heavy rains on Saturday night and early Sunday had left the crossing under six feet of water, said Justice of the Peace Martin McLean.

The Neals and their children got out of the car. The father was carrying the children when he slipped, and the children were swept away, McLean said.

"He was trying to get to shore. The current was too swift," McLean said.

Attorneys to begin jury selection

LIPSCOMB, Texas (AP) — Attorneys in the trial of a man accused of murdering a member of a Panhandle drug syndicate have come to this small town to try to find a jury to decide if Michael Anderson killed on orders to silence a witness.

Anderson is accused of killing Robert Eugene Hall, 28, of Sayre, Okla., whose body was found March 2 in a grave behind Anderson's home near Kelton, about 35 miles east of Pampa.

State District Judge Grainger McIlhany ordered the trial moved to this Panhandie town 70 miles northeast of Pampa and scheduled jury selection to begin today.

Anderson surrendered to police in Lake Charles, La. on March 3. District Attorney Guy Hardin said Anderson fears for his life and has chosen not to post a $25,000 bond for release.

At a pre-trial hearing in June, McIlhany ruled that much of the evidence discovered during a search of Anderson's home was inadmissible, since the search was conducted without a warrant. The judge ruled that no mention of the body or its discovery will be allowed during the trial.

Hall died from four .45-caliber shots to the back of the head. An autopsy showed he had been dead about a week when his body was discovered.

Authorities claim Anderson was ordered to kill Hall by a drug suspect in custody in Elk City, Okla. Hardin said the man ordered the killings because he feared Hall would testify against him in an upcoming trial.
