Along The Waterfront

Mrs. Jim Stansell, fishing with her son, J. C. and her grandson-Russell, caught nine rat reds and one flounder.

It took Bill Evans and Al Smith a week to bring in 17 trout.

Bill Bardwell's charter boat parties had a red fish thrill over Labor Day weekend, when Mrs. Dan Rymer and sister-in-law, and nephew, of San Antonio landed nine red fish from four to five pounds each, and a large bunch of good trout.

Col. C. C. Simmons of San Antonio with his son-in-law, landed 20 large reds from five to six pounds, each plus a nice bunch of trout.

School Attendance On First Day Sets Record, Gray Says

First day attendance in Aransas County schools was 83 higher than it was a year ago, J. D. Gray, supt., said today. On the first day of school in 1961, there were 1093 students registered; on the first day this year, there were 1176.

Gray said that approximately 1250 are expected when registrations hit their peak later in the year.

In addition to the high attendance, he said, the schools Tuesday fed the greatest number of people that had ever used the cafeterias in one day — 912.

Labor Day DWI's Find Going Rough

Business picked up in Aransas County over the Labor Day weekend for DWI's six of them were arrested by State Highway patrolmen.

Three of them will be tried in county court—Lupé Galindo, Jose Angel Torres and John B. Goff.

The other three were charged with second offenses, and after an examining trial before County Judge John D. Wendell, sitting magistrate, their cases were passed along to Aransas County Grand Jury, which convened Tuesday morning and is still out, considering these and other matters. Those whose cases came before the Grand Jury are Ramiro Munoz, Elmer Frank Powell, and Ernest Vories Wolfgram.

Also arrested over the weekend by the State Highway patrol was Margarito Perez, charged with carrying a pistol, who will appear before Judge John D. Wendell in the near future.

Six other DWI cases appeared before Judge Wendell since the first of the year, all of whom were fined $50 and costs each, sentenced to three days in jail, and lost their driver's licenses for six months.

Three other DWI cases are still pending in Judge Wendell's court.

Ritchey Clendening Buys Byron's Clothing

Ritchey Clendening, who was formerly associated with his mother, Mrs. Grace Clendening, in Clendening's at Aransas Pass, has bought Byron's in Rockport, taking over Sept. 1, and will operate here under the name of Ritchey's, he said.

"We are having a sale this week," he said, "and will remodel the interior to allow us more counter space. I intend to expand and add to the present lines and to specialize in sportswear for men, women and children, underwear, lingerie and accessories."

Formal opening of the remodelled store will be on Sept. 21, Ritchey said, and at that time there will be door prizes for adults, with bubble gum and all-day suckers for the youngsters.

JACK MCCREADY ATTENDING BEAR SCHOOL IN ILLINOIS

Jack McCready of the local Western Auto Associate Store is in Rock Island, Illinois, attending the Bear Manufacturing Automobile Safety Service School.

He will complete the three weeks course Sept. 8. The Bear school graduates about 500 automobile Safety Specialists each year from all over the world.

Clemente Hernandez, an employee of the above store attended the Bear school three years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Owen of San Antonio spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Owen.

Commissioners Buy Two Brand New Fire Trucks

The Aransas County Commissioners Court, at a called meeting approved payment of a bill for $1952 for clerical expense in compiling delinquent tax rolls, appointed a new deputy sheriff, and opened the bids on two fire engines.

Low bidder on the equipment was the Gulf Fire and Safety Equipment Corporation, of Corpus Christi, with a tender of $23,062, and it was awarded the contract. The only other bidder on the equipment was Fire Trucks, Inc., of Mt. Clemens, Mich., which bid $28,446.

Specifications for the equipment called for rugged, powerful fire fighters, County Judge John D. Wendell said today.

Each of them has a 200-gallon per minute rotary gear pump, mounted in front the judge said, provided with side discharges as well, for firemen to use while moving and pumping.

Each has a reel on the stern, holding 150 feet of hose; an SOS fog nozzle, and a 500-gallon booster tank so that it can carry its own water supply.

"The equipment is mounted on two big International four-wheel drive trucks," Judge Wendell said, "with sand tires, so that they can plow in on some of these brush fires that we haven't been able to get to with our other equipment."

One of the trucks will be stationed at Fulton and operated by the volunteer fire department there, while the other will be at Rockport.

Joe Earl Hunt is the new deputy.

Lieutenant Tells C. of C. Directors About Beauty Show

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, after hearing reports of the various committee heads at their regular meeting, discussed various problems in connection with the beaches and President Bob Fleming appointed a committee to confer with County Judge John D. Wendell on formation of a country park board.

Committee members are Jack Sanders, Mrs. Charles A. Roe, Sr., Mrs. James A. Jarboe, Miss Lola Bonner, B. T. Hardeman, and Fleming.

It was brought out during the discussion that one of the prime needs on the beaches is sufficient shade to handle the people that wish to use the facilities from the Navigation District's Little Bay project, and it was suggested that the local Chamber of Commerce would do well to study the methods by which Padre Island Beach in handled by Nueces County.

Lt. Robert M. Johnson, of the 813th AC&W Squadron, project officer for the Miss Rockport Lifesaver Beauty Contest, to be held in conjunction with the Air Force drive for greater ground safety, explained the contest rules, and asked the Chamber's cooperation in the matter.

He emphasized the fact that both the style show, to be held on the afternoon of Sept. 29, and the beauty contest to be held that night would be open to the public.

Those wishing to take part in the contest, he said, should write The Commander, Miss Rockport Air Force Station Live Saver Beauty Contest, Rockport Air Force Station, and ask for application blanks. There is no entry fee he said, and the top prize is $200 cash.

FULTON SCHOOL CHOSEN TO TAKE PART IN PROGRAM

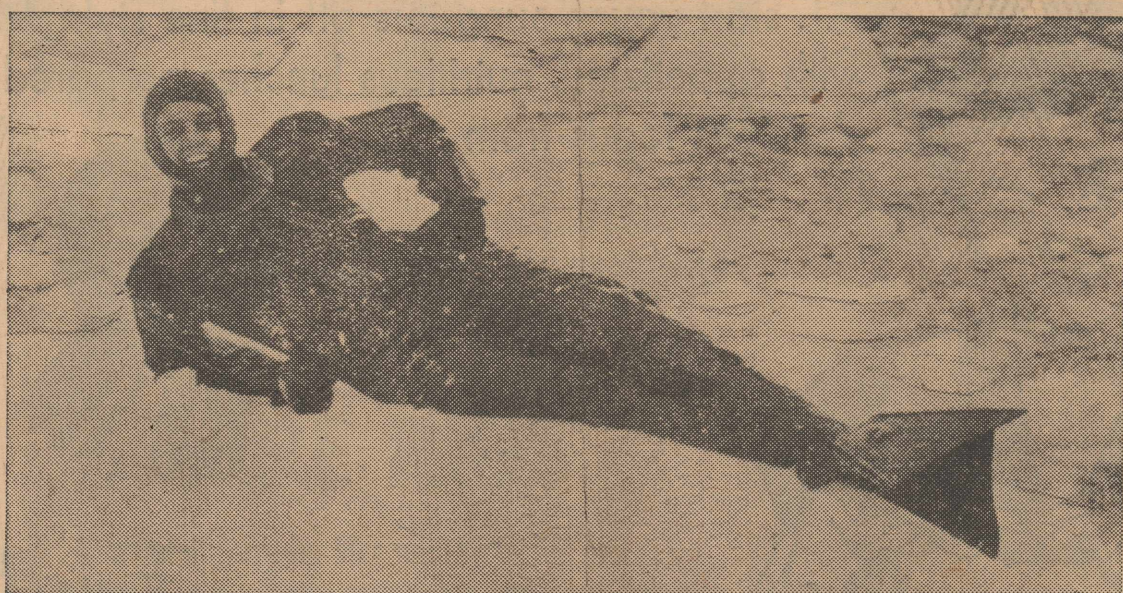

Fulton Elementary School has been chosen one of 800 participating schools in the country to receive the Traveling Elementary School Science Library Program. The program is sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science for the purpose of improving the teaching of science and mathematics.

The program consists of 160 books, dealing with all phases of science and mathematics on all elementary levels. The books are sent to the participating schools in two sections of 80 books each. The Fulton school has already received its first shipment of books, and will begin circulating them next week.

This service costs the school receiving the program, nothing. The books are shipped and returned at the expense of the AASA.

At the end of the first semester of school, the present selection of materials will be returned and a second section of 80 books will be received. The Fulton Elementary School is very proud to have been selected to participate in this fine program, and welcome visitors to come into the library and see what this program consists of.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schlein, Bobby, Johnny, and Nancy Wright, of Houston, spent the Labor Day holidays with Mrs. W. H. Hogue.

Seafood Dealer Shoots Man At Aransas Pass

H. R. Hall, about 50, former owner of a marine supply company, was shot to death Monday in a cafe near Conn Brown Harbor.

John W. Nelson Jr., 41, of Aransas Pass was released on a $5,000 bond after being charged with murder with malice. Sheriff A. C. Shivers said Hall was shot and killed instantly while the two men stood near the entrance of the Holiday Club. The shooting happened about 12:15 p.m.

Shivers said Hall was hit five times with bullets from a .25 caliber Colt automatic.

He said Hall, who has ordered some hamburgers, was standing near the cafe cash register. Nelson, who had just walked in, was standing near the door.

"I think it resulted from a long-standing feud," Shivers said, "but I don't know what caused it."

Shivers said that Hall was not armed and that no fight or scuffle occurred.

Nelson was accompanied by his lawyer, Bill Ellis, when he talked with Shivers and Aransas County Atty. Ellis Clark.

The charge against Nelson was filed with Justice of the Peace G. D. Johnson in Rockport.

Shivers said that after the shooting, Nelson walked back to his car and started driving toward his office, which is on the west side of the harbor. While driving to his office, he hailed Aransas Pass Police Chief F. N. Turnbough, who had been summoned.

Nelson is a shrimp and seafood buyer.

Shivers said that one bullet entered Hall's skull just behind the left ear. One entered the left side of his neck. One went through the top of his left shoulder, entering the front side; one burned the top of his left shoulder and one went through his left wrist, shooting his watch off.

The body was taken to Cagle-Marshall Funeral Home.

Hall is survived by his wife and two children.

Nelson has a wife and a 13-year-old son.

Long term plans call for a sixty-unit motel at the site.

The Beachcombers Club will operate under the same rules as in the past as part of the set-up.

LAGUNA CONSTRUCTION COMPANY LOW BIDDER ON KEY ALLEGRO WORK

A local firm of which Jack Sanders is president, the Laguna Construction Company, was low bidder on the water distribution system, a new concrete entrance bridge, and installation of streets and drainage on Key Allegro, and started work today on the water distribution system.

Holdenfeld Brothers of Corpus Christi and Cage Brothers of San Antonio were second and third low.

Sanders said this morning that he anticipates about 30 days working time for installation of the water distribution system while the bridge and street work will consume about 105 days.

The water system will be tied into overhead tanks on which Mechanical Services, Inc., was low bidder, Sanders said.

There were 12 bidders for the work, which was originally estimated at approximately $100,000.

WATER SKIERS NOW HAVE MORE ROOM IN BASIN

To those water skiers who have gotten tired of going around and around in Little Bay, a new stretch of water has been opened by completion of a channel between the Navigation District basin and the one recently dredged by Key Allegro.

Carl C. Krueger, Jr., and the Navigation District have combined the entrance from Aransas Bay into the more sheltered waters. Entrance to Little Bay is now through the Key Allegro Channel, which is 100 feet wide and twelve feet deep, and a connecting channel has been dredged between it and the Navigation District Basin.

The arrangement was worked out in order to cut maintenance costs for the entry channel.

DUPLICATE BRIDGE

Winners at duplicate bridge last Thursday night were Mrs. N. F. Jackson and Mrs. R. W. Willis, first; Mrs. C. C. Atchley and Homer Faber, second; while Mr. and Mrs. Denny and Mrs. Louise Rohan and Mrs. C. C. Crabb tied for third.

Duplicate bridge is held every Thursday night at Marineland on Highway 35 north, and all interested persons are invited to attend.

Tickets On Sale For Book Reviews To Help Library

Tickets are now on sale for the series of three book reviews, the first of which will be held Sept. 15, and the other two in October and November, all proceeds to go to the library book fund.

These season tickets are $5 each, and entitle the holder to all three book reviews, for which the Woman's Club is donating the use of their building, and for which Mrs. Charles A. Roe is donating refreshments.

And, for those hard of hearing, arrangements are being made to reserve a section of seats near the reviewer so that they may hear.

Tickets are on sale at Roe's No. 1, in Rockport; at Roe's No. 2, in Fulton; at West's Supermarket; at C. G. Morrison Co.; at the Shopper's Mart; the Star Package Store; Johnson's Drug Store; Roaten's Drug Store; and at the library.

Or, if you can't get to any of these places, if you'll call Mrs. G. E. Dickey, at Southfield 4-2478, or Mrs. Roe, they'll be glad to bring the tickets to you and pick up your money.

All money above the few expenses will go to the library's book fund, which is practically the only way it is possible to obtain new books, other than memorial gifts.

The library is an asset to the community, and one much used by tourists and children. Members of the library board urge every one to purchase a ticket, even if they don't use it themselves. The cause is a good one.

Michael, almost ready to start on his fall round of classes along the coast, said that the summer sessions of the school had been most successful this year, and that he is looking forward to a busy fall and winter.

He teaches classes from here to Freeport, Corpus Christi and Beeville.

Goose Island State Park north of Rockport was featured in an article in the September issue of "Sparks," a magazine published by the Texas State Parks Board. The layout includes a page of copy and four pages of pictures.

Listed as "Texas' principal multi-purpose state park," Goose Island resort was said to be "the only developed recreational state park along the Lone Star State's 600-mile Gulf shoreline."

Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Landrum and children returned Sunday after a visit with his father in Bellville. The also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Norman McLeod and children of Eagle Lake, and "Six Flags Over Texas."

O. J. Beck Gets School Contract

School Board Takes Bid of Corpus Christi

Firm Which Promises Completion of Work

On Junior High and Rockport In Early August

The Aransas County School Board, at a called session last night, opened bids on the new junior high school and fifteen classroom addition to the Rockport elementary campus, and awarded the construction contract to O. J. Beck and Sons of Corpus Christi, although, money-wise, the D. W. Marshall Construction Company of Victoria was apparently low bidder.

However, the bids of the two companies were close together, and the time required by Marshall would have run construction of the buildings well past the opening of school next year, a contingency that the school board took into consideration.

O. J. Beck and Sons was awarded the bid for $463,872, with a time limit of 260 working days, as opposed to Marshall's bid of $460,400 and 300 days for completion. Penalty for exceeding the set time limit is $150 per day, rainy and stormy days excepted.

There were eight bidders on the job, most of them from Corpus Christi. Besides those already mentioned, Braselton Construction, Burnett Construction, Charles Burnett Co., B. G. Cornelius Construction Company, Picton and Steele, A. H. Rose, and the Stotler Construction Company.

Braselton's bid was $480,480 and 360 days; Burnett Construction's bid was $474,160 and 300 days; Charles Burnett Co. bid $473,500; and Stotler Construction bid $497,000 and 400 days.

Three companies bid on only portions of the job. A. H. Rose entered a bid of $321,800 and 280 days on construction of the junior high school alone. Bidding on the same basis, O. J. Beck and Sons offered to construct the junior high school alone for $312,000 in 260 days; Braselton's bid for this was $320,023, and 330 days; Charles Burnett Co. bid $314,275 and 300 days.

One local company, Picton and Steele, entered a bid on construction of the fifteen-room additional building at Rockport, $160,383 for building, and 320 days time. O. J. Beck, on the same basis, bid $163,000 and 260 days; Braselton's bid was $167,761 and 330 days; Charles Burnett Co. bid $159,350 and 300 days; Cornelius, $157,900 and 200 days.

No combination, however, was as low as the O. J. Beck bid that was finally accepted. This was approximately $15,000 lower than the architect's estimate, and school board members were very pleased with the price.

Construction is due to start immediately, and the new schools should be finished in early August, 1963. Dr. H. F. Elliot, school board president said.

The balance of the $650,000 bond issue voted earlier this year will be used to add two rooms at Fulton elementary, and to make changes around the present high school now used for both junior and senior high school students. Contracts on these will be let later architect Lynn Evans of Corpus Christi, said.

SCHOOL BUS DRIVERS TO TAKE PART IN NAT'L SAFETY CAMPAIGN

School bus drivers of Aransas County will be expected to meet national professional standards of safe driving performance during the 1962-63 term, it was announced today by J. D. Gray, district superintendent of schools.

School bus drivers will participate in the National Safety Council's School Bus Program, which has been provided by the Aransas County Independent School District.

The program provides materials for teaching drivers how to be safe and what to be careful of in traffic. School bus drivers will be expected to avoid accidents, regardless of the reckless and illegal acts of other motorists and spite of adverse weather conditions, Gray explained. This kind of driving, he said, is called defensive driving.

School bus drivers who complete the school year, without having a preventable accident, will earn the National Safety Council's Safe Driver Awards, regarded by safety authorities as the "highest award for professional safe driving performance."

Gray states that the school bus program is a program especially developed by the National Safety Council and patterned after the program provided to the nation's most progressive commercial and governmental fleets.

Artists Discover Huge Live Oak In Brush Near Fulton

The Big Tree at Goose Island State Park has better look to its laurels, for Simon G. Michael and the students of the Rockport School of Fine Arts have found one that, as far as can be told, has an even wider spread of its branches.

The tree located by the artists is between Rockport and Lamar, back of where the Old Green Shutters Nursery used to be located and so embowered in smaller trees and brush that it is difficult to get any idea of its complete dimensions. However, there seems little doubt that its limbs cover a wide stretch from tip to tip than do those of the Lamar giant. There is some difference, of course, when it comes to trunks. Most foresters believe that the trunk of the tree in Goose Island State Park is really the trunk of three trees grown together to give it the 32-foot girth that has made it an object of wonder for thousands of visitors.

The artists' oak is one tree, huge, rough and angular, with massive limbs apparently spreading far beyond the 140-foot crown spread of the oak at Lamar, but it will not be possible to give accurate dimensions until someone gets permission from the owners to do some clearing and measuring.

The tree in Goose Island State Park has long been thought one of the largest live oaks in the country, and its age has been estimated at from 200 to 3,000 years, although no borings have ever been taken for an accurate computation.

If size of an individual trunk is any criterion by which one can judge, then the artist's tree is by far the older, for its trunk is far larger than any of the three which make up the composite oak on Lamar.

When Texas was very young, many of its oak trees were already 300 years old and of enormous height and circumference. These trees were often chosen as meeting places for events which have since been recognized as historical occasions.

The Big Tree in Goose Island Park is reported to have been an execution site much patronized by the warlike coastal Indian tribes, including the cannibalistic Karankawas, and for early white groups that supplanted the red man.

On the highway between Freeport and West Columbia stands the ancient Masonic Charter Oak. Here Anson Jones met with other like-minded men in 1835 to draft a petition for the charter for the first Masonic Lodge in Texas.

before the hordes of Santa Anna, Jones carried this original Masonic Charter in his saddlebags. Also in Brazoria County at Brazoria, is the gigantic and beautiful Congress Oak. It was under its branches that the first Congress of the Republic of Texas was held.

In Colorado County, at Columbus, is a mighty oak whose limbs shade a street from one side to another. Known as the Columbus Oak, it was beneath it that the first court of the Third Judicial District of the Republic of Texas was held in 1837 by Judge R. M. (Three-legged Willie) Williamson.

Tired of cattle rustling, ranchers of Young County, in North Texas met under an oak at Graham in February, 1877, to organize the Raisers' Association of Texas, an organization still strong in the affairs of the state. This tree is marked and has its place in the history of Texas.

The Treaty Oak at Austin is another. It stands on the west bank of the Colorado River, well within the city limits. Stephen F. Austin is reputed to have signed the first boundary line agreement between Indians and whites under this mammoth tree.

Believed to be between 500 and 600 years old, the Treaty Oak is so beautiful and perfect that it was chosen some years ago by the American Forestry Association as the most perfect specimen of a tree in the United States.

The tree that Michael and his artists discovered is not symmetrical, but it is beautiful with its wide-spread boughs, huge trunk, and sheltering shade, although no history is connected with it. It just grew, sheltered by surrounding trees and brush, until the painters chanced upon it some time ago and used it as a subject for their brushes.

KUNITZ ASKS PIER PERMIT

Tony Kunitz, of the H & K Construction, Sinton, has asked a permit from the U. S. Engineers to operate in Copano Bay, at a point 2 mile west of the southern tip of Salt Lake and approximately four miles west of Fulton.

Kunitz proposes to construct a pier from the bank in front of his property bayward at the above location. The work would consist of constructing a cedar post pier, 5 1/2 feet wide by 540 feet long. The top elevation of the deck would be four feet above mean low tide. The water at the bayward face of the proposed pier is 2.4 feet deep at mean low water.

LUNCHROOM MEN

Mrs. Barnett Continues Travel Narrative of East

Port Said to Naples (1113 miles)

Chusan sailed from Port Said at 1 a.m. on June 19, steaming across the Eastern Mediterranean on a west-northwest course. The ship's course from Port Said to Messina Straits passes close to the southwest coast of Crete. In the winter heavy gales are frequent on this coast and in Paul's day voyages were made only in the summer months. The vessel taking Paul as a prisoner to Rome was one of the largest of its class, carrying 276 people and cargo of grain from Egypt to Italy. They were seeking a safe harbor in which to winter when they were caught in a heavy gale which rendered their vessel unmanageable and ended in a shipwreck on the Isle of Malta, not far off the south coast of Italy.

These Mediterranean islands are rich in ancient as well as modern history, and many historic ruins have been excavated. The island of Malta was gallantly defended by the British during World War II.

Late in the afternoon of June 20 we raised land on the very end of the "toe" of Italy. We passed an almost continuous string of towns perched in the sides of the precipitous mountains and descending to the wide gravelly beaches. We were close enough to distinguish, through the glasses, boats, cars and even people on the beaches.

Soon we entered the narrow Strait of Messina, with Sicily on our port side and Italy to the starboard. At its narrowest point, it only 1 1/2 miles wide, and land can easily be seen on either side. Near the narrowest part of the strait is the City of Messina, site of one of the first beachheads in Italy by the Americans. It is a large city with imposing buildings, with a harbor protected by an artificial concrete breakwater. Across the Strait, a high telephone cable is stretched 250 feet above the water with towers a mile apart. We were fortunate in seeing one of the hydrofoil boats used as ferries across the Strait, skittering along like a huge waterbug.

After passing through the strait we could see the small island of Stromboli, with its live volcanic crater, and a continuous stream of lava and stones rolling down its slopes. It was here that Ingrid Bergman made the movie "Stromboli" directed by her late husband, Rossellini.

Early in the morning of June 21, we awakened to find our ship entering the harbor of Naples Bay. This harbor is the largest in Italy and filled with all kinds of shipping. Among the passenger liners docked at the fine terminal were the Independence, Asia, Arian, and Sardegna. We could see large dry-docks and ship-building yards. Naples, from the water presents an imposing sight. The city lies in the crescent of Naples Bay. Fine buildings line the waterfront and extend high up the mountain, which is ascended by funicular.

On leaving the terminal building the first thing to be seen is an ancient fort and castle, on the waterfront. It dates back to the 12th century and is in a good state of preservation. Signs of the moat surrounding it are to be seen, and the whole building is set in a beautifully landscaped park. All Italy is rich in history. Wherever one goes, there are ancient ruins and excavations. In Italy one lives with the past more than in any country we have ever visited.

But Naples, rich though it is in history, is very much of the present today. It is Italy's third largest city, 1,200,000 population. It suffered more from the bombings of the war than any other Italian city, and as a consequence, won the decoration of a gold medal on its town banners. It has made a remarkable come-back since the war and very few bombed-out buildings are to be seen. It is now a busy prosperous city of spacious plazas, wide streets, fine hotels, shopping arcades and beautiful statuary and fountains.

Only in an area close to the waterfront, did we see the makeshift homes of the "homeless people" victims of the bombings. At one time, these numbered in the thousands, but their number is diminishing as low-rent apartments are being built in the neighborhood.

In the poorer section of the city the narrow streets are festooned with laundry hanging completely across from building to building. As our guide said: "every day is washday here." It was in this section that we saw the wine carts. Small donkey-drawn carts filled with wine casks, and decorated with branches of trees, probably to shade the casks from the sun. All the donkeys and horses we saw wore harness decorated in bright colors and in some cases, plumes on the heads of the horses.

Since we had seen most of the city and Pompeii on a previous trip, we elected to take the trip to Salerno, Amalfi and Sorrento, over the world-famous Amalfi Drive, one of the scenic wonders of the world, stretching southward along the coast toward the foot of Italy.

We left Naples by way of the "Auto-Strada" a four-lane toll road built in 1929, and extending to beyond Pompeii. The cone of Mt. Vesuvius, 4,000 feet high, loomed on our left. The summit, formerly reached by funicular railway, is now reached by automobile and chain lift. Many eruptions of Vesuvius have been recorded from earliest times. The most disastrous one in recent years was in 1906, causing great damage to property, but small loss of life. The latest eruption was in 1944, when great volumes of smoke and streams of lava poured from it. Though in an extinct or dormant condition since then, it still stands as a constant threat to the surrounding countryside.

The modern town of Pompeii, as well as some of the excavated ruins, were visible from the toll road. We recalled our visit there and the many interesting things we saw. Pompeii is the best-preserved specimen of an ancient Roman town in existence. Its oldest building dates back to the 6th century B.C. It was a thriving commercial city when Vesuvius erupted in A.D. 79 and covered the whole city with a heavy coating of volcanic ash. Most of the inhabitants escaped, but a few who returned for salvage were killed by a second eruption. We remembered the beautiful colonaded forum, the narrow streets with their worn chariot tracks, the shops, the baths, the arrangements for running water, and particularly the beautiful villas of the very wealthy. These were built with all rooms completely surrounding two courts, a large outer or entrance court, centered with a sculptured fountain, and a still larger inner court. The inner court or garden, was enclosed by covered loggia with marble columns with a pool 40 x 100 feet in the center.

The rooms surrounding these two courts were beautifully decorated with hand-painted murals.

Excavation at Pompeii and nearby Herculaneum is still going on. Many of the buildings and statuary have been found in an almost perfect state of preservation. The latest finds are the bodies of people and animals covered with ash as they were fleeing. These have been reconstructed just as they fell by pouring plaster of Paris into the cavities left in the ash.

Near Pompeii we stopped at a cameo factory where Italian artisans were carving beautiful cameos by hand out of several species of seashells, some found locally and some from the Island of Madagascar. At the side of each skilled worker were two apprentices, one a boy of about 14, the other a more advanced student, doing the rough carving.

From Naples to Pompeii, on either side of the road were beautiful vegetable gardens growing fine crops of potatoes, tomatoes, eggplant, corn, beans, etc. in the rich volcanic ash soil provided by Vesuvius.

Further on, as we reached the mountain slopes, we saw vineyards and orchards of oranges, lemons, apricots, figs, cherries and peaches, growing on narrow terraces that reached high up the mountains. Most orchards were mixtures of several kinds of fruit, with vegetables, growing beneath the trees. Around Amalfi, large lemons were the principal crop, grown on terraces only a few feet wide, and trained over a trellis. Around Sorrento the principal crop was oranges. The groves were completely covered with a light scaffolding, with piles of straw mats here and there. These were used as a covering during the winter months.

From Pompeii we crossed the rugged mountains to the beautiful city of Salerno. From a lofty point we looked down on the beach, site of the tragic, but finally successful landings of American troops. Salerno is a natural fort. The mountains rising at a steep angle above the beach give the defenders a great advantage. All traces of war are now gone and all we saw was a lovely strand filled with bath houses, painted in many gay colors, and many rowboats for rent.

Salerno, a city of 160,000 people, like many cities of the Mediterranean, climbs the steep mountains, and is made up of narrow winding streets, with a broad promenade along the waterfront. The promenade is an important feature of Italian cities, as the people love to dress in their best and stroll down the wide avenues in the evenings or on holidays. The one at Salerno was especially beautiful, with stately palms and beds of brightly blooming plants, sidewalk cafes and pony cart rides for the children. There was even a miniature railway. As we happened to be there on a religious holiday, all of the shops were closed and many families were enjoying an outing in the park.

At Salerno the Amalfi Drive begins high above the blue Mediterranean. Words are lacking to describe the breath-taking beauty of the miles of this drive hewed out of the side of the steep mountains about 800 feet above the sea. In places where it was impossible to get a footing there are cantilevered sections hanging on thin air. In other spots, tall stone pillars with arches holding up the road. Above and below are the terraces of vineyards and orchards. At the foot of the steep cliffs, banks of white coral can be seen through the clear water. The green of the moss beneath the water, finally merges into deepest blue of the deep water.

Fine hotels, and palatial homes are hanging in the most impossible places, with steep stone steps descending almost vertically to the water. At Amalfi, where we had lunch in a hotel perched precariously on the mountain side. We entered by stairs at roof-level, and descended to a spacious dining room with picture windows overlooking the sea and balconies hanging 800 feet above the water.

Over 25 miles of narrow, winding roads and through several tunnels our coach brought us safely to Sorrento, on Naples Bay, gateway to the romantic Isle of Capri, a short distance off shore. Sorrento, like all the towns of this area, is a winter as well as a summer resort. It is enjoyed not only by Italians but by people from all over Europe. It looks like something out of a picture book, or the setting for an opera. It is perched high above the blue bay. Its little plaza is bordered with orange trees, loaded with fruit, with purple bougainvillea trimmed to perfection, covering the houses, tree-like wisteria blooming profusely and boxes of bright red and pink geraniums hanging from windows and balconies. All around were fine shops filled with Italian handicrafts, and wine shops with all kinds of wine put up in beautiful raffia-wrapped bottles. The gray sidewalk cafes and decorated one horse carriages, with horses dressed in large headpieces of white ostrich feathers, gave color to the scene.

After more narrow mountain drives, some scraping of our bus on the rocky sides, several broken places in the frail retaining wall where two buses could barely squeeze by, we were delivered at last safely to our ship.

Here just before sailing, we were entertained by an Italian opera troupe and orchestra, giving a concert of fine music, and art in which they are superb and love passionately. In the lounge was a display of oil paintings which were very good, and could be had at unbelievably low prices.

From Naples we set sail for London, our port of disembarkation. Only four more days remain of a grand trip on a ship we have learned to love, and we shall be parting from interesting people and many new found friends.

Naples to London (2300 miles)

The Chusan left Naples at 6 p.m. on June 21, and steamed on a west-southwesterly course across the Mediterranean. We passed the southernmost tip of the island of Sardinia, and continued out of sight of land until we sighted the southern shores of Spain, with the high snow-capped Sierra Nevada on the distant horizon.

At noon on the 22nd, we passed through the Strait of Gibraltar, 30 miles long and nine miles wide at its narrowest point. The high mountains of Morocco were visible to port and the 1396 foot high Rock of Gibraltar to starboard. We were close enough to see details quite plainly, but we saw very little evidence of its hidden gun emplacements, nor a hint of the maze of tunnels and rooms buried deeply in the rock. A striking feature of the northern side are large concrete catch-basins for impounding rain water, source of the water supply of the colony. Over the concrete walls and rocks, numerous monkeys are said to play. Tradition has it that if the monkeys ever leave Gibraltar, England will no longer hold it.

On clearing the Strait, we entered the North Atlantic, and shaped a northwest course toward Cape St. Vincent, Portugal. We cruised close to the mountainous coast of Spain for several hours, and were able to see comfortable white stone farm houses, villages fortified with ancient forts and high circular watch-towers, built in far by-gone days.

On a promontory at the western entrance to the Strait stood the old Moorish town of Tarifa, named after the founder of the town, a Moor who exacted a tribute from all ships entering the Straits. It is said that is the origin of our word "tariff." A few miles to the north of Tarifa, we passed Cape Trafalgar, where Lord Nelson won the Battle of Trafalgar, but lost his life.

We followed the coast of Portugal, sighting Cape St. Vincent, site of another naval battle. During the night we passed the mouth of the Tagus River, with the lights of Lisbon visible a short distance inland.

Our "Good Morning" sheet gave us a few statistics to ponder about the voyage. During the round voyage (almost four months) from London to Vancouver and return, Chusan carried 3491 passengers who drank 4225 bottles of wine, 9,600 bottles of spirits, 137,000 cans of beer, 966 gallons of draught beer; they smoked 3875 cigars, 485 pounds of tobacco, and 2,925,000 cigarettes. The ship also carried water for us tee-

totalers to drink.

On June 25, we entered the English Channel after passing the small island of Ushant, France, to starboard. This area is noted for its mist, fog and strong currents.

On entering the channel, the crew gets what is known as channel fever, or simply "The Channels," a pleasant malady which makes the sourest of them whistle and sing. No matter if they are returning to a nagging wife and a pile of debts, they are home from the sea after four months. Our room steward says his two children know him only as that strange man who says at home a few days then is off again. He says "They even call me Jim instead of daddy." After only four days at home he will have to leave on another voyage.

We crossed the channel and at noon on June 25, we sighted the rolling green hills and high cliffs on the shores of Devon, and proceeded to Brixham to pick up our channel pilot. All along the shore, were picturesque villages, large resort hotels and inviting beaches. Sailing close to shore, we reached the mouth of the Thames where we were anchored to await the incoming tide. The following morning we awoke to find we were traveling up the Thames estuary with marshes on either side. We recalled one of Dickens' stories which was laid in these same marshes downriver from London. These soon gave way to industrial and port installations.

It is impossible to adequately describe London on a few pages. It is a city rich in history, where many famous men and women have lived and worked. It is perhaps the most beautiful and interesting city in the world. The ancient buildings, the many parks and squares, the wonderful transportation system, particularly the underground, the River Thames with its famous bridges, winding through the center of the city, all add interest to one's stay. Since this was our fourth visit, we felt we could forego the usual tourist attractions, such as government buildings, palaces and churches, and simply spend our time wandering as we pleased, getting acquainted with the city and her people of all walks of life.

Having friends who wanted to dine at an unusual restaurant, we took them to the Soho District. It lies just off Piccadilly Circus, a short distance down Shaftsbury Avenue, with its world famous theaters such as the Lyric, the Apollo and the London Casino. Soho was once a field outside London, where hares were hunted and it gets its name from the hunter's cry, "So-Ho!" It was settled in 1685 by French Huguenots, and later by Italians, Spaniards and other foreigners. Today it is a district where every type of foreign restaurant may be found—all quite small, but all serving excellent food. Also there are specialty shops of all kinds: wines, exotic and foreign foods, wig-makers, and foreign handicrafts, to name only a few.

Soho really doesn't come alive until about 10:30 p.m. It is a mixture of good and evil. Tourists and young London couples roam the streets after the theater, looking for exciting places to dine, while in the shady hallways you see girls standing with "beehive" hairdos, colored in all shades. Standing in front of questionable clubs are elegantly attired doormen, who will admit any man who looks prosperous. Their doorways are plastered with pictures that make the women blush and the men stare.

Key Allegro Publicity Widespread

The following item on Key Allegro, although cut considerably in the Corpus Christi Caller, appeared in a wide-spread of newspapers throughout the nation, as Carl C. Krueger, Jr., and his associates got their advertising program under way on a nation wide basis this month.

This particular writeup appeared in the Army News, along with a quarter of a page ad.

The dream to escape to an island paradise—with all the comforts of home—is fast becoming a reality, according to the builders of Key Allegro Island Estates.

The new resort and retirement community, now under development, is located in Aransas Bay, between Rockport and Fulton Beach on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Carl C. Krueger, Jr., project president, recently announced that construction on homes and commercial buildings in the first unit is already underway.

Krueger, a 34-year old San Antonio, is the man behind the idea to develop this semi-tropical island into a lavish resort and retirement community.

Dredging operations to raise the level of the island, for which over a thousand homes are planned, are nearly completed. Officials say the island retreat will have a resort motel, luxury apartment complex, complete marina, yacht club, beaches, parks and a shopping center. All utility cables and lines will be underground, eliminating unsightly poles and wires.

The development officials say, is within an hour of San Antonio by air along with some of the largest Army and Air Force medical centers, commissaries and officers' clubs.

Eleven miles away, via the intra-coastal canal, lies Port Aransas, gateway to the Gulf of Mexico, which is famed for deep sea fishing.

Fabulous Key Allegro, with its net work of canals for doorstep docking, will be a delight to the yachtman or small craft sailor, officials point out.

The 260 acre history laden island, originally known as Frandol, was named for Napoleon Bonaparte Frandolig, more than 100 years ago. It was near this very island that Cabeza de Vaca began his long journey to California more than 400 years ago.

Mrs. George Sorenson, Mrs. Ray Roden and children and Mrs. Jay Roden and children of Port Lavaca visited Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith Thursday. Bonnie Roden, who had been visiting her grandparents, returned home with them.

The men of the First Methodist Church will hold their regular monthly breakfast Monday morning at 7 a.m., Sept. 10, at the Fellowship Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley C. Caloway, Jr. and son Pat, of Vicksburg, Miss., visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charley C. Caloway, Sr., of Copano Village, last weekend.

Girl Scout Troop 75 will meet Tuesday, Sept. 11, 3:30 p.m. at the Girl Scout Little House. Parents of the girls are invited to attend this meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmon Boone, Gene and Jackie, spent the weekend in Brownsville with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Boone and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Smith of Dallas were recent visitors in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Kane Lassiter and baby of Beaumont spent the week end holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lassiter.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcy Hoffman and children of Victoria and Mr. and Mrs. Coy Kirkpatrick of Corpus Christi, spent the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ingle Turner.

Mrs. Earline Ballou spent Labor Day weekend in Baytown with Mr. and Mrs. Travis Smith and their children.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Chittenden of Fulton spent the weekend in Baytown with Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Bradshaw and family.

Oregon Continues To Explore Royal Red Shrimping Grounds

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service vessel Oregon recently returned to her home base in Pascagoula after two weeks spent in the northern Gulf of Mexico in which she initiated exploration of the continental offshore slope between 150 and 1,000 fathoms to assess the deep water crustacean and fifth potentials of the area, and gathered additional information on the seasonal distribution of royal red shrimp and a smaller deep water cousin.

Sixty-five trawl drags were made during the two-week-long trip, 35 of which were on royal red shrimp grounds between Pensacola and the mouth of the Mississippi.

These delicacies, which are a deep red when alive, and which taste much like lobster with cooked, were taken in small to moderate quantities (up to 109 pounds of tails per 2-hour drag) in all drags between 200 and 250 fathoms, with the largest catches occurring in the 200-225 fathom depth.

Francis J. Captiva, acting base director for the Service, said that 25 towns in the latter area produced 1135 pounds of 31/35 count royal red tails. The smaller deep water red shrimp, P. megalops, was taken in amounts up to 150 pounds per drag at depths ranging from 180 to 200 fathoms, and the scarlet prawn was taken most frequently in depths of 350 fathoms or 2100 feet. Up to four pounds of ten-count individuals were taken per drag.

Large red crabs were caught in depths between 600 and 750 fathoms, at rates of 140 per drag, while young crabs of the same species were found in heavy concentrations at 200 fathoms. Old ones weighed about two pounds each.

Hake and whiting were caught in the 100-300 fathom range, and were the predominant species from that depth, Captiva said. Catches were as great as 1000 pounds per two-hour tow. Beyond 300 fathoms, 90 percent of the catch by weight was composed of macrourids species and of interest was the capture of two 25 pound macrourids in 600 fathoms.

Captiva and that both shrimp and fish trawls were used during the cruise, rigged conventionally with loop chain and /or mud rollers. Tickler chains were used on all rigs. The trawls, which included flat, semi-balloon and balloon designs, varied from 40 to 130 feet along the head ropes, and were fished with appropriate size chain bridges or bracket doors. The 40 to 70 feet trawls were fished with a single warp and bridle and the larger trawls with two warps.

The director said that bottom conditions were found suitable for trawling through the area surveyed except for one large concentration of coral trees located in 230 fathoms at 29°03' N. and 88°25' W. One trawl was damaged by bogging in the mud, and gear fouling occurred occasionally, due to strong surface currents in the fishing area.

Bottom temperatures and sediment samples were obtained at each transectional trawling station between 150-1,000 fathoms, Captiva said.

Mr. J. C. Stansell of Lubbock, and his wife and son, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Stansell, who live at Taylor Oak Trailer Park recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Haug and Linda Kay of Robstown spent Labor Day weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Noah Taylor and family.
