

WAR 'BEHIND US'

Bush: Kuwait is liberated, Iraq defeated

Huge tank showdown seals Iraqi army fate

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — America's top armored divisions dealt heavy blows to Iraq's badly mauled army Wednesday just hours before America's desert war cease-fire was announced by President Bush.

U.S. warplanes were still roaring into the air on missions. Reports from the field spoke of tank battles raging on the outskirts of Basra, while far to the northwest, troops of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division stood less than 100 miles from Baghdad in the deepest penetration yet of Iraq.

But U.S. generals already had declared the outcome certain by the time Bush went on national television to say the war was won after 100 hours of ground fighting. "This war is now behind us," Bush said. "Ahead of us is the task of achieving a potentially historic peace" in the Middle East.

Iraq's state radio signed on today with defiant rhetoric, making no mention of Bush's speech minutes before.

"This is Baghdad, the voice of dignity and pride, the voice of justice and force... From Baghdad, the graveyard of the criminal invaders, Good morning," a radio announcer said.

F-15 fighter-bombers zoomed off runways at the big Dhahran air base in eastern Saudi Arabia after Bush spoke, but a few hours before the deadline he set.

In liberated Kuwait City hours before, joyous residents flocked to the streets to cheer their flag and throng triumphant U.S. and Saudi troops. "Thank you, America!" they shouted.

Wednesday's tank battle in Iraq's Southern Desert, west of the southern Iraqi city of Basra, was the biggest armor engagement since World War II.

Hundreds of tanks of the U.S. 1st and 3rd Armored Divisions and 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment clashed with a Republican Guard division in a key showdown in the U.S.-British push to drive the Iraqi army's beleaguered remnants into the Basra corner.

For Rosa Lee Binder, President Bush's call for a cease-fire may mean an end to the German chocolate cakes she's mailed to her grandson Jerry Wayne Chandler every week since he was sent to the Persian Gulf with the 82nd Airborne Division.

"He was only supposed to be there two months, then they said he'd be home in November, then they said the Airborne would be no match for the tanks, but they still didn't let him go home," she said.

To keep up his morale and that of his friends, she's been sending care packages and letters daily. "I drove the post office crazy," she said.

Ground War: Step by Step

Setting the Stage

OCCUPYING FORCE: 545,000 Iraqis were in Kuwait. BUILDUP: U.S. positioned the 101st and 82nd Airborne divisions, 24th Mechanized Infantry and 3rd Armored Cavalry behind Saudi Arabian task force. GROUND FORCES BLUFF: Allied forces were aligned opposite Iraqi positions in Kuwait so that it looked like they were to attack the Iraqi positions directly. The Iraqis built an extensive barrier on the border and along the east coast of Kuwait.

Feb. 23, 1991: Before the Storm

The allied strategy in the war relied on two feints:

- 1 A threatened amphibious assault on the Kuwaiti coast. Purpose: force the Iraqis to concentrate their forces along the coast — which they did.
- 2 A last-minute shift of vast numbers of allied soldiers to the west, allowing them to enter Iraq west of the dug-in Iraqi forces. The Iraqis could not see this movement because their air force had been decimated.

Feb. 24: The Attack Begins

4:00 A.M. LOCAL TIME:

- 1 1st and 2nd Marine Divisions launch attacks through the barrier system, accompanied by the U.S. Army Tiger Brigade of the 2nd Armored Division.
- 2 French 6th Armored Division, accompanied by a brigade of the 82nd Airborne, launch an overland attack to the As Salman airfield.
- 3 Two Saudi task forces breach the Iraqi border and continue attacking up the east coast.

8:00 A.M.:

- 4 101st Airborne launches an assault deep into enemy territory to establish a forward operating base.
 - 5 Afternoon: Diversionsary Pan-Arab and Saudi attacks.
 - 6 U.S. 24th Mechanized Division.
 - 7 U.S. Vllth Corps, 1st and 3rd Army Divisions and 2nd Cavalry Division.
 - 8 U.S. 1st Infantry Division and British 1st Armored Division.
- SPECIAL FORCES: had been sent deep into enemy territory to observe.

Feb. 25-26: Tightening the Vise

- 1 Saudis continue to progress up the eastern flank.
- 2 Saudi and Arab forces turn to come in on the flank heading towards Kuwait City.
- 3 British unit continues to attack.
- 4 U.S. Vllth Corps sweeps eastward toward the Republican Guard.
- 5 24th Infantry Division moves into the Tigris and Euphrates valley and blocks the only escape route for retreating Iraqi units.
- 6 The French set up a flanking position to prevent Iraqi forces from entering from the west.

Feb. 27: Claiming Kuwait

- 1 XVIIIth Airborne Corps forms solid wall across north, attacking due east.
- 2 Vllth Corps also attacks due east.
- 3 Arab forces from both the west and the east close in on Kuwait City.
- 4 First Marine Division continues to hold Kuwait International Airport.
- 5 The 2nd Marine Division blocks all exits Kuwait City.

■ Iraq agrees to comply with all 12 U.N. resolutions.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Wednesday night ordered coalition military forces to suspend combat attacks at midnight — exactly 100 hours after the ground assault that doomed Saddam Hussein's occupation of Kuwait. "Kuwait is liberated, Iraq's army is defeated," Bush declared.

"The Kuwaiti flag once again flies above the capital of a free and sovereign nation," Bush said.

"This war is now behind us," he said. "Ahead of us is the difficult task of securing a potentially historic peace."

He said a permanent cease fire depends upon the actions of Iraq.

In a dramatic televised address, Bush warned Saddam that the fighting would begin anew if Iraq's forces — shattered and in retreat — fired on allied troops or launched Scud missiles at Israel and Saudi Arabia.

"It is up to Iraq whether the suspension on the part of the coalition becomes a permanent cease fire," Bush said, adding later: "If Iraq violates these terms, coalition forces will be free to resume military operations."

Iraq later promised the United Nations it would honor all 12 Security Council resolutions on the Gulf War, as demanded by the United States and its allies, diplomats said.

"The government of Iraq agrees to fully comply with U.N. Resolution 660 and to all the other Security Council resolutions," part of the Iraqi government's letter read, according to Iraqi sources.

The sources said the letter was addressed to the Security Council and Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and was signed by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz. The cessation of offensive action came after a tank battle in southern Iraq ended any serious threat from Iraq's Republican Guard.

He called on Saddam to designate Iraqi military commanders who would meet within 48 hours with their allied counterparts to arrange military aspects of a cease fire. Further, he said Secretary of State James A. Baker would ask the U.N. Security Council to meet "to formulate the necessary arrangements for this war to be ended."

Baker also was to go to the Mid-

Lack of surrender presents complications

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — With the announced suspension of combat by the U.S.-led coalition, the terms of Iraq's defeat remain uncertain: Saddam Hussein has not surrendered and his continuation in power vastly complicates the postwar scenarios.

"Saddam Hussein is not the kind of guy to cry uncle," said Patrick Clawson of the Foreign Policy Research Institute in Philadelphia.

President Bush, addressing the nation Wednesday night, said "Kuwait is liberated, Iraq's army is defeated" and announced that the allies were suspending combat operations at midnight EST. It is up to Iraq whether the cease-fire becomes permanent, the president said.

Pentagon officials said troops continued to exchange fire with Iraqi forces after Bush's speech and expected to fight up until midnight.

A Pentagon source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said allied forces would drop leaflets with the cease-fire message on Iraqi troops and blast the news over loudspeakers — much as they have urged the troops to surrender in recent weeks.

They also expect the news to come from Baghdad, either over state radio or through military communications. "We've always believed they've had some form of command-and-control capability intact," said the source.

Analysts said earlier Wednesday the lack of a formal surrender by Saddam could leave U.S.-led forces with hundreds of thousands of disarmed Iraqi troops on their hands and vast expanses of Iraqi territory to administer. It could leave Saddam in power, battered but venerated by the Arab masses.

Midlanders maintain doubts about Saddam

By Michael Kashgarian

Although patrons at a local bar expressed happiness following President Bush's victory speech Wednesday night, most said they still have serious concerns for the future in the Middle East.

Despite the fact a conditional cease-fire was declared for the Persian Gulf War, Randy Blanscett, 36, an oil field equipment salesman, said the war's ultimate conclusion is now up to Saddam Hussein.

"They put the ball back in Hussein's hands. Who knows what's going to go on now," Blanscett said.

"At least we put our game plan on the table, now it's Hussein's turn," he said.

But there is one aspect of the Middle East situation that Blanscett is not optimistic about.

- Parade to be victory party/2A
- Local troops honored/11C

"I don't think he (Saddam Hussein) is going to comply with all the resolutions," Blanscett said.

Carrie Mayes, 26, a bookkeeper, expressed a deeper skepticism about Saddam and the cease-fire.

"I don't trust those people at all. They have a totally different outlook on everything," Ms. Mayes said.

"I thought it would go on for a lot longer. It was too easy. They gave up too easy," she said. For that reason, Ms. Mayes said she thinks there should be a continued military presence in the Middle East.

"If something happens, somebody has to be there and we've done a good job so far," she said.

Charles Stone, 47, independent petroleum landman, said events in the aftermath of the war are of grave concern.

"The repercussions of victory will be something we will have to live with quite awhile," Stone said, adding that future U.S. dealings with the Iraqis and the PLO will be of critical importance.

To maintain some control, Stone said he foresees a continued allied military presence in the Middle East. Stone said he would approve of a continued presence "only if a deal is worked out with the Soviets first."

As for Saddam's presence, sentiments were not as supportive.

U.S.' military image enhanced, local vets say

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although post-war problems in the Middle East remain to be ironed out, one thing is certain: America's military image has been enhanced, according to local veterans.

"I think I can speak for everyone in the local American Legion when I say that I am very happy to see the Gulf war come to such a quick conclusion with minimal loss of life on our side," said John Neal, commander of American Legion Woods Post 19.

"The whole operation the allied forces conducted was just brilliant," he added. "I imagine the Arab world will find a way to indicate that our victory was not clear cut, but it is a victory for our forces."

Neal, a Korean War veteran, said, "The Korean War didn't come to a real end. It was just over for political reasons. When I was over there I wanted to see the country completely free. Calling a cease-fire because the mission is completed or U.N. sanctions will be met is different than calling a cease-fire because of political pressure."

Other than buckling under to political pressure, some veterans said much of the allied coalition's success was due to presidential support of military decisions.

Several veterans also applauded the military prowess of Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the American-led coalition.

"I think our success in the Persian Gulf is a tribute to what the military can do if it is left alone by the president," said George Coombes, a World War II naval aviator. "This is a monumental victory. Gen. Schwarzkopf did what he had to do and he was allowed to do it."

Coombes said stripping Iraq of its weaponry and offensive forces was "a brilliant combined effort,

'I think everything succeeded beyond our wildest expectations.'

— Jerry Sides, WWII veteran

however."

Charles Snure, a B-17 navigator in World War II, described the allied troops' efforts as "brilliant."

"They went way beyond what they were called to do," Snure said. "We called the shots all the way," he added, "and the general was allowed to do the fighting without interference."

Vietnam veteran Fernando V. Garza, said that not only did the allied forces make effective decisions, those decisions were widely supported by Americans.

"During the Vietnam War, American society was often against the commander's decisions," Garza said. "He also received interference from politicians, senators and congressmen."

Garza said the American military has a positive image on the homefront. "Community support has made this war different," he said. "History has been rewritten."

Leo Porter, a Korean War veteran, said that he doesn't think the war will be over until Saddam Hussein is apprehended. "I hope they don't quit until they get him out of power," Porter said. "The Korean War didn't have a definite end. It just happened and then it was over. I don't think this war will be over until they get Saddam."

WWII veteran Jerry Sides, greeted President Bush's address announcing the end of the war with "great enthusiasm."

"It's great to see a campaign carried out like this," Sides said. "It points out that the leadership and training of professional soldiers was fantastic."

Sides, who has a son stationed with the U.S. Naval forces in the Persian Gulf, said some American wars "put men out into the field with a minimal amount of training."

"Many draftees were pulled out of every walk of life and put into combat with minimal training," Sides added. "Wars weren't as mechanized and it got down to soldiers, carrying equipment on their backs, and fighting in the infantry."

Most of the veterans expected American support to be high for returning troops.

"I recall girls running out to meet the troops and ticker tape parades during WWII victory celebrations," Sides said. "I expect a big welcome home for our troops."

It probably won't rival WWII, but there will be celebrations just the same. After all, we are talking about a war where there was so much support that my son saw truckloads of mail delivered to his ship addressed to 'any sailor' or 'any soldier.'"

Snure said, "The war won't be over until the last shot is fired. But I am surprised we had so few casualties, much fewer than predicted. All our troops should be welcomed home with gratitude."

Coombes said that the American troops and American's function in the Gulf war "certainly has to be enhanced in the eyes in the rest of the world."

"I think everything succeeded beyond our wildest expectations," Sides said. "I agree with what Gen. Schwarzkopf said: 'The Iraqis didn't like us before and they don't like us now. But they sure will respect us.'"

Parade should be victory celebration, organizers say

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A parade scheduled for next month in Midland should be even more festive than anticipated now that the war apparently is over, a parade organizer said Wednesday.

It will be a whooping victory celebration as well as a tribute to troops that served in the Persian Gulf War, said Joanne Dinsmoor, a Salute to Troops Parade Committee member.

She said the March 23 parade will be a gala of bands, drill teams, floats and a fly-over by Confederate Air Force aircraft.

"I think it's going to be a victory parade to honor our troops and the ones who have fallen," Mrs. Dinsmoor said. "You have a victory parade to show your gratitude for the hard work they've done and the sacrifices they've made for their families. We're proud of them."

The event will go on even if something happens to rekindle the fighting, she said.

The effort to organize the parade already has received decisive stamps of approval from local governmental entities.

The Midland City Council on Tuesday approved allowing the parade to take place on Wall Avenue.

Later that day, Midland Independent School District trustees voted to permit junior high and high school drill teams and bands take part in the event.

George H. O'Brien Jr., a Midlander who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for his efforts in the Korean War, will serve as grand marshal.

The parade will start about 11 a.m. in Dennis the Menace Park off Andrews Highway and then turn east on Wall Avenue and proceed to Centennial Plaza or the Midland County Courthouse.

A ceremony honoring the troops will be held following the parade's conclusion.

The parade committee is working to get junior high and high school marching bands and drill teams in Midland and Stanton to take part, Mrs. Dinsmoor said.

She said she has been overwhelmed by callers interested in taking part in the parade. A member of a marching bagpipe band said his group would participate.

Other entrants include a horseback riding team and two antique fire trucks, one donated by the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and the other from the Midland Fire Department, she said.

The Confederate Air Force has confirmed that it will make a fly-over during the parade.

Committee member Sondra Staley said veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam also are being asked to join the parade. Businesses are being encouraged to enter floats, she said.

"Hopefully some veterans from Midland who are serving now will be home and they can be in the parade," Mrs. Staley said.

Road to Kuwait City death trap for Marines

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

IN KUWAIT — A convoy of light armored vehicles sat in the desert with their engines idling just outside Kuwait City.

Several Marines had gotten out to look at the charred remains of Iraqi tanks and trucks when there was a loud report and a cry of pain.

A corporal, standing on the edge of the road, had stepped on a stray piece of munition and blown off part of his foot.

As the medics helped the man to a stretcher, the Marines moved back inside their vehicles, each aware that much of the Kuwaiti desert is a death trap, filled with Iraqi mines, unexploded munitions and cluster bombs that were dropped by the allies but never went off.

"The Iraqis left behind thousands of these things," said Maj. William Powers, a battalion commander. "We are finding them everywhere."

The Iraqis laid half a million mines in Kuwait, according to American estimates, most of them in two 40-mile belts that run just north of the border with Saudi Arabia.

The mines range from anti-tank charges that can toss armored vehicles five feet into the air to "toe poppers" that can mangle the foot of a soldier.

The day before, one of the Marine vehicles in this battalion had been crippled by a mine, and an Iraqi soldier, walking toward the unit to surrender, had stepped on a charge, lost both his legs and bled to death in 20 minutes. A Marine going to meet the Iraqi was badly wounded in the blast.

But mines also litter the landscape outside the two belts, some with their metal tops visible in the sand.

In the middle of one small Marine encampment, 15 miles east of Kuwait City, a mine had simply been roped off for Marines to walk around. In another encampment just outside Kuwait City, Marines had put chemical lights around several unexploded munitions and mines that lay in their midst.

Several Marine vehicles in southern Kuwait have veered slightly off the narrow dirt tracks that have been cleared around Kuwait City and set off blasts. The vehicles have also triggered a few chemical mines, but the concentration of nerve gas has been light.

To enter Kuwait from the south the Marines travel through carefully marked dirt lanes. The breaches in the two main minefields, each some 50 yards wide, are marked by barbed wire and brightly colored cloth.

The dirt roads into Kuwait have plastic trash barrels that are weighed down with sandbags every few hundred feet for the first couple of miles, but after that Marines either stay on the dirt track or risk explosions.

The journey through the mine-infested desert is all the more eerie because of the burning of some 600 Kuwaiti oil wells.

Huge bursts of vermillion flames leap skyward and throw off an intense heat. The fires send out plumes of thick black smoke that twist upwards like a hemp rope. The sky is the color of charcoal and in some places the sun is blotted out.

At night the desert becomes Stygian with a dark red infernal glow. Small bits of black soot cling to the vehicles and windshields. The air stinks of burning oil.

In the midst of the mines and clouds of smoke, whole companies of forlorn Iraqi soldiers appear wandering aimlessly across the desert in search of someone to surrender to. They often appear as if from a mirage as they make their way through the greasy smoke.

"We walked for 14 hours," said an Iraqi soldier who identified himself as Hadi Janud. "We had no food for two days and we did not know if there were mines or not. We are glad all this is over."

The Iraqi soldiers leave behind tin-roofed huts, dug below ground. A few overturned cooking pots and bits of clothing mark each encampment, but there is nothing very warlike about their abodes. The burned and twisted remains of tanks and other vehicles, some with the bloated bodies of Iraqis inside, dot the horizon.

The sheer volume of Iraqi soldiers, the food and water they need and the time it takes to transport them to the rear, make commanders wince when they see a group head their way.

"Not another one," moaned Powers as he looked toward about 100 Iraqis walking up over a sand dune toward his encampment.

Powers' unit had spent the day before escorting 1,000 prisoners back to Saudi Arabia, having to force the Iraqis to make the journey by foot because of a lack of trucks.

Combat engineers are working to open more lanes through the minefields and push the dirt tracks further north. Long, drawn-out explosions, like the peal of thunder, shake the desert as the engineers blast new byways through the minefields.

But despite the new roads being built, the Marines will leave vast areas of the desert untouched.

"It is going to be a long time before this mess gets cleared up," said Capt. Peter Gutensuhn.

Iraqis liable for war crimes, experts say

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — From President Saddam Hussein down to some scraggly, captured conscripts, uniformed Iraqis are liable for war crimes committed during the Persian Gulf conflict, military leaders and legal experts said Wednesday.

In Saudi Arabia, Operation Desert Storm commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said suspected war criminals are being culled from the 50,000 or more Iraqi troops that are being held by allied forces.

The likelihood of Nuremberg-type war trials has increased with the horror stories emerging from a newly liberated Kuwait City and with the large-scale roundup of Iraqi soldiers. With the Republican Guard surrounded and combat at its climax, many top Iraqi officers are expected to be taken captive if they are not killed.

"We have as much information as possible on those people that were committing the atrocities," said Schwarzkopf. "We try and separate them out. We treat them no differently than any other prisoner of war, but the ultimate disposition of those people, of course, might be quite different."

Iraqi soldiers who "have taken part in the many crimes against innocent civilians in Kuwait" will be held responsible before an international court of justice, promised Lt. Gen. Khalid bin Sultan, commander of the Joint Arab Forces.

War crime trials could be conducted by the United Nations, a reconstructed government of Kuwait, a military court set up by nations aligned against Iraq, or even by a new Iraqi government if Saddam were overthrown, legal scholars said.

If Saddam retains power, he is unlikely to be tried any time soon. But the Iraqi leader will almost certainly face an international tribunal if he is deposed by his own people or apprehended by invading troops.

"It's hard to name anything he's done (during the war) that doesn't violate the Geneva Conventions," said Mary Ellen O'Connell, a professor of international law at Indiana University.

Iraq's use of human shields, treatment of allied POWs, launching Scud missiles against a non-combatant Israel, setting Kuwaiti oil fields on fire, and torturing or abducting Kuwaiti civilians would all qualify as war crimes.

Outrage and a demand for justice are rising as Kuwaitis provide accounts of their nearly eight months under Iraqi occupation.

"They were killing us just for no reason. They were chasing us," Mahdi al-Kallaf told reporters coming into Kuwait City. "They were knocking on our doors and taking our kids, our boys. They were taking our food, just like monsters. They were killing us. We don't know why."

He said he witnessed executions. "Many, many of them I saw — horrible."

Schwarzkopf said "we have heard up to 40,000" Kuwaiti civilians were taken hostage, including "a very, very large number" of young Kuwaiti males taken from Kuwait City within the past two weeks.

But the abductions "pale in significance" to the "absolutely unspeakable atrocities" that Iraqi occupiers inflicted in recent days, he said.

"They're not a part of the same human race, the people that did that, that rest of us are," said Schwarzkopf. "I've got to pray that that's the case."

Underground identifies torture chambers

By Chris Hedges
N.Y. Times News Service

KUWAIT CITY, Kuwait — On the third floor of a gutted mansion, a Kuwaiti army major slowly pushed open a door with his foot to what was once a laundry room. It had been converted by the Iraqis, he said, into a torture chamber.

In one corner were metal box springs, raised off the floor by chairs. Next to the springs was a crude brown box with bare electrical wires protruding from black cords.

"They put the prisoners on the springs, poured water over them and then applied the current," said Maj. Jamal al-Hassan, who was a leader in the underground during nearly seven months of occupation. "If they were not happy with the answers, they turned up the voltage."

Kuwaitis who were picked up by the Iraqi secret police had their own stories to tell.

"They beat me, did not let me sleep and made me sit naked on a bottle of hot sauce," said Faisal Anizi, 21. "This went on for three days in what used to be the reform school."

Others tell of being rubbed down with sandpaper, having their heads thrust into cold water and being hung by their hands from a hook.

An American correspondent who arrived in Kuwait City on Tuesday, ahead of entering allied troops, quickly learned from Kuwaitis, eager to tell the world that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein brought more to Kuwait than Iraqi license plates and innumerable self-portraits. He brought the techniques of control that have kept his authoritarian government in power.

Members of the Kuwaiti underground, acting on information provided by people who said they were taken and tortured by the Iraqi secret police, have identified various places where Kuwaitis were questioned, beaten and tortured.

A visitor is overwhelmed by reports that hundreds, perhaps thousands of young men were taken by the Iraqis, many in the final hours before the Iraqi forces left the city Monday. Their parents and friends fear they may not reappear.

Palestinians refuse to accept Iraq's defeat

By Susan Warren
Hearst News Service

JERUSALEM — The young Palestinian woman's eyes flashed defiance while she waited at a bus stop on east Jerusalem's Salah el-Din Street.

"Saddam is not defeated," she insisted Wednesday. "I think a man who stands in front of 30 countries for 40 days is not defeated."

Her theme echoed up and down the streets in east Jerusalem as Palestinians held their heads high and refused to disavow the man they had looked upon as their champion.

Part in denial, part in desperation, most Palestinians here could not bring themselves to regard Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as a beaten man and their cause buried in the rubble of his defeat.

"He is not defeated," insisted Majid, 23, a young man hunched in his chair selling bread from a wagon at the corner of Salah el-Din and Az Zahra Streets. "He has just withdrawn (from Kuwait) because he wants peace."

Some proposed hopefully that leaving Kuwait is a clever tactic by an Iraqi army that still has more in store for the coalition's troops.

"We still have hope," said Hanan Madah. "Saddam went out of Kuwait and that is a wise step. He can't stick to the end in front of thirty countries, so maybe it is a wise step to win, not to lose."

But not all clung to optimism. His lip curling in disgust, an east Jerusalem money changer slapped at a newspaper with disdain.

"I thought he would lose," the money changer said. "But not like this."

One young Palestinian student, explaining the feeling on the streets, said "The people want to make themselves believe there is hope."

While refusing to admit Hussein's defeat, many Palestinians were still stricken with the stories of their hero's army turning tail and running from the allies.

"I cried yesterday, I felt so sad," said an east Jerusalem real estate agent, Rula Wahbeh.

Even if Iraq loses the war, Wahbeh said, Saddam with his missile attacks on Israel, brought the Palestinians a sense of satisfaction they had not experienced before.

"When he hit Israel with the missiles, it was a nice feeling for the Palestinian people," she said. "Not just because I want Israelis to die, but just to let the Israeli people know what it feels to be homeless, what it feels to be fighting, what it feels to be afraid, and maybe that thing will move Israelis to do something."

Former Guam senator offers $10,000 for Saddam's ear

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A former Guam senator is offering $10,000 for the right ear of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

"This is for all the grief he has caused the people of the world," Ben Ada said.

The one who delivers the ear also will get a week's stay at the hotel of his choice on Guam.

Ada, a funeral home owner, says he has asked the territorial medical examiner to help him establish the authenticity of the ear.

The offer is open to anyone, including Iraqis, Ada said. "Hopefully, it will be one of our boys who brings it home."

The ear will be preserved in a glass urn and displayed either at his funeral home or in a museum, Ada said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for noon, Feb. 28.
Lines show high temperatures.

Chance of rain forecast

Today's forecast is partly cloudy and warmer with isolated afternoon showers, a 20 percent chance of rain, high in the mid-70s and winds southwest 15-25 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low in the upper 40s.

Friday's forecast is cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a high in the low 70s, the NWS said.

Wednesday's high was 67, compared to the record high of 82, set in 1960.

The record low for today's date is 14, set in 1962.

STATE

Sunny skies were the rule across the state except in South Texas where only Hill Country residents saw clear skies Wednesday, the National Weather Service reported.

Clouds hung over South Texas with drizzle reported in Corpus Christi. Partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies were reported in the Big Bend and some parts of far West Texas by late afternoon.

Temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s with 70-degree readings reported in Wink.

Partly cloudy skies are anticipated today with highs in the 70s for North Texas, with possible showers expected. Thunderstorms are expected Friday with highs continuing in the 70s for the region.

In West Texas more showers are forecast by tonight with some possible thunderstorms in the far western areas. Temperatures will reach the 70s, forecasters say.

South Texas forecast includes scattered rain and showers today with 80 degree temperatures in extreme southern regions by Friday. Readings will stay in the 60s and 70s today.

NATION

Welcome rain fell on parched southern California on Wednesday and snow was scattered from the northern Plains across the Great Lakes into New England.

Rain moved across the southern Pacific Coast during the night and extended from southwestern California to central California during Wednesday morning.

Rainfall was generally light, a half-inch or less, but totals by Thursday morning were expected to range up to near 2 inches along the coast.

Wind gusts to 45 mph during the morning near Bakersfield. Blowing dust near the city cut visibility nearly to zero and caused a chain reaction accident of more than 50 vehicles, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Winter storm watches were in effect through Thursday over the higher elevations of northwestern Nevada and the California Sierra Nevada south of Lake Tahoe, where up to 2 feet of snow was possible.

The rain was expected to move across Arizona on Thursday, with 5 inches of wet, heavy snow possible at higher elevations.

Snow fell over Montana, North Dakota, northern and southern Minnesota, northern Iowa, west-central Illinois, southwestern Wisconsin, western Upper Michigan, Lower Michigan, central Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, southwestern Pennsylvania, north-central and southeastern New York state, and east-central New England.

Snowfall by noon CST across northwestern Lower Michigan ranged from 3 inches at Traverse City to 10 inches between Interlochen and Cadillac, the National Weather Service said. Overnight and morning showers left as much as 6 inches of snow across Cass County in southwestern Lower Michigan.

About 8 inches of snow fell during the early morning near Oswego, N.Y., at the eastern end of Lake Ontario.

CEASE-FIRE: 'Ahead is task of securing peace'

(From 1A)

die East next week to begin consultations.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Bush wanted to begin bringing U.S. troops home in a matter of days.

The president spoke as commander in chief of 537,000 American forces in the gulf, and the head of an unprecedented international coalition marshalled to counter Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Bush decided to call off the fighting earlier in the day after determining that pursuing it further would lead to unnecessary killings, said Fitzwater.

"He had the assurances of the commanders that the military backbone of Iraq was broken," Fitzwater said. Bush talked by telephone with Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, the allied commander, "to make sure it was militarily sound."

"Gen. Schwarzkopf responded it was fine with him," Fitzwater said. Bush made his announcement on the 42nd day of the conflict with Iraq — 209 days after Saddam triggered the Gulf crisis by sending an invading army into Kuwait to seize it as "province 19."

Bush said it would not be long before American troops begin returning home. "Soon we will open wide our arms to welcome back home to America our magnificent fighting forces," the president said.

SHOWDOWN: Tank battle biggest since WWII ton, senior U.S. military officials were claiming victory, and one said "mopping up" operations might be completed by morning.

For whatever Iraqi units pulled back to Basra, escape routes were limited. The city is hemmed in by rivers on two sides and by Desert Storm troops elsewhere.

North of Basra, the Iraqis hurriedly threw pontoon bridges across the Euphrates River, a U.S. military official reported. But tanks retreating north across the spans would be vulnerable to air attack. Permanent bridges across the river were destroyed in the air war.

The eastward armored push by the VII Corps divisions was scoring success after success.

Earlier Wednesday, American tank troops swept up 10,000 Iraqi prisoners as they routed another Guard division, U.S. officers reported. The victorious armored units left scores of burning Iraqi tanks in their wake, Associated Press correspondent Neil MacFarquhar reported from VII Corps headquarters.

Some 100 miles to the west, U.S. troops seized an airfield outside the Iraqi city of Nasiriyah, on the Euphrates, solidifying the alliance force's rear and enabling them to leapfrog still deeper into the heart of Iraq if necessary.

Iraqi civilians and militiamen from Nasiriyah confronted the invaders, an Iraqi military spokesman said in Baghdad.

LACK: Ideally, the Iraqis will overthrow Saddam point, the Iraqi people would overthrow the man who has led them into two disastrous wars in the past decade. There is precedent: Napoleon was exiled, twice, for his military misadventures; Italian partisans executed Benito Mussolini in 1945.

If captured, Saddam could also be turned over to the coalition or another international body to face a war tribunal. At the World War II Nuremberg trials, 24 German Nazis were indicted and 12 sentenced to die. Seven Japanese militarists, including Gen. Hideki Tojo, were convicted in Tokyo and executed for committing war crimes.

"Even if he survives and continues to rule he will always be at risk of prosecution for crimes against peace, war crimes and crimes against humanity," said David Scheffer, an international law expert with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Saddam would never be safe, either at home or abroad, Scheffer said, citing the case of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann, who was captured by the Israelis in Argentina in 1960 and executed two years later.

GENERAL: Canary-eating smiles crosses his face and I apologize if I've left anybody out.

"It was a great coalition of people, all of whom did a fine job."

Schwarzkopf, his victory all but achieved, was willing now to reveal his tactics and the part played by every unit.

Coyly, he admitted to engaging in a bit of disinformation intended to throw the Iraqis off guard.

He said that he let word leak about that the allies intended to mount an amphibious landing to keep the Iraqis forces on the defensive along the Kuwaiti coast, while all the time he planned a vast northward drive to attack from the west.

About that strategy, he was not the least bit modest.

"This was an absolutely, an extraordinary move ... absolutely a gigantic accomplishment," he said. And as for the way the Marines breached Saddam's "minefield with barbed-wire, fire-trenches type barrier," why that was "absolutely superb," something that "will be studied for many, many years to come."

Schwarzkopf's tone changed with the questions.

He thanked God that the Iraqis, for reasons unknown, did not use chemical or biological weapons.

His face darkened when he talked about the Iraqis who, he said, had committed unspeakable atrocities in Kuwait as men "not part of the same human race, the people who did that, that the rest of us are."

Then came the question of his assessment of Saddam Hussein's military skill.

"Hah!," said the general. He leaned on his lectern.

"As far as Saddam Hussein being a great military strategist, he is neither a strategist, nor is he schooled in the operational arts, nor is he a tactician, nor is he a general, nor is he as a soldier."

REACTION: 'I don't trust those people at all'

(From 1A)

Mark Sparlin, 36, a geophysicist, said Saddam's downfall will inevitably come from within his own country.

"Once those 50,000 people who surrender get back to Iraq," that will be the beginning of the end, Sparlin said.

Kevin Brady, 25, an accountant, said he had no pity for Saddam or his future.

"It's pretty animalistic, but I'd like to see him dead," Brady said. Brady's feeling extended beyond Saddam when asked whether the United States should help rebuild war-torn Iraq.

"No. Maybe they will learn before they let a dictator rise again," Brady said.

Tom Speaker, 45, a computer consultant, said he had a hunch that the world community won't have to worry about Saddam.

"I somehow think Bush was talking about the government of Iraq not Saddam. The background tells me that Saddam is no longer the head of the government," Speaker said, adding that such a situation will be for the betterment of Iraq.

"The cease-fire will bring about a government that can rule a post-war Iraq," he said.

If Saddam's time isn't already over, then the time is near, said Eric Vom Lunen, 40, a geophysicist.

"I don't think he will last six months," Vom Lunen said, adding that the length of an allied presence will surpass Saddam's time in power.

"There will be difficulty bringing the troops back. It will take a gradual withdrawal ... a year or two," he said.

Roger Cramer, 40, a salesman, aired a sentiment that spoke for all of those interviewed.

"I'll be glad to get everyone home when they get home," Cramer said.

Looking back at the war, Cramer said, "I don't think the Iraqis understood what they were up against."

Sam Flores, 45, a financial advisor, expressed similar concern for the American soldiers.

"I hope all the men and women there come back safely. I would like to see all the Vietnam veterans welcome these guys home," Flores said.

Glenn Winters, 32, a geophysicist, said he hopes the war's end will reveal the real situation in Iraq.

"I hope they (the journalists) will get the whole story out, the atrocities," Winters said.

Meanwhile the reaction around town echoed sentiments expressed at the local bar.

Kathy Darling, 31, an insurance claim representative, said that although the war apparently is over, Saddam may not be.

"I don't think we should let him get away with all he's done," Ms. Darling said.

And if Saddam or Iraq doesn't comply with all the U.N. resolutions? "We should go back in there," she added.

Marylinn Schwanitz, 35, a homemaker, said she is optimistic about the cease-fire.

"Actually I felt the war was over before the speech because of reports the last 24 hours that the (Iraqi) thrust was gone," Ms. Schwanitz said.

troops not needed to rebuild Kuwait return home.

"I hope our kids will come home soon. But it took six months to get them all over there so there's no way they'll all be home in a month," she said. "But we can at least start the process — that will be the great thing."

Martha Sides' son, Steve, is in the Navy and she doesn't know when he'll be home. "He has Marines on his ship so I hope he'll be bringing them right back soon," she said. "I'm very excited."

Bush's announcement was met with joy at the home of Pat and Mary Yocham, whose son, Scott, 27, is a specialist with the 101st Airborne Division.

"I'm just so excited I can hardly stand it," Mrs. Yocham said. "I can't wait for Scott to get home now. I've been running around yelling 'Yea! Yea!'"

Mrs. Yocham, who hasn't heard from her son since two days before the air offensive against Iraq began last month, said she couldn't wait to find out what role her son had played in the fighting.

"Don't you know he'll have some stories to tell?" she said. Bush's speech came as a relief after a day of worry, she added.

"Today was a pretty hard day in that I knew that the 101st Airborne bunch were fighting."

She said one of the first things she'll do when Scott returns from the Middle East is take him to Centennial Plaza in downtown Midland to let him untie the yellow ribbon there that bears his name.

Arminae Beeson, sister of Marine Lance Cpl. Ronald Forest, 20, said her brother can look forward to the same ritual.

"He is going to have a welcome home party with all our family and friends," said Mrs. Beeson, 22.

Andy Savas also was thinking of throwing a homecoming party for his son, Marine Lance Cpl. Shaun Savas, 19.

"It's something we've been looking forward to for a long time," said Savas of Shaun's return from the Middle East. "The real relief is going to come when we pick him up at the airport."

Savas said he hoped the United States would not resume the offensive against Iraq or attempt to kill Saddam Hussein.

"I think that would bring us down to the level of Saddam," he said, adding: "We don't want to make Saddam a martyr."

Mrs. Yocham, who said when the ground war started that she hoped it would be a short one, said she wasn't surprised that the conflict came to such a quick end.

"I knew that once they had to go in it wouldn't take long," she said. "I think Saddam's Republican Guard was overrated."

As for members of the rest of Saddam's army, she said she felt sorry for them.

"I really felt like those guys didn't want to be out there fighting," she said. "I had a real compassion for those soldiers."

Mrs. Beeson said she thought the ground war would last "at least a couple of weeks" and added that she was surprised Saddam never made good on his promise to use chemical weapons against allied forces.

"Maybe they (coalition forces) weren't joking when they said they'd taken away that capability," she said. "I really felt like if he (Saddam) had had it at his disposal, he would use it."

Mrs. Beeson said Bush's speech instilled her with more hope than she has felt since her brother was deployed to the Persian Gulf last August.

"It feels really good that he might actually be coming home in a couple months," she said. "It just killed me to think about all the dangers that he's come across."

John Crabtree, whose son Brook Smith is in the Army, said Bush's speech sounded "very, very good" to him. He believes the Iraqis will honor the cease-fire, which could bring Brook home within a month.

"Of course he's got to go back to his base in Germany, but that's a whole lot better than the desert," Crabtree said.

"I figure we'll be hearing from him real soon."

Donna Hill said she was "personally ecstatic" when she heard Bush's speech. Her daughter Patricia Hill-Hedrick, 20, is in the Air Force and was due to be sent to the Gulf within the next week.

"She just made me a grandmother and that's the only reason she hadn't gone yet," Ms. Hill said. "So I'm really pleased it's over."

Lidia Newsome's husband, Sergio, serves in the Navy and has been in the Gulf since the Iraqis invaded Kuwait.

"Everything's going okay, but I don't know how long it will be before he's home," Ms. Newsome said. "He's been over there since it started so I hope he's the first back."

"When he gets home we're going to spend some times with our kids, maybe even take a vacation," she said.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

'Finally it was over' for Kuwaitis, friends

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press

It was like watching water drain from a tub: After 6½ slow months of resisting a painful occupation, the Kuwaiti people and the many Americans with ties to them suddenly were free.

"It felt so good to see their flag go up," Ruth Bany of West Linn, Ore., said Wednesday. "Finally it was over. Now I just hope my daughter is alive."

Thousands of families around the nation have been captive to one or another kind of terror since Saddam Hussein's troops barreled into Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Americans living in Kuwait who couldn't flee were trapped, held hostage for months. And all the while their families in the United States waited, listened for news reports, waited some more.

"It got to the point where I couldn't get out of bed in the morning," said Mrs. Bany, whose daughter and Kuwaiti son-in-law have two daughters. "My nerves were shot. And then I think: They were going through worse than I was."

The horror seemed, however, to be ending Wednesday as the U.S.-led coalition's ground campaign drove the last Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

"This has been a victory for the United States, a victory for Kuwait and a victory for justice," said Habbib Ebraheem, who was reunited with his American wife and three children in Tulsa, Okla., after escaping in December.

"It's going to be over soon," added Walid Khuraiabet of Citizens for Free Kuwait in St. Louis. "Men, women, children, the government, the leadership ... we all want to express our thanks."

But many residents of Kuwait, much like the families of U.S. troops prosecuting the war, said they would not feel the rout complete until the Iraqi leader was definitively driven from power.

"Liberating Kuwait was our ultimate goal, but it doesn't mean that this is the end," said Donnita Cole of Odessa, Texas, whose husband was a "human shield" and whose son is now with an Army helicopter unit on the front lines.

"The end will be when Saddam is out," she said. "The end will truly be when our kids start coming home."

The jubilation was for many tinged by confirmation of atrocities committed against the Kuwaiti people, some of whom were reportedly rounded up and taken away by Iraqi soldiers even in the occupation's final hours.

'Liberating Kuwait was our ultimate goal, but it doesn't mean that this is the end. The end will be when Saddam is out. The end will truly be when our kids start coming home.'

— Odessa's Donnita Cole

"It's a small country. If someone in their family wasn't killed, then someone close was," said Katherine Baker, who escaped to Saudi Arabia only to learn later that the Kuwaiti woman who helped her was murdered by Iraqi troops.

Many former hostages have recalled the Kuwaitis and other Arabs who risked their lives in helping them reach freedom. They remember the meals fetched, lies told and other kindnesses now to be repaid.

"I'd like to go back today," said ex-hostage Jack Hogan, a horticulturalist who was working for Kuwait's government prior to the invasion. "I want to help. I'd love to be a part of the greening of Kuwait."

Hogan was among many people waiting Wednesday for communications with Kuwait to be restored. Some were waiting for word from loved ones already inside the tiny emirate, others were waiting to know when they too could go.

"They're out on the streets, and that's good to know," said Kristine Knutson, who has been living in New Hope, Minn., since fleeing Kuwait with her four young children. "But I won't feel better until I've talked to my husband and know where everything stands."

Ruthie al-Khalef, who has three children and is pregnant with a fourth, was also waiting by her phone at the temporary home she set up near relatives in Memphis, Tenn., shortly after abandoning occupied Kuwait.

"People are slowly starting to hear from their husbands," said Mrs. al-Khalef, whose husband is a major with the Kuwaiti Air Force. "Everyone's glad Kuwait is liberated. But at what cost?"

"There's been so much destruction. And I don't feel very good about going back only to have Saddam knocking at our border again."

Kuwaitis dance in the streets, throw themselves at soldiers

By Mort Rosenblum

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Within earshot of the last gunfire to clear their city Wednesday, Kuwaitis danced in the streets and threw themselves at American and Saudi soldiers.

The joy and warmth of Kuwait recalled the old newsreels of liberated Paris, but in vivid Kuwaiti colors: red, green, black and white.

"Send my regards to Mr. Bush and to the American Army and my love to the American peoples," Mohammed Ali Kandari told reporters as their jeep was engulfed in a chanting, flag-waving throng.

Ignoring muffled artillery and machine-gun fire near the International Airport, where U.S. Marines fought back diehard Iraqi resistors, they paraded in cars on Kuwait City's broad avenue.

Nearly seven months under Iraqi occupation had come to an end.

At corners and crossroads, volunteer guards with mixed weaponry searched cars for escaping Iraqis. Mostly, they joked with motorists and pounded on hoods enthusiastically.

Children made "V" signs with tiny fingers as laughing mothers held them out of car windows. On street corners, women in black veils and robes ululated and chanted. Youths fired skyrockets.

Someone had painted "Saddam" across a donkey. Kids waved a flag atop a burned-out tank.

Most seemed unbothered by the shambles of war.

Electricity was cut, with power lines a tangle. There was no water or public services. Buildings were shattered, ransacked and booby-trapped.

"We lived like animals," said Ibrahim Fedel, a middle-aged Kuwaiti in a boisterous crowd. "No food, no water, no electricity, anything. Last week, we are all scared to go out."

He added, with a broad grin: "Now I am feeling very well. This is my country. I have freedom now."

Lalaine Pasco said: "We are just out walking in the streets. Before we never went out. Iraqis were here, maybe they catch us. We were afraid, always."

Kuwait's capital city showed deep scars of Saddam Hussein's campaign to turn the glittering little emirate back into a Persian Gulf backwater.

An employee at the Kuwait International Hotel apologized for the pile of junk that had been furniture. "The Iraqis," he explained, with a slight shudder.

Typical of many buildings, it was stripped of food and fittings by departing Iraqis. Only a few crumpled packages of pasta lay on the kitchen floor.

Near the Saudi border, the main road from Saudi Arabia is almost intact. But war is evident from the charred hulks of tanks that flank the highway and from columns of smoke rising from oilfield fires.

With the Iraqis barely gone, Kuwaitis began clearing away the mess, hoping for a quick restoration of their old life.

"Everything will be started again OK," said Mohammed Abdullah, an Egyptian electrical plant employee who stayed on when most foreign workers fled. "We are very, very happy."

Aug. 2, 1990: Iraq's army overruns Kuwait following Iraqi grievances over oil pricing, Kuwaiti loans to Iraq and Iraqi claims on Kuwaiti territory.

Aug. 6: U.N. Security Council imposed economic sanctions against Iraq.

Aug. 7: Bush orders deployment of U.S. troops in Gulf.

Nov. 29: U.N. Security Council votes 12-2 to give Iraq six weeks to pull its troops out of Kuwait before the United States and its allies are free to launch a military strike. Yemen and Cuba oppose vote; China abstains.

Jan. 17, 1991: The United States launches air attacks against Iraq and Kuwait. Iraq attacks Israel with Scud missiles. The coalition pounds Iraq and Kuwait with air strikes.

Jan. 19: Israel's anti-missile force is boosted by additional Patriot missile batteries and U.S. crews. A second Iraqi missile attack causes 29 injuries in Tel Aviv, Israel.

Jan. 22: Iraq sets some Kuwaiti oil facilities ablaze. Oil prices jump sharply.

Jan. 23: After more than 12,000 sorties, the allies claim air superiority and focus strikes on the Iraqi ground forces around Kuwait.

Jan. 25: Allied officials say Iraq sabotaged Kuwait's main supertanker loading pier, dumping millions of gallons of crude oil into the Gulf. The exiled government of Kuwait pledges $13.5 billion to the war effort.

Gulf-War Chronology

Jan. 28: More than 80 Iraqi fighter-bombers find refuge in Iran, which says it is impounding the planes until the war ends.

Jan. 30: First big ground battle fought at the frontier port of Khafji in the northeast corner of Saudi Arabia. Eleven U.S. Marines killed, seven by friendly fire. Iraq forced to abandon centralized control of its air defense.

Feb. 4: Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani makes surprise offer to hold direct talks with Iraq and U.S.

Feb. 6: King Hussein of Jordan tilts sharply toward Iraq, describing war as effort by outsiders to destroy that country and carve up the Arab world.

Feb. 13: Allied warplanes destroy underground facility in Baghdad and officials there say many civilians were killed. The United States calls the target a military command center. U.N. Security Council votes 9-2, with four abstentions, to hold closed formal session on the conflict, the first since the war broke out.

Feb. 15: Iraq offers a conditional pullout, but Bush dismisses it as a "cruel hoax." Bombing continues.

Feb. 16: American attack helicopters make first night raids on Iraqi positions, the U.S. Command says. Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov meets with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad.

Feb. 18: Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz holds three and one-half hours of peace talks in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Feb. 19: U.S. commanders say they have evidence Iraq plans to use chemical weapons in response to an allied ground assault.

Feb. 22: Soviet peace plan revealed. Allows Iraq to withdraw its forces from Kuwait within 21 days of a cease-fire. Allies give Iraq until noon Saturday EST to begin a pullout from Kuwait or face an all-out attack.

Feb. 23: The United States and its allies launch a large-scale ground assault against Iraqi troops.

Feb. 25: Saddam orders his forces early Tuesday to withdraw from Kuwait, Baghdad radio reports. The White House reacts icily to the radio dispatch. The Iraqis score a direct hit with a Scud missile attack on a U.S. barracks in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia. The U.S. military says servicemen were killed and wounded.

Feb. 26: Saddam, in a speech on Baghdad radio, says Iraqi forces are withdrawing from Kuwait. Coalition troops are surrounding Kuwait City where Iraqis are reportedly leaving.

Feb. 27: Bush declares Iraq defeated, sets conditions for making cease fire permanent. Iraq accepts U.N. sanctions.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Soldier's wife in 'state of shock'

Associated Press

Texans reacted with a mix of elation and wariness Wednesday after President Bush announced a ceasefire in the Persian Gulf War.

"I'm in a total state of shock," said Stella Delzeit, whose husband, Sgt. James Delzeit, was deployed Oct. 13 to the Gulf from Fort Bliss. "I know this is it. Inside, I know it's over."

In Killeen, which is located next to Fort Hood, Ann Jones-Mitchell listened carefully to Bush's speech.

"It's going to be interesting to see what's going to happen in the next 24 hours," said Mrs. Jones-Mitchell, whose husband, Spec. Billy D. Mitchell, is stationed with the 1st Cavalry in the Gulf.

"I definitely believe that it's a good move on the president's part," she said. "I back my husband in Saudi Arabia and the president all the way."

Some peace activists greeted the news with caution.

"Well if he (Bush) is indeed calling a cease-fire, we're at least glad that the bloodshed is over at least," said Gary Cooper, a volunteer with the Dallas Peace Center. "The war was completely unnecessary ... nothing has been gained that couldn't have been gained without a war."

But for Mrs. Delzeit in El Paso, Bush's announcement signaled a celebration. She said relatives contacted her in the moments following Bush's speech to prepare for a homecoming celebration for both her husband and her brother-in-law, Army Spec. Juan Ybarro, also stationed in the Middle East.

"I cannot wait. I absolutely cannot wait," she said of her husband's anticipated return. "I know the transition will be hard. I've been running the household for five months on my own and it will be hard to give that up, but I don't mind at all."

For some Arab-Americans, the ceasefire announcement was bittersweet and clouded by how the United States will deal with Saddam and Iraq.

"Everybody should welcome peace. To err is human, to forgive is divine. If there is something to forgive, President Bush should forgive and show he is worthy to be the leader of this new world order," said Munir Bayoud, a member of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee in Dallas.

Bayoud, a native of Lebanon, said the United States will worsen tensions in the Middle East if Bush insists that Saddam be removed from power and Iraq forced to pay war reparations.

"If we want to have this new world order working with America deserving to be its leader, America should set a good example for all other powers ... to have one yardstick, one standard to measure violations of political, human and civil rights by whomever and wherever they are."

"Let us help Iraq after this era of Saddam Hussein to become a democracy," said Bayoud, a retired professor of mathematics at Southern Methodist University.

Mom to name her son after American

KUWAIT CITY (NYT) — As this city celebrated the end of Iraqi occupation, Nura Dhubia, a new mother, raced through the crowds Wednesday looking for the first American she could find.

When she found one, she asked his name — a correspondent for The New York Times. She listened to the reply and then asked again.

She repeated the name as best she could and then said she had promised God that she would name her newborn son after the first American she met during the liberation of her country.

"My boy will be named Chris Hedges Dhubia," she said.

'V' for victory

A Kuwaiti citizen waves the American and British flags as another flashes the "V" for victory sign from a rooftop in Kuwait City Tuesday evening as allied troops liberated the city.

Israel: Missile launcher attack still possible

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's military commander said an attack to knock out Iraqi missile launchers is still possible, but allied forces announced they were halting the battle.

Iraq has fired 39 Scud missiles at Israel since the Persian Gulf War began, killing two people and wounding about 230. The latest barrage was fired Monday, when two Scuds landed harmlessly in the southern Israeli desert.

The United States had urged Israel not to retaliate to avoid jeopardizing the anti-Iraq coalition, which includes Arab states hostile to Israel.

"It's never too late. As long as there are launchers, it's not too late," said Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron on Wednesday. "The decision will be taken according to the interests of Israel."

If it's yes, can we do it? Yes. Is there time? Yes."

President Bush said allied forces would cease fire at midnight EST Wednesday, 7 a.m. in Jerusalem.

Uriel Savir, Israel's consul general in New York, was asked after the Bush announcement whether it would preclude future Israeli attacks on Iraq.

"The only yardstick upon which we will act is the security and safety of Israel," he said.

"We seek no revenge. Israel was made more safe and secure due to the American action and the balance of power has changed. If this is good enough to make Israel safe and secure, Israel will be more than satisfied. If the threat continues, we may take actions in the future."

Woman killed in action got engaged day she left for gulf

ROCHESTER MILLS, Pa. (AP) — Christine Mayes got engaged the day she left for the gulf war and gave her ring to her fiancé for safekeeping. Beverly Clark left a job in a door-and-window plant to serve overseas.

Their relatives learned Wednesday the female soldiers, both from rural Indiana County in western Pennsylvania, were reported killed in the war with Iraq.

"She was proud to serve her country. She wanted to go to do what she could," said Ms. Mayes' mother, Darlene.

Ms. Mayes, 22, of Rochester Mills and Ms. Clark, 23, of Armagh died when an Iraqi Scud missile leveled their barracks Monday in Dharan, Saudi Arabia.

Twenty-six other soldiers were killed in the attack, and 89 were injured, the Army said.

Both women were specialists in the 14th Quartermaster Detachment, an Army Reserve water purification unit based in Greensburg. The 99th Army Reserve Command of suburban Pittsburgh said Wednesday at least 11 members of the 14th died in the Scud attack.

Another woman, Spc. Melissa Rathbun-Nealy, 20, of Grand Rapids, Mich., is listed by the Pentagon as missing in action.

Mrs. Mayes said she talked with her daughter Sunday night.

"She said she would be leaving for the desert the next day, and she was thinking of us here," she said.

The Mayeses learned of their daughter's death Wednesday morning when an ROTC sergeant from Indiana University of Pennsylvania knocked on the door of their home in Rochester Mills, about 60 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

"I'm numb," said her father, Franklin Mayes. "We didn't hear from her for two days, and it's been so long so we figured she was all right."

Her fiancé, David Fairbanks of Punxsutawney, had visited the Mayes' home Wednesday and traveled to Fort Lee, Va., with her parents Feb. 17, the day Ms. Mayes left for Saudi Arabia. He proposed to her at the base.

"She told him to keep the ring because she was afraid she was going to lose it," Mrs. Mayes said. "She was doing what she wanted to do. I was proud of her. I don't hold this against anybody."

Ms. Mayes was a business student at Indiana University's Punxsutawney campus when she was activated in October to support Operation Desert Shield, her mother said. She previously served three years in the Army as a kitchen worker in Germany.

Ms. Clark was a supervisor at Season-All Building Products in Indiana.

"She just was a fine all-around human being," said Sam Heckel, personnel director at the Indiana plant. "Everyone's pretty devastated. There's been a lot of tears."

Ms. Clark won letters in volleyball, softball and basketball at United High School before she graduated in 1985, according to her sister's husband, Dave Hawk of Armagh.

She wanted to enlist in the Army when she graduated, but her family talked her out of it, Hawk said. She was worried about serving in the gulf war, he said.

"The girl wasn't very excited when they saw her off," said Ms. Clark's grandmother, Ruth Clark.

Aquino faces increasing pressure to step down

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than 20,000 protesters demanded Wednesday that President Corason Aquino resign in a rare rally bringing together leftists, rightists and former supporters of the Philippine leader.

Speakers charged Mrs. Aquino betrayed the "people power revolution" that swept her to power on Feb. 25, 1986.

It was the largest anti-government rally in years and brought together former Aquino administration officials, leftists and rightist supporters of the late President Ferdinand Marcos.

They raised clenched fists as march organizers read a manifesto declaring "we do not wish this heartless government to remain in power." Protesters also carried banners demanding the government close the six U.S. military bases in the country.

"It is no longer a question of criticizing the Aquino government but ... of establishing a new government that will serve the majority and not the few," said Nick Elman, spokesman for the left-wing May First Movement.

About 200 riot police prevented the protesters from marching to military camps where hundreds of thousands of Filipinos staged the February 1986 uprising that toppled Marcos and propelled Mrs. Aquino to power.

Public discontent has been increasing because of double-digit inflation, including a 70 percent increase in fuel prices in the wake of the Persian Gulf crisis.

Calm returns to San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government reported calm in the capital Wednesday following overnight battles between leftist rebels and loyalist forces left one civilian dead and 10 others injured.

The government said the guerrilla incursion into the upper-class suburb of Escalon was part of an unsuccessful attack on the official residence of President Alfredo Cristiani. A communique said several 81mm mortars were fired at the presidential compound, but none struck their target.

Insurgents interviewed during the fighting said the battles were in response to government military operations in northern and eastern parts of the country that are under rebel control.

At least one air force helicopter crewman fired machine-gun rounds at rebel positions during the fighting. Combat was heavy at times two hours before midnight, with sustained exchanges of assault rifle fire and intermittent explosions of grenades.

Several light tanks and armored personnel carriers backed by an estimated 300 infantry troops patrolled Escalon on Wednesday morning.

The 20 or so rebels who had infiltrated the neighborhood from bases on the San Salvador volcano west of the capital appeared to have withdrawn by dawn. There were no exchanges of fire after daylight.

The government, in a communique, termed the incursion "a totally terrorist action and a flagrant violation of human rights."

The communique also said the incursion was part of a guerrilla plan to hinder nationwide legislative and municipal elections scheduled for March 10.

Several sabotaged utility posts were down along Escalon's streets.

Dutch diplomat assassinated, report says

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A senior Dutch diplomat in Tunisia was assassinated late Wednesday, according to a report on Dutch Television.

The report gave no details on the slaying of the diplomat it identified as First Secretary Robert-Jan Akkerman. The Foreign Ministry in The Hague could not immediately be reached for comment.

The Netherlands is one of several western nations Iraq has threatened to target for terrorist action because of the Gulf War.

Three Dutch Navy ships are patrolling in the Persian Gulf, and the Netherlands has medical personnel among the coalition forces.

President George Bush declared his "war of liberation" in the Persian Gulf complete Wednesday, asserting that "Kuwait is liberated. Iraq's army is defeated." There are still a number of loose ends to tie up, however.

Noting that U.S. and allied forces will suspend fighting at midnight Thursday morning, Bush said a permanent peace will take hold once Iraq ends all hostilities, releases prisoners of war and foreign captives, and meets other conditions.

Bush's comments came after a day in which Desert Storm's top armored divisions surrounded the Iraqi Republican Guard's tanks and infantry near Basra and dealt the Iraqis another brutal defeat.

"This war is now behind us," said President Bush. "Ahead of us is the task of achieving a potentially historic peace."

The war, which began on Aug. 2 when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's troops invaded neighboring Kuwait, had proceeded with lightning precision since Jan. 17th when U.S. air strikes began in Iraq and Kuwait. Since then, many of the military targets have been destroyed and with the start of the ground war last Saturday, Desert Storm forces pushed quickly and decisively into Kuwait.

In six weeks the United States gained control of the skies over the war zone. The Iraqi Republican Guard retreated into Iraq from Kuwait. Thousands of Saddam Hussein's troops surrendered to Desert Storm forces.

The only area in which Saddam continued to outperform the United States was in his utterly ridiculous pronouncements of military successes, even victory. Even after President Bush's comment Wednesday that the air and ground assault by Desert Storm was over, Iraq's state radio broadcast defiant rhetoric and made no mention of Bush's assertion.

It became obvious as the war progressed that Saddam's warfare capability was no match for that of the United States. The Iraqi leader grossly miscalculated his nation's military strength, which was reduced to rubble by the intense air war waged by Desert Storm forces for a month and a half.

All in all, it was an extremely successful war campaign. But now comes the difficult part.

To fulfill the American goals originally set, Kuwait's legitimate government must be restored, the security and stability of the Persian Gulf must be assured, and American citizens abroad must be protected. Saddam's forces have already been forced out of Kuwait, fulfilling one goal, but Saddam must meet requirements of ALL the United Nations resolutions.

President Bush wisely "upped the ante" for peace as the war progressed. He also has made it clear that he would prefer that the Iraqi people rise up and wrest control of their government from Saddam Hussein. But if not, Saddam still must be removed as a commander capable of carrying out even terroristic warfare against other countries. If the battle has not already removed Saddam's military and political power base, that, too, must be accomplished.

Until Saddam and his warfare capability are removed from the Middle East equation, he will remain a danger to peace throughout the world and can carry out a campaign of limited, terroristic warfare. That must not be permitted.

ANOTHER VIEW

'Gulf orphans' need
Pentagon concern

The middle of the war is no time for second-guessing the Pentagon's personnel rules, and the Senate sensibly refused ... to push the military to reassign single parents now serving in the Persian Gulf combat area.

But the problem of "gulf orphans" is genuine, as the Senate recognized. By a vote of 91-0 it called for a rethink of certain military deployment policies.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, commends the Defense Department for its sensitivity to service families but also requests the Pentagon to reconsider the needs of single parents, military couples and newborn babies, with due allowance for the requirements of military readiness.

The Pentagon is being asked to adapt to new social realities ... by not sending off to war a child's only parent or both parents.

This change would directly affect a small minority of service people, but it would serve the interests of all Americans who are properly concerned about the welfare of the next generation. The Pentagon should approach it in that spirit.

Gulf war eclipses Colombian drug war

WASHINGTON — While the eyes of the world are on the war in the Persian Gulf, the United States is losing the drug war in Colombia. The drug cartels there have intimidated Colombians by violence and cowed their government into submission. Meanwhile, the United States continues to pour anti-drug money into the country — money that the Colombian military would rather spend putting down guerrilla uprisings that have nothing to do with drugs.

After a brutal campaign of terror that took the lives of three Colombian presidential contenders and hundreds of politicians, journalists, judges and others, the drug cartels got what they wanted from their government — minimal jail time for those who give themselves up and no extradition to the United States where the cartels have not been able to terrorize the justice system.

The next step is a proposed constitutional ban on extraditions, which would guarantee that the drug dealers will never have to face a judicial system other than the one they have already brought to its knees.

President Cesar Gaviria Trujillo thinks his plan of capitulation has been a success. At least seven accused drug kingpins have turned themselves in, including the second and third in command of the Medellin cartel. But the program has been widely criticized in the Colombian press as an effort "to secure peace, not to win the war."

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents told us that the new Colombian programs were geared more toward stopping narco-terrorism than narco-trafficking. In other words, the cartels can continue their business as long as they do it bloodlessly.

The result, according to a recent congressional report, has been a redistribution of power among the cartels instead of a reduction in the supply of drugs. The Medellin cartel, which has been primarily responsible for the violence, has been eclipsed by its gentler competitors. DEA officials now say that the Cali cartel is the No. 1 drug outfit in Colombia.

John Mattes, a Miami lawyer, represents a convicted Colombian drug trafficker who, from his jail cell, helped the FBI with a successful sting operation against the Cali cartel. Mattes told our associate Dean Boyd that when Cali cartel members had the threat of extradition hanging over their heads, they warned his client to keep his mouth shut. Now, the Cali cartel doesn't care what Mattes' client tells U.S. authorities. "Today, they're not afraid of anything," Mattes said. "Not only are they admitting what they do, but they're making my client's family pay for all the cocaine lost in the sting operation."

The Colombian government should not take all the blame. U.S. interest in the war on drugs has all but disappeared during the Persian Gulf War. President Bush tried to show otherwise on Feb. 1 when he announced an 11 percent increase in anti-drug funding. But the spending plan is fundamentally flawed.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House committee that oversees government anti-drug agencies, told us, "The administration's approach is largely a military and law-enforcement response to deep-rooted economic problems. What we need is a long-term plan to develop a legal alternative economy in Colombia."

In the meantime, the U.S. money going to Colombia to fight the drug war is being used to fight guerrilla wars. Senior Colombian military officials have admitted that a substantial percentage of the $40.3 million in U.S. anti-narcotics aid going to the Colombian military last year was used to fight guerrilla groups instead.

GEORGE WILL

Postwar Kuwait will differ from old Kuwait

WASHINGTON — What person was most directly responsible for the broadest improvement of life for the largest number of women in this century? Douglas MacArthur, whose contribution to the liberalization of Japan should be remembered as America approaches the problems and possibilities of victory in another war.

Writing some of Japan's new Constitution on a yellow legal pad, MacArthur, as governor of occupied Japan, was in a position and a mood to insist on such radical reforms as the rights of organized labor, schools that taught democracy, abolition of the feudal aristocracy, and women's suffrage. Thirty-eight women were in the first Diet elected under the new constitution.

William Manchester, MacArthur's biographer, writes that before MacArthur's regency, concubinage and family contract marriages had been legal, women had no political or economic rights, (not even the right to own property), public schools were segregated by sex with girls having a diluted curriculum, and there were no colleges for women. Adultery had been licit for husbands but illicit for wives. The Diet had to choose: punish both or neither. The crime of adultery was abolished.

Regarding Iraq, last summer the Wall Street Journal defined the maximalists' war aims: "a MacArthurian regency in Baghdad." That seemed then — and still does — like over-reaching, politically and militarily. But now, with the war going well, we should think somewhat spaciouly.

Today's talk about the New World Order has, so far, a conspicuous flaw: It stresses order, not freedom. However, the Reagan foreign policy had this premise: Domestic freedom conduces to international order. The idea, which would give needed substance to the Bush policy, was that democracy pacifies nations. Governments bound to popular sentiment will not be warlike. History contains counter-examples (for example, in Europe on the eve of World War I), but the theory is broadly confirmed by experience.

Thus, a sensible war aim is a new regime in Iraq. To that end, the United States has put a price on Saddam Hussein's head, a price that rises every time bombs drop another bridge into a river. The price is the potential value of United States aid for reconstruction of Iraq's infrastructure.

Such aid is unthinkable with Saddam on the scene. Furthermore, the Baath Party that churned up one Saddam is a likely source of another one. So Iraq's single-party state must be reformed if Iraq is to be tamed. Iraqis should do this but the allies can provide incentives by making the ending of sanctions and of the occupation of southern Iraq contingent on the replacement of Saddam's regime.

America does not want to take the military measures and pay the political price of a protracted occupation and presence to install a regency or administer anything comparable to the de-Nazification of Germany. But America should keep visible to all Iraqis the cash value to Iraq of a revolution, or at least a coup. And America should be poised to spring to the assistance of democratic elements.

Furthermore, Iraq need not be the first place for a healthy infection of popular government in that region. There is always our new-found friend Kuwait.

Asked if Kuwait no longer opposes an American presence in peacetime, Kuwait's ambassador here says only, "I don't think now we are in a position to pronounce on this subject." Given Kuwait's position — flat on its back, being resuscitated by American power — perhaps Kuwait is just short of breath.

Perhaps America does not want such a presence on the ground. But it would be nice if Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and other states would stop treating the United States as a corrupting influence except when there is dying to be done.

Secretary of State Baker, asked about the possible democratization of Kuwait, says: "We know that democracy is the best system" but if we were to say "that the government of Kuwait has to change," we would be "permitting aggression to effect political change, and that would be, I think, a terrible mistake."

How is that again? It would be a victory for Iraq if Kuwait helped pay its debt to our democracy by practicing democracy? Kuwait owes the United States much — indeed, everything, including its existence. The United States has earned the right strongly to suggest Kuwait's ruling class that the rules should change.

ART BUCHWALD

It may be time to say, 'Bye-bye Saddam'

It may be premature, but I believe it is time to decide what to do with Saddam Hussein when the war is over. The man is bound to be caught and, after being interviewed by CNN, will be turned over to the proper authorities.

One idea is that Saddam be forced to share a cell with Manuel Noriega in Miami. But Hussein has told the Russians he wants no part of the deal.

"If I share a cell with Noriega," Saddam said, "the U.S. will listen in on all my telephone calls. Besides, I don't think a person should go to jail just because he tried to start Holy War III."

An ad hoc committee, known as Operation Mad Dog, met in Washington to study the Saddam problem. "Why not bring him to the U.S. from Baghdad on Eastern Airlines?" the chairman proposed.

"But Eastern Airlines is not flying any more. It has no pilots."

"That could make him a true believer." "Gentlemen, we must observe the rules of the Geneva Convention."

"Which means?"

"We can't shoot him, but we can push him down a manhole in Geneva."

"Our main objective is to prevent Saddam from finding the bluebird of happiness in Saudi Arabia."

"Gentlemen, what we seem to be saying is that we want something horrible to happen to Saddam, which will inflict pain and suffering on his mustache."

"Better than making him the grand marshal in Jordan's Rose Bowl Parade. Let's not ignore public opinion. The polls show that 5 percent of all Americans want Saddam to get nothing more than community service at one of Leona Helmsley's hotels. Ninety-five percent want him to catch a rare disease which can only be contracted from a dirty toothbrush."

"We can't look like bad sports. No one likes Saddam, but he does have a way with Scuds and poison gas. He must be treated with the respect we accord all first-class war criminals."

"Why not lock him up in a safe in a defunct savings and loan institution with a group of Kurds? That should compensate for the bad things he did in Kuwait."

"We're being too easy on him. The man must be punished for his past misdeeds. I say we put him in chains and make him dive for Dan Quayle's golf balls at the Burning Tree Country Club."

"We could grant him a pardon if he tells us where he hid all germs for germ warfare."

"How about making him wash dishes in a Tel Aviv pizza parlor? Then he'll know what fear is."

"Saddam may be a war criminal, but he is still a head of state. What say we stuff him in the nose of a ground-to-air missile and let him personally say bye-bye to Basra?"

"You could do that, or force him to take a marathon swim in the crude oil he poured all over the Gulf."

"But he might choke!"

"Nobody said that we had to give him the Nobel Peace Prize."

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Feb. 28, the 59th day of 1991. There are 306 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 28, 1854, some 50 opponents to slavery met at a schoolhouse in Ripon, Wis., to call for a new political group. The organization would later become known as the Republican Party.

On this date:

In 1827, the first U.S. railroad chartered to carry passengers and freight, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, was incorporated.

In 1844, Secretary of State Abel P. Upshur, Navy Secretary Thomas W. Gilmer and several other people were killed when a 12-inch gun aboard the USS Princeton exploded.

In 1849, the ship California arrived at San Francisco, carrying the first of the gold-seekers.

In 1861, the Territory of Colorado was organized.

In 1917, The Associated Press reported the United States had intercepted a German communication. The "Zimmerman note" proposed a German alliance with Mexico and Japan should the U.S. enter World War I.

In 1940, the first televised college basketball games were broadcast, by New York City station W2XBS, as Pittsburgh defeated Fordham, 57-37, and New York University beat Georgetown, 50-27, at Madison Square Garden.

In 1951, the Senate crime investigating committee headed by Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., issued a preliminary report which said at least two major crime syndicates were operating in the U.S.

Study: Nursing home's in many 65-year-old's cards

BOSTON (AP) — Nearly half of all Americans who turned 65 last year will spend time in nursing homes before they die, a new federal survey estimates.

The research, based on a large nationwide survey, underscores the growing importance of nursing homes in the lives of Americans as their longevity outstrips their ability to care for themselves.

"Over a lifetime, the risk of entering a nursing home and spending a long time there is substantial," the study concluded.

It also raises questions about whether nursing homes, which now cost an average of about $25,000 a year, should remain the mainstay of care for the elderly.

"When one in seven men and one in three women who reached the age of 65 in 1990 are projected to spend at least one year in a nursing home, society needs to undertake a fundamental reassessment of long-term care, rather than simply paying for what has been done in the past," the researchers wrote.

The study projects that of 2.2 million Americans who turned 65 last year, more than 900,000 of them, or 43 percent, are expected to enter a nursing home at least once before they die.

The study, based on a survey of 16,587 adults who died in 1986, was written by economist Peter

More nation stories/2D

Kemper and epidemiologist Christopher M. Murtaugh of the U.S. Agency for Health Care Policy Research in Rockville, Md. It was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Among the findings: — Nearly two-thirds of the people using nursing homes will be women. This is because women live longer than men, and since they outlive their spouses, there is no one at home to care for them.

— Nearly one-third of all people who reached 65 in 1990 will spend at least three months in a nursing home; 25 percent at least a year, and 9 percent at least five years.

— Thirteen percent of all women will spend at least five years in a nursing home, compared with 4 percent of men.

Exxon, Alaska near settlement of Valdez spill

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Exxon Corp. and state and federal officials have agreed to a broad framework for settlement of the governments' civil claims over the Exxon Valdez oil spill, a state official said Wednesday.

Alaska Attorney General Charles Cole said the settlement is "in the ballpark" of $1.2 billion to restore natural resources in Prince William Sound and to pay for further scientific studies and cleanup.

Prince William Sound was polluted with nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil when the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground in March 1989. It was the nation's largest oil spill and killed countless marine birds, mammals and fish.

Cole said at a news conference that agreement had been reached on the settlement figure and the payment terms, but he declined to disclose them pending a final settlement. He said the money would be paid over several years.

The attorney general plans to return to Washington on Monday to work on putting a settlement in writing.

The settlement talks are for the state's civil lawsuit and potential civil claims by the federal government.

The criminal case is scheduled to go to trial in Anchorage on April 10.

BBC donates $100,000 to broadcast museum

NEW YORK (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. on Wednesday donated $100,000 to the Museum of Broadcasting's fund-raising campaign for its new Manhattan home.

The money will go toward construction of a new Museum of Broadcasting building on West 52nd Street.

The museum is trying to raise $45 million for work on the new building, which is already under construction. It was designed by Philip Johnson and John Burgee. The new midtown site was donated by the museum's founder, the late William S. Paley.

A-line prevailing shape for women's clothes this season

By Holly Hanson
N.Y. Times News Service

Give spring fashion an A.
That's A for A-line, the prevailing shape for women's skirts, coats and dresses this season.

If the A-line looks a bit familiar, it should. Though it is closely associated with the youthful, kicky clothes of the '60s, the A-line silhouette actually made its debut in 1955. It was the brainchild of the late French designer Christian Dior, who also built collections around the H shape and the Y shape.

It was another 8 years before the A-line came into its own, though, thanks to young, forward-thinking French designers such as Andre Courreges and Pierre Cardin.

In their hands, the A-line dress became an indelible symbol of the 1960s, as much an emblem of the decade as the Beatles and "Easy Rider." (Just try to picture Twiggy wearing anything else.)

With the current '80s revival sweeping through the fashion industry, it's not surprising that Courreges is back in style. So, too, is his A-line.

And that's something women everywhere can appreciate, especially those who have suffered through the previous decade of tight, body-conscious clothes.

In contrast to show-no-mercy spandex dresses that fit like a second skin, the A-line dress is forgiving. It fits closely at the shoulders, then flares gently away from the body to the hem, which ends above the knee. Such a dress can hide a multitude of figure flaws, and it is especially kind to women who are bottom-heavy.

That's not the only reason designers around the world have embraced the A-line so strongly, however. What designers really like is its versatility. Though the A-line is a basic shape, it can be made to look radically different with a simple change of fabric.

In soft, silky fabrics, the A-line is a feminine dream, swirling gently around the body for a romantic look. Bill Blass designed one such dress in hot pink silk, using several strings of pearls to connect the back of the dress to the front.

Other looks in the soft style include Nicole Miller's thigh-high tank dress made of blocks of bright silk and Adrienne Vittadin-i's sleeveless rayon shifts (often with matching coats) in vibrant shades of yellow, pink, chartreuse and midnight blue.

Sturdier fabrics give the A-line a different look. In his collection for Anne Klein, Louis Dell'Olio cut matching coats and dresses from wool gabardine. France's Claude Montana paired short A-line jackets with short A-line skirts done in crisp orange cotton. These garments, like Dell'Olio's, stand away from the body with architectural precision.

Some designers take the A-line even further with stiff fabrics. Vinyl, another blast from the '60s, is a natural for this look, and it turns up most frequently in A-line raincoats. For example, in his collection for Perry Ellis, Marc Jacobs trimmed clear vinyl coats with colorful edging and used them as evening coats.

Vinyl has its sexy side as well.
Both Michael Kors and Carmelo
Pomodoro used vinyl for the shortest possible A-line skirts. Kors teamed his with stretchy knit tops, while Pomodoro added matching vinyl motorcycle jackets, in black, of course.

In a more whimsical vein, Isaac Mizrahi created sleeveless A-line blouses cropped to the waist, boosting the line from underneath with layers of small ruffles.

Clearly, the A-line hasn't lost its appeal in the design world. Retailers believe their customers will find it just as compelling. Bloomingdale's in New York recently opened a Courreges boutique, for example.

And then there are the retrospectives of '80s fashion, such as the Kimbell Art Museum's current exhibit, that are cropping up around the world.

When Courreges mounted a retrospective exhibit of his designs three years ago in Paris, patrons were overwhelmed by the up-to-date look of the clothes.

"I showed 20 (styles) from past collections, and everyone turned to me and said, 'You are the most modern of all the designers,'" he told Women's Wear Daily. "You see, I've always tried to look as far ahead as possible."

Lots of dots

You're sure to be chic in any form of polka dots this season. Pictured here are three different interpretations of the dot: a whimsical

Herrera, center; and underneath a classic suit

Listed below are highlights of trends to watch for in 1991. Handcrafted apparel and jewelry are definitely dominating the market. Here's a brief look at what's in store:

RETRO 60's

You can find some unique 60's styles at NETWorks from flower power to modern art prints. For the fashion-conscious young male, Chess King has what you are looking for. If you can't find it at any of our apparel stores, head down to Trendy T's because they just may have the iron-on you are looking for to put on their many fashion styles.

AFRICAN

Chess King and Jeans West can fix your jungle instincts with some batik patterns and ikat prints for your spring and summer wear. And take the beat to Miller's Outpost for primitive patterns.

WILD, WILD WEST

Ya-hoo on down to Margo's for some cowboy and indian motif printed t-shirts. Paul Harris and Lerner's can fulfill your denim needs to get you on your way to the wild, wild West.

VICTORIAN

Soft flowers for spring have sprung at Lerner's. You can also find those soft dresses and casual wear for that special time in your life at Motherhood. If you want some Victorian accessories or home decorations, visit Lotions & Potions.

You can see some fine suits and everyday wear at Hit or Miss.

RECYCLED

If you want to have Earth Day everyday, get a canvas bag from Miller's Outpost.

DECORATED APPAREL

Everyone is decorating — in their homes, on their clothes. Many of our fine apparel stores have the look you want and need. Take a look at Margo's, Cotton Patch Collectibles and J. Harris.

SEALIFE AND ECOLOGY

Take an oceanside break and stroll by Casual Corner for washed colors of sea blue, sea grass and coral in stripes and dots. You can also go fishing (for t-shirt sets) at Margo's.

OTHER TRENDS

Accessories for your every whim are at Claire's Boutique, Afterthoughts and Golden Chain Gang. You can never have enough beads and bangles.

Crystals and beads dominate the jewelry category. Every type of bead from bugle beads, seed beads, and recycled beach glass to Australian and Bohemian crystals.

Paper treasures — handcrafted uniquely shaped and brightly colored earrings, pins and hair ornaments. Military — tarnished silver and brass medallions and pins. New wave jewelry — light weight metals (aluminum and titanium) are coiled and geometrically shaped.

Sweaters made of easy cotton as winter changes into spring

By Deborah Hofmann
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — When the season is changing from lion to lamb, a cotton sweater lends just the right insulation, especially when the choices introduce color to a drab winter wardrobe.

Among the hot sellers around the country now are cotton sweaters with Melizan on the label.

Susan Melizan started the company six years ago. The 31-year-old Trinidad-born designer and her husband, Todd Conway, made sweaters on machines together that first year.

Slowly, they picked up a sales force and factories "with faith in us," she said. Annual sales went from $25,000 in 1985 to $1 million in 1990, and the business now has eight full-time employees in New York City.

"I believe in domestic inspiration, yarns and factories," she said. "There's no CEO, and we all shake hands with the UPS guy. We get our energy from being right in Manhattan. We don't go to Europe for ideas."

The company ships six collections a year, in four categories. Each type is contracted to a different small, often family-owned local production company, each with different specialties and hand-knitting machines.

One design is a textured leaf-stitch sweater that looks as if it were knitted on two needles instead of a simple machine. "Sort of sculptural," she said. "These sweaters drape well over leggings."

It comes in 12 colors, from muted tones like sea foam green and grape to bright fuchsia and turquoise. Tunic-length versions are $80, cropped ones $70. All are roomy, with wide crew necks and cuffs finished with a scalloped crocheted edge.

Ms. Melizan also makes a flat-knit turtleneck in the bright hues ($65). These can be worn under what she calls her "happy" patterned sweaters ($100 to $130). She designs 20 patterns a season, each using up to eight colors.

Ms. Melizan and her two designers find inspiration for these patterns from exhibitions, films and city streets. "It's stream of consciousness; we run around the city like sponges on legs," she said. "Each swatch is a composition, a painting."

A cropped harlequin sweater knitted in all the bright shades is $100. Another style ($100) has a black-and-white floral pattern inspired by ancient Egyptian borders.

It has a floppy 9-inch collar. A long color-blocked hooded cardigan ($130) has panels of every bright color in the collection. This spring Ms. Melizan introduced short- and long-sleeve shells ($38) with the same patterns as the sweaters in minuscule scale.

City, MISD may trade programs

■ City wants to pay for DARE program if MISD will pay salaries for crossing guards.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The city wants to pick up the full cost of a substance abuse education program in exchange for school district financing of crossing guards, City Manager Fred Poe said Wednesday.

The city has paid $90,000 annually in school crossing guard salaries and has financed $30,000 of the budget for the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program in Midland elementary schools.

Midland Independent School District, meanwhile, has financed $30,000 of the $117,000 annual DARE budget but has paid nothing for crossing guards, which are overseen by the city. The state this year granted $57,000 for DARE funding.

Poe said city officials will approach MISD within the next month and ask that the school district assume crossing guard management while the city would take over DARE.

"The school officials have said they would take a good look at it," Poe said.

Both MISD and the city could save money from the trade, he said. The city's cost after the exchange would fall from $90,000 for the guards to $60,000 for DARE. The school district, in turn, could save money by bringing in volunteers to perform crossing guard duties, he said.

"When we first started we thought we could get half the guards to be volunteers, but we were unsuccessful," Poe said.

None of the city's 19 crossing guards works for free. MISD, though, may be in a better position than the city to recruit volunteers through school organizations, he said.

"There's the fact that the PTAs and the schools are usually the ones requesting the crossing guards," Poe said.

The trade, he said, also would end the argument between city and school district over DARE funding.

City officials complained last year after MISD budgeted only $20,000 — $10,000 less than the previous year — for the program. Later that year, the district agreed to bump the funding back up to $30,000.

Initially developed by the U.S. Department of Justice for use in Los Angeles schools, DARE is a law enforcement program to prevent drug use among children.

The program, taught by Midland Police Department officers, was implemented in MISD elementary schools in the fall of 1989.

Assistant Superintendent William Denton called the city's offer "an interesting concept." MISD would carefully consider the trade, Denton said.

"We've never really gotten down to the talking phase yet," he said.

After reviewing a school crossing study Tuesday, the Midland City Council approved $5,500 in safety improvements to five intersections traversed by schoolbound children.

Councilmen approved erecting traffic control signals at Thomson Drive and Raymond Drive for Burnett Elementary School pupils. Also approved was adding flashing lights along Main Street and Parker Avenue for Crockett Elementary School pupils.

In addition, flashing lights and lengthened school zones are in store for Fannin Elementary School children traveling along Lanham Street and Neely Avenue. The children also will see an existing crosswalk and guard at Garfield Street at Cimmaron Drive moved to Fannin Avenue at Garfield.

Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator for the city, said the changes should be implemented by the start of next school year in August.

Jury sentences Odessan to 75 years for delivery of cocaine

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland jury on Wednesday sentenced an Odessa man who refused an eight-year plea bargain to 75 years in prison for delivery of less than half a gram of cocaine.

The seven-man, five-woman jury found Wendell Keith Robinson, 33, guilty of cocaine delivery Tuesday evening. Jurors handed down the sentence after the trial's punishment phase Wednesday in 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde.

Robinson's attorney, Bruce Foster, said he was shocked by the sentence and promised to appeal the verdict.

"It was an extremely excessive punishment for the crime," he said. "He's not any kind of big-time cocaine dealer and the poor little guy gets 75 years."

The sentence came after the Midland District Attorney's Office offered Robinson an eight-year prison term in return for a guilty plea, Assistant District Attorney Jan Baker said.

Ms. Baker, who prosecuted the case, said Robinson refused the offer and insisted on a jury trial. Robinson was arrested in December 1989 in connection with an undercover operation in which he sold .26 grams of cocaine to police officers at the Lakeside Apartments, 4410 N. Lanham.

The sale occurred in April 1989, and a grand jury indicted Robinson the following August. Ms. Baker said Midland authorities took Robinson into custody after his release from jail in Limestone County, where he was serving time for failure to pay child support.

Ms. Baker disputed claims by Foster that the state prejudiced jurors during the trial by introducing improper evidence about Robinson's criminal history.

Robinson's testimony that he'd never used or sold drugs allowed the prosecution to tell jurors about cocaine possession charges pending against him in Ector County, Ms. Baker said.

Cocaine delivery, a first-degree felony, is punishable by up to 99 years or life in prison.

Property rendition forms due

■ Business owners have until April 1 to file forms declaring taxable property.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Business owners have until April 1 to file property rendition forms with the Midland Central Appraisal District, tax officials said.

A rendition is a report a property owner files each year, listing taxable property he owns or manages as of Jan. 1, said Bob Kmiec, director of administration for the Midland Central Appraisal District.

The rendition form, which Kmiec has sent to area business owners, asks for a physical description of the property and equipment and furniture within the property, the date each item was acquired, the owner's cost and its selling price. A report on valuation is optional, he said.

Leon A. Willhite, executive director of the State Property Tax Board, said filing renditions benefits business property owners, because chief appraisers use the rendition report to establish the property's fair taxable value.

"When business personal property isn't rendered, the chief appraiser is forced to esti-

Peer pressure leads youths to take a drink

■ Recent survey shows that children as young as fourth graders have tried alcohol.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A recent survey by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse found that 57 percent of sixth graders, 39 percent of fifth graders, and 31 percent of fourth graders have consumed more than just a taste of alcohol.

Availability, peer pressure and social permissiveness have been targeted as major influences in a youngster's decision to take a drink, according to area officials involved in educating youngsters about substance abuse.

Pamela Bowerman, executive director of the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, said she wasn't surprised by the survey findings.

"I wouldn't call that high at all. Alcohol is the number one drug available at home," Ms. Bowerman said.

But availability is not the ranking force that leads children to drink, Ms. Bowerman said.

"What your friends do you do. Kids want to belong and the peer pressure is the strongest factor that contributes to alcohol use," she said.

Glenn Woods, coordinator of guidance and counseling for MISD, said he also sees peer pressure as a factor in youth consumption.

"Youngsters are being challenged to experiment all the way down to the third grade," Woods said.

And the age of experimentation is becoming younger and younger due to increased availability, Woods said.

Peers are only part of the problem, though. Attitudes of children are reflections of parents and society, said Midland Police Officer Dale Seago, coordinator of Midland DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education).

"Children will emulate their (parent's) behavior," Seago said.

"Dad does it. Mom does it." And parents condone such behavior, he said.

"As long as our attitudes toward drinking are acceptable in the country, a lot of the parents will allow their kids to try it," Seago said.

And when a child watching television sees that the drinker gets all the attention from the opposite sex and has the most fun, that makes drinking all the more alluring, Seago said.

"We've got to change the attitude in society that as long as you see it on TV, it's OK," Seago said.

Woods said that such media influences send a different message to youngsters than what is being taught in schools.

A not-so-obvious example is the commercial that states "Know when to say no," Woods said. The message implies that drinking is OK, he said. And although the message relates a cut-off time, the question is whether kids know when that is, he added.

"When youngsters get bombarded with mixed messages, they are more likely to experiment," Woods said.

He added that educating students, teachers, administrators and parents is the key to prevention.

Eric Fredlund, research analyst for the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, agreed. "The message I get is that parents need to talk to kids at a very early age about alcohol and drug abuse and smoking," he said.

Ms. Bowerman said she believes

Cowboy returns home after years of wandering

STANTON — The adventuresome cowboy philosopher rides an old motorcycle called "Horse."

It's an olive-drab, camouflaged machine that gets him to town and back to the ranch.

The maverick cowboy, Tex Houston, sports scuffed-up cowboy boots, well-worn blue jeans, khaki shirt, and an old baseball cap, which he swaps for his olive-drab helmet when he mounts old "Horse."

Daily, since he got out of the Special Forces and Vietnam, he wears at least one piece of olive-drab clothing — something of a memorial to the montagnards, those "hill people who are indigenous to Vietnam, and who made 'good warriors.' They're 'fine people.'"

"In my own funny little way, it's remembering what they did, their friendship."

Houston is sort of an eccentric, which suits him well.

Todd

"There goes that crazy Houston boy," some folks say, Houston reckons. "Some people call me 'eccentric,' and I consider that a compliment."

He lives alone, about 10 miles south of town, has communion with the birds of the field and the air, rides "old nags" on the range, writes and sculpts, once walked the 10 miles into town for a Camel cigarette, and doesn't think himself as macho. Doesn't even like the word or how it sounds.

Houston, who grew up ranching on the home place which his great-granddaddy, A.L. Houston, settled on in 1886, left home at 18 and returned when he was 42.

He did a bit of soldiering.

Between tours in France and Vietnam, he prospected for gold in the Superstition Mountains of Arizona, and ran into an old prospector, his friend, Al Morrow, who was murdered by dynamite on his own claim.

"We had a few gunfights," he says. "It was pretty hairy in those days."

Outside of gunfights, prospecting, setting off explosives, and soldiering for Uncle Sam, Houston, the world traveler, was in "some other things I can't talk about."

"There were two other brush fires that don't need to be explained."

After years of wandering, Houston returned home.

"I was just looking for a break, traveled around the world. I was sort of tired."

He returned to the ranch, where he does his adventure writing and sculpting, does his amateur radio work, watches the birds, tends to the range and cattle, and welcomes bird-watchers to his ranch. "They are mellowed-out folks and smart."

Houston wanted to get back to ranching while he's still young.

"I'm fair (at cowboying)," Houston says. "There's a lot of good cowboys out there. I don't even wear a big, wide cowboy hat."

He's 46.

"I'm a kid. I never want to grow up."

Fact is, he plans to skydive, fly a sailplane, and build an olive-drab sand-dune buggy equipped, for fun and play, with a machine-gun mount.

"If you want to do something, do it a 100 percent," Houston says. "Go for it."

Among his druthers is visiting libraries and museums.

"When I can find a museum, library and bar all together, I'm going to take out citizenship (there)."

He drifts up to the museum here in his old "cow clothes" to do his reading and research.

"I can go out to the ranch and stay there for a month and be happy," says the cowboy. "You've got to like and respect and deal with yourself one-on-one before you can like and respect anyone else."

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

She was born June 29, 1934, in Hamlin to Ollie Reese and Mattie Ann Shearer and was reared in Eden, where she graduated from high school. She married Billy Duckworth July 22, 1954, in Balinger, after he returned from Korea. They lived in Eden for the next five years and moved to Midland in 1959. She worked briefly for Levi Strauss before beginning work for M-Systems. She retired in 1985. She was a member of the Westside Church of Christ.

DRINK: Attitudes need changing

children's attitudes need to be changed as well as those that influence them. Peer pressure should be reversed so that kids feel pressured not to do drugs rather than do them, she said.

Other findings of the study released Tuesday were:

■ 13 percent of fourth graders, 20 percent of fifth graders and 31 percent of sixth graders have used tobacco.

■ 13 percent of fourth graders, 10 percent of fifth graders and 24 percent of sixth graders have sniffed inhalants.

■ 1 percent of fourth graders, 2 percent of fifth graders and 5 percent of sixth graders have used marijuana.

mate the value," Willhite said.

Texas law does not require a property owner to render a home or other property, but Willhite said that homeowners who do render are better able to exercise their rights as taxpayers.

By filing a rendition, property owners ensure a correct address on their value notices and tax bills, which can save the owner late fees on tax bills he does not receive.

"If we received a rendition form and still sent bills to the wrong address, we can extend the owner some slack," said Kmeic.

Kmeic said filing a rendition form could be beneficial to a new home owner if he paid less for the house than it was appraised for. By attaching the bill for the cost of the house to the form, the owner can challenge the appraised value.

Home owners also can use the rendition form to record an opinion of the property's value.

Property owners whose homes were damaged by storms, floods or fire may file a report of decreased value — a version of the rendition form — with the chief appraiser.

The rendition form and report of decreased value form are available at the appraisal district office, located at 4631 Andrews Highway. For more information, call the district at 699-4991.

Educators' group attacks legislators

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A group that represents school board members and administrators attacked the House leadership Wednesday for failure to support a school finance equalization bill the group favors, and were blasted in return by a House member who has been supporting their cause.

Jim Wilson, a school board member from Odessa and the legislative committee chairman of the Texas Association of School Boards, acted as spokesman for the group at a news conference in the Capitol.

In an angry response, Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, lashed out at the Texas School Finance Working Group, accusing its members of failing to do their job of lining up support for their position in the House.

The Working Group coalition opposes a school finance equalization bill sponsored by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, chairwoman of the House Public Education Committee, and a bill by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

The Senate has approved Parker's bill and sent it to the House. The House is expected to debate the two bills today, although Glossbrenner has said she might postpone consideration until next week.

The bills are an attempt to meet an order from the state Supreme Court to equalize funding between property-tax rich and poor school districts.

Rep. Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca, is sponsoring a bill for the Working Group, but the bill does not have enough support to pass the House because legislators believe it would cost far more than they are willing to approve in tax increases.

Organizations that make up the Working Group include the Texas Association of School Boards, Texas Association of School Administrators, Texas Association of Suburban Schools, Texas Association of Rural Schools, the Equity Center, Texas Association of Budget Balanced Schools, Texas School Alliance and Council of Urban School Districts.

Wilson said at a news conference that the group met with the House leadership Wednesday morning.

One version of a statement to be read by Wilson, which was given to the media, said that "Our goal in this meeting was to negotiate a compromise. Instead, we were given an ultimatum by the House legislative leadership — an ultimatum which we cannot and will not accept."

But Wilson read from a revised and more complete statement, which also was given to the media, that omitted the remarks about an ultimatum. When asked about the deletion, Wilson said the House leaders told the group that certain amendments would be offered to the bills, "and we were told that if we don't accept that, then everything is out, so that was kind of the ultimatum."

At the end of the news conference, Rep. Stiles moved to the podium, saying, "Hey, I'm a member of the Working Group and I'm fixing to have a press conference, as soon as these guys move."

In an emotional response, Stiles said he wanted to tell members of the press that the Working Group had asked him and Linebarger to file the group's bill. He said he and Linebarger agreed, but had told the group, "please don't let us fall on the sword; get us 76 votes." The 76 votes would be a majority of the 150 House members needed to approve a bill.

"Ms. Glossbrenner told these folks this morning, 'you give me 76 votes and we'll roll with this bill,'" Stiles said.

"It is not fair to come up here and say the Legislature is not doing its job, because the Legislature is trying," Stiles said. "It's not fair to Linebarger, it's not fair to Glossbrenner, it's not even fair to Parker."

When asked why the group had not gotten the votes needed, Parker said it was "because the Republican members, and other Democrats — and let's just say members; let's don't say Republicans — the members who would have to vote for this bill don't want to vote for the funding. And that's the bottom-line truth."

Sen. Parker has estimated the Working Group bill would cost from $4 billion to $6 billion a year more for school funding, compared with the $1.2 billion that would his bill would add to school spending. Currently, Texas schools have a budget of about $12 billion, with a little less than half of that coming from the state and the rest of local property taxes.

Working Group members estimated their bill would require about $3 billion more for schools. They want to limit or eliminate property taxes, and have the state provide much more of the money.

Wilson said the only way to provide the money would be total reform of the state's taxing system. He said he would support a state income tax to achieve that, although he could not speak for all Texas Association of School Board members.

Group sets community prayer lunch

Staff Report

A community wide prayer luncheon will be the focus of World Day of Prayer Friday. Soup and sandwiches will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive. The program, sponsored by Church Women United and the Midland Association of Churches, begins at noon.

Accounts set up for woman who needs transplant

Staff Report

Accounts have been established to help former Midlander Ruth Burt raise the $25,000 needed to secure a place on a waiting list for a kidney-pancreas transplant at Methodist Hospital in Dallas.

A diabetic since age 9, Ms. Burt is the daughter of Lonnie and Pearl Cardwell, formerly of Midland and now residents of Maude. Her sisters, Rosey Hawkins and Rita Bernhart, are both Midlanders.

A former employee of City Contractors Service Co. in St. Paul, Ms. Burt has been forced to stop working and undergo dialysis.

Doctors have determined that a kidney transplant alone will not improve Ms. Burt's condition. A dual kidney-pancreas transplant will be required.

Donations can be made to the American Transplant Association's Ruth Burt Fund, P.O. Box 822123, Dallas, Texas 75382-2123; or in care of American National Bank, P.O. Box 1268, Wylie, 75096.

Senate approves two proposals regulating lawmakers' ethics

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate approved two ethics proposals Wednesday to put public officials and lobbyists on their best behavior.

A proposed constitutional amendment providing for a bipartisan state ethics commission, with broad powers, was adopted 26-3.

The measure is subject to voter approval at a Nov. 5 statewide election, if it passes the House.

A bill, which only needs legislative approval, was sent to the House on a 28-0 vote. Both measures were sponsored by Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville.

The constitutional amendment, a relatively short document, is needed to establish the commission. The other legislation, quite lengthy, spells out the duties of the commission, its membership, its powers, and other details.

The bill would create the ethics commission to enforce rules, limit lobbyists' expenditures on legislators, ban local governments from hiring independent lobbyists to sway the Legislature, limit campaign contributions and ban honoraria for legislators and statewide elected officials.

State agency officials, as well as legislators and staff personnel, would be covered by the proposal.

Senate debate stressed the commission's ability to remain above political partisanship as a key to ethical behavior in state government.

The importance of ethics was underscored by a 10-minute appearance by Gov. Ann Richards, who has stated it is among the three most crucial legislative issues in 1991.

The commission would include two members each appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker. Each official would appoint one person from each of the major political parties. The secretary of state would serve as an ex-officio member.

The controversial issue of legislative pay, which has not been raised in 16 years, would be delegated to the commission, which could recommend higher salaries that would have to be approved by the voters.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said any hint that the commission is not objective or bipartisan would be a "serious mistake."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said he did not think the proposals could bring about ethics reform.

"I think it is absolutely silly for anybody to think that putting words on paper is going to make somebody ethical. Ethical has to do with what you believe and the self-imposed rules that you abide by," Parker said.

Among the bill's provisions is one that would stop a fund-raising technique that Glasgow has called the "Ann Richards scheme."

Current state law prohibits state officials from collecting campaign contributions during regular sessions of the Legislature. Richards, while treasurer two years ago, found a loophole that allowed politicians to continue collecting money that had been pledged before the legislative cutoff date.

Education panel OKs budget

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House higher education committee on Wednesday looked at state revenues available to spend and reluctantly approved a budget that would slash money for colleges and universities by an average of almost 6.5 percent.

The proposed two-year budget next goes to the House Appropriations Committee and then the full House. It eventually will become part of a state budget that the Legislature must approve by Aug. 31.

Gov. Ann Richards and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock have said the Legislature is going to have to come up with new tax money for the state. Ms. Richards said a tax increase is inevitable since the House refused Tuesday to submit a proposal for a state lottery to voters via a constitutional amendment. Richards had estimated a lottery would have raised more than $700 million next year.

The 8-1 vote by the House Higher Education Budget and Oversight Committee cut $342 million from 1991's budget.

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, committee chairman, said previously that he hopes the Legislature can come up with enough additional money to at least restore the cuts. That would not allow anything, however, for growth, new programs or new buildings and equipment for a rising enrollment.

The budget would cut the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's spending by 9.8 percent, or $1.5 million, for the two-year fiscal period.

The committee recommended operating budgets of about $7 million each year for UTPE, down from $7.76 million in 1991.

The committee recommended cuts of 10 percent and 8 percent, respectively, in aid to Midland College and Odessa College, as the Midland campus would receive $5 million each year and the Odessa campus would receive $7.74 million each year.

Howard Junior College would see an 18.8 percent decline, to $4.19 million.

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Substance may block spread of AIDS virus

By Jean Carper

AIDS researchers have discovered that a natural substance found in certain foods and human cells powerfully suppresses the spread of the AIDS virus in test-tube experiments. The compound is glutathione, long known to somehow help rev up the body's defense systems.

The research team, headed by Dr. Alton Meister, Cornell University Medical College, stimulated human cells in test tubes to produce high amounts of the AIDS virus.

When they added glutathione compounds, the replication of the AIDS virus slowed dramatically. In fact, up to 90 percent of the virus spread was blocked. The more glutathione, the greater the effect.

The study was triggered, says Meister, by observations that AIDS patients have exceptionally low levels of glutathione.

It's clear, says Meister, that a glutathione deficiency may contribute to the spread of AIDS. But only future tests on AIDS patients will reveal whether giving doses of glutathione can actually help control the disease, he cautions.

The body's cells make glutathione. It is also concentrated in broccoli, parsley, spinach, fresh pork and beef, and enters the bloodstream when such foods are eaten, according to Dr. Dean P. Jones, a glutathione expert at Emory University in Atlanta.

Zinc for skin diseases? Whether zinc is missing in the diets of people with skin diseases is controversial. For one reason, zinc deficiencies rarely show up in their blood.

However, Swedish researchers now report that a marginal zinc deficiency may be subtle and more difficult to detect. Even though the deficiency is not evident in the blood, it is often apparent in the outer layers of the skin itself, they say.

Recently, dermatologists at University Hospital in Uppsala compared skin biopsies of normal people and those with skin diseases, such as acne, psoriasis and dermatitis herpetiformis, all characterized by red, raised lesions that often burn or itch.

Overwhelmingly, in those with skin disorders, zinc was low in epidermis of the skin, but "normal," in the blood, they found. Worst were skin zinc levels in some patients with psoriasis.

The investigators suggest that sufferers of such diseases may have longtime chronic zinc deficiencies and perhaps a greater than normal need for zinc that could be met by zinc supplements.

Before treating yourself with zinc, consult your doctor. Zinc in doses much higher than 15 to 30 milligrams daily may be harmful.

Sugar, fat and ulcers Eating too much sugar and too little vegetable fat may help bring on peptic ulcers. So suggest two new British studies.

Researchers at the University of Nottingham recently compared the diets of people with and without duodenal ulcers. They found that those who ate more refined sugar were four to five times more apt to have ulcers. How sugar might promote ulcers is a mystery.

Additionally, British researchers at the University of Edinburgh argue that a type of fatty acid, linoleic acid in certain vegetable oils, may help stave off ulcers. They point to increased use of such oils as a possible prime reason why ulcers in Western countries have declined by nearly 50 percent in the last 30 years.

By taking fat biopsies, they found that duodenal ulcer victims generally had less linoleic acid in their tissue than healthy non-ulcer people.

Theory is that linoleic acid suppresses acid production and promotes hormonal actions that protect intestinal cells from damage. Corn and safflower oils are high in linoleic acid.

Southwest donates more than peanuts

EL PASO (AP) — Sherry Aaronson's students usually get peanuts from their teacher when she takes a flight on Southwest Airlines. This month, they get round-trip tickets to the state capital.

The 14 students from Alamo School in south El Paso, a neighborhood filled with low-income housing, will get a closer look Thursday at some of the Texas history and government they've been studying.

Southwest Airlines donated the tickets for the students, Aaronson, two other teachers and two parents to make the trip. The Radisson Hotel in Austin is donating rooms.

"All of this is the result of a request from a very creative teacher," said Tracy Martin, manager of civic and charitable contributions for Southwest Airlines.

Ms. Aaronson said she usually asks Southwest airlines flight attendants to give her enough bags of peanuts to take back to her class. But on a recent flight she asked for a little more.

Her students also wrote letters to Southwest in early December.

"Dear Sir," Eddie Alvarado wrote, "In social studies we study about Texas. Southwest is the greatest. ... I have never been in an airplane before. Could you please donate to us some tickets so we could maybe study more about Texas history? I have good manners too."

Only two of Ms. Aaronson's students have been on planes before.

Ms. Aaronson also has asked Gov. Ann Richards to meet with her students. Jenny Ribak, a Richards' staff member, said Richards will meet with the children Friday afternoon.

3 indicted for defrauding state of fuel taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Three Houston-area business people have been indicted, accused of defrauding the state of more than $400,000 in motor fuel taxes, officials said.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said Wednesday's charges brought to 85 the total number of indictments handed up against 22 defendants in a continuing investigation of fuels tax fraud.

"People who steal from the state and spend the money on themselves ought to have to go into our public schools and apologize to the children whose money they're taking," added Comptroller John Sharp.

"They're no better than grade school bullies who shake kids down for lunch money," he said.

So far, seven people have been convicted and 15 await trial in the probe. More than 60 investigations continue, Earle said.

Since the investigations began in 1988, the comptroller's office has conducted more than 250 fuels tax audits, discovering more than $145 million in unpaid state taxes, officials said.

Tax action reportedly delayed against Lewis' firm

AUSTIN (AP) — Two state tax officers say they were told by an Austin-based supervisor to "hold off" action against a Fort Worth business co-owned by House Speaker Gib Lewis, the Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he knew nothing about the alleged incident. He said he was just a stockholder, not involved in management of the shooting range and gun business.

"I am not a working or not a participating owner of that company. Never have been," Lewis said. "Case closed."

The tax officials told the newspaper that the business, known as Shooters' Palace, owed thousands of dollars in delinquent taxes.

"I just followed the routine, calling them about the (tax) liability, making arrangements for payments until we got instructions from Austin to do otherwise," said Ted Witt, a tax enforcement officer in the state comptroller's Fort Worth office.

Witt's supervisor, Sue McMurray, said Stephen Rosales, then the comptroller's regional director, phoned her on July 26, 1989, to ask that collection efforts be stopped against the business, the newspaper reported.

Unlike thousands of other taxpayers who faced similar collection efforts, Lewis' company — legally known as Tarrant County Gun Club Inc. — received special treatment from Bullock's staff, the American-Statesman reported.

Lewis said Wednesday that he had been in the business only "six or seven times" since it was started.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to career changes, beginning in early spring. A business expansion will lead to larger profits by June. Choosing the right partners is the key to success in September. A friendship could turn romantic as next winter approaches. Spend the December holiday surrounded by your loved ones. Modifying your lifestyle in January 1992 will improve your health.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Broadway star Tommy Tune, actor Mario Andretti, actor Charles Durning, actress Bernadette Peters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your business interests benefit from advertising. Be aware of your instinctive resistance to authority. You will be happiest working on your own. Pay closer attention to legal matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not keep your feelings bottled up inside. Talking things out with your romantic partner will relieve tensions. Stick to a healthy diet and regular exercise. You may not be getting enough rest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do everything possible to consolidate recent gains and joint ventures. Expensive plans merit further scrutiny. A new friendship deepens. Lost articles will surface in an unusual place. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Startling changes lead to a positive new attitude. Old prejudices are left behind. Although domestic commitments could put a crimp in your social life, the sacrifices you make will be very worthwhile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An older person could play havoc with your personal plans. Enjoy a social event without getting involved with an attractive member of the opposite sex. Give a younger person a helping hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Heed your own instincts. Your ability to foresee future trends serves you well in business today. Accept a relationship for what it is. Love blossoms anew!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be able to wield more authority than you realize. However, play things safe by going about your business quietly. Let your intuition furnish the answers in romance. Greater rapport is possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A genial, open-minded approach will win people over to your side. Go after something important to your future.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are fun-loving, gracious and loyal. Their gift for concentration helps them make excellent marks in school. They are good readers who retain much of what they have read. Never ask these Pisceans for advice unless you want straight answers! Although their instincts are excellent, their candor can make others uncomfortable. They sometimes wound their loved ones without even realizing it.

Your relatives and friends are very supportive. Repay favors as soon as you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): World events have an ominous ring. Rely on your intuition when making travel decisions. As financial problems begin to subside, a close relationship heats up. You enjoy the attention!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Showcase your special talents and you will impress those who really count. A raise or promotion could be in the works. Ignore stockmarket tips from well-intentioned friends; trust the experts!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Adopt a give-and-take approach to sensitive people and situations. Loyal friends and associates do a lot to boost your spirits. Show your appreciation for their efforts in a tangible way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your tremendous expertise in business or science today. Others are happy to follow your lead. Express your gratitude to someone who has stood by you for years. Loved one shares a delicious secret!

Dear Tannah:

As you know, heavy filming commitments have limited the amount of bridge I have been able to play. However, I thought our readers might like this hand from one of the few pair events I did manage to squeeze in.

I was a little peeved that the opponents had sidestepped a contract of six clubs—with the two-no-trump opener to my right, I was confident of being able to take two trump tricks against that slam. Six no trump, however, was another matter.

I led the ten of spades, which declarer won in dummy to lead a club. When my partner showed out, declarer rose with the ace and continued with the queen. To cut a long story short, declarer, who had only 11 tricks, deduced I was long in the black suits, so he finessed East for the queen of hearts and went down a trick.

We were lucky. Declarer should have made the slam.

low club. I can't win with the king without setting up the club suit for declarer, so dummy's jack wins.

With a second club trick in the bank, declarer can now set about developing three tricks in hearts in perfect safety. South comes to hand with a spade and leads a heart to the nine. Whether it wins or loses, declarer has three sure heart tricks in addition to four diamonds, three spades and two clubs. If the finesse does happen to lose, no return from East can harm declarer.

As ever,
Omar

Daniels' Volunteer Jam to pay tribute to troops

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Blues great B.B. King, rock 'n' roll's John Kay and Steppenwolf and country singers Tanya Tucker, Joe Diffie and Travis Tritt are just some of the acts promised for Charlie Daniels' 14th Volunteer Jam concert.

"This is just the tip of the iceberg," said Daniels, whose own five-piece band also will appear at the May 4 concert at Nashville's Starwood Amphitheatre.

Volunteer Jam concerts began in 1974 and were held annually until the mid 1980s and periodically since. The last one was in 1987. Daniels likes to come up with surprise performers.

The May concert will be dedicated to allied forces in the Persian Gulf, whether they are still there or home, Daniels said Tuesday.

"I'm so proud of our armed forces overseas," the country-rock 'n' roll star said.

Daniels and his band are best known for their hit record "The Devil Went Down to Georgia."

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bob Hope and wife Delores broke ground for a chapel to be named for Mrs. Hope at Bob Hope Village, a home for Air Force widows and dependents.

"The military becomes so important at times like this," the comedian said Tuesday. "You forget, you know, when we're not at war that they're there, but you don't realize how important they are. They stand out very large at moments like this."

The Delores Hope All-Faiths Chapel is scheduled to be dedicated in October when Hope will return to this Florida Panhandle city for a benefit performance.

Mrs. Hope has gone on many of Hope's trips over the years to visit American troops, including a visit to Saudi Arabia shortly before fighting broke out in the Persian Gulf.

Hope said Tuesday his wife almost stole the show on that trip.

"She got up there and sang a couple of songs and did a couple things and almost walked off with it," he said. Then he deadpanned, "I don't allow that, you know."

AT WIT'S END Rushing nowhere to relax

By Erma Bombeck

You know what's wrong with people today? They can't wait for cheese to melt. Everything has to happen now.

Bombeck

"Get instant results." "Coffee in an instant." "Be an instant lottery winner." I've never seen a group so impatient to realize instant gratification.

There's a new watch out that doubles as a biological clock. It not only ticks away the seconds of lovemaking, it is color-coded to indicate when it's a good time to conceive. There's no doubt in my mind that newer ones will come equipped with a wake-up alarm.

Are you pregnant? There's an instant test to find out. Is it going to be a boy or a girl? Who wants to wait nine months to find out? There's a test for that too.

There was a time when the only thing that forced patience on us was the interminable wait for our income tax refund. The other night on TV there was an ad for a loan company that would advance your refund as soon as you filed your return.

What's the hurry?

Elections used to carry with them some mystique. Harry Truman went to bed not knowing if he was going to awaken as the president. Thanks to voter samplings, winners and losers today know the outcome before the polls close.

"Photos developed in one hour." "Buy new glasses on your lunch hour." "Lose 10 pounds while you sleep." "If you don't get your pizza in an hour, we pay for it."

I've observed my grown kids. While they're napping their 30-second cup of coffee, television is reading headlines out loud to them. Their animals get five seconds to wet on a bush before their owners leave for the gym. Stephen King reads his books to them while they're on a treadmill, and they finish their toilette at traffic lights.

They rarely get out of their cars for anything anymore. A drive-in is faster. While they're listening to their messages on their answering machines, they're microwaving dinner. They don't waste time opening anything but first-class mail. To watch television with them is like twirling in a teacup at Disneyland. The picture changes every five seconds during the commercial breaks. They wear now/pay later; eat now/pay later; vacation now/pay forever. Where are they going at such breakneck speed, and what do they do with the time that they save?

It makes our kids crazy that we don't own an answering machine. They have to let the phone ring 10 times to know we're not home. It's the only relaxation they get all day.

Green fast becoming new fashion neutral

N.Y. Times News Service

Green, in all its subtle gradations, is fast becoming the new neutral. Are you among those who find black banal and beige boring? Or perhaps you think gray is a bit too grim, navy nothing new and white too bright (not to mention a chore to keep clean). If so, then the new off-tone greens are for you.

Take loden cloth as the key. This hearty, misty gray-green wool from Tyrol has long been a favorite in Europe.

As long as the green you wear is not sharp — like grass, kelly or emerald — it is a perfect foil or mix with almost every color including all the other neutrals. What more can you ask from a new neutral?

Personal style is born for expectant moms

By Trish Barr
Copley News Service

Being pregnant used to mean nine months of wearing the uniform — paneled pants and a blouse with a Peter Pan collar and a bow under the chin. Or worse yet, one of those T-shirts labeled "BABY" with an arrow pointing to the protruding stomach.

Definitely not a fashion statement.

Fortunately for women anticipating childbirth in the '90s, maternity fashion finally has moved out of the '50s. Now women can retain their personal style through most, if not all, of their pregnancy. In fact, they are being encouraged to do so.

"The most important thing is to keep whatever style you had before you were pregnant, whether that be classy preppy, wild and funky or classic Chanel," said fashion consultant Diane Stocker.

"And if you like a certain look, go out and find it in a bigger size. You don't have to buy only maternity clothes," said Madeleine Pavel, a fashion show producer and model.

Your image, said Rebecca Matthias, president of Mothers Work maternity clothing, is 80 percent what you wear and 20 percent how you comb your hair.

"What you wear is paramount. You need to keep the image you had before. Don't change it one iota," she said.

Matthias noted that more than half of the women ages 18 to 44 who are having babies are working women. When they shop for clothes, they look for natural fibers, classic designs and sophisticated styles.

"Color is very important in the pregnant woman's wardrobe,"

Matthias said.

Her company takes its cue from New York's Seventh Avenue designers: Ann Taylor, Liz Claiborne, Donna Karan. Of course, she noted, color varies from person to person and is dictated by what a woman was comfortable with before she got pregnant.

"Use brighter colors to pick up your appearance," Matthias said. "Or go to black, because it's a basic color and it goes with what you can still wear. Also, it's slimming."

"This is a perfect time to be pregnant, because of all the fashions that are in style right now: the baby-doll, tunics, A-lines, Empire, leggings," said Lisa Longworth, fashion coordinator for Nordstrom stores.

What is most important, Longworth added, is the short skirt. "It's so important not to have all that fabric flowing around the legs." Couple it with a long jacket, which also looks great over leggings, and you're right in style with today's fashion silhouette, she said. "Focus on the silhouette and that will draw attention away from the fact that you are pregnant."

All the usual rules of camouflage apply when you're pregnant, Pavel said, including buttons down the front, crisscrossed material in front and vertical lines. At seven months, the expectant mother should add an extra set of shoulder pads to offset the burgeoning belly, Pavel suggested. Bold ear and neck accessories draw the eye to the face, as does a good hairstyle, she said.

Don't be afraid, she added.

"Show some cleavage. You might as well go for it while you've got it. It's all about being adventuresome and not thinking, 'Oh, I'm pregnant so I can't do that.'"

Because she was pregnant during the holidays, Pavel bought a black sequined dress with polka dots in red, green and yellow.

"It's important to feel festive during the holidays," she said. "I saw this exact same dress in a Bergdorf Goodman catalog in a regular size."

Both Pavel and Stocker noted that for the first six or seven months, a woman can wear regular clothes, upsized. "Or borrow from hubby. Wear his sweaters and things," Stocker said.

"A lot of it is attitude and how you feel about yourself," she said. So keep up with the facials and manicures. Get your hair styled regularly and maintain your makeup. Don't forget to exercise, she added.

Dana Rosen of A Pea in the Pod clothing chain advises women to "buy quality. Purchase items that you would wear before, during and after pregnancy." For the office, she suggests timeless, classic fashions. But for weekends, experiment with fun looks such as leggings and oversized tops, she said. She suggests looking for clothes that can be adjusted to fit your changing figure, such as styles with elastic waists or that can be belted and accessorized after the baby is born.

"With the right planning, a woman can turn her pregnancy into a fashion season of its own," Rosen said.

This year, fashionable brooches are big or clustered — and floral

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

It's not that brooches are new. This winter though, pins have become a punctuation point.

There is nothing shy about the size of the new brooches. Bigger is definitely better. At the recent Paris collections, for instance, Anna Wintour, the editor of American Vogue, was wearing one the shape and almost the size of a sunflower on the left side of her jacket.

The pin was made of golden-toned metal leaves surrounding a chunky pearl-encrusted center.

Also in Paris, the couturier Christian Lacroix illustrated the newest way to wear brooches, scattering several over a suit jacket.

Lacroix's designs were flowers too; one was pinned on a sleeve, another on a shoulder, yet another on the lapel and still another on a pocket.

This arrangement, of course, is for the adventurous. But a woman with a special knack — and the right brooches — could wear a cluster of them placed strategically around the collarbone area of a jacket or a dress.

Multiple brooches though should have some vague relationship, like flower shapes. (Flowers are big right now in costume jewelry.)

A word of advice: Keep other accessories minimal.

Eliminate the necklace or wear only a simple one, and earrings should not be too dominant.

DEAR ABBY

Suicide leaves family struggling to pick up pieces

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My brother committed suicide last November. This tragic loss has brought out emotions that I never knew I had. My family is struggling to find answers to the questions that surface after a loved one chooses a permanent solution to a temporary problem.

Van Buren

I started attending Survivors of Suicide meetings, which have helped a great deal. I know the painful feelings that a survivor of suicide experiences, and I wrote the "1-2-3's of Survival" to help those who are faced with such a trauma. — COPING IN FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR COPING: Please accept my sympathy on the tragic loss of your brother. It is reassuring to know that you and your family have gained a measure of comfort and perspective through the support of other survivors of suicide. I am printing your "1-2-3's of Survival" in the hope that it will help others who have experienced feelings of helplessness and grief after losing a loved one to suicide:

1. Accept what we cannot change.
2. Believe in a higher power.
3. Seek support when the need arises.
4. Do not repress your feelings.
5. Express your feelings to someone you trust.

6. Forgive your loved one.
7. Allow yourself time to grieve.
8. Help your family members through their grief.
9. Live in the present, and put the past behind you.
10. Keep those special memories of your loved one close to your heart.
11. Make time for yourself.
12. Pick up the pieces of your life and slowly put them back together.
13. Quit blaming yourself.
14. Take good care of your health; focus on survival and hope for the future.
15. Dwell on the positive, and your zest for life will return.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 43-year-old divorced male. (No children, fortunately.) I would like to propose marriage to a very lovely 31-year-old woman. My question: Should I buy a diamond ring and surprise her with it? Or should I propose first, and let her pick out her own ring? She has never been married. — H.W. (MY REAL INITIALS)

DEAR H.W.: Don't surprise her. Propose first. And if she accepts, invite her to go with you to pick out the ring.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter in your column about older persons who live alone "falling," I had to write. Since approximately one-third of the elderly fall annually, it is a common problem.

The risk of falling can be reduced substantially by identifying those medical conditions that increase the risk of falls and by altering the environment.

For instance: area rugs, extension cords, high-heeled shoes, slippery floors and poor lighting (especially on stairways) are all correctable hazards. Medical conditions such as swollen legs, low blood pressure, impaired vision, confusion, leg weakness and arthritis can also contribute to falls — but are potentially treatable. In addition, some medications — including those which can be obtained without a prescription — can also increase the risk of falling. Thus, one's drugs should be reviewed regularly by a physician. Alcohol intake, even in small amounts, can impair balance and predispose one to falling.

I hope these comments are useful to your readers. In addition, a pamphlet titled "Safety for Older Consumers — Home Safety Checklist" may be obtained without charge from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. — NEIL M. RESNICK, M.D., CHIEF, GERIATRICS, BRIGHAM AND WOMEN'S HOSPITAL, HARVARD MEDICAL SCHOOL

DEAR DR. RESNICK: Thank you for a valuable letter. Anyone interested in obtaining a booklet should write to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, 5401 Westward Ave., Bethesda, Md. 20207.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. ■ Defending champ Fort Worth Southwest is among six teams vying for the 1991 Tournament of Champions high school baseball trophy.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

As the 17th Annual Tournament of Champions opens today at Angels Stadium, local high school baseball fans will again be treated to some of the better prep play in the state.

The six-team field includes always tough Lubbock Monterey and Fort Worth Southwest, which won last season's Tournament of Champions, along with Midland High, Midland Lee, El Paso Riverside and Del Rio.

The tournament's double-elimination play begins with Lee taking on Del Rio at 5:30 p.m. today, followed by MHS facing Riverside at 8 p.m. Monterey and Southwest drew byes in the first round, and will begin play in winners bracket action Friday.

Lee is coming off a season-opening doubleheader at Monterey Tuesday, an affair that saw the Rebels draw a split after losing 5-4 and winning 9-5 to go 1-1 for the season.

The Rebs will face a Del Rio team that boasts six seniors back from an 18-9 team in 1990. The Rams have gone 29-22 in two years under head coach Edward "Hodie" Garcia, but Garcia said his main concern is with a lack of pitching.

"We only have three players with any kind of pitching experience. We do have some players who threw on the junior varsity last year, so we hope one or more of them can develop into varsity-caliber pitchers," he said.

Coming off a bi-district win over Monterey in 1990, MHS is also off to a 1-1 start after a doubleheader split in Lubbock Tuesday, as the Bulldogs downed Lubbock Coronado 9-1 after falling 8-7 in Game One.

As for MHS' opponent today, Riverside can claim plenty of experience. The Rangers started five sophomores in 1990, and finished the year with a 14-10 record. Returning players who claimed honors last year are pitcher Gabriel Ara-

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian seems to be sending mixed signals about his coaching future at UNLV.

In one report, Tarkanian said he's looking into coaching an unnamed NBA team. On Wednesday, he slightly altered his stance to, "I would be interested in looking at NBA offers."

While Tarkanian has often hinted about going to the NBA, the latest reports come on the heels of yet another NCAA inquiry into Tarkanian's basketball program.

The NCAA is expected to decide this week whether four UNLV players violated regulations by not paying hotel phone and room service charges during recruiting visits. The school was notified by letter of inquiry that the NCAA legislative services committee was looking into the matter. The players reportedly involved are Larry Johnson, George Ackles, Evric Gray and Bobby Joyce.

"This is one more form of harassment from the NCAA against our program," Tarkanian said. "These are nice kids. They don't deserve this. It's very unfortunate."

The beleaguered Tarkanian, feuding with the NCAA for 19 years, may be getting tired of inquiry after inquiry.

Pugh recalls glory days

■ Former Dallas Cowboy great discusses a fateful play in 1967's 'Ice Bowl.'

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Though Jethro Pugh's 14-year career as a defensive tackle with the Dallas Cowboys included leading the team in quarterback sacks for five straight years, he was an often overlooked part of the original Dooomsday Defense.

Drafted out of Elizabeth City State University in North Carolina prior to the 1965 season, the native Tar Heel may be recalled as the man on the receiving end of Jerry Kramer's most famous block. The block that allowed Bart Starr to score on a quarterback sneak and the Green Bay Packers to beat Dallas for the second straight time in the NFL championship game, 21-17.

And though any television footage of that 1967 game — which came to be known as the "Ice Bowl" because it was played in sub-freezing Wisconsin weather — always ends with Starr scoring that TD late in the game, Pugh has come to grips with the play.

"The first couple of years after that game it bothered me quite a bit, especially the first year," admitted Pugh, who was in Midland last month to speak at the Midland Angels Sports Banquet.

"Kramer had written a book called 'Instant Replay.' It was a No. 1 seller and on every newsstand. It was a long, long off-season because I suffered from frostbite in my toes and fingers, and was reminded of it constantly."

"The worst thing about it was that we lost the football game. It was one of those games we thought we could win and maybe should have won. I really believe if the field wasn't frozen we would have won it."

Two straight league championship games resulted in two losses to the Packers.

Five years later, the Cowboys played the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl V, only to lose 16-13 on a game ending 32-yard field goal by the Colts' Jim O'Brien. Bob Lilly, the Jethro Pugh relaxes at the Midland Country Club last month.

Cowboys' Hall of Fame right tackle who Pugh played much of his career beside, was so disgusted after the loss he threw his helmet toward other end zone. The Cowboys became known as the team that "couldn't win the big one."

After a sluggish start in 1972, Dallas ended the regular season with seven straight wins and the NFC East crown, then defeated Minnesota and San Francisco in the playoffs to land in its second straight Super Bowl. Pugh ended the regular season with 17 sacks.

The Cowboys finally won the big one in a 24-3 romp over the Miami Dolphins in the culmination to the 1971-72 season and that feeling was as good as it gets, Pugh said.

"We had come so close so many years — in the '66 championship game against the Packers at the Cotton Bowl (a 34-27 Green Bay win), in the '67 game at Green Bay, then we lost some big games to Cleveland. To get to the Super Bowl in 1970 and lose, that was very, very disappointing."

Chaps host OC in finale

■ Midland College will close its basketball season against old rival and Region V tournament-bound Odessa College.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College will try to finish its 1990-91 year on an up note Thursday. Only problem, though, is having to win a game from a Region V tournament-bound Odessa College.

Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center, site of four consecutive conference or regional wins by Odessa over Midland.

Under Reggie Franklin's rein, MC has lost 10 consecutive to the Wranglers. The last time MC scored a win over OC was Nov. 7, 1987. That 68-64 win came in the third and final game of the '87 Chaparral Classic. It was the third game in the collegiate career of forward Larry Johnson, and his first and only loss to MC before moving on to a higher profile career at Nevada-Las Vegas.

Even though MC was officially eliminated from a spot in the Region V tournament next month in Waco with Monday's loss to New Mexico Junior College, the Chaps need to win their season finale for a couple of reasons.

Franklin, entering the game with an overall head coaching record of 78-43 (64.5 percent) at MC, would like to equal his conference record of last season. A Chap victory would mean the 17-13 overall record and the team's second consecutive 8-8 conference finish.

An MC victory would also mean the team would avoid its sixth home-court loss of the season.

Before the '90-'91 campaign, MC had never lost more than four times during one season on its home floor until South Plains defeated MC 86-72 earlier this month, its fifth loss at Chap Center. In addition, MC has never lost more than three conference games at home since the 1976-77 season. NMJC, Howard Col-

Henderson a no-show at Oakland camp

Associated Press

Rickey Henderson may be fast on the basepaths, but he's slow in getting to spring training.

Henderson was the only no-show Wednesday when the Oakland Athletics began full-squad workouts at Scottsdale, Ariz. Henderson, who showed up late when he was with the New York Yankees, is unhappy with his contract. He is the second season of a four-year deal worth $12 million.

"I'm not terribly surprised Rickey's not here because of an undercurrent of unhappiness about his contract," Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said.

When the deal was agreed to after the 1989 season, Henderson and Kirby Puckett were the only $3 million-a-year players in baseball. Henderson is now tied for 35th on the contract list.

"We have a number of players in camp who are very good players. Maybe not MVPs, but who have performed well over the years," Alderson said. "Unfortunately, we have to live with the system. These types of dramatic changes in the marketplace have occurred."

■ More baseball news/5C

Griffey flew back to Seattle late Tuesday after a series of apparent break-ins at his home.

The alarm at Griffey's house went off twice Tuesday and has sounded at least four or five times in the past few days, team spokesman Dave Aust said.

On the field, Orel Hersher continued his rehabilitation when he threw without pain and Frank Viola also had a painless outing.

Hersher, recovering from reconstructive surgery on his right shoulder, threw 62 pitches in a 10-minute session. He had thrown 10 minutes of batting practice on Sunday.

"I felt good," Hersher said. "This outing was progress, compared to the last outing. I hope they all feel this good."

Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda was upbeat.

"Orel told me after he threw that he felt good," Lasorda said. "He seemed impressive and was throwing free and easy. He reported no pain and keeps getting stronger."

In other camp news on Wednesday:

—New York Yankees center fielder Roberto Kelly and pitcher Pascual Perez were missing from New York Yankees camp. Kelly is in Panama and Perez is in the Dominican Republic with his annual visa problems.

"I'm more disappointed than with Kelly because he fully knows he's a regular and that's different from Pascual," Yankees general manager Gene Michael said. "They're both wrong by not being here. They had the whole winter to get here and I don't like it."

—Ken Howell, recovering from an injured right shoulder, threw 50 pitches and felt fine. "That's a great sign for us," Philadelphia Phillies manager Nick Leyva said. "Now that he's healed his arm, he has confidence that there's nothing wrong in there and he can go get 'em."

—Pedro Guerrero, still in the Dominican Republic, was absent on Wednesday. Others not in camp were left-handed pitcher Joe Magrane, who is in St. Louis to receive treatment for a sore elbow, and right-handed pitcher Stan Clarke, who is recovering from a broken ankle he sustained in the off-season.

—Toronto exercised the contract option for Dave Stieb. The left-hander was scheduled to make $1.7 million in 1991, but Toronto said it had renegotiated the terms of the 10-year deal, agreed to on March 8, 1985.

Greenwood trio named to 6-3A All-District team

Staff Report

Three members of the 1990-91 Greenwood Rangers basketball team were named to the All District 6-3A team Wednesday afternoon.

Six-4 senior Damon Dublin, 5-10 junior Eric Clutter, and Ray Seals, a 6-3 sophomore, were named to the first team. Senior Mark Burfield and junior Jason Swopes received honorable mention.

No other team placed as many members on the first team, however, Crane dominated other individual honors. Freshman Michael Carrasco was named Newcomer of the Year; Mark Wendel pulled in Coach of the Year honors, and senior Coury Jones was named the District 6-3A Most Valuable Player.

First team: Eric Clutter, Greenwood, Jr., 5-10; Jackie Jeffery, Crane, Sr., 5-10; Ray Seals, Greenwood, Soph., 6-3; Harry Dawson, Kermit, Sr., 6-3; Jose Avalos, Reagan Co., Jr., 6-0; David Mirka, Sonora, Sr., 6-1; Byron Heiser, Kermit, Sr., 6-3; Robbie Smith, Colorado City, Sr., 6-2; Ramiro Luna, Sonora, Sr., 5-9; Damon Dublin, Greenwood, Sr., 6-4.
Newcomer of the Year: Michael Carrasco, Crane, Jr., 6-4.
Coach of the Year: Mark Wendel, Crane.
MVP: Coury Jones, Crane, Sr., 6-3.

JETHRO: Making playoffs better than being in Pro Bowl

(From 1C)

"It's so hard to get to the Super Bowl, it's so difficult. We realized there were certain things you had to do to get to the Super Bowl, and playing as a team was one of those. The win made us feel vindicated," Pugh said.

Pugh and the Cowboys won another Super Bowl title in 1977-78, as Dallas beat Denver 27-10. Then following 1978-79, when Dallas lost 35-31 to the Pittsburgh Steelers in its fifth Super Bowl appearance (the Steelers beat the Cowboys 21-17 in the '75-76 championship), Pugh retired.

Now in business as a gift shop concessionaire at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the 66 Pugh has dropped more than 200 points from his playing weight of 260. The Afro haired fans came to recognize is now closely cropped and has a hint of gray.

The 46-year-old Pugh's ever soft off-field demeanor and Windsor, N.C. accent are more appealing than ever, even when he reflects on the fact that he never was named All-Pro or to a single Pro Bowl.

"The only time it really ever bothered me was when it was time to negotiate a contract. If you went to a Pro Bowl or were named All-Pro, naturally you had some negotiating power."

"The thing that made it so easy for me to accept was the fact that I was playing with a lot of great players," he said.

"We were in the playoffs almost every year, and I would much rather have the chance to play in a playoff game. A lot of players that made the Pro Bowl were sitting at home watching the playoffs and the Super Bowl."

"I got a chance to play on five Super Bowl teams and we won two. I started in all of them except the last one. I'll take that over the Pro Bowl any day," Pugh said.

"Front Row Seat" is a regular feature of your morning Reporter-Telegram, appearing each Thursday.

gon (All-City, All-District), outfielder Freddie Dela Cruz (All-District) and shortstop/second baseman Arturo Velasquez (All-District).

Southwest hits the field at 10 a.m. Friday against the winner of the Lee-Del Rio game, while Monterey faces the MHS-Eastwood victor at 12:30 p.m.

Southwest has four returning All-District players from a 1990 Area finalist team, with pitcher John Calder, pitcher/outfielder Randy Vick, and outfielders Joey Chilson and Greg Whitten all claiming accolades a year ago.

Monterey is entering its 32nd year under head coach Bobby Moegle, who owns a 889-201 record over that span. The Plainsmen are off to a 3-1 start in 1991, and were handed their first off the season in the split against Lee.

Junior Garcia, a 64 lefthander who went 13-2 last season, returns to lead what Moegle terms as a strong mound brigade.

Senior righthander Brad Rush is a transfer from Greensville, S.C., who can help with starting duties. Allen Wolf, Michael Davidson, Isaac Lee and Mark Gary might also throw.

Club withdraws as Walker Cup site

CHICAGO (AP) — A suburban golf club has decided to withdraw as host of the 1993 Walker Cup rather than draw attention to the fact that it does not have minority members, an official of the U.S. Golf Association said Wednesday.

The Chicago Golf Club in west suburban Wheaton pulled out as host of the biennial amateur golf tournament last week after several discussions with the golf association, USGA Executive Director David Fay said.

"It was all their decision," Fay said in a telephone interview from his Far Hills, N.J., office. "They decided they didn't want to deal with the scrutiny that hosting such an event would entail."

The 125-member, 99-year-old golf club has no minority members or voting female members, which violates a USGA guideline established last November. The rule was adopted shortly after charges of racial discrimination were leveled at an all-white club in Shoal Creek, Ala., that was to host the PGA championship.

The rule says violators can't hold major golf championships at their clubs, but does not require clubs already under contract for tournaments to change their policies, Fay said.

Chicago Golf Club President Robert E. King was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comment. Other officials at the club also were unavailable for comment.

Residents of Midland County:

As parents we all fear that our children may become involved with drugs. One very common form of chemical abuse that is many times overlooked is the use of INHALANTS. This is the sniffing of fumes from a variety of common products such as lighter fluid, paint thinner, felt tip marking pens, hair spray, etc... Watch for warning signs of inhalant abuse.

Your child's breath may smell like chemicals and he may appear drunk; though this will probably not last very long. He may not be doing as well in school or at his job and he may start looking unkempt and dirty.

You may find an inhalant -- a spray can, typewriter correction fluid bottle, or soda can that smells like chemicals -- in the child's room. Plastic bags, old rags and bandanas are also used. Also watch for rashes around the nose and mouth, nausea, headaches, slurred speech, nosebleeds and loss of weight.

Viola now says arm 'feels great'

Associated Press

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. — Frank Viola tested his ailing left elbow Wednesday and then told manager New York Mets Bud Harrelson his arm "felt great."

Viola, who earlier in the week was diagnosed as having bone spurs in the elbow, said he believes he can avoid surgery for now.

"I think it was more psychological than anything," Viola said. "Once I found out I can't do anything to it, I can live with it. If last two days are any indication, I'm not going to concern myself with it."

Harrelson was relieved to get a positive report, and said he was cautiously optimistic.

"I didn't see him throw, but I ran into him right when he finished and he said he felt great," Harrelson said. "I think he's going to take one day off and go for fifteen (minutes) on Friday. I think it's a matter of him learning more about it."

"The real test will come when he faces batters in a real game. We'll see how his velocity is and how he feels the day after. But, he looked and felt real good today."

In an intersquad game between pitchers, the Penas beat the Francos 12-5. Dwight Gooden had three hits, including two homers and five RBIs.

The rest of the squad is to arrive Thursday, but Daryl Boston, Darren Reed and Dave Magadan got to camp a day early and worked out.

Boston, who will start the season on the bench after starting 89 games for the Mets in 1990, said he is confident he will get an opportunity.

"I know somewhere down the line I'm gonna get some playing time," Boston said. "I feel confident that Buddy and the rest of the organization are going to put the best ball players out on the field on any particular day."

Magadan enters camp for the first time as the starting first baseman.

"I'm gonna be excited," he said. "It's the first time I've ever come into spring training with a starting job. It's gonna be an exciting spring."

Mattingly feels need to prove self

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — For years, when Don Mattingly arrived at spring training, the question would be: "What will he do next?"

This year, the question is: Can Mattingly do anything at all?

"I've got to prove I can stay healthy. That's number one. That's the biggest thing I have to prove," Mattingly said. "If I can do that, I think I'll be all right."

Back problems limited Mattingly to 102 games last year, the lowest total of his seven full major league seasons. When he played, he did not resemble the Mattingly who won a batting crown with a .343 average in 1984, took league MVP honors in 1985 and batted out a club-record 238 hits the year after that.

Mattingly's average last season dipped to .256, ending his string of .300 seasons at six. The .256 average was 67 points below his career mark entering the year. Mattingly's five home runs and 42 RBIs were his lowest totals for a full season.

"This year I've got a lot of things up in the air. People are saying what I can and can't do," Mattingly said. "I've got a lot of things to prove. The only way is out on the field."

The criticism Mattingly hears most often is that he no longer can drive the ball. He did not homer after May 20. When Mattingly returned on Sept. 11 after missing a 47-game stretch, he batted .333 (17-for-51) with seven RBIs from that point until the end of the season. But 14 of his 17 hits were singles.

Mattingly is not concerned. "I hit the ball in the seats some in batting practice late last season. I know it's there."

Mattingly said his success in September provided a confidence boost. "It just let me know I could play without pain," he said. "I didn't try to do too much. I just put the ball in play."

Mattingly turns 30 in April and plans to make some adjustments in an attempt to minimize back problems that have nagged him for years. He is following a program designed by Dr. Robert Watkins, a back specialist, that requires 40 minutes of exercises every other day.

"I'm going to be steady with the back work no matter how I feel," Mattingly vowed.

Mattingly has grown accustomed to the hours of attention his back requires. More difficult for him may be another adjustment — reducing his workload before games.

"(What he does) before the game has to change," Mattingly said.

Rangers sign pair of pitchers

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Outfielder Kevin Belcher and pitchers Scott Chiamparino and Jim Poole agreed Wednesday to one-year contracts with the Texas Rangers.

The three, all rookies, played in the major leagues for part of 1990. Belcher and Chiamparino were with Texas, while Poole played for Los Angeles.

Amateur free agent pitcher David Chavarria also agreed to a contract with the Rangers' Gulf Coast Rookie League team.

Chavarria, 17, of Burnaby, British Columbia, is in his senior year at Burnaby Central High School.

Prices climb

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose Wednesday as traders looked beyond the Gulf War and envisioned a world without the petroleum glut that some experts have been predicting.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $18.86 per barrel, up 49 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. It was the third straight session that moved oil higher, putting the price up 95 cents per barrel since the ground war with Iraq began over the weekend.

Traders were focusing on shrinking U.S. oil supplies and pending attempts by OPEC nations to reduce production, which is now outstripping demand.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is now pumping more oil than before the crisis, even though crude from Iraq and Kuwait has been boycotted by the United Nations and taken out of the global market. Many analysts have predicted the world will be awash in oil as the crisis ends and the Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil once again becomes available.

Oil prices opened higher from the outset Wednesday on a report issued the night before by the American Petroleum Institute, which showed the nation's supplies of crude oil, gasoline and home heating oil had fallen during the previous week.

Natural gas for delivery in April closed at $1.356, up 1 cent per 1,000 cubic feet.

Stocks rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied with renewed force Wednesday amid increasing signs that the Gulf War was nearing a victorious end for the U.S.-led coalition.

The advance was led by stocks of companies that could stand to prosper from the post-war rebuilding effort in Kuwait.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 69.85 points over the past six trading days, rose 24.51 to 2,889.11.

Pilots, American sign

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The pilots union of American Airlines ratified a four-year contract that will make some of its members the industry's highest-paid.

The directors of the Allied Pilots Association approved the deal in an 18-2 vote late Tuesday, ending two days of meetings at a hotel at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Two directors abstained and one is serving in the Persian Gulf war.

Combest bill calls for oil import fees

Representatives Mike Andrews and Larry Combest have sponsored an energy bill that would stabilize oil prices.

Staff Report

In an effort to strengthen the framework of President Bush's energy policy, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest (R-Texas) Wednesday co-sponsored legislation that calls for an oil import fee.

The bill, H.R. 706, "The National Energy Strategy Act of 1991," emphasizes domestic production as the core of an effective national energy policy.

"A truly comprehensive national energy policy must focus on stability in domestic production," said Combest. "Oil prices have seen-sawed like an oil field pumpjack, hampering the planning and investment needed to fuel a comeback of our domestic oil and gas industry. Alternative energy sources cannot yet take the place of fossil fuels as our main supply source. We need to be investing in proven resources where we now have production capability. Recent events forewarn us that energy production close to home is not susceptible to the sudden disruptions that affect foreign supplies."

Combest

"As we lessen our dependence on foreign oil supplies, we lessen their critical importance," said Combest. "With domestic oil production secure, America has greater control and less vulnerability because of less dependence on foreign supplies." The congressman noted that foreign oil imports now account for almost half of this country's demand.

The legislation Combest has co-sponsored Wednesday has several provisions addressing the crucial concerns of energy security, economic growth and the environment:

■ Agreement between the President and Congress on maintaining a minimum acceptable level of domestic production.

■ Establishment of a core supply of petroleum equal to 20 million barrels each year of natural gas, natural gas liquids and/or crude oil.

■ Support of the domestic market with a fee on imported oil to bring foreign oil up to a floor level of at least $22 per barrel.

■ Tax credits for producers keeping the small marginal or "stripper" wells operating, for exploratory drilling and enhanced recovery of oil and natural gas.

■ Tax credits for converting automobiles to natural gas.

"Our own production last year fell to its lowest level in almost 30 years," said Combest. "This nation must show the resolve to reduce our dependence on foreign oil. The risks to our national security and economic well-being are too great for us to ignore this opportunity for action."

Long-term prospects for U.S. oil seem dim

Experts say America's oil outlook is rosy for the short-term, but they worry that short-term low prices will bring long-term uncontrollable oil imports.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — For oil importing nations like the United States, the immediate postwar outlook is highly favorable but the long-term picture is far more troubling, according to experts at a conference here on Middle East oil and security.

"Prospects are that the oil price will be relatively low, maybe quite low, in the short run," said Paul A. Volcker, former chairman of the Federal Reserve and now a professor of economic policy at Princeton University and chairman of James D. Wolfensohn Inc. But low prices bring rising imports, he said, and imports are growing to a worrisome level.

"It is one thing if our energy imports are going up, in a context of a feeling that eventually it is coming under some kind of control," Volcker said, speaking at a conference organized by the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

But it would be something else, he said, if imports rose "in what was interpreted as a rather uncontrolled kind of way, surrounded by other policies that are summed up as inflationary and ineffective," like continued high budget and trade deficits.

"Then you've got a prime international financial problem," he said.

The United States now imports nearly 50 percent of its oil, and that figure will probably rise to 60 percent or higher by the end of the decade, most oil industry experts say. By that time, according to some participants, the cost will be more than $200 billion a year.

The contrast with the short term is striking. Over all, the United States and other Western economies came through the occupation of Kuwait surprisingly well, according to many participants in the two-day conference, which began on Tuesday.

Sluggish economy key to drop in home sales, GNP

January is traditionally known as a slow month for home buyers and the war seems to be adding to consumers reluctance.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — With prospective buyers distracted by war, sales of existing homes dropped 7 percent last month, a real estate trade group said Wednesday.

"Consumers were more focused on events in the Persian Gulf than on buying a home," said President Harley E. Rouda of the National Association of Realtors, who also noted that January usually is a slow month for home sales.

The Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.91 million units, down from 3.13 million in December. It was the lowest rate since 3.07 million units were sold last October.

But reports of progress in the war and favorable financing conditions were calming consumer fears and increasing buying traffic at the end of the month, Rouda said. "People were out looking

The GNP decline for the 4th quarter of 1990 is largest since the nations 1982 recession.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, lacking consumer appetite, shrank at an annual rate of 2 percent in the final quarter of 1990, the government said Wednesday in a new — and slightly upgraded — postmortem on the start of the first recession in eight years.

"The private domestic sector caved in during the fourth quarter," but the blow was cushioned by exports and government spending, said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co.

The Commerce Department revised upward a notch its initial estimate of the gross national product from October through December. It had reported last month that the GNP — the nation's total output of goods and services and its broadest measure of economic health — had fallen at a 2.1 percent rate.

Despite the improvement, the decline still was the steepest since a 3.2 percent drop in the third quarter of 1982 during the depths of the last recession.

SCOTT BURNS

Veribanc gauges safety of banks, thrifts

By Scott Burns

Q. What is the name and phone number of the organization that rates Savings and Loans? The people there charge for this service, of course.

I have just retired and will soon receive an involuntary conversion of an employee investment plan which is qualified to be rolled over. I am at a loss as to how to place the funds and feel secure, particularly when Congress may change the limit on insured accounts.

A. The organization is called Veribanc. Located in Wakefield, Mass., the experts there offer a variety of reporting services on banks and thrifts. The least expensive is their Instant Rating service which costs $10 for the first institution and $3 for each additional rating on the same call. Their toll free number is 1-800-442-2657 and the cost is charged to your MasterCard or Visa. You will also receive a written confirmation.

In a recent examination of deposit institution data Veribanc found that problem loans were now concentrated in the Northeast rather than the Southwest: the state with the most problem loans as a percent of all loans was Connecticut, followed by New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and New Jersey.

One of their report options is called the "Blue Ribbon Report" which lists banks that meet very high standards in different regions. This report costs $35. Another less detailed source is the Income and Safety newsletter, published by the Institute for Econometric Research in Florida. The newsletter, which is published monthly, regularly lists the top 10 yielding FDIC insured institutions in the country for money market accounts and CDs from 30 days to 5 years in maturity. The newsletter also provides a rating, from "A" to "D" for each institution.

While lower rated institutions appear prominently on the high yield list, there are a surprising number of institutions that are ranked "A" — having capital resources that exceed federal standards by a wide margin — or "B" — institutions that meet federal standards. In early January, for instance, it was possible to buy a one year CD at Fireside Thrift in Newark, Calif. (tel. 415-490-6511), and get a yield of 8.10 percent when the national average yield was 7.21 percent even though Fireside Thrift is rated "A."

Income and Safety, frequently cited in this column, devotes most of its attention to rating income oriented mutual funds, including money market funds. The subscription cost is $100 a year: the telephone number is 1-800-327-6720.

One alternative for savers worried about FDIC insurance and the strength of our deposit institutions is to learn about no-load mutual funds that specialize in U.S. government securities.

Q. We are thinking of investing $50,000 in a tax deferred annuity offered by a large insurance company. With the world situation, is this a good idea?

Where do I go to check on the company?

Our main goal is to reduce our income tax. We are 65 years old and have

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Special call' bonds can be paid before maturity

By Bill Doyle

Q. In August 1984, I bought $20,000 face amount of municipal bonds issued by a housing authority in Arkansas. These bonds were not callable before maturity in 1994. The interest rate was 12.5 percent.

Last year, the bonds were called in and I received $20,800. Can bonds such as these be redeemed at any time, even though they are supposed to be guaranteed to maturity?

Doyle

A. It can happen. It's clear you ran into what is known as an "extraordinary call" or "special call." That is not unusual in the case of housing authority bonds and other municipal "revenue" bonds.

Revenue bonds are sold to finance specific projects. Revenue from a project is used to pay bond interest and to redeem the bonds when they mature.

Many bonds have "call features," giving their issuers the right to pay them off at face value or at a slight premium before maturity. Even when a bond does not have a regular call feature, as evidently was the case with the bonds you owned, there can be an extraordinary call buried in the fine print.

Housing authorities often raise money through the sale of bonds and use that money to finance home mortgages. Back in 1984, when interest rates were sky-high, the housing authority whose bonds you owned issued 12.5 percent bonds to finance mortgages at, say, 13.5 percent. The one percentage point difference covered the authority's expenses.

As principal payments were made on the mortgages — and some, no doubt, were paid off early — the authority received quite a bit of money.

It could use that cash to finance more mortgages. But interest rates are down and home buyers can obtain mortgages at lower than 13.5 percent elsewhere. If the authority financed new mortgages at low rates, while still paying 12.5 percent on bonds, it would go bust.

So it did the sensible thing. It made an extraordinary call — most likely for an amount of bonds equal to the extra cash it had on hand.

Q. After buying some municipal bonds, I left them with my broker. I learned the bonds had been called only when the dollar amount of the redemption appeared on my monthly brokerage statement. My broker later called to ask where I wanted to reinvest that money.

Should not I have been notified that event was to take place?

A. Absolutely — if that broker and his firm's "back office," where records are kept, were on the ball. Bond call notices are posted well in advance of the date they take place and reported in Standard & Poor's Corp. "Call Bond Record" and other financial reference books. Brokers who don't keep tabs on calls of bonds they are holding for customers have fallen down on the job.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned upward today, bidding to reverse the decline of the last six sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, down 69.75 points since the start of last week, rose 8.67 to 2,873.27 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outnumbered by declines by more than 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 963 up, 559 down and 439 unchanged.

An end to the Gulf War appeared to draw rapidly closer as U.S.-led forces moved to secure control of Kuwait.

Expectations have been spreading in the financial world of late that peace will bring a resurgence of consumer confidence in this country — a stimulus to the economy that might well lift it out of

But many analysts question whether that will be enough to enable stocks to extend the sharp rally that has occurred since the start of Operation Desert Storm.

Gainers among the blue chips included Philip Morris, up $\frac{3}{4}$ at 67 $\frac{1}{2}$; Exxon, up $\frac{7}{8}$ at 54 $\frac{1}{2}$.

USF&G fell 1½ to 9. The company reported a large loss for the fourth quarter and cut its quarterly dividend from 25 cents a share to 5 cents a share.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed 1.43 to 199.55. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .94 at 342.40.

GNP: May mean mild recession

(From 6C)

Some analysts said the revised figure was consistent with their belief the recession would be short and mild, and sets the stage for a slower downturn in the current quarter.

"The economy is not going to fall over the cliff. This is not 1929," said Robert G. Dederick, an economist with the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. He contended the GNP changes, combined with other recent economic reports, suggest "a conventional recession of the mild variety."

A recession generally is defined as two consecutive quarterly declines in the GNP. The GNP last declined from April through June 1988, but that 1.8 percent contraction did not extend into a second quarter and thus did not qualify as the beginning of a recession.

The Bush administration and some economists say the current recession will last just two quarters and begin growing slowly this spring. Others, like Sinai, contend the contraction will last until midsummer.

Nevertheless, most analysts say a rebound in consumer spending is essential to any recovery.

Consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity, fell $19.9 billion during the fourth quarter. Purchases of "big-ticket" durable goods such as appliances and cars were off 10.7 percent.

SALES: Home seekers return

(From 6C)

once again," he said.

Independent surveys by the National Association of Home Builders also pointed to renewed buyer activity, spokesman Jay Shackford said.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported earlier that mortgage rates ranged between 9.56 percent and 9.75 percent in January, down from their double-digit levels during much of 1990.

Rates continued to fall in February, dropping to 9.25 percent during the week ending Feb. 15 before picking up slightly to 9.29 percent the following week.

The Realtors also said the median price of a home was $94,200 last month, 2.7 percent more than in December but 1.1 percent less than in January 1990. The median means half of the homes cost more and half less.

The Realtors attributed the year-to-year drop to slower appreciation in some markets as well as actual price declines in the high-cost areas of the Northeast and West.

Sales fell 8.0 percent to an annual rate of 460,000 units in the Northeast, where the median price advanced 1.9 percent to $136,900. However, the price was down 4.5 percent from January 1990.

In the West, sales dropped 4.1 percent to 470,000 units. The median price was $138,200, 5.2 percent above that of December but 6.0 percent below the price a year earlier.

Sales in the Midwest totaled 810,000 units, down 8.0 percent from December due in part to harsh winter weather. The Midwest had shown the most resistance to recent sluggishness. The median price there rose 3.0 percent in January, to $74,500, up 3.2 percent from a year earlier.

The resale rate in the South was 1.18 million units, down 6.3 percent from the previous month. The median price was $84,300, up 1.8 percent from December but down 1.1 percent from the previous January.

BURNS: Deferred annuities

never bought an annuity. Can you get your money out after the term you have agreed upon? I understand you must pay taxes when you make withdrawals. I do not understand the life-time payments. If you agree to a life-time payment, can you change your mind later?

A. Beyond being rating by A.M. Best and other agencies, there is little you can do to make judgments about an insurance offering as a credit risk. What you can do, however, is to make certain that you understand the company's policy toward future interest rate changes — you can ask the salesperson. You should be able to get a record of past interest rates of interest, etc.

Another thing to check carefully is the charge if you redeem your principal early. Most tax deferred annuities are now sold with a declining charge such as 7 percent in the first year declining 1 percent a year for 7 years.

PROSPECTS: Few feel supplies secure

(From 6C)

"This ought to have been the mother of all crises," said Keith Hamm, managing director of the London-based Petroleum Economics, a consulting firm. But with a recession and warm weather in some consuming nations, and extra production from Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, the crisis was minimized, according to market watchers.

And now, as the war ends, Hamm said, "the debt that some of the countries in the region feel they owe the United States will put pressure on them, in the near term at least, to help out a friend."

James R. Schlesinger, the former secretary of energy and defense who was chairman of the conference, said a key question for the end of the war was whether the United States, after having come to the defense of Saudi Arabia and other gulf states, would encourage its Arab allies to keep oil prices low.

"The keepers of the White House economic gospel feel that any such intervention is improper," he said.

The war has so expanded world oil production that the market may ride out the next big event, the decline of the world's largest oil producer, the Soviet Union, said Arlon Tussing, an energy consultant and former economist with the Senate Energy Committee.

The Soviet Union is on the verge of becoming an importer rather than an exporter because the economic problems of the country have cut its production, some experts said.

While oil wells, gathering points and shipping equipment have been damaged in Iraq and Kuwait, Hamm said, all the other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are now producing "flat out" and could continue to meet world demand for years.

The other members are collectively planning expansion to 27 million barrels a day of capacity, he said, which would be about 5 million barrels a day above their current production, and that level would suffice until the end of the century.

Marshals add Texas escapee to fugitives list

DALLAS (AP) — An inmate who escaped from a South Texas jail with three other prisoners has been included in the U.S. Marshals Service list of 15 most wanted fugitives.

Michael Antonio Lucas, 31, had been serving a sentence of 20 years to life imprisonment in the 1984 stabbing death of a man in Washington, D.C.

The marshals service, in a prepared statement Wednesday, said Lucas allegedly masterminded a pre-dawn escape from the Frio County Jail in Pearsall, Texas last November.

Deputy marshals from both the Western District of Texas and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia have been searching for Lucas, said K. Michael Moore, director of the service.

Dallas commissioner to appeal conviction

DALLAS (AP) — An outspoken county commissioner will appeal his criminal mischief conviction that would have required him to begin serving a 75-day jail term this week, his attorney said Wednesday.

John Wiley Price has decided to fight the conviction for damaging windshield wipers on a van during a protest outside a television station last year, said attorney David Burrows.

"Commissioner Price based his decision to appeal on my advice. He was prepared to go to jail Friday. But I persuaded him that it was in his best interest to appeal the case," Burrows said.

The attorney said Price will now remain free on bond until an appellate court renders its decision. "There's an appeal. All the papers will be filed tomorrow," said Burrows, a Dallas defense attorney.

"It takes a while to get the (lower court) transcript typed. In my opinion, it will be a minimum of four months and maximum of a year before we get a decision of the appellate court."

County Criminal Judge Cas Dunlap, who sentenced Price last week to the jail term and a $1,000 fine, had also revoked the commissioner's probation on a previous misdemeanor charge.

The sentence followed a week-long trial on charges stemming from the Dec. 7 protest at television station KXAS.

Burrows said there are several grounds for appeal.

"The main one is the application of the law to the facts. Specifically, I did not agree with the application of transferred intent, that if you block a street, your intent to block the street transfers to your intent to damage the windshield wipers," he said.

"That stretches the application of the intent to commit a crime," he said.

Price had said that he bent the wipers on the van driven by Plano resident Stephanie Barnes in self-defense, to keep from being run over.

Lawmakers propose adding slogan 'Lone Star State' to license plates

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly two years after protests by thousands of Texans kept a "wimpy" slogan off state license plates, lawmakers Wednesday promoted adding a phrase they called tough enough for Bubba: "The Lone Star State."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis voiced their support for legislation sponsored by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, that asks the State Highway Commission to add the slogan to Texas plates.

In August 1989, the commission decided to leave the state tags sloganless after nearly 25,000 Texans wrote letters objecting to its proposal for "Friendship State."

"The Friendship State raised my ire and that of others because it was too wimpy," Truan said.

"Lone Star State is in keeping with the history of our state and the tradition that we have of being very proud that we did fight for our independence and we were a republic," he said.

"I think Lone Star State is more appropriate," added Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "We always refer to ourselves as the Lone Star State."

Highway commissioners have said they will add the saying if the Legislature approves it. They did not immediately return telephone calls on Wednesday.

The proposed license plates would be identical to current tags, except that "The Lone Star State" would be added across the bottom in blue. It would match the color of the letters and numbers. The cost of changing the plates would be negligible, Truan said.

N.Y.C. school board approves condom plan

NEW YORK (AP) — After months of debate and a last-minute compromise effort, the Board of Education voted Wednesday night to dole out condoms at high schools in the nation's largest school system. Condoms initially will be available at 30 to 35 schools, then phased in at the rest of 120 schools that enroll 260,000 students as part of a stepped up effort to fight AIDS.

Parents' permission will not be required and that was the major sticking point for the board, which approved the plan on a vote of 4-3. Several board members tried to negotiate an "opt-out" clause, allowing parents to write notes to exclude their children.

Schools Chancellor Joseph A. Fernandez insisted that no "opt-in" be required. He said that to make teens get their parents' permission would scare them away from the condom giveaways.

The plan is the most liberal such program in the nation because it does not involve sending students to health clinics to get the condoms, said Robin Lewis, spokeswoman for the Center for Population Options in Washington. Trained, adult volunteers will provide the condoms, with counseling available but optional.

Elsewhere, condoms are available at school-based health clinics in Chicago, Baltimore and the Cambridge Ridge Latin School Clinic in Massachusetts. In October, a school board in Easton, Md., narrowly rejected a plan for nurses to distribute condoms at two high schools. In Mill Valley, Calif., a lawsuit by opponents stalled distribution efforts.

No timetable for phasing in condom distribution was released.

Fernandez praised the board after the vote and said the plan was a bold attempt to protect children from AIDS.

Hundreds of people have lined up to talk, yell or plead at New York City school board meetings since Fernandez first broached the subject in September.

Trained, adult volunteers will provide the condoms, with counseling available but optional.

"I had a lot of close friends that died from AIDS virus," testified 11-year-old Joey DiPaolo, who got AIDS from a blood transfusion. "What if I were your kid and had the AIDS virus? You'd be in favor of condom education and condom use because you would see how I was suffering."

New York City is home to about 3 percent of the nation's 13- to 21-year-olds, but it has 20 percent of all AIDS cases in that age group.

Mathilde Krim, adjunct professor of public health at Columbia University and founding co-chair of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, estimates that two of every 100 teen-agers in the city — more than 5,100 public school students — are infected with the AIDS virus.

Krim said the number of full-blown AIDS cases among ages 13 to 19 seems small because the incubation period is up to 10 years.

Fernandez estimates 80 percent of the city's young people have sex by age 19. Dr. Alwyn T. Cohall, who runs three of the city's 17 school-based clinics, says one in four sexually active high schoolers gets a sexually transmitted disease before graduation.

Opponents contended the proposal will not necessarily reduce teen pregnancies or the risk of HIV infection.

Eleanor Kelly, a mother of three teen-agers and past president of a conservative group, Parent Roundtable, said it also would promote "a false sense of security, thereby encouraging more of our young people to engage in high-risk behavior."

Panel cites Cranston for ethics violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee on Wednesday found "substantial credible evidence" of misconduct by Alan Cranston, but it said no further action was warranted against four other senators for intervening with federal thrift regulators on behalf of Charles H. Keating Jr.

The six-member committee's unanimous report set the stage for possible censure of Cranston, D-Calif., by the full Senate.

But the committee effectively closed the case against the other four members of the so-called Keating Five, even though the conduct of two — Sens. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., — "gave the appearance of being improper."

The committee also found that Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John McCain, R-Ariz., "exercised poor judgment" in their actions.

All of the Keating Five stoutly denied any wrongdoing.

Before acting further in Cranston's case, the committee must send him a statement detailing the specific charges against him and give him a chance to respond.

The committee said in a resolution "that Sen. Cranston engaged in an impermissible pattern of conduct in which fund-raising and official activities were substantially linked."

The case could refine the limits of propriety for all members of Congress who intervene with federal regulators — especially on behalf of a major campaign contributor.

In the case of Riegle, D-Mich., the committee found that he "took steps to assist (Keating's) Lincoln Savings and Loan Association with its regulatory problems at a time that Charles Keating was raising substantial campaign funds" for Riegle.

"The committee has concluded that the totality of the evidence shows that Sen. Riegle's conduct gave the appearance of being improper and was certainly attended with insensitivity and poor judgment," it said.

DeConcini's "aggressive conduct" with thrift regulators on Keating's behalf "was inappropriate," the committee said, adding it "does not condone" that conduct but decided that his behavior was not serious enough to go before the full Senate.

The committee found that Glenn exercised poor judgment when he arranged a luncheon meeting between Keating and former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas in January 1988, some eight months after he learned regulators were recommending a criminal investigation of Lincoln.

But, the committee added, "the evidence indicates that Sen. Glenn's participation did not go beyond serving as host." His action "were not improper or attended with gross negligence," the panel said.

In McCain's case, the committee said the Arizona Republican exercised poor judgment "in intervening with the regulators" but concluded the actions "were not improper nor attended with gross negligence" and did not warrant further action.

The panel also reaffirmed its previous ruling that it does not have jurisdiction to determine whether McCain violated any rules when he failed to reimburse in timely fashion the cost of flights on the businessman's corporate planes for vacation trips to the Bahamas.

All five senators met both with Keating and with enforcement officials to discuss his troubled thrift at a time when regulators were investigating the institution.

Keating and his associates donated $1.3 million to the campaigns and political causes of the five lawmakers, most of it while the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was conducting its examination. Lincoln Savings was seized by regulators in April 1989 at a potential cost to taxpayers of more than $2 billion.

The committee's investigation began in December 1989, and its decision came after public hearings that lasted two months and private deliberations that congressional sources said were tinged with partisanship.

According to these sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, the three Democrats on the panel had — at the start of deliberations — sought essentially similar treatment for all the senators except Cranston.

Cranston, DeConcini, Glenn and McCain defended their contacts with regulators as routine constituent service, while Riegle said he met with thrift officials as a banking expert, on DeConcini's request.

Politically, all the senators have suffered declines in popularity from the case, according to public opinion polls in their home states. Before Cranston announced he would not run for re-election next year due to prostate cancer, a Los Angeles Times poll found nearly 8 of 10 of those surveyed believed the senator should step down.

U.S. to ask Moscow to cut off aid

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration plans to ask the Soviet Union to cut off aid to the Nicaraguan army because the Sandinistas, who control the military, still wield broad political power independent of the American-backed civilian government.

Administration officials said the diplomatic effort was intended to undercut the Sandinistas without forcing President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro into a confrontation with Sandinistas in the military.

Mrs. Chamorro defeated President Daniel Ortega Saavedra, the Sandinista leader, in elections a year ago, but agreed to retain his brother Humberto as army chief to assure a peaceful transition.

The arrangement has stirred disputes in Nicaragua even as it has assured a measure of peace after eight years of civil war.

Administration officials said that recent events had left them with the impression that the Sandinistas are slowly regaining political power.

They cited what they said was a failed Nicaraguan attempt to smuggle heavy weapons into Honduras on Friday, and the slaying on Feb. 16 of Enrique Bermudez, who served as commander of the Contra rebels for much of the 1980's.

Administration officials said they had "heavy circumstantial evidence" tying the slaying of the former Contra leader to the Sandinista command.

Bermudez, who had begun organizing former Contras into a movement to demand land from the government, was shot down by a man who fired a rifle with a silencer across a hotel parking lot, the authorities have said.

Administration officials refused to describe the nature of their information, saying only that it came from sources inside Nicaragua.

They said the information would not be passed along to the Nicaraguan government unless it could be substantiated.

While Sandinista military officials have condemned the slaying of Bermudez and have promised to investigate the case, his death has inspired demonstrations by former contras demanding revenge.

A former adviser to the Contra rebels, R. Pardo-Maurer, said recently it was possible that former contra rivals were behind the assassination.

The government in Managua says it has questioned several witnesses and that its investigation is progressing.

Walesa to visit U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Polish President Lech Walesa will visit the White House on March 20, becoming the first Polish head of state ever to visit the United States, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced Wednesday.

Walesa, who was elected president late last year, paid a triumphant visit to Washington in 1989.

NATION IN BRIEF

Harsh rationing plan approved

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rain fell Wednesday, but not enough to avert a city water rationing plan that would make it a crime to fill a new swimming pool or water more than the putting greens of a golf course.

A water rationing plan approved Tuesday covers 2.6 million people in the San Francisco area and should leave enough water in parched reservoirs to get customers through 1992 if the five-year drought lasts that long, officials said.

"There is no other choice," said Public Utilities Commission President Sherri Chiesa. "No matter what we do, hardship results from this plan."

The plan requires most residents and businesses to cut their water use by one-third beginning April 1.

Demolition is under way

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — San Francisco took a step back to its future Wednesday as the demolition of the Embarcadero Freeway began.

A group of civic leaders stood with huge grins in a steady rain and cheered the destruction of what had been one of the city's busiest traffic corridors. In 80 working days, the city's waterfront will look much like it did in the mid-1950s, before the double-deck freeway was built.

NORTHBROOK, ILL. (AP) — A commuter train slammed into a semi-trailer truck at a railroad crossing Wednesday, splitting the truck in two, derailling three cars and injuring 19 people, police said.

Witnesses in this northern Chicago suburb reported the truck, which apparently lost its brakes, swerved around lowered crossing gates and was struck by a four-car Metra train bound for Chicago.

The truck's driver jumped from the vehicle and was not injured.

Brady: Administration may compromise on bank overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady on Wednesday indicated the Bush administration is willing to compromise by moving this year on only part of its plan to overhaul the banking system.

Brady, in comments to the House Banking Committee, reiterated his desire to enact the administration's reforms as a package, but he left himself plenty of room to retreat.

"It seems to me that to the extent that we possibly can, we ought to do it all together," he told Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y., a backer of the administration proposal.

But, he added, "I'm not naive enough to think we're going to get everything in there, congressman."

"I think it ought to be one bill. On the other hand, I'm not the legislative expert of the Western world. If there's other ways of doing it, I'd be glad to entertain them," he said.

Near the end of the hearing, his second appearance before Congress in as many days, Brady gave some sense of the administration's priorities. He told Rep. Jim Slatery, D-Kan., that the "most obvious" priority were provisions permitting banks to operate across state lines.

That, he said, eventually would reduce the banking industry's expenses by more than $10 billion by eliminating the need for bank holding companies to charter separate banks with separate officers in each state in which they operate.

He also cited as a top priority reforms rewarding strong banks with permission to expand into new activities and penalizing weak banks with increasingly restrictive regulation.

The administration proposal, heralded as the most comprehensive since the Depression, would slightly reduce government guarantees to depositors and would lift traditional barriers separating banks from the securities and insurance industries.

It also would permit industrial and commercial companies to buy banks, consolidate federal banking regulation from four agencies into two and shore up the dwindling Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. fund protecting bank deposits.

The Treasury Department proposed the plan three weeks ago. But, in two days of hearings, members of the House and Senate banking committee criticized nearly every aspect of it.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
