Khomeini says trial date to be set within 2 days

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime announced today that within 48 hours it will make a statement on a spy trial date for some of the 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy and that death sentences are possible.

The government also struggled to put down a rebellion in the northwest by the nation's biggest ethnic minority, the Turks, whose spiritual leader said he supported the insurgents' fight for "freedom and their rights."

The announcement on a trial date declaration was made by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who also said those Americans not suspected of spying will be released "as soon as possible," and that arrangements were being made for all the captives to be visited.

However, a spokesman for the student militants holding the Americans contradicted the foreign minister. "We will release nobody, nobody at all" unless the deposed shah is returned to Iran, and "we have made no decision on the visits," the spokesman said in a telephone interview.

State Department spokesman Walter Ramsay told reporters in Washington that scheduling trials for the hostages was "absolutely outrageous. They (the Iranians) had no business taking them hostage and they have no business putting them on trial."

"Our position is that all the hostages should be released. We welcome the news that visits to the hostages may be arranged and we hope they can be arranged soon."

There have been persistent, but unconfirmed reports that about eight hostages have been under intensive interrogation during the past two weeks. The Americans were seized 34 days ago.

Asked if he thought the hostages would be sentenced to death, Ghotbzadeh said: "I hope we don't reach that extent. But on the face of the earth anything is possible."

The foreign minister gave no specific date for the planned release, or say how many hostages might be freed. But he said there were two types of hostages—those who did not "work in espionage and those who are guilty of espionage."

Of the latter group, he said, "I don't think those people are going to benefit from diplomatic immunity."

Ghotbzadeh also announced that arrangements were being made for all the hostages to be visited in order to show the world that allegations the captives have been mistreated are untrue. Some of the hostages have not been seen by neutral observers since the day the embassy was seized Nov. 4.

The Moslem militants holding the captives have vowed to keep them until President Carter extradites Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial as a war criminal.

Khomeini's forces ousted the shah's government in February. The toppled monarch is now convalescing at a U.S. Air Force base in Texas following cancer and gallbladder surgery in New York.

Korean DMZ explosion injures five Americans

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An explosion in the demilitarized zone separating North and South Korea today injured five American soldiers who were on patrol and probably lost in heavy fog, a U.N. command officer was listed as missing.

The injured soldiers were evacuated by a helicopter which had to enter the DMZ in an area normally prohibited to aircraft, the spokesman said. They were taken to U.S. Army medical facilities in Seoul where one was reported in serious condition and four in good condition.

The U.N. command asked North Korea for assistance in locating the missing soldier, said Col. John A.G. Klose, spokesman for the U.N. command.

The soldiers were on a routine patrol about a mile east of the truce village of Panmunjom about 2 p.m. local time when the explosion went off, the spokesman said. He said the origin of the blast was not immediately known, but that it was possible the soldiers stepped on a mine.

A team from the United Nations Command Military Armistice Commission is investigating circumstances surrounding the incident.

Col. Klose said names and units of those involved are being withheld pending notification of next of kin. The DMZ around Panmunjom is guarded by members of the 2nd U.S. Infantry Division.

The DMZ, which is 2.4 miles wide, stretches along the 151-mile border dividing North and South Korea. The U.N. command, which includes U.S. and South Korean soldiers, patrols the southern 1.2 miles and North Korea patrols the northern half.

Officials 'outraged' at spy trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department today labeled as "absolutely outrageous" an Iranian announcement that some of the Americans held hostage in Tehran will soon be given dates for trial as spies.

The State Department reacted sharply after the Iranian foreign minister said today trial dates will be set for some of the 50 American captives while others may soon be released.

The latest announcement was made shortly before Carter administration officials were meeting with the families of the American hostages. The department invited one member of each hostage family to the session several days ago, and is flying out-of-town relatives to Washington at government expense.

The relatives were expected to meet with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and other officials.

Meanwhile, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said in Tehran that some of the hostages not suspected of spying would be released "as soon as possible."

He said the government had decided to permit visitors to see all the hostages, who have been held at the U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4.

Walter Ramsay, a State Department public affairs officer, responded: "Our position is that all the hostages should be released. We welcome the news that visits to the hostages may be arranged and we hope they can be arranged soon."

He described as "absolutely outrageous" Ghotbzadeh's statement that spy trial dates will be set. "They had no business taking them hostage and they have no business putting them on trial," he said.

Ghotbzadeh's statements came as the Carter administration was temporarily muting its criticism of Iran. That U.S. reaction was prompted by Ghotbzadeh's remarks a day earlier that a United Nations Security Council resolution approved this week was a "step forward" toward settling the crisis.

Officials here saw that as the first glimmer of hope that Iran might be taking a more flexible stand on its conditions for releasing the hostages.

A spokesman for U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim called the statement on the Security Council resolution an "important development." In Washington, reporters were told the remark may represent an "opening" in the stalemate, now in its 34th day.

For the record, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter described Ghotbzadeh's comment as "interesting" and said the administration plans to seek clarification from Iranian authorities.

On Tuesday, the Security Council unanimously approved a resolution demanding the immediate release of the hostages. One of the reasons Ghotbzadeh's statement was received with interest here was that Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini previously had dismissed the Security Council as a tool of the United States.

In a move apparently related to the Iran crisis, the Soviet Union has dispatched three more ships to the Indian Ocean, raising the Russian naval presence there to 18, the Pentagon announced. The U.S. naval strength in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area rose to 21 this week with the arrival of a task force led by the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk.

THERE'S LITTLE TIME LEFT after the "hustle and bustle" of holiday shopping, but it may be wise to take the quiet moments to study the intricacies of a poinsettia leaf or ponder the true meaning of Christmas in one's life.

Widow faces lonely Christmas this year

A 70-year-old widow faces a lonely Christmas this year. She owns her own home and wants to stay there.

The house is old with very little insulation. Her winter utility bills are extremely high. Her income? Social Security benefits of little more than $200.

Pampa 'hot spot' picked up by NORAD satellite

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
And GREG HARDIN
Of The Pampa News

A "hot spot" several miles outside Pampa was reported to city officials Thursday by the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) in a telex communication to the Pampa Police Department.

The Department of Public Service in Austin also was alerted, said Steve Vaughn, coordinator for the city civil defense program.

An unusually hot area six to seven miles northeast of Pampa was "evidently picked up by satellite," Lt. Charles Morris said. "We were fortunate there was a DPS unit in the area," he added, saying the police department had information concerning the "spot" within a few minutes of NORAD's alert.

"Some farmers were burning off their stubble field in that area, but there was no explosion," Morris said.

"We have received several other requests to check the area again from NORAD and we have done so," Morris said. "It sounded like they were pretty excited."

Morris indicated it was his belief the satellites used by the Air Force had picked up the heat waves from the stubble fire and felt an explosion may have occurred.

"Their satellites must have picked up the fire as it was blown by the wind and it registered as an explosion," Morris said. He felt NORAD must have been "flexing its antennas" due to the Iranian crisis and the possible threat of hostilities it has caused.

Vaughn agreed with Morris' conclusions, saying "I think they (U.S. government) are using this crisis in Iran to get everybody on the ball." He did not believe, however, there would be any real hostilities. Vaughn did not discount the possibility of punitive action against the students if the hostages are released or harmed, however.

Del Kindshi, public information officer for NORAD headquarters in Cheyenne, Wyoming said the warning of the possible explosion was issued by the Civil Defense National Warning Center, which is based at NORAD headquarters.

"The warning center picked up what could have been an explosion or large fire on the sensors used by NORAD and called the state civil defense headquarters in Austin with the information," Kindshi said.

"The sensors indicated a large explosion or fire six or seven miles north northeast of Pampa, so the local authorities were notified by that department."

According to Kindshi the center could not be sure if the spot was caused by an explosion or fire nor could it tell if local officials were aware of the disturbance.

"It is their policy to go ahead and notify the local authorities to make sure they are aware of the possible explosion or fire," Kindshi said. "This is just a safeguard measure to make sure they are aware."

Kindshi said several of these contacts have proved to be stubble fires in the past but some have proved valid.

"It is better to be aware of the possible danger than not to be," Kindshi said.

Vaughn said Pampa was located in the middle of several high risk centers. The civil defense coordinator had just received a booklet from the Federal Emergency Management Agency — the new name for the civil defense program — listing the most possible "targets" should the country face an enemy attack.

According to the booklet's map of high risk areas, Pampa is included in Region VI. This Region consists of Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and New Mexico.

The map shows the city surrounded by such potential nuclear target spots as the Pantex plant in Amarillo, Altus Air Force Base in Altus, Okla., Reese Air Force Base located in Lubbock, Clovis' Cannon Air Force Base, Clinton Sherman Air Base in Elk City, Okla. and Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Region VI includes 54 Texas counties viewed by FEMA personnel as strategic bombing locations in the case of nuclear attack. While Gray County is not listed, Potter and Randall counties are.

In the event of a nuclear explosion, Vaughn said it would be very likely the city would experience nuclear fall-out. "Prevailing winds," he said, would be a factor in the amount of nuclear particles descending on the city and the damage caused by the radioactivity.

If an attack should happen with no warning, Vaughn commented, "there would not be much we could do." He said if a warning could be issued giving the civil defense program 72 hours to a week to make preparations, loss of life could be lessened greatly.

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - The special interest groups opposed to mandatory deposits on beer and soda containers continue to pour millions of dollars into high-powered campaigns to thwart the recycling of bottles and cans.

In statewide referenda throughout the 1970s, opposition to proposed deposit laws has been financed almost exclusively by beer brewers, soft drink bottlers and the glass, aluminum and steel industries.

Ballot measures in Colorado, Massachusetts, Nebraska and Alaska have fallen victim to propaganda campaigns funded by the bottlers of Pepsi Cola, Coca Cola, Dr. Pepper and Seven Up; the brewers of Budweiser, Coors, Miller, Pabst and Schlitz beers; the Can Manufacturers Institute, the American Iron & Steel Institute and the Glass Packaging Institute.

That pattern was repeated this year in the states of Ohio and Washington, where initial surveys indicated that there was overwhelmingly public support for deposit laws.

In Washington, opponents amassed a treasury of more than $900,000, including a $95,000 loan from the can industry; generous contributions from Owens-Illinois, Anchor Hocking, Brockway, Kerr and other glass manufacturers; and large donations from Reynolds, Kaiser and other aluminum producers.

The proposal was rejected in a 59-41 vote. They used almost $1 million essentially to buy the election with an advertising campaign that terrorized and confused people," said Philip Morley of Citizens for Returnable Beverage Containers, the Seattle organization that promoted the measure.

In Ohio, a similar ballot initiative was overwhelmingly defeated by a 72-28 margin after opponents spent $1.5 million on a campaign that included dire warnings about disease-carrying insects congregating in empty soda bottles and cans.

"They conjured up visions of an army of cockroaches poised at the Michigan-Ohio border, waiting for approval of the referendum so they could invade Ohio," says Sandie Nelson of Environmental Action, a Washington-based organization. In fact, there have been no serious sanitation problems in Michigan since the voters of that state rejected almost $2 million worth of industry claims and voted 63-37 to approve a deposit law in 1976 balloting.

"The people of Michigan not only have stopped a costly and wasteful trend; they show to have reversed our plunge into a throwaway society," says Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken. "Our experience...underscores the need for a national beverage container deposit law."

In Maine, which passed a deposit law in the same year as Michigan, an industry-backed repeal effort was trounced this year by a resounding 84-16 margin.

That experience suggests that where voters are familiar with deposit laws—and less susceptible to the industry's misleading, deceptive and inaccurate claims—the concept enjoys broad popular support.

For example, one standard scare tactic is the baseless warning that deposit laws will lead to massive unemployment in the bottling, brewing and container industries. On the basis of those claims, the Maine AFL-CIO opposed the initial proposal three years ago.

But this year the labor federation reversed its position and strongly supported the law. "Our outlandish fears of losing jobs have been quelled," says an AFL-CIO official who notes that no job losses have been identified anywhere in New England since enactment of the law.

In addition to Maine and Michigan, Oregon, Vermont, Connecticut, Iowa and Delaware already have deposit laws that save energy, money and scarce resources.

Other states cannot continue to postpone the inevitable legislation necessary to salvage the almost 5 billion beer and soda bottles and cans now being discarded every year.

The industry groups really haven't been buying victory with their extravagant spending. Instead, they've been renting a costly delay at a price that's far too high for the nation to continue to pay.

Supply vs. demand should set price

When prices rise sharply, people who pay them are disturbed and turn to the "protector from all ills," the government.

When an interest rate, which is a price for the use of money, takes a jump, people are even more shaken. Interest rates, it seems to be assumed, have no business to change, especially upward. Let the government do something about it.

It seems we forget that we live in what is, or is supposed to be, a free economy where all prices, including interest rates, rents and wages, vary with supply and demand for the thing priced. When any change in price occurs, it does so in order to "clear" the market, that is to satisfy all buyers and sellers insofar as possible, leaving no surplus or shortage. This being the case, why drag in the government? Why appeal to political authorities to do something the market is in process of doing of itself?

Habit is strong. For years the people of New York City paid a nickel to ride on a subway almost anywhere they might want to go in that city. When one dire morning the fare suddenly rose to a dime many were considerably upset, if not outraged. Of course, it has since gone still higher.

Likewise, if one has long been accustomed to borrow at six or eight percent, he finds it disturbing, if not downright shocking, to be charged an interest rate of 10, 12 or 15 percent.

American motorists for years paid only a few cents a gallon for gasoline. A tankful was available for little more than small change. To most it was a trifling purchase. Naturally they jumped in the car just to go around the block.

Then the Middle East suppliers of petroleum raised their selling price sharply, and this burden was passed along to the motorist. He could bear it with little strain, but he was upset nevertheless. "The government ought to do something!" he fumed.

The oil producers, following the OPEC lead, jacked their price because they were confident the motorist could and would pay it. In economic jargon, demand for gasoline was inelastic, they thought.

And it was. In spite of the raise in price, motorists, gainsaying their protests, continued to drive their cars just about as much and to buy just about as much as before. The oil sheiks had guessed right. The market would stand a price increase.

Perhaps it would stand another. After a little time had elapsed, the sheiks raised the ante again.

But this will not go on indefinitely. At some point demand for oil will turn elastic. Another raise in price will be followed by such a slump in demand that producers will see their profits fall. They had better not make that raise.

The consumers are not at the mercy of the producers of oil. Both consumers and producers have a say.

The right price is the price that yields maximum profit, over the long run, to the producers. That is also the price that yields maximum satisfaction to the consumers.

Fuel-aid dilemma

Some of the "excess profits" to be drained from the oil companies are to be channeled to help the poor meet the rising costs of heating oil this winter.

The administration and Congress have seemed obsessed, in fact, with the fear that low-income groups might have to choose between eating and heating or that the government would be blamed if welfare recipients froze to death. Thus, it is not surprising that Congress has acted with uncharacteristic alacrity to provide fuel subsidies. The House voted overwhelmingly—almost 3 to 1—to spend $1.35 billion for this purpose, outdoing the Senate which approved a $1.2 billion aid bill a few days earlier.

But, even though the fuel-aid concept suggests an irresistibly easy political choice between profit-rich oil companies and freezing poor folks, there are few problems less likely to be solved by simply throwing money at it.

The House bill was designed to help residents of the Northeast. The legislation, however, would send checks of up to $400 each this winter to persons regarded at the poverty-income level in all states and territories, including such sun-belt areas as Florida, Arizona, California, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. A complex allocation formula calls for larger sums and tax credits to those states with the coldest weather and the greatest number of low-income persons.

Basically, the fuel-aid checks would go to everyone enrolled on welfare, food stamps or supplementary Social Security for the

Leisure will kill you

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON--This country is producing so much leisure equipment for the home that nobody has any leisure time any more to enjoy it. A few months ago I bought a television tape recorder to make copies of programs when I was out of the house.

Last week I recorded the Nebraska-Oklahoma football game. When I came home in the evening, I decided to play it back. But my son wanted to play "Baseball" on the TV screen with his Atari Computer. We finished four innings when my wife came into the room and asked me if I would like to listen to the Vienna Opera on our hi-fi stereo set. I told her I was waiting to finish the baseball match so I could watch the football game I had recorded.

She said if I watched the football game for three hours, I would miss "Love Boat." I told her I would record "Love Boat" and we could watch it later in the evening. She protested that "Casablanca" was showing on Channel 5 at 11:30 and she wanted to see it agains.

"Don't worry," I assured her, "we can watch 'Love Boat' late Saturday and 'Casablanca' on Sunday morning when we get up."

"But if we watch 'Casablanca' tomorrow morning when can we see the instant Polaroid movies you took of Ben yesterday afternoon?"

"We'll see them after we play backgammon on the new table."

"If we do that," my daughter said, "we won't be able to see the Washington Redskins-New York Giants football game."

"I'll record the Redskins-Giants football game and we'll watch it while '60 Minutes' is on the air. We can see '60 Minutes' at 11 o'clock."

"But," my son said, "you promised to play the pinball machine with me at 11."

"Okay, we'll play pinball at 11 and watch '60 Minutes' at midnight."

My wife said, "Why don't we listen to the Vienna Opera while we're eating and then we can save an hour to play computer golf?"

"That's good thinking," I said. "The only problem is I've rented a TV tape for 'Cleopatra' and that runs for three hours."

"You could show it Monday night," she suggested.

"I can't do that. I have to return the tape Monday afternoon or be charged for it another week. I have an idea. I won't go to work Monday morning and we'll watch it then."

"I was hoping to use our Jacuzzi Monday morning," my wife said.

"Okay, then I'll tape Cleopatra" and you can see it Monday afternoon."

"I'm using the se. Monday afternoon," my son said, "to play digital hockey on the TV screen."

"You can't do that," I said. "I have to watch the 'Today' show in the afternoon if I'm going to watch 'Cleopatra' in the morning."

"Why can't you watch the 'Today' show at dinnertime?" my wife asked.

"Because the Wolfingtons are coming over to hear me play 'Tea for Two' on the electric organ."

"I thought we might play computer bridge at dinner," my wife said.

"We'll play it after my encore," I assured her.

"Then when will we see 'Monday Night Football'?" my son wanted to know.

"Tuesday," I said.

"Does that mean you're not going to work on Tuesday?" my wife asked.

"How can I go to work," I yelled, "when I've got so much leisure time on my hands?"

What smoking does

By William Steif
There are 57 million people over 18 who smoke in this nation. Most, like myself, smoke cigarettes.

Like non-smokers, we get sick. And like non-smokers, we have to take medication. At that point, however, smokers are different from everyone else. For example:

- Smokers take more cough medicine, drugs containing aspirin, pain medicine, sleeping pills, tranquilizers, diuretics, hormones, iron pills, amphetamines, antibiotics, stomach medicine and laxatives than non-smokers.
- Darvon, the pain-killer, is less effective in smokers than in non-smokers. Similarly, smokers must use more Talwin (trade name for a prescription pain-killer) than non-smokers when the drug is used in combination with nitrous oxide for anesthesia.
- These are two things Food and Drug Administration scientists have discovered in their continuous research on smoking over the past 15 years. Among other effects, discussed in the 1979 Surgeon General's report on smoking:
 - For some drugs (but not others), "Smokers may need a larger dose or may have to take the drug more often than non-smokers."
 - Smoking increases the risk of heart attack, stroke and other circulatory diseases among women who also use oral contraceptives. The risk is higher in women older than 37 and in heavy smokers.
 - There is also evidence that women aged 39 to 45 may run an increased risk of heart attack if they smoke and take non-contraceptive estrogens.

The prime effect of smoking is the ability of nicotine and other trace articles in tobacco to speed up the process by which the body uses and eliminates a drug.

"This means," says the FDA, "that a drug may be less effective...and the duration of its effect may be shortened. In such a case that drug won't be able to do the job it is supposed to do...Smokers may therefore need different doses or may have to take a drug more frequently than non-smokers."

Smoking also affects the results of lab tests, the scientists say. The "normal" of non-smokers is different from the "normal" of smokers.

For instance, smokers show higher levels of white blood cells even when there's nothing wrong with them (infection or other illness tends to raise white blood cell counts). Smokers who inhale have a greater average number of white blood cells than smokers who don't inhale.

Another change laid to smoking: The size of red blood cells increases. FDA researchers believe this is because the high levels of carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke reduce the amount of oxygen the blood can carry, and smokers' systems adapt by increasing the mass of the red cells.

The nutritional effects of smoking have been known for 40 years.

Smoking alters the way the body handles carbohydrates and proteins, reducing the body's efficiency in retaining nitrogen. Some scientists—not all—also believe smoking increases cholesterol in the blood.

Smoking may increase the need for certain vitamins, too.

Finally, you may recall a mention of "trace particles" in tobacco a few paragraphs earlier. Cigarette smoke, FDA scientists say, "includes a number of trace metals...cadmium, lead, arsenic and selenium, which may accumulate in the body. Radioactive polonium, present in tobacco leaves, can enter the lungs."

These are only a few findings from a concise summary of the impact of smoking. The summary is entitled "Drug Effects Can Go Up In Smoke." It's available, free, by sending a postcard request to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 688G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The summary is easy to read, and worth reading. It may scare you; it did me. But it's factual, not intended to scare.

Who knows? Maybe I'll even stop smoking.

FATHER TASH

Father Tash not 'typical' of priests

Father Tash, director of pastoral care at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, is not your "typical" priest.

He dresses in color-coordinated sports jackets and slacks — with the priest collar, of course. His jewelry consists of a heavy gold cross on a chain, a gold bracelet and gold watch. His hair is touched with a suitable amount of gray, giving him a distinguished appearance.

He is intelligent, humorous and knows how to turn a question to his advantage.

The last attribute he learned while making speeches over the Panhandle for the Amarillo "Operation - Drug Alert Program".

"I've been to almost every school in the Texas Panhandle over a period of five years," Father Tash said. His favorites were Quail, Lela and Samnorwood — "I thought it was a person."

Drug abuse is not as wide-spread now, he believes. "Children are not experimenting as much as they were then (late 60s and early 70s)." The drug problem has subsided somewhat, Tash said. It appears to have reached a leveling off place, he added.

He described the change over the decade as the arc of a pendulum. It is now reaching the other end of the "swing", he thinks.

Fear is involved in the reduced use of drugs — especially hard drugs, he commented. Children have seen the effects drugs made on the early 70s teenagers and they are "thinking twice before they leap, instead of not thinking at all."

Much drug abuse begins in the home medicine cabinet, Tash said. Parents leaving their prescribed medicine in the cabinet or lying around at the home presents a temptation to children.

Experimentation was listed by Tash as a major cause of drug abuse. He said kids want to "try it and find out."

The most prevalent reason for drug usage, he felt, is escape. "Children don't want to face the pressures" from their friend and from their parents, he concluded.

Many are curious, he said. "What would happen if I took this?" is what he believes children and teenagers think. Other causes he listed are pleasure, rebellion, and conformity.

Communication between children and their parents would be a giant step towards eliminating or greatly reducing drug abuse. "Open the lines of communication between parents and young people," Tash insisted, "then they won't go to other things or other people."

Hospital lease to headline meeting

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Final consideration of the certificate of need submitted by the Hospital Corporation of America for a new hospital — Coronado Community — in Pampa will headline a Jan. 3 meeting of the staff review committee of the Panhandle Health Systems Agency.

The committee met Thursday in Amarillo to hear testimony from persons involved in the lease-purchase of Highland General Hospital to HCA, including Guy Hazlett, hospital administrator. Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, Gray County commissioner Ted Simmons of McLean, plus representatives of HCA.

The governing body of the PHSA will meet Jan. 10 to act on recommendations made by the nine-member staff review committee. Dr. R.M. Hampton of Pampa and Mrs. Ruth Magee of McLean are members of the governing body. PHSA is administered by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

PHSA will send their decision to the Texas Health Facilities Commission for them to approve or disapprove of the certificate of need. THFC will then have 90 days to make a decision.

Ted Simmons, a five-year member of the Gray County commissioners court, testified that until 1973, the current facility, Highland General, operated near the break-even point. But the number of unpaid bills had grown in the years since.

"Plus, the facility started needing repairs in 1971," Simmons said. "But since most of the construction was in concrete, it would have been expensive to repair it."

The commissioners court began investigating leasing of the hospital, he said, and decided on HCA.

"They offered us a reasonably competitive price and said they would replace the hospital instead of trying to repair it," Simmons said. HCA took over operations of Highland General in February.

Judge Kennedy testified that after "considerable" study by all personnel involved, including elected officials and the medical staff, the county decided to lease the hospital.

"We have done the foremost step in preserving the economy of our county — we had been faced with a business proposition we couldn't handle anymore," he said. "We've placed the financial burden on a private group. Highland General simply threatened to bankrupt the county."

Kennedy added that with the leasing, he sees additional revenue that can be returned to county government.

Dr. Earl Hoffer, director of Highland General's emergency room, told the committee that medical officials were "intimately" involved with the architect's layout of Coronado Community Hospital.

"This new facility will be cost-effective as well as medically-effective," Hoffer testified. "The architectural design follows these guidelines. These people are professionals in the hospital business."

Richard Miller, president of Earl Swenson Architects, the group that designed Coronado Community, explained problems facing Highland General, especially existing violations of federal and state hospital standards.

"Repairing Highland General would involve tearing out ceilings and walls, among other things, to make it fit existing standards," Miller said. "The room size for double rooms in Highland is too small according to federal standards and toilets for the handicapped violate the Texas Health Code."

Jim Henry, vice-president for development for HCA, said electrical problems at Highland "are too extensive to correct because we would be working in a concrete slab structure."

"After our survey, the engineers decided a replacement facility would be our best bet," Henry said.

The economics of replacement versus repairing of Highland General, including discussion of lost revenue, were discussed by Jim Burnett of HCA.

"We decided we had to replace the facility so we met with department heads and others to discuss what would be needed," Burnett said. "The placement of departments was important — there's a lot of wasted space in Highland General."

Rusty street signs to be thing of past soon

An end to all the rusty and unreadable street signs in Pampa is in sight now that city officials have purchased a sign-labeling machine from a south Texas town.

"This is the most economical method we know of providing sign replacement and still retain a large portion of the capital investment," City Manager Mack Wofford said.

Labor costs will be drastically reduced, he explained, due to the volunteer labor which will be provided by the Pampa Fire Department. The men — "the heart of the project," Wofford said — will use their spare time to make the new street signs at no extra labor cost. The firemen will be doing the work "as time allows," he said. "We don't want to pre-empt their primary duties."

The large, square machine is a used 3M model purchased — along with some supplies — for $1000 from Burnet, a small town near Austin. It uses a combination of heat and vacuum to seal reflectorized sheeting on aluminum blanks.

The initial outlay of $1000 is still $2000 less than the price of a new sign making machine according to an estimate the city received from 3M last March, Wofford said.

The city intends to use the machine to replace all city street and traffic control signs. The priority at this time, he commented, is replacing street signs on all the main thoroughfares.

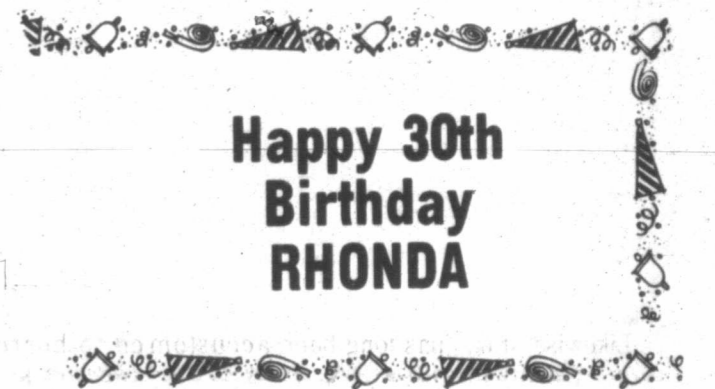

The replacing will have to be on a piece-meal basis at this time, he explained, since the city does not have the $35 to $40,000 needed to do a complete sign replacement program. "We don't have that much money in the budget right now," he added.

Wofford believes the approximately $4,000 left for sign replacement in the city's budget may be amended, if the program goes well and the commission agrees.

After the firemen make the signs, the street department will place them on poles around the city. If the poles have to be replaced, Wofford commented, the city will "probably go to rectangular poles." As many signs as possible will be put on one pole, he said.

Describing the signs themselves, the city manager said they will be green, with white reflective letters. The block numbers will be in the upper right hand corner of the sign.

State judge agrees with Shah protest denial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A state judge — who made it clear he has no use for the shah of Iran or the Ayatollah Khomeini — says an anti-shah rally here could escalate into violence that would have local and international repercussions.

State District Judge Peter Michael Curry ruled Thursday that city officials could deny parade permits to Iranian students who sought to protest the presence of the deposed monarch at nearby Lackland Air Force Base.

The city also denied a permit to Ku Klux Klansmen who planned a counter-rally. The KKK had only planned to counter any Iranian demonstration, and city officials said they feared violent clashes and possible retaliation against the 50 American hostages in Tehran.

"We'd have all kinds of problems, not just local, but international problems," Curry said in an argument with Iranian plaintiff Ali Seyyed Fanai Khayat after the ruling.

During the debate, the judge told the San Antonio College student that he would not argue on behalf of either the shah or the current Iranian ruler.

"The plague on both their houses," he said. The hearing was convened Thursday immediately after Louis Linden, attorney for the students, challenged the city's Tuesday refusal of the permits.

The 200 Iranian at SAC had planned two rallies today — one near Lackland and one downtown. Khayat said the informal SAC student organization he represents would not demonstrate without a permit, but cautioned that he could not speak for all of the students.

Linden, who is researching an appeal, contended the Iranians' rights were unfairly overshadowed by the Klan's threats of violence.

"What really terrifies me and makes me want to throw up is that (the city has) told us anything the Ku Klux Klan doesn't like ain't going to happen," argued Linden.

But Crawford Reeder, lawyer for the city, said the decision was not based on the Klan threats.

"The central point is that if it were not for the hostages, (the local Iranians) would be right," he said. Militants holding the American hostages are demanding the return of the shah for trial.

Reeder called local civil rights organization officials who testified the rallies would lead to violence. The witnesses were from black and Mexican-American organizations.

Police and city officials also testified they feared violent clashes between the Iranians and the Klansmen.

Linden charged it easy for city officials to forego the constitutional rights of the Iranians — who he said are looked on as "a bunch of damned rug merchants" who are "jacking up the price of our oil."

"It's real easy for the Klan to come in in this case and say don't let the Iranians talk, because when they talk we are going to kill people," he said. "How soon is it going to be when the Ku Klux Klan is doing this all the time."

Meeting to be held in Miami

The Texas Department of Agriculture will have a representative in the Miami Community Center, December 13, 1979 at 7:00 to complete all the requirements for certification and purchase of the M-44 Cyanide Gun.
This will qualify those who attend for a Texas Department of Agriculture number. The Environmental Protection Agency requires a person to be licensed to purchase and use the M-44 cyanide gun.
The M-44 is a patented spring-operated device used with a toxin to control coyotes. A "rotten" bait is used with the device to attract the coyote. When the animal tries to pull the bait from the ground, the spring ejector releases and propels powdered cyanide salt into the animal's mouth. This action causes no pain and is of such a nature that the animal dies quickly. It is the most humane device yet developed for coyote control and is much less hazardous to humans or livestock than other devices.

Anti-Iranian sentiment similar to World War II

DALLAS (AP) — With the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941 came a wave of anti-Japanese sentiment that swept across the United States. In 1942, the panic culminated in the incarceration of 110,000 Japanese-Americans in U.S. internment camps.
Thirty-seven years later, some of those citizens hear a strikingly familiar ring to the anti-Iranian cries that now echo throughout the nation.

Within a few days of the Pearl Harbor attack, "people became very aggressive and 'a Jap is a Jap is a Jap,'" said Hiroo Fukuyama. "The only difference between that and the Iranian students now is that it involved American citizens."
"Like the Iranian students, suddenly we realized what was happening. It happened so fast. Suddenly we were at war," he said.
Fukuyama was 21 in 1942, the son of a hardware store owner in San Pedro, Calif. He, along with his parents and a brother, were among those forced to auction their possessions and be herded into the Amache Relocation Center at Granada, Colo.

"They didn't call it a concentration camp, but that's what it was. There was no brutality as such, but the humiliation was terrible. It was a terrifying experience," said Fukuyama, now executive vice president of U.S. Aerial, Inc., a U.S.-Japanese television and filmmaking company.
Fukuyama said he was accused several times on the street before he was sent to the camp, and was forced out of the California State National Guard, where he worked as a machinist.

"One day when everyone was in formation at the armory, they called my name out. They said, 'You're a Jap. We don't want you here. You're out of the guard.'"
He then sought work at the city water works.
"They just kept me waiting and I was looking at all the drawings of the water works. First thing he said was, 'Are you Chinese?' I said, 'No, I'm Japanese.' So he said, 'What the hell are you doing in this place?' He got very upset that I had been looking at the drawings of the water works."

Why did the Americans react with such prejudice?
"I think it's a fear that they have because the nation is a very young nation. The first immigrants brought over some of the culture of the old country, but that's mostly gone now."
"Very few Americans knew what was happening. Less Americans know today what had happened... These things can happen to any ethnic or minority group."

Fukuyama said he believes that fear has returned with the Iranian crisis. But he says the students should be allowed to stay.
"I feel that we have an effective surveillance system, anyway. Even when I was in the camp, they had a dossier on everything," he said.

The shah, he said, should be turned over either to Iran or to a world court.

Fukuyama said Americans can't understand Iranians' view of the shah as a criminal.

"One of the problems of this country is that people can't see in perspective," he said.

Dr. Masashi Kawasaki, now a Dallas physician, was 14 when he entered the Canadian relocation camp at Slocan City, in British Columbia. He left in 1946, four years later.

He described his experience in the camp as "rough," but said he's not bitter.

He attributes both the Japanese and the Iranian situations to an attitude that pervades much of American society.
"It's no different than I, myself, first. We see it every day. This is the way we are, unfortunately," he said. "We get afraid, and then we get jealous. I think there was fear of these people, then and now."

As for Iranian students here, "If you want to be aboveboard, you should allow them to stay here," he said.
Sam Yanagisawa, now president of Varo Semiconductors, spent six months at an assembly center and the Topaz, Utah, relocation camp when he was 20.

He said that in both situations, "people are judging a group in general rather than individually... because they're frustrated. It's a natural reaction, to feel emotional about it. Right now, there's not much we can do to help those hostages. But we should be very level-headed and fair."

Yanagisawa said the Iranian students "are wrong in raising so much of a fuss about the shah when they are guests in our country."
He said those who support Ayatollah Khomeini "should be allowed to return to Iran."

"We haven't heard from the moderate group, whose voices are drowned out now. I hope there is a moderate group," he said.
"I think it would be very bad to hand the shah back," he added. "I don't know what the shah may or may not have done. We really don't know much about the whole story. I think we should be reasonable and try to develop some facts about the case."
"People should keep their heads in this situation and not let emotion get away from us," Yanagisawa said.

Alleged targets take witness stand in sheriff's trial

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Three men who were targets of an alleged murder-conspiracy plot by the Gregg County sheriff and others took the stand as defense witnesses in the federal corruption trial of five former or present county officials.

The defense began presenting its witnesses Thursday after prosecutors rested their case against Sheriff Tom Welch, County Commissioner Bill Satterwhite, Peace Justice Charles Cashell and two former sheriff's deputies — Jim Cochran and Bill Roach.

Thursday's three main witnesses were Larry Wayne Burke, Jimmy Makarski and Dan Hayden Aldredge, all felons.

They told of visits they made to "case" Satterwhite's county equipment barn.

The men were considering robbing the barn's safe, which a deputy had told them would contain $50,000, Burke testified.

Makarski then testified he and Aldredge checked out the barn several times, to determine the routine at the building and when county employees were on duty.

"The night you and Aldredge went to the barn was it your intention then to rob it?" defense attorney John Mack Smith asked Makarski.

"No, sir, it was just to see if it was guarded," he replied.
Makarski said the building was guarded that night, and shots were fired as he and Aldredge fled on a motorcycle.

When asked why Burke did not go with them that night, Makarski said, "Because we didn't trust him."

Earlier, defense witness Oscar Menefee testified Welch "seemed shocked" when asked for approval to set up a gambling casino.
Menefee said that he talked to Welch about it at the urging of a man he knew as Larry Keaton, the cover name for undercover FBI agent Lawrence Wansley.

Wansley had testified earlier he posed as a gambler with criminal connections in order to win Menefee's trust and to help him approach the sheriff about the casino idea.

"He (Welch) told me 'No' and said I'd get in trouble," Menefee said about the casino discussion. "He said he wasn't going to have that in his town. He just wasn't going to have it."

He said a later meeting between himself, Keaton and Welch also proved unsuccessful.

"I never did think the sheriff was going to accept (the proposal). I just went along with it," Menefee said under cross-examination by a federal prosecutor.
The trial is based on an indictment alleging bribery, facilitating illegal gambling and obstruction of law enforcement.

TEXAS

A high pressure system moved into Texas, bringing dry air and pleasant temperatures across all of the state today.

Forecasts called for mostly clear skies with highs ranging from the 50s in Northwest Texas to the 70s in South Texas and Southwest Texas. Most of the state was to have readings in the 60s.

Clear skies prevailed during the early morning hours. Temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s. Extremes ranged from 31 at El Paso to 48 at Abilene.

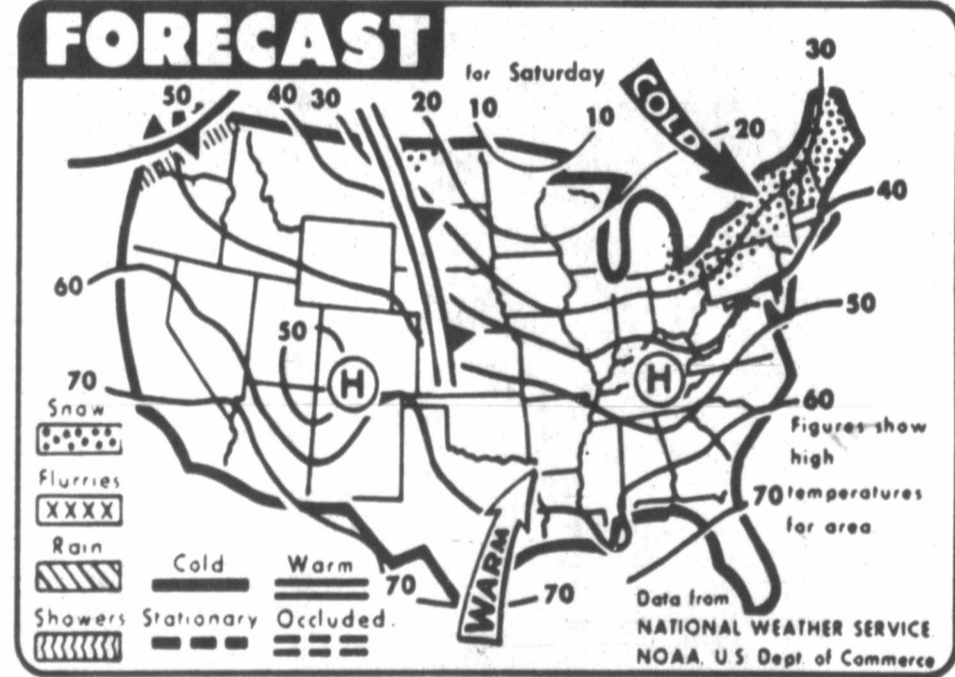

NATIONAL

A low pressure system over Minnesota today scattered snow, rain and freezing drizzle from the northern half of the Mississippi Valley to the Dakotas.

Travelers advisories were issued for parts of North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin and gale warnings remained in effect for most of the Great Lakes region. Winter storm warnings and travelers advisories also were posted for portions of Michigan.
Meanwhile, an eastern cold front spread rain from the Florida peninsula to the North Atlantic states and the Ohio Valley.

Strong winds continued to buffet the northern half of the Rockies and sections of the High Plains, and light snow cloaked parts of Montana.

Clear skies were the rule over most of the area from California to the Lower Mississippi Valley and parts of the Tennessee and Lower Ohio valleys.

SNOW is forecast for Maine, extending to northeast Pennsylvania, northeast Ohio and part of Michigan for Saturday, according to the National Weather Service.

Beef quota system takes step forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new method of computing annual quotas of beef that Australia and other foreign countries can ship to the United States has taken another step forward in Congress.

The Senate Finance Committee approved the measure Thursday by voice vote. It would automatically allow more foreign meat into this country whenever domestic hamburger supplies decline.

Called a "counter-cyclical" program, the House passed a similar bill 352-48 on Nov. 14.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the legislation's impact on consumer food prices over a 10-year period "would be about neutral."

Ten years is about the length of the normal cattle cycle — the time it takes for producers to reduce herds in response to an oversupply and depressed prices, and then to rebuild them again.

For example, after cattle inventories peaked five years ago, producers reduced herds dramatically and only recently have gradually begun to rebuild them. It will be several more years, at least, before U.S. beef output is able to increase substantially.

With farmers and ranchers keeping more cows now for breeding, fewer of them are being slaughtered. Those traditionally provide much of the U.S. hamburger supply.

Thus, U.S. hamburger supplies are relatively tight now, but so are supplies from traditional foreign sources. Their cattle industries are on much the same cycle as U.S. producers because the existing law encourages a worldwide pattern.

Present law, enacted in 1964, requires fresh, frozen or chilled meat imports to be reduced when domestic supplies of those meats decline and consumer prices rise. Presidents can — and usually have — suspended or increased the import quotas to help dampen meat prices for American consumers.

Those moves, however, have always prompted complaints from the cattle industry that presidents are hurting their chances to make enough money in tight-supply years to stay in business.

President Carter, who vetoed a similar bill in November 1978, has said he would sign the 1979 version even though it gives him less authority to set aside quota formulas than present law.

Under the bill, at least 1.25 billion pounds of meat would be imported each year. That is 50 million pounds more than required by this year's multilateral trade package, in which the United States agreed to allow at least 1.2 billion pounds of the quota-type meat enter each year.

Carter, acting under the 1964 law, suspended quotas for 1979 and settled on "voluntary restraint" agreements with 14 foreign suppliers — led by Australia and New Zealand — to allow no more than 1.57 billion pounds into the U.S. market.

The bill forbids quota suspensions or increases if prices are falling and cow-beef production rising, except in times of natural disaster, national emergencies or "market disruptions."

According to the Agriculture Department, U.S. beef output by commercial packing houses will total about 21.1 billion pounds this year, down 12 percent from 1978.

Officials say "not much change in beef production is expected" in 1980 but that larger supplies of pork and poultry will help offset the lag in beef output.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts are holding to an earlier prediction that the surge in milk production in the second half of this year will carry over through mid-1980, at least.

Milk output this year is expected to be about 123.4 billion pounds, an increase of more than 1 percent from 1978. A further gain of about 1 percent is in the works next year, the department's outlook board said Thursday.

A similar projection was made last month, and there was nothing in the latest report that signalled any significant change from it.

Milk prices at the farm, which may average about 14 percent higher this year than in 1978, may increase an additional 9 percent to 11 percent in 1980, the report said.

Thus, with production continuing to rise and prices likely to increase further, dairy farmers' gross receipts also are expected to rise. But higher expenses may hold producers' net incomes to smaller gains next year, it said.

Dairy sales receipts are expected to total another record of about $14.5 billion this year, up from the previous high of $12.7 billion in 1978.

Retail prices of milk and other dairy products are forecast to gain 8 percent to 10 percent next year, about in line with other food items, officials said. This year, however, dairy prices at retail are headed up about 11.5 percent, slightly more than the average increase predicted for all foods.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Membership in the American Farm Bureau Federation has risen again to an all-time high, says its president, Allan Grant.

This year, he said Thursday, Farm Bureau included 3,198,631 "member-families," an increase of 121,764 from 1978.

Grant, in a statement issued by the federation's office here, said his organization's membership "now includes nearly 90 percent of the nation's ranchers and farmers."

Rodeo program to be aired

The Miami Implement Company of Miami, Texas will join over 1100 other participating Hesston farm equipment dealers on sponsoring the telecast of the 1979 National Finals Rodeo from Oklahoma City.

The telecast, on KAMR-TV Channel 4, Amarillo, Texas will air at 8:00 p.m., Wednesday, December 12.

It will mark the sixth straight year that Hesston Corporation and its participating dealers will be sponsoring the final championship performance of the "Super Bowl" of pro rodeo.

The special network broadcast will feature the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association's (P.R.C.A.) top performers in the final go-rounds of barrel racing, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping, team roping, steer wrestling and girl's barrel racing. Only the top 15 pro rodeo athletes in each event are eligible to compete in the National Finals. The championship climaxes nearly 600 P.R.C.A. sanctioned rodeos held in more than 40 states and 4 Canadian provinces during 1979.

Rodeo commentary will be handled by six-time World Champion Cowboy, Larry Mahan, and veteran rodeo announcer Bob Tallman.

During the telecast, Hesston will present its annual non-commercial "Salute to Agriculture." This one-minute feature, which pays tribute to North American agriculture, was the winning entry in this year's "Salute to Agriculture" essay competition sponsored by Hesston for members of the Future Farmers of America (FFA), a national organization of farm youth.

Western film and recording star Rex Allen will also be a part of the special National Finals Rodeo network broadcast.

Special services to be held

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will have a special service Friday night, Dec. 7th, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Gospel recording artist LeRoy Blankenship of Sunnyside, Washington will be singing and speaking at the service.

Blankenship has recorded fourteen gospel albums and written numerous gospel songs which are being sung by groups across the nation.

Pastor Albert Maggard and the local congregation extend an invitation to everyone to attend this special service.

Mormons slate open house

The public is invited to an open house, Saturday from 6:30 to 8:00 p.m., at the Church of the Latter Day Saints (Mormons), located at 731 Sloan.

There will be various displays on genealogy, the church welfare program, relief society program for women, and the Primary Program for Children.

Refreshments will be served.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life,
in thy presence is fulness of joy..."

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

THE SEASON FOR . . .

COLDS AND FEVER

THE COMMON COLD . . . one of the few viruses that man has not conquered with a cure. The only thing that we have come up with so far, are medicines to give us relief. Perhaps, some day, someone will come up with the solution.

There are many spiritual things that we do not know the answers to. These things we must accept on faith.

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."

Deuteronomy 29:29

God has revealed himself, his son, and his commandments, these are the major things.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Penny Burt - unusual lawyer

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Penny Burt would have been an oddity 20 years ago for living 500 miles away from her husband to pursue her own career.

But in these days of women's liberation, she's not so unusual. It matters little that her husband, Howard, maintains his dermatology practice in Austin while she pursues the law in the Panhandle as the new assistant district attorney for the 31st and 223rd district courts.

What does make her unusual is that in 1976, she started law school after eight years as a nurse and after raising four children.

"I had been interested in law school for a long time and my husband knew it was my long-range objective," Burt said. He was the most supportive of her during her three year hitch in law school, she said, and he helped her with various aspects of the law.

"I knew nothing about areas like corporation or banking law and he'd sit down with me to help me understand and learn it," Burt said.

Since she is a native of this area, she wanted to come back to the Panhandle. Her parents still live in Wheeler and she graduated from Kelton High School, which is southeast of Wheeler.

"The kids were kind of surprised when we told them about this job, but my husband is very adaptable so he didn't mind the move," she explained. He plans to move his dermatology practice to Pampa sometime in the future, although "the time-table is indefinite."

Burt graduated in May from St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio and began her new job Nov. 5. She was sworn into the state bar Nov. 12.

Burt sees similarities between nursing and law, besides the fact that both are helping professions. Before she left nursing, she worked in the high-risk critical care sections of several hospitals, an area that she said resembles trial work.

"With both critical care and trial work, you have to meet situations that pop up that you aren't prepared for," Burt explained. "You have to make the right decision right then."

Although she enjoys practicing law, there are times she misses nursing, but only the critical care side of it.

"A lot of hospital practice today is not done for the patient but is done in order to comply with ridiculous federal regulations and guidelines," Burt said. "Over the years it has become standard to run lots of lab tests that aren't necessary — it's a way for the hospitals to protect themselves if something should happen."

Like any other job, law involves hard work and routine. But she said the practice of law is more "intellectually stimulating" than law school.

"There's really nothing hard about law school — it's an endurance course more than anything to see if you can last through it," Burt said.

She believes the prosecution side of the law is the only side she'll ever be interested in.

"I'd find it hard to defend someone who was guilty," Burt said. "The way my mind works I think people should conform to acceptable standards of behavior. But I do agree with the concept that every person has a right to a vigorous defense."

The new attorney enjoys appellate work the most, but she adds that it's the easiest for her right now.

"With appellate work, the trial is behind you and you have time for hindsight — it's excellent practice for learning the law," Burt explained. "In law school you don't practice law, you just learn where to find the law. You have to practice law before you can learn it."

She looked in the Austin area for a job and heard about the Pampa opening, made vacant by the resignation of Mark Buzzard who decided to return to private practice.

"The main reason I took the job was because it's a good opportunity for me to have help on a one-to-one basis in learning criminal law and trial work," she said. "The job possibilities in civil law weren't as interesting."

In her first month on the job, Burt has been meeting people, learning the office routine and doing various pieces of legal research.

"I do what Harold (Comer, district attorney) tells me to do," she said, laughing. "Whatever he says, I do."

Burt spends a fair amount of her weekend time on the airplane to Austin to have time with her husband. And she says her children look at her job as a good convenience.

"It's a good stop-off for them when they go skiing," Burt said. Her children, three boys and one girl, range in age from 19 to 23, the youngest being a college sophomore.

Banker predicts dour consequences

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A New York banker predicted dour consequences for the U.S. economy if proposed windfall profits taxes on oil and gas revenues are not used to develop additional sources of energy.

"If government extracts money from the energy industry and uses it for purposes other than developing more energy, it is sabotaging our own economy," Chase Manhattan Bank Vice President John G. Winger said Thursday.

Speaking at an energy and feedstocks conference at Texas A&M University, Winger said the investments outlook is grim for developing additional energy sources. And he said if present projections come about, "a major financial crisis is inevitable."

U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, said oilmen will produce when it is to their individual benefit to produce.

"If the nation wants more energy production, it's got to make it profitable for a company to do it," said Gramm.

"People will conserve when it costs them not to. It's got to be in their own interest," said Gramm. "Businesses are consuming less energy, but it's not patriotism, it's dollars and cents."

Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton said imposing windfall profits taxes would shift the focus away from conservation and decontrol as methods for dealing with the nation's energy woes.

"We should stop talking about a windfall tax because it misleads and detracts from solving the problem," said Clayton.

"The real windfall from decontrol of oil prices goes to government, since government would receive 60 percent of all additional revenues through sources such as taxes, royalties and lease payments," he said.

Inflation hits state budget

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final segment of a two-part series on the state budget of 1979. It will cover how state funds were spent in the last 12 months.

The Lone Star State spent more money last year than it did in 1978, but that's not a surprising fact considering the national inflation rate of 13 percent.

What is unusual is that the increase in spending matched the boost in funds Texas received in that same time period.

The amount received and the dollars spent both increased nine percent in 1979. Texas received $9.4 billion and spent $8.6 billion.

At the end of fiscal, 1979 — Aug. 31 — the state recorded a larger ending balance than 1978, due mainly to a growth in revenue as compared to expenditures. Each of the past eight years, Texas has ended the fiscal year with a larger closing balance than the previous year.

Nearly half of the monies spent — over $4 billion — went to elementary, secondary and higher education. Of that money, $323.1 million went for contributions to teacher retirement.

Foundation School Program grants were the largest single item of state spending during 1979, with $2.1 billion in grants. These grants accounted for 24 percent of state expenditures.

Services including welfare, mental health, state homes, law enforcement, corrections and sanitation were the second largest total expenditures in the state budget. Welfare had the largest expense to Texas with $1.5 billion, a 13 percent increase from 1978. Mental health and state homes were the next largest with $454 million.

Improvements on highways, natural resources, parks and monuments was the third largest category of expenditures. Highway maintenance with over $1 billion spent was the highest expense in the improvement group.

Other expenditures, including payment of public debts, contributions to employee social security and retirement, totaled $695 million. Employee social security rose 106 percent, from $94.8 million in 1978 to $195.5 million in 1979.

Salaries and wages cost the state $1.9 billion, 22 percent of the total state expenses but the lowest percentage in more than six years.

NEW DIRECTOR of Pampa Family Service Center is Mark Englander, who says the city's referral agencies have a good rapport with each other. Englander comes to Pampa with experience in Kilgore, Amarillo and Mineral Wells.

Englander takes helm at counseling center

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

"We feel like we're back home," said Mark Englander, the new director for the Pampa Family Service Center.

He and his wife, Jan, originally from Amarillo, moved to Pampa last weekend from Mineral Wells, where he was coordinator of clinical services at a residential treatment center for mentally disturbed people.

Since most of their family is located in this area, he commented, he and Jan are glad to be near them.

This week, Englander has spent his time seeing emergency cases, reviewing policies and procedures, and meeting community leaders.

He has been very impressed with the reception and support he has received from the area people. "They've been real open," he commented, adding he believed there was a "good rapport" between the different referral agencies in the city.

"I hope what we can do is to build up a real big referral base," Englander said of the future. "We want people to rely on us as a resource," he added.

For the present, he is concentrating on regrouping and reorganizing the center. With three counselors—two of them new in Pampa—it will take some time, he thinks.

Englander wants to educate citizens of the community in the comprehensive services of the center. He emphasized that all age groups—even pre-schoolers—can be counseled at the center.

Educational programs will be given to area groups, he said, to help people "get in touch with us, so they know what we can provide."

"We want them (the community) to see us as a means to come and gain their own objectives... to see us as a service organization," he added.

Englander graduated from West Texas State University in Canyon and is presently working on his doctorate of psychology. He should finish the doctorate requirements within the next two or three months, he believes.

Before leaving the Amarillo area, he also worked at the Kilgore Children's Psychiatric Center and the Psychiatric Pavilion of Amarillo.

Mail-order sales set new records

Avoiding problems, disappointments with catalog orders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christmas is not far away, but the catalogs have been arriving daily for months. Mail-order shoppers should take care to avoid expensive disappointments.

The Catalog Council of the Direct Mail Marketing Association says mail-order sales last year topped $30 billion and the 1979 total is expected to be even higher because of the gasoline crunch.

As in previous years, the 1979 offerings range from the usual assortment of food, clothing and everyday items to the exotic—like a Texas-shaped swimming pool filled with mineral water.

The increase in catalog sales has brought an increase in problems. The Better Business Bureau said last month that its local offices got 43 percent more complaints about mail-order companies in the first six months of this year than they did in the same period of 1978. The bureau said there were more complaints about the mail-order business than about any other industry.

There are several things you can do to protect yourself. Among them:

— Find out about a company's reputation before you order. Ask friends if they have dealt with the firm. Call the local Better Business Bureau to check complaint records.

— Read the fine print. As the direct mail group says, if an offer "sounds too good to be true, it often is." Do not rely solely on photographs. The item you get may bear little resemblance to the picture in the catalog. Look for dimensions and find out exactly what is included: the trimmings probably cost extra.

— Add up costs. Are shipping charges included in the listed price? If not, how much are they? Once you've paid the postage, a catalog "bargain" may be no cheaper than the same item in your local store.

— Do not send cash. Use a check, money order or credit card. Not only is it dangerous to send cash through the mail, it also leaves you without proof of payment.

— Is there a refund policy? What arrangements will be made to repair or replace damaged merchandise?

— Will you get what you ordered or can the company substitute a comparable item if the product you selected is out of stock? If you don't want a substitute, say so when you place your order.

— Keep a record of your order, including the name and address of the company, the method by which you paid and the date you sent the form in. If possible, keep a copy of the original advertisement.

The most frequent complaints about the mail-order industry involve late deliveries and the Federal Trade Commission has some specific regulations on the subject.

You have the right to know when you can expect your order to be shipped. If the advertisement promises that the merchandise will be "rushed to you in a week," it must be sent out within seven days. If there is no time limit set in the ad, the goods must be mailed within 30 days of the date the order is received.

If the company fails to meet the deadline, it must notify you of the delay and set a new shipping date. You can either agree to the new date or you can cancel your order and get a full refund. The company has to provide a free way for you to reply, sending a pre-stamped postcard or envelope, for example.

If the delay is less than 30 days, you must send in the reply or the company can assume you automatically agree to the new date. If the delay is more than 30 days, you have to give your specific consent; if you don't, the company has to return your money at the end of the first 30 days of the delay.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: My best friend is 14 and her boyfriend is an 18-year-old high school dropout with a terrible reputation.

Her parents forbid her to see him, but she has been sneaking around with this guy.

Three times she has been caught by her parents and each time she was beaten with a belt.

Last night my friend told me she was planning to run away with her boyfriend because her parents have threatened to send her to a girls' home. I'd like to help but I don't know what to do. Please hurry with your answer. — Lisa, Fort Smith, Ark.

Lisa: Tell your mother that your best friend is planning to run away with her boyfriend and ask Mom to call your friend's mom and tell her. I know this sounds like "finking" but the worst thing your girlfriend can do is run away with this boy.

Dr. Wallace: I'm in sixth grade and I want a boyfriend really bad. Our town doesn't have a good selection of boys and the ones worth choosing are all taken by this one certain girl and she won't let us other girls have just one.

I'm tall, have a nice shape, a good personality, and a large chest for my age so why can't I get a boy? — Mary, Worland, Wyo.

Mary: With your personality and shape, the boys will be knocking on your door once they grow up and get out from under the spell of this "one certain girl."

Remember most boys in the sixth grade are more interested in sports than they are in girls.

By the way, my family and I spent a few days in Worland this last summer and my daughter who is in eighth grade told my wife she wouldn't mind living there because the boys were so cute.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 13 and look very mature for my age. I have a 16-year-old boyfriend and he has invited me to his brother's wedding. My mom won't let me go because I'm not allowed to go on a car date.

If I can't go, he will ask another girl. Help. — Patti, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Patti: Have your friend's mother call your mother and invite you to the wedding, telling your mom that an adult will do the driving.

If the answer is still no, let it go at that.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20 in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Gamma Conclave has demonstration

The Gamma Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota met recently for a food demonstration program given by Joy Gibson, consumer research specialist.

Twenty-six members attended the meeting. The demonstration was on high fiber content and low sugar recipes. A H.E.C. student from Amarillo assisted the specialist.

Several inexpensive crafts were explained to the group. Hostesses for the meeting were Frances Wall, Helen Ruth Machie and Eloise Lane.

The Christmas Breakfast will be at 9 a.m. Dec. 8 at the Coronado Inn.

Gift selection for $25 or less

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Shopping on a budget is always difficult, but in the holiday season, many find it even tougher. So much of what's being advertised seems out of reach if, for instance, you're looking for gifts for under $25.

Yet if that's your limit, you hardly need abandon your budget to find quality presents. It's all in knowing what the people on your gift list would really appreciate, and then in shopping for the best values.

One place to start your careful comparison shopping is in the pages of Consumer Reports. Back issues are available at many public libraries.

Over the past year or so, Consumer Reports has evaluated a number of products with list prices under $25. These days list prices don't always mean much, so it pays to shop around for discounts. While few of the products are of the glamorous type, they may be just right for the people on your list.

A woodworker might appreciate the labor-saving potential of an electric finishing sander. One model, featuring fast sanding speed, low vibration and noise, and light weight, lists for $17.

Moving from the workshop into the kitchen, you can find several gifts that will be used throughout the year—a basic, two-slice toaster, for example. Someone who likes to cook might like a spring-wound kitchen timer. Such devices also come in handy for keeping track of time spent in piano practice, or in timing the laundry when the washer or dryer is out of earshot.

Some people on your list might find a can opener a useful addition to their kitchens. Several models, ranging from $24 for a deluxe electric one to under $5 for a hand-held manual style, are available.

At first blush, a set of heavy-duty battery booster cables may not seem like much of a present, yet many drivers don't think of buying cables until they're stuck on the road. Your gift could well save someone unnecessary aggravation.

Many museums around the country offer memberships that include year-round admission and subscriptions to their publications. For example, the Art Institute of Chicago has a membership that costs $20 a year and includes a bulletin.

Choosing that 'doggie in the window'

If you've been eyeing a cuddly bundle of fur frolicking in the window of your neighborhood pet shop, with thoughts of the happy surprise it will be for someone, come Christmas morn, there are some important questions you'll want to ask yourself, and answer, before taking a pet home.

There are more considerations involved than just "love at first sight", since puppies become dogs in very short order, so it's important to choose one that fits into the home he or she will be part of.

Will he or she be living in an apartment or house? Will small children be involved? What is your income bracket? Some breeds can't tolerate the rough - housing of little children; some purely bred animals are more tense and independent than others. Buying a pure bred can be expensive to start with, and the first year with any dog involves a license, inoculations, collar, leash, dishes, toys, grooming utensils and food.

The American Kennel Club in New York City will be happy to send you a free list of breeders, if it's a pure bred you're after. For a mixed breed, or possibly a pure bred found straying, try your local SPCA or animal shelter. There is usually a wide range of choices and you'll be saving an unwanted puppy or dog from being "put to sleep".

Although male dogs are more popular than females and usually cost more, females will usually adjust to pethood more readily. And a female can be spayed to spare you the problems of mating and a litter. Look for a clean, glossy coat, white teeth with firm pink gums, eyes that are alert and not runny. Avoid a puppy with a pot belly - which could be a sign of worms, or one with the sniffles or who seems itchy.

Any owner or agency should be able to give you proof that the animal has had at least one shot and a deworming. Find out too, as much as you can about the breed and full size of the dog you are adopting. Stop at the veterinarian's on your way home for a thorough going over, and make a date for regular inoculations.

After a stop at the local shop for leash and collar, dishes, toys and grooming equipment, then it's home for many happy hours of love, devotion and fun!

Two accepted for DAR membership

Mrs. J.L. Bain and Miss Sharon Alexander were accepted for membership during last week's meeting of the Las Pampas chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. J.R. Spearman, regent, opened and presided over the meeting. The resignations of Mrs. George Friauf and Mrs. Harry Youngblood were announced.

Miss Mary Reeve announced that the group has seven Good Citizens to present pins in February.

Mrs. James L. Vaughn read the President General's Message. Mrs. Leldon Hudson gave the National Defense Report.

Mrs. James Lowe, vice president of Pro - Family Forum, presented the program. She spoke against the International Year of the Child, started in 1976 by the United Nations.

The International Year of the Child has been 1979. A White House Conference on children in 1980 to deal with day care and child care development centers.

Mrs. Lowe explained the humanistic doctrine sponsored by the International Year of the Child, for which 1979 was designated to represent. The doctrine is for permissiveness, promiscuity, pornography, proliferation, patriotism, and no proper perspective for parents, she said, and is against responsibility, righteousness, reverence and repentance, she added.

A White House conference in 1980 will deal with day care and child development centers.

Mrs. John Skelly Jr. and Mrs. J.L. Vaughn were hostesses for the meeting.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Can you tell me anything about albumin in the urine? How does it get there and what can be done to get rid of it? I'm 36 years old and gave birth to my third child three months ago. All through my pregnancy I had to go to the hospital every week for two urine tests.

My delivery was fine and fast (15 minutes). Our beautiful son is fine. When I went back to the doctor for my six weeks check-up, the albumin was up, he said to 3 plus, the highest ever. When I asked the doctor what I should do about it, he just said nothing can be done, just watch for an infection. I'm quite baffled by the whole thing.

I am overweight but have no known illnesses. Is there anything I can do to get rid of the albumin? Also does the albumin cause any illness? My three children are all under five years of age and I would like to be able to enjoy watching them grow up without having to worry about myself.

DEAR READER - Albumin is one of the normal blood proteins. We all have it. A tiny amount of it leaks out through the kidneys into the urine. This is usually such a small amount that it can't be measured. The amount can be increased in the presence of an infection in the urinary tract or a variety of disorders of the kidney.

You should also know that some people can have increased amounts of albumin in the urine without having any important disease. Some people tend to have this simply with standing. We call this orthostatic albuminuria, meaning albumin in the urine because of standing up straight.

It might be helpful to collect your urine while you've been lying in bed for several hours. You could do this by first emptying the bladder, then going to bed and then collecting the urine when you first get up. This specimen could be compared to one obtained while you've been up and around for quite a while. The difference in the amount of albumin in the urine should provide a good clue as to whether it's related to just posture or not.

In any case, unless you can define what's causing the albuminuria, there's not much point in doing anything about it. Just remember that it is a normal blood protein. It's probably a good idea to check in with your doctor regularly until the cause of the albuminuria is solved, such as a postural factor, or until the problem disappears.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 12-12, Your Kidneys And How They Work. It will give you a better understanding of the whole problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you happen to have an inflammation of the urinary tract, that will also cause albuminuria.

HOW TO MAKE A MERRY CHRISTMAS

Robyn Franklin hosts Rho Eta for crafts program

Rho Eta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met last week for a program on handmade crafts.

Lucy Lowe and Billie Reddell from the "Gingham House" presented the program at the chapter's regular meeting, held in the home of Robyn Franklin.

Lisa Crossman, president, conducted the business meeting. Members repeated the opening ritual, which was followed by officer and committee reports.

The chapter's December service project has been dressing dolls for the Salvation Army. The dolls will adorn the Christmas tree on display at Citizens Bank & Trust during the holidays, then given to needy children on Christmas Eve. The Salvation Army hosted a tea last Sunday for those helping with the dolls and awards were given for the "Best Dressed" doll.

Plans were made for the December chapter social and the children's party. Names were drawn for the children to exchange gifts.

The president mentioned that Rho Eta's duties concerning the current Beta Sigma Phi Woman of the Year would be from Dec. 1 through Jan. 14.

A CLOUD of chlorine gas drifted from a water treatment plant in Jefferson County, Ky. Thursday. From 250 to 300 people were evacuated as the green

Case goes before House panel for compensation of oil spill

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Texas government and business representatives have put their case before a House panel considering a measure that would offer federal compensation for damages caused by the massive Ixtoc 1 oil spill.

"Our business community has suffered great losses through no business decision made by our business people and for which no insurance can be purchased," Kirby Liljendahl of South Padre Island said Thursday at a House subcommittee hearing.

The beach town was among the hardest hit by the scarcity of tourists during a peak summer period.

A bill introduced by Rep. Joe Wyatt, D-Texas, would authorize up to $80 million in federal funds to compensate for damages or losses caused by oil that arrived on Texas beaches from the Mexican well.

Ralph Thompson of the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau estimated that hotel occupancy rates dropped from about 100 percent to 30 percent as news of the oil threat spread.

He said the start of the winter tourist season would show how effectively a publicity campaign has spread the word about the oil-free beaches.

Although winds and currents changed to drive the oil back toward the south, the spill in the Bay of Campeche continues and the reversal of currents in the spring could threaten the Texas coast again.

"This time it may not go away after a month," Wyatt said. "It might last all summer."

Texas officials threw their support to the compensation bill. Lawsuits have been filed by the state's attorney general, local governments and private organizations seeking millions of dollars in damages.

Doug Caroom, representing Texas Attorney General Mark White, said federal compensation would relieve the international repercussions stemming from the pending lawsuits.

Any recovery for damages that the federal government later received from private companies, the Mexican national oil company or the Mexican government would replace the expenditures of the compensation fund.

The state of Texas' suit does not name the Mexican national oil company as a defendant. Caroom predicted, however, that it would be likely for the company to be named in the suit and relations with Mexico could suffer as a result.

"Litigation of this sort is never pleasant," he said.

He said another advantage of federal compensation would be a speedy resolution to the claims that face long and complex battles in the court.

Frank Cox, representing Texas Gov. Bill Clements, also endorsed the bill.

State Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston said the compensation program effectively would spread the damages among all American taxpayers for the sake of better international relations, instead of forcing the Texas coastal residents to bear the brunt.

"These people were all innocent victims of a spill over which they had no control," Schwartz said. "The oil that came up to the beaches virtually destroyed the tourist season."

A subcommittee of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, which met this fall in Corpus Christi to hear testimony about the causes and effects of the Ixtoc 1 spill, held the hearing on Wyatt's bill.

The Texas congressman, whose district includes some of the areas hardest hit by the spill, denied that the compensation fund might jeopardize the effort to develop a comprehensive bill to help victims of all oil spills.

"If comprehensive legislation were passed today, victims of Ixtoc 1 would still be left dangling and twisting in the wind," Wyatt said.

Import restrictions would affect companies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A University of Texas study shows United States Oil companies would be affected in widely different ways by restrictions on oil imports.

"Viewing the international operation of multinational oil companies en masse obscures significantly diverse crude oil importing practices," the authors said.

Dr. George Kozmetsky, UT business dean; Hossein Askari, professor of international business; and A. Thompson Reichert, a former research associate in the graduate business school, wrote the report.

They studied the 20 largest oil companies that have foreign operations and completed their work before President Carter halted oil imports from Iran.

"Although dependency figures for our nation may appear to be critical when a particular exporting nation restricts its output, the impact of such restrictions is less important for the United States as a whole than it is for specific companies," the report said.

It said, for example, that Phillips draws 70.8 percent of its imports from Nigeria, Sun 39 percent from Algeria and Exxon 40.1 percent from Saudi Arabia.

The significance of imports to a particular company also differs widely.

The report said Occidental and Amerada Hess import more than 75 percent of their crude oil while Standard of Ohio imports none.

Many companies derive at least 25 percent of their imports from a single country, the study found.

In 1977, it said, several countries relied very heavily on Libya — Amerada Hess, 57 percent of its imports; Cities Service, 32.3 percent; Conoco, 50.3 percent; Marathon, 33.8 percent; Occidental, 82.1 percent; and Sun 28.3 percent.

Four countries relied heavily on Nigeria — Cities Service, 25.1 percent of its imports; Gulf, 53.8 percent; Phillips, 70.8 percent; and Texaco, 29.3 percent.

Saudi Arabia accounted for 40.1 percent of Exxon's imports, 56.9 percent of Getty's, 52.9 percent of Mobil's, 56.1 percent of Standard of California's, 50.6 percent of Tenneco's and 27.8 percent of Union's.

Unemployment expected to inch up this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-expected jump in the nation's unemployment rate during 1979 should begin just as the year draws to a close, government economists are predicting.

The jobless rate defied economic forecasts throughout most of the year by failing to rise above the current 6 percent level, which means 6 million working-age people are seeking employment or are out of jobs.

Carter administration economists, who had expected unemployment to be well above 6 percent at this stage, said they did not expect November's jobless figures, due out later today, to show much change.

December, however, could be a different story. "I expect to see a little increase from October, but not a whopper," said one Labor Department economist, suggesting that unemployment might rise from 6 percent to 6.1 percent.

With a U.S. labor force of just over 100 million, each 0.1 percent increase in the jobless rate represents 100,000 people.

"December, on the other hand, should be bad," said the economist, who declined to be named. The official said large layoffs in the auto and steel industries soon should register in the monthly jobless figures.

Last summer, President Carter's top economists predicted that unemployment would reach 6.6 percent by year's end and keep rising until topping off at 6.9 percent in 1980. The prediction was based on the belief that the economy was sliding into a recession.

However, the economy so far this year has outperformed the forecasts, and that has kept the unemployment rate lower than had been expected. Carter's chief economists say they now doubt the jobless rate will reach 6.6 percent in 1979.

The last time unemployment topped 6 percent was in July 1978. Between July and October of this year, the rate has fluctuated between 5.7 percent and 6 percent.

Some government economists say they still anticipate a recession, and they predict unemployment next year could rise to as high as 8 percent — just around the time of the presidential election.

However, one top administration official, who declined to be identified, said government economists in recent years likely have underestimated economic growth and overestimated the amount of unemployment.

The official, who plays a key role in government economic policy, said the past forecast records raise questions about the accuracy of the latest predictions of what might happen to the economy and the jobless rate in 1980.

If the administration's economists overestimated the jobless rate, they may have been underestimating the inflation rate.

Canadian starts

rescue program

The Canadian Volunteer Fire Department has started a project to insure children, elderly, and disabled persons rescue in case of a home fire.

The project consists of placing red reflecting decals on the inside bedroom doors and those outside windows of such persons.

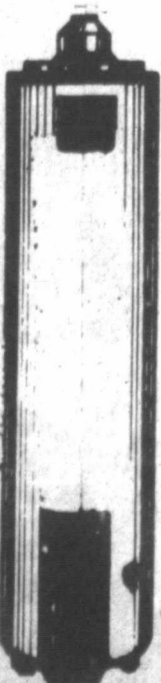

This enables fireman to easily tell if someone is inside who may need help escaping.

The decals can be obtained at many of the Canadian businesses.

RONNIE FAGGINS drilled in 17 points to lead the Pampa Harvesters to a 57-43 win over Lawton MacArthur Thursday in the Lawton Invitational Tournament. Pampa meets the Wichita Falls-Hershey Lawton High winner at 8:15 p.m. tonight in the semi-finals. (Photo by Larry Cross)

Harvesters blitz Lawton Ike, 57-43

LAWTON - Pampa's widely-traveled Harvesters broke away from Lawton MacArthur with a 17-point blitz in the fourth quarter for a 57-43 win Thursday afternoon in the first round of the Lawton Invitational Tournament.

The Harvesters displayed a lot of poise after coming off a lopsided loss to Plainview Tuesday night, making few mistakes to log their fourth win against the same number of losses.

Pampa led most of the way, but never could gain a comfortable advantage until late in the fourth quarter. Ronnie Faggins tipin and Charles Nelson's jumper gave the Harvesters breathing room with a 9-point lead, 51-40, at the two-minute mark.

Lawton led only briefly at 4-2 early in the first quarter before another tipin by Faggins lifted the Harvesters in front to stay.

Faggins had his usual versatile performance with 17 points and a dozen rebounds while unheralded sophomore Charles Nelson was a pleasant surprise for Coach Garland Nichols. Nelson, who drew his first starting assignment, tossed in 6 of 9 field goal tries for 12 points. Just a week ago, Nelson was on the junior varsity roster.

Tom Lambert led the losers with 14 points.

Also figuring in the Harvester scoring were Cedric Parker with 8 points, Joe Jeffers, Kyle Bradford, and Toby Henson, 4 points each, and Jim Agan, 2. Agan, who also worked his way into the starting lineup, was tough on the boards with 7 caroms to his credit.

This was the first game for Lawton MacArthur, who have been involved in the state football playoffs.

Pampa, who defeated Lawton High, 46-37, in the championship finals of the Lawton Invitational in 1975, meets the winner of the Wichita Falls-Hershey Lawton High game at 8:15 p.m. tonight in the semi-finals. The Harvesters are becoming accustomed to road trips, having logged over 2500 miles already this season.

Texas Cowboys turn in good times at NFR

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A pair of Texans managed to put it all together at the National Finals Rodeo here Thursday, giving the best performances so far in the steer wrestling and calf roping.

Steer wrestler Byron Walker of Ennis had his steer in the dirt just 3.9 seconds out of the chute, while Jerry Jetton of Stephenville had his calf roped and tied in 8.5 seconds during the NFR's sixth round.

Walker's run, in particular, put pressure on five-time All-Around Cowboy Tom Ferguson and his No. 1 challenger for this year's honor Paul Tierney.

Ferguson of Miami, Okla., had a slight overall lead on Tierney, Rapid City, S.D., going into the round. Some very good times, including Walker's, had already been recorded when Tierney prepared to take his turn.

When the chute opened Tierney's steer stopped dead and the cowboy fell to the ground empty handed. He jumped back on his horse and finally managed to register a 36.5 timing.

Moments later Ferguson came up, with a chance to pull further ahead in the all-around race, but his steer also set-up and he finished with a 64.8.

Both cowboys also finished out of the points in the calf roping, with Tierney finishing with a 12.3 and Ferguson with a 9.4.

Overall, Ferguson leads in the steer wrestling and holds down the tenth spot in the calf roping, while Tierney is fourth in the steer wrestling and ninth in the calf roping.

Bullrider Denny Flynn, Charleston, Ark., and barrel racer Lynn McKenzie, Shereport, La., have been staying ahead of the pack for nearly the entire rodeo. They both kept the overall leads in their respective events after Flynn scored an 82 and McKenzie recorded a 16.36 timing.

Dan Filippini won the saddle bronc riding with a 40, an event Joe Marvel holds the overall lead in, while Scott Laramore and Bret Tonozzi pulled a few points closer to team roping leaders Don Kimble and Kent Winterton with a winning 6.3 timing.

The rodeo's 1978 bareback Champion Joe Alexander still leads his event, even though Bob Logue won this round with a 76.

Romania wins first gold medal

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Romania, refusing to quit because of only a token performance by injured star Nadia Comaneci, captured the first gold medal in the country's history Thursday night in the women's team World Gymnastics Championships.

Comaneci, her infected and swollen left hand tightly bandaged after an overnight hospital stay, performed only in the beam where she earned a standing ovation with a 9.95.

The 18-year-old queen of the gymnastics world, who earned three gold medals and perfect 10s in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, passed in the uneven bar, the floor exercise and the vault because of the injury.

It was the first time in 12 years that the Soviet Union had failed to earn the women's championship. The joyful Romanian delegation passed out kisses to each other like it was midnight on New Year's Eve.

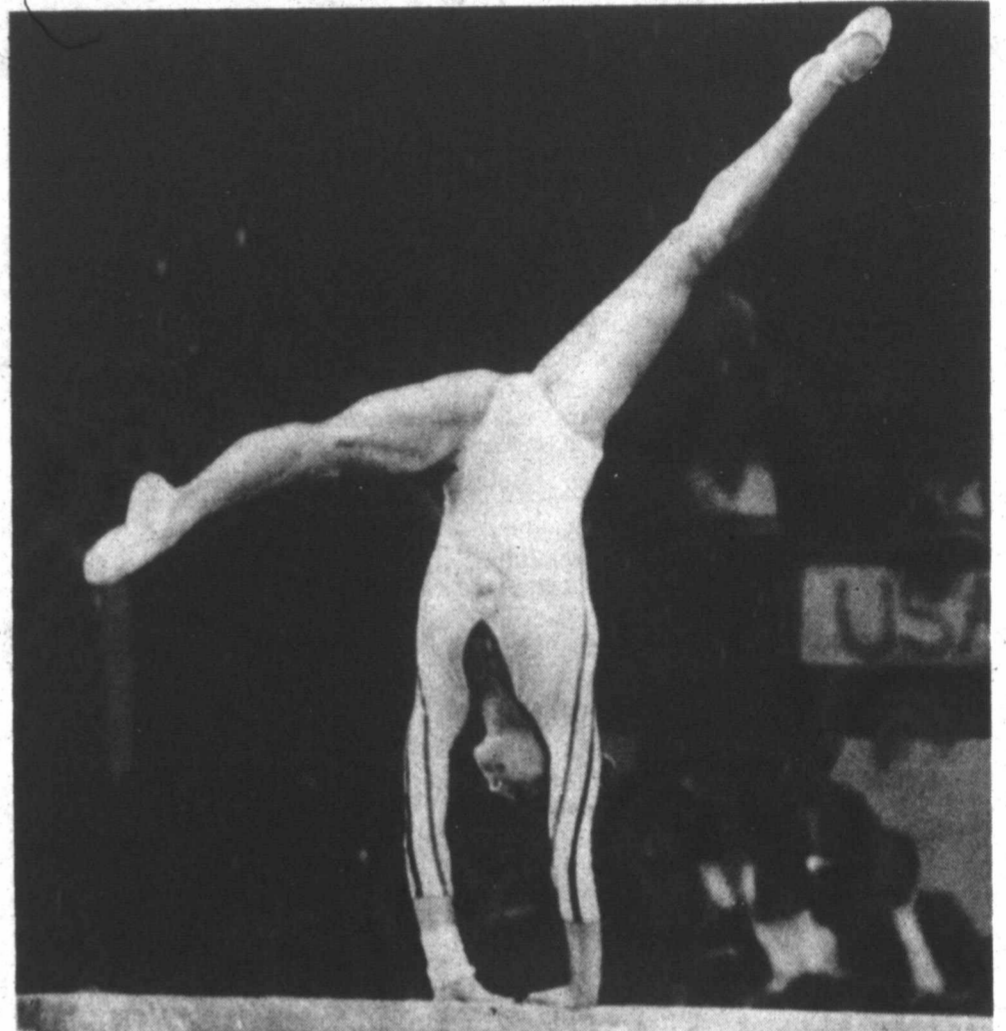

With Comaneci sitting glumly alone, the young teen-age Romanians rallied around 15-year-old Emilia Eberle, Dumitrita Turner, and the sensational Melita Ruhn who scored 9.9s on her floor exercise and the vault.

However, if Comaneci had not taken to the beam the Romanians would have been stuck with Eberle's 8.950 which was posted when she fell off.

Romania scored 389.550 points to Russia's 388.925. East Germany won the bronze at 388.075. China was fifth at 384.600, Czechoslovakia 282.300 and the United States sixth at 381.325.

It was a miserable night for the Americans who only had one high point, the vault where no competitor scored less than 9.75. The low point was the beam where every American gal except Suzy Kellems fell off at least once.

Comaneci forfeited any chances to win her first all-around title in the World Championships by defaulting in the three events. She was taken back to All Saints Episcopal Hospital immediately after the team title was decided.

HER LEFT hand bandaged because of an injury she received in competition early this week, Nadia Comaneci of Romania performs on the balance bar in the World Gymnastics Championships in Fort Worth, Texas Thursday night. Nadia spent the night in a local hospital under treatment and left shortly before the start of tonight's competition to join teammates in the exercises. (AP Laser photo)

Dawkins summoned before commissioner

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Darryl Dawkins, the National Basketball Association's top backboard buster this season, and two of his bosses have been ordered to report to the league commissioner today in response to a stern summons.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien requested the meeting with the Philadelphia 76ers' center, Coach Billy Cunningham and General Manager Pat Williams on Thursday, one day after Dawkins shattered his second backboard in a month.

O'Brien had already warned that intentional destruction of backboards would not be tolerated. However, the 6-foot-11½ Dawkins insists his destructiveness is purely accidental — the result of simply being more powerful than other players.

He calls it "Chocolate Thunder."

The commissioner's warning came after

Dawkins destroyed a backboard Nov. 13 in a game against the Kings in Kansas City. He duplicated the feat Wednesday night in a game here against the San Antonio Spurs.

As a result, both games were delayed over an hour while workmen replaced the backboards.

"Out in the boondocks, Darryl is being viewed as some sort of wonder of nature," Williams said after the latest incident. "The legend of Darryl Dawkins grows around the country."

"Of course, if this gets to be a commonplace thing, it will be annoying," Williams added.

Dawkins said breaking backboards is dangerous.

Then, in the spirit of the old West, the 262-pound player added, "That glass comes down, it's time to get out of Dodge."

Williams said that the 22-year-old Dawkins was not busting up backboards intentionally, nor was he breaking any NBA rules.

"If he was doing something against the rules, then, yes, the league could step in," Williams said.

An NBA official said the league is considering a collapsible basket that would separate from the backboard under more than 260 pounds of pressure.

"The player would end up holding the rim," explained Joe Axelson, the NBA's director of operations. "The rim could then be re-attached quite simply so the game wouldn't be held up."

Dawkins destroyed the backboard Wednesday by cocking the ball between his shoulder blades, soaring into the air and ramming it through the hoop.

"It was the power, the chocolate thunder," Dawkins said of the dunk. "I could feel it surging through my body, fighting to get out. I had no control over it."

Pampa Gold downs Canyon

Pampa Gold slipped away from Canyon Purple in the fourth quarter Thursday for a 55-48 win in ninth grade basketball action here.

Leading by only one after three quarters, Pampa outscored the visitors 18-12 in the final quarter for the victory.

Mike Nelson led all scorers with 26 points while Paul Prentice followed with 16 points.

Nelson also hauled down 20 rebounds. Prentice and Randy Skaggs had 7 boards apiece.

Harrell was Canyon's top scorer with 18 points.

GENE AUTREY dons his cowboy hat in the Hollywood office where he runs his baseball-hotel-broadcasting-real estate empire.

Baseball a lot like show biz

TORONTO (AP) — When California Angels signed the 5-foot-4, 145-pound Fred Patek at the baseball meetings here this week, you needed a yardstick to measure the smile on Gene Autrey's face.

"That's great," Autrey exulted. "You know, we had Albie Pearson on our first team in 1961. He was about the size of Freddie. People love to see little guys buck up to big guys."

"Patek will bring in a lot of fans."

If the old singing cowboy has learned anything in his lifelong romance with the game-it is that baseball is not far removed from show business.

"It's more competitive," Autrey, 70-year-old president and chairman of the expansion Angels, said. "But it's also entertainment. Your success depends not just on winning but the drawing power of players on the team."

"Nolan Ryan, for instance, doesn't have the winning statistics of, let's say, Jim Palmer, but people come out to watch him strike out batters. Reggie Jackson of the Yankees isn't a .300 hitter but he has a sense of drama. He comes through in the clutch."

"Color is very important."

The onetime guitar-plunking telegrapher who was discovered by Will Rogers is only one of a bevy of show business personalities who have gravitated to baseball and other sports ventures.

Bob Hope became a part owner of the Cleveland Indians. The late Bing Crosby invested in the Pittsburgh Pirates. Danny Kaye is one of the governing partners of the Seattle Mariners.

The Hollywood crowd has saturated the pro golf tour with sponsorship — including Hope, Crosby, Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, Jackie Gleason, Sammy Davis Jr. and Dinah Shore.

"Hope got interested in Cleveland because he came from there," Autrey explained. "Crosby's association with the Pirates came through his friend, comedian Joe E. Brown, whose son became an official of the club."

Gene Autrey needed no such back door introduction.

Christian cowboys ride circuit

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jesus Christ has been riding the rodeo circuit the past few years.

At least that's the story told by dozens of Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association contestants here for the world championship National Finals Rodeo.

Calf roper Willard Moody is convinced most of his fellow cowboys are Christians, "but they just need a little time," than the ones who have come forward.

This is the 33-year-old Wynnewood, Okla., cowboy's fourth trip to the NFR.

Moody is the current president of the Cowboy Chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"Most of us go through the phases," he said. "For awhile we think winning's the thing. So we go after gold buckles. But then you win a lot of money a you're still empty. It's still not right."

What made things right for Moody was becoming a Christian at a rodeo in Tuscon, Ariz., about 18 months ago.

"I used to be one of the guys who made fun of the Christian cowboys," he said.

There apparently was a lot of ridicule when the Cowboy Chapter of FCA was first founded. It didn't grow too quickly until about two years ago when it really began to take off, Moody said.

Now the CCFCA has a fellowship room at the Finals where refreshments are provided by a hamburger chain for more than 50 persons a night after NFR performances. The group has given away more than 20,000 special cowboy Bibles and sponsors church services at each PRCA rodeo. More than 350 attended last week's Sunday services in Oklahoma City and several hundred more than that were expected today for services in the Myriad Convention Center's rodeo arena.

The minister who preaches at most of the rodeo services is a Roswell, N.M., man named Glenn Smith.

Before he took up his cowboy ministry, Smith was a wealthy businessman with a reputation as a high-roller. He also competed professionally as a bull rider and worked some as a rodeo clown.

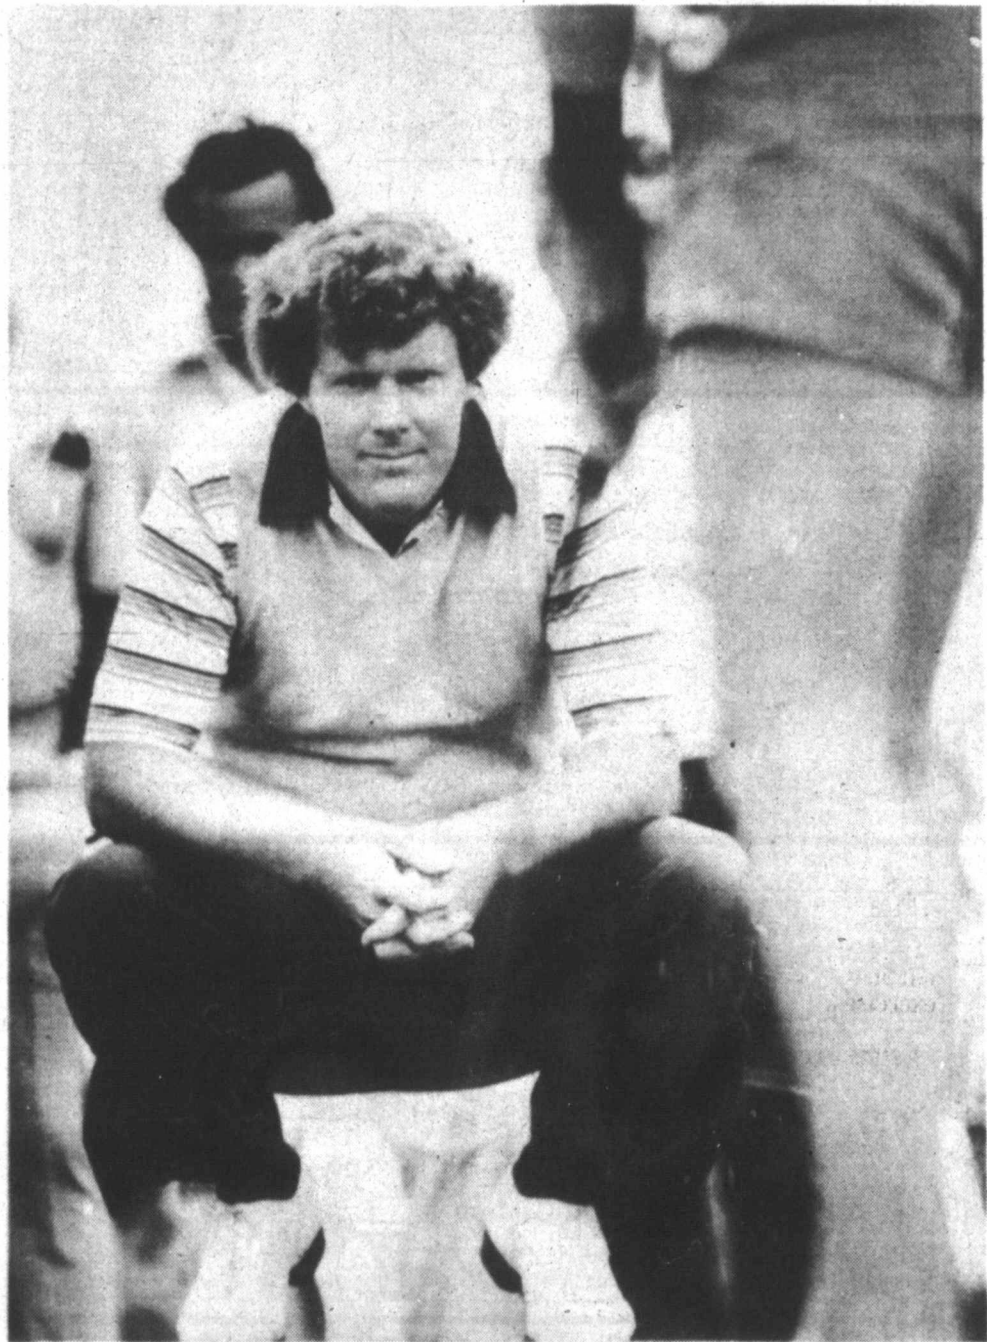

"But deep down in me I was empty," he said. "At 29, I was successful as a businessman by the standards of the world, but I was the most miserable man ever to step into a pair of boots."

When Smith answered the call to preach, he sold off his land and livestock holdings and bought a motor home. He said what he didn't sell, he gave away.

"The Lord called me to the ministry seven years ago and told me to go back to the rodeo and tell the cowboys Jesus loves them," Smith said. "A cowboy preacher can relate to a cowboy because he lives with them. I go just as many miles down the road as they go."

CCFCA members are now in demand as speakers at high school FCA chapters in rodeo towns and at other schools, churches, and boys' homes.

Barry Burk of Duncan, Okla., a founding member and past president of CCFCA, lists one such speaking engagement as the greatest thrill of his life. He says it was even more rewarding than qualifying for the Finals 15 times or sharing the record for the fastest calf tied at the NFR.

Walk-ons, gridders fill Lobo basketball roster

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — There's little left of the University of New Mexico basketball team, but the Lobos plan to continue playing games with the few players who remain and a handful of newcomers.

Athletic Director John Bridgers said Thursday that five players, including three starters, have been declared ineligible and another was suspended because of questions about his eligibility.

Another player, Craig Gilbert, had been declared ineligible last week.

That leaves the Lobos with only five eligible players and one of them is out with an injury. Officials said the team will be filled out for Saturday night's game against arch-rival New Mexico State by two football players and three student walk-ons.

Bridgers said Wednesday, his first day on the job, that as a last resort the Lobos might have to fold for the season if too many players were declared ineligible. He said Thursday the Lobos would continue the season with its makeshift squad.

University officials declared the five players ineligible Thursday after they learned the students were credited with a course they never took.

The five were identified by Bridgers as Larry Belin, Larry Hubbard, Andre Logan, Paul Roby and Larry Tarrance.

He said Jerome Henderson, who has told officials he took the course, was suspended "pending further investigation."

Robert Weaver, director of admissions, said Belin, Hubbard, Logan, Roby and Tarrance each received three credits for an extension course offered by Ottawa, Kan., University on the campus of Los Angeles Valley State College in Van Nuys, Calif., but had never taken the class.

The players said in a signed statement Thursday that they had no knowledge of how the credits got on their transcripts and asked that the credit hours be removed. University officials also said they did not know who was responsible for obtaining the credits for the players, but were investigating.

JV tourney results

Pampa junior varsity advanced into the winner's bracket of the Pampa Junior Varsity Tournament Thursday with an easy 82-46 win over Borger Sophomores.

Ray Condo and Arthur Williams paced Pampa in scoring with 12 and 11 points respectively. Pampa now meets Dumas JVs at 12:30 p.m. Saturday in the championship bracket at Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa's freshmen team fell to Hereford JV, 78-26, in first-round action. Mike Nelson topped Pampa with 8 points while Wartz paced the winners with 13 points. The local frosh team plays again at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, meeting Pampa sophomores in the loser's bracket.

December 8, 1979

A number of changes will occur this coming year that will have beneficial offshoots. Be your philosophical self if things don't appear to be going your way at first. The end result will be good.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Old friends could pop into the picture today and you won't mind changing your plans in order to be with them. It's just the tonic you need. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Assume the leadership role if you're with someone who is having a hard time figuring out how to handle a situation. You know how to help this person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good time to iron out things needing discussion with one to whom you are closely associated. Mutual benefits will be realized.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You continue to be in a highly productive cycle, so do as much work important to you as possible. You'll like the way things turn out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Others serve to stimulate your thinking and bring out the best in you today. Being with friends will prove rewarding—and fun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is an excellent day to get some of your Christmas decorating started. You're in a highly creative mood and could come up with some clever ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are likely to have a fortunate change of opinion today regarding someone you know socially. The opportunity to become privy to inside information might be the reason.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your instincts will help you spot where all the bargains are today. You should be able to purchase many things you've wanted at just the right price.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A party mood is still with you today. You'll reflect this in a warm, outgoing manner. You might even make it a point to look up some old pals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your family continues to prove to be your real source of enjoyment and you have strong desires to shower them with gifts. Just spend within your budget!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) New life can be put into an old interest today. This could resurrect some sparks and enthusiasm for it. Give this your attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although you'll be a high achiever, most of what you do will be for the benefit of others. It gives you great joy to contribute today.

T.G.I.F. Family Circus interviewed

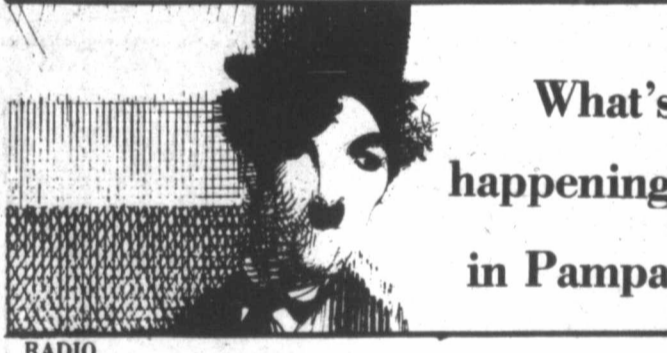

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The Family Circus" will be featured in an animated Christmas special Dec. 18. An interview with cartoonist Bil Keane, creator of the series, follows.

Q: Why have you made your home and studio out here in the Arizona desert?
A: To avoid interviews.
Q: How old are you, Mr. Keane?
A: I'm 56. Please call me Bil.
Q: At this point in your life, do you have any unfulfilled ambitions?
A: Yes, I hope to be 57.
Q: Your "Family Circus" is so typical of everyone's family. Is it based on your own real life?
A: On the contrary, my real life is based on the cartoon. If a particular family situation gets a laugh in the newspaper, I try to work it into our home the following week.
Q: Your daily cartoon is unique in format. Bil, it appears in a circle. How did you decide on that?
A: When I drew the border around my first cartoon I reached for my ruler but picked up a compass by mistake.
Q: And you've been going around in circles ever since?
A: On second thought, call me Mr. Keane.
Q: How about the aging of your cartoon children. "Dennis the Menace" remains five years old. Do you do this?
A: No. Hank Ketchum does it.
Q: I mean do your characters grow older or are they arrested at their present age?
A: They stay the same and, to my knowledge, they've never been arrested.
Q: Was "The Family Circus" your first attempt at syndication?
A: No. In 1949, before Charles Schulz hit it big, I tried a strip about kids and a dog.
Q: What did you call it?
A: "Walnuts." It didn't make it, but I did come close with the title!

Q: Where did you learn the fundamentals of drawing?
A: At my mother's knee. To this day I am very good at drawing women's knees.
Q: Do you have any advice for aspiring cartoonists?
A: Yes. Always keep a handkerchief handy for when you aspire so you don't drip on the drawing and ruin it.
Q: A few comics express editorial opinions...like "Doodlesbury." Have you ever done this?
A: No, it's always been done by Garry Trudeau.
Q: When some cartoonists get an idea they talk into a tape recorder. Some jot it down on a napkin. What do you do?
A: I usually talk into a napkin.
Q: Do you ever jog for inspiration?
A: No. I jog for apiration. But I always keep a handkerchief handy so I don't drip on the...
Q: Bil, you have given very funny talks around the country, right?
A: Some in the cities, too.
Q: You've made quite a name for yourself as a stand-up comedian.
A: Yes, and that name is Henny Youngman.
Q: Seriously, what can you tell us about your personal appearances?
A: Well, I'm medium build, blue-eyed, wear glasses...
Q: Do you enjoy talking to people?
A: No, but it looks better than talking to myself.
Q: Your first animated special of "The Family Circus" was seen at Valentine's Day last year. Tell us about that Valentine special.
A: It had a lot of heart. It'll be seen again this February.
Q: Repeat?
A: It'll be seen again this February.
Q: And now you've completed a television special for Christmas. Where will it be seen?
A: On your t.v. set.

Elderly may pay for benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The elderly would have to pay income tax on half their retirement benefits and Social Security payroll deductions would be cut under changes recommended to Congress today by a government panel.

The Advisory Council on Social Security also called for — Using general tax revenue to pay for Medicare.

— Rejiggering the benefit formula to provide bigger checks for both low-wage earners and high-wage earners.
— Calculating cost-of-living increases twice a year instead of annually during periods of high inflation.

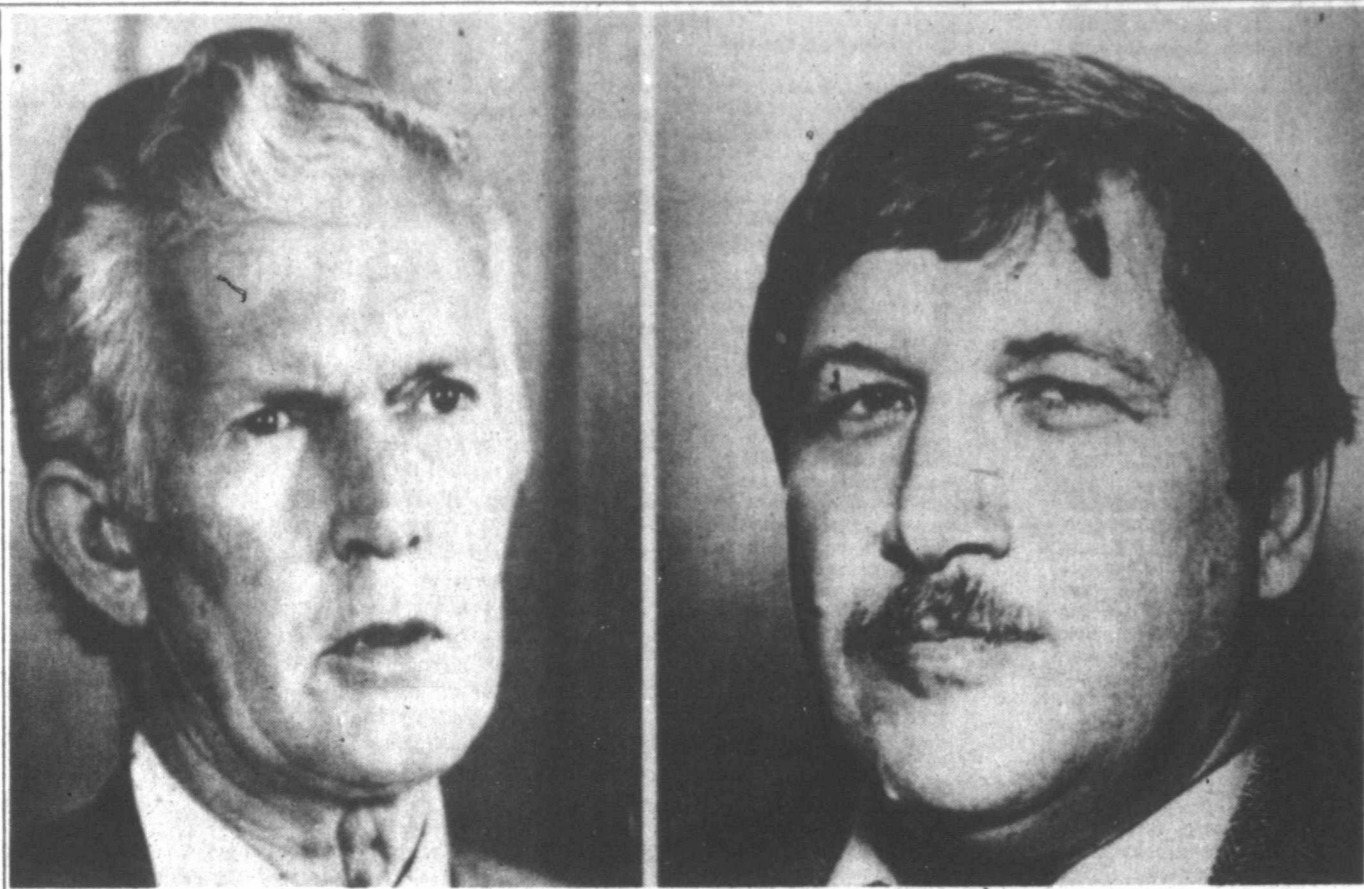

The council stopped short of endorsing a specific plan to split Social Security credits evenly between husbands and wives, but called some type of earnings sharing "the most promising approach" to improving benefits for women.

A narrow majority of the 13-member panel said "serious consideration" should be given to raising the normal retirement age of 65, effective after the turn of the century.

The panel recommended liberalization of Social Security's disability program and, in a rebuff to the administration, voted against most of the minor benefit reductions President Carter unsuccessfully sought to get through Congress earlier this year. A narrow majority called for doubling the $255 burial benefit Carter wanted killed.

Councils are created by law every four years to advise Congress on Social Security, and past councils have pointed the way for many changes in the system. The idea is for the councils to provide continuing oversight of the system in an effort to make it fairer and more responsive to the changing needs of the people it benefits and to insure that it remains financially solvent.

Congress can reject any and all of the recommendations, but the council's 400-page report is certain to influence the on-going debate in Congress about whether to roll back the big payroll tax increase scheduled for 1981.

MOST OF THE PROBLEMS confronting the United Mine Workers began during the reign of Arnold Miller, left, who stepped down last month after suffering a heart attack and was replaced by union vice president Sam Church. (AP Laserphoto)

Mine workers beset with troubles

DENVER (AP) — At the beginning of the decade, some 75 percent of the coal dug out of the ground in this country was produced by members of the United Mine Workers union. Today the figure is below 50 percent and sliding.

In southern West Virginia, a UMW stronghold, more than 10,000 miners are out of work.

The current bargaining structure — based on negotiations between the UMW and an organization of coal and steel companies — appears to be crumbling.

These and other problems face the 1,000-plus coal miners from across the nation who will gather in Denver Monday for the UMW's constitutional convention.

The 10-day meeting could shape the UMW's energy role in the 1980s. Some miners say it may also determine whether the union will survive.

Many of the delegates to the convention say they are worried. "This will be the most important convention we've ever had," Kenny Crotty, a delegate from southern West Virginia's District 29, said recently.

"I think the main question is survival," added Steve Shapiro, a local union president.

Most of the urgent problems confronting the miners cropped up during the seven-year reign of Arnold Miller.

Miller, a disabled West Virginia miner, was elected UMW president in 1972 on the wave of a reform movement. But his rule was marked by political infighting, hundreds of wildcat walkouts and a 111-day nationwide contract strike, the longest in UMW history.

Last month, the ailing Miller stepped down and was named president emeritus after suffering a heart attack. His successor is former UMW vice president Sam Church, a mine electrician from Virginia who originally opposed the union reform movement but later worked his way into Miller's good graces.

"We've got to start organizing," Church says these days. "We've got to stick together."

However, it was to Church that Miller gave the responsibility for union organizing nearly two years ago. And in that time, the UMW has continued to slide.

The West, where coal production is booming, has been particularly troublesome. The UMW has failed to make a membership dent there and has even lost some ground in the East, where the union was born at the turn of the century.

The organizing efforts failed, in part, because of the walkouts and union infighting, which have also contributed to the threatened breakup of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The BCOA is a group of Eastern coal and steel companies that banded together 30 years ago to negotiate an industrywide contract with the UMW. In those days, however, the union was an autocracy and the word of president John L. Lewis was law.

Miller brought democracy to the UMW and gave the rank-and-file miners the power to approve contracts. In 1978, during that 111-day strike, the miners took the unprecedented step of rejecting an industry offer endorsed by Miller and Church.

Last summer, the giant Consolidation Coal Co. — the nation's second largest coal producer — announced it was pulling out of the BCOA.

Later, officials of U.S. Steel said the BCOA no longer served its best interests, explaining they felt the industrywide contracts reached between the BCOA and the UMW slighted the mines wholly owned by steel companies.

These developments have led many rank-and-file miners and some union officials to fear the BCOA might break up, which would force the UMW to negotiate dozens of separate contracts and could reduce its scope to that of a regional union.

Perhaps the most pressing problem facing the delegates is unemployment. The market for metallurgical coal, used in making steel, has all but evaporated since the Japanese switched to Australian coal during the contract strike two years ago. The steam coal market, meanwhile, has been soft for more than a year as electric utilities have continued to rely heavily on oil.

"We've got to get our men back to work," says Dennis Saunders, who as president of UMW District 29 will take one of the largest delegations to the convention.

The man in the convention spotlight will be Church, who is still a largely unknown, untested entity to much of the rank-and-file. He will be running for re-election in 1982.

Shortly before he stepped down, Miller accused Church of plotting against him. Church denied the charge.

Survivors file lawsuits against concert promoters

CINCINNATI (AP) — As residents of this Ohio city began burying the young victims of a rock concert stampede, some of the survivors filed a lawsuit seeking more than $27 million from a British rock group and the promoters of the concert.

The first legal action stemming from the tragedy on Monday asks $1.1 million for each of the 11 killed and 14 injured. And attorney Arnold Morelli, who filed the class-action suit Thursday in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, said he wants to go to trial as soon as possible.

"There are a lot of strong feelings about what happened. I want the case to be heard while the memory of the event is still fresh in everyone's mind," he said.

The accident occurred when fans of The Who surged into Riverfront Coliseum to get the best seats, trampling those in front. The victims died of suffocation, an autopsy showed.

The suit was filed on behalf of Todd Volkman, 18. He was among those hospitalized following the stampede, the suit said.

Named as defendants were Who performers Roger Daltrey, Peter Dinklage, John Entwistle and Kenny Jones; Cincinnati Riverfront Coliseum and Albert E. Heekin III, statutory agent; and Electric Factory Concerts Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., the promoters, and Cal Levy, their Cincinnati agent.

The suit asked damages of $100,000 each and compensatory damages of $1 million each, for a total of $27.5 million plus attorneys fees.

The suit alleged negligence in promotion, management and performance of the concert. It argued negligence in the sale of more than 15,000 general-admission tickets and in the opening of two doors to the crowd when 75 were available.

Levy, on behalf of the promoters, has denied any negligence, saying the promoters were not responsible for providing ushers, ticket takers or other safety devices. Members of The Who have said they were not responsible and had no prior knowledge of any problems.

Meanwhile, several funeral or memorial services were held for victims, with more planned today.

The Wyoming High School senior class attended a memorial service for Peter Bowes, an honor student and volunteer worker at a hospital for the mentally retarded. Bowes, 18, attended the concert with several other students, including one who talked to him moments before the pushing escalated into a frantic fight for life.

"I was right up front where the people were killed. I talked with Peter just before it happened," said Doug Brown, 17. "I helped carry three bodies inside. I'd never touched a dead person before. If I had seen Peter, I know I would have lost it. He was really special."

4 bodies found; 10 still missing

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The bodies of four crewmen of a Finnish freighter were recovered and 10 other sailors were missing and believed drowned when their ship capsized in stormy weather, the coast guard said today.

Rescue teams, hampered by winds and high waves, rescued 14 members of the 28-man crew, including the ship's captain following Thursday night's accident.

A coast guard spokesman said chances of finding more crewmen were slim. He said they wouldn't survive long because of the weather and a water temperature of 41 degrees.

The 6,800-ton coal-carrying Malmi was sailing from the Polish port of Gdynia to the port of Turku on Finland's west coast. The vessel went down only minutes after the crew reported it listed heavily.

The coast guard gave no immediate official explanation for the accident but there was speculation it might have been caused by a shifting of the cargo in the heavy seas.

"I had just told the crew to ready the life rafts when she turned over," said Captain Perttu Nurminen, 30, after being rescued by a Swedish navy helicopter from a sinking raft.

Ray comes home

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The body of Thomas Willard Ray rests once again on his native Alabama soil after 17 years in a Havana morgue.

The gray pine coffin arrived Thursday in Miami, and was accompanied to Birmingham by Ray's son, Tom Jr.

"I made my last flight with my father today," he said.

The elder Ray was working for the Central Intelligence Agency during the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion, training Cuban refugees to overthrow Fidel Castro's government, when his B-26 bomber was shot down near Castro's field headquarters.

In 1963, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., confirmed that four civilian airmen from Alabama had been killed in the invasion.

Ray was slain by Castro militiamen, and since that day his body has been frozen in a Havana morgue.

Ray's family began its struggle to have Ray's body returned when they learned three years ago that the Cubans had it.

Tom Ray hasn't talked to many people over the years about his father. He last saw him when he was 7. He says he has tried to avoid the painful memories by "trying not to think about it much."

"But then there are times," he said, "when I'm faced with a career, family or business decision and I really wish he were here someone I could talk to."

Ray's body was accompanied from Havana by U.S. Consul Edwin L. Belfel of the American Interest Section in Havana. In the muggy Cuban pre-dawn, he traveled to the morgue where Ray's body lay to witness the sealing of the zinc coffin inside the pine box.

The body was wrapped in gauze and the coffin soldered shut.

News Word: Illiteracy

For most of this century, federal, state, and local governments have worked to end illiteracy. But a recent study shows that more than 60 million adult Americans may be considered illiterate. Literacy is usually defined as the ability to read and write. But people are often considered illiterate if they cannot read, write, or use numbers well enough to function adequately in society. People who are functionally illiterate are shut out from many kinds of jobs. Illiteracy is even more widespread in other parts of the world. In some African nations, as many as nine out of 10 people cannot read or write.

DO YOU KNOW — Which state has the country's lowest rate of illiteracy?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — William Shatner plays Captain Kirk in "Star Trek."

TEXAS

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White has appointed Tom Aubrey as head of his Houston regional office and Peggy Tyrell Price as chief of its consumer protection division.

Aubrey, 30, and Mrs. Price, 26, received their law degrees in 1977 from the South Texas College of Law in Houston.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Commission for the Blind said Thursday it was cutting back services because of the possible loss of $500,000 in federal funds.

The agency said Congress is squabbling over funding for social services for the blind. Failure to agree would cut the money to its 1975 level, which was $400 million lower than it is now.

Social services include counseling, referral to other state and local agencies and various measures to make blind people self-sufficient.

If cuts are made, the commission said, it will try to make them "as painless as possible."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Elderly persons who run up more than $35 a month in medical expenses will get a break on food stamps starting Jan. 1, the Texas Department of Human Resources said Thursday.

Medical expenses exceeding $35 may be deducted from the allowable income of food stamp recipients aged 60 and older after that date.

Reducing income has the effect of increasing food stamp benefits. Only medical expenses not covered by insurance may be used to cut allowable income.

Acceptable medical expenses include doctor and dental bills, nursing and nursing home care, hospital bills, most prescription drugs, insulin, health insurance premiums, dentures, hearing aides, prosthetic devices, eyeglasses, seeing eye dogs and some over-the-counter drugs, the department said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements appointed W.H. Gardner of Highland Park on Thursday to the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education.

Gardner, 51, is director of the Highland Park Department of Public Safety.

Clements also appointed Dr. Bill G. Williams of Waco to the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners.

DALLAS (AP) — Omar Harvey of Dallas, who recently resigned as chief of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, will become director of special projects for the Boy Scouts of America on Jan. 1.

Chief Scout Executive J.L. Tarr announced the appointment Thursday.

Before entering state government service this year, Harvey had a long business career that included service as president of First International Services Corp. and executive vice president of First National Bank in Dallas.

He was campaign manager for Gov. Bill Clements in last year's Republican primary.

OVERSEAS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — More than 500 U.N. staff members, citing the arrests and disappearance of seven colleagues abroad, adopted a resolution demanding more protection.

Among the persons mentioned at a staff meeting was Alicja Wesolowska, a Polish citizen arrested in Warsaw nearly four months ago while on her way to a new assignment. Disappearances also have occurred in Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Chile and Argentina.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Southern University regents were told Thursday they need to "clean house" before selecting a new university president.

"We of the board know where the sore spots are," said Ernest Sterling, board chairman from Tyler.

"We need to clean house before we get a new president."

Sterling said Gov. Bill Clements told him to get the job done "or he will get someone in my place."

"We need more Indians and fewer chiefs, and I say to the students and faculty, 'Let's cooperate,'" Sterling said.

Dr. Granville Sawyer was fired last month as president and Dr. Everett Bell, the acting president, is not a candidate for the office.

HOUSTON (AP) — The City Council has approved creation of the Houston Housing Finance Corp. to arrange low interest loans for low and moderate income homebuyers.

The corporation is authorized to sell up to $200 million in mortgage revenue bonds. The interest rate for homebuyers will be about 1 percent above the interest rate of the bonds.

William Frederking, city financial analyst, said it may be possible for the first loans to be made within six months.

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert George Swain, 44, has been charged with promoting the sexual performance of a child.

Police said it is the first such charge filed in Houston under the state's new anti-pornography law.

Investigators said the charge alleges arranging for a 15-year-old runaway girl to perform sex acts for a video cassette film shown in a local nightclub.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced the appointment Thursday of Douglas O. Brown, former chairman of the board of Owen Laboratories in Dallas, as executive assistant.

Brown, 54, has been serving as the governor's special assistant for intergovernmental relations. He serves without pay.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Bill Patman urged legislative changes Thursday to avoid holding special elections on proposed constitutional amendments.

Patman said $3 million "was spent by county governments for the November election on only three constitutional amendments. That comes to $1 million per amendment and is a steep price to pay, especially when there is a low voter turnout."

Patman, D-Ganado, said in a statement he would sponsor legislation to allow Texans to vote on proposed amendments at regular party primary elections in even-numbered years.
