Ask Us

Q—Since school was cancelled for Snyder students on Jan. 21, will that day have to be made up? If so, when?

A—Yes, the day will have to be made up. The district routinely schedules two bad weather makeup days. This school year they are Friday, April 22, and Monday, April 25. Principals will hold a staff meeting on Feb. 14 to determine which one to use.

In Brief

One arrested

LUBBOCK (AP) — Federal agents who arrested the co-pilot of a disabled cargo plane Monday also were investigating other suspected sabotage of aircraft.

John Harold Lehman Jr., 29, was accused of removing a fuel filler cap from an aircraft he was scheduled to co-pilot on Jan. 26. He was caught at Lubbock Aero by an FBI special agent and United Parcel Services representatives, according to the FBI.

A one-count criminal complaint was filed against the suspect Friday in the damaging and disabling of the civil aircraft. The offense carries a maximum sentence of 20 years and a fine of $100,000.

UIL realignments...

Sweetwater to join Snyder in 5-4A

Plainview is out, Sweetwater is in.

That's how the University Interscholastic League has drawn up the new District 5-4A, Snyder High School's "home" for the next two years.

Plainview will move back to Class 5A, and rejoin former opponents Amarillo High, Palo Duro, Tascosa, Lubbock High, Coronado and Monterey in District 3.

To help balance out the new mix, the UIL plucked Sweetwater from 3-4A, and placed the Mustangs in with former 2-4A members Snyder, Lamesa, Estacado, Levelland and Frenship to form the new 5-5A.

Snyder and Sweetwater have been district foes numerous times in their schoolboy football history and are longtime rivals.

The new realignments begin in the fall of the 1994-95 school year and don't impact UIL activities scheduled this spring.

Taking Sweetwater out of 3-4A is the only change to that district, except for a new 4-4A designation. The 4-4A is made up of Andrews, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, Monahans, Pecos and San Angelo Lakeview.

The realignments affect Scurry County schools Ira and Hermleigh somewhat. The Bulldogs and Cardinals will rejoin Borden County, Loraine and Highland for six-man football. Trent drops out of the district, but a new foe, Westbrook, has been added.

In basketball, current foes Trent and Blackwell will move to a new district, leaving Hermleigh and Ira to face only Loraine and Westbrook in 26A. Borden County will play its basketball in District 14 with Sands, Klondike and Grady.

Nearby Colorado City will be in District 8-3A for the next two years, facing Reagan County, Crane, Kermit, Midland Greenwood and Sonora.

Rotan will compete in 7-2A with Anson, Hamlin, Haskell, Hawley and Stamford, while Roby will vie in 9-1A with Aspermont, Crowell, Knox City, Munday and Paducah.

The UIL listed enrollment figures for Class 4A as ranging from 1,559 down to 715. The previous 4A cap was 1,509. Snyder High School's current enrollment is 919.

Six-man underwent some major changes as the UIL lowered the cap from an enrollment of 95 to 79. This pushed Fort Hancock, winner of five of the last six-man state titles, up to 11-man.

The caps are: Class 5A, 1,600 and up; Class 4A, 715 to 1,559; Class 3A, 295 to 714; Class 2A, 145 to 294; Class 1A, up to 144; and six-man, up to 79.

SISD board meets at noon tomorrow for profile session

Snyder public schools board of trustees will meet with consultant Dr. E.C. Leslie in a profile session set for noon Wednesday in the administration building board room.

The meeting is the first in a series of sessions designed to gather input from community leaders, teachers, administrators, students, senior citizens, support groups and the general public concerning the SISD superintendent's position.

Dr. Leslie is a consultant with the Texas Association of School Boards. The consulting group has been hired to assist in finding a new superintendent to replace Dalton Moseley, who is retiring at the end of the school year.

The board has set up a timetable that calls for a new superintendent to be named on April 28.

The profile meetings to receive community input have been scheduled for Wednesday through Friday, including a meeting for the general public at 7 p.m. Thursday at Worsham Auditorium.

During the profile meetings, citizens will be given an opportunity to voice what they feel are the school system's most pressing concerns, as well as the personal and professional values they want in a school superintendent.

At 4 p.m. Wednesday, the first of two profile meetings with teachers will be held. The second will be at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Also Wednesday, a profile session will be held at 5 p.m. in the auditorium for representatives of parent councils, booster and other clubs, local civic clubs and other organizations.

The consultant firm will meet over lunch Thursday with 16 members of the high school student body, and has scheduled a 5 p.m. meeting to profile selected members of the business community.

On Friday, the firm will get input from retired teachers in a 10 a.m. meeting and from retirees during a noon meeting at the Senior Center.

DCOS board still considering options before hiring director

Discussions and negotiations continued today in prelude to the anticipated employment of an executive director for economic development.

Directors of the Development Corporation of Snyder met briefly Monday afternoon to discuss three finalists for the post and also to discuss a proposed employment offer.

Bill Seale, chairman of the DCOS, said no offer had been extended, but that he had been authorized by the board to continue to discuss the post with the three individuals interviewed last week.

At Monday's meeting, the board continued to discuss a $40,000 salary for the post that is envisioned as a point-person for future economic development activities.

Basic benefits discussed for the post have included health insurance, vacation, an auto for official business and limited one-time relocation expenses.

Last Thursday, the DCOS interviewed two candidates — Doug Hutchinson of Burton and John Castro of Georgetown. On Saturday, the board interviewed Marie Muse of Mt. Pleasant. All three have training and experience in economic development.

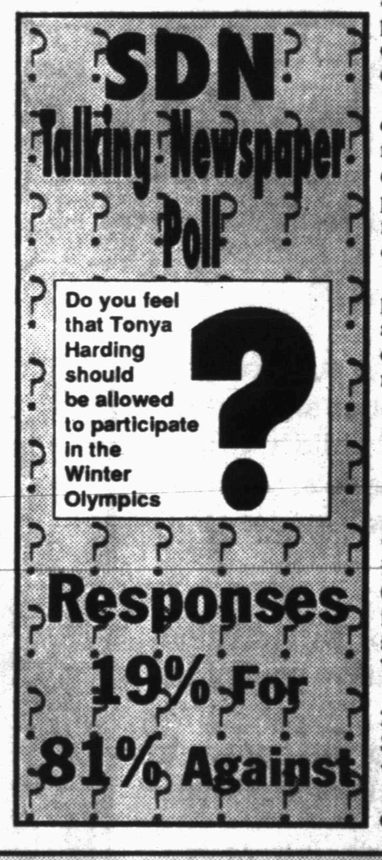
Seale said the board may invite at least one candidate for a second interview as early as next week. Seale said it is also possible that an employment offer could be made by telephone before next week.

The DCOS had hoped that a person could be employed by the end of January, but Seale said Monday that the target date for opening the offices of economic development in the American State Bank building is now March 1.

The DCOS is a five-member board appointed by the city council to oversee funds generated by the three-eights cent sales tax earmarked for economic development.

Mayor Paul Zeck, a member of the economic development advisory committee, said it appeared that the office would be operated well within the $100,000 target set several months ago. This would include the salaries of the director and secretary, office expenses and industry recruitment activity.

A firm, Johnson and Associates of Austin, has assisted the DCOS in its search for an executive.



Scott wins SDN contest

Sammie Scott of 2402 40th St. was the $50 winner in the Snyder Daily News Super Bowl Trivia Contest. Scott's name was drawn from all entrants who correctly answered the trivia questions in last Thursday's paper.

Jeanne Duke of 2966 N. Hwy. 208 was the $35 winner, and Bob Sealy of 3101 Ave. V was the $25 winner.

Winners will be mailed their checks.

Fed vice chairman Mullins Jr. resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — David W. Mullins Jr., today announced his resignation as vice chairman and member of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mullins' resignation, effective Feb. 14, provides President Clinton with his second opportunity to appoint a Fed governor. Wayne D. Angell is retiring later this month and is expected to be succeeded by economist George Perry of the Brookings Institute.

Mullins, 47, said plans to enter private business.

"Since most of the financial and economic problems, which have been the focus of my professional energies in recent years, have been essentially resolved, I feel now is the approriate time to turn to new and different challenges," he said in a statement.

Mullins' resignation came a day after Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, served notice on Congress and the nation that the Fed was poised to increase interest rates.

Greenspan said it was only a matter of time before the institution would move to constrict the money supply. He said the aim would be to avoid the mistakes of past Fed chiefs who waited too long before tightening up on credit and thus allowed inflation to get out of hand.

Mullins was sworn in as a board member on May 21, 1990, and as vice chairman on July 24, 1991. Before joining the Fed, he was assistant secretary of the treasury for domestic finance.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "One of life's great little pleasures is doing something that people say can't be done."

Tomorrow is Ground Hog Day. The ground hog may be the nation's most respected weather forecaster.

TV weather forecasters get very little respect. Probably the last competely accurate forecast came when God told Noah that there was a 100 percent chance of precipitation.

It's an old observation, but everybody likes to talk about the weather, but very few do anything about it.

Sometimes the weather gets folks excited, causing some mistakes. For example, Mickey Rivers, a Texas Rangers designated hitter, once commented on the elements. He said, "Man, it was tough. The wind was blowing about 100 degrees."

The weatherman in Los Angeles may have still been suffering from earthquake shock when he said, "There is some possibility of showers tonight, although it is probable there will be no rain."

That reminds us of truth in weather-forcasting. Should meteorologists say there is a 20 percent chance of rain or should they predict an 80 percent chance that it won't?

The custom of Ground Hog Day was brought to the U.S. from Germany and Great Britain.

The European imigrants believed the ground hog could accurately predict the weather for up to six weeks. According to legend, the ground hog awakens on Feb. 2 and sticks its head out of its hole to look around.

If the sun is shining and the ground hog can see its shadow, the animal is frightened and it crawls back into its hole to await six more weeks of winter weather.

When it comes to a change in the weather, a couple of folks over at the senior citizens center tell me that Mr. Arthritis has never been wrong in predicting change.

Most Americans are grateful for weather...it gives them, and us, something to talk about.

Ancient complaint: stop sending bills

AP analysis

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Policies, faces and political lineups all change over the years, but the nation's governors have a gripe with Washington that outlasts the lot — federal laws and rules that force costs upon the states.

So the National Governors Association is demanding, again, that Congress stop it. There are two dozen bills and one Constitutional amendment against the practice. And President Clinton, formerly Gov. Clinton, has signed an executive order to restrict the unfunded federal orders.

But it is part of the system, increasingly so as federal budgets have tightened. With no new money to spend, Congress still can get things done by requiring them of state and local governments, by law, or with rules that set conditions on the use of federal aid.

For example, the governors' association complains that there are now 19 different provisions under which a state can be penalized between 5 percent and 100 percent of its federal highway funds for failure to comply with rules set in Washington. Ignore them all, and the penalties theoretically could far exceed the federal roadbuilding aid.

According to the association, the number of federal requirements has increased sharply: 27 were added or expanded between 1981 and 1990, compared with 22 during the 1970s and a dozen in the 1960s.

"Federal action increasingly has relied on states to carry out policy initiatives without providing necessary funding to pay for these programs, thereby robbing states of their right and responsibility to set priorities," the governors lamented in a policy statement at their Washington conference.

They said there ought to be a law to guarantee that state and local costs of any new requirements are reimbursed by the federal government. And they asked Clinton to veto any bill that does less.

The White House isn't going that far. But Clinton, 12 years a governor and once chairman of the association, has told his former colleagues he's working on the problem.

His executive order, issued Oct. 26, says the executive branch will not impose new directives unless they are required by law, funded, or justified as essential by the agency involved. And obviously, it doesn't cover Congress.

So it doesn't go as far as the governors want. What's more, the big three proposals of 1994 to date — the crime bill, welfare reform, and health care — could involve costly directives to states.

The governors are just as worried about prison construction and tougher sentencing.

"We need the assistance," said Republican Gov. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina, the association's chairman, "but we can't take more expense out of Washington and more rules out of Washington because our budgets can't take it either."

That applies on welfare too. While governors of both parties praised Clinton for pledging a reform effort, they're wary of the cost of training and creating jobs for people who could be forced off public assistance under a two-years-and-out plan.

The governors are worried that there won't be enough private jobs for people coming off welfare and that Congress will try to make them pay for public service employment.

The White House said that won't happen because Clinton's opposition to the so-called unfunded mandates goes across the board. There is no detailed proposal; the welfare reform bill is to be proposed in the spring.

Those cost concerns apply on health care too. "We can't have programs go through Congress on health and welfare that sound great in Washington but then pass the costs on to the states," Campbell said.

Big city mayors had just argued their case against federal directives at a conference that preceded the governors' sessions. The president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors said they should make an issue of unfunded mandates in congressional election campaigns.

That may be easier threatened than done. As an issue, it is difficult to dramatize. Governors, mayors, legislators and local officials tried to do that not long ago when they got together to sponsor National Unfunded Mandates Day.

For the record, that was Oct. 27, 1993. A lot of people didn't notice.

NEW YORK (AP) — In a cross-examination laced with innuendo, the lawyer for the man accused of stealing Marla Trump's shoes and underpants portrayed her as a "kept woman."

Chuck Jones' lawyer, Anthony Morosco, asked Mrs. Trump on Monday if she had earned $3,000 for all of 1989 and whether Donald Trump was supporting her.

"I wasn't totally supported by Mr. Trump," said the former Marla Maples.

Morosco suggested Mrs. Trump concocted the shoe theft to force Jones to return photos of her in the buff.

Jones, 52, could get up to 15 years in prison if convicted of charges including burglary and possession of stolen property.

Your Birthday

Wednesday, Feb. 2, 1994

Manage your resources prudently in the year ahead and always try to tuck a little away, so that you can cover any unexpected contingencies that might arise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your actions will be closely observed by others today, so put your best foot forward at all times, especially in the presence of people who could help or hurt your career. Aquarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Important arrangements must be methodically molded today and not be left up to chance. You may feel very lucky, but events may not bear this out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be sensible about your involvements today or else you might be drawn into something where you could be penalized by another's mistakes. The lines of demarcation must be clearly defined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Strive to be impartial in your relationships with others today. Those you think will assist you, might not, while those who are the least likely could come through on your behalf.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of trying to goat others into doing things for you today, stand on your own two feet. Even if you get their help, you might still have to do all the real work yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There are indications you might be more of a risk taker today than usual. This could impel you to take chances you normally wouldn't. Unfortunately, it may not be a good day for longshots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For the sake of both your image and self-esteem, don't talk about things you intend to do today which you may never staft. Keep mum and let the results speak for your record.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If it is necessary for you to convey some critical information from one source to another today, it might be wise to make notes instead of committing it to memory.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't walk around like you have the world on your shoulder today, but, by the same token, don't treat financial matters with indifference. If you do, it could be costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not expect others to do things for you today you wouldn't do for them if the roles where reversed, even though you might kid yourself into believing you would.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In case you're wondering how someone you've been competing against outmaneuvered you, it could be because you revealed your intentions to the wrong people prematurely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Financial commitments should not be made impulsively today, especially in situations where friends are involved. There's a possibility several things could go wrong.

Thanksgiving Dinner on Paper Plates Is No Picnic for Mom

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how "Holiday Visitor" felt, and I disagree with your answer. ("Holiday Visitor" and her husband went to visit their daughter for Thanksgiving, and the mother was terribly upset to find the table set with paper plates and paper napkins, knowing that her daughter had plenty of fine china and lovely silverware.)

She said she thought it was "tacky" — and you said, "... the epitome of tackiness is criticizing the hostess who fed you."

Abby, my husband and I went to our married son's home for Thanksgiving dinner, and I nearly had a heart attack when I saw the table set with paper plates, no tablecloth, and the food served in plastic bowls!

They are quite well-to-do, have a nice set of china, an electric dishwasher, and a 17-year-old daughter to help.

I say, if people want to eat from paper plates, they should have a picnic.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Here's a letter from another "mom" with a different view of using paper plates for a holiday dinner:

DEAR ABBY: In response to the mother who was aghast that her daughter served Thanksgiving dinner on paper plates:

Oh, that we had nothing more serious to worry about than the kind of plates we ate from!

Our family of 14 married children and grandchildren were home with us for nine days at Christmas. Not only were paper plates used, we had plastic forks, spoons and serving bowls.

After everyone had finished eating, my son-in-law went around the table with a large plastic trash bag, and everyone tossed the paper plates and plastic "silverware" in the trash bag.

I am sure that everyone there wondered if that would be their last Christmas dinner with the entire family.

I have had two mastectomies in the last six months, and only God knows what's next. People should pay attention to the things that are really important in life, and count their blessings.

MOM IN MURRAYSVILLE, PA.

DEAR MOM: Thanks for a gentle reminder. We can all use it from time to time.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can settle this between me and my fiance. He proposed to me, and I accepted. Then he gave me the same engagement ring he had given to another girl. She had returned it after their engagement was broken two years ago. I didn't know him then, and I would not have known it was a secondhand ring if he hadn't told me.

Abby, I feel funny wearing that ring, knowing its history. His whole family knows, and I'm too embarrassed to tell anyone.

It's a beautiful one-carat diamond in a platinum setting. What is your advice? I really love him, but this bothers me.

FEELING HURT
IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

DEAR FEELING HURT: Tell your fiance exactly what you have told me. Then, suggest that he take the ring to the jeweler from whom he bought it and ask that the diamond be used in an entirely different setting.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

State Department report said 'quite critical' of China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department's annual report on human rights around the world is "quite critical" of China despite some improvement last year, a senior administration official says.

The 193-nation survey was being released today. China was receiving special scrutiny because the administration has set an improved human rights record as a condition for renewing Beijing's most-favored-nation trade status.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the report notes that China made some improvement last year on the release of political prisoners but that its overall record remained poor.

China has taken a few more steps this year that are not reflected in the 1993 report. Those moves — release of more prisoners, opening of discussions with the Red Cross for inspection of prison conditions and agreeing to allow U.S. officials to verify that prison laborers are not producing goods for export — were expected to be included in State Department testimony to Congress today.

New reports of religious persecution, with new arrests of priests and bishops, have come even as China took those steps.

U.S. officials, eager to keep the pressure on Beijing, have repeatedly stressed that it has not yet met Clinton's conditions.

"More needs to be done," said the senior official, who characterized the State Department's assessment of China as "quite critical."

American businesses, fearing being shut out of China's multibillion-dollar markets, are pressing Clinton not to revoke China's most-favored-nation status granting lower tariffs.

Within the administration, support is building to consider separating the trade decision and human rights in the future if China shows enough improvement on human rights.

"On balance there probably has been progress, but I wouldn't want to overinflate the nature of the progress or to denigrate the importance of the most-favored-nation review status and being an important lever to use on the Chinese," State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said Monday.

Client list well-known...

Fashion: cowboy couturier

By Francine Parnes
For AP Special Edition

Chances are you've never heard of Manuel Cuevas, but to Hollywood heavies and Nashville crooners he is the rhinestone cowboy couturier extraordinaire.

Manuel, who likes to be known by his first name, has a client list that reads like a Who's Who of country-western music.

He's dressed the best of the West. Dwight Yoakam still wears the same hat that the 56-year-old Mexican designer blocked for him 15 years ago. Country singers Dolly Parton, Wynonna Judd, Hank Williams, Jr., Randy Travis and George Jones have all sworn by him.

Manuel's roster also includes rockers such as The Rolling Stones, Neil Young, and ZZ Top, and movie stars such as Sharon Stone, k.d. lang, Robert Duvall, Marlon Brando, Burt Reynolds — and Ronald Reagan.

Manuel's love for native costumes inspires him to travel to American Indian reservations in South Dakota and New Mexico for hand-woven Chimayo blankets — a dying art form — that he transforms into blanket jackets and coats in bright yellows, reds and blues. Sylvester Stallone and Bob Dylan have sprung for his jackets at $7,500 a pop.

"I visualize America as a continent, not a country, from Alaska to the southern tip of South America," says Manuel, a burly man who sports a shoulder-length salt and pepper mane, a bandanna around his neck, band collar shirt and cowboy boots.

"America has such a beautiful heritage, and I decided I was going to export it. We have so many ways of being what we are. We're all one family. I use Navajo weaving as well as Mexican and Chilean weaving.

"I try to mix and catch every mood of the American people," says Manuel. "So don't be surprised if you see a Western suit fully piped and embroidered, in a style that's like Calvin Klein."

Born one of 11 children in Coalcoman, Mexico, Cuevas had fashion in his blood from the very start. As a seven-year-old he learned to cut and sew from his oldest brother Adolfo, a tailor, who also taught him leather tooling and bootmaking.

"I discovered fashion before I was eight years old, and since then I've never bought anything in a clothing store," says Manuel. "I grew up in a little town where everyone was very traditional and wore white for day or black for night. It was boring to me and I didn't like it. So as a kid I started making my own shirts with multicolored sleeves. The use of colors was like morning light and springtime."

After graduating from the University of Guadalajara, Cuevas, then 21, emigrated to the U.S. One of his earliest jobs was with Hollywood tailor Sy Devore.

But making regular clothes wasn't Manuel's calling, and after a few months he moved on to Nudie Cohen, the glitter-and-glitz Hollywood rodeo tailor.

As head designer for Nudie, Manuel learned his way around fancy embroidery and rhinestones and got his start making movie and stage costumes for James Dean, Frankie Valli and Clayton Moore, who played the Lone Ranger.

"That was one of the biggest marks of my career, since Clayton was one of the greatest heroes of my time. It was such a thrill for me to start doing clothes for the person I had admired so much as a child," says Cuevas, who remembers when he was seven years old walking five miles to the nearest theater to follow the adventures of the Lone Ranger.

Working at Nudie's reaped more than a job. Cohen became his father-in-law when he married the boss' daughter, Barbara.

But neither the job nor the marriage was destined to endure, and after 14 years Manuel was divorced and began sewing solo in 1974 in a North Hollywood by-appointment-only showroom.

Manuel was equal to the challenge, positioned as a celebrated image-maker with even more celebrated clients.

He became known as the designer who made Johnny Cash "the man in black," dressed Elvis in second-skin jumpsuits, and put the wagon wheels on country western singer Porter Wagoner's suits. He got John Lennon into an embroidered Western suit, dressed Linda Ronstadt in floral dresses for her Mexican tour and conjured up the wild window-wiper sunglasses made famous by Elton John.

"When I start making an image for someone, I never let my clients tell me what to do," says Manuel. "When I met Elvis, his manager said, 'Why don't you get your guitar from the car and show some of your movements?' When I saw him perform, I had the idea to make him a white jumpsuit with multicolored rhinestones and embroidery. But he said, 'A jumpsuit — is that like overalls?' I laughed and said, 'You hillbilly boy, you don't know about these things. It's a dancing suit.'

"Elvis had no idea what a jumpsuit was. But when he put it on, he felt he was in blue heaven, and the rest is history."

Three years ago Manuel closed up shop in L.A. and moved permanently to Nashville, a mecca for Western fashion that displays his designs in its Country Music Hall of Fame. He settled in Nashville with his second wife, Susan, whom he married in 1986.

Though now divorced, they have a 7-year-old daughter, Jesse, who likes to play with pieces of fabric and rhinestones in her father's Nashville store, called Manuel. There's plenty there to capture a youngster's imagination: besides the glittery get-ups, the boutique is chockablock with Indian and Western jewelry and belts, engraved with silver, gold and rubies.

Manuel has an older daughter, Morelia, 25, from his first marriage, who lives with him and works in the shop designing window displays.

The family affair also includes Manuel Jr., 21, from a previous liaison. Based in Nashville, he's following in his father's footsteps, learning production and design of the business.

Manuel still specializes in made-to-order, one-of-a-kind clothing for men and women.

Remaining true to his career has paid off, says Jane Smith, who sells his clothes in her namesake Aspen and Santa Fe shops.

His name will live on

By Phillip Alder

Samuel Stayman, whose name is immortalized in the convention that finds 4-4 major-suit fits after a no-trump opening, died at the end of last year.

Actually, Sam did not invent the Stayman Convention. It was his partner George Rapee (and, independently, Jack Marx in England) who did so. But in 1945 Stayman wrote the first published article about the two-club inquiry; and he did a lot of work on the convention, which culminated in further articles and a full-length book.

Today's deal exhibits the advantage of the Stayman Convention. After the obvious heart-king lead, three no-trump loses six tricks. But four spades can be made with careful play.

There are three top losers. The major danger to the contract is a second trump loser, if the spades break badly or the defenders engineer a ruff, presumably in clubs. Well, there isn't much you can do about the latter. But you can try to maximize your chances in the spade suit.

You should start by leading toward your two honors. So, after winning the first trick with the heart ace (you shouldn't give the opponents a chance to switch), play a diamond to the dummy and a spade toward your hand. If you win the trick, lead a spade to dummy's queen.

With this layout, East's ace collects only low cards. Now the best defense is two more rounds of hearts. You ruff in the dummy and cash the spade queen. When East discards, you must drive out the club ace, hoping for the best. Here everything is wine and roses.

Gift from heart for Valentine

By The Associated Press

Surprise that special someone with a true gift from the heart — homemade Valentine Stained Glass Hearts. To get a stained glass look, the Sugar Association used a simple sugar cookie dough shaped into a heart with another heart cut out of the middle and filled with crushed red candy. Once baked, the cookies will reflect the love you have for that someone special.

VALENTINE STAINED GLASS HEARTS

1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
3/4 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 and 1-3rd cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
Red hard candies, crushed (about 1-3rd cup)
Frosting (optional)

Cream butter and sugar in a mixing bowl. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Sift flour and baking powder together. Gradually stir in flour mixture until dough is very stiff. Cover and chill. Dough needs to chill from 3 hours to overnight.

Preheat oven to 375-degrees F. Roll out dough to 1/8-inch thickness on a lightly floured surface. To prevent cookies from becoming tough and brittle, try not to incorporate a lot of flour. Cut out cookies using a large heart-shaped cookie cutter or use a sharp knife and cut around a heart pattern.

Transfer cookies to a foil-lined baking sheet. Using a small heart-shaped cookie cutter, cut out and remove heart design from center of each cookie. Fill the cut-out sections with crushed candy. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 7 to 9 minutes or until cookies are lightly browned and the candy has melted. Do not overcook.

When done, slide foil off baking sheet. Carefully loosen cookies from foil when cooled. If desired, pipe decorative borders with frosting around edges. Makes about 21/2 dozen medium cookies.

Nutrition information per cookie: 87 cal., 13 g carbo., 1 g pro., 3 g fat, 14 mg chol., 51 mg sodium.

Snyder cage teams entertain Frenship

The District 2-4A road doesn't get any easier for either of Snyder's varsity basketball teams.

Both the Tigers and Lady Tigers will be trying to rebound from tough losses Friday when they host Frenship in games at SHS today.

The Lady Tigers, who will be making their final home appearance this season, carry an 8-16 record on the year, including a closer-than-expected 38-20 loss to No. 2 Levelland Friday.

"It is a moral victory for us," Snyder coach Steve Qualls said after the game. "They scored the fewest points they scored all season.

"We know we had to beat their press," Qualls continued, "and we pretty much did. We looked like a contender, a championship caliber basketball team because their press wasn't bothering us."

The Lady Tigers were led by senior Annie Ragland, who hit 10 points, including a pair of threes.

Frenship, ranked as high as seventh in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' girls' poll this season, sports a 24-4 overall mark and a 6-1 slate against district teams.

Delawna Meloy and Summer Lawlis lead the Frenship attack, averaging over 20 points and 18 rebounds between them.

Snyder fell to FHS, 45-22, in the two teams' first meeting this year.

The Snyder boys are trying to figure out what went wrong in a 56-36 loss to Levelland Friday.

The Tigers led by a basket, 27-25, at halftime, but could only get nine points in the final 16 minutes.

"I thought we played well in the first half," said SHS coach Bud Birks. "At halftime they changed defenses on us and we just didn't react very well. We have an offense that would work in that situation if we had just been patient."

Adrian Sneed canned 14 points to lead Snyder against Levelland, followed by Ricky Post's eight.

Snyder enters tonight's contest with a 15-9 season record and a 1-4 mark in loop encounters.

Frenship boasts a 21-5 slate on the campaign and is 3-2 since opening district play.

Frenship's last outing was a 60-59 win over Lamesa on Friday. The FHS Tigers are led by returning starters Damon Harris and Kendrick Hollie, both putting in over 10 points a game.

Frenship downed Snyder, 53-35, in the loop opener for both teams in Wolfforth.

Action begins with both JV games at 5 p.m., followed at 6:30 p.m. by the varsity girls' game. The boys' varsity contest tips off at 8 p.m.

SHS, Mustangs together again

UIL realignment puts Sweetwater in District 5 with Tigers

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

When you mention Snyder and Sweetwater in the same breath, the high school sports rivalry immediately comes to mind.

There was the Tigers' last-second grid loss to the Mustangs in 1989, Snyder's playoff win at Mustang Bowl in 1990 and non-district victories by SHS the last two seasons.

Those games will mean even more in upcoming years because Sweetwater has been moved into District 5-4A to join Snyder, Frenship, Levelland, Lubbock Estacado and Lamesa in today's announced University Interscholatic League biennial realignment.

Plainview, a member of District 2-4A for the last two years, was boosted back into the Class 5A ranks, joining Amarillo High, Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo Palo Duro, Lubbock Coronado, and Lubbock Monterey in District 3.

Snyder coaches unanimously see the change as being good for SHS programs, as well as the district as a whole.

"As far as basketball is concerned, I like the switch. The tradeoff is good," said Snyder girls' basketball coach Steve Qualls. "It's going to be a tough district anyway, because you still have Frenship and Levelland in there. We've still got a lot of work to do."

Volleyball coach Patty Grimmett notes the addition of district matches to her team's schedule, since Plainview, which, along with Frenship, did not field a spike squad.

"We'll have five teams in our district instead of four, so that will give us more games. I like that. Maybe Frenship will pick it up now."

Snyder ISD Athletic Director and head football coach David Baugh was at a scheduling meeting in Lubbock today.

"It's a fun game to coach in," Baugh said of the Snyder-Sweetwater matchup in an earlier interview, just prior to last season's football opener at Sweetwater. "The fans really get into the rivalry and the kids all know each other and enjoy playing against each other."

"It's good to get rid of Plainview," said Snyder boys' basketball coach Bud Birks. "Everyone agrees to that.

"Sweetwater will be tough in basketball, though. And usually if they're good in one sport, they're good in several.

"There were so many scenarios that could have happened," Birks continued. "I know the Commissioner kids real well, we played them in summer league, and there are some awful good athletes coming up.

"I'm glad we're not going to have to play Plainview anymore, but Sweetwater is certainly no soft touch."

"I'm delighted," concurred SHS baseball coach Albert Lewis. "It creates a better balance in the district than we have with Plainview. They're just so much bigger than everybody else.

"Plus, the friendly rivalry we have with Sweetwater. That'll make for a much more competitive situation."

Competition in the newly formed district will begin with the 1994-95 academic year and will last at least through 1995-96.

Plainview has been near the top of the district standings in almost all sports since dropping to 4A two years ago.

The Bulldogs claimed a loop title in football in 1993 after finishing second and getting a playoff slot in '92. The PHS boys' basketball team went to the state 4A tournament last season, is ranked No. 3 in the most recent TABC poll and is a good bet to return to Austin this year.

In addition, Plainview girls' basketball, boys' golf and tennis teams have also earned post-season appearances.

Sweetwater was the District 3-4A football champion in 1992 and '93. The Mustangs are also a playoff contender in basketball, and field perennially tough teams in spring sports including baseball golf and track.

The Mustangs leave District 3, now designated District 4, with six teams, Andrews, Big Spring, Monahans, Pecos, Fort Stockton and San Angelo Lake View.

Statewide, Class 4A is gaining 14 new schools, for a total of 188, eliminating some early-round playoff byes.

Among the new teams in the classification are two-time defending 3A football champ Southlake Carroll, Canyon High, Fort Worth Castleberry, Fredricksburg, Kaufman, Lampasas, Mabank, Marble Falls, Rockport-Fulton, South San Antonio West and Abilene Wylie, which move up.

Dropping from Class 5A are El Paso Canutillo, Cleburne, Dallas South Oak Cliff, Dallas Spruce, El Paso Jefferson, El Paso Parkland, Houston Jones, Houston Waltrip, Rosenberg Lamar, San Antonio Burbank, San Antonio Fox Tech, San Antonio Sam Houston, Sherman and Victoria Stroman.

Scurry County teams lose b'ball opponents

AUSTIN — Snyder area six-man football teams will see few changes as a result of the biennial UIL realignment, but basketball teams will have to schedule more non-district games.

Ira, Hermleigh and Borden County will remain the core of six-man's District 6. The only difference in the grid roster will be the loss of Trent to District 11 and the addition of Westbrook.

Hermleigh and Ira will also stay together in Class A basketball, along with Westbrook and Loraine in District 26. Gone will be Highland and Blackwell, which were moved into District 28, joining Leuders Avoca, and Trent.

"Wow," said Hermleigh girls' basketball coach June Watkins upon learning of the changes this morning. "That blows me away.

"I'm not disappointed with the change," she continued. "And I'm glad they didn't bring in someone else to replace those they're taking out.

"I think it'll be a great thing, but we'd better get started scheduling non-district games."

Borden County competes in District 14 in basketball, along with Sands, Klondike and Grady.

Six-man football, being overhauled statewide, lost state powerhouse Fort Hancock, winner of five of the last eight state titles.

Average Daily Attendance figures were whittled from 90 to 79 by the University Interscholastic League. The change, which could remove at least a half-dozen playoff-caliber teams in the region from the six-man rolls, has drawn some criticism from affected schools.

The shuffling of districts is tentative and may be appealed in writing to the Assignment Review Board, which will make all decisions regarding realignment by Feb. 18.

HHS visits W'brook; Ira entertains Loraine

A pair of Scurry County basketball teams with playoff aspirations will be on the floor in Class A games tonight.

The Hermleigh Lady Cardinals, sporting first place in District 21, will visit Westbrook, while Ira's Lady Bulldogs, tied for second in the loop with Highland, hosts Loraine.

Hermleigh, 14-6 on the season and 6-0 in league play, is fresh from a 38-20 victory over Blackwell on Friday, behind a 12-point night by Sheri Sandefur and Brandi Bates' six points and 19 boards.

Westbrook carries a 5-11, 3-3 record, including Friday's 55-45 win over Loraine.

Hermleigh's boys will also be in action today, taking on the 7-10, 2-4 Wildcats.

The Cardinals sport a 4-14 record on the campaign and a 2-4 slate in 21-A action, after Friday's 51-41 loss to Blackwell.

Hermleigh is led by Ricky Sosa, who scored 16 against the Hornets, and Chris Lambaren, who chipped in 10.

Ira's Lady 'Dogs suffered a 38-37 loss at Highland on Friday, slipping into a second-place tie in the district girls' standings.

Ira is now 10-11 on the year and 4-2 in district games. Loraine enters tonight's fray at 3-14 and 0-6.

Ira's top producers include Jody Rankin, who scored 10 against Highland, and Jennifer Rankin and Angie Robinson, who each added seven.

Ira's boys will have the unenviable task of hosting the league's top team, Loraine, which is coming off a 107-73 hammering of Mitchell County foe Westbrook on Friday.

Loraine carries a 17-2 season record and an unblemished 6-0 loop mark into its game against Ira.

Ira, 3-16 and 0-6, fell to Highland 67-43 on Friday in spite of Coy Henderson's 15 points and seven by Heath Mathis.

Both girls' games begin at 6:30 p.m. followed at 8 p.m. by the boys' contests.

College to offer EMT basic refresher course

The Continuing Education Department at Western Texas College has scheduled an EMT basic refresher course set to begin Monday, Feb. 21.

The eight-week, 32-hour course will meet Monday evenings from 6 until 10 o'clock at Snyder Fire Department through April 11.

The refresher course is in compliance with the new changes implemented by the Texas Department of Health (TDH) requiring continuing education hours for EMS personnel every two years rather than every four years.

Ralph Hendricks, Sweetwater fire marshal and EMT coordinator for WTC, designed the newly approved course. Hendricks was named EMS Instructor of the Year by TDH last fall.

Perry Westmoreland, owner and manager of Snyder EMS, will also be chief instructor for the course, assisted by Tammy Shirley of Snyder EMS.

Cost is $78. The textbook, Pre-Hospital Emergency Care & Crisis Intervention, will be available for purchase the first night of the class.

For further information and to pre-register, call 573-8511, ext. 390. The pre-registration deadline is Feb. 17.

No-code tech class offered

A licensing class for the Amateur Radio No-Code Technician's License will be held Saturday and Sunday in the Snyder Fire Department classroom.

The room is located downstairs in the Snyder Police Department.

The class will begin at 7 a.m. and run until 7 p.m. Saturday, resuming at 7 a.m. Sunday and lasting again until 7 p.m. The test for the license will be given at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The no-code technician's license for amateur radio is new and does not require the learning of Morse Code. A written test is all that is required.

The license does not have restrictions as to frequencies that the licensee can operate. Primarily, the no-code license is for those interested in operating in the VHF-UHF frequency range and for use of computers on amateur radio.

Locally, there are several repeaters that no-code techs could use. They are used in Skywarn weather spotting.

Cost of the class is $20 for the book and $6 for the test. There is a limit of 15 people to the class. Anyone interested needs to call Paul Gilbert at 573-2163 by Wednesday.

Police note two arrests

Snyder police made two drinking-related arrests Monday and early today.

Police arrested a 19-year-old woman for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated at 9:38 p.m. Monday along Texas Highway 208.

At 12:30 a.m. today, police arrested a 39-year-old woman at the Beacon Lodge for public intoxication.

In one other report, Jim Sartor contacted police from Snyder Chrysler in reference to two vehicles having been damaged. A report for Class A criminal mischief was filed.

Rabin douses expectations; agreement still not at hand

JERUSALEM (AP) — Despite progress in Israel-PLO talks, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said it will take time to overcome differences, and other officials predicted today that an agreement was still weeks away.

Palestinians and some members of Rabin's Cabinet had said an agreement was close on the final terms for Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank city of Jericho.

Hopes had been high since a high-level bargaining session over the weekend in Switzerland, with both sides reporting good progress. But Rabin said several issues still needed to be resolved.

"I believe we are moving slowly in the direction of agreement. It will take time," Rabin told American Jewish leaders in a conference call Monday night. "It will take more time than we had expected."

Peace talks resume today in Cairo, Egypt, between Israeli and PLO representatives.

Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin suggested on Israel radio that a full agreement might still be several weeks away.

Senior military leaders were quoted by Israeli newspapers as saying Foreign Minister Shimon Peres conceded too much during his weekend meetings with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat in Davos, Switzerland.

Arafat told reporters in the Swiss capital, Bern, on Monday that he and Peres postponed plans to initial agreements reached in Davos after "the Israeli side asked for some more days to study the new drafts."

The newspaper Maariv quoted sources close to Rabin as saying he was "very angry" when he saw the television footage of Peres holding hands with Arafat as they walked to the podium Sunday for a news conference in Davos.

The Israel-PLO peace agreement promised autonomy for Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and Jericho. But it has not been carried out yet because of disagreements over the size of Jericho, the securing of Jewish settlements in the Gaza Strip and the control of border crossings to Jordan and Egypt.

Army radio quoted unidentified Israeli officials as saying some agreement could be signed in Cairo as early as next week.

Peres told the radio he wanted to go over the Davos agreements "word by word" with Rabin when he returns from his U.S. trip later this week.

Peres said he could not be held to a deadline for signing the agreement. "It takes a lot of time and patience," he said.

Bodies of man, woman found in Mansfield home

MANSFIELD (AP) — The bodies of a man and a woman believed to be his wife were found at the man's home in an affluent subdivision in this Tarrant County town, both apparent victims of fatal gunshots, officials said.

Both apparently were killed Saturday evening as they prepared to eat, said Rick Clayton, a field examiner for the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office. The pair had been shot in the head, he said.

The man has been tentatively identified as a 46-year-old former military officer, although his name is not being released pending notification of family, officials said. There was no identification on the woman's body, but police said today that they believe she was the man's wife.

The bodies were found around noon Monday after a co-worker of one of the victims went to the house to check when the person didn't go to work. The co-worker saw the man lying on the kitchen floor. Police found the woman on the garage floor.

Clayton said there was no sign of a struggle inside the house, leading authorities to believe that they either knew the assailant or were taken by surprise.

Police, who said they have one small lead, said there was no sign of forced entry and no weapon had been recovered. One investigator called the incident a "straight homicide."

Many residents in the Heritage Estates development knew the man, who was president of the neighborhood's homeowners association.

Eileen Pfleiger said she last talked to the man about 4 p.m. Saturday, when he said he was working on a newsletter but was getting ready to stop "because company was coming over."

Two are dead

McKINNEY (AP) — Just two weeks after moving from a welfare-subsidized apartment into a neat frame house, Ester and Brian Simmons are dead from an apparent murder suicide that their son said started with an argument over $10.

While Mrs. Simmons' 6-year-old daughter slept and her 10-year-old son watched, relatives say, Mr. Simmons threw his wife to the floor, placed his foot on her stomach and aimed the shotgun at her head.

The boy said that as he ran from the house, he heard the first blast.

McKinney police found the bodies in a back bedroom after receiving a domestic disturbance call about 10:30 p.m. Sunday.

The son told his uncle, Javier Cervantes, that his mother and stepfather had argued about the whereabouts of a $10 bill and some keys after a Super Bowl party at the house.

Interim superintendent

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston school trustees have appointed a Hispanic as interim superintendent until resigning board member Rod Paige is hired.

The board voted Monday to give Yvonne Gonzalez, 41, the job for the next week or two — or until a replacement is found for Paige's seat and his superintendent contract is finalized.

This year's victory hangover not as bad as '93

"You know what Hillary Clinton and the Dallas Cowboys have in common? They both have Bills to kick around." — A joke making the rounds of the Dallas Super Bowl revelry.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Ho hum.

By last year's standards, this city's Super Bowl hangover was a bummer. Maybe a mild headache. An upset tummy. A sore throat or two. Buffalo breath, at the worst.

Hangover XXVIII was only a mere shadow of Hangover XXVII.

A year ago, after the Cowboys crushed the Bills 52-17, diehard Dallas fans partied hard and partied late, then returned the next morning to revisit the "hair of the dog" that bit them.

"I called in dead this morning," a sales representative named Dan Wiskoski confessed last year as he clutched a cold beer at the Addison Point, a popular north side sports bar.

"I didn't wake up today. I came to," said his buddy, Craig Shaffer.

After Sunday's victory, it was more like the hair of the puppy.

"It just wasn't that frenzied," said Casey Gotcher, who surfaced at the Point shortly before noon Monday. "Last year, everybody went crazy. This year, it was more subdued.

"It's really kind of bizarre."

Police made only a couple of arrests for drunkenness Sunday night. There were no reports of injuries and only a few rowdy incidents.

Police did rebuke some 27 screaming and shouting fans packed into an El Camino creeping through the historic downtown West End entertainment complex, which was a madhouse last year.

Anticipating another wild celebration, 312 extra officers were scattered around the city's hot spots, almost half of them in the West End.

But there was more honking and hollering than brawling.

Monday morning, nobody showed up at the West End's Outback Pub, the scene of one of the city's biggest Super Bowl bashes Sunday.

"They got their partying done last night," laughed general manager Donnie Mixon. "We were packed to the gills, but they were a lot calmer than last year.

"A year ago, it was just mayhem."

With the 'Boys trailing by a touchdown at halftime, the mood across the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex was a mite subdued, but not gloomy.

"Our group had a feeling something good was going to happen in the second half," Mixon said. "And sure enough it did."

The Outback crowd "hit the rafters" when James Washington returned Thurman Thomas' fumble for a touchdown early in the third quarter.

Everything was downhill from then on.

"The first half and second half were like two different ballgames," said Gotcher, the Addison Point regular. "I don't know if the Dallas dynasty's back. But we proved one thing — last year was not a fluke."

Gotcher and bartender Anita Joyce insisted that no one's actually blase over the Cowboys, it's just that the 1993 Super Bowl victory was the perfect end to a magical season.

"We're just getting a little cocky and arrogant, but that's the way it should be, because we're the Dallas Cowboys," Gotcher said.

Said Ms. Joyce, obviously a believer in Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson:

"I think we're going to go back a third time and set a record. Why not? Jimmy's going to do it just to hack off everybody in the NFL."

In Las Vegas, professional oddsmakers have made Dallas a 3-1 favorite to win next year's Super Bowl. San Francisco is 5-1, Houston 7-1 and Miami and the New York Giants 12-1.

Tampa Bay and Cincinnati are the longest shots at 200-1.

And the Bills, who have lost four straight? They're 12-1, but, says one oddsmaker, "They might as well be 100-1."

Butch Weatherby, a regular at the Scoreboard in nearby Fort Worth, was one Cowboy fan just content with Sunday's verdict.

"My financial future and the harmony of my household were in jeopardy most of the night," he confessed. He was one of the many who bet the 'Boys, giving 10 1/2 points.

At the half, with Buffalo leading 13-6, he trailed by 17 1/2 points.

"I had to suffer through all that," he said, sipping a suds and chomping on Scoreboard leftovers: "We had enough food last night to feed the Somalians.

"We're still eatin' it today."

The Scoreboard party might have been a little rowdier than most. A reporter called Monday to inquire and Rex Hill, a professional golfer, answered the phone.

"There's a guy here that can't breathe," Hill said. "You want to talk to him? He's lying on the bar."

Hutchinson receives most donations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston Congressman Mike Andrews began 1994 tops in fund raising among candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat held by Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Campaign finance reports filed Monday with the Federal Election Commission show Andrews started the year with $496,207 in cash on hand. For the six-month period that ended Dec. 31, Andrews had $295,025 in contributions and $199,147 in expenditures.

Andrews had four times more money to kick off the year than former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, identified by polls as the Democratic frontrunner in the March 8 primary.

Mattox trailed both Andrews and Dallas businessman Richard Fisher, reporting $113,779 in cash on hand as of Dec. 31. He received $206,990 in contributions and spent $93,211 during the six-month period.

Fisher reported $339,866 in cash on hand — $250,000 from a personal loan to his campaign. He received $176,047 in contributions and spent $86,180.

Neither Andrews nor Mattox reported any campaign debts.

The Mattox campaign went on the offensive, with campaign manager Harmon Lisnow saying the money-raising efforts "were geared to kick off after the Jan. 3 filing deadline, following the deadline for this report."

"And we've been on target since that time," Lisnow said in a statement.

Lisnow said the campaign expected to be outspent in the primary. "Our opponents include a multimillionaire who spent $2 million of his own (money) in last year's special election and a congressman who could transfer the huge amounts he's gotten from the insurance and medical industries," Lisnow said of Fisher and Andrews.

Andrews led the pack in contributions received during the last six months from political action committees — with $169,875 or 57.5 percent of his funds raised coming from PACs.

For the six months that ended in December, Mrs. Hutchison received $328,603 from PACs, accounting for 21 percent of her contributions. Mattox reported 3 percent, or $7,450, of his contributions were from PACs. Fisher received no PAC money.

Andrews campaign spokesman Scot Sutherland decried the Mattox campaign statement. "As usual, he takes the low road," Sutherland said. "Before this race is finished, we'll have raised far more money from individuals and smaller contributors than Jim Mattox will."

Fisher campaign spokesman Martin Johnson sidestepped the criticism, but said: "This campaign is not about money ... Our opponents in this campaign are professional politicians of the past and Richard Fisher represents the future."

Mrs. Hutchison's campaign war chest dwarfs those of her Democratic rivals. For the last six months of the year, her campaign took in $1,548,087 in contributions and spent $926,786. She began 1994 with $1,493,291 in cash on hand and $11,362 in debts.

Mrs. Hutchison, who ran in the May special election and June runoff for the seat once held by Lloyd Bentsen, raised $8,536,566 last year and spent $7,196,135.

Her campaign fund-raising is expected to go into low gear as her trial on ethics charges approaches. She will go on trial Feb. 7 in Fort Worth on charges that while state treasurer she used state employees, state facilities and state funds for personal and political purposes and then altered records to cover up her activities. She has denied any wrongdoing and claims the charges stem from a Democratic plot to hurt her re-election effort.

Hutchison spokesman Dave Beckwith said the fund-raising slowdown won't have any serious effect on her campaign. "The heavy expenditures won't occur until this fall and we plan no serious expenditures prior to the primary," he said.

Suit over illegal immigration pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the federal government won't crack down on illegal immigration it should help ease the financial burden that undocumented aliens place on state and local budgets, Texas Gov. Ann Richards says.

Richards, in town for the winter meeting of the National Governors Association, said Texas is contemplating a lawsuit against the federal government to recoup its costs.

"The federal government really has got two choices — one is to enforce the immigration laws; the other is to pay for the costs if they don't," she said Monday after emerging from a meeting with President Clinton and the nation's other governors.

Richards' office estimates Texas pays $300 million to $450 million a year in education, health care and incarceration costs for the 350,000 to 550,000 illegal immigrants in the state. Considering the sales taxes and payroll taxes paid by the undocumented aliens, the net burden to Texas is estimated at $150 million.

"It is literally breaking the backs of some local governments in terms of education, in terms of health care and we want the federal government to assume their responsibilities and pay for (the illegal immigrants) if they are not going to enforce the law to keep them out," Richards said.

She repeated her message later in an afternoon session with Attorney General Janet Reno, Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala and administration budget director Leon Panetta. Also attending were Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar, New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman and representatives from New York, California, Florida and Arizona.

Texas isn't the only state contemplating a lawsuit against the federal government.

Richards has talked with Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles about the possibility of Texas joining Florida in a lawsuit it is expected to file this month in U.S. District Court in Miami.

"How far we'll go with that suit, I don't know," Richards told reporters outside the White House. "We're trying to focus the attention and the interest of both the administration and the Congress on this issue."

She has her own suggestion on how the federal government could pay for some of the expenses: raising the cost of permanent visas for new immigrants. Richards said the most expensive visa is $200 and in some cases, immigrants pay nothing.

Richards recently asked Texas Attorney General Dan Morales to examine the state's options, which include joining the Florida lawsuit or filing suit separately.

Attorneys in Morales' office are reviewing what other states have done. Lawsuits filed by California and New York similar to the one planned by Florida were dismissed. In 1992, New York City successfully waged legal battle for reimbursement of the cost of prenatal care of pregnant illegal aliens.

"The research is being done in regard to what the other states have done and where they were successful and where they failed," said Morales spokesman Ron Dusek.

Immigration isn't the only topic on Richards' agenda while she's in the nation's capital. She planned meetings today on crime, transportation and the superconducting super collider.

During the two-hour session Monday with Clinton, Richards and the other governors voiced their concerns about the massive crime bill wending its way through Congress.

"I'll tell you what the governors are worried about and that includes me," Richards said. "We have an atmosphere in Congress where everybody wants to be tougher than the other guy on crime."

With congressional posturing comes the danger that Congress will impose more mandates on states and shift money away from programs that work to new ones, she said.

While Clinton asked the governors to help him push legislation that would add 100,000 police to the streets, Richards said the money for the new officers would be diverted from drug interdiction programs. She also noted that funding for the 100,000 officers would disappear after five years — placing the burden squarely back on local governments.

"And we all know local governments can't pick that up," Richards said.

The crime bill also ignores juvenile crime, she said. "If they are going to address future crime, they've got to address the future criminals," Richards said.

Brown launches radio talk show

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Governor Moonbeam is on another wavelength these days.

Jerry Brown launched a syndicated radio talk show on Monday, "We the People With Jerry Brown."

"My view of Clinton and the Republicans will be very different from a (Rush) Limbaugh and other talk show hosts," said Brown, dubbed Moonbeam for his futuristic views as governor. "My theme is that people are getting ripped off."

Brown employed a similar theme during his unsuccessful bid for president in 1992.

About 20 stations nationwide have picked up Brown's show, which will be taped daily.

Poll: 42% want Harding out

NEW YORK (AP) — Four in 10 Americans say Tonya Harding should withdraw from the Winter Games even if she is innocent of the attack on Nancy Kerrigan, to avoid being a distraction to other U.S. Olympians.

Fifty-eight percent of the respondents in the Associated Press poll said the skater should step aside if she is charged with the crime, even if she has not had a chance to defend herself in court.

A total of 1,007 U.S. adults were interviewed by telephone Wednesday through Sunday by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants.

With the drama still unfolding, public opinion about Harding is far from settled. But the results should reflect what Americans would have responded at the time, within a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Harding has a go-ahead from the U.S. Figure Skating Association to compete in the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway. But she could be replaced up until Feb. 21, two days before her event.

Forty-two percent of those surveyed said she should step aside to avoid distracting other U.S. Olympians, even if she is innocent.

Harding's ex-husband, her former bodyguard and and two other men have been charged in the attack that nearly knocked Kerrigan out of the Olympics.

The commercial payoff an Olympic medal can bring suggested to many of those polled that such a crime was almost inevitable. They agreed by 74 percent to 23 percent that greed can cause athletes to stop at almost nothing to win.

Most of those surveyed said they were following the Kerrigan story: 26 percent said very closely and 44 percent said fairly closely. In what is unusual for a sports story, slightly more women than men were following closely, and older people were more enthralled than younger people.

Dr. Gott by Peter Gott, M.D.

Sex: How active are married couples?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you help put to rest a debate that has been in our marriage for over 20 years? What is the frequency of normal sex for a couple? I'm looking for an honest, reasonable answer. Is weekly, every other week or even once a month realistic?

DEAR READER: After almost 30 years in practice, I'm still unable to give a firm answer to this question, which I am often asked. There is just too much individual variation in behavior.

Most couples strike a balance that works for them, depending on their ages and personal needs. I know some couples in their 60s who enjoy sex several times a week. For them, this pattern is ideal; it suits them. On the other hand, I also know couples in their 30s and 40s who have sex once or twice a month. While this may not appeal much to the average person, they are happy with the arrangement.

It goes without saying that younger people usually have sex more often than do middle-aged couples. Over time, this pattern changes, either because of age, familiarity, illness or other factors. Some people are more "sexy" than others, who can take it or leave it. Most adults frequently vary their sexual activity: less when they are stressed or tired, more when they are relaxed or on vacation.

If pressed, I'd say that the majority of healthy, middle-aged adults enjoy sex once or twice a week, on average. Understandably, there are many people whose patterns fall outside this average. This is not "abnormal." Couples who can't seem to agree on an appropriate schedule can often be helped by counseling.

The important thing to remember, I suppose, is that it's not the frequency of the sex act that is the main consideration. Rather, it's the quality of the act and what it means to the participants. Mechanical, frequent sex is not as appealing to most of us as is the sensitive expression of emotional and physical closeness, reflecting love and intimacy.

Therefore, almost any pattern of frequency is "realistic." Sorry, that's the best I can do. Let's talk about a more manageable topic, such as how often people eat chocolate.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Where to Find Sex Information." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Ten years ago I bruised a bone in my elbow. My doctor indicated there is a ligament that slides over it that causes constant irritation and makes it slow to heal. I've taken pills and wear a brace to restrict movement of the ligament. I don't have medical insurance and cannot afford to continue seeing a doctor. What can I do to speed the healing?

DEAR READER: Ten years is a long time to suffer the consequences of a bone bruise. I'm more concerned that a tendon in the painful area may have become irritated and frayed. For example, tennis elbow, which is actually common in carpenters and others whose occupations demand repetitive movements, may require cortisone injections or surgical repair.

In view of your continuing symptoms, I urge you to be examined by an orthopedic surgeon. Once the specialist diagnoses your condition, you'll be in a position to decide what to do about it. I do not believe that repeated office visits will be necessary to relieve your symptoms. See the specialist.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Insuring Your Good Health." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother is an asthmatic and has temporal arteritis. She's been treated with prednisone but suffers numerous side effects such as shaky hands and legs, coupled with irritability. I would like to know what the arteritis is all about and if you feel the treatment is appropriate.

DEAR READER: Temporal arteritis is an autoimmune disorder, marked by inflammation of the arterial lining, notably in those blood vessels in the area of the temple. The affliction, of unknown cause, leads to headache, a swollen and painful artery, and — sometimes — blindness. Therefore, treatment is necessary to prevent this complication.

Prednisone, a steroid in the cortisone family, is the therapy of choice. Despite its side effects — osteoporosis and susceptibility to infection, for example — the drug may have to be administered for several months, to counteract the arterial inflammation.

As luck would have it, prednisone is also an excellent treatment for asthma — again, with acceptance of (and close attention to) its side effects. Therefore, your mother appears to be receiving suitable therapy. Shakiness and irritability are not normal consequences of prednisone, and may be caused by her underlying diseases. She should follow her doctor's instructions, working with him to reduce the quantity of prednisone as quickly as possible, to become stabilized on a maintenance dose.

Some schools stay open late to provide safe haven for kids

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — It's 3 o'clock and classes are over for the day, but fifth-grader Keisha Cox is settling down for several more hours at McKinley Elementary School.

With no one at home until evening, the school is her refuge. "There are people here to help you with your homework, and after you're done with your homework you can have a little fun," she said.

Around the country, assisted by social service organizations and private business, schools are staying open into the evening — some until 10 p.m. or later — to give children a safe haven in dangerous surroundings.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., wants the federal government to get involved in the so-called community school concept. At his initiative, the crime bill passed by the Senate late last year includes $400 million over four years for community schools. The bill is awaiting action by a joint House-Senate conference committee.

Under the proposal, grants would be awarded to states based on the number of poor children living there. To be eligible, communities must demonstrate significant problems of poverty and juvenile delinquency.

Bradley said keeping schools open is simply common sense.

"Home in urban America in many cases is a war zone," he said before touring McKinley School in December. "If you've got a place that has books and want a place for kids to study and play a sport or talk to somebody about life, why not connect the two?"

There's support for Bradley's position in the Education Department.

"In many urban areas, the school is the only safe place to be," Deputy Education Secretary Madeleine Kunin said recently. "The longer you keep the schools open, the more lives you save."

The Clinton administration's proposed reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, coming before a House subcommittee today, would grant greater flexibility to use money for disadvantaged students. "It will allow people to use funds for extending school hours," Kunin said.

At McKinley, adjacent to two public housing projects, 125 children are registered for the community school program and 45 to 60 participate on any given day. The community school is fully financed by the city of New Brunswick; there is no charge for students.

If not for the program, "some children would be at home alone, some children would be literally out in the streets, some would be in child care centers," said David Blevins, the city's community school coordinator.

The afternoon begins with an hour of homework help. Children then move to recreational activities such as dance, photography or open gym.

The program draws heavily on volunteers from nearby Rutgers University. Jon Dunham, a junior majoring in biology, is fulfilling a community service class requirement while at McKinley.

"I won't give them the answers," he said, as he moved around the room helping children with their homework. "You have to make them do the work."

Principal Joyce McGee said she can see a difference in the grades of the children in the program.

Nine percent drop in world wheat forecast in ag report

WASHINGTON (AP) — World wheat trade is forecast at 100.6 million tons in 1993-94, a 9 percent decline from the previous season's level, according to an Agriculture Department report.

At the same time, world wheat production is seen remaining at about the same level as that for 1992-93.

"The forecast for world wheat consumption is up again this month and is now forecast at 564.2 million tons, which is over 3 percent higher than last year," said a recent report by USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service. "Furthermore, this is more than the quantity of wheat consumed in 1990-91, when world wheat consumption reached an all-time record."

The pace of U.S. wheat and flour sales quickened in January over the previous month, fueled by recent sales to numerous destinations, the report said. Consequently, the U.S. 1993-94 export forecast was increased from 31.5 to 33 million tons.

Latin America's projected imports were up 600,000 tons in January over December due to continued strength in import demand from Brazil, Chile and Peru, the report said.

"With growing utilization in conjunction with declining local production, Latin America is one of the world's most rapidly expanding markets for wheat," it noted. "At 13 million tons, Latin America's 1993-94 imports are expected to be almost double the level in 1989-90."

Turning to the Middle East, the report said that as a result of the pace of purchases by Yemen, Israel and the United Arab Emirates, the import forecast in January for the area is up 775,000 tons.

"Yemen continues to purchase flour, has purchased about 1.1 million tons of wheat, and reportedly needs about another 200,000 to 300,000 tons of wheat," the report said. "Israel has outstanding commitments to purchase about 550,000 tons of milling wheat and 200,000 tons of feed wheat, with additional purchases expected."

The export forecast for South Asia was up 100,000 tons "due entirely to a sharp increase in Afghanistan's wheat imports so far this year," the report said. At the current pace, Afghanistan's 1993-94 imports will be the highest since 1985-86.

The report said Ethiopia is expected to import more wheat to cover most of an estimated 1-million-ton shortfall in food supplies. "Hence, the 1993-94 import estimate for Ethiopia was increased 100,000 tons to 900,000," it said.

Richards happy over win

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the world champion Dallas Cowboys ever are in need of coaching advice, they might want to turn to Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

The governor, who was in Atlanta for the Super Bowl, offered some tips of her own as the Texas team trailed the Buffalo Bills 13-6 at halftime.

"I was up there coaching from the stands," Richards told reporters Monday outside the White House. The advice she gave Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman?

"I just shouted to him. I said, 'Troy if the guy can't catch it, give it to Emmitt, and so he did and it worked," said Richards, who flew to Washington from Atlanta early Monday for the winter meeting of the National Governors Association.

The rest is history. The Cowboys went on to win 30-13, and running back Emmitt Smith was the Super Bowl MVP with two touchdowns and 132 yards rushing.

Richards said she didn't make any wagers this year with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. "I didn't bet him anything. New York doesn't have anything I want," she said, laughing.

She pledged a little more sympathy for the Bills if they return to the Super Bowl next year for a fifth consecutive appearance. "Next year I'm going to feel sorry for Buffalo," she said. "I just couldn't do it this year."

Honors planned

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Men in drag will honor Meg Ryan and Tom Cruise with this year's Harvard Hasty Pudding Theatrical awards.

The theater group honors performers who make "a lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment." The group's officers cross-dress to present the awards.
