Ruling leaves tax system intact until 1993

Ruling doesn't surprise MISD trustees

Midland school board trustees said the Texas Supreme Court decision to reform public school funding came as no surprise.

"I am surprised at the timing though, given the tax deadline for paying school property taxes (today)," said Joseph Baressi, superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

"We have already collected 40 percent of our share of the property taxes," noted Don Furgeson, MISD business manager.

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Thursday declared unconstitutional the state's new public school tax system and gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993 to fix it.

"There remains for the Legislature and the governor the responsibility for reforming the public school system to comply with the sovereign will of the people expressed in our constitution," said Justice Raul Gonzalez, writing for the majority.

The court deferred the ruling's effect so that it will not interfere with the collection of 1991 and 1992 property taxes in the new county education districts (CEDs).

FDIC closes operations in Midland

■ FDIC ends nine years of operations here.

Staff Report

Normally a busy place, it was quiet at 303 Air Park Thursday as only a handful of workmen loaded a few remaining boxes and the lights were finally turned off.

As of today, the FDIC is officially gone from Midland.

In June of 1990 FDIC officials denied, amid a flurry of rumors, that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was in the process of leaving Midland.

But the rumors persisted and little by little FDIC officials continued to whittle at the 350 employees and the $10 million payroll, sending employees to other offices at El Paso, San Antonio, Oklahoma and Dallas.

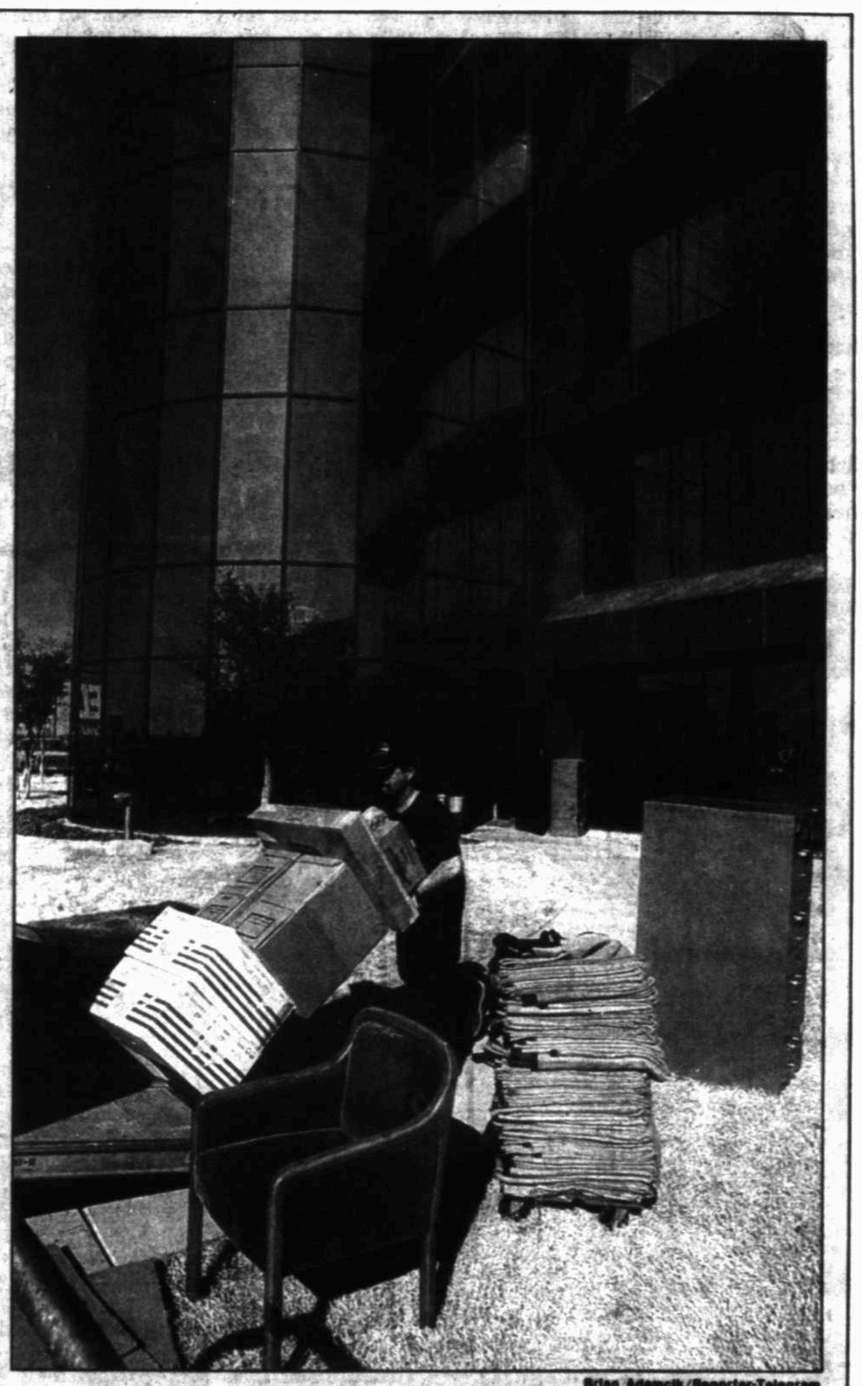

Then in September of 1991, with only 140 employees remaining, Bob Carman, managing liquidator at Midland, announced that the office, which was once the second largest employer in Midland, would pull out of the city by April of 1992, because of its dwindling presence in Midland.

"They did it ahead of schedule," said a former employee.

The FDIC opened offices in Midland in 1983 to handle the collapse of then First National Bank, which had assets of more than $1 billion. It was the second largest bank in the nation to fail.

Over the years the FDIC auctions in School, FDIC close deal

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

When Eddie Lee and Bob Carman shook hands Thursday morning it closed eight years of negotiations for Midland Christian School and FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Co.).

"We are ecstatic," said Lee, the superintendent for the private school. "We are very appreciative of Midland American Bank helping us settle this."

The school raised $350,000 in cash from the community and obtained a 10-year loan of $400,000 from MAB to offer FDIC a $750,000 settlement.

FDIC held a foreclosure sale for the school property — which encompassed the entire campus — Sept. 4. The prop-

MISD board names school for Coleman

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland school board trustees voted 6-1 to name the new Alternative High School for Dr. Viola Coleman in a regular meeting Thursday night.

The motion, made by trustee James Fuller, included the recommendation that the high school's programs be named for the selections chosen by students.

Coleman

Jackie Hamilton voted against the motion.

Students at the Alternative School selected four names for the yet-to-be-built high school — New Horizons, Lone Star, Granite and Stonewall — which they offered to the board for consideration.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. noted that the board voted Nov. 26, to involve students in the process of naming the school.

Students were charged with selecting names and developing essays explaining their choices.

However, an outpouring of support to name the school for Dr. Coleman — a longtime Midland physician and black community leader — came from citizens

Watkins blasts WIPP litigation

Associated Press

Energy Secretary James Watkins says a New Mexico lawsuit is stalling the opening of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad without justification.

"We're in litigation in my opinion for no good reason," Watkins said Wednesday. "Why can't we move? This is some kind of extreme position taken by people who want to thwart progress."

A federal judge granted a preliminary injunction in November that blocks shipments of nuclear waste to WIPP. The action was the result of a lawsuit by New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall.

The Department of Energy is appealing the decision.

While opponents of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant rallied in Santa Fe to the tunes of David Crosby and Graham Nash, Watkins used the release of his 1993 budget in Washington, D.C., to criticize foes of the nuclear waste dump.

He told reporters at his annual budget

Police shoot bus hijacker

COLTON, Calif. (AP) — A man apparently desperate to return home to talk to God hijacked a Greyhound bus, taking eight people on a 320-mile dash across the desert before police killed him Thursday in his driveway, authorities said.

Reynaldo Andrade Gonzales, 33, described as suffering "religious hallucinations," commandeered the bus late Wednesday in Phoenix and careened west on Interstate 10 for 4½ hours with police in pursuit.

Gonzales was unarmed, and friends and relatives criticized authorities for shooting him. One relative called the shooting an execution.

The passengers, seven adults and a child, weren't hurt during the chase, which reached speeds up to 75 mph and included a colli-

Harkin trumpets his cause

By John King
Associated Press writer

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Tom Harkin won a name for himself in the Democratic presidential campaign with his fiery populism, unabashed liberalism and fearless Bush bashing.

But with little more than two weeks left before the crucial New Hampshire primary and Harkin lagging in the polls, the Iowa senator is turning to scripture for a rallying cry to inspire his followers.

"If the trumpet sounds an uncertain sound, who will follow it into battle?" Harkin declared at a rally this week, borrowing a line from Corinthians.

You'll never mistake the sound of Harkin's trumpet. He got into the race promising to stir things up and he's made good on that pledge. And while he barely registers double digits in the latest polls, it was single digits not long ago.

DEAL: Christian school buys campus from FDIC

erty includes four buildings, a football field, baseball backstop, playground and tennis courts. The Sept. 4 opening bid was $680,000 and FDIC was the sole bidder.

Now the school has the note on the property back.

"After eight years of dealing with this, it's like a load has been lifted off my shoulders," Lee said.

The school's troubles began when First National Bank was declared insolvent in 1983. The loan on the school buildings had been financed with the bank in 1981 when the building housing the secondary classrooms was constructed.

"Initially, we had enough pledges from the community to pay total construction costs," Lee said. "But, when the economy went bust, those pledges became uncollectable. Then the bank went under and FDIC took over."

Lee said the September foreclosure sale — which transferred ownership of the school to FDIC — was "just another stage of negotiations."

Carman, FDIC managing liquidator, said Thursday's transaction was the last act of the federal organization which is closing its Midland office today.

"We are pleased that we could come up with a good solution for both the school and FDIC," Carman said. "This is an all-cash settlement.

"We are closing our office, which has been in Midland since 1983," he noted. "We have done our job and fixed the problem."

Carman said he has been in Midland since June helping the office "wrap up" negotiations.

"We are happy to be closing on a positive note," he said.

Lee said parents, students and the Midland community "responded positively" during the school's struggle since September. The private school, which had 360 students at the beginning of the year, has increased enrollment to 375. It has a staff of 55 and an annual operating budget of $1.1 million. Tuition pays for 80 percent of the budget and the remaining 20 percent is acquired through fund raisers, Lee said.

The superintendent said the school is current on all bills and will focus on making the monthly payment to the bank.

"We are excited to have repurchased our property. This school has been an institution in Midland for 37 years. Everyone came through for us. Midland American Bank, parents, and everyone worked with us all the way," Lee said.

NAME: MISD board names school after doctor attending the school district's series of open forums.

Several school administrators said naming the school had become a divisive issue leaving trustees deliberating over whether to vote to show support for the students or the community.

However, Britt Priddy, an Alternative High School student, presented a compromise which solved the dilemma.

"We, the students, do want to be involved in the process whether our name is used for a building or a program," Britt said.

Britt, 17, addressed the board and described the process the students followed in narrowing down their choices to four from an initial 28 reccomendations.

He described the students efforts in campaigning to get the bond election passed in order for the school district to procure funds to build the new high school.

When queried by trustee Jack Hightower, Britt said the students would be satisfied with the school being named for Dr. Coleman and the student-generated selections used to name school programs.

School board president Ken Marks thanked the students for their efforts.

Trustee George Staley said, "I have not been up on this (naming the school) as I should have been ... If it weren't for the minority community, this building would never be built."

Staley said he was in favor of naming the school for Dr. Coleman since she impacted the lives of community members as the alternative school "impacts lives."

Ruth Nelms Hemphill, speaking for FOCUS (Federation of Citizens United to Serve) urged the board to name the school for Dr. Coleman.

She said, "We have heard that some members of the community do not want to name the school for someone who brought a lawsuit against the district. We disagree."

A recent newsletter from the school district mentioned that Dr. Coleman was "an original plaintiff in the suit to desegregate Midland's elementary schools."

Trustee Gary Willis addressed the issue, and said, "When I see Dr. Coleman, I see a lady that fought her whole life for equity. If she had to resort to the courts ... that's why we live in America."

"As an individual, a professional and a lay person, Dr. Coleman has brought recognition to this community," Fuller said, "not the African American community, but the entire community."

Fuller said the issue of naming the school was "blown out of proportion" due to "vague" board policies.

"What we are left to do as a board is get to the table and get a policy and prevent this from becoming an issue again," he said.

Ms. Hamilton, who voted against the motion, said, "I, as a school board member, charged these students with naming the school. They are going to be the adults of our community, our leaders. They will take care of us when we are old. I have to stand with them ... I visited with Viola and I feel we left good friends, but I've got to stay with these kids."

Willis said he abstained from voting on naming the school in a prior board meeting because there had been too little discussion on the issue.

"We needed more input from the entire community. We have been to community meetings and we have heard from the community. I think James' (Fullier) motion is excellent," he said.

Following the vote, Britt said, "I am happy with it."

"I wish the board would have heard more discussion before voting, though," he said, noting that trustees voted before some people in the audience who requested to address the board had an opportunity to speak. "But we will be happy to have some of the school's programs use our names."

Alma Marshall, a proponent of naming the school for Dr. Coleman, said, "The students' suggestion was very mature. We appreciate their efforts to compromise and reach a happy solution for everyone."

BUS: Hijacker hurried home to talk with God

(From 1A)

sion in which a California Highway Patrol car was forced off the road near Palm Springs.

In that crash, the bus crossed several lanes to take out the patrol car, sending it into a spin. The officer wasn't hurt, said CHP dispatcher Bill Brown.

"It was just very scary. I just thank God I made it out safe," said a woman passenger who was hustled away from reporters along with other passengers in a convoy of automobiles.

"The passengers said he didn't seem to know how to drive the bus and he even asked them for help," said Liz Dunn, spokeswoman for Dallas-based Greyhound Lines Inc.

But neighbor Mark Trimble, 18, said Gonzales had worked for a charter bus company and drove him on school field trips.

Police set out spikes to puncture the bus' tires, but the bus didn't stop despite several flats.

The chase ended when Gonzales turned down a residential street in this town 50 miles east of Los Angeles, said Sgt. Terry Dunn of the San Bernardino County sheriff's office. The bus stopped in front of Gonzales' house.

Gonzales was shot to death at 3:45 a.m. by a Colton officer after a struggle with police in his driveway, said sheriff's Sgt. Dennis Casey. "It seems like he was determined to reach his home."

Neighbors gathered around a TV truck after the shooting to watch a videotape showing Gonzales leaving the bus. After he walked off camera, there was a sharp crack of gunfire.

"People are upset," Trimble said. "They want to know why the police shot an unarmed guy. He was walking toward his home without the intent to harm anyone."

A man who only identified himself as Gonzales' brother-in-law said: "Our point of view is that he was executed."

But Casey, the sheriff's sergeant, told reporters that as Gonzales was walking up the driveway, an FBI agent ordered him to stop. He refused, a struggle ensued, and another policeman fired twice, killing Gonzales with a shotgun blast.

Residents recalled how Gonzales once administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a 3-year-old girl who had fallen into a swimming pool. "He saved the child. He's a wonderful man," said Pat Cervantes.

The hijacking began when Gonzales climbed into the driver's seat while the bus was stopped in a downtown Phoenix terminal and the driver was in an office. Greyhound bus No. 1647 had been scheduled to leave for St. Louis in about 15 minutes.

Shortly before the bus was stolen, Gonzales had approached several cab drivers outside the bus station, said Phoenix police Sgt. Kevin Robinson.

"Apparently the person has some type of religious hallucinations," said Sgt. Rick Knight, spokesman for the Arizona Department of Public Safety.

Desert Cab Co. owner Brian Shaw said Gonzales wanted a ride to California so he could talk to God.

"Jesus wanted him out of Arizona and to California, and that the devil was chasing up close behind him so he needed to leave Phoenix real quick," Shaw told Phoenix radio station KFYI.

Gonzales' sisters told neighbor Carol Morales that their brother had been stuck in Phoenix and was desperate to get home. The weeping women also were hustled past reporters by authorities.

"He was going crazy and he wanted to get home," said Ms. Morales, who described Gonzales as a "real nice and an easygoing guy. ... You wouldn't think he would do anything like this."

In California, police helicopters kept pace with the bus as it roared across San Bernardino and Riverside counties

RACE: Harkin still confident of primary victory

(From 1A)

"I always say, peak on election day, not a month before," Harkin tells audiences — audiences that are growing.

"Harkin is moving," said Stanley Greenberg, the pollster for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton. "He's gaining, particularly among older, blue collar voters."

Such a crowd gathered in the Sweeney American Legion post Wednesday to hear a fiery burst of Harkin oratory. Most of the fire is aimed at President Bush. But some is reserved for Democratic rivals.

The targets are not just Clinton and former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who top the polls in New Hampshire, but also Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey, who is with Harkin in low double digits.

If they can't catch the top two, Harkin and Kerrey could see campaign contributions dry up as they head into the next lap in the race for the Democratic nomination.

Because of that, Harkin is sparring with Kerrey over who's toughest on trade, and whose Senate voting record has protected more American jobs.

But Harkin's favorite target is Bush.

He reminded his Wednesday audience of the storm that thrashed Bush's Maine vacation home.

"I say it was Mother Nature's way of getting back at him for calling himself the environmental president," Harkin said as the audience burst into applause.

Bush's State of the Union speech? "Written in Disneyland," Harkin says. "Pure fantasy."

As 1991 turned into 1992, one of the biggest surprises in New Hampshire was that Harkin appeared poorly organized. He was second into the state after Tsongas, and his populist call for "jobs, jobs, jobs" seemed a perfect fit for a state that has lost 50,000 in the past three years. On top of that, Harkin rounded up many of the state's liberal Democratic activists.

But his campaign has lagged, and some of the reasons are obvious. He was not here when the new year began, and was criticized, even by some supporters, for vacationing at his home in the Bahamas when so many New Hampshire residents were lining up for food stamps and welfare checks.

He's also had to head home to Iowa on occasion to make sure he doesn't get embarrassed in his home state's caucuses a week before New Hampshire votes. Harkin also was slow to detail how he would revive the economy — which is the foremost concern among New Hampshire voters these days.

So as January turns to February, Harkin is trying to broaden and add details to his message. He proposes cutting military spending in half over 10 years, which he says will free up $420 billion for domestic spending and deficit reduction. He promises a massive jobs program.

And, because his traditional base of labor is small in New Hampshire, Harkin is making a pitch to the state's active environmental community.

WIPP: Concert raises funds for foes briefing that the lawsuit, which has been joined by Texas and a coalition of environmentalists, has blocked test shipments to WIPP.

"Maybe in a couple of months we'll come to our sanity," the secretary said.

Watkins said storing the radioactive waste underground at WIPP is safer than above ground in Idaho, where some of it now sits.

WIPP is an Energy Department project to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

A WIPP opponent called Watkins' comments "preposterous."

"The courts have spoken loud and clear on whether public interest groups are right or wrong (in opposing WIPP). We're batting a thousand," said Jim Werner, environmental engineer for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

Meanwhile, a standing-room-only crowd of WIPP foes gathered at Sweeney Center in Santa Fe on Wednesday night to raise money for the Southwest Research and Information Center and its fight to stop the repository from opening.

Crosby, Nash, musician Dan Fogelberg and comedian Steven Wright appeared on stage before a banner that read, "STOP WIPP."

The three-hour event raised about $20,000, organizers said.

state's new public school tax system unconstitutional.

The system was designed to shift hundreds of millions of local property tax dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within 188 taxing regions, made up of one or more counties or CEDs (County Education Districts).

The court ruled that the plan violated the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

"We've got to find a better way to pay the bill to educate our children," said Midland school board trustee Gary Willis. "Your home is not an income producing property. The taxpayers can no longer be expected to foot the bill. There was a day when the state funded 60 percent of the money and the local taxpayers funded 40 percent. Then it shifted to 50-50. Maybe now we will get back to the 60-40 split where we need to be."

Willis, who was recently appointed to the Texas Association of School Boards Special Committee on School Funding, said his appointment "suddenly has become a lot more meaningful."

TASB President Amber Yeary of Laredo Independent School District appointed Willis to the statewide committee in November. The 22-member committee includes school board members from each of the association's 20 regions.

It was organized to "propose a financing system for public education that uses the local property tax for supplemental funding and the broad-based system of state revenue as the primary basis for school funding."

The group will meet again Feb. 8 in Austin.

Willis said he ran for his position on the MISD school board because he wanted to be one of the decision makers who would decide funding for the state's public schools.

"I knew that school boards in Midland and all over the state would be making some real hard decisions about education. Now it's happening," he said.

The state court said the current system will be kept in place to collect property taxes for two years. The justices directed the Legislature to write a new plan by June 1, 1993.

School board trustee Jack Hightower said, "I am happy to know that it (Thursday's ruling) won't close our schools and things will be kept in place. It would really be a shame if any decisions caused students to miss any part of the school year."

Baressi said the court decision not to disrupt tax collections will keep the situation "fairly stable for our students."

School trustee Jackie Hamilton said that she would rather see some permanent solutions. "We have got to have our money to fill our budget or we are going to be in big trouble," she said. "It's getting so that I am scared to vote to spend money on any project or program."

RULING: Top court blocks school finance plan

(From 1A)

latest effort to meet its mandate to equalize school funding. Justices Lloyd Doggett and Oscar Mauzy joined in a blistering dissent. The court has twice before, unanimously, struck down previous school funding laws.

Justices Bob Gammage and John Cornyn wrote separate opinions. They agreed that the regional property tax system was unconstitutional, but they disputed the majority's decision to defer the order's impact for so long.

"The court veers from the straight and narrow path of judicial propriety . . . by, in effect, telling taxpayers that an unconstitutional CED tax must be endured for an additional tax cycle because this is an election year," Cornyn wrote.

Doggett called the decision "an immense wrong" and raised the spectre of a state income tax.

"For the school children, there is delay — perhaps infinite delay — in achieving equal educational opportunity; for the taxpayers, most probably an income tax," Doggett wrote.

Gonzalez said that an income tax is not the only remedy.

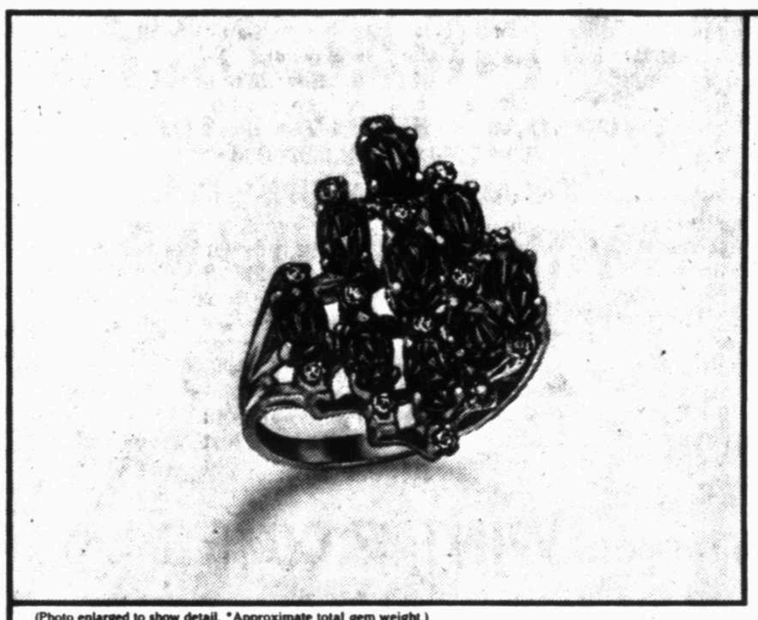

Doggett and Mauzy also charged that the majority "turns a deaf ear both to the commanding voice of the law and to the whispered pleas of the children." They said that in devising the new system, the Legislature and the governor had followed prior court instructions.

The new school funding system is designed to shift hundreds of millions of local property tax dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within 188 new taxing regions, made up of one or several counties.

The court ruled that the plan violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

The decision came in a legal challenge filed by more than 50 property-rich school districts — and just one day before the deadline for paying the school property taxes.

The court's opinion said it "is not to be used as a defense to the payment of any such taxes."

Peacetime nuclear leakages threaten Russian environment

By Steve Raymer
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — On the wall of his new Kremlin office, Alexei Yablokov, Russia's pre-eminent environmentalist, plans to hang a once-top-secret map of the former Soviet Union.

The map contains 126 black dots — one for each non-military nuclear explosion set off during the 1960s, '70s and '80s, decades of communist power, by engineers and their allies in Moscow bureaucracies who were intent on taming a continent to build a superpower.

"The monster of pollution takes many forms," says Yablokov, Russian President Boris Yeltsin's top adviser on environmental policy and public health.

"But the most serious is radioactive contamination, especially from these so-called peaceful bombs."

Yablokov displays a map of Moscow with more than 200 red dots — documented nuclear "hot spots" caused by buried radioactive waste or leaks over the years from secret military and scientific research centers in the Russian capital of 9 million people.

"The information on these maps was absolutely top secret until a few months ago," says Yablokov, a marine biologist and long-time environmental lobbyist who rose to prominence under former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev as head of a legislative committee on environmental protection.

He says it is too early to know exactly how much fallout spilled from the "peaceful" explosions, or their effects on public health.

But he calls nuclear contamination a "national disaster" that is a major cause of declining life expectancy across the former Soviet empire.

Yablokov's anxiety is shared by Russian Republic's new environmental minister, Viktor Danilov-Daniliyan, who says that nuclear waste and nuclear accidents have made several areas in Russia uninhabitable.

"Big chunks of the republic are so poisoned they will not be suitable for human settlement for a very, very long time. We are talking decades," he says.

Danilov-Daniliyan, an economist, confirms that Russians are still being uprooted for resettlement in safe areas as a result of decades of nuclear mishaps and indiscriminate dumping of nuclear waste.

Fallout from the 1986 Chernobyl atomic power plant explosion in Ukraine has poisoned regions around the southern Russian cities of Bryansk, Kaluga and Tula — places that were considered safe until last year, he says.

Authorities have moved an unknown number of farmers from the area around these "hot-spot" cities north of Chernobyl and from neighboring Belarus, says Danilov-Daniliyan.

Medical studies from the contaminated places consistently blame low-level radiation in the food chain for increased rates of thyroid cancer and birth defects in children.

Ukrainian authorities say that by the end of this year they will close the two Chernobyl reactors that are still generating electricity.

The average life expectancy in Russia has dropped to 69.3 years — the lowest in Europe — after peaking in 1986 at 70.1. Western scientists generally support the claims of environmentalists like Yablokov that pollution, especially nuclear contamination, is at least partly to blame.

Underground nuclear bombs were detonated to increase pressure on oil and gas fields in Siberia, to create huge subterranean caverns to store toxic wastes and to help geophysicists conduct seismic tests.

More atomic bombs were detonated above ground to help construct dams and move massive amounts of earth for open-pit coal and diamond mines in the Yakut-Sakha region of Siberia, says Yablokov.

At least 12 blasts have been confirmed there.

Using a simple radiation-monitoring device called a dosimeter, Yablokov found two of five above-ground diamond mines near Mirny "dangerously contaminated."

"It reminds you of the moon," he says, referring to the huge craters created by the atomic blasts.

Yablokov has verified 26 nuclear explosions in the Volga River basin, which winds through a broad region of western Russia, and at lest 80 explosions in the rest of the giant Russian Republic.

"And what have we got to show for all this on the Volga?" he asks. "It is not a river, but a series of lakes and dams."

These dams and reservoirs have drastically reduced water flow on the historic river, along with its ability to cleanse itself.

Russian scientists estimate that a drop of water that used to flow down the Volga in 90 days now takes 18 months.

The result, Yablokov says, has been a buildup of toxic wastes.

About 70 percent of all the river's fish now contain dangerous levels of mercury, which poisons the caviar taken from the river's famous sturgeon, he says.

In another case, documented by a Yablokov protege, biologist Maria Cherkasova of the private Socio-Ecological Union, at least seven nuclear bombs were set off in salt domes near the Caspian Sea to create underground reservoirs for crude oil similar to the naturally created caverns of the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve in Louisiana.

"Now the salt is on the move toward the surface," says Cherkasova, "and so is the nuclear contamination."

World leaders gather for U.N. summit

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Bush and the world's other top leaders gathered Thursday for an unprecedented Security Council summit to coordinate policy on peacekeeping, disarmament and quelling aggression.

On the eve of the high-profile, 15-nation gathering, U.N. diplomats wrapped up days of arduous wrangling over whether to also emphasize human rights, democracy and economic justice and sent a final text to their leaders for approval.

In the end, those points were included, but often in language diluted from earlier drafts.

British Prime Minister John Major will preside over today's summit, the first of its kind in the council's 46-year history. Thirteen heads of state or government will sit with him at the circular table in the council's chamber, along with two foreign ministers.

"The Security Council is more and more the focus of all the work that is being done in collective security against aggression and against threats to international peace and security," said the British ambassador, Sir David Hannay.

Britain is president of the council this month, and Major proposed the summit.

The council's new high profile was underlined last year by its role in the Gulf War. The summit was spurred by changes in the wake of the Cold War's end, including the breakup of the Soviet Union.

Ambassadors of the 15 council nations reached general agreement Thursday on the text of the non-binding communique to be issued by the leaders today and sent it to their respective governments for approval, said Hannay and U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering.

Hannay said he believed the draft communique had "very broad support" but said more consultations could take place. The document was to be adopted by consensus, without a vote.

China tried to minimize references to human rights, "democracy and representative forms of government." India, which has not signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, was reluctant to endorse nuclear disarmament. Neither country wanted a precedent for international interference in these areas, diplomats said.

The proposed text of the statement to be adopted by the council members includes the following:

■ Notes that tumultuous change in recent years, "however welcome, has brought new risks for stability and security."

■ Urges the secretary-general to prepare recommendations by July to increase the U.N.'s capacity for "preventative diplomacy, for peacemaking and for peacekeeping."

■ Endorses current efforts in disarmament and arms control, and calls the spread of arms a threat to international peace and security.

■ Reaffirms the commitment to the use of U.N. collective security measures to deal with "threats to peace and to reverse acts of aggression."

■ Notes the spread of "democracy and responsive forms of government" in many parts of the world, and encourages the completion of the dismantling of South Africa's apartheid system.

■ Expresses concern over "acts of international terrorism," apparently a U.S.-British barb at Libya's alleged sponsoring of terrorist bombings of U.S. and French airliners. Some Third World diplomats objected to this paragraph.

Engineering team deserves praise

Midland is a community in which educational excellence is demanded by the very nature of the businesses that strive to compete here and the heavy concentration of oil and gas companies in this area. It's also a community that can fully appreciate educational achievement. In that regard, the accomplishment of Midland High School's engineering design team recently in winning the state contest is a distinct and noteworthy honor.

Team members Niki Fanning, Glenn Antrim, Bradley and Michael Robertson and Matt Spencer designed and built TALON, a device that has a name describing its use — Transporting Apparatus for Length or Nearness. The device obviously impressed officials at the state championship for the National Engineering Design Challenge competition at Austin, who declared it the state winner over entries from Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas, San Antonio, Tyler and Austin.

Now the team is ready for the national competition in Washington, D.C., on Saturday. That's particularly exciting since this is the MHS team's first year to enter the competition.

Winning the state title should have given team members a burst of confidence. It's worth noting that in claiming that victory, the MHS team even defeated last year's national champions from Houston. So it's certain they have the knowledge and expertise to be competitive in Washington.

The very fact that the MHS students will be involved in the national competition is of itself a testament to the quality of teaching and the involvement of local engineers who volunteered to coach students on the teams at MHS, Lee High School, Odessa High and Permian High. That is the type of business-inspired commitment needed to bring about a meaningful improvement in the quality of education being taught in the public school system.

The MHS team has every right to be proud of its state title. We're proud of them, and we join other Midlanders in wishing them good luck competing for the national championship on Saturday.

Editorial raised serious questions

You recently published an editorial entitled "To print or not points up issues" which I read while visiting Midland. You were recounting the Bradley Smith writings and the issue to print or not to print them. You stated "The dilemma is acute, just as it can be for commercial newspapers when confronted with ads that offend decency, patriotism or commonly accepted history." You went on to add, "but the first lesson here is that it is their dilemma and not a First Amendment issue."

If you believe these statements above to be true, why do you not defend an individual's right to write sexually explicit materials as part of his right under the 1st Amendment? Why are there laws in our country that make it illegal to mail such materials, which I might add are only selectively enforced? Why is it OK to write and mail every form of violent writings and racially purulent writings? Why is it OK to send a man to jail for writing and mailing sexually explicit writings? Is this not an infringement on the First Amendment?

I do not approve of or condone sexually explicit writing nor do I condone writings describing the most inhuman forms of violence. Why is there a law on the books — SS 1461-2 — addressing the mailing of obscene or crime-enticing matter? Is this not an abridgement of free expression?

Furthermore you stated "the public does not need protection from bad ideas. When there is free expression, even the ugliest ideas enrich democracy." If you truly believe this, is not SS 1461-2 an abridgement of the 1st Amendment?

Taxpayer says Painter must show efficiency

As a Midland County taxpayer, I feel it is time for Gary Painter to show us that he is capable of operating and managing the sheriff's department efficiently and professionally.

His continued squabbling with the commissioners court is shameful and a waste of tax dollars. If he can't live within a budget like the rest of us, then we ought to vote him out of office.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 31, the 31st day of 1992. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 31, 1958, the United States entered the Space Age with its first successful launch of a satellite into orbit, Explorer 1.

On this date:

In 1606, Guy Fawkes, convicted for his part in the Gunpowder Plot against the English Parliament and King James I, was executed.

In 1797, composer Franz Schubert was born in Vienna, Austria.

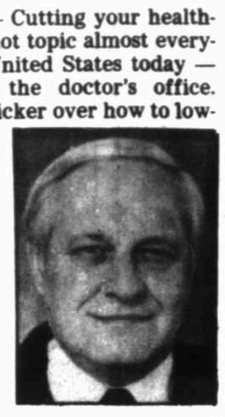

In 1865, General Robert E. Lee was named commander-in-chief of the Confederate armies.

In 1917, 75 years ago, Germany served notice it was beginning a policy of unrestricted submarine warfare.

Doctor-owned labs increase profits

WASHINGTON — Cutting your health-care costs is a hot topic almost everywhere in the United States today — everywhere except in the doctor's office. While national leaders bicker over how to lower the bills, many in the medical field are devising ways to clear a bigger profit from each patient.

Anderson

California doctors recently received a flyer from a medical equipment wholesaler telling them they could "Increase your income — big time!" The wholesaler was pitching a piece of diagnostic equipment, the Holter heart monitor, which the sales brochure told doctors could "put another $15,000 to $50,000 in your pocket every year." While profits on some diagnostic tests have slipped, the brochure promises that the money flowing in from Holter's tests has "never been higher."

The quality of the Holter equipment is not in question. It can help diagnose heart ailments. But the bald profiteering approach betrays that for some, the bottom line in the business of life and death is still money.

"Ads like this help create an inflation rate compounding at over 10 percent per year in health care," said Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif. "The ad cries out for a doctor to overcharge and overuse the Holter monitor device."

Doctor-owned diagnostic equipment is the latest way for doctors to rake in money. Instead of referring their patients to outside labs, many physicians are investing in the labs and equipment themselves so they can profit from their own referrals.

The result has been a deluge of overpriced and unnecessary tests. As we have already reported, elderly people who have bouts of unsteady balance are referred for $1,000 CAT scans. Healthy young athletes are given costly magnetic resonance imaging tests to confirm that their thighs are indeed bruised.

This self-referral bonanza has made its biggest splash in Florida and California. One exasperated Florida radiologist said he has seen enough unnecessary lab visits to make him "sick to be a doctor." He told us, "Medicine and capitalism just don't mix."

Florida doctors don't want to admit they have a problem, despite the fact that about 70 percent of all diagnostic imaging labs in the state are now owned by doctors who refer their patients to those labs. One study revealed that doctors refer their patients for 40 percent more lab work when the doctor owns the lab.

Our associate Jim Lynch has seen a report by the Florida Health Care Cost Containment Board with more damning evidence. The study focuses on one Boca Raton diagnostic imaging lab whose doctor-owners received from $23,000 to $210,000 each in dividends in one year for doing nothing more than referring their patients to the lab.

Stark has held hearings on the self-referral game and is pushing legislation in the House to outlaw such cozy ownership arrangements. He contends that it is not only costing patients money, but is fleecing the taxpayers through higher Medicare bills. Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., is working a similar bill through the Senate.

BILL'S BILLY — If Jimmy Carter thought his brother Billy was a political millstone, he should look at Roger Clinton, younger brother of presidential hopeful Bill Clinton. The head of the Arkansas State Police told us that one of the toughest things he ever had to do was tell Gov. Clinton that his little brother was about to be arrested in 1984 for conspiring to distribute cocaine. The police made sure the charges were bulletproof, and they told us the governor did not try to interfere.

Roger Clinton spent a year in jail before being paroled. Since then, he has been arrested for disorderly conduct at an Arkansas nightclub. Gov. Clinton has publicly admitted that his brother had a drug problem dating back to his teens.

Roger's problems have been the source of some erroneous rumors about Gov. Clinton. One false lead in Little Rock alleges that the State Police secretly taped the governor sitting across the table from a mound of cocaine. But it was the other Clinton. The tape was part of the surveillance evidence against Roger.

We impose higher standards on politicians

A country, half of whose marriages end in divorce, 25 percent of whose births take place out of wedlock and 54 percent of whose high school students claim to have had sex: Such a country twitters, does it, over Gov. Bill Clinton's extramarital affairs, or, as the case may be, non-affairs?

Murchison

Alas, where've I been, watching MTV? I hadn't known we were in the midst of a moral revival. No doubt we'll soon see evidence of it all. On every soft spring breeze, through the flaps of commodious tents, will drift the sound of tinny trumpets playing, "Softly and Tenderly Jesus is Calling, Calling, O Sinner, Come Home . . ." On Wall Street, the stocks of condom makers will crash. Singles bars will disappear, to be replaced by religious reading rooms, to which gentlemen will walk, arm in arm, with their ladies fair. Pimps and madams will return to college for their MBAs.

Or could it be that something else, something very different, is going on? Maybe we're taking out our own gnawing, nagging guilt on the usual suspects, politicians: imposing on them the performance standard we'd never apply to ourselves. How dare a presidential candidate like Clinton act like the rest of us! Who's he think he is anyway, a 20th century American?

This show of claws when a politician is unmasked, rightly or wrongly, maybe it's all we have left in the post-Puritan age; the last vestige of the old morality at which our intellectuals have been hurling shoes and bottles for 70 years.

We'll plant a friendly hand on our neighbor's wife's knee. But that's nothing to do with the Sunday School sanctity we expect of our leaders. It's especially pleasant to watch the media agonize over the ethical implications in the Clinton story — how to play it, and, more to the point, what to make of it. When media power brokers were surveyed in 1981, only 47 percent thought adultery wrong. Today it might not be that many.

The fact is, a country usually gets the kind of government it deserves. What do we think we deserve — Professor Woodrow Wilson, with his pince nez and Presbyterian morals? He'd die the death of a thousand snickers.

More plausible exemplars of political morality are Warren G. Harding and Franklin Roosevelt, a nice bipartisan pair of adulterers. John Kennedy out-Clintoned Clinton every day, several times a day. Nor was Lyndon Johnson any slouch in someone else's bed.

An exasperated voter 40 years ago asked Gov. Adlai Stevenson how he could keep the country together if he couldn't keep his own family together. Stevenson's divorce hurt him with the less liberated electorate of that time. Today we rarely notice ruptures of the marital bond. Ronald Reagan was divorced by Jane Wyman. Sen. Bob Dole, a 1988 Republican presidential contender, married the famous Libby after kicking out the wife who had nursed him back from his World War II wounds. Clinton's Democratic rival, Sen. Bob Kerrey, following his own divorce, had a fling with actress Debra Winger. One of the best things George Bush has going for him is the correctness, not to say the profound sincerity, of his relationship with Barbara.

What does all this say about our leaders? Chiefly that they are men of the people. Not entirely, of course. Politicians are richer, racier, randier, and infinitely more egotistical, than the common herd. But, unlike British aristocrats, they come from our midst. They are supposed to resemble us, in order to represent us. When they don't, it's only partly their fault. The rest of the blame accrues to those who maintain them in office and promote their fortunes. If "blame" is the word. Sometimes our leaders represent us splendidly, if to our deep mortification.

Yeltsin better than who might replace him

It seems strange to some Americans to be sending aid to the former Soviet Union. I've heard some say, "Let'em collapse. It's their own fault."

Well, in the first place, the present bad situation in Russia and the other republics is less the fault of the Russian people than the present bad situation in our own country is our fault. We at least could have voted our knotheads out of office. We didn't. The Russian people in theory could have overthrown their communist government a long time ago, but they didn't, and if we had been in their shoes, we probably wouldn't have either.

Reese

God knows you run into Americans who are afraid of George Bush or the IRS or the politically correct police on campuses, and they're all sweet, fluffy angels compared to Joe Stalin and the old KGB.

So lighten up on the folks over there and let's get down to business. The reason we should help the new republics, most especially Russia, is because it is cheaper to help Boris Yeltsin succeed in making his country a free democracy than it will be to defend ourselves against his successor should he fail.

Before we feel smug about the plight of the former Soviet Union, we'd better put the horse apples the politicians are peddling on the flower bed and look at our own situation honestly. The former Soviet Union beat us into bankruptcy by half a step.

Who among you believes the U.S. is in great shape? Look at that $4 trillion debt, that out-of-control deficit, the daily stories of plant closings, layoffs, bankruptcies and scandals. George Washington and those guys would cry to see how much damage we have done to the country they began.

Western countries, mostly Europe, have provided the former Soviet Union with about $78 billion, and most of that has been in credits and loan guarantees and emergency food and medical supplies.

It sounds like a lot, but things are really bad over there. The old Soviet Union bought itself military superpower status at the price of destroying its economy, and we almost did the same. The truth is neither of us can afford to resume an arms race.

So, remember that the only intact organization still left in the former Soviet Union is the 3.7 million-man army with all its missiles and submarines and tanks. The coup last year didn't fail because unarmed civilians stood up; it failed because the army chose not to fire on those civilians. One would be reckless to suppose that this army, which has no democratic tradition, will continue to stand aside if the country just disintegrates. It is our interest not to let that happen if we can help it.

Unfortunately it is campaign time here so everything, including the gravest issues, has to be handled as campaign events. Thus, President Bush, instead of seriously addressing the issue of aid, staged a photo opportunity by calling a meeting of Western nations allegedly to coordinate aid. First off, he excluded the Russians and the other republics. Secondly, he offended the Europeans who have provided 75 percent of all the aid and who have been trying to get the U.S. to do more. He offended them because by calling the meeting in Washington it was plain to them, Bush intended to create the impression that the U.S. was the leader of the effort, instead of the follower.

Help the Russians? Listen, I'd swap Bush and all the Democratic presidential candidates for Boris Yeltsin in two seconds. Yeltsin is a real man, a genuine person.

If any of ours are real people, they're doing a good job of hiding it.

Uproar over admitting ailing Palestinian terrorist forces French officials to resign

PARIS (AP) — Four top officials were forced to resign Thursday for their roles in allowing George Habash, an acknowledged Palestinian terrorist leader, to be brought into France for medical treatment.

■ More world news/8B

The senior officials in the foreign and interior ministries and the Elysee Palace left amid sharp criticism of the government's decision at home and abroad.

Habash, 65-year-old leader of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and mastermind of a campaign of hijackings that gained the Palestinian cause notoriety in the 1970s, was hospitalized in Paris on Wednesday after suffering a stroke in Tunis.

His entry was attacked by rightist parties that are on the offensive against the vulnerable Socialist government. Socialists were whipped in four by-elections Tuesday that boded ill for nationwide regional elections in March.

The conservative Rally for the Republic said it was "deeply shocked."

"We are very surprised that someone who is a hijacker of planes was not treated as a simple patient but as a head of state," said Jean-Yves Le Galou of the far-right National Front. "We see it as a threat to democracy."

In Israel, Foreign Minister David Levy said, "The fact that France is giving such a welcome to this terrorist is against all the laws that govern the behavior of European countries."

Habash's group is the second-largest faction in the Palestine Liberation Organization. Terrorist attacks by Habash guerrillas did much to form the image of the PLO as a terrorist organization. Israel refuses to negotiate with the PLO or its representatives in the Middle East peace talks as a result.

The Popular Front was formed in 1967. In one of its first actions, it hijacked an El Al flighting from Rome to Tel Aviv.

In September 1970, Habash's group simultaneously hijacked three airliners, had the jets flown to Jordan and blew them up in the desert after the passengers were evacuated.

In May 1972, Japanese Red Army terrorists working with Habash slaughtered 27 people in a machine-gun attack at Ben Gurion airport in Israel.

In June 1976, the group hijacked an Air France airliner to Entebbe, Uganda, where four civilians were killed during a rescue operation by Israeli paratroopers.

The decision to allow Habash into France apparently was made without consulting President Francois Mitterrand or Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, who were visiting Oman at the time.

Dumas and Premier Edith Cresson ordered inquiries Thursday.

Ireland's prime minister resigns

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Charles Haughey, a four-term leader and battle-scarred veteran of Irish politics, said Thursday he will resign to end the strife stirred up by an old scandal.

The small Progressive Democratic party, reacting to fresh charges that Haughey had lied about his role in wiretapping journalists' telephones in 1982, had threatened to bring down the government if he did not resign.

"I have decided that to end the present political uncertainty the time has come for me to hand over to a new leader, who will have the opportunity to further advance the best interests of the country," Haughey said in a statement.

Lawmakers from Fianna Fail, Haughey's party, will meet next week to choose a new leader. The leader would be confirmed as prime minister on Feb. 11, according to a timetable announced by Sen. Dan Kiely.

Haughey will submit his resignation to President Mary Robinson on Feb. 10, Kiely said.

Known as "the great survivor," Haughey inspired both devotion from his supporters and bitter enmity from his opponents.

"Like him or loathe him — and he always seemed to provoke strong feelings — it was impossible to ignore him," said Proinsias de Rossa, leader of the small leftist Workers' Party.

Elected to the Dail, or the lower house of Parliament, in 1957, Haughey surmounted numerous scandals and controversies to serve four terms as Taoiseach, or prime minister.

In 1970, he was dismissed from the Cabinet and tried on a criminal charge of conspiring to smuggle arms to Northern Ireland. He was acquitted, and worked his way back into the Cabinet in 1977.

In 1979, Haughey ousted Jack Lynch as prime minister.

Haughey's second government, which lasted less than a year in 1982, was marked by controversy, including the arrest of a murder suspect at the home of the attorney general, and the wiretapping of the journalists' telephones.

U.N. peace plan for Croatia nears collapse, diplomats say

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (NYT) — A United Nations proposal to send peacekeeping forces to war-ravaged Croatia edged to the brink of collapse on Thursday night after Croatian leaders demanded fundamental changes in the plan, Western diplomats said.

A complete breakdown would certainly jeopardize the flimsy four-week cease-fire that was brokered by United Nations negotiators.

"The Croatian objections are a new obstacle coming on," said one Western diplomat.

Another described the Croatian objections, delivered to United Nations officials during talks this week, a result of "post-recognition euphoria," which he said emboldened officials in Zagreb to demand revisions after their government gained diplomatic recognition from Germany and then from the rest of the European Community.

"Tudjman is all cock-a-hoop about recognition," said the first diplomat, referring to Croatia's president, Franjo Tudjman.

Specifically, Croatia's leaders have amended their original endorsement of the plan to demand a say in the appointment of local officials and police in areas of Croatia where Serbs have established control. Under the peacekeeping plan, these regions are designated United Nations-protected areas.

"The Croats are obviously demanding explicit recognition from the United Nations that the disputed territory is Croatian and will be Croatian and that Croatia's constitution and laws will be valid there," a Western diplomat said. "This is obviously something that the Serbs will never go along with."

"More work needs to be done," said the United Nations envoy, Marrack Goulding, before flying back to New York on Thursday morning to brief Secretary General Boutros Ghali on his four days of talks with Croatian, Serb, and Yugoslav army officials.

As many as 10,000 people have died in the first seven months of the Serb-Croat war.

Croatia's and Serbia's presidents and the former Yugoslav defense minister, Gen. Veljko Kadijevic, agreed a month ago to a United Nations plan for the deployment of 10,000 peacekeeping troops in three areas. The areas roughly correspond to Croatian regions that have predominantly Serb populations.

The plan calls for the complete withdrawal of pro-Serbian Yugoslav national army units and the disarming of local Serb militias.

"The longer it takes the United Nations force to come in, the less likely the cease-fire is to hold," another diplomat said. "It's just a question of when the cease-fire starts breaking down."

Helped by a cold spell, the cease-fire has generally held since Jan. 3 despite almost daily shooting incidents along the front lines.

Doctor shoots hospitalized friend, then kills himself

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A doctor shot his housemate to death in a Mayo Medical Center hospital room early Thursday, then killed himself with a shot to the head, authorities said.

The hospitalized man, who had been admitted to St. Marys Hospital on Jan. 4 with a fever, was to be discharged soon, said Police Capt. Ron Thompson.

Thompson identified the hospitalized man as Ronald McCoy, a farmer who would have been 51 on Friday, and the doctor as Ralph Laskey, a 56-year-old osteopath and psychiatrist at the Mental Health Institute in Cherokee, Iowa.

They lived together in Cherokee, a northwestern Iowa community of about 6,000 residents. Neither was married, according to Olmsted County Coroner Paul Belau.

Police announced early in their investigation that they believed McCoy had been diagnosed as having the virus that causes AIDS. But later they said they were unsure of that. Belau was to complete an autopsy Friday.

Thompson said police searched Laskey's Rochester hotel room Thursday but did not find a suicide note or any other clues.

The shootings occurred shortly before dawn in McCoy's fifth-floor room at St. Marys, which is part of the Mayo Medical Center, a complex that includes the famous Mayo Clinic.

Thompson said a patient in a neighboring room called a nurse after hearing a commotion. The nurse who entered the room at 6:25 a.m. found McCoy lying on his side and still alive and another person lying on the floor.

McCoy did not say anything to the nurse before he died.

McCoy had been shot twice in the lower back with a 9mm pistol, while Laskey was shot once in the head, Thompson said.

Mayo Clinic spokesman Chris Gade said general visiting hours are from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., but patients are allowed to invite relatives and close friends to visit during off-hours.

Thompson and Belau said few security precautions are taken at the hospital. The guards are unarmed and there are no metal detectors.

"This is an open hospital. There's lots of people coming and going" Thompson said.

Belau said McCoy was shot at a busy time.

Police announced early in their investigation that they believed McCoy had been diagnosed as having the virus that causes AIDS. But later they said they were unsure of that.

■ More nation news/8C

"At that time of the morning, there's thousands of people walking about. That's when the shifts change," Belau said. "There's no reason to tell anyone not to go into the hospital, especially if he knows where he's going."

Tom Deiker, superintendent at the institute where Laskey worked, said no one knew Laskey was going to Rochester.

"Dr. Laskey is one of the finest human beings I've ever worked with in my 30 years in public health. He devoted his entire life to mental health. His career was dominated by altruism. . . . He was admired and respected by all employees," Deiker said.

Darman treks to Capitol for bargaining rite

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush's budget director, Richard G. Darman, went to Capitol Hill Thursday to begin the yearly ritual of negotiating with Congress over the president's tax and spending proposals, amid indications that both sides might be willing to strike some compromises in this election year.

Several Democrats welcomed Bush's proposal to impose some type of overall limit on the growth of federal benefit programs, including Medicare and Medicaid.

Darman indicated that the administration would consider some changes in the budget agreement of 1990, which severely restricts the ability of Congress to shift money from one category of spending to another.

Nonetheless, Darman said the administration would firmly resist congressional efforts to use savings from the military budget to pay for domestic programs, as many Democrats want to do.

Some Democrats say the money cut from the Pentagon budget should be used for social programs and to help workers, cities and counties adversely affected by the closing of military bases and by cutbacks in production of warplanes, missiles, submarines and other weapons.

The budget director said Bush was prepared, under certain conditions, to use military savings to pay for a cut in taxes for families with children.

Darman's testimony Thursday before the House Budget Committee tended to confirm the impression of many lawmakers that the administration would be drawn into renegotiating the 1990 agreement. Once such negotiations begin, neither Bush nor Darman could control their scope or outcome, lawmakers say.

The agreement, which set a statutory framework for national decisions on taxes and spending, was supposed to last five years. But many members of Congress and economists have concluded that it needs to be revised as a result of the reduced military threat to the United States since the collapse of communism.

At the hearing Thursday, Darman made a spirited defense of the president's budget request for the fiscal year 1993, which begins Oct. 1, and seemed to enjoy sparring with members of Congress.

Court orders files of infected dentist

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (NYT) — In a decision that could influence the national debate over the risks of the public's exposure to AIDS from health-care workers, a New York Supreme Court justice on Thursday ordered the estate of a dentist who died of AIDS to turn over records of his practice to the State Health Department.

In granting the request for the records of Dr. Philip Feldman of Coram, Justice Peter F. Cohalan ruled that the public's right to the information should prevail.

He rejected arguments by Feldman's estate that the medical records were protected under doctor-client confidentiality.

The case is the first time the state health department has gone to court for patient records.

Feldman's death in June, from pneumonia and HIV infection, had raised fears that he might have infected some of his patients.

A Health Department report in August said Feldman, 45 when hr died, had beeen addicted to nitrous oxide, or laughing gas, for several years, and appeared to ignore basic rules of hygiene in treating with his patients.

The state health department plans to advise 3,000 patients that Feldman treated to be tested for AIDS. To date, 648 patients have been tested, and two have tested positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

A plan to encourage affirmative action in city government hiring will take effect this year.

A City Council member said the plan is one city policy that doesn't belong "left on a shelf somewhere."

The council Tuesday agreed to implement the plan, which pledges "non-discrimination in all matters related to employment" and "affirms its commitment to provide equal employment opportunities to all individuals regardless of race, creed, color, sex, national origin, religion beliefs, age and/or physical or mental disability."

It will make department heads responsible for evaluating the equality of hiring practices and eliminating physical or institutional barriers. They should set goals toward reaching or maintaining a fair representation of all groups, according to the plan.

"We recognized we needed to establish a process to insure we monitored . . . whether our population mirrored the population of Midland," said David Hunter, administrative services director. He said the plan is not aimed at specific numbers.

But Michael DeVaughn, district 2 council member, said he'll be keeping an eye on its effectiveness.

"If you have a plan and you don't utilize it, it's just useless," said DeVaughn, the only black member of the City Council. "Apparently, right now there are no African-American employees at City Hall. They can't keep saying there are no qualified minorities for the job."

A recent study found the city's work force basically mirrors the 1990 census of Midland, but inequities in minority and gender hiring exist in some areas, including administrative positions and in the protective service.

"I've visited with (Police) Chief (Richard) Czech and he has ideas about how to correct the problem within the police department," DeVaughn said.

Under the plan, department heads will be encouraged to implement training programs or ways to attract minorities to job openings, Hunter said. They will prepare reports each year during budget development.

"We'll keep up with statistics, track our applicants and identify regularly if there's a group we're not reaching," Hunter said. Although city policies contain statements against discriminatory practices, they have never identified specific steps toward equal hiring, Hunter said.

In some cases, gender balance will be emphasized, and in others, ethnicity, age or disability will be the issue. Each department is likely to have individual concerns,

Local YMCA implements new fitness program for children

■ In addition to the new program, local facility will observe National YMCA Healthy Kids Day on March 14.

Being a couch potato isn't limited to adults.

"Lots of kids spend time in front of the TV instead of outside running and playing," said Susan McHughes, child care director for the Central YMCA.

And with the advent of home video game systems, more and more youngsters are bypassing vital physical exercise.

But the unhealthy lifestyle of today's youth isn't just the lack of activity, Ms. McHughes said.

Youngsters are inundated in a world of fast food and junk food. They are surrounded by the peer pressure to use cigarettes, drugs and alcohol. And, with the prevalence of both parents working, family time may be limited.

As a result, more attention nationwide is being placed on youngsters and fitness, Ms. McHughes said.

In Midland that includes the YMCA taking part in the first National YMCA Healthy Kids Day on March 14 and the recent implementation of a fitness program for youths 5 to 12 years old.

"Basically it's the idea of redirecting your thinking to a positive and healthy lifestyle," Ms. McHughes said.

The youth fitness program, which began about three weeks ago, runs concurrent with the YMCA's after-school day-care program.

"It's a program that focuses on teaching youngsters how to lead a healthy lifestyle, not just physically but . . . from all aspects of health: social, emotional, spiritual and physical," Ms. McHughes said.

Each lesson begins with a lecture on a particular fitness topic followed by an exercise stretching routine then a physical activity.

Hobbs

Hobbs will receive the award during TCTA's annual convention Feb. 22 in Fort Worth.

"This award is one of the highest honors our association can bestow on a non-member," said Jeri Stone, TCTA executive director.

Hobbs is a veteran educator with 29 years experience, 10 of which have been in Midland schools. Since 1983, he has served as an elementary principal in Midland. He had taught in Michigan schools prior to moving here in 1982.

Hobbs was among the first Midland principals to be selected for the prestigious Texas Schools Improvement Initiative, an educational leadership training program. He also is a life member of the Texas PTA and an officer in the local Phi Delta Kappa and Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association.

Hobbs was nominated for the honor by teacher Dolores Ward, and was selected by the local TCTA unit.

In the nomination material, it was noted, "Long before the state mandated site-based management, Hobbs utilized this technique by soliciting teacher input in decision-making concerning the scheduling of classes, conducting grade-level meetings, etc. He treats his faculty as professionals and he respects their teaching performance. His teachers describe him as being a born leader, a dedicated professional administrator, and a compassionate human being."

Hobbs is the sixth MISD employee to be honored by TCTA. Former honorees are Maridell Fryer, 1990 Administrator of the Year; Toby Ward, 1989 Administrator of the Year; Jack Stone, 1987 Administrator of the Year; Sherrilyn Blase, 1988 Faculty Representative of the Year; and Don McCarty, 1988 Retired Teacher of the Year.

Today marks deadline to pay ad valorem taxes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Today is another tax-day deadline, only this one comes some 2½ months ahead of the infamous April 15 of Internal Revenue Service notoriety.

Each year in Texas, Jan. 31 is the deadline for property-owners to pay their ad valorem taxes to support local governments, schools and hospitals without drawing a penalty.

On Thursday, Midland taxpayers were lining up to pay their city, county, college, hospital, and Midland and Greenwood public school taxes.

"We are being bombarded now by people paying (taxes) before the penalty goes into effect on Feb. 1," said Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield.

Mrs. Shuffield is collecting about $8.3 million in taxes for Midland County and $3.123 million for the Greenwood Independent School District and its share in taxes for the Andrews-Midland County Education District (CED).

Ron Stegall, chief appraiser for the Midland Central Appraisal District, is collecting more than $70 million in taxes for the other taxing entities in Midland County: the city of Midland, Midland College, the Midland County Hospital District, and the Midland Independent School District and the CED.

"It has just been really busy all week," Stegall said. "Tomorrow (today) is going to be a banner day. We are going to be busy."

Tax notices were mailed out in early October.

Through December, Mrs. Shuffield had collected 54.7 percent of county taxes and 42.68 percent of

Tilton to sue attorney general's office, lawyer says

N.Y. Times News Service

Television evangelist Robert Tilton will sue the Texas attorney general's office for damages and won't surrender the ministry's financial records to the state, an attorney for Tilton said Thursday.

Attorney J.C. Joyce, who said 1,000 people have indicated in letters they no longer will support Tilton's church, said Texas Attorney General Dan Morales harmed the ministry by releasing a letter to the news media saying Tilton was suspected of violating the state's laws on deceptive trade practices.

"He is trying to destroy this church," Joyce said. "He will not succeed."

Joyce said he will file a federal civil suit in Austin against the attorney general on Feb. 6 seeking a temporary restraining order to halt efforts to obtain church records. Also, the suit will ask for unspecified damages for harming the church.

"They are trying to deny us our basic right of religious freedom," he said. "They want to try this in the media and harm this church. The investigation has had a chilling and very, very adverse effect on this church."

Tilton, who speaks in tongues and promises wealth and healing to those who send money to his ministry, has been under investigation by the attorney general, the FBI and the U.S. Postal Service since an ABC television "PrimeTime Live" report questioned his fund-raising practices.

Ruling pleases rich school districts

AUSTIN (AP) — Property wealthy school districts celebrated, poor ones hoped for more and taxpayers were told not to worry after the Texas Supreme Court on Thursday again shot down the Legislature's attempt to reform public school funding.

The court said the newest school tax system — designed by lawmakers to lessen the disparity in funding between students in rich and poor districts — was unconstitutional.

But the court kept the system in place to collect property taxes for two years. The justices directed the Legislature to write a new plan by June 1, 1993.

"They held correctly that it's (the new tax plan) unconstitutional. We're pleased with that result," said Tom Davies, an attorney who represented about 50 wealthy school districts that protested the Legislature's method of equalizing funding.

"We anticipated all along that the Legislature would have another stab at it, and that's the way it should be," Davies said.

Al Kauffman, lead attorney for poor school districts, said he was disappointed in the ruling. But he said the court's action didn't alter the original state Supreme Court findings that funding disparities between rich and poor school districts were unconstitutional.

The system that was declared unconstitutional Thursdav — establishing 188 County Education Districts to collect and disperse tax dollars — was one way to remove that disparity, but not the only way, he said.

Kauffman, who is with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said the court's order means it will "probably take longer to get equity" because lawmakers face unpopular choices, such as a tax increase, or adopting a personal income tax.

Craig Foster, head of a group of property poor school districts called the Equity Center, praised the ruling. He said he always contended that the CEDs were an unconstitutional statewide property tax.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Drug possession

Staff Report

ODESSA — Two Odessa residents were charged with possession of cocaine Thursday morning after an officer discovered ½ ounce of the drug and several syringes in the back seat of their vehicle, Odessa police said. The drug is valued at $450.

Thirty-two-year-old Dina K. Baneges and Charles R. Brown, 34, were booked into custody under a $7,500 bond set by Municipal Court judge J.E. Weatherly.

Officer Randy Phillips began following the vehicle driven by Baneges at 2:05 a.m. Baneges began swerving within the lane, the police report stated. Phillips pulled the vehicle over at a 7-Eleven store at the corner of 8th and Harless streets, police said.

Mall robbery

Three juveniles were arrested Thursday in connection with the Tuesday afternoon robbery of an 80-year-old woman in the Midland Park Mall parking lot, police officials said.

Detective Dan Walkenshaw observed two 15-year-old males and one 16-year-old male in the parking lot of Midland Christian School at about 2 p.m. Thursday. He arrested one of the 15-year-olds at the school at 1901 Culver St. and charged him with aggravated robbery and unlawfully carrying a weapon. A .22 caliber handgun was found inside the vehicle. police said.

The other two juveniles were arrested a short time later at the police station. They were both charged with aggravated robbery, police said.

One of the juveniles was accused of grabbing the elderly woman's purse and dragging her a short distance in the parking lot near Dillard's. The woman let go and the youth escaped with two other juveniles in a late-model Ford Ranger, police said. The woman sustained bruises and abrasions in the Tuesday incident, police said.

All three suspects were taken to Culver Youth Home and are expected to go before judge Al Walvoord for a detention hearing today, police said.

SUE: Tilton says he won't surrender records

(From 1B)

Sawyer, said many prayer requests that Tilton says he prays over were found in the trash bin of a Tulsa bank where Tilton's mail is opened and donations are collected.

Joyce said the attorney general does not have a right to investigate a church. He said to allow an investigation violates his First Amendment rights of free practice of religion.

But Gray McBride, a spokesman for the attorney general, said that churches, charitable organizations or foundations are not exempt from consumer fraud laws in Texas.

Tilton says he has done no wrong, that he prays over all requests and that the discarded prayer requests were planted by enemies.

McBride said the attorney general's office released the letter related to Tilton's investigation because several news organizations had asked for it under the state's open records law.

The evangelist has until Feb. 10 to comply with the request to produce the records, McBride said.

Tilton is pastor of the 8,000-member, Word of Faith Family Church and World Outreach Center in Farmer's Branch near Dallas. Also, his "Success-N-Life" television broadcasts are broadcast throughout the nation. He is one of the nation's most watched TV evangelists, ranking No. 17 on Arbitron's rating system of viewers.

Morales' office informed Tilton Jan. 10 that he was under investigation for deceptive trade practices. The office ordered Tilton to produce videotapes of fund-raising appeals, family income records and other documents.

"They will not get any documents from this church," Joyce said. "They've already proved they are trying to harm us."

TAX: Penalty to be imposed for late payment

(From 1B)

Greenwood ISD taxes.

But through December 1990, county tax collections were pegged at 77.78 percent.

Mrs. Shuffield attributes the decrease in early payments to the Midland County Commissioners Court's decision last year not to continue awarding traditional discounts: 3 percent in October, 2 percent in November and 1 percent in December.

By canceling discounts to encourage early payments, the county will gain additional revenue. In 1990, discounts totaled about $140,000.

Other Texas counties, which also granted discounts, stopped the practice "because they feel like it's too much revenue that they are losing," Mrs. Shuffield said earlier.

Through December, Stegall said his office had taken in 52 percent of the more than $70 million in anticipated taxes.

"We are right on target" with previous year's collections through the end of the calendar year, he said.

Collections should total about 85 percent through today, Stegall said, adding that most of the delinquent taxes will be collected by mid-1992.

Stegall said that a "lot of people" had delayed paying their taxes — at least until deadline time — to see if the Texas Supreme Court would uphold the new public-school tax law which created the CEDs.

The court on Thursday, in a 7-to-2 vote, ruled the law to be unconstitutional. The statute, which created the so-called "Robin Hood" tax, was designed to commingle taxes from a cluster of school districts, such as the Midland, Greenwood and Andrews public-school districts, and redistribute the funds.

Though CEDs must now go by the wayside, the court determined that taxpayers still must pay CED taxes until the Texas Legislature corrects the tax system by mid-1993.

After today, unpaid property taxes become delinquent and are subject to ever-increasing penalties, which start at 7 percent.

YMCA: Facility implements children's fitness program

(From 1B)

"They get to play games. It's not like work. They don't realize they are learning something, because they have so much fun doing it," Ms. McHughes said.

For example, the first lesson included a running game called "Race to the Moon."

Just running may not be fun, but if youngsters are told it's a race to the moon via planets, their outlook changes, Ms. McHughes said.

Each game is followed by a cool-down activity and another talk, that deals with social, emotional and spiritual aspects.

One lesson was followed by a talk about people whoare important in an individual's life, relationships with family and friends, and social interaction.

A weekend activity is also assigned. In this case, youngsters were asked to take a walk with a friend or family member — incorporating the different parts of the lesson.

The youth fitness program, made up of four 10-week units, is designed so a youngster can participate in any or all individual lessons.

National YMCA Healthy Kids Day will focus on the same concept as the fitness program: to heighten the awareness of fitness among youngsters.

On that day, open to all children, the local YMCA has planned a one-mile fun/run walk followed by a carnival that will feature fitness-oriented games and booths about making healthy snacks.

The week before, March 9-13, the YMCA will have a youth fitness camp.

For information on any of the youth fitness activities, call the YMCA at 682-2551.

and thus, individualized plans of action.

In addition, department heads will get training in hiring practices that include the elements of affirmative action, according to the plan.

Victor Pena, assistant director of administrative services, said the affirmative action program will coordinate with the city's response to the Americans With Disabilities Act, which is also aimed at the elimination of barriers in the workplace.

Leaders have high hopes the affirmative action plan will achieve some results.

"It's difficult to believe there are no qualified minorities for administrative and upper-administrative positions in a town this size, with its minority population," DeVaughn said. "Hopefully this plan will be utilized."

Bush already has raised $11 million, Mosbacher says

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite the nation's sagging economy, President Bush already has raised $11 million for his re-election drive and is having little trouble attracting cash, campaign chairman Robert Mosbacher said Thursday.

"That's way ahead of where Ronald Reagan was in '84 at this time," Mosbacher said during a Houston briefing. "I've been amazed and delighted. We just spent two days in California and we're doing remarkably well."

Mosbacher, who recently left his post as secretary of commerce to take over the Bush re-election effort, said the money has been coming in since the campaign got under way with a Halloween fundraising dinner in Houston.

The hefty cash flow also comes at a time when the president's standing in polls has been sinking.

"I think we're going to see change in the political momentum for him," Mosbacher said. "I think he's reached the nadir, the low point of his political career. I think it's going to be starting up.

"Obviously, (re-election) is not going to be as easy as if the economy was singing along with a 2 to 3 percent rise, but I think we will be seeing that before the election."

Mosbacher is on a cross-country tour touting the president's State of the Union speech delivered Tuesday. He was headed to Florida following his Houston appearances.

"We're trying to urge people to urge their congressmen, congresswomen, to get behind it, to pass the president's proposals," he said. "If they want to discuss them or think they should be amended or do something different, we understand that. But let's get it moving. This is no time to be sitting on everything, as they unfortunately have been for the last several years."

He also predicted that if Congress failed to meet Bush's March 20 deadline to move on economic proposals, the president would "go to the American people, go over (Congress') heads and really push them and draw the line in the sand.

"I would think from a Democratic congressman's standpoint, that he or she would be in real jeopardy if they didn't go along with this or some alternative that had the equal ability to get the economy rolling."

Mosbacher said that for the most part he was ignoring the storm surrounding Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton.

"I've been trying to follow it as unclosely as possible, to coin a word," he said. "Frankly, I don't think at this point it has any bearing on what we're trying to do. The Democrats have got there own fish to fry and we've got ours. I don't care about getting involved in their internal strife and struggles."

Asked if he has dismissed the likelihood that New York Gov. Mario Cuomo could emerge as the Democratic nominee, he replied, "Almost. He might like to get anointed."

Jurors say they misunderstood law

AUSTIN (AP) — Jurors who convicted an Austin man in the fatal beating of his 2-year-old stepson said they misunderstood the law when delivering a verdict that resulted in a 10-year prison sentence.

The decision sparked an outcry from women's advocates who said that Gerald Christopher Zuliani could end up serving less time than the boy's mother, Robbi Boutwell, who earlier was sentenced to five years for failing to protect her child.

Zuliani was convicted Tuesday in the Jan. 2, 1990 beating death of Christopher Wohlers.

But the jury convicted him of causing the boy's injuries by recklessness, rather than intentionally.

Jurors said Wednesday they had no idea that their vote would reduce Zuliani's maximum possible punishment to 10 years. They said they would not have made that decision had they known.

Zuliani could have received a maximum of life or 99 years in prison had the jury convicted him of intentionally causing the injuries.

Gail Rice, community education director of the Center for Battered Women, said, "Our basic response was one of anguish. How is it possible? That verdict made it seem it's easier to paint the woman as the monster than it is to hold him accountable for murder."

Although the law prevented prosecutors from discussing the penalties associated with the lesser offense, they could have accentuated the differences between intentional action and reckless action, the jurors said.

The forewoman of the jury, who did not want her name used because "we're afraid," said the jury was surprised and dismayed when it learned of the 10-year maximum.

She said the jury, after reading the definitions of reckless and intentional, picked reckless as the closest definition to what they believed Zuliani did.

"We had no idea this man could get off like this. I don't think there's a person on the jury who hasn't been crying," the forewoman said.

District Attorney Ronnie Earle said, "This is another example of the law keeping jurors in the dark and that the law needs to be changed."

Zuliani will have to serve at least one-fourth of his sentence before being considered for parole. But he had already served more than 16 months in jail before he was released on bond last spring, so he will become eligible for parole in a little more than a year.

Ms. Boutwell has served 14 months of her five-year prison sentence and has twice been denied parole. She is scheduled to be considered for parole again in 10 months. After she is released from prison she has to serve another year in the Travis County Jail before she starts serving a term of probation, according to the terms of her plea bargain agreement.

Zuliani's first trial, in October 1990, ended in a mistrial because the jury was accidentally given a transcript of Zuliani's confession, which had not been introduced as evidence during the trial.

Feud continues in Sakowitz store case

HOUSTON (AP) — A wealthy Houston family feuding over the loss of their fashionable clothing store fortune will head back to court for another round in their long battle.

Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory granted a new trial for Doug Wyatt, who had sued his uncle, Robert Sakowitz, owner of the now-defunct Sakowitz Inc. chain, attorney Andy Vickery said Thursday.

Wyatt's mother is Houston socialite Lynn Wyatt, the wife of oil millionaire Oscar Wyatt and Sakowitz's only sister.

After an eight-day trial in October, a jury rejected Wyatt's allegations that Sakowitz stole money from the chain or that he mismanaged the estate of his late father, Bernard Sakowitz.

Vickery filed in November a motion asking for a new trial. Gregory granted the motion Tuesday but has not yet set a new trial date, Vickery said.

"It's exactly what we wanted, we're very happy," he said.

Vickery said he did not know the judge's reason for granting the motion and Gregory was in court Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

David Berg, Sakowitz's attorney, said in a statement released Thursday that he was shocked by the judge's decision, especially in light of the jury's 12-0 decision last fall. He also vowed to continuing fighting.

"We will dedicate the resources of my firm to represent Robert and his mother until this case is finally resolved, no matter how long it takes," Berg said.

Robert Sakowitz took over the family's upscale clothing-store chain after his father died in 1981. The chain never recovered from the energy bust in the 1980s, finally failing in 1990.

Oscar Wyatt, over his wife's objections, sued Robert Sakowitz in 1986, claiming he ran the family business into the ground. That suit was settled out of court.

Lynn Wyatt gave her stake in Sakowitz Inc. to her four sons in 1987. Doug Wyatt, the eldest son, had sought about $7.5 million he claimed his uncle took from the business. Robert Sakowitz said he only took out money that he had put in the business earlier.

While Lynn Wyatt has sided with her 34-year-old son and testified in support of his lawsuit, Robert Sakowitz has been supported by their mother, Ann Sakowitz.

After the verdict, Ann Sakowitz publicly condemned her daughter, saying she had "sold her soul and her family for greed and power."

Lynn Wyatt later said she was sorry her mother felt that way and hoped the trial would be the last chapter in the family feud.

Door swings shut on jail inspectors

FORT WORTH (AP) — An inspection tour of the Tarrant County Justice Center showed two officials and an architect what life is like on the other side of jail cell bars.

During a tour of the new cell designed to hold inmates called to appear in court, a metal door with a reinforced window swung shut, effectively trapping the two inspectors and the architect.

"We were in there just doing our inspection when it closed behind us," said county inspector Lynn Sale, who was locked in the cell with inspectors Jeryl Stevenson and Mark Stubblefield of Wells-Doak Engineering.

Under normal circumstances, a bailiff would simply let them out, but in this case the county didn't have a key.

The key was at Joe Jones Construction in Weatherford, meaning the three had to stay in the cell for about 90 minutes while someone brought the key to Fort Worth.

The cell was "a nice place to take a nap," Sale said.

There were some anxious moments even after the key arrived because the lock proved to be stubborn. Finally, it was unlocked and the men were free again.

The men didn't seem to mind their time behind bars, saying it was just one of those things.

Pair arrested in bank robberies

HOUSTON (AP) — Two former car repossessors who apparently took turns robbing a string of banks were arrested and jailed for holding up 15 banks in the last 18 months.

Police said the men planned the robberies together, but took turns committing the crimes.

"In each case, they would wear sunglasses, a dark baseball-type hat and a beard," Harris County Sheriff's Sgt. John Gessner said Wednesday. "If you look at the surveillance photos, it's hard to tell the difference between them."

Sandy Franklin McLean, 46, was arrested Tuesday in Baton Rouge, La., and charged with aggravated robbery. His bond was set at $50,000.

The second suspect, David Earl Reid, 27, worked with McLean in the car repossession business. He was arrested Monday and charged with aggravated robbery. His bond was set at $20,000.

Gessner said the two are believed to have robbed 15 banks, netting some $250,000.

FAMILY MATTERS

Changes in behavior may be linked to anger

By Jim May, Ph.D.

May

DEAR FAMILY: I have been reading your column forever and I really get a lot out of what you have to say. Maybe you can help me too. I have a 7-year-old daughter who has started to be a behavior problem at school for the first time in her life. Her teacher suggested that we both talk with the school counselor. I met with the counselor after she had talked to my daughter, and she said she thought my daughter was angry at me for my going back to work. She said that my daughter said I was never at home anymore. First I was shocked and didn't know what to say. Now I feel very guilty about all this.

I went back to work because I wanted to go back. With things the way they are in Midland right now, my husband thought it was a good idea too. But I really went back because I enjoy working and when I had an opportunity to get my old job back, I jumped at it. I was (and am until this happened) very excited to go back. I had been home with my daughter most of her life. I did help out at different times on a temporary basis at the office and that never seemed to be a problem with her.

Can you give me some ideas as to what I might do to make things better with my daughter? I don't want to quit my job and stay home, but I will if that's what I need to do for her sake. I just need some ideas on something to do. — GUILTY MOTHER

DEAR GUILTY: First, let's address the "guilt" issue. Guilt can be defined as the way a person feels after knowing he or she has made a mistake. Review your decision to go back to work. If you believe that decision was mistake, take action to address the mistake. You don't sound as if you feel that you made a mistake in going back to work.

Review your daughter's reaction to your decision to go back to work. Have you made a mistake in "never being at home" anymore? Look at your schedule. Is there something that you could do in order to spend more time with her?

You may be able to identify potential steps you can take to spend more time with your daughter. Schedule a meeting with your daughter to specifically address her feelings associated with your going back to work. Allow her to express her feelings without interruption or rebuttal.

After she has expressed how she feels, ask her for suggestions as to actions that can be taken to address the problem. Offer your suggestions about spending more time with her. Attempt to reach a compromise on steps that can be taken to see if things can be made better for her. We are not trying to reach the "ultimate" solution on the first attempt, but we are trying to find a workable solution. If this solution does not work, modify the plan until you find one that does work for both of you.

Perhaps another way to view this situation is that your daughter has grown close to you over your years together and she misses you. She may be grieving over that loss and expressing her grief as anger. The fact that she wants to be with you is a real compliment. Now gently reset the parent-child boundary so it reflects your working outside the home.

Robert Fulghum writes in his book, "It Was On Fire When I Lay Down On It," that "You will never really know what kind of a parent you were or if you did it right or wrong. Never. And you will worry about this and them as long as you live. But when your children have children and you watch them do what they do, you will have part of an answer." I have found that bit of wisdom to be somehow very reassuring.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: I know there are circumstances where divorce is the answer, but I believe it should only be a last resort. I believe that change is possible in most marriages. It is a matter of choice. If you and your husband are willing to go through the "pain of change," your lives will be different. Hard work is necessary to make a difference, but I believe it is possible and certainly desirable.

You temporarily accept more pain weighed against the real possibility of happiness. Much can be gained. In my experience, couples who do not work hard on their marriage before giving up and divorcing seem bound to repeat the same patterns in future relationships.

You say you still love your husband but are not in love with him. One of my supervisors used to say that it amazed him that people would divorce and then spend the rest of their lives looking for what they had given up. Talk to your minister or a marriage counselor. Work on your marriage, it's worth the effort!

DEAR ABBY

Flight plans may be grounded by sister's weight

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently bought a day-care center and am now planning the grand opening.

Van Buren

I have a wonderful 28-year-old sister living in a distant state and I would love to fly her here for the opening. She's terrific with children and would make a perfect clown dressed up in costume and makeup. Sis weighs around 285 pounds; she's hysterically funny and has a glow about her that children love.

The problem is that I am not sure she will be able to fit into a regular coach airline seat, and I would hate to have to buy two seats for her. Maybe one of your readers has had this problem and has a solution. — ARIZONA SISTER

DEAR SISTER: My office contacted six major airlines: American, Continental, Delta, Northwest, TWA and United. Only one — Delta — has a weight guideline: If the passenger weighs more than 200 pounds, purchasing a second seat is recommended at a 50 percent discount of the full coach fare. Northwest offers no discounts on second seats. Most of the other airlines discount 50 percent of full fare for second seats.

With airline regulations changing from day to day, you would be wise to call the airline from which you will be buying the ticket and ask them the dimensions of its coach seats to determine whether a second seat is needed.

DEAR ABBY: I had the same trouble as "Sitter in Waiting" when I used to baby-sit as a teenager. I hated to ask for my money, and I sometimes waited for weeks before I was paid. (A few people even got away with never paying me.)

My mom came up with a great solution. When they would call me to baby-sit, I'd tell them they would have to leave a $20 deposit. Then when they came home, I'd give them the change, if any was due.

Also, some people would avoid paying right away by saying, "Oh, I'm sorry, all I have is a $20 bill. Do you have change?" Back in my baby-sitting days, very few, if any teen-agers had change for a "twenty." After that happened a couple of times, my mother made sure I always had change. (Thanks, Mom!)

Abby, tell "Sitter in Waiting" to be strong, and don't back down! — Y. EVANS, VERNON, CONN.

DEAR Y. EVANS: I did. And thanks for the solution to the "Sorry, all I have is a $20 bill" excuse. However, the rates for baby-sitting have gone up considerably since you sat. Today, they'd have to leave a $50 deposit.

DEAR ABBY: Can you please tell me what "first base," "second base," "third base" and "a home run" mean? I am not talking about baseball — I mean in a relationship.

I need to know, because I feel left out when my girlfriends talk about how far they went with a guy. — K.F., MERIDEN, CONN.

DEAR K.F.: Unless the game has changed since I was a girl, first base was kissing; second base, petting above the waist; third base, petting below the waist; and a home run meant going all the way.

DEAR ABBY: My 20-year-old son is still wetting his bed every night. He has seen a urologist and has tried all the usual medications, but nothing has worked. (He is a very sound sleeper.)

I do not know where to go from here. Has anyone else gone through this who could give me some ideas on what to try next? Please, Abby, my son really needs some answers. — DESPERATE MOM

DEAR MOM: You don't say how long it's been since your son saw a urologist, but he should seek a second opinion from another specialist.

If there is nothing physically wrong, and your son's only problem is reprogramming his sleeping habits, contact your nearest Sears Roebuck store about ordering its Wee Alert Buzzer. The premise is simple: An alarm will sound the moment moisture touches a screen placed under the bottom sheet, instantly waking a sound sleeper. After a very short time, the sleeper forms the habit of waking up naturally at the right hour of the night — or the "wee" hours of the morning. Good luck.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Young reporters write about plants, animals, space trash

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Yikes! A man in a spacesuit is confronted by a large trash can with teeth. It was the humorous illustration for a cover story on space junk that recently appeared in an edition of the Chihuahuan Desert Times.

A staff of 9- to 15-year-olds has put together stories on space, plants and animals for editions of the Times, published by the Las Cruces Museum of Natural History. The first issue, published last August, dealt with endangered plants and animals. The December 1991 edition focused on space research. The museum plans another edition this spring, says museum director Cristina Trowbridge, who picked the space topic.

"I wanted a topic that was challenging for the kids," Trowbridge says. "There is so much space technology in and around Las Cruces, and there are some people — myself included — that aren't as informed about it. We wanted to talk about space technology in a positive way."

Stories in the December Times included women in space, NASA's satellite projects, International Space Year (1992) and Biosphere II.

Matt Torell, 13, an eighth-grade student, wrote a cover story on space junk. He also provided a humorous illustration: a man in a spacesuit confronted by a large trash can with teeth.

Torell spoke to NASA laboratory worker Larry Linley for his story. The first paragraph says trash from more than 30 years of space missions "can be very dangerous to space shuttles, probes and satellites."

Jeanette Perez's writing debut was an article on the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars."

"I really liked working on the paper," the 15-year-old high school sophomore says. "It was pretty exciting. I think the experience has moved me even further toward my career goal to be a journalist."

Trowbridge says the aim of the paper is to teach children about writing. "Our goal was to keep this a low-key affair," she says, "but we've had a lot of demand and recognition for the first issues, so we want to continue."

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Imagination more vivid than reality

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Why do we take minor or imaginary threats and mentally turn them into life or death, do or die situations?

Edwards

ANSWER: Someone once said "the greatest cause of our ulcers is our mountain climbing over molehills; which we do! A salesman calling on an important prospect acts as if the call were a matter of life or death. A debutante facing her first ball acts as if she's going on trial for her life. Many people going to be interviewed about a job act as if they're scared to death. Most of these everyday, so called crisis situations, are not life or death matters at all, but opportunities to either advance or stay where you are. It's all a matter of attitude. One salesman, who was always scared and panicky, doubled his income when he changed his attitude to "I have everything to gain and nothing to lose." The key to any crisis situation is you. It's you, learning to make crisis work for you by making crisis a creative opportunity.

QUESTION: Why are we worriers?

ANSWER: We are worriers because we practice worrying until we become adept at it. Habitually, we picture and focus on negative images in our minds as we anticipate the future. This worry creates tension, and tension then provides a worrying atmosphere.

So, how do you stop worrying?

By substituting positive images in our minds; pleasant, wholesome mental pictures for those unpleasant worries and concerns over what might occur. The key is to remember that feeling follows imagery. We react emotionally to the pictures in our minds. When we find ourselves worrying, reacting to negative thoughts about "what might be" based on prior experiences and failures, think instead on desirable images, positive pictures and memories. If we do this, negative feelings take care of themselves. They simply evaporate and our worry is then controlled, rather than controlling us.

QUESTION: When are we old?

ANSWER: When we decide to curtail our mental and social activities; when we become "set" in our ways, bored and give up our great "expectations."

I have no doubt that you could take a healthy man of 30 and within 5 years make an "old" man out of him, if you could some how convince him that he was "old," that all physical activity was dangerous and mental activity was futile; if you could convince him to give up all his dreams for the future, all interests in new ideas and regard himself as "washed up," worthless, unimportant and nonproductive. Do this and you'll create an old man, regardless of age.

Within all of us, there are basic needs such as a need for love, security, creative expression, recognition, new experiences and self esteem. To these, I would add another basic need, our need to experience more life; our need to look forward to tomorrow and to the future with gladness and anticipation.

QUESTION: How can I put my life in a better perspective?

ANSWER: By realizing that any given moment is not forever; that given time and hope, new effort, knowledge and skills, many things will evolve and change. Positive living is a matter of perspective and is most fully realized when: the embarrassment of yesterday is the humor of today; what you thought would kill you yesterday, turns out to be a whole new possibility today; the mistake of yesterday turns out to be learning, perhaps with some pain, for today; the puzzle of yesterday turns out to be a solution today.

Remember, you have much more influence on making things change than you realize, once you've decided to be your own decision maker and to take charge of your own life.

Recording Library brings 'books' to visually impaired

By Henry Page, M.D.

Shining brightly among the thousand points of light in West Texas lies an organization that enables a visually impaired person to achieve his or her natural desire for knowledge. It all began with Thomas Edison in 1877 when he conceived the idea of a phonograph which could talk to persons with impaired vision. The idea germinated into an Adult Blind Law amended to include recordings or "talking books" in 1934 by the Library of Congress and extended to include the physically and perceptually handicapped. This expanded locally in 1963 into the Recording Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped Inc. with its professional staff and core of dedicated volunteers.

Page

Believe it or not, the Recording Library is free of cost to the individual, thanks to various foundations, companies, churches, service organizations and individual donors — great and small. It functions within a national and state network thereby rendering easy access to books nationwide. The subjects cover the entire spectrum of book lore, science, history, travel, romance and humor, in varying degrees of depth.

Midland comprises the only recording library outlet in West Texas and operates according to the highest standards imaginable. Specialized recording machines make specialized tapes producing exquisite quality sound spoken by closely monitored selected narrators — all of whom are volunteers.

The projected beneficiaries of the project emcompass 1.6 million persons in the U.S.A. with diminished vision, plus countless numbers suffering from handicaps that prevent them from handling a book or comprehending the written word. Visual impairment does not mean total blindness — just enough to interfere with reading.

For those interested in utilizing this service or volunteering, the address is RLBPH Inc., 202 North C Street, Midland 79701-6143, telephone (915) 682-2731. Bearing this above described effort in mind — the next dark night, just gaze at the bright stars and sense what a wonderful world it is in which we live!

Active 90-year-old sees no reason for him to retire

By Joe Bigham

PORTERVILLE, Calif. (AP) — At 90, Larry Ash only works part time as an agricultural chemist. After all, he needs his afternoons free for the gym.

He plays racquetball at least five times a week, usually at midafternoon when the local courts are quietest.

"It's amazing, the fact that he never misses, that he shows up every day to play," said Joanne Wood, assistant manager at Sierra Fitness Center. "He's just basically getting in there and keeping the joints moving rather than sitting and letting them stagnate. He has a real good outlook on life."

Ash's competition on the courts is considerably younger, since there isn't anybody at the gym near his age. One regular opponent is a 65-year-old man, another a woman in her 50s.

"We do it for fun, not to show we're better than anyone else, so we don't even keep score," Ash said.

One player in his 30s refused to compete against Ash, fearing possible embarrassment if beaten or pressed by a man old enough to be his grandfather. "I thought that was quite a compliment," said Ash.

Ash was an avid bicyclist and swimmer and played some racquetball when he was younger but began slowing down with arthritis and other aches and pains in his 60s. He says he overcame the arthritis, so he took up racquetball again at 83, when the first courts opened in this community, 125 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

"I'm an unusually well-preserved person," he said. "I've lived a pretty careful life as far as physical health is concerned, so I don't see any point in retiring because I would be less active, probably both physically and mentally."

He's worked 23 years for a small company that produces plant growth stimulants from imported yucca trees.

Ash doesn't limit his activities to working and racquetball. When he has time, he joins a senior citizen's dance exercise class. Sometimes, he teaches the group Latin steps.

Applications being accepted for one-week legistative process study

Staff Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Representative Larry Combest (R-Texas) is encouraging seniors aged 60 and older in the 19th Congressional District who are interested in a one-week study of the legislative process to send in applications for participation in this event, which will be May 10-16 in Washington. Behind-the scenes seminars, briefings, workshops and on-site study visits on Capitol Hill will be included in the week-long study. Seniors chosen also will discuss issues with Combest and learn how a congressional office operates.

Because the program is funded without taxpayer money, each participant pays for his or her transportation to and from Washington. The Close Up Foundation, which serves as host and tour guide, charge $831 fee to cover hotel, meals, an evening at the theater, escorted visits to historic sites and all transportation while in Washington. Program fee also includes a supplemental life, health and accident insurance policy designed for coverage during the trip. Participants may raise funds for the fee through sponsorships or donations.

Appliations must be received no later than March 6 by mailing to Combest, 1527 Longworth Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. For more information or to apply, contact Lisa Elledge of Combest's staff at (202) 225-4005.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Thanks to a recent career move, you will soon be in the money! Travel could help you and your partner develop closer rapport in March. Family needs will demand more of your attention by June. Widen your social circle early next fall. Your cheerful and resourceful nature wins you new friends in high places. Parenthood should prove especially rewarding during the winter holidays. Focus on your children's strengths, not their shortcomings.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball legend Jackie Robinson, actresses Carol Channing and Suzanne Pleshette, author Norman Mailer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Research is the key to greater financial success. Keep good records for tax purposes. Look for new ways to expand your business. The love temperature rises tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A tranquil day should lie ahead. Seize an opportunity to go shopping or tend to personal matters. Spend time only with those people with whom you feel a deep and lasting rapport.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your personal magnetism has someone eating out of your hand! Go ahead and express your feelings for that special person. Put any job worries on hold while you socialize tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Everything should go according to plan today without the need for modifications or additional spending. Let higher-ups know that they can expect quick results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Surround yourself with friends and call for help if you run up against a job that is simply too much for one person to handle. Laying your cards on the table brings applause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Every day provides an opportunity for new discoveries. Intellectual pursuits may be more interesting than business ventures now. Use your will power to resolve a recurring problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Taking chances can be exciting but you must be prepared to pay the cost. If something is too strenuous or expensive for you, say so. A potential partner will appreciate your honesty.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A lofty achievement is within your grasp. Patience is the key to continued progress. Plan a vacation. High-tech elements may be what is needed to get a plan approved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Getting your office or workplace running smoothly should be a top priority now. Say the word and an old friend will lend a helping hand. You learn how to handle a touchy relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Quit trying to be everything to everybody! Such a plan is doomed from the start. Turn your back on the past and start to assure your future. Financial backing is available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A case of mistaken identity could cause trouble. Introduce yourself to a new customer or executive. Play a positive, wholesome role in the lives of those you love. Offer moral support.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone takes your jokes seriously. Explain yourself before things get out of hand. A co-worker helps you out without your even knowing it. A new romance puts you back in the social swim.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are calm, introspective and good at solving problems. Deep thinkers, these Aquarians take the time to carefully analyze a situation before expressing an opinion. During an emergency, they can be counted on to keep their cool even when their peers panic. Their quiet confidence wins them friends from all walks of life.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

It's human nature to develop tricks when you have the chance. However, it's not always the correct thing to do, as this hand from a major Indian team championship demonstrates.

East-West were using a 12-14 point range for their one-no-trump opening bids. Since North rated to have some values for the free bid of two spades, South's jump to three no trump was only a slight stretch.

West led the ten of hearts, which ran to declarer's jack. To see whether there was a second entry to the dummy, declarer cashed two rounds of diamonds. When the suit split 3-2, but the jack didn't drop, declarer elected to run the suit, discarding two spades from dummy. West parted with a heart, one spade and a club, and East sluffed two spades.

When declarer next led the king of spades, East defended perfectly by winning the ace of spades and shifting to a low club, attacking the only entry to the table. Declarer put in the ten of clubs, but ducked the king, then played low again when West returned a club to East's jack.

Had East carelessly continued with a third club, declarer would have jettisoned the blocking queen of spades and come home with five diamond tricks, two spades and one in each of the remaining suits. But East cleverly cashed the ace of hearts and then exited with a spade, and declarer eventually had to concede a heart to West for the setting trick.

Vince Gill, Garth Brooks gain award nominations

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vince Gill was chosen a finalist Thursday for seven TNN-Music City News country awards. Million-selling singer Garth Brooks was voted a finalist for five.

Gill

Gill and Brooks were nominated for entertainer of the year along with Alan Jackson, Ricky Van Shelton and George Strait.

Finalists for female vocalist of the year were Patty Loveless, Reba McEntire, Lorrie Morgan, Tanya Tucker and newcomer Trisha Yearwood.

Gill also was nominated for male artist of the year, best video and single of the year for "Look at Us," album of the year for "Pocket Full of Gold," vocal collaboration with Loveless and No. 1 instrumentalist.

Brooks, who has sold more than 15 million records in less than three years, was also a finalist for best male artist, No. 1 album for "Ropin' the Wind," top single for "Shameless" and best video for "The Thunder Rolls."

Readers of The Music City News, a monthly country music magazine, chose the finalists. Winners will be chosen by the publication's readers and by people voting through telephone numbers announced on cable TV's The Nashville Network. They will be announced June 8.

PHILADELPHIA — Riccardo Muti, who is leaving the Philadelphia Orchestra after 12 years as music director, got some digs in about the city as he prepared for his farewell.

Muti

At a dinner Wednesday night, Muti said he loves Philadelphia but is critical of it "like my family and myself."

One thing he criticized was the city's failure to build a new concert hall with video recording capabilities. Another was its fascination with surface aspects of his personality.

"Instead of real things, you talk about my lack of smile, the cold fish, the hair — my shampoos!" Muti said.

Muti will return to his native Italy to spend full time as music director of La Scala in Milan, Italy's leading opera house. He had divided his time between Milan and Philadelphia.

"I love Philadelphia as a lover," he said with a smile. "I gave it the best years of my life — 38 to 50. I'm going back to Europe in ruin."

SAN DIEGO — Michael Reagan, son of former President Ronald Reagan, will be dropped from the midday radio show he has played host to for the past two years.

Station KSDO-AM plans to replace the younger Reagan on Monday with ultra-conservative Rush Limbaugh's syndicated talk show, said general manager Mike Shields.

KSDO's ratings dropped in the most recent survey, but Shields said Wednesday the change was not a reflection on Reagan's ratings, which were "pretty good."

Reagan said he wasn't surprised by the cancellation. He said he would like to stay in radio and already is developing a syndicated show.

BERRYVILLE, Va. — Former National Security Council aide Oliver L. North wants continued permission to carry a concealed weapon because of death threats from Middle Eastern terrorists.

In papers filed in Clarke County Circuit Court, North said terrorist Abu Nidal targeted him for assassination in April 1986, after North planned the capture of four terrorists accused of hijacking the ship Achille Lauro the previous year.

He said he has had permission to carry concealed weapons in Virginia since October 1987. A judge is scheduled to rule on his permit extension Feb. 11.

North was a central figure in the Iran-contra affair, but all charges against him have been dismissed. He now is president of Guardian Technologies, a bulletproof-vest manufacturer in suburban Washington.

AUSTIN — A Texas state official is seizing on his appearance in Garry Trudeau's "Doonesbury" cartoon strip to have a little fun of his own.

In a strip scheduled to appear in Sunday's newspapers, Trudeau pokes fun at President Bush's claim of residency in Texas — where there is no state income tax. Bush calls Houston home, although he lives in a $550-a-night hotel suite the few nights a year he spends there.

A character wearing cowboy garb urges readers to become Texans "Just like the Prez" by sending a cut-out coupon to State Comptroller John Sharp and requesting a Texas certificate of residency.

Sharp said Wednesday he has already received several coupons in the mail, probably from newspaper employees who saw advance copies of the comic strip.

He said his tax-collecting office doesn't dispense residency certificates — but he plans to answer the requests with a certificate of his own that says "we agree that they shouldn't have to pay income taxes in their state, and that if they move here, they won't."

U.S. intelligence reports show China continues to sell missile technology to Syria, Pakistan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — American intelligence reports indicate that China is continuing to sell missile technology to Syria and Pakistan despite statements by Chinese leaders that they are willing to curb missile exports, according to senior administration officials.

Beijing has recently delivered to Syria about 30 tons of chemicals needed to make a solid-fuel missile and plans to deliver an additional 60 tons in March or April, said the officials, who added that the amount was enough to make a "significant" number of intermediate-range missiles. It has also delivered to Pakistan guidance units that could be used to control the flight of M-11 ballistic missiles, they added.

The issue is important because the United States is poised to lift sanctions on the sale of American satellite parts and high-speed computers that were imposed last spring after the United States learned that China had secretly delivered launchers for M-11 missiles to Pakistan. During the visit of Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Beijing in November, Chinese officials said they would abide by the provisions of a 1987 international agreement restricting the export of missiles and missile technology, but only if the Administration lifted the sanctions.

In addition, the administration has made the issue of non-proliferation a linchpin of its post-cold-war foreign policy, and is especially eager to halt the transfer of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and ballistic missiles to the developing world.

President Bush, who favors removal of the sanctions, will raise the issue of China's proliferation practices when he meets at the United Nations today with China's prime minister, Li Peng. Leading lawmakers and human rights organizations have sharply criticized the meeting, the first between the leaders since Chinese troops crushed the democracy movement in China in June 1989.

The fact that such a meeting is taking place reflects Bush's firm belief that the best way to moderate China's behavior is through dialogue, a strategy that has been criticized even inside the adminstration.

Administration officials have played down the significance of today's meeting, describing it as a short encounter and as a "courtesy" to the Chinese, who requested it. When asked at a briefing on Friday whether an announcement to lift sanctions was imminent, a State Department spokesman, Joe Snyder, said that once the two governments completed the agreement reached during Baker's meeting in November, "the administration plans to take the steps necessary to lift the June 1991 sanctions."

There are deep divisions in the administration over the wisdom of lifting the sanctions. Many intelligence officials and some senior Pentagon officials oppose any easing of restrictions, while the White House is clearly in favor of such a move.

The State Department notified Congress in a letter in mid-December that it intends to lift the sanctions. But resistance by Chinese leaders to an American demand that they put their oral promise to Baker in writing has contributed to a delay, administration officials said.

Some non-proliferation experts in the administration are convinced that the recent sales to Syria and Pakistan would constitute clear violations of the agreement, known as the Missile Technology Control Regime, which was devised by the United States and other powers to limit the supply of ballistic missiles to the developing world.

But other officials take a broader interpretation of the accord, saying it is nearly impossible to determine whether the transfer of certain technology or components that might have dual uses is a violation.

U.S. guarantees won't be used in territories, Shamir promises

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday that U.S. loan guarantees would be applied exclusively to help absorb Jewish immigrants and not for building settlements in the occupied territories.

His statement was aimed at appeasing the Bush administration as negotiations begin on Israel's request for $10 billion in U.S. loan guarantees to help house and employ Jewish immigrants from the former Soviet Union.

Israel's ambassador to the United States, Zalman Shoval, came home Thursday to discuss the issue with Israeli leaders following meetings with Secretary of State James A. Baker III on the guarantees last Friday.

Shamir declined to answer reporters' questions on whether the U.S. aid would free up Israel's own funds for the settlements, which Washington has repeatedly termed an impediment to Middle East peace efforts.

Shamir told about 300 supporters at an Israel Bonds dinner he was hopeful further talks with U.S. leaders would lead to approval of the guarantees.

"There is no connection between such loan guarantees and our settlements," he said. "The funds we shall obtain through the loan will be devoted only, and entirely, to the purpose of absorbing the olim (immigrants) and not for building settlements."

Asked by reporters if he thought that would satisfy President Bush and Baker, Shamir replied: "In my opinion, it should satisfy them. We will talk to them and hear if it does."

He termed as "partial and inaccurate" reports from Washington that the United States seeks a freeze on further construction of Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip as a condition for the guarantees.

Israel captured the territories from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Mideast war and moved 115,000 Jews to settlements there.

Shamir's government launched a huge housing drive to increase Jewish presence in the territories, home to about 1.7 million Palestinians.

Palestinians have waged an uprising for more than four years to try to end Israeli occupation. They fear the settlements will undercut their goal of creating an independent homeland in the territories.

The two questions of loan guarantees and settlements became intertwined. In September, Bush asked a 120-day delay in congressional consideration of the guarantees so the issue would not interfere with peace talks. A subcommittee is expected to take up the issue next month.

About 340,000 Jews have immigrated from the former Soviet Union since spring 1989. Israel predicts that up to 1 million more will arrive within five years.

Immigration to Israel drops

JERUSALEM (NYT) — As Israel presses the United States for housing loan guarantees to cope with a projected huge influx of immigrants from the former Soviet Union, officials here said on Thursday that the immigrant flow this month had sunk to its lowest in almost two years and could dwindle even further.

Jewish Agency officials attributed the reduced flow of immigrants to the acute difficulties facing Soviet Jews who have already arrived, cannot find jobs or decent homes and write back to friends and relatives in the former Soviet Union.

"Sadly, we have to admit the facts," said Uri Gordon, chairman of the quasi-governmental agency's immigration department. "We are on the threshold of losing a great opportunity for immigration because of the dire unemployment situation and because of housing problems."

The Jewish Agency, formed before Israel's founding in 1948, takes initial responsibility for immigrants, but their long-term fortunes as they are absorbed into Israeli society are the responsibility of government ministries.

According to the agency's provisional figures, 5,800 immigrants from the former Soviet Union have arrived so far this month, with 600 more expected before the start of February, a lower figure than those recorded during the Persian Gulf war, when Iraqi Scud missiles fell on Tel Aviv and other places. The last time the figure fell below 7,000 was in February 1990.

North Korea signs accord

TOKYO (NYT) — After years of promises and false starts, North Korea Thursday signed a nuclear safeguards accord calling for international inspection of its nuclear plants but left it doubtful whether inspectors would gain access to the appropriate installations any time soon.

The long-awaited signing, which took place in the offices in Vienna of the International Atomic Energy Agency, was welcomed in South Korea and elsewhere. But diplomats and nuclear experts cautioned that there were many problems standing in the way of inspections.

The drive for inspections has accelerated amid growing indications that North Korea is close to possessing a nuclear bomb. By next summer, North Korea is expected to be able to produce weapons-grade nuclear material, which means it could produce bombs a year or two after that.

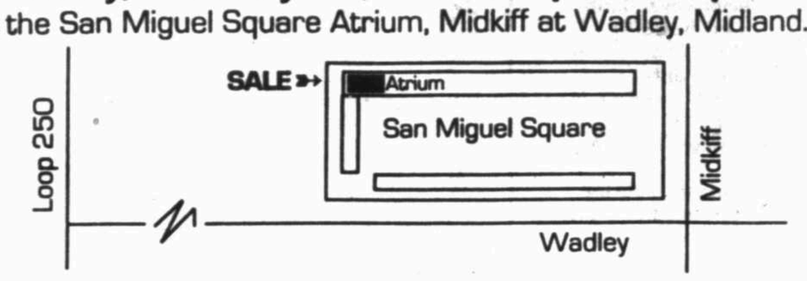

"We will fully and loyally fulfill this agreement," said Hong Gun-pyo, the North Korean deputy minister for the atomic energy industry.

In addition, Chang Mun-son, a director of the North Korean Foreign Affairs Ministry, said that "we need time to have this ratified" in the national legislature and that the process could take as long as six months.

Playoff fever grips Chap

■ Both girls and boys basketball teams have playoff implications riding on tonight's games between Midland High and Midland Lee.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Aside from the traditional aspects of the Midland High-Midland Lee cross-town rivalry, tonight's matchups in boys and girls basketball will bring another quality to the Chaparral Center — playoff fever.

Both Lee teams are solidly in the hunt for the 1992 postseason while MHS' squads still have an outside shot at a bi-district berth. The girls game will begin at 6:15 p.m., and the boys tipoff at 8 p.m.

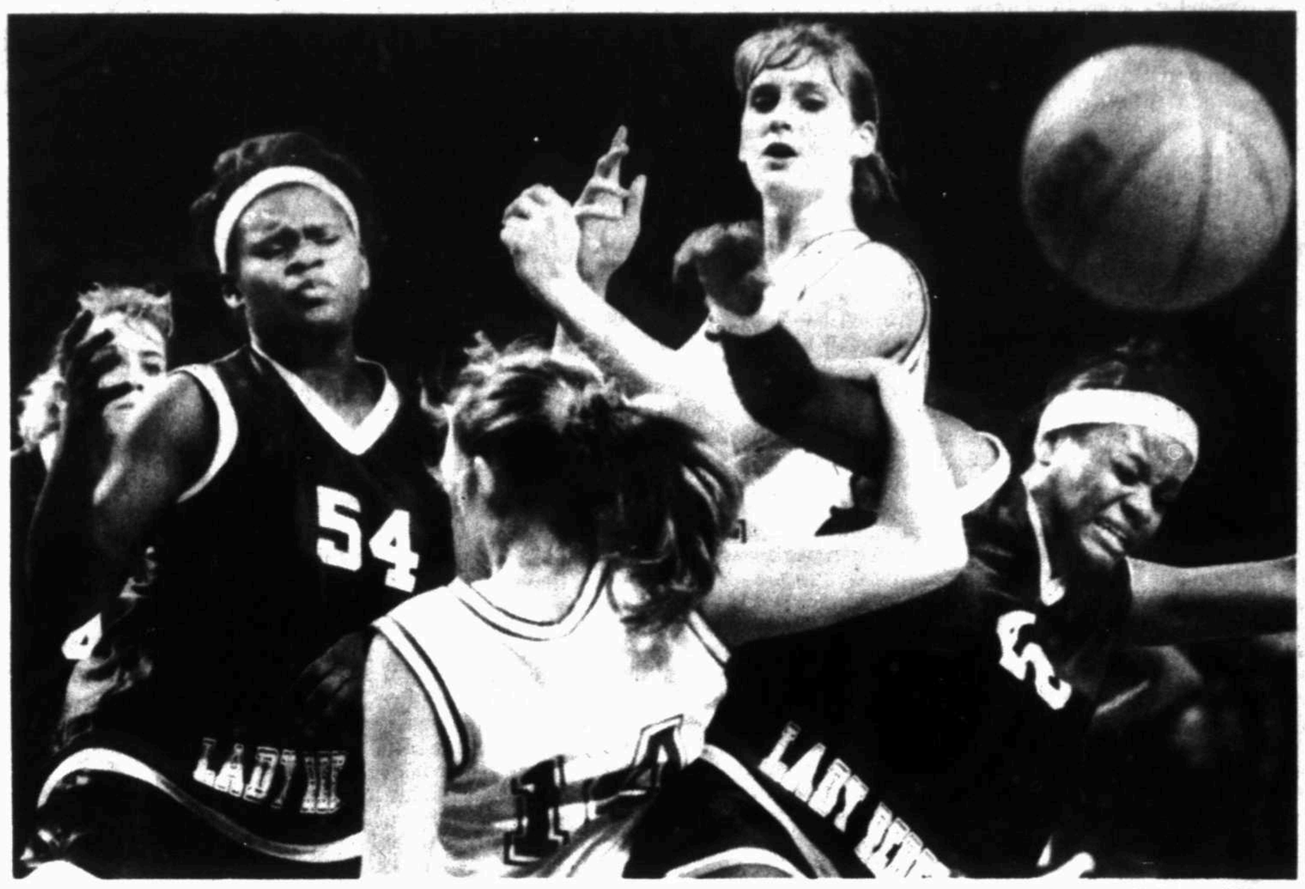

For MHS girls coach Jim Raughton, the implications of this game are simple.

"It's do or die, now or never. The girls understand that if we don't win we can take it to the house," said Raughton, whose Lady Bulldogs are 18-7 overall, but 1½ games behind second-place Lee with a 4-3 District 4-5A record.

Abilene High still leads the district with a 7-1 record (20-5 overall), and the Lady Rebels are just one game behind the Eagles at 6-2 and 11-10.

The game is a rematch of a Jan. 8 affair, which Lee won 40-35. In that contest, neither team shot particularly well

Mike Timlin of the Toronto Blue Jays, right, talks with Kevin Rychel, who is in the Pittsburgh Pirates minor league system, during the MHS Baseball Bash Thursday night. Both are former MHS pitchers.

Timlin still at home

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

When Mike Timlin put in an appearance at the Midland High Baseball Bash Thursday night in the MHS cafeteria, most people could tell he's not a person to put on airs.

The first indication was the sports jacket he was attired in, a nice enough garment, but one that had seen better days, as the tattered lining dangling from the bottom indicated.

The Toronto Blue Jay relief pitcher was nonchalant as he quickly disposed of the jacket, even if his mother Sharon was none too pleased by the turn of events.

Timlin was on his own turf, and therefore, could afford the luxury of a fashion faux pas. He could take the needling from his friends.

And as he and fellow MHS alum Kevin Rychel — a pitcher in the Pittsburgh Pirate farm system — mixed with the crowd of current Bulldogs and their parents and coaches, he took the time to reflect on his rookie season in the major leagues, one that saw him earn an 11-6 record with three saves and a 3.16 ERA.

Though his jacket was in need of a tailor, Timlin sewed up plenty of wins for Toronto.

"I was pleased with the outcome and everything that happened. I had a great time and enjoyed it. I can't complain," the 1984 MHS graduate said.

Garden City, Rankin now in same district

■ The University Interscholastic League makes its biennial realignment to compensate for changes in school enrollment.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Garden City was moved into District 6A in the University Interscholastic League's biennial realignment Thursday, pitting the Bearkats against the Rankin Red Devils in district sports competition.

Garden City and Rankin have developed one of West Texas' most competitive football rivalries over the past few years in a non-conference setting. Now those matchups will mean even more when played under the same district umbrella.

That was the only major UIL change involving area teams. Plainview, however, did fall from Class 5A to District 2-4A with Lamesa. Forsan dropped out of the 2A district of Stanton to Class A, taking Garden City's old spot.

District 4-5A, which includes the Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene schools, remained untouched as did the Andrews and Big Spring District 3-4A.

The top four Class A schools in the final regular season Associated Press poll all were moved to 2A. Valley Mills, Wheeler, Rotan and Italy, which combined for a 38-0 record before the playoffs, were bumped up.

Thirteen schools, including 10-time boy's state basketball champion Snook, were shifted from 2A to Class A.

"With basketball the way it is at the Class A level, it's just as tough as Class 2A," said Snook middle school principal and former head basketball coach Donnie Victorick. "The difference is all the teams aren't quite as strong. We're looking forward to the move down.

"We were mostly concerned about the travel. The travel this year will be so much better."

Class 5A, the classification for the state's largest schools, shrunk by one to 240 schools as 12 were added, while 13 dropped to 4A.

Moving up to 5A from 4A were: Allen, Crowley, Dallas South Oak Cliff, Katy Taylor, The Colony and Brownsville Rivera. The other six are newly created schools.

Schools that moved down to 4A from 5A were: Austin LBJ; Austin Lanier; Dallas Samuell; Fort Worth Eastern Hills; Kingsville King; New Braunfels; Plainview; and Houston schools Davis, Forest Brook, Furr, Kashmere, Scarborough, Wheatley and Worthing.

The Farmersville Farmers have created a football dynasty in Class 2A, but coach Jim Wood knows the going won't be so easy next season.

Farmersville was one of dozens of schools to change classifications Thursday.

The UIL, which governs high school extracurricular activities in Texas, realigns the schools to compensate for changes in school enrollment.

"It was a very difficult realignment, but all of them are difficult because you're dealing with coaching careers and school success in their activities," said UIL athletic director Bill Farney.

UIL spokesman Peter Contreras said schools may protest their realignment with an appeals committee. They likely wouldn't protest a shift in classification, but many probably will ask the UIL to reconsider district placement, Contreras said.

The more than 1,000 high schools evaluated had a chance before realignment to request a higher classification than their enrollment merits.

"I would find it very odd if they didn't indicate that and then two weeks later change their mind," Conteras said. "Most of it has to do with protest over what district they're in because of excess

Lee vs. MHS always produces impact

Just how much weight does a meeting between Midland Lee and Midland High carry in the District 4-5A sports races?

Williamson

Well, you only have to look at basketball to get a feeling. On Jan. 7 the girls and boys of MHS and Lee met for a Chaparral Center doubleheader with MHS favored to win both games.

After all, the MHS boys had previously beaten Lee in the Tall City tournament 82-46, a whopping 36-point margin. The MHS girls went into the game with a 15-4 season record and a 1-0 district record compared to the Lady Rebels' 6-9 overall mark and 1-1 league record.

So, what happens? It's a Lee sweep. And what kind of impact did it make?

Well, today both Lee teams are in the thick of the District 4-5A playoff hunt. The 4-3 MHS girls are 1½ games behind 6-2 Lee in the search for a playoff berth, but still in the hunt. Still, the loss to Lee hurt the Lady Dawgs a great deal because they lost two of the next three games to fall off the pace and have been in a catch-up mode ever since.

The Lee boys exploded to a 4-2 first half record and trail 5-1 Abilene High and Abilene Cooper by one game in the race for a state playoff berth.

MHS reeled after the loss to Lee, starting 4-5A play with an 0-3 record before winning two of its last three games. In fact, the Bulldogs join Odessa Permian and San Angelo at 2-4 for the first half schedule. It really has become a three-team race at this point.

So, the time has come to "Play It Again, Sam — With Feeling." These teams meet at 6:15 and 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center. And from viewing what happened after the first meeting, this could be the season for all teams involved.

MHS coach Jack Stephenson believes a playoff berth can still be earned with four losses, but that means the Bulldogs can't stump one more toe. Lee coach Jon House also feels like this is the key to the whole season, noting that the next two games with MHS and Cooper will play a big factor in the chances his team has for making the playoffs.

After all, either Abilene High or Cooper has to lose tonight since they play each other. One will become the front-runner for the district championship while the loser will be back in a battle for that second playoff berth. It seems that the cross-town rivalry also plays a key role in Abilene.

Lee girls coach Elise Kail can't lose the grip on second place with a loss to MHS tonight, but Jim Raughton's Lady Dawgs, with a win, would be right back in the thick of the battle. A Lee win over the MHS girls might also put the lid on the girls race. Lee can all but skate into the playoffs with a win tonight with only three district games left while holding a 2½-game lead. It really is on the line for both these girls teams.

What it all comes down to is big time pressure on high school kids. But that doesn't seem to bother the combatants a bit.

As Lee guard Keenan Henry put it, "I'm always ready to play a game against Midland High, but you can bet they are also ready to play us. That's just the way it is."

It's a wonderful and monumental fact.

REMATCH: Rivalry brings out unexpected results from the field (Lee was 13-for-41 and MHS 11-for-41), but the Lady Rebs came away with the win after controlling the boards.

(From 1C)

Lee also shut down the Lady 'Dawgs' top two guns, seniors Sally Gibson and Ashley Chase. Those two combined for only 16 points, but sophomore Julie Chancellor hit three key three-pointers.

"We stopped Ashley and Sally last time, and to win this game we've got to stop them and Julie, too," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "We have to play the same kind of defense we played last game, contain their scoring and control the boards."

"Lee's playing with a bunch of confidence right now. I think we're going to have to be a little more aggressive and do a better job on the glass on both the offensive and defensive ends," Raughton said.

Tekeira Strambler is the leading Lady Rebel scorer, averaging 10.3 points a game, and Lachette Crisp comes in at just over 9 ppg. But guard Lisa Cochran, who Kail said is the team's best steal artist, will miss the game after having a benign tumor removed from her abdomen, and may be out for the season.

"Our steals helped in the last game when we went to a man-to-man defense, but since we don't have Lisa that may change," Kail said. "Lisa's condition looks real good right now, and the kids are real upbeat because of the good news (that the tumor was benign)."

On the boys side, Lee is one game out of first place with a 4-2 district record as 4-5A begins its second half, while MHS has a mathematical, though remote, chance after a 2-4 first half. Abilene High and Abilene Cooper are the district co-leaders at 5-1, though one will have a second loss after they play each other tonight.

The Rebels (16-11 for the season), have three players averaging in double figures, as Wayne Wilson scores 18.6 points a game, Martin Lattibeaudiere 15.0 and David Wilson 13.3. But after David Wilson's 31-point outing in a 77-71 Lee win over San Angelo Tuesday, MHS coach Jack Stephenson knows where to place his worry.

"They're shooting the ball so well, and David Wilson really is something. He may be the best player in the district, and he's done a tremendous amount of work to bring his game so far," said Stephenson, who saw his Bulldogs lose 67-60 to Lee Jan. 8 after leading by 11 points on three different occasions.

For the Rebels, that victory ended an eight-game losing streak to MHS (13-11 overall) and vaulted them to the early 4-5A lead. It also marked a 44-point swing by Lee since the teams' previous meeting, an 82-46 Bulldog rout in the Tall City Tournament.

"Winning this game is real important for us to stay in the district race," said Lee coach Jon House. "They beat us by 37 points and we beat them by seven, so it's obvious they're certainly capable of beating us.

"It's also kind of a reversal of fortunes in that we've got everything to lose and they have everything to win, and it hasn't been that way lately."

With Antwan Goodley (15.5) and Mike Melzer (13.3) both averaging in double digits, Brian Rounding, Joseph Golding and Phil Koss have all had big scoring nights this season.

"I just don't think you can key any one person of theirs, they have so many people who can score," House said.

"In the last game, we played three quarters. That's the problem with us, we have that one quarter a game. Every game we've lost we have had one quarter when we didn't play well," Stephenson said.

But if the Bulldogs put together four solid periods, the Rebels will be in for a fight.

"It's just going to take a team effort, and we have to try to keep them off the boards because they're bigger than we are. And we have to stay out of foul trouble," House said.

Even at that, the heat of the rivalry may bring out the unexpected.

"There have been years when we had had a better team than theirs and lost to them, and there have been years they had a better team than us and we lost to them. You just never know," Stephenson said.

Lee, MHS swimmers seek titles

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland High boys and the Midland Lee girls will be favored to dominate when action begins at the District 4-5A swimming championships here today at the Redbud YMCA.

Diving is slated to begin at 11 a.m. and swimming preliminaries are set for 5 p.m. Finals are scheduled for 10:15 a.m. Saturday.

The MHS boy's, undefeated so far this season, won 7-of-11 events at the Midland Invitational swim meet Jan. 18. That meet was the final team tune-up for the 4-5A championships, and the field included all the district's member teams.

The top six finishers in both individual and relay events at the district meet will qualify for the Region I championships, Feb. 14-15 in Lubbock. Both Tall City teams should qualify several.

MHS took first place in the 200 medley relay at the Midland Invitational with Matt Houston, Larry Ridge, Jordan Scharf and Chris Hall getting it done. Houston, Scharf, Steve Thomsen and Clay Brown then teamed to win the 200 freestyle relay.

Houston, a senior who has twice finished in the top three in the butterfly at the state meet, leads MHS' contingent of individual entrants. He won the 100 backstoke and the 50 freestyle at the invitational. Brown won the 500 freestyle, and Thomsen captured the 100 and 200 freestyle heats. Repeating in Abilene will take them all to regionals.

The Lee girls were good for wins in three events at the invitational, including Jogee Wollard, who topped the field in girl's diving.

Shannon Conkey edged MHS' Kathryn Krall in the 500 freestyle, and Catrina Kieffer was best in the 200 individual medley as Lee scored 496 team points.

The Lee boys have a good chance of qualifying some swimmers for regionals, especially in Jesse Nattrass, who bested the field in the 200 IM and took second in the 100 breaststoke two weeks ago. And Juan Arguello gives Lee a good shot in diving.

The MHS girls should easily send the foursome of Jodi Mraz, Kelli Hales, Elizabeth Braun and Kathryn Krall to regionals. That group edged out Lee in both the 200 and 400 freestyle relays last time out.

Sanchez selected at Rankin

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

RANKIN — Raul Sanchez, who spent the past two seasons as an assistant coach for the Rankin varsity football team, was recently named head football coach and athletic director here.

Sanchez, 37, replaces Troy Kennedy, who resigned from the Class A Rankin post in January to assume similar duties at Merkel High School.

Another Rankin assistant coach, Gary Durham, and Sanchez were the only applicants interviewed for the job.

This is Sanchez' second stint as a head football coach. A graduate of Angelo State University, he headed up the football program at Class 3A Pearsall from from 1981 to 1984.

The Red Devils were 42-8 in four years under Kennedy. Rankin reached the state quarterfinals twice in that span, losing each time to the eventual state champion.

Last season the Red Devils (10-2) fell to state titlist Memphis in the quarters.

"I've invited all the assistant coaches to stay on because I'd like to keep the same continuity and stability that we've had here," said Sanchez, who grew up in Mason and worked there five years as an assistant coach prior to joining the Rankin staff in 1990.

Sanchez, who also coaches boy's varsity track at Rankin, is a foreign language teacher. This is his 15th year as a Texas teacher and coach.

"I'm thankful to the selection committee for its decision to hire me, and I'm especially thankful for the way it was handled in staff between myself and Gary (Durham). It was probably the most professional way of getting it done," Sanchez said.

"We'll be graduating a great senior class, including some of the players who carried us last year. But we still have a nucleus of Red Devils here that we believe can be very competitive."

traveling."

Farmersville, a 14-1 state semifinalist in 2A last season, was boosted to Class 3A, where it will compete in a newly created District 9 that includes Bonham, Frisco, Pottsboro, Princeton, Sanger, Whitesboro and Gainesville, formerly in 4A.

Wood, whose Farmersville teams are 43-6 over the past four years, said he wasn't surprised by the shift.

"We knew we were going to be close," Wood said. "With Gainesville dropping down that would be a big adjustment. Everyone else I think we can compete with. We just have to deal with it and do the best we can.

"We're certainly not going to sit around feeling sorry for ourselves."

Conteras said the Austin and Houston schools in years past have requested to play in 5A, which has enrollments of 1,510 students or more, but declined to do so this time.

Fort Worth Diamond Hill, Lumberton and Navasota all moved from 3A to 4A.

Seven schools moved from 4A to 3A, while 11 moved up to 3A from 2A.

Wiebe has birds on five holes in a row

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mark Wiebe knew he was playing well. He just didn't know how well.

"I birdied five holes in a row and didn't even know it, not until I was checking my scorecard," Wiebe said Thursday after completing an 8-under-par 64 in the first round of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

That gave him a share of the lead, at least on the scoreboard if not in actuality, with former PGA champion Jeff Sluman.

Sluman, like Wiebe, played his opening round at Pebble Beach, one of three Monterey Peninsula courses used for the first three days of this celebrity-laden event.

But Sluman declined to claim the lead.

"I don't even consider it. Not at this point," he said. "With three different courses being played, nobody knows who's leading until after the third round."

Several others took full advantage of the benign conditions.

Tom Purtzer and P.H. Horgan each shot 66 and Tom Sieckmann, Willie Wood and Ken Green had 67s at Pebble Beach.

Mark Brooks and Chip Beck shot 67 at Poppy Hill and Lanny Wadkins shot a 5-under-par 67 at Spyglass Hill, generally regarded as the most difficult of the three courses and the starting point for most of the more glamorous names.

Arnold Palmer shot 71, U.S. Open champ Payne Stewart 73, Greg Norman 74 and Jack Nicklaus 76, all at Spyglass Hill.

Oldsmobile LPGA Classic

LAKE WORTH, Fla. — Beth Daniel shot a first-round 6-under-par 66 for a share of the lead of the weather-plagued Oldsmobile LPGA Classic.

The women's first tournament of the year at Wycliffe Golf & Country Club was delayed two hours and 15 minutes because of heavy fog, resulting in an incomplete first round.

Daniel (34-32), who is tied with Swedish rookie Helen Alfredsson (31-35), was one of 90 golfers in the 144-player field to complete their opening round.

Nancy Lopez, playing in her first tournament since August, grabbed a late-afternoon piece of first place, before bogeying No. 8 (her 17th and final hole) to come in at 5 under, before play was suspended.

Barb Mucha, Liselotte Neumann and Dawn Coe were one stroke back at 67, while five others were logjammed at 68. Defending champion Meg Mallon finished at 77.

Daniel, 35, who is returning after a self-imposed 4½-month layoff for personal reasons, said the delay helped her relax.

"I was able to hang out in the lockerroom and then get some extra putts in," said Daniel of nearby Delray Beach. "I was ready, good or bad, to start going."

Despite playing in just 18 tournaments last year, Daniel was the tours' fourth-leading moneywinner with $469,501, including two victories, giving her 27 victories overall. She needs three more tournament wins, including a major, to qualify for the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Daniel, a 14-year veteran whose recent competition consisted of five Pro-Ams, only missed one green Thursday and made seven birdies, on her way to the 66.

Top-ranked Duke beats Florida St.

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Top-ranked Duke, trailing by a point with 3:43 left, scored the final 14 points behind Grant Hill's surge and struggled past No. 23 Florida State 75-62 Thursday night.

Hill's driving scoop shot gave Duke a 64-62 lead and sparked the closing flourish that sent the defending national champions to their 22nd straight victory before a record Florida State crowd of 13,610 fans. Hill had eight points in the last 2:22.

Duke (16-0, 8-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) matched its best start ever. Hill, who scored 26 points in Duke's 86-70 victory over Florida State earlier this month, and Christian Laettner led the Blue Devils with 20 points each.

Utah 57, No. 19 UTEP 54

SALT LAKE CITY — Byron Wilson's sank a half-court shot at the buzzer to give Utah a 57-54 Western Athletic Conference victory over 19th-ranked Texas-El Paso.

With the score tied at 54 and seven seconds remaining, Jimmy Soto of Utah rebounded a missed shot by UTEP's Prince Stewart, dribbled to midcourt and found Wilson, who banked in the winning shot just over the midcourt line.

Stewart led all scorers with 15. Johnny Melvin added 10 for the UTEP Miners (16-2, 6-1).

Utah (14-5, 4-3) was led by Soto with 12. Paul Afeaki added nine and pulled down 11 rebounds.

No. 17 UNC Charlotte 77, No. 24 Louisville 68 OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — James Terrell scored 19 of his 22 points in the second half, including two key 3-pointers in overtime, in No. 17 North Carolina-Charlotte's victory over No. 24 Louisville.

Louisville's Everick Sullivan hit a 3-pointer to tie the game 65-65 with 3:26 left in overtime. Terrell hit two long jumpers and Rodney Odom hit a free throw for a 72-65 UNCC lead.

Louisville's Keith LeGree hit a 3-pointer with 42 seconds left to narrow the deficit to four points, but the 49ers (14-3 overall, 3-0 Metro Conference) hit five of six free throws in the final minute to keep the Cardinals (12-5, 3-3) at bay.

Henry Williams scored 18 points and Odom 16 for the 49ers, who came back from an 87-84 loss to Butler earlier in the week. The 49ers shot 59 percent in the second half after hitting 39 percent in the first half.

No. 9 Arizona 104, Oregon 53

TUCSON, Ariz. — Ninth-ranked Arizona forced 27 turnovers and made 16 steals in handing Oregon its worst-ever loss on sizzling 3-point shooting by Matt Othick and Chris Mills.

Top 25

The Wildcats (14-3, 4-2 Pacific-10) tied a school record with 15 3-pointers. They matched another mark with 10 in the first half on their way to a 56-28 lead.

Oregon (5-11, 1-6) has lost six in a row and nine of 10. The Ducks' biggest previous loss was 43 points to Oregon State in 1982.

No. 10 Ohio State 74, Illinois 72

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Jimmy Jackson scored 16 points and No. 10 Ohio State, after almost blowing an 18-point lead, held on despite poor foul shooting to beat Illinois.

The Buckeyes made only 2 of 6 free throws in the final 1:19, allowing Illinois to stay close. The Illini went for the win at the end, but Brooks Taylor missed a 3-point shot in the last seconds.

Ohio State (13-3) pulled within a game of first-place Indiana in the Big Ten at 5-1. Illinois is 8-9 overall and 2-5 in the conference.

No. 16 Tulane 98, Southern Miss. 86

NEW ORLEANS — Matt Greene led The Posse on a 23-10 run midway through the first half to spark No. 16 Tulane over Southern Mississippi.

Greene had nine points in the 8:10 span 10-second run as Tulane (16-1, 4-0 Metro Conference) went from an 11-10 lead to a 38-28 lead. Southern Mississippi, led by Clarence Weatherspoon's 33 points, is 8-9 and 2-2 in the Metro.

Kim Lewis and Carin Hartman had four points apiece in the deciding run.

Coach Perry Clark substitutes an entire second team, which he calls The Posse, about five minutes into each half.

He mixed his starters with The Posse for the rest of the first half Thursday night, and Tulane led 57-39 at intermission. That mixture produced a 47-28 lead with 4:19 left in the first half and an 80-59 lead with 8:25 to go.

LOGAN, Utah — Elmore Spencer scored 27 points and got No. 21 UNLV off to a fast start in overtime, leading to a victory over Utah State.

TIMLIN: Missed chance to face Atlanta's Stanton

(From 1C)

Rychel, a Bulldog senior in 1989, said he expected to see plenty of Class AA action for the Pirates this season after an injury hampered him most of last year.

So neither really had anything to complain about Thursday, especially Timlin. He logged 108⅓ innings in 1991 as the Blue Jays cruised to the American League East title. As a matter of fact, Timlin was credited with the win in the game that clinched that championship, a nice payoff after spending four years in the minor leagues.

Though he is listed as the first middle reliever coming out of the Jays' bullpen in 1992, injuries to the Toronto staff saw Timlin spend time as a starter and a closer in '91.

"I had three saves, and I had three blown saves. This year -I'd love to have the same record I had last year, but I would like to have a few more saves," said Timlin, ever the relief man at heart.

"I'd much rather be a reliever, but if I have to start I have to. It's just a job you're going to have to do, and I don't mind because I like to pitch."

The 1991 playoffs threw a pitch at Midlanders as two former Bulldogs nearly played each other in the World Series. Only eventual champion Minnesota kept Timlin from facing ex-high school teammate Mike Stanton in the Series.

Stanton, a 1983 MHS graduate, came into his own as a middle reliever for the National League champion Atlanta Braves last season. He and Timlin both attended Southwestern University in Georgetown before Stanton transferred to Alvin Community College.

"It (facing Stanton) crossed my mind. I really wouldn't have minded it because the last time I saw Mike Stanton was in college and he went off to another college.

"I admire Stanton and what he did, He's got a great arm and did well with it. I'd like to do the same thing he did. He was in a World Series, one step further than me. That's one thing I have to do to catch him," Timlin said.

To that end, Timlin stops short of making any predictions about what his Blue Jays will do this season.

"I don't want to say we're going to make the playoffs. You can say that and not get out of the starting gate. You're just going to do the best you can, and if you end up in the playoffs it's a bonus," he said.

Timlin and the Blue Jays will see plenty of bonuses if he keeps pitching like he did last season. Then, after his next contract negotiations roll around, he might consider retiring his thoroughly unpretentious jacket.

Olajuwon big in win over Bulls

NBA Roundup

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon had 24 points and 11 rebounds and blocked Michael Jordan's last-second 3-point attempt as the Houston Rockets held on to defeat the Chicago Bulls 105-102 Thursday night.

The loss was the second straight for the Bulls and only the seventh in 44 games. It also was the Bulls' fourth straight defeat at the Summit.

Vernon Maxwell, fined $7,500 and suspended for a game because of his conduct in Chicago's 114-100 victory over Houston Saturday night, finished with 23 points.

Jordan led the Bulls with 22 points, followed by Scottie Pippen with 18 and Bill Cartwright with 15.

Houston led 94-91 before Maxwell scored five of the Rockets' next seven points, giving them a 101-93 advantage. Chicago responded with a 7-0 run, six by Jordan, to close to 101-100.

After an exchange of baskets, one free throw each by Maxwell and Thorpe put Houston ahead 105-102 with four seconds left.

Jordan then attempted a 3-pointer from the corner that was blocked by a lunging Olajuwon.

Cavaliers 115, Magic 98

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Larry Nance scored a season-high 33 points, making eight straight floor shots in one stretch, and also grabbed 13 rebounds as Cleveland beat Orlando.

The Cavaliers, still smarting from a 99-96 loss at Orlando last Saturday, missed six of their first seven shots but then took charge by hitting six in a row for a 16-8 advantage. Nance hit two jumpers during the flurry, starting his string of eight straight without a miss.

He finished 15-for-19 from the floor and 3-for-3 from the foul line. He also blocked three shots.

Lakers 106, Nuggets 96

DENVER — Byron Scott scored 28 points, including a controversial 3-point goal with 1:33 left, and the Los Angeles Lakers won their fourth consecutive game.

The Lakers led 90-80 with 5:47 remaining before the Nuggets scored eight consecutive points, four each by Greg Anderson and Dikembe Mutombo.

Denver missed three other chances to score during the run when they failed to convert a pair of steals.

Washington declines to play Miami

■ Kickoff Classic loses chance to match last season's top two football teams.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A game pitting last season's two national champions fell apart when Washington declined to play in the Kickoff Classic, a source told The Associated Press Thursday.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said there was never an agreement between Miami and Washington to play in college football's traditional season-opener at Giants Stadium in late August.

However, the source said both schools' positions on playing in the Kickoff Classic changed in the weeks after being named national champions, with their latest decisions on the Classic being made within hours of each other on Jan. 21.

Miami, which finished first in The Associated Press media poll, originally told the organizers of the game it was not interested. That stance started softening, and on Jan. 21 athletic director Dave Maggard informed the organizers that the Hurricanes would play provided the opponent was Washington, the source said.

Washington finished first in the USA Today-CNN coaches poll, marking the second straight year that coaches and the media had chosen different champions.

The Kickoff Classic had hoped to capitalize on the No. 1 controversy by pitting Miami and Washington in a game the public never got last season.

But the battle of No. 1s fell apart hours after Miami said yes, when Washington athletic director Barbara Hedges told the game's organizers that Huskies' players had voted not to play in the game, the source said.

The source said the Huskies' decision came as a shock since Hedges had given indications since early January that Washington was interested in playing in the Classic, which guarantees participating schools a minimum $550,000 payday.

Hedges and Maggard did not return telephone calls left at their offices for comment.

The organizers of the game, the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority and the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, still have not determined a match up for this year's game.

Miami and Washington were 12-0 last season, with each team capping the season with an impressive bowl victory. Miami was a 22-0 winner over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, while Washington defeated Michigan 34-14 in the Rose Bowl.

Miami edged Washington by a mere four votes in the closest vote in the 56-year history of the AP poll. Washington finished nine points ahead of Miami in the coaches poll.

The source said Kickoff Classic organizers contacted both schools a day or two after the New Year's Day bowls, and Miami was not interested.

California signs Jim Abbott

NEW YORK (AP) — California's Jim Abbott increased his salary five-fold to a $1.85 million, while Kansas City outfielder Chris Gwynn also settled his arbitration case Thursday.

Abbott, 18-11 with a 2.89 ERA last season, got a raise of $1,492,500. Abbott, who was born without a right hand, had asked for $2.1 million in arbitration while the Angels had offered $1.6 million.

He was 12-12 with a 3.92 ERA and four complete games in 29 starts in 1989 and 10-14 with a 4.51 ERA and four complete games in 33 starts in 1990.

Jim Clancy, who left Atlanta to become a free agent, agreed to a minor-league contract with the Chicago Cubs. Clancy was 0-3 for Houston with a 2.78 ERA and five saves, and 3-2 with a 5.71 ERA for Atlanta with three saves.

The 36-year-old right-hander, who made $1.15 million last season, would get a $375,000 major-league contract if he makes the team and the chance to earn another $500,000 in bonus based on games pitched and days on the roster.

Gwynn, who .252 last year in 94 games, agreed at $425,000 contract, a raise of $265,000. He and the Royals split the difference between his request for $550,000 and the team's offer of $300,000.

There are 97 players remaining in arbitration. Hearings are scheduled to begin Monday.

Houston trades Pinkett to Saints for draft pick

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers Thursday traded running back Allen Pinkett to the New Orleans Saints for a fifth-round draft choice in the 1992 NFL draft, team officials said.

Oilers spokesman Chip Namias said Pinkett, who has completed his sixth season with the Oilers, started 16 games for the team last season.

Pinkett, 28, led the team in rushing with a career best 720 yards and a team best 10 touchdowns in the most recent season. The 5-foot-9, 196-pound running back also finished sixth in the team's all-time rushing list of 2,324 yards and fifth on the all-time kickoff return list with 1,577 yards.

"It's a positive move. I look forward to going to New Orleans," Pinkett said Thursday. "I have to thank (general manager) Mike Holovak because he traded me to a team where he thought I'd do the best. There were a lot of other teams interested."

Pinkett was expected to fill a need created by the retirement of Reuben Mayes and injuries which sidelined the starting tandem of Dalton Hilliard and Craig Heyward for much of last season.

Pinkett finished his best year with the Oilers, despite Houston's one-back, "run and shoot" offense. He said with the "run and shoot" style, "the first priority of a running back in this offense is to block." But he said joining the Saints with a more traditional lineup, "I will be able to use my best asset and I think that's running the ball."

Pinkett was a third-round draft pick by the Oilers out of Notre Dame in 1986. He was a three-time All-American, finishing his collegiate career eighth in Heisman Trophy balloting.

New Orleans has accumulated three fifth-round draft picks through trades with Phoenix and Detroit. But traded its own fifth-round pick for Pinkett, Namias said.

The Oilers face a Feb. 1 deadline to complete its Plan B roster.

A native of Washington, D.C., Pinkett is married and has an 8-month-old daughter, Jessica. He has worked for IBM during the off seasons.

Texas breaks century mark

RICHMOND (AP) — Terrence Rencher scored 37 points Thursday night to lead Texas past Virginia Commonwealth 105-94.

Virginia Commonwealth (9-8) had pulled to 81-78 with 7:28 remaining before Rencher scored nine points of an 11-2 run for the Longhorns (12-8). The Rams could get no closer than six in the final six minutes.

Texas had taken the lead for good 53-52 on Rencher's jumper with 18:20 to go.

B.J. Tyler added 26 points for the Longhorns. Benford Williams had 16, which made him the 13th Longhorn to score 1,000 career points. He has 1,016. Tony Watson and Albert Burditt each had 10.

The Rams allowed 100 points at home for the first time since December 1976.

NTSU streak climbs

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — Dylan Beamon scored 24 points Thursday night and North Texas used two big second-half runs to take their sixth straight victory, a 94-79 Southland Conference whipping of Northwestern (La.) State.

The Eagles (8-9, 6-2 SLC) ended a three-game series winning streak by the Demons (10-7, 4-4).

Economic indicators remain weak

■ Indicators show few signs of revival in near future.

By John D. McClain
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In a rash of discouraging economic news, the government said Thursday that orders to factories for durable goods dropped sharply in December and business layoffs were continuing to rise through the middle of this month.

A separate report said consumer spending was up only slightly last month in yet another sign of economic stagnation. Americans' personal income was up, but that was partly due to rising jobless payments because of the national economic slump.

U.S. businesses — and the Bush administration — are anxiously seeking any sign of revival. But Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York, said the reports suggested "there basically will be no growth in the first quarter of this year."

"The economy is kind of standing on rubbery legs," concurred economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "It isn't falling down. It's maintaining its equilibrium, but it can do no more."

President Bush did not comment on the new reports during a speech to businessmen in Philadelphia but saw reason for hope in other economic signs. He said, "Inflation is down; inventories are down; the market has been expressing optimism in the future; interest rates are down and this is no time for gloom and doom."

The Commerce Department reported that orders for long-lasting, usually expensive durable goods such as cars and computers fell to a seasonally adjusted $117.7 billion in December. The 5 percent decline was the largest since orders plunged 11.2 percent in November 1990.

Orders were down 4.6 percent for all of 1991, the largest loss since the recession year of 1982 when they fell 6.7 percent.

Transportation orders were down 13.9 percent in December, accounting for most of the overall decline. If not for the transportation problems, total orders would have been down just 1.6 percent.

On the other hand, military orders soared 86 percent and without that gain the overall orders decline would have been a staggering 8.9 percent. Military hardware orders are expected to decline in coming months because of cutbacks in the Pentagon budget.

In a second report, the Commerce Department said consumer spending slowed to a 0.3 percent gain from November's 0.4 percent increase. Spending was up just 3.9 percent for the year after rising 6.4 percent in 1990.

Larry Meyer of Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting service, said, "Confidence is still down; the unemployment rate will probably continue to grow. We're not likely to see much more than 1 percent growth in consumption in the first quarter."

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices were mixed in dull trading Thursday.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March, which lost 28 cents on Wednesday, added 5 cents to settle at $18.94 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Other contract months posted similar gains.

Traders continued their strategy of the last several weeks of selling heating oil and buying gasoline. Analysts said there was no fundamental reason for the trend, except that heating oil stocks are high during what is shaping up to be a mild winter.

Traders are awaiting next month's meeting in Geneva of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which must make significant cuts in production to prevent prices from collapsing.

Natural gas prices, with contracts for delivery in March settled at $1.166 per 1,000 cubic feet, off 1.4 cent.

Dollar seesaws

NEW YORK — The dollar seesawed Thursday in hectic trading, falling first on weak U.S. economic statistics, rebounding strongly on a false rumor about a Russian coup and finishing mostly higher.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.43 yen to close at 125.60 yen.

The British pound fell in London to $1.7740 from $1.8095 late Wednesday.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — The stock market put together a mild rally Thursday, steadying after Wednesday's late drop.

Analysts said the market drew support from hopes for a renewed decline in interest rates and a smattering of upbeat corporate earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 47.18 points on Wednesday, recovered 19.90 points to 3,244.86.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 10 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Pan Am Corp. sues Delta for $2.5 billion

■ Lawsuit accuses Delta of abandoning the rescue package that would have kept Pan Am in the air.

By Dirk Beveridge
Assoicated Press writer

NEW YORK — Pan Am Corp. sued Delta Air Lines for more than $2.5 billion Thursday, accusing its former financial savior of last-minute treachery by abandoning a rescue package that would have kept the sickly carrier alive.

Delta immediately denounced as meritless the lawsuit filed in U.S. Bankruptcy court in Manhattan, where Pan Am has languished for a year.

The suit seeks $2.5 billion for damages plus an order preventing Delta from recouping $115 million it had invested in the aborted attempt to keep Pan Am flying as a smaller carrier.

The demise of Pan Am, one of the oldest and best-known U.S. airlines, has come to symbolize the financial travails of the entire American commercial aviation industry, which lost billions of dollars last year because of the recession and costly fare wars to attract travelers.

Pan Am's predicament was worsened by years of chronic losses, an inability to compete in the era of airline deregulation, and fears of terrorism on its international flights.

The suit seeks $2.5 billion for damages plus an order preventing Delta from recouping $115 million it had invested in the aborted attempt to keep Pan Am flying as a smaller carrier.

Its lawsuit accuses Delta of breach of contract and not dealing in good faith.

Pan Am quit flying Dec. 4, a day after lawyers told Bankruptcy Judge Cornelius Blackshear that Delta had refused to put up all the money it had promised to keep Pan Am in business.

"They set up a sitaution in which Pan Am could only do one thing, which was to shut down its business," Pan Am chief executive Peter T. McHugh said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Burlington to sell El Paso Natural Gas

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso Natural Gas Co. is spinning off from its parent company Burlington Resources.

Burlington Resources filed paperwork Wednesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission for an initial public offering of new shares in El Paso Natural Gas common stock.

"Before the end of 1992, El Paso Natural will be an independent company," said Elena Sanalone, spokeswoman for Burlington.

She said the spinoff should increase the shareholder value. The two companies will be worth more in the marketplace than they are combined, she said.

El Paso Natural Gas operates a 22,000-mile network of gas pipelines in Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico, Nevada and Arizona and accounts for 63 percent of the total interstate pipeline in California.

The natural gas pipeline company was publicly traded from 1929 until 1983, when Burlington Northern completed a hostile takeover of the company.

Burlington Resources is offering 14 percent of El Paso Natural Gas stock for public trading. The remainder of the stock will be distributed within a few months to stockholders of Burlington Resources.

The stock is expected to open trading at between $17 to $20 per share, Ms. Sanalone said.

Texas group meets with General Motors

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas group seeking a purchase plan that would allow General Motors Corp. to keep its Arlington plant open has met with officials from the car manufacturer, a newspaper has reported.

The "Texas Commitment" is a project seeking to trade a guarantee to purchase a number of GM's alternative fuel vehicles in exchange for keeping the plant open.

Three GM executives, involved in the company's fleet sales and alternative fuel vehicle divisions, met Wednesday with Gov. Ann Richards, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, Arlington Mayor Richard Greene and Cathy Bonner, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investing that lump sum retirement money

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am 53 years old and have taken early retirement from a major corporation. I received $283,000 as a lump sum from one retirement plan and $132,000 from a 401(k) retirement plan and an employee stock ownership plan distributions.

Doyle

I plan to put all that money into rollover individual retirement accounts — the $283,000 into no-load income mutual funds holding Government National Mortgage Association securities and corporate bonds, the $132,000 into a no-load equity mutual fund. My thoughts on the latter are to purchase shares of a S&P index fund.

Does my plan sound O.K.? Does it make more sense to buy into the equity fund all at once or over a longer period, such as two years?

A. Your overall plan is good. By putting the bulk of your money into income funds, you will reduce your risk while obtaining reasonably high dividends. You'll take on more risk, but not a tremendous amount, in the equity fund — a mutual fund holding common stocks as investments.

By picking a S&P index fund, you will buy shares of a mutual fund that invests equally in all 500 stocks in the Standard & Poor's Composite Index, which is an excellent measurement of the ups and downs in the stock market. Your investment there will mimic the overall market.

It could be a serious mistake to put that entire $132,000 in an equity fund all at once. It would be far wiser to invest equal amounts at fixed intervals, such as $5,000 every month. That way, you would dollar cost average — getting more shares when prices are low, fewer shares when prices are high and a better than average cost on all the shares you buy.

To keep your retirement nest egg deferred from income tax, you will have to get it into a rollover IRA within 60 days after receiving the checks.

That might seem to present a problem with my dollar cost averaging suggestion. You can handle that by putting the entire $132,000 into a money market mutual fund IRA and gradually transferring it to an index fund within the same mutual fund management group.

Q. My husband and I have individual retirement accounts in a money market mutual fund. The amount has just gone over $100,000 and will continue to increase.

I realize money market mutual funds are not insured by any government agency and I worry about this large sum being where it is, even though my husband insists there is no danger of losing our money.

Just how safe is our money?

A. It's virtually risk-free. There has been only one case in which shareholders of money market mutual funds lost money. That was back in 1978 and amounted to seven cents on the dollar.

Since then, in moves to protect investors, the Securities and Exchange Commission has greatly tightened the regulations covering money market funds. I'd lay long odds no one will ever again lose any part of an investment in a money market mutual fund.

Please, dear readers, do not confuse money market mutual funds with other types of mutual funds. The share values of other mutual funds, which might hold stocks, bonds, etc., as investments, can rise or fall, making investors winners or losers.

Money market mutual funds invest only in interest-paying debt securities with short maturities. As a result, they are allowed to use accounting practices that keep their share values constant at $1.

Q. Four years ago, I invested in an oil limited partnership whose market value has dropped sharply. In 1991, the partnership was changed to a corporation whose stock is now listed on the American Stock Exchange.

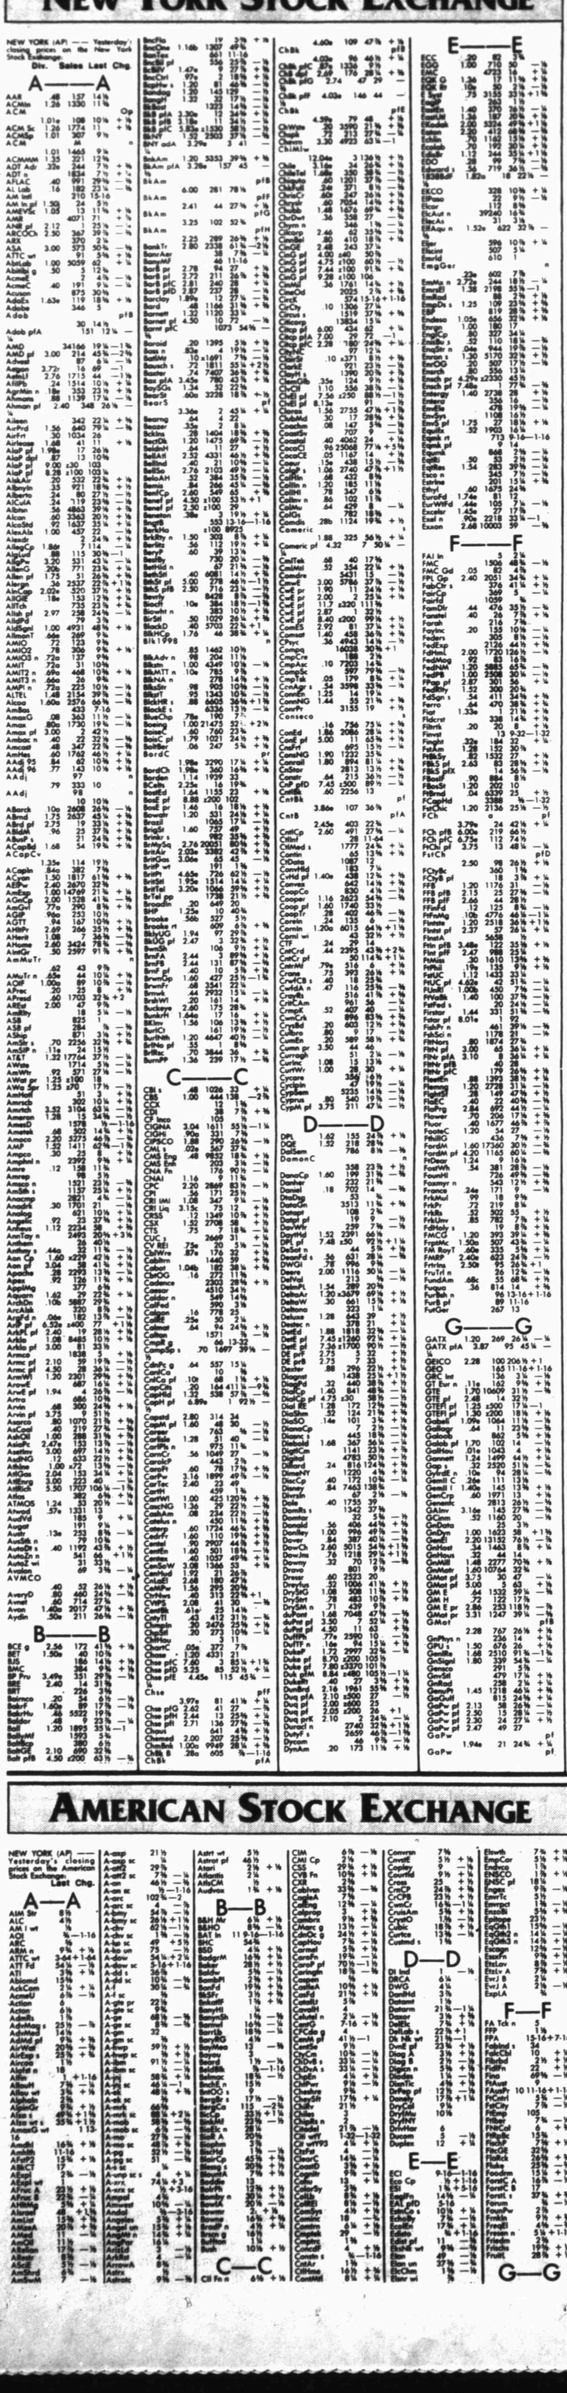

Can I report my loss on the income tax return I file April 15?

A. Nope. You'll have to wait until you sell the shares of stock you received in exchange for your limited partnership interest. When you do that the difference between the price you paid for the partnership interest and the price you receive for the stock will be either a capital loss or a capital gain, which you can then report on the income tax return you file for the year of the sale.

Attorneys argue Dahmer's sanity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeffrey Dahmer was compulsively driven to have sex with dead men, fantasizing about it at age 14 and finally launching a killing spree aimed at creating zombies to sate his lust, his attorney told jurors Thursday.

"This was not an evil man. He was a sick man," attorney Gerald Boyle said in opening statements at Dahmer's sanity trial.

But prosecutor E. Michael McCann said Dahmer was sane when he ate the flesh of three of his victims, performed sexual acts with some of their severed heads and performed crude brain surgery on others to make them his "sex slaves."

"Mr. Dahmer knew at all times that what he was doing was wrong. This is not the case of a psychotic man," McCann said.

After testimony got under way, two Milwaukee police detectives, Patrick Kennedy and Dennis Murphy, took turns reading parts of Dahmer's 160-page confession.

Kennedy said Dahmer told police he disposed of six victims' bones by soaking them in acid until they became "slushy" and then flushing the remains down the toilet.

Dahmer also said he boiled all but three of his victims' skulls in a cleaning solution to remove the flesh. "He said it takes about an hour to boil a head," Kennedy testified.

Dahmer told them he "would have preferred that the victims stayed alive. However, he felt that it was better to have them dead than to have them leave," Murphy said.

Although most of his victims were black homosexuals, Dahmer told police he didn't choose his victims because of their race or sexual preference. The victims died because they were the ones who "accepted his offer," Murphy testified.

Dahmer told police "he drank to forget the nightmare he was living because of the horrendous acts."

During opening statements, a few relatives of Dahmer's victims wept silently in the courtroom and held each other's hands. Some people had photographs of the slain family members pinned to their clothes.

Two rows behind them, Dahmer's father and stepmother sat expressionless, also holding hands.

Jurors must decide Dahmer's sanity when he killed and dismembered 15 young males in Milwaukee County. Their decision will determine whether he is sent to prison or a mental institution.

Dahmer has pleaded guilty but insane to the 15 slayings and has confessed to killing and dismembering two other young men, one in Ohio, since 1978. He was arrested July 22 when a man who said he'd been attacked took officers to Dahmer's apartment, where they found the body parts of 11 young males.

Boyle, the defense attorney, argued that Dahmer tried to control his sexual fantasies. Dahmer tried to dig up bodies from cemeteries, and he once stole a mannequin from a store.

"He was quiet, shy and alone. . . . He was very isolated. He was depressed and lonely," Boyle said. "Then he started thinking, 'If I can keep them, they won't leave.' And he started thinking about drugging them."

Dahmer wanted "to create zombies, people who would be there for him," Boyle said.

Dahmer's first victim was a teen-age hitchhiker killed at Dahmer's family home in Ohio in 1978, Boyle said.

Then the killing spree started in November 1987, when Dahmer took Steven W. Tuomi, 24, of Milwaukee, to a hotel to drink and have sex, Boyle said.

"When Dahmer woke up, he was laying on top of Mr. Tuomi. Mr. Tuomi was dead," Boyle said.

Dahmer went out and bought a large suitcase, and the next night put the body in it and took the body to Dahmer's grandmother's home.

"He took the body out of the suitcase and slit it open and he masturbated," Boyle said. "And he removed the head and retained it for a long period of time."

McCann agreed that doctors said Dahmer "did take pleasure out of a dead body," but contended that wouldn't qualify a person as insane under Wisconsin law.

McCann quoted a prosecution psychiatrist, Dr. Frederick Fosdal, who examined Dahmer five times after his arrest.

Dahmer told Fosdal "the killing got so routine" that Dahmer didn't have problems keeping a day-to-day routine, McCann said.

McCann said Dahmer was in control of his mind, and cited several things Dahmer did to conceal the killings.

He ground up sleeping pills to drug the men; rearranged his furniture to make room for the killing before going out to find victims; painted human skulls to disguise them; and preyed on men without cars because it would be difficult to dispose of the vehicles, McCann said.

"Does this sound like something he couldn't control?" he asked.

If a jury finds him sane, Dahmer would be sentenced to a mandatory life prison term for each slaying. If found insane, he would be sent to a mental institution where he could petition for release every six months.

Dahmer faces charges in the Ohio death at the close of the Milwaukee proceedings. Wisconsin has no death penalty. Ohio did not have a death penalty in 1978.

Lawyers, Ford call to disclose files

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen lawyers from the Warren Commission joined former President Ford on Thursday in calling for disclosure of CIA files and all other government records on the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

The lawyers, plus a former commission staff member, urged "the broadest possible accessibility" to evidence in the probe of Kennedy's death, which has been the focus of renewed attention since the release in December of the movie "JFK." The film suggests that elements of the government, particularly the Pentagon and the CIA, conspired to murder the president.

"I would like to deny to our critics that we are part and parcel of some kind of coverup," said former commission lawyer Howard Willens, one of the 12. All the commission lawyers who are still living endorsed the request, which was publicized in news conferences in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Des Moines, Iowa, in addition to Washington.

Ford made a similar request in a letter last week to Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, who headed the House Assassinations Committee in the late 1970s. Ford's letter also went to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

"I would . . . urge that all materials in the CIA pertaining to the investigation . . . should be made available to the public," said Ford's letter.

Ford and the 13 want disclosure of the few Warren Commission records that remain sealed, plus release of 400 cubic feet of closed records from the House panel's probe. The National Archives is reviewing the 2 percent of the Warren material that is closed to see how much can be made public. Most of the closed records of the House panel are sealed until the year 2009, while a few are closed until 2029.

The Warren Commission concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing the president. The House panel concluded that Kennedy probably was assassinated as the result of a conspiracy, although it was unable to identify another gunman or the extent of any such conspiracy.

The House committee based its findings on acoustical evidence suggesting that a fourth shot had been fired at Kennedy from a grassy knoll. Ford urged the National Research Council to appoint a panel of scientists to review the acoustical evidence.

"Americans are entitled to know the truth," Ford wrote.

Among the 12 Warren Commission lawyers was David Belin, a former executive director of the Rockefeller Commission, which in 1975 investigated allegations of unlawful CIA activities in the United States. While on the commission, Belin uncovered CIA assassination plots against Cuban leader Fidel Castro. Later, the CIA rejected his request for all agency investigative records involving the Kennedy slaying.

"It's an example of excessive secrecy of our government," Belin told a news conference in Des Moines on Thursday. "It contributes to the decline of trust."

Belin and ex-commission lawyer Wesley J. Liebeler blasted Oliver Stone's movie "JFK."

"I believe today we are experiencing a rebirth of McCarthyism in the false claims that the CIA and Lyndon Johnson were involved in the assassination or the coverup," Belin said in a telephone interview.

"Your movie is a vast tissue of falsehood, deception and distortion," Liebeler said in a letter to Stone released at a news conference in Los Angeles.

"I venture to hope that if the movie industry had any idea of the scale on which your movie corrupts the truth, rather than talk of awards, it would visit upon you the scorn and contempt you so justly deserve," Liebeler wrote.

Stone has been awarded the Golden Globe award by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for "JFK."

In response, Stone said in a statement: "After 28 years of defending the indefensible, the Warren Commission staff members accuse me of corrupting the truth and of irresponsibility. But responsible people would have begun an investigation years ago."

Lawyer Burt Griffin's Warren Commission work focused on Jack Ruby, who killed Oswald at a Dallas police station.

In urging the release of all records, Griffin said he's always questioned whether there might have been another way that Ruby could have entered the building and whether someone in the police department might have let him in.

"I think we have to look at this concern about the death of President Kennedy and indeed at any political assassination as a continuing and ongoing search for the truth," Griffin, now a common pleas judge in Cleveland, told a news conference there.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., was among the 12 former Warren Commission lawyers joining the request.

Tyson's attorneys describe accuser as gold-digger

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Prosecutors portrayed Mike Tyson's accuser as a selfless overachiever dazzled and destroyed by the superstar boxer, a stark contrast to the defense description Thursday of a gold-digger who concocted a story of rape out of anger.

"Our contention is, (she) bears false witness against Mr. Tyson," said Vincent Fuller, an attorney defending the boxer against charges of rape, confinement and criminal deviate conduct. "She found herself treated as a one-night stand, and she has a compelling desire for money."

Fuller appeared to indicate in opening statements that Tyson would testify. If convicted, the 25-year-old fighter could face up to 63 years in prison.

The woman herself took the stand this afternoon and began her testimony by describing how she met Tyson.

Earlier, special prosecutor Greg Garrison outlined her story in his opening statement. He told the eight-man, four-woman jury that the woman agreed to a date with Tyson when they met at a Miss Black America pageant rehearsal on July 18. But after the tiring opening ceremonies, she returned to her hotel with a roommate and went to sleep.

The women were awakened about 1:30 a.m. when Tyson called and pleaded with her to go sightseeing and talk with him in his limousine, Garrison said. She relented, and accompanied him to his hotel suite only after he said he needed to make a quick phone call, the prosecutor said.

In Tyson's room, they chatted and watched a Western on television, but Tyson's tone abruptly changed, Garrison said.

"You're turning me on," the prosecutor quoted the boxer as saying. "She said, 'What? I don't know why you think we came up here. . . . I've got to use the bathroom, and then I want to go.'"

When the woman emerged from the bathroom, she found Tyson on the bed clad only in his underwear, Garrison said.

The boxer "pins her down like a rag doll and peels her clothes off with one hand. That fast, she was stark naked, lying underneath a 220-pound boxing champ, begging to get up," the attorney said.

"Don't fight me, don't fight me," the prosecutor quoted Tyson as saying.

Fuller indicated that Tyson will testify in his own defense, saying, "He will tell you when he engages in sex it is not unusual for his partner" to use the bathroom beforehand.

Kycia Johnson, one of the woman's roommates at the Miss Black America Pageant, testified that when the woman returned from her date with Tyson, she said, "He's such a creep. He's such a jerk," and stated that he had tried to rape her.

In the days after the alleged attack, the formerly bubbly, talkative woman became withdrawn and distant, Johnson said.

"I asked her what happened, and she said she went to the hospital because 'Mike raped me,'" Johnson testified.

She said the woman explained that she had at first used the word "tried" because "I was scared and didn't think anyone was going to believe me."

Fuller said the woman consented to sex with Tyson, then became outraged when he said he was too tired to walk her downstairs to the limousine afterwards.

"You can see that was rude. But, more importantly, it was devastating to (the woman)," Fuller said, suggesting that she immediately began to plot her retaliation against Tyson.

"She leaves in anger — not because she had been raped, but because she had been disillusioned," the attorney said.

Garrison described the woman as a high school honor student and Sunday school teacher who worked with retarded children and was Big Sister to a foster child. She came from a family of boxing fans, and was thrilled when she met Tyson and he paid special attention to her.

After she returned from pageant, she slept with her mother because she was plagued by nightmares, Garrison said.

AGRICULTURE

Number of farm owners decrease

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's farmland has fewer owners than at any other time in this century, and lawmakers and environmentalists say the trend poses troubling questions about stewardship of the soil and control of the food supply.

The Agriculture Department estimates that 2.95 million people and organizations own 833 million acres of private farmland.

But only 4 percent of the owners — approximately 124,000 — hold nearly half, said the recent report by USDA's Economic Research Service.

The report also found that more than 40 percent is held by owners or organizations that don't operate the farms themselves. As a result, many owners have little direct contact with farming or ranching.

While total farmland acreage today is only slightly more than in 1900, the average farm has tripled in size. And while there were 5.7 million farms at the beginning of the century, there were only 2 million farms remaining by 1988, USDA said.

If current trends continue, there should be 1.7 million farms and 2.7 million owners by the year 2000, USDA said.

The concentration of farmland owners means an even smaller minority of the overall population will be making decisions about land use, conservation and resource quality. And, as USDA notes, farmland is increasingly called upon for non-agricultural uses such as recreation, scenery, erosion control, waste containment, fuel, wildlife and rural residences.

Ken Cook, vice president for policy at the Center for Resource Economics, a non-profit research and publishing organization, said the concentration of ownership and the increase in farm size means fewer people will be taking care of ever-bigger parcels of land.

And that, he said, raises questions about whether there are enough people on the land for adequate stewardship.

"Big is usually not as good, in meticulous stewardship of the soil, as small," agrees Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains.

The separation of ownership from management could also be a problem in safeguarding the environment, Cook said.

"You have more non-farmer landlords having at best a detached interest in the day-to-day quality of the land," he said. And those non-operator owners may not recognize good or bad land use.

Cook said some studies suggest tenants manage the land as if it were their own, while other research shows it could be a problem.

"It raises questions — there's a detachment from the land. They're not handing it on to the next generation, they're renting it for a period of time," he said.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., the chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development, blames the dwindling number of farmers on the Reagan-Bush market-driven farm policies of the past decade.

"What we're seeing is a phasing out of family oriented agriculture as we've known it in the past to basically a few owners with deep pockets," English said.

"And if this process should continue, we'll end up with those with the deepest pockets, and they're the corporations. And you can bet they won't farm for a loss," he said.

English said that could mean higher prices for consumers, as corporate farmers would "literally have the country by the throat, demanding what they wish for the commodities."

USDA's analysis, however, shows corporations represented only 3 percent of total owners in 1988, although they held about 15 percent of the land.

English, however, fears the trend toward corporate farming could accelerate with the graying of the farm population.

According to the Census Bureau, the average age of a farm operator in 1987 was 52. Farmers under the age of 35 represented just over 13 percent of U.S. farm operators in 1987, while operators over 55 accounted for 45 percent of the total.

English insists that reversing the trend will have to start with the White House.

"The country really has to determine whether it wants its food and fiber produced by family farmers and, if so, they have to make it possible for young people and new farmers to be able to survive."

Oat farmers lose money despite demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are angry that they're losing money growing oats while other countries cash in on U.S. consumer demand for a healthy and increasingly popular food linked to lower cholesterol.

"What we have in the United States is a very serious situation for oats," said Pat Henderson, executive director of the American Oat Association in Minneapolis.

She said some oat processors already have moved offshore to be closer to their foreign sources as U.S. farmers scale back oat production and turn to more lucrative feed grains such as corn.

"We're losing this ability to grow what we need in this country and ... that has the potential in any commodity of hurting the entire country," said Henderson, whose association represents all segments of the industry from producers to processors.

"Everything seems to be out of whack," said Rep. Timothy J. Penny, D-Minn., a member of the House Agriculture Committee from one of the nation's top oat-producing states. "Nothing seems to work the way it's supposed to work."

Despite the increasing consumer demand for oatmeal and oat bran, U.S. farmers are growing fewer oats as prices tumble below the cost of production and growers compete with rising imports.

While the decline in U.S. oat production may not be felt at the supermarket, farmers are angry at the amount of heavily subsidized imports.

And agribusinesses that store, transport or process oats say they're missing opportunities to handle the increased consumer demand.

Larry Mitchell remembers when more than a dozen pickup trucks would ring his Dallas-area farm at harvest time, waiting to fill up on oats directly from the combine.

But the trucks and cars and the local horse owners with the empty 55-gallon drums started disappearing a few years ago.

"My customers started drying up because they could purchase oats at the feed store, in the bag, cheaper than I could raise them," said Mitchell, who used to devote as many as 500 acres to oats and is now the director of federal-state relations for the American Agriculture Movement.

Another North Texas farmer, Ralph Stelzer of Celina, said he also was forced to switch to other crops because he could no longer make a go of oats.

"I almost had to quit raising them entirely because of the imported Swedish oats — they can ship and sell them cheaper than we can raise them," Stelzer said. "I have some in the bin from last year but I haven't sold a grain."

Stelzer is angry that while his oats fetch less than $1.50 a bushel (32 pounds), consumers spend that much for a one-pound package of rolled oats or oat bran in the grocery store.

"The imports have come in and just destroyed our prices," says David Senter, national director of the American Agriculture Movement. "Imported oats could very well not meet the standards we produce under."

According to Henderson, domestic oats production has fallen from 510 million bushels in 1981-82 to a projected 1991-92 harvest of 260 million bushels.

At the same time, human consumption has jumped from 56 million bushels to 96 million bushels, while imports have gone from 2 million a decade ago to 71 million bushels in 1990-91 and an estimated 65 million bushels in 1991-92. Higher oat stocks are cited for the dip in imports.

The use of oats as animal feed has varied over the years, due to the price relationship of oats to other feed grains, said Henderson of the oat association.

It's consumer demand, however, that "really changed the whole picture for oats" in the late 1980s, she said.

That's when the initial studies found that oatmeal and oat bran were effective in lowering cholesterol. And now, agribusiness giant ConAgra Inc. plans to use an oat bran product, LEANesse, in a lower-fat ground beef.

Farmers say that for them, turning a healthy crop into a profitable one will take higher government support prices and cracking down on imports.

"We feel it's time to bring oat production back here," Henderson said. "There's no reason we can't be growing all the oats we need in this country."

TDA livestock breaks record

AUSTIN (AP) — Sheep made up a majority of last year's record-breaking 1.3 million head of livestock shipped through the Texas Department of Agriculture's export pens, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry says.

During 1991, total exports reached an all-time high of 1,317,210 head, with a value of $202 million.

The shipments included about 812,000 sheep, 327,000 hogs, 117,000 cattle, 56,000 goats and 3,700 horses.

Heavy rains could rob soil of nutrients

It would be nice to have a simple formula for assessing the degree of fertilizer nutrient losses resulting from the heavy rains which drenched the state recently. There is no easy way to estimate these losses because of a number of factors involved. We do know that nitrogen is by far the nutrient of major concern. If only a small amount of nitrogen was applied before the rains, along with phosphorus and other nutrients, total nutrient losses may be relatively small unless significant surface erosion occured.

Kiker

However, if all, or most of the annual nitrogen was already applied, losses could be significant enough to require additional nitrogen fertilization at planting, or at least sidedressed within 30 days following emergence of the crop.

The amount of nitrogen lost is influenced by the soil texture, the degree of soil saturation and how long soils were subjected to flooding. Losses from leaching are generally minimal in heavy textured soils (clays, loamy clays, etc.), but can be significant on sandy and sandy loam soils. Losses resulting from denitrification can be a major avenue of nitrogen loss in heavy textured soils and will vary with duration and degree of saturation.

If all or most of the nitrogen was applied prior to the rains, Texas A&M specialists are suggesting that you submit a soil sample to their laboratories to assess the residual nitrate-nitrogen in the soil just prior to planting, or preferably 10 days to two weeks before the optimum time to sidedress. This test costs $2 and is for nitrate-nitrogen only.

Test results and crop condition will be very useful in determining the amount of sidedress nitrogen to apply. In most cases, additional sidedress nitrogen suggested will equal from 20 to 50 percent of the normal annual rate for a given crop yield goal. More may be needed on sandy soils. Only under extreme conditions will losses approach 100 percent.

Soil test bags and sample information sheets can be obtained by calling the local county Extension office at 687-1351.
