Single-member district lawsuit to be filed

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A suit calling for single-member districts on the municipal level and naming the city of Midland as defendant is expected to be filed in district court here Thursday afternoon, the Reporter-Telegram has learned.

Rolando Rios, an attorney with Southwest Voter Registration Education Project in San Antonio, has prepared the suit for LULAC vs. the City of Midland.

He said this morning from his San Antonio office that there are more plaintiffs in the suit, but he declined to list them. LULAC is the League of United Latin American Citizens.

A news conference will be held at 5:30 p.m. Thursday on the steps at Midland County Courthouse.

Edia Hernandez, secretary for the LULAC organization in Midland, said other groups had been working on the suit since December and LULAC became involved in February. It was during a meeting of the organizations about two weeks ago that the decision to file the suit was made, she said.

Midland is one of the few communities of this size that doesn't have single member districts for its city council, according to Ms. Hernandez. Rios pointed out that Waco, Lamesa, Lubbock, Big Spring, Odessa, Dallas, Fort Worth, Victoria and Corpus Christi are a few of the Texas cities that have gone to the single member system.

"Lubbock just elected two minorities for the first time in its history and they are working out well," he said.

The group could have presented its proposal to the City Council and requested it be taken to the voters as a charter amendment, according to City Attorney Joe Nuessle, who noted that such a proposal was defeated in 1977.

Ms. Hernandez said the issue of single member districts was brought up several times in March during the city election campaigns, and all the candidates had said they preferred the current at-large elections.

Because of those views, "we saw no sense in approaching the council," she said.

Nuessle said the proposal defeated on April 2, 1977, by a vote of 1,635 to 5,007 called for two at-large councilmen and the mayor to be elected at-large. Then four councilmen would be elected on a district basis. In essence, the council would have been expanded by one.

The city will defend its form of at-large elections, said Nuessle.

In his opinion, the current form of government is more democratic than a district election. "Anyone in town can run for any seat on the council, and everyone in town can vote for everyone on the ballot. To me, that's a more democratic form of government.

"You can get factionalized with single member districts," said Nuessle. "Councilmen could get at odds with each other in spending public funds. Where you're representing all of Midland you look at the whole community. You're more responsive to the entire community."

Ms. Hernandez disagreed. "I think the whole city will benefit. If we were being represented we wouldn't have to have special meetings on Hidalgo Park," she said, referring to recent meetings on planning improvements for the east-side park.

"I don't think they (councilmen) would be so closed minded that they couldn't see the issues for the city as a whole."

Rios said he has heard the "factionalism" argument often and called it a "red herring. I don't think it holds water. Congress is elected by districts. You have more responsive government for all parts of the city.

Missile delivery 'concerns' Israel

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens is registering his concern over the delivery of 400 U.S. anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia despite assurances of "strict safeguards" to keep the Stingers from terrorists.

The deal authorized Tuesday by President Reagan permits the Saudis to deploy the missiles anywhere on their territory or on tankers carrying oil through the Persian Gulf. "They are purely defensive in every sense of the word," said Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman.

But having faced Saudi arms in four Mideast wars, Israel is worried the missiles might be trained on them, fall into the hands of rebels if the monarchy is overthrown or be taken over by terrorists.

However, the sale is final and cannot be reversed by Congress since Reagan invoked his emergency powers, so Arens does not plan to dwell on the issue in a meeting with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and at a lunch at the Israeli Embassy.

U.S. arms sales was the likely topic at the luncheon, and top Pentagon and State Department officials in the security field will attend.

Besides, U.S.-Israeli relations are warm, and the two governments are making unpublicized but steady headway on military cooperation in the Middle East. "We're expecting a judicious exposition," said a State Department official before Arens arrived.

He said Israel shares U.S. concerns about the war in the Persian Gulf and a potential decline in oil supplies throughout the world.

The Stingers are shoulder-fired missiles with a range of three miles and can be used against low-flying attack planes. "It's an answer to an emergency situation in the Gulf that threatens Saudi shipping and Saudi shipping lanes," Speakes said.

However, a diplomat who declined to be identified doubted the Stingers would make a difference. He said they were useless aboard a ship and ineffective against planes because of their short range.

Americans will train the Saudis to operate the missiles and will fly tankers to refuel the F-15 jet fighters sold to the Saudis during the Carter administration. In addition to the Stingers, Reagan ordered an American-piloted KC-10 tanker to help in refueling Saudi fighter planes.

NATO leaders meet, discuss Soviet drive

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Foreign ministers of the 16 NATO nations are meeting informally in a secluded 18th century mansion on Chesapeake Bay after hearing U.S. and West European leaders accuse the Soviet Union of a reckless and intimidating drive to achieve military superiority.

"Relations have gone down hill and we do not bear the responsibility," said French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson on Tuesday as he addressed the opening of a three-day meeting marking the 35th anniversary of the North Atlantic Alliance.

The Soviets, said Vice President George Bush, have laid down "a trail of adventurism" stretching from Asia to Africa to Latin America.

In their talks at Wye Plantation, a 23-bedroom Georgian mansion on a Maryland peninsula stretching into the waters of the Chesapeake, the 16 foreign ministers will discuss not only the state of East-West relations but such immediate issues as the Iran-Iraq war, with its threat to the flow of oil to the West.

Secretary of State George Shultz, the host for the first NATO parley to be held in the United States since 1969, is expected to use the private meetings to brief his colleagues on the U.S. decision to rush Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia to help protect shipping.

Also on the agenda is the postponement by the Netherlands of a decision to deploy 48 American-built cruise missiles to help counter the expanding force of Soviet SS-20 medium-range nuclear-tipped missiles.

In his opening address in the Dean Acheson auditorium of the State Department — a room named for the secretary of state who presided over the founding of NATO in 1949 — Cheysson said the immediate cause of East-West tensions is the deployment of Soviet medium-range missiles aimed at Western Europe.

Windowpane project authorized

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Another windowpane area in south Midland may be platted, fitted with water and sewer services and annexed to the city of Midland.

But other than the laying of water and sewer lines, there is no money available or plans for a major neighborhood revitalization project such as is nearing completion in Windowpane I area in south central Midland.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Tuesday authorized Parkhill, Smith & Cooper Inc., an firm of engineers, architects and planners, to make application for a one-year maximum of $500,000 in a federal funds to provide water and sewer services to part of Windowpane II in southeast Midland. The funding is available through the Texas Community Development Program.

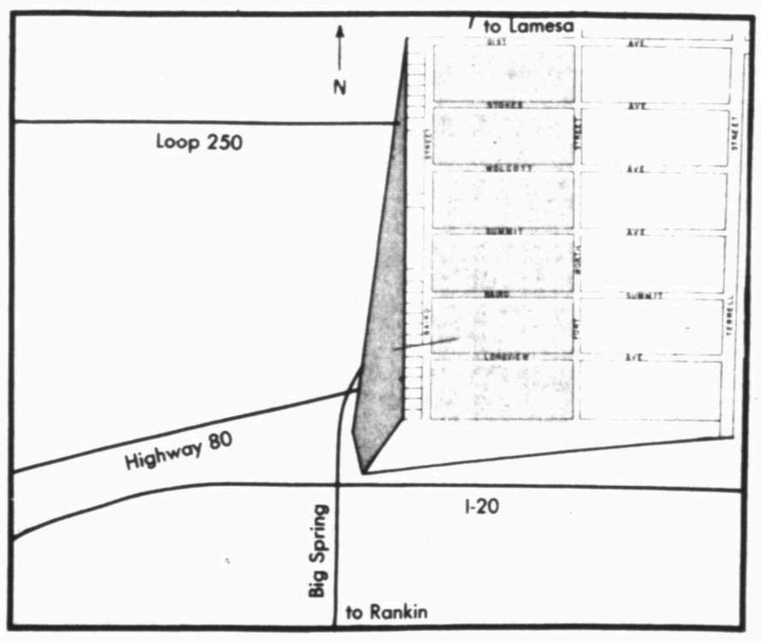

The commissioners also approved $20,000 for salaries for the project engineer, Bill Harral, and inspector, Ronnie McDonald, if federal funding for Windowpane II is realized.

Three years ago, the county received $1.6 million in federal funds, then available through the Community Development Block Grant, for revitalizing Windowpane I, a 300-acre area north of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and midway between the Rankin Highway and Cotton Flat Road.

THE WINDOWPANE I plan called for the laying of water and sewer lines, repairing weathered and neglected houses, rebuilding others, clearing lots and putting in hard-topped streets, curbing and guttering, and and filling in cesspools. Funding was by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). That would be the case in Windowpane II, except the federal funds are now administered though the Texas Department of Community Affairs and its Texas Community Development Program.

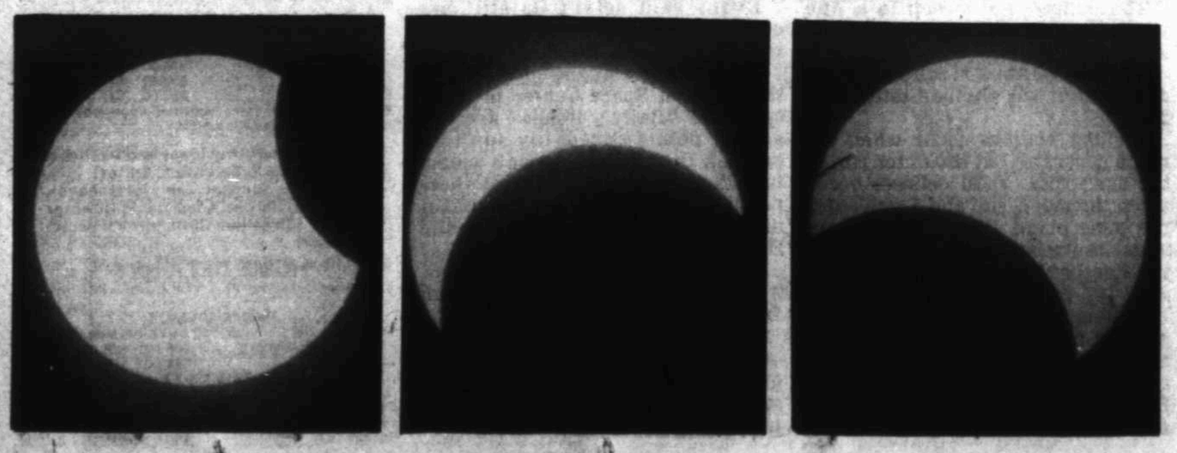

While Parkhill, Smith & Cooper is preparing the application for Midland County, the county commissioners are seeking a commitment from the Midland City Council that the city will annex the six blocks of the Windowpane II after that low- to moderate-income area has been furnished with city water and sewer services. The City Council and the Commissioners' Court are to meet in a joint session in City Hall at 9 a.m.

Fair skies forecast for Basin Thursday

From Staff and Wire Reports

When the moon passed in front of the sun today, it was the last time anything would block the sun's rays for at least a day or two; skies will be fair tonight and Thursday. Tonight will also be warmer, with a low in the low 60s and winds from the south and southeast at 5-15 mph. Thursday's high will be in the mid 90s, with winds from the south at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tuesday's high was 78, far below the record for the date of 104, set in 1938. The record low of 46 was set the year before, in 1937; today's low was 56.

STATE

A high-pressure dome moving through Texas in the wake of a cold front brought record low temperatures to the Lone Star State today, but forecasters predicted a warming trend.

An unseasonably chilly 57 degrees was recorded at Jefferson County Airport in the Golden Triangle, which encompasses Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Flood warnings were posted throughout the Northeast today as streams and rivers gorged by up to 5 inches of rain this week rose over their banks, while the desert Southwest braced for more broiling heat and the Tennessee Valley shivered in record-breaking low temperatures.

Clearing skies were reported over the Southeast today, cheering astronomers and amateurs gathered to witness the nation's last major solar eclipse this century. Clear skies also were forecast today for the western two-thirds of the country.

In the Northeast, however, the National Weather Service said viewing conditions for the celestial phenomena were likely to be dim at best as thunderstorms were expected to rattle the region for one more day before moving out into the Atlantic.

'Graveyard' off coast of Bahrain

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer

MAMANA, Bahrain — Three crippled ships, watched over by a fleet of salvage tugs, lie 70 miles northeast of Bahrain in a section of the Persian Gulf that shipping companies are calling the "graveyard" of the Iran-Iraq war.

Moored within six miles of each other are two Saudi Arabian-registered tankers hit by Iraqi missiles and a Liberian oil-chemical carrier struck by Iranian missiles.

On a visit to the area this week on a Bahrainian coast guard boat, a reporter saw huge blackened gashes in the ships and melted, bent superstructures.

Salvage tugs were scattered nearby, their crews watching with foam sprayers in case fire erupted anew as hundreds of thousands of barrels of crude oil from the Saudi ships, the Safina al-Arab, and the al-Ahood, were transferred to other ships alongside. The Safina al-Arab was attacked April 25, and the al-Ahood, May 7.

The Liberian ship Chemical Venture was empty, heading for Kuwait for a load of naphta when attacked on May 24.

At least 19 ships have been reported attacked in the gulf by Iranian and Iraqi warplanes since January. The attacks have sharply increased since April, prompting fears that the war could expand to other gulf nations and nations that import oil from the region.

In the triangular "graveyard," a gash the size of a bus had been opened in one ship. The sea washed in and out of a gap that opened up when a bomb went through a deck and exploded on the waterline. A 30-foot-wide hole had been punched in a billboard-size "no smoking" sign on the chemical carrier.

Black streaks of thick oil, its stench evident from a mile away, coated the waters.

Traffic through the gulf waterway was down this week, with shipping unions deciding to boycott the gulf waters as long as the tanker war continued.

A Filipino on a salvage tug said the only aircraft he had seen in recent days was a helicopter "with someone taking pictures." A U.S. warship had cruised by, he said.

The United States has a five-ship force led by the flagship La Salle stationed in the gulf, and another force led by the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk in the Arabian Sea, off the coast of Oman.

Britain has a three-ship fleet, and the French navy has some vessels rotating in and out of the gulf waters.

U.S. ships often dock in Bahrain's territorial waters for fuel and supplies. The USS Luce, a guided missile cruiser equipped with 40 surface-to-air missiles, and the USS Boone, a guided missile frigate, were docked off Bahrain for supplies this week.

Tankers docked at Bahrain harbor were clustered around the U.S. warships.

Sailers from ships that ply the gulf waters said they often encountered military vessels on their trips through the oil-rich waterway.

"As soon as you approach Oman, there is always a navy vessel as well as spotter planes which could be checking that we are not deballasting and polluting gulf waters," said Phillip Andrew, captain of the 90,000-ton Australian tanker William Dampier, anchored in Bahrain.

Because of its strategic location near the gulf's gateway, the Strait of Hormuz, Oman has been beefing up its naval units with financial aid from allies in the Gulf Cooperation Council — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain.

Iran protests attack at nuclear reactor site

The Associated Press

The International Atomic Energy Agency said today it had received a complaint from Iran protesting an Iraqi air attack on the site of an unfinished nuclear reactor.

A source in Vienna, Austria — the headquarters of the U.N.-affiliated agency — said there was no damage to the plant at Bushehr and there were no fissionable materials at the site when the attack occurred March 25.

Construction of the reactor was started under the late Shah of Iran but was stopped by the regime of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Iran has been at war with Iraq since September 1980.

The source, who declined to be identified, saidexperts from the West German firm which had been building the reactor went to the site this spring at the request of Iran government and were scheduled to complete feasibility studies this fall on the future of the project.

Hans-Friedrich Meyer, a spokesman for the atomic energy agency, said the Iranian complaint was addressed to the agency's Director General Hans Blix but had not been discussed in the Board of Governors because its last session was in February.

MISSILES

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said the refueling "will take place in Saudi airspace, most likely over the land mass."

Reagan said at a news conference last week the possibility of direct U.S. intervention in the 44-month war between Iran and Iraq was "very slight."

Besides delivering the missiles and adding the tanker to three already at the Saudis' disposal, the administration is speeding delivery of fuel tanks, ammunition and spare parts.

The Saudis also requested bomb racks for their 62 F-15 jets, but the United States declined, officials here said.

The Pentagon said the Saudis will pay $40 million for the missiles and the cost of U.S. personnel training the Saudis to use the weapons, which carry fragmentation warheads and home in on the heat generated by the engines of attacking planes. The Stinger is about 5 feet long and weighs about 34.5 pounds.

PROJECT

Tuesday to discuss Windowpane II and a non-related issue involving Odessa andMonahans Draw.

Already, Midland city water and sewer main lines run in the Windowpane II area.

The commissioners' intent was to lay water and sewer lines in a 12-block section of 103 households south of Midland Freshman High School in southeast Midland.

But Gary Harris, a professional engineer for Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, said cost of installing water and sewer lines in that 12-block area of 329 people would be between $850,000 and $875,000, and the one-year grant would allow a maximum of $500,000. If channeled to Midland, that funding would be available for 1985.

"WE'RE LIMITED," Harris said of the $500,000, which would finance installing water lines in the 12-block area but would be inadequate for the laying of sewer lines. He said the city would not accept a "piecemeal" improvement on the area for annexation purposes. So, the commissioners opted to seek the $500,000 in federal funds to install water and sewer services in the western six blocks of the area. If that competitively-sought funding is obtained for 1985, the commissioners indicated they would seeking a like grant for adding water and sewer services to the eastern six-block area in 1986. That application would be made in 1985.

"That's a very transient area," Harris said of Windowpane II. The United States census in 1980 reflected that 203 people lived in the area, which is dotted with cesspools, shacks, trailer houses, abandoned cars, junk and sub-standard water wells. Many are contaminated.

Then, a survey conducted by Midland City-County Health Department in March 1984 indicated 290 people resided in the area. And last week's survey by a crew put together by Jerrie Ann Westmoreland reflected 329 people in 103 households were living in Windowpane II. Ms. Westmoreland is coordinator of the Windowpane I project and is director of the federal-rent subsidy housing program for Midland County.

THE 12-BLOCK Windowpane II area is bordered on the west by Baird Street, on the east by Terrell Street, on the north by Gist Avenue and on the south a block south of Longview Avenue. The area is east of Midland Dorm and Rankin Highway and is just north of Interstate Highway 20.

The western six-block area scheduled in the first phase of the Windowpane II project is flanked on the west and east by Baird and Fort Worth streets and takes in portions of Gist, Stokes, Wolcott, Summit, Baird and Longview avenues. The eastern half extends to Terrell Street.

"Get your water and sewer in there (the western half)," suggested Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, "and come back the next year (to take care of the eastern half)."

"I have yet to hear any flak or statements against it," Davis said. "It may be out there."

Arguments for or against the Windowpane II project are to be aired in a public hearing at 6:30 p.m. June 7 at 200 E. Longview Ave.

At least one Windowpane II area resident, Bill Price, is opposed to the project.

"I DON'T WANT to get annexed," he said after the commissioners had agreed to seek federal funding. "Plus, I don't want to get a (city) permit everytime I turn around."

Price, who said he owns six acres in the neighborhood and has good well water and an efficient septic-tank system, said the annexation would raise his taxes by 40 percent. He said he wants to keep the rural country flavor to his property.

In noting there would be "some problems" with the annexation, Price said some people might want the annexation "for some other reason," but was not specific. Some residents in the neighborhood are against the annexation, since they, then under city ordinances, would not be able to keep poultry and livestock in their yards.

A STUDY, made by sanitarians Alice Cone and Jim Roberts of the city-county health department, indicated that 14 of the 46 water wells in the area tested satisfactorily, 17 tested unsatisfactorily and 17 wells were not satisfactory for testing due to plugged or crudded up wellheads or non-working water pumps.

"The water out there is drinkable," Ms. Westmoreland said, "but some of the wells have not been taken care of."

A report, prepared in March by Dr. James M. Humphreys, director of the Midland City-County Health Department, reflected the blight of the area.

"The picture of this 'windowpane' area...is that of substandard housing, water supply, and sewage disposal amid considerable organic and inorganic refuse, and roaming livestock," Humphries said in his report to County Judge Bill Ahders and Mayor G. Thane Akins.

"While all of these items are potential health problems," he wrote, "only the water supply and sewage disposal appear to be the most emergent...These findings...suggest poor care of the wells, such as lack of chlorination, inadequate casing...or poor methods of delivering water from the wells to the house."

Bacterial growth and coliform organisms were found in some of the wells.

"Evidence for a serious health problem due to sewage-contaminated water supply is lacking at this time," Humphreys' report said. "...These two problems are potential health hazards, and should be corrected as soon as possible."

Humphreys recommended that the area be provided with muncipal water and sewer services; assistance in the chlorination of the well waters in the meantime, and proper maintenance of the wells, and an education program on maintenance of the "illegal" cesspools.

Humphreys' report said the finding "does not suggest, however, that there is actual sewage contamination" of the water-bearing formation of the wells.

SUIT

"Factionalism. What does it mean?" he said. "Does it mean you can't approve a budget because some district wants a fire station?"

The five city councilmen and mayor now live in an area ranging as far south as Community Lane — which is located in the center of Midland — to Tattenham Corner in far northwest Midland. Mayor G. Thane Akins and Counilman Bart Hotchkiss live the closest to east Midland, and they are west of A Street.

Ms. Hernandez said residents of south and east Midland have run for City Council in previous elections and have lost. "It has been proven Anglos won't vote for minorities in Midland," she said.

Ms. Hernandez said LULAC was started in Midland about a year ago as a means to raise scholarships to advance their people through education. "We were sitting quiet but we were getting blamed by the city for the lawsuit. We didn't get involved in it until February. We thought as long as we were getting blamed for it we should get involved."

She would like to see a compromise on the lawsuit rather than drag it through the courts over a long period of time.

"It's about time we woke up," said Ms. Hernandez. "If we don't speak out for ourselves no one else will. We don't want things given to us. We want to earn them.

"I was born here. Midland is a good city. I want it to be fair to everyone. This suit is not a reflection on the city fathers. I like some of those guys. Everyone just has to fight for what they believe in," she said.

Texan among 'addicts' watching eclipse

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — George Ellis, a self-proclaimed eclipse addict, says the astronomical phenomenon may not be as scientifically useful as it once was.

But he adds that when amateurs see the moon cover most of the sun's disk, the rare experience can be addictive.

Ellis, an engineer at General Dynamics here, has traveled to Mauritania on the west coast of Africa and twice near the Arctic Circle in Canada to watch eclipses.

He'll view the eclipse today in Atlanta, Ga., where thousands of others, including scientists and eclipse junkies, will gather to watch and study the "annular" — or almost total — eclipse.

The eclipse will sweep in a line just under Texas and then from Louisiana to Virginia.

The next annular eclipse is not due to cross the United States until 2012.

Annular eclipses occur when the moon covers all but the outer rim of the sun's disk. Total eclipses occur when the moon, sun and Earth enter the same plane. Partial eclipses are when the moon even slightly clips the line between the earth and the sun.

Although amateurs like Ellis are gearing up for the event, scientists are watching more with interest than with enthusiasm, said David Evans, an astronomer at the University of Texas at Austin and a spasoned eclipse watcher.

Evans said scientists still use eclipses to study some questions, including Bailey's Beads.

Paul Maley, a flight controller at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said "Baily's Beads" are lingering points caused by sunlight pouring through the moon's mountains and valleys. Maley said these points are still a phenomenon that may have a relationship to the Earth's climate.

Maley will photograph the beads from Louisiana.

Ellis, who will be joined by two other Texans, also will be photographing the event in Georgia and said these events bring other eclipse junkies together.

White endorses Mondale

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Mark White thinks it's time to "harmonize" the Democratic Party and gear up for the November race against President Reagan, so he's ended any suspense about a presidential endorsement by backing Walter Mondale.

"With Walter Mondale as the nominee, we will offer the American people the best choice of either party to become our next president," White said at a news conference Tuesday.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson were fine candidates, but the former vice president had a "wealth of experience" and "proven leadership and depth of vision to chart a bold new course for America," the governor said.

White's decision is "a real shot in the arm," according to Mondale campaign chairman Jim Johnson. "We believe he will be influential with other governors around the country and we're very encouraged that he saw fit to make this endorsement now because it will allow us to get started with his help in planning our Texas campaign against Ronald Reagan."

Mondale called the endorsement "terrific."

Walter Mondale

Mark White

Martin Frost, the co-chair of Hart's Texas campaign, was not surprised by the action, saying he assumed it would happen "sooner or later." Frost said he interpreted the use of White aide Dwayne Holman by the Mondale campaign in Texas as a "pretty good indication", the governor eventually would back Mondale.

In May, Mondale won the Democratic primary and the state's caucuses to select delegates to the convention. Hart finished second.

White denied the announcement Tuesday was timed to boost Mondale's sagging campaign efforts in the West, where Hart has scored primary victories. "It seemed like a real good thing to do today," he said.

The governor hailed Mondale for knowing "the inner workings of foreign policy and national defense that can only be obtained through experience."

White accused the Reagan administration of "negligence in dealing with the urgent problems of the Rio Grande Valley and the absolute recalcitrance...in dealing with the drought situation over this past year in trying to get relief for ranchers in West Texas.

"They try to block every effort," White said. "These facts will not be forgotten by the people of Texas."

The governor also ripped the president's economic policies, saying the huge federal deficit could spell disaster, perhaps before the November elections, but certainly in the next four years.

"We have listened to President Reagan and this administration tell us the economic health of this nation is one of strength and strong recovery," White said. "Yet every signal we see existing today points to the fact that we have extremely serious problems facing the nation over the next four years because of policies that were adopted, supported, passed and signed into law by the current administration."

Doggett, Hance will debate on TV

HARLINGEN (AP) — State Sen. Lloyd Doggett and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance are to face off in a televised debate here tonight, less than three days before the Democratic runoff for U.S. Senate.

The debate is the only one between the May 5 primary and Saturday's runoff. It is being sponsored by Harlingen station KGBT and Dallas station KERA.

"The candidates seem to feel this debate is pretty significant and will be a real factor in the outcome Saturday," said KGBT news director David Merrill, who organized the debate.

It will be seen live by viewers in the Rio Grande Valley and Dallas-Fort Worth, and other stations are taping the debate for delayed broadcast.

"KERA reaches a third of the state on cable in addition to roughly 600,000 people in the four counties we reach," Merrill said.

The debate was offered via satellite to television stations throughout Texas, and Merrill said broadcasters in Amarillo, Beaumont, El Paso, Lubbock, Waco, San Antonio and Houston have agreed to carry segments.

Hance and Doggett will answer questions posed by panelists KERA reporter Bob Ray Sanders, Dallas Morning News Washington correspondent Mark Nelson, newsman Rog Mulder of Austin and KGBT reporter Linda White. KGBT anchorwoman Gloria Campos will moderate.

Man dies trying to save nephew

PLANO (AP) — A 39-year-old man, who friends say cared too much for the safety of others, died after saving his nephew from the waters of an area lake.

Don Fowler rescued his 4-year-old nephew, Mark, who had fallen from a ski sled Sunday. But authorities said the elder Fowler, known as a strong swimmer, became exhausted fighting high waves and undercurrents in storm-tossed Lake Lavon.

Members of a search party found his body Tuesday. Officials were awaiting autopsy reports to determine whether Fowler, who had high blood pressure, drowned or died of a heart attack.

Witnesses said Fowler fought the rough waters to swim to the boy, who had fallen off the sled that was being towed by Fowler's boat.

Mark's mother, Karen Fowler, had dived in to help the child but had been knocked under the hull by high waves.

"When Mark saw his mother go under, he began screaming even more so and began swallowing water," said Fowler's sister, Mary Harper. "Before anyone knew it, Don dove in and was swimming after the boy."

Collin County sheriff's investigators said Fowler, a technician at Texas Instruments, talked the boy into getting back on the sled. Relatives in the boat then used the ski rope to pull Mark to safety.

Fowler's wife, Carole, dived from the boat and his brother, James Fowler, swam out from shore to help Fowler, but both were hindered by high waves and could not reach him in time, officials said.

Mrs. Harper said Fowler seemed too exhausted to catch a rope that was tossed to him from the boat. She said he was not wearing a life jacket.

"Don used the boat as a way to get all the family together on weekends," Mrs. Harper said. "He loved his family — so much, in fact, he died for them."

No rose garden welcome for Jackson on return

By EVANS WITT

An Analysis

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The first time Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson returned from a foreign trip, a Rose Garden welcome and live national television coverage awaited his plane from Syria.

But after the second time, all that was waiting for the black civil rights leader on his return from Mexico was the ride from Albuquerque's airport to yet another campaign rally.

Jackson, back Tuesday from his one-day trip out of the country, was firm in his declaration that the mission had achieved its limited goals.

The presidential hopeful said he went to talk and to learn. He met with several high-level Mexican government officials.

Jackson's trip to Mexico inevitably is compared to his trip to Syria that won freedom late last year for captured U.S. flier Robert O. Goodman. When few gave him a chance, Jackson flew to Syria and negotiated with the government for Goodman's release. What followed was a White House reception and applause even from Jackson's opponents.

This time, a spokesman for Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda said officials in Mexico had serious reservations about Jackson's visit and were concerned the government might appear to be meddling in U.S. politics.

He said Mexico did not accept Jackson's request for the visit until late last week. Jackson had hoped to meet President Miguel de la Madrid, but the Mexican official said that was out of the question.

NATION

Jackson said his trip and other moves in foreign affairs do not "break the rhythm of my basic political schedule."

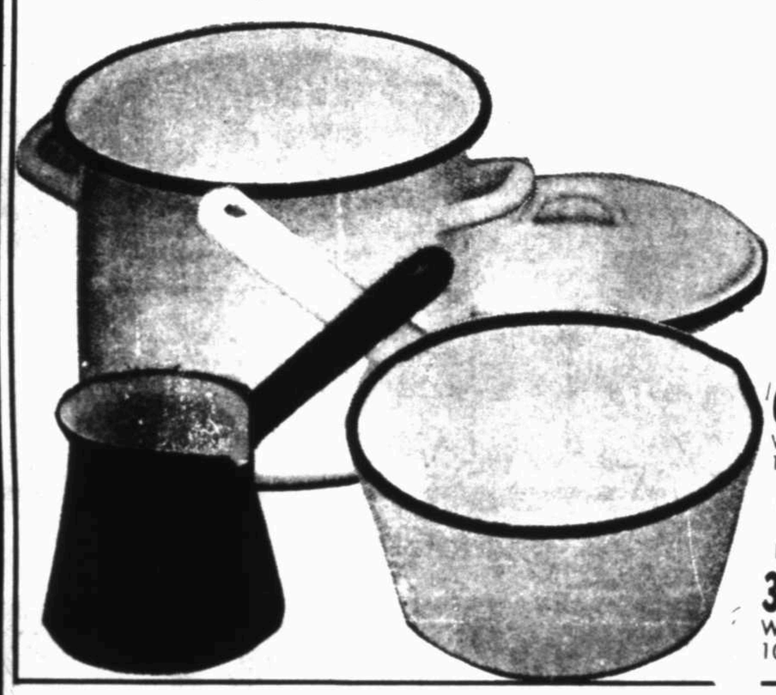

In fact, his emphasis on Mexico, immigration and Central America is aimed particularly at Hispanic voters in California and New Mexico — although Jackson said politics was not the motive for the trip.

"Our peace initiative is bound up more in the moral imperative than just votes," he said in Mexico City on Tuesday before departing.

Hart resurrects Mondale praise; Candidates eye California

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart is invoking Walter Mondale's old praise of him as a "brilliant" senator in new television commercials as all three Democratic presidential hopefuls turn their sights to California and its huge delegate prize.

With the presidential primary season down to its final week, Walter F. Mondale is back in San Francisco after ending his New Jersey campaign, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson was heading for California after stops in New Mexico today.

President Reagan was on a political trip too, meeting with Republican supporters in Colorado late Tuesday after visiting U.S. athletes training for the Olympics. Because of the political meeting, spokesman Larry Speakes said, the president's trip was paid for by the Reagan-Bush campaign, not taxpayers.

Hart, who flies to California today from New Jersey, starts airing new television advertisements this evening — different ads by different producers in the two states.

Hart's California commercials quote a Nov. 9, 1979 speech by then-Vice President Mondale endorsing the Colorado senator's re-election.

"Gary Hart is one of the most decent and compassionate public servants I have ever known in my life. He is brilliant ... If we lost Gary Hart, it could change the course of this entire nation," an announcer quoting Mondale says in the 30-second commercial.

The ads show the "hypocrisy" of Mondale's recent attacks on Hart, says Hart consultant Bill Zimmerman, who produced the commercial.

Zimmerman said Hart is budgeted to spend $335,000 on television advertising. In New Jersey, Hart campaign officials say they will spend another $300,000 or more airing different ads.

Five states hold primaries next Tuesday with 486 delegates at stake. The bulk of them are 306 in California, the biggest delegate state of all, and in New Jersey with 107. Also holding primaries are New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia.

Mondale picked picked up more delegates Tuesday when eight uncommitted delegates in Mississipi and two in Alaska.

De Lorean team queries Hoffman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A defense attorney says he will grill the government's star witness in John Z. De Lorean's drug trial to find out whether he threatened to have the automaker's children killed if De Lorean backed out of a cocaine deal.

"I expect to get into all of the phone conversations and what was said by whom," attorney Howard Weitzman said Tuesday as he pressed his attack on the credibility of James Timothy Hoffman.

Weitzman, who was to continue his cross-examination of Hoffman today, says the drug smuggler-turned-informant threatened De Lorean in at least two tape-recorded phone calls and in another call that Hoffman failed to record.

De Lorean has said that in September 1982, Hoffman warned that his children would be killed — that it would be "a bloody mess" — if he tried to pull out of a $40 million cocaine deal.

In a pre-trial lie-detector test conducted in November, De Lorean said Hoffman told him, "If you withdraw ... we're going to deliver your daughter's head in a shopping bag."

Hoffman and the government say no such threats occurred and contend that De Lorean willingly participated in the planned drug deal in an attempt to save his failing sports car company in Northern Ireland.

De Lorean, 59, is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a bid to save De Lorean Motor Co., which later went bankrupt. He faces up to 72 years in prison if convicted on all counts.

Hoffman, 43, who escaped prison by helping government agents in a "sting" operation, kept his composure as Weitzman challenged his credibility Tuesday.

In his eighth day of testimony and his fourth day of cross-examination, Hoffman balked at suggestions he was a mercenary who profited by selling potential drug cases to the government.

However, he testified that he would have had no means of support if he quit his job as an informant, and said that he remained an informant long after fulfilling his end of the plea bargain that kept him out of prison.

At one point, Hoffman said, he was being paid expenses of about $2,500 to $3,000 a month and was living in homes that rented for $800 to $1,400 a month, with the rent paid by the government.

Weitzman has previously shown that the government paid Hoffman about $65,000 a year in tax-free expenses.

Weitzman tried to show that Hoffman earned his money by suggesting new drug deals to his former smuggling associates and then telling the government to investigate them.

But Hoffman testified that in each case in which he was the chief informant, the other person first brought up drugs.

"And all these people contacted you by coincidence?" asked Weitzman.

"Yes," said Hoffman, adding that Drug Enforcement Administration agent John Valestra urged him to make follow-up calls.

Weitzman implied that Hoffman actually directed the De Lorean case, inventing accusations against the former General Motors executive and promoting the "sting" operation.

Hoffman conceded that Valestra was lukewarm about the De Lorean case when it was first brought to him.

"Mr. Valestra was very skeptical ... skeptical in whether I misinterpreted anything De Lorean told me," Hoffman said.

"So you were going to prove him wrong?" asked Weitzman.

"No," said Hoffman, who insisted that Valestra was in favor of his pursuing De Lorean in person to verify whether the automaker really wanted to be involved in a drug deal.

Hoffman, who admitted smuggling drugs from South America and Asia, testified in four other narcotics cases. In return, he received a sentence of five years' probation in May 1982.

Movie planned about life of automaker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A documentary producer says he has some of the money he needs to make a feature-length dramatic film based on the life of automaker John Z. De Lorean.

Woody Clark, a San Francisco producer, said Tuesday in a telephone interview that he was interviewing screenwriters for the project, which is expected to cost $5 million to $6 million. He declined to say how much of the projected film budget he had in hand or pledged.

De Lorean is on trial in U.S. District Court on charges of conspiring to sell cocaine to save his sports car company.

Clark said the film would chronicle not only De Lorean's drug case, but his early years as an executive at General Motors.

Clark, a former professor at the University of California at Berkeley, has been an independent filmmaker for the past six years. His first film was "The Work Place Hustle," with Edward Asner, about sexual harassment in the workplace.

Group arranges pet care

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP) — Pet owners who become ill, injured or die can rest assured that Rover or Snowball is being well taken care of at a free "Pet Registry" staffed round the clock by volunteers.

The new program will take the worry out of owning a pet for many elderly or single people in Des Moines County, said Dr. D.W. Allgood, a veterinarian and co-founder of the non-profit People Pet Partnership.

Pet owners write out instructions on the care of their animal in case the owner becomes ill or otherwise indisposed. The organization keeps a permanent file of the registry forms and gives owners a billfold-sized card with a 24-hour emergency phone number.

A call to the number starts a volunteer working to see that the pet is taken to a relative, friend or kennel, or is cared for in whatever manner the owner wishes.

"We are not representing that we are going to care for every animal of every person who gets into an emergency. But what we will do is make sure the animal is cared for. If they're registered with us we can say, well, gee, here's what the owner wants done," Allgood said.

Allgood said he believes the free registry will be particularly helpful for elderly people, who often want pets but are afraid they will not be able to care for them.

"For the average older person who is living alone, it becomes harder to maintain their pets. They don't have the social contacts, or a cadre of people at their beck and call, to come help them. The registry is one service that might allow them to keep their pets longer," Allgood said.

The organization, which was founded last year, is dedicated to training and placing pets in elderly care facilities, bringing pets to care facilities to visit with patients, and providing emergency help for people who are suddenly unable to care for their pets.

"The therapeutic effect of animals on the elderly has been strongly documented and we strongly agree," Allgood said. "You can't believe the joy in these people's faces when we bring around a dog that's small enough to hold on a lap, or a litter of kittens."

Pet Registry forms are available at shelters, pounds and veterinarians' offices in Des Moines County. Dr. Allgood said that for the time being he would like to try and limit the registry to county residents.

"It's sort of in the back of our minds that other people may look to us to form groups in their own communities," he said.

Six Block loans normal, aide says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the six unsecured loans the cabinet official and his farming partners received last year are normal and have now mainly been covered by collateral.

The six loans of more than $250,000 on top of four others in 1982 were reported in Block's annual financial disclosure statement.

John Ochs, Block's chief spokesman, said Tuesday the loans were extended by bankers in a normal manner because the agriculture secretary who owns a hog farm near Galesburg, Ill., is a "good customer."

"In the 70s, credit was easy in agriculture," Ochs said. "Now bankers are getting more conservative and asking borrowers to secure their loans. They asked the secretary and he has done that."

On Capitol Hill, some lawmakers have expressed interest in how Block and his partners obtained unsecured loans. Sen. J.James Exon, D-Neb., has said the need for hearings on the subject is "obvious."

The secretary's statement, required by the Ethics in Government Act, listed unsecured loans of at least $1.97 million to more than $2.7 million. Officials are not required to report the precise amount of their debts and holdings but only the ranges.

Block listed overall debt for himself and his partners as $6.62 million to more than $7.45 million. His assets, some held jointly with his wife or his daughter, were given as $2.72 million to more than $3.79 million.

Meanwhile, William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, reported that he gave up more than $320,000 in annual salary and director's fees to leave private industry to head the agency.

Ruckelshaus reported on his financial disclosure statement that he received $373,533 in salary from his former employer, Weyerhaeuser Corp., in 1983, before bonuses, and $21,553 in fees for being a director of six corporations. He said he gave up all of the directorships when he became EPA administrator, a post that pays $72,200 a year.

Ruckelshaus reported assets, some in the names of his children, in a range of $278,009 to $925,000 and liabilities, mostly real estate loans and mortgages, of $115,000 to $300,000.

Earthquake rocks ranches, oil wells

GILLETTE, Wyo. (AP) — An earthquake measuring 5.1 on the Richter scale rocked a thinly populated area of ranches and oil wells but caused no injuries to people or livestock, authorities said.

The quake at 2:18 p.m. Tuesday was centered about 30 miles west of Gillette in the Powder River Basin, said John Minsch of the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

Indicted judge heading for trial

CHICAGO (AP) — The first of four judges indicted along with 13 other people following Operation Greylord, a 3½-year federal corruption probe of the Cook County court system, is heading to trial.

A jury was chosen Tuesday to consider the charges against Judge John M. Murphy, whose trial was to begin today in U.S. District Court.

Murphy, 68, accused of accepting $3,000 in bribes to fix cases, is charged with mail fraud, extortion and conspiracy to participate in racketeering activities in an alleged scheme involving attorneys, a police officer and an unidentified judge.

Women claims arrest was set up

WARE, Mass. (AP) — A police chief labeled "absurd" a woman's claim that her arrest on a drunken driving charge was revenge because she won $874,000 from the town for the death of her husband and daughter.

Debbie Irwin, 25, pleaded innocent Tuesday to driving while intoxicated and was released on her own recognizance.

She was arrested outside the same bar where, according to her suit against the town, police stopped and then let go a suspected drunken driver who later crashed into her family's car, killing her husband and child.

Reagan lost 'sternness' after defeat, son says

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan is a nonconfrontational man who became more easygoing after he lost the GOP presidential nomination to Gerald Ford in 1976, his son says.

"A certain sternness, rarely displayed to friends and family but apparent in photographs — arched eyebrows and set jaw — evaporated" after the defeat, Ron Reagan writes in an article for the June 19 issue of Family Circle magazine. "I've never asked him about this change, and it's entirely possible that he isn't even aware of it.

"His life has been less a race to the top than a voyage of personal fulfillment, a sensibility he has worked hard to instill in his children," the younger Reagan writes.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Country singer Emmy Lou Harris, a winner on the charts with such hits as "One More Bottle of Wine," has scored to the tune of $60,000 in royalties in a federal appeals court decision.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday upheld a lower court ruling that Miss Harris had a right to royalties from a re-release of her "Gliding Bird" album.

The singer recorded six songs — including five she wrote — under a contract with Jay-Gee Record Co. After Jay-Gee filed for bankruptcy in 1971, its trustees sold the album's master tape to Suellen Production, which then transferred its rights to Emus Recordings.

Emus re-released a duplicate of the album, with Roulette Records licensed to handle foreign sales. Miss Harris never received any royalties from the three companies or from co-defendants Adho Music Corp. and Promo Records Distributing Co., according to testimony.

The court agreed Miss Harris is entitled to $10,000 per song and upheld a $34,152 award for attorney fees in the case.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Marie Osmond will be taking to the air waves this weekend in a telethon she hopes will raise $16 million for children with hearing and speech problems.

"Last year we raised $5.3 million. We plan to triple that this year," she told reporters Tuesday.

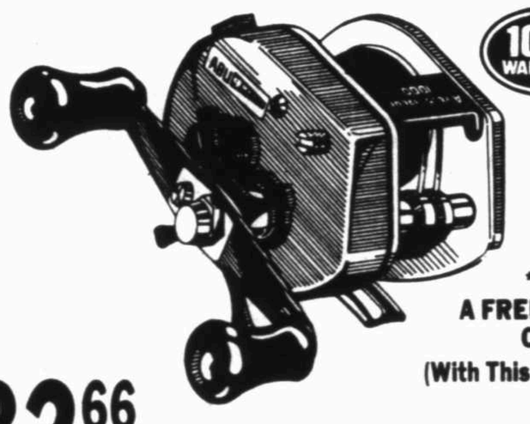

Forty minutes of each hour of the "Children's Miracle Network Telethon" will feature national performers, including Ms. Osmond and her brother, Donny. The remaining 20 minutes will feature the accomplishments of children's hospitals in the 90 television markets in which the telethon will be broadcast.

All the money raised during the 21-hour telethon Saturday and Sunday will go to 91 hospitals around the country, Ms. Osmond said. The $200,000 in production costs will be paid by corporate sponsors.

Another beginning

Ceremonies this evening for 1,200 graduating seniors in Midland's two high schools will mark both an end and a beginning for each. We join the other well-wishers in heaping on those seniors hearty congratulations — and in expressing to them our best hopes for their futures.

Today's seniors enter a professional world as demanding — and as challenging — as any yet. The American workplace, the Texas workplace, the Midland workplace is changing rapidly as technological advancements are rendering some occupations obsolete while ushering in others that demand specific job skills. In very few cases do seniors merely close the door on their first 12 years of educational preparation and land good jobs that provide advancement opportunities, adequate salary and personal fulfillment.

So in coming months many of these new graduates probably will be entering colleges and universities, other specialized schools or on-the-job training programs to adequately prepare themselves — in addition to their formal education — for modern-day employment demands. Many may find in coming years that they'll need additional or completely different skills.

But most probably will find that the educational preparation they received in Midland's public schools will serve them time and again and be a firm foundation on which they can proudly build a future.

As the years pass, we hope the seniors can look back on their days at Midland High or Lee High fondly. Graduation is an exciting moment because it marks the end of public school life. For many of the students it's the end of life under the supervision and guidance of their parents and the first opportunity to prove themselves on their own.

It's the beginning of an opportunity to make a contribution to the American way of life by putting to use the skills and the values they learned during their years of education.

We wish them the best of luck!

The Peron mystique

It simply defies logic that a nation of the dimensions and stature of Argentina would call back an overthrown and largely discredited leader for help in extricating itself from its political and financial morass.

Yet, that is exactly what happened. As most of the world looked on in bafflement, Isabel Martinez de Peron, who was overthrown as president in a military coup eight years ago, returned to Argentina at the invitation of the current president, Raul Alfonsin, with whom she will be in consultation in the weeks to come.

During her voluntary exile in Spain, Mrs. Peron continued to wield great influence in Argentina as head of the still viable Peronist party founded by her husband, the late Juan Domingo Peron. Meanawhile, a strong movement is afoot to give Mrs. Peron back all the rich properties confiscated from her at the time of her ouster.

In returning to Argentina, Mrs. Peron is following the familiar path established by her husband who also endured Spanish exile only to regain power in his homeland — largely at the invitation of the existing leaders.

As the long-term president of Argentina, Juan Peron drew strong support through his first wife — the late Evita — who was as highly revered by the masses as her husband. The trappings of power then passed to Isabel, the second wife.

Rarely has modern history witnessed a case where a mostly fraudulent charisma passed through so many hands — and all in the same family.

Another View:

'Love Boat' loophole

When Congress opens a loophole, there's no telling where the fabric will stop unraveling. Consider the saga of the "Love Boat" provisions of the tax code, which allows well-off professionals to take a deduction for meetings held aboard cruise ships bound from one pleasant place to another.

Four years ago, Congress determined that these jaunts were actually "vacations in disguise," and repealed the deduction. But that's just the beginning of the story.

Two legislators — Hawaii's Sen. Spark Matsunaga, concerned that this provision would hurt Hawaiian tourism, and New Jersey Congressman Frank Guarini, who has strong ties to unions affected by the measure — fought successfully to reform the reform. Under the 1982 tax act, shipboard conventions are again deductible — but now only if held on U.S.-owned cruise ships.

The theory behind this legislation is pure protectionism: It's supposed to revive the flagging domestic cruise ship industry. And, indeed, there has been a boom in ship bookings, with medical meetings and investment planning workshops tucked into Hawaiian isles adventures. "How about going to Hawaii for a tax deduction?" the advertisements beckon.

There's yet another twist to this story, for now foreign cruise ships want to get back into the game. The International Conference Industry Association argues that this deduction should apply to cruises on all ships, not just domestic lines, since many Americans owe their jobs to the goods and services purchased by foreign-flag ships.

Matsunaga and Guarini have thus far been able to beat back this attempt to change the law. They proffer gloomy visions of lost jobs; they even posit a threat to national security if American cruise ships, which they say could be converted to troop transports in the event war erupts, lose out in international competition.

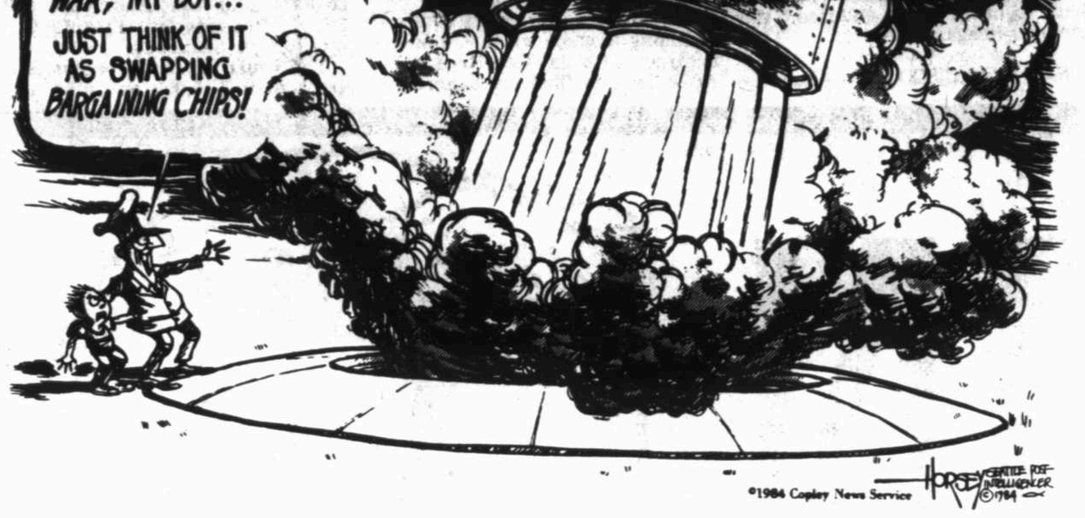

Those arguments don't hold water — but then again, neither does this deduction, which seems like a slap in the face to ordinary taxpayers who get no such benefits from Uncle Sam for their travels. Better to relearn the lesson of 1980 — that this law simply subsidizes good times — and beach "Love Boat" for good.

JACK ANDERSON

Senator helped firm dodge claims

WASHINGTON — There's a peculiar ring to some of the language that's been slipped into a Senate bill on product liability. The language would limit the punitive damages that could be assessed against a company which peddles dangerous goods to an unsuspecting public.

Jack Anderson

Here's the peculiar part: The language was crafted by a corporate attorney whose company happens to face punitive damage claims, and it was introduced by a senator who accepted campaign contributions from the company's executives. The senator got a paltry few thousand dollars; the company will save millions if the legislation is adopted.

Fully assembled, the story boils down to this: The notorious Dalkon Shield contraceptive device caused women a lot of grief until it was removed from the market in 1974. But about 2.8 million of the plastic intrauterine devices had already been sold.

The manufacturer, A.H. Robins Co. of Richmond, Va., settled some 6,700 claims alleging that the IUD had caused infections, infertility and led to hysterectomies. In seven cases that have gone to court, the company was slapped with $13.2 million in punitive awards. But another 3,000 lawsuits are pending, with plaintiffs asking for a total of $9.4 billion in punitive damages.

This has caused great distress for A.H. Robins. The company has put stockholders on notice that unlike compensatory damages, punitive damages "are not covered by insurance and will be payable by the company."

What the company stands to lose in court, however, it is now trying to recover from Congress. Its general counsel, William Forrest, huddled with Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., a year ago in the senator's domain of committee room and cloakroom. With help from Trible's legislative staff, they have written some multimillion-dollar language into a product-liability measure.

Why did the Robins company take its troubles to Trible? The company is based in Trible's home and four Robins executives, including Forrest, contributed to the senator's 1982 campaign.

How would the multimillion-dollar language help A.H. Robins? It would permit a punitive award to only the first plaintiff who won a lawsuit against the maker of a defective product. Subsequent claimants would be limited to compensatory damages.

Forrest also suggested that this radical legal doctrine be applied to all pending cases that have not yet reached trial. He told my associate Tony Capaccio that the first-plaintiff provision would "eliminate punitive damage windfalls" and permit better compensatory damage settlements to be worked out.

Trible obligingly incorporated Forrest's suggestions into the legislation, explaining, "you need to draw the line somewhere" on punitive damage claims.

Less accomodating was the federal judge who had been reviewing several Dalkon Shield cases in Minneapolis. On Feb. 29, Judge Miles Lord lectured Forrest: "Mr. Forrest, you have told me that you are working with members of Congress to ask them to find a way of forgiving you from punitive damages which might otherwise be imposed.

"Yet the profits of your company continue to mount. Insofar as this court is able to determine, you ... and your company still engage in the selfsame course of wrongdoing in which you originally commenced."

Forrest characterized the judge's remarks as "a gross abuse of judicial power."

Footnote: Six months before Trible introduced the legislative escape hatch for the Robins company, the Food and Drug Administration reported on the first large-scale study of risks associated with various brands of IUDs. It found that women who used the Dalkon Shield were five times more likely to contract a pelvic infection than those who used other brands.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: At age 84, Iran's bellicose Ayatollah Khomeini has an aging problem intelligence analysts assume is terminal. But although they have been waiting five years for him to die, he appears as durable as ever. Indeed, he has a brother who is about 10 years older and is still a practicing mullah.

— The Reagan administration chose an awkward time to "tilt" toward Iraq in the Persian Gulf conflict. America's newest ally stands accused of using chemical weapons against the remorseless Iranians. The State Department and the Pentagon have resolved this public relations problem by issuing some quiet "press guidance" to its diplomats. Any criticism of Iraq, they have been instructed, should always be accompanied by something nasty about Iran.

— The United States is quietly pressuring its allies to rush arms to Iraq. South Korea has responded with military shipments. At the same time, the Soviet Union has encouraged its allies to come to Iraq's aid. And North Korea has responded.

— State Department diplomats have a tendency to "go native." They develop a strong affinity for the countries where they serve. The most repressive desert kingdoms or Latin American dictatorships, therefore, have solid allies in the State Department. But there is one exception to this rule: Iran. Not a single official has come forth to plead the Ayatollah Khomeini's case.

The 1984 summer games in Los Angeles will be no exception. Already throwing a pall on the upcoming games is the May 8 Soviet announcement that Soviet athletes will not compete because of alleged U.S. violations of the Olympic Charter. The Soviets charge that "extremist" groups are planning to create "unbearable conditions" for the Soviet delegation and that the U.S. would "not insure the security...and create normal conditions for holding the games." The U.S. State Department dismissed the charges as "totally without merit." What the Soviets are really worried about is that American human rights activitst will make it too easy for Soviet-bloc athletes to seek political asylum in the U.S. by setting up "safe-houses" in the Los Angeles area for potential political defectors.

But the politicking doesn't stop here. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), which claims "credit" for the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes and three others at the 1972 Munich Olympic Games, is petitioning the International Olympic Committee for participation.

Although there is virtually no chance the PLO can clear the political obstacles necessary for participation in this year's games, the fact that PLO participation is considered worthy of discussion is a sign that "world opinion" has forgotten the Munich slaughter.

Moreover, a 17-year-old, who may the fastest female 5,000-meter runner on earth, has her own Olympian problems. Zola Budd, a South African, has run the distance in 15 minutes, 1.83 seconds — more than six seconds faster than the official world record of U.S. Olympian Mary Decker. Zola recently was granted British citizenship after Home Secretary Leon Brittan personally waived the normal three-year waiting period. South Africa currently is banned from participating in the Olympics. But why shouldn't Budd, if she's the best in the world in her class, be allowed to participate, even if the policies of her country are objectionable? Is the Soviet Union's slaughter of Afghans less objectionable?

And then there's Taiwan. The Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan is by no means among the bloodiest on the globe. Compared to most of the world — including the People's Republic of China (PRC) — the country is a model of enlightenment. Yet Taiwaese athletes aren't allowed to represent the Republic of China. Only the government of the PRC is officially recognized by the Olympic committee. So at the 1984 winter games, Taiwanese athletes appeared in the opening parade carrying the Olympic flag, rather than the flag of their homeland.

More than just the Republic of China's flag was absent from the winter games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia. The International Olympic Committee also decided that correspondents for Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty should not be allowed to cover the games. Because these networks, funded by the United States, broadcast news behind the Iron Certain, the Olympic Committee ruled they are propaganda outlets rather than news organizations. Of course, Radio Moscow, which broadcasts Soviet propaganda globally, and other state-run Communist propaganda operations were welcome and awarded the same credentials as CBS and NBC.

These are by no meaans isolated cases. The Olympic Games today are no longer just a showcase for athletic talent. Despite their Olympic garb, many of the world's premier athletes have become political punching bags.

The Olympic Games are supposed to transcend politics. So why should South Africa athletes be banned for crimes over which they have no control? Why should the Soviet Union even think of demanding concessions in return for participation? Why should a terrorist organization claiming "credit" for the slaughter of 14 innocent people at an Olympic event only 12 years ago be welcome like the prodigal son at subsequent Olymics?

The outcome of these tests will demonstrate the true spirit of the modern Olympic Games.

ART BUCHWALD

Buy MX now; it'll work later!

The first time I heard of the MX was back in 1979 when a friend of mine at the Pentagon called me and said, "What would you think if we came up with a new missile designed to deter the Soviets from launching a first-strike attack against the United States?"

Art Buchwald

"It sounds good to me," I said. "What makes this missile different from all the other ones we have in stock?"

"It would be based on rails under the deserts of Nevada and Utah. We'll have a hundred of them moving around at all times and the Soviets will never know where they are."

"How much money are we talking about?"

"Would you go for $50 billion?"

"Why not? It's a steal if it will bring the Kremlin to its senses."

He said, "You won't be sorry."

I didn't hear any more about it until 1981, when I ran into my friend at a Georgetown party. "How are you doing with the MX missile?"

"You mean the 'Peacekeeper'?"

"Is that what you call it now?"

"That's what President Reagan calls it. We scrapped the race track concept and decided to put them into stationary Titan silos in Wyoming."

"I thought the whole idea behind the weapon was that it would be mobile. If you put them in stationary silos, won't they be vulnerable to attack?"

"Not if we harden the concrete. If the 'Peacekeeper' doesn't make the Russians see the value of arms talks, nothing will."

"How much are we talking about now?"

"We don't want to put a price on it until we get in all the bids from the cement companies."

I was so busy with the placing of the cruise missiles in Europe I didn't have time to think much about the "Peacekeeper" until my friend called me last month and said, "Well, we really think we've got the system worked out now. Instead of placing the 'Peacekeeper' in individual silos we're going to put 100 of them in a 'Dense Pack.' Even if the Soviets knock out 80 we can still launch 20 and that should do the job."

"If you've got it figured out, why are you bothering me?"

"It seems some jerk in the General Accounting Office did a study and said the 'Peacekeeper' can't do the job we said it would, so Congress is balking. They don't want to throw good money after bad money. We thought you might call your friends up on The Hill and persuade them that we need the weapon whether it works or not."

"Why do we need it if it doesn't work?"

"We need it as a chip to get the Soviets back to the arms talks in Geneva. If we scrap the 'Peacekeeper' now it will send a signal to them we're not serious about arms reduction."

"Maybe Congress wants to use the money for other weapons that do work. How can I persuade them to go along with one they're not sure of?"

"Just point out to them that it's an election year, and if they vote against the 'Peacekeeper' the president will accuse them of weakening our defense posture."

"You mean you want me to use the MX as a chip against Congress?"

"Why not? It won't be that hard now that the Russians have pulled out of the Olympics."

I called up all my Democratic friends in Congress and put it to them. If they dumped the "Peacekeeper" now their political futures were in jeopardy. We worked out a compromise. They said they would hold off funding the MX until April, 1985. If the Soviets still refused to resume arms talks we would start production. Then I called back the Pentagon and told my friend about the deal.

He seemed satisfied. "We can use the time to see if we can make the damn thing work."

Soldiers patrol two Haitian cities after mob storms CARE warehouse

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers patrolled two cities today after rioting broke out in Haiti for the second week in a row. A mob tried to storm a food warehouse, and two people reportedly died of gunshot wounds after troops fired at the crowd.

A Haitian army spokesman confirmed that troops were deployed to put down disturbances in Cap Haitien, the second largest city in this poverty-stricken Caribbean nation, but he said no one was injured.

The army spokesman, who would not give his name, said the soldiers "fired only in the air" and not at the mob surrounding the CARE warehouse. But an employee at Justinien Hospital in Cap Haitien said at least two people died of wounds from the rioting and several other people were hospitalized.

In Gonaives, a detachment of soldiers that quelled rioting there last week continued to patrol that town. Soldiers restored calm in Gonaives, on Haiti's west coast, after four days of disturbances sparked by alleged beatings of civilians by police.

The outbreak of rioting, something rarely seen since the authoritarian Duvalier family came to power in 1957, also has been attributed to high prices and food shortages aggravated by a drought.

In Cap Haitien, on Haiti's north coast, most stores and businesses were closed as soldiers patrolled to discourage looting and more violence.

According to two Cap Haitien residents who did not want their names used, peasants on Monday broke into a warehouse of CARE, an international relief agency, at the nearby town of Milot. On Tuesday morning, another mob attacked a larger CARE warehouse in Cap Haitien, but soldiers arrived and fired shots, the residents said.

Prefect Auguste Robinson went on Radio Cap Haitien to appeal for calm Tuesday afternoon. Four hours later, he made another radio address to deliver what he called "a personal message" from President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Robinson told residents that Duvalier had ordered him to oversee distribution of food donated by charity. Preferential distribution and misappropriation of the food will be "punished," Robinson said.

He said those who work on official projects such as road construction and ditch-digging will receive food first.

Robinson's address seemed to imply that the riots were sparked by misuse of donated foods, much of it originally paid for the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Cap Haitien residents reached by telephone late Tuesday said the city of more than 50,000 was quiet and that armed soldiers were the only people on the streets. They said the army appeared to be staying out of the La Fossette slum area, home of most of Tuesday's rioters.

Philip Johnston, CARE's executive director in New York, said he talked with agency workers in Port-au-Prince, who said 35 CARE workers in Cap Haitien barricaded themselves inside the warehouse most of the day against the "fairly substantial" mob trying to get to the agency's food supplies.

The warehouse was not broken into and the CARE workers emerged unharmed after troops quieted the disturbance, Johnston said.

A U.S. Embassy staff member in Port-au-Prince said there were no reports of any Americans injured. He said Americans calling the embassy from Cap Haitien were advised to stay off the city's streets. He didn't want his name used.

Twelve earthquakes shake main Japanese island

TOKYO (AP) — A series of 10 earthquakes within four hours today shook western Honshu, Japan's main island, and two quakes jolted eastern Honshu, breaking windows and disrupting train service but causing no serious injuries, authorities said.

Of the 10 quakes in western Honshu, three of them registered 5.5 on the Richter scale, the Central Meteorological Agency said. The tremors, which began at midmorning, were centered about 280 miles west of Tokyo.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. A quake of 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage.

Sakharov hospitalized, Soviet source says

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet source said today that prominent dissident Andrei Sakharov has been hospitalized in Gorky because of complications from a hunger strike which he reportedly began May 2.

The report was the first word here on Sakharov's whereabouts since May 19, when dissident sources said his wife, Yelena Bonner, sent a telegram to his children in Moscow saying the physicist had been taken from their home May 7.

A spokesman for the Soviet Academy of Sciences, of which Sakharov is a member, told The Associated Press when asked if the report was true:

"I have no information if Sakharov was hospitalized or not. I just have the information which has been published in Izvestia on May 20."

He referred to the Soviet government newspaper, which carried a lengthy article May 20 accusing Mrs. Bonner of encouraging him to start a hunger strike to stir up anti-Soviet sentiment in the West.

The Soviet source, who is not a dissident and whose work gives him access to official information, said he heard that doctors ordered Sakharov hospitalized last Friday.

"They were very, very concerned about his health," said the source, who asked not to be identified. He said Soviet authorities were anxious to protect Sakharov's health because he is so well known in the West.

There was no explanation of the discrepancy between his information and Mrs. Bonner's report that Sakharov was taken away from their Gorky home on May 7.

The source said he did not know the whereabouts of Mrs. Bonner, and added, "You know she is under investigation under Article 190."

Article 190 of the Russian Federation criminal code covers anti-Soviet slander, and is punishable by up to three years imprisonment.

A friend of the Sakharovs reported May 8 that Mrs. Bonner had been told not to leave Gorky.

Jewish terrorist convicted of transporting illegal arms

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The first of 27 suspects to be tried in a crackdown on a Jewish terrorist underground has been convicted of illegal possession and transportation of arms, the Justice Ministry said today.

Ministry spokesman Yitzhak Feinberg said Noam Yinon, a resident of a settlement in the Golan Heights, was tried Tuesday in Jerusalem District Court.

Yinon stood trial alone after the prosecution decided to drop charges of attempted murder and membership in a terrorist organization. The charge of attempted murder related to the thwarted attempt to blow up five Palestinian-owned buses in east Jerusalem last month, Feinberg said.

Feinberg said Yinon had admitted carrying 50 mines from his settlement of Keshet to another Golan Heights settlement, and interrogators believed explosives were extracted from these mines to make the charges planted in the buses.

'Hitler's diarists' to be tried

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A reporter and a Nazi memorabilia dealer charged in the "Hitler diaries" hoax will go on trial Aug. 21, their lawyers say.

Gerd Heidemann, 52, a former reporter for Stern magazine, and Konrad Kujau, 45, were indicted May 23 on charges related to the $3.6 million paid by Stern magazine for the forgeries.

Kujau is charged with receiving at least $573,000 from Heidemann for writing the bogus diaries.Heidemann is charged with knowing the purported diaries were fakes but convincing his employers at Stern to pay huge sums of money for the 60 volumes.

Stern published two installments of the purported diaries in its weekly issues of April 28 and May 5 last year, and also sold rights to several foreign publications that ran excerpts.

Soviet generals killed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) —Three Soviet generals have been killed in the last two months by Afghan rebels who shot down their helicopters near the Panjsher Valley, according to reports received by Western diplomats in India and Pakistan.

The diplomats discussed the reports Tuesday on condition that they not be identified by name or nationality. Their reports could not be independently confirmed, and the names of the Soviet generals were not available.

The reports said the first was killed in late April, at Rokha on the south side of the Panjsher Valley. The second general was killed, along with five members of his crew, when rebels shot down their helicopter.

U.S. adviser: Salvadoran army gaining on rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran army has gained the edge over leftist rebels by replacing several high-ranking military strategists, according to the outgoing commander of U.S military advisers here.

In a speech Tuesday, Col. Joseph Stringham praised Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova for his "brave decision" to make the changes, which displaced several commanders whose tactics were considered outdated.

In another development, El Salvador's outgoing interim president, Alvaro Magana, was quoted today by The New York Times as saying the FBI has trained a special Salvadoran security unit to investigate death-squad activities and political murders.

Magana, who will be succeeded by President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte on Friday, was quoted as saying the unit had been trained for four months and was now ready to start its investigations.

Elsewhere in Central America, a Nicaraguan military source said government troops killed about 200 insurgents in an attack against CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels last week.The source described the battle as the biggest since the Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force rebels started attacking targets in Nicaragua two years ago.

In Honduras, an estimated 15,000 people marched Tuesday in Tegucigalpa, the capital, to demand that the government revoke recently imposed tax increases.

At a farewell ceremony, Vides Casanova presented Stringham with El Salvador's highest military award, the Gold Medal for Distinguished Services. He arrived in El Salvador in May 1982 and is leaving June 5 for Washington.

Stringham commanded an 11-man U.S. military group that works with the Salvadoran High Command, plus up to 55 U.S. noncombat military advisers and 25 U.S. military medical trainers.

Stringham said he had become concerned that the rebels were taking the initiative in their 4½-year-old war to topple the U.S.-backed government.

"At that moment, the minister made the brave decision to put the best men in key positions so the armed forces could develop a strategy to neutralize the subversives," he said. The changes displaced a series of old-school officers who favored military operations in which the guerrillas could be easily circumvented.

"Immediately, a positive direction was established and the decline of the subversives became evident. I am personally convinced that the initiative now clearly rests with the armed forces," Stringham said.

Among the changes Vides Casanova pushed through Nov. 5 was the appointment of Lt. Col. Domingo Monterrosa to head the Army 3rd Infantry Brigade, which made him military commander of eastern El Salvador, where guerrilla fighting had been heaviest.

Another was the appointment of Col. Adolfo Blandon, considered the army's best strategist, as chief of general staff.

In Nicaragua, a military source said heavy fighting between rebels and the leftist government's troops occurred May 23-24 at San Jose de Bocay, a town in northern Jinotega province.

Leftist guerrillas force news agency to transmit message

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Leftist guerrillas raided offices of The Associated Press and Agence France-Presse news agencies and ordered reporters at gunpoint to transmit a message condemning Chile's military government.

Both armed groups entered the agency offices in downtown Santiago on Tuesday evening and left after cutting telephone lines, shutting employees in bathrooms and leaving packages said to be bombs. Neither package contained explosives.

The raiders said they belonged to the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, a 6-month-old guerrilla movement named for a Chilean independence fighter. It has claimed responsibility for bombing scores of government targets and businesses.

Two men and a woman entered the AP bureau at 7:10 p.m. EDT and handed their written message to reporter Eva Vergara. One man put the muzzle of an automatic pistol against her neck and said, "Let's transmit this."

After she sent it by telex to the AP's New York headquarters, the gunman told her, "If this story doesn't come out tomorrow we'll kill you." A news story based on the incident and the communique was sent to Latin America.

The statement called for a return to democracy as the only way to end what it said was an "economic catastrophe" in Chile. It said President Augusto Pinochet's appointment of new economic ministers last month was "a farce...a vain attempt to gain time and to appease growing popular unrest."

Miss Vergara, AP photographer Angel Gonzalez and office employee Miguel Pizarro were held at gunpoint for 15 minutes before the intruders left. The three, who were unmasked, also wielded a submachine gun and a grenade.

Humberto Zumaran, the French news agency's bureau chief, said three armed men made him file the same message at the same hour to his Paris headquarters after knocking another agency reporter to the floor.

Chicago breaks fever record

By MICHAEL WILBMN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CHICAGO — Officially this week, Cubs fans have broken their own record for the earliest detectable signs of pennant fever, previously set in the eminently memorable year of 1969.

They didn't even bother to wait for June 1 this season. The Chicago Cubs are in first place of the National League East, with a 26-18 record as of Memorial Day that gave them the best record in the NL and the third best in the majors.

The Cubs lead the league in hitting, are second in home runs. Five regulars went into last weekend batting .300 or higher, including Leon Durham, the bullish first baseman who has become a triple crown threat by pushing himself among the league leaders in hitting (.333), home runs (11) and runs batted in (37). Ryne Sandberg, the 24-year-old Gold Glove second baseman, in addition to batting .320, has had an 18-game hitting streak and an errorless stretch of 49 games.

THE OFFENSIVE lineup is so good that third baseman Ron Cey and catcher Jody Davis, who each hit 24 home runs last year, are sixth and seventh, respectively, in the batting order. Keith Moreland, who hit .300 last year, often sits on the bench. Bill Buckner, seven times a .300 hitter, was expendable, bringing hoped-for pitching help from Boston in Dennis Eckersley.

"The recent stretch where we won six in a row, I caught myself forgetting how to lose," Cubs starting pitcher Chuck Rainey said last weekend. "Maybe this club has learned how to win, but it will take all season to find out for sure."

Cubs fans are having too much fun for logic now; they know better than most about the traumas August holds. So the complex Cubs fans, in their 39th year without a pennant and 12th without a winning season, have ignored all the warnings and recent history lessIns, and done it again.vTheyant to fall in love with these New Cubs just yet. But it's too late. Head over heels.

"LOOK AT this place; you think they aren't excited?" former Cub Jose Cardenal said a few days ago, sitting in the dugout and looking at the Wrigley Field stands that held an overflow of 38,000 nearly 90 minutes before game time. "They're starting to know this club is for real," said Cardenal, now one of the team's coaches. "We can score a lot of runs. We've got veterans like Gary Matthews, Larry Bowa, Jay Johnstone and Richie Hebner, guys who have played on teams that won pennants and championships and have the right attitudes. This team is deep. It's different than some of those Cub teams I was on. It's just different.

"We've got to keep playing like this, though," Cardenal continued. "Our fans still hurt. They still talk about 1969 (when the Cubs blew a 9 1-2-game lead in August). I do a lot of public relations work for the Cubs now. And the first 10 minutes I spend with people is answering questions about 1969. They say, 'We've seen this first-place stuff before. We remember 1969.' I tell them 1969 is ancient history. We've got the hitting, and they just have to have faith."

These New Cubs are different, everyone says, because the losing attitude that has haunted the ivy walls of these friendly confines since 1945 is finally gone.

DALLAS GREEN, who took over as general manager in October 1981, created controversy by unloading some popular youngsters in favor of established veterans like Bowa and Matthews. In fact, 12 ex-Phillies, many of them from Green's World Series team in 1980, are here.

"You've got to give the credit for this to Dallas," Rainey said. "Everybody criticized his approach at first, but look at how it's beginning to pay off. When he ... traded for Gary Matthews (in March) I couldn't understand why they acquired him. Now I understand. Everybody understands."

Matthews, the man Pete Rose nicknamed "Sarge" because he takes control of everything, is backing up all the chatter he starts in the dugout and on the field with the youngsters like Sandberg and Mel Hall. Matthews, batting third, has been hitting around .300, driving in the clutch runs and playing well in left field.

"You can talk leadership," Matthews said, "but unless you back it up on the field, it doesn't matter. I have the respect of players not just here but around the league. When you're sincere when speaking to a young guy, it sinks in. He listens. They know when I pull for a guy, it's for real. I play hard and they respect that."

Bowa has provided the same type of inspiration for Sandberg, who is a better hitter and fielder than Los Angeles' Steve Sax, but doesn't get the attention.

"The best thing about this club is the attitude that the veterans have helped bring here," Sandberg said. "The difference between my rookie year (1982) and now is like night and day. Then, we'd go out wondering how we'd play. Now, we know."

Cubs suffer no-hitter by Kordish

From Staff Reports

TULSA — The offense of the Midland Cubs took a two-game vacation here Tuesday night in a doubleheader loss to the Tulsa Drillers, including suffering a no-hitter at the hands of Steve Kordish.

The Drillers' Kordish pitched a no-hitter in the opening victory over the Cubs.

Tulsa won the second game, 1-0, in extra innings when pinch-hitter Ron Dillard was issued a bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the eighth.

The 4-2 Kordish faced only 21 batters in the seven-inning game. He walked Dan Norman to ruin a perfect game, but Norman was then thrown out trying to steal.

Tulsa had two three-run innings and nine hits. Oscar Mejia had three hits in the opener and went five-for-six for both games.

Javier Ortiz had two RBIs in the opener for Tulsa and Barry Brunenkant also had a pair of hits and two RBI.

Mike Capel, 1-7, took the loss for Midland, now 15-32.

Former Atlanta Braves pitcher Tommy Boggs went six innings for Tulsa in the second game, allowing only two hits.

Coach turns loose Stanford women

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Stanford University was considered one of the top contenders for the women's title in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, which began in earnest today.

Cardinal Coach Brooks Johnson says whether his team wins or not is out of his hands.

"The only thing a coach can do is get his team to a meet like the nationals," said Johnson, also the women's coach for the U.S. Olympic women's team.

"IF YOU get there often enough, your number will come up. We have the potential to win, but so do five or six other teams (among them favored Florida State and Tennessee).

Stanford is led by distance runners Patti Sue Plumer, Alison Wiley and Regina Jacobs, discus thrower and shot putter Carol Cady and javelin thrower Mary Osborne.

Johnson prefers to talk more about the injustices for women in the Olympics, the entire Olympic movement and the world in general.

He is upset that a runner of Plumer's caliber will not have an opportunity to compete in the Games in the 5,000-meter race, her best event, because it is not in the Olympic program for women — only for men. Instead, she'll have to compete for a berth on the U.S. team in the 3,000 meters, the longest event for women other than the marathon.

"It's criminal, because she's a natural 5,000 runner," said Johnson. "That would be like taking Sydney Maree or Steve Scott (who specialize in the 1,500) and asking them to run 800 meters. Nobody's asking Carl Lewis (who runs the 100 and 200 meters, and long jumps) to run in the 400, or Edwin Moses (who competes in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles) to run in the high hurdles.

"PATTI SUE'S education cost Stanford nearly $60,000. That $60,000 underwriting is for nothing.

"That's what concerns me about the Olympics," added Johnson. "The Olympic movement is sexist, rascist and antisemitic. Those issues are more important than the Russians pulling out . . . issues that are being swept under the mat. Don't treat women as second-class citizens.

"As an Olympic coach, I guess I should concentrate on the upbeat things," he added. "I have seen a lot of beautiful and wonderful things happen at the Games. But don't ignore the other side of the coin."

Despite the positive aspects of the Games, Johnson said he thinks "the Olympics are going to fold of their own weight and gravity. It's like what happens to a canvas chair when you sit in it and it collapses in the middle."

"They've also been impregnated with crass commercialism and politics."

He noted that the two most expensive tickets for the Games are for events that have nothing to do with athletics — the opening and closing cermonies.

He noted that the Olympic officials will be given the best housing at the Games, not the athletes.

And he noted that "the biggest concerns at the Olympic Village will be the same as they are in the city (of Los Angeles) — crime and drugs, plus chemistry and commercialism."

"Those are the important problems," said Johnson.

While Stanford, Florida State and Tennessee are expected to battle for the women's title, won each of the past two years by UCLA, the men's team championship figures to be a scrap among Washington State, Oregon and defending champion Southern Methodist.

Today's program was devoted mainly to qualifying and preliminaries, with only one final scheduled, in the women's 10,000 meters.

Rebel honors keep coming in

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It has been five months since Midland Lee ended its most successful football campaign in the school's history, but the rewards are still being felt after that 13-3 cruise to the state championship finals in Irving's Texas Stadium.

Offensive guard Devoe McMillen recently became the 13th Rebel off the 1983 team to sign a college scholarship to play football.

McMILLEN, AN All-District guard, has signed with Western New Mexico and will toil with the Silver City, N.M., Mustangs as a freshman this fall.

McMillen served on a Lee offensive line that helped re-write all of Lee's major rushing records for one season.

Earlier offensive tackle Tracy Sherman and center Allan Bell signed to play with Eastern New Mexico while tight end Charlie Diaz signed with the Houston Cougars of the Southwest Conference. Guard Coy Stewart opted for another SWC school when he chose TCU in a heated recruiting battle. Colleges seem to have recognized that there was some talent on this Rebel squad, and the offensive line was not ignored.

The SWC plucked five Lee players for future use. In addition to Diaz and Stewart, fullback Isaac Garnett, defensive end Eddie Kittle and linebacker Charles Johnson all signed with Texas Tech to rejoin coach Spike Dykes, who became Tech's defensive coordinator after leading Lee to the No. 2 poisition in the state.

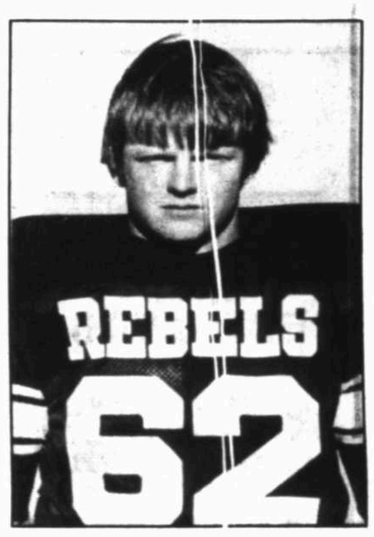

GARNETT, WHO became the all-time rushing leader at Lee with 1,996 yards rushing over the span of 16 games, repeatedly gave credit to his offensive line for his accomplishments.

But colleges saw talent at just about every position at Lee and nearly every segment of Lee's championship run will be seen on college fields this fall.

In addition to Sherman and Bell, Eastern New Mexico also dealt out scholarships to defensive backs Michael Wallace and Andre Mayfield. Eastern New Mexico may become known as Midland Lee West with that crew.

Defensive tackle Pat Stevens signed with Howard Payne, the school he wanted from the beginning, and receiver Willie Long has signed with Western Arizona, a junior college. Defensive lineman David Jackson signed with East Texas State.

With McMillen's signing with Western New Mexico this past week, Lee now will have 13 players in the college ranks next fall. However, the list may not be complete.

Devoe McMillen
...another Rebel signs

According to Lee's new head coach Jack Tayrien, at least two other Rebels are considering college football.

"Sergio Ochoa (a defensive back) is interested in playing both football and baseball at Ranger Junior College and Reggie Ellis (a linebacker) will be a walkon at Oklahoma State. Reggie was hurt by injuries last year, but I think he will make it at Oklahoma State," said Tayrien.

So the college count may move to 15 before fall rolls around.

"I've never been associated with any team that had this many college recruits," said Tayrien. "We knew we would have some interest in these kids, but 15 players from one high school team to play college ball is a lot no matter how you look at it. We're thrilled for all of them.

"The bunch we had last year had a special chemistry and I wish I knew what it was. It was something more than just talent. I just wish I knew what it was. I would bottle it and make a fortune."

ANOTHER HONOR has come to the Texas Tech-bound Johnson. The All-State linebacker has been selected to play in the North-South All-Star game in Houston this summer. The game annually attracts the top players from Class A through 5A, but only one player from any particular team may be selected.

Garnett, Stewart, Mayfield and Johnson were all All-State choices in 1983 and Kittle was selected as an honorable mention choice.

It was quite a year for the Rebels and the benefits are still arriving.

Worthy on edge of breakthrough

By TERRY FREI
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BOSTON — A year ago, James Worthy stayed behind in the locker room and watched on television as Philadelphia swept away the Lakers.

In the final week of the regular season, against Phoenix, he had gone to the boards.

"I came from a distance, so I was able to get up some speed," Worthy recalled this week. "I just jumped into somebody, and it was very physical under the boards. I happened to be thrown off balance while I was in the air, and it was an awkward landing. It went whack, and the bone just cracked."

Worthy's rookie season was over.

As it turned out, so were the Lakers' chances for a second straight National Basketball Association title. Without Worthy and with a hobbled Bob McAdoo, the Lakers lost four straight to the 76ers. Philadelphia might have, or even probably would have, won the 1983 title, anyway; but the Lakers wouldn't have been so overmatched with Worthy on the floor.

And Worthy's development from the prize prospect, as the first player selected in the 1982 draft, into prize forward would not have been slowed.

"When we lost James last year, I felt like that was the biggest blow this team could suffer, because of his offensive ability and what he was giving to the team psychologically that time of year," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said Monday, the day after the Lakers opened the 1984 finals with a road victory over the Boston Celtics. "He was playing the best forward of any basketball player in the game for about a month before he broke his leg.

"I think it's been proven that this year, with him healthy, he gives us that little offensive dimension that we were lacking when the game got tight. James is on the threshold of an explosion in his career. He's been at 20 to 25 minutes per game for the last couple of years, playing his role, getting his points, and now he's on the threshold of really starting to become very consistent."

It has taken time. There were flashes this season, the fluid, yet forceful glides to the basket that triggered the ever-increasing comparisons between the 23-year-old Worthy and a young Julius Erving. He played in all 82 games and averaged 14.5 points, shooting 56 percent. But there was not enough brilliance to keep Worthy in the starting lineup, since Riley used him, albeit for about 30 minutes per game, as the first forward off the bench in the season's final half.

Riley's theories: Long after the bone and the scars over the two screws implanted in his knee had healed, long after the atrophied leg muscles had been built up again, the inevitable post-injury hesitancy remained. And Worthy's concentration, occasionally absent even when he was the nation's best college player at North Carolina, was not constant.

"I still think there's a little bit of trauma," Riley said. "He may disagree, but from what I saw last year, he totally had those wings of independence. I still don't see that all the time."

Riley did see it Sunday, when Worthy had 20 points in the Lakers' 115-109 win over the Celtics.

Worthy is not getting carried away over his reappearance as a starter. "The playing time I have gotten, even coming off the bench, has gotten me more experience," he said.

1894 — After going 0-for-6 in the morning game, Bobby Lowe of the Boston Red Sox hit four home runs and a single off "Icebox" Chamberlain in a 20-11 win over the Cincinnati Reds. Two of his homers came in the third inning.

Denver aquires rights to Texas' Rick McIvor

DENVER (AP) — Doug Spedding, owner of the Denver Gold of the United States Football League, says the team has reached an agreement to acquire the rights to Rick McIvor of the University of Texas.

Spedding said Monday the Gold plans to actively pursue signing McIvor, a quarterback, to a contract. The agreement was reached with the Houston Gamblers of the USFL, Spedding said.

The Denver team owner said the Gold has been talking to McIvor for nearly a month. Spedding said if the Gold can come to terms with McIvor, then the team has an agreement with Jerry Argovitz, majority owner of the Gamblers, to get McIvor's rights for a fourth round draft choice in 1986.

McIvor was a third-round choice of the St. Louis Cardinals in this year's National Football League draft, although he played sparingly in Texas' run-oriented defense. He was the third quarterback selected, behind Maryland's Boomer Esiason and Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia.

Kelly McGraw

McGraw can still smile

By STEVEN JEFFRESS
The Brazosport Facts

BRAZOSPORT (AP) — Kelly McGraw wears an indelible smile.

But the smile and its constant companion, a twinkling of the eyes, masks another indelible marking; this one a tragic memory etched on the inside of her being where no one can see.

She handles her nightmare well. Amazingly so, for a 14-year-old.

Six years ago, McGraw was the sole survivor of the source of her nightmare — a fiery, two-car collision that took the lives of her car's four other occupants, her mother, two brothers and a sister.

They were on their way from Sweeny to Victoria for a tennis tournament at the time. Unbeknownst to Kelly and older brother Pat, they were the top seeds in the 12-and-under age group for the tourney they never reached. Kelly was only 8.

Such was her potential in the sport. But, because of the accident, she forsook tennis for the next two years.

"My brother and I used to fight over who got the most medals and trophies," McGraw said. "I just had nobody to compete with (after the crash). My dad would ask, but I just didn't feel like playing."

Her father, John, finally discovered a way to re-interest his withdrawn daughter, a way to lure her out of a self-encased shell. He exploited adolescent greed. He found money to be more persuasive incentive than words.

"He would pay me 50 cents to go over to the courts and hit with him," Kelly recalled. "It was 25 cents for every 15 minutes. He would also pay me 25 cents a lap to get in shape.

"So mainly I did it for the money until I started liking it more."

Call her a young pro — paid to play — but it achieved its purpose.

Although how much therapeutic value playing tennis again has had on her is unknown, it did help crack open the shell. What emerged was a child gradually adjusting to life as it is ... with a smile.

Still, her tennis development has been hurt by the two-year layoff from the sport where the earlier the foundation is laid, the more successful the construction. The young rule the roost in the tennis world.

More than that, though, was the absence of some of the competitive spirit that had driven the lifelong Sweeny resident to promising heights at such a tender age.

Not to imply that she hasn't held up her end of the court since her return. She has and then some.

McGraw has qualified for and competed in the United States Tennis Association's national tournament, which requires a top 10 ranking in Texas in her age group.

Then, there was the state girls' high school tournament in Austin were the Sweeny freshman reached the semifinals before losing in three sets to the eventual state champion.

The loss snapped her season-long string of match wins at 21, a streak in which McGraw had not lost a single set. The extent of her success, surprising even her, did little to decrease her nervousness or bolster her confidence going into the regional and state tournaments.

"I think about that every match," McGraw said. "I'm going out there saying 'Oh, I hope I don't lose.' After I win my first game, I usually start playing better."

Better than her competition anyway. Her wins include a victory this spring over a district boys' champion.

Bedard still wants to race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Race driver Pat Bedard said Tuesday he is determined to return for the 1985 Indianapolis 500 despite his spectacular crash in this year's race.

It's doubtful, however, that he will be able to keep his date for the LeMans race in France next month, Bedard told the Indianapolis News in a hospital interview.

Asked if he would try to make his third start in the 500-mile race next year, the 42-year-old driver from New York City said, "I think so."

Bedard, who under went surgery after the interview to repair and wire shut a broken right jaw (he also suffered a concussion), said, "This is a challenge to me that stands tall above any minor injuries and inconveniences.

"This is an American race and it really means a lot to an American."

David R. Richards, public relations director for Methodist Hospital, said Bedard was "alert and responding well."

Bedard, whose March-Buick disintegrated — except for the cockpit — after it crashed between the third and fourth turns, didn't lose his sense of humor while flipping end over end.

"I think I'm doing a whole lot better than the car," he said. "I don't think there's anything major wrong with me ... but my poor car.

"(Car owner) Lee Brayton didn't need another car to be beat up."

Scott Brayton, Lee's son and Bedard's teammate, was involved in two accidents during the month. The younger Brayton finished 18th and Bedard 30th for the second consecutive year.

Bedard said, "I'm supposed to leave June 9" for LeMans, a race "I desperately want to do. But right now I'm feeling too bad to do it. I might have great improvement."

He added he would have to give those in charge of his LeMans ride "warning so they can find somebody else" if he's not up to it.

Bedard also said he didn't know what happened to cause Sunday's crash. He quickly added, "I feel very lucky to have had a new March.

PBS to focus on Vietnam documentary

NEW YORK (AP) — Midway through a televised discussion on CBS' documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," professor Michael Botein interrupts the combatants — writer Don Kowet, TV producer George Crile and the moderator, Steven H. Scheuer.

Botein, director of the Communications Media Center at New York Law School, tells the three they sound like lawyers arguing their respective cases. Scheuer and his guests on "All About TV" ease off momentarily.

The case will be in open court soon enough, Botein seems to suggest. What he wants to know, he says, is why, as Kowet maintains, CBS was out to get retired Army Gen. William Westmoreland; and why, as CBS argues, Kowet was out to get the network.

The 90-minute documentary, produced by Crile and broadcast Jan. 23, 1982, accused Westmoreland, as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, of misrepresenting enemy troop strength to deceive President Lyndon Johnson and the American public.

Kowet and Sally Bedell, in a subsequent article in TV Guide magazine, criticized the film as "often unfair and arbitrary in its approach to a subject that demanded all the objectivity and thoroughness that the journalists of CBS News could muster."

Westmoreland filed a $120 million libel suit against the network. The suit is scheduled to go to trial in September, though CBS recently asked that the case be dismissed.

Botein's question, both interesting and manageable, is more or less ignored, and a short time later, the quarreling resumes:

"He is an agent out to try to kill the documentary," Crile declares, referring to Kowet and the documentary form rather than a specific show.

"It was your program," Kowet retorts, "that killed documentaries. Your work."

It's an especially ludicrous turn in the hour-long program, to be broadcast by about 40 public TV stations starting Sunday night, that is more accusatory than enlightening:

"You're defending a $120 million lawsuit," Kowet snaps at one point. "That's right," Crile replies, "and you're exploiting that."

Perhaps the subject is too complex, and the participants too deeply involved, to allow for reasonable conversation. Moments into the program, Crile decries Kowet's journalism as "irresponsible, inaccurate and easily demonstrated to have those flaws."

It's not a good start; Kowet, in the course of the hour, defends his work, including his newly published book on the subject, "A Matter of Honor," and nothing is resolved.

Here's an opportunity for you to test your analytical ability. Follow the play and decide whether declarer made any errors, and if so where.

The contract was a routine four spades, and West led the king of diamonds. When South contributed the queen, West shifted to the ten of clubs. Declarer covered in dummy with the jack, and captured East's king with the ace. He entered dummy with a trump, ruffed a diamond, crossed back to the table with another trump and ruffed dummy's last diamond. Now declarer tried to throw West in by cashing the jack of clubs and leading another club, but West was careful to unblock the nine and East won the third club.

The heart shift was automatic. Declarer had to finesse the queen, but when West won the king, declarer had to concede a second heart for down one.

Bad luck, or poor play? You are right if you picked the latter. Declarer should have made his contract with an elimination play.

Declarer should strive to keep East off lead. When West shifts to a club at trick two, it is a virtual certainty that East has the king of clubs. Therefore, declarer should not cover the ten of clubs.

Assume West continues with a club — as good a defense as any. Now declarer captures East's king, crosses to the board with a trump and ruffs a diamond. He draws another trump, cashes dummy's high club and leads the jack of diamonds — but he does not ruff! Instead, declarer discards a low heart. West wins the ace of diamonds to complete the defensive book, but he is then forced to bow the knee. He must either lead a heart into declarer's major tenace or a diamond, which will permit declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of hearts from his hand.

French net play ruined by rain

PARIS (AP) — Perhaps the only person who wasn't disappointed after rain ruined the second day's play at the $1.8 million French Open tennis tournament was defending champion Yannick Noah.

The French star was able to get in only eight games Tuesday — a 4-4 first-set standoff with American Mark Dickson — before a cold, steady drizzle turned the red clay courts here into mud. But as the skies darkened, the cloud of doubt lifted from Noah's mind with each pain-free serve.

NOAH, WHO last year became the first Frenchman to win the French Open in 37 years, had been suffering for two weeks from a pulled abdominal muscle which seriously restricted his ability to serve and hit overheads. There had even been talk last week that the 24-year-old Noah planned to withdraw from the tournament altogether.

But after his rain-abbreviated first-round match Tuesday, his coach, Patrice Hagelauer, put the rest of the field on notice that Noah was ready to defend his crown.

Today, weather permitting, Noah was to try again, along with most of the rest of the tournament's big guns: No. 1 seed John McEnroe of the United States, second-seeded star Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and 1982 French Open winner Mats Wilander of Sweden.

Also scheduled to see action today is America's Chris Evert Lloyd, who is out to defend her women's title and simultaneous halt Martina Navratolova's bid to capture the Grand Slam — consecutive victories at the French, English, U.S. and Australian championships. Navratilova is top-seeded among the women, while Lloyd is seeded No. 2.

"Those eight games were very reassuring for Yannick," Hagelauer said of Noah's match on Tuesday, "because he saw he could serve without holding back. There was no pain."

But Noah's return to form was the only ray of sunshine in an otherwise bleak afternoon.

JUST ONE match was completed. France's top-ranked woman, Catherine Tanvier, defeated Romania's Lucia Romanov 6-2, 7-5 in conditions the 19-year-old winner later described as "horrible." The French weather bureau, which predicted partly cloudy and foggy conditions Wednesday, reported that Tuesday's 48-degree high was the lowest ever recorded for May 29 in Paris.

But that didn't stop more than 7,000 fans, huddled against the cold and rain around center court at Roland Garros stadium, from whistling and jeering when the referee agreed to stop Noah's match against Dickson.

Three other matches, none of which included seeded players, also were halted by rain.

Monday's first round had gone smoothly, with No. 3 seed Jimmy Connors and Navratilova, among others, advancing easily. If Navratilova wins here, she will become only the fifth player in history to capture the Grand Slam and, in the process, will pocket a $1 million bonus.

Cedeno warns Soto

CINCINNATI (AP) — Outfielder Cesar Cedeno of the Cincinnati Reds, who has had his troubles with temper outbursts, says teammate and friend Mario Soto should learn to control his.

"I've told Mario many times that he has to learn to control his temper," Cedeno said as the Reds were returning to Cincinnati from their weekend series against the Cubs in Chicago.

Soto, the Reds' pitching staff ace with a 7-1 record this season, is waiting to be told whether the National League will suspend him for his outburst Sunday at Chicago's Wrigley Field, when he charged a group of umpires after learning he had been ejected during a bench-clearing dispute. Brad Gulden, Cincinnati's catcher, tackled Soto to keep him from ramming into a group that included players and umpires.

Cedeno, known for violent temper outbursts in the past, announced during spring training this year that he spent seven weeks in a stress-management course last winter learning to keep his cool.

Cedeno said he has discussed his experiences with Soto.

"I've told him that someday it may really get him in trouble," Cedeno said. "But that's something he has to decide on his own. There's nothing that anybody else can do about that. I know. I used to be just as explosive as Mario is."

Soto told The Cincinnati Enquirer on Monday that he isn't sitting on the edge of his seat awaiting the league's decision on whether to suspend him.

"I don't know if they will suspend me or not," Soto said. "I don't care if they suspend me. That's their decision."

Controversy hits 'Horns

AUSTIN (AP) — The second-ranked Texas Longhorns have advanced to the College World Series for the 24th time, which is a record, but the game that sent them there ended in controversy.

Coach Cliff Gustafson of Texas, which edged unranked Lamar 6-5 in the finals of the NCAA Central Regional Baseball Tournament, says television replays indicate a Texas runner credited with scoring the winning run was out at the plate.

Gustafson said from his vantage point in the third-base coaching box it appeared Bill Bates "got under the tag" of Lamar catcher Dennis Dresden.

BUT AFTER watching two ESPN replays Monday, Gustafson said, "The angle they had on TV, he looked out."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday that TV camera angles "clearly show" Dresden tagging Bates before his foot reached home plate.

Gustafson said he would not have challenged the umpire if Bates had been called out.

Bates was called safe after sprinting from third on a one-out fly ball to left by Dennis Cook in the 10th inning of Sunday night's game. The victory sends Texas, the defending national champion, to the College World Series at Omaha, Neb., on Friday.

Players from Lamar, a Beaumont school, were furious at umpire Tony Patch's call on Bates. A broken chair was found outside the umpires' dressing room.

"After you see it (ESPN replay), the way you feel about it is the way I feel about it ... only worse," said Lamar coach Jim Gilligan. "I think it's obvious what happened."

"We're hurt. We're really hurt," he said. "After the game, our kids were furious to the point I hate to see. They had every right to be mad. They were hurting terribly, and they're hurting very bad today, and they'll hurt some more tomorrow. But it will go away after a while."

GUSTAFSON said, "The last play was one they'll forever blame for losing the tournament because they feel they got robbed instead of getting beat. Lamar played such a gallant game, and it was a hard-fought game all the way."

Lamar, playing in temperatures in the 90s, eliminated Nevada-Las Vegas 10-5 in a game that ended only two hours before the Cardinals played Texas, which had 24 hours rest.

If Bates had been called out, the game would have gone into the 11th tied 5-5. Even if Lamar had won, however, the two teams would have played again Monday night for the tournament championship.

Patch, a veteran PAC-10 umpire from San Francisco, also will umpire in the College World Series.

Texas' Larry Parrish (15) scores as Kansas City catcher Don Slaught tries to make the tag, but the Rangers lost in extra innings.

Chisox end Jays' streak

Motley wrecks Texas Rangers in 10

By The Associated Press

Harold Baines and LaMarr Hoyt may be among the reasons the Chicago White Sox aren't running away with the American League West like last year. But they're also among the reasons the Toronto Blue Jays no longer have a seven-game winning streak.

Baines, hitting just .201 entering the game after a 25-homer, 105-RBI season a year ago, broke out with four hits as the White Sox topped the Blue Jays 8-1 Tuesday night. Hoyt, last year's American League Cy Young Award winner, broke a personal three-game losing streak, limiting Toronto to six hits over eight innings and running his record to 4-5.

"I try not to talk about slumps," Baines said after setting up the first White Sox run with a double, tripling home the second, and starting a six-run eighth innning with a single.

"I never lose confidence in my ability and I never have a negative attitude."

The Chicago win kept Toronto from moving closer in the American League East on the cooling-off Detroit Tigers, beaten 8-5 by the Oakland A's. It was the Tigers' fourth loss in five games and dropped them to a still torrid 36-9, still 5½ games ahead of the Blue Jays, who have the second-best winning percentage in baseball.

The game in Boston between the Red Sox and the Minnesota Twins was rained out after four innings with Minnesota leading 5-0 and Frank Viola working on a one-hit, eighth strikeout game.

"We were pitching Baines wrong, making the wrong pitches," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "But he only hit one good one, really, that triple. The other ones just found holes."

But Baines, who was hitting line drives right at people earlier in the season, just smiled at that.

"That's part of baseball," he said. "Sometimes they just fall in."

Royals 7, Rangers 5

Darryl Motley, who earlier had crashed a two-run homer, ripped a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning to give Kansas City the win.

The Rangers had rallied for three runs in the eighth before Motley cracked his single off the glove of second baseman Wayne Tolleson.

"The infield was in and I hit a high hopper and it went through," Motley said. "I didn't think it would be a base hit, but it jumped over his head. I thought it was going to be right at him."

George Brett and Dane Iorg, who had opened the inning with consecutive singles before Frank White was intentionally walked, scored on Motley's hit.

Dan Quisenberry, 2-2, relieved Bud Black in the eighth and gave up a single by Buddy Bell and a double by Larry Parrish to tie the game.

A's 8, Tigers 5

Mike Heath had a three-run homer and Rickey Henderson a three-run triple to pace Oakland and give the Tigers a taste of the medecine they've been giving to the rest of the American League.

"We haven't had too many games like this. It's tough to play catch-up," said Detroit's Darrell Evans.

Bill Krueger, 3-1, was the winning pitcher and had the benefit of an 8-1 lead by the fifth inning.

"That's the kind of thing they've done all year. It's nice to be able to do it to them," said Krueger, who was battered by the Tigers in a loss at Detroit 11 days ago.

Chet Lemon had a homer for the Tigers as Milt Wilcox lost his second game in eight decisions.

Orioles 3, Mariners 2

With Seattle leading 2-1 and two outs in the top of the eighth, Mariners reliever Paul Mirabella decided to pitch around Eddie Murray. He walked him, then he walked Gary Roenicke and up came Benny Ayala, hitting .116.

Ayala bounced a single up the middle, scoring the tying and winning runs.

"Agressive hitting really pays off," Ayala said. "I was trying to get down on it. Sometimes they're not going to be hit real hard. It found the right place."

Mark Langston, Seattle's rookie left-hander, struck out nine and seemed on the way to the win when he gave up a two-out single to Cal Ripken. That brought in Mirabella.

Tippy Martinez, 2-4, took over with one out and the bases loaded in the seventh, pitched out of the inning and went the rest of the way to pick up the win.

Angels 6, Yankees 5

Juan Beniquez had five consecutive singles as the Angels jumped out to a 6-1 lead, then survived three straight Yankee homers in the sixth inning to hold off the New Yorkers.

"I'm just trying to make contact and go with the pitch," said Beniquez, who now has 15 hits in his last 22 at-bats. "I'm playing more now and the weather is heating up. Being in the lineup gives me a chance to get in a lot of swings in batting practice."

Rod Carew added two singles to the 13-hit California attack, which drove Phil Niekro 7-3 from the mound in the fourth inning.

But the Yankees bounced back in the sixth on a two-run homer by Don Mattingly, then consecutive shots by Don Baylor and Dave Winfield. The last two came off Craig Swan, who relieved winning pitcher Frank LaCorte. LaCorte was making his first start since 1979.

Curt Kaufman and Luis Sanchez finished up for California, which also got a home run from Reggie Jackson.

Brewers 5, Indians 3

Moose Haas yielded two runs in the third inning, one on Brook Jacoby's fifth homer, but settled down and retired 19 of the last 21 batters.

"About the fourth or fifth inning I felt real good, that I could throw a strike anywhere with any pitch," said Haas, 3-4, who held Cleveland to six hits.

"I was in a good groove and it's probably the first time I've felt this way this year," he added.

Ben Oglivie had two run-scoring singles for Milwaukee as the Indians lost their fifth straight. Dan Spillner, 0-4, took the loss, giving up five runs on nine hits in 3⅔ innings.

"Early in the season, we weren't getting those key hits with men in scoring position," Oglivie said. "I feel it's just a matter of time now until we start driving in some runs."

AL Roundup

Reds' joker produces win

By The Associated Press

Dave Concepcion has become quite a joker, but he won't get many laughs from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

When Concepcion came to bat with one out in the botttom of the 10th inning Tuesday night and the Cincinnati Reds locked in a 4-4 tie with Pittsburgh, he told Pirate catcher Tony Pena that he was going to end the game with one swing.

"When I got to home plate, I said to Pena, 'I know you're going to call a pitch right here, and I'm going to hit it out.' I was joking with him," Concepcion said.

The shortstop came up a few feet short on his bold prediction, bouncing a ground-rule double over the center-field wall. But he still managed to score the winning run in a 5-4 victory that extended the Reds' winning streak to four and moved them to within a half-game of the lead in the National League West.

Concepcion's double came off reliever Kent Tekulve, 1-5, who then walked Wayne Krenchicki intentionally. Ron Oester coaxed Tekulve for yet another walk to load the bases, and with the Pirate infield and outfield drawn in, pinch-hitter Brad Gulden hit a high-bouncing grounder that third baseman Bill Madlock snared with a leap.

But his throw home tailed away from Pena and cost the Pirates the game.

"I think a good throw would have had me," Concepcion said. "But it was a tough play for him to get in position to throw it."

The error capped a game in which the Reds wasted a two-run lead and had to overcome a two-run deficit to win.

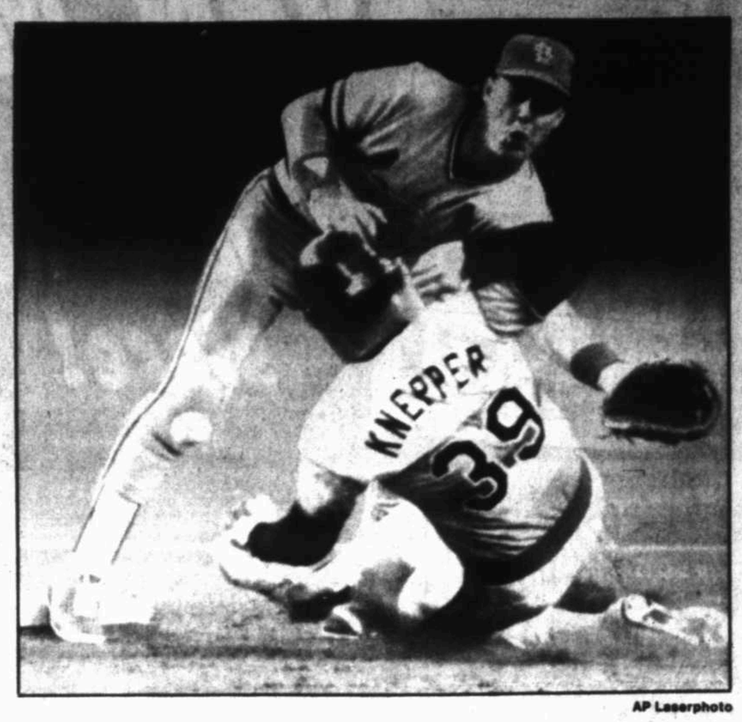

Nick Esasky slammed a solo homer in the second inning, his first since April 10, and Pirates starter Larry McWilliams walked Concepcion with the bases loaded to force in a run in the third.

Esasky's throwing error let in a run and set up another as the Pirates tied it in the fourth. Lee Lacy slammed his third home run of the season — all against the Reds — in the fifth to give Pittsburgh a 4-2 lead.

McWilliams, who was kicked in the arm on a putout at first base in the fifth, gave way to reliever Lee Tunnell to start the sixth. Dann Bilardello promptly hit a two-run homer, his first of the year, to tie it.

Ted Power, 2-0, the third Cincinnati reliever, made his major league-leading 26th appearance of the season and shut out the Pirates on one hit over the last two innings.

Rain, which forced the postponment of two NL games on Memorial Day, again claimed three more — Los Angeles at Montreal, San Diego at New York and San Francisco at Philadelphia.

Houston pitcher Bob Knepper (39) steals a rare base as St. Louis' Tommy Herr can't come up with ball.

NL Roundup

Braves 7, Cubs 4

Atlanta kept pace with the Reds the hard way, rallying to win for the 10th time this season, this time from a 4-0 first-inning deficit.

Bob Horner led the way with two doubles and two singles to drive in three runs.

With the score tied 4-4, Horner legged out his second double to lead off the eighth and scored the go-ahead run when reliever Warren Brusstar, 1-1, walked Albert Hall with the bases loaded. Alex Trevino followed with a two-run single.

Brusstar thought plate umpire Gerry Davis missed several calls, including the final pitch to Hall.

"He took the last pitch away, and that was definitely the biggest pitch of the ball game," Brusstar said.

Horner's heroics enabled Pascual Perez to lift his record to 4-1.

Leon Durham cracked a two-run single to boost his RBI total for the year to 39 and Ron Cey followed with his eighth homer in the first inning, but it wasn't enough to prevent the fourth loss in a row for the Cubs. They hold a half-game lead over Philadelphia in the NL East.

Astros 1, Cardinals 0

Bob Knepper and Frank DiPino combined on a three-hit shutout and Jerry Mumphrey got a measure of revenge as Houston handed St. Louis its seventh loss in eight games.

"I get a kick out of playing the Cardinals," said Mumphrey, who was drafted by St. Louis in 1971 and played over 500 games for them before being traded in 1979. "Any player would probably feel the same way."

Mumphrey drove in the game's only run in the sixth inning off loser Dave LaPoint. Kevin Bass led off with a double, took third on Jim Pankovits' sacrifice, and scored on Mumphrey's double to right.

LaPoint, 5-6, struck out eight.

Knepper, 5-5, allowed only one hit through the first seven innings before leaving with two outs and the bases loaded in the eighth. DiPino got Tom Herr to line out on his first pitch to end threat and retired the side in order in the ninth for his seventh save.

"We've been struggling," said Herr. "We haven't been getting the hit with runners in scoring position with two out all year.

"I would certainly say this team is frustrated right now."

Palmer puts aside pitching for TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Three-time American League Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer has temporarily shelved his pitching aspirations and dreams of 300 victories to join ABC as a color commentator on its major league baseball telecasts.

"He will start Monday night, working with Don Drysdale on the Reds-Dodgers game in Los Angeles," a spokesman for the network said Tuesday.

Palmer, who was released by the Baltimore Orioles on May 17 had been seeking a job with another major league team. He spent his entire 19-year major-league career with the team.

Palmer's lawyer said Tuesday the deal with ABC, with whom the pitcher had been under contract, did not mean he had completely given up on returning to baseball, but the network spokesman said, "He is committed to us for the rest of the regular season."

Attorney Ron Shapiro said before the ABC announcement that if the 38-year-old right-hander "still had the baseball bug later this summer" he felt he could decide then if he wanted to return "next season or possibly later this summer."

Shapiro added that Palmer felt "the career change opportunity was too great to ignore."

Palmer's assignments for the rest of the season will depend on Howard Cosell's schedule, the network spokesman said. If Cosell is not available for baseball coverage, Palmer will join Earl Weaver, his former skipper on the Orioles, and Al Michaels on the "A" team.

Cosell, Weaver and Michaels will work Monday night's Toronto-Detroit game.

Palmer first worked as a commentator on ABC during the 1978 American League Championship series. He also worked the AL series in 1980 and 1982, and was part of ABC's coverage of the 1981 World Series.

During his pitching career Palmer has won 268 games, but was 0-3 in 1984 with a lofty 9.17 earned run average.

After going 16-4 in 1969, Palmer won 20 or more games in eight of the next nine seasons and the Cy Young in 1973-75-76.

Palmer, who at 20 in 1966 became the youngest pitcher ever to hurl a World Series shutout, joined Baltimore in 1965 just after one season in the minors.

Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli dropped Palmer as a starter after one of his frequent injuries, and decided on a four-man rotation.

Boston's 'No. 9' does it better

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Williams hit his 521st home run off Baltimore's Jack Fisher in his final major league at-bat on Sept. 28, 1960.

He circled the bases to the cheers of about 10,000 fans and jogged directly into the Boston dugout and retirement.

Williams stubbornly refused to doff his cap. His only acknowledgment of the cheers was a quick wave.

Williams, who will be 66 in August, didn't have a cap to doff at Fenway Park Tuesday night. But he did even better.

With Joe Cronin in a wheelchair, Williams spoke for both himself and his old Red Sox teammate and manager. And he said it all.

"Baseball is the greatest in Boston and the fans are the greatest — and I salute you," Williams said.

Then, the onetime "Splendid Splinter" got into a golfcart and was driven around the inner walls of the park.

He held aloft a plaque with just the number "9" and waved to acknowledge a standing ovation. Cronin, approaching 78 and ailing, sat in a rooftop luxury box overlooking third base.

Cronin's old No. 4 and Williams' No. 9 were retired in special ceremonies on the Red Sox' annual Jimmy Fund Night.

Cronin, who went from the streets of San Francisco, to All-Star player, to the Hall of Fame to the presidency of the American League, was represented on the field by members of his family.

Mrs. Jean Yawkey, president and a co-owner of the Red Sox, directed the unveiling of the numbers posted under the Jimmy Fund sign on the roof in right field.

They are the first numbers ever retired by the Red Sox. Cronin's No. 4 was worn by several players after he moved up from manager to general manager in 1948. However, no one has worn No. 9 since Williams donned it in 1939.

Cronin and Williams were presented the Thomas A. Yawkey Memorial Award for their longtime efforts in helping the Jimmy Fund, the fund-raising arm of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Then, Williams, heavier but still very active, then took the microphone for a brief acceptance speech.

"I wish I had the ability to say what's in my heart tonight," said Williams, who hit .344 with 521 homers in a fabulous career interrupted by two wars — World War II and the Korean War.

Williams went on to say that the biggest break he ever got was being purchased by the Red Sox and then playing for Cronin as manager.

"I can't tell you how important he was to me," Williams said after a wave to his old boss. "I had understanding from a very, very wonderful man. He taught so manx players so much.

"Joe Cronin was a great player, a great manager, a wonderful father. No one respects you more than I do, Joe. I love you. In my book, you're a great man."

Cronin later held an impromptu news conference in which he recalled stories about Williams.

Charboneau still trying

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates haven't given up hope that Joe Charboneau, one-time American League rookie of the year, will regain his home run power and return to the major leagues.

But the 28-year-old outfielder they once called "Super Joe" has just one homer this season in baseball's lower minors, despite batting against pitchers 10 years his junior.

Charboneau says his spirits have risen this season, even though a .289 batting average and 23 runs batted in at Prince William in the Class A Carolina League haven't earned him a promotion.

"It's too early to give up on him," Pirates General Manager Harding "Pete" Peterson said of Charboneau, a Cleveland Indians' rookie sensation in 1980. "We still have hopes for him. He's been doing all right but not hitting home runs, which is his major asset."

Charboneau has been playing left field and batting fourth or fifth in Prince William's lineup.

"All I've told him is go up there and whale away, just see the ball and hit it," said Prince William Manager John Lipon. "He has only one home run but he's hit some balls hard on the ground, and line drives. He's not getting a lot of good pitches to hit and he sees more breaking balls than anybody else."

Not only is Charboneau a former Cleveland star, but Lipon also once was the Indians' manager. But Lipon never saw Charboneau play for the Indians.

"But I saw a (film) clip. He looked like he just hacked away, just a wild swinger. He's letting it fly at times (now)," Lipon told The Pittsburgh Press. "But, no, he's not hitting the long ball that would carry out. He doesn't have that free-and-easy swing.

"You'll see him get some good swings and some not so good. I understand he used to be a good runner. Some games he runs pretty good, and some games he pulls up a little short. And some days he throws acceptably and some days not."

Lipon suspects Charboneau still is bothered by the back problem that first caused the Indians to option him to Class AAA Charleston in 1981 and, ultimately, to release him.

Charboneau has taken steps to combat rumors of drug use that surfaced when a Milwaukee newspaper printed testimony from a drug investigation that concerned major league players and cocaine. Charboneau's name was mentioned.

Charboneau submitted to a drug test with other Pirates' minor leaguers this spring and since then, "I take one every month on my own. I've had three," he said.

"I pay for it myself and send it to the Pirates. I think it's an excellent idea. If I make it to the big leagues, I'll take it every month, every week, every day, if they want me to."

Despite his wild, carefree reputation, Charboneau has been a good role model for the younger Prince William players, Lipon said.

"He leads them in a right direction. He came to win. And it rubs off on the other players," Lipon said. "They really like him."

Johnny's Bush's choice for lunch

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Johnny's Barbecue hasn't changed in 30 years.

Back in 1951 when Johnny's opened its doors at 316 N. Big Spring St., young oilmen on the rise, such as George H.W. Bush and John Overby, picked it as a gathering spot for lunch.

Bush still chooses it for lunch when he's in town, which is rare because now he's Vice President of the United States. But you could say he's given it the Vice Presidential Seal of Approval.

When the Vice President and his wife, Barbara, return to their hometown Thursday for a West Texas political rally, it will be Johnny's catering the affair in Midland Center.

The event is open to the public and the only charge will be the $4 for Johnny's combination plate consisting of beef, ham, smoked sausage, pinto beans, coleslaw, potato salad and relishes — the same kind of plate he's dished up for 33 years. Doors will open at 11:30 a.m. and Bush will speak at 12:30 p.m.

Sitting on one of the wooden benches at a table, owner John Hackney said preparing for such an event is difficult. "They said there'd be between 500 and 1,000 people. It would be easier if we knew an exact amount. These things always worry you."

To be on the safe side, Hackney is cooking 1,000 pounds of meat and filling a 40 gallon pot with pinto beans, seasoned with chili powder.

The smell of oak and hickory filled the small restaurant — the same way it did 30 years ago.

"Everybody knew everybody else back then. It was just a small town. George and that bunch used to come in here all the time," recalled Hackney.

Looking around the room he laughed, "Nothing's changed." There's still the same wooden benches around the same plastic-topped tables. The same serving line with a shingle roof overhead. The same signs on the back of the walls, advertising breakfast, barbecue sandwiches or the plates of beef, sausage, ham or ribs.

A couple walks in and a man in a booth waves them over. Just like 30 years ago.

Apparently, ribs was the vice president's favorite dish in those early years. When he was in Midland about two years ago, he called in an order for ribs. Hackney later received a card with the Vice Presidential Seal on it.

The card read: Jan. 10, 1982: "Thanks for those fantastic ribs. They were superb. How darn kind of you."

Ribs aren't on Thursday's menu. But Hackney hinted the Vice President might wind up with some.

Voter apathy stalls attempt to recall mayor

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Voter apathy has foiled initial efforts to unseat Odessa Mayor John Minor.

Sworn into office only seven weeks ago, Minor has come under fire after being involved in an altercation at the home of his former girlfriend this past weekend.

According to police reports, Minor forced his way into the woman's home at approximately 2:30 a.m., Friday, and struggled with another man at the home. When police arrived, he was sitting bloodied in his car.

No charges have been filed and Minor's visible wounds are healing. But a group of Odessans upset with the new mayor's actions have added insult to injury by investigating the possibility of forcing a recall election in hopes of removing Minor.

Odessan Catherine Halford, an admitted political activist, has stepped forward as the leader of the recall efforts.

"People know that if I believe in something, I'm not afraid to take the heat," said Ms. Halford, a strong support of former Mayor Bob Bryant who Minor defeated by 110 votes in April. She counted among her supporters 100 weekend phone callers who had indicated an interest in recalling the new mayor, while denying the recall movement was a move to bring back Bryant.

But consultation by Odessa attorneys aligned with the movement with district judges has led Ms. Halford to believe that a recall would be impossible, according to the city charter.

The charter's recall provisions call for 20 percent of approximately 40,000 registered voters in Odessa to sign a petition, half of which must have voted for Minor in the city election.

But only 8,152 (about 20 percent) of the eligible electorate voted, 4,131 for Minor. So, all but about 130 of those who voted for Minor for mayor would have to sign the petition supporting the election calling for his removal.

Though the charter has stalled the recall efforts, consulting attorneys have suggested a citizen could appeal to the City Council to change the charter to make the recall provisions workable.

The Odessa city attorney's office told Minor Tuesday afternoon that the charter can only be changed by choice of the voters. Petitions with 10 percent of registered voters' signatures must be gathered to call the election for the charter change.

If the change was approved, the anti-Minor group would still be faced with collecting the second set of signatures to call the recall election, then encourage enough voters to the polls to sway the result against the new mayor.

Minor said he will not resign. The City Council would have to appoint a new leader if he did.

"It's politically motivated," said Minor of the recall movement. "It means nothing essentially. I don't think they can get enough signatures."

"It will have little or no effect on my role as mayor," he said, insisting he would "continue on with the program."

He questioned why no move was ever made public to recall his predecessor, who has appeared before the federal grand jury in Midland in connection with the burning of an Odessa office building he owned at the time of the fire. Minor recalled considering working for Bryant's recall last year.

While suggesting the recall provisions "should be a workable avenue," he stopped short of advocating the change that would make the recall a possibility.

Pointing to the low voter turnout, Minor said "That's a serious problem."

Ms. Halford questioned how Minor could continue after the weekend debacle she said "puts a cap on it for a lot of people."

Pointing to the contradiction of campaign promises to clean up Odessa crime and his weekend conduct, Ms. Halford said "I think everybody feels he campaigned on a false premise."

Reports of the incident indicated Minor had left a revolver at the woman's home and had returned to retrieve it when the fight began; and that he had taken the woman to a local bar.

"It's not appropriate for our mayor to carry a gun," said Ms. Halford.

Noting the mayor's concession that he had made a mistake, she said "I don't think that adequately explains the situation."

Minor has pointed to the stress he has been under since being fired as municipal court administrator in November 1983 and taking office amid continuing investigation by the federal grand jury of the warants division which he supervised. A lawsuit he filed against the city after his firing is also pending.

Kindergartners share wealth of knowledge they have learned

Nine months ago many a brave, curious, hesitant or downright frightened five-year-old walked into an unfamiliar room to begin the first day of kindergarten.

Today — the last day of classes — it's all second nature to these veterans of the classroom. The Jones Elementary kindergarten students of Dana Pruitt and Kim Doyle were more than willing to share the vast wealth of knowledge they had amassed over the course of their first school year.

While most of the children said they had studied reading, spelling, writing and counting, Wesley Thoman — wiggling a loose incisor — said he learned how to pull teeth. "Jimmy said to tie it to the door and slam it shut. I tried it yesterday, but it hurt."

"My mom pulls mine out with a pliers," Rory Brantley confided.

"We learned about zoo animals, and Jimmy brought a real baby bunny," said six-year-old Gary Boyd. "It's in that red box."

Rory boasted that he had learned to read "every word there is" as well as "addition and take away."

"That's 'traction," Amber Willis corrected.

When asked what he had learned, blond curly-headed Loren Stillwell replied, "Everything, I hope." Clearly he was hoping to put this school business behind him once and for all.

"I learned how to write my name and I learned addition and that's all," said Kevin Lalk, who is "fixin' to be 6."

"I learned giraffes have long necks and zebras have stripes," a freckled Katie McKandles contributed.

Billy Cooper boasted he had learned to ride his bike without training wheels, and Jennifer Elliott said she had learned to run.

Oeta Dorland, whose favorite part of kindergarten is kitchen, learned to "write my name, do the calendar and play nice."

"Writin' and readin'," answered 5-year-old Tim Lupardus, who said with a dimpled smile his favorite part of school is afternoon, because he can go home.

Six state legislators back Hance in run-off

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Six state legislators who have worked with Kent Hance and Lloyd Doggett in the State Senate melded together their opinions into one solid stand behind Hance in the Democratic run-off for U.S. Senate.

The six — all representing areas west of Interstate 35 — stopped at Chaparral Aviation Tuesday afternoon for a brief news conference in the final push before Saturday's runoff. Hance, now a U.S. congressman, and Doggett, a state senator from the Austin area, ran neck-and-neck in the May primary. Saturday will decide who goes up against Republican congressman Phil Gramm in the November election.

The senatorial troop consisted of Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, Tati Santiesteban of El Paso, Bill Sarpalius of Hereford, Grant Jones of Abilene, Bob Glasgow of Stephenville and John Montford of Lubbock.

All six painted Doggett as too oriented to specific interest groups to be effective in the U.S. Senate. Hance, they contended, can work with all groups — black, white, Hispanic, liberal, independent and conservative.

Santiesteban criticized Doggett for being in favor of amnesty for illegal aliens and against sanctions for employers who hire those aliens.

"Because of his (Hance's) stand on amnesty, a lot of Hispanics are supporting Hance," he said of the congressman's opposition to the issue.

"Citizenship is something that is earned. You don't say, 'You have been here illegally and now you're here legally.' And Hance's opponent believes we should punish the people who hire illegal aliens. It will discriminate against Mexican-American people like myself," said Santiesteban. "That's the most prejudicial issue I've seen in my 18 years in government."

Santiesteban said he would take the same stand even if he thought his own political future were at stake.

Farabee brought up the I-35 theory: "That unless you live east of I-35, you don't have a chance in Texas politics. Most of us live west of it," he said of the six men. "We're going to disprove that. Hance has the best chance to win in November."

Glasgow's friendship with Hance dates back to their law school days and continued into the time they served in the State Senate together. The Stephenville attorney sees Hance as having the capability to pull together all factions of the Democratic Party. "Doggett works hard and is articulate," he said. "But he represents a special interest constituency. In the U.S. Senate, he has to represent everyone and he has to have a broad concept of what this state needs."

The $5,000 donation made recently by U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy's political action committee to Doggett's campaign puzzled the state senators. While there is nothing illegal about it, said Montford, "I don't know why he would do that unless he thought Doggett would go along with him."

Museum plans to demolish Lancaster House

From Staff Reports

Phase II of the Museum of the Southwest building expansion plan will begin immediately, A.W Dillard Jr., president of the museum's board of trustees, announced today.

Part of that plan includes removing the Lancaster property and tearing up Indiana and K streets where they are adjacent to the museum. That area will then be landscaped for public use. Demolition of the Lancaster House will begin June 15.

"I'm pleased to unveil our plans to provide 10,000 square feet of support space for collection management, exhibition preparation and facilities for educational programs and public meetings," Dillard said. "Although this addition is not as extensive as originally planned, it will allow the museum to operate more professionally and better serve the community."

In 1981, the San Antonio architectural firm of Ford, Powell and Carson was chosen to design a multi-faceted expansion project. It was agreed by the board of trustees to phase the expansion rather than launch a single building effort.

The first phase was completed in February 1983 with the opening of the renovated Stables Gallery and the closing of Indiana Street between J and K streets. Phase II will include the construction of a new facility as well as extensive landscaping.

"Building collection storage may not seem glamorous, but with the rapid growth of our permanent collection over the past four years, with gifts like the Hogan Collection of the Taos Society of Artists, we desperately need to upgrade our collection storage facility in accordance with professional standards set by the American Association of Museums.

"In addition, through the support of the Weyman-LaForce Archaeological Fund, we now have the resources to systematically research our Archaeological Collection. Presently, under extremely inadequate conditions, archaeological research is being conducted in the basement of the Turner House, while educational workshops and programs are held in the stables. Educational facilities in the new addition will allow us to re-allocate necessary space in the stables building for our research to continue," stated Dillard.

The museum complex consists of the Turner House donated to the county in 1968, the Thomas Gallery added in 1970, the Stables Gallery renovated in 1983 to include exhibition space, classroom, library and office space, the Marian Blakemore Planetarium built in 1975 to serve the Midland Independent School District and the community and the Lancaster property.

Phase II will begin with the tearing up of Indiana and K streets and landscaping for public use. All structures on the Lancaster Property will be leveled.

"It was an agonizing decision for the board to remove the Lancaster buildings. However, they just do not lend themselves to the development of museum support space which we badly need.

"As a home they were splendid, but as part of a professional museum facility, they are totally inadequate. The board has been advised by three independent consultants that it would not be professionally responsible or even feasible to convert the Lancaster buildings into active and safe museum support space," Dillard stated.

"Our plans for expansion and upgrading our facilities have been discussed with Naomi Lancaster's heirs and they have recognized and acknowledged the necessity for the changes. Upkeep on the Lancaster buildings represents a continual and substantial drain on our resources which need to be channeled to constructive and positive avenues of community programming."

A public meeting and press conference will be held at 11:30 a.m. June 8 at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Members of the board of trustees and museum staff will be available in the lobby of the planetarium to answer questions directly following the program which includes presentations by Dillard, Mike Collins, chairman of the architectural committee; Jerry C. Porter, director of the museum; and Jeannine Donnelly, president of Las Manos; explaining the expansion plans.

RECALL

"If he cannot handle stress without losing control of himself and breaking the law, he has no business in the office," said Ms. Halford.

The recall organizer also wondered about the legitimacy of a mayor supported by the Odessans for Decency who conducted himself in such a way and a group that would support such a candidate.

"They don't really care about the morality of the people they support, they only care about getting their candidates elected," she said.

Minor admitted his actions hurt this link "in some ways," but said public reaction has been "basically tolerant."

"I'm not a member of Odessans for Decency, but I agree with a lot of the things they believe in," he said.

Ms. Halford said six potential candidates, including Bryant, have already been mentioned should there be a recall election.

Calling for a change that would make a recall possible, Ms. Halford referred to the inability to force a recall under the current city charter "an unfavorable reflection on the community that nothing can be done because not enough people went to vote."

Four local churches victims of burglaries

From Staff Reports

Four churches were hit by burglars in the past two days, according to police, with losses reported in excess of $4,000.

The churches are the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 Golf Course Road; St. Paul Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive; the Church of God, 5300 Thomason; and the Church of God of Prophecy, 5301 Thomason.

Items taken ranged from cash and checks to public address equipment and an acoustic guitar.

In other burglary complaints filed within the past 24 hours, W.W. Atwood Jr. of 3230 Camarie said $800 in quarters was taken from his residence Tuesday night. Entry was through a window.

James Prescott, 1204 McDonald, told officers that tools, a battery charger and an ice chest worth a total of $1,375 were missing after someone gained entrance to his home through an unlocked rear door Tuesday.

And Charles Hall of Rt. 11, Midland, said tires, guns and household items valued at a total of $4,400 were stolen from a commercial storage building at 2900 W. Kentucky Ave. on Monday night. Two locks had been cut to gain entry to the building.

In an aggravated assault complaint, Dewayne Grizzel of 1502 S. Colorado said a man came to his home about 12:45 a.m. today and accused him of stealing his dog.

The man then took an ax and did $1,250 worth of damage to a motorcycle, a TV set and stereo equipment. The man also, according to Grizzel, stole three tool boxes containing tools valued at $1,000 and hit him and a male companion with the ax. An investigation continues.

Recess was very big with most of the students.

"I learned math," Lana Hollensed said, making a face. "And I learned how to spell my name and some other stuff too."

Smita Poudel said she mastered coloring inside the lines.

Steven Taylor was so anxious to share his educational experiences that, when asked his name, he blurted out, "I learned a bunch of addition and sustraction. Mostly it's been hard." But he said "sustraction" was his favorite subject.

Vance Ray, who has "some more names in my name, but I forgot them," is obviously one of those creative children who does not see the world through the eyes of a typical kid.

"What's your favorite part of kindergarten," he was asked.

"This side."

"Huh?"

"Well, what do you mean?" he queried. "That side (pointing to the other kindergarten room) or this side?"

Try again. "What do you like best about going to school?"

"Sinners."

"What?"

"Sinners. You know, on the stage and stuff."

"Assemblies?"

"Yeah."

Glasgow pointed out that Texas is receiving fewer federal dollars than it sends to the federal government in taxes. "We need someone who can go to Washington and work with all groups in the U.S. Senate. Someone who can work with anyone to benefit the state of Texas. Hance has the ability to influence people."

Jones added, "If you look at the organization and the people who endorse the candidates, Hance has a following of a group of people who have the state of Texas in mind."

Agents conduct raids

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The head of the local Texas Alcohol Beverage Commission office is defending the way agents conducted raids on underage drinking parties last weekend, saying they did a good job and would carry out future raids in a similar manner.

The commission was criticized earlier this week by Suzanne Hildebrand, president of the local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, for failing to issue more citations to minors who allegedly broke the law.

Thomas said about 20 citations were issued by seven of his agents and five San Antonio police officers during raids at four high school graduation parties.

Odessan reports she was attacked

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An eastside Odessa woman reported being attacked in the 3500 block of Boulder Tuesday night by two Hispanic men.

The woman, no age available, reported she was walking along Boulder near its intersection with Grandview in Odessa when two men drove up and attacked her from behind.

The report indicates the two men pulled the woman to the ground and attempted to sexually assault her before they were discouraged by a passing car and her struggling. She declined medical treatment, but sustained cuts to her face, arms, legs and chest, according to the report.

Proposals would extend citizens' rights with utility companies

Carol Barger

AUSTIN (AP) — State utility rules proposed in response to consumer complaints should make the difference in life and death for some elderly people, says an attorney for senior citizens.

Lanetta Cooper of Belton, counsel for Senior Citizen Crusaders, recalled Tuesday that 59 people had died in Dallas of heat-related causes in 1978 and 1980, and said, "This summer has all the indications of another heat wave."

She said, however, Senior Citizen Crusaders views rules proposed by the Public Utility Commission as a commitment to Texans "that we will no longer have to hear the horror stories of elderly men and women dying from heat stroke or heat exhaustion or hypothermia because of the fears that their electricity will be disconnected."

One proposal would prohibit an electric utility for up to two months from discontinuing service to a residence if halting the service would result in someone becoming "seriously ill or more seriously ill..."

"Under the proposed rules, consumers receive more time, more rights, more information and a more workable system of utility regulation," said Carol Barger, executive director of the southwest regional office of the Consumers Union.

Ms. Cooper and Ms. Barger were joined at a Capitol news conference by state Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, and spokesmen for the Office of Public Utility Counsel and the Texas Tenants Union.

"Most customers have no idea what rights they have, and utility companies don't have the habit of telling customers about their rights," Price said.

He said the proposed rules, drafted after nine months of meetings between consumer groups and utilities, "are good compromises between the disparate needs of the utilities and the customers."

Price said a "hot-and-cold" rule that takes into account widely varying temperatures in Texas could be a model for other states.

The proposal would prohibit any electric utility from terminating residential service when the previous day's high temperature has reached 98 degrees or above, or dropped to 32 or below, and "is expected to remain at those levels for the next 24 hours" according to National Weather Service reports.

Other proposed rules would:

— Increase from 23 to 26 days the time consumers have to pay their bills.

— Provide payment plans for those who are experiencing temporary financial difficulties.

— Provide information on where to get financial help to pay utility bills.

— Require a more complete customer "Bill of Rights."

Ms. Barger said the companies had not given a final OK to the changes, but she thought the PUC would adopt them.

Testing soil for lead content to continue in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — City officials say soil tests near 19 sites with high lead levels began before an environmental group approved the additional checks.

The Dallas Environmental Health Commission on Tuesday formally approved another round of soil testing.

Herbert Harker, a city air pollution control specialist, told commission members that 30 of the 84 new soil samples had been collected. He said results of tests on all samples will be presented at the commission's June 11 meeting.

A citywide study identified the 19 sites as having elevated lead levels. Committee members said they believed that additional testing around the sites, many of which are located near freeways, would show a rapid drop-off in lead levels as the distance from roadways increased.

New soil samples were being taken from a radius of 150 feet around 17 sites with lead levels of 1,000 parts per million and in a radius of 300 feet around two sites with levels greater than 1,000 ppm.

Commission member Dr. Tom Kurt, a Dallas toxicologist, recommended the additional testing following the release of the citywide study of lead contamination.

City officials said the study identified the 19 sites with lead levels in excess of what some health experts consider to be a health hazard to children under age 6.

Kurt did not attribute the soil contamination to auto emissions, but said he was not surprised by high lead levels near freeways.

Jet returns to DFW for emergency landing

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An American Airlines spokesman says a jet with 142 passengers aboard was forced to return to Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport after takeoff when a fire-warning light came on in the cockpit.

No one aboard the flight Tuesday was injured and no fire resulted, said Joe Stroop, American manager of corporate communications.

The passengers were transferred to two other American flights to Newark, N.J., the destination of grounded flight 510, he said.

Airline officials said the DC-9 Super 80 jet took off from the airport at 3:05 p.m.

A cockpit warning light went on shortly after takeoff, indicating a fire in the auxilliary power unit, a small engine that provides power to start the plane's two main engines, Stroop said.

He said the pilot then activated two fire extinguishers adjacent to the power unit. But the warning light remained on and the pilot notified the flight tower of a possible emergency and returned to the airport about 3:30 p.m.

Airport fire officials, notified by American, stood by until the jet landed safely. An inspection of the plane revealed no fire.

Once in a Lifetime Celebrations

KEEPSAKE OCCASIONS

If wedding bells will be ringing soon, many cherished celebrations are sure to be coming along the way. Engagement announcements, bridal party get-togethers and even a warm welcome home from the honeymoon are only a few of those very special moments which will never be forgotten. To make any of these occasions extra memorable, offer your best wishes by hosting this elegant brunch created by The Lipton Kitchens.

Start by treating your guests to Peaches 'N Almond Cream made with almond pleasure herbal tea. With just a whirl of the blender, this rich and fruity beverage promises to be an eye opener.

Then show how easy omelets for six can be with Sensational Pinwheel Omelet. This cleverly rolled omelet has a delicious spinach-ham filling tucked inside and Golden Mushroom-Wine Sauce drizzled over the outside. The sauce is tastefully seasoned in one convenient step by golden mushroom soup mix.

For a lusciously grand finale, serve Berries Au Chocolate. This spectacular creamy raspberry custard is handsomely presented on a chocolate base. It's a perfect choice for entertaining since its unflavored gelatine base allows you to make it well in advance of your elegant affair.

Of course, you don't have to put this menu on hold until you hear wedding bells. This festive brunch is perfect not only for special celebrations, but also for times as casual as a weekend get-together of close friends.

PEACHES 'N ALMOND CREAM

2-1/2 cups boiling water
5 almond herbal tea bags
1 can (16 oz.) sliced peaches in heavy syrup, drained
2 cups (1 pt.) vanilla ice cream
2 teaspoons lemon juice

In teapot, pour boiling water over almond herbal tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags; chill.

In blender, combine tea, peaches, ice cream and lemon juice. Process at high speed until blended. Makes about 6 servings.

BERRIES AU CHOCOLATE

1/2 pint fresh raspberries
1 envelope unflavored gelatine
7 tablespoons sugar
2 egg yolks
1 egg
1 cup (1/2 pt.) light cream or half and half
3 tablespoons orange liqueur
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1/2 cup whipping or heavy cream, whipped
4 squares (1 oz. ea.) semi-sweet chocolate, melted

Reserve 6 raspberries for garnish.

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine with sugar; blend in egg yolks and egg beaten with light cream. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Stir in liqueur and vanilla. Pour into large bowl and chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

Fold in whipped cream, then raspberries. Turn into six 1/2-cup molds or bowl; chill until almost firm. Evenly top each mold with hot melted chocolate, tilting molds to spread chocolate and cover gelatine completely; chill until firm. To serve, unmold onto serving dishes. Garnish with reserved raspberries and, if desired, additional whipped cream and mint leaves. Makes about 6 servings.

SENSATIONAL PINWHEEL OMELET

10 eggs
1/2 cup water
1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, thawed and drained
1-1/2 cups shredded cheddar cheese (about 6 oz.)
1/4 pound thinly sliced cooked ham
Golden Mushroom-Wine Sauce*

Preheat oven to 350°.

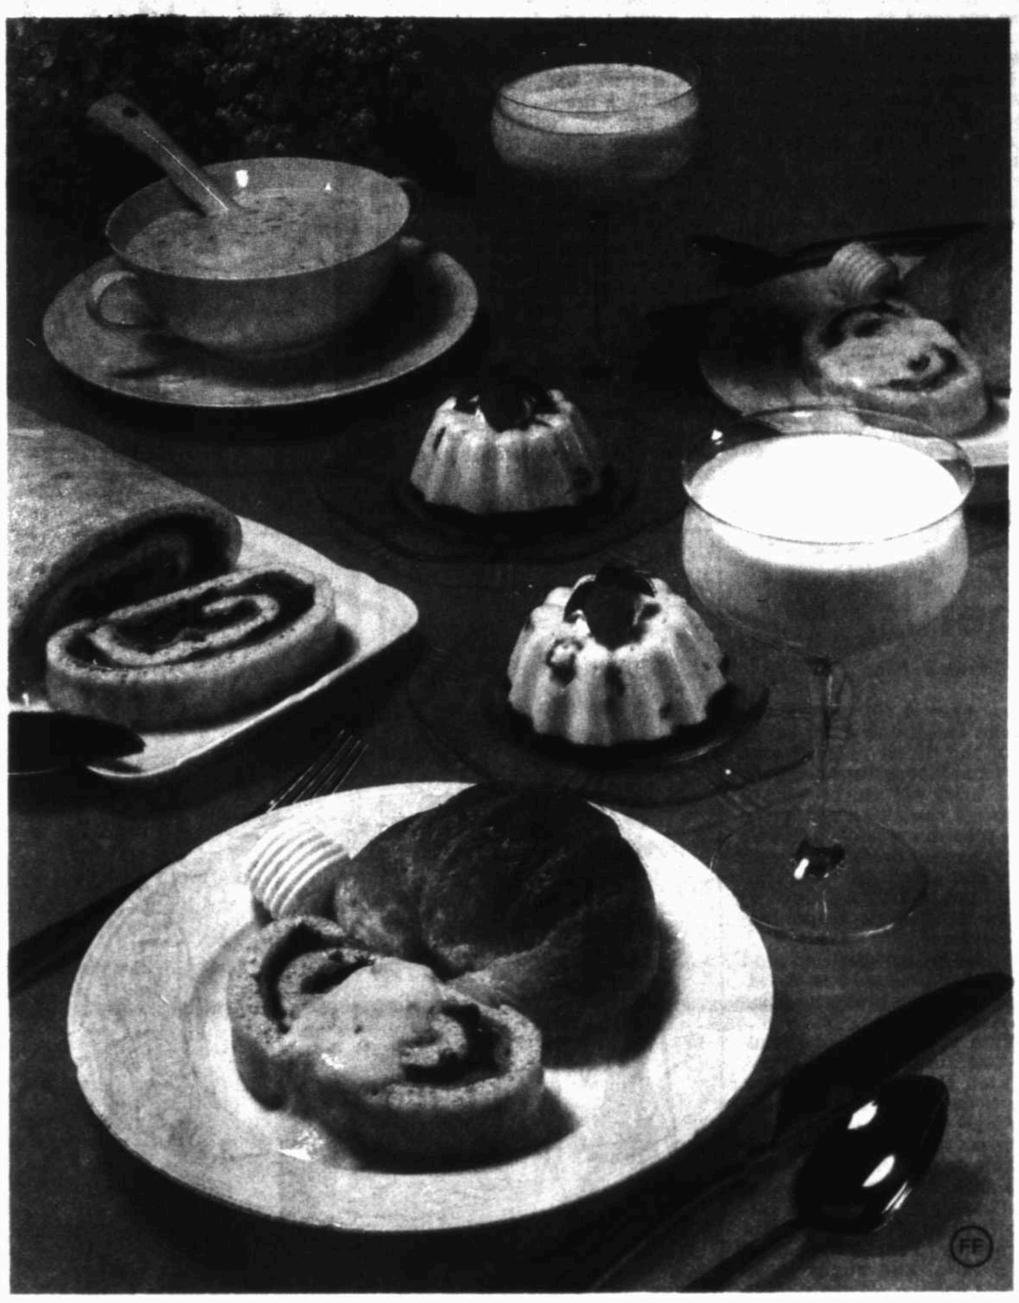

Beat eggs with water; pour into wax paper-lined 15-1/2" x 10-1/2" x 1" jelly roll pan. Bake 20 minutes or until golden. Loosen egg from sides of pan; turn onto second sheet of wax paper. Let cool 5 minutes; carefully remove wax paper.

Combine spinach with cheese; evenly arrange ham and spinach mixture on egg. Roll, starting at 10-1/2-inch end, jelly-roll style. Return to jelly-roll pan and bake 15 minutes or until cheese is melted. Serve with Golden Mushroom-Wine Sauce. Makes about 6 servings.

Golden Mushroom-Wine Sauce — In medium saucepan, blend 1 envelope golden mushroom soup mix, 1/2 teaspoon dill, 1-1/2 cups milk and 1/4 cup dry white wine. Bring to the boiling point, then simmer, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened, about 5 minutes. Makes about 1-1/4 cups sauce.

TIPS FOR BREWING HERBAL TEA

- USE FRESH, COLD WATER
  Cold water is aerated (full of oxygen) to bring out the full character of tea.
- BRING TO A ROLLING BOIL
  Boiling water releases the full flavor and fragrance from tea leaves. Avoid boiling too long or boiling twice.
- PREHEAT THE TEAPOT OR CUP
  Fill teapot or cup with hot water and let stand a few minutes to preheat.
- USE ONE TEA BAG PER CUP
  This gives each cup the maximum flavor, color and body.
- POUR AND COVER
  Pour in boiling water immediately and cover to retain heat.
- BREW 3 TO 5 MINUTES
  Brew by the clock, not by color. Some teas brew light, others dark. For most teas, 3 to 5 minutes is recommended.
- SQUEEZE
  A gentle squeeze will remove every delicious drop of tea.
- SERVE
  Serve, if desired, with sugar or honey. Enjoy!

TIPS FOR PERFECT PUNCHES

- For a spectacular centerpiece, dress up the punch bowl with a ring of delicate flowers or fresh fruits. Or, tie a color-coordinated ribbon around the punch bowl, ending with a giant bow into which you can tuck a few fragrant blossoms.
- Punches should be served well-chilled; either add ice cubes to the individual servings, or use an ice mold in the punch. For pretty-as-a-picture ice, you can freeze mint leaves, berries or slices of citrus fruits in the cubes or mold. Just follow this simple procedure: 1) Fill the mold or ice tray one-third full with water and freeze until partially frozen, 2) arrange the garnish on the ice and freeze again until the garnish is fixed in place, and 3) gently fill with liquid and freeze until solid.
- Adding soda, sparkling wine, or champagne to your punch? Always add it well-chilled and at the last moment, to preserve the effervescence. And, to avoid excess foaming, pour it slowly and gently down the side of the punch bowl.
- Another special touch: Try floating lemon slices atop the punch, each crowned with a delicate blossom or sprig of fresh mint.

SENSATIONAL SHOWERS

Is hosting a bridal shower in the forecast for your future? If so, make it easy, yet exciting with this elegant array of irresistable party fare from The Lipton Kitchens.

To get those tastebuds moving, serve South of the Border Spread. Its two doubly delicious layers, creamy smooth avocado on top of a zesty sour cream and cheese combination, are easily held together with an unflavored gelatine base.

Follow that terrific taste sensation with a toast for the soon-to-be bride. Fruit Cocktail Punch is a gentle orange herbal tea-based beverage that's chock-full of luscious fresh fruits.

To complete the appetizing array, try cheesy good Zucchini Bites and Sweet 'N Sour Mini Kabobs. These two tasty finger foods are as easy to make as they are to eat, thanks to the convenient all-in-one seasoning of golden onion and tomato-onion soup mixes.

Make sure you're prepared for the shower predicted in your future. This palate-pleasing combination will bring you buckets of success.

SWEET 'N SOUR MINI KABOBS

1 can (20 oz.) pineapple chunks in heavy syrup, drained (reserve syrup)
1 pound boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 medium green peppers, cut into 1-inch chunks
1 envelope tomato-onion soup mix
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons vinegar

Preheat oven to 350°.

On wooden toothpicks, alternately thread pineapple, chicken and green pepper. Place kabobs in shallow baking pan and bake 20 minutes or until chicken is tender.

Meanwhile, in medium saucepan, blend tomato-onion soup mix, reserved syrup, water and vinegar. Bring to a boil, then simmer, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened, about 5 minutes. Serve with kabobs. Makes about 4 dozen mini kabobs.

FRUIT COCKTAIL PUNCH

3 cups boiling water
12 orange herbal tea bags
1 cup seedless grapes
1 cup chopped orange
1 cup chopped peaches
1 cup chopped pears
1 cup sliced strawberries
2 bottles (28 oz. ea.) ginger ale, chilled
2 cups (1 pt.) orange sherbet

In teapot, pour boiling water over orange herbal tea bags; cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags; chill.

In punch bowl, combine tea with fruit. Just before serving, add ginger ale and top with scoops of sherbet. Serve with ice. Makes about 25 (5 oz.) servings.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER SPREAD

2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
1-1/2 cups water
2 medium avocados, mashed (about 2 cups)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1-1/2 cups shredded natural Monterey jack cheese with jalapeño peppers (about 4-1/2 oz.)
1/2 pint (8 oz.) sour cream
1/2 cup sliced pitted ripe olives
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

In medium saucepan, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over water; let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Pour 1/2 cup mixture into medium bowl; with wire whip or rotary beater, blend in avocado, lemon juice, garlic salt and hot pepper sauce. Turn into 5-cup mold or bowl; set aside.

To remaining mixture in saucepan, add cheese; stir over low heat until cheese is melted. With wire whip or rotary beater, blend in sour cream. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture is consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Fold in remaining ingredients. Turn onto avocado layers; chill until firm. Makes about 5 cups spread.

ZUCCHINI BITES

1 envelope golden onion soup mix
1-1/2 cups shredded zucchini (about 1 medium)
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese (about 4 oz.)
1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese
4 eggs
3/4 teaspoon basil

Preheat oven to 325°.

In large bowl, combine all ingredients. Into well-greased 7-1/2" x 9-3/4" mini muffin pans, spoon mixture. Bake 20 minutes or until golden. Makes about 24 appetizers.

Fresh salmon now available all year long

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Americans love fish and seafood, and manage to put away about 5 billion pounds a year, which is 30 percent more than we ate a decade ago.

This increase is partly due to the fact that many fish are now available fresh the year round, instead of only a month or so. One of these is salmon, famous for steaks, creamy mousse and casseroles.

There are several types of salmon in the Atlantic Ocean and even more in the Pacific. My favorite is the West Coast coho or silver salmon. Thus, I was delighted to learn that a coho producing farm in Bremerton, Wash., has begun airlifting these fish to supermarkets in New York and other cities the year round.

Cohos are usually available in fish markets in three sizes: whole deboned, about 10 ounces; butterfly fillet, about 8 ounces; and ordinary fillet, about 4 ounces.

Here's a recipe for one of these fish baked in silver foil.

BAKED SALMON

1 butterfly fillet silver or coho salmon, folded
Salt and pepper to taste
6 frozen artichoke hearts, thawed
3 thin slices onion
2 thin slices lemon
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Rinse fish in cold water and pat dry. In center of 12- by 18-inch piece of heavy duty or double thickness foil, place salmon. Season cavity with salt and pepper, if desired. Arrange artichokes, onion, lemon and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine in salmon cavity. Top fish with remaining butter. Bring sides of foil together to seal tightly. Fold and seal ends. Place fish on baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for about 20 minutes, until salmon flakes easily with a fork. Makes 1 serving.

Carrots, brown rice combined

CARROT BROWN RICE

2½ cups chicken broth
1 cup select brown rice
½ pound carrots, pared and cut diagonally into ¾-inch pieces
2 medium onions, sliced
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt

Bring broth to a boil. Add rice, carrots, onion, butter and salt; stir. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all liquid is absorbed. —(AP)

Copley News Service

For thousands of years cooks have used wild and cultivated onions to flavor almost every kind of dish.

Chives are a versatile and lively helper. They are wonderful with soups, eggs, vegetables, meats and salads. Their fresh, distinctive flavor combines the sweetness of young onions with a very mild hint of garlic.

In France, chives are most often found in egg dishes and sauces. The Japanese use them as a colorful garnish for clear soups. In the Middle East they are often included in spicy stews. Russian cooks add them to beet dishes and lamb. In Italy, chives are popular additions to green salads, and the English are fond of them in cheeses.

Many large supermarkets carry chives during the spring and summer, but you may have to visit an herb store or specialty grocer to find them during other seasons. The best way to be sure of a ready supply of fresh chives, of course, is to grow your own. They are very easy to raise, and a pot of chives in a sunny window adds a cheerful touch to your kitchen all year round.

Almost every garden center carries chive seeds, but you may want to buy potted ones and then transplant them, since it takes three weeks or more for the seeds to germinate. Chives need a light soil — half sand and half loam is ideal — and plenty of water and direct sunlight.

When purple blossoms first appear on your plants, clip them off to keep the greens coming. The blossoms, which have a garlic-like flavor, make a beautiful garnish for clear soups.

Chives are a hardy perennial, and need only be uprooted and separated every two to three years to keep them from clumping together too densely. Plants in outdoor beds should be spaced about 12 inches apart.

Clip back the leaves often to keep them growing rapidly. The clipped leaves may be kept frozen for up to two months.

Generally, when you're cooking with chives, they should be added close to the end of the cooking time. If you're mixing chives with cheeses or other dairy products they should not be added to the mixture until shortly before serving, since their flavor grows stronger the longer they are left in.

In an emergency, freeze-dried chopped chives, available in almost every supermarket, can be substituted for fresh. If you use dried chives, reduce the volume by about half.

Barley has benefits

Copley News Service

Grown over 4,000 years ago throughout the Middle East, barley is one of the oldest of cultivated grains. Modern Americans generally associate barley with the brewing of beer — but it can play a number of delicious roles in the kitchen as well. Soups, casseroles, breakfast cereals and breads all benefit from the addition of this nutritious grain. Or serve plain, cooked barley as a side dish, as you would rice.

Barley can be sprouted too, and even steeped to produce a mild, caffeine-free tea, which is a popular drink in Korea.

The grain is commercially available in two forms. Pearl barley, from which the nutritious outer shell has been removed, is the most popular and the easiest to find. Scotch, or pot barley, with the outer layer intact, is more nutritious, but must be soaked overnight before cooking. (Soak 1 cup of Scotch barley in 4 cups of water and drain before cooking.) Pearl barley need not be soaked, and cooks in 55 minutes to 1 hour.

The USDA's Agricultural Research Service has recently found evidence that barley may help to reduce cholesterol — at least in chickens! When scientists added a high-protein barley flour to the diet of baby chicks, their growth rate increased by 20 percent, while the cholesterol in their blood plasma was reduced by the same amount.

Today's vegetarian recipes feature this ancient and nutritious grain in three forms: pearl, Scotch and barley flour. The last, which is used to make the muffins, imparts a nice, malty flavor and chewy texture. Or try the Minted Yogurt-Barley Soup or Lentil-Barley Casserole for a hearty, healthful and inexpensive meatless meal.

MINTED YOGURT-BARLEY SOUP

1 cup Scotch barley
4 cups water
1 cup semolina
1 cup water
12 cups vegetable broth
⅛ cup butter or margarine
3 cups minced onion
3 tsps. fresh mint, finely chopped
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
4 cups plain yogurt
Whole fresh mint leaves for garnish (optional)

Soak barley in 4 cups water overnight; drain. Place vegetable broth in larg pot. Add soaked barley and simmer, uncovered, over low heat for 1 hour. Meantime, soak semolina in 1 cup water for ⅛ hour. Add to broth, stirring constantly until thickened.

In large frying pan, saute onions in butter or margarine until translucent and light gold in color. Add to soup with mint, salt and pepper. Stir well and simmer 5 minutes longer.

Place yogurt in bowl and stir well. Add slowly to soup, stirring constantly. Simmer several minutes longer and serve soup hot, garnished with whole mint leaves, if desired. Serves 6 to 8.

BARLEY MUFFINS

2 cups barley flour
2 tsps. baking powder
1 scant tsp. baking soda
Dash salt
⅛ cup dark brown sugar, packed
2 eggs
¼ cup cream or half and half

Sift together dry ingredients. In separate bowl, beat together eggs and crem. Add liquids to dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pour batter evenly into 12 oiled or lined muffin cups. Bake at 400 F for 25 minutes, until golden brown. Makes 12 muffins.

Colony tries to capture spirit of 100-year history

Copley News Service

The television commercial begins with the young man walking out of the winery in the evening, well past closing time for traditional businesses, and he says, "It wasn't working. A large corporation 3,000 miles away running our winery."

Later, the young man says, "We scraped together enough money and bought our winery back."

It sounds like the scenario for a TV soap opera, but in fact the commercial tells an accurate picture of the recent history of the Italian Swiss Colony Winery in the northern Sonoma (Calif.) County community of Asti.

IT WAS in 1969 that Heublein Inc., the Connecticut-based food conglomerate, acquired a handful of California wineries, including Beaulieu (BV), Inglenook and Colony, the latter two wineries under the ownership of United Vintners.

In time, Italian Swiss Colony became an arm of Inglenook's huge Navalle line. A hefty percentage of the grapes crushed at Asti every year were selected for blending into the Navalle wines, the intention being to improve the general quality of the Navalle line with higher-quality grapes grown in California's North Coast area — which includes portions of Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino. The Navalle line never contained more than a small percentage of Colony's North Coast grapes, but they often were good-quality grapes.

It was a time of bitterness for some working at Asti.

ONE FORMER wine maker at Asti, who wished to remain anonymous, said quality Colony wine could have been made, "but they (Heublein) didn't want anything to compete with Inglenook." The winery gradually began to fall into disrepair. The winery building and tasting room, built in 1887, six years after the founding of the operation, were not promoted; visitors dwindled.

At its peak a couple of years ago, Italian Swiss Colony was pumping out between 6 million and 7 million cases of wine a year from its Madera bottling plant. Only a tiny percentage of that wine was from North Coast grapes.

At one point, Italian Swiss Colony was even selling North Coast wine out of tanks at Asti to Gallo, the firm's prime competitor.

"Heublein did cut back on the investment in the property," admitted Ed Rossi, vice president and wine maker for ISC Wines of California (the new name for Colony). He is a quiet, polite man who declines to denigrate Heublein, but admits that Heublein didn't do all it could for the Asti facility.

BY 1983, the Asti facility was making no wine at all. Only the brandy-making stills were still operating. The tasting room finally closed. The place had become effectively abandoned.

In the mid-1950s, Italian Swiss Colony was owned by Louis Petri. Under the operating name United Vintners (UV), Petri sold wines under the Lejon, Petri and Italian Swiss Colony brands.

In 1959, Petri sold his UV brands and facilities to Allied Grape Growers. And 10 years later, Allied sold UV to Heublein.

Last year, Heublein, reducing its wine holdings, sold Colony back to Allied Grape Growers. The operating name of the company was changed to ISC Wines of California.

The purchase brought back to Allied the facility at Asti as well as wineries at Lodi, Escalon and Sanger. In addition, Allied reacquired some vineyards in Sonoma County and a bottling and blending plant at Madera, where Rossi has his office.

ROSSI WAS the man who helped bring Colony a measure of pride three years ago when he developed a line called Colony Classic wines, generics that were drier and more acceptable than previous Colony wines had been. Recently they scored well in tastings staged by the magazine Wine and Spirits Buying Guide.

Now under Allied ownership again, Colony plans a gradual return to better-quality wines, without abandoning the Colony Classic line that has done so well.

A newly made and soon-to-be-released wine called Colony White Burgundy, is the first of many small steps forward for this 103-year-old winery. The blend is mostly French Colombard, Chenin Blanc and a tiny amount of Dry Muscat for spice. The wine is fresh, relatively dry and low in alcohol (under 11 percent). It will sell for $2.25 in a cork-finished bottle.

TODAY, ALLIED Grape Growers still offers wines nationally under the Colony, Lejon, Jacques Bonet and Annie Green Springs labels, and under the name Gambrelli and Davitto on the East Coast. Slowly, the words "Italian Swiss" will be reintroduced in larger type on Colony wine labels, as Allied Grape Growers tries to recapture a bit of the history the winery has embedded in its soul.

Champagne aged at winery

GUERNEVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Champagne is not meant to be put down on its side for aging.

"Champagnes already have been finished and aged at the winery," says Gary Heck of Korbel Champagne Cellars here. "Once the champagne has been released it should be drunk rather than stored."

Turkey becoming year-round dish

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

DINUBA, Calif. — It used to be that turkeys made their appearance around Thanksgiving, stayed on through the holidays and then vanished in the New Year along with the last picked-over carcass in the refrigerator.

Not any more. The turkey's popularity cycle has become year-round with the help of a host of new delicatessen items — ham, pastrami, bologna, salami, hot dogs and sausage — processed from the dark meat of turkey thighs.

Last year the public spent $3.1 billion on turkey, with about 20 percent of that on the deli products, according to the National turkey Federation of Arlington, Va. As recently as five years ago those items represented less than 1 percent of the processed turkey market.

"There's a revolution going on in the turkey industry and we're riding its coattails," said Adam Bianchi II, 45, president of Poppy Food Co. in Dinuba, about 25 miles southeast of Fresno.

"Fifteen years ago 90 percent of turkeys produced were marketed whole in the last 60 days of the year," he said. "Today, half the turkeys sold are cut up and sold year-round in segregated parts (breasts and legs, for example) and as roasts and as turkey ham, turkey pastrami, turkey hot dogs and turkey sausage."

With $210 million in annual sales for growers and processors, California is the nation's third-largest producer of turkeys after North Carolina and Minnesota.

For 80 years Poppy Food was in the business of both growing and processing poultry. Then, in 1983, it sold off its turkey farms to go into full-time processing because of the changes in consumer demand, Bianchi said. One-third of Poppy Food's processed turkey products is sold as beef or pork counterparts.

Bianchi expects that his company sales will top $24 million in 1984. Poppy's sales last year were $50 million, which included its turkey-growing operations.

Tom Herrick, general manager of Poppy Food, is given credit for first developing turkey ham in 1974, while he was general manager of Valchris Farms in Turlock, Calif. "Getting turkey to taste like ham, pastrami, hot dogs and sausage is achieved through seasoning," he explained.

The result is also cheaper. "The shopper pays one-third to one-half for the turkey product as for comparable beef and pork items," he said.

Chicken dish popular in Netherlands

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Few things are more embarrassing for barbecue braggarts than fires that just won't start.

Try though they may to blame the situation on soggy coals, no matter how many bags of briquettes they open or dousings of lighter fluid with which they saturate the briquettes, sometimes the coals just won't start.

Here is a sure-fire method that will not only start the coals quicker than it takes to get through some express lanes on a busy Monday night, but also produces a red-hot fire, perfect for searing the outside of steak.

The critical item in this express lane list is a 46-ounce can of tomato juice. Flavor 28 ounces of the juice with a few cloves of garlic and simmer the zucchini and yellow squash in it, reserve remaining juice for another use, then use the can to start the fire — in four simple steps:

— Remove the top from the juice can.

— With a can opener, punch holes every 2 inches around the side at the end with the intact bottom. Then remove the bottom. Place the can in the grill, punched end down.

— Pack the bottom quarter with newspaper. Fill the remainder with hardwood charcoal. (Note: not all charcoals are hardwood, so be sure to read the label carefully at the store. You can also use hardwood chips, such as mesquite, hickory, locust and oak).

— Ignite the newspaper through the holes in the bottom. First there will be smoke, then perhaps a flicker. Finally, within minutes a flame should come up through the top. As soon as there is a thin layer of ash across the top layer, remove the can (using gloves) and spread the coals evenly around the grill.

Lay the flank steak, marinated in soy sauce, garlic and black pepper, across the grill for 3 minutes. Turn and cook 3 minutes more.

Let the steak sit, covered on a platter, for 5 minutes to seal in the juices. At the same time reheat the vegetables.

Cut the flank steak along the grain in quarter-inch slices and pour the juices over the top before serving.

VERY, VERY QUICK FLANK STEAK

1 large clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1¼ to 1½-pound flank steak
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
Hardwood charcoal or hardwood for grilling

Mince garlic and mix with soy sauce. Rub mixture into both sides of flank steak and season heavily with black pepper. Wrap in foil and refqi rame n til 5ito barbecue. Grill by the four-step juice-can method.

Barbecue for 3 minutes on each side. Remove from grill.

Barbecue tips provided

The Reynolds Wrap Kitchens offer these tips for successful barbecuing:

— When barbecuing keep in mind that there are more variables such as distance from the heat, wind and weather, which all affect the rate of cooking. Use a meat thermometer on large cuts of meat to determine the degree of doneness.

— When turning thin pieces of food such as steaks or chicken use tongs instead of a fork, which could pierce the meat and allow juices to escape.

— For stronger flavor in grilled foods marinate several hours before cooking; baste with marinade as the food cooks.

Copley News Service

Long ago, Persian doctors prescribed pickles as the best remedy for obesity. They believed that the sour juices of the pickle somehow neutralized the fattening effects of rich foods. Ah, if they were only right — that jar of baby gherkins in my fridge would have been long gone by now!

This is the time of year when bikini weather is staring us in the face, and those of us who can "pinch an inch" (or more) begin to panic. Over half of all adult Americans are trying to lose some weight, and there's a special incentive to lose lots, fast, when summer rolls around.

Just remember that a crash diet may also mean a crash landing. If you've got a beach party coming up in a week and you're 20 pounds overweight, you're out of luck. No matter how much you starve yourself and pump the old Exercycle, 20 pounds just won't disappear that fast. And you can do your body real harm if you starve it.

A steady loss of around 2 pounds a week is generally recognized as the safest, healthiest route when dieting. To lose this amount, you'll need to eliminate about 1,000 calories a day from your regular intake.

Do your bod a favor and go on a sensible diet. Cut out obvious "heavies" like fatty meats, sugary desserts and junk foods. Instead, go for fresh fruits and veggies, whole grain products, fish and poultry (skinned). Drink low-fat or non-fat milk, and choose skim milk yogurts (unsweetened) and low-fat cheeses. Even when you're on a diet, your body still needs a variety of nutritious foods to keep going — just be sure to eat less of them.

Regular exercise, for about an hour a day, can actually decrease your appetite as you tone up. If you've been inactive for a long while, however, it's a good idea to check with your doctor before starting on a marathon jog.

Finally, if you plan on having a high-calorie dessert (say you're at a wedding or birthday party and just can't refuse), eliminate some other food that day. Or compensate with more exercise.

Even if you're the only dieter in the family, a microwave makes it easy to prepare an individualized meal in no time. And microwave cooking can eliminate a lot of calories that frying pans slip surreptitiously into your food.

"After 38 years, we finally won the war against roaches."

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baxley, Kansas City, Kansas.

"We sprayed over and over again— and still had roaches. Combat is the only thing we found that kills roaches for three whole months."

"We have lived in the same house for at least 38 years and even though we tried everything, we still had a roach problem.

After using Combat,® we virtually eliminated our roach problem."

"We followed the instructions to the letter."

"We put the Combat discs in the kitchen—on shelves, under the sink, near the range and refrigerator, on cabinet tops, and inside food and dish cabinets. We also put them in the bathroom—under the sink and behind the toilet.

We did the whole thing in 10 or 15 minutes.

Another thing that we like so much is you can hide them—out of sight."

"Combat is convenient. No odor. No mess."

"There was always a terrible odor with sprays. We'd have to raise the windows to let the darn stuff out of the house. It was awful.

With Combat, there's no odor, no mess, no bother. There's just no comparison with sprays."

"It's better because it works for three months."

"We started using Combat more than a year ago. Combat lasts so long we only have to replace the Combat discs every three months. Now, our roach problem is really under control."

For large roaches, water and palmetto bugs

For small roaches

Combat is a new, completely different roach killer. So exclusive, it's patented. So powerful, it kills more roaches in a three-month period than repeated applications of sprays and foggers.

Combat's powerful roach killer is contained in child-proof, spill-proof discs. It's dry, so there's no possibility of evaporation.

Simply place the Combat discs according to directions— 10 in the kitchen, 2 in the bathroom. Wherever you've seen roaches. Even where you wouldn't dare spray. In food and dish cabinets. In silver and utensil drawers.

Eye of round seen in better light

By MERLE ELLIS

There was a time, I'll confess, when I couldn't find anything nice to say about the eye of round. Yet, now I must admit I have found that for some dishes it is the best thing that I have found. It's nifty, for instance, for anything where neatness counts.

For the money, there is no better cut of beef to eat raw, Italian style. Carpaccio is an Italian dish of thinly-sliced meat served raw; dressed with vinegar and oil and garnished with a few capers; or with a spicy mustard-mayonnaise sauce. Most of the recipes I have seen for Carpaccio call for filet of beef,but at the going price in excess of five bucks a pound — no, thanks! I gave the "eye" a try. It held its shape beautifully, was tender enough and had much better flavor than the filet would have.

Finally, there is no better cut of meat than eye of round for making "Boliche Relleno," a Spanish dish I discovered at the Columbia Restaurant in Ybor City right in the heart of Tampa's Latin Quarter.

Here are the recipes for all three. Go buy an eye of round and enjoy.

CARPACCIO

1 pound eye of round, sliced almost paper thin
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
Beef broth

Put the eye of round in the freezer for an hour or two so it will be easier to slice very thin. I usually start with a piece larger than I need. It's easier to slice thin slices from a larger piece and what's left can be dried, used for Boliche, or cut into steaks for Swiss steaks or chicken fried steaks — two other good things to do with an eye of round.

Pound the slices between two pieces of plastic wrap until they are, if possible, just a bit thinner than paper. Arrange three or four slices overlapping neatly on each salad plate. Mix the remaining ingredients together, using just enough beef broth to achieve the consistency of a thin Hollandaise sauce. Dress the meat with a bit of the sauce and serve. Serves 6.

A DRY EYE

½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon saltpeter OR
½ pound B. Heller's Complete Cure with Sugar (contains the proper proportions of salt, sugar, nitrites)
1 4- or 5-pound eye of round

Mix together the salt, sugar and saltpeter. Divide mixture in half. Rub half of the mixture well into the eye of round. Put the meat in a glass dish or a plastic bag and refrigerate for two days. Remove the meat and rub in the remaining half of the cure mixture. Refrigerate for another two days. The meat should cure for approximately 1 day per pound of meat in all.

Remove the meat from the cure, wash it and pat it dry with paper towels. Now you're ready to dry it. You can, at this point, add a bit of smoked flavor by brushing it with a little liquid smoke.

Hang the meat in a cool, well-ventilated spot and leave it alone. Don't handle it while it's drying. Handling can cause surface mold.

You can use the meat any time after the surface is dry. Give it at least one week, but it will keep for months hanging in a cool (40 to 45 degrees) dry spot.

BOLICHE RELLENO

3 pounds eye of round
1 strip salt pork
3 Spanish sausages (chorizos)
½ pound uncooked ham, cut into strips
4 tablespoons lard, divided
1 large onion, chopped
1 large green pepper, seeded, chopped
3 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons oregano
4 tablespoons paprika
4 bay leaves
3 cups beef broth or water

Cut a one-inch wide hole through the length of the meat with a long carving knife. Season inside and out with salt. Stuff with the strip of salt pork, the sausages and the ham strips. Heat one tablespoon of the lard in good-sized skillet and brown the eye of round in it on all sides.

Transfer to a roasting pan. Add chopped onion, green pepper, garlic, oregano, paprika and bay leaves. Pour over the remaining 3 tablespoons of lard, melted. Add three cups of broth or water.

Roast in a 325-degree oven, uncovered, for one hour. Cover and roast for an additional two hours, basting occasionally with the pan drippings.

Leg of lamb prepared with mint, garlic

MINT LAMB

A food processor does a good job of chopping mint and garlic really fine.

Sirloin half of a leg of lamb (about 4 pounds)
¼ cup fresh mint leaves, finely chopped
4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon olive oil

Make 6 deep slits in meaty side of lamb. Mix together mint, garlic and oil; stuff some of mint mixture into slits; rub remaining over bony side of lamb.

Roast on a rack in a shallow pan, meaty side up, in a 350-degree oven to desired doneness — if you use a meat thermometer count on 140 degrees for rare, 160 degrees for medium and 170 degrees for well-done; the time will be 20 to 35 minutes per pound. Let lamb rest at room temperature for 20 minutes before carving.

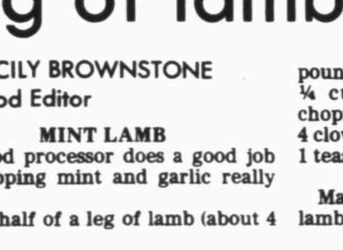

Serve with a mint sauce (homemade or bought), if you like. Makes 6 servings.

Eye of round seen in better light

By MERLE ELLIS

There was a time, I'll confess, when I couldn't find anything nice to say about the eye of round. Yet, now I must admit I have found that for some dishes it is the best thing that I have found. It's nifty, for instance, for anything where neatness counts.

For the money, there is no better cut of beef to eat raw, Italian style. Carpaccio is an Italian dish of thinly-sliced meat served raw; dressed with vinegar and oil and garnished with a few capers; or with a spicy mustard-mayonnaise sauce. Most of the recipes I have seen for Carpaccio call for filet of beef,but at the going price in excess of five bucks a pound — no, thanks! I gave the "eye" a try. It held its shape beautifully, was tender enough and had much better flavor than the filet would have.

Another way with beef for which eye of round is unsurpassed is dried beef. Sliced thin and served in a cream sauce on fried bread, it makes a marvelous first course.

Finally, there is no better cut of meat than eye of round for making "Boliche Relleno," a Spanish dish I discovered at the Columbia Restaurant in Ybor City right in the heart of Tampa's Latin Quarter.

Here are the recipes for all three. Go buy an eye of round and enjoy.

CARPACCIO

1 pound eye of round, sliced almost paper thin
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
½ teaspoon dry mustard
Beef broth

Put the eye of round in the freezer for an hour or two so it will be easier to slice very thin. I usually start with a piece larger than I need. It's easier to slice thin slices from a larger piece and what's left can be dried, used for Boliche, or cut into steaks for Swiss steaks or chicken fried steaks — two other good things to do with an eye of round.

Pound the slices between two pieces of plastic wrap until they are, if possible, just a bit thinner than paper. Arrange three or four slices overlapping neatly on each salad plate. Mix the remaining ingredients together, using just enough beef broth to achieve the consistency of a thin Hollandaise sauce. Dress the meat with a bit of the sauce and serve. Serves 6.

A DRY EYE

½ cup salt
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon saltpeter OR
½ pound B. Heller's Complete Cure with Sugar (contains the proper proportions of salt, sugar, nitrites)
1 4- or 5-pound eye of round

Mix together the salt, sugar and saltpeter. Divide mixture in half. Rub half of the mixture well into the eye of round. Put the meat in a glass dish or a plastic bag and refrigerate for two days. Remove the meat and rub in the remaining half of the cure mixture. Refrigerate for another two days. The meat should cure for approximately 1 day per pound of meat in all.

Remove the meat from the cure, wash it and pat it dry with paper towels. Now you're ready to dry it. You can, at this point, add a bit of smoked flavor by brushing it with a little liquid smoke.

Hang the meat in a cool, well-ventilated spot and leave it alone. Don't handle it while it's drying. Handling can cause surface mold.

You can use the meat any time after the surface is dry. Give it at least one week, but it will keep for months hanging in a cool (40 to 45 degrees) dry spot.

BOLICHE RELLENO

3 pounds eye of round
1 strip salt pork
3 Spanish sausages (chorizos)
½ pound uncooked ham, cut into strips
4 tablespoons lard, divided
1 large onion, chopped
1 large green pepper, seeded, chopped
3 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons oregano
4 tablespoons paprika
4 bay leaves
3 cups beef broth or water

Cut a one-inch wide hole through the length of the meat with a long carving knife. Season inside and out with salt. Stuff with the strip of salt pork, the sausages and the ham strips. Heat one tablespoon of the lard in good-sized skillet and brown the eye of round in it on all sides.

Transfer to a roasting pan. Add chopped onion, green pepper, garlic, oregano, paprika and bay leaves. Pour over the remaining 3 tablespoons of lard, melted. Add three cups of broth or water.

Roast in a 325-degree oven, uncovered, for one hour. Cover and roast for an additional two hours, basting occasionally with the pan drippings.

Serve with black beans and rice, fried plantains or pan-fried potatoes. Serves 6 to 8.

Leg of lamb prepared with mint, garlic

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

MINT LAMB

A food processor does a good job of chopping mint and garlic really fine.

Sirloin half of a leg of lamb (about 4 pounds)
¼ cup fresh mint leaves, finely chopped
4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon olive oil

Make 6 deep slits in meaty side of lamb. Mix together mint, garlic and oil; stuff some of mint mixture into slits; rub remaining over bony side of lamb.

Roast on a rack in a shallow pan, meaty side up, in a 350-degree oven to desired doneness — if you use a meat thermometer count on 140 degrees for rare, 160 degrees for medium and 170 degrees for well-done; the time will be 20 to 35 minutes per pound. Let lamb rest at room temperature for 20 minutes before carving.

Serve with a mint sauce (homemade or bought), if you like. Makes 6 servings.

Popcorn flavors please 'addicts'

Hearst Feature Service

Some of us like popcorn. The rest of us are popcorn addicts; we really love those crisp fluffy-white kernels with the corny flavor.

There are apparently a lot of us out there, judging from the number of gourmet popcorns, flavored oils and special mixes showing up on grocery shelves and from the special-coated popcorns in specialty shops, with sugary flavors running the gamut from licorice to margarita.

Robert T. Brucken, however, is beyond all that. He's a true fanatic when it comes to popcorn. He uses it as stuffing for poultry. He makes bread with it. He bakes cakes with it. He even makes pizza with it. And he eats it plain and in dozens of other combinations.

Now, he has turned his passion for the puffy kernels into a book, "Bang! The Explosive Popcorn Recipe Book."

Brucken has some good points about the exploding wonder. Nobody really knows who discovered that the application of heat to certain types of maize would cause the moisture inside to turn to steam and explode the meat of the seed into mounds of fluffy eating. But whoever it was had found a good track: Popcorn is a basic all-natural treat; prepared with a minimum of oil — or no oil, if you have an air-popper — it's low in calories, easy to make and easy to store.

Brucken says air-popped corn will keep up to 90 days in an air-tight plastic bag or container. Oil-popped corn should be used immediately, or within three or four days if it's covered tightly, because the oil will turn rancid. Unpopped kernels also should be stored on a shelf out of the light in an air-tight container to lock in the moisture. Brucken suggests you add a couple of teaspoons of water per pound and shake before storing.

Many purists say the only way to make popcorn is with oil. This time-honored tradition is simple: Just pour about one-fourth cup of your favorite oil (corn, peanut, vegetable, coconut) into a deep saucepan. Place on high heat on your stove. Pour in about two-thirds cup of kernels and wait for the oil to sizzle or reach 300 degrees That's when kernels start to pop. Put a lid on the pan and shake gently, so all kernels are covered with hot oil. As the temperature rises to 480 degrees, the corn will pop better. Keep shaking the pan so the popcorn doesn't burn. When the popping stops, pour into a bowl and eat.

With an air-popper, the matter is even easier — and the results are much less fattening. Just follow directions on the popper, and the machine will heat all kernels to the proper temperature and expel them when they pop.

In either case, just a light topping of butter and a sprinkle of salt will make good eating for most of us. But it's not enough for Brucken. In his book, he adds enough spices and flavorings to set any gourmet's head a-spinning. Consider these simple additions, each of which will cover eight cups of corn:

ONION BUTTER: Melt three tablespoons butter over low heat. Dissolve one cube vegetable bouillon in butter. Dizzle over popcorn. Lightly sprinkle with onion salt. Mix well.

TEXAS BUTTER: Melt three tablespoons butter over low heat. Dissolve one beef bouillon cube in butter. Dizzle over popcorn. Mix well.

HILLBILLY BUTTER: Melt five tablespoons butter over low heat. Add three chopped pieces of beef jerky, one teaspon dried parsley flakes and a pinch of oregano. Stir over low heat for five minutes. Drizzle over popcorn. Sprinkle salt and pepper to taste. Mix well.

HERB BUTTER: Melt four tablespoons butter over low heat. Add one teaspoon chopped parsley, one teaspoon chopped chives, a drop of lemon juice, one teaspoon celery seeds and one-fourth tablespoon each of dried oregano, thyme, basil and rosemary. Stir over low heat. Drizzle over popcorn. Sprinkle salt and pepper to taste. Mix well.

CHEDDAR POPCORN: Melt five tablespoons butter over low heat. Add one teaspoon chopped chives, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one tablespoon finely chopped black olives, five tablespoons grated cheddar cheese and one-half cup crumbled bacon. Stir over low heat four to five minutes. Drizzle over popcorn. Add salt and pepper to taste.

MARIGOLD POPCORN: Melt four tablespoons butter over low heat. Add two tablespoons marigold petals (yes, the flower). Stir and drizzle over popcorn. Sprinkle a few petals over popcorn mixture. Salt lightly and mix well.

CRABMEAT AND SHRIMP POPCORN: Melt four tablespoons butter over low heat. Add two tablespoons shredded shrimp and two tablespoons flaked crab-meat. Stir over low heat four to five minutes. Drizzle over popcorn. Sprinkle three more tablespoons shrimp plus three tablespoons flaked crabmeat. Lightly salt and mix well.

Children bake darnest things

CHICAGO (AP) — Kids bake the darndest things. That's what a group of editors and baking consultants found when they kitchen-tested entries for a recent national recipe contest for children age 8 through 17.

The results can be found in "Kids in the Kitchen ... A Family Baking Affair," a book featuring 12 original baking recipes.

And they really are original, says Caroline Gibbons, one of two consultants working on the project. "There were times when we had trouble visualizing what a recipe was trying to achieve. I'd start out thinking, Oh, this is like a large tart, and end up with something infinitely more complex and indescribable."

Other recipes were charmingly clear — from a child's perspective, she adds. A case in point is the recipe for Cookie Stripes by Crindalyn Lyster, 10, of LaGrande, Ore. The ingredients made sense — some kind of cookie bar, flavored with Oregon filberts and vanilla — but what did they look like? The editors decided that Crindalyn was spelling the name of her recipe wrong. She must mean Cookie Strips. You cut the baked dough into 10-inch strips. Then they saw the consultant slicing the long narrow pieces. "They look like stripes to me," an editor admitted.

Cocoa Cookies by Alison Peters, 13, of Washington, Mo., also had them stumped. "That's an awful lot of cocoa," baking consultant Ruthanne Field cautioned. She was right — there's so much cocoa, the flour turns a coffee-colored brown. And the cookies are delicious, the tasters agreed.

Some of the recipes are quite sophisticated. The anise seed cake submitted by Lynne Petricevic, 15, of Boring, Ore., involved such techniques as soaking the anise seeds in milk and whipping eight egg whites. Lynne suggests serving the cake with an orange sauce.

Other recipes provide real challenges to those with discriminating palates, according to the tasters. Connie's Crazy Pizza had everyone eating seconds and thirds (and fourths and fifths) and guessing. The recipe was submitted by Constance Lohse, 8, of Cape Cod, Mass.

"Something's different. Why is it so soft-tasting?" an editor asked. The consultant finally explained. "It's the tomato sauce," she said. "It has no garlic in it. The garlic is on top."

In the recipe for peanut brittle bars by Jerome Rubin, 16, of Boston, it was the lack of salt that made it different. In fact, quite a number of the recipes have no added salt. "And they're great," said one editor, who claims to have eaten more than half of the total output from the test kitchen.

But how great? Indisputable testimony came from one of the experts. "I've served the Mex-Chip dinner several times now," says Ms. Gibbons.

The contest and bake book, part of this year's National Bake Week celebration, were sponsored by Chicago Metallic Products Inc., maker of Bakalon and Village Baker bakeware. National Bake Week's purpose is to recognize baking as a year-round activity for the whole family.

Rich English dessert nothing to 'trifle' with

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Barbara Beaumont keeps track of what's cooking in various corners of the world through her work as North American representative of PPC (Petite Propos Culinaire), the international journal on food and cookery published in London.

When asked for a dessert recipe she liked to serve to guests, she said, "Nothing is better than a good English Trifle. It fits in after so many main dishes from other countries."

ENGLISH TRIFLE

Custard, recipe follows
1½ cups fresh orange sections
1½ cups fresh pineapple chunks
3 dozen lady fingers
½ cup (about) raspberry jam
¼ cup cream sherry
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Toasted slivered almonds
Candied violets, if desired

Make custard.

In a colander over a bowl, toss together the oranges and pineapple. Drain fruit; set aside.

Split lady fingers; sandwich each pair together with ¾ teaspoon jam. Brush one side of filled lady fingers with sherry. Reserve 10 filled lady fingers for the top.

Line the bottom and sides of a 3-quart straight-sided glass serving bowl with the remaining filled lady fingers, placing sherry-coated side against glass. Spread ½ cup of the custard over bottom layer of lady fingers. Top with 1 cup of the orange and pineapple mixture. Repeat layering with remaining custard and fruit; top with reserved lady fingers. Cover; refrigerate 3 to 4 hours.

Just before serving garnish with whipped cream, almonds and, if using, candied violets.

Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Custard:

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1½ teaspoons vanilla

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in the milk until smooth. Whisk in egg yolks. Over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, bring to a boil. Cook until mixture is thickened and boils 1 minute. Off heat, stir in the vanilla.

Turn into a bowl; cover with saran without pressing down on surface. Refrigerate until cool — about 1 hour.

Makes about 2½ cups.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING

It's the cream cheese variety.
3-ounce package cream cheese, soft
3 tablespoons milk
2½ to 3 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted

Gradually beat milk, then sugar, into cream cheese, until blended after each addition. Beat in chocolate until blended. Sandwich together two 8- or 9-inch vanilla or chocolate cake layers with raspberry jam; cover top and sides with the chocolate frosting.

Southerners like desserts

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

MACON, Ga. — Southerners certainly do have a sweet tooth. Some cookbooks devote almost half their pages to cakes, pies, candy, jams and jellies.

It may have something to do with mothers' promising their children dessert only after they have finished their collard greens, or perhaps it's because Southern women pride themselves on being such good bakers. Whatever the reason may be, nary a meal is ended without a bit of sweet indulgence.

No one has done more for the Southern dessert than Albert Parker, the owner of the Claxton Bakery in Claxton, Ga., makers of Claxton fruitcake. This single item has put the town on the map.

Every year the bakery produces 6 million pounds of fruitcake. Its staff includes three sons and a daughter of Parker. According to Dale Parker, one of the sons, the recipe is based on the formula used by Savino Tos, an Italian immigrant who opened the bakery in 1910.

"Although we bake fruitcake all year round," says Dale Parker, "from September to December the town of Claxton smells like Christmas cookies with the ovens baking 24 hours a day."

The elder Parker began working in the bakery when he was 11 years old and bought it from Tos when the latter retired in 1945. Ice cream was the biggest seller at the bakery in those days, but Parker felt that every supermarket and gas station sold ice cream and decided to go big instead with one Southern specialty — fruitcake — and to go mail order as well. It seems to have been a wise decision.

The fruitcake comes in two varieties, light and dark. Pineapple, cherries, orange and lemon peel, raisins, almonds, walnuts and, of course, Georgia pecans go into the light variety. Spices and molasses are added to make the dark type.

Fruitcake can be ordered directly from the company, Claxton Bakery, P.O. Box 367, Claxton, Ga. 30417. A 2-pound cake is $8, a 3-pound cake is $9 and a five-pound cake is $13.50. Orders are shipped out the same day they are received.

"I eat fruitcake just about every day," says Dale Parker, "or my father would run me out of the business."

Since the Claxton fruitcake recipe is not available, try one of these other southern desserts instead — after you have eaten your collards.

PECAN PIE

1 cup dark corn syrup
3-4 cup granulated sugar
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
1 cup pecans
3 tablespoons butter, melted unsweetened whipped cream

In a medium saucepan combine corn syrup and sugar and bring to a boil. Cook over low heat until sugar is completely dissolved. Add syrup very slowly to beaten eggs, beating constantly with a whisk or mixer. Stir in vanilla. Pour mixture into pie shell, spread pecans on top and pour butter evenly over them. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 55 minutes. Serve with unsweetened whipped cream, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SOUTHERN PEANUT BUTTER CAKE

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ cup peanut oil
2 cups granulated sugar
5 egg yolks
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup crunchy peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 3½-ounce can coconut
5 egg whites
chocolate icing, optional

1. In a large bowl place butter, oil, sugar, egg yolks, flour, baking soda, buttermilk, peanut butter, vanilla and coconut. Beat until well mixed.

2. In a separate bowl beat egg whites stiff and fold into batter. Pour batter into three greased 9-inch round cake pans. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 to 35 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean.

3. Cool layers on wire racks 10 minutes; remove pans and cool on rack. Frost with chocolate icing, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Pregnancy possible from just 'petting'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This letter concerns an argument with my roommate. She claims she read a letter in your column in which a girl got pregnant without taking off her clothes, and that the guy was also fully dressed. She said they were wearing jeans.

My roommate very often gets confused about things she's read or heard, so I called Planned Parenthood and another family planning clinic to prove her wrong, and they could hardly answer me for laughing.

I told her this, but she still believes a girl can get pregnant while fully clothed.

If this is true, please print the letter again. — CAN'T BELIEVE IT

DEAR CAN'T: You had better believe it because it's true. The item your roommate was referring to is as follows:

DEAR ABBY: I have been told by friends that it is possible to get pregnant through your jeans. I can't believe this!

I am a virgin, just turned 15, and know I am going to be more involved with guys now that I'm dating. If this is possible, I am scared to death to get very close to any guy. I need to know as soon as possible.

I hope you won't think this is a dumb question. — WORRIED IN EL PASO

DEAR WORRIED: It is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused just by lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

It's not possible to get pregnant through one's jeans, but sometimes kids remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or "doing everything else but."

The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercourse is "penetration." (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been NO penetration — the girl remained a virgin, but after engaging in heavy petting, she found herself pregnant.

How can that be? Simple.

The boy and girl were lying very close to each other (unclothed), doing "everything but," when a small amount of sperm leaked out ... near (not inside, but very close to) the girl's vagina. The sperm got into the moisture around the vagina and found its way up into it, and fertilized the egg!

The above is from my booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." It can be obtained by sending $2.50 to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Pea soup salt-free

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

When you are having lunch or supper for half a dozen people who are cutting down on salt, you may be interested to serve the following green pea soup. It has excellent flavor, interesting texture and good color — and no salt is added during its making. If some of the group you are feeding use salt, you can have a shaker of it on the table.

We like to serve this soup with crunchy bread sticks or toast triangles. To make the latter generously spread six slices (each ⅜ inch thick) of white bread with unsalted butter. Cut each slice into eight triangles. Arrange the triangles, buttered sides up, on a large cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until golden brown — about 15 minutes. (The tops will be a little lighter in color than the bottoms.) Cool completely on the cookie sheet before serving. May be stored, tightly covered, overnight at room temperature.

NO SALT PEA SOUP

¾ cup thinly sliced leek (white and pale green part only)
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon sweet butter
Two 17-ounce cans sweet peas (no salt added), undrained
⅛ cup heavy cream
⅛ cup milk
⅛ cup unsalted chicken broth
1 cup parsley leaves, finely chopped (½ cup)
4 teaspoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon dried crushed marjoram
Dash of ground nutmeg
Dash of freshly ground pepper

In a medium saucepan, over low heat cook the leek and garlic in the butter, stirring often, until softened. Turn into an electric blender with one can of the peas, the cream and the milk; whirl until smooth. Turn into the saucepan.

Turn the remaining can of peas, the broth, parsley, lemon juice, marjoram, nutmeg and pepper into the electric blender and whirl until smooth; turn into the saucepan. Simmer, stirring occasionally, for 15 to 20 minutes.

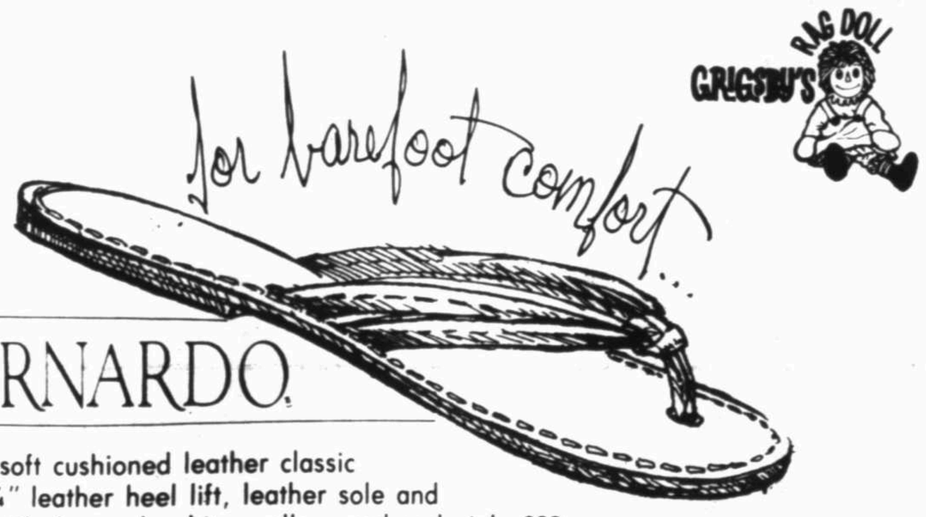

Makes about 6 cups.

Nation's imports exceed exports by record margin

By The Associated Press

The nation's imports exceeded exports by a record margin for the fourth month in a row in April, as the U.S. economic recovery continued to outpace that of most of the rest of the world, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the foreign trade deficit — exports minus imports — hit $12.19 billion in April. For the first four months it totaled $42.01 billion. That would be an unprecedented annual rate of $126 billion if the current pace continued.

The prior annual record was last year, $69.4 billion.

Analysts attributed the gap to a limited market abroad for U.S. exports because of the expensive U.S. dollar and a less robust recovery overseas. The same factors encouraged U.S. imports.

In another report, the number of new U.S. businesses totaled 11,789 in the first quarter, the highest number of companies to open their doors in that period since 1978, a business information service said.

Meanwhile, the workplace efficiency for all private businesses rose at an annual rate of 4.1 percent during the first quarter, the Labor Department said.

In its report on business starts, Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said the first-quarter total was up 9.4 percent from the first quarter of 1983, although the new firms employed slightly fewer workers — 59,789 compared with 60,691 a year ago.

Gains in business starts were made in every major industry in the latest quarter, Dun & Bradstreet said Tuesday. The construction industry was one of the leading gainers, with the number of new firms climbing 31 percent from a year earlier to 1,474.

The largest number of starts, 4,604, came in retailing, which is normally the case, Dun & Bradstreet said.

"The large number of business starts includes a relatively high proportion of smaller firms, which reflects the surge in small-business formation that began at the start of this recovery," said Joseph W. Duncan, economist for Dun & Bradstreet.

The latest productivity gain was less than in the fourth quarter of 1983 — when it rose at an annual rate of 4.2 percent — but both worker output and hours worked "grew substantially faster" in the first quarter of this year, the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday.

Business productivity grew at an annual rate of 2.7 percent in all of 1983.

The 4.1 percent rate of advance in the latest quarter was based on an 11.8 percent rise in output and a 7.3 percent increase in the number of hours worked, adjusted for seasonal variations, according to the bureau's report.

A commission appointed by President Reagan in 1982 to explore solutions to declining U.S. productivity growth is due to release its findings soon.

When the figures calculated by the bureau excluded the farm economy, productivity advanced at an annual rate of 3.5 percent in the first quarter, the bureau said.

The latest report, which revised preliminary first-quarter figures released by the government in late April, said non-farm productivity rose 0.9 percentage point more than the 2.6 percent annual rate of increase initially reported.

Documentary film in production

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin and local oil industry figures will be featured in a documentary film about Texas independent oil producers.

The Dallas Historical Society is sponsoring the production of the hour documentary film to be called Wildcatter. The film will examine the history of the Texas oil industry from 1900-1935, describing the events behind the historic gushers at Spindletop, the Permian Basin and C.M. "Dad" Joiner's discovery of the gigantic East Texas oil field.

Featuring archive photographs, rare film footage and interviews with the last of the early Texas oil pioneers, Wildcatter will also follow a young member of this vanishing breed of American entrepreneurs as he drills a wildcat well in the very different social and economic climate of 1984.

Produced by Robert and Laurie Tranchin of October Productions of Dallas, the film is being written and directed by Tranchin, a native of Dallas and a graduate of Harvard and New York Universities. Tranchin is a former assistant director to Imamura Shohei, noted Japanese film director and winner of the 1983 Cannes Film Festival. The cinematographer is Allen Moore, a Harvard graduate and a 1983 recipient of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship.

The Tranchins have spent two years and have travelled over 12,000 miles gathering research material for Wildcatter. Beginning in April, the production crew drove over 3,000 miles in two weeks, all within the state of Texas, filming interviews with some forty people. Among those interviewed have been industry leaders such as Michael T. Halbouty and L.F. McCollum of Houston and many local figures including Mr. and Mrs. Ford Chapman and Berte Haigh of Midland and Mrs. Dee Locklin of McCamey. In early June, the Wildcatter production crew will travel to Texon and Big Lake to film the annual Texon reunion.

The project is being funded through grants from the Texas Committee for the Humanities, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and through contributions from the private sector. Wildcatter will be available for television broadcast in early 1985, with later distribution planned for the Texas Sesquicentennial Celebration in 1986.

Postal Service wage freeze sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is calling for a freeze on basic wages for its employees and lower cost-of-living allowances, the presidents of the two largest unions say.

Moe Biller of the American Postal Workers union, and Vincent Sombrotto of the National Association of Letter Carriers issued a joint statement Tuesday calling the management proposals "garbage" and saying they are "totally unacceptable."

The two had special criticism for the Postal Service's call for a wage freeze for current employees. "Who do they think is responsible for the Postal Service's present healthy financial conditions? Who do they think will move 130 billion pieces of mail this fiscal year?" they asked.

Biller and Sombrotto said postal management called for "wholesale gutting" of the cost-of-living allowance part of the current contract. This provision gives postal workers raises to compensate for inflation.

Other parts of Postal Service proposals made May 22 included wages for new employees at a rate one-third lower than those of current employees, a cap on Postal Service contributions to health plan premiums, a reduction in the amount of annual leave granted new employees, reduction in paid sick leave and a reduction in the extra pay given to those who work at night, the two said.

Biller and Sombrotto said the proposal "isn't even worth the paper it's printed on. It's an insult to all postal workers who have labored so hard and so efficiently to make the world's best postal service even better. It is also an insult to those American workers who will be joining the Postal Service in the days ahead."

An average unionized postal worker now earns $27,577 per year in salary and fringe benefits, Postal Service figures show.

The two union leaders said they would make their wage and fringe benefit demands "at the appropriate time." The negotiations began April 24 with the goal of agreeing on new contracts by midnight, July 20, when the current contracts expire.

The American Postal Workers union represents some 300,000 clerks, maintenance employees, motor vehicle employees and special delivery messengers. The National Association of Letter Carriers is composed of about 197,000 city delivery letter carriers.

Representatives of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, which has about 60,400 members, and representatives of the 40,000 mail handlers in the Laborers International union are attending separate bargaining sessions.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger has been saying since the talks began that wages paid to postal workers exceed those paid to workers who do similar work for private companies. "We must pursue the policy of closing the gap between Postal Service wage levels and those prevailing for similar levels of work in the private sector of the economy," Bolger said.

Colorado penny stock firm closes

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Blaming "tough times" in the stock market, First Financial Securities Inc., a 7-year-old penny stock firm with some 7,000 customers, has gone out of business.

The Aurora-based firm, which has been under close monitoring by officials of the National Association of Securities Dealers, is liquidating itself under the supervision of the Denver office of the NASD, an association official said Tuesday.

"We have stopped doing business as a broker-dealer," said John Johnston, president of First Financial. "Times are tough. We just voluntarily stopped doing business.

"The whole stock market is a little weak, and particularly the penny stocks right now."

Penny stocks are those that sell for less than $1 a share.

Most of the 60 First Financial brokers, about 50, will be absorbed into the firm of E.J. Pittock & Co.

Edwin J. Pittock, chairman and president of the 10-year-old regional investment banking firm, said the brokers will be placed in Pittock branch offices in Aurora and Colorado Springs.

E.J. Pittock & Co. is headquartered in Colorado and has 12 branch offices in the Rocky Mountain region, the Midwest, and the East Coast.

The company is a subsidiary of Pittock Financial Services Inc., a publicly held corporation that on March 31 reported total assets of $6.2 million and shareholders' equity of $3.2 million. The two Pittock firms have net capital of nearly $2 million.

Customer accounts also will be shifted to Pittock. That will freeze customer accounts for some time, perhaps as long as a few weeks in most cases and perhaps longer if there are paperwork problems, according to NASD officials.

"I would say it could be as long as a few weeks," said Frank Birgfeld, who heads the NASD office in Denver. "I'm hopeful we can cut that time to a much shorter period."

The shift will not be a merger and no money will change hands.

First Financial, which has offices in Aurora and Colorado Springs, opted to go out of business before its capitalization dropped to levels where it would be in violation of securities regulations, Birgfeld said.

Frank See re-elected to Texas Automobile Dealers board

Franklin M. See, dealer and operator of Frank See Chevrolet Inc., has been re-elected to the Texas Automobile Dealers Association Board of Directors, according to Chairman Bob Brown.

See will serve a three-year term, representing the seven counties in District 29.

"The association is extremely fortunate to have a person of Frank See's caliber serving on the board," Brown said. "We are happy he will take an active ladership role on behalf of his fellow dealers.

"The TADA board makes policy decisions affecting the new car and truck dealers in Texas," Brown said. "Considering the critical and somewhat volatile nature of our industry, these decisions are becoming more and more important."

See, a franchised new car dealer six years, has served as president of the Midland New Car Dealers Association and on the District 5 Chevrolet Dealers Council.

He is involved in other areas. See participates in high school drivers education programs and the Boy Scouts. He has been vice-president and president-elect of the Downtown Rotary Club, on the board of directors for the High Sky Girls Ranch and on the planning committee for Midland College.

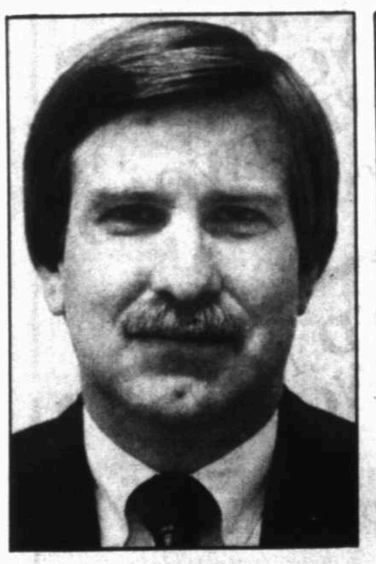

See has won various Chevrolet management and sales awards.

Delta Drilling Company changes name, logo

TYLER — Shareholdeers of Delta Drilling Co. have approved a proposal changing the name of the company to DeltaUS Corp.

The change, which was proposed by Delta's board of directors, becomes effective July 1.

Keating V. Zeppa, Delta chairman of the board and president, told shareholders at the company's annual meeting that "over the last several years, Delta has developed its expertise as an exploration and production entity, and we felt the time was appropriate to develop a corporate identity which would convey to the business and investing community, as well as our local communities, that we are much more than a traditional drilling company."

He said the company's drilling group will continue to function as Delta Drilling Co., a division of DeltaUS because of the importance of retaining its strong reputation in the contract drilling industry.

Explortion and production activities will be directed by DeltaUS Exploration and Production. Other operating entities — including Delta Overseas Drilling Co., Etexas Producers Gas Co., Triangle Gas Pipeline Co. and Triangle Marketing Corp. — will continue to function as wholly-owned subsidiaries of DeltaUS.

The name change carries with it a new corporate logo, which incorpoates a modernized version of the Delta sign and a compatible graphic treatment of the words, DeltaUS.

Zeppa said the new corporate name is being registered in those states where Delta does business. Use of the new name and logo will follow completion of this process.

"We're excited about the change," said Zeppa. "It represents the first name change in the company's 53-year history, and we feel it is an appropriate and progressive one. The new name will t[illegible] our constituencies that we are serious about becoming a significant independent producer of oil and gas."

He said a major concern in the implementation of the new name will be expense. "Because business conditions are poor at this time, we plan to phase in the new identity, rather than spend massive amounts of money on a crash program. But, in a year, the new DeltaUS identity should be well-known within the industry."

In addition to Tyler, Delta has offices and facilities in Kilgore, Odessa, Midland, Ozona, Chapel Hill, Victoria and Houston, Texas; Lafayette and Shreveport, Louisiana; Pittsburgh and Indiana, Pennsylvania; and Fiumicino, Italy.

Monsanto completes Bone Springs wildcat

Monsanto Oil Co., Midland, has completed a 5,700 ft. Bone Springs wildcat.

On initial production the well flowed on a 24 hour test 40 bopd, with a trace of water and 1,200 Mcfd through a 20/64 in. choke.

The well is the No.23 Burton Flat Deep Unit. It was plugged back to 5,648 ft.and completed in perforations between 5,413-5,440 ft., following treatment with 1,250 gal. 15 percent NEFE and fracturing with 40,000 gal. and 37,000 lb. 20/40 sand.

It is located 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from south lines of Section 158, Block 2, H&TC survey, five miles north of Kamp Springs.

Drilling permits down

DENVER — A total of 1,905 permits to drill wells for oil and gas were issued in the United States during the week ended May 18, Petroleum Information Inc. reported.

The total was down from the 2,165 permits to drill issued during the previous week, but was almost equal to the 1,903 permits issued during the same week a year ago.

Permits to drill, obtained by PI from responsible government agencies, are a measure of the drilling intentions of the nation's oil operators.

New field wildcat permits issued during the past week totaled 242 — an increase of 72 or 42.3 percent from permits issued at the same time a year ago. Permits for drilling in the "other exploratory" category were down 22.5 prcent from a year ago. Development drilling permits were slightly lower — a decrease of 1.5 percent — from the figure for the corresponding week last year.

Pressure increases to review release of emergency oil

HOUSTON — Pressure is increasing for a major review of the way that emergency oil stockpiles would be released to the market in the event of supply disruptions resulting from the accelerating fighting between Iran and Iraq, according to Petroleum Information International.

While the attacks on tankers in the Persian Gulf haven't closed the flow of oil from the countries in and around the gulf, the oil publication says the industrial countries that are members of the Organizational for Economic Cooperation and Development are getting increasingly anxious about contingency plans.

The weekly publication that reports on worldwide oil and natural gas developments says Japan apparently intends to bring the matter before a seven-nation economic summit to be held June 7 in London.

The London summit may provide the first scheduled forum for discussion of the situation. The heads of government of the U.S., U.K., Japan, France, Italy, West Germany and Canada are to attend the summit.

U.S. officials have indicated that the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve will not be drawn on merely to hold down prices.

The potentialy explosive situation raises the question of how oil-producing nations outside the Persian Gulf can be relied on to increase production should there be a cutoff of Persian Gulf supplis. Venezuela's energy minister,Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, says his country will not boost production because of the widening fighting in the gulf area.

Crysler can sue to halt GM joint venture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is entitled to sue in U.S. District Court to block the proposed joint carmaking venture between General Motors Corp and Toyota Motor Corp., a federal judge says.

In a 58-page opinion, U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan also denied Tuesday Toyota's claim that the federal court here lacks jurisdiction over the Japanese firm.

Toyota had argued that it did not business in the District of Columbia and, thus, could not be sued here. But the judge said it maintains numerous government contacts in the nation's capital and that gave the court jurisdiction.

The judge also said none of the previous cases cited by GM attorneys dictates dismissal of Chrysler's suit.

Afterward, a GM spokesman expressed regret over the ruling but said the company was "confident that the merits of our case will be proven in court."

Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca, meanwhile, issued a statement saying he was pleased over the ruling and that the company would "proceed as quickly and vigorously as we know how."

Chrysler filed its lawsuit against the two automakers in January in the wake of the Federal Trade Commission's December decision to give the project tentative approval. The FTC gave it final approval 3-2 in February.

Chrysler argued that the GM-Toyota plan to sell annually under the Chevrolet name 250,000 Sprinters produced in Fremont, Calif., would "have a devastating effect on competition in the automobile market." The car would be a front-wheel-drive version of the Toyota Corolla.

In his opinion, Hogan cited Chrysler claims that GM has captured about 70 percent of the market for large automobiles, 27 percent for small autos and 15 percent for subcompact cars.

Dollar dips in opening; Gold quote off in trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar dipped at the European opening today but remained steady. Gold bullion prices eased in thin trading.

The dollar was quoted lower against all major currencies except the Dutch guilder, but was only slightly off from its levels in New York late Tuesday.

Traders in Frankfurt said the dollar was being held steady by forecasts of higher U.S. interest rates, the worsening metalworkers strike in West Germany and continued concern over the Persian Gulf situation.

They said concerns about the stability of the U.S. banking system, which hurt the dollar last week, appeared to have been pushed into the background.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with late Tuesday included:

–2.7330 West German marks, down from 2.7470.

–2.2560 Swiss francs, down from 2.2585.

–8.3900 French francs, down from 8.4215.

–3.08875 Dutch guilders, up from 3.0870.

–1,689.50 Italian lire, down from 1,691.50.

–1.29475 Canadian dollars, down from 1.29605.

The British pound rose to $1.3852 from $1.3834.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 231.90 yen, down marginally from Tuesday's 231.95 yen. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 231.40 yen.

Traders said there was no immediate impact on the Tokyo market from a U.S.-Japanese agreement, announced earlier in Tokyo and Washington, on steps to widen Japan's capital market and make the yen a more international currency.

Meanwhile, the value of gold bullion fell in trendless trading.

At midmorning, London's five main bullion houses fixed an indicative gold price of $384.75 an ounce, down from $386 late Tuesday. In Zurich, gold also was bid at $384.75, down $1.

T-bill yields mixed in trading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities were mixed this week, with rates hitting the highest level since 1982 for six-month T-bills but dropping slightly for three-month bills.

In Tuesday's auction, the government sold $12.6 billion in new securities — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 9.83 percent, down from 9.95 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 10.62 percent, up from 10.38 percent.

The three-month yield was the lowest since the April 30 level of 9.68 percent, while the six-month rate was the highest since the 10.94 percent of Aug. 9, 1982. Yields for both categories had declined last week after rising for three straight weeks.

Man's destiny lies in space, scientist says

By ROBERT LOCKE
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — Man is probably all alone on Earth among the stars of the Milky Way, contends an astronomer. But as surely as humanity has settled every corner of the Earth, he said, we someday will spread our kind throughout the 100 billion stars of the galaxy.

Colonists, like those who left Europe centuries ago on a one-way trip to the New World, will be headed for the nearest stars in 500 years or so, said Eric M. Jones of the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Hundreds of them might ride in a mobile colony towed behind a gossamer sail the size of a planet. At speeds up to 18,000 miles per second, the colonists would reach a nearby star in 60 years.

THIS IS NOT an idle daydream or the plot of a science-fiction novel. Jones, who described the possibilities and some implications at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is one of a handful of scientists actively studying the colonization of the stars.

The scene he paints, Jones said, is inevitable and technically reasonable. And, he said, "there are scads of natural resources and energy resources in space that could support trillions of settlers."

Once emigrants reach a star, they and their robots might tame and colonize its asteroids, moons or planets. As centuries pass, this settlement would spawn daughter colonies that would settle the planets of other nearby stars. Those colonies would spin off others as humanity moves farther from Earth.

"Once our descendants start sending out settlement expeditions, in only a few million years virtually every star in the galaxy would be touched by us," Jones said.

"I expect that will happen."

MAN HAS BEEN migrating ever since he first stood on his hind legs. "This migration is not over," Jones said. "Going into space, not just the tentative exploration we have done so far, but full-fledged, self-sufficient settlements, is a continuation of a very ancient human trend. ... The need to explore the unknown runs deep in our species."

If other intelligent life exists on planets orbiting other stars — and scientists who are scanning the heavens for radio signals supposedly sent by them contend more than 100 million civilizations may be scattered among the stars — at least some of them should have a similar thirst for exploration.

"If humanity may fill the galaxy in 5 million years, why has not a similar migration begun elsewhere reached the solar system by now? Surely they are not all sedentary philosopher-kings," Jones said.

IF THEY EXIST, Jones and others argue, they should have reached us by now. Yet, he said, there's no evidence that anyone else has ever been to our solar system.

"I think the most reasonable explanation for that is that there's no one else out there," he said. "Where are they? I suspect we are they. Alone, and with a grand adventure before us."

Long before we're ready to reach for the stars in some five centuries, Jones said, humans will have peopled the solar system.

Then the big step: the stars. Even the closest are trillions of miles away. To reach one in a lifetime would require what Jones calls "fast ships" capable of traveling at one-tenth the speed of light.
