More rain pelts city

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Firefighters extinguished a blaze at 1402 Country Club Drive, which was caused by lightning hitting the home .

■ The National Weather Service reports that almost another inch of rain fell on Midland Saturday.

By Ed Todd

In less than a week's time, Midland has turned from a dusty uptown settlement on the flat plains of West Texas to Swampsville.

Or, at least that's the way it seems.

The July rains in Midland, including another downpour Saturday, have so far totaled 8.50 inches, setting a rainfall record for the month. It surpassed the previous record of 7.73 inches set in July of 1975.

More than six inches of the month's official rainfall as measured by the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport came since mid-week.

"That's pretty intense," NWS weatherman Greg Jackson said of the month's rain.

As usual when it rains here, many of Midland's major thoroughfares flooded. Saturday was no exception.

"That's part of living in flat country," noted a Midland policeman.

Scharbauer Draw turned into a swift stream Saturday afternoon in its eastwardly flow into tributaries and onto the Colorado River.

Since the mid-week start of the downpour, the land has become saturated.

"You'd think we lived in the tropics," said Pearl Watson, a retired school teacher.

Saturday's downpour dropped almost an inch of rain, .81-inch, at the NWS to bring the just-past mid-year rainfall total to 14.60 inches. That amount more than equals the year's average rainfall of 13.70 inches.

Along with Saturday's rain was cracking thunder and streaking lightning. One bolt hit a house in central Midland at 1402 Country Club Drive at mid-afternoon and set a portion of the W. Dow and Bettie Hamm Jr. house ablaze.

Lightning also caused a power outage in northwest Midland.

Meanwhile, Midland firefighters also investigated a reported propane leak at the Chevron tank farm east of town. Officials said it was not weather related.

The week's rain apparently was well-received despite the inconvenience en-

Lightning strikes Midland home

■ Bolt sets house ablaze, blows out windows, parts of the wall and spews bits of glass, wood and insulation into the pool.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The lightning bolt that startled Bettie Hamm Saturday not only set her house ablaze but came terrifyingly close to striking her.

"I was sitting in the den, facing the TV, when I heard a terrible noise," recalled Mrs. Hamm, as she was standing with friends in the rain and was watching smoke, which had ceased to billow, stream from a northwest bedroom addition to her house.

"And it felt like an explosion."

Midland firemen already had put out the blaze, and were blowing smoke out of her house.

"It jolted me," she said of the cracking lightning, which suddenly struck her house at 1402 Country Club Drive. The explosion blew out windows and parts of the wall and spewed bits of glass, wood and insulation into the backyard swimming pool.

Moments before the lightning struck shortly before 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Mrs. Hamm had considered making a telephone call from the telephone in the bedroom where the lightning hit the

U.N. team arrives to inspect Iraqi nuclear sites

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A new U.N. team arrived on Saturday to inspect Iraq's nuclear program and determine whether it has been misleading the world about its capability to refine uranium for nuclear weapons.

It is the fourth weapons inspection team to visit Iraq since the Persian Gulf War. An earlier team said Baghdad may be hiding weapons productions sites in violation of the cease-fire terms that ended the war.

The allies say they will uncover all of Iraq's sites, and they have threatened a military strike to destroy them if necessary.

David Kay, the chief inspector, said his team of 18 scientists and technicians will visit "numerous" sites during its two-week visit, but he would not disclose the locations.

"The whole idea is that they should be surprise inspections," he said.

The inspection team, attached to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, was to begin its work today.

Maurizio Zifferero, the team coordinator, said earlier the team's mission was to "try to clarify the extent of the centrifuge program" in which Iraq was making weapons-grade uranium.

The previous inspection team issued a

Texans to vote on amendments, propositions

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland voters will go to the polls Aug. 10 to decide the fate of two constitutional amendments and three propositions, with four of the five issues directly impacting the newly formed County Education Districts (CEDs).

While some confusion has existed in relation to the proposals, it is the first of the three propositions — the one dealing with taxation of personal property — that has sparked major concern.

The CEDs were created by state legislation, specifically Senate Bill 351. Local school districts were required to form the new taxing entities by the legislation. The CEDs were created in an attempt to provide taxing equity statewide.

■ For further description and analysis of the proposed constitutional amendments and propositions, including pro and con positions, see the League of Women's Voters overview/4A

■ See editorial/4B

The CEDs are individual entities. Midland, Greenwood and Andrews independent school districts joined to create the Andrews-Midland County Education District.

Voters in each county will vote on local tax exemptions for the new taxing entity in the Aug. 10 election.

Because CEDs are new taxing entities, no provision has been made concerning whether they may grant local homestead exemptions or tax personal property, according to information from the House Research Organization in a special legislative report.

The first constitutional amendment proposes "to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain personal property."

The three propositions offer specific tax exemptions for the CEDs, including Proposition No. 1 which provides for the "taxation of all tangible personal property, other than manufactured homes that is not held or used for the production of income."

Voting against the first constitutional amendment will make all the propositions moot, according to Dan Casey of the Legislative Education Board in Austin.

"Also, voting against all the amendments and propositions won't eliminate the CEDs, which seems to be a misconception people have," Casey said. "The CEDS were created at the state level and are separate entities from local school districts."

Casey said the CEDS were set up to "share tax wealth."

"The CEDs will assess and collect their own taxes," he said.

According to Casey, school districts must raise tax rates to a least 72 cents. Midland, Andrews and Greenwood will

Former police officer indicted in ring of tractor thefts

AMARILLO (AP) — A former Texas police officer and a Mexican national have been indicted by a grand jury in Dallas for their involvement in an international ring of tractor thefts.

Mark Ancira, a former patrolman with the Friona Police Department, and Pedro Payan of Nuevos Casas Grandes, Mexico, are accused of stealing 17 John Deere tractors worth more than $500,000 and taking them across the U.S border to sell to Mexican farmers.

The thefts spanned Roosevelt and Curry counties in New Mexico and in counties along the New Mexico-Texas border.

The federal grand jury on Wednesday delivered the indictment against Ancira and Payan, accusing them of stealing, selling and transporting the tractors across the national border.

Ancira, 30, of Las Cruces, N.M., waived extradition to Texas and is being held without bond in a Brownfield, Texas jail, the Amarillo Globe-News reported.

Payan, of Nuevo Casas Grandes, Mexico, is being held without bond in a Las Cruces jail pending his transfer to Lubbock, Texas.

Officer Joseph Herrera of the Las Cruces city jail would not give Payan's age, saying such information couldn't be released about federal prisoners.

Authorities say Ancira supervised the theft and transport of the tractors while they were in the United States and Payan then sold the vehicles after they crossed into Mexico from Columbus, N.M.

Tractors were reported stolen from several counties surrounding Lubbock. But none were reported stolen northwest of Lubbock in Parmer County, where Ancira was a patrolman for the Friona Police Department from November 1980 until March 1983.

Friona Police Chief Lloyd Niece said Ancira's file does not give a reason why he was fired.

Roosevelt County Sheriff Bob Dodgin said nine of 17 tractors taken into Mexico were recovered last week and returned to their owners. Some of the tractors were found as far as 350-400 miles south of the Mexican border.

"All the tractors were located in Old Mexico," Dodgin said."Most of them had already been sold to different farmers in that area."

Amendments, propositions explained

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is an overview — including pro and con positions — of the five proposals to appear on the ballot August 10. This information is provided by the League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 1:

The constitutional amendment to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property.

EXPLANATION

The school finance law approved by the 72nd Legislature created 188 new county education districts, composed of single counties or groups of counties. These districts have the limited purpose of levying the required local first-tier tax to raise the equivalent of 72 cents per $100 of assessed market value and redistributing the proceeds among local school districts within the county education district.

This proposed amendment would authorize the new districts to hold elections to allow voters within the districts to decide whether to grant an exemption on a percentage of the assessed value of residence homesteads; whether to grant an additional exemption on homesteads of elderly and disabled persons; and whether to impose taxes on certain types of personal property.

In the enabling legislation that was passed during the regular session of the Legislature, the amount of the homestead exemption was specified as 20 percent and the exemption for elderly and disabled persons was set at $10,000. These exemptions would be in addition to the existing $5,000 homestead exemption, the $10,000 exemption on homesteads of elderly and disabled persons, and the freeze on property taxes for elderly and disabled persons.

The enabling legislation also directed the county education districts to present the propositions to their voters in an election to be held on August 10, 1991. The wording of the proposals on local ballots will be identical across the state, but order may vary. Decisions made by voters in a district would apply in that district only, contingent upon the decision of voters statewide on the proposed constitutional amendment which authorizes these elections.

Thus, voters who go the the polls on August 10 will be asked to vote simultaneously on a constitutional amendment and to vote on the local tax options authorized by the proposed amendment. If voters approve the proposed amendment statewide, the locally adopted options would go into effect without delay. This is being done in order to enable the new taxing districts to implement voter decisions in the property tax bills scheduled to go out in October.

PROS AND CONS OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 1

FOR

1. Trustees of the new county education districts are appointed by local school boards rather than being elected by voters, and thus do not have the discretionary authority to decide whether or not to grant these exemptions or impose these taxes on personal property. Therefore, the power to make these decisions must rest with voters in the county education districts.

2. This amendment would make it possible for homestead exemptions and personal property taxes to be continued, but at the option of voters rather than by action of the county education district board.

AGAINST

1. Passage of this proposed amendment would shift the tax burden from residential property to businesses. It would affect the county education districts across the state very differently. Those that are dependent primarily upon residential property would be forced to raise residential property taxes more than those that rely on commercial property.

2. Tax exemptions for some property owners would result in higher taxes for others. Only 259 of the more than 1,050 school districts in Texas currently grand the homestead exemption. This amendment could result in a large increase in property tax exemptions statewide, narrowing the property base that must provide the local share of public school funding, which contributes approximately half of all school funding. This would mean higher taxes for the remaining taxpayers in order to maintain the required local funding.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 2

EXPLANATION

This proposed amendment would authorize the Legislature to allow the Higher Education Coordinating Board to issue up to $300 million in general obligation bonds to finance educational loans to Texas students attending Texas colleges and universities. The maximum interest rate would be set by law. An interest and sinking fund would be established to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds as they mature.

The Legislature could provide for the investment of bond proceeds and establish the interest and sinking fund. The state cannot issue bonds to finance student loans without this constitutional amendment because the Texas Constitution prohibits the Legislature from lending the credit of the state without specific authorization in the constitution, and prohibits use of public funds for grants and loans to individuals. Previous amendments authorized issuance of $85 million for student loans in 1965, $200 million in 1969, and $75 million in 1989.

PROS AND CONS OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 2

FOR

1. These loans are urgently needed to meet the 1991 demand for loans to financially needy students. If his amendment is not approved, approximately 15,000 Texas students (the number who received loans last year) may be unable to attend Texas colleges and universities this year. These loans go only to financially needy students who otherwise could not afford to attend college.

2. The student loan program usually operates as a revolving, self-supporting fund. Because changes in federal loan programs have created large increases in demand for state loans, and because most of the many loans made in recent years are not yet due, the bonds to be issued are necessary to fund the program until payments on recent loans begin to come in. The bonds will be paid back, plus interest, by borrowers, not taxpayers.

AGAINST

1. The state does not need to incur any more debt. The bonded indebtedness of the state now totals $7.5 billion. General obligation bonds, which accounted for $2.3 billion in debt at the end of fiscal 1989, reached $2.8 billion at the end of 1990.

2. This proposed $300 million debt will not stand alone. The Legislature should undertake a comprehensive evaluation of overall state debt before voters are asked to add to it.

COUNTY EDUCATION DISTRICT PROPOSITIONS

The propositions below will be presented to voters at the same time as the proposed constitutional amendments above.

PROPOSITION NO. 1

The taxation of all tangible personal property, other than manufactured homes, in Andrews-Midland County Education District that is not held or used for the production of income.

FOR

This would spread the tax burden over a wider base by generating revenue from non-income producing personal property such as boats, cars, and motorcycles.

AGAINST

Appraisals, verification of property, and collection of the tax create costs to taxpayers that may offset the income generated. Many local governing bodies do not collect this tax because it has a high delinquency rate and is difficult to enforce equitably.

PROPOSITION NO. 2

The exemption of 20 percent of the market value of the residence homestead from ad valorem taxation in Andrews-Midland County Education District.

FOR

If locally-granted homestead exemptions are completely eliminated, homeowners in the local school districts that have been granting homestead exemptions are likely to face large property tax increases. This proposed exemption could cushion the impact of expected increases.

AGAINST

In districts with substantial commercial property, this proposal would shift the tax burden from residential property to business. Districts that are largely residential would suffer losses of tax revenue and would have to raise tax rates to generate the required amount of local funding.

PROPOSITION NO. 3:

The exemption of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is disabled and of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is 65 or older from ad valorem taxation in Andrews-Midland County Education District.

FOR

This proposal would alleviate the impact of higher school taxes on those most likely to be adversely affected by them.

AGAINST

Property taxes are already frozen for individuals 65 or older and for disabled persons; this proposal would create an even larger exemption. This proposal is not need-based and would exempt many individuals who can afford to pay higher taxes, increasing the burden on other taxpayers.

Weather Summary

Rain floods parts of state

Associated Press

Rain returned Saturday to much of Texas, with some areas getting too much. A flash flood watch was issued for Northwest Texas and South Central Texas, where torrential downpours were falling on already-saturated soil. Showers also soaked much of South and East Texas.

Downpours in the Big Bend caused the Rio Grande southeast of Presidio to rise near flood stage.

Far West Texas had sunshine, but the rest of the state was mostly cloudy.

Temperatures climbed into the 90s in the sunny areas of the state, but clouds kept the mercury lower in most regions. Readings ranged at 3 p.m. from 64 degrees at Marfa to 91 in San Angelo.

Winds were mostly from the south and gusty.

The West Texas forecast was for partly cloudy skies and scattered thunderstorms today from the Permian Basin south to the Big Bend. High temperatures were expected to be around 90 degrees while lows were expected in the 60s.

The forecast for South Texas was for partly cloudy warm days and fair nights with widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms through Monday.

NATION

Thunderstorms brought showers to the East Coast and the South Central states Saturday. Dry weather prevailed over most of the rest of the nation.

Morning showers and thunderstorms dumped 3 to 4 inches of rain in southwestern and south central Oklahoma. Comanche had 4.35 inches after since midnight.

Gwinhurst in central Delaware had 3.74 inches of rain in the 24-hour period ending at 9 a.m. EDT.

Showers and thunderstorms extended from southwest Texas across much of Oklahoma into western Arkansas and extreme southwestern Missouri on Saturday afternoon.

Other showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the southern Atlantic Coast states, mostly along the Gulf Coast of Florida.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies west of the Great Plains.

Heavier rainfall totals for Saturday afternoon included an inch and one-half at Dover, Del., and more than one inch at Virginia Beach, Va., and Wichita Falls, Texas.

VOTE: 4 issues deal with CEDs

share the 72 cents.

Any amount above that will be for enrichment in the local districts.

Local school administrators and Ron Stegall, chief tax appraiser for the Midland Central Appraisal District, are urging taxpayers to vote "yes" on the first constitutional amendment.

Although the amendment allows for CEDs to tax tangible property value, it also allows for exemptions.

"Most people will probably want the homestead exemptions but not the personal property tax," said MISD superintendent Joesph Baressi Jr.

Voters can eliminate the personal property tax by voting "no" on Proposition No. 1. which would tax all personal property.

"This personal property would include automobiles, recreational vehicles and airplanes," Stegall said.

Appraising and verifying personal property could be a tax office nightmare, according to Stegall.

"It could create a lot of problems. It's hard to collect. People are not used to paying this tax and it would not set well with the general public," he said, "And we are not staffed to collect it."

Proponents of the tax say it would spread the tax burden over a wider base by generating revenue from non-income producing personal property such as boats, cars and motorcycles.

Opponents say it would be expensive to appraise property and collect the taxes which would create costs to taxpayers that may offset income generated.

"In my opinion people should vote 'yes' on the state constitutional amendment, because — if they don't — they won't get homestead exemptions or local options," Stegall said.

"Without the amendment, and homestead exemptions, the CED tax will cause many homeowners to face greatly increased property taxes," according to the House Research Organization report.

With or without the amendment, SB 351 will require CEDs to levy a tax of 72 cents per $100 valuation in the 1992 tax year, increasing to $1 by 1995. The amendment will simply allow the homestead exemptions to be continued, at the option of voters.

The amendment turns over taxation decisions to the voters, according to the House report. If the CEDs had discretionary authority over decisions concerning taxation the "one man, one vote" standard would be violated.

Opponents note that exempting a portion of one type of property unavoidably increases the tax burden on other types to make up the revenue lost.

The other propositions allow for homestead exemptions.

Proposition No. 2 calls for "the exemption of 20 percent of the market value of the residence homestead from ad valorem taxation."

This proposition could cushion the impact of property tax increases for districts which have been granting homestead exemptions.

Under current state law the state allows school districts to exempt a portion of the value of every residence homestead.

MISD's current homestead exemption is 10 percent plus $5,000. Homeowners 65 and older are eligible to have the school tax levy frozen on their homesteads. This would not be affected by passage of Proposition No. 1. The proposition solely affects CED exemptions.

This proposition, however, will impact districts with substantial commercial property and will shift the tax burden from residential property to business property.

"In our case, the tax burden will shift to businesses and minerals," Baressi said.

Proposition No. 3 calls for "the exemption of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is disabled and of $10,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of an individual who is 65 and older from ad valorem taxation."

The proposal would alleviate the impact of higher school taxes on those most likely to be adversely affected by them. But the burden would shift to other taxpayers since the exemption would be in addition to other exemptions and freezes already in place.

"People think by voting against this amendment they would lose freezes and ceilings, but that is not true," Stegall said. "The County Education District is a new taxing jurisdiction and is separate from Midland Independent School District. Regardless of what happens at the election, local homestead exemptions and options will be in effect."

The second constitutional amendment will help bail out Texas' troubled student loan programs.

The amendment will provide for "the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students."

Voter approval of the amendment will authorize the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to sell general obligation bonds to fund state student loan programs.

"The amendment is vital to keeping thousands of students in college," according to Harry Reasoner, THECB chairman.

Reasoner said approximately 26,000 Texas students who received loans last year may be unable to attend Texas colleges and universities this year.

The student loan program usually operates as a revolving self-supporting fund, but the increasing number of students being accepted for the loans is exhausting available funds.

"In recent months, we've had to temporarily suspend making new loans to middle-income students to make sure we had funds to loan to low-income students," Reasoner said.

Reasoner said that the creation of the College Access Loan program for middle-income students has contributed to the unprecedented growth in demand for these loans.

If passed, the amendment would authorize the THECB to sell $300 million in general obligation bonds to fund the state's struggling Hinson-Hazlewood College Student Loan Program.

Financial aid directors at Midland and Odessa colleges, and at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin said that their institutions would not be impacted.

MC, OC and UTPB all offer the Stafford Student Loan Program which is similar to the Hinson-Hazlewood program.

Glen Davis, UTPB financial aid director, said local banks act as lenders for the federally funded loan. "The private lender banks provide the funds directly to the student," Davis said. "With the Hinson-Hazlewood loan program the state acts as the lender."

Area financial aid directors support the amendment.

Information from the House Research Organization states: "For many students, access to higher education is determined by the availability and affordability of loans. The state has a responsibility to continue to offer financial aid to students and to support the 26,000 students who already depend on the loan program."

The loans are attractive to students because they are generally 1 to 4 percent below the interest rate charged by commercial lenders for student loans.

The report also notes that "unlike state bonds for financing prisons or the superconducting super collider, the student loan bonds would be paid back, with interest, by borrowers, not by state taxpayers."

The Legislative Budget Board estimates that annual debt service on $300 million in bonds would be approximately $28.5 million.

Opponents of the amendment decry the state incurring more debt. The bonded indebtedness of the state now totals $7.5 billion.

BOLT: Home catches fire after lightning strikes it house. Fortunately, she postponed making the call.

"I had planned to make a phone call," she recalled. "I put it off and had a cup of coffee, and then 'bang!'

"I feel very fortunate."

She was home alone.

Meanwhile, her husband, W. Dow Hamm Jr., a Midland oil operator and investor, was en route to Midland from Houston. He was unaware of the lightning strike.

After the strike, Mrs. Hamm had rushed to a neighbor's house. Firemen were summoned.

"When something like that (a fire) happens," she told a friend, "you want them (the firemen) here immediately."

Despite the house damage, Mrs. Hamm said that she was "really thankful" not only that she survived the lightning strike but thankful that she was home alone.

"I have grandchildren at my house a lot of times, and I'm glad they weren't here."

Though lightning strikes have not been "a real problem" in Midland, said Battalion Chief Bob White, three lightning strikes in the past six years have landed in the central Midland neighborhood.

The earlier strikes didn't do "too much damage," White said, but one bolt "blew a tree open."

Woman joins seach for MIAs in Vietnam

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-area woman who has worn a bracelet for a missing Navy officer for 22 years is joining the serviceman's family in organizing a white-ribbon campaign after a photograph drew national attention to the man and other missing U.S. soldiers.

Lisa King has worn a $2.50 bracelet bearing Navy Lt. Larry Stevens' name since she was 13. A friend's father returned from Vietnam in May 1969 and urged her to wear the bracelet "until in your heart you know he comes home."

In the early 1970s people often purchased the bracelets, adorned with the name of a missing serviceman, to show compassion.

Ms. King said she broke into a cold sweat last week when she first saw the photograph that purportedly depicts Stevens and two other U.S. servicemen, who still may be held captive in Vietnam.

"I do believe it's him, very much so. I still believe he's alive, I still believe they're there," she said.

Stevens' plane was shot down Feb. 14, 1969, over Vietnam.

The Pentagon and Vietnam both have declared the picture, obtained from a Cambodian group, a hoax. Even the American Defense Institute, the group that released the photo, is unsure of its validity.

But Ms. King is not dissuaded.

"It didn't lessen anything," said Ms. King, who moved to the Houston suburb of Tomball last month from California. "Too much has happened, too many things. There's no denying that that's Larry. There's too much of a resemblance."

Ms. King said she has marched, protested and solicited signatures on petitions to get more information about servicemen who still are listed as Missing In Action.

Five years ago, she traced down Stevens' mother, Gladys Fleckenstein. The two met in person in 1989 and since then have worked closely in the search for Stevens.

"They're like family. I love them dearly. I love them like I do my parents," Ms. King said. Her two children know Stevens' story and 11-year-old son, Michael Scott, has worn his own MIA bracelet with Stevens' name for six years.

The women, who usually call each other several times a month, have renewed enthusiasm for a white ribbon campaign to serve as a reminder of the prisoners of war and MIAs.

Lion puts on weight after getting increased attention

GONZALES (AP) — Samson was a little off his feed, even after weighing in at 550 pounds.

Samson's owner, Charlie Faupel of Victoria, said he couldn't get the 100-pound underweight African lion to eat.

So Faupel gave him to Glenn Glass, who owns a 1,000-acre ranch with a 90-pound cougar, a 37-pound tiger and several farm dogs.

With built-in playmates, Samson's weight is picking up a little.

"He seems to be a cat that requires a lot of attention, and he's getting it," Glass said.

The cougar didn't get along with Samson at first, but now he's warming up to him.

The tiger has peeked at Samson, but hasn't met him yet, Glass said.

The dogs lick Samson's ears when he lays near the side of his cage.

Faupel chose Glass from 100 callers who answered his ad in the Victoria Advocate. Glass was raised on a farm among horses, cows and other animals.

"Ever since I was 4 or 5 years old, I've been interested in lions and tigers," Glass said. "They're all almost extinct. They have nowhere to go and somebody's got to take care of them."

Glass said he serves Samson turkey prepared fresh every day. The lion used to want to be hand fed, but he now eats on his own.

"The more you hand-feed them, the more they come running at you like you're momma," Glass said.

Mexican nationals need visas to attend border schools

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal agency is cracking down on Mexican nationals who cross the border to attend South Texas schools.

Beginning this school year, children who live in Mexico but want to go to U.S. public schools must an F-1 Student Visa.

Students who have been going to schools using only their border crossing cards have done so illegally, said Ray Dudley, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"The border crossing card use is for you to come into the U.S., stay within a 25 mile zone and visit for business or pleasure," Dudley said. "Going to school is not a part of that."

Dudley said border school district officials complained about the unfair burden the young nationals were placing on the border towns' local taxpayers.

"A superintendent out of New Mexico said they had buses from Mexico bringing students over," Dudley said.

He said towns plagued with the problem include El Paso, Laredo, Brownsville and Del Rio.

Foreign students must first apply for entrance to an elementary or high school. When the children are approved, they will be issued a written document admitting them into the school.

This is to be redeemed for an F-1 Visa from the local U.S. Census Consulate, Dudley said.

RAIN: Weather good for farmers, ranchers

countered when some motorists took on flooded streets and wound up in stalled cars when their engines drowned out.

"Everytime I see it rain, I realize how beneficial it is to the trees we (Midlanders) have planted at the airport, and along Scharbauer Draw and Wall Street (Avenue)," said Ed Vogler, a Midland counseling geolgist.

And, he added, "You never saw a rancher complain of rain.

"The only time a farmer ever complains (of rain) is when he can't get in the field to get his crop or to plant his crop," he said.

Bobby Matthews, foreman of the Lazy Z Ranch north of town, wasn't complaining.

"It looks good now," Matthews said of the greening-up rangeland. "I've never seen a better July.

"It can't help but get better after all of this."

His rain gauge registered six inches of rainfall since midweek.

Still, Matthews figured that the grassland will be needing "a little bit more rain" by September to ensure "good winter and good spring" grasses.

Midland farmer-stockman Hoot Leonard said the widespread rain is giving cotton farmers "some hope."

Because of the mostly dry spring and the late planting rains, much of the cotton crops were put in late — in early June.

For this climate, the ideal planting time is around May 10.

"We got a pretty late start in the spring," Leonard said.

The hefty July rainfall will give the crops a good growth spurt.

"These good rains are going to give us a good chance to make cotton," Leonard said.

"Most of us have a pretty good stand of cotton. It's got a good root system."

With the late planting date, farmers are banking on a long growing season, which is needed for the cotton to bloom, put on bolls, and put out lint before the growing season ends with the fall's first killing-frost date, usually in early November.

"Everybody's perked up pretty good" since the rains came, Leonard said. "They are looking forward to pretty decent cotton crop now."

As the soil soaks up more of the moisture, farmers will be hooking their tractors up to cultivators to knock out the weeds, which compete with the cotton for soil moisture.

The rain was ideal for "these old pastures," said Leonard, who is manages the Texas Ten Ranch. "These old cattle are going to get fat."

Spy not American, paper reports

LONDON (AP) — Robert Glenn Thompson, a former U.S. Air Force intelligence operative jailed in 1965 for spying, was not an American but an East German agent named Gregor Alexander Best, a British newspaper reported.

The weekly Mail on Sunday said it interviewed the man in an unspecified place in the former East Germany.

Thompson pleaded guilty to conspiracy and served 13 years in a maximum security prison in Lewisburg, Penn., before being swapped Oct. 7, 1978, for an Israeli pilot who had been captured in Mozambique, southeast Africa.

Author Nigel West, who wrote the report, predicted the facts about his identity would surprise the FBI and Thompson's children in the United States, Karen and Dean.

He said the FBI remains convinced that Thompson is an American from Detroit and his children will learn that their father has another family in Germany: his wife Sylvia is a nurse in Berlin and he has two children there.

West said Thompson served in the Red Army as a tank commander, was trained to spy by the KGB Soviet secret police and sent to Canada in 1949 on false United Nations international refugee papers identifying him as Samuel Katzman.

He spied in Canada and the United States before enlisting in the air force and getting a posting to Berlin, where for eight years he leaked military intelligence to East German security.

On returning to the United States, he headed a ring of fellow "illegals," none of whom has been caught, the report said.

One of his air force assignments was to identify vulnerable airfields across the United States and he passed that information to East Germany. His arrest in 1965 came after he left the air force and was running his own trucking company.

The report quoted Thompson/Best as saying that when he was exchanged he was quickly disillusioned with East Germany, but he is "entirely unrepentant and still describes himself as a committed socialist."

"The repression was wrong, but at least everyone had a roof and job. There was no crime. This year our village post office has been robbed twice," he was quoted as saying.

Nigel West is the pseudonym of Rupert Allason, a British Conservative Party legislator, who writes books on intelligence.

Couple, two sons slain

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A California man whose parents and two younger brothers were found murdered Friday was located Saturday and was being questioned by authorities, police said.

Authorities were not saying whether Emory Futo Jr., 26, of Riverside, Calif., was a suspect in the killings.

Neighbors said Futo had been expected to visit his family's home in St. Louis late last week.

The bodies of Emory Futo, 53, and Euna Futo, 50, were found late Friday in their ransacked home, where police recovered at least two knives. Their son Joseph, 23, was found in a car parked two blocks away, and son Nick, 24, on a nearby cemetery road, police said.

SADDAM: Bush blamed for Iraqi leader retaining power of nearly 530,000 U.S. forces, billions of dollars of materials or manpower from 34 coalition allies, thousands of precision bombing attacks, tens of thousands of dead Iraqis and 119 American soldiers killed in action, Saddam is still in power. And, experts say, he's getting stronger every day.

"We're going to be dealing with Saddam for a long time to come," predicts Judith Kipper, a Middle East expert with the Brookings Institution in Washington.

"The war is over, but he still has the capacity to cause problems and instability," says Barry Rubin, an expert with the Johns Hopkins University Foreign Policy Institute.

"I don't think Saddam is going to self-destruct," adds Joyce Starr, another Middle East expert who heads the Global Policy Group, a Washington research organization. "It's a reality that we may be faced to contend with not only for months, but perhaps years ahead of us."

A senior European diplomat stationed in the Persian Gulf recently observed that warring Arab countries have a history of quickly mending fences. He implied it could happen with Saddam.

"They will come together again," he said. "They kiss and make up, as you say. They will do that, and it will happen not in generations, but in years."

Bush administration officials say privately they think conditions inside Iraq will eventually lead to Saddam being toppled by his own people. Indeed, Bush continues to publicly urge them to do just that, arguing that their suffering cannot be eased until their leader is gone.

No one disputes that Saddam and his war machine have been severely crippled by the war. Conditions inside Iraq are horrid, and recovery is moving at a snail's pace because of the continuing United Nations sanctions.

Iraq has been left with a staggering foreign debt estimated at $80 billion and no way to pay because the sanctions forbid the export sale of oil. It also faces a massive reconstruction bill resulting from 43 days of allied air attacks.

Food is in short supply and United Nations officials say the price of many basic foods has risen by more than 2,500 percent on the free market since the sanctions went into effect a year ago. Smuggled food from neighboring Turkey and Jordan is available, but the price is dear. A kilogram of sugar (2.2 pounds) costs the equivalent of a day's pay, United Nations officials say.

Iraq last week asked the U.N. Security Council to partially lift the sanctions so it could sell $1.5 billion in oil to buy emergency food and medicine. Foreign Minister Ahmad Hussein told the Council's Sanctions Committee that his country needs $2.6 billion for food and more than $500 million for medicine. Beyond that, he said, billions of dollars are needed immediately to provide drinking water, electricity and transportation.

"Iraq is the new Albania, shut off from the world," said a U.N. official assigned to the Sanctions Committee, who spoke on condition he not be named. "There's no (international) telephone service, no telex, no air connections. It's all alone."

So with these immense problems, why don't Iraqis topple Saddam? State Department officials, U.N. observers and diplomats agree that a combination of fear and war weariness keeps him in power.

"They are thoroughly worn down, completely exhausted," says a State Department official who monitors the situation inside Iraq. "The shortages and just the physical war damage ... wears them down."

Saddam is also moving quickly to purge dissidents and rid himself of those he thinks are disloyal — including, apparently, the 14 generals reportedly who were executed.

He is also consolidating his power base. Members of his family from the village of Tikrit are now firmly in control of the key components of the government power. His half-brother, Sibawi al-Tikrit, is in charge of the internal security division. His son-in-law Hussein Kamel Tikrit heads the Defense Ministry. Saddam's son, Qusay, has been put in charge of a special security police said to track down political opponents. Finally, cousin Ali Hassan Majid, who gained notoriety for being in charge of the gassing of dissident Kurds in 1988, is at the helm of the Interior Ministry.

Although Saddam's military was badly damaged, a State Department analyst says most of his top military leaders remain loyal and are gradually regrouping their forces and equipment. Rubin says he has learned that Iraq is continuing development on advanced weapons, including cruise missiles.

Even with a crippled military, Rubin says, Saddam remains a threat.

"Not all problems are caused by overt military means," he said. "There's covert subversion, sponsoring or subversion, terrorism and this sort of thing."

Few experts second-guess Bush on going to war to liberate Kuwait and keep Iraq from eventually swallowing Saudi Arabia and its smaller oil-rich neighbors in the Persian Gulf.

But critics blame the president for not going far enough.

"Basically, what needed to be done was to continue the war for only three, four, five more days to ... make it difficult for the army to survive," said Rubin.

"It was a failure of nerve," he continued. "It was wishful thinking that there would be a coup. Why would he (Bush) think that the sanctions would work to bring down the regime when the sanctions couldn't even get him (Saddam) to leave Kuwait?"

Kipper agrees that Bush should have gone further at the war's end. Instead of pressing ahead to completely destroy Saddam military machine, she said, Bush halted the fighting and "allowed Saddam to redeploy, mobilize and use his army" to put down the uprising by Shiite Moslems in southern Iraq — a move many experts believe was designed to prevent predominantly Shiite Iran from expanding into Iraq.

At the time, some administration officials said privately that Bush wanted to leave Saddam with enough military might to counter any aggression from Iraq's archenemy, Iran. The two fought a bloody eight-year war doing the 1980s that is estimated to have cost more than a million lives.

"That concept is such utter nonsense," said Rubin. "The argument was that the U.S. can't damage Iraq too much because then Iran or Syria would be the dominant power in the Gulf.

"Now, who's the dominant power in the Gulf?" he asked. "The United States. Do you think that Iran, which hasn't bought a new weapons system since 1977, is going to go to war again?"

Kipper agrees.

"As far as I can tell," she said, "we don't have a gulf policy."

U.N.: Team arrives to inspect Iraqi sites

report Friday saying investigators on a mission July 7-18 discovered a plant in Tarmiya that could have produced up to 33 pounds a year of enriched uranium, which is used to make nuclear weapons.

Kay said that was possible — if all the equipment had been installed and functioning at the Tarmiya site.

The report identifies Tarmiya, just north of Baghdad, as the main production site for the enrichment of uranium by centrifuge.

However, the report also said that "it seems likely that the full extent of the centrifuge work has not been disclosed; the possibility also exists that there are still undeclared locations with sensitive equipment and material."

The centrifuge process separates isotopes by subjecting processed natural uranium in a gas form to high rotation in steel cylinders. Another process, electromagnetic separation, is a dated technology that was used to produce the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima at the close of World War II.

The U.N. resolution that laid out terms for a cease-fire in the Gulf War specified that the United Nations would investigate Iraq's program to produce nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. Under the peace terms, all those weapons must be destroyed.

Thursday was the deadline set by the U.N. Security Council for the government of President Saddam Hussein to disclose all details of its nuclear program.

The United States and its Gulf War allies had indicated they were prepared for a military strike if the deadline was not met, but American officials said an attack was not imminent.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said Friday that Iraq still had not been completely forthcoming about its nuclear capabilities.

"Once again, Saddam Hussein has demonstrated his contempt for the international community," he said.

Families struggle to understand how their loved ones fell prey

MILWAUKEE (AP) — One by one, 11 victims were lured to Jeffrey Dahmer's apartment from encounters at gay bars, city streets, shopping malls and bus stops.

They included a runaway, some free spirits, mostly single young men looking for a good time. They were promised money if they posed for pictures and watched sex videos with a sandy-haired, brown-eyed companion who offered them drinks.

Whoever they thought he was, Dahmer turned out to be a butcher who told police they met a singular fate: He spiked their drinks with sleeping potions, strangled them and cut up their bodies, keeping their heads and other body parts in his apartment.

Grieving families are struggling to understand how their loved ones could have been willingly taken in. One clue comes from the man who escaped Dahmer's clutches Monday night and alerted police.

"He seemed so normal," said Tracy Edwards, 32, a father of six who met Dahmer at a city mall and was led there by an invitation to a party. "He turned from Mr. Right to Mr. It ... It was like I was confronting Satan himself."

Edwards fled with a handcuff dangling from one wrist. He had spotted a large knife under Dahmer's bed and smelled the stench of death of 11 others who had been there before him.

Dahmer, 31, a former employee of the Ambrosia Chocolate Co., admitted killing 11 people in his apartment, and police say he has killed six others. Dahmer is a convicted child molester with a history of alcohol abuse. The boy he molested in 1989 was the brother of one of his victims.

Those killed in the apartment ranged in age from 14 to 33. Police said nine were black, one was Laotian and one was white. Police on Saturday identified the 11th victim, Anthony Sears, 26, of Milwaukee.

'My son was hypnotized by a cobra. Unfortunately, he bit.'

— David Weinberger, father of victim

One of them, Jeremiah Weinberger, 23, was last seen July 6 leaving Carol's Speakeasy, a gay bar in Chicago, with an unidentified man. Dahmer told police he and Weinberger took a Greyhound bus for the 90-mile trip to Milwaukee.

Weinberger stayed two days and the two had sex. But Dahmer objected when he wanted to leave, so he was drugged before he was killed and mutilated. Dahmer paused from his gory chores to take pictures.

"My son was hypnotized by a cobra. Unfortunately, he bit," Weinberger's father, David, told a reporter this week.

Two Chicago gay publications ran notices of Weinberger's disappearance, and his friends distributed fliers, urging anyone with information to call a toll-free number. No one did.

Another victim, Oliver Lacy, 23, disappeared July 12 when he went to a Milwaukee mall for ice cream. Lacy had moved here from Chicago four months ago to be near his 2-year-old son and his fiance.

"I don't know how this person lured my son," said the victim's mother, Catherine. "He wasn't the type of person who would let someone come up to him like that."

Lacy's death was particularly chilling. Dahmer said he had anal sex with Lacy after he was killed. Dahmer also told police he cut up the body and saved the heart "to eat later."

The most troubling case involved Konerak Sinthasomphone, 14, the son of Laotian immigrants who was going to play soccer with friends when he vanished May 26.

Several residents alleged that police missed a chance to stop Dahmer when the boy was seen May 27 staggering around the streets naked and bleeding from the buttocks.

But the boy was allowed to return to Dahmer who apparently convinced police that it was a squabble between two homosexual lovers.

Police Chief Philip Arreola suspended three officers Friday after confirming they had contact with Dahmer and the victim. He said they failed to write a report or check Dahmer's background, which included his conviction of molesting Sinthasomphone's older brother. The police union called the suspensions premature.

"The whole thing is crazy. I don't know what to say," said Anoukone Sinthasomphone, 25, the brother of the dead boy.

Joseph Bradehoft, 25, had recently moved into a Milwaukee apartment rented under his brother's name, Donald, and was looking for work. Bradehoft recently lived in Illinois and Minnesota, where he had a wife and three children.

Dahmer told police he met Bradehoft, carrying a six-pack of beer, at a bus stop. He said he offered him money to pose and Bradehoft came to his apartment for sex. Then the grisly pattern was repeated.

Taking on George Bush: A profile of his accuser

By John P. Wallach
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Before April 15, 1991, Gary Sick was a largely unknown former White House aide whose only connection to George Bush was that he worked for a few months in "a cubbyhole" a few floors below Bush's vice presidential suite of offices.

But now, Sick, an adjunct professor at New York's Columbia University New York, is no longer unknown.

As a result of Sick's investigation, House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., this week will announce Democratic leaders' plans to pursue a formal probe of whether the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign struck a deal with Iran to delay release of 52 American hostages, Democratic sources say.

On April 15, 1991, The New York Times published an op-ed article by Sick that said his two-year inquiry found evidence to support the allegations. After that, Sick, who was the National Security Council staffer responsible for monitoring Iran policy during the Carter administration, says his life changed dramatically.

"I was averaging between 40 and 60 telephone calls a day from reporters all over the world. Everything stopped. I couldn't do anything – to sleep I had to turn the phones off," said Sick, who worked in the same building with Bush during the first four months of the Reagan administration but never met him.

In the article, Sick said he had been told by five admittedly "peculiar" sources that people associated with the Reagan-Bush campaign conspired with Iranian officials to delay the hostages' release until after the 1980 presidential election in order to help Ronald Reagan beat Jimmy Carter, who was seeking re-election.

The hostages, who were taken captive by Moslem militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Teheran in 1979, were freed a few minutes after Reagan was sworn in as president on Jan 21, 1981.

According to the theory investigated by Sick, Israel was part and parcel of the covert deal, secretly agreeing to supply Iran with weapons the Islamic Republic badly needed to repel Iraqi forces that had crossed into Iran less than a year earlier.

The people who allegedly met with the Iranians and Israelis were no ordinary Republican campaign staffers, according to Sick.

Sick said he was told that vice presidential candidate George Bush travelled incognito to Paris for an October 19, 1980 meeting that sealed the reported deal, and that William Casey, the chairman of the Reagan campaign and later the head of the CIA, travelled to Madrid four times in July and August for similar secret meetings.

Bush called the charges "a vicious personal assault on my integrity and my character as president." The president also said, "I can only say categorically that the allegations about me are grossly untrue, factually incorrect, baldfaced lies."

But the lanky, 56-year-old Sick responded: "If there was no deal, why didn't he say so? His was a non-denial denial. This story isn't going to die because it really did happen."

"I was the last guy in the world to believe this story, the fact that Bush had broken off from the campaign, would evade the Secret Service and spend a day or so in Paris," said Sick. But, he charged, Bush's story is "full of contradictions."

According to Sick, Bush returned to Washington from a Pennsylvania campaign appearance at 9:25 p.m. Oct. 18 and disappeared from public view for about 20 hours, until Sunday evening, Oct. 19, when he addressed the Young Zionists of America.

There have been several explanations offered for Bush's whereabouts: Vice President Dan Quayle recently told a Detroit radio station that Bush was at home all day working on his speech; others have said he was at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

A third, a source close to Bush, told the Wall St. Journal he was having lunch with the late Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart.

But Sick said, "Bush has backed and filled. He has just said flatly he was not in Paris. He has not said, I was in such and such a place. If he would just produce the Secret Service records that say here's where he was, bing, bing, bing, that's that. I would say that's it."

"All I can say at this point is that there are some people who I genuinely believe and who swear absolutely they saw George Bush in Paris," he said.

Those people include three of his sources, Sick says, who he admits "are peculiar, they are spread all over the place, a lot of them are liars in one form or another, some are ex-cons. It's not a respectable bunch of middle class WASPs."

Sick's sources include Richard Brenneke, a covert gunrunner and money launderer who was a contract pilot for the CIA; Jamshid Hashemi, an Iranian-born arms dealer; Ariel Ben Menashe, a former Israeli intelligence agent, and Oswald Lewinter, a German Jewish refugee from the Nazi Holocaust who became an U.S. citizen, obtained several graduate degrees, wrote a book about Shakespeare and is currently living in Germany where he publishes a magazine.

Lewinter claims to have been in U.S. military intelligence in 1980 and "says he was a member of the security detail for the Bush trip (to Paris). He says he was there," Sick said. Brenneke and Hashemi also said they saw Bush in Paris, Sick says, admitting his sources were "all disgruntled and unhappy."

But he says that their stories, particularly about Casey's alleged meetings in Madrid with Mehdi Karoubi, an Iranian cleric who was close to the late Iranian President Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, have checked out – which is why he isn't ready to give Bush the benefit of the doubt.

The alleged July and August sessions at Madrid's Ritz Hotel are believed to have laid the basis for the October meeting at Paris' Waldorf-Florida Hotel. Others, including Donald Gregg, Bush's former CIA deputy, are alleged to have taken part in the Paris meetings.

"Let's just take the Madrid meetings and walk through them in terms of a smoking gun," Sick said.

"First of all, Jamshid Hashemi says on ABC's Nightline that a meeting took place between Casey and Karoubi in Madrid in July. You look at the hotel records and you find out that Jamshid and his brother Cyrus were there," he says.

"OK, they were in Madrid. So what? That doesn't prove a thing. So then you say where was Casey during that period of time? You trace Casey's movements. First you discover Casey was out of the country on the very days that these guys were in Madrid. That's interesting."

"OK, so he was in London attending a conference on World War II. But he was gone for 3-1/2 days and London accounted for about 18 hours. London is about 90 minutes (by plane) from Madrid. Then I find absolute proof," Sick added.

"I have a waiter who absolutely remembers seeing Bill Casey in the hotel, the same hotel with Karoubi on the same day. It's a nice hotel. Why shouldn't he be staying at the Ritz? Then I have a photo of Casey shaking hands with Karoubi. OK they're staying at the same hotel."

"Why shouldn't they bump into each other and have a picture taken? I'm just saying what's a smoking gun? There is no smoking gun unless you come up with a tape recording of the transcript of the meeting, which probably exists somewhere."

"The point is you aren't going to have the principals, George Bush, Casey and the other high-level officials, who could be accused of treason, they are not going to step forward and say I'm going to tell you the truth," Sick contended.

With House hearings into the affair now virtually certain, Sick still isn't comfortable with his role.

What has been driving him is "this peculiar feeling – I lived through these events, I was there in the White House, I participated in them and now what I am seeing is that there was a whole different layer of things going on that I didn't know anything about."

His motivation is simple, he said.

"If people do things like this, playing around with politics and people's emotions, in historical terms they should be held to account. You should not be able to walk away, win and never have to pay for it in any way. Why?"

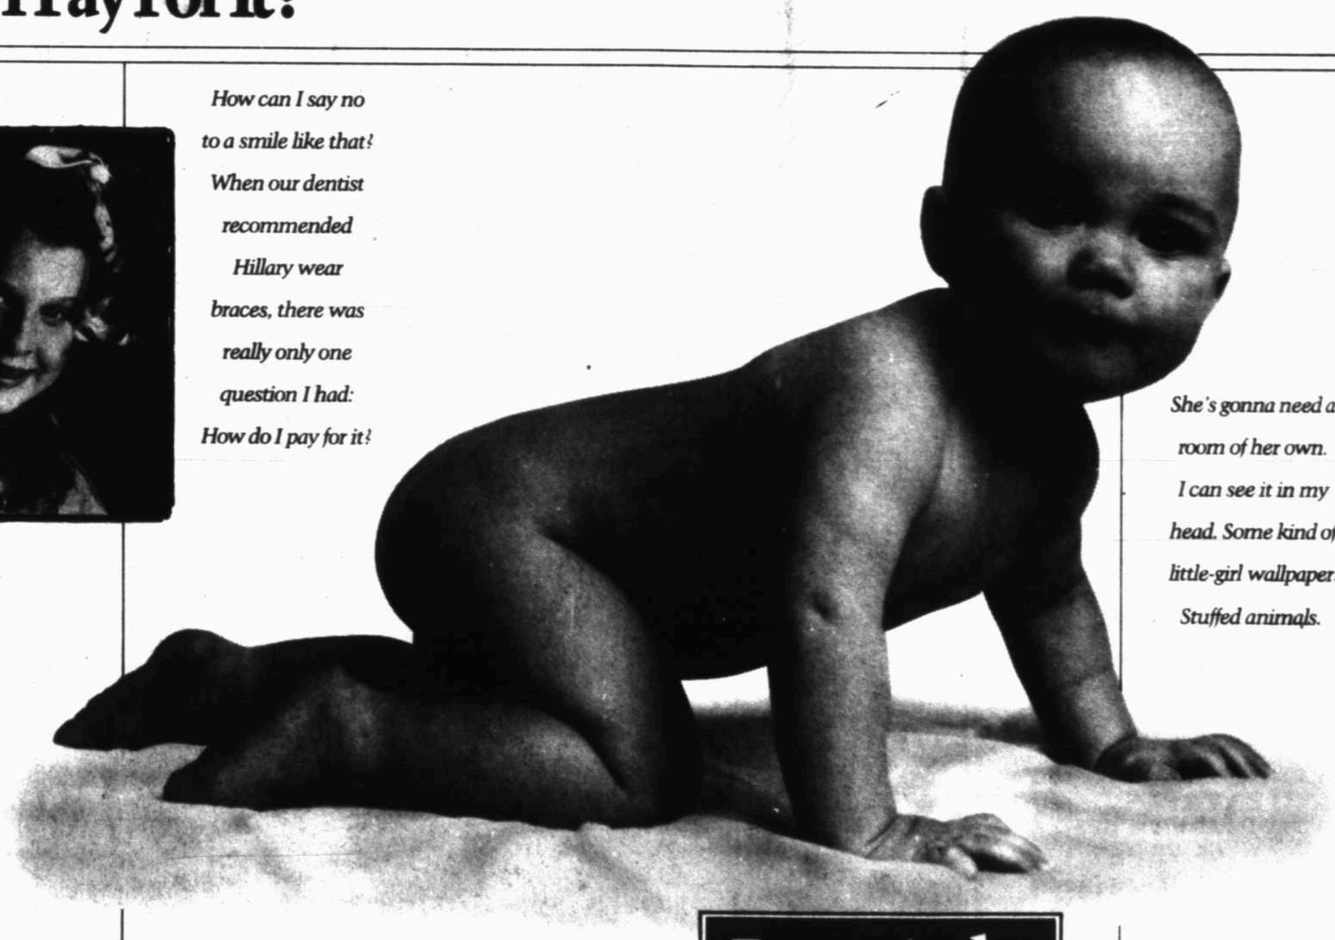
So How Do I Pay For It?

How can I say no to a smile like that? When our dentist recommended Hillary wear braces, there was really only one question I had: How do I pay for it?



She's gonna need a room of her own. I can see it in my head. Some kind of little-girl wallpaper. Stuffed animals.

I think we can add on over the garage. Maybe we'll need another bath there, too. The neighbors recommended a good contractor. Only thing is, how do I pay for it?

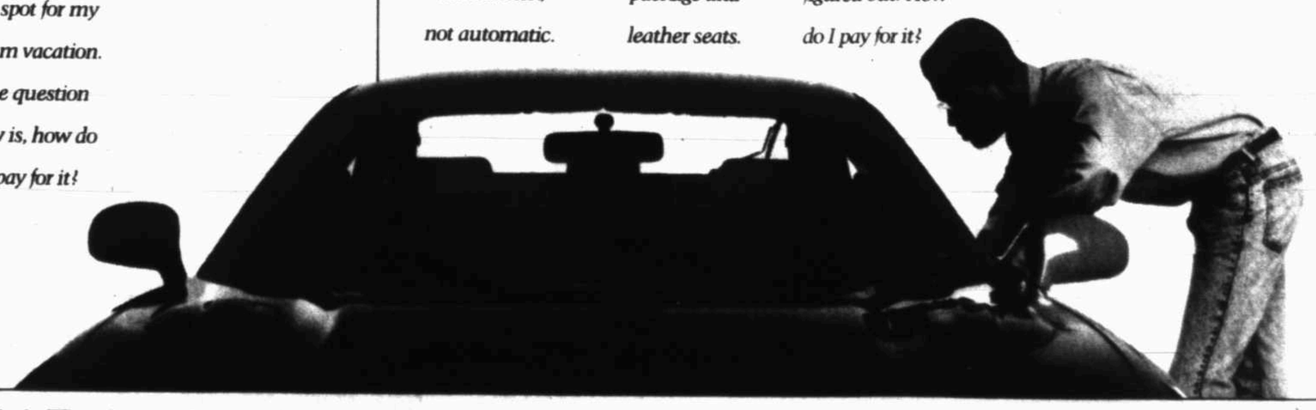
I started with a travel agent. Looked at all the brochures. I asked questions. And finally picked out the spot for my dream vacation. The question now is, how do I pay for it?

Just Ask.

Definitely red instead of blue. I think stick, not automatic.

Probably go with the optional stereo package and leather seats.

There's only one thing I haven't figured out. How do I pay for it?



We started with a list of almost 50 schools. Narrowed it down to a dozen or so. Then my son was accepted by a couple of his top picks. Now I just have one question. How do I pay for it?

Sullivan, Justice lock horns over AIDS-immigration

By Dan Freedman and Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Walking a political tightrope, Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan appears ready to reverse current Bush administration policy and permit immigration by persons infected with the virus that causes AIDS, according to HHS officials.

But he is confronting militant opposition from the Justice Department, which enforces the nation's immigration laws through its Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).

Health and Justice officials have locked horns since January on the issue. So far, efforts at compromise have produced nothing but a stalemate.

Justice and INS officials say they strongly reject any attempt to change temporary regulations now in effect that bar immigration by those with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS.

At this point, whether Sullivan can prevail is in doubt.

"The interim measure will be lifted," said one official, who like others at Justice and HHS requested anonymity. "On this one, Sullivan can be both medically correct and politically correct. (But his position) probably won't hold up to challenge" from Justice and the Office of Management and Budget, which must approve any changes in federal rules.

On July 19, the Justice Department, which has long opposed lifting the HIV ban, rejected an HHS proposal to admit foreign nationals with any disease, including HIV, if they demonstrate they can pay for treatment, sources said.

HHS officials presented Deputy Attorney General William P. Barr, the department's No. 2 official, with a list of ailments including HIV, lung cancer and kidney disease, each with potential treatment pricetags attached. The list was aimed at convincing Justice that it is possible to exclude immigrants with HIV who could not pay their own medical bills without laying down a blanket ban — one that might be perceived as discriminatory.

But Justice officials countered that linking ailments to immigrants' financial conditions would force the INS to examine and possibly deport a host of applicants already in this country simply because they lack funds for expensive medical treatment.

"We're talking about thousands of cases," said an administration source involved in the discussion. "People wouldn't stand still for that."

The Justice rejection was a slap at Sullivan, who wants to lift the ban because he maintains that HIV is not a "communicable disease of public health significance," as required by Congress in the 1990 immigration law.

One HHS source, who called the ban "AIDS bashing," said the Justice rejection of Sullivan's proposal is a measure of his political vulnerability. "The Justice Department is only reflecting other conservatives," the source said. "Sullivan could just stand up and say, 'It's off the list,' but he realizes he could be fired."

The administration source familiar with the dispute denied the "AIDS bashing" charge. "This isn't something coming out of the White House, or (from) a bunch of conservatives that have been pushing the Justice Department," he said. "The INS has been against this from day one."

Also, the White House is siding with Justice, according to Rep. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., a friend of Sullivan who has been active on AIDS legislation and who is one of two doctors in the House of Representatives. Sullivan, he said, "has to acquiesce in what the administration wants, although he personally may not agree with it."

The administration's current opposition to immigration of foreign nationals who might spread acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) has evoked a firestorm of protest from many scientists and from gays, who along with intravenous drug users are most at risk of catching the fatal disease.

Last month, at the 7th International AIDS Conference in Florence, Italy, scientists threatened to cancel next year's meeting in Boston if the Bush administration fails to lift the ban.

Alan Fein, executive director of the Harvard University AIDS Institute, which is scheduled to host the conference, said last week that unless the administration changes its position, "the conference won't be held in the United States."

Several officials have said they do not expect a flood of immigrants with HIV if the current ban is lifted.

A confidential memorandum in May from HHS to the White House, cited in published reports, estimated that 600 to 800 infected persons would be admitted under liberalized rules at a time when legal immigration will total 700,000.

Since the turn of the century, U.S. immigration law has denied admission to foreign nationals with "dangerous contagious diseases." In 1987, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an outspoken conservative, had HIV added to the list of such diseases maintained by the INS.

But in the immigration law passed last year, Congress changed the exclusion rule to include only communicable diseases "of public health significance" — a change that gave HHS the power to remove HIV from the ban list.

On Jan. 23, Sullivan published new rules saying that persons with HIV no longer would be denied immigrant status.

But Sullivan backed off that position a week before the regulations were to take effect on June 1. The Centers for Disease Control, part of HHS, had received about 40,000 negative letters on the regulations, many the result of write-in campaigns by religious and conservative groups.

Sullivan's move, said a health official, was intended to buy time to consider the main objection of those letters: that those entering the country with HIV might become an economic burden.

Ultimately, the White House will decide whether to accept the Sullivan regulations.

Details emerge about BCCI role in missile exports

LONDON (AP) — New details were reported Saturday about the role of the scandal-plagued Bank of Credit and Commerce International in sales of U.S. anti-tank missiles to Iran during Tehran's war with Iraq.

The Financial Times, Britain's leading financial daily, said London branches of the bank were used to finance arms sales to Iran in 1985, which it says were apparently arranged by an Indian-born British arms merchant, Ben Banerjee.

But the newspaper said that because the arms were not directly exported from Britain, the deal was not illegal in the United Kingdom. It did not cite its sources regarding the involvement of Banerjee, who died in May 1990.

Luxembourg-based BCCI is at the center of a worldwide scandal involving allegations of fraud and money laundering. Regulators in eight countries — including the United States and Britain — began seizing its assets and operations this month.

Law enforcement and congressional officials in the United States have already said the CIA used BCCI to transfer money to U.S.-backed guerrillas in Nicaragua and Afghanistan. Former White House aide Oliver North used the bank to set up acounts for covert operations, they said.

Former Senate Iran-Contra counsel Arthur Liman has said Saudi millionaire arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi used BCCI to deposit money into North's "Enterprise" — the name of his covert slush fund. Enterprise money was then funneled to the Contras to circumvent a congressional ban on aiding the guerrillas.

The Financial Times said the 1985 missile deal involved $18.9 million and "at least two payments through separate branches" of BCCI in London. It said the shipments were labeled as 1,250 forklifts.

BCCI was used for up to $10 million of bank transfers that paid for the secret sale of U.S. TOW anti-tank missiles and other weapons to Iran in the Iran-Contra affair, the newspaper quoted Liman as saying.

The Financial Times said Banerjee and his now-defunct company, B R and W Industries, arranged the shipment to Iran's Revolutionary Guards, the order for which was made through front companies in Liechtenstein and Panama.

The report said the missiles — $7,500 each for a total cost of nearly $9.4 million — were shipped to Iran through a front company in Dubai, the Arabian Gate Trading Company. It said rocket-propelled grenades, anti-aircraft missiles and automatic rifles were also shipped via the Dubai company.

In other reports related to the scandal:

— The Sunday Times said the Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal earned about $100 million in profits in the past decade on arms deals arranged through the bank.

Kuwait clears 'psychological barrier' with oil shipment

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Kuwait prepared Saturday to ship its first crude oil since the Persian Gulf War, passing what its oil minister described as a "psychological barrier" in rebuilding its damaged oil industry.

"To be honest with you, I am really so happy to see this day," the official, Hamoud al-Rquba, told reporters aboard the Norweigan-owned tanker Thorness. "It was a challenge for everybody."

Officials of the Kuwait Petroleum Corp. said the Thorness would be filled by midday Sunday and would sail for the nearby emirate of Dubai, then on to Europe or America. The shipment will total 261,000 tons of crude, or almost 2 million barrels, worth about $40 million, the oil minister said.

The Oil Ministry threw a party to mark the first shipment, serving coffee, tea and pastries on the dock beside the Thorness. It was moored at the north pier of Kuwait City's Ahmadi Port, where burned and collapsed oil storage tanks stand as reminders of the war.

"We used to be a big producer country," al-Rquba said. "For the last few months, we have been a consuming country. We are breaking the psychological barrier to be a producer again."

He said shipments would begin leaving every week to 10 days, but gave no details on the size and made no prediction about when Kuwait would reach its prewar level of oil exports.

Despite continuing oil well fires, Kuwait is now producing about 115,000 barrels of oil per day, al-Rquba said. It is also getting income for half of the flow from the so-called "neutral zone" shared with Saudi Arabia, whose production now is up to 200,000 barrels a day, he added.

Kuwait is not yet able to refine its own products because of damage to its plants. But al-Rquba said that the refineries would be repaired by September or October.

The government's pace in rebuilding the country has been criticized by some, bu al-Rquba said the extent of the destruction had to be taken into account.

"When we came (after the war), there was not even a screwdriver," he said.

Kuwaiti officials have said the country needs about 120,000 barrels a day of refined products for its own use, including the operation of power and desalination plants. It currently is importing them.

Before the war, Kuwait had a production quota of 1.5 million barrels a day from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and was actually producing about 2 million barrels a day.

After Iraq invaded Kuwait last Aug. 2, its troops set fire to more than 750 oil wells and damaged refineries, gathering stations and pipelines.

The emirate was retaken on Feb. 26 by allied forces and has been struggling since to put out the well fires and increase its oil output.

Al-Rquba said most of the burning wells would be brought under control by March, and then better predictions could be made about output. Firefighters say that 248 of the wells have been extinguished so far by 10 teams from four North American companies.

Three more North American companies have signed contracts to send crews to speed up the work, and al-Rquba said agreements also have been reached with Iran and China for firefighting teams. He said enough of the well fires should be extinguished by the end of next month to allow for a resumption of drilling.

The oil minister estimated the cost of the Iraqi war damage to the oil industry at $75 billion, including the loss of 6 million to 7 million barrels of oil per day from spillage and the burning fields.

ANC-linked labor movement threatens strikes, tax protest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's largest labor movement on Saturday threatened the government with strikes and a tax boycott to protest secret government payments to a rival group affiliated with the Inkatha Freedom Party.

In a declaration at its national conference, the 1.25-million-member Congress of South African Trade Unions joined a growing list of anti-apartheid groups calling for the government's resignation amid the growing scandal over the secret payments.

A focus of criticism in the scandal, Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok, said later Saturday that he did not feel he should have to resign.

"I think that I am not really responsible for the problems we are experiencing. I've told the president ... and he has accepted my viewpoint," Vlok said in a television interview.

Vlok, who commands the police, has come under fire because security police requested the money for Inkatha. The African National Congress — Inkatha's bitter rival — says this bolsters ANC allegations of police bias toward Inkatha.

Police said Saturday that three people had died, 10 were wounded and five arrested in political unrest throughout the country during the previous 24 hours.

Tex Schramm, left, is introduced by former NFL commissioner Pete Rozzelle.

■ Tyler's own Earl Campbell and the man behind the glory years of America's Team receive football's grandest honor.

Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — John Hannah, who made just about every All-Pro team, moved into a different league Saturday.

"What today means is that I've made the cut, I'm on the team," Hannah said upon his induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. "Now I have the honor of playing alongside the greatest heroes to ever play the game."

'I'm in with the big boys'
— Earl Campbell

Hannah was joined by running back Earl Campbell, place-kicker Jan Stenerud, lineman Stan Jones and former Dallas Cowboys general manager and president Tex Schramm.

The five were inducted on the front steps of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. After the ceremonies, the Detroit Lions defeated the Denver Broncos 14-3 in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game.

Schramm was honored for his years of service to the Dallas Cowboys and to pro football. Taking over as general manager of the fledgling Cowboys in 1960, he created one of the dominant franchises of the next three decades.

Trevino, Nicklaus paired

■ With a single stroke separating them atop of the U.S. Senior Open leader board, golf's Merry Mex and Golden Bear are the featured pair as play enters the final round at Oakland Hills.

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. — It's a dream pairing for Lee Trevino, but one that's been more like a nightmare for Jack Nicklaus.

Trevino and Nicklaus are the last twosome off the tee at Oakland Hills Sunday with the U.S. Senior Open title at stake.

"Great. Absolutely great," Trevino said after he had taken the lead Saturday with a 2-under 68 and a 54-hole total of par 210.

■ Today's TV: KMID-Cable Channel 3, 2:30 p.m.
■ Results/3B

Nicklaus scrambled his way into that pairing with a 70 that left him at 211, one over and one behind.

Chi Chi Rodriguez and J.C. Snead are also at 211. Rodriguez matched par 70 in the third round, while Snead relinquished the lead with a 71.

It was another two shots back to Mike Hill, Don Bies and Al Geinerger, tied at 213. Hill shot 71, Bies and Geiberger 72.

They were followed by the threesome of South African Gary Player, Charles Coody and lefty Bob Charles of New Zealand. Coody moved up with a 69, while Charles and Player each shot 73.

Walter Zembriski made the biggest move with a 66 that was, by two shots, the best of the tournament. It was only one off the course record set by George Archer in the 1964 Carling World tournament.

At 216, six shots back and with seven players ahead of him, however,

Wet teams give it one more shot

Staff Report

This week's record rainfall once again interfered with scheduled sporting events Saturday, as the Midland Mid-City vs. San Angelo Southern Little League sectional baseball playoff was postponed.

Mid City leads the best-of-three series by one game after taking the opener 1-0 Friday in San Angelo. Game 2 was scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday in Midland, but now is slated for a 4 p.m. start today at the Mid-City complex in Windlands Park. Game 3, if necessary, will be played Monday in San Angelo.

The inclement weather also bogged down the 16-and-under girls ASA Texas Regional Softball Tournament at the Bill Williams Softball Complex. Only three of Saturday's 44 scheduled games were played.

The Division I tournament will remain at the Bill Williams complex beginning at 8 a.m. today and hopefully concluding with a 9 p.m. championship game.

Division II teams will move to the United Girls Softball complex at Ulmer Park, and also will begin at 8 a.m. today.

In Saturday's completed Division I games, the San Antonio Illusions beat the Dallas Classics 6-1, the Duncanville Panthers defeated Fort Worth's Texas Elite 4-2, and the Katy Express downed Midland's Blue Diamond 7-2.

In Friday's late D-I games, the Lady Royals of San Antonio upended Alvin's Bayou Babes 8-3, the Lake Jackson Magic beat the Houston Wolfpack 9-5, the San Antonio Illusions defeated Garland's Gold 7-0, and the Express of Nacogdoches downed the Irving's Texas Diamonds 7-4.

In late Division II games from Friday, the Spring Klein Heat won over Corsicana's Raiders 4-1, the Cardinals of Corpus Christi beat the Fort Worth Scorpions 11-1, the Galveston Dominators edged the Spring Branch Panthers 8-7, and Sure Thing from Colleyville bumped Irving's Tenacity 6-4.

No D-II games were played Saturday.

Old Yanks still hope for winner in Bronx

■ Summers have been lean of late in Yankee Stadium, but this year old timers like Mickey and Reggie and Whitey are smiling a little more.

By George Vecsey
N.Y. Times News Service

They wear the striped uniform once every summer, but they never quite take it off, either.

Most of the New York Yankees who came back for Old-Timers' Day Saturday said they always felt just a little bit better when the new Yankees win a game, which is happening a bit more regularly this season.

They may have played for other teams in their careers, but they knew the Yankees were special, and for that matter should always be special.

"American sport is better off when they are playing better," said a former Yankee named Reginald Martinez Jackson, who said the currently banished owner deserves at least slight credit for the modest improvement.

It is more than arrogance, the belief that the Yankees should always be on the sunny side of the .500 street.

The Yankees are the only team that can bring back Joe DiMaggio, a dignified old man in a dark blue suit, into the renovated cathedral of the South Bronx, and have it feel just right.

Fifty years after he hit in 56 straight games, DiMaggio waved to the crowd and graciously said a few words about five surviving 1941 teammates.

Phil Rizzuto: "You're my Hall of Famer."

Tommy Henrich: "Old Reliable" lent DiMaggio a bat for the 42nd straight game.

Marius Russo: "He beat the Dodgers, 2-1, in the 1941 World Series, and he went nine innings, which I emphasize because nowadays that is considered a great feat."

Johnny Sturm: "The day I hit in my 56th straight game, he was the first man up to home plate to shake my hand. Thanks, Johnny."

And Frenchy Bordagaray: "He came over from the National League and we were happy to have him even for one game, and he lasted only 19 days. Take a bow, Frenchy."

The underlying theme was that the Yankees almost always

HALL: Only two guards inducted before this year

(From 1B)

"I wasn't one of the great athletes, like the men here behind me," he said. "To recognize the depth of this honor to me, I was in the league for 44 years and there are a lot of people in the hall who are people I saw and met. I never dreamed that someone from the administrative side would ever be here. It's staggering. There is no greater honor."

The Cowboys, under the direction of Schramm, put together 20 consecutive winning seasons and made the playoffs 18 times in that span. Five times, they made it to the Super Bowl, winning twice.

Schramm was also behind many innovations, including instant replay, the wild-card playoff system, the six-division setup and the Cowboys' cheerleading squad. He was also a central character in the merger of the AFL and NFL.

Former NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle presented Schramm at the induction ceremonies. Schramm gave Rozelle his first job in the NFL.

"He created 'America's Team,' " Rozelle said. "Tex didn't name them that, but he clung to it anyway."

Campbell, a Heisman Trophy winner at Texas in 1977, rushed for 9,407 yards and 74 touchdowns in eight seasons in the NFL with the Houston Oilers and New Orleans Saints. His first season as a pro, he was named rookie of the year, All-Pro, won the rushing title and was the NFL's Most Valuable Player.

"Next year, or two or three years from now, I'll come back here and I'll say, 'I'm in there. I'm in with the big boys. You talk about the Jim Browns, the O.J. Simpsons, the Walter Paytons and the Franco Harrises. Nobody can look down on nobody when you get to the Hall of Fame because there's not another football award left," he said.

Jones, selected by a seniors committee, spent 12 years with the Chicago Bears and one with the Washington Redskins. He spent most of his career as an offensive guard, but also played defense late in his career.

Only two offensive guards — Abe Gibron and Gene Upshaw — made it into the Hall prior to the inclusion of Hannah and Jones this year.

'At one point in time, Abe Gibron, myself and a number of guards decided to put our hall of fame in Buffalo, N.Y.," Jones said with a laugh during the induction ceremonies. "We were going to have a bowling tournament. Of course, being offensive linemen, we weren't going to use bowling balls — we'd just run down the lane and hit the pins with our heads. Rodney Dangerfield would be the master of ceremonies.

"But since three of us have gotten in, I think everybody has cooled down in the loyal brotherhood of offensive guards. I guess we'll have to work within the framework of the Hall of Fame now."

Hannah was an All-Pro guard for 10 straight years, 1976-1985 with the New England Patriots. The first Patriot in the hall, he was named the best offensive lineman in the NFL four times.

He was presented by his father, Herb, himself a former NFL player.

"I thank my dad for one of the greatest lessons that a man can be taught: To never be satisfied with what you've done. ... And to press on to what lies ahead."

Stenerud, a ski jumper at Montana State, went on to become the second highest scorer ever.

His 373 field goals are an all-time high. Seven times he scored 100 or more points in a season. He kicked three field goals to lead the Kansas City Chiefs to an upset of the Minnesota Vikings in the 1970 Super Bowl.

He likened his induction to his previous sport.

"When you go off the ramp, you fly through the air and you feel like you conquered the world. Today I have the feeling I'm not touching the ground," the native of Norway said.

"I never dreamed my greatest jump would be into the Pro Football Hall of Fame."

Lions hold Broncos to field goal

Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — Earl Campbell was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday. Jeff Campbell's time in the spotlight came later.

Campbell caught two second-quarter touchdown passes as the Detroit Lions beat the Denver Broncos 14-3 in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game Saturday.

Campbell pulled in a 38-yard scoring pass from Rodney Peete and a 41-yard touchdown pass from Andre Ware. He finished with three catches for 99 yards.

"Denver gave us a zone, then I got loose and the ball was just right there," Campbell said. "The second touchdown was a man-to-man and once again, all I did was run my route.

"I just did my job and with quarterbacks like Rodney and Andre, two of the hardest-working quarterbacks, I don't have to do much more."

Neither did the Lions, who held the Broncos to two first downs and 49 yards in the second half.

"I was mostly pleased that when we had the ball, we ran our downs, punted it and then got it right back," Lions coach Wayne Fontes said. "It's a sign of a controlled offense and then, in turn, a controlled defense."

"We never like to lose a game," Denver coach Dan Reeves said. "The only good thing is, four more weeks to practice. We played pretty decently, but we gave up too many big plays. ... It was a typical first game."

Peete completed 5 of 9 passes for 105 yards before straining a groin muscle on the touchdown pass to Campbell. He is listed as day-to-day.

Ware replaced Peete and completed 8 of 16 passes for 123 yards.

"One of the things that will help us is that when one quarterback goes out, we can put the other one in and the offense still runs smoothly," Fontes said.

Ware, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1989 at Houston, did not play well in his rookie season last year.

"I feel a lot more comfortable this year, last year was kind of my redshirt year. I feel things are coming more together and I'm more in control," he said.

John Elway completed 3 of 5 passes for 26 yards on the game's first possession, which ended with David Treadwell's 18-yard field goal, giving Denver a 3-0 lead.

49ers 24, Raiders 17

LOS ANGELES — Steve Young guided San Francisco to scoring drives in each of the three series he played, and the 49ers beat the Los Angeles Raiders and former teammates Ronnie Lott and Roger Craig in an NFL exhibition game.

Lott and Craig signed with the Raiders as free agents during the off-season after playing major roles in San Francisco's success during the 1980s.

Lott, 32, a safety who helped the 49ers win four Super Bowls, played in the first three series and part of another Saturday and was involved in one tackle.

Craig, 31, a running back for three championship teams, didn't play until the third quarter, but led all rushers in the game with 34 yards on six carries.

However, Craig lost a fumble which Greg Cox recovered at the Los Angeles 30-yard line late in the third period, leading to San Francisco's final touchdown, a 4-yard run by Adam Walker with 14:16 left in the game.

Craig lost a fumble late in the NFC championship game last winter, and the New York Giants then drove for the field goal which gave them a 15-14 victory.

Tom Rathman and Keith Henderson scored on 1-yard runs for San Francisco earlier in Saturday's game.

Blake a pleasant story out of Cowboys' camp

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Ricky Blake is this year's camp wonder for the Dallas Cowboys.

Last year it was Timmy Smith and he didn't make the cut.

Odds are Blake, a free agent out of the World League of American Football, might make the 1991 Cowboys as a combination halfback-fullback. He led the WLAF in rushing as a running back for the San Antonio Riders.

"Ricky Blake has an excellent shot at making this team," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "This guy is a stallion; a real plow horse."

"The first time I saw him run in training camp he kind of jumped out at you," Johnson said. "He could provide a great contrast to Emmitt Smith. He's tough, powerful and can run."

The 245-pound Blake was signed by Dallas personnel director Bob Ackles, who got him on the dotted line not long after the Winnipeg Jets of the Canadian Football League cut him.

"He could be one of those guys who just keeps getting better," Ackles said. "He's a very intriguing player."

Blake scored on a 4-yard run in a controlled scrimmage against the Houston Oilers and averaged over 4 yards per carry.

"He's a fullback type with halfback skills and has good speed and balance," said Cowboys running backs coach Joe Brodsky.

Blake, a native of Fayetteville, Tenn., played at Northwest Mississippi Junior College because he didn't have the grades to participate in major college football.

In 1989, he rushed for 354 yards on 81 carries for Winnipeg.

"I had been following him in Canada," Ackles said. "We knew what he had done for San Antonio."

Blake rushed for a WLAF record 140 yards against Raleigh-Durham and made first-team All-World honors.

However, no NFL team drafted him and Ackles found out he had been cut before any other team did.

"My dream is the NFL and that's all I can think about," Blake said. "Even on my good days I just try to get better. I went to the World League hoping some NFL team would be interested."

Football widows unite in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Jan Wannstedt always believed that while women understood a lot about football, they sometimes didn't grasp the intricacies of the game. Now she's calling the signals for a women-only football clinic to remedy that.

Wannstedt, wife of Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt, co-hosts a free, 2½-hour seminar called "Monday Night Football: For Women Only" at the Cowboys' headquarters at Valley Ranch in Irving.

The first clinic was held last Monday night and about 30 women attended. A second seminar will be held Monday night. The program is co-hosted by KDFW-TV anchor Clarice Tinsley.

"Maybe it's because I'm a woman myself or because I have two girls who are growing up with football, but I just saw the tendency of women not to understand it," Wannstedt said.

"Women don't have to play the game, but it's a lot of fun just to watch it and follow it and be able to analyze it," she said.

Wannstedt said she first came up with the idea for the clinic in the mid-70s. An avid football fan herself, she believed too many women who attended games had no idea what was going on.

Kotite makes coaching debut in American Bowl

LONDON (AP) — Rich Kotite can barely contain his enthusiasm as he gets set to make his debut as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles. He just hopes his players are excited as he is.

"I don't want to be lethargic and I don't want the players to be lethargic," Kotite said. "I want them to feel the excitement. I want them to feel the electricity."

The Eagles play the AFC champion Buffalo Bills on Sunday in the sixth annual American Bowl at Wembley Stadium. It's just the first preseason game for both teams and the first of any kind for Kotite as head coach.

"Going onto the field Sunday will have the excitement of being the first time I've done it as head coach," he said. "It's a great thrill ... It's a nice excitement. There's nothing wrong with butterflies."

Kotite, 48, compares the feeling to when he began his pro coaching career as a special teams coach for Hank Stram in New Orleans in 1977.

"The first game, I was so worried they were going to run the opening kickoff back against us," he said. "I'll probably feel that way again Sunday."

Amendments need approval

When one talks about taxation, there's every likelihood that confusion and anger will result. That really has been the case in Texas in relation to the upcoming Aug. 10 election on two proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution and three local County Education District propositions.

The changes are catching many Texans unaware and they're reacting with anger. The way Texas has financed its public school system is being changed dramatically and at the same time the state is undergoing a change in how it approaches the whole subject of taxation. The first major change is facing voters now in the form of a constitutional amendment.

The amendment is Amendment No. 1, a direct result of Senate Bill 351 which rearranged the state's school districts into 188 County Education Districts (CED). Midland Independent School District and Greenwood Independent School District ended up lumped into a CED with Andrews.

Essentially, the amendment asks whether voters of the CED want to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property. This amendment does not put those decisions into effect, but rather gives the voters of the CED the right to make those decisions. If voters do not approve the constitutional amendment, the governing body of the CED — not the voters — will make those decisions.

Voters should vote "for" constitutional amendment Number One so that they, not the governing body of the CED, can make these determinations.

Once they've voted on amendment one, voters will be asked elsewhere on the ballot to cast their vote on three County Election District propositions. These are the local option decisions which give the voters some choice in how the taxation for their school districts is handled.

Proposition 1 is the most controversial since if approved it would give the CED the ability to tax all tangible personal property in the Midland-Andrews CED that is not held or used for the production of income. Voters should vote "against" this proposal since it would create a major new tax.

Proposition 2 would grant an exemption of 20 percent of the market value of the residence homestead from ad valorem taxation in the CED. Local officials have noted that this exemption would be in addition to the $5,000 exemption already mandated by state law.

Proposition 3 would grant a $10,000 exemption for disabled persons and those over the age of 65 from the market value of a residence homestead for taxation purposes. This also would be in addition to the $10,000 already granted by the state.

Local officials note that if Propositions 2 and 3 are granted by voters, the tax burden from those exemptions will have to be shifted to others in the CED or to businesses; the state-mandated tax rate must still be met for the CED. We believe voters should approve Propositions 2 and 3.

The second constitutional amendment deals with higher education and would approve the issuance of $300 million in bonds guaranteed by the state to be used for college loans. Officials with the Higher Education Coordinating Board and local college officials tell us that the funds are needed to keep up with the demand for student loans.

They also note that the Hinson-Hazlewood loan program, which the $300 million would continue over the next three years, is an outstanding program with a low 5 percent default rate on student repayments, unlike the poor repayment problems experienced with "proprietary" schools.

Higher education is more important than ever and more costly than ever. This amendment should be approved by voters so that the money will be available if students need it.

Recapping, we believe voters should cast their ballots as follows:

- Constitutional Amendment No. 1: For.
- Constitutional Amendment No. 2: For.
- County Education District Proposition No. 1 (taxation of personal property): Against.
- County Education District Proposition No. 2 (exemption for homestead): For.
- County Education District Proposition No. 3 (exemption for elderly, disabled): For.

This election and these proposals are important to the future of education in Texas. Voters should make themselves as informed as possible before casting their ballots. In that regard we refer readers to the story appearing in today's edition on Page 1 and to the League of Women Voters' overview on Page 4A.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, July 28, the 209th day of 1991. There are 156 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 28, 1976, one of the worst earthquakes on record devastated northern China, killing at least 242,000 people, according to an official estimate.

On this date:

In 1540, King Henry VIII's chief minister, Thomas Cromwell, was executed.

In 1750, composer Johann Sebastian Bach died in Leipzig, Germany.

Thought for Today: "Life has a way of overgrowing its achievements as well as its ruins." — Edith Wharton, American author (1862-1937).

Rafsanjani wants to be a moderate

WASHINGTON — President Bush should beware of Iranians bearing hostages — especially one Iranian who wants to be thought of as a "moderate" but isn't, President Hashemi Rafsanjani. As moderates go, he is just a bit to the right of Attila the Hun.

Anderson

In fairness, Rafsanjani is no Shiite ideologue. He is not like his predecessor, the Ayatollah Khomeini, an ascetic with a revolutionary Islamic dream that became the Western world's nightmare. Rafsanjani wants to be a Western kind of a guy, even responsible in Western human rights terms. But his record leaves intelligence analysts wondering whether Rafsanjani should be written off.

It is irrelevant now what Rafsanjani ever intended to do. The fact is, he has not been able to pull off the Iran-becomes-civilized miracle. His country has not modernized. It has descended back into a medieval maelstrom.

Last April, 800 women were arrested in Iran, mostly for "improper veiling" and other cosmetic infractions, the penalty for which is 74 lashes with a whip or glass-studded cord.

More than 2,000 men, women and children have been executed under Rafsanjani's regime. Bodies are left to hang from construction cranes as examples. Stonings are common. Many of the executed are sentenced as drug smugglers, but their real crime is that they were opponents of Rafsanjani. Thousands more are tortured.

Iran's human rights record is one of the worst, if not the worst, in the world. The U.N. General Assembly has condemned Iran for human rights abuses for the last four years.

One former Iranian U.N. official was murdered in Switzerland last year after years of persistent dissent against Khomeini and Rafsanjani. Swiss police have listed 13 possible suspects. The day after the murder, one top Iranian mullah crowed over Teheran Radio, "Relying on intelligence techniques, you must carefully and subtly identify (opponents). Catch them and kill them. But it is not as easy as sweeping them up with a vacuum cleaner. You must be alert enough to find them. It requires a harsh and revolutionary approach to eliminate them, to murder them."

Even if the orders for harassment, torture and murder come from more hard-line fundamentalists in Iran, Rafsanjani allows it to happen. He has never taken back his words uttered in a prayer sermon on May 5, 1989: "If, in retaliation for every Palestinian martyred in Palestine, they kill and execute — not inside Palestine — five Americans or Britons or Frenchmen, then the Israelis would not continue these wrongs." He added that while it was tough to kill Israelis, it is not hard to kill Americans or the French because "there are so many ... everywhere in the world."

Nor has Rafsanjani rescinded the death sentence of author Salman Rushdie for writing what the Iranian mullahs considered a blasphemous book, "The Satanic Verses." The hit squads are still hunting Rushdie and in the last month they have stabbed the Italian translator of his book and murdered the Japanese translator.

So the carnage continues while George Bush tries to convince himself and his policy-makers that Rafsanjani is a moderate. Bush's hope is that Rafsanjani will spring a few American hostages from their prisons in Lebanon. Rafsanjani stokes that hope by hinting at possible releases.

The CIA and other Western espionage outfits continue to debate the degree to which Iran controls the fate of the hostages held by Lebanese Shiites. The conventional wisdom has been that Islamic fundamentalists are the puppetmasters and Rafsanjani could do nothing to soften them.

But that too may be a convenient Rafsanjani ruse. One well-connected newsletter, Foreign Report, recently reported that Rafsanjani may be ordering Hezbollah to keep the hostages until the United States releases all frozen Iranian assets. Rafsanjani is reportedly Hezbollah's financier.

Newspapers give plagiarism a bad name

The New York Times and The Washington Post seem to be trying to outdo each other in efforts to give plagiarism a bad name. I have this from the Media column of The Post's Style section. The Times must have published it somewhere too, but after coming across it in The Post I became too shaky to check The Times closely for fear I'd read that the plagiarism police were on my trail too.

Russell Baker

According to The Post — an admirable paper, let me credit it fully and gratefully! — The Times has disciplined one veteran reporter while The Post, not to be outdone in the rectitude department, has gone all the way and fired one.

Both offenders, says The Post — my source for this column, and a splendid one too — had sent their home offices stories that included several paragraphs lifted almost verbatim from articles written by other reporters in other newspapers.

The two reporters may be accused unjustly. I fervently hope so, for I am appalled by the implications here. I have been told again and again about the excellence of today's journalists.

Just the other day Ray Jenkins of The Baltimore Evening Sun spent an entire column contrasting the excellence of today's journalists with the unschooled crudity of yesterday's journalists, of which he is one and I another.

What is so excellent about reporters who can't even plagiarize without being caught? What in the world are journalism schools teaching in plagiarism class?

Yesterday's journalists may have lacked glossy finish but the dimmest of them would never have lifted whole blocks of paragraphs almost entire and word-for-word from another paper's story and sent it home masquerading as his own prose.

Yesterday's reporters had been taught, not by journalism professors but by reporters old enough to remember Calvin Coolidge, always to change enough words in each paragraph of the target copy, then to shuffle paragraphs around until the original author himself would have had trouble knowing he had been stripped bare.

The Post and Times may hope to lift journalistic standards by making examples of the two reporters felled by their lack of plagiaristic know-how. Let's hope though that this doesn't create the impression that plagiarism is odious to newspapering.

The fact is that plagiarism is not only an indispensable part of the trade, it also serves the public well because it disperses information wider and faster. The public's interest, after all, is in getting the information, not in getting it by ethical means.

Yes, it is shabby practice to steal a piece of painstakingly researched reporting without so much as a credit to the author, and news people who do such stuff are soon smelled out by their colleagues and treated with suspicion and contempt.

Most news plagiarism, however, consists of filching story ideas and making a few desperate phone calls to copy important news stories that a single paper may have broken exclusively.

We are talking about a job that is done on short deadlines under great pressure, with the aim of conveying the most information possible to the most people. It makes too much of too little to be finicky about some harassed reporter lifting a half-dozen facts from an A.P. story without first checking them.

Richard Harwood, The Post's ombudsman, raised a far more urgent question in his Sunday column. First he quoted Benjamin Bradlee, The Post's executive editor, talking to a British interviewer:

"What we write influences TV networks, it influences Newsweek and Time. ... It influences you people in the foreign media. ... I know where all of you (foreign correspondents) get your .... ideas from."

Then Harwood:

"If all this is true, he is describing intellectual banditry and plagiarism on an impressive scale. ... the monotonous conformity and assembly-line personality of American newspapers today creates an impression that, with few exceptions, they are edited in the same shop and produced in the same factory. That is a 'plagiarism' problem they might ponder when the next cribbing episode rattles the china."

I couldn't have said it half as well as Richard Harwood of The Washington Post. Harwood, that is. The Washington Post.

Russell Baker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Prepositions needed to avoid confusion

'When did in go out?" wonders Mark Burde of St. Louis. He spotted a line in an unusually prescient foreign-affairs column ridiculing the simple-minded view that once Saddam Hussein saw we were serious, "he will cave." Not cave in; just cave.

Safire

Similarly, a CNN report warned that "troops may be pulled"; not pulled out, just pulled.

The pro-preposition Burde adds: "I read a piece by a junior reporter in which he wrote that 'the press didn't show,' meaning it didn't show up. Prepositions are disappearing. Do you droppers realize this? Should we noticers care?"

Another charter member of the Gotcha! Gang, Preppy Unit, is Ernest Dzendolet of Amherst, Mass. (I use Mass. rather than MA because so few of my readers are postal computers.) He spotted the clipping of the preposition "off" in my fulmination about calling Saddam "Mr." Hussein, as in "Behind the scenes, I fought using the honorific" and asks, "Is honorific a special weapon, resembling an ax?" OK; it might have been less ambiguous to write, "I fought off using the honorific."

Why is in, up down, and off not on? (Although these words are used adverbially — to modify a verb — I see them primarily as prepositions.) I turned to Allan Metcalf of the American Dialect Society, who offers a soothing: "A purist never lacks something to complain about. Show up can be — has been — stigmatized as a colloquialism, at least for the better part of this century. But take away the supposedly unnecessary up and just say 'they showed,' and you promptly have 'a sad casualism,' in the 1965 words of The New York Times' Theodore Bernstein."

After consulting a secret usage adviser (my thumb, fount of much practical wisdom), I have decided to go with the purists who require up after show when the meaning is "appear." The preposition pins down the meaning; you would not say he fouled when you meant he fouled up. When we say she showed (I use the feminine here, as many jurists do, to assert anti-sexist correctness), we may mean she showed up, but we may also mean "she finished third in the race."

This keep-up decision must be made case by case. Cave, for example, like fold, needs no preposition once we extend the metaphor beyond the pressure of soil on the hole it surrounds. He caved, without the following in, meaning "he collapsed" or "the coward abandoned the rampart," is not likely to be taken to mean "he entered the cave and became a hermit." Nor does fold without its up invite ambiguity; indeed, the poker player who tossed in his cards with "I fold up" would be taken by his companions to be an undercover federal agent who has not fully learned the gambling patois, and it's Big Julie-bar-the-door.

The guide (and if you want to get prescriptive, the rule) is: When the preposition narrows the meaning and thereby avoids confusion, use it (as in pulled out); when the preposition is a useless appendage, clip it. I'll show up, but I'm not caving.

Texas too classy for sleazy lottery

Here we go again! Every day we hear another stanza of the "Last Chance Waltz" from the proponents of a state lottery. We are warned of impending doom and economic disaster without a lottery. We are told our only alternative to a lottery is a state income tax.

I don't know about you, but it sounds like the "same ol' song and dance" to me. We heard it sung over and over a few years ago when the issue was betting on horses. According to the claims of pro-gambling groups in Austin, the only thing that would prevent a state income tax then was letting people waste their hard-earned money at the racetrack. Well, we legalized betting on the ponies, and what do we have to show for it? Is our state financially secure? Have we been saved from economic disaster? No! Instead, we give tax breaks to the racing industry to keep their heads above water.

The lottery might (and I repeat MIGHT) generate a little revenue for a short time, but in the long run, it will create a much greater economic crisis than it will solve. For every dollar spent, the state will get 10 (count 'em) 10 cents. In addition, our government will add 600 employees to the state payroll to run the lottery. Is this what our state leaders mean when they say they're committed to cutting out waste and bureaucracy?

The lottery preys on a person's false hopes that they might "get rich quick." Most of the money spent on lottery tickets will come from people who can least afford them. Surely Texas is too classy of a state to make money is such a sleazy fashion. Surely Texans aren't stupid enough to dance to the music of such a scratched record!

Thanks, First City for new scoreboard

I have watched with interest the placing of the new scoreboard at Memorial Stadium. First City has done it again — a need seen, a contribution to the community made.

I'm always proud to say, "That's my bank."

Too often we fail to express appreciation to the banks, companies, and individuals who do so much for Midland.

Thanks again, First City.

Let Dynagen serve as example to city

It has been called to my attention that Gregory Scarpetta (Letters, July 21) does not reside down-wind for Dynagen.

If Dynagen's are such nice, corporate guys, as they assert, then why are they defendants in prolonged litigations resulting from years and years of alleged noncompliance with explicit governmental anti-pollution laws?

Let this controversial example in our fortunate neighboring city be a lesson to the City of Midland and to express appreciation for our own "zero-emissions industries" and to continue to use prudent precautionary judgment about permitting any high-emissions enterprises to locate themselves in a proximate location that could cause any degree of discomfort to Midlanders or that could necessitate burdensome enforcement actions against any business that might fail to comply with all of our enacted laws or reasonable industry regulations, or who might lower the excellent quality of life in Midland.

We need to pay less for representation

There has been some media attention about our U.S. senators raising their pay $23,200 to $125,000 per year. Yes, our senators and representatives are well paid plus their fringe benefits and retirement plans are excessive. I don't like the way they are feathering their own nest but again,the good ones probably deserve the compensation.

However, there seems to be very little comment about the total cost of having our good senators and representatives in Washington. This is where I get very upset because they have let the office expenses get completely out of hand. It has been reported that the annual cost for a representative is in the range of $650,000 to $750,000 and a senator is in the range of $1,300,000 to $1,500,000. The actual cost is probably even higher. This high cost indicates that there is a tremendous overlapping of services and too much waste. The argument that a large staff is needed to do research is very upsetting because I would rather have the opinion of my elected official than that of a staff.

I would propose that we give those suckers $300,000 or $400,000 per year and they pay all their own office expenses. We must reduce the cost of government and this would be a good place to start.

I have another problem with how entrenched the incumbents have become. In our changing world we must have new approaches and change. Yes, this presents a risk but not to adapt is even more dangerous. We should limit the term of office for the representatives to four two-year terms for a total of eight years and our senators to two terms for a total of 12 years.

Photos of aviatrix sought for exhibit

The West of the Pecos Museum in Pecos is collecting memorabilia on the Pecos Army Air Force for a permanent exhibit. Airmen were trained here during World War II, 1924-1945. If anyone has photos or anything pertaining to Pecos Army Air Force or Pecos during that time it would truly be appreciated if you would contact us at Box 1784, Pecos, Texas 79772 or telephone (915) 445-5076.

We are also looking for photos of the famous aviatrix "Pancho" Barnes, whose plane crashed into a Chevrolet touring car when she landed at the Pecos Airport on Aug. 22, 1929, during the Ladies Air Derby. Amelia Earhart was also among the approximately 20 flyers landing to refuel in Pecos that day. Do you have any photos?

The West of the Pecos Museum wants to have our Air Force Exhibit by October to coincide with the American Airpower Heritage Museum's "Operation Welcome" celebrating the arrival of the Confederate Air Force to West Texas.

Muchas gracias to all for cook-off support

The Midland Chamber of Commerce would like to publicly express our sincere thanks and appreciation to the over 120 volunteers, 500 booth participants, and 45 cookers. The major corporate sponsors of our Fourth Annual Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-Off and Family Festival, Permian Distributing, Inc. (Coors) and Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling, not only provided us with financial support but also with manpower in the form of our two co-chairman for this year's event.

No words could be said to really show the gratitude owed all of these people and to the great attendance by the citizens of Midland. The people came out to the festivities rain or shine, and for that we are extremely grateful

Muchas gracias to our media sponsors: KMID-Big2, MAGIC, FOXY, KNFM, El Editor, KWEL. They helped us make this one of the most attended events in the Permian Basin; we had people from as far out as the Rio Grande Valley, Austin, Lubbock, Big Spring, and Arlington. To the Midland Reporter-Telegram for all it's continued coverage of our events, how could we thank you.

Most especially we thank you for the editorial written by William E. Modisett on the diversity of the Mex-Tex Menudo family festival and what it represents. We are glad that we can share with this community the different cultures that make up a city to make it a better place to live and bring up our children in a more united way of thinking.

The proceeds of this event help us continue our many projects to help others in their education and in their businesses. We are already making plans for a bigger and better family festival for all our friends in 1992. If anyone has any ideas how we can make it more conclusive, please call us. We are always open for constructive criticism.

Muchas gracias a todos.

READERS' VIEWS on:

County Education District vote

CED property tax equals extortion

When I first learned of the personal property tax placed on the Aug. 10th ballot, I wondered how such a tax would be levied.

It does not take much imagination to realize that this would simply be another "extortion tax" at which Midland taxing authorities are so adept. It would entail issuing a tax statement to a homeowner, probably based on a factor of the residence evaluation. The amount may be insignificant initially, and not too much protest would arise.

Those that did protest, however, would probably receive an on-site inspection from an appraiser for the taxing authority and rest assured that the final appraisal of the household inventory would be substantially higher than the initial statement.

In addition to this, I think we could pretty well predict a rapid rise in evaluations in the ensuing years from inception. We all know how difficult it is to remove a tax once it is levied, therefore it is essential that this levy never becomes law.

May tax measure meet its maker

Can anyone please furnish the name(s), address(es) and telephone number(s) for the person(s) responsible for coming up with the idea of the personal property tax?

I am grateful it has been placed on a ballot so the responsible voters (still in town) will have a chance to defeat this issue.

Enough already! No more taxes!

With regard to the Aug. 10th election concerning the taxation of all personal property for the benefit of the Andrews-Midland County Educational District (CED), when will those in power realize that enough is enough! If what they already tax is not sufficient, they need to trim the waste which is evidently present in the system.

We are taxed on the money we earn, then we are taxed on the amount we pay for purchases. Now, they want us to be taxed continually on those purchases.

I suppose that since we are already taxed on our income-producing property (ad valorem) the personal property is all that is left.

Bush's foreign affairs achievements add up to safer world

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Although my heart still cries with grief over the loss of my dear wife, I know Austine would want me to resume working on my weekly Editor's Report for 10 Hearst Sunday newspapers. So the following is devoted to what I see as the significance of the momentous events so far this year that promise a safer world for humanity.

Hearst

Objective analysis makes it clear that the one individual who deserves the greatest credit for these historic developments is President Bush.

Although his innate sense of decency led him to trust the pledge of the villainous Saddam Hussein that Iraq would not invade Kuwait, it was the only serious mistake in his otherwise brilliant political, diplomatic and military leadership, which should in my opinion assure President Bush a lustrous place in our country's presidential hall of fame.

The president's latest achievement was the agreement reached with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in London for the first reduction ever made in the ultimate weapons of destruction — the nuclear intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM). The agreement provides for about a 30 percent cut in each country's ICBM arsenal. The United States would reduce its overall number of ICBM nuclear warheads and bombs from 12,000 to about 9,000. The Soviet arsenal would be cut from 11,000 to about 7,000.

While Soviet and American experts have to complete some technical language, the two leaders have agreed to meet in Moscow Tuesday and Wednesday to sign the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START). They are apparently confident the experts will solve any language problem.

It has taken nearly 10 years to reach this historic breakthrough agreement. It paves the way for President Bush's first visit to the Soviet Union. A month ago congressional leaders and media pundits were skeptical about any agreement being reached this year. President Bush, however, was optimistic about persuading Gorbachev to risk a threatened coup by those in the military seeking to prevent the conclusion of the START treaty this summer.

Another great Bush achievement, with the assistance of Secretary of State James Baker, was to bring Israel and the Arabs to the verge of agreement to hold a Middle East peace conference. The president sent Baker on mission after mission to the Middle East to overcome the original refusal of Israel and the Arabs to attend such a conference.

Led by Saudi Arabia, most of the Arab regimes insisted they would not participate in a peace conference with Israel unless the Israelis agreed to withdraw from the Jordan River's West Bank, the Golan Heights and other Israeli-occupied Arab territory.

A few months ago, Israel's hard-line prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, said he would never attend a peace conference as long as the Arabs insisted on Israel's withdrawal from the territories. As a result of personal phone calls from President Bush and pressure from Baker, including Washington reports there might be a sharp cut in U.S. financial aid to Israel, Shamir said a few days ago he was now willing to attend a peace conference and that he hoped negotiations with the Arabs would begin soon. Secretary Baker also persuaded Syria and Jordan to attend. It was a triumph of persevering persuasion coupled with carrot-and-stick tactics exemplifying the art of skillful diplomacy.

At the London economic talks, President Bush, with the support of other leaders of the industrialized free world, succeeded in persuading Gorbachev to accept assurances of technological aid for free-market enterprises without giving him any cash commitments.

Two of the Washington media's frequent critics of the president, Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, reported in the Washington Post as follows:

"President Bush's subtle use of political chemistry to advance American foreign policy goals reached a peak at the economic summit. He bolstered Mikhail Gorbachev's waning powers, his primary objective, without spending a dime. What began as an unhappy summit ended in triumph for George Bush."

This makes me more convinced than ever that the Democrats will have a tough time trying to prevent the re-election of President Bush next year.

Montreal pitcher Mark Gardner

No help means no-hitter a no-go

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mark Gardner pitched a no-hitter that wasn't.

Gardner didn't surrender a hit in nine innings against the Los Angeles Dodgers Friday night. The only problem was, his Montreal teammates failed to score a run in that time, and in the bottom of the 10th, Gardner gave up two hits and wound up a 1-0 loser.

"I had a great game, but I don't feel good about it," Gardner said. "It's still a loss. It was a great accomplishment but still a loss."

The 29-year-old right-hander (5-7) was pitching in front of several family members, who came to Los Angeles from their home in Fresno.

Since he allowed hits in extra innings, Elias Sports Bureau, the National League's official statistician, said Gardner will not get credit for a no-hitter, but will appear in a separate list of 11 other pitchers in this century who lost no-hitters in extra innings.

The list starts with Cleveland's Earl Moore in 1901 and includes Harvey Haddix's 12 innings of perfect pitching for Pittsburgh in 1959. It happened most recently to another Fresno product, Jim Maloney of the Cincinnati Reds, in 1965.

Ironically, of the 12 pitchers who have had nine-inning no-hitters broken up in extra innings, their teams lost 11 of the games.

As far as Gardner's catcher, Alberto Reyes, was concerned, it was a no-hitter, no asterisks needed.

"It's a great feeling," Reyes said. "He pitched great. All the pitches we called were the right pitches and he hardly shook me off at all."

Alfredo Griffin led off the Dodgers' ninth with a pop to second, Chris Gwynn struck out and Gardner then got Brett Butler on a grounder to second.

The crowd stood and cheered, and Gardner's teammates congratulated him in the dugout. He briefly acknowledged them and tried to keep his mind on the game, although he knew his pitch count was getting too high.

"The no-hitter was really of no consequence," Gardner said. "It didn't matter to me. I wanted to win the game, even if they went into the pen at the end."

Lenny Harris got the Dodgers' first hit in the 10th on a bouncer that went over the mound.

"I had no chance on that pitch," Harris said. "I just stuck the bat on the ball, it bounced over his head and I was able to beat it out."

Eddie Murray followed with a single to send Harris to third. Jeff Fassero relieved and Darryl Strawberry ended the game with a single.

In all, Gardner walked two and struck out four. Jay Howell (4-2), who pitched the ninth in relief of Kevin Gross, got the win.

The only thing close to a hit off Gardner in the first nine innings came with one in the fifth when Mike Scioscia hit a hard grounder in the hole to Andres Galarraga at first.

Gardner became the first to hold the Dodgers hitless for nine innings at home since Johnny Vander Meer beat Brooklyn at Ebbets Field on June 15, 1938, for his second straight gem.

The Dodgers' three hits gave them one more than the Expos. Orel Hershiser gave up just one hit in six innings in the game, which was a testament to the surgical skill of Dr. Frank Jobe.

Less than eight months after rebuilding Hershiser's right shoulder, Jobe repaired Gardner's right arm in November. Gardner returned to Montreal's lineup May 14 and went nine innings for the first time in 15 starts.

Giants blank Phils for 7th straight

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Rookie right-hander Paul McClellan and two relievers combined on a three-hitter as the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0 for their season-high seventh straight victory.

Matt Williams and Robby Thompson hit consecutive homers off Danny Cox (3-4) in the fourth inning to help send the Phillies to their sixth straight loss. The pair also hit back-to-back homers last week in Montreal.

McClellan, making his first appearance of the season after working in four games last year, blanked the Phillies on two singles over seven innings. McClellan (1-0) was a combined 13-3 with Shreveport (AA) and Phoenix (AAA) this season.

Wally Backman led off the game with a single but was erased on a double play. Lenny Dykstra, batting third for the first time in his major league career, opened the fourth with a single for the only other hit off the rookie.

McClellan was relieved because of tightness in his right calf, sustained when as a base runner on third he was struck by Kevin Mitchell's smash into foul territory in the fifth inning. McClellan retired six more batters and was replaced by right-hander Francisco Oliveras to start the eighth. Dave Righetti, who allowed a single in the ninth, got the last three outs for his 15th save.

Will Clark, the first batter to face Phillies reliever Mitch Williams in the eighth inning, was struck by a pitch on the right elbow and was left the game.

Cubs 7, Braves 5

CHICAGO — Ryne Sandberg drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including an inside-the-park shot, as the Chicago Cubs beat the Atlanta Braves.

Sandberg hit his inside-the-park homer with two on in the first inning off John Smoltz (5-12). It was a deep fly down the left-field line which got by a diving Lonnie Smith. The ball rolled to the wall as Sandberg scored behind Chico Walker and Mark Grace.

It was Sandberg's second inside-the-park homer, the other coming in 1986 at Montreal. It was also the first by a Cub in Wrigley Field since Ron Cey did it in 1983.

Sandberg made it 5-0 in the third with his 16th homer after Grace had walked to help make a winner of Les Lancaster (7-4). It was the 18th two-homer game for Sandberg, the last coming Sept. 15, 1990, at St. Louis.

Lancaster retired the first 10 Braves before Jeff Treadway doubled in the fourth and scored on Terry Pendleton's 12th homer. Two pitches later, Ron Gant hit his 20th home run. It was the fourth time this season the Braves had hit successive home runs.

The Cubs came back with a pair in the bottom of the fourth on a walk to George Bell, a single by Jose Viscaino, a run-scoring infield out by Lancaster and a run-scoring single by Walker.

Atlanta reliever Dan Petry singled with one out in the fifth for his first major league hit that led to two runs. Treadway walked and Pendleton and Gant each singled in a run.

Otis Nixon singled in the Atlanta seventh off reliever Chuck McElroy to extend his career-high hitting streak to 15 games. McElroy finished for his second save.

Reds 13, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Cincinnati used a season-high 20 hits and the first major league complete game by rookie Kip Gross to beat St. Louis, snapping a five-game losing streak.

The defending World Series champions have won only three of their last 17 games. The loss snapped a four-game winning streak for the Cardinals, who missed a chance to go 10 games over .500 for the first time since 1989.

Gross (4-1) gave up one run, nine hits, struck out three and walked two. His last win, July 20, snapped a 10-game Reds' losing streak.

St. Louis starter Omar Olivares (3-3) gave up eight runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Jeff Reed led the Cincinnati attack with three hits and three RBIs. Of the Reds' 20 hits, they had 19 singles and one double.

The Reds scored two runs in the first on a two-out bloop single by Paul O'Neill.

Pirates 11, Astros 5

HOUSTON — Jay Bell became the first Pittsburgh shortstop to hit 12 home runs in a season since 1947, going 4-for-5 with two homers and four RBIs, to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Houston Astros.

Randy Tomlin (6-3) gave up one run on seven hits over seven innings for his third straight win. Tomlin had pitched 23 consecutive scoreless innings before Houston scored in the sixth.

The Pirates have won four straight games and 13 of their last 16. Pittsburgh, whose 60-34 record is the best in baseball, has outscored the opposition 38-13 in its last four games, and has averaged 6.9 runs per game in 15 games since the All-Star break. Houston has lost a season-high seven straight and 12 of its last 14.

Mets 4, Padres 0

SAN DIEGO — Dwight Gooden pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and Garry Templeton homered against his former team as New York beat the San Diego to end a four-game losing streak.

Gooden (11-6) struck out six and walked three before John Franco finished the combined shutout. The Mets' ace has won his last four decisions and six of his last seven after the worst slump of his career.

Dodgers 7, Expos 0

LOS ANGELES — Bob Ojeda pitched a five-hitter for his first shutout in almost two years and Alfredo Griffin had four hits as Los Angeles widened its lead in the National League West to six games.

The Dodgers stretched their home winning streak to a season-high seven games with their fifth straight triumph overall, and Ojeda (8-8) extended the pitching staff's consecutive scoreless inning streak to 31 with his 15th shutout in 241 career starts.

Slusarski impressive for A's

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Joe Slusarski threw a two-hitter in his first complete game in the majors and the Oakland Athletics continued their torrid hitting with a 9-1 victory over Baltimore.

Slusarski, recalled from the minors for the third time this season on Friday, allowed only two walks after the third inning. He allowed both hits in the third inning.

Slusarski (3-4) walked two and struck out two in his 12th major league start.

Mark McGwire, who entered the game in a 4-for-40 slump, went 3-for-4 with three RBIs for the Athletics, who have won five of six. Harold Baines and newcomer Brook Jacoby also had three hits for Oakland, which has scored 46 runs in its last 45 innings.

The Athletics wasted little time in racing to a 4-0 lead. Rickey Henderson was hit by Jeff Ballard's second pitch and scored on a double by Dave Henderson. After Jose Canseco popped out, Harold Baines grounded an RBI single to right.

Rangers 8, Tigers 5

ARLINGTON — Ruben Sierra's two-run single launched Texas to a come-from-behind win over the Detroit Tigers despite two home runs and four RBIs by Mickey Tettleton.

Sierra's hit off the third Tiger pitcher, John Cerutti, broke a 4-4 tie, and the Rangers went on to snap a four-game losing streak against Detroit. Ivan Rodriguez singled, Brian Downing walked and Julio Franco singled to load the bases and set the stage for Sierra.

Dean Palmer provided insurance in the seventh with a two-run pinch homer, his fourth, off Paul Gibson.

Gerald Alexander (5-1), the second of four Texas pitchers, gave up one run in 1 2-3 innings. Kenny Rogers came on in the seventh, pitched out of a two-on, none-out jam, and went the last three innings for his second save.

Rogers struck out Cecil Fielder in the eighth with two on and two out, one of seven strikeouts by the Ranger reliever.

Reliever John Kiely (0-1) was the loser.

Yankees 12, Angels 10

NEW YORK — Matt Nokes hit two home runs in a game for the third time this month as the New York Yankees beat the California Angels on old-timers' day.

Before the game, New York commemorated the 50th anniversary of Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak by giving the Hall of Famer a white Mercedes-Benz. Then the Yankees went out and looked like the Bronx Bombers of old.

Nokes hit his 16th and 17th homers — both with a runner on base — to make a winner of Greg Cadaret (3-4), who gave up four runs in 5 1-3 innings. Nokes hit his first homer in the fifth and another in the Yankees' five-run sixth.

Indians 6, Mariners 1

CLEVELAND — Carlos Martinez had a home run and three singles, extending his hitting streak to 11 games, as the Cleveland Indians beat the Seattle Mariners.

Winner Charles Nagy (6-10) pitched 30 straight innings at Cleveland Stadium without allowing an earned run until Ken Griffey Jr. led off the sixth with a triple and scored on Alvin Davis' sacrifice fly.

In six July starts overall, Nagy is 3-1 with a 1.42 ERA. He gave up six hits, walked two and struck out four in his fourth complete game.

Loser Brian Holman (9-10) had a string of 16 1-3 scoreless innings at Cleveland Stadium end in the third, when Jeff Manto doubled and came around to score on sin-

White Sox 10, Red Sox 8
White Sox 7, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox felt they gave themselves plenty of time between games when they rescheduled rainout with the Chicago White Sox as part of a day-night doubleheader. They figured wrong and lost twice.

After a 25-minute delay at the start to repair new infield sod damaged by rain, the Red Sox and White Sox played 4 hours and 50 minutes before Chicago pulled out a 10-8 victory on Dan Pasqua's two-run single with the bases loaded and one out in the 14th inning. Then, the White Sox completed the doubleheader sweep with a 7-4 victory in the night game.

Royals 5, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Danny Tartabull's run-scoring double gave Kansas City the lead in the 10th inning, and the Royals went on to beat the Toronto Blue Jays for their seventh victory in eight games.

Twins 7, Brewers 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Gladden's three-run, ninth-inning homer followed two infield hits and gave the Minnesota Twins a 7-4 victory over the slumping Milwaukee Brewers.

THE REAL VALUE OF LEASING AN S-CLASS SEDAN TODAY.

The rewards of driving a Mercedes-Benz. Of course you covet the magnificent S-Class sedan. But you wonder: Is leasing a Mercedes right for the times? Yes. Because right now, leasing can help make what may have been slightly beyond your reach within your means.

Higher resale value – Lower monthly payment. Since two factors that determine monthly payments are interest rate and resale value, and since the cars of Mercedes-Benz, as a line, have consistently had the highest resale value in America,* it could actually cost less to lease a 1991 Mercedes than you thought possible.

Like no other dealers in the world.

Johnson stumbles to finish fourth

MONTREAL (AP) — Ben Johnson finished a sorry fourth to Bruny Surin in the men's 100-meter finals on Saturday and ended his chance to defend his title at the World Championships next month.

Surin was clocked in a wind-aided 10.03 seconds to take his third straight national title at the Canadian Track and Field Championships. Atfee Mahorn was second in 10.17 seconds, Peter Ogilvie was third in 10.33 and Johnson was fourth at 10.42.

Johnson had to run at least 10.30, the international qualifying standard needed to enter the world championships, which are in Tokyo from Aug. 24-Sept. 1.

Fehr slips by Pavin at PGA's Hartford Open

Associated Press

CROMWELL, Conn. — Rick Fehr played unspectacularly, but well enough to shoot a 4-under-par 66 that edged him one shot ahead of Corey Pavin in the Greater Hartford Open on Saturday.

Pavin, the 36-hole leader, and five others were within two strokes of Fehr, who had five birdies en route to a 54-hole score of 201, nine strokes under par for the 6,820-yard Tournament Players Club at River Highlands course.

"I hit a lot fairways, hit a lot of greens and hit a few putts," Fehr said. "When the scores are like this, that's good enough."

Pavin, the second-round leader, pitched in a bunker shot from 60 feet away on the 18th hole to salvage par for the day and remain at 8-under with a three-round score of 202.

"I feel fortunate with the way I played today that I'm still there," Pavin said. "I missed a couple of short putts, I made a lot of long ones. I scrambled."

Fehr said Saturday was the type of day players could plod along and not lose ground.

"I survived when there was a chance of something bad happening," he said. "And I hit the right shots at the right time."

His best shot was a 20-foot putt for birdie on the 431-yard, par-4 third hole. His only bogey was on the 443-yard, par-4 seventh, when he drove it into the deep rough and hit a bad chip shot.

This is only Fehr's second tournament since finishing second in the St. Jude Classic in June. He said he needed time to relax "and work on my lawn."

He also worked on his swing a bit and he's happy with the results.

"I hit a couple of weak putts but I'm striking the ball well. I'm hitting it consistently," he said.

Fehr is in his sixth year on the tour and has won once, the B.C. Open in 1986. But he said he won't put any extra pressure on himself to win Sunday. He's already assured of a spot on the tour next year with his earnings and he said he's happy to contend.

Co-leaders at LPGA event acquainted from college

Associated Press

CANTON, Mass. — College rivals Kay Cockerill and Caroline Keggi each birdied the 18th hole to tie for a one-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the LPGA Bay State Classic.

When play began in light rain, they were two strokes behind leader Mitzi Edge. When they completed their round under sunny skies, they were at 3-under 69 for the day and at 9-under 207 overall.

Cockerill is in her fourth year on the tour and Keggi her third, but neither has won a tournament.

Their birdies broke a four-way tie for the lead with Juli Inkster, who has won 13 LPGA tournaments, and 19-year-old tour rookie Brandie Burton. Inkster shot 66 and Burton had a 69 and were tied at 208.

A five-way tie at 209 included Meg Mallon, winner of the LPGA Championship and U.S. Women's Open in the past month, 1991 and lifetime tour earnings leader Pat Bradley, Nancy Scranton, Cindy Scholefield and Edge.

Cockerill, who attended UCLA, and Keggi, who went to New Mexico, competed against each other for three seasons in college. But they hadn't been paired recently on the pro tour until Saturday's round at the 6,137-yard Blue Hill Country Club.

On the 469-yard 18th hole, a par 5 that has yielded numerous birdies, Cockerill hit a sand wedge to within five feet of the hole and sank the putt.

Keggi then knocked in a four-footer, her second straight birdie, to keep pace. On the 344-yard 17th, she hit a five-iron to 15 feet of the hole and sank the putt.

Cockerill also had a strong finish after a front nine in which she made bogeys on the first hole by two-putting from 10 feet and the ninth by three-putting from three feet.

Both co-leaders came close to winning earlier this year. Keggi tied for third at last week's Big Apple Classic. Last year, she lost one tournament in a playoff. Cockerill tied for fifth at the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic on July 7 after being in contention during the final round.

Keggi is 24th on this year's earnings list; Cockerill is 80th.

OPEN: Two others tied for second take the Hall of Fame members in the final pairing, one that renews a strangely lopsided rivalry.

The matchup moved into the '90s last year when Trevino beat Nicklaus for this title at Paramus, N.J. Just like several other times when Trevino has bested Nicklaus for major championships.

Trevino's first victory as a professional, the 1968 U.S. Open, the tournament that established him as a star of the first magnitude, came at Nicklaus' expense.

Nicklaus was second in that tournament, and was second to Trevino in the '71 U.S. Open, the '72 British Open and the '74 PGA championship.

"The U.S. Senior Open is the only major senior title I haven't won," said Nicklaus, who won the PGA Seniors earlier this year.

"I haven't won at Oakland Hills. I'd like to do that. This is the biggest of all the senior titles. It's a title I would like to have," he said.

While their head-to-head confrontation promises great drama, it also contains the possibility of danger.

"I hope we don't get to looking at each other and let somebody else go by us," Trevino said.

"It's still anybody's golf tournament, not just my golf tournament or Trevino's golf tournament," Nicklaus said. "There must be six or seven others can still win it.

"What I don't want to happen is to get caught up in playing Trevino, like Arnold and I used to do,' he said, and then played both ends of an imaginary conversation:

"Hey, I got you, Arnie, 72 to 74."

"Yeah, but what about those other 10 guys that went past us while you were doing it?"

"That's what I don't want to happen," Nicklaus said.

(From 1B)

won, and if they didn't, they should have. Dimaggio was still slightly bemused about Ken Keltner helping to stop the streak.

"I helped make Keltner a celebrity," DiMaggio said in a short and earnest news conference. "The plays that he made. But what prompted him to play right on the third-base line?"

How dare they stop the Yankees? But for the last two years, they did, more often than not. The Yankees were 45-47 going into Saturday. Been down so long, seemed like up to the old Yankees.

"I don't watch too many games on television or in the papers," DiMaggio said. "Sometimes they're hot and sometimes they're cool. The young pitchers seem to be good, but it's a little too soon to tell."

Most of the alumni admit they root. Jake Gibbs, who coached his alma mater, the University of Mississippi, for 19 years, said he goes for the Yankee box score the first thing in the morning paper.

"I want to see who gets the hits, the attendance," Gibbs said. "I feel real good about this team. The guys come to the ballpark knowing they can win."

Horace Clarke said he follows the games whenever they appear on cable in St. Croix, V.I., although he admitted that after a tough day in the sun, teaching baseball as the island's minister of sport, "television is like a sleeping pill for me."

Perhaps the most regular old-timer in Yankee Stadium is Phil Linz, who lives in Stamford, Conn., and has a 15-year-old son playing shortstop in the state championships.

"The Yankees are the only team I know that gave tickets to their old players," Linz said. "George Steinbrenner is very generous that way. I went 15 times last year. I like the manager, and I love Alvaro Espinoza. He's flashy and he's got some style."

Henrich, the spryest old-timer in the joint, said he didn't particularly follow the Yankees in his retirement home in Prescott, Ariz. But he showed his true Yankee colors by laughing at a couple of old Brooklyn Dodger fans lamenting his home run that beat Don Newcombe, 1-0, in the first game of the 1949 World Series.

"Ruined my whole school year," one reporter said.

"What were you going to be, a nuclear scientist?" Henrich asked.

"Broke my heart," another reporter said.

"It had to be done," Henrich said. "Think how great I felt."

This was not just athletic competitiveness. This was Yankee pride. And on Old-Timers' Day, it felt just right.

Indurain one step closer to ousting LeMond

Associated Press

MACON, France — Greg LeMond, gracious in winning the Tour de France three times, showed Saturday he can be gracious in losing it.

"Sooner or later I was going to be beat," LeMond said after he came in third in a time trial on the next-to-last day of this year's 22-stage event.

Miguel Indurain of Spain is virtually certain to succeed LeMond as champion. He won Saturday's time trial and maintained a solid lead over Gianni Bugno of Italy.

LeMond is seventh overall, 13 minutes, 13 seconds behind Indurain. The two-time defending champion lost almost 17 minutes to Indurain in four mountain stages.

"When you push yourself to win, it is much easier than to push yourself when you're losing," LeMond said. "Today in the time trial I pushed myself 100 percent. I didn't win. I was beaten by someone better than me."

The race ends Sunday with a ride into Paris and the Champs Elysees.

"The biggest disappointment is not winning," LeMond said. "It's been a very difficult Tour de France for me. The most difficult. It was difficult for me psychologically.

"Now that I won it three times, it is disappointing to finish beyond first place," LeMond said.

LeMond said that a viral infection hurt him in Val Louron, the 13th stage, when he dropped seven minutes to the leaders.

"There are guys like Indurain and Bugno who are at their peaks healthwise and motivation and very talented," LeMond said.

Once he recuperated, LeMond said it was easier both mentally and physically. He made strong bids in the 16th and 19th stages, but came up a bit short.

LeMond had the lead in the first half of the race and everybody pointed towards him.

"Everybody in the pack was not going to give me a gift in the Tour de France," LeMond said. "Most of the people were racing against me. It's a natural thing because I won the TDF three times. I took a great lead in the first stage. I was the man to beat."

Things changed after the 11th stage when he lagged far behind in the Pyrenees.

"Had I felt good in Val Louron it would have been difficult for me to control the race," LeMond said. "Even if I were with Indurain, I don't think he would have worked with me."

Next year, LeMond says he expects to be favored in the race and knows what Indurain will go through.

"I still am going to come to the Tour de France next year as the man to beat with Indurain," LeMond said. "There is incredible motivation to win your first Tour de France and that is what Miguel has."

Tightening his grip on second place overall was Bugno, who was 27 seconds back of Indurain in the 21st stage.

Indurain, in front by 3:36 with only Sunday's final stage remaining, led through every checkpoint Saturday along the 36-mile course from Lugny to Macon. His time for the stage was in 1 hour, 11 minutes, 45 seconds.

"At the moment I'm in another world," the 27-year-old Indurain said, knowing that the prestigious title should be his unless he bows out in a freak accident. "When you dream of winning the tour, it's different."

Tyson camp scoffs at rape allegations

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Representatives of Mike Tyson say that allegations he raped a woman at the Canterbury Hotel last weekend are just another in a series of cheap shots against the former heavyweight champion.

Tyson's promoter, Don King, said Saturday that such reports against Tyson are common.

"Nobody has talked to me about it," King said. "We have to deal with it in the American way ... constitutional due process."

Tyson lawyer Charles Lomax of Chicago dismissed the allegations against Tyson, who reportedly was attending a wedding in California.

"We hear the same kind of thing about once a month," Lomax said. "Mike is a target for just about anybody who wants to take a shot at him."

A publicist for Tyson, John Solberg, said Tyson "is accused of this stuff all the time. It's a shame you can accuse a public figure of anything you want and get away with it."

The 25-year-old former heavyweight champion is alleged to have raped an 18-year-old woman in his room at a downtown Indianapolis hotel about 1:30 a.m. on July 19, police reports said.

The Marion County prosecutor's office is making arrangements to interview Tyson either Sunday or Monday, the Rev. Charles Williams, president of Indiana Black Expo, told The Indianapolis News.

Prosecutor Jeffrey Modisett, however, could not be reached Saturday to discuss the case or a report that his office attempted to keep information about the incident from the media.

Modisett said Friday the allegations were kept secret for a week so the investigation could be made without the glare of national publicity.

Tyson was in Indianapolis for appearances connected with Indiana Black Expo, a statewide exposition of entertainment and forums on black issues.

Midland College reports record first week

Staff Report

Midland College's fall semester early registration begins its second week Monday after a record-setting initial week.

"Through the first three days, we were running about 100 more students than we had at the same time in 1990," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

Cates said the telephone registration system, available to some former and returning students, was being used far more than when it was started last year. "It is taking these students about five to 10 minutes to register, while those coming in person usually require about 30 minutes, and sometimes longer," he said.

More than 3,000 current and former students were given instructions by mail earlier this summer explaining how to register by telephone, using the fall course bulletin and special telephone number. Final step is paying the bill, which is sent by mail.

Upon payment, the student's registration is completed.

Those persons required to register in person are first-time college students, transfer college students, and those receiving any type of financial aid, scholarship, or grant.

First-time and transfer students must submit transcripts from previous schools or colleges attended.

Registration is operated on an alphabetical system for maximum equity. This fall, students whose last names begin with S through Z should come on Monday, M-R on Tuesday, F-L on Wednesday, and A-E on Thursday.

Registration is handled in the Student Services area of the Student Center between 7 a.m.-5 p.m. this week. The same alphabetical order will be followed for the third and final week, Aug. 5-8, but the hours that week will be 9 a.m.-7 p.m. on Monday and 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday.

"As quickly as classes are filling, we urge all prospective students to register as soon as possible. Those who wait until the last minute may find that classes are closed, labs are filled, or that classes at the most desirable times have no more openings," Cates said.

After Aug. 8, prospective students will be issued time permits for a single registration day, Aug. 28. Time permits will be given out Aug. 12-22, Monday through Thursday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

First day of fall classes will be Tuesday, Sept. 3. The fall semester ends Dec. 19.

"Most registration questions are answered in the fall bulletin, but we are delighted to address those which aren't answered," Cates said. "We've expanded our counseling staff this fall in order to make more persons available to assist transfer or new students more quickly."

Fall bulletins are available at the Midland County Library, most Midland banks, the Midland Chamber of Commerce office, or at the college's student center.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 685-4501.

RTC to pay off Southwest S&L depositors here

■ After closing down West Texas offices of Southwest Federal Savings Association Friday, the Resolution Trust Corporation says depositors will begin receiving settlement checks soon.

Staff Report

The Resolution Trust Corp. will begin within the next few days paying off depositors at the two Southwest Federal Savings Associations branches in Midland, RTC officials say. The two branches were closed Friday by the RTC.

In announcing the closure, officials added that depositors can contact the institution directly for further information. The RTC traditionally pays off depositers by mail.

Customers with loans at the closed branches are advised by RTC officials to continue payments as usual until otherwise notified.

The Midland branches are among 22 Southwest Federal branches closed by the RTC. The others are in Odessa, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, Alpine, Colorado City, Lubbock, Amarillo, San Angelo, Abilene, Levelland, Ballinger, Sweetwater, Hamlin, Panhandle, and Canyon.

The closure will result in the loss of 110 jobs in West Texas and cost the RTC $961 million in payments to those with approximately 57,000 deposit accounts in the closed branches.

Southwest's remaining 45 branches have been acquired by Guaranty Federal Savings Bank of Dallas and Kilgore Federal Savings and Loan Association of Kilgore, RTC officials said in a press release announcing the transactions.

The combination closure-acquisition was undertaken by the RTC after it failed to receive an acceptable bid for the purchase and assumption of the entire institution. Executive Director David C. Cooke said the two institutions' combined bid was determined by the RTC to be the least costly of the 10 bids received by the agency.

Guaranty Federal acquired the Preston Center branch in Dallas as well as the Stassney, Commodore, Windsor, Shoal Creek and Northgate branches in Austin, the Northwoods Park branch in Houston and the Navasota branch in Navasota, all of which held deposits totaling $344 million, RTC officials said. Guaranty also acquired $2.7 million in assets of the failed institutions.

Kilgore acquired the deposits of the remaining 37 institutions, totalling $1.84 billion and $698.9 million in assets, officials added.

Both Guaranty and Kilgore are subsidiaries of Temple-Inland Inc. of Diboll, a forest products company that was also the largest buyer of Texas thrifts last year.

The two institutions paid the RTC a premium of $15 million which represents 1.2 percent of Southwest's acquired core deposits, the RTC announcement said.

The RTC advanced $1.47 billion to Guaranty and Kilgore to help with the acquisitions, and will retain $3.75 billion of the closed institution's assets, RTC officials said. The agency expects to recover part of its advance through the sale of assets to be held in the receivership.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

San Marcos crash kills one

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A Houston man was killed Saturday when the experimental single-seat airplane he was flying crashed in a wooded area just north of San Marcos, authorities said.

Dr. Brantley Scott, who authorities said was approximately 62 years old, was pronounced dead at the scene, Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Phyllis Stolle said.

Witnesses told Texas Department of Public Safety investigators that Scott was trying to turn his plane back toward the San Marcos Airport when it crashed about 10:25 a.m.

Scott was apparently testing his Quest Air Venture 20 aircraft before it went down, Ms. Stolle said.

It took rescuers about 90 minutes to locate the wreckage, she said.

No one on the ground was injured, and Scott never radioed that he was having mechanical problems, Ms. Stolle said.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating.

Brain maps

New medical instrument defines mental, physical problems

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A computerized "brain-mapping" instrument that is designed to more clearly define and refine diagnoses of brain dysfunctions is in operation at Midland's Physicians & Surgeons Hospital.

A team of three Midland medical specialists — a diagnostic neurologist, an endocrinologist and a psychologist — is heading up diagnostic case reviews at P&S Hospital.

"The brain map is going to help us make more clear-cut diagnoses in people that have abnormal behavior," said Dr. George H. Cirkovic, the Midland neurologist on the team.

The instrument, in concert with other tools of the specialists, will aid in determining if a patient's disorder is biological or psychiatric in nature.

"It is going to tell us if there is a bioneurological basis to their complaints," Cirkovic said.

The first of its type in the Permian Basin, the instrument is a $150,000 Cadwell Spectrum 32, which discerns electrically-charged brain waves by way of a maze of sensitive wires attached to the patient's scalp.

"So far, the instrument has been shown to be extremely sensitive in detecting evidence of psychiatric disease, as well as cerebrovascular disease, mild head injury, and learning disabilities," noted Bob Reid, P&S president.

"A patient who might be thought to have a psychiatric disease may, in fact, have a brain tumor," Reid said.

The computer is used "to probe and analyze brain waves quantitatively."

Tools of the brain-mapping instrument "reveal even subtle signs of brain dysfunction that conventional brain-wave recordings can overlook," Reid said, "and can do so with mathematical precision."

The instrument is programmed to depict brain functions and to project images of the brain from various perspectives. Images on the instrument's screen are in hues of colors to illustrate levels of the brain's activities.

Ancillary units linked to the Spectrum 32 turn out "hard copy" — printed material — which depicts the brain's functions and levels of activities in various shades of color and on the more traditional brain-wave graphs on what seem to be reams of computer paper.

P&S Hospital's interdisciplinary medical team assigned to diagnostic work is made up of Cirkovic; Dr. Murthy Gollapudi, a Midland endocrinologist, and Dr. Harvey Durbin, a Midland psychologist.

Since the late 1970s, the brain-mapping instrument mainly has been confined to experimental research, such as in university laboratories.

Today, the diagnostic instrument is at some of the larger medical centers.

In Midland's P&S Hospital, the instrument is yet another resource of the medical team, which was organized in March 1991. Other tools used by the team include special imaging studies (SPECT), magnetic imaging resonance studies (MRI), electroencephalograms (EEG), and diagnostic psychological testing.

GARY OTT

You can go home again, especially in fond memories

It was Thomas Wolfe, of course, who came up with the classic line, "You can't go home again."

And maybe he was right. Anyone who has moved away from a certain place and then returned there to live knows how difficult it can be. Your mind tends to romanticize the way things used to be. You remember the past as you want it to be, rather than as it was.

Ott

Still, I don't think Mr. Wolfe intended for us never to go back and visit. That, you can do.

Harlem, Ga., is a little speck in the road, located about 20 miles east of Augusta, which, as you probably know, is home to the world-famous Masters golf tournament each April.

My family, both my mother and father's side, originated in that part of the country, and most of them still live there. There's an 87-year-old grandmother, and a host of aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces, nephews and goodness knows how many others who are related through marriage.

I hardly know any of them by name. There's just a bunch of Marthas and Eunices and Ruths and Elizabeths and other names you come across when thumbing through the Bible.

We are talking the Deep South here.

Each July our family gathers for its annual reunion. Everyone cooks more food than the Iraqi army consumed during the entire Persian Gulf War, then packs it in old-fashioned picnic baskets and heads for the lake where the event is always staged.

It's a typical reunion. The old people sit around and talk. The kids go swimming and those of us who fall in between periodically check our watches to see if it is time to leave.

Regardless of age, though, everybody has one thing in common: They spend the bulk of the afternoon shooing away the gnats who, like my family, make Georgia their permanent home.

For the first time in almost 20 years I attended the reunion last Sunday.

That's what lured me to Georgia. But the reunion soon became a mere afterthought. What overwhelmed me during my four days there were the wonderful memories.

As a child, I spent almost every summer visiting my grandparents in rural Georgia, a place where pine trees grow so tall they appear to reach out and touch the clouds. If you have ever listened to Ray Charles sing "Georgia on My Mind", then you know what I'm talking about. It is indeed special.

This is not to say there aren't negatives.

There are. The humidity, for example, can get so severe it will turn your hair kinky. You walk outdoors and your clothes become drenched. You don't perspire in Georgia, you sweat. And you can put that in capital letters.

But when you are 10 years old, you don't care. Humidity is just a fancy word the weatherman says on TV.

We're talking childhood memories here. They are the best kind.

The last time I was in Georgia was in the early spring of 1976. My grandfather had just died. The funeral was held in a small Methodist church located in the country. If Norman Rockwell didn't paint a picture of this particular church, he should have. It says small town America. The cemetery, as they often are in the Deep South, is located on the church grounds.

To get there, you take a winding two-lane highway, weaving in and out of the pine trees, until you reach the outskirts of Winfield, a tiny community of less than 500 people. You turn off the highway onto a dirt road that leads to the church. It is a white building. It has a steeple. The sign out front says, "Shiloh United Methodist Church."

All churches should look like this one.

I can't help but believe if everyone worshiped

Planes touch wingtips while on taxi ramp

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An American Airlines jetliner and a smaller American Eagle commuter plane brushed wingtips Saturday afternoon while taxiing at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

No injuries were reported, said D-FW Airport spokeswoman Angel Biasatti.

"Shortly after 3 p.m., an MD-80 and a commuter aircraft, a Jetstream 31, were taxiing and apparently touched each other on a taxiway or clipped wings," Ms. Biasatti said.

The mishap, on taxiway 32 on the airport's west side, did not affect traffic, she added.

Passengers from both planes were transported to terminals by airport buses, Ms. Biasatti said.

The passengers were to be placed on other planes for the continuation of their flights, said Laura Hurd, an American Airlines spokeswoman.

"We will do our very best to accommodate them," she said.

There were 117 passengers and six crew members on the jetliner, Flight 602 from Dallas-Fort Worth to Oklahoma City, Ms. Hurd said.

The commuter flight was American Eagle Flight 3711 from Dallas to Wichita Falls with seven passengers and two crewmembers aboard, she said.

The extent of damage was not immediately known.

"We're not sure of the damage right now," she said. "The NTSB (National Transportation Safety Board) are doing their investigation right now, so we can't really get very close to the aircraft."

A passenger aboard the commuter plane told KRLD radio he watched the collision from his window. "I saw him coming and I said, 'There's no way he's going to clear,'" he said.

brain-mapping instrument and the CAT (computerized axial tomography) scan and the magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) tool is that the brain-map pictures the brain's function, Cirkovic said. The CAT and the MRI depict structure.

"We had a number of children with attentional deficit disorder and with dyslexia," Cirkovic said, "and the dyslexia picture is just as we imagined it would be before we did the brain map." The "area of abnormality" was shown in the left brain posteriorly, the angular gyrus, wherein lies decoding of symbols, including reading skills.

In the overall diagnostic program, Durbin, the psychologist on the team, has a "battery of psychological tests that help unravel that mystery" — nature of the disorder that is perplexing the patient.

The brain-map is used in conjunction with Durbin's psychological testing to detect disorders, such as depression and anxiety.

Disorders may be organic in nature. A tumor may be within the brain.

The body's hormones, such as those generated by the most-vital pea-size pituitary gland, may be out of normal limits.

Gollapudi, the endocrinologist and nuclear-medicine physician, noted the wonders of the brain.

"The mind is using itself to discover itself," he said.

The Spectrum 32 instrument aids in that.

HOME: Memories stay

in small country churches, the world would be a better place. You get the distinct impression, even without seeing him, that the preacher is a caring and gentle man, the kind who would preach a funeral for a small boy's dead puppy. If you try real hard, you can almost hear the choir singing in the background.

We walked over to my grandfather's grave. It was surrounded by those of his brothers and sisters.

Again, the memories flow.

He was a funny man, the kind who could cuss but not come across as offensive. He loved to flirt, especially with small town waitresses who had names like Flo, popped their chewing gum and called their customers, "hon."

As I stared at his tumbstone I could almost hear him laughing at one of his own jokes. Mostly, though, I remember how important his family was to him.

I wonder if he knew how much we all loved him.

I hope so.

We toured other places from my past. There was the old family homestead of my great-grandparents. They were called Big Ma and Big Pa.

You've gotta love names like that.

The inside of the house had that special musty smell so common in old homes. There was a huge front yard that I'm told used to play host to giant family baseball games. In the back yard, a stack of watermelons rested in the shade.

"Take one with you," the owner said.

We did.

As we drove back to town, my uncle, who was more or less leading the tour, would occasionally point and say, "There used to be a school right there" or "Me and my buddies stole watermelons from a patch over there."

As he spoke, pictures formed in my mind and a smile danced across my face. It was as though I had gone back in time.

It felt good.

But there was more, so much more. The old post office. The laundromat. The Ford dealership. A service station that no longer exists. Fruit stands, featuring Georgia peaches, on the side of the highway. The lake where I learned to ski. All around me, the memories flowed.

From time to time someone in the backseat of the car would point and say, "Remember when ... " And immediately my mind would race back 30 years.

It's funny how well the brain works sometimes. Names of people, most of whom I hadn't thought of in years, rolled effortlessly off my tongue. Bobby Culpepper. Kenneth Brown. Brent Wells. Raymond "Peanut" Fulcher. I asked about them all.

Each, I was assured, is doing fine.

And so was I.

For four days my world stood still. There were no problems. No headaches. No crises.

I was strolling in the past.

I think Thomas Wolfe would have approved.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Telephone plan works well as students register in droves

By H.A. Tuck

The first week of enrollment for the fall semester was a busy one, as hundreds of students signed up each day for classes. There's more early registration for the next two weeks.

A telephone registration system instituted last year is working well for current and former students, who are TASP-exempt and not receiving financial aid.

Registration is taking place in the Student Services area of the Student Center.

Obviously, those who register early have better selection of class meeting days and times to fit individual needs.

After Aug. 8, time periods will be issued for a giant registration day on Aug. 28. Classes start on Tuesday, Sept. 3, right after Labor Day.

More information is available by calling 685-4501.

Thanks a bunch to the scores of people who helped make Kids College at Midland College another great success this year. Almost 1,600 youngsters from grades 1 through 6 were registered during the two sessions. Program director Jan Reed, her assistants, the teenage aides and the wonderful teachers made it great.

Many thanks also are due for the maintenance and custodial staff, the campus security officers, and the many faculty and staff who helped out. We want to applaud the children who attended for their manners, courtesy, and obedience to the regulations of Kids College. They are super!

Pat Hallmark, a first year MC Respiratory Care student, received a $250 scholarship grant from the Texas Society of Respiratory Care recently. She wrote a paper on sleep apnea that was judged one of the six best student papers submitted to the organization. The award was announced and presented at a meeting of the organization in Houston July 8-11. Ms. Hallmark's paper will be published by the TSRS later this year.

She was among several MC Respiratory Care students, along with faculty members Bob Weidmann and Sandy Ulmo, attended the convention.

Bud Stapleton, MC's director of the newly-formed Aviation Maintenance Technology program, has been busy fielding inquiries from prospective applicants since coming on board two weeks ago. A tiny part of the many items of hardware necessary to teach the hands-on portion of the classes also is being acquired.

Students accepted for the program will utilize the fall semester to satisfy some of the academic requirements, then begin in January to have some of their hands-on training.

Of you'd like to learn more about the program, you should call Stapleton at 685-4751 to arrange an appointment.

Alice Friedline, who is on the Continuing Education Staff, questions the knowledge of geography exhibited by the American Society for Training and Development. She received a letter last week from the Virginia-based organization about a national conference being held by ASTD this fall. ASTD declared, "It will take place not far from you, in Cincinnati . . . " Isn't it nice the conference wasn't planned for some really far-off locale such as Dallas or Houston.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

'Dog days' of August offer time to catch up on some good books

By Beverly Wise

The "dog days" of August are almost upon us. What better way to keep cool than to stay indoors under the air-conditioner with a good book? Here are some suggestions from the new fictions shelves at the library for that perfect summer read.

For those who relish a good mystery there's a new Faye Kellerman, "Day of Atonement." The detectives, Peter Decker and new wife Rina Lazarus, are Jewish. What starts as the search for a missing teenage boy ends up as the pursuit of a dangerous psycho. Interesting vignettes of othhodox Jewish life in Brooklyn are included.

The English detective couple in "Whose Dog Are You?" by Gerald Hammond raise and train Labrador Retrievers. They stumble onto a corpse while duck hunting. A stray spaniel turns up — Was it the dead man's dog?

"Murder on Peachtree Street" by Patricia H. Sprinkle takes place in Atlanta. Resourceful widow Sheila Travis and her aunt are the charming amateur detectives here.

For those who prefer a mystery in the Victorian manner, "Highgate Rise" by Anne Perry tells of Inspector Thomas Pitts' tenth case — one of arson — in which the wife of a prominent doctor has died.

Two modern mysteries, "Pacific Beat" by T. Jefferson Parker, set in California and "Blood Marks" by Bill Crider, set in Houston, are more frenzied, violent tales that make for compulsive page turning.

Don Pendleton's "Cop on Ice" features an old fashioned hard boiled private eye-and ex cop-who sets out to solve the murders (happening within 24 hrs) of five cops. A sexy blond female detective helps him solve this one.

For James Bond fans there's a new one from John Gardner, "The Man from Barbarossa."

Western aficionados should enjoy Douglas C. Jones' "Search for Temperance Moon." As in his previous novels, Jones makes the myths of the old West seem real and the details crackle like gunfire.

"Kelly Blue" by Peter Bowen is a slightly tongue-in-cheek version of the classic western. Kelly is a fictional apprentice to the real life Jim Bridger who encounters some fantastic characters during his adventures in the west of the late 1800's.

Among other new fiction available are two tales of werewolves — "Saint Peter's Wolf" by Michael Cadnum and "Wilderness" by Dennis Danvers. Both transcend the ordinary "werewolf" genre.

Barbara Wood's novel, "The Dreaming," also has a supernatural theme. A young English woman goes to Australia in 1871 to find the secret behind her parents' deaths which is some how bound up with an aborigine's curse.

A great escapist read, Noel Barber's last book, "The Daughters of the Prince" is a saga of three young men — American, English and German — who fall in love with the three beautiful daughters of an Italian prince. This all takes place just before the onset of WWII. The lovers are later reunited in war ravaged Italy.

Another book set in Italy is by Francesca Duranti, one of the new Italian novelists who write like Umberto Eco. In "Happy Ending," the oddly assorted members of an old patrician Italian family are all unhappy in their relationships with one another. Through the intervention of a raffish, somewhat amoral young man who wanders into their lives, all their problems are solved and the happy ending promised by the title is achieved. This is a short, delightful bit of fluff.

Wallace Simpson in the subject of "Wallis: The Novel" by Anne Edwards, a fictionalized account of the American temptress who swept Edward VII off the throne of England.

Here briefly are a few other examples of the wide variety of new fiction available: Chuck Scharborough has written "Aftershock" about the aftermath of a disastrous earthquake in New York City.

"Swing Sisters" by Jeanne Westin concerns an all girl band in New York City in the 30's.

Pulitzer prize winner Michael Shaara's last book "For the Love of the Game" is about the last ball game of a famous pitcher.

"Lingo" by Jim Menick tells the entertaining (but frightening) story of a computer-come-to-life.

Godwin Parke's "Sherwood" is the first of two volumes on the legend of Robin Hood.

"Avenue of Eternal Peace" by Nicholas Jose follows both Chinese students and westerners on the fateful path to Neihardt, "The End of the Dream," which were first published between 1901 and 1905, are unique in their depiction of Ohaha Indians not as brutes or noble savages but human beings. Happy summer reading.

Budgetary battles entrap lawmakers

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The wheels didn't fall off the budget-cutting bandwagon during the Legislature's second week. But lawmakers felt a shimmy.

The 30-day special session hits the halfway mark Monday, and much work remains.

Bills designed to merge agencies, cut spending, eliminate state jobs and raise fees to bridge a projected $4.8 billion deficit aren't law yet. A 1992-93 state government budget isn't written yet. A way to fund all $57 billion or more of the budget's cost hasn't been found yet.

This special session opened with resolute accord as Gov. Ann Richards. Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis jumped behind the 975 budget reform ideas offered by Comptroller John Sharp's audit of state government. A Republican group even urged Sharp, a Democrat, to change parties.

But in Week Two, the bandwagon struck some potholes. Among the rattles:

■ One of the first major bills adopted wasn't to cut spending but to borrow money. To build more prisons, the Senate voted to sell $1.1 billion in state bonds, at a cost of about $100 million a year in interest, while the House OK'd selling $440 million in bonds.

■ During debate on merging several environmental agencies into one, Lewis voiced frustration with guerilla tactics of special interest lobbyists. He said they were "feeding amendments in the back door" to lawmakers who then proposed the measures without knowing what they did. "It's been happening all week," Lewis growled.

Analysis

"I've had a belly full of it."

■ The Senate ground to a halt all day Tuesday when Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, filibustered what she called an unconstitutional provision in a bill to save $1.1 billion with streamlined state financial practices. Ms. Krier finally tired and was outvoted 29-1 in a post-midnight roll call. Senate leaders privately said they were vulnerable to more filibusters as the remaining days dwindle.

■ The House endured what Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, called a "wild night" of changing education laws. It prompted a walkout by 42 lawmakers angry over a vote to stop funding 3-year-old pre-kindergarten. Speaker Lewis said the House should focus on the budget, not on "reinventing the wheel."

■ The Senate postponed debate on a lynch pin of Sharp's plan — a bill merging 32 occupational licensing agencies into one. Strong opposition from doctors and some trades reportedly forced the delay.

■ Rep. Sam Russell, D-Mount Pleasant, argued against merging the Youth Commission and Juvenile Probation Commission into a new health and welfare super agency, saying: "I'm not down here to do what John Sharp wants to, just because John Sharp wants to do it."

Despite all that, Sharp's troops remain upbeat.

Greg Hartman, a top aide to the comptroller, said an estimated 70 percent to 80 percent of Sharp's $4 billion budget-cutting program was moving forward.

Ex-football player champions disabled causes

DALLAS (AP) — A former Texas Christian University football player wants to make companies aware that the federally mandated deadline for making businesses accessible to the disabled is approaching.

Kent Waldrep has been an activist for the disabled since he suffered a paralyzing neck injury during a 1974 TCU football game.

Waldrep, who is confined to a wheelchair, has his own home, a wife, two sons and a job that pays him an above-average salary. But he said that he is an exception among the scores of disabled people who are denied the opportunity to work by much of the business community.

"A series of circumstances really enabled me to utilize the talents Kent Waldrep had," he said. "But it shouldn't take being on television or an athlete to create an environment for employment."

So Waldrep is trying to help disabled people who may face an even tougher road. He's forming a non-profit company to help disabled people gain public access and jobs.

Public accommodations at all businesses must be free of obstacles that exclude the disabled by Jan. 26, 1992.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a carrier?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

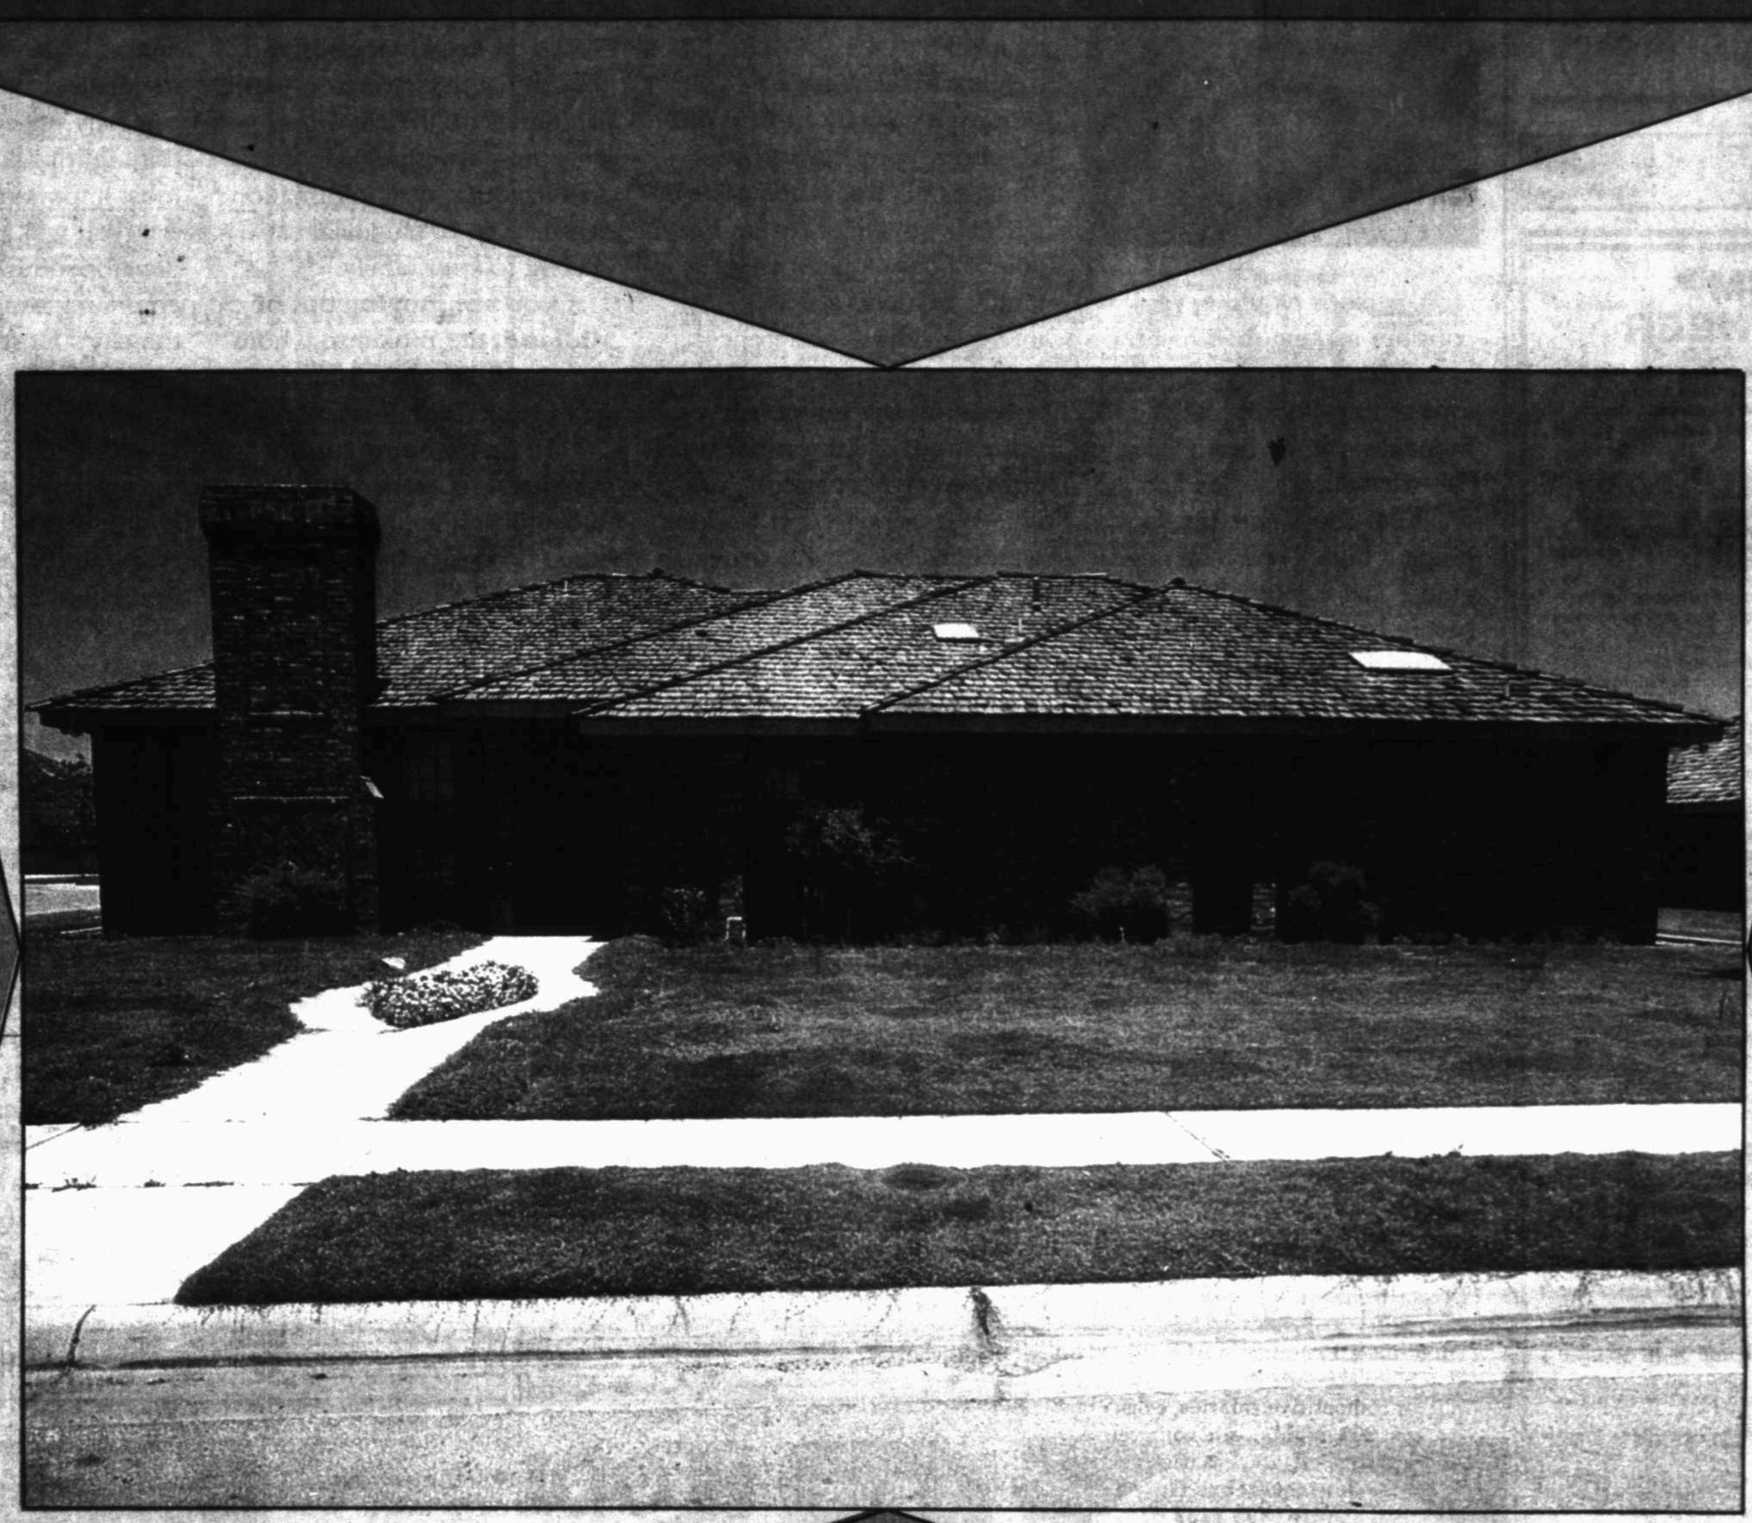
Luxury and elegance on a budget



Luxury and elegance
are affordable for the owner of this four bedroom, three bath home with two living areas.

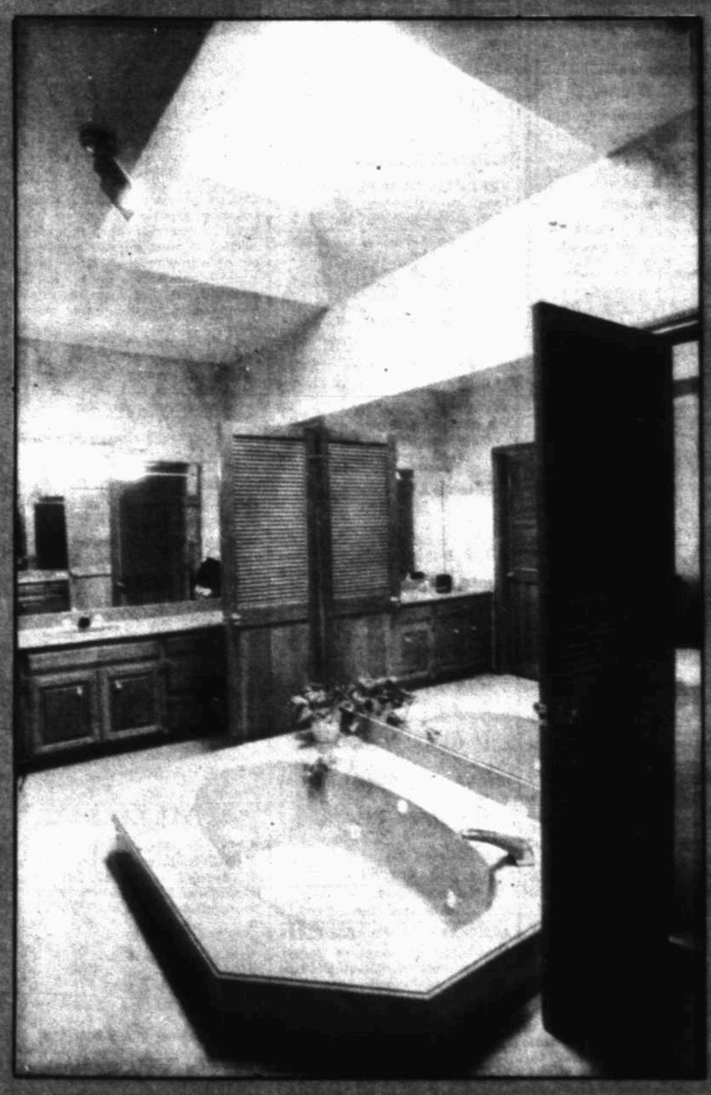
Dennis Berry

Located in coveted Trinity Meadows, this fine home offers many unique touches of luxury while maintaining a practical design any family would find comfortable.

Marble floors in the entry match the marble around the fireplace in the formal living room. Imported oak is used for the mantle, built-in book shelves and picture frame wall panneling in this elegant room. High ceilings and crown moldings enhance the beauty of the room while the custom draperies complement the decor. Also found in the formal living area for convenience in entertaining, is a beautiful wet bar set in stylish, solid oak cabinetry.

The formal dinning room is set apart and designed in a style reminiscent of a bygone era. For graceful entertaining, entrances to both the formal living area and kitchen are provided.



Imported oak adds warmth and charm to this formal living, above, area while the high ceilings give it an open spacious atmosphere.

Wood parquet floors in the kitchen and breakfast area give these rooms a special, old-fashioned warmth. But there is nothing old-fashioned about the conveniences found in this modern kitchen with its double ovens, built-in microwave, range, dishwasher, ceiling fan and abundance of oak cabinets.

Lovely windows in the breakfast area look out onto the spacious covered patio and a back yard large enough for a pool.

A utility room with sink, built-in cabinets and ironing board is located coneniently to the kitchen.

Wallpaper boarders add a delightful touch to the decor in each of the four bedrooms. Two of the bedrooms are joined by a spacious bath, while another bedroom has its own entrance to a hall bath.

The master bedroom suite includes his and her dressing areas, separate vanities and a large his and her walk-in closet as well as a large jacuzzi tub.

Uniquely located at the rear of the house with its own entrance onto the patio and back yard is a spacious game/family room. This room is great for entertaining or for family gatherings. Large windows and an atrium door provide a wonderful view of the lovely yard.

Langston Realtors Talk About...

Things to know before you go

Langston

Most persons would never consider making their first trip to London without reading tons of travel books, talking to friends about the best places to eat, what shows to see and where to shop, and, finally, hiring a highly recommended guide. The visitor who "knows before he goes" will spend his limited time most wisely, using the tube for quick travel about the city, enjoying starters at Menage a Trois, walking through history at Westminister, searching for a perfect gift in the Silver Vaults, wandering the food halls of Harrod's, visiting selected museums and other pastimes that are of particular interest to him.

When families face relocation to another city, it is equally essential to "know before you go" to make best use of limited home-finding time. And that is what our free, no obligation relocation services are all about! Whether you are coming or going, moving in or out of Midland, our Relocation Department can ease the way for every family member!

First, by making a personal contact to find out all about your family, your thoughts on a new home - whether buying or renting, your school requirements, family members special interests, church preference, etc.

Second, by "matching your family with one of our company's best agents, one who is experienced in working with transferees, who shares many of your particular interests, and who has extensive knowledge of the home market you've indicated you'll be most interested in. We want you to find a friend, not just a Realtor.

At this point, if you are moving from rather than to Midland, we will contact a leading Broker in your new city. That Broker, or his Relocation director, will then select on of his most qualified, " matching" agents to assist you, and will co-operate and communicate with us all the way through your move.

Third, by providing you with worlds of information on your new city even before the first trip is made. If you are moving to Midland this would include Langston Realtor's video of the city; our "Midland Profile" publication; details on neighborhoods and homes that might interest you; pamphlets on the city's museums, symphony, sports, organizations, etc.; information that may be of particular interest to your family.

If you are moving out of Midland, the Broker to whom we would refer you would provide similar information.

Fourth, by being totally prepared to assist you in fully utilizing your precious home-finding hours. Prior to your arrival, our specially selected agent (or if moving out, the agent selected by the Broker in your new city) will have previewed homes to show you; will have set up appointments with mortgage companies, school personnel, bankers, day car centers, interior designers, builders, landscapers, and even piano teachers or companies that might offer a job opportunity for your spouse.

Fifth, by taking the time, making the commitment on the part of the whole company and keeping in touch to insure that you receive full, effective, efficient relocation services all the way through your move.

"Know before you go" means you'll be prepared; know neighborhoods and housing costs; have school, medical, arts, etc. information to consider beforehand; and can fully utilize your home-finding trip. But, probably most important of all, it means that you will already have developed rapport and communication with one of the city's most qualified Realtors, selected by the Broker or Relocation Department just for you. It also means that that Realtor's time and efforts will be totally reserved for your important home-finding trip.

Call me, Richard Langston, 915-682-9495, 915-685-0400 or 1-800-231-224483 toll free, for FREE, no obligation "know BEFORE you Go" relocation services.

Richard Langston is Vice President of Relocation for Langston Realtors. He is a graduate of the University of Texas Austin with degrees in Economics and Business Management, has lived most of his life in Midland and is active in numerous community organizations.

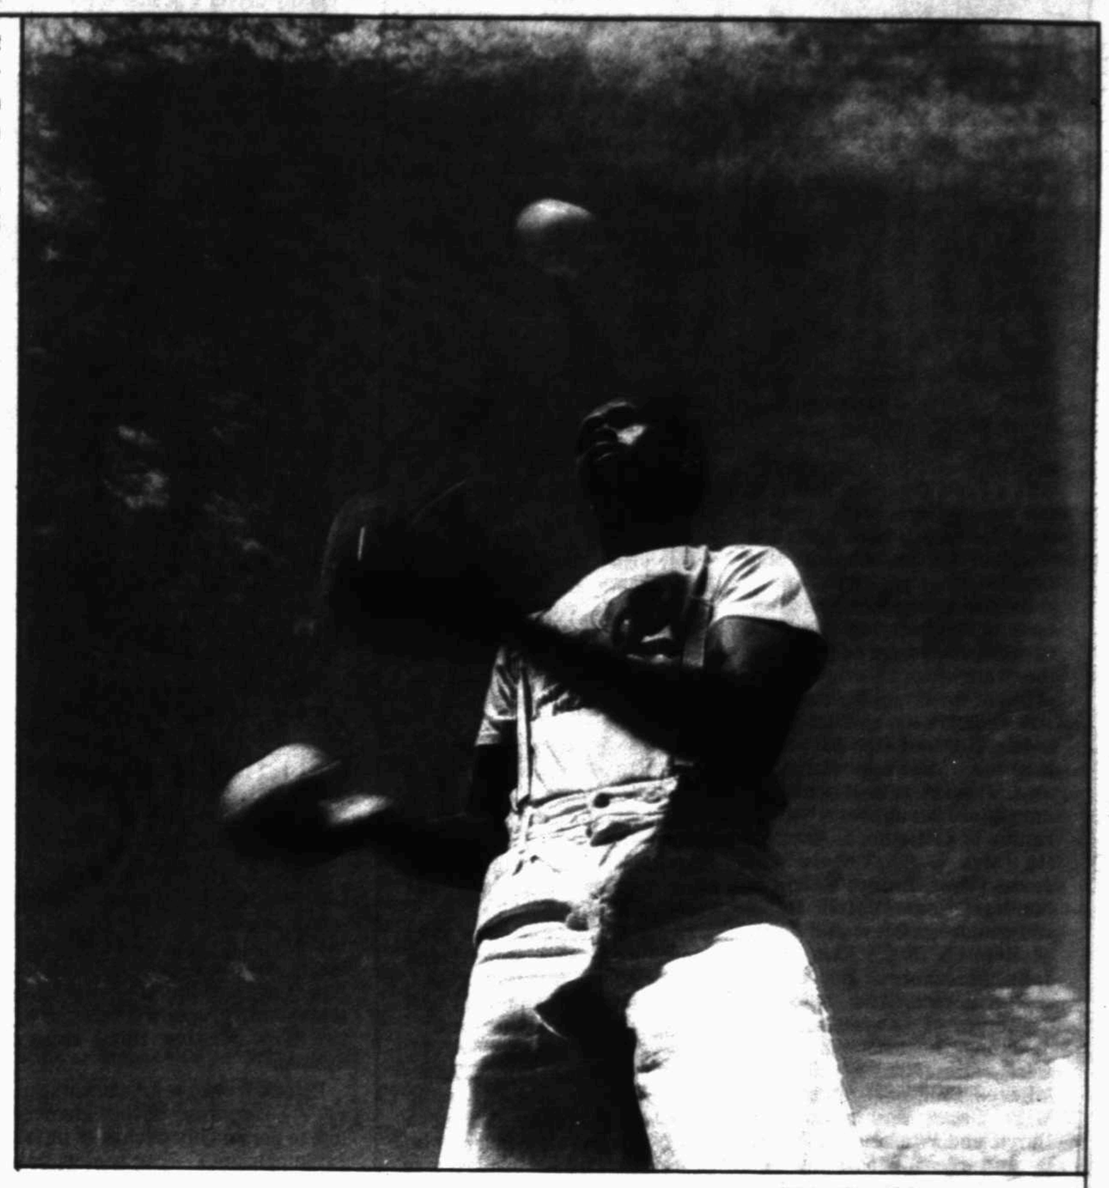
Larry Pitts perfects the juggling tricks of catching balls on the back of his neck (top photo) and rolling a ball around his head without dropping it (bottom photo).



Larry Pitts practices juggling in his backyard.

It's a Juggle out there

Modern lifestyles seem to be getting faster and faster — people are rushing around, juggling family, career and leisure time at a frantic pace.

Larry Pitts and Joe Martin juggle all those aspects of 20th-century living. They also juggle clubs, balls, rings and an occasional rubber chicken.

Pitts and Martin have been helping each other master the art of juggling for several years.

Martin, who is a fourth-grade teacher at Jane Long Elementary School, said he learned his first lessons in juggling "seven or eight years ago. I used to work at an oil field supply company years ago, and things got a little slow. So a buddy of mine taught me a little juggling to pass the time. Larry taught me a lot more tricks. We've been juggling together for four or five years."

Pitts, a physical education coach, will teach at Santa Rita Elementary School this fall. "For about 11 years I've known how to juggle," he said. "For serious juggling, it's been about three."

Both men use their juggling skills to help them teach children in their classes. "I have the kids write a 'how-to' paper on how to juggle," Martin said. "They learn to juggle while writing their papers."

As a physical education teacher, Pitts has a natural outlet to teach his students the art of juggling — he incorporates juggling into his PE classes. "So far, so easy," he said. "They get excited about it. You build up (to it). It's not just three-ball juggling, you start with one-ball, then two-ball, then three-ball. It's exciting for the kids when one kid catches on. They think, 'If he can do it, so can I.' "

Their students often become fascinated with juggling beyond classroom time. "It's neat to see kids out at recess, practicing juggling," Martin said."They don't even have to do that."

Pitts and Martin have taken their juggling skills out of the classroom, performing at such places as Celebration of the Arts (twice), a benefit for Casa de Amigos, Midland College, birthday parties, Project Blueprint and for their churches and schools.

"We're always working on new tricks and things we see," Martin said. "I'm happy teaching it (juggling). I think Larry practices a lot more than I do. He's in the International Jugglers' Association. We keep meaning to work up something for the (Summer Mummers) Olio, but we just never have gotten around to it."

Both men said one of their goals is to work with the school district to provide workshops for the schools.

Juggling isn't a natural skill, the men said; it must be learned and practiced. But since classes in juggling are not that easy to find, an aspiring juggler has to find other ways to perfect his craft. Pitts said he learned the skill through the use of "a lot of visual aids, a lot of books and reading material, a lot of professionals who have videos out, a lot of friends (willing to share their expertise), a lot of TV shows with jugglers — and you work at it."

"The main thing we do is three-object juggling," Martin said. "I can sometimes do four. Larry can do four or five. When you mix objects, that's really tough because you have to change your grip for everything."

"It takes time" to learn how to juggle, Pitts said. "I don't think there's anything easy about juggling."

"There's nothing easy about riding a bike when you are first learning," said Martin.

And while learning to juggle may not be

Longtime Midlander celebrates birthday

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Longtime Midlander and civic worker Sue Dillard celebrated her 85th birthday recently. To mark the milestone occasion, Bonnie and Orman Hubbard hosted a lovely party in their home.

McKnight-Harrison

The buffet table featured an array of mouth-watering delicacies, with a French garden basket as the centerpiece. Mrs. Dillard used the bride's book from her wedding almost 56 years ago for the guest registry.

Despite heavy rains the afternoon of the party on July 13, a sizeable crowd turned out for the festivities.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Dillard's son and daughter-in-law, Bill and Dee Dillard of Houston; Shannon (Dillard) and Jim Mitchell and 16-month-old daughter, "Miss" Emma of Little Rock, Ark.; Ollie (Mrs. J.C.) Velvin and Jeane (Mrs. Jimmy) Velvin of Bandera; Genie Velvin Haley and children, Drew and John, of Raleigh, N.C.; Kim (Mrs. John) Skidmore of Belize, Central America, and Jennifer Skidmore of Lewisville.

Among the local partygoers were Jane (Mrs. Al) Dillard, Mildred Skidmore, Paige and Mike Gates and daughters, Carrie and Wheatley, and Karla and Neal Richmond and children, Reagan and T. Jay.

Mrs. Dillard was born on July 10, 1906, in Princeton, Ark., and later moved with her family to nearby Fordyce, where she grew up. She became the bride of J.D. Dillard on Sept. 8, 1935, and the couple moved to Midland shortly thereafter. The late Mr. Dillard was district manager of Lone Star Steel prior to his retirement.

Mrs. Dillard was the first woman appointed to serve on Midland's Parks and Recreation Department Board. In addition, she served on the board of Texas Garden Clubs, Inc., for a number of years. She also rendered service as Heart Sunday chairman and as co-chairman of the local Canteen during World War II.

She is a past president of both the Midland Country Club Ladies Association and Tejas Garden Club and has been an active member of the Altar Guild of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Besides the one son, she has two gransons, Davis Dillard and Paul Dillard, both of Houston.

IT WILL BE of interest to Pat and John Kolb's many Midland friends that the former Tall City residents are moving back to John's native state of Ohio later this week.

Now living in Tyler, Texas, the couple will relocate to Greenville, which is located near Dayton.

The Kolbs promise to come to West Texas for a visit when they return to the state to visit their son, Scott, and his family in Waco. Their younger son, Mark, and his family now reside in North Carolina.

John was a geologist with Exxon when the family lived here, and both sons graduated from Midland High School.

HOW SWEET IT WAS to exchange the West Texas heat for the fresh, cool mountain air of Northern New Mexico recently! My husband, Harry, and I made our annual pilgrimage to our favorite vacation retreat, the charming village of Red River, nestled in the Red River Valley, high in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. It was settled by gold-seeking prospectors in the 1880s and today is a thriving resort.

Our visit coincided with Red River's 50th annual Fourth of July Parade and Celebration. The event was filled with all the patriotism a small town could muster, as it saluted our country's servicemen and women.

The parade attracted approximately 70 entries, our personal favorite being a florist shop float, which read: "The Freedom To Shop 'Til You Drop." Red River's only Persian Gulf veteran Mike Scheimann was the Grand Marshal.

Other Independence Day events included a watermelon feed at a local park and a lakeside fireworks display at the nearby town of Eagle Nest.

As we have done since 1975, we stayed at the Valley Lodge, now under the new ownership of native Texans, Theresa Buck and Delores Price, who previously claimed Amarillo as home.

In the "It's A Small World Department": While spending an evening at Two-Step Station, a family-oriented entertainment and dancing center, we ran into Midland residents Sharon and Wilson Heidelberg, who find Northern New Mexico as intriguing as we do and were vacationing there with son, Brad, and two of his friends. While viewing the parade on the Fourth, we by chance visited with fellow parade watchers, Carole and Earl Miller of McGregor, Texas, only to discover that they are friends of Midlanders Gayle and Doc Dodson. The women's friendshp dates back to their school days in Big Lake.

Red River served as our "home base" while we went "day tripping" throughout the area. We enjoyed Taos, which is a combination of Hispanic, Pueblo and artist communities, and of course, the incomparable capital city of Santa Fe, with its colorful Spanish colonial atmosphere, its combination of Indian and Mexican arts and crafts, its fascinating art galleries and many historical points of interest, as it is one of the oldest cities in the U.S., founded in 1610.

We also enjoyed a tour of "The Enchanted Circle," a 90-mile drive from Red River south and east to Bobcat Pass, Eagle Nest, Angel Fire, Taos, Questa and back.

Games children play terrify their mothers

By Erma Bombeck

On my driver's license under occupation, I listed "worrying." Having raised three kids, I'm good at it. Shortly after giving birth I realized that children do not have heart attacks ... they're carriers.

Bombeck

If they see tables, they pull them over on themselves. If they find cans in the trash, they put them in their mouths. If they unearth razor blades, they play with them. Somehow my kids seemed intent on putting only one thing between them and their self-destruction. Me.

I couldn't take my eyes off of them for a minute. One morning as I slept, one of our toddlers bit into a tube of paint tint. We had his stomach pumped. He peed blue for a week.

Wrapping their lips around drinking fountain nozzles and kissing stray dogs on the mouth was the least of it. As they grew older, they stalked disaster as if they were courting a beautiful heiress. They leaned toward toys that went out of control when you pushed a button or had to be detonated.

Everyone said they would outgrow this need for adventure. Wrong. I dodged bows and arrows, paddleballs and electronic toys that shot suction bullets at me. Our kids were the first to discover that by balancing yourself on a piece of wood with high-powered rollers that had no steering mechanism or brakes (called a skateboard), they could make me hyperventilate.

They bought cars that actually made human sounds like "Help me" and "I'm sick." I rode in one of them where every time we hit a bump, the glove compartment door dropped open and the headlights went out.

It was no surprise that when snowboards came out, our kids had them. They attached their feet to the board and guided it by shifting their weight. I personally see nothing redeeming about a sport that destroys a mother-child relationship.

As a person who used to go to the skating rink in high school and spend all my time in the restroom because the floor was padded with rubber, don't even ask me to understand the lure and the speed of the new rollerblades.

Recently a bunch of kids competed in inventions they thought the world needed. It was no surprise that several of the entries included a sled on rollers instead of blades and a skateboard for ice.

I'm sorry, but somewhere out there is a mother whose son is intent on going over Niagara Falls in a Tupperware leftover bowl and another one who has a teen-ager determined to climb the U.N. building in his bare feet. I bleed for them.

Whatever happened to dropping a nice bowling ball on your foot?

Program offers Texas resident grant for injury rehabilitation

Staff Report

There is $100,000 for rehabilitation available for a Texas resident who has suffered a severe brain injury and cannot afford rehabilitation. The free care is being offered as part of a nationwide scholarship program sponsored by the New Mexico Head Injury System.

Effects from a severe brain injury — everything from memory loss to personality change to physical impairment — can be devastating to both an individual and the individual's family. The financial burden of rehabilitation can be nearly as traumatic.

The scholarship recipient will take part in a rehabilitation program at the New Mexico Rehabilitation Center of Texas, located in Lindale, which specializes in the care and treatment of brain-injured individuals.

Interested candidates must submit an application by Aug. 15. To receive an application, call the New Mexico Head Injury System toll-free at 1-800-743-6847.

Applicants for the scholarship must be 5 years of age or older, medically stable, without severe behavioral problems, and willing to participate in an active rehabilitation program.

New Mexico Post-Acute Scholarships are intended for individuals with brain injury needing post-acute rehabilitation services such as community re-entry, vocational training, or behavioral management. Scholarship recipients are selected on the basis of need and potential for progress in rehabilitation.

The New Mexico Head Injury system is the nation's largest network of brain injury treatment programs, with more than 35 facilities across the country. New Mexico's goal is to help each person reach the highest possible level of independence.

Facilities offer a comprehensive rehabilitation program staffed by teams of top-level professionals, including physical, cognitive, occupational and speech therapists, psychologists and vocational specialists.

Little Things Make a Big Difference

Things like red wagons instead of wheelchairs, shrubbery shaped like animals, medical equipment tucked inside the walls and pre-surgery tours of the operating and recovery rooms to allay children's fears.

And some not so little things make a difference too. Things like an exceptional, dedicated medical staff. Specialized medical equipment sized and designed for children. And a Child Life Department that plans special activities and provides qualified in-hospital schooling.

At Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center, we pay attention to these extra little things because we know your child will. And after all, your child is the biggest little thing we care about.

JUGGLE: Intriguing skill is healthy too easy, most people are fascinated by the skill. "Everybody's tried it, right?" Pitts said. "We just tried it and kept on.

"I'm a firm believer that everybody needs to be able to do the basics. It's eye-hand coordination. It's difficult, but once you learn it you never loose it."

"I've told kids they can juggle and study math because math is in the patterns (made by the juggled objects). They can study the history of juggling, do a paper on juggling — it fits everything," Martin said.

"Juggling is good fitness," Pitts pointed out. "You drop the balls, you bend over to pick up the balls and that's a sit-up. You can have a good workout" by practicing juggling.

"It's endurance," added Martin.

Both Martin and Pitts enjoy other physical sports and activities, including soccer, tennis and running, and often the skills learned in those sports show up in their juggling. "I work out a lot," Pitts said, and one of the sports he enjoys is footback (hackysack). "I'm trying to incorporate footback in my juggling. You've heard of eye-hand coordination? That would be eye-foot coordination.

"It's very important that people know they have a right and a left — bodies need to be balanced. Juggling is relaxing for all ages.

"I think everybody is intrigued with juggling," said Pitts. "It's something different." Juggling also can help people build up their sense of self-esteem and their confidence, he said, because they learn a skill and can perform in front of an audience. "People just take off from there."

"Kids are always saying, 'Show me how to do that.'" Martin said.

Showing others "how to do that" is no problem for jugglers, he said. "There are no secrets in juggling." Other jugglers are "always willing to show you their tricks."

But in order for that to happen, more jugglers are needed. That's why Pitts would like to see a club for jugglers and prospective jugglers started in the area. "We could meet maybe once a month. It would be where people can start practicing. With more people juggling, there is more motivation."

Community's fate depends on a few 'educated noses'

COGNAC, France (AP) — The fate of this community, whose some 23,000 inhabitants mostly work at producing its world-renowned brandy, depends on a few people with "educated noses."

These are the highly respected master blenders, who oversee every step in the making and blending of cognac.

According to the Cognac Information Bureau, the master blender's job is to reproduce his brand's "signature taste" year after year. This involves tasting and sniffing hundreds of cognacs constantly maturing in barrels, as well as combinations of blends.

To keep their nose and palate in top condition, master blenders avoid things like garlic and pepper that would dull their sense of smell and taste.

They are also careful to avoid catching a cold.

Brian Rohlfing of St. Louis shows off his rubber chicken juggling technique at the International Jugglers Association 44th Annual Juggling Festival last week in St. Louis. About 1,000 jugglers met to exchange ideas, Indian clubs and rubber balls.

Jugglers share tricks of trade at international convention

By R.B. Fallstrom

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mantras and the lotus position are fine, but if you really want to relax and forget your troubles, try juggling.

That advice was heard more than once here as 1,000 of the nation's best jugglers gathered last week for a weeklong convention to discuss the fine points of keeping balls, bowling pins and flaming torches in the air.

"I highly recommend it," said Brian Rohlfing of St. Louis. "If I'm stressed-out or worried or whatever, I grab a couple of rings and it focuses my energy and my breathing gets better."

Michael Bruneau, a professional from Houston, said juggling definitely can be spiritual.

"At one point I was considering writing a book about Zen and the art of juggling, it's that sort of experience," he said.

At least one juggler disagrees.

"It's not relaxing for me," said 18-year-old Anthony Gatto of Las Vegas, who juggles 10 balls or eight clubs at a time in his casino show there. "When you get that many things going, it's not meditation. It's frustration."

Gatto took a break from the show to attend the International Jugglers Association's convention at Washington University.

The group began 47 years ago as a spinoff of the International Brotherhood of Magicians. It has 3,000 members in 21 countries. Association officials say about 1 million Americans do some juggling.

The convention's workshop topics included safety with torches, math and juggling, and five balls the easy way.

A representative from the Guinness Book of World Records was on hand to witness record attempts at esoteric events such as the 100-meter joggle (running while juggling).

Distance jogglers competed in the mile, 5-kilometer and mile relay. Obstacle course joggling was also scheduled.

The association's members include a team of jogglers who have run a mile relay in under four minutes and a joggler who ran a mile in 4:43 while keeping three balls going. Gatto can run the 100-meter dash in 13 seconds while juggling.

Those in the know call juggling "object manipulation" and there's almost no limit to the number of objects enterprising jugglers can manipulate, including cigar boxes, hats, plates — even rubber chickens.

Especially rubber chickens. These days it's more profitable to be a juggler with a shtick.

"Juggling to me is a vehicle to achieve belly laughter," said Dale Jones of suburban St. Louis, who claims to be the world's only professional one-handed juggler. "I do impressions and tricks, too."

Jones, 35, lost the use of his left arm in a childhood fall from a jungle gym. Using his right arm, head, legs and other body parts, he can juggle five balls at a time.

He hopes to hit the big time with an act in which he juggles and eats a head of lettuce. Not the kind of juggling Sunday night TV viewers are used to seeing.

"Ed Sullivan is gone. ... There are no more six-minute shows set to music," Jones said. "It's a good time."

Young plants need to have special care

By Deborah A. Benge

During the spring and summer, many new trees, shrubs and vines have been planted and need special attention. New plants are like infants or small children requiring frequent care. The most critical problem with newly moved plants is providing adequate water.

Benge

One way to conserve soil moisture is to use mulches. Many organic mulches like pine needles, oak leaves, shredded pine bark, gin trash, or even grass clippings can be placed on the soil surface from the trunk to at least the dripline. This layer should be about four-inches deep. Mulches create a barrier to inhibit weed growth, conserve soil moisture and insulate the soil to alter the rapid fluctuations of soil temperatures. Some raw organic mulches may cause the plants to turn temporarily yellow, but the addition of a little nitrogen can cure that.

Another unfortunate demise of new plants is caused by over fertilization. For this reason, gardeners are warned to not use a fertilizer on new trees and shrubs the first year. If you should use them, do so very conservatively and cease use after June 30. Young trees and shrubs have small limited root systems and a heavy dose of fertilizer can burn the root tissue to the point of death.

With all of the winds we get in West Texas, this is another hurdle that plants have to make. Harsh winds can actually blow some plants over and dessicate (dry out) the leaves or needles. One way to help your young friend stand up to the wind is with temporary windbreaks, especially on the southwest side of the plant. These temporary windbreaks can be constructed of burlap or row cover fabrics, shade cloth, landscape fabrics and 2x2's as the framework.

This is a generalization, but a deep watering once a week for the first year will get your plant off to a good start. During the second and third years after planting, the plant should still receive special attention when it comes to watering. If you have a automatic sprinkler system, you will still need to give these new plants some individual attention because sprinkler systems are designed for watering grass, not trees and shrubs.

Another practice that will help that new plant includes keeping the area around the plant clean, free of grass and weeds. Painting the southwest side of the trunk on thin barked trees will reduce sunscald and winter injury. If staking is necessary, be sure no part of the tree is bound or rigid. It is important that is able to sway in the wind to a certan degree. If you go on vacation, make arrangements for someone to water the tress and shrubs once a week while you are gone.

Life support choices studied

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Most people with relatives suffering from irreversible comas visit them at least several times a week and wouldn't end life support, a study concluded.

Medical College of Wisconsin researchers said their findings give insight to the way people cope with relatives in persistent vegetative states and will contribute to the debate over a patient's right to die. About 10,000 people in the United State are in persistent vegetative states, a coma-like condition caused by severe brain damage.

The study, completed less than a year after the U.S. Supreme Court's first right-to-die decision, that 29 of the 33 relatives said they agreed with the initial decision to use life support and 25 said they would not remove feeding tubes even knowing there was little chance for recovery, according to the study reported in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society.

Only eight, however, said they wanted their relatives to be revived if they're heart stopped.

"I think that they're realistic in the sense that they have insight into the problem," said Dr. Edmund Duthie, one of four researchers to participate in the study. "But they stay devoted, believe that they have to visit the patients and want to keep up the care." Duthie is chief of geriatrics and gerontology at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Milwaukee.

The study was released shortly after the death last December of Nancy Cruzan, the Missouri woman who became the central figure in the Supreme Court case. The court ruled her life-support systems could be removed only if there was "clear and convincing evidence" that she wanted to die.

A judge granted her parents' request in November to remove feeding tubes after hearing testimony that Ms. Cruzan told friends she would never want to live "like a vegetable."

The study surveyed relatives of patients ages 19 to 95 at four nursing homes.

Scientists study deadly flashes

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — More than 200 years after Benjamin Franklin flew a kite during a thunderstorm to prove lightning is electricity, little still is known about how the charge is generated.

Scientists and engineers from 25 universities recently opened a six-week study in hopes of being able to better predict the deadly flashes.

The researchers will use airplanes, radar and thermodynamic balloons to study thunderstorms, their electric fields, storm evolution and rainfall.

Most of the scientists will work out of the National Weather Service station in Melbourne on the east coast and in airplanes or on the ground across the state to the Tampa Bay area.

Central Florida was selected because of its intense thunderstorm activity, spawned by high humidity and coastal breezes, said physicist Rodney Bent, president of Atmospheric Research Systems in Palm Bay, which monitors lightning activity around the nation.

NASA's concerns are similar. Lightning poses one of the biggest threats to space shuttle launches and landings at Kennedy Space Center.

"That's why so much of the research is being done here," said NASA spokesman George Diller. "We can put lightning in a bottle, so to speak, and create a laboratory environment."

Sharing bed can be real test of marriage

By Patricia Carr
N.Y. Times News Service

James Pate is ready to sleep when his head hits the pillow at 11 p.m. His wife, Maryann, plumps her pillow and settles in with a book. Without a bed partner, she says she would "probably read until 2 or 3 in the morning."

So the Atlanta newlyweds compromise. "I turn the lights off at midnight," says Mrs. Pate. "I'll go out in the other room if I'm going to keep on reading."

But differing sleep styles aren't always so easily put to rest. For many people, sleeping two on a mattress makes the bed a battlefield. Pillow talk turns into a tug of war: a room too hot or too cold; a mattress too hard or too soft.

Take cover. The sleep wars are on.

For the Pates, the clash is wake-up time. Pate gets up at 6 a.m.; his wife rises at 8.

"My last two hours in bed are not too restful," says Mrs. Pate.

Especially on mornings when Pate, who generally wakes up before the alarm clock rings, sleeps a little later. Then they're roused by "the Alarm Clock of Doom" — a 5-year-old Kmart special, windup-style.

"Then we both jump awake," Mrs. Pate says. "It's quite loud; very wicked."

Although for many the sleep wars are merely minor skirmishes, for some they escalate into major marital woes.

"A woman brought her husband in," says Alan Lankford of the Sleep Disorders Center of Georgia, "and she said, 'I have moved out of the bedroom into the guest room, out of the guest room into the basement, and his snoring still keeps me awake. So you fix him. And if you can't, I've got a bed made up for him out in the tool shed.'"

Often, how people adapt to each other's sleep habits reflects the marriage, says Russell Rosenberg, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Atlanta's Northside Hospital.

Health problems that often accompany sleep disorders also strain marital relationships.

"People with sleep disorders," Dr. Lankford says, "end up with all kinds of daytime effects — chronic sleep deprivation, depression, anxiety, problems with memory and concentration, a variety of cognitive effects. Those can all have a deleterious effect on a person's relationships."

But at nighttime, it's the spouse who suffers. Take snoring.

Researchers have recorded snorers catching Z's at 90 decibels, according to the Better Sleep Council, an industry group. That's louder than a vacuum cleaner but quieter than a circular saw.

More men than women snore, experts for the sleep council say. Compounding the problem, women are lighter sleepers, they add.

For some women, like Marian Dodge of north Atlanta, snoring becomes a "white noise" — one that masks other sounds — and the lack of it registers loud and clear.

"His snoring didn't keep me awake," says Mrs. Dodge, whose husband, William, was diagnosed with sleep apnea, a disorder characterized by loud snoring in which the sleeper periodically stops breathing.

"I'd wake up when he'd stop snoring. The silence would wake me up, and the gasping would wake me up. He never knew he was doing it. It was terrifying to listen to."

Even healthy couples can disturb each other. A normal sleeper moves 40 to 60 times a night, including several full-body turns, according to sleep council statistics.

Separate beds may seem like a solution, but lots of couples and many experts won't give it blanket endorsement.

"When people get married, they think they've got to sleep in the same bed," says Dr. Rosenberg. "And that's what they intend to do, regardless."

He calls the notion that people sleep better alone "more mythical than anything else."

Dr. Lankford agrees that sleeping solo or double is an individual matter.

"It also can be experience," he says. "Some people may have difficulty sleeping with someone else at first. And then after they've adjusted, their spouse could go on a trip, and they don't sleep so well."

Sleeping well often requires more than just adjusting to the partner's bedtime habits.

Ah, the stuff of sweet dreams.

Heart medication control needed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Groups representing Pennsylvania's nurses and pharmacists are seeking stricter controls on the storage of syringes containing concentrated doses of the heart medication lidocaine.

The Pennsylvania Nurses Association and the Pennsylvania Society of Hospital Pharmacists urged hospitals to remove concentrated doses of the medication from patient-care areas to prevent accidental deaths.

Patients have died after receiving direct injections of the concentrated lidocaine.

The nurses and druggists also said they would ask the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to remove the syringes from the market.

Lidocaine is used to treat irregular heart rhythms. Prepackaged syringes of the drug are available in diluted form for direct injection and in concentrated form for dilution in an intravenous solution.

The concentrated form can cause heart failure, as it did in the case of a man who died last year in a suburban Pittsburgh hospital.

William Ellis, executive director of the pharmacists group, said at least 43 overdoses had been reported to the FDA in the last 12 years.

Sue Notman's 11-year-old granddaughter, Deanie Notman, holds a miniature horse colt on the living room couch recently at her grandmother's home near Aitkin, Minn., where Bert and Sue Notman raise the horses.

Breeder says miniature horses behave 'like gentle puppies'

By Jeff Maloney

BRAINERD, Minn. (AP) — Things are a little different at the Notman home near Aitkin. For instance, the cat lives in the barn and it's not unheard of for the horses to be in the house.

No, the miniature horses raised by Sue Notman don't live in the house, but with the tallest ones right around three feet in height, there's nothing stopping them from coming in and having a look around.

"They're more like dogs than horses," said Sue, who along with her husband Bert, raises the tiny critters at her home on Elm Island Lake south of Aitkin. "Horses can be unpredictable, but these are more like gentle puppies. They seem to take naturally to people."

Notman has 18 head of the diminutive horses in and around the big red barn that dominates her property. One more foal is expected this summer.

She's been raising them for four years, since Bert, who sells telephone directory advertising, moved the family out of the Twin Cities four years ago. Their horse-raising business goes by the name Fantasia Farm.

Many of Notmans' customers buy one horse and soon are back for more. Sue said she knew from the beginning she wanted to be a professional breeder. She found a small herd for sale in Texas and was soon bringing her seven mares and one stallion back from the Lone Star State.

"We fit the whole herd in a two-horse trailer," she laughed. "A lot of people who buy horses here just put them in the back seat when they leave."

Notman explained that there are two classes of miniature horses, A and B. The smallest, and most expensive, are Class A, which must measure 34 inches or less at maturity, measured at the shoulder from the last hair on the mane.

Class B horses are over 34 inches, but less than 28 inches. It's customary to match a Class B mare with a Class A stallion in hopes of producing a Class A offspring.

But there are no guarantees, Notman said, pointing out that so far this year all her foals have been colts (males) and tall enough at birth to indicate that they will probably exceed the Class A limit of 34 inches. Miniatures usually grow about a foot by the time they're three.

So, she said, the new colts won't draw the high price a smaller stallion or Class B mare would draw, but they'll still make good pets.

In general, prices at the Notman farm start at about $500 for a Class B stallion and can reach as high as $3,500 for the tiniest specimens. The best horses in the class have traded for more than $100,000, Notman said.

Because of their high prices, the Class A horses are often owned by wealthy people who are involved in horse showing and breeding. The B Class is more affordable and starting to develop its own following of breeders and showers who are on a tighter budget.

But you don't have to be a breeder to enjoy the animals, Notman said. They make excellent pets and are easy to care for, not to mention quite a bit cheaper to feed than normal sized horses.

"They take a flake of hay a day and a couple of handfuls of oats," she said. "We feed 18 on two bales a day."

Deciphering 'pesticide-free' produce labels can be confusing

Associated Press

A sign in the supermarket over the fresh broccoli says "No detected pesticide residues." Does that mean the store sells safer produce than the market down the street? Usually not, reports Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

The sign simply indicates that a private testing firm checks the store's fresh produce for certain pesticide residues. Such a sign at the point of purchase, over the broccoli, for instance, says that no excessive residues were detected in that lot.

Supermarkets began testing for pesticides several years ago to reassure their jittery produce customers. The majority of these retailers are in California. They claim that private testing by such companies as NutriClean is a safe backup to government testing.

Some growers, shippers, and processors view this testing as a self-assessment tool. They use it to ensure that their produce meets approved government standards.

Opponents of private residue testing say that such testing simply becomes a marketing ploy because it lacks uniform regulation and the comprehensive standards of government programs. However, recent federal legislation requires that testing labs be accredited.

How safe is food? Although consumers worry about pesticides in food, violations appear to be rare.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently reported that 99 percent of U.S. grown produce and 96 percent of imported products tested in 1989 either showed no pesticide residues or found residues well within government limits. These limits, set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and monitored by the FDA, provide a 100- to 1,000-fold safety margin.

At home, take these steps to eliminate possible surface residues:

- Thoroughly rinse fruits and vegetables under cold running water, scrubbing with a stiff brush when possible.
- Peel away or discard outer leaves, skin, and rinds.
- Do not wash produce in soap of any kind; the soap may contain chemicals that have not been approved for human consumption.

Dreams part of healing process, expert believes

By Lori Moody
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — For Patricia Garfield, an uninterpreted dream is a missed opportunity to better live our waking moments.

"I think every dream has that potential for the dreamer, a message from which we can get valuable information to help our waking life," said Garfield, author of "The Healing Power of Dreams," (Simon & Schuster; $21.95).

Garfield, one of the co-founders of the Association for the Study of Dreams, has spent several years delving into the mystery of dreams, what they mean and how people can use the images that arrive in their sleep.

"It's a universal experience and one that is not fully understood," said Garfield, who recently moved from San Francisco to Eugene, Ore. "It has that sort of mystery and strangeness that you can't just make sense of it right off the top.

"Yet, if you delve into it, you discover there's something really powerful there. The symbolism is fascinating. Part of the appeal is it shows you the tremendous creative energy of the mind."

Milton Wolpin, a clinical psychologist and former USC staff member, said Garfield is one of the leading authors on the subject of dreams.

"I think she's on the forefront of what's happening," Wolpin said.

'I think every dream has that potential for the dreamer, a message from which we can get valuable information to help our waking life.'

— Patricia Garfield
author of "The Healing Power of Dreams"

WHILE POSITIVE imagery during the waking state has been shown to help people overcome fears, the same may be possible with dreams, said Wolpin, who is researching lucid dreams, in which people are aware that they are dreaming.

"Also, learning skills may be possible," he said.

Garfield, 57, first began recording her dreams as a 14-year-old when she heard her mother talk about the works of Austrian psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud and Carl Jung, the Swiss psychiatrist.

"I found that by associating to the key images in the dream I could begin to make sense of some of the feelings that I was having as a teen-ager," Garfield said.

When she went to college to study psychology, it was not with dreams in mind. She received her doctorate from Temple University and began teaching.

Meanwhile, Garfield moved to London with her second husband in the early 1970s and traveled with him. During their treks, Garfield interviewed people about how dreams were used in their culture.

"By the time I came back to the States, I had this wealth of information about dreams," she said.

She began teaching a course on dreams, which became the chapters of her first book, "Creative Dreaming" published in 1974. It became a best seller.

The book's success prompted Garfield to give up teaching and concentrate on writing. One book, "Pathway to Ecstasy: The Way of the Dream Mandala," contained Japanese brush paintings of dream images. Another one, "Your Child's Dreams," looked at common dream themes and typical nightmares.

HER NEW book, a nearly three-year effort, resulted after Garfield broke her left wrist in a fall. The injury initially was diagnosed by a doctor as a sprain, she said.

The break was not diagnosed until 2½ weeks later, and then surgery was performed.

During months of therapy, Garfield said she met people with severe injuries. One man had his arm reattached after it was torn off when an electrical tower collapsed. Another had his arm muscles slashed to ribbons in a gang attack. One woman was injured by her boyfriend with a cleaver.

"There were people who had been through the most awful things," Garfield said. "They were having incredible nightmares."

Garfield said she too was having bad dreams.

"It was like a post-traumatic-stress dream," she said. "People in my dreams were always failing those first two weeks. These are efforts of the brain to deal with the unacceptable. It sort of repeats and repeats in various forms."

The dreams are part of the healing process, she said.

People can be deprived of dreams in the hospital because they sleep poorly or are affected by painkillers.

"If you've been deprived of dreaming, then it's going to come back with tripled or more intensity and very, very vivid REM (rapid eye movement)," Garfield said. "The eye movements are very intense and it's almost always nightmarish in quality."

AFTER INTERVIEWING people who had undergone emotional stress from injuries, Garfield found that the dreams followed a natural pattern. First people replayed the equivalent or worse of the actual incident. The dream then turned into positive imagery, Garfield said.

"By becoming an active participant within the dream, you can then help accelerate your own healing, I believe," she said. "There's always an image within the worst dreams that you can use to refocus what's happening."

Garfield said she is not suggesting people substitute dream imagery for medical care, but instead use visualization as a supplement to treatment.

DEAR ABBY

Readers respond: Regular mammograms can save women's lives

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: The letter from the woman who felt a lump in her breast but was afraid to go to the doctor prompted a deluge of mail. Some typical letters:

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I lost my mother and three sisters to cancer, so I can sympathize with "Scared to Death," who felt a lump in her breast and was afraid to get a mammogram.

I join you, Abby, in urging all women — even those without lumps — to get mammograms regularly. They can save your life. Please tell your readers that any woman can get breast cancer whether it's in her family or not; 80 percent of the women who get breast cancer do NOT have it in their family.

A mammogram can detect breast cancer two years before a woman or her doctor can feel a lump. All women should have regular mammograms beginning at age 40 — particularly women of color because they are more likely to die because they didn't catch it early enough.

I urge all my sisters, black or white, to educate themselves about this scary but treatable disease. For more information, your readers can dial 1-800-4-CANCER. — PATTI LABELLE

DEAR ABBY: In 1977, when I discovered a lump in my breast, I was terrified! Nevertheless, I made an appointment to see my doctor, and a week after my "positive" biopsy, I had a modified radical mastectomy. I was devastated and depressed.

The third day after my surgery, a lovely, cheerful lady showed up in my hospital room and asked me if I had ever heard of "Reach to Recovery." I told her I had not. Then she went on to explain that my surgeon had contacted the American Cancer Society and requested that a volunteer from that organization pay me a visit.

This encouraging woman told me that she, too, had had a mastectomy. She gave me some exercises to do, and also gave me a "rest bra" and a temporary prosthesis. But the best thing she gave me was hope and assurance that I was still the same woman I had been before the surgery.

Since that time, I have become a volunteer in the Reach to Recovery program and have enjoyed the rewards of helping many other women who were as heartbroken and depressed as I had been before Reach to Recovery reached out to me. — BARBARA J. MYHRE, BANDERA, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: Like "Scared to Death," I felt a lump in my breast. Unlike her, I immediately saw my doctor. Even though it was cancer, I was one of the lucky ones because I sought early diagnosis and treatment and I am alive today to talk about it.

"Scared to Death" is afraid of how her husband would feel about her following a mastectomy. I had the same fears, but throughout my ordeal, my husband was my biggest supporter and my best friend. If anything, the situation brought us closer together. He says he loves me for me, not for my body parts.

I am thankful to have made it and I would love to tell the world that I am extremely proud of my supportive husband. If you use my letter, feel free to use my real name. — JAN NICHOLS, CARLETON, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: I had just returned home from a routine mammogram when I read the letter from "Scared to Death." I watched my own mother's painful battle with breast cancer (both breasts). However, she won that battle and came away with a beautiful reconstruction job. Now she jokes about having firm breasts in her 60s! Two of my aunts and my grandmother had mastectomies, and none of their husbands left them. In fact, they outlived their husbands! — A SURVIVOR IN COLORADO

Pyramids of Cheops' queens opening to visitors

By Mimi Mann

GIZA PLATEAU, Egypt (AP) — The three queens of Pharaoh Cheops, whose squat pyramids nestle at the foot of his awesome one, finally are being rescued from obscurity.

Their tombs are just a few feet from the Great Pyramid, but have been virtually ignored for 4,500 years.

That will change this fall. The Egyptian Antiquities Organization is making the three burial places focal points of an open-air museum on the eastern side of the Great Pyramid.

It is intended to re-create the aura of ancient times. Vehicles will be banned. Tourists will walk among the monuments, many newly dug from desert sand that covered them for most of this century.

THE QUEENS' pyramids are among many tombs and other monuments being opened to the public for the first time. Antiquities officials hope offering tourists new things to see on the Giza Plateau and elsewhere will keep them in Egypt longer.

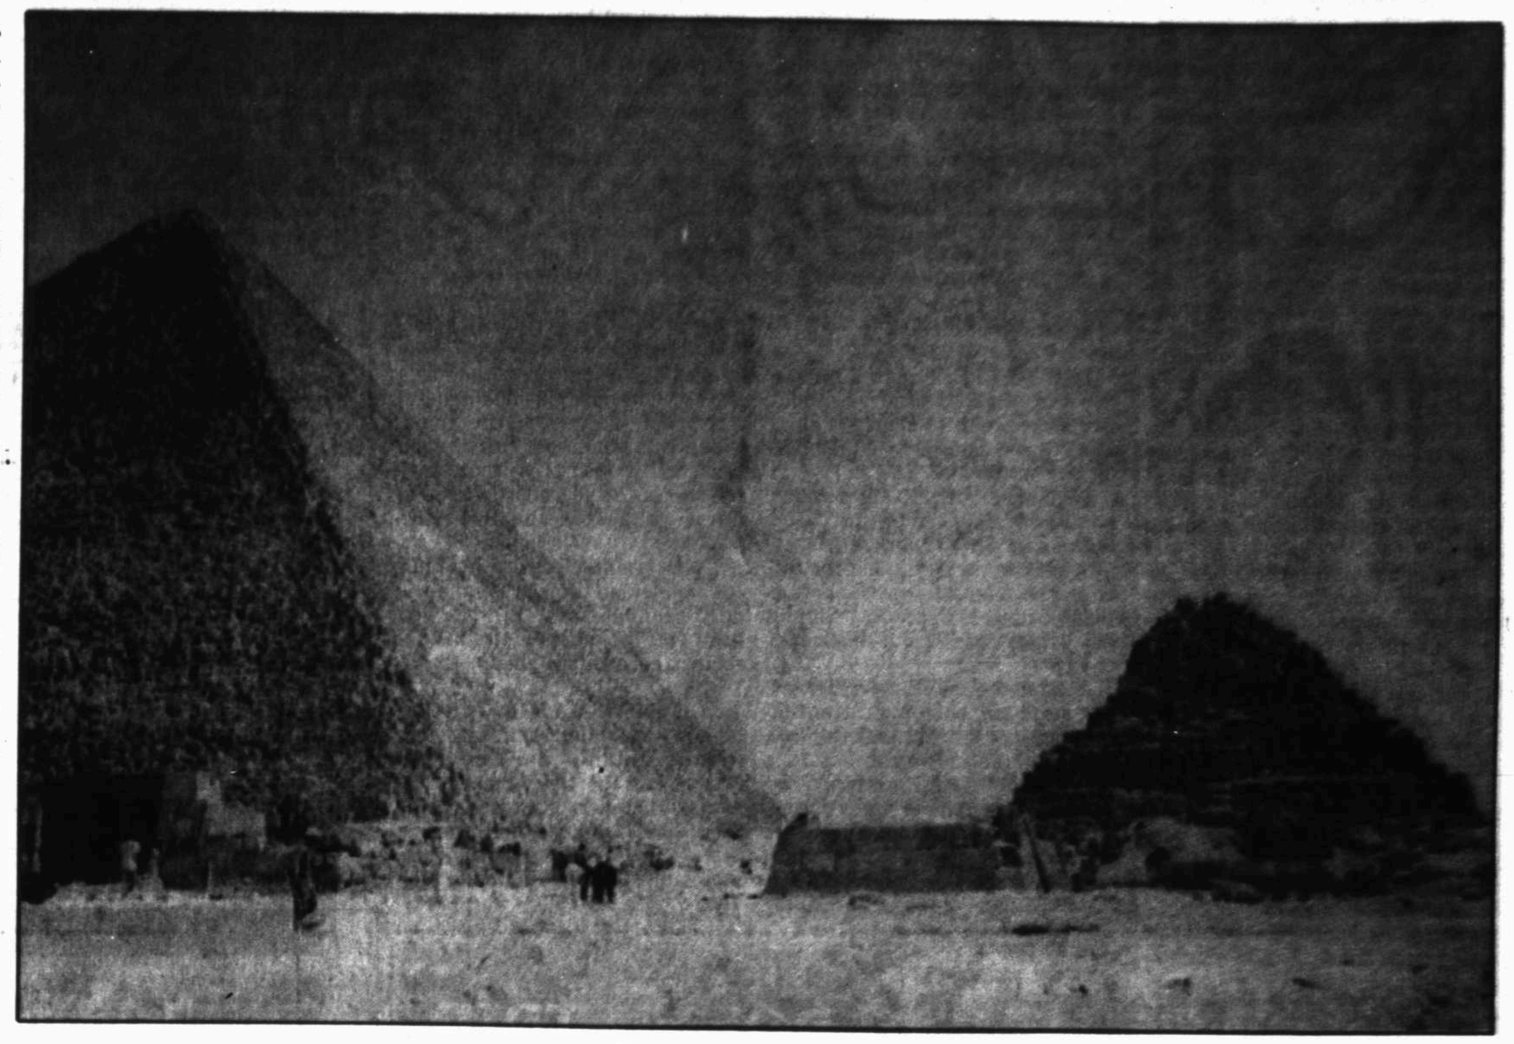
Zahi Hawass, antiquities chief of the pyramids area, watched as a visitor clung to a rope and descended a darkened slope into the burial chamber of one of Cheops' queens.

"What an adventure!" he said. "It won't be that scary. We'll have a wooden ladder by the time the pyramid opens. And lights. But it's something special."

Excavators and Egyptologists hope to meet an Oct. 1 deadline for the opening, in time for the expected first rush of tourists since the Persian Gulf crisis devasted the tourism industry.

More than 90 of Egypt's pyramids have been identified. "A number belonged to queens, but we've never thought to open them before," Hawass said.

A visit to a queen's pyramid would appeal to tourists too weary or afraid to make the winding, difficult journey through and up the Cheops pyramid, whose base covers 13 acres.



AP Laserphoto

For 4,500 years the pyramids of Pharaoh Cheops' three wives have been overshadowed by their husband's massive Great Pyramid, left. They're leaving his shadow this fall when they will be restored as focal points of an outdoor museum designed to recreate the aura of ancient Egypt. The pyramid on the right is attributed to Cheops' third queen, Meritites.

The standard Cheops tour takes about an hour. A visit to a queen's pyramid can be managed in five minutes, up and down.

CHEOPS' QUEENS remain as mysterious as their Pharaoh. Historians have few facts, but queens of ancient Egypt held great power, particularly those with family connections to the Pharaoh, and the court of Cheops provided a wealth of intrigues.

A century after the pyramids were built, gossips were conjuring up lurid tales of bad king Cheops, his naughty wives and their shenanigans.

In time, history and legend became so intermingled that nobody knows for sure the names of the queens or which was buried where.

Some Egyptologists believe the queens weren't even buried in the three tombs, which were robbed in antiquity. The pyramids had disintegrated to little more than piles of rubble and workers are repairing them for the debut.

The first pyramid is thought to be that of the favorite queen, Meritites, who might have been the Pharaoh's half-sister. Storytellers said the second belonged to a queen who turned to prostitution to pay for its stones. The third is attributed to Queen Henutsen, perhaps another half-sister of Cheops.

One queen is said to have been blonde and of Libyan origin.

Hawass believes the third pyramid actually belonged to Cheops' mother, Hetepheres.

"Later, when trouble came, priests dug her up, her things with her, for reburial in a safer place," he said, pointing to the door at the top of the steep entryway to the burial chamber.

A 1925 EXPEDITION from Harvard University and the Boston Museum found Hetepheres' valuables at the bottom of a shaft nearby.

Her furniture and personal items are displayed in the Cairo Museum. The shaft where they were found is among the sites being opened.

Retreats offer spirituality with bed and breakfast

By Molly O'Neill
N.Y. Times News Service

You say you've had your European tour, your Caribbean cruise, your Club Med, your spa. You say you've bed-and-breakfasted New England, barged through Burgundy, hiked the Rockies. And now, you say, after years of traveling, your Lewis and Clark response to summer vacation is interrupted by recurring visions of Walden Pond.

Oh, my friend, you are not alone!

Thousands of Americans are packing for a different kind of journey this summer. Destination: a higher spiritual plane. Guest rooms in abbeys, convents and monasteries across the country are tightly booked.

"It's gotten to the point we can't handle the number of requests for individual retreatants," said Don George, director of La Casa de Maria, a Roman Catholic retreat in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Jangling reservation lines are piercing the silence of an austere Zen monastery in the Catskills, at a Trappist monastery in Colorado, at an Episcopal monastery perched on the Hudson River. Hyatt, Holiday Inns and the rest aren't exactly sweating the competition.

There are fewer than 2,000 guest rooms in monasteries across the country, as against 3.1 million hotel and motel rooms, according to Lodging Industry Profile, a publication of the American Hotel and Motel Association.

But travel experts say that monasteries now have a lower vacancy rate than hotels.

"EVERYBODY IS posing Camus-type questions," said Dena Kaye, whose cable television program, "A Sense of Place With Dena Kaye," is broadcast daily on the Travel Channel.

"It depends," she said, "on whether you want to think it out on a superyacht or someplace a little simpler."

Most monasteries offer tidy, quiet rooms, three home-cooked meals a day and all the spirituality you want for about $50 a day.

Some have such secular pleasures as tennis courts or swimming pools. But most appeal to the spirit more than the senses, offering austere tranquillity.

"Every time there is a crisis, we fill up," said George, who retired from a lucrative business career to volunteer at La Casa de Maria.

"There is a pretty close parallel between Las Vegas and retreat centers. People know there is something wrong. They need to get away. They need hope."

Of course, religion in the summertime is nothing new. Church retreats, tent revivals and religious camps are as much a part of the nation's landscape as amber waves of grain. But the new hospitable monasteries eschew evangelism in favor of solitude and scenery.

There are about 600 small monasteries in the United States with guest rooms. Some are training grounds for the newly frocked, while others house retired clerics or religious communities. A handful of modern refuges were once grand homes that are now dedicated to hospitality.

"THESE AREN'T preachy places," said Marcia Kelly, who, with her husband, Jack, has written "Sanctuaries" (Bell Tower, 1991), a guide to lodging in monasteries in the Northeast. "They are time out from a driven, aggressive world."

The book — which began with a serendipitous stop — is becoming the Michelin guide of the retreat set.

"We were visiting a friend at Big Sur and fell for a monastery there," said Kelly, who calls himself a "retired Catholic" (his wife is Jewish).

The sojourn set the couple monastery-hopping, and they have now visited more than 200 retreats.

Some offer solace in their setting. The Carmelite House of Prayer in Oakville, Calif., a former family mansion with 11 guest rooms, sprawls between the terraced ripples of the Napa Valley.

"I come up here to hear myself think," said Jason Erlicsohn, a 37-year-old banker from San Francisco.

From his spartan room he can also hear water that dances from a Versailles-like fountain in the monastery's backyard, the gentle clang from the belfry, the chirp of sparrows.

"I used to go over to the health spa when I got stressed out," he said. "Now I just sit here and listen. I end up in better shape after a weekend."

'These aren't preachy places. They are time out from a driven, aggressive world.'

— Marcia Kelly
co-author for Sanctuaries

OTHER RETREATS do their soothing through a stubborn connection to bygones. The contrast of modern, secular life with ancient, contemplative ways is clear as one steers along the Tokenekee Trail to the Convent of St. Birgitta in Darien, Conn. The road weaves through a land of tennis courts and horses, of designer weekend wear and $2,000 weekday commuter garb. Nearing the convent, time loops back.

Gray robes flapping, black veils billowing under starched white crowns, the Sisters of St. Birgitta look like Beguines welcoming returning crusaders as they run to greet arriving cars.

In addition to taking vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, the nuns pledge themselves to "hospitality as an ecumenical effort," said Sister Dolores, mother superior of the convent. Along with seven other sisters, her days begin at 6:15 a.m. with community prayers.

For guests who haven't risen for early prayers, the day begins around 8 with breakfast: steaming bowls of cereal, eggs cooked to order, homemade muffins, waffles, a compote of fresh fruit and an elegant, never-empty silver coffee urn.

The 16 guests gather around the formal dining table and are served as if in a home of the butlered gentry.

"I feel well cared for," said Julia Macbeth, a retired librarian who lives in Brooklyn and says she has visited the convent for weekends and vacations for 10 years. "The sisters can't do enough for you."

Between cooking and serving, polishing the convent's museum-quality furniture and tending the nine acres of grounds, the nuns gather to sing prayers in the convent's chapel.

Guest attendance is optional. But after several days of quiet attention and home-cooked meals, even the least inclined are drawn from their reading or from walks along Long Island Sound to the lilting chants.

"After a few visits you start to hear a calling," Miss Macbeth said.

ANOTHER CLARION call for inner peace is sounded at Holy Cross Monastery, a rambling red-brick mansion perched on a grand knoll in West Park, N.Y., overlooking the Hudson.

"People are soothed by living in harmony with an ongoing religious order," said Brother Timothy, prior of the Episcopal monastery, which has 39 guest rooms.

Noting that except for honoring "the Great Silence," from 9 p.m. to 8:15 a.m. daily, participation in all religious service is optional, he said.

"If guests hear a calling, it is the part of themselves that modern society has forgotten."

In contrast, guests can't help hearing the call at Dai Bosatsu Zendo, a Zen monastery that looks like a relocated chunk of traditional Japan at the end of a 10-mile dirt road outside Livingston Manor, N.Y., in the Catskills.

Other than the gentle brush of bare feet against the monastery's well-polished wood floors, often the only sound heard is the gong that announces the chanting and meditation sessions or a meal. Joining in is not mandatory, but it is the rare camper who chooses the comfort of his futon over participation.

"Sitting," a kneel-squat position that is assumed for two to four hours of meditation, is the central activity for guests. Some of the best sitters, like Junpol Dennis Kelly, vice abbot of the Catskill monastery, study yoga to develop endurance for sitting; he urges the newly initiate to "stay with the uncomfortableness" as a means of transcendence.

A CRICK IN the knee, a strain in the back, the frustration of chopsticks ferreting a lentil stew from a lacquer bowl — these eventually conquer the anxiety of the type-A existence that most visitors are retreating from.

"Sometimes it's the foreignness of what we do that allows Americans to get past their distrust of organized religion," said Kelly, who greets about 4,000 guests a year. "That opens the door for inner peace and true relaxation."

For some retreats, the public quest opens the door for fiscal growth as well.

"A lay person left us this mansion and we need to take in more guests to support it," said the Rev. David Costell, standing in the grand foyer at the Carmelite House of Prayer under the scaffolding that he and three other priests are using to repair a leaking roof and peeling paint.

Throughout Europe, insolvent monasteries are often turned into luxury hotels.

The prestigious Relais & Chateaux group has half a dozen former monasteries in France. Rina Annousi, president of the Travel Business in New York City, represents four plush former monasteries in Spain and several in Italy.

"In Europe, the most sophisticated traveler who wants expensive luxury with character might ask for room in an old monastery," she said. "The people who call about American monasteries usually have free tickets from frequent flier."

JACK KELLY SAYS that he's met "stock brokers, bank executives, school teachers and social workers in monasteries."

Most are looking for the same thing: "They are trying to get past the coat-and-tie-on-Sunday mentality and to bring a spiritual element back to their daily lives," he said. The Kellys are working on a second volume about monasteries in the West and Southwest.

WE Fest is country-western Woodstock designed for RVers

By William E. Schmidt
N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT LAKES, Minn. — On most summer evenings, the only sounds carrying across the shallow lakes of northwestern Minnesota are the whine and sputter of outboard motors, as anglers set out through the twilight, trolling for pike and walleye.

But for three days beginning Aug. 2 in Detroit Lakes, Minn., the hazy northern nights here will be broken broken by other, less familiar, sounds: the distant riff of amplified guitars and the muffled bass backbeat of drums, drifting clearly through the woods and over the windless surfaces of lakes.

Since 1983, this little tourist crossroads 60 miles east of the North Dakota border has become the site of what is called WE Fest, one of the nation's largest outdoor camping and country and western music festivals.

The 271-acre Soo Pass Ranch, which is usually the site of riding stables, a restaurant and bar, will be turned into a kind of country and western Woodstock, a temporary community of some 25,000 raucous adults who gather around tents and motor homes in six relatively primitive campgrounds to drink beer, cook hamburgers, swap stories and savor some 36 hours of nearly nonstop music from more than 25 groups, including big-name acts like Kenny Rogers, Reba McEntire and George Strait, all of whom are scheduled to appear this year.

THE FESTIVAL is the creation of Jeff Krueger, a former rock and roll promoter from Minneapolis and a veteran of Woodstock, the 1969 outdoor concert that drew 300,000 to a farm in upstate New York.

Along the way, the visitors will snarl traffic hopelessly on local roads and cause gridlock at supermarkets and liquor outlets. They will get sunburned when they are not being drenched by afternoon thunderstorms.

But for most of the audience, a large proportion of whom are middle-aged and well-behaved, the event will mark the high point of the summer, a kind of annual celebration of friends and family, marked in time to the rhythms rolling off the stage.

More than 80 percent of those surveyed at last summer's festival said they had been to a WE Fest before. And while some campers come from as far away as Texas, Canada and California, the overwhelming majority are residents of the Upper Middle West: Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

The WE in WE Fest represents nothing more than its ordinary usage as the first person plural pronoun, a formulation intended to suggest that the event is as much about the audience as it is about the performers.

FOR THE MOST part, the crowd is adult, and the festival's own promotional literature gently tries to discourage people from bringing their children.

"There are large crowds day and night, alcoholic beverages are sold on site and there are no activities strictly for children," advises one bit of published material. The point is indirectly reinforced a few paragraphs later, in a blunt reminder that anyone caught carrying or brandishing weapons will be immediately ejected.

In 1983, sensing there was now more profit to be made off country and western than rock, in a mostly rural region of the country where nearly every small town has its own country AM radio station, Krueger, the organizer, assembled a group of investors and hit paydirt on his first try: he landed Alabama, one of the hottest groups in the nation, to headline the original WE Fest.

Attendance has continued to grow since, and the large and enthusiastic audiences at what Krueger and his own partners now refer to internally as their Cornstock, have guaranteed an all-star lineup every time.

Last year, for example, when the festival drew a record one-night crowd of 40,000, the headliners included Randy Travis, Barbara Mandrell and Dolly Parton, who appeared with a 100-member chorale assembled from local churches.

The choir joined Ms. Parton in the concert finale, a stirring rendition of the recent gospel song, "He's Alive."

The performers at WE Fest appear on a large stage facing a broad, dusty hillside, on which fans set up lawn chairs and settle in for some 12 hours a day of nonstop music. The best views of the stage go not only to those who get there earliest, but to the fleetest among them.

For Detroit Lakes, a town whose wintertime population of about 7,000 swells to some 21,000 on warm summer weekends, the WE Fest has been a major boon to business, pumping millions of dollars into the local economy.

It has also added a whole new element to a tourist trade that, until recently, relied primarily on the loyalties of fishermen and the vacation dollars of Midwestern families, drawn to one of the largest concentrations of water slides, fast food outlets and kiddie parks between Minneapolis and Billings, Mont.

Local merchants are among the festival's most enthusiastic backers, and sponsors line up for a listing in the local WE Fest program, a roster that not only includes the usual group of local restaurants and motels, but the town's optometrist and well driller.

THE WE FEST site is on the Soo Pass Ranch, which is about two miles south of Detroit Lakes, Minn. It is reachable by either U.S. 59 or county road 22.

Beginning Aug. 1, a three-day admission ticket can be purchased at the gate for $50. Before Aug. 1, a ticket can be purchased for $45 from merchants and participating ticket outlets in Minnesota. Single-day tickets cost $20. Parking is $3 a day.

A limited number of reserved box seats immediately in front of the stage are also available, at $300 each, for the entire three days.

Permits to hook up campers or pitch tents at campgrounds on the site cost $50 to $75, depending on the campground, and are good for the duration of the festival. Campgrounds open at noon on Thursday, Aug. 1, and close at noon on Monday, Aug. 5. Sites are usually available right up to the beginning of the festival, according to its organizer, but reservations are recommended.

In addition, limited camping spaces are available in a VIP area immediately behind the main stage, for $200 for the duration of the festival, including electrical hookups.

Like the music area, where there is no protection from the weather and the only toilets are portables, most of the surrounding campgrounds are pretty basic. About 500 campsites bordering nearby Lake Sallie are served by a shower house and a small general store, but the rest of the campgrounds is Minnesota rustic: open fields or wooded areas that serve the rest of the year mostly as open horse range for the Soo Pass Ranch.

There are no electrical hookups for campers in these areas and the only running water is what you draw off a pumper truck that roams the campgrounds.

FOR INFORMATION on other lodging, including campsites and motels outside the Soo Pass Ranch, call the Detroit Lakes Regional Chamber of Commerce at (800) 542-3992. For further information on the WE Fest itself, including campsite reservations, telephone (218) 847-1340.

Summer activities planned in honor of 75th anniversary

Staff Report

Several special activities are planned at Carlsbad Caverns National Park through Aug. 25 in connection with the 75th anniverary of the National Park Service.

Special events which will be going on the remainder of July and through Aug. 25 include a daily showing of a half-hour video produced for the 75th anniversary entitled "National Parks: An American Legacy," plus a variety of other interpretive activities each afternoon. While activities will vary from day to day, among those planned are climbing demonstrations, slide shows and wild caving trips. Specific information about each day's events can be obtained by calling (505) 785-2232. Service clubs and organizations in the immediate area wishing off-site programs for meetings can also request them by calling the park's interpretive division at the same number. The park's bat flight breakfast scheduled for Aug. 8 will emphasize the anniversary, and an exhibit of historic photos is also planned beginning Aug. 14.

The weekend of Aug. 24-25, fees for touring the Cavern will be waived, and special tours are planned. According to park superintendent Wallace Elms, the tours will include an old-time "historical" tour of the Cavern's main corridor between the natural entrance and the underground lunchroom, and a wild caving trip on each of the two days. Reservations will be required for the wild cave trips and the size of the tours will be limited.

A key person in the creation of the NPS had close ties to Carlsbad, N.M. The late Horace M. Albright, a young attorney in the Department of the Interior in 1916 who helped draft the legislation creating the NPS, went on to become the second director of the agency, and then later, after leaving the NPS, became president of the parent company of the U.S. Potash of Carlsbad. Carlsbad's City Hall was built by U.S. Potash and housed the company's offices for many years.

The bill Congress passed creating the NPS was signed into law by President Woodrow Wilson Aug. 25, 1916. The purpose, or mission, of the NPS as spelled out in this legislation is "...to conserve the scenery and the natural and historic objects and the wildlife therein, and to provide for the enjoyment of the same in such manner and by such means as will leave them unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations." In keeping with that mission, the theme of the NPS anniversary celebration is "Protecting the Past, Managing the Present, Investing in the Future."

Amusement parks equal a multibillion-dollar industry

Associated Press

Americans like to flip upside down at 70 miles an hour, experience earthquakes and ride in runaway mine trains — as the nation's $4.3 billion a year amusement parks industry proves.

That's what the 253 million visitors a year to the parks spend which, according to an article in the current issue of Town & Country, is more than Americans spend to witness all professional sports combined.

The biggest draw in the funhouse industry is the heart-stopping, breath-taking ride in which people pay to hurtle over tracks, plunge through whitewater and soar to giddy heights.

The Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design in Detroit is a hotbed of ideas for new rides.

A current project, Whipper Snapper, proposes to attach a pod-shaped car on long, spiderlike legs to an unseen track. As the pod careens along the steep hills and curving valleys of the track, the track widens and the pod's legs spread apart. The rider speeds along below the track. When the track narrows, the legs straighten and he teeters above it.

According to historians, the grandfather of rides was a tall wood-frame ice slide that was built in northern Russia in the 17th century. It was quickly copied and the French adopted "Les Montagnes Russes" in the early 19th century and introduced a summer version.

IN 1870 THE first American "gravity ride" appeared at Mauch Chunk, Pa. In 1864, the first roller coaster, The Switchback Railway, opened at Coney Island in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Today the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions in Alexandria, Va., lists more than 3,000 members in 51 nations. U.S. members are currently working on $200 million worth of projects. Among the best existing rides:

The Viper at Six Flags Magic Mountain in Valencia, Calif., is billed as the "tallest, fastest looping steel roller coaster in the world," lifting passengers 188 feet before plunging down 3,830 feet of track including three vertical loops, one corkscrew and one boomerang turn. In the process riders turn upside down seven times while experiencing speeds as high as 70 miles an hour.

Quake, Kentucky Kingdom, Louisville, simulates an earthquake. You enter a 40-foot gondola, select your own setting on the Richter scale and push a button. The ground beneath your feet shakes, rolls and heaves.

Adventure Express, Kings Island, Ohio, simulates the route of a runaway mine train. Passengers speed through smoke, fog and four theme tunnels with special effects, including forbidden ruins, a volcanic eruption, an encounter with a python and various booby traps.

DISASTER TRANSPORT, Cedar Point, Ohio, offers a futuristic space adventure including laser blasts, gusts of wind, exploding asteroids and attacks by space pirates.

Predator, Darien Lake Theme Park and Camping Resort, Darien Center, N.Y., makes riders feel they are falling from a 10-story building, experiencing a maximum G force of plus 2.7, approximately what a jet pilot feels when he pulls out of a dive.

Boomerang, Knott's Berry Farm, Buena Park, Calif., turns its riders upside down six times in less than a minute; climbs an 11-story tower backwards, does a series of corkscrew turns and vertical loops and climbs another vertical tower — at speeds up to 50 miles per hour.

Vortex, Great America, Santa Clara, Calif., features a 91-foot-high lift and a 360-degree loop in a ride in which passengers straddle bicycle-type seats while the cars containing them hit speeds up to 45 miles per hour.

Psyclone, Six Flags Magic Mountain, Valencia, Calif., and Georgia Cyclone, Six Flags over Georgia, Atlanta, both are replicas of the Cyclone made in 1927 for Coney Island.

Magnum XL-200, Cedar Point, Sandusky, Ohio, Marilou Stannard Doyle wrote in Town & Country, is listed by the 1990 Guinness Book of World Records as the fastest roller coaster and one with the longest drop — the train climbs a 205-foot-high hill, then speeds down at 72 miles an hour.

Cattle drive vacation may live out fantasy, but it's not relaxing

By Nancy Marx Better
N.Y. Times News Service

Early in the hit film "City Slickers," Billy Crystal's buddies try to revive his flagging spirits — and his sales career — by inviting him on a two-week cattle drive out West. They paint a romantic picture: traveling through sagebrush-filled canyons, herding steer with coiled lassos, sharing stories around a glowing campfire. "We ride; we rope; we sleep under the stars," his pals tell him. "This is going to be the greatest vacation ever."

Evidently the movie is spawning a mini-stampede of executives to cattle drives in search of the same rugged experience. Amy Grubbs, executive director of the Dude Rancher's Association, says she has seen "a significant increase" in inquiries since "City Slickers" was released in June.

The group, based in LaPorte, Colo., oversees 98 dude ranches that offer vacations in 10 Western states, and its occupancy rate is 84 percent this year, up from 64 percent in 1987. Demand is particularly strong for ranches that offer cattle drives, about 10 percent of the group's members.

"Business people don't just want to kick back and relax on a vacation," said Ms. Grubbs. "They want to accomplish something."

And relax they don't. When Bonnie Bunting, federal support services manager for the Hewlett-Packard Corp., told colleagues in May that she was leaving for a week-long cattle drive, "they thought it was hilarious," she said. "They kept kidding me, 'You're paying to do that?' "

MS. BUNTING SOON wondered as well. By the first night, her feet were numb from the cold, her hands were chapped from the wind and her leg muscles were so sore she could barely walk. She was exhausted from her 4:30 a.m. wake-up from a sleep on the ground. "It was much more physically demanding than I'd expected," she said.

Upon returning to the office, she was greeted by a big computer banner reading "Welcome back, buckaroo." The trip, she said, "was the greatest adventure I've ever been through; it was an incredible challenge." An added bonus: her group grew so close that they're already planning a reunion trip.

Experts are quick to note the difference between roundups and cattle drives. Roundups — which involve moving cows a few miles within the home range — are a popular amusement for guests at dude ranches. Cattle drives — moving cattle 100 or so miles — occur only twice a year.

In spring, ranchers drive cattle from low pastures to higher country so they can graze on fresh grass through the summer. In the fall, the cattle are driven back to their original elevation, before snow sets in.

Most authentic cattle drives can only accommodate a dozen or so tourists, who participate in every aspect of the job — which can include, depending on time of year, calving, branding, vaccinating, dehorning and castrating.

"It may occur to you that things are a bit twisted when you pay them for doing these things," said Pat Dickerman, who runs a New York-based travel service, Adventure Guides. Before booking clients, she cautions them against any "preconceived notions about comfort or cleanliness."

STILL, MANY CITY slickers are unprepared for the rigors of cowboy life. Consider David Kempler, a tax attorney with Silverstein & Mullens in Washington. Sparked by a childhood passion for cowboy movies, Kempler spent a week last spring driving cattle at Spanish Springs Ranch, based in northern California.

Kempler's group — 18 men, 5 women — herded 700 cows and their calves from the desert country of Nevada's Great Basin to green pastures on California's Madeline Plains. Along the trail, they were plagued by blistering sun, drenching rain and driving hail. They choked on dust and ached from saddle sores.

They also suffered from the loneliness of the long-distance rider.

"It wasn't like in the movies, where they had deep discussions in the saddle," says Kempler. "We didn't socialize. We had to take care of the cows."

Ranch officials make no bones about the difficulty of cattle drives. "A lot of people are looking for a Club Med-type vacation," says Tom Dougherty, a spokesman for Spanish Springs Ranch. "This isn't Club Med."

In addition to being less luxurious than Club Med, cattle drives are usually cheaper. Most cost less than $1,000 per week for room, board and recreation. But that figure does not include the air fare to obscure Western locations, which can add $1,000, or fancy equipment — riding boots, Stetson hats, chaps and spurs — which can tack on an additional $500.

Recently, Dougherty says, Spanish Springs began targeting executives by placing small advertisements in business publications. "When they get to a certain level in their career, they look for something offbeat to do on their vacations," he says. "They don't want to just sit on the beach."

SOME CORPORATIONS are even offering cattle-drive vacations as incentive gifts to top performers. Take the Trammell Crow Co. In the spring of 1988, the Los Angeles regional partner, Hayden Eaves, took a dozen agents — who won the trip by leasing the most square footage in their areas — on a 10-day cattle drive at the Two Creek Ranch in Douglas, Wyo., where they herded 1,000 cattle for 75 miles.

The last day was especially memorable; the real estate brokers sorted cows from bulls from heifers in the mud-filled cattle pens. A group picture later made the front page of the company newsletter, with the caption: "Moving cattle is a team effort, and team effort is what Trammell Crow is all about."

"When people get out on a horse, they develop a level of trust and camaraderie," says Eaves. "It's not like at a resort, where you can ask the maid or the butler for whatever you need. You have to depend on each other. That's the real challenge."

Discover island charm at Caribbean inns

By Cheryl Blackerby
N.Y. Times News Service

The best way to find Caribbean inns is by word of mouth. Some of the best are listed in travel books. Fodor's Caribbean is a good choice.

Here are some of my favorites, old standbys and new discoveries:

■ Hermitage Plantation, Nevis. Built by a Welsh family in 1740, Hermitage Plantation is considered the oldest wooden house in the Antilles. Guests during the past two centuries have included Adm. Horatio Nelson and Alexander Hamilton.

Built on the forested slope of Nevis Peak, the lushly landscaped complex includes the plantation house, the carriage house and cottages, which all have traditional furnishings and balconies. Transportation is provided to several nearby beaches.

■ Frangipani Inn, Bequia. A clapboard two-story inn that is as close to the water as you can get without getting wet, the Frangipani offers the best deals in the Caribbean.

There are no TVs, no radios, no air conditioning, no hot water in the communal showers. Two suites have private baths. Mosquito nets hang over the beds.

This largely undiscovered island is reached by ferry from St. Vincent.

■ Montpelier Plantation Inn, Nevis. Adm. Horatio Nelson and Fanny Nisbet were married under a silk cotton tree near the inn in 1787, and spent several nights in the same plantation house visitors can stay in today.

The 16 guest rooms are filled with antiques and Caribbean art. Amenities include a 60-foot pool, surrounded by painted murals, and tennis courts.

Built high on Mount Nevis, the inn is still convenient to beaches on complimentary shuttles.

■ Rawlins Plantation, St. Kitts. Surrounded by miles of sugar cane, the complex includes a plantation house, private cottages and a suite in the old windmill.

There are only 10 guest rooms. The dining room offers gourmet Caribbean dishes and a fine view of the Caribbean.

Sightseeing includes complimentary shuttles to nearby beaches, diving and snorkeling, and hiking in the rain forest.

■ Spice Island Inn, Grenada. Lucky guests have a choice of beachfront cottages about 50 feet from the water or private hotel suites, each with a private swimming pool.

■ Nisbet Plantation, Nevis. The intimate 38-room beachfront plantation just underwent a $3.5 million renovation.

Built as a sugar plantation in 1778, the genteel hotel is famous for its majestic alley of palms, an elegant great house, and a private half-mile sand beach.

BRIEFING

Fewer rigs

A rig shows off its traveling block and mud hose. There were 94 rigs at work last week in the Permian Basin, down two from the previous week, according to Baker Hughes Inc. A year ago the Permian Basin count was 106.

The company also reported that the U.S. rig count dropped yet again, falling 16 to 826. A year ago the U.S. rig count was 1,022.

Parallel earnings

Parallel Petroleum Corp. announces that revenues and earnings for both the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1991 set records.

For the second quarter, Parallel's revenues rose 52 percent to $735,321 from $482,728 a year ago, while net income rose to $200,995, or 2 cents per share from $132,538 or 1 cent per share.

For the six months, net income rose to $517,019 or 4 cents per share from $221,485 or 2 cents per share on a 90 percent increase in revenues to $1,580,874 from $830,455.

Mesa boosted

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership lost $1.3 million in the second quarter, a sharp drop from last year's $50 million loss largely due to the sale of some of its natural gas assets.

Mesa Thursday said the loss amounted to 20 cents per partner unit and came on revenue of $44.9 million. During the same quarter last year, Mesa lost 49 cents a unit on revenue of $66.9 million.

Prices lower

Crude prices were mostly lower during the week on the New York Mercantile Exchange, and at the wellhead.

On the NYMEX, prices fell from a high of $22.16 last Friday to a low of $21.32 Tuesday before rebounding a bit to close at $21.46 Thursday. Posted prices slipped from $21 last Friday to $20.25 Thursday.

Trends turn for today's engineers

■ Dr. Larry Lake, chairman of the University of Texas at Austin's petroleum engineering department, says the profession holds a bright future for students.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

To Dr. Larry W. Lake, chairman of the Department of Petroleum Engineering at the University of Texas at Austin, the impact of the weakened oil and gas industry is obvious.

"Our department went from 1,100 undergraduate students in 1982 to 145 last year," he said during an interview at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification. He was in town to address a meeting on the University's Masters program in petroleum engineering.

He went on to estimate that currently his department has between 250 and 260 students, both undergraduate and graduate. And he says he expects to have 75 freshmen enrolled in his department this year.

"The history of our department has been years of 5 percent annual growth, followed by a couple of years of rapid contraction," he said, adding that the department is beginning to see an upswing in enrollment again.

Despite the recent woes suffered by the petroleum engineering profession — petroleum engineers as well as geologists and geophysicists have been caught up

FORECAST

Oil prices to jump, OGJ says

Staff Report

The Oil & Gas Journal says the U.S. could see higher energy prices in the second half of the year in its Midyear Forecast/Review issue.

According to the Journal, economic recovery in the domestic petroleum market will make price increases possible, especially if the country sees colder winter weather. Normal winter weather — colder than recent winters — and economic recovery will raise demand for petroleum products and natural gas, which will boost prices if supplies don't increase proportionately.

Higher oil and gas prices would boost drilling activity during the remainder of the year. Assuming operators spend all the money in their drilling budgets, the Journal expects the rotary rig count would average 1,050 for all of 1991, compared with 1,010 in 1990. Operators will drill 31,654 oil wells, gas wells and dry holes, up from the 2,170 estimated to have been drilled last year.

The Journal found, however, that oil companies are spending less than their budgeted amount due to caution after the Persian Gulf war and because of depressed natural gas prices.

The Journal cautioned that crude oil production in both Iraq and Kuwait is the key variable in its forecast. With Kuwaiti production disabled by the Persian

HISTORY

Santa Rita overshadows Westbrook

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Somewhere along the line Mitchell County's Westbrook field got lost in the shuffle.

The field, which gave birth to the West Texas oil industry was also one of the first to extend its life through the use of waterflooding. But Westbrook has never received the credit it deserved.

Maybe it was the just all the excitement of over the area's first gusher — the Santa Rita No. 1 in nearby Reagan County.

Or the fact that the days leading up to the May 28, 1923 spectacle attracted thousands of people from neighboring towns throughout West Texas from Fort Worth to Alpine.

But, somewhere the significance of Westbrook and its own commercial discovery — the Texas & Pacific No. 1 W.H. Abrams, fell to the wayside.

But that was then. This is now.

The fact of the matter is Westbrook — a unitized field operated primarily by Chevron U.S.A., Fina Oil & Chemical Co. and Union Texas Petroleum — is approaching a milestone.

Sometime in 1995, the field will produce its 100 millionth barrel of oil — a designation that will place it among the United State's all-time leading producers.

According to last available cumulative statistics provided by the Texas Railroad Commission, Westbrook — like a trusty old hand — has produced 90,738,251 barrels of oil since its discovery in June 1920.

In Chevron's North Westbrook Unit alone, which covers 7,979 acres, there are

Warley's back on track

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Midlander Deas H. "Gene" Warley III liked it so much the first time, he decided to do it all over again.

Warley, chairman and president of Midland Resources Inc., is back on track, having pained and profited from an earlier oil and gas-related venture.

Three years ago, Warley sold his company or at least the existing production to Colorado-based Plains Petroleum Co., but retained the rights to the name.

The fun and challenge was in building that company.

But a lot of unrelated stress came from a California limited partnership that sought his leadership in restoring value to assets that had been caught in a web of deceit and mismanagement, leading to years of litigation.

Today, the new Midland Resources Inc. has cash in the bank, a revolving credit line and proven equivalent reserves of 1.2 million barrels of oil and 2.8 million Mcf of gas.

"This was really something I got into by accident," said Warley, "but I enjoy this business. There's more opportunity in oil and gas than in any other industry."

Warley has come a long ways since first entering the oil and gas industry as a design engineer with a Houston-based manufacturer of enhanced recovery equipment.

But the challenges were never enough.

Warley wanted more.

Eventually he exchanged his white collar for a blue one, entering the oil patch as a roughneck in order to get a better understanding of the drilling end of the business.

After stints as a drilling, production and consulting engineer, he formed Midland Resources Inc. in 1983.

There Warley worked as chairman,

Fort Worth firm seeks marginal properties

■ International Royalty combs the Permian Basin for marginal properties, partnerships.

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Henry Fiur searches for properties — small marginal wells that his Fort Worth company can purchase or develop in partnership.

But International Royalty & Oil Co., which has had success in other areas of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas has one problem — it can't crack the Permian Basin when it comes to lining up deals.

"We look all over the country, but when it comes to that area, we can't find anyone willing to talk with us. It's either a question of economics or perhaps because we're from Fort Worth," said IROC's president.

Fiur doesn't understand why producers would rather shut-in marginal wells rather than part with them.

But then IROC is a production company, not a service one, which is looking for an equity position that will add to its steady stream of acquisitions.

Although the company's electro-thermic technology was heavily-promoted two years ago, IROC is more interested in applying technologies rather than selling them.

Wayne Hoskins, IROC's vice president for geo-sciences, said the company became interested in marginal producers only after years of research and development of a number of applications which he claimed can make strippers profitable.

Hoskins said if there's one area that's been neglected in the oil patch over the years, it's been the study and use of high tech applications related to stripper production.

IROC works with a number of chemical companies and consultants and has developed computer models over the years aimed at turning the production curve on problem wells.

Apache Corp. moving offices to Houston

DENVER (AP) — Denver oil and gas giant Apache Corp. will move its headquarters to Houston in April if it successfully absorbs a large portfolio of properties it recently purchased, a Denver newspaper reported.

The Denver Post cited energy and real estate industry sources in its report, which said Apache officials are seriously considering moving more than 400 clerical and office jobs to Texas. The move hinges on the success of a large portfolio of oil and gas properties the company purchased from Amoco Production Co. in May in a $542.5 million cash-and-stock deal.

The purchase effectively doubled Apache's size and vaulted it into the ranks of the nation's large independent oil and gas producers.

But it also convinced executives, led by Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Raymond Plank, that the company needs to move closer to other big energy companies and the Texas bankers that broker oil and gas deals, the Post reported.

"It would get them closer to the flow of energy deals," said one industry analyst, who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

Exxon picks Baton Rouge for expansion

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — About 500 construction jobs and 50 permanent jobs can be expected when Exxon Chemical Americas expands its plant here.

W.L. Senn Jr., an official for the company, announced that Baton Rouge was chosen as the site for the proposed $155 million project scheduled for completion in 1993.

Senn said Exxon Chemical still has to get all of its environmental permits before proceeding, and must evaluate the economics of the project and appropriate the money needed for the expansion.

"It's just a matter of time and getting it done," he said.

The plant project significantly will increase Exxon Chemical's production of Jayflex plasticizer and oxo alcohol.

Jayflex is used in the production of various plastic products ranging from automobile dashboards to wire insulation and vinyl flooring. Oxo alcohol commonly is used in manufacturing shampoos, detergents and masking tape.

The Baton Rouge plant is Exxon's only U.S.-based facility manufacturing those two products.

RESOURCES: Down to business

president, production foreman, drilling foreman and sometimes occasional roustabout.

The business eventually grew into one of the Permian Basin's largest independent producers averaging 2,000 barrels of oil and 3 million cubic feet of gas per day.

In September 1988, the company sold its resources to Plains in a transaction valued at $15.7 million.

The deal couldn't have came at a better time.

That's because Warley was just about to come off one of the most turbulent roller coaster rides of his professional career — a ride that had nothing to do with the original company.

In 1987, Warley was asked to lead a proxy battle to gain control of Morgan Energy Partnerships Oil and Gas Income Funds.

Voting the original general partner and four of its principals out the door, the partnership elected Warley its new general partner.

But the fund had massive problems.

More than 20 counts of fraud were filed by the Securities & Exchange Commission against the old general partner as new management continued to unearth a slew of skeletons with each passing day.

"It was a sad story. They (the partnerships) were formed by a bunch of promoters...you didn't have oil people running these. I know a lot of people would disagree with me, but it hurts our business for these things to exist simply because they're being run to the benefit of one person — the general partner."

Warley could have cashed in the chips, but he didn't.

"While I was fighting these battles, there must have been a thousand times that I thought about getting out. I really did...I was an independent operator. I didn't really know anything about partnership operations, but there wasn't anyone else who could do it."

During four years of extensive litigation, Warley said he came to know some of the most "unscrupulous people" in his life. "It was unbelievable. There were hardly any books to work from and those we did find were in a shambles."

With lawsuits mounting and no prospects for settlement, Warley elected to place the seven partnerships under Chapter 11 protection.

"I didn't realize just how valuable a tool Chapter 11 was until we did it. It forces people to the table. The interesting thing is not a single creditor lost a nickel. Everyone was paid...it protected the creditors as well as the debtors and forced settlements."

With full support of the partnership, Warley successfully steered the company out of the courts and within 18-months managed to gain total control of the remaining properties with a solid cash position to spare.

From the ashes emerged the new entity.

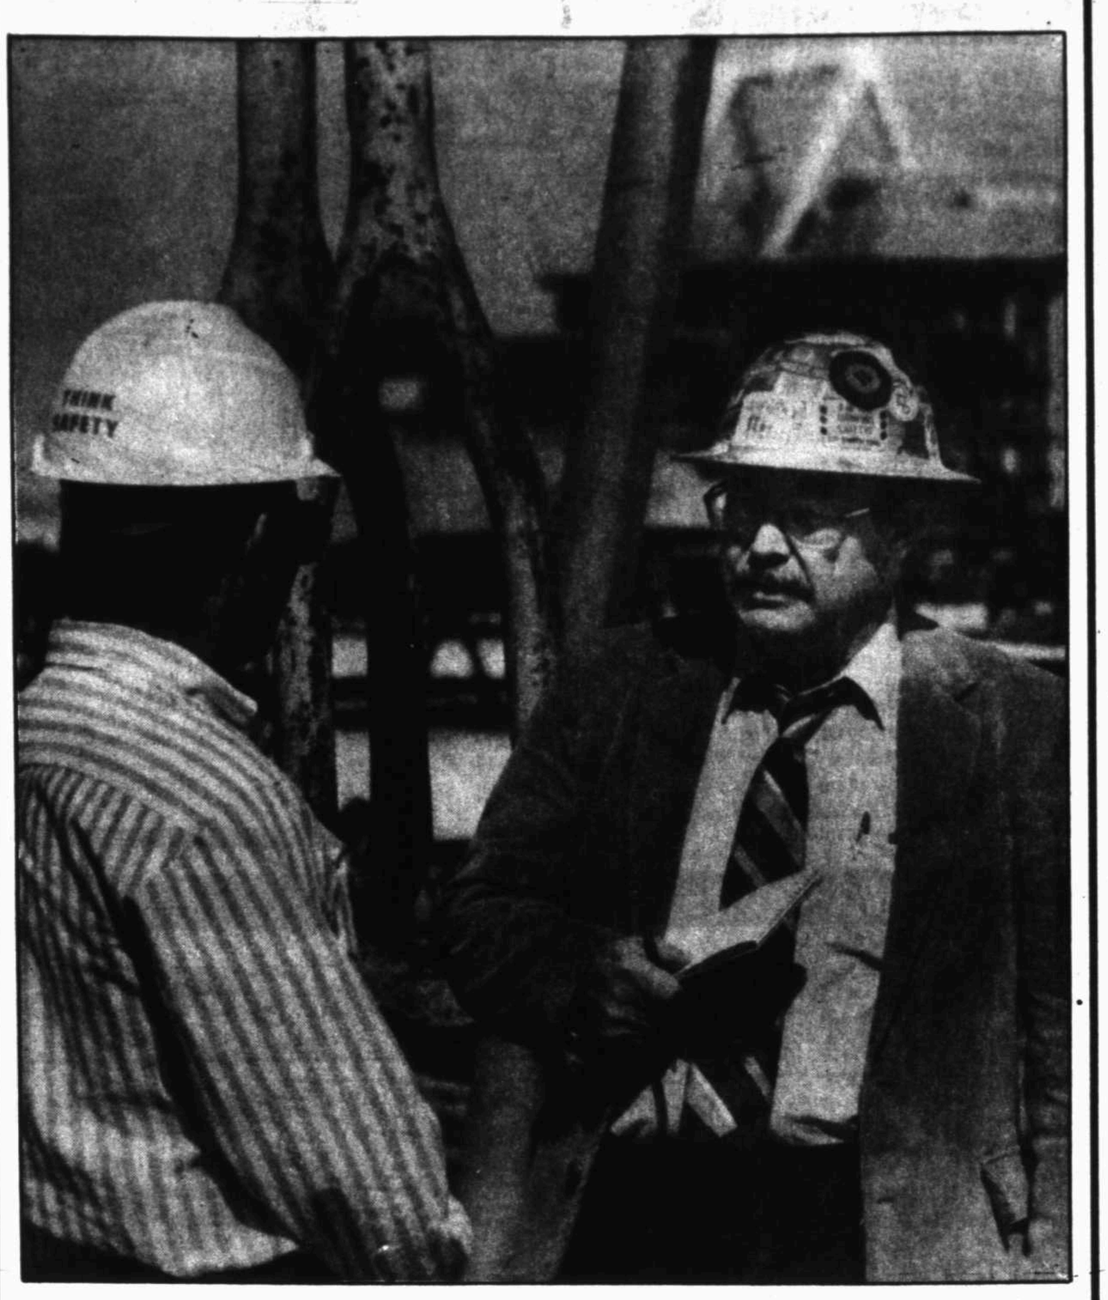
Midland Resources Inc. wasted no time getting down to business, acquiring a working interest in 13 producing wells with proven equivalent reserves of 434,684 barrels of oil at a cost of $1.01 million.

Today the company has working prospects in the Permian Basin, South Texas and the Gulf Coast offshore, with other interests in Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and Illinois.

Future plans call for making three acquisitions per year as well as other development drilling and secondary recovery projects — some of which are now underway.

Two weeks ago, Warley announced a $5 million revolving credit agreement with First City Bank, Texas, which will be used for other acquisitions and property development.

"Our nightmare is behind us now," said Warley. "This is a brand new public corporation. There's no pending litigation against it. No long-term debt. It's really been a challenge, but that's why I enjoy it."



Kleine to advise Scurlock Permian

Staff Report

Midlander William D. Kleine, former president of the Permian Corp., has been retained by Ashland Petroleum Co. to do consulting for its Scurlock Permian Corp. subsidiary.

Ashland Petroleum is a division of Ashland Oil Inc. of Ashland, Ky.

Kleine will advise the management of Scurlock Permian as it combines the operations of Scurlock Oil and Permian, according to Don C. Weller, group vice president of crude oil supply and transportation for Ashland. Ashland acquired Permian on July 1 and has owned and operated Scurlock since 1982.

Kleine has over 40 years of experience in the crude oil supply and transportation business, including 35 years with Permian. He served as president of Permian from 1983 until his retirement in 1989. He will continue to reside in Midland.

"I have known Ashland's management team, philosphy and culture for many years while associated with Permian and feel strongly that the new Scurlock Permian Corp. will be a leader in the crude gathering and transportation business," Kleine said. "Ashland's established financial position and expertise in the petroleum industry will allow the new joint company to better take care of the needs of producers and regional refiners."

Scurlock Permian Corp. is one of the largest independent gatherers and transporters of crude oil in the United States with operations in 15 states from the Rocky Mountains through the Gulf Coast. The company has access to more than 41,000 crude oil producing leases and is capable of gathering more than 400,000 barrels of crude oil daily through a system of more than 4,100 miles of active pipelines.

OUR MAN

IN THE OILPATCH

Houston, Tulsa, Denver, Midland... The list of world class oil towns in the U.S. is a short one, and Midland is fortunate enough to be on it. The Reporter-Telegram is also fortunate to have world class oil coverage by one of the most honored petroleum writers in America.

Among the top national awards for petroleum writing are the Frank Kelly award presented by the American Association of Petroleum Landmen; the Freedom Bell Award presented by the National Association of Royalty Owners and lastly the academy award of energy writing, the Robert Enright award presented by the Association of Petroleum Writers and the American Petroleum Institute.

John Paul Pitts has won all three.

In winning these national awards he has beat out such stiff competition as the Wall Street Journal, Newsweek, Dallas Morning News, New York Times and others.

Kerr-McGee reports lower income

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Net income for the second quarter of 1991 totaled $10.3 million, down from $30.1 million in the same period in 1990, the Kerr-McGee Corp. says.

The energy company said Wednesday that significantly lower refining and marketing margins, higher exploration expenses and a $14 million pre-tax charge linked to the company's program to streamline operations caused the drop.

Kerr-McGee's sales in the second quarter totaled $784 million, compared with $822 million in the second quarter of 1990.

MARGINAL: Can't crack Basin

(From 1F)

"We use a lot of technical approaches and we've developed a lot of our own software. Our strategy has been to identify these properties where additional (zone) production might be possible," he said.

According to company officials, most wells that have been selected as candidates have a pay off period within two years.

And that includes research.

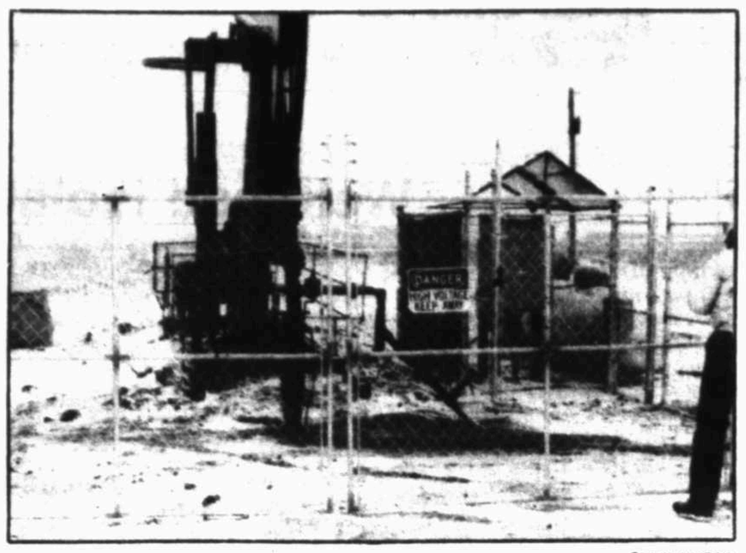
Recently the company was recently awarded a grant by the Department of Energy in conjunction with Sandia Laboratories at Los Alamos to begin field tests that will lead to further production, rather than abandonment of marginal properties.

Results from that grant will be released to the industry once experiments are completed.

In the meantime, IROC continues with its own R&D program related to paraffin and other down hole problems that cause operators to approach marginal wells from an economic standpoint, rather than what can be done to solve them.

"No one likes to fool with it, but a lot of these areas have paraffin and other problems where there is no single track record or documentation available on to how to solve them," said Hoskins.

IROC officials said they've worked in the past with three or four prospectors in Midland in search of leads where outright acquisition or a co-op was possible, but in all cases the wells had been sold before deals could be struck.



Courtesy IROC

This Turner lease in Kansas is an example of the marginal properties Fort Worth-based International Royalty and Oil likes to buy and operate.

"When we come in we do a full resource evaluation," said Hoskins. "We look at the production history, evaluate the equipment being used and look at the maintenance procedures. We may pull everything out of the hole and do and extensive workover or something a lot less."

Hoskins said he's talked with a lot of folks in the Permian Basin about IROC's approach, but added, "I can't seem to get a reasonable explanation. One operator kept telling me he was going to send me samples. I called him every month for a year and finally got them only to find out later it had been plugged. It's gets a little frustrating more than anything else."

Hoskins said when the company identifies a prospect it will watch how a particular well runs for a day or two, then begin an extensive evaluation procedure of the property.

"We're still in development stages and we're still experimenting. We don't use just one strategy, but a variety of strategies when we come in. We find that's the best economical way to manage production."

IROC is located at 2429 Gravel Drive, Fort Worth, Texas 76118.

WESTBROOK: Nears milestone

(From 1F)

296 wells pumping sour crude nogas from the Clearfork at an average depth of 2,950 feet.

Chevron's best producing well in the unit flows 118 barrels of oil and 172 barrels of water per day.

Comparatively, Big Lake field, home to the Santa Rita discovery, has produced a cumulative total of 130,271,668 barrels of oil from depths of 2,403 feet to 10,450 feet.

The unitized field, operated by Marathon Oil Co., has produced from the Clear Fork lime, Dean Sand, Ellenburger, Bend, Fusselman, Grayburg, Srayberry and the San Andres.

But it was Westbrook that was among the first to demonstrate the successful use of waterflooding in the late 1960s. That technology that has since led to the secondary recovery of billions of barrels of oil in the Permian Basin and elsewhere.

Today, there are 88 active injectors located in rows of two or three throughout Chevron' North unit, injecting was at an estimated daily rate of 24,760 barrels.

Westbrook field is a stratistructural trap located in the eastern margin of the Midland Basin, according to Chevron Petroleum Engineer Mark Fleming.

The reservoir produces from the Middle Clearfork Dolomite. According to Fleming, porosities in the field are as high as 25 percent with permeabilities as high as 300 millidarcies in some wells.

As of Jan. 1, 1990, the Chevron unit was producing 24.3 gravity oil from an average depth of 3,000 feet. Total crude production was 2,022,991 barrels of oil and 69,948 Mcf.

Although the field produces primarily from the Clearfork, it also encounters production from the Ellenburger and Mississippian with gravity variances ranging from 23 to 45 API.

Remaining estimated reserves, according to the Oil & Gas Journal, have been pegged at 16 million barrels. Westbrook's production, based on best known estimates, peaked sometime in 1983.

Fleming said the company's future plans for the field call for more infill drilling.

But it was 1920 that signaled a new age of oil in West Texas, according to Samuel D. Myres, author of "The Permian Basin — Era of Discovery," the 1973 volume that traces the area's industry.

According to Myres, while the search was widespread in the vicinity of Reeves, Pecos and Eddy counties and Big Spring, the discovery of commercial quantities occurred in "a less likely place — in Mitchell County, remote from the main centers of interest."

The No. 1 T&P, which is now plugged, struck a deposit of oil in the Permian formation at a depth of 2,410 feet. "At last, the presence of commercial oil in the region was proved."

Only three wells at the time were in search of oil in the county.

But it was the efforts of four men that the book credits with Mitchell County's first commercial discovery. They were Dr. Preston Coleman, L.W. Sandusky, Stephen Samuel Owen and Samuel A Sloan.

Coleman's part in the movement, according to the author, led to the opening of Westbrook.

Two years ago, Coleman was inducted into the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame.

Known as the father of Texas Tech University, Coleman was a medical doctor who came to Colorado City in 1883 and became a vital mediator between local ranchers and oilmen.

In December 1919, Coleman leased the land where most of the early producing wells were drilled, including acreage from the Texas and Pacific Land Co. where the first producer was located.

Coleman assigned those leases to Owen, who was acting as an agent of Underwriters Producing and Refining Co. On Feb. 8, 1920, the well was spudded about three miles northwest of the village of Westbrook.

The first oil shows came at 450 feet, although saltwater was struck later. After a delay of six weeks, drilling continued without incident to 2,130 feet.

On June 18, rumors of an oil strike began to flourish.

Those rumors along with the strength of favorable reports led to an immediate increase in lease prices with mineral rights selling for as much as $10 an acre several miles from the well.

On June 25, the Colorado Record printed what signaled the birth of exploration and production in the Permian Basin with the headline "Oil in Mitchell County — Struck the Golden Flood."

Underwriters T&P No. 1 was reported to be producing at a rate of 1,000 to 2,000 barrels of oil per day from a 65 foot formation that had been penetrated at a depth of 2,410 feet.

According to the author, "The field was not highly publicized at the time, the county was not dotted with derricks within in 30 days and Colorado City did not grow immediately. Yet the discovery was significant, for it was a signal for further exploration and led to the development of the one of the great oil provinces of the world."

OGJ: Recovery could boost prices

(From 1F)

Gulf war and Iraqi oil exports embargoed, an increase in demand in the second half of the year would strain available supplies from other producing countries that are already supplying crude at virtually maximum rates.

The Journal's survey had these other findings:

■ Operators will drill 5,711 wildcats this year and 152 million feet of hole, with average well depth at 4,805 ft.

■ Operators are expected to drill 5,900 wells in western Canada this year.

■ Average demand for petroleum products in the U.S. is expected to decline by 1.7 percent to 16.695 million barrels per day. Product demand in the first half of 1991 was below demand recorded in the first half of 1990, but is expected to exceed year-earlier levels in the second half of the year. Demand for motor gasoline will drop 1 percent to 7.16 million barrels per day.

■ U.S. refinery crude runs will fall to an average of 13.18 million barrels per day, more in line with demand.

■ U.S. production of crude oil and condensate will fall by 0.2 percent to 7.34 million barrels per day, the publication predicts.

■ Imports of crude and products, excluding imports for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, will fall by 3.5 percent to 7.71 million barreis per day.

■ The Journal predicts the average wellhead price for crude oil in the U.S. will be $16.95 in 1991, down 15.4 percent from 1990, when prices were boosted by the Persian Gulf crisis.

■ Demand for natural gas will increase by 0.1 percent this year to 18.85 trillion cubic feet. Marketed gas production will fall by 1.5 percent to 18.2 trillion cubic feet. U.S. gas imports from Canada will total 1.5 trillion cubic feet, up 4.7 percent.

Oryx suffers income loss

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy Co., the largest independent energy producer, said Tuesday it lost $15 million in the second quarter due to low oil production volume and natural gas prices.

The loss follows an $82 million profit in the first quarter that was boosted by some asset sales and hedging on oil prices.

For the quarter that ended June 30, Oryx lost 23 cents a share on revenue of $341 million. During the same period last year, the company lost $3 million, or 3 cents a share, on revenue of $379 million.

The domestic natural gas price paid Oryx was $1.37 per thousand cubic feet, down from $1.50 in the second quarter last year and $1.75 in this year's first quarter.

The company produced an average of 131,000 barrels of oil daily in the quarter, down from 180,000 a year ago.

For the first half of the year, Oryx earned $67 million, 75 cents a share, on revenue of $902 million.

"We Are At Your Disposal"

If You Don't Have an Automated Disposal Well Monitor -- GET ONE !

Automated monitors from Automated Well Control Systems, Inc. will increase revenues, cut operating costs and may even save the well.

The company owns patents on state of the art computer controlled systems and has been manufacturing and installing them since 1981. Now, however, their 'key control entry system' has been upgraded to a 'key pad access', which needs no key.

A driver simply enters his company's three digit number; a two digit driver's I.D. number; ticket number; RRC number and number of barrels to unload. The rest is automatic; the need for a 24 hr. attendant is completely eliminated. Any account, or driver, can be validated or *in*validated. The system can count loads or barrels, which eliminates overflows and costly clean-ups, as well as prevent the dumping of mud or BS.

The operator has a complete record of Time/Day/Date of every customer's transaction at the site, including Tank Almost Full/Tank Full/ and attempts to deliver bad product. The complete record can be accessed at the well site or retrieved from a 3.5" disk which can be taken to the office for billing.

The system has an impressive payback schedule. For example, using an average delivery load of 130 bbls. (at $.25 per bbls. delivery fee) the prevention of the loss of one unsigned ticket per day would give a payback in as little as 12.8 months, depending on your system. That does not include other savings such as reduced pump repair and elimination of clean-up costs.

To upgrade your system to key pad, or for an inspection of your well site and quotation, please call:

PETROLEUM PERSPECTIVES

Wall Street Journal naive about natural gas's issues

By Harry Spannaus

I though my response to the recent article in the Wall Street Journal which depicted domestic natural gas as a "bed-of-roses" from producer to burner tip end user might be of interest. The article described natural gas as entering a boom era, but somewhat conversely it also suggested that a burst of the "Gas Bubble" would lead to severe shortages across the nation. My greatest concern was the article's general support for natural gas prices without any consideration for what the producer was receiving at the wellhead. I am not optimistic that my reply to the Wall Street Journal editor will be printed.

Spannaus

Dear Editor:

Please refer to page B6 of the July 15, 1991, Wall Street Journal and to the "Industry Focus" column "By Suzanne McGee".

As a representative of the domestic, continental U.S.A. Independent Producer, traditionally a significant supplier of natural gas to the various pipelines and their markets, and presumably a factor, if not the backbone, of the future of the industry, I read with interest the "Industry Focus" column of July 15, 1991, headlined: "Natural-Gas Pipeline Industry Girds for Growth Boom Amid Building Frenzy, Doubts Abound That Demand Will Keep Pace" and must question some of the statements and assumptions of that article.

Of the total domestic production, those of us who are classified as Independents produce over 60 percent of all natural gas consumed in the United States. Statistically, Independents drill 85 percent of the exploratory wells in the United States, wells that will in the future find new supplies of gas to fill those pipelines and furnish the heat necessary for the households and industry of America.

The industry is currently beginning the seventh year of what was originally thought to be an 18-month "gas bubble." During that time, the price being paid to the PRODUCER for gas has continually declined to a current price, net back to the producer, of between some 75 cents up to slightly more than a dollar per million btu of heat. This price is compared to a cost based price established under the Natural Gas Act, and translated by the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 into legislated maximum prices (still cost based) adjusted for inflation, to a January 1991 price of $6.02 per million btu of heat. Prices below replacement cost for the last several years have led to significant reductions in the numbers of experienced exploration geologists employed in the industry and to the virtual halt of exploration for domestic natural gas. In addition, as has been adequately reported in this Journal, literally hundreds of companies have gone bankrupt, or have been forced to sell out to their stronger competitors. This also contributed to the failure of the real estate market and many of the banks in the Southwest.

The industrial consumer, and the homeowner heating with gas, is ill served by an industry that fails to engage in any long range planning. I submit that continuation of the present course of cheap natural gas without any regard for the producer of that gas will inevitably result in a lack of supply. The gas is there, to be discovered by experienced and trained explorationists, and exploration companies who are rapidly disappearing. If the United States continues its present course, we will first become dependent upon Canada, then Mexico, and finally Algeria and Libya for Liquified Natural Gas; all at significantly higher prices than the fair price that would be necessary at this time to encourage the domestic producer.

In regard to pipelines being less regulated by the Federal Government and therefore facing more risk for their pipeline expansion projects, and many times at the crystal ball forecasts of the economists, I say "It's about time" the pipeline business was based upon sound management principles and not upon the guarantees of the federal government. No where else in the petroleum exploration and production business have we enjoyed profit/loss guarantees through over regulation as have the pipelines under the protective umbrella of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission of the past. Some pipelines will, in fact, enjoy the importation of foreign natural gas and at the extreme expense of the U.S. domestic producer. Canadian gas exported into the U.S. via the under-construction Iroquois pipeline is gas that receives preferential treatment by both the Canadian and U.S. governments. In Canada the pipeline construction is subsidized so the majority of construction costs are not reflected in the gas selling price. The U.S. then allows the gas to flow into the U.S. without the usual restrictions and constraints (and costs) generally associated with interstate gas. The result is Canadian gas can and is imported into the U.S. at a competitive disadvantage to the U.S. producer. It is not the system of free trade that we are led to believe that exists in the provisions of the U.S.-Canadian Free Trade Agreement. It is an unlevel playing field which will continue to depress natural gas prices until some correction is made to bring fairness to our free trading processes!

While I agree that environmentally clean burning natural gas is a premium fuel of the future and that its application as an energy source is unlimited, the future of natural gas depends upon the U.S. domestic producer receiving a fair price for his product and the various regulating bodies insuring that natural gas is on a competitive scale with imported gas. The State of New York is a prime example of an effort to penalize the domestic natural gas industry and the burner tip end user. Governor Cuomo, in all of his wisdom to close this state's $6.5 billion budget deficit, has attempted to levy a new tax on all commercial and industrial natural gas use in that state which, in addition to causing sever economic dislocation and job losses within the natural gas industry, fully undercuts all efforts made by the federal government to stimulate natural gas as a clean burning energy alternative in the state of New York.

While New York City, of all cities, need natural gas as an alternate fuel to clean up its air, Governor Cuomo proposes his latest contribution of 44.5 cents per Mcf which joins a corporate surcharge passed last year to make an effective rate of natural gas tax 51.175 cents a Mcf or in some cases, over 50 percent of what today's value of natural gas is to the producer at the wellhead.

The domestic natural gas industry cannot expand to meet supply demands under such conditions of high taxation, unfair competition and governmental control. Domestic gas well completions are down 5.6 percent in the first six months of 1991, as are exploration well completions down 34.9 percent and wildcat drilling has been cut by 12.9 percent.

Shell Oil Co. earlier this month announced a workforce slash of 15 percent, 4650 employees; Dallas-based Halliburton Services, a giant in oil field services, has initiated a cost reduction program which will result in the layoffs of 1200 employees, ARCO Oil and Gas Co. is studying ways to improve profitability and will likely have a reduction in force, there are rumors of similar actions by Exxon and others; it all spells trouble for the domestic oil and especially the natural gas industry which is suffering its lowest price level in 15 years.

Some independents who can still afford to remain in the natural gas business have joined movements like those of Pennzoil Co., who recently announced it was shutting down its gas well production and/or refusing to sell its gas at current prices. Others who can't afford to curtail their gas sales are hoping for a severe winter to put high demands on the supply market, which will hopefully improve gas prices so they can pay their bills and use whatever remains to further expand their natural gas reserves.

Natural gas consumption in the U.S. has risen by 2.1 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) in the last five years from 16.7 Tcf in 1986 to 18.8 Tcf in 1990. The consumption is expected to grow in demand coming from electrical generations and industrial markets. The demand within the industrial segment is shifting to more efficient and economical boilers, including coal burners which use natural injection to cleanup the coal burning process. The shut down of our many aged nuclear plants will provide new opportunities as well as the increase of residential gas usage with the expansion of a pipeline network across the country. Even the aviation industry is experimenting with liquid natural gas as a future aircraft powered fuel – there appears to be no limit to the application of natural gas.

In summary, today's natural gas prices to the producer equate to the 1940 nickel candy bar and dime ice cream cone. The producer is the only one who bares the burden of low prices. The consumer pays a high rate disproportional to wellhead (field) prices. Those in between the producer and end user, rake in the high profits. It's an unjust system that must be corrected if natural gas is to be the premium fuel of the future.

Sincerely,
Harry A. Spannaus

ENGINEERS: Continue facing new challenges

in the downsizing of the U.S. energy industry — Lake says the profession has a bright future. "The energy business will be around as long as there's transportation," he said.

Among the challenges facing the profession is the rapid growth in technology. Lake said he sees a trend in the U.S. toward more production-oriented operations and growth in enhanced oil recovery and tertiary recovery as well as an emphasis on large-scale computing, with significant progress coming in computer processing. The biggest changes recently, he said, have to do with horizontal drilling techniques.

He adds that he sees an expansion of the field into offshoot areas such as the environment, economic studies and academic areas.

As for the future, he said, "If I had to look in a crystal ball, I'd probably see advances in production technology — knowing how to best produce a reservoir, when to shut in production, a better idea of what the reservoirs look like."

Another, more key trend that Lake sees developing is an emphasis on overseas operations. "For oil companies now, it's a question not of what's profitable, it's what's most profitable. Would you rather develop a U.S. field with a 20 percent return, or one in Indonesia with a 70 percent return?"

In the meantime, Lake and his department are continuing to develop its Master's program with UTPB. The joint UT Austin-UTPB effort has made the program available to Permian Basin residents for the first time. Presently, professors from Austin fly out to Midland/Odessa once a week to conduct classes. University officials are looking into the possibility of establishing video classroom and video conferencing facilities at UTPB and the Energy Center. Using this remote instruction method would make it easier on the professors and expand the number of courses available to students enrolled in the Masters program.

According to Lake, there were 23 enrolled in the program this spring and he expects the first group to graduate from the program next year.

WHEN YOU NEED TO GET FACE TO FACE WITH THE PERMIAN BASIN OIL INDUSTRY :

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

The Permian Basin is an oil and gas producing empire of 100,000 square miles with an oil well for every square mile. Comprised of 54 counties in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas, this far flung industry accounts for roughly 20 percent of the nation's total oil production.

Yet, a long standing problem has been the lack of a single newspaper to serve the thousands of companies and over 40,000 workers involved in exploration, land, production, drilling, oilfield service and supply, pipelines and construction, refining, and transportation.

But now, the Permian Basin Oil Report, published weekly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, has become the information source for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Packed with information and articles about oil and gas people, products, companies, issues, events, drilling, exploration, and production, the Oil Report appears each Sunday as a section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Additionally, it is mailed to every producer, operator and oilfield service company throughout the Permian Basin.

If the Permian Basin is your target market, the Permian Basin Oil Report is the way to reach it.

Larnelle Harris

Singer's motive to share Jesus with his audience

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

In his business life as well as his private life, tenor Larnelle Harris operates under a singular compelling desire.

"I want to always be a good example for the Lord Jesus Christ," Harris said in a recent interview. "I don't want there to be any mistake about who I am — whether I'm a Christian or not, or what my motives are. My motive always is to share the Lord Jesus.

"I have a great sense of humor. I have fun. I think I'm fun to be around. The concerts are fun. We have fun as well as talk about serious things, things that have been important in my life."

Harris, who has garnered a host of industry awards, including eight Gospel Music Association Dove awards and a Stellar award for excellence in the black gospel field, will perform at 8 p.m. today at Odessa's First Baptist Church.

"It will be fun, and it will be great music, but it will be about the Lord. I don't say that in an apologetic way. I think that's good. The things that are in the Bible are for all of us."

Although he is a Christian performer, Harris said of his Odessa concert, "I believe truly that anyone who comes will enjoy it. Nobody is going to grab anybody by the collar and ask about their souls. I don't go around Louisville, Ky., where I live, searching for people to pounce on. I simply live as an example that people will ask about: 'How come you handled that problem that way.' 'How come this happened to you, and you handled it this way.' 'Why are the Grammys important to you, but why aren't they life to you?'

"I'm a witnesser," said Harris, who decided the best example he could use to explain how he operates was to talk about his approach as a parent.

"I can tell my 16-year-old son to do things and then I can do it myself and be the example. Which one speaks the loudest? The example."

Harris, who is a songwriter and singer, has a collection of five Grammy Awards, a feat equaled by only two other gospel performers, Amy Grant and Sandi Patti. His first Grammy Award was shared with Miss Patti in 1984 for their duet "More Than Wonderful." In 1986, the pair won a second Grammy for their collaboration on "I've Just Seen Jesus," the title cut from Harris' album.

His performance of "How Excellent Is Thy Name," from that same album, garnered another 1986 Grammy in the category of Best Solo Gospel Performance, Male. In addition Harris won two consecutive Grammy awards for Best Gospel Performance, Male, in 1988 for "The Father Hath Provided" and in 1989 for "Larnelle...Christmas."

Currently on tour to promote his newest album, "Larnelle Live...-Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs," Harris credits much of his success to his parents.

"The two most influential people in my life didn't graduate from high school, but they gave me so much information that has been useful to me — just common sense kinds of things," said Harris, who received his bachelor of arts in music education from Western Kentucky University. "And the greatest of those was pointing me toward God and spiritual everlasting things, and they did that more by example and deed than they did through preaching and through words."

He traces his music career back to a desire his mother had when he was a child.

"I'm just like every other kid growing up in a small town. My mom wanted me to take piano lessons. I started taking piano lessons from Miss Georgia Donehy," who "found out that I could sing."

Miss Donehy began taking Harris to various functions around his hometown of Louisville, Ky. When they got there, he would sing.

"I was a boy soprano, so it was tough growing up." When young Harris sang, "the ladies would cry, and the kids laughed," he said.

In high school, he was a student conductor of the choir and a section leader in the marching band, where he played drums and saxophone. He went to college on a vocal and percussion scholarship. While in school, he sang a lot of French show songs, German lieder and Italian art songs and "really just enjoyed the arts," knowing all the time that when he graduated he would teach.

Then, his life unexpectedly changed. A concert by the Spurrlows was the catalysis.

"I saw that these guys and gals played wonderful music. They were great musicians. I knew there was something different. Not only were they great musicians, one could hear that, they were solid people in terms of their faith. They knew what they believed and believed what they believed.

"I joined church when I was about 12 years old. Church was important, but it was more important as more of a social event rather than as a life-changing event.

"They (The Spurrlows) believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. He was Lord of their lives, and it just radiated from them. I knew that I didn't have that, but I wanted it. I wanted to be like that. They seemed to have hope and purpose to their lives, and indeed they did have that. And the good news that I received from them was that I could have it, too."

Thus, Harris put his teaching aspirations and his marriage plans on hold for five years while he toured as the drummer for the Spurrlows, performing sacred concerts annually to "a million people," mostly high school and college students.

This experience, combined with his surrendering his will to God's, moved his plans to teach to the recesses of his mind. When he left the Spurrlows, he began a solo recording career, which included songwriting.

"I just enjoy the process of finding an idea, either through something I've read or studied. The hunt of finding something that is relevant and worth writing about and talking about, and then having at my disposal all the words in this English language and the challenge of finding just the right combination of words to make the idea live is the most exciting thing I can think of," said Harris.

His work is his "ministry. This is something that I do because I must. I'm excited about my life. And I'm excited about it because it's in the hands of my Lord, and I don't always measure up. I miss the mark and make mistakes like everybody else. Even those times I find that the Lord doesn't leave me nor turn his back or forsake me. He's right there."

Today, Harris and his wife of almost 20 years, Cynthia "Mitzy," juggle two careers and two children, Larnelle "Lonnie" Jr., who is 16, and Teresa, who is 12.

"We have tried to keep the Lord at the center of our family. I believe through the tough times, which seem as through we are standing in the middle of this imaginary circle swinging at each other, He is in that process and tries to keep us communicating.

"He put us together. He is with us and continually will be a help through this natural process that our family is going through and is going to continue to go through. We have growing people that we used to call children becoming a man and a woman. We hope that through this help...they are receiving much of what they need to become adults that are productive and will add something positive to the fabric of society."

Harris' song, "Mightly Spirit," is the theme song heard on public service announcements for the Points of Light Celebration of Service campaign, which is organized and sponsored by the Points of Light Foundation, a private, non-profit organization.

"The Points of Light Foundation strives to be a catalyst to get other people to be involved in the lives of others. We have many more people than we have problems. If we'll do our share, then we can solve some very difficult problems that we have in our world."

In September he will be performing in the Soviet Union as part of a series of rallies and concerts, sponsored by Youth for Christ International. He will be touring in Finland, Estonia and the U.S.S.R.

"I'm naturally excited about going to the Soviet Union and getting the opportunity to be a part of putting four million New Testaments into the hands of people who in past years have been standing behind an Iron Curtain unable to hear and unable to see in many instances. That's not totally true because the word of God has a way of piercing those boundaries."

Harris recalls how he felt and thought when he surrendered his will to God in 1970.

"I looked around, and I knew that there were things in this world that were temporary things that I tried and they lasted a little while. People are trying them all the time, from drugs to sex — you name it — looking for gratification in things right now. I did the same thing just like any other kid growing up. I was looking for something that was going to be there I could count on forever. The only thing I could find that was lasting" was the Lord Jesus Christ."

Five-time Grammy winner Larnelle Harris will perform at 8 p.m. today at Odessa's First Baptist Church, 709 N. Lee St. Tickets, priced at $6, may be purchased at First Baptist in Odessa. For more information call 1-337-1941.

Regalbuto waiting for starring roles

By Jerry Buck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Regalbuto is hoping the success of "Murphy Brown" will lead to starring roles in television movies, but he recognizes that being in a hit can have some drawbacks.

"I don't know what's tougher — being unknown or being known," said Regalbuto, who plays reporter Frank Fontana in the successful CBS comedy series. "You have to constantly reinvent yourself."

"As an actor, you want to go with your heart," he said. "You want the good parts. But so often, you take the job to feed the kids, or you take it to keep working and keep honing your skills. Very few people can pick their roles.

"I haven't had a lot of starring roles in television movies. I'm waiting for them to start now," he added. "'Murphy Brown' is so well-received critically and people in the industry really love the show. I've always wondered what real value anything has as far as making you more marketable."

He's starting to find out, with the completion of a starring role with Morgan Fairchild in a USA Network movie called "Writer's Block" that will air this fall. Regalbuto plays a detective who tracks down a copycat killer imitating the crimes in mystery novels written by the Fairchild character.

"I can certainly say 'Murphy Brown' doesn't hurt, although being in a sitcom can hurt you," Regalbuto said. "But Frank is a three-dimensional character. He's open to a lot of possibilities. Still, you wonder what people in this town remember. If you do a character well, you can sometimes be punished for it. They say you're that character. They don't always see it as an acting role, and everyone is so afraid to make the final choice because so much money is involved.

"There are so few people who can guarantee big numbers in television or at the box office. That's been proven again and again."

Regalbuto wants bigger and better roles, but said he enjoys "Murphy Brown," the people he works with, the exposure, and the big boost he's gotten from being in a hit.

"I'm really fond of Frank," he said. "He's such a misfit in many ways. The thing I like about him is that he has a cynical viewpoint. He's very sharp. He's a great reporter. I love his friendship with Murphy."

On his way back from a trip to the kitchen in his airy house, he gestured toward a painting of his wife, Rosemary, who is the director of Meals on Wheels in Santa Monica. The couple has three children.

"She's optimistic. She never gets depressed," he said of his wife. "She's always had complete faith in my career. She's always supportive."

Regalbuto, who was born in Brooklyn, grew up in the Bronx and New Milford, N.J. He attended the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and did two years alternative service at the New York University Medical Center during the Vietnam War. After graduation from the NYU School of the Arts, he began working in the theater.

His first film experience was in "The Goodbye Girl," in which he was one of Richard Dreyfuss' fellow actors in a production of Shakespeare's "Richard III."

He came to California for a role in the television series "The Associates," a comedy about a law firm created by James Brooks. The show, also starring Martin Short, was a gem, but it never attracted an audience.

Regalbuto was Tim Conway's bumbling sidekick in "Ace Crawford, Private Eye," the inventor of an incredible motorcycle in "Street Hawk" and spent one season in "Knots Landing."

"Some years ago, producer Vanessa Green wanted me to do a movie, but I didn't have the TVQ to get the part," he said, referring to the rating used by networks to evaluate an actor's potential.

"Murphy Brown" appears to be changing that.

Stars to return for 'Dynasty' mini-series

By Diane Holloway
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — For a moment, it was as if time had been erased. In place of the constant stream of newcomers pitching new fall series, there was the cast of "Dynasty."

Well, most of them. Joan Collins, who was said to be on her way to England, was absent.

But Linda Evans and John Forsythe, arguably the most glamorous couple on television when they portrayed Krystle and Blake Carrington for nine years, were in attendance along with Emma Samms (Fallon Carrington), John James (Jeff Colby), Kathleen Beller (Kirby Anders), Al Corley (Steven Carrington), executive producers Aaron Spelling and Esther Shapiro and renowned costume designer Nolan Miller. Corley, you may recall, left the show after a couple of seasons and was replaced by Jack Coleman. He's back because Coleman turned down the part.

All had come to hype what probably needs no hype — the upcoming four-hour miniseries version of "Dynasty," which was axed in 1989 after a season-ending cliffhanger that left millions of fans hanging. Krystle was in a coma, Alexis and Blake were in life-threatening situations and everyone else was in a state of suspended distress. The miniseries will air opposite baseball playoffs on Oct. 20 and 22 and promises to answer many burning questions about what happened to the filthy-rich but sweet Carringtons and richly evil Alexis Carrington Colby.

No plotlines were revealed, but Shapiro insisted that nobody will be killed off or left hanging, a la "Dallas." Miller said the extravagance of costuming in the Reagan-era '80s has been scaled down for the miniseries of the '90s. With a straight face, he said Krystle and Alexis will have "only 42 wardrobe changes between them" and will wear mostly "business" clothes.

In a brief clip screened for critics, we saw that Krystle and Alexis will engage in one of their trademark face-scratching, eye-gouging cat fights. Obviously, Krystle has recovered from her coma.

Unlike many reunion casts, this one doesn't look much different, in part because it's been only three years since the show went off the air.

Evans, as everyone surely knows by now, dropped out of Hollywood, moved to Seattle "to have a life" as she puts it and fell in love with New Age musician Yanni, who accompanied her to the press event.

Forsythe is a little tanner and a little grayer but otherwise unchanged. Beller has an adorable 5-month-old daughter who cooed and tried to eat a lace cap mama wanted her to wear.

Corley, who toured Europe as a rock singer after leaving "Dynasty," seemed pleased to be acting again.

And James, who proudly flashed baby pictures, looked content with his life as a new husband and father now living on a farm in Vermont.

Considering the huge ratings garnerd by "Dallas's" extremely unsatisfying finale, "Dynasty's" reunion/swan song should do quite well.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Literary festival to be at Fort Concho

SAN ANGELO — The fourth annual Fort Concho Museum Press Literary Festival is set for Thursday and Friday at the Fort Concho commissionary building.

Activities for this year's event include presentations by Texas writers, editors and publishers; workshops in fiction, nonfiction, poetry and drama; book displays by Texas presses; a tour of the historic fort buildings and grounds; a festive banquet; and a reception at the new GTE Danner Museum of Telephony.

Guest speaker for the 6:30 p.m. Friday banquet will be Elmer Kelton, winner of four prestigious Spur Awards from the Western Writers of America. The banquet will be held in the Arc Light Saloon.

Among the presentations at this year's festival will be a panel discussion on writing in multiple genre. Another highlight will be author Virginia Stemm Owens reading from her novel "If You Love Old Men," which was recognized as the 1991 Best Work of Nonfiction by the Texas Institute of Letters.

Those presenting writing workshops include Terence Dalrymple, fiction; Robert Flynn, nonfiction; Jim Linebarger, poetry; and Raymond Carver, drama.

The forum, workshops, readings and browsing are free and open to the public. Those attending are asked to preregister if possible. The banquet does require a reservation and that must be made by 10 a.m. Thursday. For more information call Cora Pugmire, phone program chairman, 1-657-4441.

■ Museum concert set

Chain-Jing Tymes presents today's Summer Sundays Lawn Concert at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The concert begins at 7:45 p.m. on the front grounds of the museum.

The Chain-Jing Tymes specialize in '50s through '70s classic rock'n'roll, up-beat, danceable sock hop music. Members are Paul Edwards, bass; Alan Morehead, drums; Mike Lovelace, guitar; and Mick Bailey, guitar.

Those attending the free concert are invited to bring picnic suppers or refreshments and their own seating.

■ MOSC receives grant

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale has received a grant from the Shell Oil Company Foundation.

The contribution will be used in sponsor of the "1941 Christmas Pops" concert to be held Dec. 6 at the new American Heritage Airpoower Museum and the Confederate Air Force.

"The concert will be part of the week-long opening festivities and promises to be an exciting holiday treat for the residents of Midland, Odessa and surrounding communities," said Philip West, general mangager of the MOSC. "Many out-of-towners are expected to come to the area to celebrate this important event tied to the commemoration of the 10th anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day Dec. 7.

The concert also will be sponsored by Hy-Bon Engineering Co., Inc., and Team Bank. KOSA-Channel 7, will be the media sponsor.

"The symphony is truely grateful to the Shell Oil Foundation for its continued support," West said.

"Shell has been a long-standing friend of this organization and has sponsored the Christmas Pops concert for several years," said Jerry Caddel, president of the board of directors of the MOSC. "We are very pleased to have Shell with us on an occasion that is important to our area and to our country."

For more information about the upcoming season, call the MOSC office, 563-5269, for a brochure.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JULY 28, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make a game plan to follow and you will enjoy new business or career success. A reunion with your siblings or distant relatives should be planned for September. Partnerships formed in October will mean greater financial and emotional security. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences in December. Doors previously closed to you will swing open in early 1992. Well-deserved profits accrue late next spring. Invest extra funds wisely.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, actresses Linda Kelsey and Sally Struthers, band leader Peter Duchin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your energy returns. You slip back into gear and complete overdue tasks. A visit or phone call from a family member invigorates you. Take care of any last-minute details related to a trip.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your mood could change swiftly today. Do not expect your loved ones to understand everything you feel. Different people have different perceptions. Diplomacy will pay off handsomely at a family gathering.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be somewhat restless today, eager to spend time on your own or with a different crowd. Be more spontaneous; explore an interest that loved one may not share. Compare notes later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Getting some exercise will help you recharge your batteries. Just be careful not to overdo things. A candid chat will ease an emotional burden. Confide in someone who knows how to keep a secret.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stimulating new acquaintances add a dash of spice to your social life. Be careful not to make a current love jealous. Emphasize all the things the two of you have in common.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A major change or transition takes a toll on your energy. Better days lie just ahead! Cementing a romantic relationship may be uppermost in your thoughts. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on taking a responsible course of action. Refuse to let your emotions run away with you. You have a good idea of what needs to be done now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relatives and friends are sources of support and approval during this period. An optimistic attitude will lead to positive solutions. Build up your companions instead of tearing them down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are impatient now and may try to do too much at once. Take things a step at a time. Loved ones are willing to pitch in and help out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone may press you for a quick answer. Refuse to be stampeded. Do the best job you can with the materials at hand, and seek some escapist fun later in the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let reason, not emotion, be your guide today. You need to look to the future, not the past. Choose your allies and confidants with extra care. Others judge you by your companions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A pleasant day should lie ahead, and an even pleasanter evening. A special event gives you an excuse to dress up and meet new people. Let others do most of the talking.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	2 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

The weak jump overcall has become one of the most used and abused bids in the modern arsenal. It was designed to show a weak hand with a long suit; what strength the hand contains is supposed to be concentrated in the long suit. However, when armed with such a weapon it is difficult not to deploy it, even if the circumstances are not propitious.

With all the strength outside the long suit, East's hand was ill-suited to a weak jump overcall. West might have chosen to bid four spades over South's three hearts. However, the hand contained some defense and not too much offense because it was flat, so West opted for the conservative course.

East's action in the bidding boomeranged when West selected the ace of spades for the opening lead. East followed with the deuce, West shifted to the jack of clubs but the damage that had been done was irreparable. Declarer had no difficulty in losing no more than one trick in each side suit.

Let's suppose that East had been able to suppress the urge to intervene and had passed. North-South would still have reached four hearts, but West's natural lead would have been the jack of clubs. Correct technique is for declarer to duck in dummy and for East to overtake and shift to the jack of spades. That nets the defenders three quick tricks in the black suits, and as long as West makes sure of rising with the ace on the first diamond lead, South is booked for a one-trick set.

There's a moral to this story. It's all very well to come to the battle armed to the teeth with sophisticated weapons. Just make sure you know when to activate them.

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin has two new exhibitions including one which looks at "Hungers of the 90s" and another which displays contemporary artists.

"Hungers of the 90s: Not By Bread Alone," will be on display through Aug. 18. This traveling exhibition of various media, which is sponsored locally in part by Ruff Ahders, cuts across ethnic, lingual, cultural and geographical boundaries by incorporating a wide variety of artists from across the United States. The works express the spiritual hungers of the present generation.

Also on display is Christopher Felver's "The Face of Art," which remains at the institute through Aug. 30. Organized by the New England Center for Contemporary Art, this exhibition travels to the Permian Basin from Brooklyn, Conn.

The 35 black-and-white photographic portraits by Felver include such noted contemporary artists as Marisol, Dennis Oppenheim, Ansel Adams, Willem deKooning, Louise Nevelson, and David Hockney.

Abell-Hanger makes plantetarium donation

Staff Report

A grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation has pushed the Museum of the Southwest's fund drive for its Marian Blakemore Planetarium closer to its goal, announced Jean Hagman, museum director.

The $100,000 goal was for sky projector equipment up-grading, installation and renovation work in relation to the new equipment. If an additional $10,000 can be raised, the restrooms in the planetarium will be made handicapped accessible, Ms. Hagman said. Work is underway and the auditorium and equipment installation will be completed by Sept. 8 for Septemberfest.

The drive is co-chaired by Judy Devenport and Nancy Anguish, both long-time museum supporters. Mrs. Devenport is president-elect of the museum's board of trustees.

"We've been gratified by the response to our low-key drive," said Claire Woodcock, current board president. "We've had donations from individuals ranging from $25 upwards and from foundations."

Since the planetarium has been used extensively by the public since 1972 in viewing sky shows as well as a location for Smithsonian lectures and other educational activities and by the Midland Independent School District and other public and private schools, the public support is doubly appreciated, Mrs. Woodcock said.

The recent solar eclipse viewing co-sponsored by the West Texas Astronomers and attended by 1,300 people is one example of the use fo the planetarium for the benefit of the public, she said.

Grant support also has been received from the J.M. West Texas Corp., the Hahl Proctor Charitable Trust, the Fondren Foundation and the I.A. O'Shaugnessy Foundation. In addition, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Taylor have contributed to the auditorium renovation in memory of Mrs. Taylor's brother, Robert Lee Blaffer II, for whom the auditorium will be named.

The Texaco Foundation and The Davidson Family Charitable Foundation have made contributions for planetarium educational programming.

All sizes of contributions are welcome, said Ms. Hagman.

Donations may be sent to the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Midland, Texas 79701-6516. For more information call the museum, 683-2882.
