Reports: Troops from Nicaragua now in Honduras

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has received initial reports of a large-scale Nicaraguan force crossing the border into Honduras, a senior administration official said today.

The official, briefing reporters at the White House on condition he not be identified, said efforts were underway to determine the precise size and nature of the operation.

But preliminary reports reaching the United States indicated the attack was larger than any of more than 100 previous incursions, the official said.

Nicaraguan forces have crossed into Honduras before to attack bases of the Contra rebels battling the government in Managua. U.S. officials have said that both Honduran civilians and soldiers have been killed in previous clashes.

Stressing that he was talking about initial, unconfirmed reports, the official said today that indications were that "well over 1,000 Nicaraguan troops" were involved in the operation that was said to have begun on Sunday.

The official spoke to reporters shortly after Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams briefed President Reagan on his weekend visit to Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica to meet with officials of Nicaragua's neighboring countries.

Abrams was dispatched to explain the effect of last week's House vote against Reagan's request for $100 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

The official said the purpose of the trip was to reassure Central American leaders "of the president's absolute determination to win this battle in Congress" and to explain the legislative calendar and Reagan's ability to keep the issue on the agenda for Senate action this week.

Reagan, meanwhile, was expected to telephone a number of senators today to lobby for the measure, which comes up for a vote Wednesday.

After being criticized for offering a "fig-leaf compromise" during the House debate, Reagan said he would be willing to make only minor changes in his program to win the battle this week in the Senate.

Reagan insisted, however, that his plan would retain its "general format" and full amount of aid.

"There may be minor changes," Reagan said of his Contra aid package in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times.

The president said he would be willing to see his last-minute compromise offer to the House, which was in the form of an executive order, "included as legislation" in the Senate.

Some members of Congress have sought to delay for 90 days the allocation of $70 million in military aid and make $30 million available immediately for food, medicine and anti-aircraft weapons while negotiations are pursued.

Reagan's push for aid to the rebels seeking to topple the Sandinista government of Nicaragua has entered its fourth week, with a fierce tangle expected when debate begins Tuesday in the Senate.

On Thursday, the House rejected his plan on a 222-210 vote.

The president has kept a high profile throughout the campaign for the Contra aid, making a speech or participating in some sort of event nearly every day. In contrast, the president had no events on his public schedule today tied to the issue.

One aide, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Sunday that something might be arranged, but that he did not look "for the same sort of activity" prior to the Senate vote that preceeded the House action.

Reagan's campaign for aid in the Senate will have a "quieter" tone, the aide predicted.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., a leading critic of the administration's policy on Nicaragua, says Reagan stands a good chance of winning Senate approval for military aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

"But there are going to be some strings attached," he warned on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Sasser complained in a separate interview that Reagan has offered only a badly flawed "fig-leaf compromise."

"It's not a compromise at all," he said. "It simply delays the military aid for 90 days. It allows everything else to go forward."

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, interviewed on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," predicted the administration "will win again" in both the House and the Senate.

Settling a beef

One of four Santa Gertrudis cows which recently escaped from the San Antonio Union Stockyards collided with a moving van. The cow clashed with the window, breaking it and denting the door. Bill Peters, the van's driver, was not injured, but got the scare of his life. The cow was eventually lassoed and taken back to the stockyards.

Oil prices down to $11.20 a barrel

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers ended nine days of negotiations today with no agreement on a comprehensive strategy to reverse the oil market decline, and their failure to resolve the crisis sent prices into a fresh dive.

James Audu, a spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said the 13 ministers would resume negotiations April 15 in an effort to agree on major cuts in oil production.

Oil futures prices dropped sharply after the adjournment. On the New York Mercantile Exchange the May delivery price of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude and an important market indicator, dropped to $11.20 a barrel, down $2.74 from Friday's closing price, before recovering to just over $12.

"There's a very bearish mood this morning, there's a very negative feeling right now with panic-type selling," said Peter Beutel, assistant manager of Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., a New York commodities futures firm. "It's crazy right now."

Analysts had predicted that without an accord on reducing output, world oil prices would remain near currently depressed levels of about $15 a barrel or would fall even further.

Audu said in a brief official statement that the talks broke off "in order to allow OPEC heads of delegation to consult with their governments as well as with other oil-producing countries."

He declined to answer questions. The cartel's president, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela, did not hold the usual news briefing that follows OPEC conferences.

Representatives of the cartel's members began meeting March 16 to devise a strategy for reversing the dramatic collapse of oil prices from about $30 a barrel four months ago.

Ministers said as they left the meeting in a Geneva that no agreement was reached on any key questions.

Fawzi Shakshuki, the Libyan oil minister, said the officials were aiming at an OPEC production ceiling between 14 million and 15 million barrels a day, but needed to consult with their governments before resuming the talks. The cartel's output now is 17 million barrels.

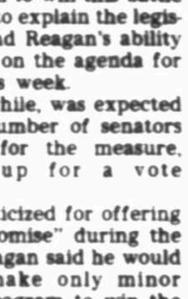

A source in the Ecuadoran delegation, who spoke on condition he not be identified, confirmed there had been no agreement on an overall production ceiling or on quotas for the 13 member nations.

Harris' priority is to make Martin Luther King Center reality

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a 10-part series examining local candidates in the April 5 election. Today's story looks at mayoral candidate Barbara Harris.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Barbara Harris

Barbara Harris has very definite ideas about what she wants to see in Midland.

Her wish list includes a Martin Luther King multipurpose center, a detention center for juvenile offenders, cooperation between all local government entities, license plates for city officials, more shopping in the downtown area and a sensitive eye toward all segments of the population.

What she doesn't want is another YMCA or another park.

Ms. Harris, who has lived in Midland since 1962, is running for mayor in the April 5 city election. She is opposing Carroll Thomas and Steve Davidson.

Her overriding concern is to get the Martin Luther King Center to become a reality and not just a dream. She envisions it being constructed near Washington Park and Carver Cultural Center and providing a multitude of services. It could serve as a locale for dentists' and physicians' offices, a Texas Employment Commission branch, child welfare, day care, recreational center and library. And like the King Center in Dallas, it could be built in phases, she said.

"The conflict comes about because of Casa de Amigos...people saying services will be duplicated," she said. But she pointed out Casa is supported by funds from the private sector while the King Center would be built by federal funds. "It would be on a broader scale and would help all needy people of Midland," she said.

ELECTION '86

The center would be a facelift for the south side of Midland, noted Ms. Harris in citing her support for the facility.

She is opposed to a new YMCA facility that is planned for northeast Midland in Tolbert Park along with the development of adjacent land into a neighborhood park.

"We have a council constantly fighting for a new YMCA and a new Tolbert Park," she said. "We don't need another park...not in that area. We're not utilizing what we have."

Ms. Harris pointed out Park Center Y isn't being used and Washington Y usage has dropped. "There's the Central Y on Big Spring Street. Why build another one?"

Looking back to her early years in Midland she can recall the department stores located downtown. "I'd like to see downtown look as downtown did 20-25 years ago with dry goods stores and shoe stores."

People who don't have transportation have difficulty getting to the malls on northern edges of the city, she said. "I can remember when you could walk to town. Now you try and walk to one of those malls."

Effects of the dropping oil prices have hit residents in the lower-income south and east sides and signal a need for economic diversification, according to Ms. Harris.

While these people may not comprehend all the factors involving the oil prices, many understand they have had their salaries cut or jobs eliminated as a result. "I've had young people say they were making $3.35 an hour and have been cut back to $2.35. Even though it hurts when the price of oil drops, I think how it affects people in that community who take a 25 percent pay cut. There are jobless people who say they can't get jobs.

"We need diversification. People are wanting to work. But if there are no jobs how can you work?" she said.

"Hindsight should have taught us by now we can't depend on one major industry."

She agrees the city should apply for the federal Community Development Block Grant funds, but disagrees over how they should be spent. In previous years a portion has been designated to paving dirt roads in the targeted south and east sides.

While some citizens can't afford to have their street paved, Ms. Harris said other residents in that area "depend on others to do everything that needs to be done. If people want paving bad enough, they can do it. They'll buy a Cadillac and then not have money for food."

She would prefer to see some of that money targeted for the Martin Luther King Center, which could assist "older people who have given their life work to the community. These are proud people. They need to be shown appreciation for all the years they scrubbed toilets and cleaned floors. These people did menial tasks 20 to 40 years and are now senior citizens. This center would help show our appreciation for them."

Whatever the outcome of the mayoral election, Ms. Harris said she won't stop pushing to see the Martin Luther King Center become a reality.

"I'm going to keep trying until I get the center," she said.

Tuesday: Mayoral candidate Carroll Thomas.

"(The King Center) would be on a broader scale and would help all needy people of Midland."

Father calls son's recovery from cancer 'miracle'

ABILENE (AP) — A 5-year-old boy who only a few weeks ago lay dying in a Dallas hospital has returned home after radiation, chemotherapy and other treatment seemed to begin curing his cancer, doctors said.

Brody Kerby's illness has been short but painful since cancer was discovered Dec. 3, two days before his birthday. His spine was wrapped in life-sapping tumors.

The boy's 70-pound body shrank to 45 pounds, and he began to cough up blood.

But last week, the doctors sent him home because the impossible seems to have happened.

Doctors said evidence of Brody's tumors disappeared from the screens of the machines that reliably spot cancer masses.

A special pump inside his head kept fluid from putting pressure on his brain, from which the first tumor was removed three months ago.

His mouth, throat and head were burned from weeks of radiation and chemotherapy.

James and Cecile Kerby said their son was suspicious of everybody because even people who were nice to him at first would stick him with needles later.

Today, Brody's appetite is increasing. He watches television and asks his 18-year-old brother, Russell, to toss him a baseball.

"The only thing it can be is a miracle," his father said. "We questioned his treatment. We didn't want him poked with any more needles.

"And the day the doctor told us the good news, I asked him, 'If this mass of tumor has disappeared in 12 weeks, was it actually there?'

"He said yes, positively, and he said the drug (methotrexate), acting like a vitamin because he gave it in particularly small doses, might have fooled the tumor into absorbing all the medicine."

Dr. Barton A. Kamen, associate professor of pediatrics and pharmacology at Southwestern Medical School in Dallas, said the child may yet face a struggle before complete recovery.

"I like to think it's a miracle, but it's too soon," said Kamen. "If it stays away and doesn't come back in a long time, then I'd consider it a cure."

Jerusalem procession 'overwhelming'

AP Laserphoto

A group of nuns carrying palm branches and singing hymns enter Jerusalem during the traditional Palm Sunday procession.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian Christians led throngs of pilgrims from around the world down the steep slopes of the bibilical Mount of Olives to the walled Old City of Jerusalem in a traditional Palm Sunday procession.

Little girls in frilly pink dresses and Boy Scouts carrying flags sang Hosanna, or "please redeem us" in Arabic, and waved small olive and palm branches during the two-hour march.

Jerrold McRae, a former pro football player from Philadelphia, watched the procession and said, "This is overwhelming. It makes the Bible come alive for me. It gives me more of a sense of appreciation for what Christ did for me."

McRae, 30, a wide receiver with the Philadelphia Eagles and Kansas City Chiefs until 1980, said he planned to ride along the path on a donkey this morning, as Jesus did some 2,000 years ago.

Palm Sunday opened a week of Easter celebrations in this holy city where Jesus preached and was crucified. The procession is symbolic of Jesus' entrance into Jerusalem on a white donkey before his death on Good Friday.

Most of the tens of thousands of pilgrims who come to Jerusalem each Palm Sunday are from Western Europe, with others from the United States and Canada. Prayers were heard in Arabic, English, Chinese, Spanish, French and German.

"I think it's great to hear so many languages, even if I can't understand them all," said Rhonda Roman, 22, a student from Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Israeli officials said they expect between 50,000 to 60,000 pilgrims during Easter, the same as last year. The number of tourists who visited Jerusalem and Bethlehem at Christmas was down 20 percent from 1984.

Many tourists who would have come here in December were frightened away from the Middle East by an upsurge in terrorist attacks, including the hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship off Egypt. American travel agencies reported a marked decline in bookings for Middle East.

But the violence has decreased, and for at least some of the pilgrims, visiting the Holy Land was a dream come true.

"This is a journey of a lifetime. We do this procession in my hometown. But here we are seeing where it all happened. It's really something," said Bessie Knott, 65, of Bury, England.

Soviet schoolgirl wants to meet many American children

Lycheva

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet schoolgirl Katerina Lycheva said today she wants to meet "as many American kids as possible" on her peace mission to five U.S. cities.

Spending her first full day in the nation's largest city, Katerina appeared on network TV today, then headed for a meeting with American schoolchildren and a visit to the Statue of Liberty.

The 11-year-old's visit was prompted by a 1983 Soviet tour by Maine schoolgirl Samantha Smith, who died in a plane crash last year.

"Samantha was very much like our Soviet girls," Katerina said on NBC-TV's "Today" program. "We all saw something very familiar and very nice and she was close to our hearts."

"I like the people here, I like the kids here a lot. They are so good and kind," she said on the CBS Morning News. "And I've been really welcomed everywhere."

Katerina arrived Sunday in New York from Chicago, accompanied by a 10-year-old San Francisco girl selected to travel with her on the tour, which will take them to Washington, Houston and Los Angeles.

Both girls lighted a candle after they arrived at LaGuardia Airport.

"I light this candle because if we don't have peace in the world, we have no world," said Star Rowe.

"I light this candle and I hope the sun will always shine as bright as this candle," Katerina said. "And I think that it will shine to all children in the world, and for this we must struggle for peace."

"Sometimes grown-ups find it very hard to get together to agree about things," she told reporters. "I think if it was up to the children, it would take us about a minute or so to get together."

The San Francisco-based Children As The Peacemakers is sponsoring Katerina's two-week tour — her first outside the Soviet Union.

Today, Katerina was to be interviewed on national television, participate in an exchange of "peace letters" at a Brooklyn public elementary school and do some sightseeing.

Katerina said she looked forward most to seeing the Statue of Liberty.

In Chicago, an American family welcomed Katerina into their home, where she sampled barbecued chicken, toyed with a computer and made friends with children oblivious to their nations' differences.

"It was just like having a friend over," said 11-year-old Kristy Mace of suburban Oak Park after Saturday night's visit. "She was shy at first, but then she loosened up. We talked about what anyone would talk about if you didn't know each other."

Katerina will be in Washington on Wednesday and Thursday, and then goes to Houston and Los Angeles.

Katerina said at LaGuardia she had a doll for President Reagan, but organizers said it was unclear if she would meet the president.

Panel proposes manned space settlements

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential panel is proposing an ambitious, $700 billion space program that would put manned settlements on the moon and Mars and vastly expand space travel to perhaps 1 million travelers a day, a published report says.

The National Commission on Space, appointed by President Reagan a year ago, said in its study that it envisions a time within the next half century when outposts on the moon and Mars would become permanent installations furnishing the necessities of life and sustaining exploration, scientific work and resource development, Aviation Week & Space Technology reports in its March 24 editions.

The commission is expected to present the report to the White House next month, says Aviation Week, which obtained a final draft of the panel's report.

The 200-page report, called "Pioneering the Space Frontier: Our Next 50 Years in Space," is dedicated to the seven-member crew of the Challenger who died when their space shuttle exploded Jan. 28.

Commission spokesman Leonard David said in a telephone interview Sunday night that the commission did not scale back any of its goals in the wake of the Challenger accident.

"We have been working since last March, looking at the full range of possibilities of where we would go beyond a space station. We have been looking at a lot of issues that didn't change after the Challenger accident," he said.

David declined to answer questions about details of the report, but said the commission was finished with its work and discussing the report's release date with the White House.

The panel is headed by Thomas O. Paine, former administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and also includes Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon; astronaut Kathryn Sullivan; and retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Chuck Yeager, the first pilot to fly faster than the speed of sound.

The commission proposes that in the early stages of the space program, new equipment be developed, including a low-orbit cargo vehicle, a passenger vehicle for travel to and from low Earth orbit, and a transfer ship to carry passengers and cargo beyond the moon.

That vehicle also would provide "ferry service" in the inner solar system, the report says.

Those new space vehicles would follow up the space station proposed by the Reagan administration for the mid-1990s.

Between 1995 to 2020, spending would total about $700 billion, the report said. That figure is pegged to NASA's budget growing proportionately to the gross national product.

The report envisions a "network of spaceports between the earth, the moon and Mars," with a permanant colony on Mars by 2027.

The commission also calls for use of a more advanced version of the space shuttle, a reusable rocket vehicle. The report says the eventual transportion of a million passengers a day in space is "not out of the question," given the growth of air transportion in the past 50 years.

The report also recommends expanded searches for asteroids that might contain mineral and other resources, and stepped-up development of robot technology for space operations.

Best film, actress awards unpredictable

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Star-struck movie fans gathered outside the Los Angeles Music Center overnight for the 58th Academy Award vigil, a chance to grab a glimpse or a snapshot of a screen legend in the flesh.

The faithful who crowded the "Artists' Entrance" screeched their approval as such stars as Barbra Streisand, Cher, John Huston and Alan Alda arrived by limousine for Sunday night's less-than glittery rehearsal.

The rumpled actors and actresses wore sweat suits and jeans, but in 24 hours would be turned out in tuxedos and gowns for the magic moment when about 1 billion television viewers worldwide will hear a voice announce: "And the winner is ..."

Will "Out of Africa" win best picture or "The Color Purple?" Or will both favorites be beaten out by such longshots as "Prizzi's Honor," "Kiss of the Spider Woman" or "Witness?"

Will Meryl Streep take home a second best actress Oscar for her portrayal of a writer in "Out of Africa?" Or will the Academy give the golden statuette to newcomer Whoopi Goldberg for her portrayal of an oppressed black woman in "The Color Purple?"

Unlike the previous three years when winners were predictable, the awards for best film achievements of 1985 are anybody's guess.

The only certainty is the celebrity power of this awards show. Producer Stanley Donen has promised the most star-studded Oscar gala in recent memory. About 1 billion television viewers worldwide are expected to watch the show.

Among those who showed up to try out their lines and stand on their marks were legendary directors Huston, Billy Wilder and Akira Kurosawa.

Bob Hope was there, preparing to present the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award to actor Charles "Buddy" Rogers, husband of the late Mary Pickford.

Miss Streisand, who has endured snubs from the Academy in the past, was cheerfully ready to hand out the award for best director.

In addition to presenters and recipients, the famous faces in tonight's show include past winners who have been invited to sit in the audience, including Sidney Poitier, Lee Marvin, Olivia de Havilland, Robert Duvall, Jose Ferrer, Joan Fontaine and Ernest Borgnine.

Donen, the director of "Singin' in the Rain" and "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," also enlisted alumnae from MGM musicals for a musical number by Howard Keel, "Once a Star, Always a Star." The stars: Jane Powell, Ann Miller, Marge Champion, June Allyson, Kathryn Grayson, Esther Williams, Cyd Charisse, Leslie Caron, Debbie Reynolds.

Backstage politics may influence the ultimate outcome of the best picture race. The Academy's failure to nominate director Steven Spielberg for "The Color Purple" angered some in the Hollywood film community. The Directors Guild responded by giving Spielberg its top award.

"Out of Africa," a lushly romantic film set in the vivid landscape of colonial Africa, is a favorite for best picture. But sentimental feelings about the 79-year-old Huston could boost "Prizzi's Honor," his sardonic comedy-drama of love and duplicity in the Mafia underworld which costars his daughter, Anjelica.

A split among voters could also throw votes to two sleepers, "Kiss of the Spider Woman," the powerful drama of politics and the prison life of a fiery revolutionary and a movie-mad homosexual; and "Witness," the popular cop chase through Pennsylvania Amish country.

Only one acting nominee has said he won't be there. Harrison Ford, nominated as best actor for "Witness," is filming "The Mosquito Coast" in Belize, formerly British Honduras, with Australian Peter Weir, nominee for his direction of "Witness."

Paul Newman, who receives a special Oscar for "his many memorable and compelling screen performances and for his personal integrity and dedication to his craft," plans to accept from Chicago, where he is filming "The Color of Money," an update of "The Hustler."

The ABC telecast, featuring Alda, Jane Fonda and Robin Williams as hosts, begins at 8 p.m. CST.

NICARAGUA

"The Senate knows the issues," Regan said. "We have unleased enough information about this subject that we won't have to re-educate anybody or anything of that nature." The top Reagan aide predicted that this week's debate will have "a lot less rhetoric" than the extremely sharp tone that marked the House vote.

In an interview this morning on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said U.S. advisers would not necessarily have to follow the aid to the rebels.

"It would depend entirely on what the Contras would want," Weinberger said. "If the Contras indicated they wanted some training to go along with the equipment, a few trainers might go into Honduras if Honduras was willing. It isn't in any sense necessary. A lot of this equipment we're talking about is very basic equipment. It's rifles and ammunition and things to shoot down Soviet supply helicopters and gunships...

"There's certainly no requirement for any American troops to go to Nicaragua."

Reagan, in the Times interview, complained that he was the subject of "scurrilous" attacks against him, and that his opponents had engaged in falsehoods and exceeded the boundaries of fairness in the debate.

Although Reagan declined to name any names, he said opponents of his request for $100 million for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua made "flat declarations" that his policy was aimed at sending U.S. troops to the Latin American nation.

"You are looking at the last (person) in the world that would ever want to put American troops into Latin America. ... We would lose all our friends if we did anything of that kind. And we have not been asked," Reagan said.

On other issues, Reagan:

• Said deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos should not be given any special treatment under U.S. law. Marcos, now in exile in Hawaii, has been the target of lawsuits filed in U.S. courts by the new Philippines government.

• Responded to the Senate Budget Committee's rejection Thursday of his 1987 budget and the committee's call for $18.7 billion in new revenue by saying tax increases were not needed.

OPEC

"No ceiling, no quotas, no nothing," he said.

The problem was deciding which members would lower their output and by how much, sources said earlier.

Iraq was among the countries resisting the proposed individual output quotas, which in its case would be about 1.2 million barrels a day for the spring period, down from its estimated current rate of 1.7 million daily.

Asked by reporters after Sunday's session whether he would agree to such a reduction, the chief Iraqi delegate, Ramzi Salman Abdul Hussain said, "No way."

Iraq and Iran, which have been at war for 5½ years, extended their conflict to Geneva, several sources said.

Both countries are heavily dependent on oil revenues to finance the war, and are at sharp odds over any change in the other's production quotas.

Earlier in the conference the Iranian delegation declared it would not agree to any OPEC deal that allowed Iraq to produce more than 1.2 million barrels daily.

Iran is believed to be pumping about 1.8 million barrels a day and is pushing for a quota of more than 2 million barrels daily.

Venezuela also was a major obstacle to agreement Sunday, according to sources. These officials said Hernandez Grisanti declared his country would not cut its production at all.

Venezuela depends on oil for more than 90 percent of its export earnings, and the 50 percent drop in oil prices this year has deepened its financial problems. OPEC members Nigeria and Ecuador are in a similar bind.

In a sign of the importance attached to the Geneva negotiations, Libya's state-run news agency JANA reported that Saudi Arabia's King Fahd and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy discussed the deliberations Sunday in a telephone conversation.

The report said the two leaders had agreed "to face up to the collapse of oil prices, as well as the current OPEC meeting."

"Agreement was also reached on the need to adopt a production ceiling to which all the OPEC member states must be committed in accordance with quotas to be determined," the JANA report said.

OPEC members are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela. Major producers such as Britain, Norway and Mexico do not belong to the cartel.

CANCER

He called the boy's treatment "a newer method - using a very old drug in a new way, in conjunction with radiotherapy."

What was used was standard radiation with repetitive low doses of methotrexate, rather than the more commonly used high doses of the drug. Some people have used a thousand times the dosage, Kamen said.

Brody's special treatment was adopted, he said, because the tumors were "so bad we felt it would be appropriate to discuss newer methods of therapy with the family."

Kamen explained, "We felt it would be less toxic than the old drug, but it might not have worked at all."

"If anybody comes to me with a brain tumor like Brody's, and spread like this down the spine, the likelihood of survival is very, very poor," he said.

Kerby said Brody will continue taking the drug every other week while he's at home, then he'll go back to Dallas May 1 to see the team of doctors. The boy will have another test, he said, "and if nothing shows up, they'll check again later."

Clarification

In Wednesday's story on Frontier Airline's "frills list," it should be noted that the airline will allow two carry-on pieces, charging $3 for additional pieces, up to 5 pieces.

Also, advance seat assignment is available only at check-in prior to the flight.

Athletes' experience common, official says

LAREDO (AP) — A U.S. Customs official says the passport-checking procedure which spoiled the fun of seven foreign-born Abilene Christian University athletes who crossed the border without passports is not unusual.

In fact, it's very common, said U.S. Customs Court Director Alfonso DeLeon, who said that the passports of tourists who are not from the United States are routinely checked.

"My understanding is that they were foreign students and they forgot their passports," DeLeon said Sunday.

The track athletes had come to this border town to compete in the Border Olympics.

They went across the Rio Grande to Nuevo Laredo with track coach Don Hood, who said they were detained for about two hours.

He said a customs supervisor ordered him to appear with the track team members within two weeks at a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service office and bring their documentation papers.

He said the athletes were permitted back into the country, but must present their passport or immigration documentation later.

Hood said that the ACU women's track coach, Wes Kittley, had taken his team to Nuevo Laredo during the Border Olympics last week and had no trouble returning to the U.S.

"We just went over the border after the meet and and all the kids bought something to take back with them," Hood said.

Hood said he, his wife and 17 team members went to Nuevo Laredo late Saturday and the team agreed to meet back at the old International Bridge at 10 p.m. for the walk through customs.

"Five of the team members arrived together. Three of the boys were from Jamaica and one of them was from Trinidad," Hood said. "I decided to wait at customs to make sure these kids don't have any trouble. A second group of 12 students had not yet arrived."

He said all the students had their ACU identification cards with photos and some had Texas driver's licenses. Three also wore purple and white track jackets with ACU identification on them.

"I was standing very near and they asked my assistant coach, Albert Lawrence of Jamaica, who coaches my sprinters, 'Where are you from?' He replied, 'Abilene, Texas.' They could tell he had an accent. They asked again, 'Where is your home?' He said, 'I am from Texas. I go to school at Abilene Christian,'" Hood said.

"They asked, 'You are a citizen of what country?' Albert said, 'I am from Jamaica,'" said Hood. "They were also talking to other boys. A customs man walked up and I told him, 'These guys are all on my track team. We were told that that is no problem.' He said, 'You have a problem. They are lying about their citizenship.'"

DeLeon said customs officers were following normal procedures.

"Apparently when they came through, they said they were from Texas," DeLeon said. "If you claim to be from Texas and then you're not, well, we're going to look into this."

Voting box's move violated law

CROCKETT (AP) — Houston County election officials violated a federal law when they moved a voting precinct box to a private club that excludes blacks as members, the U.S. Justice Department says.

About 100 local black residents complained to Houston County commissioners that since blacks are not allowed in the Porter Springs Civic Club, many blacks would stay away from the polls rather than go to the club.

"If we aren't good enough to go there when we want, then we don't want to vote there," said Joe Warner, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

County commissioners have scheduled a public hearing for today to discuss where to move the box, which serves 400 voters.

The box was in a local store, and when it burned down, it was moved to the civic club which opened in 1982.

The move, however, did not meet with the Voting Rights Act, which is designed to prevent electoral changes that could weaken or dilute minority voting strength, said Gus Taylor, a community relations arbitrator with the Justice Department.

Under the law, any change — new precincts, polling places or even schedules — require federal approval.

The Justice Department will review the new location suggestions sent to them and issue a comment within 60 days, said John Wilson, a department spokesman.

'Insidious gas' constant danger in oil fields

ODESSA (AP) — Debra Perrin lost seven members of her family and a friend to the insidious gas, hydrogen sulfide, 11 years ago.

And if God hadn't been good to her, she says, "I'd be crazy right now."

Today, Ms. Perrin, 31, says she has accepted her loss.

But what she can't accept is a lack of concern about the menace posed by hydrogen sulfide, which wiped out her family when it leaked from a cracked injection well in an oil field in Denver City, 90 miles north of here, in 1975.

Foul-smelling but invisible, it permeates the oil fields of West Texas, and safety expert King Hyde calls it an "insidious gas" because it can kill people before they know they have been exposed.

In addition, a 1977 report from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health said it can cause brain and nerve damage, although its long-term effects are still somewhat unclear.

In farming country, it causes "dung lung," asphyxiation leading to unconsciousness or death, the NIOSH report said.

In rayon plants, it causes "spinner's eye," an irritation of the eyes through prolonged exposure to the gas at relatively low levels.

And it can kill by preventing its victims from absorbing enough oxygen.

The rotten egg odor of hydrogen sulfide also dampens a victim's sense of smell at about the same time it reaches fatal concentrations, said Hyde, who owns Standby International, a Midland-Odessa company that manufactures and leases safety equipment for oil field use.

The gas often forms in deposits of organic material that have become hydrocarbon fuels — oil, natural gas, coal and shale oil. Hydrogen sulfide also is formed geologically, when sulfur is heated by the earth's inner fires.

About 20,000 people in this area make their homes among oil and gas wells, pipelines and tank batteries — prime candidates for a hydrogen sulfide leak.

Several residents have complained about the compound that is so corrosive that warning signs have to be specially coated so they won't disintegrate.

John Davis, for example, says he fears the gas might overcome him during sleep some night.

"That well right there (near his house) has gassed us pretty often," said Davis, 58. "It about puts you to sleep...If I could afford it, I'd move. You're liable to lay down at night and not wake up in the morning."

Despite the threat of the gas, few people are doing long-term studies on it, said Herbert Venable, a NIOSH environmental scientist.

Gary Wimbish, a toxicologist at the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine in Fort Worth, said that few scientists have shown an interest in laboratory studies of the gas.

"Just practically speaking, very few people want to study this compound because it stinks like crazy," Wimbish said.

The federal government years ago recommended stricter standards for worker exposure to the gas, but never pushed the proposal. Today's U.S. exposure standard is nearly 20 years old and is double the level permitted in such countries as the Soviet Union.

Installing safety equipment to minimize exposure dangers hasn't caught on either, mostly because of the expense, said safety expert Hyde.

"You and I couldn't afford to buy gas" if all wells were monitored for hydrogen sulfide, a gas that hangs near the ground and often comes to the surface mixed with drilling mud in oil wells, he said.

In 1985, the Texas Railroad Commission adopted new rules that require well and pipeline operators to train their employees to deal with hydrogen sulfide and to use servicing companies whose workers had received similar safety training.

Besides the Denver City disaster, the gas killed 19 workers on a Saudi Arabian oil rig in the Persian Gulf in 1980 and 83 workers on a Chinese offshore oil rig just last year.

Workers no longer rely on smell to detect gas

GOLDSMITH (AP) — As long as you can smell the rotten-egg odor of hydrogen sulfide, you're all right.

At least that's what derrick man Gilbert Luna said he used to tell himself before he passed out twice from the effects of the gas. But now, he said, he takes the gas' telltale odor more seriously.

Luna, 23, said his worst experiences with hydrogen sulfide occurred in 1982 and 1983.

In 1982, Luna and other workers were "bleeding" a well, or letting pressure escape from the well casing, he said.

"I smelled it immediately," Luna recalled. "It's hard to describe — some people think is smells like rotten eggs, but it really smells more like a sewer."

Realizing quickly that he'd inhaled too much gas, the derrick man ran about 40 feet from a pulling unit before collapsing. He regained consciousness in about 30 seconds, stood and returned to work.

"It paralyzes your lungs," he said.

As Luna watched several co-workers erect a pulling unit west of Odessa near Goldsmith recently, he recalled: "It affects your nervous system. It feels like you can't breathe. You gasp for air and it knocks you out. It's sort of like hyperventilating."

A year after his first experience with hydrogen sulfide, Luna said he was working on a well when hydrogen sulfide surged from the surrounding tubes.

"I got a good whiff, and just passed out," he said, adding that the second incident also lasted 30 seconds.

Gilbert Luna

The oil field worker returned to work but suffered headaches the rest of the day. No one suggested that he visit a hospital, he said.

"The attitude used to be that unless you break a bone and the bone's showing, go ahead and work" he said. "Used to be, if you could smell it, the H2S, it ain't nothing, go ahead and work. Somebody had to pass out. You had to have proof."

That attitude changed with the passage of new safety handling of hydrogen sulfide, according to Gerald Mack Bradford.

A water well driller who works in the oil fields, Bradford said workers now treat hydrogen sulfide with more respect because of required schooling about its potential effects.

Like Luna, Bradford said most oil field workers used to believe they were safe as long as they could smell the gas.

Today, under new safety regulations, the same workers use gas detectors instead of trusting their noses, and they don masks whenever they fear the presence of high hydrogen sulfide concentrations, Bradford said.

Two other oil field workers seemed less concerned, however.

Roustabout Michael Blaylock paid no heed to a sign a few feet from his truck that warned visitors of hydrogen sulfide present in nearby oilfields. The 26-year-old recalled attending a recent seminar on the hazards of working near hydrogen sulfide.

"I'm lucky, I guess," Blaylock said, citing five years as a roustabout without experiencing ill effects from the gas.

Raul Aranda, a 16-year oil field welder of pump jack belt guards, tipped his hat back thoughtfully but could not recall having had any known dangerous exposures to the gas.

A Kermit resident and owner of Aranda's Welding and Roustabout Service, Aranda said he works almost daily near the gas, but rarely works around high concentrations of it. Despite its reputed dangers, he said the gas evokes few fears in him.

"It's just like everything else: You have to be careful," Aranda said. "But you really can't afford to think about it too much. You got to do your job."

Tuesday, March 25, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: During the coming year others are attracted to you, finding you more pleasing and entertaining than they ever imagined. This realization helps set the stage for romantic pleasures and for cooperative associates at work to help to get things going your way. Maintain close contact with family and friends, especially those living at a distance. Avoid overexertion in order to prevent serious illness. Love prospers with the passing of time.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Singers Elton John and Aretha Franklin, feminist Gloria Steinem, sportscaster Howard Cosell, actress Simone Signoret, conductor Arturo Toscanini and former Miss America Anita Bryant.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone is willing to help you ease financial pressures. Make every effort to accept invitations to attend social functions tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial interests must not be neglected. Consult experts for advice before making decisions. Arrangements regarding your personal life look promising.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dress for success as you will be in the limelight. Share this exciting experience with loved ones. Your creative or artistic talents are well rewarded with money or recognition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Review your past accomplishments before setting future goals. A new offer comes your way, but carefully consider the benefits of remaining where you are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remember that children need a great deal of attention when they are going through difficult times. A platonic relationship is very comforting this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Getting a firmer grip on reality results in progress and success for your career or your finances. Joint assets enjoy favorable influences today. Romance responds to the soft-glove approach this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use discretion when making choices as your good reputation may be on the line. Mixing and mingling with new friends may improve the bottom line. A new romantic interest makes for a very interesting evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Guard your contacts carefully; someone may be interested in your job. Working by yourself is more productive as other associates have their own project and problems. Enjoy a quiet moment with loved ones tonight.

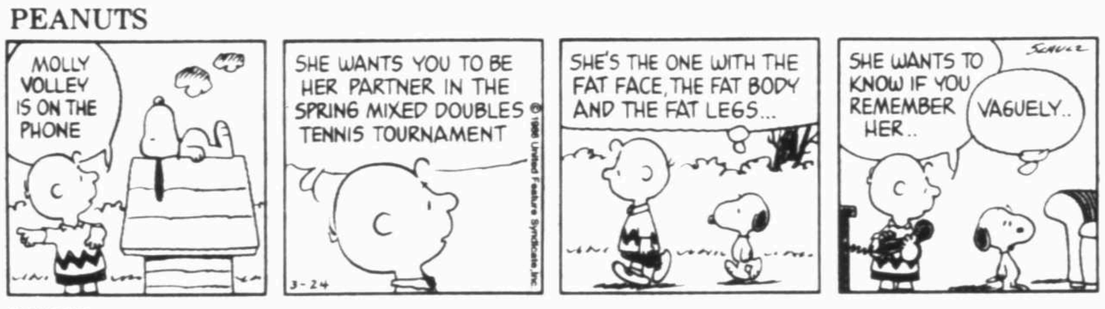

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Getting down to business early this morning will make this a red-letter day for productivity. Mixing with a younger crowd gives you a new perspective. Influences are positive for signing contracts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use a more practical approach to solving your financial dilemma. Revise your budget after having a family conference. Set a good example; make sacrifices yourself.

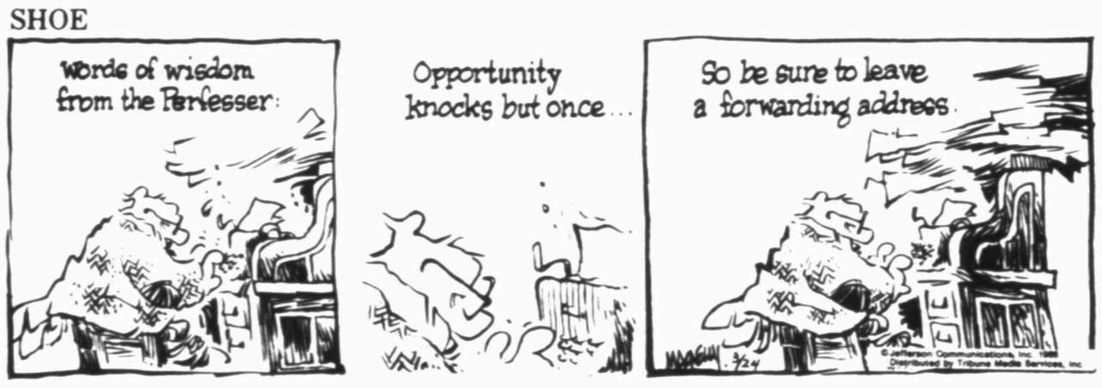

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fraternizing on a romantic level at work is not in your better interest. Beware! If you are considering starting a new business, financing is more readily available than in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Meet all current financial obligations before incurring any more. A surprise lifts your spirits this afternoon. An evening spent with friends proves most enjoyable, provided you do not pick up the tab.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J ♡Q987 ◇AJ983 ♣AK6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you play that a two-over-one response is forcing to game, you can simply set the trump suit now by bidding three hearts. If you do not, you cannot afford that action since partner might pass; and to bid four hearts could easily result in your missing a slam. Therefore, we suggest a bid of three clubs, with vigorous support for hearts at your next turn.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10 ♡AQ763 ◇J982 ♣Q83
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Since you are near maximum for your response with stoppers in all the unbid suits, we suggest you pass and be happy to make a doubled contract, perhaps with overtricks worth, at this vulnerability, 200 points each. The alternative is to redouble, but that might force the opponents to a contract where a double would not be quite as lucrative for your side.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ83 ♡AK952 ◇73 ♣A2
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Since North is a passed hand, his jump to game shows a hand that revalues to at least the equivalent of an opening bid in support of hearts. That means you are in the slam zone, and we would certainly make a move. The obvious one is a cue-bid of four spades, to see if that inspires partner.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ53 ♡AK102 ♣AK876
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇

What do you bid now?
A.—The auction makes it a certainty that you have an eight-card fit in some suit, and you want to be in game in that suit. The obvious choice lies between a double (for takeout, naturally) and a cue-bid of three hearts. Since we don't really want to give partner the opportunity of converting to a penalty double, we prefer the cue-bid.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q6 ♡86 ◇A102 ♣KJ7643
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	3 ◇	?

What do you bid now?
A.—East's preempt has lifted the auction to an uncomfortably high level, and you will have to guess. We can think of too many hands that partner might hold which will offer no play at all for 11 tricks, so we would rule out five clubs, and four clubs asks for us to be left hanging. We would opt for three no trump as the most flexible bid under the circumstances. If the defenders do run five tricks in a major, we will apologize to partner.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK ♡QJ3 ◇Q92 ♣106542
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Your choices are three clubs or two no trump. Although technically we need 13 points to jump to two no trump, our fifth club makes up for the 1 high-card point we are short. Since our hand is balanced and 11 tricks could be too high, we would opt for two no trump.

Cary Grant tells SMU audience he disliked working with Mae West

Cary Grant

DALLAS (AP) — Actor Cary Grant said Alfred Hitchcock was one of his favorite directors, he learned his comic timing from George Burns and disliked working with actress Mae West.

The 82-year-old actor made the comments on Sunday at Southern Methodist University.

"I never knew anyone quite as capable as Hitch," said Grant during the afternoon event, "A Conversation with Cary Grant," at SMU's McFarlin Auditorium.

He said Hitchcock was a tasteful and reserved man with a wonderful sense of humor. He said the director once devised fake names for characters, such as "Mike Shadow," whom Grant said was a villain, and "Otto Focus."

Grant said he got to work with Ms. West but wished he had not.

"It was terrible — well, not terrible, but disconcerting to say the least," he said.

He said Burns and actors A.E. Matthews, Noel Coward and Jack Buchanan most influenced his career. Grant said he admired but did not work with Mickey Rooney and Spencer Tracy.

Grant, who fielded questions from the audience but refused to be photographed, was asked which of his films he liekd the best.

"I like them all," he said. "Whether or not you like them all is another matter."

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — In a spoof in advance of tonight's Academy Awards, Sylvester Stallone, his wife and his brother swept the 6th annual Golden Raspberry Awards for the worst in movies.

Stallone

Stallone's "Rambo: First Blood, Part II" was voted 1985's worst film by the 170-member Golden Raspberry Award Foundation. He took the Razzies for worst actor, director and screenplay; his actress-wife Brigitte Nielsen won for worst supporting actress and new star; and brother Frank Stallone's tune "Peace in Our Life" was picked worst song.

Miss Nielsen won the worst supporting actress trophy for Stallone's "Rocky IV," and her worst new star win was based on her performances in "Rocky IV" and "Red Sonja."

Stallone won the worst actor category for both "Rambo" and "Rocky IV," the first time someone has taken the worst actor award for two titles.

Stallone had another first of sorts, in that "Rambo" is the only Razzie worst picture winner to make money, foundation spokesman John Wilson said.

No more studying

If we waited before giving up cigarettes until scientists could tell us exactly how smoking promotes the growth of malignant tumors, we all might end up in the cancer ward.

By the same token, we could study the acid rain problem until the trees and the lakes are all dead. There may never be full understanding of every link in the chain of causation. It may never be possible to trace the elements in the smokestacks of Midwestern power plants all the way to the body of a dead fish in the Adirondacks.

But the trees and the lakes are dying in the United States and in Canada. Something must be done, and we know the cause, to a moral certainty. That is now agreed between our two countries and acknowledged in a White House statement this week by President Reagan and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada.

Some in the coal and energy business are still resisting, still demanding absolute proof, still questioning scientific findings, as the tobacco industry continues to do. But finally the Reagan administration has stopped studying and agreed to start acting.

Credit must go to Drew Lewis, Reagan's former secretary of transportation, who agreed to act as a special envoy of the United States in negotiations with a Canadian envoy on this question. The recommendation of the two envoys was realistic. It calls for the United States to spend $5 billion over the next five years on demonstration projects to control the emission from the coal-burning power plants that are the worst offenders. Half of the money is supposed to come from the electric industry, the other half from the federal government.

Let's hope the program works. It is at best merely a start. Specific goals for the reduction of emissions must be set. And an industrywide approach to the problem will be necessary. The cost should be spread widely, not imposed entirely on sections of the country which are already suffering from an industrial and economic slowdown.

The problem is international. It hits a neighbor country which is our biggest trading partner and our most important ally. Controlling acid rain is important to all of us.

Swiss nix the UN

For the pompously pious evangels of the United Nations, Switzerland's stunning rejection of a government recommendation to join the 159-member UN should serve as a sobering revelation.

This highly civilized nation, which has acted as a neutral clearing house in so many of the world's devastating wars, turned down proposed UN affiliation by a staggering 75.7 percent vote. The proposition was resoundingly defeated in every one of the country's 26 cantons.

Unsurprisingly, the worst route for the UN was in Geneva where the world organization maintains headquarters for its European division and 18 agencies. If a similar referendum were conducted in New York City, site of the UN world headquarters, the result probably would be much the same. Nobody enjoys having the UN next door.

For the record, Swiss voters opposed UN membership on the grounds it would weaken their own international groups, such as the Red Cross, and imperil their policy of armed neutrality. Basically, however, most Swiss look upon the UN as a ceremonial debating society dominated by the Soviet Union and the Third World countries — which is not far off the mark.

The attitude of the hard-headed Swiss toward the UN, and in their case a justifiable one, can best be summed up as: Who needs it?

Another View:

Dangerous misstep

The striking thing about the attempted coup at the Federal Reserve Board is the extreme incompetence of it. At a routine board meeting on Feb. 24, it now develops, the board voted 4 to 3 against its chairman, Paul Volcker, to lower interest rates. The majority were the four members appointed by President Reagan. This vote came at a bad moment, because the United States was engaged in difficult negotiations with a reluctant Germany and Japan over a worldwide reduction in interest. If American rates were to come down, it was essential that Japanese and German rates come down first.

The reason goes back to the exchange rates. The dollar has been sliding downward in relation to the mark and, especially, the yen. That's fine, because the dollar was grossly overvalued. But it has been dropping very fast, and monetary officials around the world, including Mr. Volcker, have been greatly concerned that it might get out of hand and accelerate. A free fall of the world's central currency would be a genuine catastrophe. Cutting the American interest rates would push the dollar down faster, as money left the United States to seek higher returns abroad — unless the other major financial powers were to cut their own interest rates first. That's why the vote of the four Federal Reserve Board members was not only a rebuff to Mr. Volcker but a remarkably dangerous misstep in the intricate monetary maneuvering now going on among the leading industrial countries.

Fortunately, that day — Feb. 24 — ended better than it began. The 4-3 vote to cut rates was taken in the morning. In the course of the afternoon, one of the majority, Wayne Angell, changed his mind. Mr. Angell, a Kansas banker and economist, had joined the board earlier in the month and had been in office just over two weeks at the time of the vote. He reversed his position before the rate reduction was publicly announced, and the moment passed quietly. Ten days later, on March 6, the Japanese cut their key interest rate, and the next day the Germans did the same. The Federal Reserve then voted, with no dissent, to follow them.

But the incident creates an uncertain prospect for the months ahead. When the two most recent appointees joined the board last month, there was much speculation about the possible emergence of a Reaganite majority that would seize control from Mr. Volcker and vote for easier money regardless of the exchange rates and the other international consequences. Mr. Angell's turnaround leaves that possibility ambiguous.

The person chiefly responsible for the Feb. 24 fiasco is Preston Martin, the vice chairman of the board and the senior figure among the four Reagan appointees. It is one thing to favor lower interest rates. It is entirely another to spring a surprise vote on the issue for the purpose of undercutting the chairman. The effect of Mr. Martin's ploy is to weaken the United States in the tense and difficult international monetary talks now in progress, on which — far more than on the domestic interest rates — the prosperity of this country now depends.

Congress wants to duck issue

Some members of the House and Senate got outraged at the suggestion that by rejecting the president's request for $100 million for Nicaraguan rebels they were being soft on communism. They remind me of a wife-beater who gets indignant when someone suggests he doesn't love what's left of his wife.

Charley Reese

Let's look at the bare facts of this issue. The question before the Congress is, shall the U.S. supply aid to Nicaraguan rebels fighting the communist-controlled government in Managua?

What is the position of the Communist Party of the United States? Don't supply the aid. What is the position of the communists in Managua? Don't supply the aid. What is the position of the Kremlin? Don't supply the aid. What is the position of the congressmen opposing the president's request? Don't supply the aid.

It seems to me a fair and reasonable inference that if your position is identical to the position of the communists that you are soft on communism. To be soft on communism does not mean that you are a traitor. It does not even mean that you are unpatriotic. It simply means exactly what the words imply: that you are reluctant, for whatever reason, to take measures that would discomfort the communists in question — in this case, those occupying positions of power in Managua.

A wife-beater may in fact really love his wife. He just has strange way of demonstrating it. The politicians we are talking about may in fact love their country. They just have a strange way of demonstrating it.

What these pols are in fact doing is trying to deflect responsibility and accountability. They would rather focus public attention on the red herring of whether the president is debating the question in a fair manner than on the question itself.

What they are afraid of is that the president is right. Suppose we don't provide the aid, and, later on, what the president predicts happens. These gutless wonders want to be able to say, "Well, if the president hadn't insulted me, I'd have voted for the aid. It's really his fault that it didn't pass."

What the American people need to keep in mind is that good intentions are not an excuse for bad results. The drunk driver who kills an innocent child certainly did not intend to kill the child, but the child is still dead. It neither helps the child nor assuages the grief of the child's parents that the drunk driver had good intentions. You don't let a drunk driver off the hook just because he didn't intend to kill anybody.

So, too, you should not let politicians off the hook just because they didn't intend to cause disasters by their votes. Negligence and bad judgment can be just as lethal as malice.

The issue now is whether we confront a Soviet beachhead on the North American continent with American weapons and Nicaraguan lives. If by failing to supply the weapons, we later have to supply the lives, then those members of Congress who voted against the aid are morally responsible for every single American death.

That's what these sorry politicians are trying to avoid by raising the phony issue of McCarthyism. If you have the opportunity to shoot a mad dog and you decline to do it because you are opposed to taking life then you are responsible for the dog's victims. They would not have been victims except for your decision not to shoot. What these cowards in Congress want is advance amnesty. They don't want to shoot the dog, but they don't want to be held responsible for the dog's victims either.

The American people have a choice. You can either believe the president or you can believe the communists in Managua. The communists in Managua say Ronald Reagan is a liar. They say they are not a Soviet beachhead. They say they won't try to overthrow democratic governments in surrounding countries.

Well, I personally believe Reagan. I think the communists in Managua are lying. Take your choice. But also take responsibility for the consequences of your choice. When reality reveals which side is correct, don't try to evade responsibility for having been wrong. We're all going to get blood on our hands. The question is will it be Nicaraguan or American?

Souped-up jet better than Stealth

WASHINGTON — Groaning and grimacing over the budget like a professional wrestler on camera, Congress is about to cry "Uncle!" to the Pentagon and approve the Air Force's crackbrained, $80 billion new toy: the Stealth bomber.

Jack Anderson

We've already reported Stealth's long list of deficiencies, including the most serious flaw of all: the acknowledged fact that the bomber, supposedly invisible to radar, won't be able to fool the old-fashioned radars the Soviet Union still has deployed.

Now we've unearthed an 8-year-old Pentagon study, still classified Secret, which shows that a souped-up commercial jetliner, with refinements, could do a better job than Stealth at a fraction of the cost. Yet this possibility isn't even being considered.

With its customary rigidity, the Defense Department, from Secretary Caspar Weinberger on down, is insisting that it must have its planned 132 Stealth bombers. Here's why this program is such a particularly wasteful and woodenheaded boondoggle:

Unlike the B-1 bomber, which was designed for use in either nuclear or conventional warfare, Stealth will be treated like the crown jewels. Sources told our associate Donald Goldberg that Stealth is to be used strictly as a second-strike weapon — that is, after an exchange of missiles.

The super-secret bomber will be rolled out of the hangar only after the nuclear holocaust has already begun. It can't be used before then because it's too expensive to lose and for fear that merely flying it will give away its design secrets.

Never mind that the invisibility to radar would hardly be necessary in the confusion and conflagration that follow a nuclear missile attack. Overlook the fact that even in peacetime, with nothing better to do, the Soviet air defense in 1983 took two hours to locate and shoot down the unarmed Korean Air Lines plane that had been wandering around in Soviet air space. Ignore the possibility that the KGB will find at least one vulnerable employee among the 30,000 who'll be working on the Stealth bomber, and be able to buy its secrets long before D-Day.

Why does the Air Force insist on the Stealth bomber, then? It's hard to escape the conclusion that the ex-pilots who run the Air Force are still hypnotized by the glamor of manned aircraft. Even under this Dr. Strangelove spell, there are few who will argue that a cruise missile with a small radar signature is an infinitely better penetrator than a slow-flying plane (which the Stealth must be to make its supposed invisibility work at all).

What the Pentagon should be buying is a simple plane that is hardened against some of the byproducts of a nuclear exchange — like electromagnetic pulse — and can get up fast enough to be safe in the air, where it could drop air-launched cruise missiles to devastate the Soviet Union. A plane like that would be a credible deterrent; Stealth is not.

The still-secret Pentagon study found just the plane that could do the job. The CMCA, or "cruise-missile-carrying aircraft," could be a Boeing 747 or a Lockheed L-1011 simply redesigned to meet the Pentagon's second-strike requirements. But no one in the military-industrial complex will lobby for this simple solution, which would produce few profits or promotions.

Given the reality of Washington, the cheap answer is out. But there's still a way to lop off a sizable part of the Stealth bomber's $80 billion price. If Congress can talk the Pentagon into 132 more B-1 bombers instead of Stealths, it would save the taxpayers approximately $55 billion.

EYE ON THE ECONOMY: Government economists are studying international currency fluctuations with more than usual interest. They're looking for signs that panicky OPEC countries are withdrawing their deposits from American banks to generate the cash they need. With their oil revenues plummeting so drastically, the oil-producing countries may have to tap into their dollar reserves. If investors around the world become spooked by the specter of a worldwide depression tied to oil's downfall and begin shifting to cash and precious metals, interest rates and inflation will soar as the dollar's value falls.

PRESSING PRESSER: The President's Commission on Organized Crime has had no luck at all trying to squeeze information out of Teamsters union President Jackie Presser. According to a crime commission draft report, Presser has been deposed twice, but he took the Fifth Amendment more than 250 times. One question he refused to answer on grounds that it might tend to incriminate him: "Are you the general president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters?"

MINI-EDITORIAL: Former Education Secretary Terrel Bell's stock has always been high with us, but right now it's soaring. In the current issue of Phi Delta Kappan magazine, he lambastes the fanatical but mercifully minuscule faction of right-wingers who, he says, tried to impose "radical and off-the-wall ideas" on his department. Ultimately, he says, the zealots wanted to eliminate the public school system altogether. Terrel Bell is a conservative Republican, and it probably pained him to take on those who are on the same side of the political fence.

Kissinger now advising Kemp

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger, longtime favorite whipping boy of Republican conservatives, is giving quiet counsel on difficult foreign policy matters to their prospective presidential standard bearer: Rep. Jack Kemp.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The relationship began when Kemp called Kissinger to congratulate him for his strong defense of President Reagan's "Star Wars" proposal. That started an irregular exchange of conversations on major foreign policy questions, an area of vulnerability for Kemp whose main interest is the domestic economy.

Kissinger has moved sharply rightward during the Reagan years and, said one Kemp aide, "the congressman likes him." But Kemp's main foreign policy adviser outside his staff remains former U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick.

BUD'S SLOW BURN

Robert McFarlane has discussed with a famous Washington lawyer his continuing anger at White House chief of staff Donald Regan for what he privately calls complicity in rumors a year ago about the former national security adviser's private life.

McFarlane's closest friends very much doubt that he would actually bring any kind of legal action against Regan or anyone else. But the rumors, publicly ignored by the highly disciplined ex-Marine colonel, played a major role in McFarlane's decision to leave the White House for private life.

His slow burn reveals what many suspected when he quit late last year: for good reason or bad, he was far angrier at Regan than he ever let on publicly. White House aides close to Regan say the chief of staff thought McFarlane had grabbed for too much power.

NO ANSWER FOR DUARTE

El Salvador's President Jose Napoleon Duarte, seeking the support of Rep. Dave McCurdy for aid to the Nicaraguan contras, tried hard but failed to reach the Oklahoma congressman the day before the House vote.

When Duarte's international call failed to get through to McCurdy, the Salvadoran leader asked that it be returned. It never was. The middle-of-the-road lawmaker, who has been a principal Democratic target of administration lobbying on the issue, ended up voting against the bill.

No vote against President Reagan's contra aid aggravated the White House more than McCurdy's. His article in the March 14 Washington Post suggested holding up aid for 90 days to give time for regional peace negotiations, a device Reagan included in his final offer.

REAGAN SPEECH WARS

The final version of President Reagan's speech to Congress urging aid to the contras emerged from a backstage struggle among his speechwriters that resulted in a somewhat softer version.

An early draft by Bently Elliott, chief presidential speechwriter, and Peggy Noonan stressed that congressmen who voted "no" on contra aid should be held strictly accountable for what transpires in Central America. It quoted Sandinista Commandante Tomas Borge, who has referred to such Americans as "useful fools."

That tough language was omitted in a later version volunteered by Tony Dolan, often Elliott's rival as a White House speechwriter. The Dolan draft, with a few changes, was delivered by the president. The process which resulted in Elliott getting overruled led to senior staffers talking darkly about the need for a shakeup in the speechwriting team.

HOWARD'S PLOY

Ex-senator Howard Baker, who runs a consistent second to Vice President George Bush in Republican presidential polls even though he does no campaigning, has devised a strategy of putting everything on the New Hampshire primary.

Tom Rath, the state's former attorney general, has been named national director of the Baker "exploratory" committee, but is putting most efforts on New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary. Rath is a political lieutenant of New Hampshire's popular Sen. Warren Rudman (of Gramm-Rudman fame), who is close to Baker.

A footnote: Despite his lack of exposure, Baker dropped only one point (from 17 percent to 16 percent) over the past year in a current Lou Harris poll.

Senate likely to approve Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although stung by last week's House defeat, President Reagan appears likely to win Senate approval for his plan to send $100 million in military aid to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The Republican-controlled Senate expects to take up the proposal Tuesday, with a vote likely Thursday. Both Republican and Democratic vote-counters say Reagan is solidly ahead, although the vote could be closer than previous Senate tallies.

"We will never give up" until the House vote is reversed, Reagan said in his weekly radio address Saturday. "I will not rest until freedom is given a fighting chance in Nicaragua."

The Democratic-controlled House defeated Reagan's proposal last week, 222-210, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. promised conservative Democrats a chance on April 15 to propose alternatives to the president's plan.

One alternative, drafted by Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., resembles a last-minute offer that Reagan made, pledging to restrict the first 90 days of aid to anti-aircraft weapons, training and logistics while pursuing peace talks. Reagan could then lift all restrictions if he judged that Nicaragua's leftist government was not negotiating seriously.

However, other Democrats hope to tack on amendments that will block or sharply restrict the granting of lethal military aid. Democrats also are expected to try to retain bans on the CIA and the Defense Department administering the assistance.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., introduced a bill late last week that would provide $10 million from the federal budget to relocate and resettle the Contra rebels, most of whom have reportedly been driven back into Honduras by the Soviet-supplied Nicaraguan army.

In the Senate, Republican leaders say they plan to include Reagan's House offer in the text of the aid bill and thereby attract some moderate Republicans and Democrats who have criticized the president's initial $100 million aid package that contained almost no restrictions.

However, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., has been working on another compromise that would provide $30 million in non-lethal aid to the Contras, but withhold $70 million in lethal assistance pending a last-ditch negotiation effort.

One Democratic congressional aide said Sasser wanted either a second congressional vote or a recommendation from an independent commission on whether a genuine diplomatic effort had been made before the money for weapons could be released.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would focus his lobbying efforts on "a fairly large pool of undecideds" in the Senate and would personally call some of them.

The Senate is expected to debate the Contra issue Tuesday, although it has been tied up by a filibuster waged by Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., against a bill to transfer ownership of Washington's National Airport and Dulles Airport in suburban Virginia to a regional authority.

Sarbanes opposes the bill because, he contends, it would put Baltimore-Washington airport, north of the capital, at a competitive disadvantage.

The Senate also was scheduled to consider a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution.

The House planned only pro-forma sessions as many congressmen left early for the Easter recess.

U.S. forces have crossed Khadafy's 'line of death'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy jet fighters from the three-carrier U.S. battle group crossed Col. Moammar Khadafy's "line of death" off the Libyan coast and flew unopposed deep into the Gulf of Sidra early today, top administration sources said.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the fighters included F-14 Tomcats armed with long-range and short-range air-to-air missiles. Libyan forces did not confront the jets during the exercises, which occurred shortly before midnight Sunday EST, the sources said.

Indeed, one source said no signs of unusual Libyan military activity were detected.

That source said the U.S. fighters had spotted about 10 Libyan planes over the Mediterranean since the exercise began Saturday night. All of the Libyan jets were spotted outside the Gulf of Sidra, the source said.

In an interview this morning on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he could not confirm the report.

"We don't confirm anything during the course of a maneuver or exercise. We don't deny anything. We don't confirm anything. We simply are in the area," Weinberger said.

Weinberger said U.S. forces have crossed or approached the "line of death" off the Libyan coast numerous times since 1981, and the Navy exercises there are not meant to provoke a military confrontation.

Weinberger reiterated comments both he and White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan made Sunday that U.S. intentions were to declare the right of American ships to pass unmolested through international waters.

"We're not trying to provoke anyone into anything," Regan said on the ABC-TV program "This Week With David Brinkley."

"We say there are certain places that have freedom of navigation, and whether it is the Black Sea, the Gulf of Sidra or the Gulf of Mexico, ships have a right of transit," Regan said. "And if a ship has a right of transit, then we intend our ships to go there."

In 1981, two U.S. fighters shot down two Soviet-made Libyan jets that reportedly attacked them in the Gulf of Sidra, a U-shaped body of water that Khadafy claims as Libyan territory. Much of it lies beyond the 12-mile limit respected by the United States.

Private hospitals' care 'inferior,' report claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private hospitals charge higher rates but provide poorer service, according to a study that calls for-profit health care facilities a "growing danger to our health care system."

The National Council of Senior Citizens charged Sunday in a 60-page report that investor-owned hospitals also shortchange the public by failing to serve the poor or contribute to medical education and research.

In a report based on government and academic studies, as well as news accounts, magazine articles and anecdotes, the council said for-profit hospitals charge higher prices but "provide medical care which is inferior to that in the non-profits."

"For-profit hospitals are more profitable because they contribute considerably less than non-profits — and in many cases not at all — to the community in the form of free care to the poor," the report said.

The study accuses for-profit hospitals of dumping poor patients onto overburdened public facilities. It also said investor-owned hospitals "make negligible or no contribution to medical research and education."

"Profit maximizing should not be the governing factor controlling the scope and availability of essential human services such as health care," the council said. "It appears that the for-profit hospital chains are a growing danger to our health care system and rarely serve the useful medical or social purposes of non-profit hospitals."

The study was attacked immediately by the trade association for investor-owned hospitals as "a cheap shot," a rehash of old and rebutted charges containing "numerous outright errors of fact and crucial omissions."

"It's sloppy at best," said Thomas G. Goodwin of the Federation of American Health Systems. "They're obviously doing a hatchet job."

The conclusions also run counter to a report released earlier this month by George Washington University that said for-profit hospitals offer virtually the same quality of care.

Calcium, garlic chemical may help prevent colon cancer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Calcium and the chemical that gives garlic its aroma might help prevent colon cancer by inhibiting early changes in the colon that can lead to the disease, researchers say.

The links are suggested through a method of research that can indicate promising leads in cancer prevention without full-blown experiments that can take years, said one scientist reporting the results.

More study will be needed before definite links between the substances and colon cancer prevention can be established, however, and it's too early to make any dietary recommendations based on the studies, researchers said Sunday at an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers.

Dr. Martin Lipkin of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York said the possible protection from calcium was shown in its ability to inhibit abnormal proliferation of colon cells.

Such abnormal production of those cells is characteristic in people at increased risk for colon cancer, Lipkin said. Studies of how dietary substances affect that proliferation can be used as guideposts in studying cancer prevention, providing leads in months for full-blown studies, which could take years to accomplish, he said.

Lipkin's calcium study, reported recently in the New England Journal of Medicine, found that giving 10 people calcium supplements for two or three months reduced their abnormal cell proliferation to rates close to those of people at low risk for colon cancer.

The supplementation provided 1,200 milligrams of calcium carbonate a day, half-again as much as the government's recommended daily intake for calcium in the diet.

Calcium seems to bind to fatty acids and bile acids that irritate colon cells and promote proliferation, Lipkin said. Calcium also acts directly on colon cells, he said.

The garlic ingredient, called diallyl sulfide, was found in animal research to inhibit the early cell changes associated with colon cancer, said Michael Wargovich, assistant professor of cell biology and assistant cell biologist at the University of Texas System Cancer Center and M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston.

SBC ministers lack humility, evangelist says

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A Southern Baptist evangelist says his fellow ministers have become "the laughingstock of the world" because of their internecine squabbles, which he attributed to a lack of humility.

"It's high time we quit serving three gods: baptisms, budgets and buildings," said the Rev. Anis Shorrosh, a Palestinian-born evangelist.

Shorrosh, who opened a four-day revival Sunday at the Hatcher Memorial Baptist Church, chided his fellows for being more interested in money and power than in God.

In an attempt to heal rifts in the Southern Baptist Convention, Shorrosh said he spent $40,000 to publish a book on love and forgiveness, and sent it to every pastor in the 14.3 million-member denomination.

The emphasis in Southern Baptist circles these days is on numbers of recruits and not on the spiritual commitment of people, Shorrosh said.

Of the denomination's members, "a total of 4 million are non-resident," he said, meaning they are listed as members, but do not attend church regularly.

"What is happening is that the prospect of more money and fame is motivating us," he said. "Where's God's measure in all of this?"

He Believes In Midland...

Midland has been Steve Kiser's home since he was 9 years old. His future is Midland's future and he has already made significant contributions to the growth and progress of our City. A graduate of Lee High, he watched the building of Midland College, and attended classes there. After Texas A & M and then Baylor Law School, Steve returned to Midland and has become a successful Attorney, with a young family.

Steve Kiser is still working for Midland as a dedicated Civic Leader. We need his talent and enthusiasm in helping Midland College attain even greater excellence.

Conditions forecast for 7 A.M. Tuesday

In North Texas, clear to partly cloudy and windy tonight and Tuesday. Highs through Tuesday 75 to 82. Lows tonight 47 to 57.

In West Texas, clear tonight, becoming partly cloudy Tuesday. Windy east of the mountains during the afternoons. No important temperature changes. Highs through Tuesday near 80 most sections except mid 70s mountains and upper 80s along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend. Lows tonight mid 40s Panhandle and far west to lower 50s southeast except near 40 mountains.

In South Texas, sunny and warm except partly cloudy south. Mostly cloudy and mild tonight and Tuesday morning, becoming partly cloudy and warm Tuesday afternoon. Highs through Tuesday mostly in the 70s except upper 80s upper coast and the low 80s Rio Grande plains. Lows tonight mostly in the 50s except 60 extreme south.

Warm weather continued forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Continuing warm daytime temperatures are in the forecast from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport for Tuesday. A high in the lower 80s is once again expected for the Permian Basin.

Tonight, clear skies and a low near 50 have been forecast. Winds will be out of the south at 15-20 mph and gusting, diminishing to 5 to 15 mph by the early hours of Tuesday morning.

Tuesday will begin under partly cloudy skies and the southerly winds will increase once again to 15-20 and gusting.

Sunday's high was 4 degrees below the record high of 85 set in 1972. This morning's low of 42 was 14 degrees above the record high set for this date in 1974.

STATE

Two converging weather systems kept skies mostly clear across Texas today and forecasters predicted fair temperatures and sunny conditions to last through the beginning of this week.

A high-pressure system covered East Texas, with weak low pressure in the west, The National Weather Service said.

Winds were light and variable in far West Texas and southerly elsewhere in the Lone Star State at speeds of 5 to 15 mph.

The weather service said skies should be mostly cloudy in South Texas tonight. Otherwise, fair skies were expected.

Skies should become partly cloudy with warm temperatures Tuesday afternoon. Highs through Tuesday were expected in the 70s, except for upper 60s in the upper coast and the low 80s in the Rio Grande plains. Lows tonight should reach the 50s to 60 in the extreme south.

In North Texas, it should be clear to partly cloudy and windy through Tuesday. Highs were expected from 75 to 82, with lows from 47 to 57.

NATION

The Southeast recovered from a cold snap today and snow hampered travel in Northwestern high country.

Skies were cloudy over the upper Missouri Valley, much of the Western quarter of the nation and the New England coast. The rest of the nation had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Rain moved across the Northwest on Sunday and changed to snow in the Cascades, prompting travelers' advisories across the mountains of Washington and Oregon.

A high-pressure system from Canada that settled over Florida during the weekend set low temperature records.

Golf

TUCSON, Ariz. — Penny Pulz shot a course-record 8-under-par 64 Sunday to overtake Pat Bradley on the final three holes and win the $200,000 LPGA Circle K Tucson Open by four strokes over Betsy King.

Pulz carded three birdies and an eagle on the last four holes to finish the tournament at 12-under-276.

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Dale Douglass fired a final-round, 6-under-par 66 on Sunday and pulled away to a four-shot victory in the $300,000 Vintage Invitational senior golf tournament.

Douglass finished at 272, 16-under-par, and earned $40,500 for the victory, his first on the senior tour.

Tennis

NEW YORK — Martina Navratilova overpowered Hana Mandlikova 6-2, 6-0, 3-6, 6-1 Sunday to capture the $500,000 Virginia Slims Championships in the first women's tennis match to go more than three sets in 85 years.

The victory was worth $125,000 and brought Navratilova's earnings the past week, including 1985 year-end bonuses, to $386,250. Mandlikova collected $60,000 Sunday and, combined with her prize money from her doubles championship Saturday, earned $117,500 for the week.

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Ivan Lendl gave a good indication of his current dominance of tennis with an impressive 6-2, 6-0 victory over Jimmy Connors on Sunday in the $315,000 Paine Webber Classic tennis tournament.

The top-seeded Czechoslovakian picked up $50,000 for his fifth straight tournament victory.

Track

COLOMBIER, Switzerland — Little-known John Ngugi of Kenya fought off a late challenge from Ethiopian Abebe Mekonnon and won the men's race in the World Cross Country Championships on Sunday. Ngugi completed the 12,000-meter course in 35 minutes, 32.9 seconds.

Earlier, Zola Budd, the South African native now competing as a Briton, braved rain, wind and cold in retaining the women's title. Budd, the world 5,000-meter record holder, was timed in 14 minutes, 49.6 seconds.

Hockey

NEW YORK — Hartford goaltender Mike Liut, who led the Whalers to three consecutive victories, has been named the NHL Player of the Week for the period ending March 22.

No. 1 Duke takes care of business

By TOM CANAVAN

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It was just what one would expect from the No. 1 college basketball team in the country: a blowout.

It was thorough, business-like, well orchestrated and, if you'll excuse the use of the word, professional in appearance.

The NCAA East final was all Duke. The 36-2 Blue Devils eased on down the road to Dallas on Sunday, riding a 28-point performance by All-America Johnny Dawkins and dominating the backboards to rout Navy 71-50 at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

The Blue Devils' 20th consecutive victory sent them to Dallas for a matchup on Saturday with the 35-3 Kansas Jayhawks, who captured the Midwest Regional on Sunday by knocking out North Carolina State. Louisville plays LSU in the other semifinal game.

"Right now, I'm so happy," Dawkins said. "It's one step at a time. That's our attitude. We're not subdued. We're happy about being in the Final Four, but we realize we still have work to do."

Duke's job against Navy was just about over at halftime despite a woeful 35 percent shooting percentage from the field. The Blue Devils rarely hit any of their initial shots from the field in the opening 20 minutes, but they were deadly on their second and third chances in building a 34-22 lead.

OF THE 34 points the Blue Devils scored in the opening half, 20 came on second-chance opportunities.

"This and the DePaul game were two of our better efforts," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "If we don't get rebounds, we are losing at the half."

Duke needed an 18-2 burst over the final 7:18 of the first half to overcome a 20-16 Navy edge. The run was capped by a spectacular reverse dunk by Dawkins off the break.

AP Laserphoto

Duke's Johnny Dawkins flashes a Final Four smile.

"I expected their guards to be really quick, but I didn't expect them to rebound like that," said David Robinson, the talented 6-foot-11 junior center who once again led the Middies, with 23 points. "They hit the boards really strong. I was out of position on a few occasions but we've never been outrebounded like that."

The first half rebound margin was 34-15 in favor of the Blue Devils and it stood 49-29 at the end of the game.

"We normally send three guys to the boards," Krzyzewski said. "In the last two games we felt we could send four guys to the boards without getting hurt by their fast break. So we sent Dawkins in and kept Tommy (Amaker) back."

EAST

NAVY MANAGED to cut Duke's lead to 10 points on two occasions early in the second half, but Dawkins hit his first seven shots after intermission to key a 20-9 burst that gave the Blue Devils a 54-31 lead with 11:01 to play.

The Middies never got closer than 15 points the rest of the way as their 16-game winning streak came to a halt and their season ended at 30-5.

Robinson, the nation's leading rebounder and shot blocker, did not get the usual scoring help from seniors Kylor Whitaker and Vernon Butler, who had a combined average of almost 30 points per game.

They scored 18 between them against Duke, but only three came in the opening half. Most of the rest came when it didn't matter.

"We knew we had to keep an eye on David Robinson," said Duke forward Mark Alarie, who scored 18 points. "But we didn't want any of their other players to have a good game. We concentrated very much on stopping Butler.

"Johnny and Tommy concentrated very well on stopping Whitaker," added Alarie. "This allowed us to get a big lead in the first half."

And, a big lead is something Navy admittedly has trouble overcoming.

"We got out of our game plan in the end of the first half and we panicked a little," Navy Coach Paul Evans said. "We are not the type of team that is quick enough to press or go man-to-man. We couldn't do that in the last 10 minutes and I'm not sure Mike (Krzyzewski) didn't go into a stall to help us."

Manning solves puzzle; Kansas stings Wolfpack

By JOHN MOSSMAN

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There was always a piece missing in the Danny Manning puzzle.

Quick and graceful with a sure shot and a penchant for passing, Manning was hailed as the "Second Coming of Magic Johnson," if one could imagine any player at 6-foot-11 doing the things Magic does. At the same time, Manning was criticized for his wandering concentration and his lack of assertiveness.

The doubts about whether Manning would ever fully realize his potential may have been laid to rest for good after Kansas' splendid sophomore riddled North Carolina State with six straight baskets Sunday, powering the Jayhawks to a 75-67 basketball victory in the final of the NCAA Midwest Regional and into the Final Four.

Kansas, 35-3, will face top-rated Duke, 36-2, on Saturday. LSU goes against Louisville in the other semifinal.

"What Danny did today I haven't seen many guys do," said Kansas Coach Larry Brown. "He and Greg (center Greg Dreiling) just took over the game."

TRAILING 57-52 with 8:53 left, the Jayhawks were given up for dead by even their loyal fans, who packed Kemper Arena with a show of support that effectively gave the Jayhawks the homecourt advantage, much to North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano's chagrin. When the Wolfpack scored six straight points to take the five-point edge, however, the crowd went strangely silent.

"We had 'em," said Valvano. "At 57-52, I felt very confident."

But then some one-sided things started to happen. Wolfpack guard Ernie Myers had given his team its big lead on a layup. He was fouled on the play, but missed the free throw.

"The next three possessions were critical for us," said Valvano. "Ernie missed the free throw, and Manning hit a great jumper. Chris (center Chris Washburn) walks and Manning gets loose along the baseline. Then we just broke down defensively, especially on second shots."

Manning, whose jumper with 10:03 left preceded State's six-point flurry that produced the 57-52 advantage, scored four straight baskets and, after a Washburn free throw, added a follow shot for a 62-58 Jayhawks lead.

"Danny wanted the ball and he played with confidence down the stretch," said Brown. "We stopped them at the other end and gave them only one shot. We did a good job on the defensive boards."

MIDWEST

THEN THE 7-1 Dreiling, battling his way out of a late-season slump, bulled his way into the middle and scored the Jayhawks' next nine points.

Brown said he wasn't surprised at the play of either big man.

"Nothing Danny does surprises me," he said. "He's the best player in the country. Last season and at the beginning of this season we wanted him to demand the ball and be more assertive, and he has been. He plays the whole court. He's a complementary player, but at the times he finds himself open, he takes over.

"I was proud for Greg. I knew he'd play well. I thought he had his finest moment."

Manning finished with 22 points on 11-of-17 shooting, while Dreiling had 19 points and 12 rebounds.

Manning, a native of North Carolina whose departure from the state created ill feelings, said he was upset with a premature celebration along the North Carolina State sideline after the score went to 57-52.

"COACH TOLD us to look over there, and he reminded us the game wasn't over," said Manning. "I was thinking about getting the ball down low and going to the basket, possibly looking for the three-point play against their zone defense.

The Jayhawks will be appearing in the Final Four for the first time since 1974. Brown, who guided UCLA to the finals in 1980, said his team would celebrate for "about 30 seconds" and cautioned, "We can't be satisfied with just getting there. It's special to get there, but we have to do everything we can to win it all."

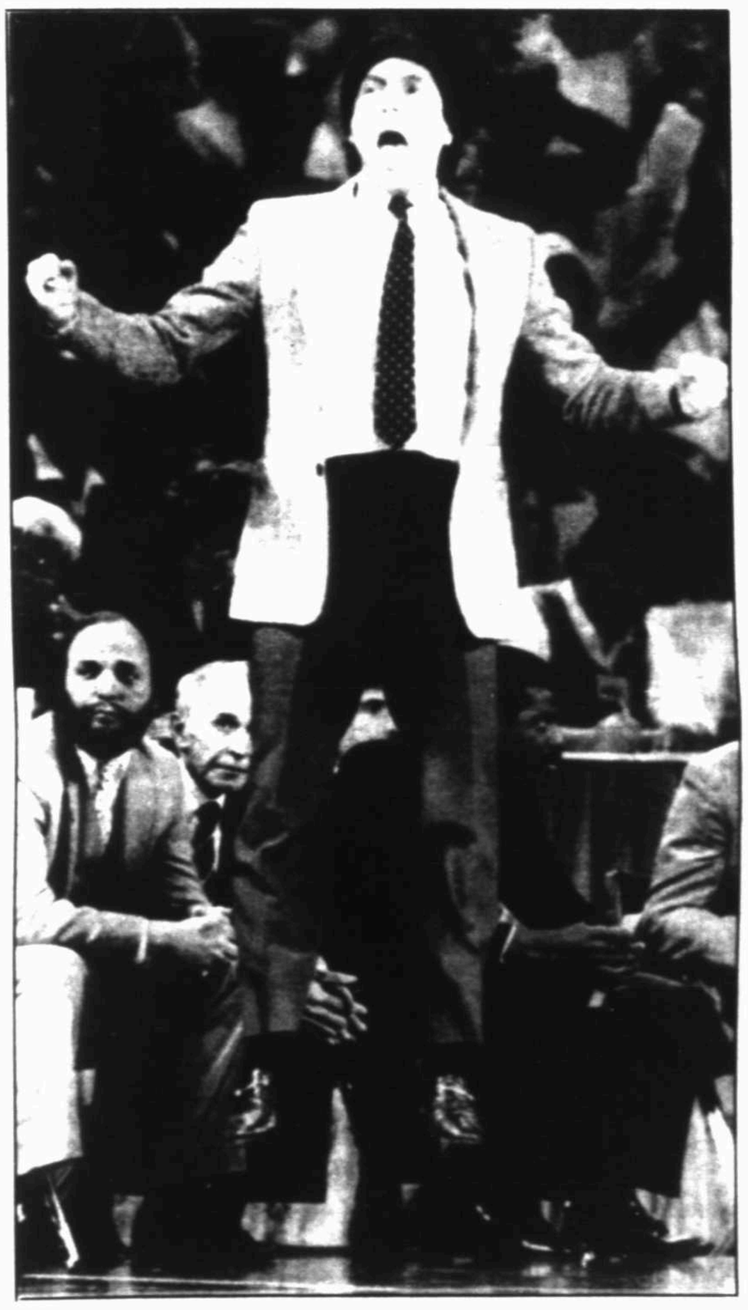

North Carolina State got 20 points from freshman forward Charles Shackleford, 16 of them in the first half. Washburn added 17 points.

"I thought we played a great basketball game," said Valvano. "If only we could have had a little more patience at times."

Washburn said it is difficult to handle both Manning and Dreiling along the baseline.

"You go out and get Manning, and you have to worry about Dreiling on the tap shot," he said. "You go out and get Dreiling, and you have to worry about Manning. It's hard to guard their whole team."

The Wolfpack finished the year at 21-13.

Coach Jim Valvano of North Carolina State takes to the air to berate the officials in Sunday's Midwest Regional final.

UT begins probe into ticket selling

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds says the university is "not going to leave a rock unturned" in its in-house investigation into reports that football players sold complimentary tickets to boosters at prices up to $600 per ticket.

"I think what we need to do is let Knox Nunally (a Houston lawyer and former Texas Longhorns player) investigate this thing until we have a feeling on what we have. We're not going to leave a rock unturned," Dodds told the Dallas Morning News Sunday.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Sunday that former players said head coach Fred Akers not only was aware of the widespread practice but also routinely cautioned players to be careful not to get the school in trouble with the NCAA.

In a prepared statement Saturday, Dodds said officials became aware that the Dallas Morning News was interviewing former athletes and investigating the matter.

"We immediately began our own investigative process with outside counsel. We have notified representatives of the NCAA enforcement division of the allegations of violations and have pledged them our full cooperation," Dodds said.

The News, during a two-month investigation, reported it interviewed 28 former Longhorn football players whose Texas careers spanned a period from 1978 to 1986.

Of the players interviewed, the newspaper reported, 27 ex-players said ticket-selling is a UT football tradition, one that continues despite the knowledge of those involved that it is a violation of NCAA rules.

"Akers knew all about the tickets," said Jeff Leiding, an All-America linebacker who played at Texas from 1980 to 1983. "No coach in America would tell their players not to sell their tickets."

Akers, head coach at Texas since just after the 1976 season, said he was "a little surprised and disappointed" to learn his players had sold complimentary tickets.

"I'm not aware of this," Akers said Friday in his Austin office. "But you don't have to make any mistake about it — I can tell you where it's going to be going from here on. It will be turned in (to the NCAA)."

David S. Berst, the director of enforcement for the NCAA, would neither confirm nor deny there is an inquiry because of NCAA policy.

Cooper carries big sticks

From Staff Reports

Get out your hard hats!

League leading Abilene Cooper is coming to town and they're bringing their .447 team batting average and .728 slugging percentage with them.

Cooper, 4-0, 13-0, will visit the Tall City for the first time this season and they're setting their sights on Midland High's 3-1 Bulldogs. MHS hopes to put an end to the Cougars 13-game win streak beginning at 4 p.m. at Angels Stadium. Midland Lee will travel to Abilene High.

The Cougars, defending district champions, are again showing why they are the class of District 4-5A, outscoring opponents 53-16 in district action. Everyone familiar with 4-5A baseball knows about the powerful hitters in the Cooper lineup, but a quick glance at the stats shows just how balanced they are.

Four Cooper starters are hitting over .500, five over .400 and nine are above the .300 mark. Dave Tollison (3 HRs, 10 RBI, .500), Tommy Hollowell (.667) Chris Moore (.667) and Bill Dehlinger (.538) are the leaders of the bunch.

The Bulldogs have strung together back-to-back impressive games, however, and the two-man staff of Kenny De La Garza and Ricky Castaneda far and away lead the league in ERA at 1.35. De La Garza, 2-0, 4-2 overall and yet to yield an earned run in two district starts, will get the call against Cooper Tuesday.

Wyoming hot shot not crying about slight

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

NEW YORK (AP) — Wyoming forward Fennis Dembo, the hottest shooter in the 49th National Invitation Tournament, doesn't count himself among the players and coaches who moan about not being invited to the NCAA championship tournament.

"We're trying to prove how good a team we are, but I wasn't upset with not getting an NCAA bid," said Dembo, who leads 23-11 Wyoming against Florida, 19-12, tonight in the opening NIT semifinal at Madison Square Garden. "I don't think we would have made as good a showing as we have in the NIT."

Ohio State, 17-14, meets Louisiana ...h, 19-13, in the second semifinal. ...winners meet in the championship game Wednesday night.

NIT

Dembo, one of four sophomores who join senior Les Bolden in the Cowboys' starting lineup, is averaging 16.5 points per game this season, but has scored 22 or more in six of his last nine outings. Dembo, nicknamed "Buck" by his teammates, scored 24, 23 and 19 points in Wyoming's NIT victories over Texas A&M, Loyola Marymount and Clemson, respectively.

"Everybody's on a high right now," said the 6-foot-4 Dembo, who also had 16 rebounds in the 62-57 quarterfinal triumph over Clemson. "We're trying to keep everything in perspective."

Being satisfied with the NIT Final Four does not mean that Wyoming, the regular-season co-champion in the Western Athletic Conference, has nothing to prove.

"We don't just want to go to New York and be happy with being in the NIT Final Four," Dembo said. "We want to make some believers."

Florida is making an appearance in the NIT for the third consecutive year, but the Gators did not reach New York the other two times.

Florida Coach Norm Sloan, who coached North Carolina State to the NCAA title in 1974, breaking a streak of seven straight titles for UCLA, also believes that the NIT is better for the team's program than the NCAA.

"This is a much more positive thing than if we had been sent to Ogden, Utah, and lost in the first round of the NCAA tournament," Sloan said. "For us to be in the NIT and play three games at home has done more for our program than anything, other than going to the NCAA and reaching the Final 16, could have done."

Sloan uses a three-guard starting lineup, including two 6-footers. Vernon Maxwell, a 6-4 sophomore, is the leading scorer with 19.9 points per game, while 6-0 junior Andrew Moten contributes 17.3.

Ronnie Montgomery, 6-0, also starts with 6-7 center Kenny McClary and 6-6 forward Joe Lawrence for the Gators.

"Our team is good, but we're awfully little, so we'll have to do a lot of things on defense to be in it," Sloan said.

Nuggets pull 'el foldo' in loss at Golden State

Associated Press

The Denver Nuggets, needing only to beat the worst team in the Western Conference to pull within a half-game of the lead in the Midwest Division, instead suffered a devastating road defeat.

"Without a doubt, this was our worst loss of the season, and I think it should destroy us," Denver Coach Doug Moe said after the Nuggets, 32-5 at home, fell to 11-24 on the road Sunday when Golden State's Joe Barry Carroll hit a 20-foot jump shot as time expired, giving the Warriors a 113-111 NBA victory.

Carroll's game-winner climaxed a fourth quarter rally that saw the Warriors outscore the Nuggets 28-13 after trailing by 13 points going into the period.

"We can't beat anyone on the road unless the other team plays awful, because we're just going to give them the game in the second half. We must have been ahead in 20 of those games we lost," Moe said. "We choke on the road, let's face it."

Denver, despite 34 points from Alex English, fell 1½ games behind the division-leading Houston Rockets.

Carroll finished with 31 points, but his only basket in the fourth quarter was the final shot. Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, with 11 points, and Peter Thibeaux, with nine, were the stars for the Warriors in their fourth-period comeback.

Thibeaux made the pass from out of bounds to Carroll with one second remaining, after Denver's Mike Evans tied the score with a three-point shot.

"I knew he could make that shot. I just had to get him the ball," Thibeaux said.

"He's 7 feet tall, which helps him get off a shot," Golden State Coach John Bach said.

Moe said he was not surprised when the Warriors went to Carroll, rather than a more experienced outside shooter such as Floyd, for the final shot.

"Wayne Cooper was supposed to be playing on top of Carroll, but he got totally out of position. I don't know where he was playing," Moe said.

NBA

Sonics 107, Spurs 104

Ricky Sobers scored 15 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter, including a layup with 29 seconds left, as Seattle won a neck-and-neck shootout with San Antonio.

The two teams were not separated by more than five points in the second half. Wes Matthews scored nine of his career-high 29 points in the fourth period to keep the Spurs in the game, but he missed two long-range shots and a layup in the final minute.

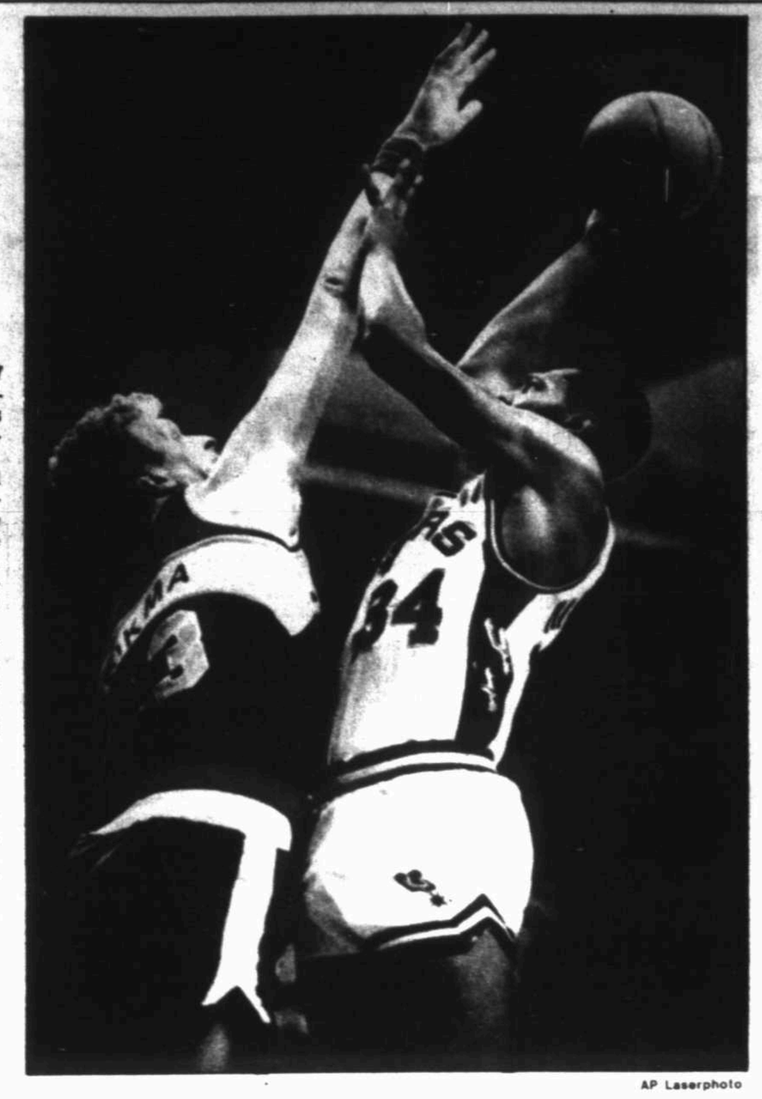

Mike Mitchell added 21 points for the Spurs, who have lost 15 of their last 17 games. Jack Sikma had 23 points for Seattle, which won for only the second time in its last 12 road games.

Trail Blazers 112, Kings 102

Clyde Drexler had 32 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists for Portland against Sacramento, which would have pulled into seventh place in the conference with a victory.

The Trail Blazers, shooting 61 percent in the second quarter, outscored the Kings 33-20 in the period to turn a 27-24 deficit into a 57-47 halftime lead.

Sacramento, which got a season-high 39 points from Mike Woodson, closed the gap to 66-61 in the third period, but Kiki Vandeweghe scored eight of his 22 points as Portland outscored the Kings 24-14 in the next seven minutes. Sacramento got no closer than seven points in the final period.

Peete runs and hides in 36-hole marathon

By BOB GREEN

USF&G Classic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Calvin Peete, the most prolific winner on the American PGA Tour in the last five years, has some disturbing news for his fellow pros.

"I don't think I've reached my peak yet. I think I'm still on the way up. I'm still enthused about the game. I'm still learning," Peete said after scoring his second victory of the season Sunday in the $500,000 USF&G Classic.

He won with something approaching ease, playing the double-round windup 10 under par with scores of 66 and 68, and completing the rain-delayed tournament at 269, 19 shots under par.

"Calvin just blitzed us," said Pat McGowan, who finished a distant second, five shots back. Neither he nor anyone else got within four shots of the runaway winner over the last 18 holes.

"Another step toward my goal, to be the Player of the Year for 1986," said Peete, who also won the season-opening Tournament of Champions.

Peete, who led or shared the lead all the way, admitted "my 42-year-old legs were starting to feel it" in the 36-hole windup. But he said his age is not a factor in his drive toward golf's No. 1 position.

"I started so late, I haven't played all that much competitive golf, so I'm a young 42," he said. "I'm still learning. There's shots I don't have, sand shots, shots around the green. I'm working on them. I'm still learning," Peete said.

Peete, once a peddler to itinerate farm laborers, didn't touch a golf club until he was in his 20s and didn't join the tour until his 30s.

But the man with the crooked left arm (the result of a childhood accident), has, in the last five seasons, established himself among the game's best.

Since the start of the 1982 season, he has won 11 tournaments — the most on the tour. In the same period, he has won $1,479,526 — the most on the tour.

The $90,000 he picked up for his 12th career victory Sunday boosted his season's earnings to $230,598 and put him in the No. 1 spot on the money-winning list. He also took over as the tour's leader in stroke average, 69.48.

But he doesn't plan on relaxing. Not yet.

"To be Player of the Year, I need to win at least one more tournament, and have five or six more top-10 finishes," Peete said.

Peete, who led or shared the lead all the way in this event, opened up a 5-shot margin with his 6-under-par 66 in the morning round and led by a minimum of four the rest of the way. He put it out of reach with a burst of three consecutive birdies beginning on the 12th hole of the afternoon round.

McGowan, with closing rounds of 68-68 and a 274 total, collected the biggest check of his nine-year career, $54,000, for second at 274.

Rookie Greg Ladehoff, Doug Tewell, England's Nick Faldo and Tom Sieckmann were next, tied at 277.

Tigers' Laga vying for bus seat

Associated Press

This year, Mike Laga gets to stay on the bus.

A year ago, just as he thought he had finally made the Detroit Tigers, Laga was called off a bus and told he was headed for Nashville. On Sunday, after he hit his sixth homer of the spring, Manager Sparky Anderson said:

"The case on Laga is closed." Translation, Laga is staying.

It's been a long time coming for Laga, Detroit's top draft choice in 1980. A first baseman, he has hit 100 homers in Triple A the last four years, but he has also struck out 449 times.

"It's a funny business, baseball," the 25-year-old native of Ridgewood, N.J. said. "I've done everything I can do to make this team. It's a little frustrating, but I hate to complain."

His performance on Sunday in the Tigers' 7-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays may have ended his complaints.

In the first inning, he hit a three-run homer off Toronto ace Dave Stieb, who had previously pitched 12 scoreless innings. He added an RBI single in the eighth off Luis Leal.

Cubs 6, Angels 4

Ryne Sandberg collected four hits and drove in three runs, and Keith Moreland hit a two-run homer for the Cubs.

Scott Sanderson held the Angels to four hits and a run through five innings The Angels' Doug DeCinces hit his second homer in as many days.

Cardinals 5, Expos 3

Willie McGee, who had three hits, doubled home Vince Coleman with the winning run in the eighth inning and scored one out later on a wild pitch.

Phillies 8, Orioles 6

Rich Schu drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning as the Phillies took advantage of six Baltimore errors to score five unearned runs.

Al Pardo had a three-run homer for Baltimore, who blew a 4-0 lead. Garry Maddox and Juan Samuel each drove in two runs with doubles for Philadelphia.

Brewers 9, Padres 8

Randy Ready had three hits and walked to force in the go-ahead run in the 12th inning for Milwaukee. Ready was walked on four pitches by Rich Gossage to put the Brewers ahead 8-7. Rob Deer's fielder's choice then scored Jim Gantner.

Reds 7, Dodgers 5

Kal Daniels' RBI single sparked a three-run uprising in the eighth inning for Cincinnati.

Orel Hershiser pitched five scoreless innings for the Dodgers but Cincinnati jumped on Alejandro Pena, who is recovering from shoulder surgery, for four runs in the sixth. The Dodgers chipped in with four errors.

Yankees 3, Rangers 0

Rookie Bob Tewksbury allowed just three hits in six innings as the supposedly pitching poor Yankees didn't allow an earned run for the third straight game. Al Holland, Brian Fisher and Dave Righetti each pitched one inning to finish the game.

Giants 1, Mariners 0

Mike LaCoss, Bill Laskey and Mark Davis combined on a five-hitter and Chili Davis' run-scoring single in the third accounted for the only run.

The Giants also announced that rookie Will Clark, with only one season of professional experience, will be their regular first baseman. Clark is batting .349 with four home runs and 13 RBI in 12 games.

Red Sox 3, Royals 1

Al Nipper pitched six shutout innings, allowing just three hits and striking out four.

Steve Balboni's eighth-inning homer off Tim Lollar accounted for the only Royal run while Steve Lyons drove in a Boston run with one of his two singles. The other two runs scored on an error and a double play.

Braves 2, Astros 1

Dale Murphy won the game with his second home run in two days, an eighth- inning shot off Jeff Heathcock.

Houston's only run came on a leadoff homer in the first by Eric Bullock off David Palmer. Atlanta tied it in the fourth when Terry Harper scored on Ken Oberkfell's single.

Twins 6, Mets 5

Tom Brunansky had two hits and scored three runs, but it was three New York errors in the eighth that gave the Twins the victory.

The Mets' Dwight Gooden, the 1985 NL Cy Young Award winner, had his second straight mediocre performance, surrendering seven hits and three runs in five innings.

Biggs decisions Sims after 10

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Heavyweight Tyrell Biggs, fighting with a broken right collarbone, outjabbed and outdanced hard-hitting Jeff Sims on Sunday to win a unanimous decision in his first 10-round fight.

Biggs, an Olympic gold medalist, said the collarbone was broken by a hard Sims right in the second round. He fought left-handed for the remaining eight rounds, throwing fewer than a dozen ineffective rights.

Biggs, the 1984 Olympic super heavyweight champion, is now 9-0 as a pro with six knockouts. Sims, who has left only two of his victims standing in his career, slipped to 23-4-1.

There's only one way out of this life. And Kris Morgan, left, and Doug McDonald seem hellbent on putting off Judgment Day just as long as they can.

The wild, wild West of gunslingers and can-can girls returns in Rex Loftis, his hired hands and their women. Clockwise from the front are Paul "Pockets" Allred, Jennifer Payne, Shannon Latham, Doug McDonald, Mike Bowman, Tammy Loftis, Rex Loftis, and Kris Morgan.

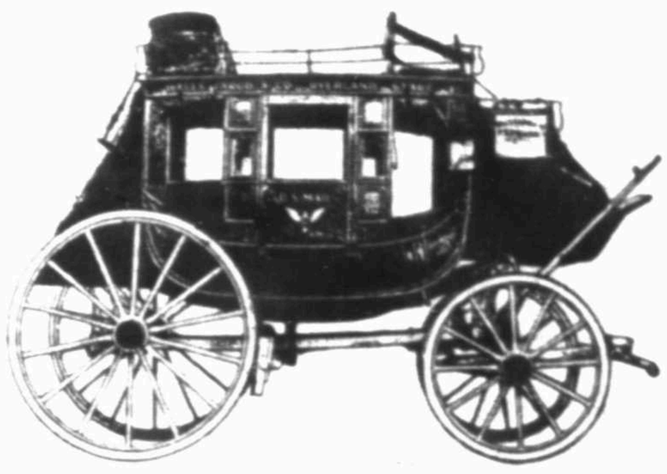

Those cartridges may look old and weathered, but they mean business just as soon as they get lodged in a gun chamber.

Western ways

Text by Ed Todd

Photos by Kent Porter

Rex Loftis straps on his holster and side arm, kicks up dust, gets ready to "slap leather" and prepares to clean up the new West in the legendary ways of the old West.

He gathers his hired guns about him.

"We're here to get the FDIC out of Midland, so Midland can take the town back and go back to work," said the husky gunslinger with an unwavering voice, a gunfighter's hazel eyes and a hardy but weathered look. "We're going back to basics."

In the meantime, Loftis is fixing, serving up and selling Western-style grub in a rustic cafe and trying to regroup after problems with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. "You don't see me in the bar (borrow) ditch holding my hand out." The FDIC shut down his High Chaparral Western-wear store because he readily couldn't pay off an old bank loan; the FDIC was getting impatient. He went bankrupt.

Paul "Pockets" Allred

And Loftis, a Western "gunfighter" with a black hat and kind heart, is bearing the hard times until the good-times economics return and the FDIC moves out of town.

But the 48-year-old "big boss" is slapping leather as much as he did before the economy slowed down and before the FDIC moved in en masse in 1983 after West Texas banks began failing.

"There's too much deregulation in this town," he says, "and there are too many banks in this town...They (Midlanders) didn't realize how hard it (deregulation) was going to hit them."

MORE THAN hounding the FDIC, Loftis' strong suit is staging gunfights, promoting "can-can dancing girls" and "can't-can't dancing boys." The fellows prefer that nobody messes with their tutus while they're dancing in their cowboy boots and skimpy outfits.

"We're slow (on the draw)," he says. "We're not real slow. But we're No. 1 in showmanship and the No. 1 barbecue team in town. We put on a show like they do at Six Flags (Over Texas)."

Group wants to end minorities' exclusion from felony juries

DALLAS (AP) — The governing board of the Dallas County Criminal Bar Association wants to limit prosecutors' exclusion of minorities from felony court juries by seeking legislative and administrative changes.

A resolution adopted by the bar's 15-member board of directors on Thursday would draft and push a bill through the 1987 Legislature to bring the state court system in line with the federal court system.

Officials said the legislation will seek to reduce the number of peremptory challenges allowed prosecutors in felony cases from 10 to six.

Board members also voted to ask Dallas County's felony court judges to establish a method to record the race of every prospective juror and to ask prosecutors their reasons for eliminating minorities from juries.

A series of articles in The Dallas Morning News provided defense attorneys with the first evidence that prosecutors were engaging in a "systematic exclusion" of minority jurors in violation of the U.S. Constitution, said Arch McColl, president of the 400-member association of criminal defense lawyers.

"The story quantified what criminal defense lawyers have suspected all along, that prosecutors are systematically excluding minorities," McColl told the newspaper. "The time is right now for us to try to do something about that."

Dallas County prosecutors, in the articles, denied any illegal exclusion of minorities from juries and said race is never the sole reason they exercise a peremptory challenge against a potential juror.

In the past two legislative sessions, the Texas District and County Attorneys Association opposed efforts to reduce the number of peremptory challenges available to prosecutors.

The Austin-based organization's executive director, Steve Capelle, said it continues to oppose such a change.

Dallas County's felony court judges discussed the jury selection issue during a meeting last Tuesday and decided "to follow the law," said State District Judge Ed Kinkeade.

PACs' contributions louder than words

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The senior U.S. Sen. from Texas, Lloyd Bentsen, once responded to a question at a small East Texas town meeting by saying, "Mam, everbody is a special interest."

In U.S. politics, special interests get their messages across with campaign contributions, usually donated through political action committees, or PACs.

In Texas alone, 1,760 PACs have registered with the Secretary of State's office. The PACs that traditionally give the most money to candidates are trial lawyers, doctors, bankers, corporations and insurance, trucking, energy and power companies.

John Hildreth heads Common Cause of Texas, a self-styled citizens lobby fighting large PAC contributions and pushing for election-finance reform. Hildreth said huge PAC contributions corrupt the political system and take power away from individuals and give it to organized special-interest groups.

Hildreth also worries that because incumbents receive so much PAC money, challengers have little chance of winning. PACs figure that because incumbents generally are favored to win, the good money goes to the candidate already holding the office.

State Sen. John Traeger, a Seguin Democrat giving up his seat this year after 23 years in the Legislature, said PACs almost always stick with incumbents.

"The rule is: If a man's been with us, we'll stay with him even if we like his opponent better," Traeger said. "I guess if I was running a PAC I'd do the same thing."

Gov. Mark White has raised money from nearly all major PACs, and many of his largest contributors backed former Gov. Bill Clements in 1982. "The difference in (White's) fund raising in '82 and this year is that he's in office," Hildreth said. "It's that clear and simple."

If Clements beats White this fall, those PACs backing White will donate to Clements, Hildreth said. "Do you believe they keep switching back and forth because of philosophy or loyalty?" he asked.

John Pouland, a Democratic candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission, is refusing all PAC money, saying most political action committee money comes from industries the Railroad Commission regulates. "The seats on our regulatory agencies should not be for sale to the biggest spender or to the highest bidder," Pouland said.

One of Pouland's opponents, state Sen. John Sharp, is refusing utility contributions. The other two Democratic Railroad Commission candidates also follow some voluntary restrictions on PAC money.

Elephants PAC big appeal in Lone Star State politics

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — What are all these elephants doing in Texas?

Here in the Lone Star State, three, count 'em three, political action committees use the word "elephant" in their name. The White Elephant Committee, the Starving Elephant Committee and the Pink Elephant Committee all appear as registered political action committees on the Secretary of State's official lists.

At least 50 PACs use "good government" or "better government" in their name, including every group from Fort Worth firefighters to Braniff Airlines to El Paso apartment renters to billboard companies.

The concern of the Concerned Farmers of Hockley County is helping Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill, not insecticides or farm loans. And don't try to pass any water bonds while the Citizens Against Water Taxes are around.

Although many PACs try to hide their cause behind their name, some PAC name get right to the point. Frustrated Houston GOPers join the Houston Committee to Elect a Republican for a Change. Democrats have Asian Americans Salute Mark White. And former National Democratic Party Chairman Bob Strauss of Houston just calls his the Robert Strauss Underwriting Committee.

Fire marshal investigating deliberately set blaze

From Staff Reports

The Midland Fire Marshal's Office this morning was investigating a deliberately set fire which caused heavy damage to a house at 200 E. Shandon Sunday night, according to fire reports.

The fire, reported about 9:31 p.m., was set in the bedroom, den and kitchen pantry of the house, which was occupied by Sandra Green. The house had been broken into before the fire was set, reports said. Ms. Green was not home at the time, and no injuries were reported.

The fire was extinguished with about 500 gallons of water, reports said.

In other reports, a 28-year-old Midland woman remained listed in critical condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after a Sunday morning traffic accident on the Garden City Highway.

Sabrina Huse Pyle, Route 1, Box 96R, was westbound about a mile east of Midland at 8:30 a.m. when her 1980 Buick was struck by an eastbound truck-tractor which crossed into her lane, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Ms. Pyle suffered head and abdominal injuries and several fractured limbs, according to a hospital spokeswoman. Her 3-year-old son Casey was listed in fair condition with a pelvic injury, and her 1-year-old daughter Callie was also in fair condition with a leg injury.

The truck's driver, 22-year-old Robert Randal Flora of Odessa, was treated and released, the spokeswoman said. According to DPS reports, Flora said he was swerving to avoid another car.

Santos Rodriquez Dominguez, 1705 S. Jefferson, reported the loss of a $60 pair of jeans, a $60 clock radio and other home items worth a total of about $555 in a Sunday burglary of his home, according to Midland police reports.

A burglary was reported at Stadium Sports, 2040 Cuthbert, in which two pair of athletic shoes worth a total of about $82 were taken. There was $475 in damage to a glass door and window in the Sunday burglary, reports said.

Monahans teachers' group seeks meeting with White

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White, vacationing with his family in Colorado, will not meet this week with representatives of a rebellious teachers' group based in Monahans.

In a March 12 letter, Doug Ward, chairperson of Texas Teachers for Respect & Responsibility, asked to meet with White this week "any day,...at any time of the day." As in most school districts across the state, Monahans teachers are on spring break this week.

"We believe that, as active teachers in the schools and classrooms where teaching and learning is taking place, we can share with you valuable aspects of (House Bill) 72 difficult to observe except by teachers," Ward, a junior high school English teacher and coach, wrote the governor.

"We desire to listen, and we desire to be heard."

Janis Monger, White's assistant press secretary, said the governor cannot meet with the teachers this week. His official schedule of public appearances notes that "Governor White will be on vacation with his family" today through Sunday. Another press office aide said the Whites are vacationing in Colorado.

"The scheduling office is going to try to arrange a time when he can meet with them either here in Austin or the next time he's in West Texas," Monger said.

Ward's group organized an anti-White teacher rally on the Capitol lawn Feb. 23, where teachers from about 160 Texas schools complained that the governor is using them as "political scapegoats." Earlier that week, Ward left a list of the group's complaints on the door of White's office, but "someone tore them off the door" and told him to arrange a meeting.

"The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss HB 72 and its impact on the students of Texas public schools, teachers in their schools and the taxpayers of the school districts," Ward said in his letter to White. Topics of discussion include: taxation; the teacher career ladder; the no-pass, no-play rule; teacher morale; the Texas Education Agency and competency testing of teachers.

In an interview earlier this month, Ward said his organization is growing rapidly and plans another Capitol rally. "At that time we're going to present the governor with his own test," he said.

"We took his, turnabout's fair play."

DEATHS

Violet Clark Tinsley

FREDERICK, Okla. — Violet Clark Tinsley of Frederick, a veteran public school music teacher in the Amarillo and Oklahoma school systems for more than 40 years, died Sunday in Frederick.

Services will be Tuesday in Frederick. Burial will be Wednesday in Amarillo, directed by Gish Funeral Home of Frederick.

She had visited in Midland often with two sisters, Geraldine D. Simmons and the late Mrs. Quincy Belle Ryan Snow.

She is also survived by a son and two grandchildren.

Jeff Christian

Services for Jeff Christian of Midland were held in Tyler under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Friday at a Midland nursing home.

Christian was born Aug. 23, 1905, in Tyler. He was a retired businessman, Episcopalian, Mason and a member of the Scottish Rite.

Survivors include his wife, Maurine Allred Christian of Midland; a daughter, Lucy Madsen of Midland; a sister, Lucile Kennemer of Dallas; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Florence Harrison

Services for Mrs. Hap (Florence) Harrison of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Glass Chapel of First United Methodist Church. Officiating will be Dr. Charles Lutrick. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday at a Midland hospital.

Midland sheriff's officers raid party, arrest two men

From Staff Reports

Midland sheriff's officers raided a party in a house at 1605 S. Loraine St. early Sunday morning and arrested two men, but the man they really wanted apparently slipped away before officers crashed the party.

Jerry Ray Murphy Jr., 20, was free on a $500 bond today after being arrested for theft, while 23-year-old Marvin Dodd remained in county jail after being arrested on three aggravated-assault warrants and for parole violation. Both men are associated with an alleged motorcycle gang led by Jerry Ray Murphy Sr., which local law-enforcement officials believe to be involved in various criminal activities.

Jerry Murphy Sr., 41, is wanted for jumping a bond he posted after being indicted for aggravated sexual assault, according to Sheriff's Sgt. Doug Ketterman.

Sheriff's officers were hoping to arrest the elder Murphy and 18-year-old Haley Awbrey, who is wanted for theft, but the two were not found during the 1 a.m. raid.

"They were having a big party, we heard, so we staked the place out," said Ketterman this morning.

The elder Murphy probably slipped out of the party earlier, he said, "But we'll get them."

The Murphys were the subject of a highly publicized raid at their house at 500 Sprayberry last April in which four family members and associates were arrested.

Armed forces tribute planned

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Permian Mall will be the site of a Tribute to Armed Forces Day & Veterans' Reunion May 15-18.

Capt. Alan W. Woods, commander of Company "E," 403 Military Police Battalion of the Texas, has received commitments from several U.S. armed forces branches for static displays of military equipment and drill teams. Static displays will occupy "every open space in the mall," Woods said.

During a media briefing this past week, Woods said he is trying to obtain a commitment from the Confederate Air Force for several flyovers of World War II vintage aircraft. "We hope to turn Odessa into a huge USO," he said.

Laura Ingram, Permian Mall marketing director, has written President Reagan, informing him of the planned armed forces tribute and asking him to "speak at our sunrise ceremony or any of the three day activities planned."

Special areas are to be set up to provide central locations where veterans of each war can gather for reunion activities.

WEST

Loftis has a customized makeshift stagecoach and a weathered antique chuck wagon and many artifacts to help create the atmosphere of the old West. His wife, Rene, makes the costumes for the players in his Texas Rangers Gang of gunfighters and dancers.

At 6-foot-3 and 245 pounds, Loftis is an imposing character, especially when he's decked out in his cowboy attire — from black hat to boots and wrapped in a Western duster. He carries a .44-caliber old Army black-powder pistol.

Loftis and his Texas Rangers Gang sort of fell together in the early 1980s. Since then, they've staged shows at schools, in parades, at fairs, expositions and celebrations in Midland and Odessa and from Nocona to Alpine elsewhere in West Texas. They stage shoot-outs, train robberies, "OK Corral" gunfights, and similar dramas. They'll even "walk the dusty trail" among rattlesnakes and gunfighters.

'I'm Rex's son-in-law," says 24-year-old Doug McDonald, a stock clerk, in explaining his role in Loftis' gang. "I was drafted into it."

McDonald claims to be the fastest draw of the lot.

"I knew Rex from the coffee shop," says the bearded Paul "Pockets" Allred, 41. He totes a .44-caliber Navy Colt black-powder revolver. His friends call him "Pockets," because "I normally carry all kinds of things in my pockets."

"I'm a grease-monkey mechanic," Allred says, when he's not staging gunfights.

"I DRAFTED them all," Loftis says of his sidekicks, who also include Kris Morgan, a 23-year-old machinist, and Mike Bowman, a 32-year-old fireman.

His can-can girls include his 14-year-old daughter, Tammy Loftis, and her friends, Jennifer Payne, 14, and Shannon Latham, 15.

Loftis' gang struts and strolls about an old weathered farmhouse southeast of town and climbs onto the back porch.

For a short while, they drift into the Wild West Days which they imagine from reading and listening to tall tales and from viewing Western movies of daring gunfighters and hardy cowboys of bygone days.

"I would hate to live back then," muses Jennifer, who is dolled up in her saloon dress. "There's nothing but dust and dirt."

Shannon isn't crazed over the notion of "roughing" it without benefit of indoor plumbing and air-conditioning.

"I wouldn't like to live back then because I'd have to wear a dress all the time. I like to wear (blue) jeans."

In his mind's-eye, Bowman takes a differing view of the past.

"I think it would be neat," he says. "Just think how much healthier things would be."

"But," says Jennifer, "you'd be afraid of getting shot in the back." Besides, she's prone to think that women folk would wind up "barefoot, pregnant, milking cows and feeding horses."

LOFTIS SETTLES down on the porch. His daughter sits on his knee. The gang gathers about in a striking pose.

"This will look like the LaGrange Chicken Ranch," Loftis suggests, laughing.

McDonald looks over the situation, which smells of leather, gunpowder, dust and sweat.

"Nothing goes better with whiskey than (gun) powder," he says.

They leave the porch and stage a fall-down gunfight amid the mesquite and dust.

"Let's clear leather," says McDonald.

"Let's slap leather," agrees Bowman.

The gang divides into fighting parties.

They draw and repeatedly fire blank cartridges. The reports unsettle the air, the gun smoke rises and the cowboy-gunfighters stumble, swirl and fall. Their "bleeding wounds" heal instantly, and they're up and ready to reload and fire again. They get up and dust off their clothes.

They're careful to avoid any snags and grazes by brushing up to mesquite shrub and barbed-wire.

Now, Loftis seems to fancy himself as a rough rider. Back in his college days and afterward, he rodeoed by bulldogging and calf roping. He also farmed, ranched and cowboyed around Springlake in northwest Texas.

"Never did win the world championship, but I've been around it," he says without boasting. "I've won a lot of shows. I've won a couple of saddles and a lot of belt buckles, but the girls got off with them or something."

The old West appeals to Loftis and his gang.

"It's entertaining," he says of his Wild West Show. "A lot of people like to look into the past and see where we've come from instead of where we're going."

But there's more to this gunfighter and his views.

"We're here to help each other as a community," he says. "I enjoy life. I enjoy people."

Charity Ball: Glittering fund-raiser features Mayan theme

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

The Mayan "temple," above photo, was the focal point of Friday's Charity Ball, and took about nine months to research and build. Right photo, guests make their selections at the buffet, among such items as chicken and beef fajitas, fried oysters, fried scallops, tempura vegetables and pork loin with barbecue sauce.

The lost empire of the Mayas was found again Friday night at Midland Center as the Junior League of Midland Inc. 1986 Charity Ball got under way. Exotic birds, lush plants and even a Mayan temple provided the backdrop for the glittering affair.

About 750 formally attired Midlanders attended the $150-per-couple event according to Mrs. Fred H. Wetendorf Jr., chairman of the Charity Ball. The Junior League expects the ball to net about $75,000 this year, she added. Funds will be used to help support Junior League community projects including adult basic education, audio-visual screening, Bedside Buddies, Council Against Substance Abuse, Children's Dental Clinic, Directory of Community Services, Exploratory Experiences, Haley Library, Hearthstone, Junior League Singers, Kids on the Block, perinatal clinic, Stand Tall, tape lending library, Teen Court, visual projects and Young People's University. The Charity Ball and the Junior League's Next-to-New shop are the organization's two fund-raising efforts.

Guests were greeted by the calls of tropical birds such as macaws, parrots and cockateels. Inside the main room, a Mayan "temple" flanked by tropical plants was the center of attention. "Stone" columns complete with hieroglyphics bordered the dance floor.

Jungle plants dotted the room, and table centerpieces included stone figures imported from Mexico, said Mrs. Wetendorf.

The Mayan background "started about nine months ago in the planning stages," she said, with research into the Mayan period.

Authenticity was a must for the temple construction. "We had to get an architect to draw up plans so we could get the framework of the temple," said Phyllis Short, decorations chairman.

This year a trip to Cancun, Corumel and Chichen Itza was awarded, with tickets at $10 each, two tickets per invitation. Arrangements for the trip were provided by Midland Travel Agency. The trip was won by Mr and Mrs. Joe Dan McBeth.

The buffet dinner catered by Don Strange of San Antonio included pork loin with barbecue sauce and hot rolls, chicken and beef fajitas, various pastas, chicken ricotta, tempura vegetables, fried oysters, fried scallops and steak Diane.

Music for dancing, from the Big Band sounds to such favorites as Waylon and Willie's "Good Hearted Woman," was provided by Ed Gerlach's Orchestra and Destiny, both from Houston.

One of the more recent features of the Charity Ball is the concept of "walking ads," or young women in costume — this year they wore Mayan gowns and feather headdresses — who present sponsors' advertisements while mingling with the crowd. Firms who purchased the walking ads services included Laughlin Interiors, Rogers Ford Sales Inc., Parker and Parsley Petroleum Co., ClayDesta National Bank, Szor-Diener Furs, United Bank, C.A. Gray Plumbing-Heating Inc., Robbie Casey's, Service Drug of Midland Inc., Philbeck's Custom Clothing, E.F. Hutton, Midland Reporter-Telegram, M.F. Machen Contracting, Patterson Drilling, KOSA-TV, Hemphill and Rhotenberry Associates, Inc., Sam L. Majors Jewelers, Campbell and Coats Construction Co., Cappadonna's, Sam Hollis Studios, Texas Commerce Bank and Blue Heron Designs.

Mrs. L.B. Hotchkiss is president of Junior League of Midland Inc. Charity Ball committee members are Mrs. Wetendorf, chairman; Mrs. Short, decorations chairman; Mrs. James Van Staveran, assistant decorations chairman; and Mrs. David Clarke, sponsor chairman.

Companies providing goods and services for the Charity Ball included Cappadonna's, lighting; Campbell and Coats Construction, temple framework; Birds and Things, tropical birds; Blue Heron Designs Inc., plants; Serge and Tangles, hairstyles; Armstrong Van Lines, transportation of rental items; Fashion Cleaners, tuxedo donations for sponsor waiters; Ron's Floral Designs, floral table decorations; Sherwin-Williams, paint for temple; and Qualified Printers, invitations.

DEAR ABBY

Smart to seek second opinion on surgery

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Re the woman who hated her thin legs and inquired about silicone injections to make them more shapely: You advised her to consult three plastic surgeons before making that decision. Very good advice, Abby. I hope she took it.

Seventeen years ago, I consulted a plastic surgeon about the identical problem. My big mistake was consulting only one doctor. He assured me that silicone augmentation to fill out my calves was a simple procedure and involved very little risk.

I went ahead with it, and within a few days I noticed that the silicone had started to run down my ankle area! Not only did it look terrible, it was very painful when bumped. Shortly afterward, this doctor left town suddenly and was not to be found. A few years later, I read in the newspaper that he had been charged with wrongful death and malpractice suits in another state.

Now I must wrap my legs with Ace bandages daily and elevate my legs periodically to keep the silicone out of the ankle area. However, the silicone still gradually migrates down to my ankles.

Please keep repeating your advice to those who inquire about any kind of surgical procedure to get a second opinion. And a third is better yet. — SORRY I DIDN'T

DEAR SORRY: And I am sorry I didn't repeat this column that ran a year and a half ago:

DEAR ABBY: I am a healthy, active, 46-year-old man whose doctor told me I needed a triple (and possibly a quadruple) bypass operation immediately! It came as a shock to me because I had never had heart trouble of any kind. This news came to me on May 2, 1983. On the following day, I read something in your column that I believe was more than a coincidence. It was as though the good Lord had sent a messsage to me through you.

I acted on your recommendation and got not only a second opinion, but a third, and both doctors told me I did not need heart surgery. When I told my first doctor about the opinions of the other two doctors, he suggested that since I had so little confidence in his professional judgment, I should find another doctor. I did.

Please run the enclosed column again. And run it every year. Sign me ... ALSO WISED UP IN SUNNY CALIFORNIA

DEAR ALSO: I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you so much for printing the government's Second Surgical Opinion Hotline. (The toll-free number is 1-800-638-6833; in Maryland, it's 1-800-492-6603.) It's easy to see why you titled your column "Second Opinion Likely to Offend Doctor." It's been my experience that asking your original doctor for the name of a second-opinion specialist poses no problem for him. He will simply refer you to someone down the hall, in the same building or belonging to the same country club who will invariably corroborate his own opinion.

I cannot stress enough the importance of seeking out specialists totally independent from one another for second (and third and fourth) opinions in surgical or medical matters. Find a different doctor who will really take an objective look at your case, without regard to ego, fear of loss of control over a patient, his wallet, or any other irrelevant (to you) issues. — WISED UP IN SANTA BARBARA

He has served as Midland County Republican Party chairman, member of the state Republican Executive Committee and was elected Republican National Committeeman in 1976, 1980 and 1984. He has served in many other national Republican posts. He is currently vice chairman of the Republican National Committee representing the 13-state Southern Region.

De Beers diamond mine was African farm

Copley News Service

Oddly enough, the best-known name in the diamond business is that of two brothers, D.A. and J.N. De Beers, who merely owned a South African farm on which a major diamond find was made in 1871.

They quickly sold the farm for 6,300 pounds, retained no interest in the land, and it was only because it had long been called "the De Beers place" that a mine that opened there was called "the De Beers mine."

Donations sought for Permian Basin battered women's center

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children needs help to cope with the record high number of women and children it is helping, according to Cheryl Franklin, executive director of the center.

The center has a normal capacity for 25 persons, but has recently been housing over 60 women and children during the day. Ms. Franklin has speculated that the numbers will continue to increase due to the stresses many families in the Permian Basin are experiencing from the downturn in the oil industry.

"No matter how many we get in the the house, we will always provide shelter for any lady that's been battered," she said.

The following is a list, compiled by Ms. Franklin, of items the center is seeking to help meet its high current needs:

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against all major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices fell on news that oil producers meeting in Geneva cannot agree a formula to halt the collapse of oil prices.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rebounded for the second straight day from its record post-World War II lows of last week.

The dollar closed at 177.30 yen, up from 176.80 yen on Thursday. Japanese markets were closed for a holiday on Friday.

Later, in London, the dollar kept rising and was quoted at 178.63 yen.

In London, the dollar also rose against the British pound which was quoted at $1.494, cheaper than $1.5035 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $356 a troy ounce compared with late Friday's $354, but slid back more than $3 in later trading.

Dealers said bullion prices were depressed by news that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, on the ninth day of a meeting in Geneva, remained far from agreement on a production-sharing system that could halt the collapse of world oil prices.

At mid-morning today London's five major dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $352.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $352.70, down from $354.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at $354.59 bid, down 20 cents from Saturday.

In New York on Friday, gold rose $6.90 to close at $350.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.75 a troy ounce, compared with $5.77 late Friday.

Analysts say refineries should profit from drop in oil prices

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' oil refineries, capable of processing one of every four barrels of crude in the United States, are scrambling to get rid of the oil purchased weeks ago at prices nearly double the current rates.

But industry officials and analysts watching the volatile swings in the price say well-managed refineries should be making profits whatever the price of oil. And while some layoffs hit the refining segment more than a year ago, companies now are hiring a few workers to maintain employment levels and no one is predicting future layoffs.

Analysts say the lower oil prices, which translate into lower prices for gasoline, may even be good for the oil industry, which has seen the boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s turn to bust.

"This is not bad news for them," says Jack Carney, project manager for short-range forecasts at Houston's Pace Consultants, Inc. "Refiners are making more money than before."

Pace estimates major oil companies on the Gulf Coast will make as much as $1.50 per barrel profit on products in the first quarter of the year, renewing investors' interest in a segment of the oil industry that has been considered an economic liability. Previously, the refiner may have been losing money.

"Now he's the only one making money," Carney says.

"If we can live through the price plunge, things are going to be better once the price stabilizes," says Rick Sherman, vice president of administrative services for Texas City Refining Inc., an independent refiner southeast of Houston.

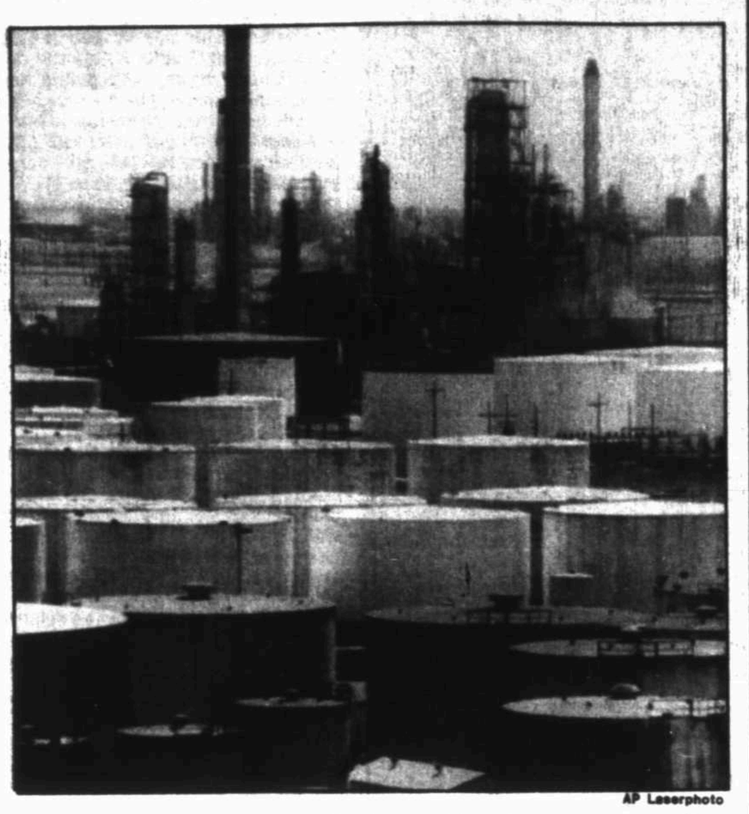

"For the small independent like us, it's not a lot of fun these days. But we're still hanging in there. As long as the margins are there, you can do better with lower prices," Sherman said.

The industry timetable for moving a barrel of oil through the refining process is six weeks, meaning refiners are caught with yesterday's higher crude prices and competing with today's lower product prices, says Amoco Oil Co. spokesman Ray Thompson.

"Purchasers are reluctant to build up inventories in product because they're uncertain what gasoline prices are going to do the next day," he says.

So refiners are keeping inventories as low as possible, hoping to take advantage of the lower crude prices.

"You can get burned on inventory," says Rick Hansen at Shell Oil Co. "But the refinery people are very optimistic because (the price decline) portends good things for demand. It's better than the price going up. When you have to charge more money for your product, you're not going to encourage buying that product."

AP Laserphoto

Analysts estimate Texas refineries could make more money than before, with major oil companies making as much as $1.50 per barrel profit on products in the first quarter of the year.

The sentiment that demand will grow as gasoline prices are driven down is shared by other company officials, though analysts are a bit more cautious.

"I don't see a big shift away from fuel-efficient cars," says Don Hoyte, senior research scientist at Lamar University's John Gray Institute, an oil industry think tank. "The gas hogs are kind of gone from the marketplace. Federal regulations have taken care of that."

When oil prices skyrocketed, taking gasoline prices with them, Americans facing better than $1 a gallon fuel prices for the first time ever began thinking conservation.

"We finally got to the point where we quit buying gasoline," Shell's Hansen says, referring to consumers.

At Texaco Inc., the lower consumption triggered a self-described streamlining of operations beginning in 1982. At least 1,400 jobs were eliminated from its Port Arthur refinery, which was built in 1903.

"They've gone on to something else," Hoyte said of the people who lost work. "They may have left, they may by unemployed, they may have gotten out of the workforce altogether."

Some, however, have gone to a neighboring Gulf Oil Co. refinery, where a limited number of people are being hired, according to Gary Beevers, vice chairman of the Texaco Workers Committee at the Oil, Atomic and Chemical Workers Union.

Unemployment in the so-called Golden Triangle of East Texas, which encompasses Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange, is nearly 13 percent, compared with a statewide level of 8.4 percent. The area is home to refineries that have the capacity of processing 1.18 million barrels of crude, or 7.5 percent of the nation's capacity.

Shell, Amoco and Exxon, which all have major refineries on the upper Gulf Coast, say they have imposed no layoffs.

"The belt is tight, but we're trying to run smart and efficiently and not spend money where we don't have to," Shell's Hansen says.

Houston feels effects of falling oil prices

HOUSTON (AP) — The tumbling price of crude oil has had an immediate, discouraging effect on the lives of Houston companies and families. Reduced drilling activity and slashed budgets already have thrown thousands out of work.

Each day, many more who still have jobs go to work wondering if they will be the next to go.

"Everybody is on edge," says Robert Perez, a machinist who has worked for the same large oil field equipment company for 18 years. "You see it happening every week. People are getting laid off. We've got a seniority system and you can pretty well figure out what's going on. Right now, they are laying off people with 14 years."

At one commercial architecture firm, layoffs were announced two weeks in a row. "There wasn't much talk at the water cooler," one architect said. "Everybody stayed at his desk, working."

"The horrible thing about being laid off is it is totally out of your control — even if you do a good job," said a landman who negotiates drilling leases for an exploration and production firm that has cut back operations in recent weeks. "All you can do is try to make it so you are not totally strapped."

"I don't think any of us ever believed this would affect the upper and middle management," said one executive at a natural gas pipeline company gobbled up in that industry's consolidations. "What happened was we had a few Indians and a whole lot of chiefs. It is the chiefs who are getting laid off."

Many Houstonians worried about layoffs were adamant about not using their names or the names of their employers. Many said they did not want their supervisors to see them quoted about corporate problems when layoff decisions are being made. Others remain loyal to their employers.

"Don't use the name of my company," warned one. "They would lay me off."

"Our management has really looked after people," another said. "Please don't use the name."

Many economic experts, such as Harold Gross of Southern Methodist University, say the prospects for the Houston economy over the next year or so "are pretty grim."

"We are forecasting unemployment in the double digits by early April," says Gross, of SMU's Cox Center for Enterprising. "By midsummer, it will be a little higher."

For the next 1½ to two years, the Center for Enterprising is forecasting a Houston area unemployment rate near 10 percent.

In a new survey of opinion in the Houston area, Rice University sociologist Stephen L. Klineberg found that 71 percent of survey participants believed job opportunities are fair to poor, while only 26 percent believed the opportunities are excellent or good.

The negative rating in Klineberg's survey stook at only 23 percent in 1982, but jumped to 56 percent in February 1983, after the first effects of the worldwide oil glut reached the city. The negative rating was 58 percent one year ago. (Klineberg's survey involved 619 telephone interviews conducted in February.)

The landman would qualify for about $804 per month in unemployment compensation, but it would take four to six weeks to get it started. "I am updating my resume. My skills have to be transferable, but I may have to move and take a cut in pay."

"There are jobs out there," said the pipeline company manager, who has accepted a severance pay package and is leaving the company. "A friend called and asked how I was doing. At first I was embarrassed — I said I was leaving. Then he gave me a lead on another job.

"The company offered a severance program, or we could stay and take the risk that we wouldn't have a job. I think the people who are taking the severance pay are the ones with more confidence."

Richard Evans, a University of Houston social psychologist, said the city's perception of the economic woes affects the way outsiders view the city, which makes it difficult for those firms not affected by the downturn to recruit top job candidates. Also, it affects the way residents make personal financial decisions.

Even more far-reaching, he said, is the danger that Houston's "total community future-time perspective" will be damaged. "One of the things that has always characterized Houston is its optimism about the future."

At the same time the energy sector is reeling, another shining example of that future-oriented view — the Johnson Space Center — is still stunned by the Challenger explosion and continuing investigations into its cause.

The depression about the future feeds on itself, Evans said. "Things start looking worse than they really are."

Falling gasoline prices could save public $19 billion, analyst predicts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline pump prices finally dipped to meet plummeting international crude oil rates and the reduction could mean a $19 billion saving for U.S. motorists in 1986, an analyst says.

All grades of gasoline decreased an average 7.91 cents a gallon over the past two weeks, said Dan Lundberg, who surveys 17,000 gasoline stations in 50 states bi-weekly for his Lundberg Letter.

The average price of all grades of gasoline — full-service and self-service including all taxes — is now 95.76 cents a gallon, he said, and prices may drop another 2 or 3 cents before leveling off.

Since March, gasoline prices have fallen almost 14 cents a gallon and since January have fallen a total of 24.26 cents a gallon, Lundberg said.

"All of this is unprecedented," he said. "It's a collapse over three times as severe as the 8-cent drop in the first quarter of 1982, which was the previous all-time recorded drop in average retail prices."

"Should the drop in prices level off and remain where it is now, the savings to the motoring public for the rest of 1986 could approximate $18.9 billion," he said, explaining that his figures were based on a projected annual sales of 105 billion gallons of gasoline and a 24.26-cent-a-gallon reduction for the rest of the year.

"The average retail gasoline price in the United States has at last joined the free fall in international price collapse. It's caught up after an almost surprising lag of two months and has at last worked its way through to the pump," he said.

Lundberg's two-week survey found that the average price of regular leaded at self-service is now 81.96 cents a gallon, regular unleaded is 88.22 cents a gallon and the price of premium unleaded is $1.04.57 cents a gallon.

World oil prices have tumbled from an average of $28 per barrel in December to an average of $15 per barrel.

First vote expected on tax overhaul plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Bob Packwood faces almost certain defeat in the first vote by his Senate Finance Committee on his wide-ranging plan for overhauling the federal income tax.

The committee held more than 30 days of hearings on "tax reform" last year, but a vote on the so-called minimum tax provision of his proposal was the first on the package that Packwood developed in consultation with the Reagan administration. The chairman had announced a schedule that would delay votes on the most controversial issues in the bill, but his hand was forced last week by a majority of the committee.

The vote was expected to occur today.

The minimum tax would affect only a few hundred thousand of the wealthiest couples and individuals. But from Packwood's perspective, the vote could indicate whether the committee is serious about improving the fairness of the tax system.

The issue: whether the handful of wealthy investors who are subject to the minimum tax should be taxed on the interest earned on tax-exempt bonds they already own. Packwood and the Treasury Department said yes; most members of the committee, bombarded by complaints last week from mayors, governors and investors, apparently disagreed and they demanded a vote today.

If he lost the vote, Packwood told reporters, it would be a signal from his committee colleagues that they were not interested in writing a really escape-proof minimum tax.

"When I am in Oregon, the one recurring theme I hear about tax reform is that everyone — individuals and businesses — must pay their fair share of taxes if tax reform is to be believable," he said. But rejection of the disputed provision, he added, would mean that "several thousand people who are millionaires will pay no tax."

Most of his colleagues on the committee have endorsed strengthening the minimum tax, which, in 17 years, has only partially met its goal of ensuring that profitable companies and upper-income investors pay some tax regardless of how many deductions and credits they claim. But they challenged the bond provision on grounds it was an unfair retroactive tax increase.

Reagan appointee leaves Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preston Martin, the longest-serving of President Reagan's four appointees to the Federal Reserve Board and frequently mentioned as an aspirant for the top job, has announced that he will resign from the board next month and return to private business.

Martin told a Friday news conference he was leaving the board rather than seek another four-year term as vice chairman.

Journal reports Subaru planning U.S. plant

DETROIT (AP) — A Japanese business journal reported the manufacturer of Subaru cars is searching for an assembly plant site in the United States.

The Japan Economic Journal reported Friday that the strengthening of the yen, which makes Japanese products more expensive in the United States, had prompted Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd. to "make a decision to launch local production" of Subaru cars.

But Neil Szigethy, a spokesman for Subaru of America Inc., said: "This is only one of a number of scenarios Fuji is considering."

Ski resorts: Athletes' paradise or elites' playground?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The old New England ski lodge is not what it used to be. For one thing, some of the visitors don't even bring their skis for a holiday at today's mountain resorts. But they had better bring lots of money.

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press

WARREN, Vt. — Wearing a 1950s-era black ski hat with flaps to cover his ears, James Welch looked out of place in front of the Sugarbush resort base lodge.

Uphill, swarms of skiers in bright bib overalls moved their hips like slow, winterized belly dancers. The sight brought a smile to Welch, a 58-year-old resident of Short Hills, N.J.

"I skied this place when it was a glint in Damon Gadd's eye," he says, referring to the man who founded the Mad River Valley resort in 1958. "There have been tremendous changes in the industry since then.

"It boggles my mind that so many people have as much money as it takes to go skiing these days."

Ski resorts have always been playgrounds for the rich, in New England and elsewhere, but the playgrounds today are new, improved — and even more expensive.

Once, skiing was the only thing to do at a ski area, but now some vacationers don't even bring their skis.

"Ski areas are catering to a different desire among travelers and vacationers," says Kathe Dillmann, spokeswoman for the National Ski Areas Association, which represents 400 of the 680 downhill ski areas in the country. "People want more than just a basic ski experience."

A decade ago, 34 million ski passes were sold nationwide, with ski area revenues at $405 million. In the 1984-85 season, the number of passes jumped to 51.4 million, while revenues soared to $1.5 billion. The recent rise in revenues is partially due to increased real estate deals at the resorts, Dillmann says.

A trio of skiers enjoy the slopes at Stratton Mountain, Vt. Braving the elements on the slopes remains the key drawing card for ski resorts despite the amenities.

SUGARBUSH IS SIMILAR to many large resorts in the East and the West: development in the last decade has given it a new mountain face, featuring condo chimneys interspersed with treetops and a European-style village in the valley below.

Chan Weller, spokesman for Sugarbush Valley, says 10 years ago there were only a handful of condominiums in the area. Today there are more than 1,000. The resort's village includes a fitness center with tennis and racquetball courts, a school and day care center, restaurants, a bookstore, an ice cream shop, a massage center and a disco-bar.

Traveling along the spine of Vermont's Green Mountains, a visitor would see mirror images of Sugarbush. At Killington ski area, 800 condominiums have been built. Killington officials envision 2,500 condos by the year 2000.

And at Stratton, developers are in the midst of building a $60 million village that when completed will house 4,000 people, include a convention center, a five-story parking garage and a shopping complex of 30 boutiques and a general store called "Bear Essentials."

"Ski vacations now represent a more glamorous vacation," said Stratton spokesman Tom Meyers. "We have to compete with the Caribbean vacations, the Western vacations. We are making an effort to provide skiers with other attractions and more amenities. We are an attractive resort for the upscale market."

SLOPE-SIDE STRATTON condos cost from $171,500 to $495,000. The most expensive ones are all sold.

Sugarbush's Weller says skiing has become literally a fashionable sport for the rich.

"Here these people are slugging it out in Wall Street day after day in three-piece suits," Weller says. "They come up here in color-coordinated outfits. They feel good. Fashion has allowed them to do that. They are proud to exhibit their physiques."

The added luxuries at downhill ski resorts are not what every skier is looking for, though.

"When I first started skiing in the '60s, skiing was it," said Eric Paiola, a former professional ski racer. "Before, you got out and the only amenity you had was the base lodge and a cup of hot chocolate. Now it's shops, different types of restaurants and skiing out the back door of your condo."

He said lift tickets and equipment are now too expensive for many people. "I remember when the all-day lift ticket was $6," he says. "Now it's over $20 everywhere."

Watching their four children ski from Sugarbush's base lodge, Fred and Terry Phillips of Middletown, N.J., said their three-day ski vacation was costing them about $1,000. On top of that, they had just spent $500 for skis, boots and poles for their 18-year-old son.

FRED PHILLIPS, an ophthalmic technician, said the vacation was a Christmas present to his children, but that he was careful about expenses. Instead of spending more than $200 a night for a condo near the base lodge, he rented a nearby house from a friend for $100 a night. Also, he and his wife decided against strapping on skis themselves.

"Thirty bucks a day for a lift ticket is a lot of money," says Terry Phillips.

Her husband adds, "It really is a sport for the affluent. I don't see any poor kids out there, that's for sure."

Ski area spokesmen defend the rising costs of the sport, saying that improvements in technology have made skiing a better deal for the money. The advent of man-made snow keeps some resorts open from October to June. Ski lifts are faster, trails are better groomed and advances in equipment have made the sport safer and easier to master, they say.

"Where else can you go for $28 a day and get clean rest rooms, food service, heat and warmth and comfort in a winter environment, the use of millions of dollars of assets, the advantages of snow-making, first aid and, on top of it, the thrills of downhill skiing?" Weller asks.

Gail Boyan of Nahant, Mass., and her family say, however, that many people skiing at Sugarbush probably couldn't afford everything the resort offered. From their rented condo, they had a clear view of the slopes — and the indoor fitness center.

"I wish the sports center was a little more affordable," says Bill Boyan, 20, who is a sophomore at Georgetown University. "Imagine spending $25 an hour for a racquetball court?"

But braving the elements on the slopes remains the key drawing card for the resorts, despite the amenities.

Welch, in his old ski hat, said he was itchy to get going with his ski runs.

"I love the speed, and the thrill of taking risks," he said. "And it's great fun to see your children ski a whole lot better than you've ever skied."

Fifty-year-old Sun Valley lifted ski resorts to glamor status

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — In the middle of the Depression, the man who ran the railroad came up with a scheme to fill his trains. Find a place in the middle of nowhere, a place people could reach only by rail. Then give them a reason to go there, a magnificent one.

The year was 1936. The man with the idea was Averell Harriman, board chairman of the Union Pacific railroad, later governor of New York.

The place was Ketchum, the belly button in Idaho's midsection, a town built on silver and sheep, surrounded by some of the western high desert's most awe-inspiring mountains.

The reason to board the train was Sun Valley, America's first destination ski resort and the place that altered a whole nation's definition of skiing. Once considered a sport solely for the hale and foolhardy, skiing was transformed through Sun Valley into the passion of the privileged and the proletariat alike.

As Sun Valley marks its 50th anniversary this year, an estimated 21 million skiers will spend more than $2 billion to slalom, slide or slip down slopes at 680 ski areas, from Rhode Island's tiny Yagoo Valley to huge Mammoth Mountain in California.

More than 9 million lift tickets were sold in Colorado last year; 7 million in California; 4.2 million in Vermont; 3.6 million in New York; about 1.5 million each in New Hampshire and Oregon. It was a record year and proof-positive that U.S. skiing has come of age.

HARRIMAN, NOW 94, says Sun Valley has done "what I had hoped it would do — gotten other people to develop ski resorts such as Aspen and Alta, at Salt Lake City, and in the Sierra."

AP Laserphoto

Author Ernest Hemingway, left, and actor Gary Cooper, center, with their guide Taylor Williams rest after a day hunting in Silver Creek, Idaho, near Sun Valley. In the 30s and 40s, the Sun Valley area was the place to be seen.

The 1932 Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., brought out the latent winter sportsman in America. Early Eastern ski resorts installed rope tows and T-bars. On Jan. 22, skiers at the Suicide Six resort outside Woodstock, Vt., celebrated the 52nd anniversary of America's first ski tow.

But Sun Valley was the first of a new breed of ski resorts in the United States, one loaded with the amenities and charm common to those in Europe that Harriman had visited.

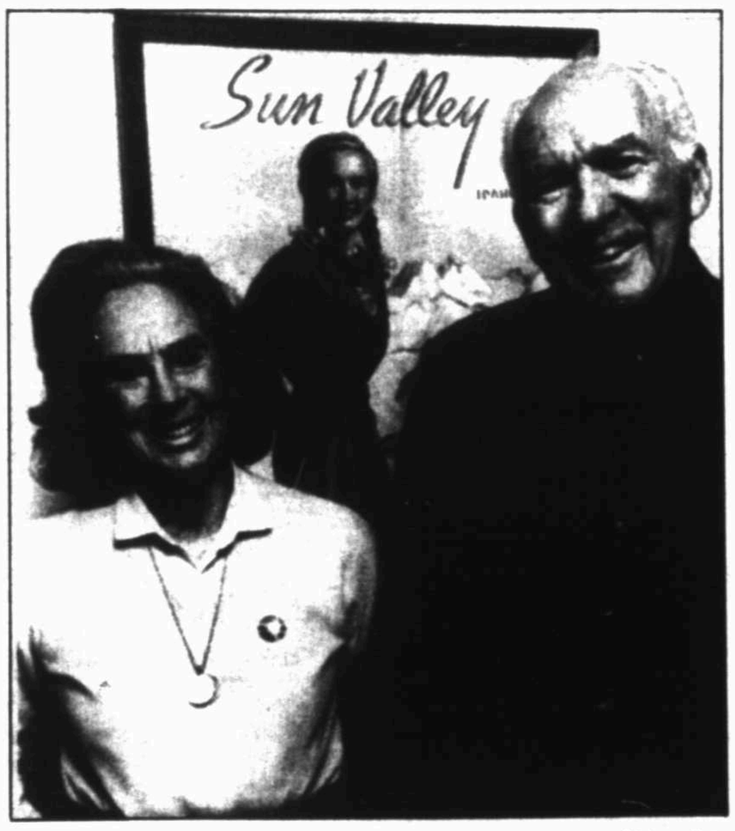

Count Felix Schaffgotsch, who had helped develop resorts in Austria, traveled Union Pacific territory in search of the perfect site. Possibilities in Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Oregon and Washington were rejected: too cold, too rainy, too far from the railroad, too close to a city. Then a Union Pacific employee called him to Ketchum.

"It contains more delightful features than any other place I have seen in the United States, Switzerland or Austria for a winter sports center," Schaffgotsch wrote Harriman.

The Union Pacific chairman made the trip in his private railway car.

"I remember very vividly getting off the car and putting on my skis, skiing into Sun Valley on this powder snow," he said. "I fell in love with the place then and there."

STEVE HANNAGAN, BROUGHT in to promote the resort, had a different view. "(It was) a Godforsaken snowfield," said the publicist, who helped put Miami Beach on the map and despised winter cold as much as he loved Florida's heat. It was Hannagan who gave Sun Valley its name and insisted that it be a place where guests could "rough it in luxury," a philosophy that became the key to the industry's success.

Gretchen and Don Fraser pose at their Sun Valley home in front of a poster that depicts Gretchen after winning a gold medal in Alpine skiing in 1948 at Sun Valley in Idaho.

The four-story $1.5 million lodge, built of concrete made to look like wood, was filled with flowers and custom-made furniture. There was an orchestra, a heated swimming pool and a staff of handsome Austrian ski instructors in Tyrolean garb.

And stars were everywhere, skiing the slopes by day and clinking glasses by night. The glamorous ghosts of Sun Valley past still haunt the hallways of the newly refurbished lodge, where their photos line the walls.

Clark Gable, Gary Cooper, Bing Crosby, Judy Garland and Norma Shearer partied and played there. Claudette Colbert came to film scenes for "I Met Him in Paris." Olympic ice skater Sonja Henie starred in "Sun Valley Serenade," the 1941 film that put the resort atop America's vacation wish-list.

Ernest Hemingway worked on "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in suite 206 and hunted game nearby.

"It was a swinging place (in the '30s and '40s); it was the place to be seen," said Don Fraser, a member of the first U.S. Olympic Alpine Ski Team in 1936 and a long-time Sun Valley resident.

IN 1937, A Life magazine cover story called Sun Valley "Society's Newest Winter Playground." Publicity like that made the public eager to get a piece of the fantasy; the chairlift, carrying a smiling skier on the magazine cover, made it accessible.

James Curran, a Union Pacific engineer who had watched fruit unloaded from ships by hooks and conveyor belts, decided skiers might be transported like so many bananas.

Before that, "You had to walk up," said Gretchen Fraser, Don's wife, who skied at Sun Valley in the early days and went on to win the United States' first gold medal in Alpine skiing in 1948. "It took about two hours to go up, and two minutes to come down."

Half a century later, Sun Valley's two mountains boast 16 lifts that can carry 22,000 skiers an hour. The train no longer stops here; commuter flights are the fastest way in. Condominiums dot the countryside, and the old sheep town has an art gallery or sportswear shop on every corner.

Resorts harvest hearty crop of snow

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — The locals say it's like skiing on velvet. The ski patrol calls it the magic carpet.

Powder is the pride of Western ski resorts, a dusty carpet of snow so fine and dry it won't form a snowball. For years, the demand has been so great that when nature fails to deliver, man and machine have stepped in.

"More than anything else, ski resort people are actually snow farmers," Sun Valley spokesman Carl Wilgus said. "You're harvesting a crop."

Now a biotechnology company based in Oakland, Calif., Advanced Genetic Sciences Inc., has developed a product designed to act like a fertilizer for snowfields. "Snomax" is a harmless natural bacterium that enhances frost formation. Doug Sarojak, marketing director for AGS, said that under the right conditions, Snomax can help machines produce more of the dry powder that skiers crave.

"Because of the ability of the product to start the freezing process, to speed it, it's going to allow ski areas to make more snow earlier in the season, to better maintain some high-traffic areas on slopes and give them better overall ski conditions," he said.

Snomax, packaged in powder form in a cake mix-size box, is designed to be mixed with water and pumped through snow-making guns. One $65 box can cover an acre with a foot of snow, Sarojak said. Some resorts report getting 50 percent more snow in a given period using Snomax rather than just conventional water and air.

Eight U.S. resorts have used Snomax commercially, and 23 others have expressed interest, he said.

"I've talked to several operators who swear by it," said Kathe Dillmann of the National Ski Areas Association, which represents about 380 of the 680 ski areas nationwide.

Steve Lacey, Sun Valley's snow-making chief, wants more feedback on Snomax before he tries it. Like 75 percent of all U.S. ski resorts, the resort has invested millions in snow-making equipment. Sun Valley, which can cover about 700 of its 1,275 skiable acres, starts cranking out artificial snow in October, a month before the season starts, and continues through mid-March.

A 25-person staff works around the clock adjusting the snow quality by changing the air-to-water ratio, monitoring the pumps and moving the snow guns for even coverage on the slopes. Man-made snow is denser, so it stays in place longer, and it's fluffy and dry, the best stuff for skiing.

"People get on some hard snow somewhere and automatically assume it's artificial snow," Lacey said. "And 70 percent of the time, it's natural snow."

Rising insurance rates melt ski profits

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — Downhill skiing is not for the faint of heart or light of wallet. And costs are rising, largely because of big injury suits and sky-high rates for liability insurance.

The sport is inherently pricey: buying the basic equipment to transport one's self down a snowy mountain can cost $500-$700 for skis, boots, bindings and poles.

But that's before skis touch snow. The real wallet-emptier is the lift ticket, which buys passage up the mountain so the skier can risk life and limb getting back down. Daily tickets range from $11 to $27 around the country, with an average of $18.50. A weekend of skiing for a family of four, without calculating accommodations, meals or extensive travel, can cost $200 just for the lifts and lunchtime snacks.

This year's lift tickets are priced at least $2 above last year's to make up part of the drastic increases in insurance rates, ranging from 50 percent to 350 percent in the last few years. Some resorts have been forced out of business, like Iron Mountain near Lake Tahoe in California.

The insurance premium for Squaw Valley, Calif., tripled this season to $910,000. Lift tickets went to $27 from $24 last year.

At Hunter Mountain, New York's largest private ski area, general manager Orville Slutzky said he faced $1.5 million in premium payments for a "fraction" of his previous coverage. Last year, he paid a premium of $528,000.

"I should have put the key in the door and walked away," Slutzky said. "But there's a moral obligation to all the supporting businesses around here. There's a moral obligation to the work force here, too. If we close, 600 people are out of work."

Premiums are going up for many businesses around the country, and the insurance industry blames the trend toward litigation. That is true in the ski industry, where lawsuits are increasingly common and injured skiers are winning higher awards, from an average of $345,000 in 1974 to $1.07 million last year, according to the National Ski Areas Association (NSAA).

Several lawsuits are pending in a Dec. 14 chairlift accident at the Keystone ski area in Colorado, which injured 49 skiers, 29 of whom were hospitalized.

POSTAL JOBS

CLERK & CARRIER POSITIONS
($9.48/hr to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Midland, Odessa, Big Springs and Andrews Post Offices. APPLICATIONS ARE BEING ACCEPTED MARCH 17TH THROUGH APRIL 2ND ONLY! [And since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!]

4-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

★ You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.
★ You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (Includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Corey Guide to Postal Exams [with 6 complete practice tests], a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, "12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service" Booklet, Follow-Up Consultation Privileges, Achievement Award to High-Scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). Please bring two sharpened No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.
Seating is limited; pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

Local Toyota Dealer Chuck Davis poses with new Toyota Supra & friends in front of Texas Stadium. You can get a closer look at the new Supra in Midland at Permian Toyota.

AREA TOYOTA DEALER FIRE UP NEW SUPRA IN TEXAS STADIUM 'SHOOTOUT'

DALLAS, Texas, March 13 – They called it a shootout, but the only bullets involved were the high-powered 1986 1/2 Toyota Supras. And the gunslingers were Toyota dealers.

The event was the "Texas Stadium Supra Shootout," an introduction to the all-new sports car for the 131 Toyota dealers from Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi. The new Supras began arriving in Toyota dealerships March 14.

Highlighting the all-day event were several road courses set up in the stadium parking lot. Here, the dealers had the opportunity to experience many of the features that will put the Supra at the head of its performance class, including double wishbone suspension, aerodynamic styling and a 3.0-liter 24-valve engine that rockets the Supra from zero to 60 mph in under 8 seconds. On hand to provide driving tips were professional racers Ivan Stewart and Steve Millen.

The host for the all-day event was Gulf States Toyota (GST), the Houston-based distributor that oversees dealer operations in the five states.

Dealers in the GST area shattered the record books in 1985 with sales of 95,891 cars and trucks. They're counting on breaking records again in 1986 with a little help from the new Supra.

This feature appears each Monday in the Classified Section as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram
