Soviet nuclear sub fire kills three people

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire on a Soviet nuclear submarine east of Bermuda killed three people, Tass said Saturday, a day after the blaze began. It said the ship was carrying ballistic missiles but there was no danger of a nuclear explosion or contamination.

The three-paragraph report by the official Soviet news agency did not say if the fire was out or if the missiles had nuclear warheads. Tass said the stricken vessel was being assisted by other Soviet ships.

In Mexico City, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters there were "some injuries" on the submarine but that he had "no details beyond what we all know already."

White House spokesman Roman Popaduik said in Washington: "We believe nuclear weapons are on board." He said the United States "has offered assistance to the Soviets and stands ready to assist as required."

State Department spokeman Bruce Ammerman said Gorbachev sent a message to Reagan early Saturday through the U.S. Embassy in Moscow reporting the fire and casualties and giving the ship's location. "We commend the quick notification of the incident," he said.

Past submarine accidents listed — 8A

But a Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Washington actually learned of the accident "several hours earlier." He refused to say how.

"I can't go into details, but let's just say they (the Soviet crew) made one hell of a lot of noise underwater with their fire alarm," added a Navy official who also requested anonymity.

The Soviets rarely report accidents involving their military ships. The speedy announcement was in sharp contrast to the Kremlin's three-day delay in reporting the April 26 explosion and fire at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor in the Ukraine that eventually killed at least 31 people.

Tass said the fire broke out Friday morning in an unspecified compartment when the submarine was about 620 miles northeast of Bermuda.

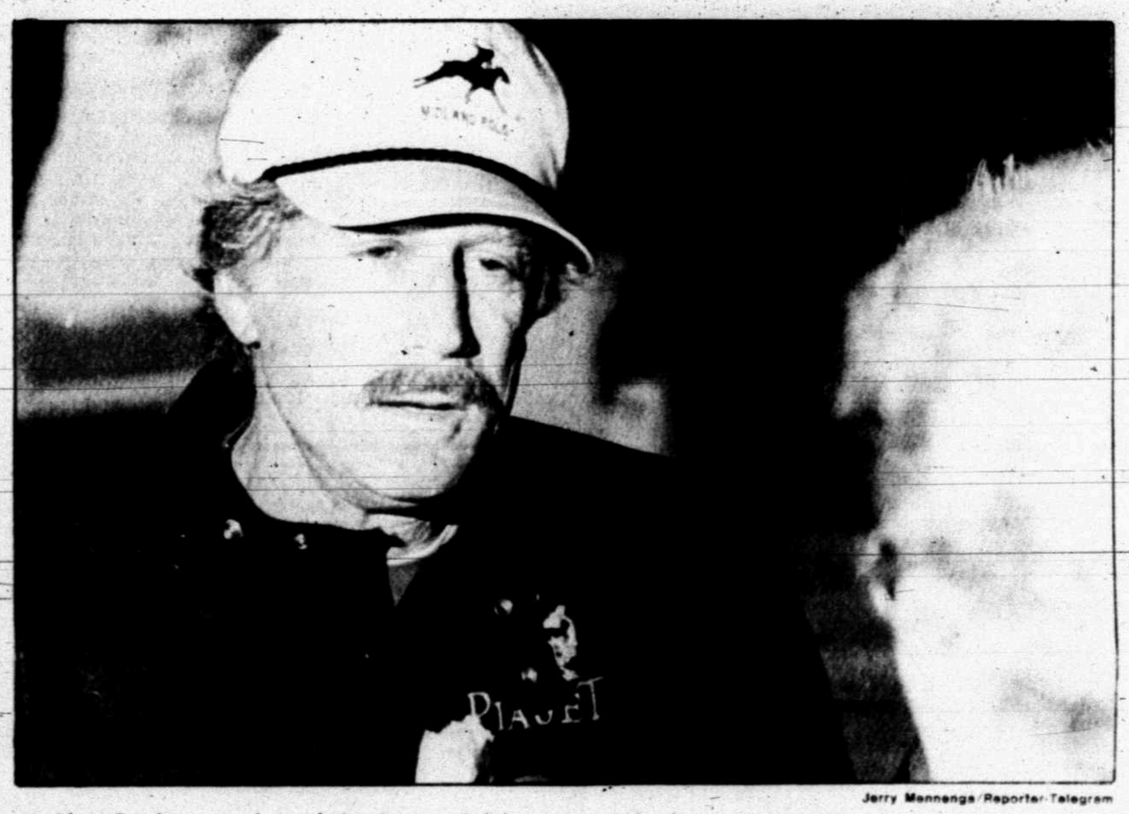

Col. Marvin Braman, a Pentagon spokesman, pinpointed the submarine's position Saturday at 552 miles east of Bermuda and 1,196 miles east of Cape Hatteras, N.C., as reported by a U.S. observation plane. It was not clear why that differed from the Tass report of the ship's position.

Braman also said the submarine had not moved very far since the accident.

He said the map coordinates of the vessel's location were 31 degrees, 11 minutes north latitude, and 55 degrees, 14 minutes west longitude.

Braman also said the airplane crew saw smoke coming from the submarine late Saturday afternoon, and a small boat with eight people in it was circling the stricken vessel.

Bentsen asks Reagan to impose oil import fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Lloyd Bentsen on Saturday asked President Reagan to impose an oil import fee to head off increasing dependence on foreign oil producers and bolster exploration in the United States.

Citing figures in a Library of Congress report, the Texas Democrat said that by 1990 proven U.S. oil reserves will have dropped at least 3 billion barrels, which he said was a "legitimate threat to U.S. national security."

"I am releasing today (Saturday) a study that shows that our domestic oil, the oil within our own borders, that those reserves will reach the lowest level that they've been since shortly after World War II," Bentsen said in a news release.

The Texas senator said he has seen reports from the Secretary of Interior and the Security Advisory Council that raise serious concerns about whether the United States is becoming too dependent on foreign oil.

"The only thing we can do at this point to try to stabilize these (domestic) reserves and encourage drilling is to put on a oil import fee," Bentsen said. "And I'm once again calling on the president to do that."

The Library of Congress report, requested by Bentsen, arrived at its conclusion by averaging the reserve additions during the five years from 1980 through 1985 and applying that formula to the coming four years.

The projections show reserves declining by about 2.6 percent this year, and if 1986 levels of drilling continue, the decline would reach 11.6 percent by 1990 and 18.4 percent by 1995.

The most significant reserve declines are expected in the mature, traditional oil producing regions of the western United States, Texas, the Gulf Coast and the Midcontinent, the report concludes.

"Much drilling is needed each year to prove additional reserves from extensions to existing fields and from enhanced recovery methods combined with in-fill drilling in such older fields."

Pastor warns NAACP gathering about new counterrevolution

The 50th annual convention of the Texas NAACP is meeting in Dallas — 4A

The Midland branch of the NAACP heard a rousing call for blacks to re-assess and rededicate themselves Saturday at its first annual Freedom Fund Banquet at Midland Center.

Guest speaker Rev. Fredrick Haynes III delivered a spirited "message" from Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. at the banquet, in which he slammed President Reagan's recent veto of economic sanctions against South Africa and championed Congress' override of that veto last week.

Haynes, who said he was speaking as a mouthpiece for King, said "we need to take a good look at where we are as people."

Saturday's banquet benefited the national Freedom Fund, set up by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as a legal defense fund specifically for civil rights cases.

Haynes, pastor of Dallas' Friendship West Baptist Church, also said blacks have to focus on the new counterrevolution: right wing conservatism.

"There is a counterrevolution going on...to right-wing conservatism, and it has been marshaled by General Ronald Wilson Reagan. If we don't wake up we are going to be right back where we were," Haynes said.

Haynes said Reagan administration policies demonstrate "reverse Robin Hood — what I call 'Reagan Hood' robs from the needy and gives to the greedy."

Haynes said, however, that Reagan was not the only "enemy" blacks have; he said many blacks are guilty of "cultural amnesia" — forgetting where one came from.

"Apparently some of us forgot who we were," Haynes said. "Some blacks have forgotten about organizations like the NAACP, forgotten that if it wasn't for these groups, we never would have advanced anywhere. some blacks have forgotten this."

Rains put damper on celebrity polo match for benefit of MARC

By JULIE HILLRICHS

The Piaget Celebrity Polo Team took a licking but kept on ticking Saturday after heavy rains prevented players from mounting their horses during Midland's first Chukkers for Charity Polo Match.

Only about 50 of the anticipated 2,000 guests turned out for the event to benefit the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens.

Still, the association raised over $15,000 from the benefit that featured special guest appearances by television stars William Devane, Alex Cord, Doug Sheehan and Pamela Sue Martin.

"We're going to have a good time. Everybody's been good sports," MARC spokesman Henry Mussleman said immediately after he announced that the match had been canceled.

Spectators took the news in stride. They huddled under tents and bleachers to escape the drizzle and hob-nobbed with the celebrities the remainder of the afternoon.

"You can't gripe about rain in West Texas," said Mussleman. "About all we can do is try again next year. I don't think we'll do it in October though."

For the Piaget Watch Co. — a major U.S. polo sponsor — the Chukkers for Charity tournaments will continue to enhance polo visibility on television screens, sports pages and fashion layouts despite Saturday's disappointing turn of events.

Burden of tax increase won't be carried evenly

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

An Analysis

AUSTIN — Strictly by the numbers, each of Texas' 16 million residents would pay an extra $54.50 in state taxes next year and lose an additional $68.75 in state services.

But the impact of the two recently completed special sessions of the Texas Legislature doesn't fall strictly by the numbers.

Some Texans, particularly those who purchase taxable goods and drive more than the average, will pay more than their share in higher taxes. And the leaders of those state agencies that bear a major portion of the budget cuts say Texans will see little or no reduction in services from the state.

Faced with a projected $3.5 billion state deficit, lawmakers chopped state spending by about $1.1 billion and increased sales and gasoline taxes by $872 million.

The new state sales tax of 5.25 cents on the dollar is 27.3 percent greater than the old rate of 4.125 cents. With the penny in local sales tax, most Texas consumers will pay 6.25 cents in taxes for every dollar worth of goods and taxable services they buy. A $600 refrigerator will cost $6.75 more under the Jan. 1-to-Aug. 31 temporary tax increase.

The burden of the increased rate, as with all sales taxes, falls proportionately heavier on the poor because they spend more of their income on taxable items.

White ready to accept blame for tax increases

An Analysis

AUSTIN — September 8 — 33 days closer to the election than when it had first convened and the Texas Legislature seemed miles away from resolving the $3.5 billion state budget deficit.

As he had 33 days earlier, Gov. Mark White took to the podium in the House of Representatives and exhorted lawmakers to take decisive action. He omitted the historical allusions and heart-tugging stories from his Aug. 6 speech and went straight to the point: cut spending, raise taxes, go home.

"We need a temporary tax increase to save education and build our future. I'll defend it and I'll explain it," White told the lawmakers ready to start their second special session. "And to those who try to blame you for what we do here, tell them we had to do it.

West Texans for Decency picket Kent Convenience store

The rainy weather Saturday did not stop an area decency brigade from seeking to have Kent Convenience stores rid its shelves of what they term "pornography."

Swathed in makeshift trash bag ponchos to shield them from the rain storms, approximately 25 members of the Midland chapter of the West Texans for Decency picketed Bill Kent's convenience store located at Loop 250 at Midkiff Road.

The picket is part of a nationwide attempt to eliminate magazines that some decency groups claim leads to sexual perversion, child molestation and the rampant spread of communicable diseases.

Bill Kent, owner of the Kent Convenience stores located in Midland, Odessa and Andrews, could not be reached for comment Saturday.

However, Kent has gone on record earlier and has even taken out newspaper advertisements to take a stand defending what he feels is his legal right to sell the magazines.

"No one is saying he (Kent) doesn't have a legal right to sell these magazines.

"A moral issue is involved here," Gary Dawson, spokesman for Midland's decency chapter said.

From Staff Reports

Midlanders awoke to a familiar sight Saturday, as a cold front that passed through the area and then became stationary, paired with moisture streaming from Mexico triggered heavy rains.

According to the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Air Terminal, the heaviest rainfall in the area fell in McCamey, which was deluged with 8.55 inches of rain Saturday. State Highway 305 south of McCamey was closed, as was Farm to Market Road 1901.

The Permian Basin was under several flood watches and warnings throughout the day, as the rain began falling in Midland about 7:30 a.m. and continued through the evening.

Showers were also scattered over the South Plains, but rainfall amounts were less.

So far in October, the weather service said more than four inches of rain has fallen, pushing the total for the year past 22 inches.

Forecasters are predicting the wet weather to stay around, with mostly cloudy skies and a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms predicted. Sunday's high will be in the mid 70s, with east winds 5-15 mph.

Sunday night, skies should clear and be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers. The low is expected to be in the upper 50s. Monday should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a high in the low 70s.

Civilian plane crashes at San Antonio base; Crew killed

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A civilian cargo plane crashed at Kelly Air Force Base early Saturday, killing its three crew members and narrowly missing a dormitory where Air Force employees were sleeping.

The Lockheed Hercules L-100 had apparently just taken off but lost power and crashed about 4:15 a.m. It landed between the base operations building and a maintenance hangar, which it hit, badly damaging two jets, said base spokeswoman Phoebe Brown.

"Thank goodness it happened on a weekend. There weren't many people at work," she said. "But I'm sorry it turned out the way it did."

The plane crashed just 100 yards from a dormitory where about 270 base employees were sleeping, Ms. Brown said.

Six people were in the base operations building at the time of the crash. They were evacuated, she said.

The plane was operated by Miami-based Southern Air Transport Inc., which has a contract with the Air Force.

Southern Air Transport spokesman Bill Kress in Miami identified the dead as the pilot, Capt. Peter Sammet, 52, of San Rafael, Calif., the co-pilot, 1st Officer Phillip DeCenzo, 31, of Stow, Ohio, and flight engineer Leon Mulcahey, 60, of Sacramento, Calif., who had recently moved from Reseda, Calif.

The plane was bound for Warner-Robins, Ga. Kress and Ms. Brown did not immediately know what cargo it was carrying.

Kress said the plane was one of 12 recently leased from Trans-America, an Oakland, Calif.-based airline.

He said Southern Air officials have no clue as to what caused the crash.

National Transportation Safety Board officials were investigating the accident.

The four-engine turboprop, which is the civilian version of the military C-130, is worth about $7.75 million, Kress said, and had gone through an intensive inspection before being flown by Southern Air.

He said he did not know how many cargo runs the plane had made.

The wreckage missed about 20 different fighter aircraft but heavily damaged two fighter planes owned by the Honduran government that were undergoing repairs in the maintenance hangar by a private contractor, Kelly officials said.

Wreckage was strewn about the runway taxi area for about 200 feet on either side. Only the tail section of the plane was left partially intact.

Witnesses who called a local radio station said they heard a large explosion and saw a huge fireball at the base.

"They have been blessed to overcome, but they have forgotten to ask the rest to come over."

Haynes said if there was one thing that the assembled crowd should do in their re-assessment, it is to hope to leave some kind of legacy.

"Simply said, it would be good to look back and see what we did."

James E. Fuller, who presides over the local chapter, announced at the banquet a challenge to local churches to try and boost membership in the organization to 1,000.

"If there is one institution in our community that has a direct impact on individuals, it is the church," he said. "We are in a time when we have seen the clock turned back. Whether or not we want to admit it, there is still a lot of work we have to do."

BUDGET

Calculations based on Internal Revenue Service figures show that a family of four making $10,000 per year pays 1.24 percent of its income on sales taxes at the current rate. The higher rates will cost that family an extra $25 next year, meaning state sales taxes will eat up 1.49 percent of its income.

A family of four making $45,000 per year, pays $315 per year now and an additional $64 during the first eight months of 1987. The new total sales tax takes just 0.84 percent of that family's income.

Comptroller Bob Bullock points out that because minorities make up a larger percentage of the poor population in Texas than do anglos, the higher taxes hit them especially hard.

Another portion of the new tax code that allows most cities and counties to substitute a half-penny sales tax increase for lower property rates has a similar effect because the poor and minorities tend not to own their homes. "A greater proportion of black and hispanic families would see little or no benefit from this property tax relief while at the same time paying higher sales taxes," Bullock says.

The impact of the temporary nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax increase is more difficult to gauge. Those who drive cars and trucks with poor gas mileage or who drive a lot will pay more taxes — and more of the increase.

The motor fuels taxes, which include gasoline, diesel and liquified propane (LP) gas, are paid at the point of first sale — usually from the manufacturer to a middleman. Industry analysts, however, say the extra 5 cents will eventually show up at the pump.

If so, drivers of cars and trucks that get 25 miles to the gallon will find the cost of motoring increase by 0.2 cents per mile. At 12,000 miles per year, the increased cost from January to August would be $18.

On the spending side, lawmakers chopped about $1.1 billion from the state deficit through budget cuts and bookkeeping tricks.

Some provisions, such as moving the last fiscal 1987 state payday into fiscal 1988, will have no effect on those who look to state government for services. Others, such as elimination of a 3-percent raise for state workers, will have an indirect impact by reducing morale and possibly increasing turnover of state employees.

The directors of agencies that suffered direct budget reductions say Texans should find few drastic changes. Those areas of state government hit the hardest by the cuts include:

— Higher education: The Legislature sliced about $190 million from the budgets of public universities, medical schools and junior colleges. Academic leaders say the short-term effects should be minimal.

"I believe the universities will be able to survive this without having to reduce academic programs and without having to terminate faculty and staff," says Dr. B. Alan Sugg, president of Corpus Christi State University and chairman of the Council of Public University Presidents and Chancellors. Sugg says most schools will make up the cuts by reducing spending on travel and utilities and limiting the courses offered during the 1987 summer sessions.

Chancellor Hans Mark says the University of Texas System, which lost about $90 million over its 15 component institutions, has already saved about $40 million. Students returning for fall semester found shorter library hours and long lines at registration — the result of a modified hiring freeze Mark ordered in February.

"Things are beginning to happen in the administrative area that are making life hard for some people," Mark says. "We haven't cut back any faculty, but we've had to cancel classes because of shortages of teaching assistants and thinks like that."

Both Sugg and Mark warn, however, that unless lawmakers inject new funds into higher education during the 1987 regular session, the schools could suffer some serious long-term damage. With lower than average salaries now, they say, Texas universities are "having an extremely difficult time" attracting and retaining high-caliber faculty.

That, in turn, could hamper the state's attempts to diversify its economy and build its way out of the current recession. "If we don't have the university system to support that effort, we're definitely not going to be able to compete effectively," Sugg says.

— Health and human services: Lawmakers cut almost $100 million from the Department of Human Services and the Department of Health. More than half of that reduction came through forcing the two agencies to spend saved federal funds.

Brian Packard, assistant DHS commissioner for budget planning and management support, says that if the federal government doesn't cut state grants or impose already-suggested fines against the state food stamp and child welfare programs, the millions of Texans who rely on that agency for help should see few changes.

"They (lawmakers) really didn't get into cutting services where clients would be denied services," Packard says.

At the Health Department, top staffers are "trying to figure out how we can lesson the impact on the people we serve as much as possible," says Hermas Miller, deputy commissioner for management and administration. Miller says the department is working with "fund swaps and creative accounting" to minimize the impact. The "service cut," he says, will come in those areas where the agency has had to forego replacing staff who retire or quit.

— Public safety: Mike Cox, spokesman for the Department of Public Safety says the $3.8 million cut from the DPS budget "won't in any way effect our services and operations." Lawmakers decided against proposed deeper reductions, which would have eliminated one, 90-officer training class, and Cox says DPS is prepared to absorb the rest.

"A large part of it is in savings that we had already identified: electric utility costs, some salaries that went unpaid for a while because of a lag in hiring," Cox says.

— Parks and wildlife: The original House of Representatives plan would have cut $25 million from the Parks and Wildlife Department, forcing the state to close more than 20 parks. David Cottom, the department's public affairs coordinator, says the final $2.4 million reduction still leaves the agency "very lean."

"No parks will close, all land acquisition programs will continue as they are currently scheduled and there shouldn't be any substantial effect on services at the parks," Cottom says. The department will make up the cuts by not replacing some staff who leave, reducing travel and utility costs and delaying some repair projects.

"It's not a life-threatening wound," Cottom says, "but a major wound."

TAX

"Blame me."

Twenty-two days later, the Legislature had complied. They hacked $1.1 billion from state spending, increased taxes $872 million and left a residual deficit of nearly $1 billion. Before the last lawmaker left town, White had signed the tax bill and stood ready to deflect the blame.

Republican challenger Bill Clements' campaign has gleefully picked up the challenge.

"The end of the special session has provided Mark White with a new name — The Tax Man," says George Bayoud, Clements' campaign manager. "Walter Mondale would be proud."

White, however, paints the higher taxes as the price paid to protect public education, the keystone of his re-election bid. Without the tax increase, White's managers say, the school programs would have taken much more than the $5.8 million, 0.1-percent, cut.

"The people don't like taxes, but they understand in this situation it was absolutely necessary," says White campaign chief Dwayne Holman, claiming survey results bear him out. "There are not a lot of crucial things that state government's responsible for. Education is one of them."

With six weeks remaining until Election Day, White has emerged from the special sessions in relatively good shape. Pre-session polls had the Democratic incumbent trailing Clements by as much as 20 points. A Gallup Poll released last Sunday showed White and Clements even, with 46 percent of the vote each.

Sen. John Leedom, a Dallas Republican, says White is benefiting from the public's natural reaction to back a leader in times of crisis.

"What we have had happen is one of the lamest charades for eight weeks, and it's been effective," says Leedom, who won't go so far as to say the Democrats purposely arranged for White to appear a hero. "The results were the same as if it had been orchestrated."

Holman says the sessions "didn't have any part in our long-term strategy." He claims that the first-session stalemate and White's inability to spend those eight weeks pressing the flesh on the road might actually hurt the campaign.

"We didn't want to call a special session," Holman says. "It was one of those situations in which good government became good politics."

Meanwhile, 41 members of the House — 17 Democrats and 24 Republicans — face opponents in the November elections. Speaker Gib Lewis, one of those vulnerable Democrats, says the session could become a liability for the incumbents, particularly the 17 representatives who voted for either the sales or gasoline tax increase.

"It's extremely difficult to explain to some of those constituents that they did what was responsible, what was right, even though it may not have been popular," Lewis says. "An opponent can use that vote as a very unpopular, demagoguery move on his part."

Many observers felt that the speaker's first challenge in eight years from his Fort Worth district kept him off the pro-tax movement until the last two weeks of the second session. Lewis disagrees and says the voters back home will understand why he eventually pushed through — and voted for — the higher taxes.

"I think I represent my constituents very well, and I hope they recognize that."

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, says the voters in his conservative West Texas district will forgive his four "aye" votes in the tax roll call when they realize the damage the tax increase avoided for the deaf school, state park, state school and Texas Youth Commission home that lie within the district. "I hope it's a big issue, because I think I'm on the right side of that issue," Shaw says.

The problem for Shaw comes in that he has just one month left to travel his 22,000-square mile district, one of the state's largest. "It always makes me real nervous when I have an opponent who's been out working when I've been down there," he says.

"But I was elected to do that job, and if doing that hurts you (at the ballot box), that's kind of crazy."

Rep. Mark Stiles, a Beaumont Democrat with a November opponent, says his mail shows the voters in his three-county district will support his vote for the gasoline tax boost and praise his opposition to higher sales taxes. Stiles says his campaign workers have been raising money, setting up phone banks and planning billboards in his absence.

"The organization's very smooth," Stiles says. "It (the session) really didn't have any impact."

As a member of two key committees, Stiles also received extensive media exposure while in Austin, exposure his opponent couldn't buy. "I was pleased to be able to be part of the solution," Stiles says smugly.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby led the charge for higher taxes from the beginning, apparently ignoring any possible political fallout in his race for a record fifth term as president of the Senate.

Standing arm in arm after the last gavel fell, Hobby and Lewis faced one last barrage of questions from reporters. Asked if they planned to win re-election, they said, almost in unison, "We certainly hope so."

Tass reported: "The submarine's crew and other Soviet ships, which sailed up to help, are dealing with the consequences of the fire. Three persons died.

"After analyzing the situation, an expert commission in Moscow reached the conclusion that there is no danger of any unauthorized action of weapons, a nuclear explosion or a radioactive contamination of the environment," it said.

Tass gave no other details. Its report was read on the national television evening news program. However, the evening edition of the government newspaper Izvestia did not mention the fire.

Tass did not say if the vessel was submerged or on the surface when the accident occurred.

However, the U.S. Navy source said the submarine had been sitting on top of the ocean without power since mid-day Friday, apparently after having some difficulty coming to the surface.

"They didn't immediately rise to the surface," he said. "We think they got up as soon as they could, but that wasn't real fast. They're definitely not moving now."

Braman said a P-3 Orion surveillance plane was in the area Saturday watching the apparently crippled submarine.

"There are four or five Soviet merchant ships that are now in the immediate area around the submarine," he said. "The U.S. Coast Guard has issued a notice to mariners warning them out of the area."

Braman said the Soviets had promised to keep U.S. authorities informed, "but we are monitoring the situation ourselves continuously."

He said the stricken vessel is a Yankee-class submarine assumed to be on routine patrol off the U.S. coast.

According to Jane's Fighting Ships, the Yankee is an older submarine that first appeared in the mid-1960s. It can carry 16 missiles and normally has a crew of 120. Each ship has two nuclear reactors on board to drive two steam turbines. The Soviet Union built 34 Yankee submarines, the last in 1974.

The Navy source said Yankee-class submarines carry SS-N-6 ballistic missiles with a range of about 1,600 miles.

He said the Pentagon was prepared to accept Soviet assertions that missiles on the submarine posed no danger. But he noted that the liquid-fueled SS-N-6 missiles are more volatile than more modern, solid-fuel rockets.

"I'm not saying any of these missiles are going to go off; I'm saying they're not quite as stable as a solid-fuel rocket," the source said.

The Soviets have deployed missile-carrying submarines in the North Atlantic off the United States for many years.

Decency members are threatening to take magazines to county grand juries to have a legal authorization to enforce the removal of the magazines.

The magazines in question are in Kent Convenience stores in slots where only the name of the magazine is visible.

A sign also states that a person must be over 18 years of age to take one out of the slot and that proof of age may be requested if one wants to purchase an adult magazine.

Odessa decency member Joe Seay claims "picketing will become a way of life" for the groups until Kent agrees to the decency members' wishes.

Kent has countered that West Texans don't want to be dictated to on what they can and can't read.

NAACP's Gipson accuses blacks of 'grumbling' instead of acting

DALLAS (AP) — While the national chairman of the NAACP blasted the black community for its declining political participation, the Garland chapter of the organization filed a motion to challenge the city's desegregation plan.

Members of the Garland branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People allege in their motion filed late Friday that the 18-year-old court-ordered plan in this Dallas suburb perpetuates segregation.

Although the "freedom of choice" plan allowed students to choose the schools they attend, "little substantial and meaningful desegregation has occurred within the Garland Independent School District," says the motion filed late Friday in U.S. District Court in Dallas.

The filing came on the same day of a speech by William Gipson, national board chairman of the NAACP, at the 50th annual convention of the the Texas NAACP.

Gipson alleged blacks have forgotten the importance of political action and have "resorted back to mumbling and grumbling about what should not be."

The Garland complaint filed with the motion to intervene asks the court to conduct hearings and order the GISD to "take all steps necessary to further desegregate its students, recruit additional black teachers and integrate its faculty."

The NAACP chapter also asks for an alteration of the district's school site selection and construction program.

The chapter claims in its complaint that so few black teachers have been employed "as to deprive black children of any meaningful presence of black instructors in the classroom in schools in which they have been assigned."

The complaint alleges blacks are relegated to one of four high schools, make up less that 4 percent of the students in two middle schools and are overly represented in two other schools.

They also claim in their complaint, that black students are almost totally absent from 10 elementary schools and are overly represented in four elemeptary schools.

Earl Luna, GISD attorney, said he received a copy of the motion Friday afternoon and that the district will oppose the motion to intervene in the lawsuit.

Luna said the plan was approved by the courts in 1970 and is the only such plan still in effect.

Search for suspect in ax murders scaled down

HOUSTON (AP) — The search in Houston for a man suspected of killing three Lancaster women with a hatchet was scaled down after police decided that a reported sighting of the man was incorrect.

"People make mistakes," homicide Lt. Chuck Lofland said Friday. "At this time we believe (the sighting) was erroneous."

Two Lancaster police investigators returned to that city, just south of Dallas, on Friday after working with Houston police in the search for David Martin Long, 33.

The search for Long, a former Baytown resident, moved to Houston after a laborer reported seeing him here where he has relatives.

Long is charged with capital murder in the Sept. 27 slayings of Donna Sue Jester, 37, her blind cousin, Dalpha Lorene Jester, 64, and Laura Lee Owen, 20, a hitchhicker from Florida. The three were found slain in the Jester home.

CAPITAL SCENE

Lewis comes clean with reason for no-new-taxes stance

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Maybe the speaker was tired. After all, it had been a long, hard day. The words just sort of rolled off his tongue, but they sure brought an enlightening perspective to the events of the special sessions that just ended.

"We, to some degree, may have put up a front that we shouldn't have as far as a stand firm against any tax proposal," Speaker Gib Lewis told reporters just minutes after the House had passed the tax bill he had opposed for so long.

An interesting confession. But in hindsight it sure makes a ton of sense. For weeks before the sessions began, throughout the entire first special session and 10 days into the second, Lewis held on tightly to his no-new-taxes position.

Only when someone could prove to him that his combination of budget cuts and cash-management tricks would still leave the state short, he maintained over and over and over, would he consider a tax bill. "But we're not there yet," he intoned. Finally, on Sept. 16, Day No. 9 of Session No. 2, he gave in. "We're there," he told reporters.

But if he had known all along that such a day would come, why postpone the inevitable? Why "put up a front" to the public and members of the Legislature, a front that eventually generated significant hard feelings within the House and between the House and Senate?

I don't think Lewis meant to tell us about the front, but once he had, at least he explained it. "The House had to present a side that was for strong cuts," he said. Lewis knew that once he gave in to taxes, any effort to keep on cutting would lose its momentum. And it did.

But let's give Lewis a "Thanks for Coming Clean Award" for the session. And speaking of awards — nice transition, huh? — it's banquet time. After watching state government at its best — and most definitely at its worst — for the past 53 days, we present:

— The "Hero of Higher Education Award" to Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, who fought his Senate colleagues to reduce budget cuts to colleges and universities then struggled to recapture nearly $40 million the schools lost last year when tuition receipts fell far below expectations.

— The "Manny Mota Pinch-Hitter of the Year Award" to House State Affairs Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center. When the House Ways and Means Committee refused to report a tax bill, Laney calmly moved one through his committee in less than eight hours despite his personal objection to higher taxes.

— The "Good Loser Award" to Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, who blissfully kept his comments short when he realized the Legislature would not go along with his call for deeper budget cuts.

— The "Why don't You do the Sports and Weather, Too Award" to Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, who didn't contribute a word or suggestion throughout the session, then filibustered the last afternoon against the tax bill, timing his closing remarks to appear live on the evening TV news.

— The "Holding on to Good Sense Award" to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who continued to bottle up the ridiculous House plan to impose a constitutional ban on state income taxes.

— The "I Know when I'm Whipped Award" to Democratic Reps. Stan Schlueter of Salado and Bill Haley of Center for talking their House colleagues out of tying the tax bill to Senate approval of the constitutional prohibition against state income taxes.

— The "Midas Touch Award" to Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, who turned three controversial measures — gambling on horse races, branch banking and interstate banking — into legislative cakewalks.

— The "LBJ Credibility Gap Award" to House conservatives, who continued to misinterpret Comptroller Bob Bullock's statements to mean that there was no reason to vote for a tax increase.

— The "Most Valuable Player-Coach of the Year Award" to Speaker Lewis, for the third year in a row, for rounding up the necessary votes to get the job done.

— The "We Deserve a Vacation in Tahiti Award" to the Capitol press for putting up with these %#@$'s for 53 days.

Steve Levine heads up the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau.

Senator's action may stop shafts at dump sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has clarified action to stop the Department of Energy from studying the Hanford nuclear reservation and two other states as possible sites for the nation's high-level nuclear waste repository.

Hatfield made the clarification in response to questions by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., Gorton's office said.

Hatfield's committee had taken the initial action in August. It cut the administration's request for the DOE by about half to $380 million for 1987.

The administration had asked for an increase of funds to dig exploratory shafts at the three sites — in Texas, Nevada and at Hanford in southeastern Washington — and for the storage facility.

The funding reduction was included in the Senate's continuing resolution to continue funding the federal government.

Gorton spokesman Dave Endicott said Gorton asked Hatfield at 5 a.m. Friday to clarify that action.

"Is it the committee's intent that the Department not undertake the characterization of Hanford or candidate sites in Nevada and Texas in fiscal year 1987?" Gorton asked.

"Senator Gorton is absolutely correct," Hatfield responded.

He said it was the committee's intent to put a one-year moratorium on site characterization.

Lewis comes clean with reason for no-new-taxes stance

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Maybe the speaker was tired. After all, it had been a long, hard day. The words just sort of rolled off his tongue, but they sure brought an enlightening perspective to the events of the special sessions that just ended.

"We, to some degree, may have put up a front that we shouldn't have as far as a stand firm against any tax proposal," Speaker Gib Lewis told reporters just minutes after the House had passed the tax bill he had opposed for so long.

An interesting confession. But in hindsight it sure makes a ton of sense. For weeks before the sessions began, throughout the entire first special session and 10 days into the second, Lewis held on tightly to his no-new-taxes position.

Only when someone could prove to him that his combination of budget cuts and cash-management tricks would still leave the state short, he maintained over and over and over, would he consider a tax bill. "But we're not there yet," he intoned. Finally, on Sept. 16, Day No. 9 of Session No. 2, he gave in. "We're there," he told reporters.

But if he had known all along that such a day would come, why postpone the inevitable? Why "put up a front" to the public and members of the Legislature, a front that eventually generated significant hard feelings within the House and between the House and Senate?

I don't think Lewis meant to tell us about the front, but once he had, at least he explained it. "The House had to present a side that was for strong cuts," he said. Lewis knew that once he gave in to taxes, any effort to keep on cutting would lose its momentum. And it did.

But let's give Lewis a "Thanks for Coming Clean Award" for the session. And speaking of awards — nice transition, huh? — it's banquet time. After watching state government at its best — and most definitely at its worst — for the past 53 days, we present:

— The "Hero of Higher Education Award" to Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, who fought his Senate colleagues to reduce budget cuts to colleges and universities then struggled to recapture nearly $40 million the schools lost last year when tuition receipts fell far below expectations.

— The "Manny Mota Pinch-Hitter of the Year Award" to House State Affairs Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center. When the House Ways and Means Committee refused to report a tax bill, Laney calmly moved one through his committee in less than eight hours despite his personal objection to higher taxes.

— The "Good Loser Award" to Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, who blissfully kept his comments short when he realized the Legislature would not go along with his call for deeper budget cuts.

— The "Why don't You do the Sports and Weather, Too Award" to Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, who didn't contribute a word or suggestion throughout the session, then filibustered the last afternoon against the tax bill, timing his closing remarks to appear live on the evening TV news.

— The "Holding on to Good Sense Award" to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who continued to bottle up the ridiculous House plan to impose a constitutional ban on state income taxes.

— The "I Know when I'm Whipped Award" to Democratic Reps. Stan Schlueter of Salado and Bill Haley of Center for talking their House colleagues out of tying the tax bill to Senate approval of the constitutional prohibition against state income taxes.

— The "Midas Touch Award" to Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, who turned three controversial measures — gambling on horse races, branch banking and interstate banking — into legislative cakewalks.

— The "LBJ Credibility Gap Award" to House conservatives, who continued to misinterpret Comptroller Bob Bullock's statements to mean that there was no reason to vote for a tax increase.

— The "Most Valuable Player-Coach of the Year Award" to Speaker Lewis, for the third year in a row, for rounding up the necessary votes to get the job done.

— The "We Deserve a Vacation in Tahiti Award" to the Capitol press, for putting up with these %#@$*'s for 53 days.

Steve Levine heads up the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau.

Senator's action may stop shafts at dump sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has clarified action to stop the Department of Energy from studying the Hanford nuclear reservation and two other states as possible sites for the nation's high-level nuclear waste repository.

Hatfield made the clarification in response to questions by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., Gorton's office said.

Hatfield's committee had taken the initial action in August. It cut the administration's request for the DOE by about half to $380 million for 1987.

The administration had asked for an increase of funds to dig exploratory shafts at the three sites — in Texas, Nevada and at Hanford in southeastern Washington — and for the storage facility.

The funding reduction was included in the Senate's continuing resolution to continue funding the federal government.

Gorton spokesman Dave Endicott said Gorton asked Hatfield at 5 a.m. Friday to clarify that action.

"Is it the committee's intent that the Department not undertake the characterization of Hanford or candidate sites in Nevada and Texas in fiscal year 1987?" Gorton asked.

"Senator Gorton is absolutely correct," Hatfield responded.

He said it was the committee's intent to put a one-year moratorium on site characterization.

Anti-abortionists picket Dallas hospital

DALLAS (AP) — About 300 abortion protesters picketed Presbyterian Hospital Saturday, despite rain and the hospital's decision the day before to stick by its current policy on abortion.

But the turnout was far fewer than the estimated 2,500 or 3,000 participants Right to Life leaders had predicted would show up. It was the third such demonstration at the hospital this year.

Dallas Police Sgt. Robert Jackson, whose tactical officers monitored the protest, estimated the turnout at 300.

"It was very small," he said. "It started raining and people started leaving pretty rapidly."

He said the demonstration was peaceful and there were no arrests. Visitors to the hospital were not bothered by the protesters, who stood near the drive to the building and away from the door, Jackson said.

On Friday, Presbyterian Hospital president Douglas Hawthorne held a news conference to announce the hospital's abortion policies would not change.

"I think the public needs to know what our position is on the issue and, more importantly, that we will maintain business as usual (on Saturday)," Hawthorne said, explaining why he called the news conference.

"Our policy has previously been reviewed, it has been carefully considered, and it will not change," he said.

Under the hospital's policy, a woman may receive an abortion on request during the first three months of her pregnancy. The woman must sign a document saying she has been advised of alternatives.

In the second trimester, abortions are performed only when the doctors determine it is medically necessary for the mother's health.

Jury convicts lawyer in baby-buying case

DALLAS (AP) — A lawyer was convicted of buying a baby in what state officials say is the first successful prosecution under a law aimed at curbing illegal adoptions.

A state district court jury found Robert I. Kingsley guilty of making improper payments to an unwed mother to obtain her baby.

He faces a possible maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

An eight-woman, four-man jury in Judge Gerry Meier's court found Kingsley guilty of the third-degree felony after deliberating less than two hours Friday.

The sentencing phase for the 61-year-old lawyer was to begin Monday. Kingsley has applied for probation.

Defense attorney Mike Gibson, on Friday chose not to call witnesses for Kingsley's defense. Gibson instead told the jury that Kingsley paid Lynne Marie Breland, an unwed mother, more than $2,000 for living expenses during her pregnancy in 1984 as a good-faith but mistaken effort to arrange an adoption.

Her infant son was later adopted by a New York couple.

"A mistake is not a crime," Gibson told jurors. "A mistake is not a wrong that takes away a person's liberty and brands him a criminal."

Kingsley did not testify.

Lead prosecutor Marcus Busch, countering Gibson's argument, reviewed testimony from the boy's mother and a Plano lawyer.

Reporters can make a difference, publisher says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Reporters should believe their efforts can make a difference in a world where injustices abound, a newspaper publisher told journalists Saturday.

"Be careful. Know the issues and who you're dealing with," Joe Murray of the Lufkin Daily News said before the Investigative Reporters and Editors.

"When somebody comes to you and they say, 'it's wrong and they ought to do something, it's got to be changed,' don't do the same thing I almost did. Don't sit there and say, 'Yeah, it's wrong and we ought to do something about it, but what in the world can I do? I'm only one person,'" Murray said.

"You may just be one person, but you can make all the difference in the world," he said.

The Lufkin Daily News won a Pulitzer Prize in 1977 for stories it published about Marine recruit Lynn McClure, an eighth grade dropout who never should have been allowed into the military and was killed in a hand-to-hand combat training exercise, Murray said.

Murray said he almost didn't listen to McClure's great uncle, who went to the newspaper office to talk about McClure's death.

"But he made one statement that made all the difference in the world," Murray said. "He said, 'they beat that boy's brains out.'"

Jury rules against firm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal jury ruled that the Big Eight accounting firm of Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co. aided and abetted the Datapoint Corp. computer company in issuing misleading financial statements.

But the jury also ruled that the accounting firm did not knowingly intend to defraud shareholders.

The six-member jury deliberated three days before announcing on Friday that it found Peat Marwick helped the financially troubled computer maker issue misleading financial statements for fiscal year 1981.

Peat Marwick Mitchell issued a statement saying it was gratified with part of the jury's finding but wouldn't comment on the total verdict and said the company expects to be vindicated in the end.

The damage phase in the trial will begin next week with the jury returning on Tuesday.

Joe Tabacco, one of the attorneys for the shareholders who filed the suit, said Peat Marwick could face damages exceeding $100 million.

Stolen quilt replaced

BEAUMONT (AP) — It had to be one of the most dastardly deeds in the 150-year history of the Lone Star State: The theft of a Sesquicentennial commemorative quilt handmade by residents of a home for the elderly.

But after much resolve, pricked fingers and community support, a determined group of women at the Seville Apartments completed a new quilt to replace one taken in a burglary last month.

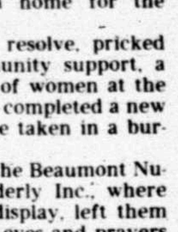

The burglary at the Beaumont Nutrition for the Elderly Inc., where the quilt was on display, left them with tears in their eyes and prayers for the culprit.

It also left a dilemma. With more than 500 raffle tickets for the stolen quilt already sold, they faced the task of returning money for the tickets or pulling out their thimbles and starting another one.

They finished the new quilt Wednesday.

"We've got it all ready," quilter Jessie Ray said. "I was glad to get it over with and get it off my hands. That was the first time I had something like that happen to me in my 79 years. It hurt, and it made me plain sick."

The women plan to use proceeds from the raffle to pay for a catered Christmas dinner for residents of the federally supported apartment complex for senior citizens. For the past four years, women at the complex cooked the dinner. The quilt will provide them relief from Christmas kitchen duties.

Rapidly rising rivers could force 20,000 from homes

Associated Press

Rapidly rising rivers threatened to force up to 20,000 people to evacuate two Oklahoma cities Saturday, but water was receding in hard-hit northeastern Illinois, where damage was estimated at up to $40 million.

Water also began to recede in parts of Kansas, but runoff from more than a week of heavy rain pushed the Mississippi River out of its banks along parts of Missouri and Illinois, and Lake Michigan was a record 3.5 feet above normal.

Flooding has caused damage estimated at millions of dollars in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. At least eight deaths were linked to the flooding and three people were missing.

The flooding already had forced as many as 18,000 people from their homes in the Midwest, cut off towns in Oklahoma and Kansas and prompted a disaster declaration by the governor of Missouri, where Amtrak suspended passenger rail service because of a washed-out bridge.

Water 8 to 9 feet deep reached the roofs of some houses Saturday in the northeastern Oklahoma city of Bartlesville as the Caney River cut the town in two. The river threatened to rise to a record 27 to 28 feet, well above the 11-foot flood stage, because of the heavy rain and emergency releases from upstream reservoirs swollen by up to 2 feet of rain during the past week.

"It's just hard to believe. It's the kind of flood you'd have every 100 years, even without any dams," said Mayor Arch Robbins.

The river was already flooding at more than 16 feet before the reservoir water pushed it to more than 23 feet by noon Saturday.

The Caney spread over an estimated 60 to 70 square miles in Washington County and Civil Defense Director Jim Willaford said that if the river hit 27 feet, as many as 15,000 people in the town of 35,000 could be forced to evacuate. He said 600 had left their homes as of Saturday afternoon.

"They'll likely be under for a couple or three days," Willaford said. The record at Bartlesville is 25.8 feet, set in 1926. A 1974 flood topped out at 21.2 feet, swamping 400 houses. Since 1974, Willaford said, an expensive subdivision has been built in the flood plain.

National Guardsmen waded through chest-deep water early Saturday to rescue an invalid trapped in a flooded house, authorities said.

South of Bartlesville, around Tulsa on the Arkansas River, authorities urged residents of Jenks to leave, as well as residents of low-lying areas near the Arkansas River in Tulsa and Broken Arrow.

About 5,000 people live in the Jenks flood plain, said Jim Bailey, a Jenks councilman. He said there was no ground high enough to establish an emergency shelter in the community.

Only scattered showers fell Saturday on northeastern Illinois, after the worst flooding in the area's history forced more than 13,000 people from their homes.

Sunshine was predicted Sunday, but a flood crest on the Des Plaines River rolled southward.

More than 50 families — most of them from the western Chicago suburbs of North Riverside, Riverside, River Grove and Schiller Park — had to leave their homes Friday, joining some 3,200 families already dislodged by the flooding. State officials have given rough damage estimates of from $30 million to $40 million.

Reagan warns restrictions may hurt arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday warned Congress against placing restrictions on arms control issues because "I cannot afford to have my hands tied" at meetings this week with Soviet leader Mikahil Gorbachev in Iceland.

Expanding his usual five-minute weekly radio address to 10 minutes to give what he described as a briefing to the public on his forthcoming talks with Gorbachev, Reagan said, "We need to send to the Soviets a consistent message of clear resolve and national unity."

Reagan has expressed his opposition previously to a series of restrictions placed by the Democratic-controlled House in an overall spending bill for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved its version of the bill, totaling nearly $560 billion, on Friday. The Senate bill provides for more military spending than the House version, although not as much as Reagan would like.

The Senate bill substantially reduced the president's request for Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," research, but omits a nuclear test ban and other arms control constraints approved by the House over administration objections.

The House version called, among other things, for compliance with the SALT II strategic arms limitation treaty and moratoriums on anti-satellite weapons testing and chemicals weapons production as well as nuclear testing.

Every single one of these issues is under discussion with the Soviets," Reagan said. "I cannot afford to have my hands tied in my discussions about them."

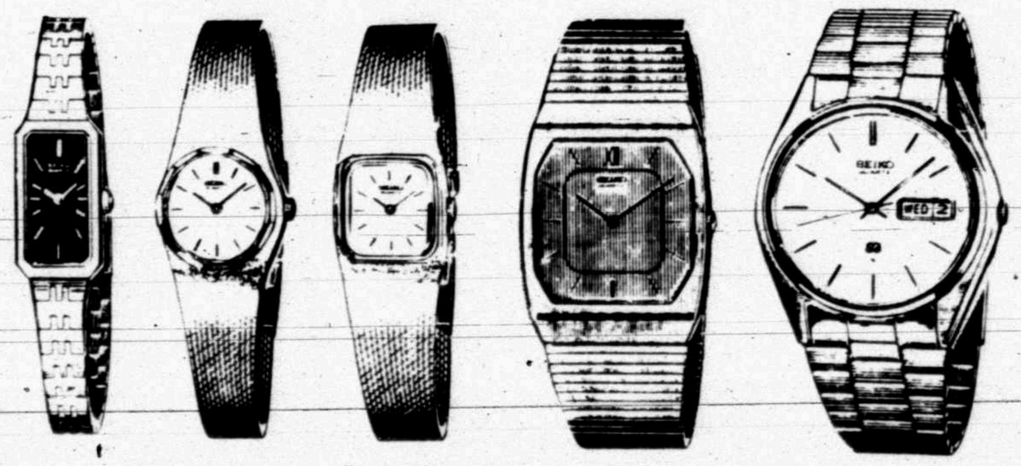

He added that Americans "will hold accountable those who for the sake of partisan advantage trifle with our national security and the chances for peace and freedom."

Agency plans to cut active-duty officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has reluctantly begun planning how to slash the number of active-duty officers in the four services by up to 6,200 men and women over the next year.

"We object to the reductions, but we're convinced that we'll probably have to do at least 2 percent in fiscal 1987," said Chapman B. Cox, the assistant secretary for personnel.

"The House and Senate have adopted different approaches in their authorization bills, but both have dictated reductions in the officer force. We think there's such a strong possibility (of a cut becoming law) that it's important to start right now in planning it."

The issue of whether the services are becoming too officer-heavy has been seriously debated by Congress for some years now because of a continuing decline in the enlisted-to-officer ratio.

There are currently about 2.1 million men and women on active duty in the armed forces, of whom slightly more than 300,000 are officers. According to Cox, the current ratio for the four services combined is 5.9 enlisted men to every officer — the lowest that measure has been in a decade.

"That ratio dropping down below 6-to-1 is what really triggered the congressional concern," Cox said in an interview last week. "We disagree, but they've gone ahead."

According to Pentagon manpower statistics, officers comprised 14.4 percent of the total active-duty force at the end of fiscal 1985. The last time that figure stood as high was in 1972.

The House and Senate have approved different plans, but both call for significant cuts starting in fiscal 1987, which began Oct. 1.

According to Cox, the House version calls for the Pentagon to build the enlisted-to-officer ratio back up to 6.5-to-1 by the end of fiscal 1990. That plan would require about an 8 percent cut in the number of officers over the four-year period, totaling about 26,000 men and women.

The Senate bill does not specify a precise ratio figure. Rather, it requires a reduction of 2 percent a year during each of the next three years.

"We don't know if (the final outcome) will be 2 percent for three years or 2 percent for four years, but we'll probably have to do at least 2 percent or about 6,200 in fiscal 1987," Cox said.

Cox said Friday the Pentagon could probably reduce the officer corps by 2 percent in fiscal 1987, "but only with great difficulty." He explained that absent changes in the law, the Pentagon has only three ways of reducing the number of officers.

The first is to cut the number of new officers being recruited. That could be done through a combination of reductions in class sizes for the Reserve Officer Training Corps program in colleges, officer candidate schools within the military and at the three military academies.

"We haven't figured out how to allocate that yet," Cox said.

The second method is to dismiss officers in the Reserves and National Guard who have been ordered to full-time active duty. There are roughly 90,000 such officers now, many of them working in technical speciality jobs.

"And the third is to convene early-retirement boards," Cox said.

HOW THEY VOTED

Congress deals Reagan stunning blow

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending Oct. 3, 1986.

KEY HOUSE VOTES

HOUSE OVERRIDES SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS VETO BY WIDE MARGIN. The House wasted little time in easily overturning President Reagan's veto of the South Africa sanctions bill. The 313-83 vote taken Monday — just three days after the Sept. 26 veto — was 49 votes more than the two-thirds required for an override. With the Senate's subsequent override Thursday, the sanctions now become law.

The House passed its version of the bill by voice vote June 18, while the Senate passed a weaker version August 15 by a vote 84-14. In order to avoid a conference and get a sanctions bill passed before adjournment, the House Sept. 12 voted to accept the Senate version and sent the bill to the president.

Supporters of the veto override criticized as too late and too weak the president's efforts to speak out against apartheid and call for sanctions against the white-minority South African government.

"Nations all around the world are expressing their condemnation of apartheid, and yet this administration had to be pushed and prodded by the Congress to take any action to put this country on record against the South African system of apartheid," remarked Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md.

Members opposing the override bristled at the suggestion they were unsympathetic to anti-apartheid efforts. One of their major reservations about the sanctions bill, they said, was that it would hit hardest the lives of black South Africans, while the white South African government, which had been stockpiling strategic materials over the years, was protecting itself against the impact of sanctions. Further questioning the efficacy of the sanctions, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said, "Standing over here, with our...civil rights battles hardly over, and pointing our sanctimonious finger at South Africa certainly makes us feel good...but it moves that tragic land closer to bloody, bloody revolution, and farther away from any evolutionary solution."

Voting to override the South Africa sanctions veto: Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio

Voting against: Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo

KEY SENATE VOTES:

SENATE HANDS REAGAN DEFEAT, OVERRIDES SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS VETO. In a stinging policy defeat for President Reagan, the Senate October 2 voted 78-21 to override the president's veto and impose economic and political sanctions on South Africa. This is only the sixth time Congress has succeeded in overriding a Reagan veto since he took office.

The president vetoed the sanctions measure Sept. 26. His veto message contained hints that he might be willing to issue an executive order imposing sanctions if Congress sustained his veto. The Senate Republican leadership balked at the idea.

Those senators supporting the veto override criticized the president for not being in tune with public outrage over the apartheid policies of the South African government. Although many Republican senators expressed regret at abandoning the president when they voted to overturn the veto, they made clear that their patience with administration policy had worn thin.

Opponents of the override attempt declared that overturning a major foreign policy position of the president would make him look weak and ineffective just as he prepared to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Iceland next weekend. Override critics argued that Reagan's credibility would be reinforced if the Senate sustained his veto and allowed the president to impose his own economic sanctions and appoint the first black ambassador to South Africa.

Voting to override the South Africa sanctions veto: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas

Voting against: Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Vatican study says U.S. Catholic seminaries in good shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first report on a five-year Vatican investigation of America's Catholic seminaries declares the schools in generally good shape although still harboring too many dissenters and doubters of church authority.

Dissent is "not a major characteristic" of the 38 seminaries studied, said the report, released Saturday. But it said confusion about "magisterial authority...is obviously a matter which needs emphatic clarification and redress."

In a few cases involving outright dissent, seminary authorities have been told to take direct action "to resecure the magisterial integrity of the teaching of moral theology," said the report, giving no further detail.

Such complaints, however, made up only a small part of the report.

The general tone was positive, and that was welcome news for U.S. bishops, some of whom have been uneasy about the investigation in light of Vatican criticism of liberalism within the American church in recent years.

The report, in the form of a letter to the bishops from Cardinal William Baum, head of the Vatican Congregation for Catholic Education, was accompanied by a celebratory letter from the head of America's National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

"It is with considerable satisfaction that I am able to report to you that the Holy See's effort to 'take the pulse' of our seminaries has found it to be strong and vibrant," wrote Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio.

Baum's report said the investigation, ordered by Pope John Paul II, found, "These seminaries are generally happy, wholesome and engaged, with seminarians who exhibit a great thirst for the spiritual life."

A main criticism was that investigators had found a few instances of dissent from church leaders' teaching on issues of moral theology and, more commonly, confusion about such official church positions.

"There would seem to be a number of seminarians who, at the end of their moral theology courses, are either not sure of what the church teaches in a particular matter or who think that the church's teaching is only one theological opinion amongst a number of other equally valid theological opinions."

Hundreds of crew members have died in sub mishaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. and Soviet crew members have died in accidents involving nuclear-powered submarines since the first, the USS Nautilus, was launched in 1954. Here is a list of accidents which have been disclosed to the public:

April 29, 1986 — The U.S. attack submarine Atlanta ran aground while passing through the Straits of Gibraltar. The Navy said there were no injuries, no damage to the nuclear propulsion system and that the sub went to Gibraltar under its own power.

April 1, 1986 — The USS Nathaniel Green, armed with nuclear-tipped Poseidon missiles, ran aground in the Irish Sea. Although no major injuries were reported, the damage forced the Navy to scrap the vessel.

March 21, 1984 — A Soviet submarine collided with the U.S. aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk off Japan. No injuries were reported.

Sept. 21, 1984 — The USS Jacksonville, an attack submarine, collided with a Navy barge, causing superficial damage to the sub.

Sept. 27, 1984 — The USS Sam Rayburn, a Poseidon submarine, collided with barrels containing nuclear waste off the British coast, according to an anti-nuclear group.

June 1983 — A Soviet submarine sank in the north Pacific, killing 90 crew members, according to U.S. intelligence officials.

Dec. 23, 1983 — The Navy said the USS Florida, a Poseidon submarine, hit a submerged object during sea trials but was not damaged.

Summer 1983 — A Soviet submarine sank in the northern Pacific, killing 90 crew members, according to U.S. intelligence officials.

Dec. 16, 1982 — Two U.S. submarines, the La Jolla and the Permit, collided during sea trials off San Diego but suffered only minor damage.

Nov. 30, 1982 — The USS Thomas Edison collided with a Navy destroyer in the South China Sea. No injuries were reported.

March 24, 1982 — The Jacksonville suffered $2 million in damage in a collision with a Turkish freighter off the Virginia coast. Both were able to continue under their own power.

April 9, 1981 — The USS George Washington, a missile submarine, ran into the Japanese freighter Nisso Maru, sinking the surface vessel off the southern tip of Japan, and killing two crewmen from the Japanese ship.

Oct. 27, 1981 — A Soviet Whiskey-class diesel-powered submarine ran aground in a restricted military zone in Sweden.

Aug. 23, 1980 — A Soviet Echo-I-class nuclear submarine caught fire and radioed for help off Japan. Japanese officials later reported that nine crew men died and three were injured in what remains a mysterious accident.

Feb. 5, 1977 — The USS Snook collided with a sonar device being towed by a Navy ship, damaging the submarine's periscope and superstructure. No one was injured and there were no radiation leaks, officials said.

May 21, 1968 — The USS Scorpion, an attack submarine, was lost with 99 men aboard off the Azores in the Atlantic.

1968 — A Soviet submarine sank off the Kola Penninsula in the Arctic Sea, according to recently declassified CIA documents.

1968 — A Soviet submarine sank in the Pacific, and subsequent U.S. attempts to recover the wreck were partially successful.

April 10, 1963 — The USS Thresher was lost 220 miles off the New England coast with all 129 men aboard; an investigation found that the sub had gone into sea tests without adequate safety precautions.

1961 — Members of a Soviet submarine crew died of radiation poisoning after an accident in the Baltic, according to recently declassified CIA documents.

FBI tracking down sources of Libya disinformation report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has asked the FBI to determine the sources of a news report about an alleged government plan to mislead American journalists covering U.S. relations with Libya, an administration official said Saturday.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the FBI also has been asked to identify the sources of stories published by The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post that appeared to have been produced by the alleged plan.

Reporter Bob Woodward, who wrote the Post's story, and Albert R. Hunt, Washington bureau chief of The Wall Street Journal, said they had not been contacted by the FBI and knew of no one on the staffs of the papers who had been.

The administration official said he did not know whether FBI agents had contacted either paper, which had published stories in August reporting that the United States and Libya were on a collision course and described renewed Libyan backing for terrorism. Other news organizations picked up the stories.

However, the official said, "Any time there is a leak of documents or correspondence it is just a matter of routine that the FBI is called in to try to run it down. And the first thing they do is talk to everybody who was present in the meeting or who had access to the documentation."

The FBI earlier this year started a four-man unit at its Washington field office to investigate unauthorized disclosures of government information to the news media.

The Post reported Thursday that an elaborate White House campaign included "a disinformation program with the basic goal of making (Libyan leader Moammar) Gadhafi think that there is a high degree of internal opposition against him within Libya, that his key trusted aides are disloyal, that the U.S. is about to move against him militarily."

The plan was described in a three-page memorandum sent to President Reagan by John M. Poindexter, the national security adviser, and "the basic plan" was adopted at a White House meeting Aug. 14, the Post said.

Administration officials acknowledged the White House plotted to deceive Gadhafi into thinking he faced a new round of U.S. bombing and a possible coup, but President Reagan insisted there was "not any plan of ours" to mislead the American people and the press.

In an interview with columnists and commentators Thursday, the president said, "I understand your sacred policy of never revealing sources, but do you really have to defend sources that misinform you?"

White House spokesman Larry Speakes quoted John Poindexter, the president's national security adviser, as saying that "the disclosure to The Wall Street Journal was not authorized by the U.S. government."

'Fetal abuse' case stirs debate in California

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Feminists, abortion foes and civil libertarians have joined an emotional debate over the rights of the fetus in the case of a woman charged with contributing to her baby's death by alleged drug abuse during her pregnancy.

Pamela Rae Stewart, 27, faces a year in jail and a $2,000 fine if convicted of a misdemeanor count of failing to provide medical care for a son who was born brain dead with amphetamines in his system. Ms. Stewart, of suburban El Cajon, is free on $2,500 bail. A hearing is scheduled Wednesday to set a trial date.

"If a woman can be held accountable for the fetus to the degree that they are trying to hold Stewart accountable, then the next step is to take away abortion rights," said Benita Berkson, co-president of the San Diego County chapter of the National Organization for Women.

Stewart's child lived five weeks on life support systems before dying on New Year's Day. A coroner's report listed maternal drug abuse as a contributing factor in the death.

Deputy District Attorney Harry Elias is basing his prosecution on Stewart's alleged disregard of a doctor's orders to stay away from drugs and to seek immediate medical attention if she began to hemorrhage.

City services curtailed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Nearly one-third of the city's fire stations close for the rest of the year Sunday and most city offices will operate only four days a week under an austerity program to wipe out a $10 million deficit.

The average time for firefighters to answer alarms will double from about three minutes to "six minutes or longer," says Fire Superintendent William J. McCrossen.

In the next two weeks, about 200 city jobs will be cut. Most of the remaining 5,900 city workers are going on a four-day work week, which means a 20 percent wage reduction through December.

Under the new austerity plan taking effect Sunday, nearly every city office and non-emergency service will be closed Fridays for the rest of the year. Full time emergency service will continue, but fewer firefighters and police officers will be available at any one time.

Supremacists denied bail

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Three people with ties to a white supremacy group based in northern Idaho were in jail Saturday in Washington after being denied bail on counterfeiting and conspiracy charges.

The Idaho Human Rights Commission, meanwhile, said Saturday that it was concerned that recent bombings in the Idaho Panhandle city of Coeur d'Alene could result in racial violence across the state.

"That this kind of situation can happen in the state of Idaho is almost beyond comprehension to me," Ken Baumgartner, president of the rights commission, said at the agency's quarterly meeting.

The three suspects, under heavy guard as they appeared before U.S. Magistrate Steve Ayers late Friday, were ordered taken to Spokane because most of the activities alleged in the charges against them took place in eastern Washington.

The three were identified as David Dorr, chief of security for the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations), and Edward Hawley and his wife, Olive, who have attended the white-supremacist church near Coeur d'Alene.

Boeing talks continue

SEATTLE (AP) — Negotiators for Boeing Co. and 40,000 machinists dissatisfied with the company's latest contract offer met with a federal mediator Saturday and agreed to keep talking to try to avert a strike.

Mediator Doug Hammond said the two sides were conferring separately Saturday and would meet again in his office Sunday morning. Talks lasted less than 1½ hours Saturday morning.

Employees remained on the job despite Friday's vote rejecting the latest offer by a "healthy margin" and a two-thirds vote reaffirming strike authorization, said Jack Daniels, spokesman for the International Association of Machinists & Aerospace workers.

"We're going to try and work this out" instead of striking, he said.

The union last struck the company briefly in 1977.

Aerialist may cross falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Aerialist Philippe Petit was not allowed to cross the Niagara Gorge on a tightrope a decade ago, but he may get a chance to accomplish at least part of the stunt today.

Petit is scheduled to re-create the Aug. 19, 1859, walk across the gorge below Niagara Falls by an acrobat known as the Great Blondin, said Ginny Cormier, publicist for Heno-Hinum Inc.

Thousands of would-be Soviet emigres live 'in refusal'

By ALISON SMALE

MOSCOW (AP) — For dissident Yuri Orlov, his departure today will end almost a decade of imprisonment and internal exile. Many other activists and thousands of would-be emigres remain behind in the Soviet Union, some in jail or exiled to remote regions.

Those at home face constant harassment and the strain of living, as they say, "in refusal."

The "refusal" refers to authorities' denial of requests to leave the country.

As the wait to emigrate stretches into seven, eight, even 15 years, however, being a "refusenik" comes to mean more than that.

It can mean being fired or demoted. It can mean no higher education or anything but the most menial jobs for refuseniks' children.

It can mean severing ties with friends, acquaintances and even relatives who want nothing to do with a would-be emigre.

Some refuseniks withdraw from society, matching the refusal of an exit visa with a refusal of their own to take part in a system which punishes them for what communist authorities see as an act of betrayal.

Many, but not all, of those who want to leave are Jews. Jewish emigration peaked at 51,000 in 1979 but has fallen back to around 1,000 a year.

Alexander Lerner, who has waited 15 years for an exit visa, and Vladimir Slepak, a refusenik since 1970 and former member of the human rights group founded by Orlov, say some Jews — undeterred — are still applying to leave. These Jews cite "rising anti-Semitism" and hope for increased emigration soon.

Orlov, 62, and his wife, Irina, 40, are being allowed to leave as part of the superpower agreement under which American reporter Nicholas Daniloff and Soviet U.N. employee Gennadiy Zakharov, both accused of espionage in late August, were allowed to return to their home countries.

Orlov, a physicist, helped found a group to monitor Soviet compliance with the 1975 Helsinki Final Act on human rights.

Lerner was a high-ranking scientist before he applied to leave. He used to travel abroad at least twice a year and earned a monthly salary of about $1,477 in rubles, or nine times the average wage at the time.

His job and travel vanished as soon as he applied to emigrate.

His son, Vladimir, then 26, was expelled from his postgraduate studies in systems analysis. Vladimir's Russian wife, Olga, decided not to leave, and the couple divorced. Remarried, Vladimir Lerner has worked as everything from a pianist in the circus to a door insulator.

The elder Lerner says his wait to leave has made him more productive as a scientist, an amateur painter and a Jewish activist.

"Maybe this is because I had no illusions whatsoever as regards how easy it would be to leave," Lerner said. "I operated on the premise that I would face a long struggle for emigration, and for that reason my life did not change. Many people drop everything and sit on their suitcases, as they say." Lerner noted he has retained many friends and is materially comfortable, helped by savings and contacts abroad.

"Some people are in a terrible situation," he said.

Lerner's daughter Sophia was allowed to emigrate in 1973, an example of Soviet authorities splitting families or groups of activists.

Tatyana Zunshein, a Jewish refusenik from the Latvian capital of Riga, said authorities seem to try to isolate her by granting permission to emigrate to any Jewish family who befriends her while her husband Zakhar serves a three-year term in a Siberian labor camp.

Orlovs leaving Soviet Union for the U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities brought dissident Yuri Orlov to Moscow on Saturday, ending his Siberian exile, and told his wife she and her husband would be allowed to leave for the United States today, Irina Orlov said.

She said Soviet authorities told her she would be reunited with her husband, one of the most prominent Soviet human rights activists, 30 minutes before their 9:15 a.m. Aeroflot flight to New York.

Mrs. Orlov got her plane ticket and the news that her husband had been brought to the capital during a final visit Saturday to the Interior Ministry's Office of Visas and Registrations, OVIR.

Mrs. Orlov emerged smiling from the turn-of-the-century, chartreuse-colored ministry building and told reporters she would be leaving on the next Aeroflot flight to New York.

"It's a ticket like any other ticket," she said shyly, waving the airline voucher at Western reporters.

A day earlier, she collected her passport from OVIR officials and was told she and her husband would be allowed to leave the country together.

The U.S. Embassy issued her a visa on Friday, which would allow her to enter the United States anytime through Oct. 20.

"I will leave on the flight they give me," she said before obtaining her ticket, which she paid for on Thursday.

She said Orlov's three sons by a previous marriage were also summoned to OVIR on Saturday and told they could see their father before he departs.

Alexander and Lev planned to see their 62-year-old father at the airport, but Dmitri will be unable to make it because of work commitments, she said.

Mrs. Orlov, 40, said she still had not talked to her husband. She last saw him early last month when she visited him in the Arctic city of Kobyai. He was exiled after serving a seven-year labor camp sentence for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, charges rising from his human rights activities in the 1970s.

As a co-founder of the unofficial group that monitored Soviet compliance with the Helsinki Final Act, Orlov was one of the best known dissidents, with fellow physicist Andrei Sakharov, before his arrest in 1977.

The Moscow-based Helsinki Watch Group disbanded in 1982 because all but three of its original members were imprisoned, banished to remote parts of the country or exiled abroad.

The Orlovs were given permission to emigrate as part of a U.S.-Soviet exchange that also freed American journalist Nicholas Daniloff and Soviet United Nations employee Gennadiy Zakharov. Both men were accused of espionage in late August and were in custody of their respective embassies pending trial.

Daniloff arrived in the United States Tuesday. Zakharov arrived in Moscow Wednesday.

Will drowned woman's ghost haunt superpower meeting?

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Icelandic officials confirmed Saturday that President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev are likely to meet at the Hofdi, a picturesque Reykjavik bayside house said to be haunted by the ghost of a drowned woman.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Sveinn Eldon said a final decision had not been made, but that neither side had voiced any objections to the Hofdi, a two-story white clapboard house.

The Hofdi, overlooking Reykjavik Bay with a panoramic view of the volcanic mountains, seems to meet the two leaders' requirements for a cozy place for their private discussions Oct. 11-12.

It was open to visitors until Saturday, when a uniformed policeman was posted inside and barred unauthorized visitors.

A senior Icelandic government source said the Saga Hotel, Iceland's initial preference for the meetings, now looked unlikely.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, he said Gorbachev would stay at the Saga, but added that the leaders preferred the Hofdi. Reagan is to stay at the U.S. Embassy.

It was not clear if Reagan and Gorbachev would have any formal meeting involving large delegations from each side. The precise agenda for the talks has not been released, but is expected Monday.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Friday the emphasis in Iceland would be on face-to-face discussions between the two leaders, rather than the extensive talks among aides which have characterized previous, full-fledged summits.

At the Saga Hotel, the Soviet, U.S. and Icelandic flags flew side by side, and heaps of sod were brought in to put in new lawns around the eight-story hotel.

Morgunbladid, Iceland's main newspaper, said the leaders would meet twice on Saturday, and again next Sunday morning.

A French consul built the Hofdi in 1909, with timber and design imported from Norway. Later the British diplomatic mission owned it.

Guests have included Winston Churchill, the wartime British prime minister, and singer-actress Marlene Dietrich.

In 1952, the British head of mission of the time, John Greenway, obtained permission from London to sell the house on the grounds it was haunted.

"He told them he couldn't sleep for noises and bumps in the night, and convinced them it was haunted and should be sold," said Brian Holt, who was a consular assistant at the time.

Holt, who lives in retirement in Reykjavik, said he attended many functions at the house since "and I was never aware of anything unusual."

He said the ghost was thought to be of a young woman whose body was found washed ashore near the house.

Eldon joked: "The Iceland Foreign Ministry does not say the house isn't haunted...We neither confirm nor deny it."

In 1958, geothermal wells were found under the house, one possible cause of Greenway's bumps in the night, and the city bought the site.

No one lives in the Hofdi and it serves as the mayor's banquet hall. It contains comfortable furniture, a pine-paneled interior and prized works of Icelandic art.

Reykjavik's Hofdi, built by French consul in 1909, is the likely site of the pre-summit meeting between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

European allies hope meeting leads to reduction in missiles

LONDON (AP) — America's Western European allies, often feeling trapped in the middle of superpower tensions, welcome the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Iceland and hope it will lead to a scaling down of medium-range missiles in Europe.

Prospects for a chemical weapons ban also may be enhanced, Europeans believe, by the Oct. 11-12 Reykjavik meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The surprise meeting could lead to a full-scale summit later this year, and officials and commentators see it as a sign that acerbic exchanges between Moscow and Washington will diminish and relations will improve over a broad sweep of issues.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's West German government welcomed the announcement of the Iceland meeting "with great satisfaction."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office said in London: "We regard it as a token by both sides of the wish for a full summit...which we and the world want to see."

The French government made no formal comment, but officials said they were pleased and had "prudent hopes" for progress in arms control.

Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland of Norway said the meeting "will be received with satisfaction and new hope everywhere in the world."

Premier Bettino Craxi of Italy messaged Reagan to say the Iceland meeting "indicates the common will to search for substantial progress not only in arms control, but in the larger East-West problems."

Under the general, diplomatic statements of support for the Reykjavik meeting, the main hope among America's European allies was for progress on reducing or eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Friedhlem Ost, West German government spokesman, said Reagan had written Kohl asking for suggestions for the summit. Ost said Kohl was emphasizing German interests, especially progress on the missiles issue.

The issue is of particular concern to Bonn, which is taking the largest number of the new NATO missiles. In all, 108 Pershing 2 missiles have been deployed and 96 cruise missiles are being installed.

Kohl is up for re-election in January and any move to get the missiles out of West Germany would be an advantage.

Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti of Italy told a Cabinet meeting Friday: "Among the aspects of the negotiations which can have the most immediate results, there is the possibility for a drastic reduction in intermediate range nuclear arms, which would have a great political significance for Europe."

Any reduction in North Atlantic Treaty Organization missiles in Britain, which is taking 160 cruise missiles, would be welcomed by the Thatcher government.

'Land of Fire and Ice' must keep its cool as summit hype heats up

By MARCUS ELIASON

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Steingrimur Hermannsson, Iceland's affable, U.S.-educated prime minister, is often asked these days if he has any regrets about agreeing so readily to act as host at next weekend's Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

Hermannsson insists he has had no second thoughts, that no country could refuse such a historic assignment. But the job facing his island republic of 240,000 people is daunting.

In choosing Reykjavik, the United States and the Soviet Union have given a remote, isolated country, run almost like a collective farm, less than two weeks to transform itself into a high-tech, media-wise, terrorist-proof fortress.

Iceland is bursting with pride, confident that from now on it will be known not just as the glacier-scarred, volcanic "Land of Fire and Ice," but as a leading player on the international stage.

Almost equidistant from New York and Moscow, its northern fjords brushing the Arctic Circle, Iceland has always regarded itself as a potential steppingstone in a global conflict. Now it imagines itself becoming an arena for peace moves in the tradition of Vienna and Geneva.

"Until now, nobody knew much about Iceland," says newspaper columnist Indridi Thorsteinsson. "But for the next few days the eyes of the world will be on Iceland, and that's an amazing thing for a mere 240,000 people. It's the greatest advertisement Iceland has ever had in its history."

Iceland played host to another memorable superpower confrontation in 1972, the Bobby Fischer-Boris Spassky chess battle, and a year later, to a summit between the U.S. and French presidents, Richard Nixon and Georges Pompidou.

But for those events, Iceland got plenty of advance notice. This time, it was only on Monday that Iceland was asked by the Soviet and American ambassadors to play host at the summit. "I am told I was only the eighth person in the world to know about it," Hermannsson says.

Since then, while expressing impatience with Washington and Moscow for not getting vital planning information to Reykjavik fast enough, the government has assumed emergency powers to commandeer four hotels in Reykjavik, and is bringing in at least two ocean liners to accommodate the news media in this city of 90,000.

It has bent its broadcasting laws to allow television networks to bring in their own ground satellite stations, and ordered a crash program to spruce up the austere, unpretentious streets of Reykjavik. New lawns are being put in around the Saga Hotel, the capital's finest.

Security presents an unusual problem. Removed from world attention and difficult to get to because air links are limited, Iceland has never been touched by terrorism.

Iceland has no army. The United States has 3,000 servicemen manning the NATO base in Iceland. The nearest thing to Iceland's own military force is the coast guard, which protects the rich fisheries that are the country's main source of wealth.

The police do not carry weapons. Only two years ago it set up an armed SWAT team, called the Viking Commando. The unit of only 15 men has been used just once, to subdue a drunk who ran amok with a gun.

Hermannsson, an engineer who studied at the California Institute of Technology, says he is mobilizing police, reservists, mountain-rescue teams, immigration officers and the coast guard — hoping to muster a security service of 800.

Other special powers have enabled police at Keflavik, the international airport, to turn away foreigners lacking hotel accommodations.

The government insists the purpose is to keep space available for the 2,000 to 3,000 media representatives expected. But Morgunbladid, the main Icelandic newspaper, has expressed the suspicion that one aim is to keep out anti-Soviet demonstrators.

To Icelanders, it's all very strange. Theirs is an informal society on first-name terms, not given to lavish ceremony or elaborate courtesy. The prime minister has no bodyguard, and often walks the streets alone. His home phone number is in the book. A visitor to the unassuming cottage-like office in downtown Reykjavik that Hermannsson shares with State President Vigdis Finnbogadottir needs to show no credentials or undergo any search.

But even Iceland cannot remain entirely sealed off from the world. It has had two AIDS deaths in the past two years. Drug abuse is looming as a social problem.

Novelist Sirgurdur A. Magnusson, while welcoming the summit, worries about how the people of Reykjavik will take to having their streets cordoned off and security men pushing local people around.

Chess champion just one draw away from crown

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — World chess champion Garri Kasparov defeated challenger Anatoly Karpov in the 22nd game of the championship Saturday and needs only one draw in the remaining two games to win the crown.

Kasparov leads the match 11½-10½ points. If the 24-game series ends in a 12-12 tie, Kasparov retains the title he won from fellow Soviet Karpov last November.

A player gets half a point for a draw and one point for a win. So far, Kasparov has won five games and Karpov four.

"If it's 12-12, he keeps his title, but obviously Kasparov will want to score a real points victory," said Cuban chess expert Frank Guiral, predicting aggressive play by Kasparov in the concluding contests.

On Monday, Karpov will play the white pieces, which allow the player the first move. If Kasparov clinches the match Monday, the challenger still can insist on playing the final game.

Chess experts were perplexed by the position in the 22nd game when it adjourned Friday night, noting Kasparov was a pawn ahead but saying he had only a small chance for victory.

But overnight analysis revealed that Kasparov, playing white, had the chance of a mating attack if he had sealed the correct 41st move at the end of Friday's play.

When the champion arrived at the board in the 700-seat concert hall of the Hotel Leningrad on Saturday, the sealed move was revealed as knight to d7/queen 7. A small section of the crowd burst into applause, falling silent when arbiters appealed for calm.

The next five moves were played in four minutes, with Kasparov setting up an unstoppable checkmate.

In the final position, Karpov's king was trapped in a corner, imprisoned by white's knight and with its escape routes blocked by its own pieces.

Karpov resigned after white's 46th move, and the audience stood to applaud Kasparov.

BROWN RECLUSE (Loxosceles reclusa Gertsch)

Identification--The brown recluse (or fiddle-back) is a a slender-legged, short haired, brown spider; its body and legs cover about the same area as a quarter. Males and females are similar in appearance and both are venomous to humans. This spider is recognized from other similar species by the dark brown, violin-shaped marking on the upperside of the cephalothorax. The base of the violin extends toward the abdomen.

Distribution and Habitat--The range of the brown recluse is throughout most of the midwestern United States and Texas. It occurs on the High Plains of Texas, although much less commonly than south and east of the escarpment. The brown recluse is often an inhabitant of human dwellings and is found in bathrooms, basements, bedrooms, closets (often in corners); under furniture, behind baseboards, in the foundation, or in any dark, protected area. They often climb into shoes or in folds of clothing.

Symptomolgy--Most brown recluse bites result from rolling on the spider while the victim is sleeping, or putting on clothes or shoes harboring the spider. The bite usually causes a stinging sensation followed by intense pain. Within 24 to 36 hours, symptoms such as restlessness, chills, fever, nausea, muscular weakness, and joint pain may occur. A severe reaction also occurs at the bite site, itself. The venom kills the skin and exposes underlying tissues. The wound edges thicken and the exposed center eventually fills in with scar tissue. Healing may take up to 2 or 3 months, and normally results in obvious scars of various sizes.

Brown Recluse spiders are becoming prominent in our area. To determine if this spider is in your home, Boydstun's Pest Control is supplying 3 free sticky traps per household. Additional sticky traps are available for 25¢ each. Place traps in designated areas above. Return traps to our office for identification. Please come by 1419 N. Big Spring.

Pope calls for one-day halt to war, terrorism

Pope John Paul II, left, is welcomed by French President Francois Mitterrand upon the pope's arrival at Lyon, France, Saturday.

AP Laserphoto

LYON, France (AP) — Pope John Paul II called Saturday on all groups at war anywhere in the world and on all terrorists to halt hostile action for one day and reflect on why they are resorting to violence.

Vatican officials said Roman Catholic Church officials were making intense efforts in countries where there is fighting to achieve the day-long truce, called for Oct. 27. They said the church is seeking truces both in conflicts between states and in guerrilla wars.

On Oct. 27, the pope will visit Assisi, Italy, to pray for world peace along with leaders of various faiths from around the world.

The pontiff made his plea at the first stop of his four-day trip to France, an ecumenical prayer gathering at the Roman Amphitheater of the Three Gauls, where the first French Christian martyrs died.

At a Saturday afternoon Mass attended by an estimated 150,000 people at the open-air Eurexpo exposition park on the edge of Lyon, John Paul again asked that peaceful solutions be found to the world's problems.

"Yes, we must contribute to liberating man from so much servitude," he said at the park, "but without confusing our common struggle with violence, hate and ideological class prejudice that can bring even worse evils than those we seek to eliminate."

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the truce idea came to the pope Friday night, and that he quickly jotted down his thoughts in Polish. Vatican officials were told of the plan only Saturday morning before the departure for France. They had to rapidly translate it from Polish and squeeze the announcement into the pope's schedule while the plane was on its way.

The church is making no effort to get involved in peace negotiations itself, but papal nuncios around the world are contacting governments to push for a truce, Navarro said.

A papal nuncio is the pope's envoy to a nation with which the Vatican has diplomatic relations.

Officials said the nuncios were working for peace in state-to-state conflicts, but that local bishops were working for truces in countries that have no diplomatic relations with the Vatican or where conflicts involve guerrillas rather than warring states.

At the Roman Ampitheater of the Three Gauls, John Paul appealed "to all parties in conflict in the world" to observe "at least during the entire day of Oct. 27, a complete truce in the fighting."

He asked warring parties "to undertake or to pursue a reflection on the motives that are pushing them to seek by force, with its cortege of human miseries, that which could be obtained by sincere negotiation and recourse to other means offered by law."

"I also address this appeal to those who are seeking to attain their goals by terrorist methods or other forms of violence," he said, urging all terrorists and their leaders to "listen to the appeal that God is addressing their consciences."

Both the pope and President Francois Mitterrand, who met him at Lyon's Satolas Airport, mentioned terrorism in their remarks at an airport ceremony.

Mitterrand said the pope's visit came "at a time when there is too much violence in the world, the folly of intolerance."

Five terrorist bombings in Paris last month killed 10 people and wounded 162. The military attache at the French Embassy in Beirut was assassinated last month and French troops in the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon have been attacked repeatedly by Shiite Moslem militiamen.

The pope said, "The essential is to give the taste of truth, the impulse of love, the joy of peace, to give hope."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Shevardnadze says Soviets seek agreement on missiles

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Saturday his government will seek an agreement on medium-range missiles when President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev meet next weekend.

"It's very difficult to say what we want" from the Oct. 11-12, Iceland meeting because there is no fixed agenda, Shevardnadze said at an evening news conference.

He added, however, that the Soviets would bring a series of proposals asking "many concessions," among them on medium-range missiles.

Shevardnadze also said the Reagan administration's charges of a Soviet military presence in Nicaragua were "laughable" and that there were no plans to send troops or military advisers to the Central American country.

His comments came during the second day of a three-day official visit, the first by a high Soviet official to Mexico since Anastas Mikoyan, vice president of the Council of Ministers, visited in 1959.

Nickel knocks sanctions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Departing U.S. Ambassador Herman Nickel said Saturday he feared that any euphoria over American sanctions against South Africa "may turn into something of a hangover."

Nickel, a foe of sanctions, also said economic retaliation by South Africa and the United States in a sanctions war would serve neither country. He referred to South Africa's threat to ban U.S. grain imports in response to the American sanctions, and hints that South Africa might bar sales of some strategic minerals.

Nickel spoke to reporters at Jan Smuts International Airport before leaving for the United States after 4½ years as ambassador. A former Time Magazine correspondent in South Africa, Nickel is to be replaced by Edward Perkins, a career diplomat who will be the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa.

Nickel conceded that the six-year-old U.S. policy of "constructive engagement" toward southern Africa was dealt a blow by enactment of economic sanctions last week over President Reagan's veto.

Aquino praises U.S. for aid

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino on Saturday welcomed U.S. Senate approval of $200 million in new economic aid to her government, and said she was elated by her warm reception during a U.S. visit last month.

The Senate approved the aid Friday by an 82-14 vote, bringing to about $500 million the amount of aid approved by Congress to the Philippines in the fiscal year that began Wednesday.

The Senate twice voted against the aid earlier in the week, and its approval came as a surprise.

"I am certainly pleased," Mrs. Aquino said in a statement after the vote. "While I do reiterate my appreciation to both houses of the U.S. Congress for the aid, I must also thank the American people who during my recent visit to the United States welcomed me with open arms," she said.

Pope authorizes tests to determine Shroud's age

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II has authorized tests to determine the age of the Shroud of Turin, the linen in which some believe Christ was wrapped for burial, the Turin archdiocese said Saturday.

The tests will try to settle whether the cloth is a medieval fake or really dates back to the first century, the archdiocese said in a statement. The shroud, 13-feet-by-4-feet, shows what seems to be the face and bones of a man.

Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero, the archbishop of Turin, in the past has expressed hope that the tests would be conducted. He made his latest request to the pope last week following a gathering of scientists from the United States and Europe discussing the shroud.

The Vatican in the past has been reluctant to subject the cloth to testing for fear it would destroy too much of the venerated linen. Scientists say less material is needed now than in the past.

The archdiocese said a few square inches would be taken from the shroud to carry out the carbon-14 dating test that involves counting carbon atoms with a mass spectrometer. The test is said to be able to determine the age of the shroud to within 150 years.

The carbon-14 test should give "the maximum guarantees for the integrity of the cloth and the Shroud's image," the statement said.

Results should be made public in the spring of 1988, the statement said.

In 1981, an international panel of experts said after extensive testing that the three-dimensional image on the linen is that "of a real human form of a scourged, crucified man. It is not the product of an artist."

Stains contain elements of human blood, the panel said.

Historical documents only take the shroud's existence back to the 13th century. The linen was kept in Chamberry, France, until it was brought to Italy 400 years ago by the aristocratic Savoy family. It was owned jointly by the archbishop and King Umberto II until Umberto's death in 1983.

The archbishop then gave the shroud to the pope.

The linen is wrapped in red silk and kept in a silver chest in the Cathedral of San Giovanni in Turin. It was last shown to the public in 1978.

Wives of two kidnapped Americans appeal to Reagan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The wives of two kidnapped Americans appealed to President Reagan on Saturday to negotiate with the abductors and asked the American public to pressure Washington to work harder for hostages' release.

Altogether, six Americans are missing in Lebanon, kidnapped by various groups who are demanding political concessions.

"I ask President Reagan to abide by the principles of the oath taken by every American president, to protect the freedom of the American people and their rights," said Fahima Dalati, whose husband, educator Frank Herbert Reed, 53, of Malden, Mass., was kidnapped Sept. 9.

Mrs. Reed and Ilham Ghandour, whose husband, Joseph James Cicippio, 56, was kidnapped Sept. 12, likened the cases of Americans seized in Lebanon to that of American reporter Nicholas Daniloff.

Daniloff, charged in Moscow with espionage, was allowed to return to the United States last week after intense superpower negotiations. At the same time, the United States released a Soviet charged with spying.

"Why should Daniloff be given more importance than his fellow Americans held in Lebanon?" asked Mrs. Reed.

"I demand equal treatment for all American citizens," said Mrs. Cicippio.

Mrs. Cicippio, who is Lebanese, and Mrs. Reed, who is Syrian, spoke in interviews on state-controlled Channel 5 television.

Two American hostages, journalist Terry A. Anderson and hospital director David Jacobsen, made similar pleas to Reagan in a 10-minute videotape released by their kidnappers Friday.

Reagan has said Daniloff's case cannot be compared with that of Americans kidnapped in Lebanon because Daniloff was held by a government while the Lebanese kidnappers are "faceless" underground groups.

The president says his administration has worked to free the American hostages in Lebanon, but has had no direct contact with the kidnappers.

Storms fall across state

Associated Press

A cold front triggered thunderstorms across Texas Saturday, prompting a flash flood watch for much of the northwest half of North Texas and most of the southern part of West Texas.

The front drifted slowly southeast, slicing across the state from near Paris, southwest to just north of Del Rio, the National Weather Service reported.

As a result, rains fell over North Texas and West Texas. Also, scattered showers and thunderstorms dotted Southeast Texas, Central Texas, the lower Rio Grande Valley and coastal waters.

The weather service issued flash flood warnings Saturday afternoon because of torrential rains in the Abilene, Midland and San Angelo areas. A dense blanket of clouds covered all except for the northwest Texas Panhandle and far West Texas.

The weather service said skies would be mostly cloudy statewide through Monday with scattered showers and thunderstorms over most of the state.

NATION

Storms that inundated much of the Midwest this week moved into Texas on Saturday, as more than 7 inches fell in some areas, while the Southeast baked in temperatures that reached record highs.

Rivers continued cresting in the wake of the deluge, which left behind millions of dollars in flood damage in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. At least eight deaths were linked to the flooding and three people were missing.

A cold front, extending from the Great Lakes to the southern Plains produced showers and thunderstorms across northern and western Texas on Saturday.

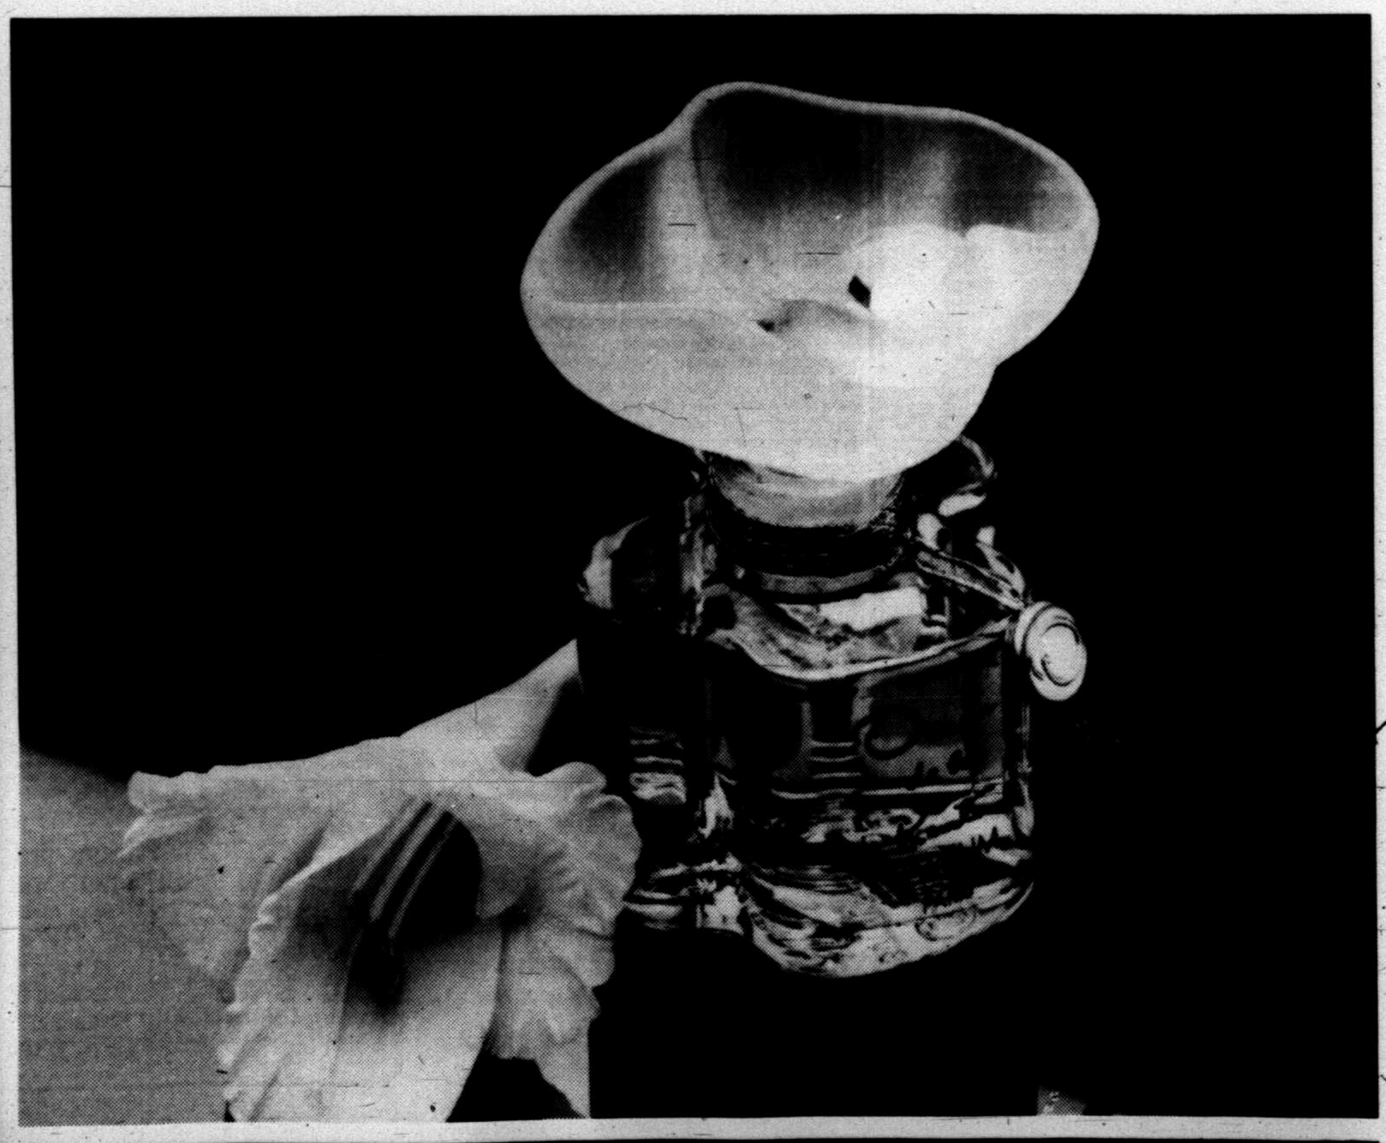

The rain had let up over Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, although water 8 to 9 feet deep reached the roofs of some houses in Bartlesville, in northeast Oklahoma, and the National Weather Service predicted the Cimarron River would crest downstream at near the 1967 record level of 24.5 feet.

Garden City, Texas, received about 5 inches of rain in five-hour period, and flooding was reported in McCamey, Texas, which had received 7.8 inches since Saturday morning, the weather service said.

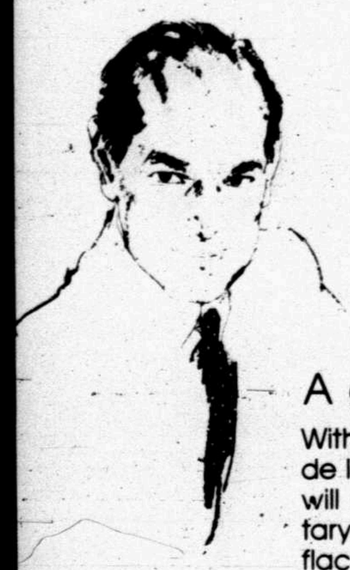

Today's forecast called for showers and thundershowers scattered across the Southeast, the Gulf Coast and from Texas to northern New Mexico and showers from the Upper Great Lakes to southern New England and across the middle Atlantic Coast region.

Baskin says she learned a lot as head of chamber

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Three days after ending her year as the first female president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Joan Baskin termed the year "a tremendous learning experience."

However, she added, if she had known before being selected that former chamber head Grant Billingsley would leave to enter the private sector after she had been in office about six months, she's not sure she would have accepted the position.

But, as Mrs. Baskin noted, she and Steve Hardin, the chamber's economic development director who was named acting head after Billingsley left, pitched in and held things together, learning as they went.

Of her year as chamber president, Mrs. Baskin said, "I have only grown in fondness and appreciation for Midland and the people who live here."

Recalling that the economic downturn hit not long after she took office, Mrs. Baskin said, "The year has been traumatic for the community because of OPEC, no government energy policy and the futures markets, which is so new as far as impacting on what happens down here."

Saying she likes the resiliency of Midlanders and their "Well, I know things aren't really good, but it's going to come back and we're going to be able to do something with what we have," attitude, Mrs. Baskin said, "I think it grows out here as naturally as the scrub mesquite."

Asked if, as Midland's first woman chamber president, she had encountered any particular problems, Mrs. Baskin emphatically said, "None. None at all. Everyone was so receptive and so cooperative and so helpful, I never felt that — I think the feeling that you're wondering about, which I have felt in other places."

As to that feeling in other places, she recalled having served on a church board one time "where I could see some of the sweet, old gentlemen that, as soon as one of the women began to talk, the shades went down on their eyes."

As chamber president, she said, "I have never felt that. I believe this was a very cooperative team and they were not particularly concerned that they had a woman as their titular head rather than a male."

She added, "I think one of the reasons is that it's easier for them to deal with someone who is sort of older and more maternal than it would be a gorgeous, slim 35-year-old, who they would see as a competitor. I don't know that that's true," she said, "but I'm not very threatening, I don't think, and so it hasn't been a problem."

During her year in office, she said, she was helped by the support and experience of members of the business community who served in various capacities as chamber officers and members of committees.

Concerning the trip she and her husband, District Judge Pat Baskin, made to China with a group of Midland-Odessa residents to visit Midland's sister city of Dongying, located in the heart of the Shengli oil field, Mrs. Baskin described it as "a great opportunity, personally as well as for the community."

She added, however, she doesn't believe the sister city relationship will produce immediate benefits, primarily because China is a very old, traditional society in which "six months is the blink of an eye. To folks that are used to the independent oil business," she said, "six months is an eternity so you have some cultural mind-sets that are going to make it a little bit hard to have any quick results."

Describing Dongying as "a raw little town," she imagined it was not unlike West Texas oilfield towns when they first started, "with narrow roads, no shoulders and dust like you wouldn't believe."

A Dongying delegation, including the city's mayor and some people from the Shengli oilfield, will be in Midland Oct. 14 and will visit the Oil Show in Odessa as well as tour area industries.

The Chinese representatives will stay in the homes of several Midland residents, including the Baskin home.

During her tour of Dongying, she said, the group was taken to the university, or institute as it's called in China, and they saw the labs where English is taught using American movies as teaching tools.

Comparing U.S. university student life to that of Chinese students, she said she was most impressed with "the real ambition I found in most of the Chinese people."

She recalled being in the institute library at 5 p.m. on a Friday "and every chair was occupied. Everyone was reading a book or a newspaper. They were just busier than cranberry merchants," Mrs. Baskin said.

Casa tapes elderly Midlanders' histories

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Seventy-one-year-old Modesta Munoz remembers a time when minorities were not allowed to shop in the same Midland stores as Anglos.

"You had to get some white people to go into the drugstore to get medicine," he said.

When Zelma Bass came to Midland in 1923 to work with her husband at a hotel, they were the only blacks in the Midland-Odessa area, 83-year-old Mrs. Bass said.

Mrs. Bass and Munoz are among 19 Midland minorities who have contributed their life stories to an oral history illustrating early Midland.

A 20-minute videotape, which is the culmination of a two-year project, will open at the Midland Park Mall at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The tapes will also be shown at 11 a.m. Oct. 14 at the Midland County Library; at 12:15 p.m. Oct. 16 at Midland Community Theater, at 2 p.m. Oct. 21 at the Community National Bank and at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 15 at Casa De Amigos.

Along with the tape, the complete recordings of all 19 senior citizens' interviews will be stored at the Midland College Library.

The videotape, funded through a $1,372 grant from the Texas Committee on Humanities, began after project organizers realized they had a wealth of untapped stories about early Midland at Casa De Amigos.

"We felt like there was a whole division of the local history that had never been recorded and it was going to be lost," said project organizer Alice Brown, who also works as volunteer and public relations coordinator at Casa De Amigos.

The other project organizer, Judy Morris, said, "We've got all these senior citizens who have a wealth of information about early Midland."

Ms. Morris is the education director at Casa.

Minorities, chosen from Casa's senior citizens program, were interviewed to fill in a gap of Midland history — the black and Hispanic experience, Ms. Morris said.

"The well-rounded picture is of our first wealthy families, but also remembering the support system they had of the minority workers that came out here," Ms. Morris said.

Most of the people interviewed said they came to Midland seeking work or they were brought into West Texas to work.

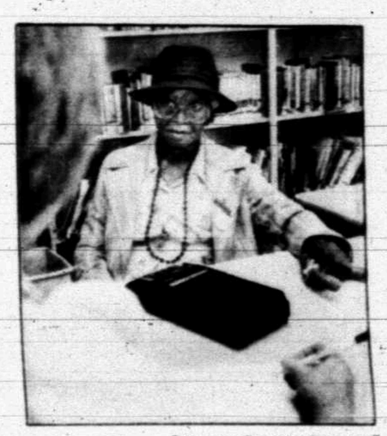

Despite many hardships described in the interviews, most of the people were very happy and content with their lives, Ms. Morris said.

"The times were hard, but there is no bitterness. Most of the people who lived to be senior citizens are pretty happy folks.

"I think all of them that came out here succeeded in a better life then they had elsewhere," she said.

Ms. Brown said, "To me it was real humbling that people could go through what these people have gone through and come out with a sense of humor and be really joyful about life."

Hispanic Chamber board president receives Trimble Service Award

From Staff Reports

Midlander Roger Robles has been named the latest recipient of the Trimble Service Award.

The award, co-sponsored by Leadership Midland Alumni Association and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, was established to recognize citizens who best represent the spirit of volunteerism in Midland, and who have contributed significantly to the community.

Robles

Nominated by the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Robles currently serves as president of the board of directors for that organization and was the driving force behind its establishment in late 1984.

Since moving to Midland in 1960 as executive director of Guadalupe Youth Center (now Park Center YMCA), Robles has been active in many civic organizations. He served as director of the Youth Center until 1969, when he became affiliated with New York Life Insurance Company.

He and his wife, Minnie, have a son and a daughter.

While attending a work-related convention in San Antonio early in 1984, Robles noticed an article in a newspaper there concerning the National Convention of Hispanic Chambers of Commerce, also being held in San Antonio the same week.

He visited the chamber convention, was impressed with the concept and activities and requested information on how to form a Hispanic Chamber in Midland.

A nucleus of nine charter members agreed that Midland's East Side development needed special attention, and that formation of a Hispanic Chamber could address some of those specific needs, as well as those of small businesses in general.

Some of the projects during the first two years have included the sponsorship of several small-business related seminars, the establishment of a Rotating Loan Fund to encourage new businesses on the East Side and the establishment of an East Side Economic Development Task Force.

A fund-raising activity was also held last year for victims of the earthquake in Mexico City. More than $4,000 and several truck loads of clothing and supplies were sent to Mexico.

Robles' other volunteer activities are varied and have included membership on the Midland Independent School District board, Objectives for the '80s, Midland County Jail Task Force, Centennial/Sesquicentennial Committee, Mexican American Professional Association, Permian Basin Area Agencies on Aging, Permian Basin International Trade Forum, Midland Chamber of Commerce, East Side Lion's Club and Mexican American Advisory Council.

Since its establishment in January of this year, a Trimble Service Award winner has been chosen monthly. At the end of the year, the name of one of the 12 monthly winners will be drawn and the winner will receive a free trip for two provided by American Airlines.

Lot of people don't follow their best-laid plans

Best I can tell, most people are quite good at making plans.

Get a group together and you can come up with all kinds of suggestions for having a big time over the weekend. Everyone, it seems, gets in on the act. It is a talent even the most boring of us possess.

What separates the winners from the losers, however, is the ability to follow through on those plans. Some do, others don't. I don't.

Just the other night, for example, a friend and I decided we would make a firm commitment to go to Dallas during the upcoming basketball season and catch a couple Maverick games. We determined that if we made arrangements early enough we could get cheap airline tickets, decent seats at Reunion Arena and a handy hotel close to all the good nightspots.

Three hundred bucks apiece, we deduced, would assure us a great time.

Will we follow through on those plans?

It's debatable at best. After all, we made the same plans last year and somehow never got around to going.

Why? Who knows. We just didn't. Other things came up. Money ran short. We couldn't get the right days off work. That sort of thing.

The bottom line is, though, we didn't follow through. It is nothing new for me.

Last month, while thumbing through a golf magazine, I noticed a small advertisement explaining how for a measly $350 a person could spend four days in the Bahamas playing golf. That $350 sum covered everything — food, airline tickets from Dallas, liquor, green fees, golf cart costs and hotel accommodations. I even checked with someone who had gone and confirmed it was a legitimate offer — "everything it was cracked up to be," is how he put it.

Have I taken advantage of the deal?

Of course not.

Will I?

Who knows, but I certainly wouldn't bet a week's salary on it. History suggests it, like all my other well-thought-out plans, will somehow slip through the cracks.

I have discussed this problem with others and most agree they fall into the same category. Well-intentioned plans just don't get done.

One person summed it up this way.

He said, "The hunt is more fun than the kill."

I asked him to elaborate.

He complied. "It's like when you meet a woman you want to get to know better," he said. "The flirting and chasing is often more enjoyable than the actual relationship. Once you get involved, the thrill usually disappears. You start looking for new conquests."

I gave him a suspicious look.

"It's true," he said. "It's been proven. I read it in a book. And, the same theory holds for why people don't follow through on their plans. It's more fun making the plans than it is actually going through with what you've decided. In fact, the event itself can often be a big letdown. The planning, on the other hand, never is."

I was still skeptical.

So, I called his hand. "If you never do what you plan, doesn't that lead to a boring life?"

"Perhaps," he acknowledged. "But, it can also be a lot cheaper."

"What do you mean?"

"I'll give you a perfect example," he said with a sly grin. "I just sent my ex-wife her alimony check."

"Hmmm," I surmised. "You should have continued hunting instead of going for the kill?."

"You said it."

Estes says his wheeling and dealing days are over

EDITOR'S NOTE: When Billie Sol Estes left prison three years ago, he said: "I'm just one drink way from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison."

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE — West Texas con artist Billie Sol Estes says he's abandoned life in the fast track but has not ruled out a book that might change history, or at least put it in the "right perspective."

Still portly and personable at 61, Estes insists his wheeling and dealing days are over and that he does not want to stir up any fires.

The paroled swindler said he is content just sitting back thinking and observing, living one day at a time and keeping his options open.

But he conceded that a book "that would change history" remains one of those options.

"It might put things in the right perspective," he said, running a hand through his thick, graying hair and adjusting a pair of new glasses.

With his lawyer seated nearby, Estes talked recently about his current activities in Abilene, where he lives with his wife Patsy and holds down a job in the oil industry.

Bill Sol Estes

"It's real, real slow right now," he said.

SURPRISINGLY, ESTES was less reluctant to discuss his arrest last year for allegedly raping a 38-year-old Mexican widow who had come to Abilene to be his housekeeper. The charge subsequently was dismissed.

Estes maintains the woman's charges were unfounded and said prosecutors would have "looked like complete fools" if the case had gone to trial.

Two years ago, he stirred up a hornet's nest when he told a grand jury in Franklin that the late President Lyndon Johnson ordered the 1961 slaying of a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Confirming reports leaked to three Texas newspapers, Robertson County District Attorney John Paschall said Estes told grand jurors that Johnson ordered the killing of Henry Marshall because the USDA official could have linked the then-vice president to Estes' illegal activities.

However, Paschall pointed out that the unsubstantiated testimony by Estes was not endorsed by the grand jury.

Marshall was an upper level official in a federal agency that oversaw cotton-growing licenses in Texas. He was shot to death in June 1961 on his farm in Franklin, 120 miles south of Dallas.

Several of Johnson's former associates disputed the Estes allegations and denounced him as a publicity-seeking "pathological liar."

THE UPROAR coincided with the release of a book by Estes' daughter Pam entitled "Billie Sol: King of the Texas Wheeler Dealers." The book dealt largely with Pam's childhood rememberances of her father and shed little light on Estes' darker side.

"The book was real successful, a bestseller," Estes said, perhaps stretching things just a bit.

Whatever its sales and success, "Billie Sol" offered no real insight into events leading up to Estes' conviction in the early 1960s for federal mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud. Creditors claimed Estes owed $38 million.

He was assessed a 15-year prison sentence, but served less than half that time, mostly at a minimum security facility outside El Paso.

Estes was paroled in 1971, but, as later told the Associated Press, he remained haunted by a history of bizarre and ill-fated compulsiveness. He said it was a form of insanity that persists even today.

"I'm one of the unfortunates," he sighed.

By 1979, Estes was back in prison, convicted of mail fraud and conspiracy to conceal assets to avoid paying back taxes. The fraud case involved a farmer who swore that Estes conned him out of $50,000.

On the eve of his 1983 release from the federal prison camp at Big Spring, Estes told the AP:

"I'M JUST one drink away from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison. I'm a compulsive person. I'm a compulsive drinker, and if I smoked, I'd be a compulsive smoker.

"Anything I've done, it's been compulsive."

Now, seated in his lawyer's office, Estes indicated with a laugh that he's still a little crazy but that he no longer has the urge to wheel and deal.

"I think your character changes as you go through the years," he said. "When you're a child, you want to play with marbles. Those marbles are real important to you. When you get older, those marbles are not important to you anymore."

He said he's happy now just being with his family, most of whom have stood by him in and out and between prison stints.

"I've got no complaints against anyone today," he said. "No vengeance, remorse or ill will."

Any goals?

"Each day, I take life as it is. There comes a time when you don't have all the answers, and you start observing."

What's next?

"You never know," he said. "A person who's been over the road a lot like I have, you wait for an opportunity. And you might take advantage of it."

FIVE YEARS from now?

"Only a fool says what he'll be doing tomorrow, because tomorrow might not come. And yesterday's gone and will never return. So I live one day at a time."

And probation?

"It's not a problem for me because I don't really care about getting in the fast lane of life again. It might interest me to go to an Alcholics Anonymous meeting with you tonight. But it wouldn't interest me to drill an oil well tonight.

"Your values change."

How?

"You know, what I'd say or what I'd do or what I'd think. Right now, I'm just going to lay back and observe.

"No, not like an old rattler. Like a man who prays for guidance and wisdom to know what to do. I'm not going to strike at anything without doing my homework."

State bar sues Houston lawyer

HOUSTON (AP) — The State Bar of Texas has sued a Houston attorney, alleging he enticed a client from another lawyer and then neglected the case.

The bar asks that Benton Musslewhite be reprimanded, suspended or disbarred for his conduct in a 1980 personal injury case.

The lawsuit is the third time the bar has taken disciplinary action against him. The lastest involves a personal injury case for Martha Barham, whose son was injured in an automobile accident in 1980.

According to the lawsuit, Musslewhite contacted Ms. Barham after she already had retained an attorney and talked her into transferring the case to him.

Musslewhite allegedly told her that he could get more money in the case than the other attorney, a move the bar's disciplinary code prohibits.

After taking the case, Musslewhite allegedly did not work on it. A suit, however, was filed in 1982.

Musslewhite again neglected the case, but started preparing for trial only when notified in 1985 that Ms. Barham had filed a complaint with the bar association, the lawsuit says.

Beaumont man jailed in connection with call threatening Reagan

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Beaumont man was ordered to remain in jail without bond in connection with a telephone call he allegedly made threatening the life of President Reagan.

U.S. Magistrate Earl Hines on Friday denied bail to 46-year-old Arthur Ronald Lewis on the grounds that he poses a threat to the community and might flee before his trial.

U.S. Secret Service agents arrested Lewis on Monday after he allegedly telephoned the FBI here and said, "I plan to kill the president."

Carmen Kaiman, a clinical psychologist at the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center who has counseled Lewis for the past nine months, testified in a court hearing Thursday that Lewis suffers from a paranoid personality disorder and could be a danger to his ex-wife if released.

Lewis' attorney, Pat Black, had asked that information be declared inadmissible, but the judge disagreed.

Lewis is serving probation for a 1984 arson conviction for burning down his ex-wife's house, holding her and his son at gunpoint with an unloaded shotgun and breaking her leg with the barrel of the weapon.

Black argued Lewis had committed no acts of violence toward his ex-wife since their divorce almost two years ago.

The magistrate said Lewis' background, which includes steady employment as a helicopter pilot and 20 years of distinguished service in the U.S. Army, including two tours in Vietnam and medals for bravery, made it difficult to deny him bail.

Hines said he would reconsider freeing Lewis on bond if new evidence warranted it.

Odessans return home Saturday morning after workers cap well

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Shortly after 6 a.m. Saturday some 1,000 residents of a nearly one square mile area of north Odessa were told they could return home after being urged to leave some 12 hours earlier because of the danger of hydrogen sulfide gas escaping from an injection well near West 64th Street and Golder Avenue.

According to Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, the all-clear was given at 6:09 a.m. after Champion Well Service officials were satisfied the well had been successfully capped.

Kloss said efforts by Halliburton Service Co. workers to shut off the flow of H2S gas with special mud brought in from Pecos were unsuccessful because mud couldn't be forced deep enough down the well and a decision was made to cap the well. He said Champion Well Service workers finished capping the well about 3:30 a.m. and watched the well until around 6 a.m. to make sure the potentially deadly gas was no longer escaping from the well.

According to Kloss, the escape of H2S from the injection well, which was being worked over by Champion Well Service, was apparently due to a cracked or otherwise defective valve on the well casing.

The problem apparently developed around 3 p.m. Friday, but the Ector County Sheriff's office was not notified until around 6 p.m. and evacuation efforts began almost immediately.

Kloss said every available deputy, as well as Odessa police and Department of Public Safety personnel were pressed into service to alert area residents and set up roadblocks to the affected area. Odessa Fire Department units were also at the scene.

The area involved extended from about West 57th Street north to Yukon Avenue and from Andrews Highway to West County Road.

In addition to law enforcement officers, representatives from the Texas Railroad Commission, the Ector County Health Department and Texas Air Control Board were on the scene to monitor operations at the well situated northeast of the intersection of West 64th Street and North Golder.

No one without safety-approved breathing equipment was permitted near the well site by Railroad Commission officials.

Sheriff's Lt. Jackie Perkins said the rotten-egg smell of H2S was very heavy in the area of 64th and North Golder when he arrived on the scene, but a breeze came up and the apparently heavy concentration of fumes began moving north and west of the original area.

Initially, law enforcement officials had announced the affected area extended from West 54th Street north to Yukon Road and from Andrews Highway west to Golder Avenue, but as the wind came up and the gas began to move, officials widened the blocked off area to include West County Road.

According to Kloss, there were no reports of anyone suffering any ill effects as a result of the hydrogen sulfide gas.

"And, I got to giggling because I thought we could set off a bomb in the U.T. Center and not kill anyone at 5 o'clock on a Friday because we're used to the opportunity of education."

Reflecting on her year as chamber president, she said, "One of the advantages of this particular recession, as opposed to the last vivid one I remember, is that then we lost a lot of leadership, who went to Canada, Colorado or to off shore drilling."

"But this time, because it is an industry-wide recession, there's no place for anybody to hop," she said. "So we're not losing people like we did before."

Recalling that last time, people closed up their offices and moved to Houston and other places, Mrs. Baskin noted, "This time we've gotten some benefit." She noted that Exxon has consolidated here and Arco and some others have been bringing their people here to take advantage of lower operating costs.

As for current talk about economic diversification, Mrs. Baskin said she's "talked to some very intelligent people" who have said, "I've got a great idea. Let's diversify. It's almost like the 13-year-old boy who discovers girls for the first time and thinks no one else ever has."

Diversification of the area's economic base is something that has always been talked about, she said, adding she's heard such talk ever since coming to Midland about 33 years ago.

She recalled when Pittsburg Plate Glass and Michelin Tire were planning to build plants in the area about eight years ago, but couldn't get financing because things were good in the oil industry and bad every where else.

Additionally, she said, they felt that, because of such low unemployment, they wouldn't be able to hire anyone to work in their plants.

Mrs. Baskin sees the current economic crisis as "an opportunity to reposition ourselves. What appears to be liabilities," she says, "like empty apartments, empty office buildings and unemployed workers and such, if you can find the right situation these are all assets you can offer. This is the land of opportunity."

"I think the time for Midland, West Texas and Texas has come to take a position of aggressiveness, rather than — 'Oh, we can make it just by cutting back to meet this fiscal crisis.' We can't. It can't be met by cutting back," Mrs. Baskin said.

And, what will she do now that she won't be quite so occupied with Midland Chamber of Commerce activities?

That's easy, she says. Renew friendships she's had to neglect, probably clean closets and take care a lot of other things she hasn't had time for this past year.

HISTORY

Many talked of coming to Midland to escape the Mexican revolution or racial oppression in the Deep South.

Subjects said they came to Midland to work in hotels, restaurants, cotton fields and on construction sites.

Many said their lives where changed by the Civil Rights Act, opening up access to restaurants and shops they had been forbidden to enter.

An oral format was chosen because most of the subjects have about a third-grade education level and oral histories are more lively than written ones, the women said.

"We have nobody here who has what's considered an education today, but they are very intelligent," Ms. Morris said.

"It's much more interesting to do an oral history. It's more stilted with pen and paper," she said.

The liveliness of some subjects shines though many of the tapes including an interview with 99-year-old Mary Dockett, who says she has outlived two of her four children.

"I lived a good life. I haven't done nothing wrong, but I'm sassy," she said.

Estes says his wheeling and dealing days are over

EDITOR'S NOTE: When Billie Sol Estes left prison three years ago, he said: "I'm just one drink way from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison."

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE — West Texas con artist Billie Sol Estes says he's abandoned life in the fast track but has not ruled out a book that might change history, or at least put it in the "right perspective."

Still portly and personable at 61, Estes insists his wheeling and dealing days are over and that he does not want to stir up any fires.

The paroled swindler said he is content just sitting back thinking and observing, living one day at a time and keeping his options open.

But he conceded that a book "that would change history" remains one of those options.

"It might put things in the right perspective," he said, running a hand through his thick, graying hair and adjusting a pair of new glasses.

With his lawyer seated nearby, Estes talked recently about his current activities in Abilene, where he lives with his wife Patsy and holds down a job in the oil industry.

Bill Sol Estes

"It's real, real slow right now," he said.

SURPRISINGLY, ESTES was less reluctant to discuss his arrest last year for allegedly raping a 38-year-old Mexican widow who had come to Abilene to be his housekeeper. The charge subsequently was dismissed.

Estes maintains the woman's charges were unfounded and said prosecutors would have "looked like complete fools" if the case had gone to trial.

Two years ago, he stirred up a hornet's nest when he told a grand jury in Franklin that the late President Lyndon Johnson ordered the 1961 slaying of a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Confirming reports leaked to three Texas newspapers, Robertson County District Attorney John Paschall said Estes told grand jurors that Johnson ordered the killing of Henry Marshall because the USDA official could have linked the then-vice president to Estes' illegal activities.

However, Paschall, pointed out that the unsubstantiated testimony by Estes was not endorsed by the grand jury.

Marshall was an upper level official in a federal agency that oversaw cotton-growing licenses in Texas. He was shot to death in June 1961 on his farm in Franklin, 120 miles south of Dallas.

Several of Johnson's former associates disputed the Estes allegations and denounced him as a publicity-seeking "pathological liar."

THE UPROAR coincided with the release of a book by Estes' daughter Pam entitled "Billie Sol: King of the Texas Wheeler Dealers." The book dealt largely with Pam's childhood rememberances of her father and shed little light on Estes' darker side.

"The book was real successful, a bestseller," Estes said, perhaps stretching things just a bit.

Whatever its sales and success, "Billie Sol" offered no real insight into events leading up to Estes' conviction in the early 1960s for federal mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud. Creditors claimed Estes owed $38 million.

He was assessed a 15-year prison sentence, but served less than half that time, mostly at a minimum security facility outside El Paso.

Estes was paroled in 1971, but, as later told the Associated Press, he remained haunted by a history of bizarre and ill-fated compulsiveness. He said it was a form of insanity that persists even today.

"I'm one of the unfortunates," he sighed.

By 1979, Estes was back in prison, convicted of mail fraud and conspiracy to conceal assets to avoid paying back taxes. The fraud case involved a farmer who swore that Estes conned him out of $50,000.

On the eve of his 1983 release from the federal prison camp at Big Spring, Estes told the AP:

"I'M JUST one drink away from being a drunk and just one deal away from being back in prison. I'm a compulsive person. I'm a compulsive drinker, and if I smoked, I'd be a compulsive smoker.

"Anything I've done, it's been compulsive."

Now, seated in his lawyer's office, Estes indicated with a laugh that he's still a little crazy but that he no longer has the urge to wheel and deal.

"I think your character changes as you go through the years," he said. "When you're a child, you want to play with marbles. Those marbles are real important to you. When you get older, those marbles are not important to you anymore."

He said he's happy now just being with his family, most of whom have stood by him in and out and between prison stints.

"I've got no complaints against anyone today," he said. "No vengeance, remorse or ill will."

Any goals?

"Each day, I take life as it is. There comes a time when you don't have all the answers, and you start observing."

What's next?

"You never know," he said. "A person who's been over the road a lot like I have, you wait for an opportunity. And you might take advantage of it."

FIVE YEARS from now?

"Only a fool says what he'll be doing tomorrow, because tomorrow might not come. And yesterday's gone and will never return. So I live one day at a time."

And probation?

"It's not a problem for me because I don't really care about getting in the fast lane of life again. It might interest me to go to an Alcholics Anonymous meeting with you tonight. But it wouldn't interest me to drill an oil well tonight.

"Your values change."

How?

"You know, what I'd say or what I'd do or what I'd think. Right now, I'm just going to lay back and observe.

"No, not like an old rattler. Like a man who prays for guidance and wisdom to know what to do. I'm not going to strike at anything without doing my homework."

State bar sues Houston lawyer

HOUSTON (AP) — The State Bar of Texas has sued a Houston attorney, alleging he enticed a client from another lawyer and then neglected the case.

The bar asks that Benton Musslewhite be reprimanded, suspended or disbarred for his conduct in a 1980 personal injury case.

The lawsuit is the third time the bar has taken disciplinary action against him. The lastest involves a personal injury case for Martha Barham, whose son was injured in an automobile accident in 1980.

According to the lawsuit, Musslewhite contacted Ms. Barham after she already had retained an attorney and talked her into transferring the case to him.

Musslewhite allegedly told her that he could get more money in the case than the other attorney, a move the bar's disciplinary code prohibits.

After taking the case, Musslewhite allegedly did not work on it. A suit, however, was filed in 1982.

Musslewhite again neglected the case, but started preparing for trial only when notified in 1985 that Ms. Barham had filed a complaint with the bar association, the lawsuit says.

Beaumont man jailed in connection with call threatening Reagan

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Beaumont man was ordered to remain in jail without bond in connection with a telephone call he allegedly made threatening the life of President Reagan.

U.S. Magistrate Earl Hines on Friday denied bail to 46-year-old Arthur Ronald Lewis on the grounds that he poses a threat to the community and might flee before his trial.

U.S. Secret Service agents arrested Lewis on Monday after he allegedly telephoned the FBI here and said, "I plan to kill the president."

Carmen Kaiman, a clinical psychologist at the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center who has counseled Lewis for the past nine months, testified in a court hearing Thursday that Lewis suffers from a paranoid personality disorder and could be a danger to his ex-wife if released.

Lewis' attorney, Pat Black, had asked that information be declared inadmissible, but the judge disagreed.

Lewis is serving probation for a 1984 arson conviction for burning down his ex-wife's house, holding her and his son at gunpoint with an unloaded shotgun and breaking her leg with the barrel of the weapon.

Black argued Lewis had committed no acts of violence toward his ex-wife since their divorce almost two years ago.

The magistrate said Lewis' background, which includes steady employment as a helicopter pilot and 20 years of distinguished service in the U.S. Army, including two tours in Vietnam and medals for bravery, made it difficult to deny him bail.

Hines said he would reconsider freeing Lewis on bond if new evidence warranted it.

Odessans return home Saturday morning after workers cap well

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Shortly after 6 a.m. Saturday some 1,000 residents of a nearly one square mile area of north Odessa were told they could return home after being urged to leave some 12 hours earlier because of the danger of hydrogen sulfide gas escaping from an injection well near West 64th Street and Golder Avenue.

According to Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, the all-clear was given at 6:09 a.m. after Champion Well Service officials were satisfied the well had been successfully capped.

Kloss said efforts by Halliburton Service Co. workers to shut off the flow of H2S gas with special mud brought in from Pecos were unsuccessful because mud couldn't be forced deep enough down the well and a decision was made to cap the well. He said Champion Well Service workers finished capping the well about 3:30 a.m. and watched the well until around 6 a.m. to make sure the potentially deadly gas was no longer escaping from the well.

According to Kloss, the escape of H2S from the injection well, which was being worked over by Champion Well Service, was apparently due to a cracked or otherwise defective valve on the well casing.

The problem apparently developed around 3 p.m. Friday, but the Ector County Sheriff's office was not notified until around 6 p.m. and evacuation efforts began almost immediately.

Kloss said every available deputy, as well as Odessa police and Department of Public Safety personnel were pressed into service to alert area residents and set up roadblocks to the affected area. Odessa Fire Department units were also at the scene.

The area involved extended from about West 57th Street north to Yukon Avenue and from Andrews Highway to West County Road.

In addition to law enforcement officers, representatives from the Texas Railroad Commission, the Ector County Health Department and Texas Air Control Board were on the scene to monitor operations at the well situated northeast of the intersection of West 64th Street and North Golder.

No one without safety-approved breathing equipment was permitted near the well site by Railroad Commission officials.

Sheriff's Lt. Jackie Perkins said the rotten-egg smell of H2S was very heavy in the area of 64th and North Golder when he arrived on the scene, but a breeze came up and the apparently heavy concentration of fumes began moving north and west of the original area.

Initially, law enforcement officials had announced the affected area extended from West 54th Street north to Yukon Road and from Andrews Highway west to Golder Avenue, but as the wind came up and the gas began to move, officials widened the blocked off area to include West County Road.

According to Kloss, there were no reports of anyone suffering any ill effects as a result of the hydrogen sulfide gas.

The turning point

When Texas voters go to the polls in November, they'll be wanting to elect as their next governor a man who has the vision and determination to lead the state through some of the darkest days it has yet experienced.

Texas is on the threshold of its future. That future is far from clear at this point. The state's old industrial bases — oil and agriculture — have been victimized in recent years by a changing society, changing demands, international counter-forces and, to no small extent, U.S. government policies. In short, although oil and agriculture will remain important to the state's economy, the state faces the task of developing or acquiring a new industrial base to strengthen it economically for the future. Growth trends over the past few years have indicated that the Lone Star State will experience major spurts of population influx in coming years and as it does, the challenge to meet the demands of that burgeoning population will fall largely to government.

But the state's finances aren't in the best condition for such a challenge. The two special sessions of this summer and fall, intended to resolve a multi-billion dollar budget deficit for this biennium, make that clear. Finding a path out of the budgetary crisis without either impairing the delivery of necessary state services or mortgaging away the state's future is crucial. Texas is at that turning point where success or failure could well depend on the selection of one official the governor.

The voters face an odd choice. Incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White has scored a few noteworthy successes in his first term such as education reform, much-needed salary increases for the state's teachers and attraction of a few high-tech firms to the state, among others, but it is in the realm of leadership where White falls surprisingly short of ability. In fact, it has been noted by leading political observers that White is too attentive to the polls indicating what the Texas populace supposedly wants and, in that regard, has lost the ability to do what he was elected to do — lead the state.

Frequently, he has delayed making decisions, declined to make them or changed his mind after he had done so.

On the other hand, former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, who served his single term immediately preceding White, is an outstanding administrator although publicly he suffers from a definite image problem. During his term, Clements was not noted for leadership as much as his strong pro-business, pro-industry, pro-oil and anti-crime positions and for his business style of appointing top-level subordinates to important positions in the Texas government and letting them run the day-to-day operations, much in the Ronald Reagan style. Of course, it has been noted that Clements served as governor at a time when Texas was experiencing one of its best-ever economic heydeys.

Those days are gone now, perhaps never to return. And in the wake of the economic downturn Texas needs a leader who can give it not only a vision of the future but also a realistic way to reach that future.

We believe Bill Clements administrative abilities will come closer to giving Texas the kind of leadership it needs for the future.

Another View:

Another way to pay

This war on drugs will turn out to be expensive. Helicopters, radar balloons, more federal agents and police, treatment programs, education...It could cost a billion or two every year. Where's the money going to come from?

Well, let's see. How about making each federal agency kick in a small percentage of its budget?

No way. The appropriations committees have worked hard all summer cutting budgets down to the bone because of Gramm-Rudman. We can't ask them to cut more now at this late date without disrupting things that are just as important as drugs.

Then there's no choice but a new tax.

Tax! Are you crazy? With just 32 days till the election, and with the Clint Eastwood of tax resistance sitting in the White House?

So what are we going to do? I've got to get back to my reelection campaign, but I don't dare go back to the voters without our having done something about crack and drugs generally.

Here's what we do: We pass a tough drug bill. Then, along with it, we pass a resolution saying this issue is so important that the money ought to be found, somehow. Then we let the appropriations committees figure out the somehow, if they can. That way we can claim credit for supporting the idea. As a last resort, we ask the people to help out with the checkoff.

What checkoff?

Oh, didn't you see it? It's in the Senate bill. It permits taxpayers who are owed tax refunds to contribute part of the refund to a new federal trust fund to fight drugs.

So there'd be a new tax after all.

Shh! Shh! Don't ever use that word. It's a refund checkoff. And if every one of the 80 million taxpayers who get refunds checks off $5, we'd raise $400 million.

But on what possible basis can you estimate that any taxpayer would contribute to such a scheme? And even if every single one of them did, that's still not nearly enough money.

Well no, but it's a start. As you said, there's an election coming.

'Holy war' not waged for holy reasons

WASHINGTON — As the bloody war of attrition between Iraq and Iran enters its seventh year, two things become clear, according to information we get from deep inside Iran as well as official reports from that country's rulers: First, the Ayatollah Khomeini and his holy men believe they need the war to remain in power; and second, the mass of Iranians are far less enthusiastic about the war, let alone personal martyrdom, than the regime claims.

Jack Anderson

Pronouncements from Khomeini and his minions routinely try to depict the war as a jihad, or holy war, that would give Iran the chance to crush the unholier-than-them Iraqi regime and gain control of Shiite Moslem holy sites in Iraq.

But the bloodthirsty old ayatollah also welcomes the carnage for its own sake. At the very beginning of hostilities, Khomeini ranted: "War is a divine blessing. It is a gift bestowed upon us by God. The thunder of cannon rejuvenates the soul."

This crackbrained interpretation of God's will has evolved over the years into exhortations that, underneath the perfervid patriotic rhetoric to be expected in wartime, are surprisingly revealing of the mullahs' belief that their survival depends on continuation of the war. The fact that they are probably right in this assessment is not encouraging to the already faint hopes for a negotiated peace between the two antagonists.

"We are involved in a war that will determine the destiny of the nation," Khomeini proclaimed in early 1984.

In November of that year, Iranian President Ali Khamenei went a step further, saying: "The imposed war means the survival of Islam. We cannot let go of the war despite the enormous costs." The Islam he was talking about, of course, was the fundamentalist Shiite persuasion, not the "heretical" varieties practiced by Iraq's leaders and most of the Moslem world.

On New Year's Day 1985, the speaker of the Iranian parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, purported to give a candid report on the grotesque cost of the war in blood and treasure. "The war costs us dearly with regard to human and material resources," he acknowledged. "We are devoting at least one-third of the budget to war. Four of five provinces are half-paralyzed, but the war is our very existence."

Even this was sugarcoating the true situation. Reliable estimates from the anti-Khomeini "People's Mojahedin" put the loss of Iranian lives at more than 500,000 already, out of a population of approximately 40 million. That is the equivalent for this country of about 3 million dead.

As for material expenditures, the war is costing Iran probably $80 billion a year, including lost income and productivity.

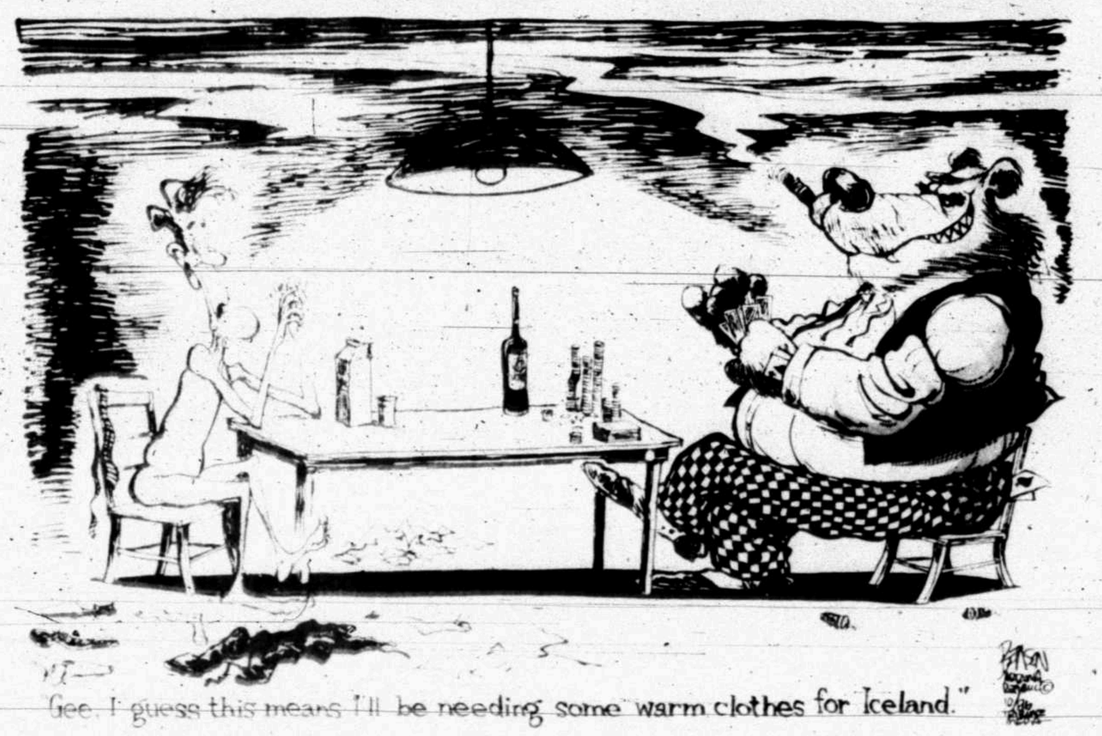

Occasionally an Iranian leader will predict final victory, as military boss Sayyad Shirazi did when he boasted last June that "in a maximum of nine months, the fate of the war will be decided by a decisive victory for Iran."

But in August Khamenei made a significant comment: "What is important to us is the war itself and not its outcome."

We tend to believe him. Like earlier despotic regimes, the current Iranian government cherishes the war with Iraq as a distraction for the Iranian public, which otherwise might wonder why their oil-rich country is in such terrible economic shape. The American hostages served in this role for nearly a year, before Iraq obligingly attacked and gave Khomeini an even more effective distraction.

This was given backhanded confirmation by Iran's prime minister, Mir Hossein Moussavi, in a speech a few weeks ago, when he said: "In spite of the baseless prediction and analysis of our enemies, the war has strengthened and consolidated the system of the Islamic Republic of Iran." Even allowing for the propaganda factor, the regime probably believes this essentially.

GEORGE F. WILL

On to Iceland for more 'therapeutic policy'

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says he should not have said the Soviets "blinked." But they probably did in elated disbelief.

George F. Will

The administration, having linked cases it said would not be linked, and having accepted an equation it termed up acceptable (of a spy and a journalist) and having eviscerated a principle (no trading of innocent hostages for spies) in a swap it says is not a swap, is reeling toward a summit it says is no summit. Embarrassment produces insincerity, from which flows mangled language. That must be remembered when the administration turns to selling agreements reached at the summit.

Agreements are guaranteed. Having paid ransom to the hostage-taker, the administration is traveling to Iceland as a payment to get Gorbachev to do what he said at the Geneva summit he would do. There, Gorbachev agreed to come to a summit in the United States. Now he is attaching a condition we are scrambling to meet: he must be guaranteed a pre-engineered summit that will yield arms-control agreements he can be comfortable with.

At Geneva, Gorbachev also agreed to the principle of 50 percent reductions of force levels. The United States has acquiesced in a Soviet retreat toward 30 percent. The administration says 30 percent is an interim step. Administration acquiescence is another attempt to purchase partial Soviet compliance with agreements so that other soon-to-be-shredded agreements can be produced.

The administration, expert at producing deficits, is running a humdinger with the Soviet Union. Administration outlays far exceed receipts in transactions with Moscow. In the Daniloff debacle, the administration made concessions regarding Soviet spies on the United Nations payroll (one-fourth of which payroll comes from U.S. taxpayers). The details of the concessions are unclear (only to U.S. taxpayers; the Soviet Union knows). In fact, the concessions are probably not yet complete. The administration should at least have made the Soviets release as many dissidents as there are spies allowed to remain at the United Nations. The administration should have secured the release of the man now dying in a Moscow hospital, the man who two years ago refused to help set up an arrest of Daniloff.

Senior administration officials say, solemnly, that a rogue KGB may have arrested Danilоff to embarrass Gorbachev. Let's see: Gorbachev is the KGB patron who was a protege of Andropov, head of the KGB, and Gorbachev has increased the KGB coloration of the Politburo. Yet the KGB may be trying to undermine him.

The absence of intellectual ballast in the administration is also apparent when Donald Regan says that in the Daniloff case, the Soviet Union lost "the public-relations battle" because "now everyone knows what they are." Let's see: After 69 years and scores of millions of corpses, the Soviet regime has suffered a significant "public-relations" setback. Regan, a man from Wall Street, thinks the struggle of the 20th century is a matter for Madison Avenue.

Administration spokesmen celebrate the Iceland summit-that-is-not-a-summit because the President is a "great communicator" who can use the occasion to convince Gorbachev that the United States is sincere about arms reductions. The logic of that line is that the arms race — and, inferentially, the Cold War — is the result of a misunderstanding, a failure to communicate. Hitherto, less communicative Presidents have failed to assuage Soviet anxieties about American intentions.

President Reagan has been sold a soothing theory that explains the dynamic of the Soviet state in terms of anxieties and paranoias rather than an ideologically driven pursuit of power. The theory is that the Soviet Union is what it is (armed to the teeth, waging war on its population and aggressive at every turn) because it has had a hard history and has not had democracy to teach it civility. This interpretation of the central drama of the century — the struggle between democracy and totalitarianism — is of almost antic superficiality, but it plays to two perennial American weaknesses, parochialism and vanity.

Intellectual parochialism causes Americans to believe that everyone is like us, or can be made to be like us, by us. Americans do not take ideology seriously, so neither do the Soviet leaders, "really." The administration believes that Gorbachev wants to end the arms race so he can raise his peoples' standard of living. The administration believes this for no better reason than that American politicians are primarily concerned with living standards.

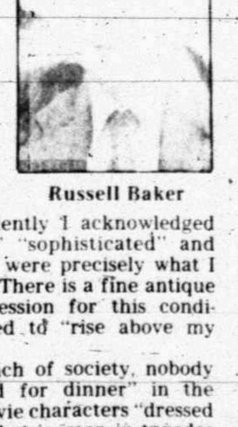

The administration believes the impediment to Soviet reasonableness is Soviet neurosis. A therapeutic U.S. policy can dispel that, especially a policy advocated by a great communicator, especially one who knows communists from the experience of labor-union strife in Hollywood 40 years ago.

Dressing for dinner difficult with wrong shoes

NEW YORK — The observance this summer of the 100th anniversary of the tuxedo evoked painful memories for me of a long ago when I yearned to pass for a man of the world. My dream then was to be suave and sophisticated and to reek of savoir-faire.

Russell Baker

I would never have spoken such words except in mocking tones, but silently I acknowledged that "suave," "sophisticated" and "savoir-faire" were precisely what I longed to be. There is a fine antique English expression for this condition: I wanted to "rise above my station."

In my branch of society, nobody ever "dressed for dinner" in the sense that movie characters "dressed for dinner"; that is, men in tuxedos and women tinkling in diamonds. In my social sector, a man was "dressed for dinner" if he yielded to his wife's pleas to stop coming to supper in his undershirt on steamy summer evenings and agreed to slip into his work shirt before sitting down.

Herb Gardner has correctly noted that the generation born between the wars "went to the movies to learn how to live our lives." As a small jujube chewer, I had watched men like Lyle Talbot, Paul Muni, George Brent and even Wallace Beery wear the tuxedo as cooly as I wore a sweatshirt.

Clearly the tuxedo was the ultimate male garment. Wearing it with poise marked even the ostensibly rough-hewn (Wallace Beery) as a man of suavity, sophistication and savoir-faire. The movies were explicit. Those who did not master the tuxedo would never shine at the Astor.

But where did you practice? There was high-school commencement, of course. High-school boys always graduated in rental tuxedos with clip-on bow ties and white jackets, which made the experience seem doubly fake because in movies white tuxedo jackets were worn only by band musicians and characters in Somerset Maugham movies about toffs in the monsoon belt.

Late in the college years, when the social-climbing madness was intense, I accepted an invitation to join a fraternity. Such is the folly in which a man may wallow when he seeks to rise above his station. The foolishness of the initiation ritual to which I willingly submitted now seems too embarrassing to describe beyond saying that it required a tuxedo.

The rental shop provided everything it took to create suavity, sophistication and savoir-faire. Everything but the shoes.

Unless you're a seasoned tuxedo wearer, you don't think about tuxedo shoes until it's too late. Consequently, I had to wear the only black shoes I possessed: wing tips with a lot of those fake holes all over the toes and sides. Because I hadn't yet grasped the importance of shoe upkeep to social schemers, the holes in the soles of these shoes were not fake.

Upon reporting for the ritual, I immediately realized that I was the only member of this fraternity who had not been fitted for his first tuxedo the day he entered nursery school.

It was the first time I had ever seen grown men wearing patent leather shoes. In my world, a man wearing patent leather shoes would have seemed only slightly less peculiar than a man wearing a tutu to the bingo game at Lithuanian Hall.

Complete humiliation ensued when we initiates were commanded to kneel before the sacred something-or-other, for kneeling meant exposing to the initiators' view the holes in my shoes.

Several years passed before I mustered courage to face the tuxedo problem again. I was to go to a job in London. The pay was low but the expense-account generous. I could travel first-class by ocean liner. This meant "dressing for dinner" in the first-class dining room.

At last I bought a tuxedo, with everything. Including tuxedo shoes. Leaving the haberdashery, I ran into a suave, sophisticated acquaintance. "I've just bought my first tuxedo," I said.

"Never call it a 'tuxedo,'" he said. "The word betrays you as a vulgar bourgeois social climber. The proper terms are 'dinner jacket' and-or 'black tie.'"

I have always been grateful for insults when they were for my own good, so for years thereafter I recoiled whenever I heard some vulgar bourgeois speak of his "tuxedo" and prided myself upon the civilized delicacy with which I invariably said, "Is it black tie?" instead of, "Should I wear a tux?"

Man's social foolishness changes with time. Now I boast that my dinner jacket is an off-the-rack model from a no-prestige haberdashery in North Jersey. This announces that I am too full of savoir-faire to bother having my tailor run up a silk dinner jacket.

Sophisticated men go with the social flow. I, for example, am now shopping for patent leather shoes. If you see me at a bingo parlor wearing a tutu, though, be good enough to tap me on the shoulder, remind me where I come from, and send me on home.

Texas needs governor with vision, but won't get one

Modisett

If there ever has been a time in this state's history when a mandate needed to be issued by the voters to elected representatives in Austin, this is it. The tragedy is that it may not happen.

Texas needs a governor that can accomplish something close to a miracle for the state. The oil industry on which the state has relied for economic strength has been reduced to a mere shadow of its previous stature by the OPEC potentates. Farming and ranching have been decimated by escalating land and equipment prices, and the failed agriculture policy of the past several administrations. Now compounding all the problems, the fiscal crisis raking the state threatens to drag on into the future, reshaping much of the Texas lifestyle.

Texans need a governor who can lead the state away from this morass and give it a vision of the future. Apparently a large number of the state's residents aren't finding that promise in either incumbent Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, or in his main opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican. And when the voters don't find either major candidate appealing, there's always the danger that on election day they'll go bird hunting or do the laundry instead of voting. It's almost reminiscent of the 1924 election, when Texans were faced with a choice between a Ku Klux Klan member or Miriam A. Ferguson, wife of former Gov. "Farmer Jim" Ferguson who had been removed from office by impeachment proceedings. Voters may have grimaced a little, but they finally perceived "Ma" as the lesser of the evils.

Talks with individuals traveling around the state — including candidates for other offices — have confirmed that a segment of the Texas population is neither hot nor cold on either major party's gubernatorial nominee. Rather, those voters are relying on the old political maxim of supporting silently the candidate they perceive as potentially the least damaging.

Mark White reformed the Texas education system, which brought him a degree of support and a hefty helping of animosity. He increased teachers' salaries, but he also gave educators massive ampunts of new paperwork, a bitter teacher competency test and the ire of a large number of parents whose youngsters are involved in football and other extracurricular activities. All in all, White will have difficulty convincing the teachers and parents of the state that he's been looking out for their primary interests.

On the flip side, Bill Clements was a strong pro-business governor immediately prior to White, but his crusty public image has grated across many a Texan's sensibilities. Voters also have a memory problem. When Clements was in office he was perceived as a successful pro-business, pro-oil industry governor. But when the current fiscal crisis reared its ugly head, Clements didn't offer much in the way of suggestions.

With their memories fading rapidly on his strong points and being bolstered negatively by his lack of direction on the fiscal crisis, Clements may have suffered political damage. In fact, a recent issue of The Washington Times Insight magazine noted that White House officials are disappointed with Clements' "bungling" of the Texas economic issue and have all but canceled a last minute appearance by President Reagan in the Lone Star state.

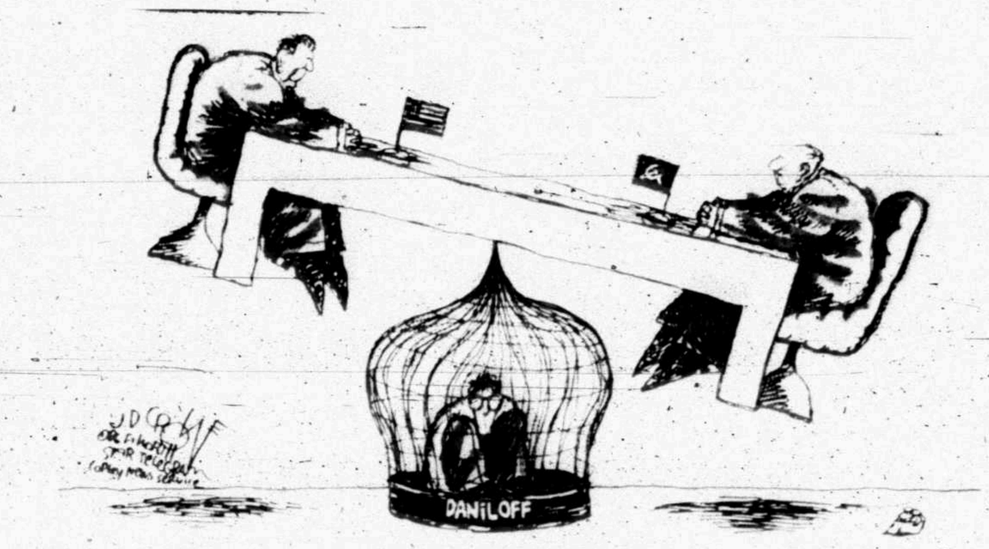

At this point, the governor's race looks like a tossup — as close if not closer than the 1982 race which White defeated Clements by the minute statistical margin of only 230,000 votes. Anyone with the gumption to assert that one or the other candidate has a decided advantage at this point is obviously ignoring the political realities. It's all old hat with the candidates involved and that adds up to sparring matches with nothing new to build voter excitement.

This will not be an election when the winner is an unscarred champion of the common man. That may be what Texas needs, but it doesn't appear to be in the cards.

Oh, Ma Ferguson, where are you when we need you?

Pari-mutuel betting just makes action legal

I am very outraged at what people think of thoroughbred horse owners. I am also angry enough to write this letter and answer a few of them.

First of all, there is nothing wrong with pari-mutuel betting; it only makes betting legal. I keep reading about all the bad things it can bring and nothing much about the good things it can bring. For instance, it takes quite a few people to get one horse ready for racing: first the owner, trainer, groom, jockey, the farmer and the farm store. Without the grain and hay, there would be no horses and, lest we forget, the vet who keeps our horses fit; plus many more. So you see, it will put quite a few people to work.

We all look forward to the Kentucky Derby, which is over a hundred years old. Then comes the Triple Crown wind up — the Belmont Stakes and the Preakness. I don't see any more corruption in these states than is here.

I have been around horses and pari-mutuel betting for many years and I know that I am not sleazy or corrupt or a compulsive gambler. I also don't drink and don't smoke. You can't corrupt anyone who doesn't want to be. These things I am not, and people I know are not. I don't like being referred to as these things by people that don't know me or any horse owner.

Texans, take a good look around you. Almost all horse owners are at tracks out of state. Texas taxes are going to Mexico, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Oklahoma and Louisiana. More than 50 percent of all horses running at these tracks are Texas' owned, bred and trained, and that means our dollars are going to these states when we could keep them here.

If people want to gamble, they go to those tracks or find a bookie; they are pretty common. The bet on football, baseball, hockey, basketball and anything else they find. So don't blame pari-mutuel betting for taking food off the table. I see alcohol, drugs and even cigarettes doing that, and horses run them a second. What you are afraid of, you already have. Make it legal and put the bookies out of business.

We are not second rate people. We are business people that love horses and want to keep them right here.

Real problem is streets of Midland, not drivers

This letter is being written in response to one written by Teresa Kendrick regarding the splash job she received by a sheriff's car. The real problem isn't necessarily the many rude drivers in Midland, but in the way the streets are constructed. The intersection at Carrows Restaurant on Garfield Street is a good example of what is wrong with our street building problem.

First, the ridiculous ditches that are built across many intersections serve no useful purpose and in addition are dangerous. Ever notice all those scrapes on the pavement? If our city officials don't think they are dangerous, I would challenge them to drive their personal cars down Thomason, Illinois, Ward, Neely or any other major thoroughfare at the legal speed limit to see how really bad these intersections are. The sad part is that they are still being built today. I am surprised that the city is not constantly in court defending itself for negligence.

In addition to the stupid ditches, most intersections are built lower than the remainder of the street, making water runoff impossible. This is the real reason for ruined wash jobs. It is a rare occasion that one can drive much over a mile in town without running through standing water.

Most pre-schoolers understand that water runs downhill, but apparently those who build our streets do not.

Maybe Midland should stop taking the low bids for street work as they are not always a bargain. A case in point is "A" Street that did not even one year after major reconstruction, before numerous holes appeared.

Seal-coating also appears to be a waste of money on many streets. Coating streets with a bad foundation is like painting a rotten board. It may look good for a short time, but it is a waste of time. Neely Street was seal-coated about a year ago and the very next day holes were being repaired in the 2900 block.

Synchronizing of traffic signals would also help in prolonging street life. Ever notice how the asphalt bunches up at traffic signals?

There are quite a few other areas that need improvement in Midland streets and one would think that we should have one of the best systems in the country considering all the taxes that are levied for streets or are supposed to be designed for street repair and construction.

The Reporter-Telegram could do the City of Midland a great public service if they would publish a form monthly asking residents for input regarding street conditions and building practices. Bet it would be an eye-opener.

Paper should endorse hometown candidate

I was really shocked to read Bill Modisett's article endorsing Lamar Smith in view of the fact that we have the best qualified candidate to fill the 21st Congressional District seat living right here in Midland.

W.E. "Pete" Snelson has been a Midland resident for 31 years. He has an outstanding record in state government, in education, in civic affairs, in business affairs and in the military service. Irrespective of party affiliation, it's a sad day for Midland when a man of this caliber isn't endorsed by his hometown newspaper.

Robert L. Wood

EDITOR'S NOTE: The article was not an editorial endorsement, but a personal column based on an interview with Smith. A similar column on Snelson had been published the previous week. The newspaper's editorial in the 21st Congressional District race will appear on the editorial page in the next few days.

City manager, traffic engineer don't know law

In his City Sidewalks column in the Reporter-Telegram Sept. 28, Midland city manager Jim Brown briefly mentioned the city's campaign to remove stop and yield signs at certain low volume intersections in certain residential areas of the city. According to Brown, this should provide safer neighborhood traffic with slower speeds.

As part of his rationale for such a statement and for the campaign to remove traffic signs both of which ignore common sense, Brody states, "State law requires a motorist approaching a T intersection on the leg of the T to stop and yield right of way to all vehicles on the through street." The inference is that such a motorist is required to stop as surely as though he had a "stop" sign. This is false. On page three of A Summary of Texas Motor Vehicle Laws it is written, "Drivers must yield right of way to vehicles on through streets or roadways when approaching from a street or roadway which terminates at the intersection." There is no requirement to stop.

Such a misapprehension of the law is shared by Fred McGary, traffic engineer for the City of Midland. McGary has informed me that not only is a driver on the leg of the "T" intersection required to stop, but that he fully expects on its police department to enforce that requirement (after all, he claims, it is in the Texas Drivers Handbook). Again, the section on yield in the current Texas Drivers Handbook the student driver may read, "Situation 7 — T intersection. When approaching an intersection of a through street from a street that ends at the intersection, you should yield the right-of-way to the vehicle on the through street." Again, there is no stated requirement to stop.

Operating under their misconception of the operative traffic law, Brown and McGary have implemented the wholesale removal of stop signs from such "T" intersections. Many of these, such as those along Ward Street, cannot realistically be considered to be "low volume" intersections.

Admittedly, removing traffic controls at a "low volume" intersection does expedite traffic. By doing so, it encourages more traffic. Eventually the intersection will attain a volume of traffic that again requires controls. In the meantime, it is a dangerous, uncontrolled intersection.

Incidentally, the 42-inch diameter white dot that is now painted in the center of some newly uncontrolled intersections is not mentioned in either the summary of Texas Motor Vehicle Laws or the Texas Drivers Handbook.

After several decades of systematic efforts on the part of previous city traffic engineers to enhance neighborhood traffic safety by installing strategically placed control signs, the current city traffic department has embarked on a campaign to erase those signs of progress — and to jeopardize neighborhood residents.

Apparently, our current city traffic experts are more concerned with saving your time than with saving your life.

U.S. can be cautiously optimistic about arms control talks

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Thanks to President Reagan and Secretary of State Shultz, we can be cautiously optimistic about the prospects for some headway in the arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

Averting a dangerous confrontation with Moscow over the Nicholas Daniloff case that could have blocked a Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting, brought the arms talks to a standstill and heightened tension in Soviet-American relations was a major achievement for President Reagan's leadership and Secretary Shultz's diplomatic skill.

As he has done on many occasions since he was Governor of California, our pragmatic president agreed to compromise when it was in the public interest to do so. Both sides made concessions to overcome the problem created by the Soviet seizure of an American journalist in Moscow in retaliation for the arrest in New York of a Soviet spy employed in the United Nations secretariat.

It will long be argued who gained the most in the deal. In my opinion, the winners were the people of this country and the world who are concerned about the danger of a confrontation between the two superpowers that might lead, through miscalculation or otherwise, to nuclear war.

The least that would have happened if the Soviets had subjected the American journalist to trial and possible imprisonment on false espionage charges, and we had done likewise with the real Soviet spy in New York, would have been a halt to progress being made in several areas of the talks on armaments and East-West security measures in Europe. Among the issues on which progress was being made were:

— Reduction of intermediate range nuclear missiles on both sides of the Iron Curtain in Europe. John Wallach, our foreign editor in Washington, reported this week that both governments have been discussing a pact to limit superpower warheads in Europe to 100 on each side. The Soviets presently have 810 warheads targeted on Western Europe. The U.S. has 236 nuclear warheads in cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe targeted on Soviet bloc military targets.

— Monitoring of Warsaw Pact and NATO force movements by observers from each side with some, though not completely adequate, verification measures. Basic Agreement on this issue was recently reached at a European Security Conference in Stockholm, but it awaits final implementation.

— Soviet-American negotiations for a ban on deployment of chemical weapons.

— Strategic Defense. The Soviets have abandoned their original insistence that there could be no agreement on reduction of strategic nuclear missiles unless the United States stopped all research on President Reagan's program to develop a defense against nuclear weapons. They have indicated willingness to agree to continuation of "fundamental research" by both sides, providing the United States agrees to continue adherence for 15 (negotiable) years to the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, which prohibits space weapons.

These are the developments that led President Reagan this week to say: "Chances are better than they have been for years" on reaching some arms control and reduction agreements. They prompted Secretary Shultz to say recently, "We are on the verge of a dramatic success in our foreign policy."

This is what was really at stake in the efforts of the President and Secretary Shultz to negotiate a solution of the Daniloff affair before it derailed the movement underway with the Soviets on nuclear arms talks and European security measures.

Hardliners in the administration, in Congress and in the media were prepared to risk a collapse of the arms talks and a dangerous deterioration in relations with the Soviet Union, to try to stop the Soviet habit of arresting an American citizen in Russia every time we caught a Soviet spy in the U.S.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said no superpower summit meeting was as important as the principle involved in the Soviets seizing an American as a hostage. Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said, "No deal" should be made for release of Daniloff and normal relations with Moscow should be suspended until the journalist was released unconditionally.

Ten days before agreement was reached for Daniloff's release, a prominent Washington commentator, George Will, once a strong supporter of the president and supposedly close friend of the Reagans, wrote in his syndicated column: "When an administration collapses quickly and completely, like a punctured balloon, as the Reagan administration has done in the Daniloff debacle, a reasonable surmise is that the administration, like a balloon, had nothing in it but hot air." Once again a critic of President Reagan has been proved dead wrong. Let's see if Will now has the intellectual honesty to apologize to the president — but don't bet on it.

That such pundits and other critics of the president are out of touch with what a large majority of the American people think was evident in a Gallup poll. Taken last week before Daniloff's release, the poll showed 71 percent of Americans favored a Reagan-Gorbachev summit even if Daniloff remained a hostage in Moscow.

As for making deals with kidnappers, be they in Lebanon or Moscow, when somebody kidnaps your baby, you have to deal with them whether you like it or not.

My own opinion is that the president and Secretary Shultz made a pretty good deal. In addition to getting Daniloff released, they secured a promise of freedom for one of Russia's great heroes, Yuri Orlof, and four other Soviet dissidents. Orlof, founder of a group of Soviet citizens who kept the free world informed of Soviet violations of the Helsinki human rights agreement, was imprisoned, tortured, held for long periods in solitary confinement, exiled to Siberia and his health ruined. On the day after tomorrow, he and his wife are scheduled to leave the Soviet Union for the free world.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Director praised for text book revision

By H.A. TUCK

Quinn Carroll, director of the college's Radiography Program, has drawn high praise for his revision of a textbook. The Professional Review section of the "Radiologic Technology" magazine wrote of the first revision of "Fuch's Principles of Radiographic Exposure, Processing and Quality Control" that "Carroll has done a masterful job in constructing a volume consistent with modern instructional methodologies while adding technological advancements in the field to the classic radiographic technique text of the profession...there is no doubt that Carroll has restored "Fuchs' Principles" to its position as the premier technique text in the profession."

Carroll did much of his editing while at Laramie County Community College before coming to Midland to start the radiography program in 1985.

At 1:30 p.m. today the Chaparral women's tennis players take on some of the local professionals at the Midland Country Club courts. It's open to the public for those who would like to see some great tennis action.

Since the MC women practice frequently against their male teammates, they're not particularly intimidated by men and quite often win. We're grateful to Derek Edmonds, MCC professional and former Midland College All-American, for arranging these matches and those last week when the men's team took on the local professionals. MC won three of the five matches played.

This will be a final tune-up for the women in preparation for the Rolex Southwestern Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association Regional Tournament in Abilene. Both men and women are competing. Midland College won both men's and women's singles titles last year and advanced to the finals of the national small college tournament before losing.

Special thanks are extended to those who put on the annual Midland Jazz Party for arranging the concert on campus last weekend. It's greatly appreciated by those who attend each year. We also tip our hat to Greentree Country Club members for allowing MC to host its conference tournament on their fine course last Saturday.

ROOFING PROBLEMS

Unlike human skin, the roof skin of a house is not particularly flexible. As the foundation and framing settle and split, seams in the roof can be lifted or pulled apart. Roofing also is incapable of sealing itself. When seams open or areas start to deteriorate, the problems worsen at an ever-increasing rate as weather widens breaks in the protective skin. In addition, a majority of new homes are not built with steeply sloped roofs that shed water quickly. Most are walkable, that is, sloped gently enough so that workmen can lay the shingles without the aid of scaffolding equipment. Conditions being equal, as the slope or pitch of the roof decreases, the potential for problems increase.

If you're a veteran, and you're planning home improvements, you should know that we are an approved contractor for the Texas Veterans' Home Improvement program. Music festival will benefit single parents group

From Staff Reports

A music festival benefiting a non-profit organization that assists single parents will be held at 7 p.m. Oct. 24 at the Midland Center.

The festival will help raise funds for Project Self-Sufficiency, a program that helps low-income single parents break the poverty cycle.

Through the program parents are helped with housing assistance, child care, transportation, counseling, basic education, job training and placement.

While a grant has helped 28 women and two men in Midland with subsidized housing, all the other activities rely on volunteers, said Midland County Housing Director Jerrie Westmoreland.

Right now, we're relying on volunteers and it's going very slowly. It's not meeting the needs they have, Ms. Westmoreland said.

With fundraising events and foundation money, the Project Self-Sufficiency task force hopes to set up an office with a director at a cost of about $25,000 to coordinate the program, she said.

The program also hopes to set up some scholarship money for parents wanting to further their education, she said.

An emphasis on family entertainment at the fundraising event will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 24, with the festival running until midnight at the Midland Center.

Tickets are $6 each and $5 for senior citizens and students. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Former teacher acquitted of firearms charge

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Houston teacher once convicted of using his seventh-grade students to fill out false records for his gun dealership was acquitted of a firearms charge.

In an order released Friday, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda did not detail his reasons for clearing Gerald T. Lassiter of being a felony charge of possession of a firearm.

Lassiter, 34, was charged in May with buying three revolvers even though he was barred by a previous conviction from possessing firearms.

Lassiter was convicted in February of using his students to fill out firearms forms and of attaching a list of weapons to a form already filled out by a purchaser.

HISD officially fires teachers who flunked TECAT

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Independent School District trustees have officially fired teachers who failed the state-mandated competency test, but the teachers may reapply for teaching positions once they complete the test requirement.

Trustees had been criticized by teacher groups for their tardiness in finalizing Friday's firings because it prevented out-of-work teachers from receiving unemployment or retirement benefits.

Gayle Fallon, director of the Houston Federation of Teachers, said she received numerous calls from teachers pleading for help because they could not receive any benefits without an official letter of termination.

Pasadena man sentenced 99 years for rape conviction

HOUSTON (AP) — A Pasadena man was sentenced to 99 years in prison after being convicted of raping and beating a Houston woman outside her apartment complex.

State District Judge Joseph Guarino on Friday gave Lloyd Neel "Bubba" Smith Jr., 23, the maximum sentence after Smith apologized to the judge for any inconvenience his week-long trial had caused.

Despite the testimony of Smith's sister and brother-in-law that he was home asleep March 8-9 when the rape occurred, a jury convicted him Tuesday of sexual assault.

Prosecutor David Brothers said the woman, an illiterate 23-year-old was dragged into a field near her apartment complex where she was raped several times. She also was bitten, beaten and kicked in the pelvis, he said.

Cartoonists oppose shrinking strips' sizes

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Shrinking comic strips in the nation's newspapers make trouble for older Americans, says "Beetle Bailey" creator Mort Walker, so he's leading a petition drive among his colleagues to do something about it.

Walker contends newspapers are more concerned about the cost of newsprint and are failing to consider the needs of their readers.

"It's like drawing a comic strip on the head of a pin," he said. "You can hardly see what's going on. It's restrictive and destroying our work."

Walker has collected petition signatures from 40 cartoonists, including Charles Schulz of "Peanuts," Garry Trudeau of "Doonesbury," Dik Browne of "Hagar the Horrible," Jim Davis of "Garfield" and Bil Keane of "The Family Circus."

They want all strips displayed at least 6 7/16 inches wide. The so-called "Committee for Limiting the Size Reduction of Features" plans to formally make its makes its proposal Oct. 31 in Manhattan. That's when a panel of cartoonists, newspaper editors and cartoon syndicate heads will discuss the issue at a meeting sponsored by the Newspaper Features Council Inc.

If editors fail to comply with the artists' requests, catoonists might force the issue by not allowing publications to use their cartoons unless the size requirements are met, Walker told The Telegram of Bridgeport in a copyright story published Friday.

Schulz, who will not attend the Oct. 31 meeting, said he doesn't support dictating size requirements to editors, but he does oppose the shrinking size of comic strips.

"The biggest pity is that we no longer have room for intricate drawing," Shultz said. "That's a shame. There's nothing to look at anymore. It's horrible. I've seen some papers where the strips were virtually unreadable."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Members of Quiet Riot and other rock 'n' rollers famous for headbanging music are turning out messages to help keep their fans from being banged up in automobile accidents.

Mary Branson, a safety specialist at Indiana University Medical Center, has persuaded members of Quiet Riot and Bon Jovi to perform in the spots for the state's growing campaign to "buckle up."

"They were all very cooperative. People all said, 'Yes, we want to do something to help the kids.' They never asked, 'What's in it for us?'" Ms. Branson said.

In one of the ads Quiet Riot filmed Thursday in Indianapolis, drummer Frank Banali looks into the camera and said:

"Did you know that auto accidents are the No. 1 cause of death among Indiana teenagers? Many of these deaths could have been prevented if more teen-agers wore their seat belts.

"Buckle up, Indiana teenagers. Then turn on the radio!" he said.

Richie Bozzett, road manager for Bon Jovi, said the band has filmed several ads for anti-drunken driving efforts, but this was the first time it had worked on a seat-belt campaign, he said.

"The kids they're trying to appeal to, that's our market exactly," he said. "We're concerned about them."

Seat belts for front-seat occupants will become the law in Indiana next July.

Bears get back fumbled TD, down Cougars

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

WACO (AP) — The 13th-ranked Baylor Bears died by a bizarre 99-yard fumble return for a touchdown two weeks ago against Southern California. They lived by one Saturday night against the Houston Cougars.

Reserve end Keith Rose plucked a fumble out of the air and returned it 45 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter to rally the Bears to a 27-13 Southwest Conference victory over the Cougars.

"I could see the play coming my way and the ball just kind of popped up in the air off somebody's back," Rose said. "The next thing I knew I was in the end zone with a bunch of guys piling on me."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said it was poetic justice after the Southern Cal game which Baylor lost 17-14 on Tim McDonald's 99-yard fumble return.

"I told the players after the USC game to keep faith and we would get one for ourselves," Teaff said. "Our defense was absolutely sensational."

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said "Baylor just wore us out down the stretch but that fumble was a mighty big play."

Baylor increased its overall record to 4-1 and 2-0 in SWC play while Houston dropped to 1-3 and 0-1.

The Bears, behind 13-3 at halftime, trailed 13-10 when Houston quarterback Gerald Landry tried to feed the ball to fullback Sloan Hood. The ball bounced off Hood's back and found the waiting arms of the seldom-used Rose, who ran untouched for the score with 10:58 to go.

Ironically, the Bears lost 17-14 to Southern California two weeks ago on a similar play when the Trojans' Tim McDonald returned a fumble 99 yards for a touchdown.

The Bears, who allowed Houston only six first downs, struck for 10 more points after Rose's run on Terry Syler's 31-yard field goal and Jeff Murray's 7-yard scoring run.

The 20-point underdog Cougars parlayed two Baylor bumbles into a 13-3 halftime lead.

Linebacker Robby Brezina's recovery of Derrick McAdoo's fumble at the Baylor 7 set up quarterback Mark Davis' 6-yard scoring run in the first period.

Baylor retaliated with Syler's 29-yard field goal. But Bears quarterback Cody Carlson's wild pitchout was recovered by Johnny Jackson to set up Chip Browndyke's 39-yard field goal seven plays later for a 10-3 Houston lead.

A 38-yard Davis to Jet Brown pass to the Baylor 15 positioned the Cougars for a 31-yard Browndyke field goal late in the first half.

Baylor took the second half kickoff and drove 80 yards in 15 plays for Charles Perry's 1-yard touchdown run to narrow Houston's lead to 13-10. A critical roughing-the-kicker call on Kevin Tuggle kept the Baylor drive alive at the Bears' 44.

After Rose's run made it 17-13, Baylor linebacker Ray Berry caused Landry to fumble and Aaron Grant recovered at the Cougar 18.

Syler kicked a 31-yard field goal to make it 20-13 and Murray's touchdown run capped a 38-yard drive.

A crowd of 34,000 watched the nationally televised (ESPN) game. It marked the first time Baylor had ever beaten Houston in two consecutive seasons.

Baylor is 4-0-1 against the Cougars in SWC play.

Murray leads A&M to 'Vick'tory, 45-8

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M overcame a flurry of penalties and thrashed Texas Tech 45-8 on the passing of Kevin Murray and the running of Roger Vick on Saturday — signaling that it is ready to defend its Southwest Conference football title.

A&M, ranked No. 14 nationally, won its third straight game after an opening loss to Louisiana State and started the SWC race in impressive fashion before a home crowd of 62,876.

Murray threw two touchdown passes and Vick ran for three scores.

The Aggies were their own worst enemies. They were plagued by 17 penalties for 152 yards.

But even when A&M found the going rough, Tech's Red Raiders couldn't take advantage. The Aggie defense shut Tech down, not allowing a score until the game's closing moments.

"At the start of the game, I thought we would self-destruct, but the defense came through and gave us a chance to win the game," A&M coach Jackie Sherrill said. "Defensively, I was pleased with the way we played."

Murray said, "I know the defense is going to go out and do their part. It's just a matter of our doing ours."

Tech, 2-3 for the year, has lost both of its conference games — 45-14 to Baylor and 45-8 to A&M. The other loss was a rout at the hands of No. 1 Miami.

"It's a challenge every week, especially when you get beat the week before by a big score," Tech Coach David McWilliams said.

Murray threw two touchdown passes, and Vick ran for three touchdowns.

The game matched Tech's nationally ranked passing offense against A&M's No. 10 defense but it was a mismatch as A&M held Tech to 69 yards total offense in the first half in rolling to a 24-0 lead.

Vick, a 221-pounder who had been out of action with a dislocated finger, ran 11 yards with a pitchout for A&M's first touchdown with 4:53 left in the first quarter and broke off right tackle for 25 yards to score just before the end of the period. His third touchdown, making the score 37-0, was a 1-yard run with 12:17 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Murray, a junior with 37 career touchdown passes, flipped a screen pass to running back Keith Woodside, who sprinted 60 yards for A&M's third touchdown with 11:53 remaining in the second quarter.

Scott Slater ended A&M's first half scoring with a 22-yard field goal after A&M stalled at the Tech 6-yard-line.

Murray threw four yards to sub fullback Ira Valentine for his second touchdown pass with 4:53 left in the third quarter, and No. 2 quarterback Craig Stump relieved him on A&M's next possession.

Tech's only score came on a 1-yard plunge by quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver with 48 seconds to go in the game. Isaac Garnett caught a deflected pass for a two-point conversion.

A&M was so comfortably ahead that it let Adam Bob, a 226-pounder listed as a third-team linebacker, carry from the ball from the Tech 2 late in the third quarter but he fumbled and Tech's Keith Henderson recovered.

With 4:04 remaining in the fourth quarter, however, Bob got the call again and slashed over the left side from the 2 for A&M's final touchdown.

Tech finished with 237 yards total offense, 150 fewer than its average, while A&M rolled up 522 yards total offense, 125 above its average.

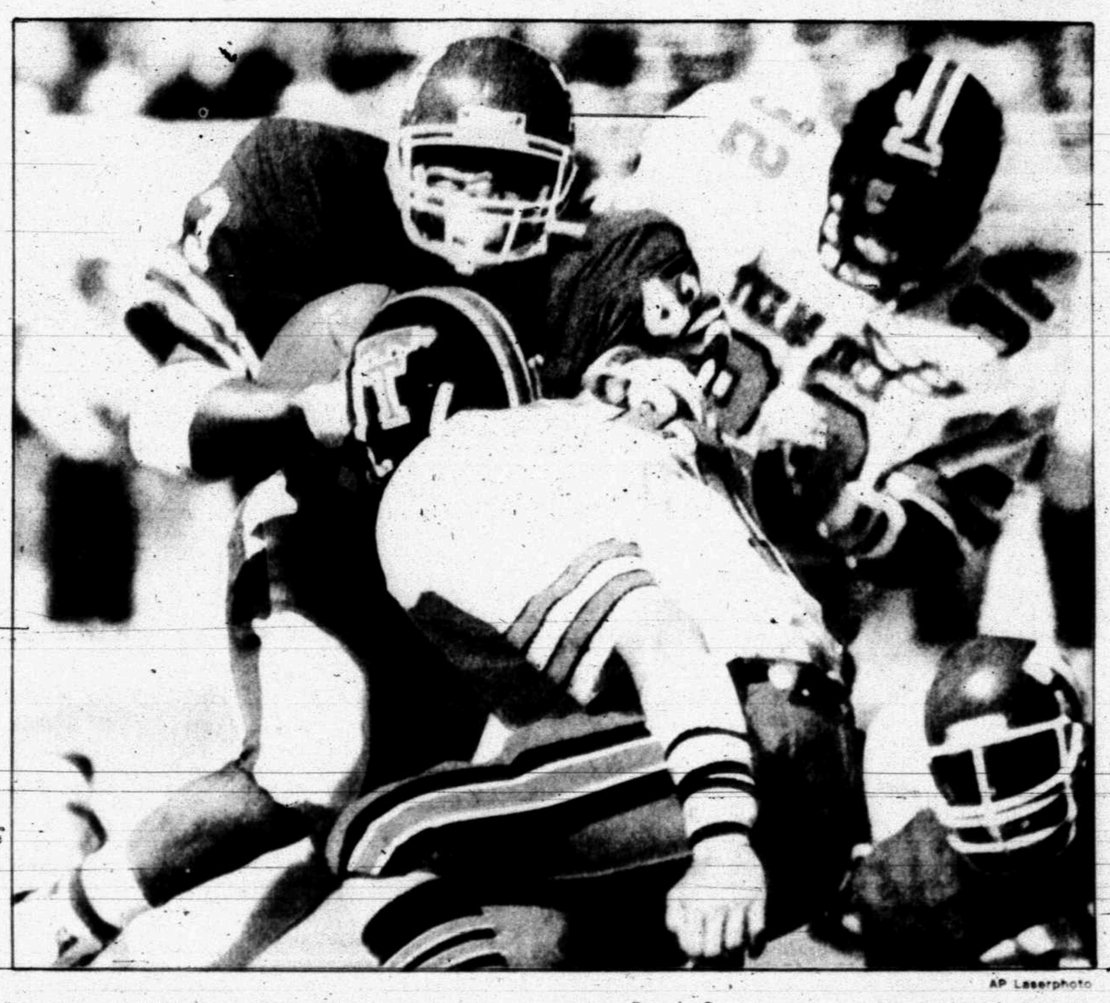

Vick finished with 26 carries for 104 yards and three touchdowns.

Former 'Cat guides Hogs to 34-17 win

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Greg Thomas said his coach Ken Hatfield was the difference Saturday in the eight-ranked Razorbacks' 34-17 victory over Texas Christian University.

"When everyone else was tired in the fourth quarter, even though he had played the entire game, he still had that wiggle in him that it takes to make big plays," Hatfield said.

Thomas, from San Angelo Central High, raced 42 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown that secured the victory. Then Thomas, who completed 14 of 20 passes for 198 yards, added a 25-yard scoring run with 2:45 remaining.

Thomas' touchdown that put Arkansas ahead 27-17 ended a 95-yard drive. "The 95-yard drive made the difference in the game," Hatfield said.

The Arkansas defense, riddled for 192 yards in the first half and 54 yards by Tony Darthard on TCU's first play of the second half, took control for the final 29 minutes.

Darthard's run ended at the Arkansas 8, and TCU had an excellent chance to expand on its 17-13 lead. But, on second down, Odis Lloyd stripped Tony Jeffrey of the ball and Tony Cherico recovered at the Arkansas 4. The Razorbacks got out of that trap when Thomas showed a nice touch on a 34-yard pass to J.R. Brown.

"We fumbled the ball away, we don't cover a fumble on the other end and we don't stop them in their own end on third and long," said TCU Coach Jim Wacker. "To not score inside the 10-yard line, to not hold them inside their 10-yard line, those are the things that win and lose football games."

Jeffrey, the top rusher in the country with an average of 169 yards per game, gained 53 yards on nine attempts.

The Razorbacks covered 49 yards for the go-ahead touchdown after Cherico and Wayne Martin dumped the Frogs for losses on two straight plays. After a 2-yard loss, Thomas got the drive started by throwing 20 yards to James Shibest. The Razorbacks then ran the ball eight straight times to cover the final 30 yards, Joe Johnson scoring from the 1.

Marshall Foreman, Arkansas' 6-foot-8 fullback, rushed for 101 on 31 carries.

Miami operates on hapless Northern Illinois

Associated Press

MIAMI — Vinny Testaverde passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in the first half Saturday night as Miami celebrated its new No. 1 status with a 34-0 mauling of winless Northern Illinois.

Testaverde threw 56 yards to Brian Blades and 20 yards to Michael Irvin and ran a 4-yard bootleg for another TD. Testaverde finished with 12 completions in 16 attempts for 208 yards with no interceptions in slightly more than one half of play.

The Hurricanes, 5-0, also scored on runs of 27 yards by Melvin Bratton and 1 yard by Darryl Oliver.

Testaverde directed the Hurricanes to their final touchdown on the first possession of the second half before giving way to backup Geoff Torretta with 12 minutes left in the period.

Miami, which moved to the top of the AP rankings after last week's 28-16 victory over previously top-ranked Oklahoma, was efficient. The Hurricanes used less than five minutes combined on first-half scoring drives of 59, 53, 77 and 35 yards.

Alabama 28, Notre Dame 10

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Second-ranked Alabama ended two decades of frustration at the hands of Notre Dame and defeated the Fighting Irish as Greg Richardson returned a punt 66 yards and Mike Shula passed for three touchdowns.

Shula's scoring passes of 52 and 22 yards to flanker Al Bell and 11 to tight end Howard Cross enabled Alabama to beat Notre Dame for the first time in five meetings.

Alabama is 5-0 this season and unbeaten in its last 11 games. Notre Dame is 1-3 in its first season under Coach Lou Holtz.

Shula's first touchdown pass to Bell and the one to Cross came in the second period and capped Alabama's only offensive thrusts of the first half during which the Crimson Tide was outgained 226 yards to 149.

But the kicking game hurt Notre Dame. Besides Richardson's punt return that gave Alabama a 7-0 lead at 9:37 of the first period, Notre Dame's John Carney missed a 46-yard field goal attempt and the Irish got away with a 10-yard punt.

Bell caught five passes for 99 yards and also carried twice on reverses for 16 and 24 yards.

Nebraska 27, S. Carolina 24

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Quarterback Steve Taylor hit Todd Millikan on an 11-yard touchdown pass with 1:26 remaining and the Nebraska defense snuffed a late South Carolina drive as the third-ranked Cornhuskers came from behind for a victory.

Taylor, who passed for 196 yards while hitting nine of 19, took advantage of a South Carolina turnover on the Gamecocks' 26 to march the Cornhuskers, 4-0, to the end zone in just three plays.

South Carolina, which fell to 1-4 but gave Nebraska all it wanted, had taken a 24-20 lead with 4:23 left when freshman running back Harold Green scored his third touchdown on a seven-yard run.

The Cornhuskers needed only four plays to get back into the South Carolina end zone, scoring to make the margin 20-17 on a 57-yard run by sophomore wing back Dana Brinson.

Michigan 34, Wisconsin 17

MADISON, Wis. — Bo Schembechler got career coaching victory No. 200 as Michigan quarterback Jim Harbaugh passed for a touchdown and ran for another in the fourth-ranked Wolverines' Big Ten victory over Wisconsin.

Thomas Wilcher rushed for 74 yards on 22 carries and scored on first-half touchdown runs of 5 and 2 yards as Michigan took a 17-3 halftime lead.

Harbaugh, a senior, completed 15 of 24 passes for 310 yards. It was the first time any Michigan quarterback had thrown for more than 300 yards in a game.

Harbaugh's 3-yard play-action pass to fullback Gerald White on the opening drive of the second half made it 24-3. A big play was a 62-yard pass-play to freshman wide receiver Greg McMurtry, giving Michigan first-and-goal on the Wisconsin 4.

On Michigan's second possession of the half, Harbaugh took the Wolverines 90 yards in 11 plays and scored on a 4-yard TD run for 31-3 lead.

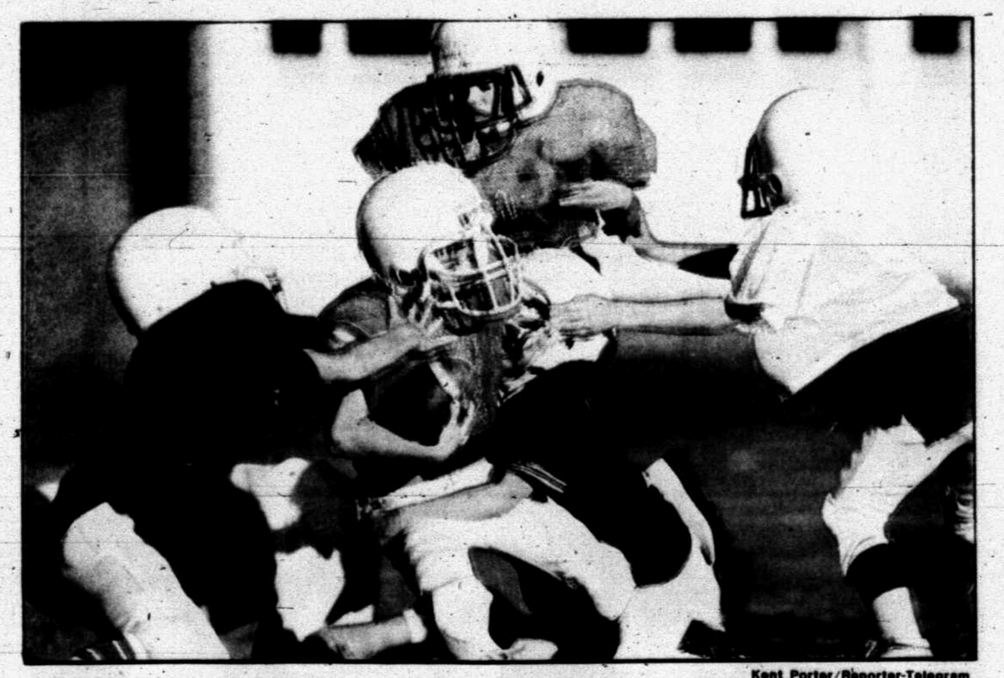

Wisconsin dropped to 1-4, while Michigan improved to 4-0.

Penn State 31, Rutgers 6

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Quarterback John Shaffer threw for one touchdown and set up two more as fifth-ranked and unbeaten Penn State defeated Rutgers in a sloppily played game on a wet field.

Shaffer, who played three quarters, completed 13 of 20 passes for 154 yards and ran for 39 more on six carries as the Nittany Lions, 4-0, handed the Scarlet Knights, 3-1-1, their first defeat.

Owls nearly catch 'Horns sleeping

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' 17-14 victory over Rice in their Southwest Conference opener Saturday wasn't the type of momentum the Longhorns had anticipated before an annual showdown against Oklahoma.

"It was probably a matter of us looking ahead," Texas linebacker Lee Brockman said. "You try to convince yourself all week not to do that but it looks like that's what we did."

Texas plays its annual match against the Sooners in the Cotton Bowl Saturday and the Longhorns wanted to have a big game against the Owls.

But it took a 34-yard field goal by Jeff Ward, the 51st of his career, in the third quarter to pull it out.

Rice kept the heavily favored Longhorns off balance with a timely passing attack led by Mark Comalander and tight end Ken Major, who caught a career high 9 passes for 109 yards.

The Owl offense out-gained the Longhorns in total yardage 315 to 302.

"It was not pretty but it will go down as a win," Texas Coach Fred Akers said. "We weren't as ready at the start of the game as Rice was, and we had to get ready during the game. But I was proud of the way our team responded."

ERIC SCHURER

Winning, not pitching is key to MVP honors

I'm not one to publicly acknowledge off-handed slights, even when they appear in print from your superiors, but in this case, rebuttal is certainly necessary.

Ted Battles, esteemed sports editor at the MRT, in a recent column — appearing on my day off in hopes that it would escape these eagle eyes, no doubt — made certain statements, nay accusations leveled in this direction. The remarks were made pertaining to the current practice of selecting MVPs in major league baseball.

The idea that position players deserve the award at the expense of pitchers is one that I do stand behind — with reservations.

Those reservations being in cases like this: A pitcher compiles magnificent numbers along the lines of 31 wins, six losses — and leads his team to a title; a pitcher goes 24-8 with a 1.82 ERA — and leads his team to a title; a pitcher records 28 saves, figuring in two-thirds of his team victories and leads them to a split-season title; a pitcher converts 32 of 33 save opportunities — and leads his team to a title; a pitcher goes 25-4, with 14 wins coming after his teams losses — and leads his team to a title.

That is to say, not a pitcher who receives the largest media hype since the "Reggie Bar," whose rookie baseball card rivals blue-chip stock in resale value — and leads his team to a second-place finish.

The operative phrase, as you may have noticed, is leading a team to a title. Any title.

In post-war days, only eight pitchers have earned the award — four in each league. Their teams all won either a pennant or a division title.

MVPs are winners, they play on winning teams. They make the difference between a team that contends and wins, and one that just pretends.

The fact that Boston lost last year with Jim Rice and Wade Boggs and won this year with Roger Clemens, means little. The fact is, that Boston did have Clemens last season until August, when as per usual the Bosox were far out of the race.

What matters is what Clemens, or any other player, does for a team in the year they win. What is it that pushes a team over the hump of mediocrity?

It isn't easy to pinpoint. If it was, there would be no argument about MVPs, it would be obvious.

But Clemens and his strikeout magic can certainly lay claim to Boston's meteoric rise to the top.

So with the question decided in the American League in Mr. Clemens' favor, let's look at the other league where Mr. Battles copped out, refusing to make a choice.

The debate rages over whether one of the Mets' media darlings, Gary Carter or Keith Hernandez, or Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt is deserving of the award.

Certainly Schmidt's numbers are convincing. As of Saturday, 37 homers, 119 RBI — both major league highs — and nearly flawless play at third base.

But one look at the Phillies place in the standings is enough to disqualify him, in my book. How valuable can you be when you're 20 games behind?

Carter and Hernandez also have some interesting numbers. But where would the Mets be this year without either of them? The answer is about 8-10 games in front of the Phillies.

The logical choice is Glenn Davis. Not only do his stats measure up to the other candidates, 30 HRs and 97 RBI, but his presence changes the Astros' complexion.

With Davis in the lineup, the Astros are transformed from a Punch-n-Judy outfit to a legitimate titlist, one with a good chance at knocking off those Mets.

But sadly, Davis' chances are slim. Perhaps his only hope is that the writers from the media centers will split their votes and Davis will win by default.

The choice for Clemens in the AL should be an easy one.

Oh by the way, the players whose stats quoted above are, in order: Denny McClain, Detroit, 1968; Vida Blue, Oakland, 1971; Rollie Fingers, Milwaukee, 1981; Willie Hernandez, Detroit, 1984.

TED BATTLES

Let Good Times be remembered

It's there waiting for all of us, but the way John Redfern, Jr., left this world made it just that much more difficult to accept. An automobile accident seems so premature, at any age.

I didn't see John all that often, maybe two or three times a year, but I always knew he was there. I think it was that way for a lot of people who have been around Midland for any length of time. If there was anything he didn't have a hand in, I don't what it was.

He is credited with being the father of Midland Little League baseball. He was more than that, of course, he was the one responsible for its evolution into the Midland Junior Baseball Association, which not only provided baseball for the kids eight to 12, but took 'em right through their teens with organized programs.

IT WAS the annual voluntary contributions through the Dads Club that provided the funds for the MJBA's success. The money raised by the Dads; and you really didn't even have to be a father of a participant to participate, made up the costs that token fees failed to cover.

I guess the years that John was deeply and actively involved in the program, it was the best organized, most efficient program for juniors in the city. Somehow it always seemed a reflection of Redfern the oil man, as well.

Redfern took his baseball seriously, pro and otherwise. They used to tell the story about how John, playing nursemaid to an oil well near Lubbock or Amarillo, couldn't stand the suspense any longer. He jumped into the car and drove to Pecos where one of the Midland teams was involved in a playoff game, figuring, perhaps, and logically so, that the well would arrive whether he was there or not.

JOHN'S OTHER side was his involvement as a trustee of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. I was never sure whether John loved RPI or hockey more.

Everytime his school played mine in hockey or football, he'd send a clipping. Of late, the clippings brought more bad news than good, especially since RPI won the NCAA hockey championship a couple of years ago, although Redfern always claimed they never took the sport that seriously at the Troy, N.Y. school and really couldn't compete with the Big Boys.

Once my school beat RPI 80-0 or 80-6 in football, a victory I never felt particularly proud of. It must have been during that 40-plus game losing streak the Engineers suffered through.

My school eventually got ambitious and abandoned old friends like Middlebury, Norwich, Union, Springfield, Rochester, St. Lawrence, Clarkson Tech, Bowdoin, Bates, Colby and, yes, RPI, for a more ambitious schedule.

During one particularly distressing season among "more suitable opposition," John saw his chance to have some fun. He offered to use his influence to get a game RPI, the one we'd beaten 80-0.

During that 40-game RPI losing streak, a Saturday when I was scheduled to cover a game at Tech, for some reason I left instructions to be sure, whatever happened, to get the RPI score in the paper if they won.

RPI won and the score made the paper, but instead of RPI, it was RIP, which probably was more appropriate anyway.

Instead of a funeral, they held a wake for John. Someone said he left instructions that he didn't want any mourning over his passing. He wanted, instead, his friends to gather and remember the good times, and so they did.

Ironicallu, that was the night he had tickets to see the Great Gretzky in Dallas' Reunion arena.

Navratilova survives pain, Garrison to gain finals

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Martina Navratilova overcame a sprained ankle and some aggressive playing from Zina Garrison to move into the final round of the Virginia Slims of New Orleans women's tennis tournament with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 victory Saturday.

The win sets up the championship match between Navratilova, the No. 1 seed, and Pam Shriver, who entered the tournament seeded second. Shriver defeated Gabriela Sabatini 7-6 (7-3), 6-3 in the other semifinal.

Navratilova had to overcome a gritty perfomance by Garrison, who has never defeated the Fort Worth, Texas, native in 15 attempts.

Garrison surprised Navratilova in the second set, breaking her serve in the first game and holding service throughout to win the match 6-4.

Garrison, who said she was playing with relaxed intensity, admitted her success against Navratilova was a mixed blessing.

"It kind of froze me. I never was successful against her before. I got a little over anxious. The shots were there, but everyone I hit was long," she said.

Lady Bulldogs own 5-0 volleyball mark

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's bid for a District 4-5A volleyball title stayed on track at the MHS gym Saturday afternoon with a 15-11, 5-15, 15-6 victory over Odessa High in a match that won't draw rave reviews, but got the job done anyway.

The Bulldogs now own a perfect 5-0 record in 4-5A with one game left in the first half of play and it now looks like it would take a dive off the high board into an empty swimming pool for MHS to stay out of the state playoffs in 1986.

To be quite frank, the Bulldogs didn't play very well in this outing against the 2-4 Bronchos, but good teams find a way to win and MHS did that Saturday.

In the first set, MHS ran to a 7-1 lead before settling for a 15-11 verdict when Drusilla Wyatt served a winner that couldn't be returned.

OHS forced a third set by winning a 15-5 decision in the second game when MHS could generate no offense. OHS' Connie Kruse, who may be the hardest spiker in the league, served seven straight points to erase an early 3-0 lead by the Bulldogs. Briana Haggard also had five straight serves for points in that set.

But the Bulldogs answered in the decisive set when Erin Allen served seven straight points to open the set and an ace by Wyatt ended MHS' 15-6 victory.

"We just told ourselves that we couldn't get down after that loss in the second set," said Allen. "Hopefully, the seven straight points got us going. We got all excited after that.

"We play Cooper Tuesday and they played good against San Angelo, so we're going to have to work hard and get ready for that one so we can finish the first half undefeated."

The set-spike combination of Theresa Brown and Amy Cumings was spectacular at times for the Bulldogs, but nothing was consistent.

"We aren't as satisfied with this win as some we've had in the past," noted MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "However, Odessa High always gives us a good game. I was just pleased that our girls came back and won the match. Any victory is important for us right now."

The league is looking more and more like a two-team race. San Angelo ran its loop mark to 4-1 Saturday with a 15-6, 15-12 straight set match win against Midland Lee Saturday.

That game was a chance for Lee to vault back into the playoff hunt, but the Rebels left San Angelo with a 2-3 league mark with Abilene High left on the first half schedule Tuesday.

MHS and San Angelo are already a full two games ahead of the field. All other teams have at least three losses. It may not be long before these two teams start preparing for the playoffs.

In junior varsity action, the MHS JV lost a 15-8, 15-11 to Odessa High.

Another injury bruises Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Rich Gedman, the Boston Red Sox' hard-hitting catcher, suffered an injured right shoulder Saturday when hit by a foul tip in the second inning of a game against the New York Yankees.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, Boston's team physician, ordered Gedman to a hospital for X-rays. There was no immediate report on the extent of the injury.

Gedman, hitting .258 with 16 home runs and 65 runs batted in, was struck on the shoulder when New York's Dave Winfield foul-tipped a 1-1 pitch.

Gedman was playing in his 135th game of the season. His loss would be a major blow to Boston's hopes 'n the American League Championship.

The officials marked off 17 penalties for 188 yards as the players sloshed and slipped on the field made slick by intermittent rain the past few days. Penn State was assessed 102 yards on nine penalties and Rutgers 86 on eight.

Penn State made it 17-0 with 1:58 left in the half, driving 50 yards to the Rutgers 27. Three plays lost five yards and Massimo Manca kicked a 51-yard field goal.

Oklahoma 56, Kansas St. 10

NORMAN, Okla. — Backup quarterback Eric Mitchel rushed for 126 yards, scored two touchdowns and passed for another as sixth-ranked Oklahoma defeated Kansas State in the Big Eight opener for both teams.

Mitchel, starting in place of Jamelle Holieway, who was nursing a bruised shoulder, became the first Oklahoma back this year to rush for more than 100 yards in a game. He carried the ball 12 times before leaving the game after three quarters.

Mitchel's backup, Glenn Sullivan, scored two of Oklahoma's three touchdowns in the fourth quarter when the Sooners substituted freely.

The victory was Oklahoma's third in four games. Kansas State dropped to 1-4.

Mitchel directed a 28-0 Oklahoma burst in the first 17 minutes of play. He scored the Sooners' second touchdown on a 54-yard sprint around right end, then added a 3-yard run that gave the Sooners a 28-10 halftime lead.

Auburn 55, W. Carolina 6

AUBURN, Ala. — Reserves James Joseph, Reggie Ware and Reggie Slack each had a touchdown as No. 7 Auburn piled up 41 points in the first half and rolled to a 55-6 victory Saturday over Western Carolina.

A stingy Auburn defense forced six turnovers and scored two touchdowns of its own — one on a fumble recovery in the end zone by tackle Nate Hill and another when tackle Malcolm McCary picked off a tipped pass and went 25 yards for the score.

The Tigers, 4-0, got on the board when Chris Knapp kicked the first of two field goals, a 44-yarder.

The Tigers iced the game with 24 second quarter points.

Iowa 24, Michigan St. 21

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Backup quarterback Tom Poholsky passed for 240 yards and two touchdowns while the Iowa defense forced five Michigan State turnovers — including the clincher with 1:25 remaining — as the 11th-ranked Hawkeyes beat the 17th-ranked Spartans 24-21 Saturday in the Big Ten.

Michigan State quarterback Dave Yarema, fighting the clock, darkness and rain, drove the Spartans to the Hawkeyes' 4-yard line in the waning minutes.

But Iowa cornerback Ken Sims intercepted a pass intended for tight end Mike Sargent in the end zone with 1:25 left and the Hawkeyes ran out the clock to preserve the victory.

Iowa, which recovered two fumbles, intercepted three Yarema passes and sacked him three times, improved to 4-0 while the Spartans evened their record at 2-2.

The score was tied 14-14 at the half but Iowa took the third-quarter kickoff and drove 78 yards in six plays as Poholsky connected with split end Jim Mauro on a 50-yard TD pass play.

Then the Spartans went 61 yards in seven plays, using just 2:30, as Yarema and flanker Mark Ingram teamed for their third TD pass of the day, an 8-yard toss with 4:15 remaining.

Washington 50, California 18

SEATTLE — Chris Chandler passed for three touchdowns and the 12th-ranked Washington Huskies intercepted six California passes and recovered three fumbles in a Pac-10 victory.

Chandler, a junior, threw scoring passes of 43 and 24 yards to Lonzell Hill in the opening quarter and also passed 5 yards to tight end Rod Jones for a touchdown in the third quarter.

Strong safety Darryl Hall ran back a Kevin Brown pass interception 37 yards, one of the nine Washington takeaways, for a touchdown in the third quarter.

Washington, 3-1, bounced back from a 20-10 loss to USC last weekend in its first Pac-10 game of the season. Cal dropped to 1-3 and 1-1 in the conference.

The Golden Bears played without their star sophomore halfback, Marc Hicks, who missed the game with a knee injury suffered in a loss to San Jose State last weekend. But Hicks' replacement, Oklahoma transfer Chris Richards, accounted for Cal's first touchdown on a 67-yard run in the second quarter.

Arizona St. 16, UCLA 9

PASADENA, Calif. — Jeff Van Raaphorst threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Bruce Hill with 14:24 left to play to put 16th-ranked Arizona State ahead to stay in a Pac-10 Conference victory over 15th-ranked UCLA.

The victory by the Sun Devils before a crowd of 51,533 at the Rose Bowl was their first ever over UCLA, which previously had a 6-0-1 record in games against ASU.

For the Bruins, the loss gave them an 0-3-2 record in their last five Pac-10 openers. UCLA, 2-2 overall this season, has rebounded to win the conference title three times in the last four years.

Until Van Raaphorst hit Hill to give ASU its first lead of the game, field goals accounted for all the scoring. Dave Franey kicked field goals of 36, 29 and 21 yards for the Bruins while Kent Bostrom hit from 39 and 19 yards away for the Sun Devils. Bostrom added a 28-yarder with 1:36 left in the game.

ASU, 1-0-1 in Pac-10 play and 3-0-1 overall this season, won despite the fact that it didn't pick up a first down until 1:27 remained in the first half.

The Sun Devils drove 73 yards on six plays for the game-winning touchdown, which came exactly two minutes after Franey's third field goal had given UCLA a 9-6 lead.

The big play of the ASU touchdown march was a 48-yard pass from Van Raaphorst to Hill, putting the ball at the UCLA 23. Van Raaphorst hit Hill for the TD shortly after Paul Day gained 12 yards on a draw play. Day led all rushers with 86 yards on 18 carries.

LSU 28, Florida 17

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Tommy Hodson threw touchdown passes to Rogie Magee and Wendell Davis and Louisiana State's defense forced seven Florida turnovers to lead the 18th-ranked Tigers in a SEC victory over the Gators.

Victor Jones also scored on a 6-yard run that helped LSU, 2-1, overcome a 17-14 deficit with 3:17 left in the second quarter. Florida has lost four games in a row.

The Tigers put the game away with 3:41 remaining when safety Greg Jackson made one of LSU's five interceptions and returned it 24 yards for a touchdown and 28-17 lead.

Hodson, a freshman from Mathews, La., completed 13 of 19 passes for 165 yards, including TD strikes of 19 yards to Magee and 39 yards to Davis, who sneaked behind the Gator defense on a flea-flicker play.

Florida quarterback Kerwin Bell hit 17 of 26 passes for 219 yards and one touchdown before leaving the game with a knee injury. He was intercepted three times, including once in the end zone after the Gators had driven to the LSU 2-yard line early in the third quarter.

Florida is 0-3 in the SEC and 1-4 overall.

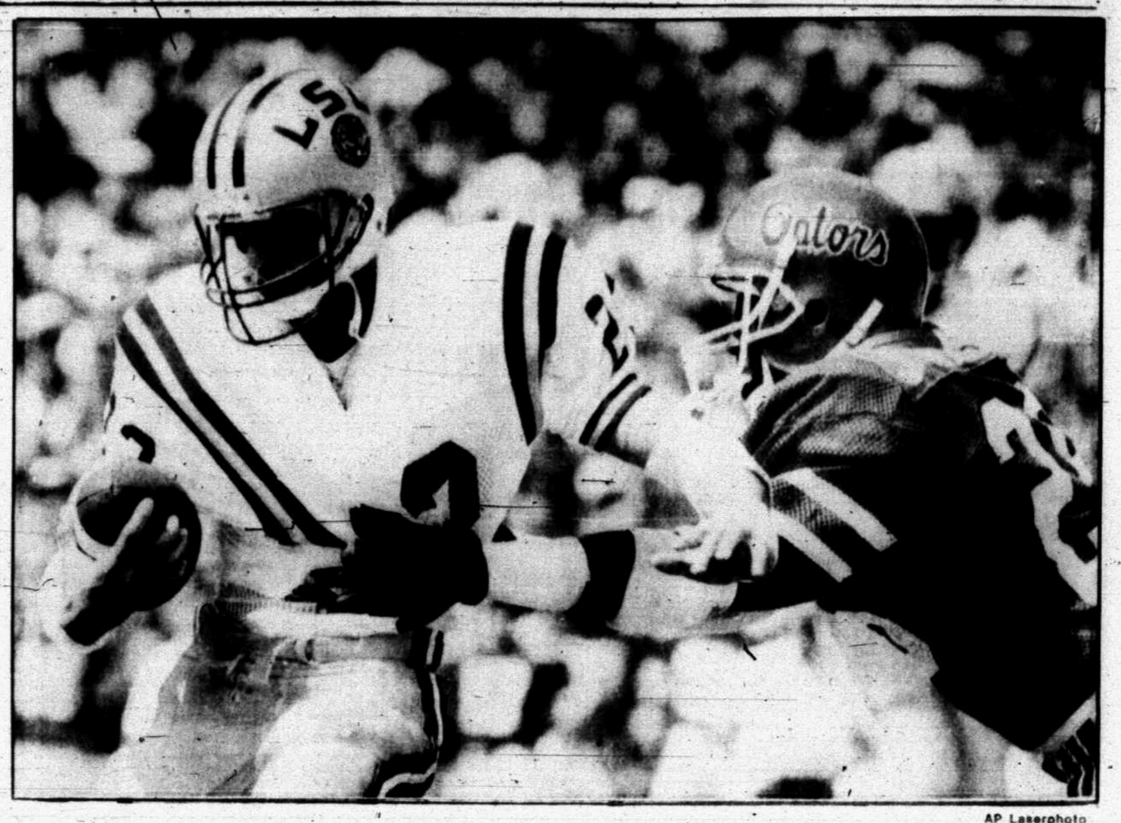

San Jose St. 45, Fresno St. 41

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Quarterback Mike Perez completed five touchdown passes, including a 26-yarder to Lafo Malauulu with 18 seconds remaining, lifting San Jose State to an upset victory over No. 19 Fresno State.

The Spartans, 3-2, scored twice in the final 42 seconds of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association football game to end the nation's longest major college unbeaten streak at 15 games. The Bulldogs, 3-1, had won their previous 11 games.

Fresno State quarterback Kevin Sweeney also got into the act, completing scoring bombs of 30, 45 and 84 yards to Stephen Baker to rally the Bulldogs from an early 24-0 deficit.

Perez completed 33 of 53 passes for 433 yards, while San Jose receiver Guy Liggins caught 15 passes for 203 yards. Sweeney completed 13 of 23 passes for 337 yards and Baker amassed 170 yards on four receptions.

Florida's Jarvis Williams grabs hold of LSU running back Sam Martin Saturday in Gainesville, Fla. It wasn't enough for the Gators however, as they lost their fourth straight game, 28-17.

Gabriel Johnson scampers past Rice defender Buddy Gregory for a 51-yard gain to set up a Texas touchdown Saturday. The Longhorns squeaked out a 17-14 win over the Owls.

'HORNS

The Rice defense, led by safety Steve Kidd with eight tackles, held off the Longhorns until the final drive of the game.

A personal foul against linebacker Joe Heikkinen and a face mask call against Buddy Gregory kept the drive moving but the defense held and the game ended on the Rice seven-yard line.

The victory marked Texas' 21st straight over the Owls but Rice Coach Jerry Berndt liked the improvement over last week.

"I really feel proud of these kids, they played with their heart and sould tonight and they deserve a win," Berndt said.

The Owls, embarrassed 31-6 last week by Division I-AA Southwest Texas State, fought back from a 14-6 halftime deficit on Comalander's 39-yard touchdown pass to Major.

Quarterback Quentis Roper then passed to Lorenzo Cyphers for the two-point conversion and a 14-14 deadlock with 10:51 to go in the third quarter.

The Longhorns drove to the Rice 18 later in the period to set up Ward's 34-yarder. It was the 12th time in his career that Ward provided the winning margin.

The Owls surprised the Longhorns with a 73-yard scoring drive on the first series of the game. Marc Scott briefly juggled Comalander's pitch and then ran 5 yards for the score.

The Longhorns rallied for a 14-6 halftime led on Bret Stafford's 8-yard pass to Gabriel Johnson and Darron Norris' 1-yard run.

Thorpe's 64 good for one-shot lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Jim Thorpe came from five shots off the pace Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after the third round of the $350,000 Southern Open golf tournament, firing a 6-under-par 64 for a 54-hole total of 200.

Second-round leader Rod Curl, who had a course record-tying 61 Friday for a 131 entering Saturday's play, fell off to a 71 and was two shots behind Thorpe.

Payne Stewart shot a 68 and was alone in second place one shot behind Thorpe in the battle for the first-place prize of $63,000.

Thorpe, who shared the first-round lead after a 65, was at 136 before Saturday's round over the par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

Thorpe, 43, had seven birdies in his round, ranging 20 feet to 4 feet. His one bogey came on the opening hole. Thorpe is seeking his first victory of the year and a chance to surpass the $1 million mark in career earnings.

The eight-year PGA Tour veteran, who won twice last year, has career earnings of $965,091. He is 58th on the money list this year with earnings of $138,427 and has four Top 10 finishes in 1986, with a fourth at the Tournament Players Championship.

Southern Open

his best effort.

Stewart, the sixth leading money winner with more than $394,000, has not won this year but has been second twice. He had three birdies on the front nine and his only bogey on the 14th hole.

Wadsworth, 24, is a Columbus native who earned All-American honors at South Carolina. He had five birdies and two bogeys in his round to remain in contention.

At 202 along with Curl were George Archer, Mike Donald and Fred Wadsworth. Archer and Donald had 67s while Wadsworth, a Columbus native who qualified for the tournament on Monday, had a 68.

At 203 was Wayne Grady, who had a 67.

Hubert Green, a two-time winner of this event, led a group at 204 that included Larry Nelson.

Defending champion Tim Simpson had a 70 and was at 205. Also at that figure was Charlie Bolling, whose 66 included a hole-in-one on the par 3, 175-yard 7th hole.

Tway, the second leading money winner with more than $600,000, had a 69 and was at 207. Tway needs to finish 10th or better to go ahead of Greg Norman in the money race. Norman has finished his schedule for the season.

Earnhardt claims easy Auto Parts 300 win

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt overwhelmed the field Saturday in running off to an easy victory in the All Pro Auto Parts 300 Busch Grand national late model stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Earnhardt, who will be among the favorites here Sunday in the Oakwood Homes 500 NASCAR stock car race, started from the pole and led 194 of 200 laps in the 300-mile race on Charlotte's 1.5-mile, high-banked oval.

Earnhardt, from nearby Kannapolis, N.C., averaged 138.746 mph as he earned $64,895, including $25,000 in special lap leader prizes.

His domination was so complete that the 1980 Winston Cup champion and current NASCAR stock car point leader had lapped the entire field by lap 135. Only a scheduled pit stop shortly before a caution flag allowed several competitors to get back on the same lap.

Earnhardt's Pontiac, owned by his wife Teresa and prepared and crewed by several of his friends, crossed the finish line 10.91 seconds ahead of the Pontiac of fellow NASCAR star Darrell Waltrip.

"I might as well have been a lap down," said Waltrip. "There was no way I was gonna catch him."

"It (the car) just worked super," Earnhardt said. "They (the crew) work awful hard for little or nothing. Their only satisfaction is coming to the track and seeing the car do well, like it did today."

Larry Pearson, son of longtime stock car star David Pearson, was third in a Chevrolet, the last car on the lead lap.

Earnhardt now has won five times and finished second three more in 12 Grand National starts.

There were only two caution flags in the quick 300-mile event. The first came out on lap 79 when NASCAR officials spotted debris in turn four, while the other yelow flag was waved because of a four-car accident in turn two.

In the accident, Rodney Howard of Greenville, S.C., hit the wall and his car burst into flames. He was treated at the infield care center for minor burns on his face, neck and hands and released. There were no other injuries in the race.

There were seven lead changes among five drivers Saturday, but all the other leaders were on top when Earnhardt pitted or during the caution periods. His 194 laps in the lead tied the race record set in 1973 by Bobby Allison, who finished fifth Saturday.

Veteran jockey killed near track

MIAMI (AP) — A journeyman jockey was found dead Friday near the horse racing track where he was hoping to make a comeback.

Jose Toledo, 35, rode 25 winners in his best season, 1977, at Miami's Calder Race Track. He recently renewed his license and was scheduled to ride at Calder several days ago, but his horse was scratched.

Toledo was killed early Friday when somebody shot him in the parking lot of an apartment complex. Police said nobody at the complex knew him.

"He had no reason for being there," Metro-Dade Homicide Detective Steve Parr said. "We don't know why he was killed. It could be a robbery."

Toledo was employed by trainer Walter Rosas-Cantessa for the past four years. He had been working exercise horses recently and as a valet parking attendant at the track.

Pronghorn hunting could be best ever

AUSTIN (AP) — The upcoming pronghorn antelope season may be the best on record, Parks and Wildlife Department officials say.

Department surveys released Wednesday showed increased populations of pronghorns in their West Texas and Panhandle ranges.

A record number of hunting permits is expected to be issued, said Charles Winkler, big game program director.

The pronghorn season runs from Oct. 4-12. The season bag limit one antelope per hunter.

Sam Rayburn has been good to bass fishermen

AUSTIN (AP) — The Sam Rayburn Reservoir in East Texas was the most productive bass tournament lake in the state last year, the Parks and Wildlife Department reported Wednesday.

During 1985, 122 clubs reported results of 651 tournaments held on 77 reservoirs.

An analysis of their reports showed Rayburn juming from third place in 1984 to first in 1985, the department said. In 34 tournaments, participants caught 1,937 bass with an average rate of 1.51 pounds.

SWTS nips McNeese

SAN MARCOS — Backup quarterback Rene Maldonado threw a touchdown pass on a bungled field goal try as Southwest Texas State scored twice in the second quarter for a 13-9 victory over McNeese State Saturday.

The snap on an attempted 25-yard field goal was high, but Maldonado, the holder, found tight end Scott Wilson for an eight-yard touchdown pass.

Stanford avenges '85 loss to San Diego State, 17-10

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Brad Muster's 115 yards rushing led undefeated Stanford to a 17-10 victory over San Diego State, avenging an embarrassing loss last season and giving the Cardinal its best start in 34 years.

Stanford, 4-0, lost to the Aztecs 41-22 last year in a wild passing duel. This time the Cardinal stayed on the ground to drop San Diego to 3-2.

Muster, a junior fullback who also caught seven passes for 51 yards, ran 3 yards for a TD to give Stanford a 17-3 lead late in the third quarter. The Cardinal 80-yard drive in six plays included 20-yard and 37-yard passes from Paye to Thomas Henley and a 14-yard run by Muster.

San Diego blew a last ditch effort to win when quarterback Jim Plum fumbled a snap on his own 21 in the final minute and Stanford's Kurt Colehower recovered to seal the victory. Plum was sacked a play earlier for the sixth time.

Paye, who finished with 162 yards passing, gave Stanford a 7-3 lead at the end of the first quarter with a 19-yard TD pass to Henley, capped a 78-yard drive. Muster caught two passes for 20 yards and ran for 14 in the march.

Stanford, bidding to crack into the Top 20 rankings, hadn't won its first four games since 1952.

Washington St 24, Oregon St 14

PULLMAN, Wash. — Washington State quarterback Ed Blount threw for 300 yards and hooked up with wide receiver Kitrick Taylor on two long touchdown passes, and the Cougar defense had five takeaways in a victory over Oregon State.

Those Oregon State turnovers, including two fumbles after completed passes, spoiled a 372-yard passing effort by Beaver quarterback Erik Wilhelm in the Pacific-10 Conference game.

The second of three Cougar takeaways in the fourth quarter, an interception by safety Artie Holmes, set up Michael Pringle's 7-yard option scoring run with six minutes to play.

Blount completed 16 of 24 passes with two interceptions. He froze the Beavers with play action on the first snap of the game, hit Taylor at the Oregon State 40 and the speedy wideout completed the 80-yard play for a score.

Washington State moved to 2-2-1 overall and 1-1-1 in the Pac-10. Oregon State fell to 0-4 and 0-2.

West

Utah St. 42, New Mexico St. 9

LOGAN, Utah — Freshman quarterback Mark Smith scored one touchdown and passed for another and sophomore running back Timo Tagaloa ran for two TDs as Utah State scored a PCAA victory over New Mexico State.

Smith, starting in place of the injured Tom Ponich, helped USU take an 8-0 lead before New Mexico St. was able to log a first down.

New Mexico State gave up a safety on its first drive after defensive tackles Jim Pauciello and Gary Hulsey tackled NMSU quarterback Jim Miller in the end zone on the visitors' first possession.

Boise St. 31, Montana St. 14

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Freshman quarterback Keith Jarrett passed for three touchdowns and ran for another, pacing Boise State to a 31-14 Big Sky victory over mistake-prone Montana State.

The Boise defense made it a long day for MSU quarterback Kelly Bradley, sacking him 11 times and intercepting two of his passes.

He also lost three fumbles, with one leading to a BSU score and another killing a Bobcat drive deep in Bronco territory.

Boise improved its record to 1-1 in league play and 2-2 overall, while MSU fell to 1-2 in the conference and 1-4 for the season.

Jarrett opened the scoring late in the first quarter with a 22-yard TD pass to wide receiver Steve Hale. That capped a 72-yard drive that took just five plays and 1:18.

Montana 42, E. Washington 37

MISSOULA, Mont. — Senior quarterback Brent Pease passed for five touchdowns and 447 yards, both school records, to lead Montana over Eastern Washington.

Eastern Washington, now 3-2, lost what would have been the go-ahead touchdown on the game's final play. Eagle quarterback Rob James hit wide receiver Tracy Poffenroth with an 11-yard pass to the right corner of the end zone as time expired, but officials ruled Poffenroth did not get a foot down inbounds.

NM Highlands 54, Western St. 20

GUNNISON, Colo. — Quarterback Brian Ainsworth threw four touchdown passes, two of them to halfback Walter Holmes, as New Mexico Highlands defeated winless Western State in Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference action.

With the victory, New Mexico Highlands moved to 2-2 overall and 2-0 in the conference. Western State is 0-4-1 overall and 0-2-1 in RMAC play.

Orangemen romp Tigers

Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Holder Mike Kmetz scored on a 3-yard touchdown run off a fake field goal to spark a 21-point third quarter Saturday night as Syracuse broke a four-game losing streak with a 41-9 victory over Missouri in a non-conference college football game.

Tailback Harold Gayden added two short touchdown runs for the Orangemen, who won for the first time this season in five games.

Missouri, which got its points on three field goals by Tom Whelihan, dropped to 1-3 and lost for the 13th time in its last 15 games dating back to last season.

After Whelihan missed on a 55-yard field goal attempt early in the third period, Syracuse moved downfield quickly on the strength of two big plays, but the drive stalled at the Missouri 3-yard line.

Kicker Tim Vesling was called on to attempt a 20-yard field goal. But Kmetz, the second-string quarterback, picked up the snap and ran to his right, diving into the end zone between two defenders to give Syracuse a 24-9 advantage.

East

Navy 45, Dartmouth 0

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Quarterback Bill Byrne threw two touchdown passes, one a 55-yarder to split end Troy Saunders, as Navy registered its second straight shutout in a 45 to 0 victory over Dartmouth Saturday.

One of Byrne's scoring passes went to tailback Chuck Smith, who also ran for a one-yard touchdown to give the Midshipmen a 7-0 lead less than six minutes into the game.

Smith, who started the day tied for second in the nation in rushing, ran for 182 yards on 26 carries even though he played only about half the game.

Brown 24, Princeton 10

PRINCETON, N.J. — Mark Donovan found Dave Fielding on a 55-yard scoring play early in the first quarter as Brown tallied on its first three possessions to down Princeton in an Ivy League game and remain undefeated.

The victory was the third straight for the Bruins, their best start since the 1976 season when they won their only Ivy League title. Brown is 2-0 in the league this season.

Army 41, Yale 24

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Junior quarterback Tory Crawford ran for four touchdowns and directed a relentless wishbone attack Saturday that rushed for 403 yards as Army defeated Yale.

Crawford kept the Yale defense at bay the entire game, keeping or pitching to running backs Clarence Jones, Benny Wright and Andy Peterson as Army ended a two-game losing streak.

Penn 42, Columbia 7

PHILADELPHIA — Chris Flynn rushed for 142 yards on 15 carries including touchdowns of 4 and 22 yards as Penn defeated Columbia in Ivy League football.

Penn, 2-0 in the league and 3-0 overall, scored on its first possession, driving 58 yards on 11 plays.

Red Sox hoping to erase evil ghosts of summers past

BOSTON (AP) — Haunted by constant reminders of the club's past failures, the 1986 Boston Red Sox think they drove away the ghosts in charging to the American League East championship.

But something, maybe just a gremlin, lingers as the club heads into the playoffs in the next step toward bringing Boston its first World Series championship since 1918.

Just four days after the Red Sox clinched the division title and Manager John McNamara announced the exorcism, right-handed ace Roger Clemens was hit on his right elbow by a line drive in a vain bid for his 25th victory.

Fortunately for the Red Sox, Clemens escaped with a painful bruise and hopes were high that he would be able to start as scheduled against the California Angels in the opener of the best-of-seven pennant playoffs at Fenway Park on Tuesday night.

Tom Seaver, acquired in mid-season, will miss the AL Championship Series with an injury and catcher Rich Gedman was also hit by the injury bug, but perhaps to a lesser extent.

When Clemens was struck though, the Red Sox were given their biggest scare of the year. Without the big Texan, who has lost just four games this season, their chances against California appear almost hopeless.

Unlike Boston teams that had beaten opponents with their bats, the 1986 Red Sox are counting on their pitching to carry them through the postseason.

Pitching is the name of the game, the only name," McNamara says. "Roger Clemens has been outstanding, of course, but our other pitchers have done their job, too.

The Red Sox hitters admit the team is counting upon the pitching, but everyone on the club, starting with McNamara, stresses the team effort.

They played together, stayed together and hung together all summer long," McNamara said. "We had to go through the summer beating people down, proving to people we were contenders. Now we're division champions.

Cyclones beat Cowboys for third straight

Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Alex Espinoza teamed up with Eddie Bridges on a 49-yard pass play for the go-ahead touchdown, then directed an 88-yard drive that produced an insurance score as Iowa State beat Wyoming, 21-10.

Bridges' touchdown with 9 minutes, 8 seconds left in the third quarter erased a 10-7 Wyoming lead and helped Iowa State (3-1) to its third straight victory, the first time the Cyclones have won three in a row since 1981.

Espinoza, who was 13 of 25 for 181 yards, hit Bridges on a crossing pattern at the Wyoming 35-yard line. The 5-foot-10, 165-pound flanker then cut behind an excellent block by Robbie Minor and sped down the sidelines into the end zone.

Ohio St. 14, Illinois 0

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Quarterback Jim Karsatos and backup tailback Vince Workman scored second quarter touchdowns and the Ohio State defense recorded its first Big Ten Conference shutout since 1980 in a victory over Illinois.

The victory was the third in a row for Ohio State, 3-2, while Illinois fell to 1-3 with its third consecutive loss. The game was the Big Ten opener for both teams.

The shutout was Ohio State's first since a 44-0 victory over Washington State in 1984. It was the Buckeyes' first shutout in Big Ten play since a 21-0 victory over Wisconsin in 1980.

Kansas 35, S. Illinois 23

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Mike Orth passed for 321 yards and four touchdowns, rallying Kansas to a come-from-behind victory over Southern Illinois.

Orth, a 6-foot-5, 205-pound junior who started only one game before this season, hit 19 of 42 passes, three of them for second-half touchdowns.

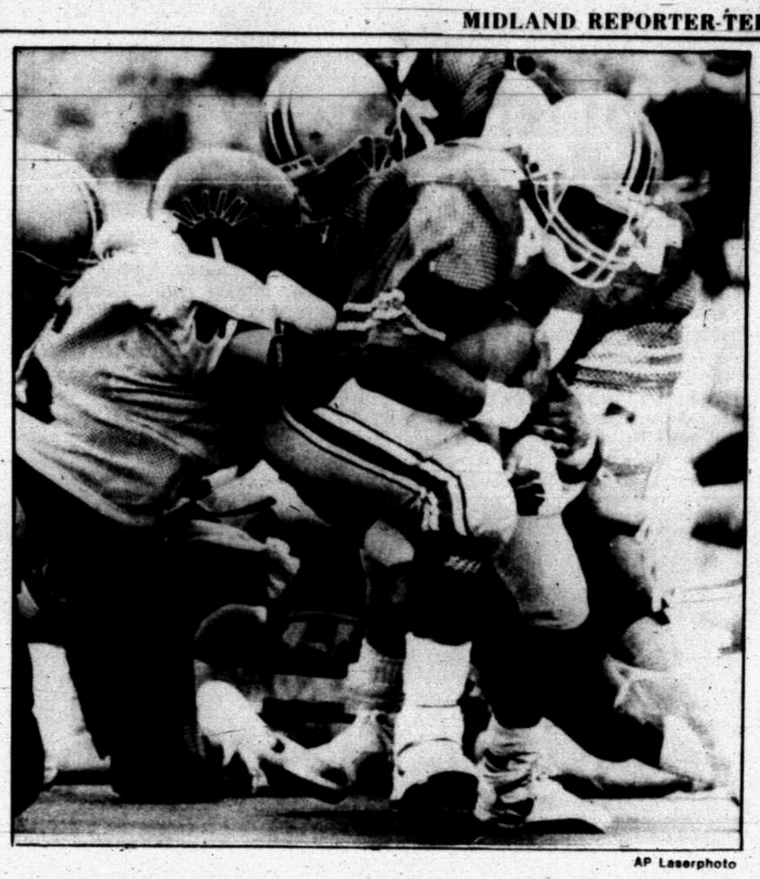

Minnesota 36, Purdue 9

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Minnesota quarterback Rickey Foggie left Purdue lost in a haze, running for three touchdowns and passing for a fourth, as Minnesota beat the Boilermakers.

Foggie twice bolted off right tackle for short touchdown runs, then later ran off left tackle for a third, and connected with split end Mel Anderson on a 23-yard pass play for another score.

Indiana 24, Northwestern 7

EVANSTON, Ill. — Led by tailback Damon Sweazy and quarterback Brin Dewitz, Indiana scored on long drives on its first two possessions to defeat Northwestern in a Big Ten conference opener.

'Dogs rally past Ole Miss

Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — Lars Tate scored two touchdowns on 8-yard runs as Georgia trimmed Mississippi 14-10 in the Southeastern Conference football opener for both teams Saturday.

The Bulldogs overcame a 10-7 deficit on Tate's second 8-yard score, which capped a 62-yard drive with 5:06 left in the third quarter.

The Bulldogs, 3-1, extended their winning streak in the series to 10 games for a 17-7-1 advantage as the Rebels fell to 2-2-1 this year.

Tate, who ran for 88 yards on 18 carries, scored his first touchdown at the end of Georgia's 80-yard drive after the opening kickoff.

Ole Miss came right back on its first possession to move 70 yards for the tying score, which came on Mark Young's 31-yard pass to Ricky Myers with 7:01 left in the opening period.

The Rebels went ahead 10-22 before halftime when Bryan Owen kicked a 24-yard field goal after a 16-play, 82-yard drive.

Georgia had a chance to pad its lead late in the third quarter when Andy Dotson returned an interception four yards to the Ole Miss 48.

The Bulldogs reached the 5 before Keith Henderson fumbled, with Lopaz Jones recovering for the Rebels at their 2.

The Rebels had one late opportunity, taking over on their 11 with 5:27 to play. Ole Miss reached the Georgia 39 before Doug Samuel intercepted a Young pass on the Georgia 10.

N. Carolina 21, Ga. Tech 20

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Jonathan Hall hit Eric Lewis for an 11-yard touchdown with 58 seconds left and Derrick Fenner rushed for 113 yards and another score as North Carolina beat Georgia Tech in ACC play.

North Carolina, 3-0-1 and playing its league opener, was up 14-3 at halftime only to see the Yellow Jackets storm into a 17-14 lead with 6:01 left in the third quarter when quarterback Rick Strom found Jerry Mays with a 5-yard scoring pass and split two defenders to hit Cory Collier for a 2-point conversion.

In the fourth quarter, defensive back Reginald Rutland intecepted UNC's Mark Maye and returned it 42 yards to set up David Bell's 43-yard field goal and a 20-14 Georgia Tech lead with 7:57 left.

South

Virginia Tech 13, West Virginia 7

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Chris Kinzer booted two field goals, including a 50-yarder, to lead Virginia Tech's Hokies to a victory over West Virginia's Mountaineers.

The Hokies improved to 4-1 while the Mountaineers dropped to 2-3.

With his 50-yarder — kicked into a 15 mph wind — shortly before intermission, Kinzer broke a school record for consecutive field goals with 13. He had matched Don Wade's 1981 mark with 8 seconds left in the first quarter with a 24-yard kick.

Clemson 24, The Citadel 0

CLEMSON, S.C. — Tailback Terrence Flagler rushed for a career-high 177 yards and two first-half touchdowns to lead Clemson past The Citadel.

Flagler, a 6-foot-1, 200-pound senior, scored on runs of 20 and 38 yards as Clemson took a 14-0 halftime lead en route to its third victory in four games. Flagler's previous high on the ground was 139 yards in 1983 against Western Carolina.

Virginia 30, Wake Forest 28

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Jeff Gaffney kicked three field goals, including a 36-yard effort with 56 seconds remaining, giving Virginia a triumph over Wake Forest in ACC action.

After Gaffney's game-winning kick culminated a 10-play, 60-yard drive, Wake Forest marched from its own 13 to the Virginia 12, but Wilson Hoyle's 29-yard field goal attempt sailed wide right with two seconds left to play.

Kentucky 32, S. Mississippi 0

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Carwell Gardner had an interception and fumble recovery and Joe Worley kicked four field goals as Kentucky crushed Southern Mississippi.

Kentucky won its third straight game to improve to 3-0-1. Southern Mississippi slipped to 2-3.

Gardner, a sophomore defensive end, killed scoring drives by picking off Andrew Anderson's pass at the Kentucky 21 in the second period, and recovering Randolph Brown's fumble on the Wildcat 14 in the third quarter.

Worley kicked field goals of 45, 19 and 38 yards to give Kentucky a 9-0 lead at the half. He added a 21-yard effort late in the third quarter for a 25-0 advantage.

Vanderbilt 24, Duke 18

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vanderbilt fullback Carl Woods bolted 70 yards for the clinching touchdown and Tim Richardson threw a pair of scoring passes as the Commodores defeated Duke in a non-conference game.

Woods' run came only seconds after Duke kicker Doug Peterson had booted his third field goal of the game to pull the Blue Devils within 17-15.

Woods, who gained 112 yards on 13 carries became Vanderbilt's No. 2 career rusher during the evening as he brought his four-year rushing total to 2,262 yards.

Miners plays Vols tough, lose 26-16

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Volunteer tailback William Howard ran for three touchdowns and kicker Carlos Reveiz added two field goals, including a 53-yarder, as Tennessee stopped Texas-El Paso 26-16 in an interconference game Saturday.

The Vols, sticking to a conservative, run-oriented attack, broke a two-game losing streak and raised their record to 2-2. Tennessee remains 0-2 in the Southeastern Conference.

Miner quarterback Sammy Garza hit 19 of 29 passes for 208 yards and one touchdown but fumbled once and was intefecepted twice in the second half as Texas-El Paso fell to 2-4 on the season.

The Miners, 1-1 in the Western Athletic Conference, did not score until a 48-yard field goal in the third period by junior kicker Chris Jacke.

Miner tailback John Harvey added a 1-yard touchdown dive in the fourth period and Garza connected on a 24-yard scoring pass to fullback Tommy Bonds with 1:06 remaining for the game's final score.

Howard, a 6-foot, 225-pound junior, ran for touchdowns of 3 and 2 yards in the first half and added a 1-yard scoring dive in the final quarter. He finished with 110 yards on 25 carries.

Tarleton St. 14, Sul Ross 6

ALPINE — Tailback Gaylon Bowser scored on runs of five and 35 yards to lead the Tarleton Texans to a win over the Sul Ross Lobos.

The victory, in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association opener for the Texans, boosts them to 1-0 in the conference and 3-1-1 on the season. Sul Ross is 0-2 and 0-4.

Sul Ross, playing its homecoming game, scored on field goals of 25 and 26 yards by Clint Wallace. The loss overshadowed a notable individual performance by Lobo tailback John Lewis, who ran for 96 yards and caught six passes for 109 yards.

SW Oklahoma 28, H Payne 20

BROWNWOOD — James Hicks scored on runs of 52 and 2 yards as Southwestern Oklahoma spoiled Howard Payne's homecoming.

Hicks also ran for 28 yards to set up Todd Hudson's 21-yard touchdown pass to Derrick Bailey, which erased a 20-15 fourth-quarter deficit. Payne tried to rally but Southwestern's Randy Simmons intercepted a pass and ran it back 25 yards to score.

Angelo St. 23, Cent. St., Okla. 21

SAN ANGELO — Ned Cox passed for three touchdowns as Angelo State held off a second-half rally from Central State of Oklahoma and took a win.

Cox threw touchdown passes of 30 and 23 yards to split end Wilbert Jefferson and 21 yards to Charles Mott.

Angelo State broke to a 16-0 lead in the first half before Central State's John Sterling ran 52 yards for a score with 1:34 left in the second quarter.

CSU closed to 16-14 early in the fourth period on an Eddie Goodlow 2-yard run, but Angelo answered with Cox's touchdown throw to Jefferson with 8:06 left in the game.

Angelo State is now 3-2 on the season and Central State is 2-2.

SW Texas St. 13, McNeese St. 9

SAN MARCOS — Backup quarterback Rene Maldonado threw a touchdown pass on a bungled field goal try as Southwest Texas State scored twice in the second quarter for a victory over McNeese State.

The snap on an attempted 25-yard field goal was high, but Maldonado, the holder, found tight end Scott Wilson for an eight-yard touchdown

Texas

McNeese State took a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on Tony Citizen's 40-yard run. But Citizen fumbled at the McNeese State 13 early in the second quarter, and freshman fullback Don Hall scored for Southwest Texas State on the next play for a 7-7 tie.

McNeese got its other points when Southwest Texas State punter David Haass elected to run an attempted punt out of the end zone for a safety in the final minute of the first half.

McNeese State was handicapped by four lost fumbles and two interceptions.

Texas A&I 35, Lamar 10

BEAUMONT — Freshman tailback Johnny Bailey rushed for 204 yards to lead Texas A&I over Lamar.

For Bailey, formerly of Houston Yates, it was the fourth straight game over 200 yards. The win moves Texas A&I to 4-0. Lamar drops to 0-4 and has now lost 12 straight.

Javelinas' fullback Heath Sherman scored three touchdowns while rushing for 94 yards. His first was on a one-yard run late in the first quarter, and he capped the game's scoring with a two-yard run with seven minutes left.

Bailey scored his touchdown on a 39-yard scamper in the second quarter.

The Cardinals took the lead, 7-6, on a nine-yard run by Burton Murchison early in the second quarter and trailed 14-10 at the half. But after the break, the points were all A&I's.

ENMU 41, Texas Lutheran 13

SEGUIN — Tommy Gonzalez threw three touchdown passes and tailback Rufus Smith rushed for 113 yards and a touchdown to lead Eastern New Mexico to its fifth victory without a loss — a victory over Texas Lutheran College.

Gonzalez tossed TD passes of 12, 4 and 14 yards. ENMU led 24-7 at the half.

TLC, which fell to 1-3, scored on quarterback John Fuqua's 24-yard pass to freshman flanker Rudy Soliz and Kevin Baros' one-yard dive.

Tennessee St. 15, E. Texas St. 6

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Senior defensive back Carl McKafee stepped in front of quarterback Mike Trigg's two-point conversion pass at 12:36 left in the game to preserve Tennessee State's victory over East Texas State.

The East Texas State Lions scored on a 7-yard Bobby Bankston reverse, capping a nine-play 67-yard drive.

Ninth-ranked Ohio Valley Conference TSU raised its record to 5-0 while the Division-II Lions dropped to 1-3.

After McKafee's game-saving steal, Tigers running back Quinton Crawford ran 73 yards on an inside reverse, giving the Tigers a 13-6 lead with 9:32 left in the game.

TSU picked up two more points after the touchdown when placeholder Leon Garlington picked up the snap and beat several Lions defenders to the corner of the end zone for two points.

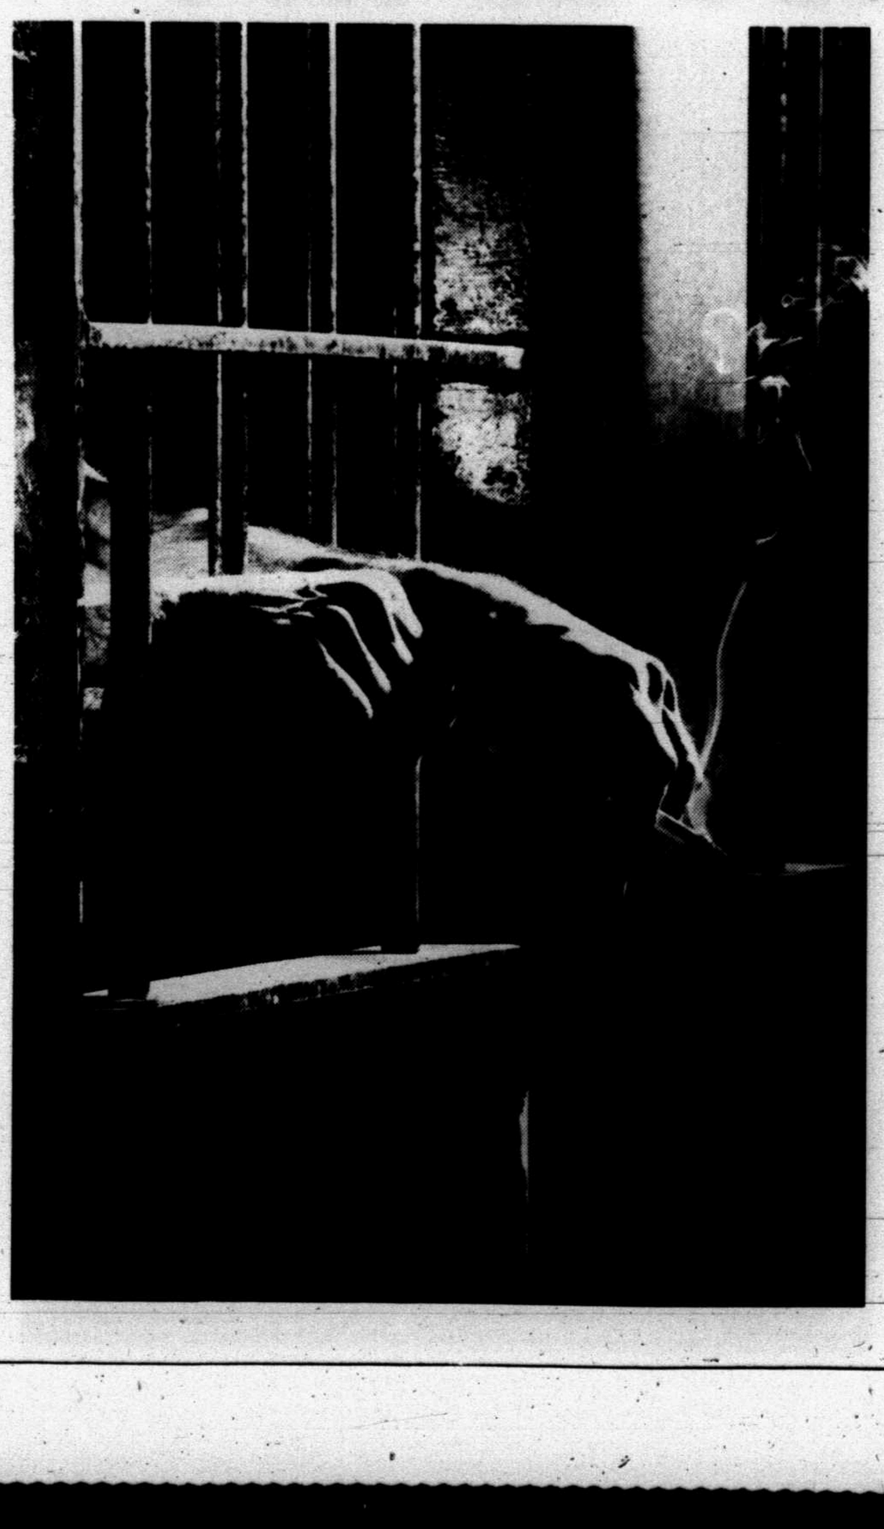

TSU totaled 138 yards rushing, 200 passing for a total of 338 offensive yards.

Louisiana Tech 17, N. Texas St. 10

RUSTON, La. — Gorlan Powell's 19 carries for 88 yards and two touchdowns led Louisiana Tech to a defeat of North Texas State in a Southland Conference game.

Powell first scored with a 1-yard run in the opening quarter after James Blackshire blocked a North Texas punt and set up the successful drive.

9 out of 10 folks who drop in here dropped out of school.

It's startling. But true.

And at Southwestern Bell Telephone, we believe it's a statistic we can't afford to ignore.

That's why, since 1979, we've been supporting a special program created to keep kids in school and off the streets.

It's called Communities in Schools, and it was started by Texas' first lady, Linda Gale White.

Communities in Schools arranges for free one-on-one counseling to help potential dropouts work out their personal problems, raise their grades, and above all, raise their self-confidence.

So far the program has been so successful, it's expanded from Houston to Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso and Austin.

At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we're proud to support this special program, as part of our overall effort to contribute to Texas communities.

Because we believe the place to get an education is in school.

Not in prison.

We're here to help.

Deshaies racks up No. 12

Associated Press

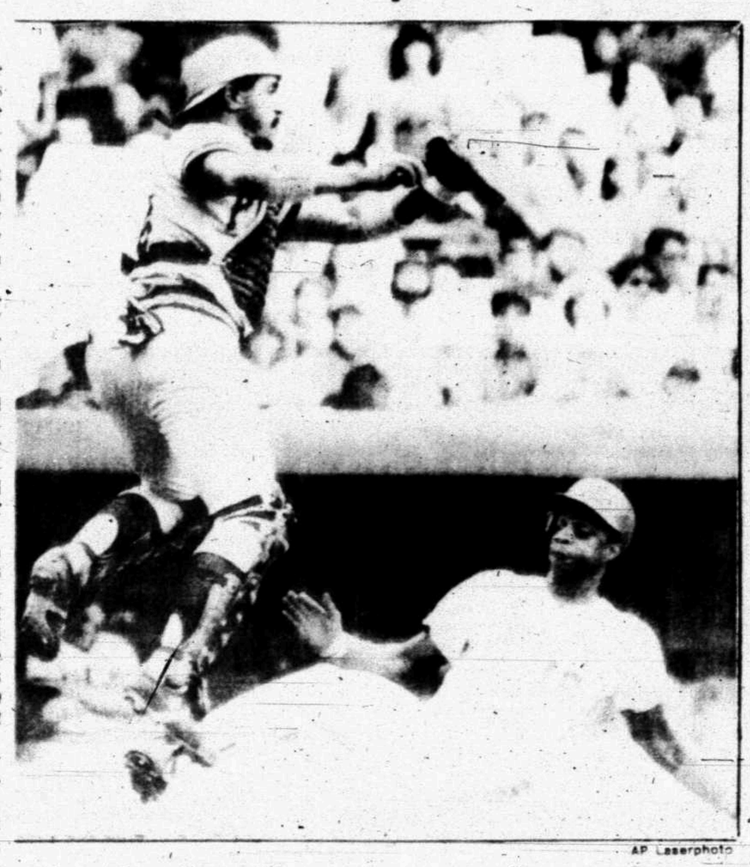

HOUSTON — Before the season, Jim Deshaies was just hoping to make the Houston Astros roster. The left-hander completed his final start of the regular season Saturday as the only rookie in Astros history to win 12 games in a season.

"I just wanted to be respectable this year," Deshaies said after pitching the Astros to a victory over Atlanta.

Deshaies, 12-5, pitched five scoreless innings before Houston Manager Hal Lanier, in preparation for the National League playoffs, took him out of the game.

Deshaies finished with 19 consecutive scoreless innings as Houston improved its season record to 95-66, the best record in the history of the club. Houston's previous best record was in 1980 when they won 92 games.

Deshaies allowed four hits while walking three and striking out three. Larry Anderson worked two scoreless innings in relief, and Aurelio Lopez gave up a two-run single to pinch-hitter Ken Griffey in the eighth.

Darryl Strawberry slides in with a run as catcher Tony Pena of the Pirates lunges for a wild throw. The Mets swept a doubleheader to notch their 106th and 107th wins of the season.

Dodgers 2, Giants 1

LOS ANGELES — Fernando Valenzuela ended his winningest season in the major leagues with a five-hitter, and Steve Sax and Ralph Bryant hit run-scoring singles to lead Los Angeles to a victory over San Francisco.

Valenzuela, 21-11, walked one and struck out seven to set a career high for strikeouts in a season. The left-hander's 242 strikeouts left him second in the National League to Houston's Mike Scott with 306.

Phillies 5, Expos 4

PHILADELPHIA — John Russell's two-out single scored Glenn Wilson in the bottom of the 14th inning, giving Philadelphia a victory over Montreal.

With one out, Mike Schmidt and Wilson hit consecutive singles. Juan Samuel followed with a single, but right fielder Andre Dawson threw out Schmidt at the plate. Russell then hit the first pitch off loser Bert Roberge, 0-4, into center field, scoring Wilson with the game winner.

Reds 10, Padres 7

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin drove in four runs, and Eric Davis hit a two-run homer to pace Cincinnati over San Diego.

Dave Parker and Tony Perez hit solo homers to help the Reds overcome Kevin McReynolds' grand slam and earn their fourth consecutive victory.

Perez's homer was the 379th of his career, tying Orlando Cepeda's mark for homers by a Latin American player. Perez, 44, will retire after the Reds' final game Sunday.

Right-hander Bill Gullickson, 15-12, struggled through 6⅓ innings to become the Reds' first 15-game winner.

Cubs 8, Cardinals 7

CHICAGO — Brian Dayett and Rafael Palmeiro drove in two runs each to lead Chicago over St. Louis and give the Cardinals their third straight loss in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader.

The second game was postponed due to darkness.

The Cubs tagged Cardinals starter Bob Forsch, 14-10, for seven runs while Ed Lynch, 7-5, earned the victory by pitching 1⅔ innings of relief. Lee Smith got his 31st save despite allowing a leadoff homer to Andy Van Slyke in the ninth.

Mets 6, Pirates 1
Mets 5, Pirates 2

NEW YORK — Rick Aguilera pitched New York to its 107th victory, a 5-2 decision over Pittsburgh that gave the Mets a sweep of their doubleheader. The Mets have won four in a row.

With one game left Sunday against Pittsburgh, the NL East champion Mets could tie the divisional record of the 1975 Cincinnati Reds, who won 108 games. The Mets won the opener 6-1 as Bob Ojeda, 18-5, became the winningest member of the pitching staff.

Aguilera, 10-7, combined with Randy Niemann and Roger McDowell on a four-hitter as he became the sixth Mets pitcher to finish in double-figure victories, joining Ojeda, Ron Darling, Dwight Gooden, McDowell and Sid Fernandez.

BOSTON — Dave Righetti set a major-league record with 46 saves Saturday by recording saves in both games Saturday as the New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from the Boston Red Sox, 5-3 and 3-1.

Righetti broke the record of 45 saves set by Dan Quisenberry in 1983 and Bruce Sutter in 1984.

Bob Tewksbury, 9-5, allowed only four hits before giving way to Righetti with one out in the eighth in the opener. Righetti, helped by two double plays, went on to tie the record of 45 saves, set by Kansas City's Dan Quisenberry in 1983 and equalled by St. Louis' Bruce Sutter in 1984.

New York's Don Mattingly went 3-for-5 in the opener, and hit his 30th homer in five times at-bat in the nightcap, leaving him with a .351 average. With one game left, Mattingly trails Boston's Wade Boggs by six points in the race for the American League batting title. Boggs has missed the last three games with a hamstring injury.

Royals 2, A's 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mark Gubicza and Bud Black combined on a five-hitter leading Kansas City over Oakland.

Gubicza, 12-6, finished the season with a five-game winning streak. He gave up five hits in six-plus

STEP UP TO AN OLDSMOBILE - NOW!

WHAT DOES 2.9% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE GMAC FINANCING REALLY MEAN TO YOU?

FIRST
This is the lowest set of finance rates ever offered by GMAC.

SECOND
Probably the most important thing is that there is no dealer financial participation that will affect your cost. As matter of fact we still have units at the old price (units built before April 11, 1986) that can be bought at prices below invoice prices.

THIRD
Even though we have sold over 125 new units on this program we still have over 50 new units left to choose from.

FOURTH
We will post special sale prices on all of our '86 GMC inventory to show we mean business!

Here is an example:

1986 GMC Sierra Classic

- Factory Air
- 305 V-8 Engine
- Automatic Transmission
- Power Steering
- Power Brakes
- Tilt Wheel
- AM/FM Stereo

Decorate your home to express your individual style

Classic or contemporary, America's interiors are strikingly stylish

The thought of remodeling and decorating a house or apartment is, for many people, an overwhelming experience. Such activities as painting, wallpapering, tiling, performing structural changes and choosing the appropriate furnishings, are all major projects.

However, they can be made simpler by a bit of organization and patience. Although every homeowner would like to have his or her home remodeled and decorated within six months, it is not always in the cards.

Availibility of money and time, the reliability of painters, wallpaper hangers and other contractors, play major roles in determining when you home will be completed. For this reason many decorators suggest a three-to-five year remodeling and decorating plan.

The first step in changing your home or apartment's interior is to decide what "look" you are comfortable with. This is perhaps the most difficult step and requires some research.

Looking through architectural and decorating magazines, observing others ways of decorating, and knowing your priorities, are helpful ways to organize your own thoughts about style.

Although hard to define, personal style usually ends up being a combination of childhood influence, adult aspirations, and what we happen to be feeling at the particular time in our lives when we are decorating our home.

Being in a serious mood might result in decorating a room in darker maroons, browns or paisleys. On the other hand, a person in a more cheery frame of mind might do a house in light pastels using lots of chintz fabrics as accents.

Deciding on how rooms are going to be sued is another important factor in decorating.

Will your living room be formal or casual? Will your kitchen be the center of activity, or will it be the family room that is the center of social gatherings? These are important factors when trying to create a home that complements your lifestyle.

Please see DECORATE, Page 2D

DECORATE

There are a host of decorating techniques that can reflect you individual style. Paint — a basic and inexpensive decorating tool — can do wonders for a room, on walls or floor.

Pastel shades, as well as deeper colors of jade, crimson and midnight blue, can liven up a room, while creating a sense of warmth, for a relatively small amount of money.

Wallpaper borders, which can be applied over painted or wallpapered walls, are also inexpensive decorating tools that can add charm to a room.

Paint, specifically deck paint because of it resilience, is the perfect remedy for weathered and scratched wooden floors. Available in a variety of colors, including early American colors such as brick red and Wedgewood blue, paint is effective in creating a country look.

Once painted, a floor can be covered with decorative rag rugs or stenciled over with a flowered border, or geometric diamonds, which can create the look of tiling.

Tiling just a hallway or the area surrounding a fireplace is a wonderful way to call attention to certain spaces. And, you might even be able to find older, used tiles hidden away in antique shops.

Speaking of antique shops, frequent visits to local antique stores, second-hand stores and neighborhood flea markets and garage sales, can unearth some real treasures.

Ultimately, all homeowners discover that they are much handier than they ever though possible. What starts out to be an overwhelming experience — fixing up a home — ends up being a very enjoyable, satisfying hobby.

Study your lifestyle before buying furniture

What do you check before shopping for new furniture? Your room size? The size of your credit limit or bank account?

What about checking your lifestyle?

You can always make compromises when it comes to the size of the piece, or how much you pay for it. But if you don't become knowledgeable about your personal lifestyle, you'll end up compromising in this area, too. And you may never get that well-deserved thrill that comes from buying something that fits your personal style to a "T".

Many people are reluctant to buy new furniture that will betray their lack of "taste." But people of widely recognized "good taste" usually have homes that reflect their personal preferences and lifestyles.

How do they get rooms like that? Not by buying the most glamorous, elaborate versions of everything they can find. Often, great rooms start by having an interior designer paid to ask these lucky people about how they live — the "lifestyle" questions you must ask yourself.

Long before the fabric swatches and floor plans get collected, a professional interior designer asks the client specific questions designed to bring out the patterns and preferences of daily existence in that particular residence.

For example, the designer might ask, what do you like to do at the end of a hard day's work? What does your spouse, if any, like to do? How many children do you have, and what are their ages. What family activities do you all take part in? And, just as important, what are the hobbies, tasks, needs and preferences of each member of the family?

How do you see your kitchen — and how much cooking do you really do or want to do in it? What kind of entertaining do you do — business contacts, casual neighbors, fussy family for the holidays? What are your kids' social lives like? What changes do you anticipate in all these areas in the next five or ten years, and how should rooms be planned to accommodate them?

These are just some of the "lifestyle" questions trained interior designers ask their clients. Only when these questions are answered do the swatch books and color chips come out — along with the measuring tape and the financial arrangements.

You can ask yourself the "lifestyle" questions to start formulating ideas of what furniture items you'll want to live with. Even easier, you can visit a retail furniture store which has trained interior designers on staff. Store staff designers can help you refine your understanding of your options, and help you select the pieces that work for you and work together. In many cases, this expert assistance is quite economical, and may even be offered at no charge, or for a fee which is later applied to you purchases at that store.

If you're furnishing an entire room or house, a designer can help you prioritize your purchases, based, again, on what you lifestyle needs are. If you entertain twice a year, for example, and the next time is six months away, you may want to defer buying a dining room suite in favor of extra wall units to keep the new family room ship-shape.

With or without a designer's help, you can draw up a one-year, two-year or five-year plan (depending on your income and how many rooms you need to furnish) which prioritizes the home furnishings piece you'll make over time.

Of course, bargains will fall into you lap during the year, and you'll be tempted to buy a piece earlier than you'd planned to.

Great! But ask tough questions about construction and durability before you say "yes" to a piece on sale. And make sure it's at least close in style, features, and value to a piece you originally budgeted for.

Make it a habit to leave your color chips, fabric swatches, room sketches, if any, budget plan, and trusty tape measure in the car, so you'll have all your shopping "tools" when you read, hear or see an ad for furniture that seems worth pursuit. Whatever else your lifestyle is, it's busy — and making it easy for yourself to shop is top priority.

It's a new world of 'Country' looks

If you think the "country" look means the ubiquitous "Early American" approach, think again.

Today's country looks are very different from those that filled suburban homes across America in the late 1950s and 1960s. Today's young families are headed by sophisticated men and women who want the casualness of country. But they don't want the Daniel Boone-in-the-rumpus-room look. And they don't want the self-conscious refined look of museums. Today's country looks are relaxed, but worldly, like their owners' lifestyles. And they borrow from a number of cultures and influences.

French Country is enjoying a popularity it hasn't had in years. No longer antique white and gilt bedroom furniture, today's French Provincial is making a hit throughout the house. Most prominent: The armoire, a big wardrobe unit that stores everything from clothes to electronic equipment to a bar. French Provincial's curvy carvings give it a certain playfulness and satisfy the Post-Modern need for a little decoration — without cuteness.

Victorian Country is new again. While the dark, heavily carved frames give the style richness, the heaviness of Victorian is gone, thanks to today's lighthearted, light-colored upholstery. Victorian can take to bright floral chintz as in English style. Or wear summery while cotton and linen for the glamour of the Old South. Victorian Country is even showing up in eclectic mixes where less ornate period styles would. Here, they often wear watercolor abstracts of florals we think of as contemporary. The effect, with all that Victorian carving, can be very romantic.

But what about country when you can't abide anything but contemporary? Is country restricted to nostalgic designs?

Not at all. Shaker-style is classic American Country and is perfect for the most tontemporary eclectic room. The clean, spar lines of Shaker chairs, settees, tables and cabinets can peacefully co-exist with clean-lined contemporary upholstered pieces. What's more, you can use Shaker styles in black, white or paintbox colors if you don't want the natural look.

The Southwestern look, with desert colors, rattan braiding and accents in terra cotta and earthware provide a down-to-earth touch to this cool and comfortable arrangement.

American Southwest is another country look that marries clean contemporary with tradition. Staples of this look are neutral tones of a new breed: abode, a dull terra-cotta pink, sand, grey-green, slate-grey and the purple-grey of mountains. Mission-style Spanish influences abound, and their clean spare lines, like that of Shaker, belie the fact that the looks have been around since the early days of Spanish-American settlement.

Accessories and fabrics in the American Southwest style borrow freely from the primitive geometrics and stripes of Indian blankets, bowls and other artifacts — geometrics that look perfectly at home in contemporary rooms today.

Whatever your style, you can now find a Country look or looks that suit you. And these suggestions are just the beginning. Some designers predict that the next "country" look on the American horizon will be Japanese Country, and a whole new idea of what it means to live close to nature, country style.

Furnishings in space

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Furnishing NASA's space station is a major technical challenge, but creature comforts such as stereo systems, artwork, games and even a vegetable garden may one day greet weary spacemen at the end of a busy day.

Astronauts may be able to climb on an exercise bike facing a video projection screen and cycle through Paris or the Rocky Mountains, while others settle into staterooms to read a novel stored in the station's computer.

Still others, perhaps after a sweaty day "outside" in a space suit, will head for a fully enclosed, zero gravity shower to wash off before popping dinner in a microwave, stopping along the way to gaze out a "picture" window at Earth below.

"It's important when we get to longer duration missions where we have space station people living in orbit ... we need to provide as earthlike an environment as we can or as comfortable an environment as we can," said Jeri Brown, an engineer at NASA's Johnson Space Center.

"I would say that in the space station, a lot of thought has gone into the crewman's comfort, if you will. There's a lot more attention placed on that during space station development than in the past.

NASA hopes to build the $8 billion space station in the early 1990s. Components of the outpost will be carried into orbit aboard shuttles and put together by space-walking construction crews.

At this early stage, Brown stressed few details of interior design have been nailed down and indeed, future decor will largely depend upon improvements on current technology. Still, a glance at some of the things NASA engineers are now studying provides a glimpse of what life may be like aboard the ultimate home away from home.

Ideal space decor will achieve a good balance between what you want to provide the crewman, what you have to provide the crewman and what the mission profile is, Brown said. "It's one big juggling act."

Current plans, which change week to week, call for two modules, one for experiments and one that would serve as crew quarters.

In the crew module, the kitchen will include the standard microwave oven, perhaps a freezer and maybe even a miniature vegetable garden.

"Obviously in the space station, you can't order out so we need to think ahead and provide them variety, possibly with some home growns," Brown said. "You might have a vegetable chamber where you actually grow things on board. There's work going on now to assess that.

Windows will be a major element in furnishing the space station and providing off-duty crew members with entertainment. Flat panes of glass may offer panoramic views, while rounded cupolas would in effect allow an astronaut to poke his or her head outside.

As for overall decor, Brown said studies are underway to determine the best materials, color schemes and lighting.

"There certainly has been some talk about how do we provide the interior decor," she said. "That might include some murals that are maybe Earth scenes. We are looking at what kinds of materials to use.

"Do I want to have walls that I have to wash once a week? Maybe not, maybe we'll have some kind of wall covering where you strip off a layer or coating. Maybe your mural is that coating."

She said private quarters for each astronaut will become "mandatory" to provide some degree of solitude during 90-day missions in a cramped environment with a half-dozen roommates.

Each "stateroom" will be equipped with a computer terminal for entertainment as well as business and a "sleep station" that may be either a sleeping bag like those used on the shuttle or something more solid. Small portholes may be included.

"We see the crew quarters as not only a place where you would go to sleep or get dressed but a place where you can also read, you could access the data management system so you could do a range of activities," Brown said.

Weightlessness is one of the more technically challenging aspects of interior design in space, and this is especially true of the station's bathroom. A normal shower and toilet are out of the question because without gravity, shower water — and other things — would simply float about, posing real danger to the crew.

The toilet probably will be similar to the one aboard the space shuttle in which lower air pressure in the bowl does the job of gravity.

As for the shower, engineers are studying a fully enclosed stall that an astronaut could climb into. Floating inside, the crew member would use a hand-held nozzle to bathe while lower air pressure would continuously pull water into drains.

The kid look: reality versus the ideal

By KAREN TIMMONS
United Press International

Traditional, Modern, Country, Eclectic. When it comes to furnishings, these are the decorating ideals many Americans — guided by the glossy pages of magazines — strive for in their homes.

But aesthetic ideal quickly clashes with reality when there are children in the house. The bare fact is that a majority of American homes, regardless of the tastes of the adults living there, are decorated in variations on the "kid scheme" — a style which, at best might be described as cluttered, at worst, condemned.

Children never merely live in a house. They take it over.

People with children do not have real furniture anymore. They have motley collections of indoor play ground equipment that originated in a furniture store — couches that sag to the floor from doing trampoline duty, dining room tables with ping pong paddle scars.

Oh, there may be lovely, once fine, antiques in the living room, but the kid scheme dictates that they will be adorned with Barbie doll accouterments and the rings of a dozen forgotten Kool-Aid glasses.

The kitchen may be the latest clutter-free European design, but you can bet that somewhere it is sticky with dribbled honey and there are at least three dirty cereal bowls in the sink and upwards of 14 marbles gathering dust under the stove.

The irony here is that many couples today start having children just after they've gotten to the point where they can throw out the brick and board bookcases and buy their first real couch, usually in off white. People with off-white couches deserve children as a lesson in humility.

The naive — read "childless" — who might doubt the inevitability of the kid scheme in homes with little ones need only leaf through the pages of "House and Garden," and note the absence of roller skates in the pictures.

Unless you happen to like the visual effect of a playpen in the dining room or dirty gym socks on the kitchen counters, the kid scheme is, in a word, ugly.

While parents yearning for coffee tables untouched by teething toddlers have little hope of escaping the kid scheme, there are at least subtle variations available for every home — depending on the size, sex, interests and eating habits of the children living there.

Some kids, for example, lend a Hansel and Gretel motif to the overall kid look. This is characterized by paths of crumbs that meander from the kitchen to every other room in the house. Others produce a more arty, mod effect, smudging their peanut butter and jelly on the walls with a kind of Picasso flair.

The age of the child is a major influence on the type of kid scheme accessories found in many homes. That cute, 50-gallon-size diaper pail an infant girl lends to the bathroom's decor will likely be replaced later on by a teenager's equally large and attractive collection of "absolutely essential" cosmetic products.

Often, however, the age factor only means that the sneakers in the middle of the living room floor get bigger every year.

In spite of the overwhelming evidence against mixing aesthetic design and children, those glossy home magazines continue to exhibit true courage (or is it ignorance?) with occasional forays into the very heart of a kid's world — his or her own bedroom.

Editors insist on running eternally optimistic articles that show parents how to decorate a child's bedroom so it is both appealing and maintenance-free. The accompanying pictures often feature adorable beds built to look like race cars or space ships flanked by nifty storage spaces that make it easy for Junior to put his gear away.

Sure.

Have you noticed that there is never a banana peel draped over the headboard of that adorable bed? That the bed itself is actually made? That there isn't any grape juice on the carpet or humongous ugly plastic toy too big to fit tidily into any known drawer or shelf?

Did you notice that even when they put actual children in the pictures the kids are never eating potato chips, jumping on the adorable bed or doodling on the wallpaper with crayons?

Of course, if all it took was shutting the door on that bedroom reeking of aging orange peels and dirty socks, parents could lay claim to the rest of the house in tranquil "Better Homes and Gardens" style.

Pictured above, every parents dream of the perfect child's bedroom. Unfortunately, neither children nor reality seldom live that way. The "kid scheme" — a style best described as cluttered — is most common in households with children. The kid scheme is, in a word, ugly, while parents continue to dream of a coffee table unmarred by teeth marks.

But children seem to have a ripple effect on the homes they live in. Their grimy fingerprints have a ten- dency to creep into or widening circles into the formerly neat, adult sanctuaries of the house.

Fascinating Facts

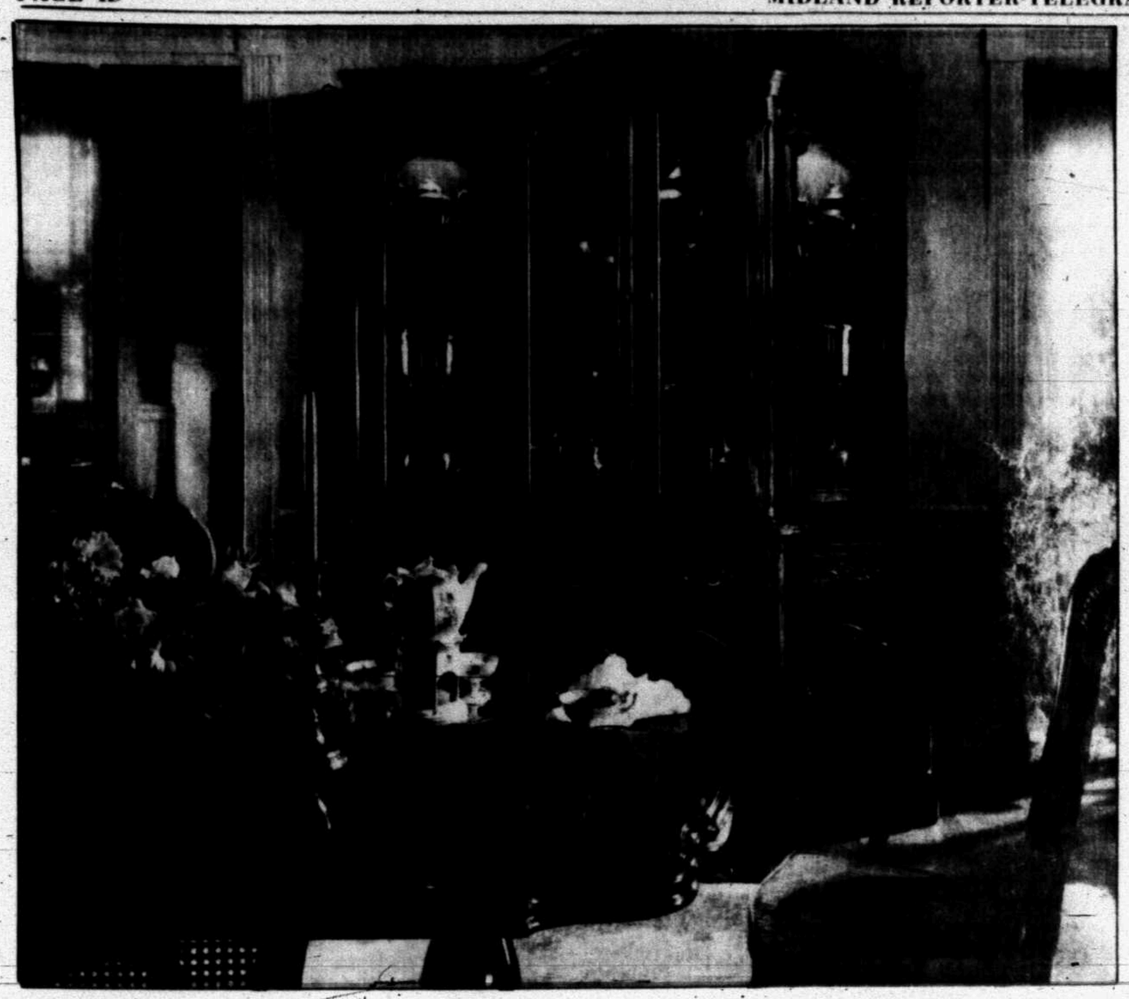

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers

The earliest fire engine for which a complete description is available was used in the city of Nuremberg, Germany, 1657. The engine was drawn by two horses, required twenty-eight men to operate the pumps, and threw a jet of water an inch in diameter to a height of eighty feet. The introduction of the steam engine and the rapid growth of cities in the 19th century accelerated the development of the fire engine. In the U.S. in 1853, the city of Cincinnati purchased a number of steam-operated fire engines.

In the American Home it's traditional to give pride of place to the dining room and why not? That's where the family's finest is on display, where new friends and old are welcomed, where special occastions turn into family history. A recent survey shows that Americans prefer to decorate their homes in traditional or contemporary styles, rather than deco or high-trend.

How Americans feather the nest

By KATE CALLEN
United Press International

Americans love to fantasize about redecorating their homes but they hate to part with their tried-and-true furniture, according to a consumer survey on trends in home decor.

"Feathering the Nest: A Contrast of Furniture Attitudes and Imagery," conducted last fall by Knapp Communications, also revealed that when people do buy furniture, they are willing to pay extra for durability and they prefer traditional and contemporary styles to high-tech or deco trends.

The survey of 2,000 households selected at random shows that "there's an attachment to the home, a long, strong emotional tie to what's in it," says Robert Brown, a vice president of Knapp, the Los Angeles-based publisher of "Architectural Digest" and "Bon Appetit."

"We trade cars every three or four years and don't even blink — and cars are more expensive," Brown observes. "But we expect our chairs to last a generation."

Questionnaires were mailed to a national sample of households. Participants in the survey were asked to rate their degree of interest in various aspects of home decor, with responses ranging from complete interest to complete disinterest.

Not surprisingly, affluent consumers and those who had recently purchased furniture expressed a greater overall interest in decorating their homes. But all groups showed a high degree of ongoing interest in decor, and even non-affluent buyers reported that their interest was growing.

Further, the survey report states, "consumers do not consider furniture as a 'temporary' thing. They are not eager to buy new furniture when they get tired of what they have ... perhaps they never get 'tired' of it."

However, "consumers are continually looking for 'decorating ideas,'" and their primary source of inspiration seems to be magazines rather than experts in interior design.

Roughly one-half of all respondents said they usually consult newspapers, decorating magazines and furniture catalogs when selecting furniture. A second tier of likely sources included friends and family, home improvement magazines and store salespeople. Interior designers ranked last.

The most popular styles among respondents were:

—Traditional, which Brown describes as "largely European and somewhat detailed in style."

—Contemporary, "anything that is simple, functional, designed for comfort."

—Country, which Brown reports is most popular in certain regions, and,

—Early American or colonial, which the report found "is not as well liked by the affluent as by the non-affluent."

Brown predicts that two styles that ranked in the middle will soon catch on big: Oriental, because of "an increasing awareness of Japan and China as a culture," and Scandinavian, because "new Northern European outlets are coming into this country and making an impact."

The last-place finishers were styles that are featured prominently in trendy furnishing magazines: "eclectic" and "deco." Brown believes that American consumers "don't know what eclectic means" (it's a creative mix of different styles) and, unlike Europeans, find high-tech — deco —, somewhat intimidating.

"Europeans are design-conscious," he says, "Americans are taste-conscious."

Once style has been chosed, the majority of respondents said their first consideration in buying furniture is "how well it's made." The most prized characteristics were "durability," "quality" and "value"; the least prized were "hand-crafted," "prestigious" and "trendy."

When they're ready to make the purchase, the vast majority of respondents visit a furniture store. Discount furniture stores came in a distant second, largely because "they don't have much of an image for quality or selection," says Brown.

Department stores placed third, followed by antique stores and designer showrooms (which, according to Brown, will turn away customers who are not accompanied by a professional designer).

More and more department stores don't want to be in the furniture business," Brown reports, "because furniture doesn't move as fast as fashions" and has come to represent a waste of valuable retail floor space.

"Bloomingdale's in New York is a huge exception to that rule," Brown points out. The stunning room layouts that are a signature of Bloomingdale's thriving furniture departments "have the look of a sexy furniture store, a very slick opepration.

"But then, Bloomingdale's is the exception to every rule," he quipped.

Make the room with accessories

Maybe you really love frogs, and you collect them in crystal, fabric, stone and wood.

Or maybe your thing is brass and copper: pots, pitchers, trays and plates as well as chafing dishes and molds.

Or maybe you've always loved the color purple. So you've got a hunk of rock amythest, a print of lilacs, and a fuzzy lavender afghan. Whatever you like — your favorite color, shape, animal, historical period, country or geogfaphic location, mineral or metal — you can build a truly self-expressive room around it.

More and more, "eclectic" decorating means creating a look and a room that reinforces and pleases you, yourself. Interior design "rules" shouldn't be used to stifle your self-expression. They should help you make decisions about what works for balance, proportion, groupings, and color coordination, without agonizing over them.

Take a trip to several furniture stores near you that feature room settings and designer assistance. Look at how the accessories are used, grouped and displayed. Buy up this month's issues of home decorating magazines and study them for how accessories relate to each other and to the larger pieces of furniture in the room.

Pay special attention to how wall art is grouped and balanced. You may want to sketch your own wall art pieces in a few different groupings to see how they will look before you commit to hammer and nails.

Whether you're working with wall art or tabletop accessories, it's usually easiest to decide on the location of the biggest piece in a group, and place the medium and smaller pieces around it.

Odd numbers of items in a grouping usually look better than even numbers. Three or five pieces may be best to start a grouping with. You can always add pieces.

These days, the little collectible boxes to house lots of tiny ceramic items are less interesting, in most cases, than making you own groupings. It may be more fun to spot a frog, for example, in each of several groupings around your room, than to see them all in one place. And you beloved brass and copper pieces may have more impact casting their light from different groupings, instead of from just one.

Of course, if your collectibles are very tiny, fragile, or valuable, they belong in a case. But then, there's still the whole realm of functional accessories you can use to bring you personality into your room.

Functional accessories include lamps, clocks, pillows, baskets, plants and planters, vases and pitchers, trivets, candlesticks, ashtrays, mirrors, magazine racks, and drink coasters.

Furniture stores with accessorized displays may be the best source of ideas for how to work with functional accessories. You can actually sit in the room and note how much room it takes to have an end-table grouping plus a functional lamp, ashtray, coaster and place for a book.

Skylites let 'light' in SANFORD, Maine (AP) — America's trend toward lighter eating means more than just lower calories, says a New England skylight manufacturer.

A skylight might be the only way to open an inside room to the outdoors, according to a spokesman for Wasco Products, which produces skylights and roof windows.

With new concepts in product design and materials, many skylights — which once were chiefly primitive plastic bubbles nailed to the roof — are now leak-proof and energy-efficient units.

Ideas, not furniture

NEW YORK (AP) — Homeowners on a limited budget should redecorate with new ideas, not new furniture, according to Helen Marchesano, interior decorating instructor at the New York Institute of Technology.

A little imagination can create a beautiful new decor, yet save a lot of money, says Mrs. Marchesano, who also is head designer of Helen Marche Associates Inc.

Because furniture usually is the most costly element of a home overhaul, she advises trying to avoid buying new pieces. Instead, she explains, "rearrange the furniture you have and buy a few new accessories, such as curtains, wall hangings, paintings and throw pillows."

In setting out to create a new look, a fresh coat of paint can work wonders, says Mrs. Marchesano, and good decorators will try to incorporate as much of what you already own into your new decor.

This can be done by reupholstering sofas and chairs instead of recommending expensive replacements, she explains.

Single family home sales plunge again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new single family homes plunged by 13 percent in August, the fifth straight decline, but combined new and existing home sales still rose for the month, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

The dive from an annual rate of 686,000 in July to 594,000 in August was the sharpest month-to-month decline since January 1982 and represents the slowest pace of sales since August 1984, Census Bureau analysts said.

The sharp monthly setback came as something of a surprise to analysts. Some said it was a temporary blip caused by uncertainty over the impact of tax reform on home ownership.

Despite the monthly decline, sales for the year to date are still running higher than they have since 1978.

The report followed a survey last week by the National Association of Realtors that charted a 7 percent gain in sales of existing homes to 3,690,000 at an annual rate, the swiftest pace of home resales since October 1979.

Mark Obrinski, chief economist with the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, said he saw no cause for alarm in the August figures, noting that combined new and existing home sales for the month were 3.6 percent higher than July.

"My best guess is that buyers are beginning to make a choice based on price," Obrinski said. "We've seen new home prices increase about 10 percent during the past year, but for existing homes (price increases) have been running about half that.

"In the hot markets, there may be a situation where there's less space to build new homes," he said. "Consequently there's a price squeeze there that isn't as great for existing homes."

Another report released Tuesday by the realtor's group showed a significant improvement in housing affordability conditions in August.

NAR's housing affordability index rose to 104.1, the highest level since July 1978, meaning more than half of the nation's families would qualify for a conventional loan on a median priced home.

The index is based on the relationship between home prices, interest rates and family income.

The median price of an existing home declined $300 to $80,000 in August while mortgage rates inched up from 10.26 percent to 10.27 percent during the month.

Median family income rose from $28,590 to $28,712 during the period, industry analysts said.

The median price of a new home was $91,400 in August, down sharply from $94,700 in July, the Commerce Department report said. The average price was $116,300, reflecting a significant proportion of expensive homes on the market.

New home sales totaled 535,000 in the first eight months of 1986, up 11 percent from 484,000 during the same period last year.

A key factor behind the generally brisk pace of new and existing home sales is low mortgage interest rates.

LET'S TALK REAL ESTATE...

Joanne Langston

Recently I've written on Langston Monarch's commitment to growth and expansion - a reflection we hope of the future for all of us in Midland as well as the city itself.
These commitments included:
- A 40% increase in sales associates
- An expanded Corporate/Relocation Service Department
- A new listing/sales processor
- A new training director
- A new corporate caller
- An expanded market share

And now we are happy to add two more:
Our own in-office mortgage program for transferees. It is backed by the strength of the prestigious Prudential Insurance Company, applications are simple and quick, and can be made even on weekends, approvals are usually obtained in only 14 days, rates are competative! Another first for Langston Monarch.
An effective, comprehensive warranty program that covers the property not only for the buyer during the crucial first year, but also covers the property for the seller during the marketing period. And unbelievably, the reasonable cost of the warranty policy is fully charged, only once, to the property at sale!
Do call us for more details on these exciting new programs!

- No closing costs.
- Great values.
- All homes priced for quick sale.
- Call brokers below for information on investor financing.

Financing example as of 9/26/86: $50,000 purchase price, 3% down, $48,500 loan at 10.125% Annual Percentage Rate; 360 monthly payments of $431.00.

The dream of homeownership can come true. Because, for a limited time only, down payments for these properties are only 3%.

What's more, there are no closing costs, so you save even more. You pay only normal prepaid items; we pay the rest.

Plus, your new loan is assumable once. So later on, if you decide to sell the house, a qualified buyer can assume your loan as long as it's more than 12 but less than 48 months old.

With all this going for you, you can probably afford more home than you planned. So look over the list; make your calls. But hurry. You may never have another chance to get the best deal in town.

CARAMELS & APPLES... Into New Possibilities

Tucked away in the minds of many Americans are the fond memories of family apple-picking outings each autumn. Thinking back, it's easy to call to mind the ritual looked forward to by family members of all ages.

Who could forget the tempting scent of a warm apple-cinnamon pie or the tangy blend of a tart apple wrapped in sweet caramel?

The Kraft Kitchens have not forgotten those mouth-watering memories. In keeping with today's fast-paced world of innovative ideas and trendy creations, they've developed a batch of exciting caramel and apple recipes that are sure to become the traditions of tomorrow.

These new-variations of favorite desserts—a Layered Caramel Apple Biscuit, Louisiana Style Bread Pudding and the Caramel Apple Puff Pancake—in addition to the homemade Caramel Apple recipe itself, will convince you that caramels are a sweet addition to apple recipes regardless of the season.

When you cook with caramels, follow these helpful hints to make the most of their rich and creamy flavor:

- To avoid scorching when melting caramels, use a heavy saucepan over low heat.
- Once the caramels begin to melt, stir them gently with a wooden spoon.
- For caramel apples, allow about 20 minutes to melt caramels in a heavy 1-1/2 quart saucepan on a conventional rangetop.

Whether you choose to pick your apples at the local orchard or at the produce section of your favorite supermarket, you may become confused by the numerous varieties available. McIntosh and Jonathon apples are favorites for dipping as well as cooking. Other popular apples for cooking are the Granny Smith and the Golden Delisious varieties.

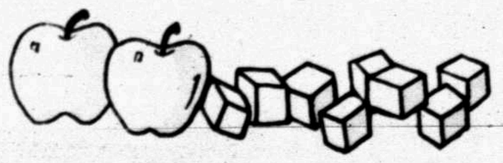

When selecting your apples, pick up the fruit and feel it—an apple should be smooth and have unblemished skin. Soft or mealy apples are not good for cooking.

Finally, before you begin peeling, slicing or chopping, wash the apples in a mild soap solution to remove their natural waxy coating.

When you finish the preparations, you'll be ready to dip right into those sweet n' tart sensations that will leave your taste buds clamoring for another bite!

These tasty variations on traditional desserts features the tart-sweet combination of crisp apples and creamy caramels. Clockwise from the top: Caramel Apples, Layered Caramel Apple Biscuit, Caramel Apple Puff Pancake, Louisiana Style Bread Pudding.

CARAMEL APPLES

Tempt your taste buds with a tart, juicy apple tucked inside sweet, chewy caramel. Here's a recipe for the classic taste that has delighted generations of caramel lovers.

1 14-oz. bag caramels
2 tablespoons water
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks

Melt caramels with water in 1-1/2 quart heavy saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth. Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot caramel sauce; turn until coated. Scrape off excess sauce from bottom of apples. Place on greased wax paper. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften. 4 to 5 servings

Variations: Substitute pears for apples.

Substitute 14-oz. bag chocolate fudgies for caramels and 1 tablespoon milk for water.

Add 2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter with caramels and water. Roll apple in chopped peanuts.

Dip caramel-coated apples in chopped nuts, flaked coconut, chocolate pieces or miniature marshmallows; cut in half.

Microwave: Microwave caramels and water in small deep glass bowl on High 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, stirring after each minute until sauce is smooth. Continue as directed (if caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples).

LAYERED CARAMEL APPLE BISCUIT

Take shortcake away from summer strawberries with this combo of fresh apples and a sweet biscuit...it's a sure winner any time of year!

Melt caramels with water in heavy saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth. Add apples; heat. Fill and top biscuit with apple mixture and whipped topping. Serve immediately. 8 servings

5 dry bread slices, cubed (4 cups)
2 eggs, beaten

Variations: Substitute brandy for bourbon.
Omit bourbon; increase water to 1/4 cup.

CARAMEL APPLE PUFF PANCAKE

Topped with a delicate sweet sauce and a dollop of whipped cream, this variation of the German "apfelpfannkuchen" is best served as a dessert after a light meal. Great for the brunch bunch!

28 caramels
1/4 cup water

Bake on lowest oven rack at 450°, 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350°; continue baking 10 minutes or until golden brown. Fill with apple mixture; top with sour cream. Serve immediately. 6 to 8 servings

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Some 250 Midland Community Theatre members and volunteers turned out last Sunday evening to celebrate the theatre's 40th birthday.

Festivities began with the theatre's annual meeting, presided over by retiring board president Tom Madonna. After the business, the group gathered in the theatre lobby for a reception, with cries of "Do you remember?" as volunteers greeted old friends and reminisced about theatre days of yore.

Tribute was paid to the thousands of volunteers who have worked on MCT's past 266 shows as the revelers assembled in Theatre I. Bill Shaner narrated a slide presentation, which featured productions dating back to the theatre's humble beginnings in 1946 and to its present status as an internaitonally recognized community theatre. The group began performing in various school auditoriums and now enjoys the luxury of a world class facility on West Wadley Ave.

As the slide show came to a close, Mike McLaren and Max Howard took their places to recreate their popular radio show of the Sixties and Seventies, "Breakfast a la Carte." (Remember: "This is Mike on the left... and Max on the right?") They reminisced about the theatre's many high points, including the unforgettable early morning fire in 1979. Upon hearing the news on the radio, kind souls came pouring in from all over the city (many having no theatre connections whatsoever) to clean up the debris and make sure the show, "Dracula," would go on as scheduled that night in true theatre tradtion.

And there was more to come. A buffet supper, topped off by three artfully decorated cakes commemorating past shows, was served in the theatre lobby. Meanwhile, there was dancing in Theatre II to the music of "Dow Jones Average" and vocalist Janet Pollard.

Two very popular ladies received special recognition during the festivities. Bebe Fisher, who has retired after 25 years as the theatre's secretary, was awarded an honorary life membership. Mary Lou Cassidy was the choice for this year's "Ham Hock of the Year."

To conclude the evening, Bill Pomeroy emceed a tribute to past MCT musicals. A number of Midlanders came out of "retirement" to sing parts from their original roles. Hats off to Mary Frances Beverley for coordinating the evening's events.

TO ANNOUNCE THE ENGAGEMENT of her daughter, Mary Moberly, and Scott Thompson, Betty (Mrs. George) Moberly entertained with a beautifully appointed tea Wednesday afternoon at Midland Country Club. Plans were revealed for a Dec. 20 wedding to take place at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Tea tir e refreshments were served fr n a triple-clustered table arrangement, draped in a mauve pink and topped with lace handkerchief overlays. A silver epergne containing a mixture of exquisite blossoms in pink tones centered the table.

Harpist Tray Andra provided background music throughout the event. Special guests were Scott's mother, Charlene Fitzgibbons, and his grandmother, Lorena McKee, both of Dallas.

Mary remained in town for the wedding of Anne de Compiegne and Jim Lutz and the attendant festivities. She was one of Anne's bridesmaids.

SIX MIDLANDERS ENJOYED a long weekend in Chattanooga, Tenn., recently. Dottie and Jack Fox, Cindy and John Michael Warburton, Jo Stroker and Frank Petty flew in for opening night of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" at The Little Theatre of Chattanooga.

The group was reunited with good friends and former Midland Community Theatre staff members, Ted Strickland and Brett Batterson, as well as Ted's wife, Arlene and son, Danny. Ted now serves as managing/artistic director of the Chattanooga theatre, and Brett is designer and technical director. The Midlanders also enjoyed a visit with Jerry Yoder of New York City, who choreographed "Best Little Whorehouse" for both the Midland and Chattanooga theatres.

Other highlights of their weekend were parties held in conjunction with the show's opening, a tour of the Jack Daniels Distillery in Lynchburg, Tenn., and Sunday brunch on the Tennessee River aboard the "Southern Belle."

IN CELEBRATION OF THEIR 59th wedding anniversary, Dorothy and Louie A. Johnson of Midland were honored recently with a luncheon. The event was in the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Barbara and Windell Thomason.

Many of the guests were longtime friends of the Johnsons from Belview Baptist Church. A memory book was presented to the guests of honor by their daughters and grandchildren.

Included in the house party were the Johnson' daughter, Helen (Mrs. E.D.) Scarth of Burleson, granddaughters Debra (Mrs. Gary) Mask of Houston and Beth (Mrs. Frank) Alvarado Jr. of Midland, and a friend, Louise (Mrs. Willie) Keel of Fort Worth. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have two daughters, six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

AFTER A LONG, HOT SUMMER, members of the Midland Country Club Ladies Association enjoyed seeing one another again when the group convened for its September luncheon meeting.

The program featured a style show by Julian Gold. The striking collection included lingerie, daytime and casual wear and glamorous evening apparel. Modeling were Sandy Sledge, Jan Kalil, Jayne Houghton, Maria Barbara, Jill Pogue, Dolores Mitchell, Chris Johnson and Jan Schiebout.

Covering the ballroom ceiling and adorning the fashion runway, a profusion of colorful helium balloons and streamers created a festive atmosphere for the afternoon's events. Favors were samples of Oscar de la Renta eau de toilette.

Heart attack treatments potentially expensive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The worldwide market potential for the treatment of heart attacks was recently estimated at $1.5 billion by a biotechnology security analyst here. Biotechnology research some day may help reduce this expense. For example, a process developed by Phillips Petroleum permits more efficient production of streptokinase, which is widely used to dissolve blood clots associated with heart attacks.

Professor: Traffic jams centuries-old problem

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "A traffic jam is like a haunted house — it changes a normal citizen into a monster," says Raymond W. Novaco, associate professor at the University of California at Irvine.

Novaco, who is an authority on transportation and the behavior of drivers and who had just had his first ride through Tucson, talked about "Traffic Congestion and Commuter Stress" here during a recent carpooling meeting.

And he told his audience that traffic congestion has been a worldwide problem since the Romans first used horse-drawn carts. Rome and Mexico City, he added, are the most dangerous cities for vehicle traffic.

"In Rome, a red light is merely a suggestion," Novaco quipped.

He said his studies have verified a relationship between exposure to rush-hour traffic and adverse physiological reactions, including chest pain and alteration in the rhythm of the heart beat.

To make matters worse, Novaco said, increased temperature and a high noise level in traffic produce higher levels of stress, as well as discomfort and general fatigue. The heat and humidity of traffic also result in decreased driving performance and errors such as lane drift, speeding, and tailgating, Novaco said.

He said his research also indicates that people who drive their cars to work alone have higher absenteeism rates than people who carpool or use other kinds of transportation.

In a survey conducted in Salt Lake City, Novaco said, about 12 percent of the men and 18 percent of the women who were interviewed said they could "gladly kill another driver" blocking them in traffic.

Raising butterflies pads rural villagers' incomes

Copley News Service

A growing international demand for tropical butterflies can easily bring predominantly rural villagers in Papua New Guinea supplemental income of $50 to as much as $1,200 a year.

The government has made "butterfly farming" part of the nation's village economic development plan.

Villagers clear small garden areas, plant leafy food plants for larvae, together with the nectar-producing flowering plants that adult butterflies feed on. This enriched habitat attracts and holds a breeding population that becomes a self-renewing resource.

Backyards become romantic retreats

Better Homes and Gardens suggests setting the mood with a lattice archway, arbor or trellis. Install a garden seat or gazebo.

Tiny bulbs open lighting possibilities

Associated Press

Sleek torcheres, streamlined desk lamps, saucer-thin hanging lights and delicate sconces: all are lighting designs made possible by tiny, slim bulbs.

The bulbs, invented by General Electric about 30 years ago, have been used as car headlights, in industry and by the avant-garde among lamp designers, especially in Europe, for years. But according to Better Homes and Gardens, halogen lighting is beginning to enter mainstream America.

Prized for the quality of the light, which is intense and closer to sun light, and for the freedom the tiny size gives lighting designers, the bulbs also deliver greater efficiency. They give more light for the wattage and last about twice as long as other bulbs.

The drawback: Many lamps, particularly imports, are not UL approved, and can pose dangers because the bulbs burn very hot.

MISTER ROGERS

Children share general fear of skeltons

By FRED ROGERS with BARRY HEAD

A mother writes: "Just last night my 4-year-old son woke up at midnight crying and with his heart pounding like crazy. Once again he'd had a dream about a skeleton, and skeletons seem to frighten him a whole lot."

That's not the only letter we've had about skeletons. In fact, I've come to believe that skeletons are one of those widely shared images that crop up among children everywhere. The skeleton is a powerful symbol in the myths and legends and art of cultures all over the world, and when a symbol seems to be that universal, it's a good guess that it's origins lie somewhere in those early-childhood concerns that are universal as well.

The sight of a real skeleton can be unnerving for any of us. If you've come across one in an art studio, a science class or a medical setting, it might have given you at least an eerie shiver to think that there was such a thing inside you and that skeleton had once been inside a living person — and, of course, that one day that's all that might be left of your body. Real life skeletons can bring us face-to-face, suddenly and sharply, with the fact of death.

Though skeletons are likely to be associated in some way with death in children's minds as well, a 4-year old's notion of exactly what death is will almost certainly be a far cry from our own. It will depend on experience, talk in the family, and the unique nature of each child's capacity for fantasy. At the same time, the general idea of death will, for most children, carry with it some sense of separation — a time when pets or people go away and don't come back. Fears about separation from early caregivers is certainly one of those childhood "universals."

Other kinds of separations, though, may be quite a different matter. For instance, when a younger brother or sister is born, separating from that little intruder who goes away. It was interesting in the letter that mother wrote to hear about another dream her son had had the day before the one about the skeleton: "He woke up frightened because she recounted he dreamed an alligator was eating his 2-year-old sister into a skeleton."

It's likely those two dreams on those consecutive nights were closely related. How trusting that boy is to be able to share them with his mom. All she had to do was listen and her 4-year-old was telling what was foremost in his inner life. Had she called his dream "nonsense" he might never have shared another — ever.

All this reminded me of a friend telling me how his oldest son, who was then also 4 years old, reacted to his baby brother's birth. Looking down into the crib shortly after the baby came back from the hospital, he turned to his father and said, "Gee, Dad, if Andrew died, he'd make an awfully small skeleton, wouldn't he?" That Dad is an insightful trustworthy listener, too.

Two other "universals" among young children seem to be a time of anxiety about the wholeness and soliidness of their bodies, inside and out, and the way children use play as a way of mastering their fears about scary things. These two came to mind when a friend recalled an early, fierce attachment to one of his first Halloween costumes — a costume of a skeleton.

He wore it even when it had become far too small for him; he just didn't want to give it up. No one can know for sure, but the sight of his "bones" on the outside, all in place and well-connected, might have given him a little better idea and greater confidence about how things were put together on the inside.

What's more, pretending that he was a skeleton, able to control what that skeleton did, including just how scary it became, may have helped him understand that moving-talking kinds of skeletons were only make-believe, like his costume, after all.

The images that visit different children in their dreams or that they may use in their play are sometimes uncannily similar. It may be a long time before we fully understand where they come from or what they represent.

Perhaps all we can hope to do is to remind ourselves that these images do come from somewhere real, and they do represent real things. If we can do that much, we may be better able to give these symbols — and the minds that conjure them up — the caring attention they deserve.

Fred Rogers is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A call home can get an answer even when nobody is there. While any answering machine can do that these days, General Electric has a new electronic appliance, the HomeMinder, that will not only answer the phone, but also, at the touch of a few buttons on the telephone, flip on the air-conditioner, turn on the stereo and the outside lights and start heating supper in the microwave oven.

The HomeMinder can also be operated by remote control from inside the house. It can adjust the temperature, dim the lights, brew the coffee and turn on the television in time for "The Cosby Show."

It can be programmed in advance to do most of these things without additional cueing. It can randomly switch lights on and off to make a house look occupied when it is not. And it has a built-in program that leads the viewer through a television display of rooms where appliances are to be turned on and off.

The main control box, about the size of a cable television converter, plugs into the back of a television and communicates with appliances via impulses through existing electrical wiring. Each appliance controlled by the HomeMinder must be plugged into a small controlling module. Most are about the size of a cigarette pack.

Each HomeMinder comes with one module to control a lamp and one to control an appliance. Others are available separately. The system sells for $1,500 to $2,000 and is available through some builders and distributors of electronic equipment.

Painted furniture becoming popular

Associated Press

Painted furniture — whether it's antique, merely old, or brand new — is enjoying a revival. What today's popular pieces have in common is their roots in the folk art tradition, according to Better Homes and Gardens.

Scout yard sales and secondhand stores for gems that feature elaborate, stylized artwork, or rescue a dilapidated Victorian daybed by painting it brick red and sponging on a dash of gold pigment. Up-to-date do-it-yourselfers are now applying decorative paint to the very furniture they would have stained.

AT WIT'S END

Real-life drama too much

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

For years, art has imitated life. Then it began getting closer and closer to reality and if it weren't for Steven Spielberg I wouldn't be able to escape at all.

Real-life drama anymore goes right from the headlines to the big screen and is no more than a limo drive away. Within days after the 13-year-old girl from California turned in her parents for alleged drug use, nine major production companies wanted to acquire rights to her story.

Two Russian dissidents who came to this country captured the imagination of so many writers, they ended up getting an agent to handle all the offers.

Two networks are racing against time to bring out the real-life story of two Utah boys who killed their grandfather at the urging of their mother.

Where are many of tomorrow's writers coming from? Most of them are men and women serving time. It used to be when people were hauled into court or sentenced to prison, they shouted, "Get me a lawyer!" Now it's, "Get me an agent!" Thus we have tomes by John DeLorean and Jean Harris (There are advantages. At least they don't have to endure the grueling 30-cities-in-two-weeks book tour.)

It seemed to start with the expose of Watergate in Woodward and Bernstein's "All the President's Men." Six or seven of the President's Men felt obliged to retaliate by writing their version. Then Nora Ephron, the wife of Bernstein, wrote her version of Bernstein ("Heartburn") and I suppose it will only be a matter of time until he writes his version of her book, possibly called "Slow Burn."

Forget creative writing classes. If you're the son or daughter of a celebrity, there's a "Dearest" book in your future. If that isn't possible, work for someone in power and then split and sing like a canary. Read the papers and watch the 6 o'clock news for sensational divorces, kinky murders, justice on the subway, triumph over adversity, foreclosures on farms and of course the big three: sex, violence and Nazis.

I've been watching a lot of "Misery" with credits and frankly my body can't absorb anymore. How I hunger for the old Westerns where men were men and women wore cross-your-heart bras and the Indians had vaccinations under their armbands. How I yearn for the old musicals where a man and woman sat on a park bench and suddenly a 60-piece orchestra came out of the trees in time for the love song. And the absurdity of a funny man with glasses who found himself dangling from the hands of a clock 20 stories above the traffic.

Anyone planning an escape? Take me with you.

Mickey-San right at home in Japan

By CLYDE HABERMAN

TOKYO — When it comes to Mickey Mouse in Japan, Joe Louis had it right: You can run, but you can't hide.

Mickey is everywhere, to such an extent that there must be Japanese youngsters convinced he originated in their country. He is to be found on their sandals and on their robes and futons. As prominently as in the United States, he is splashed all over lunch pails and shopping bags, across book covers and T-shirts. A while back, a Tokyo clothing store for young children figured correctly that it could cash in on the word association by calling itself Miki House.

So it comes as no surprise that Mickey Mouse's premier showcase, Disneyland, has taken root in Japan, becoming as certifiable a tourist attraction as the Imperial Palace. One could argue that it's even bigger. Few people get to see much of the palace beyond its outer gardens. But about 35 million children and adults have walked through Cinderella's castle since Tokyo Disneyland opened three and a half years ago in the eastern suburb of Urayasu.

NINETY PERCENT of the customers are Japanese. Foreigners apparently include people who have come to Japan mainly to see the park. Why else do buses stop there straight from the international airport at Narita?

Disneyland's success had an immediate shellshock effect on entrenched amusement parks, forcing them to come up with new, jazzier rides to reverse sudden declines in attendance. Other ripple effects were felt, too. For the last few years, residents of Tokyo's Meguro section have had a mock Cinderella's castle in their midst. It was, until recently, a so-called "love hotel," used by couples who wanted the privacy they could not get in their crowded homes.

For the most part, Tokyo Disneyland is a carbon copy of the two Disney parks in California and Florida. Anyone with fantasies of seeing Cinderella as an overworked geisha is going to return home unrewarded.

OBVIOUSLY, THERE are concessions to local needs. On Peter Pan's Flight, Captain Hook pleads for Mr. Smee's help in Japanese. But except for a few other rides and for the signs, almost everything else is in English, down to the professionally jolly, gee-isn't-this-fun-boys-and-girls voice booming across the public-address system that the something-or-other jamboree is about to begin.

This sometimes produces bemused looks from the customers, most of whom, it is safe to say, have no idea what a jamboree is. But according to the people at Disneyland, that's just the way the Japanese owner, a company called Oriental Land, wanted it. The idea was to replicate the American experience, they say. And it probably makes sense, judging from Mickey Mouse's ubiquity and from the millions of Japanese who have visited the original Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.

Still, an occasional eyebrow has been arched over how resolutely American the park is. On a daylong excursion to a place such as this, Japanese like to bring along box lunches known as obento, usually beds of rice with fish or meat and vegetables. But obento are flatly prohibited inside the Magic Kingdom, a restriction equivalent, some say, to a ban on hot dogs at a Fourth of July picnic.

Japanese are nothing if not stiff-upper-lipped, however. Visitors come and munch on fried chicken and hamburgers, none the worse for wear. But as a concession to those who insist on obento, the management set up small picnic areas for them — outside the front gate.

There are subtle differences from the American Disney parks that, for a serious discussion, require a connoisseur's eye. My children, experts in such matters, say that the Tokyo park is cleaner than the one in Anaheim, although my memory is that California's was also clean enough to squeak.

HERE AND there, the rides are slightly different. There is no Matterhorn in Japan. The heart-stopping roller coaster is Space Mountain. Whatever the name, the effect is the same — one hour of standing on line followed by three minutes of unbridled terror.

Labor relations are hardly the same. Unlike the situation in America, Goofy has yet to be spotted walking a picket line in Urayasu.

Japanese seem to home in on the clearly identifiable Disney characters, paying less attention to other attractions. While the Haunted Mansion gets a good crowd, Peter Pan's Flight draws mobs. On a recent Sunday, the rain was hammering down without relief, but it nonetheless required a 70-minute wait to join Wendy in Never-Never Land. A new attraction, something called the Cinderella Castle Mystery Tour, had two-hour lines, good for killing an entire afternoon.

Japanese stoicism on the lines is especially noteworthy when one considers that the Disney parks in the United States were built in warm, sunny places, while Tokyo is cold or wet, or both, much of the year. I was persuaded to visit Urayasu — a more forthright person would have said dragged — by my children on a singularly dreary, bone-rattlingly damp Sunday last December. As miserable as the weather was, so were the lines.

AT TOKYO Disneyland, more floor space is devoted to souvenir stands and shops than in the United States. To understand why, one must first recognize that Japanese — to make a generalization that has millions of exceptions — are committed to the pursuit of kawaii. That is the word for cute.

There is a consuming passion for all things kawaii, especially among young women who, independent of Disneyland, are widely known as Peter Pans because of their seeming reluctance to grow up. They pour into the streets of Tokyo's trendy neighborhoods in hopelessly cute outfits of pink and white, looking for all the world like ambulatory boxes of Good and Plenty.

Disneyland is a perfect place for them. What could be more kawaii than Mickey Mouse and Company? So visitors leave the park bottom-heavy with memento-stuffed bags. This satisfies another requirement, too: it is important for Japanese to bring back souvenirs for family and friends whenever they return from a trip.

What Tokyo Disneyland reinforces is how comfortable Japan is with Western infusions. Often, these imports are given interesting twists, and are made to seem somehow indigenously Japanese. Baseball is the most obvious, if clich'ed, example. There certainly is none of the agonizing that the French put themselves through over the corrupting effects of American language and ways.

Now, France is about to get a Disneyland of its own.

As for Japan's version of Mickey Mouse, he does not bow. He walks right up to visitors and shakes their hands with no self-consciousness. It will be interesting to see if his European counterpart will do the same. But it goes without saying that wherever Mickey Mouse is, there will be a warm, friendly character — no matter what his nationality.

Tea luxury item

Dutch traders introduced tea to Europe early in the 17th century. Soon England was rivaling the Netherlands for control of the fabulously profitable tea trade. Tea sold for as much as $50 a pound and remained a luxury item for 100 years.

Florida's Disney World has 15th anniversary celebration

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — A seed of imagination took root the day bulldozers roared to life and began plowing through the muck of swampy Florida wilderness in the spring of 1969.

Less than two years after the first patch of mud was overturned, the once useless swampland outside Orlando blossomed into a fantasy land and Walt Disney World opened its gates.

The eve of a gala celebration of its 15th anniversary was Wednesday and now Disney World reigns as America's No. 1 tourist attraction. Some 22.4 million visitors pushed through the turnstiles last year, more than twice as many as Disneyland — its sister-park and closest rival.

Disney World has become the example by which all other amusement parks are measured and a dream destination for a wide range of people — from terminally ill children realizing a "last wish" to families on vacation to heads of state.

Disney World was the dream of cartoonist and fantasy film maker Walt Disney.

His Disneyland, which opened 15 years earlier in Anaheim, Calif., was a resounding success. But Disney wanted more. He envisioned a bigger, more futuristic attraction.

But Disney never saw his dream. He died Dec. 15, 1966, a year after announcing he would create an East Coast theme park and less than two months before his brother, Roy, revealed, Feb. 2, 1967, preliminary plans to reporters locked inside an Orlando movie theater to prevent the news from leaking prematurely.

Despite the popularity of Disneyland, Disney was unhappy with bars and other satellite businesses that cropped up around the attraction and vowed to prevent that at Disney World.

He quietly bought up parcels of wilderness about 15 miles southwest of Orlando at the sweet price of $200 an acre — property surrounding the complex now goes for more than $200,000 an acre.

In the end, Disney had obtained 27,500 acres. Only 2,500 acres were needed for the first phase of Disney World, including 100 acres for the Magic Kingdom theme park and the rest for parking, campsites, monorail, hotels and a "buffer zone" between the attraction and the outside world.

Only about 15 percent of the Disney property is developed, but expansion has not stopped.

Projects in the works include Pleasure Island, an adult nighttime entertainment and shopping complex, the Disney-MGM movie studios and additions to World Showcase.

And like everything else, the price of fun has gone up.

DEAR ABBY

Grandchild's birth special

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Whatever happened to modesty and privacy? I refer to those who would invite friends and family in to witness the birth of a baby. What kind of people would allow such a personal and private affair to take on the character of a public viewing? — NO AUDIENCE, THANK YOU

DEAR NO AUDIENCE: My mail is now running overwhelmingly in favor of "loved ones" witnessing a birth. All kinds of people are in favor of it — including this retired clergyman. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a retired (male) Unitarian Universalist minister and write to tell you that one of the greatest experiences in my life was to be present at the birth of my granddaughter!

It was a home delivery. I was the left stirrup, my son-in-law the right, my 10-year-old granddaughter assisted the midwife and my 8-year-old grandson sat at the head of the bed and stroked his mother's head. My wife was doing stitchery and provided the scissors with which to cut the umbilical cord.

After the baby was born my wife was in tears. Why? Tears of happiness and tears of regret that I had not been present when my babies were born.

Never was a baby more warmly welcomed into the world by her family. No wonder she was named Amanda (worthy of being loved). It was a never-to-be-forgotten experience. I wish more grandparents could be bonded to their grandchildren in like manner. — FARLEY W. WHEELWRIGHT, GRANADA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Is it proper to have showers for adopted babies? And do people who adopt children who are older than babies celebrate the occasion in a formal way? — CURIOUS IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR CURIOUS: Showers for adopted babies? Absolutely! Most people who adopt children of any age have some sort of "celebration" to commemorate the date that the child officially joined their family.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B.B. IN EUGENE, ORE.: It's better to have loved and lost than to have hated and won.

Abigail Van Buren is a columnist for Universal Press Syndicate.

Pallets, houses consume most lumber

ALCOLU, S.C. (AP) — Pallets, the portable platforms used for moving and storing materials in warehouses and factories, consume more lumber each year than any other wood product end-use except houses, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp.

The building products firm says some 3,000 pallet makers and recyclers use about a fifth of all the lumber purchased in the United States.

Woman jealous

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I am a pretty good-looking female and I'm used to eating right, exercising and grooming to look my best, but lately I have been feeling extra competitive and I feel nagged by what used to seem natural. I look in the mirror with a scared frown and suppress it. I keep looking and trying to appear better than the girls my boyfriend looks at: the ones in the girlie magazines.

Maybe I am extra worried because he is so good-looking, the best-looking guy I ever saw.

When we first went together he thought of no one but me, and now I see him looking at those women. It's interfering with my actual sexual pleasure, too; I feel myself holding back.

A. I hear this about rivalry with the centerfold women a good deal, and usually I just say, forget it, it is natural to look at other sex objects. It doesn't mean he doesn't love you. He is interested in women — that is why he is attached to you — but you supply real companionship, you are the one he wants to be with, not just look at or fantasize about.

If a guy looks at a girlie magazine, the effect is usually good. It stimulates him, keeps up his interest in sex generally and you get the benefit. It is different if he spends hours alone with these pictures and neglects you. That would show an obsessive interest, something to worry about.

But from what you tell me, you are the one showing the obsessive signs, because you are thinking about this "rivalry" and worrying about it even when he is making love to you. I am sure that you can see that this is wrong and illogical, but that doesn't get rid of it. Have a talk with a counselor. Sharing your worry with an informed listener just once or twice may make it evaporate.

Q. A man called me at home saying he was working for you and wanted to ask some questions for research. He had my home number, which is unlisted, and also my Social Security number. Was he legit?

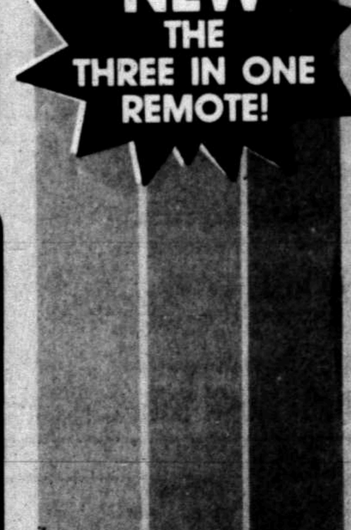

A. Absolutely not. Nobody working with me has people's phone or Social Security numbers, and I have authorized nobody to call individuals at home and ask questions. This is nothing to panic about, but report it to the police. They may be getting a number of similar calls, and your information may help them. This has happened before — someone who gets a kick out of it calls women at home and asks sexual questions, posing as a researcher. Don't answer the questions, no matter whom or what they pretend to represent.

Q. The first time a girl has intercourse, shouldn't there be some sign of the hymen breaking? A friend of mine was wondering.

A. We have a traditional mental picture of this, and so we tend to think it always happens. But it doesn't, and nobody has to be upset. Look, it isn't always a nice day for graduation or a wedding, but you still get a diploma or a ring. Nowadays, as a matter of fact, we speak of the hymen stretching instead of breaking — stretching is what really physically happens. Sometimes the hymen stretches without any spotting at all. But if the woman has never had intercourse with a man before, she came to that first time as a virgin, and neither he nor she should think otherwise. That there is always some blood is just a folk tradition that has caused a lot of needless anxiety, both before and after the event.

PROFILE IN EXPERIENCE

Ex-Chamber president returns to lead staff

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

If the old adage that a group is only as strong as its leaders holds true, then Midland's Chamber of Commerce is on the verge of accomplishing some big things for the city of Midland.

Joe Kloesel recently took over as executive vice president at the Chamber, and his enthusiasm, experience and drive, combined with his love for Midland, is expected to be a gold mine to the organization he leads.

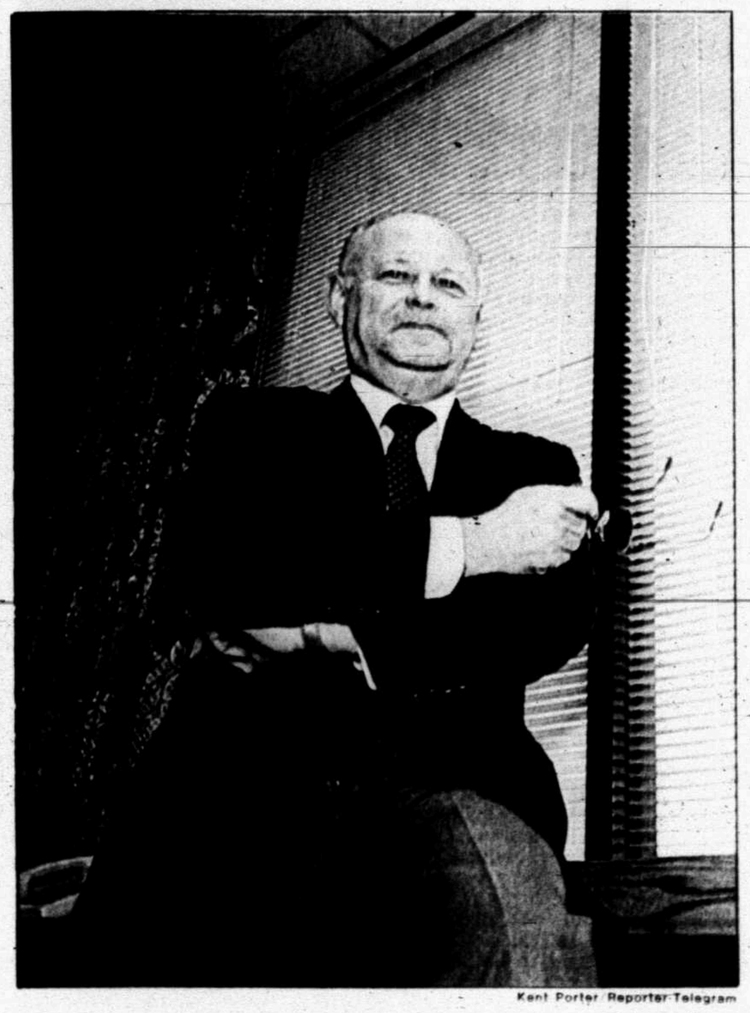

With a diverse background as a community, chamber, industry and business leader, few have ever come to the job better prepared. Holding a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Texas, Kloesel also brings a strong background in dealing with governmental agencies to the job and a knack for growing small organizations into large ones.

He began his career with Hughes Tool Co. in Houston, working for that company for ten years, primarily in product development and testing.

He joined Midland based Drilco in 1962, helping the firm to diversify and eventually helping to found Drilco's Industrial Division — a firm he nurtured from its inception into annual earnings in the eight figure range, while gaining a substantial market share throughout the world, with five production plants on three continents.

He became active in the Midland Chamber of Commerce and was appointed to its board of directors in the early 1970s, and to the executive committee in 1977.

Kloesel became president of the Chamber in 1979, and feels that his year as president allows him to look at his new staff position with greater perspective and understanding. "Being on the administrative end enables me to now take the direction from the current board of directors and carry them out," Kloesel says.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Joe Kloesel brings more than 30 years' experience to the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

But his interests are not concentrated only in Midland. In 1982, he was president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and has also served as vice president of the State Chamber of Commerce. In addition, he cites his time on the Texas Economic Development Committee as invaluable experience.

"The committee's goals were to promote economic growth of the state through external and internal means — the same things we're trying to accomplish in Midland. I'm glad I have that experience to draw on."

Kloesel says he is "having a ball" in his new position, and he is confident of one thing. Midland will survive its latest difficulties and come through with a brighter economic future.

"Midland has great resources that, when put to use, will take us through the downturn," Kloesel strongly believes.

"Our greatest resource is our human resources. There is a wealth of people out there with great intelligence who are being under utilized and under employed.

"One of my goals is to get these people to use their wisdom for the benefit of the community," he adds.

Kloesel, like many other Midlanders, speaks in terms of diversification and economic development.

Explains Kloesel: "Economic development is the creation of wealth in a community. But we don't look simply in terms of bringing new industry and business to Midland. It also should include assisting small new businesses already in place, causing new businesses to spring up from within our own community and developing new technology in the oil industry.

"We can even look at bringing in more visitors to the city through the Convention and Visitor's Bureau as economic development.

"Economic development requires weaving a common thread through local government, the community itself and existing business and industry." He adds that the aim is to increase jobs and growth of the entire Permian Basin area.

Gold U.S. coins create excitement

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

In more than two decades as a gold-coin dealer, Luis Vigdor has seen many new gold coins issued. But never has he seen a gold coin whip up so much initial public interest as the new American Eagle coin, to be issued next month by the U.S. Mint.

"It's electrifying," said Vigdor, senior vice president of Manfra, Tordella & Brookes Inc. in New York, one of the nation's largest coin dealers. Between 300 and 500 calls are coming in daily from people interested in buying the coin, he said. "That's much more than I have ever seen for any other new coin."

From coast to coast, coin dealers are echoing Vigdor's words. Spurred by a recent surge in gold prices and the prestige of a new American currency, investors and others are eagerly lining up to buy the Eagle — the first U.S. gold coin tied to the gold market and the first general-circulation American legal tender gold coin in more than 50 years.

Initial demand is so strong that many dealers confidently predict that the American Eagle will almost overnight become the best-selling gold coin in the United States and possibly the world, surpassing the Canadian Maple Leaf, now the top seller with about two-thirds of worldwide and U.S. sales. Some dealers worry that the U.S. Mint may produce insufficient Eagles to meet the initial demand.

"The Eagle is going to place other coins into a second-class category," said Mark Goldberg, an owner of Superior Stamp & Coin in Beverly Hills, Calif. That could hurt sales of other leading coins such as the Chinese Panda, South African Krugerrand and Mexican 50 peso, dealers say.

"We expect that in the first year the Eagle will become the premium gold coin in the United States," said Michael J. Brown, spokesman for the U.S. Mint.

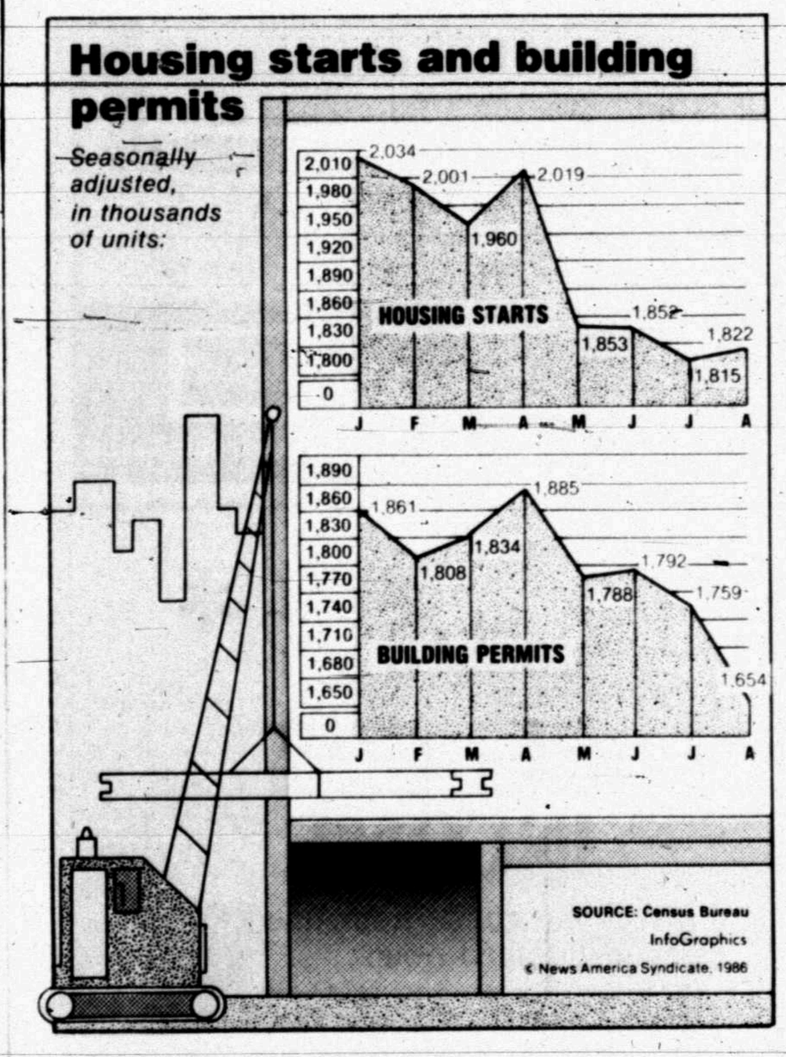

The success of the Eagle, some experts say, could stimulate more nations to issue gold coins, partly to create markets for their gold. Already, Japan, Australia and Luxembourg are preparing to issue new coins this year or early next year, and Brazil is expected to follow.

"If the U.S. coin is successful, within the next three years you're going to see a lot of countries with their own gold programs," predicted Barry Stuppler, president of Gold & Silver Emporium in Los Angeles and president of the California Coin & Precious Metals Association.

Investors have waited years for a continuously issued American gold coin with legal tender status. The United States minted its last gold coins used as currency in 1933, the same year it went off the gold standard. The United States issued legal tender gold coins to commemorate the 1984 Summer Olympics and the recent restoration of the Statue of Liberty; but those were one-time issues, treated as numismatic coins, or collectors' items, as opposed to bullion coins, such as the Eagle and Maple Leaf, which fluctuate in value with the price of gold.

Housing sales still dropping

Continuing downward from an April peak housing permits showed little improvement, while building permits were down dramatically. New home sales were off 13 percent for the month, with the Mideast hit hardest.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new single-family homes dropped off by 13 percent in August, the fifth straight monthly decline, to 504,000 at an annual rate, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

It was the sharpest month-to-month decline since January 1982, when new home sales fell by 19 percent, and the slowest annual pace of sale since August 1984, when the rate was 558,000, according to analysts with the department's Census Bureau.

The report followed a separate survey last week by the National Association of Realtors which charted a 7 percent gain in sales of existing homes to 3,690,000 at an annual rate, the swiftest pace of home re-sales since October 1979.

Housing starts also gained ground in August, by a more modest 0.4 percent, to 1,822,000 annually, according to an earlier Census Bureau report.

Yet another report released Tuesday by the Realtor's group showed a significant improvement in housing affordability conditions in August. NAR's housing affordability index rose to 104.1, the highest level since July 1978.

The index is based on the relationship between home prices, interest rates and family income. The median price of an existing home declined $300 to $80,000 in August while mortgage rates inched up from 10.26 percent to 10.27 percent during the month.

Median family income rose from $28,590 to $28,712 during the period, according to industry analysts.

At 104.1, the index means more than half of the nation's families would qualify for a conventional loan on a median-priced home.

The median price of a new home was $91,400 in August, down sharply from $94,700 in July, according to the Commerce Department report.

Adlene Harrison, DART board chairman, poses with one of system's buses that would see relief with proposed rail system. The city has approved 93 miles of rail for the system.

Dallas rail system moving forward

DALLAS (AP) — For a while it looked like "the city that works" wasn't working.

Three-year-old plans for a subway to ease the traffic burden of this city and its burgeoning suburbs kept hitting roadblocks.

Souring oil and real estate prices slowed tax revenues needed to pay for the system.

A top official of the transit plan quit.

The proposed routes of the rail lines were mired in bitter disputes among board members and area citizens.

But in the end, the board members of DART — Dallas Area Rapid Transit — agreed long enough to adopt a plan for a $2.8 billion 93-mile rail system with the first of three phases opening in April 1996.

Ted Tedesco, DART's executive director who quit Aug. 4 in a dispute with the board, predicts the Dallas money crunch will preclude officials from making good on all their promises.

"They have very limited financial resources. They certainly can't build what they intended to build in the rail system," he said.

The DART rail plan adopted on Aug. 29 is 54 miles shorter than the original proposal passed by area voters in 1983.

DART board chairman Adlene Harrison said the additional 54 miles of line haven't been eliminated from long-range plans, but there simply isn't any money to pay for it in the near future.

"I think things are going to come out better than people think," said Mrs. Harrison, a leader in the push for a regional rail plan for almost five years.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

A 16-page recipe for sugar cookies

Don't be surprised if and when the U.S. military tells someone "how the cookie crumbles" it writes a 10-page manual on it. It already takes 16 pages of specifications just to make a sugar cookie for the Pentagon.

And, therein may rest part of the problem with the $7,000 toilet seats and $1,200 coffee makers, and 39-cent allen wrenches that cost hundreds of dollars, and the entire problem of military waste.

If 16 pages of specifications for the manufacture of a sugar cookie, that any six-year-old first grader can turn out with ten minutes' instructions sounds ridiculous, consider these: The recipe for a cup of coffee covers 25 pages and whipped cream 20 pages; and, a regular square meal for a GI, 400 pages of specifications, says Insight Magazine.

How can so many words be devoted to such simple tasks?" Consider these instructions: "A sugar cookie must contain exactly 0.5 percent sodium aluminum phosphate — no more no less ... It also must contain 41.4 percent sugar and 40.99 percent flour ... In addition, the cookies must be subjected to a calorimetric test for tyrosinase which is done using the following procedures:

1. prepare a 5 percent weight/volume aqueous solution of catechol in distilled or deionized water,
2. steam one pound of fresh green oat grouts at a pressure of 15 pounds-per-square-inch to stop all enzyme activity.

"Now you're ready for the test." This is only a sampling of the numerous absurdities detailed in the 16 pages of military specifications for the sugar cookie.

How does this penchant for specification writing translate into military hardware? How about 16,000 pages of specifications for the AWACS aircraft, an airborne warning and control system. This is exactly the same airplane as the Boeing 707, which requires only 400 pages of specifications to build. The net result: the AWACS sells for a lot more than the 707.

And while everyone recognizes the extra 15,600 pages of specifications as the reason for the extra cost, no one seems able to stop it. "They (the military) circle the wagons whenever Congress criticizes or points out waste problems," said a staff member of the Joint Economic Committee, headed by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. Protection of self-interest may be part of the problem, but the real problem according to observers is the pervasiveness of the problem.

It's not that the Pentagon doesn't know that 16 pages of specifications for a sugar cookie is ridiculous. They know it as well as you and I know it. It's because this is one of the devices the military has contrived to deliberately waste taxpayer dollars, and it is excused because the ridiculous is what we have come to expect from the Pentagon. Yes, even what the Pentagon has come to expect from itself. Therefore the expected has become acceptable.

"There is the right way, the wrong way and the military way," goes the saying. Waste, unfortunately, is part of the military way.

The tales of military waste are legion and one would not know where to begin to detail the problem. Everyone knows at least one horror story about about how the Army, Navy or Air Force has wasted millions of U.S. taxpayer dollars. A trucker I know, tells the story of how he hauled old military trucks and jeeps from New England to Oxnard, California, where they were used in gunnery practice. "They could have gotten all the old trucks and cars they wanted at a junk yard 10 miles down the road," said the trucker.

Waste is to the military what corruption is to Mexico — pervasive, traditional, a deeply ingrained and integral part of the system.

So ingrained are both problems that Mexico would collapse overnight if corruption were removed from its political process, and the Pentagon would suffer the same fate if waste were suddenly rooted out.

OPEC watching

All eyes in the oil industry will converge on Geneva as oil ministers from the 13 member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries begin meeting on Monday.

Industry analysts consider the outcome of the meeting crucial to the short-term direction of oil prices. Please see PAGE 2G.

World will be watching next OPEC meeting

OPEC expected to continue curbs

Courtesy IPAA

GENEVA (UPI) — OPEC's temporary production cut of more than 3 million barrels a day has worked like a charm on the collapsing oil markets. The cartel now seems likely to extend this interim cure, perhaps until the start of next year.

The surprise OPEC decision in early August to cap September and October production — excluding Iraq's — at 16 million barrels a day initially raised prices by as much as $5 a barrel. That was a 50 percent jump from depressed levels of just under $10 a barrel in late July.

The oil glut that caused the price slide still is around and the market has softened somewhat to the $13-$14 range since the OPEC production cutback took effect Sept. 1. But some solid price gains remain as traders wait to see whether the cartel still means business.

The 13 OPEC oil ministers, who will meet again in Geneva Oct. 6, come with few illusions about what could happen if they fail to agree on how to keep a convincing lid on their own production.

"If OPEC breaks up in disagreement, then you will see prices slump immediately," said John Lichtblau, head of Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc. in New York.

The war between Iraq and Iran is heating up, several other cartel members are teetering on the fringe of insolvency and the Arab world seems split as never before. But a spirit of harmony obviously has taken root lately in the councils of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Gholamreza Aghazadeh, the Iranian oil minister who masterminded the successful August compromise in Geneva, astonished most OPEC watchers in recent days by showing up in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, obviously to coordinate strategy ahead of the October meeting.

And even the skeptics concede the cartel members have largely kept their pledge to slash production by returning to national output quotas established by OPEC in 1984.

OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman of Nigeria said the cartel had throttled back its September daily output to 16.5 million barrels from bloated summer levels of over 20 million. That is even less than the temporary ceiling that amounts to 16.8 million barrels when Iraq is included.

As a result, most market experts expect the ministers to simply extend the two-month output curb until Jan. 1.

"Indications are they will try to prolong it because it has worked very well so far," said Lichtblau.

And if that happens, there are other reasons why the market should remain stable or even firm somewhat.

Oil demand that is rising faster than forecast in Europe, a technical shutdown of the Saudis' Yanbu pipeline and the onset of the winter heating season all tend to put a floor under prices, Lichtblau said.

Edwin Rothschild, vice president of the Washington-based Citzens-Labor Energy Coalition, took a dissenting view.

Regardless of what OPEC does in Geneva, he said, prices will soon fray around the edges because oil companies will start dumping their surplus stocks on the market and some cartel members are under too much financial pressure to abide by their output quotas for long.

If prices do start declining, they could collapse quickly in what Lichtblau called a "chain reaction" because the oil companies that built up inventories during the market slump would be under pressure to take profits on these stocks before prices drop too far.

Assuming the cartel sticks with its curtailed production level, OPEC spokesman James Audu said, "The price could go up because there would be increasing demand but no increase in supply."

The only fly in the ointment would be the behavior of the cartel's independent competitors who promised to back OPEC's August agreement with cuts of their own but apparently have been welshing a bit.

Mexico, for example, had an export target of 1.5 million barrels a day but was unable to sell more than 1.2 million early this year.

DALLAS

But the struggle has been a frustrating one. "Five years of this cruelty is enough," she said with a laugh, explaining why she is not seeking reappointment as chairman when her term expires Oct 7. She will remain a member of the board.

Dallas, whose motto is "the city that works," is far from the forefront of mass transit planning.

"It would have been a lot better if we had a transit authority 10 years ago," Mrs. Harrison said.

It was only in 1983 that voters in Dallas and 15 suburbs created the area transit system by approving a one-cent sales tax to fund it.

Mrs. Harrison says she has no doubt that plenty of people will ride the subway when it's built, particularly the large number of non-Texas natives.

"Those that have lived here a long time have never cut their teeth on (mass) transportation," she said.

For that reason, Milburn Gravley, mayor of Carrollton, one of the suburbs that voted to join the plan, is skeptical.

"I don't doubt there are some people who would ride the rail service," Gravley said. "But I just don't think the majority of folks are going to give up their automobiles and ride in a train or bus when we were born and raised in our automobiles here."

Gravley says he and other suburban mayors are bothered with the debt DART will incur during the construction. They favored a pay-as-you-go plan.

Tedesco had proposed a plan that would have been pay-as-you-go for 10 years of a 25-year payoff plan.

But his proposal merely offered one rail line from suburban Collin County on the north, running south along Central Expressway — the city's most congested highway — to the southern edge of Dallas. The board-approved plan includes that line plus other lines to be built in three phases stretching across the Dallas sprawl.

"The Tedesco plan only served a handful of constituents," Mrs. Harrison said.

"That's true," Tedesco candidly responds, "but I was asked to put a plan together that was financially responsible. "If you overplan, overbuild and overpromise, how can I satisfy all those promises...."

There is some concern that disgruntled suburbanites may try to pull out before the rail line can even break ground — an event expected sometime in 1988.

COINS

A major reason for the interest in the Eagle is the overall resurgence in gold prices, due largely to jitters about renewed inflation, sluggish U.S. stock and bond markets and fear of gold supply reductions by South Africa. The price of gold for current delivery closed Wednesday at $431.50 an ounce on the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York, up 30 cents from Tuesday's close. That is more than 25 percent higher than its price in early July and is near the metal's highest price since March 1983.

But experts cite other reasons why the Eagle will outsell other coins, at least in the United States. One major reason is patriotism. "The largest market in the world has been in the U.S., and most U.S. customers will buy it (the Eagle) in preference to other products," said John H. Lutley, co-managing director of the Washington-based Gold Institute, a trade association.

Also, dealers cite the coins' attractive design, which will make the Eagle desirable in necklaces, cuff links and other jewelry. The Eagle's front side has roughly the same Liberty design as used by sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens on the $20 gold pieces issued from 1907 to 1933. Some aficionados consider those the most beautiful gold coins ever produced.

Another reason is the coins' status as legal tender. Direct backing by the U.S. government will boost investor confidence. Moreover, its legal tender status will make sales of the coin exempt from sales tax in several states.

Sales of the coin will also be stimulated if the new tax overhaul bill is approved by Congress and President Reagan. The bill contains a provision that will allow investors to use U.S. gold coins as investments in individual retirement accounts. Until now, commodities such as gold have not been permitted for IRAs.

The Eagle is also expected to benefit from the virtual collapse in demand for the South African Krugerrand, which only two years ago was by far the best-selling gold coin in the United States and still is the most widely held. The U.S. government banned the import of krugerrands last year, but U.S. investors may still buy and sell them within this country.

When it is made available Oct. 20, investors are likely to find the Eagle at a large number of banks, coin dealers, brokerage houses and other places. Also, the U.S. Mint plans to spend between $5 million and $8 million for advertising to promote the Eagle in the first year.

Brown, the U.S. Mint spokesman, said the agency expects first-year sales of 2.2 million ounces. The coin — which is 91.67 percent pure gold, the same as the Krugerrand — will be available in four sizes: one ounce, half-ounce, quarter-ounce and one-tenth ounce.

As legal tender, those coins will carry face values of $50, $25, $10 and $5, respectively. But no one is likely to use them as money because their actual values will fluctuate with the market price of gold, which is much higher than the face value. The U.S. Mint is also issuing a new silver coin with a $1 face value, expected to be released in mid-November.

HOUSING

The average price was $116,300, reflecting a significant proportion of expensive homes on the market.

Regionally, the decline in new home sales was steepest in the Midwest, where sales fell from 97,000 to 58,000 annually in August, the lowest level since August 1983.

In the South, sales fell from 300,000 to 281,000, the slowest pace since August 1984. Sales declined from 185,000 to 166,000 in western states and dropped from 104,000 to 89,000 in the Northeast.

There were 357,000 new homes on the market at the end of August, representing a supply of 7.3 months after seasonal adjustment, up from 6.2 months at the end of July.

The sharp monthly setback came as something of a surprise to analysts. Some said it was a temporary blip caused by uncertainty over the impact of tax reform on home ownership. Despite the monthly decline, sales for the year to date are still running higher than they have since 1978.

New home sales totaled 585,000 in the first eight months of 1986, up 11 percent from 484,000 during the same period last year.

A key factor behind the generally brisk pace of new and existing home sales is low mortgage interest rates, which have fallen more than 5 percentage points since the peak levels of 1981 and 1982 to roughly 10 percent this year.

Airlines raise fares by five percent

Could signal end to price wars

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the biggest U.S. airlines raised one-way fares as much as $30 a ticket earlier this week because of higher demand, and analysts said it signaled a possible end to price wars incited by competition.

The increases of about 5 percent by United, American and Delta airlines took effect Thursday and are aimed largely at business travelers. They do not affect discount fares, which comprise the overwhelming majority of airline business.

But many in the industry predicted broader fare increases would come later. Some said the airlines' heavy losses over several months because of price wars, combined with mergers and a rising number of passengers, has created an opportunity to start nudging prices up.

"They've just come through a tough period," said Louis A. Marckesano, an analyst for the Philadelphia investment firm of Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. "I think this is an attempt to recoup some of their losses."

United was first, saying regular one-way fares would rise by $10 for trips under 1,000 miles and $20 for trips exceeding 1,000 miles, on about 80 routes originating from Chicago, United's major hub. First-class fares, priced at 150 percent of regular fares, would rise by $15 and $30.

A regular one-way fare from Chicago to New York, for example, will rise from $270 to $280, while the Chicago-Los Angeles fare will increase from $410 to $430.

"Basically, the reasons behind the increases are that business traffic looks good for the fall, and secondly, the product has been underpriced," United spokesman Charles Novak said. "We don't think these modest fare increases will dampen any traffic."

American and Delta said they would match the increases in markets where they compete. This will primarily affect flights in and out of Dallas-Fort Worth, where American operates its major hub.

Travel agents said Trans World Airlines made similar price increases on flights originating from St. Louis, its major hub. TWA officials did not return repeated telephone calls.

The move came against a backdrop of increasing consolidation in the airline industry, in which large carriers have been buying competitors in attempts to dominate their markets.

Over the last year, Northwest Airlines has bought Republic Airlines; TWA has bought Ozark Air Lines; and Delta has announced plans to buy Western Airlines.

On Wednesday, the government approved Texas Air Corp.'s purchase of Eastern Airlines, which will make Texas Air the biggest U.S. air carrier. It also plans to buy People Express, which itself bought Frontier Airlines last year.

"Now that they are eliminating the smaller airlines through mergers and buyouts, they are able to charge what they consider to be a fair amount for their business," said Herbert J. Teison, publisher of Travel Smart for Business, a New York newsletter.

David Smith, an airline analyst for the New York investment firm Sanford C. Berstein & Co. Inc., predicted all airlines would follow United's lead in pushing fares up, partly because the number of passengers has been rising.

KLOESEL

Kloesel and his staff combine varied skills in their efforts to develop Midland's economy. An intimate knowledge of the community and of the financial incentives necessary to lure outside companies, coupled with expertise in land use, such as zoning, and industrial parks is key to success. Marketing talent is important since economic developers have to "sell" the community to outside businesses.

For now, the Chamber is concentrating on ways to capitalize on its existing resources: human resources; the industrial park; warehouses and office space; and education and technology. "We already have the infrastructure in place to support new businesses," Kloesel notes.

Marketing consultant makes a living tracking trends

NEW YORK (AP) — Trends are trendy.

And Faith Popcorn, the 40-year-old chairwoman, chief executive officer and founder of the marketing consulting firm BrainReserve, makes it her business to track trends — 15 of them at a time.

She uses her ability to spot trends to help her client companies develop new products, reposition established brands and define new markets.

"People want control of their environments. If people have a better idea of where things are going," they have more control, said Ms. Popcorn, who adopted her nickname as her last name when she was 20 because it is memorable.

"Trends will also become a way of life," she said. "As we predict the trends down the path, and as they turn out to be true there will be more confidence in trends."

When did this interest in trends start?

"The passion for trends was already here," she said. But "it was really in the last five or six years that it really got hot — when an adventurous spirit started happening in the country, when fitness became more of a way of life, less of a trend, when people began eating yogurt, croissants."

But sometimes you read in the paper that a trend has turned out to be, well, a myth.

"When the consumers are buying accordingly, it is not a myth," Ms. Popcorn said.

"SOMETIMES IT'S hard to figure out what is a 10-year trend, a five-year trend, a three-year trend. That's hard. That's the gut," Ms. Popcorn said.

And just what makes her the expert?

Her company interviews 2,000 consumers a year, and Ms. Popcorn does some of that interviewing herself, "sitting with a woman in a kitchen, talking with a guy in a bar," she says.

She says she reads 300 publications a month. She reads all the best sellers. She watches the Top 10 television programs.

And she has "a general interest in life and people."

What kind of prediction record does she have?

She's been 95 percent right, she claims.

"I haven't had a worst call," she adds.

But she's still waiting for at least this prediction to come true: a $40,000 to $50,000 car sold to middle American women that would be paid off like a mortgage. Safety would be the main feature of this car.

Her best call?

"The new consumer, the conscious consumer, the consumer who wants quality," Ms. Popcorn said.

But this trend business is more complicated than it appears.

"People think a trend is self-sufficient. They are not. Each trend impacts another trend," Ms. Popcorn said.

AP Laserphoto

Faith Popcorn makes it her business to track trends for her clients.

ASKED TO CITE a current trend, Ms. Popcorn uses as an example the concept of "pampered, a little sporty." Then she gives this list: the Reagans' current dog, Ralph Lauren's clothes, the Jeep.

Here are some other trends she has discerned: practicality, indulgence, simplification, individualism and roving.

Ms. Popcorn founded her marketing consulting firm in 1974 after working in the advertising business.

"I found it hard to work for anybody else. I felt I had a message that I had to produce myself. I felt like I was a trend. I was too far ahead of my time," Ms. Popcorn said.

As a regular course of her work, she and her staff started interviewing consumers.

"Whatever we talked to them about, we would see there some attitude. We'd say, 'Oh my god, there's a trend,'" Ms. Popcorn said.

Her clients have included American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Citibank, General Foods Corp. and Timex Corp. And she has become a widely quoted figure in the national press.

BrainReserve has annual revenues of $20 million, she said. The company, which is privately held, is profitable, she said, declining to be more specific.

AS FOR THE future, she says: "I would like my company to be important to American business, whatever that means and wherever that would take me."

Before starting her own company, Ms. Popcorn worked as executive vice president of Smith-Greenland Advertising Inc. Her accounts included Getty Oil, Johnnie Walker Black Scotch and Bonne Bell.

What does she herself do that's trendy, besides sport a punky haircut?

She works out four times a week at 6 a.m. with a personal sports trainer.

"The reason I work out is my work is so cerebral I feel like a brain in a bottle. I'd hate to drop dead" after all this struggle to get ahead, she said.

But please note, Ms. Popcorn says grueling workouts are on the way out.

"People can't keep it up," she said, predicting a more moderate approach to fitness.

Another trendy thing Ms. Popcorn did was buy a more manageable weekend home on Long Island. She lives in New York City.

"I SOLD A big house and bought a small house," she said. "But I bought a small, perfect house that looks over the most beautiful pond in the world."

Ecuador favors extending OPEC cutback

QUITO (UPI) — Ecuador favors extending OPEC's temporary production cutback, which is scheduled to expire Oct. 31, until the end of the year, the OPEC news agency reports.

Fernando Santos-Alvite, Ecuador's deputy oil minister, told OPECNA in a telephone interview that prolonging the current production curb would reinforce OPEC's efforts to stabilize the oil market and bolster prices.

In August the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to reduce production by nearly 4 million barrels to around 16.8 million barrels a day in September and October by using national output quotas established in 1984. Iraq is exempt from the accord.

Santos-Alvite said Ecuador, OPEC's second smallest member, supported an extension of the production pact for an additional two months even though it would like to see its output quota increased.

Ecuador, which had been producing about 280,000 barrels a day prior to the OPEC decision to lower output, has an official quota of 183,000 barrels a day.

Last week United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mana Saeed al-Otaiba said he favors a two-month extension in the OPEC accord because the 13-nation cartel will not have time to consider revisions at its next meeting that opens Oct. 6 in Geneva.

Santos-Alvite said he was confident that oil prices would rise by the middle of October, when colder weather should spur demand in the Northern Hemisphere.

Oil prices have climbed by about $5 to between $14 and $15 a barrel on world markets since OPEC unveiled its production cutback agreement Aug. 5.

Iran implements gasoline rationing

ATHENS (UPI) — Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh Thursday announced gasoline rationing is to be introduced in Iran as an economy measure, Tehran radio said.

The rationing follows a series of recent Iraqi bombing raids during which the attacking planes hit oil refineries at Tehran, Isfahan, Tabriz and Bakhtaran.

Aqazadeh said that as of Friday, gasoline stations would sell fuel to drivers only by coupons, allowing 10.6 gallons a month for small cars and 15.9 gallons for big cars.

Tehran residents said long lines of automobiles have been seen at gasoline stations for the past five days in anticipation of the rationing. The lines Thursday were running to three to four miles.

Aqazadeh said problems of deliveries to the gasoline stations had forced the authorities to introduce rationing, but the system would be dropped when reserves at the pumps rose.

There might have been a time when the Pentagon could have conducted its affairs under the rules of normalcy, but no longer. Over the years, the unwise, unjustified spending of taxpayers' dollars has become business-as-usual for the military, until today it is the only way it can do business.

Sure, every now and then, someone in Congress brings up the $1,200 coffee pots or $100 million overruns, but in the long run nothing is ever done, because would-be reformers soon find they are dealing with the proverbial "tip of the iceberg syndrome." A problem so big it defies comprehension.

But I am not sure the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines deserve all the blame. Over the decades they have had so much money heaped on them by the "hawks" in Congress that they had no choice but to waste it. It was far more than they could wisely spend.

I don't think U.S. citizens mind giving the military the funds it needs to provide an adequate defense for our nation, but I sense a growing sickness over unending Pentagon waste. Someone once commented that the Pentagon wastes enough in a single day to run a handful of states for an entire year. I am not sure that can be documented, but I suspect it is closer to the truth than we care to think.

Wouldn't it be nice if we could channel part of the military waste into medical research, better air traffic control, super-highways, creating job opportunities or for that matter just keeping it in our own pocket to spend as we please?

Q. Please tell me all about Martina Navratilova.
Kenneth James Onoffrey
Clarks Summit, Pa.

Navratilova

A. She's 29 (she'll be 30 on October 10,) from Prague, Czechoslovakia, and from a tennis playing family. Her grandmother Agnes Semanska was ranked second in the country among female tennis players before World War II, her mother and stepfather competed and served as tennis administrators, and her younger sister Jana is also a world-ranked player.

Martina spent her early childhood near the country's Krkonose Mountains, where she learned to ski as soon as she could walk. When she was 5, the family moved to Revnice, a suburb of Prague, where she watched her parents compete in amateur tournaments. Soon her stepfather cut a racket down for her and she began hitting balls against the wall, with great determination — and skill.

Recognizing that, her stepfather began coaching her and at 8, she signed up for her first tournament; despite the officials' protests that she was too small to compete, she made it to the semifinals before being eliminated. By 14, she had her first national title and within two years had added four others, becoming the country's top ranked female player.

When she was 17, in 1973, she was allowed to compete in the U.S. as part of an eight week winter tournament circuit. On that first visit here, she became quickly addicted to junk food, gained 20 pounds and didn't win any of the tournaments, but she did well enough to win a place in other tournaments, such as the Italian and French Opens (she lost, however) and came back to the U.S. to join the Virginia Slims tournament circuit. This time, she began winning and was named Tennis magazine's Rookie of the Year.

She wasn't happy with her game, however, and when she returned to Revnice, she underwent a strict weight loss strength-building regimen. When she returned to the court afterwards, it was obvious that something had changed: She began to beat everyone, including her childhood idol Margaret Court and Chris Evert with whom she has one of the great, and continuing, rivalries of the game. During 1975, though, she began to run into problems with the Czecholovakian Tennis Federation. The organization objected to her long stays in the West and her increasing "Americanization" and, in response, tried to limit her play in the U.S.

On September 6, 1975, following the U.S. Open, she had her own response: She defected in New York. In the 11 years since, as you're undoubtedly aware, she's become the dominant female player in the game, a Grand Slam and seven-time Wimbledon winner.

She's also gotten slimmer and blonder and at times, controversial. Her affair with writer Rita Mae Brown broke up very publicly and her friendship with basketball star Nancy Lieberman caused a few conflicts within her inner circle that boiled over into public view.

Lately, though, her life seems to have calmed down somewhat. She's been living in a beautiful, Art Deco-decorated house in Fort Worth, near her companion of the last several years, Texas socialite Judy Nelson.

Q. Please tell me about actress Kathryn Harrold. I recently saw her in the movie "The Sender" and thought she was great.
Lisa Weiler
Pleasantville, N.J.

Harrold

A. She's 35, from Tazewell, Va., the youngest of five children of a coal mine owner and his wife. Since Tazewell had no accredited schools at high school level, she and her siblings attended boarding schools up and down the East Coast and she would frequently visit New York during her summer vacations to see plays. That interest was developed further when she studied drama at Mills College in California.

After graduation, she moved to New York where she studied with some of the best acting teachers, Stella Adler and Uta Hagen, and got a role in the soap "The Doctors." (Her character Nola Dancy, a sultry nightclub singer, was given to Kathleen Turner when she decided to leave the show to move to California.)

In Hollywood, she did a "Starsky and Hutch," several "Rockford Files" episodes and the TV movies "The Women's Room" and "Bogie," based on the life of Humphrey Bogart. (She played Lauren Bacall.)

She made her movie debut in a slight suspense film called "Nightwing," followed by roles in "Heartbreakers," "The Hunter," "The Pursuit of D.B. Cooper," "Yes, Giorgio," "Modern Romance" (after which she became involved with the movie's director and star Albert Brooks,) "Into the Night" and "Raw Deal."

Now, she seems to be back to TV: a series on ABC, "MacGruder and Loud" didn't make it two seasons back but she has another one set to debut on NBC as a midseason replacement: "The Bronx Zoo," in which she plays a high school English teacher opposite Ed Asner.

Q. Could you please tell me if Chuck Barris is still working in TV?
H. Boyles
Cucamonga, Calif.

Barris

A. Yes, he definitely is. He has two shows currently on the air: "The New Newlywed Game" and "The All-New Dating Game." And Barris has three more that he's trying to sell; "Bamboozled," in which three people make outrageous claims about their lives and a panel of three has to determine the truth; "Comedy Courtroom," re-enactments of real court cases in which standup comedians portray the lawyers and "The Family Game," in which contestants embarrass themselves by revealing how little they know about each other, as in "The Newlywed Game." No networks have bought these shows as yet.

Q. Please answer this: Someone told me that Monty Python has been doing commercials for Jell-O Pudding instead of Bill Cosby. Is this true and if not, what has he been doing lately?
Wendy Gale Smith
Muncie, Ind.

A. If you mean John Cleese, the tall Minister of Funny Walks of Monty Python, he hasn't taken over Bill Cosby's Jell-O spots, but he has done a number of commercials for other companies, among them Compaq Computers, American Express, Kronenbourg Beer and Callard and Bowser candies. He also produces funny educational films and has recently written a book and starred in a movie called "Families and How to Survive Them" and "Clockwise," respectively.

Q. I recently saw Jim Nabors in Atlantic City and was wondering what he's been doing lately.
Carol Rath
Northfield, N.J.

A. Exactly what you saw him doing: personal appearances in Atlantic City, Reno, Lake Tahoe and Las Vegas. He'll be on the road on that circuit until the end of October when he takes a breather before starting up again.

The legendary Lucille Ball, who over 23 years has starred in three blockbuster TV comedy series — "I Love Lucy," "The Lucy Show," and "Here's Lucy" — has another series starting this fall on ABC: "Life With Lucy." She plays a widow who is co-owner, with Gale Gordon, of her husband's hardware store.

Zany redhead is back

By FRED ROBBINS
King Features

"I wanted to do a show that had a family all together — parents, children and grandparents. The last 20 years, the '60s and '70s, have been terrible. Families have been torn apart. It's so easy to grab a plane and live 3,000 miles away; kids are supposed to fly the coop at a cerain age, go off on their own and never come home again. Well, I've never felt it should be that way. My home has always been open, if they want to come back. I think we all need each other — not just economically but emotionally. It's a good thing, for America to recognize immediately, right now the importance of getting the family back together."

— Lucille Ball

An invitation to lunch with Lucille Ball could have resulted — but didn't — in a romp in nostalgia. Our noontime meeting in Hollywood took place during a rehearsal break of the fabulous redhead's new ABC sitcom, "Life With Lucy." And the setting was the old Goldwyn Studio, now called Warners-Hollywood, which is where, 80 movies and 53 years ago, Lucille Ball made her screen debut in "Roman Scandals" as one of the original batch of long-stemmed Goldwyn Girls.

Now all Ms. Ball has to say about that is, "I was not one of the great beauties, who were well-stacked, and this and that. In fact, I was the least attractive. But I was available to do whatever was to be done — taking mud pies in the face, running, jumping, or screaming, things that led to a line here and there in a movie. I never realized or thought I could be funny, I was just trying to be a part of the biz."

So she became, as she says and as fate would have it, a "clown," and went on to star — for a total of 23 years — in three blockbuster TV comedy series: "I Love Lucy," "The Lucy Show," and "Here's Lucy." And she became a legend.

Then as the years went by — 12 since her last series ended — nobody believed she would ever return to the sitcom arena. But she fooled them.

With "Life With Lucy" she's back, for at least an assured full season this first time round. What others seem to find remarkable is that Ms. Ball is starting a "new" career at 75, a calendar date that rates no more than a shrug from her.

"I never think of age unless someone brings it up," said Ms. Ball. "I don't feel age even when I'm ill, I just feel sick. And that's seldom, though I've broken a bone now and then, like my leg, 14 years ago, in a skiing accident. No, age doesn't bother me. What bothers me is getting my lipstick on straight and painting on my eyebrows — they were shaved off for a movie when I first came to Hollywood and they have never grown back."

What people are certain to marvel at is the incredible youthfulness of Ms. Ball. An up-close inspection reveals that she looks fabulous, with her alabaster complexion and model-trim shape.

Now weighing 128 — "and hoping to stay there" — Ms. Ball volunteered that she had recently lost 20 pounds via exercise — swimming, walking, sessions at the ballet barre, and workouts at her home gym. But, she insisted, no special diet was involved: "I eat whatever I want, which is always the things that we all know are the right things to eat. But I don't go in for in-between meal snacks, or diet drinks, or any of that nonsense."

Besides weight, Ms. Ball has dropped a lifelong habit that, she agreed, she'd always known was "wrong" and "did harm me."

"I just recently stopped smoking," she announced. "Health reasons. I suddenly got allergic to them. So it helped me a great deal, being allergic. Now Gary (husband Gary Morton, co-producer of her new show) still smokes. Too much. And it scares me how he smokes — the way he inhales, which I never did, how many cigarettes he smokes, and his breathing being the way it is. It worries me. I wish he'd quit."

In that familiar raspy voice, with her still shapely legs folded under her, Ms. Ball talked about her life today and her new show.

"I didn't want to go back to work after Viv passed away," she began. "I just had no desire." Vivian Vance, Ms. Ball's closest personal friend, who played her pal Ethel Mertz in "I Love Lucy" and later was seen as Vivian Bagley in "The Lucy Show," died of cancer, at 66, in 1979.

"When offers came for a new series, I just barely listened to them and always said no. But finally, it all just fell together, fatefully. I got an offer from ABC, a new network to me after all those years at CBS, requiring no pilot — I mean, what have I go to prove with a pilot? — and the guarantee of a full year on the air. Then I found out that my regular writers and Gale Gordon, my old friend and colleague, were available. And that's why I'm back — because it all happened at the same time.

"Besides, I love my work. I love doing comedy more than anything else — I don't yearn to do Shakespeare. And I love working with certain people, people who enjoy working for the work's sake, and not for any ego thing. When it became possible for me to work again with these same wonderful people, I couldn't wait to get back in harness."

There was more to it — the concept itself of "Life With Lucy," the star added.

She could still play Lucy, the only character she says she has any desire to play, but a more mature Lucy. In this show, she is Lucy Barker, a widow and co-owner, with Gordon, of her husband's hardware store.

"Yes," she laughed. "I'm in business with Gale, so he still has that strong hand over me and I can still frustrate him to pieces. And his son is married to my daughter, and they have young children, which makes for something else for us to fight about. So there's plenty of material for comedy there."

Describing Lucy Barker, Ms. Ball said, "She has her loving ways and her bossy ways. Certainly with Gale, she gets in there and runs the hardware store and bumbles things up. And at the house she's a health nut, trying to shove health foods down everybody's throat. She jogs, and stays young in any ways she can, and enjoys it."

"It's the same Lucy," inserted her husband. "Lovable. Adorable. Crazy. And there's lots of wild comedy. Lucy is not a verbal comedienne, she's a tremendous physical comedienne. With Lucy, you sit and watch the crazy things she does, and she's not afraid to try anything. In (one) episode she has a problem with a goose" — and, like the stand-up comedian he used to be, Gary repeats for emphasis — "a problem with a goose. On other shows, I don't see people having a problem with a goose."

"Life With Lucy" also has ingredients not found in earlier sitcoms.

As she explained, "I wanted to do a show that had a family all together — parents, children and grandparents. The last 20 years, the '60s and '70s, have been terrible. Families have been torn apart. It's so easy to grab a plane and live 3,000 miles away; kids are supposed to fly the coop at a cerain age, go off on their own and never come home again.

Photos rekindle memories of time spent with daughter

By WILLIAM C. BRISICK
King Features

There was something about the way her hair caught in the breeze, the cold wind of San Francisco Bay rippling through it, taking away some fragment, some image that I wanted to hang on to, something that I knew would not be mine again.

So it was that Sunday afternoon when I, the divorced father, was off with my 12-year-old daughter on a weekend trip. It was not the first time I had taken her away, but in a sense it was — the other times were devoted to family and friends. Now it was she and I.

I wasn't sure she wanted to go. I know she had second thoughts. Her mother must have talked to her about...what?...obligations? I don't know. Maybe Jenny accepted it for the challenge it was.

We had taken off on Friday morning from Burbank. She had her separate suitcase; I had suggested she put her things with mine, but she said no. She had her chewing gum with her, bubble gum actually. It smelled like a mixture of strawberry and grape. She knew I wouldn't take any, but she offered nonetheless.

I had hoped she would bring a book — I did. I knew there would be empty spaces in our conversation, when she would not make it up to my level, and my dropping down to hers would not have the expected results. My book came in handy, and Jenny, not as farsighted as I, was content to rummage through the seat pocket in front of her, thumbing through the magazine, looking at the directive about aircraft exits, and opening the air bag to find out whether it was still clean and usable.

When the drink-laden carts came down the aisle, Jenny hesitated a long while, not like her. Finally, came the request for 7-Up. She was nursing it some time later when the flight attendant asked about seconds, a question to which Jenny quickly demurred.

Then, with the moment seemingly past us, she whispered in my ear, "Are these drinks free?" The flight attendant was already several rows behind, but I leaned back far enough to put in our orders. Another round. Somehow it made me feel expansive.

We made our way to Embarcadero and settled in among the hundreds taking their lunches near the fountain. We had bought chicken-salad sandwiches at a deli, and Jenny found chocolate-chip cookies for dessert. At the Wharf she moved from one souvenir stand to another, picking through earrings, necklaces and bracelets.

"Do you mind if we go back to that shop?" she'd ask, and later, "Sorry it took me so long." She finally decided on necklaces, one with her money, one with mine. At my friend's house in Redwood City that night Jenny grew tired at the dinner table. "Will you be coming to bed soon?" she asked, with just a tinge of trepidation. I assured her that I would, but when I came into our room she was already fast asleep.

LUCY

"Well, I've never felt it should be that way. My home has always been open, if they want to come back. I think we all need each other — not just economically but emotionally. It's a good thing, for America to recognize immediately, right now the importance of getting the family back together."

She was eager to play a grandmother, Ms. Ball said, because she is and loves being one. Daughter Lucie Arnez, married to actor (and her frequent stage co-star) Laurence Luckinbill, has three small children, Simon, Joseph and Katie. And, says their doting grandmother, "They're beautiful children."

Since they mostly work on the stage, Ms. Arnez and Luckinbill live, to her mother's regret, "3,000 miles away," in New York City. This has prompted Ms. Ball and Morton also to have a home-away-from-home condo in Manhattan.

With motherly pride, Ms. Ball spoke about both her children. Their professional accomplishments delight her, of course — Desi Arnez Jr., 33 now, starring in movies like "House of the Long Shadows" and "Fake-Out," and Ms. Arnez, 35, headlining and winning plaudits in such stage musicals as "They're PLaying Our Song" on Broadway and the national company of "My One and Only."

But certain successes in their private lives are far more meaningful to their mom.

Ms. Ball observed how her daughter travels with her kids when she's out on the road touring in a show, and said, "She's a wonderful mother, she's doing a fine job. I don't know how she does it all, but she does." And she talked about how her son, after a much-publicized bout with drugs, has now completely turned his life around.

Denying that she is any "authority" on rearing children, "because whatever I told them didn't work," Ms. Ball said: "It was simply a matter of letting them know as often as possible how much they were loved. Taking them with us constantly. Being with them. Making time for them. No matter what the work schedule, we always sat down at the dinner table together. All those things are important. Beyond that, I think what I was teaching them was fairness and honesty and good health habits. We certainly emphasized that. But it didn't cut the mustard when it came to drugs — with young Desi.

"I had a difficult time with Desi because he was in the music world. I made the mistake of letting him go out on the road (as the drummer and youngest member of the Dino, Desi & Billy trio) when he was 11. He was out too early, much too young to be exposed to that sort of thing. Talk about peer pressure — my God, you can't get it any more screamingly! When he came home it was a little difficult to say, 'Go to your room and do your homework.'

"So that was very bad. And through the years, in the schools they went to, Desi and Lucie, the kids around them were all in trouble. Well, I yanked them out of those schools at an early age and put them to work on the set (as cast members in her 'Here's Lucy'). Doing that was the best move that we made. We had a little more jurisdiction over them."

Arnez Jr.'s drug problems did not go away, magically, overnight. But he did eventually conquer them, and his mother is now able to say: "I'm proud of what he's done. He's been really clean for five years. He looks great, is great. And he's out there doing the best he can, making (anti-drug) speeches. You should hear him now, encouraging others to follow good-health rules."

The father of Lucie and Desi Jr. is, of course, Desi Arnaz, the genius businessman and bongo-playing actor who comically co-starred (as Ricky Ricardo) through all those history-making sitcom years in "I Love Lucy" which he also created and masterminded.

He and Ms. Ball were divorced in 1960, after 19 years together, and he lives now in retirement in Del Mar, Calif.

"We've always been friendly, we always got along," Ms. Ball said. "Even when we were divorced we didn't need separate lawyers to handle it. And we still see Desi socially from time to time."

While Ms. Ball and Arnez's marriage was always one of Hollywood's most volatile, her second marriage has been noted from the first for its serenity and its partners' compatibility.

On November 19, Ms. Ball and Morton will be celebrating their silver wedding anniversary.

The secret, Ms. Ball said, is that "Gary was his own man, from the word go." A successful executive, he heads up Lucille Ball Productions, an independent movie-TV company, which turned out, among other box-office hits, the Tom Cruise film "All the Right Moves."

"I thank God every day for Gary," she said. "I didn't make the same marriage mistake twice. He is a fine, strong, good man. He doesn't drink excessively and he doesn't play around. Desi, who is a brilliant showman, a great innovator, and has a fine business head, did both. He talked a lot about the value of a family, but he did nothing about it. An extremely generous man, he gave the children and me house after house — including the one I still live in — but they were never homes. He was seldom in them. The house in Beverly Hills did not become a home until after Gary and I were married. We have tranquility, we want the same things, and we take care of what we have — together."

Smithsonian specialists to give lectures

The Petroleum Museum and the Museum of the Southwest will host specialists from the Smithsonian Institution in a series of seminars, lectures and workshops beginning Thursday.

"When we first visited Midland in 1984, the response was overwhelming," said Charlene James-Duguid, program manager. "With our return visit, we hope to provide Midland residents with an even broader understanding of the research and activities of their national museum."

Susan Sullivan spokeswoman for Hospice Organization

By STACEY FRANK
Hearst News Service

"Falcon Crest" heroine Susan Sullivan mixes her professional and personal life when it comes to Hospice.

Ms. Sullivan says Hospice helped her grieve for her father, who died six years ago of cancer. Four years later, she became spokeswoman for the National Hospice Organization. Now, the tall, blond television star is using her celebrity status to plug Hospice at national conferences around the country.

"I simply want to get people to know about Hospice, so if they need it, it will be available to them," Ms. Sullivan said. Hospice provides support for the terminally ill and their families.

Ms. Sullivan calls her involvement in Hospice a "natural marriage."

"I've never told anyone this before," she said, "but when I was 5 years old, I remember lying in my bed and thinking that it doesn't matter what I do with my life, because I'm going to die anyway.

"That seems depressing, but it's not. It's very liberating. It means you are free to try anything."

She paused and smiled.

"I've often thought of this over the years, and finally put it together with Hospice."

Ms. Sullivan worked for the Muscular Dystrophy Association and joined the Hands Across America chain, but she considers her involvement with Hospice special.

"I have a deep, personal connection with Hospice because it did touch me in a personal way," she says.

The personal connection also touches her professional life and her portrayal of Maggie Gioberti on the CBS series "Falcon Crest."

"When I had my brain tumor on the show, I said I didn't know what you (CBS) plan to do with the character, but if you're planning to kill her off, can she go to a Hospice first?"

Saturday we drove north into Napa, and Jenny saw the Victorian houses she didn't get to see in Los Angeles. She had me stop at the side of the road, and angling her slim body up through the sun roof she snapped her pictures. For lunch we had more chicken-salad sandwiches. I devoured mine quickly, but Jenny, as was her wont, picked through hers as if something didn't look quite right. "Aren't you going to eat it?" I couldn't believe how small an appetite she had. "No," she said indifferently, "You can finish it."

So the weekend had developed a quiet momentum of its own, and now it was Sunday noon; we were on the boat to Alcatraz, an afternoon flight awaiting us. It was colder than we anticipated; Jenny wore just a long flannel plaid shirt and I wondered why she wasn't shivering. She didn't say much, nor did she take much notice of me.

But I stole quick glances at her, perhaps trying to put together some composite impression. She was going into seventh grade, but the dress was already closer to high school than elementary — the blowsy, shapeless look teen-age girls wear.

What had been the long flow of hair dropping to her shoulders was now styled into cuts and chops and tufts, the rhythm of which escaped me. I had misgivings about the eyeliner she had penciled on with a surprisingly skillful hand, but I had to admit that it set off her dark eyes, long lashes and symmetrical brows. The effect was lovely. She was a beautiful child, becoming a beautiful young woman, and when I saw people's eyes resting admiringly upon her, I felt proud.

"Stand at the rail. I want to take your picture with the island in the background." I wanted one more shot of her.

"Oh, Dad!" The annoyed tone was partly feigned, but I caught the message: "You've taken enough pictures of me already."

I took the picture anyway, knowing full well that it was not so much Jenny in the camera's eye I wanted to capture; rather it was in my mind's eye — Jenny, the youngest by seven years of my children, the vestige of our married life that still made absolute sense and offered no arena of contention; Jenny, her boyish form hidden under woman's clothes, too quickly growing into adulthood, spending these precious hours with her newly divorced father.

Well, at least the pictures would be there: the framed smiles stopping time in just that moment, readily available to be pulled out and viewed again at some vague point in the future.

Thicke's been through 'Growing Pains'

Hearst News Service

Alan Thicke is turning out to be a textbook example of how to handle show-business failure. A year ago, he was apologizing for his disastrous TV talk show, "Thicke of the Night." It was so bad he fainted while watching one of his programs at home.

Last fall, however, he got a break as star of a new ABC family sitcom, "Growing Pains." As the show enters its second season, he returns a winner in the highly rated series. ABC likes him so much that it used him as host of a recent half-hour, prime-time preview of its new fall lineup.

Thicke, a glib, 39-year-old Canadian who's funnier than anyone would have guessed from watching his late-night bomb, does not deny the quality of the show that almost finished him.

It's hardly a coincidence that Fred Silverman, who produced it, is featuring Thicke in a November NBC "Perry Mason" special as a TV talk-show host who's murdered on camera as millions watch.

Thicke confesses that his "Growing Pains" role is "not a stretch. Dustin Hoffman did not turn this part down." Still, he feels that his personal experience as a divorced single parent with two young sons (one a diabetic) has helped bring some honest family flavor to the ABC series.

The boys are Brennan, 11, and Robin, 9. They live with their father in a house he recently bought next door to his pal Garry Marshall, producer of TV's "Happy Days" and director of the films "The Flamingo Kid" and "Nothing in Common."

"I've turned the house into a great playground for kids; I have soccer nets, a volleyball net and a basketball hoop," Thicke says. "My kids are at the set (of 'Growing Pains') all the time. They live there. Jeremy (cast member Jerry Miller, who plays one of his sons) comes and spends the night at my house. The cast and their families spend a lot of time together, and that makes a lot of difference. It's a euphoric kind of working environment."

A year ago, Thicke's personal life was considerably less euphoric. He'd been canceled and divorced the same day. And his living conditions were far less comfortable:

"I was in a two-bedroom house that used to be my office. There was my mother, my two children, myself and my housekeeper — and one bath, one shower. We lived there for a year, and it was crowded."

Now, says Thicke, his show has been "picked up for five years in syndication. It's a completely different life, and the only constant through all of that was my kids and that relationship, which is probably why I'm pretty good at playing the Jason Seaver role (in 'Growing Pains')."

"I respond to trauma very well. My son's being chronically diabetic was the low point of my life. After that, it's tough to hurt you. You can be embarrassed, humiliated, worried, but nothing quite compares to that. That's real life — and the rest of it is, 'OK, whatta we do next?'"

Thicke says that Brennan, who has the diabetes problem, "is the voice of 'Dennis the Menace' in a new cartoon series. He's making money and he feels good (and) has a sense of self-worth."

Thicke says Robin "couldn't care less" about show business. "He wants to play for the Lakers."

Thicke, who's coached his sons' little league baseball and football teams, says he was "thrilled" during his career crisis "to see that the boys weren't spoiled. I would schedule my weekends so that somebody would invite me and the boys over for lunch at their pool. I had my Chevy van, and we'd travel around and visit."

Thicke, who previously was a successful writer and producer, "wasn't actually worried about making a living because right after 'Thicke of the Night' I found out that the most forgiving element was probably the industry. The media can be tough. But the industry, no matter what they might have said cynically in the Polo Lounge, realizes there are a lot of factors in the failure of anything."

A lot of growing pains, you might say.

Husband, wife paired in 'Rocky Horror'

> "(Being married) you have a bigger personal relationship, so if someone blows a joke or something, you can immediately say, 'You blew it.'"
>
> — Actor Kurt Rhoads

DALLAS (AP) — Playing star-crossed lovers set the stage for the marriage of actors Kurt Rhoads and Nance Williamson.

But although he played Orlando to her Rosalind, it wasn't love at first sight.

The two were appearing in a 1983 Dallas Theater Center production of Shakespeare's, "As You Like It," with Ms. Williamson playing the part of Rosalind who disguises herself as a shepherd. In the play, the unwitting Orlando asks the shepherd to pretend to be Rosalind so he can practice his romancing.

Ironically, in real life it was Ms. Williamson who was mistaken in her first impression of Rhoads, ignoring him because she thought he was gay.

"Well, you know, he was groomed very well and he wore a ring," says Ms. Williamson, a redhead with a generous smile. Rhoads, suave and irreverent, shrugs his shoulders and smiles.

The misunderstanding cleared up, the two began dating and were soon married. The Midwestern natives, both 28, make their home in Dallas.

Within a year of their marriage the joke took on a new dimension when the two paired up in "The Rocky Horror Show," a more modern play which recently had a successful second-run at the New Arts Theater in Dallas. Rhoads played an amoral transvestite called Dr. Frank N. Furter and Ms. Williamson was the about-to-be-awakened ingenue Janet.

"We hadn't been married all that long at that time," Ms. Williamson said. "I told my mother and she was a good sport. She even sent down some fishnets and garters for Kurt."

Being married makes it easier to play close roles, the two said, because they trust each other. "You have a bigger personal relationship, so if someone blows a joke or something, you can immediately say, 'You blew it,'" he said.

"I think we're pretty honest with each other and protective, too," Ms. Williamson said.

They said they rarely take work home, but appreciate the fact that when they're in the same play, they have the same strange schedules and instant rapport over job stress.

The "Rocky Horror" play had some moments of unscripted drama. During Rhoads' opening night entrance his high heel snapped, forcing him to tiptoe through the number, "Sweet Transvestite."

The movie version of "Rocky Horror" has built up a cult following of well-rehearsed fans who shout ribald sayings at certain points in the action.

At the live performances of the rock musical written by Richard O'Brien, the audience was just as vociferous, which Ms. Williamson and Rhoads said became somewhat wearing night after night.

During the play's run, Rhoads became adept at yelling back at the audience, working in some funny but unprintable ad libs.

Audience participation is encouraged by the cozy surroundings of the New Arts theater which brings observers at close quarters with actors. Most of the "Rocky Horror" cast wore racy underwear, but Rhoads in particular cut a dashing figure in a snug-fitting purple corset.

As part of his campy and very amusing performance, he sashayed off the stage, plumping down in the laps of people in the audience, causing consternation and giggles.

On stage, the action sometimes was just as spontaneous, the two actors said. In the play, Janet and Furter become lovers and then rivals for the affections of Furter's creation, Rocky. Ms. Williamson said the on-stage antagonism sometimes was shaded by off-stage squabbles.

There are some nights when you don't stick to the script," she said.

Ex-Midlander to write phone book

Jheri C. Fleet, former Midlander and graduate of Midland High School, has been commissioned to write a book on the history of the General Telephone Company of the Southwest, according to a spokesman for the company.

A native of Oklahoma City, Ms. Fleet was raised in Argentina. She was educated at William Woods College in Fulton, Mo., and the University of Oklahoma.

She has authored more than 250 articles, four books, one prime-time television script and two software programs, said the spokesman. She has also taught fiction and non-fiction at the college and university levels.

The book will be written from history and materials collected by Elmer C. Danner, who is chairman of General Tepehone of the Southwest historical committee.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Third derby scheduled

Fender-crashing action is planned for today's demolition derby at Twin Cities Speedway, off Highway 80 east of Odessa Country Club's golf course. Derby time is 2:30 p.m.

The October derby marks the third and final derby in the 1986 series, which is sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club.

The July derby drew a capacity crowd. Eight additional acres of free parking were added to the track in September to provide adequate parking. The September derby drew the largest crowd in the track's history.

Children will have the opportunity today to get autographs from such celebritites as Wilbur the Playful Freckle-Faced Gorilla, Half "Quacky" Derby Duck, the Big Chicken and the Texas Mouse, winner of the first derby in the series.

In addition to the $2,000 prize money for the first five places, $500 will be presented to the team with the most cars entered. More than $3,000 worth of trophies will be awarded.

A spectator drag will precede the derby. In this process of elimination event, a spectator runs one trip around the oval track with another vehicle. The winner stays, and the loser is eliminated. Vehicles entered must be street legal, have tags and four wheels. Prize money and trophies will be awarded.

Tickets, priced at $6.50 for adults, $2 for children 6 to 11 years old and free to those under 6 years old, may be purchased at the gate. Gates open at noon.

Permian Consort to play

The "Celebration: Performing arts Series" continues at 8 p.m. Saturday with a program of 18th century music performed by the Permian Consort Chamber Orchestra at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Performing Arts Center.

This concert of periodical music from the 18th century will feature newly edited and discovered works by Jommelli, Vanhall and Maldere. Although Jommelli's "The Celebrated Overture" was one of the most popular works of the 18th century, it has escaped the attention of 20th century publishers and the Consort's performance will offer the work to the public for the fist time in some 200 years.

The Permian Consort is a 22-piece orchestra composed of outstanding musicians from the university's student body and the community.

Season ticket subscribers to "Celebration" are invited to the performance. Ticket price for non-subscribers is $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens.

For reservations call the Office of Student Life, 1-367-2136, or from Midland call 563-2400, ext. 2136.

Now in their 20th season, the A.D. Players currently maintain a resident company of 20. Each year the company mounts a full season of plays in Houston plus a touring program.

"The whole family is sure to enjoy the slapstick comedy and hilarious antics of Gingerbrook Fare's singing, dancing, laughing clowns as they bring biblical truths to life," said a spokesman for Word of Life.

"These madcat students of Mik's Clown Training School are funny, heartwarming reminders that living by God's principles is the right thing to do. Gingerbrook Fare's main goal is to teach children positive character qualities through music and drama. The lessons include basic biblical principles of love and having a good heart."

Gingerbrook Fare is a production of the Agape Force and has performed at Disneyland and Circus World, Orlando, Fla. Other Agape Force creations include the inspirational children's albums "Music Machine" and "Bullfrogs and Butterflies," as well as the contemporary Christian music group Silverwind.

The public is invited to attend this free lecture and reception.

Pasta shape is a winner

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — Contest judges chose a shape that looks like an umbrella without a handle over such entries as the tiny ant-shapes of "anti-pasta" the feet figures of "pasttoes" and the naked people shape of "nudles" for a new pasta design.

Georgette Conlan, of Fort Pierce, Fla., bested more than 60,000 pasta designers to win $15,000 offered by a family-owned noodle firm, the Prince Co. said last week.

Other entries ranged from the "practical" to the "practically unpublishable," the company said.

One competitive participant composed and recorded an original jingle, entitled, "I Sing for My Supper," to accompany her "melody-roni," shaped like musical notes. But the entry struck no chord with the judges.

Bird photographer will be honored

SANTA FE, N.M. — The National Audubon Society has planned two days of festivities, Tuesday and Wednesday, to honor photographer, Eliot Porter, this year's recipient of the Hal Borland Award. Highlighting the events will be a showing of John James Audubon's original Double Elephant Folio, "Birds of America." The folio is valued at $2 million and contains 435 engravings of over 1,100 birds, according to a spokesman for the society.

The events are open to the public through ticket purchase and the proceeds will benefit the Randall Davey Audubon Center. Ticket information is available by calling 505-983-4609.

Porter, a Tesuque, N.M., resident and pioneer in the field of bird and landform photography, will receive the award in recognition of his contribution to the understanding, appreciation and protection of nature.

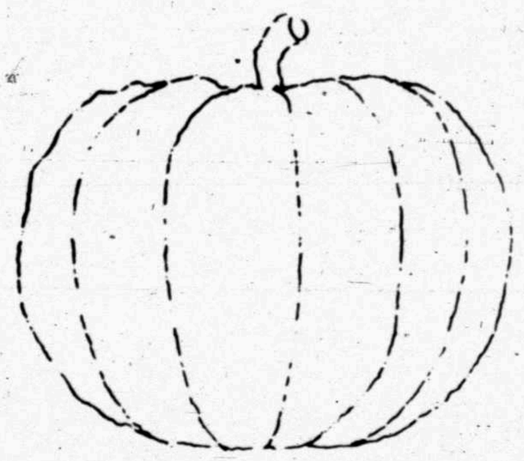

An opening cocktail reception for Porter will be held Tuesday at the Randall Davey Audubon Center where a retrospective of Porter's personal collection of lifelong portraits of North American birds will be on display.

The Hal Borland Award was established to recognize the contributions of the late New England naturalist, Hal Borland, who was one of America's nature writers, a contributing editor to "Audubon," and the author of "When Legends Die." Previous recipients of the award have included sea turtle authority Archie Carr and artist Arthur Singer. The award is presented annually by the editors of "Audubon" magazine.

FROST IS FOR PUMPKINS, NOT PEOPLE!
So, be sure your gas heating system is in tip-top shape right now, before that first winter cold snap.
For complete servicing, call your heating contractor or plumber. Ask him to change filters and check fans, belts, and vents.
Or, if you prefer, Energas will light pilots, adjust burners and survey the condition of your heating unit for a nominal service charge.
But call early and avoid the rush. Keep the frost outside, on the pumpkins.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I can think of no simpler convention in bridge than Blackwood. However, I am amazed at how many times we end up in the wrong contract after we have asked for aces. What are we doing wrong? — A.W., Knoxville, Tenn.

A.—As my good friend Easley Blackwood has so often said, he would be a millionaire many times over if he only had a nickel for every time his convention was misused. Apparently, you would have contributed your share.

Blackwood is probably more useful for staying out of slams than for bidding them. The convention should be applied only if you need to know how many aces partner holds, and nothing else, to decide whether or not to bid a slam.

If you are going to use Blackwood, be sure that you are safe at whatever level partner's response will carry you to. You must be particularly careful when your suit is a minor. Thus if your agreed suit is clubs and you have just one ace, stay away from Blackwood. Why? Because if partner has only one ace too, his response of five diamonds might take you out of your depth.

Don't ask for aces if, should partner's response show you are missing only one ace, you do not intend bidding a slam. That is particularly true when you have two fast losers in a suit. If from the response you find out your side lacks an ace, you won't be sure whether the opponents can or can't take the first two tricks.

As responder, respect partner's decision. He has all the information and has selected the contract, don't, in effect, call him an idiot by overruling him. The only time responder can make a decision is if the Blackwood bidder follows up his ask with five no trump. That does more than ask for kings—it confirms possession of all four aces. If responder now has reason to feel that 13 tricks are there, for instance, if he has a source of tricks that he has not yet shown, he can go straight to a grand slam without bothering to show how many kings he holds.

Painter John Groth to give workshops

Illustrator and painter John Groth will be in Midland Tuesday through Saturday conducting workshops and attending a reception and art showing in his honor at Stehle-Reed Fine Art.

Groth will be teaching two three-day workshops, each at a fee of $75, at Stehle-Reed's gallery, 1507 Industrial. The workshops are limited to the first 20 people. Hours are 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday. To pre-register, call 682-6892 or 689-6889.

The public is invited to attend a reception and art showing in Groth's honor from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday. Over 25 of Groth's work will be on display during the show at Stehle-Reed.

In addition, Groth will hold a one-hour critique at 10 a.m. Saturday at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building Room 180. The critique is open to the public free of charge. Artists attending are invited to bring any work in progress or a finished piece to be critiqued.

He also will give a free drawing demonstration to the University Arts Association at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's art lab at 2 p.m. Wednesday. The public is invited to attend.

Groth was born in Chicago in 1908. In 1933, he was discovered by the new and fashionable Esquire Magazine, which sent him on world travels as a graphic chronicler of history. He saw Adolph Hitler in Berlin in 1934 and did a portfolio of Russian sketches the first year the USSR was opened to world travelers.

Groth's first war assignment was as a World War II correspondent for the Chicago Sun, where he made the front page with the first account of the liberation of Paris in 1944. The next day he conducted the first interview with Pablo Picasso, and he later was with the Russians at the fall of Berlin.

Groth subsequently covered the United Nations units in the Korean action, France's Indochina War, UN participation in the Congon insurrection, fighting in Santo Domingo and the Vietnam War, the latter for the U.S. Marine Corps.

Fellow war correspondent and friend, Ernest Hemmingway said, "If John had made his drawings any closer up front, he would have had to sit in the Krauts' laps."

Groth wrote and illustrated two books on his war experiences, "Studio: Europe" and "Studio: Asia."

Also known as a spots illustrator, Groth did a whole series on Eskimo sports and games, folk sports and festivals of Europe and bull-fighting in Spain. "John Groth's World of Sport," published in 1970, features a selection of his sketches, drawings and paintings of unusual and exotic sports in "the world's far corners."

Through the years, Groth has illustrated a number of books, including classics for the Limited Editions Club. Among these were "Gone with the Wind," "All Quiet on the Western Front," the "Short Stories of O. Henry" and "The Grapes of Wrath."

Groth's works are represented in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Chicago Art Institute, New York's Museum of Modern Art, the Library of Congress, The University of Texas, the Atlanta Historical Society and the Dallas Public Library.

He currently lives in New York City and is an instructor at the Art Students League, a post he has held for the past 43 years.
