Honor slated for longtime banker

Dignitaries from throughout the Lone Star state--including top governmental officals--will be in Snyder Aug. 21 for the observance of Roger Mize Day.

A 21-member steering committee announced last week that plans are being developed for an appreciation day for Roger Mize, Snyder banker and civic leader since 1957.

The occasion will be marked by a joint civic club luncheon at the Scurry County Coliseum. Texas Gov. Mark White has announced that he will attend along with State Sen. Ray Farabee and other state officials and invited guests. There has been tentative indications that U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen--a long-time friend of Mize--will also be on hand.

Hermleigh church to rise from ashes

The Hermleigh Church of Christ — razed by fire last Tuesday — will be rebuilt, church officials say.

In the interim, the congregation will gather as usual this Sunday morning — worship services aided by other county Church of Christ members as well as residents of the Hermleigh community.

This Sunday, the meeting will be in the Hermleigh School with Bible classes to begin at 9 a.m. followed by worship services at 9:45.

Song books and communion emblems, also lost in the Tuesday fire, will be on loan Sunday from the East Side Church of Christ.

Thursday, a bulldozer on loan from the county moved on site to level the fallen ruins of the old church building.

The structure which will be raised in its place will come primarily from the skills of the membership, according to minister Rio Evans.

"I was a builder for 18 years and we have a bunch of men in this congregation who can do just about anything," he said.

The church elders made the final decision to rebuild last week after a meeting with insurance adjusters.

According to Evans, although they will be mainly rebuilding the church themselves, they might contract for erection of the framework of a metal building.

He said they hope to have a new building framed in about six weeks. Following this plan, they should be ready to meet in their new building in approximately two months.

Representatives of both Churches of Christ in Snyder noted that local congregations plan to help as much as possible.

Tom Holcomb, minister at East Side, said "We'll be helping them further once they decide what type of building they want and how much their insurance will cover. Once they are more definite in their plans, we will know how we fit in."

Dan Dever, an elder for the 37th Street Church of Christ, said his church will also help. "We are trying to help them with items to hold services now, but we will not do anything else until they finish their plans. Then we will know how to help further."

Ask Us

Q. — How much would the Snyder school tax rate be if the three librarian jobs had not been eliminated?

A. — By producing budget cuts estimated in the $150,000 to $200,000 range, trustees estimated they saved from 1 to 1½ cents on the tax rate. The three librarian positions likely entailed from $80,000 to $90,000 of these cuts. In line with this, the three positions involve less than 1 cent on the tax rate.

Two suspects in Allsup's shooting due trial hearings

Pre-trial hearings — including one involving a change of venue motion — have been set for the Colorado City pair implicated in the March 23 shooting death of a Snyder Allsup's store employee.

Judge Gene Dulaney granted two routine defense motions and set dates for future hearings Thursday in 132nd District Court for capital murder defendants Dorsie Johnson and Amanda Miles.

The pair have now had attorneys appointed for them by the court. They were represented at Thursday's hearings by Sweetwater attorneys Frank Conard and Peter Sheridan.

Defense motions for "discovery" were granted for both defendants to allow their attorneys access to written statements and other evidence against them currently in the possession of District Attorney Ernie Armstrong.

The motion for discovery is considered routine, Dulaney noted, and was not opposed by Armstrong.

In other action in the cases, Dulaney set Aug. 14 as the date for hearings on the voluntariness of statements given by the defendants after their arrest.

The hearing for change of venue motions — in which attorneys for the defense will likely seek to have the trial moved to another city — has been set for Sept. 3.

County tax income to drop 13 percent

County residents will likely see an increase of about six cents in the tax rate to be assessed by the county tax office this coming fall, according to preliminary figures by the auditor's office.

This is still some 4 cents less than initially projected, however, as the county finalizes plans on tax requirements which will see it actually receive more than 13 percent less in ad valorem taxes during 1987 compared to 1986.

In a series of budget discussions the past two weeks, commissioners trimmed funding from each department to avoid charging an "effective tax rate" figure announced in mid-April of just under 27 cents.

The effective tax rate is what the county would have to assess this year to generate the same amount of taxes required last year.

The current tax rate of just over 17 cents per $100 valuation will have to increase due to the loss in county oil values.

"Based on very preliminary figures, it looks like our tax rate will be set at about 23 cents," County Auditor Bernhard Bartels said.

During the current budget year, the county expects to raise some $3.8 million in ad valorem taxes.

Although the tax rate will increase next year, the dollars generated for county coffers will actually decrease due to the drop in values. Officials expect to raise $3.3 million during 1987.

"We will be taking a 13.8 percent reduction over what was raised for 1986," County Auditor Bernard Bartels said.

Reeling under a 40 percent reduction in oil valuations, county officials are also implementing some reductions for 1986, including a freeze on hiring additional personnel.

"Although we actually won't amend the 1986 budget, we are trying to hold the line on spending," Bartels noted.

Currently, county officials estimate general fund expenditures to reach $3.8 million — down some 2½ percent from the original $3.9 million estimate for 1986. The road and bridge fund will receive slightly more than

Assault case charge filed

Police answering a domestic disturbance call just before 1 a.m. Friday jailed a 44-year-old man on charges of aggravated sexual assault on a child.

Gail William Brooks of 2600 Ave. Y was formally charged with the felony offense around 6 a.m. Friday.

He was initially arrested on two counts of Class C misdemeanor assault following a 1 a.m. disturbance call at his residence.

Investigation of the circumstances surrounding that call led detectives to file the felony charge in connection with an alleged assault on a 4-year-old girl.

Brooks remained in the Scurry County Jail Saturday morning in lieu of bond set at $15,000.

The woman gathered up her fur coat and walked over to stand beside the Texan at the registration desk. The Texan picked up the pen and signed the registration card, "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith."

After the weekend, the Texan did a double-take when he went to check out. He complained that something must be wrong as the bill was over $10,000.

"That's true," said the clerk, "but Mrs. Smith has been with us for the past two months."

Statue site before court

County commissioners Monday will consider a possible site for the bronze statue of the white buffalo scheduled to be cast by local artist Dr. Robert Taylor.

Possible sites mentioned earlier have included Towle Park, the coliseum and Western Texas College.

Taylor has offered to fund the buffalo project, estimated to cost some $35,000, by casting and selling two smaller versions of the statue.

In other action, commissioners will consider purchasing three two-way radio units and radar equipment for two patrol cars used by locally-based Department of Public Safety officers.

Clearing the Hermleigh Church of Christ rubble will be discussed also.

Reagan says Soviets serious about arms control proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan, wrapping up a fireworks-filled Fourth of July birthday party for the Statue of Liberty, says the Soviets appear to be "more serious than ever before" about reaching an arms control agreement.

Reagan was scheduled to return to Washington today with his wife Nancy after she ended their hectic three-day celebration of the statue's 100th anniversary by cutting the ribbon to open the 151-foot monument to the public.

The couple spent their final evening Friday in New York harbor aboard the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy, watching 40,000 rockets blaze overhead in what was billed as the world's largest pyrotechnic display.

"Now, let's have some fun. Let the celebration begin," the president said in closing a short speech aboard the carrier, seconds before Lady Liberty and the harbor were emblazoned in brilliant bursts of light.

During his meeting Friday with French President Francois Mitterrand, the president also let it be known that he intends to answer Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's recent letter himself and will not rely on Mitterrand to carry a message for him.

The two presidents met for 80 minutes over lunch at Governors Island in New York Harbor, and their primary subject was relations with the Soviet Union. Mitterrand travels next week to the Soviet Union for meetings with top Kremlin officials.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the two "agreed on all major facets of relations with the Soviet Union." But the spokesman also conceded that "perhaps there is some disagreement" over Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative — better known as the "Star Wars" defense system.

The French president has balked at French participation in planning for the missile defense.

But Speakes also quoted Reagan as telling Mitterrand, "I believe the Soviets may be more serious than ever before about working out an agreeement" to limit superpower nuclear weapons arsenals.

NEA supports plan to create nat'l board

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The head of the nation's largest teachers union has persuaded members to back a proposed national certification board aimed at lifting the prestige of their profession.

Today, 7,448 delegates at the National Education Association's annual convention decide whether to amend their constitution to allow their highly popular president, Mary Hatwood Futrell — who pressed them to vote for the controversial board — to serve one more term.

In Chicago, American Federation of Teachers chief Albert Shanker opened his union's annual convention Friday with an 80-minute speech appealing to 3,700 delegates to accept the national board and other drastic changes in the way schools are run.

Without the changes, Shanker warned, people will turn their backs on public education and approve such Reagan administration-backed ideas as tuition tax credits and other help for private schools.

AFT delegates vote Sunday on a package of radical school reforms, including the national board.

NEA delegates, by a show of hands after a placid half-hour debate, voted Friday for the national board concept advanced in May by the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy. Shanker and Futrell served on the panel that produced the Carnegie proposals.

The NEA resolution, supported by about two-thirds of the delegates, supported "the concept of a voluntary national certification process."

Sandinistas expel bishop; asylum given in Honduras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega has been granted political asylum in Honduras after being banished by the leftist Sandinista government for allegedly being an accomplice of U.S. policy.

Vega was the second Nicaraguan clergyman banned from the country in a week, heightening tensions between the government and the Roman Catholic Church.

In an announcement Friday, the government indefinitely suspended the right of the prelate to remain in Nicaragua, saying he had openly backed President Reagan's campaign to provide aid to the anti-Sandinista Contra rebels and thus was "an accomplice of the U.S. government's policy of terror and crime against Nicaragua."

Before the announcement, the government-controlled news media, citing Vega's purported support of the Reagan administration, accused him of complicity in a rebel attack on a bus Wednesday that killed 32 civilians in Jinotega province, about 100 miles northeast of Managua.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Joseph Reap said he had no immediate comment on the 66-year-old bishop's banishment.

Vega, bishop of the central province of Chontales, was granted political asylum in Honduras, Honduran officials said Friday.

"He arrived at our territory frightened and only with his cassock, maybe due to a mobilization of Sandinista troops in the zone," said Col. Miguel Flores Auceda, chief of the Honduran immigration office.

A spokesman for the papal nuncio in Tegucigalpa, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Vega reached the Honduran capital in mid-afternoon and was in perfect health.

An immigration officer, who demanded anonymity, said he interviewed Vega after the prelate entered Honduran territory Friday morning at El Espino, 155 miles southeast of Tegucigalpa.

Pope John Paul II enters fisherman's hut

CALI, Colombia (AP) — Pope John Paul II paid a surprise visit to a poor fisherman's hut in a Pacific coast village and intervened in southwestern Colombia on behalf of an Indian leader seeking justice for two slain priests.

The pontiff, on a seven-day pilgrimage to this South American nation, travels today to Medellin, the heart of Colombia's flourishing cocaine industry.

The industrial city of 2 million people 120 miles northwest of Bogota is also plagued by a jobless rate of 22 percent — the highest in the country and 7 percentage points above the national average.

The pope also planned a brief stopover in Chinchina, in Colombia's prosperous coffee-growing region, on the fifth day of his first visit to this predominantly Roman Catholic nation.

On Friday, John Paul traveled from Cali to the poverty- and disease-ridden fishing village of Tumaco, on the Pacific, where 90 percent of the 45,000 inhabitants are descended from African slaves imported by Spanish conquerors to dredge rivers for gold.

After his address the pope broke from his itinerary to enter a cramped, dark, tin-roofed hut crowded with about 15 people.

"Who is the head of this house?" The pope inquired in Spanish.

"I am," said a grizzled old fisherman.

As the pope left the shack his secretary, Stanislaw Dziwizs, pulled $300 in U.S. currency from a pocket and held it out to the man, who appeared reluctant to take it.

Fireworks help celebrate Fourth

by Polly Anderson
Associated Press Writer

America celebrated its 210th birthday to the roar of "Old Ironsides" cannons, rousing John Philip Sousa marches, the harmony of barbershop quartets and the "oohs" and "aahs" of millions as fireworks lighted the night.

Fourth of July fireworks displays killed two people and injured about 40, including 30 who suffered minor injuries when a rocket went into the stands at a show in Newark, N.J.

The Statue of Liberty dominated the celebration in New York, where Friday's highlights included a parade of tall sailing ships and a massive display of fireworks seen firsthand by an estimated 2 million people.

The refurbished, century-old statue also got a nod in places like Gatlinburg, Tenn., which had a float bearing a replica of Lady Liberty at its "first-in-the-nation" parade that began one minute after midnight Thursday.

Meanwhile, snow Friday chased campers from Crater Lake National Park in southern Oregon and high winds forced more than 1,500 Oregon coastal residents to endure the holiday without electricity. It also snowed in parts of Montana.

"Most people made a mad dash to get out," said Maureen Briggs, a National Park Service spokeswoman at Crater Lake. "We had to dig out a snowplow that had been parked for the summer."

Musical Fourths were celebrated in Manor, Texas, at Willie Nelson's Farm Aid II concert to help farmers, and Adelanto, Calif., where the turnout at the High Desert Music Festival was only 2,000 out of a hoped-for 60,000 for the first of two days of country music and nostalgic rock 'n' roll.

In Utah, 3,000 barbershop quartet singers from Salt Lake City performed in a "Light of Liberty Panorama."

The music wasn't live in Windham, Conn., where about 1,500 people showed up for a "boombox parade." Organizers couldn't get a band and asked residents to bring portable radios and tune in to a station broadcasting Sousa marches.

The music died in Philadelphia, where an evening concert was canceled because of the threat of violence from a public employees' strike. But the fireworks went on.

Some observed the holiday by helping the needy. On Los Angeles' Skid Row, the Rev. Fred Jordan put on a picnic for 3,000 of the poor and homeless, while in Boston, a small group of demonstrators called for people to donate money "to restore lives of homeless people" as they had restored the statue.

Also in Boston, the 188-year-old USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," took its annual lap around the harbor, firing a salute that was answered by pealing bells from the tower of Old North Church.

'Big bang' rounds off Fourth

NEW YORK (AP) — Liberty's beacon towers in dignity over New York Harbor as the Lady holding out "the hope that is America" reopens today for the first time in two years after the biggest fireworks display in America's history climaxed her 100th birthday party.

Nancy Reagan was scheduled to cut the ribbon today opening the Statue of Liberty to the public after its two-year, $66 million restoration, a dazzling rededication, a Fourth of July parade of tall ships, and Friday's pyrotechnics.

President Reagan described the Lady as the symbol of "the hope that is America," then added, "While it's good to talk about serious things, it is just as important and just as American to have some fun."

Then, as an estimated 2 million people watched from the harbor's shores and millions more on television, 41 barges circling Liberty Island launched 40,000 shells — 20 tons of fireworks — that bathed the statue in brilliance.

Fifteen miles of the New Jersey Turnpike were closed as motorists stopped and climbed on their vehicles to watch.

"It's spectacular ... It's a knockout," said Joan Charnin of White Plains, who shouted and clapped at Liberty State Park in New Jersey.

There were aerial shells, ground displays, fountains, candles and rockets. The statue sometimes disappeared in smoke and flame, and the starbursts were reflected by the water and by the glass of Manhattan's towers.

At the end of the 28-minute lightshow came the grand finale: 3,600 shells that painted the harbor with red, white, green, silver and blue.

Smoke and echoes drifted up the Hudson and applause rolled as the harbor resounded with the blasts of boats sounding their horns.

Reagan introduced the show by recalling America's history of bravery and brotherhood.

"Tonight, with heart and hand — through whatever trial and travail — we pledge ourselves to each other and to the cause of human freedom, the cause that has given light to this land and hope to the world," he said.

The Fabulous Fifth of July promised more, including a classical concert in Central Park and — at last — the statue's opening.

The Glorious Fourth ended with fireworks in the air, but the rest of the day came by land and by sea.

On land — the Harbor Festival, a street fair that filled 50 blocks of lower Manhattan with 1.5 million people, and a televised Boston Pops concert viewed by 15,000 at Liberty State Park and millions more on television.

On the water earlier, Reagan reviewed 32 warships and the parade of tall ships, surrounded by an estimated 20,000 craft that filled the harbor.

Operation Sail left indelible images in the minds of millions who watched and hundreds who participated. The spectacle was "as colorful as fireworks, as majestic as Lady Liberty herself," said Reagan.

Twenty-two tall-masted schooners, square riggers, barks and brigantines were accompanied by more than 200 other sailing vessels as they cruised up the harbor filled with private craft.

Earlier, Reagan boarded the battleship USS Iowa to review warships from the United States and 13 other countries. As the Iowa passed, every third ship fired a 21-gun salute, and the Iowa responded with blasts from its 5-inch guns.

Jurors continue to study verdict

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors in the murder trial of Cynthia Campbell Ray were spending a second day of the July Fourth weekend trying to decide whether she helped her former boyfriend kill her father.

Jurors were sequestered Friday night about 8 p.m. after failing to reach a decision. They resume deliberations at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Ms. Ray, 30, could face life in prison if convicted. Her exboyfriend, David West, 30, has pleaded guilty to murder in exchange for a life sentence.

The jury, which had asked to review parts of several witnesses' testimony, had not indicated Friday how they were divided in the case, said court clerk Betty Conway.

Jurors wanted large portions of testimony read back to them, including some from the maid of Ms. Ray's parents, West and Ms. Ray's younger sister.

On Thursday, the jury adjourned for the evening after about 10½ hours of deliberations that day. The panel began considering the case Tuesday.

West was arrested in February 1985 after private investigator Kim Paris tricked him into believing she was in love with him and coaxed him into a recorded confession.

During six days on the witness stand, West testified that Ms. Ray talked him into the killings. He said the two sneaked into her parents' home on June 19, 1982.

Ms. Ray fled from the bedroom as he opened fire, West said.

James Campbell, Ms. Ray's 55-year-old father, and her mother, Virginia Campbell, 50, were shot to death. Ms. Ray is being tried only in her father's slaying.

West testified Ms. Ray begged him to kill her parents because her father, who she claimed sexually molested her throughout her adolescence, had resumed his advances.

Fireworks explosion hurts six

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP) — Seven people were injured, at least two seriously, when fireworks exploded on the ground during a Fourth of July fireworks display on a South Texas beach, officials said.

Aransas County Sheriff Robert Hewes said he believed the injured were all Rockport residents who annually stage the informal fireworks show on Rockport Beach.

The explosion occurred about 10 minutes into the 9:15 p.m. show, Hewes said.

Corpus Christi Memorial Medical Center had been notified to expect at least one seriously injured patient, said assistant director Linda Snyder. The Corpus Christi hospital is about an hour's drive south from Rockport.

Four people were treated at Coastal Bend Hospital in Rockport. They are Jack Larson, 22, listed in good condition with shoulder burns; John Barnes, 19, listed in stable condition with burns; and John Larson, Jack Larson's brother, 25, and David Cordoba, 17, who were both treated and released, said assistant administrator John Hipp.

Hipp said seven people were injured, and three persons were being transported to Corpus Christi.

"The fireworks display was going on, and all of a sudden there was the most beautiful sight you could see but it was on the ground," Hewe said. "It was too low and too bright," he said, explaining that shooting, colored sparks and clouds of smoke were visible.

There was no sound of an explosion because of the noise of fireworks exploding overhead, he said.

Hewes could not estimate how many people had gathered on the beach or nearby to watch the show, cut short by the explosion.

Farm Aid II donations short

MANOR, Texas (AP) — Farm Aid II produced the expected music and traffic jam, but fell short of attracting the amount of money that Willie Nelson wanted for struggling farmers.

Telephone donations added up to about $500,000 by early today, according to Farm Aid spokeswoman Margaret Wade. The approximately 40,000 tickets sold for the Friday show added another $800,000, she said.

"It's not too good," said Ms. Wade, who, nevertheless, called the 18-hour concert a success.

The first Farm Aid show, held Sept. 22, 1985, in Illinois, raised $9 million, but not all of it on the day of the show.

In a pre-concert interview, Nelson said he hoped Farm Aid II would raise at least $9 million more. He sounded disappointed when he met with reporters 12 hours into the show.

"According to the way the phone calls are coming in, I'd have to confess we're not approaching that now," Nelson said, referring to the Farm Aid I total. "I had hoped the phone calls would come in better than they are at this point."

Ms. Wade said the Fourth of July might not have been the best day to draw a large television audience that would call in donations. The show was telecast on cable network VH-1, opposite televised celebrations of the Statue of Liberty's centennial.

"The people who watched this show and called in are the people who need the money. People who could afford it probably watched the Statue of Liberty," Ms. Wade said.

"We didn't lose any momey. Let's see if we raised the consciousness," she added.

The show featured about 75 pop, country and rock performers, including Nelson, Neil Young, John Cougar Mellencamp, the Beach Boys, Julio Iglesias and Alabama.

The crowd weathered mid-90 temperatures at Manor Downs, a quarter horse track about 11 miles east of Austin.

The day started with a traffic jam that had vehicles backed up to Austin. A major jam also was expected after the show.

"By sunrise we'll probably be checking the ditches and the fields for the bodies that remain, probably just live bodies that were knocked out," said security director Mike Simpson. Workers at medical tents treated hundreds of people who wilted in the heat.

Houston physician Dr. Red Duke, medical director of the concert, said, "For the most part, it's problems with what people have ingested," coupled with the heat.

Simpson said about 100 people were arrested, most for minor offenses. Many were held at the site and released after an "attitude adjustment," he said.

The arrests included two people who were selling what Simpson said were bad counterfeit tickets. Regardless of the quality, the couple had $3,700 in cash on them when arrested, he said.

Many of the performers mentioned the plight of farmers who are battling for financial survival.

"A lot of people — all the musicians backstage, all you folks out front — are here to help the American farmer," Nelson said in opening the show just after dawn Friday.

"He needs our help. And we're here to let the world know that he needs our help and he needs your help, too. So let's make today a great, historical day and a big positive day for the American family farmer."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson drew loud cheers during his brief onstage appearance. Jackson and Nelson agreed that the Farm Aid fund-raising effort might have been hurt by the concurrent centennial celebration for the Statue of Liberty.

Jackson said the celebration surrounding the re-lighting of the Statue of Liberty's torch was an "an extravaganza for the very rich."

Farmers, Jackson said, "are the new huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

According to Nelson and his aides, $4.3 million of the $9 million rasied at Farm Aid I has gone to rural relief projects in 40 states. The money has funded telephone hot lines for farmers, Future Farmers of America scholarships, legal aid and purchases of seed for farmers who otherwise wouldn't have been able to make this year's crop, said Bill Wittliff, an Austin screenwriter who is overseeing the fund.

Clad in shorts, a sleeveless T-shirt, sneakers and his customary bandana, Nelson roamed the stage and introduced many of the acts, frequently joining them for a chorus or two.

Many performers voiced personal reasons for donating their time to the show.

"I can't imagine a reason for not participating. It's important enough to everybody that if you've got a chance to help in any way, you should take advantage of it and do it," said J.D. Souther, a Los Angeles songwriter who has penned lyrics for the Eagles and Linda Ronstadt.

Kids, guns prove dangerous combination for 2 children

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An 8-year-old Arlington boy is shot in the head and seriously injured while holding a target for an 11-year-old playmate practicing his skill with a rifle in the backyard.

A 7-year-old Fort Worth boy playing with a pistol he found in a car and thought was a toy shoots and kills an 11-year-old girl.

The Arlington shooting a week ago and the June shooting of the 11-year-old in Forth Worth are the latest accidents involving firearms and children.

Sine 1980, two juveniles in Arlington have been killed in firearms accidents, Arlington police records show. In Tarrant County, medical examiner's records show that at least three deaths during the last 18 months have involved juveniles and guns.

Many children who find guns and play with them simply don't realize that they are handling lethal weapons, said Harriett Amster, a professor of psychology and a specialist in developmental psychology at the University of Texas at Arlington.

"Children don't distinguish between death as portrayed on TV and the reality of death," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"Children see death as acceptable in their world of make-believe."

The National Safety Council reported that 1,800 people — including 280 children 14 years old or younger — died in firearms accidents in 1984, the latest year statistics are available.

In Houston, a dozen accidental shootings involving youths from December 1985 to February 1986 prompted police to urge parents to lock weapons safely away from children and teen-agers.

Often, when a parent or preschool teacher tries to explain the difference between a real death and a make-believe one, chidren become confused, Ms. Amster explained.

"They don't realize that in real life, the dead person doesn't get back up, she said.

Marjolijn Bijlefeld, spokeswoman for the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, said the group estimates one child 14 years or younger is killed each day in the United States with a firearm. "And we believe that is a conservative estimate," she said.

Andy Kendzie, spokesman for the National Rifle Association, believes the number of children killed each year is between 300 to 320 — a number he acknowledges is too high.

New government program said 'sweet'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After years of being stung by rising costs, it looks as if taxpayers and consumers are going to get a honey of a deal as a new federal beekeeper subsidy program goes into operation.

The Agriculture Department says it will be sweet for beekeepers, too. Basically, the idea is to offer price support loans for 1986-crop honey at 64 cents a pound and then let beekeepers repay the loans at the prevailing market price, which is expected to average around 43 cents per pound.

In that way, beekeepers will be encouraged to redeem honey offered as collateral for federal price support loans and sell it on the market at the lower price. By law, if such loans are not repaid, the USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation assumes ownership of the honey, storing it at taxpayer expense.

Officials say the losses on the price support loans will be much less than it would cost to keep acquiring and storing surplus honey.

Congress, in designing the Food Security Act of 1985, changed the honey program dramatically to discourage a further buildup in CCC honey stockpiles. The details of the new program were announced on July 2.

The USDA has been supporting honey prices for more than 35 years, but the costs have risen sharply because of an oversupply, imports and depressed market prices. A General Accounting Office report said last year that the annual costs of the program rose from less than $2.69 million in 1980 to more than $65.7 million in 1983.

According to a final USDA economic impact report provided at the request of The Associated Press, the new program will help rejuvenate the domestic honey industry, blunt the sting of imports and cut government costs.

The honey currently being forfeited to the CCC — which disposes of part of the surplus by donations to schools and food banks — will instead be sold on the market and compete directly with imported honey in commercial sales.

"This will probably result in lower prices and increased commercial sales," the report said. "The portion of commercial sales supplied by domestic honey will likely increase."

Domestic honey production is expected to rise to about 200 million pounds this year from an estimated 150.1 million in 1985, largely because of the attractiveness of the government's support program in recent years, the report said. Imports, which grew to 138.2 million pounds in 1985, are expected to decline slightly to about 135 million pounds this year.

In all, there are about 200,000 beekeepers in the United States, but only about 2,500 commercial producers use the price support program. The remainder are mostly small or hobby operations. Most of the commercial production is in Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Texas and Wisconsin.

As of April 30, the CCC had made price support loans on 101.5 million pounds of honey or 68 percent of the 150.1 million pounds produced last year. Loans were still outstanding on 99.9 million pounds at a cost of $63.2 million. In addition, the CCC owned outright about 116.9 million pounds of honey that had been forfeited from previous years, an inventory valued at $94.3 million.

The CCC's net outlays for honey — after allowing for loan repayments and other bookkeeping items — are expected to decline to $33.5 million for the fiscal year that will end on Sept. 30, down from net costs of $93.7 million in 1984-85, according to the report.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher taxes and health warnings have taken a hefty bite out of the use of snuff and other kinds of smokeless tobacco by Americans, according to an Agriculture Department report.

Production of smokeless tobacco in the year that ended on June 30 was estimated at 48.7 million pounds, down from 50 million in 1984-85. All categories showed declines.

Moreover, the report said, consumption of smokeless tobacco may decline further because of the budget reconciliation legislation passed by Congress and signed into law on April 7. It made permanent the temporary federal excise tax of 16 cents per pack of cigarettes and placed a levy of 24 cents per pound on snuff and eight cents on chewing tobacco, effective July 1.

Also enacted earlier this year was legislation requiring three rotating warning labels on smokeless tobacco containers.

The warnings are:

—This product may cause oral cancer.

—This product may cause gum disease and tooth loss.

—This product is not a safe alternative to cigarettes.

City officers also investigated and closed a bicycle theft case Thursday.

Cedric Sneed told police at 4:05 p.m. Thursday that his 20-inch BMX bicycle had been taken from outside the Boy's Club sometime before 3:30 p.m.

He found his bike around 9 p.m. and the case was closed with no further investigation.

On Jan. 12, 1935, Amelia Earhart, an American woman aviation pioneer, set a record of 18 hours, 16 minutes for a solo flight from Hawaii to California. Born in 1898, she achieved fame as the first woman to cross the Atlantic by air — as a passenger in a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in 1928. She died after her plane vanished while she was attempting a round-the-world flight in 1937.

Two giants reach contract accords

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The nation's two largest aluminum makers and their two major unions have reached tentative labor pacts involving more than 25,000 workers in 16 states, including Alcoa workers who have been on strike 34 days.

Leaders of the Aluminum, Brick and Glass Workers International union voted Friday to accept a contract agreement with the Aluminum Company of America, apparently ending the walkout against the largest aluminum manufacturer in the country.

The union also agreed to the same basic deal with Reynolds Metals Co., No.2 in aluminum production. The unionized employees had been working under a contract extension at 11 Reynolds plants since June 1.

County budget cuts reported

$1.1 million with the hospital's budget estimated at about $5.1 million for operations and $700,000 for the depreciation fund.

According to preliminary estimates, the hospital has held expenses to nearly half a million dollars under budget for fiscal 1987.

Available resources to meet county obligations — including ad valorem taxes, fees and interest payments — are estimated at about $4.1 million. In 1987, that figure will be cut to just over $3.5 million.

The operating budgets for the county during 1987 are now estimated at approximately $3.5 million in general fund expenses; $958,000 for road and bridge items; $5 million for the hospital's operation; and $350,000 for the hospital's depreciation fund.

County officials note that the current hiring freeze will most likely be extended throughout 1987.

Lendl meets Becker in Wimbledon final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - When Ivan Lendl meets Boris Becker for the 100th men's championship at Wimbledon, two very different grass-court worlds will collide.

Becker has never lost in the main men's draw on the courts at the All England Club. For Lendl, the losses there have been many and, for the top seed and world's No. 1-ranked player, very haunting.

Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, blunted the power serving of unseeded Yugoslav Slobodan Zivojinovic to win his semifinal 6-2, 6-7, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4 Friday.

Becker, just 18 years old but the defending champion, blasted Frenchman Henri Leconte, the No. 7 seed, 6-2, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

Today's women's final also had a strong Czechoslovak flavor.

Martina Navratilova, born in Prague but now an American citizen, was to play Hana Mandlikova, whose home still is in the Czechoslovak capital.

Navratilova has won the last four Wimbledon championships. One more would tie her with with Suzanne Lenglen for most consecutive women's championships and her seventh overall title would put her one behind the all-time record of American Helen Wills Moody.

Mandlikova hoped to add the Wimbledon title to the U.S. championship she won last September.

Becker has never walked off a Wimbledon court as a beaten loser in a singles match. His only registered loss was after he pulled out of a match in 1984 because of an Achilles tendon injury that required several months of rest.

Since then he has won 13 straight matches on the Wimbledon grass, becoming, at 17, the youngest and first unseeded champion.

Becker's explosive serve ruined Leconte's 23rd birthday and brought glowing praise from the Frenchman.

"No one has ever served better against me. The ball was coming and you just watched it," Leconte said.

"He's also so strong at the net. He dives and he wins the points. At set point I made a perfect shot down the line and he was there," Leconte said. "That's a real champion. Boris is the No. 1 on grass."

Becker, who has lost only two sets on his route to the final, said he had dropped his service only three times.

"Once I have a good rhythm, not many players can break me," he said. "I overpowered him in the first set completely and he had no chance.

"It feels good when you overpower somebody," Becker said.

Lendl was taken to five sets for the second straight match as he continued his relentless pursuit of his first Wimbledon final appearance. Lendl has never won a major grass-court championship and has made no secret that he wants badly to win here.

After ending American hopes in the quarterfinals by beating Tim Mayotte, he survived an 18-ace service blitz by the 6-foot-6 Zivojinovic, ironically Becker's best friend and doubles partner.

Gaylord signs first baseballs as new owner of Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Signing baseballs may feel a little odd for a broadcasting company magnate, but it drove the point home to Edward Gaylord that he's got himself a baseball team.

"That's the first time I've ever done that," Gaylord said Friday night after signing two baseballs at the Texas Rangers-Detroit Tigers game. "I guess it does mean that I'm the owner now."

But except for his red and blue tie that mirror the team's colors, there was little to suggest that the owner of Gaylord Broadcasting Co. was the new owner of the Rangers.

An itinerary of his first days as owner varied little from the last two years, when he had been attending Rangers games regularly as a minority owner with a one-third share of the American League franchise.

Gaylord, 68, and his wife, Thelma, boarded their Westwings jet in the Gaylord hangar at Will Rogers Airport in Oklahoma City at 4:30 p.m. They were accompanied by one of their three daughters, Louise, and her husband, Clay Bennett.

Forty minutes later, the jet landed at Love Field in Dallas, where it was met by the president of Gaylord Broadcasting, William Banowsky - who replaced Eddie Chiles as Rangers chairman after Chiles announced Thursday that troubles in the oil industry have forced him to sell his two-thirds share in the team.

The Gaylord party arrived at Arlington Stadium without any pomp and circumstance, as usual.

"Mr. Gaylord is a very low-key person," said Larry Schmittou, the Rangers' vice president for marketing and administration. "We rarely know when he's going to show up. He doesn't make a big deal out of it. He never comes out here in a limousine. We don't have to roll out the red carpet for him, because he wouldn't want that."

Nevertheless, Rangers manager Bobby Valentine made sure his office was in tip-top shape for Gaylord's special visit. He spent a few minutes in the afternoon straightening chairs, clearing off the big conference table and tidying up.

Simpson leads Watson by 2 in Hartford golf tournament

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) - Although Tim Simpson is playing arguably the best golf of his life, he isn't ready to fill out a deposit slip for the $126,000 winner's check in the $700,000 Canon-Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Not while Tom Watson is breathing down Simpson's neck and looking for his first PGA Tour victory in two years.

"I'm tickled to death," Simpson said Friday after posting a record two-round total of 130 at the par-71, 6,786-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course.

Simpson shot a 66 Friday that left him 12 under par and two strokes ahead of Watson going into today's third round.

Simpson, who admits he has been struggling since tying for third place in the Tournament Players Championship in March, challenged the TPC of Connecticut course for the second day and again came out on top.

"I've always been one of the more aggressive players out here," Simpson said explaining his seemingly blatant disregard for the course's abundant pot bunkers, ditches and six-acre lake.

"I think over the years that can get you in trouble. So I've tried to modify it in the last year or two," he said. "I call it intelligent-aggressive instead of raw-aggressive."

Simpson, who shot an opening-round 64, one stroke off the course record, could have duplicated that round but missed short birdie putts on the sixth, eighth and 13th holes.

"The only thing I could have done better was make those three five-foot putts that Watson or (Andy) Bean would have made routinely," he said.

Through two rounds, Simpson had 12 birdies without a bogey and had missed just three greens.

Watson stayed close to Simpson as he shot a 67 to go with an opening-round 65 and pulled one stroke ahead of Dan Forsman, who shot a 68, and Roger Maltbie, who closed in on the leaders with a 67.

U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd and Hubert Green both missed the cut by one stroke with a 1-over-par total of 143. Scott Verplank, who finished 15th in the U.S. Open in his professional debut, failed to make the cut for the third straight tournament.

"I have to play well again tomorrow (Saturday)," Watson said. "The course is going to yield a lot of birdies. I think I'll have to shoot in the 60s the next two rounds."

Watson had two bogeys and six birdies, including three in his last four holes of the day on the older front nine at the TPC of Connecticut.

Forsman, who won the Quad Cities Open in 1985, shot a 68 and was tied with Maltbie for third place at 133. Ken Knox and Scott Simpson, no relation to the leader, were tied at 135.

Slaught returns to aid Texas in 2-1 triumph over Tigers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Timely hitting, clutch relief pitching and the triumphant return of injured catcher Don Slaught gave the Texas Rangers a glorious Fourth of July.

The Rangers remained atop the American League West with a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers before a capacity crowd of 42,485 at Arlington Stadium Friday night. It was the second largest home crowd in the history of the franchise.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine was pleased with the victory and perhaps even more pleased with the reception Slaught received his first time at bat.

Slaught was making his first appearance in almost seven weeks, showing no ill effects from having been struck in the face by a pitch that broke his nose and cheekbone.

The sellout crowd gave Slaught a thunderous standing ovation.

"One of the finest things I have ever seen in baseball was the standing ovation Donnie received," Valentine said.

Slaught, wearing a special plexiglass shield attached to his batting helmet, was reactivated off the disabled list Friday morning.

Rookie right-hander Jose Guzman, 8-8, with relief help from right-hander Greg Harris, pitched the Rangers to their third straight victory.

Tiger right-hander Jack Morris, 7-6, suffered the loss, allowing 11 hits, including Larry Parrish's 13th homer of the season. Curtis Wilkerson drove home the other Ranger run with triple.

Slaught went hitless in four trips, but both he and Valentine were pleased with the way things went in his first game since Boston's Dennis Boyd hit him in the face with a pitch on May 17.

"I was pleased with the way he swung the bat," said Valentine. "That was a tough pitcher he was going against."

Slaught said he was nervous his first trip - he struck out - but got more comfortable with each at-bat.

"The standing ovation was really something," he said. "I got gooseбumps. I didn't know what to do with myself. It just makes me feel so good that so many people cared."

Slaught threw out one runner trying to steal and blocked a half a dozen pitches in the dirt.

"It was just great to see him back in the lineup," said Valentine.

Harris, notching his 15th save, relieved Guzman after the Tigers got two runners on with none out in the top of the eighth.

Harris got Lance Parrish to line into a double play that killed that threat and struck out two of the three batters he faced in the ninth.

Pokes ink two more

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys signed two more draft choices to a series of one-year contracts Friday, team officials said.

The Cowboys signed eighth-round draft choice Topper Clemens, a 5-foot-11, 205-pound running back from Wake Forest, and 12th-round pick Tony Flack, a 6-1, 184-pound defensive back from Georgia.

Terms of the contracts were not disclosed, said team spokesman Doug Todd.

Four of the Cowboys' 14 picks in the recent NFL draft have now signed with the club, which opens training camp Sunday in Thousand Oaks, Calif., Todd said.

Top effort mixes with controversy at Goodwill Games

MOSCOW (AP) - It took only one day for brilliance and controversy to make their marks at the Goodwill Games.

Soviet swimmer Vladimir Salnikov supplied the brilliance, breaking his own world record in the 800-meter freestyle with a time of 7 minutes, 50.64 seconds, 1.69 seconds under his previous mark.

Americans captured four of the ten swimming events raced Friday, but one of those victories furnished the controversy.

John Sauerland of Shaker Heights, Ohio won the men's 50-meter sprint in 21.13 seconds. But U.S. swimming officials protested the race, contending that the start was too fast, and said they felt Americans could have finished 1-2-3 instead if 1-6-7-8. Soviet swimmers finished second and third.

However, the protest, filed under the rules of FINA, the governing body of the sport, was disallowed today by the Organizing Committee of the Games, after a jury of merit originally upheld it.

Seldon Frutschner, the head of the U.S. swimming delegation, said the Americans had no choice but to accept the ruling.

"There's no further place to take this. We have nowhere to go," he said. "It's unfortunate that it happened, because it takes away from some great performances."

Frutschner said Friday that the protest was filed because "the (Soviet) starter did not allow for all the swimmers to come down before the start of the race. The entire field was standing up. It was not a fair competition."

Meanwhile, the U.S. boxing team was due to leave for the games today, minus the 11 members who are military personnel. On Thursday, the U.S. Defense Department denied the 11 permission to participate in the Games. The ban affected 10 boxers and one coach.

Leslie King, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation, said the 13 non-military boxers and support staff are scheduled to leave for the Games as planned. USABF President Don Hull said the Federation is trying to arrange for substitute fighters, and expressed hope that the Soviets would cooperate by quickly arranging for visas. The boxing competition begins Friday.

The Soviets won five gold medals on the first day of the competition, while the U.S. took four. However, the Americans had the most total medals, 16, while the Soviets took 11.

These games, brainchild of Turner Broadcasting System head Ted Turner, will feature approximately 3,000 athletes from about 70 countries during 17 days of competition.

Gooden looks sharp again; leads NY Mets past Astros

by The Associated Press

After award-winning years in 1984 and 1985, Dwight Gooden has found himself a tough act to follow.

But Friday, after some less-than-Goodenesque efforts, he looked like a Cy Young winner again while pitching a five-hitter to lead the New York Mets to a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

"People expect me to keep doing what I did the first two years - win every game and strike out 10," said Gooden, who was the National League's Rookie of the Year in 1984 and the Cy Young winner in 1985. "I can't do that."

Gooden only struck out four Friday, but reached back when he had to and improved his record to 10-3.

Houston's Nolan Ryan, the all-time major-league strikeout leader, fanned six in five innings and raised his career total to 4,160. He was relieved by Dave Smith, 1-5.

The win kept the Mets' lead at 12½ games in the National League East and the loss dropped the Astros 1½ games behind San Francisco in the West. The Giants beat St. Louis 6-1 Friday.

In other NL games, Cincinnati beat Philadelphia 4-1; Montreal outscored Atlanta 11-5; San Diego edged Chicago 2-1 and Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles 6-4.

Giants 6, Cardinals 1

Rookie Randy Kutcher homered for the second straight game and drove in two more runs with a single in a five-run fourth inning as San Francisco beat St. Louis, handing the Cardinals their eighth straight loss.

Mike LaCoss, 8-3, got the victory, holding St. Louis to five hits while striking out three and walking only one.

Reds 4, Phillies 1

Tom Browning allowed only two hits in 7 2-3 innings and Eric Davis homered and sparked another rally with a walk to lead Cincinnati over Philadelphia.

Until Browning, 6-7, gave up Von Hayes' single in the seventh, the left-hander had only allowed two baserunners on walks. Browning, a 20-game winner last year as a rookie, gave way to reliever Ron Robinson after giving up an RBI double to Gary Redus in the eighth. Browning had six strikeouts and three walks before Robinson got the last four outs for his sixth save.

The loss went to Kevin Gross, 6-6.

Expos 11, Braves 5

Mike Fitzgerald drove in four runs, including two in a five-run fourth, and Floyd Youmans and Dan Schatzeder combined on a five-hitter as Montreal defeated Atlanta.

Youmans, 8-5, won his fourth straight game, giving up all five hits, striking out five and walking seven before needing relief help in the ninth from Schatzeder. Rick Mahler, 10-6, was knocked out in the fourth after allowing seven runs and eight hits.

Padres 2, Cubs 1

Pinch-hitter Bruce Bochy homered with two outs in the ninth inning to boost San Diego over Chicago. Bochy lined a 3-1 pitch off loser Roy Fontenot, 3-4, five feet inside the left field foul pole at San Diego Stadium.

Bochy's fifth homer made a winner of Rich Gossage, 4-3, who had given up an eighth-inning leadoff homer to Gary Matthews that tied the game 1-1.

Crowd ignites Cleveland, 10-3

by The Associated Press

The stands were packed with 73,303 fans. The world champions were on the ropes. The home team turned it on and won their fifth straight going away.

This can't be Cleveland.

But Municipal Stadium is a louder, more unfriendly place for visitors this season, and the Indians won before the largest major league crowd in 13 years Friday night. They beat Kansas City 10-3, the seventh straight loss for the Royals.

"It seems we play well in front of big crowds," said Phil Niekro, who held the Royals to eight hits for his 305th career victory.

The Indians, now six games over .500, moved to within a game of second place.

As Fourth of July crowds are want to be, the Friday gathering was swelled by a post-game fireworks display. The Famous Chicken also showed up.

In other AL games, California beat Toronto 9-1, Baltimore outslugged Minnesota 12-7, Chicago edged New York 2-1, Milwaukee defeated Oakland 5-4, Texas topped Detroit 2-1 and Boston held off Seattle 6-5.

Angels 9, Blue Jays 1

Toronto's Dave Stieb was hammered again, giving up five runs in four innings-plus, while California's Don Sutton threw a four-hitter for his 302nd career victory.

Jack Howell was Stieb's prime tormentor, hitting his first two homers of the season, both off the 2-9 right-hander. He had four RBI.

Orioles 12, Twins 7

Fred Lynn homered twice, doubled and walked with the bases loaded, driving in five runs.

Wagon train auction at end of the trail

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A half-grown chicken sold for more than some of the mules at the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train auction at Cowtown Coliseum in the Stockyards.

Twelve-year-old Kyle Carlson of Madill, Okla., got $235 for his fighting hawk chicken named Hardy Bird.

"Strange," commented the auctioneer.

But shortly thereafter, four stick horses sold for $550 and left Fort Worth auctioneer Charles Rollins shaking his head. The stick horses brought a higher price than some of the real horses.

Still, it was a fun Fourth of July for participants of the Wagon Train and the 2,500 people who paid a good price to get into the Friday auction.

Proceeds go to the Texas Wagon Train Association to pay for additional Sesquicentennial events.

The sale was the end of the trail for participants who wanted to sell their wagons, horses and other memorabilia from the six-month, 3,000-mile journey across Texas.

The top-dollar item at the auction was a matching pair of Smith & Wesson pistols made for the Sesquicentennial which sold for $18,000.

The chicken sale didn't occur until after some of the wagons had been auctioned, including the lead wagon in the caravan owned by Jan France of Sulphur Springs, originator of the wagon train.

France's wagon sold for $2,300. Her husband, Garry France, sold his saddle for $1,100 and the lead horse of the wagon train owned by lead rider Vern Renz sold for $450.

Kyle Carlson, one of five fourth-graders who were presented baby chicks at Easter in Odessa, was cheered when his 2½-month-old chicken was auctioned.

"This is the only one of the five that survived," he told the potential bidders. "Its name is Hardy Bird and we think it is a girl chicken, but we don't know."

Allie Dollar, owner of a paint and body shop in Wichita Falls, was highest bidder at $235. He promptly gave the chicken back to Carlson.

"He's had it since Odessa, so I think he ought to keep it," Dollar said.

Then George M. Owen of Garland bought four stick horses owned by the three daughters of Fred and Debbie Shivers of Stratford, Okla. He paid $550 for them.

Kristy Lynn Shivers' horse, Shorty, was described as "having a tendency to stray and is hard of hearing when he is told to stop, come back or stay here."

Pendergrass recuperates after crash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Singer Teddy Pendergrass, partially paralyzed in an automobile accident four years ago, was recuperating Friday from injuries received when his specially equipped van ran into a utility pole.

Pendergrass, 36, was in serious but stable condition at the Osteopathic Medical Center, where he underwent 90 minutes of surgery Thursday for massive internal injuries.

"He had a laceration of the liver, and we repaired it," said Dr. Arthur Sasso.

The singer's nurse, Mary Deal, 48, of Philadelphia, a passenger in the van, was in stable condition at Lankenau Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Pendergrass's van, equipped to allow him to drive it, went out of control Thursday and hit a utility pole about six blocks from the Philadelphia city limits, Lower Merion Township police said Friday.

In addition to the abdominal injury, Pendergrass suffered cuts to his lower legs and left foot, officials said.

According to Dr. Steven Parrillo, an physician at Osteopathic Medical Center, Pendergrass was unable to feel pain from his injuries because he is paralyzed from the waist down.

Bomb explosion in Pretoria, S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded outside a Pretoria supermarket packed with shoppers, and the government said 20 people were wounded.

"I heard this huge explosion," said 15-year-old newspaper vendor Norman Mkhizi, who witnessed the bombing Friday afternoon. "People ran, some were covered in blood. I saw a black lady lying on the pavement and her legs were blown off. Then I ran too."

Small town takes concert in stride

MANOR, Texas (AP) — Farm Aid II brought a great deal of attention to this town of about 2,000 northeast of Austin, but the big concert was welcomed by residents.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

"We're not here to talk war stories. We're here because we care enough for each other to meet together," the Vietnam veterans gathered at Clark's Country Kitchen echoed. "A lot of our function is to show people that we are a part of the community. We're just people."

Although the group of some 11 or 12 men laughed and joked, sobering looks flickered from time to time as they discussed their return from what has been labeled the most unpopular war in American history.

"We aren't here (as a veterans' group) to take anything away from the good organizations that already exist, but this war was completely different," remarked Terry Rumpff, who served in the Army and now serves as president for the group. "Only the guys here know how different it was."

"Another thing about it is that this war was fought with just kids. I think about 19 (years old) was the average age for most soldiers then," added Bob Cole, an Air Force sergeant.

As they returned from Southeast Asia, the welcome for many soldiers and support personnel were said less than "hero's welcomes."

"I think sometimes we were more afraid to come home than to stay (in Vietnam)," John Pilgrim, a former Marine, said.

Chester Clark, also an Air Force sergeant and owner of the restaurant, added that he recalls fighting his way through an airport terminal in California crowded with hecklers. "So many people just don't know what the situation really was. They only believe the media (accounts)," he noted.

As a group, the Scurry County Vietnam Veterans believe that the public's opinion has improved since the war ended in April 1975. But they hope to continue influencing the change.

"We are a part of the community..." Terry Rumpff

"The national media has given us a bad name because they tend to show only the vets with problems. And there are vets who have serious problems, but so did vets from World War II, World War I and Korea," Terry added. "On the average, most of us have come home, married and continued on to raise a family and hold good jobs."

The idea to meet together germinated last July 4 when a small group of local Vietnam veterans organized to march in the annual parade. "We decided to begin meeting together but it started really slow," Terry said.

After dwindling to just a few in attendance at each meeting, those remaining decided last March to "push real hard" to increase membership. Now 10 to 15 veterans attend sessions slated every other Monday at Clark's.

"Many people think vets are out to get what they can get out of the government," John added. "We're not here to get anything. We just want to help our community. We really care about Snyder and about each other."

With the goal to help the community in mind, the group hosted a pancake supper as its first project. Funds from food sales were donated to the Noah Project and the local Girl Scout unit.

The group organized a Memorial Day service at the National Guard Armory for all veterans this year and helped with the cleanup following the tornado disaster in Sweetwater. They also assisted with concessions during the recent Little Dribblers national basketball tournament here and provided a color guard during the God and Country Celebration sponsored by local Southern Baptist churches.

In addition to marching in the July 4th parade this year, the group used motorized vehicles and offered a 21-gun salute during the flag raising ceremony. They also sponsored a food booth to raise funds during the two-day affair.

The veterans plan to provide a color guard for the AJRA Rodeo in August and will march in the White Buffalo Days Parade and the Scurry County Rodeo Parade. They also plan to sponsor a booth at the Scurry County Fair.

Although members will continue to support local charitable organizations, part of the money raised will be used to establish a scholarship foundation to provide an annual scholarship "for whoever wants to apply for it." Once the foundation is established, guidelines governing applicants to receive funds will be drawn up.

Money will also be donated for the funding of a Vietnam Veterans Memorial to be erected in Dallas. "Hopefully we will take a group on Veterans' Day when the memorial is to be unveiled," Terry said.

"A lot of guys are under the impression that we sit around and tell war stories," John added. "That's just not true."

Terry added, "Even though we aren't here to live in the past, the war is not going to be forgotten by us. We lost too many friends to forget. Unity is the thing that's going to keep us going."

Membership in the local group is open to all veterans who hold Vietnam service medals. The men explained that many Air Force and Navy personnel saw action only offshore and that a large percentage of the medical support to combat troops served on hospital ships and in the Philippines.

Men and women (one woman currently holds membership) from all backgrounds, religions and occupations are invited to participate. "By unanimous vote we agreed to have no alcohol at our meetings and we end each meeting in prayer," Terry added.

Currently, the group charges no dues and no initial cost to become a member.

"We realize there will always be a few who want to simply put (the war) out of their minds, but we would still like them to register with us," Terry said. "We would really appreciate all Vietnam vets becoming a part of our group."

Interested veterans can obtain more information by calling Terry at 573-9049 or Chester at 573-3411.

"Come join our fellowship — just a group of vets out to do some good," John added.

On Jan. 12, 1935, Amelia Earhart, an American woman aviation pioneer, set a record of 18 hours, 16 minutes for a solo flight from Hawaii to California. Born in 1898, she achieved fame as the first woman to cross the Atlantic by air — as a passenger in a flight from Newfoundland to Wales in 1928. She died after her plane vanished while she was attempting a round-the-world flight in 1937.

Under-eye makeup

To disguise dark circles under the eyes, a foundation stick is needed, with a more opaque consistency than regular foundations. If the circles are really dark, white foundation may produce only a muddy effect. Sticks also come in various beige shades, which are often more successful than white in disguising the area. Try two or three, as the unsuccessful ones can be used as base for eye makeup.

Book Review

DEATH IS A LONELY BUSINESS. By Ray Bradbury. Knopf. 280 Pages. $15.95.

Ray Bradbury hasn't published a novel in a long time, more than 20 years, so the arrival of "Death Is a Lonely Business" is a major event for his devoted fans — and they are legion.

All of the verbal magic which illuminated his previous writings is in the new book as is the sense of wonder which makes Bradbury so different, and so much better, than other workers in the science fiction and fantasy fields.

Technically, "Death" is supposed to be a murder mystery, and it is on one level. But on a higher level, it is a vivid, highly individual vision of a time, late 1949, and a place, Venice, Calif., and the people who live and love in that time and place.

Narrated by an anonymous young man who aspires to be a writer of science fiction and fantasy and who the reader safely may assume is Bradbury.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We have wallboard in our house. A long crack has developed in the dining room wall. It goes from the ceiling to the floor, apparently where there is a seam. What is the best way to fix this?

A. — Make the gap in the seam a little wider, then fill it in with the joint compound used for gypsum board. Smooth the area with a putty knife. This remedy will be sufficient most of the time. When it isn't, you may have to put the compound into the opening, cover it with special tape for such seams and then apply some more compound.

Q. — I understand I can give an antique look to a piece of furniture I am refinishing by using a glazing material. I have been told this will save me the trouble of taking off the old finish. Is this so?

A. — You are talking about glazing, which is sometimes referred to as antiquing. It is a finish which calls for a base coat and then a glaze applied on top of it. Since it is something you have never undertaken, the best way to get a good introduction to the process is to buy an antiquing kit sold at most home supply centers, hardware stores and paint dealers. It comes with all the necessary materials and instructions. Removal of the old finish is not necessary.

Couple wed in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — Tonya Tompkins of Big Spring and Mike Graves were united in a double-ring ceremony June 28 at the First Baptist Church in Big Spring. Officiating was Dr. Kenneth G. Patrick.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Tompkins of Big Spring and Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Graves of Snyder.

The couple exchanged vows before an altar of a matching candelabra with nine branches. They were graced with floral arrangements of pink, white and plum colored flowers. A 15 branch arch candelabrum was accented with pink candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown featuring a bateau neckline of sheer re-embroidered alencon studded with pearls and sequins forming a dramatic basque waistline. Sheer alencon and taffetta court sleeves formed points at the wrists. The bodice back featured a plunging V on alencon jeweled lace. A fully gathered skirt of taffetta, appliqued with a pyramid of jeweled alencon motifs, featured the skirt edge bordered with alencon lace which cascaded into a Cathedral-length train. It was appliqued with alencon and pearled motifs.

She carried a cascade of pink roses and stephanotis.

For something old, the bride carried a penny minted the year she was born in her shoe. Her gown served as something new and she borrowed her great-grandmother's handkerchief. The traditional blue garter served as something blue.

Serving as maid of honor was Tricia Tompkins, sister of the bride of Big Spring. Bridesmaids were Lori Griffice of Big Spring and Mrs. Gary Cain of Snyder.

The bridal attendants wore gowns of tampico pink taffetta designed by Galina. The bateau neckline forms a dropped waistline and a shirred hip band. The bodice back featured a deep V with a bow in the back of the fully gathered skirts.

Cori Soldan of Big Spring served as flower girl. She wore a pink floor-length dress of taffeta with a bow in the back. She carried a basket of white, pink, rose and plum flowers.

Ring bearer was Colby Wegman of Big Spring, cousin of the bride. He wore formal black pants, white jacket, black bow tie and cumberbund. He carried a white pillow with plum colored roses and white ribbon in each corner.

Standing with the groom was Gary Cain of Snyder. Groomsmen were Greg Graves and Guy Graves, brothers of the groom from Snyder. Ushers were Troy Tompkins of Big Spring, brother of the bride, and Lawrence McCown of Snyder.

The men wore black formal pants with white dinner jackets. The men's attire were completed with white bow ties and cumberbunds. They wore pink carnations as their boutonnieres.

The bride's mother wore a street-length dress of pink crepe. The dress was trimmed in satin and sequins that formed roses. The groom's mother wore a street-length full grey crepe dress trimmed in sequins. Both mothers wore white rose corsages.

The bride presented roses to the mothers on entering and leaving.

The registry table was attended to by Wendy Walker of Lubbock, cousin of the bride. The table was covered in white lace with a pink plume pen and a pink rose bud vase.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church parlor. The bride's table was draped with a floor-length white lace cloth. A candelabrum with pink candles decorated the table.

The wedding cake was four-tiered accented with shades of pink and topped with the bride and groom figurine.

Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. Paul Soldan, Mrs. Mark Angel, both of Big Spring, and Ellen Walker of Roby.

The groom's table was draped with a beige lace cloth. The table held a brass boot. His cake was a square chocolate with rope trim with his initials.

Serving at the groom's table were Mrs. Greg Graves, Mrs. Guy Graves, sister-in-laws of the groom from Snyder, and Mrs. Lynn Smith of Ballinger, cousin of the groom.

Other houseparty members included Mrs. Wendell McKiski of San Antonio; Mrs. Don Henry of Odessa; Mrs. Everett Wegman of Big Spring; Mrs. Gary Walker of Lubbock; all aunts of the bride; and Mrs. Robert Bradberry of Big Spring.

The bride chose to wear a blue straight skirt and blouse with white polka-dots as her going away attire.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Brandin Iron in Big Spring on June 27. The couple was honored with a shower in Snyder on April 22 in the home of Mrs. W.O. Cain. A bridal luncheon was given June 28 at the Big Spring Country Club. It was hosted by Mrs. Wendell McKiski, aunt of the bride.

Graduating from Big Spring High School, the bride is attending Western Texas College in Snyder.

The groom is a graduate of Snyder High School and is employed by Furr's Super Markets.

The couple will take a wedding trip to the coast of Texas before making their home in Snyder.

Destiny rides on one card

By James Jacoby

When the Jacoby team lost in the semifinals of the National Team Championship last March, they had no excuses. After playing 64 deals, a team should be able to demonstrate its superiority. Nevertheless, the losing side inevitably sifts the rubble, searching for quirks of destiny, and I have found one. It's a tale about the queen of spades.

When my teammate Jim Robison held the South cards, he reached slam in just one bid. After East's four-heart opening had precluded any scientific approach, Jim took the old-fashioned route — he bid what he thought he could make. Dummy's two working kings were enough to give a good play for slam. However, he had to lose a club trick, and when diamonds failed to split, he needed to find the queen of spades. Since East apparently had started with seven hearts and was known to have four diamonds, declarer quite reasonably played West for the elusive queen of spades. That was down one.

At the other table, the opening bid by East was one heart. South eventually reached six clubs, but now, feeling that East had to have more high cards than A-Q-J and J-10 for an opening bid of one, declarer played East for the spade queen and made the slam. And the quirk of destiny is simply this: If the queen of spades had been in the West hand and the bidding at both tables had remained the same, our team would have won the match and advanced to the finals. Of course, then I would not be writing about so many semifinal hands.

PESTICIDE LICENSE

According to the Texas Pesticide Laws and Regulations, any person which uses or supervises the use of a restricted-use or state-limited-use pesticides for the purpose of producing an agricultural commodity must be a licensed private applicator. A private applicators license is also necessary to purchase restricted-use or state-limited-use pesticides. All chemical dealers must request for individuals license before completing any sale transaction.

To obtain a private applicators license producers must complete a Request for Private Applicator Certification Form. These forms can be obtained at the County Extension Office. The forms must be completed and then mailed to the Texas Department of Agriculture Office in Austin.

Many of the chemicals we use on farm operations are listed as restricted-use which will require a Private Applicators License to purchase or application to the crops.

PECAN NUT CASEBEARER SECOND GENERATION

The second generation of the Pecan Nut Casebearer will be active July 5-9. This 2nd generation does not cause the amount of damage as the first generation in May, but could result in a loss of one to two nutlets within a cluster.

Insecticides recommended for casebearer control include, Zolone, Guthion, Malathion, and Sevin. Homeowners may want to include a fungicide such as Benomyl ad NAN for improved growth and control of rosette.

Once again the spray schedule for the 2nd generation Pecan Nut Casebearer is July 5-9.

Walker, Limmer united before altar

Cari Leigh Walker became the bride of Bryan Lee Limmer June 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church. Dr. Gil Fleer officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Kattes and Barry Walker of Park City, Utah. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Limmer.

Grandparents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ross Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pohl of Matador; and Lee Limmer of Kingsland.

Vows were exchanged before an altar centered with an arrangement of pink and white gladioli and an arched candelabrum. Candletrees at each side were decorated with white spider mums, emerald and leather leaf. Ivy leaf foliage tied with pink satin bows marked the bridal aisle.

Lighting the candletrees were Kelly Walker, sister of the bride, and Jayson Limmer, brother of the groom.

Prenuptial and wedding piano selections were played by Jane Womack. Jeana Fox and Todd Turner sang "Just You and Me," accompanied by Mrs. Womack.

The bride entered the sanctuary to "The Bridal Chorus" by Lohengrin and was escorted to the altar by the groom. She wore a white gown styled of re-embroidered alencon lace and matte taffeta. Seed pearls and sequins accented the Sabrina neckline, bodice, sleeves and Cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of imported illusion was gathered to a cap covered in lace to match her dress. The cap had embroidered seed pearls and sequins. The two tiers of the veil were edged in pearls.

The bride carried a cascade of white bridal roses, white gladiola blossoms, starburst mums, stephanotis, baby's breath and greenery. The white satin ribbon streamers were tied in love knots.

For something old the bride wore a gold wedding band belonging to her great-grandmother, Ona B. Carroll of Garland. Something new was pearl earrings, a gift from the groom; borrowed was a diamond bracelet belonging to the groom's mother; and blue was a garter, a gift from Peggy English. In her shoes for luck, she wore a sixpence minted in the years of their births.

Serving as maid of honor was Kelly Walker. Bridesmaids were Tracy Fortune, Shahala Blair and Jenny Eiland of San Angelo.

The attendants wore tea-length dresses of pink satin and lace. The gowns featured a Sabrina neckline, puffed sleeves, dropped waist with a satin bow and a scalloped lace hem. Each carried a nosegay of pink miniature carnations, pink alstroemerias, white starburst mums and white baby's breath.

The groom wore a black full-dress tuxedo. His boutonniere was a white bridal rose with white stephanotis and baby's breath.

Perry Echols was best man. Groomsmen were Randy Burrus, Shane Nutt and Clif Payne. Ushers were Jayson Limmer, Brad Robertson, Gary Don Edmiaston and Ronnie Rosas. The men wore black classic tuxedos with cumberbunds.

The bride's mother chose a wedgewood blue silk and lace tea-length dress. The groom's mother wore a light mauve tea-length dress of chiffon and satin. Both wore corsages of pink carnations and alstroemeria. They were escorted down the aisle by the groom.

Closing the ceremony, the bride and groom lit the unity candle and the benediction, "The Lord's Prayer," was sung acappella by Miss Fox. The traditional "Wedding March" by Mendelssohn was played on the organ for the recessional.

Sabrina Sullivan presided at the registry table. The bride's book lay on a table covered with a white eyelet cloth. The floral centerpiece in a crystal vase contained pink shapdragons, pink alstroemerias and white spider mums. Silver appointments held punch and mints. The all white four-tiered wedding cake featured wedding bells and fresh pink flowers.

Presiding at the table were Sabrina Sullivan, Kim Wills and Mrs. Brent Beck of Lubbock.

The groom's table was covered with a hand-enbroidered ecru cloth. It featured a fruit cascade and German chocolate cake. Coffee was poured from a silver service. Presiding at the table were Tracey O'Day and Mrs. Roger Becker, cousin of the groom from Austin.

The bride chose a blue chambray dress with a white lace collar as her going away attire.

Both are graduates of Snyder High School. The bride attended Western Texas College and will attend Texas Tech University to earn her degree in business. The groom will be a December graduate of Texas Tech University with animal science as his major.

After the wedding trip in Nassau, Bahamas, the couple will live in Lubbock.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was given at The Willow Park Inn. Wedding courtesies included a gift coffee, a kitchen shower, a lingerie shower, a bridal luncheon, a bridegroom's lunch, and a barbecue held in the couple's honor.

TIPS ON HARVESTING, STORING WATERMELONS

Picking a ripe watermelon is not the easiest thing to learn, but there are certain indicators to look for.

Watermelons mature rapidly during hot weather. Most are ripe about 32 days after blooming.

Deciding when to harvest a melon is most difficult early in the season when vines are green and healthy.

Some indicators of watermelon maturity are: tendrils or pigtails on vines that change from green to brown, the ground spot on the belly of the melon turns from white to yellow, and the thumping sound changes from a metallic ringing when immature to a soft, hollow sound when mature.

Even experienced field cutters must cut an occasional melon to check flesh quality with their judgement of rind appearance.

Watermelons should be handled carefully to avoid rolling, bumping or dropping and thus prevent internal bruising of the flesh.

Watermelons should be stored at temperatures ranging from 60 to 70 degrees F. Temperatures below 50 degrees or above 90 degrees for extended periods will increase flesh deterioration. Once a melon is cut, it can be refrigerated in wedge form or in small chunks in plastic-covered containers.

Good quality melons are usually firm, symmetrical in shape, fresh, attractive in appearance and of good color. The external rind color may vary from deep solid green to gray, depending on the variety.

The Charleston Gray and the Jubilee are the two most popular varieties grown in the South and Southwest. Charleston Gray is an elongated melon with a light green mottled color and deep red flesh. The Jubilee is also elongated in shape but has dark green stripes over a light green base. It is also deep red fleshed. Both varieties range in fruit size from 18 to 40 pounds, with an average of 20-25 pounds.

Watermelon is one of the cheapest fruits per pound that you can buy. An average wedge of watermelon has only 120 calories. Watermelon contains about 90 to 92 percent natural sugar.

CANNING LOW ACID TOMATOES

A little lemon juice may make the difference between safe home canned tomatoes and those that can cause food poisoning.

The recent U.S. Department of Agriculture research shows that the acidity level of fresh tomatoes drops after canning.

This can compromise the safety of home canned tomatoes, especialy if they are overripe when canned or if the lower-acid varieties are used.

The acidity of foods is ranked on a pH scale. Foods that have a pH below 4.6 are acid enough to prevent the production of botulin toxin if heated in a water bath canner.

The botulin toxin can cause a person to become ill with botulism a serious form of food poisoning.

Foods with a pH above 4.6, such as vegetables and meats, must be canned under pressure to reach a temperature of at least 240 degrees to destroy the botulism organism.

By adding lemon juice to tomatoes, the acid level will be high enough that home canners can safely use a water bath for tomatoes, rather than having to use a pressure cooker.

One tablespoon of bottled lemon juice per pint or two tablespoons per quart should be added to the tomatoes. Bottled lemon juice is recommended because it has a uniform pH.

Eye collection

Eye skin-care items usually have to be searched out one by one. Now the Italian cosmetics firm, Kelemata, has come out with a group that collects all the items needed. Their eye-care collection includes a "wake-up" morning eye lotion, a gel to moisturize under makeup, a stick moisturizer for all-day sun-screening, a mask just for this sensitive area, special make-up removers and other items. All are made with natural, botanical ingredients.

Roll Call of Lung Cancer Is List of Shameful Waste

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but all those letters about smoking and lung cancer have forced me to write. You probably won't use this, but just ask yourself: How many smokers do you know? How many people do you know right now who have lung cancer? Have you ever personally known anybody who died from lung cancer?

I am willing to bet that you know many smokers, but cannot name one person who has lung cancer now, and have never personally known anyone who died from it. So, if it's true that smoking causes lung cancer, isn't it strange that so few people can come up with a single name?

STILL SMOKING

DEAR SMOKING: You cannot be serious. According to the American Cancer Society, here's a partial list of some famous people who have died of lung cancer: Edward R. Murrow, Damon Runyon, John Wayne, Humphrey Bogart, Lillian Hellman and Yul Brynner (who made a television commercial shortly before his death begging people not to smoke). Add Arthur Godfrey, Selma Diamond, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Betty Grable, King George VI, Buster Keaton, Sen. Robert Taft, Nat King Cole, Boris Pasternak and, more recently, Alan Jay Lerner.

And I have had some close personal friends and a beloved relative who have also paid a terrible price for the "pleasure" of smoking.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to you because I am at my wit's end with my sister-in-law. She calls me collect just to see how we are. I wouldn't mind paying for a collect call in an emergency, but she calls just to chat.

I'm not a cheapskate, but she is just as able to pay for the phone calls as we are. I write to her, but she's too lazy to write, so she picks up the phone and calls me collect! She's my husband's sister and I don't want to get her mad at me, but she never talks less than 20 to 30 minutes, and we live 2,000 miles apart, which runs into money.

Don't get me wrong; I love her to pieces, and wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world, but I just had to get this off my chest.

TIRED OF COLLECT CALLS

DEAR TIRED: Getting this off your chest may reduce your blood pressure, but it won't reduce your telephone bill. Nothing will change unless you tell her (person-to-person) how you feel about those collect calls. Suggest that one time you pay, and the next time she pays.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have half a pillowcase filled with old love letters from different men I have known over the years. There were some I knew when I was a beautiful young woman, and many I knew through three marriages, during, between and after. Some were well-known professional men in our town — doctors and lawyers and a judge, too. They are all signed.

I have grandchildren and great-grandchildren who might enjoy reading them.

Should I pass them on, or throw them in the garbage and forget about it? I will soon be 96, and most of these men are dead.

COLORFUL PAST

DEAR COLORFUL: It's all part of history now, so unless there are disclosures that could hurt their families, pass them on. I'm reminded of an old saying: Wrong no man, and write no woman.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Every morning my dad reads the newspaper. When he reads your column, he will not listen or talk to anyone.

Will you please tell him I want a yellow checkered shirt like my brother's? Thanks.

MICHAEL THIESE (AGE 10), MACON, GA.

DEAR MICHAEL: Consider him told. I hope this helps.

DEAR ABBY: When my son was 12 years old, a 19-year-old college girl had sex with him. (She was a "sitter" we hired to stay at our house over a weekend when we went out of town.) When he was 14, a 17-year-old married woman had sex with him all summer. I didn't know about these experiences while they were going on. He is 16 now and he just told me about these sex experiences, and I was very much upset.

Lately he has been spending a lot of time at the home of a 38-year-old divorced woman. He denies that there is any sex going on, but I don't believe him. I told his father, and he just said, "Boys will be boys; don't worry about it."

I feel as though my son was molested even though he was a willing partner. Is my husband right? What is your opinion?

UPSET MOTHER

DEAR UPSET: Even though your son was probably a willing partner, the women with whom he had sex are guilty of having sex with a minor, which is statutory rape. Boys will be boys (and women will be women), but parents should be responsible parents, which includes educating their children in matters of sex. That means self-control, birth control and V.D. prevention. A father-and-son talk is long overdue, but at this stage of the game it would be like giving a fish a bath.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am living with a man I love and want to stay with forever. I thought if I moved in with him it would lead to marriage, but that's not the way it's turning out. We are both 34 and are very compatible. He has never been married, but I've been married and divorced three times. No kids — just lucky, I guess.

When I bring up marriage, he says, "You don't have a very good track record — three strikes and you're out." For that I have no comeback, but I don't want to just live with a man for the rest of my life. (I've been here for three years.) He treats me good and I do not want to move out because I love him, but I can't go on this way.

Should I give him an ultimatum — either marry me or I'm leaving? What if he says "Leave"? (I have nowhere to go.)

Please answer in the paper because he checks all the mail that comes here and he'd be mad if he knew I wrote to Dear Abby.

WANTS A WEDDING RING

DEAR WANTS: Never issue an ultimatum unless you're prepared to carry out your threat. There is no way to force a man to marry you if he doesn't want to. If marriage is what you want, consider the possibility that this man may not be marriageable.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle something once and for all? How long does a bride have to get out her thank-you notes for her wedding gifts?

Didn't I read in your column that it was OK to wait a year?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: A year? Not in my column. I have said, "Three months is the maximum." But because rules sometimes change with time, I checked with Letitia Baldrige, the high priestess of etiquette. She said: "Wedding gifts should be acknowledged within two weeks. For those on an extended honeymoon, a printed card should be sent upon the receipt of a gift saying that a personal acknowledgment will follow at a later date.

"If many gifts were received, the task of acknowledging them can be shared by husband and wife if they both work and have equal amounts of free time; he taking care of his friends and family, and she, hers.

"It is acceptable to get the thank-you notes out in one month. Two months is less acceptable, and three is the absolute maximum.

"More than six months is a travesty on taste and manners."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: "Not Exempt in Phoenix" missed the point. The purpose of "Child in Car" signs is to alert rescuers in case of an accident to search for a child, since small children may easily be hidden under debris, or thrown into roadside bushes or ditches.

The same rationale applies for signs on bedroom windows for the elderly, invalids or children: It's a signal for firefighters to check these rooms for rescue.

VOLUNTEER FIREFIGHTER IN COLORADO

Border city possible mecca?

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — This city just across the Rio Grande from El Paso may once again become Texans' mecca for inexpensive imported liquor, thanks to election-year politics.

Before 1982, many U.S. shoppers got used to buying their liquor in Mexico because they didn't have to pay several dollars' worth of U.S. taxes. That policy changed in 1982, and Mexican liquor stores have sold only Mexican-produced liquor, wine and beer since then.

But now, the Mexican government has granted permits to Juarez merchants to import $1.5 million worth of foreign liquor duty-free, Juarez Chamber of Commerce President Jesus Macias Delgado said.

The permits, good only in Juarez through the end of the year, reverse the 4-year-old policy banning foreign-liquor imports. The measure, along with other import bans, was aimed at promoting sales of Mexico's domestic liquor industry.

The United States applies a tax of $12.50 per gallon of 100-proof liquor, said Bob Bowlin, agent-in-charge of the Albuquerque, N.M., office of the U.S. Department of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

A liter of 100-proof liquor would be taxed $3.25, and a tax of $2.50 would be charged on a liter of 80-proof liquor.

"There's no tax, though, on liquor going out of the country," Bowlin said Tuesday, referring to the price advantage that U.S. shoppers used to enjoy in Mexico before 1982.

Texas charges 60 cents for a quart or liter of liquor entering from Mexico. There also is a federal tax of $2.50 on a liter of alcohol for people who bring in more than one bottle every 30 days, although officials say the tax seldom is enforced.

The Chamber of Commerce has been seeking the import permits since 1982, Macias told the El Paso Times. But he said mayoral candidate Jaime Bermudez was instrumental in getting them.

Bermudez, a well-known Juarez businessman who owns a twin-plant industrial park, is running under the ticket of the PRI, or Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has controlled state and federal governments in Mexico since 1929.

Macias admitted politics were involved in the granting of Bermudez's request so close to the election Sunday.

"Of course, sure. But what interests us is the result, not the road it arrived on," Macias said.

The PRI is seeking to regain the mayorship in Juarez after three years in which the rival conservative PAN, or National Action Party, has held the office.

The import permits probably will mean bad news for El Paso liquor stores, said Ray Telles, owner of the Barrel House liquor chain, which has eight stores in El Paso.

Although he had not heard of the new development, Telles said he would have to take it as bad news.

"If it happens, I'm sure we can expect a decrease in sales," he said.

Telles estimated 10 percent of his clients are Mexican nationals who purchase U.S. liquors unavailable in Mexico. He said he probably would lose on sales to U.S. shoppers also if they start buying U.S. liquor again in Juarez.

U.S. liquor may start appearing on Mexican store shelves within a week or two, as Juarez merchants obtain the paperwork from the departments of Commerce and Treasury, Macias said.

"Okay. Here's the deal. You pick out the vacation spot, figure how much it will cost, and we'll go."

"I already know where I want to go. Jamacia."

"Nope...sorry. Jamacia's not one of the options to consider. Too expensive."

"You said I could pick."

"I said you could pick someplace reasonable. Jamacia is too far out. That's an adult vacation. First off, what would we do with the kid?"

"He could swim."

"In the ocean? He's not big enough to swim in the ocean. He'll drown. And beside, we've got oceans right here in Texas."

"He could swim in a swimming pool."

"He can swim in a swimming pool at the Ramada Inn in Abilene. And it would be a hell of a lot cheaper. Jamacia's for adults. Sorry, forget it. Maybe later when he's older."

"But I want to go to some place exotic. It's a vacation!"

"Exotic wears me out just thinking about it. I'm not interested in beating myself to death just to have an exotic vacation."

"So you want to go to the same old places, over and over?"

"Why not? They're safe, no surprises. You know what kind of mess you're getting yourself into."

"And when we're old, we'll only have memories of going to the same place every summer. How boring."

"Okay, okay. Someplace different. How about the mountains?"

"How about Disneyland?"

"Good grief! We've only got a week. You can't drive to California, so that means flying. By the time you've flown out there, paid for motels and meals, you could go to Jamacia."

"That's my point."

"I thought we were going to discuss this. Look, when I was a kid, vacation was a week at Lake Buchanan fishing off of my uncle's dock."

"Every summer?"

"Every summer. And we had a great time."

"What did your mother think about it? Was she ever asked what she thought about it?"

"She visited with Aunt Sadie. Sadie worked as a waitress in this cafe that looked over the dam. They had this great coconut creme pie, and we'd go up there and eat it after lunch and they'd let us kids drink watered-down coffee. Outside, they had one of those up-and-down horses that you could ride for a dime. It had a real black leather saddle and reins and, after the ride had stopped and we were out of dimes, my aunt would let me sit in it and creak the saddle stirrups."

"And that's your idea of a vacation...every year?"

"Too exotic for you?"

"My lord, if that's your idea of fun, let's go up to the elementary school and watch them wax the gym floor. You know, there are buses that come through this town every day. Maybe they'd let you watch them unload the luggage. We could go to Lake Thomas and pick up beer cans..."

"Wait, wait. You've totally missed my point..."

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Thomas Wolfe (not the guy who wrote "The Right Stuff") made famous the statement, "You can't go home again." He also wrote, "We are the sum of all the moments of our lives--all that is ours is in them: we cannot escape or conceal it."

Those of us who grew up in the suburbs of Texas cities in the Fifties and early Sixties know the reality of those statements all too well. "Suburbs," back then, were really small towns, separated from each other and from the Big City by miles of farmland. Only Daddies drove into the city every day, for the rest of us, it was something reserved for special occasions (until we started dating, anyway). Towns like Richardson, where I lived, Garland, Plano, Mesquite, and McKinney weren't much more than rivals at football games. Dallas...well, Dallas was different.

Dallas was a big tall building with a red horse on top. Dallas was beautiful women and wide streets and fancy hotels. That was a long time ago, before the Boom of the Seventies, before the word "Sunbelt" came into being, before anybody ever heard of "Southfork."

Now Dallas is a vast, cancerous grid that has swallowed up places like Richardson and Plano into one huge new word, "Metroplex." Dallas is white-knuckle traffic, cloverleafs, crowds, and faceless, nameless buildings made of glass in shades of copper and silver, where most folks talk with a Yankee accent. Dallas isn't even Dallas, anymore.

Not long ago, we tried to take our kids on a trip down Memory Lane, show them some of our old stomping grounds, so that they could get a better understanding of what our childhood was like. As we headed toward the house I lived in until I was nine, I told them about the big old tree where their daddy and my brother once left me stranded for hours. I told them how I used to stand at the front door and look out across the fields, and how tumbleweeds as big as me used to roll up and lodge in the front porch.

House, tree, and all had been bulldozed and paved over. Warehouses and office buildings extended as far as the eye could see. My kids looked at me as if I were a wee bit touched.

Next we took them to the house I lived in until I was 15, and I told them about the woods and fields behind it and the old barn that the neighborhood kids turned into a clubhouse. We almost couldn't find the house, lost as it was in a huge checkerboard maze of houses. There were no trees. There were no fields.

My kids assumed the careful expression of one who is listening to a born liar.

As we drove past the house I lived in until I left for college, the last house we lived in before Daddy died and Mother moved to Texarkana, I pointed and began gabbling excitedly, "The gas light is still there! Remember the gas light?" I elbowed their daddy. "Remember when your Aggie buddy draped his coat over the light so that we could kiss good-night in the dark?"

"Yeah, and the coat caught fire!"

We chortled, then a voice we'd both forgotten piped up, "That must have been some kiss."

I decided not to tell them about the time their daddy threw up in the flower bed after consuming too many refreshments at an Aggie Corps Party.

"...and this is the railroad trestle I would climb over...and this is the swimming pool--I walked all this way, mind you, and then I walked..." Was that the sound of snoring, coming from the back?

We dragged them into the store where I got my first job. "Remember when you came in here and asked me out for the first time, and I wanted you to lower your voice so the whole store wouldn't know that I was going out with a guy who wore cowboy boots and a cowboy hat?" We laughed.

"What's wrong with cowboy boots and cowboy hats? asked my booted, hatted son.

"Uh...er...never mind. I'll explain it to you when you're older."

Somewhat defeated, I gazed out the window as we drove past sprawling city cemetery, manicured grounds sparkling emerald under perpetual-care sprinklers in the setting sun.

"Wow," came an awed voice from behind. "That grass is in great shape. You could run a bunch of cows out there."

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
June 29

Snyder's status with the State of Texas as a budget balanced school — a title given when a school district is able to fund state-mandated programs primarily through its own local tax base — is expected to change effective next school year, it was reported Sunday.

And the change is greeted as good news by administrators and school board members charged with financing local programs.

The bottom line, they note, is Snyder ISD can expect more state dollars here next year.

Every county department felt the ax to some degree last week as county commissioners wrapped up week-long budget discussions with department heads, it was reported Sunday.

Commissioners began budget talks last Tuesday morning at the precinct level and finished Friday with the hospital's budget.

Jerry Baird, head of Adult Education at Western Texas College, recalled his 10-day journey on the Sesquicentennial wagon train in Sunday's SDN.

MONDAY
June 30

County commissioners learned Monday that estimated general fund expenditures for 1986 — monies which in general finance county courthouse activities — will most likely fall some 2½ percent below the amount budgeted.

In addition, commissioners have already cut some 11 percent out of the general fund's budget for 1987 during budget workshops completed last week.

Monday marked the closing of a longtime Scurry County landmark — the grocery story run in Dermott by Velma Lee Edmonson which doubles as the U.S. post office facility there.

The post office facility — operated by her sister, La Verne Herring — was to remain open through Thursday.

TUESDAY
July 1

An early-morning thunderstorm left 75 percent of Snyder without electricity for some 30 minutes Tuesday morning.

The city recorded near ½ inch of moisture from the brief cloudburst, but surrounding areas of the county were left essentially dry.

The sudden downpour was said the cause of the electric outage as the rain shorted out electrical work being conducted at the city transformer sub-station located in the 400 Block of 37th St.

The steady increase in unemployment figures for Scurry County — a jobless estimate which began rising in February as the price of oil began dropping — rose another percent during May, it was reported Tuesday.

The estimate now stands just below the 10 percent mark, according to the latest figures released by the Texas Employment Commission.

With an estimated 996 individuals actively seeking jobs, the official figure quoted for Scurry County was 9.8 percent unemployment.

Fire destroyed the Hermleigh Church of Christ Tuesday, a fire loss in part attributed to a lack of adequate water pressure and a high wind.

Several reports of smoke coming from the structure were phoned into the Snyder Fire Department beginning at 1:43 p.m. Tuesday.

Fire fighters were at the scene until 6:30 p.m., but efforts to douse the fire were hampered by the high winds and lack of water at the scene.

WEDNESDAY
July 2

A county cotton producer's group has cancelled plans to attempt an early season spray for boll weevils due to sightings of another potential cotton-destroying pest — bollworms.

The spray program for the weevil — which would have entailed a first for the county — was first proposed June 11 by the Scurry County Producers Association.

It was proposed to spray all cotton planted in the county during May, a plan which would have involved an estimated 5,000 acres here.

THURSDAY
July 3

Plans for the July 4th celebration in Snyder were announced Thursday.

The promise was for almost non-stop musical entertainment at two locations Friday and Saturday.

The music was to begin at two stages, beneath the Cottonwood trees at the park's west end and beside the Towle Park pond to the east.

In addition, an expanded July 4th parade was previewed. It was to include some 27 entries and was estimated to stretch ½ of a mile.

Planning for the music has been completed by Ralph Williamson, while Harry Mitchell has planned for the parade. Heading up the July 4th committee for the chamber has been Kent Horsley.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

As chairman of the Resolution Committee on the White Buffalo statue for the Scurry County Historical Commission, I feel compelled to clarify for the citizens of Scurry County the misconceptions left regarding the proposals adopted on Thursday, June 26, concerning the fate of the statue.

The Scurry County Historical Commission was approached early in June by the artist and a committee from the Chamber of Commerce with a proposal to erect a white bronze bull statue to replace the existing fiberglass statue on the northwest corner of the courthouse square. The county commissioners had taken no action on their request at an earlier meeting, leaving the decision to the Historical Commission since both the marker and statue on the square had been placed there in 1967 by the Historical Commission and Scurry County citizens.

In the June 26 meeting, our committee, composed of Brud Boren, Drew Bullard, Jean Everett, and June McGlaun, presented a recommendation to the Commission and guests in an effort to provide a solution and give consideration to the petitions being circulated by Scurry County citizens and other expressions of public opinion against removing the existing statue and marker.

The entire proposal read as follows:

Because we are a Historical Commission dedicated to the preservation of historical accuracy whenever and wherever possible, and in keeping with that purpose, we make the following recommendations concerning the J. Wright Mooar official Texas State Historical Marker and its accompanying white, fiberglass statue which is located on the northwest corner of the courthouse square, and which has obtained national prominence:

1. We cannot accept the offer to replace the existing white buffalo cow and marker.

New monitor said helping cancer patients

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Doctors waging the war against cancer with implanted radioactive pellets soon may have a sophisticated tool that will make it possible for them to better control the powerful weapon.

Tiny sensors inserted along with the pellets will allow the doctors to keep tabs on the amount of radiation the patient gets in the treatment.

"What we're going to do is get a better picture of the radiation during these implants," said Dr. Charles A. Kelsey, chief of biomedical physics at the University of New Mexico Cancer Center and one of two developers of the use of the radiation sensing field effect transistor — RADFET — for implants.

Dr. Robert C. Hughes, supervisor of Sandia National Laboratories' microsensor division and the other developer, said Sandia researchers have found a way to adapt the radiation sensor as a dosimeter and mount it inside a standard medical catheter, or tube, only 0.8mm, or three-hundreths of an inch, in diameter.

The small catheters commonly are used to implant radioactive pellets in patients to treat certain types of cancer.

Kelsey said pellets can be implanted anywhere in the body, but most frequently treated are tumors in the cervix, rectum, prostate, breast, head and neck.

He said that about four dozen such operations are performed in Albuquerque each year.

Currently, radiation doses are determined by computer modeling and calibration of radiation sources. But the dosimeter would allow direct monitor for each individual patient.

"The calculations are pretty good, but this will give us a better indication," Kelsey said.

Kelsey and Hughes said the dosimeter could become a significant medical tool because its small size, flexibility and ruggedness make it convenient for directly monitoring radiation doses in previously inaccessible parts of the body.

Kelsey said the developers hope that by the end of the summer, they will have gathered all of the information required by a university committee which reviews the use of any new devices in human beings.

The committee usually acts very quickly, in two or three weeks, he said.

"Maybe by the middle of the fall we could be working in patients," he said.

If tests in patients prove the dosimeter is useful and safe, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration would have to approve it before it could be marketed as a standard medical tool.

Alabama seceded from the American union in 1861.

2. We would, however, in recognition of Mr. Taylor's artistic ability and offer, be happy to cooperate with him in a proposal for a bronze buffalo statue at some other location, such as the coliseum, the WTC campus, or Towle Memorial Park. Furthermore, we would apply for a historical marker commemorating the importance of the buffalo herds to the Indian and the white man. On acceptance of such a marker by the state, we would plan a dedication ceremony for the unveiling.

3. We would further request that any expenses incurred for the erection of said statue, and the subsequent upkeep be assumed by the Chamber of Commerce.

We feel that due to petitions currently being circulated and other expressions of public opinion and support, that we have strong support in this effort.

Following a discussion and reading of the petitions, it was reported that the artist now wished to cast a white cow statue (the artist himself was not present in this meeting.)

An amendment was made from the floor to change item No. 2 to read: "We would however, in recognition of Mr. Taylor's artistic ability and offer, be happy to cooperate with him in a proposal for a white bronze cow statue, at some other location, such as the Scurry County coliseum, WTC campus, or Towle Memorial Park. Furthermore, we would apply for a marker commemorating the importance of the buffalo to the Indian and the white man. On acceptance of such a marker by the state (Historical Commission in Austin) we would plan a dedication ceremony for the unveiling.

Items No. 1 and No. 3 remained as first proposed.

This proposal was made in the form of a motion and was passed in a vote of 9 to 7.

We of the committee would like to express our thanks to all the interested citizens who attended the meeting, and to all who by signing the petitions, expressed their opinions.

Sincerely,
June McGlaun

Houston nurse is Jacqueline Susann of delivery room

HOUSTON (AP) — As a night charge nurse at St. Luke's Hospital, Joanne Redd helps laboring mothers with their breathing exercises when they're giving birth.

After hours, she writes searing, pulse-quickening historical romance novels, destined for Zebra and Dell Books.

The two careers are starkly dissimilar, and Mrs. Redd intends to keep them that way. No "General Hospital" plots for her. She says her novels will always be set in historically alluring places like the Deep South instead of delivery rooms.

But one job did lead to another six years ago. While reading a novel between deliveries one night at St. Luke's, she threw down the book in disgust.

"It was lousy and it didn't even have a plot," she said. "Another nurse said, 'Well, why don't you just write one yourself?'" Mrs. Redd did, and six months later, she had a book completed.

Her first book published, "The Texan's Lady," came out in August 1984, followed by "Rebel Heart" in March. Zebra Books published those under the seductive sounding pen name of Lauren Wilde.

But Mrs. Redd, who has a nurse's neat-as-a-pin appearance with her hair meticulously pulled into a chignon, says her next venture, "To Love an Eagle," will bear her real name. The book, set during the Texas revolution, will be released by Dell in 1987.

"I don't think I was secure enough in my writing to present it to the world in my name at first," she said. "Now I realize that it's an accomplishment and that I need not hide behind my pseudonym."

Mrs. Redd's highly explicit love scenes have caused a few raised eyebrows.

"People would say, 'Oh, that's just trash.' But I have come to realize that my writing is as good as that in any mystery or any science fiction, and I should not feel like I have to excuse myself because I write about love. There's something that disturbs the public about love."

Mrs. Redd says she does not live vicariously through the voluptuous, always desirable heroines of her books.

"I step into the roles of all my characters — even the male ones — but I don't identify myself with any of them," she said.

In a sense, however, her heroines are every woman, including herself, she says.

"I think every woman wants a sensitive, yet exciting lover," said Ms. Redd. "I've gotten some nice letters on 'Rebel Heart' because the hero was so sensitive to the heroine. I really believe that women want nice guys. They don't want insensitive brutes."

Her husband of 30 years, Neil Redd, certainly qualifies as a nice guy, but he's not one of her characters either, she says.

"He's gotten himself some strange looks since they (the books) have come out," said Mrs. Redd. Her husband also works at St. Luke's, in general supply.

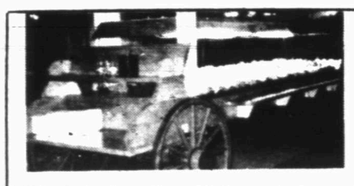

As a child growing up in Kingsville, nursing was Mrs. Redd's only ambition, and there were no youthful attempts at poetry or prose, she says. Mrs. Redd graduated from St Mary's School of Nursing in Galveston. She started at St. Luke's more than 20 years ago and preferred the night shift so she could be home during the day with her three children.

But once she started book writing, Mrs. Redd was surprised at how thoroughly she was snared.

"The books took over my life," she said. She says she reads 30 to 40 history books of the period before starting to write.

History aside, Mrs. Redd knows that people comb the pages fast for the love scenes when they pick up a book. Even at that, Mrs. Redd says she has her standards.

"I don't accept the fact that people jump into bed off the bat," she said. "I try to make sure there's a relationship.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

See specialist about headaches

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My daughter is 11. For the past six-and-a-half years, she has been plagued with what she calls "headaches." She is sensitive to light and has severe hearing loss, nausea, loss of balance and vomiting when she moves. The spells happen — without fail — every 12 weeks. A clinic said she has Meniere's disease, but no treatment has been successful. The doctors have discouraged me from seeing an endocrinologist or allergist. Please give us some encouraging words, or at least another source of treatment.

DEAR READER — I think that Meniere's disease is an unlikely cause of your daughter's symptoms. I wonder about the possibility of migraine. I believe a neurologist would be a more useful resource than either of the specialists you mention. Migraine is not only treatable, but can often be prevented by using a type of medicine called a beta-blocker. I do not know whether this medicine would be appropriate for your daughter, but a neurologist could advise you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is a bunion and how is one corrected surgically?

DEAR READER — A bunion is an abnormal swelling at the base of the big toe. It is caused by long-term irritation, particularly from wearing shoes that are too narrow. The swelling causes the big toe to drift laterally (outward), and this anatomical change worsens poor foot mechanics.

The surgical procedure of choice is the Keller operation, during which the swollen tissue and part of the first joint are removed and the big toe is allowed to resume its normal position.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I take Coumadin, Lasix, Isordil, Inderal and Lanoxin for thrombophlebitis. The doctor says that my arteries are open, but the valves in my main veins are defective. Will I ever get over the thrombophlebitis? What is this vein problem?

DEAR READER — You are taking a caboodle of medicine and, as far as I can see, only one — Coumadin — is for thrombophlebitis (blood clots in the veins). Coumadin is a drug that slows blood coagulation and helps prevent clots. Sometimes, when veins swell and dilate in the legs or pelvis, blood circulation through them is slowed. If there are irregular, roughened areas or if — as your doctor pointed out — the normal venous valves stop functioning, blood clots can readily develop in these veins. If pieces of the clots break off, they can be carried to the lungs, producing a serious breathing problem called pulmonary embolism.

Coumadin is an acceptable preventative for this condition. On occasion, an operation (caval interruption) can be used to stop clots from traveling from the lower body to the lungs. In your case, the Lanoxin, Lasix and Isordil seem to indicate that you have a heart problem, too. The Inderal may be useful in treating hypertension and agina. Therefore, you may not be a candidate for surgery; it could be too risky. Long-term use of Coumadin may be your best option.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've heard of a sexual stimulant called Yohimbine. Does it work?

DEAR READER — Yohimbine is a plant alkaloid that has long had the reputation for being an aphrodisiac. It probably does not act as a sexual stimulant. However, some reputable medical investigators have reported that the drug, when taken orally, may help overcome the impotence common to diabetics. Yohimbine seems to have a role in the treatment of certain forms of erectile inability, although the medical research to date is not conclusive.

DEAR DR. GOTT — There is an operation called a bilateral carotid body resection that, apparently does wonders for asthma and emphysema patients. Could you describe this procedure and explain how it works?

DEAR READER — The carotid bodies, one on each side of the neck, act as mini-respiratory sensors in the body. When stimulated by low blood oxygen, the carotid body reflex stimulates the brain's breathing center to increase the respiratory rate. Because the carotid bodies also seem to stimulate the nerves that open and close the bronchial tubes, surgeons discovered that when they removed the carotid bodies, some patients with asthma could breathe easier. Now that there are so many effective drugs and treatments for asthma and emphysema, the operation is seldom performed anymore.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 34 and have been trying to get pregnant for the past six years. What kind of tests would have to be done to find out what the problem is?

DEAR READER — There are many tests. The basic tests determine if you are ovulating, if your husband's sperm count and mobility are normal and whether your cervical secretions are inhibiting the movement of sperm. In addition, specialists have to make sure that the ova you produce can find their way into the Fallopian tubes and thereby travel down to the uterus. The two most common tests are the hystero-salpingogram (an X-ray study to evaluate your reproductive tract) and a postcoital semen analysis.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I got two ruptured discs at work and the doctor wants to operate. What can I expect from the operation? Will I be able to do the heavy lifting at work that I did before?

DEAR READER — You can expect relief of pain if the operation is successfully performed. You will probably be advised to limit your lifting activities thereafter, because there is always a chance that other discs can rupture, too. I think you'd best sit down with the doctor, before surgery, and discuss the operation's risks and benefits, as well as the restrictions you may have to adhere to after you

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 60 and have developed diabetes in the last two years. No one else in my family has this problem. My weight is high, but my blood sugar isn't (130). Can you explain why I developed diabetes?

DEAR READER — Actually, your blood sugar — if it's a fasting specimen — is high. It may go sky-high a couple of hours after you eat.

No one knows precisely why some people tend to develop an intolerance to sugar as they age. This type of diabetes is usually seen in overweight persons. Perhaps the pancreas just gets worn out after decades of trying to produce enough insulin in people who eat too much.

You may be able to control your diabetes satisfactorily if you lose weight and omit sugar from your diet. That way, your pancreas will not have to work as hard, and the limited supply of insulin that it now makes may be sufficient to keep your blood sugar at an acceptable level.

Diet control is the cornerstone to the treatment of all diabetes. In an overweight patient, it is paramount.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME explains the symptoms and management of this common problem. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

We're all going deaf by degrees

Some scientists have calculated that if normal human hearing were more sensitive, we would be disturbed by the constant rumbling of air molecules colliding with each other. That's probably an exaggeration but, unquestionably, the ability to hear is one of Nature's miracles. However, in lemming-like fashion, we seem determined to destroy this marvelous gift. Several medical reports have indicated that the current noise level of our 20th-century cosmopolitan existence is causing permanent hearing damage in millions of people.

We are able to discern tones because of unique cells within the inner ear, one set on each side. When sound is transmitted through the acoustical bones of the middle ear, it produces fluid waves in the cochlea, a lymph-filled, snail-shell-shaped chamber that is lined by specific sensors called hair cells. There are sets of hair cells for each tone in the audible sound spectrum. The tiny hairs of the cells project into the lymph of the cochlea. As the fluid wave travels through the cochlea, the hairs are set in motion, stimulate the hearing cells and produce minuscule electrical currents that speed through the auditory nerves to the brain, where they are perceived as sound.

If a particular tone is excessively loud, the hair cells that sense the pitch can be shaken loose and dislodged; they cease functioning. No new cells regrow to take their places; the person simply becomes unable to hear soundwaves in that range. Thus, irreparable damage occurs within specific hearing ranges. That is, persons exposed to loud high noises lose cells in the high range; those exposed to low-frequency noise lose cells in the low range.

The resulting acoustic abnormality is easily demonstrated in an audiogram, a hearing test that examines a patient's ability to perceive faint tones at various frequencies.

Loud noises cause a dropoff in tone perception in the so-called "conversation range," the mid-range of hearing. This hearing loss had been characteristic of people working in loud occupations, such as air-hammer operators, riveters and personnel who service jet aircraft. In industry today, workers are required to wear ear protection but, in the past, "boiler-maker's ear" was a recognized consequence of a specific occupation. Chronic exposure to loud noise results in complete or partial deafness in the conversational frequency-range. Although these individuals can usually hear high and low tones, they have difficulty perceiving sounds produced by ordinary conversation.

Deafness in other ranges has been produced in studies of animals, for obvious reasons, there have been no experiments on human beings.

Despite the hearing dangers posed by industry, we continue to be bombarded by excessive noise in our environment. In particular, bands playing rock music at high decibel levels are causing irreparable damage to the ears of youthful listeners. More than one report has shown permanent hearing loss in the musicians themselves.

Several years ago, a study investigated tone perception in healthy college freshmen. The results were shocking. Almost half the students showed significant hearing loss in the mid-range frequencies. Other investigators have tested hearing in members of a primitive tribe, isolated from industrial noise of any sort. The findings were striking. Most of the natives over 70 years of age had better hearing than the average 30-year-old in our society.

There seems to be little doubt that we are progressively deafening ourselves. Much "old-age deafness" may, in fact, be the result of longstanding exposure to the noises of our culture. Perhaps we need to re-evaluate our priorities, since most of this hearing loss may be preventable.

Sounds that are loud enough to cause pain or ringing in the ears certainly has the potential for knocking off hair cells and causing permanent damage. An approximate limit to nondamaging sound is the roar of a subway train. Yet doctors frequently see young people who brag that they experienced ringing in the ears or "temporary" deafness after listening to amplified rock music. Repeated exposure is certain to cause permanent hearing problems.

People should not take it as a sign of weakness to cover their ears when in the vicinity of loud noise. Earplugs and sound-dampening earmuffs are effective ways to reduce the noise caused by engines (like those of chainsaws), as well as rock groups. Children must be educated to protect their ears from excessive sound. Adults should discourage fads that involve high-decibel noise, such as unprotected listening to electronically amplified music.

If we do not approach the problem head on — and soon — we may have to make louder and louder noise ... just to be heard.

Research project: matched mules

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Back before the days of air-conditioned tractors and soft-ride pickup trucks, a set of matched mules was the ultimate in redneck chic, certain to draw covetous glances as the family wagon drew into the churchyard.

Now, researchers at Southeastern Louisiana University hope to do with science what nature rarely, if ever, does — produce twin mules.

Mules, offspring of donkeys mated with horses, are almost always sterile. Working on a $15,000 grant by Baton Rouge businessman Lehman Williamson, researchers at Southeastern hope to breed a donkey named Sorry Sam to a mare, split the embryo and implant it in more mares.

The only real advantage to a matched set of mules — even in their heyday — was aesthetic. A farmer couldn't get any more work or much better performance out of mules that looked alike than he could out of an unmatched pair.

Nor is there much practical value to breeding twin mules today, although there's a wealth of knowledge and experience for the students involved in the research, said Chris Fischer, the professor in charge of the project.

"The object isn't to get a pair of mules to work, necessarily, just to get a pair of twin mules," Fischer said.

"Nossir, very little demand for them as work animals. There has been a renaissance of interest in mules, though. It's just like you had a A-model Ford. You didn't know it would be a heck of a lot more valuable later, you just ran it."

Mules are in the vocabulary as similes for strength and obstinacy, but not for beauty. Hardly the sort of animal one would expect to become a collector's delight.

However, John Bell, head of the Agriculture Department at Southeastern, said fanciers are willing to pay for matched mules, just as antique car collectors will pay for their hobby. "A matched pair of mules brings about $10-15,000. They are a real scarcity," he said.

Fischer said he hopes there'll be such a set on Southeastern's campus by this time next year. He's hoping to implant mares by the end of this month, and the normal gestation period is 330-370 days. A first attempt failed to produce a pregnancy.

First vision of statue recalled

EDITOR'S NOTE — Adolphe V. Bernotas, an Associated Press newsman in Concord, N.H., first saw the Statue of Liberty in the winter of 1952, as an immigrant standing on the deck of a U.S. troop carrier. In this story he recounts how the statue holds a special fascination for him.

By Adolphe V. Bernotas
Associated Press Writer

The biggest disappointment, my sisters and I agreed, was that Superman and Captain Marvel failed to show up and whiz and weave through New York's skyscraper canyons as the American comic books had suggested.

But the Statue of Liberty was as magical as any comic book giant could be.

We stared, transfixed, on the deck of the General W.G. Haan as it carried several hundred refugees into New York harbor on Feb. 8, 1952, eight days after the U.S. troop carrier left Bremerhaven, West Germany.

At nearly age 11 I wasn't interested in whether the streets were paved with gold. However, I wished Superman would weave a welcoming loop in and out of the Brooklyn Bridge — just as he had done in the comic books discarded by American GIs that we found in the refugee camp dumps in Germany.

In the absence of comic book heros, my sisters and I had to be content with the New York panorama. Our gaze kept returning to the Statue of Liberty — "Laisves Statula," in our native Lithuanian.

Our arrival in New York ended an eight-year odyssey that had begun as World War II was ending, and my family joined the flotsam and jetsam of the war. We fled Soviet communism in Lithuania, only to become refugees in Nazi Germany, whose Holocaust touched our lives.

We were among the non-Jews herded through Nazi camps perhaps because the Germans suspected my father had been a partisan, fighting the communists and Nazis with equal ferocity. He named me Adolphe as a gesture of political defiance toward the Stalinists under whose occupation I was born in Lithuania.

At one point we stayed briefly at Dachau. It remains a personal mystery. I was barely 4 and never learned the details from my father; my mother will not discuss it.

After years of nomadic life in refugee camps, where we survived through the charity of the United Nations and my father's wits, we left Europe.

Leaving was difficult. My oldest sister had been chronically ill and our applications to emigrate were rejected annually until 1952 when the United States considered allowing us into the country.

My father, blacksmith turned welder, gathered dollars from relatives and the profits of gifts from America — coffee, nylon stockings and cigarettes — to smooth our way. He would never see Lithuania again.

We were among the few immigrants to pass through Ellis Island in the 1950s. The legendary immigrants' island had been abandoned as a major gateway and was used for detention and screening special cases before it was closed in 1954.

By late afternoon of that day we had first seen Liberty, the doctors had examined my sister and declared we could stay in America.

In New York, we were picked up by a Lithuanian who took us the 100 miles to our new home in Middlebury, Conn., in his 1938 Pontiac. I remember thinking what a marvelous machine it was, complete with a dashboard radio.

Today, the Statue of Liberty never is far from my imagination.

I seek her out when pedaling my bicycle in Brooklyn every spring in New York City's Five-Borough ride or driving up the New Jersey Turnpike through Bayonne and Jersey City.

By 1964 I was a naturalized citizen living in Manhattan and commuting to Bayonne as a reporter for the Bayonne Times. I chose to take a ferry across the Hudson and a train, both of which offered glorious views of Manhattan, the Statue and Ellis Island.

Two years later, I was working for the Jersey City Journal, writing about the statue, reminding readers that Bedloe's Island is in New Jersey, not New York. When the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce "invaded" Bedloe's to publicize the New Jersey connection, I went along on assignment.

Since her refurbishing started, I've been drawn to paraphernalia related to her. My friends have sensed my fascination. I've received pencils, postcards, address labels and a birthday card with the Statue holding a champagne glass rather than a torch.

I have responded to Lee Iacocca's automated fund-raising letters as if he were writing to me personally. I have sent a family photograph to be incorporated into a video library at Ellis Island. In my bicycling club I volunteered in a "Liberty Ride Festival" fund-raising effort.

But the Statue is not a mere cornball symbol, a model for plastic souvenirs of New York and oil-on-velvet paintings. Her appeal transcends politics, philosophy and esthetics.
