Crisis stirring economic risks; Iraq taking assets

Support growing for air embargo

By Larry Ryckman
Associated Press Writer

Baghdad on Wednesday began confiscating all foreign assets from countries imposing sanctions on Iraq, but it allowed another planeload of foreigners that included 110 American women and children to fly to freedom.

International support grew for a proposed air embargo against Iraq. So did worries about the economic fallout from the Persian Gulf conflict.

"Regrettably, events in the Middle East have introduced new and substantial risks to the outlook," Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said in testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

"Just the enormous uncertainty about how and when the tensions in the Persian Gulf will be resolved undoubtedly is affecting the economy in a negative

■ The jump in oil prices charted since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait is creating "new risks" for the U.S. economy, including higher inflation and recession, says Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan.

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress on Wednesday that the Persian Gulf crisis has piled "new and substantial risks" on an already faltering national economy.

In a generally gloomy assessment of U.S. economic prospects, Greenspan said the jump in oil prices since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait had increased the threat of both higher inflation and a recession.

But the chairman of the central bank rejected suggestions that U.S. economic policy makers were in effect being held hostage by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

While he conceded that the Fed's job of promoting non-inflationary growth has been made more difficult by the unfolding events in the Persian Gulf, he insisted the central bank still had tools to mitigate the economic fallout.

But private economists said Greenspan's pessimistic comments reflected the tough choices facing him. Normally rising unemployment and other signs of sluggish growth would prompt the cen-

Hot spot?

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The last decade started off with sizzling heat in Texas and ended with some of the coldest temperatures ever recorded.

These and other weather tidbits are documented in "A Decade of Texas Weather: 1980-89" available through the Office of the State Climatologist at Texas A&M University.

The 1980s brought unprecedented highs and lows, one of the state's worst blizzards and what was reported as the worst hailstorm in history.

July 1980 stands as the state's hottest month of the decade, with an average temperature of 86.5 degrees. December 1983 was the coldest month, with an average temperature of 38.6 degrees, the fifth coldest month in Texas since records began in 1888.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — President Wojciech Jaruzelski, the only Communist leader to survive politically after democratic revolutions swept the East bloc, told Parliament on Wednesday he will resign early to help Poland complete its transition to democracy.

Jaruzelski's announcement came amid increased calls for his resignation to make way for a popularly chosen head of state.

WEST-PORT, Conn. (AP) — Paul Newman has donated $50,000 in profits from his food company to help refugees who are stranded in Jordan after fleeing Kuwait and Iraq.

Newman, who donates all profits from his food company, Newman's Own Inc., to charitable and educational purposes, gave the money to Westport-based Save the Children, the company announced Tuesday.

Save the Children was working to assist 75,000 refugees who have fled Iraq and Kuwait and are stuck in makeshift desert camps in Jordan.

This composite portrait of a robbery suspect was painted by one of his victims.

Police hope painting will aid in search

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland Police said they believe the man who robbed a business Tuesday is responsible for four other recent armed robberies.

And so police are using a composite picture of the suspect painted by one of the earlier victims to help track down the robber.

The latest incident occurred about 6:55 p.m. Tuesday at the Fabric Warehouse, No. 15 Meta Drive. A clerk at the store, Maria Gonzalez, 18, told police a man entered the store and approached the front counter.

After making contact with the clerk, the man pulled what was described as a black semi-automatic handgun and demanded money from the cash register.

Gonzalez complied and the robber fled the scene on foot in an unknown direction with about $378 in cash.

The robber was described as a white male, about 30 to 35 years old, between 5 feet 8 and 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a thin build.

According to police detectives, victims of the robberies identified the watercolor portrait as that of the culprit. Police said they hope the perceptive memory of the artist — whose identity is being withheld — will lead to an arrest.

Farmers shown techniques during annual TAEX tour

■ About 30 Midland County cotton farmers participated in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's annual farm tour, observing innovations and tests on plant varieties and fertilizers.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The days of limitless farm loans are over. If a farmer wants to avoid bankruptcy, every crop has got to count.

"That's the bottom line: staying in business," said Midland cotton grower George Anderson. And staying in business means maximizing yields by keeping up with the latest innovations in farm technology and techniques.

So it was with success in mind that Anderson and his wife, Diann, viewed demonstrations during the annual Midland County Farm Tour Wednesday.

The Andersons were among about 30 Midland cotton farmers taking the tour, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

County Extension Agent Earnest C. Kiker described the tour, which featured lectures by extension service representatives, as an educational resource.

Pointing to a field planted in several varieties of cotton, Kiker explained that the extension service will compare hardiness and productivity of the plant types.

Farmers in turn can rely on those comparisons when deciding what brand of cotton seed to buy for spring planting.

"We learn through these demonstrations that if a variety doesn't perform well, we don't want to go out and plant that variety," said Anderson, who has been farming in Midland County with his wife for about 10 years.

The extension service also conducts experiments on the effectiveness of various types of fertilizers, insecticides and growth regulation chemicals.

Charles Strichler, an agronomist with the extension service's district office in Fort Stockton, said the experiments show farmers firsthand the advantages of modern farming techniques.

"When it's in their fields, they can't deny what they see," he said. "That's why demonstrations on farms are so important — they can see the results

High in mid-80s forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, with a high in the mid-80s, 10 to 20 mph south winds and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, NWS said.

Tonight is expected to be mostly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, forecasters said.

Thursday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-80s and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, forecasters said.

The record high for Sept. 19 was 105 set in 1930. The record low of 42 for today's date was set in 1971, NWS said. Wednesday's high was 87 after an overnight low of 70.

STATE

Scattered heavy thunderstorms raced across North and Central Texas on Wednesday evening, with flood and storm warnings issued because of high winds and water.

The National Weather Service issued a storm warning for Bell County after sheriff's officers reported high winds in the Temple area. Winds, possibly as high as 55 mph, were also reported by the Belton Fire Department.

A flash flood watch was in effect for much of deep South Texas for continued heavy rains there resulting from a tropical disturbance. A flood warning was issued for Sutton County, where some highways were inundated and high water flowed in the Dry Devils River, closing a farm-to-market road.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

IRAQ: 110 more Americans freed way," Greenspan said in his first comments on the U.S. economy since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the five permanent members of the Security Council — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — had agreed to extend the economic embargo against Iraq to air traffic.

"We know there is a need to have an air embargo and a need to have it enforceable," she said. Mrs. Thatcher said she expected the full Security Council to vote on the resolution about Friday.

The House approved a nearly $1 billion package to assist the U.S. military buildup in the gulf. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, however, told Congress on Wednesday that Washington will increasingly ask allies for money to meet foreign policy needs rather than further strain the federal budget.

U.S. fundraising efforts have so far yielded pledges of $20 billion from Persian Gulf states, Japan, Germany and the European Community.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney asked Congress to let the Pentagon accept and spend the allied contributions for military operations in the gulf without prior approval from Capitol Hill.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., called the administration request an attempt to set up "in effect, a military spending slush fund."

Still, the economic news wasn't all bad: oil prices dropped about $1 a barrel after futures traders discovered the United States has a bigger supply of gasoline than they thought.

■ The State Department has set up a hotline for people seeking information about the safety of American relatives and friends in Kuwait and Iraq. The number for the 24-hour telephone bank is (202) 647-0900.

In other developments Wednesday:

■ The chairman of the KGB offered to give the CIA intelligence about Iraq, where the Soviet government still has 5,000 specialists.

■ An Army paratrooper suffered a superficial leg wound when struck by shrapnel from a misguided artillery shell in live-fire exercises by U.S. forces in the Saudi desert. He was treated at the scene.

■ Jordan's King Hussein flew to Rabat, Morocco, for a summit with Moroccan and Algerian leaders aimed at solving the Persian Gulf crisis.

■ Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati indicated Tehran would open talks with Saudi Arabia, its greatest rival in the Moslem world, to seek a solution to the gulf crisis.

■ Japanese automakers agreed to allow the United States to use three auto transport ships to carry vehicles and other goods to the Middle East.

■ The Army ordered 62 reserve units in 27 states to report for active duty, and alerted 24 other units to prepare for possible call-up. The Navy said it was activating three reserve units.

■ The flow of Kuwaitis into Saudi Arabia slowed, four days after Iraq began allowing citizens to flee. Only about 30 cars passed through the Khafji border crossing.

An Iraqi Airways jetliner with 110 Americans from Iraq and occupied Kuwait and 306 evacuees of other nationalities arrived Wednesday night at Britain's Gatwick airport, officials said. The U.S. government chartered the Boeing 747, which is scheduled to fly on to Raleigh-Durham airport in North Carolina.

Most of the passengers boarded the plane earlier in the day in Kuwait, where another charter flight was scheduled Saturday.

So far, about 1,500 Americans have been allowed to leave Iraq and Kuwait on seven chartererd flights, but 1,000 more remain behind. Iraqi soldiers have captured at least 90 American men — as well as other Westerners — and are holding them hostage at unknown locations.

Many Westerners are reported to be hiding in Kuwait, and Iraq has threatened to execute anyone sheltering them.

Iraq on Wednesday began seizing the assets of all countries participating in economic sanctions against it. The seizure order also applied to all companies based in countries enforcing the sanctions.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the ruling Revolutionary Command Council ordered the seizure Tuesday night under a law dealing with the protection of "Iraqi interests, money and rights in Iraq and abroad."

"All assets — cash deposits, property, interest and other revenue — belonging to the governments, institutions, companies and banks of the countries that have joined oppressive resolutions against Iraq are hereby confiscated," said the new law, the text of which was carried by INA.

The statement did not provide estimates for foreign assets in Iraq, or say how much cash was involved. The State Department was unable to say how much the American assets seized by Iraq were worth and a spokeswoman condemned the move.

"Actions like this can only make it more difficult for Iraq to return to the international community of nations and to restore economic relations which are crucial for Iraq's long-term development," spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said. "The clear way for Iraq to protect its interests is to comply with the Security Council resolutions relating to its invasion of Kuwait."

The United States and Britain froze Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets immediately after the invasion. Other countries, including all European Community nations, quickly followed suit.

In addition, the U.N. Security Council has imposed an embargo on trade with Iraq, choking off its oil exports and blocking the import of goods. The United States is leading a naval blockade to enforce the embargo.

Under the draft U.N. resolution to extended the trade embargo to air traffic, all countries would have to close their airspace to planes approaching or leaving Iraq or occupied Kuwait. Planes could not be shot down under the proposed resolution, but they could be challenged.

Comics may boost morale, inspire troops

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Look out Saddam Hussein! Conan, Batman, the Punisher and the X-Men are joining forces with U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia.

Myron Cohen-Ross, owner of a Ventura County comic book store, has donated about 600 comics featuring the adventures of those and other super heroes to troops participating in Operation Desert Shield.

"This is not Archie or Casper the ghost," Cohen-Ross said. "These are tough-guy comics — for inspiration."

Cohen-Ross sent a batch of 200 comics to Army troops on Monday. Sailors and Marines will be getting theirs later.

"A lot of my customers are already there," Cohen-Ross said. "We get a lot of servicemen stopping in here. ... I figured since they like comics, they might like to have these.

Cohen-Ross recalled how much he enjoyed reading comics when he served in the Army in Korea.

"Even the soldiers in World War II read them," he said.

FED: Oil prices have U.S. in 'bind'

tral bank to slash interest rates in order to spur demand.

But the oil price shock means that the country is now in the grips of its worst bout of inflation in nine years with consumer prices climbing at an annual rate of 6.2 percent.

"The Fed is in a real bind," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch. "It would like to ease because the economy is rapidly weakening but at the same time inflation is rapidly accelerating."

Financial markets had been eagerly awaiting Greenspan's first report on economic conditions since the Persian Gulf turmoil began. But for the most part they reacted with disappointment as the Fed chief seemed to dash hopes of a quick move to lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down almost 10 points in late afternoon trading.

Greenspan's comments represented a setback for the Bush administration as well. The administration has been lobbying for months for the Fed to lower interest rates in order to avert the first economic downturn since the 1981-82 recession.

Greenspan said at present the economy was still growing, although at a very slow pace. But he ticked off a number of negative impacts stemming from the more than $10 per barrel rise in oil prices since Aug. 2 and said prospects of a future downturn could not be ruled out.

"Regrettably, events in the Middle East have introduced new and substantial risks to the outlook," Greenspan told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

While refusing to say whether the chance of a recession was now above 50 percent, he did say, "The oil shock has clearly increased both the probability of inflation and recession."

Greenspan did not signal that the Fed either had eased credit already or was planning any immediate easing moves.

Instead, he merely repeated comments made in the past that financial markets would respond favorably to a credible deficit reduction package by pushing long-term rates, such as mortgage rates, lower and the Fed would do its part by helping to lower short-term rates.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said that Greenspan's testimony signaled new Fed concerns about a possible steep downward slide in the dollar if the Fed pushed interest rates lower at a time when other countries were raising their rates to fight inflation.

"This was a major departure. He emphasized strongly the dangers in a declining dollar. It means he will delay any easing steps," Jones said.

The Fed chairman said that if crude oil prices average around $30 per barrel over the next year, about $10 above the price before Aug. 2, the higher oil prices would likely lower economic growth by a full percentage point over a year's time while boosting the inflation rate by up to 2 percentage points.

A Fed report released Wednesday on conditions in various parts of the country emphasized the weak economy. The report, known as the "beige book," said economic activity in the Fed's 12 regions was either expanding more slowly at present or actually declining.

"Weakness is most apparent in the Northeastern and Mid-Atlantic districts," the report said.

Asked about the regional disparities during his testimony, Greenspan said that clearly the East Coast was in worse shape at present than the West Coast.

FARM: Techniques could help boost yield

themselves."

Four area farms are extension service experiment sites, Kiker said. Farm owners allow experiments on their land because of the knowledge they stand to gain by participating, he said.

Farmers visited three experiment sites Wednesday.

Strichler, one of three district office representative in Midland for the farm tour, said the information his agency provides is no good unless farmers put it to use.

"Farmers, like most people, are slow to change," he said. "It usually takes about three years for innovations to take hold."

Innovations new to Midland County include use of gypsum block water monitoring devices to determine soil saturation levels.

Joe Hennggler, extension irrigation engineer, said the small, porous blocks can be buried in cotton fields and electronically monitored for water absorption.

"By reading what's on the gypsum block, you're reading what's in the soil," he told farmers during the tour.

Strichler said saturation information can be used to determine how much fertilizer a farmer needs to use.

"As you decrease the amount of water, you want to decrease the amount of nitrogen," he said. About 20 Midland County farms are expected to participate in gypsum block demonstrations next year, the extension service reports.

In another extension service demonstration, the Andersons used a chemical growth regulator on a one-acre section of their 1,000-acre cotton spread.

The experimental chemical, called Pix, is designed to limit plant growth the better to maximize cotton boll production. However, the Andersons said they missed a crucial watering of the experimental plot and ended up with a disappointing yield.

"It showed us that it needs to be more regulated than what we did," Anderson said.

Kiker said this year's cotton crop should be a "reasonable" 65 percent of normal despite drought conditions earlier this summer. Success is not guaranteed, however.

"We've got to have some more warm weather," he said.

(From 1A)

The following is a list of the other robberies believed to be related:

■ On Sept. 14 at about 3:15 p.m., a similarly described man held up Dinamation, the DinoSafari gift shop at Dellwood Mall, 3303 W. Illinois Ave. Between $150 and $190 was taken.

■ On Sept. 6 at around 9:30 p.m., a man tried to rob the Royal Inn, 3601 W. Wall Ave. The would-be robber got away with nothing after the clerk refused to comply with demands.

■ On Aug. 21 at about 3 p.m., the Vidron Videos, 342 N. Midland Drive was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash. In this incident, the man robbed the business from a drive-in window. He was driving and older light-colored two-door car.

■ On Aug. 13 around 1:15 p.m., a robber got away with about $197 in cash from Video Visions, 3302 W. Illinois. In this robbery, the suspect was believed to be driving a maroon and white Chevrolet Monte Carlo, according to a witness.

Descriptions of the culprit's behavior also were similar in the robberies, police said.

Anyone that may have knowledge of any of these robberies or the suspect is asked to call the Midland Police Department.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

U.N. secretary general would be receptive to Saddam overture

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar says he would "consider very, very carefully" any offer to meet with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to discuss a settlement of the Persian Gulf crisis.

De Cuellar said a statement by Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat that Hussein is prepared to negotiate a political solution, could represent a positive development in the six-week-old crisis that has brought the Middle East to the brink of war.

Arafat told Hearst News Service Foreign Editor John P. Wallach in Baghdad Tuesday, following a meeting with Saddam, that the Iraqi leader is prepared to negotiate a peaceful settlement either with de Cuellar or Saudi Arabian King Fahd.

State Department spokesmen had no comment on the report.

De Cuellar said he would need some indications in advance of a meeting with Saddam that the drawing his troops from neighboring Kuwait and restoring a Iraqi leader was prepared to show "some flexibility" and discuss withdrawing his troops from neighboring Kuwait under the terms set by the U.N. Security Council in August.

Arafat, the PLO leader, said Saddam is prepared to discuss withlegitimate Kuwaiti government to power, perhaps headed by the ousted royal family, the al Sabahs, but not by the deposed emir, Sheik Jabir Ahmed al Sabah.

Arafat said Saddam would accept this approach if it were part of a comprehensive settlement negotiated at an international conference or in some forum in which de Cuellar would promise to vigorously pursue a resolution of the Palestinian and Lebanese conflicts.

Arafat is almost alone among Arab leaders in taking Saddam's side in the dispute over Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and been isolated by his stance. His evaluation of Saddam's willingness to negotiate runs counter to public statements by Saddam and other Iraqi government officials that they now consider Kuwait to be a province of Iraq.

KGB prepared to share its intelligence

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is willing to share intelligence on Iraq with the United States but hasn't made the offer directly because it has been rebuffed in the past, the KGB chief told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"We haven't exchanged information with the CIA on that issue, but I am convinced that we could really tell each other something valuable, especially about insuring the security of Soviet and American citizens" in the region, KGB chairman Vladimir A. Kryuchkov told the visiting AP board of directors and executives in a wide-ranging interview.

Kryuchkov said his organization had offered to cooperate in the past with the Central Intelligence Agency but had always been rebuffed. If the CIA wants help, he said, "You can be sure that our reaction would be positive."

He said his agency was also willing to work with U.S. intelligence in fighting international terrorism and narcotics trafficking.

It was not clear precisely what sort of information the Soviets might be willing to offer the United States. Most Iraqi military equipment is Soviet-made, and providing intelligence on how to defeat that equipment in battle might undermine the effectiveness of the Soviet military in any possible confrontation with the United States.

U.S. camps quietly conduct services for Jewish holiday

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The U.S. military staged private services Wednesday for Jewish troops wishing to mark the high holiday of Rosh Hashana in the land of Islam's most holy sites.

Officially, Islam is the only religion allowed in Saudi Arabia. But Saudi government officials said they had no objections to the services as long as they were confined to the military camps.

Military officials refused to provide details of the services or allow media coverage.

Islam recognizes Judaism and Christianity. But the Saudis, guardians of the Islamic holy cities of Mecca and Medina, prohibit practicing and proselytizing faiths other than Islam.

"Our personnel, whether Jewish, Christian and any other faith, are free to practice their religion as long as they do so in a discreet manner," according to a one-page U.S. military memo. "This is the only restriction placed on the practice of religion in Saudi Arabia and is equally applicable to all non-Islamic religions."

Christian services have been led by military chaplains since the early days of the American deployment.

Initially, U.S. military officials offered to bring Jewish troops to a ship offshore or to neighboring Bahrain for traditional sundown services, according to sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

But commanders decided to arrange small services in camps where requested, the sources said.

Rosh Hashana, marking the Jewish new year, began at sundown Wednesday.

A Saudi diplomatic official, speaking on condition of anonymity, conceded some Saudis may object to a Jewish ceremony in their nation but said there was no religious basis for such complaints.

COMMUNITY HEALTH LECTURE SERIES

GASTRO INTESTINAL ENDOSCOPY

FREE TO THE PUBLIC

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1990 - 7:30 p.m.

Women's and Children's Hospital Auditorium

Presented by

DR. U. P. RAO

Diplomate American Board of Internal Medicine and Sub Specialty of Gastro Enterology, Fellow of American College of Gastro Enterology

Endoscopy is one of the most exciting and expanding fields in clinical medicine. It provides accurate diagnostic information and is being used increasingly to provide therapy for gastro intestinal disorders. Furthermore it is least invasive, safer than many other therapeutic approaches and often can be accomplished on an outpatient basis to achieve a favorable cost benefit ratio.

Lecture will be followed by a question answer session and tour of the Endoscopy suite at the Hospital where the latest video Endoscopy equipment with accessories will be displayed.

Police officers drag a protester away from a Warsaw building housing the office of Polish President Wojciech Jaruzelski. The embattled leader announced he'll leave office early, clearing the way for democratic change.

Polish president agrees to resign position early

By Drusilla Menaker
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — President Wojciech Jaruzelski, the only Communist leader to survive politically after democratic revolutions swept the East bloc, told Parliament on Wednesday he will resign early to help Poland complete its transition to democracy.

Jaruzelski's announcement came amid increased calls for his resignation to make way for a popularly chosen head of state.

Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa has already declared his candidacy for president, and Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, Walesa's former adviser and ally, also is considering running.

As Communist Party leader in 1981, Jaruzelski imposed martial law but peacefully transferred power to a Solidarity-led government eight years later. He was named president by parliament in July 1989 for a six-year term.

Jaruzelski sent a letter Wednesday to the Sejm, or lower house of parliament, asking it to name a date for ending his term.

Jaruzelski announced his planned resignation after a six-hour meeting at which the nation's feuding political leaders agreed in principle to hold early elections for both the presidency and parliament. No date was set for what would be post-Communist Poland's first fully democratic elections for president and parliament.

The current parliament was elected in Jun 1989, but 65 percent of the seats were guaranteed to the now-dissolved Communists and their allies.

The president wants parliament "to enable him to transfer the office he holds to a president chosen in a general election," a Jaruzelski spokesman said in a statement.

Jaruzelski is "concerned about preventing unnecessary social emotions and willing to develop democracy," according to the statement, carried by the official PAP news agency.

Elections are expected as early as this fall and no later than spring.

Participants in a meeting Tuesday suggested that Jaruzelski should resign no later than Dec. 13, the ninth anniversary of the day he declared martial law to crush the Solidarity movement, according to sources contacted by the Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper.

Jaruzelski's election as president in 1989 came about with some support from Solidarity parliament members. It was meant to guarantee good relations with the Soviet Union in the first months of Poland's democratic reforms.

But the arrangement was overtaken by events. After Mazowiecki's Solidarity-led government took power in September, revolutions swept through the East bloc, toppling neighboring Communist leaders. The Polish party itself dissolved in January.

On Monday, police draggged away two dozen demonstrators of the Confederation for Independent Poland who attempted to block the Belweder Palace, where Jaruzelski has his office.

De Klerk to name investigative units

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk, responding to criticism from blacks that he is not doing enough to quell factional violence, said Wednesday he will appoint special units to investigate four recent incidents.

He also announced an amnesty for individuals or organizations turning in illegal firearms and explosives by Oct. 1, and offered rewards of up to $40,000 for information leading to discovery of such weapons.

Black leaders have called for independent inquiries into police shootings and other incidents during more than five weeks of unrest in black townships around Johannesburg that has killed almost 800 people.

Wednesday's announcement followed new police measures declared last week, including reinforcements, roadblocks, weapons searches and equipping police vehicles with machine-guns.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela has predicted the previous measures would be ineffective. He also has said the ANC, the largest black opposition movement, might break off talks with the white-led government if security forces cannot stop the bloodshed.

There was no immediate response from the ANC on Wednesday. Its leadership met for a second day and announced it would meet again Thursday. A statement would be issued at the end of the meeting, it said.

Speaking on the eve of his first anniversary in office, de Klerk told a news conference that special units led by deputy attorneys general would investigate four incidents: a police shooting this month that killed 11 people in the Sebokeng township, two attacks on train stations in Johannesburg that killed more than 30 people, and an alleged ambush that killed a policeman.

The president also said he was considering appointing an independent investigator to handle allegations of misconduct by "government institutions, organizations or by individuals."

Much of the fighting has pitted Xhosas and other blacks linked to the ANC against Zulus loyal to the conservative Inkatha movement. ANC and other black leaders have accused police of favoring Inkatha, and called for a purge of right-wing elements from security forces.

Inkatha and the ANC oppose apartheid but differ on tactics and plans for a future South Africa. Their power struggle in the eastern province of Natal has claimed about 5,000 lives since 1986.

Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi said Wednesday the allied ANC and South African Communist Party were seeking a "winner-takes-all" victory in a bid to create a future one-party state.

He also issued a statement praising de Klerk's first year in office, saying the president had "done more to bring about a new and stable South Africa than all his predecessors."

De Klerk has pledged to wipe out the apartheid system of racial segregation and white dominance. His government and the ANC have held talks on ending apartheid and sharing power with the black majority.

Asbestos spurs early closing of East German Parliament

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The gold-windowed Parliament building, a shimmering showcase of East Germany's Communist rulers and the birthplace of its first democracy, closed its doors Wednesday.

Officials evacuated and locked the Palace of the Republic just two weeks before the nation itself ceases to exist. It wasn't German unification that forced the closing, but a legacy of the old regime: cancer-causing asbestos.

The move will force the nation's first freely elected legislature to look for a new place to hold its final three meetings before it, too, goes out of business when the German states unite on Oct. 3.

Parliament, which still has to approve a treaty for unification, had planned to meet in the building Thursday. As of late Wednesday, officials still were looking for alternative quarters.

Government spokesman Matthias Gehler said the future of the building, a massive, rectangular edifice of white stone and gold-tinted windows, will be left to the West German government.

The Palace of the Republic has been mentioned frequently as the possible new house of a united parliament if the Parliament moves to Berlin, capital of the new Germany.

Gehler said one expert estimated that it will cost $253 million to rid the building of the asbestos.

The building was a legacy of the old regime of deposed Communist boss Erich Honecker, who dedicated the cornerstone on Nov. 2, 1973.

East German worker Wolfgang Jaensch carries the soon-to-vanish national emblem — hammer and compass surrounded by a wreath of corn — from the cabinet building to its new home in the East Berlin Museum for German History.

The massive complex was completed 1,000 days later, standing in the heart of historic Berlin, its block-like dimensions and huge Communist insignia — a hammer and drafting compass — an eyesore to many.

It became the home of the Communist Parliament that rubber-stamped the edicts of Honecker's inner circle.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. requests base access

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The United States wants continued access to the military bases it will leave behind after completing a gradual pullout from the Philippines, the spokesman for U.S. negotiators said Wednesday.

Stanley Schrager, spokesman for the U.S. panel, made the statement on the second day of talks on the future of the six U.S.-run military bases here. Their lease expires in September 1991.

Communist rebels offered a nationwide cease-fire if President Corazon Aquino rejects American proposals for continued use of the bases.

During talks Tuesday, the chief U.S. negotiator, Richard Armitage, hinted that Washington would scale down its military presence here but hoped to delay a final decision on the fate of the bases until the next century.

Schrager, discussing the period after the American soldiers are gone, said of the military facilities: "They will be Philippine bases to which the U.S. would hope to have some access as it has with other countries around the world.

'Rite of Spring' revived

PARIS (AP) — Igor Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring," with Nijinsky's original choreography, returned here Wednesday for the first time since it horrified French audiences in 1913 and closed after five shows.

The Joffrey Ballet and the French National Orchestra conducted by Allan Lewis brought a vivid reconstitution of the landmark production to the Theatre des Champs Elysees, where it premiered 77 years ago before a howling audience.

Specators grunted, hissed and booed. Gabriel Astruc, the theater's director and founder, recalls in his memoirs how he shouted back, "Listen first! You can whistle later."

Meanwhile, behind stage, dancer-turned-choreographer Vaslav Nijinksy was counting out the beats madly in Russian, gesticulating to the dancers on stage who could no longer hear the orchestra, which played on.

The critics were practically unanimous in their disapproval.

Search for plane ends

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Canadian authorities on Wednesday called off the search for a Peruvian jetliner that reported it was running out of fuel and disappeared off Newfoundland with 16 people aboard.

Maj. Walter Chipchase, a spokesman for the Search and Rescue Center in Halifax, Nova Scotia, said ships and planes would no longer be assigned to search for the Faucett Airlines Boeing 727, which vanished on Sept. 11.

The plane was returning to Miami from Malta when it disappeared about 180 miles south of Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Jewish New Year — 5751 — looks happier for Israel

By Marcus Eliason
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — Barring unforeseen calamities, the Jewish New Year is looking happier than usual for Israel.

The caveat about calamities is necessary.

When Jews celebrate, they traditionally smash a glass to remind themselves there is no joy without sorrow. And with each puff of good fortune, Israelis listen for the tinkle of broken glass.

The Persian Gulf crisis, the rapid thaw in Israel's relations with Moscow and the influx of Soviet Jewish immigrants are forcing Israelis to confront the unimaginable. The sands of the Middle East haven't just shifted. They have quaked.

"The horizon that has opened up is unlimited and we're playing for the whole kitty," says Amnon Abramovitz, a columnist for the Maariv newspaper.

"We're at a junction of several roads, and it's hard to know right now what road we'll be taking this year. It could lead to negotiations with Syria, or a war with Saddam Hussein, or both," he said.

Israel's steadfast, low-profile conduct in the gulf crisis has transformed its image from bully of the West Bank to loyal ally of the West, and relieved the pressure on Jerusalem to negotiate with the Palestinians.

Still Israelis worry: What if Iraq attacks them with chemical weapons? There was panic buying of survival supplies last month, and a debate is raging about whether to distribute gas masks.

Soviet Jewish newcomers kissing the Tarmac at Ben-Gurion Airport are a heart-warming spectacle for Israelis — a reminder of why they built a Jewish state.

But can a small, troubled economy pay to house and employ an immigrant multitude that may increase the Jewish population by 50 percent by the mid-1990s?

"It is a most revolutionary thing," says immigration official Simcha Dinitz. "I know of no other society going through such a massive absorption process."

Many of Israel's 7,000 synagogues opened to immigrants free, following a request by Minister of Religious Affairs Avner Shaki to waive the fees that some synagogues impose to raise funds for religious work.

The new year, 5751 on the Jewish calendar, was welcomed with the blowing of the ram's horn known as the shofar and begins 10 days of introspection which culminate in Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

According to figures released Wednesday by the Central Bureau of Statistics, Israel's Jewish population grew by 3.9 percent since last Rosh Hashana. Of the 115,000 new immigrants, 88 percent were from the Soviet Union.

State-owned radio reports a nearly 10 percent unemployment rate.

The intefadeh, the 34-month-old Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, has slowed sharply, but no Israeli imagines it is over.

"Once the dust has settled, when the gulf has calmed down, there will still be two peoples left in this country — two people whose lives will become hell unless the conflict between them is solved by peaceful means," warned Peace Now, a grass-roots Israeli movement, in a New Year message.

Still, as they take to the synagogues, beaches and picnic grounds for a long weekend starting Wednesday night, many Israelis will agree with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's assessment that "we had a great year and we're entering an even greater one."

Most extraordinary is the turnaround by the Soviets, who had armed the Arabs.

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT
GENERAL ELECTION
NOVEMBER 6, 1990

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 2, Sixth Called Session, 71st Legislature, proposes a constitutional amendment to provide that if the Senate, at any special session, does not take final action to confirm or reject an appointee of the Governor made during a recess of the Senate, the appointee is entitled to continue in office until the Senate rejects the appointee at a subsequent session or until the Governor appoints another person to fill the vacancy, but such a nominee whom the Senate does not act to confirm or reject at a subsequent regular session is considered to be rejected when the session ends.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to clarify the authority of the senate to consider certain nominees to state and district offices and to provide for filling vacancies in those offices."

Bush, Hussein can avoid war

Thousands of Iraqi men, women and children — driven to a frenzy of hatred toward the United States by President Saddam Hussein — marched through the streets of Baghdad earlier this week chanting "Death to Bush, Death to America!"

It was obvious from the outpouring of hate that the Iraqis support their leader.

Meanwhile, in this country, President Bush has marshaled much of the rest of the world against Hussein. The United Nations, France, Italy and the Soviet Union have all moved in recent days to tighten the diplomatic shackles binding Iraq.

Hussein's tanks are deployed at strategic points in Iraq and Kuwait. Thousands of troops from the United States bake in the blistering heat of the Saudi Arabian desert, as do the soldiers from other nations that have committed troops to the region to thwart Hussein's aggression.

It's obvious that both the United States and Iraq are prepared for war. In fact, some observers have speculated that war is inevitable; if it comes, they say, it will be relatively swift, and probably will be carried out in the sky above Saudi Arabia or Iraq.

But Hussein should understand before proceeding that President Bush was not mistaken the other day when he noted that it's not Iraq against the United States. It's Iraq against the world. That is the deadly reality.

Both men recognize the gravity of the situation, having seen action in earlier wars. George Bush flew missions in World War II. Saddam Hussein is a warrior unafraid to use all the weapons in his arsenal, including deadly chemicals. He showed that during his eight years of war with Iran.

This plunge toward war may be unstoppable. But it would be tragic if neither Bush nor Hussein attempted to stop the fall before blood is shed.

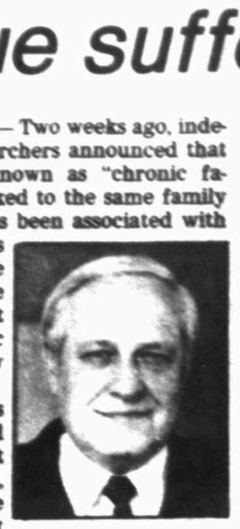

Have all the possible alternatives to war been explored? Is there no diplomatic solution to offer? President Bush stressed in his broadcast address to Iraq that war is not inevitable, a peaceful solution still being possible.

Thousands of young lives — on both sides of the fence — hang in the balance and urge both leaders to seek another way.

Fatigue sufferers may soon get help

WASHINGTON — Two weeks ago, independent researchers announced that the disease known as "chronic fatigue syndrome" is linked to the same family of retroviruses that has been associated with AIDS. Ironically, it was good news for those who suffer from the mysterious illness. At least now the scientific world may believe they are really sick.

Anderson

Their disease has been derisively labeled "yuppie flu" because it often strikes young, middle-class people with symptoms that might as easily be caused by trendy workaholism. The victims are tired, depressed and anxious in addition to suffering from flu-like symptoms. In severe cases, the patients cannot even get out of bed. The illness is not fatal.

These victims have had a tough time getting anyone, especially the federal government, to take them seriously.

For years, the government refused to do adequate research on chronic fatigue syndrome, even when Congress ordered that research. Up until two years ago, scientists from the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control were apt to say that the disease was a figment of the patient's imagination.

Only constant grass-roots pressure from people with chronic fatigue syndrome has produced any action from the government. In 1988, Congress, under heavy lobbying from the victims, appropriated $1 million to the NIH for research into the disease and ordered NIH to investigate any links with AIDS or cancer.

So far, the government has little to show for its work except an ambiguous "surveillance" system of four cities to get a better count of the number of victims. Barry Sleight, a volunteer lobbyist with the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Information Institute, told us that the government scientists "are supposed to unleash their dogs on this disease, and that hasn't happened yet."

An outbreak of chronic fatigue syndrome in Incline Village, Nev., in 1984 is typical of how the government has handled the disease. Two CDC researchers were dispatched to the town. They took blood samples from the victims and reached no conclusions.

Dr. Paul Cheney, a leading independent investigator into chronic fatigue syndrome, had asked the CDC to investigate the Incline Village outbreak.

Cheney is one of the independent researchers who released the study earlier this week linking chronic fatigue syndrome to the family of viruses responsible for AIDS.

Another researcher working with Cheney, Dr. Daniel Peterson, believes chronic fatigue syndrome has had to stand in line behind AIDS research in America.

Since 1985, the CDC has not conducted any lab testing of blood samples of chronic fatigue sufferers. The government research lab hasn't even supported a consistent label for the disease, which has gone through four name changes in five years.

It took the CDC until 1988 to come up with a working definition of chronic fatigue syndrome, and there is still no test for the disease. Doctors can only diagnose patients by ruling out other ailments.

There are some recent signs of movement at the CDC. Dr. Walter Gunn, the head of the CDC investigative team looking into chronic fatigue, told us that the CDC no longer considers the disease a mental illness. Instead, the depression that victims suffer, he said, is a result of the illness, not the cause of it. Gunn is beginning case studies of chronic fatigue patients, which he hopes to finish within a year. He says the study may give the CDC answers about what causes chronic fatigue syndrome.

Taxpayer abuse group forming

In Midland there is the nucleus of a group forming — Citizens to Abolish Taxpayer Abuse — whose purpose will be to keep taxing entities fiscally responsible and accountable to the taxpayers of the city and county of Midland.

Once a year the taxing bodies each hold a public hearing before adopting their proposed budgets. Those who appear to voice their objections know going in that no attention will be paid to their protestations.

It is time, through this group, to turn a whisper into a roar that cannot be ignored.

Insatiable greed on the part of those in high places provides the lubricant that is taking our wonderful country into debt from which we may not recover unless we act NOW.

Our republic is not working because we send politicians to their seats and offices and assume they will keep those lofty promises. Instead they use our tax dollars to ensure their next election.

We as citizens are not without guilt. Our lethargy and laziness create the atmosphere in which tax abuse thrives. We deserve whatever befalls us.

Our alternative is to stand up, band together and speak out! Pats on the back and cheerleaders are not what we need. If you are ready to take action and willing to spend time and effort, we want and need you! If not, God help us all.

Please call me at 697-1590 and become a part of the solution to this devastating problem.

Abortion attitude in letter frightening

In regards to the Sept. 12 letter by Daniel Ball "Who will judge murders?" which compared women who choose to terminate a pregnancy to the atrocities of World War II, there are many first-hand accounts of Nazi terror by survivors of the Holocaust. The images they recall of cheering soldiers separating family members, torturing and murdering loved ones as relatives watched can hardly be compared to any other event in modern history.

Ball would now like us to believe that a woman and her doctor who have made the agonizing, private decision to obtain an abortion — for whatever reason — bear a relationship to the perpetrators of Nazi genocide.

In his conclusion (or is it a warning?), he reminds us that these Nazi war defendants were found guilty and hanged. Certainly he isn't advocating hanging as an appropriate punishment for women who disagree with his point of view or have broken his "higher law?" The absurdity from a man who reads the "Word of God" is indeed frightening.

TOM WICKER

Bush risks losing perspective over Gulf

If Henry Kissinger were not very much alive he would be rolling over in his grave at President Bush's decision to let the Soviet Union involve itself in Middle East peace efforts — a possibility that in Cold War days Kissinger opposed with theological intensity.

Wicker

With equal fervor, many Americans despise terrorism. They must be thunderstruck to see Secretary of State Baker off to Damascus for amicable talks with President Hafez al-Assad, even though the Bush administration holds Syria responsible for the bombing of Pan Am 103, and other notorious acts.

These are striking examples of the extent to which Bush, even if he did maintain his vacation schedule, has placed the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and his determination to reverse it, at the top of his administration's priorities.

They may be defensible decisions, with the Cold War over and Assad sending troops to help defend Saudi Arabia; but is the crisis in the desert really the most important problem facing Americans?

Not at all. West Germany and the Soviet Union, for instance, now have agreed on how to share the costs of Soviet troop withdrawals from East Germany; so German reunification actually will take place on Oct. 3, about two weeks from now.

In the long run, this might be the most important event of 1990, or the coming decade; but it's taking place in a vacuum of public and perhaps official discussion, owing to the Middle East frenzy created by a dedicated administration and a headline-happy press.

Only five weeks ago the major topics of American political discussion were the nomination of David Souter to the Supreme Court, the $50 billion savings and loan scandal that made Neil Bush a household name, an economy that even an upbeat president called "sluggish," his broken pledge to oppose new taxes, and efforts to deal with the budget deficit.

None of these matters have disappeared or been managed. All have taken second place to the idea of the U.S. standing tall in the desert, in opposition to aggression and in defense of oil.

It's not clear which comes first, and both are admittedly important; but so are other problems that existed before Saddam Hussein loosed his tanks — problems that will not be solved by more troops from Egypt or more presidential backslapping in Helsinki.

In particular, that sluggish U.S. economy, and the dubious determination of Democrats and Republicans alike to raise taxes anyway, demands Bush's attention as much as does the Middle East.

An economic collapse at home would make a major military commitment abroad incongruous, if not impossible, even with Saudi money as a backup. And what would distinguish one supposed superpower from another if each tried to maintain a military front on top of an economy sliding into ruin?

It has largely escaped notice, moreover, in Americans' persistent innocence of even their own history, that Bush has reverted to the sort of imperial presidential conduct that the Vietnam War should have taught the nation to question.

It's true that he has kept Congress informed about his Middle East policy; but the strategy, decisions and announced goals all have been his, including one that could backfire — to expel Iraq from Kuwait and restore the emirate.

Few now dispute that goal; but suppose Iraq suddenly withdraws from Kuwait, contradicting Saddam but apparently bowing to overpowering opposition as well as to Bush's demands.

That would bring about the end of the blockade, the embargo and the anti-Iraq coalition, force Bush to bring U.S. troops home and leave Iraq unscathed as a military power — perhaps, having defied the U.S. and the world without real loss, even enhanced as a dominant voice in the Middle East.

Bush's imperial crisis management might not then seem so impressive; both Congress and the public might ask some embarrassing questions, such as: Who was the real winner? And who took the U.S. out on a limb that could be cut off behind it?

Tom Wicker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

U.S. ally has its own interests to follow

The secret is out. Germany is now the most reluctant of dragons when it comes to supporting the Western allies in the Middle East.

I asked a German acquaintance, Otto Kraus, why Germany has refused to help the U.S. in its battle with Iraq.

Buchwald

With tears in his eyes Otto replied, "We don't have any money."

"Come off it, Otto. What do you mean Germany doesn't have any money?"

He explained, "Iraq won't pay us for all the poison gas equipment and the biological weapons we sent them. They won't even pay for the nuclear machinery that we delivered. We're stuck with so many bills Germany can't afford to get into a quarrel with Iraq at this time."

"Why not?"

"Because Saddam Hussein has been one of our best customers. We are unable to sell him anything now. However, once the embargo is lifted we want Iraq to remember us with kindness."

"That's fair, and yet don't you feel an obligation to the U.N. countries who are spitting mad that Iraq annexed Kuwait?"

"We don't like it, but you must remember that Germany annexed a lot of territory at the beginning of World War II, so we're not in a position to criticize anybody else. It is unreasonable that we should be singled out because we won't send troops to Saudi Arabia."

"Does this have anything to do with your constitution?"

"No, it's because it's too hot there. German troops hate the heat, that's why we never did well in North Africa."

"Otto, you owe it to the United States. We helped rebuild your nation out of the rubble. We initiated the Berlin airlift to protect you from the Russians. We bought every camera Germany could make. Now that the chips are down, your people should reciprocate and come to our aid."

"Of course we should, but that means sending troops to the desert. Are you sure you want us to do that?"

"I'm very sure. After all, the oil in Kuwait is your oil as well as ours."

"Nobody knows this, but we are in fact assisting the United States in the Middle East."

"How?"

"We are supplying stereo equipment to U.S. PXes. This is top-of-the-line stuff you don't even find in Crazy Eddie's."

"I hate to tell you, Otto, but Germany is considered the 'cowardly lion' of the Western World."

"It doesn't matter what the world thinks as long as we can get Iraq to pay its bills."

"Once you had a reputation for being a bully — now everyone says that you are a wimp."

"What business is it of yours what we do?" Otto asked.

I replied, "Because I have a vested interest in everything Germany does. I own a Mercedes-Benz."

Otto defended himself, "All we have been doing in the Middle East is following orders."

"Whose orders?"

"The German Central Bank's."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Associated Press

Today is Thursday, September 20th, the 263rd day of 1990. There are 102 days left in the year. This is the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah.

On September 20th, 1519, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan set out from Spain on a voyage to find a western passage to the Indies. Magellan was killed en route, but one of his ships eventually circled the globe.

On this date:

In 1870, Italian troops took control of the Papal States, leading to the unification of Italy.

In 1947, former New York City Mayor Fiorello La Guardia died.

Souter hearing ends; GOP presses for quick vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee completed hearings on Supreme Court nominee David Souter on Wednesday with all signs pointing to quick approval.

Committee chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., tentatively set a committee vote for next Thursday, while confident Republicans were already looking ahead to the timing of a vote by the full Senate.

Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole and Sen. Orrin Hatch, a senior member of the judiciary panel, said there should be a quick final vote so Souter could take his place as the nation's 105th Supreme Court justice in time for the start of the fall term on Oct. 1.

While some lawmakers have voiced reservations, none has spoken out against Souter. And several members of the Judiciary Committee told him as his three days of testimony neared an end on Monday that his confirmation was all but certain.

Informal speeches supporting him were already beginning on the Senate floor on Wednesday.

A Democrat, Sen. J. James Exon of Nebraska, said Souter would be fair to those who came before him and "that is all we can ask and all we can expect from a member of the Supreme Court."

A number of Republicans added their praise, including John Chafee, R-R.I., who said that Souter had been careful to avoid commitments on key issues but "if we want to take a leap of faith, Judge Souter, in my judgment is the best one to take that leap with."

The committee on Wednesday heard conflicting views on whether Souter, who has spent most of his 51 years living in a small New Hampshire town, was sensitive to the concerns of minorities.

Wesley Williams Jr., a Washington attorney who traced his friendship with Souter back to Harvard College and Harvard Law School, told the committee that Souter was "fundamentally fair, lacking in prejudice."

Williams said he was confident Souter would be "prepared to do the right thing" in fighting discrimination once on the high court.

However, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he had "a considerable amount of unease" about Souter's appreciation of civil rights issues based on his record as a judge. Souter's comments during three days of testimony at the confirmation hearings appeared "more enlightened," Simon said, but he wondered whether that represented personal growth or political acumen.

A leading conservative on Wednesday also opposed Souter, questioning his moral underpinnings on a different issue — abortion.

Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, said based on Souter's record he was "absolutely certain ... that Judge Souter has a permissive view toward abortion."

An anti-abortion member of the committee, Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said he, too, was troubled but, reflecting the view of many conservatives, said he would give the nominee the benefit of the doubt.

Perhaps Souter "had never really given it deep thought," said Humphrey.

Despite doubts put forth on both ends of the political spectrum, no stated opposition to Souter has emerged in the Senate.

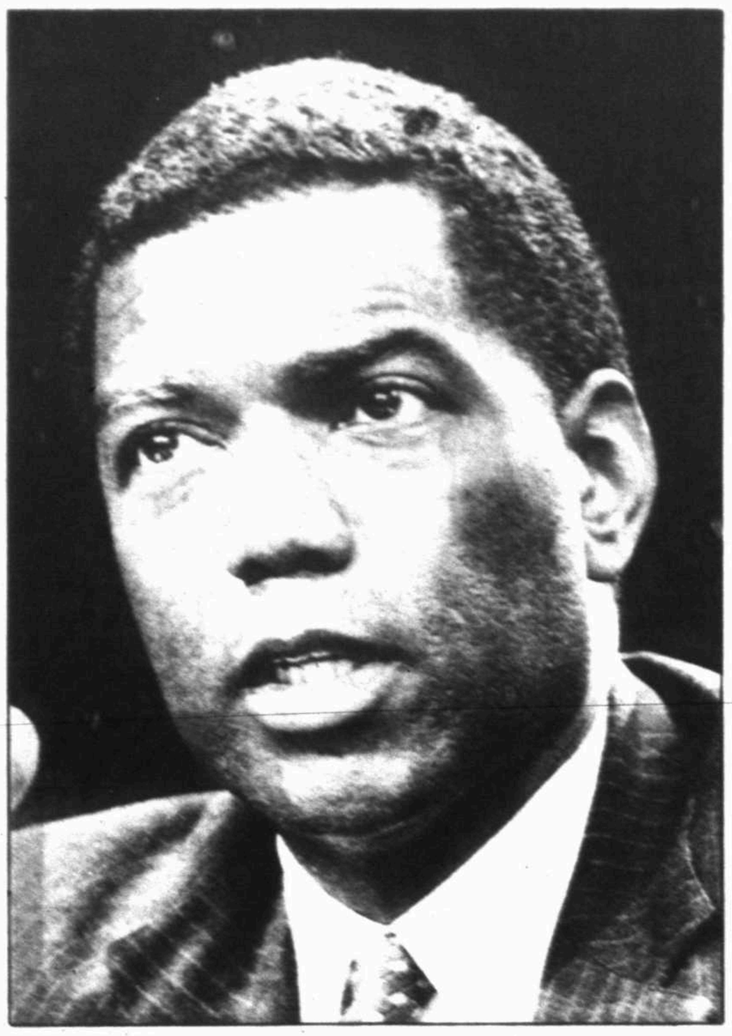

Some witnesses at the hearings implored Biden to bring Souter back to the stand for more questions, but he refused. He said the schedule for the confirmation vote was being worked out with the Republicans, who were pushing for quick action.

"After three days and 18 hours of often grueling congressional testimony, Judge Souter has demonstrated to America that he deserves a place on our nation's highest court," said Dole, R-Kan.

"I urge the Judiciary Committee to act as quickly as possible so that Judge Souter can be confirmed by the full Senate before the Supreme Court begins its October term," he said.

Hatch, R-Utah, a senior member of the committee, said Souter would be handicapped if he didn't join the court on time.

"I want him on the court by Oct. 1," Hatch said. By law, the court session begins that day, the first Monday in October.

Drive aims at nationwide preparedness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Red Cross launched Wednesday its first-ever nationwide campaign to educate families on preparing for natural disasters such as earthquakes, fires, floods, hurricanes and tornadoes.

In a kickoff ceremony featuring Marilyn Quayle, wife of the vice president, and Sesame Street's Cookie Monster, the relief organization said it hopes the yearlong drive will make at least a million households more disaster-ready by October 1991.

Mrs. Quayle, who has made disaster relief and preparedness a personal cause, recalled that when she was an Indianapolis schoolgirl "my parents and teachers made sure I knew what to do if a funnel cloud dipped out of the sky." But her experiences as a relief volunteer in the wake of Hurricane Hugo last year taught her that many Americans remain uneducated and unprepared for such events, she said.

She remembered the pain of one South Carolina woman whose family had been left with "no clothes, no food, no home" by Hugo. "I realized then," Mrs. Quayle said, "just how indiscriminate nature can be."

The Red Cross drive, titled "Get Ready for Anything. Anytime. Anywhere," begins as the nation nears the anniversary of Hugo and the Northern California earthquake, which together killed 145 people, injured more than 11,400 and caused more than $16 billion in property damage.

The campaign will involve each of the organization's 2,700 chapters, ranging from disaster preparedness demonstrations in Cincinnati's Fountain Square to distribution of "Get Ready" kits to schools in the Carolinas.

It also will include a series of print and television advertisements, prepared without charge by a Los Angeles agency, and a special public service announcement at the conclusion of an NBC mini series, "The Great L.A. Earthquake," in November.

A detailed "Family Survival Guide" is available through local Red Cross chapters.

Government may try to operate Nevada brothel

MUSTANG, Nev. (AP) — The Mustang Ranch, Nevada's oldest and most infamous legal brothel, shut down after filing for bankruptcy liquidation. A trustee says the U.S. government will try to operate the business until it can be sold.

A lawyer for owner Joe Conforte said Wednesday that Internal Revenue Service harassment killed a $5 million deal to sell the bordello — more than 100 bedrooms on a 440-acre ranch — and forced it into liquidation in Federal Bankruptcy Court.

Officials said Conforte owes $13 million in federal taxes. Conforte has said the debt is no more than $7 million.

The Mustang Ranch has frequently been in the headlines, as an illegal operation, then the state's first legal bordello. One man was killed on its premises; at least one wedding was held there.

The bordello, 10 miles east of Reno, has been under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since 1982. Under Chapter 11, a business is allowed to operate under court supervision to pay off creditors; under Chapter 7, its assets are liquidated and the proceeds distributed among creditors.

Assistant bankruptcy trustee Bill Knudson said the bankruptcy court plans to supervise the business and "watch the money." He added: "That's what our goal is, to keep it in operation until they can sell it."

Conforte attorney Pete Perry declined to name prospective purchasers who had agreed to pay $5 million for the property in the deal that fell through.

Ron Smith, chief of special procedures for the IRS in Nevada, said he is required by the federal tax code to do a background investigation in any case involving sale of a tax debtor's properties.

Conforte and his wife, Sally, began operations at the ranch in the late 1950s when prostitution was tolerated but illegal in Nevada. The operation was burned down in 1960 by local authorities who contended it was a public nuisance.

In 1971, Conforte won Storey County approval for the brothel, pioneering the statewide movement to allow prostitution in most Nevada counties. Now prostitution is allowed in 11 of Nevada's 14 rural counties, but forbidden in the counties where Reno, Las Vegas and Carson City are located.

A prospectus for one of the unsuccessful attempts to sell stock listed gross revenues for the brothel of $5.6 million in 1986, down from $5.9 million the year before, but a 1986 profit of $917,000 compared with $848,000 in 1985.

Anti-drug funds not reaching cities, mayors say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Conference of Mayors urged Congress Wednesday to pass legislation speeding anti-drug funds to large cities, saying the money allocated under a bill passed four years ago is getting bogged down in state and federal bureaucracies.

Mayor Robert Isaac of Colorado Springs, president of the conference, said that in a survey of 30 cities, more than two out of five said they think they are losing the war on drugs.

"The system, as currently designed, is not capable of doing what it was intended to do," Isaac said at a news conference. "It is not capable of getting the federal anti-drug funds through the states to the cities where the drug war is the hottest."

He called for approval of legislation providing that cities eligible for a minimum grant of $50,000 would receive it directly instead of having it passed through the states. The measure has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee and is pending as an amendment to a crime bill.

Isaac said the survey, conducted in January, showed that city governments had received only 15 percent of the $150 million available in the state and local grant program. He said calculations by the mayors' conference showed they were entitled to 65 percent.

"The money was bogged down in the bureaucracies of the federal and state governments," the Colorado mayor said.

Isaac noted that William Bennett, national drug policy director, said this month, "The drug problem in general, nationwide, is no longer getting worse and in some very significant aspects is now getting better. Not victory, but success. If we keep pressing the way we have been pressing, and if we keep our commitments, we will get where we want to go."

In the survey, Isaac said, 41 percent of the cities said that taking all efforts into consideration they feel they are losing the war on drugs. Twenty-eight percent said they are winning and most of the rest "described a situation somewhere in between," he said.

NATION IN BRIEF

FCC sets phone rate 'price cap'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday adopted new "price cap" regulations for the eight largest local phone companies that the FCC said should save long-distance callers billions of dollars over the next four years.

The rules, which go into effect Jan. 1, 1991, will reduce the rates the local phone companies charge for interstate services, such as charges for connecting long-distance companies with the local phone network. Lower charges to the long-distance companies will mean reduced charges for long-distance customers, the FCC said.

The commission last year adopted price caps for the nation's largest long-distance provider, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., thus ending two decades in which AT&T's profits, not prices, were controlled under "rate of return" regulation.

The local companies also will be required to share with customers any profits beyond a specified upper limit. If the company gets too profitable, it would have to return all its profits to customers.

Firms agree to cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine major chemical polluters plan sizable reductions in cancer-causing emissions from 30 plants states over the next three years as a result of arm-twisting by the Environmental Protection Agency.

EPA Administrator William K. Reilly said Tuesday the planned pollution cuts, although only a small portion of the 2.4 billion pounds of toxic industrial chemicals released annually, are significant because they come from plants where the cancer risks are considered highest.

The nine corporations are among the major petrochemical companies in the nation. They are BASF, Dow Chemical Co., Exxon Corp., General Electric, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Occidental, Reichhold, Texaco and Texas Petrochemical.

Most of the reductions, totaling nearly 9.5 million pounds annually, were scheduled to be made from within a few months to two years.

Woman may keep plate

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An appeals court ruled a member of the Ku Klux Klan can keep her "ARYAN-1" personalized license plate because state law prohibits obscene or profane words but not inflammatory ones.

It was the latest ruling in a four-year legal battle over a plate owned by Mary E. Carr, a member of the Missouri Klan.

Duane Benton, the department's director, said an appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court is being considered.

After a complaint from the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith, the revenue department ordered Ms. Carr in September 1986 to surrender the license plate it had issued three months earlier.

Busing upheld in 1971

In 1971, the Supreme Court upheld the use of busing to achieve racial desegregation in schools.

House approves $283 billion defense bill, cuts SDI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday approved a $283 billion defense bill that would make wholesale cuts in President Bush's fiscal 1991 budget request for the Strategic Defense Initiative and B-2 stealth bomber.

Voting along party lines, the House adopted the military blueprint for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 despite the threat of a presidential veto and sharp differences with the Senate-approved bill.

Among the major provisions of the bill is a $2.4 billion cut in Bush's $4.7 billion proposal for SDI, a halt in production of the B-2 bomber and a reduction of 129,500 troops.

House and Senate members will meet later this month to thrash out a final defense bill. Last month, the Senate approved a $289 billion military bill that left the president's B-2 request intact and trimmed $1 billion from SDI.

Further revisions in the measure could come if congressional and White House negotiators break their impasse over how to pare the federal deficit and at the same time decide on a final defense total for fiscal 1991.

House Democrats argued that their bill reflects a lessening Soviet threat to the West while trying to assist the military prepare for conflicts in the Third World, including Iraq.

"It takes the first step toward buying the right defense for a new era," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Republicans accused their colleagues of business as usual — filling the defense bill with pet projects for their constituents.

Basin in 'crisis' concerning teen mothers, CAPP says

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Children having children. No one likes to see it happen, but an even worse scene is children beating children.

Teen-age parents who lack maturity are at a high risk for abusing their babies, according to Carol Steele, executive director of Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program (CAPP).

Ms. Steele said adolescents having babies involves a myriad of problems. To provide some answers to teen-age parents, Ms. Steele spoke at a Wednesday afternoon press conference at Region XVIII Education Service Center.

Representatives of various Permian Basin agencies and teen parent programs spoke on the resources they offer young parents.

Ms. Steele said CAPP, a child abuse prevention program of Family Services of Midland, collaborated with other human service agencies to research area services for young parents.

"This collaboration indicated sufficient resources were definitely lacking," Ms. Steele said.

"The process of the study proved to be more valuable than the information," Ms. Steele said. "We found a lot of support and sharing among community services," she said.

Despite all the services offered, Ms. Steele said, they aren't enough. "We are experiencing a crisis in West Texas," she said. "Teen-agers need support for several years after having a baby. They are also at a high risk for dropping out of school."

Ms. Steele said about 1,281 teen-agers gave birth in the Permian Basin in 1989.

Although she didn't give birth in 1989, Sandra Sanchez, 17, a senior at Lee High School, married Daniel Sanchez, 19, on March 11, 1989. "I wasn't pregnant when I got married," she said. But she conceived soon after her marriage and gave birth to her son, Daniel Junior, on March, 13, 1990.

Sandra, who works part time as a nurse's aid at Terrace West Nursing Home, said she wants to finish school and become a registered nurse. Her husband, who is a freshman at Midland College, also expects to begin working part time soon.

The young couple lived with Sandra's parents for awhile, in their own place for awhile, and now reside with Daniel's parents.

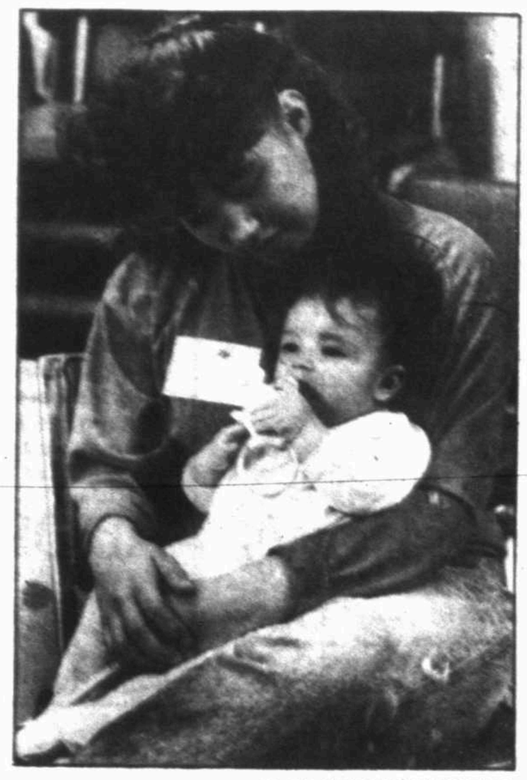

"Once the baby started getting sick, we really needed some help," Sandra said. She added that moving in with Daniel's parents provided her with day care and kept her from dropping out of school.

Ms. Steele said about 75 percent of teen-age mothers are at risk for dropping out of school. Young mothers are also at risk for needing welfare and are possible child abusers, according to recent studies.

Isabel Rey, parent involvement specialist for Midland Independent School District (MISD), offered another startling statistic. "About 50 percent of the girls under 17 who give birth will get pregnant again within a year or two," she said.

Ms. Rey said that, despite the negative experience of trying to cope with an infant during the teenage years, teen-age mothers are likely to repeat the pattern of giving birth at a young age.

Fair to offer life skills

Staff Report

Permian Basin CAPP (Child Abuse Prevention Program) will host a Teen Parent Fair for all teen-age parents from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Oct. 6 at First United Methodist Church.

At least 14 agencies and organizations will join CAPP in offering a full day of life skills and parenting information.

Guest speaker will be John Chacon of Project Redirection in El Paso.

Afternoon sessions will include "Can We Talk," a session on communication skills; "Baby Blues," which focuses on infant health, "You're Important, Too" and "My Parents Read to Me," on preparing a child for reading.

There will be no admission fee. Day care will be available and transportation will be offered to teen-age parents and their children in Midland and Odessa. Lunch will be served free of charge and a style show will be presented.

Co-sponsors of the event are CAPP, Midland Memorial Hospital and High Sky Children's Ranch.

Potential attendees must register by Sept. 28 by calling 689-1000 in Midland or (915) 335-7912 in Odessa. Persons outside the Midland/Odessa area should call (915) 684-6031.

Students ace ACT

■ Superintendent Joe Baressi is pleased with an overall increase in Midland students' scores on the college entrance exam.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Once again Midland students topped state and national averages with their college entrance examination scores.

What's more, their Odessa counterparts also topped statewide scores on the American College Testing (ACT) program test, a college entrance exam similar to the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT).

The average composite score — of verbal and mathematic skills — of Texas students on the 1990 ACT test was 19.8 out of a possible top score of 26. Students nationally scored 20.6. Ector County Independent School District's (ECISD's) average composite score was 20.1, above the statewide, but below the national score by a mere five-tenths of a point.

Midland Independent School District (MISD) students (152 in all) scored 21.2, topping both state and national scores.

The ACT program test is an optional test for students to take, according to Chuck Hornung, spokesperson for ECISD.

"We usually have considerably fewer students taking the ACT than take the SAT," he said, noting that only 111 ECISD students took the test.

Midland High School (MHS) students achieved a score of 21.4, only four-tenths higher, than Lee High School (LHS) students' score of 21.0.

MHS topped all previous scores since 1986 while LHS' scores have experienced increases and decreases since 1986. The Texas Education Agency (TEA) cautioned that direct comparisons between 1990 results and previous years should not be made. The TEA stated that the 1990 ACT test is "an all-new enhanced version of the ACT."

The results listed here have been translated into equivalent scores on the enhanced version, however.

Although Midland and Odessa school districts have not yet analyzed recently received data nor broken them down into ethnic statistics, statewide ACT scores indicate that Texas' minority students increased their scores over 1989 levels.

The composite ACT score for Texas' black students in 1990 increased to 17.1 from 16.6 in 1989. Mexican-American students' composite score, however, was only up three-tenths of a point, from 17.6 to 17.9.

In addition, the data shows that black students' ACT composite scores have increased since 1986, while the number of black students taking the examination has increased from 2,779 in 1986 to 3,881 in 1990. Mexican-American students' scores statewide have increased from 1986, while the number of Mexican-American students taking the test has increased from 6,463 to 9,115 over the same period.

Hornung said that he thought the ACT program test was more "minority friendly" than the SAT which has been perceived as being racially biased against minorities in the past due to specific terminology.

"The SAT also doubles the verbal score and the ACT does not," he said.

In a news release, Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby said, "It is gratifying to see the increases in minority student scores on the ACT. ... This shows that more of our minority students are interested in pursuing higher education. This is particularly significant because we expect that, beginning with this current school year, more than 50 percent of our total student enrollment in Texas will be minority."

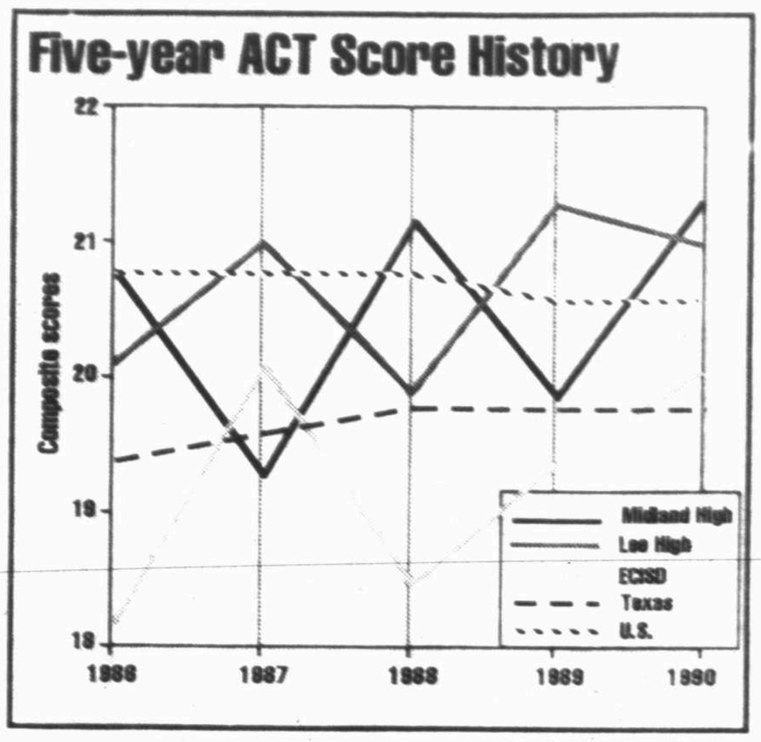

The ACT is designed to measure students' readiness for higher education and their ability to perform college-level tasks. The new ACT places greater emphasis on rhetorical skills, contains more advanced mathematics items and features a new reading test to measure inferential and reasoning skills.

According to information from Kirby's office, 49,047 students took the ACT in Texas, compared to 38,586 in 1986.

H.A. Tuck, Midland College spokesperson said that the college accepts both ACT and SAT scores, or either score alone.

"Some colleges may accept one or other," Hornung said.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said he was pleased with Midland students' scores, and that further analysis of the ACT scores would be presented at the Tuesday board meeting.

City likely to OK application for street improvement grant

■ City Councilman J.D. Faircloth says a state grant would relieve the local tax burden for a downtown traffic signal makeover.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The city of Midland is looking at applying for up to $240,000 in state grant money to fund the revamping of downtown traffic signals and possibly other street projects.

The money also could be used to widen streets or construct two-way left turn lanes, said Gary Saunders, traffic engineer coordinator.

Texas cities with fewer than 200,000 residents can apply for the grants, which the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is expected to award on Dec. 21.

The Midland City Council is scheduled to review the proposal at a Tuesday meeting. Application deadline is Sept. 28.

Saunders said he is working on a list of possible projects that could qualify for the grant money. The state would pay for about 75 percent of the projects, while the city must pay for 25 percent, he said.

The top prospect will probably be upgrading as many as 31 traffic signals in the city's "central business district," which includes a majority of the downtown area, Saunders said.

"It realistically could be used for projects other than the traffic signalization," Saunders said. "It's much broader. If we can justify it, it could be used for street widening or street striping."

The grant, however, would not cover signalization of intersections that do not have traffic lights, he said.

Some of the downtown traffic signals date back to the 1950s, while a majority of the others have not been upgraded since 1974, Saunders said.

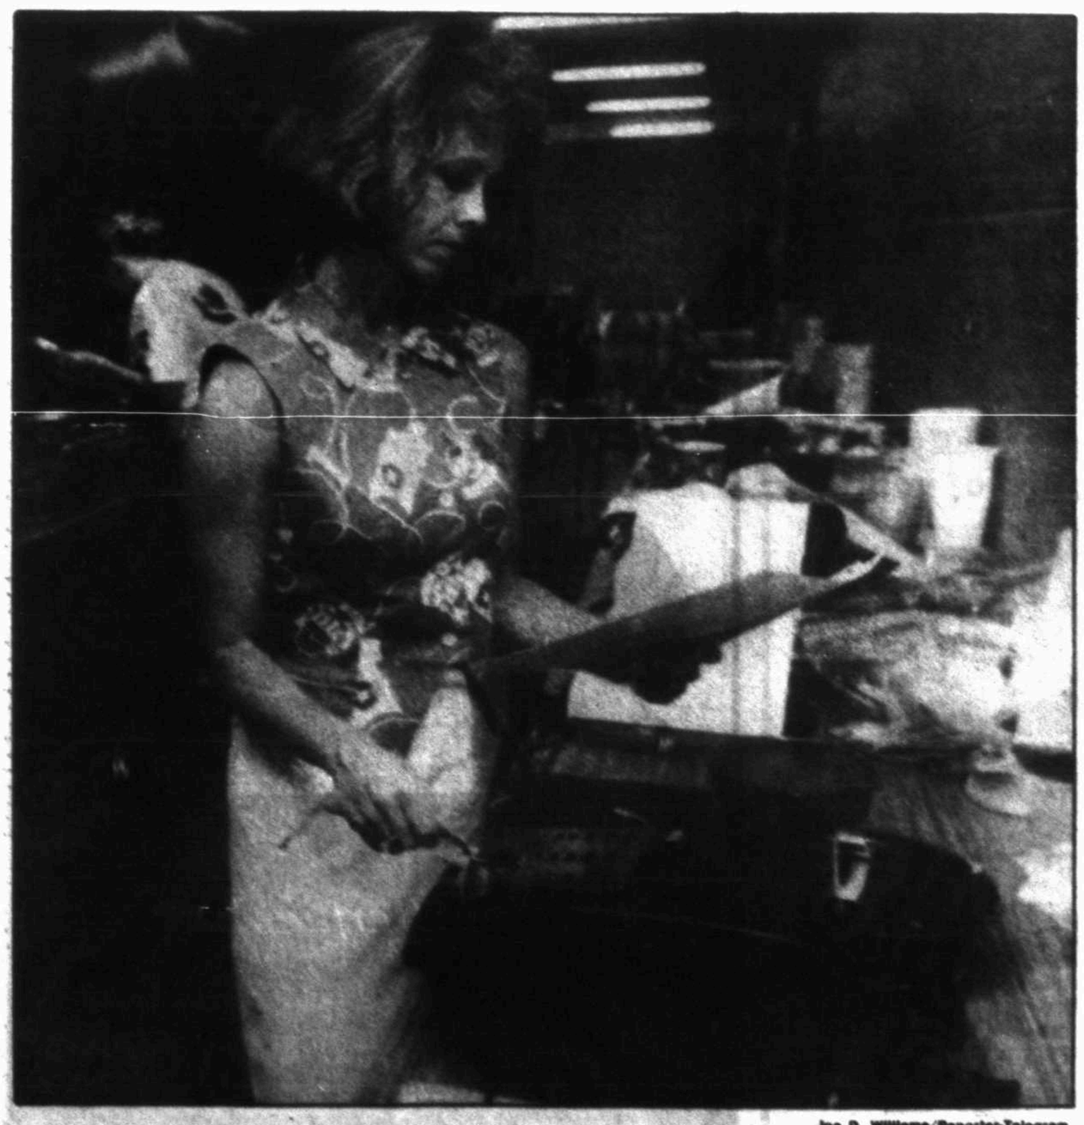

Revamping the signals would cost about $200,000, with the city paying about $50,000 of that, he said.

Downtown traffic lights already are synchronized, so motorists during certain times of the day can avoid stopping at each intersection.

An upgraded system would allow the city to create a "closed loop," whereby officials could use a centralized computer to control and monitor the traffic signals, Saunders said. City technicians would install the system, he added.

Methodist agency to offer open adoption service

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

An agreement between two Methodist social service agencies will provide another option for open adoptions in the Permian Basin, Methodist leaders said Wednesday.

Area Methodist Outreach Services (AMOS), a Midland-based emergency assistance program, will give local birth parents and adoptive parents access to the Methodist Mission Home of San Antonio's adoption pool under the new contract, said AMOS Director Margaret Thomas-Mouton.

It also gives them the choice of meeting or not meeting their prospective partners in the adoption process, she said.

"The unique part is that the Methodist Mission Home is the first of the traditional mainline adoption agencies to do open adoptions," said Larry Watson, vice-president of the home.

He said the home's May decision to offer open adoptions was based on its belief that the open form is the healthiest method of adoption.

"Adoption is the only area of social work where secrecy is encouraged, but with open adoption, children don't have to wonder about their birth parents, they know their origins," Watson said.

He said open adoption also gives more control to the adoptive parents, who can work with the birth parents to arrange the birth directly.

Watson said it changes the way the adoption agency functions as well. "We're advisors and enablers in helping the parents make their own adoption plans," he said.

"I believe open adoption is the adoption process of the 90s."

Since May, Methodist Mission Home has placed five children through open adoption and made ten matches between parents whose babies have not yet been born. In the agency's 95-year history, it has placed 5,000 children with adoptive parents.

Ms. Thomas-Mouton, a social worker with experience in adoption procedures, said birth parents and prospective adoptive parents of any religious faith can use AMOS or the San Antonio agency for adoptions. She said some adoptive parents will even locate their own birth parents and come to the agency solely for legal advice.

Jeff Kinsey and Scott Sprouse will be honorary pallbearers.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Jeff Lust, associate pastor of First Methodist Church and chairman of Area Methodist Outreach Service, from left, Margaret Thomas-Mouton, AMOS director, and Larry Watson, vice president of the Methodist Mission Home, announced the formation of an open adoption program in the Permian Basin Wednesday.

CAPP: Area lacks resources, survey shows

(From 1B)

"Experience doesn't teach them anything," Ms. Rey said, "what teen-age parents need is education."

Monica Villa, 15, an eighth-grader at Alamo Junior High School, said she gave birth to her three-month-old son, Michael Paul, when she was 14.

She said she decided to remain living with her mother and not get married. Monica said Midland Health Department offered her pre-natal care and followed up their services with well-baby care.

Ms. Steele recommended that organizations, including school districts, begin to put more emphasis on preventing pregnancies.

"We need to put more money into the problem in the beginning," she said.

"We have only 12 years to influence a child," Ms. Steele said, noting that many pregnancies occur at age 12.

Ms. Rey of MISD agreed, saying, "I am aware of sixth-graders who are sexually active."

Ms. Steele added that a recent report in the Houston Chronicle revealed that a 20-year-old female was a grandmother.

"The grandmother had her daughter when she was 10," she said. "Then her own daughter also gave birth at age 10. Education can prevent this from happening."

Persons attending the news conference represented various agencies which offer services for pregnant teen-agers, including MISD's Alternative High School, Midland Memorial Hospital, Family Planning Services, Parents Anonymous, Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc., Casa de Amigos, Catholic Charities Community Services, Ector County Independent School District's Teen Parent Center, Midland Health Department, Texas Department of Health and Aim High, ECISD's dropout recovery program.

CAPP is a child abuse prevention program of Family Services, a United Way agency of Midland and Odessa. CAPP's mission is to coordinate and increase all available resources for the prevention of child abuse. For more information call 685-3007.

Once both sets of parents have been matched, Ms. Thomas-Mouton or another adoption counselor will facilitate introductions — family backgrounds, family values and plans for the child's birth and future.

The early discussions and thorough legal papers should help prevent misunderstandings during the process. Watson said they also help build trust between the parents.

"I was at a match-meeting last week," said Watson. "When I asked who was going to hold the baby first (upon being born), the birth mother pointed to the adoptive mother and said, 'his mother will.'"

With open adoption, adoptive parents may be in touch with their child from the moment of birth.

The agency asks families involved in open adoptions to stay in contact with each other to answer questions about medical history and other issues that might come up later. It sponsors MAPLE, a support group for parents who have adopted through the home.

Watson said one mother he knew told her young adopted daughter to stand in the corner for some infraction of the rules. When the daughter said that her birth mother wouldn't make her do such a thing, the mother called up the birth mother, who confirmed to the daughter that she'd put her in the corner too.

"It's healthier for the kids," said Ms. Thomas-Mouton. "They don't have to wonder about their adoption and the parents don't have to make things up."

Besides AMOS, Lutheran Social Service of Texas, the Edna Gladney Home Permian Basin Chapter and several other local adoption agencies also provide open or partially open adoptions.

For more information on AMOS' adoption services, call Ms. Thomas-Mouton at 687-2667 or 1-800-VIA-LIFE.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Kidnapping

By Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 23-year-old man was arrested Wednesday and charged with kidnapping a woman Tuesday night, police said.

Bond for Stevie Q. Calicutt, 2761 Brentwood Drive, was set at $5,000 by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

According to police, the victim, Latricia L. Smith, 23, had gone to the suspect's residence about 11:30 p.m. to leave a message with the suspect's mother, who lived there. Parked in front of the residence, Calicutt allegedly entered Smith's car without her permission.

The suspect then reportedly argued with Smith and told her they were going to Wichita Falls. When she said no, the suspect allegedly threatened to kill her. He then forced the victim and her child into his home and then back into the car, according to reports.

When she said she had only $5, the suspect allegedly pulled a pocket knife and directed the victim to a 7-Eleven store at 8th Street and Grandview Avenue, where the suspect filled the car with gas.

At that time, Smith quickly drove off, leaving the suspect, and called police from another 7-Eleven store.

Police, responding to a gas drive-off call, arrested Calicutt in the 800 block of Grandview Avenue.

Assault

ODESSA — Police said they are investigating an alleged aggravated assault and kidnapping of an 18-year-old Hispanic woman that occurred between 11 p.m. Monday and 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The woman reportedly knew her attacker, a 21-year-old Hispanic man.

According to reports, the victim went to visit friends who lived in the 700 block of South Dixie Boulevard. When the victim found that her friends were not at home she decided to wait.

About 11 p.m. the suspect arrived at the residence and an argument between the victim and suspect ensued. He reportedly grabbed her arm, slapped her and forced her to walk to a house in the 2900 block of N. Hancock Avenue.

Once inside, the victim tried to escape but was repeatedly grabbed aggressively and slapped around, and subsequently was raped, police said.

After the assault, the two reportedly went to the home of the victim's mother. The victim said she did not attempt to escape because of fear.

When the suspect fell asleep, the woman went to another relative's home and notified police.

Traffic accidents

A pair of accidents at the intersection of the Interstate 20 access road and Farm to Market Road 1788 sent two people to local hospitals Wednesday night, officials said.

Spokesmen at the Midland and Odessa fire departments confirmed that emergency medical service vehicles transported one victim to Midland Memorial Hospital and one to Medical Center Hospital in Odessa at about 9:20 p.m.

The first accident apparently involved two vehicles, while the second apparently was a car-pedestrian accident perhaps related to the first one, the spokesmen said.

The names and conditions of the victims and the circumstances of the accidents were not available at press time because the Department of Public Safety had not yet completed its report.

Theft

An 85-year-old Midland woman was a victim of theft Tuesday by a man posing as a gas company employee, police said.

According to reports, Alma Roberson, 2105 W. Kentucky Avenue, answered a knock at her door about 2:30 p.m. After asking who was at the door, a man identified himself as an Energas employee.

After inviting the man inside, he told Roberson that the gas company had done some type of connection to her gas line and that she needed to pay him for the work.

The woman then showed the man where she kept her money. The thief then took approximately $122. The man then thanked the woman and left.

Roberson later discovered that her wedding ring set — which was located near the money — was missing. The estimated value of the ring set was $1,000.

The culprit was described as a white man in his early 20s, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighed about 145 pounds. He was wearing a white shirt and dark pants.

The man drove off in red pick-up truck.

Kidnapping

A Lamesa man allegedly kidnapped his wife Wednesday afternoon and remains at large, a Department of Public Safety spokeswoman said.

She said George Fuller, 18, left Lamesa with Nelda Chancy Fuller, 17, allegedly against her will, at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

He was last seen heading toward Midland or Odessa in a 1984 maroon four-door Pontiac, according to DPS reports.

GRANT: Signal revamp is priority awards Midland a grant, work on the signals and other projects would begin in February 1991, Saunders said.

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the city needs every penny it can get for upgrading traffic signals, so the council likely will approve applying for the grant.

"In general the council is very much in favor of it," Faircloth said. "Any grant we have will help us and keep the burden off taxpayers."

The councilman said revamping the signals has been a priority for the city.

"The council is concerned about our traffic lights, particularly on our major thoroughfares," he said. "We realize we have to replace our signal lights. Some of them don't work very well at all."

Local VFW post to honor POWs/MIA

Staff Report

Friday is National POW/MIA Recognition Day. All veterans' organizations are encouraged to honor American prisoners of war (POWs) or those missing in action (MIA).

Tall City Post 7208 Veterans of Foreign Wars and Ladies Auxiliary ceremony will be 7 p.m. Friday at the Midland post located at 1306 E. Taylor. A prayer and flag raising program will be presented. Red, white and blue balloons will be released in honor of all American members of the armed forces accounted for.

As of March 1, 1990, 2,304 Americans remain missing or unaccounted for as a result of the conflict in Southeast Asia.

Laura Graves, local POW/MIA chairman, encourages the public to write letters to elected U.S. officials, local newspapers and the Vietnamese.

Sessions OKs Hispanic agents' promotion

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William Sessions has accepted the recommendation of a court-appointed panel that he promote 11 Hispanic agents in the aftermath of a discrimination suit against the bureau, a spokesman said Wednesday night.

The panel of three outside lawyers was created last year after a federal judge found in 1988 that the FBI systematically discriminated against Hispanic agents in assignments and promotions.

One killed in post office shooting, woman kidnapped

PONTOTOC (AP) — Officers have joined in a ground and air search for a gunman who allegedly killed a man at a small-town general store, then fled with a hostage.

The suspect also bragged that he had killed two other men, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said.

The man was believed to be holding a woman he allegedly abducted and sexually assaulted Tuesday from Mason, about 20 miles south of here, DPS spokesman David Wells said.

The Midland DPS responded to a call for back-up assistance by supplying a helicopter.

Cox said authorities are looking for Michael Joseph Griffith, 35, believed to be from the Mason area although his driver's license shows a Brady address.

Cox said that about 9 a.m. Wednesday, a woman who operates the "Pontotoc Stop" country store picked up Griffith and a woman who were hitchhiking. The woman said they told her their car had broken down and asked to call for a wrecker.

About 9:30 a.m., Griffith pointed the pistol at the woman, who was alone in the store, Cox said.

'The fear is that he's laying low until nightfall, when he'll try to get out of there.'

— DPS spokesman Mike Cox

■ More state stories/8B

"He took her to a back room where they store feed, gagged her and tied her and put her face down on the floor," Cox said. He said the gunman told the woman that she would not be hurt if she remained quiet. The hitchhikers periodically returned to check on the woman, Cox said.

The woman told authorities that Pontotoc resident Ivan Hilton Herron, 52, at some point was brought at gunpoint into the store. But she said when he was told to lie on the floor next to the woman, he instead began wrestling with the gunman.

Cox said the gunman kept control of the gun, then allegedly took Herron out into the store and shot him several times.

Cox said Herron died of multiple gunshot wounds which were believed to have come from the pistol, although shotgun pellets were also found.

When the gunman returned, the woman told authorities, her husband and two other men entered the store. They were ordered into the storeroom and told to keep quiet.

At that point, about 11 a.m., the man stole the pickup truck and left with the woman, Cox said. Cox said police are treating the woman's disappearance as a kidnapping.

Wells said about seven DPS SWAT team members, at least one helicopter and three airplanes were called to help in the search for the suspect. The aircraft came from Midland and Dallas DPS offices and the U.S. Customs Service in San Angelo.

Cox said "numerous" Texas Rangers and five patrol troopers had blocked all major highways in Mason, San Saba and Llano Counties. The suspect was believed to be driving a 1982 brown and tan Ford SuperCab.

Cox said civilians had volunteered to help patrol the area along with the three law enforcement planes.

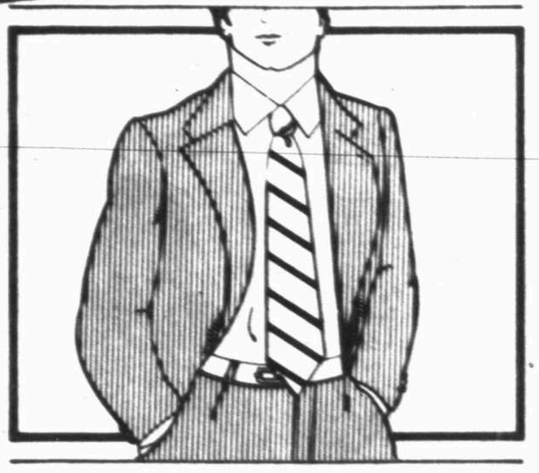

"We've been all over that area with aircraft, looking for the pickup," he said. "We think he's laying low. The fear is that he's laying low until nightfall, when he'll try to get out of there."

Key projects will move Australia into the 21st century

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A commercial spaceport, a futuristic city and a 220 mph train are on the drawing board to take Australia into the 21st century.

And federal and state governments are pursuing a politically fail-safe policy by letting private enterprise take most of the economic risk for the projects, estimated to cost $24 billion.

Environmental, social and financial hurdles remain for the projects:

— The Cape York spaceport hopes to launch U.S.-made satellites from Soviet rockets to take advantage of the rapidly growing commercial market.

— The city of the future, known by the unwieldy name of Multifunction Polis, is aimed at creating a high-tech center similar to California's Silicon Valley.

— The Very Fast Train would zip passengers the 650 miles from Sydney to Melbourne, Australia's two largest cities, in as little as three hours.

Officials are hoping for U.S. government approval for the spaceport, in northern Queensland state, to use Soviet Zenit rockets to launch American-built satellites.

The Cape York Space Agency, owned by Australia's Essington Ltd., has been waiting for nearly six months for Washington to decide whether to allow Essington's U.S. partner, United Technologies Corp., to take part in the project.

That would give Australian officials the go-ahead for a series of agreements with the Soviets to supply $308 million worth of rockets and technology over the next 10 years.

"It's all systems go, subject to Aboriginal and environmental issues being satisfactorily addressed," said Stephen Williams, general manager of the Cape York agency.

The federal and Queensland state governments have approved the project, but say they will not commit funds to it and will ensure that Aboriginal rights and environmental concerns are considered.

For its city of the future, the Australians have sought the assistance of one of the country's most visible and often-criticized trade partners.

Japan's large-scale investments in Australia, from skyscrapers to golf courses, have raised the ire of politicians and the public.

Aggies recognizing their potential in Texas political arena

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — How many Aggies does it take to win an election?

Ask Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, Texas A&M University Class of 1970. He'll tell you the numbers vary, but Aggie loyalty is one of the few constants in the rock 'em-sock 'em world of Texas politics.

And he's not joking.

"Everybody who runs for public office depends on people they know," Mauro said. "In my case, I have a lot of friends from A&M, and that's helped me immensely in two statewide races."

Mauro built his 1982 campaign around a network of Aggies who brought him fresh volunteers and instant support across the state. His victory marked the first time an Aggie was elected to statewide office since James Earl Rudder left the land commissioner's office in 1958.

This year, Mauro is one of four statewide candidates being referred to collectively as the All-Aggie ticket. Consider the slate:

—For governor, Clayton Williams, Republican. Class of '54, Corps of Cadets.

—For comptroller, John Sharp, Democrat. Class of '72, Corps of Cadets, student body president.

—For land commissioner, Mauro, Democrat. Class of '70, student government activist and freshman football team.

—For agriculture commissioner, Rick Perry, Republican. Class of '72, Corps of Cadets, yell leader.

Add three high-profile congressional candidates — incumbent Reps. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, and Greg Laughlin, D-West Columbia, and state Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville — and the stage is set for a record turnout of voters whose blood runs closer to maroon than red.

"There's a real loyalty between Aggies for Aggies," said Austin political consultant Karl Rove, a key strategist for Perry's campaign. "There is a closeness there. They have an esprit de corps, and a sense they are coming into their own."

For almost a century, state government has been dominated by alumni of the University of Texas, A&M's archrival.

State and national leaders such as John Connally, Allan Shivers, Ray Farabee, Lloyd Doggett and many others have traditionally moved with ease from the offices of UT student government to the halls of the state Capitol.

That pattern changed, however, in the 1970s when UT's student association crossed the UT System board of regents, lost favor with the student body and was temporarily dismantled.

At the same time, about 100 miles east at Texas A&M, student government was gaining popularity. Leaders like Mauro and Sharp were working hard to unite factions that previously had divided the campus.

Some students who were active at A&M in that era say this year's crop of Aggie political candidates is a direct result of that work.

"It may have been a coincidence, but about the time there was a vacuum in young leadership at the state Capitol, a lot of Aggies found their way to Austin," said Perry, who was Sharp's roommate at A&M. "UT had always been a sort of training ground, but there just wasn't anybody filling those slots."

Farabee, a UT student body president who later served in the Texas Senate, said that theory is plausible, though he downplayed the rift between UT student government and the board of regents.

Farabee said A&M is experiencing the same evolution UT underwent years ago, and it will be interesting to see if the school can maintain its closeness and traditions as the student body becomes larger and more diverse.

For now, however, supporters of the All-Aggie ticket believe the pattern clearly works to their benefit.

"The university has grown. Its reputation has expanded, and these people are coming of political age," Rove said. "All these things have reached critical mass."

Turnout in precincts near the university and other places where large numbers of Aggies live has run near 80 percent in recent elections. Rove said that trend indicates that high percentages of Aggies vote, which magnifies the importance of their support.

"I don't think you can quantify it in terms of money and votes, but it means a lot of both," he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Personal recommendations mean more than you realize. Be certain your reputation is a good one! An act of kindness will be richly repaid in December. A career hunch is right on target in January 1991. Ask for the money you deserve next March. Good luck accompanies you on a trip in April. A family situation shows continued improvement. Recognize that intelligent compromises benefit everyone involved. Romance will be a source of strength.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: jazzman "Jelly Roll" Morton, basketball's Red Auerbach, comedian Anne Meara, actress Sophia Loren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take care of routine work first. A highly desirable position may be vacated. Go after it for yourself! Some hopes are fulfilled more easily than others. Let a relationship mature.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Impulse rather than reason drives you today. Know your limitations and you will do fine. Personal financial woes are relieved by a promissory note or gift. Romance is happier than in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use subtlety and strategy to get the job done. Resist an urge to spend money foolishly on entertainment. A good day to contact prominent people about a job or financial backing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find the time to raise funds for a community cause. A creative effort leads to unexpected success! Keep the lines of communication open with a child who has moved away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The spotlight is on your job and your health. It is time to contemplate the future. Show appreciation for the special joy a loved one gives you. Get oral agreements in writing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pace yourself if the tempo at work picks up. Find a quiet place for lunch so you can recharge your batteries. A change of lifestyle will add to your creature comforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Wait a while before trying to revive an old idea. Stay in close touch with former employers. A yen for travel can be realized. Try to wrangle an invitation to a business seminar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone's stubbornness works to your advantage at place of employment. Change is good for you. Travel to distant lands could be in your immediate future. Welcome new experiences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Refuse to mediate a quarrel between two close friends lest both turn against you. Bask in the limelight while it lasts. Listen to loved ones when deciding about a special gift for a child.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance is enhanced by something that takes place at work. A banker is in a liberal mood. Make a pitch for a loan. Missing papers could turn up on another person's desk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A last-minute schedule change allows you to keep a date with an old friend. A sudden windfall eases a cash crunch. Career takes a temporary backseat to family responsibilities. Romance is fun-filled.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Being in a relaxed mood helps you make the right decisions. Check the details of a project to avoid embarrassment later on. The emphasis now is on trust and financial security. Pursue romance.

TODAY'S CHILDREN tend to excel at sports, especially those that require endurance and patience. These youngsters are very determined. Wise parents will teach these persistent Virgos to use their energy constructively. Ortherwise, they could waste precious time on projects unworthy of their talents. Affectionate and possessive, they sometimes expect too much in romance. They must be careful to leave their partners enough breathing room.

Bridge players would do well to heed the advice of Sherlock Holmes: "If you rule out the impossible, what is left, however improbable, must be the case." Can you spot declarer's fulfilling trick on this deal?

With little in defense, but tremendous trick-taking potential, we concur with South's decision to leap to four hearts. Passing the buck with a bid of three hearts would be cruel to partner, since North would interpret it as a competitive measure, rather than forward-going.

West led the king of clubs and shifted to a low diamond. Declarer could count nine tricks, and chances of successfully finessing the queen of spades were negligible. The early play had marked East for one of the missing high diamond honors, so West surely held the king of spades to justify a vulnerable takeout double.

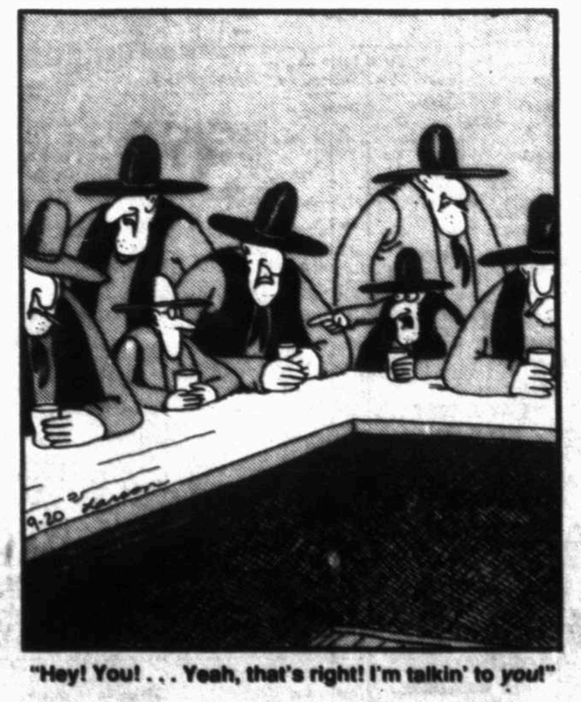

From where was the 10th trick coming? Diamonds offered no chance, and declarer had just ruled out spades. Unlikely as it seemed, that left only the club suit as a source.

Declarer won the second trick in dummy with the ace of diamonds and led the ten of clubs, discarding a diamond as West won the jack. The diamond return was ruffed and, after cashing the ace of hearts, declarer crossed to the jack of hearts, in the process drawing the last trump, to lead the nine of clubs. On this trick declarer discarded a low spade as West won the ace.

Dummy's eight of clubs was now a winner and declarer still had a trump entry to the table. No matter what the defenders did, declarer would ditch the queen of spades on the good club and chalk up the contract.

Rep. Kennedy seeks divorce

BOSTON (AP) — Politics and personal life coincided for U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II as he filed for divorce the same day he sailed unopposed through the primary election.

The Democrat is seeking a third term representing Massachusetts' 8th Congressional District, which includes parts of Boston and Cambridge.

He faces Republican Glenn W. Fiscus in the fall election.

On Tuesday, Kennedy and his wife, Sheila Rauch, filed for a no-fault divorce in Suffolk Probate Court, the judge's clerk said Wednesday.

A settlement and financial statement submitted with the divorce papers were sealed by the judge, said the clerk, who declined to give her name.

Kennedy, 37, and his wife, 40, separated in February 1989. They have twin 9-year-old sons.

Kennedy is the oldest of the 11 children of Sen. Robert Kennedy, who was assassinated in Los Angeles in 1968 after winning the California primary in his bid for president.

TULARE, Calif. (AP) — Crystal Gayle may cut her famous ankle-length hair because it can be a pain in the neck. Literally.

Pressure from her hair's extreme length gives her headaches and neck aches, the country-western singing star said before performing Tuesday with her sister, Loretta Lynn, at the Tulare County Fair.

It also takes an extraordinarily long time to wash and dry — five hours before her performance Tuesday. She lets her hair dry naturally instead of using a blow dryer.

"The worst part is combing it out," she said.

Her hair was down to the ground for her performance, but she had it up earlier in the day for convenience.

"It was catching on every knob in the trailer," Gayle said. "It's like wearing a gown."

Bacall

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The International Museum of Photography is honoring the sultry-voiced Lauren Bacall with an award for her illustrious film career.

Bacall will be given the George Eastman Award "for distinguished achievement in American film" at a fund-raising gala at the George Eastman House Nov. 9.

Previous recipients of the award include Gregory Peck, James Stewart and Lillian Gish.

"Miss Bacall reflects the unanimous decision of the award committee and of the museum board, and represents the dimensions the award honors, in both the quality and depth of her work," said Eastman House director James Enyeart.

Bacall, who was born Betty Joan Perske, began her career in the 1940s in the movie "To Have and Have Not" with Humphrey Bogart. Her come-on in that film to Bogart, who became her husband, has become movie legend.

"If you want anything, just whistle," Bacall's character coyly intones. "You know how to whistle, don't you Steve? Just put your lips together ... and blow."

Bacall starred with Bogart in "The Big Sleep," "Dark Passage," and "Key Largo." In 1970, she won a Tony award for her stage performance in the musical "Applause." More recently she played roles in "Murder on the Orient Express," "The Shootist" and "The Fan."

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — The Highwaymen — country music stars Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash and Kris Kristofferson — arrived at their concert with more than 80 tons of food in tow to give to the area's needy.

Kristofferson

"We waste food in this country," Jennings said.

Jennings and his wife, singer-songwriter Jessi Colter, praised the hunger-relief organization Feed the Children in collecting the food and urged concertgoers to donate more canned goods.

The produce, canned goods, cookies and potatoes loaded on four tractor-trailer trucks are being distributed to more than 50 area churches, food banks, shelters and other organizations.

The food distributed by Feed the Children, a program run by the Oklahoma City-based Larry Jones International Ministries Inc., comes from corporate and private donations.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson underwent surgery Wednesday to remove two blood clots on his brain.

His surgeon termed the operation a success but said it was too early to tell if the 91-year-old church leader had suffered brain damage.

"The ultimate outcome in a 91-year-old person we never know, but he's doing very well," Dr. Bruce F. Sorensen, a neurosurgeon, said after the 2½-hour procedure at LDS Hospital.

Sorensen said he removed clots on each side of Benson's brain that were 1⅛ to 2 centimeters thick and covered "a significant portion of his head," compressing the brain.

"He came through the surgery very well," the surgeon said.

Benson was listed in serious but stable condition in intensive care.

Gramm camp labels charge as 'last gasp'

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Sen. Hugh Parmer Wednesday said U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm received at least $220,000 from the savings and loan industry since 1985 and should "come clean" with his ties to the thrift industry.

Parmer, D-Fort Worth, said his campaign found Gramm, R-College Station, did not disclose the occupations or employers of nearly 700 contributors, worth $650,000, in apparent violation of federal law which requires disclosure for contributors of more than $250.

A Gramm spokesman dismissed Parmer's statements as "the last gasp of a dying campaign."

Parmer said Gramm, as a member of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, helped write legislation in 1987 that prevented federal regulators from taking over troubled thrifts, but Gramm's spokesman, Larry Neal, said Gramm fought to prevent the hobbling that Parmer referred to.

Ed Gray, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and chief federal regulator when the thrift scandal broke, wrote Gramm to tell him: "Without your help and support, the forbearance provisions of the so-called Competitive and Quality Banking Act of 1987 would have been far worse than what actually emerged," Neal said.

Neal also said Democrats on the banking committee, at the urging of the S&L industry, defeated Gramm's bid to provide $15 billion to begin closing down the troubled S&Ls in 1987.

"Had the Gramm amendment passed in '87, there is a reasonable chance we would not have an S&L scandal today, because the crooks would have been run out of business then and we wouldn't have to put up with trying to restructure those bad S&Ls now," Neal said.

Since 1985, Gramm has raised $14 million from 100,000 contributors, and Neal said many have ties to banks and thrifts.

"My assumption is, and it's the senator's assumption as well, that they expect good government for their money," he said.

Common Cause recently reported Gramm received $86,000 from the savings and loan industry from 1985 through 1989, ranking him sixth among congressmen in S&L contributions, but Neal noted that Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen ranked third with $154,000.

"Sen. Gramm ought to come clean. He ought to tell us how much he got from the savings and loan industry and he ought to tell us what actions he took in his capacity as a member of the Senate banking committee," Parmer said.

Lawmakers urge SSC vigilance

'Everything is at risk in the budget of the United States.'

— Rep. Jim McCrery, R.-La.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry and academic supporters of the superconducting super collider should keep pressure on Congress because its 1991 funding is not guaranteed, lawmakers said Wednesday.

The $318 million appropriation Congress made for the collider in 1991, like many government projects, is imperiled by the outcome of the budget talks.

Administration and congressional leaders are trying to reduce the federal deficit by $50 billion next year and $500 billion over five years. A combination of spending cuts and tax increases are likely.

"What we have got to do is continue to sell this project as a project that is good for America," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, told representatives of companies and universities with a stake in the collider.

Gramm, who is a participant in the budget talks, said the collider could escape cuts if a budget agreement is reached.

"Since we have already gotten full funding in both houses, we are in a strong position to hold it," Gramm said. "Will we hold it all? I think that's still up in the air."

Gramm was optimistic the participants would reach an agreement, averting automatic across-the-board spending cuts.

But Rep. Joe Barton, the Ennis Republican who represents the district where the collider will be built, said there is a better than 50 percent chance no agreement will be reached.

Without an agreement, the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law calls for cuts of between 25 percent and 35 percent in the government's discretionary spending. That means about $100 million from the super collider's $318 million.

"Everything is at risk in the budget of the United States," Rep. Jim McCrery, R.-La., told the backers, members of the Industry Association for the Superconducting Super Collider.

Lawmakers indicated the Energy Department, the government agency overseeing the collider, may be avoiding a political mess by delaying the release of a revised cost estimate for the machine.

Since the collider was redesigned last fall, the DOE and Congress have estimated its cost at $8 billion while four groups of specialists gathered data to provide a precise figure.

In recent weeks, three of the teams came up with a cost below $9 billion. The fourth put the cost at closer to $12 billion for what will be the world's largest scientific instrument.

The Energy Department first intended to reconcile the cost estimates by Aug. 17. Officials then delayed the estimate until Sept. 7 and then for another week, but the figure still has not been released.

Department officials told Barton the new estimate was being delayed by the budget summit, he said. "It may be they're waiting to see how much money they have this year to determine a total construction schedule," Barton said.

State opens case in dump trial

EL PASO (AP) — The head of a state agency looking for a place to store radioactive waste for the next 500 years testified Wednesday that the agency did not relax standards when it made an area near Fort Hancock its No. 1 choice.

Rick Jacobi, general manager of the Texas Low Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, was the first to take the stand for the state.

The authority is the defendant a lawsuit filed by El Paso and Hudspeth counties to stop the agen from considering building the dump.

The counties have accused the authority of deviating from its own standards so the Fort Hancock site could be used to store the waste.

Jackson returns

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — All-Pro Keith Jackson ended his 50-day holdout Wednesday and Philadelphia Eagles coach Buddy Ryan expects the tight end to play in Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Rams.

Jackson, who refused to report after the Eagles declined to renegotiate the four-year, $2.1 million contract he signed two years ago, is scheduled to be at Thursday's practice.

"I expect him to play against the Rams," Ryan said. "I think he'll bring a big lift. He'll scare the hell out of some folks. He's going to dictate some coverages."

Eagles president Harry Gamble said Jackson would still have to pay fines totaling $114,500 — $34,000 for the two games he missed and $1,500 per day for 31 missed days of training camp.

Another suit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman filed a civil lawsuit Wednesday against San Antonio Spurs guard David Wingate alleging he sexually assaulted her in June. It was the second rape accusation against him this week.

Wingate, 26, was charged Monday in Maryland with the rape of a 17-year-old woman at his apartment.

In the civil suit filed here in state district court, a 21-year-old woman alleges Wingate bought her alcoholic drinks at a San Antonio night club on June 24 and later offered her a ride.

The suit claims that when the woman became ill, Wingate got out of the car with her down the street from his house and sexually assaulted her.

Hall returns to racing

■ Midland's Jim Hall announces his return as an Indy car owner Wednesday, when he made public agreements with Pennzoil and local engine builder Franz Weis.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Pennzoil made a U-turn Tuesday, re-tapping Midland for racing innovator Jim Hall to head its 1991 entry in Indy-car racing.

It's a return to Pennzoil and to the racing fold for Hall, who along with his son Jim Hall II, will join with Midland engine builders Franz Weis and Count Rudy Van der Straten to form Hall-VDS Racing.

Hall, a highly successful race team owner in the 1970s, saw his bright yellow Pennzoil Chaparral propel Johnny Rutherford to an Indy 500 victory in 1980. Hall also owned the car Al Unser, Sr., piloted to an Indy 500 win in 1978 and pioneered ground effects technology, which is still used by racing teams today. But Hall retired from the CART circuit in 1982.

"When I get into racing, I go at it all-out. But I had so many other things to do and to take care of that I just had to back out of it for a while," said Hall, who has received the go-ahead from Chevrolet to place a Chevy-Ilmor engine in his Lola chassis.

"I'm excited about returning to racing, and I intend to put the maximum time into it. Franz (Weis) is a very successful engine builder, and basically what we've done is put together a racing team," he said.

Hall-VDS signed a three-year deal with Pennzoil and brilliant yellow paint will mark the team's entry in 1991.

Rangers, Buffs renew old rivalry

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — The latest chapter in what has become one of West Texas' hottest football rivalries will be written at J.M. King Memorial Stadium here Friday when the Greenwood Rangers host the Stanton Buffaloes.

Area

Stanton won last year's matchup, 20-15, after Greenwood had won the previous two encounters by a combined total of 17 points.

In other area matchups Friday, Rankin visits Garden City, fifth-ranked in the state Class A poll; Big Spring, ninth in Class 4A, hosts Lubbock High; Lamesa entertains Crane; Andrews hosts Midland High; McCamey hosts Alpine; Iraan travels to Van Horn; and Midland Christian goes to College Station for a game against Bryan Allen Academy.

Greenwood head coach Bob Purser isn't taking Stanton lightly, even though the Rangers are 2-0 and the Buffs are winless in two outings.

Tayrien captains smooth-sailing ship

■ After one full year as athletic director for the Midland Independent School District, Jack Tayrien discusses the Midland athletic program.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

It was Friday, Sept. 8, 1989.

Jack Tayrien had been back in town for a couple of weeks after resigning his job as Texas Tech University's recruiting coordinator to accept the position as the Midland school district's new athletic director.

An hour or so before the start of the first game of the 1989 season at Memorial Stadium — in which Killeen blanked Midland Lee 35-0 — a tornado skipped across parts of Midland. Drenching rains, high winds and plummeting temperatures accompanied the passing thunderstorm and turned Memorial Stadium into Lake Rebel.

It was Jack Tayrien's first football game as the just-named A.D.

Fast forward a year.

Friday, September 7, 1990.

Jack Tayrien's second season-debut. Midland High vs. Lubbock Monterey at Memorial Stadium.

A thunderstorm the day before had knocked out the scoreboard and put the stadium's sound system on the fritz. The maintenance crews got the scoreboard whipped back into shape, but for Midland High's 7-3 win over Monterey, the sound system was a faulty tower the entire night.

And Jack Tayrien heard about it Monday morning, receiving a handful of phone calls from disgruntled fans who would have appreciated a better public address system, thank you.

Two opening days. Two consecutive football seasons. Two near disasters, thanks to the weather.

Many first-year athletic directors would pull their hair out. Jack Tayrien — if given the choice — would've probably chosen to just go fishin' and let the problems solve themselves.

"I took it with a grain of salt," Tayrien said of his two rough opening nights. "Sometimes you've just got to play things by ear and adjust to what's happening. You just never know what's going to happen."

Don't get the wrong impression. Aside from the two opening nights of football seasons that Tayrien has presided over, the ship has sailed smoothly through the other aspects of life at the Midland athletic office.

There are no other complaints. No real problems. No big changes have taken place. Tayrien has not come in as A.D. with an iron fist. He does not inch to the edge of his seat every morning, stare at his employees, grit his teeth and say, "This is the way it is going to be from now on."

Things don't happen that way. Not from the soft-spoken Tayrien. Always committed to making athletics better for Midland schools, Tayrien isn't about to change something that has worked so well for so many years.

"There have been some good things that have happened," Tayrien said of his first 12 months on the job. "We're just carrying on what has been a good athletic program. It's been going on a long time."

Tayrien said he "hopes" it was just coincidence that five high-level athletic department employees resigned during his first year on the job.

Although he is against change for change sake, there have been some minor alterations and upgradings in the athletic department.

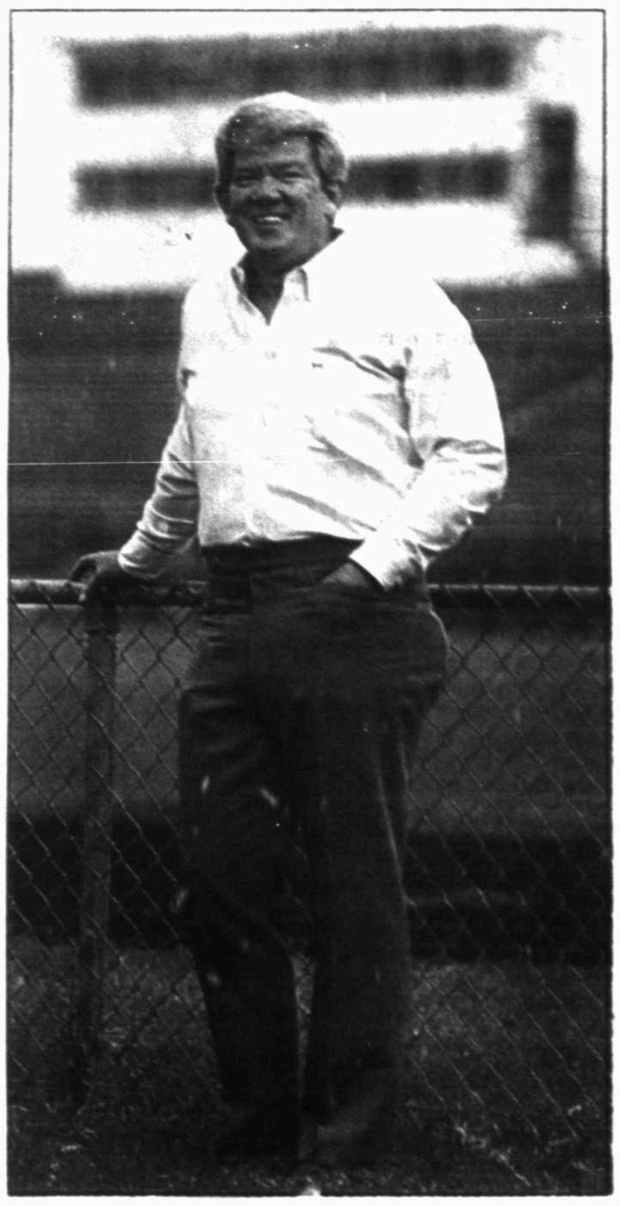

Junior high girls athletics such as tennis, track, volleyball and basketball have always competed at different times of the year than their counterparts on high school varsities and junior varsities. Changes have been made that will allow the junior highs to compete at the same time as the high schools.

"Positive role models", specifically the older girls that the junior high girls look up to in their sport, could be more easily established, Tayrien said if the programs were all held at the same time during the school year.

In addition, Tayrien said, "We're trying to get our high school coaches to have more of a say in our junior high programs as far as coordinating and teaching the same techniques and terminology."

Tayrien said for the future, welcoming new sports — such as girls soccer and, if it comes to fruition, University Interscholastic League-

Size leads to questions about priorities

An interesting high school football item was noted by a Dallas sports writer the other day.

The right guard and tackle of Arlington Lamar's offensive line weigh more than the one's the University of Texas plays.

Price

Led by right guard Mike Haney (a 6-6, 295-pound senior) and tackle Jason Comer (6-4, 285-pound senior), the Viking offensive line — including the tight end — averages a teeny 255.5 pounds per man.

Lamar, which bumped Midland Lee out of the playoffs last season, could boast the biggest prep line in the state. Lee, which is not exactly small up front, gives up more than 25 pounds per man to Lamar in the front six.

Other teams around state may boast big lineman, such as Steve Strahan (a 6-2, 270-pound defensive tackle) of No. 1 ranked and 1989 state finalist Aldine, but they probably won't compare with Lamar when it comes to number of monsters.

In this day and age, the mere mention of 295-pound high school gridders prompts notions of steroid abuse. But Midland High head football coach Davis Corley has a hard time believing that accusation.

"I think it's better nutritional and weightlifting programs," he said. "Maybe I don't know a lot about steroid use, but I haven't seen much of it.

"The thing about it is, the big kids don't have any reason to use steroids. It's the smaller players who might feel the need for additional weight."

Who knows, maybe Corley is right, but I still have my suspicions. With all the accusations of steroid use in the college and professional ranks flying around, today's big high school football player possibly thinks he has to be 300 pounds to earn a major college scholarship.

If that's the case, it's a sad commentary on where our priorities are ranked.

Speaking of priorities, MHS sophomore Antwan Goodley seems to have his set in proper order.

Goodley, a lanky 6-3, 165-pound safety, snared a pair of interceptions in the Buldogs' 17-14 win over Monahans last Friday. Even though his second theft came late in the game when the Loboes were trying desperation passes, Goodley's first interception in the end zone saved the 'Dogs from possibly giving up a touchdown in the first half.

"He (Lobo quarterback Steve Ward) thought he could get it over me, but I guess my height fooled him. Before I left for the game I told my parents I was going to try to get two interceptions for them, and I did. I just thank the Lord he gave me the ability to do it," Goodley said after the game.

Now that's the kind of commentary that falls sweetly on the ears of a father of two.

What's even better news for MHS fans is that Goodley will be around for another two years and will surely add a few pounds to his playing weight.

"He's got the frame to become a real good football player," Corley said. "He's still making some sophomore mistakes, but he has a real nose for the ball and plays very well against the pass."

Bill Price is a sports writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Bucs retain lead, down Cubs

Associated Press

Doug Drabek became the National League's first 20-game winner and Barry Bonds hit his 30th and 31st home runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates ended a six-game losing streak, beating the Chicago Cubs 8-7 Wednesday.

The victory increased the Pirates' lead to one game over second-place New York in the National League East after the Mets-Montreal game was postponed because of rain Wednesday night.

Drabek (20-6) allowed seven hits and five runs while striking out six in 7 1-3 innings. He is Pittsburgh's first 20-game winner since John Candelaria was 20-5 in 1977.

Bonds' first homer, a solo shot, came with two out in the fifth. He hit his second leading off the seventh. It was the ninth time he has hit two homers in a game in his career.

Bonds became the first Pirates player and the eighth player in NL history to have 30 homers and 30 stolen bases in a season. He stole his 49th base in the third inning.

Bonds' father, Bobby Bonds, also is a member of the 30-30 club, making them the first father-and-son combination to do it. Bobby Bonds did it five times.

It also marked the first time that two Pittsburgh players have hit 30 homers in one season. Bobby Bonilla also has 31.

Astros 5, Reds 2

Cincinnati lost for the fourth time in six games as Houston's Mark Portugal gave up two runs in 7 2-3 innings to beat the Reds 5-2.

The Los Angeles Dodgers played host to San Diego later Wednesday night with a chance to cut the first-place Reds' lead to 3½ games in the National League East. It would be Cincinnati's smallest margin since Aug. 4.

NL

Braves 5, Giants 1

Rookie Dave Justice hit his 28th homer and drove in three runs as the Atlanta Braves beat San Francisco, dealing the Giants' hopes of catching Cincinnati another blow.

The defending National League champion Giants have lost five of their last six games, and entered the night trailing the first-place Reds by 7½ games in the West. Cincinnati played at Houston in a night game.

Justice drove in a run with a double in a two-run first inning off starter Kelly Downs (1-2) and homered off reliever Trevor Wilson in the seventh following a double by Jeff Treadway. It was Justice's 18th home run in his last 44 games.

Phillies 8, Cardinals 4

Wes Chamberlain hit his first major league homer and Dale Murphy added a two-run homer, powering Philadelphia past St. Louis for the Phillies' third straight victory.

Both homers were off Joe Magrane (9-16).

Red Sox drop out of first

Associated Press

The slumping Boston Red Sox dropped out of first place for the first time since July 30 Wednesday night as Sam Horn hit a three-run homer that led the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-4 victory.

AL

Boston's sixth loss in seven games, coupled with Toronto's 7-6 victory over the New York Yankees, gave the Blue Jays a one-game lead in the American League East. Each team has 12 games left, including three against each other in Boston.

The Red Sox led Toronto by 6½ games on Sept. 4, but has lost 12 of 17 games. The Blue Jays have won their last six, matching their longest winning streak of the season.

Athletics 7, White Sox 3

Dave Stewart won his 21st game, matching his career best, and Mark McGwire hit his 38th home run as the Oakland Athletics finally won a home game over the Chicago White Sox.

The victory reduced Oakland's magic number to clinch the American League West to five. Oakland leads Chicago by nine games with 13 to play.

Indians 6, Brewers 3

Rookie Jeff Manto homered, tripled and singled and Doug Jones set a team record with his 38th save as Cleveland beat the Milwaukee Brewers, the Indians' seventh win in eight games.

The loss mathematically eliminated the Brewers in the AL East race and dropped them a half game behind Cleveland into fifth place. Milwaukee went 0-6 at Cleveland Stadium this year, the Indians' first home sweep of the Brewers ever.

Blue Jays 7, Yankees 6

Junior Felix hit a three-run homer and the surging Toronto Blue Jays matched their longest winning streak of the season at six, beating the New York Yankees.

The Blue Jays, who trailed Boston by 6½ games on Sept. 4, began the day tied with the Red Sox for the American League East lead.

Rangers 6, Mariners 5

Jeff Kunkel scored the go-ahead run on Billy Swift's wild pitch in the eighth inning as Texas overcame an early four-run deficit.

After Mike Stanley drew a lead-off walk in the eighth, Matt Young (8-16) struck out Steve Buechele and Stanley was forced at second on Kunkel's grounder.

Twins 1, Royals 0

Shane Mack's two-out single in the 11th inning knocked in Dan Gladden from third base, giving the Minnesota Twins a victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Sheffield released from Arlington hospital, ailment undisclosed

ARLINGTON (AP) — Brewers infielder Gary Sheffield has been dismissed from a hospital where he was treated for five days for an undisclosed ailment.

But officials at Arlington Memorial Hospital said Wednesday they could not release any information on his destination or condition.

THIS FALL, HOLLYWOOD'S MOST ADORABLE LEADING MEN ARE ON HBO.

Who do you love?

Is it Mel Gibson? Or how about Michael Douglas? Well, this fall you won't have to choose. Because all your favorite stars are on HBO.*

If it's Mel or Michael, catch them as two out-of-control detectives in "Lethal Weapon 2" and "Black Rain."

Also, tune in to the crazy antics of Eddie Murphy in "Harlem Nights" and Chevy Chase in the zany "National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation."

You'll be enchanted by Bruce Willis as the voice of Baby Mikey in "Look Who's Talking."

Plus there's "The Fabulous Baker Boys," the highly acclaimed romantic drama, and "The Abyss," the spectacular deep-sea adventure.

Not to mention the ghoulishly charming host of HBO's "Tales From the Crypt," the weekly series that's not afraid to laugh at life's darker side.

Add Cinemax' and there's even more to love. Year after year, Cinemax gives you more comedies, classics, thrillers, and vanguard films.

AREA: Rankin, Garden City clash

From 1C

"We have to continue to improve every week in the execution of our offense," Purser said. One plus for the Rangers is the continued emergence of senior quarterback Cody Mebane, who is in his second year as the starter.

Mebane has only completed 33 percent of his passes, but the 195-pound senior fuels the Ranger option and it is his ballhandling prowess that has helped set consistent running by halfbacks Eric Clutter and Jerry Gay.

"Cody is ahead of where he was at this point last year," Purser said. "But he isn't where he was at the end of last year."

Clutter and Gay are Clutter didn't carry the ball much last year, but has emerged as the Rangers' leading rusher with 152 yards on only 15 carries. Gay, who missed the last half of his junior season with a bad knee, has run for 117 yards on 18 trips.

Stanton head coach Dale Ruth has fashioned a similarly balanced offense out of the Wing-T, though neither John Eric Wyckoff nor Jeremy Stallings has clicked at quarterback.

Tailback John Paul Barry leads the Buff rushers with 176 yards on 31 carries, while fullback Garry Don Thompson has run for 111 yards.

THE SHOE'S on the other foot in the Rankin-Garden City matchup this season. While Rankin was state-ranked going into their 35-15 over the Bearkats last season, the Red Devils are merely knocking on the door of the top 10, according to one state rating service, while Garden City seems firmly entrenched in the state top 10 despite struggling to a 21-20 win over Grandfalls last week.

There's one other thing different about this week's game — unlike the last two seasons, it's not for the District 8-A championship. Garden City was shifted out of the district in the most recent realignment.

"It's just another one of our four tuneups," Scott said. "But it will be by far our stiffest challenge."

TAYRIEN: Lights could shine locally

sponsored girls softball — would have to be studied carefully so as not to harm sports already in place. Anytime a new sport is added, Tayrien said, the possibility exists of decreasing the numbers of those who participate in an existing sport.

Tayrien says in order for the Midland program to remain as strong as it has always been, the athletic department's and district's "biggest concern — from my standpoint — is to try to upgrade our facilities and maintain our facilities in order to be comparable with people in our classification throughout the state of Texas."

One move in upgrading will be to relocate into a new athletic headquarters toward the end of 1990.

With Exxon's donation of an office building (on West Missouri, near downtown), for the school district's use, the athletic department is looking forward to the expanded office space.

On the subject of the book "Friday Night Lights", a book which detailed the Odessa Permian football program and the City of Odessa itself, Tayrien said he had not yet read the publication by Pulitzer-winning author H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger.

However, Tayrien did have a comment on statements made by several Odessans in the book who say "Lights" could have just as easily been written about football programs anywhere else in Texas — including Midland.

"I'm sure it could happen," Tayrien said, "but I don't think it is happening ...

"Of course, you want to win, but you don't want to win at all costs. Certainly a program that is successful is evaluated bottom line on the win-loss column. That's not our choice altogether, but the public's choice ... the people's choice.

"Our main goal is academics, and we have athletics as a part of that. We want to give our kids the opportunity to be successful through athletics."

"Front Row Seat" is a regular feature of your morning Reporter-Telegram, appearing each Thursday.

HALL: Penske to lose sponsorship

From 1C

The move by Pennzoil, a five-time Indy-500-winning sponsor from 1980-1988, apparently puts an end to its long-standing relationship with the Roger Penske's team and driver Rick Mears.

"It's my understanding that Pennzoil will not sponsor the Penske team next year," Hall said.

Hall-VDS has not decided on a driver, but Hall said negotiations are in the works. Veteran crew chief Larry Curry, most recently manager for V.J. Granatelli's team, will join Hall-VDS as manager and crew chief.

Jim Hall II will serve as general manager of the team and will handle the task of putting together a new crew.

"I guess I'd been away from racing long enough, and I was ready to go back," Hall explained his return to the sport. "When my son showed an interest in getting involved in major racing, we decided to go ahead and do it."

For Hall and Weis this is a reunion. Weis pampered Hall's Cosworth engine in the 1978 Lola that won the Indianapolis 500. That Unser, Sr. victory was a surprise to the racing world.

Actually, Hall's first Indy 500 try was a "look-see" mission with the ground effects idea pumping in his mind.

"No one expected us to win that race, but Jimmy The Greek," Hall said. "I don't know why he picked us to win, but he did."

MC netters open fall season at Sun Bowl Invitational

Staff Report

Midland College tennis teams open their 1990-91 play at El Paso on Thursday at the first Sun Bowl Invitational, which runs through Sunday.

MC coach Joe Williams will use the tourney to view first-hand several of his new recruits in actual competition. "This tournament includes a number of the top teams in the Southwest along with some teaching professionals and top amateurs," Williams noted.

"It's an open-draw tournament, rather than a team event, which puts lots of pressure on players as individuals."

Williams returned just one player from the 1990 National Junior College Athletic Association's national women's championship team. He has three sophomores on his men's team, but only two of them will be playing in El Paso.

Among the universities expected to have players at the El Paso event are the University of Arizona, Arizona State, University of New Mexico, New Mexico State, Texas Tech, and UT-El Paso.

Janneke Garos of Holland is the only returner from the women's championship team. She played number one on the squad last fall, winning the Rolex ITCA Small College Regional singles and doubles titles. She took the Rolex ITCA National Small College Indoor singles title last January and teamed with partner Sharla Barone to win the doubles championship at the same tourney. But Garos injured a knee in that tournament and was slow recuperating. Barone took over the number one spot and won the national title in that flight. Garos won the number three singles title. She is ranked second in both singles and doubles among Holland's juniors.

Williams brought in three freshmen this fall and will add two to three more women in January to fill all the spots on the team. Myriam Berthe of Dakar, Senegal, West Africa, was ranked first in Senegal in both singles and doubles. Caroline Reynolds is from Blackpool, Lancashire, England.

To keep your Ford, Lincoln or Mercury physically fit, just tear out this ad and take it to your dealer.

He'll not only conduct a physical but enter that data into a special "medical" record for future reference.

Should any covered part show signs of fatigue, he'll inform you of what needs to be done and explain how you could be protected in the future with your Lifetime Service Guarantee.

Here's how the guarantee works. Once you pay for a covered repair at any participating Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer nationwide, the bill will be stamped as an LSG repair. Then, if the same repair ever needs to be done again, just show your receipt and we'll fix it free for as long as you own your car. Free parts. Free labor. For life. It's that simple.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee is America's best car repair guarantee, because it covers virtually everything except normal wear and maintenance items like wiper blades and tires. And only Ford, Lincoln and Mercury owners can get it.

So ask your dealer for a free checkup and a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. It's like having health insurance for your car.

Crude falls

NEW YORK (AP) — Higher heating oil prices led an afternoon rally in the oil futures market Wednesday after news of large stockpiles of gasoline pushed early prices down.

Light sweet crude, which had lost about $1 by midday, closed down 23 cents at $33.18 per barrel for October contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Contracts for the next three months advanced as traders bought later months and sold October crude, which has just one more day to be traded.

Natural gas was down one-half cent to $1.555 per 1,000 cubic feet for October delivery.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar finished mostly higher in U.S. trading Wednesday after surging in Europe as currency markets drew encouragement from Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who seemed to suggest interest rates are not likely to be cut soon.

Gold prices declined worldwide. On New York's Commodity Exchange, a troy ounce of gold settled at $386.00, off $1.60 from Tuesday.

In London, the pound fell to $1.8855 from $1.9190 late Tuesday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5730 German marks, 1.3105 Swiss francs, 5.2670 French francs, 1,175.00 Italian lire and 1.1563 Canadian dollars.

Gold fell in London to $386.75 a troy ounce from $388.25 late Tuesday. Silver prices were little changed. On New York's Comex, silver closed at $4.769 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $4.790.

U.S. firms boost Soviet oil exploration

■ Unprecedented U.S.-Soviet deals could dramatically help Soviet oil exploration efforts.

By David Crosson
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – With oil now fetching more than $30 per barrel, the scramble for new supply is on again, filling hotels where one might least expect it: Moscow, for instance.

During recent weeks, the "Mezh," the premier gathering spot for Western business people in the Soviet capital, has been teeming with executives and lawyers for the major Western oil producers, and unprecedented deals are being struck that could dramatically increase Soviet oil exploration.

Last week, two major American oil companies, Amoco and Texaco, signed protocols with the Soviet central government allowing them to assess several oil and gas fields in the Russian republic and formulate plans for their exploitation.

Chevron already has gained access to potentially productive fields in Kazakhstan, and a Houston-based oil exploration company is on the verge of a joint venture that would mark the deepest U.S. involvement yet in the Soviet oil industry, said a source familiar with the negotiations.

In addition, Soviet oil officials are talking with others, including British Petroleum; the French company Elf-Aquitane; the Royal Dutch Shell Group; and a foreign subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum.

In many cases, the talks have been in progress for several years and have involved production and refining as well as exploration.

The lure of Soviet oil is multi-faceted.

While its production has been declining for several years, the Soviet Union remains the world's leading oil producer and its reserves are estimated at nearly twice the volume of America's.

Of course, by comparison with the reserve estimates for the Persian Gulf region, the amount of Soviet oil still in the ground is a drop in the bucket.

The Soviets, however, are making clear that they want Western oil companies' capital and technology and view their presence in the Soviet Union as vital to its economic future.

They also have acknowledged their need for hard currency to keep the Soviet economy afloat. Martin Pranga, Amoco's foreign affairs manager, said the deals now being cut result from Soviet comprehension that their country is in desperate economic straits.

Conceding that they cannot reverse the decline in their oil production without Western capital and technology, the Soviets agreed early on to allow Western oil companies to export and sell some of what they might find in the Soviet Union.

More recently, they have been greasing the skids with offers for exploration rights in areas with far more potential than any that have been discussed before, according to participants involved in the most recent negotiations.

Still, risks remain. Significantly, with the Soviet republics seeking greater autonomy, the question of whether the nation can even survive increasingly is being asked. A growing environmental movement also is flexing its muscle and is beginning to turn its attention toward oil's impact.

S&L bailout benefits all areas, official says

■ A government official says all regions of the country will benefit from the S&L bailout, though most of the institutions are in the Southwest.

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal bailout of failed savings institutions is benefiting all areas of the country even though the banks are concentrated in the Southwest, the Congressional Budget Office said Wednesday.

"It is difficult to identify regions as winners or losers from the S&L bailout," CBO Director Robert D. Reischauer told the House Ways and Means Committee. "Both the economic costs and benefits are widely distributed across geographic regions."

Reischauer brought up a touchy point with lawmakers facing a tough election-year requirement that additional billions be appropriated to reimburse depositors whose insured savings were lost when the thrift institutions went under.

Members of Congress from the Northeast, especially, have been complaining loudly that their citizens face the prospect of being taxed to bail out failed institutions in Texas and other Sun Belt states.

"Many residents of the Northeast and Midwest benefited from high-yielding deposits from failed S&Ls in the Southwest," Reischauer said. "While empty structures are concentrated in the Southwest, the Resolution Trust Corporation's list of assets shows clearly that a sizable proportion of the construction projects financed by the failed S&Ls took place outside their local markets as well."

Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher, who heads the General Accounting Office, raised that agency's estimate of the bailout cost to between $335 billion and $370 billion over the next 43 years. The GAO previously had put the minimum figure at $325 billion.

If the economy worsens or the number of failing institutions rises, the cost could approach $500 billion, Bowsher said.

Regulators say the cost of bailing out failed S&Ls in 1988 could be reduced by $3 billion to 4 billion if Congress and the Bush administration were willing to spend $22 billion next year.

The Resolution Trust Corp. said Tuesday that the $69 billion cost of 96 bailouts in 1988 could be reduced over the next

Housing starts suffer seven-month slide

■ Housing starts continue to slide, leading observers to fear a housing recession.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts fell 1.7 percent in August, the government said Wednesday, continuing a seven-month slide deeper into what many industry observers are calling a housing recession.

The Commerce Department said starts of new homes and apartments totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.13 million units after falling 3.5 percent in July. The revised July decline was even worse than the 2.6 percent reported last month.

The August starts were the lowest since construction of 1.05 million units got under way at an annual rate in August 1982 during the last general recession. The last seven-month decline occurred from May through November 1981.

The housing industry has been in a decline for more than a year, with August's 1.13 million annual rate down from the 1.38 million starts in 1989 and 1.49 million in 1988.

Many analysts had expected August starts to decline to the 1.13 million annual rate.

In advance of the report, economists at Mitsubishi Bank in New York wrote in their Weekly Economic Indicator Report that "housing activity is clearly depressed and is likely to continue to be for quite a while."

"Tighter lending standards, regional weakness, general economic uncertainty and the RTC housing auctions all are taking their toll on the housing industry," they contended.

In addition, analysts point to slack new home sales, which fell 2.3 percent in July for their fifth drop in seven months. As a result, inventories inched up to a 7.8-month backlog from 7.7 months in June, easing further incentives to begin new projects.

The sluggishness in the construction industry cost 40,000 jobs in August, after seasonal adjustment, according to a Labor Department report earlier this month. The construction industry has lost nearly 100,000 jobs in the past three months alone.

And as a portent of things to come, applications for building permits fell 4.3 percent to an annual rate of 1.08 million. Permits often are a barometer of future housing activity.

Construction of single-family units fell 3.2 percent to an annual rate of 840,000 units in August following a 2.4 percent decline a month earlier. It was the lowest number of single-family starts since 737,000 got under way in October 1982, a month before the last recession ended.

But the overall drop in starts was concentrated in the South where they plummeted 10.7 percent to an annual rate of 441,000 units.

Auto dealers find more profit in used cars

By Scott Burns

Q. Could you discuss how to get the best purchase price on a new car? As most people buy a new car every 4-5 years and with new car prices at about $16,000, this represents a substantial investment in a person's life.

Burns

In my personal experience in trading, it is easy enough to estimate the value of my present automobile by using the blue book value. However, it is the amount that should be discounted from the new car, excluding the trade-in, by the dealership, that remains a mystery. Some say the value should be 10-15 percent and that one should ask for a purchase price on a car without a trade-in first. Also, what discount would one expect if he did not have a trade-in? — D.S., Ennis, Texas.

A. The trade-in represents a major profit opportunity for the car dealer. As a dealer once told me, "You can't make any money on NEW cars. Everyone knows their price. Everyone knows their cost to the dealer. They are never in short supply. If you run out, there are always more. But used cars are different. No one knows their value. No one knows what they cost you. If you buy right and sell right, you can make a lot of money."

In 30 years of buying cars, I have never had a dealer offer me blue book on a trade-in. There is always a reason to offer less. And the car I want, no matter how dreary, is always in short supply or currently unavailable. One of the subtle pleasures of having children who have reached driving age is that you can give them a car instead of trading it in. This frees you from the torture of having to trade. I think of this whenever a fender is crushed.

There are two basic strategies that appear to work reasonably well for owning cars. The first is "buy and hold" — buy a highly reliable car, take good car of it, and count every year without the necessity of buying a new car as a year of blessing. Lots of people do this and if you are good about maintaining your car and allow that tires, shock absorbers, and other things actually do wear out and need to be replaced, you can be quite indifferent to what you get for your car when you finally sell it.

The second is to trade regularly on a two- or three-year cycle and accept the fact that the dealer has to make a profit on BOTH transactions — the sale of the new car and the sale of your trade-in. Dealers can move recent model cars but are reluctant to offer cars more than three or four years old. Similarly, this is an active market for direct sales: most people buy used cars, not new ones, and buying a recent model car works very well.

Alas, generalities about new car margins are totally useless. The best you can do is buy one of the books, available at many book stores and magazine stands, that detail the dealer's costs on cars and add-ons so you have an idea of his cost. After that, whether you can get a low price depends on inventory, the model, the time of the year, the sales for the month, and the hunger of the individual salesman.

Q. My problem is to find an investment adviser with whom I will feel comfortable. I am retired, in my late 50s and my wife is considering retirement next year. At that time our house and vehicles will be paid for with about $250,000 available for investments. We have one parent to maintain at a cost of $300 per month. Our retirement income will be sufficient for daily needs, our children are doing well. We want to see the world and die broke.

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update, which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell today as hopes dimmed for any impending move b[illegible] the Federal Reserve to stimulate the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 16.34 to 2,554.95 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 453 up, 878 down and 521 unchanged.

The market staged a mild rally in late trading Tuesday amid conjecture that the Federal Reserve might be ready to relax its credit policy by seeking to foster a decline in interest rates.

But such hopes seemed to get no support from comments this morning by Alan Greenspan, the Fed's [illegible]hairman, before a congressiona[illegible] committee.

On the evidence to date, Greenspan said, "we are not, at least as yet, witnessing a cumulate unwinding of economic activity.' He also observed that the summer upsurge in oil prices had diminished whatever chances existed for a break from persistent inflationary pressures.

Analysts generally interpreted those remarks to mean that the Fed did not see much latitude at present for any significant easing of credit conditions.

Waste Management climbed ⅝ to 34¾ in active trading. The company's board gave it clearance to buy back as many as 25 million shares over the next two years.

BURNS: Be own advisor

(From 5C)

I have been attending various conferences, seminars, for about eight years. I consider myself reasonably intelligent but some so-called advisors are scary. Treasuries seem to be the way to go but I am not completely convinced. I understand that an investment advisor needs to move money and I would be willing to pay reasonable fees for reasonable advice. I am also concerned about the $250,000 that will be taxable when it is paid out. What to do? — W.S., Duncanville, Texas.

A. Be your own advisor. Continue studying and, when the time comes, roll the retirement account over into an IRA rollover account with a discount brokerage firm or a large mutual fund firm. With Fidelity and Schwab, for instance, it is possible to have an account that holds stocks, bonds, and mutual funds. This will allow you to manage your money at relatively low cost. You will, of course, have to live with the knowledge that you are responsible for whatever happens to your money.

Scott Burns' column, syndicated by King Features, appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Thursday and Sunday.

BAILOUT: Benefits will cover all geographic areas decade, but only if Congress and the Bush administration spend the cash up front.

(From 5C)

L. William Seidman, chairman of the trust corporation, refrained from offering his recommendation until his agency meets Thursday with its oversight board, headed by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady.

But several members of Congress spoke favorably about the idea.

"I regard the RTC's report on potential savings as only the first cut in a long process to protect taxpayers on the deals," said Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee.

"We owe the money one way or another. It just seems to me the practical thing is to do this and get it over with," said Rep. Bruce Vento, D-Minn., who chairs a House task force overseeing bailouts conducted since 1988.

However, in budget summit talks, administration and congressional negotiators are having a hard time coming up with the cash to provide for the rescue of a continuing flow of failed thrifts, let alone money for past deals.

The trust corporation, created last year by the S&L bailout law, is spending billions of dollars to wipe out the losses of institutions that have failed since 1988.

In the old rescues, the bank board was out of money and had to keep the institutions afloat with various guarantees and promises of future assistance.

The 1988 transactions have come under increasing attack from members of Congress who complain they amounted to a giveaway. The House Banking Committee said last week that acquirers, on average, invested only $1 to receive $78 in assets.

"Many of the 1988 deals were overly generous and costly to the taxpayers," agreed Peter H. Monroe, president of the oversight board.

Much of the bank board's assistance took the form of promissory notes with a guaranteed return. Often, the bank board promised to guarantee profits on the sour loans and other bad assets of the rescued thrifts.

"If you make deals and you don't have cash ... then you're going to pay more in order to make a deal with the private sector," Seidman said.

DEALS: Westerners flock to Moscow to make deals

(From 5C)

However, when compared with the risks elsewhere, Soviet hazards begin to look less formidable. The volatile Middle East situation, for instance, is taking some of the edge off questions concerning control of Soviet natural resources. Similarly, in light of the power exercised by the U.S. environmental movement, the clout of its Soviet counterpart begins to pale.

By the same token, Professor Vladimir Kvint, a Soviet oil economist who now is lecturing at Fordham University in New York City while serving as a consultant to a number of U.S. oil interests, noted that Soviet oil officials have been trying to assuage oil company concerns by seeking and getting assurances from the republics that they will accept the deals being struck by the central government.

For the exploration that will result from Amoco's accord, Pranga said the company is comfortable with the level of risk it has accepted. However, he said greater assurances will be needed before Amoco involves itself in Soviet oil production or refining because each requires more capital than exploration does.

Parallel in on Chalk

Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced it is a participant in three recently completed horizontal oil and gas wells in the Pearsall area in the Austin Chalk formation in South Texas.

Initial production from the three wells aggregated 4,553 barrels of oil and 1.9 million cubic feet of natural gas per day (208 barrels of oil and 89 mcf of gas per day net to Parallel's interest.)

Larry C. Oldham, executive vice president of Parallel, commented that because of recent actions by the Texas Railroad Commission, due to the Middle East oil cartailments, horizontal wells in the Pearsall Field can be produced at "production capacity."

Legwear completes style

Tights, leggings step out with higher hems this fall

By Mary Hellman
Copley News Service

Beautiful legs are your most important fashion accessory this season.

With hemlines thigh-high, legs stand out. Dress them up in wildly patterned tights or over-the-knee boots or dress them down in black opaque stockings and matching suede flats. But dress them.

Unmatched for comfort and practicality, tights and leggings have become the leg covering of the '90s. Topped with a long sweater or jacket, they substitute for skirts and trousers. Paired with a miniskirt, they create a flattering monochromatic line and make this short style wearable. At home they add up to great comfort when matched with sweats and socks.

"They're for the way people dress," said Kathy Moskal, who heads Hue hosiery. "Tight, tight legs and a short top or jacket is the uniform of the times. It's so easy."

As the temperature drops, layer on stretch pants to maintain a sleek line. Or add tall leather boots that stretch over the knee. But keep the focus on your legs.

CNS Photo

THE CURRENT legwear renaissance got a boost when American and European designers unveiled their fall collections. Christian Lacroix grabbed the spotlight with eye-popping psychedelic tights. Isaac Mizrahi cabled his, while Carolina Herrera styled hers in velvet. Oscar de la Renta layered opaque stockings to create subtle shadings.

With hosiery manufacturers expecting 20 percent higher sales this fall, consumer options couldn't be greater.

For fall, Hue is introducing wool-blend leggings, and cotton and wool-rib tights. Colors are soft and natural to complement fall fashions and pull together designer-favored monochromatic looks.

"Colors are more complex for fall. The colors are more like nature. Like a leaf that you find. Or the gray of a rock, not charcoal," Moskal said.

Evan Picone is marketing a cable-look tight that provides texture without adding bulk to legs and thighs. The firm also offers lacy patterned hose with matching camisole for creating your own body suit.

Marketing designer-label tights are Calvin Klein, Donna Karan, Ralph Lauren and Georgio Armani. Legware lines reportedly are under discussion at Anne Klein & Co., Oscar de la Renta and Ellen Tracy.

EVEN WITH A designer label, tights rarely cost more than $25. The average price is about $10 — a minor investment with major fashion impact.

With legs in the spotlight, shoes and boots naturally have new visibility. The best are available in suedes of bright colors as well as basic fall shades, according to Rob McEwan, a women's shoe buyer for Nordstrom.

"We'll be carrying pumps and flats in suede. Both are very popular, with a little more emphasis on flats now," he said. "We are going to try to cover all the colors — black and brown, purple, forest green, the grays, the burgundies, as well as the brights like fuchsia, mustard and green."

Metallics, strong for spring and summer, will continue into fall, he added.

"The biggest colors are pewter and bronze, but we'll be seeing a lot of silver later in the season, around November."

Boots are newest in extremes — short or very tall, with flat heels.

"There's big interest in short boots, about ankle high — pull-on boots or lace-up boots, man-tailored or desert boots. There's going to be such variety," he said.

AT THE OTHER extreme, watch for over-the-knee boots. Like other '60s fashions, they're making a strong comeback.

"We've seen some that are incredibly high," McEwen said. "Most are black and simple in style without much decoration."

Because of the dollar's weakness compared with overseas currencies, shoe and boot prices will be slightly higher this season, he said. Quality over-the-knee boots, for example, will cost $200 to $300.

Midland Country Club Ladies Association will meet for fashion show and lunch Sept. 28. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with lunch to follow. Fashions shown will be from Julian Gold. For reservations, members call 682-4378.

Legwear made for girls

NEW YORK (AP) — Hue, the innovative legwear people, is introducing socks for little girls.

The legwear, with Lycra, will be one-size-fits-all, for ages 5 to 12 years, or 45 to 100 pounds. It will be available in eight styles for spring '91, ranging from a basic crew to opaque tights and capris in about a dozen colors.

AT WIT'S END

It takes a struggle to know who you are

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left a few of her favorite columns behind.

By Erma Bombeck

This was supposed to have been the most wonderful period of my life.

My grown kids are struggling for survival. All the advice I gave them and they ignored is coming back to haunt them. They are getting an opportunity to experience firsthand that man does not live by allowance alone.

Bombeck

So how come I feel so lousy?

All the time they were growing up, their father and I regaled them with wonderful stories about how broke and deprived we were. We told them how their father scrubbed post office floors at night to buy my engagement ring. We told them how we took eight years to pay off a secondhand shag rug and how we were married for five years before we owned a car. We made them sick they missed the Depression.

Every time they asked for help, we told them we couldn't possibly deny them the poverty they so richly deserved because it builds character. We didn't want them to miss a single day of the struggle in their pursuit of the American dream.

The rhetoric was easy. Sitting by and watching is the hard part. I hate it. I don't want them to sell velvet pictures from door to door. I don't want them to buy gasoline $2 at a time. I don't want them to eat cold tacos from a doggy bag for breakfast. I don't want them to sell their bicycles and records to pay the rent. I don't want them to sleep cold and wear old.

I want ... I want the birth without the pain. I want the pride without the loneliness. I want the success without the sacrifice.

I want what I have no right to want. I want them to begin where we are ending without asking or even knowing the price it took to get there.

Instead, I must sit like a spectator and watch the struggle they so desperately need. For they are finding out things about themselves they have to know to live out the rest of their lives.

It takes every bit of restraint I have to watch, say nothing, and remember ... someone did it for me.

DEAR ABBY

Children are never too young to learn to fight abuse

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to you in the hope that our experience can help other families.

Van Buren

We all have heard horror stories of child molestation, but we think it can never happen to our children. Most literature on the subject advises that when your children are of school age, teach them that if someone tries to molest them, they should: 1) scream, kick, hit; 2) run; and 3) TELL someone.

Well, don't wait until your children are that old! If your children are old enough to know where their private parts are, they are old enough to be taught that nobody should be allowed to touch those parts.

I started teaching our daughter at the age of 4. Within five months, she was molested. Unfortunately, that was not the first time. Through her therapy, we discovered that it had been going on for 2½ years — since she was 21 months old! If I had taught her sooner, we could have stopped it sooner.

There is one more thing that I cannot stress enough. Believe your child. Children do not lie about something like this. It's a known fact that children have been molested by sitters, neighbors and trusted family members of all ages.

If this letter helps just one person, then the pain our family has suffered will not have been in vain. — ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I'm sure your letter will serve as a helpful "wake-up call" for any parents who think their child is too young to be taught this very important lesson. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 years old and getting a divorce. I was very hurt by this divorce and am trying desperately to get on with my life. The problem is, no matter where I go in this small town, people come up to me and tell me the last time they saw my "ex," where they saw him, who he was with, what he was wearing, what he said, etc.

People don't mean to be hurtful, they are just trying to make conversation. They don't realize it causes me to start thinking about him all over again, and I'm trying to forget him.

Please print this, Abby. I am sure there are others who feel as I do. And, do you know a good reply that won't hurt their feelings? — HURTING IN ALABAMA

DEAR HURTING: When someone mentions his name, stop them politely with this: "Please — I'd rather not hear anything about him; he's 'history.' Now what do you know that's cheerful and happy?"

DEAR ABBY: While you were on vacation, one of your reruns about diminishing memories in older folks brought to mind this story:

Two elderly ladies who had not seen each other in many years met one day on the street. They were both delighted, and being in front of a restaurant, one of them suggested that they go inside to visit over a cup of coffee.

They had been there several minutes when one of them said, "You know, this is rather embarrassing, but as well as I knew you, and for as long as I knew you, I can't remember your name. Please tell me. What is it?"

The other lady sat for a few moments in silence, then, in a soft voice asked, "How soon do you have to know?" — FRED IN GARDEN GROVE

HEALTH

Twelve-year-old Lissette Rodriguez, who is dying of AIDS, lies in bed in her Elizabeth, N.J. home in late July as cousin Lues Rivera watches over her from a doorway. Lissette, whose nickname is Sandy, has not walked since December. She spent from Christmas through March in the hospital, and has since been on hospice care at home.

Twelve-year-old struggles for life

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — Sometimes, when the pain in her belly and her toothpick-thin legs tears at her, Lissette Rodriguez thinks of heaven.

"When mom dies, I die, everyone dies, I can walk in there," she says in her frail voice. "No pain in my stomach, no pain in my knee, and I walk again."

Sometimes, her chest feels so tight she can't breathe. Sometimes, those who love her can't hold her because her 40-pound body is so brittle that she bleeds inside.

In these excruciating moments, Sandy, as she is nicknamed, prays. She asks God to take the pain away.

Barely 12 years old, Sandy is dying of AIDS. For her, death is represented by the concept of heaven, where everything is beautiful.

"YOU CLOSE your eyes and your body is not working," she says. "Then you go to God, go to Jesus in a big place where he lives. My father is in there. Everyone who dies goes there."

Sandy's doctor, Dr. Laura Hoyt, said every part of the girl's body, from her head to her toes, is not working properly: her brain, lungs, heart, liver, kidneys, blood, immune system.

"We've had her on hospice care at home since last spring," the doctor said. "We are keeping her as comfortable as possible for as long as possible. She hates being in the hospital and doesn't want to die in the hospital."

Sandy is among the nearly 2,500 children under 13 who have contracted full-blown AIDS since the epidemic began. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reported in August that more than 1,300 of those children have died in the United States and its territories.

Sandy was born four weeks prematurely in New York City. The woman she knows as her mother, Carmen Candelaria, is really her aunt. Mrs. Candelaria took Sandy and another child from her own sister when they were born because the sister was unable to care for them.

SANDY CONTRACTED AIDS through a blood transfusion needed because of her early birth, Mrs. Candelaria said. The girl's natural mother died two years ago, at age 41, after mixing Valium and alcohol at a party, she said.

Mrs. Candelaria said she knows nothing about Sandy's father. Her own husband, the man Sandy knew as her father, was killed when Sandy was 7 in a holdup in the video store he owned in Puerto Rico, where they lived for five years.

"I miss my father," Sandy says. "I miss him every day, every night."

Sandy hasn't walked since last December. She spent from Christmas through March in the hospital, and watched her friend Christina from Puerto Rico die of AIDS on New Year's Eve.

"I was scared," she says. "Soon, her eyes were closed. Her mother is crying. Her father is crying. I started crying. I said, 'I want to see her.' She was covered. Her hair was a mess, all gone. I miss her. She's gone to heaven. She moved from the islands to God."

MRS. CANDELARIA threw a big barbecue May 1 for Sandy's 12th birthday and invited the people at the hospital who care for her.

Sandy, who weighed 60 pounds then, mustered the strength to blow out the candles and got icing on her nose.

She celebrated her first communion not in a church, but in the hospital, where she returned at the end of May when her condition worsened.

For Mrs. Candelaria, it was bittersweet. She is tormented by the picture in her mind. She is unable to shake the image of a little girl with brown hair and eyes, white lace dress and stockings, locket around her tiny neck, in a wheelchair surrounded by nurses, a cake decorated with the sentiments, "Jesus Loves Lissette. We Do, Too."

"I just got sad," said Mrs. Candelaria. "I wanted it to be not in the hospital, but a real normal communion. She told me not to cry, if I cry, she'll cry." They both cried.

SANDY IS attached to Mrs. Candelaria, wanting her there every moment, even sleeping with her. Mrs. Candelaria is her shadow and has devoted much of her life to caring for her.

She is Mrs. Candelaria's protector, never talking to her about the inevitable.

"She knows," Mrs. Candelaria said. "She never talks to me about dying. She sees me cry too many times."

Each day brings a new onslaught of pain for Sandy: diarrhea, coughing, fever, fungus, itching. Her black-and-blue body is replenished with new blood every month, transfusions to keep her alive and platelets to help stem the disease's tide.

A hug, a kiss, a banged foot can start internal bleeding.

"I have a pain in here," Sandy says, rubbing her stomach. "Sometimes I throw it up. Sometimes I get mad at Doreen."

DOREEN SMALL, her devoted nurse, said Sandy always fights with her:

"Then she says she's sorry. I'm the focus of her anger, which is OK. When she's in a good mood, she'll paint pictures for me. I have a bunch of pictures."

A luxury for Sandy is to have her feet rubbed. She asks anyone who is handy to accommodate her. When her cousin Lues Rivera jokingly threatened to stop one day, she teased him in Spanish, "I dare you."

Sandy is a prisoner of her bed, cared for at home by her mother and the Center For Hope Hospice.

"Don't put me in there yet," she orders Ms. Small, afraid she may never get back out to do all the things she wants.

HER BEDROOM is filled with a cabinet of survival gear: sterile water, saline, gauze, diapers, dressing kits, needles to flush her IV.

Her link to life is a catheter that enters her chest, nourishing her with food, vitamins, minerals and dextrose. The thrush infection from her mouth to her stomach and the medicine have killed her appetite.

"Sometimes the food at the hospital I don't like it," she says. A treat for her is pizza and french fries, but she can handle only a few bites.

Her constant companions are her friend, Poopy, who takes her shopping, a doll called Baby Bubbles, whom she hugs and rocks, and the telephone. She frequently calls Poopy to take her shopping and to chitchat.

HER DREAMS are simple: to get out of her bed, to go to school, to see her classmates and the New Kids on the Block, to have another party, to fly to Puerto Rico to visit her grandmother, to see the clouds from the plane.

"I don't want to die, never, never," she cries. "I want to live."

Study suggests eating garlic may cut chances of severe heart attack

By Jean Carper

Eating garlic may dramatically slash your chances of a deadly heart attack. So suggests a new study by researcher-cardiologist Arun Bordia, of Tagore Medical College in India.

Carper

In the test Dr. Bordia had half of 432 patients with heart disease eat two or three garlic cloves a day for three years. The other half got no garlic. In the first year, there was only a slight lifesaving effect from garlic. But in the second year, deaths among garlic-eaters dropped by 50 percent and sank by 66 percent in the third year.

Further, both the blood cholesterol and blood pressure of the garlic eaters went down about 10 percent. There were no such significant changes in the non-garlic eaters.

Dr. Bordia suspects that the garlic somehow induced a "healing" of the arteries, as he has found in animal studies.

Those on garlic also said they had fewer joint pains, body aches, asthmatic tendencies and attacks of angina.

Dr. Bordia said whether the garlic was eaten raw or cooked made no difference in warding off heart attacks. However, the patients complained more about side effects, such as flatulence, from eating raw garlic.

Alcohol-calorie surprise

When you drink a little alcohol, do you eat more calories, fewer calories or about the same number of calories? "It came as a total surprise to me," says Dr. John de Castro, professor of psychology at Georgia State University.

He began his recent study believing like most scientists in the theory of "homeostasis." That implies that when you drink moderately — one or two drinks a day — your body compensates by telling you to eat less food. Thus, you would still take in about your usual number of daily calories. "Wrong," says Dr. de Castro.

Social drinkers do consume more calories, he found — from 150 to 300 more calories daily. But that's not because the 92 adults in his study necessarily ate more food. Virtually all the extra calories came from the alcoholic beverages, he says.

In other words, alcohol calories did not replace food calories, as Dr. de Castro thought they would. The alcohol simply added more calories.

That means that one of the simplest ways to reduce calories is to stop drinking, he advises. He says another recent study at Georgia State showed that moderate drinkers who cut out alcohol did eliminate from 200 to 300 calories per day.

Should you switch to decaf?

If you switch from regular coffee to decaffeinated to lower your blood cholesterol, you may be disappointed. So finds a recent study from the University of Nijmegen in The Netherlands.

In the test, 45 healthy non-smoking men and women who were regular coffee drinkers drank five cups of regular coffee a day for six weeks. Then they were switched to five cups of decaffeinated coffee a day for another six weeks. Other sources of caffeine were strictly limited.

Researchers carefully kept track of the subjects' total blood cholesterol, good-type HDL cholesterol and bad-type LDL cholesterol.

Switching from regular to decaffeinated coffee had "essentially zero" effect on blood cholesterol, the investigators reported.

Interestingly, however, nearly half of the people in the study complained of headaches right after the switch. The reason: abrupt caffeine withdrawal. The headaches generally lasted for two and a half days.

New instrument enables better diagnosis, treatment of sinus

Associated Press

An instrument that permits a direct, brightly illuminated view of the interior of the nose has markedly improved the diagnosis and treatment of a broad range of sinus diseases.

Sinus disease is very common, affecting an estimated 15 percent of the American population to some degree, Dr. Joseph B. Jacobs, an ear, nose, and throat specialist at New York University Medical Center, said.

The instrument is called an endoscope. Because of its high-intensity xenon light source and its ability to swivel up to 120 degrees, it allows the examiner to get a close look at all eight sinuses, narrow cavities located behind the nose.

According to Jacobs, "the endoscope has brought about the biggest change in the specialty since the microscope."

By enabling physicians to view the sinuses, the endoscope enables them to spot evidence of disease. "If we can identify and treat problems before they become chronic or widespread, there is a chance for a better cure rate across the board," Jacobs said.

Sinus problems include infections and abscesses, swelling and blockage, allergies, bleeding, trauma and growths ranging from cysts and polyps to tumors. A head cold that lasts more than a week is likely to be a sign of a sinus condition.

Jacobs urged evaluation for anyone who experiences recurrent or persistent nasal congestion and discharge, changes in the sense of smell, facial pain and headache. He explained that the nasal sinuses all communicate with the nose and share the same lining tissue.

New therapies used to treat fibroids

Associated Press

Recent developments in drug therapy and surgical techniques have significantly improved the treatment of fibroids, small balls of muscle that form in the uterus of as many as one third of all women.

"Administering drugs that reduce the size of fibroids before surgery and using a device to visualize fibroids during surgery are major advances," said Dr. Charles Debrovner, a gynecologist at New York University Medical Center.

Referred to medically as myomas, fibroids are tumors in the uterine muscle wrapped in fibrous connective tissue. Varying in size from a grain of rice to a grapefruit, they are benign in almost all cases, Debrovner said.

Since fibroids run in families, there is thought to be a genetic factor in their formation. The most common symptom of fibroids is a longer, heavier menstrual flow, although most often there are no obvious symptoms. Fibroids grow at varying rates. In most women they do not reach the point where surgical intervention is required.

The onset of menopause causes fibroids to shrink, eliminating them as a serious health consideration.

Fibroids that cause pain or excessive bleeding are the most frequent reason for hysterectomy, the surgical removal of the uterus. Nearly 200,000 hysterectomies are performed in the United States each year because of problems produced by fibroids, Debrovner said. An alternative to hysterectomy is myomectomy, the removal of the fibroid through an abdominal incision, leaving the uterus intact.

"While this procedure is preferable in cases where future childbirth is desired, myomectomy is a more complicated operation and involves more risk than hysterectomy," Debrovner noted.

Pentagon has deep pool of reserves

U.S. military reserves represent a pool of 1.6 million men and women.

Reserves

Army	494,464
Navy	248,040
Air Force	153,630
Marines	81,529
Coast Guard	17,773

The president may call on 200,000 reservists for active duty for up to 90 days, with an extension period of 90 days. If Congress declares war, 1 million reservists may be called to active duty for up to two years. If called, most reservists would serve in support roles.

Active duty

Army	739,156
Navy	578,326
Air Force	540,318
Marines	195,559

National Guard

Army	447,890
Air Force	116,061

National Guard is a dual-status reserve group first authorized in 1792. Governors may order units to active duty for state emergencies, such as strikes, riots and natural disasters. The president, via governors, may call up National Guard members for any national emergency.

Army alerts 13 more Guard, Reserve units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army said Wednesday it has alerted National Guard and Reserve units in 13 states and Puerto Rico to prepare for possible call-up to active duty as part of the continuing U.S. military buildup in the Persian Gulf area.

"The Army National Guard and Army Reserve units may be called to active duty as they are needed during the operation in response to the crisis our nation faces," an Army announcement said.

Some of the units would be assigned duties within the continental United States while others would be shipped to the gulf area, the statement said without elaborating.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told Congress on Wednesday that by the end of the month he expects that about 50,000 reservists from all services will be activated. President Bush on Aug. 22 authorized the first call-up of reserves in two decades.

The latest Army National Guard and Army Reserve units alerted for possible call-up are comprised of specialists in transportation, maintenance, water distribution, law enforcement, field services and ammunition handling.

Citing "operational security reasons," the Army said it would not disclose when the units will be activated.

In Alabama, the National Guard's 731st Combat Support Battalion, Headquarters Detachment, based at Tallahassee; the 778th Combat Support Co., at Jackson; and the 638th Ordnance Co., at Brewton.

In Florida, the Reserve's 322nd Quartermaster Detachment, at Jacksonville, and in Illinois, the National Guard's 1544th Transportation Co., at Paris.

In Indiana, the National Guard's 838th Transportation Detachment, at Indianapolis; and the Reserve's 209th Combat Support Co., at Lafayette. Also, the Iowa National Guard's 1133rd Transportation Co., at Mason City, and the Maryland Army Reserve's 372nd Military Police Co., at Cumberland.

In Mississippi, the National Guard's 112th Military Police Battalion, Headquarters Detachment, at Jackson; and the 162nd Military Police Co., at Crystal Springs.

Also the New Jersey National Guard's 253rd Transportation Co., at Cape May and the 328th Transportation Co., at Pemberton; and the Montana Army Reserve's 370th Quartermaster Battalion, at Great Falls.

In Ohio, the Reserve's 758th Combat Support Co., the 828th Combat Support Co., the 837th Combat Support Detachment and the 870th Combat Support Detachment, all at Columbus.

In South Carolina, the Reserve's 450th Ordnance Co., at Aiken; the Tennessee Reserve's 360th Quartermaster Detachment, at Memphis; and in Texas, the Reserve's 340th Combat Support Co., at San Antonio.

In Puerto Rico, the Reserve's 430th Combat Co., at San Juan; the 394th Quartermaster Battalion, at Fort Buchanan; and the 311th Quartermaster Co., at Aquadilla.

U.S. will ask more allies for foreign-policy funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will increasingly ask allies for money to meet foreign policy needs at a time when its own budget can't stand the strain, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told Congress Wednesday.

Separately, lawmakers gave a chilly reception to the administration's plan for such money to go into a "National Defense Gift Fund," which the Pentagon could tap without prior congressional approval.

Meanwhile, President Bush warned anew that Saddam Hussein could expect further action against Iraq if the U.N. economic embargo and diplomatic efforts fail to move his forces out of Kuwait.

Bush, on a campaign trip to California, said that if Iraq doesn't withdraw, "then its isolation will not end. We are, as I have said before, prepared to take additional steps if sanctions and the quest for a political resolution do not work."

U.S. fund-raising efforts have so far yielded pledges of $20 billion from Persian Gulf states, Japan, Germany and the European Community to meet the costs of deterring aggression by Iraq.

"This ... is a kind of a new invention in the practice of diplomacy," Eagleburger said of such soliciting in testimony to the House Appropriations foreign aid subcommittee.

"I would expect you will see this administration approaching foreign policy questions more and more in that direction," he added.

Eagleburger acknowledged that such an arrangement "creates some constitutional problems" because it could establish a pool of money outside Congress' jurisdiction.

At the same time, the Appropriations defense subcommittee, meeting behind closed to act on Bush's request for an additional $1.9 billion to meet unexpected gulf costs, sought to ensure that any money raised from allies would be subject to congressional control.

The White House had asked Congress to approve the gift fund, which would receive donations from friendly countries and which would be available to the Pentagon to spend as it saw fit.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney argued at the hearing that such authority would increase his flexibility in the Middle East troop deployment. He promised to work out a way to keep Congress informed of how the money was being spent.
