Search continues for kidnap suspect

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Midland police continue to search for kidnapping suspect Ruben Castillo, a 39-year-old resident of Odessa.

A kidnapping attempt was made on a 10-year-old girl at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in the 600 block of North Lee Street in Midland, just east of Lamesa Road. The girl was playing alone in the grass near an alley behind her home when the suspect tried to pull her into his car before being chased off a by a neighbor, Raul Ramirez.

Ramirez lives on the opposite side of the alley from the girl. He said he was in his front yard when the suspect drove up.

"I thought he was a friend of mine. He drove up in a gray Taurus, and I thought he was familiar but he didn't stop, he just kept driving then pulled into the alley," Ramirez said.

The man turned right into the alley that runs between the little girl's house and Ramirez's home.

"I looked back there into the alley and I see him talking to the little girl. All of a sudden she goes down — I don't know if he was hitting her or what. I couldn't tell. I go over there, he looks up and sees me and then he just took off in his car."

Before the man was gone, Ramirez was able to memorize the car's license plate number.

"After that I ran, looking for help. The little girl was yelling and screaming. I couldn't believe what had just happened, I could barely speak. I told her to go home then went over to her house and told her mom the license plate number. I just thank God that I was sitting here when it happened. I've got four kids of my own . She was lucky I was there and I was lucky I was there."

Ramirez is the only known witness to the incident.

Warrants have been issued for Ruben Castillo's arrest, on charges of attempted kidnapping and injury to a child.

Detectives said that during their investigation they had been able to confirm that the girl was indeed struck by the Area schools mull defiance of prayer ban

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

While Friday night football season in West Texas is on its traditional run, another tradition, pregame prayer at public schools, has been prohibited by a federal appellate court.

But it may not leave so easily if, ultimately, at all.

"The students initiate the prayer, and they do the prayer," said Greenwood Independent School District Superintendent Glenn Barber.

"The community and school district stand behind our kids — their decision, their choice," Barber said Thursday.

"I think that it is important that we support our kids," Barber said. "It's up to the students."

Some other West Texas school districts, including the Ector County ISD, are disallowing open prayer and even a moment of pregame silence.

Others, including school districts in Midland, Big Spring and likely the Stanton, are permitting silence — "a few moments of silent contemplation," in Stanton's case, said Stanton ISD Superintendent Jim White.

"No one can stop you or me or anyone else from praying," he said. "If we want to pray on our own, we will always be able to do that. I just can't believe they (federal courts) are trying to censor prayer.

"The kids will be madder about this than we are, and we are plenty mad," White said. "I'll guarantee you."

The Andrews ISD, which has a home game on Sept. 10 the same Friday night when Greenwood plays Seminole at Greenwood, has a week to pick which option — prayer, moment of silence, or no prayer — it will take.

Greenwood plays on the road tonight at Stanton.

"I think there's some miscommunication going on," Barber said. "I think more people are going to pray than are telling you they are going to pray." In some communities, he said, "Anytime there is potential litigation, they all get shifty."

Greenwood ISD Board President Price Robinson noted that Greenwood is "just going to continue as we have in the past.

"It's an invocation-type thing," a student-led prayer that the game be "conducted under good sportsmanship and everybody have a safe trip home.

"If someone doesn't want to participate, they can stay seated," Robinson said. "We are a Christian community."

In the 1992 Jones vs. Clear Creek federal lawsuit, an appellate court held that "student initiated, student led, nonsectarian, and nonproselytizing prayer at high-school graduation and other school events" were permissible, noted Andrews ISD Superintendent David Goodman.

"That's what we have been operating under for several years very successfully, no challenges, no problems," he said.

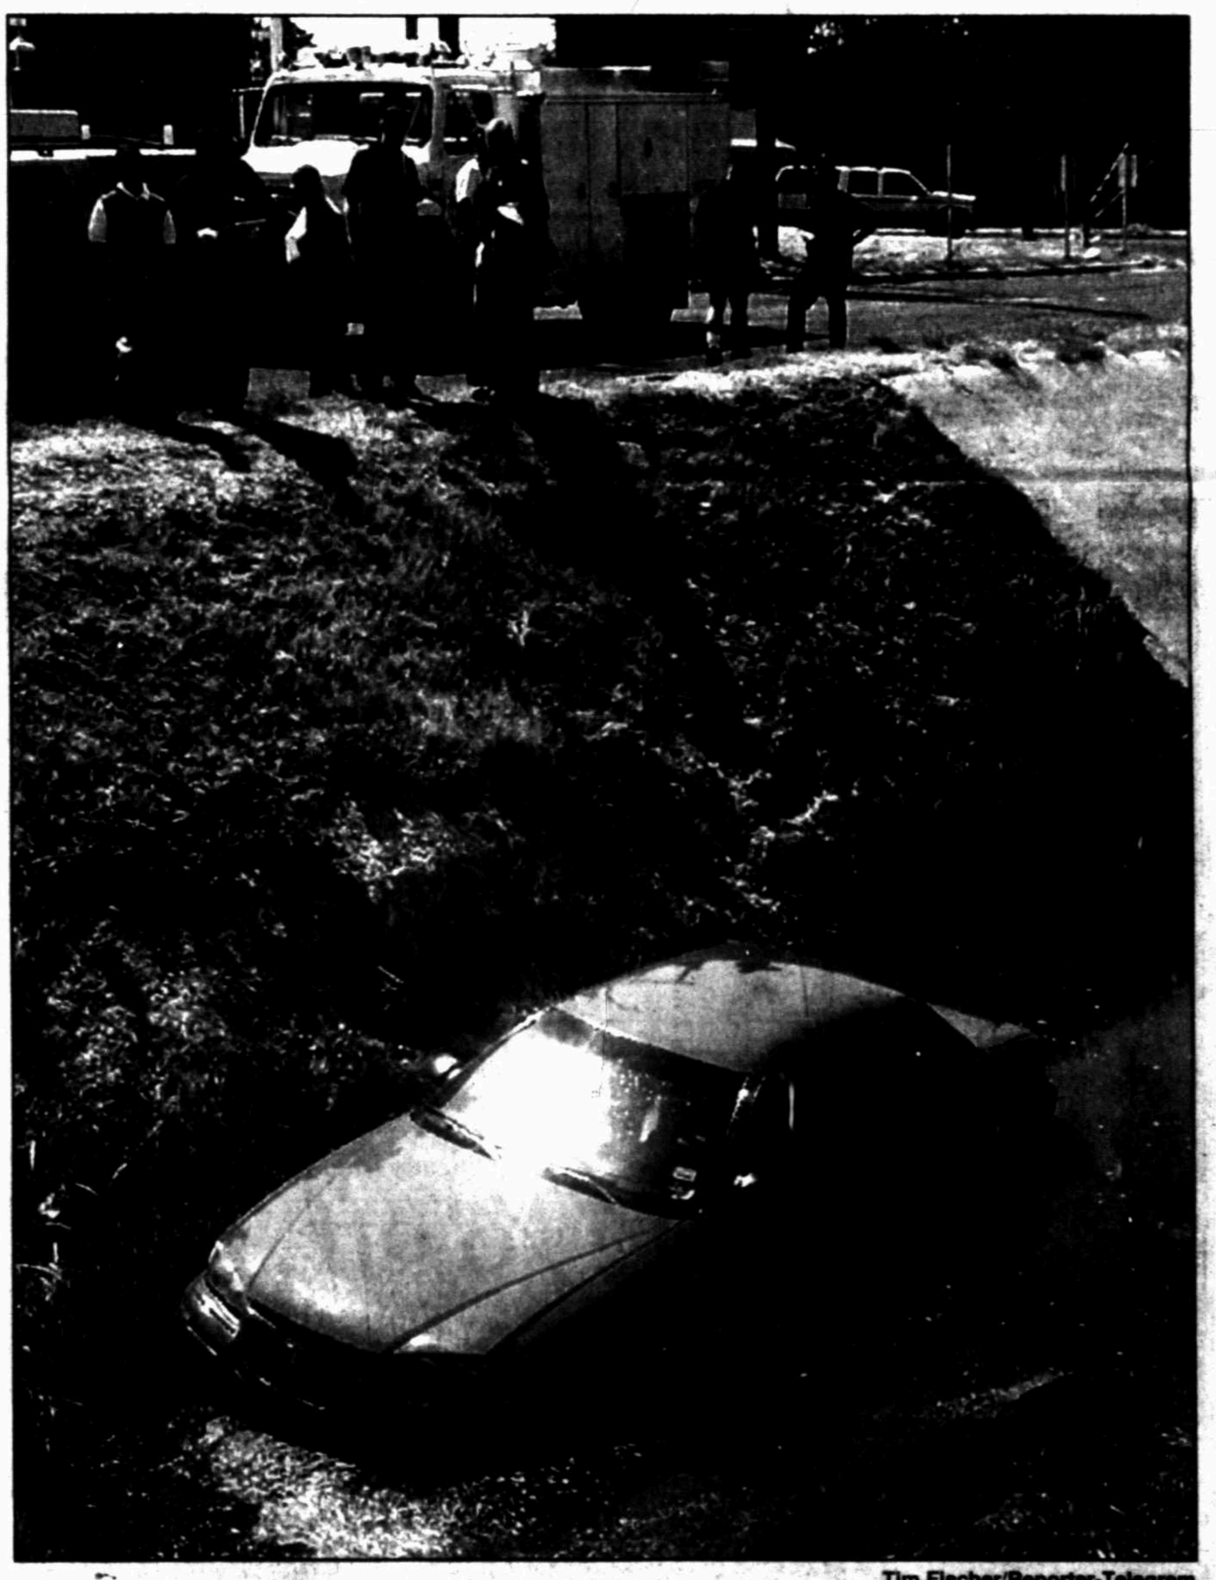

Then, early in 1999, in the Jane Doe vs. Santa Fe ISD federal case, the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals amplified the 1992 Clear Creek ruling in a case brought by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of several parents.

The court ruled that the limited, nonproselytizing prayer is "OK for graduation because that's a solemn occasion, but you can't do it at any other time, including football games," Goodman said. "That leaves us in a real quandary. After several years, they are chipping away at (prayer). When are they going to stop?"

The court, noted Jay Jacobson, executive director of the Texas ACLU, "ruled that both the (Santa Fe) school district's practice of saying a prayer at football games and a policy of ignoring the nonsectarian, nonproselytizing requirement for graduation prayer, even when student-initiated and led, violated the

Sen. Hutchison gives tax cut 50-50 chance

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison greets supporters at the Petroleum Museum in Midland Thursday. Sen. Hutchison was in the area to detail the Republican's $798 billion 10-year tax relief plan that President Clinton has vowed to veto.

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison on Thursday detailed for Permian Basin residents the tax cut legislation headed for President Clinton's desk.

Before returning to Washington, she held updates in Stanton and Midland, defending the Republican's $798 billion 10-year tax relief plan that Clinton has vowed to veto.

"We have a $3.3 trillion budget surplus projected over the next 10 years," she said. "We're not giving the entire amount back in tax cuts. We set aside $2 trillion in Social Security surpluses to be used just for Social Security. Of the remaining $1.3 trillion, $500 billion was set aside as a cushion for Medicare and Medicaid and the remaining $800 billion we're giving back to the people."

The legislation calls for reducing each income tax bracket 1 percent, eliminating the marriage tax penalty for most married couples and completely phasing out the inheritance tax.

The last provision drew applause from the crowd that greeted the Republican senator at the Petroleum Museum

Survivors include his wife, Violet Murdoch Porter, of Odessa; daughter, Sabrina Elzner, of Houston; sons, Kasey Porter, of Houston, and Kelly Porter, of Ft. Stockton; and three granddaughters of Houston.

Memorials may be made to Home Hospice.

DFW airport making last-minute fixes to prevent Y2K glitches

GRAPEVINE (AP) — With less than four months before the end of the year, 20 computerized systems at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, including the control of runway lights and two-way radios, are not yet protected against the Y2K bug, according to officials.

Over the past two years, the nation's third-busiest airport has spent about $8 million to update systems to guard against the Y2K problem.

On Thursday, the airport board hastily voted to spend another $300,000 on the runway-lights system, which directs pilots to the correct runway for takeoffs and landings. When the prevailing winds change, the lights must be switched so planes can take off and land into the wind.

In a worst-case scenario, officials say, they could still operate the lights by hand.

"We'll be in good shape at DFW. Passengers have nothing to worry about," said executive director Jeffrey Fegan.

The airport identified 108 systems that could be vulnerable to Y2K problems, caused because some older computers and software identify years by two digits and assume they always begin with "19," not "20."

The airport's chief of computer systems, Bob Hendricks, said 78 systems are fully fixed and tested and 30 others, mostly minor ones, are in some state of repair or testing. Of the latter group, Hendricks said, the critical ones are runway lights, two-way radios and the system for controlling access to high-security areas, which is installed but not yet in operation.

Hendricks said the radios would still work without a fix, although there might be interference or overlapping conversations.

The security system requires people to swipe a photo card at doorways leading to restricted areas, such as jetways and ramps. Officials said if the system were to fail, some doors would be locked and police officers would be posted at unlocked doors.

The Federal Aviation Administration has jurisdiction over air-traffic control systems and security equipment at airports. Paul Takemoto, an FAA spokesman, said the largest 150 airports are "ready to go." The airlines are responsible for making sure aircraft are Y2K-capable, he said, and other systems, such as runway lights and radios, are the responsibility of the airports.

Tom Browne, who directs a Y2K-compliance project for the Air Transport Association, which represents airlines, said about half the airports still have some computer fixes to make but predicted no problems on New Year's Day.

"So much money and effort is being poured into this, it's going to be a great big yawn on Jan. 1," Browne said.

The DFW runway-lighting system was installed only about five years ago, Fegan said.

"Clearly people knew 10 years ago Y2K was going to be an issue, so why didn't some of these companies know that? It's a good question," Fegan said.

Nonetheless, the airport board voted without discussion Thursday to pay up to $297,750 more to the same companies to fix the glitch.

Fegan predicted that airports could file a slew of lawsuits against contractors who recently installed systems that were found to have Y2K problems. He declined to say whether DFW will sue any of its vendors, saying officials are focusing first on getting the problems fixed.

"We feel very comfortable we'll have them all finished by Oct. 30," Fegan said. Just in case, however, "We'll all be out here Dec. 31 just to make sure everything goes smoothly."

Famous barbecue joint moves location

LOCKHART (AP) — The name is the same and so is the fire that warms the barbecue pit.

What's different for Kreuz Market is the location and the break in a 100-year-old Texas tradition.

The barbecue joint that serves its patrons smoked meat on butcher paper with no forks, no sauces and no side dishes, opened for business at its new location Wednesday after being forced to move by a family feud.

"The first piece is just as good as the last piece," said Mike Graham, the first customer at the market's new location. "I reckon I'll be here every day. At least once."

For owner Rick Schmidt and his sons, Leeman and Keith, moving the market from the place it first opened in 1900 was an unfortunate necessity.

Schmidt's father left him the business when he died in 1990. But the elder Schmidt left the building it occupied to his daughter, Nina Sells.

Eventually, the lease came up for renewal. The siblings couldn't come to terms and Schmidt was forced to move.

The new 23,000-square foot facility is less than a mile from the old market and about three times as big. It has 30-foot high ceilings to keep heat and smoke away from diners and the crew. The furniture is wooden chairs with Kreuz logo.

The fire is the same, too.

Schmidt and his crew hauled embers from the barbecue pit at the old market up the road to start the first fire in the new place. Lighting the fire with matches is not the Kreuz Market way.

Johnny Frizell, who worked at the old market for 34 years before a broken hip forced him to quit, was impressed with the new barbecue palace. He doesn't like the fans in the new place, however.

"They got these damn fans. We didn't have any fans. Still, you get some smoke so you know where you been," Frizell said.

The finals days at the old location drew patrons from across the state hoping to get one last savory mouthful before the move. Many took pictures of their lunch, and some did the unthinkable by bringing in paper plates, knives and forks.

"That was my idea. I'd been here several times and knew they didn't have any so I brought my own," said Adela Acosta of San Antonio.

"You see that," said Leeman Schmidt. "They're the same people who sneak barbecue in their purses."

Meanwhile, Ms. Sells, her husband Jim and her son John Fulilove, plan to open Smitty's Market in the old building in a few weeks.

"She always wanted what was mine," Rick Schmidt said.

Smitty's Market won't be without its barbecue expertise, however. Jim Sells, a teacher at Lockhart High School for 22 years, was part of a cooking team that earned first place awards at Lockhart's Chisolm Trail Cookoff the past two years.

If The Price Were Right, Would You?

The news story explained how a certain young man and his wife had made $50,000 in three months after installing their web page on the internet. Yes, we're all interested...what product were they selling? Well, for a certain fee you could view nude pictures of the man's wife! A reporter asked, "do you think that what you have done is moral?" They replied, "yes, everyone's definition of morality is different."

Webster defines it as, "of or relating to character and human behavior, particularly as regards right and wrong; virtuous, especially in sexual conduct." Sounds pretty clear to me. Yet our generation has declared, "if it feels right to you, do it. Disregard whom it might hurt, how humanly sick it is, or the harm to society."

But God says, "therefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonor their bodies among themselves, who exchanged the truth of God for the lie, and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever." Romans 1:24, 25. Life, living, respect, and morality is built on loving God first, and then your neighbor as yourself. Matthew 22:37-39

TAX: Clinton contends cut threatens Social Security funds

opportunity to work, improve their lives and pursue their dreams," she said. "The inheritance tax is not a revenue producer, it's a social policy. It says 'You can have the American dream, but not too much.'"

Clinton has vowed to veto the legislation, contending the tax cuts are too large and threaten funds that should go to shore up the Social Security and Medicare funds. The bill was passed by Congress before summer recess, and a top Clinton aide Thursday said there is room for compromise with the Republicans and called for Congress to send the bill to Clinton so he could veto it and "serious negotiations get under way."

Sen. Hutchison said it was difficult to say what chance there was for compromise between the bill's supporters and opponents but put the chances at 50-50. Congress may reduce the amount to $500 billion and, if that's unsuccessful, will put relief in technical tax correction legislation.

"If the president won't sign the bill, we'll come back to the new president, who hopefully will sign it, hopefully one from Midland," she said to applause from the audience.

She also drew applause in discussing her successful efforts to prevent the federal government from taking a portion of the state's multi-billion dollar settlement with the tobacco industry. The amendment prohibiting the federal government from taking part of the settlement was attached to an emergency Kosovo spending bill that passed 70-29, she said, and was signed by the president.

"Every county in Texas was a winner because the state shared that settlement with every county. Ector County received $2.1 million and Midland County received $1.8 million and they will continue to get their share in perpetuity because the state established a $1.8 billion permanent trust fund," she said.

In the audience was Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, who commented that, "I am always very impressed with Sen. Hutchison. She's very attuned to West Texas and closely associated with our conservative philosophy out here and I am grateful for her efforts on our behalf. She's a true friend of the oil and gas industry and that means a lot to Midland."

Included in the tax relief legislation is relief for businesses, including the oil and gas industry, Sen. Hutchison said.

"I don't understand why Congress is not alarmed that we're importing 57 percent of our energy needs," she said. "That's not a lot of security for the greatest nation on earth."

Oilmen hear Hutchison's position on crude oil dumping

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, who has waged war for the oil industry on the issues of royalty rates, depletion allowances and tax relief for operators, finally took a stand on the crude oil dumping issue Thursday.

"It was a middle-of-the-road stand," said Bob Landreth, a Midland oilman and member of Save Domestic Oil, a group of independent producers and producing organizations that opposes the dumping of oil priced crude in America by foreign producers.

The Republican senator told an audience of almost 100 at the Petroleum Museum on Thursday that she had not taken an active position on the issue, because she had been focused more on fighting for reduced taxes and fewer government regulations, and because the industry was divided on the issue.

She did, however, say that she supported an appeal by Save Domestic Oil, because independents did not get a fair shake from the Department of Commerce. She also noted that it was her belief that actions taken by Save Domestic Oil had caused oil prices to increase.

Sen. Hutchison said she had focused on securing tax relief and regulatory relief for the industry, because the industry was over-taxed and over-regulated and could not compete in foreign markets.

Asked if she shared U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm's view that the high-cost domestic producer needed to make way for the low-cost foreign producer, Sen. Hutchison said she didn't want to get into comparisons.

"I will say that I truly support the domestic oil industry of America, and will fight to make it as strong as possible," she said.

She said she loved fighting for the oil industry, because she loved fighting for right. "U.S. Sen. Pete Dominici and I have more fun, when we are fighting for oil and gas, because we know we are fighting for what is right."

One of her prime battles in recent months has been with the Minerals Management Service (MMS) over royalty rates and payments on federal leases. "They (MMS) are not reasonable on royalty matters." She added also that she would not permit any royalty increase on federal lands without a vote of Congress.

She said that U.S. Sen. Barbara Boxer of California, chastised her for cheating California school children by not supporting higher royalty rates.

"An oil well that doesn't get drilled or one that gets plugged does not pay a penny to the school children," said Sen. Hutchison.

The former University of Texas cheerleader said the oil industry did not have many friends in Washington. "I do not understand why, everyone is not alarmed by the fact that we are 57 percent dependent on foreign imports."

PRAYER: MISD will hold moment of silence before games

establishment clause of the First Amendment."

Jacobson told the Reporter-Telegram he was "delighted to hear that so many school districts are deciding to abide by the law.

"You are sending the wrong message when you tell children that they can pick and choose among the laws they obey and don't obey," Jacobson said. "Religion is the single greatest issue that brings so many people to the fighting point. History certainly shows that."

Of the possibility of litigation over prayer at the football games, Greenwood ISD's Barber said, "Everyday I walk on the job, there is potential litigation," which is undergoing litigation in other areas.

Andrews ISD's Goodman noted that "there's a whole lot of people out there in the community that say, 'Hey, this is ridiculous.' A football game is a voluntarily-paid event that you would choose to go to.

"If you know it is a law, and the 5th Court ruling is law, and if you do it (hold prayer at a football game, for example), what kind of message are you sending to kids?" Goodman asked.

There is the squashing of tradition and the "confusion in the ruling because it is a 2-1 vote," Goodman noted. "What kind of message are you going to send to kids?

"It is the law while it is under appeal," Goodman said. The case may be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Goodman said that his ultimate decision on the prayer issue would be based on the proposition: "What's best for the kids."

Stanton ISD's White noted that the school's trustees by polling are "going to have to decide" on the prayer issue for tonight's game.

"It's a deal I can't even believe we are having to make a decision on, but we are. We are faced with it.

"We've always allowed our students to initiate it (prayer) and lead it, and they've always wanted to, which is probably the way it ought to be," White said. "We've never had any problems — not one word of objection that I am aware of."

The Stanton ISD trustees are "vehemently opposed to the very thought of" prohibiting prayer. "As the law stands, it is illegal."

In an Aug. 4 letter to Texas's public school superintendents, ACLU's Jacobson said that the ACLU feels "obligated to represent parents and students who believe that their rights have been violated" through public school prayer. The ACLU wants "to make sure that before the school year starts, there is no misunderstanding about our intentions."

"They fully intend to file lawsuits," White said. "We took (the ACLU letter) as a ... threat or a promise."

"What we have to look at is the worst-case scenario," White said. "If a big lawsuit was filed, and we lost, and the judgment was an outlandish one, what it would probably affect here is our tax rate. It affects other people who are not in a position to defend themselves."

Midland ISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said that a "moment of silence in honor of a deceased person or for contemplation" will be allowed Midland games.

"But we are not going to openly violate the decision of the court," Baressi said.

For several years, the Midland ISD policy allowed students to welcome people at the games. "The students could do what they felt like as long as they were not proselytizing," Baressi said. "But this year, they won't pray at all." But there is to be a moment of silence that would end with "Thank you," but not with "Amen," he said.

"I'm not saying we didn't pray" in past events. "If we did, it was a student-initiated thing."

Dr. Vernon Stokes, superintendent of the Ector County ISD, said that the Odessa schools allowed prayer in the past.

"We are going to abide by the law," Stokes said. "And the law is you do not have public prayer at football games. We will not be having a moment of silence at the ball game, either. Our attorney advised us that's pretty borderline. If you have that in lieu of prayer, you are getting very close to the same kind of thing even though that hasn't been formally ruled on as such .... It's slippery. Our position is, we are going to abide by the law of the land."

Big Spring ISD Superintendent W.A. "Bill" McQueary said that the school would allow a "moment of silence to reflect on good sportsmanship and protection and safety and protection of the participants in the contest.

"People have the freedom to pray if they like or to just stand and wait for the National Anthem," McQueary said.

Midland lawyer Vern Martin figured that "the only ones who have any legitimate complaints about prayer, per se, would be atheists.

"If they don't believe in God, it's not any of their business, anyway. However, they are the ones who made all the noise that caused the furors" over school prayer, Martin said.

"I know several of the (football) players in our youth group ... " Kelview Heights Baptist Church Youth Minister Shayne O'Brien said. "They can sure pray on their own. They can lead other students (in prayer). They can still do that. You can't take prayer out of school."

Texas A&M researchers clone steer

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — The fuzzy white 125-pound calf looks and acts like any other 24-day-old Brahman newborn but its age is what has Texas A&M University researchers fascinated.

The calf, known as Second Chance, is a clone from a 21-year-old steer, meaning its cells might have a biological age equivalent to that of an 88-year-old human.

"We think he is the oldest adult male to ever have been cloned," Mark Westhusin, one of two Texas A&M scientists who headed the project, said Thursday as they showed off Second Chance.

"He's certainly going to be a really good model for us to understand some of the things about aging... We're really proud to have him here. He's a real showman."

Asked if the baby bull actually could be 21, Westhusin replied: "We don't know."

"We have plans to look at his cells and see if we do see aging effects. We want to look at his general physiology, to see if he's acting like a normal calf."

What researchers will do is examine Second Chance's chromosomes under a microscope to see if they have the characteristics of his elderly predecessor, who died at about age 21.

The technology used by Westhusin and partner Jonathan Hill is essentially the same that's been used in other similar projects since a Scottish sheep named Dolly was cloned in 1997.

"We didn't do anything different, except we didn't expect it to work," Hill said.

Second Chance's DNA came from skin cells from a steer named Chance which were put into eggs. It took 189 attempts before a surrogate cow called "007" delivered the calf, which weighed 87 pounds at birth. Six earlier pregnancies either failed or were terminated.

"With (Second) Chance, we decided to let him go on and see if he'd make it," Westhusin said. "We're much more interested in improving the efficiency of the technology and try to determine why so many did not make it."

The clone's original, Chance, was owned by Ralph and Sandra Fisher of Swiss Alp. Their herd of 12 Brahmans is used for television, movies and other show business work.

Chance was especially good — and gentle — an unusual characteristic for a 2,200-pound Brahman bull. Age and illness caught up with him and he died last September. During one of his numerous visits to the Texas A&M animal hospital, Ralph Fisher convinced Westhusin the bull, which had to be castrated a couple of years earlier, would make a desirable clone candidate.

suspect, resulting in the injury to a child charge.

Castillo is believed to be driving a 1992 gray Ford Taurus with Texas license plate number GGG-66P, police said.

The suspect is an Hispanic male, between 5-feet-6-inches and 5-feet-8-inches tall, clean-shaven, and was wearing a tucked-in blue shirt and black jeans at the scene of the crime, police said.

Midland Police Chief John Urby wouldn't comment on the case other than the detectives were following additional leads and hoped to solve the case soon.

Immigration Service's deportation case partially settled in federal court

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

One phase of a three-pronged federal lawsuit that alleges the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) engineered an illegal 1995 deportation "sting operation" in Odessa has been settled in U.S. District Court in Midland.

The lawsuit alleges that Odessan Ricardo Rodriguez and other U.S. citizens were caught up in the INS deportation operation in 1995 in the Ector County Probation where Rodriguez and other probationers had gathered at a special meeting called by the now-retired probation director, Mike Neeley.

The San Antonio-based Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law of Texas, which represents the plaintiffs, including Rodriguez, alleges that Neeley violated the law when he required the probationers to attend a special meeting at the probation office and then allowed INS agents to arrest persons they suspected were subject to deportation.

Rodriguez, a U.S. citizen and hence not subject to deportation, reportedly was arrested, handcuffed and held for a few hours by the U.S. Border Patrol in Midland.

The Ector County Probation Office, which is operated by the state of Texas, recently settled the lawsuit, which still involves the INS and the Ector County Sheriff's Office.

"The INS had wrongly believed that (Rodriguez) was subject to deportation proceedings because of a criminal conviction," said Lynn Coyle of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights. "He was a United States citizen," she said, "and his prior criminal conviction did not make him deportable."

Other plaintiffs in the action were relatives who had accompanied a probationer to the meeting.

The settlement with the probation office stipulates that the probation director and employees "will not request or demand that a probationer come into the office when the purpose is simply to assist INS with" enforcing civil immigration laws, according to Mary Kenney, director of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights.

"We think the operation ... was illegal," said Ms. Kenney, who noted that Rodriguez, who was born in Mexico but to at least one parent who was a U.S. citizen, "initially didn't realized that he was a citizen and INS didn't initially realize he was a citizen ... until he was an adult."

Ralph Longmire, the assistant Texas attorney general who represented the Ector County Probation Office in the lawsuit heard by U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson, was unavailable for comment on Wednesday.

But in an earlier court document, Longmire had held that "the evidence shows that defendant Neeley agreed at INS's request and in good faith to help the INS accomplish that which INS had every right to do — contact the possibly detain and arrest individuals for deportation.

'(Rodriguez) was a United States citizen and his prior criminal conviction did not make him deportable.'
— Lynn Coyle of the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights

"There was nothing illegal about the goal of the agreement," Longmire held. "Again, 'One cannot conspire to do that which is not illegal.'"

Still in the lawsuit are the INS and the Ector County Sheriff's Department, which allegedly had cooperated with the INS to help contain the probationers.

John Andre, a Washington, D.C.-based assistant U.S. attorney who represents the INS, noted that the "INS has not settled. Only the state defendants have settled. The civil-rights case is still pending."

The Ector County Attorney's Office represents the Ector County Sheriff's Department in the suit.

"We deny any capability whatsoever," said Jackson Jones, assistant Ector County attorney. Tracey Bright is the Ector County attorney.

Some time earlier in a related case for monetary damages, Andre noted, the INS awarded Rodriguez $10,000.

"There was no admission of wrongdoing," he said.

The Rodriguez case now involving the INS and the Ector County Sheriff's Department is on the November 1999 federal-court docket in Midland.

"I had not seen a case where the probation office used its name and its authority to deceive people into coming into the office and then, when they arrived, having INS surprise everyone," Ms. Coyle said. "I have never seen it before. We are still litigating the (civil-rights) case against INS."

WAVE STEP

The Midland Police Department will institute the third and final phase of its Summer WAVE STEP program during the Labor Day holiday.

Beginning today through Thursday, Sept. 9, police officers will work overtime to target speeders and seat belt violators to raise awareness of the seriousness and dangers of speeding and driving without proper restraints.

During the first phase, the Memorial Day holiday, 367 violators were contacted and 332 citations given. During the second phase, July Fourth holiday, 268 violators were contacted and 216 citations issued.

The Summer STEP WAVE campaign funds were made possible by a grant of $10,000 by the Texas Department of Transportation.

Taste of Home

The Taste of Home Cooking School comes to Midland Center Thursday, Sept. 16. The school will include onstage demonstrations of food preparation, the largest kitchen appliances, new food products and innovative cooking techniques, along with fun and lots of prizes. Everyone who attends will receive a free cookbook, which includes all the recipes prepared onstage.

Sponsors are KGEE, KODM, KNFM, KMND and B-93. Lowe's Home Improvement is sponsoring the appliances and cooking area. Tickets are $5 for general admission seating. Tickets are on sale at The Ivy Cottage, A Perfect Setting, Once Upon A time and Silk Garden in Midland, and The Diamond Company and Town & Country Drug in Odessa.

Retired Officers

The Oilpatch Chapter of the Retired Officers Association will meet at 6 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 9, at the Clab at Mission Dorado. A buffet dinner and program will begin at 7 p.m. The buffet is $14 per person. All former officers of the U.S. uniformed services are invited. For reservations and additional information, call 683-1824.

Texas congressman calls for lifting of U.S. embargo on Cuba

HAVANA (AP) - A Texas congressman and rice farmers in search of new markets asked that U.S. restrictions on food and medicine sales to this communist country be lifted after they toured an agricultural cooperative and examined produce at an open market.

"It is becoming increasingly clear to me that the export embargo, with regard to food and medicines ... is no longer necessary," U.S. Rep. Nick Lampson told a news conference. "The objectives for which it was created no longer make any sense in either political or economic terms."

He said the sanctions hurt two groups: "the Cuban people, who need our food, and U.S. farmers, who can produce it in abundance."

The lawmaker called on fellow members of Congress to support pending legislation to eliminate economic sanctions on food and medicine sales to Cuba. He also asked that President Clinton sign it into law "without further delay."

The visit underscored increasing congressional interest in Cuba, and growing support for ways to help hard-hit American farmers in need of new markets.

Visiting Cuba at the same time on unrelated trips were Rep. Sanford Bishop, D-Georgia, who met Wednesday with key Cuban legislators in Havana, and Rep. Danny Davis, D-Ill., who came to acquaint himself with Cuban health care.

All three congressmen met Wednesday night with Ricardo Alarcon, president of Cuba's National Assembly.

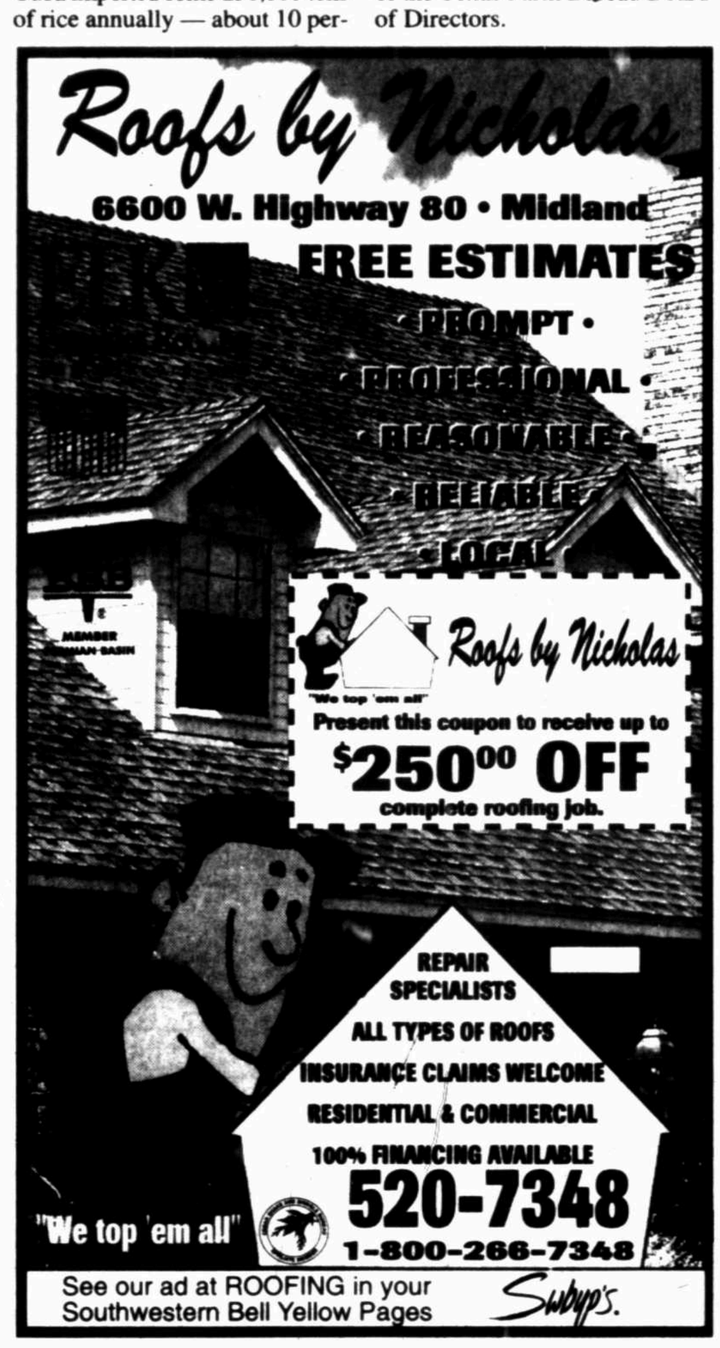

Lampson, D-Beaumont, and representatives of the Texas Farm Bureau traveled to the Augusto Cesar Sandino farm cooperative just outside Havana early Thursday.

Later, at an agricultural market, Lampson was approached by an enthusiastic middle-aged woman who remembered the long-grain Texas rice of youth, before the embargo took effect. Today, Cubans consume short-grain rice from Asia.

The Texans said Cuba represents a potential market of some $700 million in agricultural products that could be sold here by American producers annually.

Before the U.S. embargo was imposed in the early 1960s after Fidel Castro came to power, Cuba imported some 250,000 tons of rice annually — about 10 percent of the rice exported by the United States today.

"Once this door is open, there will be many other opportunities that involve many other U.S. agricultural commodities," said Curt Mowery, a rice farmer from Rosharon, Texas, and a member of the Texas Farm Bureau Board of Directors.

Fired coach accused of depositing $25,000 check into his own account

EDINBURG (AP) — Pan American coach Delray Brooks was fired because officials believe he deposited a $25,000 check from a road game into his personal bank account and withdrew money from the account, The (McAllen) Monitor reported Thursday.

But Brooks, in a letter addressed to athletic director Bill Weidner, denied the allegations and vowed to prove he did nothing wrong, the newspaper reported in a copyright story.

In the memo obtained by the newspaper, Brooks said he had not met with any UTPA officials, including Weidner, concerning the reasons for his dismissal last week.

But Weidner said he met with Brooks on two occasions to discuss two memos — a notice of intent to terminate Brooks and a termination letter.

"We met together ... in my office," Weidner said. "I explained the situation with him and then handed him the letter. I was very specific with the issues in the letters."

Brooks did not return a phone call to The Associated Press Thursday.

Brooks is a former assistant coach at Kentucky who helped the Wildcats to three Final Four appearances, including the 1996 national championship.

Pan Am hired him in 1997 to restore the dignity of the men's basketball program after the school lost its NCAA certification in 1996. The certification was fully restored in 1998.

Brooks, whose salary was nearly $63,000 last season, went 8-46 in his first two seasons as Broncs coach and was dismissed by UTPA on Aug. 23. University officials said Brooks was fired because of findings from an ongoing police investigation concerning the men's basketball program.

Campus police said they were investigating possible misuse of funds. No charges have been filed.

The school also chose not to renew the contracts of two assistant coaches, George Morgan and Patrick Harrington, for the 1999-2000 season.

According to an Aug. 20 memo — the notice of intent to terminate Brooks — Weidner accused the coach of depositing a check for $25,000 from a game at Southwest Missouri State into his personal bank account.

Brooks then made "a number of non-university business withdrawals against that checking account, including substantial cash withdrawals," the memo reads.

In his Aug. 21 response, Brooks denied knowledge of how the check was deposited into his personal account.

"I do not know (how) it got into my account," Brooks wrote. "But, I plan to find out. I ask that (you) please allow (me) to prove my innocence. In life all you have is your integrity. I did not take $25,000 from the University and use those funds for my personal use. I had several problems with that account and had it closed late in January."

On Aug. 23, Weidner wrote the memo notifying Brooks of his termination effective the following day.

Brooks appealed his firing on Friday with a letter addressed to Weidner. In the letter, Brooks disagreed with Weidner's justification for his dismissal.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS BUDGET AND PROPOSED TAX RATE

The Midland Independent School District will hold a public meeting at 7:15 PM September 14,1999 in Board Room of the Administration building located at 615 W Missouri St Midland Texas

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the district's budget that will determine the tax rate that will be adopted. Public participation is invited.

The tax rate that is ultimately adopted at this meeting or at a separate meeting at a later date may not exceed the proposed rate shown below unless the district publishes a revised notice containing the same information and comparisons set out below and holds another public meeting to discuss the revised notice

COMPARISON OF PROPOSED RATES WITH LAST YEAR'S RATES

	MAINT & OPER	INT & SINKING	TOTAL	LOCAL REV PER STUDENT	STATE REV PER STUDENT
LESS STATE FUNDED TAX RELIEF	$0.1013	-$0.0257	$0.0756	N/A	N/A
LAST YEAR'S RATE Adjusted FOR TAX RELIEF	$1.5000	$0.1043	$1.6043	N/A	N/A
RATE TO MAINTAIN SAME LEVEL OF MAINTENANCE & OPERATION REVENUE & PAY DEBT SERVICE	$1.3944	$0.1725	$1.5669	$2,910	$2,289
PROPOSED RATE	$1.4587	$0.1100	$1.5687	$3,079	$2,210

* The interest & sinking fund tax revenue is used to pay for bonded indebtedness on construction, equipment or both The bonds and the tax rate necessary to pay these bonds were approved by the voters of this district

 The rate to maintain the same level of maintenance & operation & pay debt service does not reflect revenue available to the district in the 1999-2000 school year for the pay raise for classroom teachers, full time librarians, full time counselors, and full time school nurses enacted by the 76th legislature The estimated cost of the pay raise for the 1999-2000 school year is $5,940,000

COMPARISON OF PROPOSED LEVY WITH LAST YEAR'S LEVY ON AVERAGE RESIDENCE

	LAST YEAR	THIS YEAR
Average Market Value of Residences	$ 64,643	$ 66,962
Average Taxable Value of Residences	$ 43,179	$ 45,266
Last Year's Rate Versus proposed Rate per $100 value	$ 1.5287	$ 1.5687
Taxes Due On Average Residence	$ 660.08	$ 710.09
Increase/Decrease in Taxes	$ 50.01

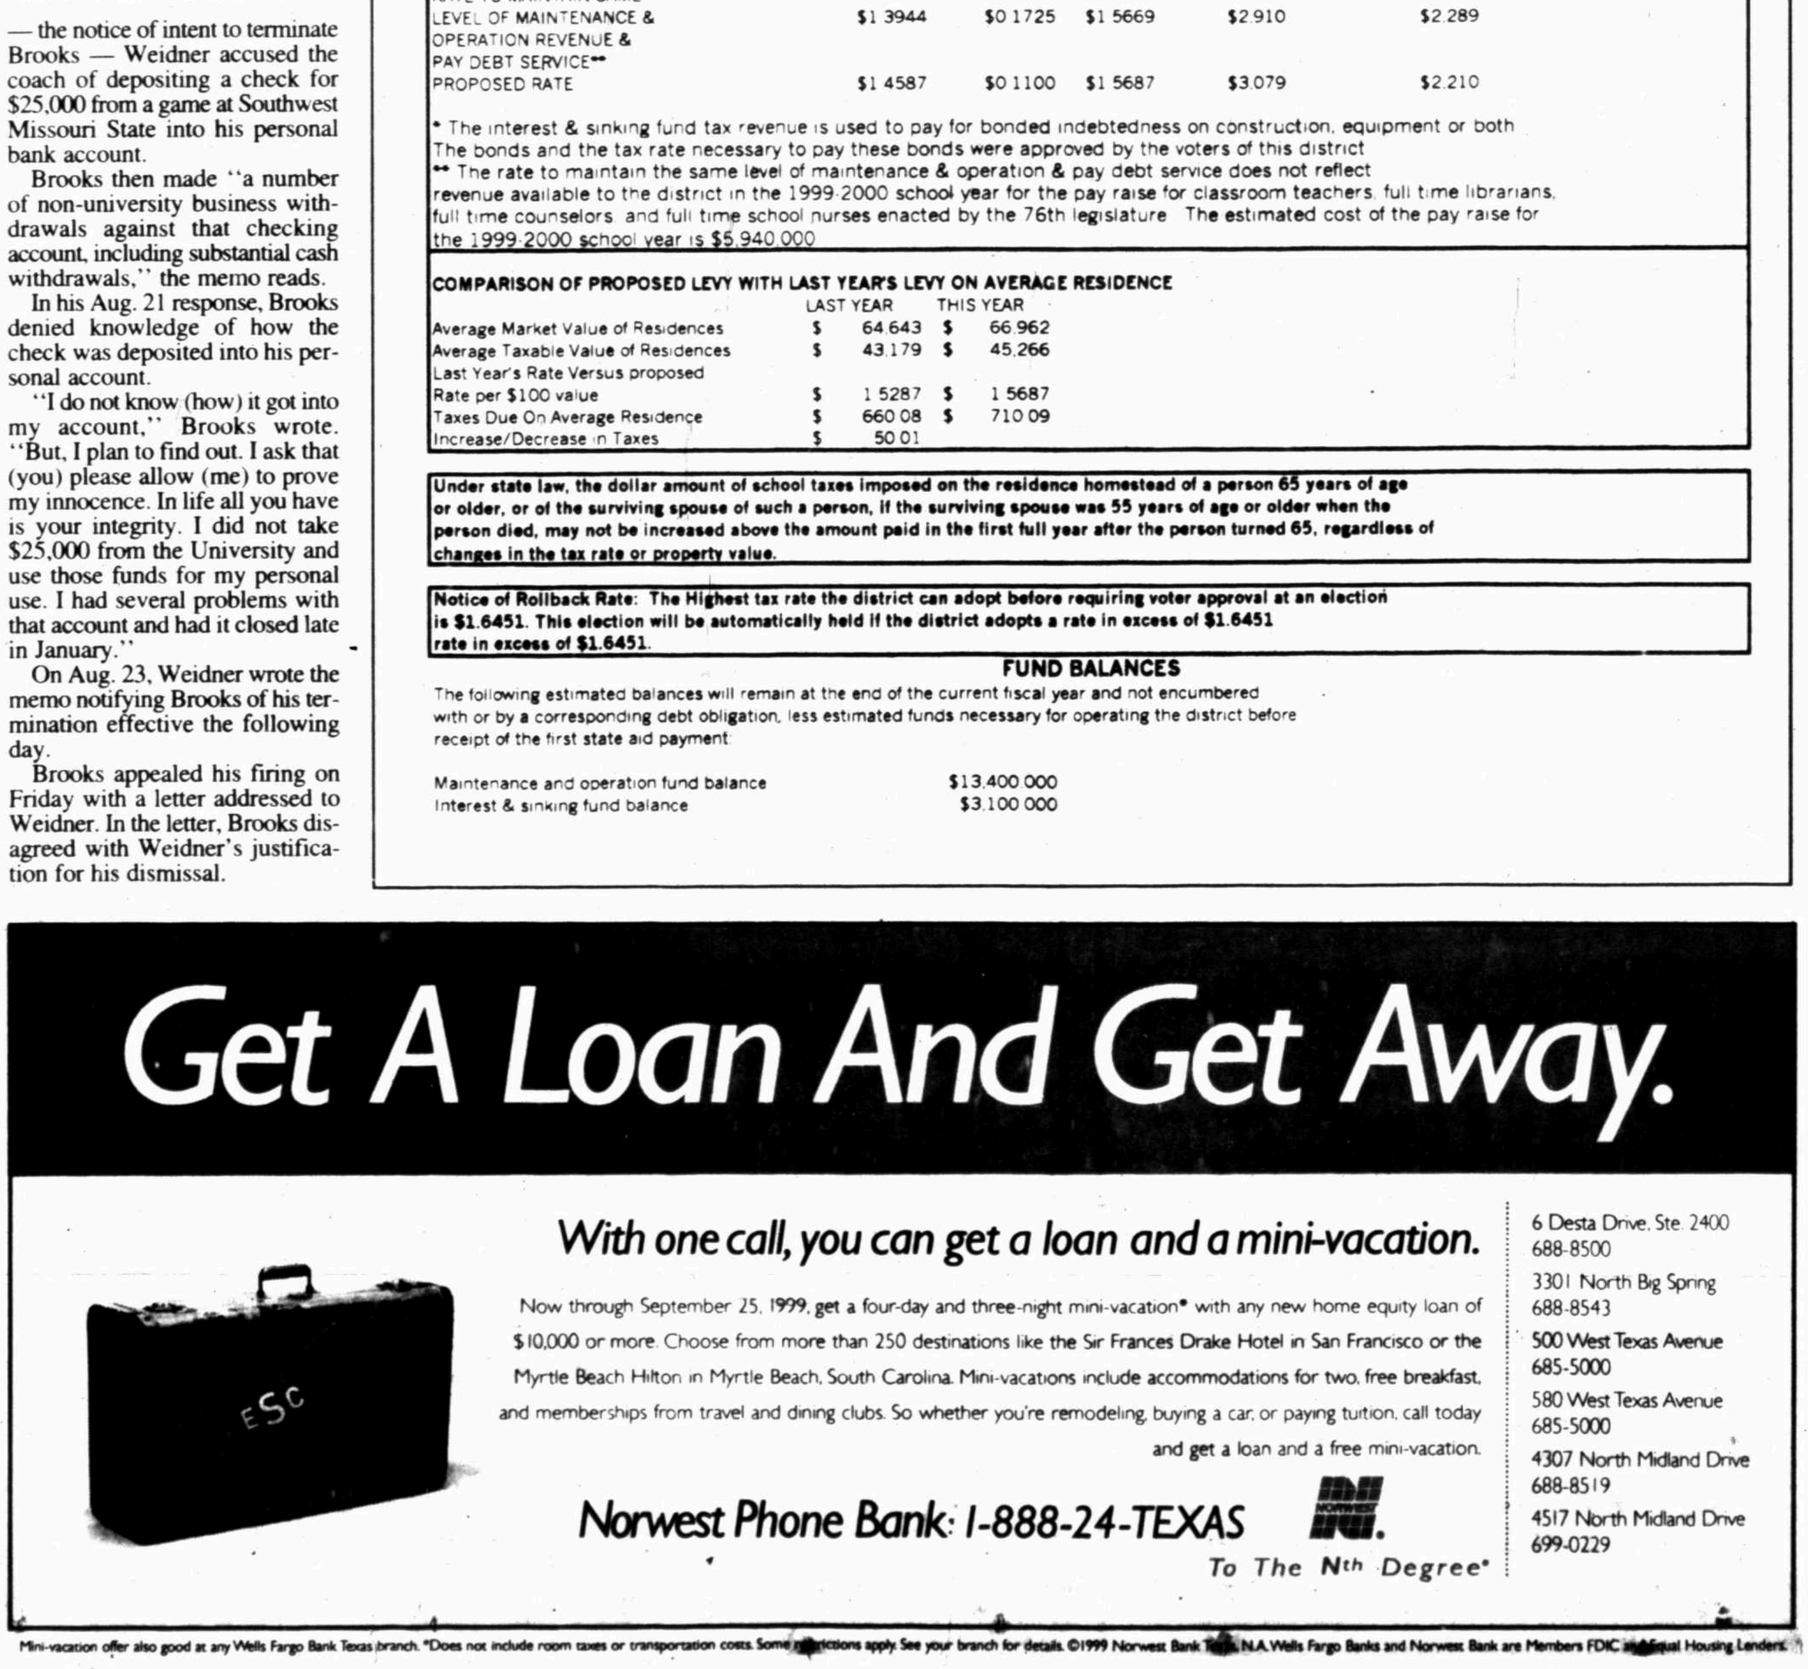

Under state law, the dollar amount of school taxes imposed on the residence homestead of a person 65 years of age or older, or of the surviving spouse of such a person, if the surviving spouse was 55 years of age or older when the person died, may not be increased above the amount paid in the first full year after the person turned 65, regardless of changes in the tax rate or property value.

Notice of Rollback Rate: The Highest tax rate the district can adopt before requiring voter approval at an election is $1.6451. This election will be automatically held if the district adopts a rate in excess of $1.6451 rate in excess of $1.6451.

FUND BALANCES

The following estimated balances will remain at the end of the current fiscal year and not encumbered with or by a corresponding debt obligation, less estimated funds necessary for operating the district before receipt of the first state aid payment:

Maintenance and operation fund balance	$13,400,000
Interest & sinking fund balance	$3,100,000

Bush would strip federal money from bad schools, allow voucher system

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush said Thursday that federal funds should be confiscated from the worst-performing schools and made available to parents for private education, tutoring or "whatever offers hope."

"In my administration, federal money will no longer follow failure," the Texas governor told the Latin Business Association, a Hispanic group.

Under Bush's plan, every school getting the Title I money would be required to test its impoverished students on basic academics each year. A warning would be issued to schools that fail to make progress toward state standards. After three years of no progress, the Title I money would be matched with other federal education money and given to the state, which would set up an education account — about $1,500 a year — for each affected student.

The parents could choose how to spend the money. They could keep the money and their child in the original school or opt for an alternative, including private school and tutoring — "for whatever offers hope," Bush said.

The government currently spends $7.7 billion on Title I to help educate poor children.

A Bush aide said the plan would require states to create mechanisms for ensuring parents spend the money on education.

Bush said federal programs affecting teacher training, curriculum research and school safety would have to prove results. Those that didn't would be stripped of their funding.

Bush also proposed shifting the $4.4 billion Head Start program from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Education Department, a step he said would return the program's focus to preparing disadvantaged preschoolers for the classroom.

Invoking the buzzwords often heard in school-reform efforts in California, Texas and many other states, Bush said schools must establish clear goals that help measure students' basic skills. Testing helps ensure they achieve them he said. And some must take responsibility when they fail, he said, singling out principals.

'All monopolies are slow to reform when consumers have no power to express their frustration. In education, parents who have options have influence.'

— Gov. George Bush, TX (R)

At the same time, he said, local control of schools is essential to meeting the goals.

Education Secretary Richard Riley said he saw similarities between Bush's Title I proposal and those of his brother Jeb, who as Florida's governor pushed through the nation's first statewide voucher plan.

"No matter how you dress it up, how long you delay it, or what you call it, a voucher is a voucher," Riley said. "Gov. George W. Bush would have us start down the road of accountability, then take a dangerous detour into vouchers."

"We would be against a plan like this," said Reginald Felton, director of federal relations for the National School Boards Association. "The objective is to raise the academic achievement of all students."

But at a Title I elementary school Bush visited Thursday, the idea of vouchers won cautious support from two teachers.

"I think it is a good idea, because sometimes private schools have a lot more to offer — more personal, smaller classes," said teacher Joann Smith.

She and fellow teacher Janet Leinin didn't believe that such programs would rob Bennett-Kew Elementary School of students and the public money that follows them, because, they said, it is academically one of the strongest in the region.

Among his GOP presidential opponents, Ken Blackwell, national chairman of Steve Forbes' campaign, said Bush didn't go far enough.

"I think his program is a bit weak in one particular area — he tells parents to wait three years for real school reform," said Blackwell, who is also secretary of state in Ohio, a state that is experimenting with vouchers. "I don't believe and neither does Steve Forbes that we can wait three years for real school reform."

Elizabeth Dole's spokesman, Ari Fleischer, said, "I thought it was more notable for what was not in it than for what was in it." He cited the discipline issue.

Dole favors school vouchers, he said.

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Bradley, campaigning in Ohio said vouchers are not the answer to the problems of public education. "I think that there are problems — not the least of which are issues of church and state — and ultimately they will have to be resolved," he said.

As a senator from New Jersey, Bradley said he voted twice for federally funded voucher experiments.

Bush delivered his remarks in a state where voters have soundly rejected proposals to allow public money for private schools, an arrangement often referred to as school vouchers.

In Texas, Bush has backed a proposed pilot program for taxpayer-funded vouchers for private school tuition. State lawmakers have declined to pass the proposal ever since Bush became governor.

Last month a federal judge halted a voucher program in Ohio, saying it appeared to have the "primary effect of advancing religion" because it allowed public money to be used for religious and other private schools.

The judge later said the program can remain in place for students who participated in the program last year, but said that would last only one semester or until a final judgment is reached.

Bush offered a forceful defense of such programs.

"All monopolies are slow to reform when consumers have no power to express their frustration," he said. "In education, parents who have options have influence."

Holiday deaths can be avoided by safe driving

Midlanders heading out today for the Labor Day holiday will face traditionally crowded and fast-paced traffic on Texas highways, but they also will be expected to adhere to a number of new traffic laws that took effect Wednesday.

Most important is the lowered legal blood-alcohol limit, dropped from .10 to 0.08 that law enforcement officials say is another weapon for them in the battle against drunken driving, the big killer on highways in past years.

In fact, Col. Dudley M. Thomas, DPS director, said, "This new law sends a message to Texans that tolerance of drinking and driving is at an all-time low. We will drive that point home in our enforcement efforts."

Another new law is one that allows trucks, vehicles pulling trailers and school activity buses to drive the same speed as cars on interstates and highways — up to 70 miles per hour.

That change can mean more deadly accidents will occur this Labor Day weekend. As Thomas stressed, "Bigger trucks, traveling at faster speeds, will take longer to stop. Texans should adjust their behavior accordingly, and we hope truck drivers will handle this new law with increased responsibility.

While the combination of heavy holiday traffic and the new law permitting faster travel by truckers could combine to increase the death count on Texas highways this weekend, it doesn't necessarily mean that those deaths are inevitable. If motorists will not drink alcoholic beverages before or while driving, will not exceed the speed limit, will use seat belts and observe the other "common sense" rules of safe driving, the holiday death count of 39 people could be lowered or even avoided.

Texans should drive carefully this weekend and really enjoy the holiday.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Sept. 3, the 246th day of 1999. There are 119 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 3, 1939, Britain and France declared war on Germany, two days after the Nazi invasion of Poland.

On this date:

In 1189, England's King Richard I (the Lion-Hearted) was crowned in Westminster.

In 1658, Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector of England, died.

It is not necessary to use toxic site for Olympics

If you were going to clean up a toxic-waste dump, would you build a house on the site and have your family sleep there? That is precisely where our Olympic athletes will be sleeping.

One of Australia's top geologists explained the situation to us.

Anderson

Ten years ago, the site of the 2000 Summer Olympics was a forsaken, noxious marsh dubbed the "dioxin capital of the world."

The 1,900-acre area, called Homebush Bay, just nine miles west of downtown Sydney, Australia, was a toxic dump for 50 years, storage for an estimated 9 million tons of household and industrial wastes.

This industrial graveyard was used by chemical giants such as ICI and Union Carbide. They are gone now, but their legacy remains in toxic wastes buried in unmarked sites. Swimming and fishing have been banned for nine years in the water and wetlands surrounding the area, after discovery of 50 drums of dioxin — some with rusting holes — that had been dumped in the Bay. The fish are toxic and not fit for human consumption.

But Sydney's Olympic bid committee came up with the idea of using the Games as a way to clean up the mess and create a new community. Sydney's winning 1993 bid included optimistic artistic renderings of Homebush Bay, an environmental and eco-friendly place to compete and enjoy nature.

The environmental aspect of the bid was considered to be the key facet, but many argue that Sydney hasn't cleaned up the dangerous site, instead just masking the toxins. Bulldozers have shifted toxic soil, not removed it, according to local authorities, and a waterway less than a mile from the Olympic Village still remains heavily polluted with highly toxic organochlorines and heavy metals.

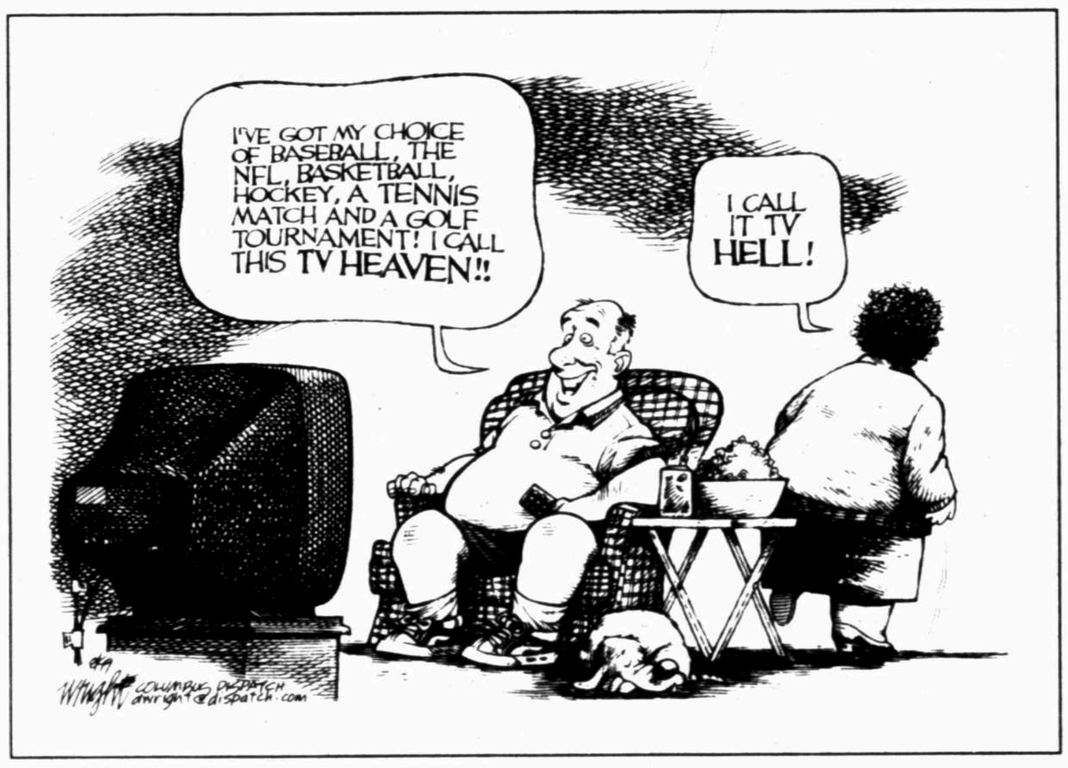

Despite this, the Olympic Co-ordination Authority in Sydney is building a massive village and Olympic venues that will host 15 of 28 sporting events, the opening and closing ceremonies, and the athletes themselves. The Authority even refers to the events as the Green Olympics, so pleased is it with the results of a seven-year clean-up effort.

The city boasts that $89 million has been spent in remediation and that much of the waste was consolidated into four areas and sealed. Waterways and wetlands are still being cleansed, and birds are even returning — not a complete return to the aboriginal paradise of 100 years ago, but an improvement.

The issue, though, is not whether the Authority has cleaned up an environmental mess, but if the construction of permanent housing units on the site is really a prudent decision. How many times have we been told that everything is fixed only to be told later that everything was not? This is troubling enough when we take medicines that turn out to be harmful, but those are risks we take in an effort to cure illnesses. But why take the risk when it is unnecessary? Why not turn toxic sites into garbage dumps or railroad switching yards or any number of uses that do not include human habitation?

It was not necessary to use Homebush Bay as an Olympic site, yet oddly enough, we are told, it was the very idea of toxic cleanup that encouraged the International Olympic Committee to choose Sydney. Then again, considering the IOC's tarnished reputation emanating from bribery in the selection of Salt Lake City for the Winter Olympics, who can say what motivated this extraordinarily strange selection of a site in Sydney.

Students should come before sports complex

Recently, there have been several front page articles about the effect of reduced enrollment in MISD. I think it is important that our attention is not drawn away from the fact that at the secondary level, there is still overcrowding.

I suggest that the voting citizens of Midland visit the secondary schools to get the real picture. Witness the crowded hallways during class changes; survey the numbers of students per class; count the number of portable buildings; and check out the "other" rooms that have been converted to classrooms to reduce the burden of enrollment above the capacity for which the original school building was built.

Go to a school assembly and sit in the remaining small space on the floor with half the student body. Then ask yourself, if your tax dollars are going to be increased, which would you rather have: More space in a new sports complex, or more space for your students in the classrooms? Voters will have this choice. What are the priorities?

Council's decision was not racial attack

At the risk of maligning a respected community member, I am appalled at Alma Marshall's diatribe (Letters, Aug. 29) about the second assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. While he, too, had a flair for the dramatic, it is ludicrous to suggest that an economic ally and historically sound decision by our Midland City Council can in any way be construed as a deliberate racial attack.

No issue in this country is void of opposition, nor should it be. Surely the black community never expected total acquiescence in any matter of historical significance.

I doubt that Dr. King would have appreciated or approved of Ms. Marshall's retaliatory threat to remember Aug. 25th.

There are many streets named after presidents

To the individuals who suggested a street being named for Abraham Lincoln, I would like to inform them that in southeast Midland there are a number of streets named after U.S. presidents.

To name a few, there are Jefferson, Tyler, Madison, Adams, Jackson, Calhoun and, guess who, Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the United States of America. His name is on a street in the African American community and thank God we did not have to ask for it.

Community responds to people in trouble

On Aug. 23, I was involved in a three-car accident on Interstate 20 in Midland. A white car came up behind me at a speed later estimated at 91 mph, hitting me and causing my car to skid off the road, over the median, and stop on the other side of the highway.

By the grace of God no one involved in the accident was killed or seriously injured. I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who was involved in helping as a result of the accident.

Several kind people stopped and gave their names as witnesses. Others offered the use of their cell phones. All officers and emergency personnel were extremely helpful and comforting during this stressful time.

Thank you also to the fire marshal, who transported me to the emergency room for an examination for injuries. I am very grateful to God for saving my life and the lives of the others involved, and for the blessing of living in a community that responds so warmly to people in trouble.

MLK Jr. reminds us that God wants justice

I would like to add my voice to renaming Fairgrounds Road to Martin Luther King Jr. Road. I believe that Rabbi Marc Gellman and Monsignor Thomas Hartman best summarized my beliefs concerning the Rev. King when they wrote in their book, "How Do You Spell God?"

They write: "The words that the prophets heard from God were to tell the people to 'do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly with your God.' They said, 'Let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever flowing stream.'

"These words moved mountains and moved hearts. Martin Luther King Jr. helped change the laws that hurt black people in America and helped America live up to its ideals. He loved God and he loved people like a minister should, but he also loved freedom the way a prophet should.

"He reminded us that religion is not just about saying prayers and giving presents. Religion is about feeding hungry people and clothing naked people and freeing captive people. Everybody knows that religion should be about these things, but sometimes it takes a man like Martin Luther King Jr. to really remind us that God wants justice."

Perhaps, just perhaps, when we address a letter to, or drive on Martin Luther King Jr. Road, we will remember that we too can, "do justlce, love mercy, and walk humbly with God."

Reassessing Joe McCarthy from human angle

You hear it all the time — "McCarthyite," "McCarthyism." You're supposed to respond by plunging fingers down throat: Gag; urp. What a terrible-horrible-awful-no-good creature, the late Joe McCarthy.

Such is folklore. Frogs cause warts, and Joe McCarthy established a regime marked by suppression of free thought and artistic endeavor. The legend endures to this day.

Except ... except ... this: Wouldn't it be constructive, half a century after the Great Terror, to look back and see if the old werewolf was as awful as when many supposed they heard him pounding after them?

Naturally, it would be constructive. Not that we're up for it, but God bless him (as per usual), William F. Buckley gives it the old college try in his fine new novel, "The Redhunter" (Little, Brown; $25).

The standard riposte is going to be, whaddaya expect? Hasn't WFB spent his career defending Joe?

Murchison

Such a question implies that everybody who ever had a good word to say for the mission of clearing communists from government is, ipso facto, an apologist for extremism.

Even if such an imputation held water, it could not spoil a vastly entertaining and, yes, educational novel. Novel — not biography. (Prof. Thomas Reeves, in the '80s, did the definitive job there.) A biographer writes from the outside; a novelist tries to crawl inside the skin and share, from that perspective, what he finds.

What Buckley shows us in "The Redhunter" is the human Joe McCarthy, recollected in part, imagined in part (with research); a Joe McCarthy who wasn't any plaster saint, wasn't George Washington either, or even Calvin Coolidge, but who tried sincerely to serve a valid and righteous cause.

He didn't always use good judgment, this Joe McCarthy. But he had virtues: He liked and enjoyed people; had a sense of humor about himself; never bad-mouthed his adversaries in private, only in public; and, not least, understood how large communism's threat was to the West.

Buckley's reader sees Joe through the eyes of a fictional McCarthy staffer, the brilliant Harry Bontecou, who has reasons of his own for despising communism. To Bontecou, anti-communism is a matter of patriotism and common sense. The reds do threaten America; they do have agents in the government. Shouldn't somebody do something about it? We meet those who are doing something — not just Joe but also Whittaker Chambers, Richard Nixon, J. Edgar Hoover.

(Ah, but how come no mention of Joseph Kennedy Sr., who was tight with McCarthy, imbuing his older sons with the kind of anti-communist zeal that subsequently became unfashionable?)

For a while, things go great: reds on the run. But Joe gets careless — specifically in his engagement of, and growing dependence on, his real-life, loose-cannon staffer, Roy Cohn. Cohn cushions an already sheltered boss from reality. McCarthy's own friends come to question his judgment and its presumptive ill-effects on a cause more important than any man. Joe drifts helplessly down the neck of the whiskey bottle. The Army-McCarthy hearings are a debacle; Army Counsel Welch asks if the senator has no shame at long last; the Senate censures the once-feared Joe; Joe dies — age 48.

Was Joe McCarthy a bad man? Had he been such, it seems unlikely that 33 senators, half of them Democrats, would have eulogized him. "For the perpetuity of the Republic," he fought, said Everett M. Dirksen.

Human, yes; painfully, distressingly so.

Opposition steals spotlight from Zedillo

MEXICO CITY (AP) — On a day normally dedicated to scrutinizing the president's most important speech of the year, Mexico was buzzing Thursday about the audacious — some say illegal — response by an opposition leader, who tore into the president sitting at his side.

Speaker of the House Carlos Medina's critical response to President Ernesto Zedillo's annual state-of-the-nation address to Congress on Wednesday was stunning in a country where presidents are historically treated like royalty.

Congressional rules call for a brief, general response to the president's address. But after Zedillo painted a picture of a country with a solid economy and growing democracy, Medina launched a 25-minute speech accusing the president of failing to meet his obligation to keep Congress informed of the real state of the country.

"It doesn't do any good to hear again that 'we're doing well' if poverty continues growing dangerously in the country," said Medina, of the center-right National Action Party.

He proceeded to attack the government's record on education, crime, an Indian uprising in the south and corruption. He also denounced the government's failure to provide documents sought by the opposition-led Congressional House in its investigation of Mexico's giant bank bailout.

Medina's speech was repeatedly interrupted by governing party legislators, who screamed at him to stop, and by opposition lawmakers, who chanted their support. Zedillo's speech had also been interrupted by catcalls — which Medina, as house speaker, unsuccessfully tried to quell.

After the speeches, members of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party said they would try to have Medina removed from his leadership post. They said his speech violated Congressional rules.

The governing party's leader in the House, Arturo Nuñez, said Medina had no right to use the response to give his own opinions or those of his party.

"In speaking in the name of the 628 legislators ... he can't in any way make value judgments that don't reflect the plurality of Congress," he said Thursday on the Formato 21 radio station.

In an earlier interview with the same station, Medina said the governing-party reaction was so strong only "because they are not accustomed to hearing someone speak like that."

He said "in no way" did he violate Congressional rules. "The response was concrete, in general terms, and brief," he said.

The 25-minute speech would have been about half as long without interruptions.

The public apparently had few problems with Medina's response, according to a poll published by the newspaper Reforma. It said 75 percent thought the speech was "good" or "very good."

Quake victims fear government will leave them out in the cold

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's government split Thursday over how to house more than half a million quake survivors, who are crowded into borrowed rooms, damaged buildings, tent cities and even docked ferries as winter approaches.

Public Works Minister Koray Aydin insisted that the government could make good on its pledge to have 50,000 prefabricated houses ready within two months — even as he asked Turkish businesspeople for donations to help meet that goal.

"No one will be outside this winter," Aydin pledged in remarks quoted by the Takvim daily.

But critics inside and outside the government argue that the temporary houses would waste money that should be saved for rebuilding. They say it would be better to move quake victims into existing shelters for the winter — hotels, public housing and elsewhere — and provide rent assistance.

With time and money short, quake victims fear the government will end up leaving them out in the cold.

"Houses? They didn't even give us a tent!" complained 45-year-old Neriman Irim, squatting on a box outside the makeshift structure where her family of five has stayed since the Aug. 17 quake wrecked their home in the Avcilar neighborhood of Istanbul.

In the city of Izmit, southeast of Istanbul, victims were tearing wooden roof beams out of collapsed houses Thursday to store as firewood for the winter.

The 7.4-magnitude quake killed at least 14,691 people, according to the latest official count Thursday. Authorities say it rendered 56,768 homes uninhabitable.

Plane crash kills 10 Americans, two Tanzanians

ARUSHA, Tanzania (AP) — They were headed from one world-famous game reserve to another, traveling on an African dream safari when their charter aircraft slammed into the slope of an ancient volcano in northern Tanzania.

Ten Americans died in Wednesday's crash. But as rescue workers clambered through a heavily forested ravine Thursday to recover their remains — as well as those of their Tanzanian guide and their Tanzanian pilot — one small miracle emerged.

In the last seconds of his life, the pilot managed to warn a second plane carrying seven other American tourists to change altitude to escape bad flying conditions. That plane arrived safely.

The U.S. State Department released the names of the 10 Americans on Thursday, but the task of identifying the bodies from Wednesday's crash was likely to take several days because the plane apparently crashed at high velocity into Mount Meru.

The dead included two people each from New Jersey, New York and Florida, and one each from Connecticut, Massachusetts and Washington state. Several appeared to be family members, but their exact relations were not immediately clear.

Air Kenya official Deogratias Ngowi visited the crash site Thursday and said the plane apparently hit a tree, then lost both wings before plowing into a ravine.

Northern Air pilot Christopher Perreira and guide Wilson Meiriali also died in the crash of the Northern Air Cessna 404, officials said.

Israeli court convicts American of teen slaying

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Samuel Sheinbein was silent on the subject for two years. On Thursday, he spoke only a single word.

"Yes," the stone-faced Maryland 19-year-old said when an Israeli judge asked him whether he strangled an acquaintance with a rope in a middle-class suburb of Washington, D.C., then cut up the body with an electric saw and burned the parts.

Under a plea bargain that infuriated U.S. prosecutors, Sheinbein is to be sentenced to 24 years in an Israeli prison for the 1997 killing. He will probably be paroled after 14 years, counting the two years he has already spent in Israeli custody. He could have received a much tougher sentence if he were convicted as an adult in the United States.

Sheinbein fled to Israel shortly after the killing of Alfredo Tello Jr. in September 1997 and successfully fought extradition.

The case sharply strained relations between Israel and the United States.

On Thursday, standing handcuffed between two policemen, Sheinbein stared straight ahead as the verdict was read out, ignoring the camera crews that packed the Tel Aviv District Court just as he had ignored questions shouted at him as he came in.

The sentence will not be handed down until Oct. 11, after a social worker has submitted a report on Sheinbein. The report is required because Sheinbein was 17 — a minor — at the time of the killing.

The judge still has considerable discretion and could impose a longer or shorter sentence than proposed in the plea bargain. However, a life term is unlikely. No one who committed a crime as a minor has ever been jailed for life in Israel.

Russia suspends TV station's license over campaign report

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian government took a television network off the air Thursday over a report deriding a liberal party — the first such action against a major media outlet since the 1991 collapse of the Soviet Union.

Russia's new Media Ministry suspended the license of the St. Petersburg Television and Radio Company because its report on the Right Cause political movement violated laws on the media and voters' rights, ministry chief Mikhail Lesin said.

The report focused on a Right Cause rally at a sports arena in St. Petersburg.

The report, produced by hardline journalist Alexander Nevzorov, showed teenagers stripping in the middle of the arena and claimed without any evidence that there was mass consumption of drugs among the audience. It also contained scathing personal attacks on liberal politicians Boris Nemtsov and Irina Khakamada, who lead Right Cause and are campaigning for December parliamentary elections.

President Boris Yeltsin has been a consistent supporter of media freedom and has resisted the temptation to censor even those media outlets that criticize him relentlessly.

But as parliamentary elections and next year's presidential vote approach, Kremlin aides and other political forces in Russia appear to be vying for influence over the media. Many journalists are concerned about the recent creation of the Media Ministry, whose exact powers remain unclear.

One of Russia's largest nationwide networks, ORT, first broadcast the Right Cause report last weekend. The station received a reprimand from the ministry Monday.

Despite the well-publicized rebuke, St. Petersburg television showed the report later Monday in its broadcast area, which includes many regions in western Russia.

"The government could only assess that as a deliberate defiance," the Media Ministry said.

Albright forced to mediate to save West Bank accord

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — A negotiating deadlock Thursday forced Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to mediate details of a teetering West Bank agreement between Israel and the Palestinians rather than risk a major diplomatic setback.

The sticking point was a dispute over how many Palestinian prisoners Israel would release as a goodwill gesture to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. Some are in jail for terrorist acts.

After conferring in Alexandria with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, no stranger to the mediator's role, Albright met with Arafat for more than two hours, then headed to Jerusalem to see Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak. "We hope very much they will come to a conclusion as soon as possible," she said.

Until now, Albright had held back, operating on the assumption the most successful agreements are the product of direct negotiations between the parties with minimal outside intervention.

But as prospects waned for a signing ceremony Thursday, Albright stepped in. "It is natural that while I am here I try to be of assistance," she said.

Egypt immediately welcomed the intervention. "We believe the continuance of the United States in the peace process is very important," Foreign Minister Amr Moussa said. "We welcome the U.S. role, and we don't think the U.S. is on the sidelines."

Asked when an accord would be ready, Moussa told reporters, "It is possible such an agreement be signed in hours or in days," he said. "Just get ready."

Moussa, who attended the Albright-Arafat meeting, said there was a possibility an agreement would be signed in Egypt's Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheik on Friday. The issue of prisoners was "almost closed," he said.

Barak said he was optimistic there will be progress in the peace process "in the coming weeks."

Albright, after holding talks with Barak Thursday night and on Friday, was planning to meet with Arafat once more in Israel on Friday night.

The two sides already have agreed to a new timetable for an Israeli troop pullback from an additional 11 percent of the West Bank in three stages, starting this month and ending Jan. 20. They also set a new deadline of September 2000 for a permanent peace accord on final status issues such as the fate of Palestinian refugees, Palestinian statehood and the future of Jewish settlements. A final agreement would be completed within a year of the start of the talks.

Violence in Indonesia bolsters pressure to send peacekeepers

DILI, Indonesia (AP) — Pressure built Thursday for the United Nations to deploy armed peacekeepers to East Timor, as Indonesian security forces failed to stop pro-Indonesian militia gangs from wreaking havoc on the territory.

The violence in the wake of Monday's independence referendum left two more local U.N. staffers dead Thursday and sent thousands of people fleeing their homes in the provincial capital of Dili.

Automatic gunfire echoed across Dili and houses were on fire in nearby villages.

The U.N. workers were killed in Maliana, 80 miles west of Dili, which has been the scene of recent violence by the militias, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said in New York. He had no other details.

The killings came one day after fighting between pro- and anti-independence supporters killed at least three people near the U.N. compound in Dili.

The Maliana attack brought to four the number of local U.N. workers slain since Monday, when East Timorese swamped the polls to cast ballots in a referendum to determine whether their territory will become independent from Indonesia, which invaded in 1975.

Almost 99 percent of registered voters turned out despite a militia campaign of terror to keep them away. Independence activists say they will win the ballot by a landslide when the result is announced next week.

The militias, which reportedly have links to Indonesia's military, fiercely oppose independence for East Timor and claim the United Nations rigged Monday's vote.

As vote counting continued under tight security Thursday, many residents fled Dili, fearing reprisals from the militias. Some residents went to surrounding villages or even the hills behind the ramshackle town. Others who stayed behind guarded their houses with machetes and sticks.

"There is a lot of fear," said Anisette Gutter Lopes of HA, a Timorese human rights group.

Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer said planning already was under way "for a U.N. security presence to be brought in place in East Timor," but only with Indonesia's consent.

A coalition of electoral observer organizations called directly for a U.N. force to be sent in to stem the violence.

"The Indonesian armed forces should be withdrawn from East Timor and replaced by a U.N. peacekeeping force that must take immediate action to disarm and disband militias," the coalition said.

As calls for peacekeepers grew, Indonesia for the first time indicated it might allow a multinational force into East Timor.

"The possibility is not closed for the government to allow the United Nations to deploy a U.N. peacekeeping force in East Timor," said State Secretary Muladi, President B.J. Habibie's top aide.

Dennis batters N.C. coast; worse than a big hurricane

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Tropical Storm Dennis hung off North Carolina's Outer Banks for a third day Thursday and kept pounding away at the coast with 14-foot waves and 45 mph gusts, doing more damage to the beach than a single blow from a big hurricane.

"It is immensely worse as far as damage to the shoreline and beachfront retreat," said Orrin Pilkey, a Duke University coastal geologist. Although a hurricane can be deadly because it can blow down buildings, it typically "goes across the islands very quickly."

The assault on the North Carolina coast has been going on since early Monday. Dennis first battered the shoreline as a hurricane, then headed out to sea and weakened. But within a day, it was backtracking toward the Outer Banks.

The toll was evident everywhere on Hatteras Island, where wind and waves flung beach dunes onto the main highway and chewed up the asphalt. Abandoned trucks, some overturned, were half-buried in sand near the road.

The highway, N.C. 12, was expected to partially reopen late Thursday, but it will be several weeks before it can be rebuilt.

"It's beyond the crisis stage," state Public Safety Secretary Richard Moore said. "There are places where there are no dunes at all, and if you try to just throw blacktop down, you're throwing your money away."

Wind and waves flung beach dunes onto the main highways and chewed up the asphalt. Abandoned trucks, some overturned, were half-buried in sand.

As far away as Florida, huge waves generated by Dennis stripped sand from newly refurbished beaches, popped planks out of fishing piers and flooded beachfront condos.

Waves lapped 20 feet away from where the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse used to stand, 150 feet from the Atlantic. It was moved in July to keep it from toppling into the sea and now sits 1,600 feet from the surf.

"It was kind of reassuring to see the light safely away from the waves," Moore said. A relighting ceremony planned Saturday at the 208-foot lighthouse, the nation's tallest, was postponed because of the weather.

At 2 p.m. EDT, Dennis, which was downgraded from a hurricane late Tuesday, was 100 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, drifting slowly to the southwest. A tropical storm warning remained in effect from Cape Lookout, N.C., to Cape Charles Light, Va.

Jonathan Blaes of the National Weather Service said Dennis would probably continue to drift slowly to the west and southwest for the next few days.

Erosion experts compare Dennis to a nor'easter, the winter storm that does not pack a hurricane's wallop but stays longer, making it worse for the beaches.

On the Outer Banks — a thin, 130-mile strand of barrier islands — the storm cut a trench Wednesday across a quarter-mile neck of Hatteras Island. But on Thursday, the breach had partly filled up with wind-blown beach sand.

With road crews working to clear a path through drifted sand and standing water, National Guard convoys managed to reach villages on the southern end of Hatteras with food and supplies. Power and water service were restored to much of the island, but the phones still were down.

Electric power also was restored on Ocracoke Island, which had operated for days on generator power.

DWI-related fatalities at all-time low

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of alcohol-related traffic fatalities in the United States dropped to 15,935 last year, the lowest level in the 17 years the government has been keeping the statistic

The figure dropped 1.5 percent from the year before, when alcohol was involved in 16,189 crash deaths, federal officials said Thursday.

President Clinton said the number of young people killed in alcohol-related crashes also dropped to a record low — to nine per 100,000, from 10 per 100,000.

But he added that "even one child killed because of drunk driving is too many," and said the government will release $47 million in grants to help cities combat drunken driving and underage drinking and increase seat belt use.

Alcohol-related traffic fatalities accounted for 38.4 percent of the 41,471 highway deaths nationwide last year. The figure was 38.5 percent in 1997.

Texas had the most alcohol-related traffic deaths last year — 1,792. California was second with 1,324.

The highest percentage was in Washington, D.C., where half of the 54 traffic deaths came in alcohol-related crashes. Utah had the lowest rate; there were 50 alcohol-related traffic deaths last year — or 14.4 percent of its 350 fatalities.

Dr. Ricardo Martinez, the head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, announced the figures at a news conference with Karolyn Nunnallee, president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Mrs. Nunnallee said the National Safety Council predicted that 468 people are likely to die on the nation's highways over Labor Day holiday weekend, and about 53 percent of the deaths are expected to be alcohol-related.

Experimental heart failure drug kills 53 test patients

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of an experimental drug to treat congestive heart failure was halted earlier this year after 53 patients on the medication died in the first six months, Eli Lilly & Co. said Thursday.

There were nearly twice as many deaths among patients taking the drug as there were among those given a dummy medicine, the pharmaceutical company said.

Lilly spokesman Ed West said is unclear whether the drug hastened the patients' deaths.

A different formulation of the Lilly drug is sold under the name Cynt and used in Europe and Asia to treat high blood pressure.

Indianapolis-based Lilly was studying the drug, a form of moxonidine, with Solvay SA, a Belgium company.

The clinical trial, in which the drug was to be tested on at least 4,000 patients, began in August 1998 and was supposed to last two years. The trial tested a sustained-release formulation of the drug, meaning it was designed to be absorbed into the body slowly.

But the trial was halted in February after 82 deaths — 53 people on the drug and 29 on a placebo — occurred among the first 2,000 patients enrolled. The study was being conducted at medical facilities around the world.

Lilly had said last March that the study was being halted but did not provide details at the time.

West said the deaths were unfortunate but not unusual considering the severity of the patients' illnesses.

Spielberg had his sights set on 'Jaws'

By Georgia Temple

A single word written in bold letters across the top page of an unpublished manuscript caught Steven Spielberg's attention as he left David Zanuck's office. He borrowed the manuscript and read it over the weekend. On Friday, when he'd turned down directing "MacArthur" before leaving Zanuck's office, he didn't know what he wanted to direct. By Monday, he had an answer.

He was, at first, to be disappointed. The movie rights to the manuscript, which had been acquired by

WATER: 'Jaws' still comes to many Midlanders minds jumped out of the water at us. That was not scary because you know it's not real."

Knowing the story was fictitious didn't keep the film from frightening Ms. McCall the first time she saw "Jaws" in the theater.

"The music and the photography, it was all so real," Ms. McCall said. "I stayed for the whole movie. It scared the wits out of me, but I stayed. I've never left a movie because I was too scared."

When asked what film first came to mind when he thought of water, Louis Sanchez joined Ms. McCall and Ms. Lynch in listing "Jaws."

"I like action-packed drama movies," Sanchez said, recalling when "Jaws" opened that he was living in Houston. "It didn't bother me, but I remember all the hype going around about people who were afraid in Galveston. They would go to the beach, but they wouldn't go in the water because of 'Jaws.' A lot of people would go around humming the tune. And you'd go in the water, and people would hum, 'da-DA. da-DA.'"

Norma Pino also immediately thought of "Jaws."

"The way they presented the shark, he looked too real," Ms. Pino said. "The special effects they did with him, if I hadn't known any better I would have thought it was a real shark."

Wayne Barton, whose first thought was of Kevin Costner's "Waterworld," named "Jaws" second.

"I thought and still think it was one of the most terrifying movies ever made," said Barton. "Now none of the sequels and rip offs and what nots have come nearly up to that standard, but the original version was just immensely frightening to me at least, and from the reactions in the theater at that time, to everybody else, too."

Barton remembered the audience's reaction to the film.

"It was dead silent in the theater until one of the shark attacks, and then everybody screamed together. Perhaps the most impressive thing about it was not the screaming. That was understandable. It was the tension that built up. The silence in between. Everybody was waiting on the edge of their seats. The really scary thing about 'Jaws' was not the big shark, it was the tension that stretched and stretched and stretched until it grew almost unbearable."

"Jaws" didn't have the opportunity to scare Rose Hunter.

"I wouldn't go see it," Ms. Hunter said. "It was too scary. I don't like horror movies. I don't want to be scared out of my wits."

Toni Thrash also has never seen "Jaws." "I probably have seen five minutes of it maybe." Her first choice was a more recent movie, John Cameron's "Titanic." "I've seen it the most. It was a very good movie."

Ms. McCall also mentioned "Titanic," saying, "I thought it was too long, but I thoroughly enjoyed it. They did an excellent job. The special effects were unbelievable, so realistic to me. And I just related to the people. It was like living through it as far as I was concerned."

The latest offering in the shark-vs.-man category of scares was released in August. "Deep Blue Sea" zeroes in on mako sharks. Not as infamous as great whites, mako sharks are known for their aggressive temperament, maneuverability in the water and speeds of up to 60 miles per hour. In this film, the sharks have been genetically re-engineered and, of course, turn on the humans, attacking them in their research facility.

"That one was very intense," Ms. Lynch said of "Deep Blue Sea." "But it wasn't as intimidating as 'Jaws' I think because of the fact that 'Jaws' came out before. And to a degree it was almost like it was a take off from that. 'Jaws' took the edge off the fear of water from watching 'Deep Blue Sea.' But, it was still intense."

The movie with the greatest claim to showing endless water is "Waterworld," which Barton said was made about 10 years too late.

"It was basically Mad Max goes to sea," Barton said. "And really the Mad Max craze was over by the time they got around to making 'Waterworld,' but it should have been attractive to the same audience.

"And I think the reason the film didn't do well is that audience wasn't there any more. I know it got a lot of negative response from the critics and from others at the time, but I didn't think it was at all that bad a movie. I think people were expecting it to be something more than it was."

Sanchez fit into that category. "It was OK," Sanchez said of "Waterworld." "But I wasn't too excited about that. I guess maybe I was expecting too much."

Living in a world with no land and only ocean did not appeal to Ms. Pino, who said, "I wouldn't want to have to live that way."

Other movies that have water as a main focus, including "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," "The Abyss" and "The Deep," drew approval from Ms. Pino.

"Personally, I liked that one (The Abyss) a whole lot better than I did 'Sphere,'" Ms. Pino said. "'Sphere' kind of left me wondering what are they trying to tell you, and 'The Abyss' I could understand a little bit more even though it was still science fiction. Another water movie I liked too was 'The Deep.' 'Jaws' was pure terror. 'The Deep' was adventure, something that could happen to a normal person."

Barton also named a number of movies that depend upon water, including:

"The Incredible Mr. Limpet," which inspired the recent "The Thirteenth Year" and was a "typical Don Knotts movie with the theme being the little, insignificant guy who comes through at the end;"

"Splash," which "had a good cast and a good idea and in general it looked like they had a lot of fun making that;"

Spencer Tracy in Ernest Hemingway's "The Old Man and the Sea," a book Barton loved and frequently rereads and feels "they did the best they could, but I don't believe you can make a movie of that;"

"Titanic," about which Barton said, "I was like everybody else, I was overwhelmed with 'Titanic.' I really didn't find that I needed to see it more than once, but I enjoyed it a lot that once;"

Herman Melville's "Moby Dick" with Gregory Peck as Captain Ahab, is a classic "they could make a movie of and that one was a dandy;"

"Endless Summer," a "great surfer movie;"

"The Creature from the Black Lagoon," which had several sequels so "the creature was pretty durable;"

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," which includes a "big battle with a giant squid;"

"Godzilla," who, in the old movie, takes as his first action, eating a ship;

and two movies with John Wayne.

"If you want to go back into the history of water movies, remember John Wayne did two early in his career," Barton said. "In one he got eaten by a giant squid. That was 'Reap the Wild Wind.' That one makes it around fairly regularly on the Movie Channel. And the other one was 'Wake of the Red Witch.' Both of them" had "John Wayne in a diving suit poking around under the water."

Ms. Hunter also looked back to earlier movies with her choice being those made that featured the Olympic swimming champion, Esther Williams.

"I thought they were beautiful," Ms. Hunter said. "I'm really old-fashioned. I want all the movies to leave everything to my imagination. Just let me fill in the blanks."

The oceans have long held fascination for mankind. Some have felt as poet John Masefield did in "Sea Fever," when he wrote, "I must go down to the seas again, for the call of the running tide Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied."

Others sense the need for caution. As Ms. Pino said, "Even though I think it's beautiful — the beach is beautiful — but it's scary at the same time. If you go further out, you don't know what could happen."

Midland Reporter-Musicgram

by Max Howard

Several months back, Rick McRae played at Jazz Restaurant for one of the open jazz sessions sponsored by the West Texas Jazz Society. For some reason, I missed the gig, but from what I heard about the session and Rick's guitar playing, I was almost shamed for missing that Sunday. Without exception, the reception from the audience was nothing but, "Damn, he was good!"

So the WTJS will be featuring Rick McRae Wednesday, the 15th, at Vagos Restaurant, where the Granada Club was located. And after reading the biography on Rick, I know where he is coming from musically and wouldn't miss it.

Rick McRae's credentials cover all aspects of music performances, and I guess the most rewarding part, for him commercially, was as lead guitarist for George Strait's Ace in the Hole Band. Over the years, I have found that a good c&w musician will always perform with outstanding vigor at a jazz concert. Even Hank Thompson played one of the best jazz "fiddles" I ever heard. Floyd Cramer was no jazz slouch either. Anyway, Rick will be working at Vagos with outstanding locals Robert Lacroix, Frank Truex, Mark Lowe and Neal Goates.

Admission for WTJS members is free. General admission is $15, and there is a $10 surcharge for reserved seating. The music begins at 8 p.m., and I really think if you like good jazz, you'll be there also.

In another gear, I'll share a "fad note" about Miles Davis. During the 1950s, Miles was, I think, at one of his peaks. Part of his success during this time belongs to the personnel working with him, but it was still Miles. Then about three years ago, the college groups found his music and chins all over the music world dropped when the word was out that "Miles was in again," and he still is. Many of the mid-50s albums have been remastered and made available on CD, and they sound just as good musically as they did when originally released only the technical is better on the new product.

The Prestige Label Collection includes "Workin' With," "Jazz Giants," "Walkin'," "Steamin'," and on and on. The working (or cookin' as it was known then) group (s) include John Coltrane, Red Garland, Paul Chambers and Philly Joe Jones, among others. There are some trade outs, but it surely does make for good listening again. The CD's are available from Jazz Heritage, Inc., 1710 Highway 35, Ocean, NJ 07712. In fact, Jazz Heritage offers many hard-to- find recordings and at standard prices.

That's music for now, but there's lots more to follow.

I am,

JAWS: Spielberg insisted on location shooting

(From 1B)

Zanuck and David Brown for the low price of $175,000, came with a director. Then, the director dropped out of the project, and Spielberg moved in.

The movie-going public didn't know it yet, but the movie Spielberg would make would bring new meaning to the question, "Is it safe to go into the water?"

Six drafts of the script followed. The author, Peter Benchley, wrote the first three, playwright Howard Sackler and director-screenwriter John Milius wrote the fourth and fifth, and the project was turned over to actor-writer Carl Gottlieb, who had previously been a member of an improvisational comedy troupe.

"He restructured and streamlined the plot while peppering the picture-to-be with comic relief," wrote Douglas Brode in his (1995) book "The Films of Steven Spielberg." "Gottlieb alone received screenplay credits with Benchley, though it is worth noting that Spielberg improvised almost every scene the following summer in Martha's Vineyard.

"Ultimately, the film would be shot from the director's visual storyboards — comic-strip, shot-by-shot depictions of the story in visual terms — rather than the dialogue-heavy script."

Spielberg insisted on location shooting to avoid the phony back-lot look.

"Many old timers were openly hostile not only to moviemakers but also to anyone who had not, like them, been born as well as bred on their little island," Brode said. "Spielberg, sensing this upon arrival, did precisely what any true artist would do: he integrated this fact into his film."

Then, locals realized that during the off seasons of spring and early fall, 150 crew members would be on the island. They would be living there before and after the actors arrival, bringing revenue into the local economy. The lure of money eased their previous complaints.

"This hunger for money, even at the cost of violating long-held values, would likewise find its way into Spielberg's emerging, organic script," Brode said.

Miles away on the West Coast, Bruce was born. Well, actually three Bruce's were created under the care of special-effects artist Bob Mattey.

And who is Bruce? Da-DA. Da-DA. Da-DA. The film's pivotal player, of course. The 24-foot great-white-shark model that would determine whether "Jaws" succeeded or not.

"I went to Universal Studios and saw the original jaws they built," Midlander Louis Sanchez said. "It's just unreal what they can do with a little bitty area to make it look like the ocean. They have the mechanical shark that came out — the head and maybe half the body, and it comes out of the water."

Using the models in the ocean proved to be far more challenging than displaying such a creation later on dry land.

"On July 1, a flotilla of boats set out to shoot the first Bruce sequence, which required that a 12-ton steel platform be set in place on the ocean floor," Brode said. "From this base, a cable 100-feet long allowed Bruce extensive movement, even as a team of 13 technicians in scuba equipment ran the operation from below.

"Disaster ensued: Bruce immediately sank to the bottom. When the technical crew finally managed to make it move about, the hydraulic system exploded.

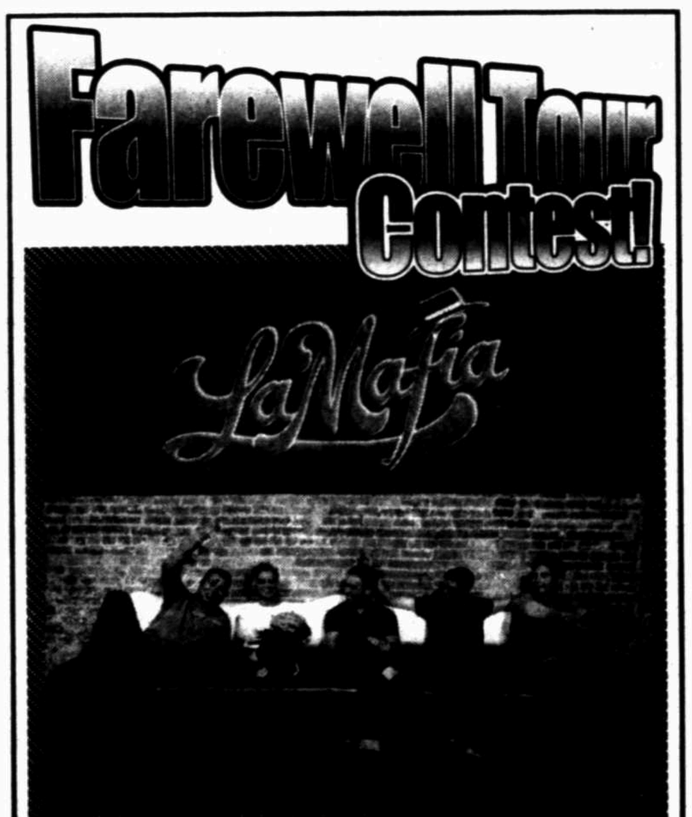

"After several further delays, Spielberg readied the crew to film, immediately noticing that the plastic skin was rapidly deteriorating — revealing it was a mechanical device rather than a real shark — due to salt water. This was solved by having a special-effects man regularly don scuba gear and dive in to touch up the problem areas."

Thus began the daily regimen. The crew set out in boats. The Bruce of the day required its own boat and, along with the weather, remained uncooperative. Some days, the crew would return with no usable film.

Later, Richard Dreyfuss remembered quipping to those around him, "If any of us had any sense, we'd all bail out now."

When the film was finally in the can, Spielberg sailed to the mainland in a small boat as "a collection of locals and cast and crew members watched him," Brode said. "They recall that he mockingly pulled himself up tall like General MacArthur and announced, 'I shall not return!'"

Information for this story was taken from the book "The Films of Steven Spielberg," by Douglas Brode.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review

A gusher: good to excellent — Dry well: Fair to poor

By David R. Allen, MC drama instructor, and Tim Jebsen, MCT executive director

"The Sixth Sense," starring Bruce Willis, a drama about a boy who says he can see the dead and the psychologist who tries to help him, opened several weeks ago across the country. It now holds the box office record for weeks on top this summer, a record which includes the new Star Wars movie.

TIM: For the past several weeks, I avoided this movie. I was suspicious of a summer movie with Bruce Willis — see 1998's "Armageddon." However, several people commented to me that this movie was well made and entertaining. In the end, they are correct. Writer/Director M. Night Shyamalan developed and produced a tightly woven thriller with great performances from both Willis and the young star, Haley Joel Osment — not to mention the cameo appearance of a Siberian Husky puppy.

DAVID: I was also leery of this movie. I am not a fan of scream movies like the poorly acted and directed "Friday The Thirteenth," and "Nightmare on Elm Street" sagas. "The Sixth Sense," however, is more like the best of Hitchcock and DePalma than those lesser horror films because of the great work done by the director. Willis proves that he is more than simply an action hero. His performance contains an intensity and intelligence that I haven't seen from him since "In Country." Thankfully, it lacks the macho bravado that has been the hallmark of many of his films.

TIM: This is exactly why I was reluctant to see it. Willis has become this generation's Michael Caine — appearing in many bad movies like "Hudson Hawk" and the "Die Hard" sequels, while also managing to impress me in movies like "12 Monkeys" and "Pulp Fiction." Obviously, Willis needs a new agent to help him weed out the bad scripts from the good ones. In addition, this movie contains the one element so often missing in Hollywood movies — good writing.

DAVID: Even more impressive is Osment's performance. This 11-year-old, who also played Forrest Gump's son, shows such maturity and talent that one wonders if he isn't the reincarnation of Laurence Olivier. As for Michael Caine, Tim, we should sit down at On The Border and have an argument. "The Sixth Sense" is an intense, psychological thrill ride. It makes you think as much as it raises the hackles on the back of your neck. Finely scripted and directed, it quietly grows on you until the slightest unexpected action makes you jump out of your seat with delightful fright. "The Sixth Sense" is a well-made film that will enthrall and scare the pants off Baby Boomers and Generation Xers alike. It is a gusher you shouldn't miss.

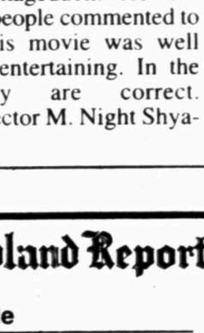

TIM: I'll take you up on that offer for lunch On The Border — I assume you'll be buying? Anyway, we won't give away the wonderful ending, and don't let the whispering previews mislead you — this is a wonderful thriller with great writing, great acting, many suspenseful moments and a plot twist just this side of "The Usual Suspects." A definite gusher!

Midland Reporter-Musicgram

Dr. Ted Hale

With the new millennium arriving, perhaps too much has been made about the future of almost everything. From technology to medical care, schooling and business, it seems that a dominant topic of discussion is "what's going to happen?"

The music industry is no exception. Just a peek at the past twenty years has produced an amazing variety of styles and sounds; punk rock, cool jazz, rap, string quartets playing Jimmy Hendriks and operas addressing AIDS and other contemporary issues. And these "new" genres are just scratching the surface of what's out there.

Hale

But is it really that different? Are these "revolutions" really radical departures from the norm? They may be introducing new sounds but not new ideas. Now before you vilify me for not acknowledging that "gangsta rap" undermines our youth's culture, let's take a look at some facts. When Igor Stravinsky premiered his Rite of Spring in 1919 Paris, The conservative Parisian public actually rioted in the streets. Critics the world over blasted Stravinsky for writing a lewd, provocative work that in the words of one critic "...these tribal rhythms would eventually serve to undermine the morals of our youth." Sound familiar? What Stravinsky wrote was indeed a radical departure from the then-accepted norm. Indeed, the Rite of Spring employed "tribal rhythms" and in so doing inspired many composers to take note and follow suite. His works also made great use of colors. What this means is that Stravinsky took traditional instruments and utilized them in new and expressive ways; trombones growling and sliding around, trills, flutters, mutes and lots of percussion were used in ways they hadn't been used before. The success of the Rite of Spring shook-up the "old fuddy duddies" and made composers the world over stand up and take note of this 21-year-old who landed a bombshell. It actually helped to change music. Examples like this abound throughout music history; Mozart was criticized for his "grating harmonies," Bach for his "jumbled and confused melodies." Today we call these elements "functional harmony" and "counterpoint."

One thing is for certain, just as Stravinsky used "tribal rhythms," music after the millennium promises even greater amalgamation of musical genres. We've seen Andrew Lloyd Webber wed rock and opera in "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Phantom of the Opera." And today, it's become common to hear electric guitars in symphony orchestras. In fact, the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale will be performing with the legendary rock group Kansas, in concert on Sept. 18 at 8:00 p.m. at the Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus. Other rock groups and rock stars such as The Moody Blues, Journey and Carley Simon perform with symphony orchestras. Blending styles of music in one concert is a great way to find common ground with friends and family. Just as it can bring together diverse elements, music can do the same with people.

And the more we try to pigeon hole musical styles into categories, the more those categories are blended by others. Turned off by "classical" music? Then try listening to the Electric Light Orchestra; what a great mesh of rock and classical music they have given us. Don't like "rap"? Well, we need look no further than our man Stravinsky who wrote The Soldier's Tale. Penned during the horrors of World War I, this piece uses a narrator (the soldier - or rapper) who describes his feelings and thoughts during the conflict - all accompanied by music meant to help evoke his images. Its strong stuff. Think opera is dull? Try Alban Berg's Wozzeck, a real thriller, guaranteed to bring you to the edge of your seat. Insanity, lust, suspense, murder, all can be found wrapped into a fascinating story about a lonely man who just wants to "be normal."

The list of musical styles that have been meshed this century is enormous. Country swing, jazz-rock (fusion), rock operas, contemporary Christian, big-bands and bebop, the list is endless. And in addition to these new styles we now have something going on called multimedia. This art form combines video, music, acting, dance, light shows and a host of other possibilities limited only by the authors' imaginations. In fact, a recent tour of the new facilities at the Academy at Ector Junior High revealed a computer lab capable of producing multimedia works. Imagine your eighth-grader being able to come home, pop a CD Rom in the computer and show Mom and Dad an entirely self-created "musical experience" with video clips, music, and voice-overs featuring little Johnny himself — what a great way to learn how to use computers!

Music after the millennium promises to continue these trends. And just as in the past, new trends will inspire as much conflict as creativity. Critics despised Beethoven, today he's a giant. It will certainly be interesting to see who the giants of tomorrow will be. And as far their music "undermining our youth," remember, a couple of millenniums ago it was Socrates who wrote that the "....youth of today have no respect for their elders and will be the ruin of our society." The more things change, the more they stay the same.

Role of a lifetime...

Performers age in style, whether it's gracefully or not

By Margo Jefferson
N.Y. Times News Service

"Aging gracefully."

That modest little phrase doesn't begin to capture the shock and struggle involved. And probably it shouldn't, for what's the point of grace if the end doesn't transcend the means?

Performers radically dramatize the questions and strategies we all have to maneuver through. What's the balance between that which you want to conceal and that which you must reveal? How does sexual desire play out against marks of decline and decay? What do you do with the kinds of power that can only be gained once you admit to certain losses?

All of these questions flared up then resolved themselves blissfully as I watched Mikhail Baryshnikov perform recently with his company, the White Oak Dance Project.

Baryshnikov is now being referred to in passing as "50-something." That "something" is a throwaway when you're in your 20s and an alert for your 30s; it is embarrassingly coy at 40 and close to an indignity by 50.

He is 51 and in what Henry James nicely albeit mournfully called the middle years. And he is a great performer, as great as he ever was but on different terms. It isn't only that he has moved from ballet to modern dance, and that within modern dance he is scrupulous about what kinds of movement his body can and cannot — well, what's the right word? Accommodate, endure, master, submit to, express.

He always had what seemed like boundless virtuosity, charm and passion. Now he can exist in the center of silence and stillness, catching you with the smallest move of the hand or head, the way the great silent screen actors did. There is an unobtrusive melancholy here too (as if to say, aren't we always alone, even when partnering and being partnered?).

HE WAS A BEAUTY, in his quicksilver way. And he is still wonderful to look at, but he is fully mortal now. The body seems smaller; the hair has thinned, and the ears are a little big. The intangibles are there in the face: pains, pleasures, responsibilities, things done and not done. Everything leaves its trace.

As weight shifts in the body and skin changes its texture, the accumulation of memory and experience and feeling alters us. Rudolf Nureyev fought against all this, and what had been grand and bold in him turned feverish and hysterical. Annabel Gamson, who restaged and performed Isadora Duncan's work for many years, took the stage with her long, beautiful white hair and used her artistry to make age a haven for innocence and an emblem of experience.

White hair is a litmus test, not only for how we choose to present ourselves, but for what the consequences will be. And here, the movies are a pretty good mirror of the lives we lead.

For an aging male star, white hair is striking, infinitely preferable to hair that's disappearing or has been man-made, however efficiently.

(Bald heads work if the head is well-shaped or if, like that of Telly Savalas, it dares you to pass judgment.)

If you are a female star you had better be committed to character roles or you'd better be Elizabeth Taylor. Ms. Taylor has spent her middle years going through stages (marriages, weight gains, weight losses, stays at the Betty Ford center) as flagrantly as Drew Barrymore did in her childhood and adolescence.

Old tricks and habits (ways of talking, dressing, reacting) can be like outmoded pieces of equipment. They're usable, but they take too much effort to be worth using much of the time.

And there is Ms. Taylor, with her white bob and her still-dark eyebrows, full of no-nonsense shamelessness. Whether it's about how she ages or what she wears, she has, bless her heart, made the principles of good and bad taste equally meaningless.

LAUREN BACALL has chosen a safer, cannier route. She's putting the grande dame and the tough dame together in one package; she knows that the loftiness of one needs the earthiness of the other.

Spontaneous? Not for a moment, but terrifically efficient. It's the mode followed by the men of her famous first husband's generation. You gave the audience the mask of experience if you were Bogart or Cooper or Grant. You shifted it a little with each role, just enough so that experience seemed to be your choice, the manly choice, and the one that pushed deterioration out of the picture.

Each generation plays it a little differently. Al Pacino, Jack Nicholson and Harvey Keitel go for strategic deterioration.

Mel Gibson is on a nerve-racking cusp. There is a little too much hair, and the smile, that boyish, naughty smile, is a little too much insisted on nowadays. (Tom Cruise is going to face the same — let's call them issues — as he grows older.)

John Travolta is trading vanity for character, while Michael Douglas tries to make vanity pass for character.

And Robin Williams has diversified with serious roles that take our attention away from the verbal and physical mania of his youthful comic self. But, as "Patch Adams" showed, when he blends low clowning with high earnestness, he falls into the "watch me, I'm still an adorable extraterrestrial kid" pit.

What's true of actors like these is true for the human throng.

Old tricks and habits (ways of talking, dressing, reacting) can be like outmoded pieces of equipment. They're usable, but they take too much effort to be worth using much of the time.

Or as a friend of mine once observed about a piece of clothing we were looking at: "You can get away with it. But do you want to?"

Strategic decay is not a viable option for most women. Susan Sarandon is going through a Baryshnikov-like process, making sure that she gets better and better at what she does and that she looks her best without trying to look like her younger self.

Meryl Streep has always played women of so many kinds and ages that her own appearance is a kind of temporary shelter, the dressing room she inhabits before going onstage.

And like Robin Williams, Whoopi Goldberg is trying to balance her dramatic gifts against her comic ones. And to choose better projects too, it appears; bad movies do not become middle-aged comics.

F. Scott Fitzgerald wrote that the test of a first-rate intelligence was the ability to hold two opposing ideas in your head at the same time and maintain the ability to keep functioning.

Clearly, being a pop star and growing older are just such ideas, and it's almost impossible to find a performer who's willing even to try holding on to them.

They'd much rather grab onto the signifiers of their glory days and hope that their fans will keep on believing.

For Diana Ross it's the vast head of curly hair, the archly warm smile.

For Keith Richards it's the jet-black hair and the ultra-hip costumes.

For James Brown it's the waved and processed hair and the dance steps that now require considerable huffing and puffing.

And for Mick Jagger it's the hair, the clothes, the attitude, the preening, onstage and off, which, in their own more refined English way, are as desperate as the black leather, white pleats and gold jewelry of Elvis Presley's later years.

Enough. Back to Baryshnikov, onstage with five lovely dancers, all young women. He gives off nary a hint of professional arrogance (I'm the master here) or of sexual grandstanding.

He is using time and himself in ways that seem transcendent and yet, if the rest of us are willing to take risks on our own scale, possible.

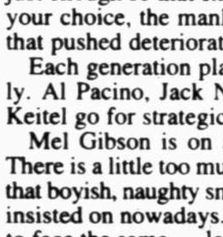

COMMUNITY CONNECTIONS

AARP Day in Midland scheduled for October

By Alexandria L. Rose

AARP Day will be celebrated in Midland on Oct. 2 at Midland Park Mall.

Once each year, AARP emphasizes is presence in communities across the country by doing something special. In Midland, we have planned a fun-filled day with lots of entertainment and information.

Rose

Representatives from the three local chapters will be there to answer questions and provide the latest information on Medicare. Tables will be set up from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., so pick and choose your time.

Featured speaker will be Pete Irwin of San Antonio, AARP state coordinator for Health Advocacy Services. Irwin is very knowledgeable on updated happenings concerning Medicare. His speech covering "Medicare 2000: Changes, choices, Challenges," is scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

Derek Williams from the Midland Social Security Office will address the audience at 2 p.m.

With these two speakers on the agenda and entertainment in between, there should be something for all ages.

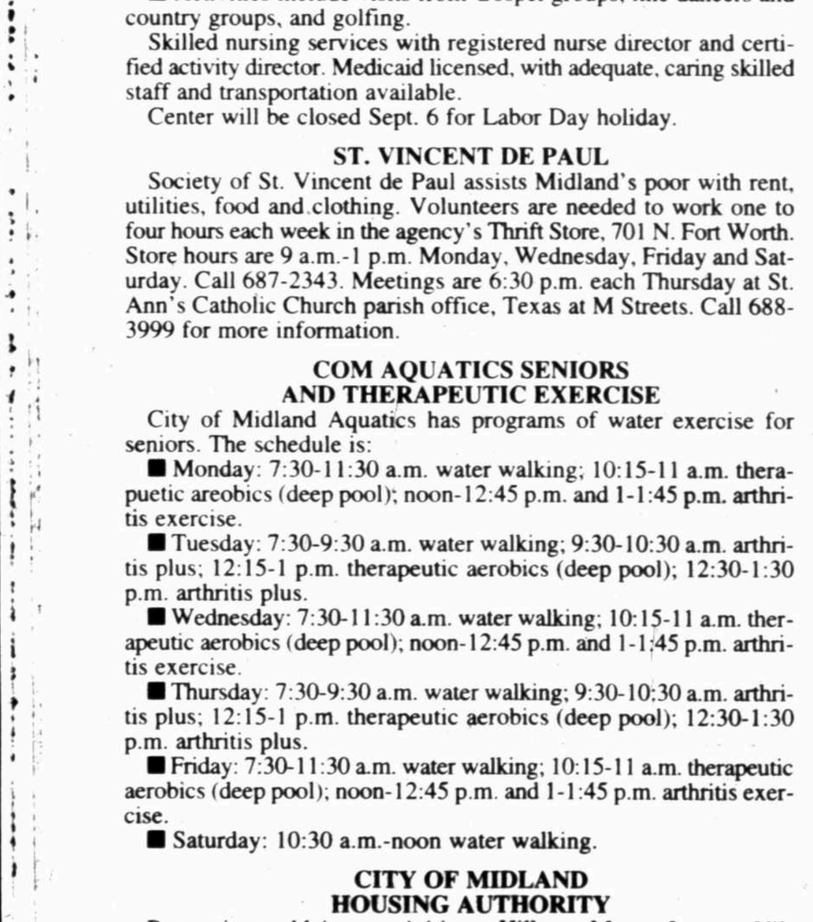

Many who have their national memberships in AARP do not realize how the local chapters serve the community by bringing information, advocacy and programs such as 55-Alive, Tax-Aide and the new Legal Services Network. Of course, one of the most important reasons for joining a local chapter is to experience that sense of belonging and community with those who work together to see that AARP does indeed make a difference in the community.

Please help us excel as a dynamic presence in this community, shaping and enriching the experience of aging for each member and for everyone.

AGENDA FOR AARP DAY

10 a.m. — Opening with tables, representatives, literature
11 a.m. — Entertainment: Line Dancers
Noon — Berry Simpson, city councilman, issuing a proclamation for AARP Day
12:30 p.m. — Pete Irvin, state coordinator for Health Advocacy Services, speaking on "Medicare: Changes, Choices, Challenges."
1 p.m. — Entertainment: Golden Guild Singers
2 p.m. — Derek Williams speaking on "The Latest on Social Security."
3 p.m. — Video on "Medicare Fraud."
3:30 p.m. — Entertainment
4 p.m. — Closing

Alexandria L. "Alex" Rose is district coordinator for the American Association of Retired Persons.

FAMILY MATTERS

Wife wonders if her husband is cheating

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I suspect that my husband is having an affair.

I don't want to think that, but he's been acting differently since before school was out. He's started a new job, and he "has" to entertain customers at lunch and on some nights.

May

I don't like it, but I didn't say too much about it until he started being out at night more and more. When I finally complained because I needed some help with our son's baseball, he did cut back a little. Then he started right back this summer.

I know that I shouldn't have done it, but I went through his wallet Saturday morning when he was still asleep from his late Friday "entertaining customers." I found the back of a matchbook from a gentlemen's club in Odessa with a girl's name and telephone number on it.

I was upset, but I surprised myself and haven't said anything to him about it yet. All I did was write it down so that I could call her if I wanted to.

My best girlfriend wanted me to write you and find out how I should handle this. I don't know why I'm so calm about it. We're actually getting along fairly well, except for him not coming home until late. Our sex life is about what it always was.

What should I do and when? FEELING CHEATED

DEAR FEELING: I applaud you for your calmness. Attacking the other person under such circumstances is rarely useful.

Schedule a time to discuss your concern with your husband. A job like his is difficult for everyone under the best of circumstances. He should have the opportunity to explain his situation to you in a calm setting.

Make a list of your concerns and questions. Plan on telling what you found in his wallet. Make no apologies for looking there. He may use the adolescent defense — telling you how bad you are for looking in his wallet — but a marriage should not have any secrets or "off limits" areas; therefore, "his" wallet is really "our" wallet. Either spouse should feel completely free to look in anything of the other's.

Tell him of your concerns and questions without being accusing. I can't believe that a marriage is benefited by visits to topless bars.

Focus on what you like about him and your marriage, while telling him of this one area you are concerned about and wish to change. Hopefully ,he will be willing to make some changes in his behaviors. You might suggest he restrict his entertaining to restaurants instead of bars.

Good luck on your discussion. Continue to be in a calm problem-solving mode.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: It sounds as if your niece is the victim of some form of abuse. One thing that you can do is call Child Protective Services and report your concerns. They will at least go and investigate. Their hands are somewhat tied if everyone denies that there is any problem. However, there will be a file started and if in the future a teacher or someone else reports something they have observed to CPS, it will help their investigation. It is not wrong to report a suspected problem — it may save a child.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON "RATING YOUR CHILD'S SAFETY" ARE PRESENTED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Can your child recite his full name, address and telephone number, including area code, city and state?
- Can your child make a long-distance call? From a pay telephone? Dial direct or with operator assistance?
- Does your child know never to enter anyone's home without your permission?
- Do they know of any special homes where they are not to enter under any circumstances?
- If separated from you in a store, would your child go to the nearest check-out clerk?
- Would he or she know to verify that the person is in fact an employee of the store?
- Would he or she go into the parking lot, either alone or if encouraged by an adult?
- Does your child know always to play with others — to go places only on the "buddy system?"

SAM-e: Easy way to health, happiness?

By Jessie Milligan
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Don Smith, an executive with General Nutrition Center in Pittsburgh, says his staff loves the new dietary supplement SAM-e. They love it because Smith, the boss, takes the supplement, and he credits it with improving his mood.

"Things just don't get to me as much," Smith says.

It's reports like his and a flurry of media coverage that have bottles of SAM-e (pronounced "Sammy") flying off the shelves of health-food stores and drugstores nationwide.

"We sell out in a couple days every time we get some in," says Anthony Foreman, sales associate at a General Nutrition Center in Grapevine, Texas.

SAM-e is credited not only with improving moods, but also with promoting flexibility and cleansing the liver of toxins. Plus, some consumers say it aids in weight loss.

"People are coming in wanting to know if it will make them dinner and serve it to them, too," says Egil Gude, nutrition team leader at the Whole Foods grocery store in Arlington.

It's not a miracle drug, Gude tells them. But SAM-e is popular not just because it is new on the market but because it has gotten a lot of publicity as a supplement that may aid several ills.

SAM-e is S-adenosylmethionine, a compound produced by all plants and animals. It is a naturally occurring part of many biochemical reactions, including the manufacture of joint cartilage and the maintenance of nerve cell membranes.

Nature Made, a vitamin manufacturer that sells SAM-e, says that studies show some people, particularly the elderly, have low levels of naturally occurring SAM-e and would benefit from supplements.

After two decades of use in Europe, SAM-e went on sale in the United States this year. It ranges in price from about $25 to $45 for a package of 20 pills. Nature Made recommends from one to eight pills a day, with two a day the most effective dose for most people. Most people, then, should expect to pay $75 to $135 a month for a supply of SAM-e.

DEAR ABBY

Bar-hopping fiance leaves his engagement behind at home

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my fiance for two years. We've been engaged for six months. He refuses to set a wedding date, and his whole attitude toward me and our relationship has changed. Now he wants to go to bars with his friends without me. In fact, he never wants to go anywhere with me.

Van Buren

When our relationship first started, we decided we had found each other, and there was no need to go to bars any longer. Especially now that we're engaged!

Abby, I feel like he doesn't love me anymore, or he's ashamed of me. I don't know if it's already over and he doesn't know how to escape — or if I should hold on.

I love him more than anything and want to marry him and grow old with him. But how do I know if he feels the same? He says he does. What do I do now? — HEARTBROKEN IN KNOXVILLE

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: It seems your fiance still has some wild oats to sow. In a healthy relationship, a person's actions and words are the same, but this young man is saying one thing and doing something else.

Call off the engagement. Since he refuses to set a date, it wasn't much of an engagement anyway. You deserve a husband who loves you more than anything, and wants to marry you and grow old with you. You haven't found him yet!

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment on the letter that appeared in your column from the woman who attended a housewarming and discovered camellias floating in the toilet of the master bathroom. It was a "subtle" way of discouraging guests from using that toilet. You said you thought the idea was "all wet."

Well, I think your answer was all wet! I saw nothing wrong with what the hostess did — and you can quote me! — GERM-PHOBIC IN GEORGIA

DEAR GERM-PHOBIC: You are not the only person who disagreed with my answer. And I apologize for attempting to be flip. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You agreed with the letter writer that the hostess should open her entire home to guests.

Well, I strongly disagree. Why tempt guests to look in your personal medicine cabinet, or check out (or remove) your jewelry? Some people will just make themselves at home. Don't you remember the letter about the hostess who put marbles in her medicine cabinet?

If her powder room isn't sufficient to accommodate her guests, perhaps she invited too many guests! — SUSAN SMITH, ELK GROVE, CALIF.

DEAR SUSAN: I remember, I remember! Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I gave a party with about 18 people in attendance. I was gracious enough to allow my guests to use my master bath — and was "rewarded" by having about $15,000 worth of jewelry stolen from me.

Now when I give parties, the master bathroom is off-limits, and I keep my bedroom door locked! — BEEN THERE, DONE THAT IN DIAMONDHEAD, MISS.

DEAR BEEN THERE: How depressing! However, thank you for enlightening me to one of the realities of entertaining as the year 2000 rolls around. May I suggest you screen your guests more carefully next time?

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can stand another "grandmother story." She's been gone for a few years, but we still get a laugh over this one:

I was married in 1976. I had a beautiful morning church Mass and afternoon reception. Gram selected a gorgeous dress for the reception. Because she had no time to change after Mass, she wore a lovely coat and hat — hats were worn at that time — for church.

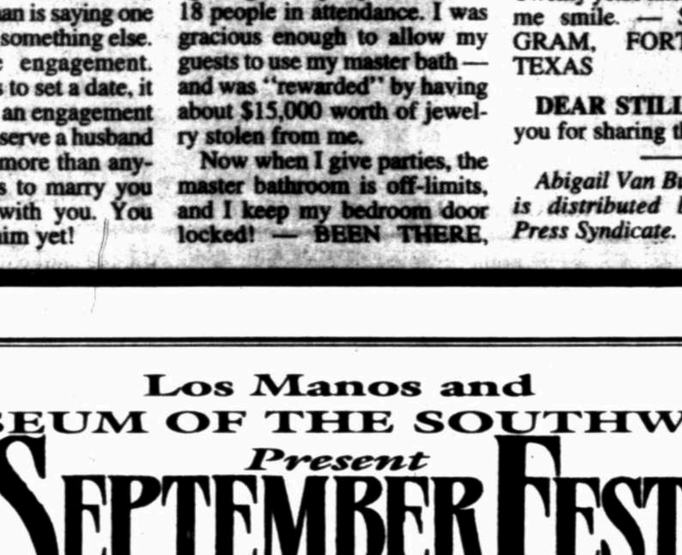

Pictures were taken outside after Mass; then we were off to the reception. We had planned to take a four-generation (all female) photo at the reception. When the time came, Gram was still decked out in her hat and coat. Well, we asked her to remove the winter garb for the photo — and she said she couldn't. It seems that while she was dressing, she decided to give her hair one last heavy coat of hair spray. When she tried to remove her hat, it was glued to her hair!

Now when I get lonely for Gram, I take out my album and look at that photo — everyone in best dresses and my grandmother in her hat and coat. Twenty years later, it still makes me smile. — STILL MISS GRAM, FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR STILL: Hats off to you for sharing that smile.

Tensions between whites and Indians raised by S.D. killings

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — It's been nearly three months since two Sioux men were found slain in a culvert near the Nebraska line, and many Indians doubt authorities even care whether they solve the crime.

In fact, some Indian activists say the apparent standstill in the investigation only confirms their suspicion that white Nebraska lawmen helped kill Wilson Black Elk Jr. and Ronald Hard Heart or helped cover up the crime to make it seem as if Indians were responsible.

"It's just two dead Indians to them," Tom Poor Bear, who was Black Elk's half-brother and Hard Heart's cousin, said of the FBI. "If these were two white people who were murdered, this place would be swarming with FBI agents. They'd be turning over every blade of grass."

The deaths have led to violent protests and heightened long-standing tensions between whites and the Oglala Sioux from the poor and desolate Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

The FBI says it is doing all it can. And the sheriff's department in Sheridan County, Neb., denies having any role in the killings or discriminating against Indians. But those statements do little to diminish the distrust on the reservation.

Many of the bad feelings stem from the American Indian Movement's 1973 armed takeover of a trading post at nearby Wounded Knee in a protest over the government's handling of complaints about Indian affairs. In 71 days of unrest, two Indians were killed and a deputy marshal was wounded.

White-vs.-Indian tensions also run high on South Dakota's eight other reservations, where unemployment often is staggering and alcoholism widespread.

In Mobridge, S.D., just across the Missouri River from the Standing Rock Sioux Indian Reservation, Indians have rallied to protest the way authorities have handled the death earlier this summer of Robert "Boo" Many Horses, 22, whose body was found face-down in a garbage can.

The autopsy found that Many Horses died of alcohol poisoning. Four white teen-agers who were drinking with him the night he died have been charged — one with manslaughter, for allegedly stuffing him in the can.

Indians are angry that the defendants are free as they await trial, while three Indians accused of severely beating a white man near Pine Ridge in August were denied bail.

"There is deep-rooted racism in South Dakota, and it can't be denied," said Alfred Bone Shirt, who is on the Lakota Nation Human Rights Committee. Lakota is the name some Sioux call themselves.

"All I want to do is have my brother rest in peace," said Edward Hard Heart. "Right now his spirit i wandering around, and he won't rest until we find out who killed him."

Clintons sign papers for New York house

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — President Clinton and his wife signed a contract Thursday to buy a $1.7 million house in a New York City suburb, White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said.

The five-bedroom house, which the Clintons toured Saturday, will give Hillary Rodham Clinton the New York residency she needs if she decides to run for the U.S. Senate.

Lockhart said the Clintons will borrow $1.3 million from Bankers Trust Co. The loan will be guaranteed in part by Terry McAuliffe, the president's friend and one of his chief fund-raisers.

"We appreciate everyone who helped make our search for a new home an enjoyable experience," the Clintons said in a statement issued while vacationing in upstate New York.

At $1.7 million, the Clintons agreed to pay slightly more than the list price of $1.695 million.

The white, three-story wood frame home in the Westchester County town of Chappaqua was built in 1889 and features a swimming pool, five bedrooms, four bathrooms and two fireplaces. The top floor contains an exercise room. The lot, just over an acre, is screened by evergreens at the end of a cul-de-sac called Old House Lane.

The Clintons will pay about $26,000 a year in property taxes on their new residence.

The agreement to buy the house came as the Clintons were winding down a vacation that paired golf and relaxation with fund-raising events for Mrs. Clinton and the Democratic Party.

The first lady has not formally declared her candidacy for the Senate seat being vacated by Democrat Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

The house apparently passed security muster this week. The Secret Service checked it out with an eye to protecting Clinton when he is a private citizen. Former presidents have a small security detail.

Clinton has 17 months left in his second term, and is thinking about his future.

"I can work for cheap," he told a New Yorker this week. "I've got a good pension." At another point he noted, "I'm looking for a new role."

Clinton seemed both delighted and unsettled by the enthusiastic reception Mrs. Clinton drew during their first joint trip to New York state since she formed the exploratory committee. It marked the first time that Clinton campaigned on her behalf and helped raise money for the effort.

But he plainly laments that his own time is waning and that he cannot run for president again. "I hate it, actually," he told supporters last weekend.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS BUDGET AND PROPOSED TAX RATE

The Greenwood I S D will hold a public meeting at 6:00 PM, September 14, 1999 in the Greenwood Administration Bldg. Board Room at 2700 F M 1379 Midland, Texas 79701.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the school district's budget that will determine the tax rate that will be adopted. Public participation in the discussion is invited.

The tax rate that is ultimately adopted at this meeting or at a separate meeting at a later date may not exceed the proposed rate shown below unless the district publishes a revised notice containing the same information and comparisons set out below and holds another public meeting to discuss the revised notice.

Comparison of Proposed Rates with Last Year's Rates

	Maintenance & Operations	Interest & Sinking Fund*	Total	Local Revenue Per Student	State Revenue Per Student
Last Year's Rate	$1.430	$0.340	$1.770	$2,033	$3,125
Less State-Funded Tax Relief	$0.526	$0.000	$0.526	N/A	N/A
Last Year's Rate Adjusted for Tax Relief	$1.956	$0.340	$2.296	N/A	N/A
Rate to Maintain Same Level of Maintenance & Operations Revenue & Pay Debt Service 	$1.457	$0.000	$1.457	$1,481	$3,504
Proposed Rate	$1.500	$0.000	$1.500	$1,524	$3,859

* The Interest and Sinking Fund tax revenue is used to pay for bonded indebtedness on construction, equipment, or both. The bonds, and the tax rate necessary to pay those bonds, were approved by the voters of this district.

 The Rate to Maintain the Same Level of Maintenance & Operations Revenue & Pay Debt Service does not reflect revenue available to the district in the 1999-2000 school year for the pay raise for classroom teachers, full-time librarians, full-time counselors, and full-time school nurses enacted by the 76th Legislature. The estimated cost of the pay raise for the 1999-2000 school year is $339,000.

Comparison of Proposed Levy with Last Year's Levy on Average Residence

	Last Year	This Year
Average Market Value of Residences	$74,630	$79,520
Average Taxable Value of Residences	$47,630	$51,620
Last Year's Rate Versus Proposed Rate per $100 Value	$1.770000	$1.500000
Taxes Due on Average Residence	$843.05	$774.30
Increase (Decrease) in Taxes	($68.75)

Under state law, the dollar amount of school taxes imposed on the residence homestead of a person 65 years of age or older or of the surviving spouse of such a person, if the surviving spouse was 55 years of age or older when the person died, may not be increased above the amount paid in the first year after the person turned 65, regardless of changes in tax rate or property value.

Notice of Rollback Rate: The highest tax rate the district can adopt before requiring voter approval at an election is $1.985855. This election will be automatically held if the district adopts a rate in excess of the rollback rate of $1.985855.

Fund Balances

The following estimated balances will remain at the end of the current fiscal year and are not encumbered with or by a corresponding debt obligation, less estimated funds necessary for operating the district before receipt of the first state aid payment:

Maintenance and Operations Fund Balance(s)	$1,124,032
Interest & Sinking Fund Balance(s)	$0

Where are Australia's giant eddies?

Researchers analyzing satellite photographs of the Indian Ocean northwest of Australia were amazed when they found huge ocean eddies as large as the island of Tasmania. These giant, circular patterns of ocean currents may in large part determine Australia's climate and the effects that the weather phenomena El Nino and La Nina may bring to the region.

The images came from the TOPEX-Poseidon, a French-U.S. ocean-monitoring satellite in orbit some 1,300 miles (2,092 kilometers) above the earth. They showed multiple eddies both north and south of the South Equatorial Current, a major "river" of water coursing through the Indian Ocean toward Africa and containing enough water to supply at least 250 Amazon Rivers. An analysis of the photos showed that the eddies reach as deep as .62 miles (1 kilometer).

Since the Indian Ocean is the main source of rainfall for southern and western Australia, understanding the eddies better could help climatologists predict that country's precipitation.

The pictures also prove that El Nino and La Nina's effects can extend into the Indian Ocean. Previously, they were restricted to the Pacific Ocean.

GIVING YOU THE WORLD nie Midland Reporter-Telegram

The Fright Stuff writing competition

By Georgia Temple

Darkness fell over the deepening shadows as the moon slipped behind the clouds. The moan of the wind through the rustling pines flanking the driveway echoed with each breath the sigh of a child lost in a world without rest. She willed herself to move on.

A mass of stone and brick and mortar rose in front of her. She stopped. No lights in the windows. What had she expected? The place was deserted, had been for generations. Cursed, the villagers said.

She didn't believe in curses, but they certainly did. Her sister had come here and never been seen again. And no one, not even the constable, would set foot on this property. But she would. With an unsure step, she moved toward the house, fighting the prickling sensation that had started at the base of her neck and now spread down her back.

As she neared the bleak structure, an odor of ripening decay tainted the breeze. She misstepped, stumbled over the loose bricks and stones that had fallen from the facade, and lunged toward the steps. The light from her flashlight fell on the 12-foot-high front door that gaped open. The door had been wrenched from its hinges. Without a backward look, she slipped inside.

For brief moments, the beam of the flashlight flickered inside the house. Screams challenged the moaning wind, then silence reclaimed the grounds. The moon slipped from behind the clouds, its soft light illuminating the earth below. The house stood dark and silent in the night.

The time has come to pause and consider what happens to our protagonist. Does she die? does she live? has she fallen? been captured? and if so by what or whom? Are the house and the grounds haunted? are they inhabited by a crazed scientist? are they part of a government plot a la "The X-Files"? does the place lead into another reality? or does the answer fall into a mysterious depth not thought of before?

Only you know.

Researchers: Forget grass, cows need seaweed

LUBBOCK (AP) — Nobody has asked the cows, but Texas Tech researchers say a two-year research project indicates cattle might be better off chewing seaweed than grass.

The researchers say cattle fed with seaweed meal are more resistant to disease, gain more weight and are more likely to be of a higher grade when their meat is processed and sold.

That could mean millions of dollars for farmers and ranchers, officials estimate.

"The economic loss that infected grass has on beef, swine and dairy industries is an enormous problem," said Vivien Allen, a forage expert and agriculture professor at Texas Tech.

"Estimated losses to the beef industry alone due to fescue (grass) toxicity exceed $600 million annually. What we see is that the seaweed treatment has reversed some of the toxic effects of the infected fescue."

The study included more than 1,000 head of cattle that were fed either seaweed feed or common grass sprayed with seaweed extract. Any of the cattle that had previously contracted diseases from grass showed vast improvement, Ms. Allen said.

Seaweed contains high concentrations of vitamins A, E and D, but beyond that, researchers aren't exactly sure why it's good for cattle.

'We know it's good for people too, but like many things, we don't know why it is so good for disease prevention.'

— Vivien Allen, an agriculture professor at Texas Tech.

"We know it is good for people too, but like many things, we don't know why it is so good for disease prevention," Allen said.

Ranchers seemed skeptical but said they would give seaweed a try if it were available on the market.

"I've heard of feeding cattle different types of forage, but seaweed?" said Ray Herbert, a rancher near Dalhart. "Seems like the cow would get a sick stomach. But I've tried strange things before and if the evidence is there and it was on the market, I'd try it."

Tech researchers say they discovered the benefits of seaweed by accident.

Two years ago, scientists working across the hall from Allen treated grass with different chemicals and extracts, trying to produce grass for golf courses that would resist disease and constant wear. Allen overheard them talking about the experiments.

Allen said she immediately realized the implications for cattle.

"Better grass means stronger animals," Allen said. "First, we fed cattle grass treated with seaweed. Feeding the cattle seaweed was a big step and we were skeptical at first, but the results proved positive."

Kevin Pond, another researcher on the project, said a group of cattle who ate seaweed produced better cuts of meat then those fed hay. Better cuts are those with more fat evenly distributed throughout the meat, making it juicier and tastier, researchers say.

"The quality grade appears to go up about a half grade in animals that have been seaweed-treated," Pond said. "This translates into better beef, a benefit to both producers and consumers."

The university has applied for a patent for producing seaweed feed and hopes to market it next year. The research has just been released for peer review.

Border agent, schoolteacher, indicted in bribery plot

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A Border Patrol agent and a school teacher have been accused of providing illegal documents to immigrants so they could remain in the United States.

Roberto D. Longoria, a supervisory Border Patrol agent in Harlingen, and Carlos Villareal, a notary public and teacher in the Los Fresnos school district, were arrested Thursday.

A Brownsville federal grand jury indicted them on one count of conspiracy to defraud the United States, 10 counts of bribery of a public official, five counts of making a false entry in a document, and 11 counts of making a false document.

They face fines of up to $250,000 on each count, plus up to five years in prison on each count of the conspiracy and falsifying of documents charges and up to 15 years in prison on each of the other counts.

The indictment came after a 20-month investigation that involved the Department of Justice's Office of the Inspector General, the U.S. Border Patrol, and the FBI.

"We're aware of the indictment and the arrests, and we're cooperating with the Office of the Inspector General in the investigation," Border Patrol McAllen Sector spokeswoman Letty Garza said.

"Because we are public servants, we should set an example and naturally we're disappointed in the outcome," she said.

According to the indictment:

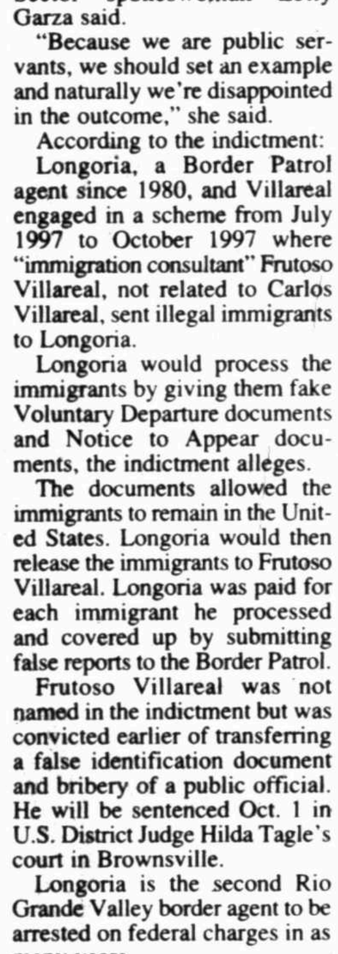

Longoria, a Border Patrol agent since 1980, and Villareal engaged in a scheme from July 1997 to October 1997 where "immigration consultant" Frutoso Villareal, not related to Carlos Villareal, sent illegal immigrants to Longoria.

Longoria would process the immigrants by giving them fake Voluntary Departure documents and Notice to Appear documents, the indictment alleges.

The documents allowed the immigrants to remain in the United States. Longoria would then release the immigrants to Frutoso Villareal. Longoria was paid for each immigrant he processed and covered up by submitting false reports to the Border Patrol.

Frutoso Villareal was not named in the indictment but was convicted earlier of transferring a false identification document and bribery of a public official. He will be sentenced Oct. 1 in U.S. District Judge Hilda Tagle's court in Brownsville.

Longoria is the second Rio Grande Valley border agent to be arrested on federal charges in as many years.

Rebels, Bulldogs hit field for real

Lee starts road to championship repeat at home

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Want a novelty? Midland Lee is playing at home tonight.

The Rebels have been a stranger to Memorial Stadium since they have gone six consecutive football contests without a home game, a stretch that brought the school its first state championship last December.

LEE
EP Coronado at Midland Lee

Now the quest begins with the run as "Defending State Champions", and that road swing ends when El Paso Coronado comes calling at 7:30 p.m. But if you think the Rebs are jumping for joy over a home game, you would be wrong.

"We've never made it an issue with our kids about where we play a game," Lee coach John Parchman says. "If you do that, what do you tell them when we do go on the road? We treat every game the same.

"Don't get me wrong, it's nice not to have to travel and to play before your fans, but we've never been one to say, 'Wait until we get 'em at our place.' We do have to travel, so we'll play those games

4-5A could sweep opening weekend

It's hard to step out of the house these days without someone asking about either the Midland High or Midland Lee football teams.

Williamson

It seems that the "anticipation monitor" is clicking at a higher rate than usual.

But I say that we are still waiting for some "meaningful" games before this season heats up.

For instance, four District 4-5A teams go against El Paso teams this weekend, including MHS and Lee, and more comes next week.

Permian, which plays El Paso Irvin, hasn't lost to a Sun City squad in 53 consecutive outings. Since at least the 1950s, District 4-5A teams have never lost to an El Paso team at home except Midland High, which has two home losses to El Paso squads.

So, while your blood is still prematurely boiling, here are some things you can continue to watch for until things really heat up:

Eyes Are Watching: The early season has a few things to clear up. For Lee, the defense needs to be little more than a water sieve, but a busted dam would be bad. For MHS, the eyes will be on Jimmy Smith and Courtland Cook. The Bulldogs need a running back with number potential.

Decade Battle: Tim McGraw, 4-5A's sports guru, says if Lee can produce a better record than Permian, or even match the Panthers' 1999 record, the Rebels will be the winningest 4-5A team of the decade. Lee stands at 85-21-5 while Permian is 84-23-3 going into this season. No 4-5A team has ever bettered Permian over a

Purple Pack goes with tailback trio in opener

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High running backs this season are not following a legend, just a player who last year rushed for the second most regular season yards in the history of District 4-5A.

"There are big shoes to fill, and Shemond (Davis) was a good running back," said junior Courtland Cook, who will battle senior Jimmy Smith and sophomore Tony Joseph for the No. 1 tailback position. "Jimmy, Tony and myself, we have to come into our own, and we have to form our own identity, so that people around 4-5A can know that we will be the ones to reckon with come district."

The process of forming that new identity starts at 8:30 p.m. (MST) tonight when the Bulldogs open the 1999 season at El Paso Austin.

What will also start is the comparisons to Davis, who won the 4-5A rushing title with 1,807 yards. That is a certainty.

"He ran well last year, but he is not here this year," Smith said. "You can't think that about that stuff. You have to know what you got to do this year and not worry about the past."

"People are always going to make comparisons," MHS coach David Browning said. "I am telling everybody right now. We don't have a Shemond Davis. These kids are different in what they do. They maybe can do something better than Shemond did, but as far as the overall package goes, we don't have a guy with the speed, with the vision or with the agility that Shemond had. We don't have that right now."

M
Midland High at El Paso Austin

What MHS has at this point is two runners (Smith and Cook) who combined for 350 varsity yards last year and another (Joseph) who was doing his thing on the freshman team. Tonight, all three are expected to see action against an Austin team which returns four starters on defense.

"The thing that Shemond did was break tackles and make extra yards. That is what I am not getting now," Browning said. "He (Shemond) had a great knack for making guys miss and breaking tackles. That is where the difference is, and our guys have to do better from that standpoint."

This year's running back corps will benefit from an offensive line that is the biggest in Browning's three seasons at MHS.

To put that in perspective, the heaviest member of last year's opening day lineup was 238

Agassi zones in on winning Open crown

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — Andre Agassi stared at the baseline, glared at the linesman and growled loudly to let loose his frustration over an obviously blown call inches from where he stood.

Close calls went against Agassi in every set Thursday, and he responded by groaning and grunting and grumbling to the umpire before slugging more winners. He won one game three times before it actually counted.

It was a measure of Agassi's dominance that at least a half-dozen bad calls could not dent his composure, diminish his intensity or stop him from demolishing overmatched qualifier Axel Pretzsch of Germany 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 to reach the third round of the U.S. Open.

Agassi, the 1994 U.S. Open champion, has been on a roll all summer, from his triumph in the French Open to the final of Wimbledon to the title he won two weeks ago in Washington. He has won 30 of his last 34 matches, and lost to only two players — Pete Sampras three times, Yevgeny Kafelnikov once.

With Sampras out of the U.S. Open with a back injury, defending champion Patrick Rafter gone with a rotator cuff tear and No. 8 Carlos Moya quitting Thursday night with a bad back, No. 2 Agassi knows he is the man to beat.

"I'll be disappointed if I don't win here because I want it so bad," Agassi said. "But you also come in well aware of the fact that you can't expect to win. You have to just expect to control the things you can, which is your preparation and how hard you work out there and how much you focus and how you allow yourself to execute. Those are where my expectations lie.

"Opinions don't matter a whole lot. They really don't, not when it comes down to getting it on out there on the court. All it takes is for one bad match for U.S. Open dreams to be squashed. I'm not confused as to what's required to win any match, regardless of who it is that I'm playing."

Lindsay Davenport, the women's defending champion and No. 2 seed, showed the same kind of focus as Agassi and had just as little trouble in a 6-0, 6-2 victory at night over Ruxandra Dragomir.

No. 3 Venus Williams gained a walkover into the fourth round when her scheduled opponent for Friday, Henrieta Nagyova of Slovakia, withdrew because of a strained right wrist.

In other women's second-round play, No. 4 Monica Seles, No. 7 Serena Williams, No. 9 Julie Halard-Decugis, No. 11 Nathalie Tauziat, and No. 16 Conchita Martinez advanced. No. 14 Sandrine Testud bowed to Spain's Magui Serna 6-3, 6-3.

Against Pretzsch, recently of the challenger circuit and making his Open debut, Agassi didn't let his intensity waver. He hit balls early and crisply, moved forward efficiently and put rallies away when he had the opportunity.

Jags win war of attrition vs. Cowboys, 27-6

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Forget the 27-6 final score in favor of Jacksonville. The real reason the Jaguars beat the Dallas Cowboys in Thursday night's exhibition finale was because they suffered fewer injuries.

Jacksonville got an 88-yard punt return for a touchdown by Reggie Barlow and a 44-yard field goal from Mike Hollis for the only points during the little more than a quarter played by starters.

Then the Jaguars' backups made the lead hold up.

■ More NFL Games/5C

Dallas (1-4) scored more bruises than points, although none ended up too serious. There were some tense moments, though, as two starters limped off in the opening minutes and six more guys were treated by trainers.

The Cowboys already are likely to open the season without cornerbacks Deion Sanders and Kevin Smith and linebacker Quentin Coryatt. Several key reserves also are either out or nursing injuries.

The biggest concern Thursday night was offensive lineman Flozell Adams, who was hurt on the game's second snap. He was diagnosed with a sprained left ankle and didn't return. Middle linebacker Randall Godfrey joined Adams on the sidelines during Jacksonville's opening drive to protect a sprained left ankle, also calling it a night.

Five defensive backs went down for Dallas. Fill-in starting cornerback Charlie Williams (hamstring), cornerback Kenny Wheaton (right knee) and safety Izell Reese (bruised back) didn't return. Duane Hawthorne (bruised knee) and Zebbie Letheridge (bruised shoulder) did.

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken made sure his 19th season in the majors would be remembered for more than just his first two trips to the disabled list.

Ripken, displaying his usual flair for the dramatic, hit his 400th homer Thursday night to help lead the Baltimore Orioles over the Tampa Bay Devils Rays 11-6.

Ripken connected in the third inning against Rolando Arrojo, driving a 1-1 pitch into the left-field seats to turn a two-run game into a 7-2 rout.

The three-run shot made Ripken the 29th player in baseball history to reach the 400-mark. As usual, the milestone occurred at Camden Yards, where in 1995 he broke Lou Gehrig's record of playing in 2,130 straight games and voluntarily ended the amazing run at 2,632 last year.

After Ripken rounded the bases, he was greeted warmly by his teammates in the dugout. He then came out and tipped his batting helmet to the standing crowd.

The fans remained on their feet as the Devil Rays made a pitching change, and Ripken used the delay to wave again to the appreciative crowd.

Among those in attendance was his mother, Vi. Ripken's father, Cal Sr., died of lung cancer in March.

The homer was his 16th of the season and first since July 25. He spent a month on the disabled list with nerve irritation in his lower back before being activated Wednesday.

Tigers 8, Rangers 7

DETROIT — Deivi Cruz's two-run homer in the eighth inning Thursday rallied the Detroit Tigers to an 8-7 win over the Texas Rangers.

Bobby Higginson homered twice for the Tigers, who won three of the four games in the series.

The Tigers trailed 7-4 after Rafael Palmeiro and Todd Zeile hit back-to-back homers in the top of the eighth.

But Higginson hit his second homer of the game to start a four-run home half off Jeff Zimmerman (9-3). Bill Haselman hit a RBI single before Cruz lined his eighth homer into the left-field seats.

Yankees 9, Athletics 3

NEW YORK — Clay Bellinger started a four-run rally in the third inning with a single and hit his first career home run in the sixth to help the Yankees beat the Oakland Athletics.

Darryl Strawberry, in his first game since last Sept. 27, struck out twice and walked in his return 11 months after learning he had colon cancer and one month after his 113-day drug suspension ended.

Orlando Hernandez (15-7) won for the ninth time in 10 decisions as the Yankees salvaged a four-game split with Oakland.

Royals 4, Red Sox 2

BOSTON (AP) — Sal Fasano homered and Mac Suzuki pitched 5 1-3 innings of three-hit ball as Kansas City beat Boston and spoiled the return of Ramon Martinez.

The Royals stopped a six-game losing streak and won for the first time in 10 road games.

Blue Jays 6, Twins 1

TORONTO — Carlos Delgado hit his career-high 39th homer and David Wells pitched a four-hitter, leading Toronto over Minnesota.

Toronto moved within four games of Boston and two games of Oakland in the AL wild-card race. The Red Sox and Athletics both lost Thursday.

Indians 6, Angels 5

CLEVELAND — Richie Sexson's three-run homer capped another big inning for Cleveland against Anaheim sending Charles Nagy to a victory and a four-game sweep.

Nagy (15-9) allowed one run and eight hits in seven innings. The right-hander joined Atlanta's Greg Maddux as the only pitchers in the majors to win at least 15 games in each of the past five seasons.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 3, Phillies 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Joe Nathan pitched seven strong innings and Barry Bonds had a sacrifice fly to drive in the go-ahead run as the San Francisco Giants beat Philadelphia, completing a four-game sweep.

Nathan (5-3) allowed both runs and six hits as the Giants won their sixth straight and pulled within six game of Arizona, which leads the NL West. Robb Nen got three outs for his 31st save.

Cardinals 4, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Joe McEwing hit an RBI single off Hector Ramirez (0-1) in the ninth as St. Louis won its third straight following a seven-game losing streak.

Mark McGwire went 0-for-4, and remained four home runs behind Sammy Sosa, who leads the major leagues with 56.

Irons becomes 2nd-generation Tech Hall of Honor inductee

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — Midland's Dan Irons will be inducted into the Texas Tech Hall of Honor on Oct. 1 at a special banquet at the Lubbock Country Club.

Irons is a second-generation Hall of Honor recipient. His Father, Ed, a standout football and basketball player from 1938 to 1942, was inducted in 1973.

Dan Irons, who has lived in Midland since 1984, earned All-America honors in 1977 after a career filled with opening holes for such offensive stalwarts as Odessa's Rodney Allison and Lubbock's Larry Isaac.

He was twice All-Southwest Conference at offensive tackle, and was a key fixture on the 1976 Red Raider team that rose as high as No. 5 in the nation before finishing with a 10-2 record.

Tech went to the Bluebonnet Bowl in 1976, but lost to Nebraska, 27-24. The only other loss that season was to Houston, 27-19, at home, costing Tech the outright Southwest Conference championship and a trip to the Cotton Bowl.

Irons was drafted by San Francisco in 1978 and retired from the New York Giants in 1980 after suffering from persistent knee problems.

Tech was 7-4 in his senior season and the Red Raiders went to the Tangerine Bowl where the Raiders fell to Florida State, 40-17.

Also joining Irons in the Hall of Honor ceremonies will be former football player Curtis Jordan, who played 11 seasons in the NFL for Tampa Bay and Washington.

Former baseball player and coach Gary Ashby and former basketball player Jack Alderson will also join the Hall.

The foursome will be recognized on Oct. 3 at the Tech-Texas A&M football game. Tickets for the Oct. 2 banquet can be purchased through the Red Raider Club by calling 1-806-742-1196.

The Tech Hall of Honor is designed so that any person who has made a significant impact on Red Raider athletics is eligible for consideration. There is a 10-year waiting period for athletes. The addition of this year's four former Tech greats brings the number of inductees to 98 since the Hall of Honor's inception in 1961.

Mangum wins titles in Hawaii

HONOLULU, Hawaii — Jennifer Mangum won a whole slew of events at the Masters National Diving Championships last weekend.

She swept her age category in three events, the one-meter springboard, the three-meter springboard and platform.

She also competed in two syncronized diving events and won both. She teamed with Joanna Lindstrom of Canada in the women's doubles and with David Cotton of San Diego in the mixed doubles.

Huber, Parnell made captains

SHERMAN — Former Midland High standouts, Dustin Huber and Sean Parnell, have been selected to captain the 1999 Austin College men's soccer team.

Huber, a midfielder, scored three goals and had two assists during the 1998 season. He also was named to the all-American Southwest Conference East Division team. Entering his senior year, Huber has scored 18 career goals and six career assists.

Parnell, a forward, played in only one game last season due to a knee injury. In that game, he scored a goal. For his career, Parnell has six goals and 10 assists.

The Kangaroos have posted winning seasons in five of the last six seasons and won two of the last three American Southwest Conference titles. They will play in the Permian Basin at 2 p.m. Sept. 11 versus the University of Texas-Permian Basin.

North Texas falls to UNLV

Associated Press

DENTON — The John Robinson era at Nevada-Las Vegas began Thursday night. It came at a good time.

■ College Football

In his first game in almost two years, Robinson coached UNLV to a 26-3 victory over North Texas, ending the nation's second-longest Division I-A losing streak at 16 games. It also ended the Rebels' 26-game losing streak on the road.

Robinson coached 12 years in two stints at Southern Cal (1976-82 and 1993-97) and coached the Los Angeles Rams for nine seasons starting in 1983. Robinson hadn't coached since November 1997, when he was fired by USC.

Robinson started this season with a 104-35-4 record and was 7-1 in bowl games. He won a national championship with USC in 1978.

While at USC, Robinson coached Heisman Trophy winners Charles White and Marcus Allen, 24 All-Americans, 22 NFL first-round draft picks and 86 NFL draft choices.

UNLV held North Texas to 161 yards in the first half, but 64 of those came in the last four minutes, leading to a 24-yard field goal by Jason Ball as time expired.

Michigan St. 27 Oregon 20

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Amp Campbell, who broke his neck in a loss to Oregon last season, returned a fumble 85 yards in the fourth quarter to give Michigan State its first lead as the Spartans paid back the Ducks with a 27-20 victory Thursday night.

The Spartans, who trailed 17-7 in the opener for both teams, came back with 17 unanswered points, taking a 24-17 lead on Campbell's return of Herman Ho-Ching's fumble. Linebacker Julian Peterson set up the return by stripping the ball from Ho-Ching.

Iowa St. 33, Indiana St. 7

AMES, Iowa — Quarterback Sage Rosenfels accounted for two touchdowns in his first start and Ennis Haywood and Darren Davis both rushed for more than 100 yards as Iowa State rolled over Indiana State 33-7 Thursday night.

Rosenfels, helped by a nifty fake from Davis, ran 52 yards on a bootleg for a touchdown on the game's second play and threw a 25-yard scoring pass to J.J. Moses in the third quarter.

Haywood, who rushed for 178 yards as a freshman last fall, carried 24 times for 172 yards and scored a touchdown to help Iowa State win its opener for the first time since 1995. Davis, the starting tailback, added 112 yards in 13 carries.

Morales' shot lifts 'Hounds

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — A three-run home run by Willie Morales gave the Midland RockHounds a 4-1 win over the San Antonio Missions Thursday in Texas League action at Nelson Wolff Stadium.

Morales hit his 15th homer of the year in the top of the eighth inning off the Missions' hard-throwing reliever Chris Foster. The shot to left centerfield drove in Jose Castro and T.R. Marcinczyk and gave the RockHounds the lead for good.

Midland took its first lead in the first inning, touching top pitching prospect Eric Gagne for one run as Tim Garland led off the inning with a triple. The next batter, Jose Castro, scored Garland with a single. Gagne didn't pick up the loss. In fact, he may have been the game's biggest winner when the night was finished. When he was pulled after five innings, he was told that he got the call up to the Major Leagues. He is scheduled to make his first start with the Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday at Florida.

In this game, Gagne, 12-4 for the season, pitched five innings, allowing one run and five hits.

The 'Hounds also got some quality pitching on this night, allowing one run on five hits. Starter Denny Wagner worked six innings, allowing one run and three hits. Leo Vasquez came on in relief to pick up his third win of the season. Vasquez is 3-1 with a 1.43 in last 10 appearances.

Bert Snow picked up his 13th save in 14 chances with the RockHounds. He did so with another quality outing. Snow has not allowed a run in his last 16 appearances. During that time, he has worked 14 1/3 consecutive scoreless innings, recording a 1-0 record and 10 saves.

A SPORTS MEDLEY: KCRS (AM 550) will broadcast the first 55 minutes of today's RockHounds game before going directly to Midland High's football game versus El Paso Austin at 8 p.m... ankle on the same play Hawthorne was hurt and also didn't return.

The worst injuries for Jacksonville (3-1) were a sprained left shoulder for running back Chris Howard and a bruised arm for cornerback Cornell Lake, who returned to the game.

Barlow had the game's best play, taking a punt following Dallas' opening drive from his 12 and weaving back and forth until shaking the punter at the 50 and cruising into the end zone for the score.

Jacksonville had to settle for Hollis' field goal early in the second quarter when tight end Kyle Brady dropped a wide-open pass on third down.

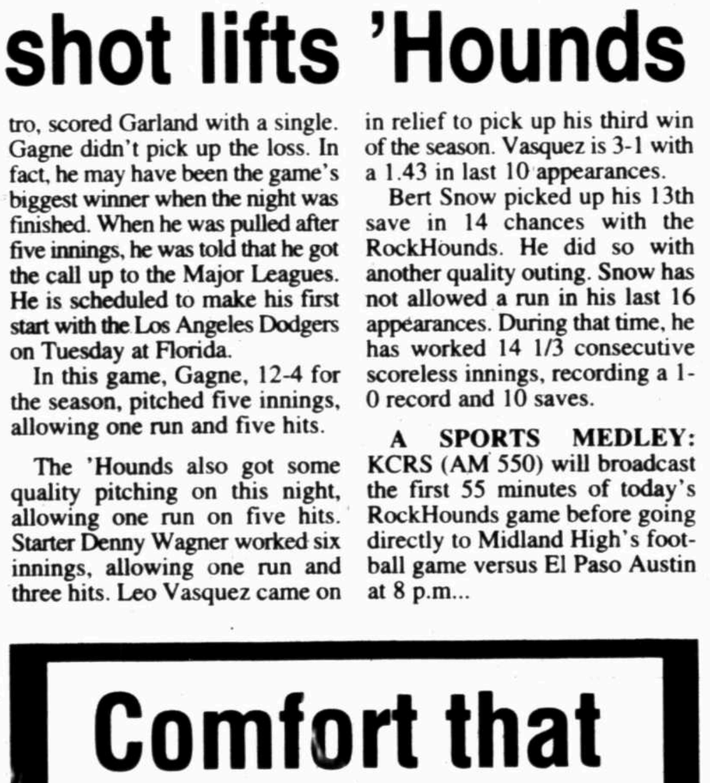

The Jaguars went up 17-0 when third-string quarterback Jay Fiedler led a nine-play, 96-yard drive following a fumble by Dallas running back Denvis Manns. Barlow sparkled on this drive, too, catching a nice 39-yard pass to set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Tavian Banks.

Will Moore scored Jacksonville's final touchdown, a 9-yard pass from Fiedler, on the opening drive of the second half.

Dallas' only points came on a pair of 41-yard field goals by Richie Cunningham in the second and third quarters, both on drives led by backup quarterback Jason Garrett.

Jacksonville's Scott Lindsey capped the scoring with a 31-yarder with 7:34 left in the fourth quarter.

LEE: Rebs' defense must stop Jackson

Lee opened its state championship run with a 42-12 win over Coronado last September and the Thunderbirds of coach Don Brooks have many of the same players back, including quarterback Nick Jackson, who became a trivia question last fall.

Jackson is the only back to rush for more than 100 yards against Lee in regular season play last year. Vontez Duff of Copperas Cove accomplished that feat in the playoffs, but those were the only two runners to crack the 100-yard barrier against Lee.

"Coronado is one of the better teams in El Paso," Parchman said. "They were 7-4 and in the playoffs a year ago. Jackson had the 100 against us and they were breaking in a sophomore running back (Chris Little), who is going to be a good player. Their tight end (Ibok Ibok) is also a very good player."

The Lee defense returns only one player (cornerback Kody Mathews), so it will be interesting to see how the Rebel defenders fare against a back that gave them problems a year ago.

"We think we are better offensively than a year ago," said Coronado's Brooks, "but we're not there on defense yet, and that's bad since Lee has all those offensive people back.

"I don't know if Lee is the No. 1 team in the nation, or not, but I think they can certainly play with anyone in the nation."

Coronado lost to El Paso Socorro in the first round of the playoffs, but Brooks hopes for better luck this year.

"We lost Jackson in the fifth game of the year and lost Little against Odessa High (third game), both to collarbones," Brooks said. "They looked healthy in our scrimmage against Montwood (a 4-2 win by Coronado), so we hope they have a whole season this time around."

The Lee offense will also be without a big gun since junior tailback Cedric Benson probably won't play much, if at all. He is still nursing a sore ankle. Benson became the first sophomore in District 4-5A history to rush for 2,000 yards in a single season. So, that's a big gun to take out of the lineup.

"Cedric has worked out all week, but he probably won't play," Parchman said earlier in the week. "He still has a couple of days to get ready, and he could play if we were pressed, but he's still limping after about half a workout."

Parchman said that junior Allen Griffith will start at tailback. Griffith played fullback and Clint McNutt played tailback in a recent scrimmage with Amarillo High.

"We probably had things backwards in that scrimmage," Parchman said. "We need to get Clint in position to be part of the passing game more."

Randy Norris (another ankle injury) won't play tonight. Norris, a running back/linebacker, could move into a starting role on defense when he returns. However, Lee does return a couple of players from minor injuries with starting center Andy Brewster and reserve linebacker Landon Little.

The long trip to Midland doesn't seem to bother Brooks.

"I know a lot of coaches out here (El Paso) thinks the traveling really hurts you, but I don't think it's a big deal. You're sitting most of the time anyway," Brooks says. "The travel doesn't hurt you as much as playing against Lee. They are one of the most physical teams in the state. Coach (Tony) Shaw of Irvin thinks Lee beats you up, but I don't think that has been the case for us. But it is a physical game."

With Benson to see limited action at most, Brooks still says it won't make much difference.

"L e has enough good backs without him," Brooks said. "Their defense is trying to get adjusted just like ours, so maybe we can make a few first downs and move the ball some."

REBEL NOTES: Quarterback Jon Rogers needs 73 yards passing to pass Pat Lyons and move into third place on Lee's career passing list... Benson needs 32 yards rushing to pass Joe Woodard into seventh place on Lee's all-time rushing list... Lee brings an eight-game winning streak into the game since losing to Abilene Cooper last year...

MHS: Bulldogs make trip to El Paso

(From 1C)

(some 30 pounds lighter than this year's average.) The offensive line averaged 216 a man last year. That is a difference of 52 pounds per man.

Add Randy Gardner (215), an all-district prospect at tight end, and there should be some big holes for whoever runs the ball.

"We have got some size," Browning said. "The key to that deal is that we have always run off the football, so we have to get those big kids running off the football for an entire game. Bigger isn't always better. It is nice to have but it has to be a complete package also."

If it is in this case, watch out. Last year, MHS put a 56-7 beating on Austin. This year, Au is picked to finish fifth in the six-team District 1-5A.

Browning, however, warns against making comparisons. This is a different team. Gone is their best player from a year ago, Rufus Brown, who is playing his football these days at Florida State University. Austin does have a new head coach— Ruben Batista.

"The biggest thing this week is that we don't know too much about Austin," Browning admitted. "They did have a scrimmage the first week and they basically ran the same formation, left and right."

Defensively, this could pose a problem for MHS.

"They will basically run some form of option, but we are not sure of the scheme" Browning said. "We have had to practice against more schemes than usual because of the uncertainty.

"Anytime anyone runs option football against you, it is assignment football, and the uncertainty of schemes could be a problem for us."

ABOUT AUSTIN: QB Irvin Campbell, who has been called the next Rufus Brown, will led the offense. Campbell, a sophomore, is super fast (runs a 4.4, 40-yard dash) and could give the MHS defense quite a workout. Jarrod Redmon should get a lot of work at RB... DT Jimar Sanders led the team in tackles last year... LB Elijah Rodriguez is another defensive standout... Batista came to Austin from El Paso Jefferson, where he was the defensive end coach. This is his first head coaching job...

NOT VERY HOSPITABLE: Time and time again, 4-5A teams have been picked on when they journey out west, not so much by El Paso teams, but El Paso officials. Browning is expecting the tradition to continue.

"Odessa High went out last week and had 12 penalties," Browning said. "Last year, using OHS as an example against (El Paso) Montwood (a game Montwood won), there were six or seven penalties that Montwood had (called its way) on the last drive and Montwood eventually scored. There is a problem there and has always been a problem. I have been in this league since 1978, and it has been a problem for last 20 years. We are two touchdowns down when we get off the bus, so we have to perform like we are 14 points down from the get go."

NOT FEELING VERY GOOD: MHS linebacker Chris Hicks has a shoulder injury. Hicks is available to play if needed...

1,000-YARD HEX: Since 1993, MHS has had 1,000-yard rushers in the even number years (Roy Coats in 1994, Sam Powell in 1996 and Shemond Davis in 1998) but never had one on an odd number season...

NOTES: A win today would give MHS consecutive wins in season openers for the first time since 1987-88... MHS is 7-6 against Austin... This is the first of three MHS games with District 1-5A schools. MHS also plays El Paso Andress (the district favorite) and El Paso Irvin... MHS' home opener is next week versus Andress...

WILLIAMSON: 4-5A goes 6-0

full decade, going back to the '60s.

Decade Battle II: Midland High needs to go 12-1 this year, or the Bulldogs will have the worst decade record. MHS was 37-59-2 in the '40s while the '90s Bulldogs are currently 25-61. A 1-28 stretch in the early part of the decade really hurt.

Welcome to the League: Odessa High's Jim Carson already has a win under his belt and is the only current 4-5A coach unbeaten in his tenure.

Welcome Back II: The Randy Quisenberry District 4-5A Tour moves to Abilene Cooper, his fourth district team to be associated with. Welcome back — again.

Welcome Back III: Midland Lee ends a six-game road trip tonight (scrimmages don't count). Lee didn't play one home game in its playoff run to a state title last year.

Close to Home is Good: MHS and Lee make no trips to Abilene or San Angelo this season. There are some long trips for both teams, but the district schedule is a snap on travel.

Here's how 4-5A games will turn out this weekend:

Midland Lee 45, El Paso Coronado 14: The Rebs are 43-4-1 against El Paso teams. We aren't sold on the defense as of yet, but there is enough offensive firepower to keep this one out of the "sweat" category.

Midland High 38, El Paso Austin 7: These two teams were tied in the series at 6-6 from 1940 to 1954, but the Bulldogs won 56-7 last year for a 7-6 advantage. Expect more of the same — even in El Paso.

Odessa High 21, El Paso Montwood 9: The Bronchos haven't lost to any El Paso team at home at least since 1950 and OHS has already passed a road test to El Paso and leads this series 1-0.

Odessa Permian 36, El Paso Irvin 7: Permian is 6-0 against Irvin and test No. 7 shouldn't be a problem either.

Abilene Cooper 18, Killeen 12: This is a semi-tough test for the Cougars in a road opener, but the Cougars will find a way to win.

Abilene High 28, Lubbock Monterey 10: The Eagles enjoy a 6-4 advantage in this series. This win makes it a sweep for 4-5A.

Last year 4-5A teams posted a 21-8 non-conference record, tying the best number of victories since the league was 21-3 in 1974. 4-5A is already 2-0 this season and should be 8-0 after this week.

Comets open WNBA Finals with victory

By Melissa Murphy
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Cynthia Cooper scored 29 points and the two-time defending champion Houston Comets used superior defense in a 73-60 victory over the New York Liberty in Game 1 of the WNBA Finals on Thursday night.

The Comets, the top defensive team in the league, held New York to 26 percent shooting in the first half before a crowd of 17,114 at Madison Square Garden.

Sheryl Swoopes had 15 points and Tina Thompson added 11 points and seven rebounds for the Comets, who head to Houston Saturday for Game 2 of the best-of-3 series.

Cooper, the WNBA's top scorer, was 8-for-16 from the field and made all 10 free throws as the Comets shot 44 percent.

Sophia Witherspoon scored 18 points off the bench to lead New York, which finished with 41 percent shooting for the game.

Vickie Johnson had 16 points and Crystal Robinson added 12 points for the Liberty. Robinson, New York's top 3-point shooter, was 2-of-7 from behind the arc.

Teresa Weatherspoon's three-point play brought New York within 49-41 with just over nine minutes remaining, but Houston went on a 15-8 run, capped by Tammy Jackson's basket, to give Houston its largest lead of the game, 64-49, with 3:25 left.

The Liberty got no closer than 11 thereafter.

New York won the battle of the boards 31-28, led by Sue Wicks' 11 rebounds.

Houston held the Liberty to 7-of-27 shooting (26 percent) in the first half as the New York starters shot 3-of-15 from the field. Cooper had nine points as the Comets shot 38.5 percent.

The top two defensive teams battled to 29-20 Houston advantage at halftime. Cooper's 3-pointer and Swoopes' layup opened a 14-point lead in the first 40 seconds of the second half.

New York went on a 12-4 run, led by Johnson's four points, to trail 38-32 with 13 minutes remaining.

Houston's defense clamped down on the Liberty early. New York went 1-for-9 with five turnovers in the opening eight minutes as the Comets took a 12-3 lead in the first half.

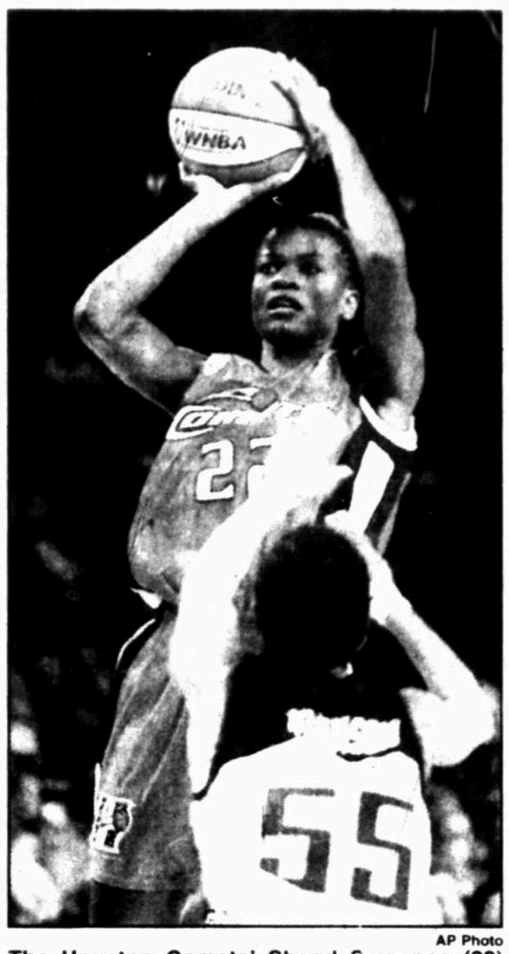

The Liberty went on a 10-6 run, capped by a 3-pointer by Robinson and a jumper by Sophia Witherspoon, to come within 18-13 with 8:02 remaining in the half.

Swoopes responded with consecutive baskets for a nine-point lead with just over six minutes left. New York went on a 5-0 run behind a free throw by Vickie Johnson and two layups by Witherspoon to trail 22-18.

Houston finished the half with a 7-2 spurt, capped by Jackson's two baskets, for a nine-point lead.

The Comets forced 10 first-half turnovers that converted into 13 points.

Houston finished the regular season with a WNBA-best 15-1 record at home. The Comets are 34-2 overall at home.

Gordon considers season a success despite fewer wins

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

More Sports/11C

DARLINGTON, S.C. — When this Winston Cup season ends few will say Jeff Gordon was a success.

But Gordon, despite a third straight series title no longer worthy of serious discussion, is encouraged.

"I'm not disappointed with this season at all," he said. "It's been a good year for us. I think we're capable of winning championships still, and that's what sticks out the most in my mind."

However, a few more high-profile victories might further dull the pain of defeat.

Gordon began the season by winning the Daytona 500, the most prestigious NASCAR race. And on Sunday he could extend one of the most coveted record by winning his fifth straight Southern 500.

But five failures to finish races have left Gordon fourth in the standings this year, 351 points behind leader Dale Jarrett. Despite a series-leading five victories this season, Gordon won't argue the merits of a point system that punishes failure more than it rewards success.

"That's the way it should be," he said. "It would be ridiculous for a guy like me to have that many bad finishes and still win the championship."

He will have to wait for next year to seek a fourth overall title, but winning the world's oldest stock car race on perhaps the sport's most demanding track is very doable. And Gordon has a plan, the same one that seems to work year after year at Darlington Raceway.

Gordon's formula for victory, something that seems tougher to achieve each year against Darlington aces Jarrett and Jeff Burton, is boredom. Just try running each of the 367 laps over the 1.366-mile track in the virtually the same time, and let the other drivers worry about their own pace.

Forget the competition. Race the track.

Despite five victories at Darlington, Gordon insists that's not so easy.

"It's a tough, tough race track," he said. "It's one of those tracks that no matter how perfect your day is going, you'll have a situation when you say, 'Hey, I just barely made it through that.'"

Jarrett, a two-time winner of the spring race, the TránSouth 400, is impressed by Gordon's success at Darlington.

"It's amazing that Jeff has won four in a row," Jarrett said. "To think you can get around this place for 2000 miles in a row and something not happen, is quite a feat."

Jarrett grew up in South Carolina and came to Darlington to watch his father, Ned, race in the Southern 500. Ned, now a TV racing commentator, won what at the time was the Labor Day weekend rite of the South by an astonishing 14 laps in 1965.

Now, his 42-year-old son hungers to win it.

"I still remember when my dad won the race and clinched the championship at the same time," Jarrett said. "I didn't realize until we got back home in Camden the magnitude of what had just taken place.

"The whole town was in our front yard wanting to celebrate. It was great."

Always a major contender at Darlington, where he once lost a shot at a $1 million bonus by slipping on a few cents worth of oil while dominating the Southern 500, Jarrett knows the fine line between victory and defeat.

Like most drivers, his Darlington war stories concern man against beast — in this case the high-banked, egg-shaped oval called The Lady in Black.

"The biggest challenge here is not to hit the wall," Jarrett said. "To run hard and keep your car out of the wall is difficult.

"Just a little bit of a slip, and you can take what could be a pretty good day and turn it into not so good."

Andretti, Tracy hope to revive title hopes

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The crash that angered Michael Andretti and Paul Tracy two weeks ago turned them into long shots for the CART FedEx Series championship.

Going into Sunday's Vancouver Molson Indy — one of five events left in the 20-race season — the two main title contenders are rookie Juan Montoya and preseason favorite Dario Franchitti.

But Andretti, the only one of the top four in the points race who has won a championship, isn't ready to concede just yet.

"Realistically, getting back into it, the way those two are going, isn't going to be easy," the second-generation Champ Car star said. "But a couple of wins, a couple of weeks with max points and ... who knows?"

Entering practice Friday on the temporary street circuit at the edge of downtown Vancouver, Montoya leads Franchitti by four points. Andretti is 48 back and just two ahead of Tracy.

"There are still 110 points out there," Andretti said. "But we can't keep letting things get away from us."

Andretti and Tracy were vying for third place early in the Target Grand Prix on the new Chicago Motor Speedway oval when they collided, sending both hard into the wall.

It wasn't the first time the two have tangled. In fact, Tracy was held out of the first race this season as a penalty for his actions on the track with Andretti last fall in Australia.

"He's going to get somebody hurt one of these days," Andretti said. "He doesn't use his head."

Tracy called the latest episode a racing accident, saying Andretti should accept at least part of the blame.

"Nothing is ever his fault," Tracy said. "We were racing to the corner and I had the position, as far as I'm concerned. He didn't back off."

Warner leads Rams past Lions

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Despite losing its starting quarterback to injury and its No. 2 running back to trade, the first-string St. Louis offense didn't miss a beat as the Rams defeated the Detroit Lions 17-6 Thursday night in a preseason finale.

Kurt Warner, making his first start for the Rams, completed 9 of 14 passes for 89 yards and a touchdown and led the Rams to scores on all three of his first-half possessions.

Marshall Faulk had his best game with the Rams, rushing for 40 yards on 10 carries and catching a 6-yard TD pass. Faulk played only the first two series. Justin Watson, who is now Faulk's backup after Tuesday's trade of Greg Hill to Detroit and injuries to Robert Holcombe, Amp Lee and June Henley, rushed for 72 yards and a touchdown on 14 carries.

Eagles 30, Browns 17

PHILADELPHIA — Donovan McNabb outplayed the only quarterback picked ahead of him in the draft, then directed two touchdown drives in the fourth quarter as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Cleveland Browns.

McNabb was 14-for-24 for 93 yards and three touchdowns, coolly leading the Eagles' third-team offense to 20 points in the fourth. Tim Couch was 5-for-9 for 41 yards in a shaky performance, playing the second quarter and two drives in the third.

With a crowd of 64,978 on hand, McNabb kept the Eagles (1-3) from having their first winless preseason since they were 0-6 in 1976.

Panthers 23, Patriots 20

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — John Kasay's 61-yard field goal as time expired lifted the Carolina Panthers over the New England Patriots.

Kasay's kick cleared the crossbar by just inches, ending a game that featured two lead changes and a tie in the final 9:34.

The kick overshadowed two strong showings by Steve Bono and Dameyune Craig, who led the Panthers to 20 second-half points, fueling an already competitive battle for Carolina's quarterback job.

Packers 25, Dolphins 17

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Undrafted rookie Basil Mitchell caught two second-half touchdown passes and Green Bay used instant replay to negate a touchdown on a kickoff return as the Packers beat the Miami Dolphins.

Again relying on a superior cast of reserves, the Packers overcame an 11-0 deficit. Backup quarterback Matt Hasselbeck threw two touchdown passes for the Packers, giving him nine for the preseason.

The Dolphins lost several players to injury. Among them was unpredictable rookie defensive end Dimitrius Underwood, who dislocated his left shoulder.

Colts 31, Seahawks 28

INDIANAPOLIS — A pass interference penalty on DeAuntae Brown in the end zone set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Keith Elias with 5 seconds remaining, giving the Indianapolis Colts a victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

Todd Peterson's fifth field goal and second of the fourth quarter put Seattle up 28-23 with 1:36 to go, but third-string quarterback Kelly Holcomb rallied Indianapolis in a seven-play drive. Officials ruled Brown interfered with receiver Terrence Wilkins on a long incomplete pass, giving the Colts the ball at the 1-yard line.

Elias ran in for the touchdown on the next play, then he took the ball in again for a 2-point conversion for the final points.

Saints 12, Titans 11

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The New Orleans Saints held on for the victory after an apparent game-winning kick by Tennessee's Al Del Greco was called back by a penalty.

Del Greco thought he had kicked his fourth field goal of the night, a 37-yarder with 8 seconds left, when the referees called the Saints for a false start before the snap. That forced Del Greco to take his baseball cap off and head back onto the field to try a 32-yarder, but his kick was wide right and the Saints pulled out the win.

"Encourage your children to read the newspaper every day. One of the most powerful things a parent can do is read to their child. It is never to early to start -- or too late to begin. Books contain language not heard in television shows, movies, or in most of the conversations our children are involved in. In that respect, reading can be compared to learning a second language."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Sept. 3, 1999:

Your career remains a high priority. Work on developing an even stronger image and building upon your reputation. Others are drawn to you. Because of your hard work and dedication, you'll gain professionally in stature and prestige. You'll make several important contacts this year. If you are single, you are likely to meet a new romantic interest through your work or while performing a community service. If attached, the two of you might often make public appearances together. You grow as a couple because you share so much. A parent or older relative plays a significant role. GEMINI pushes you to achieve.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ New beginnings can happen now that others are more in the mood to talk turkey. A child or loved one demonstrates his affection. If you ask him to put it into action, he will. Keep talks clear. Tonight: Chat, visit and do your Friday night thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Another asks for your indulgence and time. You put a certain family member on a pedestal. Talk about long-term plans for security. Take time to purchase some flowers or a gift for a loved one. A boss appreciates your consideration. Tonight: Happy at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ For once, you can do no wrong! Your sensitivity and caring warm others up. Carefully think through a decision, weighing its impact on your situation. Check in with a relative. Plans for a long-distance trip could change. Tonight: So many possibilities — what would you like to do?

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Keep a secret, even though you might really want to share it with others. An expenditure or purchase delights you. Examine what you want from another. Listen carefully to feedback, but follow your intuition with a money matter. Your sixth sense is on target. Tonight: You need some rest.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Aim for what you want. Others can hardly refuse you. Timing allows you to ask for that raise or special wish. Emphasis is on meetings, success and making progress. Network and reach out to others. Pursue heartfelt goals. Tonight: Kicking up your heels.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Keep a high profile as others seek you out. Your nerves might be more frazzled than you realize. Others look to you for answers. You call the shots. A boss smiles at your kindness and high performance. Success is yours. Tonight: Getting the job done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You don't always see eye to eye with others, but right now agreement happens easily. Don't take another's attitude for granted. Act on it. By tomorrow, you could be dealing with a whole new set of circumstances. You might even see a different person! Tonight: Take off as soon as you can.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You relate well to a key person in your life. Your caring comes out with another. Someone feels strongly about both emotional and professional concerns. Take time for a conversation. Let others express their views. Listen! Tonight: Make nice-nice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Others make an effort despite your recent hot attitude. Another really does care about you, even though he has an odd way of showing his affection at times. Unexpected news helps you change your position. You can now view a situation differently. Tonight: Let another make plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Pace yourself and enjoy your work. Share a hobby or favorite pastime with a loved one. Express caring through your nurturing ways. Another reads your message loud and clear. Walk a tight line financially. Changes seem to be a given, presently. Tonight: Run errands first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Express your lively, fun side. You are quirky and full of unpredictability. A flirtation could be building — be sure you want this. Another is clearly taken by you. Allow romance to build, if attached. Children bring pleasure. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Home remains the most appealing spot. Clear out work and escape the office as soon as you can. Others enjoy being close to you — why not invite them over? Take time with a key family member; you count on his good will. Your caring way draws others. Tonight: Happy at your castle.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

"Curious hand," remarked the kibitzer. "If the finesse were to succeed, declarer does not need to take it!" This is the deal that gave rise to the kibitzer's pronouncement.

West's two no-trump was unusual, a convention we have long viewed with disfavor. But here it did allow East-West to compete to the five-level before selling out to five spades. It is an old bridge saw that the five-level belongs to the opponents.

West led the queen of clubs, covered by the king and won with the ace. East continued with clubs (nothing else is better), and declarer ruffed and drew trumps with the ace of spades. It seemed as if the contract hinged on a successful finesse in one of the red suits — and both were heavily favored to succeed on the auction — so declarer cashed to the king of hearts, crossed to dummy with a trump and led a heart to the jack. West won and shifted to the jack of diamonds, and East's king of diamonds was the setting trick.

Although it is not always the case, the kibitzer was correct. Suppose that, instead of taking the heart finesse, declarer drew the outstanding trumps then played off the ace and king of hearts. If the queen does not drop, declarer continues with the jack. If West wins, declarer will have to rely on the diamond finesse, as before. But if East holds the queen, the defender is trapped in an end-play and must either concede a ruff-sluff or lead a diamond into dummy's major tenace. Either way, declarer loses only one club trick and one heart, and the contract is home.

Given the distributional requirements for an unusual jump to two no-trump — at least 5-5 in the minors — this is an almost sure-trick line!

Diana's mom dogged by media

LONDON — Princess Diana's mother vowed on Thursday never to share her memories of her daughter with the media.

Frances Shand Kydd told the Daily Telegraph that hounding by the media as Tuesday's anniversary of Diana's death approached forced her out of her home in Scotland.

In a letter to the editor, Mrs. Shand Kydd said the dogged attempts by the media to get her to share her memories of Diana will fail.

"For me personally, it's draining and difficult to be regarded as a commercial asset — as a boost for television audiences, circulations and sales promotions," she wrote.

"I shared her, not always joyfully, with the world when she was alive. I'm possessive, since her death, of her and of what I see to be the interests of her 'blood' family."

FRYEBURG, Maine — The driver whose van injured Stephen King as he was walking alongside a road said he would like to apologize to the author face-to-face.

The horror writer is recuperating after six operations to repair broken bones and a collapsed lung from the June 19 accident.

"I got distracted," Bryan Smith said in Wednesday's Bangor Daily News. "It was one time, and one time only. I'm very, very sorry."

Smith said he suffers from depression over the accident. He said he went off the road while trying to control his dog. A grand jury convenes Sept. 30 to decide whether charges should be filed against Smith.

King said he has no intention of suing Smith but wants his driver's license revoked. Smith's driving record includes four speeding violations, operating under the influence and driving to endanger. But he insisted he's not dangerous, as King has claimed.

"Maybe 15 years ago he could say that. Fifteen? Twenty? Yes. I was dangerous," Smith said.

MINNEAPOLIS — With a little help from a friend, Woody Harrelson has rewritten his 1993 play "Furthest From the Sun" and picked Minneapolis for its premiere.

The actor said he picked Minneapolis and the Theatre de la Jeune Lune because he wanted to be "away from New York and Los Angeles and all those distractions."

The play opens Sept. 10 and will run through Sept. 25. It's the story of a summer Harrelson spent in Houston with two friends after college.

An earlier version premiered in Los Angeles six years ago, but Harrelson said he had lost track of one of the pals, Frankie Hyman, and it lacked his voice.

So the actor tracked down Hyman and asked him to help out on the script. What he found was a junkie who had hit bottom. Harrelson helped his friend clean up and the two rewrote the play.

"Although I'd captured his spirit and his heart the first time around, what the play was missing was Frankie's voice," Harrelson said.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Pop up-and-comer Billy Crawford took a dive for his audience.

Performing his new single, "Mary Lopez," from a stage in the Kanawha River, the 17-year-old Crawford slipped and fell 10 feet into the water Wednesday night. Crawford cut his cheek and was given a tetanus shot.

"We had Councilwoman Mary Lopez up on stage and he was singing to her and he lost his balance and fell in," said Bill Shahan of WVAF-FM, one of the concert sponsors.

Crawford opened Wednesday for Julian Lennon in Charleston.

BOSTON — Britney Spears had plane problems that kept her from 1,000 fans at an autograph session.

The 17-year-old singer was scheduled to appear Wednesday but was grounded in Memphis. Some of the fans — mostly teen-age girls — had camped out overnight, and the first 250 to arrive were given wristbands that would have allowed them to meet Ms. Spears.

The festive mood turned sour when fans realized Ms. Spears wasn't going to appear. Fans who held signs with admiring slogans replaced them with ones that read, "Britney, get a watch."

Ms. Spears, whose "...Baby One More Time" album has sold more than 5 million copies, made an evening performance at the BankBoston Pavilion.

Business award

The Bosworth Co. of Midland has received the Dave Lennox Award, the most prestigious business award given by worldwide heating and cooling manufacturer Lennox Industries Inc.

Out of 6,000 independent dealers, 25 received the award.

The award is presented to Lennox dealerships offering the highest standards of quality in customer service. This is the second time Bosworth has received the award. The personalized bronze statue of inventor and company icon Dave Lennox was presented to Corky Bosworth, president of The Bosworth Co. in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands.

Bosworth has specialized in plumbing, heating and air conditioning installations and serve throughout the Permian Basin since 1949 and employs 132.

Lennox Industries is based near Dallas, manufactures residential and commercial heating and air conditioning systems and celebrates 104 years in business this year.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose slightly against the Japanese yen, edging back from its lowest levels of the year. The dollar fell against the euro.

The dollar was quoted at 109.11 Japanese yen in late New York trading, up from 109.05 late Wednesday. It last traded that low on Jan. 11, when it closed at 108.22 yen.

The dollar's meager gain against the yen came after a declining trend that had raised concerns that Japanese financial authorities might step into the market to push the dollar higher. An overly high yen could threaten Japan's struggling economy by making that country's exports less competitive.

The euro was quoted at $1.0686, up from $1.0594 late Wednesday.

The dollar also was quoted at 1.4936 Swiss francs, down from 1.5127, and 1.4952 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4896. The British pound rose to $1.6067 from $1.6062.

Gas prices plunge

(AP) — Natural gas futures took their steepest dive of the year Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, sent tumbling by a report reflecting weakened demand as summer ends.

Gasoline and other energy prices also fell. In other markets, palladium advanced sharply, boosted by strong sales in the automobile industry which uses the metal heavily, and pork bellies retreated.

Natural gas had its worst one-day decline since last December, dropping by nearly 10 percent on data showing that U.S. inventories are greater than expected.

The American Gas Association reported late Wednesday that U.S. natural gas stocks rose 69 billion cubic feet last week to 2.521 trillion cubic feet. Analysts had expected an increase of only 50 billion cubic feet.

"Natural gas really got clobbered," said Bill O'Grady, an energy analyst for AG Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis, saying the dip was to be expected after a long rise in prices.

Investors also were reacting to the fact that September and October traditionally are low-demand months for natural gas — sandwiched between high summer demand for cooling and high winter demand for heating.

New Years travel plans continue

Editor's Note: This is the sixth in a series of weekly articles examining how individuals and businesses are dealing with the potential Y2K bug.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A number of Midlanders are planning to greet the new year — and the and the new millennium — in far-away locations.

"A lot of people are making plans but are hesitant because of the Y2K bug, even though we put their minds at ease," said Linda Cardwell, travel consultant with Midland Travel.

Vicki Porter, owner of Amera Travel Network, said that her company's computer systems have been updated "and hopefully the date will roll over smoothly. But we'll have staffing available if there are any problems and provide emergency numbers. But we always do that, in case someone gets stuck in an airport and calls us

She added that "We're even booking condominiums in Corpus Christi and Ruidoso for people who don't want to fly or be near an airport on January 1."

Many travelers are mostly concerned about the first couple of days of the new year, said Bob Landreth, owner of Carlson Envoye Travel, "but I think they will fix any problems quickly. Personally, I don't think there will be any problems."

One group switched its cruise plans to Thanksgiving because one member feared being stranded on the ship on the new year, said Wendy Ragan, manager of Adventure Travel.

Cruises are top destinations, as are trips to Orlando, New York and Las Vegas, Paris and even some cruises to the International Date Line to welcome the new year, and through the Panama Canal, which reverts to the Panamanian government with the new year, travel agents say.

Peggy Brown, co-owner of Great Destinations, said her clients fear not the Y2K bug but the cost of the trip.

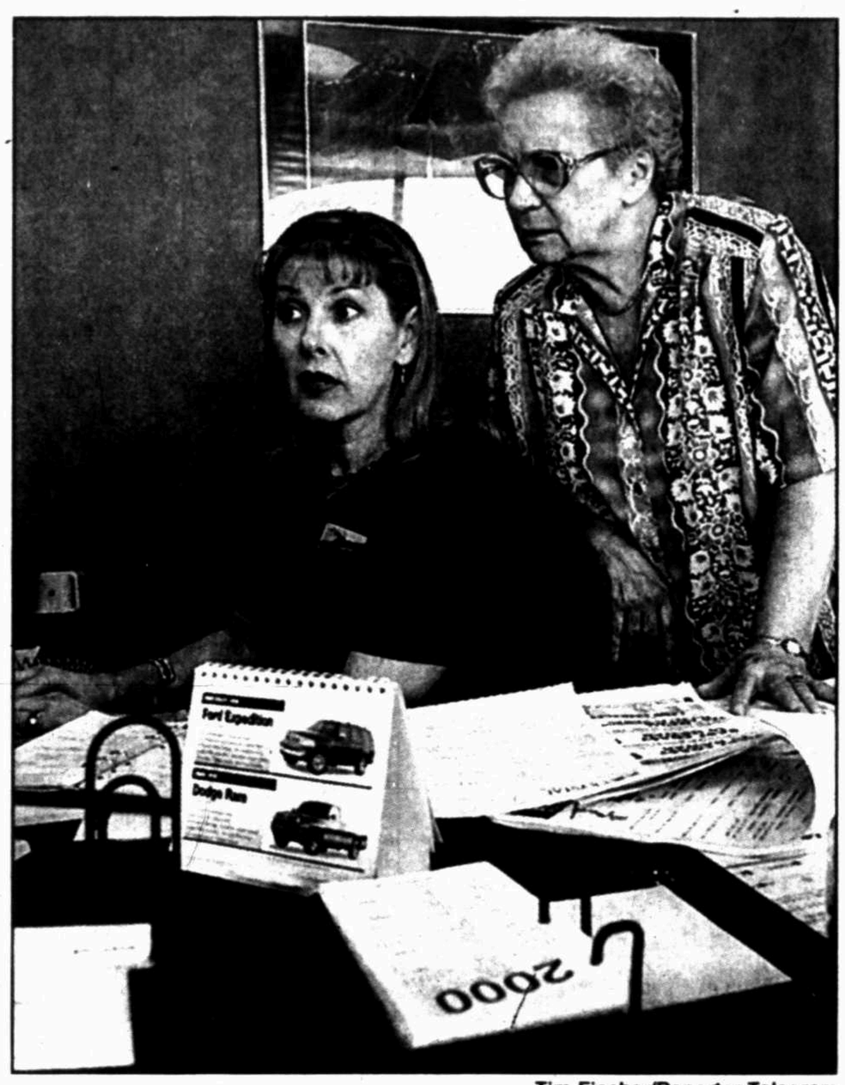

"There are people saying 'This is a once in a lifetime thing' and paying the cost," she said, "but there are others who say 'Forget it.' I had a family booking a cruise, and there was a $3,000 difference between leaving on December 27 and on January 2."

Landreth said he recently received rates from Las Vegas resorts that were five times the normal rate for the New Years holiday and included minimum stays. He added that there are some travel packages available, but travelers should be prepared to pay a premium.

"In some cases, they're willing to pay, but others say 'This is ridiculous,'" said Ms. Ragan, who looks for weaker-than-expected demand to begin forcing prices down.

Bargains can also be found if they're willing to see the entire year as a millennium celebration, she said, pointing out that Disney World, for example, has a millennium package that's good for the entire year.

"The interesting thing is a lot of people thought that if they hadn't made reservations a year ago, they were too late," said Ms. Cardwell. "But people who made reservations early are changing their minds when they see the price, or things have come up, so there are openings. People need to keep their eyes open and they could see prices come down when vendors see empty spaces. There will be bargains for last-minute bookers."

Stocks tumble as Sears falters, interest-rate worries persist

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks resumed their end-of-summer slump Thursday as concerns about inflation and interest rates were compounded by a dismal earnings outlook from Sears, Roebuck and Co.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 94.67 to close at 10,843.21, having worked its way back from a loss of 205 points earlier in the session.

Broader stock indicators also closed lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell 11.96 to 1,319.11, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 16.56 to 2,734.24.

Stocks tumbled as a slew of bad news hit Wall Street a day before the scheduled release of the government's August employment report. Above all, investors were rattled by continuing fears that the Federal Reserve has not yet completed its efforts to ward off inflation by imposing higher interest rates.

Those fears escalated Thursday as Federal Reserve Gov. Edward Kelley told Market News International it would be premature to assume the Fed will wait until next year to raise rates again.

The Fed raised rates June 30 and Aug. 24, providing a temporary lift to the market both times as hopes grew that the central bank would make no further moves. But sporadic hints of inflationary pressures have kept the Fed on alert and investors on edge.

"Three bumps in rates might be as much as the market can take," said Bob Dickey, managing director of technical analysis at Dain Rauscher in Minneapolis.

A Labor Department report offered potential justification for higher rates. The government said the growth of American workers' productivity slowed considerably in the spring, while labor costs jumped sharply.

That bad news sent the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond climbing to 6.13 percent from 6.08 percent late Wednesday. Bonds are especially sensitive to inflation.

"The rising long-bond yield is deadly for stocks," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst with Prudential Securities. High yields can lure investors away from stocks as they seek out stable, guaranteed returns.

The market was also on guard in advance of the employment report, due out before the start of trading Friday.

"Who's going to take a stand today when they know they could get clobbered tomorrow if that number is bad?" Wachtel said.

Sears weighed heavily on the Dow, falling 3 11/16 to 33 1/2 after saying its third-quarter net income will come in at 63 cents to 67 cents a share, well below analysts' forecast of 82 cents.

Other major retailers also fell as the warning from Sears sparked fears that other retailers will begin to falter. Best Buy plunged 10 1/2 to 61 7/16 after reporting that sales from stores open at least a year — a widely followed gauge of retail strength — rose 11.1 percent in the latest quarter. The increase met analysts' expectations, but was not as steep as gains from a year earlier.

Dickey said the selloff in retail stocks was overblown, and motivated at least partially by the belief that higher interest rates will eventually keep Americans out of the stores.

"The retailers provided great news today, but people were looking for excuses to sell," he said.

The Dow's financial services companies also fell. J.P. Morgan fell 3 11/16 to 125 15/16 and American Express lost 3 1/8 to 135 7/8. Banks and brokerages are often the first companies to feel the pinch of higher interest rates, because lending volume generally shrinks as it becomes more expensive to borrow money.

Scent of female rice borer harnessed to stop bug's spread across country

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department scientists are working with counterparts in Louisiana to protect that state from a horsefly-sized pest that is already eating its way through more than $10 million of Texas sugar cane a year.

The Mexican rice borer, whose larvae munch through sugarcane stalks sometimes to the point of breaking them, has been in south Texas since 1980. It has cost sugarcane growers in the lower Rio Grande Valley $10 million to $20 million a year, and also feasts on rice, sorghum, wheat and forage grasses.

Officials are concerned that sugar cane a Beaumont, Texas, plantation is about to send to Louisiana for grinding may be infected.

So they have set traps that will release a synthetic version of the scent that female rice borers use to attract their mates. If they find enough borer moths in the traps, the scientists will immediately suspend the shipments, USDA said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI posts pictures and descriptions of its most-wanted suspects on its web site. Now the Agriculture Department is doing the same, with microscopic worms whose infestation of plants, soil, animals and even humans cause $100 billion of damage worldwide every year.

Plant-parasitic nematodes, or worms, cause $10 billion in losses in the United States alone through decreased food, fiber and ornamental production, according to USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

The USDA nematode collection contains information on thousands of species that infect nearly every type of plant important to American agriculture, the agency said.

With the web site, U.S. and foreign scientists, quarantine officials and others will have access to 34,000 slides and vials and 19,500 species entries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using technology developed to diagnose human disease, USDA scientists have worked on a way to identify types of fungus that damage sugarbeet crops, which cause millions of dollars in losses.

The diagnostic process detects the fungus' DNA and can determine which one of six dangerous fungi it is within eight hours. Farmers can quickly learn control measure they need before the disease causes serious damage, the Agricultural Research Service said.

Ford announces best August ever

DETROIT (NYT) — Ford Motor Co. said Thursday that its sales in August were even higher than expected, making last month the best August ever for auto sales in the United States and the best month in the 1990s after adjusting for seasonal variations in demand.

Ford posted an 8.1 percent increase in sales compared with those in the period a year earlier. Car sales leaped 19.2 percent with the introduction of new models and the purchase of Volvo's car business. Sales of light trucks — sport utility vehicles, pickup trucks and minivans — climbed seven-tenths of a percent.

The increase in light-truck sales was particularly surprising because Ford had sold an extraordinary number of light trucks in August 1998, when a 54-day strike against General Motors Corp. had just concluded and had left GM dealerships with few light trucks left on their lots.

Ward's Auto Info Bank, a market research service in Southfield, Mich., calculated that the seasonally adjusted annual rate of sales in August was 17.76 million cars and light trucks. That made August sales the fourth-highest ever in seasonally adjusted terms, only trailing September 1986, September 1985 and December 1986. The expiration in the mid-1980s of tax deductions for certain car loan expenses produced a brief but unsustainable spike in sales.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Combination of mutual fund types used for diversification

By Eric Tyson

Q: I have much of my retirement money in insurance annuity plans and CDs. While the interest rate is not real high (5.5 percent), I can sleep at night. My son is prodding me to invest in mutual funds, but I don't know if I can stomach the high risk. What is your opinion?

Tyson

A: Many people, including some financial writers, think mutual funds all invest in stocks, which therefore makes them risky. But the majority of money in mutual funds is not in the stock market.

Choosing from a huge variety of mutual funds allows you to select the funds that take on the kinds of risks that you're comfortable with and that meet your financial goals. Among the three major types of mutual funds are:

Money market funds. If you want to be sure that your invested principal does not drop in value because you may need to use your money in the short term, choose a money market fund.

Bond funds. If you need current income and don't want investments that fluctuate as widely in value as stocks do, consider some bond funds.

Stock funds. If you want your money to grow over a long period of time (and you can put up with down as well as up years), select funds that invest more heavily in stocks.

Most investors choose a combination of these three types of funds to diversify and help accomplish different financial goals.

You should also know that banks and insurers are far more likely to fail. Hundreds of banks and insurance companies have failed in the past decade alone. Banks and insurers can fail because their liabilities (the money customers have given them to invest) can exceed their assets (the money they have invested or lent).

For example, when a significant portion of a bank's loans go sour at the same time that its depositors want their money, the bank fails. That failure happens because banks typically have less than 15 cents on deposit for every dollar that their depositors place with them. Likewise, if an insurance company makes several poor investments or underestimates the number of claims by insurance policyholders, it, too, can fail.

Such failures can't happen with a mutual fund. The situation in which the investors' demand for their investments (the fund's liabilities) exceeds the value of a fund's investments (its assets) simply cannot occur. The reason is because the mutual fund's investors have purchased shares in the fund and the value of the fund's shares fluctuates as the securities invested in fluctuate in value. For every dollar of securities they hold for their customers, mutual funds have a dollar's worth of securities.

In fact, since the Investment Company Act of 1940 was passed to regulate the mutual fund industry, no fund has ever gone under. The worst that can happen with a fund is that if you want your money, you may get less cash than you originally put into the fund.

You should also know that the specific stocks, bonds and other securities that a mutual fund has bought are held at a "custodian," a separate organization independent of the mutual fund company. The employment of a custodian ensures that the fund management company can't embezzle your funds or use assets from a better-performing fund to subsidize a poor performer.

Staff Report

There might have been questions concerning whether or not this year's fourth annual Pro Showdown tennis tournament would take place, but those in charge of it simply took matters into their own hands, and it paid off.

Despite losing some corporate financial backing for the tournament, organizers of the Pro Showdown weren't discouraged from doing things themselves, and as a result, the tournament will start today at the Racquet Club featuring perhaps the strongest field in its history.

How strong is the draw? Two-time defending champion Steve Bryan returns, but he's only the No. 2 seed. In the bracket at least, Bryan has to take a back seat to Michael Joyce of Santa Monica, Calif., who has been named the No. 1 seed.

Joyce, who was ranked as high as No. 64 in the world last year and reached the fourth round at Wimbledon, will face Jitte Singh in the first round today at 1 p.m.

The No. 1 seed had been Doug Flach, but Flach is still busy playing at the U.S. Open, giving him an understandable excuse for ducking out of the Pro Showdown. Last year, Paul Goldstein was the No. 1 seed, but was only able to make the tournament in Midland after losing to Pete Sampras in the U.S. Open.

Goldstein, now ranked No. 80 in the world, won't be coming to town, but that hasn't affected the depth of the tournament.

"I think it's deeper than it's ever been," said tournament chairman Miles Boldrick. "I think there are probably six players who could win it with no problem. When we started we had a bunch of local pros and ended up with a lot of 6-0, 6-0 matches."

David Witt of Ponte Vedra, Fla. is the No. 3 seed while Ryan Wolters, who like Goldstein is a Stanford graduate and was the No. 1 college player in the nation last year, is the No. 4 seed.

Such a strong field didn't look like a certainty during the early summer. Financial support looked as if it could dry up when a major sponsor pulled out, but tournament organizers weren't deterred.

"We lost our sponsor who would have put $30,000-40,000 into the tournament and we had to step up our fund raising efforts and shockingly we were able to raise much more than expected," said Boldrick. "We picked up the ball and started running with it and it's been great."

The bad news for the participants is that the tournament purse has been cut from $25,000 to about $22,000 this year.

The tournament benefits Midland's Casa de Amigos, a charity specializing in education. General admission tickets are available at $10 per person.

A kids clinic will be held Saturday starting at 8:30 a.m. Two divisions of pro-am doubles will start at 9:30 a.m. Singles quarterfinals will be held at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. with the semifinals at 3 and 5 p.m.

Sunday's pro-am finals are at 10:30 a.m. and noon with the finals scheduled for 2 p.m.

Schedule of events for the Pro Showdown at Midland's Racquet Club:

Friday

9 a.m.: Stadium court: Tylir Jimenez vs. Ali McDonald. Court one: Michael Wesbrooks vs. Stuart Beauchamp. 11 a.m.: Stadium court: Ryan Wolters vs. Clay Estes. Court one: Chad Clark vs. Mike Domanski. 1 p.m.: Stadium court: Michael Joyce vs. Jitte Singh. Court one: Brandon Hawk vs. Scott Thompson. 3 p.m.: Stadium court: David Witt vs. Nick Crowell. 5 p.m.: Stadium court: Steve Bryan vs. Jack Brasington.

Saturday

8:30 a.m.: Kids clinic (7-10 year olds). 9:30 a.m.: Pro-Am Doubles (all courts). 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.: Singles quarterfinals (stadium court and court one). 3 and 5 p.m.: Singles semifinals (stadium court).

Sunday

10:30 a.m.: Pro-Am doubles finals, B division. Noon: Stadium court: Pro-Am doubles finals, A division. Court one: Kids clinic (11-14 year olds). 2 p.m.: Singles final.

Unknown Pom-Arleau makes best of his first day in PGA tournament

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

SURREY, British Columbia — Kevin Pom-Arleau is so obscure in PGA circles that, after Thursday's 6-under-par 65 in the $2.5 million Air Canada Championship, he had to inform tour officials that there was a hyphen in his last name.

Pom-Arleau, an ex-Air Force air traffic controller competing in his first PGA event, was among the lesser known names atop the leaderboard in the first round of the Air Canada Championship.

Japanese Tour veteran Brandt Jobe, coming off a career-best fourth last week, led with a 63. Veteran Peter Jacobsen shot 30 on the back nine and was at 64.

Joining Pom-Arleau two shots back was Charles Raulerson, a former rail executive.

Pom-Arleau, 30, got into the tournament as a Monday qualifier and the former Pacific Northwest Cascade Tour player took advantage. He called his bogey-free first round a dream come true.

"I'm just trying to have fun and not feel like I don't belong out here, have fun and come to the realization that I think I can play with these guys and see what happens," Pom-Arleau said.

The only time he said he felt overwhelmed was on the putting green.

"There was about 2,000 people around the 10th tee. I was like, 'Wow.' And then I realized it was Payne Stewart and Guy (Boros), and I said, 'There's no way there's going to be around 2,000 people when I hit, that's OK.'"

Pom-Arleau was introduced to the game at age 10 when his dad built a bunker and putting green in the backyard of his Wenatchee, Wash., home.

Jobe, who earned $113,666 in last week's Reno-Tahoe Open, flirted with the Northview course record of 62 until he bogeyed the par-3 16th hole.

"It was just one of those days where you hit a bunch of those shots close, 10-15 feet, and you make the putts," Jobe said. "I've been playing nicely. Last week was a good week. I kind of look at it as every week being a new opportunity for me. I'm in a comfort area after last week."

The Littleton, Colo., native is a former member of the Canadian Tour and familiar with the area, having won the British Columbia Open in 1990 and the Payless Classic, in Victoria, British Columbia in 1992.

"I haven't been up here for a long time, so I was hoping some of that magic, or whatever it was I had back then, would come through. And it has for a day," Jobe said.

Highlighting his round was a 20-footer for eagle on the par-5 12th.

Kent Jones and New Zealander Phil Tataurangi were at 66, and the group at 67 included Canadian Richard Zokol, who hails from nearby White Rock, and Payne Stewart was at 68.

Defending champion Brandel Chamblee shot 73 and criticized the changes made to the course, which was lengthened by 116 yards to 7,009.

Gillis leads European Masters

CRANS-SUR-SIERRE, Switzerland — Tom Gillis of the United States outplayed some of Europe's Ryder Cup players Thursday, shooting a 5-under-par 66 for the opening-day lead at the European Masters.

Gillis of Lake Orion, Mich., who has missed four straight cuts, had five birdies and an eagle on the Alpine course.

He was two shots ahead of England's Stephen Field, Spain's Francisco Cea and Argentina's Angel Cabrera. Cabrera was positioned for the lead but had a double-bogey 7 at the 14th hole.

Ryder Cup players Lee Westwood of England and Northern Ireland's Darren Clarke finished three behind Gillis, while Miguel Angel Jimenez of Spain was another stroke back.

OPEN: Back plagues Moya

ations. Overall, my game is right where I would like it to be."

The only players in Agassi's half of the draw who would figure to give him trouble if they meet are No. 3 Kafelnikov and No. 10 Marcelo Rios. Rios was seeded to meet Moya in the fourth round, but Moya retired with a back injury while trailing Nicolas Escude 6-1, 6-4, 0-1.

Rios, the Chilean whose baseline style resembles Agassi's, reached the third round with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Swiss qualifier George Bastl.

"He's a really talented player," said Agassi, who could meet Rios in the quarters. "He can certainly put together some great tennis. A lot of guys are to be feared. To me, that's all part of the respect that goes into playing great tennis, giving the respect where it's deserved. Rios has a lot of ways to hurt you."

No. 15 Nicolas Kiefer, who looms as Agassi's possible opponent in the fourth round, beat fellow German Michael Kohlmann 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Agassi next meets fellow American Justin Gimelstob, who survived severe cramps in a five-set victory over Daniel Vacek.

In the women's matches, Seles beat Silvia Farina 6-2, 6-3; Serena Williams defeated Jelena Kostanic 6-4, 6-2; Halard-Decugis beat Li Fang of China 6-2, 6-4; Tauziat beat Maria Antonia Sanchez Lorenzo 7-5, 4-6, 6-1; and No. 16 Conchita Martinez blanked Alexia Dechaume-Balleret 6-0, 6-0.

AGENDA ZONING BOARD OF ADJUSTMENT SEPTEMBER 16, 1999

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held by the Zoning Board of Adjustment of the City of Midland, Texas, on Thursday, September 16, 1999, in the Council Chambers, City Hall, 300 N. Loraine, beginning at 3:00 P.M., to consider the following:

1. BD-99-015 Consider a request by John Stout, Sr., for a Special Exception to the City Zoning Code concerning the front yard setback and fence height requirements on Lot 7 & W/2 of Lot 8, Block 8, High School Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, located on the northeast corner of the intersection of Tennessee Avenue and "B" Street, addressed as 810 W. Tennessee Avenue.
2. BD-99-016 Consider a request by R. David Kleinbeck for a Special Exception to the City Zoning Code concerning the 20' rear yard setback requirements on Lot 12, Block 7, University Park Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, located on the south side of Princeton Avenue approximately 160' west of its intersection with North "L" Street, addressed as 2005 Princeton Avenue.
3. BD-99-017 Consider a request by Tim Wallace for a Special Exception to the City Zoning Code concerning the side yard setback requirements on Lot 6, Block 18, High School Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, located at the southeast corner of the intersection of Kansas Avenue and North "D" Street, addressed as 1009 W. Kansas Avenue.
4. BD-99-018 Consider a request by David H. Orr for a Special Exception to the City Zoning Code concerning the side yard requirements on the W/2 Lot 5 and all of Lot 6, Block 21, West End Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, located on the southeast corner of the intersection of Wall Street and North "H" Street, addressed as 1411 West Wall Street.

NOTE:
The meeting facility is accessible to disabled persons. A wheelchair entry ramp is located at the southeast entrance to City Hall. A parking space designated for use by disabled persons is available near the southeast entrance doors. New car dealer makes vehicles more affordable

Berg Motor Company Midland has announced that to end the summer all new Pontiacs and GMCs will be slashed to the lowest margins ever, creating payments that will easily fit your budget. Manager Jerry Slaughter has said that Berg is proud to pass on savings to the customers, after all he says, "We're supposed to be here for the customer, when the customer has been here for us for 45 years." So it's just nice to give something back to the people. Here's just a couple of vehicles to choose from, in our huge selection.

Jerry Slaughter
Manager
