Leaders Pushing VotingAct

CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democratic leaders moved today to block possible delaying tactics as the Senate went through a round of inclusive rhetoric on the voting rights act extension.

Assistant Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd refused to yield the floor to Sen. James B. Allen, who is fighting the bill, though he offered to give Allen a chance to speak for as long as he wished.

The Alabama Democrat, whose tactics came under fire late Friday from both Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and Byrd, vowed to block all business until he has opportunity to answer charges made against him Friday.

A move to limit debate on Mansfield's motion to bring the voting rights extension up for debate is scheduled Monday with both Democrats and Republicans expressing confidence it will receive the needed 60 votes.

Mansfield and Byrd have made it clear they will schedule all-night sessions if necessary to insure extension of the law under which hundreds of thousands of Southern blacks have registered to vote in the past decade.

Even when debate is limited, however, each senator has an hour of speaking time and can offer an endless round of amendments and parliamentary motions.

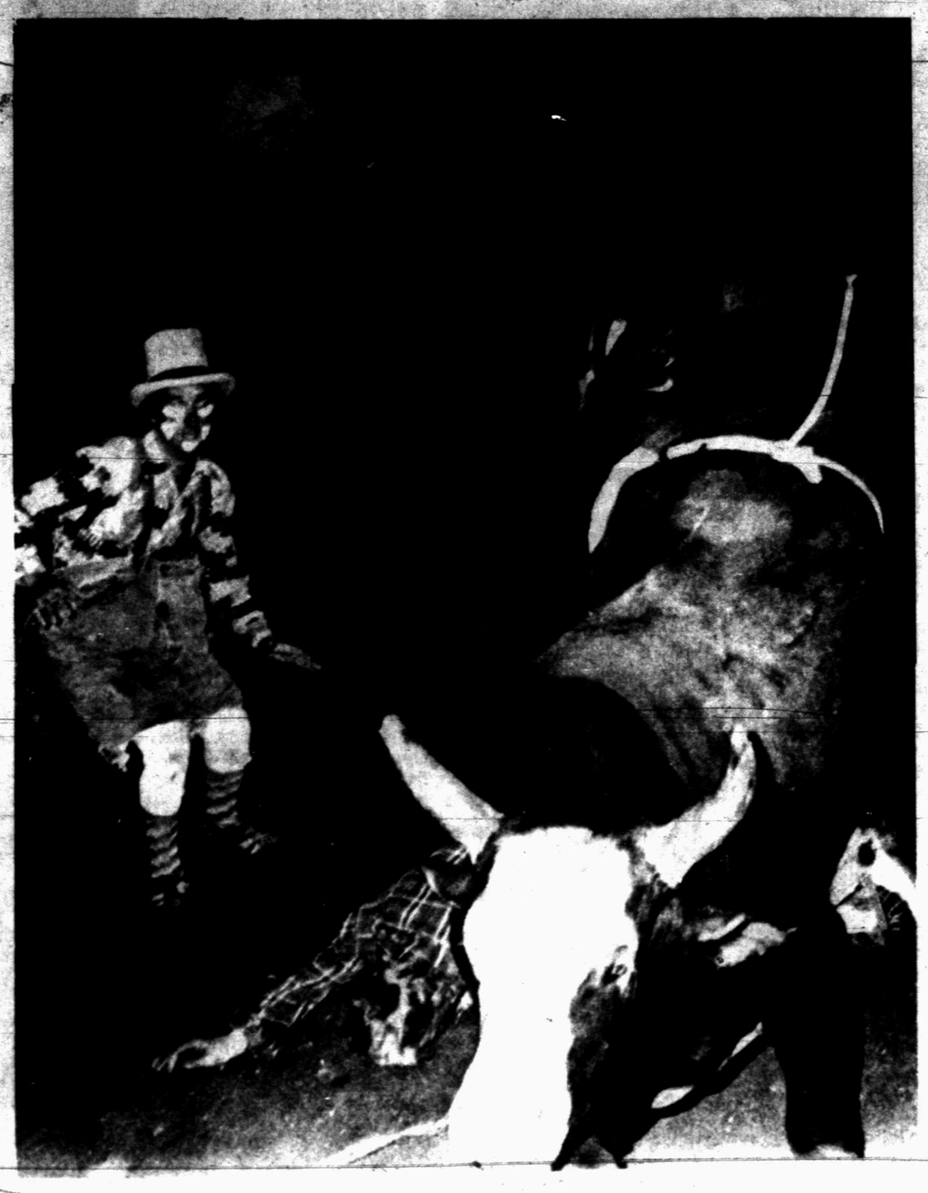

Democratic leaders are confident they can easily muster the 60 votes for debate limitation and also can defeat all amendments so that the bill can be passed in the same form it earlier cleared the House.

The law, considered by many the most effective antidiscrimination weapon passed by the federal government, expires at midnight, Aug. 5. Failure to extend it could lead to a resumption of the literacy tests and other requirments long used in the South to hold down the number of black voters.

Earlier Friday, the Senate Judiciary Committee approved the extension by a 10-4 vote after beating back Southern efforts to water it down.

In mid-afternoon, Mansfield suddenly moved to bring the version passed by the House before the Senate but was blocked when conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who was presiding, recognized Allen of a countermove to call up instead the complex and controversial bill to deregulate natural gas.

The Voting Rights Act, passed in 1965 and extended in 1970, applies to Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, most of North Carolina and some cities and counties in other states where voter turnout is low.

NARROW ESCAPE—Snyder's Randy Dryden scored a 57 aboard Hy Jacker at the Fortieth Annual Scurry County rodeo Friday night, but he had trouble getting away from the bull. Here, he appears under the bull, but he escaped serious injury. He suffered a fractured arm. Notice the clown, Don Zachary of Houston, trying to divert the bull's attention. (Photo by Paul Gilbert).

40th Annual Scurry Rodeo Comes To Close Saturday

The Fortieth Annual Scurry County Rodeo entered its final round Saturday night with no new leaders emerging from competition Friday night.

The cowboys had a hard time again with the bulls. Only two of the contestants were able to stay aboard for the required length of time Friday night and three bull riders were injured. The most seriously hurt was Randy Dryden of Snyder, who sustained a fractured arm. Hoby Strand had a tooth knocked out and a cut lip. Ervin Wise of Midland had an injured leg.

Dryden scored a 57 aboard Hy Jacker. The only other score was a 62 turned in by Bill Baker of Snyder aboard Zooloo. Wise rode Hat Rack. After the successful ride, Dryden had trouble getting away from the bull. He was lucky to escape serious injury.

A lot of excitement occurred in the barrel racing where the competition remained close. Marie Voss of Snyder turned in the best time Friday night, a 14.64, which was only .10 of a second off the pace set by Billie Voss on Thursday night.

Only one Cowboy was able to ride the saddle broncs. Don Tooley of Lubbock scored a 46 on Spark Plug.

Only two cowboys turned in good rides in bareback bronc riding. Jodie Sutton of Helotes scored a 70 aboard Bay Mix, and Lloyd Robinson of Odessa tallied a 57 on Frost Bite.

Stanley Hackfield recorded the best time in tiedown calf roping with an 11.2. He hails from Loraine. Others times in the calf roping included an 11.3 by Jack Long of Colorado City, a 12.4 by Keith Hackfield of Loraine, a 13.1 by Bobby Tankersley of Knox City, and a 29.9 by Gary Don Morgan of Monahans.

Ned Mayers and Ashley Davis of Post recorded a 9.6 in heading and heating. Tommy Young and Jay Hart of Post recorded a fast 8.8 in the same event, but they broke the barrier and were assessed a 5-second penalty. The same thing happened to Bob Northcut and Bob Westbrook of Colorado City, who had a 10.2 plus 5 seconds. A 6.7 remained the best time in this event.

Ted Garnet, roping Friday morning, took the lead in the tiedown calf roping with a fast 7.9 seconds.

Robert Pinkerton and Billy Stroud finished first and second, respectively, in the Junior goat sacking.

Other scores in the barrel race Friday night included Doretta Barrington of Lubbock, 14.11; Cindy Bruton of San Angelo, 15.40; Becky Harrell of Snyder, 15.47; Jewel Campbell of Portales, N.M., 15.47; Ann Rigby of Snyder, 15.56; Janet Callan of Rotan, 15.82; Mandy Tubb of Snyder, 15.94; Nedera Meyers of Post, 16.26; Donna Couch of Snyder, 16.32; Connie Wood of Midland, 14.87 plus 5 seconds for a total 19.87; and, Kathy Harrell of Snyder, 15.61 plus 5 seconds for a 20.61.

Several other Snyder cowhands competed in the bull riding event, but missed scoring. They included Gary Jones, Brint Shaffer, Eddie Eicke, Kenny Foreman and Jesse Rollins.

Don Zachery of Houston, the rodeo clown, amazed the rodeo fans with his magic car trick. He came into the arena in a small car from which emerged 25 boys and girls and a horse.

The stock provided by Smokey Davis of Missouri City appeared to be of the best quality.

The stockholder's roping was held Saturday morning.

Rodeo officials were pleased with the rodeo both from a standpoint of quality and attendance. The Scurry County Coliseum appears to be a good place to hold the annual event.

Ships Undock; Joint Mission Accomplished

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo and Soyuz spaceships undocked for the final time Sat., and in a parting salute, the Russian commander declared "Mission accomplished."

"Good show," came the reply from American commander Thomas P. Stafford.

The undocking, 140 miles above the Atlantic ocean, ended the joint phase of the mission which Soviet commander Alexei Leonov termed "only the beginning of a great humam journey into space."

A television camera in Apollo relayed to Houston Mission Control a picture of Soyuz as it slowly backed away from Apollo after the release.

The two ships had been together 47 hours, 17 minutes.

The separation concluded two days of adventure during which astronauts and cosmonauts shuttled between spaceships to conduct experiments, share meals, exchange gifts and raise detente to a new plateau.

During the final hour of linkup, the astronauts played for the cosmonauts a special recording in Russian of the song "Hello, Little Darlin'" by country-western singer Conway Twitty.

Before the final disengagement, the two ships early Saturday undocked and then linked up again in a successful test of the Soviet craft's ability to execute the hookup.

The American Apollo had been the active vehicle in the initial latchup Thursday and today's dock completed a major goal of the flight—the total testing of a common docking mechanism that in the future could be used on a space rescue mission.

The active vehicle operates with its half of the linkup device extended while that of the passive ship is retracted.

After the separation, Apollo began a series of maneuvers, circling the Soyuz at distances out to half a mile to conduct an experiment to try to determine the quantities of atomic oxygen and atomic nitrogen in the upper atmosphere.

Light beams were to be directed from Apollo to reflectors on the Soyuz with detectors attempting to measure the gases in the beams, which have wavelengths corresponding to the gases.

RAIL PACT OKAYED

Postal Strike May Be Avoided

WASHINGTON (AP) — Optimism grew Saturday that a nationwide postal strike can be avoided, but the Postal Service prepared plans for using troops if necessary to move the mails.

Postal workers and officials of the Postal Service met separately Saturday, with federal mediators counseling both sides prior to resuming joint sessions later in the day.

Meanwhile, railroad industry and union negotiators reached a tentative agreement Friday on a new contract, which apparently ends the possibility of another crippling strike.

The head of the largest of the four postal unions, Francis Filbey, said chances of a nationwide walkout at midnight Sunday have dropped to less than 10 per cent.

"I'm much more optimistic than I was 24 hours ago," said Filbey, president of the 250,000-member American Postal Workers Union. "I would expect that by Sunday night we'd come close enough to an agreement to extend (the present contract) for a week or so."

The chief federal mediator, W.J. Usery Jr., said, "I believe we can achieve an agreement without a postal strike. Both sides would like very much to reach an agreement because a strike would have a very, very serious effect on the economy."

However, Usery said, "There are still a lot of serious, difficult issues to be resolved."

Two major issues, continuation of the no-layoff clause demanded by the unions and management's right to dictate work rules, remained a problem, sources said.

Six Are Kidnaped In Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Two American Technicians and four Ethiopians have been kidnaped in northern Eritrea province, apparently by the secessionist Eritrean Liberation Front, a government spokesman said today.

The Americans, identified as Steve Campbell and Jim Harrel, were grabbed July 14, the spokesman said. Both work as civilian technicians at the U.S. military communications facility in Asmara.

Their home towns were not immediately known.

The government and U.S. diplomats in Ethiopia declined to give details about the abduction. But the government spokesman said no word had been received from the kidnapers.

Ethiopian security forces are actively searching for the kidnapers with due precautions for the safety of the persons being held, the government said.

The U.S.-run Kagnew communications facility in Asmara is in the last stages of closing down and currently employs about 40 civilians.

Scurry Tops In Oil Production

The production of crude oil and natural gas in 1974 continued to have a significant impact on the economy of Scurry County, with the estimated value of the county's production, royalty payments, and state severance taxes reaching new highs.

Scurry was one of 197 counties—an increase of four from 1973—which produced oil and gas valued in excess of $100,000 in a year which saw the total value of state production jump from just over $6.7 billion to almost $11.4 billion.

The county ranked No. 1 in the state in the total value of petroleum produced—$685 million—with $659.2 million of that coming from the sale of 94.2 million barrels of crude oil; $25.8 million from the sale of 88.8 million MFC of natural gas.

This study by the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association shows that the county's petroleum production last year resulted in the payment of $85.6 million to royalty owners.

"These figures, whether considered statewide or individually in almost 80 percent of Texas; 254 counties, emphasize the importance of a healthy petroleum industry in the nation's No. 1 energy state," said Sherman Hunt, a Dallas independent oil man who is president of Texas Mid-Continent.

"In the face of declining production in Texas, it is significant that this increased return to royalty owners and producers came from crude oil and natural gas which is free from restrictive federal price controls. But there are at this time proposals in Congress which would place all of Texas' petroleum production under federal price controls, with predictable disastrous consequences for the industry, as well as the whole economy of the state," Hunt said.

The survey also shows that the State of Texas received $32.2 million in production taxes from county wells, with $30.3 million coming from crude oil output and $1.9 million from natural gas productions.

Oil and gas developers and producers spent an estimated $8.5 million drilling 106 wells in the county last year, with 6.9 percent of that figure lost in eight dry holes. The total drilling yielded 98 oil wells. The exploratory effort in the county included the drilling of eight wildcat wells seeking new oil and gas fields.

According to the Texas Employment Commission, 1,255 oil and gas industry employes worked in the county in 1974 and shared a payroll totalling $14 million.

Processing plants also added to the county's petroleum-related economy: The "Oil and Gas Journal" lists four natural gasoline processing plants, with a daily capacity of 289.9 million cubic feet.

Dallas Father Is Making New Plans

DALLAS (AP) — "We just kind of planned on having one baby," says 21-year-old Jerry Davis, suddenly the father of newborn quintuplets—four girls and a boy.

He's making some new plans today.

"I think we're going to have to get another house."

Davis' wife, Debbie, 20, delivered the five babies Friday while Davis was somehow stuck in an elevator at Parkland Hospital here.

Early today a hospital spokesman said the babies had spent a stable night. The spokesman said doctors were optimistic about the babies' chances for survival. The mother remained in good condition.

Davis, who makes about $175 a week as a mechanic at a Dallas equipment company, described his condition as "shocked."

"We, you know, just kind of planned on having one baby, and we started out with twins and then maybe triplets," Davis said as he described how his expected family grew ever larger during his wife's pregnancy.

"And about a month ago...they told us it would be four. So I was kind of shocked about that.

"And then, this (Friday) morning, I didn't know what to think," he said.

Dr. Jack Pritchard, part of the 20-member medical team that assisted in the Caesarean section delivery, said Mrs. Davis had taken fertility drugs. She had been in the hospital for two weeks, in a high-risk unit for pregnant women. The babies were delivered at 7 months, 3 weeks.

Dr. Pritchard said it was expected that Mrs. Davis would deliver quadruplets, but the fifth baby was "a bonus."

The doctor said he was not aware of the fifth baby until he made a final check. "I felt another little bottom and I knew we had a bonus," he said.

Hospital officials said the smallest baby, a girl, weighed 1 pound, 14 ounces, while the others ranged from two pounds to more than three pounds each. The boy, at 3 pounds, 10 ounces, was the largest. The babies were born in a six-minute period.

While the babies were being delivered, Davis was frustrated by a hospital elevator that was stuck between floors.

"I was wondering if I'd ever get out of there," he said. "I thought somebody was trying to play a trick on me." Every time he pushed the button for the elevator door to open, all he saw was "a brick wall."

Davis figured he may have to get a bank loan to buy cigars to celebrate the arrivals. But, he added, most of his friends chew tobacco.

"I'll just buy cigars and let them learn how to smoke cigars," he said.

Davis and his wife—they have been married for three years—were high school sweethearts. They live in Lewisville, just north of Dallas.

Dr. Charles Rosenfeld, Southwestern Medical School professor and neonatologist on the delivery team, gave the babies each a 50-50 chance of survival.

"Any baby in intensive care is considered critical. However, the babies are older than what we thought they were and this is in their favor," Dr. Rosenfeld said.

The Lewisville couple first bought two baby beds when they were told they could expect twins. Later they added two more.

"Now I think we need another house," Davis said.

"It was kind of shocking to see three babies in one room and two in another. I just couldn't believe they were all ours," he said.

Red Militants Encircle Lisbon

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Communist militants joined by army units encircled Lisbon with checkpoints today in an effort to block a giant Socialist party street rally.

Scattered incidents of violence broke out this morning in the Portuguese capital, where the military was put on alert Friday. But no injuries were reported.

There were rumors in Lisbon that rightists aided by some army leaders and leftists might try to stage a coup against the leftist military-dominated government.

Premier Vasco Goncalves, the Communists' official backer in the military goverment, was reported under pressure from others in the 30-man Supreme Revolutionary Council to step down.

Moderates in the council were said to be concerned at Goncalves' failure to solve political and economic problems.

Military leaders met Friday night with Communist and Socialist representatives in an attempt to defuse the country's worst crisis since the military overthrew the fascist dictatorship 15 months ago.

The Communists are the only civilians left in the cabinet since the withdrawal of the Socialists and centrist Popular Democrats, the two largest parties.

Friday evening, Socialist party leader Mario Soares told a crowd of 70,000 in Oporto, 175 miles northeast, of lisbon, "We are ready to defend ourselves and democracy by all means. The Communist party is engaged in a totalitarian adventure.

"They are trying to impose a dictatorship on us. We say no, no and no."

"Down with Communism," the crowd thundered back.

"It is time to ask the Armed Forces Movement whether it is going to govern with the support of the majority of the people or against them," Soares said.

Thousands of Socialists burned a Communist information booth on the city's main square after the rally.

FATAL INJURIES—Mrs. Zola Halliburton Lockett, 76, Box 91, Mullin died of fatal injuries received when her 1974 Model Chevrolet (pictured above) was in collision with a truck on U.S. 84 at Huffman Avenue at 11:40 a.m. Friday. She died in Post enroute to a hospital in Lubbock, the third traffic fatality of the year in Scurry County.

Nixon Affected By Tragedy

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon was "really affected" by the tragedy of a fatal traffic accident he happened upon, his son-in-law says.

But Edward Cox also said Nixon still was able to take charge of unsuccessful attempts to save the lives of three Marines—two Californians and a Texan—who died in the smashup.

"It really affected him. The tragedy of it really struck him," Cox said Friday in a telephone interview.

Nixon, his daughter, Tricia, and Cox were returning to the former president's estate at nearby San Clemente from the golf course at Camp Pendleton when they came to the scene of the head-on collision that claimed the lives of the three Marines.

The victims were identified as Cpl. Ramiro A. Delgado Jr., 20, San Antonio, Tex., Sgt. David A. Vanal, 28, Oceanside, Calif. and Sgt. Larry W. Grrise, 24, San Clemente, Calif.

Nixon ordered his car stopped and spent about an hour at the accident scene, trying to aid the three servicemen, Cox said.

Cox said the accident occurred about two minutes before Nixon's car reached the scene Thursday afternoon. Secret Service agents accompanying Nixon were going to pass by the wreckage "but the president saw the accident and said right away, 'Stop. Stop the car.'"

Cox said a warrant officer was directing the rescue attempt and that Nixon asked him, "Can we give you any help? We've got first aid equipment."

"Yes sir, we sure can use that," the officer replied.

Cox said Nixon then took charge of the rescue attempts and ordered the Secret Service agents to call for a medivac helicopter to aid two injured Marines in one car. They died later at a hospital. The one Marine in the other car died at the scene and was "not a very pretty sight," he added.

One of the Marines in the second car was trapped in the vehicle, his foot wedged against the brake pedal, Cox said. Nixon ordered one of the Secret Service agents to get a crowbar from his car to free the man.

Cox said that as he, his wife and Nixon left the accident scene, the former president "looked out the window and said, 'You know, those two fellows were going off the base and looking forward to a good time. They were in their dress blue uniforms.'"

The former president was concerned about the two men and called the camp commander "first thing in the morning" to learn of their conditions, Cox said.

Bystanders at the crash recognized Nixon but paid no special attention to him as they worked to aid the victims, Cox said. When Nixon and the others left, a warrant officer and a captain saluted and shook his hand, he added.

Northwest Flying Normally

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Northwest Airlines will be flying normally Sat. as a result of a contract settlement with its pilots reached just four minutes before a strike deadline.

Federal mediator Kay McMurray said the agreement came at 1:56 a.m. CDT today when the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) accepted a Northwest offer made just 15 minutes previously.

"It's very good news," said Roy Erickson, Northwest vice president. "Our flights will operate normally today."

The pact, which raises the average pilot's salary to $45,600, does not have to be ratified by the pilots, because negotiating authority is held by the pilot's executive committee, a spokesman said.

It is, however, subject to final clarification of language, but McMurray said he doubted any problems would arise.

Erickson said details of the agreement would be made public later today.

Negotiations between Northwest, the nation's seventh largest airline, and its 1,550 pilots began 15 months ago. The pilots had been working without a contract since July 1974.

ALPA spokesman Robert Razanka said agreement on salaries was reached long ago, but disability benefits and the pension plan remained in dispute until early today.

On Friday, ALPA said talks again bogged down and set a new deadline for 2 a.m. today.

Letter To Editor

To Snyder Daily News
Dear Sir:

I want to express my appreciation for the opportunity of working in the summer girls basketball camp at Western Texas College under Dr. Sid Simpson there. His interest in girls basketball is certainly one of the best in our area of the state. We at Coahoma want to thank him for the starting of such a fine girls program at Western Texas College. Our varsity basketball girls look forward to coming there to play. Girls need a complete program in all sports just as boys. We are happy to see Snyder Public Schools start basketball for girls. Snyder has the girls and the facilities for a strong program and with Western Texas "Dusters" leading the way such as they did last year we are hopeful that Snyder Public Schools will also have a strong girls basketball program and everyone will support girls basketball.

I gained valuable experience working with him and the 70 girls and basketball assistants. It is a beautiful school with excellent facilities for the physical education department. I was treated with utmost hospitality and was impressed by the concern of the chamber of commerce and your paper and the coverage it gave the school.

Again I am greatful for the experience and opportunity and wish the "Dusters" a successful year.

Sincerely,
Sonny Barnes

Look For More Bodies In Well

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The government is looking for more bodies near the well in which searchers found seven bodies including that of a Roman Catholic priest from the United States.

The Rev. Michael Jerome Cypher, 35, of Medford, Wis., and a Colombian priest, three other men and two women all disappeared after taking part in a peasant march last month in Olancho province in eastern Honduras.

Officials said they think at least two more bodies may be in the area. Two nuns also have been reported missing after taking part in the protest march for land reform. The army broke up the demonstration by an estimated 12,000 peasants.

Five victims who were identified were Cypher, a Franciscan who was engaged in social work in Honduras; the Rev. Ivan Betancourt, 35, of Colombia; Jose Martinez, a professor; Ruth Argentina Garcia; and Maria Bolivar Vargas of Colombia, a sister-in-law of Betancourt.

The two women were students at the University of Honduras.

Bishop Jaime Brufau of the northwestern city of San Pedro Sula said the killings "were committed principally by diehard forces opposed to the postponed social reforms in the countryside."

He said it was "the result of a carefully planned attack on the Church in Olancho."

The army was sent in to halt the march and broke it up after a bloody confrontation that left five persons dead.

Honduras is ruled by a military government which took power April 21.

Released On $2,500 Bond

Steve Perryman was charged in Justice of the Peace Court Friday afternoon with burglary with intent to commit theft.

He allgedly burglarized the residence of Carman McCown, 4503 El Paso, a couple of weeks ago while McCown was on vacation. An undetermined amount of money, most of which was recovered, was taken.

Perryman has been released on $2,500 bond.

Sculpture Found

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — Just hours after it was reported stolen, police received an anonymous telephone call directing them to "The Scalp," a bronze sculpture by Western artist Frederic Remington valued at $37,500.

The sculpture was found Friday in a garage near Ogdensburg Free Academy in this northern New York city.

Highway Crash Kills Woman

Mrs. Zola Halliburton Lockett, 76, Box 91, Mullin, sustained fatal injuries in a two-vehicle collision at U.S. 84 and Huffman Avenue at 11:40 a.m. Friday.

She was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Galyean Ambulance Service. She died about 3 p.m. Friday in Post while being transferred to Methodist Memorial Hospital in Lubbock. She had head injuries, multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Investigating Highway Patrolmen said Mrs. Lockett was driving a 1974 Model Chevrolet that was in collision with a 1970 Model International Truck and Semi-trailer driven by Guy W. Stewig, Box 362, Plainview. Officers said Mrs. Lockett apparently turned in front of the truck. The car was demolished, but there was only minor damage to the truck.

Mrs. Lockett's husband, John, was a passenger in the car. Neither he nor the truck driver were injured.

Mrs. Lockett's death was the third traffic fatality in Scurry County this year.

The body was taken to Wilkins Funeral Home in Goldthwaite where rites are pending.

Man Charged With Assault

Freddy Huff, 20, of Post, was charged in Justice of the Peace Court Friday afternoon with aggravated assault.

He allegedly struck Randy Sterling, 19, of Ira, in the left elbow with an axe on the parking lot at the Scurry County Coliseum about 1 a.m. Friday. Sterling later was transferred to Methodist Memorial Hospital in Lubbock.

Huff was remanded to county jail in lieu of $7,500 bond, which was set by Justice of the Peace Bobby Goodwin.

Snyder Chapter Of DAV Installs New Officers

New officers of the Snyder Chapter of Disabled American Veterans were elected and installed at a meeting last Tuesday at Eighteenth Street and Avenue R.

Installed as commander was Howard Lomax. Other new officers are Jack Huddleston, senior vice-commander; Edgar Roberts, junior vice-commander; Sam Glover, adjutant-treasurer; and, Howard Murphree, chaplain.

C.B. O'Neal, region 1 commander from Big Spring's D.A.V. Chapter, was the installing officer. Other guests included Jewel Taylor, Elbert Meeler, Cecil Key, region 1 adjutant; George Kunkle, region 1 public relations director; Buford Jack Kay, senior vice-commander from O'Donnell; Lewis Powell, junior vice-commander from Odessa; C.L. Houston, adjutant of Chapter 34, Lamesa; Jesse Manuel, officer of the day, chapter 34, Big Spring.

Auxiliary members present were Mrs. C.B. O'Neal, region 1 commander; Mrs. Margaret Cauldwell, region 1 junior vice-commander; Mrs. Connie Manuel, all of Big Spring; Mrs. Buford Jack Kay, Lamesa; and, Mrs. Lewis Powell, Odessa.

O'Neal, the region 1 commander from Big Spring, presented Lomax with a lapel button, and Kay, the senior vice-commander, presented him with a By-Laws and Constitution Book.

A short talk was given by the regional officers on the importance of each office and the necessity for each member to do his part.

Mrs. Kay said a new Auxiliary Chapter can be organized when there are four more new members.

The meeting was opened with the Salute to the Flag and a prayer by Chaplain O'Neal.

The next meeting will be Aug. 7 and thereafter the first Thursday of each month.

AS EXCHANGE TEACHER TO ENGLAND

Miss Hudgins Promised Interesting School Year

The 1975-76 school year promises interesting new experiences for Wanda Hudgins of Snyder. She will be spending the year in Sheffield, England, as an exchange teacher in Dore Junior School.

A bon voyage party honoring Miss Hudgins is planned from 2-5 p.m. on Aug. 10 in the Christian Student Center at Western Texas College, and friends are invited to attend the informal gathering.

Replacing Miss Hudgins as sixth grade teacher at West Elementary School will be Robert J. Hall, 25, a teacher in Sheffield for the past four years. They have corresponded since April when Miss Hudgins received notice of acceptance for the exchange program and learned that Hall would be her "counterpart."

Miss Hudgins made application for the exchange program last October. The exchange program was started in 1961 and is under the sponsorship of the Office of Health, Education and Welfare. Miss Hudgins has also worked with the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges in London in making arrangements for her stay in Sheffield.

The Snyder school district will continue to pay Miss Hudgins' salary for the year she is away, and the school board has also granted her a travel allowance. Bell's salary will continue to be paid by his school.

"Saying thank you to the local officials doesn't really express my gratitude for their cooperation," Miss Hudgins said. "The teacher exchange program was instituted to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and those in other countries and I am delighted to be a part of the program."

She plans to send pictures and letters back to Snyder often so the students at West and others interested may share her experience.

According to her present schedule, Miss Hudgins will go to Washington, D.C., on Aug. 15 for a three-day orientation session before flying to London. She will go by train to Sheffield, about 150 miles north of London, and classes are to begin there Sept. 1. Classes continue until mid-July, with several week-long holidays during the school year and Miss Hudgins hopes to use these in getting acquainted with the Continent. She enjoys traveling and has visited Canada and Hawaii and several other states during summer vacations.

Bell has made tentative arrangements for living quarters for Miss Hudgins in Sheffield, and she is trying to locate a suitable place for Bell to stay in Snyder. He is selling his car to help pay his travel expenses and so it would be good if he could live within walking distance of West Elementary have access to transportation. His salary is less than that of Snyder teachers, so the amount of rent he can pay is also a factor.

WANDA HUDGINS

Miss Hudgins would like to talk to people who might have housing for Bell available. She may be contacted through Mrs. Irene Hudgins Greenfield by calling 573-8476.

A Scurry County native, Miss Hudgins was graduated from Hermleigh High School. She attended Lubbock Christian College and was graduated from Abilene Christian College. She taught in Newark, Del., for two and a half years before moving to Snyder in 1970 and taught at East Elementary School before being re-assigned to West elementary.

MR. AND MRS. BOB DOOLITTLE

McCommas, Doolittle Wed In Candlelight Service July 5

Miss Suzanne McCommas became the bride of Bob Doolittle on July 5th at 7:30 p.m. during a candlelight ceremony held at the First Baptist Church. Reverend John E. Doolittle, father of the groom, officiated in the double ring ceremony. Reverend Ken Andress, minister of the church, led in a special prayer during the service.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was adorned in a formal length gown of ivory silk faced peau de seou fashioned with an empire A-line skirt with an attached train. An overlay of reembroidered alencon lace covered the scoop neck bodice and extended onto the A-line skirt. Full length lantern sleeves were capped and cuffed with lace. A deep band of lace formed the hemline of the skirt and train. Seed pearls and crystal beads accented the scalloped neckline. The headpiece was a matching lace edged chapel length veil of illusion.

The bridal bouquet of stephanotis, carnations, baby's breath and English ivy was atop a white Bible belonging to David McCommas, brother of the bride, which was given to him by the late Mrs. Joe Caton.

The bride carried out the theme of something old by carrying a lace handerkerchief which her mother carried at her wedding; something new was her dress; something borrowed were diamond earrings from Lesa Westfall; something blue was a garter which was handmade by Mrs. Lucille Bynum; To complete tradition she wore pennies in her shoes minted in the years of their birth and a sixpence given to her by her father.

Mrs. David McCommas, of Bryan, Texas, served her sister-in-law as matron of honor. Miss Lesa Westfall of Snyder was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Misses Carol Jackson, Lynda Burgess and Paula Bell all of Snyder. Little Miss Lisa Robbins of Arlington, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. The attendants were attired in floor length gowns of pastel colors of blue, yellow, lime green, orchid, pink and apricot. The gowns of sheer miromist were flocked with white flowers and featured short puffed sleeves, A-line skirts and v-necklines. Each attendant wore a pastel necklace in the color which matched her dress. They were gifts from the bride. Gardenia nosegays completed their costume.

Mike Doolittle, brother of the groom, of Springfield, Missouri, was best man. Groomsmen were Doug Russell of Lebanon, Missouri; Jim Hall of Pompona Beach, Florida; David McCommas, brother of the bride, of Bryan, Texas; David Johns of Greenfield, Arkansas; and junior groomsman was David Doolittle, brother of the bridegroom of Springfield, Missouri. Ushers were Bobby Cockran of Corning, Arkansas, Paul Bellington of Braziel and Ricky Hopper and Toby Black of Snyder. The groom wore a candlelight brocaded jacket with black pants and a candlelight shirt. His attendants wore charcoal gray tuxedos trimmed with black velvet and charcoal gray shirts edged in black and black velvet bow ties.

The mother of the bride chose a bright yellow a-line floor length gown of voil featuring a rounded ruffled neckline and matching shoes for her daughters wedding. Mrs. Doolittle chose a sleeveless peach colored floor length gown with embroidered flowers on the bottom and matching shoes. Corsages of gardenias complimented their costumes.

Mrs. Wayne Bethel, organist and Mrs. Jerry Neill, pianist, rendered musical selections throughout the wedding ceremony. Included in the selections were "To A Wild Rose" by MacDowell; "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" by Stults; "O Perfect Love" by Barnby; "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach; "Poeme" by Ribich; "Melodie" by Massenet; "To A Water Lily" by MacDowell; "Berceuse" by Godard; The processional "Bridal Chorus" by Wagner; and recessional "The Wedding March" by Mendelssohn. Chimes were played before the bride entered.

Terry Jones and Miss Pam Smith sang "You Make Me Feel Brand New" recorded by the Stylistics.

The altar of the church was centered with an arch candelabra entwined with greenery and spiral candelabras and arches stood on either side. Ninty-nine burning tapers provided light for the ceremony. After the couple lighted the memory candle Miss Kay McBeth sang "The Lord's Prayer."

As the bride ascended down the aisle she stopped and kissed her mother and presented her with a rose. She presented the grooms mother a rose as she left the church.

Parents of the bride hosted a reception in the fellowship hall of the church immediately following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a white organdy cloth and overlaid with sheer dacron with lace inserts. The table was centered with a silver candleabra holding an arrangement of multi-colored pastel flowers and three burning tapers. The five tiered wedding cake was adorned with tiny rainbow colored roses and miniature figures of the wedding party. Wedding bells were placed on the center tiers and a bride and groom topped the cake. Teresa Scott and Pat Johnson presided.

An oval shaped pale blue satin cloth with beige lace overlay covered the groom's table. A melon basket placed on a crystal tray and filled with melon balls served as the centerpiece. A two tiered chocolate cake with marzipan fruit was served by Carlene and Darlene Williams.

Miss Kelly Robbins of Arlington, Texas, registered wedding guests and presented each guest with a scroll from a silver basket inscribed with a verse from the bride and groom to each guest.

For the wedding trip to the Ozark Mountains and points in Arkansas and Missouri the bride chose a two piece pale blue ensemble with a multi-colored blouse and beige assessories. A corsage of pastel colored carnations complimented her attire.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and holds a degree in secretarial technology from Western Texas College. She is employed by S&H Green Stamp Center.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Lebanon High School, Lebanon, Missouri. He attended William Jewel Baptist College in Liberty, Missouri and is currently employed by Key Brothers Implement.

The couple reside west of town.

Out-of-town wedding guests were from Bryan, Denver City, Arlington, Dallas, Texas, New Mexico, Missouri, Arkansas, Florida, and Brazil, South America.

Parents of the groom hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Sear's Building of First Baptist Church.

Elkins, Sullenger Wed In Longview

Miss Laura Mae Elkins became the bride of Richard Wayne Sullenger in double ring services read in the Oakland Heights Baptist Church in Longview June 21 at 3 p.m. Reverend Joe Morman officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Elkins of Longview and Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Fambro and the late Jim L. Sullenger, Jr. of Snyder.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and mother. Her gown was of delustered satin fashioned with a sheer lace yoke circled with peaud' ange lace. A repeat of the lace was on the long sleeves and A-line skirt and chapel train. Two rows of lace marked the double hemline and two rows of rose inserting was used on the skirt and chapel train, timmed with pearls. A chapel length train of chantilly lace was attached to the yoke. Her veil of silk illusion was held by a satin bow covered with seed pearls. Her dress and train were designed and fashioned by the mother of the groom. The bride carried a cascade of white miniature carnations, English ivy and baby's breath atop a white Bible.

As she preceeded to the altar the bride presented her mother with a red rose and one to the groom's mother as she left the church.

For something old the bride carried a handkerchief that her grandmother, Mrs. Spurgexon of Claifornia carried at her wedding. Something new was her dress; something borrowed a necklace from her mother; she wore a blue garter given to her by Mrs. Jody Bynum of Snyder and pennies in her shoe minted in the years of their births.

Mrs. Joe Ann Propes presented wedding music at the organ.

Fay Sullenger, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Cindy Dickey of Longview was bridesmaid. They wore blue, floor length gowns of dacron lace fashioned after that of the bride and carried colonial nosegays in shades of light blue and white feathered caranation, nestled in baby's breath, trimmed in white and blue satin ribbon.

Billy Sullenger of Snyder, brother of the groom, served as best man. Bobby Raborn of Snyder was groomsman. Ushers were John Elkins, brother of the bride and Tommy Behanick of Longview. They also served as candlelighters.

The altar of the church was centered with a white archway entwined with English ivy and blue satin ribbons. Two candelabras held fifteen burning tapers. Pews were marked with bows of white satin and a memory candle was placed atop a stand entwined with ivy and was lighted by the couple during the ceremony.

The reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Bouquets of the bride and her attendants decorated the table which held the three tiered wedding cake. Appointments of silver and crystal were used. Faye Sullenger of Snyder and Cindy Dickey of Longview presided.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by parents of the groom at 1305 Centenary Drive in Longview.

For a short trip to Dallas and Forth Worth the bride wore a pink double knit dress with white accessories. The couple will reside at 1500 West Farrmont in Longview.

The bride is a 1975 graduate of Longview High School where she was a member of the band and FHA. She is employed by Treasure City.

The groom graduated from Snyder High School in 1973 and attended Western Texas College and Kilgore Junior College. Club honors included Industrial Arts Club, Eagle Scout, athletic trainer in both high school and college. He is employed by Ben Mains Heating and Air Condition in Longview and at Treasure City.

Guests were from Borger, Dallas Lubbock, Snyder and San Diego, California.

Snyderites Attend Houston ACS Meet

Miss Winnie Poyner of Snyder attended the Texas Division Annual Meeting of the American Cancer Society held at the Shamrock Hilton Hotel in Houston, recently.

Mrs. Henry Clark attended as District No. 16 director.

Dr. Charles F. Pelphrey, of Austin, was elected President of the Texas Division at the Wednesday luncheon where the keynote speaker was John L. Hill, Texas Attorney General and State Crusade Chairman for the Cancer Society.

Also elected as officers were: Dr. S.S. Evans of McAllen, President-Elect; Russell H. Perry of Dallas, Chairman of the Board; Mrs. Elizabeth Wimberly of McAllen, Vice Chairman of the Board; Mrs. Alton Zamzow of Three Rivers, Secretary; and Larry K. Fuller of Borger, Treasurer.

Dr. Pelphrey, a pathologist, has served for more than 20 years as a Cancer Society volunteer and is past president of the Travis County Unit. He has served as chairman of the Texas Division Medical and Scientific Committee and as chairman of the Division Serivce and Rehabilitation Committee. He is a graduate of the University of Texas and Southwestern Medical School.

Elected as Area Vice Presidents were: Dr. Gerald L. Woolam, Lubbock; Charles L. Howell, Austin; Mrs. Irene Wischer, San Antonio; Saunders Gregg, Houston; A.G. Schlossstein, Jr., Dallas; and Dr. Jim Terrell, Jr., Stephenville.

According to Miss Poyner, the meetings involved a number of reports on the most up-to-date activities in cancer education and research, and a number of case presentations by people who are fighting the cancer problem.

"The meetings were very worthwhile, and it was certainly gratifying to see more than 300 volunteers from all over Texas getting together for a common cause," said Miss Poyner.

National American Cancer Society Chairman of the Board, W. Armin Willig, spoke at a dinner Wednesday evening honoring delegates and guests.

At the dinner, the following people received 25-year awards from the Cancer Society: Dr. Morris K. Patteson and Glenn B. Gamel of Lampasas, Dr. Jay J. Johns and John Hunter Miles of Taylor, Mrs. H.G. Elmore of Silsbee, Mrs. F.D. Leffall of Wichita Falls, Mrs. A.J. Seargeant of Brackettville and Dr. Lowell E. Wilder of Falfurrias.

Other honorees included Dr. John F. Thomas of Austin and Mrs. Walter Lalley of DeWalt, who were named lifetime members of the Texas Division Board of Directors; Mrs. Tracy Cockrell of Midland, nominated for the first Texas Division Meritorious Service Award; and Dr. Grover L. Bynum of Austin, who was presented with the National Divisional Award.

Lobby Did Job

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sam Oakland, Portland State University English instructor, whose self-proclaimed crusade to reduce automobile usage became a 43,405 member bicycle lobby, has called it quits.

Oakland, who never charged the membership any fees and paid for running the lobby out of his own pocket, decided he has had enough despite numerous successes. He was instrumental in getting bicycle paths built along Oregon highways, and this and his other work on behalf of the environment won him fame.

Oakland worked on his proj ect for six years and is happy with what he did achieve during that time.

"We take this action now," Oakland said, "because we feel that general awareness in America of alternate means of transportation is sufficiently high to allow us to retreat from the public battle."

Treat Allergy Before Sneeze

CHICAGO (AP) — If you suffer every summer with allergies to pollen, ragweed, grass, mold, etc., the message from physicians at the University of Chicago Division of the Biological Sciences and the Pritzker School of Medicine is: See your doctor early. The best care is continued treatment well in advance of an acute attack.

"Each attack damages tissue, reduces airflow through the nasal passageways, and increases the sensitivity to further reaction-producing stimuli," says Dr. Richard M. Rothberg, professor of pediatrics and pathology at Wyler Children's Hospital, operated by the Home for Destitute Crippled Children in affiliation with the University of Chicago.

The allergic reaction — watery eyes, sneezing and sometimes blocked sinus passages — is triggered by an immune response to an airborne substance such as pollen or mold.

Two methods of treatment most commonly used by internists, pediatricians and allergists are treatment with drugs, including antihistamines which can prevent damage and reduce secretions in the upper respiratory tract, and treatment with inoculations of the offending allergen (allergic agent) to build the body's supply of blocking antibodies against that particular irritant.

Each method, say University of Chicago physicians, employs a long-term approach to the patient's problem, sometimes beginning treatment six to 10 weeks before the season when the specific allergic stimulus is in the environment.

Family Moves Out

LIFE IN LOWER SLAUGHTER. By Robert G. Deindorfer. Saturday Review Press. 179 Pages. $7.95.

The question, posed prominently under the title on the dust jacket of this book, is: "Can a Yank from large, filthy New York find happiness in England's Cotswolds?"

The answer, as detailed by Robert G. Deindorfer, is "yes," not a unanimous "yes" but still "yes." For while Deindorfer and his wife and son largely enjoyed living in an aged cottage in the village of Lower Slaughter — population 191 — there were some things not wholly to their liking, such as the food. But for the greatest part, the Deindorfers were hugely satisfied and when this journal ends they are not at all sure whether they will return to the United States as originally planned.

The Deindorfers bought their English cottage in 1966 and for the next several years spent a couple of months a year in it before returning to their lives in New York City. But in 1973, fed up with life in the big city, they decided to go all the way and went to live in the dream cottage fulltime. This book is about their lives in England.

Parsons, Kornegay Wed In Double Ring Ceremony

Miss Melanie Elaine Parsons and Kenneth Gene Kornegay exchanged wedding vows at the First Baptist Church of Snyder, July 12 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Ken Andress, minister of First Baptist Church officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman M. Parsons of 4507 Galveston Avenue, Snyder. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gene Kornegay of Snyder.

The altar of the church was decorated with an arched candelabra of fifteen tall burning tapers adjoined on either side with two spiral candelabras of thirty tall burning tapers each, and two candelabras of fourteen burning tapers. They were entwined with greenery. A memory candle, and two large urns of yellow and white gladiolus completed the background. Large white satin bows accented the pews of the bride's and groom's parents.

David Vaughan of Snyder presented traditional wedding music at the organ and Miss D'Ann Fisher of Snyder was pianist. Miss Debbie Clifton of Abilene and Alvin Neely of Snyder sang "The Twelfth of Never" and "Walk Hand in Hand." Miss Clifton, also sang "Wedding Prayer."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white formal length gown of organza with chantilly lace and hand-drawn pearls. The sheer fitted, tucked bodice was designed with chantilly lace, and the same lace trimmed the circular skirt, and chapel sweep train of the gown. A high collar band repeated the lace and pearls. Chantilly lace formed long cuffs on full sheer bishop sleeves, and also edged the outer layer of the long-flowing mantilla veil. She carried a nosegay bouquet of white daisies with yellow sweetheart roses and featuring baby's breath, trimmed with long white satin ribbon streamers.

Following tradition, the bride wore pennies minted in the years of their birth, and a blue garter made for her by Mrs. Lucille Bynum. For something new, she wore a diamond locket from the groom, for something old was a ruby ring which belonged to her maternal grandmother, and for something borrowed was a hair-comb belonging to the groom's paternal grandmother.

Miss Pam Underwood of Snyder, was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of flocked-flowery sheer over yellow bridal satin. It featured a sweetheart neckline, short-puffed sleeves, and a princess bodice with a side belt tying in the back. She carried a nosegay bouquet of yellow and white daisies sprinkled with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Miss Denise Clark of Snyder, Miss Debbie Clifton and Miss Darlene Clifton, cousins of the bride, both of Abilene. Their attire was identical to that of the maid of honor. They also carried identical bouquets.

Alvin Neely of Snyder, served as best man. Groomsmen were Tommy Mebane, Bobby Kornegay, brother of the groom, and Jerry Bob Lee, all of Snyder. They were attired in yellow tuxedos trimmed in black velvet. The groom's tuxedo was white with black velvet trim. Mike Stevens, uncle of the groom from Hearne, Jimmy Browning, and Max Underwood ushered guests.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Parsons chose a yellow-green floor-length gown with an over-lay of soft green chiffon and matching full sheer sleeves. She wore a corsage of white gardenias. Mrs. Kornegay chose a light brown floor-length sleeveless gown of polyester, with a matching long sleeved jacket. She also wore a corsage of white gardenias.

The bride's parents were hosts for the reception in the church fellowship hall. The bride's table was covered with a floor length yellow cloth under white lace, and centered with a tall gold candelabra with an arrangement of white daisies and yellow roses sprinkled with baby's breath. The four-tiered wedding cake was decorated with yellow roses, topped with the traditional miniature bride and groom before a flowery church window, with the four groomsmen and four yellow-gowned bridesmaids winding up the spiral staircase. Punch was served from a crystal bowl with crystal appointments. Presiding at the bride's table were Mrs. Tommy Mebane and Miss Paula Andress, both of Snyder.

The groom's table, covered with a brown linen cloth, held a two-tiered square banana-nut cake. Coffee was served from a silver service with silver appointments. A tall yellow candle in a single silver holder centered the table. Miss Charlene Yoast and Miss Vickie Kornegay, both of Snyder, presided at the groom's table.

Mrs. Tommy Mebane registered wedding guests. Miss Cheryl Taylor of Snyder, presented the music at the reception. Members of the house party were Mrs. Ned Underwood, Mrs. James Jones, Mrs. Bob Ivey, Mrs. Charles Yoast, Mrs. Donald Gressett, Miss Faye Cooke, and Mrs. Dale Keith.

For their wedding trip to Galveston, the bride chose a two piece red and white ensemble with white accessories.

The bride is a 1975 mid-term graduate of Snyder High School and will be a Sophomore student at Western Texas College this fall. The groom is a 1975 graduate of Western Texas College and is employed by Howell Electric Company.

The couple will reside at 2707 Avenue V, Snyder.

Out of town guests were from Carlsbad, New Mexico, Hearne, Abilene, Sweetwater, Dallas, Colorado City, Westbrook, Roscoe, and Bryan.

The groom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner in the American Restaurant dining room.

Woman's Club Board Meets

The Board of Directors of the Martha Ann Woman's Club met Monday morning, July 14, at ten a.m., at the club for the regular monthly meeting, with Mrs. John Hamblen presiding. Minutes from the previous meeting were read and approved and reports from standing committees were heard.

Plans for the coming style show and luncheon were discussed and the date, September 4, is to be changed to a later time which will be announced in the near future.

Participating clubs were asked to turn their calendars in to Mrs. Jerry Webb as soon as possible to facilitate the making of a master calendar to be diplayed in the foyer of the club.

Attention was directed to the Bicentennial program to be held August 19th on the east side of the square and the members agreed to cooperate, if requested, by extending the use of the club house for Bicentennial programs during the year.

Wine Institute Has Woman On Board

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Margaret Shahenian has become the first woman in the history of the 41-year-old Wine Institute to be elected to the board of directors. She is vice president and corporate secretary of Guild Wineries.

She began her career in the wine industry at the Alta Vineyards Co. in Fresno, Calif., in 1947. Alta was acquired by Guild, the big grower-owned cooperative, in 1962.

The Weeders Guide

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

There were banana trees as far as we could see as we stood on the rough road beside a drainage ditch at Cul de Sac Plantation on the picturesque Windward Island of St. Lucia in the Caribbean.

Workers were injecting chemicals into the soil to kill nematodes, borers and weevils; others were sleeving green stalks of fruit in pale blue plastic to screen the fruit from sun, wind, rain and damaging insects.

Husky Abel Ghirawoo, our guide in a four-wheel-drive land rover, proudly talked about the 2,000 acres he manages for Geest Industries, the largest industry in the four islands of St. Lucia, Granada, St. Vincent and Dominica in the West Indies. Growers on the islands have banded to form Winban, a cooperative to raise for shipment — largely to the British Isles — bananas, yams, sweet potatoes, dasheen, sweet peppers, pineapples, mangos, ginger, spices, coconuts, copra and grapefruit.

Britain provides protective tariff treatment to the islands.

Our introduction to Geest came when Francis Carasco sent a car to our LaToc Hotel to carry us to the wharfside headquarters and a meeting with fellow managing director Ian T. Twyford.

Tall and affable, Twyford told us that the island growers shipped 105,000 tons of bananas last year and hope to dispatch 120,000 tons aboard the weekly ships this year despite abnormal drought.

Geest buys the fruit at the wharves on the four islands where it is delivered by 45,000 farmers who operate plantations ranging in size from one-half acre to 1,000 acres. Geest owns and operates the two largest plantations on St. Lucia and has three on Dominica.

Twyford described the educational and experimental efforts of Winban. For instance, he said, some growers raise bananas on poor soil, on wrong slopes and in unsuitable areas.

He related: "The University of the West Indies is trying to develop other crops, such as the avocado. The West Indies have the best avocado but it doesn't ship well because the big stone falls from side to side in transit, causing rotting. The West Indian avocado has less oil than the Mexican and Guatamalan avocado and can be eaten with impunity. The avocado would be a good, new industry for the Windward Islands, especially for small growers.

"The bananas bring ships to the islands and they can take small quantities of other things that are luxury items in England.

"Avocado trees last about 38 years but they don't like wind, sudden doses of fertilizer and bad drainage."

Then Twyford saw us off to Cul de Sac Plantation along a winding mountain road, through groves of mango, breadfruit, bananas, coconut, and other food plants that provide an abundance of food for the natives.

Cul de Sac, the pleasant Ghirawoo related, includes 600 acres planted to bananas and 400 rented to peasant farmers — 200 for growing coconuts and 200 undeveloped. An old sugar refinery at the edge of Cul de Sac has been unused since the island went virtually out of sugar growing in 1959. That was when Ghirawoo, who is Indian, moved from cane to bananas.

Banana mats are planted in holes 18 inches wide and a foot deep where they establish their own root systems in two to three weeks. In three months the flower and pseudo stem appear. It takes about three or four more months to reach maturity and harvest time, a total of nearly 10 months.

One large sucker and a small one — the banana trees for the next two cycles — are left with the parent plant.

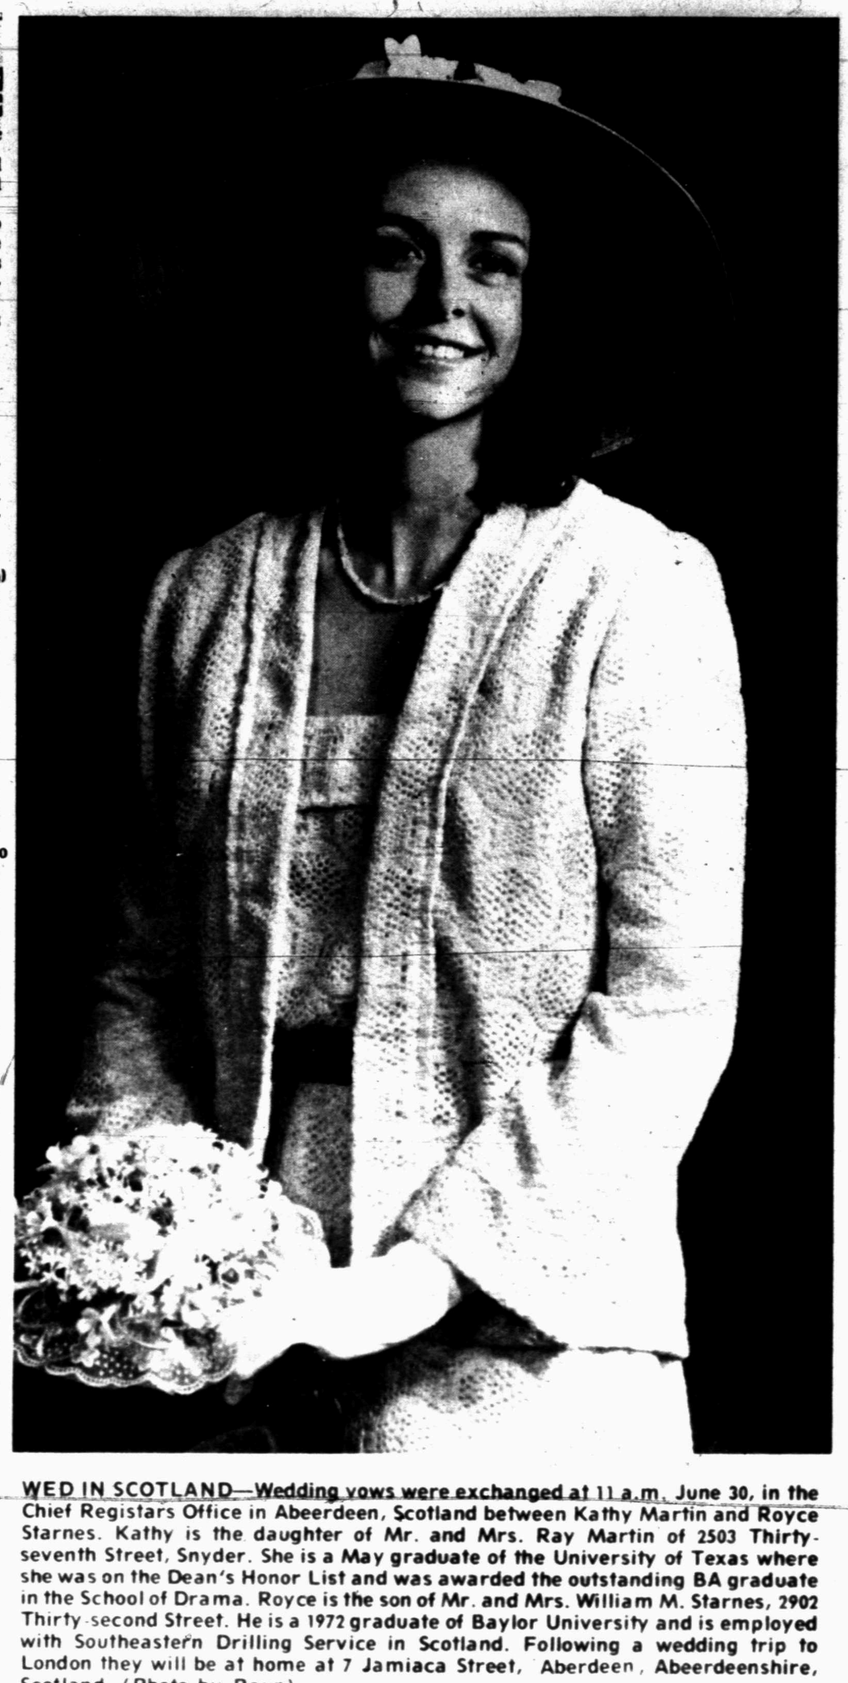

After the bananas, still green, are removed, in hands, and directed to the packing and washing plant on trucks and via a narrow-gauge railroad network, the main tree is cut down. It is cut up for humus, with 70 per cent of the plant going back into the soil. After about five years the mat (700 to the acre) is replaced.

Ghirawoo, who directs a "junior staff" of 20 plus 300 workers, led us along some of the 30 miles of drainage ditches, explaining that bananas "cannot stand wet feet." The same ditches eventually will help by becoming irrigation ditches in drought. A stream winds through Cul de Sac.

Some spraying is done by air, as with fruit orchards and other crops in the States.

It takes 5,000 coconuts to make a ton of copra, from which edible oil used for margarine, cosmetics and soap is extracted.

A good acre yield of coconuts is 20 metric tons, 40,000 pounds. Trees average 200 nuts a year.

WED IN SCOTLAND—Wedding vows were exchanged at 11 a.m. June 30, in the Chief Registars Office in Abeerdeen, Scotland between Kathy Martin and Royce Starnes. Kathy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Martin of 2503 Thirty-seventh Street, Snyder. She is a May graduate of the University of Texas where she was on the Dean's Honor List and was awarded the outstanding BA graduate in the School of Drama. Royce is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Starnes, 2902 Thirty-second Street. He is a 1972 graduate of Baylor University and is employed with Southeastern Drilling Service in Scotland. Following a wedding trip to London they will be at home at 7 Jamiaca Street, Aberdeen, Abeerdeenshire, Scotland. (Photo by Raun)

Homelife Backbreaking And Dangerous In 1775

EDITOR'S NOTE—Two hundred years ago, at the start of the Revolution, homelife was backbreaking and dangerous. For example, history doesn't record the number of women who were burned because their petticoats caught fire as they cooked over an open hearth.

By KRISTIN GOFF
Associated Press Writer

The members of the Benias Brendel family huddled around a rough-hewn wooden table and ate a dinner of venison and flour dumplings from a common dish.

At the end of a winter 200 years ago, when stored supplies of food were running low, a poor colonial farm family like the Brendels depended mainly on wild game for food. If hunting was poor, the family meals were meager.

The Brendels relied on the kitchen fireplace for cooking and to heat their three-room wood cabin. The room next to the kitchen was called "the great room." By day it was used for spinning and other chores. By night the parents and their youngest child slept there, drawing what warmth they could from the back wall of the kitchen fireplace.

Upstairs, in an unheated and unfinished loft, the other children slept bundled three and four to a bed. With them were the winter's food supply. Cloth sacks of dried beans and peas, salted and smoked meats, cornmeal and flour, were tied and hung from the rafters to keep them from rats and mice.

The Brandels were a poor German farm family that lived in Landis Valley, Pennsylvania, at the start of the American Revolution. Their life was like that of 90 per cent of the 2.5 million people in the 13 colonies in the 1770s.

Like farmers throughout the colonies, they grew their own food, kept livestock, hunted, grew flax and raised sheep for their clothes, plucked geese feathers to stuff their mattresses, and chopped wood endlessly to feed their fireplace day and night.

For most families, the tasks of keeping fed, clothed and warm left little time for other concerns. But for a few, colonial life was not nearly so bleak.

Not three days' ride by horseback from the Brendels' farming settlement, John and Ruth Potts took their main, midday dinner in a formal dining room.

Their table was of imported mahogany, crafted by a Philadelphia cabinetmaker. Their floors were covered with Oriental rugs. They ate from hand-painted China dishes and drank, perhaps, from pewter mugs.

Even at the end of a winter in the mid-1700s, the Potts, who owned several lucrative iron-making furnaces, could afford to eat well.

An average dinner might include pork, chicken and mutton, soup or stew, custard, bread or corn cakes, perhaps dried fruit and nuts, and imported wine or ale.

The younger of the Potts' 13 children ate in a children's dining room, waited on by servants, and kept apart from their parents until their table manners were perfected.

There were 14 rooms in the Georgian-style mansion in the years prior to the Revolutionary War. Most of the rooms had fireplaces.

In almost every family the children played an important part in the work. Although the death rate for both infants and their mothers was extremely high, it was not uncommon for a family to have more than a dozen children.

Abigail Foote, an educated young girl of Colchester, Conn., apparently of the middle-class, jotted down her day's work in a diary written in 1775.

"Fix'd gown for Prude, — Mend Mother's Riding-hood, — Spun short thread, — Fix'd two gowns for Welsh's girls, — Carded tow, — Spun linen, — Work on Cheesebasket, — Hatchel'd flax with Hannah, we did 51 lbs. apiece, — Pleated and ironed, — Read a Sermon of Dodridge's, — Spooled a piece, — Milked the cows, — Spun linen, did 50 knots, Made a Broom of Guinea wheat straw, — Spun thread to whiten, — Set a Red dye, — Had two Scholars from Mrs. Taylor's, — I carded two pounds of whole wool, — Spun harness twine, — Scoured the pewter."

A poorer family might not have any pewter to scour but it would have all the other chores to do.

The Most urgent task of any day was preparing meals. If the menu was large enough, the preparation of dinner, usually eaten in early afternoon, might begin even before breakfast.

Such a simple task as washing cooking pots was backbreaking work. Many of the larger iron kettles weighed more than 3 pounds empty and might have to be carried to a stream to be washed.

History does not record how many women were burned because flames and sparks set fire to their long petticoats. But certainly this was a constant danger of cooking over an open hearth. Fortunately, their homespun wools and linens caught fire less easily than do many synthetics today.

Spinning occupied enormous amounts of time. To spin enough thread for a single wool petticoat, or skirt, one person had to work constantly from breakfast until bedtime for four days.

There were other chores more seasonal in nature.

The fall was the busiest time of year because of the harvest and because food had to be dried and preserved for the winter, and animals had to be butchered.

One chore that wasn't as common then as today was washing.

Particularly in poorer families, where each member had only one set of clothes, it might be a month or more before a laundry was done.

Couple Married In Grace Bible Church

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL RAY MASON

Wedding vows were exchanged July 4 at 7 p.m. between Miss Sharron Sue Rogers and Michael Ray Mason at Grace Bible Church. Reverend R.J. Turner, minister of the church, officiated in the single ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rogers and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James W. Mason.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white bridal satin. The gown designed and fashioned by the bride, featured an empire waist overlaid with lace and tiny pearl buttons down the front. Her fingertip veil of illusion was trimmed in the same lace as that on the bodice of the gown and was attached to a headpiece of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet composed of a single wine colored dahlia and surrounded by daisies and lace.

Miss Kim Rogers served as her sisters maid of honor. She was attired in a floor length blue gown of sheer spring print. The gown featured a v-neckline and short puffed sleeves. She carried a single rose.

James (Buck) Mason, brother of the groom, served as best man. Kenneth Rogers, brother of the bride, of Fort Worth, ushered wedding guests.

The church altar was decorated with two large white baskets of spring flowers.

Mrs. Tommy Pate provided traditional wedding music at the piano.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elza A. Rollins. The home was decorated with bouquets of spring flowers and the serving table was centered with an arrangement of coral colored roses and burning tapers and held a three tiered wedding cake.

Serving in the house party were Debbie Locknane, Doris Rollins, Shirley Pate, Linda Turner and Ophelia Braziel.

The bride chose a beige dress with multi-colored flower print for the wedding trip. The couple will make their home in Snyder.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School.

The bridegroom is employed by A-L Construction in Snyder.

Out-of-town wedding guests were from Fort Worth.

College Benefactor Had Good Business Sense

CLAREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A Southern California spinster who never earned more than $150 per month, but who had a knack for profitable investments and who accumulated more than $1 million in her long lifetime, has been honored by Pomona College, the principal beneficiary of her large estate.

Details of this unusual example of educational philanthropy, by a woman who achieved slightly more than a grammar school education herself, were disclosed here by Dr. David Alexander, president of Pomona College, when he announced the establishment of the fully endowed "Minnie B. Cairns Chair in Geology."

Actually, the story of Miss Cairns is both simple and complicated, according to Dr. Allen F. Hawley, retired vice president of Pomona College. Hawley is the man credited with originating the Pomona Plan of Annuity and Life Income Gifts, a concept he conceived in 1948 and which has become a model for similar plans now in use at hundreds of American colleges, hospitals and a variety of other service and philanthropic organizations.

Hawley, now 80 and a resident of Claremont, says the simple parts of the story of Miss Cairns are those which involve her early life on farms in Illinois and Kansas, her education in a country school and a summer course at a university where she obtained a teacher's certificate, her first jobs as a cashier and a stenographer and a move to California in 1935, when her total assets did not exceed $38,000. The more complicated parts of her life story concern the uncanny ability she displayed in selecting profitable investments.

A man whose rigid business principles seldom allow disclosing the details of a donor's wealth or the nature of their gifts to Pomona College, Hawley said Miss Cairns once told him that the basic facts about her gifts could be revealed after her death. She died at 90 in 1971 in Glendale, where she lived quietly, and alone, for almost 31 years.

DOUBLE RING CEREMONY—The Parlor of the First United Methodist Church was the setting for the double ring ceremony of Miss Tracye Annettee Alexander and Mark Ramage at 8 o'clock on July 11, 1975. Mr. & Mrs. Joe Alexander are parents of the bride. Mark is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Gerald Ramage of Saudi Arabia. Honor attendants were D'Anna Huffaker, sister of the bride, and Terry Gray. Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. Mark W. Glass of Pasadena and Mrs. Terry Gray. Guests were registered by Miss Debra Biddle. Traditional music was played at the wedding and reception by Stanley Burgess. Out of town guests were from Pasadena, San Angelo, and Lubbock. (Photo by Craft).

Rings a Deadly Show of Affection

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am the plant manager of a large industrial company employing over 3,000 men, and their safety is my concern.

Enclosed is a letter that, I am told, appeared in your column about 10 years ago.

How much would you charge us to reprint this letter in our company paper? It could prevent accidents and perhaps save lives. Respectfully,

CHICAGOAN

The column:

"DEAR ABBY: I am one of those foolish wives who insisted that my husband wear his wedding ring at all times. My husband is a maintenance mechanic, and this is what happened. Yesterday, I received a call informing me that my husband was at the hospital! While jumping off a construction truck, he caught his ring on a piece of metal, and his finger was practically torn off. I was told he was lucky he wasn't killed since he lost his balance and fell under the wheels of the truck.

"Abby, please print this in your column as a warning to other women who want their husbands to wear their wedding rings to work.

AL'S WIFE

"DEAR WIFE: Thank you for your letter. And while we're on the subject, read this one:

"DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I were married we had a double-ring ceremony, and he promised he would never take his wedding ring off. And he never did. After a few years he gained a little weight and couldn't get it off. My husband was an electrician.

"Well, to make a long and very tragic story short, his wedding ring wore a tiny hole through his insulated glove and a fatal contact was made. He died instantly. When his lifeless body was examined, the only sign of injury was a small burn where his wedding ring encircled his finger.

ELECTRICIAN'S WIDOW

"So. . .dear wife, if your husband works around machines or electricity, tell him to leave ALL rings at home—if you really love him, that is.

"Rings and other types of jewelry for women and men working with machinery and electricity are a major problem in industry. Sentiment is a poor excuse for wearing a ring when it can cause the loss of a finger, hand, arm or even a life."

DEAR CHICAGOAN: Be my guest. No charge. (P.S. And the same goes for any other company that would find it useful.)

DEAR ABBY: When a man and his wife have both broken the marriage vows through adultery and want to start over again and keep their marriage vows sacred, do they have to get married again?

Wouldn't they be living in an adulterous relationship if they lived together as man and wife after having broken their marriage vows?

When a vow is broken, what can be done to make it right again?

BROKEN VOWS

DEAR BROKEN: Though adultery has been committed, the marriage is still considered legal and valid in the eyes of God and man. However, if a couple wants to start fresh, I think renewing their marriage vows is an excellent idea.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Solemn Vows Unite Buel, Turner

Miss Julia Ann Buel and Terry Mickeal Turner exchanged wedding vows July 19 at 7 p.m. in a double ring cermony at First Baptist Church in Tulia. Reverend Charles Davenport, minister of the church, officiated in the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude T. Buel of Amarillo and the bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Turner of Kress.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was adorned in a formal length gown of white sheer lace fashioned with a scoop neckline and short puffed sleeves. A softly gathered skirt fell from the empire bodice and a deep ruffle formed the hemline of the skirt. A Juliet cap of matching lace holding three of lace edged illusion completed her attire. The bride carried a bouquet of white daisies and miniature carnations sprinkled with baby's breath.

Mrs. Barbara Lynn Minton of Gainsville, was her sisters matron of honor. She wore a lavender formal length gown trimmed in matching lace and carried a nosegay of lavender daisies.

Buddy Stovall of Kress, brother-in-law of the groom, served as best man. Gary Stovall of Kress, nephew of the groom and Shelby Burgin of Amarillo ushered wedding guests.

The alter of the church was decorated with a gold candlelabra holding white tapers and two baskets of white gladioli.

Mrs. Sue George of Tulia, pianist, and Mrs. Rachel Painter of Tulia presented the music program.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table was centered with candles surrounded by the bridal bouquet and that of the matron of honor. Mrs. Sandra Pendergrass, cousin of the bride and Miss Gina Stovall, niece of the groom served at the bride's table. Mrs. Helen Laughter registered wedding guests.

For the one week wedding trip to Colorado the bride chose a yellow and white pant suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The couple will make their home at Tulia.

The bride is a graduate of North Texas State University and taught in the Snyder Public School System and is presently teaching at Tulia.

The bridegroom is a graduate of West Texas State University and New Mexico State University. He is employed with Taylor-Evans Seed Company in Tulia.

Old School Gets New Lease On Life

CLEVELAND (AP) — A 92-year-old school here in which enrollment has been declining steadily for years has received a five-year lease on life.

A replica of one room of Dunham School will be set up in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. In 1959, enrollment in the school was 3,516, the city's third largest. Current enrollment is about 300.

The replica is part of the Smithsonian's Nation of Nations exhibit that is to open next year as part of the Bicentennial celebration.

Denim is everywhere this year, contrary to fashion predictions that said its time had passed. Try a coverall style sundress. Wear it with a T shirt now and with just your tan later in the summer.

TITLE IX GOES IN EFFECT MONDAY

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sex discrimination against women in the nation's schools and colleges will be banned officially Monday but, according to groups involved in the controversy, the battle is far from over.

Regulations implementing Title IX of the omnibus Education Act of 1972 go into effect. They prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex in 16,000 school districts, 2,700 institutions of higher education and educational associations that receive federal aid.

The regulations apply to a wide variety of educational areas such as recruitment, hiring, admissions, housing and scholarships. But the section on athletics brought the most discussion from the colleges and the women's groups, with some male athletic officials claiming Title IX will bring an end to big-time college athletics.

During the past few weeks, there was an unsuccessful move to reject the regulations in toto and return them to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for rewriting.

After that effort failed, opponents of the regulations—including the National Collegiate Athletic Association—proposed amendments designed to safeguard revenue-producing sports such as basketball and football.

Rep. James G. O'Hara, DMich., introduced a proposal two weeks ago and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., introduced a similar one last Tuesday. No further action has been taken although hearings can be expected in the fall.

"We're not going to roll over and die," said Kay Hutchcraft, acting director of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, one of the major proponents of the regulations. "We will anticipate from the latest action that there will be further attempts to make changes in the athletic portions of the new regulations."

She said the AIAW believes the majority of the institutions affected will comply with the law.

"We finally have a set of regulations that can go into effect, yet we are still concerned about further attempts to limit those regulations," he said. "It puts our people in a huge quandry."

An NCAA spokesman said colleges must act as expeditiously as possible to implement the regulations, although secondary and postsecondary schools have three years to comply and elementary schools one year.

"In the area of athletic scholarships, we may see some immediate changes," he said. "We may see a flood of applications in the fall on the part of women."

He said the NCAA has a possible lawsuit under consideration but that no final decision has been made.

School systems and colleges are not required to spend the same amount of money on athletic programs for women as they spend on those for men. But the HEW regulations say that equal opportunities must be provided for both sexes.

The test the government will use includes whether women get a fair share of monetary support for their sports programs, equipment, coaching salaries and scholarships.

The NCAA has taken the position that the Title IX requirement, even if it does not require equal spending for women and men sports programs, will drain the big-time men's football and basketball programs of a large proportion of their revenues.

Nevertheless, an Associated Press survey of colleges during the past few weeks indicates most schools are preparing to comply with the regulations if they have not done so already.

For instance, a Stanford University spokesman believes the school has complied with the requirements of the regulations, may have exceeded them and could serve as a model for other institutions.

"We planned ahead and we merged our men's and women's departments in March, so all sports programs of the university, including intercollegiate, club sports, intramurals and physical education now are under one department," said publicist Gary Cavalli.

Intramurals and physical education have been coed for the last couple years, he said. Another change is that there will be one head coach for both men's and women's teams such as tennis, basketball and swimming.

This year, for the first time, women will be given athletic scholarships. There will be at least nine, including tennis, swimming and golf. The university will pay for the scholarships until a separate fund raising group is organized—like the Stanford Buck Club, which raises money for men's athletic scholarships.

There are 18 men's varsity sports and seven women's teams at Stanford. However, football produces 70 per cent of the revenue for the athletic department and won't be cut back. "We can't let football slip," said Cavalli, "because that pays the bills. We can't bite the hand that feeds us."

The university will reduce its sports budget by $120,000 over the next three years, limiting travel for some men's teams, partly as a general cutback necessitated by finances and partly to make more funds available for women.

Among other comments:

Les Dye, men's athletic director at Syracuse, said the school now has a men's and women's athletic director. "They're two separate offices which don't function together. We don't exchange budget dollars but it's a very workable method."

The women's athletic department, headed byDoris Soladay, was created on July 1 with a budget of $50,000 for five sports.

Miss Soladay said she was not completely satisfied with the present funding but "I'm not dissatisifed either. There is always room for improvement in anything you do, and women's athletics is certainly one area.

"With Title IX in the picture, the university has made a start and I would just assume it would continue along the way to do the things that need to be done," she said.

At Kentucky, Athletic Director Cliff Hagan said, "We're all for the women having their athletic programs, but we don't want them to tax what we've spent 100 years to develop and ruin what we think is very good."

University of Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham believes a court test will be needed on the question of the federal government controlling programs which do not use federal money, an argument made often during congressional hearings.

"I don't see how anybody can say you shouldn't have equal tennis teams," said Caham. "They're out of their mind if they think men and women don't deserve equality between facilities, coaches and everything else. But don't tell me I have to spend the $800,000 on tennis that I put into football which brings in $3 million. We can't have equal scholarships and expenditures for women's sports which have no revenue coming."

Dizzy Dean Was An Authentic Folk Hero

EDITORS NOTE: A year ago this week, Dizzy Dean, one of baseball's most colorful characters, died. In the following article, a former reporter remembers some of the incidents which endeared Dean to millions.

By CURT SMITH
For The Associated Press

He was more than just a hillbilly, more than a baseball player. To millions, he was an authentic folk-hero, oft-remembered and revered, especially among the country folk who spoke his rural twang, mirrored his homespun humor, sensed the small-town values which stirred him.

Few who heard him, or remember his weekly baseball telecasts, will ever forget Ol' Diz, all 300 pounds of him, ambling up the rope ladder to the broadcast booth, stuffing popcorn in one hand and guzzling pop from the other, belting out his rousing trademark ballad, "The Wabash Cannonball."

Dizzy Dean died a year ago this month. Though he had in recent years slipped from the national spotlight, his impact endured, most markedly in the style and legacy of laughter he left behind. His death on July 15 was nationally mourned, a final tribute to the unhip, uncultured Ozark boy.

Immortalized, the subject of prose and verse, Diz became a legend, despite an education which ended in the second grade. "And I wasn't so good in first grade neither," he once said.

Dean was a product of his region and times; indeed, he came in time to symbolize them. The son of a migratory cotton picker, he became a hero to the Depression downtrodden, escaping what they had not, living out what they could only dream.

For a memorable period in the mid-1930s he was baseball's greatest pitcher, its most productive gate attraction. The records of that era do not do his life justice. To the end, when he was buried in the small town of Bond, Miss., Dean retained the common touch.

"His philosophy was doing a fellow right;" said his brother, Paul, who combined with Diz to form the sport's most famed pitching duos. "He never saw a man he didn't like or respect, and I never saw anyone who didn't respect or like Dizzy."

Charitable and flamboyant, unschooled but wise to the ways of the world, for 40 years Ol' Diz was a figure around whom fame fit comfortably.

Few could remain impartial about him. To some, he was the supreme braggart and popoff, the unwitting clown. To many more he was a first-rate showman, a figure of Bunyanesque proportions.

By themselves, Dean's pitching feats did not make him the idol of millions. What made him so beloved, and so ridiculed by those who disliked him, was his plain and unpolished manner.

Diz pitched for the St. Louis Cardinals during the 1930s, helped make their rollicking Gas House gang a household word and then became a broadcaster. Stories about him abounded, some more fiction than fact.

One widely circulated yarn about Dean involved Dwight Eisenhower, who asked him one day why Dean had let himself balloon to 300 pounds. "I'll tell you, Mr. President," he is alleged to have said, "For the first 20 years of my life, I never had enough to eat, and I ain't caught up yet."

Another tale concerned an incident 45 years ago. Ignoring curfew, Dean bumped into the Texas League president at 3 a.m. "Good morning, president," Diz is supposed to have said unabashedly. "So the old boy is prowling around by himself, tonight, eh? Well sir, I'm not one to squawk. Us stars and presidents must have our fun."

Then there was the time Dean, born in Lucas, Ark., gave writers different locales as his place of birth. "I was helping the writers out," he said. "Them ain't lies; them's scoops."

And who could forget the story of Dean telling writers, hours after he had thrown a three-hitter in the first game of a doubleheader that "If I'd known Daffy (Paul Dean) was going to pitch a no-hitter in the second game, I would have pitched one, too."

The unadorned manner of the man was even more revealing, especially when he worked as a broadcaster.

He mangled the language so badly that school teachers protested. A new lexicon of baseball terms evolved. To Dean, a runner didn't slide, he "slud." A fielder didn't throw the ball, he "threwed." He would announce, "The runners are now returning to their respectable bases."

And just as regularly, he'd belt out his version of "The Wabash Cannonball."

The social unrest and sophisticated trends of the '60s and early '70s never affected Dean. "Who the heck is Raquel Welch?" he once asked in total sincerity.

He was an enduring relic. For those who feared that nothing would remain as it had, Dizzy Dean was proof to the contrary.

I like to remember Dizzy as I last heard him, a year before his death. NBC brought him back for its first 1973 Monday night telecast, and he completely dominated regulars Curt Gowdy and Tony Kubek.

Where did Dizzy live, Gowdy asked him.

"Why, in Bond, Mississippi." Where's Bond?

"Oh, 'bout three miles away from Wiggins." Where's Wiggins?

"Oh, 'bout three miles away from Bond," Diz replied.

Only Dean could get away with that. "They'll never be another one like me," he once said. And as was his custom, Dizzy Dean was right.

To be sure, he could be insufferably vain ("I may not have been the greatest pitcher ever, but I was amongst 'em," he would say). Part egotist, part gambler, Dean was a man

The Snyder Flames defeated Big Lake, 3-1, in the first round of the Snyder Women's Softball Tournament in Winston Park Friday night.

Other first round winners included Midland VFW, which defeated Western Insulation of Odessa, 5-2; the Midland Chargers, which defeated Carlsbad, N.M. Amax, 6-4; and, the Carlsbad Jets, which defeated Odessa VFW, 12-3.

The Flames' Kathy Weber chalked up her 12th victory of the year, striking out 10. She, Mary Braziel, Martha Braziel and Evelyn Wesley each had a single.

Games were slated throughout the day and night Saturday.

Wadleigh, Kruse Win

Kruse came from behind to beat Snyder Well, 8-4, and Wadleigh nipped Yale E. Key, 3-2, in eight innings in Men's Softball action Thursday night.

Kruse scored three quick runs in the first inning on hits by Wiggins and Harrison. Snyder Well took the lead in the fourth on a hit by Williams, two walks and back-to-back hits by Fore and Brent Terry. Kruse then took the lead for good in the sixth on hits by Sterling, Key, Wiggins and Harrison to pick up five runs. Leading hitters for Kruse were Wiggins and Harrison with two hits apiece. Sterling was the winning pitcher while Terry took the loss.

In the nightcap, Wadleigh came from behind to nip Yale E. Key. Key took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning on four straight hits by Perry, Gafford, Steward and Posey. Wadleigh scored one in the bottom of the inning on a walk and a base hit. Both teams were held scoreless until the bottom of the seventh when Wadleigh tied it up on a lead off double by Smith, followed by singles by Head and Ferguson. Wadleigh wrapped up the win in the bottom of the eighth on a single by Delong and a double by Mason. Delong, Mason and Smith led Wadleigh with two hits each while Perry and Steward picked up two each for Key. Head was the winning pitcher while Loesch took the loss.

Channel Catfish Biting At Spence

Channel catfish dominated numerically in catches at Lake E.V. Spence last week, although there were some sizeable striped bass reported. Other catches included good strings of white bass along with a number of black bass and one 19½-lb. yellow cat.

Here are reports from the lake:

Jury Is Deadlocked

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Boston Bruins hockey player David Forbes appears almost certain to face a second trial on a charge of aggravated assault as the result of a deadlocked jury that ended the first trial Friday.

Forbes, 26, had been indicted after a Jan. 4 fight with Henry Boucha of the Minnesota North Stars during a National Hockey League game.

The nine-day trial ended when the jury which deliberated about 13 hours over two days said it was unable to reach agreement. Jurors said the panel was deadlocked at 9-3 in favor of conviction on the lesser charge of simple assault.

VIEWPOINT

Detente Via Strength

To the alarm of many people, including a number of members of Congress, Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger has hinted that the United States might be the first to use nuclear weapons in a confrontation with the Soviet Union.

"First use could conceivably -- let me underscore conceivably - involve what we define as strategic forces and possibly, possibly - let me underscore possibly - involve selective strikes at the Soviet Union," he said.

There are just enough "conceivablies" and "possibilies" in what at first, terrifying blush appears to be a radical departure from long-established U. S. policy to absorb the first blow, whether nuclear or conventional, in any showdown with the Soviet Union to have the strategists in the Kremlin scratching their heads.

And that, despite the protests the secretary's statement has aroused, is the whole idea.

The logic is that if a potential enemy believes that the United States will never, never strike first, he will be tempted to push aggression to dangerous limits. But if he is not sure how the United States will respond, he will be much more careful and cautious.

This works both ways, of course. If there is uncertainty about how the Soviets would react to what they may perceive as a threat to their security, this will tend to keep the more bombhappy denizens of the Pentagon in somewhat closer touch with sanity.

Nothing has been changed in the balance of terror that exists between the United States and the U. S. S. R. The line has just been drawn a little more fuzzily, and paradoxically because of this fuzziness is less likely than before to be approached, or crossed.

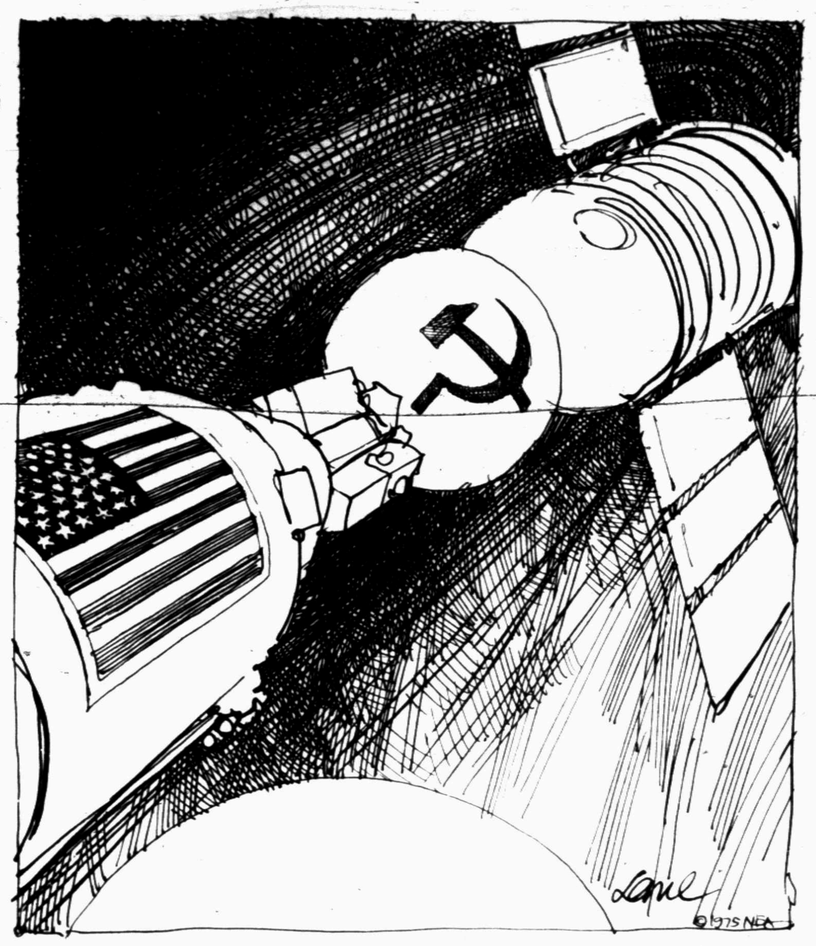

All Hail Jubal Hale

Jubal Hale, who urged Congress to abolish his job as executive secretary of the Federal Metal and Nonmetallic Safety Board of Review because he had never done anything and was in no danger of ever having anything to do, deserves a reward, thinks one commentator.

Barron's financial weekly columnist Alan Abelson suggests the creation of the Jubal Hale Award to be bestowed on government officials who emulate Mr. Hale.

"In fact," says Ableson, "we're ready to dole out the awards by the thousands. Our only difficulty is that there are so many deserving recipients, we don't know where to begin."

"That's one small step for man . . ."

DISEASES IN THE HOME GARDEN:

A number of different problems exist and more are showing up in many home gardens.

Among these are the many virus diseases, and little if anything can be done to control them once they occur.

Although viruses attack many plants, those most commonly afflicted are beans, tomatoes, peppers, Southern peas, squash, mustard and turnip.

Viruses can be identified by mosaic or a mottling of the leaves, ring spots on the foilage and sometimes on the fruit, yellowing of foilage and along with this yellowing possible bronzing, reddening and stunting of the plants.

Insects usually spread virus diseases in home gradens. Aphids and leafhoppers are the main culprits. So in order to have a virus disease free garden, an insect control program must be maintained.

Insects are not the only method of spreading diseases. Contaminated clothing or hands and equipment can also spread these diseases.

Contaminated seed may spread viruses, so the use of certified good quality seed is important.

Many weeds serve as host to viruses, so a year-round weed control program is important in reducing virus infections.

Probably the most common virus disease in this area is curly top of tomatoes. This disease is spread by the potato leaf hopper and usually results in death of the tomato plant.

Careful attention to maintenance practices around the home garden area will go a long way in reducing virus problems on vegetable crops. Don't forget cleanup after the garden has quit producing.

4-H ELECTRIC CAMP:

I and several 4-H club members will be participating in the 4-H Electric Camp in New Mexico next week July 21-25.

While at the Camp emphasis will be on the study of electricity uses around the farm and home. During the craft session, the campers will receive training in electric wiring and will build a useful electrical unit or appliance.

PROBLEMS LAST WEEK:

There were many calls last week wanting information on variety of things and in case you had some of the same troubles I thought we might discuss some of them.

Powdery Mildew—This is a disease affecting a large group of plants. Characteristics of this is greyish to white powdery substance formed on the leaves of plants. This will wipe off by rubbing your fingers over it. Spraying with benomyl or karathan should give adequate control.

Spider mites—These small mites are usually found on the underside of the leaf working under or inside a web. Control: Sprays Trithion, Ethion, Diazinon, Kelthane and Malathion should work well. If these are used on edible products be sure and check waiting period before harvest.

Chinch bugs or stink bugs—These were found on black eyed peas causing hardening and discoloration of the peas. Sevin or malathion should control these.

Aphids—I guess the aphid or plant lice was on everything. Diazinon, demeton, trithion, cygon, and malathion are all recommended for control of the aphids. Here again you need to check on the waiting period of these insecticides if you are spraying garden products.

Disbarrment Action Set On Judge Parr

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Bar of Texas will seek next week to have suspended Duval County Judge Archer Parr disbarred, its general counsel said Friday.

Davis Grant said State District Court Judge O.P. Carrillo, who ordered Parr's removal as Duval County judge following a federal perjury conviction, has set the disbarrment proceeding for Thursday afternoon.

Grant said the disbarrment proceeding also is based on Parr's federal court perjury conviction. He said there will be no trial on the disbarrment, just a judicial proceeding to show Parr's conviction. Disbarrment is automatic upon such a showing, Grant said.

The case originally was set for last December, but Parr's lawyer, Rep. Terry Canales, D-Premont, asked for a legislative continuance. Canales is the author of a legislative resolution that led a special House committee to recommend impeachment of Carrillo.

The House convenes Aug. 4 to consider the articles of impeachment.

Grant was asked what would happen if Canales again asked for a legislative continuance because of the House impeachment hearing. He replied, "That will be a case of first impression (never before decided) and I will argue that the impeachment proceeding is not the House in session."

Paradise Was Persian Word

TEHRAN (AP) — In 500 B.C., writer-soldier Xenophon visited the gardens of a Persian king. He was so smitten by the multitude of flowers and the lush greenness where the only sounds were the tender murmur of birds and fountains that he took the Persian word for walled garden — firdaus — back to Greece with him.

That word later traveled into English as paradise, synonym for perfect happiness, according to Iran Air researchers.

Group To Buy Dialysis Units

HOUSTON (AP) — Five areas of the state will receive dialysis units as donations from the Texas chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, a spokesman for the organization says.

Patricia Neinast of Dallas says the group's 750 local chapters throughout the state will raise $80,000 by Oct. 1 to purchase the dialysis units.

Dialysis units are used to purify the blood of persons with nonfunctional kidneys.

The units will be placed in central locations away from big cities.

Laredo, Brownsville and Texarkana already have expressed interest in the units, Mrs. Neinast said.

The U.S. Marine Corps was founded Nov. 10, 1775, as a force able to serve on land or sea — and eventually in the air.

Bullock To Auction Liquor

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — About 15,000 cases of liquor, beer and wine is to go on the auction block here Monday, with the proceeds going to settle back taxes claimed by the State of Texas.

The way was cleared for the auction on Friday when court rulings lifted a temporary restraining order and denied a request for another.

State comptroller Bob Bullock planned to auction the liquor, confiscated in May from three package stores, to satisfy $405,000 in delinquent taxes.

Bullock said the taxes are owed by Cut Rate-Economy Discount Beverage and Liquor Corp., a San Antonio dealer.

Block Distributing Co., also of San Antonio, had won a restraining order against the auction, claiming to have an $82,000 lien on the confiscated liquor.

After Bullock and Block agreed to put the auction proceeds in escrow until the lien situation can be settled, the restraining order was lifted Friday by Retired State District Court Judge Max Boyer. Boyer hears cases from time to time to help alleviate the backlog, as do other retired judges.

But Boyer, sitting in 37th District Court, denied Cut-Rate's request for a temporary order to block the auction.

AARP To Meet Monday

All Senior Citizens are invited to a special meeting of The Scurry County Chapter No. 2063 of The American Association of Retired Persons. If you are 55 years of age and a member of the National Association you are qualified to become a member of the Local Chapter. The Local Chapter No. 2063 will hold its meeting in the Community Room of the West Texas State Bank Monday, July 21, at 2 p.m.

An interesting program has been arranged by the program Chairman Mrs. W.A. Wells. Mr. Herbert S. Von Roder will show color slides that were taken on his trip to Libya. These will show points of interest in the land as well as the people and their culture.

At a recent meeting the board of Directors voted to present to the chapter the possibility of sponsoring the AARP Defensive Driving Course here in the near future. The Directors also expressed their desire to encourage the Chapter to help with the Goodfellows Christmas Program this year if they are needed.

All who desire transportation to the meeting are welcome to call the following numbers for assistance. 573-2738 and 573-5705 - 573-5967. Refreshments will be served at the close of the meeting.

LONE STAR GAS SYSTEM	$14.41
Indianapolis	$14.14

In fact, the average rate in cities on the Lone Star Gas Company system in Texas ranks among the lowest general service gas rates in the country for residential and commercial customers.

These rates are based on a recent comparison by Lone Star Gas. The rate you see listed for the Lone Star Gas system is based on the average of all general service rates in the 410 incorporated cities and towns we serve in Texas, and are based on 10-thousand cubic feet of natural gas used by residential customers on June 1, 1975.

Your town may have a general service rate above or below the average rate listed above. Rates differ in all the towns we serve, because each town has a unique gas distribution system and has different revenue requirements.

We know your gas bills have been rising steadily in the past year or two, and they'll continue to rise. The average price Lone Star has had to pay for gas supplies has risen more than 250 per cent during the past three years, and some of this increase has been passed on to our customers.

Lone Star has been consistently able to supply our customers with natural gas. Other parts of the country are having severe problems in obtaining adequate supplies of this premium fuel, and we're working hard to prevent those problems here in our area.

Dr. Lamb

Oversexed male menopause

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB- Do men in their 50s undergo a change of life? If so, do they experience a period of unusual and unaccounted for sexual stimulation? If this is not true what would cause this unusual and inexplicable stimulation? What remedy would you then suggest?

DEAR READER- Your question reminds me of the answer of a friend of mine when asked if men go through the menopause. He replied, "Yes, mine started when I was seven and I'm not through it yet."

Strictly speaking, men do not have a menopause. After all, menopause means stopping menstruation, and you have to be able to menstruate before you can stop. And normally, men do not have a sudden sharp decline in output of sex hormones as happens in women when the ovaries suddenly slow down and then quit. Usually a man will have a gradual decline in hormone production from his middle years into what we consider old age. The sudden shock to the endocrine sytem of sudden decreased hormone production just doesn't occur.

Men do undergo psychological changes in their middle years, and these may not be related to their hormones at all. The mid-point in a man's life, when he begins to realize he is not the young man of promise but must struggle to hold on to what he has, can be an enormous ego shock. In some instances this brings on a mild or even severe depression. The depression may, in turn, affect his interest in sex and his performance. The first thing to look for in most middle-aged men with sudden loss of sexual interest or capacity is a depression. The treatment in these cases is not unneeded male hormone, but treatment of the depression.

With the psychological change, the male may need to prove his masculinity. He will then start looking for new sexual experiences or push himself in this area. He may seem more sexy, but in truth he may simply be more desperate. This is one of many factors that lead to the middle-aged romances with another woman or women and often the excess use of alcohol.

Of course, new experiences may turn him on psychologically. The sudden interest in a new sexual partner often turns on the whole sexual system, and the person, male or female, may suddenly be readily aroused and feel sexier than he or she has felt in years. This is a good expample of how powerful the influence of the brain can be on a person's sexual interests and behavior.

In the rest of your letter you mentioned several medicines that you are taking and that you have arthritis. Two of these medicines contain hormones from the adrenal gland. They are not sex hormones. However, these hormones may affect a person's psychological behavior. They may cause either depression or marked acceleration in activity, "locked in the go position" response.

In the extreme form we call this manic behavior as opposed to depressive behavior. With the brain turned on full throttle it is not surprising then that this may activate a person's sexual interest. I would guess that has something to do with your sudden increased sex drive and that sex is just one part of your total increased interest and activity.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am seriously concerned for my family over something I read recently.

The article said that the body cannot throw off excess vitamins A and D. It went on to say the constant excess could cause brain damage, especially in children.

I give my children any one of a half dozen brands of vitamin pills daily, one pill containing 3500 U.S.P. units of A, which is already 40 per cent more than a two to six year old needs according to it's own label. These are vitamins for children. They contain 400 U.S.P. units of D. According to the article I read these are the maximum amounts we should consume in a day.

Have you ever noticed how much vitamin A and D is added to our milk and other dairy products, cereals, etc.? We were drinking a gallon of milk a day before. Now I can't find any milk without it.

Why are we forced to accept this, wowie, instant energy, fortified, vitamin packed hogwash? A balanced diet with a vitamin supplement for a possible deficiency should be sufficient. But please, reduce the amount of A and D.

Am I wrong to be so concerned, or it is time someone does someting about this?

DEAR READER—No you are not wrong. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has set safe limits on how much A and D could be in daily vitamin preparations without a doctor's prescription. This action was to protect people from innocently taking too much of these vitamins and exposing themselves to A and D toxicity. The Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) is well below the maximum you can tolerate.

The efforts by a group of knowledgeable scientists to protect the public from vitamin abuses are threatened by the actions of an interested group of Senators and Congressmen, none of whom are distinguished by any knowledge in medicine, but all of whom know which position to take to get elected. As a result, large amounts of some vitamins will continue to be available as "super" this and "super" that which may mislead many people into thinking this is the way to go for super health.

People on a marginal diet for any reason which cannot be corrected should take a daily vitamin tablet. I don't object to this. Taking excess unneeded vitamins, however, only enriches special interest groups marketing vitamins and so called health foods.

For information on daily requirements of vitamins, minerals and nutrition send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019, and ask for The Health Letter number 4-60 on Balanced Diet.

Since so many of our foods are now enriched I am having to think again about the advisability of recommending a daily vitamin pill. You are right, with A and D in milk, cereals and other foods the vitamins have already been added. We are all taking vitamin pills in our food. A good well balanced diet with these added vitamins can hardly fail to provide plenty of vitamins wihtout pressing our luck and taking additional A and D.

I'd prefer that people ate the right foods and used the milk with the added vitamins, then stopped the vitamin pill rather than stopping the food and popping vitamins. You might go this route.

Parts Of Patrol Car Is Missing

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — The sheriff's patrol car No. 22 isn't missing, but parts of it are.

The patrol car was involved in an accident recently and had been left in the sheriff's department radio shack under lock and key to have all electronic gear removed.

As it was a weekend no work was done on the car. Monday came and the sheriff's office discovered that someone had gained entry to the shack and had stolen the radio transmitter, receiver, microphone and other equipment.

REPRESENTATIVE HONORED—Mike Ezell, state representative from Snyder, was one of seven West Texas legislators to be honored at a luncheon in Lubbock recently. Here, he receives a certificate of appreciation for his support of health care legislation.

CELEBRITIES ON THE COUCH

By Dick Maurice

Lou Rawls won two Grammy Awards for "Dead-End Street" and "A Natural Man". Time magazine claimed that "For more than ten years most U.S. jazz polls have named Frank Sinatra the top male vocalist. Now, for the first time, a rank outsider suddenly shows every sign of deposing the 'Chairman of the Board'. Lou Rawls is his name and 'soulin' is his game." Lou was born and raised in Chicago, Illinois. He began singing at the age of seven with the local church choir. Later, he joined the Pilgrim Travellers, a well-known gospel group at the time. Rawls spent a hitch in the Army and after finishing his tour of duty, began singing at local service clubs and finally in many of the nightclubs in the Midwest area. In 1961, he signed a Capitol Record contract and was on his way to success.

MAURICE: How would you describe yourself?

RAWLS: Just another man out here trying to do his thing. I try not to step on too many toes but try not to let mine get stepped on at the same time. I am a natural man.

MAURICE: Sammy Davis Jr. once said that sometimes you have to step over people, not on them to get ahead.

RAWLS: I would use the phrase 'step around them'. Some of them are so big that you cant step over them. You have to kind of side step them. Besides, if you step too high and fall, it hurts. If you side step, you can't fall too far.

MAURICE: I heard you wanted to record "Candy Man" before Sammy Davis Jr

RAWLS: Ready for this?

About five years ago went to a record company and wanted to record "Candy Man" which Anthony Newley had given to me. They said, 'You can't do that. Look at you, look at this song and look at what's happening in the world today. If you sing a song like that people will think you are singing about dope, narcotics, since the dope pusher is called a 'candy man.' So I didn't record it. Then Sammy got it and recorded it.

MAURICE: Lou, how much does an artist make on a 45LP record?

RAWLS: It depends. If it is a million seller, you'll get about $50,000. If the artist also wrote the song, he'll get maybe $150,000 depending on the deal. Then everytime a DJ plays the record on the air, you get about 1½ cents. That adds up a great deal, especially if it hits the charts. I had an album one time that sold 2 million in a week.

MAURICE: Now with your new film coming out where you play the life of Louie Armstrong, would you like to have a complete film career?

RAWLS: Yes, I intend to. I've done a few things on television but I really didn't get into it full force because I didn't feel that I was ready. I wanted to establish myself first as a performer. Now I feel that I can make the move and make it complete. I believe in myself to the point that I know that I can do it. I'm not going to stop recording. But I'm going to cut down on my personal appearances. My grandmother use to tell me 'Don't burn the bridge you cross cause you never know when you have to go back over it.'

MAURICE: Weren't you involved in a very bad accident a few years back?

RAWLS: Yes. It happened in 1958. It was an automobile accident and I was in a coma for five days suffering from a brain concussion. They went and pronounced me dead, but I got back on my feet and went on the road again – had a complete loss of memory.

MAURICE: Do people recognize you on the street?

RAWLS: Teenagers and adults recognize me but what really surprises me is how many children, not more than four or five years old, know who I am. I guess the reason for that is because I was on "Sesame Street" where I performed the alphabet song. Just think, I have a whole new generation of fans.

MAURICE: If you had one wish, what would you wish for?

RAWLS: What I really wish for is to win an Oscar.

Post Rodeo Scheduled

POST—The 35th Annual Post Stampede Rodeo is scheduled for a three-night stand here August 7,8,9 with Harrel Smith's Bucking S Rodeo of Lawton, Okla., producer.

Events include bareback bronc, calf roping, saddle bronc, barrel race, team roping, and bull riding with one go-round, head or run per contestant.

Legislators Honored In Lubbock

The 64th Texas Legislature enacted more than 300 pieces of legislation directed to health care and an equal number dealing with matters having an impact upon health care. This is one of the reasons that State Legislators were honored at an appreciation luncheon in Lubbock on June 26th. Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, Bill Clayton of Springlake, addressed the more than fifty civic leaders attending the luncheon. Senator Kent Hance also made a few timely remarks.

Charles A. Guy, retired editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal acted as Master of Ceremonies. Former Governor Preston Smith was present as was Grover Murray, President of Texas Tech University.

Certificates of appreciation signed by William H. Tinney, Chairman of the Board of Managers of the Lubbock County Hospital District; Clint Formby, Chairman of the Board of Regents of Texas Tech University; and Rodrick L. Shaw, Lubbock County Judge; and were personally presented to the State Legislators attending the luncheon which included: Speaker Clayton; Senator Hance; as well as Representatives R.B. McAlister, and Elmer Tarbox of Lubbock, E.L. Short of Tahoka; Pete Laney, Plainview; Michael Ezell, Snyder; W.S. (Bill) Heatley, Paducah.

Speaker Clayton stated that the 64th Texas Legislature's action in reorganizing of the Texas Department of Health into the Texas Department of Health Resources will have more for reaching beneficial effects than any other single piece of legislation.

Northwest Pilots Reach Agreement

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — With four minutes to go before a strike deadline, the Air Line Pilots Association and Northwest Airlines agreed to a settlement of a 15-month contract dispute.

Kay McMurray, a member of the national Mediation Board, made the announcement at 1:56 a.m. Saturday.

The pilots had said they would strike at 2 a.m. CDT if no agreement was reached.

No details of the settlement were announced immediately.

A strike by the 1,550 Northwest pilots would have grounded the nation's seventh largest airline.

Claims People Share Blues With Unemployed

EDITOR'S NOTE — Dealing with the jobless requires emotional stability. But those who work in state unemployment offices sometimes find that when the unemployed break down and cry, it helps to cry with them.

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Like a moment of agony, the metal door screeches terribly each time another of the unemployed steps out of the sunlit street and into the unemployment claims office.

The door screams. A freight handler.

Another scream. A watch assembler. A restaurant manager. An automobile body man.

The Arkansas unemployment rate is 10 per cent, compared with 4 per cent a year ago. The national unemployment figure is 8.6 per cent.

Each swing of the door brings not only a case of personal crisis for the unemployed but also some soul-searching for those whose work, ironically, goes up with unemployment statistics.

"I go home at night and tell my wife how thankful we ought to be to have a job and good income, a place to live," said T.G. Morton, 63, a lawyer at the claims office.

Roselyn Frederick is a plump, bespectacled, soft-spoken lady who has worked for 13 years in the single-story claims office in Little Rock, one of several such offices in the state and one of thousands in the nation. She never has seen more jobless people.

"When you see them going out the door — the ones you can't do anything for — you wonder what they're going to do," she said. "You know their bills keep coming in.

"Sometimes you can't help them because they don't qualify for benefits. It's hard to tell them that. But what can you do? Try to be kind. Suggest welfare. What else?

"When I first came, I could hardly stand it. A few times, I didn't know what else to do, so I gave them something out of my pocketbook.

"You can't keep doing that, of course, or you wouldn't have anything, either."

What disturbs many of the 30 or 50 claims office employes is that the unemployed don't understand how the claims system works.

"A person will think he's being cheated, that he's paid money in but can't get anything out when we have to tell him that he's not eligible for benefits," said Maurice Carter, manager of the claims office.

"They confuse it with Social Security," she said. "But unemployment benefits are drawn from a money pool replenished only by employers, not employes."

That pool had declined to $28.64 million in Arkansas at the end of May compared with $65.66 million in May 1974, according to Henry L. McHenry, state administrator for the Employment Security Division.

Payments by employers are not keeping pace with benefit payments to the unemployed, McHenry said. So the balance probably will be down to $8.6 million by Sept. 30 and there will be a deficit of $13.6 million by the end of the year.

That would force Arkansas, like some other states, to begin to borrow from a federally maintained trust fund established to pay benefits when state funds run out.

The claims office workers, in interviews, said that dealing with the unemployed requires a considerable amount of emotional stability.

"You have to have a feeling for the people, but you can't get too close to the fire," said Frances Riddle. "It's not depressing to me because I feel like I'm doing a service.

"I don't mean that I don't care, but you do have to learn to cope with it — hour after hour of sad situations. If you don't, you'll get wrapped up in the people and you'll spend your nights lying awake for hours."

Mrs. Riddle, 51, has worked in the office for four years. She is not immune to depression. Seeing the elderly unemployed — "those who need the money the worst" — saddens her.

And one case about a year ago "got me down the most."

"A woman came in," Mrs. Riddle recalled. "Her husband was in intensive care at a hospital. They had three children. The woman had never worked. She wanted to file a claim for his benefits, but she couldn't do that, and he couldn't because he couldn't meet the requirement to be capable and ready for work. She cried.

"I told her that if it would do any good to cry with her, I would," she said.

Woman Ends 22-Year-Old Mystery

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP)— Lyde Marland — widow and former stepdaghter of former Oklahoma Gov. E.W. Marland, has returned to Ponca City, ending a 22-year-old mystery.

Mrs. Marland got into her 1949 Studebaker in May 1953 —12 years after the death of her husband — and left town. She hadn't made a public appearance since.

Mrs. Marland, now 75, is living at the Jens-Marie Hotel, carefully avoiding publicity, venturing from her room only occasionally.

"I saw her in the lobby yesterday," a hotel employe said. "But she doesn't come out often." She has refused interviews and avoided photographers.

"She said she wanted to get away from her family," the owner of the hotel said. "She wasn't ill, she just seemed like a person who wanted to live a normal, happy life."

Mrs. Marland and her brother, George, were adopted by oilman E. W. Marland and his first wife when they were children. When the first Mrs. Marland died in 1926, Marland had the adoption for Lyde cancelled and married her. She was 28 and he was 54.

While her husband was governor, Mrs. Marland tried to stay out of the public eye.

Reagan Ponders Meet With Author

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Gov. Ronald Reagan reportedly is exploring the possibility of a meeting next week with exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Reagan, a prospective candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, has said he supports Solzhenitsyn's beliefs on the oppressiveness of the Soviet regime.

The Los Angeles Times also said today that Reagan has been in contact with the writer in connection with a film based on his latest best-seller, "The Gulag Archipelago." A former actor, Reagan still has many contacts in the motion picture industry.

Solzhenitsyn has been in Washington and is scheduled to leave soon for his home in Switzerland.

The battle of Bluff was fought Oct. 21, 1861, when Union troops on a reconnaissance mission west of Washington, D.C., were ambushed by Confederates and beaten, with heavy losses.

Surrender Of Film Ordered

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India's supreme court has ordered a filmmaker to surrender all prints and negatives of his unreleased movie satirizing Indian politics as corrupt.

The producer, a member of Parliament from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party, said his film "Story of a Chair" is "against all bad politicians of various hues and shades."

He has appealed to the supreme court to reverse a censors' decision barring exhibition of the film on grounds it promotes disaffection and lawlessness among the people. The court has yet to decide the merits of the case.

But its order to producer Amrit Nahata to turn over the original pending the appeal was seen as another reflection of a new atmosphere since Mrs. Gandhi imposed press censorship and jailed her political opponents in a June 26 crackdown.

The Information Ministry banned another film popularly interpreted as an unflattering biography of Mrs. Gandhi last week, after it had played to full houses for six months.

When he finished the film in March and presented it for approval, he said, the censor board handed him a list of 51 objections, most of them based on the contention that criticizing politicians incites people to lawlessness.

A local news agency transmitted a story on Friday's supreme court decision and was later ordered by censors to kill the story and prevent subscribers from printing it. Nahata exhibited some of the former spirit when talking about his film: "One may agree or disagree with it," he said, "but I have the freedom to say it."

A collection of the world's rarest postage stamps would have an estimated value of half a million dollars or more, and yet the entire accumulation easily would fit in a man's wallet.

Nursing Homes Results Are Better Than Expected

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A nationwide survey shows that many nursing home patients are ignored by doctors, over-medicated and refuse to eat regular meals. Still, a federal official says the results are better than expected.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said, "It's really not as bad as I'd expected when we went in to find out how bad it was."

Cooper was describing to newsmen at an HEW-sponsored seminar Friday the results of the HEW survey, which he said is now ready for printing. Some of Cooper's remarks were in a prepared text to which he referred but did not read.

He said the survey, based on unannounced visits by doctors to 300 nursing homes serving 283,000 patients, showed:

—Physicians tend to concentrate on the preservation of life rather than the "dignity of death" and they "...just dumped their patients into nursing homes and forgot them."

—In some instances, over-medication resulted when physicians failed to discontinue orders no longer needed. "In another case, there was not clinical evidence...to indicate the need for prescribing some potentially dangerous drugs."

—Patients' records were incomplete, mixed up or not signed. "In many cases, attending physicians underreported many impairments such as loss of sight, hearing, and amputations as well as senility or chronic brain syndrome."

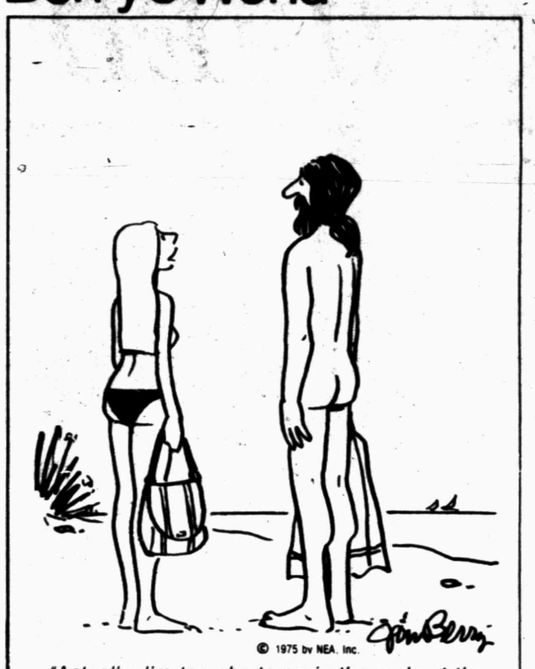

—Eighty-nine per cent of the patients had their menus planned for them in writing, but 51,666 refused more than half the meals served them. "Only 27 per cent were offered appropriate substitutes," he said, adding that one out of five nursing homes had more than a 14-hour span between breakfast and dinner.

"I am thoroughly convinced that the quality of care in nursing homes throughout the country would be much higher if physicians had taken a personal interest in the management and care of their patients in these facilities," Cooper said.

"The survey has made it abundantly clear that there is much work ahead for us all," he said. "The greatest problem in our federal regulations is that they fail to achieve what they were designed to accomplish."

He said the department would emphasize programs that increase the quality of nursing home care and that encourage home care for more elderly people.

Class Of 1960 Seeks Addresses

The Snyder High School Class of 1960 is making plans for their 15-year class reunion. It will be held August 9.

Class members planning to come are reminded to send in their registration form with a fee of $15. An accurate count is needed for the meals, etc.

Class members who are unable to attend are asked to send a snapshot of their family and a brief letter about themselves and what they have been doing the past few years.

If you have any information on the following list of people or their addresses please send this information to Barbara Scrivner, 2308 Forty-second St., Snyder, Texas 79549. They are: Betty Alexander, Barbara Armstrong, Inez Butler, Beth Cochran, Gerald Eaton, Peggy Ferguson, Ben Franklin, Donna Havins, Donald Hilliards, Charles Hock, Ronnie Jones, Karen Livingston, Dickie Locke, Ronnie McNabb, Jerry Nail, Ronnie Owens, Karen Porterfield, Camilla Roberts, Edward Tullos, Eddie Ware, and Sue Wharton.

Teamsters Ink Pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new three-year contract between Teamsters' farm workers and 135 California and Arizona growers has been signed after the farm workers ratified the agreement by a 4-1 margin.

The contract provides a 25 per cent pay hike and would boost the minimum wage of farm workers. Workers voted 8,552 to 2,159 Friday to accept the contract, which United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez called a "sweetheart" agreement.

The contract covers 30,000 workers in California and Arizona and appears to give the Teamsters an edge over the UFW in upcoming elections that likely will take place later this year on these same ranches when the new California farm labor law takes effect. Workers will vote on what, if any, union they wish to represent them.

Strikes were called when the talks failed to reach an agreement Wednesday, but Chavez said the strikes were "phony" and were in fact "staged lockouts" designed to make the Teamsters look good.

Plans To Ban Off-Road Vehicles

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Forest Service officials say the service plans to ban off-road vehicles, mainly motorcycles, from 156,382 acres of national forests and grasslands in Texas.

Officials said Thursday prohibited areas under the plan would amount to about 22 per cent of some 700,000 acres in the state's four national forests and two national grasslands.

Reds' Grain Harvest May Be Lower Than Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union may be worse off in its harvest prospects than officially disclosed and could need even larger amounts of foreign grain to make up deficits, according to sources in the Agriculture Department.

A senior official admitted Friday night that Soviet harvest prospects have continued to deteriorate from USDA's estimate last week that the crop would produce 195 million metric tons. He added that no new assessment had been made.

But sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Soviet harvest potential has dropped to 190 million tons and possibly to 185 million, the lowest since the disastrously short grain crop of 168.2 million tons in 1972 that sent Moscow scurrying into world markets for grain.

The 1972 purchases, including 19 million tons of U.S. grain, helped trigger rising food prices for American consumers as prices for wheat, corn and other grain went up.

Richard E. Bell, deputy assistant secretary for international affairs and commodity programs, said he could not confirm or deny reports from USDA sources that the Soviet crop has declined 5 million to 10 million tons since the estimate of 195 million tons was issued July 9.

But Bell said that most department experts "are inclined to think it will have to be lowered" because of worsening drought conditions in major grain areas of the Soviet Union.

"I think everybody's generally agreed that the crop is sliding below 195 (million tons,)" Bell told a reporter. "But they haven't decided that finally yet."

Two U.S. grain companies announced this week that Russia had bought a total of 3.2 million tons of wheat, and Canada said sales of 2 million tons had been made. Rumors still were flying that the Soviets also were in the market for corn and more wheat.

Bell said also that a team of U.S. grain experts was due in Moscow this weekend to check on Soviet spring-planted grain, which makes up two-thirds of Russian production.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something unexpected will cause a high point in your relationship with your mate or business partner to please you immensely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you feel like following a hunch, do it early in the day. Later you'll be more practical and may pass up an opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Variety is the spice of life to you. Today you'll have a ball because you'll be the center of a swirl of activity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An unusual departure from your normal routine makes a more pleasant day for you and those around you.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) You'll be excellent in the role of social director for the group or family today. Organize a picnic or a trip to the ball park.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to keep yourself clear for last-minute opportunities. If you don't you'll be sorry when you hear how much fun everybody had.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct. 23) Don't spend too much time away from home today. A visitor may ring your doorbell and you'd miss him.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Toward evening you'll be restless and want to get out among friends. Make plans early in the day to avoid disappointment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A person you'll be exchanging pleasantries with at a gathering will turn the discussion to a topic of mutual material benefit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're a bit slow getting started today, but by the time others run out of steam you'll still be rarin' to go.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have a short interest span today. Have a tactful exit line ready if an acquaintance tries to bend your ear with a long tale.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you didn't know held you in such high regard will surprise you by going out of their way to do something nice for you.

Your Birthday
July 20, 1975

You will form a very interesting and mutually beneficial alliance this year with someone older than yourself. You may make contact through a relative.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

For Monday, July 21, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The opportunity to call favorable attention to your work or a pet project exists today. Your best will not go unnoticed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others won't have the same sense of urgency regarding your plans as you have. Delegate as little as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Small mistakes are possible in your business transactions today. Count pennies as carefully as the dollars.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's important to iron out any small points in agreements you make today. They could later prove to be a thorn in the flesh.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be overly concerned with the share of the burden your co-workers carry. Just be certain you're doing your part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Respect any confidence given you today. There's one in particular you could tell who would foul things up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you are judicious in your conversation. Today, however, you could carelessly put a family member in a bad light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Accept methods proven by your own experience. Someone who hasn't tried them could attempt to convince you they won't work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be outspoken if you know an item can be purchased at a better price. The vendor will adjust to your terms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will be difficult to please 100 per cent someone you're teamed up with today. The difference will prove insignificant in the end.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll handle responsibilities admirably today. Surprisingly, you may have a touch of remorse about things left undone.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll have a good time socially today if you don't insist on hanging around till the last dog's hung.

Your Birthday
July 21, 1975

Contacts you'll make this year can fatten your bankbook. Don't be hesitant if you're asked to join a new club or group.

HEALTH TIP from DEAN

Painful skin rashes resembling severe sunburn can be caused by the combination of certain drugs and chemicals reaching the skin and then being exposed to sunlight. Called 'photosensitivity', such reactions can cause painful burns which may require hospital care. Certain tranquilizers, antibiotics and birth control pills are involved. Check with your doctor or druggist to determine whether any drugs you are taking can cause photosensitivity before you expose yourself to sunlight.

9 Beauties To Compete For Farm Bureau Queen

Nine pretty girls are entered in the compteition for the 1975 Scurry County Farm Bureau Queen. The reigning queen, Miss Shelia Shaw, will be crowning the new queen in the Scurry County Coliseum Thursday, July 24th at approximately 8:30 p.m. This event follows the annual Farm Bureau barbeque which begins at 7:30.

Master of ceremonies for the queen's contest will be Jerry Neill, Minister of Music for First Baptist Church of Snyder. Mr. Neill will interview each contestant and during this time she will be judged on appearance, poise and personality.

The nine young ladies that will be making decisions difficult for the judges are: Trissa Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bailey, 3603 Fortieth Street, Snyder; Belinda Bridges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bridges, Route 2, Roscoe; Lynda Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rayburn Burgess, 3102 Denison, Snyder; Denise Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindy Clark, Route 1, Box 139-A, Snyder; Montica Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mullins, Hermleigh; La Ronna Culp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Joe Culp, Box 153, Hermleigh; Donna Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Gray, Jr., Snyder; Deanna Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Myers, Jr., Snyder; Denise Sandefur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.P. Sandefur, Jr., Route 2, Box 78, Hermleigh.

Trissa Bailey, 18, is a 1975 graduate of Snyder High School where she was active in Fellowship of Christian Athletes and was a member of the band. Some of the high school honors that Miss Bailey received are Band Sweetheart and Track Sweetheart. She was also voted outstanding F.C.A. Cuddle Member. She enjoys playing tennis and sewing.

Belinda Bridges, 17, will be a senior at Hermleigh this fall. Belinda is a very active student in her school having served on the student council for two years. She has also served as President and Secretary of F.H.A. and is manager of the girl's basketball team. Her hobbies include sewing, horseback riding and cooking.

Lynda Burgess, 19, is a 1973 graduate of Snyder High School. During her high school years Lynda entered the National Guild Auditions for six years and received five superior ratings including Top Critics Circle. She also received her high school diploma in piano at the auditions. Other duties that Miss Burgess performed include serving as Vice-President of the Vivace Junior Music Club, Rotary Club pianist, and was named Rotary Club Sweetheart. Army Seeking Subjects In 1967 LSD Experiments

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says some 1,500 soldiers and civilians took part in service-sponsored tests of LSD during the 1950s and '60s and that it is trying to track down the subjects to determine whether any suffered after-effects from the hallucinogenic drug.

In its first official announcement of the full scope of the experiments, the Army said Friday night it knows of 585 persons, mostly soldiers, who were tested directly by the military at the Edgewood, Md., Arsenal, Ft. Benning, Ga., Ft. Bragg, N.C., and the Dugway Proving Ground in Utah between 1959 and 1967.

In addition, it said roughly 900 civilians were subjects of Army-sponsored LSD experimentation between 1956 and 1959 at the University of Maryland Psychiatric Institute, the New York Psychiatric Institute, the University of Wisconsin, the University of Washington Medical School and the Tulane University Department of Neurology and Psychiatry.

As it has in previous statements, the Army stressed that only volunteers were used in the experiments. It said the tests, ended in 1967, were aimed at determining the effects of LSD on military performance.

An Army spokesman said the service has the names of the 585 persons who participated in the original series of tests and is trying to contact them to set up physical and mental evaluation of any after-effects.

But he said the Army has no list of the 900 or so others and will rely on the universities and hospitals involved to come up with their names.

The announcement indicated that the Army has not completed plans for the checkups, but it said they would have to be performed at several locations because of the large number of persons involved.

The National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council Medical Followup Agency and the Veterans Administration will be asked to help with the examinations, it said.

The examinations already have begun in a limited way, with an effort to examine 34 soldiers given LSD in tests at Ft. Benning in 1960.

Nineteen of those subjects have been examined at Walter Reed Army Medical Center here over the last year, and the results are expected to be known this fall after analysis is completed, the Army said.

Of the other 15 in the Ft. Benning group, seven have reported they are in good health, seven have not been located and one was killed in Vietnam, it said.

Attention to government-sponsored tests of LSD was renewed recently after the family of civilian Army scientist Frank Olson announced plans to sue the Central Intelligence Agency over an experimentation incident the Olsons say led to his death in 1953. He died in a fall from a New York hotel room.

The family says Olson had been given the drug without his permission, a contention disputed by a former CIA official who also was involved in the drug project.

Harris County To Hike Tax Rate

HOUSTON (AP) — The Harris County Commissioners Court has decided to hike the county tax rate five cents.

The court Thursday set a total 1975 tax rate of $1.96 per $100 valuation—a nickel over the 1974 rate.

Banker Is Sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — A former Dallas bank officer, who said most of the $500,000 he embezzled helped other people who would have defaulted on loans, has been sentenced in federal court to a five-year prison term followed by three-year's probation.

Donald P. Flynn, 50, a former senior vice president at Republic National Bank here was sentenced Friday. He pleaded guilty to one count of falsification of funds and one count of misapplication of funds.

"I don't think anybody has come before me who has caused more loss of money," U.S. District Court Judge Sarah T. Hughes told Flynn, formerly of Tulsa, Okla.

Internal Revenue Service reports said Flynn had personally received more than $200,000 of the money, Judges Hughes said. The two-count indictment said Flynn created a fictitious bank account and converted $7,000 of the bank's money to his own use.

Officials estimate the bank lost between $600,000 and $700,000 over a 13-year period.

Flynn moved from Tulsa to Dallas in 1958 to join the bank as a vice president.

Hobby Makes Appointments

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sens. Bill Patman, D-Ganado; Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler; and Grant Jones, D-Abilene, have been appointed to the Joint Advisory Committee on Government Operations.

The committee will study the organization of state agencies and departments and develop proposals to improve the state government's structure. The senators were appointed Friday by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe will appoint nine non-legislators to the committee, and the speaker of the House and the secretary of state each will appoint three members to the committee.

Miles Of Roads

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — There are more than 5,000 miles of "drivable" roads in Jamaica, an island about the size of Connecticut. This amount of mileage is explained by the fact that Jamaica is very mountainous and the roads wind around peaks, hills and valleys.
