Carolyn Kolas' partially clad body was found in an alley near Powell Street early Saturday.

Police seek leads in morning-walker murder

■ Officers ask women to pair up

Police are urging Midland residents to be cautious, not panicky, as an investigation into the murder of a local woman continues.

"We don't want people to panic," said Sgt. David Garcia. "We want people to use a little extra caution and we are asking for their help in solving this murder."

Garcia said police were working "around the clock" to solve the murder of 42-year-old Carolyn Kolas, whose partially clothed body was found by a motorist in an alley about 50 feet from Powell Street early Saturday. The motorist had been traveling in the 3000 blocks of Ohio and Michigan avenues.

Mrs. Kolas' throat had been slashed and her body unclothed from the waist down except for a pair of white socks. Her white tennis shoes, walking shorts and pepper spray were missing.

According to police and family, Mrs. Kolas had been out on her daily walk when the attack occurred. Her body was discovered 5 1/2 blocks north of her residence in the 3100 block of Mariana Avenue.

Police said there were no witnesses to the crime, but neighbors reported hearing a scream in the area about 4 a.m.

Garcia said police still did not have a suspect Sunday.

"This appears to be a random act of violence, a stranger-on-stranger crime," he said. "With this year's previous homicides, we at least had a clue or idea of who might be involved. However, we don't have any suspects in this murder so far."

Mrs. Kolas' death brings Midland's homicide total to four for this year.

Garcia said the police consider the incident a high priority case.

Serb acts defy a rising global condemnation

■ 2,000 Marines reportedly head for Adriatic Sea; foreign ministers to meet tonight.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnia's foreign minister and three colleagues were killed Sunday when rebel Serbs shot down their helicopter near the Bosnian-Croatian border. Serbs, defying escalating global condemnation, also seized more U.N. peacekeepers.

Croatian Serb forces claimed responsibility for downing the chopper, the Croatian Serb news agency ISKRA reported. The helicopter had traveled 10 miles from the besieged Bosnian government-held enclave of Bihac when it crashed just across the Croatian border.

Bosnian Serbs, confident U.N. hostages would shield them from a repeat of last week's NATO air raids on ammunition dumps, seized 33 more peacekeepers, all British, near Gorazde in eastern Bosnia. Five of the captured peacekeepers were later injured in a car accident, Bosnian Serb TV said.

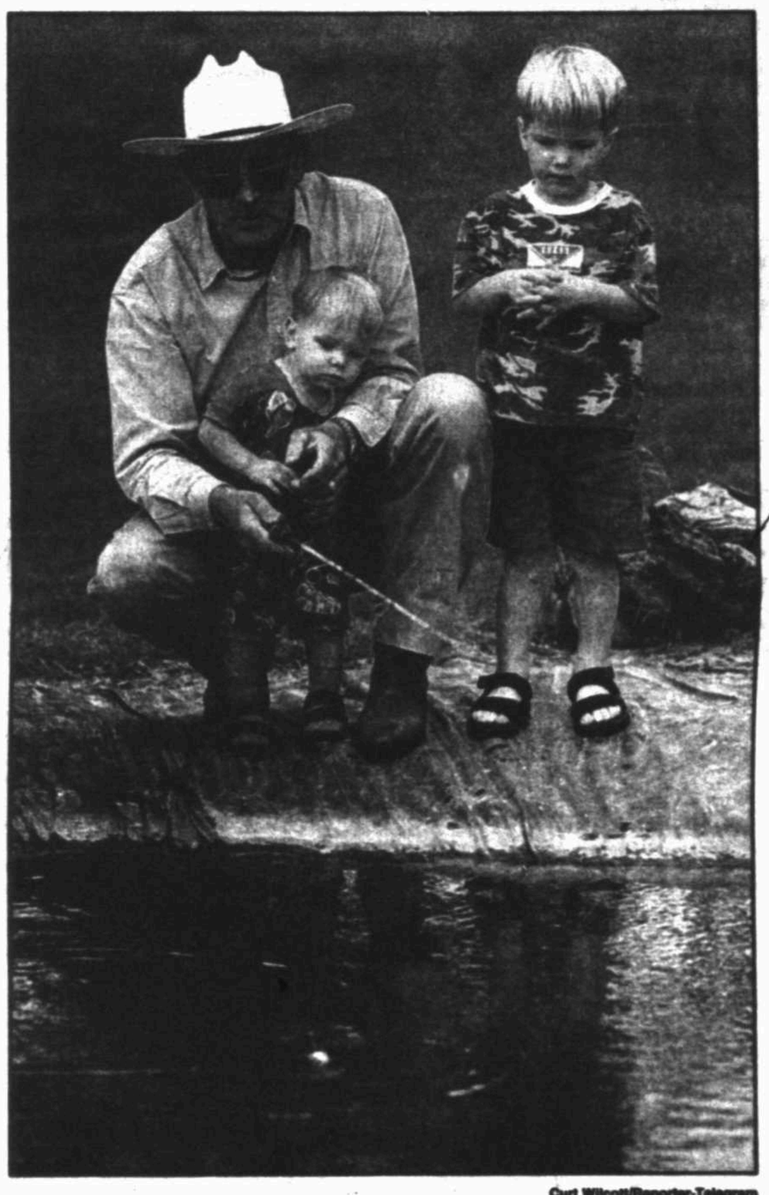

By nightfall, the Serbs held 317 U.N. personnel, the U.N. said, including more than 200 peace-

Veterans, both living and dead, who valiantly served in America's wars to preserve freedom and liberty are reminders to Americans of their "ownership in this country," the Rev. Hadley Edwards said in a pre-Memorial Day service in Midland's Southeast Senior Citizens Center.

"When you have ownership in a country or in anything, you treat it better," said Edwards, a Methodist minister who saluted veterans, especially black Americans, who have served their country in wars both at home and abroad.

Memorial Day, also is known as Decoration Day, is a patriotic holiday dedicated to the war dead — those who gave their lives for their country. The holiday, originally established to honor members of the military who died in the Civil War, has been

Severe storms, tornado slash San Angelo, injure at least 47

Associated Press

Severe thunderstorms, including at least one tornado, tore through San Angelo on Sunday, injuring at least 47 people.

The National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for the city about 5:30 p.m. after a twister was reported on the southeast side of the city. Large hail and high winds downed power lines and traffic lights and damaged buildings throughout the city.

At one point, power was said to be out of commission "all over town," said Officer Stephen Williamson of the San Angelo Police Department, which was operating on emergency power.

Hail "was piled up 6 inches high" in some parts of the city, said city public information officer Alex Tafolla. "It looked like we had a snowstorm."

Harvard student kills classmate, hangs self

Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Screams and sirens shattered the Sunday morning peace at Harvard University when a pre-med student stabbed a roommate to death and wounded a guest, then hanged herself in a bathroom at a dorm known for its eclectic inhabitants.

Many students emerged in tears, and most refused to talk about the attack in the Dunster House dorm, described by an aide to the housemaster as "the weirdest house on campus."

Sunday was the day for underclassmen to move out of the dorms and many parents, who had arrived to help with the move, waited anxiously outside.

The attacker was identified as Sinedu Tadesse, 20, of Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Friends said Tadesse had seemed anxious and unhappy as the academic year came to an close. Final exams ended Saturday. Graduation is June 8.

"I saw her last week and she seemed quite frustrated in the library studying and sort of had a glazed look on her face," said a fellow pre-med student who spoke on condition of anonymity.

First Assistant District Attorney Martin Murphy said Tadesse shared one room of their two-room suite on the building's second floor with 20-year-old Trang Ho, a Vietnamese native. Both were juniors.

Thao Nguyen, 26, was visiting Ho and sleeping in the other room when she was awakened by sounds of a struggle, Murphy said. He said she saw Tadesse stabbing Ho.

Murphy said Nguyen tried to Clouds, rain could mar holiday

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with an 80 percent chance of rain, a high near 70 and east winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 70 percent chance of rain and a low near 60, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain and a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 58, Sunday's high reached 83, compared to the record high for that date of 102 set in 1974. The record low was 49 set in 1992.

expanded to honor those who died in the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War.

"Too often," Edwards said in the ceremony, "many of us as young people have seen the flags draped over the caskets of men and women who have served in the armed forces."

Unfortunately the causes to which those men and women dedicated their lives often is not fully appreciated or understood, Edwards said. "And we don't know half the story."

In viewing a full-house of graying, balding and aging veterans, mostly from the 1939-1945 World War II era, Edwards said that there are many "young people out there ... in our community that need to know that you weren't always gray-headed or bald-headed, that you didn't always have a little bit more over the belt than you have now. They need to know that you played a significant role in the life of this country."

Among their number was 81-year-old L.S. Littlejohn, a retired Midland carpenter and house builder, who served in the Pacific Theater in World War II.

"I wouldn't take a million dollars for my (wartime) experience," Littlejohn said, "but I wouldn't give a penny for it again."

Littlejohn, who was into trucking and building in Paris, Texas, before he entered the Army and the war, helped build Camp Maxey, an infantry-training grounds, near Paris in Northeast Texas.

"When given an order, you don't question that order," Littlejohn said of his military service. "You do what you were supposed to do and question it later. You don't question orders; you carry them out. I have no regrets."

Even while the world was at war, Littlejohn said that he "got a chance to travel and to see things I wouldn't have seen — no other way.

"Coming out of the Army, I took advantage of everything they had to offer (through the GI Bill) so far as schooling and job training and all of that. I learned to be a professional photographer and (learned) the cleaning-and-pressing (business). I wouldn't have had an opportunity to learn that without going to war. It increased my knowledge. I kind of liked the military."

Littlejohn said that black veterans returned home after the war ended 50 years ago as "still second-class or third-class citizens" in America.

Soldier, sailor or airman — the warrior often gave "his life and everything for his country. It burned (angered) all of us." To Littlejohn's credit, he already was self-sufficient. "I didn't have to ask the other man for a job; I made my jobs. I was a builder." Veterans "got a chance to learn skills we never would have known."

Texas National Guardsman am Evans, who joined with Harold Sherman in forming the ceremony's color guard, noted in his historical talk that "World War II marked the (civil-rights) turning-point for blacks in the military and blacks in America."

The Rev. I.C. Cooper Jr., minister of Midland's Greater Saint Luke African Methodist Episcopal (AME) Church, is a post-World War II veteran of the U.S. Air Force. Cooper, a retired master sergeant, viewed firsthand the destruction of war in his world travels. He reflected on the Allied victory over the Axis powers.

"Had free-thinking people not been successful (against the fascist Axis powers), there would have been a subjugation of all the people, which would have resulted in widespread slavery and many other adverse human social conditions."

Cooper noted the importance for today's generation to study and understand the nation's history, particularly lessons learned from war.

"If our hindsight is not clear, then our foresight is dimmed, absolutely," he said, "and, ultimately, we will have no foresight at all."

Cooper said he would "dread to even think what it would have been like if the (Japanese) emperor, Hirohito, on the western boundary of the United States would have been successful (in winning the war and conquering America), and if (Adolf) Hitler and the Nazis on the eastern boundary of the United States would had been successful. None of the advances, none of them, would have been attained" in the United States or elsewhere. "There would have been more subjugation, more slavery, than the world has ever known."

Ellen G. Smith, executive director of the Southeast Senior Citizens Center, expressed her appreciation to the veterans. "We thank you; we appreciate you; we recognize you."

The ceremony was to help validate their (the veterans') worth and their value. "They have worth and they do have value. They preserved our freedom."

intervene and was stabbed herself, so she ran to the courtyard for help. Authorities said the weapon was a knife with a blade that folds into a wooden handle, but declined to relase further details until Monday.

Ho was pronounced dead at Cambridge Hospital. Nguyen was treated for superficial stab wounds and released.

Murphy said Tadesse ran into the bathroom, barricaded the door and hanged herself. She died later at a hospital.

Authorities declined to speculate about a motive, though they said there were no signs of problems between the roommates.

The two lived together last year and chose to be roommates again, friends said.

Karel Liem, an icthyology professor and housemaster at Dunster, said both women were serious students who worked hard and were in extremely good academically standing.

The school's newspaper, The Harvard Crimson, said Sunday night that it had received a note and a photograph, believed to be of Tadesse, on Tuesday.

"Keep this picture. There will soon be a very juicy story involving the person in this picture," the typewritten note said.

After the stabbings, the paper contacted Harvard police, who recovered the envelope and photo from a garbage bin outside the newspaper office. Investigators were expected to test both for fingerprints.

Harvard University and Cambridge police did not immediately return calls for comment.

"I just can't believe a student could do anything like this," said Aaron Zelman, a 22-year-old senior who lives in Dunster House.

Zelman, of Rye, N.Y., said shouts shattered the quiet about 8 a.m.

Students said Harvard University and Cambridge police burst into their rooms with guns drawn looking for Tadesse.

About 300 students live in the dorm, where another student committed suicide in the spring.

Karen Hullenbaugh, assistant to the housemaster, said Dunster House is known as "the weirdest house on campus: artistic, eclectic, off the beaten path. A lot of students around campus are saying they're not surprised it happened at Dunster House, if any house."

"It's not even real to me," said Nathan Edwards, 18, who was visiting for the night. "It's very difficult to fathom that while I was in there crashing on a couch this was going on outside."

Ingrid Bassett, a senior who lives in Dunster House, said she was awakened by a phone call from a friend elsewhere in the building who heard about the stabbing and called to tell her to lock her door.

Many Dunston House residents who left before the stabbing jammed the Harvard switchboard Sunday seeking information. Many parents also called, said Joe Wrinn, the university's spokesman.

Some students met Sunday with counselors and with university President Neil Rudenstine.

Elizabeth Kirnie, who came from Syracuse, N.Y., to pick up her daughter, said, "All I can imagine is the parents' reaction. Here I am feeling very safe and we woke up this morning to the sound of sirens and all I could think of was the parents."

was washed downstream but fished out by unidentified rescuers, according to KGKL Radio.

He was listed in serious condition Sunday night at Shannon Medical Center, a hospital official said.

The boy's ordeal apparently was the source of confusion earlier, when local officials said a girl had been swept away.

Trees were uprooted, power lines were downed and city officials evacuated Twilight Mobile Home Park, where there was "excessive wind damage to many mobile homes," Tafolla said.

"We've had some severe damage," he said.

At least 47 people were treated at three local hospitals, mostly for fractures and lacerations. Nine of those people were admitted, according to the hospitals' officials.

At least 30 people were staying at an emergency shelter at the Coliseum, Taffola said.

Thunderstorms also roamed the Panhandle, Lower Rio Grande Valley and Southeast Texas. As much as 10 inches of rain was recorded in central Liberty County, the weather service said.

There were flash flood watches and warnings in effect overnight from the Hill Country to southeast Texas.

Elsewhere, North Texas was mostly hot under partly cloudy to mostly skies Sunday.

Temperatures behind the front were in the 60s and 70s, while readings rocketed into the 90s ahead of the line.

Winds were mainly from the northeast to east at 5 to 15 mph in West Texas.

Recall of 8 billion cigarettes draws little smoke, fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — What if the nation's largest tobacco company called for a nationwide recall of about 8 billion cigarettes and nobody listened?

Despite Mailgrams to vendors and despite a legion of company officials dispatched to collect the cigarettes, smokers and retailers alike seemed unruffled or unaware of Philip Morris USA's recall announcement Friday.

While big grocery chains like Safeway in northern California pulled packs of Marlboro, Virginia Slims and Merit from their shelves, many smaller vendors around the country didn't. They said nobody told them they should.

"As far as business is concerned, we're not going to do anything until we hear from the company," said Raja Chamoun at AD Tobacco in San Francisco. "If we take Philip Morris cigarettes off the shelves, the store would be empty."

Mike Zeidan, owner of Michael's Pit Stop in San Francisco, took the same approach.

"I've heard the reports," he said. "But nobody told me not to sell them. You'd think you would hear from Philip Morris. But I didn't hear anything, so I didn't do anything."

Philip Morris issued a statement Friday afternoon, at the start of the long holiday weekend, saying it was recalling an estimated 8 billion cigarettes because of possibly contaminated filters that could cause wheezing and eye, throat and nose irritation.

Messages left Sunday for Philip Morris officials were not returned.

The company has sent Mailgrams to some vendors telling them to quit selling the possibly tainted smokes, advised consumers to turn in packs for a refund, and dispatched sales representatives to collect the cigarettes, saying it might take two or three days to contact stores.

Despite heavy news coverage, smokers continued to buy. As the weekend wore on, only a few turned in their packs or asked for refunds, some store owners around the country said.

"I've mentioned it to a couple of people (buying cigarettes), but they don't seem to care," Clarence Benson, owner of Benny's Liquor in Texas City, Texas, said Saturday. "All anyone cares about down here is the (Houston) Rockets."

Many smokers had not heard about the recall. Informed by reporters, some said they might be convinced to switch brands or cut back until it ends.

"It may sway me to cut back a little," Amtrak police Sgt. Kenneth Whitehurst said as he bought cigarettes at New York City's Penn Station to feed the two-pack-a-day habit he's had for 35 years.

At Fiddler's Green Tavern in New York City, Paula Lillis relaxed after work with a box of Marlboro 100's, ignorant of the recall.

"I probably will change," Lillis, a secretary for a construction company, said when told what it was about. "I'm going to read the newspaper about this."

keepers, most of them French, who were surrounded near Sarajevo and 30 U.N. monitors, some of whom were chained to potential NATO targets.

As the Serbs upped the stakes, frustrated U.N. officials demanded their masters in the world's capitals tell them what to do: stand tough or back away in the most humiliating retreat of the United Nations' 50-year history.

"We hope that we will get some guidance and backing," said U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko. "A lot of thought will have to go into our next step, because it will probably be the most important step the international community makes in this century."

Bosnian Foreign Minister Irfan Ljubijankic, a 42-year-old Muslim, died when his helicopter was shot down over Croatian Serb positions near Bihac in the northwest, Bosnian officials and U.N. spokesman Maj. William Taylor said. Taylor said it crashed near the town of Slunj, just west of the border.

Ljubijankic was the most senior Bosnian government official killed in more than three years of war.

Also killed were an assistant justice minister, an official at Bosnia's Zagreb embassy, an aide to Ljubijankic and the helicopter crew, said Miranda Sidran of the Bosnian Embassy in Zagreb, the Croatian capital.

"We lost four brave men today who were completely aware of the risk and insisted on going to Bihac," Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said in Zagreb.

The Muslim-led government forces in Bihac are battling a diverse army of rebel Serbs from Bosnia and neighboring Croatia, as well as renegade Muslims who reject the Sarajevo government.

On Sunday, the Serbs also shot at NATO planes and lobbed 10 shells into the U.N. "safe area" of Tuzla, decapitating one man at a bus stop and wounding another. Tuzla, a northern government stronghold, was the site where 71 people were killed and 151 wounded by a Serb cluster bomb Thursday.

In Sarajevo, the Serbs who severed electricity and water supplies on Friday cut the natural-gas supply too, government radio said. Without it, the city bakery could not bake the bread that serves as the staple for most residents, government radio said.

But a standoff between Serbs and French peacekeepers in Sarajevo ended when the Serbs withdrew overnight for reasons not immediately clear. French marines resumed control of a disputed bridge.

Four Serbs captured by the French during the standoff remained in U.N. hands. Serb commander Gen. Ratko Mladic told the United Nations that detained peacekeepers would be treated better if the Serbs were freed by 6 p.m. Sunday, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward. They were not released.

Across Europe, Western leaders met to discuss Bosnia. No decisions were expected at least until NATO foreign ministers meet Tuesday in the Netherlands. Foreign ministers from the five nations mediating the war plan to meet in the Netherlands tonight.

"The blue helmets either must be given the means to fulfill their mission, or they must be withdrawn," German Defense Minister Volker Ruehe was quoted as saying in Monday editions of Die Welt.

The German newspaper also reported, without naming sources, that American, British, French and Canadian commandos were preparing for possible rescue raids.

Cable News Network reported that 2,000 Marines from Camp Lejeune, N.C., were being transferred from exercises on the island of Sardinia to positions in the Adriadic Sea, where the aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt was headed. The Pentagon and Camp Lejeune would not immediately confirm the report.

France, which has lost 39 soldiers in the former Yugoslavia and has the biggest contingent in the 20,000-strong U.N. force, dispatched an aircraft carrier to the Adriatic Sea to back its calls for more robust defense. The carrier, the Foch, was accompanied by a missile-launching frigate and two transports.

In London, Britain's government said Sunday it will send more troops and hardware.

MURDER: Police urge caution

(From 1A)

"Due to the viciousness of the attack and the brutal death that this woman suffered, we are working non-stop to get this solved," he said.

Police Chief Richard Czech, speaking at a press conference Saturday, called the murder a "horrendous crime," and vowed to use all the department's resources to find the subject or subjects responsible for the murder.

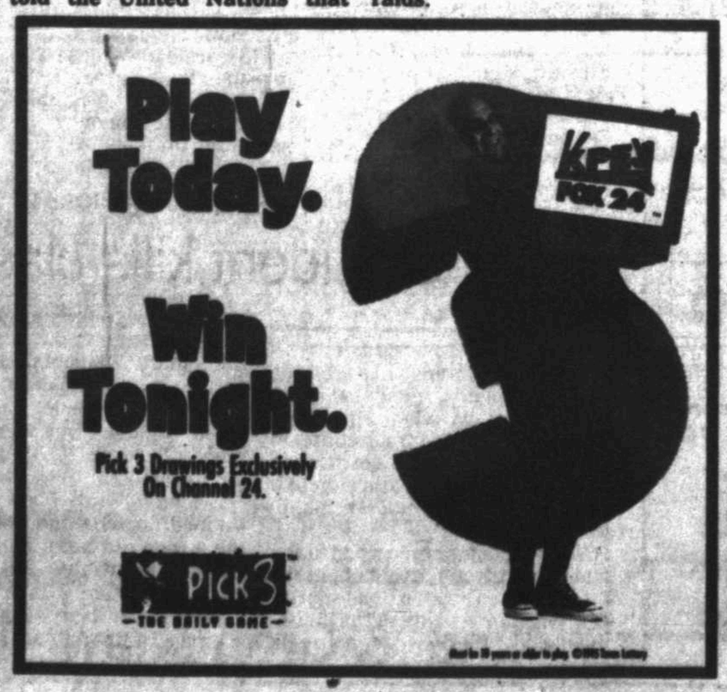

Garcia said the police are asking the help of residents who live in the area where Mrs. Kolas' body was found.

"We have several items missing," he said. "They might still be in that area. If anyone sees something that might be suspicious, they should contact police."

Garcia said all Midland residents should use caution and common sense when out walking or jogging.

"We want to raise people's awareness of what could happen to them and what precautions to take," he said. "People should not walk alone, especially after dark or before dawn."

He added residents should not walk or jog alone and should be aware of their surroundings and the people around them at all times.

Elections challenge Mexico's ruling party's hold on power

LEON, Mexico (AP) — An opposition businessman was favored to win a key gubernatorial election Sunday, posing another challenge to the ruling party's 66-year grip on power and its dedication to democracy.

Vicente Fox of the National Action Party, or PAN, was overwhelmingly favored to win the governorship in Guanajuato, a central Mexican state noted for its shoe factories, colonial mining towns and rural poverty.

Victor Cervera Pacheco of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, led in pre-election polls in the southeastern state of Yucatan, where voting also took place Sunday.

Except for minor delays, polls opened without incident in both states. Preliminary results were expected late Sunday night.

Observer groups claimed that in Yucatan, there were signs of vote-buying and voter intimidation, tactics the PRI insists it has abandoned.

The PAN's Yucatan candidate, Luis Correa Mena, warned Sunday morning that if the vote was marred by fraud, there could be protests and a repeat of political instability that followed controversial 1993 elections.

Fox warned last week that any attempt to steal the election here "would create serious difficulties not only for the stability and tranquility of Guanajuato but for the whole country. ... It seems to me that Mexico already has enough problems at this moment."

Those problems might destroy a party less entrenched than the PRI, which has ruled Mexico since 1929. The economy plunged into a deep recession in December, throwing hundreds of thousands of Mexicans out of work. Inflation and interest rates have surged.

Sensational scandals over murders, corruption and ties to drug traffickers have dogged the PRI — and possibly contributed to Fox's 2-1 lead in pre-election polls over the PRI's Ignacio Vazquez Torres.

The PRI did not admit losing a governorship in any of Mexico's 31 states until 1989, while the PAN claims Fox was cheated of Guanajuato's governorship in a 1991 election.

The PRI, with its broad network of labor, farmer and neighborhood organizations, won 30 of 32 races for Guanajuato state and local lawmakers last year, as well as 36 of 46 mayoral races.

National Action, only a minor irritant to the PRI during its first 50 years, won its first governorship in 1989 and scored a stunning victory in nearby Jalisco state in February.

Party President Carlos Castillo Peraza says the PAN can win control of Congress in 1997 and the presidency in 2000 — an ambition that no longer seems impossible.

Sunday's elections follow years of political disputes in both states.

In 1991, Fox rallied huge protests over vote fraud, prompting the federal government to force the supposed PRI winner to quit. State PRI lawmakers were pressured into naming a temporary PAN governor — an act that infuriated many ruling party members.

The 1993 gubernatorial election in Yucatan also was disputed. The PAN eventually dropped its protest of the PRI candidate's victory when the PRI accepted Correa Mena's victory in the race for mayor of Merida, the capital.

The World in brief

■ Rebels attack military base in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Tamil rebels attacked an isolated military base early Sunday, killing at least 22 soldiers and forcing many others to flee into nearby jungles, the military said.

Twenty-one rebels were also killed in the attack on Tharavikulam camp, 115 miles east of Colombo, said Lt. Col. S.A.P.P. Samarasinghe, a military spokesman.

Ten soldiers were wounded and 38 others were missing after the eight-hour battle, said another military official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

About 500 rebels set fire to part of the camp and stole many of its weapons, the official said. Military helicopters and planes bombed the jungles around the camp and the army fired artillery shells to defend the fleeing soldiers.

■ Armenia pursues nuclear plant reopening

MEDZAMOR, Armenia — Desperate for energy, Armenia is pushing ahead with plans to recommission a nuclear power station despite concerns that it could be a time bomb threatening the region.

Citing the republic's history of violent earthquakes, the United States has become the most vocal Western opponent of the Medzamor plant, scheduled to resume operations in July.

American officials say it has no containment dome. They also are concerned about the transport of uranium fuel from Russia to Armenia by air.

The government insists the plant is safe and wants the startup to coincide with parliamentary elections on July 5. Electricity for the war-weary Armenians is certain to be a vote-winner.

Spain's Popular Party wins over Socialists in elections

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The center-right Popular Party scored a resounding victory over the ruling Socialists in regional and local voting Sunday seen as a runup to general elections.

Popular Party leader Jose Maria Aznar said his party's triumph in 10 of 13 regions and 42 of 52 provincial capitals was a sign that the conservatives would oust the Socialists in general elections expected next year.

"We have reached the next-to-last step. The next will be the government of Spain," Aznar told thousands of flag-waving supporters outside his party's Madrid headquarters.

In elections for more than 8,000 city councils, the Popular Party won an average of 35 percent of the vote, according to official returns with 93 percent of the vote tallied. That would be a gain of almost 10 points since the last municipal elections in 1991.

The Socialists won 30.9 percent compared to 38.4 percent in 1991, while the communist-led United Left won 11.8 percent, up from 8.5 percent.

The Popular Party strengthened its control of Madrid, the nation's capital and largest city, while the Socialists maintained control of Barcelona, the country's second-largest city.

The Popular Party won the most votes in seven of the country's 10 largest cities and with more than 90 percent of votes counted had drawn even with the Socialists in Seville. The Basque Nationalist Party kept control of the northern city of Bilbao.

The Socialists currently hold power in 13 of Spain's 20 largest cities, compared to three for the Popular Party.

In the races for regional governments, the Popular Party led in 10 of 13 regions with 85 percent of votes counted. In 1991, it won only two. The Socialists were leading in Extremadura and Castile-La Mancha, while a regional party won control in the Canary Islands.

The Socialists currently control seven of the 13 regions and govern another in coalition. Four of Spain's 17 autonomous regions were not electing parliaments Sunday.

While acknowledging a setback, Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez stressed that the Socialist Party did better Sunday than in last year's voting for the European Parliament, when the Popular Party defeated it by a margin of 10 percentage points.

"The Popular Party has won in general terms, and we who know how to win and lose congratulate them on their success," he told supporters. But he said the Socialists still intended to win the general election.

The Socialists have held the national government since 1982. Since losing the majority in June 1993, Gonzalez's government has relied on the support of a small party from the northeastern Catalunya region.

Support for the Socialists has weakened after a succession of corruption scandals involving politicians and appointees from the party. This year, several former senior law enforcement officials were charged with having ties to death squads that killed Basque separatists in the 1980s.

Major quake leaves 2,500 trapped in rubble, officials say; hundreds feared dead

MOSCOW (AP) — As many as 2,500 people remained trapped under the debris of wrecked buildings and many were feared dead after an earthquake flattened a town on an island in Russia's Far East. At least 160 bodies were recovered by early today and the death toll was sure to rise.

Rescue workers reported hearing moans from under the rubble in the town of Neftegorsk, which bore the brunt of the 7.5-magnitude quake that belted Sakhalin Island early Sunday while most residents slept.

The ITAR-Tass news agency reported today that 300 people were confirmed killed in the quake, with around the same number hospitalized. The report could not be independently verified.

By early today, rescuers had recovered 160 bodies, including those of 11 children, and found 200 people alive in the ruins, said Russia's Emergency Situations Minister Sergei Shoigu.

The ministry said rescuers had taken at least 144 people to the hospital after one of Russia's strongest quakes ever. The casualty toll was expected to rise as rescue teams combed the remote Pacific island site.

Eleonora Budrina, a Moscow-based spokeswoman for the ministry, said Sunday that 2,500 people were unaccounted for in the town and many were feared dead or injured.

The quake, which struck the large Pacific island at 1:03 a.m. Sunday local time, was centered just offshore near its thinly populated northern tip.

Neftegorsk, population 3,500 and located 40 miles northwest of the epicenter, was destroyed. Other villages were damaged.

Raisa Mikhailova, municipal spokeswoman for the regional center of Okha, said 13 five-story houses made of prefabricated blocks collapsed in Neftegorsk, burying about 3,000 people. Hundreds of those buried were later saved, she said by telephone.

She said 224 injured people, including 42 children, had been brought from Neftegorsk to hospitals in Okha and Khabarovsk.

"The dead are being collected on the site in Neftegorsk. We don't know the exact number," Mikhailova said.

Moans from under the rubble were audible throughout the town, according to an unidentified ministry spokesman quoted by the Interfax news agency.

Sakhalin's deputy governor, Vitaly Gomilevsky, said at least 70 people were killed, Interfax reported.

In Okha, a town of 35,000 people located 55 miles north of Neftegorsk, balconies fell from two five-story buildings and many houses sustained cracked walls and broken furniture. Aftershocks rocked the region throughout the day Sunday.

The initial quake also ruptured an oil pipeline running north from Neftegorsk — which translates as "oil town" — and destroyed oil wells, spilling an unknown amount.

A special plane left Moscow on Sunday with a rescue team and equipment aboard. Camps were set up for those evacuated from the quake area and teams of medics and rescue workers were sent to the area, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Russian news reports said more than 500 rescue workers and dozens of helicopters and airplanes participated in the rescue effort, with more teams preparing to go to the area.

Rescue work reportedly was hindered by heavy fog.

Sakhalin Island, some 4,000 miles and eight time zones east of Moscow, is rich in natural resources — oil, gas, coal, timber and fish. Home to 750,000 people, it was closed to foreigners for decades because of its sensitive military bases.

Soviet authorities wary of possible spying ordered a fighter jet to shoot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007 when it strayed over the region on Sept. 1, 1983. All 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans, were killed. The jet fell into the Sea of Okhotsk off the island's southwestern coast.

A quake measuring magnitude 7 or greater is capable of widespread, heavy damage.

Hazing deaths lead to soul-searching over Japan's strict education system

TOKYO (AP) — A student outing in a remote fishing port. Heavy waves pounded a high concrete jetty. "Show your fighting spirit!" the older boys told their younger classmates, urging them to jump.

When it was over, four teen-age students had been swept away, and Japan was left pondering the price its youngsters pay for the rigid code of behavior in the nation's schools.

Tight discipline and strict standards are credited with helping Japan achieve a remarkable level of academic excellence. But unrelenting conformity, ritual bullying known as "ijime," and rigorous testing all combine to produce pressure-cooker conditions.

The drownings occurred more than two weeks ago on the remote island of Oshima, 70 miles south of Tokyo. Word took time to filter out.

When it did, it became front-page news. National newspapers reported over the weekend that just before the drownings, the younger boys had planned a meeting to call for a halt to hazing.

Authorities are still trying to piece together exactly what happened on the afternoon of May 13. The leap from a 30-foot-high jetty has been a spring ritual for years at Oshima Minami High School. It is considered a rite of passage, a test of courage.

Twelve boys made the jump this year, despite waves of up to 21 feet.

"Let's see who's the bravest!" was the rallying cry, according to an account last week in the Yomiuri newspaper.

Some of the boys balked, including at least one of those who drowned. But they apparently feared that if they refused to jump, they would face reprisal hazing in the dorms, where about two-thirds of the school's 150 students live.

Police identified the three drowned youths as Jin Matsuyama and Yuki Kitahara, both 15, and Kentaro Sato, 16. A fourth boy, 15-year-old Nobuto Takahashi, was missing and believed drowned.

They were the first known deaths associated with the leap, although two years ago one student was so frightened by it that he dropped out of school and returned to Tokyo.

Japan is prone to periodic bouts of soul-searching about the strictness of its educational system. But the Oshima deaths came at a time when debate was growing over bullying, excessive discipline and rote learning.

Commentators have criticized schools' emphasis on too much memorization, coupled with failure to teach ethics and encourage independent thinking. They note that top leaders of the cult accused in the Tokyo subway nerve-gas attack are products of Japan's best universities.

Last week, the Mainichi newspaper printed excerpts from the "suicide diaries" of a 13-year-old boy, despondent over being bullied, who killed himself last month. Police pledged to take a harder line in treating systematic bullying as a criminal matter.

Draconian school discipline, too, has been in the spotlight. Earlier this month, the principal of a private reform school was sentenced to six years in prison in the 1991 deaths of a 14-year-old boy and a 16-year-old girl who died of heat stroke after being locked in an unventilated metal container for two days. Police said the youngsters were being punished for smoking.

The Yomiuri on Saturday printed excerpts from one of the drowned boys' diaries, in which he described hazing including being forced to drink a concoction of cabbage, egg and oolong tea. The report said the freshmen had planned a meeting the very night of the tragedy to complain about hazing.

NATO bombing should urge end

NATO's bombing raid last Thursday against the Bosnian Serbs, its first in six months, was a justified use of force to safeguard the civilians of Sarajevo. By hitting an ammunition dump near the rebel capital of Pale, the alliance bolstered the credibility of the beleaguered U.N. mission in former Yugoslavia and signaled that escalating military pressure on Sarajevo would not be tolerated. With luck and follow-through, this action could save civilian lives, avert a messy U.N. withdrawal, and nudge along the painstaking search for a diplomatic settlement.

After the deadly mortar attack on the main Sarajevo market 15 months ago, a NATO ultimatum persuaded Bosnian Serbs to withdraw or turn over their heavy weapons in the hills around Sarajevo. It was one of this war's rare success stories, bringing months of relative peace to the besieged Bosnian capital.

Recently, the Serbs have been testing the agreement by reclaiming and redeploying their weapons. They have also increased the shelling of Sarajevo's civilians. Pressed by the United States, NATO has been eager to retaliate, but has until now been restrained by U.N. commanders in Zagreb and Secretary-General Boutros-Ghali. The U.N. has said it feared an escalation of fighting.

The U.N. mission is itself in trouble. Its credibility is almost exhausted, and the countries supplying troops, especially France, have talked about withdrawing their contingents. U.N. forces are under mandate from the Security Council to protect Sarajevo and five other Bosnian cities as safe havens. If the mission is to serve a useful function, Sarajevo is the obvious place to enforce the mandate.

Meanwhile, the Bosnian Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, is hinting he might talk about the internationally proposed partition map he previously spurned. Serbia's president, Slobodan Milosevic, is angling to win relief from sanctions by officially recognizing Bosnia. The latest air strike could interrupt this diplomatic activity, but in the longer term it tells the Serbs they will not be allowed to win an outright military victory, encouraging them to bargain for an acceptable compromise.

Three years of brutal warfare and frustrating diplomacy leave little room for optimism. But it is at least encouraging to see the U.N. and NATO coordinating their efforts to contain the conflict.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Talk of constitutional law is long overdue

These are great days for constitutional law. Those who talk it and those who judge it are discussing, of all things, federalism and the 10th Amendment to the Constitution. We have not had such a conversation for much too long.

Murchison

Last April 26, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down, 5-to-4, a federal law that banned gun possession within 1,000 feet of a school. The court (U.S. vs. Lopez) said criminal law was the province of the states. Congress was using for a legal fig leaf the argument that the constitutional grant of power to regulate interstate commerce implied the right to regulate firearms around schools. The court majority ripped away the fig leaf. This wasn't commerce — it was impermissible federal intervention.

Justice Clarence Thomas would have gone still farther. He called, in a concurring opinion, for reopening the whole question of how the Supreme Court has used the commerce clause to excuse congressional intrusions into new areas.

On May 22, the high court decided another federalism case. It was another of those tight 5-to-4 decisions. The court struck down an Arkansas constitutional amendment that limited the terms of Arkansas' congressional representatives and U.S. senators.

The jurisprudential byplay was fascinating. It was majority and minority inspected and pronounced on the foundational principles of the United States. One doesn't often hear Alexander Hamilton and the Articles of Confederation invoked in debate over what the Constitution means. In U.S. Term Limits vs. Thornton, one did.

Justice John Paul Stevens and the majority said that representatives to Congress "owe primary allegiance not to the people of a state but to the people of the nation." A state thus can't impose restrictions on the qualifications of its own representatives. Otherwise, there would be "a patchwork of state qualifications, undermining the uniformity and the national character that the framers envisioned and sought to ensure."

Up rose Justice Clarence Thomas to say, in effect: What a bunch of malarkey! "The Constitution simply does not recognize any mechanism for action by the undifferentiated people of the nation. ... the notion of popular sovereignty that undergirds the Constitution does not erase state boundaries but rather tracks them."

The 10th Amendment reserves to the states and people those powers not prohibited them or granted to Washington, D.C. According to Thomas, this gives states the right to limit their representatives' tenure. The Constitution, after all, doesn't say they can't or that Washington is the sole judge in these matters.

Thomas, a black man from the South, is becoming the court's foremost exponent of federalism, a concept that big-government liberals falsely disdain as anti-civil rights. His eloquent opinions in fact establish the 10th Amendment's intimate connection with freedom: the states as barriers to federal busybodiness and outright oppression.

The term-limits case is a hard one to lose inasmuch as the limitation of legislative terms is among the most logical reforms within grasp. The decision obviously doesn't preclude a constitutional amendment to limit terms. The state-by-state approach was useful as an end run around a Congress unwilling, even in the Gingrich age, to submit the matter to the people. Yet, clearly, the debate goes on.

As must — excitingly — the debate over what kind of nation this is. That debate is at the heart of the Lopez and Thornton cases. How do the states rate? What is their role?

For a good 60 years, the federal courts have refused to put much credence in the states' importance. Thomas says it's time the courts started doing so. His words ring out in the intellectual stillness to which habit and example have accustomed us when the question is federalism. The stillness shudders and cracks. Soon, it may perish altogether in the hum of voices asking those overdue questions: What kind of nation are we at last? Where does power come from? At this rate, we may yet find out.

CHARLEY REESE

Clinton plays 'trade charade' with Japanese

The American people are being scammed on trade with Japan again. President Clinton is playing the trade charade.

First, he announces trade sanctions. Next, before they go into effect, he will claim victory and won't put the sanctions in effect. He's done this with the Chinese, and he'll do it with the Japanese.

Reese

They won't give him, in actual concessions, a teaspoon of soy sauce, but Clinton will claim they have made concessions in the face of his threat. He also claimed that he talked the Russians out of selling a centrifuge to Iran, but the Russians had announced they had axed that sale a week or more before Clinton went to Moscow. Clinton seems to have problems connecting with reality these days.

In fact, if Clinton did apply the 100 percent tariff on 13 Japanese luxury cars, all he would accomplish is unemployment among Americans. It wouldn't bother the Japanese. They sell globally.

And it wouldn't result in more sales of Cadillacs or Lincolns. Most of the people would buy Mercedes or BMWs instead of Lexus or Infinitis.

It's also funny that Clinton, who lobbied so hard for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the World Trade Organization, is proposing to violate GATT. Under GATT, you can't unilaterally impose punitive tariffs. The Japanese have taken the matter to the WTO and will win— provided Clinton actually goes through with it, which I'm predicting he won't.

I'm not even sure the Japanese are being unfair to American-based international car manufacturers. Who, after all, is buying all those Japanese auto parts? – American firms. Who, after all, imports many Japanese cars? – American car manufacturers. Chrysler has a deal with Mitsubishi (some Dodge models are actually Mitsubishis). General Motors has a deal with Isuzu (some Chevrolets are actually Isuzus). Ford has a deal with Mazda.

Furthermore, I'm not going to blame the Japanese for not buying American cars until they put the steering wheel on the right side, which is where they are on Japanese cars. It's hard enough driving in Tokyo traffic without having the added and dangerous disadvantage of sitting on the wrong side of the car. The Germans, who put their steering wheels on the right side for Japanese sales, have been very successful in Japan.

And that's not all. Japanese do buy American-made cars – Hondas. Let us not forget that Japanese manufacturers employ about 600,000 American workers in manufacturing plants in the United States. While many American-based companies have been laying off Americans and moving manufacturing overseas, Japan has been building manufacturing plants in the States.

I suspect that Ford, GM and Chrysler have exactly the same trouble with the Japanese market that they have with the American market: customer resistance. It was only Japanese competition that forced the Big Three to make any attempt at all to improve quality and warranties. And they still have some ways to go. Check Consumer Reports magazine and you'll see that the majority of cars rated most reliable are still Japanese.

And since the Japanese have proven that American workers can produce a car of quality equal to one made by Japanese workers, there is only one logical conclusion to be drawn: The problem at the Big Three is not American workers but American management.

Too many big corporate managers these days worry about their stock options and personal compensation rather than about the future of their companies and their employees.

Don't forget Japan buys more American products than any other country except Canada. In 1992 we had trade deficits with China, Taiwan, Canada, Germany, Nigeria, Malaysia, Italy, Thailand, Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Angola, South Korean, Sweden, India, Brazil, Indonesia, Singapore, the Philippines, Switzerland, Algeria, Gabon, Hong Kong, Macao and Norway.

The problem is our government, not foreign trade barriers. We export jobs; they export products.

ANOTHER VIEW

Lights on Broadway are even brighter than before

Times Square has long been famous for its bright lights, but lately they have gotten noticeably brighter. A specialist in the sign business says there is more and brighter signage now than at any time since the earliest years of neon glitz in the 1920s.

As recently as 10 years ago, the dominant advertisers were Japanese and Korean manufacturers seeking to make their brand names familiar — Casio, Suntory and Samsung, among others.

Given the neighborhood's increasing sleaziness in those years, American advertisers had lost interest. The area has picked up since then and the Americans are back, particularly fashion ads (for example, Calvin Klein) and entertainment (MTV), but also Kodak, Hertz, Coca-Cola, Maxwell House and soon Morgan Stanley.

Morgan Stanley? Yes, the investment bankers are moving into a new building at 47th Street and Broadway, and must obey the special zoning rules for Times Square. Rules adopted in the 1980s for new buildings in the area require signs on their Times Square facades.

Specifically, they say how big the signs must be and how much light they must give off. Also, the signs must be animated, not static. Morgan Stanley's, now under construction, will include three long electronic ticker boards, 10 and 12 feet high, and world maps with digital clocks telling the time here, there and everywhere.

People who only dash through Times Square on their way to a show are missing a spectacular free show overhead.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 29, the 149th day of 1995. There are 216 days left in the year. This is Memorial Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 29, 1765, Patrick Henry denounced the Stamp Act before Virginia's House of Burgesses. Responding to a cry of "Treason!," Henry replied, "If this be treason, make the most of it!"

On this date:

In 1790, Rhode Island became the 13th original colony to ratify the United States Constitution.

In 1848, Wisconsin became the 30th state of the union.

In 1917, the 35th president of the United States, John F. Kennedy, was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1932, World War I veterans began arriving in Washington to demand cash bonuses they weren't scheduled to receive for another 13 years.

In 1942, Bing Crosby, the Ken Darby Singers and the John Scott Trotter Orchestra recorded Irving Berlin's "White Christmas" in Los Angeles for Decca Records.

In 1943, Norman Rockwell's portrait of "Rosie the Riveter" appeared on the cover of The Saturday Evening Post.

In 1953, Mount Everest was conquered as Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Tensing Norkay of Nepal became the first climbers to reach the summit.

Gramm is tempting target for Americans' criticism

It's tempting. We rarely get so obvious a target as Phil Gramm, the Texas senator who wants to become president.

Like most Republicans, Gramm is a champion of middle-class, grass-roots family values.

Royko

But he's been blushing lately because it's come out that he once invested a few thousand dollars in the production of a soft-porn film.

So it would be easy to needle Gramm about talking like a goody-goody after financially backing the sort of bare-bosom-and-butt movie that decent church folk condemn.

As much fun as that would be, there are a couple of reasons why I don't want to.

For one thing, I kind of like Gramm. Not for his politics, but because in speech and appearance, he bears a striking resemblance to Ol' Clyde.

Whenever I see or hear Gramm, I start feeling nostalgic about Ol' Clyde, who was the best basset hound a man could ever want.

I got him as a puppy, and even then I called him Ol' Clyde because he was the oldest, saddest-looking puppy there ever was.

First thing in the morning, I'd always look at Ol' Clyde because no matter how bad I might have felt, he looked a lot worse and that made me feel better.

When he barked, it was more like a low, mournful moan that would have made any burglar weep.

Ol' Clyde is gone now, but Gramm is still here. I don't know if he can be elected president, but I'm certain he'll get the sentimental vote of most basset owners.

The other reason I can't criticize Gramm is that he made the movie investment more than 20 years ago. And in those days, he was a Democrat. It was another 10 years before he switched parties.

That's an important distinction because Democrats have always felt that it is their duty to support the right of creeps to make grubby movies or publish foul books or present nauseating art exhibits. They argue that to preserve our rights of free speech and expression, we must defend the bad taste of creeps.

So any Democrats who criticize Gramm today would probably have thought he was a fine fellow 20 years ago.

Besides, it's a little late for us to get huffy about someone trying to turn a fast profit on an R-rated skin flick that was never made.

The fact is, for all the talk about family values, we're really a smutty-minded society. Just look around.

Every night, movies that would have once been considered porn are shown on several of the big cable movie channels. Are we to believe that only convicted sex fiends watch these films? Of course not. These channels wouldn't survive without the support of grass-roots Americans.

Who is renting those porn movies that are available in the video stores on the Main Streets of America's heartland? I'll tell you who — your pious Uncle Ned, that's who. And don't deny it, Ned, the store clerk has tattled.

Or consider that all-time favorite form of American humor — the dirty joke.

Every day, tens of thousands of dirty jokes are making the rounds of locker rooms, golf courses, bowling alleys, company lunch rooms, office cubicles, police and fire stations, barrooms and executive suites.

It's amazing. We never run out of new dirty jokes, or old dirty jokes with a new twist. And who creates and tells them?

Salesmen, the foot soldiers of the American economy, that's who. Salesmen have always been the chief custodians of the American dirty joke. Yes, respectable chaps, with suburban mortgages, credit cards, tuition bills, bald spots, wives, children, golden retrievers, car phones, Pings and IRAs.

They're the ones who walk off the green toward the next tee and say: "Hey, did you hear the one about the 6-foot Scandinavian beauty queen and the baldheaded dwarf?"

So who are we kidding about family values and all that? At any given moment, hundreds of thousands of outwardly upright Americans — maybe millions — are whooping and laughing about the 6-foot Scandinavian beauty queen and the baldheaded dwarf. Are they to be condemned? Let he who is without a smirk cast the first golf ball.

Nor should we be rapping Sen. Gramm for a long-ago smutty movie investment. If smut is good enough for our newest conservative Supreme Court justice, it's good enough for a hound-dog senator from Texas.

Besides, he has an ironclad excuse that millions of men can relate to.

His brother-in-law made him do it.

War records likely to influence 1996 election, many say

By Dan Sewell
Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — In the summer of '65, Phil Gramm was pursuing a graduate degree in economics, thanks to a last-minute scholarship arranged by a professor impressed by the youth's intellect.

A world away from the tranquil, tree-lined University of Georgia campus, American combat troops were arriving in ever-increasing numbers as U.S. intervention escalated in Vietnam.

Gramm, then 23, applied for a draft deferment, the first of five he would receive as he went on to earn a doctorate and become a professor at Texas A&M University.

When asked why he decided not to serve, Gramm has said, "It's an easy answer."

Born at Fort Benning, Ga., the son of a career soldier, Gramm had a brother in the Army who served in Vietnam. Gramm had decided after attending a military school not to make a career in the service. Plus, he was married and he figured his academic background would lead to an assignment doing research in the Pentagon. And, he says, he felt he supported the war effort as a teacher who also advised Reserve Officer Training Corps students at Texas A&M.

Yet, the question has come up repeatedly this year for the Republican presidential hopeful, who must overtake a GOP front-runner who was seriously wounded in World War II — Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas.

President Clinton overcame persistent questions about his draft record in 1992, but probably will face them again next year, especially if opposed by Dole in the general election.

In 1988, Dan Quayle had to explain how he won a rare slot in the Indiana National Guard after he graduated and lost his student deferments.

"It is a legitimate issue," said James Webb, a Marine veteran of Vietnam and a Reagan administration Navy secretary. "As a general rule, I think that if you were able-bodied and mentally capable during a time when people your age were dying on a battlefield and you did not go, you have a burden of explanation to people who are going to potentially vote for you to be a commander in chief."

Two Vietnam veterans in the Senate, ex-POW John McCain of Arizona and Bob Smith of New Hampshire, have campaigned for Gramm. Other veterans' reactions vary.

"Gramm is what is called a 'chicken hawk,' one who 'supported' the war, as long as he didn't have to put his life on the line," Gary Cadle of Columbia, S.C., wrote to The State newspaper.

"I understand the different feelings. That's an individual decision whether to fight or do something else to support your country," said Hank Dibble, a disabled Vietnam veteran in Winston, Ga. "If they chose their deferments legally and above board, I have no problem with that."

The 50th anniversaries of Dole's wounding in action and the end of World War II fall this year. It's also a year of Vietnam anniversaries — 30 years since the first U.S. ground troops were sent, 25 since the slaying of four youths during anti-war protests at Kent State University, 20 years since the fall of Saigon.

A new book by former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, conceding the U.S. policy was a mistake, has helped renew the debate. And Clinton is being pressured to establish full diplomatic relations with Vietnam, a move he will approach slowly because of his avoidance of the war.

"There's still a strong feeling surrounding that war," said William Weitz, a psychologist who leads group therapy sessions with Vietnam veterans at The Vet Center in Lake Worth, Fla.

Candidates shouldn't underestimate the influence that the military service question may have on veterans who vote in next year's primaries, he said. "Veterans do pay careful attention to the background of candidates."

New hurricane season begins on East Coast

By Tracy Fields
Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Lounging in the pool at his bayside apartment complex, 80-year-old Bob Frutkoff says he's all set for hurricane season.

"I don't even think about it," he said. "I don't pay attention to this hurricane business.

"Let the devil do his damnedest," he added. "I'm no youngster. And you can't live scared."

Maybe not, but Max Mayfield of the National Hurricane Center would prefer that Frutkoff and other coastal residents felt at least a little wariness.

"People who have not experienced the core of a major hurricane have a hard time imagining it," the veteran forecaster said.

The six-month Atlantic hurricane season begins Thursday, preceded by clouds of complacency and the warnings of officials worried about protecting people and property.

Thirty percent of Frutkoff's neighbors on the barrier island of Miami Beach failed to evacuate as Hurricane Andrew menaced the area almost three years ago. The storm ultimately plowed across southern Dade County, killing 15 people and causing nearly $16 billion in damage to insured property.

"If it had been 20 miles north, the damage and loss of life would have been much greater," Mayfield said.

He advises coastal residents to find out whether they live in an evacuation zone and what to do if ordered to leave. Frutkoff's barrier island neighborhood is supposed to empty for any hurricane, even the weakest.

Bette Goldberg, who lives in the same Miami Beach high-rise, doesn't care.

"My plan is to stay in my apartment unless my daughter makes me leave," she said. "The shelters are pretty awful, I hear. I haven't been, but that's what I hear."

Under some circumstances, Goldberg's plan might not be a bad one — if her building is sturdy.

"There's going to be traffic jams," Mayfield said. "And that is where we're afraid the next large loss of life is going to occur."

Dr. Bob Sheets, the hurricane center's former director, noted in a presentation at the National Hurricane Conference in April that a recent study estimated it would take more than 80 hours to evacuate southeastern Florida.

"It is becoming more difficult each year to evacuate people from barrier islands and other coastal areas because road systems have not kept pace with rapid population growth," Sheets wrote. "Keep in mind that 80 hours before Andrew struck South Florida, it was barely a tropical storm and equally likely to strike anywhere on the eastern coast of Florida."

Majority of Americans believe O.J. is guilty, poll results show

By Howard Goldberg
Associated Press

■ More national news/3B

NEW YORK — Most Americans are fairly sure O.J. Simpson is guilty, although one-third think murder charges should be dropped if the jury can't reach a verdict, according to an Associated Press poll.

Twenty-one percent believe Simpson killed his ex-wife and her friend — up from 14 percent in January — and an additional 40 percent think he probably did. Twelve percent say the charges are probably not true and 6 percent say definitely not.

The rest are uncertain. "Don't know" responses dropped just 5 points after four months of testimony.

If the jury deadlocks, 59 percent say the prosecution should start over with a new jury, as would ordinarily be done in a murder case. But 33 percent would oppose a retrial, including six in 10 blacks, five in 10 of those who are following the case very closely, and even two in 10 of those fairly sure of Simpson's guilt.

The poll found evidence of declining interest in Simpson's trial, with 29 percent saying they're following it closely, down from 38 percent in January.

Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants, polled a random sample of 1,004 adults by phone May 17-21.

The trial by then had shifted into repetitive, arcane testimony about scientific blood analysis. And for the four previous weeks, the Oklahoma City bombing had displaced the Simpson trial as the lead story on most TV newscasts, said Andrew Tyndall, whose Tyndall Report monitors the nightly network news.

"You could easily claim it is being flogged to death," Tyndall said. "The media overplayed it and when something of real importance came along, people asked themselves, 'What was I doing wasting my time on this?'"

An overwhelming 84 percent said the news media are giving the Simpson case too much attention. Nevertheless, one in four people who hold this view report they are following the case closely.

"What people say they want and what they actually do are not the same thing," said Jay Mattlin, director of news audience research at NBC.

He said ratings for "Dateline NBC" segments showed that running a Simpson story caused no drop in numbers of viewers.

Then why do only 7 percent say they are following the case "very closely," and 71 percent say they are not following it closely?

People may be trying to give a socially acceptable response, like the exaggerated number who tell pollsters they vote. Or, despite knowing all the personalities and oddities of the Simpson case, they may think they're not following it closely because they've tuned out mountains of dry data and DNA details.

More findings:

■ People following the trial very closely are twice as likely as others to still consider Simpson a hero and role model.

■ Blacks are about four times as likely as whites to doubt the charges, and twice as likely to oppose a retrial and to think of Simpson as a hero and role model.

■ Only three of the 1,004 respondents said the news media weren't providing enough coverage. Who are these people? Two men and a women who think the charges are probably not true and Simpson is still a hero.

Complaints rise over high phone rates, FCC says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Between appointments, Mary Viar dashed to a pay phone in Hagerstown, Md., to wish her daughter in Pittsburgh a happy birthday. A week later, she got the bill: $21.39 for her 22-minute call.

For the same amount, she could have called Paris and talked for half an hour.

"I was shocked," recalled Viar, who had never heard of Polar Communications, the company that carried the call. "But I went ahead and paid because I figured it would go against my credit."

But because she felt "ripped off," Viar filed a complaint to the Federal Communications Commission.

In the last year, the FCC has received 4,280 complaints about pay phones and hotel phones. The complaints have been increasing and the majority involve claims of excessive charges.

"They are the No. 2 source of complaints from consumers," said Kathleen Wallman, the commission's top telephone regulator. The No. 1 complaint is "slamming," the unauthorized switching of people's long-distance companies.

The commission is looking for ways to toughen rules to protect consumers against price gouging, said Wallman, chief of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau.

Behind each pay phone in the country is a company responsible for the service — from carrying calls to providing operator assistance.

Hundreds of companies are in this business — including the nation's three big long-distance carriers, AT&T, MCI and Sprint. The smaller companies serve hundreds of thousands of phones.

The big three, whose rates are comparable and considered low by federal regulators, are not the problem. The problem, says Wallman, is companies like Bethesda, Md.-based Oncor Communications, whose rates are three to four times as high as those of the big phone companies.

Gift of giving ageless

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

If there is a secret to life, for Midland senior citizen Rusty Gifford, 84, it is avoiding the temptation to complain about what cannot be helped and sharing one's blessings with others.

At an age when most people are in need of assistance from others, Gifford spends part of his time caring for others. He spends time with nursing home residents who have outlived friends and family.

Gifford's current project, since he is physically active and still drives, is helping a Midland woman with a broken hip get to the grocery store, the bank, doctor appointments, etc.

A Mason for over 50 years and a member of the Downtown Lions Club, Gifford lives by the credo: "What we have done for ourselves alone, dies with us. What we have done for others and for the world, is immortal," he said.

"My fellow man has always been an obligation to me," Gifford said.

"If you can't help someone else, you might as well throw in the towel — or call Newnie Ellis," Gifford said.

Even on days when exercise is difficult, Gifford walks his neighborhood — 14 blocks each evening — and is thankful for the ability to do so, he said. "If you don't think you're well off, just look around you. And you don't have to look very far.

"I know a lot of people who didn't make it this far," Gifford said.

After a long career in law enforcement — as a highway patrol officer in Midland — and later as a businessman and former mayor of Midland, Gifford now has time to wax philosophical.

He tries to be friendly to everyone he meets, offering light-hearted encouragement in case someone is suffering under life's burdens. "Anything you can do to just lighten his load a little."

One bit of advice Gifford passes out, is to be thankful for the blessings one has. For every problem and disability a person has, there are many more that the person does not have.

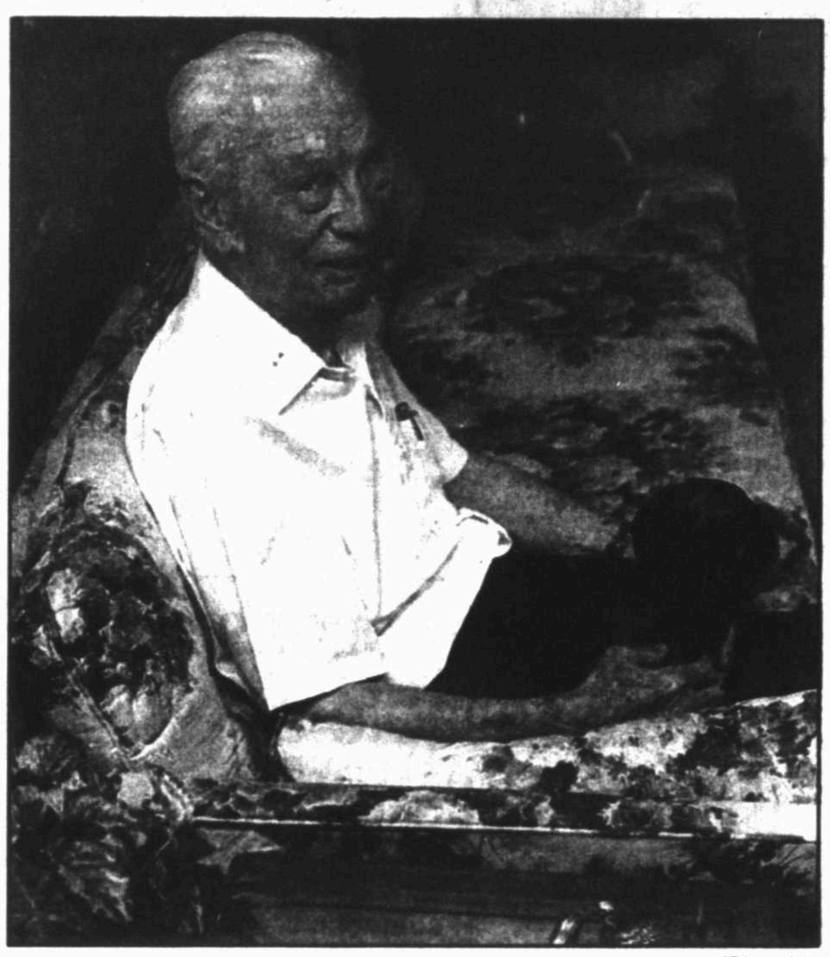

"Sometimes I think, we're kind of spoiled in this country," he said. If a person were to use those gifts he has in the service of others, one's own problems might seem less severe.

For Gifford, the solution is clear. "I'm not going to sit here and not help," he said.

Gifford has been active in the First Baptist Church for many years, and has served on a committee dedicated to assisting less-affluent families in the community.

Among the things Gifford gives thanks for is the ability to live in relative comfort in this city.

"Midland has been good to me — it's been very good to me."

Cat watches over a cake decorated with a whisker-licking mouse.

The guest of honor received catnip and a cake

Associated Press

HAYS, Kan. — The guest of honor curled up on the restaurant table. No one moved him. The birthday cake was decorated with a mouse. No one objected.

After all, a cat that's lived 24 years can pretty much do whatever he wants.

I.B. Dent began celebrating his tomcat's natal day when the black and white beast turned 21 — "Old enough to go to the bars," as he said.

"Every year I say it's going to be his last birthday party, but then he lives another year," Dent said.

Cat's deaf, and he doesn't see very well any more, but he's in great shape for his age, according to longtime friend Mary Ann Thompson, president of the board of the Humane Society of the High Plains.

At his party Wednesday night, Cat relaxed on his red-and-white blanket at center table, watching lazily as his guests enjoyed the white, rodent-decked birthday cake.

He graciously accepted the catnip toys and cards, mindful of his person's promise that he'll never own another cat.

Thank You Note ...

A lot is written these days about angels. Do you believe? Where are they? etc ... I wish to share an experience I had Sunday afternoon, May 21. I am a senior citizen with a heart problem that sometimes makes it a bit difficult for me to walk unassisted.

Leaving the hospital (Midland Memorial) after visitng my husband, a patient there, I realized I had extended my visit too long. The emotional stress of leaving him was taking its toll on my ability to walk.

As I often do when I face a dilemma (or have a joy to share or whatever) I whispered a prayer to God ... "Please help me be able to reach my car."

Three teen-age young men were walking down the hallway passing me. I asked them if I was in the correct hallway to reach the Garfield parking lot. They told me that was where they were going and they would be glad to show me the way. I asked one of the young men if I might hold his arm, which he graciously extended. When we reached the outside, they told me they would be glad to walk me to my car, which they did.

As I settled into my car, I thanked God for the Three Angels who had helped me. I especially want to thank the three who helped me without reservation.

— Reta A. Ware

I came to the Tall City from Austin three years ago and likened their differences to that of Yosemite National Park and a cavalry oupost named "Dusty Gulch."

Tall City? Yeah sure, I used to think.

I think it's fair to say that Midland is no Yosemite in terms of physical beauty. What makes Midland tall are its people.

They say travel teaches tolerance; It has taught me more than that.

Recently, I secured a move to the East coast where job opportunities look more favorable.

It was astounding, though, how I noticed a progressively friendly bunch of folks as I traveled back through Texas and finally to Midland.

I never realized how lucky I've been these three years.

I never realized how nice it is to be a recipient of all those "howdies" and "Can I hep ya's."

It seems to all come down to one thing in the end: People.

And though Midland, Texas, is going to be hard-pressed to be qualified as the "Oasis of the Southwest", it will qualify in my book as an Oasis of Friendship. It's a place where people care about other people. Thanks, Midland.

— Gary Gray

JIMMY PATTERSON

Playing tug-of-war with one's emotions

An unseasonal chill filled the air that morning. Children everywhere were laughing, running about and, of course, spreading "cooties," which, I really think, is what kids like to do most. Oh, they'll say they don't, but for an elementary-age girl to get cooties from an elementary-age boy, well, now that's pretty cool.

Patterson

Anyhow, I've gotten off the subject, which today deals with one of the surest signs of the coming summer. It is called Field Day in these parts, and, I'm sure, parts elsewhere. If you've long since forgotten, Field Day is the day when small children get ribbons. They have to run a few races first, but the main goal of Field Day is to receive these cherished ribbons. The more blue ones you can hang from your clothing, the better and prouder you'll be for it.

They run races at Field Day that the sacred University Interscholastic League would probably not exactly sanction as official, but the kids have fun.

What is perhaps most pleasurable about Field Day is watching the kids who are a bit slower than the others trying just as hard as the ones who have been blessed with swiftness. Seeing the slower kids give it their all makes Field Day a charming event.

For all the joy and happiness Field Day bestows in the hearts of all who attend or compete, there is but one memory from my earlier days that will forever grate in my memory. It is why I get a lump in my throat and a knot in my stomach when I attend Field Day at my kids' school. It is what takes away all the fun from Field Day for this dad.

From the time they first put that rope in my hand when I was 10 until I stopped competing in Field Days a few years later, I was ALWAYS on the losing Tug-of-War team. Always. And I have never, ever forgotten. It still bugs me, especially at this time of year, that I never earned a blue ribbon in Tug-of-War. I never even got a red ribbon or a white ribbon. As I recall, we always got the brown ribbon, something school officials invented specially for my Tug-of-War team which, as you may recall, ALWAYS lost.

I've come to accept it: It's a given that I'll never win any weightlifting competitions. In fact, I'm sorry to report that the Respected Deputy, Barney Fife, and I are the exact same height and weight. I'm so skimpy I don't even qualify for some rides at Six Flags.

But getting back to grade school, being on the losing tug-of-war team year in and year out is much too much emotional baggage to heap on one person. It got to a point for me, in fact, that others would groan every time I was named to their tug-of-war team. It's not that they didn't like me. It's not that they knew I wouldn't exactly be pulling my weight. It's just that the larger guys in grade school — and especially the larger girls — knew if I was on the team, they could forget about advancing to the next round.

Having me on the Tug-of-War team was like having Walter Mondale on the presidential ballot in 1980. Everyone knew I was there, but no one really thought I had a chance to make much of a difference.

Through all the pain and suffering I've had to endure through the years, being the shortest, skinniest kid on the team that ALWAYS loses makes a short, skinny adult appreciate those physically disadvantaged kids who try their hardest on Field Day.

DAVE BARRY

Gearing up for the family's big summer vacation

Parents: School is out, which means it's time to make those summer-vacation plans, load up the family car and take off, quickly, before the kids get home.

Barry

I am of course joshing. You should take the kids; there's nothing quite like putting the whole family into the car and hitting the open road, leaving your worries behind, driving mile after carefree mile, sometimes getting as many as three carefree miles before everybody in the car hates everybody else and gunfire breaks out in the back seat.

Yes, medical emergencies can occur on even the best-planned family trip. That's why, before you set out, you should familiarize yourself with the: OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT CLASSIFICATIONS OF BAD MEDICAL THINGS THAT COULD HAPPEN ON YOUR VACATION

I refer here to the International Classification of Diseases (ICD), which is the system used to report medical problems to U.S. government agencies. Alert reader Denise Martin sent me a copy of the ICD, which classifies every conceivable kind of medical problem, including the following, which I am not making up:

E845 — Accident in spacecraft
E912 — Bean in nose
E966 — Beheaded by guillotine
E906.8(cq) — Butted by animal
E842 — Glider fire
E915 — Hairball
E908 — Injured by cloudburst
E912 — Marble in nose
E906.8(cq) — Pecked by bird
E844 — Sucked into jet aircraft

Do not let this list alarm you. Statistics show that, on any given vacation trip, your family is likely to experience no more than four or five of these emergencies — even fewer, if you exercise strict parental discipline ("Jason, you let your brother out of that guillotine RIGHT NOW, or we are NOT stopping at the Dairy Queen").

Speaking of sharp objects, you'll want to be especially careful if your vacation destination includes a rain forest. I say this because of an alarming experience I had last summer when the Barry family held a reunion on the Olympic Peninsula in Washington. One afternoon a bunch of us Barrys packed some healthy trail provisions in the form of a large box of Cheez-Its and drove to the Quinault Rain Forest, which is one of those nature preserves where they put up lots of informational signs with drawings of specific wildlife items that you never see anywhere except on the signs.

For example, if the sign says that the area is the natural habitat of the River Otter, you can be sure that there will be no River Otters within miles of it. The River Otters, who can read at a sixth-grade level, will all be deliberately hanging around the sign for some OTHER animal, such as the Toe-Sucking Bigtail Bat, which meanwhile will be hanging around yet ANOTHER animal's sign. This pattern continues throughout the animal kingdom, forming what zoologists call the Great Chain of Totally Incorrect Nature Signs.

Anyway, we went to the Quinault Rain Forest to expose the younger generation of Barrys to nature and teach them to appreciate the vital ecological importance of our dwindling rain forests, without which the world would soon run completely out of mildew. The first thing we saw, on arriving in the rain forest parking lot, was a bulletin board with a recently tacked-up notice that said, I swear:

ATTENTION!!
THIS PERSON IS KNOWN TO BE IN THIS AREA.
(This was followed by the person's name and physical description, then:)
LAST SEEN WEARING EARRINGS, A TATTOO (ON SHOULDER), CAMOUFLAGED PANTS (MILITARY TYPE), AND A VEST. CARRYING A MACHETE.
THIS PERSON HAS ASSAULTED A GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE AND IS CONSIDERED DANGEROUS.

As you can imagine, this notice put something of a damper on our rain forest experience. It's difficult to fully appreciate the habitat of the Northern Flying Squirrel when you are expected at any moment to encounter the Camouflaged Machete Loon.

Nevertheless we followed the little nature trail and read all the informational signs, which appeared to have been written by graduates of Extremely Creative Writing 101. For example, at one point, my brother Sam and I were munching Cheez-Its and reading a sign that said, quote:

"Lean your head back; peer into the forest canopy. Search for the subtle activity and listen as the gentle breezes muffle the sounds of life above."

"Are you gonna do that?" I asked Sam.

"I'd be afraid that a squirrel would go to the bathroom on my face," he replied.

For some reason, I feel compelled to point out here that Sam is a Presbyterian minister.

Anyway, we got out of the rain forest without any mishaps, and I'm sure that by now the machete person has been captured by the authorities or eaten by otters. So you and your family probably have nothing to worry about this summer; just relax, have fun, and enjoy a totally carefree vacation, wherever you roam, from Sea to Shining Sea. Speaking of which, E-906.3 is the ICD code for shark bite.

Virtual distractions now available at the dentist's office

By Vanessa Ho
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE— Dentist-phobes may recognize this scene:

Reclining in the chair and bracing for the drill, you see a poster of some peaceful nature scene on the ceiling, taped there to calm you.

Yeah right, you scoff, as the dentist approaches with sharp metal things.

Like that's going to relax me.

Enter the virtually real dentist visit. Hoping to reduce the fear of words like "root canal," a growing number of dentists are giving patients high-tech glasses that let them watch movies and music videos or play games during dental work.

Dentists say the glasses help distract and relax patients like Pam McHugh, who says she needs nitrous oxide just to calm her anxiety when she visits her periodontist.

"It's the drill. It's the noise, the smell," said McHugh, a 47-year-old homemaker. "When my teeth are being drilled on, it's the worst. I jus. come unglued. It drives me nuts."

But last month when McHugh visited her dentist for crown work, she donned the goggles and watched "Fried Green Tomatoes." Several times she laughed and cried so hard her dentist asked if she was OK.

After her two crowns were done, she begged to stay a little longer — to finish the movie.

"The glasses really took my mind off of what was going on and helped relax me," she said.

Made by Virtual i-O, a Seattle company, the "Virtual i-glasses" that McHugh used to calm her nerves are similar to high-tech consumer versions and to the type of headsets used for a three-dimensional, virtual reality game at Entros, a Seattle club with hip, elaborate games.

The head-mounted device, which sells for about $649 to dentists, is lightweight and comfortable, and consists of two small screens in front of the eyes, a black, wraparound shade and headphones. It can be wired to a VCR, TV, PC, game machine or intra-oral camera for up-close and personal mouth shots. The picture is generally sharp and clear.

Since early this year, Virtual i-O has sold about 3,000 dental glasses nationwide. The company also makes consumer glasses with "head-tracking" and 3-D vision.

Virtual i-O isn't the only company that makes the glasses, but Patterson Dental Co., the nation's largest dental supplier, distributes only the Virtual i-glasses.

You can expect to see them cropping up in doctor's offices soon, too, because Virtual i-O has started marketing them for use during such procedures as kidney dialysis, chemotherapy and liposuction.

"If someone's watching 'Jurassic Park' I want them to tell me when certain parts are happening, like when the lawyers is about to be killed, so they aren't jumping out of their seat."
— Ken Burnett, dentist

Virtual i-O president and co-founder Linden Rhoads said the success in national sales reflects a "gut-level reaction" against going to the dentist.

"None of us like to go to dentists," Rhoads said. "I think anyone would rather watch the 'Barbra Streisand HBO Special' or reruns of 'I Dream of Jeannie' than the bright lights and drills."

Anxiety often results from previous bad experiences and fear of the unknown rather than actual pain, dentists say. Many have tried other ways to relax patients, including letting them listen to Walkmans or watch a TV mounted in the ceiling.

But dentist Ken Burnett, who worked on McHugh's crowns, says Virtual i-glasses are better because patients can't see what he does to them as much.

"When you're having dental work done, you don't have anything to do with your eyes but to watch what I'm doing," he said.

"You're waiting for something to happen, but you don't know what it is, and watching the unknown doesn't help any."

He offers the glasses at no extra cost, usually to patients undergoing longer procedures, such as crown or bridge work. His small library includes computer animation videos, a country and blues music video, "Forrest Gump" and "Four Weddings and a Funeral." He also encourages patients to bring in their own movies — as long as they aren't too scary.

"If someone's watching 'Jurassic Park,'" Burnett said, "I want them to tell me when certain parts are happening, like when the lawyer is about to be killed, so they aren't jumping out of their seat."

"The only downfall," said Jan Dacy, a 28-year-old patient who recently watched "Forrest Gump" while receiving a crown, "was not being able to finish the movie."

Cliches can drive a person just plain nuts

By David Grimes
Sarasota (Fla.) Herald-Tribune

Let me state at the outset that I enjoy a ringing cliche as much as the next guy.

Sure, there was a time, some years back, when the sound of the words, "Have a nice day!" vibrated me like a dentist's drill boring into a sore tooth.

But after you've heard the phrase repeated an average of 15 times a day for 10 years or so, the nerve-damaging qualities of the words begin to fade and grow less pronounced until the day finally comes when a cop says, "Have a nice day" after handing you a $90 speeding ticket and you say to yourself: Wasn't that thoughtful?

And you decide that the words, "Have a nice day" are not only jampacked with kindness and sincerity, but that they also possess a wondrous, lyrical quality as if they had been plucked, fully formed, from a Shakespearean sonnet.

So you start saying, "Have a nice day" every chance you get. You say it to your boss after he yells at you for missing yet another deadline, you say it to the fast-food clerk who gives you a quarter pounder even though you specifically ordered a double cheeseburger, you even say it to the automatic teller machine.

And this is as it should be.

Because if we started thinking too deeply about the sentiment behind cliches such as, "Have a nice day," the fabric of society would unravel faster than a Russian suit.

The most popular cliche in Florida is, "Hot enough for you?"

The instinctive response to this question is, of course, to grab the person who said it by the throat and shake him violently back and forth while screaming "YES ... IT ... IS ... HOT ... E ... NOUGH ... FOR ... ME!"

While this may dissuade the person from saying, "Hot enough for you?" again anytime soon, it tends to draw a lot of alarmed stares from the people standing near you in the supermarket express line.

It is indicative of the permissiveness of American society that people can run around in public braying, "Hot enough for you?" without any fear of punishment.

I am fairly certain that if someone said, "Hot enough for you?" in Singapore, it would not be long before that person's pants were bunched around his ankles and a moist rattan cane was whistling a merry tune.

This never happens in Florida. Here, when someone says, "Hot enough for you?" the correct response is a hearty "I'll say!" For added dramatic effect, it is also OK to sweep your hand across your forehead as if you were wiping away imaginary beads of sweat.

Tragically, some Floridians interpret the, "Hot enough for you?" remark as an invitation for additional comments about the weather.

Lately, the preferred comeback seems to be, "Gosh, yes. And can you believe it's only May?"

Well, if you want to know the truth ... yes, I can believe it's only May. You see, I've got this thing called a CALENDAR on my DESK and it says right at the TOP in big black LETTERS and name of the MONTH which in this case happens to be ... (bf) MAY!!! (end bf)

Also — and, please, try to stay with me here — there is a very good chance that the reason it is so hot is because we are living in Florida, which, the last time I looked, was the southernmost state in the country, unless you count Hawaii, which I don't.

The basic rule of thumb is: Alaska-cold, Florida-hot.

So let's try to be more imaginative. From now on, instead of saying, "Hot enough for you?" let's go up to people at noon and say, "Daylight enough for you?"

If that doesn't get the conversation started, I don't know what will.

Japanese couples discover the public kiss

By Miki Tanikawa
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — You must remember this ...

A kiss is just a kiss

So it was sung in the 1940s in the United States. The simple truth of that song is finally finding acceptance here, where public expressions of love have traditionally been shunned.

Now, on street corners and in train stations, a growing number of young couples are openly displaying their affection for one another in kisses and hugs.

"It's a natural thing for us," said Yayoi Nakagome, 20, as she gave her boyfriend a smooch on Omote-Sando boulevard, the Japanese equivalent of the Champs-Elysees. "We do it whenever we feel like it as we walk along the street."

Isao Waraya, 25, was sitting on a park bench with his arm around his girlfriend. "It's nothing to be embarrassed about," he said. "I kiss my girlfriend when I feel lonely.

"You see, the concept of what's embarrassing changes as generations change," he added. "Young people these days are putting their feelings first, rather than allowing themselves to be restricted by what appears to be socially acceptable."

But public kissing, a relatively recent behavior that has emerged among high-school and college age youths, has set off a series of public debates over its desirability.

Mainichi Shimbun, one of the biggest daily newspapers in Japan, recently ran a two-part series on whether kissing in public should be permissible. JNN, a nationwide television network, also broadcast a special report on the subject.

The sampling of letters from readers that made up the Mainichi Shimbun series illustrates the sense of disgust commonly voiced by the older generations toward the new behavior.

"I am afraid they are ruining our traditional Japanese-style grace that has been handed down to us," wrote one 48-year-old woman. "They should choose the time and place when expressing their love to each other."

A 66-year-old man wrote angrily: "I simply cannot stand it. Some may say that it is a natural expression of feeling. But what separates us from the rest of living creatures is that we have self-awareness and that we are capable of exercising self-restraint. Watching these young kids reminds me of dogs romping around."

The unease felt by the older generation can be explained in part by the way Japanese culture characterizes kissing. While kissing is a natural part of greetings in many Western societies, it tends to be associated in Japan mostly with sexuality and the realm of things that belong in the bedroom rather than in open public places.

In fact, physical contact is altogether absent from standard forms of greetings in Japanese culture: Japanese normally do not shake hands, except perhaps when they meet a foreigner, or hug each other, even family members.

The rift that the sudden emergence of this new public conduct among the young has caused between the generations was summed up by Kenji Tamaki, 44, the reporter who edited the Mainichi Shimbun series on "controversial kissing."

"This has become a social issue that has drawn wide public attention. I cannot help thinking that public kissing simply does not fit into our culture. If you dress an American hero, like George Foreman, as a sumo wrestler, he won't make a good appearance, will he? That kind of behavior is just alien here."

Doctors use ancient treatment in modern medicine

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — In the back storage room of a basement pharmacy lurks the Charleston Area Medical Center's cutting-edge treatment for plastic surgery gone bad: a jug of blood-sucking leeches.

To show off his wiggly wards, clinical pharmacist and leech-keeper Bob Podbesek winds through hallways, stocked floor-to-ceiling with modern pills and potions, to a small refrigerator marked "Leech Condos."

"It's remarkable what these little buggers can do," Podbesek said.

He had no idea leeches were used in modern medicine until he watched a surgeon use them in late 1992.

"It was like, 'Have you lost your mind?'" he said.

More than 2,000 years after they were first intentionally used for bloodletting, leeches are a last resort for many plastic surgeons, who say nothing is more effective at saving dying flesh.

"They haven't been able to find anything that does the job as well," said Chris Ganchow, a spokesman for the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

Doctors call on the leeches when a blood clot threatens re-attachment of flesh, like a finger or a nose.

The leeches release a vital blood-thinner that researchers have not been able to perfect in an injectable form, according to James Apesos, chairman of plastic surgery at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio.

"It's not a bug in a bottle like penicillin," he said. "They're not warm and fuzzy."

> 'It's still got a novelty appeal to it among the public, but in the profession it's pretty widely used.'
> — Chris Ganchow, spokesman for the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery

Apesos first used leeches in 1984 after hearing about their "very experimental" use.

Ganchow said modern leech therapy took off after Dr. Joe Upton described it in the Journal of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery in 1985. Upton, an associate professor of surgery at Harvard Medical School, will not talk about the therapy.

"It's still got a novelty appeal to it among the public, but in the profession it's pretty widely used," Ganchow said.

Podbesek keeps 32 amphibians in a plastic, two-gallon container, half-filled with a saline solution he changes every other day. Otherwise, the leeches require little care. They are not fed, since the most effective bloodsuckers are lean and mean.

Doctors alert him when re-attachment surgery turns ugly. When a vein clogs, blood backs up into the reattached area, causing it to swell and turn blue.

"The whole surgery depends upon the hookup of the blood vessels," said Al Amores, a reconstructive surgeon in Charleston. "And the area is not much bigger than a fat paper clip. So you can just imagine a very small plug of clot would stop it."

That's when doctors tell patients: They'd like to put a bloodsucking worm on the wound.

"There's the reaction 'Oh my God,'" Amores said. "Then I get real scientific with them and I tell them what circulation is all about. It gets the word 'leech' out of it and it becomes real science."

Leeches work better than simply poking a hole. Chemicals in their saliva numb the patient's skin, widen the veins and ensure the blood won't clot again for several hours.

Patients are usually so traumatized by losing a body part, they don't care about the leeches, plastic surgeon Frank Trupo of Charleston said.

To make some surgery work, he said, "You are going to try pretty much anything."

Amores said a 9-year-old boy who lost part of his hand in a hunting accident liked to put the leeches on himself.

"He was the kind of kid who goes to the creek to catch the crawdads," Amores said. "It was no problem."

A man in his 30s didn't mind because he used leeches to catch fish, Amores said. "It was just bait."

As the leech gorges itself on blood, it swells from fish-bait size to about the size of a stubby cigar in up to an hour. Once it's bloated, the leech drops off the patient, and a nurse kills it in a jar of alcohol, Podbesek said.

Floods still plague Illinois, while Missouri residents get reprieve

Associated Press

Illinois National Guardsmen, volunteers and prison inmates spent Sunday furiously sandbagging the Illinois River to prepare levees for an expected flood crest.

"The only thing holding the water back is the sandbagging efforts that have taken place," said Chris Tamminga of the Illinois Emergency Management Agency.

To the west, however, crews in Missouri took a break from sandbagging as the sky cleared following a night of storms that delivered less rain than expected.

In west-central Illinois, the Illinois River had risen about 8 inches since Saturday in largely rural Scott and Morgan counties, the National Weather Service said.

The river had been expected to crest Thursday at 28.4 feet, two feet below the top of the levee in Scott County, but it hit that level Sunday. No new crest forecasts were immediately available.

Tamminga said workers were reinforcing the levees with lumber and plastic sheeting, working to add about 20 inches to the top of the barrier. Some 160 National Guardsmen were working with 215 prison inmates.

Tamminga couldn't predict whether any or all of the levees would hold.

"Any time you've got water laying up against a levee for this long a period of time, the levee becomes less and less stable," she said.

In Scott County, retired sheriff and sandbagging volunteer Ken Lawson said he'd feel more confident if more people were working on the levees.

"We don't have nearly the volunteers we had in 1993," he said. "Maybe it's not the popular thing to do now or maybe we're not getting enough footage on television."

Along the Mississippi River's west bank, sandbagging had stopped at Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

"The sun is shining and the weather's cooler and everybody seems to be taking a relaxed day today," said Mayor Bill Anderson. "We're just hoping to hit the crest Tuesday and to start dropping."

DEAR ABBY

Liberation by U.S. troops provides artist's inspiration for life

DEAR ABBY: I was born in Brussels, Belgium, in 1939. The war came, and my father died at the hands of the Germans.

Van Buren

In 1944, when the Americans, British and Canadians liberated Belgium, I was 5 years old. The date, Sept. 3, is forever engraved in my memory.

We had GIs at our house constantly — the excitement they created is hard to describe. The American soldiers had that contagious joy of living. They were more than generous, and they were enthusiastic about everything. I remember being driven to school in their jeeps, and being showered with chocolates, gum and candy. I recall my grandmother saying, "It's like having a house full of adorable, well-behaved sons!" She cried each time they left and a new group came.

I was so impressed by those extraordinary men that I decided I would become an American when I grew up. Not a fireman, not a streetcar conductor, not an engineer — no, I would become an American!

It took me 35 years, but at age 40, I became a U.S. citizen. My daughters married wonderful American men, and my career as an artist is devoted to the history of the U.S. Army in World War II.

I thought that only you, Abby, could convey my admiration and gratitude to those young men by publishing this letter. In my memory, they will forever be those generous Americans who gave us back our liberty in 1944. — JEAN-LUC BEGHIN, LOS ANGELES

DEAR JEAN-LUC: Thank you for your touching letter filled with poignant memories.

I am printing it not only for the veterans who will read it today, but also to honor all veterans from every conflict where American blood has been shed.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old single mother and college student, and with each passing year, I feel a deeper appreciation for soldiers who have given their lives to preserve democracy and freedom.

For years I thought of Memorial Day as a day off from school and work, and a time for barbecues and pool parties. Although I still enjoy the long weekend, I cannot help but think about all of those who never had the chance to "celebrate" because they paid the ultimate price during wartime. I also think of those who served their tour of duty and returned home — their lives changed forever.

I know that there are many like myself who have never fought in battle, but they take the time to remember all those silent heroes who did.

Maybe someday, everyone will pay homage to our veterans instead of just going from sale to sale or party to party.

To all soldiers and their families, past and present, dead and alive: I am indebted to you. — MICHELLE CANTO, CLOVIS, CALIF.

DEAR MICHELLE: Thank you for a beautiful letter. It is a potent reminder of what Memorial Day is all about. Bless you.

'The Far Side' creator wins award

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Gary Larson, who recently retired his cast of talking animals, boggling scientists and other assorted goofballs in "The Far Side," was named Outstanding Cartoonist of the Year at the 49th annual Reuben Awards Saturday.

Larson beat out "For Better or Worse" by Lynn Johnston, "Doonesbury" by Garry Trudeau, and "Luann," by Greg Evans.

Larson retired Jan. 1 after 15 years of drawing "The Far Side," which appeared in 1,900 newspaper. He also won the Reuben in 1991.

In other awards presented at a convention of more than 300 cartoonists, Trudeau won the for best newspaper comic strip.

An Important Announcement To Philip Morris Customers.

Because a very small percentage of cigarettes manufactured recently by Philip Morris USA has been found to have defective filters, we are voluntarily initiating a precautionary recall of all the cigarette brand styles listed below.

What happened

The defect is attributed to a material used in manufacturing filters. This material, which is made by an outside supplier, was contaminated before it arrived at Philip Morris facilities.

No evidence of affected product in stores

We have no evidence that any of the affected product is being sold at retail. In fact, it is possible that none ever reached retail shelves. Nevertheless, in the interest of absolute caution, Philip Morris is recalling all the cigarette brand styles that are involved.

Return for a full refund

If you believe you may have purchased one of the brand styles on the list, please return it to your retailer for a full refund of the purchase price. Cigarettes made with the defective filter may give off a noticeable odor and have a metallic or other off-taste. Continued use of the affected product could result in temporary irritation or discomfort.

Products involved

While it is not likely that our customers will encounter any of the affected cigarettes, we want them to know that very small quantities of the following brand styles were involved:

Drowning incidents mark holiday weekend

Associated Press

The long holiday weekend has gotten off to a deadly start as Texas waters have claimed the lives of four people, including a mother and son, who drowned in three separate incidents.

Faith Henault, 36, of Watauga, died in a hospital early Sunday, one day after her unconscious body was pulled from Benbrook Lake, near Fort Worth, where she went for a family camping trip.

Mrs. Henault and her 12-year-old son, Barry Clouse, were wading in Benbrook Lake when winds moved them into deeper water just after noon, said Maj. James Skidmore of the Tarrant County Sheriff's Department.

Despite the efforts of David Henault Jr., Clouse's 16-year-old stepbrother, the two went under. The teen dove after the younger boy but couldn't find him and surfaced to find his stepmother floating face-down. He managed to keep her afloat until a nearby boater reached the two and took them ashore.

Clouse's body was found a few hours later.

In Dallas, a 40-year-old Plano man drowned at White Rock Lake after he jumped in to retrieve his daughter's toy ball, authorities said. Bystanders tried to rescue Arkady Fishman when he was engulfed, but failed.

"As soon as he went under, we heard his wife screaming," said Gary Woolfoolk, 29, who tried to aid Fishman. "We just swam out to where they told me he went under and began looking."

Dallas fire officials suspect a strong undercurrent was the culprit. Searchers found Fishman's body two hours after the incident in the area where he disappeared.

The state's lakes weren't the only scenes of tragedy. A Houston man, 35-year-old Abel Vargas, drowned Saturday while swimming off the east end of Galveston Island.

Rescuers on a Coast Guard boat pulled Vargas' body from the waters about 8:45 p.m. after it was spotted from a Life Flight helicopter. Vargas had disappeared earlier Saturday while swimming with a friend.

Filibuster stalls bill for property rights in Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate was embroiled in a filibuster Sunday over a House-passed bill that would give Texans the power to sue state and local governments over action that devalues their property.

The bill by Rep. Susan Combs, R-Austin, was passed by the House Saturday night, despite objections from several lawmakers.

Senate approval still was needed before Monday's end of the 1995 Legislature for the measure to reach Gov. George W. Bush's desk.

But Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, talked more than four hours against the bill, and no vote had been taken early Sunday evening.

"This bill, in my opinion, has not been well thought out. I do not honestly feel that we have a handle on how much this bill will cost the taxpayers of Texas," Truan said.

The bill would create legal grounds for lawsuits against state or local government for actions that restrict a person's use of private property and reduce the market value of the property by at least 25 percent.

It would require state agencies and local governments to assess whether potential action would reduce property values.

The bill has come under fire from environmentalists and some lawmakers, who said the increase in the number of new lawsuits would cost the state and cities millions of dollars..

DEATHS

Louie Johnson

Services for Louie (L.A.) Johnson will be 10 a.m. Tuesday at Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Visitation will be 4-6 p.m. today at the funeral home.

Johnson died Sunday at his residence.

He was born April 6, 1908, in Neodesha, Kan. He married Dorothy Crawnhaw in 1927 in Fredonia, Kan. He worked as a construction pipe superintendent in refinery and chemical plants. After his retirement, he worked in ranching in Glasscock County. He was a member, deacon and Sunday School teacher at Bellview Baptist Church. He was a member of the United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Industry of the United States and Canada.

He is survived by two daughters, Helen Marie Scarth of Burleson and Barbara Alice Thomason of Midland; six grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland or Bellview Baptist Church.

Frank Minar

Graveside services for Frank James Minar will be 2 p.m. Tuesday at Fort Snelling National Cemetery in Minneapolis, Mo. Local arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Minar died Sunday.

He was born in St. Paul, Mo., on July 3, 1925. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He moved to Midland in 1985. He had worked as an auto body painter and co-owned and operated the Midtowner Deli.

Survivors include his wife, Carolyn Minar of Midland; a stepdaughter, Kimberly Al-Anshasi of Midland; four daughters, Annette Valenzuela of Mora, Mo., Samantha Thibault of West Jordan, Utah, Michelle Minar of Mora, Mo., and Margo Minar of St. Paul; a son, Frank Minar of Mora; and three sisters, Dorothy Simpson of Fairmont, Mo., Bobbie Cook of Egan, Mo., and Donna Larson of Scandia, Mo.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland.

Merle Witcher

Services for Merle Witcher will be 2 p.m. Tuesday at Westside Church of Christ with Gary Montgomery and Don Mitchell officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Witcher died Sunday at her residence.

She was born March 29, 1921, in Santa Anna and later moved to Littlefield, where she graduated from high school. She married Jess E. Witcher on Jan. 4, 1942, in Dimmit. She lived in Littlefield, Abilene and Big Spring before moving to Midland in 1972. She was a member of Westside Church of Christ.

Survivors include a son, Johnney E. Witcher of Midland; a daughter, Koleta Reed of Arlington; a brother, Dwane Faucett of Cloudcroft, N.M.; a sister, Doris Wilpula of Arvada, Colo.; and four grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland.

Malcom Miller

Services for Malcom J. Miller are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Miller died Saturday in Mexico.

Services for Carolyn Kolas are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Kolas died Saturday.

POLICE REPORTS

Sunday

Robbery: The 7-Eleven convienence store located at 5408 Thomason Drive reported five 18-packs of beer taken from the store. One of the thieves hit the clerk in the chest with a rock. The incident was reported at 3:07 a.m.

Vandalism: A window was reported broken at 1212 E. Wadley Ave. at 8:17 a.m.

Vandalism: Alex Sherwood reported vandalism to the tires on a vehicle at 1408 W. Kentucky Ave. at 2:43 p.m.

Burglary of a Building: Norwest Bank, 3301 N. Big Spring St., reported someone broke into the night deposit. The incident was reported at 3:16 p.m.

Anyone with information concerning these incidents should contact the Police Department at 685-7108 or Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

Pre-paid tuition plan would help education costs, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller John Sharp says a pre-paid college tuition plan approved by the Legislature is something that could help many Texans meet the future cost of higher education.

Sharp said Sunday that the bill was "perhaps the most underrated legislation state lawmakers considered this year."

The legislation would allow parents to purchase college tuition and fees at a Texas community college or state university at current prices. "This pay now, learn later plan can save parents the headache of worrying whether they will be able to afford their children's college when the time comes," Sharp said.

The bill would create the Texas Tomorrow Fund. Money placed in the fund would be invested and earn interest during the years before a child goes to college, so that the fund would yield enough to pay for the student's education.

The program doesn't guarantee admission to a state school; students still would have to meet all entrance requirements. If a student chooses to attend a school in another state, the money would be refunded, but without interest.

Middle America voices: 'Show Me' state voters weary of politics as usual

By R.W. Apple Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO, Mo. — Viewed from inside the Beltway, it often seems as if everything has changed in American politics. Viewed from Middle America, it looks more like politics as usual.

Listen to the voters hereabouts talking about the big political guns back East, and you still hear very few kind words. Not for the winners three years ago, the Democrats, or for the winners last year, the Republicans, or for the candidates who are already gearing up to run for president next year.

Yet people remain quietly confident about their country and unalarmed by the bombing in Oklahoma City.

They may be disgruntled with a federal government that they consider far too big, too expensive and too intrusive, but they do not see it as their enemy, and they have only contempt for right-wing paramilitary groups.

They feel isolated and powerless to influence national and international events, but they seem ready, as many Americans did not two and three years ago, to bear their share of the pain that they know federal spending cuts will bring.

A group of them gathered one recent evening in the basement of the library in this town of 10,000 in Little Dixie, an agricultural area about an hour northwest of St. Louis that was settled by migrants from Virginia and Kentucky.

During 90 minutes of conversation, they gave a free shave to no one except a hometown boy, Sen. Christopher S. Bond, who went from Mexico to the governor's mansion in Jefferson City, then joined his fellow Republicans in Washington.

Barbara Fairchild, a 53-year-old farm wife, said this about President Clinton: "It's like he's always running for prom king. All along, I've compared him to Ron Dike in junior high. He wanted to promise something to everyone. Ron didn't deliver on his promises and neither did Bill Clinton."

Sen. Phil Gramm, the Republican from Texas? "Comes on much too hard, won't make it," said Charles Fry, a junior high school teacher. "No more Texans," added Kurt Lamb, who runs the library. "Every last one of them has stunk on ice — Johnson, John Tower, Bush."

Sen. Bob Dole, another Republican from next-door Kansas? "He's been in politics too long," said Virginia Pehle, the Audrain County recorder of deeds, who has been in politics quite a while herself. Again Lamb chimed in, with the comment, "too old, much too old."

One or two people spoke up for Republicans Lamar Alexander, who is running, and for Jack Kemp, who is not, and for Colin Powell, who may run or may not — and who may be a Republican or may not.

But it was clear that no Republican has established himself here, at this early date, as the presumptive challenger to Clinton some 18 months from now. There is "a hunger for decisiveness," said Greg Miller, the police chief, which none of the present crop of candidates seems to be satisfying yet.

Party appears to make little difference. Republicans, Democrats and independents criticized Republicans, Democrats and independents. And most agreed with Ed Siegmund, a city planner, when he said: "I really thought change was going to happen, but it's the same old same old, whether George or Sweet William."

The Republican revolution — as its Thomas Paine, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, likes to style his party's accession to power on Capitol Hill — has not entirely convinced people in Mexico, Mo.

"I wanted a change," said Mike McGannon, the president of one of the big local employers, Optec DD USA, which makes magnet wire for motors. "My fear now is that they'll go too far. They're a little cocky, and already it's turned back into 100 percent politics. They all want to run for president."

Added Fry: "I think we should be governing — but I'm afraid we've seen the burst of energy, and now they're changing their stance, with everyone scrambling for advantage."

Not a single member of the group backed the House Republicans in their determination to use part of the cuts in government spending to pay for tax relief; everyone termed the cuts absolutely necessary, though several worried about details, such as aid to education, and everyone wanted to use all the savings to curb the deficit.

Mexico is no more a microcosm of the United States than any other place, but it could hardly be more Middle American. Few people here are very rich or very poor, and they live reasonably close to the geographical center of the 48 contiguous states, which is located in Smith County, Kansas.

Mexico is just down the road from Mark Twain's birthplace, Florida, Mo., and just up the road from Fulton, the little town where Winston Churchill delivered his Iron Curtain speech in the American heartland. And like much of Missouri, it feels a little Eastern, a little Western, a little Northern, a little Southern.

It is represented in Congress by a gruff, abrasive conservative Democrat, Harold L. Volkmer, who has served in Congress since 1976. But his is a swing district in presidential elections, carried by Ronald Reagan in 1984 and George Bush in 1988 but by Clinton in 1992.

In last year's Republican tide, Volkmer barely survived, winning only 50 percent of the vote.

Conservatives tug at endangered species act

WASHINGTON (NYT) — As Congress reviews the Endangered Species Act, the most important debate at the moment is not between the law's defenders and its critics, but among conservatives of different stripes quarreling over how much to revise it.

One group, led by Sen. Slade Gorton of Washington, has worked closely with representatives of large industries like the timber and paper companies to devise an approach that would make regulations under the law more flexible and ease the way for companies to exploit natural resources.

It would leave considerable power in the hands of the secretary of the interior, whose agency would continue to control conservation plans for protected species using government regulations.

But in the House of Representatives, another approach is evolving, one that would practically do away with federal regulations and rely instead on financial incentives to encourage landowners to preserve and enhance vanishing habitat voluntarily.

The faction pressing this approach is appealing to advocates for the rights of small property owners and has gained the support of some prominent conservative natural resource economists.

Supporters of the more ambitious approach said that the law's most vociferous critics were on their side. But Gorton said he believed his approach, which has been strongly condemned by liberals, will gain appeal if a more extreme alternative emerges on the right.

"The national environmental organizations exhausted their entire supply of adjectives in cussing out my bill, and they aren't going to have any left when they see a really radical proposal," he said.

In Appreciation to Plaza Cleaners

For the past eight years, Plaza Cleaners, 201 Plaza Center, has made-ready the American flags for the funerals of local veterans. They have provided this service at no charge.

On behalf of the recipients of these flags, Ellis Funeral Home would like to publicly thank Plaza Cleaners.

Kimble arrested

MALIBU, Calif. — Bo Kimble, once the nation's college basketball scoring champion who had a short-lived NBA career, was arrested for drunk driving, authorities said Sunday. Kimble, 29, was stopped Saturday night after deputies spotted him driving 80 mph in a 50 mph zone on the Pacific Coast Highway, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy Mark Bailey said.

Kimble was arrested after failing a sobriety test. He was booked for investigation of driving under the influence at the Lost Hills sheriff's station, where he submitted to a urine test, Bailey said. He was released Sunday on a promise to appear in court next month.

Kimble played at Southern California and Loyola Marymount. In his senior season at Loyola in 1989-90, he led the nation in scoring with a 35.3 average as the team reached the NCAA quarterfinals.

Villeneuve wins bizarre Indy 500

■ Canadian overcomes one penalty and wins by another penalty as Scott Goodyear is disqualified and refuses to leave track after race.

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Jacques Villeneuve overcame one penalty and won by another Sunday in the Indianapolis 505 — er, 500.

In a wild finish that ended in dispute, Villeneuve drove to victory after Scott Goodyear was penalized for passing the pace car on the last restart.

Ignoring a black flag flapping in the brisk wind for the final nine laps, Goodyear refused to come off the track.

"Everybody in the world knows who won this race," Goodyear said bitterly.

Unless U.S. Auto Club changes its mind, the winner everyone will know is Villeneuve, son of the late Formula One star Gilles Villeneuve.

The wild finish was matched by the terrifying start. A multicar crash on the first lap left Stan Fox critically injured when his car was cut in half after hitting the wall.

But in the end, the 24-year-old Villeneuve came back from a two-lap deficit, the most by any Indy winner, to become one of the youngest winners in Indy history.

"What a fight. What a driver," said Villeneuve's car owner Barry Green. "We ran 505 miles out there, and I thought we might need to be paid a little extra."

The duel to the finish was set up as the pace car led Goodyear and second-place Villeneuve out of turn four on lap 190 and was about to let them get back to racing. But, as the pace car came onto the main straightaway, near the pit entrance, Goodyear was suddenly up to speed, shooting past the Chevrolet Corvette as Villeneuve hit the brakes and kept from going by.

"By the time I was going past him, I saw the green light," said Goodyear, whose Tasman Motorsports team was furious. "That was disappointing. We were racing to the end. I don't agree with what's going on here right now.

"When I was going past the pace car, the next light I looked up upon was the green light and that's all I needed to see. I was staying out because in my eyes it was perfect. If we came in and we found out it was a mistake, then it would be too late."

Tom Binford, retiring after 22 years as Indy's chief steward, didn't see it that way.

Rebels face hot pitcher, Grapevine

■ Midland Lee's Lance Watters goes against Grapevine's Ryan Brown in Class 5A Region I semifinal pitcher's duel.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

A week after Midland Lee graduated into the Class 5A Region I semifinals the pomp and circumstance is over and now the Rebels stare directly in the face of another flame-throwing right hander standing between them and Lubbock Coronado and a shot at a state baseball tournament berth.

Lee will face Grapevine in a one-game winner-take-all playoff beginning at 2 p.m. today at Crutcher Field on the campus of Abilene Christian University.

Lubbock Coronado (25-4 overall), a 12-2 winner over Denton Ryan on Thursday, awaits the winner for a shot at the state tournament.

Lee will be meeting one of the region's top pitchers in senior Ryan Brown. Brown has led Grapevine, 19-10-1 overall, with a 12-1 record and a 1.08 ERA. But facing a hard-throwing pitcher is nothing new to the Rebels.

"He's another Monty Ward," said Midland Lee second baseman Kevin Jordan, who stroked a double and scored the game-winning run in the rebels 2-1 victory over Ward and Lubbock Monterey last week. "They are another Monterey with solid defense."

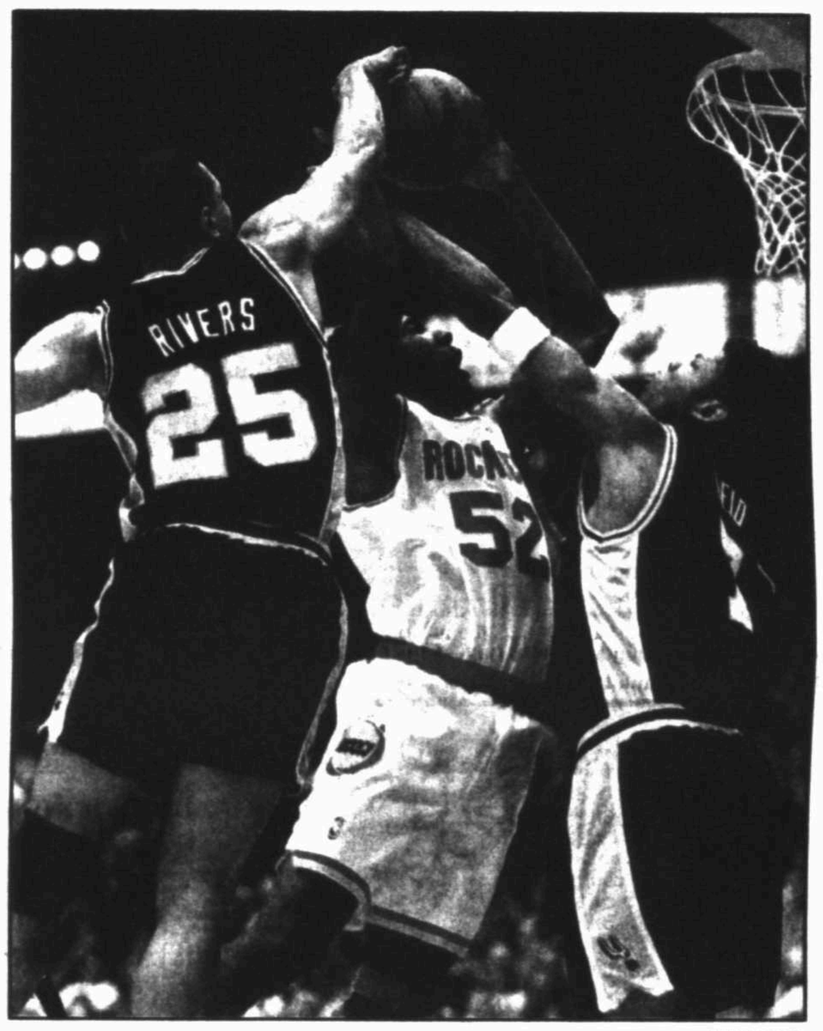

"He throws fairly hard and has a good breaking ball, but he has his ups and downs like everyone else," said Midland Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "I asked our scout how he compared to Ward and he thought he was not any better than Ward was."

HOUSTON — In the Western Conference finals, home is where the heartbreak is.

The San Antonio Spurs, in their most overpowering performance of the playoffs, routed the Houston Rockets 103-81 Sunday to square the best-of-7 series 2-2. In each game, the home team has been a loser.

And Houston was a big loser this time.

San Antonio dominated the rebounding 64-39 to emphatically complete a Summit sweep.

"It's like we had to go on a retreat and find ourselves," San Antonio's Sean Elliott said. "Let's play the rest of the games here. We're at a disadvantage. We've got two games at home."

David Robinson had 20 points and 16 rebounds, the first time he's matched Hakeem Olajuwon statistically in the series. Olajuwon had 20 points and 14 rebounds but was just 9-for-24 from the field.

Now the series shifts 200 miles up Interstate 10 for Game 5 Tuesday night in the Alamodome, where San Antonio has lost three straight. It should be a welcome change for Houston, which is 3-4 at home in the playoffs but has won four in a row on the road.

Robinson said the time has come to end those homecourt horrors.

"I think we'll feel good at home now," Robinson said, "because we're playing basketball the way we can

Silver Bullets set for Memorial Day game

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

There are currently thousands of men making a living as athletes on professional teams. But there are only a small handful of women — the Colorado Silver Bullets.

Getting the chance to follow in their father's footsteps or to just set foot where few woman have before, 24 women make up the only women's professional baseball team which is already into its second full season. Today at 6 p.m. those talented women will make their only Texas appearance when they play the Permian Basin All-Stars at Christensen Stadium.

Gates for the Memorial Day attraction open at 4:30 p.m. when the Silver Bullets begin batting practice. At 5:30 p.m., a lucky fan and local celebrities will have a chance to bat against the team's coach and former major league pitcher Phil Niekro. Ticket prices range from $4 (general admission) to $8 (club level). The Silver Bullets and their coaching staff with sign autographs after the game.

The Silver Bullets were officially recognized on Dec. 10, 1993 by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues as the first women to be allowed to play men's professional teams in the United States since the commisioner of baseball banned women from the game in 1954.

They earned many fans last year and were praised by their opponents for their hustling and heads-up style

Clements, Jacobs fire final 68 for 1995 Stampede title

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Former Midland High golfer Josh Jacobs and former Midland Lee golfer Matt Clements teamed up for the first time this weekend to play in the 30th Annual Ranchland Hills Country Club. There are 11 other teams in the Championship Flight who wished they had not.

Jacobs and Clements shot a final round 68 Sunday to take the three-day event by one stroke over two teams.

Jacobs and Clements came into the final round with a one-stroke lead over Don Pyle and Chris Brown and a two-stroke advantage over Steve Hammel and Doyce Haney. But the two weren't exactly up for the match.

Jacobs, who will join the national champion Midland College Chaparrals next fall, got home at 6 a.m. after a late night at Project Graduation. He wasn't exactly awake when he got to the first tee despite gulping coffee before teeing off at 2:07 p.m.

Angels win fifth straight, sweep Travs

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

The rain tried to slow them. The Arkansas Travelers tried to beat them. But neither did a very good job as the Angels won their fifth straight with a 5-4 decision over the Travelers Sunday.

For the third time in the five-game series, rain soaked Christensen Stadium, this time halting the game in the sixth inning. But the Angels, who won a rain-shortened game over Arkansas Thursday and swept a doubleheader after Friday's contest was rained out, held on after a 23-minute weather delay to stay one game behind El Paso in the Texas League Western Division.

The five-game streak marks Midland's longest of the year and is the first series sweep for the Angels (26-24).

"We needed that one because El Paso won and San Antonio is slumping right now," Angel first baseman Leon Glenn said. "This road trip coming up is the biggest series of the whole year. If we can handle Wichita we can just about win this first half."

The Angels play Wichita, in last place in the West, while El Paso and San Antonio go head-to-head beginning Tuesday. The four Western Division teams finish the first half of the league season with 18 games against each other, and only two games separate first-place El Paso from third-place San Antonio.

Arkansas (26-21) continued in the opposite direction of the Angels. The Travelers finish their 10-game road trip 2-8 with a six-game losing streak.

Midland scored five runs in the fourth off Traveler starter Mike Busby. The rally came after Busby had faced only one over the minimum nine batters in the first three innings. He beat the Angels with a complete game 4-1 win the last time he faced them.

"I kind of got lax out there and kind of lost it for that one inning," said Busby, who fell to 3-4. "It's that one inning (that cost me) every single game so far this year."

The right-hander struck out 10 Angels in his win over Midland in Little Rock this year. But Sunday he walked two and hit one batter while allowing three hits in the only inning Midland scored in.

"I thought I could get these guys out," Busby said. "I got the guys out I needed to but the bottom of the order hurt me. I don't walk very many batters. When I do it's a crucial situation."

The crucial situation this time had Arkansas leading 1-0 after three innings and Busby having retired eight batters in a row. But the Traveler starter walked shortstop Tim Harkrider and the Angels were off on their rally.

"He started out pretty good against us but he just ran into a brick wall," Glenn said.

Basilio Ortiz had a two-RBI single for the last two runs of the inning.

Arkansas almost came back after the rain delay. Angel starter and winner Kyle Sebach gave way to Korey Keling after the break with two runners on. Keling, recently moved to the bullpen from a starter's role, gave up an RBI groundout and two RBI hits the first three batters he faced, making the score 5-4.

But Keling cruised through the last three innings, retiring the last three batters he faced.

There were eight three up and three down innings in the game and two other innings when only three batters came to the plate, making for a quick two hour and 19 minute affair.

ANGEL DUST: Midland finished the first half at 13-7 against Eastern Division teams, the best record among Western Division clubs ... Angel third baseman George Arias had a rare 0-for-4 night at the plate. Arias entered the game leading the league in RBIs with 42 ... The Angels are off today and begin the five-game set with Wichita Tuesday with Midland's John Snyder (3-3) going against Wichita's Geno Morones (3-2) ... The Angels play one of their few day games of the year Wednesday with a 12: 15 p.m. start at Wichita.

said Jacobs. "I'm ready to go to the house and sleep."

Luckily for Jacobs, Clements was up (literally) to the task. Clements came through with big shots, including the shot of the tournament. Clements hit an 8-iron on the 160-yard 16th hole that landed with in "gimme" range. The birdie was the groups third of the day that was mixed in with one bogey. Combine that with Jacobs birdie at the Par-5 15th, and it gave the pair the final run needed to win the tourney with a three-day total of 199.

"We were sluggish on the first couple of holes," said Clements. "We thought on the 14 tee box we would need three birdies."

Until that point the tourney had been a three-team race. With Jacobs and Clements, there was Pyle and Brown and Haney and Hammel, who were playing a group ahead.

Haney and Hammel, who were the tournament champions last year, were in position to put up a big number on the board for the last foursome to shoot at until they ran into the 16th hole. It was there where a three-putt from 30-feet resulted in the duo's lone Sunday bogey and a lower final score 200. The two had Sunday's low round of 67.

"Sixteen flipped it all around," said Hammel. "It was the only bogey we had today, but those kids played good. We have to give credit to them."

Pyle and Brown, who played in the same group as Jacobs and Clements, shot a 68 like their playing mates, but lost critical shots with bogeys at 6 and 12 after birdies at 1, 5, 10, 15. Their par at 15 also proved costly.

The winners of the other fights included Brian Gilley and John Young (Presidents Flight), Bill Cope and Jack Rich (First Flight), Glen Elliott and Jim Arnold (Second Flight), Darrell Hopkins and Connie Baird (Third Flight), Ray Johnson and Don Robinson, Jr. (Fourth Flight), Gary Pearce and Randy Wickman (Fifth Flight), and Greg Edison and Gary Edison (Sixth Flight).

LEE: Both teams use several juniors

(From 1C)

Fort Worth Western Hills in the series opener last week. The Rebels must try to revive an offense that smacked only four hits in the Monterey win.

"I need to start hitting, if we don't start hitting 3-4-5 we aren't going to go much deeper," said right fielder Britt Harper, who went 0-for-3 last week. The heart of the Rebel batting order had difficulty last week. The number four through seven hitters combined for 10 strikeouts in last week's win.

Junior Chad Crow, who was starting his first varsity game, became the hero with a bloop single to score Jordan in the fourth inning for the win. Crow will be back in the lineup, according to Benavidez.

But one does not need much offense when you put Rebel starter Lance Watters on the mound. Watters has been dominating in two playoff games to date. Both starts have been complete game efforts where he has allowed one run each. Watters, 8-2 overall with a 1.55 ERA, has allowed just five hits and collected 22 strikeouts in the playoffs.

"We don't need too many runs with the way Lance has been pitching," said Harper. "We will try to do like we have been lately, get someone on base, bunt them into scoring position and then we'll try to drive them in."

In fact both Lee and Grapevine resemble one another. Both teams have juniors play key roles in the starting lineup. The Mustangs, the 5-5A runner-ups, start four juniors while Lee has three.

Grapevine is led offensively by Brown who is batting .348 and centerfielder Wade Bruton. Bruton, who batted .491 in the regular season, is hitting .421 in the postseason. Ryan Williams (.422), third baseman Mike Sheils (.348) and lead off hitter Bryan Lietenberger (.357) are all capable of producing runs.

Each team uses the sacrifice bunt as an integral part of its offense. Lee has sacrificed safely 32 times during the season.

"I heard they are a good bunting team and they like to double steal a lot, so, we have been working on those type situations this week," said Benavidez.

"Our guys can sense it is one game at a time from here on out. You can't start thinking ahead because that is usually when you get beat. Our guys have come in focused. We went over the scouting report the other day when it rained to try and get them to focus on Grapevine."

There have been a number of distractions this week with final exams, graduation for seniors Raymond Martinez, Jordan, Watters, shortstop Daniel Carrasco and catcher Mike Phillips as well as the frequent rains.

"We haven't had a long practice in quiet some time," said Harper, who said that the Rebels practiced twice last Saturday.

LEE NOTES: Today's game will be broadcast on KCRS (AM 550) ... The Rebels will be the home team but have opted to wear their maroon uniforms. Lee has won both of its playoff games wearing the dark uniforms.

of play. The Silver Bullets, however, were only able to win six games out of a total 44 game against male semi-pro teams.

Phil Niekro has prepared a more sympathetic schedule of 50 games this year and has selected a stronger team.

"We were over our heads a little last year," said Phil Niekro, in a USA Today report. "This time, we're looking for a more even-type schedule."

The schedule is more of a mixture of local all-stars, military teams and clubs of guys who have played college ball. The Permian Basin All-Stars will be made up of the Midland Angels coaching staff, several college and former college players and some local celebrities.

While the schedule is changed, the goal of the team is still the same: to promote an all-women's pro team and to bring in the crowds by pitting them against all-male teams. This is the tenth stop on a 50-game tour that puts the Silver Bullets in 30 different states. Their schedule started in early May and finishes Sept. 8-10 in Hawaii. They are scheduled to appear 20 times on cable television through the Prime Sports network.

Another change came when Niekro expanded the roster from 19 to 24. Fifteen of those from the first year returned, including pitcher Lee Ann Ketchum. She was one of only two players to be invited to the Men's Hawaiian Winter League. First baseman Julie Croteau was also invited. Niekro added nine newcomers to the squad for 1995, hoping to increase the overall athleticism of the team.

"We knew we needed more powerful girls," Niekro said. "We knew we needed better pitching, and we have found some of that. We'll have better speed.

"I expect us to be much more competitive, that's for sure," Niekro said. "We've got better athletes. Last year we just went out to find athletes and tried to make ballplayers out of them. This year the ballplayers came to us in the tryouts we had."

A year of experience also helped the converted softballers, said Ketchum.

"We're not swinging at bad pitches like we did last year. We're not as intimidated by fast throwers," said Ketchum, who won five games and struck out 62 in 75 innings.

INDY: Early penalty seemed to hurt winner

ard, didn't see it that way.

"We saw it quite differently. The green did not come on. ... The one time you can pass a pace car is when you're waved around," he said.

A videotape of the restart provided by Tel-X, the track's closed circuit broadcaster, clearly shows the yellow light remained on for several seconds after Goodyear passed the pace car.

Villeneuve saw the penalty coming, too.

"I knew it before he got the black flag," he said. "I knew it on the restart because I saw him overtake the pace car. That's why I jumped on the brakes. I knew he was going to get black-flagged."

Asked if there was any possibility of the penalty being lifted, Binford said, "The violation took place and I applied the penalty that I have a responsibility to apply, so I do not think it would be changed."

Villeneuve, the 1994 rookie of the year and runner-up at Indy, is the youngest driver to win the race since Troy Ruttman in 1952 and the fourth youngest ever.

To do it he had to overcome not only the penalty, but his own mistakes.

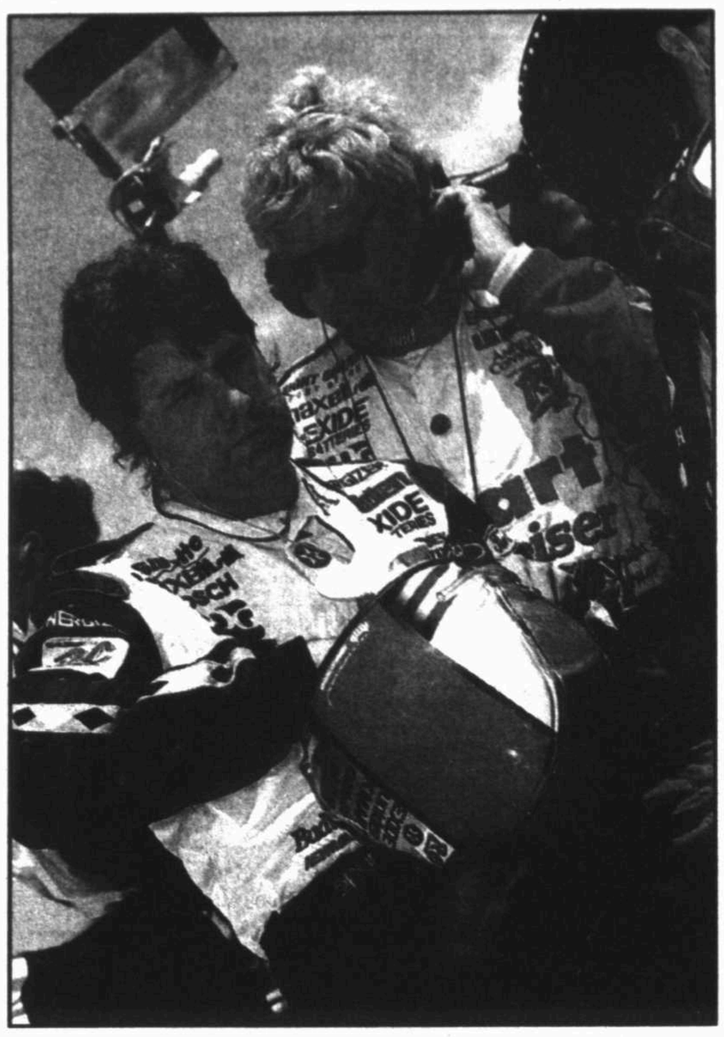

He was penalized on lap 51 for passing the pace car under a yellow flag 14 laps earlier. That appeared to knock him out of contention. But Villeneuve came back to the front using strategic pit stops and yellow flags.

"I screwed up twice. The first time, I started to go before the fueling was done and then I stalled. Then, later on in the race, when we got back with the leaders, I stalled again. We did everything we could do not to win this race, and then we had to work harder."

As for the final restart, on lap 191 of the 200-lap race, Villeneuve said, "Everybody was flying by the pace car. At that point, I thought that was it. I stayed close to Scott Goodyear. Then, when we got close to the pace car, I hit the brakes. You can't get by the pace car before he hits the pits."

Green said the penalty against Villeneuve "was just bad communication on our part. But we made it up."

This was the culmination of a month that saw, among other things, the powerful Team Penske drivers, defending champion Al Unser Jr. and Emerson Fittipaldi, fail to find enough speed to qualify. That left Roger Penske, the all-time Indy leader with 10 victories, including the last two in a row, without an entry.

AP Laserphoto

With only three former champions, the fastest field in racing history was also the youngest and most inexperienced since the early years of the race.

Christian Fittipaldi, a 24-year-old rookie and Emerson's nephew, wound up second, just ahead of 1986 winner Bobby Rahal. Eliseo Salazar, another rookie was fourth, followed by 26-year-old Robby Gordon, fifth for the second straight year. Mauricio Gugelmin, in only his second Indy, led 59 laps — the most by anyone — and finished sixth.

Goodyear was scored in 14th place by USAC.

Despite early morning rain, the sun broke through and the race began on time. But it was less than 10 seconds old before it was slowed by the multicar wreck in which Fox was critically injured.

Fox, who started in the fourth row, was racing into the first turn when his car appeared to drive over the rumble strips at the lower edge of the track and suddenly veered to the right. He slammed nearly head-on into the outside wall, then was hit by Eddie Cheever, whose car shared off the front of Fox's car, leaving the driver totally exposed.

The 42-year-old Fox, a seven-time Indy starter who finished seventh as a rookie in 1987, sustained a head injury and was taken to Methodist Hospital. He was in critical but stable condition in intensive care following surgery to relieve pressure on the brain. A track official said treatment was complicated by bleeding.

"I was on the outside of Stan. He just turned sharp right and went in to the wall," Cheever said. "I couldn't avoid him. He had a big hit."

Debris from the incident was strewn across the track and several other drivers got caught in it, including Lyn St. James, the only woman in the 33-car field, Gil de Ferran, Danny Sullivan, rookie Carlos Guerrero and Eric Bachelart.

De Ferran, whose right front wheel was broken by a flying wheel from another car, drove slowly back to the pits on three wheels. Sullivan, who was hit in the helmet by debris, was able to continue and finished 19th. The others were knocked out of the race.

The last first-lap accident was in 1991, when Gary Bettenhausen slid sideways and Buddy Lazier spun in to the wall trying to avoid him. Neither driver was injured.

Michael Andretti, again favored to win, led 41 of the first 77 laps. He was about to regain the lead from the pitting Mauricio Gugelmin when he had to drive up the banking in the fourth turn to avoid the slowing car.

Andretti slid up into the wall, then made an almost 90-degree turn in to the pits. The disappointed driver, who continued the legacy of frustration begun by father Mario after his 1969 victory, was done for the day.

"I was coming up on Mauricio," Andretti said. "I guess he was slowing down to go int the pits and I didn't realize it until it was too late. I went a little wide, missed him and it went into the gray. It's like ice up there and I hit the wall.

"The car was beautiful, the best I ever had here," he added sadly.

Moments after Andretti's incident, Scott Sharp hit the wall in virtually the same place, stopping alongside the concrete barrier. He was not injured.

Pole-winner Scott Brayton and teammate Arie Luyendyk, who started in the middle of the front row, were unable to stay with the leaders following problems with their developmental Menard V6 engines.

The Menard stock block engines, which were born as Buicks, are given a slight horsepower advantage over the conventional Indy V8s under USAC rules, but haven't been reliable over 500 miles.

Luyendyk, the 1990 race winner, stalled his engine during his first stop, then had problems getting back up to speed. He wound up seventh. Brayton faded on the start as Goodyear, the third-place starter jumped into the lead, and was never a factor, finishing 17th.

Bobby beats Terry in Labonte family reunion

The Associated Press

■ Auto Racing

CONCORD, N.C. — Bobby Labonte served notice Sunday night that the current youth movement in stock car racing's top series doesn't begin and end with Jeff Gordon.

Labonte capitalized on late-race engine problems by Ken Schrader and cruised to a 6.27-second victory over his older brother, 1984 Winston Cup champion Terry Labonte, in the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

It was the first Winston Cup victory for the 31-year-old Labonte, who like the 23-year-old Gordon is in his third full season on the circuit.

Gordon has taken the series by storm, winning five poles and three races in 1995 to overshadow what's been a solid start by Labonte in his first year driving for former Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs. Labonte came to Charlotte with one pole and three top-five finishes this year.

Labonte, who started on the outside of the front row, right alongside Gordon in the 600-mile race, led six times for 85 laps, including the final 43.

The victory came in what was easily the year's most competitive race, featuring 32 lead changes among 12 drivers. The previous high for lead changes in 1995 was 24 last month at Talladega, Ala., but by the halfway point of the 600, there had already been 21.

Gordon had dominated at Charlotte eight days earlier, winning all three stages and $300,000 in The Winston Select, the circuit's annual all-star race. He also won the pole for the 600 with a speed that was more than 1.1 mph faster than anyone else, leading many of his competitors to grumble in the days leading up to the event that they would be racing for second place.

But Gordon was eliminated from contention less than one-fourth of the way through the race when his right front wheel snapped off, necessitating a lengthy stay behind the wall for repairs.

Schrader, Gordon's teammate, appeared to have the strongest car in the second half of the race. Schrader led nine times for 169 laps, and he was about three seconds up on the field when his Chevrolet Monte Carlo slowed dramatically while going down the backstretch on the 358th of 400 laps.

By the time Schrader reached the third turn on the 1.5-mile trioval, he already had taken down his window net, conceding that his night was over. Schrader coasted slowly back to pit road and made a hard left into the garage area, his race ended by a blown engine.

Michael Waltrip and Sterling Marlin were the only other drivers on the lead lap at the finish.

Sunday night's event also marked the first 1-2 finish for brothers at an active NASCAR track since Bobby and Donnie Allison were first and second in the 1971 Coca-Cola 600.

Gordon looked strong early, leading laps 8-44, but an ominous orange glow began to develop in his right front wheel.

When the leaders pitted after Todd Bodine's wreck on lap 72, Gordon's crew members were slowed in their efforts to change the right front tire because of flames coming from the wheel. Several blasts from a fire extinguisher only temporarily doused the flames, which could be seen lapping at the inside of the wheel well again as Gordon drove back on the track.

Monaco Grand Prix

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — World champion Michael Schumacher's pit-lane strategy paved the way for his second straight easy victory and increased his lead in the 1995 driver's standings.

Schumacher's Benetton-Renault was 34 seconds ahead of Damon Hill, in a Williams-Renault, at the finish, most of the time gained in having one pit stop compared to Hill's two.

"It was planned like that," Schumacher said. "We calculated everything and it was the best way. Obviously, it worked out."

"We were going to do one stop, but after our performance in the warmup, we reconsidered the situation," Hill said. "We got it horribly wrong, I'm afraid."

Gerhard Berger, in a reserve Ferrari, was third, more than a minute behind Schumacher.

In winning at the Spanish Grand Prix two weeks ago, Schumacher also had one pit stop less than most of the other contenders.

It was Schumacher's 13th career victory.

Rookie Fittipaldi steers through wreckage for second

■ Nephew of two-time Indy 500 champion Emerson Fittipaldi starts 27th to all but clinch rookie of the year honors.

By Ken Kusmer
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — When your name is Fittipaldi and you're running at Indy, confidence is never a problem.

Never mind that you're a rookie starting in the back of the field.

Christian Fittipaldi, nephew of two-time Indianapolis 500 champion Emerson Fittipaldi, started 27th but steered through a crash-littered field to finish second in Sunday's race. He trailed winner Jacques Villeneuve across the finish line by just 2.481 seconds.

The finish probably cinches Fittipaldi as rookie of the year — the same Villeneuve got a year ago.

"If the car ran free of problems all day, I expected that I could finish top six," the jubilant Brazilian rookie said after the race.

"I went out (last) Sunday on a full tank, and the car was perfect. I went out on Carb Day with a full tank, and the car was racing very, very well. I was really confident for the race."

The 24-year-old veteran of 40 Formula One races never had finished higher than fourth on that circuit or higher than fifth during this, his first season in Indy cars. But he had solid support from Derrick Walker's racing team, and he had the sage advice of wily Uncle Emmo, who, had he not been surprisingly bumped from this field, certainly would have been a favorite.

"The biggest advice was just to take it easy," Fittipaldi. "It's horrible out of there the first couple of laps — a lot of turbulence, you have pieces of paper flying all over the place, and cars zigzagging in front of you. You really don't know what's happening."

A crash involving Stan Fox and five other drivers on the first lap unfolded just a few hundred yards in front of Fittipaldi as he entered his first turn of the race. Fittipaldi steered clear of that wreckage and four other crashes.

"I was confident because I was driving about 80, 90 percent of what I could, because I only wanted to learn everything I could about the Indy 500. I didn't want to stick it in the wall after 50 laps. I wanted to learn first, and then go for it the last 70 or 80 laps," he said.

By that time, he was running in the top 10, but he said an oversteering problem surfaced as he reached for more speed midway through the race. Fittipaldi endured it and overcame it.

Fittipaldi was one of six rookies in this year's race. Eliseo Salazar finished fourth, and also running at the end were Alessandro Zampedri (11th) and Andre Ribeiro (18th). The first-lap crash took out Gil de Ferran and Carlos Guerrero.

SPURS: Del Negro ties career playoff high

play it."

Vinny Del Negro tied his career playoff high for the second straight game with 19 points, nine in the third quarter when San Antonio used a 17-4 run to blow the game open. All five Spurs starters scored in double figures and Doc Rivers came off the bench to score 13.

"I must say it was our most impressive performance from start to finish," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said.

Dennis Rodman scored 12 points and had 19 rebounds, 12 offensive, as San Antonio turned bully against a Rockets team that showed few signs of the poise, precision and togetherness that had brought them five straight playoff victories and a 2-0 lead in the series.

Instead, they looked like a weary team playing its 14th playoff game in 26 days.

"Dennis was great tonight," Rivers said. "You could see it in practice yesterday. He was talking, giving advice. Dennis wants that ring."

Rodman was obviously enjoying himself, prancing around the court during breaks. Instead of a disinterested, shoeless distraction on the sidelines, he was the heart of an inside game that manhandled Houston. San Antonio had a 24-10 advantage on the offensive boards.

All eight of Rodman's rebounds in the second half were on offense.

"Dennis Rodman had 12 offensive rebounds. They get 17 more shots than us, and we get outrebounded by 25," Houston's Maro Elie said. "We've got to play better than that if we're going to win this."

It was a major understatement. If the Rockets don't play better than this, their season has two games remaining.

The Spurs outscored the Rockets 24-13 in the third quarter, when Houston went 5-for-15 from the field and committed five turnovers.

"You want to do it on the defensive end and when you hold them to 13 points, that's playing pretty good defense," Hill said.

San Antonio led 78-58 going into the final quarter and the Rockets never got closer than 14 the rest of the way.

While Olajuwon, the inside half of Houston's inside-outside attack, was far from his best, the outside half was virtually non-existent. The Rockets, who had shot 41 percent from 3-point range in the playoffs, were 1-for-8 through three quarters and finished 3-for-16.

"A lot of those babies spun around and came out," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We'll have a nice, positive shooting practice tomorrow."

The Spurs have won four straight on the road. They closed out their first two series with victories in Denver and Los Angeles.

Clyde Drexler and Robert Horry headed the list of Rockets who fizzled.

Drexler shot 3-for-11 and scored 12 points, including four in the second half for the second game in a row, and was burned repeatedly by Del Negro in the third quarter. Horry was 2-for-9 overall, scored six points, and was beaten to the hoop consistenly by Elliott late in thte game.

San Antonio controlled the game almost from the start. The Spurs led 54-45 at halftime and stretched it to 58-45 early in the third quarter. Houston had cut the lead to 61-53 when everything went wrong.

The Spurs scored the next 10, four by Del Negro, en route to a 17-4 outburst. The surge included a four-point play when Del Negro stuffed the ball on a breakaway layup and Horry was called for a foul for pushing Avery Johnson to the floor. Horry also was called for a technical.

Del Negro made the technical free throw, Johnson missed one of his, but the lead still was 74-57 and reached 76-57 before the run ended.

The Spurs outscored the Rockets 12-2 over the final 3:06 of the first half. Houston's last field goal of the half was Kenny Smith's breakaway stuff with 3:26 to play. During that run Robinson blocked a shot by Olajuwon and Hakeem lost a sure stuff shot out of bounds.

Johnson, the left-handed point guard who has played for six teams in the past seven seasons and is in his third stop in San Antonio, scored 12 of his 14 points in the first half.

Rivers scored eight in the second quarter, including two 3-pointers.

Maddux one-hits Astros for 3-1 win

AP Laserphoto

Atlanta's Greg Maddux delivers a pitch in the fourth inning against the Houston Astros. Maddux had a no-hitter through seven innings before Jeff Bagwell broke it with a home run. The Braves went on to win 3-1.

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Greg Maddux pitched the best game of his career Sunday, throwing a one-hitter to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

The only hit off Maddux was Jeff Bagwell's homer leading off the eighth inning. Maddux had retired 20 consecutive batters at that point and had allowed only one baserunner on an error in the second inning.

Maddux (4-1) threw only 97 pitches, including 68 strikes, and had seven strikeouts. His only walk was in the ninth.

The three-time Cy Young award winner had thrown eight career three-hitters, the last on Aug. 11, 1994, at Colorado. His one-hitter was the second in the majors in as many days, as Steve Ontiveros of Oakland had one Saturday against the Yankees.

Bagwell's homer to left, only the fourth ball allowed out of the infield by Maddux, came on an 0-1 pitch.

Rockies 6, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Mike Kingery and Vinny Castilla hit home runs and Marvin Freeman stayed undefeated in his career against Pittsburgh as Colorado beat the Pirates to end a four-game losing streak.

Kingery led off the third inning with his third home run and Castilla's sixth followed Dante Bichette's single.

Bichette also had an RBI single in the first against Rick White (0-1).

Freeman (1-2), who improved his career record against the Pirates to 4-0, had a career-high eight strikeouts in six innings as he dealt the Pirates their third loss in 11 games. Bruce Ruffin relieved with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth and picked up his seventh save.

Al Martin homered to lead off the Pirates' third. It was his second of the year and his fourth RBI of the season in 100 at-bats.

Giants 5, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Matt Williams, Barry Bonds and Steve Scarsone hit home runs as San Francisco beat New York.

Williams and Scarsone hit two-run homers in the eighth inning and Bonds broke a scoreless tie with a solo shot in the sixth.

Mark Portugal (3-1) allowed five hits in eighth innings, striking out three and walking two. He lost his shutout bid in the eighth when pinch-hitter Chris Jones hit a one-out homer, his second of the year.

Dave Mlicki (2-1), who gave up four runs on eight hits while striking out five and walking one in seven-plus innings, was the loser.

Reds 9, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — The Cincinnati Reds became the latest team to beat up on Danny Jackson, getting homers from Reggie Sanders and Brian Hunter in a victory over St. Louis that stretched their winning streak to seven games.

The Reds added seven doubles, including one by pitcher Tim Pugh that drove in two runs, and finished with 14 hits. Cincinnati has won 19 of its last 22 games; the Cardinals have lost 10 of 13.

Pugh (2-0), making his second start of the season, worked seven innings and allowed two runs on seven hits. His only trouble spot was in the fourth when Bernard Gilkey and Scott Hemond homered on consecutive pitches.

Cubs 13, Marlins 8

CHICAGO — Howard Johnson broke out of a slump with two homers and a single and Chicago had eight hits in a six-run fifth inning as the Cubs beat Florida.

Shawon Dunston had three hits and three RBIs in Chicago's 18-hit attack.

Johnson's first homer, a three-run shot in the fourth, snapped an 0-for-21 slump dating back to April 30. It was his first homer since last July 5 when he hit one for Colorado against the Cubs at Wrigley.

Johnson, who also homered in the seventh and singled in the eighth, now has 23 career home runs at Wrigley.

With the score tied 3-3 in the fifth, Brian McRae, Rey Sanchez and Sammy Sosa singled to make it 4-3 and Mark Grace followed with a sacrifice fly.

Padres 13, Phillies 5, (10)

PHILADELPHIA — San Diego rallied against Healthcliff Slocumb in the ninth inning and then tied the National League record for most runs in the 10th inning in a victory over Philadelphia.

The Padres sent 14 batters to the plate in the 10th and scored nine runs, matching the record set by Cincinnati against Philadelphia in 1947.

Eddie Williams' bases-loaded single snapped a 4-4 tie, reliever Trevor Hoffman (3-0) had a two-run double, Tony Gwynn drove in two runs with a single and Ken Caminiti and Melvin Nieves drove in one run each. Another run scored on a wild pitch.

Expos 5, Dodgers 1

MONTREAL — Rondell White's first career grand slam helped Jeff Fassero notch his league-leading sixth victory and sent Hideo Nomo to his first loss as Montreal beat Los Angeles.

Montreal's three-game sweep of the Dodgers raised its record to 28-5 against Los Angeles since the start of the 1990 season, including seven straight wins at home.

Fassero (6-1), allowed one run on seven hits, struck out seven and walked one. He left after giving up two singles in the eighth inning, and Tim Scott pitched two no-hit innings for his second save.

Nomo (0-1), making his sixth major league start, gave up three runs on four hits, struck out nine and walked seven.

White Sox, Tigers blast a dozen homers for major league record

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

DETROIT — The Chicago White Sox and the Detroit Tigers set a major league record with 12 homers and combined for an American League record 21 extra-base hits in Chicago's 14-12 win Sunday.

Cecil Fielder, Chad Curtis and Kirk Gibson each homered twice for the Tigers, while Ron Karkovice hit two for the White Sox. The four players with at least two homers set an AL record and tied the major league mark set in 1947 by Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Ten of the home runs were solos, another major league record. Boston and Toronto held the previous mark with seven in 1977.

The 21 extra-base hits broke the AL record of 19 set by Minnesota and Toronto in 1979. The major league record is 24.

Ray Durham broke an 11-11 tie with a three-run double off Mike Henneman in the eighth inning. Durham went 4-for-5, including a homer, and drove in four runs.

Durham, Karkovice and Craig Grebeck consecutive homers for Chicago in the fourth inning. Frank Thomas also homered for the White Sox, while Lou Whitaker got the other homer for the Tigers.

The 12 homers broke the major league record for two teams in a game, which had previously been done four times in each league.

Detroit's seven homers broke the club record of six, accomplished six times previously.

Rangers 4, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Rusty Greer drove in three runs and Roger Pavlik pitched seven strong innings as Texas won its fourth straight game with a win over Minnesota.

Pavlik (3-1), who retired the first 10 batters, allowed six hits, struck out six and walked one before being relieved in the eighth by Ed Vosberg. Roger McDowell pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his first save.

Texas, which has won 10 of its last 12, opened the scoring in the second inning when Greer followed Mark McLemore's single with his third home run of the season. The Rangers got their third run of the inning on Jeff Frye's RBI single.

Greer's run-scoring single off the right field wall in the third scored Dean Palmer to make it 4-0.

Angels 8, Red Sox 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chili Davis, J.T. Snow and Greg Myers each drove in two runs as California defeated Boston.

Snow singled home a run in the first inning and led off the third with his sixth homer, giving him eight RBIs in his last six games.

Chuck Finley (2-4) threw 122 pitches in 5 2-3 innings, but picked up his second straight victory after opening the season with four consecutive losses. He allowed six hits and three runs.

Boston starter Tim VanEgmond (0-1) gave up seven hits and five runs in 2 1-3 innings.

Tim Naehring gave the Red Sox a 1-0 lead with a run-scoring single in the first, but consecutive RBI singles by Snow and Myers in the bottom of the inning put the Angels ahead for good.

Royals 7, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Wally Joyner hit a pair of RBI doubles as Kansas City Milwaukee, handing the Brewers their seventh straight home defeat.

The Brewers, who have dropped 11 of their last 14, haven't won at County Stadium since May 12. The skid is one short of the franchise mark of eight straight home losses, set in 1987.

The Royals won their fourth straight game and third in a row over the Brewers, whom they swept for the first time since 1991. Kansas City also won two of three in Toronto to go 5-1 on the road trip.

Yankees 4, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bernie Williams homered and Jim Leyritz had three singles as New York broke out of a slump with 10 hits in a win over Oakland.

The Yankees had scored just six runs while losing the first five games of their nine-game road trip. New York was held to a total of five hits in losses Friday and Saturday to Oakland.

Mariano Rivera (1-1), making his second major-league start, allowed one run on seven hits in 5 1-3 innings for New York. He got only three outs on ground balls and allowed at least one baserunner in every inning.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Jim Thome, Manny Ramirez and Tony Pena homered as Cleveland beat Toronto.

Cleveland starter Charles Nagy (3-1) went six innings, giving up one run on six hits.

Jose Mesa, the fifth Indians pitcher, got his eighth save despite giving up an RBI single to Joe Carter in the ninth. He worked out of a bases-loaded jam by getting Ed Sprague to hit into an inning-ending double play.

Toronto starter Danny Darwin (1-4) allowed only three hits in six innings, but two were homers by Ramirez and Pena.

The Blue Jays loaded the bases three times — twice with one out, the other with none out — but only managed sacrifice flies by Robbie Alomar in the fifth and Devon White in the eighth.

Mariners 5, Orioles 2

SEATTLE — Mike Blowers hit a two-run single during a four-run Seattle fourth inning as the Mariners beat Baltimore 5-2 on Sunday night.

Blowers entered the game in the first inning for second baseman Joey Cora, who was forced to leave after colliding with center fielder Alex Diaz while attempting to catch a bloop double by Jeffrey Hammonds.

Chris Bosio (3-0) lowered his ERA to 2.25, allowing one run on four hits in 5 1-3 innings. He struck out four and walked four, and Bobby Ayala pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

The Mariners have won four of their last five games.

Tech wins two; Texas, Rice eliminated

The Associated Press

■ College Baseball

WICHITA, Kan. — Clint Bryant homered twice and batted in five runs as Texas Tech beat Arkansas 14-10 Sunday, eliminating the Razorbacks from the NCAA Midwest I Regional.

Sunday night, Brandon Kolb held Stanford to three hits as Tech won 3-1 in the third round.

Kolb (6-2) struck out six, walked two and allowed one earned run, a fourth inning home run from A.J. Hinch.

Texas Tech (51-12) went ahead on Brandon Welch's two-run single in the bottom of the fourth, and scored again in the seventh.

The Red Raiders are 3-0 in the tournament. Stanford (36-23) drops to 2-1.

Todd Bartels (4-4) gave up seven hits and three runs and struck out five for the loss.

Against Arkansas, Andy Gonzales hit for the meaty end of the cycle, with a home run, a triple and a double on three hits for two RBIs. Also picking up two RBIs apiece for Texas Tech (50-12) were Brandon Welch, David Lindstrom and Dax Holmstead.

Jimmy Frush (5-1) threw three strikeouts, walked none and allowed nine hits and four runs in 5 1/3 innings of relief for the win in the second round game.

Texas A&M 4, Fla. International 2

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Texas A&M's Jeff Bailey stroked a two-run homer, boosting the Aggies to a victory over Florida International University in the NCAA Atlantic II Regional.

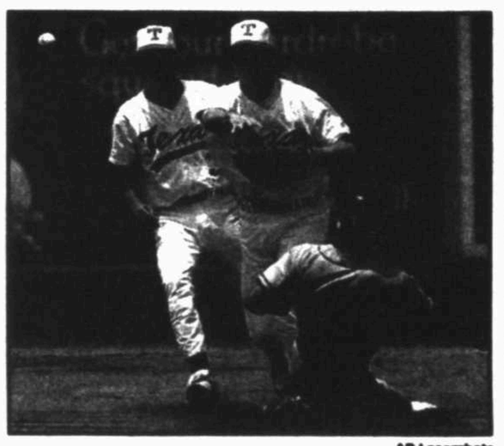

Florida International (50-11) was eliminated.

Texas A&M 7, N.Carolina 0

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Freshman John Sneed tossed a six-hit shutout and Chad Allen banged a three-run homer to help Texas A&M defeat North Carolina and advance to the championship game in the Atlantic II Regional.

The Aggies play undefeated Miami at 2 p.m. Monday in the double elimination tournament. If Texas A&M wins, a second game would follow to see who will go to the College World Series.

AP Laserphoto

Auburn's Ken Kay (1) is out at second as Texas second baseman Wylie Campbell, center, completes a double play. Kip Harkrider, brother of Midland Angel shortstop Tim Harkrider, backs him up.

Cal State Fullerton 8, Rice 7

BATON ROUGE, La. — Mike Lamb drove Cal State-Fullerton (53-9) into the College World Series with a ninth-inning sacrifice fly that scored the winning run.

The victory — Fullerton's second against Rice (43-19) after beating the Owls 17-7 Saturday — gave Cal State a perfect record in the regional.

Auburn 4, Texas 2

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kevin Humphreys pitched 8 2-3 strong innings and Auburn scored three runs in the ninth to beat Texas and stay alive in the NCAA Midwest II regional.

Top-seeded Auburn (50-12) advanced to play No. 2 seed Oklahoma on Sunday night. The Tigers needed to beat Oklahoma twice to reach the College World Series.

Texas, which wasted an outstanding pitching performance from freshman Brian McKinney, ends its season 44-19.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MAY 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make romance a top priority. A recently-formed alliance should be the source of special blessings, especially next fall. Plan a backyard vacation if concerned about travel expenses. A business boom is possible at year's end. Early in 1996, seek experts' advice on making wise investments. A common-sense approach will pay off.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Annette Bening, auto racer Al Unser, producer Stacy Keach Sr., patriot Patrick Henry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A new romantic relationship could have you reassessing a decision made long ago. Special benefits accrue from your friendship with an older person. A search for knowledge will pay off at the bargaining table.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Reflect on what has just happened and you will gain a clearer view of the future. A conversation regarding financial security produces a useful idea.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get an early start today if traveling by car. Influential people will live up to their promises. Useful agreements can be negotiated in casual surroundings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A family member may be financially dependent on you. Speak up; clear the air about an unpopular decision. Someone urges you to make a greater contribution to the community. Dedicate yourself to visionary projects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Practical matters come up for discussion this morning. Let a savvy friend help you manage your money more efficiently. Postpone signing contracts. Taking a break from romance tonight gives you time for reflection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotional issues are in the spotlight. Spend some time evaluating a relationship that is over yet retains a strong hold on your psyche. Let others take the lead in organizing social activities. Avoid criticizing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A part-time job could really pay off. Welcome a friend's offer to help with practical tasks. Something you thought impossible requires an organized approach. You will enjoy being one of the crowd tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are about to receive some well-deserved perks at work. Beware of the green-eyed monster; shun jealous co-workers. Spending more time with your loved ones will help you understand their needs better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A long-time relationship may have grown stale. If so, try to fall in love all over again. Being a fence-sitter is not your style. Reveal your creativity for everyone to see.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Talking with special friends or associates could lead to important new business and social contacts. Be slow to criticize, quick to praise! A relationship with a younger person shows steady improvement. Emphasize shared interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The launching of an important new project should be postponed until you catch up on routine tasks. Your mate's moodiness may be due to poor health. Offer to make a medical appointment. Nurture your love life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing will be achieved in the romance department unless you are willing to make the first move. You could meet someone quite intriguing if you go out this evening. Put your best foot forward.

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ ANSWERS

Q. 1 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AKQ74 ♡K542 ◇K9 ♣63

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - If you play that partner's two-over-one response is forcing to game, all you need do now is raise to three hearts — four hearts would show no interest in anything beyond game. If not, jump to four hearts to show a better-than-minimum hand.

Q. 2 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠QJ1054 ♡K53 ◇AKJ10 ♣8

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

What do you rebid?

A - Easy does it. Although partner's response is music to your ears, you still have a minimum in terms of point count. Set the trump suit by raising to three hearts and, should partner make a slam try, cooperate happily.

Q. 3 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK763 ♡K104 ◇8 ♣AK109

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

What do you bid now?

A - You have a good hand, and the way to show it is to first bid your second suit at the three-level, then raise hearts at your next turn, at the five-level if necessary. That will not only show your strength but highlight your diamond shortness. Bid three clubs.

Q. 4 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠QJ985 ♡73 ◇AKJ95 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

What do you bid now?

A - You do not have the strength to introduce a new suit at the three-level. Since you also lack sufficient heart support for a raise, all you can do is rebid two spades, despite the fact that your suit is only five cards long and of relatively poor quality.

Q. 5 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AKJ76 ♡AK1094 ◇K6 ♣4

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	1NT	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - No matter how weak partner's one no trump response, you want to be in game in whichever major you have an eight-card fit — and don't discount the possibility of slam. The way to make sure you find the optimum contract is to jump-shift to three hearts now, then rebid four hearts at your next turn.

Q. 6 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQJ76 ♡Q105 ◇AQ ♣K94

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

What do you bid now?

A - Your fifth spade made your hand worth more than 18 points, which is why you did not open one no trump in the first place. Even if partner has a dead minimum six points, you should have play for game. Jump to three no trump.

Horse throws Christopher Reeve into hospital during jumping event

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Christopher Reeve was thrown from his steed during a horse-jumping competition and was in stable condition on Sunday.

Actor Christopher Reeve is in stable condition.

The actor who starred in the "Superman" movies was admitted to the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville after the accident on Saturday, said his publicist, Lisa Kasteler.

Reeve, 42, was approaching the third jump of a 15-jump course when "something spooked the horse," said Monk Reynolds, owner of Commonwealth Park in Culpeper, about 45 miles northeast of Charlottesville.

"His horse just stopped dead and threw him," said Reynolds.

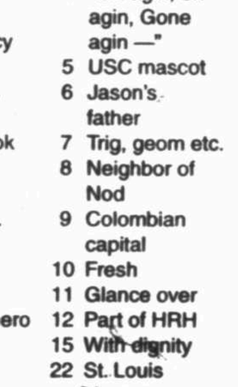

He said Reeve appeared to suffer a neck injury and was carried off the field in a stretcher.

The actor's family asked hospital officials not to comment. Kasteler would say only that he was in stable condition.

NEW YORK — Stage fright makes Tim Roth wary of switching from movies to the theater.

"It's that waiting in the wings to go on that makes your hands sweat," Roth told the Daily News for a story Sunday. "It's just the fear of walking on stage, just getting out there that's terrifying."

Stage fright makes Roth wary of switching from movies.

Roth, who played an 18th-century villain in "Rob Roy," a Russian hit man in "Little Odessa" and Vincent Van Gogh in "Vincent and Theo," says he's been afraid of the stage ever since he won the part of Dracula in high school.

"Before I went on, I actually wet myself," Roth said, laughing at the memory. "But after I got out there in front of the audience for the first time, I just fell in love with acting."

RADNOR, Pa. — Jill Hennessy has been turning a lot of heads since taking the role of an assistant district attorney on NBC's "Law & Order."

Hennessy said she was jogging in New York's Central Park recently when Madonna and a friend trotted past, then looked back at her.

"I could hear her say to her companion 'She's hot,'" Hennessy says in TV Guide's June 3 issue. "Maybe she thought I was sweaty or something."

Hennessy said she doesn't base her Claire Kincaid character on O.J. Simpson prosecutor Marcia Clark, but she's quick to jump to Clark's defense.

"I'm tired of people criticizing her hair," Hennessy said. "Here she is prosecuting the trial of the century and that's what they complain about?"

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Larry King says he doesn't even pretend to be a journalist.

Larry King doesn't even pretend to be a journalist, he says.

"Hey, I'm an infotainer," King tells the June 3 issue of TV Guide.

King, host of CNN's "Larry King Live" for 10 years now, says he doesn't worry that critics say he avoids tough questions.

"I never said I was a journalist. I'm just an interviewer," he said. "I'm a conduit. I'm not here to judge people."

CANNES, France — Gary Oldman intends to make his directorial debut with a story based on his memories of growing up in a dreary South London suburb.

Oldman, 37, had a tough childhood after his father, a welder, disappeared when he was 7. He once told The Associated Press he began acting to avoid the only other occupations in his neighborhood: policemen and villains.

"Gary got tired of seeing in British films a description of the suburbs that wasn't at all like the reality he lived through," French filmmaker Luc Besson, who will produce the film, told the magazine Le Film Francais.

Last year, Besson directed Oldman in "The Professional."

Lehman rallies for Colonial victory

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

FORT WORTH — Tom Lehman birdied the last two holes to overtake Craig Parry in a one-shot victory Sunday in the Colonial National Invitation.

Lehman caught the front-running Parry with an 18-foot birdie putt on 17, then went in front with a 30-footer on the final hole.

The latter sent him romping around the green in a victory canter — a la Hale Irwin in the 1990 U.S. Open at Medinah — with both arms raised in triumph.

"To birdie 17 and 18 like that was unbelievable," said Lehman, who had a closing 2-under-par 68. "I may have looked pretty stupid, but I was just so excited."

The 36-year-old Lehman, a graduate of the Ben Hogan Tour, acquired his second PGA Tour triumph with a 271 total, nine under par on the Colonial Country Club course.

Parry, the stocky 5-foot-6 Australian who led after both the second and third rounds, watched Lehman's victory dance from the fairway.

Needing a birdie to tie and force a playoff, he hit to about 15 feet.

"I thought I made it when I hit it," he said, but the right-to-left putt broke across the face of the cup and his final-round 71 left him still seeking his fist victory since joining the American tour in 1992.

"I threw it away on the front (which he played in two over)," Parry said. "I let a lot of guys back in. Oh, Lehman won it, all right. Birdies on 17 and 18 are fabulous. But I gave him the opportunity."

Parry, a 10-time winner around the world, remained confident he would break through on the American tour.

"I'm sure I'll win. It's just a matter of time," he said.

D.A. Weibring, who birdied two of the last four holes, gained third alone with a 67 and a 274 total.

Woody Austin, a 31-year-old rookie who was working as a bank teller as late as last November, led or shared the lead over much of the final round.

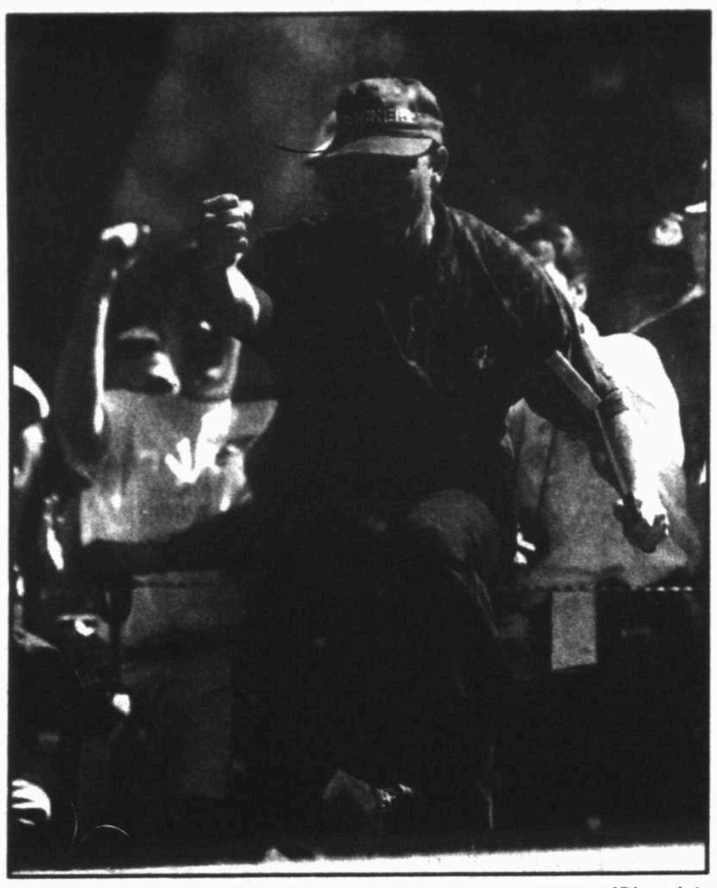

But bogeys on 11 and 12 cost him dearly, and a last-hole bogey dropped him out of a share of third as he shot 73 for 275.

Senior Quicksilver

MIDWAY, Pa. — Dave Stockton's string of late birdies allowed him to overcome a final-hole bogey for a one-stroke win over Isao Aoki in the $1.1 million tourney.

Stockton, who had birdies on Nos. 4, 7 and 11, came up with three straight starting on No. 15 in a 5-under-par 67 that gave him an 8-under 208 total for the 54 holes.

Aoki birdied 18 for a 69 that left him second alone, one stroke in front of defending champion Dave Eichelberger, Tom Wargo and George Archer, who started the day with a two-stroke lead. Wargo had a final-round 67, while Eichelberger had 71 and Archer 73.

AP Laserphoto

Tom Lehman celebrates sinking a putt on the 17th hole during his run at Craig Parry for the Colonial National Invitational title. Lehman birdied the final two holes Sunday in the final round to finish a 9-under par.

The win was the 11th on the senior tour for Stockton, who also won that many times on the PGA Tour. The $165,000 first prize brings him to $587,160 this year, third-best on the senior tour.

"My tax year ends May 31, so my accountant is probably having a heart attack about now," Stockton said.

Stockton set himself up well late, chipping within a club length on Nos. 14 and 15 and within six feet on the next two holes.

"I was just trying to make birdies. I'd make a few and look up and say, 'Ah, I eliminated two or three guys.' Then it would be, 'Ah, I eliminated a couple more,'" Stockton said.

His biggest elimination was Eichelberger, a winner by two strokes last year. Eichelberger led by two strokes as late as No. 12 but bogeyed four on the back nine.

He hooked his second shot from the rough into the two-deep crowd, missed a 10-foot putt at 13 and made bogey.

"My driver just went to pieces on me," Eichelberger said. "I was pulling everything way left. ... I kind of did the same thing last year, but the difference was nobody was making birdies."

LPGA Corning Classic

CORNING, N.Y. — Alison Nicholas' par round of 72 was enough to hold off a late challenge from Barb Mucha en route to a three-stroke victory in the $550,000 tournament.

Nicholas, starting the final round at 13 under, nearly relinquished a five-stroke lead before hanging on for her first career victory on the LPGA Tour with a 275 total.

Nicholas moved to 17 under with a birdie on No. 6 and had a four-shot lead over Pat Bradley through seven holes before playing the next nine holes at four over.

Mucha charged near the front of the field with birdies on 11 and 14 and drew within one shot of Nicholas with a birdie on 16. Mucha made par on 17 before finishing with a double-bogey and in a tie with Danielle Ammaccapane for second.

Ammaccapane made four straight birdies on the front and moved to 11 under, but her run was too late to catch Nicholas.

Bradley, who led after the first two rounds, could not regain her form in the final round. She shot a 2-over 74 and three-putted 18 to finish alone in fourth.

Nicholas, who shot 70 on the first day, pulled away during the first six holes Sunday.

The 33-year-old from Birmingham, England, dropped a 30-foot putt to save par on No. 1 and followed with three straight birdies.

Nicholas earned $82,500 with the victory to push her yearly earnings to $105,447. She also moved from 74th into the top 25 on the LPGA money list.

LPGA Skins

FRISCO — Dottie Mochrie, shut out during the first nine holes, pocketed a record $290,000 over the final nine to emerge as the overall winner in the LPGA Skins Game.

Mochrie, the third-leading money winner on the LPGA Tour, got off to a spectacular start when she rolled in a 40-foot chip shot from behind the green at No. 10, Sunday's opening hole. That earned Mochrie her first $30,000 of the event and got her jump-started on a day when when she would win eight of the nine available skins.

In the pivotal hole of the tournament, Mochrie converted a 16-foot birdie putt at No. 15 for $180,000. That sent Mochrie past Laura Davies, who finished second with $140,000.

Hall of Famer Patty Sheehan collected $110,000 Saturday to edge Davies by $10,000 as the first-day leader, but she failed to win a skin Sunday.

Nancy Lopez failed to win a skin over the 6,296-yard, par-72 Stonebriar Country Club course. Lopez, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, also was blanked in last year's Skins Game.

Davies, the tour's leading money-winner, had an opportunity to overtake Mochrie at the par-5 18th, worth $80,000.

European PGA Championship

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Welshman Mark Mouland, winless since 1988, had an eagle and six birdies for a third-round 65 and a share of the lead with Bernhard Langer in the $1.44 million European PGA Championship.

Langer would have had the outright lead but he bogeyed the final hole for a 4-under-par 68.

Mouland and Langer had 54-hole scores of 208 and a one-stroke lead over Sweden's Per-Ulrik Johansson and England's Andrew Sherborne.

Nick Faldo and Jose Maria Canizares were next at 210.

Johansson shot a 69, Sherborne a 72, Faldo a 71 and Canizares a 71.

Mouland's round came in blustery conditions early in the day.

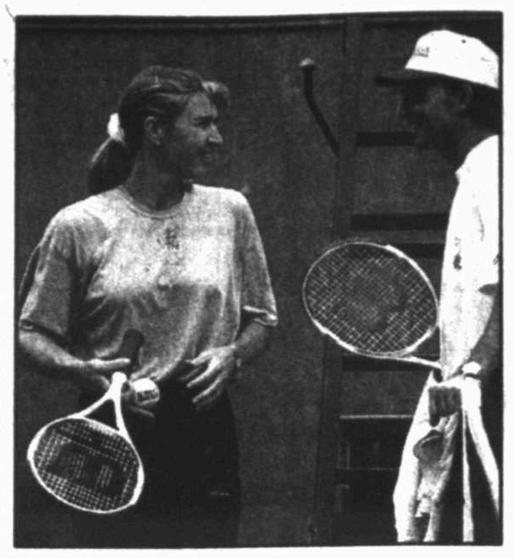

At the 191-yard fifth, he hit a four-iron to six feet, and at the 398-yard eighth, his eight-iron approach took one bounce and landed in the hole for an eagle.

Beginning at the 11th, Mouland birdied three straight holes — from 12, six and 15 feet. He three-putted the 15th for his only bogey.

Mouland pitched to eight feet at the 571-yard 17th and used a driver from the 18th fairway to get onto the green, finishing with two more birdies.

Langer was nearly faultless until his three-wood second shot to the 18th bounced off a tree into a rhododendron bush, from where he took four more shots to hole out.

"It was a great round until then," said Langer, who Saturday broke a tour record by surviving his 57th cut in a row.

French Open starts today with three top men's contenders

PARIS (AP) — Andre Agassi has the incentive, Thomas Muster has the momentum and Sergi Bruguera has the know-how.

The French Open starts today with three main contenders but no overwhelming favorite.

On paper, Muster should be considered the man to beat: he has dominated the clay-court season by winning five tournaments and 28 straight matches.

But several players wonder whether Muster may have peaked too soon and question whether he can keep up the pace for seven best-of-5 matches over two weeks.

"You wonder if maybe Thomas has had such a successful season on clay that he might be a little tired going into the French," Michael Chang, the 1989 champion, said.

"You often see that guys who have great results before Roland Garros lose a bit of force," tournament director Patrice Clerc said. "I think it will be tough for Muster to go all the way."

Even Muster, who is seeded fifth, is downplaying the expectations and taking a casual attitude about his chances.

"Nobody's going to expect me to win," the Austrian left-hander said. "If it happens, it's a great day at the office. If not, I have another week off. That's OK."

Muster reached the semifinals in 1990 but never has advanced as far as the quarterfinals in eight other appearances.

The top-seeded Agassi has won the last two Grand Slam tournaments, the 1994 U.S. Open and the Australian Open in January, to go with his Wimbledon title in 1992. He took over the No. 1 ranking from Pete Sampras in April and now is on a mission to win the French.

Agassi was runner-up at Paris in 1990 and 1991. If he succeeds this year, he will become the first American since Don Budge in 1938 — and the first of any nationality since Rod Laver in 1969 — to win all four Grand Slams in his career.

"Winning the French Open is more important for me than being No. 1," Agassi said. "Winning all four titles would be amazing. I'm going into the tournament knowing I can win it."

Bruguera, seeded No. 7, has won the French two years in a row and is seeking to become the only man to win it three stright years since Bjorn Borg did it four times from 1978-81.

On the women's side, top-seeded defending champion Arantxa Sanchez Vicario plays Sung-Hee Park, while three-time champion Steffi Graf has a tough first-round test against Ines Gorrochategui.

Based on current form, the women's favorite is fourth-seeded Conchita Martinez. After going through a slump following her surprise Wimbledon victory last summer, she has won 19 straight matches and four consecutive clay-court titles.

The woman Sanchez Vicario beat in last year's final, Mary Pierce, won the Australian Open in January but has had a mediocre clay-court season. She will be the crowd favorite again as she tries to become the first French woman to win since Francoise Durr in 1967.

Edberg leads Sweden to World Team Cup win over Croatia, 2-1

DUESSELDORF, Germany — Stefan Edberg won his singles and doubles matches Sunday, helping Sweden beat Croatia 2-1 and win the World Team Cup tournament.

Edberg beat Sasa Hirszon 6-4, 6-1, then teamed with Jonas Bjoerkman to defeat Hirszon and Goran Ivanisevic 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, giving Sweden its third title in the $1.8 million tournament. The Swedes also won in 1988 and 1991.

The four titles of the United States top Sweden, but the Americans were winless this year without some of its top players.

Sweden's experienced team won the 1994 Davis Cup and will defend that title in the semifinals against a U.S. team in September at Las Vegas.

"I had an easy task here in Duesseldorf — my players know what to do," Carl Hageskog, Sweden's team captain, said. "I hope we can defend that title successfully."

The U.S. team is likely to be favored, with the addition of Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras. At Duesseldorf, Todd Martin and MaliVai Washington played singles for the Americans.

Croatia evened the singles against Sweden when the fourth-ranked Ivanisevic, displaying a new mastery on clay, beat 10th-ranked Magnus Larsson 6-4, 6-4.

The hard-serving left-hander is better known for overpowering opponents on faster surfaces, but Larsson was his fourth top 20 victim at Duesseldorf.

The others were Russia's Yevgeny Kafelnikov, Spain's Alberto Berasategui and Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands.

"I'm very happy with my game on clay," Ivanisevic said. "I hope it stays that way for the French Open."

The World Team Cup gave some of the world's top players a final tuneup for the French Open, which begins Monday.

Ivanisevic used drop shots and patient baseline play to exploit two break opportunities against Larsson. At match point, he fired home his 12th ace of the match.

Bolgna Open

BOLOGNA, Italy — Chile's Marcelo Rios won a battle of unseeded players to capture the 303,000 Bologna Open and his first ATP tournament.

Rios downed Marcelo Filippini of Uruguay 6-2, 6-4 in a matching lasting just one hour and 14 minutes. He took home dlrs 43,000 in prize money.

Strasbourg Open

STRASBOURG, France — Top-seeded Lindsay Davenport beat Kimiko Date of Japan 3-6, 6-1, 6-2 in the final of the Strasbourg Open tennis tournament.

The victory avenged a loss to Date in the Pan-Pacific final in February. It was Davenport's fourth career title, her third on clay.

Davenport said she was tired after three matches in less than 36 hours. She had to win in the quarterfinals Saturday morning after rain interrupted her match with Judith Wiesner and play again in the afternoon in the semifinals.

"I was tired and had a hard time getting into the match," Davenport said.

Davenport was happy to return to competition with a victory. She was out almost two months, including three weeks in bed with pneumonia.

Some ingenious coffee bar and cart owners have found a way to increase business by steaming eggs in their espresso machines. Fresh Cup, a magazine aimed at the coffee industry, says steaming eggs gives purveyors of latte and macchiato a chance to expand their menus without buying griddles, grills or other machinery. The eggs can be served with croissants and cheese. Customers get an instant breakfast.

Children's report

Barnes & Noble, known for its growing chain of combination bookstores and cafes, opens its 1994 annual report with a children's story. In the tale by author and illustrator Maira Kalman, a fictional character, Penelope Wise, describes a Barnes & Noble store. Penelope, a dachshund, says, "I like a fish store, of course. A hardware store is good. But a bookstore is paradise. (heaven) A bookstore is home." The story explains Penelope's experiences in the store and describes her fellow shoppers. Unlike other stories, however, the back cover of the report says, "Not the end."

Daddy dearest

When men are actively involved in parenting, their children will do better intellectually, according to an article in Child magazine. The June-July issue quotes Yale psychiatry Professor Kyle Pruett as saying that if fathers are involved during their children's first six months, the kids will have better scores on intellectual and motor development tests later. Pruett based his findings on a study in which he examined the impact of fathers' care on families 10 years ago. He revisited the same families.

Green medicine

Adding plants to office space can help improve employee health, contends the Associated Landscape Contractors of America. The trade group may have self-interest at heart but it cites a Washington State University study that found plants placed inside of offices helped raise the relative humidity level, making workers less vulnerable to colds and other illnesses fostered by dry air. The landscapers say greenery helps in the workplace in other ways, improving morale and making workers feel more like working. Prettier surroundings also attract prospective employees.

Soft economic landing? Maybe no landing at all

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — After all this talk about an economic soft landing, maybe there won't be a landing at all. Maybe the economy will fly some more.

A sense of that is spreading. Rather than settling into a peaceful limbo between boom and bust, as we have been prepared to expect, maybe we'll soon be hearing the economic engines speeding up.

That seems to be what the securities markets are saying. Evidence of it can be detected in some corporate plans. It is now widely suggested by some of the more confident among the forecasting crowd.

The Conference Board's Gail Fosler said so this week. Economist Richard Hokenson, talks of an imminent re-acceleration. A corporate buyer survey shows 38 percent foresee better business vs. 20 percent who see worse.

It's as if the plane's seat-belt sign were blinking and passengers, lulled by the slow descent, the lack of turbulence and the calm communications, were set for an easy landing — only to be told the flight had a long way to go.

Hokenson, who plies his trade at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, expects an economic "surprise," within a few weeks in the "emergence of an apparent spontaneous rebound in sales of cars, trucks and appliances."

The rebound, he suggests, will be fed by the arrival — finally, after what he says was an unprecedented delay — of individual income tax refunds. That delay, he says, created the appearance of an economy weaker than it was.

Realistically, he suggests that if his thesis is correct, it still might be a while before the realization sinks in that the economy is growing, and that Americans can't expect the Federal Reserve to continue lowering interest rates.

In fact, at its latest meeting this week, the Fed's Open Market Committee took no action on rates, more or less confirming the opinion of those who feel the economy is capable of continued growth without further rate spurs.

Still, no Fed action of any kind is likely to quiet the economic discussion because, after all, you can't do much about the future except discuss it and then, if you

Downright unneighborly

Just getting along a characteristic from a bygone era

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

AP/Bob Bianchini

NEW YORK — Stephen and Vici Diehl moved to a rural village in upstate New York 16 years ago to escape the noise and congestion of city life.

The couple, both nature photographers, found the tranquility they longed for on their 1.5-acre spread in Antwerp, N.Y.; that is, until last year, when a neighbor started playing loud music daily around Christmas. The Diehls had to go to court to get the music toned down.

The couple's problem was noteworthy because the neighbor happened to be the Congregational Church of Antwerp, which broadcasted taped Andy Williams carols from loudspeakers on its steeple.

Squabbles about loud music, bright lights, blocked views or wayward trees have been going on for centuries between households, businesses, schools, even churches. Often, the exchanges are anything but neighborly.

"People are having essentially the same fights now as they did 400 years ago," said Mark Warda, author of "Neighbor vs. Neighbor," which chronicles the more bizarre quarrels dating back to the 1500s.

There were neighbors who fought because one cooked too much onion and cabbage soup, a homeowner who built a 12-foot "spite fence" so close to another home that the resident couldn't open her door, and a farmer who sued a neighbor because his honking car horn caused 9,000 chickens to riot.

Most disputes center on more mundane issues, with noise the common complaint among residential neighbors and parking the No. 1 grievance between residences and businesses, according to the American Bar Association's section of dispute resolutions, which oversees 500 mediation centers nationwide.

Problems of any sort can hurt not only the quality of life of those involved but their property values — something home buyers should be aware of before investing in any property.

"A good neighbor won't raise your property value, but a bad neighbor will lower it," said John Reed, who publishes Real Estate Investor's Monthly.

Cora Jordan, author of "Neighbor Law," suggests buyers talk to realtors, neighbors, even town hall employees to get a feel for a community before closing a deal.

"You can tell a lot by looking at the street," she said. "If there's a basketball hoop next door, you know there's children and there's probably going to be noise. If there's a dog house, you know there's a dog ... which also can be noisy."

Jordan notes that in California, home sellers must disclose any known problems — such as their street being used as a shortcut for evening traffic.

Of course, there are no guarantees that even the best of conditions won't change for the worse.

"You may have the best neighbors in the world living next door, but they could leave next year," said Jordan. "You can have the most beautiful view ... and then a 30-story building gets in its way and there's nothing you can do about it."

The Diehls, formerly of Rochester, N.Y., thought they had little to worry about when they bought their 1827 Greek revival house in Antwerp, about 40 miles from Canada. The neighborhood, which included three churches, was quiet and friendly.

Mrs. Diehl said the rural serenity was shattered last year when the Congregational Church, 600 feet from her home, started blaring Christmas carols eight hours a day, every day during the holidays. Pastor Kenneth Leamon said he began playing the carols after a church member bequeathed money for a continuous-play tape machine and loudspeakers. The music was a gift to the village's 800 residents, he said.

But Mrs. Diehl, who complains she lost weight and sleep over the ordeal, said the music was too loud for her and her husband.

"We weren't able to talk to each other outside ... and we're outside people," she said, adding that the music also caused vibrations inside her house.

Unable to resolve the dispute on their own, the Diehls sued, and a judge ordered the broadcast cut back to two one-hour sessions daily.

Liberal arts grads find job market best in years

Associated Press

DALLAS — Liberal arts graduates can afford to be philosophical — as in calm and composed — about this year's job market.

College career offices report the best recruiting activity in years, not only for health sciences and technical graduates but for their colleagues in English, psychology, language and other arts or social science majors.

"It's been wonderful; we've had students making choices between offers," said Fran Bock, director of career services at Austin College in Sherman.

What's going on, in large part, is a rising economic tide that's lifting all boats. At least important, though, are the lessons savvy schools and students learned during the lean years — that there's more to getting a job after graduation than a diploma. Internships and other work experience, extracurricular activities and a good personal marketing plan are increasingly important.

Fifty-three percent of 365 career services offices surveyed this spring by the National Association of Colleges and Employers reported increased recruiting activity on campus and starting salaries are up as well. Engineering and health sciences grads still far outpace arts and social science grads, but this year's news is that English graduates started at $22,520 on average — up 5.4 percent from 1994, and sociology grads were right behind them at $22,298.

Cautionary tales about English lit majors driving taxis or flipping burgers have had their effect.

While liberal arts graduates will probably never see the kind of demand afforded technical grads, they're learning to seek out the companies that value their broader education — and to pick up some practical skills and salesmanship along the way.

Consider Kim Head, a French political science major at Southern Methodist University, now working in her first year as an analyst for Morgan Stanley in Manhattan. (SMU career advisors steer their top liberal arts students to two-year analyst programs at investment banking and consulting firms, known for their propensity to hire liberal arts grads in these short-term jobs.)

"The more I found out about it, the more I liked the idea of a two-year program where I could get exposed to a lot of different industries," said Ms. Head. Did she think about job

NEW YORK — Read the book. Now buy the mutual fund.

Robert Hagstrom, author of "The Warren Buffett Way," the book that details the investing strategies that made Buffett a billionaire, is the portfolio manager of a recently launched mutual fund that uses some of those techniques.

The Focus Trust fund, however, won't duplicate the holdings of Buffett's investment fund, Berkshire Hathaway Inc. But it will look closely at them.

NEIGHBORS: Litigious nature prompts increased restrictions

(From 1D)

Bernard and Sonja Arbuse of Palm Beach, Fla. also resorted to legal action to get a woman living in the condo above them to stop walking around in high heels in the middle of the night.

"I don't think anybody would object to her wearing high heels during the day or early evening hours, but we're talking about after midnight. ... She was parading back and forth," said Charles Nugent, the Arbuses' attorney.

Sometimes such problems can be resolved through a property association or mediated through a dispute resolution board. There's a board in every major city, handling in total about 1.5 million neighbor problems annually, according to Larry Ray, director of the ABA's resolution section.

Ray said disputes are settled in around 90 percent of the cases in which both parties agree to appear before the boards.

But many more neighborhood tiffs fill the court dockets, particularly small claims.

Unsuccessful in filing criminal charges, 20 neighbors in Berkeley, Calif., recently banded together to put a house suspected of being used for drug deals out of business. They sued the absentee landlord for the loud noises and increased traffic around the property. A judge awarded each $2,000. The landlord, faced with more fines if the annoyances continued, kicked the tenants out.

Other cases aren't as easily resolved or defined; an annoyance for some may be a delight for others. Take one of the most publicized neighborhood soap operas:

Each year, Osborne Jennings of Little Rock, Ark. lights up his main residence and two adjacent lots with millions of Christmas lights. Neighbors successfully sued to tone down the elaborate display last year, charging it caused traffic congestion that prevents them from enjoying their own property during the holidays.

Bernard and Sonja Arbuse resorted to legal action to get a woman living in a condo above them to stop walking around in high heels in the middle of the night.

"It looks like a Las Vegas strip mall packed down into a six-acre block," said Gary Corum, an attorney representing about 200 residents.

"He's making Christmas better for all the people who don't have much by providing this light display," countered Samuel Perroni, Jennings' attorney, who recently petitioned the U.S. Supreme Court to settle the case.

Many municipalities have zoning ordinances and nuisance laws to protect residents' rights to enjoy their property — like mandating leashes for animals and prohibiting spite fences or excessive noise after certain hours.

Planned housing developments often go further, restricting everything from house colors to landscaping.

But sometimes rules can go too far.

City codes in Tulsa, Okla., say outdoor vegetation should be no higher than 12 inches unless in cultivated gardens. The Urban Development Department was ready to mow down hundreds of waist-high wildflowers in Evelyn Connors' front yard last year.

One unknown resident outside the neighborhood reportedly had complained, but hundreds more rallied to her defense and the natural garden was spared.

"It was really kind of fun," the 84-year-old Mrs. Connors said recently. "They're even doing a movie about me. I don't know how they're going to make a movie about something that lasted just two days.

"In the movie I'm going to have to go to court."

JOBS: Work search done largely on phone

search early in college? You bet, said Ms. Head.

"I never went so far as to change my major to business. But I was always in the career center." She had three job experiences in college — for a musical publishing firm, at Dallas City Hall and selling insurance for Northwestern Mutual Life. Ms. Head believes her grades — a 3.5 grade point average — helped her make the first cut at Morgan Stanley and that "fit" was the rest.

At Austin College, Zeke Ashton figured early on that he'd have to lay plans for a tough labor market despite a double major in business and German. "For the last three years I've been told there's no job market out there, especially for liberal arts grads, so I figured I'd have to be enterprising," said Ashton, who graduated last weekend.

So enterprising that he decided to find an internship on his own during his junior year of study abroad in Vienna. "I was sitting in a cafe going over a list of companies I wanted to work for that were doing business in Vienna, when I picked up some phrases like 'currency swaps' from the conversation at the next table. I figured they were Americans."

Ashton went over and introduced himself. Before he was through, he'd volunteered to work for free as an intern. The company, Wall Street Systems, took him up on it. The experience went so well that he just accepted an offer to work for the firm in Manhattan.

If students have learned, so have their career offices. TCU, for instance, relocated to a more visible spot on campus — "between the student center and the mall, near the horned frog statue," said Carolyn Ulrickson, director of career services. TCU also started this year offering students an electronic resume builder called "Resume Expert." Their resumes are kept in a data base that career office personnel can scan and send to interested employers.

Interested employers this year include banks, insurance firms, retailers, restaurant chains (for management training programs) and "some companies you've never heard of," smaller employers who are fueling job growth, Ms. Ulrickson said.

NationsBank interviews liberal arts majors for its retail management program, said Emily Greer, regional manager for professional recruiting at NationsBank Texas. "They bring to the table an ability to assimilate a lot of information and to think outside of the box, do creative problem-solving," said Ms. Greer, who has a master's degree in liberal arts.

Zak Noelder, a 1993 theater arts graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, Okla., emphasized his skills in verbal and written communication to land a job as an adjuster in the workers' compensation section of Thomas Howell Group in Dallas. "You do most of your work on the telephone," said Noelder.

BUFFETT: Understand business you buy

(From 1D)

American Express Co. and Gannett Co., also happen to be among Buffett's holdings. The third stock in the fund is William Wrigley Jr. Co.

"We're at an advantage because Buffett has gone first to look at (stocks the fund may want to own)," Hagstrom said. "Of course we're going to look at every single thing he owns."

The Buffett way is this: Pick companies with businesses you can understand, don't overpay for the stocks and hold them for a long time.

It's important to understand the businesses you're buying, Hagstrom said, because, "If you cannot calculate its value, then you can't know if you overpaid for it."

Two stocks among Buffett's holdings that Hagstrom would like to include in his portfolio are Gillette Co. and Coca-Cola Co., but they are overpriced. Even last week's 80-point drop in the Dow Jones Industrial Average didn't prompt Hagstrom to go on a buying spree.

"It wasn't enough to say this was the correction we're all waiting for," he said. "You can't overpay for good businesses. That will retard your overall return."

The fund is nondiversified, meaning that it holds only a small number of stocks, from 12 to 15 issues. The fund, which opened on April 17 and has assets of $1.3 million, has 85 percent of its assets in short-term government securities.

Hagstrom, 38, said the idea for the mutual fund actually developed before the book. His firm wanted the fund to have a buy-and-hold strategy, and that gave him the idea to pen a book about such an investment style. The book took off, and the fund was put on hold until April.

"We thought we'd be lucky to do 20,000 (copies). We were going to publish it ourselves," he said. "The fund kept getting pushed back because we had book tours that we were obligated by the publishing company to do." The book has sold nearly 285,000 copies.

Throughout the process, Hagstrom said he sent chapters to Buffett for comment. He didn't meet Buffett until last week at the Capital Cities-ABC Inc. annual meeting.

"He has been supportive," Hagstrom said. "He said it was a good academic effort."

As for his three holdings, Hagstrom likes American Express because it sold off unprofitable units, got back to its core business of travel and financial services and is now generating cash flow.

Gannett's flagship newspaper, USA Today, has recently turned a profit, and management is buying back its stock — a shareholder-friendly action, he said.

Chewing-gum maker Wrigley has no debt, and though its growth rate has slowed a bit, it is expanding to overseas markets and will export to Eastern Europe, he said.

LAND: Lower interest rates are a possibility must, take a calculated gamble on your assumptions.

Those assumptions will never be uniform; there'll always be disputes about the future even, as now, there are disputes about the present. Conflicts about definitions too. Does the economy have to land to make a "soft landing?" Or is "almost" good enough?

Economists Roger Brinner and David Wyss say there really have been only two successful soft landings, in 1966 and 1986, and in each of them many Americans felt they were whiplashed. Besides, they add, those landings were lucky.

More often, attempts to tranquilize overactive economies lead to recessions, so maybe the Fed can be congratulated this time for having avoided the most dire consequences of its repeated interest rate increases.

However, if the economy does begin to quicken its pace — if, so to speak, the landing is aborted and the flight continues — it could disappoint those who expect lower interest rates. The next surprise could be higher rates.

NOBODY HAS TO KNOW ...

Now is a great time to place your People Meeting People ad. The best part of using People Meeting People is keeping private information about yourself ... private.

As an advertiser, you don't give out your phone number, you don't give out your last name and you don't give out your address to responders until you decide to give that information to a person you feel comfortable with.

All you need is a touchtone phone. Our assistants will help you write your People Meeting People ad.

Rate & Credit Policies
Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations
The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments
Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsibility, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads
The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsibility in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsibility for the omission of an ad.

FREE BEE
FREE CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
If your are a private individual selling one item for $50 or less you can place a 3 line classified advertisement for 4 days absolutely FREE in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
Other restrictions apply.

"Sell It In 10" or We'll Run It Again" — 3 LINES 10 DAYS $15
EACH ADDITIONAL LINE $5.00
If you have a car, truck, van, RV, motorcycle, boat or airplane we'll advertise it for 10 consecutive days. In the unlikely event you don't sell it we'll run it another 10 days at no charge. At the end of 20 days if it still hasn't sold we'll run it another 10 days at no charge. If you'll reduce the price by 10%. Price must be in ad. Only one vehicle per ad. For private individuals only (non-commercial).

If you have a car, truck, van, motor-home, motorcycle, airplane, bicycle or anything with wheels, your ad will be scheduled for 14 DAYS. When you get the desired results simply call us and we will cancel it immediately for only $25. For private individuals only.
