

SESSION NEARS END; MULL PARTY PRIMARIES FINANCING

Liquor Tax Sails Through Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate approved, 29-0, today a liquor tax bill, pushing the special session nearer to adjournment, and took up a measure on financing of political party primaries.

The liquor bill would add a 10 per cent tax on mixed drinks at public places and private clubs and is expected to add some $32 million to the state treasury in the next two years.

Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes cleared the way for passage of the bill by refusing to rule on a point of order by Sen. Chet Brooks, Pasadena, that the liquor proposal levied a retroactive tax because it contained an effective date of June 1.

Barnes said he could not rule on constitutional questions and that if the provision was unconstitutional it could be removed from the bill without wiping out the entire proposal.

Wednesday night, but clerical work held it up after the House approved it, and Barnes decided senators should look at changes in the measure overnight.

The amendment was put on in the House by Rep. Charles Jungmichel of LaGrange, but Bates pressed Sen. Joe Christie, El Paso, to say who had first suggested it.

"I'm not ashamed ... but I don't believe you can make that statement," Christie shouted back.

Judge Overturns Local Conviction

A new trial has been ordered for a former Oklahoma coal miner convicted in Big Spring in 1961 of murder.

following the trial, members of the jury testified that they had overheard conversation concerning Davis' prior conviction and that they had also read something about his prior record in the Big Spring Herald.

Davis was convicted Dec. 14, 1961, of the murder of Roy V. Brown, 51, an itinerant house painter. Brown died of massive brain injuries as a climax to a fight in a hobo jungle between himself and Davis Oct. 23. The fight occurred near the Kimbell Mills grain elevator just west of the Gregg overpass.

Davis, who because of time off for good behavior has but a little over four years to serve on his sentence, told the judge, "I'm ready to get a new trial."

Conferees Fail To Agree On Congressional Remap

AUSTIN (AP) — Two potential rivals for a seat in Congress eyed each other across a conference table Wednesday night.

One of them, Sen. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, said hardly a word.

The other, Rep. Clyde Haynes of Vidor, talked almost all the time.

Each is a member of the House and Senate negotiating committee that again failed to reach agreement on congressional redistricting. Another meeting was set for today.

DOWDY'S WIN
Each lives in the district now represented by Rep. John Dowdy of Athens, who is ill and faces federal bribery charges. Dowdy is unlikely to seek re-election.

The original House redistricting map, which Haynes helped draw, separated Angelina (Lufkin) and Orange (Vidor) Counties.

This plan would have permitted Haynes to run for Dowdy's seat without having to face Wilson or two other potential candidates from Lufkin. Secretary of State Martin Dies Jr. and Benton Musselwhite, onetime aide to former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

The original Senate plan, which Wilson helped draw, kept Wilson in Dowdy's district with Haynes.

After several negotiating sessions, Haynes was persuaded to keep Angelina County in Dowdy's district, where one House member said it has been for 80 years.

HUGE ADVANTAGE
This was the plan that almost was accepted by Senate negotiators an hour before the regular session of the legislature ended at midnight Monday.

Wednesday night, after the joint committee began at the point of near agreement, Haynes presented two more plans.

Each separated Angelina and Orange Counties.

The first plan made a district one-county wide and extending the length of East Texas, from Texarkana to Orange. Haynes called it the Sabine River district. It would assist the development of the river valley as a unit, he said.

A major advantage of this plan, he said, was that no incumbent congressman would have to run against another incumbent. The original House and Senate bills, and also the plan that nearly won acceptance Monday night, put Reps. Bob Price of Pampa and Graham Purcell of Wichita Falls in the same district.

FISHHOOKS FUSS

The Haynes plan would put both Haynes and Wilson in a district with an incumbent. Haynes would be in a district with Rep. Wright Patman of Texarkana, who will be 78 next Aug. 6. Wilson would be in a district with Rep. Olin Teague of College Station, who is in his mid-60s.

Sen. J. P. Word of Meridian, chairman of the Senate negotiators, said he would give no consideration to such a plan unless the other river basins in the state were treated in the same manner.

When Haynes said his plan would eliminate the fishhook aspect of Patman's district under the Monday plan, Word shot back, "Clyde, you ought not say anything about fishhooks."

Word reminded Haynes that the original House plan had a fishhook just as flagrant in Southeast Texas, separating Angelina and Orange.

Haynes then pulled out a second plan, which again separated him from Wilson.

PAINED LOOK
Sen. Bill Patman, Wright Patman's son, looked at it closely. It included Angelina County in Patman's district, where it has never been before, and took Cherokee County out of the district.

The son suggested Angelina and Cherokee should be switched.

Already Too Late For 'ODs' On Back Steps

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hurry!" said the anonymous frightened voice calling the St. John's Hospital emergency ward. "There are two ODs on your steps. Get them before they die."

Attendants found the long-haired young man propped against the back steps of the Queens hospital early Wednesday. The pretty, brown-haired girl was lying with her head in his lap. It was already too late.

Margaret Golup, 16, and Frederick Kraft, 21, were dead apparently from drug overdoses. They would be the 423rd and 424th persons to die in the city this year from drug-related causes.

Police said Miss Golup's brother, Peter, 20, died three or four weeks ago from an OD—overdose of narcotics. Another brother, John, recovered from an overdose at the same time, they said.

Policemen familiar with the predominantly Irish, Italian and Polish neighborhood said of Miss Golup and the two brothers, "They're just neighborhood kids, not heavy with junk."

Methodists Hear Abortion Debate

HOUSTON (AP) — Delegates to the Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church were to consider the conference budget for 1972 today.

Delegates heard debates on abortion laws and troop withdrawal from Vietnam Wednesday. Bishop Kenneth Copeland said the conference will not take a position on either issue.

The list of ministerial delegates to the Spring Conference of the United Methodist Church was completed with the election of three more ministers. They are the Rev. Allen M. Mayes, a staff member of the General Board of Pensions; the Rev. Wallace T. Shook, pastor of the Southwest Methodist Church in Houston; and the Rev. Elza L. Love, superintendent of the Houston South District.

Five more lay delegates elected were L. A. Humphrey, Galveston; Dr. David Pope, Bryan; Mrs. C. Morton, Beaumont; Sam Bramlett, Baytown; and Mrs. Lamar Clark, Baytown.

Mrs. Carol Crawford of Planned Parenthood of Houston told delegates Wednesday that "any law so consistently violated at such great risk" as the laws against abortion must be changed.

Mrs. Leiven van Reit, a Houston attorney, replied that abortion is willful destruction of human life and state laws prohibiting it must be retained if life is to be "cheapened" further than it already is.

A debate on whether the United States should set a date for total troop withdrawal from Vietnam was argued by Bill Ballew and Joel Collidge, both Houston attorneys.

A LITTLE SQUIRT IS OWL RIGHT — Milk from a youngster's squirt gun is fed to a glowering great horned owl by Fred McClincy, 14, of Pottstown, Pa., who found the bird near his home. 'Good' Conditions Awaited In New Rainmaking Project

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Rainmakers watched the skies today for proper cloud conditions to launch a federal project aimed at bringing South Texas relief from the drought.

Officials said cloud-seeding planes were ready to take to the air at once from San Antonio, headquarters for half of "Operation Teadrop."

But the other half of the project, based in San Antonio, still had not received orders to proceed. Authorization was expected shortly.

BEWARE OF MOTHER NATURE

"Teadrop" — Texas Drought Relief Operational Project — is a joint civilian-military effort covering a wide section of Texas from San Angelo to the Gulf of Mexico.

Officials said they could have started cloud-seeding as early as Tuesday from the San Angelo area if the proper clouds had graced the skies.

Dr. Archie Kahan of the U.S. Reclamation Bureau's Denver office stressed that success cannot be guaranteed. Some clouds, he said, "look beautiful but don't precipitate."

The rainmakers' chances "are entirely dependent on the opportunities that nature offers," he said.

The project is a one-month, experimental program that could be extended through August, although June is the most likely month to produce rain, Kahan said.

It will include two areas—one operated by the Reclamation Bureau on a civilian contract basis and the other involving planes stationed here at Kelly Air Force Base.

MONEY DELAY

Kahan said the Air Force had not received formal orders to begin, apparently due to a delay in authorizing the estimated cost of $174,000.

The $75,000 civilian aircraft project stretches over an area bounded on the north at San Angelo, the west at Del Rio, the south at San Antonio and the east at the Colorado River and Austin.

The Air Force program would cover an area from San Antonio south to Corpus Christi, and bounded on the west by Carrizo Springs and on the east by the Colorado River.

"I think it is very important that we not expect too much" from the rainmaking efforts, said Kahan, who is chief of the division of atmospheric water resources management for the Reclamation Bureau's engineering and research center in Denver.

Asked if cloud seeding really works, he told newsmen here Wednesday, "That's like asking, 'Does surgery work?' It depends a lot on the condition of the patient, the skill of the surgeon

Viet Marines Launch Drive

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese marines are making a new drive in the northwest corner of the country 15 to 20 miles below the demilitarized zone, where a North Vietnamese buildup is reported.

The drive began last Sunday but was not announced until today for security reasons. The Saigon command did not disclose how many marines are taking part, but a spokesman said several 500-man battalions are fanning out through the rolling foothills and elephant grass.

The only significant contact reported occurred Wednesday afternoon when North Vietnamese forces slammed about 500 mortar rounds into one of the battalions and engaged some of the Saigon troops in light contact.

Field reports said six marines were killed and 41 were wounded in the action nine miles northeast of Khe Sanh. Nine of the enemy were reported killed.

The purpose of the drive is to disrupt North Vietnamese supply lines and infiltration corridors and reduce Hanoi's capabilities for mounting an offensive during the dry season now prevailing in the northern quarter of South Vietnam.

Fifty miles to the south, South Vietnamese infantrymen uncovered a stockpile of 600 mortar rounds during a drive on the edges of the A Shau Valley, an important North Vietnamese supply transshipment point.

In Phnom Penh, the Cambodian command reported that its forces overran North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers entrenched in bunkers around a pagoda 10 miles northeast of the Cambodian capital.

Cambodian troops trained by the U.S. Special Forces in Vietnam have been battling the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong for the past week for control of the high ground east of Phnom Penh before most of the region is flooded by monsoon rains. The region is the key to Phnom Penh's eastern defenses and an important way station on the enemy supply route from the western branch of the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Thirteen North Vietnamese prisoners of war were flown to Da Nang in a U.S. Air Force transport and put aboard the American troopship Upshur to begin their journey home. One of the 13 was on a litter.

Tower Vows Ft. Wolters To Stay Open

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., says that all servicemen who have become addicted to drugs should be treated by the government before they are discharged.

He said steps should be taken first to stop the growing epidemic of drug addiction among soldiers and then the government should take the responsibility for rehabilitating the addicts—insofar as they can be. Tower also said at Wednesday's news conference that Ft. Wolters, Tex., "will remain open but with a reduced training load." The Defense Department had reportedly planned to close the base.

Speaking on the question of trade with Red China, Tower said he is uncertain whether increased trade will have any beneficial effect on Sino-American relations. He added he won't oppose the Nixon move, but said Rhodesia should be extended the same consideration.

Tower said also: —He believes the Senate will vote cloture to end debate on the bill to extend the draft if the debate runs much longer.

—He now is satisfied that the administration is moving satisfactorily to aid residents in drought-stricken areas of Texas.

—He will make certain that the range of services offered at the Fort Worth Clinical Research Center will remain available if the center is transferred from HEW to the Bureau of Prisons.

SPECTATORS INCLUDE BARNES, BRISCOE, YARBOROUGH

It's Governor's Move In Game Of Tag

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

It's Gov. Preston Smith's move in the game of political tag he has been playing with Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

And the outcome probably will determine if Smith is really a candidate for governor in 1972. Interested, but not always silent, spectators in the game are Dolph Briscoe, Ralph Yarborough, and any other announced or possible candidates for governor.

Smith and Barnes have been jousting politically since Smith succeeded now Secretary of Treasury John B. Connally as governor and Barnes took Smith's place as lieutenant governor.

PLENTY OF SMOKE

Although the Smith-Barnes contest has not generated the heat that the Connally-Smith bout exhibited, there's been plenty of smoke. What each one says of the record would scorch some eardrums if repeated in public.

Everyone knows—or thinks they do—that Barnes is going to run for governor or U. S. senator, probably governor according to latest indications. He has been waiting for the regular session of the 62nd legislature to end to hit the campaign trail.

Smith has been considered a possible but unlikely candidate for a third term, principally because his name cropped up as a quick profit investor—but not a defendant—in the Securities and Exchange Commission's stock fraud case. However, Smith's actions during the recent regular session of the legislature may have changed the picture.

SPECIAL SESSION

And now we have a special session—which because of the ground rules written in the constitution is a "governor's session."

Barnes easily played the leading role during most of the regular session—partly because Speaker Gus Mutscher has his own troubles with the SEC suit.

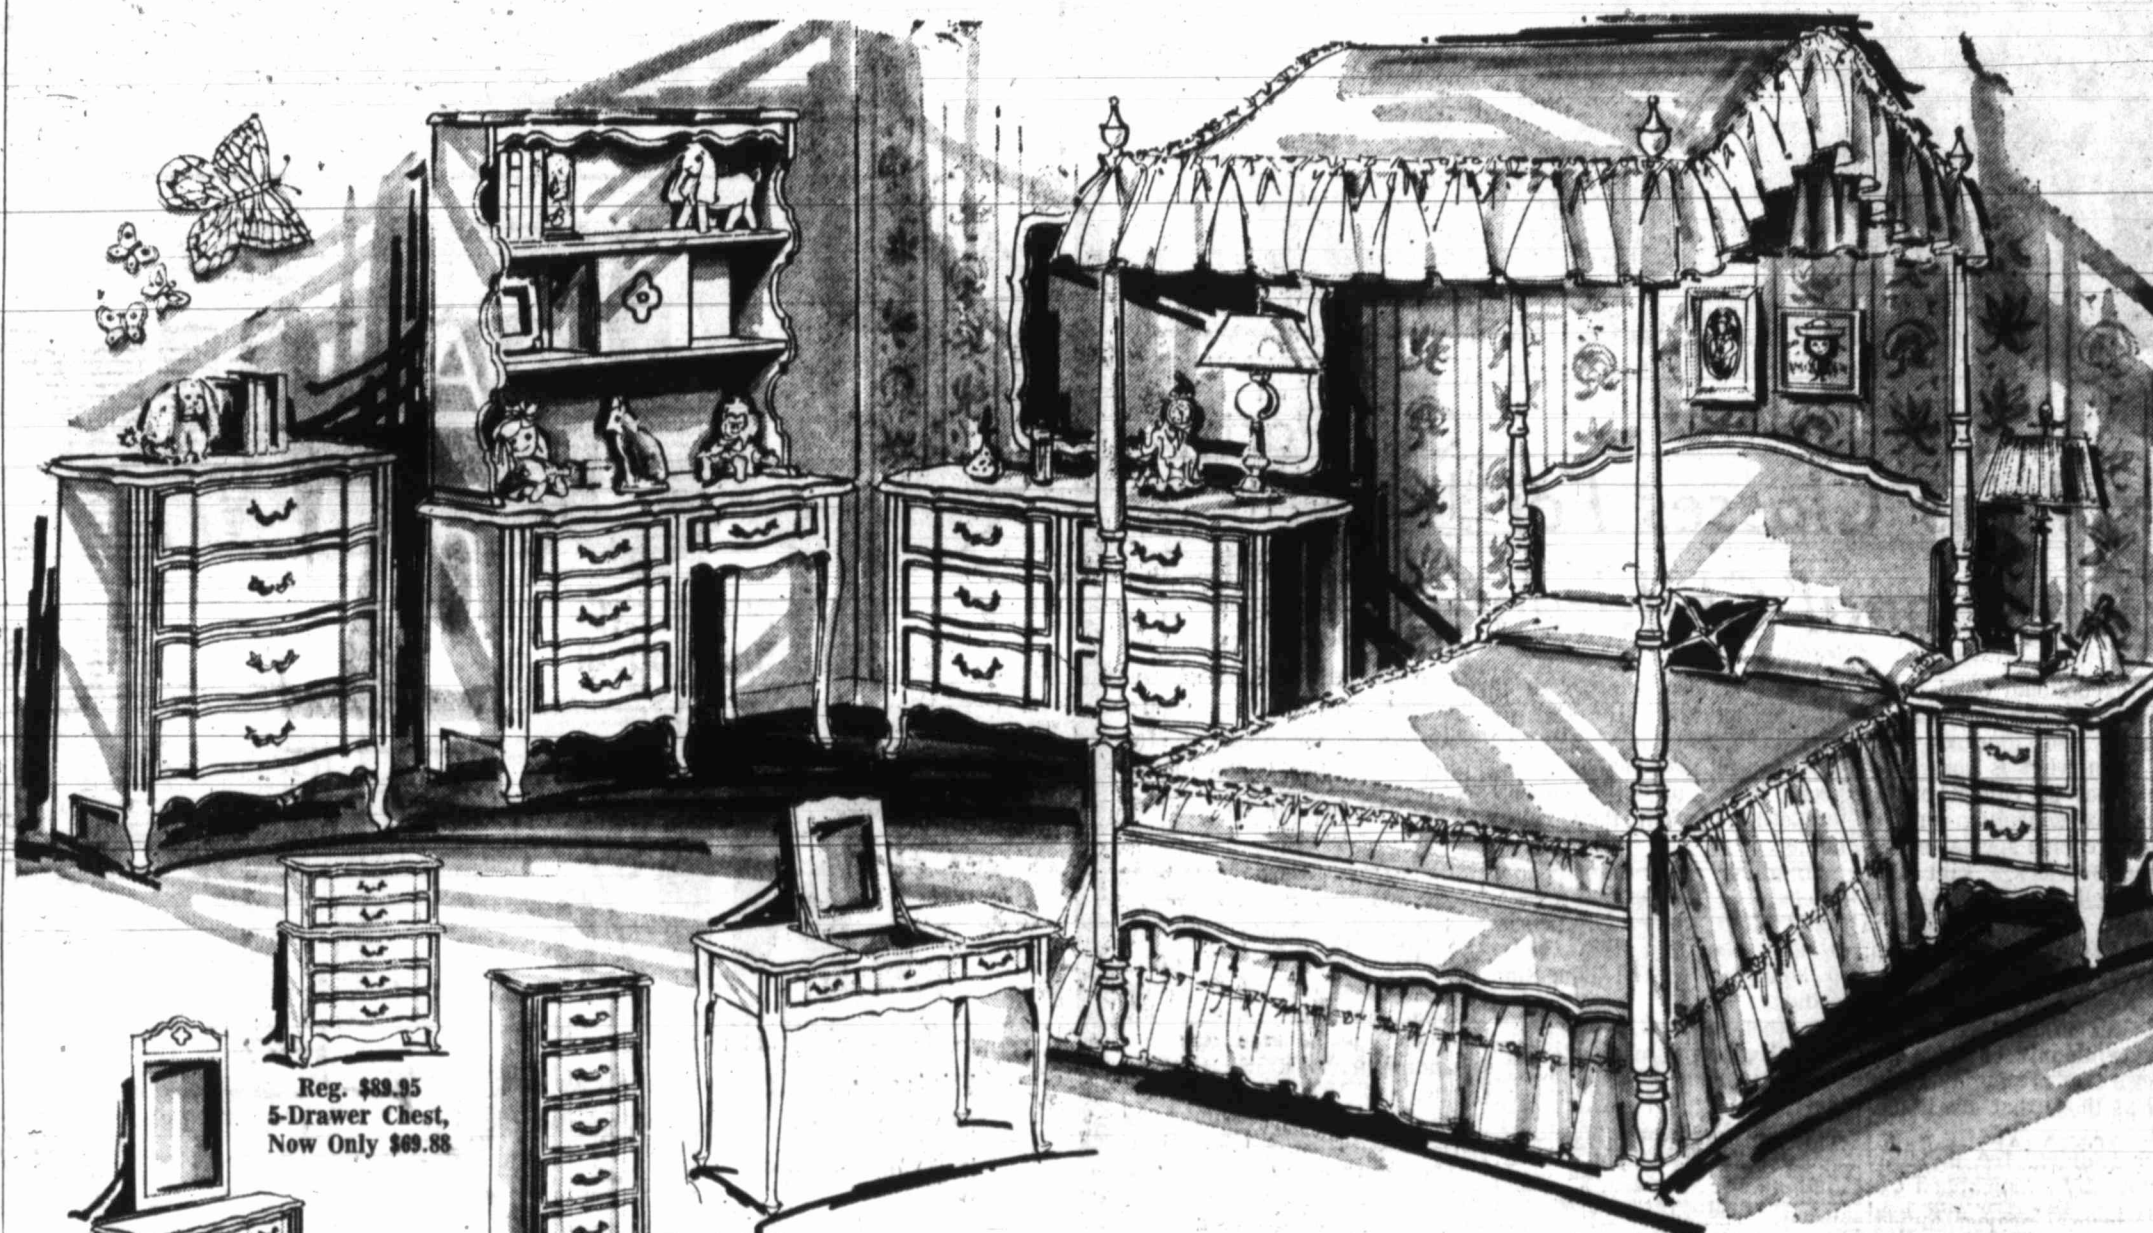

When the state Department of Public Welfare and Smith said they saw no way to forestall a cut in welfare benefits, Barnes and his staff suddenly found an $8.2 million fund in the Welfare Department that could be transferred, carrying welfare payments at current levels throughout the rest of the business year. Spadework for the transfer was done by a special welfare reform committee headed last summer by William P. Hobby, Houston newspaper executive, who is a candidate for lieutenant governor next year.

Then the House wrote a record-breaking tax bill but the Senate rewrote it, after turning down a corporate income tax, and the House accepted the changes.

When the tax bill got to Smith he made no bones of his dislikes, particularly of a 2 cents gasoline tax hike originally proposed by Barnes. With a governor's veto threat over their heads, legislators quickly repealed the gasoline tax increase. Barnes said nothing public but smoldered privately.

MRS. DONALD LEE BELCHER

Explains Classes For 'Exceptional' Children

"The exceptional child is one who is physically, socially or emotionally so markedly different from what is considered normal, that he cannot benefit from normal schooling services and must receive special education and services," said Mrs. R. T. Newell, guest speaker for the Scenic Chapter, American Business Women's Association, Tuesday at Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Newell, principal of the Special Education School, said that "exceptional" children are both those that are highly gifted as well as those that are handicapped.

"After training, the mentally and physically handicapped can be placed in industry and lead useful lives," continued Mrs. Newell. Children confined to their homes are assisted by teachers who deliver daily lessons to the home, help the child as needed, and return the lessons to the teacher.

There is also a program at Big Spring State Hospital for various grade levels, which Mrs. Newell said enables young people to pick up with their contemporaries when they return home.

Minimum requirements for teachers in the special education system are an MA degree in education as well as 15 to 30 hours in special education studies.

In other business, new officers were elected and installed. They are Mrs. Kyle Cauble, president; Mrs. Troy L. White, vice president; Miss Geraldine Dietz, recording secretary; Mrs. B. H. Montgomery, treasurer; and Mrs. D. J. McCray, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Cauble gave the vocational talk on her duties at Faye's Flowers. Guests were Miss Melinda Cassilas, Mrs. Myrtle Edgar and Mrs. Fred Butler.

Miss Barber Weds Donald Lee Belcher

Miss Mary Babette Barber and Donald Lee Belcher exchanged wedding vows Tuesday in the College Baptist Church, with Dr. Byron Orand, pastor, officiating.

The couple stood at an altar featuring a central arrangement of yellow and green carnations with matching satin streamers, and an arch flanked by carnation flower trees. Mrs. Dick Richardson, organist, provided background music.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Barber of Pettit, and Mrs. A. H. Barber of Hot Springs, Ark., and the late Mr. Barber.

The bride wore a white satin, floor-length gown, overlaid with Chantilly lace. The Empire styled dress featured a scooped neckline, and long lace sleeves that were ruffled at the wrist. Her full-length, tiered veil was held with a cluster of petals trimmed with seed pearls and edged in lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow and green carnations.

Miss Mary Christina Tanner served as matron of honor, wearing a gown styled like the bride's, but in a pale green. She wore a green satin ribbon in her hair.

Randall Smith of Lawton, Okla., was the best man, and ushers were Thomas Weldon Tanner and Leroy Belcher of Oklahoma City, Okla., the bridegroom's brother. Miss Judith Ann Tanner served as flower girl, while Kevin Belcher of Lubbock was ring bearer.

A reception followed in the church fellowship hall, where the refreshment table was covered with an off-white lace cloth, and centered with an arrangement of yellow and green carnations. The tiered wedding cake was topped with miniature wedding bells.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Helen Wheeler, Mrs. Sarah Johnson, Mrs. Dot Vinson, Miss Theda Thornton and Mrs. T. S. Roberts.

Following a wedding trip to the East Coast, the couple will reside at 1100 Runnels. Belcher is a graduate of Pettit High School. Following four years in the Army he attended Howard County Junior College, and is presently employed by Big Spring State Hospital.

The bride graduated from Hot Springs High School and attended Henderson State College in Arkadelphia, Ark., as well as HCCJ. She is also employed by Big Spring State Hospital and plans to attend Angelo State College in the fall.

Out-of-town guests were Calvin Moran and Sharon K. Palmer, both of Hot Springs, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Belcher, Lubbock; and Mrs. Leroy Belcher, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Luncheon Honors Mrs. H. Clarke

Mrs. Herb Clarke, who is moving to Cincinnati, Ohio, was honored with a salad luncheon by the College Park Home Demonstration Club Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Gerald Miller, 3220 Auburn.

Mrs. J. C. Williams presided, and offered members sewing tips for making collars and sleeves. Mrs. Miller was presented a past president's pin. In other business, members discussed plans for an ice cream party at 7 p.m. June 12 at Birdwell Park. Mrs. Williams announced that Big Spring High School is offering sewing and interior decorating classes for adults during the summer.

Guests were Mrs. Wayne Rock, Mrs. Joe Crenwelge and Mrs. Alma Williams.

Miss Linda Helton Honored At Shower

Miss Linda Helton, bride-elect of Marvin Lee Wright, was honored with a bridal shower Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. Harvey Hooser, 2307 Daphne.

The honoree, attired in a white Dacron dress with multi-colored braid, was presented a corsage of carnations. Also presented carnation corsages were the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Garand Helton of Austin, and her fiancé's mother, Mrs. Lee Roy Wright, Big Spring.

Hostesses joining Mrs. Hooser were Mrs. Harold Abernethy, Mrs. L. F. Anderson, Mrs. Douglas Earnest, Mrs. Theo

Earnest, Mrs. M. A. Lilly, Mrs. B. L. Mason, Mrs. J. C. Wall, Mrs. H. C. Wallin, Miss Vicki Wallin, Mrs. W. A. Wilson, Mrs. Andy Wilson, Mrs. Loyd Wolf and Mrs. Johnny Zitterkopf.

A white tablecloth overlaid with white organdy covered the refreshment table which featured a crystal punch bowl and a centerpiece of white candles entwined with blue flowers and greenery. Other appointments were of crystal and silver.

The couple will be married June 5 in the St. Paul Lutheran Church.

Hints From Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I bought an inexpensive Western-type suede jacket and when it came back from the cleaners it was faded. Can you give me any information on this subject? David C. Ginsburgh.

Dear David:

Don't, I repeat — DON'T — blame the cleaners. I have written to a reputable dry cleaner who are suede and leather finishers and here is their word verbatim.

"Buckskin or Push Coats: There is one particular type garment which is becoming very popular and warrants some information.

"These are called Buckskin. Push coats, rough suede or Western jackets. These garments are made from a suede cowhide and are much coarser and durable than suede leather. They are usually made with a shirpa lining.

"These skins are sometimes dyed with an earth-type pigment which is removed in dry cleaning and in some cases impossible to replace the color. Some split cowhide is dyed with an aniline dye. These garments respond quite well to this processing.

"As it is impossible to determine how the skins were dyed we recommend that these garments be watched for and the customer warned of a possible color change."

And, David, don't let it get your dander up. I got one too! And when I think of the difference in the one I bought and what the real jewel I wanted cost — I'm still pleased. After all we don't wear them to Sunday school... Heloise

Dear Heloise: Here is an old, old hint that I think young mothers of today would like to know about.

My great-grandfather was very fond of pictures. But back in those days, few pictures were available.

He would take a picture from a calendar or mail-order book and build a frame for it. Instead of buying glass he would take plain neutral shoe polish, the waxy kind, and polish the picture, wipe it off, and redo it with wax several times. I still have several of these old waxed pictures and even now they look brand new.

Here is my idea. It would certainly save young families a lot of money for decorating a child's room or a kitchen with waxed pictures.

With all the beautiful, full-color photographs in magazines, it would be easy to select the ones you are interested in and wax them. I still do this and use shoe wax just like my great-grandfather did.

It would not be necessary to frame them, just tack them on the wall. They are easy to clean, just wipe with a damp cloth and they can be changed whenever the mood strikes you. The cost would be negligible.

MISS CARLA PERRY

Will She Be State Queen?

Carla Perry, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Perry, Lomax, left today for Corpus Christi where she will compete for the title of Lions Club Queen at the organization's state convention. Miss Perry was previously named queen of District 2-A1 when she competed with 38 nominees at the May meeting in Midland.

Fifteen contestants are vying for the state title, which will be based on poise, personality and beauty. The girls will be interviewed by a panel of judges during the day and will appear on stage in the evening in formal wear for the final judging.

Miss Perry will be representing the Stanton Lions Club at the event. The winner, along with other state winners, will be guests at the Lions international convention in Las Vegas, Nev., later this month.

This fall, Miss Perry will be a senior at Stanton High School where she is a member of the Future Teachers of America, Future Homemakers of America and president of the pep squad. She participated in the Interscholastic League winning presentation of the play, "Diary of Anne Frank," and played varsity basketball.

Miss Perry's main interest has been 4-H, in which she has participated for seven years. She has concentrated on foods, clothing and livestock, working with her brother, Dirk Perry, to raise and breed prize-winning registered swine. Dirk won the El Paso show in 1969.

Through her 4-H work, Miss Perry has won a partial scholarship from the Producers Grain Corporation of Amarillo to attend the national 4-H Citizenship Short Course in Washington, D.C., this summer. Fifty-six 4-H members from Texas will participate.

Following graduation from high school, Miss Perry plans to attend Texas Tech, majoring in home economics.

A LOVELIER YOU

Make Bridal Picture One You'll Cherish

By Mary Sue Miller

A lovely writes: I will soon sit for my formal bridal portrait. I am not exactly photogenic, so I feel uneasy over the prospect. Would special makeup help? What's the best pose? Please help me.

The Answer: The vital secret of taking a portrait of your loveliest self is to relax. A tense sitter takes a picture that answers to the same description. It is one of the few problems that cannot be overcome by a photographer's artistry.

Have you had an interview with the photographer, not only the receptionist? One such would give you confidence, for you would be told what to expect and how to proceed.

Generally speaking, these are the requirements:

Get a good night's sleep the night before your sitting and eat a good breakfast and/or lunch on the big day. Let your face feel tired and tense. Have a perfectly groomed hairdo, styled as you will wear it on your wedding day.

Wear your accustomed makeup and be sure that it looks natural in the daylight. Also wear or take your bridal underpinnings and accessories. A little kit with extra makeup and a brush-comb duo would act as a lifesaver, especially for something the photographer might spot.

Next... leave it up to the professional's direction. You will be posed, lighted and appearance-guided for flattery. So, what's to worry? Relax! Yours will be a portrait to cherish.

Couple United In Marriage

Miss Barbara M. Ballard and Sgt. John J. Reilly exchanged wedding vows at 7 p.m. Friday in the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Bill M. Ballard, Route 1, Big Spring. Sgt. Reilly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Reilly of Camp Springs, Md.

Rev. Ballard performed the ceremony before an improvised altar featuring a petalike topped with blue and white carnations, white gladioli and yellow chrysanthemums. The front of the altar was entwined with ivy.

The bride wore a white, street-length dress with an A-line skirt and scooped neckline. The long, full sleeves had deep fitted cuffs covered with Italian lace and accented with blue and white velvet trim and small blue buttons. A velvet band encircled the Empire waist. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations, centered with a purple orchid corsage.

Serving as best man and matron of honor, were T. Sgt. and Mrs. Joseph Diliberto. A reception was held in the Ballard home. The refreshment table was covered with an antique white cloth and accented with blue and white roses. Crystal and silver appointments were used, and the tiered wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom and wedding bells. Serving were Miss Altie Ballard, sister of the bride; Miss Nadine Lambright, Miss Sandra Coates and Miss Carolyn Cunningham.

The bride is a graduate of Coahoma High School and attended Howard County Junior College. Sgt. Reilly graduated from Crossland High School in Washington, D. C., and is presently assigned to the Field Maintenance Squadron at Webb AFB. Mr. and Mrs. Reilly both plan to attend the University of Maryland when he is discharged from service.

MRS. JOHN J. REILLY

Following a wedding trip to visit the bridegroom's parents in Washington, D. C., the couple will reside at 1301 Harding. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Cunningham and daughters of Coahoma.

Sarasota,

TENNIS, ANYONE? — Novice Kniffen, director of the first annual Big Spring Open Tennis Tournament starting today, stands in back of the many trophies which will be made available to divisional winners when play draws to a close Sunday. The meet is likely to attract more than 200 players from over a wide area. Courts in three different sections of the community — Big Spring High School, Howard County JC and Webb AFB — are being used.

Dave Hill Says He'll Behave In Tourney

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — It was a subdued Dave Hill, burdened with a one-year probation and facing an uncertain playing career, who set out today in the first round of the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I'm tired of being the bad guy in the black hat," quipped the volatile Hill. "This week I'm wearing a white hat. Rode out on a white charger and I've got him parked right outside."

The 34-year-old Hill was slapped with the probation for "conduct unbecoming a professional golfer" in his second round of the Colonial National Invitation Tournament in Fort Worth, Tex., two weeks ago.

Hill, playing poorly that day, threw a ball out of a sand trap on the 18th hole and purposely signed an incorrect scorecard. He was disqualified on the spot and later fined $500.

EYE OF STORM
Hill, the storm center of several major controversies in recent years, paid the fine and followed up with a $1 million damage suit against the Tournament Players Division and the Professional Golfers Association. The suit, the first of its kind against the two golf groups, is pending in federal district court in Memphis, Tenn.

The suit, among other things, charged the PGA and the TPD with violation of Hill's civil rights, violation of his right of free speech and violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

The suspension was handed down by the Policy Board of the Tournament Players Division and does not prohibit Hill from playing.

"In the event of further infraction of Tournament Rules and Regulations, during the probationary period, Mr. Hill will be subject to suspension from TPD competition and termination of TPD membership," a prepared statement issued by TPD Commissioner Joe Dey said.

That would prohibit Hill from playing. It's happened before "three or four times, I forget which," Hill said. "But this is the first time I've ever been on probation. I wonder who I have to report to."

BIG WINNINGS
Hill, an intense, highly-charged man, is a tough, wiry, darkly handsome native of Jackson, Mich. He's won almost one-half million dollars in his dozen years on the pro tour and picked up eight titles.

His best year was 1969 when he won $156,000 and three tournaments, topped the coveted Vardon Trophy for the best stroke average on the tour and was named to the Ryder Cup team.

Hill, who hasn't won but has four finishes in the top 10 this year, was one of the key figures in the 150 man field that began competition today on the hilly, 6,833-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

Leading money winner Jack Nicklaus, the only winner of three titles this season, was the favorite.

Gardner Is Signed
SNYDER — Cliff Gardner, 6-2 1/2 guard from Tahoka, has announced his intentions to attend Western Texas Junior College here under a scholarship arrangement. Gardner lettered in basketball, football, track and golf at his school.

Purse Finder Likely To Be Amid Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — Back in 1968 Stagedoor Johnny won his first race about a month before he won the Belmont Stakes. Saturday, Purse Finder will try for a similar achievement at the loss of the Triple Crown for Canonero II.

"He is getting better every day," Trainer Jimmy Conway said Wednesday of Purse Finder, who won the first race of his 3-year career May 12, just three days before Canonero II added the Preakness victory to his win in the Kentucky Derby.

The race that shot Purse Finder, owned by Anthony Imbri, into the Belmont was last Friday's Peter Pan Purse in which he came from off the pace to smash Mrs. Taylor Hardin's Solo Mio, another Belmont candidate, by nine lengths at the end of 1 1/4 mile.

Blinkers have helped turn the Maribeu colt into a winner, and although he might not have the racing experience of some of his Belmont rivals, Conway is optimistic about his chances in the $125,000-added 14 mile classic.

Canonero II and probably eight other 3-year-olds will be entered Friday morning for the Belmont, which is scheduled to go off at 5:35 p.m. EDT Saturday. Television coverage will be from 5-6 p.m. and radio coverage from 5:25-5:45 p.m., both by CBS.

Trainer Juan Arias and jockey Gustavo Avila both expressed satisfaction Wednesday after Canonero II worked 5 1/2 miles on the Belmont main track in 1:04. Although this is generally considered a slow move, it was faster than Canonero II's final work out at the same distance for the Derby and the Preakness.

Besides Purse Finder and Solo Mio, Canonero II's other likely opponents in his bid to become racing's ninth Triple Crown winner and first since Citation in 1948 are the Johnny Campo-trained pair of Neil Hellman's Good Behaving and Frank J. Caldwell's Jim French, Mr. & Mrs. Harry Linger's Salem, William A. Levitt's Bold Reason, Mrs. Ethyl D. Jacobs' Epic Journey and Tartan Stable's Highbinder.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

With Tommy Hart

Big Springer Charley West's contract has run out with the Minnesota Vikings and he's due for a raise. Coach Bud Grant is more than satisfied with Charley's work in the Vikings' defensive secondary.

Another ex-Big Springer, Camilo Pascual, is playing out his string in the big leagues. He was recently sold by the Cleveland Indians to the San Diego Padres.

Chances are, if he doesn't make it there, he'll return to Miami and look after his considerable real estate interests.

The Harlem Globetrotters have helped spread the word. The skrimishing that goes on in the Olympic Games every four years contributes, too.

Whatever the cause, basketball has become perhaps the most popular sport throughout the world.

The game is catching on all over Europe. It is played in South America and parts of Asia. In hundreds of schoolyards, all over the globe, the roundball game has become the rage.

American football represents confusion to the masses in other parts of the world. Baseball is all but unknown in many countries, although it is catching on in Italy and has long been Japan's favorite pastime. Golf isn't very popular anywhere but in the English-speaking countries, mainly because the commoners can't afford it.

All that is needed for a game of basketball, however, is a fairly level piece of ground, uprights with baskets at each end and six, eight or ten players.

It's a game with a glorious past and probably an even more glamorous future.

The aluminum bat may be closer to adoption by organized baseball than you think.

The bat people are already feeling some heat from ecologists for butchering enough trees to make six million bats a year.

If the switch is made, one term long associated with baseball will go out the window: A broken bat single.

I ran into a golfer recently who was hopelessly hooked years ago and asked him if he was still playing regularly.

His reply: "Only days."

The Houston Oilers may overshadow the Dallas Cowboys as Texas' dominant professional football team as early as this year.

New coach Ed Hughes has given the Oilers and their buffeted backers a positive attitude. Many good men have failed at the bridge in Houston in the past but Hughes could sail through the troubled waters without coming to grief on the reefs.

Since Hughes moved in, the Oilers have made some trades that bid fair to firm up their weak spots. They would have done better last year had it not been for injuries to key personnel.

Hughes is already predicting a divisional title for the NFL club, which means the Oilers are going to have to improve out of sight — they were 3-10 last year.

Baltimore Regains Lead In Division

By The Associated Press

Those battling Birds from Baltimore have come home to roost — without throwing a single punch.

The Orioles pecked their way to a 3-2 12-inning victory over the Chicago White Sox Wednesday night and regained first place in the American League East.

No beanballs were unleashed, and no fans were pummeled — in contrast to the Orioles' Memorial Day donnybrook at Chicago.

The world champions merely dazzled the White Sox with their footwork this time around.

Paul Blair scored the winning run on a bases-loaded wild pitch by Terry Forster in the 12th — after dodging a tag by third baseman Bill Melton to reach third on Dave Johnson's one-out grounder.

Brooks Robinson had tied the game with a two-run single in the ninth — after Merv Rettenmund kept the rally going by beating out a slow roller to Melton.

RED SOX LOSE

The victory, coupled with Boston's 6-1 loss to the New York Yankees, sent Baltimore into the division lead for the first time since April 29 — with a margin of four percentage points over the skidding Red Sox.

Elsewhere in the AL, Detroit nipped Minnesota 5-4; California edged Washington 2-1 in a rain-shortened game and Cleveland topped Milwaukee 4-2. Kansas City and Oakland were not scheduled.

Tom Bradley, Chicago's young pitching star, stymied the Orioles on three hits until the ninth, when Dave Johnson cracked a leadoff single. He took second on a balk, before Bradley walked Frank Robinson and gave up Rettenmund's infield hit, filling the bases.

Brooks Robinson then knotted it 2-2 with a single to left.

In the 12th, Vicente Romo walked Blair, batting for reliever Dick Hall, on four pitches. Don Buford sacrificed and Johnson bounced to Melton, who went for the sidestepping Blair and missed the tag. The White Sox protested that Blair had left the baseline and Coach Joe Lonnett was ejected from the game.

Forster then came out of the White Sox bullpen, walked Boog Powell to fill the bases and tossed the tie-breaking wild pitch.

Bill Holstead Seeks Repeat

MIDLAND, Tex. (AP) — A field of 127 hopefuls tees off today in the Texas Amateur Golf Championship with Bill Holstead of Wichita Falls defending his crown won last year at Great Southwest in Arlington.

The field in the 72-hole medal play tournament will be trimmed to the low 50 and ties after 36-holes. The final round is scheduled Sunday.

Holstead will tour the Midland Country Club course with the knowledge that University of Texas teen-age sensation, Ben Crenshaw of Austin, isn't around. Crenshaw had to pass up the tournament to concentrate on sectional qualifying for the U.S. Open.

If Holstead should win, he would become the first golfer in the post-World War II era to take consecutive titles. The last golfer to win back-to-back titles was Billy Bob Coffey in 1940-41.

George Clark, club professional, said "The course is in excellent shape." Three inches of rain in the past week have helped the fairways tremendously.

Clark said he figures a score of 285 — three under will win the event.

Fem Golfers Set Monday Meeting

The newly organized Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association will hold another meeting at 8 o'clock Monday night in the Municipal golf course's clubhouse, at which time any woman aspiring to play the game is eligible to attend.

Charley Brantley, the club pro, said that if interest warrants it, he is prepared to offer a golf clinic to novice players.

Favored Trojans Fielding Vet Team In Tournament

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How freshmen. The freshmen all went to the college world series. And almost all are back—as veterans on a title winning team.

USC is to take on Seton Hall, champion of the NCAA's District 2, on June 12 in Omaha, Neb., to start the college world series. The USC lineup for that game will contain one senior.

At first base will be sophomore Daryl Arenstein, hitting .329. At second will be Mike Ball, .282 and at shortstop is sensational freshman George Ambrow, .317. The third baseman is junior Jeff Port, .280. The only senior who figures to start is catcher Craig Perkins, batting .309.

Freshman Fred Lynn, batting .327, junior Tim Steele, .324, and junior Gordon Carter, .286, constitute the top three outfielders. Others who figure to see duty in the field are Jeff Pedersen, a junior, who's hitting .294, and senior Frank Alfano, a regular last year who is having a hard time finding a starting job. He's hitting .243.

The team batting average is .290.

USC is 39-10 this season under NCAA coach of the year Rod Dedeaux and the pitching has been the key.

Hal King Borrows Bat And Atlanta Benefits

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves can expect a bill in the mail one of these days from the New York Mets for one baseball bat, Dave Marshall model.

They will pay for the wood because Hal King has fallen in love with it and because it gave the Braves a 3-1 victory over Houston Astros Wednesday night. Victories have been few and far between for the Braves lately, so this one will be worth the price of Marshall's bat.

King's two-run homer, with Marshall's bat, broke a seventh inning tie for the Braves and ended Atlanta's losing streak at five games.

CARDS POUNDED

Elsewhere in the National League Wednesday, Pittsburgh pounded St. Louis 10-1, New York topped San Francisco 5-2, Chicago swept a doubleheader from Cincinnati 6-3 and 4-1, San Diego blanked Philadelphia 6-0 and Los Angeles battered Montreal 7-1.

King's romance with Marshall's bat began 10 days ago when the Braves were in New York.

"It was just laying there, so I picked it up and felt it," said King. "I liked it and since the Mets left it there on the rack, I took it."

The borrowed ... or rather, appropriated ... bat made good contact for King twice. The first time Houston's Cesar Cedeno, who made three outstanding catches in the game, robbed him of a homer by leaping over the center field fence to spear his drive. The second shot in the seventh procured one of the longest homers ever hit in Atlanta, a towering drive that hit the facade of the club level in right field.

The Mets could afford to be generous with their spare bats. They got enough late hitting to overcome a 2-0 deficit and beat San Francisco and longtime nemesis Juan Marichal. It was only Marichal's fourth loss in 27 lifetime decisions against New York.

Rookie Charlie Williams earned the victory with five shutout innings of relief. Art Shamsky poled a homer and Dave Marshall, with one of his bats missing, was retired as a pinch hitter, extending his hitless string to 21 consecutive at bats.

Nate Colbert's three-run homer and a solo shot by Ivan

Murrell moved San Diego past Philadelphia as rookie Steve Arlin fired a five-hitter.

Both benches emptied twice in the late innings as first San Diego's Clarence Gaston and then Philadelphia's Don Money were brushed back by close pitches. But no punches were thrown either time.

Dave Cash drilled a single, double and triple, leading Pittsburgh's rout of St. Louis. Luke Walker and two relievers scattered seven hits but the Pirates pitching staff's scoreless string ended at 34 innings when the Cards managed a run on a sacrifice fly.

Willie Stargell drove in three runs for the Pirates who closed to within one-half game of St. Louis at the top of the NL East.

This man is wanted for questioning.

You'll find him at your Datsun dealer's. He knows the whole story on small cars. And he's ready to talk. He'll show you Datsun's eight page Reader's Digest ad reprint - How to Buy a Small Car.

He'll also give you our two comparison charts. The 1971 Datsun 1200 Comparison Chart matches up specifications and performance of all the small cars in the $1700 to $2300 bracket. The 1971 Datsun 510 Sedan Comparison Chart does the same for those in the $1800 to $2400 range.

Apprehend the Small Car Expert. Give him the third degree. Find out all about Datsun's no-cost extras like whitewalls - fully reclining front buckets - front disc brakes - all-vinyl upholstery and tinted glass. Ask him about our standard overhead cam engines and fully independent suspension. Drive a Datsun...then decide.

Ex-Waco Man Hit With Two Bomb Counts

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County grand jury, investigating bombings and violence in the Houston area, has returned a two-count indictment against a former Waco man.

The indictment returned Wednesday named Michael Douglas Lowe, 22, an apprentice carpenter who was arrested May 23 and charged with possessing bomb making materials.

The indictment accused Lowe of possession of a bomb and also with possession of bomb making components.

Dist. Judge E. B. Duggan set Lowe's bond at $25,000.

Lowe had appeared earlier before the grand jury which began the probe a week ago.

Two persons appeared before the grand jury Wednesday.

One of the witnesses was Frank Converse, the grand dragon of the United Klans of America in Texas. The other was Jerry Wayne Pierce, 25, of Houston.

Converse, a Houston gunshop operator who spent only six minutes in the jury room, told newsmen before entering the room that he planned to take the Fifth Amendment.

He called the investigation "hogwash" and a "political fishing trip."

Converse also said he planned to run for sheriff of Harris County when that office next comes up for election.

Converse said he would run on a platform of getting tougher with criminals and of restraining some auxiliary deputies which he feels have abused their power.

Officers Plan To Dig Today For More Bodies

YUBA CITY, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff Roy D. Whiteaker says he is convinced more slain transients and farm workers lie buried in concealed graves in orchards north of Yuba City.

Officers plan to dig today for more bodies in a site that had been flooded for several days.

Warm, dry weather the past few days has made the site accessible again.

CRUDE GRAVES

So far, 23 transients, farm workers and drifters have been found hacked and stabbed to death in crude graves in orchards along the Feather River.

er.

Juan V. Corona, 37, a Mexican-born farm labor contractor with a poor command of English, was formally arraigned in Justice Court Wednesday on 10 counts of murder—the 10 bodies exhumed by the time he was first taken to court one week before.

"I'd like to get it over and be done with it," Whiteaker said as he discussed the continuing search for gravesites. "I believe there are some bodies out there that will never be found."

The sheriff is using infrared aerial photography of the orchards in an effort to spot areas where the soil has been disturbed. Results should be available Friday.

Another potential gravesite still is under water and can't be probed until it dries, the sheriff said.

'HE DON'T KNOW'

At Wednesday's closed arraignment before Justice Court Judge J. J. Hankins the proceedings were related to Corona by a Spanish language interpreter, Raoul Ybarra, a local florist.

Hankins asked: "Do you understand what you are being charged with?"

Ybarra replied for Corona: "No. He does not understand."

Hankins: "All right. You have been charged, Mr. Corona, with count one, a violation of Section 187 of the penal code, in that you did murder one Kenneth Edward Whiteaker."

ACCUSED ENTERS COURT — Juan Corona, left, 37-year-old farm labor contractor, was taken from a Yuba County jail cell Wednesday to the Sutter County Courthouse for arraignment. He pleaded not guilty to charges of murdering 10 of the 23 farm workers found buried in the orchard area.

Cereal and milk, whether served as the cereal and milk serving or used as recipe ingredients, have much to add to the nutritive content of snacks. Cereal Flake Applesauce Cookies with milk shakes are filling, nutritious snack. THERE'S ALWAYS SOMETHING to munch on in the home of Mrs. Frank Pierce. Many family and friends see to it that nothing goes to waste. "I'll stop anything to visit with somebody that stops by," says Mrs. Pierce. "I figure in 20 years, nobody will ever know if the beds got made today or not. So if I can make a friend instead, I will."

PANTRY PICK-UPS

When you are making deep dish meat pies, always prick the top crust to allow steam to escape during the baking. This keeps an even better looking top crust and allows the filling to cook more thoroughly and evenly.

Rub chicken that is to be broiled with a cut lemon, then baste with melted butter during the broiling process.

Some good cooks like to start a turkey or chicken roasting with the breast down, then turn so that the breast is up during the last half of the roasting period.

It's not necessary to core or peel apples when making applesauce; just put them through a food mill after cooking.

When you are barbecuing spareribs in the oven, you may wish to cover the pan during the roasting; if so, be sure to uncover the meat about half an hour before done.

CALLING ALL HOME MAKERS

DON'T OVER-CROWD YOUR ROOMS

Many years ago a famous decorator said, "The right way to furnish any room is with the least number of pieces of furniture and not with the most." That principle still applies today.

Too many rooms in too many homes look like displays in furniture stores — terribly over-crowded.

Many people seem to have a fear of leaving any open floor or wall spaces in their rooms. But, actually, there is nothing worse than the "cluttered" look.

Sufficient spacing is an important factor in decorating. It is often the difference between "decorating" and "furnishing."

Enough space between the different pieces of furniture and wall decoration in any room will allow the individual items to "stand on their own feet" and display their own personality.

We are always ready to give you decorating advice and help with no obligation. Come on in and talk over your decorating problems with us. We welcome the opportunity to visit with you,

Eating Meals Together Enhances Family Life

By BARBARA LORD

Mrs. Frank Pierce says she is a short-order cook, and her home is like a coffee shop during the day, but the night meal remains a family affair. "The one thing I have fought to hold onto is having our family together for the evening meal," says Mrs. Pierce. "It's never at any certain time because of everyone's activities, but we would have lost all semblance of home life long ago if we didn't have dinner together."

The Pierce family is a busy one. Pierce is an insurance broker, in and out of the house all day. Appointments with clients may start as early as 8:30 a.m., and often go well into the evening. "I always have a salad, meat and two vegetables for the evening meals," says Mrs. Pierce. "I seldom fix a special dessert, but there are usually cookies or something to satisfy their sweet tooth."

"I used to try to fix enough to last for several meals, but the children are beginning to eat more. I think it's competition. They know if they don't eat it, their brothers will."

The over-all favorite meal of the entire family is stuffed bell peppers. They also like Mexican food, and about anything they can fix outside on the grill. When Mrs. Pierce starts spicing a meal she said that what goes in just depends on what she has in the cabinet at the time.

"I was only 16 when we got married," says Mrs. Pierce. "It was right for me, and I've got no regrets, but I don't think it would be right for many people. I've enjoyed being young while my children are growing up, and it helps me understand them better. I try to stay a jump ahead of them. Quite often I surprise them by using some of the current slang expressions."

The Pierce's three sons Eddie, 16, Steve, 14 and Glen, 11 and their daughter, Karen, 10, have a wide variety of activities that keep them from forming any day-to-day routine. Consequently, Mrs. Pierce still does a lot of lay work and will be the interim minister continually and sandwiches and at the Southern Baptist Church in Salem during the summer.

Bake Apples In Pineapple Juice

Delicious apples baked in pineapple juice are delectable. Just core, cut in half crosswise, put in baking pan, with juice poured over and around them, and bake until tender.

Mrs. Pierce studied Bible and English in college, because she wanted to take subjects she thought would most "help her help" her husband.

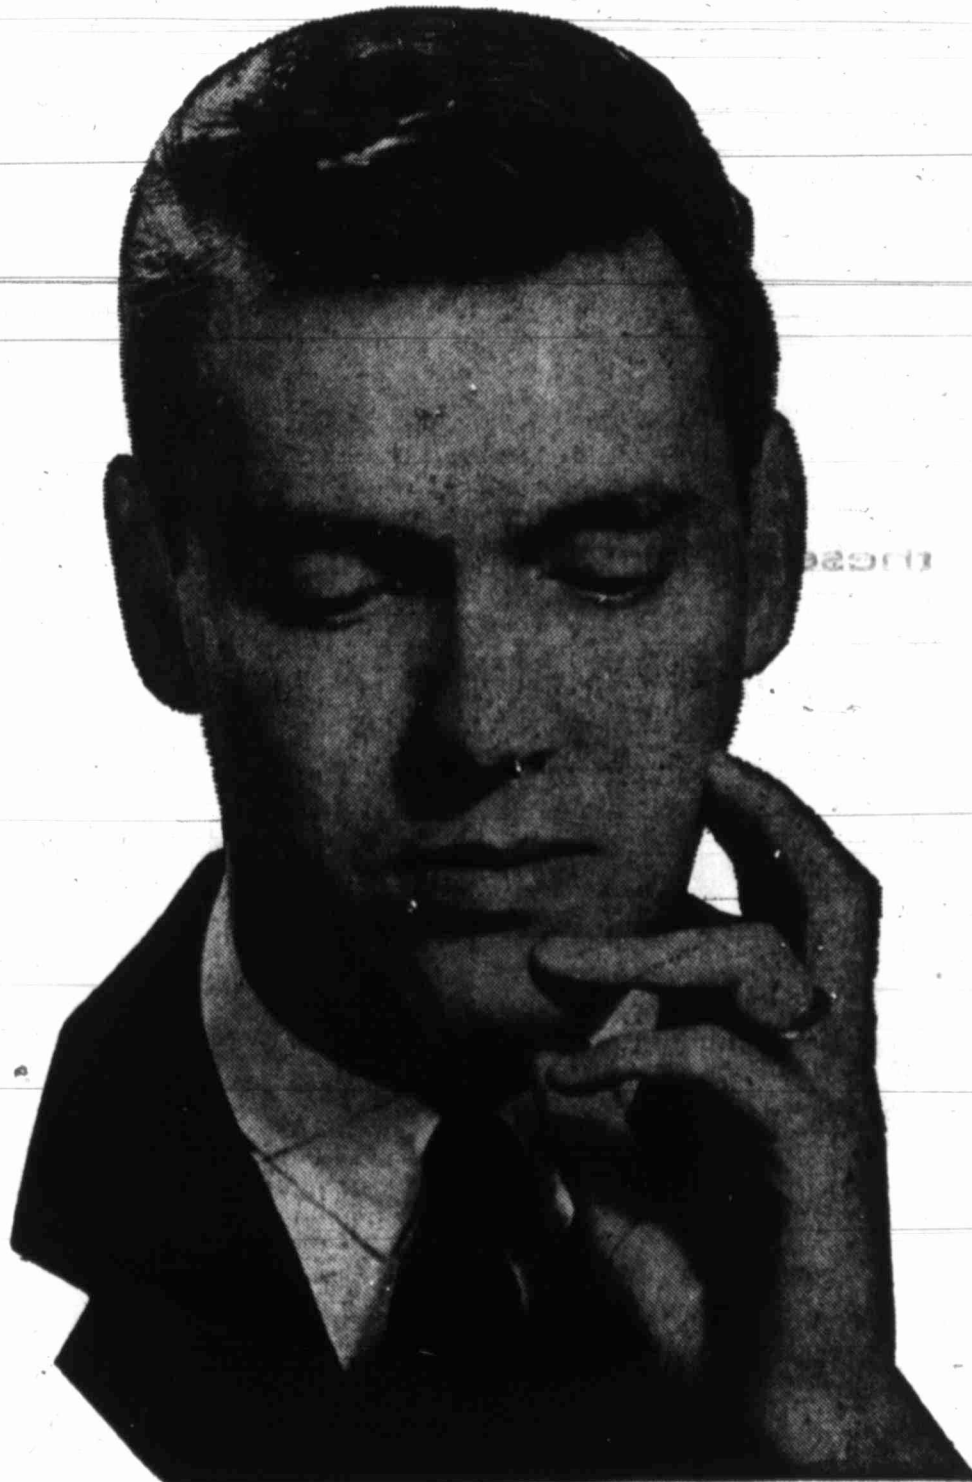

The Pierce's have lost very little of the home life Mrs. Pierce has tried to hold onto. They enjoy many activities as a family. The children have their own activities which are natural for young people, but they still enjoy nights at home playing cards or other family games.

Mrs. Pierce does a lot of painting; mainly landscapes and still lifes. Her work is on display at Bernadette's Beauty Salon. Also, she recently learned to make flowers from egg cartons. She is a member of the Child Study Club and of a Baptist Temple Sunday school class.

Born and reared in Big Spring, Mrs. Pierce has lived in several parts of Texas since their marriage. The Pierces have decided Big Spring is where they want to settle down permanently. Pierce was born in Brownwood.

Mrs. Pierce has progressed a long way from the "hamburgers that came out rock hard," and the "many dishes of corn bread thrown in the trash," which she recalls from her early years of marriage.

"I enjoy homemaking and housekeeping. Pleasing my family always gives me a definite feeling of satisfaction," says Mrs. Pierce.

1,800 Blacks Now Hold Office In United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — "What do we want?" "Freedom!" "When do we want it?" "Now!" The chant rose out of the boiling dust cloud raised by hundreds of marching feet on a back road in the South.

The time was 1965, and blacks were fighting segregation in Bogalusa, La., in one of the few ways that they had mass marches behind big name civil rights leaders.

FAMOUS FADE

But how many of the famous names are gone, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Whitney M. Young Jr., to name just two. Those still around from the earlier days, like James Farmer, who led so many of those marches in the South as head of the Congress of Racial Equality, no longer operate as they once did.

The marches have faded from the black scene. The years since Bogalusa, and Selma, and Birmingham, and Albany, Ga., and Jackson, Miss., and a hundred other marching campaigns, have brought new tactics, a new style of black leadership and a new kind of black leader using different kinds of weapons.

Some of the best-known faces now are in fields that were closed to blacks six years ago.

Cleveland Mayor Carl Stokes is symbolic of one of the most important reasons for the changing leadership style, the rise of the black politician.

"Blacks who are willing to do the homework and learn the techniques will be able through politics to make just incredible changes in the whole lifestyle of black people in this country," says Willie Brown Jr., a man very much a part of the new black political style.

MOST POWERFUL

In a poll of national black leaders, Brown's name probably would not even be recognized by most blacks. Yet earlier this year he was voted one of the 10 most powerful movers and shakers of San Francisco.

As chairman of California's Assembly Ways and Means Committee, Brown has a good deal of control over what goes into—and comes out of—Gov. Ronald Reagan's budget, and he opposes some of the governor's key programs.

"What SNCC (Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee) did in rural Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia was really leadership development," said Georgia Legislator Julian Bond. "Local leadership was no longer willing to accept dictates from national groups."

Now there are attempts to do on a national scale what Willie Brown, Mayor Charles Evers of Fayette, Miss., Stokes, Bond, Alabama dentist Dr. John C. Ash, who ran for governor against George C. Wallace, and hundreds of other black politicians have done on a local scale.

SET THE TONE

"We are going to set the tone for the black liberation struggle in this country," said Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., the morning after he and 12 other black congressmen handed a list of 60 demands to President Nixon.

"The House Black Caucus plans to evaluate what is done for blacks at all political levels, the Nixon administration included," Clay said. "Black people in this country have no permanent friends, no permanent enemies, only permanent interests."

That remark illustrates the belief of Clay and other members of the Black Caucus that blacks no longer need emphasize cultivating the goodwill of white allies, that they can now make serious bids for power.

A study completed recently by the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington showed 1,800 black officials holding public offices, including key law enforcement positions. Sixty-eight cities have black mayors, and California's superintendent of public instruction is a black.

LOCAL PUSH

These officials represent a local power that did not exist five years ago, and several attempts to consolidate this power have begun.

As some observers see it, the rise of the black politician was preceded by another important change, the shift of emphasis from the rural South to the urban North as first Harlem, then Watts, then a hundred other black urban ghettos erupted in riots.

The shift of emphasis, they argue, helped catapult such people as Malcolm X and Stokely Carmichael into positions of strong influence. But equally important, it shifted attention toward a variety of black community activist groups and gave them their first chance at gaining enough influence and federal funding to put their programs into effect.

In the North, such individuals as SCLC's Rev. Jesse Jackson began to be heard; black unified fronts under a variety of leaders were formed in Washington, Boston, Cairo, Ill., and a dozen other cities. The Black Panthers developed a small but dedicated following, supported by a much larger group of sympathizers, and hundreds of community self-help organizations such as Pride, Inc., in Washington, were formed in every urban area.

The local black leader came into his own. A 1969 San Francisco meeting called to ask influential community members for a unified position on the minority student strike at San Francisco State College included more than 200 blacks whose reputations did not extend beyond the neighborhoods in which they lived and worked.

A year ago in Chicago it wasn't any nationally known figure who won an agreement from the building trades unions to try to hire more minority workers, but a coalition of the city's black activists including some notorious gang leaders.

Easter Islanders' Quiet Life May Be In For Some Changes

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer

HANGA ROA, Easter Island (AP) — Each day like the other, the fishermen of tiny Easter Island head out to sea in fragile rowboats through the Pacific surf in search of their daily catch.

Other islanders stay at home and string shells together to make striking necklaces or carve stone and wood copies of the mysterious giant statues that dot this wind-scrubbed Chilean outpost.

WHAT ELSE?
Twice a week the daily ritual of island life is interrupted by the shriek of a Lan-Chile passenger jet landing at the airstrip outside Hanga Roa — the only town on the island — to discharge a dozen or so hardy tourists.

Islanders hop into pickup trucks, mount horses or meander down dirt roads to meet the plane. Some go to sell their handicraft or look for tourists to put in their neat homes.

However, most crowd around the open wooden shed that serves as the terminal and cheerfully inspect the new arrivals because there is nothing else to do.

But the leftist "Popular-Unity" coalition of Marxist President Salvador Allende has come to Easter Island and could change the lifestyle of this Chilean possession.

Several officials of the Allende government have visited Easter Island since his administration took over last November.

NOTHING DONE
According to Jacobo Ney, 23-year-old islander who is secretary of the local Popular Unity committee, the government is now working on a master plan to bring jobs to the island and improve the local economy.

The government also hopes to attract more tourists to Easter Island by constructing a 60-room hotel at the water's edge just outside the village.

But jobs are still scarce and some of the 1,100 islanders are a bit cynical about Allende's intentions.

"Every government has made plans for Easter Island," shrugged a local fisherman. "But nothing has ever been done. Maybe this government will be different."

The island — 14 miles long and seven miles wide — is 2,300 miles from the Chilean coast. Its nearest neighbor is Pitcairn Island, 1,400 miles to the west.

Yet on the rocky surface of this tiny island, hundreds of brooding stone statues were carved and laboriously erected by a race of master sculptors.

Mrs. Scoresby Routledge, an English explorer who came here in 1914, expresses the mood of the island this way:

"On Easter Island the past is the present, it is impossible to escape from it; the inhabitants of today are less real than the men who have gone; the shadows of the departed builders still possess the land."

Getting to see the statues — called "Moai" ni Pascuense, the island tongue — involves bargaining with the owners of a handful of four-wheel-drive jeeps and trucks that are used as transportation on the island. They like U.S. dollars.

DON'T KNOW

The original quarry for the mysterious statues — some of them as big as locomotives — is at Rano Raraku volcano at the opposite end of the island.

Archaeologists still don't know much about the statues and even less about the people who erected them. But it is generally agreed that the island was inhabited about the second Easter Sunday, 1722, when stopped off in 1811. century and that these first, ar-Dutch Adm. Jacob Roggeveen rivals carved them to com-dropped anchor for a visit. Chile acquired control of the island in 1888. By the 1960s the island's population was up to 1,000.

Profiting On Homesickness Gem Dandy Case In Killeen

KILLEEN, Tex. (AP) — Ten persons who picketed a jewelry store they accused of "profiting on the homesickness" of Ft. Hood soldiers have been arrested on misdemeanor charges. Bond was set at $2,200 for each. Eight of those arrested were soldiers and one was a girl. Dave Zeiger of the Oleo Strut, a downtown coffee house and hangout for anti-war GI's and hippie types, said the picketers objected to what he called the high pressure sales tactics of the store. The protesters were charged with the same offenses of picketing and unlawful interference with the flow of commerce and in city court with parading without a permit. Leaflets passed out by the picketers complained that the store's salesmen solicited customers from among GI's passing by on the sidewalk. Zeiger said a poster displayed in the store window, headed "Honor Roll" and listing the names of soldiers killed in Vietnam who owed the store money, was degrading and "an insult to their memory."

Police Chief Charles Mitchell said none of the soldiers will be turned over to the Army authorities until their case has been dealt with in court. The two non-soldiers arrested were Kenneth Bob Leiner of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Stephanie J. Woolhandler of Killeen. The soldiers, all from Ft. Hood, were Rodney L. Corbitt, Bobby Gene Stanfill, James T. McClosky, Michael L. Robinson, James F. Crawford, William E. Cecil Jr., Michael D. Irving and Dennis Ray Whitted.

Oil Decrease

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' average calendar day oil allowance is 3,570,590 barrels, a decrease of 105,266 barrels from May 15, the Railroad Commission reported Wednesday.

House Deals Nixon Manpower Setback

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $5 billion Democratic program to create public service jobs for the unemployed has won House passage over strong administration opposition. The House dealt President Nixon a double setback Wednesday. Not only did it advance a bill he doesn't want and may veto, but it rejected one of his special revenue-sharing bills.

Before passing the public service jobs bill 246 to 142, the House defeated 204 to 182 a substitute proposal by the administration to put a dozen federal manpower programs together under state control.

DEFECTORS ABSENT

Democratic leaders, anxious to win the first congressional test involving revenue sharing mounted one of their strongest efforts of the session to dump the Nixon proposal.

Appealing to party loyalty, they got 16 Southern Democrats who voted for the administration plan two weeks ago to switch back to the party position. Ten other defectors were absent Wednesday.

The earlier vote, won by the Republicans 210 to 182, was on a procedural question. Sensing defeat, the leadership withdrew the bill until this week using the interim to switch enough votes to insure victory.

The public service employment bill is a key part of the domestic program being put together by congressional Democrats as an alternative to President Nixon's.

Another part is a $2-billion accelerated public works bill also designed to provide jobs for the unemployed. It recently cleared a House-Senate conference and should be sent to the White House this month.

RISKING VETO

With unemployment remaining around 6 per cent both bills confront Nixon with risking a politically dangerous veto. He vetoed a public service jobs bill last year and Republicans in Congress have predicted he will veto both its 1971 version and the accelerated public works bill this year.

The public service jobs bill is an emergency measure taking effect whenever the national unemployment rate reaches 4.55 per cent for three consecutive months. That would trigger a flow of federal money to states and communities to help them create public service jobs.

The bill authorizes an immediate outlay of $200 million, $750 million next year and $1 billion a year for the next three years, with an additional $1 billion for areas of high unemployment.

Summer Fun Enrollment Up

Registration for the summer fun division of the Citywide Recreation program has climbed to 74, and officials of the cooperative program urged other parents to enroll their children.

The program is offered daily at Comanche Trail park from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Monday through Friday through July, starting Monday.

There is no charge for this, although those who are able are encouraged to pay a $1 fee to cover costs of replacement materials for arts and crafts. No child is denied the program because of inability to pay this fee.

The sign-up is at the Central YMCA, which serves as the administrative agency for the program made possible by the United Fund, the City of Big Spring, the Big Spring schools and the Y. Every child of elementary school age is urged to take part.

Children in the Bauer and Lakeview areas may sign up at the Lakeview Y if they prefer.

URGES A REJECTION — Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst sits at the witness table as he waits to testify at a Senate Elections subcommittee hearing in Washington. In his testimony he urged rejection of a proposed $5,000 limitation on individual contributions to candidates for federal office.

'Just Can't Quit,' Says Mayor Of Vidor At 73

VIDOR, Tex. (AP)—Julian P. Greer is beginning his third term as mayor of Vidor at 73. "I just can't quit," he says. "I've got a lot of friends who have retired to the lakes and hills, but not me. My entire life has been molded around public service."

Greer grew up in Henderson County, a few miles from Athens, on a 250-acre farm which his father once obtained in an even swap for a horse and carriage.

He entered public life in 1920 at the age of 22. He served in the Texas House until 1926 when he was elected to the state Senate. There he served four consecutive terms under three governors—Moody, Sterling and Miriam A. Ferguson.

Greer had been interested in education ever since attending Alexander College in Jacksonville.

"The school systems were a mess then," he recalls. "At that time we were allotted $1,000 per classroom."

Greer wrote a series of Rural Aid Laws which allowed school districts to receive improvement funds. He later introduced a state aid plan for school bus transportation in rural areas.

During his first term in the House, Greer was also superintendent of the Brownsboro School District, where he helped make history by being the first person to take children to school in a motor-driven bus in Texas.

After serving in the legislature, Greer took his B.A. degree from the University of Texas and served as schools superintendent at Elkhart until 1944, when he returned to Austin. He came to Vidor as school superintendent in 1947, building the district up in the next 16 years from a thousand pupils crowded in inadequate buildings to 4,000 in a modern facility. He has been mayor since 1966.

Prosecutions For Postal Crimes High

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutions for postal crimes hit a new high in North Texas involving indictment of 115 persons last year, according to local federal officials.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Frank McCowan said the number of postal crimes was up about 45 per cent in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, while the national increase ran at 16.2 per cent.

McCowan said: "Locally there is probably an increase of drugs and narcotics being mailed, but the number of cases is too small to provide significant comparisons. We have had several cases of servicemen in Southeast Asia sending in marijuana or hashish."

He said he knew of only one case where heroin was sent through the mail in North Texas.

McCowan said prosecutions of local postal employees charged with stealing from the mails is also on the rise.

Ready To 'Rough It' At New Parks?

AUSTIN (AP)—There are seven new state parks to enjoy this summer, but visitors to some of them may have to "rough it" if they aren't properly prepared. In an effort to make new park lands available to the public as quickly as possible, Texas Parks and Wildlife officials have opened them before completion. In some cases, the visitor may find all he needs for an overnight camping trip. In others, use is restricted to the daytime hours and water is not available. Three of the parks are restricted to day use only. They are Pedernales Falls near Johnson City, Hueco Tanks near El Paso and Dinosaur Valley near Glen Rose. Pedernales Falls remains as it was in 1970—with no overnight camping and no water available. Chemical toilet facilities and picnic tables are the only facilities there. Public access at the New Galveston Island State Park is restricted to the beach area, and toilets are the only facilities. Picnicking is allowed at Copper Breaks State Park in Hardeeman County, but there is no water and few facilities. Lake Arrowhead State Park, south of Wichita Falls, is equipped with chemical toilets and picnic tables, but no water is available. Camping is allowed, however. The most completely developed of the new tracts are the two areas which make up Lake Somerville State Park near Brenham. Both the Nail's Creek and Birch Creek units of the park have camping areas, picnic facilities, restrooms, boat ramps and water. All of the new parks with the exception of Copper Breaks and Galveston Island have a $1 per vehicle entrance fee.

Audie Aboard 'Jinx' Plane?

ROANOKE, Va. (AP)—Authorities say the pilot of the plane in which war hero actor Audie Murphy and five others were killed Friday may be the same whose plane crashed near Lufkin, Tex., last year. The National Transportation Safety Board has not issued a formal report on the Texas accident, but the slightly-injured pilot told investigators both engines on his Piper PA23 failed for lack of fuel. The pilot was identified as Herman Lavelle Butler, 43, of El Paso, Tex. He had been en route from New Orleans to El Paso on March 14, 1970, the board said. Butler blamed the fuel exhaustion on failure of the service operator in New Orleans to top off the fuel tanks properly. He said he tried to return to New Orleans when he discovered the fuel shortage, but lacked the required range. Prevented from landing on a highway because of heavy traffic, Butler said he was forced to stall the plane in treetops seven miles north of Angelina County Airport at Lufkin. The plane was destroyed. The Safety Board reported that it has not definitely determined that the Herman Lavelle Butler who crashed in Texas is the same man who piloted the twin-engine plane that crashed into a mountain 14 miles northwest of Roanoke Friday, killing all six persons aboard.

The bidding:
North East South West
Pass 1 ♠ 4 ♠ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♠
After North passed as the dealer and East opened the bidding with one club, South saw little reason to dally around. His hand possessed considerable trick taking power and all he required from partner was a key card or two. He accordingly jumped to four spades which became the final contract.
West opened the three of clubs and East put up the ace and returned a club to his partner's king. West found himself in a quandary at this point. A diamond shift did not appear inviting and a club continuation would obviously present declarer with an immediate discard, inasmuch as both dummy's jack and ten of clubs were now established winners.
West did not relish leading a spade for fear of subjecting his partner's trump holding to a finesse. He finally chose to return the five of hearts in the hope of hitting East's side strength. The six of hearts was played from dummy, East covered with the ten and South was in with the queen.
Prospects were dim for the declarer because he had no entry to dummy to discard his heart losers. If he cashed the ace of spades and continued with the queen, it was reasonable to assume that whichever player held the king of spades would exit with a trump in order to put South back in his hand again. A heart trick would then have to be surrendered subsequently to send the contract down to defeat.
The only legitimate prospect was to endplay the defender who held the king of spades. This would be possible only if the king were singly guarded, i.e., if it were held doubleton. So reasoning, South cashed the ace of spades and continued with the five. He was rewarded when East went in with the king. The latter exited with a heart which was permitted to ride around to North's jack. South discarded the nine of hearts on the ace of diamonds, ruffed himself in with a diamond and drew the remaining trumps with the queen and jack of spades. In all, he lost two clubs and one spade.
Had West continued with a third round of clubs at trick three, South could have discarded two hearts on the jack of clubs and the ace of diamonds and then taken a successful heart finesse. However, when he tackled the trump suit, unless he chooses the abnormal play of the ace and a low spade he will go down to defeat. Cashing the ace and continuing with the queen will subsequently establish West's ten for the setting trick.

'Affected, Foppish Officer' Has Gone Out Of English Style

By KENNETH L. DAVIS
Associated Press Writer

SANDHURST, England (AP) — The sergeant-major, whose bellow made kings and princes hop, gazed over the rolling slopes of Britain's 229-year-old Royal Military Academy.

"That affected, foppish kind of officer that we used to get once has gone," he said with a hint of Welsh lilt. "There's no time for that now."

St. Maj. Cyril Phillips delivered with authority this obituary of "Col. Blimp," the cartoon lampoon of all-drawling, ineffectual British officers. In his time he trained more than 6,000 officers, cadets, nine foreign princes, three sultans and a sultan stiffened in awe of his foghorn commands.

"Oh, the cadet's the same," he said. "Doesn't matter where he comes from, he's the same. There are just fewer of them."

That's the Sandhurst problem, for the storied halls of the Royal Military Academy are fallen on dull days, largely deserted by the establishment which chases pounds sterling instead of rebelling natives.

From the mid-18th century, this incubator of the British officer caste was the Mecca of well-born youths who yearned to pursue romance in far-off and fabled places. They queued for the privilege.

But, the gloss has eroded in this abrasive century. "I can remember more than 1,100 cadets here," said the sergeant-major. "Now we are down to a little under battalion strength."

Enrollment at Sandhurst has dropped from more than 1,000 in the 1950s to 568 today. Even two years ago the cadets numbered 656.

Youth is rebelling against war and regimentation and violence not of their own choosing. Industry is siphoning off the ambitious with a high-salary vacuum.

Col. E. C. Elgood of the academy said, "My son is at Wellington. I attended an entertainment night recently when each of the houses put on skits. Three of them were antiwar."

Lt. Col. A. A. Dacre, the academy's director of studies, thought the problem more complex than rebellion to war.

"There's instability because of the reduction in the size of the Army and the phasing out of some regiments. There's the money to be made in industry and the antiwar feeling among youths, and a number of other factors."

It is ironic that rebellion against tradition should depopulate the 700-acre academy nestled on the borders of Surrey and Berkshire near Camberley in south England. In the 20th century, Sandhurst became something of a cradle of the coup.

The roll of Sandhurst coup plotters is extensive. "Young Gown" who commanded the Nigerian army was here under me," said Sgt. Maj. Phillips. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, who took over power in 1966 shortly before Nigeria's Biafran revolt, including Qabus Bin Said of Muscat and Oman, Lt. Rex Frank LaFalle of Trinidad, Saaduddin Abu Schweirib of Libya and Field Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan.

The other side of the barricades has its Sandhurst graduates, too, among them King Hussein of Jordan, Louis Napoleon, Sir Winston Churchill and Gordon of Khartoum, to cite a fraction of the famed who learned their leadership at this ancient academy.

Social ferment was not a factor when the Royal Military Academy was founded at Woolwich, England, in 1741 to produce officers for the artillery, engineer and signal corps, or when the Duke of York founded the Royal Military College at High Wycombe in 1799.

By the time the college moved to Sandhurst in 1812 the United States had been training officers at West Point for a decade and there still was no problem getting youth to chance life east of Suez.

Sandhurst and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point have the same mission: production of officers for the army. Beyond that, the differences are great.

Sandhurst furnishes 90 per cent of British regular army officers. West Point furnishes 10 per cent, thanks to the Reserve Officers Training Corps in land-grant colleges. Britain has no ROTC.

Sandhurst keeps its cadets only two years — one year for military training and one year for academic subjects. West Point keeps its cadets four years and graduates them with a university degree.

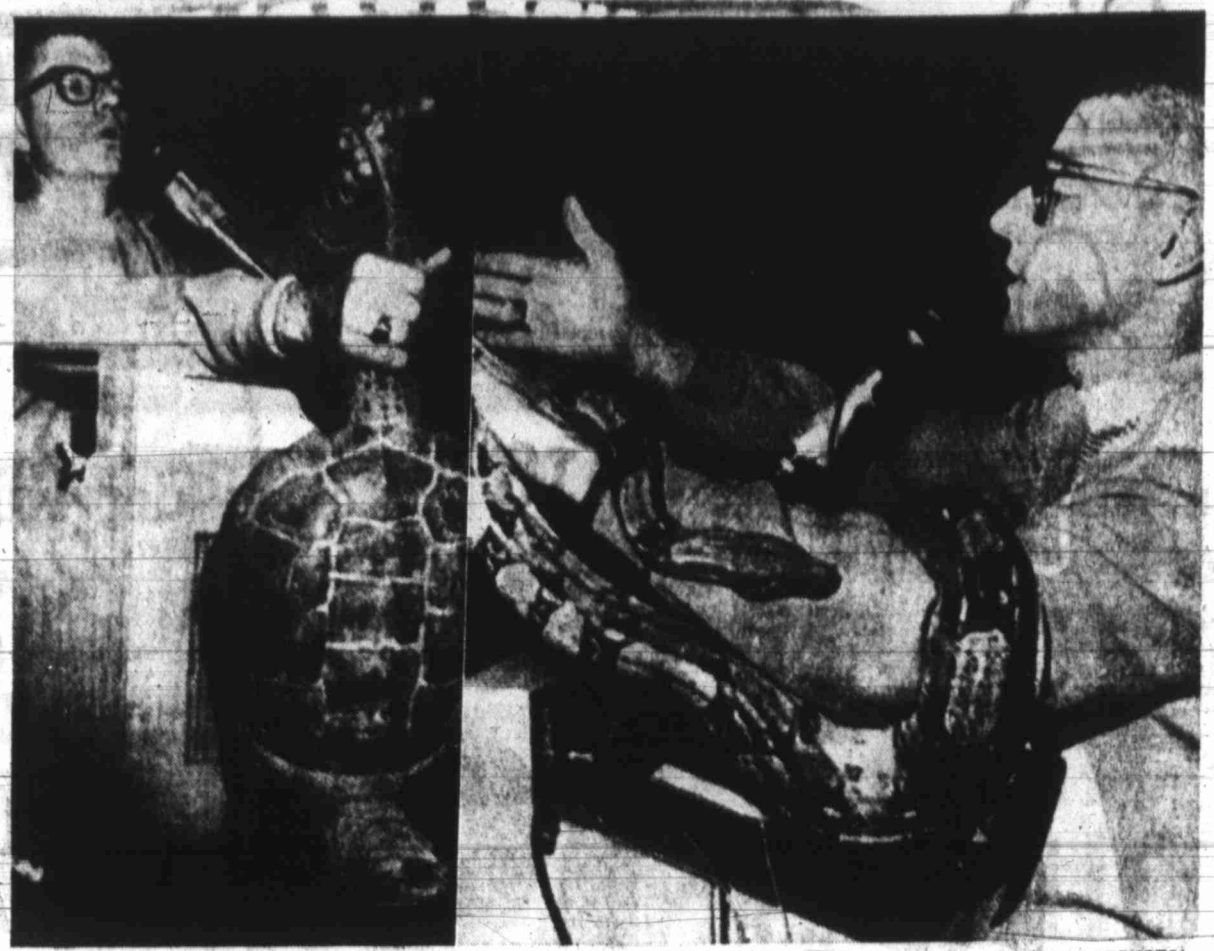

West Point takes only high school graduates. Sandhurst normally attracts high school juniors who then complete high school at Sandhurst. Although it is difficult to equate U.S. and British educational standards, Britons think the Sandhurst graduate is one pace up on the U.S. high school graduate.

In the British tradition, changes at Sandhurst have been gradual and far from earth-shaking. Until 1954 the academy clung to an 18-month format. Then it jumped to two years.

Until January this year academic study took up 47 per cent of the time of Sandhurst cadets. Now it's 50 per cent, about one-fourth the total time West Point cadets put in during their four years.

Only the shrinking of the army itself keeps the shortage of dashing young men and a slight decline in quality of cadet material from being crippling. Not all the 568 men at Sandhurst go to the British army. Seventy-four are from other countries, some of them former colonies.

WHO'LL GIMME TWENTY DOLLARS — Auctioneer John R. Gockley of Lancaster, Pa., calls for bids on 15-pound, 20-year-old snapping turtle at left and six-foot-long boa constrictor as the Philadelphia Herpetological Society held its annual auction in Philadelphia Friday night. The turtle went for $10.50; the boa constrictor $40.00. More than a hundred snakes, lizards and turtles were sold.

Man May Have To Turn To Sea For Survival, Says Biologist

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The world's expanding population is outstripping the food supply from the land and man may have to turn to the sea for survival, says a noted marine biologist.

"A prospect even more horrifying than the hydrogen bomb faces the world today — the prospect that man may continue to reproduce at such a high rate that he will scrape the last crumb of food from the surface of the earth," writes Dr. C. P. Idyll in his recently published book, "The Sea Against Hunger" (Crowell).

"In the headlong crush preceding this," Idyll adds, "such a desperate struggle might take place among the swarming people that atomic war would be only one aspect of the calamity that would annihilate mankind."

Idyll, one of the world's leading oceanographers, is chairman of the Division of Fishery Sciences of the Institute of Marine and Atmospheric Sciences at the University of Miami.

He is among a number of scientists who believe all nations should work to realize the full potential of the oceans as a source of food.

Presently, he said in an interview, the sea produces only two to three per cent of the food consumed on earth. He believes there may be enough food in the oceans to support the entire world population.

Idyll said if the population continues to explode at its present rate, there will be 7.5 billion people on the globe in the year 2000 — more than double the present 3.5 billion. By 2035 there will be 12 billion.

"The most urgent problem arising from the increase in human population is the inadequate supply of consumables — food, fresh water, minerals, energy. Food is the most critical of these. Man has a serious food problem now and it is getting worse."

He said a doubling of the world food supplies is required by 1980 and a tripling by 2000.

"In really hungry parts of the world, four times the present available amount of food will be needed by 2000, and six times the present supplies of animal products which provide most of the protein."

He said the land could grow much more food than it now produces but "no matter what miracles the agricultural sciences perform, man probably will not have enough food in the future if he relies solely on farms."

"It is this situation, in which mankind is faced with starvation, that has turned the attention of experts and the lay public alike to the possibility that the sea might hold the key to human survival," Idyll said.

He noted the world catch of marine products was 57.4 million metric tons in 1968 and that experts estimate the potential is two billion or more metric tons. A metric ton is 2,204 pounds.

More important, there is a greater content of animal protein in most fish than there is in beef, often considered the standard of prime food.

Idyll said one reason for optimism in increasing the catch from the sea is that techniques and markets are being developed for harvesting and marketing kinds of animals that previously seemed out of reach — small fishes, squids, Antarctic krill, Pacific red crabs and others.

In his book Idyll listed these possibilities for increasing the food bounty from the sea:

1. Humans must take advantage of plant and animal plankton — the small to microscopic plants and animals that live in great abundance in the upper levels of the ocean. They are the base of the food supply for all the animals of the sea. The plant plankton converts sunlight, carbon dioxide and other nutrients into living matter which is consumed by the animal plankton. The animal plankton is eaten by small fish and the small fish by large fish. The most promising for catch is the Antarctic krill, a tiny shrimp-like creature which swarms in great numbers near Antarctica.

2. The bigger plants like seaweeds might yield vast amounts of food. The Japanese eat thousands of tons of seaweed yearly — why not the rest of the world?

3. A great hope of many is that man will improve his fishing methods through technology so he can truly farm the sea.

4. Useful marine animals might be transplanted from one part of the ocean to another, filling gaps that nature has left with food fishes, mammals and plants for ready harvest.

5. Establish farms to raise sea animals. The Japanese and others have been successful with oyster farming, but fish are difficult to raise in captivity and the cost is high. It is not probable that farming will produce substantial quantities of seafood for the hungry in the near future.

Idyll is experimenting with a shrimp farm at the University of Miami and said "sea farms may eventually prove to be profitable operations for some investors in the production of oysters, shrimps and other seafoods in high demand."

He said the Soviet Union and Japan are the nations doing the most to exploit the potential of the sea, and the Soviets have declared their intention to wrest world leadership in fishing from Japan.

Idyll also is concerned about pollution of the waters.

"It has been estimated that as much as 90 per cent of the seafood produced by United States fishermen is of species that must spend part of their lives in the estuaries or shallow waters near the shore," he said. "But through the destructive process of harbor and land building, and the dumping of enormous quantities of killing pollutants into the estuaries and bays, we are reducing the ability of the sea to produce marine animals. The bright hopes for vast new harvests from the ocean may be in vain unless we learn better control of activities along the shore."

Idyll believes if man is to truly realize the potential of the sea, there must eventually be an international control organization, perhaps a division of the United Nations.

BBC Dictionary Oils British Tongue-Twisters For Visitors

LONDON (AP) — Britain's uninitiated need no longer twist their tongues over the Marjoribanks of Featherstonehaugh, the Linklaters or the Cholmondeleys.

English, as spoken by the word-wizards of the British Broadcasting Corp., BBC now is within the reach of everyone thanks to "The BBC Pronouncing Dictionary of British Names."

It contains no fewer than 16,000 family and place names designed to turn ice-cool announcers into nervous wrecks at the drop of a "H" or the slip of a syllable.

Visitors to the Hertfordshire village of Sawbridgeworth can now humor the natives by pronouncing it correctly as "Saps-worth" and those venturing into the wilds of Wales can bone up Blaengwrach, Blaengwawr and Blaengarw — pronounced "Blingwrrach" — "Blingworr" and "Blingarroo."

The dictionary, the result of 40 years of research by the pronunciation unit of The BBC, also gives the lowdown on Britain's high-ups.

The Earl of Harewood, for example, must be known as "Haarwood," although, for the sake of confusion, he lives in the town of "Hairwood."

The BBC is very mindful of the letters V and O. The Devereux family it notes, can be pronounced "Deverrooks," "Deverrecks," "Deverra" or "Deverroo."

Armed Guards Not Far From Casinos Macao Gingerly Borders On Communist China

By DAVID J. PAINE
Associated Press Writer

MACAO (AP) — Bayonet fixed, the Communist Chinese border guard steps slowly along the bank of the small island 50 yards across the muddy inlet from Macao. He stops to watch as a taxi arrives on the opposite bank and an American tourist gets out to ogle him. Unhurriedly, he paces back to the round, yellow blockhouse and stares through the square window across what is known as Duck Channel.

A short distance away in the casino of the newly-built Hotel Lisboa, a corpulent Chinese importer from Hong Kong who has been playing blackjack through the night and has lost $6,000 wearily withdraws from the table.

Macao, in an age of dwindling imperialism and colonialism, is an anomaly. It is a relic of the bygone era of gunboat diplomacy when European powers contested trading rights along the China coast.

ONCE GATEWAY

Part of the Chinese mainland 40 miles west of Hong Kong, it has been a Portuguese territory since 1557 and for centuries was a major gateway to China. It was here on July 3, 1844, that the first treaty between China and the United States was signed, the Treaty of Wanghsia declaring "perfect, permanent, universal peace" between the two countries.

The tiny, six-square-mile outpost of Portugal exists in the shadow of the Communist Chinese giant.

Portugal and Red China do not recognize each other but the Portuguese administration in Macao treads gingerly to avoid upsetting either the Chinese Communists in its own backyard or the ones across the border.

TURNING POINT

There was a short-lived showdown in late 1966 and early 1967 when local Communists, influenced by the growing Cultural Revolution in China, rioted and eight were killed by police. It was a major turning point in the history of Macao, which since then has bowed to Communist influence.

Peking backed the rioters and the price the Portuguese paid for a peaceful settlement included an abject apology for their actions, a guarantee that police and troops never again would fire on Chinese, suspension of all nationalist Chinese activities in Macao and the barring of refugees fleeing mainland China. A number of refugees Peking wanted back were returned.

A westerner living in Macao since before the riots estimates there are only about 500 hardcore Communists, with another 2,000 active sympathizers. With Red China hovering in the background, they are powerful enough to call the tune in the territory. For demonstrations they can put on the streets thousands of people, including children from Communist-run schools. Trade unions are the backbone of the Communist movement.

STILL PEACEFUL

But, Macao is peaceful, a quiet backwater of cobbled streets, narrow alleys adorned with myriad Chinese signs, temples with incense-laden air and pedicabs.

Young lovers stroll at night along the Rua do Praia Grande, a handsome boulevard skirting the water's edge. Angular junks glide gracefully around the point past the old fortress of San Tiago da Barra, built in 1629.

NO AIRPORT

Macao has no airport and the constant silting up of its harbor as mud swirls down the Yellow River precludes all vessels except those with a shallow draft. Visitors must travel first to Hong Kong and go from there to Macao by hydrofoil or the slower ferry.

In 1960, according to a census, Macao had a population of 169,299. Swelled by tens of thousands of refugees who streamed in from Communist China in the early and middle '60s, this figure is now estimated at 300,000.

Perhaps only 2,000, including most of the 600-odd military contingent, are pure Portuguese. About 5,000 are Macanese, a Portuguese-Chinese mixture often also including strains picked up in other parts of Asia as the Portuguese over the centuries wandered further into the Orient.

Close to 98 per cent of the population are Chinese and few speak Portuguese. Even English is more widely spoken, yet the Portuguese in Macao remain proud of their traditions and their past.

FOUR CENTURIES

"We have been here for more than four centuries, you know," a young government official says. "We have a duty to remain in Macao and carry on."

Portuguese architecture is evident everywhere in Macao. Portuguese wines and traditional foods like bacalhau (codfish) can be obtained as easily as rice and noodles — except when someone forgets to renew supplies specially shipped in from Lisbon.

The Portuguese administration is headed by Gov. Jose Manuel de Sousa e Faro Nobre de Carvalho, who had a torrid baptism in the territory when he was confronted with the major disturbances of December, 1966, only six days after arriving in Macao.

Two of the most important figures in Macao are Chinese both bearing the name Ho. They are not related.

COMMUNIST HO

One is Ho Yin, a 63-year-old millionaire with strong Communist connections who is Peking's front man in dealings with the Portuguese administration.

The other is Stanley Ho, 49, also a millionaire and head of the gambling syndicate which operates Macao's four casinos.

Ho Yin, the most influential Chinese in Macao, is the Chinese people's representative on the Macao legislative council. He is a member of wealthy syndicates which import gold and control the popular dog racing and allied totalizer betting.

It's an old saying in Macao that the streets should be paved with gold. About a ton of the precious yellow metal is imported every week and official figures show not a single ounce being exported.

The popular theory is that, except for a small amount retained for industrial purposes, it is smuggled to other Asian countries.

'LAS VEGAS'

Because of its casinos, Macao has been given labels like "the poor man's Las Vegas" and "the Monte Carlo of the East."

Three of the casinos, including one on a three-story vessel looking like a riverboat without a paddle, offer Western-style gambling like blackjack, baccarat, roulette and craps as well as Chinese games like fan tan and high-low dice. The fourth casino has exclusively Chinese gambling.

Most of the big gamblers are Hong Kong Chinese and a few other foreigners.

CASINO MONOPOLY

Stanley Ho, who heads the syndicate of businessmen holding the monopoly, says the syndicate pays about $944,000 a year to the administration for the monopoly and in addition to sinking money into investments such as hotels, it is obliged to spend about $166,000 annually on harbor dredging and other public works.

He says the casinos' gross profit averages $5 million to $6.7 million a year.

Some Macao people disapprove of the heavy gambling at the casinos and at the Canidrome dogtrack, where Australian-bred and trained greyhounds draw big crowds who bet heavily.

But the gambling, through monopoly payments and taxes, pays for one-sixth of the budget, directly or indirectly supports a good chunk of the population, and is a main attraction for streams of free-spending tourists. Without it Macao would face a financial crisis.

GAMBLING IMPORTANT

The economy of the Portuguese territory leans heavily on tourism and gambling and there is comparatively little industry. Textiles, fireworks and plastics are the main exports.

Despite the January, 1967, agreement whereby Portugal promised to return all refugees from Red China, some still slip through the net to Macao. Best estimates put their number at about 20 a month, but no one can be sure about this shadowy traffic.

Portuguese authorities for the record stick to the rules about sending them back but in actual fact turn a blind eye wherever possible.

Heavy Communist patrols at places like Duck Channel, a one-time popular escape route, and gray Communist gunboats ostentatiously anchored a few hundred yards off Macao do not stop the refugees.

MANY REFUGEES

Macao has a refugee population estimated at 80,000. One person in every four is a refugee. Most left China legally between 1949 and 1966.

For many of the refugees, Macao is only a stopover on the way to Hong Kong. Hong Kong, with its heavier industrialization and chances of a better paying job, together with the lure of brighter lights, holds more for them than Macao can offer. They also feel safer from the Red Chinese in Hong Kong than in Macao.

They pay $100 to $200, or more, to be smuggled into Hong Kong in junks or other small vessels known as "snakeboats." Outnumbering them on the crowded boats are young people from Macao who are barred by the British colony's immigration laws from legally moving to Hong Kong but are lured by the same hopes of a better life that draw the refugees.

Wages are poor in Macao. Girls working in textile factories on Taipa Island get about $67 a month, with only one day off in that time. In Hong Kong they can earn perhaps half again as much while working a six-day week.

If you ask a resident what is Macao's most popular sport, he probably will answer with a smile: "Watching TV or the movies."

Escalating The Bite

One of the most important issues now facing Congress, at least from the taxpayers point of view, is what will be done about Social Security taxes.

One proposal before the federal lawmakers will put a levy of $784.80 per year on all workers earning $10,200 a year. This figure at almost seven and a half per cent of the worker's salary (actually it could be substantially higher after escalation factors are figured in). Of course, the employer must pay a like amount. Thus, better than $1,500 per year per worker will be removed from direct application to the economic stream. Naturally, benefits will be increased, but with a bleeding off for administrative and other expense, it will not have the same impact. But the main point is that the worker will not have the say immediately on how he will spend a sizable chunk of the money he has earned.

As with the cow that gives less milk when the water and feed ration is progressively limited, the taxpayer may reach a point at which he has no incentive to be more productive. This poses a question of whether there should be a ceiling on Social Security taxes.

In our view, the weight of argument leans in this direction, otherwise there can be no end to increasing benefits, adding new beneficiaries, lowering age requirements, and raising the tax to pay for them.

This would not be like the income tax, which ought to be restrained by common sense, but possibly not by law because there could be a national security emergency which would require increases of the sharpest kind. Social Security would not be called upon to face any crisis that imperils the security of the nation, hence it is a controllable factor.

Finally, Social Security was not conceived in the beginning to be a total retirement system, but rather a supplementary one. But if it keeps increasing the bite on the employees' check, there will be less and less that the employee can spare for participation in his own or his company's retirement plan.

The Film Commission

Gov. Preston Smith's new Texas Film Commission has been handed the task of attracting more movie-makers to the state.

One major producer already has announced plans to film movies in San Antonio and New Braunfels and several flying films have used this locale. Oscar-winning "Midnight Cowboy" had some of its early shots filmed here.

Texas has the climate, diversity of scenery and the people to help create a continuing motion picture industry. The film commission has a good product to "sell."

New Mass Arrests

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — More than 3,500 people were rounded up in mass arrests Thursday evening and thrown into the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

The demonstrators, wearing black ties, evening dresses, diamond necklaces and tiaras, had vowed to tie up Washington traffic around the Watergate Apartment Complex with their Cadillac and Lincoln Continental chauffeur-driven limousines.

Police chief Jerry Wilson said that he had orders that anyone who participated in the demonstration, which had been organized to get our symphony orchestra out of Constitution Hall, would be arrested.

AT ABOUT 10 o'clock, the first demonstrators started chanting "We Want Culture" to which their leaders yelled "When Do You Want It?" and they shouted back "Now."

A police captain with a bullhorn said, "Unless you keep your limousines moving you will all be arrested." But the demonstrators refused to heed the warning and traffic was blocked up as far as the State Department. At the signal from the captain, the police immediately moved in and started making mass arrests.

Because of the large number of demonstrators the police decided to detain all the people at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

THE DEMONSTRATORS had been prepared for this and most of them went peacefully, but once inside the detention center they couldn't believe the conditions that they had to put up with. People were jammed in light in the halls and ante-rooms.

As each new group of demonstrators was brought in, it became obvious that the Kennedy Center did not have the facilities to handle them.

At 11 o'clock there was no gin left, and by 11:30 all the scotch had been drunk and some of the people started to cry.

THE AMERICAN Civil Liberties Union protested vigorously that the demonstrators were being detained under cruel and unlivable conditions and demanded that the people being held in the center either be charged or let go. But police said the demonstrators knew what they were getting into when they came out that night, and they felt no obligation to process them with any speed.

Reporters discovered inside the center that many innocent people had been rounded up in the mass arrests. One couple said, "We were on our way to see 'Love Story' and suddenly we were thrown in a bus and dumped in here."

A WOMAN, who said she was just walking her dog, found herself sleeping under Peter Duchin's piano. "The only reason I was picked up," she said tearfully, "is because my dog had long hair."

Although Chief Wilson denied it, the strategy behind the arrests was to keep the demonstrators there until 3 o'clock in the morning so that traffic would be running smoothly again.

THE POLICE chief set $100 bond for every person over 35 and $40 for those under. The organizers of the demonstration vowed they wouldn't be intimidated and promised to come back in September to tie up traffic again when the Kennedy Center was officially opened.

End Fuzzy Thinking

John Cuniff

NEW YORK (AP) — Four years ago Harold Wilens, a Los Angeles executive and real estate developer, and Harold Niles, then chairman of Baltimore Life Insurance Co., formed Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace.

"At that time," said Wilens this week, "anybody who spoke out against the war was considered the enemy or a nut."

The hate mail flooded in, Wilens said, considerably faster than the membership applications. Wilens and Niles felt, however, that the war was a mistake of historical magnitude, a military blunder, a political scandal.

BEM advocated the business-militarism speak out on the issue. But its founder soon realized that fewer established figures either cared or perhaps dared to.

BEM drew memberships steadily, however. And then, since BEM was a one-issue organization, Wilens in 1969 founded BEF, or Businessmen's Educational Fund to fight on a broader scale what he felt was the militarization of America.

Wilens, its chairman, devoted what his wife said was 101 per cent of his time to speeches, membership work, lobbying and most recently to a Vietnam trip. Results? Wilens thinks he has succeeded to some extent.

In recent months the attitudes of some businessmen appear to have changed. Within the past year the heads of Bank of America, International Business Machines and E. I. duPont have spoken against the war and blamed it for domestic problems.

"Wilens, a 57-year-old millionaire grandfather and former Marine, was asked if he felt a major change really has occurred in the business attitude.

"I think the line of the pragmatist and the idealist are meeting," he replied. "Damn few businessmen think we are unpatriotic now. All of them relate inflation to the war, for example."

Do you really think you can end wars?

"Yes. Maybe there'll be little ones. But my feeling is that since we've always had wars it is no reason to extrapolate into the future. We changed the name of the game when technology developed the ultimate weapon."

Isn't that being overly idealistic?

"We have to get away from the fuzzy thinking that says wars are inevitable and that peace is a utopian concept. Either man or war is obsolete. We have to decide."

Military Problems

David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — Periodically there's an outburst in Congress about the FBI or CIA or their surveillance operations, or there are statements made by members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee or an appropriations committee to try to tell the executive branch of the government how to conduct foreign policy. But a knowledge of what is going on all around the world which could affect the interests of the United States is something that cannot be acquired just by serving in Congress.

JUST THIS week an example of a military problem involving maneuvers of the Soviets in the Atlantic — about which the government agencies here have known for some time — appeared in the newspapers. Up at the top of the globe is Iceland, a small island but an important military base of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. About 3,700 American servicemen are at the base, and they keep track of surface ships and submarines of the Soviets as they move in and out of the Atlantic.

NATO OFFICIALS estimate that the Soviets have increased their submarine activity in the North Atlantic by 400 per cent in the last four years. They have 350 submarines, 100 of which are assigned to the fleet that moves around in the northern waters.

Western sources, according to an Associated Press dispatch by Fred Coleman from Iceland, declare that at any one time up to 60 per cent of the Soviet submarine forces are in the Atlantic.

The Russians naturally have been endeavoring to influence the people and the government of Iceland so as to secure a close down of the NATO base. At least 11 diplomats and 50 more embassy employees are stationed in Iceland. This is the largest foreign mission in Iceland and is nearly half the size of the local police force.

THE SOVIETS have opened a propaganda office and are making use of the opposition reported from the United States to the Vietnam war to stir up feelings against this country in Iceland.

Situations like these are developing in several of the NATO countries. The duty of the CIA is to keep the government in Washington informed about any activities that are designed to hurt American interests.

ESSENTIALLY the withdrawal of half the American troops in NATO is a military problem. It is surprising that members of Congress will come forth with resolutions on the subject without knowing the details of the whole defense situation faced by our allies in Europe and by our own country. Certainly the Deployment of Soviet submarines with nuclear weapons in Atlantic waters is a matter of great significance. They will have to be detected from the base in Iceland as they pass that area going from Russia into the north Atlantic.

THERE ARE some members of Congress who want the Central Intelligence Agency's methods and assignments to be made public. This would be like disclosing military plans. The attacks on the intelligence-gathering agencies illustrates the lack of knowledge which many legislators have about some of the delicate problems of certain government agencies and the splendid work they have done not only inside this country in catching criminals but in keeping the American government informed about dangerous trends in every area abroad in which we may be having serious trouble.

Editorials And Opinions The Big Spring Herald

Firelighter

Around The Rim

Jean Fannin

The Texas pioneers must have been marvelous. Not only could they do things like settle the Texas coast without air conditioners and cross the sunny prairies without sunglasses — they could cook over an open fire.

I KNOW the art is not lost. On a warm evening I can smell the delicious odors coming from my neighbors' patios. All you can smell on my patio are charred newspapers and charcoal lighter. I can't light a fire. And worse still, I never can remember that I can't light a fire.

Last week I invited friends over for hamburgers. Approximately two hours before they were due I started trying to light the fire.

STACKING up the lumps of charcoal ("faster-starting and longer-burning") was easy. Next I squirted on the lighter fluid ("for a quicker starting blaze") and struck a match. I got one puny flame which lasted maybe 10 seconds before it fizzled out.

"Maybe a match just doesn't burn long enough," I said to the patio furniture. Gathering up approximately three weeks supply of The Herald,

I touched a match to the bonfire and was rewarded with a flame which shot approximately 50 feet in the air, burned briskly for 15 seconds and then fizzled out. The charcoal was as cold as ever.

"PROBABLY needs a little more lighter fluid," I told the ivy which had begun a sudden retreat from its attempt to take over the patio.

I had neglected to notice that one little flame deep on the bottom of the pile of charcoal. The firemen of America may name me Miss Charred Carelessness of the Year. Anyway, the result was another 50-foot blaze which caused me to leap backwards, fall over a lawn chair and land on a rosebush in the flower bed.

ABOUT THAT time the guests arrived.

"If you want hamburgers you can cook them yourselves," I shouted.

Without a word one of them took the matches from my blackened hand, walked outside and dropped a match on the charcoal, producing a lovely, long-lasting blaze.

The hamburgers were delicious.

Courts Helpless?

Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON — There has been for some time now a blatant campaign by the radical left to deliberately destroy the Republic's judicial system — or what's left of it after the machinations of the Warren Supreme Court. A big assist has now been given to that campaign by a Connecticut judge named Harold M. Mulvey, who has set a new world's record for irrelevant jurisprudence.

IN DISMISSING murder-kidnapping charges against Black Panthers Bobby Seale and Mrs. Ericka Huggins after their long trial ended in a jury disagreement, Judge Mulvey delivered himself of the following non-sequitur:

"I find it impossible to believe that an unbiased jury could be selected without superhuman efforts — efforts which this court, the state and these defendants should not be called upon to make or to endure."

IN SHORT, Judge Mulvey declared himself uninterested in trying to learn whether or not Seale and Mrs. Huggins were involved in the kidnapping, torture and murder of one Alex Rackley in May, 1969. Their innocence, of course, must be presumed, but Judge Mulvey has decided that because the case attracted so much attention in the media, the judicial system is powerless to perform its duty of settling the matter one way or for all.

It took four months to select the jury whose deliberations ended in a deadlock. Judge Mulvey, noting that some 1,500 prospective jurors had been screened for the first trial, rejected the prosecution's motion for a change of venue on the grounds that the chances of drawing a new panel this year were "practically nil."

"PRACTICALLY NIL," he says. Well, that's not absolutely nil. For one, could have curbed my impatience if it took a year to select a second jury.

That brings us to another of Judge Mulvey's curious remarks. Apparently referring to Seale's earlier obstreperousness in court, the judge said he had "gained a rather wide knowledge" of the defendants. "I have observed a rather remarkable change in (their) attitude," he said, "and I don't think it is feigned."

DON'T ASK me what the judge meant. He seemed to be saying that because Seale had stopped raising rumpuses in the courtroom, Seale and Mrs. Huggins should not be required to endure a second trial. Since that way lies madness, I refuse to believe that Judge Mulvey was suggesting that the way to beat a murder rap is to wash one's face every day and behave with crooked-little-finger decorum before the bench.

ANYWAY, wittingly or not, Mulvey has provided ammunition for those on the radical left who would destroy the judicial process. I detected a note of smugness in the assertion of counsel for Seale and Mrs. Huggins that the four months consumed in selecting the first jury showed "the system is not equipped to deal with the situation." To me, their words mean that if a defendant and his counsel can horse around long enough they've got it made.

Greyhound Phoenix Bound

HOUSTON (AP) — The corporate headquarters of the Greyhound Corp. will be moved from Chicago to Phoenix, Ariz.

The move will be under way in August and continue the rest of the year, board chairman Gerald H. Trautman said. He said it will affect a "few hundred" employees of Greyhound and its six divisions.

He said Greyhound will move into a new unoccupied 29-story building in the Rozenzweig Center in Phoenix. He said the selection of Phoenix followed a study of several prospective cities.

The directors met after Trautman was joined by chief executives of six operating divisions of the corporation in saying they expect 1971 to be a good year.

The annual shareholders meeting was told by Trautman that first quarter earnings were 25 cents a share compared to 17 cents a year earlier. He said preliminary April figures are well ahead of last year.

Year-end earnings should be several cents above last year's $1.40 a share, he said.

No Such Thing As 'Right' Time

Hal Boyle

By BOB HARING
(Contributing Editor)

EAST BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Time is relative. Maybe Einstein said that. Or maybe it was a fellow on the bus yesterday.

At any rate, it has the ring of essential truth that comes from hours of solitary thought by a theoretical genius or from years of commuting.

It really doesn't matter what time you're on so long as it agrees with those you have to deal with.

The best clock in the world won't help a commuter if it doesn't agree with the one his bus or train happens to be running on that day.

That explains why commuters spend so much time waiting. So they don't be late, they're early. And wait. Waiting isn't too bad on a warm spring morning when the trees are blooming and the birds are singing. It is one of life's lesser joys on a January snow or March rain. Or any season in a railroad station, given the state of the art of railroad station design these days. Actually, it isn't design of these days—railroad stations all seem to have been built in the late 1800s and to have been pushed steadily downward since. Something to do with the great American death wish displayed by the nation's railroads.

For practical purposes, there really is no such thing as the "right" time.

What's right for me may make you miss a plane. Or lose a business deal. Or stand up a lovely lady.

Oh, somewhere there probably is a timing device—clock would be too ordinary a word—which keeps some specific trace of the microseconds in relation to the standings of the stars. But even so the division into seconds, minutes and hours is an artificial thing. And the guy who runs that perfect timer probably keeps his watch set by the clock at home, so he won't be late for dinner.

It is custom, really, which decrees that a minute is 60 seconds. Or that lunch is at noon—or for that matter that noon is at 12 o'clock.

And customs aren't the same around the world and are subject to change. The Spanish, for instance, consider lunch from 2 to 4 in the afternoon and try that change on your boss sometime.

But since time is relative—a regular but arbitrary division of space into bits definable by words—it's interesting to speculate about some of the changes that might be made.

Why not an eight-hour span, instead of 12? or 16?

Who says a day must be 24 hours long? Why not vary the length of days, so that summer ones are longer and winter ones shorter?

And it might be interesting to leave for work at 12 o'clock and get home at 2 o'clock.

Come to think of it, that's a relatively good idea any time.

My Answer

Billy Graham

A friend of mine has been confiding some of her private business to someone whom I know has been telling others about it. Should I tell my friend that her trust is being betrayed?

J.A. Yours is certainly a somewhat delicate and difficult position. There are several factors involved in a matter of this kind. For example, some things depend upon how well you and your friend are acquainted. Another point to be considered is the nature of the confidences which are being divulged and whether they are sufficiently important to merit your intervention. Before saying anything to your friend it might be wiser to have a quiet talk with the other person involved. It may be she does not realize how unwise she is acting, and that in fact she is betraying a confidence. In a case like this the direct approach is nearly always the right one and I believe it is the more Christian line to adopt.

If this approach fails, then I think you would be justified in having a word with your friend. If your friendship with her is strong and deep, your action is not likely to be resented or misinterpreted, particularly if you go about the matter in a prayerful Christian spirit.

A Devotion For Today...

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. (Matthew 5:3)

PRAYER: This day, O Lord, we crave riches of grace and life which come only from Thee. We pray through Christ our Saviour, who taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. Amen." (From the "Upper Room")

Action To Limit Debate On Draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are moving toward possible action to limit debate on the draft extension bill unless voluntary time limitations can be worked out on all pending amendments.

Leadership sources report a petition calling for a talk curb is being circulated and could be filed Friday following votes on ending the draft and limiting its extension to one year.

These include the McGovern-Hatfield amendment to cut off all funds for U.S. operations in Indochina Dec. 31, and a variety of proposals dealing with the draft law itself.

Both sides agree privately a first effort to get the two-thirds needed for a debate limitation probably would fail, but a second bid later in the week might succeed.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., sponsor of the volunteer-force proposal due for the first vote Friday, said during debate Wednesday he has 10 other amendments ready in the likely event that one fails.

"If it takes until December to consider the amendments," Hatfield said, "I am ready to fight the battle until December."

Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, who has promised to filibuster to prevent passage of the draft bill by the June 30 expiration of the present act, said he is willing to agree to a reasonable time limitation on debate but none has been offered.

An aide to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., co-sponsor of the Vietnam cutoff, said McGovern-Hatfield forces have told the leadership they would agree to about one week's debate on their amendment.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, however, said he thinks the debate could be even shorter since the measure was discussed last year before the Senate rejected it 55 to 39. Supporters say they didn't have enough time for proper debate last year.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee and the draft bill's floor manager, and Republican Leader Hugh Scott have said they will seek to cut off debate to assure enactment of the bill by June 30.

Draft authorities have said they would be able to keep manpower flowing to the military after June 30 if necessary by calling previously deferred men, including college students.

Gravely First Black Admiral Due 'Frocking'

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Samuel L. Gravely Jr., a 48-year-old Virginian who began his military career as an enlisted man, has become the first black admiral in the Navy's history.

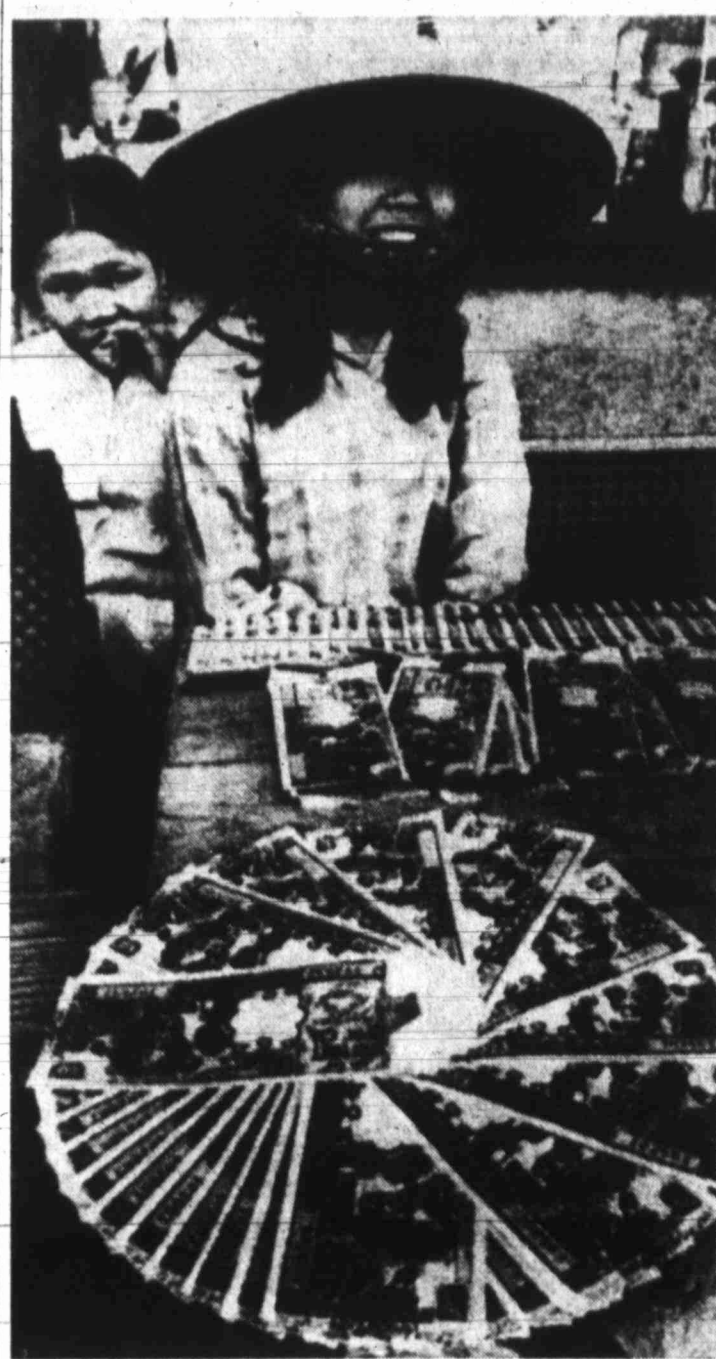

After turning over command of the guided missile frigate Jouett, Gravely was ordered to stand by Wednesday for the Navy rite of "frocking," which transforms a captain into a rear admiral.

"We are proud to select you as a member of what the Navy calls its 'board of directors,'" Vice Adm. Raymond Peet, commander of the 1st Fleet, said as he placed the gold shoulder boards on Gravely's uniform.

A native of Richmond and a onetime railway postal clerk, Gravely is a veteran of three wars who joined the Navy in 1942 as an enlisted man. He is a graduate of Virginia Union University.

Gravely was one of 49 captains selected for promotion to two-star rank this year from 2,000 who were up for consideration. His next assignment will be in Washington, D.C., as director of naval communications.

Hospital Problems Aired At Meeting

Downtown Lions got a close-up view Wednesday of some of the problems of hospitals in contributing to health care.

Addressing the weekly meeting at the Settles was a panel composed of Dr. Diana Funderburk, physician on the Big Spring State Hospital staff; Maj. Theresa Carriago, chief of nursing at Webb AFB; Charles Weeg, administrator of Hall-Bennett Memorial Hospital; and Norman Knox, administrator of Medical Center Memorial Hospital.

They were part of a team that also includes representatives from Cowper, Medical Arts and the VA Hospital who have been presenting a series of programs on local health services.

Dr. Funderburk described the various areas of treatment at the state hospital, but majored on the alcoholic unit which employs a team approach using the talents of the psychologist, social worker, rehabilitation counselor, occupational therapists, nurses, attendants, and, if the patient is interested — the AA. The increasing volume of drug victims is presenting new problems, which so far are not so effectively dealt with. She said many programs are community oriented.

Maj. Carriago said that the task of the base hospital not only is directed toward physically fit pilot trainees but in the support of that mission. That means taking care of all support people, plus their dependents. Scope includes general medical services, surgery, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology. Complex cases are air evacuated to regional centers. The hospital soon is to occupy its new (equipment as well as building) facilities.

Weeg said that the hospital was one of the most important places in town and was concerned as much with keeping people well as in treating the sick. Nationwide there are four million health workers, and for every doctor there are 12 professional aids. The greatest number is nursing (1.8 million) who serve 1.5 million patients per day. Hospitals are among the largest employers in the nation with more than 1.5 million on the payroll. One of the big challenges is to remember that the most important individual in all of this is the patient.

Knox presented insight on why medical costs have been rising sharply. One thing is staff, for it takes 2½ times as many employees as there are patients. Technical advances create new jobs without terminating existing ones, and technical equipment is rocketing in price — in 1969 alone it rose 26 per cent and accounted for $9 a day of the patient increase in cost. Special services such as emergency, coronary, intensive care, etc., are necessary but cannot possibly pay their way. Yet, he said, every individual must constantly ask himself what do you want your hospital to be?

The program was coordinated by Mrs. Billy Sheppard.

New Draftees May Get Chance To Use Skills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Selective Service and the Army are launching a joint effort to give the draftee a better chance of putting his civilian skills to military use.

And by August, a draftee's induction notice will be accompanied by a pamphlet telling him what to expect from the Army life.

So far as oldtimers at Selective Service and the Army can recall, this is the first time the draft system has been used as a pipeline to advise the draftee about military life.

Beginning today the Army is mailing to each state draft headquarters a six-month supply of "civilian employment training information" labels to be attached to a man's induction notice by his draft board.

The idea is to make sure the Army finds out about a draftee's particular skills. Despite a 10-year-old testing program, the Army has built a reputation of putting square pegs in round holes.

The new information label reads:

"The Army's personnel management system seeks to place the right man in the right job. To accomplish this objective, the Army needs to have a complete description of your civilian background and training to determine whether your qualifications correspond to a military occupational specialty.

"We, therefore, request that you bring all official documentation attesting to your qualifications when you report to the U.S. Army Reception Station."

Then the label adds the caution: "Please realize the Army cannot match everyone to a job related to his civilian training, and that this notification does not constitute a promise that you will be placed in a military specialty commensurate with your civilian training."
