Bulldozers replace beach blankets

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON — Bulldozers and other earth-moving equipment displaced bathers and beach umbrellas Saturday as this tourist mecca worked to clean up beaches covered with a "sickening" thick goo from a massive Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

But the worst of the spill, which occurred after a tanker ran aground, was expected to be over by Saturday night, the Coast Guard said.

"It looks like by tonight it will all be ashore," Coast Guard spokesman Jim Kosch said Saturday afternoon from Port Arthur. "The anticipation is over, now all that's left is hard work."

He said authorities had received no reports of dead fish, birds or other animals on the beach.

Cost of the beach cleanup was estimated at as much as $13 million. But the first waves of oil missed environmentally sensitive marshes inside Galveston Bay.

"It's a pitiful thing," Vincent Kennison, 49, said as he maneuvered his grader to build a sand dike along Stewart Beach. "We're trying to trap the stuff. Maybe it'll stop coming in, but maybe we'll have to be back."

■ You could call this beach party "Tar Ball" — Page 4A

Others worked to scoop up oil-soaked sand for removal.

There was no estimate of the number of people involved in the cleanup, but Capt. Tim McKinna, commander of the Port Arthur Coast Guard Station, said there were "hundreds."

Other than the workers, few people were on Galveston's usually crowded beaches and fewer still dared try the surf.

"You mean you can't get this stuff off?" Cheryl Elswick, 18, of Houston, asked after stepping out of the water and seeing her blackened feet. "It's kind of sickening."

Puddles of tar-like oil littered the beach for miles. Farther down the coast, at Jamaica Beach, a sheet of smelly black slime about 30 feet wide coated the beach as far as one could see in either direction.

"It's a mess," said Ernie Dubois, a year-round beach resident. "Nobody likes to see oil, stinky stuff, on the beach.

"It's depressing. Sometimes you feel like moving," he said.

The source of the oil was the British tanker Alvenus, which ran aground Monday about 11 miles off the coast of Louisiana. The ship's hull cracked around one of its tanks, releasing some 45,000 barrels of heavy Venezuelan crude into the Gulf.

The floating oil slick was more than 85 miles long Saturday. Oil had stopped spilling from the tanker, Coast Guard spokesman Keith Spangler said, but stormy weather hampered efforts to pump oil out of its other tanks into barges.

The ship's owners have assumed responsibility for the spill, but Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has said the state is considering legal action.

The pilot of the Alvenus, in his first public comment on the accident, said Friday the ship did not run into the side of the 700-foot-wide Calcasieu Ship Channel while carrying the oil to a Lake Charles refinery, contrary to earlier reports.

"She was coming up the channel just fine, and at the 19 and 20 buoys, we saw oil spurt up from the foredeck, and she just broke," said channel pilot Malcolm Gillis. "It was that simple."

Economic news may affect campaign

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Just in time for the election, the economy is shooting off the kind of dramatic signal flares that could turn cold statistics into hot campaign issues.

In less than a week, the Reagan administration's own reports have shown unemployment leaping to 7.5 percent from 7.1 percent and the government's main gauge of future economic health dropping for the first time in nearly two years.

Democrats, hoping to add President Reagan to the unemployed list, said the reports could signal the beginning of the end for an economic recovery they have said was shaky all along.

But White House officials said there was nothing to worry about. And Wall Street investors took one look at what seemed to be the worst economic reports in years and promptly went on an exuberant stock-buying binge.

What is a voter to think?

Many Americans do know the economy has been bouncing back strongly from the 17-month recession that developed during Reagan's first year in office. Factories have been increasing production, laid-off workers have been called back, inflation has remained low.

But the Democrats insisted at their convention last month that the recovery was about to unravel, at least partly because of high interest rates caused in turn by federal budget deficits that have set records during Reagan's term.

And then, as if to underline their concerns, came last week's figures:

—The Index of Leading Economic Indicators, designed to predict what the economy will do in months to come, dropped sharply.

—A separate report showed orders to factories for manufactured goods down. Another showed new construction down. Still another showed home sales up slightly for a month but down from the level of a year earlier.

—The climax was Friday's report of the nation's unemployment rate, perhaps the most politically charged government statistic, rising sharply in July.

And still the markets went crazy with big rallies on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, showing the most confidence investors had exhibited all year.

Predictably, there was no confusion in the political camps.

Asked about the unemployment rise, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said mildly, "As in any recovery, there are occasional variations in the indicators, but it's clear that the foundation for this recovery is solid and expansion is continuing."

He had described the drop in the leading indicators as "normal settling down" after months of robust growth, good news in fact since it "should reduce the pressures on interest rates."

Collection effort gaining support

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

If Texas is to climb out of the cellar in terms of collecting delinquent child support payments, it has to make use of several steps that have been built in the last few years.

Ranked anywhere between 47th and 49th in collections and cost effectiveness among the nation, the state's child support agency did undergo renovations in September when the Attorney General's office assumed control, switching the agency from the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Since then, Attorney General Jim Mattox has boasted of a 41 percent increase in collections, with statewide collections from August 1979 through June 1984 totaling $20.5 million. Last fiscal year, collections were around $18 million with projections for fiscal year 1984, which ends Aug. 31, expected to reach $25 million.

Still, that is estimated to be less than 25 percent of the payments owed.

In Region 2, which includes Midland County and 36 others, the increase hasn't even been that dramatic. But it has improved.

"It's been a little more flexible within the attorney general's office," said Midlander Mark Hoover, assistant attorney general and regional director of Region 2. "The DHR is a large social service agency and not really geared for the kind of work we're doing.

"This has opened the door for us to be far more aggressive in terms of some of the things we do."

According to Mattox, who also is responsible for designating August as Project Pay-up Month, being delinquent in child support payments is "just as flagrant a form of child abuse as if you beat them, abuse them or starve them to death," Hoover said. And those who owe child support better make their payments or expect to be seen in court or visited in jail.

Hoover and Nancy Oseasohn, who joined the DHR in 1981, were among 29 child support enforcement division attorneys to be formally sworn in as assistant attorney generals in June. Besides inheriting more counties, they've been given more legal responsibility.

"We can made more final decisions here in terms of case dispositions and how we're going to deal with a case," Hoover said. "In the DHR, we had layer after layer of administrative people we had to go through to get approval to do things."

County, too, considering its budget

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What's mostly tedium to the Midland County Commissioners' Court could end up costing the taxpayers.

The drudgery is settling on a tax rate and a budget. The taxpayers' dread is paying the bills.

And like other governing bodies at this time of the year, the commissioners are playing like modern-day court magicians by trying to satisfy budgetary requests of department heads while hoping not to evoke the taxpayers' wrath.

For 1985, the commissioners are projecting a budget in excess of $12 million. In addition, they are considering a tax rate increase from zero to 8 percent over the effective tax rate of 15.40 cents per $100 valuation.

The effective tax rate is that rate necessary to bring in revenue comparable to the previous year's revenue and to keep the governmental entity solvent. The current tax rate is 18.23 cents per $100 valuation; however, the 1984 effective rate is lower due to increased countywide valuations. Last year's values upon which taxes are based was $4.048 billion; this year's values are pegged at $5.067 billion.

Were the effective rate adopted, county taxes on a $100,000 house would be $154. But were the tax rate set 8 percent above that, taxes on a $100,000 house would be $166.30. The increase would be $12.30 in 1985.

Taxes on a $50,000 would be half that of a $100,000 house, and taxes on a $25,000 house would be a fourth of that.

The commissioners are to set the tax rate and budget in their Monday, Aug. 13, meeting in the Midland County courthouse.

About half of county's revenue goes toward payrolling the county's 300 employees.

Other than ordinary expenses, the commissioners are budgeting for proposed projects, services and additional expenses such as:

—Pay hike. Commissioners are considering granting county employees a 5 percent pay raise in 1985.

—The jail. Commissioners are to arrange for interim financing while the proposed jail gets under construction late this year or early in 1985. Depending on which design options the commissioners select, construction costs could range from $5.5 million to close to $8 million. Sheriff Dallas Smith has proposed that a 225-bed jail be built but that the facility have room to expand to 300 beds. Currently, the jail on the fifth floor of the courthouse can hold 85 prisoners before it is deemed overcrowded and "illegal."

—Youth Home. The county is obligated to provide separate jail facilities for juveniles. Commissioners are considering building jail-like facilities at Culver Youth Home or in conjunction with the proposed jail near the Midland County Exhibit Building just east of Midland. The federal Justice and Delinquent Prevention Act is mandating that by December 1985 juveniles not be lodged in jails with adults.

Ranger says rogue lion killed by hunting party

DALLAS (AP) — A park ranger says lab tests indicate a mountain lion killed by a hunting party was the same animal that attacked an 8-year-old Garland boy at Big Bend National Park.

Ranger Bob Andrew said tests completed Saturday at a Department of Public Safety laboratory in Midland showed human hair in the lion's intestinal tract.

"This doubles our suspicions" that the animal attacked and mauled David Vaught and bit the boy's stepfather Thursday evening, Andrew said.

Tests to determine whether the animal was rabid were expected to be completed later in the weekend, he said.

The boy was in fair conditioon at Parkland Hospital after being transferred from an Alpine hospital. He underwent surgery Friday evening.

More than a dozen park rangers and professional trackers using dogs and aircraft searched a 10-mile-square area for the animal before capturing and killing it Friday evening.

Vaught received severe cuts, scratches and puncture wounds to the head, face, back leg and arm when he pushed his younger brother from the cougar's path.

The boy's stepfather, Cris Brown, also was bitten on the leg when he pulled the lion away from the boy. The two were attacked about 6 p.m. Thursday while they, the boy's mother, brother and cousin were walking along a trail behind the Chisos Mountain Lodge in the basin of the park.

"It was horrifying to see," Brown said. "The cougar leaped over him but hung on to him with David's head in his mouth."

Vaught's mother, Kimetha Brown, said the family was "walking along this trail when suddenly there appeared a cougar right in the middle of the path. He tried to attack my 4-year old son, but David pushed him out of the way and the cougar attacked him.

"My husband pulled the cougar off David. He and the cougar rolled into the bushes along the trail," she said. "My husband was bitten in the fight, but he's OK."

Mrs. Brown said doctors told her the boy would need five or six operations.

"Right now he's sore and he's scared," she said. "He just keeps reliving the whole thing."

It was the first known injury resulting from a lion attack since Big Bend National Park opened in 1941, said Bob Huggins, a National Park Service officer.

A study conducted in 1974 by the park service tracked between 18 to 20 mountain lions residing in the park. Huggins said the park service is in process of checking the population again.

Four unhappy education board members play truant

AUSTIN (AP) — Five unhappy members of the State Board of Education staged a rebellion Saturday saying the old elected board was trying to shape public school policy that should be left to a new appointive board.

Four members, who signed a letter of protest, walked out on the Saturday session called to implement the education reform bill passed by the recent Legislature.

Linda Howell of Missouri City signed the letter but attended the meeting saying she did not want her protest taken as a "personal matter," instead of a difference on issues.

Those leaving the meeting were Dr. H. Reginald McDaniel, of Dallas; Mike Fernandez Jr., of San Antonio; Marge West, of Amarillo; and Mary Helen Berlanga, of Corpus Christi.

"At this time the greatest contribution we can make to Texas education is to leave the board chambers in an effort to destroy the quorum," said the letter signed by the five.

The board was able to continue its business with 17 of the 27 members elected from each congressional district.

"It's some of the same old bunch that has been trying to discredit me for several months," Board Chairman Joe Kelly Butler, of Houston, said after the meeting. "All we are trying to do is make interpretations so school districts can make their budgets by Aug. 20 as required by law."

Mrs. Berlanga and McDaniel blamed most of the controversy on the veteran school board chairman.

"This lame-duck board is trying to muddy the water and stop us from doing many things and make it difficult for the new board to operate. They forget that the number one issue is the children of Texas," McDaniel said.

Mrs. Berlanga called the actions of Butler and some board members "malicious," while McDaniel said they were "vindictive."

McDaniel said, "King Joe doesn't like to have his colonies taken away from him."

The protest letter signed by the five said the board had made recent "non-emergency policy decisions" on compensatory, bilingual, kindergarten and vocational education that were contrary to the intent of the Legislature.

"We believe decisions are being made and contemplated that should be left to the appointed State Board of Education that will bear the responsibility for Texas education in the future," the five dissidents said.

No mention was made of the walkout and letter until the end of the session when Butler said he hoped "the majority of us will accept our responsibility and not disrupt the education process and we will continue to do that until replaced."

Board member Will Davis, of Austin, was successful by a 14-3 vote in getting the board to reconsider a decision made in July concerning supplemental funds voted for bilingual education.

HOW MUCH WILL MORTGAGE COMPANY LEND?

If your family income is 30,000 per year, how much of a mortgage do you think a lender would lend you? If you go by the rule-of-thumb guidelines (25%-28% of gross income), you would normally expect to pay up to a limit of $625 per month on your mortgage. But this is a very rough rule of thumb. You may qualify for more or less depending on the individual variables such as:

A buyer who can make a larger than normal down payment may qualify for a lower rate or broader application of the rule of thumb. A buyer willing to accept a Graduated Payment Mortgage may find the guidelines more liberal. A buyer accepting a Rapid Repayment Mortgage or a Growing Equity Mortgage involving shorter loan terms may find lenders more willing to compromise on present income.

Also, there is more than your income to consider. What is your past credit history? What amount of debt do you now owe? What is the appraised value of the property? The mortgage decision will be based on the COMBINATION.

Moroccan ordered to stand trial

DALLAS (AP) — A Moroccan national accused of killing six people in a barrage of gunfire at a north Dallas restaurant has been ordered to stand trial Oct. 1.

Abdelkrim Belechheb, who is charged with six counts of murder and one count of attempted murder, had a police record in Belgium that included a knife attack on two men at a Brussels cafe, according to Belgian police and court records.

Belechheb, 39, had lived in Belgium before moving to the United States in 1981. He is accused of killing four women and two men at Ianni's Restaurant and Club on June 29.

Another person was wounded in the attack, which witnesses said was triggered when a woman refused to dance with a man, according to police.

Following a hearing Friday, State District Judge Gerry Meier ordered Belechheb to stand trial Oct. 1.

Records of Interpol, the international police agency, and Belgian court records show that Belechheb's convictions date to Dec. 16, 1967, when he was found guilty in the cafe knife fight and six other attacks between August 1965 and July 1967.

Belechheb was sentenced to one year in jail, but due to the fact that he had no prior record, the judges suspended the sentence and placed him on probation for five years, records show.

Before he left Belguim, Belechheb was convicted of driving a car through the window of a neighborhood bar, assaulting a former employer, assaulting his former wife and injuring his daughter, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Police in Brussels were still looking for Belechheb to serve a sentence of two years and 16 days when they learned he was jailed in Dallas in connection with the restaurant attack, the News reported Saturday.

Belechheb is being represented by the Dallas public defender's office despite the resignation from that office a week ago of his attorney, Ted Calisi.

Chief Public Defender Ralph Taite said Friday after Ms. Meier's announcement of the trial date that he will represent Belechheb "unless another attorney is assigned at some later date."

Abilene firm lays off workers

ABILENE (AP) — Officials of C.G. Conn Ltd. have confirmed that an undisclosed number of employees at its Abilene plant have been laid off, but said at least some of them are expected to be rehired within the next 45 days, the Abilene Reporter-News said.

The layoff on Friday was necessary to bring the musical instrument manufacturer's inventory back into balance, the newspaper was told by Charles Stone, vice president for operations in the company's home offices in Elkhart, Ind.

He said he was uncertain of the number of people being laid off in Abilene, but said he believed a report of 36 "is too high."

The figure came from an employee who said the names of 36 people were posted on the bulletin board Wednesday.

However, it was also reported that the list included some whose jobs were downgraded.

The National Weather Service forecasts showers today for parts of Arizona, New Mexico, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Slight chance for rain in Basin area continues

From Staff and Wire Reports

Although only .01 of an inch of rain was recorded between Friday and Saturday nights, there is a slight chance of an increase in the .12 of an inch recorded for August and the 7.10 inches recorded this year.

A less than 20 percent chance for isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms will linger through Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Temperatures today and Monday should climb into the lower 90s, dropping into the upper 60s tonight.

Winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph today.

Friday's high of 94 was 10 degrees cooler than 1944's blistering record high of 104. The overnight low of 69 missed the record low of 61, set in 1978, by eight degrees.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms sprinkled much of the state Saturday, but the rain missed the central sections of the state and the Big Bend area.

Afternoon temperatures were dropped in areas that received rain as clouds and showers held readings mostly in the 80s over the Coastal Plains and East Texas.

A weak lower pressure system stretching along the Coastal Plains into Northeast Texas made rain a little more prevalent in those areas.

The rain was welcomed in most areas, but was causing some interruptions to the cotton harvest in the southern third of the state.

Southeast breezes were the rule with speeds generally 10 to 15 miles an hour.

Temperatures in other parts of the state were in the 90s, except for the rain-drenched areas.

NATION

Thunderstorms spattered a broad band from the Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes on Saturday, and one strong storm spawned a tornado in Indiana, where 60 people escaped without injury when a factory roof and wall collapsed during a downpour.

Showers and thunderstorms affected the Texas Gulf Coast and extended over the remainder of the Gulf Coast, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley and the Great Lakes.

A tornado touched down in a field northwest of Indianapolis during the morning, the National Weather Service said.

The Indiana storms also brought heavy rain. The town of Sheridan, northeast of Indianapolis, got 2½ inches of rain during a 3-hour period that caused some lowland flooding.

Gramm speaks to medical groups

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The fight to cut increases in medical care costs is clear, according to U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm: Present programs must succeed or American medicine will be forced to fall back on less acceptable programs implemented by past Democratic administrations.

Speaking at a joint meeting of the Midland and Ector County medical societies, the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by John Tower elaborated on the differences in his philosophies and those of his Democratic opponent, Lloyd Doggett.

He cited, as one example, Doggett's public contempt concerning the invasion of Grenada, a move, according to Gramm, that saved American students attending medical school on the island.

Gramm said he was aware of the problems with federal programs designed to curtail Medicare medical care costs, but claimed the only alternative is to fall back on unsuccessful programs, such as former President Jimmy Carter's cost containment provision.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, implemented by the Reagan administration, is responsible for changes in Medicare reimbursements to hospitals. Before the program began, hospitals were reimbursed for costs of treating Medicare patients on a retrospective program.

The new system reimburses hospitals on the basis of diagnostic-related groups (DRGs), which assign a rate to similiar types of procedures before the patient is discharged.

Although there are problems with the rates of reimbursements, especially for hospitals in rural areas, the College Station resident said the program is necessary because in the past the thought was "medical costs are rising, let's let the government pay the bill."

During the 1960s, two "bad ideas," concerning national health insurance and cutting hospital costs, which were rising more rapidly than general medical costs, were introduced. Thankfully, Gramm said, they have been eliminated.

Because he doesn't see any curtailment in Medicare expenses with the increasing numbers of those eligible for the program, the present system must succeed, he said.

"The alternative of going back to the old system of reimbursing the hospital is not feasible," Gramm said, adding that program only awarded poorly performed jobs. "It's very imperative that we make DRGs work."

Doctors, hospitals and medical service providers must maintain the high quality of medical care while striving for cost efficiency. Determining who is responsible for the keeping down the costs of good medical care — the consumer or the provider — is the challenge facing the health care industry, he said.

SUPPORT

Presently carrying about 5,000 cases, not including the 10,000 cases in El Paso, Region 2 has Hoover and Ms. Oseasohn, two child support investigators and four secretaries. Although it is the largest territory, it also has the lightest caseload in the state. In March, the 23-county Region 2 was expanded to include 14 other counties surrounding San Angelo.

Ms. Oseasohn spends much of her time on the road. On Monday, she had morning cases in court in Monahans and Pecos that afternoon. But the geography of the region and the light caseload doesn't add up to cost efficiency.

"I only had three cases in Andrews that took all morning but if I had waited until there were a dozen (scheduled for court), the kids would be too old (to be eligible)," Ms. Oseasohn said.

"You've got to take the ball and run with it when you can," Hoover agreed.

In June 1980, Region 2, excluding El Paso, had 2,485 active cases. In June 1984, there were 5,324. About $58,340 in child support payments was owed in June 1980 and $12,390, or 21.2 percent, was collected. Only 137 of the almost 550 people owing child support made any type of payment.

In June 1984, $114,540 was owed in child support but only $39,670, or 34.6 percent, was paid. Of the 941 people with child support obligations, 179 made payments.

The large caseload in El Paso is handled through a contract with the El Paso County Attorney's office. In June 1980, there were 10,253 active cases with $115,717 in obligations. About $19,430 was collected with 241 of the 1,267 people owing payments making them. In June 1984, the caseload increased to 10,275, obligations totaled $149,867 and $55,903, or 37.3 percent, was collected. About 300 people of the 1,340 owing child support payments made them.

Hoover attributes El Paso's large caseload to the dense population and its location on the border. The small percentage of payments collected from those owed is due in some part to Texas being a haven for many owing child support and looking for employment.

"Texas' rate has not been as large and dramatic for a couple of reasons," Hoover, a 10-year veteran of the child support enforcment agency, said. "Texas was one of the last states hit by the recession with the consequence being we're one of the last areas coming out of it. We've had a lot of men who've been unemployed for some time that are just now beginning to find jobs again."

A large portion of the cases the Texas child support enforcement agency works is for other states. Since 1969, when the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement Support Act (URESA) was implemented, the federal government mandated that states help each other track down parents delinquent in child support payments.

Because many non-custodial parents come to Texas for economic purposes, there is an unusually large number of cases worked and payments collected that are not seen in Texas statistics. A bill pending in the House-Senate Conference Committee would require states to give credit to those responsible for collecting delinquent payments.

"It's gotten to the point where half of the cases we're working are URESA," Ms. Oseasohn said. "Two of the three cases I had this morning were."

That bill also would allow another law to be applied to all responsible for delinquent payments. The law, in effect for welfare cases since 1981, has allowed child support agencies to certify cases to the Internal Revenue Service. If a non-paying parent requests a refund when filing for taxes, the IRS can intercept the checks and send them to the state. The procedure is only available to those who go through the state's child enforcement agency.

Other steps to increase collections include:

— Garnishment of wages from paychecks by employers. Effective this year, the law has been slowly implemented. According to Hoover, because many men are just now finding jobs, garnishment of wages should begin to be an effective tool. The law does not, however, help in collecting delinquent payments from those who are self-employed.

— State debt set-off program. In Texas, the comptroller is not authorized to pay money to any, for example, state employee who is owed retirement benefits if they owe a debt. Recently, the law has been expanded to include those owing child support and a hold is put on the check from the comptroller. "It's had a small impact compared to the IRS interception but it's one more way of closing the loopholes of getting out of child support payments," Hoover said.

— Collecting unemployment benefits. The state child support enforcement agency can now obtain records from the Texas Employment Commission on who is receiving unemployment. If a person owing child support is receiving unemployment compensation, the amount can be taken out of the checks. "They can't keep giving the excuse they have for years about not having a job," Hoover said.

— Jail. Although used too infrequently according to some, those not making court-ordered child support payments can be jailed for contempt of court. Studies show that those who are sentenced to jail "cough up the money" fast and are less inclined to be delinquent on payments in the future, Ms. Oseasohn said. Unfortunately, many judges are still reluctant to use this method.

"We have the remedies and are slowly beginning to build them," Hoover said. But it's going to take the cooperation and education of judges, law enforcement officials and the public to make them work.

"If the judges hesitate about using these remedies, we're going to make the decisions for them and let the people know," Hoover said.

"The child support problem has become a national issue. Some say it's a national problem, but I call it a national disgrace."

A&M students serve as 'ground crew'

Associated Press

PORT ARTHUR — The beach party crew from Texas A&M weren't looking for surfer girls, but for more than a million gallons of gooey oil on its way to the Texas coast. And being the first to spot the tarry balls turned a dull patrol into a giddy blast.

Seniors Tommy Wright and Evan Cook and staff member Steven Beekman took to the beaches Friday morning, charged with recording what types of beaches line the upper Texas coast.

The information they gathered on land would be combined with that of the air and sea divisions of Texas A&M's Oil Spill Technical Assistance Program.

Texas A&M's boat, Quest, left Port Arthur early Friday and floated through the middle of the slick from south of Port Arthur to south of Galveston Bay.

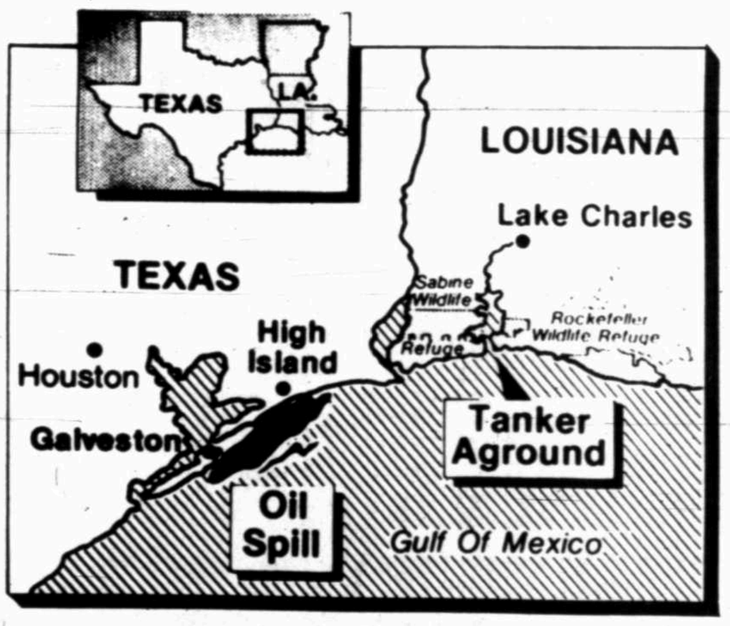

Project coordinator Dr. Roy Hann, Jr., flew over the slick to update the position.

The crew came to the Gulf Coast to offer help to those combating the oil spill from the British tanker Alvenus.

The Alvenus ran aground 10 miles south of Cameron, Louisiana while trying to negotiate the Calcasieu Ship Channel. The Louisiana pilot guiding the Alvenus says the ship was in the channel when its hull suddenly buckled.

The buckle spilled more than a million gallons of crude oil into the Gulf.

Strike force teams involved with the cleanup put the data gathered by the Texas A&M group to immediate use. Later, the results would be brought to the Texas A&M classroom to train civil and environmental engineers.

AP Laserphoto Map

The members of "Beach Party Two" were assigned to collect data for cleanup operations.

"The study is done so crews will know what kind of beach they need to clean up," Cook, 21, said.

A sand beach would be cleaned differently than a rocky beach, he said. Smooth areas could be cleaned with graders and front-end loaders. Rocks would have to be cleaned by hand.

Beach Party Two went out Friday with only one purpose — survey the beach and report to the program's Galveston office. The find of oil at High Island hours before its expected landfall lent excitement to what was quickly developing into a dull, draining trip.

Fatigue set in after the three had traveled just 20 miles down what used to be Highway 87. Hurricane Allen in 1980 and Alicia in 1983 had left it a washboard of a road.

The coolness of the morning was gone. And with the Gulf on one side and soggy marshes on the other, the humid air was thick with mosquitoes.

They jettisoned jeans in favor of gym shorts before the trip began. Shirts were gone by the time they passed High Island.

Their jobs seemed monotonous. At each stop, Cook, 21, a civil engineering senior from Little Rock, Arkansas, would take notes of the vegetation cover, sand structure and reference points.

Wright, 22, a wildlife and fisheries science major from Vernon, Texas, would measure the distance from the rolling surf to the first dune to go in Cook's log.

A typical entry: "Point 5, 10:17. Fine sand. Upper beach also has some shell. Flotsam (debris) at midbeach. No oil. 64 ft. front."

Cook and Wright are two student volunteers who receive neither money nor college credit for their time. Both said they were helping with the oil spill team because they were concerned with environmental issues.

Beekman, 27, the program's audiovisual coordinator, would photograph the beach, the landmarks and each entry Cook made in the log.

After a half-dozen stops the three were looking for a change. At Point 7, they got it.

Cook and Wright charged to the beach to make their observations while Beekman stayed at the A&M van to put on his jeans.

From across the grassy dunes, the cry went up — "Oil! Oil!"

It was if they had just hit a gusher althought actually there wasn't much.

After Beekman took photographs of Cook and Wright with their find, the three sped to a phone to report to their Port Arthur base.

After they found out they had been the first to spot the oil ashore, the three no longer viewed their work as routine.

BUDGET

—Courtroom. The commissioners are budgeting for a second county court-at-law judge at a $50,000-a-year salary. But the office would not be filled until mid-to late 1985. The second floor Commissioners' Courtroom would be remodeled to serve as a trial-court courtroom. The county's sole court-at-law judge now is Willie DuBose. Bill Ahders is county judge, the county's chief administrator and presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court.

—Probation Office. Commissioners are searching for more space for an expanding Adult Probation Office. The office, headed by E.H. "Kirk" Kirksey, is in the Midland County Annex just north of the downtown courthouse.

As the judiciary expands, the commissioners are contemplating a fourth state district court. Once the new jail is built, the fifth-floor jail would be renovated and converted to courtroom space and offices for the judiciary. Currently, three state district courts serve Midland. Judges are Pat Baskin, presiding judge of the 142nd State District Court; Vann Culp, presiding judge of the 238th State District Court, and Barbara Culver, presiding judge of the 318 State District Court.

During budget studies, the commissioners have whittled on proposed departmental budgets, observed County Auditor Floyd Jarnigan.

The 1985 budget will be "a little bit" over $12 million unless the commissioners can cut some money figures down substantially.

"But I don't know how," said Jarnigan. "We've got rid of some of the fat in it (the budget). But those we're cutting back on wouldn't call it fat."

U.S. public schools getting better marks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are giving public schools their highest marks in nearly a decade, with 42 percent awarding grades of "A" or "B," according to a Gallup poll released Saturday.

That is a sharp jump from a year ago, when only 31 percent of those questioned gave public schools such high marks; and it is the best showing since 1976. In the 16-year history of the poll, fewer people than ever — 4 percent — gave the schools an "F" or failing grade.

"Americans are more favorably disposed toward the public schools today that at any time in the last decade," the Gallup organization said in its summary of the poll conducted for Phi Delta Kappa, an educators' fraternity.

Ten percent gave the schools an "A," 32 percent "B," 35 percent "C," 11 percent "D" and 4 percent "F." Eight percent had no opinion. A year ago, only 6 percent gave the schools an "A" and 25 percent a "B," while 7 percent awarded them an "F."

The public also gives higher marks to teachers and principals, with about half getting an "A" or "B" today compared with less than 40 percent three years ago.

The sharp spurt in public confidence comes at the end of a year in which Reagan administration advisers and blue-ribbon panels criticized the schools for low academic standards, lack of discipline, and inadequate teachers.

By a margin of 42 percent to 34 percent, those surveyed said Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale is more likely than President Reagan to improve the quality of public education.

And two-thirds said they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who wants to increase federal spending for education.

Democrats, Republicans gear up to wage all-out battle over Texas

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — By now, there should be no doubt — if there ever was any — that both the Democrats and Republicans want to put Texas into their win column this November. And both parties are arguing that they have a chance at doing that.

President Ronald Reagan carried Texas handily in 1980, with 2,510,705 votes as compared to 1,881,147 for Jimmy Carter.

Since it entered the Union, Texas has taken part in 32 presidential elections (missing the 1864 election due to the War Between the States, and the 1868 vote due to Reconstruction).

In 19 of those elections, Texas has supported the winner. And in elections in the last 50 years, Texas has gone with the winner in all but the 1968 election, when Hubert Humphrey won a narrow victory in the state, while losing to Richard Nixon.

The importance being put on Texas by the GOP seems apparent from the visit to Austin by Reagan and Vice President George Bush to launch their fall campaign.

Polls taken up to this summer indicated Reagan retains strong support in Texas. That support is likely to remain strong.

What remains to be seen is what support the Democrats will be able to secure for the Walter Mondale-Geraldine Ferraro ticket.

Gov. Mark White, returning from the Democratic National Convention, says Democrats are "upbeat and united" for the November election.

What the party must do now, White says, is to talk with farmers and ranchers, particularly those in West Texas, that the Republican Party has "turned its back on."

And, White says, Democrats need to talk with small-town businessmen — commenting that those are folks the Democrats haven't courted sufficiently in recent years.

State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle, Sherman, reports telephones at Democratic Party headquarters have been "ringing off the wall" since the convention, with considerable excitement over the selection of Ferraro for the vice presidential spot.

Officially, the Republican viewpoint is that the selection of Ferraro won't help, and may hurt, the Democrats in Texas.

State GOP Chairman George Strake takes the position that after the "initial excitement," Texans will come to the conclusion that the Democrats have "nominated two Northern liberals...instead of one."

White says he thinks Ferraro's record as a former prosecutor, and her having raised a family, will appeal to Texans. And White and other Democratic officials are expecting that a large turnout of minority voters will work to the benefit of the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

While there was early speculation that the selection of Ferraro meant that the Democrats were, in effect, writing off Texas and its 29 electoral votes, Mondale supporters insist that's far from the case.

Mondale and Ferraro also brought their campaign to Austin, with a Captiol rally, and campaign officials are insisting that far from writing off Texas, they expect Texas to be a key factor in defeating Reagan.

The candidates also have put in appearances at other Texas cities — and it seems a safe bet that before Nov. 6, the Republicans and Democrats will have visited most areas of Texas.

Besides the presidential race itself, there is the U.S. Senate race featuring Sen. Lloyd Dogget, D-Austin, and U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, and speculation has been increasing on how the two races will interact.

Conventional wisdom is that national races normally don't have a great deal of impact on statewide races in Texas, although there is likely to be some linkage to national issues in Senate campaigns.

Gramm and Doggett have made it clear they're looking at waging wide-open campaigns, and planning to spend a lot of money to do so.

Gramm, before the Democratic convention, was pointing to polls indicating he had a clear lead over Doggett.

Doggett will have to depend, to a great extent, on many of the same elements that the Democratic presidential ticket is hoping on — and Doggett also is hoping to win over some of the voters who went earlier for his primary opponents, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger of New Braunfels and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock.

There's still a long way to go before the elections — and conditions in November may be greatly different from those in August.

In all likelihood, there will be some shifts and turns between now and November, but it appears that the battle for Texas will be continuing throughout the fall — and up to the time the polls close Nov. 6.

National Jewish leader protests 'effort to Christianize America'

DALLAS (AP) — A national Jewish leader's protest to the White House has ended plans to include a New Testament Bible in the 5,000 welcome kits to be given delegates and alternates to the Republican National Convention.

Hyman Bookbinder, a spokesman for the American Jewish Committee in Washington, said Friday that he was so troubled at the plans to include the Bible that he asked an assistant to President Reagan to investigate.

"All this is part of a general effort to formally Christianize America, and that's not what our Founding Fathers wanted this country to be," Bookbinder said. "I expect they (Republicans) will realize the possible political consequences."

Republican Host Committee Chairman Fred Meyer said late Friday that the Bibles would not be in the delegate welcome kits, which are now being put together for free distribution to delegates coming to the convention Aug. 20-23.

The kits contain more than 40 items, ranging from a can of chili to red-white-and-blue pompons.

"I was not aware of it (until Friday)," Meyer said. "We are an ecumenical operation."

Meyer said the people in charge of finding gifts for the packets "just hadn't checked with the boss yet...the head of the Republican Host Committee."

However, in a previous interview before it was announced the delegates wouldn't be receiving the Bibles, Meyer said he didn't understand the criticism of Jewish leaders, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

"I'm a little surprised at that (of the criticism)," Meyer said. "We're including (in the delegate packets) the information we sent out on our calendar of events about the 'Jewish Life in America' exhibit at the Dallas Public Library."

Dorothy Herkimer, the Host Committee member in charge of the delegate packets, said Friday that the Bible was to be in the canvas tote bag delivered to delegates and alternates.

Liberty One — a non-denominational Christian group in Dallas — offered to donate the New Testament Bibles, Mrs. Herkimer said.

"That's what we need more of," she said of the Bibles.

But Bookbinder said the American Jewish Committee opposes the mixing of religion and politics. He said the Reagan administration's record on that issue has not been good, especially in the areas of school prayer and the policy of "equal access," in which religious organizations can meet on public campuses.

Labor funds Doggett; Business funds Gramm

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Senate candidates Lloyd Doggett and Phil Gramm are splitting campaign money from political action committees down a narrow labor-business line.

Labor union political action committees, or PACs, contributed more than two-thirds of the PAC money received so far this year by Democrat Doggett, a state senator from Austin.

Corporate and industry-sponsored PACs made up just about the same amount of the 1984 PAC contributions received by Republican Gramm, a congressman from College Station.

Conversely, Doggett reported no significant corporate donations, and Gramm listed only one contribution from a labor union.

PACs accounted for about 12 percent of Gramm's contributions and about 13 percent of Doggett's.

Doggett is an attorney and 11-year veteran of the state Senate, representing a moderate-to-liberal district that includes the University of Texas.

Gramm, a former economics professor at Texas A&M University, first was elected to the U.S. House in 1978 as a Democrat. He switched parties last year, resigned his seat and won re-election as a Republican after the Democratic leadership bumped him from the House Budget Committee for backing President Reagan's economic programs.

Gramm easily won the Republican primary. Doggett defeated Lubbock Congressman Kent Hance in a runoff. They are seeking the seat being vacated by Republican John Tower, who is retiring.

According to campaign finance reports filed with the Federal Election Commission, Gramm was the leading money-raiser as of June 30, the end of the last reporting period, with $3.3 million, of which about $395,000 came from PACs.

Doggett had raised $2.3 million, with about $300,000 coming from PACs.

According to itemized lists of 1984 PAC contributors, about $160,000 of the $267,000 in PAC money Doggett has received came from labor union PACs.

Corporate or industry PACs gave about $160,000 to Gramm, who has collected $235,000 from PACs so far in 1984.

PACs sometimes split donations between opposing candidates in the same race, but the only apparent shared contributor for Doggett and Gramm was the Freedom Fund, sponsored by the Houston law firm Fulbright and Jaworski, which gave each candidate $2,000.

Gramm's lone labor union donation was $2,500 from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which did not contribute to Doggett.

Labor groups whose PACs did contribute to Doggett included: Clothing and Textile Workers; AFL-CIO; State, County and Municipal Employees; Transit Workers; Postal Workers; Bricklayers; Railway Carmen; Letter Carriers; Communications Workers; Engineers; Electrical Workers; Longshoremen; Ladies Garment Workers; Ironworkers; Machinists; Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers; Seafarers; Sheetmetal Workers; Food and Commercial Workers; Steelworkers; Air Line Pilots; Painters; Masters, Mates and Pilots; Teachers; and Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

Among Gramm's contributors were PACs sponsored by Coca Cola; Pillsbury; B.F. Goodrich; Maytag; General Mills; Alcoa; General Motors; Burlington Industries; Litton; PepsiCo.; Southland Corp.; Coors; Holiday Inn; Rockwell International; Lockheed; Allis-Chalmers; American Bank; RepublicBank Corp.; Texas Commerce Bancshares; Gulf States Utilities; Central Power and Light; Texas Utilities Co.; Houston Lighting and Power; Southwestern Bell; American Telephone; United Energy Resources Inc.; American Petrofina; Hunt Oil Co.; Tenneco; Amoco; Dow Chemical; Valero Energy Corp.; Prudential Insurance Co.; Manufacturers Hanover; Mutual of Omaha; American Airlines; Eastern Airlines; and Texas Air Corp.

First Financial Corp. of Waco was Gramm's biggest contributor, giving $10,000, the maximum Gramm could receive from a PAC for the primary and general election.

Doggett was eligible for up to $15,000 per PAC because he also had a run-off campaign.

Women across America are moving into the business world by learning income tax preparation skills.

Many women are finding that learning a skill like income tax preparation can open new doors for them and help save money at tax time.

H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 6, with morning and evening classes available. Enrollment is open to every one. Courses are ideal for those wanting to develop a new, practical skill or for those interested in increasing their tax knowledge.

Classes are held over a 14 week period. An experienced Block instructor will guide students through all phases of income tax preparation. Classwork will include lectures, practice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns. New tax laws will be explained.

Skills learned in the H&R Block Income Tax Course could be the key to entrance into the business world and a way to earn extra money or qualify for a possible job interview with H&R Block. Block, however, is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee covers all textbooks, supplies and tax forms required for the class. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon completion of the course.

Registration forms, brochure, or more information on the Income Tax Course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office at 114 Andrews Hwy., telephone 684-6741 or Call Collect, Odessa 332-7801.

Helicopter fleet offers 'Life Flight' to trauma victims

HOUSTON (AP) — One minute, the young boy is happily riding his bike. The next, he lies on the street, his body broken. Death is near.

A man starts cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and quickly is covered with the young boy's blood. There seems little hope the boy, struck by a car, will live.

Then, overhead, the thump-thump-thump of helicopter rotors fills the air and the man looks up to see the blue-on-white words "Life Flight" on the chopper's side.

"I'll never forget the helpless look on that man's face and then the expression of relief when we arrived," says Life Flight nurse Sandy Sigman. "That's one that I remember. You learn to forget the bad ones."

Mrs. Sigman and a Life Flight doctor restored the injured boy's heartbeat and he was flown to Hermann Hospital for emergency surgery. Weeks later, he went home.

The boy was one of an estimated 4,000 patients who owe their lives to Life Flight, a fleet of helicopter ambulances that put the care of a major trauma hospital within 20 minutes of any point in the Houston metropolitan area.

Life Flight was considered a daring, pioneer concept when it started on Aug. 1, 1976, but eight years and almost 20,000 patients later the airborne ambulance has become a routine, daily miracle for the 1.5 million people in this area. The Houston medical helicopter system now is the largest and busiest in the world, creating a model that is studied and copied.

Medical authorities estimate about 20 percent of Life Flight's patients would have died if they had not enjoyed the benefit of fast helicopter service to the hospital. Many others would have suffered loss of limb or of brain function if they had been required to take a long ambulance ride.

Evelyn Reese believes her husband lives and she walks because of Life Flight.

She and her husband were in a head-on collision near Huntsville, 69 miles north of Houston. Mrs. Reese suffered two broken ankles and a leg crushed above the knee. Her husband, who had had a heart attack only a month before the accident, experienced a crushed pelvis and a severe concussion. He was near death when two Life Flight he[li]copters landed.

"I was so thrilled when the[y] brought in those two Life Flight he[li]copters," recalls Mrs. Reese. "The[se] doctors and nurses were fantastic. They knew exactly what to do."

Twenty minutes later, both the husband and wife were in surgery at Hermann Hospital. Doctors fought and won a battle to save Mrs. Reese's right foot. For her 74-year-old husband, it was a struggle for life itself.

Mondale first on ticket; Ferraro first in hearts

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — "Viva Walter," the man said as Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale walked onto the podium at a Texas campaign rally in the baking noonday sun, and the crowd cheered.

"Viva Ferraro," the man said as running mate Geraldine Ferraro followed, and the crowd cheered much louder.

So it was last week as the Democratic team made its swing through the South: Mondale No. 1 on the ticket, Ms. Ferraro evidently No. 1 in the hearts and minds of the large, enthusiastic crowds that greeted them.

But if Mondale felt pushed off center stage by his running mate, the first woman on the national ticket of a major party, he didn't show it. And his aides said he was delighted with the reception she received.

"Mondale is a very secure person," said press secretary Maxine Isaacs. "He's not worried that she's going to overshadow him. He's glad people are excited by the choice."

On the stump, Ferraro comes across as less polished, but more given to spontaneity.

But it was Mondale who drew one of the largest ovations of the week at the San Antonio rally when he reacted to the wind blowing the pages of his speech text around.

He finally gave up trying to control the papers, handed them to someone behind him on the podium, and said, "I don't need notes to speak."

Ms. Isaacs described last week's 3,300-mile campaign swing through New York, Cleveland, Mississippi and Texas as a "shakedown" outing.

But aside from the public speeches and rallies, there was the substantive political business of fence-mending after the long fight for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In Ohio, Mississippi and Texas, Mondale and Ms. Ferraro met privately with backers of Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson to seek a united effort for the fall campaign.

One aide called the session in the Mississippi governor's mansion "historic," both for Ms. Ferraro's presence, and for the attendance of representatives of all factions of a state Democratic party that has been divided since the civil rights struggle two decades ago.

In Austin, Rep. Martin Frost was on the podium as Mondale and Ms. Ferraro spoke. He was an early supporter of Hart, now publicly signalling his support of the ticket for the fall campaign.

Petis Norman, a key Jackson supporter, sat nearby and afterwards they met with other Texas party leaders and Mondale and Ms. Ferraro inside the statehouse.

• • •

The program rarely changed as Mondale and Ms. Ferraro worked their way through three days of political speeches.

She dealt only briefly with issues, preferring instead to declare her happiness at being in the South, mention her own background as a "tough" prosecutor and say a few words about "values" and the need to elect Mondale president.

It fell to Mondale, a more polished stump speaker, to deliver the substantive speech, attacking President Reagan on federal budget deficits and for his refusal to agree to a half dozen campaign debates.

But Ms. Isaacs says that will change when Ferraro strikes out on the campaign trail by herself.

• • •

The Mondale-Ferraro campaign is hiring dozens of people for the race this fall, and one job still unfilled is that of press secretary to Ms. Ferraro.

Scott Widmeyer has been serving in the post temporarily, but he is expected to move back over to Mondale's side of the operation.

Even skilled politicians can make mistakes

By SANDY JOHNSON

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The short-lived resurrections of Anne Burford and Bert Lance, former high-ranking officials forced to resign under fire, demonstrated how even skilled politicans like Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale can voluntarily open old wounds that threaten to hurt their campaigns.

The sudden reappearances and just as abrupt departures of Lance and Mrs. Burford could wind up a draw for the two presidential candidates.

For every Democrat tempted to use the Burford episode as an example of Republican skeletons in the closet, there was a Republican ready to point a finger at Lance as a Democratic counterpart.

And now that both have been pushed offstage yet again, it remains to be seen whether there will be lasting damage to either campaign.

On successive days last week, Mrs. Burford resigned as chairwoman of a presidential advisory commission before she was even sworn in, and Lance quit as general chairman of Mondale's presidential campaign before he ever settled into the newly-created role.

Their new positions had been small steps toward political rehabilitation, since both had left office — Mrs. Burford as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency in 1983 and Lance as budget director in 1977 — in storms of controversy.

But the new appointments, Mrs. Burford's announced on July 2 and Lance's less than two weeks later on July 14, met with roars of disapproval from pros within their own parties.

Neither group wanted old political baggage dragged into view at the onset of a fall presidential campaign.

The re-emergence of Mrs. Burford reminded voters that Reagan's record on the environment alarmed environmentalists, and the resurrection of Lance once again tied Mondale to the unpopular president he served as vice president.

Why either candidate would risk putting such proven liabilities back in the public eye is beyond an easy answer.

In the case of Lance, Mondale apparently hoped to appeal to the Georgian's native South, where Democrats fared poorly in 1980. But any advantages were quickly outweighed by adverse reaction, which Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel said he had "terribly underestimated."

Mrs. Burford, on the other hand, offered no obvious advantages. In an interview, Reagan said simply, "I just believe that when someone has been the victim of an attempted lynching, then someone ought to come to the rescue."

Mrs. Burford resigned her EPA post in March of last year, after being cited for contempt of Congress but escaping prosecution in a host of allegations surrounding the multibillion-dollar "superfund" program to clean up hazardous waste dump sites.

But hardly had that furor abated when the White House said Mrs. Burford would chair the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere. The outcry was immediate, but Reagan indicated he would stand by her.

Mrs. Burford hardly helped her cause by calling her new job "a nothing-burger...a joke" and referring to Washington as "too small to be a state but too large to be an asylum for the mentally deranged."

On Wednesday she resigned, citing in her letter to Reagan "an unwarranted furor created around my appointment. This debate does a grave disservice to your outstanding record on the environment."

Lance's resignation letter was tendered Thursday.

"I have become a major focus of the campaign, through the efforts of different people raising once again old charges which have been fully resolved," Lance wrote.

Those charges of financial irregularities forced Lance to quit as President Carter's budget director in 1977. He was later indicted but acquitted of charges of bank fraud and conspiracy.

When Mondale's people floated a trial balloon prior to the Democratic National Convention that Lance might replace Charles T. Manatt as national chairman of the party, reaction was swift — and negative. So Lance wound up as general campaign chairman, which apparently was designed to mollify the Georgian while giving him lower visibility in the campaign.

"Viva Ferraro," the man said as running mate Geraldine Ferraro followed, and the crowd cheered much louder.

So it was last week as the Democratic team made its swing through the South: Mondale No. 1 on the ticket, Ms. Ferraro evidently No. 1 in the hearts and minds of the large, enthusiastic crowds that greeted them.

But if Mondale felt pushed off center stage by his running mate, the first woman on the national ticket of a major party, he didn't show it. And his aides said he was delighted with the reception she received.

"Mondale is a very secure person," said press secretary Maxine Isaacs. "He's not worried that she's going to overshadow him. He's glad people are excited by the choice."

On the stump, Ferraro comes across as less polished, but more given to spontaneity.

But it was Mondale who drew one of the largest ovations of the week at the San Antonio rally when he reacted to the wind blowing the pages of his speech text around.

He finally gave up trying to control the papers, handed them to someone behind him on the podium, and said, "I don't need notes to speak."

Ms. Isaacs described last week's 3,300-mile campaign swing through New York, Cleveland, Mississippi and Texas as a "shakedown" outing.

But aside from the public speeches and rallies, there was the substantive political business of fence-mending after the long fight for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In Ohio, Mississippi and Texas, Mondale and Ms. Ferraro met privately with backers of Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson to seek a united effort for the fall campaign.

One aide called the session in the Mississippi governor's mansion "historic," both for Ms. Ferraro's presence, and for the attendance of representatives of all factions of a state Democratic party that has been divided since the civil rights struggle two decades ago.

In Austin, Rep. Martin Frost was on the podium as Mondale and Ms. Ferraro spoke. He was an early supporter of Hart, now publicly signalling his support of the ticket for the fall campaign.

Petis Norman, a key Jackson supporter, sat nearby and afterwards they met with other Texas party leaders and Mondale and Ms. Ferraro inside the statehouse.

• • •

The program rarely changed as Mondale and Ms. Ferraro worked their way through three days of political speeches.

She dealt only briefly with issues, preferring instead to declare her happiness at being in the South, mention her own background as a "tough" prosecutor and say a few words about "values" and the need to elect Mondale president.

It fell to Mondale, a more polished stump speaker, to deliver the substantive speech, attacking President Reagan on federal budget deficits and for his refusal to agree to a half dozen campaign debates.

But Ms. Isaacs says that will change when Ferraro strikes out on the campaign trail by herself.

• • •

The Mondale-Ferraro campaign is hiring dozens of people for the race this fall, and one job still unfilled is that of press secretary to Ms. Ferraro.

Scott Widmeyer has been serving in the post temporarily, but he is expected to move back over to Mondale's side of the operation.

Even skilled politicians can make mistakes

By SANDY JOHNSON

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The short-lived resurrections of Anne Burford and Bert Lance, former high-ranking officials forced to resign under fire, demonstrated how even skilled politicans like Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale can voluntarily open old wounds that threaten to hurt their campaigns.

The sudden reappearances and just as abrupt departures of Lance and Mrs. Burford could wind up a draw for the two presidential candidates.

For every Democrat tempted to use the Burford episode as an example of Republican skeletons in the closet, there was a Republican ready to point a finger at Lance as a Democratic counterpart.

And now that both have been pushed offstage yet again, it remains to be seen whether there will be lasting damage to either campaign.

On successive days last week, Mrs. Burford resigned as chairwoman of a presidential advisory commission before she was even sworn in, and Lance quit as general chairman of Mondale's presidential campaign before he ever settled into the newly-created role.

Their new positions had been small steps toward political rehabilitation, since both had left office — Mrs. Burford as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency in 1983 and Lance as budget director in 1977 — in storms of controversy.

But the new appointments, Mrs. Burford's announced on July 2 and Lance's less than two weeks later on July 14, met with roars of disapproval from pros within their own parties.

Neither group wanted old political baggage dragged into view at the onset of a fall presidential campaign.

The re-emergence of Mrs. Burford reminded voters that Reagan's record on the environment alarmed environmentalists, and the resurrection of Lance once again tied Mondale to the unpopular president he served as vice president.

Why either candidate would risk putting such proven liabilities back in the public eye is beyond an easy answer.

In the case of Lance, Mondale apparently hoped to appeal to the Georgian's native South, where Democrats fared poorly in 1980. But any advantages were quickly outweighed by adverse reaction, which Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel said he had "terribly underestimated."

Mrs. Burford, on the other hand, offered no obvious advantages. In an interview, Reagan said simply, "I just believe that when someone has been the victim of an attempted lynching, then someone ought to come to the rescue."

Mrs. Burford resigned her EPA post in March of last year, after being cited for contempt of Congress but escaping prosecution in a host of allegations surrounding the multibillion-dollar "superfund" program to clean up hazardous waste dump sites.

But hardly had that furor abated when the White House said Mrs. Burford would chair the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere. The outcry was immediate, but Reagan indicated he would stand by her.

Mrs. Burford hardly helped her cause by calling her new job "a nothing-burger...a joke" and referring to Washington as "too small to be a state but too large to be an asylum for the mentally deranged."

On Wednesday she resigned, citing in her letter to Reagan "an unwarranted furor created around my appointment. This debate does a grave disservice to your outstanding record on the environment."

Lance's resignation letter was tendered Thursday.

"I have become a major focus of the campaign, through the efforts of different people raising once again old charges which have been fully resolved," Lance wrote.

Those charges of financial irregularities forced Lance to quit as President Carter's budget director in 1977. He was later indicted but acquitted of charges of bank fraud and conspiracy.

When Mondale's people floated a trial balloon prior to the Democratic National Convention that Lance might replace Charles T. Manatt as national chairman of the party, reaction was swift — and negative. So Lance wound up as general campaign chairman, which apparently was designed to mollify the Georgian while giving him lower visibility in the campaign.

Inmates armed with knives take nine hostage in prison

BOYDTON, Va. (AP) — Inmates armed with handmade knives took eight men and one woman hostage Saturday at the maximum-security Mecklenburg Correctional Center, site of the largest death row breakout in U.S. history in May, a prison spokesman said.

Two male guards who had been stabbed were released by midafternoon and were hospitalized in stable condition, while hostages still being held were reported safe Saturday night, officials said.

The inmates later issued 15 demands that included removal of present prison officials, "halt of unjust treatment...for certain acts," "more fruit and less pork," and an end "to harrassment of death row prisoners."

"Right now we have seven people held hostage in Building 5, six correctional officers and a food service worker," said Corrections Department spokesman Wayne Farrar.

"Two other officers were also taken hostage but were released because of injury. One guy had stab wounds around the head and the other had stab wounds around the head and abdomen and apparently had been beaten. They let them come down in the elevator," Farrar said.

"There has been no official threat of any bodily harm," said Jerry Davis, a spokesman for the prison.

Shortly after 8 p.m., Davis said the inmates had told state police negotiators by telephone that no more hostages had been harmed.

NATION IN BRIEF

Jury awards $6 million in death of man's bride

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A jury has awarded $6 million in damages to a man whose bride of five weeks was slain by a motel employee.

Jennifer Holden, 24, was stabbed more than 28 times and her throat was slit Aug. 1, 1981, at a motel in suburban Goodyear.

Randy Bernal, serving a 21-year prison term in the slaying, "never would have been hired" if Motor Hotel Management Inc. had checked his background, attorney Ed Moriarity argued. He said Bernal had a history of violence and a long arrest record.

The jury on Friday ordered the Dallas company to pay Tom Holden of Richmond, Calif., $1 million in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

Stolen dolls recovered

PICO RIVERA, Calif. (AP) — Missing Cabbage Patch and Dr. Seuss Cat dolls worth $85,000 have been recovered at a truck company warehouse, and the firm's vice president has been arrested, authorities said.

The arrest Friday of Thomas J. Giacomaro, 31, of Glen Rock, N.J., followed a month-long investigation, Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Adam Kahn said.

Giacomaro was arrested at XTL Trucking in Pico Rivera, 13 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and 3,500 Cabbage Patch dolls and 7,000 Dr. Seuss Cat dolls were recovered from the warehouse, Kahn said.

Store owner stole drugs

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A Levittown drug store owner faces a prison term of 1½ to five years for stealing two cases of an aspirin substitute to stock his own shelves, authorities say.

Elmer Gall, 49, was convicted of one theft, from a Middletown Township drug store in 1983. However, police said they believe he committed several thefts to stock his store over the last six years.

Lawrence, Kan., marks dropping of atomic bomb

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Lawrence, the city devastated in a make-believe nuclear holocaust on television, will take part today in an international observance marking the destruction of Hiroshima, Japan, by the first atomic bomb used in warfare.

The observance, dubbed Peace Day, comes 39 years after Hiroshima was leveled by an American bomb at the end of World War II.

Participants in the United States and at least seven foreign nations, including Japan and the Soviet Union, will be linked in an international conference telephone call at the hour the bomb was dropped, organizers said.

"We are proud to join this historic telephone-radio network and let the world know that Lawrence is still here and is actively working for peace," said Bob Swan, an organizer or the event here.

On a peak of the Sacramento Mountains at Sunspot, N.M., this specially-designed vacuum tower telescope rises 136 feet above the ground. It is one of the sophisticated telescopes used to study the sun at the National Solar Observatory.

Tiny community houses true 'sun worshippers'

SUNSPOT, N.M. (AP) — This tiny community in the Sacramento Mountains seems far away from the rest of the world, but residents say that's appropriate because the entire town is dedicated to studying something really far, far away.

Sunspot is the home of the National Solar Observatory, which has been studying the sun and its effect on the universe for more than 30 years.

"We have four or five main areas of research, but they all are connected with the sun," said David Hathaway, an assistant astronomer and public information officer for the observatory.

Formerly called the Sacramento Peak Observatory, the solar research center was founded in 1950 by the U.S. Air Force.

It was transferred to the National Science Foundation in 1976 and is operated under contract by the Association of Universities for Research in Astronomy Inc., which also oversees the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Tucson, Ariz., and the Cerro Tololo Inter-American Observatory in Chile.

The observatory uses sophisticated telescopes to track the movement of the sun and the activity on and around it.

"There is no better way to learn about stars," Hathaway said. "Since the sun is a star and the nearest one to us, it is the best way to see up close what stars are all about."

Through the years, the observatory has concentrated on various fields of study, such as solar activity, solar flares, the sun's rotation and corona physics, he said.

Several satellites, including some operated in conjunction with space shuttle missions, have been used by the observatory to aid astronomers in their quest to learn more about the sun.

A project currently being proposed by the observatory would establish a network of telescopes around the Earth "to look more closely at the study of the sun," Hathaway said.

The project, if approved and funded by the National Science Foundation, would cost about $6 million over a 10-year period, he said.

The observatory's equipment in the Sacramento Mountains is worth at least $30 million, Hathaway said.

A massive tower that rises 136 feet above the ground houses a "vacuum tower telescope" that specifically was designed to "look at the finest details of the sun," he said.

The white tower, resembling an oversized Indian teepee, sits among hundreds of trees that surround Sunspot, which is 9,200 feet above sea level.

A vacuum is created in the telescope's tube to obtain a clear view of the sun. In most solar telescopes, Hathaway said, astronomers often have the problem of sunlight heating the air in the tube, which causes the air to move and blur the image of the sun.

"It eliminates the problems of blurring and we get a clear view of the sun to study," he said.

Next to the telescope tower, 220 feet of which is beneath the ground, is the other primary tool used in the observatory's research.

Mondale: Reagan 'guess what' candidate

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale said Saturday that President Reagan is using "hocus-pocus numbers" to question Mondale's budget plans and said Reagan is becoming the "guess-what" candidate because he refuses to reveal his own tax and spending ideas.

As the Democratic presidential hopeful was hitting back hard at Reagan, he also took the full responsibility for the controversy over Bert Lance's short-lived term as general chairman of the Mondale campaign.

"This decision was made in a responsible way. It was obviously a misjudgment. I deeply regret any harm I may have visited on Bert Lance, whom I like," Mondale said. "I take this responsibility on my own."

Reagan attacked Mondale's tax plans in a paid political radio talk and Mondale responded a few hours later at a news conference at his home.

"Today, President Reagan in his radio address failed again to tell the American people whether or how he will reduce the deficit, completely distorted my plan to do so and demonstrated that he prefers canned, long-distance charges to real debates," Mondale said. "The tax and budget issue is now becoming an issue of Mr. Reagan's credibility on this question.

"If we were to debate on national television today, I'd cream him, because he's dead wrong," Mondale added. "Rather than telling the truth about his plan or lack of it, Mr. Reagan spent most of his time distorting mine."

Mondale again challenged Reagan to reveal his tax and spending plans before the election and to debate Mondale on those issues.

He said he has laid out his own tax and spending plans in detail, rejecting Reagan's claim to the contrary. But Mondale admitted the exact figures for cutting the deficit by two-thirds — which he promised last month — would not be available until the Reagan administration releases new budget estimates that were due last month.

Speaking from his ranch in California, Reagan pledged: "I will propose no increase in personal income taxes and I will veto any tax bill that would raise personal tax rates for working Americans or that would fail to make our tax system simpler or more fair."

Reagan insisted that Mondale's plan would result in a $1,500 increase in taxes "for every American household.

Mondale belittled Reagan's pledge not to raise personal income taxes, suggesting that Reagan might propose a national sales tax after the election.

"I'm convinced they are going to sock it to the average American, that they've got in mind a national sales tax or a value-added tax," he said.

Mondale reiterated his allegation that Reagan is not being truthful with the public on tax issues.

"Now here we go again," he said. "We won't tell us what he wants to do in the next four years. He seems to be afraid to be straight with the American people He is becoming the guess-what candidate."

In particular, Mondale said Reagan's claim that the Democratic tax increase would cost every American household $1,500 is wrong.

"His $1,500 is phony...That is haywire and completely off. ... He had some hocus-pocus numbers about what my budget would cost," Mondale said. "He drew some conclusions that could not be supported if we were debating."

Mondale said his tax plans would not cost families with incomes of under $30,000 at all.

While Reagan was "was very careful not to rule out tax increases that would protect his rich friends," Mondale said his own tax increases would hit those making over $100,000 a year the hardest.

Mondale even claimed some credit for the stock market boom this week.

Smith guest of firm under investigation

From Wire Reports

GROTON, Conn. — The Providence, the Navy's most powerful nuclear-powered attack submarine, was launched Saturday as Attorney General William French Smith said it should be used to "maintain peace in a dangerous world."

"In comparison with other ships of her class, this submarine is quieter, faster and militarily more capable," Smith said in his christening address at the Electric Boat Shipyard.

Smith, whose wife Jean failed in three tries to break a champagne bottle on the 6,900-ton, Tomahawk cruise-missile launching sub, made no reference to two Justice Department investigations of alleged wrongdoing involving the nation's nuclear submarine program.

His department announced Friday it would probe allegations that General Dynamics Corp. gave improper gifts to Adm. Hyman G. Rickover when he was head of the program.

Smith also removed himself more than a month ago from his department's review of the settlement of cost overrun claims filed by Electric Boat's parent company on the submarine contracts.

A number of senior Justice Department officials were disturbed at the attorney general's decision to attend the company functions, officials said. Several of them also received invitations but declined to attend.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who has accused the Justice Department of "dragging its feet" on the investigation, Friday criticized Smith for agreeing to be a "guest of the company he's supposed to be prosecuting" and for excusing himself from the inquiry.

"The attorney general should take an active part in the biggest buy-in case in history," the senator said. The department is investigating for the second time allegations that General Dynamics deliberately underbid to obtain a Navy submarine contract and then submitted fraudulently escalated cost overruns.

Smith did refer to a controversy over naming the submarine for the capital of Rhode Island, where protest groups say the name Providence has religious connotations.

"The Providence before us is named for...a seaport city on the coast of a seafaring state, and (the city of) Providence itself is named in thanksgiving for God's guidance and care," Smith said.

Halley's Comet may be spinning through space

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Halley's Comet, speeding toward Earth and the sun for a 1986 rendezvous, may be irregular in shape or have a patchy surface and appears to be rotating, new photographs show.

The photos, taken through a 200-inch telescope at Palomar Observatory at the California Institute of Technology, show that the light reflected from the comet varies regularly in intensity over a period of hours.

The finding implies that the comet, which passes close enough to Earth to be visible every 76 years, could be rotating and either have an irregular shape or dark or light patches on its surface, scientists said in a release last week.

The scientists, Caltech staff member G. Edward Danielson and Massachusetts Institute of Technology astronomer David Jewitt, photographed the comet on Jan. 7, when it was 800 million miles from the sun. Their observations are to be published in the journal Icarus.

The photographs showed the comet has a reddish color when seen from far away, indicating it may have a snow-white surface.

When photographed, the comet was not yet close enough for the sun to warm up its nucleus and cause it to emit gasses that lift dust off the surface, producing the fuzzy "coma" that surrounds the comet.

Danielson said the Caltech photographs are the first shots ever taken of Halley's Comet before it reached that fuzzy state and may afford scientists insight into the comet's constituents.

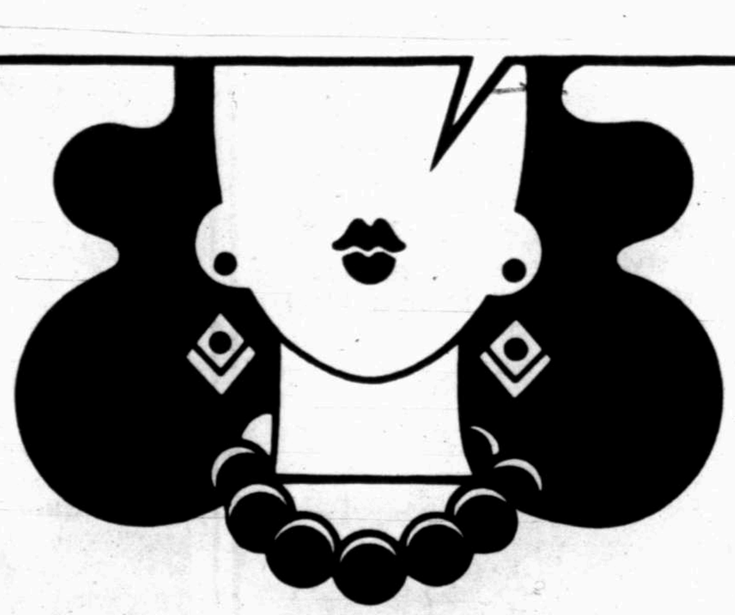

Comets are thought to resemble gigantic dirty snowballs, consisting mostly of dust, rocky material and water ice. Their tails of gas and dust are formed by the sun's heat vaporizing the ice.

Danielson and Jewitt led the team that first detected Halley's Comet on its current approach to the sun when it was still a billion miles away, in October 1982.

Mysterious explosions make Egypt nervous

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's military is closely watching the Red Sea and Suez Canal and working with U.S. military experts to find out what's behind the mysterious explosions that threaten shipping in the vital waterways.

The 100-mile-long Suez Canal, which links the Red Sea and the Mediterranean, is an important short cut for shipping between South and East Asia and Europe, and revenues from canal tolls are Egypt's third biggest source of foreign exchange.

"Of course we are deeply concerned," said a Suez Canal Authority official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "The Suez Canal is an important lifeline for us and the Suez Gulf and Red Sea, both of which lead into and out of the canal are equally important to us."

Who planted the explosive devices is a mystery. But the consensus in Washington, London, Cairo and the Persian Gulf was that it may have been the work of an Iranian-backed extremist group.

The official radio in the Persian Gulf state of Qatar has said a group calling itself Islamic Jihad (holy war) claimed responsibility for mining the Red Sea to "punish imperialism." Islamic Jihad is an extremist pro-Iranian group.

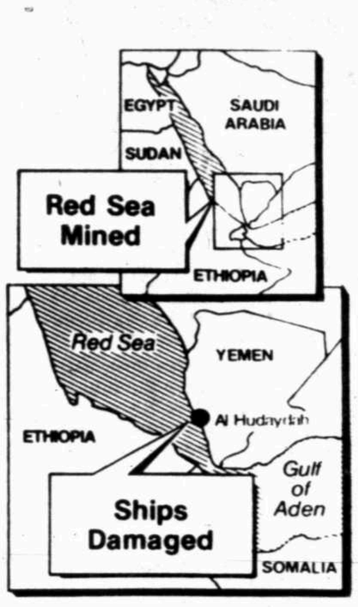

Government sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said that since last Monday, air force planes have been patrolling the Suez Canal and Egypt's Red Sea offshore areas in pairs daily.

The navy has launched a minesweeping operation in the Suez Gulf, they said, and the internal security apparatus in the canal and Red Sea region has been on full alert.

At Egypt's request, 15 U.S. mine warfare specialists came to Cairo on Thursday to help. Pentagon officials in Washington said Friday that a squadron of minesweeping helicopters was being readied to go to the region if it is decided to use them in the Suez Gulf and Red Sea.

The U.S. Navy has moved an oceanographic survey ship, the Harkness, into the Red Sea to serve as a possible base for the American experts sent to Egypt.

Between July 7 and last weekend, explosions occurred near five ships in the Suez Gulf, the 180-mile-long northern tip of the Red Sea, according to Suez Canal Authority officials. The ships flew the Soviet, Spanish, Japanese, Panamanian and Liberian flags, they said.

In London, the Lloyds Shipping Intelligence Department reported that at least nine ships, including one each from East Germany, Turkey and Greece, struck mines off the coast of North Yemen, close to the strategically important southern entrance to the Red Sea. A Dutch ship was reported trapped in a minefield in the same area.

Some of the ships were said to be damaged, but no deaths or injuries were reported.

Officials from Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly on down publicly have denied the presence of any explosives in the canal, minimized the damage caused in the Suez Gulf explosions and refrained from making public accusations.

Canal authority sources said their intensified security was directed mainly against ships from Iran and Libya as well as "any other country whose relations with Egypt are badly strained."

Washington reports quoted Pentagon sources as saying suspicion focused mainly on at least one, and possibly three, Iranian ships that sailed in the Red Sea recently and may have dumped small mines overboard.

'Moslems from Lebanon' ask Iranians for asylum

Three "Moslems from Lebanon," who surrendered after hijacking an Air France jetliner and holding its passengers and crew hostage for two days, have asked Iran for political asylum, Iran's official news agency reported Saturday.

The Islamic Republic News Agency also quoted an Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying the hijackers smuggled submachine guns, grenades and other weapons onto the Boeing 737 in their luggage.

His reference to the hijackers as "Moslems from Lebanon" was the first official identification of the men. Their names were not given.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted him as saying authorities were investigating the three hijackers.

The air pirates surrendered to Iranian authorities at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport on Thursday. France had refused the hijackers' demand to release from its prisons five Iranians convicted of trying to kill former Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, a leading opponent of the regime in Iran, in 1980.

The hijackers blew up the cockpit of the plane after freeing the hostages.

The 60 passengers and crew, made captive last Tuesday on a flight from Frankfurt, West Germany, to Paris, were flown to Paris on Friday.

French and West German officials were trying to find out how the men got the machine guns, grenades and other arms on board. When they seized the plane they were said to be brandishing knives and what they claimed were bombs.

French and West German newspapers speculated that the three may have been supplied with additional arms in Iran.They based this on statements made by released hostages, the hijackers' pro-Iranian demands and the strained nature of French-Iranian relations, aggravated by French support of Iraq in Iraq's war with Iran.

In addition, Iranian officials had urged the French during the negotiations to agree to the demands.

Saturday, IRNA quoted the foreign ministry spokesman as saying, "Last Thursday afternoon, the hijackers, under the pretext of taking medicine for a passenger from the cargo compartment, had in fact taken arms and explosives which they had in their suitcases and transfered them inside the plane."

Frankfurt airport spokesman Otto Hannsrainer had said on Friday there was suspicion the weapons were taken aboard the plane in Tehran. He said it would be impossible to smuggle such weapons in hand luggage.

Frankfurt airport, one of Europe's busiest, does not, however, routinely X-ray baggage checked into the luggage bay.

Jean Nicol, 50, pilot of the hijacked Boeing 737 jet, has said it would be impossible to open the cargo hold while the plane was in the air, and added he had no knowledge of any attempts by the hijackers to reach the baggage storage area from the outside of the plane.

European space agency launches two satellites

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The European Space Agency confirmed its role as a major player in the commercial space race Saturday, launching two communications satellites with its new powerful Ariane III rocket.

The agency said a European telecommunications satellite ESC-2 was placed into "perfect orbit" about 18 minutes after liftoff. France's first telecommunications satellite was released into orbit about three minutes later. Both satellites, with an estimated life span of seven years, are circling the Earth at an altitude of 22,000 miles.

Saturday's launch was the 10th in the Ariane program, which began in December 1979. Seven previous launches were successful, but the latest was the first featuring the powerful Ariane III, which can carry a 2.5-ton payload.

Its predecessor, Ariane I, was limited to a 1.8-ton payload. There was a prototype Ariane II which was never used.

Ariane is a conventional three-stage rocket developed by a French-led, 11-nation West European consortium. It is technically less advanced than the U.S. space shuttle, which is reusable and can carry men and equipment into space.

But agency officials said the ability to launch two satellites at once decreases the cost and makes the rocket more competitive with the U.S. space shuttle.

The agency officials also said the Ariane system is better than the space shuttle at placing satellites into high-altitude orbit. They said the shuttle's effectiveness is limited to the lower atmosphere.

The launch Saturday proved Ariane to be a reliable delivery system, at a time when the last two space shuttle flights have been beset by problems.

What is at stake is billions of dollars in potential revenue from the estimated 300 satellites that will be launched commercially by non-communist countries during the next decade. The European agency officials said they hope to capture at least a third of the market.

In the past, agency officials and the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration have noted there currently are more customers than available launch dates, and that there should be room for both Ariane and the shuttle.

Arianespace, the agency's quasi-governmental commercial arm, has orders for 28 launches through 1987, with another 19 option agreements.

North Yemen sweeps Red Sea for clues to damaging blasts

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — North Yemen, like Egypt, is sweeping its Red Sea waters for clues to recent mystery blasts that damaged several ships, according to shipping and other sources contacted Saturday in the North Yemeni capital of Sanaa.

They said several private companies have sent divers to inspect the damage to their vessels and search for evidence as to what caused the explosions.

The sources, who spoke only when guaranteed anonymity, were contacted by telephone from The Associated Press office in Bahrain, a shipping center on the Persian Gulf.

They said pro-Western government in Sanaa was using its only minesweeper, a Soviet-made model, in the operation.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Sanaa said that unlike Egypt, which is hosting 15 American mine warfare experts, the North Yemeni government has not requested technical assistance.

Roger Lowes, a spokesman for the Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Department, has reported that at least nine ships have struck mines off North Yemen, which is near the strategically important 17-mile-wide Bab el-Mandeb strait.

The strait connects the Indian Ocean and Red Sea, and is a vital link in the Mediterranean-Suez Canal-Red Sea-Indian Ocean shipping lane between South and East Asia and Europe.

Since July 7, there have been five similar incidents in the Suez Gulf, at the northern tip of the Red Sea and the mouth of the canal.

No casualties have been reported.

"No one knows for certain that the damage has been incurred by water mines," said a shipping executive close to an association involved in salvage. "All that we know is that the ships have been affected by heavy underwater explosions."

The state radio in the Persian Gulf kingdom of Qatar has reported that a group calling itself "Islamic Jihad" (holy war) claimed responsibility in the name of "punishing imperialism." Islamic Jihad is believed to be a pro-Iranian extremist group.

But shipping and oil industry circles in Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain said there was not enough evidence to form an opinion about who was behind the explosions.

Some shipping experts in the gulf region said the Red Sea explosions could prove even more dangerous than the Persian Gulf attacks.

Disgruntled youth lobs grenade into crowd

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A youth who had been denied free admission lobbed a hand grenade into spectators at an open-air movie in Phetchabun province, killing five people and injuring 33, a provincial police chief said Saturday.

Col. Manas Marutan said in a telephone interview the youth and his friends got into a fistfight with police after they could not get in free on Thursday to see a movie shown on the grounds of the Bho Klang Buddhist temple, about 216 miles north of Bangkok.

The gang then cut a power line leading to the temple grounds and one youth threw a grenade into the crowd of more than 100 spectators.

Police said one youth was arrested, and the others were being sought. How many youths were involved was not specified.

Eight indicted for drugs

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Seven foreigners, including two Americans, and a 26-year-old Taiwanese woman were indicted by a Taipei district court Saturday on charges of possessing and trafficking in hashish, court officials reported.

The officials, who spoke on condition they were not identified, said ages of the seven ranged from 24 to 41 and that the defendants included two Australians, a New Zealander, a Briton, and one person from Sierra Leone besides the two U.S. citizens. Their hometowns were not available.

The eight were arrested a month ago after police found a total of 1.1 pounds of hashish, valued at $12,500, in their possession.

No date has been set for their trial. If convicted, they could be sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment each.

Queen Mother cheered

LONDON (AP) — About 2,000 people stood in pouring rain Saturday to wish Britain's Queen Mother Elizabeth a happy 84th birthday.

Looking chipper in a pale blue dress and matching hat, the mother of Queen Elizabeth II and widow of King George VI smiled and waved from the balcony of Clarence House, her London residence.

The skies cleared minutes before she appeared. Cheers nearly drowned out a band of the 2nd Battalion, Grenadier Guards, as it played "Happy Birthday." People sang along, and also sang, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

'Punks,' 'skinheads' gather

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — About 700 young West German "punk rockers" and "skinheads" converged on this Lower Saxony state capital for a third annual weekend gathering that has turned violent in the past, police said Saturday.

Rowdy youths damaged several parked cars Saturday and broke shop windows in the city center, but no one was hurt and damage was minimal, authorities said.

Police held 91 youths Friday night, but freed 50 of them Saturday morning, a police spokesman said. He did not know when the others would be released.

Skinheads are a violent group that originated in England. Members wear close-cropped hair styles, leather jackets and heavy boots. Punk rockers are known for sporting half-shaved heads or spiky hairstyles in bright colors.

Sisters swim to freedom

CORFU, Greece (AP) — Two Albanian sisters fled to Greece by swimming across a 7-mile strait that separates the resort island of Corfu from the self-isolated communist state, a Corfu port authority spokesman said Saturday.

He identified them as Isabel Islami, 31, and her sister Mariza, 27, and said they sought political asylum. Their brother Klement, 29, who set out with them from the Albanian port town of Sarande Wednesday night, disappeared during the escape, the spokesman said.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the sisters swam for 12 hours with the help of inflated inner tubes.

Polish cardinal meets with Walesa

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Cardinal Jozef Glemp met with Solidarity founder Lech Walesa in the Baltic port of Gdansk on Saturday, after a sermon in which the Polish primate praised the work of the now-outlawed labor federation.

In Warsaw, authorities freed Solidarity adviser Adam Michnik and Seweryn Jaworski, a steelworker who had been deputy leader of the union's Warsaw chapter and a member of its national commission.

They were released under the general amnesty approved by Parliament on July 21 that will free 652 political prisoners and nearly 35,000 common criminals. More than 500 political prisoners have been released to date, according to the latest government figures.

Glemp said in his sermon during the funeral Mass for a pro-Solidarity Gdansk bishop that, "After four years from August 1980, we realize much better that that was necessary and from that started a new era which influenced the renaissance of the country."

He was referring to the August 1980 agreements between the government and workers that ended paralyzing labor strikes and led to the creation of Solidarity, the first free trade union in the Soviet bloc. It was suppressed when martial law was imposed in December 1981 and later outlawed.

The subject of Glemp's talks with Walesa was not disclosed. They met for a half hour at Oliwa Cathedral after the funeral for Bishop Lech Kaczmarek.

It was their first meeting since January when they talked in Gdansk, where Walesa lives, during the celebration of Kaczmarek's 25th anniversary as bishop of the port city. At that time they discussed the Roman Catholic church's efforts to free Solidarity activists jailed under the martial law.

In his sermon Saturday at St. Mary's Basilica, Glemp praised the amnesty program.

"Even if the amnesty does not open the door to paradise, the contact with a man who has been freed fills us with joy," he said.

Walesa and his wife, Danuta, attended the Mass for the 75-year-old Kaczmarek, who died Tuesday after suffering a heart attack. An estimated 10,000 mourners filled the 14th century church and stood outside.

U.S. anti-abortion policy draws fire

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Reagan administration's policy on abortions in countries outside the United States is drawing fire even before the huge U.N. International Conference on Population opens here Monday.

Under the policy, the United States would withhold aid from organizations that actively promote abortion.

Jason Finkle, director of the Center for Population Planning of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich., called it "amazingly bad logic and amazingly bad economic analysis."

He charged that the Reagan administration will introduce the policy at the conference to pay "an important debt" to anti-abortion groups that have supported him politically.

Finkle and others spoke at a panel outlining issues for the conference, which about 140 countries are expected to attend.

It is the first U.N. population meeting since the 1974 population conference in Bucharest, Romania.

Sheldon Segal, director of population sciences for the Rockefeller Foundation in New York City, said in a paper prepared for the session that a nationwide Gallup poll commissioned by his organization shows Americans support family planning overseas.

In the survey, 72 percent of the 1,042 adults interviewed last month said they believed the United States should give family planning assistance in countries where abortion is legal.

The new U.S. policy was announced in July, in advance of the conference. It declared abortion an "unnecessary and repugnant" form of population control, and said the United States will not contribute to family planning programs that support abortion.

Although population experts said they hope the talks will stick to concrete population issues, politics can be expected to play a big role.

The conference is of government representatives, most of them at the level of health minister, rather than of demographers and family planning experts.

"Some issues are still taboo because they are controversial and could breach a consensus," said Leon Tabah, a former director of the U.N. Population Division. He said they include abortion and sterilization, "the two most widespread ways of controlling births in the Third World."

The conference was called by the world's poorer countries to talk about how to deal with growing numbers of people, both from migration and natural increases. In 1974, the industrialized nations, alarmed by rising population growth rates, called the population meeting.

In contrast to 1974, a time when government intervention in population questions was still controversial, four-fifths of countries now consider population to be of prime importance to their development plans and most countries have family planning programs, U.N. studies show.

Only six countries, accounting for less than 1 percent of the world population, actively restrict access to contraception, said P. Sankar Menon, deputy secretary-general of the conference.

Migration, both from rural to urban areas and from country to country, is expected to be a key issue. The number of cities with 4 million people or more grew from 11 in 1950 to 38 in 1980, a preparatory committee said. By the year 2000, it is expected to reach 66 — 50 of them in developing countries.

Delegates also are likely to discuss the success of China's population program, to see what they can learn from it.

Honduras re-examines ties with U.S.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Once an unquestioning and uncomplaining ally in the U.S. effort to fight leftist forces in Central America, Honduras is taking a new, hard look at its relationship with the United States.

Honduras now openly questions whether its faithfulness has been properly rewarded, and the United States is trying hard to save the relationship.

The shrillness of the complaints from the Honduran capital diminished a bit after late July visits by Gen. John Vesey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Undersecretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle and Undersecretary of State Nestor Sanchez.

From Washington came published reports that Vesey's trip had improved the bond between the two countries, and after Ikle and Sanchez visited several days later, Ikle declared the relationship in "excellent shape."

Nevertheless, even as Ikle was in Tegucigalpa, a special Honduran commission met to review the country's 1954 military assistance agreement with the United States.

The pact permits the United States to bring an almost unlimited range of military equipment into Honduras and, as secretly amended in 1982, allowed the establishment of a regional military training center near Trujillo on the Caribbean coast.

The training center is an irritation for the Hondurans. They point out that the United States has trained almost twice as many Salvadoran as Honduran soldiers at the center in the past year.

Many of Honduras' top military leaders were lieutenants and captains in 1969 when Honduras fought a border war with El Salvador, and their mistrust of El Salvador still runs deep.

But with the Reagan administration expected to push Congress for an expanded aid package for Central America, the message Washington sent to Honduras appeared to be to not rock the boat.

Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica told a recent news conference that groups within Honduras were "trying to create discord" by suggesting that the country was challenging the United States.

"With the United States we have ideals in common in favor of peace and progress," Paz Barnica said, adding that those who believe Honduras "is going to challenge the United States are wrong."

Nonetheless, asked if he thought it would be possible to get more economic aid from the United States if Honduras forced a closure of U.S. military bases on its soil, Paz Barnica replied cryptically:

"If there are no military bases, this is a matter of pride for Hondurans, but there are different programs of economic cooperation which we hope could be increased."

In the past two years, the United States has turned Honduras into a major military base in what the Reagan administration calls an effort to contain the spread of Communism from Nicaragua to the rest of Central America.

It has built or modernized 11 airfields, constructed four military camps, including the regional training center, and conducted joint exercises with Honduras involving as many as 5,000 U.S. troops.

Texan hopes to spice film offerings on both sides of the Atlantic

AVIGNON, France (AP) — Jerry Rudes is a jalapeno in a glass of champagne, a fiery Texan immersed in the elegant milieu of French film who hopes to spice movie offerings on both sides of the Atlantic.

Rudes, a native of San Antonio, Texas, is the founder and director of the French-American Film Workshop, a new cinema festival in the South of France funded by the French Ministry of Culture.

In retrospect, Rudes calls the first annual event a grand success, but midway through the three-day festival last month he wasn't quite so sure.

"I've got an actress too stoned on cocaine to speak and she's supposed to conduct a seminar in an hour. And the film that's our main feature for tonight seems to have been lost," said Rudes, 36, who attacked these obstacles with the same verve that has carried him through 13 years of life abroad.

The actress was brought around, the film was found and, in the end, 1,500 film fans and cinema professionals got a chance to meet, exchange ideas, do business and see the best of what French and American independent filmmakers have to offer.

Audiences in 38 U.S. cities will have a similar opportunity this winter when a selection of 13 French films from the workshop begins an American tour that will include screenings at Boston's Harvard University, California's Pacific Film Archive and points between.

RUDES, WHO IS in Texas this month visiting family and gathering local support for the workshop, will be contacting at least two Texas colleges about showing the French films, which include Agnes Varda's "Documenteur" and Caroline Roboh's "Clementine Tango."

These films aren't France's blockbusters, and they didn't cost millions to make. But they are beautifully crafted, thought-provoking, entertaining movies that probably would never have flickered across American screens without the special promotion the workshop provides, Rudes says.

"The first thing an American living abroad learns is that audiences in both the United States and France only get to see the biggies, only a fraction of what is produced in both countries," says Rudes, who holds a master's degree in film from Northwestern University.

"The only films really pushed in France are ones like 'E.T.' or 'Star Wars.' Smaller and more serious films never make it over here and the same is true for French films in America," he says.

Rudes believes the more French film Texans and other Americans get to see, the more they'll want to see. Film distributors and filmmakers will be able to use the Avignon workshop as a place to arrange for the import of new independent features, he says.

AVIGNON IS ONLY about 125 miles up the road from Cannes, the Riviera retreat for thousands of movie wheeler-dealers who meet to do business at the glamorous International Film Festival each year.

Although close in distance, Rudes says Avignon and his workshop are "light years" away from the Cannes festival in most other respects.

Avignon is small, an ancient, walled city of cobbled streets, tiled roofs and elegant decay. Cannes is France's answer to Miami Beach.

Cannes is flashy, palm-lined boulevards, luxury yachts and casinos. Avignon is home to one of Europe's most prestigious theater festivals.

Rudes believes his film workshop complements the fine arts ambience of Avignon just as Cannes' film festival suits that city's razzle-dazzle commercial splendor.

"We're like Cannes was 30 years ago," Rudes says. "We want to stay small, to be a place where people can come looking for films of intrinsic value and not for films of commercial, star or sex appeal. We're a sort of off-Cannes."

But the first workshop saw its share of commercial dealings, too. French distribution rights were sold for two American films, including "Brother From Another Planet," the latest production from John Sayles, director of "Return of the Secaucus Seven" and "Baby It's You."

SAYLES WAS delighted. He says Rudes' workshop has given independent producers another opportunity to market movies outside the mainstream.

And profits from film sales in Europe then can be reinvested in new productions, Sayles says, giving film fans in Texas cities like Dallas, Houston and Austin more choices at the box office.

Rudes hopes even more films can find distributors at the workshop already being planned for next year.

Nobody at this year's event questioned why the intense Texan was heading a major French cultural event. Rudes seemed equally comfortable talking television rights with a French movie star as trading chili recipes with a Texas tourist.

Officials seek Tamil man in Madras airport bombing

MADRAS, India (AP) — Police tightened security at airports in India and Sri Lanka Saturday as authorities sought a Tamil man in connection with the bomb blast that killed at least 29 people at the Madras airport.

Bomb-threat hoaxes delayed flights at Bombay and Bangalore.

Police and government workers completed what they called the "salvage operation" at the Madras international terminal, wrecked by the Thursday night explosion.

Police said two suitcases had been checked by a passenger on a flight from Madras to Colombo, the capital of Sri Lanka, and when they were found abandoned at the airport here they were taken to the customs area, where one exploded. They had been checked for flights on Air Lanka, the Sri Lankan government airline, to London and Paris.

Kumaraswamy Chockolingam, chief secretary of India's southern Tamil Nadu state, said police were looking for 28-year-old Marimuthu Kathiresan, a Tamil Nadu resident. He said Kathiresan had checked in the suitcases at the Madras airport and then disappeared, but officials "do not rule out the possibility of a foreign hand in the incident."

S.E. Piyasena, Sri Lanka's deputy high commissioner in Madras, blamed the bombing on Tamil separatists from Sri Lanka.

There were conflicting reports on the number of people killed by the explosion. Khushid Alam Khan, India's minister of civil aviation, said 29 people, most Sri Lankans, perished. Madras police said 32 bodies were found.

Chockolingam said 23 people were injured in the blast, five critically.

Sri Lanka is an island nation 17 miles off of India's southern tip. About 73 percent of its 15 million citizens are Sinhalese and 13 percent are Tamils.

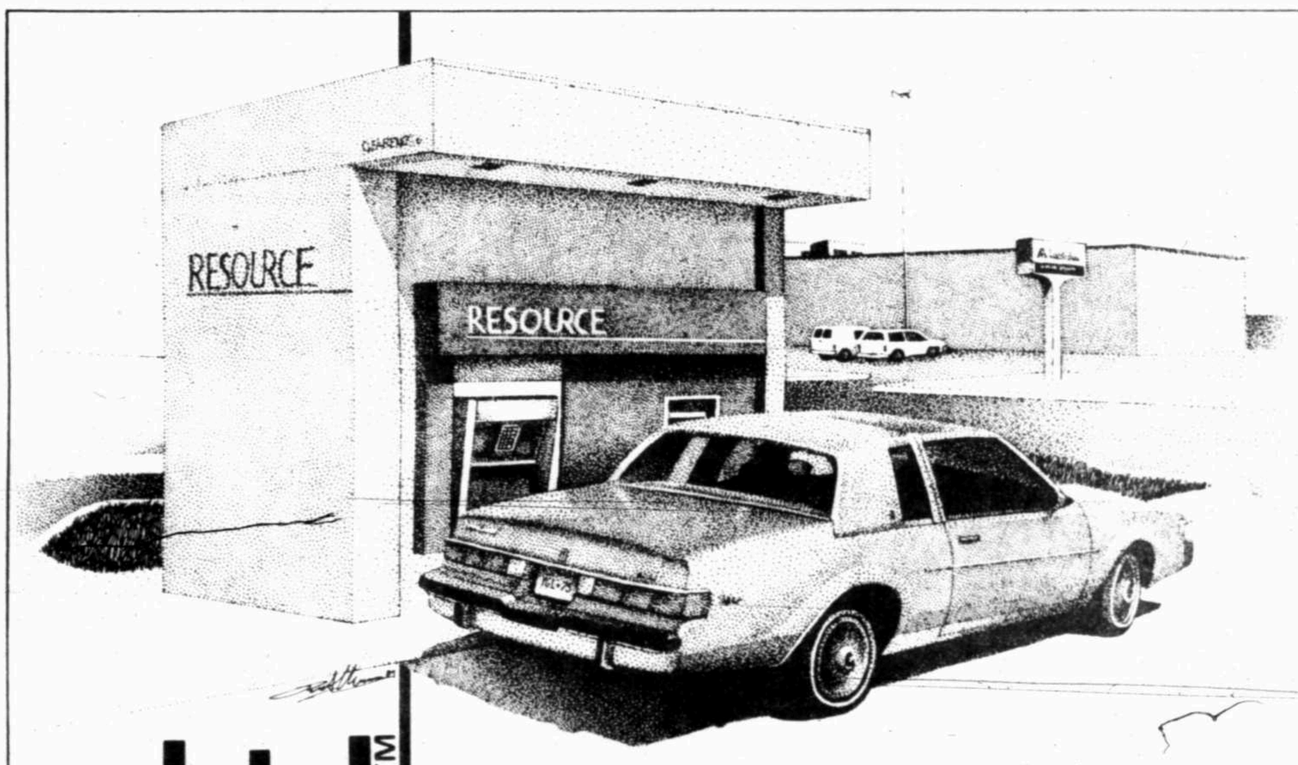

Tamil separatists have been fighting for several years for an independent homeland in the north of the pear-shaped island.

Madras is the capital of Tamil Nadu where some 55 million Tamil-speaking people live. Many support the Sri Lankan separatists.

Piyasena said the bombs were intended to explode either at the Colombo airport or aboard the Europe-bound Air Lanka flights that left Colombo late Thursday.

"It was a bullet meant for someone," he said. "You shoot it but it boomerangs and hits someone whom you never wanted to hit."

In Sri Lanka, Tamil separatist groups described the blast as "a despicable attack" on innocent citizens.

Lewis conquest begins as Olympic gold pours

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis took a giant first step toward Jesse Owen's historic Summer Olympic record Saturday, winning the gold medal in the men's 100-meter dash, then carrying an American flag in victory around the Memorial Coliseum track.

It reflected the success the United States has had in the 1984 Games, and it was no more evident than on this day when Americans won seven more golds and pushed their total to 36.

OTHER COUNTRIES were finding success, too, including Romania, China, Holland and Canada. They won a total of 11 golds in a day, with Romania getting six gold medals, including five in rowing, and China's Li Ning three in gymnastics.

But, as it has from last Saturday's opening ceremony, America dominated the Games. The excitement was evident.

It was displayed on a banner held by swimmer Steve Lundquist, after the U.S. team won the 4X100 medley relay in world record time:

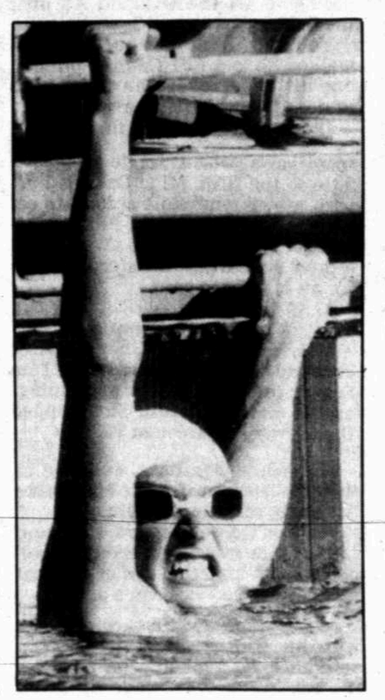

"America — thank you for a dream come true."

And it was displayed after Lewis' victory, the first of four chances he will have to match Owens' feat of a record four track-and-field gold medals in 1936.

Meanwhile, an Algerian and a Lebanese weightlifter were banned from international competition for life because they were found with illegal steroids in their systems after they competed in the Olympics. They were the first athletes to be hit for illegal drug use at the 1984 Games.

Lewis trailed out of the starting blocks, then accelerated halfway through the race and won going away in 9.99 seconds.

Afterwards, he skipped down the track, then grabbed the flag from a member of the huge crowd and carried it triumphantly around the Coliseum. He smiled and shook hands with fans.

Canada's Alex Baumann
...the world record shake

Swimmers Mary T. Meagher and Rowdy Gaines won their third gold medals and gymnast Peter Vidmar his second. The United States set a new world record in the 400-meter swimming medley relay of 3:39.30, with Gaines on the anchor leg.

With that victory in the final swimming event, the United States tied its Olympic record of 21 swimming gold medals, set in 1968.

Vidmar and Li each won gold medals on the pommel horse. They shared perfect scores of "10," and then shared the victory stand as first the Chinese and then the United States national anthems were played. Li added a gold on the rings. Earlier he had won the floor exercise.

The U.S. basketball team remained undefeated after five games. The U.S. men's volleyball team took over first place in its group with a four-game victory over China. Americans won gold in skeet-shooting and rowing.

Lewis' track teammate Edwin Moses won his 104th consecutive 400-meter hurdles race in the semifinals, at 48:51.

ROMANIA WON five gold medals in six rowing events, and Canada' Alex Baumann took his second gold and second world record in a distance swimming individual medley.

Jolanda De Rover of the Netherlands, won the women's 200 backstroke in 2:12.38. Amy White of Mission Viejo, Calif., was second and Anneta Patrascoiu of Romania was third.

Meagher, cheered on by some 20 members of her family, set an Olympic record of 2:06.90 in the women's 200-meter butterfly. But teammate Nancy Hogshead finished fourth, missing a chance for five medals — the most in the Games.

Meagher, who is one of four American triple-gold winners, earlier won the 100 butterfly and was a member of the winning U.S. 400 medley relay team.

Hogshead won the 100 freestyle and was part of the winning 400 freestyle relay.

Mike O'Brien won gold in the 1,500-meter freestyle in 15 minutes, 5.20 seconds, and George DiCarlo was second in 15:10.59.

Hogshead had won the gold medal in the 100 freestyle and a silver in the individual 200 medley and was a member of the gold medal-winning 400 medley relay team.

Baumann won the 220-meter individual medley after earlier winning the gold in the 400 individual medley, then said his times prove he's the best there is in those events.

"Medals are more important than records, but with the Soviet bloc not here, with the world records, there is no disputing I'm the best in the world," he said.

Baumann was timed in 2:01.42, beating his own mark of 2:02.25 that he set two years ago.

American Pablo Morales of Santa Clara, Calif., won the silver medal, his second of the Games. He also had won the silver in the 100-meter butterfly.

America continued to show it was best overall at the Olympics, raising its gold medal total to 36, two more than the number it won in the 1976 Olympics. The United States won 45 gold medals in both 1968 and 1924, and took 80 gold medals in the 1904 Games in St. Louis. That total was matched by the Soviet Union in 1980.

THE U.S. women's eight oars with coxswain won the other gold, its first in history.

The U.S. skeetshooting gold was won by Matthew Dryke of Columbus, Ga. The U.S. marksmanship instructor with he U.S. Army tied the Olympic record with 198 points.

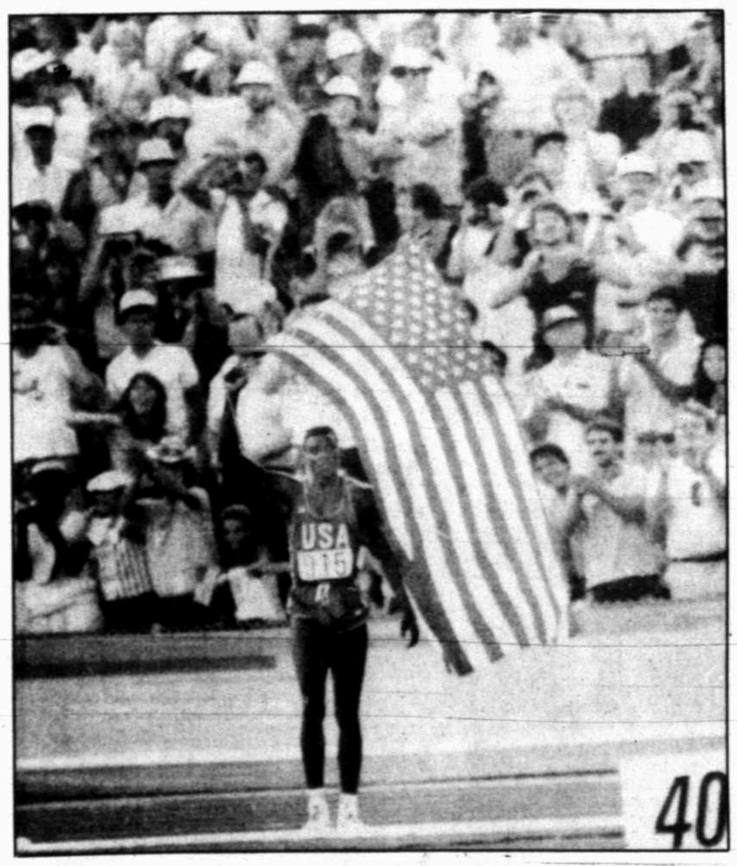

The U.S. men's basketball team swept to its fifth straight victory, defeating Spain 101-68 after holding a 46-41 halftime lead. Michael Jordan led the United States with 24, while Chris Mullin added 16.

While competition continued on the seventh day of the Games, a new Olympic queen was enjoying the first day of her reign.

Mary Lou Retton of Fairmount, W.Va., grabbed the gold medal Friday night in the women's all-around gymnastics competition. She edged Romania's Ecaterina Szabo with a perfect "10" on the vault, her final event.

She had an appearance on national television and journalists were scurrying for her every word. But the United States Olympic Committee was unable to set up a news conference, and no one was sure where Retton was.

The only Eastern bloc country that dared to attend the Games in the face of the Soviet-led boycott, Romania won as expected in rowing with a big, strong team.

Alan Williams sinks this birdie putt on his way to a three-way tie with David Pritchett and Harry Bettis after the first round of the Reporter-Telegram's City Championship golf tournament at Hogan Park. All three golfers had a first round score of 69.

City title up for grabs

Williams, Pritchett, Bettis all own 69

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Alan Williams, David Pritchett and Harry Bettis all shot first-round 69's to take the lead in the Championship Flight of the Midland City Golf Tournament at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Defending champ Bill Baker struggled on the back nine and posted a 72, three strokes off the pace. Baker is knotted with five others at 72. In second place is Bill Wampler, who recorded a 70. Four others are tied at 71 in the Reporter-Telegram sponsored event.

Pritchett recently completed his senior year at Midland High and narrowly missed gaining District 4-5A medalist honors. Pritchett's high school competition included two-time state champion Abilene Cooper.

Williams and Bettis are playing buddies from way back and occasionally team up, as they will next week in the Men's West Texas Championships in Fort Worth. But today, it will be winner take all. "Somebody's got to play with him," joked Bettis about the draw.

Bettis and Williams said that it would take a low round to insure victory. "A 66, 67 ought to get it down," Williams said. "But I don't think I can play that well."

Regardless of who wins, the outcome should hinge on some elementary principles: staying out of trouble and having the short game touch. "I was hitting my woods long and far," Bettis said amidst some friendly heckling after his round. "I hit the driver really good, the irons really bad."

"Just call him 'Mr. Steady'," observed one.

Williams played competitive golf a few years ago, but said his entry into the City tournament was his first time on the Hogan Park course in over three years. "It was either play or stay home this weekend," said Williams. "I just play to have fun now. If I play well, it's just that much more fun."

BAKER, THE defending champion, finds himself in a position similar to that of the 1983 City tournament. Baker came from four shots off the lead to tie for the lead on the final hole. Baker defeated runnerup Grant Spencer on the second hole of sudden death to take his second City title.

City Golf Scores, Pairings on Page 3B

The City tournament has a larger field this year of around 85 golfers, and the concensus opinion of the players gathered around the leaderboard is that the Hogan course is in excellent condition.

"The greens are in good shape," said Bettis. But the roughs are not. They were claiming victims Saturday. "You've got to be in the fairway," said C.E. Boyd, tied for third at 71. "If you don't drive it straight, it's over."

In the First Flight, Arthur Brown and Robert Wagner scored 73s to tie for the first-round lead. John Epley (74) is one back, and Joe Moreno had a 75 to nail down the fourth place spot.

Jesse Moreno carded an 82 to take the first-day lead in the Third Flight. Moreno had trouble on the 18th, taking a six, or he would have an even larger advantage. Don Rogers is two strokes back at 84, and Curtis Thomsen and Kenneth Evers are knotted at 85. The Third Flight will be divided into a Fourth Flight for today's final round.

IN THE Second Flight, 29 golfers are gunning for this year's crown. Roger Wright rode a 75 to take the early lead, followed closely by Stephen Baugh and Mingo Valencia at 76. Tom Standley is currently in fourth with a 77.

The back nine has been a killer for some. Ron Cunningham, Bill Johnson, Ray Ard and Kurtis Reese all came in after nine with 38's. Only Cunningham kept close on the back, however, finishing with a 43 for an 81.

Joe Childers in the Second Flight was dealt an unkinder fate. Childers started with a 39, then exploded for a 51 to rocket to 90. Reese dropped a dozen strokes between the nines.

"On the back nine, if you don't drive it well, you're dead," Bettis said.

Cowboys finally get in gear

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Fullback Timmy Newsome scampered four yards for a tie-breaking touchdown in the fourth quarter Saturday night as the Dallas Cowboys defeated the Green Bay Packers 31-17 in the first preseason game for both teams Saturday night.

With the score tied at 17, Newsome capped a 52-yard drive with 9:39 to go an d spoiled Forrest Gregg's debut as the Packers' head coach.

Rookie running back Johnnie Salters added the insurance touchdown with 2:35 left on a 3-yard run.

The two fourth-quarter Cowboy scores were produced by a team of reserve play ers and were directed by Gary Hogeboom, who dueled starting quarterback Danny White to a virtual draw in the Dallas quarterback battle.

NFL Exhibitions on Page 5B

Ed "Too Tall" Jones recovered an Eddie Lee Ivory fumble — one of three Green Bay fumbles — at the Packers' 32 and set up the Cowboys' first score, a 5-yar d touchdown run by Tony Dorsett in the first quarter.

White completed a 13-play, 94-yard drive with a 4-yard scoring pass to Ron Springs and Rafael Septien kicked the extra point to make it 14-0.

Green Bay tied the scored with two second-quarter touchdowns. The first was a 12-yard Lynn Dickey pass to wide receiver John Jefferson, and the second was a n 11-yard run by fullback Jessie Clark.

Septien and Green Bay's Eddie Garcia traded field goals to tie the game at 1 7 before Newsome's score.

White finished his half of play — the first half — with 11 completions on 18 attempts for 150 yards, the touchdown to Springs and no interceptions.

Hogeboom, who played the entire second half, completed 10 of 16 passes for 115 yards, no touchdowns and no interceptions.

Dickey left the game in the second quarter after completing nine of 15 passes for 146 yards and the touchdown to Jefferson. Rookie sixth-round draft choice Randy Wright completed 10 of 15 passes for 120 yards and engineered two of the Packers' three scoring drives. He also fumbled twice.

Padres sting Astros, 5-2

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Tim Lollar and Craig Lefferts combined to scatter 10 hits and Tony Gwynn, the National League's leading hitter, had three hits, including a home run, as the San Diego Padres defeated the Houston Astros 5-2.

Lollar, 9-9, allowed five hits and walked five in six innings, but held the Astros scoreless. Lefferts pitched the last three innings for his sixth save, allowing two runs in the ninth.

The victory was the Padres' ninth in their last 11 games and gave them an 8½-game lead over second-place Atlanta in the National League West.

San Diego took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Alan Wiggins drew a leadoff walk from Mike LaCoss, 5-3, took second on a single by Gwynn and scored on Steve Garvey's single.

The Padres made it 2-0 in the third when Wiggins again led off with a walk, stole second, took third on an infield out and stole home, the second time he has stolen home this season.

San Diego added two more runs in the sixth. Gwynn singled and took second on an infield out. Graig Nettles walked, bringing on Joe Sambito in relief of LaCoss. Terry Kennedy greeted him with an RBI single and Carmelo Martinez drove in a run with a grounder off Julio Solano.

Gwynn belted his fifth home run in the eighth inning off Vern Ruhle to make the score 5-0. His 3-for-3 game raised his batting average to .368.

The Astros scored in the ninth on Phil Garner's RBI triple and Jose Cruz's sacrifice fly.

Cubs 4, Expos 1

CHICAGO — Jody Davis ripped a two-run homer and Dennis Eckersley hurled 6⅔ innings Saturday to lead the Chicago Cubs past the Montreal Expos 4-1.

Eckersley, 6-6, gave up seven hits in winning his third straight game. George Frazier went the final 2⅓ innings for his first save.

Dodgers 5, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Greg Brock drilled a solo home run and Dave Anderson added a squeeze bunt as the Los Angeles Dodgers scored twice in the 11th inning to beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-3.

Brock homered off Tom Hume, 3-12, who making his first relief appearance in more than a month. Anderson's bunt came after Bob Bailor singled, stole second and took third on a passed ball.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 2

ST. LOUIS — Willie McGee delivered a two-run, two-out single in the seventh inning, snapping a 1-1 tie and giving the streaking St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

McGee's hit, his second of the game, came off Philadelphia reliever Larry Andersen, 1-2, who started the inning. The blow, which gave St. Louis a 3-1 lead, was McGee's third game-winner since coming off the disabled list last week and enabled St. Louis to win for the eighth time in the last nine games.

Giants 9, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Bob Brenly drove in four runs with a homer, double and two singles while Mike Calvert pitched seven strong innings for his first victory of the season as the San Francisco Giants defeated Atlanta 9-2 and ended the Braves' three-game winning streak.

Brenly's home run, his 13th of the season, came in the first inning after Chili Davis singled and staked Calvert, 1-1, to a 2-0 lead. Davis led off the third with a walk, moved to third on a single by Brenly and scored on a single by Scot Thompson.

Mets 4, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh reliever Kent Tekulve walked Hubie Brooks with the bases loaded in the eighth inning to force home the winning run and New York relief ace Jesse Orosco pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the ninth to preserve the Mets' 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

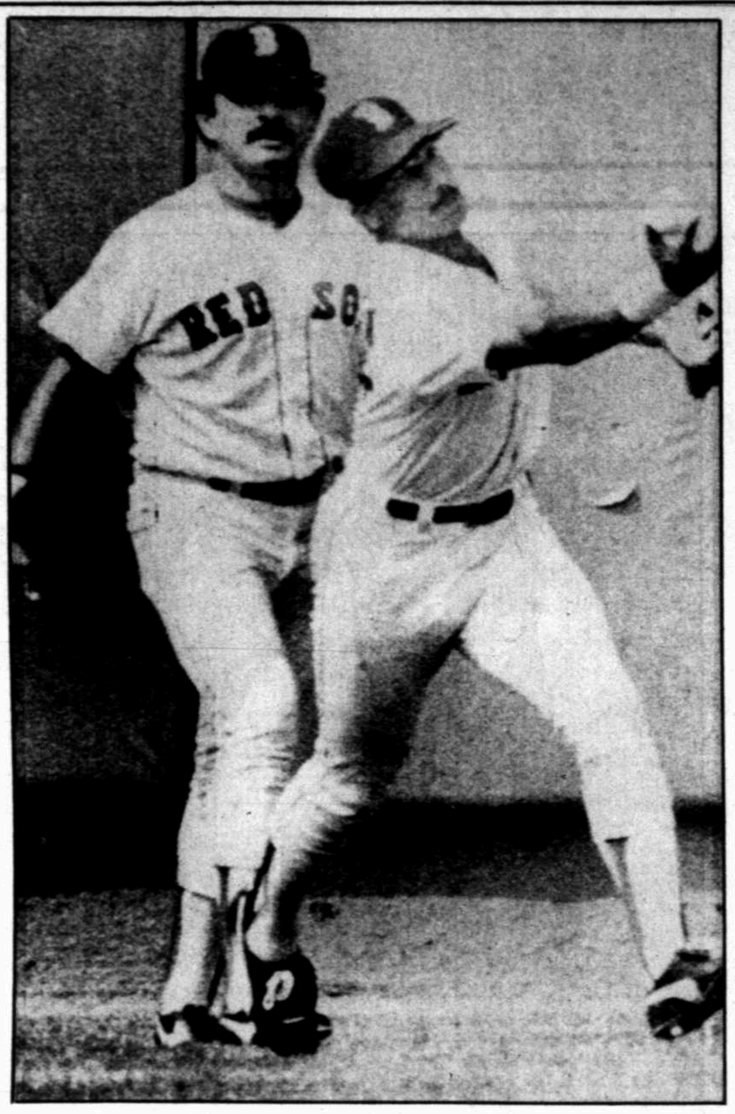

The victory was the Mets' second in a row after a seven-game losing streak and kept them one-half game behind first-place Chicago in the National League East.

With one out in the eighth, reliever Rod Scurry, 3-6, walked Keith Hernandez and Darryl Strawberry's pop fly fell in short left field for a double. George Foster was intentionally walked to load the bases, bringing on Tekulve. He fell behind Brooks 3-0 before walking him on a 3-1 pitch.

Pinch-hitter Rusty Staub fouled out to third baseman Jim Morrison down the line and Strawberry, who tagged up and tried to score on the play, was ruled out on an appeal for leaving third base too soon, making it an inning-ending double play.

Boston's Jim Rice bare-hands a double off the wall by Texas Ranger Gary Ward Saturday, but the Bosox defeated the Rangers by a 5-2 margin.

Bosox homers sink Texas

Associated Press

American League

Red Sox 5, Rangers 2

BOSTON — Dwight Evans, Wade Boggs and Jackie Gutierrez hit home runs Saturday in powering the Boston Red Sox to a 5-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Evans belted a two-run homer, his 21st of the season, in the first inning. Boggs hit his third to put Boston in front to stay in the third and Gutierrez drilled his second in the fifth. The three homers came off veteran southpaw Frank Tanana, 10-11, who was relieved by Dickie Noles in the sixth.

Winner Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 6-8, scattered six hits, struck out eight and walked only one. He gave up an unearned run in the first when center fielder Tony Armas fumbled Larry Parrish's two-base hit and allowed Gary Ward, who had singled, to score. The other Texas run came in the third on an RBI single by Buddy Bell.

Evans also had a double and a single for his 10th three-hit game of the season. Boggs scored three runs. Ward had three of Texas' hits.

The Red Sox scored their last run in the seventh as Boggs singled and took second on Evans' single. Boggs scored when Noles threw a wild pitch and catcher Donnie Scott retrieved the ball but threw it away for an error.

Royals 9, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Pat Sheridan lined a bases-loaded single following a 28-minute rain delay to key a four-run Kansas City rally in the sixth inning as the Royals beat the Detroit Tigers 9-5.

Joe Beckwith, 4-2, who took over from starter Mark Gubicza after 4⅓ innings, checked the Tigers on two hits the rest of the way for a combined seven-hitter. The Royals pounded five Tiger pitchers for 15 hits as Detroit lost for the fourth time in five games.

A's 4, Mariners 2

OAKLAND — Rookie left-hander Curt Young scattered four hits over 7⅓ innings and Joe Morgan cracked a tie-breaking single in the fifth inning to lift the Oakland A's over the Seattle Mariners 4-2.

Young, 4-1, struck out five and walked three. Bill Caudill pitched one-hit relief over the final 1 2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

Jim Beattie, 9-12, took the loss.

Morgan's two-out single broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth. Mike Davis led off with a walk and stole second to set up Morgan's hit. Tony Phillips tripled with one out in the seventh and scored on Carney Lansford's single for an insurance run.

White Sox 7, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Greg Walker cracked two home runs and Tom Seaver pitched seven strong innings as the Chicago White Sox stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 7-3.

The White Sox have won five of their last six games while Milwaukee has dropped seven straight.

Walker's homers, his 12th and 13th of the season, marked the second time in his last seven games that he has homered twice in a game.

Seaver improved his record to 11-6 with his fifth straight victory. The veteran right-hander, who now has 284 career victories, gave up seven hits, did not allow a walk and struck out three. Jerry Don Gleaton went the final two innings for his second save.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Cliff Johnson's tie-breaking single drove in the first of five runs in the sixth inning, carrying Jim Clancy and the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Clancy, 8-11, scattered eight hits in winning for only the second time in his last seven decisions. By winning their fourth game in a row, the second-place Blue Jays climbed within 9½ games of Detroit in the American League East.

Baltimore has now lost 10 of its last 16 games.

Yankees 8, Indians 5

NEW YORK — Don Mattingly blasted a three-run homer in the first inning and rookie Dennis Rasmussen pitched six innings for his fifth consecutive triumph as the New York stretched their winning streak to seven games Saturday night by defeating the Cleveland Indians 8-5.

Rasmussen, 6-3, allowed four hits and three runs before needing relief from both Mike Armstrong and Jay Howell in the seventh inning. Dave Righetti pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 19th save and seventh in his last seven appearances. He allowed a run in the ninth on Pat Tabler's sacrifice fly before retiring Mel Hall on a bases-loaded grounder to end the game.

Angels 4, Twins 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Reggie Jackson hit a three-run homer, the 495th of his career, to carry the California Angels to a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins and back into first place in the see-saw American League West.

Jackson's fourth-inning blow, his 17th of the season, snapped a 1-1 tie and lifted the Angels one-half game ahead of Minnesota as the disivion lead changed hands for the third consecutive night.

Randy Kissling, left front, held this lead over Clair Weber, right, to win the first annual Twin Cities Bike Race Saturday. Both racers finished the 23-mile course with an identical time of 58 minutes and 27 seconds.

Roberts engineers Memphis escape

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Loren Roberts engineered a great escape act from constant trouble then capped a hard-won round of 70 with a birdie on the 18th hole that left him with a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

"This is a trip in unchartered waters for me," said Roberts, 29, who never before has finished higher than 10th in a PGA Tour event and twice has lost — then regained — his Tour playing rights due to lack of performance.

"I've never been in the lead at this stage of a golf tournament before," said Roberts, who has led or shared the lead all the way in this one.

"I don't know what to expect.

"I'm not going to kid myself. I know I'll be nervous tomorrow," he said, then shrugged.

"Whatever happens, happens.

"I'm thankful I was able to hang in there today."

Roberts made a great save on the 17th hole then, moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day, wedged to four feet and made the birdie putt on the 18th that restored his one-shot lead over Bob Eastwood.

Roberts completed three trips over the 7,282 yards of rolling hills that make up the Colonial Country Club course in 207, nine shots under par.

The veteran Eastwood, who scored the first victory of his 13-year career earlier this season in New Orleans, had a 4-under-par 68 in the mild, cloudy weather and completed three rounds at 208, eight under par.

No one else was within five shots of the lead going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first pize.

Tied for third at 212 — four shots back of Eastwood — were Mark Lye, Curtis Strange and Tim Simpson. Lye and Simpson each had a 70 and Strange shot 71.

Rookie Willie Wood, one stroke back when the day's play started, was ambushed by a double bogey on the difficult 17th hole, shot a 75 and dropped back to 213, six off the pace.

Mary Lou Retton wrote her own golden script

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the heart of fantasy land, a poised and pressure-proof Mary Lou Retton wrote her own script.

Retton, the 16-year-old gymnast with the size three feet and extra large heart, Friday night became America's newest and toughest sports princess.

Retton overtook Romanian star Ecaterina Szabo with perfect scores in her final two events to capture the all-around gold medal in women's gymnastics at the Los Angeles Olympics.

Retton, built like a fire hydrant and gushing with competitive spirit, trailed the talented Szabo by .150 going into the final two apparatus tests. Knowing she would need to be perfect to catch the Romanian, Retton feasted on the pressure.

"I knew I was going to have to hit them both," she said about her routines in the floor exercises and vault. "But I work best under pressure."

Retton went for broke on the floor exercise, putting on a dazzling display of somersaults and backward flips, just barely keeping her miniature feet inbounds on her second set of somersaults.

She got the perfect 10.00 she needed and, with Szabo coming up just short of perection with a 9.90 in the vault, Retton clearly had the Romanian in her sights.

With the capacity crowd at Pauley Pavilion urging her on, Retton moved to the vault, her strongest event. She didn't give pressure a chance to find her. Collecting her concentration, Retton pounded down the runway with the speed and determination of a fullback looking for a seam to the end zone.

"I knew I had it. I could tell by the run I was going to stick it," said Mary Lou of the vault that made her an Olympic champion and the first American woman to achieve such a peak.

For the unshakeable Retton, winning the gold medal turned out to be a piece of cake compared to the road she took to Los Angeles.

Six weeks ago, Retton underwent surgery to repair torn cartilage in her right knee. The surgeon, Dr. Richard Casperi, told her she was out of the Olympics.

Bela Karolyi, the former Romanian national coach who now is Retton's personal tutor, detailed Retton's comeback.

"After all the work and all the training, she was told it was all over. A month a before the Olympics and she couldn't walk, Karolyi said."

Within a week after the surgery, Retton was back on her feet. "We didn't do any double backs or somersaults that first day, but the next day she was on a bicycle, working, sweating like a madman," said the ever demonstrative Karolyi.

"In a week she was tumbling again and her recovery was so fast and so complete the doctor finally decided it was a medical miracle," Karolyi said.

Szabo, who took the silver medal, conceded Retton had "performed very well" on the vault.

How were the grades?

In many cases, school performance is not up to par simply because of lack of challenge. In public schools, large classes have often resulted in bored and uninterested students which in turn, results in less than satisfactory grades

Acceptance into major universities requires today's high school graduates to be the products of a superior education. Allen Academy has been challenging students for almost one hundred years and this year all graduates were accepted to four-year universities.

This year, consider a complete education for your children. Allen Academy is a non-military, co-ed college preparatory school with a boarding program for young men in grades 8-12. We offer superb academics (with most instructors holding Masters' Degrees), small classes, and many planned activities.

There are limited openings in the 1984-1985 boarding program and we invite you to consider Allen Academy before you register your child in another school. An investment in education is an investment in the future.

Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon gets a new greeting to the NFL from Tampa Bay defender Lee Roy Selmon.

Associated Press

Michael Morton raced for 106 yards on 12 carries including a 45-yard sprint to set up a go-ahead touchdown as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers defeated the Houston Oilers 30-17 in a see-saw preseason battle as NFL teams opened the exhibition season.

Tampa took a first-half lead of 13-3, but Houston, led by backup quarterback Oliver Luck, came back with a pair of third-period touchdowns for a brief 17-13 lead before the Bucs put the game out of reach in the fourth quarter before a small crowd of 32,774 at Tampa Stadium.

Million-dollar quarterback Warren Moon, who joined the Oilders during the offseason after six highly successful years in the Canadian Football League, left the game at the half after being sacked once and intercepted twice.

In a lackluster first half, Tampa's Bill Capece kicked field goals of 42 and 20 yards, and quarterback Jack Thompson connected on a 17-yard scoring play with Jerry Bell.

Houston's lone score was a 30-yard field goal by Florian Kempf.

Houston used all three quarterbacks, but Luck took command in the third period, marching the Oilers 70 yards to close the gap to 13-10, setting up a two-yard plunge by running back Stan Edwards.

Then Houston capitalized on a fumble by Tampa's backup quarterback Steve DeBerg on the 48 and went 52 yards with running back Larry Moriarty diving over from the one to make it 17-13.

In the fourth quarter the Bucs turned two mistakes by Houston into touchdowns and added a 35-yard field oal by backup kicker Obed Ariri. Houston's Brian Ransom fumbled at midfield. Tampa linebacker Danny Spradlin recovered and on the next play Morton raced 45 yards to set up a one-yard dive by James Wilder to put the Bucs on top 20-17.

Ariri added a three-pointer before rookie linebacker Keith Browner recovered a fumble by wide receiver Kevin Baugh on the Houston 28. Four plays later, DeBerg rolled out and scored on a 17-yard keeper to put the game away with 5:11 left to play.

Rookie Boomer Esiason came off the bench to throw two touchdown passes and the Cincinnati Bengals went on to a 21-15 victory over New York in a game marred by a serious injury to Jets wide receiver Johnny "Lam" Jones.

Jones, whom the Jets had been counting on in their long passing game, broke his collarbone trying to catch a pass in the first period and will be lost to the team for between eight and 10 weeks.

Esiason, the Bengals' second-round draft choice from the University of Maryland, played near-flawless football in his NFL debut, completing nine of 10 passes for 133 yards in less than two quarters of work. He first hit Rodney Holman with 21-yard TD pass early in the second quarter, then completed a 22-yarder to Rodney Achter in the third period for a 21-8 lead.

In his official debut as a starter, quarterback Ken O'Brien completed 14 of 27 passes for 166 yards, but he was sacked six times by an aggressive Cincinnati defense. The Bengals recorded a total of eight sacks.

Bengals free safety Bryan Hicks suffered an arm fracture and will be lost to the team indefinitely. In addition, Cincinnati cornerback Louis Breeden hurt his ankle on the play that knocked Jones out of action.

In other preseason openers, Miami quarterbacks Don Strock and Jim Jensen both threw touchdown passes and Andra Franklin added a scoring run as the Dolphins defeated Indianapolis 24-3 in the Colts' first game since they abandoned Baltimore.

Ex-Dolphin David Woodley, battling for the right to succeed the retired Terry Bradshaw, threw two touchdown passes and ran for a third in the second half to power the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 31-14 victory over the Cleveland Browns. It was the Steelers' 14th straight victory in preseason openers.

Veteran Ken Stabler, battling to keep his starting job, took New Orleans in for scores on its first two possessions and Jimmy Rogers got two quick touchdowns in the third quarter as the Saints defeated the Kansas City Chiefs 34-20.

A pass from Matt Cavanaugh to tight end Earl Cooper set up Ray Wersching's 23-yard field goal early in the final period and the San Francisco 49ers held on to down the NFL champion Raiders 13-10 after Los Angeles' Chris Bahr missed a 35-yard field goal in the closing minute.

Joe Theismann and Jim Hart each fired a first-half touchdown pass as NFC champion Washington took a 16-0 halftime lead and the Redskins hung on for a 16-13 victory over the Denver Broncos.

Running back Rick Kane scored on a 1-yard burst with 36 seconds left in the game to lead the Detroit Lions to a 17-14 come-from-behind victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.The score capped a 75-yard, 12-play drive and a second-half Lions comeback in which Detroit scored 17 unanswered points.

The Cardinals also staged a comeback, as reserve quarterback Rusty Lisch directed two touchdown drives and St. Louis added a pair of fourth-quarter field goals to overcome a 10-0 deficit and defeat the Chicago Bears 19-10.

Minnesota's Les Steckel won his debut as head coach as Archie Manning completed 11 of 13 passes for 131 yards and Tommy Kramer five of seven for 82, steering the Vikings past the Atlanta Falcons 37-6.

The San Diego Chargers scored two touchdowns in 1:47 of the third period, including one on a 57-yard interception return by Danny Walters, to take a 17-10 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

In a later game, Buffalo visited Seattle.

Reform worth it

Back when the Texas Legislature was getting ready to talk school reform we pointed out that it would not be unexpensive. But we weighed the anticipated costs of instituting a number of reform measures against those of making no changes or only superficial changes and determined that Texas' school children would be a lot better off with the reforms.

Then the Legislature did the unexpected and actually enacted a school reform bill in the special session. The price tag is about what we had expected: High.

What happened in the Legislature was needed. Declining test scores and graduating seniors unable to perform basic educational skills were indication enough of that need. But now, as the saying goes, it's time to pay the piper.

Midland school trustees are now pondering an increase in the local school tax rate of nearly 8 cents — actually 7.59 cents — per $100 valuation. They say that would bring in enough additional tax revenue to overcome the loss of state funds while maintaining the quality of education now being offered by Midland Independent School District.

MISD and a number of other school districts across the state will be losing some of the state money they have received heretofore because of an equalization provision that funnels more tax money into poorer school districts and less into wealthier districts. What that means is that districts like MISD have a choice: Increase local school taxes or cut school programs.

Locally, the district will not be receiving some $620,000 from the state it has received in the past. By way of the tax increase, school officials say that tax shortfall can be made up and no programs will have to be cut.

Already the school district has taken steps to minimize the impact of the revenue shortfall. Slots for 8½ additions to the personnel and staff of the district will not be filled, school officials indicate, and already school trustees have trimmed this year's proposed budget by nearly $700,000.

As additional justification, it should be noted that MISD has gone above the state-mandated increase in teachers' salaries in order to remain competitive in attracting teachers to this district, which is a primary concern, and that about 80 percent of the school budget is consumed by salaries. Interestingly, MISD's per student cost is just about equal to the statewide average, but is almost $500 per student less than the average for Region 18 of which Midland is a part. Of the 32 school districts in Region 18, only six spend less per student than MISD.

None of that changes the fact that MISD needs this tax increase if it's to maintain the level of educational programs. Neither does any of this alter the fact that the education reform measures were needed in Texas.

All it means is that education's going to cost a little more in Midland now. We believe this tax increase is justified.

Another View:

Changing the future

With a few choice words Congress can bypass the muddle over war against satellites in space that grows worse with each shift in position by Moscow and the White House.

The Reagan administration is of two minds about meeting in Vienna this autumn to discuss banning or limiting the deployment of weapons capable of shooting satellites out of orbit. The president has adopted his defense advisers' view that the Soviets would cheat on any treaty that outlawed satellite-killers. But his political advisers have argued successfully with him that negotiations, or even the hope of negotiations, during his re-election campaign can only help the Reagan cause.

Because two minds are better than none, the White House is nicely better off than Moscow. Soviet leaders clearly want to head off an arms race in space or they would not have asked for talks a few weeks ago. But they obstinately resist the one concession that would make negotiations possible, a wide-open agenda covering both satellite-killers and the more pressing threat of Earth-based warheads.

Congress, with two pieces of legislation in hand, can and must sidestep the public-relations war and focus on keeping weapons out of space.

It could adopt the approach of Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., approved on a 94-0 vote by the House; he would suspend the testing of American satellite-killers as long as the Soviets held to their own moratorium on the further testing of their system, a crude device that has failed so many tests that it could not be counted on in a crisis anyway. Or it could adopt a Senate bill by Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., a more complex approach calling for "good-faith" bargaining with the Soviets and a persuasive case by the administration that further testing is in the national interest.

The requirement for a showing of national interest would be even more difficult to meet than that of bargaining in good faith. The United States is far more dependent for information on its satellites that peer down on the closed Soviet society than are the Soviets on theirs for monitoring U.S. defense efforts worldwide. Under the circumstances it is hard to make a case that the national interest will be served by stampeding the Soviets into designing a system that would improve their ability to blow U.S. satellites out of orbit.

Nor can the administration argue that going through with plans for satellite-killers would make U.S. satellites safer. The system being tested cannot protect its own orbiting capsules but can only shoot down someone else's.

Both houses of Congress have cast lopsided votes against rushing into an arms race in space, but there is one vote to go. The bills that would slow down the U.S. satellite-killers are amendments to the larger defense budget on which House and Senate are several billion dollars and several major weapons systems apart.

If necessary, Congress should separate the issues. Congress cannot by itself change the history of nuclear forces. It can and must find the choice words to change the future — which, unless Congress acts, inevitably will be cocked, aimed and ready to explode.

Mexico tightens rein on press

WASHINGTON — One sure sign of a healthy democracy is a feisty, demonstrably independent press. An ostensibly democratic government that can't stand criticism and fosters an environment that discourages a free press with bribes, beatings and bullets, will soon extend its repression to the public at large.

Jack Anderson

That's one reason I'm concerned about the direction in which the Mexican government seems to be heading. When my associate Dale Van Atta and I reported recently on high-level corruption in Mexico, the supposedly reform regime of President Miguel de la Madrid tried desperately to keep Mexicans from reading the columns.

Copies of the Washington Post were seized at the Mexico City airport by federal police. A garbled version of the critical columns later appeared at the end of stories that extensively quoted Mexican officials' denunciations of me and my associate as "enemies of Mexico."

Now I've been told that the president of the Mexican legislature's Foreign Relations Commission, Luis Dantos Rodriguez, is considering legal action, including a bill that would bar Van Atta and me from Mexico. The way things are going south of the border, we may be lucky.

Consider the murder of Manuel Buendia, 58, an investigative reporter. His syndicated column, "Private Network," appeared five days a week on page 1 of Excelsior, a large Mexico City daily, and in 200 other newspapers.

Though his attacks on the high and mighty were sometimes shrill and not fully documented, Buendia's instincts were good. His targets included corrupt oil workers' union officials, the former police chief of Mexico City, the former head of the national oil monopoly (now in jail), and a far-right group called Los Tecos, which I linked earlier this year to death squads throughout Central America.

On May 30, just after he had delivered a column on alcoholism and social deterioration in Mexico, Buendia was gunned down by an unknown assailant on a Mexico City street. The recipient of many death threats, Buendia was known to carry a pistol, but he was evidently taken by surprise.

In acknowledgment of Buendia's popularity, President de la Madrid and other high officials attended the funeral. The president called Buendia's murder "unspeakable," and ordered the attorney general to investigate.

Buendia's murder was a rarity — but only because few Mexican journalists are willing to take the risks he did by criticizing the establishment. The relationship between the press corps and the ruling PRI party, which has held power for decades, is most often described as "cozy."

Many reporters have come to depend on government stipends or bribes to supplement their meager salaries. De la Madrid gave orders to stop the practice after he took office in late 1982, but the payments were quietly resumed a short time later.

Two other Mexican journalists have been killed recently in suspicious circumstances. One was Javier Juarez Vasquez, editor of a critical weekly in the southern state of Veracruz. His mutilated body was found the day after Buendia was shot.

Despite the clear risks, there are still a few gutsy reporters in Mexico. One of them, Eduardo Moreno, a syndicated columnist, conducted a lengthy interview with me — but could find no newspaper with the courage to run it. The report finally ran, in part, in Proceso, one of Mexico's most outspoken liberal magazines.

The Mexican government doesn't hesitate to use its official powers to discourage dissent in the press. One method is to reward favorite newspapers with the lucrative official advertising — and to withdraw or withhold it from papers that step out of line.

Another effective control technique is simply to shut off an offending newspaper's imports of newsprint. As one Mexican wrote me: "The government has control of everything and the reprisals (for criticism) would be tremendous. The newspapers ... are in constant fear of having their paper supply canceled."

The same correspondent expressed amazement that the Mexican press acted "so hurt" by my criticism of Mexican presidents, "when every single day we read stupid comments of (theirs against) the president of the (United States)."

A confidential CIA analysis may explain this double standard: "Mexican leaders have a palpable need to perform in an ostentatiously independent manner toward the U.S. ... Mexico's military defeat by the U.S. and loss of huge territorial expanses, as well as its continued economic dependence on the U.S., make Mexicans hypersensitive about any sign of subservience to Washington."

One courageous American reporter learned firsthand how dangerous it is to criticize the Mexican authorities. Scott Lind, of the McAllen (Texas) Monitor, had been detailing workers' protests at a Zenith plant across the border in Reynosa, and returned to take pictures. Police escorted him back across the Rio Grande.

When Lind returned for his car, he was handcuffed, taken to the city jail and later transferred to a federal facility where he was blindfolded and tortured for four hours. He was beaten with fists and shocked with an electric cattle prod. Finally he was forced to dictate a preposterous "confession" that he had kidnapped and raped one of the Zenith workers.

GEORGE F. WILL

Anne could have been President!

WASHINGTON — A breeze from an unexpected quarter, and of unknowable force, is blowing through American politics because of the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro. So this is a suitable moment — for some Republicans, a melancholy moment — for recalling a footnote in political history that might have been a momentous chapter.

Eight years ago this month Gerald Ford came, he says, "very close" to picking a woman for his running mate.

A few hours after narrowly defeating Ronald Reagan in the convention roll call in Kansas City, a meeting began in Ford's suite. Ford, as many winners of nominations have done and with more excuse than most (he had been in an absorbing struggle with Reagan), approached a last-minute decision about his vice-presidential choice.

He had just returned from Ronald Reagan's hotel where, smarting from the bitter battle, he did not try to talk Reagan out of his announced refusal to consider the second spot. (Ford says he later learned that Reagan's friend Justin Dart had labored mightily — and successfully — to get Reagan to agree to take it if it were offered. But a condition of the meeting with Ford, a condition demanded by Reagan aides, was that the subject not come up.) Ford asked Reagan's opinion of six persons: Bill Simon, John Connally, Bob Dole, Howard Baker, Elliot Richardson, Bill Ruckelshaus. Reagan said Dole would be an excellent choice.

Other persons who, in the preceding months, had been interviewed by Ford aides included Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa and Gov. (now senator) Dan Evans of Washington. And the former counselor to President Nixon, then ambassador to Great Britain, Anne Armstrong. When the meeting began at 3:15 a.m., Ford recalls, the list had been winnowed to a "final four": Baker, Dole, Ruckelshaus, Armstrong.

Sen. Bob Griffin of Michigan, Ford's convention floor manager, was ardently for Armstrong, as was Mel Laird. So was Stuart Spencer, a Californian who had helped Reagan win California's governorship, then helped Ford defeat Reagan, and today is a leading light in Reagan's re-election campaign.

Armstrong's assets were that she is smart, tough, a Texan (a rancher) and could do for Ford, who was not considered electrifying, what Ferraro has done for Mondale, who is not considered long on electricity. That is, she could make his candidacy considerably more exciting.

The Democrats' convention had come first, and the first poll taken after it showed Carter with a 33-point — no, that is not a misprint: 33 — lead. Ford, a former football player, was thinking, with regard to Armstrong, that when you are far behind in the fourth quarter you throw caution to the wind and start throwing long passes.

In the meeting Ford was reticent, allowing advisers to think aloud until the meeting broke up at about 5 a.m., scheduled to reconvene at 9 a.m. Bob Teeter, the Republican pollster, was there and recalls thinking that a one point Amstrong was in the lead. But Sen. John Tower of Texas had the feeling at 5 a.m. that Ruckelshaus was winning.

Ruckelshaus' role in Watergate (he resigned rather than implement Nixon's order to fire Archibald Cox, the special prosecutor) was his principal recommendation. The hope was that choosing him would undo some of the damage done to Ford by the pardon of Nixon. But Ruckelshaus was in private industry in Washington state and did not have a political staff, so he could not, as the politicians say, "hit the ground running."

Between 5 a.m. and 9 a.m. conservatives ralled 'round Dole. Some persons who were there believe Ford had always been leaning toward Dole. He had worked with him in the House, and knew him better than the others.

Teeter believes that 1982 was the "watershed year when it became an advantage to be a woman." In 1976, polling date indicated that resistance to a woman (not Armstrong in particular) among traditional Republican voters might match gains among other voters. But in his memoirs Ford wrote, "In retrospect, if given the opportunity to make that decision again, I might well have said, 'Damn the torpedoes,' and gambled on Anne."

Had he done so, he probably would have carried Texas. (Carter carried it with 51.1 percent.) The choice might have (I think would have), in Spencer's words, scrambled "the demographics" enough to win. Ford thinks it might have helped him carry Ohio and Pennsylvania. Either state, with Texas, would have elected Ford.

Vice President Armstrong probably would have been the Republican presidential nominee in 1980, running against...well, probably Ted Kennedy. Today she might be seeking her second term.

ART BUCHWALD

If you're poor, open your mail!

If there are a lot of poor people in America it's their own fault. Every time I open my mail someone wants to GIVE me money. The letters are addressed to me personally. Some enclose checks, and others certificates, bonds and coupons.

Art Buchwald

Let me give you an idea of what my mail was like yesterday. I received one letter from an insurance company that was willing to pay me $1,000 a month for the rest of my life if I came down with ANY kind of illness. I didn't even have to take a medical examination. "Yes, Mr. Buchwald," the writer said, "all you have to do is get sick and you will receive $1,000 a month no matter what your state of health is at the present time."

The next letter was from First National Bank of Wilmington, Delaware. Thomas Campenni, the president of the bank, was offering to deposit in my account $50,000 as a line of credit, with no collateral up front, which I could use at my own discretion. To show me he meant business he was even offering me an immediate cash advance of $2,500 and a personalized checkbook which I could use against my account.

You can imagine how surprised I was to get this letter. For one thing, I've never lived in Delaware, and to my knowledge have never met Tom. But somehow he took a liking to me and decided he would trust me for 50 big ones, without me having to set my foot in his bank in Wilmington.

I was about to send for the money when I glanced at the next envelope. It was a biggie. On the front was a great cellophane window which said, and I'm not making this up, "ART BUCHWALD SHALL BE PAID ONE MILLION DOLLARS IN CASH -- GUARANTEED IN EQUAL ANNUAL INSTALLMENTS OF $50,000.00 AND PAYMENTS MAY ACTUALLY DOUBLE TO TWO MILLION DOLLARS." There was a nice sketch of Ed McMahon on the envelope so I ripped it open.

Well, it was just as simple as it sounded. I had been assigned nine exclusive PERSONAL prize numbers and if I sent in the Gold Label I was eligible to participate in the American Publishers Sweepstakes. I would be guaranteed the money if one of my numbers had already been drawn. In a personal letter, Ed said that he would give me the check for the one million himself. I didn't have to subscribe to any of the magazines that Ed was pitching, but he indicated I'd be a fool if I didn't.

Now unlike Thomas Campenni, I do know Ed McMahon, and he's a very frugal guy. Ed doesn't throw that kind of money around unless he means it. So I immediately sent in my prize-winning numbers to him and I guess it will just be a matter of time until Ed will send for me to give me my first down payment.

The other mail was peanuts compared to McMahon's letter. One brokerage firm sent me what looked like a U.S. Treasury Bond which would go in my portfolio as soon as I opened an account with them. Hertz mailed me a PLATINUM card which guaranteed a brand-new car would be waiting by the ramp when I got off my private plane at any airport in the United States. American Express enclosed a Gold Credit Card and informed me they had upped my credit to $25,000. A computer company wanted to send me $2,500 worth of software as a gift if I bought one of their micros, and a publisher wanted to know how many books he could send me FREE if I joined his First Edition Club.

As I said, this was a typical sampling of my mail for one day. It wasn't a bad haul, but nothing out of the ordinary. On some days companies want to send me gold bullion from their vaults; other days I get digital watches from Indian reservations, and last week I got two free airline tickets from a real estate development company in Orlando, Fla.

There are thousands of firms and individuals who keep offering me something for nothing, and only a fool would not take advantage of their generosity.

So show me a person in this country who is always crying poor, and I'll show you someone who doesn't open his mail.

Gardener digs for source of inferiority complex

Modisett

Gardening is supposed to be fun. Isn't it?

Then why is it giving me an inferiority complex?

At first I thought it probably had something to do with those gardening magazines. You know the kind I'm talking about — they're chock-full of photographs of lima beans, asparagus, jalapeno peppers, tomatoes so red they make you blush and yellow squash so creamy that you stare in awe. The fold-out is always of some lush garden that obviously has never seen a weed.

Those magazines always feature articles about a gardener who casually remarks to the writer: "This little ol' garden spot heah is where I come to relax. I just luv gardening cause it's sooo easy!"

You know the kind. Never get their hands dirty, never has a squash bug problem, rarely has to water or dig weeds. In other words, they have nothing in common with us mortals.

Well, I tried to blame my gardening disillusionment for a long time on those magazines. I told myself I was simply letting the photographs get me down. Sure those vegetables were beautiful, but the photographers surely were using color filters and darkroom "tricks" to enhance the color of their photographs. The tomatoes are probably tasteless and the zuchini tastes like cardboard.

I mean every year I do exactly what the gardening magazines say a gardener should and my garden still turns out mediocre at best. OK, maybe not quite mediocre. How about below par? Not enough, huh? Tragic? Closer, I guess.

Then one day it dawned on me that both my fascination with gardening and my dismay over my mediocre harvests was a direct result of my upbringing. Don't get me wrong. My father is really a wonderful person — loving husband, devoted father, doting grandfather. But he is also one of those gifted individuals who can grow anything. He is the type of person typically described as having a "green thumb." Only in Dad's case it's an entire hand, arm and shoulder.

Dad grew up growing things. He grew things because...that was what people did. If you didn't raise an extensive garden back in those days, you didn't really eat well anytime. So he did and he excelled at it. He knows the soil and plants inside out, upside down and when other gardeners fail, he succeeds. He may not have a degree, but his knowledge of growing things would make some horticulturists green — with envy. Dad's a gardener in the true sense of the term.

Well, through no fault of my own I acquired his love of the soil. Maybe it was because I watched his love affair with the soil for so many years, his unrestrained enjoyment from bringing forth life. A little of that joy apparently rubbed off on me.

Not his gardening skills, though. Everytime I visit my parents the topic of gardening comes up — Fall, Winter, Summer or, that desperate season, Spring. He asks, "How's your garden?" or "Did your squash make?" or "Are you going to plant onions this spring?" and all the haunting memories come rushing back.

My mind immediately goes to parched soil, squash bugs, puny, yellowish tomatoes and potato plants that have nothing beneath them but their roots. I'm a total failure as a gardener even though I try as hard as I can.

It's not Dad's fault. I would never blame him for my failure as a gardener. When gardening talent was passed around, I must have been hiding behind a head of lettuce or something. But even if I can't do anything about my lack of gardening skills, I can do two things that will make me feel a little less paranoid.

One is to stop reading those silly gardening magazines with their "doctored" photographs. The other is to buy a can of green spray paint.

Trudeau's leadership can't be called 'able'

As a Midlander with Canadian roots, I wish to respond to your editorial titled "The Battle is Joined" which appeared in the July 20th Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The theme and text of the editorial is excellent with the exception of the final sentence. This sentence states that Canada has a long record of able leadership.

I wish this had been the case. Under the 16-year-tenure of Pierre Trudeau's left-wing Socialist-Liberals, the country is economically depressed with, as you noted, an unemployment rate of 11.2% and a per capita national debt twice as large as that of the U.S.

The country is seriously divided, East against West, French-speaking against English-speaking, and a "do nothing Senate" which consists of disgraceful political patronage appointments by Trudeau's Liberals.

Canada's current depressed state affords the United States an excellent opportunity to review the results of a long-term left-wing government by Liberals.

Certainly there is a lesson to be learned by both countries. Let us hope that their Sept. 4th general election will result in a return to free enterprise, a fair East/West balance, and an uplift of the morale of our partner to the North. It's been a long time coming.

Why do Americans buy filthy magazines?

The recent events in San Ysidro make the problems of Miss America seem rather small. However, I do have some things on my mind about this.

I in no way approve of what Miss Williams (Miss America) did. I personally cannot understand why any woman would put herself in that situation, but what I understand even less is why people bought that slimy, filthy magazine. Why didn't they show support for Miss Williams by boycotting that magazine. Why don't we boycott all the filthy crud that's on the stands today.

Are Americans the filthiest-minded people in the world? Why do we need these magazines? Do they contribute to world peace? Do they deter crime?

It nauseates me.

Midlander appreciates policemen's diligence

At some time or another all people have a gripe with our local government and city employees. I am a small businessman and have been for three years. I have lived in Midland for 11 years, and have no desire to live anywhere else.

I own and operate a used car lot at 410 E. Florida in Midland. In the three years I have been in business I have had three vehicles stolen and all three recovered.

The last instance was July 30, when a 1977 Mercury disappeared sometime July 29. Through the diligence and hard work of patrolman R. Sartor and Sgt. Frank Bartlett, the vehicle was recovered July 30 saving me a substantial financial loss.

I am writing this letter to say thanks to the Midland Police Department and these men in particular.

Reagan has delivered on campaign promises

The Democrats harp on and on about fairness, how bad things are in the country, and how the cold and callous Ronald Reagan is responsible for all of the misery in the world.

When Ronald Reagan was elected, he didn't promise a chicken in every pot, nor did he say everyone would be rich at the end of his term. He told the American people that he would bring inflation under control, lower the interest rates, and create new jobs. In addition, he pledged to rebuild the strength of America and restore her respect abroad. In his 1980 debate with Jimmy Carter, Reagan asked the critical question: "Are you better off today than you were four years ago? Is it easier to go to the store and buy things?"

Ronald Reagan is a leader. He has been a president who has genuinely done his best to carry out his promises, and, in my opinion, he has done an outstanding job. Despite attempts by the Democrats to abort the economic recovery by spreading gloom-and-doom forecasts for the future, the economy continues to grow at a rapid but sustained rate.

Inflation is at its lowest rate in years. Interest rates are much lower than the record levels of the previous administration. Best of all, more Americans are working today than ever before in history. There are other good things in America, Summer of 1984: There are no gas lines; our people aren't being held hostage on foreign soil; and, though this one can't be measured, there is a new feeling of optimism about the future. Gone are the days of malaise and the so-called crisis in confidence that supposedly inflicted our people.

Let the Democrats keep talking about how bad things are. The majority of us are tired of that. We're looking to a future that is bright and more prosperous. Ronald Reagan has earned the right to be our leader of another four years.

Cabbage Patch doll returned to family

One night recently we went to the Courthouse and Spa to play racquet ball. That night our little girl said she was taking Andrew, her Cabbage Patch doll so she could play with him.

As we were leaving the spa we didn't notice we didn't have Andrew. So early next morning our little Denise woke up asking for Andrew. Her older sisters started looking for him and couldn't find him, so they called me at work all worried and Denise was crying that she couldn't find the doll.

I started thinking that someone already had taken him and that we might not see that doll anymore. So I called the Courthouse and Spa, hoping that the doll was there, and asked the man in charge if by any chance someone had turned a Cabbage Patch doll in last night. He said yes, that he had it under the counter.

I called to tell Denise about Andrew. She was a happy little girl. Now she can see that there are people that are really honest.

We are proud to be members of the Courthouse and Spa. This lesson taught us that people are good, and that honest people live here in Midland.

Again we would like to say thank you John, Shelie and the rest of the crew of the Courthouse and Spa and the members for showing our girls that being honest is best think to do.

Headline on taxes deserves comment

We all realize we must have taxes at all levels to operate. But the headline appearing on section C page 1 (City prepares to build up budget) deserves a comment.

Since the city stated the tax "base" has increased from one billion to three billion since 1981, surely the tax intake would be three times greater.

A writer in a letter to the editor on the same date expressed his opinion that the reassessment was unreasonable.

It is difficult for me to understand this move and all other people I have talked to.

I have always believed that a house will deteriorate in years to some extent. I will take my house for instance. The tax board increased its value by $20,000 and by market the house has lost face value of at least $10,000.

I would like some comment on this matter.

Midlanders can join in homosexual union

Midland, a progressive, growing city that we are proud of. Here the heartbeat of America can be felt. Besides being a pulse center for not only American, but international business, we are also a conglomeration of cultures; north, south, east and west converge here in Midland to grow, raise families and become successful in their chosen fields.

Yes, in Midland you can be as free as the proverbial American dream. Now, even you can legally marry someone of the same sex. I was truly relieved to read in the July 21st edition, on Page 3C, that the Unitarian Universalist Assoc. voted "overwhelmingly" to approve "the growing practice of its ministers of conducting services of union of gay and lesbian couples."

I mean hey, let's get it out in the open. What's wrong with traditional Amerian values? This country was founded on personal freedom. Think about it, at anytime up until about 1960, any good American would have approved of this type of action. Just like abortion, (code name) its time has come.

Of course, we here in Midland don't have an abortion clinic. We're a little too "proper" for that. (And there's always Odessa or Lubbock). Statistics say that there are ten families available for every aborted child. And the legal abortions, since our Supreme Court made that illustrious decision, number about 16 million.

But, back to the subject. We have some serious legal questions here. Such as who will be filling out the spaces on the marriage certificate application for husbands? For wives? Will they have to have a blood test? And, if they don't, why should we? And, of course, there's the matter of adoption, or even artificial insemination. I'm sure that almost any family, where the parents were killed or died, would not mind if a nice, responsible homosexual couple adopted their children, to be raised in the normal, Christian, American way.

Some may wonder how I am able to sit in judgment of this matter when surely my life is not everything it should be. Well, it goes back to two things I can recall vividly. One, when I was kid, any known homosexual was completely ostracized from society, i.e., expelled from school, ruined in business, maybe even thrown in jail, right or wrong as that may be. And, from the currency of the United States of America, the slogan "In God We Trust." If that is true, then the Bible, being God's word, must have validity. Read I Corinthians 6:9.

I do not believe that all change is progress. I think that as responsible Americans, we should make our thoughts known. This is a freedom, but more importantly, it is a duty of the citizens of this country. I think, fellow Americans, that we have almost reached the point of no return, and that serious thought should be given to this and all other matters before going to the polls on Nov. 4th. Most of the time, although some would believe otherwise, political issues and moral issues are the same thing.

So, vote your conscience, and keep an eye on the "Lifestyle" sections of the paper for the first "service of union" in Midland.

SPEAKING OUT

Cancer-free world now seems possible

By JIM CHASE

Jim Chase, president of the Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society, has lived in Midland five years. He came to the Tall City from Houston and has been president of the local chapter of the American Cancer Society the last two years.

When the American Cancer Society first set as its goal the elimination of cancer, the day of a cancer-free world seemed distant, indeed. We knew very little about its cause, and even less about how to treat it. Now 70 years later, the dawn of a cancer-free day seems less distant. We are winning in the fight against cancer.

The research challenge is huge, but its outlines are now visible. Cancer is no longer considered an insurmountable problem. Research has paid off in advances in treatment and sophisticated methods for detecting cancers in their early treatable stages. Exciting discoveries in basic cell and molecular biology provide promise of progress to come.

In 1984, we estimate that 450,000 people will die of cancer — 1,230 a day, almost one person every minute. Every year, more than a million Americans are being treated for cancer. However, many lives are being saved. There are over five million Americans alive today who have a history of cancer. Today, almost 50% of cancer patients will be alive five years after diagnosis.

But with the knowledge and skills now available, millions among those statistically marked for cancer can be saved. This depends upon prompt detection and effective use of treatment skills.

There has been a noticeable change in the public's attitude toward cancer. Once a disease that could not be mentioned in public, cancer is now talked about, written about and thought about more than any other health issue. Public education has helped to create a nation more aware, more informed and more concerned about health than any in history.

Of equal importance in saving more lives from this disease is the acceptance of personal responsibility. By making a personal commitment to learn more about cancer and become educated about its detection and treatment, individuals can take actions to reduce their risks of cancer. It now becomes evident that individuals must play a key role in the fight against many of the forms of cancer. Two leading forms of cancer illustrate this.

For example, individuals can greatly reduce their risk of getting lung cancer by not smoking. Cigarette smoking is responsible for more than 75% of lung cancer in men and women. The cancer death rate in men who smoke is double that of non-smokers, and the rate for female smokers is 30% higher than for non-smokers. Because lung cancer is very difficult to detect early, a personal decision whether to smoke or not, plays an important role in one's risks for lung cancer. Nearly 2 million Americans choose to stop smoking every year.

Smoking also has been implicated in cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, pancreas and bladder. Smoking accounts for almost 30% of all cancers.

Cancer of the colon and rectum is second only to lung cancer in terms of incidence and is one of the most curable forms of cancer. When detected early and treated promptly, over 75% of all such patients can be cured and are able to return to normal lives. Through knowledge of cancer's warning signals, early detection techniques and routine regular cancer-related check-ups individuals can be diagnosed early with an excellent change for succesful treatment.

In 1984 Midland will have an estimated 2923 cancer cases under medical care, 135 Midlanders will die of cancer, and 21,000 will eventually develop cancer.

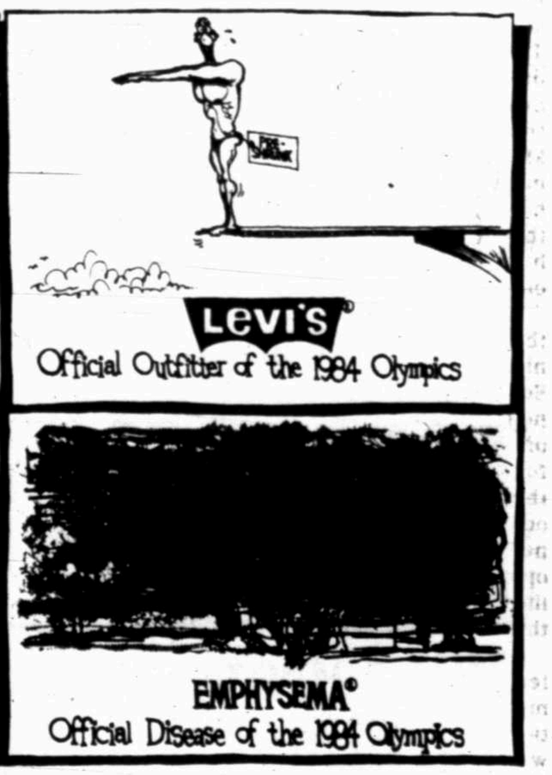

We are fortunate to have many fine health professionals, medical and cancer treatment facilities, and organizations dedicated to the service and rehabilitation of cancer patients in addition to the American Cancer Society. I urge everyone to take an active part in the fight against cancer by individual health action and community service. Whether your interests are in public speaking, education, working with the media or health professionals, fund raising, service or rehabilitation of cancer patients, there is a place for you in our community's cancer control effort.

As much as has been accomplished in cancer control, it is not enough. It will never be enough until the day we can truly say that we have beaten cancer — completely and irrevocably. It will not be easy but we will see that day. We are winning!

Olympic Games offer relief from summer torpor

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON, Calif. — Most folks are on vacation these days and I thought that I'd follow President Reagan's lead and take a little respite of my own out here. About the only real break in the summer torpor is the Olympic Games in Los Angeles where American athletes are harvesting a 1984 California gold rush.

Those Olympics, boycotted by the Soviet Union and nearly all their lockstep allies, set most of the world agog with incredible opening day ceremonies and will last right through next Sunday. President Reagan attended the opening day's remarkable Olympiad, tapping his feet to tuneful music echoed around the world. He also received sprightly Nadia Comaneci, Romania's gymnastic sensation of the 1976 games in Montreal, and applauded the Romanian team as it marched around the amphitheater, the only Soviet-bloc country to ignore the ban demanded by Moscow.

A remark I found interesting was voiced by Secretary of State Shultz. Watching the athletes and the crowds touch each other affectionately, Secretary Shultz observed: "Eat your heart out, Chernenko." That was for Konstantin Chernenko, boss of the U.S.S.R. who not only refused to have Soviet athletes participate but stays strangely obstinate in the face of all American desires to open a dialogue about outer space and perhaps other issues. The Soviet Union simply repeats "Nyet" to any of our proposals.

Not only are the Soviets nasty to us but they've begun to behave beastly toward Communist East Germany, to date most loyal of the Kremlin satellites. Soviet leaders don't care for the cozy co-existence between their East German clients and capitalist West Germany. They're scowling in print at East German comments wishing their athletes were competing, like Romania, in the XXIII Olympiad.

Bernard D. Kaplan, Hearst European correspondent, pinpointed the sour Soviet mood about the East Germans. He also reported that Europeans, always quick with a sneer at the American penchant for pizzazz, used Hollywood-style tributes to describe the ceremonies and the games. The Paris daily, "Le Figaro," summed it up with a headline: "Quel Show!" ("What A Show!")

It sure has been that, and beamed around the world for good measure. Even the Soviet media are printing results following "popular demand" by telephone. They're beginning to learn: If you can't beat them, join them. Give it a try, Chernenko.

Sophomores go to State

ODESSA — Midland's Eastern Kiwanis won the District II Sophomore baseball title here Friday night with a 6-1 victory over Odessa Jico in the finals, earning with the victory a berth in the State Sophomore tournament in Lewisville next week.

Eastern rolled through the tournament with four straight victories, allowing opponents only three runs and six hits in all four games.

Eastern will now play Red Oak at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday in Lewisville in the first round of the eight-team state tournament.

Eric Boyt tossed a two-hitter against Jico in the finals, striking out nine, and Tommy Manson hit a three-run homer in the fourth to break open a 1-1 game.

Boyt also had a two-hitter with 15 strikeouts in a 7-1 victory over Odessa Rotary in the first game of the tournament. Kevin Wallum followed with a 4-0 two-hitter against Andrews in the second game and Nicky Sanchez produced a no-hit, 8-1 victory over Odessa Western National Bank to put Eastern in the finals.

Hugh Boyt is the manager of the team and Jim Stanton is the coach.

Eastern's advancement to the State meet gave Midland a taste of history. For the first time, Midland has four baseball teams as the state level of playoffs in the same summer. The Sophomores, North Central Little League, the J.I. O'Neil Shamrocks of the Hi-Junior league and the Midland senior league champions all gained state berths this year in boys baseball.

The Midland seniors will play its state tournament at Cubs Stadium, beginning Monday.

MSA closes out season

From Staff Reports

The Midland Softball Association crowned two champions last week to conclude it's annual summer session, with Stanley's Exxon and Dorland winning men's and women's titles, respectively.

Stanley's Exxon knocked off C&C Classics 12-3 to close out a banner season. The tournament was set up in a double elimination fashion, similar to the format used in the College World Series. Stanley's cruised into the finals with no losses while C&C had a tougher road. They first had to beat fourth place Fashion Floors 9-1, then got past third-place Stadium Sports 11-9.

Dorland beat Kittiwake 8-7 in the finals of the women's division. Dorland spoiled Kittiwake's fine year with a Monday night, 12-3 win over them to gain the finals. Kittiwake beat third place Curley's Inspection, 4-3 on Tuesday.

Curley's eliminated fourth pLace Industrial Oils, 4-3 on Monday.

The MSA distributed a horde of trophies last week during the finals competition. In all, 96 team trophies and 360 individual trophies were presented to the tournament entries. This summer, the MSA coordinated 24 separate leagues in the summer session. The tournament fielded 17 men's and seven women's teams in their playoffs. On the year, 48 men's and 21 women's teams took part in one of Midland's favorite recreational sports.

Randy Tanner of Stanley's Exxon and Cedie Martin of Dorland were selected MVPs of the tournament.

Trophies went to each member of the all-tournament team. For the men, those winners were Fashion Floors' Bill Robertson; Stadium Sports' Jeff Hatfield and Mike Timmons; C&C Classics' Louis Berlanga, Louis Lopez, and Mack Galan; and Chuck Kirkham, Ed Stewart, Jim Basilone, and Gordon Awtry of Stanley's Exxon.

For the women softballers, Leslie Wood of Industrial Oils was selected all-tournament along with Mary Alice Sanchez and Roxy Wise of Curley's Inspection. Kittiwake placed Sherry Stokes, Sandy Alvarado, and Sharon Rudolf, and Dorland choices were Liz Watson, Donnie Davis, Schilla McCalister, and Ann Whiteker.

In the consolation bracket of the tournament, Gilbert and Son of the men's division beat Marathon P2, 14-4 in the finals, while Steward Cable Repair downed RK Petroleum 4-3 in the women's consolation.

Plans are already under way for the fall season that begins Sept. 10. An organizational meeting is slated for Aug. 16 at 7:00 p.m. at the Midland Center for those interested in participating in the fall league. There will be a 14-game schedule and leagues for men's women's and co-ed teams.

In addition, the MSA is busy making final preparations for the 1984 American Softball Association's national women's class A slow-pitch championships to be held here Labor Day weekend. Approximately 50 teams from around the nation are expected, including the powerful, seeded Kelei Jets from Hawaii.

Historic Freight runs in $600,000 gallop

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Historic Freight earned more than $600,000 Saturday by winning the Hambletonian, America's most prestigious harness race. But he could have been had for $35,000 just two months ago.

The 3-year-old colt, unraced as a 2-year-old because of his habit of kicking the walls of his stall, won the third heat of the classic race to force a final three-horse raceoff with Delvin G Hanover and Gentle Stroke. He then went wire-to-wire as driver Ben Webster set a slow pace to win the raceoff.

But on June 6, he was entered for $35,000 in a claiming race at the Meadowlands, meaning any registered owner could have purchased him for that price.

"I knew he wouldn't fit in a class race here and I thought we'd take our shot one time," said trainer Skip Lewis, for whom Historic Freight was the first Hambletonian entry in 21 years as a trainer.

"I know he could have been taken, but those are the chances you take in life," said owner Arthur Brown, whose ABC Stables in Fort Lee, N.J. are literally in the backyard of the Meadowlands.

"We had a horse with a 3,000 percent discount and nobody believed us."

Lewis said the day after the claiming race, which Historic Freight won by nearly four lengths, he received offers for twice the claiming price. But he said he and Brown decided to reject them.

Webster, who had been banned from the sport for a year after allegations of race fixing that were finally dismissed in the courts, put Historic Freight right to the front of the final three-horse heat, made up of the winners of each of three previous races.

Then he set a crawling pace around the one-mile track, passing the first quarter in 29 2-5 seconds and the half mile in 1:00 3-5, a pace more worthy of the cheapest horses than the best-3-year-olds in harness racing. He finished in a slow 1:59 3-5.

Hot Chestnut roasts San Antonio, 6-3

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO— The Midland Cubs only outhit the San Antonio Dodgers 7-6, but that was enough as the Cubs posted a 6-3 victory here Saturday night.

Leading the brief but effective Cub hit parade were rightfielder Darrin Jackson and leftfielder Antonio Cordova. Both rapped out two RBIs and Jackson had a pair of hits, and Cordova slapped a two-run double in the four-run Cub sixth.

As has been the case lately, starter Troy Chestnut turned in a solid performance on the mound. Chestnut, who pitched well in his last outing against Jackson despite allowing three consecutive home runs, went seven innings and surrendered only four hits. The 22-year-old South Carolina native fanned five and walked three.

For San Antonio, old Cub foes Cecil Espy and Gilbert Reyes accounted for all of the Dodger attack with two hits apiece. Reyes knocked in one San Antonio run.

The Cubs and Dodgers resume action tonight in the third of a five-game Texas League West Division series with Larry Hrynko due up on the mound.

Midland lost the series opener 4-1 Friday night.

The Cub victory lifts Midland to 18-22 on the second half schedule and pulls them closer to the Dodgers. San Antonio is now only percentage points ahead of the Cubs with a 19-21, and second place El Paso is only 20-20. Division leading Beaumont is running away with the Division in the same fashion that gave them the first half crown. The Gators are 29-11.

Odessa woman sentenced in attempted murder case

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Jurors deliberated for more than eight hours before settling on a three-year sentence early Saturday morning for the 22-year-old widow of the man killed during a undercover drug bust in which two narcotics officers were wounded.

Jana Denise Matheny, on trial for attempted aggravated capital murder in the 70th District Court, was found guilty of the lesser included offense of attempted murder for her part in the shoot-out which left her husband dead and two officers wounded.

More than six hours of deliberations brought the eight-woman, four-man jury to the guilty verdict. About 4:30 a.m. Saturday morning, they decided Ms. Matheny should serve three years in the Texas Department of Corrections as punishment for the Dec. 9, 1982 wounding of two officers attempting to force their way into the motel room where she and her husband were transacting a drug deal with another undercover officer.

The 22-year-old defendant still faces an indictment for delivery of cocaine, stemming from the same incident. A third alleged conspirator, 31-year-old Gerald Leon Hardin, has been indicted for delivery of cocaine and attempted capital murder, and faces future prosecution.

The Mathenys were in the midst of what they were supposed to believe was a drug deal for about $8,000 in cocaine with OPD Det. Steve Frederick when Ms. Matheny noticed Officers Phil Harrold and Jim Dickson trying to gain entrance to the room at the La Quinta Motor Inn, 5001 E. Highway 80 in Odessa.

In the gunplay that followed, Frederick fatally wounded Matheny, who died at the scene. Harrold, an OPD narcotics officer, was struck by a bullet that came through the door, but has not been recovered. Dickson was struck by a bullet fired by Frederick.

The jury's decision to find the defendant guilty of attempted murder suggests they sided with defense attorney Dan Sullivan's arguments that the Mathenys had no idea that Frederick, Harrold or Dickson were police officers. As is the common custom with narcotics investigators, none of the three were in police uniform.

All three officers testified they identified themselves, but only Dickson's statement verified their recollections in court. Ms. Matheny's official statements and testimony indicated Frederick said only "Stop right there," before the shooting began and that she did not hear anything from the officers outside the room door.

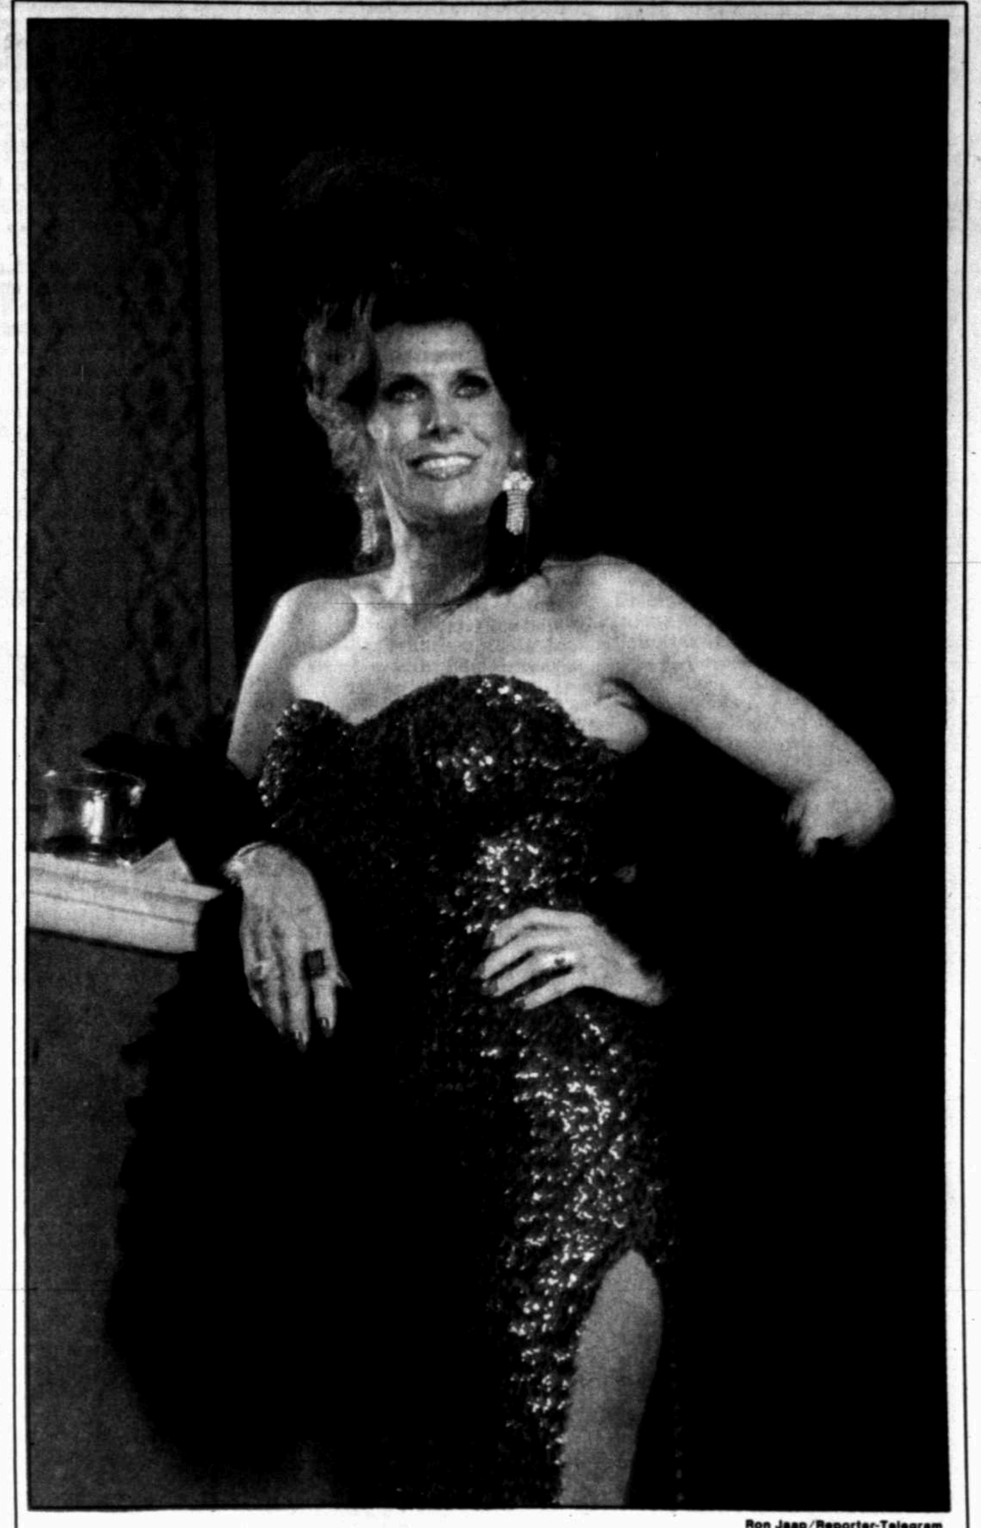

A DPS narcotics officer who was outside the room when the gunfire began testified he had not heard the officers identify themselves before the shots from inside dropped them to the pavement. DPS Det. Gary Hilton said he was about to take Hardin — who was waiting in a pick-up truck outside the hotel — into custody, when the shooting started.

Hardin, also known as Kelly Grandstaff, took this opportunity to make his escape from the scene, firing through a shattered back window as he sped away through a vacant lot adjacent to the parking lot. Det. Jerry Smith, who led the pursuit, said the pick-up went airborne in clearing a bar ditch at the beginning of a chase about 3 p.m., Dec. 9 through neighborhoods in the vicinity of the intersection of U.S. 80 and Loop 338.

Hardin was apprehended when his truck, the body bullet-riddled and one tire completely gone, stopped over a curb in front of a residence on Tanglewood Dr. when the engine failed.

Notice of appeal was made, and Ms. Matheny was released on $15,000 bond.

The jury at one point sent a note to Judge Gene Ater asking if they could turn the sentencing portion over to him, but eventually arrived at a decision. One juror continued the deliberations after learning his mother, who had been on life support systems since Tuesday, died Friday.

Nixon resignation recalled

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

This country is indefatigable. Its heart never skips a beat. It plods forward, sure-footed, over the rocks and hills and valleys of daily events. Its spirit cannot be destroyed, but it has been hurt.

Ten years ago, that spirit fell to a low point as President Richard Nixon sought to dig himself out of his problems that started with a break-in at the Democratic national headquarters. On Aug. 9, 1974, Nixon resigned the presidency — the first time in history the leader of this country left in disgrace.

Never skipping a heartbeat, the nation began healing its wounded spirit. The resignation brought sighs of relief from many Midlanders, both Republican and Democratic. And the Republican Party which Nixon had represented bounced back stronger.

Bob Monaghan was one of the few people to support Nixon even until the end. Ten years ago, Monaghan was Midland County Republican chairman and he had hoped Nixon would stay on to fight. A member of the State Republican Executive Committee today, he contends someone within the CIA had purposely "bungled" the break-in to get rid of Nixon.

"It was bungled too clumsily not to be planned to be bungled," he said.

"I HAD A LUMP in my throat when I watched it on TV," Monaghan recalled. "I was mad at him for what he did — covering up for (Bob) Haldeman and (John) Erlichman. I never did like those men. They had a big part in Watergate. Nixon had false loyalty to people he shouldn't have had."

Williams in interesting company

"It was quite an honor. There were no lightweights in this deal."
— Clayton Williams Jr.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

He sat there with President Jimmy Carter and T. Boone Pickens and Gov. Martha Layne Collins and John Travolta. He was surrounded by physicists and doctors and corporation presidents.

But it didn't seem to faze this man whose life began in a small town in West Texas. He had pulled himself up by the boot straps to become head of a privately-held corporation with $1.2 billion in annual revenues. And that wealth today is reflected in an empire glittering at the corner of Big Spring and Wadley streets.

Clayton W. Williams Jr. was among 50 persons honored at the 23rd annual banquet of the Golden Plate in July at Minneapolis. The Golden Plate Award has been given since 1961 by the American Academy of Achievement to extraordinary and inspiring "exemplars of excellence" in the great fields of endeavor. These men and women are chosen by the academy's Awards Council as "representatives of the many who excel," according to a book published on the award. Previous winners have included Gene Autry, Jack Anderson, Andrew Young, Red Adair, Lawrence Welk, Tom Landry, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Armand Hammer, Gen. Omar Bradley and Judge John J. Sirica.

The academy also recently expanded the acknowledgements to include a salute to 300 high school honor students from all 50 states. During the weekend in Minneapolis, those who have already achieved a high mark in their lives shared their secrets with those whose working lives are only just beginning.

"IT WAS AN outstanding experience interacting with the top students and the top achievers of the country," said Williams. "It was quite an honor. There were no lightweights in this deal."

Only four persons of the 47 winners who spoke to the students received standing ovations: Jimmy Carter; Ted Turner, founder of Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., and Cable News Network; a former winner; and Williams. The wealthy rancher-oilman-businessman, in his Texas drawl, talked frankly to the students.

A newspaper story once described the force behind Williams' accomplishments as "fun." That, he told the students, is exactly what they should consider in deciding what to do with their lives.

You're not over the hill if you can dance around it

Midlander in Profile

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Susie Hitchcock was sitting in the bar at Harrigan's one recent Friday evening when some men dressed in black wheeled a casket up to her chair and invited her to get in.

She declined, but did accept a ride in their hearse. It led a funeral procession to her house, where a somber group of mourners presented her with a black wreath which read "Happy Birthday, Susie."

Then the party began.

Not every woman celebrates her 40th birthday as the guest of honor at her own funeral. Not every woman celebrates her 40th birthday at all. But Ms. Hitchcock takes a different approach to the aging process.

"I used to think that when you reached a certain age, you were over the hill. Wrong."

Susie Hitchcock is Midland's answer to Jane Fonda. She teaches dance classes, choreographs TV shows and performs in community theater productions, and for nine years she has donned a flashy red sequined dress and played the vamp in Summer Mummers.

When not vamping onstage at the Yucca Theatre as "Odessa Delilah," Ms. Hitchcock serves as president of the Women's Health Club at the Central YMCA and on the boards of Crime Stoppers and Clean Midland, among other civic activities. In her spare time, she holds down a job selling sound systems for clubs and office buildings.

"And I also produce Summer Mummers," she adds.

Right. She also produces Summer Mummers. She even does work for Ducks Unlimited, a group which raises money to save marshlands in Canada. But most of her civic activities are less obscure, especially her stage appearances, which often border on the spectacular.

"My first show was 'Anything Goes,'" says the statuesque Ms. Hitchcock. "I played Virtue, and my one line was 'I have been cursed with sex appeal.' My friends tell me I've been typecast ever since.'"

Ms. Hitchcock has been a fixture in the Midland theatrical scene for 10 years, since she returned to Midland from Lubbock, where she had lived since graduating from high school.

"I was one of those people who grew up in Midland and couldn't wait to get out," she says. "But once you leave, you realize what you're missing."

Her return to Midland coincided with her renewed interest in dancing and theater, which had fascinated her as a child. In Lubbock, Ms. Hitchcock had concentrated her energies on raising her two boys. But by the time the family moved back to Midland the boys were older and she was ready for new challenges.

"In Lubbock I was having babies, staying home and getting fat," she says. "I guess I came here and changed my attitude because I discovered what I was capable of doing."

She started taking dancing lessons and working backstage at the community theater. Today, she's a dance teacher and a producer in her own right. In fact, this is her fifth year as producer of Summer Mummers.

Sometimes we need that 'attitude adjustment'

The scene was familiar. It was a bar. A large one, but there were only a handful of people scattered about at the various tables. It was a Tuesday night, as I recall.

A couple of what appeared to be "regulars" were bellied up to the old wooden bar and were carrying on good-natured banter with the woman serving drinks. It was harmless enough and she seemed to enjoy it.

An older couple was seated at a table in the far corner. They were eating hamburgers, drinking beer and watching The Olympics on one of several TV sets in the place. They laughed a lot and cheered when an American gymnast won a gold medal, which I thought was nice.

At a booth just across from my table, a woman and two men were talking in loud voices. I listened.

It was a delightful conversation. All three chain-smoked and cussed a lot but somehow it wasn't offensive. The woman was having personal problems. She seemed bitter because the recent raise she had received was smaller than she had anticipated. She said she was going to take a few days off for "attitude adjustment."

I smiled. Yes, indeed. There comes a time in everyone's life when a little attitude adjustment is absolutely mandatory.

Her companions were offering a wide variety of suggestions and advice. One guy in particular talked a great deal about himself, mostly about his past experiences which, I must admit, sounded very exciting. Of course, barroom talk has a tendency to get exaggerated as more rounds are ordered. And they were ordering more rounds.

About that time another man walked in. He appeared to be in his late 30s. His face showed early signs of the "weathered look." As they say in the music business, he had paid his dues. Or, at least it appeared he had.

He was alone. As he entered he glanced around, apparently giving his eyes a chance to adjust to the darkness. He nodded to the bartender and selected a booth across the room from me. A waitress took his order. It was a longneck beer.

He stared blankly at nothing in particular. I studied his actions, but was unable to determine if he was unhappy or just terribly bored. It was hard to tell.

He just sat there, lighting one Winston off another. Occasionally, he would gaze at the TV set but it didn't seem to interest him. Nothing did.

For some reason, I felt sorry for him and became almost obsessed with finding out why he was down in the dumps. My brain, which was somewhat tangled itself at the time, raced. Maybe he had just lost his job. Or his wife had left with the kids and credit cards. Perhaps he was new to town and still friendless. Maybe he wanted companionship but didn't know how to go about finding it.

He ordered another beer and I continued to be intrigued. I considered approaching his booth and striking up a conversation, but quickly ruled it out. I was never very good at that sort of thing.

So I watched. He was becoming fidgety, mindlessly twirling the ashtray with his index finger. I wondered again what he was thinking, but this time I was certain it had something to do with him being hurt. Call it a gut feeling on my part. He had that unmistakable look.

Finally, he took one last glance at the TV, laid some cash on the table and headed out the door. He left just as he had entered. Alone.

I wonder where he was going.

WILLIAMS

When he was their age, he didn't know what he wanted to do with his life. He thought of becoming a cowboy. Then came the idea of being a dentist. But an uncle warned that dentistry "limited your ability to what you can do with your own hands." He studied animal husbandry at Texas A&M University and became an insurance salesman in Midland. But he remembered some words of advice: "The people that have done the best in the business world have done it using other people's abilities."

And that's what he began doing — enticing others to use their abilities to make money for themselves and for him.

"IF I MAKE money, my people make money," he said. "I've tied my employees — my 'hands' as we say in the oilfield — to net profits. If a man or a gal does a good job for me, she shares in the profits of that venture." He told of nine or 10 employees who have become millionaires by working hard for Williams.

After leaving the insurance business, Williams started a gas company in which he brokered oil and gas leases. Then he started a small gas company and "had a little natural gas discovery." He built a pipeline to nearby farmers and sold them "better quality gas at a better price."

Then he enticed people to invest in his company, in his wells. "Some hit, a lot of them failed," he said of those wells. Williams broadened his interests into other fields, all the while bringing on board employees who were experts in those areas and letting them handle that part of the company.

"I was always depending on these key people. Motivated, honest people with a high degree of integrity with my interests at heart. I couldn't have done it without them," he said.

"I don't run those businesses. My key people run them and treat these businesses like their own. If there's a key to success it's my people."

And all these people like their job, he added.

"The most successful people enjoy what they're doing and they get into it."

WILLIAMS CRITICIZED the picture of businessmen portrayed on television sets each evening and in particular he shot down J.R. Ewing and the popular show "Dallas."

"J.R. is a guy I wouldn't do business with. Businessmen are men of high integrity. If not, I don't have time to deal with the damn people," he said. "We're in a hurry trying to make things happen. If I gotta deal with a crook, I'll go somewhere else."

It's true that businessmen are "trying to make a buck," he told the young people. And that's what the young people questioned him about — his wealth.

He admitted he's had more money than he could spend, but it gave him a sense of achievement and accomplishment. "You can only eat so much, you can only get drunk so many times. And then it's the achievement and joy of doing things."

He also has given that money to Texas A&M (about $4 million) and other sums to projects he embraces, he said.

"I don't apologize for having that money because I made it honest and made other people money. It makes the system hum, and we paid a lot of taxes while we did it."

But Williams had one more point to his sermon before leaving — "the main durn part of my talk" — and it was about the importance of freedom. He recalled in detail a hunting trip he and his wife, Modesta, took to the Soviet Union.

"WE WERE IN a country where there is no freedom. We finally were arrested in Leningrad because we had rifles and our plane was overdue. It was their damn fault why it was overdue in the first place. We finally got on a Russian plane and we wanted to be free so bad," he said.

The plane arrived at Denmark, "and I just says, 'Let me get out and kiss the ground.' You can not believe how beautiful and joyful freedom is unless you haven't had it. It's like you don't miss water unless the well goes dry. When we got out it was like you could breathe again."

The future in front of those young people was paid for by Americans who died in wars to keep the country free, he said.

"I'm not a politician. I'm not running for anything. But that's the God's truth."

NIXON

Janet Massey wasn't involved in politics 10 years ago whereas today she is Democratic county chairman. She remembers having "such mixed emotions" over Nixon's resignation. "I felt for him," she said. "But I thought it was the only thing he could do. And I wondered how the Republican Party could let him get into it."

Reagan Legg, a Democrat, can recall his "shock and dismay at what had happened to the office. I wasn't so concerned about the man. He should have resigned."

Michael Williams remembers a mixture of feelings, ranging from elation to depression. A college student at the time and now a prosecutor in the District Attorney's office, Williams said he and friends "partied" when Nixon resigned.

"As a student, I had followed that (Watergate) on TV every day; I watched every minute," Williams said. "We were elated. It showed the process had worked."

BUT HE SOON found his feelings torn between joy and depression, the latter which set in after he began thinking about the significance of what had happened. "Now you had a president gone."

"It tainted my future. It showed the political process had some problems. You knew you really wanted to go into it (government) but at the same time you saw it wasn't a bed of roses," Williams said.

Although he was a leader in the Republican Party, Ernest Angelo Jr. never was too fond of Richard Nixon as president. He had preferred Barry Goldwater or Ronald Reagan.

"I had disappointment and regret," he said of the resignation. "Nixon had handled his problems so poorly. The people around him were so interested in power they forgot the role of government. Nixon was not one of my favorite presidents. If he had handled it (Watergate) openly, people wouldn't have had any problem with it. He allowed it to become a national disgrace."

Nixon's handling of Watergate and his resignation inscribed a black mark on this country from the world's viewpoint, according to State Rep, Tom Craddick of Midland. The president forgot one of the basic laws and that is the Law of Holes.

"IF YOU'RE IN a hole, quit digging," Craddick said of the law. "He kept digging and the hole got deeper and deeper."

Ten years ago, political analysts suspected the Watergate events would severely weaken the Republican Party, and some local GOP members also feared that. But the opposite has resulted, they said.

As one of the few Republican members of the State Legislature, Craddick half expected to feel some resentment from Democratic legislators. But it never came, he said.

"The parties have enough strength in their foundations that one or two incidents won't destroy them," said Angelo.

"They sit back in one election and then come bounding back in the next," said Legg. "The Democrats were at a low point in 1972 and then they captured Congress in 1974."

Angelo added, "Nixon's problems caused a lot of Republicans to lose in 1974. It set us back in the House of Representatives. Some thought 1980 would destroy the Democratic Party and that's clearly not true."

The confidence began coming back under President Ford's administration, contended Bobby Holt, who now supports President Reagan.

"Nixon's resignation was a shock at first. You wait a while before doing anything. And then it leaves you. Like John Kennedy's assassination, it was a tragedy. But time heals.

"IT SEEMS like the American people are still forgiving in some sense," Holt said. "I thought it would take us years to recover. Ford put confidence back into the president's seat and the prestige the Oval Office carries."

The shock and grief left, but the lessons remained. "It made us regroup and re-evaluate," said Williams.

"It should be carried as a guideline for future politicians...that they eventually get caught and it's brought to the public's knowledge," said Ms. Massey.

Even with their hindsight today, some Midlanders wouldn't have changed their vote in the 1972 election. "I still don't think we would have been well served to have (George) McGovern as president," said David Godfrey, a city councilman who was in law school when the events occurred.

Although Nixon resigned and the nation's spirit healed, one issue still remains in the public's mind after 10 years.

"I hope before I die I find out who Deep Throat was," said Godfrey.

Congressmen to suggest immigration compromise

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The endangered Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill received a boost Friday when Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said he will request a conference with the House to draft a compromise version of the bill that both chambers can support and President Reagan will sign.

Simpson said he decided to push ahead with the controversial legislation after conferring with Mr. Reagan and congressional leaders of both parties.

"We cannot let distortion of facts and emotion steer us away" from attempting a legislative solution, Simpson said.

"Hundreds of hours have been spent in hearings, in discussions, in negotiation, in debating and pondering," he added.

"We must not allow those hours now to be lost in a maze of deception, demagoguery and arrogance."

"Thoughtful and sincere comment from colleagues, individuals and publications across the country has indeed urged that we pursue our course," Simpson said.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale opposes the bill, contending it would result in discrimination against Hispanics.

The Senate passed its version by a 76-18 vote in May 1983. The generally similar House version barely survived on a 216-211 vote June 20. A House-Senate conference is necessary to reconcile the differences.

Simpson hopes the House and Senate conferees can be appointed and one planning meeting held before Congress recesses Friday for the Republican convention in Dallas, an aide said.

Work on a compromise bill would resume after Congress returns Sept. 5.

Although there might be time to have a compromise considered by both chambers before the Oct. 4 election adjournment, Simpson and other supporters of the measure believe political opposition would be far less during a post-election lame-duck session.

Congressional leaders have said publicly no lame-duck session is scheduled, but Capitol Hill officials Friday said it is likely.

Simpson, who spoke with Mr. Reagan by telephone last Sunday, said the president agreed to sign a compromise bill that is potentially less costly than the House version but not as stringent as the Senate bill.

The possible high federal cost stems from language in the House bill providing 100 percent reimbursement for local and state expenses incurred.

Firefighters keep watch over national forest in New Mexico

TIJERAS, N.M. (AP) — A group of firefighters who dubbed themselves the "official Helitack crew of the 1984 Olympics" has been keeping watch over the Cibola National Forest this summer.

As clouds massed over the crew's heliport in Tijeras Canyon on a recent weekday afternoon, the five Sandia Helicopter Attack crew members on duty worked to keep axes and other tools in shape and wondered if the clouds would produce any lightning fires.

One washed the flying machine that would have to be in the air within 10 minutes if the crew received a radio message of a fire sighting from the central dispatch office in Albuquerque.

From May to August — New Mexico's official fire season — the Sandia Helitack crew is on "initial attack," meaning it must be ready to load up its support and fuel trucks, pile into the helicopter and go on a moment's notice.

The group is the first to arrive at any fire in the Cibola National Forest.

Nine fire lookout stations throughout the forest report fire or smoke sightings to the dispatch office. Ranchers, pilots and others also are quick to report fires, said crew foreman Mike Rotonda.

If it's a small blaze, the crew will take care of it alone. On a project fire — a large blaze — the group becomes a support unit, transporting supplies, water and workers to the site, Rotonda said.

The Sandia crew concentrates on Grants, Magdalena and Mountainair. Four wilderness areas are included in the crew's domain, where fires are tough to battle because special permission must be obtained from a supervisor to land the helicopter and use chainsaws there, Rotonda said.

However, moisture in the state made it a fairly slow season for the crew, he said.

"We've only been on 27 fires this year, and 20 of them were small enough to handle ourselves," he said. "Our only project fire was the 900-acre Mogollon Fire in the Gila Wilderness in late May and early June."

He said the ratio of lightning-caused fires to man-caused ones has been about 10-to-1.

The seasonal status of U.S. Forest Service jobs attracts a variety of people, Rotonda said.

Two crewmen are students — James Biggs, 21, is a wildlife science major at New Mexico State University, and Wayne Jeffs, 23, majors in both geology and geography at the University of New Mexico.

The remaining members — assistant foreman Mickey Holobinko, 29, Joe Corey, 29, Cary Newman, 28, and Pete Sisneroz, 25 — are Forest Service employees.

"It's very satisfying. There's no end of what you're capable of doing once you set your mind to it," she says. "It takes a lot of work and a lot of coordination."

But dancing is her main interest. She progressed from giving disco lessons to choreographing and dancing in the movie "Waltz Across Texas," and last week appeared with her dance group on local filming of the television show "Dancin' USA."

"I've loved dancing for as long as I can remember. It's a very physical thing. I can express myself when I dance, as well as get the satisfaction of teaching someone else."

Though her ambition to choreograph for television may eventually lead her away from Midland, "I'd always come back. This is home."

Ms. Hitchcock is enthusiastic about the opportunities made available by Midland's support for the arts.

"This town is very generous in supporting projects," she says. "People have fantasies, and through the theater a lot of those fantasies can become real."

Ms. Hitchcock is just hitting her stride at a point in life when most people are beginning to slow down and pause for breath. But she's making sure she doesn't get carried away.

"I have an awful good time," she says. "But you've got to take care of yourself. I don't want to get burned out — I've got a long way to go."

People of our community who make a difference.

Charlie Green

"In the final analysis, the strength of a country is in its land and water resources," says past county agent Charlie Green. Likewise, Midland is strengthened by people, such as Mr. Green, who are commited to helping Midlanders use these vital resources wisely.

When Charlie Green came to Midland in 1949, he had a degree in animal husbandry from Texas A & M and had received the Brewer Award for being the outstanding animal husbandry student in his class. However, when it came to being a county extension agent, he says that he was green and had the name to match! Mr. Green had diligence where he lacked knowledge, so when he didn't know the answer to a question he would set to work finding the answer.

At first, most of Mr. Green's work was with the agricultural community. He served very effectively as a liaison between the researchers at Texas A & M University and the farmers and ranchers in the Midland area. To promote cooperation and exchange of information, he helped organize the Midland County Pecan Growers Association. In addition, he served as Director of the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association and National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

As Midland changed, Mr. Green's task broadened. He began answering as many questions about landscaping as he did about cotton. Seeing Midland's need, he instigated the formation of the Midland County Landscaping Horticulture Committee and worked on expanding the 4-H program to include non-farm young people.

His expertise and dedication was recognized by the Midland County Soil and Water Conservation District which gave him an award for achievement and outstanding service. In 1965, the Kiwanis Club also gave him an Outstanding Service Award.

Understanding, diligence, and action are why Mr. Charlie Green makes a difference in Midland.

Lubbock workshop slated to train women for elected political roles

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — A workshop to train women for political roles will feature female speakers — a city councilman, a school board member and a county recorder — during the Aug. 18 meeting here.

"Making a Difference: Women in Electoral Politics" will be the topic of the special emphasis, non-partisan workshop to be held at St. John's Methodist Church.

Sponsored nationwide by the Women's Division of the United Methodist Church Global Ministries Board, the workshop is designed to introduce women to the political process and encourage their participation as candidates. The panel of elected women will include Lubbock City Council member Carolyn Jordan, Friona School Board member Kathryn Goddard, and Salt Lake County Recorder Katie L. Dixon.

Chairing the Lubbock event is Donna Arnpriester Echols of Friona. "This project is an effort led by United Methodists to introduce 10,000 women to the idea of political involvement and to identify 400 potential candidates through 60 one-day workshops on political skills throughout the U.S," she said.

Working on the event in the Midland area is Margie Titus, who noted the Lubbock district includes the Tall City. The workshops are open to women of all denominations.

Ms. Echols said sponsors will follow up on the potential candidates to encourage them to get in-depth campaign techniques training and to provide partial scholarships to 250 potential candidates for in-depth campaign techniques workshops.

"The end goal is to have a minimum of 250 women nationwide trained to run for local and state offices by 1986," she added.

Carolyn Jordan

Katie Dixon

Trainers and materials for all workshops are being furnished by the National Women's Education Fund, a national training and information service for women and public leadership.

Ms. Jordan was the first woman elected to the Lubbock City Council and served two consecutive terms. She made an unsuccessful race for state representative in 1980, then returned to private law practice. She was the city's representative to the South Plains Association of Governments and served two years as its president.

A graduate of Stanford University and Texas Tech Law School, she is a member of local, state and national bar associations, the chamber of commerce, League of Women Voters and American Association of University Women.

Ms. Dixon is the only elected woman official in Salt Lake County, which contains more than half the population of the state of Utah. She is running for a third term as county recorder, after winning her second campaign by the widest margin of any elected official in Utah.

She was honored in 1980 by the Utah Chapter of the National Women's Political Caucus for her continued support and encouragement to women in the political arena, and has worked at all levels of her political party. A graduate of Utah State University, Ms. Dixon is active in the National Association of Counties and serves as first vice president of the National Association of County Recorders and Clerks.

Ms. Goddard is a graduate of Southern Methodist University and has been active in church and community affairs in Friona for several years. She served 11 years as director at a Methodist camp for handicapped children.

A lunch-hour feature will be Pat Berry, political awareness coordinator of Mesa Petroleum Co. in Amarillo, speaking on "Corporate America Believes Women Should Be Politically Involved."

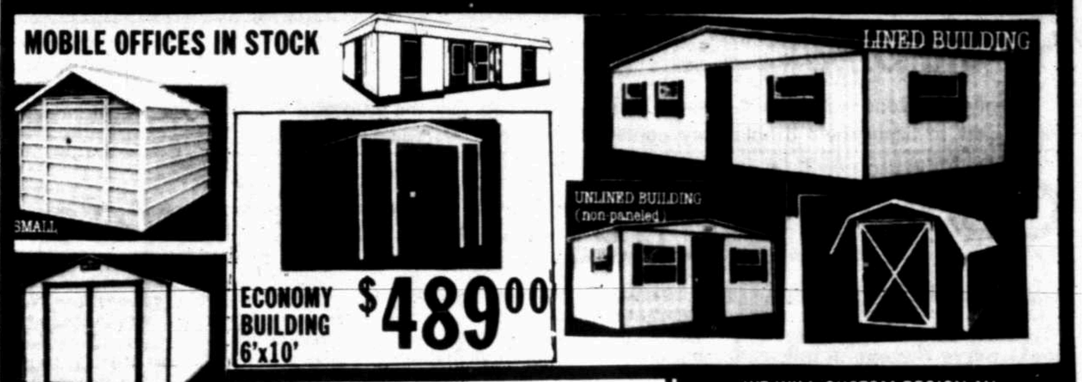

The workshop will include audio-visuals, the panel and a series of discussions on such topics as "The Effective Political Campaign," "The Roles in a Campaign — Getting on the Right Track" and "Effective Political Media, Field Organization and Fund Raising in Local and State Campaigns."

Cost of the workshop is $25. Reservations, which include lunch, are due by Aug. 11. Additional information is available from Margie Titus of Midland, 684-8974; Helen Releford of Lubbock (806) 792-0367; or Ruth Lauer of Lubbock, 795-3283.

The workshop gets under way at 9 a.m. with sign-in; a theological background session starts at 9:30 a.m.; and the political skills workshop begins at 10:30 a.m. St. John's United Methodist Church is located at 1501 University, directly across from the Texas Tech campus.

Security aids suggested for women living alone

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

One out of every six American households is hit by burglars each year, according to statistics, and home security is especially important to the 12 million or so women who live alone in this country.

In Midland, the recent arrest of two suspects has cleared about 90 percent of the city's unsolved burglary-sexual assault cases — some of which probably could have been avoided if the victims had used a little more caution in securing their homes at night.

One suspect is believed responsible for 17 of the break-ins, while the other is accused in three cases.

All the cases — which occurred on the northeast and south sides in the past year — involved sexual assault in one form or another, according to Det. Lt. Earl Luckey, who said some of the victims had left their windows unlocked.

Some of the women lived alone, while others had children living with them. None of them had an adult male in the house, however, which may have been noticed by the suspects.

Although no security system is failproof, police and security experts agree that certain precautions greatly reduce the risk of home and apartment dwellers becoming crime statistics.

Suggested precautions include: deadbolt locks, which are difficult to pick; metal instead of wooden doors; keeping emergency numbers next to all phones in the residence;

Iron grates on windows, where possible, and good window locks; asking delivery people to leave packages outside, instead of opening the door to them; peepholes and chain locks on doors;

Electronic alarm systems; asking a neighbor to keep an eye on things during extended leaves away from home; getting involved in Neighborhood Watch programs;

Reporting suspicious persons and vehicles in the neighborhood; keeping house and car keys separated from other keys to avoid delays in getting in the house and car;

Keeping valuables in a safe deposit vault; having personal property insured; and recording the serial numbers of TV sets, stereo equipment and other household items so they can be traced.

In addition, Luckey recommends dogs and weapons:

"Even a small dog is good because it can provide early warning. As for weapons, the person must not only know how to use it, but must also be willing to use it. Otherwise, it could be taken away and used against them."

Convicted nurse transferred to prison

Associated Press

GEORGETOWN — Former vocational nurse Genene Jones, convicted of killing a 15-month-old girl with a dose of a powerful muscle relaxant, has been transferred to state prison to serve her 99-year sentence.

Ms. Jones was in the Bexar County Jail at San Antonio following her conviction earlier this year, but was transferred to Williamson County Jail here on July 11 and was sent to the women's prison unit at Gatesville a few days later, the San Antonio Light reported Saturday.

She was found guilty by a jury in Georgetown of murdering a Kerrville child with an overdose of the muscle relaxant succinylcholine.

In a separate case, Ms. Jones faces a charge of injuring an infant under her care while she worked at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio by administering an overdose of the anti-coagulant drug heparin. No trial date has been set.

San Antonio television station KSAT reported Friday that the bodies of some babies who died at Medical Center Hospital will be exhumed next week as part of the ongoing "baby death" probe.

Calls to special prosecutor Nick Rothe's home by The Associated Press on Saturday went unanswered and a Bexar County Medical Examiner's spokesman, who declined to be identified, said he knew nothing of the planned exhumations. Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap's telephone number is unlisted.

Neither Millsap nor Rothe, who is under a one-year contract to serve as special prosecutor in the investigation, would confirm or deny the report Friday night, the Light said.

The 19-month long probe was expanded in June with investigators examining the possibility that children at the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit were subjected to two different drugs, rather than one as previously suspected.

Ms. Jones had worked in the unit.

NEW HOPE FOR BALD PATES

It has been discovered by a major pharmaceutical firm that a well-known anti-hypertension drug, called "minoxidil," has an unusual side effect. It grows hair. It does not do it for everyone every time, but some patients that have taken minoxidil did grow hair. Unfortunately, the hair grew all over the body and not just on bald pates. Scientists are now attempting to solve this problem by switching from an oraly administered drug to a topical ointment massaged into the scalp. This is a development so promising that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has given its approval for year long clinical trials on humans. The results should be in by the end of 1984.

HINT:

At present, there is no known legitimate cure for baldness.

'Cross-compliance' again gets mention

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — A decade or two ago the mention of federal "cross-compliance" as a means of requiring farmers to carry out prescribed conservation work on their land was about as popular as an August drought.

The notion still hasn't caught on, exactly, but cross-compliance is being talked about seriously upon occasion — and so far no open warfare has developed.

The concept simply assumes that if a farmer collects benefits from price support or other government programs, he should be required to cultivate, plant and manage the land in such a way that it is protected from damage.

But such a direct, mandatory approach has not had great support among farmers, their organizations and politicians who fear it could be step toward a massive land management plan by the government.

Yet, there are signs.

The House and Senate have passed so-called "sodbuster" bills that would deny federal farm program benefits to producers who plow up land designated as particularly subject to erosion. One version also would create a new three-year program to pay farmers for taking fragile land out of production for seven to 15 years.

However, the bills have been stalled in a House-Senate conference since June to iron out differences and may not be reconciled for some weeks, according to some Capitol Hill observers.

Although the two bills differ significantly — the House version is tougher — they both rely on the principle of cross-compliance as a lever to get farmers to take better care of fragile land. No care, no payments.

In Oklahoma City recently, the Soil Conservation Society of America held its 39th annual meeting, on the theme: "The Golden Anniversary of Soil Conservation" in the United States.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block told the conference that the administration continues to support sodbuster legislation and hopes that it passes Congress this year. But the administration is still opposed to the House version's conservation reserve provision for the long-term idling of land.

"This should be debated next year when we look at a complete farm bill," Block said. "We plan to incorporate conservation in that major bill next year."

Block, in his prepared speech, did not address the general issue of cross-compliance except in his reference to the sodbuster bills.

The association president, Floyd E. Heft of Columbus, Ohio, recalled the federal role in conservation the past half century and the involvement of state and local units of government in the forming of soil and water conservation districts.

In the 1930s, he said, the conservation movement attracted support from members of Congress generally.

"Today, a muster of congressmen willing to give conservation top priority on their legislative agenda may at best be counted on one hand," Heft said. "Our expertise in soil erosion seems to have failed in preventing political erosion."

Heft said that conservation advocates "must embrace immediately a strong set of mandatory requirements whereby public investments are protected beyond the whim of the landowner."

Landowners should certify that conservation practices will be retained and that there be "a similar deed restriction for future owners" of farmland, he said, even if those restrictions lead to reduced participation in conservation programs.

"The issues of conservation practice retention and cross-compliance within conservation and production control programs must and will be required in the years ahead," Heft predicted.

"Recovery of public and political support is attainable if we bite the bullet and produce their purchased product."

Breeders symposium slated

AGRICULTURE

The line-up of speakers for the Purebred Breeders Symposium reads like a Who's Who in the beef cattle production, promotion and marketing industry. Topics scheduled are relevant to today's and tomorrow's successful beef producers, including purebred breeders and commercial cattlemen.

Scheduled August 15 and 16 in the Rudder Conference Center at Texas A&M University, the symposium has been organized by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with Texas cattle breeders ad 15 breed associations.

Dr. Randall Grooms, program coordinator and livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, says the program offers purebred producers an opportunity to learn the principles of population genetics and their application for increasing efficiency and productivity. The program will also concentrate on the promotion, advertising and marketing of purebred cattle.

Opening day activities will concentrate on the production and performance phase of the purebred operation. Moderated by Dr. Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the agenda will begin with the "Scope and Challenge of the U.S. Beef Industry," by Sam Washburn, Fowler, Ind., past president of the National Cattlement's Association. Washburn, who operates a cattle and grain farm which includes stockers, cattle feeding, purebred cattle and embryo transplant programs, also is a national cattle and sheep judge. In addition, he is past chairman of the NCA Foreign Trade Committee and serves on the President's Advisory Committee on Trade Negotiations.

Ancel Armstrong, president of the New Breeds Industries, will discuss "Responsibilities of a Purebred Cattle Breeder." Past president of the American Simmental Association, Armstrong is on the cutting edge of the American purebred industry.

Registration information can be obtained from the Midland County Extension Office.

Among featured speakers will be Dr. Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Charlie Rankin, farm broadcaster at Eidenburg; David Eymand, president of the Texas Shrimp Association; and Harol Robbins, southern regional director of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Others addressing the annual meeting will be Earle Younts with the National Cotton Council; John Shelton III, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association; and Preston Sides, Extension 4-H specialist.

In addition, representatives of Texas' major livestock shows will discuss plans for the coming year.

Highlighting the program Monday will be a special luncheon honoring seven county agents who have been named recipients of the Distinguished Service Award for 1984. The award is the highest recognition bestowed by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents. The National Achievement Award winner will also be recognized.

A special banquet honoring recipients of the "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture" Award will highlight the following day's program.

Recipients of various professional improvement and public information awards also will be recognized at a luncheon Tuesday.

New officers and directors of the statewide organization will be elected at the concluding session Wednesday morning.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Registration to begin for MC's fall semester

By H.A. TUCK

Summer's about over when early counseling and issuance of time permits for the fall semester begin. And that's what happens starting Monday and continuing through August 27.

All prospective students for fall semester credit courses should come to Midland College's Office of Student Services in the Administration Building as soon as possible. They will visit with counselors about their educational plans and fill out application forms. These forms have to be completed each semeter ... even for former students.

When these duties are completed, students are issued "time permits." Each time permit assigns a student a specific period to come for official registration on Aug. 29 and Aug. 30. There are time permits issued for each 15-minute period of both registration days.

Since the time permits are issued in the order in which students complete their pre-registration activities, the early birds have the best chance of getting their classes at the time that fit their personal needs.

Hours for the Office of Student Services are from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., except for the last week, when the hours will be 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday for all three weeks, and on the final day when the hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Fall semester classes begin on Tuesday, Sept. 4.

EDUCATION

• • •

Very near the campus on Garfield, the wooden fence of a residence has been hit twice by motorists. After the last damage was repaired, there appeared the following sign on the fence: "NOT A THROUGH STREET."

• • •

The new fall bulletin publication now is out ... and it's a super new look for the college in three parts. The first part is the Student Handbook information, which includes all the college's rules and regulations. Second part is the listing of Adult Non-Credit and Continuing Education courses being offered this fall. And the third part is a listing of all the credit courses which will be available this fall.

Front cover features a photo of 1984 MC graduate Arleen Carrasco of Kermit hugging her youngest sister following graduation. Arleen is the third person in her family to attend MC, another is coming this fall, and still others should follow later.

Done in newspaper format, the fall bulletin features bright graphics and a new listing of non-credit courses by categories, such as Arts and Crafts, Communications, Special Interest, Recreational and Hobbies, Personal Enrichment, etc. The section also includes operating hours for the Adult Basic Education Center. For those not sure of which category a course might be placed, there also is an alphabetical listing of the courses.

• • •

They won't be right at courside, but there still are some very good seats left for the John McEnroe-Vitas Gerulitis "Tennis Over America" exhibition at Chaparral Center at 7 p.m. Thursday in Chaparral Center.

Tickets may be purchased at the Chap Center box office this week and there may be some left by Thursday evening.

• • •

The Adult Learning Center, where people take Adult Basic Education courses and learn English as a second language, will be closed during August. It will reopen after Labor Day.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Dale Evans to address MCS luncheon

Dale Evans

Dale Evans will speak and perform at Midland Christian School's Ladies' Luncheon Sept. 17 at Green Tree Country Club. A buffet luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Police probe several burglaries

From Staff Reports

Two automobile burglaries in the parking lot of a local motel and the burglary of a residence were reported to Midland police early Saturday morning.

Joe Robert Martin of Houston told police the driver's side window of his car had been shattered sometime between 9:30 p.m. Friday and 8:15 a.m. Saturday while it was parked in the lot of Motel 6, 1000 S. Midkiff Road. A $500 television control panel and a $50 briefcase were taken and the window was valued at $100.

In a separate complaint, James Welch of 5422 N. Loop 250 said his pickup was burglarized at 2 a.m. Saturday while it was parked in the same lot. According to reports, Welch saw a white male inside his pickup who ran with tools, binoculars and an army field jacket, valued at a total of $725. Welch was able to obtain the license plate number of the vehicle in which the suspect fled.

Jo Ann Posey, of 1119 E. Oak, reported the burglary of her house, which occurred shortly before 5 a.m. Saturday. Entry was gained through a southside bedroom, in which three children were asleep. A chest of drawers was moved to gain entry and a cable television box, valued at $250, was reported missing.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Computer center developed for Trinity School groups

Computers have come to Trinity School. After two years of study, a small computer center is being developed for group instruction. It will utilize 10 computers, with nine more available for use by students and teachers in the classroom. Helen Eggleston, Trinity's new science teacher, will serve as computer coordinator.

A workshop for faculty members will be conducted in late August. It will provide teachers an opportunity to become familiar with the hardware, available software and programming in Basic and LOGO in order to provide instruction for Trinity's 450 students.

Midlanders attend institute

Three Midlanders recently attended Confratute '84, an international conference/institute on educating gifted and talented children. It was conducted at The University of Connecticut.

Among the 600 educators and parents attending were Eilabeth Jeffreys, 9 Tattenham Corner; Jean Alvey, 3204 High Sky; and Patricia Carpenter, 3310 Fannin.

Discussions during the conference focused on who the gifted child is, how he learns differently from others and what parents and school personnel can do to help him develop his talents.

Counseling to begin at MC

Early counseling and issuance of time permits start Monday for Midland College's fall semester.

Students who plan to take one or more credit courses must fill out applications during the early counseling period. After completing pre-entrance requirements, students will be issued time permits that assign them a specific 15-minute period to report for official registration and payment of fees.

Time permits are issued in the Office of Student Services in the administration building. Hours are 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday for the first two weeks, 7 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Aug. 20-23 and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Aug. 27.

Official registration for the college's fall semester is set for Aug. 29-30. Classes start Sept. 4.

There will be some new programs offered this fall at MC. An instructor has been employed to direct an expanded program in dance, including both ballet and contemporary dance classes.

Completion of a sound recording studio in conjunction with the commercial music program has allowed the offerings of classes in sound technology for those interested in operating or knowing more about music recording studios.

School trustees will meet

Midland school trustees will hold a public hearing at 4 p.m. Wednesday to listen to comment about a proposed increase in the effective tax rate. The actual tax rate will decrease from 77 cents per $100 valuation in 1983 to a proposed 71-cent rate.

The effective rate (the rate needed to raise the same amount of revenues this year as last year) was set at 65.99 cents. A 71-cent rate represents an increase of 7.59 percent. If the rate were to exceed 8 percent, a rollback could be possible.

Trustees earlier this year granted a 10 percent homestead exemption to taxpayers. Figured on the proposed rate, most taxpayers will experience no increase in school taxes unless their home appreciated more than 20 percent this year.

Mother Teresa won't have cataract surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mother Teresa of Calcutta, India's protector of the poor, has canceled a proposed trip to Pittsburgh for cataract surgery, according to an official of the Nobel laureate's religious order.

Sister Priscilla Lewis, American superior of the Missionaries of Charity, sent a telegram to St. Francis Medical Center in Pittsburgh saying that Mother Teresa "does not intend to visit the hospital at any time." She also asked that publicity about the proposed visit be stopped.

Two weeks ago, ophthalamologist Dr. H.M. Shah wired St. Francis officials from India, saying the 73-year-old Roman Catholic nun would arrive at the hospital "as soon as her plans were finalized."

"They've been telling us to wait for a letter, which is what we've been doing," said hospital spokeswoman Marti Walsh.

Dr. CCandrappa Reshmi, a colleague of Shah who was to perform the surgery, said he has not spoken with Shah for about two weeks and doesn't know what may have happened.

"All we know is that a doctor referred a patient to us and we offered our services in all good faith and honesty," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Rivers says it's no joke and she's thrilled that first lady Nancy Reagan has asked her to speak at a women's luncheon during the Republican National Convention.

"I think the Republicans could use a little laughter," Ms. Rivers told a luncheon at the Le Bel Age hotel in West Hollywood, where she was honored by the West Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Rivers, who said she voted for President Reagan in 1980, said her speech to the women won't be censored, because "I'm a good girl."

She added that since Elizabeth Taylor has slimmed down, she'll have to find a new foil.

"She looks great and she owes it all to me," said Ms. Rivers, who has frequently ribbed the actress about her weight. "She sent me a whole box of eclairs — I guess she was cleaning out her closet."

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Two counts of child molestation against pop guitarist Dick Dale have been dismissed after two juries failed to reach a verdict.

An Orange County Superior Court judge dismissed the charges Friday at the request of Deputy District Attorney Kaz Makino, who said he thought another trial was unlikely to produce a conviction.

Known as "king of the surf guitar" for his popular beach music in the late 1950s and early 1960s, Dale, 46, had been tried twice on charges of molesting a 13-year-old girl from St. George, Utah, in 1981.

He was acquitted in January on 10 other felony counts in the case, but the jurors deadlocked 11-1 for conviction on the two other counts. The second jury deadlocked 7-5 for conviction.

Dale, who now operates a surf shop, hair salon and foreign-car garage in Newport Beach, testified that he allowed the girl to visit his home and play with his pets and computer game, but said he believed she was "fantasizing" about the sex charges.

SEATTLE (AP) — The city of Seattle doesn't have a key to the city to present to visiting celebrities and dignitaries. But in Bob Hope's case, it cooked something up.

Hope, in town Friday for a performance and to serve as grand marshal for the Seafair Torchlight Parade, received a "quiche to the city" from Mayor Charles Royer.

"I hasten to add it's a ham quiche, as well," the mayor said.

Royer presented the quiche, emblazoned with a design of the city's landmark Space Needle, to the 81-year-old entertainer at a charity luncheon.

The comedian told those attending the luncheon he had an ulterior motive for coming to the Pacific Northwest.

"I come to Seattle every once in a while to breathe," said Hope.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Condemned murderer Linwood E. Briley, one of six inmates recaptured after the largest breakout from a death row in U.S. history, has been baptized two weeks before his scheduled execution.

Briley, 30, said nothing during Thursday's 10-minute ceremony, which symbolizes a washing away of sin, in the prison chapel.

"I was glad we were able to do it, very glad," said prison chaplain Marjorie Bailey, a Southern Baptist pastor.

Briley was sentenced to death for the 1979 slaying of Richmond disc jockey John H. "Johnny G" Gallaher.

Briley, his brother James and four other death row inmates broke out of Mecklenburg Correctional Center on May 31. All six were recaptured, and Briley's execution is scheduled for Aug. 17.

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP) — The 1960s flower children who cavorted in the rain at the legendary Woodstock festival were invited to a reunion this weekend at an unlikely spot — a posh Catskills resort known for its kosher cuisine and golf tournaments.

Grossinger's Resort, the "Borscht Belt" country club where Leslie Uggams and Eddie Fisher launched their careers, hosted the gathering in honor of the upcoming 15th anniversary of the famous rock extravaganza, where such stars as Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin drove some 300,000 fans to a frenzy.

A few of the original performers from Woodstock were brought in for the event, one of several "theme weekends" the ritzy resort stages. No one was sure how many Woodstock veterans were among the paying guests, but among those reported present was Abbie Hoffman, the veteran of '60s radical protests.

Irving boy dies after swimming

DALLAS (AP) — A 3-year-old Irving boy has died from a rare brain disease he contracted after swimming in Grapevine Lake.

Derek Leach died Friday from amoebic meningoencephalitis, a usually fatal disease caused by a parasite that is inhaled, doctors at Children's Medical Center said.

The child and his parents, Angela and Steve Leach, had been swimming in recent weeks at Lake Grapevine, where health authorities suspect he came in contact with the parasite.

Another Texas child, Ben Wright, 12, of Uvalde, contracted the same disease after swimming in the Frio Lake in South Central Texas.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

Four of Europe's most desirable sports sedans have the following amounts of cargo space: Saab 3-door, 56.5 cubic feet; Audi 5000, 16.0 cubic feet; Volvo GLT Turbo, 13.9 cubic feet; BMW 733i, 22.5 cubic feet.

As you can see, Saab has more cargo space than all three of the others. As you can imagine, Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat, load up sporting gear for a long weekend, or make an impulsive purchase at a tag sale.

Of course, only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down, so the others may claim that it has an unfair advantage.

That's right. It does have.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.

Previewing Doncastor apparel for fall, business associates Gana Durossette and Janet Smith combine classic styles with New York "street chic."

DUROSSETTE & SMITH:

Profile OF A Partnership

TEXT BY JULIE HILLRICHS

Janet Smith

Noon lunch breaks rarely correspond with the weekday schedule of business associates Gana Durossette and Janet Smith.

In fact, their daily schedule rarely allows for any free time at all.

But for an interview, they however, made an exception. Still, there were countless interruptions; followed by both women racing in opposite directions to answer the telephone and doorbell which ring simultaneously.

"Do you want lunch?," Mrs. Smith asked as she returned to the living room. Mrs. Durossette replied "no", but then changed her mind and hesitantly ordered a cup of broccoli and cheese soup.

Then the telephone rang, followed by a knock at the door and the process repeated itself over again.

For nearly two hours, the women managed to juggle questions about their lives and work — and they were patient, earnest and articulate with their answers despite the interruptions.

They were not Gana Durossette and Janet Smith, wives, mothers and civic volunteers.

Instead, they were Gana Durossette and Janet Smith, fashion consultants, who borrowed $100 a piece from their husbands, successfully launched their business careers and found themselves leading the nation in corporate sales for a nationwide fashion manufacturer after only three years.

Today they are dynamic and inspiring as they prepare for one of four seasonal fashion shows to preview Doncastor classic apparel and Young Traditions sportswear, a division of Tanner Industries, Rutherfordton, N.C.

Dressed in Doncastor suits, they sat in the home of Mrs. Smith following their return from New York — courtesy of the company — and reminisced about the past and dreamed of future success.

"Gana and I are both homebodies. We're really not career women in the traditional sense, said Mrs. Smith. "We're more independent and self confident as the result of this partnership. Boy, we just took New York by storm."

How do the two women explain their phenomenal success? They ponder that question.

"We're a well-balanced team and we're both very fashion conscious," said Mrs. Durossette, a Midland native and Lee High School graduate. "We've felt so successful about what we're doing. When we began, I don't think we were as convinced as we are now."

Mrs. Durossette said they created the partnership at a time when the two were looking for ways to express their creative talents and still fulfill an obligation to their families.

"Family-wise, we're committed. But our husbands are very supportive of this venture," she said. "I think the only reason our families can deal with it is because we're all friends.

"Also, there is such a constrast in our personalities that we've found we complement each other."

According to Mrs. Smith, "Gana has a natural gift for color and style. She really knows how to put an outfit together."

On the otherhand, "Janet is a talented seamstress and has a flair for picking out classic styles where I prefer street chic," said Mrs. Durossette. "We're trying to add that street chic look to our stock and combine it with classic looking suits in order to appeal to the professional woman."

Mrs. Durossette and Mrs. Smith agree that the clothes they sell are not attractive on the rack and recommend women take time in choosing a wardrobe that suits them.

"There aren't any rules for what you can or cannot wear. Women want to be complimented for their overall appearance and it's our responsibility to be receptive to their needs," according to Mrs. Smith.

"This is where we have an advantage over our competitors," she added. "Our clothes are designed for all types of women, are available in several colors and fabrics and fit just about any pocketbook."

In addition, the company doesn't make the clothes until the customer selects what she wants and they are ordered.

Another reason for their success, they said, is that they appreciate everyone's business.

"We rely on friends for much of our business and we operate by appointment only. If we know that a customer needs a lot of attention, we don't schedule anything else. We strive for personalized service."

According to Mrs. Smith, "some women buy clothes exclusively from us because we offer what others don't. Others come to our fashion shows and buy only one sweater.

"We're satisfied doing business this way. We don't want anyone to leave here if they're unhappy ... We prefer a long-time customer rather than a one-time sale."

Smith, Durosette present fashion show to Christian Women's Club

The Midland Christian Women's Club will present a fall fashion show in honor of teachers at a noon luncheon Aug. 8.

Doncaster fall fashions will be presented by Janet Smith and Gana Durossette.

Guest speaker will be Billie Rudd, a retired teacher from Canyon Lake, Texas. Ms. Rudd has conducted several teachers seminars and conferences. Her honors include the National Teacher's Medal and the Freedom Foundation of Valley Forge Teacher's Award.

Wendy Watson of Midland, who played the lead in Midland Community Theatre's "Annie," will present musical selections.

Luncheon and nursery reservations may be made by contacting 684-5093 or 699-4541. Reservation deadline is Monday. The club has no formal membership, is interdenominational and is open to all interested women.

Victorian costumes exhibited

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — When Victorians went to the country they went in style: The women put on corsets and bustles, and the men donned starched shirts and top hats and waxed their mustaches.

A look at the Victorians' high style for outings is available at the costume exhibition, "Dressed for the Country, 1860-1900," which will run through Sept. 9 at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. The show is an adjunct to the museum's "A Day in the Country: Impressionism and the French Landscape."

Edward Maeder, curator of the costume display, said that because the paintings in the Impressionist exhibition show "very few people, we thought it would be fascinating for visitors to see what people wore to the country in the late 19th century."

The costumes, which were made in France, England, Austria and America, belong to the museum. They were worn by the middle classes and range from a woolen riding habit to a dress with three interlocking circles on it made in 1896, the year of the first modern Olympics (at that time the Olympic symbol had only three rings).

As illustrated by the display, clothing styles changed greatly between 1860 and 1900. Costumes designed for sports appeared for the first time; corsets changed shape; hems rose; and leg-of-mutton sleeves appeared and then vanished.

These styles were determined by the aesthetic ideals of the time, Maeder said.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Peggy and Paul Anderson were joined by their son, South Dakota rancher Ken Anderson and his wife, Elizabeth, for a two-week Scandanavian cruise recently. Flying from Dallas to London, they spent three days seeing the city's historic sites before boarding their ship, the Royal Odyssey, for the cruise, which included the Norway Fjords. Ports of call were Copenhagen, Denmark; Gothenburg and Stockholm, Sweden; Helsinki, Finland; Leningrad, U.S.S.R., and Bergen, Norway. A special thrill for Paul and Ken was visiting Sweden and Norway, the land of their ancestors.

In Helsinki, which is acknowledged as the ship building center of the world, Peggy and Paul had the unique experience of seeing the ship being built that they will take on their next cruise. The fourth ship of the Royal Princess Line will be 10 stories high when completed, and they will sail on its inaugural voyage from Los Angeles through the Panama Canal and on to San Juan in December with their daughter and family.

Following the cruise, the foursome returned to England for more sightseeing in the London area and the countryside. Peggy particularly enjoyed a trip to the prehistoric monument, Stonehenge.

One of the most memorable experiences in London for Peggy, who uses a wheel chair, was riding in Winston Churchill's wheel chair and sitting on his stool in the lift of his home, Chartwell Manor. Peggy says the prime minister's secretary still comes in daily and arranges fresh flowers throughout his home. With everything just as he left it, one gets the feeling that he has simply stepped out for awhile.

Peggy praises the British for their friendly, helpful ways, particularly to those with handicaps, and says stopping back in England en route home was a wonderful way to end the trip.

ANGELO STATE UNIVERSITY students Lee Green and Roddy Hughes, who were united in marriage Saturday, will return to San Angelo to make their home after a trip to Granbury.

Following the afternoon wedding and reception at the First Baptist Church, the bride's parents, Brookie and Don Green, entertained with a supper at their home for out-of-town guests. The rehearsal dinner was given Friday evening at Cattleman's Steak House by the groom's parents, former Midlanders Sherrian and Bob Hughes of San Angelo.

Pre-nuptial courtesies extended the bride included a suprise get-together given by high school friends following the rehearsal dinner and a bridesmaids luncheon Thursday at Green Tree Country Club given by Carolyn (Mrs. Jeff) Noble, Jean (Mrs. Courtney) Clark, Lucille Westermann and Jere (Mrs. Bus) Hubbard.

A kitchen shower was hosted Monday by Chris (Mrs. Fred) Newman and her daughter, Holly, in their home. Ranchland Hills Country Club was the setting for a miscellaneous shower on July 24 given by Allyne (Mrs. Craig) Johnson, Josie (Mrs. Robert) Cullen, Marsha (Mrs. Jimmy) White, Peggy (Mrs. Aubrey) Linne, Pat (Mrs. Addison) Barker, Nancy (Mrs. Al) Langford, Maggie (Mrs. James) Murphy, Doris (Mrs. Don) Brotherton, Barbara (Mrs. Charles) Snow and Diane (Mrs. Richard) Mendenhall.

A WEEKEND TRIP to Las Vegas was enjoyed recently by Midlanders Dottie and Jack Fox, Cindy and John Michael Warburton, Susan and Frank Motycka, Jan Petty, Doug Page, Dusky Wells and Frank Petty. Staying at the Stardust, the group had the pleasure of showing first-timers Dusky and the Motyckas the decor of the many casinos. Taking time out from the stage shows and all the other entertainment, Jack and Doug managed to get in a few rounds of golf at the Tropicanna.

The Warburtons also had a recent trip to the East. Joined by John Michael's mother, Jane Warburton of Tallahassee, Fla., they visited his aunt and uncle, Grace and Ted Avil, in Philadelphia, and also spent some time in Atlantic City.

THE GULF COAST RESORT town of Fulton was the recent vacation spot for Bebe Fisher, her grandson, George Butcher, and her son, Tom Fisher, along with his three children, Amanda, Kimberly and Matthew. They shared a condominium with Bebe's sister and husband, Jean and V.E. Heard of Refugio, who are well-known in Midland from tneir visits here. A neighboring condo housed other vacationing family memers, with up to 25 coming and going during the week. Tom's wife, Jeri, joined the group for the weekend.

They enjoyed relaxing days of boating, swimming and fishing, but Bebe's favorite time of day was dawn, as she sipped her morning coffee on the balcony overlooking the ocean and watched the sunrise. She was entranced by the beauty of the restored Fulton Mansion, a showplace built circa 1880, and by an impressive exhibit of world-famous artists' works, which are currently hung in the former summer home (also built in the 1880s) of the O'Connors, a prominent pioneer coastal family.

ATTENDING CAMP STEWART for Boys at Hunt this summer are the following Midland youth:

Chad Arnold, son of Harriet Stone; Wade Kidwell, son of Judy and Cody Kidwell; Jason Mapes, son of Sandra and Randy Geiselman; Justin McDonald, son of Carol and Darrell McDonald; Tyler Rogers, son of Mary and Lynn Rogers; Brian Thomas, son of Georgia and Carroll Thomas, and Reid Dunbar, son of Ann and Dick Dunbar. Steve Baskin, son of Joan and Judge Pat Baskin, is a riflery counselor at the camp.

Marilyn McKnight Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

Typewriter considered aid to child's computer skills

ATLANTA (AP) — That typewriter stored away in the attic or basement can give children a head start in learning about computers, says Larry Blasch, who consults with schools in planning computer programs for the classroom.

"Use the typewriter to teach elementary school children keyboarding skills," advises Blasch, IBM education consultant, with headquarters in Atlanta. "The typewriter keyboard is similar to that of a computer but it's cheaper and it's also a good way to boost reading skills."

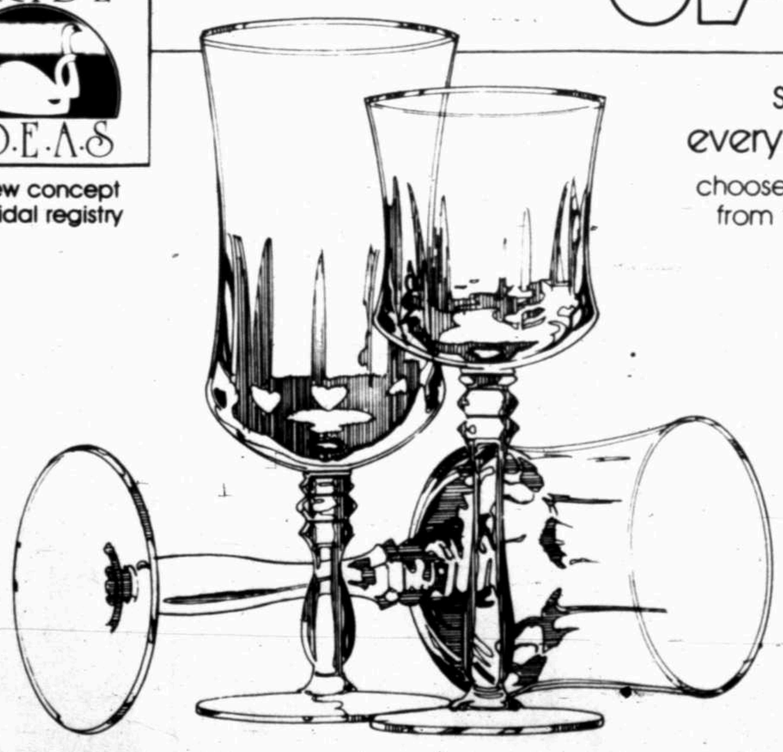

Blasch says when parents feel it's appropriate to buy a home computer, they shouldn't expect it to automatically make a child a computer wizard — he or she will need support.

"The child's learning will be more effective if parents get involved. Plan to work with the children at the computer — even if it's only 15 minutes a day. The software can be used for instruction or drill in basic skills or for enrichment in a broad range of subjects. Children can work as fast — or as slow — as they wish.

"But if parents don't show they're committed, the child is likely to play zap-em games or the computer will be stashed away someplace and die," Blasch said.

Mistletoe shot down

In olden times in Wales, Switzerland and Sweden, superstition dictated that mistletoe had to be shot out of trees and caught before it touched the ground. —(CNS)

Chinese used paper art on panes

The paper-cutting art originated in northern China shortly after paper was invented there about 100 A.D.

Some of the first cutouts, fashioned from red paper and called "window flowers," were used to decorate thin paper windows coated with tung oil to make them partly transparent.

Personal photographs may be taken anywhere, of course, but do not expect the yearbook to accept photographs from another studio.

Detailed information was distributed at the high schools in late May about having senior portraits made, however, if your senior did not make it home with the brochure, please call us right away.

We've been photographing seniors for over 25 years and our reputation for doing quality work is well-known. We look forward to recording this special time in the life of your daughter or son.

...Our Services to the High Schools...

In addition to providing scholarships to a boy and girl from each high school to attend Midland College each year, we provide a number of services to the yearbook staffs of the local high schools at no charge as part of our working agreement. Among these are numerous photographs of sports teams, school favorites, honor students, coronations, etc. In addition to our contribution of time and services, we also provide monetary support thru advertising in programs and yearbooks and commissions to the activity funds.

Weather changes affect arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — Changes in the weather can affect some symptoms of arthritis, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

It says people with inflammatory types of arthritis, such as rheumatoid arthritis and bursitis, often feel worse when the humidity increases and the barometric pressure drops. The drop in pressure can cause flare-ups of pain which last from a few hours to a few days.

In some individuals, the pain may begin up to two days before a change in the weather. Usually, the symptoms are reduced considerably when the weather conditions return to normal.

Blushing begins in the brain

NEW YORK (AP) — It begins in the brain, with a flicker of embarrassment or a moment of surprise.

That tiny emotional upset sends a signal from the brain to facial blood vessels, enlarging them and stimulating a rush of blood to the face — the blush.

Why an emotional reaction should send signals to one person's face, while making others perspire or suffer nervous stomachs, is not known, said Dr. Jonathan Wilkin, a dermatologist at the McGuire Veterans Administration Medical Center in Richmond, Va. and an authority on blushing.

Emotional reactions are, however, not the only thing that can cause reddening of the face.

"There are a variety of other flushing reactions not associated with emotional changes," he said in an interview. "You can give folks drugs, the drugs will circulate, and that will also cause a blush."

"Some people think they have a blush when in reality it's a flushing reaction due to some chemical agent they've come in contact with."

Hot coffee or soup can trigger a flush, as blood flows to the skin to dissipate the heat. Alcohol is also known to cause blood vessels to widen.

Lung bypass may save infants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newborns who otherwise would die of respiratory problems can be saved with a new lung bypass technique that supplies oxygen to the body while allowing the organs to rest and heal, doctors say.

The first successful use of the method in the Washington area was announced Tuesday by doctors at Children's Hospital National Medical Center. The said hundreds of babies nationwide should benefit as the "artificial placenta" technique enters wider use.

Dr. Billie L. Short, the neonatalologist who heads the project at the center, said Extra Corporeal Membrane Oxygenation, or ECMO, duplicates the exchange between oxygen and carbon dioxide performed by the placenta before birth.

An infant's blood is drawn through a tube or catheter into the ECMO machine, which adds oxygen and takes out carbon dioxide. It is then returned to the body through another tube.

Doctors said about 1,000 infants nationwide each year have severe conditions that make them candidates for the new therapy. They said the technique should increase survival chances for 20 percent to 80 percent.

THE MAN WHO MADE A LAKE

Text by David Lee Forrest

BEFORE (June 1983)

AFTER (August 1984)

Last year, John Holland decided West Texas — at least the part of it in his backyard on County Road 1244 just west of Midland — was a little too drab.

He wanted a lake. Not just any old pond would do, however. Holland wanted a body of water surrounded by trees and rocky sandstone banks, filled with fish and, of course, with an island in the middle.

So he built one.

Beginning in March 1983, he dug a curving one-acre hole in the ground behind his home. Then he shipped in approximately 200 tons of stone and stacked it along the banks to form his own cliffs.

He also began planting trees and laying stones for walkways around the lake.

Most of the work, except for the heavy excavation itself, Holland, a tall, 32-year-old former golf pro, is doing himself.

Holland's ultimate goal is to have "the most beautiful backyard in Midland," he told the Reporter-Telegram in an interview in June 1983.

In the 16 months since he started, his project has progressed, but not entirely without complications.

The worst problem Holland encountered was the recent drought, which made him delay filling the lake. The drought also took a heavy toll on trees he had started planting around the lake.

"I lost a lot of trees because of the drought," he said. "Plus it was a relatively harsh winter."

Once the lake had water, Holland said, "The extra moisture made our weed problem much worse."

However, he noted, "The amazing thing about all this is that there were so few problems.

"People said it'd have to have plastic at the bottom, but the bentonite (a drilling mud material Holland used to line the lake bottom) worked.

"People said we'd have to chemically treat it, but the fish have kept it clean.

"We also expected to have an insect problem, but the fish took care of that."

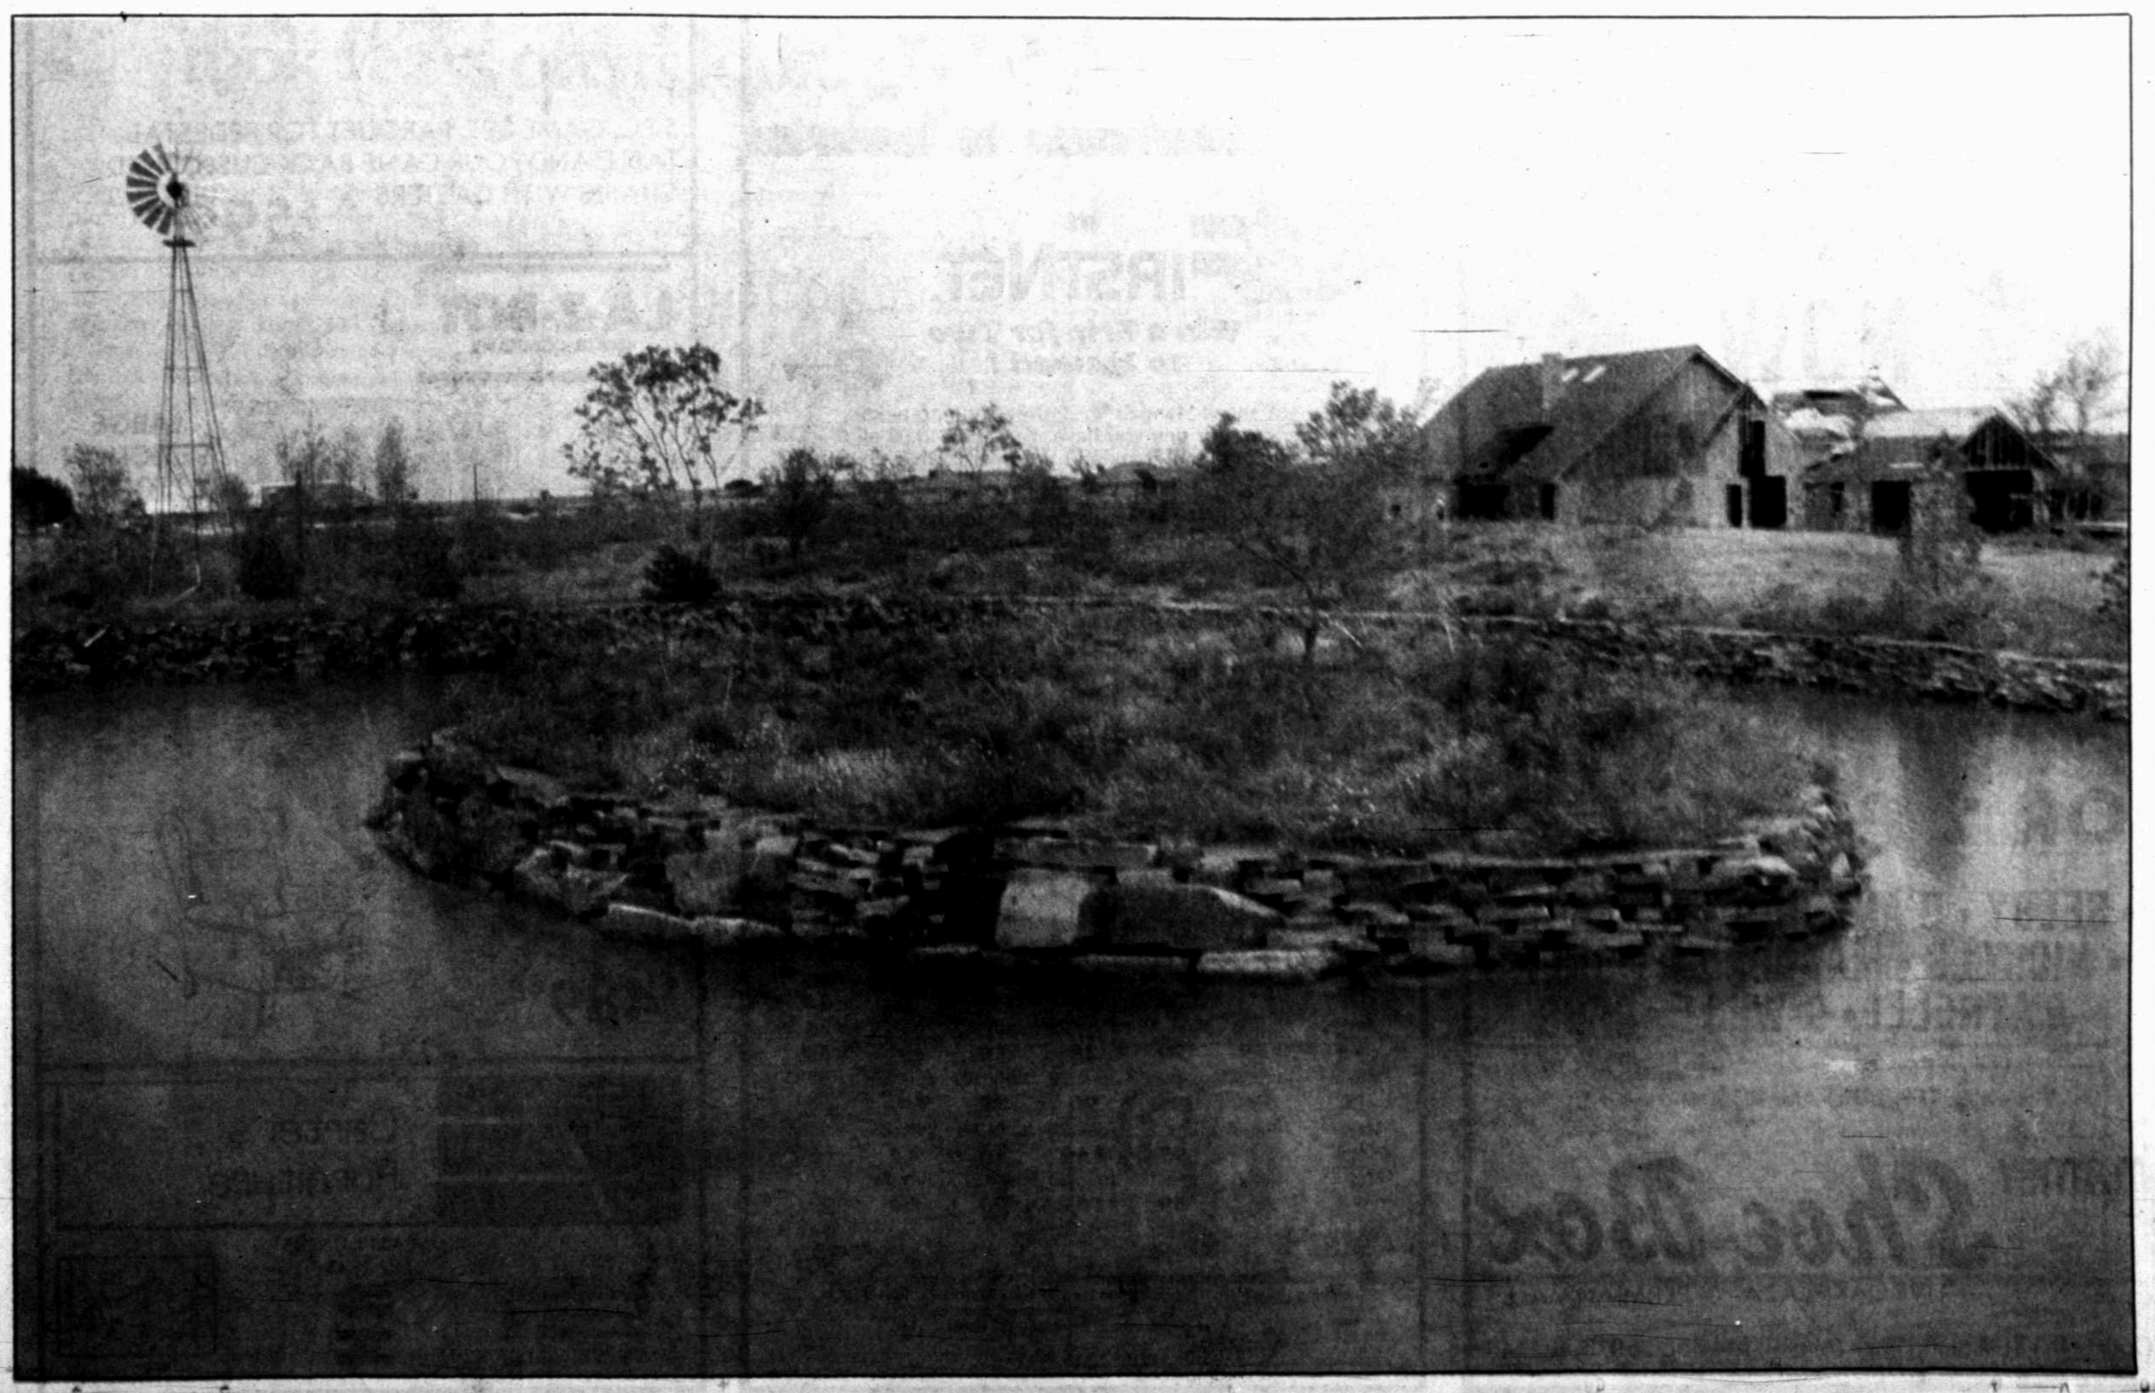

The 100 catfish, 100 Florida hybrid bass and assorted goldfish Holland stocked the lake with have thrived while doing their job as a natural clean-up crew, he said.

The white bellies of the catfish flash in the sun when Holland throws bits of cheese into the lake to tempt them to the surface.

The fish have no reason to be shy; fishing is not allowed in the lake.

"They're more like pets," Holland said. "We swim in the lake and we don't want to get tangled up in fish-hooks."

Decorating requires planning

Associated Press

You've decided to put up wallpaper, but with so many sample books on the market and wall coverings steadily growing in popularity, the choices can be rather dizzying.

Country, floral, big scale, little scale, vinyl or grasscloth: How do you choose?

Lyn Peterson, president of Motif Designs, a wall covering producer, advises using common sense and following some basic guidelines.

First, she says, research your room. Consider the room's function and the amount of time the family will spend in it. Is it a primary room like a master bedroom or kitchen? Or is it a secondary space, like a guest bathroom that is not used so frequently?

For primary rooms, she recommends colors and patterns that are easy to look at and live with. Save the bold adventurous styles for secondary rooms and passageways.

Next consider color. The entry of the sun into the room is an important consideration when selecting colors. Bold, bright colors tend to become harsh in bright sunlight. Strong contrasts are more effective in dim light.

"Don't decorate a space you haven't lived in — or at least visited at 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 p.m. on sunny and cloudy days," says Ms. Peterson.

Personal tastes also should influence color selection. Take a look in your closet. If there is no green in the wardrobe, chances are good that you won't be happy with it on your walls.

One more tip: Warm colors tend to bring a wall in and make a room feel warm and cozy. Cool colors give a sense of expansion.

Measuring carefully is the next step. To know how much wallpaper to buy, you have to measure accurately. A good rule of thumb, says Ms. Peterson, is to measure the distance around the room. Treat doors and windows as if they didn't exist and include them in the measurements. Next, measure the height of the room. Then, multiply the distance by the height. Divide the number by 27 to get the number of rolls necessary to do the job, she said.

She advises do-it-yourselfers to order extra wall coverings, allowing for any mistakes or future repairs. Most retailers will give an 80 percent refund on unused rolls, she says. That is a lot less trouble than trying to match dye lots at a later date. However, check the store's policy before you order.

Selecting the right type of wall coverings can provide camouflage for cracked and peeling walls. A vinyl wallpaper in a small-scale overall pattern will draw attention away from the wall's imperfections and it will hold up better in a damp area than paper.

Kitchens, bathrooms and children's rooms also benefit from the use of vinyl products, because they are washable.

Solid vinyl coverings on fabric backing are generally considered the strongest type of wall covering and are often used in commercial areas. Paper-backed vinyl is the next strongest. Vinyl-coated papers are less durable but work well in baths and kitchen areas not subject to heavy-duty use.

Avoid paper in the kitchen, she recommends, because it will absorb grease and show spots.

An appropriate option in living rooms, dining rooms and dens is a textured covering such as grasscloth, linen, cotton or silk. These coverings — laminated to paper — enrich the atmosphere in more formal rooms.

Once you've chosen, and are ready to install the paper, she suggests you call a friend. "It's more fun that way."

Start working in an inconspicuous corner or area so that by the time you get to the most visible spot you will be an expert.

After putting up one or two rolls, take a good look. If you don't like it, take it down immediately and select another wallpaper.

Don't try to learn to like it. You won't, says Ms. Peterson.

LAKE

Holland said he and his wife swim in the lake almost every evening.

"We probably don't have much more in it than people spend on a good swimming pool," Holland said, since he cut costs by doing the work himself.

"I probably spend over 40 hours a week just on landscaping," he said.

Holland and his wife, Susan, own the Islands Swimwear and Exercise Shop. Mrs. Holland manages the store, so he has time to work on the landscaping.

"It'll be years before it's finished," he said. "I have to convince myself that things take time."

He still plans to place three windmills around the lake to send water cascading down stone waterfalls into the lake.

"Now that it's functional we're trying to make it pretty," he said.

"Windmills are just amazing to me — they're functional and beautiful," Holland said.

Currently, the lake is fed by one windmill and two other pumps, which replace the one inch of water a day that Holland estimates is evaporated from the lake on an average summer day.

"The idea behind the lake is that one day it'd be maintenance-free," he said. He also wants it to be as natural as possible in the end.

"I wanted it to look like it's been here. I didn't want a park."

Birds are already drawn to the new environment. Ducks, doves, quail, a blue heron and a sandhill crane have been spotted around the water, said Holland.

"When you do a painting, you draw in your rough lines," he said. "Then you fill in the colors. So far, I've filled in the water."

INTERIOR MOTIVES
by Ray and Austella Berry

The design treatment of doors is similar to the treatment of casement windows. They both swing to open. The key is whether they swing in or out. A few French doors swing out and do not create a problem. They should be dressed like other windows in the room. Most French doors, and most standard doors, swing in to open. It is important that the door be allowed to cleanly open and close. Use a treatment that is held down at the top and bottom so it swings along with the door. Curtains, mini-blinds or woven shades with hold-down brackets are excellent for this purpose. For Fench doors, almost any treatment can be used which stacks back to the sides. This leaves the operating portion of the door completely free to open and close.

You don't have to sacrifice beauty for function. With all the choices available today, there is a design that suits your lifestyle while pleasing your eye. At WINDOW DECOR, 30 M. W. Industrial Loop, we have many ideas for your windows, walls and floors. For your home or office, we custom design and manufacture draperies. For the do-it-yourselfer, we can provide all the necessary hardware. Call for a free in-home consultation, 685-0875. Hours: Mon.-Fri., 8AM-4:30PM or by appointment.

Interior decorating advice offered for small rooms

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

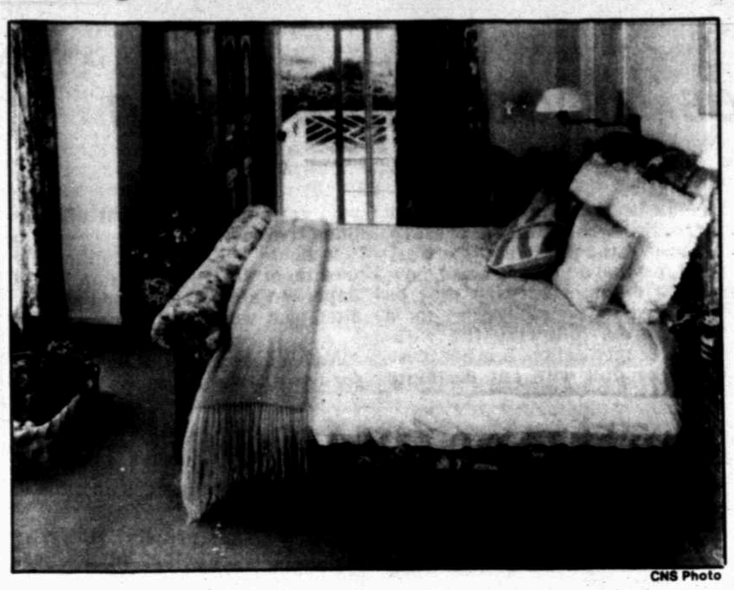

Q. I prefer early American designs and would like to create the charming nostalgia of country living in my very small, new tract home. I am told, however, that early American is too large and bulky for a tiny space.

Is there a way that I can achieve a country look in a small room? What should I especially look for when selecting pieces? Or should I put my desires aside and go contemporary? — R.V.C.

A. Follow your interest and decorate your home in early American. Even if you have a small space, you can still have a cozy feeling.

Arrange furniture to take best advantage of the space you have. Start with templates and paper to arrange and rearrange seating and traffic flows. Put the walls to work with shelves and place furniture against shelves and bookcases if lower drawers can be used for storing seldom used items.

Instead of choosing large designs in your printed fabrics, choose a mini-print in a soft color that will blend nicely with your floors, walls and other furniture.

CNS Photo

An uncluttered look can give small rooms country charm.

Some interior designers feel that a small room is best designed with a few medium to large pieces of furniture to give an open, uncluttered look, hence enhancing the pieces you do choose. Other designers suggest that in a small room it is best to use smaller, lightly scaled furniture so as not to overpower the small space.

My suggestion is that you try arranging furniture on paper first to consider what you feel you must have in the room and how the room will function for you. Then start initial looking in stores to see what is available that you especially like. At that point, your desires can become more concrete.

Q. I have a small French provincial settee and a pair of wood framed chairs I plan to use in our family room. The seating needs to be recovered. What type of fabric would be a good selection to create a relaxed, country look that would go well with dark wood floors in both family room and kitchen and dark cabinetry in the kitchen? — T.V.

A. A large, bold check would be interesting in a white and blue or white and green, even white and red. A ginghamed look can be inviting, countrified and yet sophisticated.

Perennials pretty plants

Hearst News Service

Now that annuals like petunias, marigolds and zinnias are in their full glory, it's easy to overlook the trusty perennial family and all the color it provided as annuals were coming into bloom.

Now is an ideal time to sow perennial seeds. The young plants get a good start this summer and will be in good shape when next spring rolls around and it's time to plant them in a permanent location.

A few rules are in order:

— Start the seed indoors or under carefully controlled conditions outdoors. Do not sow directly where the plant is to grow.

— A plastic flat, pan or similar shallow container is good, providing it has bottom drainage. Do not use garden soil; it is filled with weed seed and may not have the right drainage characteristics for indoor culture.

— The best sowing medium is milled sphagnum moss — a stringy, lightweight organic material that's packaged by the quart in plastic bags.

Moisten it by pouring a cup or two of water in a large plastic bag and kneading the bag and mixture.

Trees versatile

PLAQUEMINE, La. (AP) — What do printing inks, fruit flavorings, paint removers and medicines for high blood pressure have in common?

They're all products that directly or indirectly are made from trees, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a maker of wood and paper products.

Other items that come from trees include household cleaners, colognes, auto tires, vitamins, and rubber gloves.

Susan lives in Midland and invites her friends to visit her now at Chesapeake Manor.

Susan's design philosophy is, "the concerns of an interior designer are not only for the furnishing and ornamentation of interior surfaces, but they also should touch the lives inside the home—homes and offices are for people, and their interests. As designers, we help people express themselves so that their space becomes props for the many activities of their lives."

Patient discontinues blood medication

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently moved to another city and before I could find a new doctor, I ran out of my high blood pressure pills. When I finally got a new doctor, he told me my blood pressure was all right and that I didn't need any pills. If I had never had to change doctors, I would never have found this out and I would still be taking the medicine. How is a person supposd to know if he can stop taking blood pressure pills? — Lewis, Muskegon, Mich

Dear Lewis: Dr. Michael J. Reichgott, of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia, reports that some individuals are able to stop their antihypertensive medication without having an increase in their blood presure. Because of the possibility that treatment may have to be resumed, however, it is important that they be monitored by their physician for a few months following the withdrawal of medication. It is not possible to predict with any certainty who can and who cannot discontinue treatment.

I should add that discontinuing treatment for hypertension is an important step, and no one should attempt it without their physician's

Heart attacks treated

BOSTON (AP) — Most heart attack victims don't get to the hospital soon enough, and a drug commonly used to prevent recurring attacks can't reduce damage if a patient waits more than four hours before seeking treatment, a study says.

Most victims don't get to a hospital until at least eight hours after an attack, often because they confuse heart attack symptoms with indigestion, said Dr. James E. Muller of Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"The important message is that if you're going to get therapy for your heart attack, get to the hospital quickly," said Muller, a member of a study group commissioned by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute.

In a six-year project, Muller's group studied whether administering drugs called beta blockers as soon as a heart attack victim reached the hospital would reduce the damage from the attack. The results were published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Beta blockers, prescribed for millions of Americans who suffer angina pains and high blood pressure, are used to prevent recurring heart attacks in the years after people survive one.

DEAR ABBY

Reader: 'Help pets beat the heat'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now that the warm summer days are upon us once again, please remind your readers that it is extremely cruel to leave their pets in a parked car — even with the windows cracked.

When I see an animal in the car on a warm day, I place a card under the windshield wiper. It reads:

"We understand you meant to be kind in taking your dog with you today, but you could be risking his life.

"On a hot summer day the inside of a car heats very quickly. On an 85-degree day, for example, the temperature inside your car — WITH THE WINDOWS SLIGHTLY OPENED — will reach 102 degrees in 10 minutes. In 30 minutes it will go up to 120 degrees. On warmer days it will go even higher.

"A dog's normal body temperature is 101.5 to 102.2 degrees Fahrenheit. A dog can withstand a body temperature of 107-108 degrees Fahrenheit for only a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage — or even death. The closed car interferes with the dog's normal cooling process, that is, evaporation through panting.

"If your dog is overcome by heat exhaustion, you can give immediate first aid by immersing him or her in cold water until body temperature is lowered."

Knowing that you are an animal lover, I hope you will find this column worthy. — JO ANN RIFKIN, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR JO ANN: It is indeed. I've published the above information several times, but it's worth repeating.

Now a word to my readers: The above-mentioned cards can be obtained by writing to the Animal Protection Institute, P.O. Box 22505, Sacramento, Calif. 95822. The cards are free, but enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20 cents) envelope, and if you are able, include a dollar or two for this fine, non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Louisiana Duck Hunter," I had to write. He said, "The only truly effective mosquito repellent used by duck hunters in these parts is an Avon product called Skin-So-Soft." Then he went on to say it could be found in the sporting goods stores on the shelves right next to the commercial insect repellents!

Abby, if this is true, the Avon Co. would like to know the names of the stores, because Avon products are sold only by Avon representatives who call on customers in their homes.

I should know. I've been an Avon representative for 18 years. — J.G. FROM DEL MAR, CALIF.

DEAR J.G.: Thanks for writing. And now a message to the sporting goods people in duck hunting territory: If you are caught selling Avon products, you're dead ducks.

DEAR READERS: For the first time ever, the long form of the 1980 census questionnaire asked respondents to volunteer their ethnic origin.

A full 83 percent identified with one or another ethnic group.

Only 6 percent referred to themselves as "American," and 10 percent did not answer the question.

The largest ethnic group in the nation was the 50 million citizens who said they were of English or partial English descent.

German stock was a close second at 49 million. The Irish were 40 million; French, 13 million; Italian, 12 million, etc.

Where did I get this fascinating tidbit? From the newsletter of New York's Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan. Thank you, senator!

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Cleaning slows bugs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A clean house is an important step in controlling insect pests such as cockroaches, silverfish and waterbugs.

But no matter how thorough a housecleaning, insects still may find the home a hospitable site, according to Spectracide. The firm says the key to effective control is to clean the entire house and apply insecticides simultaneously, leaving the bugs no place to hide.

If only one area is treated at a time, the insects will vacate and move to another area.

Population shifts to Third World

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the year 2034, only 7 percent of the world's population will live in developed countries, according to a recent demographic study.

The study points to a decrease in developed nations in the fertility rate to less than 2.1 births per woman. The birthrate in many underdeveloped nations, such as Bangladesh, Kenya and Nigeria, is as high as six births per woman.

Theme parks offer hours of family entertainment

The Prairie Schooner, above, can be seen when approaching the newly renovated Frontier City off I-35 near the Turner Turnpike in Oklahoma City.

From Staff Reports

OKLAHOMA CITY — Oklahoma City now has two amusement theme parks, each one providing several hours of family entertainment.

The newly-renovated Frontier City is located in north Oklahoma City on I-35 near the Turner Turnpike (I-44). The park has been given a nulti-million facelift, including several new rides, shows and entertainment features. Paint and landscaping have dramatically changed the 13-acre park site.

The Prairie Schooner flying ship can be seen long before reaching the entrance. At least five hours are needed to enjoy such rides as Mystery River log flume, Six-Shooter swing ride and Screamer roller coaster.

Between rides other sites and shows to see include the All American High Diving Team, a new addition this year which features members of the Alcapulco Divers, and the fireworks display choreographed to music and starting at 9:30 p.m. every night.

The original frontier town has been spruced up and expanded with new eating and entertainment places, including shows in the saloon. The traditional gun fights have been restaged into a comedy skit with more dialog.

Swim suits are the appropriate garb for White Water, with all its streams, slides, pools and flumes.

Newest water ride is Lazy River, a stream winding slowly throughout the park and ridden on oversized inner tubes and rafts. A favorite ride is Great Sea Wave, a huge pool with over a million gallons of water whipped into four-foot waves.

Other favorites include White Lightning, the Rapids, Twister, Cyclone and Pirate's Cove, a pool with diving rocks and an 80-foot cable glide.

Small children will enjoy Little Squirt Island, with its water cannons, crawl tubes, swings and certified lifeguards. For the entire family's comfort there are lockers, free parking, changing rooms, covered picnic area, refreshments, gift shop and lounge chairs.

Frontier City is open Wednesdays through Sundays through Labor Day, Sept. 3. The park will remain open weekends until Sept. 6. Admission is $8.25 per person. Children under 3 are admitted free and senior citizen tickets are $5 each.

White Water is open daily through Aug. 31 and the first three weekends in September, including Labor Day. Admission is $9.50 for adults, $8.50 for children aged 4-11 and free for children under 4. Lower admission prices are available for "Night Water" after 5 p.m.

The Giant Sea Wave, above, is one of the most popular rides at White Water, located off I-40 on Oklahoma City's west side.

Positive perceptions penetrate Pittsburgh population

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PITTSBURGH — It is, as writers great and small have noted, difficult, if not impossible, to go home again. Childhood perceptions are often swiftly changed by the insight of adulthood.

That monstrous homerun you hit in Little League looks insignificant when you visit the ballpark on a return trip as an adult. The old family home somehow doesn't look as grand, either. And your friends who seemed so humorous and suave in high school often grow up to be dull adults, mired in the same job in the same city in which they were raised.

But on a rare occasion you can go home again and find that your home is better, your friends brighter, your vision of the past not nearly as sparkling as the present. One city in which this is possible is Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, thought Mark Twain and many of us who grew up in or near the city, was "like hell with the lid off." It was a brawny industrial town, a place where steel and iron were king. I remember visiting Pittsburgh as a boy when it was as dark at noon as it was at midnight, the ashes and smoke from belching steel mills blotting out the midday sun.

TODAY PITTSBURGH is less polluted than Los Angeles or Denver or Salt Lake City or Houston. Although the closing of steel mills was not good economic news for Pittsburgh, the end of permanently gloomy days has given the city a clean, fresh look that is greatly assisted by a splendid collection of new skyscrapers rising from the land called the "Golden Triangle," an allusion to its location at the confluence of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio rivers.

The tidy triangle is headquarters to such Fortune 500 companies as U.S. Steel, Gulf Oil and Pittsburgh Plate Glass, and much of the money for the renaissance of the smoky city came from their coffers. The $200 million PPG building is the city's most impressive, looking like a Gothic ice palace rising 40 stories over five acres of land, and the U.S. Steel building is the largest, a rugged 64 stories tall. These and others — particularly the Mellon Bank building, which looks like a huge electric razor standing on end — give Pittsburgh as varied a skyline as you'll find in America.

At the tip of the triangle is 36-acre Point State Park, a place where all of Pittsburgh's 70 ethnic groups gather to listen to free concerts, watch massive tugboats rumble by pushing barges filled with coal, or cool off in the wind-blown water of a 200-foot-high fountain.

NOT FAR from the park (nothing in downtown Pittsburgh is far away; it is a very walkable city) is Market Square, once the center of commerce for the town, a place probably visited by George Washington when he scouted the area as a young major in 1753. Old Market Square businesses like the Original Oyster House, the Landmark Tavern and the Nicholas Coffee Co. have been refurbished and are providing food and good times to both visitors and residents. Just across the way from Market Square the PPG building hosts thousands in its winter garden and dozens of shops lure money from wallets as surely as a pickpocket. Another nearby shopping area — Oxford Centre — is even more chic, with K. Barchetti, Ralph Lauren and the like appealing to the carriage trade.

ALSO AT Station Square is the headquarters of the Gateway Clipper fleet, a mini-navy of riverboats that will take you for a tour of the rivers that have made Pittsburgh's fortune and shaped its history. On a cruise you'll learn such river facts as:

—Because of its rivers Pittsburgh has 720 bridges, more than any city in the world.

—The Monongahela is 127 miles long with nine locks and dams.

—The Allegheny is 325 miles long with eight locks and dams.

—The Ohio is 981 miles long with 20 locks and dams.

PITTSBURGH TODAY is as alive as that day a Scottish immigrant named Andrew Carnegie arrived in town and began to use his immense talents to build one of the world's great fortunes. The optimism of an earlier time has taken hold once again and Pittsburghers are clawing their way out of an economic hole that crippled much of the Northeast.

Pittsburgh is alive with new buildings, it is going to open a new subway system next year, there is hope the Steelers may have a return to Super Bowl form, Pitt is figured to have the best football team in the East, neighborhoods like Oakland and Shadyside are booming with new shops and restaurants, and the view from Mt. Washington is brighter — and clearer — than ever.

Going home again — especially when that home is Pittsburgh — is not only possible, it's great fun, too.

Pittsburgh surprisingly short of hotel rooms

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOW TO GET THERE: Greater Pittsburgh Airport, the nation's 16th busiest, is served by 11 airlines. One — US Air — uses Pittsburgh as its hub.

WHERE TO STAY: Pittsburgh is surprisingly short of hotel rooms for a major city. Westin Hotels has recently taken over the management of the William Penn and is refurbishing the grand old girl, Hilton has spent several million to redo its downtown property, Sheraton has opened a sparkling new facility on the river, and Hyatt also has a downtown property.

WHEN TO GO: Fall is the best time to see Pittsburgh. The weather is cool and dry, the hills awash with fall foliage, the stadiums alive with football. Spring is usually wet, summer can be muggy, and winter can be cruel.

WHAT TO DO: In summer and early fall, take a river cruise (a special fall six-hour foliage cruise is offered by the Gateway Clipper in October for $17.95; regular two-hour sightseeing cruises cost $5.50). The ships leave from Station Square, which is itself a first-rate attraction with shops, restaurants and a small railroad museum. You should take either the Monongahela or the Duquesne incline to the top of Mt. Washington to get an overview of the Golden Triangle. A walking tour of downtown is greatly aided by a Pittsburgh Walking Map ($2.50) which you can buy in many retail outlets. Downtown walks should include the historic Market Square area, the PPG and Oxford Centre buildings and Point State Park. For culture buffs the Carnegie Institute in neighboring Oakland is a must, and the Pittsburgh Symphony and Ballet Company are first-rate. Heinz Hall (named for Mr. 57 Varieties himself) is a cultural haven downtown and hosts many touring companies, as well as the symphony. Frank Lloyd Wright's "Fallingwater," a house built atop a waterfall, is about an hour's drive away, as are the Laurel Highlands, one of Pennsylvania's prettiest areas. Throughout the year a number of festivals are held, notably the Three Rivers Arts Festival in June and the Three Rivers Regatta in August. For lovers of nostalgia, Kennywood Park, America's first amusement park, is still entertaining legions of children and their parents. Some of the city's old streetcars still ply the rails, though not with the class of San Francisco's cable cars.

WHERE TO EAT: The dining scene in Pittsburgh has never been better. In the last year alone, more than 50 new restaurants have opened. Local restaurant critic Mike Kalina recommends these restaurants: La Normande and La Bistro in Shadyside for French, Jimmy Tsang's in Shadyside for Chinese, Rico's in North Hills for Italian, Guido Cartwright's for Italian and ribs (honest!), Poli's in Squirrel Hill for fish, and Deforo downtown for continental.

MORE INFORMATION: Contact the Greater Pittsburgh Convention and Visitors Bureau, Four Gateway Center, Pittsburgh, PA 15222. When you arrive in Pittsburgh, get a copy ($1.75) of "How to be a Real Pittsburgher" published by Pittsburgh Magazine. It will give you an excellent insight into the city and its attractions.

Phone calls toll-free

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

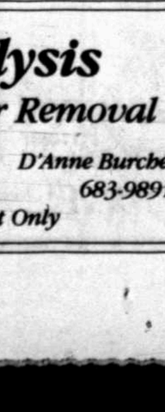

Vacationers bound for three popular tourist areas in the southeastern United States can make a toll-free phone call to a single number at each destination for help in reserving a room.

The areas are Orlando, Fla., home of Disney World; Hilton Head Island in South Carolina, a major tennis, golf and beach resort; and Gatlinburg, Tenn., gateway to Great Smoky Mountains National Park, one of the nation's most heavily visited parks.

The service is offered at no cost by Central Reservations Centers, a private firm that opened its Hilton Head office in 1979. The newest office is Orlando, which opened July 2. Branches in Washington, D.C., and New Orleans are expected to be established later this year.

At each destination, the firm offers hotels, motels, resorts or other lodging in a range of prices, says Harry Riker, executive vice president. In Orlando, it lists 20 properties, including some national hotel chains, from $34 to $120 a night for a double room.

The reservation numbers: Orlando, (800) 322-2220; Hilton Head, (800) 845-7018; Gatlinburg, (800) 231-2220.

LONES TRAVEL

Any hard-core Sherlock Holmes fan will delight in visiting the museum dedicated to preserving the legend of the master detective. Only a block from London's Trafalgar Square, at 10 Northumberland Avenue, the "Sherlock Holmes Pub" lures visitors from all over the world. The great detective's fictional study is scrupously reconstructed on the pub's second floor. Seemingly, every item mentioned in the stories is found in the cluttered study, from his violin and boxing gloves to his cape and magnifying glass. Downstairs the entire pub is richly decorated with Holmesiana. Studying the maps and mementos provided fine entertainment while having a cool drink. Much of the collection was assembled by Arthur Conan Doyle's daughter.

Whether you choose to roam the streets and museums of London or relax on a sunny beach in Hawaii, LONES TRAVEL SERVICE can arrange a trip for you you'll remember a lifetime. We are a full-service American Express office and, as such, can issue Express traveler checques, cash checks for card holders and replace lost American Express credit cards. Visit our 319 W. YORK, England — York has rediscovered the lost chapter in its history.

In its youth it was the Roman capital of Eboracum, sufficiently important that four emperors — Hadrian, Septimius Severus, Constantius I and Constantine the Great — made the long, hard trip to northern England.

In its medieval maturity it acquired its mighty walls, its higgledy-piggledy houses and its majestic cathedral, which is now undergoing restoration after the fire that damaged one transept.

But in between, in the two centuries from 867 to 1067, it was the Viking city of Jorvik, one of the richest of a chain of trading posts stretching from Scandinavia to the Middle East. Of that epoch, relatively little was known until the excavations that were carried out by the York Archeological Trust between 1976 and 1981 in the Viking street that was called Coppergate.

Now, blending the techniques of Disney and Schliemann, the trust has recreated Coppergate on its original site 20 feet below a modern red-brick shopping center.

Financed by Scandinavians, by Americans of Scandinavian descent, British businessmen and others, the Jorvik Viking Center cost almost $3.5 million. The project involved the excavation of 5,000 cubic meters of earth and the work of scores of academic experts and craftsmen.

Peter Addyman, the trust's director, said recently that he thought it had created a means not only "of introducing people to the crucial and all-but-forgotten role of Viking colonists" but also "of demonstrating the power of archeology." Michael Montague, the chairman of the English Tourist Board, asserted that "Jorvik will do as much for Viking archeology as Pompeii has done for Roman antiquities." The initial target was half a million visitors a year.

Whatever Jorvik has done for archeology, it has certainly proved a hit with the tourists. It opened on April 14, and exactly three months later it greeted its 250,000th visitor. Open 365 days a year, it charges $2.60 for adults and $1.30 for children for a visit of less than an hour.

Kevin Sellwood, an assistant manager of the center, said that about two-thirds of the customers so far had been adults. Many, he suggested, were "not the sort of people who go to museums."

Seated in a "time car," the visitor is pulled backward past gray, life-sized sculptures of figures representing the centuries since the Viking era, past World War I soldiers, 18th-century courtesans and 12th-century crusaders, while he listens to music beginning with Glenn Miller and ending with Gregorian chants. Then, suddenly, the car turns around and begins proceeding slowly through Coppergate as the experts think it was on Oct. 28, 948.

Valuable evidence for the reconstruction came from the excavations that preceded the rebuilding of Coppergate (so called because it was the home of barrel makers or coopers, and because the word "gate" means street in the Nordic languages). The diggers found not only the partial walls of the buildings but such items as a window shutter, a toilet seat, shards of pottery, dies for coins, leather-working tools and fabrics.

It was possible for the trust "to come up with a carefully argued case for every aspect of the Viking-age street," Addyman said.

Those details include real pelts, birds, scenes of cooking and weaving and herring fishing, as well as a series of smells — those of apples and wood fires and even of animal dung. The smells are given off by specially made pellets, replaced each day, which are heated in small flasks.

Fishnets made of natural fibers were brought from Gambia in West Africa, a cargo vessel was reproduced from one found buried in the mud at Roskilde, Denmark, the barrels came from the Shetland Islands, the tweed was specially woven with "Viking mistakes," and the roofs of the huts, one of the knottier scientific problems, were made from three different materials — reed, wheat straw and long natural grass — because all three were used in the period.

As the cars roll along, loudspeakers in the headrests reproduce a recorded commentary by Magnus Magnusson, who is triply qualified for the job. He is one of Britain's best-known documentary broadcasters, he comes of Scandinavian stock and he has long been involved with the work of the York trust.

Study tour to follow Beckett's footsteps

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The Canterbury Cathedral Trust in America, in cooperation with English Country Homes and Tours, is sponsoring a two-week travel-study tour, "In the Footsteps of Becket," Sept. 19 through Oct. 3.

The unusual package, limited to 30 travelers, will introduce the places identified with Thomas a Becket's life in both England and France, and will help the group perceive what life was like in the 12th century while allowing them to enjoy the comforts of the present.

Beginning in London, members will be given private tours of Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral. They also will go on a special guided tour of Canterbury Cathedral and attend a service there; cross the English Channel from Dover to Calais and the port of Wissant, where Becket set out on his last journey; visit Rouen, where Joan of Arc was martyred; see the Canterbury Cathedral Stone while in Paris; tour the great Cathedral of Chartres; drive to the Cathedral at Sens, which contains the vestments worn by Becket and a stained-glass window depicting his life, plus other activities.

The non-profit trust was created in Washington in 1980 by a group of Americans and Britons devoted to the Canterbury Cathedral. Since no public funds are provided in the United Kingdom to preserve and restore cathedrals as national monuments, the trust encourages financial gifts from Americans. Cost of the London-to-London package is $1,890 per person, double occupancy, exclusive of airfare. (Ten percent of the price is returned to the trust and is tax deductible.)

More information: The Canterbury Cathedral Trust in America, 2300 Cathedral Ave. NW, (202) 328-8788, will answer questions about the tour, but bookings must be made directly with English Homes & Country Tours, Coombe House, Sharnden, Mayfield, East Sussex TN 20 6 QA, England, phone 435-872097.

European fares vary

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

For some Europe-bound travelers, finding the cheapest fare across the Atlantic is something of a game. For others, particularly those on a student's budget, it can be a prerequisite for the trip. Saving even $25 on a plane ticket could mean an extra day in London or Paris.

Fares vary widely, even during the summer peak period when 3 million Americans are expected to go to Europe, so it can pay to spend some time searching, either on your own or with the help of a travel agent. There is a way to go about the search systematically.

— Check the APEX (advance purchase) fares offered by regularly scheduled airlines. Generally, tickets must be purchased 21 days in advance, and other restrictions may be attached. The APEX fare, generally about the same for major airlines, is the most a vacation traveler should pay.

British Airways' Dulles-to-London round-trip APEX fare this summer (through September) is $649 (Monday through Thursday) and $689 (weekends).

British Airways recently announced a new low winter round-trip fare between Washington (Dulles) and London of $418 (Monday-Thursday) and $468 (Friday-Sunday), beginning Nov. 1 (except Christmas season). Other airlines are expected to match the fare.

— People Express Airlines says it offers the lowest-priced transatlantic ticket on a scheduled airline, $159 one-way from Newark to London's Gatwick airport, and a check of records filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board's tariff division confirms this. This is no-frills service, so carry a bag lunch (which many passengers do) or pay $5 to $6 for a cold buffet. The airline, with two transatlantic departures daily, is definitely a bargain if Britain is your destination. Travel elsewhere in Europe, of course, adds to the cost.

People Express has had a reputation for being difficult to reach by phone, but a spokesman says service at the central reservation office has been upgraded and there should be fewer busy signals. As might be expected, the London flights have been filling up, so seats may not always be available.

A new entry in low-cost transatlantic service is the British-owned Virgin Atlantic, flying daily from Newark to London's Gatwick at $189 one-way, including meals. Currently the airline is taking reservations only through Sept. 15, pending authorization from the Civil Aeronautics Board to continue the flights.

Japanese show interest in 'folk houses'

By SAM HALL KAPLAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

KAMAKURA, Japan — Two old hilltop houses, with stunning views of Tokyo Bay to the east and Mt. Fuji to the west, have become architectural shrines, overlooking this historic town. Known in Japanese as "minkas," the simple timbered-frame, thatched-roof houses were saved from destruction, dismantled and moved to their dramatic site, to be lovingly restored a decade ago by an antique dealer for use as his home and shop.

A growing interest in the minkas prompted the dealer, Yoshiro Takishita, to thoroughly comb the countryside to save and restore 15 other structures, establishing in the process a very successful small construction company and training a dedicated work force.

The current interest is spurred in part by a surge of nationalism in which architectural historians respectfully note that the simple minka could be considered Japan's most distinctive and original building style, certainly its most pure.

They add that most other building styles in Japan tend to be an agglomeration of Chinese and, most recently, Western influences. Though the styles have been exceptionally well-executed, there is a hint of resentment among some Japanese designers that the nation is known for its ability to assimilate and improve on the originality of others rather than its own.

With its thatched roofs of distinct design, post-and-beam construction and flexible interiors, the minka indeed is unmistakably Japanese, just as a New England barn is American, a Georgian town house English and a Palladian mansion Italian.

The heavy sliding doors, sturdy cross beams dark with age, high ceilings and sense of space have a beauty which cannot be reproduced today, Takishita said with pride as he led a small tour through his home. Looking very much at home were the various antiques he collects and sells, including some stunning screens and an old chest on wheels.

"They put wheels on the chests so they can push it out of the house in a hurry in case of a fire," noted the 39-year-old Takishita. "Fire more than age have destroyed most minkas. You have to be very careful."

With their popularity rising and their reconstruction requiring intensive craftsmanship, minkas have become quite expensive, if indeed one can be found, bought, disassembled, shipped, reassembled and renovated for modern living. Affecting prices also are sizes and location.

Declining to estimate a cost on a typical minka, since there is no such thing as a typical minka, Takishita said "suffice it to say that you have to be very wealthy to buy a minka today." When pressed for a figure, he gave a figure comparable to "at least" $250,000, not counting the cost of land, which in Japan could be more than double the cost of the house.

The interest in the preservation of the minkas, literally translated as folk houses, is unusual. Japan is not a country that is particularly sentimental about historical landmarks, unless they are thought to have some practical, reasonable application.

Adding to this prejudice was the fact that the minka was a common landmark. For hundreds of years, its design and building materials were strictly controlled by a feudal form of government to reflect the lowly social status of its occupants.

Among the architectural elements commoners were forbidden to include in their houses — unless, of course, they paid substantial bribes for the privilege — were spacious entrance vestibules, sitting rooms with raised honorary zones, ornamental alcoves, decorated sliding panels, special gateways and even wide-window ledges.

Even after Japan's feudal system gave way to modernization in the late 19th century and to a democractic form of government after World War II, the minka was still held in disdain as a symbol of the peasant class and left to deteriorate or be bulldozed over.

According to the definitive "A Guide to Japanese Architecture," edited by the staff of "The Japan Architect" magazine, "the minka is beautiful with the loveliness born of every-day living. This beauty can often be found in abundance in the spaces around the earthen-floored entrances to farm and town houses, whereas it is frequently lacking completely in the more pretentious inner parlors."

Indian village constructed

By BURR SNIDER
Hearst News Service

POINT REYES, Calif. — The ancestors of the Coast Miwok Indians arrived on the Point Reyes Peninsula 3500 years ago and found an environment of such serenity and abundance that they were able to live here in perfect harmony and natural balance for several millenniums.

Then came the white man. It's an old, terrible, seemingly unalterable story that when two such cultures clash, the more "primitive" of the two, the least mechanically advanced, will be decimated. The Coast Miwoks had erected a hunting and gathering civilization that was so simple, peaceful, efficient and regenerative of the earth that they amazed the first explorers who came here. But it wasn't enough to withstand the destructive thrust of the whites.

"They are a people of a tractable, free and loving nature," wrote Francis Fletcher, the chaplain of Sir Francis Drake's Golden Hinde. The Miwoks hunted the fat deer that abounded, as well as sea otters (for trading pelts), muskrats, bear and elk. They gathered acorns for flour, ate berries and fruit, fished for salmon, and gathered mussels and clams. They made elegant basketry, tools, cooking utensils and items of adornment made of feathers, seeds and shells. They built boats and shelters of wood and thule grass, lashing them together with willow bark. Just about the only thing they were forced to trade for was obsidian, which they used for spears and arrows.

The Miwoks were neither territorial nor acquisitive, and they lived in little bands that tread so lightly on the earth that they kept this peninsula in a natural state for thousands of years.

The first contacts with explorers were characterized by benign curiosity on both sides. It wasn't until the settlers arrived — the Spanish missions to the south, the Russian fur outposts to the north — that contact with the whites became disastrous.

"When the Spanish from the San Francisco and San Raphael missions came looking for workers, that was the beginning of the end," says Alan Morikawa, the U.S. ranger who is the project director for Pt. Reyes' Miwok village.

Of the 3,000 Indians on the peninsula when the Spanish mission system reached here, there remained about 300 after only 60 years. Only a few full-blooded Miwoks are alive today.

But by using archeological evidence, explorer and settler accounts and information from coeval cultures, a group of volunteers, working with the National Park Service, has erected a perfect working replica of one of the 113 Miwok villages that existed in this area.

Chamber to launch drive

BY RON GILMORE
BUSINESS—OIL WRITER

Midland businessmen will be hit with a 'blitz' this week as the Chamber of Commerce launches its first membership drive in several years.

The city-wide effort, carrying the message, 'Chamber MADE', will involve four teams of chamber members, each with five persons.

"This is the first membership drive in quite awhile," said Allison Peeler, Director of Special Programs for the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "The Chamber has been in a state of reorganization during the past few years," she said, "but we hope to make this a yearly event."

The Midland Chamber of Commerce is an organization set up and run by local business leaders to promote a healthy business economy and attract expansion of large companies into the Midland area.

"The more businesses that move into town, the better for everyone," said Mark Kimball, Chairman of the Membership Sales Committee.

Kimball, owner of the local distributorship for Executone, is enthusiastic about the membership drive.

"The attitude here is so positive, simply because of what the Chamber as done," he said.

Kimball referred to a trade show, as one example that was put on by the Chamber in February.

"Alot of people bought things just because of that trade show," he said.

Larry Bell, president of HBF Construction and former president of the Chamber of Commerce, believes that local businesses can benefit by interaction with the Chamber.

"There are numerous new business in Midland," he said. "Many of them have simply never been asked to join or are not familiar with what the Chamber of Commerce is doing to enhance the business community."

"The Chamber provides great opportunity to get acquainted with other businssmen in the community," he said.

The Chamber pays off

Louis Hochman can tell you what the Chamber of Commerce was like in 1958. That was the year he arrived in Midland and opened Luigi's, his successful Italian restaraunt.

"When I came here, there just wasn't much interest in growing and obtaining new members," said Hochman, Chairman of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, and past director of the Chamber.

"Today the Chamber has young, dynamic leaders," he said. "There has definately been quite an aggressive change over the years."

Hochman named the Midland-Odessa Airport and an industrial park that houses Texas Instruments as two results of the Chamber's progressiveness.

"The airport was of course, a city project, but I give an awful lot of credit to the Chamber for promoting it," he said.

Bringing in new industry, promoting sports and keeping the local businessmen informed of the economic situation, building occupancy and civic matters are other areas Hochman listed as Chamber of Commerce attributes.

"The larger our membership, the stronger we are," said Hochman.

Hochman, a long-time leader in the Permian Basin, has served as chairman of Midland County Library, president of the Texas Restaurant Association - Permian Basin, and director of the Chamber of Commerce. He is currently the senior vice-president for the Texas Restaurant Association, board member of Mid-Tran and chairman for the Civic Center.

Midland theaters enjoying revival

BY RON GILMORE
BUSINESS—OIL WRITER

The big screen business in Midland is getting bigger and better.

While Midlanders may love their wide blue sky and endless West Texas horizon, three companies are spending big money to satisify the market for those who like to sit in dark, windowless rooms. Theaters...Midlanders also love their movies.

With a scheduled December opening for General Cinema Corp.'s newest movie house (North Park Cinema No.'s 1-4), the re-opening of Texan Drive-In by Ritz Theater Corp. last week and future expansion plans for United Artists Communications Inc., Midlanders will have over 14 screens to choose from by the end of the year.

John Snyder, manager for Midland Park Mall Cinemas, is optimistic about General Cinema's expansion.

He is confident his multi-screen, multi-theater position will put him in a favorable posture in the bidding war for first-run movies.

"This means we will be able to get the better movies," said Snyder, "and for the first time, we will get movies on their opening day."

ACCORDING TO Snyder, movies currently being shown in Midland are on a week-delay basis. The new theater complex, to hold four screens, has one more advantage, says Snyder.

"The theater has a new feature called the 'inter-lock' sytem which will allow us to show one movie on two screens," he said. "This will permit twice as many people to see the same movie at once."

North Park Cinemas, a complex with four theaters, is located at the corner of Loop 250 and Billingsley Boulevard, just two blocks down and across the Loop from Midland Park Mall Cinemas. Upon completion of North Park Cinemas, the north Loop area will have eight screens to choose from.

"The Loop is where Midland is progressing to," said Snyder. "With the large number of apartment complexes nearby, there will be no problem filling seats.".

Total seating capacity of the new complex will be 976 persons, compared to Midland Park Mall Cinemas at 748 persons.

Bruce Taffet, West Texas District Manager for United Artists Communications Inc., is undaunted by GC's expansion.

"There is enough of a population base in Midland to merit expansion," he said. "We have been looking for a suitable location for future expansion in Midland for more than a year."

UNITED ARTISTS already has one theater complex in Midland and is in the process of building a six-plex theater in Odessa, scheduled to open in December.

While the two national theater giants rush to build mega-plexes, Ritz Theater Corp. has gone outdoors with the re-opening of the 500-car Texan Drive-In.

"The response has been fantastic," said Jim Wilmes, manager of Ritz Theater Corp.

Ann Huffman, the drive-in's manager agrees.

"People with small children have especially been pleased with the re-opening of the the theater, since it allows them to take the family without bothering others," she said.

The Texan Drive-In is offering family-geared movies and second-run shows. It is located on Highway 80 near the Loop turn-off.

Julie Moellering, front, and Pam Tatsch contemplate the re-opening of the Texan Drive-in, and the return of a lost West Texas tradition. The re-opening is part of a theater revival in Midland.

United Bank completes sale of 450,000 shares

Wayne Merritt, Chief Executive Officer of United Bank in Midland has announced the successful completion of the sale of 450,000 shares of common stock to the public and 168,358 shares of non-voting preferred stock to a wholly owned subsidiary of Mercantile Texas Corporation of Dallas. The stock sales raised $7.9 million in new capital for the bank and increases the total capital accounts of the bank to over $10 million while the preferred stock generated $2.5 million. The preferred issue represents the first phase of a $3.885 million commitment by Mercantile Texas. The second phase closing on the preferred stock is expected in 60 to 90 days, according to Merritt.

Merritt stated, "Due to the demand for United Bank stock, our initial common stock offering was over-subscribed by the public. We are very gratified by the investor confidence in the future of Midland and United Bank." He added, "Because of the over-subscription, the bank is filing a secondary offering circular with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency for the sale of additional common stock." Subject to regulatory and shareholder approval, and the execution of agreements, Mercantile Texas has expressed an intent to maintain its position by purchasing additional preferred stock. Total capital funds for the bank are then expected to reach almost $14 million.

According to Merritt, the board of directors feels that "Capital strength will be the key to the banking business in the future." Following completion of the capital program, United Bank will have met two of its major goals: (1) To be, in terms of capital/assets ratio, the strongest capitalized financial institution in the Permian Basin, and, (2) To establish stock ownership of the bank in Midland. Over 98 percent of the outstanding common stock is now owned by Midlanders. United board members include Frank Agar, Bob Bailey, Dan Black, Perry Bolger, George Bush, Ferrell Davis, Arden Grover, Tevis Herd (Advisory), Jack Hightower, Clint Hurt, Don Jones, Cadell Liedtke, Scott Lovett (Advisory), Wayne Merritt, Herb Ware and Charles Younger.

United Bank is currently located at 500 W. Missouri, but will be relocating in October to its new headquarters on the ground floor of the United Bank Building at 500 W. Illinois at Marienfeld.

Will lower crude prices put Basin on skids

Despite a sharp rally by petroleum prices Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, there is still an atmosphere of fear in many quarters of the oil industry that crude prices might go into a sharp decline.

The fears are predicated on an enormous surplus of crude floating on the high seas, just waiting to land; recent price decreases made by Diamond Shamrock, Citgo and Tosco, here, and price cuts by the Soviet Union and Venezuela, abroad. Also a matter for concern is the fact that OPEC is straining at the "blessed ties that bind."

"It's a situation that we are watching hourly," says Bill Klein, president, Permian Corp. "Spot prices are tumbling. There's a lot of crude in the world today."

The news of possible cuts in crude oil prices does not come at a good time. Since the first of the year, every speechmaker and prognosticator to mount a podium before oil crowds delivered the same "canned" but reassuring news that the depression had bottomed out and the industry was on the way back up. They also predicted stable oil prices for the rest of the year.

THOSE REASSURANCES and the prospect of a stable oil price brought a new surge of confidence into an oil patch that had just had its legs knocked out from under it by a bully-of-a-glut and unexpected plunging prices.Operators were just beginning to regain confidence in the area of exploration, and the renewed activity characterized by a rig count 100 above the same period last year, translated into a picture of renewed prosperity for the entire Permian Basin.

Now, the threat of plunging oil prices could erase that picture.

In the oil business, as in most businesses, when signals of economic uncertainty crop up, those who spend money tend to put projects on hold and take a wait-and-see posture until prices stabilize or take off upward. And while operators wait and see, rigs wait and rust, and pitifully little happens to generate wages.

While stating that there had been no actual significant change in oil prices in the Permian Basin, Bill Klein did say that the crude oil market was very soft, with pressure for a downward trend in prices.

"I don't like to forewarn of doom," he said, "but it wouldn't take much to topple things at this moment."

ONE OF THE factors he mentions as contributing to the pressure for a downward trend is the cheating among OPEC members, who produce far more oil than their agreed allotment.

As one acquaintence explained it: "We buy oil and put it in the ground and call it our strategic petroleum reserves. The Arabs produce it, put it on tankers and call it their strategic petroleum reserves."

A spokesman for Shell Oil Corp. in Houston described the situation as "premature."

"This is a volatile market. The crude market is the perfect example of the law of supply and demand in action. It responds immediately to excess or scarcity. I think it's too early to bend a chip. Some people are probably reading too much into the situation," said Rich Hansen, Shell media spokesman.

Hansen does not discount OPEC excess production, but reasons that increased demand for No. 6 oil for boilers, plants and vehicles, as a result of an upturn in the economy, is partially responsible for the soft crude market. He said some of the smaller refineries were running all out to produce No. 6 oil, which caused a surplus of refined products and explained the recent low gas prices. He added that gasoline was being sold as a loss-leader.

OFFERING A GLIMMER of optimism to the situation is the fact that the major oil companies seem to be united in holding the line on the price. Another is the intent of Saudi Arabia to reduce its production for August from 5.5 millions barrels per day, which had been the nation's June and July levels.

Still to be contended with, however, is the possible wholesale cheating on the part of OPEC members if prices start to tumble. While it is easy for OPEC members to agree when demand and price are going up, (all that needs to be determined is 'how much'). It is another thing for them to hold together when the price is falling. Panic and greed set in and the result is even more production.

But those who know are betting they will not deteriorate that easy. OPEC has been through some genuine crises and has held together, surprising more than a few.

"I don't expect a drop of a dollar or two would make a lot of difference in activity in the Permian Basin," says Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "But if it drops much further, we had better look out. When it went from $35 a barrel to $30 a barrel, we all know what happened."

Thompson said that if prices do slip again, the service industries would suffer. He said they were now at the break-even point and could not be pushed much further.

"I think everyone understands that now," said Thompson. "The oil service industry can't be priced into extinction."

Some may feel it's too early to start worrying about declining oil prices. We can only hope they are right. But, then as Thompson says: "We all remember what happened when oil went from $35 to $30 a barrel." People who live in tornado alley have a right to worry about dark clouds."

Construction down here

Staff reports

A recent survey of construction activity in Midland shows less building activity than a year ago.

In its report, The F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. found that total building permits for the month of June, 1984, with a total of $7,024,000, were 17 percent less than June, 1983, with a total of $8,499,000.

Nonresidential buildings, with a total of $4,549,000, were 76 percent ahead of June, 1983, with a total of $2,588,000. Residential buildings, with a June 1984 total of $2,475,000, were 58 percent behind June, 1983, with a total of $5,911,000.

For 1984 year-to-date, total permits, with $51,478,000, were 38 percent less than 1983 year-to-date, with $82,559,000. Nonresidential buildings, with $25,742,000, were 17 percent ahead of 1983, wth $21,952,000. Residential buildings, with $25,736,000, were 58 percent behind 1983, with $60,607,000.

The report's statistics indicate that more offices and other buildings not designed for shelter are being built than residences, but that, overall, Midland is seeing less construction.

Texas still conducive for business

AUSTIN — Results of a survey initiated by the Office of Secretary of State indicate most new business ventures in Texas account for 73.2 percent of newly incorporated businesses — evidence of the state's conducive business climate for entrepreneurs.

A questionnaire was sent to each newly formed Texas corporation and every out-of-state firm that had received a certificate of authority for business transactions in Texas. Out of 3,283 Texas corporations, 551 responded and 93 of 327 out-of-state businesses responded.

According to survey analysts, most of the new business enterprises are predominantly service and real estate corporations. The service sector will provide the largest increase in employment, with an anticipated 28.7 growth in business services and a 32.9 percent increase in other services.

Data from the survey also indicates 67 percent of new Texas corporations and 57.7 percent of the out-of-state firms estimate employing one to five persons in the first year.

Temporary help industry faces new challenges, opportunities

DALLAS — The temporary help services industry, including employers of temporary help, organizations providing such service and temporary employees themselves, face a number of challenges and opportunities created by advances in technology, changing expectations of the temporary worker and increased demand for temporary help.

This was the message of Ron Kapche and Kate Tomlin, president and executive director of the Temporary Help Services Association of Texas, in speeches recently given at the annual conference of the Dallas Women's Network.

Kapche's speech detailed recent trends in the temporary help industry, and how these trends are influencing the job market for women. Tomlin, once a temporary employee herself, spoke of the changes within the industry from a personal point of view and discussed some of the programs being developed by THSAT.

Citing the decline in the number of blue collar jobs and the dramatic growth in white collar service-oriented positions, Kapche noted that "some think unemployment levels (for temporary help employees) won't shrink for years, but we've learned a lot from this past recession, and one of the most important lessons was this: that despite the recession, there was and continues to be a severe shortage of skilled office workers. Because most of that group is comprised of women, the unemployment rate for them was less than for others."

Because of this shortage, properly skilled women will be in demand and will continue to gain prestige and higher salaries. Women knowledgeable in the use of high tech office equipment, notably data entry and word processing systems, can expect a choice of employment opportunities. Currently there are an estimated 2.5 million electronic workstations in the U.S., and the number is expected to soar to 17.5 million by 1990.

But, according to Kapche, the amount of such equipment currently available far outweighs the number of skilled operators for such equipment. Temporary assignments involving such equipment have more than tripled in the first half of 1984.

"Think for a moment about a typical piece of word processing equipment. A cost estimate for such a piece of equipment might be $10,000. If a company amortizes this equipment at $1,000 a year, that is roughly the extent of this machine's cost. But sitting in front of that machine is an operator who will cost anywhere from twelve to fifteen times that amount per year. What is the biggest factor here? The personnel cost, and just as with any other office function, that operator will get sick, go on vaction, special projects will arise. All of which mean the need will be there for temporary service.

"Right now, the need is even more critical. Approximately 70 percent of the temporary office work force is women, and 41 percent of these are working mothers. In late May and early June, they leave our ranks for the summer to spend time at home with their children. That's why they chose the temporary lifestyle — they want summers and holidays to be with their families. The intangibles of temporary work are very appealing to this group, and they can earn much more money by working as a temporary. They get experience and add new skills to their resumes," Kapche said.

But more businesses are employing increasing numbers of temporary help in the summer to fill in for vacationing employees. On any given day, according to Kapche, 6.7 percent of the workforce is absent, and in August that figure swells to eight percent, or more than five million people out on any given workday.

"In September, workers return from vacation and business gets down to business. Proposals are written, budgets are planned, everyone's cooking. There's an avalanche of work and the secretary needs extra help — temorary help."

Thus the need for temporary help has expanded not only in terms of demand for operators skilled in high tech equipment, but also as a result of increased demand periods in the summer and fall.

GM cuts price on slow-selling small cars

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. has cut the price of two of its slowest selling U.S.-built small cars and reduced the cost of optional diesel engines in an effort to avoid paying big fines for violating federal fuel-economy standards for 1984 models.

GM said that it is raising the prices on two other hot-selling models in what analysts described as a move to cushion the blow to consumers of even larger price increases that are quite likely to come at the start of the 1985 model year this fall.

GM said that it is immediately reducing the base price of its two-door Chevrolet Chevette by 3.3 percent and is reducing the four-door Chevette's price by 2.1 percent. GM added that it was making similar reductions on its Pontiac 1000 subcompact.

At a time when most GM models show robust sales increases, the Chevette and its twin, the 1000, are performing sluggishly. Chevette sales rose less than 4 percent in the first six months of 1984 compared with last year; 1000 sales fell nearly 19 percent from the same 1983 period. Combined, the two models account for 2.6 percent of GM's total sales so far in 1984, down from last year's 3.3 percent.

Slow sales of fuel-efficient subcompacts worry GM because the government's fleet-wide fuel economy ratings are based on the average fuel economy of all cars a company produces and sells during the year.

The recovery in big-car sales reduced GM's fleet-wide fuel economy average, and the company acknowledged it will not meet the federal standards for 1984, making it liable to enormous fines.

For every tenth of a mile-per-gallon by which GM violates of the standard, it must pay $5 for every car it produces during the year. The federal standard requires a fleet-wide average of 27 miles per gallon in 1984; GM said its average will probably be about 24.7 mpg.

GM will avoid those fines this year by using credits from prior years when it exceeded the standards, but has acknowledged that it still may not be able to meet the standards for another two or three years and may soon run out of credits.

To help reduce its exposure to penalties, GM has said it will continue production of 1984-model Chevettes, 1000s, and its larger J-car subcompacts and the Pontiac Fiero, as late as November in some cases, three or four months after it switches to 1985 production in most of its other lines. The price reductions announced Monday appear to be designed to boost sales of those extra cars.

Since the federal fleet-wide averages on fuel economy are based on model-year production totals for each company, the extra small-car production should help GM raise its rating by an estimated 0.3 mpg.

Shogun to open here

Shogun Japanese Steak House has announced it will open a restaurant in Colonnade at Polo Park this fall.

According to Julian Ng, owner of the Shogun Japanese Steak House in Odessa, the second Shogun restaurant will occupy 5,000 square feet of space.

"We plan to bring the success we have enjoyed in Odessa to Midland," said Ng. "Our reputation for Japanese food comparable to or better than that found in large cities should help us in our expansion to Midland."

Ng said that the Shogun restaurant in Colonnade will have capacity to serve approximately 80-100 people in the dining room and 40-50 in the bar.

He estimated that they will occupy the space sometime in October. Plans call for a contemporary Japanese decor.

Ng also announced that Augusto Okuma has been named manager of the Midland Shogun Japanese steak House. Okuma has more than 14 years experience in all phases of oriental restaurants, said Ng.

The Shogun Japanese Steak House in Odessa marks its first anniversary on July 31. In appreciation of their success and acceptance, Ng will donate all sales on that day to the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers of both Midland and Odessa. He estimates the amount of that gift may approach $8,000.

According to Todd Williams, leasing agent for Colonnade, the Shogun Japanese steak House will be the anchor restaurant within the complex.

"We are pleased to secure such a fine, oriental restaurant for the Colonnade," said Williams. "Not only do we believe it is the best, but it will be the exclusive restaurant of the Colannade."

The four-building complex being developed into the Colonnade is located on 11.5 acres at the northeast corner of loop 250 and Garfield.

Scheduled for occupancy by tenants in October, Colonnade consists of 108,000 square feet of leasable space devoted to exclusive specialty shops.

Steenson Properties Inc. is the developer of the Colonnade at Polo Park, as well as the adjacent residential development at Polo Park. Billy DeArmon, vice president of Steenson Properties is project coordinator.

They get experience and add new skills to their resumes," Kapche said.

But more businesses are employing increasing numbers of temporary help in the summer to fill in for vacationing employees. On any given day, according to Kapche, 6.7 percent of the workforce is absent, and in August that figure swells to eight percent, or more than five million people out on any given workday.

"In September, workers return from vacation and business gets down to business. Proposals are written, budgets are planned, everyone's cooking. There's an avalanche of work and the secretary needs extra help — temorary help."

Thus the need for temporary help has expanded not only in terms of demand for operators skilled in high tech equipment, but also as a result of increased demand periods in the summer and fall.

GM cuts price on slow-selling small cars

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. has cut the price of two of its slowest selling U.S.-built small cars and reduced the cost of optional diesel engines in an effort to avoid paying big fines for violating federal fuel-economy standards for 1984 models.

GM said that it is raising the prices on two other hot-selling models in what analysts described as a move to cushion the blow to consumers of even larger price increases that are quite likely to come at the start of the 1985 model year this fall.

GM said that it is immediately reducing the base price of its two-door Chevrolet Chevette by 3.3 percent and is reducing the four-door Chevette's price by 2.1 percent. GM added that it was making similar reductions on its Pontiac 1000 subcompact.

At a time when most GM models show robust sales increases, the Chevette and its twin, the 1000, are performing sluggishly. Chevette sales rose less than 4 percent in the first six months of 1984 compared with last year; 1000 sales fell nearly 19 percent from the same 1983 period. Combined, the two models account for 2.6 percent of GM's total sales so far in 1984, down from last year's 3.3 percent.

Slow sales of fuel-efficient subcompacts worry GM because the government's fleet-wide fuel economy ratings are based on the average fuel economy of all cars a company produces and sells during the year.

The recovery in big-car sales reduced GM's fleet-wide fuel economy average, and the company acknowledged it will not meet the federal standards for 1984, making it liable to enormous fines.

For every tenth of a mile-per-gallon by which GM violates of the standard, it must pay $5 for every car it produces during the year. The federal standard requires a fleet-wide average of 27 miles per gallon in 1984; GM said its average will probably be about 24.7 mpg.

GM will avoid those fines this year by using credits from prior years when it exceeded the standards, but has acknowledged that it still may not be able to meet the standards for another two or three years and may soon run out of credits.

To help reduce its exposure to penalties, GM has said it will continue production of 1984-model Chevettes, 1000s, and its larger J-car subcompacts and the Pontiac Fiero, as late as November in some cases, three or four months after it switches to 1985 production in most of its other lines. The price reductions announced Monday appear to be designed to boost sales of those extra cars.

Since the federal fleet-wide averages on fuel economy are based on model-year production totals for each company, the extra small-car production should help GM raise its rating by an estimated 0.3 mpg.

Shogun to open here

Shogun Japanese Steak House has announced it will open a restaurant in Colonnade at Polo Park this fall.

According to Julian Ng, owner of the Shogun Japanese Steak House in Odessa, the second Shogun restaurant will occupy 5,000 square feet of space.

"We plan to bring the success we have enjoyed in Odessa to Midland," said Ng. "Our reputation for Japanese food comparable to or better than that found in large cities should help us in our expansion to Midland."

Ng said that the Shogun restaurant in Colonnade will have capacity to serve approximately 80-100 people in the dining room and 40-50 in the bar.

He estimated that they will occupy the space sometime in October. Plans call for a contemporary Japanese decor.

Ng also announced that Augusto Okuma has been named manager of the Midland Shogun Japanese steak House. Okuma has more than 14 years experience in all phases of oriental restaurants, said Ng.

The Shogun Japanese Steak House in Odessa marks its first anniversary on July 31. In appreciation of their success and acceptance, Ng will donate all sales on that day to the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Centers of both Midland and Odessa. He estimates the amount of that gift may approach $8,000.

According to Todd Williams, leasing agent for Colonnade, the Shogun Japanese steak House will be the anchor restaurant within the complex.

"We are pleased to secure such a fine, oriental restaurant for the Colonnade," said Williams. "Not only do we believe it is the best, but it will be the exclusive restaurant of the Colannade."

The four-building complex being developed into the Colonnade is located on 11.5 acres at the northeast corner of loop 250 and Garfield.

Scheduled for occupancy by tenants in October, Colonnade consists of 108,000 square feet of leasable space devoted to exclusive specialty shops.

Steenson Properties Inc. is the developer of the Colonnade at Polo Park, as well as the adjacent residential development at Polo Park. Billy DeArmon, vice president of Steenson Properties is project coordinator.

U.S. Rig Count

Rig count rebounds from slide

The Permian Basin rig count rebounded strongly this week, coming up from 333 to 346. This came after the count sank last week to 333 from 344 the previous week.

Pecos County picked up three rigs to climb into second place with Andrews County with 27 rigs apiece. Hockley picked up four rigs to gain third place and make that county a new activity contender. Lea County, even though it dropped three rigs, remains in first place with 38 rigs working.

There was little change in activity in other counties throughout the Permian Basin.

The rig count last year in the Basin was 243 for this period.

On the national scene the rig count took a substantial drop from 2,415 last week to 2,397 this week.

Texas dropped 29 rigs to account for a lion's share of the decline, while other states added rigs. Oklahoma added 10, while other states remained relatively flat.

CHAMBER

directors of the Chamber and more than 120 volunteers. The Chamber's four divisions - executive, membership, community and economic will each have eight teams participating in the drive. Each team, headed by a captain, has five person.

The Chamber is shooting for a minimum of 400 new members. Each division will compete with the other for 100 new members each with team goals of 13 members and individual goals of 3 new members recruited.

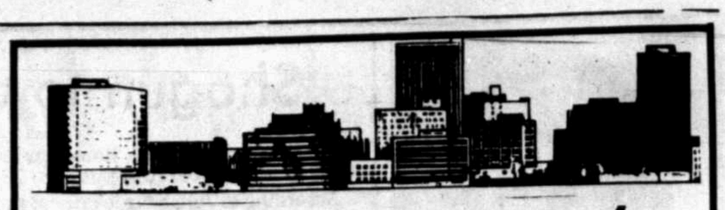

The top divisions and individuals will recieve awards at a victory celebration to be held August 16, the final day of the drive. The losing division will tend bar at the celebration.

Heading the Chamber's recruiting blitz are: Kimball and George Irish, Vice-President of Membership. Irish is the publisher of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

THEATER

Ironically, the expansion of theaters in Midland is a result of the very thing that closed them down in the early 1980's - population increase. The huge influx of newcomers into Midland during that time caused property value to rise making it more profitable for theater owners to sell the property than to continue operating the theaters.

Roadrunner Charter is on the move

For ten years people have been relying on Roadrunner Charter Service to get them where they need to be when they need to be there. Roadrunner's quality fleet of 5 airplanes and 1 helicopter, as well as their highly skilled pilots, are on the move twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. They offer charters, sightseeing, hot-shot, and many other aerial projects. In fact, one hour's notice can put you in the air, on the way to a drilling rig in the Permian Basin, a convention in Houston, or a gambling spree in Las Vegas.

Now, Roadrunner is on the move to offer their customers even more. This week they have relocated to Ector County Airport in order to expand their services to include aircraft sales and rental, fuel sales, and maintenance for all types of aircraft.

Roadrunner is now selling aviation gas for $1.85 and jet fuel for just $1.65. Roadrunner's general manager, Jim Carlson, invites you to fuel up and check out the new facility and maintenance service. Roadrunner's experts are trained to service helicopters, as well as most types of airplanes.

If you are a pilot and prefer to do your own flying, Roadrunner will be glad to rent you an airplane. When you are ready to purchase a plane, Roadrunner can help you with that, too.

Even with all these new services, Roadrunner has not sacrificed their flight instruction programs or charter services. As always, Roadrunner Charter will still be glad to pick you up at Midland Regional Air Terminal or Midland Air Park.

When you are choosing a charter service remember that all Roadrunner Charter pilots undergo an extensive training program and are extremely well qualified to fly in any weather conditions. They also receive regularly scheduled training so that their proficiency level always meets Roadrunner's high standards.

Jim Carlson, general manager of Roadrunner Charter, says they still have the only full size helicopter in the Permian Basin which is available for charter service. Demonstration or sight seeing trips in the helicopter are available for $35.

So, call Roadrunner Charter today at (915)563-2288 or stop by Ector County Airport and see their new facilities.

Midland Building Specialties' storm windows and doors cut energy costs

Midland Building Specialties offers energy efficient storm windows and doors in a wide selection of styles and colors. Not only do these windows and doors add beauty to your home, but they also cut energy costs. The special Ford sunglass which Midland Building Specialties uses reflects more of the sun's rays than clear glass does. This protects your home from summer heat.

Added security and noise reduction are also good reasons to install storm windows and doors. In addition, when the dusty season comes next spring, storm windows and doors may be considered a housekeeper's best friend.

Midland Building Specialties' storm doors are a heavy grade 1⅜" thick frame with 3/16" safety glass. They come in a variety of styles and colors and all are equipped with keyed locks as well as deadbolt locks. From the full glass look to the operator with half screens, these doors are well fitted and very durable.

These insulated doors and windows also qualify on your income taxes as an energy credit. What a savings!

For those who have old wooden window frames which tend to rot out, Ken VanHoozer, manager of Midland Building Specialties, has a suggestion. Insulated replacement aluminum windows can be placed in the old window frames. This will make opening the window a simple task, instead of a big wrestling match. In addition, aluminum can be wrapped attractively around the old window frame to leave a paint free surface. Ken also offers replacement entry doors in many styles.

Midland Building Specialties has recently expanded their expert services to include siding. They carry Revere steel siding which is well known for adding extra insulation, being incredibly durable, and offering a wide variety of colors as well as a life time guarantee. Likewise, the Mastic vinyl siding which they offer is a great value. Mastic siding is guaranteed to never crack, bend, rust or scratch. It provides an easily cleaned, paint-free exterior in a number of colors.

The experts at Midland Building Specialties are also prepared to blow in extra insulation if your home needs it.

Before you paint your home again or purchase siding from a company you don't know, call Midland Building Specialties. Since they are a local company, they are commited to providing their customers with outstanding service now and for years to come. They will be glad to give you a free estimate. Through August 31st, Midland Building Specialties is offering all complete siding jobs at 20% off.

Midland Stained Glass adds sparkle

Make a dazzling entry with Midland Stained Glass Center. Stained and bevelled glass creations are a bright alternative to drab doorways. Midland Stained Glass Center has many beautiful stained glass and etched designs available for you to choose from, or they will custom design a door which expresses your own artistic idea. Mary Richardson, manager of Midland Stained Glass Center, says that many people personalize their entry door by having their initial designed in stained glass. Coordinating transems and side lights can add even more dazzle to your entry.

If you're bewildered as to where you could get a door to put the stained glass panel in- worry no more. Midland Stained Glass Center now carries high quality solid wood doors in mahogany, ash, oak and pine. Because they are not limited to a standard size, these doors may also be used as replacement doors. Furthermore, when you get ready to move you can take your beautiful customized door with you!

Mary Richardson can also bring a little sparkle to your atrium. She recommends stained glass hangings which can be easily moved or changed out when you redecorate. Only your imagination limits the uniqueness of the design and placing of these sparkling stained glass pieces.

Stained Glass can also give a little glitter to the accent pieces throughout your home. It can dress up dresser sets, run rings around dull ring boxes, brighten up lamp shades, and top off coffee tables, end tables and games tables. Stained glass is also attractive on stationery boxes, tissue box covers, night lights, and mirrors.

In fact, mirrors offer a medium for many bright ideas. They can be framed with stained glass or etched. Midland Stained Glass Center etchs mirrors two ways. Cream etching is done on the front of the mirror or glass to give a soft look and smooth feel. On the other hand, sandblasting offers a deep, rough look which can be accomplished by working on either side of the glass or mirror.

Another bit of enlightening information is that Midland Stained Glass Center can make beautiful creations from their own materials or they will be glad to work with a mirror you already have. Whether it be a dresser mirror, wall mirror, or free standing mirror, a beautiful special effect can be added with etching.

While you're brightening up your home, let your own brillance show in one of the classes at Midland Stained Glass Center. They offer beginning and advanced classes covering everything from the basics to the construction of panels for entry doors. The schedule for fall classes is now being considered, so call Mary Richardson at 697-0322 if you have a particular class you would like to see offered.

Midland Stained Glass Center has the promise of a bright future. A new shipment of glass with a wide variety of colors should arrive in mid-August. Meanwhile, they are offering 30% to 50% off the glass which is now in stock. So, go by 4313-A West Illinois and take advantage of this big sale or order a splendid stained glass piece for your home.

Midland Stained Glass Center can help you add some sparkle to your home. Stained Glass is attractive in room dividers, such as the one pictured, as well as in entry doors, around mirrors, and in hangings. Drop by and see what all is available at 4313-A West Illinois.

State loan program to assist small businesses reviewed

AUSTIN — Legislation for a state program guaranteeing federal loans to small businesses is among recommendations for the 1985 legislature being reviewed by the Governor's office of economic dvelopment.

Office director Harden Wiedemann says the program is one of "five to 10" bills which lawmakers may be asked to consider next year, as part of the office's efforts to boost economic development in Texas.

Wiedemann reports there is no state program at present to guarantee loans made under the Small Business Administration's 7(a) loan guarantee program, which can provide guarantees for up to 90 percent of a loan for small businesses.

While the office has no plans for "any major new initiatives," efforts will continue on industrial development and recruitment, he says.

Efforts will be made to find ways to expedite permits for new and expanding industries at the local level,, Wiedemann says, noting efforts to provide such "one-stop permitting" have been started at the state level.

Wiedemann says he feels Texas has "entered a new era" in industrial development efforts, with "public and private cooperation that hasn't existed before."

An example of that, he says, was the work to have the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC) locate in Austin, with similar efforts made to help Texas obtain other high-tech facilities.

Wiedemann cautions, however, that small towns be careful in joining the "high-tech mania."

Many high-tech firms are "very small," he notes, and "take time to grow."

And such firms frequently have higher productivity and thus need fewer employees, Wiedemann says — and also are tied to major research institutions.

Such factors, he comments, should be considered by groups seeking high-tech firms.

Overall, Wiedemann says, his office hopes to work to move Texas away from its traditional dependence on oil and gas to a broader industrial base.

"What we're really looking at," he says, "is creating jobs...and employing Texans."

Texas Department of Health is reviewing recommendaions received on its proposed regulations for changes in hazardous waste rules, designed to bring small-quantity generators under TDH registration and shipping requirements.

At present, generators of 1,000 kilograms (2,200 pounds) or more per month of hazardous wastes must register with TDH; the revised requirements would apply to generators of 100 kilograms or more per month.

TDH was asked by the Sierra Club to strengthen provisions regarding location of any storage, processing or disposal facilities for hazardous wastes in aquifer recharge zones.

Also requested were clarification of provisions on exemptions for recycling operations, to assure that wastes aren't being improperly disposed of under the guise of recycling.

TDH estimates some 10,000 small-quantity generators will be required to register with TDH under the revised rules (and reports many already have obtained identification numbers).

Danny Burger, Municipal Advisory Council of Texas, reports an increase in school bond activity in Texas, with $568 million in bonds issued during the first six months of 1984.

Ford to recall for fan defects

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. will recall about 773,000 Ford and Lincoln-Mercury cars and Rancheros with engine cooling fans that may crack and send fragments flying, the automaker says.

The recall covers 1977-model Thunderbirds, Cougars, LTD IIs and Rancheros with 302, 351M and 400 CED V8 engines, and 1978-and 1979-model Granadas and Monarchs with 250 CID 6-cylinder engines, Ford announced Thursday. All are equipped with air conditioning.

"On some of these units, the flexible steel five-blade engine cooling fans may be susceptible to cracking and possible separation of blade fragments," said John P. King, service engineering manager of Ford's Parts and Service Division.

Ford has notified owners by letter not to run the engine with the hood open until the fan was replaced.

"Possibly a section might come off, and if you got the hood opened, it ... could possibly cause an injury," said Charles Snearly, a company spokesman. Eight injuries caused by flying fragments have been reported, he said.

Some 750,000 of the vehicles were sold in the United States, 19,000 in Canada and 4,000 elsewhere, Ford said.

Sculptor Louise Nevelson, 84, whose works are owned by the likes of Stanley Marcus and the late Nelson Rockefeller, "always knew I was great."

Legendary artist

"Yes, I knew. I knew I would be good. I don't know how you know it. But if you have brown or blue eyes, you understand that...And I knew I would be what I am now. I wasn't gambling. I was fulfilling my life. I didn't ask for happiness or anything like that. From the very beginning, I wanted to live my life. And I knew what I wanted. That was the whole thing: knowing what you want."

— Louise Nevelson

She is a legend nowhere near ready for a epitaph. At 84, it is not enough for sculptor Louise Nevelson that her richly intricate collages fill museums, churches and city spaces, climbing like building blocks jammed with geometrics, circles, swirls.

It is not enough that her native Rockland, Maine, now recognizes the Berliawsky girl who left to marry in 1920 — and never looked back.

It is not enough that her art, finally recognized in her middle age, which electrifies people in Houston, San Francisco, Chicago and other U.S. cities, has also been showcased in the world's major museums: London's Tate Gallery, Paris's Musee Rodin, Jerusalem's Israel Museum, plus New York's Museum of Modern Art and the Whitney, both of which gave her major retrospectives.

Not enough.

World-famous architect Philip Johnson, retailer Stanley Marcus and the late Nelson Rockefeller are just a few of the people who have bought her work.

STILL NOT enough. The woman who recognized her genius early — "I always knew I was great" — still stretches herself with new projects.

In June, Ms. Nevelson made her opera debut in the Midwest — creating sets, furniture, even costumes (and interviewing performers) for the gala production of "Orfeo" given by the St. Louis Opera Company.

To celebrate that feat, just before the golden lyre, the black U-shaped chair and the soaring black and gold settings are crated, Louise Nevelson is giving a rare party.

Rain, sheets of rain, are shattering against the plain facade of three joined townhouses on the fringe of New York's SoHo. This labyrinth, once the site of a sanitarium, is now dominated by black (Ms. Nevelson's favorite "color") that is nine floors of trash and treasure.

Louise Nevelson, after all, has "borrowed" a wooden sawhorse from a police barricade, plucked odd wooden boxes from street corners and turned most discards that average people bypass into art.

Her art is such that encyclopedias devote two or three pages to Ms. Nevelson as "one of America's foremost modern sculptors" without once using that qualifying term "woman" before the word "sculptor."

TONIGHT IS A rare gathering done typically Ms. Nevelson's way. The elaborate black-grilled door on Spring Street remains stubbornly closed. And the local barber, an obliging gentleman who operates from a sliver-sized shop in the yellow wall of Ms. Nevelson's three-building complex, is busy directing the famous and the just plain rich.

He's sending them just a few yards down, to the tiny, nondescript, inevitably black, door that is the gateway to Louise Nevelson's real world — her studio, her work.

Inside the all-black room, working materials — old tires, slabs of wood — stack up to the right. Old friends and celebrities are lined up before the champagne-and-oyster buffet at the end; or climbing the black staircase at the left to greet their hostess.

World-famous choreographer Merce Cunningham, a very shy man, but an old friend of Ms. Nevelson, is walking up those stairs. (Ten years ago, she hosted a "black and white" benefit party for his dance foundation that had 175 VIPs forking over $100 a ticket to wander through the world of Louise Nevelson. Tonight it's a personal, private party. All free.)

So Cunningham, art writer Barbaralee Diamonstein and her ad-whiz husband Carl Spielvogel, New York City's Commissioner of Cultural Affairs Bess Myerson, famous architects, other artists are all here.

The world of movers and makers is coming to see Louise Nevelson tonight. And she is one up on all of them.

LOUISE NEVELSON, arms exuberantly thrown wide, looks like some ancient, wrinkled, high-cheekboned Inca Princess surrounded by the gold, the soaring woods, the deities she created herself — the work she has birthed.
ingly by tiny white ruffles.

Ms. Nevelson rises often in the middle of the night to work. "Otherwise the minute of creation can be lost forever." And she often wanders through the labyrinth of rooms and environmental art luring friends behind her.

Spielvogel is shaking his head. "She is extraordinary, that woman," he says. "Barbaralee and I will drop her home at midnight, drooping because we've all finished one long day with another ahead. And Louise will say: 'Come in, just for a moment. I want to show you something I'm working on.' And there we all are, in the early hours of the morning, wandering through this living museum."

Ms. Nevelson — hair concealed by the inevitable scarf, two-inch mink eyelashes masking old eyes wise enough to confront the Sphinx, the hollows and angles of her face emphasized by the blushes and smudges and shadows of cosmetics — is critically watching a barefoot young model sprinting down the length of the St. Louis-destined art.

The model is enveloped in what resembles a squared-off flying black and white canvas kite billowing in the wind. Naturally, a Nevelson design.

Louise Nevelson is wearing a pinstriped man-tailored pants suit over a black chiffon blouse punctuated surprisingly by tiny white ruffles.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Could you tell me what Stephanie Zimbalist did during the hiatus of "Remington Steele"?

L. Chin
Sacramento, Calif.

A. "Not much," according to a friend, "because it was pretty short. The production company wanted to get out of Los Angeles during the Olympics, like so many other people in the business, so they moved up the shooting schedule and went to film in Europe.

In her time off, Stephanie collaborated on a script of the show for next season with a friend, did some reading and took a trip to New York. That's it."

Stephanie Zimbalist

Q. Please help! I'd like some information on actor Peter Riegert. What movies has he been in besides "Animal House" and "Local Hero"?

Dina Oakes
Waterbury, Conn.

A. He's 37, born and raised in the Bronx, an English major at the University of Buffalo who worked as a social worker, teacher and advance man for New York politician Bella Abzug before deciding, at 24, to become an actor.

He simply picked up the trades, went to auditions, and a few months later had his first Off-Off-Off Broadway play. He then joined an improvisational group, "War Babies," a trial-by-fire experience in performing without fear. Two years later, in 1973, he got his first decently paying job, as Chico Marx in the musical "Minnie's Boys."

While in the play "Sexual Perversity in Chicago," he met Bette Midler, who'd come backstage to see a friend in the cast. A romance followed that he hoped would lead to marriage, but didn't. That play, though, led to "Animal House," "Head Over Heels" (also called "Chilly Scenes of Winter" and recently shown on cable) and "Local Hero," which he justifiably calls his biggest break.

Next up: "Ellis Island," the CBS miniseries now filming based on the novel about a group of European immigrants in this country. He isn't married.

Q. I think Sharon Gless of "Cagney and Lacey" is beautiful and talented. Could you tell me about her and her plans?

C.M.
Denver, Colo.

A. She was born and raised in Los Angeles, where, in fact, there's a Gless Street named for one of her ancestors. Her family background is an interesting mix. On her mother's side, her grandfather was a prominent show-business attorney who introduced her at a young age to show-business people.

Her father's family was from Europe's Basque region (the original family name Gleize was Americanized to Gless) and they emigrated to this country to herd sheep and to ranch. She had a strict Catholic upbringing and education, but later rebelled: She was thrown out of Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash. as she explains, for smuggling beer into the girls' dorms.

Once out, she had to go to work, as a secretary, then a production assistant. While working in an independent film company, she observed actors being cast, decided she could act as well as they could, and promptly joined up, as a contract player at Universal.

Sharon Gless

Appearances in series episodes led to regular roles in "Switch," "Turnabout," "Faraday and Co.," a brief stint as Lynn Redgrave's replacement in "House Calls" and now the reborn "Cagney and Lacey."

In her off hours, she reads, swims and plays poker.

Q. Could you please tell me something about Phil Collins, who sang the theme song for "Against All Odds"? I love that song.

T.L.,
Atlanta, Ga.

A. Collins, 33, was born in Chiswick, England, and by the age of 5 had already been drawn to music, specifically drums. He went into acting first, however, appearing at 14 as the Artful Dodger in the West End production of "Oliver" and as a cheering fan in the concert sequence of the Beatles' film "A Hard Day's Night" shortly after that.

At 17, he decided it was time to get onto the concert stage himself and joined a group called Flaming Youth as its drummer. In 1970, he was asked to join Genesis as that band's drummer, a role he filled until 1975 when he became lead singer as well, following the departure of Peter Gabriel. In 1981, he also started his solo career while continuing with Genesis.

Now he's known as the rock world's workaholic. "Phil simply never stops working," explains an associate. "And he plans in advance — he's usually scheduled two years in advance. He has a pattern, too. He'll do an album with Genesis, then a solo project, then another Genesis, then he'll produce someone else.

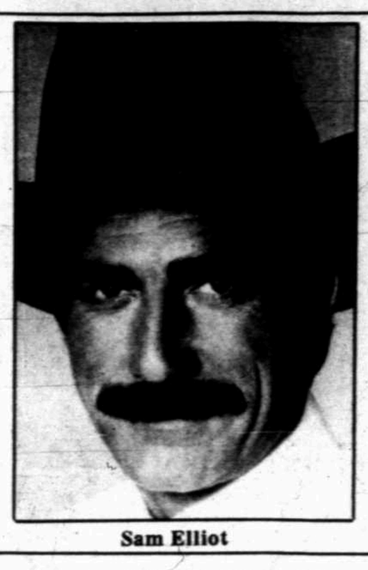

"He's done two singles with Adam Ant and is currently producing an album for Eric Clapton, then another solo, then another Genesis. Right now, he's about due for another solo."

In the midst of all this, he found time to become engaged to Philadelphia-born Jill Tavelman, whom he'd met when Genesis was on a U.S. tour a few years back. They haven't, at this writing, found time to set the date.

Q. Can you give me some information on Sam Elliott — if he's married, how old he is, what he's doing?

S. Henning
Rancho Cucamonga, Calif.

A. He's just gotten married. Elliott and longtime live-in Katherine Ross decided to have a baby and then also to get married, which they did a few weeks ago. Since the demise of "The Yellow Rose," he's jumped back into movies and is currently shooting Peter Bogdanovich's new film, "Mask," with Cher. He just turned 40.

Q. Has Desi Arnaz, Jr. been seeking help from a teacher in Boulder City, Nevada?

M.J. Spiers
White Marsh, Md.

A. According to a close aide, Arnaz has sought psychological counseling — he's admitted problems with drinking and drugs — but that has taken place in California. "The only reason I can think of for him to be in Nevada would be a tennis tournament," the aide explains. And for the time being, he plans to be in Sacramento, where he's starring in the musical "Promises, Promises."

NEVELSON

Louise Nevelson is wearing a pinstriped man-tailored pants suit over a black chiffon blouse punctuated surprisingly by tiny white ruffles.

SHE IS A collage surrounded by collages. Says Ms. Diamonstein: "Her work, her personality, her clothing are all more than bits and pieces carefully arranged. They have evolved during the course of living, not spontaneously. Louise herself is one of her great works of art."

And often, as Ms. Diamonstein observes, a fashion blend of princess and peasant.

Ironic. In high school (back in the Rockland, Maine, of over a half-century ago), Louise Nevelson, just 15, listened as an older friend described the glories of a $5 weekly paycheck from a local lawyer's ofice and her dream of a green winter coat that took six weeks to earn.

Decades later, Louise Nevelson says, spitting the words out: "Right there I saw 'slavery.' Who would be a slave for six weeks to get a coat — and a cheap one at that?" She says firmly: "I decided right there. I would never work for anyone else in my lifetime. I never have. I have never worked for a salary."

It is daytime, some weeks later. Diana MacKown, offspring of musical parents, for 20 years Ms. Nevelson's aide, general handyman and friend, has led the steep climb up four flights to a room dominated by Ms. Nevelson's kaleidoscopic black wall sculpture, those incredible, joined three-dimensional playboxes filled with visions for adults.

In the room there is a lacquered black table, standing where sunlight filtering through the plain brown shutters spills across the polished surface. It misses the line of straight-backed sentinel chairs — a few at the table, more in a row backed against the walls. (Ms. Nevelson hates the sink-in, cozy armchair school of furniture that might encourage visitors to linger and distract her from work.) And everywhere, there is space.

THIS STRANGELY peaceful maze of three houses is steeped in it. Space is in the center of this room — where only the table, the chairs and the wall sculptures really exist. Space and minimal furniture are at the core of all the other upstairs/downstairs rooms: the multiplication of kitchens, black bathrooms, black bedrooms.

The bedrooms are decorated with a plain sleeping area and the look she likes — expensive fur coats lying flat on expensive Oriental rugs, where another house resident, a black cat named Fatty, sometimes snoozes.

But always there is the space, the room needed to breathe, to work.

Waiting for Louise Nevelson in a living environmental museum — her own home — is a delight to the eyes the brain and the imagination.

But the woman who has just climbed four flights from her studio — wearing the inevitable pirate-wrap scarf, a very expensive Scaasi made-to-order paisley-collared smoking jacket, matching straw silk pants smeared with working grease and tucked into socks — seems tired and, however briefly, even vulnerable.

She is 84, after all. And time can rest heavily even on Louise Nevelson, Kiev-born headstrong daughter of a Russian Jewish family which immigrated to the sturdy, rock-bound state of Maine when she was 5.

She was one of four offspring of an ambitious father who spoke no English before he landed, a man who chopped trees for a living and prospered later as a lumber merchant and real-estate entrepreneur. Louise was the only one of his children to leave Maine and carve her own destiny.

SHE WAS BORN with the 20th century, and two decades later left Rockland, to marry cargo-ship owner Charles Nevelson. On neutral ground. Even then, Ms. Nevelson was different. She came halfway — no more. "We married at the Copley-Plaza in Boston. He was a New York man. I was Maine. We married in between, where we were both free."

But she wasn't free enough. "My work is my reality. A creative life. That's a true marriage," Ms. Nevelson once said. "Not something you buy with a $2 license."

Her son Myron, now a Connecticut-based sculptor (married three times, who has given his mother three grandchildren and two great-children), was born in 1922. By 1931, the marriage was over and Louise Nevelson was on her way to Germany to study with then world-famous artist Hans Hoffman.

Ms. Nevelson's comments on marriage, birth and departure are a testimonial to a liberated life. ("I am woman's liberation," she said once.) And most of those comments are preceded or punctuated by her trademark: "Look...or Look, darling."

Says Ms. Nevelson now: "Look, I trained myself way back, the way other people train themselves for races, to have space. Not physical space. I just don't get too involved. That means I can claim my time when it is necessary. I can claim my life. And I do."

Musing, she adds: "If you have a husband...Well, I had one years ago, before I was divorced...If you have commitments that are too strong, you must do something about them. I wanted more. I wanted time to create. I wanted my time. I wanted to claim as much of my life as possible; and I've done it."

WITHOUT GUILT — except for her son. She asked no alimony. But in 1931, she wanted to study with Hans Hoffman. "The world rated him the 'best' in abstract art then." She went, separating from her husband (in what must have already been a marriage in trouble) and sent her son to her family in Maine.

What about that husband? "Look, darling," she says, "I'd made up my mind. I was going. That was it. So what could he do?" Wasn't it unusual in 1931 for any well-behaved wife and mother to toss up marriage and a wealthy life style for art's sake?

She considers that less than a second. "Well, maybe. But it's my life. And it's not unusual for me. That's the way I've always lived it. You think about things. But you do what you have to do."

Her son's claims upon her were more fundamental. And that did bring guilt. "He was in the Merchant Marine during World War II," she says, almost at random, adding, "I feel when I read that people want children that it is often so unknowing to give life to another person. To this day, I think that's such a tough thing."

FOR MS. NEVELSON, whose works now fetch what one art expert estimated as an "easy $150,000 up" for a piece, there were the long desert years, the arid times when no one really recognized her or wanted her work. Weren't there agonizing times when she must have, even once, considered the possibility of failure?

"No," says Ms. Nevelson flatly. "Because I was breathing. Do you ever think any moment you will stop breathing? This is breathing." She thumps her chest with a clenched fist. "This is me. It never dawned on me to think anything else. I knew I was good at this. And I knew it belonged to me. And I claimed it."

But it wasn't until 1941 that Louise Nevelson, rebel in pursuit of her own dreams, came close to her goal. She had a one-woman show in the prestigious New York gallery of Karl Nierendorf.

THE NEXT 15 years, she hovered between starving level and family subsidies. And she never really came close to giving up.

'Mass Appeal' Strickland's last call

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Georgia Temple

Bill C. Davis' bittersweet, uncompromising "Mass Appeal" may well be Midland Community Theatre's redemption for theatergoers who have expressed concern during recent past seasons that the quality of productions at MCT has been backsliding.

Not only is the (when he wrote the comedy drama) 29-year-old's look at the innerworkings of the Catholic church through the eyes of a long time popular parish priest and a young seminarian, a searing commentary on how it is as opposed to how one wants to view it as being, it is a sermon on life itself, on what we settle for versus the potential we have.

When Mark Dolson (Matt Mabe) informs Father Tim Farley (Jess Kozman), "If I was used as a pawn, that's the player's problem, not mine," Father Farley warns him, "If you plan to be in the church with the players, then you better learn how to play the game."

It is a particularily appropriate last call for Ted Strickland's final collection at MCT. Although "Mass Appeal" began Friday and runs through Aug. 18, Strickland, MCT's assistant director and director for this comedy/drama, leaves Midland Wednesday to take a position as managing/artistic director of the Little Theatre of Chattanooga. Walking away from a job which has by necessity and invention brought joy and heartache by turning in a full plate, must be sweetly bitter.

MCT's 250th membership production, "Mass Appeal" brings an excellent script, one which does contain some profanity and talk of homosexuality, to the Theatre II stage.

"Mass Appeal" was Davis' first New York production of record as a Circle Repertory Project in Progress in October 1979. Milo O'Shea played the leading role in the off Broadway production at Manhattan Theater Club as well as on Broadway.

Other works by this Ellenville, N.Y. native, who attended schools in Poughkeepsie, include "Gentle Catapults" and "The Wrestlers." Now resident playwright at Manhattan Theatre Club, Davis attended Emerson College, Boston, Mass., and graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from Maris College, Poughkeepsie.

"Mass Appeal" sings like the choruses that rang through the young seminarian's head when, as a child, he lived in a home where the silence crushed him, finding audience members laughing whether they choose to or not. Sometimes by the simple turning of a phrase, Davis moves the laughter to tears.

The tightly written plot in this two-act play captures audience and players together for two memorable hours.

Both Kozman and Mabe do outstanding jobs. The only scene left unsold Friday night happened during Act II, when, in Scene V, both begin laughing. Mabe hasn't yet stretched enough to reach the near hysterical laugh required of him. Otherwise, the two work brillantly together.

"Mass Appeal" is a confirmation of what is possible in life if we keep our perspective. The young seminarian admonishes Father Farley's congregation that things — mink coats, cashmere sweaters — "are accessories you have made essential" when "you are essential."

It represents hope. Seeing it is like finding a fine jem, full of deeply carved carats, in the midst of an art form which is all too often today a wasteland of glass, all sparkle and no substance.

'Story' carries boy away to fantasy

By DAVID LEE FORREST

David Forrest

You open a book and become mesmerized, completely losing track of time. The television set is never turned on. You either skip meals or else eat and read at the same time. You keep devouring the story in a white heat, reading on into the wee hours of the morning when the house is still and the outside world dark.

It's happened to most devoted readers at one time or another, and in "The Neverending Story" it happens to 10-year-old Bastian.

Bastian, played extremely well by Barret Oliver, is an unhappy, wistful boy. His mother has recently died and he and his father have a hard time communicating.

"Stop daydreaming and start facing your problems," says his father, played by Gerald McRaney of the television series "Simon and Simon."

Bastian can't wrestle the lid off jelly jars, forgets to do his homework, is always late for school, lives in fear of math tests and is hounded by a gang of bullies who call him "weirdo" and toss him into a trash Dumpster on the way to school.

He forgets his troubles by reading such novels as "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "Tarzan," "Treasure Island" and the "Lord of the Rings" trilogy.

In short, he is a fairly typical bookish 10-year-old.

He borrows a copy of a mysterious book called "The Neverending Story," from a cluttered old bookstore and becomes immediately engrossed in it.

The story is a fantasy-adventure set in a wondrous land called Fantasia, which is inhabited by an odd assortment of creatures, most of whom seem to have been inspired by a variety of fairy tales, myths and quite likely the bar scene in "Star Wars" also.

They include gigantic Rock-eaters, swift racing snails, vicious werewolves and flying Luckdragons.

All face destruction by an obscure, dark force, the Nothing. A young warrior, Atreyu, rides off to try to stop the horrible Nothing.

The story then takes an interesting detour into the Twilight Zone. Bastian unwittingly becomes so enmeshed in Atreyu's quest that the book's characters become aware of the fact that he is reading about them.

"The Neverending Story" is a smash hit in West Germany, where it was filmed in English by talented German director Wolfgang Petersen.

The film is completely different from Petersen's last work — the gritty, realistic "Das Boot," about a German U-boat crew in World War II. Both films, however, have a certain brooding Germanic tone.

It may be trying to read too much into what is basically a children's film, but many scenes in "The Neverending Story," seem to have a deeper, underlying meaning. For example, when one character — a werewolf — voices the idea that a people without hope are easy to control, it's hard not to think of how the Nazis won control of a dispirited Germany during the Great Depression in the 1930s.

The film, on the other hand, exhalts hope, dreams and imagination.

With so many recent films, such as "Tron," "Wargames," "The Last Starfighter" and the upcoming "Cloak and Dagger," emphasizing video games, it is refreshing to see a movie that actually encourages children to read and actively use their imaginations.

While "The Neverending Story" is really aimed at children, this tale of courage and mystery may very well fascinate many adults, too.

"The Neverending Story," rated PG, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

Music what matters in 'Purple Rain'

"Purple Rain" was a huge success before it was even released because of the soundtrack album recorded by it's stars, Prince and the Revolution.

The day the film premiered, the album was already listed as the top LP by Billboard magazine and the first single from "Purple Rain," the song "When Doves Cry," was number one on Billboard's hot singles chart.

The music is truly what matters in "Purple Rain." The whole film is custom designed around Prince, a popular black rock singer, and appears to be largely his musical autobiography.

Prince's character, called simply "The Kid" throughout the movie, is a young black rock musician, living in Minneapolis, Prince's own hometown.

He leads a band, the Revolution, which just happens to be Prince's real-life band (although Prince is actually better known as a one-man recording studio genius).

Other bands featured in the film are the Time and Apollonia 6, both of which are actual offshoots of Prince and the Revolution.

While one is never led into thinking that "Purple Rain" is a documentary, there is obviously more than just a little fact amidst the film's fiction.

Actually, the best scenes in the movie are the ones in which "Purple Rain" most closely approaches a documentary. These are the electrifying concert scenes of Prince and the Revolution performing.

The music is powerful and exciting and Prince seems as agile and energetic as Nadia Comaneci was in her prime.

A number of times the music soundtrack is so loud that it drowns out some of the dialogue, but judging from what is audible, this is no great loss.

One disadvantage to starring musicians is that they are often much better at playing instruments than delivering lines.

The only outstanding acting is by singer Morris Day of the Time and his side-kick Jerome Benton. The duo work together beautifully and are very funny. If Richard Pryor were a singer, he'd be a lot like Morris Day.

One of the best non-musical scenes in "Purple Rain," is their version of the old Abbot and Costello "Who's on First" skit.

Given more of an opportunity, Day and Benton, with their silky smooth sense of timing and coolly flip way of delivering comic lines, might have completely stolen the show from Prince.

But that is a large part of what the plot is about. Day is the Kid's chief musical rival. When the beautiful Apollonia Kotero, lead singer of Apollonia 6 (a female group more notable for performing in lingerie than for its singing ability), enters the story, Day also becomes the Kid's romantic rival.

At the same time, the Kid feels threatened by the demands his band's female members are making for more control over their music.

Worst of all, his parents, a black man and Italian woman — like Prince's real parents — are having dangerously violent arguments every night. The Kid also finds himself imitating his father's erratic and often brutal behavior.

When not onstage, Prince's primary method of displaying his character's emotions, unfortunately, is to ride around on a motorcycle looking moody, but there are occasions when he lets some real emotions show through.

It's worth noting that in his first film role Prince is willing to play a character who is paranoid, jealous, tempermental and abrasive. If "Purple Rain" is as autobiographical as it seems, Prince is impressively honest about his own flaws.

When he is onstage, however, Prince shows so much skill and emotion that any other weaknesses in his performance are quickly forgotten.

Prince and the Revolution will certainly win many more fans with "Purple Rain," but those who don't like the group's music will like the movie even less.

"Purple Rain," rated R, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'Meatballs II' inane sequal to Murray's 'Meatballs'

"Meatballs Part II" is an almost awesomely bad film.

The original "Meatballs" — a 1979 youth-oriented film about summer camp starring Bill Murray — was hardly a cinema masterpiece, but it looks like "Gone With The Wind" in comparison to this inane sequel.

"Meatballs Part II" follows another group of youngsters spending their summer in Camp Sasquatch. As they proceed to make bad jokes about sex, drugs, cripples, horses, Indians, homosexuals and Hare Krishnas, one may become inclined to wish the kids were in Fort Leavenworth's prison instead.

The basic plot is about Camp Sasquatch's rivalry with a military camp on the other side of the lake — Camp Patton, "where outdoor living molds killers."

There are also a couple of feeble subplots. One is an abortive attempt at a love story, which is really more about unrequited teen-aged lust.

The other subplot is a really bad parody of "E.T." A rubber-suited space alien, nicknamed "Meathead," comes to camp and spends most of his time hiding in an outhouse.

Richard Mulligan, of the defunct television series "Soap" and Blake Edward's film "S.O.B.," presides over this mess as the manager of the camp. He proves to be a poor substitute for Bill Murray, who is conspicuously absent.

We can only hope that any "Meatballs Part III" is absent from movie screens in future summers.

"Meatballs Part II," rated PG, is now showing at the Ritz Theater.

Olympics' performance may make singer famous

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Supermarket checker Vicki McClure says being a Grammy nominee hasn't really paid off yet, but since she led a swaying sing-along during the Olympics' opening ceremonies, her phone has been going crazy.

It was her clear voice that sang the lilting "Reach Out And Touch Somebody's Hand" last Saturday at the Coliseum to which some 100,000 athletes and spectators swayed and sang along at the end of the Games' opening ceremonies.

Miss McClure, 30, is lead singer for the Los Angeles Jazz Choir, which was beaten out for a Grammy in vocal jazz this year by the Manhattan Transfer.

Despite the group's successes, Miss McClure still works as a supermarket checker.

"I like the job, because it makes my schedule flexible. Checking groceries is always part-time work. It enables me to pursue musical work.

"We all work at our little jobs and do this for fun," she said of the choir.

Miss McClure was something of a stand-in turned star last Saturday. She says Olympic organizers had wanted Diana Ross or Leontyne Price. They chose her instead, she believes, because they felt an unknown might be more in keeping with the Olympic spirit.

Since Saturday, she has concluded that she may not remain unknown for long. Her phone has been ringing off the hook.

CBS filmed the choir on Saturday, but yet, she said, no major record companies have called either for her or for the Jazz Choir.

The choir's Grammy-nominated album, "Listen," was recorded by Mobile Fidelity records, an independent label that is helping the choir with a second album.

Michael Grantham, the firm's artist and repertory man, said a modest 3,000 copies of "Listen" were originally pressed, and the group's popularity has been slowly growing.

Besides the Coliseum show, they starred in a July 4 gala at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, which was billed as a salute to the Olympics. However, Miss McClure was absent that evening, singing elsewhere.

As a practicing member of a fundamentalist Christian sect, the Netherlands-based Lectorium Rosicrucianum, Misss McClure says she's not into music for the money. However, she is practical enough to know that singers aren't heard unless they become famous.

"I do want to offer myself up," she said. "Somebody's got to say something about what's going on here. If the world wants to hear, then I'm willing to accept the consequences."

Summer Mummers will have dry run

A special "dry performance" of the 36th annual Summer Mummers is set for Aug. 16.

The performance is designed for all those who want to see the melodrama, "Rascality on the Rig," and enjoy the olio without the rowdiness of the usually well-lubricated crowd. Cokes, coffee and popcorn will be sold.

The 36th annual Summer Mummers will be onstage Thursday, Fridays and Saturdays through Sept. 1. For reservations for either "Dry Night" or the other performances call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Test will tell you how much you know about American legal system

King Features Syndicate

This survey prepared with the help of the National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg, Va., will test you on the American legal system.

1. In a criminal trial it is up to the person accused of a crime to prove his or her innocence.

False. A person accused of a crime is presumed innocent until proven guilty. This right is guaranteed by the due-process clause of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

2. A district attorney may be called upon to defend a person accused of a crime who cannot afford a lawyer.

False. A district attorney represents a governmental jurisdiction. Public defenders or court-appointed attorneys represent persons who cannot afford a lawyer.

3. The prosecutor decides whether to try a person charged with a crime.

True. Not all persons charged with a criminal offense go to trial. The prosecutor decides whether the evidence and/or the public interest warrant a trial. In felony cases the prosecutor decides whether a case should be presented to a grand jury or, in some states, to a judge for possible indictment.

4. The decision of a jury is final and can never be overruled by a judge.

False. Except in decisions of acquittal in criminal cases a judge can overrule a jury's verdict or finding of fact if he/she believes it is not supported by the evidence presented at the trial.

5. Someone convicted of a crime can always appeal the case.

True. A conviction can always be appealed. However, in some states the appellate court can refuse to accept the appeal, even in felony cases, unless the death penalty is involved.

6. If someone is found innocent of a crime, the state can appeal the case.

False. A second prosecution for the same criminal offense is forbidden under the prohibition against "double jeopardy" in the Bill of Rights. The state can only appeal if a criminal case it feels should be tried is dismissed before going to trial.

7. If a convicted criminal receives a life sentence, he will spend his remaining years in prison.

False. Although 19 states allow convicted criminals to be sentenced to prison for life without possibility of parole, most states allow parole for prisoners serving life sentences. In fact a 1980 survey showed the average term served by "lifers" was 14½ years.

8. The defendant in a civil case is required to attend court for the trial.

False. Unlike criminal court there is no rule requiring a defendant to attend a civil procedure. However, a defendant who does not represent himself or send his attorney cannot present his case and runs the risk of having the court automatically find against him in a default judgment.

CONSIDER THIS:

July 23, 1984

MUSEUM OF THE SOUTHWEST
1705 W. Missouri
Midland, TX. 79701

Gentlemen: Attn: Mr. Al Dillard
Chairman of the Board

In May you asked me what Mrs. Penn's and my feeling would be if the Museum leveled the Lancaster home and used the land for other purposes. I told you that when Mrs. Penn (daughter of Naomi A. Lancaster and L. B. Penn, who built the house) had agreed to give the home and property on which it is located to the Museum of the Southwest, there were no strings attached, because we trusted the promises made to us at that time. Though those promises were not being honored, we did not feel it appropriate for us to raise a fight against the Board, I also told you that it would "break Mrs. Penn's heart" but that her health is such that she could not fight such an action.

However, since that time we have learned from many telephone calls and newspaper articles that there is much sentiment in Midland for saving the Lancaster house. The fight has been raised already by others who care about the preservation of Midland's historical landmarks. With the cause already in motion and made public, it is time for us to make our information and sentiment public as well. We must join in doing everything we can to aid in saving the Lancaster house.

I will again remind you of the background I gave you in May. Mr. Chuck Henderson and other members of the Board of the Museum of the Southwest approached us asking for a contribution of the Lancaster home to the Museum. One of their talking points, one which they emphasized strongly, included the many definite plans they had for the Lancaster House which would insure the preservation of the home in good condition. It was intended to be something that present and future Midlanders could enjoy, use and treasure. We strongly feel that the Museum should live up to its original promise and restore and maintain the Lancaster House.

There were many specific uses for the Lancaster House portion of the Museum of the Southwest formulated by the Master Plan Committee. Joan Hellen, director of the Museum until the fall of 1982, enumerated several of these uses:

1.) Archeological display and research: The core items for which are available in the Bissell collection.
2.) Museum library: Collection of books already available.
3.) Photographic darkroom for use in exhibit preparation and to make labels necessary for all museums.
4.) A room to be used as a lecture hall.
5.) A room for use of visiting dignitaries.
6.) Guesthouse to be used by a groundskeeper.

The above are just a few of the uses which could be made of the Lancaster part of the museum.

That there are many important uses for the Lancaster House is obvious. Equally obvious is that the house has been understood as a part of the Museum of the Southwest ever since it was given to the Museum.

To aid in such a movement, Mrs. Penn and I will agree to make immediately an additional but restricted donation to the Museum of the Southwest of the sum of $5,000.00 to be used for no other purpose than aiding in the restoration and preservation of the Lancaster House, such sum to be returned to us if not used for this purpose within the next year.

A copy of this letter is being sent to Mr. Harris E. Kerr in Midland, Texas, together with our permission for him to use it in any way he sees for for the purpose of this preservation effort.

Very sincerely:

Addilee Lancaster Penn (Mrs. Wm.)

Director of North Carolina prisons sees need for alternatives

By BONNIE MICHAEL PRATT
King Features Syndicate

"Prisoners of North Carolina are the problems of every citizen of this state. What happens to these people when they are in prison is critical because they are going to live in your community again."

That's the message that Rae McNamara brings to her fellow North Carolineans when she speaks across the state. As the first woman director of the North Carolina Division of Prisons (and only one of two women in the United States to hold such a position — the other is in California), she feels that she has a unique responsibility in helping to change the "mind set" of most people with regard to prisons.

"People get very emotional about prisons. Here, 'prison' is synonymous with 'punishment,' and right now we need alternatives," she said.

Ms. McNamara sees alternatives such as community service restitution and expanded use of probation as possible answers to imprisonment. With the prison population standing at well over 17,000 and the cost of housing a single inmate at over $8,500 per year, more answers are obviously needed.

Searching for those answers makes Ms. McNamara's job a high-pressure one that usually lasts from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. with a beeper to call her when a crisis occurs during off hours.

She realized that relaxation wasn't part of the job on her second day of work in August of 1981. She suddenly found herself confronted with two problems.

Her daughter phoned her to say that the boy who was to deliver papers for her 14-year-old brother had not arrived and she didn't know what to do. At the same time, Ms. McNamara was being informed by a prison official that an escape was "coming down" at Central Prison in two days. Both situations were resolved.

While that crisis certainly isn't typical of the average working woman's problems, Ms. McNamara said, "Women are learning to juggle family crises and job crises. We are learning you can do several things and do them at least fairly well. Women should not be afraid to have their own values and act on them." She believes that now, more than ever before, women have opportunities to make contributions to the world in new ways.

Born and reared in Beaufort, N.C., 44-year-old Rae McNamara is a graduate of Duke University and received a master's degree in guidance and personnel services from North Carolina State University. She has also done graduate work in clinical psychology. Her jobs have included school teacher, assistant placement director, employment counselor and conductor of management seminars.

While she was a personnel analyst, she worked as a staff member with the Knox Commission on Correctional Programs. The commission researched philosophies, theories and current practices regarding sentencing, correctional programming, parole and physical facilities and then prepared a report for the state General Assembly. This experience helped prepare her to serve as parole commissioner for four years and from there to become the Director of Prisons in 1981.

Also as a result of being a personnel analyst, Ms. McNamara had the opportunity to be a member of a classification team that studied jobs throughout the Department of Correction. It was a unique way to see the internal workings of the prison system.

Mrs. McNamara said director wasn't a conscious goal but that "it just evolved. At some point, I became aware that I was always 'talking prisons.' "

Being a woman is both an asset and a liability. "When I took the job, I honestly had some question about whether a woman could do it.

"Women in prison are lonely. They realize they're missing the growing-up years of their children."

The children of women in prison are a real concern of Ms. McNamara's. She is pleased about the Phoenix Organization, which is a non-profit statewide group of volunteers that works with the children of prisoners, helping them adjust to the parent's absence from home and aims at keeping them from becoming involved in criminal activities themselves.

Ms. McNamara emphasized, "The more we can do to help children develop and maintain self-esteem and keep some kind of relationship with their mothers, even if it's with a go-between, is to the benefit of everybody."

She is in constant demand for speeches and public appearances and tries to comply whenever possible.

In spite of the often pessimistic statistics about prison, Ms. McNamara points out that it does function effectively.

"That rehabilitation does not work is not true. I would change it, not to say that rehabilitation works, but that it happens.

"Prison scares some people to death. They say, 'I'm not coming back,' and they don't.

"Another thing that happens — kids grow up. Some people learn a work skill, a job skill, and that makes a difference. For the first time in their lives, they feel good about themselves."

As much as is possible, Ms. McNamara believes in communication with the prisoners. Her home phone is listed and she has been known to discuss first-hand a problem with aninmate.

Prisoners' mail comes into her office at the rate of about 100 letters a week. All are answered, either by her staff or by some other agency which may have more information on a particular question. In visiting prisons, she may be approached for help with a problem and she'll ask the inmate to write to her and to say specifically that she is to read it. Whatever it takes, the concerns of these people are her concerns.

In assessing what has happened during her administration, Dr. Herbert A. Rosefield, former area administrator of the North Piedmont area, commented:

"I am very pleased with her concept of how the job should be done. She sees the position as one of leadership and guidance for both the present and the future. Her major emphasis is on improving the fundamentals which support the system and which will continue to have an influence on the future."

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

There was an air of dignity about him even though his cheeks were tear-streaked. "It isn't easy having to live down a smear on your reputation because your name was mistranslated," he said. "Originally we were called knabe, which means youth. Now we have to go around being called knaves, and being suspected of all sorts of skullduggery. If you don't mind, call me by my given name, Jack.

"Not that we haven't been involved in some shenanigans — all strictly above-board, of course. I could tell you some stories . . . But the hour is late so, if you don't mind, just a quick one for the road while I tell you of an occasion where I won a tournament by not taking a trick. Indeed, I was sacrificed by my owner without any regard for my value.

"Our side had reached a contract of three no trump. (Later, I learned the opponents in the other room had reached the same contract but had failed.) West led the queen of hearts — a conventional opening lead that either showed the jack or else asked his partner to play the knave if he held it.

— "My owner saw that, if my cousin the Jack of Clubs could be finessed successfully, the contract was easy. So he looked for a way to bring home his game should the king of clubs be offside.

"East contributed the two of hearts to the first trick, and the routine play in hearts would be to follow with the three. However, that might cause West to shift to a spade, which would prove disastrous. How could West be encouraged to continue with a heart?

"The solution was simple. West's lead had called for the jack, so my master played me under the queen! Not surprisingly, West continued with a heart. My master won the ace and took a losing club finesse. Now East shifted to a spade, but it was too late. My master took 10 tricks, and I was a hero."

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check paybale to Newspaperbooks.

'Princess Grace' tells family tidbits

By JOHN W. DEATS

Sarah Bradford has written a fine new biobraphy, "PRINCESS GRACE," which delves into her entire family's background. The book is not an expose nor does it merely recount particulars about her stage and movie career. Grace Kelly's grandfather was a native of County Mayo, Ireland, who immigraged to Philadelphia in the 1860s and married another County Mayo immigrant, Mary Ann Costello. The Kelly clan was known for its discipline and close family ties. Ms. Kelly's father became an Olympic oarsman and later a wealthy brick-contractor. Her uncle was a Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright. Ms. Kelly once confided to a friend, "Whatever the Kellys do they have to do well," a feeling which impelled her to make the most of herself. Ms. Bradford's biography notes the lesser-known aspects of Ms. Kelly's life, such as her work behind the scenes in many areas of philanthrophy.

Another personality who has been portrayed by at least four other biographers is the baseball legend Ty Cobb. Author Charles Alexander, an historian at Ohio University, leaves "psychobiography" to others, instead relying on a straightforward account of Cobb's life. The man was celebrated for his prowess on the field but his style was always agressive, sometimes nasty. Cobb fought with other players, umpires, team owners, the league president, the commissioner of baseball, his fans and just about everybody. At the time he left baseball in 1928 at age 41, he was already a millionaire and held 43 individual records in baseball. But the last 33 years of his life seem to have given him little pleasure and he died of cancer a very lonely and embittered man.

Some of the best books are the shortest, and the 140 pages of "BLUE REMEMBERED HILLS" are pithy and full of acute observations. Rosemary Sutcliffe traces her experiences from her early childhood, at which time she could not walk,to the acceptance of her first book by Oxford University Press at age 24. This was the first of many historical novels for children and adults, among which "The Lantern Bearers" was awarded th Carnegie Medal of 1959. Ms. Sutcliffe was the only child of a naval officer and a mother "who was of the stuff than minstrels are made of." Many of her reflections record the family members and friends who influenced her life; for instance, her lazy Uncle Acton. In a typically charming way Ms. Sutcliffe is inspired by his example to write, "But, alas, we do not love people for their worthiness to be loved. It's possible, of course, that the world would be a colder place if we did."

On April 17 of this year retired U.S. Army General Mark Clark died in Charleston, S.C. Many people have forgotten how significant his contributions to the war effort really were, and, for instance, that Clark was chosen over George Patton for the command of the U.S. Fifth Army in North Africa. Clark was the kind of commander who insisted on inspecting front line positions and cultivated a rapport with the rank and file troops. "MARK CLARK" is a revealing look at the significant contributions this general made to prepare the way for Operation Torch in North Africa, the trials of Salerno and the difficulties of the war in southern Italy. Biographer Martin Blumenson had access to much new material in Clark's diary and papers and gives us the first full-length study of a three-star general who stood alongside Dwight D. Eisenhower, Patton and Omar Bradley in orchestrating the Allied victory in Europe. Clark was later involved in keeping Austria a free state after the war and played a major role in the Korean armistice.

"THE PRINCESS OF SIBERIA," by Christine Sutherland, recounts the remarkable life of Maria Volkonsky, a daughter of a Russian hero of the Napoleonic Wars. She was married to Prince Sergei Volkonsky for one year when the ill-fated Decembrist uprising erupted, a gentlemanly revolt by many officers of the guards who had been deeply influenced by the freedoms they had seen in the Western countries, and who wished to abolish serfdom. The revolt was quickly suppressed, the leaders being exiled for life to Siberia, with Volkonsky among them. He was followed by his wife in the dead of winter, and they were finally reunited near Lake Baikal at the bottom of a silver mine. This fascinating book follows the fate of the Volkonskys and other couples like them as they sustained their deep affection and fortitude for nearly 30 years of exile until an amnesty following the tsar's death in 1856. Princess Volkonsky was a beautiful, high spirited person who visited local tribes barely removed from the Stone Age, worked to improve schools and helped establish the first theatre in Siberia.

Produce section may have unfamiliar items

King Features Syndicate

The vegetable section of your local food store is not what it used to be. Once filled with perfectly acceptable, but absolutely predictable, produce, it is now a different sight to behold. Casting one's eye quickly along the counter, the average shopper will probably see some mystery items — or at least unfamiliar versions of everyday items.

The California influence has resulted in a proliferation of "baby" or miniature vegetables. These vegetables taste basically the same as their larger counterparts, but are generally a bit firmer and more flavorful.

There's a different kind of cucumber too. It's about twice as long and half as fat as a normal cucumber and is seedless.

Then there are fiddlehead ferns, those scroll-like, furled vegetables that you'll only find fresh during warm months. They are mild and delicate and are best cooked for 10 to 15 minutes in salted water and served with butter.

On to the herbs. The newest arrival here is plenty of fresh coriander, otherwise known as cilantro or Chinese parsley. It has a pungent and truly distinctive taste and imparts a definitive flavor to otherwise bland foods.

So don't let all those newcomers intimidate you. Here are some suggestions for experimentation.

LAMB WITH WILD VEGETABLE
30 fiddlehead ferns, trimmed
30 stalks wild asparagus, cut
24 wild leek bulbs, trimmed
Cat tail shoots, peeled and cut
6 wild mushrooms
6 double loin lamb chops
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Vegetable oil
¼ cup lightly salted butter

Blanch in boiling water and drain the ferns, asparagus, leeks and cat tails. Quarter the mushrooms; set vegetables aside. Season chops with salt and pepper and rub with a little oil. Grill over hot coals 2 to 3 minutes on each side to desired doneness.

Meanwhile, heat butter in a large skillet until it foams. Add the mushrooms and leeks; toss. Add the asparagus, ferns and cat tails. Season with salt and pepper; toss to heat through.

Baby eggplant never tasted better than in this dish from Fournou's Ovens restaurant in San Francisco.

EGGPLANT IN GARLIC SAUCE
4 small Chinese eggplants
2 tablespoons peanut oil
3 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1¼ cups chicken stock
3 tablespoons minced fresh garlic
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
½ cup plum sauce
2 teaspoons hot chili paste
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with enough chicken stock to form a paste

Remove bud ends and slice eggplants in half lengthwise, then cube.

Heat 1½ tablespoons oil in wok. Add eggplant and stir fry rapidly until almost tender, about 5 minutes. Deglaze pan with sherry and soy sauce. Moisten with about ½ cup chicken stock and reduce by half. Remove eggplant and set aside.

Clean wok with paper towels. Put ½ tablespoons oil in wok and add garlic and ginger, stir frying rapidly and constantly. After several seconds, add plum sauce, chili paste and sugar. Add about ½ cup chicken stock and reduce by one third.

Return eggplant to wok. Stir fry quickly to heat through. Add remaining chicken stock. Thicken with cornstarch mixture, using as much as is needed to make a sauce of coating consistency. Serve as an appetizer.

From "The Frugal Gourmet" by Jeff Smith (Morrow, $14.95)
A very elegant and rare dish from Peking. The straw mushroom cannot be found fresh, only in cans.

MUSHROOMS AND CORN
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ teaspoon fresh-grated ginger
1 tablespoon peanut oil
1 15-ounce can baby corn, drained
2 tablespoons oyster sauce
4 tablespoons chicken broth
⅛ teaspoon sugar
1 15-ounce can straw mushrooms, drained

In a hot frying pan or wok, saute the garlic and ginger in the oil. Add the corn, and saute until hot. Add the oyster sauce, chicken broth and sugar. Stir and toss. When the mixture is hot, add the mushrooms and stir gently, over high heat, until all is hot. Serve with rice or noodles.

• • •

FRIED PUMPKIN BLOSSOMS
Pumpkin blossoms
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup sesame seeds
Bacon fat or cooking oil
Dill
Pepper

Arrange the blossoms on a large sheet of wax paper or a pastry sheet. Top with an equal-sized sheet of wax paper and put a weight on top of the blossoms to flatten them. Leave them with the weight on for about 5 minutes.

Dip the flattened blossoms in a mixture of the beaten egg and milk. Then roll the blossoms in a mixture of the bread crumbs and sesame seeds.

Deep fry the blossoms in reserved bacon fat or cooking oil. Serve very hot, sprinkled with dill and freshly ground pepper.

Carl Hertzog 'great book designer,' Haley believes

Carl Hertzog

J. Evetts Haley can look back on "the Golden Age" of Texas letters from the vantage point of one who was there.

When contacted for comments on the recent death of printer Carl Hertzog of El Paso, Haley said, "Carl Hertzog was one of the greatest book designers in America, the greatest in the Southwest, a loyal adopted Texan and an outstanding character.

"He was not only a very dear friend of mine, but we had 25 years of close association in history, including the design of many of my books."

Haley noted that some Hertzog-designed books bring top collector prices, not for the content, but for the quality of the design work. Hertzog used to take all the time he needed to complete a job, Haley said, telling those who complained, "I am still working on Michelangelo's principle — Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle. This is economically unsound in this age of fast, throughless, sloppy work, but is necessary if civilization is to go on."

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., recently spotlighted its collections of Hertzog's work through an exhibit sponsored by Mrs. M.F. Driscoll, Haley, Don Bradshaw, Qualified Printers and Dr. Terry Tubb. Along with a large selection of Hertzog's printing and design work, the library contains correspondence between the printer and various authors in its archival files.

The most recent service Hertzog gave to the library was the design of its newsletter. A supporter of the library, he had donated material and services to the library since its opening.

His last major book project with Haley was "Adventuring with the Old-Timers," by Hervey E. Chesley. A Haley memo at the time of publication records: "Carl never charged a cent for his services in the design of this book."

"Adventuring with the Old-Timers," along with other Hertzog-Haley projects, may be purchased at the library.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Lucille Ball, Atlanta Braves slugger Bob Horner, actor Robert Mitchum, Minnesota prize reliever Ron Davis and Pittsburgh catcher Steve Nicosia share your birthday. Also born on this date: English poet Alfred, Lord Tennyson, bacteriologist Sir Alexander Fleming and Hollywood columnist Louella Parsons. A new sense of direction puts you on the road to success. Long-distance travel brings welcome financial gains. Romance is more rewarding than in the past. Open new lines of communication. A young person's accomplishments give you great joy. Put family needs first. Your warmth and wit attract countless friends of both sexes. Some fall in love with you!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An aggressive approach to financial matters will boost profits. A personal relationship could give you some anxious moments until you take charge. A younger person teaches you a new trick. Romance proves surprising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You receive a fine commendation for your excellent work. Share the limelight with loved ones. A boost in your financial fortunes means greater security.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A recent real estate investment could bring you a fortune. Follow through on an expert's advice. Loved ones may not understand your need for solitude.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Inside information provided by a loyal friend could bring extra profits. An attractive member of the opposite sex shows a sudden interest in you. Go slow -- he/she could have hidden motives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid all forms of gambling. Recycling an old idea could cut costs. Those in authority are impressed. A raise or promotion is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Postpone travel until more facts and figures are available. A second job or freelance project will bring extra income. A Sagittarian offers you some wonderful advice; you find new friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your powers are at their peak. Friends want something you may not be able to give. Career demands could prevent you from joining the family fun this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some vacation plans may have to be changed at the last minute. Look on the bright side: you get a golden opportunity to show how well you can do someone else's job.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Operate behind the scenes while trying to catch up on paperwork. Some written material gives you valuable information. Social events enjoy favorable influences.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Useful information can be obtained from those who work behind the scenes. Keep a tight rein on spending. A teen-ager shares a delicious secret. Business travel proves more profitable than anticipated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Boredom is your greatest enemy. Buckle down to work! A phone call or letter brings welcome financial news. Romance may have to take a temporary backseat to career.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not let your friends or relatives influence the way you handle money. Co-workers and higher-ups prove very supportive. A loved one asks embarrassing questions.
