Funds approved for harbor rewiring

By TED NORMAN
Managing editor

An angry, shouting, obviously upset Aransas County Navigation District Commissioner Dave Maguglin changed his mind on dismissing Goldston Engineering and after a 10-minute break in the Tuesday night ACND meeting, came back to make a motion that Goldston Engineering Coroporation of Corpus Christi be retained to make the final specifications for the long-delayed Rockport Harbor electrical rewiring project.

Maguglin, refusing to listen to electrical engineers who were attempting to explain to the commissioners the several choices available to them in the project, made a motion after an hour of heated debate to dismiss Goldston and hire Lloyd Umfleet, an electrical engineer and Rockport resident.

After Maguglin's motion the debate heated up even more among the commissioners and several audience members and when it appeared that Acting Chairman Hillis Dominguez was losing control of the meeting, he called for a 10-minute break.

As soon as the commissioners returned to the table Maguglin, obviously eager to continue, asked Dominguez, "Mr. Chairman, is the meeting officially back in order?"

"Yes sir," replied Dominguez.

"I move that we retain Goldston and proceed with the specs," said Maguglin, standing to make his motion.

Commissioner Hal B. McKnight made a second to the motion and it passed unanimously with Acting Chairman Dominguez voting yes.

The discussion on the electrical system, that has dominated ACND meetings for many months now, began when Umfleet approached the commissioners from the audience and told them he wanted to see the job done properly and at the least cost.

Umfleet told the board members," I would like to show you how to do it better and cheaper than (Gary) Deason's method. Would you like for me to show you how it should be done?"

The Rockport electrical engineer then proceeded to explain some basic principles of electricity, equating it to a stream of water and explaining three possible systems for wiring the harbor.

He told the board they might want to consider supplying a certain breaker rating at each receptacle, then charging a monthly fee to supply a higher rated breaker instead of attempting to meter each individual boat slip.

Umfleet told the commissioners he had spent some time on the new docks that hold the 32 new boat slips in Rockport Harbor. He said there is an unacceptable voltage loss at the end of the line and that he had checked into the electrical system and believed it to be illegally wired.

After hearing this charge, Maguglin asked ACND attorney Reese Rozzell if he had ever heard of any government body being caught and prosecuted for something like this.

Rozzell said he wasn't aware of any prosecutions for this type of thing and Maguglin asked Rozzell if he thought the ACND could get by without changing the wiring system at the harbor.

Rozzell didn't make a recommendation.

Umfleet continued his presentation to the commissioners saying he had done some research into the availability of hardware for marine wiring projects. He presented some photographs and pamphlets on some fiberglass and waterproof hardware he referred to as "complete marine power centers" that could be located at each dock and would provide any electrical services requested by the customer or desired by the Navigation District.

After explaining three different ways of wiring the harbor, Umfleet told the commissioners, "My complaint is that Deason's report doesn't differentiate from these three ways. If you got three bids it could be on three different systems."

In the middle of the presentation, Maguglin asked Umfleet — as he has in every other appearance of the engineer before the board — if he is licensed as an electrician in Rockport.

"I'm licensed by the State of Texas. Rockport is in Texas," replied Umfleet.

Commissioner Kirk Holman, agreeing with Umfleet's explanation of the three different systems said, "We can have a minimum system or one with flexibilities."

"I like to have the flexibility of tailoring your service to the needs of the customer. You can offer 10 amp break service as a minimum service; if they want more they pay for a larger breaker," said Umfleet.

Questioned about the different costs of the project, Umfleet said the cheapest method would be to use overhead lines with meter loops and let each customer get his power from CPL.

"Another way is to supply a 10 amp breaker then charge more for a 20 to 30 amp breaker. You would generate income to pay your utility bill," said Umfleet.

Asked how much he thought the rewiring project might cost Umfleet estimated it would cost around $50,000.

"So what we have out on the new pier does not meet code," asked Holman.

"That's correct," responed Umfleet.

"So what do we do?" asked Holman to the disappointing news.

"I would suggest that your first order of business would be to replace those overhead wires immediately," said Umfleet.

Umfleet said he thought Deason's system of going underground cost too much and didn't offer anything. "I would recommend that you cross the road then go underground."

When contested about the safety of coming across the road with the overhead line near the boat ramp, creating a possible danger to those launching sailboats with aluminum masts, Umfleet reminded the commissioners there are several places where powerlines cross the road in the area of the harbor including the bait stands, the navigation district office and the new Rockport Art Association building location as well as the new restroom at the harbor.

McKnight told Umfleet, "Okay, let's get to the bottom line. Do you have any figures?"

"I think the figures Goldston gave you are realistic figures," said Umfleet. "I still think it would be under $50,000 and it would be a better systm."

Umfleet continued his discussion of Deason's report for which the ACND paid $2,500 several months ago saying, "Having read this report I still don't know how much receptacles you want. The scope of the job has not been adequately differentiated to do the job.

"I'm not trying to sell myself," he continued. "But if you do the job, hire an engineer."

McKnight discussed the use of the city inspector with Umfleet and Umfleet said, "You're talking about two different things. Your city inspector will say it meets city code, not that it meets the specs."

When Umfleet finished his presentation Gary Deason rose and, walking to the commissioners table, said, "I want you all to know I've done all I could to keep quiet. As for as the measured voltage drop (on the new pier), it wasn't that way the other day."

Deason, continuing to defend his report, told the board, "I also want you to know that Umfleet used to work for Goldston."

Fulton considers city sewer funding

FULTON — In a workshop meeting following a special meeting Tuesday evening, July 19, the town council considered the possibility of applying for a $250,000 sewer grant. A decision is expected at the next regular meeting.

The grant is part of the Texas Community Development Programs, sponsored by the Texas Department of Community Affairs. The money has been made available through transfer of federal funding programs back to the states. The grant is one of four $250,000 programs available for the development of sewers.

Fulton is eligible for the grant since the town's unemployment rate is 10.9 percent. The required unemployment rate for eligibility is 8.54 percent. Although the application deadline is Sept. 1, the suggested deadline is Aug. 15 in case application information needs to be changed or corrected.

Annexation procedures were discussed for the area west of the town limits as well as the area south. Fulton attorney Gene Garcia said that the field notes for the area to be annexed west of the town must be obtained before proceedings can begin. He explained that annexation proceedings are limited to 90 days and must include two public hearings not less than 20 days or more than 40 days into the proceedings, one at the town hall and one at the site to be annexed.

The area to be annexed west extends from lot 61 down Mesquite St. to lots 106, 107, 108 and 109, down Chaparral St. back to lot 61, taking in all property up to 11th St, including Pyramid 39. The boundary also extends down Laurel St. to 11th St.

Garcia said he forsees no problems annexing the territory west since all the property owners have requested annexation and the area is not within the extraterritorial jurisdiction of Rockport. A special meeting to begin annexation proceedings west has been called for 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 26, at the town hall. Public hearings have been set for 7 p.m. Tuesday, August 16, at the town hall, and 7 p.m. Tuesday, August 23 at Woody Acres Trailer Park.

Annexation south presents a more complicated situation since the area to be annexed (south to Traylor Ave.) is within Rockport's ETJ. Fifty-one percent of the property owners or the registered voters in the area to be annexed must request and be granted release from the ETJ of Rockport before Fulton can begin annexation proceedings. Council members decided that Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline should personally deliver the affadavits requesting release.

Garcia said that after the letter is received, the Rockport city council mst have a workshop and regular meeting before a decision is made.

Fulton Secretary Lucille Hinson announced Wednesday that the Texas Insurance Commission will be sending Ike Williams, its inspector for this area, to Fulton sometime this month to set new key ratings for the town's fire insurance. Williams will also update the town's fire map at the time he is here.

The town council will hold a workshop meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 2, and its regular meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 9 at the town hall.

Council nixes bait stand bids

By LESLIE ABRAMS
Staff writer

FULTON — The town council rejected bids from two separate parties to lease the bait-concession stand at L.E. Casterline fishing pier during a special meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday, July 19. However, bidding has not been closed and council members said that the two bidders could reapply.

Bids for the stand were received from Randy Brue, who bid $200 per month to lease the stand, and William C. Williams and Don Nichols, who agreed to pay all utilities plus 1½ percent of the gross income from the stand to the Town of Fulton for a period of one year with an unconditional five-year option. The council decided to defer a decision on the bids in order to find out more about the applicants and their credit histories.

At Tuesday evening's meeting, Alderman Leslie Cole said he had spoken with Williams, who told him that he and Nichols planned to lease the bait stand as partners and that Nichols is a former owner of the Rod and Reel Motel.

Alderwoman Pat Loflin said that she had spoken with several persons who have dealt with Williams on a professional basis, including Aransas County Navigation District commissioners and Rockport city council members who told her they have had unfavorable experiences in dealing with Williams over a pier he placed in the bay without the correct permits.

Fulton attorney Gene Garcia asked if the council had any information as to Williams' credit rating, to which the answer was negative.

Alderwoman Katherine McLester made a motion not to accept Williams' bid at this time, which was seconded by Loflin.

Alderwoman Lynelle Hunt said, "I'm not sure that the council has the information to judge this man." Cole agreed with Hunt.

Garcia pointed out that the prospectus issued to potential bidders states that evidence of adequate working capital and commitments to support any financial arrangements relating to investments in the concession must be shown by the individual

Nav. district candidates redraw for ballot order

Due to a mistake by the Aransas County Navigation District in not notifying all of the candidates who have filed for the Aug. 13 election, the first drawing for positions on the ballot was void and a redrawing was held at a special meeting Tuesday, July 19, at the ACND office in Rockport.

Incumbent Commissioner Dave Maguglin drew first place on the ballot in the Precinct 1-1A race against Fred Grupe who will be placed in the number two spot on the ballot.

Incumbent Commissioner Hillis Dominguez, running unopposed, will be in the number one spot on the ballot in the Precinct 2 position.

With no incumbent running in the Precinct 3 race, candidate Roy C. Hicks drew the number one spot with Richard Hardy running in the number two position.

Precinct 4 will also be without an incumbent and Ranous Blankert drew the top spot on the ballot with Chris Allen second and Charles Augustine third. Augustine was out of town due to an illness in his family and asked an ACND commissioner to draw for him.

In the at-large contest Commissioner Hal B. McKnight drew the top position on the ballot and Commissioner Kirk Holman will appear in the number two spot.

After the original drawing at a special meeting held at 1:30 p.m. Thursdy, July 14, a complaint was filed with the office of the Secretary of State that not all candidates had been properly notified and a redrawing was ordered.

Reese Rozzell, attorney for the ACND, said the drawing was advertised in the news media and he felt that they had done everything legally but because the ballots hadn't been printed yet he said he saw no problem with holding a new drawing.

Commissioner Bobby Landrum, chairman of the ACND did not file for re-election and McKnight and Holman chose to run at large instead of the precincts they now serve.

Decision is pending on city grant application

To fund park improvements

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

City officials waiting word on Rockport's application for a grant to fund new facilities and improvements to Memorial Park will have to wait for another month — until Aug. 30.

A decision by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department on the disbursement of some $3 million in grant funds through the federal Land-Water Conservation Program was expected in time for Wednesday night's meeting of the Rockport board of parks and recreation.

But at that meeting, Board Chairman George McCague said the TP&WD has decided to defer action until Aug. 30.

Rockport is applying for a matching funds grant under the program to fund an estimated $177,850 in park improvements, including new ball fields, a picnic pavillion and a jogging-exercise trail.

In regard to the jogging trail, McCague said the city has been in contact with officials from the Wells Fargo Company and have been assured of a grant from Wells Fargo for that facility. McCague said the Wells Fargo grant would not be contingent on the grant from the state and, if the state grant does come through, any money received from Wells Fargo could be counted in the city's matching funds share.

This prompted a remark from park board member Kathryn Winkelman later that the jogging track would be feasible even if the city should not get the larger TP&WD grant.

In answer to a question from Kathryn Winkelman, McCague said no grants have been awarded by the TP&WD under the program to any applying cities.

On a motion from Winkelman, seconded by board member Doug Ocher, the park board voted unanimously to adopt a resolution expressing the board's appreciation to Herman Johnson and members of the Rockport city staff who prepared the application that was sent to the parks & wildlife department.

Proposed improvements to the park, for which the city is seeking grant funds, include asphalting and paving the drive, construction of a sewer outfall to the park, parking facilities, a west boundary fence, the cinder walk-jogging-exercise trail, four park benches in the rest area, a new unlighted soccer field, lighting for the existing adult soccer field, a picnic pavillion, a new baseball field, multigame play slab, restroom-storage building and miscellaneous items such as landscaping and signs.

Rockport's planning and zoning board included the proposed improvements to Memorial Park in its recommendations for a two-year capital improvements program for the city.

The park board Wednesday night voted to hold its next meeting — set for 7 p.m. Aug. 17 — in Memorial Park.

Also at Wednesday night's park board meeting were Patty McArdle, Cy Richards and Howard Black.

Federal aid dollars no bargain

Federal aid is no bargain for Texans.

For every federal aid dollar received last year, Texans paid $1.59, the highest of any state.

This and other disheartening statistics are contained in a report by the Tax Foundation Inc., a non-profit research group that specializes in keeping track of how many federal aid dollars each state receives annually and how many tax dollars each state pays.

As it turns out, Texas' state and local governments are getting back only $1 for each $1.59 taxpayers send to Washington. Last year, the federal government provided about $3.7 billion in grants to Texas' state and local governments, for everything from agricultural and education programs to health and community servvices, urban renewal and welfare.

That amounted to about $252 per person, less than in any other state, according to government records. But Texas residents paid more than $5.9 billion in federal taxes used for such aid, the Tax Foundation report showed.

Connecticut ranked next after Texas in paying more in federal taxes than it got back from Washington. The state paid $1.40 for each federal aid dollar it got during the last fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30.

On the other hand, Vermont paid 57 cents in taxes for each federal aid dollar returned to state and local governments.

It is not a new thing for Texas to be paying more than it receives in federal aid. The state's federal tax bill, in relation to grants it gets, has been on the upswing in past years. For example, in fiscal 1980, the state paid $1.40 for each dollar in federal aid. In 1981, the figure increased to $1.46.

Even so, an economist with the Tax Foundation says Texas is partially to blame for the federal tax-aid inequity. It was explained that for most of the federal grant programs, a state must provide matching funds. Thus the less a state is willing to produce in matching funds the less federal aid it receives.

Texas has traditionally been conservative in public spending. Many federal programs depend on a state's willingness to spend its own funds for certain projects. This led the economist to conclude that "Texans' appetite for these services financed by matching federal funds is lower than elsewhere relative to their income and federal taxpaying capacity."

It was stressed that income and taxpaying capacity are relatively high in Texas because of large population and wealth produced by oil production.

It should be noted that aid to state and local governments and taxes used to pay for it are only part of the broader tax and spending picture.

Last year, for example, federal expenditures of all kinds totaled more than $32 billion in Texas, up from $31.6 billion the preceding year.

As long as Texas remains as conservative as it is in spending policy, it is unlikely there will be much change in the federal tax-aid ratio.

Dangerous bridges

The tragic news of an Interstate 95 bridge collapse in Connecticut that killed three people and injured three others, drew attention to a study claiming that almost half of the 565,000 bridges in the United States need to be repaired or replaced.

Funded by the highway industry, the study was conducted by the Road Information Program. It said about half of the nation's streets and roads are rated "fair," meaning they need resurfacing and more than 11 percent are "poor" and need major reconstruction.

Forty-five percent of U.S. bridges, considered an extemely high figure by the highway industry and government experts, need repairs or replacements, the study points out.

Shortly before the critical report was released for publication, a 100-foot section of a Connecticut Turnpike bridge collapsed, killing three motorists and critically injuring three others.

In many states where defective bridges are dangerous to the traveling public, it is not neglect but a matter of money needed to repair and pay for reconstruction of bridges, a major expense item for state highway departments.

Many states are increasing their fuel and road use taxes to repair deteriorating roads and bridges despite the recently-enacted federal gasoline tax hike of 5 cents a gallon.

Gasoline tax revenue, while welcomed by most states, will help solve only part of their road and bridge construction problem. Decreasing gasoline use has cut deeply into state fuel tax revenues. Also, states need more cash to match increased federal funding under the matching grants program.

Some states are depending more and more on general funds for road and bridge work because of a shortfall in other sources of money for this purpose. Such a practice was once considered an interim measure, but is fast becoming a tax-supported budget item along with other state expenses.

Government at all levels spent about $20 billion in 1982 for all road and bridge work, including new construction projects. With a backlog of some $324 billion worth of repairs, spending would have to be hiked to more than $32 billion a year over the next 10 years just to catch up, the highway study estimates.

So far this year, 21 states have enacted legislation to beef up highway and bridge repair funds, 10 of them with a direct increase in the state gasoline tax.

Another 13 state legislatures are considering tax hikes. Although its highway funding needs are estimated in the millions, Texas has not yet enacted legislation to remedy the problem.

Not as many are puffing

Millions of Americans hooked on tobacco ought to take a tip from the British.

A million Britons stopped smoking in the past two years and cigarette smokers for the first time in many years are in the minority in all population categories.

The government office of Population Censuses and Surveys in London said from 1980 to 1982, the proportion of male smokers over 18 dropped from 42 percent to 38 percent and female smokers from 37 to 33 percent.

Ten years ago, officials said, 52 percent of British males and 37 percent of women in the country were smokers.

In the U.S., the number of cigarette smokers continues to rise, especially among women and teenagers. For several months after the government required that a health danger warning be placed on cigarette packages, the number of smokers declined. Now the number is rising again.

The latest word from Washington is the Surgeon General's office may soon issue an even stronger warning about cigarette danger and require it be printed on each pack.

Teenagers to blame

Street violence that resulted in the deaths of four persons and injuries to several others during the past few weeks prompted Detroit Mayor Coleman Young to impose a teenager curfew, a rare move in large cities.

The Detroit Metropolitan Branch of the American Civil Liberties Union lost no time in attacking the curfew, saying it is investigating legality of the mayor's order.

Well-known for its intervention in civil rights issues, ACLU leaders say they fear enforcement of the curfew "may provoke needless confrontations between police and young people."

ACLU leaders are going to have to come up with a more logical reason for opposing the curfew since increasing clashes between young people and police established the basis in the first place.

Furthermore, the fact that four lives have been lost because of senseless street violence involving idle teenagers cannot be overlooked or minimized by those in authority.

We agree with Mayor Coleman's courage in imposing the nighttime curfew and applaud him for warning youngsters of consequences of continued misconduct. "If you mess up, we will nail you," was the mayor's warning to unruly youths roaming Detroit streets at all hours.

Detroit teenagers participating in activities outside the law have created a climate of violence and have invited counter action by agencies charged with keeping the peace. They have no one to blame but themselves for the curfew.

Instead of creating a constitutional issue where none should exist, ACLU should use its influence in trying to restore street safety in Detroit. Rather than challenging legality of counter measures, the organization could better serve by cooperating with elected officials trying to keep order.

There was also criticism of the curfew by some Detroit citizens who expressed fear police would take advantage of it to harass working teenagers and those attending night sports events.

Mayor Coleman's rejoinder was that police would use "common sense and discretion" in enforcing the curfew, making allowances for working teenagers and those at sports and entertainment events.

No one likes to be deprived of liberty, and no one is unless abuse of that right injures others.

Shoot-a-burglar

The Louisiana Legislature has legally validated what has long been an unwritten law in that and other states.

Gov. Dave Treen has signed a so-called "Shoot-a-burglar" bill that allows a citizen to shoot an intruder in his home.

The governor said the legislation will send a message to criminals that Louisiana is prepared to take strong, positive action to "protect our families."

The measure was strongly opposed by the National Association for Colored People. The bill says any resident can use deadly force if he "reasonably believes" such force is necessary to bar unauthorized entry into the house or compel an intruder to leave the house.

Under current Louisiana law, a person must actually fear for his life to use force and the law is so vague people have been afraid to defend themselves, said the bill's author, Senator Ned Randolph of Alexandria.

He said there have been cases in which residents were charged for shooting intruders.

Law or no law, a burglar would be just as dead, but under the new law the person who pulled the trigger would not have to live in fear of being charged with murder.

Intruders are aware of the risk. Let them suffer the consequences.

Letters

Compliments to ahab for the editorial dated July 16 relative to Baker's Port. Isn't Baker Marine the company that succeeded in lowering wages for workers in this area recently by firing Union members and replacing them with anyone who would accept the lower pay and benefits available to non-Union people? Highly skilled, permanent, tax paying citizens replaced by out-of-state, "house broken," or semi-skilled transient employees certainly is not a step upward for the area.

The environment is not my favorite subject either, but as a former, long time, Los Angeleno, the Coastal Bend promoters' preoccupation with encouragement of heavy industry, particularly petrochemical refinement, scares me half to death. A drive into Corpus Christi on a day with moderate winds shows the same brown haze hanging over Ingleside and everything south of Portland that we began to see in Los Angeles in the early 1940s. It didn't have a name then and didn't seem to be a danger. But by the time World War II had drawn heavy industry from all ports of the country to Southern California, it was established as a dangerous health hazard and it had a name — SMOG!

Right now, Coastal Bend winds are pretty constant and reliable, but if the weather is changing, as many experts claim, you might have another problem to add to the ones already identified: a shortage of good drinking water, a lack of safe solid waste disposal areas and a deteriorating estuarine system with resulting poor returns from established shrimp, oyster, fishing and related tourist industries.

The Coastal Bend has so many "people attractions" that are more rare and valuable than space for unrestricted heavy industry. Can't we save the Coastal Bend and Sparkling City for PEOPLE while the sparkle is still here.

The tangents one finds on a rainy day

DATELINE: GRASSBURR MOORINGS — This is the third day of rain and overcast. From an east window I can see the unruffled waters of Little Bay. Palm fronds stand erect in the wind and a moment later they droop unruffled as the breeze dies. Looking westward Aransas Bay is turbulent with whitecaps. The rain guage measures 3.8 inches. Days like this one can be appreciated in South Texas, coming as they always do after long spells of dry weather. Yet they become tiresome and my all but empty mind tells me that more rain means growing grass to be mowed and of the mosquitos bound to come.

For a while though it is pleasant to listen to the rain, hear the pleasant sound of water dripping from gutters. But no, in this age of air conditioning, one only knows it is raining when it is seen through a window, unless of course it is torrential and the wind is blowing 60 mph. Note on a house I may someday build: Tin roof imperative. Then at least I shall be able to hear rain when it falls.

I am thinking. It would be nice to be a really big shot columnist, like Jim Kilpatrick or Bill Buckley. I spent a rainy evening reading a sort of personal journal by Buckley. I haven't finished, but so far he has at least three secretaries. I should like to have just one secretary; I'd even settle for a part time secretary.

Imagine. The morning paper informs me of a bit of a flap in Patagonia. Press button. Secretary appears. "Miss Flubbit, get me the file on Patagonia, I need that piece I wrote while I was down there in '46. Remember it?"

Certainly she does. That is what a good columnist secretary is all about. Flubbit is, as we both know, indispensable. Even so, perhaps half a dozen times in the past three decades, I have been bound to remind her that it is my columns and my speaking engagements that bed and board her, rather handsomely I might add.

I am a gentle man. Innuendo is my forte. I turn on a tape deck, "My Fair Lady," and when the song "Why Can't A Woman Be More Like a Man" begins I turn it to full volume. The effect is lasting, as I have implied. She understands all is well again when I return the music to Bach.

I happen to be a man of certain prejudices, likes and dislikes, and unlike most of my fellows I confess. When it comes to discussing them, perhaps because I am a perverse type, I prefer airing dislikes. Consider, for example, the terms "senior citizen," or "teenager." It distresses me not at all to be called an "old man." And as a lad or youth I minded not at all being called a "brat." Come to think of it I may have even liked being called an "incorrigible brat."

It certainly would be nice if people could get back to calling things by their right names. Why did a janitor have to suddenly become a custodian? Here I might begin a list of designations that would fill the remainder of this page. Most abominable, naturally, is the term "Ms." How does one pronounce it? I can only come up with "Mizz" which in the old south was the black pronunciation used by servants.

But there I have committed a faux pau. One doesn't use the word servant, although I have known good servants for whom I have had more respect than a few editors.

A few weeks ago Marvin Stone devoted his editorial column in USN&WR to quotations from Calvin Coolidge, our only president to have been born on Independence Day. Not having a Miss Flubbit to properly file the column, I stuffed it into my own filing system which consists of raggedy edged and askew clippings piled here and there until they topple to the floor.

Particularly appropriate to our times: "Don't expect to build up the weak by pulling down the strong," and "It is of infinite importance to demonstrate that legislation is used not for the benefit of the legislator, but of the public."

Ha, and here's another bit that just sort of skidded from my desk. Perhaps that big thunderclap that just passed did it. This one should but won't sound as a warning to peaceniks and their like. It is especially appropriate to the times: "A democracy has a very hard time in a war, particularly at the start. They can never get ready in advance. The conditions are such that they are susceptible to surprise action and an arbitrary government like the Hitler government has every advantage in those respects."

Mention any war in our history and reflection will demonstrate that had this nation been ready tens of thousands less lives might not have been lost, in truth the wars might well never have happened. By the way, the quote was by George Catlett Marshall, one of the best minds of the century and perhaps one of the most honorable men to have ever lived.

Ah, the tangents one finds on a rainy day.

Who put the hackberry leaves in the tobacco?

Editor's note: The Live Oak Philosopher on his grassburr farm reports on an odd dream this week.

Dear Editor:

I don't know if it was all the news I've been reading about arms control between the United States and Russia, like whether they could agree to reduce their nuclear weapons from enough to wipe out each other's population 10 times down to just five times, or if it was something I ate, but the other night I had a dream.

I dreamed that way back in the early days before Columbus discovered America two Indian tribes, constantly suspicious of each other and always preparing to fight, decided to hold an arms reduction conference. They were spending so much time preparing to defend themselves they had no time to hunt.

After arguing four months over what wigwam to hold the conference in, the chieftains finally got together in a neutral clearing.

The agreement finally hammered out, or as the smoke-signal network put it, tomahawked out, required each tribe to reduce by 30 percent its number of bows and arrows, multiple arrowheads, rock clubs, spears and able-bodied warriors. The discharged warriors were to be put to work planting corn, to give full employment to tribeswomen pulling weeds.

The agreement was sealed by passing around a peace pipe. Each chieftain took a long puff. In those days there was no surgeon general to warn against it.

Six months later scouts from one tribe reported the other tribe was hard at work doubling its supply of bows and arrows, multiple arrowheads, etc.

Challenged, the treaty-breaking tribe announced that it was ignoring the agreement because it was invalid — the tobacco in the peace pipe had been adulterated with hackberry leaves, in clear violation of the Geneva Conference agreement painted on the wall of a cave just outside the city limits.

Who put the hackberry leaves in the tobacco is now being investigated by the Tribal Ethnics Committee. A report is expected in two or three hundred moons.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Great scramble of '83 created opportunities

By SCOTT BURNS

The Great Super Stock Scramble of 1983 has created some interesting opportunities for more cautious investors who like dividends or need current income. One reason: It's hard to get enthusiastic about moderate growth and a dividend of 6 to 10 percent when other investors are running around with glazed eyes and screaming about stocks that have doubled, tripled or quadrupled.

In fact, this may be the time, either for the market as a whole or for your own personal plans, to start hunting for good, higher-yield stocks.

Here's the case:

— Many growth stocks are overpriced. This is particularly true among smaller, "emerging growth" companies. One indication: The top 10 percent of all over-the-counter stocks were priced at a staggering 59 times earnings recently — up from an already high 27 times earnings a year earlier.

While larger companies such as those on the New York Stock Exchange have more reasonable earnings multiples, it remains that the typical earnings multiple on the big board has doubled in the past year, rising from 7 to nearly 15.

— But entire groups have lagged the market. In spite of the general rise, some industry groups have not participated in the market rise. For instance, electric utilities, communications utilities, food companies and insurance companies have been conspicuous underperformers. While the typical stock rose almost 60 percent over the past year and many industry groups actually doubled (for example, retailing, textiles, aerospace), the typical electric utility was up only 20 percent and the typical telephone communications company was up less than 40 percent.

Ironically, these groups offer good yields, the kind many people should consider as an alternative to money market funds and other short-term deposits. According to Media General Financial Weekly, for instance, industry composites show the following yields and price-earning ratios:

INDUSTRY GROUP	Yield	P-E
Communications	7.9 percent	8.9
Food-Packed Goods	4.0 percent	9.8
Food-Meats-Dairy	4.5 percent	10.0
Food-Confections	4.7 percent	12.8
Insurance	3.8 percent	9.6
Electric Utilities	10.6 percent	7.0
All Stocks Composite	3.7 percent	14.6

While a 4 percent yield is a major drop from money market funds, a combination of communications and electric utilities offers the stability of income many older investors need and the prospect of higher future dividends.

Suppose, for instance, that an investor buys a typical communications utility. If dividends are increased at 6 percent annually, a rate most analysts will accept as reasonable, this is the return on his original investment the stock buyer will have as years go by:

THE POWER OF RISING DIVIDENDS

Yield	Yield
0	7.9
1	8.37
2	8.88
3	9.41
4	9.97
5	10.57
6	11.21
7	12.59
8	13.35
9	14.15
10	15.00

As you can see, while the stock yield is lower for a few years, the yield on money market accounts and even long-term bonds is surpassed within six years. After that, the stock investment provides a superior income return.

What we're exploring here is what some analysts call "the investment horizon" — how far ahead people are willing to look. One of the perculiarities of the current bull market is that most people seem to be willing to look FAR ahead, buying companies that don't pay current dividends and may never pay dividends, while careful buying in a reasonable time horizon, say three to seven years, has been largely overlooked.

Some of the most striking examples of this aren't in utilities but in the major growth stocks. With current dividend yields of about 3 percent that can be expected to grow at 10 to 15 percent a year, these companies can provide yields equal to or greater than money market funds in a surprisingly short time. Here, for instance, are the figures:

The bottom line?

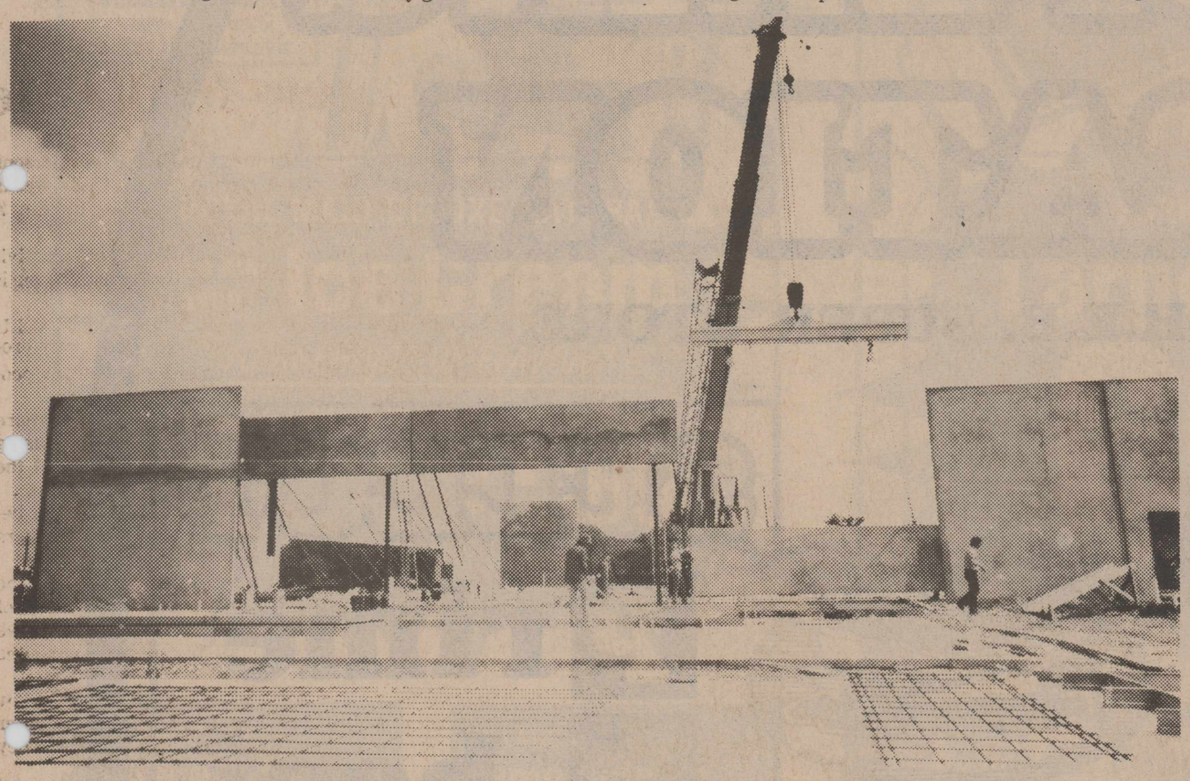

Income stocks, and most of the old "Nifty 50," may be the place for investors to hunt.

Precious metal transactions call for record keeping

Taxpayers who buy and sell gold and silver or other precious metals either occasionally or as dealers should keep accurate records of the transaction, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The profit made by an individual other than a dealer on sales of precious metals is considered a capital gain and is reported on Schedule D of Form 1040. Dealers treat profits as ordinary income.

The value of numismatic items, such as gold and silver coins, is based on their age, history, art, condition, rareness, metal content and face value. The value of bullion gold and silver or other precious metal, which is generally purchased as a speculative interest, is dependent upon the fluctuation of precious metal prices on the world money market.

Taxpayers needing further information on the sale of gold, silver and other precious metal items and their tax treatment should call the IRS Forms/Tax Information number listed in the telephone directory. Taxpayers who purchased precious metals and sold them at a loss also can obtain information from the IRS on how to treat the loss.

Some shelters just schemes

IRS says that in recent years many abusive tax shelters have appeared on the market that claim benefits never intended by law. Generally, these abusive shelters are marketing schemes, often for substantial fees, that involve artificial transactions lacking economic reality. Other characteristics include inflated appraisals, unrealistic allocations, package deals designed from the start to generate losses far in excess of investment, buying in volume at "wholesale" to claim charitable contributions based on retail and a number of other devices lacking in economic substance.

Investing in an abusive tax shelter, the IRS says, is an expensive proposition. Consider the consequences: The promoter generally charges a substantial fee; the chance of examination by the IRS is great; and the taxpayer will face payment of the tax, substantial interest on the underpayment, plus a variety of penalties.

The IRS advises potential tax shelter investors to consider all the facts and circumstances involved and to seek competent counsel before investing.

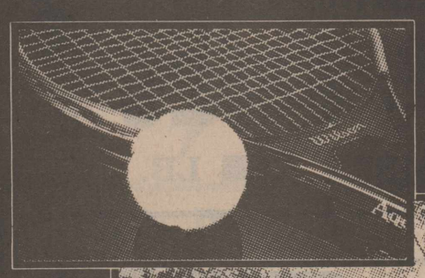

Tax extension date near

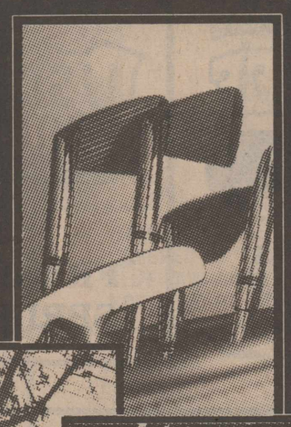

Taxpayers who asked for an automatic extension of time to file their 1982 federal income tax return must file the complete return and pay the remaining tax due by midnight Aug. 15, the Internal Revenue Service says.

For additional information regarding the filing date extension, taxpayers may call the IRS Forms/Tax Information number listed in the local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

Seafood expert receives award

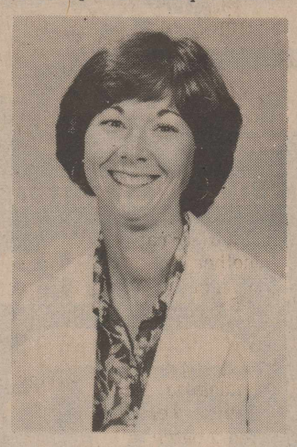

Annette Reddell Hegen, seafood consumer education specialist with the Texas Marine Advisory Service (MAS), has been named 1983 Southeast Marine Advisory Service Network Specialist of the Year. Hegen, whose office is in Port Aransas, promotes and tests fishery products of the Gulf of Mexico and travels the state to show consumers and retailers how to handle, process and prepare fish and shellfish.

The Specialist of the Year Award was presented to Hegen at the annual Sea Grant Association Awards Banquet held July 13 in San Antonio. Some 200 representatives of the 30 programs making up the national Sea Grant network were in attendance.

"Annette is enthusiastic about her work and combines educational presentations with practical hands-on experiences for participants," said Rich Tillman marine agent in Aransas and San Patricio counties.

Hegen takes her presentations to classrooms, homemakers' meetings, seafood markets and retail outlets, demonstrating ways to prepare seafood, explaining the value and variety of uses it has and giving tips on marketing techniques. She periodically holds seafood workshops in cooperation with Texas Agricultural Extension agents. She has produced numerous publications about seafood and a series of recipe cards for preparing fish, shellfish, crawfish and even alligator. The recipes range from basics like fried shrimp and gumbo to more unusual dishes like crabmeat oriental and fish enchiladas. Each year she offers recipes, brochures and seafood samples at the Texas State Fair, state conventions, fishing fiestas and local events.

As a frequent guest on state and local television and radio shows, Hegen also produces a newsletter for consumers, the Seafood News. At the Texas A&M University seafood quality testing lab, she tests and evaluates potential seafood products for taste, nutritional value, cost and other factors. She develops techniques for handling, processing and preparing species of fish not traditionally used for food in Texas, such as mullet and shark and provides retailers, distributors, processors, trade associations and institutions with educational materials on merchandising, handling and storing fish and shellfish.

Feenan Jennings, director of the Texas A&M University Sea Grant College Program, said Hegen, working in a state given more to beef consumption than seafood has, "done a superior job in turning that situation around. Her territory is any place in Texas where she can teach people about seafood and its qualities."

Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association, was among those who recommended Hegen for the award, saying her work "contributed immeasurably to the sale of shrimp in this state."

The Specialist of the Year Award, sponsored by the Southeast Fisheries Association, is the first such award to be given by the Southeast Marine Advisory Service Network (SEMAS), an organization of marine agents and specialists in eight South Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico states.

A native of San Marcos, Hegen received a B.S. in home economics education from Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos and an M.S. in clothing and textiles and mass communications from Texas Tech University in Lubbock. She also attended the Culinary Arts Institute in Chicago. She taught high school in San Antonio from 1971 to 1974 and spent two years as a seafood home economist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin before joining MAS as a seafood consumer education specialist in 1977. She is a member of the American Home Economics Association, the Texas Home Economics Association, Phi Upsilon Omicron, Gamma Phi Beta, Electrical Women's Round Table, Texas Agricultural Extension Specialist Association and the Brazos Valley Home Economics Association.

MAS in Texas uses marine specialists and agents to work on marine-related problems, linking people who use marine resources with sources of information about the marine environment. Specialists, like Hegen, trained in a specific field, such as fisheries, economics or consumer education, offer expertise and access to university research that pertains to local problems. Marine agents, located in coastal counties where they can discover firsthand the needs of local marine-related industries and coastal resource users, consult with these specialists. Together they work with the public and private sectors to see that marine resources are used widely.

MAS is a joint effort of the Sea Grant Program, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the state of Texas and coastal county commissioners' courts.

ACMSI women brave weather for luncheon

Heavy rains cut the attendance at the luncheon meeting of the Women's Committee of Aransas County Medical Services Inc. last Friday, July 15, but 28 members were present for the monthly session.

Women's Committee President Joann Haskell reported on the meeting of the 17-member ACMSI board of directors at which a 5 percent salary increase was voted to the four paid paramedics of the Aransas County Emergency Medical Service. The pay increase was voted, Haskell said, after a study revealed their pay was lower than that of other paramedics in the state.

The board also voted to purchase special boots that EMS volunteers must wear when on calls, Haskell added.

Mary Casey, workshop chairwoman, announced that all chairwomen have been named for the annual Christmas Bazaar, coming up this fall, and are already at work.

A plea was put out for volunteers to help with new craft ideas and in making crafts for the Bazaar.

The treasurer's report for the year ending June 30, given by Treasurer Dorothy Hrubes, showed $16,684.24 raised through workshop sales and the 1982 Bazaar; $7,263.16 from memorials and donations; $456.12 in interest on the organization's NOW account; $1,914.89 from the boat cruise; $3,151.47 from the shrimp booth at the 1982 SeaFair; and $3,596.68 from the Valentine Dance.

Money from these projects is used to help maintain the county EMS. Another $1,287.45 was raised in a special rummage sale held to benefit the Paws & Taws Building moving fund. Some $1,000 of the proceeds were donated to the fund.

The bank balance for the Women's Committee at the end of the fiscal year was $9,349.11 plus a Money Market Certificate of $15,519.87.

The guest speaker scheduled for Friday's meeting was unable to attend because of flooding between Rockport and Corpus Christi.

Bon appetit!

By Ann Thomas

Cappi Morton of Jemenez Springs, N.M., is one of our charming Winter Texans whom my family and I came to know and grew quite fond of while she and her sisters were spending the winter months here. We have maintained our friendship through the mail and recently Cappi sent some of her family recipes to me to be shared with our readers. Here they are for your enjoyment.

CHINESE JUNK

1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 small can of mushrooms
1 cup of finely diced celery
2 small onions, chopped
1 can water chestnuts, sliced thin
1 large can of tuna
1 large can Chinese noodles
Sliced almonds

Mix together all of the above ingredients with the exception of the sliced almonds, which will be put on top. Put in casserole dish and bake for 30 minutes at 350°F. Can be mixed ahead of time except for the noodles which should not be added until ready to bake.

AUNT MYRA'S ORANGE MARMALADE

1 orange
1 grapefruit
1 lemon

Cut everything up fine except the seeds and the tough white fiber of the grapefruit. Add three times as much water as the bulk of the fruit and let stand overnight. The next day cook until tender and let stand overnight again. On the third day add 1 cup of sugar for every cup of fruit. Boil until thick. "With marmalade from the store costing three dollars a thimbleful this is a real bargain."

CHICKEN CASSEROLE

Place serving sized pieces of cooked chicken in a greased casserole dish and cover with one can of butts and stems of mushrooms. Add chopped onion to taste, if desired, and pour on a can of cream of mushroom soup. Pour on about a cup of chicken stock. Bake at 350°F. until bubbling. Add a layer of your favorite stuffing and bake 20 minutes.

That's it for this week. Thanks for sharing with us, Cappi. Bon appetit!

Pat Greene

This schoolteacher wore a gun

By PAT BLAIR
Staff Writer

Pat Greene remembers the days when he taught school for $75 a month and he and his wife both wore guns.

Those were the days of the Mexican "banditos" of the likes of Pancho Villa — whom Greene encountered once — and a long way from Rockport where Greene, now 90, came to be school superintendent back in 1953.

"Two things brought me here," he said during an interview this past week at his residence on Maple Street: "the school and the fishin'."

It was the "fishin' " that influenced his final decision, he concedes: He was looking for a school superintendent's post and "a friend read me a list of about 20 vacancies. Rockport was on that list — I knew Rockport was the best saltwater fishing on the Texas Coast at the time."

Pat was born in Cass County in northeast Texas — "I been behind all my life — I was born behind," he says. "I was born Dec. 31, so the year got by me before I was even born!"

His father was a farmer, with land that "stretched two miles, back to the river. We went to the river field to work in a wagon," and the Greene family included two brothers and a sister older than Pat, three sisters younger and four cousins — nieces of his parents — who had been orphaned.

"I was named for my dad," Pat said, "and named my second son for my dad. He named his only son for my dad and Pat IV named his only son Pat V.

During those years growing up, Pat recalls being dosed with calomel and "Dover's powders" alternated with quinine for maleria and being vaccinated by his father for smallpox.

He also remembers "getting a break" around 1900 or so when his father one year planted 100 acres of Irish potatoes and reaped a bumper crop for which he received good prices. Those potatoes, Pat said, paid his way to college. The boom didn't last long, he added: "It was over in 1905 because they were growing 'em in the Valley. To haul 'em to the railroad cost all you could sell 'em for."

College started with a year at Sam Houston Normal Institute in Huntsville for a year which was memorable, Pat said, mainly because "the first week I was there, I met the girl who married me later." That was followed by the University of Texas at Austin then a period of teaching before he went back to finish school.

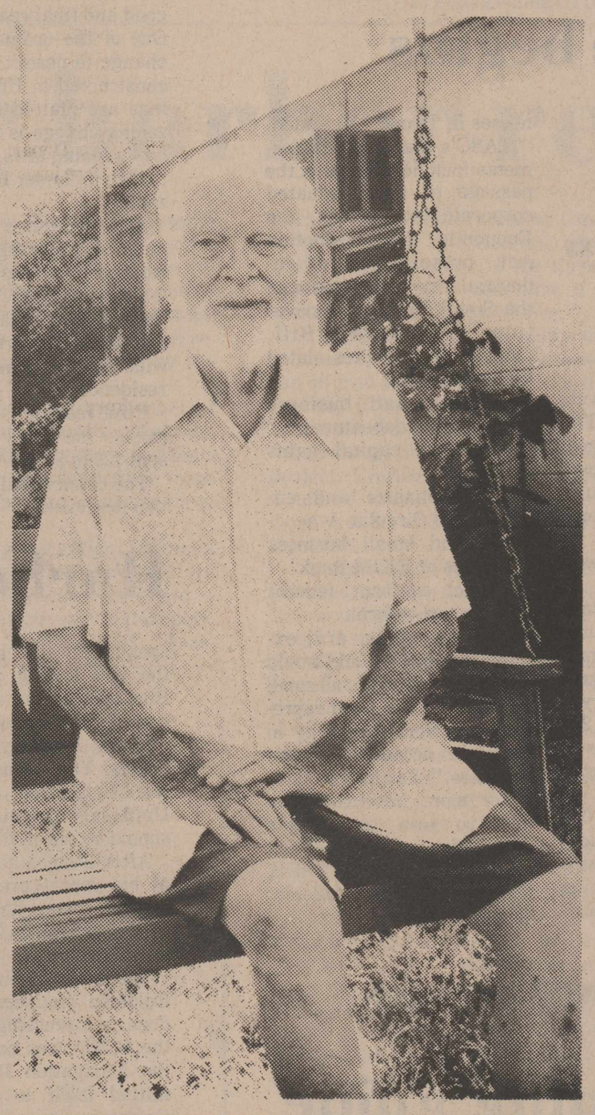

Along the way, in 1916, he married his girl, Inez. When she died in 1981, he said later, they were 24 days away from their 65th wedding anniversary.

Pat remembers his first teaching job was at the Rosevine School in Sabine County. That was cotton country and school was broken up part of the year while the farmers kept their children home to help with the crops. "Around the end of February, when they got ready to plant the crops, they closed the school," Pat said, so he headed south, to Candelaria and the school there.

"I had seven kids in that school," he said, including the youngest sister of one of the local banditos.

From Candelaria, Pat went back to Sabine County for a while, then in September he returned south, this time to the Kilpatrick Ranch to teach school.

The ranch, he said, was about two miles north of Candelaria. He had a 30-30 rifle and another gun when he went to the ranch and Jim Kilpatrick, the owner and a constable, gave him a 7-mm Mauser and rounds of ammunition.

"They wanted one more gun on the ranch," Pat says. He and his wife both went armed in those days, he recalls, "but although I went armed all the time, I never fired at a human being."

Most of the time, Pat recalled, his pay as a school teacher amounted to about $75 a month, although for about a five-month period his pay went up to $85. Supplementing the family income, his wife was the town's postmistress, earning about $25 to $30 a month.

To support himself and his family (the Greenes had four children and Pat now has six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren), Pat farmed and trapped foxes and coyotes for their pelts. He remembers one year planting a cotton crop expecting to reap a sizeable profit: "The river dried up and all I got was six bales."

He remembers one near encounter with the bandito Chico (Francisco) Cano, another time in Candelaria when he was within gunshot of Pancho Villa.

He had received word Villa was on his way through Candelaria, he said: "Some soldiers were camped in a cotton patch — I went to ask their help and they said we'd have to take care of ourselves."

Pat climbed on the roof of the town's post office and stayed there all night with a Winchester. "About 2 a.m., I heard horses coming north through Main Street — all the dogs in town were barking." One of the unseen riders shot at the dogs — "those dogs all quit barking and left" — but the riders, to Pat's relief, kept going, following a sandy arroyo to the river and Mexico.

In 1924, Pat became superintendent of the Webster Independent School District, a post he held for 24 years; when Webster consolidated with other schools into the Clear Creek Consolidated ISD in 1948, Pat became that district's superintendent.

He held the post with Clear Creek for five years, until 1953 when he left to come to Rockport. Twenty-three years later, in 1976, Clear Creek dedicated the P. H. Greene Elementary School in his honor.

In Rockport, Pat served as superintendent only five years, until his retirement, at age 65, in 1958. "I retired on June 1," he said. On Aug. 30, he and a friend went into partnership in Marineland Boat Center.

Their first location was in the building at the corner of Austin and Concho where Maverick Market is now. Pat stayed with the business about three years, "but it was interfering with my fishin'," so he sold out to his partner. "And I went fishin'," Pat says.

He recalls he used to spend a lot of time fishing with Don Gray who succeeded him as the county school superintendent.

These days, Pat lives fairly quietly in his house on Maple. His son, Pat III, and daughter-in-law Eunice have a sailboat and he went with them this past winter on a trip to Florida.

It's a lot of years and quite a few miles from the night he sat on a post office roof waiting for Pancho Villa.

Pat Greene has enjoyed them all.

Dr. Alice Hunt joins Extension Service staff

Dr. Alice E. Hunt has joined the Texas Agricultural Extension Service as a foods and nutrition specialist headquartered at Texas A&M University.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. Jennie C. Kitching, assistant director for home economics, said Hunt will serve the South Plains (2), Northeast (5) and East (9) Extension districts.

In addition to work in the general area of foods and nutrition, Hunt brings expertise in special diets and the dietary management of diabetes, says Kitching.

Prior to joining the Agricultural Extension Service, Hunt served as a consulting dietitian in Cheyenne, Wyo. She was also assistant director of food services for Humboldt Medical Center and an instructor of nutrition and family life education at College of Redwoods in Eureka, Calif.

Born and raised on a dairy farm in northern California, Hunt attended high school in Humboldt County and received her B.A. in home economics and Spanish from Humboldt State University. She was awarded an M.A. in food and nutrition from Fresno State University, and a Ph.D. in nutrition from Colorado State University.

Dr. Hunt holds membership in the Mid-East Texas Dietetic Association and is a registered dietitian with the American Dietetic Association.

TMA says vaccinations ensure healthier children

Although smallpox was once a dreaded disease that often killed its victims, a vaccine now appears to have eradicated it. And polio, the crippling childhood disease has been brought under control with a vaccine.

Because of these advances in immunizations, many infectious childhood diseases that once caused serious illness and death are now rare. To keep them that way, vaccinations are necessary.

The Texas Medical Association suggests this American Medical Association schedule of routine vaccinations to give a child maximum protection against serious infectious disease:

— 2-months-old: Polio, DTP (diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis or whooping cough)
— 4 months: DTP, polio
— 6 months: DTP
— 15 months: Measles, mumps, German measles (rubella)
— 1½ years: DTP, polio
— 4-6 years: DTP, polio
— 14-16 years: DT (diphtheria and tetanus)

Also available are vaccines for other diseases such as pneumonia, influenza, typhoid fever, hepatitis B, rabies, plague, yellow fever and cholera. These are not considered routine but are for specific situations.

Immunizations make people resistant to specific germs. A vaccine, administered by injection or by mouth, consists of dead or harmless versions of a particular infectious agent. The body produces antibodies to ward off the agent. Although the person does not suffer the symptoms of the disease — except maybe slight fever — the body becomes immune to the disease.

Parents should tell their doctor before immunizations begin if their child has ever had convulsions. They also should tell the physician if the child is ill when the vaccine is to be administered. For instance, a cold could mean a short delay in giving the vaccine.

IRS reminds you that bartering carries tax

Bartering, or the exchange of goods or services for goods or services of equal value, is an American tradition that carries federal income tax responsibilities, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Income from any source must be reported, according to the IRS, and, in the case of bartering, the tax is computed on the fair market value of the goods or services exchanged.

For example, an auto mechanic repairs a carpenter's truck in exchange for repair work performed by the carpenter in the auto mechanic's office. Both individuals must report the services received as income at fair market value. However, both may claim the fair market value of the repair work done as a business expense on their income tax returns.

Another example: a plumber owes a physician for medical services and offers to make plumbing repairs in the doctor's office in payment of the bill. The doctor must report the fair market value of the plumbing services as income and the plumber must report the amount of the medical services as income. Then, the doctor may claim the plumbing job as a business expense and the plumber may claim the doctor's bill as a medical expense.

Taxpayers who have not reported income gained from bartering can correct their income tax returns by filing a 1040X, an amended return, for the year or years involved, the IRS said. Forms are available by calling the IRS Forms-Tax Information number listed in the telephone directory under U.S. Government.

No Man's Land

Rockport asked to yield claim

A letter from Fulton asking that Rockport relinquish its extraterritorial jurisdiction claim to "No Man's Land," the area between the two cities, will be considered in a meeting of Rockport's city council Tuesday night, July 26.

Fulton's town council agreed to submit the request to Rockport after requests for annexation of the area were filed with the Town of Fulton.

Because the area is within Rockport's extraterritorial jurisdiction, Rockport officials must formally relinquish claim before it could be annexed by Fulton.

In other business Tuesday night, Rockport's council is expected to set the date for their first workshop session on the 1983-84 city budget. The city's new fiscal year will begin Oct. 1.

Ordinances for annexation of Unit 1-A of Rockport Country Club Estates — a total 15.131 acres — and zoning will be up for second and final reading in Tuesday's meeting. One of the ordinances will be for a zoning change to permit multi-family housing to be constructed in Unit 1-A. Multi-family dwellings are platted for the development but a zoning change is necessary since, under the city's zoning laws, all annexed areas come into the city under R-1 single-family residential zoning.

Also scheduled for final reading are ordinances granting special use permit to the Rockport Art Association for location of the O'Connor House on its Navigation District lease and a special use permit to Bill Walston and James Anderson for location of a double-wide mobile home in the city for use as a residence.

First reading is scheduled on an ordinance raising the city's mowing fees from the present $25 to $40.

The council will open bids on purchase of a two-ton truck.

WORKMEN CUT A PIPE to size as they lay the connecting lines between the Aransas County Municipal Utility District water plant and the Lamar Water Supply Corp. in Lamar. Under a contract between the two agencies, the utility district will begin selling water to the private water company as soon as the district's water plant is operational — which is expected to be before the end of this month.

Membership drive begins

Texas Small Business Councils

In a presentation to the Texas Chamber of Commerce Executives Association meeting in Lubbock, Bob Farrington, vice president of economic development for the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, said a state-wide push for membership has been launched for the Texas Association of Small Business Councils (TASC). This relatively new organization was formed to fill a need for a more effective lobbying program for small business issues on state and national levels.

To achieve this on a national level, TASC has joined Small Business United, which represents small business firms in 33 states. SBU provides ongoing contact and input with Congress and the Executive Branch and also organizes an annual grassroots lobbying effort in Washington in May called the "Washington Presentation".

Presently, chambers of commerce in Wichita Falls, Dallas, Corpus Christi and San Antonio are actively involved in TASC. The organization's primary goal is to unite Texas small business people through their chambers of commerce in order to favorably influence legislation in Texas and nationally.

"Small business means big business which accounts for 42 percent of the gross national product. Small business creates two of every 3 new jobs and produces 2½ times as many innovations as big business," Farrington said.

"There are over 260,000 businesses in Texas with less than 100 employees with small business accounting for 97 percent of all businesses in Texas," he added.

TASC's past accomplishments include success in the passage of the graduated corporate income tax, the Economic Tax Reduction Act, preservation of industrial revenue bonds and the Small Business Innovation Research Bill. Legislative priorities slated for 1983 include:

- enact small business participating debentures
- institute capital gains tax reform
- re-emphasize and enforce OMB Circular A-76
- expand small business programs at EXIM Bank
- enact uniform federal liability tort reform

"These goals are extremely important and would be a major benefit to all small businesses. We need representation from every city in Texas to accomplish these priorities," Farrington said.

For more information on how to join the Texas Association of Small Business Councils, contact TASC, P.O. Box 1627, San Antonio, Texas 78296.

New publication serves as recreational planning guide

AUSTIN — A new publication compiled to help planners understand state laws affecting parks and recreation is being offered for sale by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The document, entitled "State Statutes Affecting Texas Park and Recreation Agencies," was a cooperative effort of the TP&WD and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Copies of the loose-leaf bound report may be obtained by sending a check or money order for $11.11 to the department at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744. (Public agencies pay $10.68.) They also may be purchased at the Austin headquarters.

Officials said the publication is not offered as a final authority on law matters, but as a reference source to help park and recreation officials be aware of important statutes. It is intended for use by all levels of park and recreation planners, including state, county, municipalities, river authorities and others.

REDRAWING FOR POSITIONS on the upcoming election for seats on the Aransas County Navigation District was held at a special meeting Tuesday night at the ACND office in Rockport.

Harbor

sponding to the charges of a voltage drop in the new wiring job on the new docks at Rockport Harbor said, "I was advised by the commissioners not to meter the work."

"Now, I want you to think. You've all got brains. You cannot have junctions, it won't work," Deason continued, responding to Umfleet's statement as to where junctions should be put in the system.

After Deason got through with his defense of his report prepared for the Navigation District, two engineers from Goldston joined in the debate of the Rockport Harbor electrical system.

The commissioners were reminded by one Goldston engineer that what Umfleet had done, in discussing the electrical system with the ACND, was bordering on being illegal as the Navigation District had already committed itself to discuss the project with Goldston.

The Goldston engineers also defended their work for the district after listening to Deason point out what he called errors in their drawings.

Deason approached Aransas County Harbor Master Bernie DeForest and asked him to agree with him that some details were left out of the drawings. DeForest responded, "I don't read prints."

As the discussion turned into a heated argument between the commissioners, Umfleet and the Goldston engineers, Acting Chairman Hillis Dominguez tried to calm the arguing people and Maguglin rose and made his motion to dismiss Goldston and begin discussion with Umfleet on the project.

Umfleet tried to speak and was not heard, and Maguglin asked McKnight for a second to the motion. "What if Umfleet won't do it?" asked McKnight.

Maguglin continued in an effort to get a second to his motion saying, "Mr. Umfleet has been on the docks and came up with ways of cutting cost."

"The discussion here is the cost of specs," said Dominguez.

"That is correct, if it is safe, meets the electrical code and costs half as much, that is the way I want to go," said Maguglin.

Dominguez then called for the 10-minute recess.

After the recess and before all the commissioners were seated, Maguglin yelled at Dominguez, "Mr. Chairman, is the meeting officially back in order?"

"Yes it is," replied Dominguez.

"I move that we retain Goldston and proceed with the specs," said Maguglin.

McKnight made a second to the motion and it carried unanimously.

Bids

submitting an offer. Williams had not submitted such evidence by Tuesday's meeting. In addition, Garcia said that the council does not have anything which shows that Williams has power of attorney to sign papers for Nichols. He noted that bidding on the stand has not been closed and that it is possible that others may still bid.

When the question was called, the vote was tied 2-2 with McLester and Loflin voting aye and Cole and Hunt voting nay. Alderman Elgin Dietz was not present at the meeting and Fulton Mayor L.E. Casterline broke the tie with a nay vote. Casterline then asked for a motion to reject Brue's bid.

A Loflin motion to table Brue's bid failed to bring a second and Cole made a motion to reject Brue's bid, which McLester seconded. A unanimous vote passed the motion. "We're back to square one now," said Loflin.

Casterline asked Secretary Lucille Hinson to notify the bidders that their bids had been rejected and that they were free to bid again.

Also during the special meeting, Casterline asked Garcia if it would be possible to use some of the town's money to buy a float to represent the town in area parades. Garcia said that he has been busy with annexation proceedings and has not had a chance to look it up, although he did not think it would be possible since the town does not have a line item in its budget for advertising.

Cole said that he met with a representative of a Corpus Christi firm that builds floats and that a float with a 16-foot trailer would take approximately six to eight weeks to build and would cost approximately $5,500 complete.

Loflin suggested that a committee to study the design of the float be appointed.

Casterline suggested that Cole, County Commissioner Mike Womack, Danny Cox, Glenda and Jimmy Hattenbach, and Sharon and Bobby Loflin be appointed to the committee on design. He added that they may be able to come up with some fund-raising ideas in the event that town funds can't be used for the project.

IRS issues warning against mail-order ministries

A number of organizations claiming to be churches are selling church charters and ministries and promising tax benefits to the buyers Internal Revenue Service officials have announced.

Such representations are misleading and will not produce the tax benefits claimed by the promoters the officials add.

Although the federal tax law (Internal Revenue Code Section 170) provides tax benefits for contributors to churches and religious organizations, it requires that recipient-organizations claiming these benefits actually be operated for religious purposes and not as vehicles for tax avoidance.

Plans for reducing income tax liability often call for an individual to obtain minister's credentials and a church charter from a mail-order ministry. The individual then transfers up to 50 percent of his or her annual income to the alleged new church, receiving in return various benefits such as a residence an automobile and other living expenses.

Another plan, which claims it will avoid paying taxes altogether, calls for the individual to take a vow of poverty and transfer all assets to the alleged "church." In return the "church" pays for all the individual's expenses.

Such plans will not afford the tax benefits they claim, according to the IRS. To claim tax benefits under the law the church must not only be organized and operated exclusively for religious purposes, it must also have operations that further religious purposes and not the private interests of its founders or other individuals.

In addition, funds transferred to an organization as gifts or contributions will not result in a deduction if there is the expectation of a return benefit. Likewise, simple assignment of income to another individual or entity does not relieve the taxpayer of the responsibility to report and pay tax on the income.

These positions have been consistently upheld by the United States Tax Court in numerous cases involving the use of a church as a vehicle for tax avoidance, according to the IRS.

Individuals whose claims do not meet the requirements of the law will be expected to pay their taxes in full, and an interest charge for late payment. These individuals may also be required to pay certain penalties for failing to pay their taxes when due.

In addition, criminal charges may be brought against "ministers" whose only purpose is to evade paying taxes, the IRS said.

Youth injured in car, cycle collision

Scott J. Swartz, 21, of Fulton was taken to Coastal Bend Hospital in Aransas Pass Wednesday morning after suffering injuries in a car-motorcycle accident on FM 881.

Chief Paramedic Bill Aston of the Aransas County Emergency Medical Service said Swartz received leg injuries in the incident. The accident occurred about 7:22 a.m. at the 881-Donnie Drive intersection.

Unsafe backing cited after mishap

Richard Alexander Hale of Rockport was ticketed for unsafe backing after his four-wheel drive vehicle was involved in an accident with another car Tuesday morning.

Police said no injuries were reported in the mishap that occurred about 11:47 a.m. on Glass Avenue east of Raht (Hwy. 35) as Hale was backing into a drive near an area business.

The boat and trailer Hale was towing reportedly were in collision with a car driven by Debra Kay Rogero of Rockport.

Whittle tourney date approaches

The largest and most popular tennis tournament in the community, the Fred Whittle Summer Fun Mixed Doubles Amateur Tennis Tournament, is one week away, July 30 and 31.

The Rockport Tennis Association is sponsoring the eleventh annual Whittle tourney. Tournament manager is David "Ike" Boling, assisted by Art Weiss. Some 64 entrants — 32 men, 32 women — have signed up for the event. All players are amateurs at least 18-years-old, who have not taught or demonstrated tennis. Each player will play at least three matches on Saturday, July 30.

Preliminary matches will be held at the Rockport Resort Tennis and Swim Club and other area courts. Semi-finals and finals will be played at the Key Allegro Tennis Club.

Top winners in the tournament will be awarded the revolving Whittle trophy. Other division winners and runners up will receive individual trophies.

A Calcutta and draw party is scheduled poolside at the Rockport Resort Friday before the tourney. Snacks will be furnished during the social hour and drinks will be available. Bidding will start at 8 p.m. Hostessing the party for the Rockport Tennis Association will be Mary John Lynch.

The Whittle tourney is named for the late Col. Fred Whittle, retired Air Force officer who devoted his retirement years to persuading young prospective players in the Rockport-Fulton area to become interested and active in tennis.

Many of the local community's better players today credit Col. Whittle's training with giving them their start in the sport.

Fishing contest slated

PALACIOS — A multi-division fishing tournament for both offshore and inshore anglers will headline the first annual Holiday By The Bay Festival, sponsored by the Palacios Chamber of Commerce Sept. 3-5.

There will be 21 fish categories with three prize positions in each for the largest ling, sailfish, barracuda, tuna, bonito, dolphin, sheephead, trout, gafftopsail, mackerel, wahoo, snapper, warsaw, tarpon, jackfish, shark, drum, kingfish, flounder and redfish, plus an open category.

The prize list will have cash, merchandise and trophies in each category. In addition, there will be a $5,000 cash reward for a special tagged redfish that will be released in the bay just prior to the tournament. Waters of the Matagorda Bay system will be the fishing territory.

The tournament starts at 12 a.m. Sept. 3, and continues through noon Sept. 5 (Labor Day). The official weigh station will be at the Palacios bayfront pavilion and fishermen must weigh their fish the day they are caught.

License sales on the rise

Statewide sales of hunting, fishing and combination licenses are increasing at a record rate, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

During the first five months of fiscal year 1982-83, the department sold 664,299 resident combination hunting and fishing licenses, bringing $5,650,869 in revenue. The term "resident" refers to state residents. This is an increase in revenue of more than $500,000 over the same five-month period in 1981-82.

Resident fishing licenses showed a big increase, amounting to 5,388 more licenses than the previous year and a revenue jump of more than $25,000.

Officials expect total sales of the hunting-fishing combination licenses and resident fishing licenses to reach an all-time high by the end of the current fiscal year, Aug. 31.

The department has sold 265,800 resident hunting licenses, which is an increase of more than 6,000 over the previous period and a revenue increase of more than $31,000.

Non-resident licenses for both hunting and fishing also are on the upswing, officials noted. Revenues from the general non-resident hunting licenses increased by $100,830, while the general non-resident fishing licenses brought in more than $10,000 over the previous year.

...And in Aransas County

While no figures are available for this fiscal year's license revenue from Aransas County thus far the previous fiscal year's license sales totaled to $124,680 with more than half that coming from fishing license sales.

According to Paul Israel, spokesman for the Texas Parks and Wildlife's license department in Austin, fiscal 81-82 license figures indicate that 9,419 Texas resident fishing licenses were sold in Aransas County $42,220.50 in revenue. Some $30,396 was spent on non-resident fishing licenses. Temporary five-day resident license sales totaled 2,310 for revenue of $9,332. A total of 3,463 temporary 14-day licenses were sold for $6,972.

Resident combination hunting and fishing licenses sold in Aransas County totaled 2,380 for $20,291 in revenue. Some 525 resident hunting licenses were sold for $2,640.50 and 368 resident hunting exempt licenses brought $368 in revenue.

Only 105 non-resident five-day hunting licenses were sold for $1,050 and general non-resident hunting license sales totaled $4,600 for 46 licenses sold. Thirteen non-resident small game licenses were sold for $481.

Gurley and Lewis, both competing in discus competition, qualified their way to the national Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) Junior Olympics in a series of summer AAU track competitions. Lewis is competing in the Intermediate discus division and Gurley in the Senior division. Both athletes still need local sponsors to help them meet the expense of the trip next week. The meet will be held at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind., and Lewis and Gurley will travel there by bus with other athletes from the South Texas area. They will leave Rockport early Tuesday, July 26. Both athletes are also members of the Rockport-Fulton High School track team.

ACTIVITIES RANGING from Bible study to swimming were on the program at the Vacation Church Camp at the Bishop Elliott Conference Center this past week. More than 100 youngsters from age 4 years through high school level, from First United Methodist, First Presbyterian and St. Peter's Episcopal Church, attended the five-day event. Highlights included the chance to participate in skits, a close encounter with a donkey and some enthusiastic singing for the younger children. The older youth capped their week of activities with an overnight stay from 5 p.m. Thursday until 9:30 a.m. Friday.

The Shepherd's staff

Is there a God?

By the Rev. John R. Bradshaw
pastor
First Presbyterian Church

"How do you know there is a god," a pastor asked. When we are confronted with needless death and senseless crippling, we are prone to ask that question, maybe even inclined to say: "What I have seen of life and rape and murder and the brutal treatment of little children, the Holocaust and all the inhumanities of men to men and women to women — such things prove there is no god!"

All, at times, have such feelings. I cannot prove my faith, nor can others prove their un-faith. It is all a matter of simple choice. And to this community that has felt the shock of a tragic death, I share the words of another. Studdert-Kennedy has a long poem that expresses it well for me. Here is part of it:

How do I know that God is good? I don't.
I gamble like a man. I bet my life
Upon one side in life's great war. I must,
I can't stand out. I must take sides . . .
I walk in crowded streets where men
And women, mad with lust, loose-lipped and lewd
Go promenading down to hell's wide gate.
Yet I have looked into my mother's eyes
And there have seen the light of love, pure love
And true. And on that love I bet my life.
I back my mother 'gainst a whore
When I believe in God, and can a man do less
Or more? I have to choose. So I back
The scent of life against its stink.
That's what faith works out . . .
Such is my faith, and such my reasons for it.
And I find them strong enough. And you?
You want to argue? Well, I can't.
It is a choice. I choose the Christ.

Shalom.

Church nears completion

FULTON — Work on the outside of the addition to Fulton Community Church is almost finished, Patricia Giller, wife of church pastor, the Rev. Richard Giller, said this week.

"They still have some painting and installation of stained glass windows," she added. The interior of the new sanctuary — designed to seat up to 300 people — is still to be done. Target date for completion of the building is within the next two months.

The sanctuary is being constructed to accommodate growth of the church located at the corner of 3rd and Chaparral in Fulton. Much of the labor and materials have been donated and the church has conducted special events to raise the additional funds needed. A garage sale is being planned sometime within the next two months as a fund-raiser.

Another fund drive is being launched by the church to help pay for a recently-purchased baby grand piano. Individual keys on the piano are being "sold" to help raise the $6,000 needed. Anyone who would like to donate to this fund may contact the Gillers for more information.

We should all be concerned about the future because we will have to spend the rest of our lives there.

Percy eating a peanut at Flora & Fauna's

"There's not much we don't do" says Meridene Wondson, owner of Flora & Fauna Inc. No. 2 (formerly Hearn's Nursery). The shop has been open about six weeks and is one of two; the other one is located in Corpus Christi and has been open about a year and a half. Each store offers the same plants, animals and services, Woodson says.

Flora & Fauna offers landscaping, interior and exterior maintenance and interior scaping (indoor plants for homes or businesses). In addition, the shop is a full-service florist, providing fresh or silk flowers for weddings, special occasions and parties. It's also a pet store which can order almost any kind of registered dog or cat. Although they are not kept in the store at this time (with the exception of a white cat) they eventually will have a selection of dogs and cats in the store. Other animals include fish, birds, rodents and parrots as well as supplies and equipment. "If we don't have it, we'll try to order it, says Woodson.

Also offered is a large selection of greenhouse and landscape plants. "Flora & Fauna is a Texas Certified Nursery with Texas Certified Nurserymen working here," she says.

"We want to create a warm, friendly atmosphere where people can ask questions." Flora & Fauna will also decorate homes and condominiums with Christmas decorations for absentee owners and will perform the same service for area businesses.

A grand opening is scheduled for August. Everyone is urged to visit the shop and register for grand opening prizes says Woodson.

Flora & Fauna Inc. No. 2 is located at 1217 S. Bronte (Hwy 35 S.). The sign is not yet up, so look for Hearn's Nursery, across from the KOA Campground. Hours are from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 729-2720.

Miss Manners on etiquette

By Judith Martin

Let others prattle of unfulfilled dreams, graying hair and shifting relationships. Miss Manners alone knows the true perils that best the Woman of a Certain Age.

A sensible woman is generally equipped to handle the normal vicissitudes of life, although a little gentle moaning is occasionally allowed, in the privacy of her boudoir. What she did not expect was to be caught, in what ought to be the graceful years, smack in the middle of an etiquette revolution, with wild men going off in all directions around her.

The revolution, not yet completed, is the shift from a system of precedence based on gender to one that shows signs of eventually using age and rank as the basis of precedence. We cannot all go through the door at the same time, as an astute diplomat once remarked, and general agreement on who should go first makes for a peaceful life.

But the change is by no means complete, and while most of the society is trying to squeeze through that door simultaneously on the charming system of "me first," the lady is left standing there.

Does she wait, as she was taught, for the gentleman to open the door for her? She may very well be left waiting while he saunters down the block. Does she plunge ahead and open it herself? Then she leaves behind a pouting gentleman who had been planning to get the door handle, as he believes is proper, just as soon as he could figure out on which side it was.

Mind you, this lady was described by Miss Manners as a sensible lady, so she is only trying to go along with prevailing manners, not to enact her politics through symbolic behavior, any more than she wears her philosophy printed across her bodice. But she can't figure out what the prevailing manners are, since her acquaintance includes young gentlemen who were never taught ladies-first courtesy, older gentlemen who have renounced it, older gentlemen who practice it, and younger gentlemen who have recently taken it up because they have noticed how quaintly effective it can be.

Ladies do not wish to imply disapproval of gentlemen's manners when the gentlemen plainly intend to be mannerly, so they must develop a few agile and ambiguous techniques.

At the door, for example, the lady can turn and smile at the gentleman just as she reaches the handle; she can observe, then, if he hand is out.

If it is a revolving door, she steps in, waits a split second (unless it is already going around, in which case she would be flattened like a fly with a fly swatter — but we were talking of sensible ladies) and then pushes with her arms unbent, so that her propelling hands are not visible to a gentleman who is gearing up his strength to push for her.

When walking down the street, she gains the inside on the pretense of looking into the shop windows, not because she seems to expect to be so placed.

When about to alight from a car, she waits momentarily to see if the gentleman seems to be coming around to her side to open the door. The sight of his back, entering the restaurant, indicates that he is not, so she opens it herself.

In the restaurant, she orders her meal with her eyes cast down on the menu and her face halfway between the gentleman's and the waiter's. If the gentleman wishes to repeat the order, he may; if not, the waiter has heard it.

You see the principle. It is troublesome, not to mention hazardous, and Miss Manners is not unsympathetic to the ladies who impatiently decide to adopt the new system for all, expecting no precedence — provided they do not get unpleasant when it is offered.

But manners are folk custom, and we are most charmed with what we know in childhood, which is one reason for practicing the traditions among those who enjoy them. Another is that all this jumping about is good exercise for ladies of a certain age who do not care to jog.

Dear Miss Manners,

I recently attended a couples' dance at which dance cards were used. The gentlemen held the cards, scheduled dances and informed their dates with whom the next dance would be.

This led to the question of how dance cards work when ladies arrived unescorted. Please enlighten us in the proper way to use dance cards, as no one was certain.

Does the gentleman also carry a card, or is he expected to remember with whom each dance is scheduled? And what if he forgets?

Gentle Reader

If he forgets, he is no gentleman. It is therefore fortunate for society that the gentlemen, as well as the ladies, are issued tiny program cards — and wee little pencils on silk cords — on which to record the choices they made early in the evening, so that they may refresh their memories as the passions of the night overtake them.

Your mistaken notion of the gentlemen having custody of the ladies' cards is quite shocking to Miss Manners; no demure Victorian maiden would have dreamt of allowing such a sexist practice.

Every lady, whether or not she arrives escorted, keeps her own record, and every gentleman, his. A gentleman is required to ask the lady he escorts for the first dance and for the last dance before supper, so that he may take her in to supper, but otherwise, it's everybody on his or her own.

Other dances may be requested and entered on the cards of both parties during the dance itself, although the overanxious and besotted may make their requests days before the dance is held.

The chief thing to remember is that there are no erasers on the little pencils.

Judith Martin's "Miss Manners' Guide to Excruciatingly Correct Behavior" (Atheneum) is now available for etiquette emergency consultation.

Feeling incorrect? Address your etiquette questions (in black or blue-black ink on white writing paper) to Miss Manners, in care of this newspaper.

I've never seen so many people running so hard to get to no place. One of these came to me for a little counseling.

"I exercise a lot," he began, "because it keeps me in good shape and I want to live for a long time." He went on to tell me his entire regimen.

After hearing his daily, weekly, and monthly good health program, I said, "You must be in better condition than I am.Why did you come to me?" He replied, "I'm bored! I can't figure why I'm on this earth."

I never cease to be amazed at our obsession with living a long time. This is especially an obsession with medical people. And so, they hold out an extended life on machines, pumps, infusions, and tons of money. The rush for donated organs could well take the place of the Western Gold Rush.

Personally, I am more interested in the quality of life I can have while I'm on this planet. I want to enjoy life, not just exist. I want to accomplish something significant besides breathing! Give me an obituary which says, "He lived well", not "He lived long." If I simply wanted to live long, I would pray that God turn me into a turtle.!

According to the Good Book, Methuselah lived 969 years. Whether he jogged or not, I don't know. I doubt that heart transplants were in vogue then. I suppose there are thousands who would like to imitate him. But the only other thing we know about Methuselah is that "he died".

Jesus Christ lived 32 years! He didn't live long, but one thing is for certain — never before has so much been packed into so little time. He never took vitamins but He sure has generated a lot of energy.

New officers for the young people's group were elected. They were Abraham Sanchez as president; Larry Iles, vice president; Julia Fox, secretary; and Sherry Lynn Brundrett as press secretary.

Four local boys were chosen to play on All-Star baseball teams in two leagues. They were Mike Jeffers and Larry "Blue" Samora — Pony League — and Bobby Edwards and David Nava — Coastal Colt League.

Mrs. Bert Williams had a mocking bird nesting in her back yard that would protect three babies against anything and anybody. It would dive bomb on any intruder that ventured into the yard.

The Cove Drive In Theatre was featuring "The Giant" starring Rock Hudson and Elizabeth Taylor. Prices for family night were 60 cents a car load.

John Wayne was starring in two different movies at the Rialto Theatre in Aransas Pass. They were "Hatari" with Elsa Martinell co-starring and "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" with co-star James Stewart.

15 years ago — 1968

Jack M. Schneider and Phyllis K. Williams were selected as new teachers for the 1968-69 school year.

Bo Wilcox won the "unofficial" sailboat races held at Key Allegro. All sailors with small boats had turned out for some informal racing after bad weather had cleared.

Roe's supermarket was featuring these specials: lettuce - two heads for 25 cents, Libby's fruit cocktail - three cans for 79 cents, Valley Gold Mellorine - ½ gal. for 39 cents and Scotties facial tissue - three boxes for $1.

Carolyn Lewis left Rockport to attend Oxford University, north of London. She was taking English literature courses and was planning associated tours to Scotland and Ireland.

Trep's food store had these specials: Del Monte catsup - four bottles for $1, Peter Pan peanut butter - 45 cents, Ranch Style beans - six cans for $1 and Maxwell coffee - one-pound can for 69 cents.

10 years ago — 1973

Two new officers were named by First National Bank. They were Clifton H. Brown, assistant vice president, and Joyce Hill, assistant cahsier.

Kathy Lynn Langham was notified by Southwest Texas State University that she would receive a second scholarship, this one from the Board of Regents of the university. Her first scholarship was from the San Marcos Rotary Club.

Cindy Haigood, Pam Hutchins and Velma Pina returned from Kingsville where they attended the 23rd annual Twirling and Drum Major School at Texas A&I University.

Jackie R. Taylor joined the staff of First National Bank as a secretary and receptionist.

Two fishing records were set by out-of-town men. They were: African Pompano - 19 pounds and Yellowfin Tuna - 146½ pounds.

TP&WD study

$713 million spent on sports

AUSTIN — Texans spent an estimated $713 million on outdoor sporting goods in 1981, according to a new study by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. That amounted to an average expenditure of $137 per household.

A quarter of the total, $180 million, was spent on boats and boating equipment, which ranked first among the 19 activities surveyed. Hunting was second with $96 million.

Rounding out the top six activities were: jogging, $69 million; bicycling, $63 million; fishing, $60 million; and swimming, $52 million.

A sport's popularity, equipment costs and repeat purchases determine how much people spend for recreation goods. Spending for some activities is mostly for clothing and shoes, so fashion is also a factor.

The study was designed to assess the economic impact of outdoor recreation in Texas. It was based on a nationwide survey of 20,000 households and a statewide survey of 126 major sporting goods retailers in Texas.

A report, "1981 Outdoor Sporting Goods Expenditures in Texas," is available for public distribution. To obtain a copy, or for more information, contact Joel Seffel, Comprehensive Planning Branch, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744, or telephone 479-4906.

Pet talks

Canine obesity is unhealthy

By Dr. Hap Lutz,
Rockport veterinarian

Canine Obesity

A trim dog is healthier and will live longer than an obese dog. Over-weight has a definite adverse effect on the cardiovascular and respiratory system.

Responsibility rests with the owner for the weight of his pet. Obesity is an increase in body weight that exceeds sketetal, metabolic, and physical requirements. It is an excess accumulation of body fat.

Canine obesity is higher among dogs owned by obese people. It is also higher among middle-aged and elderly persons. Many pet owners encourage an overweight condition by feeding high-fat diets, treats, fatty table scraps and other nutritionally unbalanced diets.

An overweight dog has more physical problems because of the extra body fat. Cardiac functions are impaired, and fat deposits interfere with normal respiration. Digestive problems, such as indigestion and constipation are common.

Feeding guidelines to correct obesity:

1. Avoid diets that are high in fat.
2. Omit feeding any table scraps.
3. Do not supply any supplements.
4. Feed smaller amounts of food more often.
5. Reduce food intake by feeding less daily (70 percent of previous amount).
6. Exercise your dog regularly.
7. Keep plenty of fresh water available at all times.

Several of the dog food companies sell a well-balanced diet just for weight control. These are lower in calories, such as R-D (reducing diet) by Hill diet food. Some of the bulky dry dog foods help to keep a dog from over-eating. Weigh your dog weekly, and record this on a chart. This way, you can observe the weight reduction.

Remember a trim dog is healthier and will live longer.

If you have any questions concerning the health and care of your pet, mail them to the Rockport Pilot. Dr. Lutz will answer them in the next issue.

EMS paramedic completes high rise training school

Aransas County Paramedic Ralph Gonzalez completed training in the vertical rescue school at Cascade Caverns last week, Chief Paramedic Bill Aston has announced.

During the three-day school, July 15-17, Gonzalez received instruction in rescue from high structures, rappeling, tri-line rescue, use of stokes baskets. rescue systems with ropes and other techniques used in vertical rescue.

He will now structure a vertical rescue program for use by the Aransas County Emergency Medical System, Aston added. Gonzalez' training was sponsored by the Aransas County EMS with approval of the ACEMS board of directors so a program can be "on line" before the completion of several multi-story buildings now being planned in the area, Aston said.

He added vertical rescue capabilities are necessary in an area where there are multi-story buildings where persons may be injured or trapped by fire above ladder lines.

The program completed by Gonzalez worked primarily at the 75-foot (seven story) level, and students to complete the program were required to make simulated rescues.

Doctor-patient partnership maximizes health care

Staying healthy is best accomplished through a cooperative effort between the patient and the doctor.

That message comes from a pamphlet titled "You and Your Doctor: Partners in Health Care," produced by the Texas Medical Association. The brochure lists five suggestions for making this relationship work:

— Be a well-informed patient. This means understanding what your health problem is and what might have caused it. Your doctor can discuss these points with you. Know what medications you are taking and what they are supposed to do. Another way to keep informed is to use home health books which can give warning signs of various disorders.

— Talk to your doctor. This includes telling the physician about past medical problems, allergic reactions to any drugs and diseases in your family. The doctor must know this information to serve you best. You also may want to discuss a particular treatment or a complaint. If fees are a concern, let your doctor know.

— Follow your doctor's instructions. Most important is taking a prescription until you have finished it all even if you are feeling better. You may also need to avoid certain foods.

— Live a healthy lifestyle. Many ailments can be avoided by adopting some basic habits: Get enough sleep, eat a nutritious diet, don't smoke, limit alcohol intake, use seatbelts, learn to manage stress and keep immunizations current.

— Keep accurate and up-to-date medical records. This helps a doctor on a first visit or in an emergency.

Benefits of this cooperative effort between patient and doctor include the ability to take better care of yourself, the satisfaction of taking an active role in maintaining your health and a rewarding doctor-patient relationship that results in conserving your health.

A copy of the pamphlet can be obtained by writing the Texas Medical Association at 1801 N. Lamar Blvd., Austin 78701. The phone number is 477-6704.

Mare-foal clinic set for South Central Texas Aug. 5

BRENHAM — Stallions Unlimited at Brenham will be the site of the 1983 South Central Texas Mare-Foal Clinic Aug. 5.

The horse breeding farm is about seven miles north of Brenham on Texas 36.

The fourth annual clinic will feature four major areas of discussion, announces Bill Thane, Washington county extension agent.

Dr. Jack Kreider, associate professor of animal science at Texas A&M University, will discuss a broodmare's reproductive system.

Dr. H.A. Smith, a Brenham veterinarian, will describe how to get broodmares ready to go the breeding farm.

How to train a young foal will be discussed by B.F. Yeates, a horse specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He will be using foals to demonstrate learning principles and their practical application.

The day-long clinic will conclude with a discussion by Jack Benson and Brad McCamy, owners of Stallions Unlimited, who will provide clinic participants with an inside look at a horse breeding farm.

Thane invites horse owners and others in the horse industry from throughout Texas to take part in the annual clinic. "The Texas horse industry is booming, and this clinic provides horse owners an opportunity to learn about some of the key facets of horse production and management," Thane points out.

The annual clinic is being sponsored by the Washington County Extension Horse Committee and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

HEAVY RAINS last week have resulted in a bumper crop of mushrooms in many yards and fields around Aransas County as the above photo shows.

Microwaves are not always efficient

Microwave ovens have the advantage of speed, but are not always the most effective means of saving energy, says home economist Bonnie Piernot.

Microwave ovens are about 40 percent efficient in converting electrical energy into heat in food, while wasting little of that energy in heating the air around the food. Standard electric ovens are 14 percent efficient and gas ovens are 7 percent efficient in this same task.

"Since the microwave absorption of foods depends on their water and salt content, microwave cooking is not equally energy saving for all foods," states Piernot, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

According to the specialist, research shows the greatest energy savings when cooking small to medium quantities of concentrated foods such as meats, potatoes, desserts and TV dinners.

Foods such as corn, broccoli and similar vegetables require more energy to cook with microwave than with conventional electric surface units.

"For any normal saucepan operation, the cooktop of an electric range is as energy efficient, or more so, than the microwave oven," she adds.

Since the biggest advantage the microwave holds over conventional cooking is time, the choice of which appliance to use may be largely a matter of whether energy or time is more valuable to the consumer, Piernot says.

Patman praises district contribution to defense

By Congressman BILL PATMAN

An adequate national defense system always has been important to our nation, but sometimes we may take our military preparedness for granted.

As my staff and I recently checked on the contributions of the 14th Congressional District to national defense, I felt very proud. Our district supports military preparedness through its contributions of land, resources and people.

Folks in the southern part of our 22-county district are well aware that the Navy trains tactical jet pilots at Naval Air Station Chase Field, near Beeville. It also uses an auxiliary landing field near Goliad.

Fledgling pilots average six months of basic training in the T-2 jet, then receive six to seven months advanced training in the TA-4. This rigorous life makes great demands on these young trainees to be in top notch physical, mental and emotional condition.

Chase Field graduated 115 Navy and 65 Marine jet pilots through June of this year.

Recognizing the importance of Chase Field, the U.S. House of Representatives recently approved $2.6 million for construction projects. With increasing numbers of married people in the armed forces, the Defense Department puts more emphasis on improving living conditions for families — so Chase Field projects include a child care center and a family services center.

A control tower and new water storage tank also were funded.

There is no easy way to determine how many people from the 14th District are in the military at this moment, but the recruiting services gave us numbers of recruits by county and told us that the young men and women from this area are "top quality" in Texas.

We certainly can be proud of these young people and we should be proud of those who are registering with the Selective Service System, providing information necessary for mobilization of our manpower in a national emergency.

Selective Service figures show that the rate of compliance with the registration law in our district is an astounding — and outstanding — 99.6 percent. That's well above the national average of 96.2 percent.

Our national defense has been one of my major concerns. In the past two years we have witnessed the greatest peacetime buildup of military strength in our nation's history. Defense outlays, down to $150 billion in 1981, will be at least $240 billion next year.

I have supported this buildup. We must modernize our deterrent force in response to the unprecedented increase in the Soviet Union's arsenal the past 15 years.

I believe most residents of the 14th District feel that way, too.

And I believe in the validity of the historical quotation, "Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom."

Coastal Bend's Most Economical Home Wastewater System

THE ALPHA-II

HOW IT OPERATES:

1 WASTEWATER ENTERS THE ALPHA-II FROM THE SEPTIC TANK

2 RISING WASTEWATER IN THE TANK LIFTS THE FLOAT SWITCH CAUSING THE PUMP TO OPERATE

3 THE WASTEWATER IS MIXED WITH AIR AND RECYCLED OVER THE BIOGLAS MEDIA

4 WASTEWATER IS DISTRIBUTED EVENLY OVER THE BIOGLAS MEDIA BY SPLASHING ON THE WELL COVER

5 AS WASTEWATER TRICKLES THROUGH THE BIOGLAS, TINY MICRO-ORGANISMS LIVING IN THE BILLIONS OF SQUARE FEET OF SURFACE AREA FEED UPON THE WASTE-LADEN WATER

6 AFTER A PRESET RECIRCULATION TIME, THE DIVERTER VALVE ROTATES AND DISCHARGES TREATED WASTEWATER TO THE ABSORPTION FIELD. THE WATER LEVEL DROPS BELOW FLOAT SWITCH TURNING PUMP OFF, ROTATING VALVE, AND RETURNING TO STEP-1

7 SHOULD THE WASTEWATER RISE TO AN ABNORMAL LEVEL, THE UPPER FLOAT SWITCH WILL ACTIVATE AN ALARM LIGHT ON THE CONTROL BOX

NO COMPLETION DATE HAS been set yet for the new Rockport Post Office, located at Enterprise and FM 2165, but work is progressing on the facility. Owned by the U. S. Postal Service, the new structure contains some 8,591 square feet of floor space, compared to 3,650 in the existing structure, and will have more space for parking — one of the major problems with the existing post office on Church Street.

Renaissance celebrates the 'Year of the Feast'

This year's Texas Renaissance Festival will be "The Year of the Feast."

Founder and owner King George Coulam has proclaimed this designation for the 1983 edition of the annual event. A wooded glen near Sherwood Forest was cleared to erect the Banquet Hall of King Henry VIII.

The new area is complete with commissary and facilities for the Royal Chef and stewards to create culinary delights from around the world. Designed as a dining extravaganza of epicurian magnitudes, the feast recalls the fabled "Field of the Cloth of Gold" where on June 7, 1520, King Henry VIII and an army of 20,000 hand-picked nobles met on the plains of Guisnes, France, to dazzle King Francis I with the wealth and splendor of Tudor England.

Though short lived, the aim of the extravaganza show — the most spectacular staged event in modern history — was to establish harmony and world peace.

The purpose of the Feast is to allow good pilgrims, who make reservations and prior payment, to experience the gourmet delights of an English Renaissance harvest feast similar to the famous celebrations of history.

The feast will be an added attraction to the Texas Renaissance Festival, recreating the 16th century New Market Village, with merchants, vendors, artisans, craftsmen, nobility, entertainers, jousting and theatrical events of the period.

This year's Festival will cover six weekends from Oct. 1 through Nov. 6. The Feast, much smaller in scale than Henry's 1520 event, is available to patrons with paid reservations for the seated affair. They will experience a gourmet delight patterned after an English Renaissance Harvest Feast.

Served twice a day, 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., The Feast is available to a limited number of people on a first come, first served basis. The price of $50 per plate includes entry to the rest of the Festival's 50-acre site, a souvenir ceramic tankard, a special limited edition T-shirt and all the beer, wine, soda and tea a lord or lady can drink.

More than a meal, the Feast will feature serving wenches, rakes, musicians, singers, players, jugglers, magicians, belly dancers, minstrels and traditional Texas Renaissance characters to set the atmosphere as well as the food before m'lord and lady. The revelry is designed to draw the diners into the action — to share in the Feast rather than attend.

Tables will be laid with the harvest fruits and vegetables and with specially prepared gourmet dishes. For the hardy soul, the menu will vary according to the featured 'kill of the day.' The Royal Chefs plan to include mixtures of steamships of beef, stuffed quail, honey pheasants, roasted fowl, suckling pigs, lamb, game such as rabbit and venison.

Fresh catches of fish from the Thames or the English Channel will be prepared in a multitude of ways.

The reputation of the Texas Renaissance Festival was built on the wonderful hand foods of the period: giant turkey legs, scotch eggs, great ribs, fowls, stuffed spuds, great ears of corn, giant cookies, appyle dumplings, shishkabob, sausage, iced creams, drinks and more.

Seating the guests in King Henry VIII's Banquet Hall will be teasing and scolding wenches and rakes, while musicans and minstrels stroll and play. The Kill or Catch of the Day is announced with fanfares, paraded for inspection and presented at the carving tables to be offered up on the great tables of the hall.

The bakers will not fail to produce magnificent loaves of sweet and tasty breads, desserts, quick tarts and more. The harvest season will provide fresh robust vegetables and fruits. The queen's dairy will furnish thick creams made into cheeses, toppings and delights.

More entertainment arrives. Duels are fought over the pretty ladies while belly dancers tease the lords. A magician arrives. More food is heaped onto the loaded tables. The air is filled with the aroma of smoked meats, fresh cut melons, and spiced desserts as they are savored and passed from table to table.

Singing begins as fresh tankards of ale are lifted in the traditional salute: "Lift Up Your Cares!" More entertainers arrive to dance and play while fresh breads are placed on the tables along with strawberry tartes and appyle dumplings from the Royal Bakery.

Including the Feast, the honored guests are free to waddle about the 50-acre New Market Village, a 16th Century English theme park. Shops provide spa for hundreds of artisans to display and sell their crafts of stained glass, furniture, ceramics, jewelry, paintings, clothing, leather goods and many more fine articles. There are herb and sculptured gardens to explore.

Continuous theatric events are found along pathways and are featured on eight different stages. Music fills the woods from strolling singers and bands throughout the area. Jousting and horse events are featured at the race track. Demonstrations in the arts of falconry, blacksmithing, glass blowing, ing, weaving, candle ma ing, and potters' skills fill t day. Patrons may even sit for their portraits.

To make Feast reservations or inquiries, call (713) 356-3000 or write to: The Feast c/o The Texas Renaissance Festival, Route 2, Box 650, Plantersville, Texas 77363.

Located 45 miles north Houston from Interstate 45, The Texas Renaissance Festival is near Plantersville on FM 1774. Tickets at the Festival gate are $10 for adults, $5 for children ages 5-12, children under 5 are admitted free. Acres of free parking are available. Admission includes entertainment plus all events at New Mark Race Track and Arena.

Experience life as ancestors did at Texas Folklife Festival

SAN ANTONIO — Imagine a world without supersonic jets and shopping malls, discotheques and Top 40, frozen foods and microwave ovens, video games and "Star Wars." Was there even life before the modern age?

Of course! And even without space age amenities, life for early Texans was rewarding. While the work was hard, the opportunities for fellowship, laughter and just plain fun were abundant.

At the Twelfth Annual Texas Folklife Festival, set for Aug. 4-7 at the University of Texan Cultures in San Antonio, visitors can experience life as their Texas ancestors did, from their daily chores to times of special celebration.

Through music, dance, crafts, storytelling, demonstrations and more, frontier Texas in all its glory and variety is brought vividly to life. Nearly 6,000 representatives of the more than 30 different ethnic groups who settled and built the Lone Star State share with some 100,000 visitors the folkways of their forebears.

With old and new, exotic and familiar standing side by side, the festival is a captivating study in contrasts. Blue-jean and khaki bedecked "moderns" mingle freely and comfortably with festival participants whose costumes emulate the fashions of their ancestors' day.

The grounds themselves are a departure from the chrome, glass and synthetics that shelter present-day Texans. In the "Back 40" area of the festival, just a few yards from cars and concrete, the ambience is decidedly rural, old-timey. Much looks and feels real, rustic and natural.

After all, the pioneers crafted their tools, homes and possessions entirely from the bounties of nature, from what they could pick, grow, chop or find. Their resourcefulness is spotlighted at the festival in a variety of demonstrations during which visitors are encouraged to watch, listen, ask questions and join in.

Adobe-brick makers turn clay, straw and manure into the durable, dirt-cheap building material used for thousands of years. At the smokehouse visitors learn methods of preservation used by American Indians and sample smoked vension, cured jerky, prickly pear apples, hickory nuts and acorns. Essential to life on the frontier were utensils, furniture, gourds, candles, and canes and they are all made the old-fashioned way at the festival.

The creativity and artistry of our ancestors is showcased in demonstrations of printmaking, pottery, basketry, scrimshaw, whittling and lace-making. Spinners and weavers explain the steps in transforming wads of wool into wearable cloth and other participants demonstrate such textile crafts as quilting and crochet.

Hospitality is a long-standing Texas tradition and at the festival visitors find that it's "easy as sweet potato pie" — a Texas favorite served at the festival — to make friends. Demonstrators are eager to share their skills, and an explanation of "how-to" and exchange of "how-do's" go hand in hand.

The festival also affords a child's natural and boundless curiosity free reign. There's so much to get into — that is, investigate! At Frontier Playland, for example, they see what life was like for pioneer children. Using simple materials such as wood, hay and corn cobs, they create the toys that delighted children long before the discovery of plastic. In addition, youngsters and adults alike enjoy petting the festival's lovable animals and can try their hand at plucking a goose, sheering a sheep and milking a goat.

Everyone, whether they are rock fans or classical buffs, enjoys the festival's music, which spans both hemispheres and the ages. From jazz, bluegrass, country and gospel to mariachis and bagpipes, the music keeps the audience clappin' and their toes tappin'.

Folk dance troupes in exotic native dress present traditional dances from Greece, the Philippines, Poland, Lebanon, Polynesia, Mexico and other countries. Square dancers and cloggers, polka bands and Irish tenors, Flamenco and Indian dancers turn each stage into a whirl of exitement.

It's always showtime at the festival and there are plenty of chances to get into the act. Visitors can sing along with a gospel group; grab a partner and dance the two-step and cotton-eyed Joe; and attempt to mirror the graceful yet lightning quick moves of the Filipino tinikling dancers.

For all its successes technology has been unable to improve upon many things, and one of them is food. Delectable aromas of handmade, homemade culinary delicacies pervade the festival grounds. Anyone expecting the usual hot-dog-and-fries fare is in for some scrumptious surprises.

The international menu features such authentic ethnic dishes as Jewish falafel (pita bread with stuffing), Filipino maruya (banana fritters), Spanish camarones a la plancha (grilled shrimp), Irish stew, Italian pizza, Mexican fajitas, six kinds of sausage (Alsatian, Czech, German, Hungarian, Polish and Ukrainian), three kinds of egg rolls (Vietnamese, Chinese and Fi pino) and breads of all kinds.

For dessert, temptations include Belgian waffles with whipped cream and strawberries, Czech kolaches, German apple strudel, Greek and Lebanese baklava, Mexican bunuelos and Scottish shortbread, to name a few.

Tickets for the 1983 Texas Folklife Festival are $5 adults ($4.50 in advance) and $1 for children age 6-12; children under 6 are admitted free. For more information, write the Texas Folklife Festival, Institute of Texan Cultures, P.O. Box 1226, San Antonio, Texas 78294 or call (512) 226-7651.

Week of July 24-30

Bono's Astro-Vue

© By Lillian Bono

ARIES

(March 21-April 20) A new relationship is about to enter your life. Make the most of it and don't worry about what others think about you.

TAURUS

(April 21-May 21) Resolve any differences with one important to your well-being. By mastering your temper you will find that life has much to offer you in the arena of love and romance.

GEMINI

(May 22-June 21) A trip to nowhere may be just the thing you need to give you zest and the strength to go on building your castles in the sky. Finances increase without the help of another.

CANCER

(June 22-July 23) You could view someone's work with a critical eye and not notice your own faults. It's important that you learn to balance out your problems and those of others to maintain peace of mind.

LEO

(July 24-Aug. 23) You will find yourself being drawn to places of entertainment this week. Those involved in the arts will find expression for their innermost feelings.

VIRGO

(Aug. 24-Sept. 23) You will want to get rid of many old things that are no longer of any use to you. Be careful to sort out your "trivia" before giving it away.

LIBRA

(Sept. 24-Oct. 23) Make a mental note of those who are not in conformity with your way of thinking. It is to your advantage to align yourself with people who can help you escalate the ladder of success.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Those who pretend to care for you may only be exercising the proverbial "lip service" sort of friendship that you can do without. Watch your financial situation.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your mental attitude will be the thermometer by which others will judge you at work. Promotions are possible, so do your best and be as cheerful as possible even if you feel down and out.

CAPRICORN

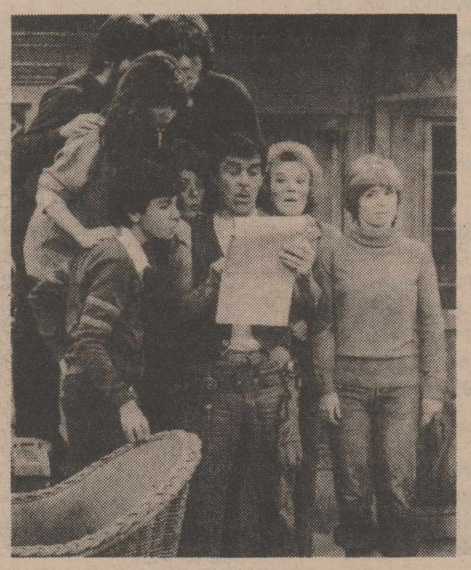

(Dec. 22-Jan. 20) Lots of love and happiness can be yours this week. Romance is highlighted throughout the week.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 21-Feb. 19) Your constant need to prove yourself at work may be somewhat trying on your nerves and those of people around you. Experiment with long walks for relaxation.

PISCES

(Feb. 20-March 20) Vacations are possible with a flair for the strange and mysterious. You will be drawn to areas that are not the usual tourist haunts. A younger person could give you much to be happy about.

By J.T. YURKO

TV's "Twilight Zone" was a place where philosophers and poets could stage observations on human nature, and still sell toothpaste for TV executives. This was a rare achievement, the likes of which may never be seen again.

Movies need not be concerned with selling toothpaste, only tickets. With little of the TV restrictions left on filmmakers, they were free to really take a "journey into a wondrous land whose boundaries are that of imagination."

Unfortunately, what "Twilight Zone — The Movie" lacks most is imagination. That the movie comes from four top directors — John Landis ("An American Werewolf in London"), Steven Spielberg ("E.T."), Joe Dante ("The Howling") and George Miller ("Road Warrior") — is almost as surprising as it is disappointing.

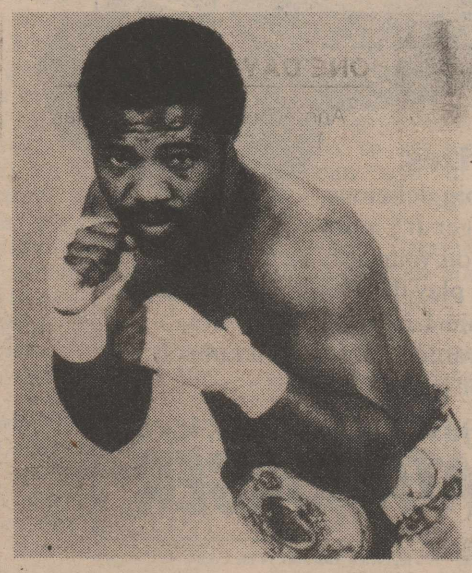

Why redo the TV episodes when sci-fi anthologies are brimming over with exquisitely written short stories, which are perfectly adaptable for the screen? Spielberg re-stages a TV episode, which has none of the original's warmth and heart.

Landis' opening segment is blunt and obvious. It has none of the "Twilight Zone" eeriness about it, save for the peculiar feeling you have knowing that Vic Morrow was killed while making this segment.

Dante's segment shows little more than his penchant for the special effects make-up magic of Rob Bottin, also of "The Howling."

The final segment, directed by Miller, is the best. It's also a remake of a TV episode, but Miller's aggressive, hammerhard direction keeps things moving at a chilling and exhilarating pace. John Lithgow deserves an Academy Award for his portrayal of a terrified airplane passenger who meets a particularly beastly wingwalker.

One segment out of four, however, doesn't save what should have been a midsummer night's journey into "The Twilight Zone."

PRYOR FIGHTS

WBA Junior Welterweight champ Aaron Pryor battles Reyes Cruz in a 10-round, non-title bout, which CBS airs SUNDAY, JULY 24.

The Wine Rack

By BIANCA St. JOHN

Oenophile's Notebook

* Two new releases from the Ridge Vineyards, located on Monte Bello Ridge in the Santa Cruz mountains, will be welcomed by fans of California's best red varietals. Ridge Vineyards 1981 Mendocino Cabernet Sauvignon is a beautifully priced cabernet which the winemaker says is already showing complexity and elegance. Ridge Vineyards California Zinfandel, also of the '81 vintage, is an early maturing zin made from several vineyards' grapes, nicely priced at about $6. Ridge Vineyards is a chateau-style California winery producing about 40,000 cases of the highest quality wines.

* If the vintage is '71, the wine Italian, and you can't decide between a Barbera or a Chianti Classico Reserva, what you need is a vintage chart for Italian red wines. You can get just such a pocket-sized chart, which rates vintage as well as current drinkability of the Italian reds from 1965 through 1981, by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Italian Wine Center, 499 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. The back of the chart categorizes white wines, vinified to be drunk young, not by year, but by body: light, medium, desert, sparkling. And, if you couldn't decide between the Barbera and the Chianti, you would have found the answer on the chart; both red wines are ready to drink now, but the Barbera is a "very good vintage" compared to the Chianti Classico Reserva which is an "exceptional vintage."

Soap Bubbles.....By Seli Groves

What does Marie Cheatham do when she's not being scintillating Stephanie on "Search for Tomorrow?"

MARIE CHEATHAM

The answer is many things. Among them are the following: she raises exotic orchids in her Manhattan apartment; she raises beautiful birds (one of which she recently gave to the soap's delighted hairdresser who has helped many a "Search" actor preen his or her fine plumage) and she's hard at work helping to educate the American public about the historical contributions of Native Americans (usually called American Indians). Last month she was in Cache, Oklahoma where she was honored in an Indian religious festival. She also played the role of Cynthia Ann Parker in a production honoring both the lady and her famous son, the Indian chief, Quannah Parker. We'll have more about the busy Ms. Cheatham and her activities on behalf of this fascinating area of American history.

You said it! Your feelings about "Ryan's Hope" are being expressed quite loudly these days. Your letters tell us that you consider this series to be among the "most improved" of the soaps. You also like the way "Edge of Night" looks. And no wonder. The new writer for the latter show, Lee Sheldon, says he intends to tell his stories in shorter time, to quicken the pace of the action and in answer to a question from us regarding the "new look" given to Sky and Raven (Larkin Malloy and Sharon Gabet) Sheldon agreed that they are a sort of daytime version of the much admired "Nick and Nora Charles" of films. (This was the sleek, sophisticated sleuthing couple of the "Thin Man" series, played by Melvin Douglas and Myrna Loy.)

SOAP SCRAPS: Rose Alaio (Helena, "Guiding Light") did the hitherto un-do-able: she was asked to appear three times!!! on the "Soap Scoop" show out of Columbus, OH ... Catherine Mary Stewart (Kayla, "Days of Our Lives") will team with David Hasselhoff (ex Snapper Foster, "Young & the Restless") in an upcoming segment of his hit night time show, "Knight Rider." the seg's name is "Brother's Keeper"... Beth Maitland (Traci, "Y&R) got the O.K. from her producer to shed another 15 pounds on the show. She's working closely with a nutritionist in peeling down to a more appealing size.

CAST AWEIGHS: "Days of Our Lives" has added some new talent: Richard Bergman will play Brett Frederick, Anna's brother; Pamela Roylance will be the new Sandy Horton.

TID-BITS: Lanna Saunders, who plays Marie Horton Gallison on "Days", is Macdonald Carey's (Tom Horton) daughter on the soap. She also played Mac's daughter on Broadway ("Anniversary Waltz") in 1954. (Marie Cheatham originated the Marie Horton role.) ... Menudo, the hottest singing group around, will star in a Saturday morning bilingual show on ABC starting this September 10.

MEDICINE CHEST

Your Professional:
Troy True, Reg. Pharmacist

How can a person who requires sleeping pills every night stop taking them and get a good night's sleep? — V.L.S.

You're not alone with this problem. According to the U.S. Government's Project Sleep, insomnia ranks third behind the common cold and headaches as a reason for seeking professional aid. It disrupts the lives of an estimated 50 million people. An excellent book on getting a good night's sleep without drugs is Carl E. Thoresen's "How To Sleep Better." It contains techniques tested and proven at the Stanford's Sleep Disorders Clinic.

At what age is it safe not to have childproof containers for children's medicine? — I.M.

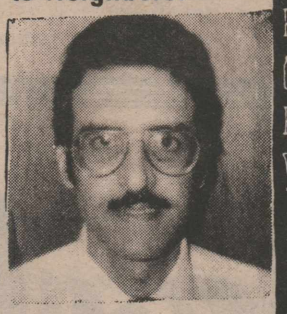

This will vary in different households. A survey of children's attitudes and knowledge about the dangers of overdose from prescription drugs was conducted. Thirty patients, ages 5 through 10 years, receiving chronic anticonvulsants, stimulants or antibiotics were interviewed. They were asked if they would get better or worse if they took a lot of their medicine at once. Three children thought they would get better, and seven were not sure. If your children are taking medicine, why don't you ask them that question?

What cosmetic product is used the most? — D.Q.

According to an F.D.A. survey, toothpaste is used the most, followed by shampoo, mouthwash, talcum and hand lotion. These basic products account for about 22 percent of cosmetic sales each year.

Dear Debbie

DEAR DEBBIE:

I'm 13 years old and very bored with life. One reason is that I'm never trusted by my parents. My parents won't let me go alone to my school. They want me to go with these kids who are nerds. My mother picks my friends for me and my other friends whom I trust are getting hurt. I try to tell them, but every time I do, they say I should tell it to my mother. They really are great friends (until my mother interfered). I've already tried talking to my mother. It didn't help.

NEVER TRUSTED

DEAR NEVER:

It is unusual for a parent to do something without a reason. Generally, mistrust stems from the other party proving himself or herself to be untrustworthy. Don't misunderstand me, however, I'm not saying you've done anything to upset your parents, but perhaps your friends have. Often, when parents object to a child's friends it's because the friends are involved in certain activities that can be harmful. Take a good, close look at your friends. What do they like to do? Do they smoke, drink or experiment with drugs? Are they disrespectful to those in authority? Are they openly rebellious? These are the types of things parents worry about.

If, in all honesty, your friends are okay, try to talk to your mother again. Ask her what it is about your friends she finds offensive. Then listen to her reasons. She might surprise you with some good observations.

DEAR DEBBIE:

I am writing a reply in regards to a letter from a thirty-one-year-old lady who was having difficulty meeting "nice" men. Perhaps you remember it — May 26, 1983?

I won't bore you with a lot of information about myself, except that I'm male, twenty-three and in the U.S. Army. I have to ask: Are there really people like her left? She mentioned wanting someone to share her love with. Do people do that anymore? Do people share anything anymore? Of course they do; I'm not that pessimistic, but I was caught off guard with her benevolence and am going through a time in my life when I trust few, particularly women.

I usually flip through your column and view it humorously. But sometimes I also see patience, caring and good advice. In short, I salute your approach and what you are trying to do, and I salute this woman who is looking for Mr. Special. She has spirit and if she is as she portrays herself, I would like to meet her, if anything just to shake her hand. I will sign off with a passing thought: Perhaps I should not yet rid myself of those adolescent dreams. Thank you, Debbie. Thank you, Nice Lonely Lady.

AN ADMIRER

DEAR ADMIRER:

It's such a pleasure to receive a letter like yours. It really made my day. So often, there is pain and heartache in the letters I receive, it's nice to know people are being reached.

I'm sure Lonely will realize there are a lot of men out there like you who want to meet a woman like her. Thank you for reaching out.

Feelin' Good

By M.A. PETTI, M.D.

Frequently, teenage boys become alarmed by some swelling of their breasts. This swelling is perfectly normal and about 70 percent of adolescent boys have it at some time. It lasts for a few months and then disappears.

PRIVATE BATTLE

Amusing Santoni stars in 'Manimal'

By Joan Crosby

Reni Santoni

Reni Santoni is one of those chaps who make you smile easily and laugh out loud.

He's tall, dark, quite attractive, with a look of perpetual amusement. He is wearing a shirt with an Australian logo on it, the letter "A" formed by a kangaroo. A friend brought the shirt for him from down under.

"I have to be careful with this shirt. I have to remember who has seen it once. If I wear it twice in front of the same person, they'll think it's all I have to wear."

He also says his great ambition in life is to have Marlon Brando throw himself "at my feet, sobbing, and ask, 'How do you do it, Reni boy?' "

Santoni will be seen this fall as a New York City police lieutenant on NBC's "Manimal." That's the series starring Simon MacCorkindale as a criminology professor who can turn himself into an animal.

"Sometimes, he walks down the street and turns into a bar," Santoni quips, with a Groucho Marx-like inflection in his voice.

When he first went to meet "Manimal" producer Don Boyle, Santoni said he knew he wasn't the type they were looking for.

"I think they were looking for a young Charles Durning. But I wasn't working at the time, so I felt free. After the reading I was told they hadn't thought of the part the way I read it, but it was interesting.

"I called my agent because the reaction had been so good. I told my agent I either knocked out the producer or he was a better actor than I was. I expected him to whip out a blank contract and tell me 'Fill in what you think is fair, Reni.'

"Eventually I got called back to read for the show's creator, Glen Larson. It was a 5:30 meeting and there were three actors there. I was the last one in and after I read, Larson said 'I don't think I have to see anyone else' and I said 'Good, because there's no one else out there'."

Ask Kate

Who's Jimmy Mac's mom?

By Kate Woods

James MacArthur

I watch "Hawaii Five-O" and have just been told that James MacArthur is Helen Hayes' son. Is this true? — F.S.

James MacArthur is the adopted son of Miss Hayes and the late playwright and screenwriter Charles MacArthur.

CRITIQUE OF REASON — I just saw "The Creature Walks Among Us" with Rex Reason in a leading role. I say it was really Stewart Granger — did he ever work under the name of Rex Reason? — H.A.

Stewart Granger's real name is James Stewart, but he is neither actor James Stewart nor Rex Reason, who formerly acted under the name of Bart Roberts. Reason worked primarily in the '50s and early '60s, but never achieved stardom other than the leading role in the 1960-'62 TV series "The Roaring Twenties" with Dorothy Provine.

GABLE FABLES — Can you tell me when Clark Gable married Carole Lombard, when she died and who he was married to after her death? — C.C.

The famous Hollywood match took place in 1939. Miss Lombard was killed in 1942. Seven years later, Gable married his fourth wife, Sylvia, the former Lady Ashley and subsequent Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks. After that divorce, he married Kay Williams Spreckles in 1955. She survived him upon his death in 1960.

WEB SLINGER — Where can I write to the people who make "Spiderman" for TV? — J.H.

"Spiderman and His Amazing Friends" is produced by Marvel Productions. Ltd., 4610 Van Nuys Blvd., Sherman Oaks, CA 91403. Don Jurwich is the producer.

Through the Channels

by Joey Sasso

Johnny Carson and Mary Tyler Moore were almost America's favorite married couple — but their marriage was given the thumbs-down by TV executives. Johnny was a front runner to be Mary's TV husband in what turned out to be the classic situation comedy, "The Dick Van Dyke Show" . . . but he lost out by a narrow margin to Dick Van Dyke.

The selection of Van Dyke to play screenwriter Rob Petrie opposite Mary in the popular comedy two decades ago changed the course of TV history. If Johnny had landed the plum role, chances are he would never have succeeded Jack Paar to become the nation's guru of late night TV with the "Tonight Show."

Ironically, the sitcom newlyweds that never were are now a swinging single duo. Mary and Johnny have separated from their mates in real life and are both currently eligible singles.

The TV mating of Johnny and Mary is revealed in a new book called "Anatomy of a Classic" by the creator-screenwriters of the immortal "Dick Van Dyke Show" which ran from 1961 to 1966 and is one of the small screen's all-time favorite comedies in reruns.

The authors — plus the show's creator, Carl Reiner — reveal that producer Danny Thomas personally selected Mary for the role of suburban housewife Laura Petrie. The plum role of hubbie Rob was narrowed down to two relatively unknown personalities, Johnny Carson and Dick Van Dyke. Van Dyke won by a nose, and a rejected Carson went on to greater celebrity success with his talk show.

"It was a close call," revealed one of the screenwriters. "It was almost Johnny and Mary as husband and wife."

In a strange twist of fate, the secure, stable, happy marriage promised for Johnny and Mary in the long-running series was not to mimic their real-life domestic situations. Johnny appears to be going down for the third time in the marriage stakes, after splitting with his wife of ten years, Joanna Ulrich Holland. Johnny nursed his marital wounds by squiring cute-as-a-button Sally Field to dinner at some of the film colony's favorite hot spots.

Not surprisingly, pretty Sally — who picked up an Academy Award for her lead role in "Norma Rae" — even showed up one night as a guest on "The Tonight Show." The host pretended to be shocked when she cooly revealed that her first adventure into the sexual woodpile occurred when she was 14.

"Dynasty" co-stars Linda Evans and Joan Collins are love rivals, Hollywood insiders say. They're not after the same man, however. Instead, their rivalry is over which of the two lovelies will get to the altar first.

"Both Linda and Joan are footloose-and-fancy-free at the moment, and they both hate it," said one insider close to the "Dynasty" cast. "Neither of them can be happy without a man to call their own, and each one is determined to get to the altar before the other. It's a friendly feud but each of them is dead-set on winning the race."

Zbigniew Brzezinski appeared on "The Larry King Show" to reflect on his years with the Carter administration and comment on the current political climate.

Brzezinski on the Nuclear Freeze Movement: "I think the freeze movement is a well-intentioned movement. I think the concept of the freeze, quite frankly, is a hoax because no one has explained how such a freeze is going to be applied, how it's going to be verified, and, for that matter, what is even going to be frozen.

"In effect, it's a resolution like saying, 'I'm against poverty.' I think if people take it seriously as a program, then they are being fooled. If it's a statement of desire, an expectation that eventually will be lived up to by both sides, then I have nothing against it."

She may be a backseat driver on "Dukes of Hazzard," but shapely Cathy Bach couldn't resist grabbing the radio mike away from a cab driver and launching into a conversation with the dispatcher. The radio-man refused to believe he was actually talking to Cathy, so she had the driver head straight to the garage where she joined the astonished dispatcher and the other drivers for coffee.

Sultry Loni Anderson admits she's not an ideal mate and says her stormy romance with macho Burt Reynolds is just a dating relationship.

"I just don't think that being a mate is one of the things I excel at," says the twice-married blonde sex bomb.

"I always say that I think that I'm a good cook, and a good mom, a good friend, and a good daughter. I don't think that I'm the best mate. I've had two marriage failures and I had responsibility very early. I've had tragedy early in life. I think these things made me a mature woman very early."

Domineering Jaclyn Smith's bitter public quarrels with her director-husband have insiders wondering if her third marriage is headed for the rocks.

Startled onlookers say the beautiful actress-model — fresh from her triumph on TV's "Rage of Angels" — constantly turned her scathing abuse on Tony Richmond as he directed her debut in a series of commercials.

"From the first moment those two were at war with one another," an insider says. "And the set was filled with tension and unhappiness. They fought most of the time and they didn't try to cover up their anger when they were in front of the crew.

Keep an eye out for the July issue of Rod Serling's "The Twilight Zone" Magazine, which has in-depth coverage of Stephen Spielberg's new film, "Twilight Zone: The Movie." It promises to be the blockbuster movie of the summer of '83, and will probably occupy all of the #1 slots that belonged to "E.T." last summer.

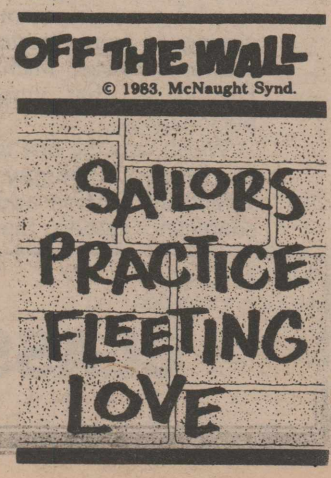

Ol' Blue Eyes has done it again. At a Friar's Club Roast honoring Elizabeth Taylor, star of "Private Lives," Frank Sinatra presented her with a Piaget $39,000, 18 carat gold hand carved evening watch.

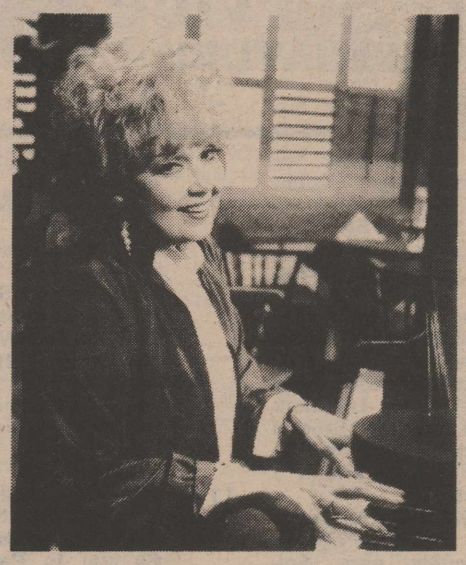

Before the presentation, Frank said, "They wrote this out for me "Peejay" (Piaget). What's the matter? Don't they think I can speak French?"

"All My Children's" resident vixen Susan Lucci has spent the last seven years of her life in torment because of vicious anonymous threats made against her daughter Liza.

Actress Susan — who played the temptress Erica on America's number one soap opera for the past 12 years — revealed her secret nightmare on national TV.

"Weird people have been making threats . . . trying to get to Liza . . . from the day she was born," revealed Susan, 32, who feels that there are many sick-minded viewers who identify her too closely with the cruel, man-huntry schemer she portrays on TV.

SHOOTING STARS

Edie Adams stars as a piano-playing manager of a restaurant run by a pair of TV actors in "Shooting Stars," airing THURSDAY, JULY 28 on "The ABC Thursday Night Movie."

Stars Bits

A WEEKLY SYNDICATED COLUMN
FROM STARS HALL OF FAME ORLANDO, FLORIDA

BOGART'S CYNICAL SNEER MASKED A WARM HEART

Few stars of the American cinema inspire the depth of emotion millions of fans have heaped on Humphrey DeForest Bogart — "Bogie."

Born Christmas Day in 1899, Bogart captured the hearts of three generations with his cynical, tough-guy-with-a-heart persona. He began his career as a stage actor when he was 20.

Ten years later, he made his first feature length film, "A Devil With Women," and introduced his audience to the nasty, gangster character he would play throughout his career. He played hundreds of bit parts during the 1930's, and seemed to be type cast as Warner Brothers' fourth string bad guy behind George Raft, Edward G. Robinson and James Cagney.

Somewhat disillusioned, he returned to the stage in 1936 in Robert Sherwood's "Petrified Forest," playing mobster Duke Mantee, and it was here, ironically, that he got his first big break. Leslie Howard persuaded Warner Brothers to cast Bogart in the film version, and Bogart became a star.

But it was the decade of the 1940's that saw his career blossom. And it was the deft casting of four directors — Raoul Walsh, Howard Hawks, Michael Curtiz and John Huston — that immortalized his screen persona.

Walsh was the first to see the human side to Bogie's bad-guy in "The Roaring Twenties." Huston added dimension to the character, casting him as cynical, disenchanted Sam Spade in Dashiell Hammett's "The Maltese Falcon." Curtiz followed with Bogart's best remembered role — the tough, sentimental Rick Blaine in "Casablanca."

But it was Howard Hawks who gave Bogart his finest role in what many critics believe is America's greatest film — Raymond Chandler's "The Big Sleep." Bogie played a cynical, anti-heroic Philip Marlowe, a tough detective who wasn't afraid to take on "the system," and played by his own set of rules. Bogart was the personification of Chandler's famous line: "Down these mean streets a man must go who is not himself mean, who is neither tarnished nor afraid."

Hawks starred Bogart in other memorable films, among them Ernest Hemingway's "To Have and Have Not," and Bogie responded, firmly establishing the persona that would last long after the man was gone. He carried that characterization through several more films, opposite Katherine Hepburn in " African Queen," for which he won his only Academy Award; as the neurotic Captain Queeg in "The Caine Mutiny," and his last film, "The Harder They Fall."

Humphrey Bogart married the great love of his life, Lauren Bacall, and together they had two children. He died on January 14, 1957, after a brief illness. But for millions of fans he lives on at Six Flags Stars Hall of Fame in Orlando, depicted on the set of "African Queen" with Katherine Hepburn.

Changes for 'Fantasy Island'

By Andy Noble

Visitors to "Fantasy Island" this fall will find that the winds of change are rustling the palm trees on the tropical paradise.

"The show is going to take a new direction. It's going to be much more intelligent and plausible. We're going to get away from the hocus-pocus," said Ricardo Montalban, who'll play the mysterious Mr. Roarke for the sixth season. "Hocus pocus is believable at 8 o'clock, but we're a 10 o'clock show, an adult show."

But the biggest change is the departure of Herve Villechaize, the dimunitive Frenchman who played Roarke's aide, Tattoo. He left in a much-publicized, acrimonious dispute.

"I was hurt by some of Herve's remarks," Montalban admitted. "But I think they came out of his frustration.

"Herve had limitations, but they had nothing to do with his size. He had some difficulty with the English language, especially with rapid-fire conversations."

Roarke's new sidekick will be his valet, a gentleman's gentleman named Lawrence, played by veteran British actor Christopher Hewett.

"Humor will be an integral part of our relationship," said Montalban. Even though the pair has an unequal social status, Montalban noted that "we have great respect for each other, which will allow us to be annoyed with each other."

Montalban added that the show's writers are still deciding how to explain Tattoo's absence. One possible scenario says Tattoo has gone on to better things — inheriting a vineyard in France — but didn't have the heart to say goodbye to Roarke. So he just left his boss a farewell note, explaining that he had hired Lawrence to take care of him.

TV Nostalgia

By Marie Iandiorio

"77 Sunset Strip" was the prototype for a rash of glamorous private-eye series that bombarded prime-time TV in the late '50s and early '60s. The team of Stu Bailey and Jeff Spencer were suave, ex-undercover government agents, college educated and judo experts.

Next door to their Hollywood office was Dino's, a posh restaurant. Often seen on the series was Dino's parking lot attendant, a jive-talking youth named Gerald Lloyd Kookson III, but always called Kookie.

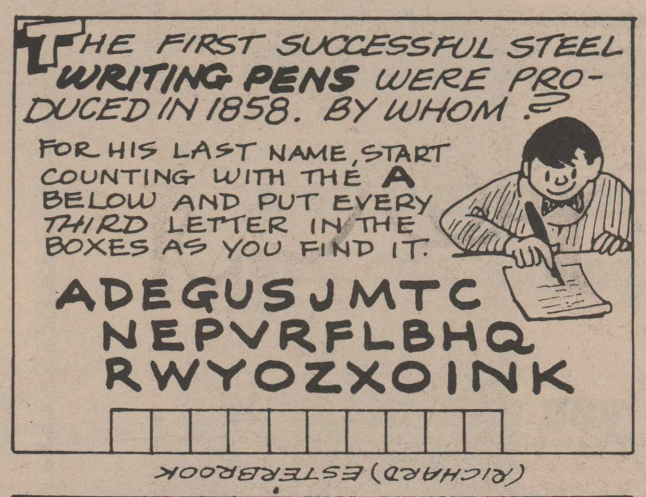

Kookie longed to be a private eye and often helped the guys on their cases, while providing much of the show's comic relief. His "kookie-isms" became a trademark — the "ginchiest" (greatest), "piling up the Z's" (sleeping), "play like a pigeon" (deliver a message) and a "dark seven" (depressing week). Kookie caught the public's fancy and kept the show in the top 10 for most of its six-year-run.

Question: Who played Stu, Jeff and Kookie?

Answer: Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Roger Smith and Edd Byrnes.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

Amateur photographers can have fun experimenting with some of the special effects used by professional photographers. And for some effects that are really special, try some shots with Kodak Ektrachrome infrared film. Infrared film was originally designed for aerial studies of vegetation — healthy trees record as purplish red on infrared film, sick and dying trees record as pale green. Today, the film also has a variety of geological and medical uses.

In infrared photography use a No. 12 yellow filter to avoid an overall dull purplish cast to the picture. Because it has a critcal exposure tolerance, you must try to get within one half-stop of the correct exposure with infrared film. Your camera's meter is not designed to read infrared so try additional exposures at one half-stop and one full stop larger and smaller than the one indicated by the meter. If you are using a meter that is separate from the camera, take your readings at 100 when using a No. 12 or No. 15 filter.

Infrared film should be stored in a freezer at 0 degrees to minus 10 degrees Fahrenheit. Allow six to eight hours for the film to reach room temperature before use, and to prevent condensation, leave the film in its original packing until you are ready to load it in your camera.
