Somoza resigns; flees to U.S.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza, toppled by revolution, resigned early today and flew in his private jet to Florida, ending 42 years of dictatorship by his family. A motorcade took him and dozens who fled with him to his private Florida estate.

Members of the Nicaraguan Congress elected the president of their lower house, Francisco Urcuyo, to succeed him, but Urcuyo, 54, was expected to serve only until the arrival from neighboring Costa Rica of the provisional junta named by the Sandinista guerrillas.

The Sandinistas, in a successful, seven-week rebellion, fought Somoza's national guard to a standstill and toppled the one time strongman in the largest but most thinly populated Central American state.

Somoza was still in the air en route to Florida when junta member Sergio Ramirez Mercado announced in Costa Rica that the new Nicaraguan government would ask the United States to extradite Somoza to stand trial for crimes against the Nicaraguan people, including corruption and human rights violations.

U.S. officials said Somoza landed at Homestead Air Force Base near Miami at 9:50 a.m., in a party of about 45 people in five planes.

Base guards said the group left the air base by motorcade, escorted by the Florida Highway Patrol, and headed for Somoza's estate on Sunset Island. The motorcade brought with it crates of food, sacks of potatoes and cases of soft drinks, the guards said.

Nicaragua has more land area than Florida, but has a population of 2.5 million, little more than one-third that of Florida's 6.8 million. It has coasts on both the Atlantic and Pacific sides of Central America.

The Sandinistas began as a Marxist-Leninist movement and still have in their ranks pro-Cuban elements. But they have also split into three factions, promised free elections, appointed a cabinet representing a broad spectrum of opinion and indicated that U.S. business interests in Nicaragua will be allowed to continue operations.

An aide reported the 53-year-old ex-president took a helicopter from downtown Managua to the international airport at 4 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT), then boarded a plane for Miami, where he owns an estate and other property. He was flying to Homestead Air Force Base near Miami, which the U.S. State Department ordered sealed off Monday night by "security personnel assigned to handle President Somoza," an Air Force spokesman in Florida reported.

Hundreds of people in the rebel-held town of Jinotepe, 35 miles south of Managua, took to the streets in celebration as news of the resignation spread at 2:30 a.m. But in Managua, where radio censorship was still in effect, the news still had not been broadcast when Somoza left at 5:10 a.m. — 7:10 a.m. EDT.

The Carter administration had been urging Somoza to quit for weeks, but the State Department had no immediate comment on his resignation.

Four of the five rebel junta members were waiting in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, for Somoza's departure in hopes that they could take over without a battle for Managua.

The foreign ministers of the Andean Pact nations — Colombia, Venezuela, Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru — arrived in San Jose Monday night to accompany them to Managua, and Costa Rican radio stations said they would fly up by chartered plane as soon as Somoza left.

The intentions of Somoza's national guard, and of the guerrillas, were unclear. Guard Maj. Pablo Emilio Salazar, in charge of the southern zone, met with Somoza and told reporters the guard would keep fighting to assure democracy. But he did not say whether he meant the guard would fight the guerrillas or accept the junta.

Sandinista southern commander Eden Pastora said the Sandinistas "hope that the United States, which supplied the bombs and other arms used to destroy people, property and homes, will now recognize its moral obligation to help reconstruct Nicaragua."

Somoza delivered his resignation during the night to members of the Chamber of Deputies at the Bunker, his fortified headquarters in downtown Managua. The congressmen immediately went into session at the Intercontinental Hotel nearby and elected Urcuyo.

Somoza's statement, read to the congressmen, said he was stepping down to concur with an Organization of American States call for his resignation, and to avoid further sacrifices by the people. "History will look at the reason for my fight against communism," it said.

Minutes after the congressional session ended, about two dozen of the legislators rushed upstairs to their rooms, grabbed already-packed suitcases and boarded a bus for the airport and a flight to Miami.

Among them was a first cousin of Somoza, Luis Palais Debayle, the vice president of the lower house.

The guerrillas held all the other major towns and cities in the country and controlled all the roads leading to the capital.

Americans scramble to leave Nicaragua

EDITORS NOTE: Abilene Reporter-News senior staff writer Jim Conley is in Nicaragua with Abilene businessman Jack Cox and an independent television film crew. Instead of receiving an anticipated interview with Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza, a friend of Cox, the men were caught up in the scramble by Americans to get out of the strife-ridden capital as Somoza apparently prepared to leave. Here is Conley's report as published in a copyright story in the Reporter-News today.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Our airplane reservations out of war-torn Nicaragua are not good until Wednesday, but we are trying to arrange a flight anyway possible to almost any country.

President Somoza is expected to leave the country today.

The situation is not one of panic yet. Network television personnel and worldwide press people who have been here for weeks have told us how they got out of Nicaragua only days ago on short notice, when ABC-TV newsman Bill Stewart was killed.

They advised us to try the U.S. Embassy, which we plan to do as soon as possible after the nightly curfew ends at 4 a.m.

Now shortly after midnight, Abilene time, we are together in one seventh-floor room of the Hotel Intercontinental, scarcely a block from Somoza's heavily fortified bunker.

We have heard sporadic gunfire and government troops are everywhere, as they have been throughout the day. We have seen fires to the west, but we cannot tell what they are.

But the night belongs to the Sandinista rebels, basically Marxist terrorists, who have been infiltrating back into the city recently. They have withdrawn from Managua itself within the past six weeks after having been involved in battles which have virtually destroyed entire sections of the city.

As we came to our hotel from the airport, we could see why 10,000 to 15,000 people--a great majority having been civilians--were killed during that fighting. We saw burned out buildings, the remnants of trenches, foxholes and barricades.

Bullet holes and other signs of raging battle were almost as apparent as if it had happened yestereday.

Because the hotel and the military government complex adjacent to it are so heavily defended, the only evidence a normal person would see of a military struggle around the hotel would be the ever present troops and the hordes of anxious television and press personnel scurrying in and out of the hotel every moment during daylight hours.

Tonight, however, a much different mood is in the air. It is time to get out; that's our news and the only story that is going to concern us personally until we get out of the country.

Water rates to increase at least $1 if plan okayed

By EILEEN McGUIRE

Water rates will increase $1 to $1.50 per month under the adoption of a plan brought before the Big Spring City Council today to finance needed sewer plant modifications.

Different alternatives of paying for the modifications, which are necessary under the Environmental Protective Agency mandate, according to City Manager Don Davis, were presented to the council by Joe W. Smith of Abilene, representing a company, First Southwestern, hired to evaluate alternatives.

Smith instructed the council that "the soundest approach" is the issuance of waterworks and services revenue bonds, payable over a period of five years.

Payments would be made on a schedule of about $200,000 per year. The requirement on securing the bond, however, is that revenue from waterworks be twice the amount of the payback payments. Smith pointed out that Big Spring's revenue falls short.

A $1.50 surcharge per consumer in addition to the current $2 sewage charge, however, would provide $143,000 to $144,000 in extra revenue, Smith said.

Smith's research was challenged by former city councilman Jack Watkins who stated that the city definitely needed the sewer modifications, but that a surcharge of $1 per consumer bill would bring in the necessary revenue of $144,000 per year.

Watkins also suggested that a large capital investment would shorten the time of the surcharge from five to two or three years. He reminded the council of a "Capital Projects Fund" that had been set up in 1972.

The current balance of the fund, according to Watkins is $24,000 to $25,000 cash. Money that has been leant out from the fund to other city funds and uses, he said, if collected, would bring the total up to $384,000. Watkins suggested that the notes be collected on repayment schedules, which he stated, do not exist now.

Davis and Mayor Wade Choate both recommended that Smith's proposed payment schedule be accepted and that staff members investigate the sources of funds.

Councilman Larry Miller requested a stipulation in the motion that "the surcharge comes off when the bonds are retired."

The motion was made and accepted that the council would accept Smith's recommendation and that the city staff would be instructed to proceed with the recommendation and obtain information of exact dollar amounts to present to the council.

A lengthy discussion was conducted on the city's ordinance regarding truck traffic. The wording of the original ordinance and a proposed amendment to the ordinance continues to leave questions of under what circumstances a truck is permitted on certain parts of residential streets.

The intent of the ordinance, as expressed by various members of the council, is to authorize trucks to take the shortest route possible through a residential area to arrive at a necessary destination point.

The wording of the original ordinance forbids trucks from certain streets and parts of streets without exception. The proposed amendment would allow trucks to travel through residential areas to a pickup or delivery point via the nearest intersection to the destination.

The amendment, said Miller, "is just rerouting trucks from one residential area to another."

"I don't believe Chief (Stanely) Bogart can enforce this," Davis said regarding the ambiguity of the original and proposed ordinances.

Motions were made to adopt the amended ordinance while conducting further study on the matter, to adopt it with certain parts deleted, and to throw the whole thing out and start over.

A resident of one of the areas in question — Birdwell Lane — suggested that members let a motion die "for lack of a second, table it, and come back next week with the confusion resolved."

The council did just that. The matter was tabled, with an emergency reading of a new prospective amendment at the next meeting. The staff will consult with Midland and Odessa authorities regarding the wording of those cities' truck traffic ordinances.

The council also considered and adopted a proposal presented at a joint open meeting of the Big Spring Steering Committee and the City Council Monday.

According to the proposal, the City of Big Spring was approved by the Economic Development Administration to receive a $60,000 grant to develop a plan to aid the city in adjusting to the loss of Webb Air Force Base.

Under the guilelines of the grant program, the funds must be used for consultant fees.

About$30,000 of the grant is already being spent on research by Economic Research Associates of Dallas in regards to housing, schools and fiscal planning.

The proposal that was presented designated the remaining $30,000 for sutdy of industrial development.

According to Harold Shelton the Economics and Research Division of Texas A&M, researchers would develop a five-year plan of action for Industrial Park.

The plan will outline short-term goals, attainable in that five-year period, and will stress the importance of making decisions in term of long-range goals, also to be outlined through the study.

The planning will include management, industrial development and financial planning, according to Shelton. The study would be completed within five months from the day it begins, he said.

He assured the city council that all money cost will be reimbursed by the grant money, as is stipulated in the written proposal.

The council voted to accept the proposal despite a dissenting vote cast by councilman Bill Henkel.

Action / reaction: Comics decisions

Q. Who makes the final decision of what comics appear in the Herald? Also, how can we get the old ones — like Gil Thorpe, Mary Worth and others — put back?

A. The publisher and the editor together determine the kind of features the Herald offers. However, the decision isn't inspired by the whims of either individual. Readership surveys are taken and the people are given a chance to rate their favorites and which comics and other features least appeal to them. Those rallying the least support among the readers have the lowest chances to survive.

Quietest dog in town

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ro-dog the watchdog is on the job these days at the Center of Science and Industry.

Ro-dog is the radio-controlled creation of some fellows in COSI's electronics department. He's been house-trained just in time for the 280-exhibit Super Summer Science Show that will continue through Sunday at the center.

His creators say the 31-pound mechanical marvel is an improvement over the traditional canine varieties. He doesn't shed, avoids fire hydrants and trees and is immune to fleas.

About the only thing Ro-dog can't do very well at the moment is bark. Creator Ed Lewis said someone left the cirucit for his bark in a desk drawer.

Anybody seen a lion?

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — An 85-pound mountain lion stolen from a local house painter apparently is padding around the woods of North Branford, stirring up the imaginations of residents.

The de-clawed, trained beast, which is about as big as a large dog, was reported missing Saturday and continued to elude capture Monday.

William Blaisdell, Tina's owner, said he's had plenty of telephone calls from people claiming they heard his pet in their yards. But police say the only hard information is from a woman in North Branford who said she saw the cat near her home. Blaisdell identified the tracks as those of his pet.

Blaisdell said he wasn't worried Tina might go hungry.

"When you're the biggest animal in those woods, you can eat anything you want," he said.

"She mostly eats birds," he added.

High-rent nuisance

ATLANTA (AP) — The Peachtree Screamer comes with the seventh floor of Peachtree Towers, a prestigious downtown commercial address of particular clientele.

Its bloodcurdling scream has been chilling the seventh floor for about a year. It comes and goes, sometimes twice a week, sometimes less. Police have found nothing.

"We were warned about it when we moved in here last February," said Shay Griffin, owner of a talent and model booking firm. "We've all heard it at one time or another, but we don't know if it's a man or a woman. You just can't tell."

Electric fans turning on as thermostats turn down

Two dozen electric fans whirred at New York's popular theatrical watering hole, Sardi's, as across the nation people began turning down their air conditioning systems — some more quickly than others.

Temperatures set records in the 100s in Oregon on Monday and it was a muggy 87 in New York City on the first day of President Carter's directive that thermostats be set at 78 degrees to save energy — perhaps 200,000 to 400,000 barrels of oil a day.

In Dallas, a spot check at police headquarters showed settings at the proper mark, but at City Hall, cold air blowing from air conditioning outlets was measured at 66 degrees.

As mid-summer's dog days set in, some firms worried they might lose customers and worker productivity due to the warmer temperatures.

"We sincerely hope that the public understands we are doing it on orders from the government, that we are following instructions and that they go along with us or else the whole purpose is defeated," said Stuart Levin, president of the New York City chapter of the state Restaurant Association.

Carter's temperature adjustment regulations, which would stay in effect for nine months, also require that in winter temperatures cannot be set above 65 degrees.

Violators may receive fines of up to $10,000 after enforcement, which will depend heavily on public cooperation, begins next month.

But even the energy-conscious may find it difficult to comply with the letter of the rule. Officials in the office of Maine Gov. Joseph Brennan discovered Monday that it would cost more to turn down the statehouse's air conditioning system than to leave the setting at its cooling 55 degrees.

"We may just unplug the whole system," said aide Daniel Coyne.

Congress working on energy program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democratic leaders are beginning an all-out effort to get as much of President Carter's new energy program as possible through Congress before the August recess.

The task may be easier than it sounds because many of the proposals the president put before the nation Sunday and Monday are not new, but variations on measures already progressing through Congress.

First up is the president's request for authority to order gasoline rationing in times of severe shortage and to set state-by-state energy-conservation goals.

Backers predicted easy approval of the measure by the full House Commerce Committee today, setting up expected floor action later in the week or early next week.

The House rejected the president's own standby rationing plan in May.

But leaders quickly went to work on another plan that would give the president the standby rationing authority he wanted as well as the power to impose mandatory fuel-saving steps in states failing to meet specified conervation targets.

House and Senate leaders met privately Monday afternoon to put the rationing bill and other Carter-backed measures already before Congress on an express track.

Emerging from the strategy session, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said, "We hope to get four or five pieces of the mosaic through Congress quickly" before the month-long recess that begins Aug. 4.

Leaders said a rush effort will be made to complete Senate action on legislation to launch a new multibillion-dollar synthetic fuel industry and impose the president's windfall profits tax on the oil industry. Both measures already have passed the House.

Carter hopes to use revenues from the tax to finance his entire $142 billion program to decrease U.S. reliance on imported oil in what he has called one of the largest and most expensive peacetime efforts ever undertaken.

Senate action is also contemplated on legislation to set up a National Energy Mobilization Board such as the one proposed by the president to oversee major energy projects and to cut federal red tape.

Cox elected president of Old Settlers unit

STANTON — Morgan Cox has been elected president of the 1980 Martin County Old Settlers Reunion Association while Jo Jon Cox will continue in her role as secretary-treasurer of the organization.

The J.P. Stroud family had the most members present, 23. Two persons shared the honor of having lived in Martin County the longest. Lila Flanagan and Mrs. Morgan (Beulah Mae) Hall both came here in 1902.

Haislip's Dry Goods won an award for the best business window display. Stanton Flowers claimed a prize for displaying the best float in the downtown parade.

The Mystery Rider was identified as Sammy Yates. His identity didn't remain a mystery very long — he was identified by Matt Welch.

The 'best-dressed' man in a vintage costume was adjudged to be James Eiland. Crystal Webb was similarly honored among the women while Will Miller and May Wetsel were declared the best-dressed boy and girl.

APPOINTED — Malcolm J. Yes, you can buy new Gustol™ now!

Now there's a cotton insecticide additive that makes sure worms eat your insecticide.

New Gustol is the spray tank additive specially formulated for use with a viral insecticide like Elcar® and B.t. insecticides like Thuricide®.

Biological insecticides must be eaten to be effective. And Gustol makes sure bollworms and budworms eat your insecticide. Not just a little but a lot. When that happens, you know your insecticide is going to do what you sprayed it to do. Kill worms.

This is no fluke. Gustol has been researched and put through extensive testing for the past three years by Sandoz, a company that never introduces a product until tests prove it works!

Right now, the worms are here. So right now is the time to order Gustol from your ag supplier.

Remember, when the worms aren't eating your insecticide, they're eating your cotton.

(Use pesticides effectively. Read and follow label directions carefully.)

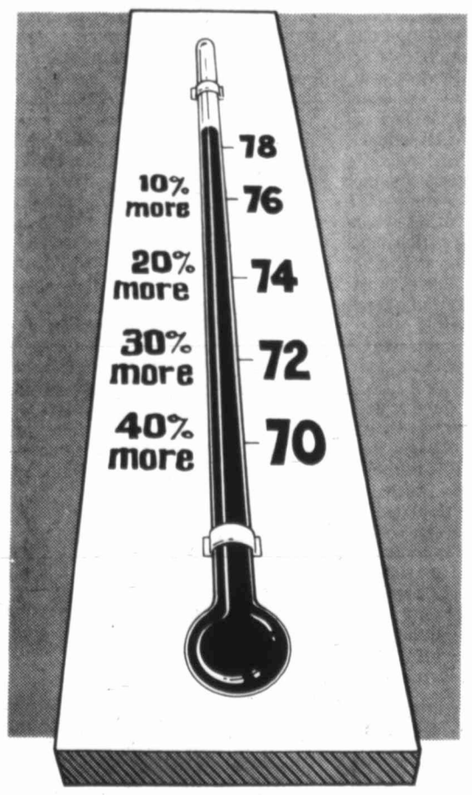
Try 78° this summer. You'll save on your electric bill.



Texas Electric recommends a setting of 78° or higher for energy efficiency. The lower you set your thermostat, the more energy you use.

For example, if you keep the temperature at 76°, the energy used by your air conditioner will be 10% more; at 74°, 20% more, and so on.

A 78° setting may be higher than you're used to, but when its 90° or more outside, you'll still be comfortable inside. But the best part is that you'll notice a difference on your summer electric bills.

There are a lot of other ways you can cut down on summer energy use. For some good ideas, call Texas Electric and ask for our free TIPS booklet. Or, ask for it on the comment section of your next electric bill.

The way we see it, the more you know about using . . . and saving . . . energy, the better.

Teachers need all help they can get

Teachers have every right to hold their profession in high esteem. They have to groom themselves carefully for a job that, more often than not, is very difficult — made that way by students who do not wish to be enlightened, school trustees who invariably are attentive to the complaints of the taxpayers and parents who are prone to regard them as little more than high-priced baby sitters.

The teachers in Texas are getting more militant, cognizant of the fact that no one is going to improve their standard of life unless they themselves take collective action. In short, the Texas teachers argue they are grossly underpaid and they want something done about the problem.

RECENT STATISTICS show that teachers' pay in this state rank 33rd nationally, and that the average annual salary is about $2,000 less than the national average.

For a state that is prone to brag about its prosperity and its number of millionaires, it appears to have done little to protect one of its most valuable assets.

If the aforementioned figures are right, and there is no reason to doubt them, it is logical to assume the same ratio of financial emphasis is placed on education in general.

Every resident of the state has cause to feel concern, most particularly every parent with a child in a public school.

There's an old saying: You get what you pay for. In this case, the public gets more than it pays for, obviously, because the caliber of teaching in Texas remains surprisingly high.

THE FACT that Texas does so poorly by its teachers in the way of renumeration, however, complicates the job of administrators who each year must not only must try to retain a system's top teachers but recruit new talent as well.

The best school systems invariably are those whose teachers benefit from a living wage and which benefit from constructive input on the part of friends of the school.

The threat of Texas teachers to organize if their financial needs are not met has become very real. Their leaders feel that unionism (and they dislike that work very much) is the only way to get the public to focus attention on their problems and recognize their needs for increased pay.

It behooves us all to turn an attentive ear to the problem and furthermore to try and solve it.

Confidence drain

Evans, Novak

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey's feeling for the Soviet Union has switched from cold to warm during five years of fumbling American foreign policy, a sweetening up that is sour news for the West.

The change is particularly disturbing because it coincides with growing hostility for the U.S. throughout the Moslem Middle East. It also underlines once again the lack of confidence in the U.S. that has shaken its allies everywhere.

The switch was documented in an exclusive interview with Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit that was bluntly frank. The left-leaning head of government credited the "continuity and stability" of Soviet policy, not the punitive anti-Turkish measures of the U.S., for what he called the "different attitude" of Turkish public opinion toward the Soviet superpower along Turkey's 500-mile northern border.

"There has developed a lot of mutual confidence" between Moscow and Ankara, Ecevit told us over tea and cakes in his suburban, walk-up apartment. We now feel quite secure in this region, although it took long years of patience with the Soviet Union to convince our people that they (Moscow) have adopted a different attitude."

SKEPTICS WOULD never agree that the "different attitude" claimed by Ecevit is more than skin deep, if that. Indeed, illicit gunrunning from communist Bulgaria aimed at arming scores of radical-left terrorists and guerrilla groups points the other way: to the continuing, long-range Soviet objective here to replace American influence with its own.

What has changed is Washington. On his recent tour of the U.S. to discuss modernizing the antiquated weapons of NATO's largest European army, Turkish Gen. Kenan Erven was not amused to see the M-48 tank of Korean War vintage on display in the famous museum for old, forgotten tanks at Fort Knox. The M-48 is still Turkey's main battle tank, and it is a tin toy compared to the dreadnaughts across the border in Russia and Bulgaria.

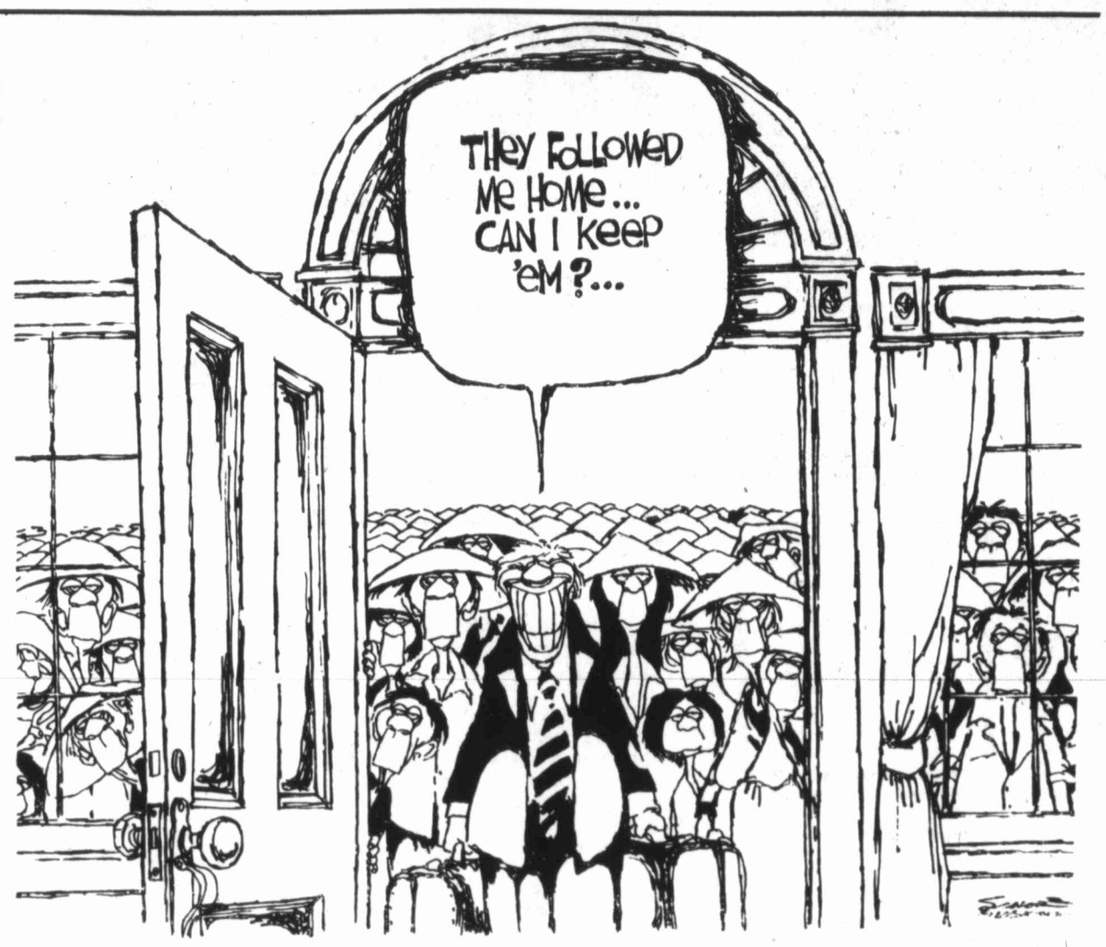
The tin toy that passes for a tank is not unique here. Turkey's air defense still depends on optically-targeted anti-aircraft guns — there are no Hawks, Red Eyes or Vulcans here.

For defense against attacking tanks, the wire-guided TOW anti-tank missile, which the U.S. gave to Israel over six years ago, has not been seen in Turkey. The air force here still flies the F-86 and F-100; the backbone of its navy is still the Fletcher-class destroyer, retired from the U.S. Navy many years ago.

Modernizing this force at huge but belated cost is a top priority of the U.S. embassy, but the Turkish government is losing confidence in President Carter's political follow through, both with Congress and his own bureaucracy.

This partly accounts for Ecevit's cautious reaction to Jimmy Carter's pressure for approval to fly the U-2 through Turkish air space to help the U.S. verify Moscow's compliance with SALT II. "The U.S. wants us to risk Soviet anger," one high Turkish official privately told the U.S. embassy, "at the bottom of our defense capability."

THIS EXAMPLE of American insensitivities to Turkish national pride is a clashing contrast to the smart Soviet game being played here. Gone are the days when Moscow threatened Turkey in its quest for bases on the Bosporus. Instead of threats, Moscow is giving Turkey highly visible aid in joint industrial projects, in the sale of Soviet-produced electricity and in many other energy-related fields.



Pregnancy and migraine pose problem

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 26-year-old woman in my fifth month of pregnancy. I have severe migraine headaches. Until becoming pregnant my doctor gave me medicine for pain and to ease the vision disturbances. Now all I can take is Tylenol (acetominophen). My pain is unbearable, lasting sometimes six or seven days. My doctors are helpless. Is ther anything I can do that you know of? — Mrs. P.O.

It's a difficult problem but I'm sure you realize the need to avoid the usual migraine headache medicines during pregnancy. I hope that by the time you read this your migraine attacks will have subsided. Many women find this happens during the last three months.

For you especially, but for anyone who suffers migraine headache, I can suggest a few things to try. Diet can help. Avoid caffeine products (coffee, colas etc.), also MSG (tenderizers), nitrate-cured foods, alcohol, red wine, and cheeses. Other approaches include meditation or biofeedback technique. The latter is becoming popular, but unfortunately is not widely available. If there is a headache clinic nearby contact people there to find if there are facilities near you. Also, inhalation of oxygen for 10 minutes at a time has been tried. These methods will not hurt the fetus and may give you some relief.

Dear Dr. Ruble: What is the rule on alcohol for the person who has gout? — M.M.

A drinking spree can cause a gout attack. All alcoholic beverage should be avoided, but especially beers, ales, and wines. Distilled alcoholic beverages in moderation seem to have little effect on gout. See the booklet, "Gout — The Modern Way to Stop It." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am writing about my 11-year-old granddaughter. She has started getting bladder infections. Could the pickle juice she drinks be a cause? I tell her it's not good for her, but she drinks it all the time. Or could the soap she uses in her bath cause it? — Mrs. M.K.

Besides bath soaps, one has to consider tight nylon panties or pantyhose, a fact I've mentioned before here. It's important, too, that girls be taught good hygiene of the perineal area — between the vagina and the anus. Intestinal bacteria can easily invade the bladder because of the short urethra (urinary outlet) in females.

Some youngsters add to the problem by not emptying the bladder when they feel the urge. They may be embarrassed to ask the teacher to leave the classroom, or they delay so as not to interrupt play. Youngsters, especially those prone to bladder infection, should void regularly (every three or four hours, if possible). This reduces the time the urine has to be a convenient host to various infecting organisms.

Pickle juice is not a cause of bladder infection. But along this line I suggest you try to entice her with a pretty shade of cranberry juice. That can actually help her bladder by helping control urine acid and provide a less hospitable environment for bacteria.

Dear. Dr. Ruble: What are the advantages of taking dolomite and bone meal tablets to help the pains one gets in the legs after walking any distance? I am 81 and in otherwise good health. I am taking high blood pressure medicine. — Mrs. W.H.G.

I doubt that either the dolomite (a mineral) or the bone meal tablets will help your leg problem, which is likely one of circulation. Some of this is to be expected at your age. If the pain is located in the calf and is relieved by rest, a circulation problem is probably the cause.

Dear. Dr. Ruble: I am quite sure that the following question is impossible to answer. Will you try? I am 63 and still enjoy a suntan during the summer. Who discovered tanning of the skin for the sun? — R.C.

My best guess would be Adam and Eve. That's my question of the week.

Parties speak same language

They say a bad penny always turns up. It's that way with an international problem faced by the United States — Korean partition.

During President Carter's recent trip to Tokyo, the call went out for new talks on the peninsula's reunification.

Prospects of progress are believed to have improved of late as a consequence of U.S.-China reapprochement. The strengthening of those ties is said to have left North Korea somewhat isolated.

That may well be. Under any circumstances there would appear to be nothing lost in resuming discussions. And at least both major parties speak the same language — not only in the linguistic sense but politically.

Both Pyongyang and Seoul know all about authoritarian regimes.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I long so much for peace and love and yet I feel so alone and hopeless. I'm not worth anything, and am on the verge of suicide. Why should I not end it all? — G.G.E.

DEAR G.G.E.: One reason you should not end it all is because life does not need to be the way you have found it. There is hope, even if you find that difficult to believe right now.

Where is hope to be found? It is to be found in God. I suspect you have sought happiness in life, and have only been disappointed. But God created you and wants to show you what it means to be His child. The Bible tells us an amazing thing — that God loves us. Just think about that for a minute. What if it is true that God loves you? And what if you could know for sure that He loved you? Wouldn't that make a difference in your life?

Of course it would! If God loves you, it means you are worth something — you are important and significant. If God loves you, it means you are not alone, because He has said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5). If God loves you there is hope for the future; we know we are in His hands and nothing "shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Romans 8:39).

But how do I know God loves me and you? I know it because God has demonstrated His love to us. He did this by sending His Son into the world to die for our sins. Yes, God was willing to let His Son undergo the suffering and loneliness of the Cross, so you and I could be saved and forgiven.

I invite you to turn to Christ and let Him come into your life. Then get to know God's people in a church where Christ is preached. God can help you and wants to.

Disenchanted

Around the rim

Marie Homeyer

Up until last Sunday I had always enjoyed flying. But no longer.

By the time I got off the ground last Monday morning, I was so frustrated and angry that the thrill of flying above the clouds no longer appealed to me.

When I said Monday morning I meant early Monday morning. I was supposed to take off Sunday night at 9:40. My plane left the ground at 12:05 a.m. Monday. At about 20 minutes before the plane was supposed to depart an employee for Continental Airlines came over the intercom to tell the passengers bound for Midland-Odessa that our plane would be delayed until 11:15.

TERRIFIC, I thought. I've been here at Houston Inter-contintental Airport since 8:30, an hour ahead of departure time was recommended by airport officials. Now, you're telling me that I have to sit here another hour and a half!

I was not alone in my anguish. A couple sitting next to me were waiting to put their young son on the plane — the second person they would be putting on a plane that day. They were just about as overjoyed as I to here the news. Now they could say that they really had spent all day in an airport! But their main concern was their son. Already tired from a long day, he would have to sit and wait some more and arrive at his destination late. They just knew he would never get there awake. And they were right. Then there were those like me who had to get to a phone fast to call those coming to pick us up at the airport. But I missed my ride by about five minutes and he too had to wait in an airport for two hours or more.

It really upset me and the matter was made worse when finally the airplane landed when we were supposed to be taking off and 15 minutes later they finally let us board the plane. Then it was a small version—the kind where you barely have room to put your legs much less any carry on luggage you might have with you. We had to sit in those cramped quarters for another 35 minutes for who knows what reason. By that time all I wanted was to get to Midland!

The plane finally landed in Midland at 1 a.m. For most of the passengers it was the end of their journey. For many others it was just a layover for the final leg of their journey to El Paso and Tuscon, Ariz. And for the others like myself, it was the end of the plane ride by the beginning of the car ride back home.

I finally crawled into my bed at 2:45 a.m. Monday. I was so exhausted I fell asleep as soon my head hit the pillow. The next thing I knew it was 7 a.m. and time to get up for a full day's work.

Thanks alot, airline, I'll think twice about flying again.

System too tough

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Now and then, a brave soul will step out of the shadows of government, stand in the glare of publicity and declare the truth to all who will listen. This may lay him open to the most depressing harassments, for our society has not yet outgrown the hoodlum ethos, which honors the man who covers up his boss's deviousness above the employee who exposes it. Here is the story of two men who dared to speak up.

Larry Brady: He is a Commerce Department official who was rash enough to give a congressional committee his honest opinion about the Carter administration's dealings with the Soviet Union. His boss, Stanley Marcuss, had just finished painting a rosy picture of the export office's control over what is sold to the Russians.

As we reported earlier, Brady told the committee that the export office was approving sales to the Soviets of sophisticated computers and other technology that could be diverted to military purposes. The testimony, taken in secret, has not yet been released to the public.

FOR GIVING Congress testimony that contradicted the official line, Brady already has been reprimanded, transferred and advised to stop talking to congressmen or reporters.

Brady was acting director of the export office when he was called as a witness. He entered a mild demurrer to his superior's testimony, stating that in his opinion the safeguards against military use of American imports were not adequate.

Next day, when Brandy resumed his closed-door testimony, he told the congressmen he had been called that morning by Marcuss, who "indicated he was a little uptight with the remark I had made last night about safeguards."

Chairman Richard Ichord, D-Mo., asserted the committee's right to get straight testimony from government witnesses. He noted that the Office of Management and Budget had threatened several witnesses during the export hearings. Such threats, he warned, "could very well be the subject of separate hearings."

Perhaps emboldened by his encouragement, Brady proceeded to speak frankly: The export control system, he said, "is a total shambles." Shortly after his heretical testimony, he was bounced from his job. Yet sources told our associate Dale Van Atta that Brady had been considered "very competent" until he testified so forthrightly.

Brady wasn't actually fired. He was given the post of deputy director of the export control unit — but only on condition that he not talk to Congress or the press without prior clearance from his higher-ups. Our sources say he hasn't yet agreed to this condition.

When we contacted him, Brady said he couldn't comment on either his secret congressional testimony or his present job situation.

Dennis Bossard: He was a court stenographer who refused to be bullied into lying to cover up an improper remark by U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt. For defying the judge and sticking to the truth, Bossard was fired.

As we reported earlier, Judge Pratt, aware of the impropriety of a remark he had made on the bench, sent his secretary to persuade Bossard to delete the remark from his transcript of the court proceedings. Destroying court records happens to be a felony, and Bossard quite rightly refused the request. Instead, he blew the whistle on Pratt.

During the subsequent FBI investigation of the incident, Pratt denied having an incriminating conversation with Bossard — unaware that the court reporter had secretly taped the conversation. Despite the damning evidence of the tape, both Pratt and his secretary got off scot free.

Bossard was not so lucky. Though he taped the conversation for his own protection and the tape was turned over to the FBI, he was left to the mercy of the judge's wrath.

PRATT ANGRILY notified Bossard's boss that he no longer would allow the stenographer to work in his courtroom. The judge cited other reasons for his action, but court sources told our associate Gary Cohn there was no doubt Pratt was taking vengeance on Bossard.

Then one of Pratt's buddies, Judge John Lewis Smith, Jr., also ruled that Bossard would not be allowed in his courtroom. And another, Judge Oliver Gasch, grilled court employees about Bossard and turned the results of his "investigation" over to Pratt.

The court clerk, James Davey, finally told Bossard he was fired because he had taped the embarrassing conversation with Pratt. still hoping the system works. Bossard has filed an appeal with Chief Justice William B. Bryant of the Washington, D.C. district. Bryant has put Bossard back on the payroll for the time being until he makes his final decision in the next few weeks.

WASHINGTON WHIRL — Older Americans are the innocent victims of bureaucratic lassitude at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and eight senators have sent a strongly worded protest to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano demanding action. The senators, including Califano's old friend Teddy Kennedy, complain that eight months after passage of the Older Americans Act HEW's paper shufflers still haven't produced regulations to implement the law. Without these regulations for guidance, the state and local governments that administer the act's programs can't submit proper applications for federal aid — due August 15. The elderly will be the losers.

Are our secret nuclear arsenals safe from terrorist attack? A good question — but one that no one has the answer to.

People have habit of getting older

Here's another population trend for you.

The Census Bureau reports a sharp jump in the number of cohabiting unmarried American couples. A study found the number of "households which contain two unrelated adults of opposite sexes" has more than doubled in the first eight years of the decade to 1.1 million households. Still, however, a small fraction of the 48 million households established on the basis of traditional wedlock.

And it is largely a youth phenomenon, as anyone observing changing lifestyles of recent years, either directly or as reflected in the popular media, might suspect. Among people under 25 years old, unmarried cohabitation has not merely doubled but shot up by eightfold.

Which might minimize the significance of the trend. Twenty-five-year-olds have a tendency, however, to become 30-year-olds and then 40-year-olds. If they should carry on in any great numbers current preferences in living arrangements, a permanent shift in patterns of personal relationships could be under way.

Another Aggie tradition changes

HOUSTON (AP) — When the Corps of Cadets returns to Texas A&M University this fall, something will be different.

Women will be allowed to wear senior boots, with spurs.

Although it may not sound like much, it is a strong signal to Aggies-women' advancement has hit the College Station campus.

Graduates contacted Monday afternoon were mildly surprised, but most said they expected it.

"I think they'll look a little silly," one said, who later didn't want to be quoted. "That's not with tradition."

U.S. Army Col. James R. Woodall, commandant of the Corps, said the policy changed last month, but no official announcement was made.

"We decided it was time to go ahead and make a decision," he said.

A student committee studying problems of women in the Corps suggested the matter be referred to another committee. But he short-circuited the student group and decided, he said, to ahead with the change.

"I think the girls anticipated it," he said. "I know they wanted it."

Women- first allowed in the military group in 1974- have been making changes, demanding that they be treated equally.

A lawsuit is still pending against the university because women are not allowed in some honor organizations of the Corps, including the band, the mounted cavalry and the Ross Volunteers, which is the honor guard for Texas' governor.

Woodall said he thought all the women who will be seniors already have their boots- female riding boots- and will order the riding pants and gaucho skirts to go with them.

When the Corps is parading or in formation, the colonel said in a telephone interview, they will wear the skirts.

Few outsiders know about the change, so he's received little reaction.

"I really don't care," said John West, who graduated in the late '50s and now works for A&M's office of public information.

"The Corps is not what it used to be." It was an advantage, he said, not to have any girls on campus.

Women were officially allowed at A&M in 1963, and the Corps became optional for men in 1965.

Boots first became part of the uniform sometime after World War I, when A&M trained cavalary units. In the 1920s they became a "senior privilege" and so became the envy of all the underclassmen.

Now about 60 cadets in the 1,850-member Corps are women, Woodall said, and entitled to senior privileges.

A regent of A&M, Dr. John B. Coleman of Houston, was glad to hear of the change.

He said both Woodall and A&M's president, Jarvis Miller, had promised the board of regents the change would be coming.

Official policy of the university does not allow discrimination against women, he said.

Organizations like the honor guard, he said, might be considered social and therefore not under the school's policy. This change might not help A&M win the lawsuit, Coleman said, but it will aid the school.

"I think it will help them as far as image is concerned," said the physician, who did not attend A&M.

Most alumni, he said, were proud women are on campus and want to make them feel welcome.

Then he laughed. "They wish like hell women had been there when they were there."

One Aggie who graduated in 1941, Bernie Richardson of Houston, said, "I see nothing wrong with them wearing boots if they're going to be in the Corps- if they're seniors."

But a more recent graduate of A&M, Shane Hennum of Houston, said it will make a difference.

"The boots will create a bigger rift between male and female in the Corps," said Hennum, who graduated in 1978 after four years in the organization.

The women will lose more than they'll gain, he said.

"I don't they'll look good in boots," he said. "I may joke about it and laugh with my friends, but deep down I'll be embarrassed."

He and some of his friends, he said, are considering taking down their boots- displayed in their homes- and returning them to the school.

Each cadet must buy his boots, either new or used, and some have been passed down as many as eight times. Now a custom made pair of boots is about $300, but the women's boots are less expensive because they're not custom made.

Hennum said the older graduates just don't know how serious the change is. He thinks it will destroy the Corps.

But some current cadets disagree.

"It's not creating more hatred," said Dillard Stone, assistant cadet commander of the Corps. "It's creating more amusement."

The boots look odd, he said, but change is part of any organization.

Bill Dugat, student commanader of the Corps, compared it to changes at the military academies.

"They took to the change with grunts and groans, but learned it was good."

"We'll be optimistic about it," Dugat said.

Thermostats don't tell all

DALLAS (AP) — Perhaps it's only fitting, but the Dallas Police Headquarters Building might have been the only public place that complied Monday with President Carter's directive that thermostats be set at 78 degrees.

A spot check showed settings in the building at the proper mark, even though actual thermometer readings generally registered 73 to 74 degrees.

At City Hall, readings were around 75 degrees, but cold air blowing from air conditioning outlets was measured at 66 degrees.

Several retail store operators said they would eventually comply with Carter's directive, aimed at saving energy.

"It doesn't make that much difference," said David Gore, manager of the Old Spaghetti Warehouse restaurant. "Especially if you have fans."

ALL BORN AT HOME — Mrs. Ellen Donnelly is surrounded by her four children who were all born at home instead of at a hospital. Mrs. Donnelly, a Philadelphia nurse, thinks the sterile atmosphere of a traditional delivery room is dehumanizing. Her children, clockwise from front are: Carol, 17 mos.; Ellen, 4; Ann, 3 and Clare, 5.

'We had a big party'.

Home births celebrated

By CARL DIORIO
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mary Ellen Donnelly, a nurse, didn't like doctors talking about golf in the delivery room.

"I mean, here is a woman having one of her prime experiences in life and they were discussing their golf scores," Mrs. Donnelly said. "It's dehumanizing. I just knew I needed something else."

So John and Mary Ellen Donnelly's four daughters all were born at home. "We had a big party. It was great," Mrs. Donnelly recalled, smiling.

At-home births are more frequent nowadays, according to the American Hospital Association. The Donnellys are typical of prospective parents who are shunning the stark sterility of the delivery room for the warm comfort of home.

In response, some hospitals offer "birthing rooms" replete with fine furnishings and other amenities.

"Having a baby is not being sick," says Dr. John Rutt of Gordonville, Pa. Rutt operates a birthing unit in his medical offices, where women and family gather for the big event — then go home within a few hours of delivery.

The birth room is comfortably furnished. There are draperies on the windows, rugs on the floors. Lighting is bright but not harsh.

"Everything goes so much smoother here than in a hospital," Rutt said in an interview. "The mother is more relaxed."

Especially when the bill arrives. Rutt charges only $400 for deliveries, while bills for conventional three-day hospital maternity stays range upwards of $1,200.

Among Pennsylvania's Amish, home baby births are a long-standing tradition. Members of the religious sect place a high value on personal privacy and visit hospitals with reluctance.

Those who oppose home birth as primitive and dangerous "don't understand that you're merely trading one set of risks for another," says Mrs. Donnelly.

"There are risks in a hospital. The chances of infection are much less at home. There are more germs in a hospital because there are a lot of sick people there."

The American Hospital Association reports 97 percent of all U.S. births took place in hospitals in 1967. In 1977, the most recent year for which figures are available, the number was down to 91 percent, the association says.

But Nancy Bennett, spokeswoman for the Association for Childbirths at Home International, based in Cerritos, Calif., estimates that 15 percent of all deliveries are home births.

"A lot of home births do not get reported," Ms. Bennett said. "People just do not want to get that involved in red tape."

The trend toward home deliveries may diminish as more hospitals bring a little bit of home into the delivery room, some observers believe.

Bryn Mawr Hospital in suburban Philadelphia allows maternity patients and their babies to go home a few hours after giving birth if the attending physician approves.

"For a long time I found hospital delivery rooms totally unrealistic," says Dr. John Carpenter, who talked Bryn Mawr officials into setting up a "birthing unit" featuring posh carpets, drapes, FM radio — even champagne glasses to toast the baby's arrival.

Dr. Carpenter no longer delivers babies at home because he thinks the hospital's birthing room is safer but still cozy. About 15 percent of his hospital maternity patients go home a few hours after delivery.

"This answers all my dreams," he said. "There are still couples who will have their babies at home and they will be delivered by midwives. But I feel this is ideal."

When her fourth daughter was born at home, Mrs. Donnelly recalled, "her older sisters wanted to put on their velvet dresses because it was the day the baby was to be born.

"It's 6 o'clock in the morning and they're all running around the house in long dresses. It was a big party. I think it ought to be a family affair. After all, she's their sister just like she's my daughter."

Mrs. Donnelly, 35, is five months pregnant. Another party is planned.

Sister and her 'fresh' husband should move

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: My sister is 22, her husband is 18. They have been married two years and now live with us.

Here is my problem. When I'm in the house alone with him, he tries to get close to me and his hands start to roam.

Once when my sister, me and him were watching television, he started getting fresh after my sister fell asleep.

Every time I tell my sister about what is happening, she doesn't believe me.

Please tell me what I should do. — Amy, Dixon, Ill.

Amy: It's obvious that your sister and her husband should not be living in your family's house.

Tell your parents what is happening. Father needs to have a conference with your sister and brother-in-law and to assist them in finding new living quarters.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Abby

Slob Story

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother had been a widow for a long time. About two years ago she married a nice-looking, quiet man none of us knew. They live only a few miles from us but we never visit them, and neither do any of her other four children who live in this area. The reason is one you will probably not believe: Mom's husband smells like he hasn't had a bath in 50 years! I am not kidding. Their house is an absolute pigsty; every piece of furniture in the place smells to high heaven. Nobody cares to eat or drink in their house because the smell spoils their appetite.

Mom was in the hospital for three weeks recently, and every day we'd take her husband to the hospital with us (it's a 25-mile drive). He smelled so bad we had to keep all the car windows open.

My husband even told him flat out that people were complaining, and to please clean himself up, but he got mad and refused to do anything about it.

The merchants in town complain about him, but they can't keep him out. They spray after he leaves. Abby, what can we do?

HOLDING OUR NOSES IN W. VA.

DEAR HOLDING: The man must be mentally ill. And his wife has either lost her sense of smell or she's as sick as he is. This is a case for a doctor. For goodness' sake, don't just hold your noses; hold a family conference and get some medical advice!

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago, before I met the man I married (I'll call him Bob), he got a girl pregnant. Bob was in the service in San Diego at the time.

The girl went to a home for unwed mothers in Seattle, had the baby (a girl) and gave it up for adoption. She named Bob as the baby's father.

My questions: When this child grows up, do we have any responsibility for her? Can she locate us if whe wants to? Does she have any claim on my husband's estate if he dies before I do?

We have children of our own. Our wills read: "To all our surviving children...." Is this illegitimate daughter considered a surviving child of my husband's?

Bob told me that he has no real proof that this is really his child. He said he didn't love the girl, but he did sleep with her one weekend exactly nine months before the baby was born, so he could be the father.

Where do we stand?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: You could be standing right behind the eight ball — or in a safety zone, depending on what state you live in. (The laws differ.) Your questions are intelligent. Consult a lawyer. It could be the best investment you ever made.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

LVNs and RNs invited

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., the second Tuesday of the month, in the Reference Library of the Horace Garrett Building at Howard College.

Gold at record price

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit a record price of $297.125 an ounce in London today, and there was speculation it would leap the $300 hurdle soon. The dollar continued to take a beating amid skepticism that President Carter will be able to implement his energy policies.

The price of gold was $4.25 above the previous all-time mark of $292.875 recorded in Zurich at the close of trading Monday.

Decayed bodies found

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Owners of a defunct midtown Kansas City mortuary "apparently just walked away," leaving 31 decaying bodies stacked in caskets and lying on tables for as long as a year, health authorities say.

"In the basement, there were caskets stacked three high," said City Health Director Dr. Richard Biery, who with other authorities entered the abandoned Kansas City Mortuary Service on Monday.

He said legal proceedings against the mortuary began last year when the Missouri Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors sought legal authority to revoke the license of Don Coldsnow, the home's owner.

Coldsnow was not immediately available for comment.

Carter meets with citizens

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who says "I've learned my lesson" and will listen more to private citizens, is meeting with their representatives in Congress for the first time since outlining his fresh agenda for energy legislation.

Democratic and Republican congressional leaders were joining Carter at a White House breakfast meeting today. Carter invited them to discuss the proposals he outlined Sunday night and in two appearances Monday.

New restrictions ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, reacting strongly to last spring's atomic scare at Three Mile Island, is calling for new restrictions on the nation's troubled nuclear industry.

Senators voted Monday to shut down, as of June 1, 1980, all nuclear power plants for which a state has no emergency evacuation plan approved by the federal government. As many as 39 of the nation's 70 licensed plants could be affected.

The next showdown in a continuing series of tests on nuclear energy was a Senate vote, arranged for today, on a proposal to declare a six-month moratorium on new construction permits for nuclear power plants.

Inflation forces middle-aged to make tighter retirement plans

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Inflation is a time bomb for Americans in their middle years who just a short while ago may have thought they "had it made" for their retirement.

In the ten years since 1968 the cumulative increase in the Consumer Price Index was 87.4 percent, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics here. In personal terms that means that a couple who retired in 1968 on a comfortable but fixed income of $15,000 would need $28,000 last year to maintain the same 1968 standard of living.

Inflation is affecting persons at all stages of life. But for those in the late 40s and 50s it is especially critical. Unlike younger workers, most breadwinners in the middle years can no longer count on sharply rising incomes. Their earning power has probably peaked and certain expenses, such as children in college, could present severe financial strain.

And it seems the tax man cometh with a bigger bucket each time around.

Not all is dark in this picture. Inflation can work for you as well as against you. Pay may increase along with inflation thus adding to the size of a pension check.

Social Security payments rise with the Consumer Price Index. Values of homes and property can be expected to increase and provide an equity that can be tapped in retirement with the New "reverse" mortgage techniques. And this year if you are 55-plus and sell your house the first $100,000 is tax free.

If you must, you can now work until the new mandatory age limit of 70. According to a recent Louis Harris poll 48 percent of workers age 50 to 64 say they now expect to continue working after 65 — a turnabout from the trend to earlier retirement. Each year of work after 65 adds extra dollars to your future Social Security check.

With all these and other variables most economic experts insist that everyone should take time out well before retirement to take a hard look at where you are now, where you want to go, and make action plans on how to get there. The earlier the better according to Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps who says: "You can't start at age 64. You have to have enough years to make a difference. The more years you allow the less you have to cut back when you are retired."

Smart planning need not be complicated. Concise easy-to-follow guidelines are set down in a 15-page "AIM Guide to Financial Security" one of a professionally-researched series available from Action for Independent Maturity, the nation's largest supplier of pre-retirement planning programs.

A division of the 12-million member American Association of Retired Persons, AIM has nearly a half-million members of its own who for $3 a year receive AIM's Guidebook Series, the lively bi-monthly Dynamic Years magazine and other benefits. These are also included in a field-tested Lecture Series sponsored by employers and community groups.

Five basic steps suggested by the Guidebook to make the future years more golden: (1) Figure your net worth now — how much you own, how much you owe, (2) Compare net income and expenses today with what you estimate your income and expenses will be in retirement, (3) Nail down your sources and amounts of retirement income — and, if not adequate, act now to correct the situation, (4) Plan to preserve what you have accumulated — insurance, savings, property — for yourself and next of kin, and finally, (5) don't just sit there: Take action now to achieve your goals.

AIM, a non-profit organization is offering a free copy of the Financial Security Guide as a public service. Write: AIM, Dept. FS, P.O. Box 2400, Long Beach, CA 90801.

Employers and administrators wanting details on the 8-session AIM Lecture Series should write on their letterhead to AIM, 1909 K Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20049.

She began her probation Dec. 18, 1975 when she entered a guilty plea to forgery.

She remembers Elvis 'as a good human soul'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Linda Thompson says the four years she spent with Elvis Presley at his Graceland Mansion in Memphis showed her what it takes to be a star.

From 1972 to 1976, Miss Thompson lived with Presley. Except for Presley's six-year marriage, his relationship with Miss Thompson was his longest. Insiders say he and Miss Thompson were very close.

"I believe my experiences with Elvis taught me not to be a star," Miss Thompson said in an interview. "I don't want to sacrifice my private life and live the reclusive existence he did.

"You can make so much money that after a while it doesn't mean anything any more," she said.

This fall will mark Miss Thompson's third year on the syndicated television show "Hee Haw." She'll be given more airtime this year, appearing in a new segment as a "farmer's daughter." Kenny Price plays her father.

Speaking to a reporter between takes on the "Hee Haw" set, she said she remembers Presley "as a good human soul.

"When you live with someone that long, he's not just a name on a marquee," she said. "He was special, with a good heart and a good soul. And he had a sense of humor."

LINDA THOMPSON

Presley abused sleeping pills, she said, because he was an insomniac.

"But in no way was he a drug addict," she said. "He never used cocaine and everybody uses it."

Presley has offered the male lead in the movie "A Star is Born" opposite Barbra Streisand, Miss Thompson said, but the role was rejected by Presley's long-time manager, Col. Tom Parker. Kris Kristofferson got it.

"He wanted to prove himself as an actor," she recalled. "He used to laugh at the scripts he got where he sang to cows and things. He did the best he could with the roles he got."

She said they discussed marriage. "We aired it out but decided we were comfortable being together as we were. We discussed children and so forth. We just never set a wedding date."

She and Presley broke up in December 1976 — eight months before he died. At the heart of the breakup, she said, was his reclusive existence. "It was very confining. There was nothing conducive to personal growth."

Judge Gregg disqualifies self from local revocation hearing

Judge Jim Greee of 118th District Court has disqualified himself from the probation revocation hearing of Bobby Marquez on grounds of "over-abundance of caution."

Gregg declined to comment further about his basis for removing himself from the case.

Judge Waylon Holt, of the 134th District Court in Snyder, heard Monday a motion to have Gregg removed from the case filed by Marquez' Lubbock attorney George Gilkerson.

Holt, however, overruled the motion but Gregg disqualified himself anyway from the revocation hearing.

Marquez is on probation for ten years for marijuana possession. New charges stemming from a heroin possession arrest Feb. 19 may be grounds for revocation of his probation.

A new judge will be assigned to the case by Perry Pickett, presiding judge of the Seventh Administrative Judicial District of Texas.

ODESSA — The City of Odessa has run into a slight problem in its promise to offer garbage collection to residents: Eleven of 33 garbage truck drivers employed by the municipality have submitted their resignations, citing low pay and poor working conditions.

City Manager Kerry Sweatt said, however, that garbage collection would not be disrupted. He added that the men who quit were replaced by supervisors and other sanitation department workers.

The garbage collectors in Odessa are paid from $705 to $884 a month.

ONE THAT DIDN'T COUNT — Denise Burcell of Big Spring Savings and Loan races across home plate in action during the championship game in the YMCA — I'm a Pepper Women's Softball Tournament here Sunday — but not before she was tagged out by the San Angelo Weavels' catcher. Big Spring Savings scored often enough to win the championship, however, turning back the Weavels, 6-4. The umpire is Rocky Viera.

Pam Honea clubs HR for win

Big Spring Savings Association, coached by Bill Battle, defeated the San Angelo Weavels, 6-4, to claim first place in the YMCA-I'm-A-Pepper Women's Softball Tournament here Sunday evening.

The tournament was unreeled in torrid weather at Johnny Stone Park.

Pam Honea's home run was the difference in the game for the Big Spring club. It produced three runs in the sixth inning.

Pam later was declared the Most Valuable Player of the tournament and was presented with a trophy donated by Jo-Boy's Restaurant.

The Weavels, sponsored by Dr. Pepper were playing their fourth game in the Sunday matches. Previous to their encounter with Big Spring Savings, they defeated the Lamesa Merchants, 15-4, Bad News Bears, 9-8, and Silver Streak, 14-1.

The two finalists had met prior to Sunday's finals during the Saturday games. BSSA defeated the Weavels, 16-9, putting it in the semi-finals of the winners' bracket. Their defeat over the Lamesa Merchants, with a score of 27-0, put them in the finals with an undefeated record.

The Weavels, Diane Fine, was presented with the Gold Glove trophy for her outstanding fielding as rover.

The Lamesa Merchants received the third place trophy sponsored by Citizen's Federal Credit Union. Bad News Bears placed fourth in the Women's Slow Pitch Tournament.

The other team trophies and first place individual trophies were sponsored by Sheppard Funeral Home, Barber Glass and Mirror, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Rip Griffin Truck Stop and Drinkard Electric.

The tournament was sponsored by the Big Spring YMCA and Dr. Pepper Company. The Women's health center was open for participants in the tournament. All the women and coaches were given an "I'm a Pepper" tee shirt.

Major league roundup

Astros are staggering

By The Associated Press

For the front-running Montreal Expos and Houston Astros ... and the staggering Los Angeles Dodgers, too ... the All-Star break couldn't have come at a more opportune time.

The Expos, with a three-game lead over Chicago and Philadelphia in the National League East, got a two-run homer from Ellis Valentine and two solo shots from Andre Dawson to beat San Diego 4-0 Sunday for their second victory in six games.

The Astros, with a 5½-game edge over Cincinnati in the NL West, were beaten 3-1 by St. Louis, absorbing their eighth loss in nine games.

In the rest of the league, Philadelphia mauled Los Angeles 10-3, Cincinnati beat Chicago 7-1, San Francisco shut out New York 4-0 and, in a night game, it was Pittsburgh 7, Atlanta 3.

"This game is a big lift for us going into the All-Star break," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams after the power of Valentine and Dawson backed the combined five-hit pitching of Scott Sanderson and Elias Sosa.

Cards 3, Astros 1

"I don't know if, with three days off, we'll score more runs when we come back or not, but we do need a rest," Houston Manager Bill Virdon said.

The Astros have managed just 14 runs in nine games and have been shut out three times in that span. The Cardinals got five-hit pitching from rookie John Fulgham, who lost his shutout on a ninth-inning homer by Jose Cruz. Mike Phillips' single drove home the Cards' winning run in the seventh.

Phils 10, Dodgers 3

"This may be what we all need," Tom Lasorda, manager of Los Angeles and the National League All-Stars, said of the three-day break. It'll give the Dodgers a chance to mull over Philadelphia's eight-run third inning that dropped them 21 games under .500.

Bob Boone and Del Unser drove home two runs apiece for the Phillies. The Dodgers' runs came on homers by Steve Yeager and Steve Garvey.

Giants 4, Mets 0

Mike Ivie and Marc Hill homered while Ed Whitson, Phil Nastu and Pedro Borbon combined on an eight-hitter for San Francisco to halt the Mets' five-game winning streak, their longest of the year. Ivie also doubled home a San Francisco run.

Pirates 7, Braves 3

Willie Stargell and Bill Robinson hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning, the eighth time this season the Pirates have managed the feat. Four Pirate hurlers combined on a three-hitter, with Jim Bibby getting the victory.

Reds 3, Cubs 1

Cincinnati Shortstop Dave Concepcion, who had begged out of the All-Star Game because of leg miseries — he says he has a turned ankle and a groin pull — drove in four runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly to help Tom Seaver win his seventh straight game.

The Reds got three runs off Chicago's Rick Reuschel in the first inning, two on Ray Knight's double. Concepcion hit a three-run homer in the fourth and added his sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Red Sox 3, A's 2

Boston scored two runs in the ninth inning on only one hit, a leadoff single by Jim Rice, to come from behind and edge Oakland. It was the A's 20th loss in 23 games.

Rice led off with a single and Carl Yastrzemski hit a grounder to third. A's shortstop Dave Chalk then bobbled a grounder, loading the bases, and Carlton Fisk's forceout sent home the tying run.

Butch Hobson grounded to third, but Jim Essian, attempting a force play, threw wide of the plate, allowing pinch-runner Jim Dwyer to score the winning run.

Orioles 6, Mariners 1

Ken Singleton drove in three runs with a double and a two-run homer and Dennis Martinez threw a four-hitter to give Baltimore its victory over Seattle.

Singleton's home run in the fifth gave Baltimore a 4-0 lead.

Angels 4, Yankees 3

Bobby Grich slammed a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to boost California over New York.

It was the second straight game in which California came from behind in the final inning to beat the Yankees. New York had taken a 4-0 lead with two-run homers by Chris Chambliss in the first inning and Jim Spencer in the second.

Royals 4, Rangers 3

Run-scoring doubles by Todd Cruz and George Scott backed Paul Splittorff's five-hitter as Kansas City edged Texas.

The victory snapped the Royals' seven-game losing streak and was only the second in Kansas City's last 15 games.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 4

A grand slam home run by Dave Edwards and John Castino's three-run double powered Minnesota over Toronto. The Twins also got a solo homer from Butch Wynegar, his sixth of the year.

Castino's double came in the fifth inning off reliever Balor Moore.

Dibbs' biggest check

Solomon folds in heat

NEW YORK (AP) — It was supposed to be a battle, the sort of drawn-out affair you'd expect from two guys who love the baseline. People were taking bets on how long it would carry on.

But Eddie Dibbs needed just over 1½ hours Sunday to wipe out his old pal Harold Solomon 7-6, 6-1 in the final of the Forest Hills Invitational.

He had help.

Solomon folded in the heat and humidity, and Dibbs won the biggest tournament paycheck of his career — $100,000.

Solomon had beaten Dibbs in the very first match of the round-robin tournament, for the first time in five years. The two are frequently compared. They're both little — Dibbs 5-foot-7 and Solomon 5-6. And they're both from the Miami area. And they both like clay courts.

But Dibbs is the more athletic. He is more aggressive and a better server. Solomon is more patient. Both are criticized sometimes by those who don't like long rallies. Actually, both volleyed more this week than usual.

Both served well. Dibbs got in 78.5 percent of his first serves, Solomon 69.7 percent.

What really mattered though was the heat. Dibbs was able to pass. And Solomon kept overhitting. "About every other point I couldn't be concerned with what was going on on-court. I just had to be concerned with breathing," he said.

His cramps began when he was leading 6-5, 30-0 on serve in the first set. Then the right hand started to go, and before long it was both feet and his right leg.

He lost the first-set tiebreaker 0-7. But he kept playing. The match was delayed briefly at a changeover at 4-1 in the second set. A trainer and doctor were summoned. But Solomon insisted he could play.

"There was never a thought of stopping the match, not a $140,000 match," said Paul Cohen, Solomon's coach. Solomon's runner-up share was $40,000.

"I was tired, too," Dibbs said. "It's hot as hell out there. I just got a second wind."

The final sold 5,715 tickets for a total attendance of 44,252 in the week-long tournament. That's well below what the 12,000-seat stadium could have held and lower than last year's total of 69,000.

11 Under par wins tourney

A team consisting of Nile Cole, T.Y. Young, James Balios and B.M. Oliver won first place in the Big Spring Golf Association's Louisiana Draw Tournament held at Comanche Trail Golf Course Sunday, piecing together an 11-under-par 60.

Finishing a stroke off the pace was the foursome composed of Bernard Rains, John Newton, Jim Ward and Jim McCain.

Two teams tied for third place, each with a score of 62. One included Soldan, Kozma, Petty and Sharpnack, the other consisted of Murphy, Hamilton, Stewart and Fletcher.

Yanks dominate games

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The United States set a dangerous precedence of excellence in the VIII Pan American Games, which ended Sunday.

Regardless of the accomplishments of future American athletes or the overall strength and improvement in the U.S. amateur athletic programs, their achievements in Pan American Games yet to come always will be measured against the overwhelming, record-shattering U.S. victory in this edition of the hemispheric Olympics.

It's like bring home a straight-A report card; now people will expect A's all the time.

But future Pan American Games will be harder, not easier, for the United States.

Emphasis on athletic competition is increasing at a furious rate through the entire Western Hemisphere.

Winner grew up in poverty

Hardly fits the image

MILWAUKEE (AP)- A typical member of the new wave on the Professional Golfers Association tour is a blond, bronzed young golfer who learned the game as a teenager at a country club and honed his game at a university in the South or West.

Then there is Calvin Peete.

Black and not all that young — he will be 36 Wednesday — Peete grew up in poverty on a Florida farm, ninth of 19 children his father had in two marriages. He quit school after eighth grade to help out by selling clothes and trinkets to migrant workers, and never played golf until he was 23.

That's why Peete felt a special feeling of accomplishment as he strode the 18th fairway at Tuckaway Country Club Sunday. He was to birdie the hole, capping a 7-under-par final round 65 for a five-stroke victory in the $200,000 Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

"I knew that after a long, hard struggle, I had finally made it to the top," Peete said of his first tour victory. "If I couldn't make it in golf, it would have been a hard road to make a living."

Peete recorded the lowest final round by a tour winner this year as he finished at 19-under par 269 for 72 holes. That bettered the previous record for this tournament of 270 by Dave Hill in 1976.

Peete, who had never won more than $20,525 in any of his four previous years on the tour, boosted his 1979 earnings to $81,584. He became the second black ever to qualify for the Masters when he tied for 11th in the U.S. Open last month.

Prevails with 19-under-par 269

Victor Regalado, who had started the final round tied for the lead with Ed Dougherty, a stroke ahead of Peete, Lee Trevino and Mike Reid, finished in a second place tie at 274 with Jim Simons and Trevino.

Regalado shot a 71, Trevino a 70 and Simons a 67 Sunday, while Dougherty had a 72 and tied John Lister at 275.

Peete, who taught himself to play golf and studies film of himself to find flaws in his game, credits vastly improved putting for his development this year.

"I'm not considered a long hitter; maybe average or a little below," the 5-foot-10, 165 pound Peete said. "But I'm a pretty good wedge player and my putting was the key this week."

Peete sank birdie putts of 12, 10, and 20 feet, respectively, on his second, third and fifth holes then tapped in a 2½-foot put after a brilliant approach on No.9.

"To be frank, I never thought of winning the tournament until after the ninth hole when I birdied to go four under for the round and 16 under for the tournament," he said.

Peete played his first round of golf in 1964 in Rochester, N.Y., with friends he met on a trinket-selling trip.

"All I remember about the round was getting a par on a par 3 hole on my first round of golf. I was hooked."

Peete joined the tour in 1975 and played in his first tournament here. He was 5-under par after 26 holes, then took a 9 on his 27th and missed the cut. He earned $30.46 here in 1977 and missed the cut here last year.

Cardinals trip Snyder, 5 to 3

The Big Spring Cardinals ran their won-lost baseball record to 17-1 by edging the Snyder All-Stars, 5-3, here Sunday afternoon.

Luis Rodriquez went all the way on the mound for the Cards, surrendering seven hits.

The Red Birds managed only five blows off two Snyder pitchers but used them to good advantage. The Cardinals scored twice in the first inning when Ysa Rubio and Frank Rubio crossed the plate and led from that point on.

Frankie Rubio, Orlando Olague, Larry Mendoza, Rodriquez and Joe Martinez collected the hits for the Cardinals.

Ace trying swift kick

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Everyone knew Russell Erxleben could boot a football high and far, and that's why the New Orleans Saints agreed to pay him $300,000 a year to kick for them. Now he's learning to kick faster.

"I have to do it faster in the National Football League because there are faster players trying to block it," he said after a preseason practice.

Special treams coach Whitey Campbell said Erxleben was getting his punt away in about 2.3 seconds last season. He's down to 2.1 seconds now.

"That doesn't sound like much, but it's definitely important," Erxleben said.

Just as important is the time shaved off his field goal kicking.

"On extra points, we want to get the ball away in 1.1 seconds," Campbell said.

Nuclear violation charged

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal inspectors last week cleared the South Texas nuclear plant of a "dirty" concrete pour, but now another safety violation has been disclosed.

Files show Nuclear Regulatory Commission inspectors issued a violation notice in March for pouring concrete into standing water.

Investigators said Brown & Root Inc., the engineer-contractor for the project, violated its own quality control rules by pouring concrete onto a construction surface with standing water.

Concrete work on two reactor containment buildings has been discontinued since June 23 because of three blank spaces found in a concrete wall. Last week the NRC said a surface littered with debris — previously cited for violation — was cleaned before the concrete was poured.

The investigators, W.G. Hubacek and W.A. Crossman, saib they were on a routine inspection March 22 when they saw preparations for pouring a wall and noticed pools of water covering about 70 percent of the length of the placement and up to one-half inch deep.

They halted the pour until the water was removed with air hoses and brooms.

Veep will lead U.S. delegation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale will lead the U.S. delegation to the international conference on Indochina refugees July 20-21 in Geneva, it was announced Saturday.

"This reflects the importance the United States attaches to international efforts now underway to deal with the serious problem of Indochina refugees," said a White House statement.

The conference was called by the United Nations at the urging of the United States and the six other industrialized countries which held an economic summit in Tokyo last month.

Nuclear age launched by blast in desert

TRINITY SITE, N.M. (AP) — The switch set off a 45-second timing sequence ending with a blast that shattered the quiet of a southern New Mexico desert and gave scientists a hint of the violence their brain-power had unleashed.

Thirty-four years ago the first atomic device was exploded at Trinity Site on what is now part of White Sands Missile Range. It launched the nuclear age — for both war and peace.

The timing switch was thrown at 5:29 a.m. by Joe McKibben, still a nuclear physicist at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

"Very few of us were hoping we could do it. Rather, we were hoping we could not do it. But if it could be done, we wanted to get there first," McKibben said later.

"I heard that thought expressed by several people involved," McKibben said recently. "It was in the context of the time. Remember, we were at war ... a war we didn't start."

The flash of light, the thundering explosion and the towering mushroom cloud rose in the predawn darkness of July 16, 1945.

The explosion was heard more than 120 miles away in El Paso, Texas. Windows rattled in Gallup, more than 200 miles away.

The military stilled queries with a formal news release saying there had been a munitions dump explosion.

The public didn't learn the truth until Aug. 6, 1945, when President Harry Truman announced a single bomb with the equivalent destructive power of 20,000 tons of TNT had been dropped on Hiroshima, Japan. At the same time that the government introduced the atomic bomb, it released some of the details of the July blast in New Mexico.

The super secret Manhattan Project's bomb was built in the hastily assembled Los Alamos Laboratory on the site of an exclusive boys' ranch school on a mesa in northern New Mexico.

When the scientists felt they were ready, they took their plutonium, explosives, detonators and other bomb makings south to the desert. Trinity Site had been prepared with miles of electric wire, monitoring instruments, protective bunkers and a base camp.

The bomb was put together in an old ranch house and raised to the top of a 100-foot steel tower at the spot chosen for ground zero.

McKibben threw the switch. There was light, noise, shock wave and the monstrous mushroom cloud.

At ground zero, the steel tower disappeared. There was a crater a quarter-mile wide and 15 feet deep, covered with a layer of sand and rock fused by the heat into a jade-colored, glassy substance now known as trinitite.

"All life, vegetable as well as animal, was destroyed with a radius of about a mile. There was not a rattlesnake left in the region, nor a blade of grass," said one report.

Much of the hole has been filled in, until it's now a gentle depression showing the outer limits of the original crater.

There's some grass, along with creosote bushes and tumbleweeds. There are rattlesnakes too.

Where the base of the tower stood, there's a lava rock obelisk with a plaque telling of what happened there on July 16, 1945.

Nix first at Stanton

STANTON — Eddie Crow took first place in the tobacco spitting contest here Saturday, a highlight of the 47th annual Martin County Old Settlers Reunion.

The women's cowchip throwing contest was won by Lesa Angel. In the men's division, Adolph Garza was first.

Jody Nix, Big Spring, was first place in the fiddling contest, an event that attracted five contestants.

Christi Fryar succeeded in blowing the biggest gum bubble. Amy Hazelwood fielded the fastest entry in the turtle derby.

The egg toss was won by Dodson Smith and Robert Barrera.

In a pepper-eating contest, Frank Acosta kept a cool head, eating 32 jalapenos in 90 seconds.

The crowd was estimated at 3,000 — which, coincidentally, is about the size of Stanton. Those participating seemed to enjoy themselves despite the 100-degree heat.

A parade which opened the reunion was said to have been the biggest in the history of the event.

Oceanographers, engineers hope to track big oil slick

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Oceanographers and environmental engineers plan to begin cruising the Gulf of Mexico today, hoping to track a massive oil slick that has grown out of a runaway oil well.

The Ixtoc I well blew out of control off Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula on June 3 and has been spewing 30,000 barrels of crude oil into the Gulf each day.

Officials fear the slick could kill endangered sea life and eventually drift onto the Texas coastline. Some experts have predicted the runaway well won't be tamed until a pair of relief wells are completed in about two months.

The oil has begun to break into smaller patches as it drifts northward. A Coast Guard ship off the Mexican coast reported the northenmost slick at about 320 miles southeast of Brownsville. The Coast Guard also said the slick is beginning to move westward toward Mexico.

A Coast Guard spokesman said Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration scientists will attempt to measure ocean currents while on a Coast Guard cutter this week.

"We already have historic data on those currents," said spokesman Joe Gibson. "But a group of scientists wants to collect new data on currents in the area — along the Texas and Mexico coasts — and what effect they will have on the oil."

Some wildlife officials already have warned that the slick could prove fatal to Ridley sea turtles now hatching on the shoreline near Tampico. But since the turtles lie on Mexican soil, some groups fear nothing can be done to save the reptiles — listed as an endangered species.

Two South Texas congressmen went along on one of the Coast Guard's special flights over the area.

"For the time being, we have a situation where the oil appears to be staying pretty much in the Bay of Campeche," said Rep. Joe Wyatt said during a news conference following the Saturday flight. Rep. E. "Kika" De la Garza of Mission was also aboard the specially-equipped C130 plane.

Wyatt also said the oil is not moving toward the Texas coast at present. But he added, "It may, and I think we have to be ready for that."

Despite the potential for damages to the Texas coastline, Wyatt said, it would be unreasonable to expect Mexico to pay for any damage to American territory.

"I don't believe that we have that kind of treaty with Mexico," he said. "We would have to foot the bill if it comes into the waters of the United States."

The leader of a team of Colorado oil-well fighters said this weekend that he will attempt to stem the blowout and only charge the Mexican government if he is successful.

Butch Davidson, president of Wild Bunch Hell Fighters in Denver, said he plans to meet with officials from PEMEX, Mexico's oil monopoly, this week to discuss his offer. Although he will not reveal details of his proposal, he said it involves piping mud into the well.

Energy agency ax suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Brock, chairman of the Republican National Committee, says the Energy Department should be abolished because it has "become a major contributor to our (energy) crisis."

The Energy Department was created two years ago.

"If we could put the $10 billion a year we spend on DOE into new energy production we could solve the (energy) problem.
