Hill Infant

Funeral services for Eugene Durwood, infant son of Mr and Mrs. Tige Hill of Amarillo, were held at the home of Mr and Mrs. Willie Scales here Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. M. E. Wells, assisted by Rev. B. J. Osborn. The little body was laid to rest in Rowe cemetery, Mrs Hill was formerly Miss Jennie Land.

The body was accompanied from Amarillo to Hedley by Mrs. Weldon Bennett, Mr and Mrs. Luke Hart and Bob Shannon.

Their many friends here extend sincerest sympathies to the bereaved ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose Trestle entertained the grade teachers with a party Friday night, Jan. 1. Delicious refreshments were served to eight teachers, who reported a nice time.

Mr. and Mrs. Dryden of Chil dress spent the week end here with the lady's parents, Rev. and Mrs. B. J. Osborn.

METHODIST CHURCH

Next Sunday we are beginning a study of what the church believes. Out of the gatherings of the great church councils and heated controversies in the past there has been formulated in concise statements, that which is known as "The Apostles' Creed." The first few centuries of the Christian era, the church "believed" but had not formulated the "Belief." Each member of the church has declared at the altar: "All this I steadfastly believe." Then, after this solemn declaration, many will denounce the Creed, object to repeating it in the congregation.

You who object to certain statements, I wonder if you understand their meaning? Have you studied them, or have listened to others criticize them until you think you do not believe them? So many members of the church have never studied the Apostles' Creed. Every statement in it has cost the life blood of Godly men, and come down to us after long and heated controversies, long before your day. May we not study this ancient document and intelligently say: "I believe," or "I do not believe?"

Do not miss the first message next Sunday, 11 A. M.

Remember: you are welcome at the Methodist Church.

Too Late For Last Week

We are glad to announce to the public that last Sunday was a good day with our people. The blessings of God were poured out upon us in a wonderful way. There were several visitors and new acquaintances in the congregation both morning and evening for which we were glad. There was a wonderful spirit of love and fellowship among the people and deep conviction for sin at each service. There were five at the altar seeking salvation. In the night service and they each prayed through to definite victory and were gloriously saved in the old time way.

We have a fine group of young people, and older ones as well, who furnish plenty of good music, both vocal and instrumental. If you play an instrument of any kind, bring it and join our orchestra, or if you sing join our choir. Sunday School each Sunday at 10 o'clock and our apt. Bro. Hekey gives you a heart invitation to come and be one of us and help in the battle against sin.

The president of our young people society, Miss Mary Lee Garland, invites you to attend the N. Y. P. S. service each Sunday evening at 6:30 and enjoy the many good features of the service and and lend any assistance you can to make the work a success.

Choir practice each Saturday night at 7 o'clock.

Preaching each Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Come and be with us. All of our services are featured with plenty of good music, both congregational and special.

We have restocked our store since the holidays.

Blocking Ratification

It takes 13 states to block ratification of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States. This function is not based on population in any way. The 13 states with the smallest aggregate population—about six million—can block ratification as successfully as 13 of the most populous states.

On Courtesy

Emerson, the American scholar, pointed out that good manner came from within. They result from an inner desire to be thoughtful and considerate. Most of us really have that inner desire to do the courteous thing, but do we forget? Students are, and should be as much concerned about conduct errors as about mathematical and grammatical mistakes. Good manners is a mark of good breeding, and you and I have that desire to pay the respect to our parents and the satisfaction to ourselves to be well bred. Do you yourself possess genuine school spirit? Do you try to cooperate with principals and teachers? Are you the type that your friends and teachers would enjoy introducing to their distinguished friends? These and many others are questions that show whether or not you have the true school spirit, the kind that doesn't need the spotlight of publicity to make it show itself.

Do you remove your hat when you enter the school building? Are you always careful not to laugh at some one's misfortune?

Watch Party

A group of Seniors were delightfully entertained Thursday evening, December 31, with a watch party at the home of Ivan Jones.

The guests played dominoes and forty two for a while. Then active games kept them awake until a light buffet supper was attractively served.

The blues of 1936 were sung away and 1937 was welcomed to the tune of Happy Days Are Here Again.

Freshman Holiday

Promptly at 12:45 Friday, Jan. 1, the Freshman were dismissed from school for a half holiday as we were winners of the book contest.

We went to the vacant lot back of Rev. Wells and played ball, ran relays, etc. until a most time to go home. Then we went to Juanita Harrison's home. Sand wiches, fruit and soda pop were served to all.

The girls have finally decided that the boys can play baseball but we are not going to publish the score this time.

WINTER

and why—

The helpful idea we're talking about will give you extra protection against a freeze-up in your car's gasoline system. The smart thing to do first is to have your carburetor drained—a quick, simple operation for whoever takes care of your car. He will also empty the little glass filter bowl, or "trap." And if you want to be real careful, you will have a certain amount drained from the bottom of the gasoline tank. Thus you get rid of any water that might freeze on the first cold day.

This water was not in the gasoline originally, if you are careful where you buy. But you know that the air always contains more or less moisture, which can gradually form water in your gasoline system. There is less chance of this when you keep too much air out of your gasoline tank, by having it filled close to the top. It is still just as important as ever to get a gasoline that always fires away lickety-split in any cold... not dripping and flooding wastefully... not draining your battery by a lot of "false starts"... not thinning your oil by needless choking. The most helpful thing you can do for yourself right there is to keep your tank full of sure-firing Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronze. Continental Oil Company

Measuring for Weight

A NUMBER of years ago I attempted to get out height and weight tables for children and adults. I had at my disposal many thousands of measurements—my own and others provided by various organizations.

The measurements used by insurance and health organizations were and are a good guide but do not attempt to classify according to build.

I started by taking the height sitting down instead of standing up because in two persons of the same height a long pair of legs attached to a short body should not be expected to weigh as much as a short pair of legs attached to a long body.

The next step was the measurement of the chest expansion and the girth of the chest. I attempted to relate this with the girth of the waist and hips.

Another step was the relation of the chest width to the chest depth. The width of the baby's chest is about the same in measurement as the depth but as the youngster grows it increases more in width than it does in depth so that the proportion might be as 8 in width to 7 in depth before the teen age, as 9 in width to 7 in depth at and during the teen age, and as 10 in width to 7 in depth in the adult.

Then there was the width of shoulders and width of hips to consider. Certainly a girl 5 feet 4 inches in height with narrow hips and shoulders should not weigh within 10 or 12 pounds as much as one of the same height with wide shoulders and hips.

Then the age of the increased development became a factor in trying to get out tables of height and weight. I found, as have many others, that while a boy may increase at the rate of one to one and a half inches yearly up to the age of thirteen or fourteen, from fourteen to seventeen years of age he will increase from 2 to 3 inches each year.

Similarly girls increase in height at the same, often at a faster rate than boys up to the age of twelve when they will increase at twice the previous yearly rate until they reach the age of fourteen to sixteen.

Consider Your Width

"If you're worried about your weight, as compared with the average for your height, forget it—consider your width." That's the advice of Dr. Helen Brenton Pryor, assistant women's medical examiner, Stanford university.

Dr. Pryor has worked out "width-height" tables based on five years study of some 10,000 children and college students.

Instead of one normal weight as given on height tables, her scales give seven averages based on width as well as height. Thus, if a girl of eighteen is 5 feet, 4 inches tall, she might normally weigh as little as 107 pounds if the width from the top or crest of one hip bone to the top or crest of the other is about 9 1/2 inches, or as much as 133 pounds if she measures 12 1/2 inches.

This measurement is taken across the center of the body from the top of one hip bone to the top of the other. "Tests that have been made so far show that injustice has been done to about 30 percent of those measured and labelled too thin or too fat under the old height and weight table. The stocky girl who pines to be willowy, therefore, should not starve herself into nervous irritability, but strive to keep her width-weight."

Vegetables in Liquid Form

"For the busy man who hates wasting his time at meals New York snack bars offer a machine which crushes up raw spinach, carrots, watercress, potatoes, apples and oranges and extracts their juice. From its spigot runs apple-green liquid, a pint of which is guaranteed to be a full size vegetarian meal complete with vitamins and mineral salts. The meal takes half a minute to consume."

The above item from the Reader's Digest tells its own story. The importance of raw vegetables in the diet because of the very necessary vitamins and minerals they contain has been so stressed by health writers that many readers feel that they must eat them daily if they are to be kept alive or at least in good health.

As a matter of fact vitamins and minerals are absolutely necessary to health and if they can be obtained so easily it may be a good thing for mankind.

Lace Is in Every Phase of Fashion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE story of lace continues to unfold enchantment to an admiring world. It is not only that lace there is nothing lovelier with which to adorn an expression of the "eternal feminine" but the significant thing we are coming to learn about lace is that in many of its modernized types it is absolutely practical for general wear. Through convincing demonstration in present-day fashions the theory has been utterly done away with that lace is a luxury to be reserved for "occasions" only.

The following might seem merely a pretty fairy tale to entertain. It is, however, a really and truly true story which has to do with the recent arrival from Paris of a prominent American who brought with her a perfectly exquisite and thoroughly practical wardrobe fashioned all of lace. Of course this collection embraced laces of versatile type for the lingerie as well as sports and evening clothes are each and every one of lace. The thrill uttermost and the argument conclusive as to the practicality of lace is a raincoat of handsome close-woven waterproofed lace. We hasten to assure that the raincoat has been put to the test time and time again, proving to be water repellent, and a sure protection.

To be sure, every worthy tale must have a moral or deliver a message and here it is—the happy possessor of this most charming and replete lace wardrobe is telling her friends that for travel lace clothes are eminently practical and satisfactory. Not only does lace prove flattering at all times but a vitally important thing about lace clothes is that pack them as hurriedly as you may they come out unwrinkled, maintaining a well groomed appearance without the necessity of pressing.

There is no end to the types of lace now available. You will find a lace tuned to your every need and to every mood of fashion. In the lace story for winter, it is the daytime dress made of wool lace that is making the headlines. A stunning model is pictured in the foreground of the illustration. It is of suede-finished brown wool lace in a heavy fabric type which makes the perfect thing for daytime street wear. To trim this handsome frock, Piguet uses a stitched sheer fabric woven of wool the same as made the lace, bordering the square neck, for the sash belt and to finish the side seams. We venture to predict you'll be deciding on a wool lace frock for your "fashion-first" this winter.

You can see from the beguiling dance frock shown to the right that designers are doing delightfully original things with lace. Chanel's evening and dinner dresses in ankle-length were a feature of her recent showings in Paris. She has a particularly charming dress as pictured with a dipping hemline starting from the ankles in front, done in Chantilly lace in pink and black. The tiers of the skirt are matched by the cap sleeves in alternating ruffles of pink and black.

The dress illustrated to the left was one of the hits in the Lelong collection, and considered by him one of the best of his creations. He did it in several fabrics, including lace. For the lovely gown here shown he used one of the lovely filmy laces now so modish in an interesting delicate patterning. The feature of the pleated sleeves is also carried out in the little back peplum which stands out in quaint bustle effect. The girl is matching suede.

REVERSIBLE CAPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Complete tweed ensembles are excellent style. The model pictured is a Creed masterpiece done in terms of select wool weave such as declares its style supremacy. The cape is made reversible, which is a feature to be commended as it adds to the adaptability of the ensemble to occasion. Tailored outfits of this type, with jacket suit and top cape, are a whole wardrobe in one.

RED IS IN FAVOR FOR EVENING WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The fashionable set literally "saw red" at the brilliant first night functions of the winter season. Red velvet wraps, gowns of red taffeta and slipper satin, the gleam of red in nails and lips—the shades varied all the way from the subtle smoky reds to the brighter tones of ruby, coronation and mountie, or orange red.

Particularly effective is a red velvet gown, ermine-trimmed and worn with a white ermine wrap, and an artful Julie cap or red over sleek blonde hair. The sleeves were long and bound with ermine at the wrists. An ankle-length wrap of faille taffeta in mountie red, very slim of waist and broad of shoulder was worn by a striking brunette.

Muffs are worn demurely small or large and debonair. A girl in bouffant black net under a slim black velvet wrap carried a large muff of white ermine tails, decorated with a spray of gardenias.

All-black splashed with color is again repeated and is second in favor to the predominating red.

Lamb-Trimmed Tunics

Three importantly dressed women recently observed at Longchamps wore tunic wool costumes, with the silhouette marked by Persian lamb borders. One coat by Jodelle used also a wide border of the lamb for a bib-like front collar.

High Hats

New highs are marked by many new hats. A youthful mode by Agnes is of black antelope, draped and twisted to a high-point cone held by three long royal blue eoo feathers.

'Twas This Way

When Democrats Were Republicans

THE first convention of the Democratic party was held in May, 1832, at Baltimore under the name "Republican Delegates from the Several States." In those days, the only Republicans were Democrats. What is now the Democratic party was then officially known as the Republican party, a name handed down since the time of Jefferson. In popular parlance, it was known as the "Democratic Republican party." Their sworn enemies at election time were the Whigs.

The terms "Democrat" and "Republican" were used interchangeably in the early conventions. It was not until 1840 that the word Republican was dropped entirely and the official title became "Democratic National party." Even after that, public speakers continued to use one word almost as frequently as the other.

But the term "Republican" was fast too fine a word to be lost to politics. When a split began to appear in the old-line parties about 1855, the insurgents quickly introduced it again. The Republican party has carried on continually since that time.

The battle cries of party platforms have shifted back and forth rapidly in the last 80 years. The legislation passed by one party when in power has been almost indistinguishable from that of the other.

Circus Tights

THE daring young man on the "flying trapeze" always wears form-fitting tights "as he floats through the air with the greatest of ease." Everyone expects trapeze artists to wear circus tights nowadays, but their invention was the result of an incongruous accident.

The inventor of tights, Nelson Hower, was not an aerial artist but a bareback rider in the old-time Buckley and Wicks show. In 1828 the troupe was playing a series of one-night stands in the small towns along the eastern seaboard. At one evening's performance, Hower discovered at the last moment that his costume, short Spanish jacket, knee breeches, and long stockings, had accidentally been left at the last town. He frantically ransacked the dressing room for an old makeshift costume. He found nothing, and the call boy was impatiently shouting that his act was due on next.

Hower decided that the show must go on, costume or no costume. So he ran out in the arena and leaped on his horse wearing nothing but his long knit underwear.

Strangely, no one in the circus crowd uttered a word. It dawned on Hower after his act that long underwear was an eminently suitable costume for bareback riding, and he had himself knitted a suit with feet in it. And so was born the regulation costume for trapeze artists and acrobats.

The Detachable Collar

MEN are supposed to know more about designing clothes than women. The great modistes of Paris, New York and Hollywood, who dictate the tilt of milady's hat and the length of her dress, are mostly males.

Yet one of the most important articles of male haberdashery, the detachable collar, was invented by a woman, Mrs. Hannah Montague, of Troy, N. Y. Like thousands of other housewives, she noticed every wash day that her husband's shirts were dirty only around the collar. They took longer to scrub and iron than any other part of the family wash.

Mrs. Montague was a resourceful woman. One Monday morning in 1825 she decided to do something about the collar problem. She took a pair of scissors and with a couple of snips performed the necessary amputation. Thereafter, Mr. Montague tied his collar around his neck the best way he could, but his wife had no more trouble with the washing.

This new device appealed to so many housewives that by 1829 Ebenezer Brown was able to set up a collar factory. He manufactured what was known as the "string collar," because it tied around the neck with a string. Much to the delight of laundries, Ebenezer soon introduced the hard-starched collar, and a little later that male abomination, the collar button. It has taken men almost a century to rid themselves of these inconveniences. But history runs in cycles, and before long another time-saving wife is likely to get out her shears again.

Great Power of Lightning

One of the most astonishing things about lightning is the power behind a bolt, according to an authority. It requires an electromotive force of about 100 million volts before the discharge can take place. The current in an average bolt is 100,000 amperes. This represents a power of ten billion kilowatts. Each lightning flash we see has the power of a thousand Boulder dam hydroelectric plants. And lightning flashes on the average of a hundred or so times each minute in this country.

Colorful Scottie Quilt

Scotties to right of you, Scotties to left of you, and each one fun to piece for this amusing and colorful quilt. Here at last, your chance to use up scrap after scrap of gay cotton in the contrasting blankets, being sure to keep Scottie's squarish head and legs in a dark, uniform color. It's a world of fun to piece, and the pattern may also be used for a patchwork pillow. In pattern 5673 you will find the Block Chart, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing.

Household Questions

When washing wool hosiery, put slipper trees inside the stockings while they are still wet, not the solid boot trees with a strip of metal connecting heel and toe. When dried this way, stockings are worn more comfortably.

Cut some stale white bread in one-inch cubes, and roll them in sweetened condensed milk; then fry them in very hot, deep, clear lard for one minute, or until golden brown.

Keep an empty snap card on hand and when taking snaps off old garments snap them on the card. This will save time looking for them when they are needed.

Elderdown should be washed in a tepid soapflake solution.

To give a new flavor to your ham try pouring spiced pickle juice over it before baking.

Did you ever try dipping your fresh fish in milk before rolling them in corn meal or bread crumbs preparatory to frying.

Never trust to memory in giving doses of medicine. Read the label at least three times and if you are not sure the dose is correctly measured, throw it away, rinse the glass with cold water and measure over again. You may save a life by being careful when measuring medicines.

If chicken prepared for salad is allowed to stand in french dressing for an hour before serving, the flavor of the salad is much improved. Before adding mayonnaise at serving time, drain off french dressing.

The expression on Jane's face reflected her perplexity. "That's easy to say, doctor, but it's going to be awfully hard to do. I want to be rid of McCrossen, heaven knows—for more reasons than one. But I'll need all my courage when I try the job."

She was glad, when she got home that night, that her foreman was away; it gave her a night to think it over. In the morning he was over early with a report from the pastures and much pep in his manner.

Calmly she told him she would have to dispense with his services.

With a face as black as Gunlock Knob, McCrossen rose slowly from the chair in which he had been facing Jane.

"So you're firin' me?" Looking at her coldly and searchingly, he spoke tensely and harshly.

"I've got to cut down expenses, Dave," she said. "I—"

Before she could speak, he ran on: "Folks don't naturally fire an old hand like me, your father's friend, without giving a reason, do they? What are you turnin' me out for?"

"Dave," she said suddenly, "you've always been paid well—where does all your money go? Why do you have to run steers off the ranch at night to pay your debts?"

"So," he exclaimed savagely, "a few head of steers that belonged to me by rights anyway are stickin' in your crop, eh? Do you know your own dad was the biggest cattle thief in this whole country?"

Jane stamped her foot. "It's not so!"

"Did you know he made a thief out of me? The first calves I ever stole in my life, I stole for Gus Van Tassel. Doesn't look very nice for you to talk to me about stealin' cattle," he exclaimed scornfully, "the daughter of a man that stole all his goat."

"Dave," she protested, angrily, "stop that talk. If my father owed you anything, I'll pay it."

He laughed. "All right, kiss an' make up." He stepped toward her.

She sprang to her feet. "Dave, I—"

"Why, girl, don't you know I love you?" He spoke with a queer laugh and, darting forward, caught her. While she struggled, he rained kisses on her face and neck and arms.

Jane, frantic, fought to repel him.

"Dave McCrossen, if you don't let me go, I'll scream across the bunkhouse," she cried.

He jeered at her. "Go ahead, there's nobody there. I'll let you go after you kiss me and not before."

Just when she was afraid she would lose consciousness, the kitchen door opened behind McCrossen's back, and Quong, half hiding a long knife in his loose sleeve, burst into the room.

Jane saw the China boy first. "Kill him, Quong, kill him!" she cried, beside herself.

"Drop that knife!" thundered McCrossen, Quong, his face livid, paid no attention whatever—he meant to kill or get killed. With fresh force seizing her, Jane jerked from the foreman's grasp and flung herself between the two men. "No, no, Quong!" she cried. "Just stand by me. Now get out of this house, Dave McCrossen. Never enter it again. Go!" she screamed.

McCrossen recovered himself. He laughed. "What's all the row about?" he demanded. "Just a little fun, Quong, that's all. The boss is tryin' to fire me, but I ain't gone yet. Get out, eh? All right, I'll get out—for now."

And laughing grotesquely, McCrossen strode to the front door, threw it open, walked out, and slammed it shut behind him.

Thoroughly shaken by the scene, Jane, without waiting for anything to eat, rode into town to seek Carpy for help.

He discounted her alarms. "No danger at all, Jane, of McCrossen's shootin' Quong now. If all the threats in this country were put into action, there wouldn't be enough live men left to bury the dead men."

"Henry Sawdy will be in here for dinner. He's the man for your foreman. Talk to him after dinner."

"I'm afraid McCrossen will quarrel with whomever I put in and kill him."

"Kill Sawdy?" mused Carpy appraisingly. "Sawdy's not so fast a man as McCrossen. He's not as many scraps as McCrossen has; but Henry's nobody's meat to serve raw—you needn't worry about him."

"If Bill were only well," explained Jane wistfully.

"I'm glad Bill isn't," returned Carpy quickly. "I wouldn't want to see him out and in trim while McCrossen is raging around. Then you might have something to worry about. To tell you the truth, girl, I'm holding Bill Denison back right now. He's coming on fine, but let's let well enough alone. After you talk to Sawdy, you'll see Bill. For heaven's sake, don't say one word about your round-up with McCrossen. Bill would jump the hospital fence."

When she saw Denison at the hospital, it was hard for Jane to repress the excitement that the morning's struggle had left upon her.

Even without Carpy's warning, she well knew that if Denison learned what had happened he would tear loose from all restraint.

"What's the news today, dearie?" he asked.

"Why, nothing special, Bill."

"You don't act that way."

Jane laughed, evaded, and said the real news was that soon the bandages were to come off his eyes.

Sawdy accepted the ranch arrangement without a qualm, though Sleepy Cat knew even before he rode out to assume his post that McCrossen was vowing vengeance.

The day after Sawdy took charge, he was in town to do some ordering. In Rubido's store he ran into McCrossen. Sawdy shook hands with him, and McCrossen told him he would be out next day to pack up his things.

"I'll be glad to see you an' help any way I can. Ought not to be no hard feelin's, Dave. What do you say to a drink?"

The two, talking things over, sauntered down the street. Sawdy halted before Spotts' place. McCrossen shook his head. "Not in there. I don't train with that butcher. Come along to the Red Front."

"No," said McCrossen, as he and Sawdy poured their glasses, "I don't carry no hard feelin's against you, Henry—not a bit. Jane treated me pretty rough, I must say that. But she ain't to blame, neither. She's been against me. It's Bill Denison that's behind all this. He's fair enough to my face, but he's double-faced."

"Dave," said Sawdy impatiently, "don't talk like a blamed fool."

McCrossen bridled. "What do you mean, Sawdy?"

"Why, everybody knows Denison ain't two-faced. A man may like Bill or not like him. He's got his enemies, I'll admit."

"You're damned right he has," said McCrossen. "But so's every man. Well, here's luck, Dave."

"Luck to you, Henry—not to that—"

"Cut it out, Dave. If you an' Bill can't get along, that's your business. He an' I get along fine. Well, I've got to be startin' for the ranch."

"An' for my old job! An' my old home," muttered McCrossen. "Do you blame me for bein' sore?"

"Not a bit, Dave."

"Then fill up again an' be damned to all enemies."

It was some time, however, before Sawdy could break away. Even after he left, the ex-foreman loitered at the bar, pouring his grievance into the ears of Harry Boland, the low-voiced, mischief-making saloon keeper. "He's got my girl," complained McCrossen doggedly. "You know that, Harry."

"I'll Let You Go After You Kiss Me and Not Before."

Boland, leaning over the bar, listened sympathetically and nodded.

"It's pretty hard, Harry," McCrossen rambled on, "to stand all I've stood from that man—you know that. Little Gunlock Jane—that's what I called her first day she rode up to the ranch—that girl is the trimmest little bussy that ever crossed a horse's back in the Gunlock Hills—you know that, Harry."

"Everybody knows that," Boland nodded. "What would you do, Harry," demanded McCrossen, "if you was treated that way?"

"Well, you can't do nothin' now while Denison's in the hospital, can you? Wait till he gets out. Then tell him what you think of him."

The following day it was known up and down River street that McCrossen was spooling for a fight. McAlpin took alarm at the rumors that spread so rapidly. He ambled up the street to lay the reports before Carpy. "McAlpin," said the doctor, "don't worry. There can't be any fight as long as one man's laid up the hospital. I'm going to keep him there till McCrossen cools off."

"Why, for that boy to face McCrossen, half blind like he is now—it'd be plain murder," McAlpin burst out indignantly. "Bill Denison ought to be kept under cover for six months, Doc, till he can see straight."

Carpy refused to get excited. "See?" he echoed scornfully. "McAlpin, that boy could see right now to thread a needle in the dark. He doesn't know that. You keep your mouth shut, understand!"

As the doctor spoke, Jake Spotts stuck his head in at the office door. "Hello, Doc," he called out without any preliminary greeting. "I got a message for you from Sister Angela."

"Sister Angela?" exclaimed Carpy in surprise. "When did you see Sister Angela?"

"Bout five minutes ago—been up to the hospital shavin' a man. Bill Denison's gone."

Carpy jumped to his feet. "What d'you mean, Jake?"

"Just what I say. That's English, ain't it? Bill Denison's gone."

"Where's he gone?"

"How the hell should I know?" demanded the irascible barber. "Nobody knows. Sister said to tell you Bill is gone."

"What?"

Spotts waved his hand. "That's all I know, and I've got to get back to the shop."

McAlpin sat with ears cocked, but had no time to speak. "Run for your life, McAlpin, and hitch up for me," exclaimed Carpy. "I'll follow you right down."

The liverman drove Dr. Carpy up to the hospital. Sister Angela in the office met the doctor. "What's this I hear, Sister?" asked Carpy. "Where's Denison?"

"He's gone. He was in his room and ate his supper at five o'clock. When the nurse went into his room again, the bed was empty. His clothes are gone from the closet. We've looked everywhere. What can we do?"

Carpy's vexed face reflected his uneasiness. "There's nothing you can do, Sister. We'll hear from him before we want to, I'm afraid." He turned from the counter and whirled around again to it. "Sister," he asked suddenly, "was there anybody here to see him this afternoon?"

"Nobody but an Indian."

"Did you get his name?"

"It was John Fryin' Pan."

Carpy grunted. "Thanks, Sister," he said and hurried out.

"Where now, Doc?" asked McAlpin as Carpy, silent and perplexed, got into the buggy beside him.

"Back to the office, McAlpin. The bird's flown. Hell's loose, in spite of my fine schemes."

"Did you get any explanation?"

"Plenty," rejoined Carpy grimly. "Plenty!"

CHAPTER XIV

Bill Pardaloe received the surprise of his life: it came to him that night.

Just as Pardaloe was enjoying his final smoke a gentle tapping at his window aroused him.

"Who's there?" he demanded gruffly. "Awake, Bill?"

"Never talked in my sleep yet," retorted Pardaloe. "Who be you?"

"I'm Bill Denison."

"You're a liar—Bill Denison is laid up at the hospital. Who be you?"

"Look here, Bill, don't be a blamed fool. I'm out of the hospital and ridin' for Gunlock. Get up and open the door. I want to talk to you." Pardaloe grumbled a bit, and turned out. The bolts clanked, the door opened, and the ex-sheriff saw, within the rays of his dark lantern, Denison.

"So it is you, Bill. Well, I'll be derned. What's up?" he asked as he ushered his surprise caller into his bedroom. "How's your eyes?"

"First rate, Bill. I—"

"Does Carpy know you're out to-night?"

"Not yet."

"You'll ketch hell."

"Can't help it, Bill. I want to borrow your thirty-three, and I'm in an all-fired hurry."

"What do you want the rifle for, Bill?"

"I'm ridin' for Gunlock," repeated Denison impatiently. "I've got word a party of rustlers are going to run off some steers tonight, and I'm going to interfere."

"Who's the rustlers, Bill?" asked Pardaloe, unmoved.

"How should I know? I'm ridin' to find out," snapped Denison.

"Who brought the word to you?"

"John Fryin' Pan."

"Tain't likely McCrossen would let anybody do any stealin' he didn't get a cut in—"

"Do I get a rifle or not?" demanded Denison savagely. Pardaloe pointed. "There's the gun rack—help yourself. Who's with you?"

"Fryin' Pan and Bob Scott."

"They got rifles?" asked Pardaloe, rising.

"They have. Where's the ammunition?"

"Here in the drawer. I guess I'll take the old express."

"What do you mean, Bill?"

"I'm going to ride along."

"No."

"Yes."

"I say no!"

"I don't give a damn what you say. I go."

"Bill, it's not necessary. It may be close work."

"I never seen no close work yet," retorted the veteran, grimly sarcastic. "Kind of like to see what it's like!"

"Yes, but—"

"Tell John or Bob to saddle a horse for me."

"O. K.," muttered Denison, stuffing his ammunition belt rapidly with cartridges. "If you're going, you're going."

The Indians, in the saddle, were waiting outside. Scott got up a pony from the sheriff's barn for Pardaloe. Denison, on needles and pins, waited for the old man's final preparations. At last Pardaloe, considerably hurried, grabbed a hat from the rifle rack and stamped vigorously out into the night after his posse. He was the last man to mount. Denison gave the word to go, and the quartette were under way when Bill Pardaloe cried a halt.

Tales and Traditions from American Political History
by FRANK E. HAGEN
and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

BACHELOR CAMPAIGNERS

TODAY'S accepted view of the way to ballyhoo the voter is, broadly speaking, to tell him first one of two things—either the candidate recommended was reared on the farm or he has sold newspapers.

When this has been established the campaign manager next begins to issue a swelling stream of pictures, mostly of the candidate in the bosom of his family. The larger the family, so much better the results, is the political reasoning.

With this in mind it is interesting to reflect that two of the 31 Presidents challenged the accepted political belief that it "couldn't be done," and campaigned for the office successfully while unmarried. They were James Buchanan, and Grover Cleveland.

Cleveland, after little more than a year in the White House, married Frances Folsom there on June 2, 1886. Buchanan remained unmarried and was, therefore, the only bachelor President.

Most of our Presidents have performed nobly in lifting the average size of White House families.

Theodore Roosevelt customarily is regarded as a pioneer among advocates of large families. The fact is that T. R. was something of a piker in this respect when his record is compared with that of his predecessors.

The Republican Roosevelt married twice, with one child from the first union and five from the second. But John Tyler, also twice married, was father to three sons and four daughters by his first wife and to five sons and two daughters by the second.

Tyler may have taken his cue from William H. Harrison, preceding White House resident, who sired six sons and four daughters.

Six Presidents, including the immortal George Washington, were childless. But Rutherford B. Hayes had eight, and Thomas Jefferson and Zachary Taylor, with six children apiece, helped raise the average.

Youngest to marry was Andrew Johnson, a stripling of eighteen on May 5, 1827 when he wed Eliza McCordie, the woman who later taught the Tennessee tailor to read.

TAKING A WALK

A CHECKUP on election day in November, 1936, doubtless will disclose that some of the more prominent members of both major political parties have "gone fishing."

Going fishing is the politician's milder and more modern method of showing dissatisfaction with his party's candidate and refusing to appear at the polls where he is entitled to vote. It is his way of "taking a walk," a topic stirred to live discussion by public remarks of Alfred E. Smith of New York, prior to the national conventions.

Taking a walk would be no new experience of the Democratic party but history records that Alexander Hamilton, powerful Federalist of the country's earliest days, was the first important stroller and that his action ultimately resulted in the destruction of his party.

Hamilton, a dominant political personality, was a bitter opponent of John Adams, second president, having tried to block his election as vice-president although both were Federalists.

The feud continued when John Adams became President. Hamilton secretly obtaining and holding control of the Adams cabinet. Adams, not by nature gifted in that sort of intrigue, nevertheless fought back with considerable success.

Hamilton was not the man to take any rebuffs sitting down. When John Adams sought re-election in the campaign of 1800 Hamilton "took a walk" by publication of a letter designed to show "irrefragable proofs" of Adams' unfitness for the job.

Hamilton succeeded too completely in his battle. Adams failed of re-election but the Federalist party went down with him. While the ding-dong "walkout" battle was in progress during the Adams presidency, Thomas Jefferson, whose name is referred to so frequently by Democratic orators, took advantage of the duelling.

Jefferson was earnestly and efficiently making his plea for unified support of the "plain peepul" and in the election he smashed the Federalists so completely they never again figured conspicuously in a national election.

Do Not Tire So Easily

Those whose work requires fast, but rhythmic movements, tire less easily than those who must move slowly at irregular intervals, according to psychological studies. Soldiers, it was found, march faster when keeping step to band music, the rhythm apparently causing the men to forget their fatigue instead of wasting energy thinking about how tired they are and how much farther they must go.

Showing Three New Styles

YOU who sew-your-own will be more enthusiastic than ever after making realities of these three new styles. Each is truly a delightful fashion and best of all there's something for every size in the family—from the "little bear" right on up.

Pattern 1997 is the smartly styled smock that probably has an option on a little portion of your heart right now. Fair enough, follow the dictates of your heart and you can't go wrong. This little wardrobe nicety will serve you becomingly and well. It will add to your comfort too. Make it of broadcloth, gingham, saten or chintz for prettiness and easy maintenance. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and the shiny gold buttons offer just the sort of spicy contrast one likes in informal apparel. Available for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1204—This new day frock for sizes 36 to 52 is the final word in style and charm in any woman's language. To don this flattering fashion is to step blithely into the realm of high fashion. The soft feminine collar is most becoming and it serves as an excellent medium for contrast. The sleeve length is optional. Slender lines are the main feature of the skirt and a very pleasant effect results from the wide and handsome flare. Satin or sheer wool would most assuredly win your friends' approval and perhaps just a little of their envy. This pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material. Less with short sleeves. The collar in contrast requires ¾ yard.

The adorable little number for Miss Two-To-Eight, Pattern 1994, is surely without competition in the way of downright intrigue. It's the essence of youthfulness with a lot of grown-up technique added to make it a crackjack. Why not do things up right and cut this model twice—panties too, naturally—using sheer wool for the "best" occasion frock and gingham or seersucker for school, play and all-purpose use? Pattern 1994 is available in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material plus ¾ yard of bias binding for trimming.

WIFADAZOS CLUB

Mrs. John Keeninger was hostess to the Wifadazos club at the last meeting, when we had a pre-Christmas program and treat. 18 members were present and one new member, Mrs. Milner. We were glad to have her come back after sometime of unavoidable absence. We had six visitors, and a very pleasant afternoon. Each brought samples of candies which were placed on the table and all present passed around and got a piece off each dish and enjoyed testing them. They were all delicious, and the club would not mind a similar Christmas treat often. We had a lovely Christmas tree and all present received a gift, a small token of appreciation for our association together the past year. These tokens were highly appreciated. It was decided to meet just once a month, on the second Tuesday of each month.

The meeting for this month will be next Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Newman.

There is no arranged program but we urge every one to be present as the work for the year is to be discussed and arranged.

Don't forget 2 p. m. sharp.
