Divisions threaten War Powers proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Clement Zablocki moved today to block a congressional panel from scuttling a War Powers Act compromise that would authorize the Reagan administration to keep U.S. Marines in Lebanon for 18 months.

Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, expressed anger at an action taken by the House appropriations committee Wednesday.

The Democrat-dominated appropriations panel voted by a 20-16 party-line vote to choke off funds for the Marine peackeeping contingent on Dec. 1 unless President Reagan has accepted a 90-day War Powers Act limit on his power to keep troops on a battlefield without congressional approval.

"At the very time when a delicate compromise has been crafted to advance one of our country's most legitimate foreign policy objectives, the appropriations committee has attempted to circumvent a rational course of action and impose their arbitrary will on the House," Zablocki said.

Zablocki called the appropriations panel's action an "unprecedented and unwarranted intrusion" on his committee's jurisdiction, and asked House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to refer the appropriations panel's action to him for review.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the speaker was granting Zablocki's request because resolutions under the War Powers Act are legally in the jurisdiction of the foreign affairs committee.

Members of foreign affairs committee, meanwhile, predicted that panel would easily approve today the 18-month authorization agreed to by Reagan and most congressional leaders, including O'Neill.

In a preliminary vote, the committee rejected an amendment that would have required the administration to seek another authorization from Congress if it wanted to keep the troops in Lebanon after 18 months.

Zablocki said the amendment, offered by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., was unnecessary because Congress already had that power. He also said it could unravel the compromise.

Leaders have said a floor vote on the compromise may come next week.

Wright said earlier he learned of the appropriations committee's action when it was announced on the floor of the House by Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., chief deputy Democratic whip and a member of the appropriations committee. Alexander said it was "intended to send a clear message to the president" that Congress is concerned about administration policy in the Mideast.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., author of the appropriations committee proposal, said, "If we don't stand up to our constitutional responsibility to declare war, we don't deserve to be elected." The appropriations panel's measure was attached to a stopgap spending bill.

The 18-month compromise is scheduled to come up in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Friday. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said floor debate, limited to three days, will begin Monday. House action would follow.

In the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, a Republican who has often been at odds with the Reagan administration, said, "I think the committee will support the resolution very strongly with a few dissenting votes."

Insurgents, peacekeepers exchanging shellfire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. warships shelled Druse batteries in the central mountains today and the Druse struck back. One rocket blew up the main ammunition dump of Italian peacekeepers, another wounded four French soldiers and a grenade wounded two more, military spokesmen said.

The Lebanese army, meanwhile, said it repulsed a new attack by the Syrian-backed Druse fighters on the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb. The army said 25 attackers were killed and seven Druse armored vehicles destroyed.

One Druse rocket struck a French position in west Beirut's Kaskas neighborhood on the edge of the French headquarters at the mid-city horse race track, wounding four French soldiers. Two other Frenchmen were wounded in a grenade assault on a truck, according to a French spokesman who declined to be identified.

The U.S. and British contingents of the 5,400-man peacekeeping force said they were untouched by the bombardment.

Italian spokesman Capt. Corrado Cantatori said the Italian compound near Palestinian refugee camps came under rocket fire. He said at least two rockets struck an ammunition dump close to the Christian neighborhood of Hazmieh.

"We lost almost all our stores," Cantatori said. He said no Italians were injured.

The latest American naval barrage was unleashed about 3 a.m. to silence mountaintop Druse batteries that had rained shells overnight around the presidential palace, the Defense Ministry and the nearby U.S. ambassador's residence east of Beirut, the state radio reported.

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart said shells "fell close but not in the compound" at the ambassador's residence. Unlike the previous night, he said, there was no evacuation of the residence.

Nearly five hours later, the capital was shaken by thunderous blasts, and local radio stations said the city's Christian sector was under renewed bombardment from Druse positions in the Syrian-controlled Upper Metn mountains.

Loeffler, Alexander push drought aid amendment

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — Tired of getting a "no" from the secretary of agriculture on drought aid, two congressmen pushed a bipartisan amendment through the House Appropriations Committee Wednesday that would force John Block into giving feed subsidies or grain.

Labeled the Chief Deputy Whip Amendment, the committee approved on voice vote to add it to the Continuing Resolution, which must be passed by Sept. 30 to keep various government agencies in operation.

The bill is sponsored by U.S. Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, and Bill Alexander, D-Arkansas, each chief deputy whip for his respective party.

Block has two choices. He can either pay half the cost of emergency livestock feed to keep farm animals alive or release 75 million bushels of federally-owned reserve feed grain from the Commodity Credit Corporation to ranchers whose livestock are dying because of scorched pastures and drought-devastated field crops.

According to Alan Kranowitz, administrative aide to Loeffler, "there's a fair amount of this grain in Plainview" which has been stored since President Carter imposed a grain embargo on the Soviet Union.

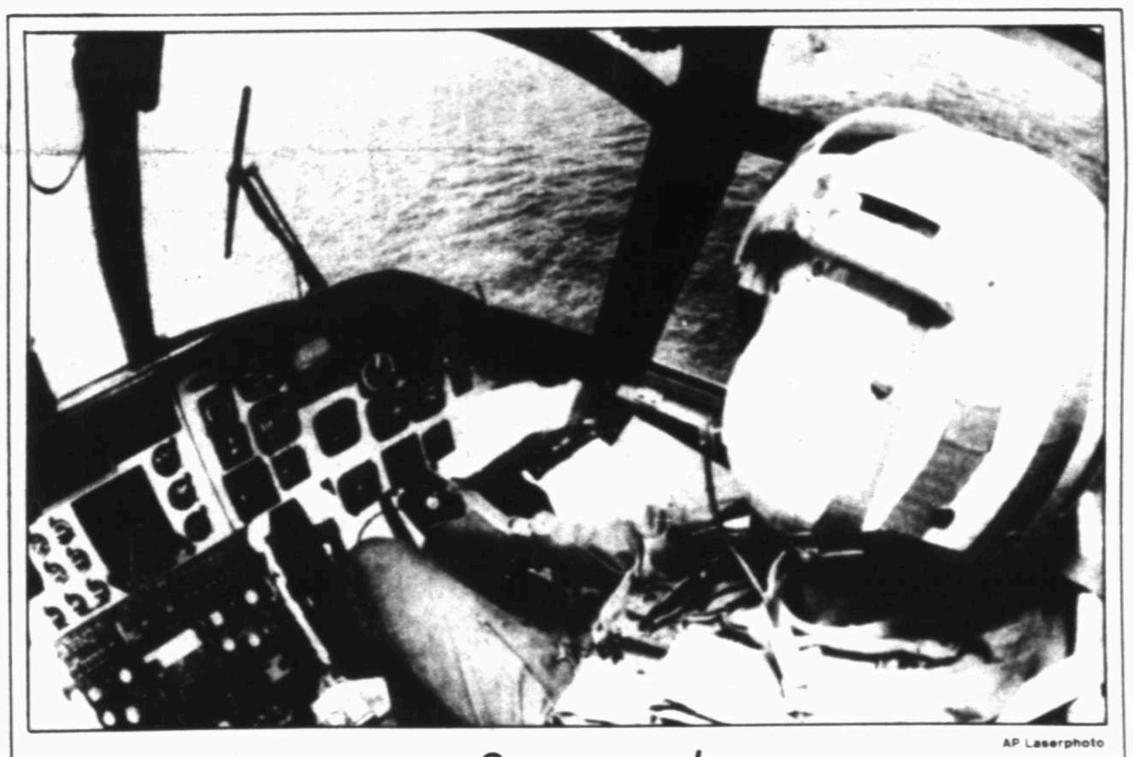

TO DATE, Block has approved loans to be made available through the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration. But that now applies only to ranchers. Farmers must wait to assess their crop loss. The Appropriations Committee's action came even while Block was refusing such aid before the Agriculture Committee.

By being attached to the country's budget Continuing Resolution, Kranowitz said, the aid would be available to all 28 states hit by the drought and included under the disaster. The negative point is that it doesn't help all those states, each one having a different need.

Alexander's drought problems are different in Arkansas, with the primary one being how to feed poultry. West Texas problems are cattle and sheep, noted Kranowitz.

He acknowledged "there is still a fair amount of legislative process" for the bill to go through before it could become law. It must be passed also in the Senate before going to President Reagan for his signature.

Landmark's remodeling questioned

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Preservationists are upset about remodeling plans aimed at modernizing parts of San Antonio's City Hall, a historical landmark that dates back to 1889.

Part of the renovation includes the destruction of a number of original walls and the removal of old tile on the building's third floor, which is being expanded to house the city's legal department.

Larry DeMartino, a member of the Fine Arts Commission, complained that the remodeling plans were not brought before his group or the city's Historic Review Board.

"In the brief discussions I've had, it was just to be remodeling to accommodate more people, not knocking out original walls," he said.

A spokesman for the San Antonio Conservation Society also expressed concern over the extent of the renovations.

Permits for interior demolition, air conditioning improvements and reroofing were issued, but City Hall officials are not required to seek permission for interior changes — despite the building's status as a landmark, said building inspections director Gene Camargo.

The interior work does not affect the outer appearance of the historic structure, he said.

John Miller, project coordinator for the modernization work, said Tuesday that he did not know why the interior tile surfacing was removed. That decision, he said, was made by the architects.

The third-floor renovation work should be completed within a month, Miller said.

Crews then will tackle improvements at the City Hall annex across the street and, next year, will begin work on the landmark building's second floor, he said.

The San Antonio City Council approved the remodeling efforts, but did not review the details of the work to be done.

Cith Hall was significantly altered in 1927, when its original dome was removed to allow construction of a fourth floor. Other interior modifications were carried out in the 1950s, late 1960s and in 1976-77, Miller said.

U.S. searchers optimistic about finding 'black box'

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

The commander of the U.S. search fleet voiced optimism today about finding the crucial flight recorders of Korean Air Lines Flight 007, which a Soviet official says was downed by "trigger happy" pilots who mistook it for a military spy plane.

In Tokyo, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said both U.S. and Japanese officials have been invited by the Soviet Union to Sakhalin Island next week to receive "objects and documents" retrieved from the airliner.

And off Moneron Island, north of Japan, U.S. and Soviet vessels searched five miles apart for the flight recorders — which could explain why the South Korean airliner was in Soviet airspace over Sakhalin when Soviet warplanes shot it down Sept. 1 with 269 people aboard.

The Foreign Ministry said U.S. and Japanese officials would go to Sakhalin on Monday to receive items found by Soviet search vessels. The Soviets have not said what they have found and have refused to allow other ships to get close to their operations.

Ministry spokesman Wasuke Miyake said Soviet authorities told Japan six people would be allowed to land at Nevelisk, a port on Sakhalin's southwest coast, to claim the items.

Rear Adm. William A. Cockell Jr. said there were "reasonable prospects for localizing some parts of the aircraft," adding U.S. search ships "hope to have enough contacts with the pinger...to get a location and follow that up with other equipment."

Cockell spoke to reporters aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Sterett, flagship of the U.S. search operation, exactly three weeks aftey the airliner crashed into the Sea of Japan off Sakhalin.

The "pinger" is a high frequency signal from the recorders designed to help searchers in locating them. Normally, the pinging device operates up to 30 days before the batteries die.

Capt. Charles L. MacLin, supervisor of the operation, said finding the recorders is "like trying to locate a pencil in the desert at night from a altitude of 1,000 feet."

On Wednesday, the Soviet official, Viktor Linnyk, said the pilots would not have shot down the Boeing 747 if they had known it was a commercial flight. It was the first Soviet admission of error in its downing of the aircraft by heat-seeking missiles.

"Of course it was a mistake in the sense that the pilots took this plane for a reconnaissance plane," Linnyk said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Linnyk, one of nine Soviet delegates attending an Edinburgh University conference on East-West relations, said the Soviet pilots "never thought it was a civilian plane. If they did, the decision would have been totally different. I am absolutely certain of that."

He said a U.S. Air Force reconnaissance plane was operating over the north Pacific at the same time the airliner was flying over Kamchatka peninsula, site of top-secret Soviet military bases.

"The fact was that the U.S. reconnaissance planes were flying over the area all the time," he said. "They were about to monitor the would be tests of the Soviet intercontinental missiles. And the tension that the (Soviet) pilots in the area are telling about is so intense, is so high, that I was not surprised they reacted in this trigger-happy manner."

U.S. and South Korean officials have repeatedly denied the KAL airliner was involved in any type of spy mission. U.S. officials have said the Soviets should have distinguished the KAL aircraft from the reconnaissance plane, a military version of the Boeing 707 which is about half the size of the 747.

Today, six U.S. ships using helicopters, undersea detectors and underwater radar searched for the plane's flight recorders in 2,200-foot international waters northwest of Moreron, west of Sakhalin, U.S. and Japanese officials said.

With typewriter, paralyzed man becomes 'artistic type'

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — With a lively imagination and two shaky hands that will barely obey, Paul Smith creates visions of horse-drawn carts and Spanish galleons — a world far from the small room he shares in a nursing home.

Born 62 years ago Wednesday with spastic paralysis, Smith is a creative soul trapped in a body that has done its best to thwart his talent.

But patience and sheer determination have allowed him to turn his ideas into works of art, using plain white paper and an old manual typewriter in an unusual art form called "typewriter painting."

Smith's brushes are nine symbols on the rickety Royal and his paints are a box full of colored ribbons he can, with effort, change himself.

Every stroke — and it takes thousands to make a single picture — requires Smith to grab one trembling hand with the other and guide it to the keyboard. He uses his thumb to smear colors, create shadows and soften the harsh lines of the typewritten characters.

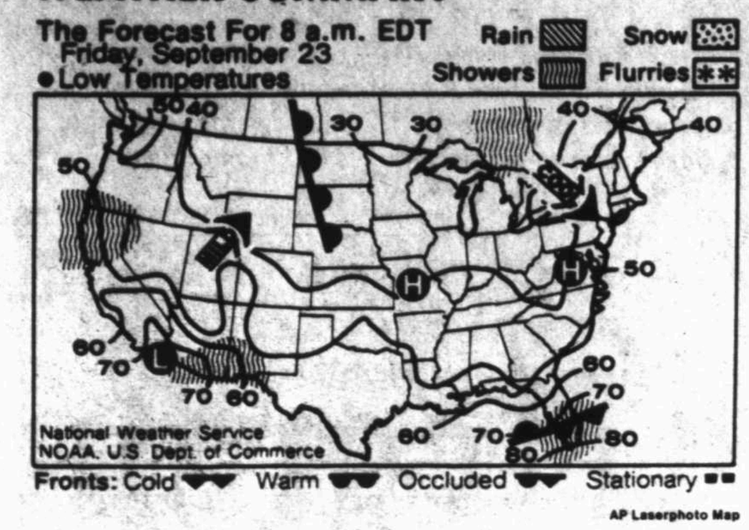

"Sometimes I goof and then I have to correct it," he told a recent visitor, his mouth straining to form words that can be understood.

It takes two or three months to complete a single picture, he said. It's a painstaking process, but Smith welcomes the challenge.

"I've got time. I've got nothing but time," he said. "Time doesn't mean nothing to me."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Cooler weather for most of the nation is forecast through Friday by the National Weather Service. Mild weather is expected for the Southwest, with showers predicted for the Southwest, northern California and southern Arizona.

Local warming trend expected

Summer has sneaked back into the Permian Basin with the cool temperatures earlier this week expected to soar back up to simmering heights by the week's end.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight will be fair with a low in the middle 50s while Friday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the middle 80s.

Tonight's southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph will shift southerly at 10-20 mph Friday.

Wednesday's pleasant high of 72 was 28 degrees cooler than 1977's record high of 100. The overnight low of 50 was four degrees warmer than 1972's chilly low of 46.

Plane survives sabotage attempt

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Passengers shrieked and the pilot screamed "Get him off me!" when a passenger cut off fuel to one engine on a commuter plane carrying 17 people.

Police said the plane dropped 700 feet in less than six seconds, and passengers reported the aircraft nosedived. Airline officials said while there "may have been a drop in the flight path," there was no nosedive.

As a passenger and the co-pilot grappled with the man, the pilot leveled out the twin-engine Swearingen Metro 2 at 200 to 300 feet above the ground, witnesses said Wednesday.

James Henderson, a Boston University law professor, held the man on the floor until the plane landed safely Wednesday evening at Hancock International Airport.

"My first thought was just to try and grab him ... and when I did, I pulled him back and I confess to hitting several times," said Henderson.

None of the 15 passengers or two crew members aboard Empire Airlines Flight 841 en route from Washington to Montreal was injured in the incident, which lasted less than two minutes, authorities said.

Charged with four counts of attempted murder and held without bail pending arraignment today was Christopher Bradshaw, 27, of suburban Baldwinsville, said Syracuse police spokesman Rod Carr.

One witness speculated Bradshaw was trying to commit suicide, but police said they knew of no motive.

Bradshaw, who was unemployed, had been arrested on traffic charges in Skaneateles, near Syracuse, on Aug. 31 and had been scheduled to appear in court Friday, after missing an earlier court appearance. He was charged with reckless driving, failure to keep right and imprudent speed, authorities said.

Matt O'Hara, a former roommate, said Bradshaw had been in a mental institution in Ohio and another in New Jersey in the past nine months.

Syracuse City Court Judge Mathilde Bersani ordered a mental examination for Bradshaw, and he was ordered to appear again in court Friday morning.

AP Laserphoto

Police lead Christopher Bradshaw toward a terminal building at a Syracuse, N.Y., airport Wednesday after removing him from a commuter airplane he is accused of sabotaging.

As the 19-seat plane approached the Syracuse airport at 1000 feet, Bradshaw suddenly arose and bolted toward the pilot, Carr said.

Bradshaw went through an open curtain into the cockpit, reached between Flight Capt. J.B. Whitehead and First Officer Marshall Banks and pulled back a red-capped throttle, instantly cutting off the fuel flow to the airplane's left engine, Carr added.

After the man flipped the switch, the pilot screamed "Get him off me, get him off me," said David Stanton, a cameraman for WIXT-TV in Syracuse.

Other passengers shrieked as the plane plummeted, said Stanton.

"The plane pitched to the right and we were literally nosediving. We were just going straight down," said WIXT newsman Jeff Scheidecker, returning with Stanton from a White House news conference.

"I, like many people on the plane, thought we were going to crash. I looked out the window at one point and saw the trees and ground and they were coming up very fast," Scheidecker said.

"There was a great deal of confusion and screaming. One passenger (Henderson) lunged toward the cockpit and grabbed the guy who was in there and pulled him back into the passenger compartment," he said, giving Whitehead the chance to regain the controls and land.

U.S. nearing end of commitment?

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration may be near the limit of its military commitment in Lebanon, especially if government forces are defeated at Souk el-Gharb, well-placed State Department officials say.

These officials, who insisted on anonymity, say naval bombardments from U.S. gunships were decisive in turning back a major assault on the town by the Moslem Druse militia and its supporters that threatened to overwhelm Lebanese army defenders earlier in the week.

"It was very hairy," said one official. "We bailed them out, but we would prefer not to bail them out."

More naval shelling is likely if the battle for the town continues, and U.S. warplanes may go into action on the side of government forces, officials say. The battleship New Jersey is headed for the Lebanese coast and could become involved.

From the comments of U.S. officials, it is clear that protecting American members of the international peacekeeping force is a lesser motivation for U.S. involvment in the fighting than helping prevent a crippling defeat from being inflicted on the Lebanese army.

The feeling is widespread, however, that the Lebanese army has performed better than expected at Souk el-Gharb, a matter of some pride here since Americans had a major hand in training the army during the past year. But it is weary from battle, and the continuing assaults on the town are taking their toll.

One official acknowledged that if Souk el-Gharb is overrun, "it would probably spell the collapse of the Lebanese army as a protective force and probably spell the fall of the Gemayel government."

But direct involvement in combat by American Marines is being ruled out. "We are kind of at the limit of what we will do militarily unless there is a dramatic change," he said. "If (President Amin) Gemayel and the army can't pull off their own survival with a little help from their friends, we can't do it for them."

If Gemayel can't survive, U.S. officials don't think anyone who has a better chance of governing would succeed him, and they envision that Washington might arrange a speedy withdrawal for the Marines who are in Lebanon as part of the multinational peacekeeping force.

One official said the fall of Souk el-Gharb would result in a major study of "our alternatives," one of which could be a pull-out. Another, he said, might be to devastate the town with naval shelling and air strikes and send the Lebanese army back again.

But the official said the United States also wants to be careful not to be viewed as siding with Lebanon's Christians, who are in the minority, against the Moslems, who are in the majority. Gemayel is a Christian.

It is for this reason that the administraton has focused considerable effort on trying to arrange a cease-fire and a conference of all major population groups in Lebanon to try to achieve a new formula for governing the country.

But hopes for a workable cease-fire have been repeatedly dashed in recent days. One official speculated that the Syrians, who back the Druse, may not want a cease-fire until they are certain that Gemayel would be replaced with a "sympathetic regime."

The administration also is concerned over what senior officials say is growing Palestinian involvement on the side of the Druse.

One senior State Department official said that if the Druse were fighting alone, they might already have given up trying to take Souk el-Gharb, which traditionally has been a Christian town.

The United States has "very good intelligence" that between 500 and 1,000 Palestinians may be fighting around Souk el-Gharb, with reinforcements arriving daily, he said. "The Palestinian element is becoming a very important factor in the fighting.."

The motives of the Palestinians aren't clear. But it is thought they may be trying to regain some of the influence they lost when Israeli forces ousted them from the Beirut area last year.

Lebanese army claims repulsion of new raid on strategic town

The Civil Defense Corps broadcast appeals for people to stay indoors as shells and rockets slammed into the Christian neighborhoods of Ashrafiyeh, Ein el-Rummaneh, Museum and Tayyouneh. Several fires were reported.

A Lebanese army communique said its embattled garrison of the U.S.-trained 8th Brigade repulsed another onslaught by Druse and Palestinian guerrillas on Souk el-Gharb before dawn.

The U.S. destroyers John Rodgers and Arthur Radford sent shells whizzing over Beirut toward the mountains before dawn to try to halt artillery attacks on the suburbs.

A Western military source said about 360 rockets hit the suburbs but there were no reports of the president's or ambassador's residence being hit.

During a similar assault, the John Rodgers and the U.S. cruiser Virginia fired a heavy barrage late Tuesday and early Wednesday. U.S. ships also fired Monday to repel a Druse assault on Lebanese troops in Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the U.S. Marine compound at Beirut's international airport.

The Reagan administration has stressed the importance of the defense of Souk el-Gharb. Officials in Washington said its loss could be a fatal setback to the Lebanese army's attempt to extend its authority outside Beirut and could threaten the Gemayel government.

The Syrian government newspaper Tishrin accused the United States of expanding its involvement in the war and said this could lead to clashes between American and Syrian forces.

In Aley, Druse spokesmen claimed at least 400 Druse had deserted the Lebanese army since early September and that others would like to leave but cannot reach Druse lines.

As the fighting continued, official sources in Damascus said Saudi Arabian mediator Prince Bandar bin Sultan was due in the Syrian capital today to renew efforts to arrange a ceasefire.

U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane flew from Saudi Arabia to Syria on Wednesday with Bandar's chief aide, Rafik Hariri. McFarlane met briefly with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, but no statements were made about the session.

Compromise doesn't look like bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the Democratic presidential contenders, compromise legislation authorizing Marines to stay in Lebanon for another 18 months doesn't look like much of a bargain.

The 18-month authorization is "sort of a blank check," Ohio Sen. John Glenn said Wednesday as he questioned Secretary of State George P. Shultz at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee meeting.

"I don't want to pull the Marines out," Glenn said later. "I'll probably support something for a shorter time period."

But he declared that the United States "is on a very slippery slope" in Lebanon, and said the Reagan administration has clearly expanded the role of the Marines since they were sent to the Beirut area a year ago as part of a multinational peacekeeping force.

For Glenn, his seat on the Foreign Relations Committee gave him a chance to combine his role as senator and presidential contender.

With a camera crew filming the scene for possible use in a campaign commercial, he read a statement and asked Shultz whether Reagan's policy would lead U.S. forces into armed conflict with the Syrians and how many more troops would be required "before we achieve 'success' in our mission."

"Are we, after a year of military involvement in Lebanon, closer to, or farther from a real solution to the problem?" he asked.

One other Democratic senator seeking the nomination wants the Marines out by late fall.

"They never should have gone," Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina said earlier this month. "I said so at the time."

Hollings said, "It is a dangerous predicament. They are being killed. I don't think we ought to cut and run under fire. What should be done is we ought to set a deadline, Nov. 1 or Dec. 1, and say we made our commitment."

Another contender, former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern, has not yet taken a position on the legislation. But an aide said he favors "having the Marines extricated as soon a possible."

So far only one Democratic contender for the 1984 presidential nomination, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, has endorsed the 18-month legislation and that was a qualified endorsement.

Askew said that if he were in Congress he would vote for the bill only if the president were "more forthcoming in stating the objectives of our continued presence...and in explaining the purpose of escalating our military activities there."

Otherwise Askew said, "I would vote against it."

Two Democratic contenders who will have a chance to vote on the bill, Sen. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado have not yet taken a position. Both men have called for invoking the War Powers Act, as the legislation does.

The bill is endorsed by President Reagan, Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr, and is expected to be voted on in the Senate next week.

The 18-month authorization gives the Marines permission to stay in Lebanon through the 1984 presidential election. But aides to both Cranston and Hart said that didn't mean Reagan's Lebanon policy would be off limits to campaign criticism even if the bill passed.

"I would so say if those are the ground rules (the legislation)," said Murray Flander, a Cranston aide. "That may be what the administration is hoping for, but I don't think that is realistic."

The seventh Democratic presidential hopeful, former Vice President Walter Mondale, has not yet taken a position on the 18-month proposal, although he too, has called for invoking the War Powers Act.

The legislation was passed over President Nixon's veto in 1973 to give Congress a greater say in decisions to send American troops into combat situations.

Despite spastic paralysis, man creates artwork with typewriter

Since he began pecking out pictures 46 years ago, Smith has created nearly 200 typewriter paintings. Over 160 of them are on display at the Douglas County Coastal Visitor's Center south of Winchester Bay, on Oregon's Pacific coast.

They include landscapes, still lifes and careful reproductions of major works of art. Smith favors his portraits, which include likenesses of modern presidents, Princess Grace and Pope John Paul II. The pope rewarded his efforts with two autographed photographs of himself, Smith said proudly.

What success Smith has had in circulating his artwork has come largely through the help of his best friend and volunteer publicist, John Cermak.

Cermak met Smith 13 years ago while visiting his own mother in the Rose Haven Nursing Home, where Smith lives.

"It amazed me, just like it does everyone, that anyone — let alone someone with his problems — could do this beautiful work. And we struck up a friendship," Cermak said.

On Sundays, Cermak's family takes Smith to church and for occasional drives in the country. Smith ventures into town himself on an oversized tricycle he owns.

Amendment would force Block to give grain, subsidies

Loeffler and Alexander "had done their yeoman's work last night" said Kranowitz in explaining how the amendment sailed through the committee easily on a voice vote. Now the two are attacking the Senate to get support.

BLOCK, RESPONDING to congressional demands for aid to farmers who have lost an estimated $10 billion because of the drought, told House Agriculture Committee members that "a line has to be drawn" on the amount of money taxpayers are going to be asked to spend on farm programs.

"Farming is a risky business, ... and in most cases, the farmers take the loss," Block said. But he pointed out that the government has already pumped more than $21 billion into basic price support programs this year and billions more are being funneled through crop insurance, in-kind payments and other emergency programs to growers in the 28 drought-stricken states.

"The whole question is how much relief is enough," he said. "If you do too much, you're not going to preserve the farm programs."

"The line has to be drawn," Block asserted. "It's already being drawn at an historic level. We've never had this kind of money flow to agriculture from the federal treasury ever before."

COUNTERING BLOCK was Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, Agriculture Committee chairman.

He read a letter, which he said was from a meat producer, urging de la Garza to ask Block whether feed grain could be sent to the Lone Star State because "loan programs aren't enough."

The government estimates the nation's feed grain crop has been cut by about 18 percent because of the drought, prompting fears by cattle farmers that they won't be able to sustain their stocks.

Block said he too has talked to Texas ranchers and acknowledged "the desperation down there." But if grain is sent to meat producers in Texas, he said, ranchers in other states will want similar action.

EVEN IF THE Senate doesn't pick up on the amendment, Kranowitz said Loeffler's efforts will have accomplished one thing and that is to wake up the administration to the drought problem.

"Tom is committed to getting aid to West Texas," said Kranowitz of Loeffler, who represents Midland as part of the 21st District. "He's prepared to go to the mat with the Secretary of Agriculture. This is a major, major step forward to getting drought aid.

"This should send a strong signal to Block to get off the dime. He better get the message," the aide said.

"Tom has warned the Department of Agriculture for seven weeks to give him some help. If they had given it, Tom would not have needed to go with the amendment."

Cost for administering the program either way hasn't been determined yet, said Kranowitz. But the grain being stored is costing a lot of money, and that would offset somewhat the program's cost of several million dollars, he said.

A more definite cost could come from the Agriculture Department but, said Kranowitz in referring to the apparent animosity between Loeffler and that department, "we're not calling over there today."

Morning cool around state

By The Associated Press

Unseasonably cool weather greeted Texans again today as a ridge of high pressure remained centered across the state.

The combination of mostly clear skies, light northerly winds and an influx of cold Canadian air pushed pre-dawn temperatures to record lows across many areas — including 49 at Dallas Fort Worth, 43 at Waco, 50 at Austin, 48 at San Antonio and 50 at Houston.

UT's enrollment is 47,573

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas' preliminary fall enrollment is 47,573, down one percent from 1982, UT officials said Wednesday.

The 1983 figures include 36,682 undergraduates and 10,891 graduate and law students.

A new undergraduate admission policy became effective this year with the aim of stabilizing the student body at about 45,000 to 46,000.

UT officials said this would be accomplished by holding admission of new freshmen to about 5,000 annually and new undergraduate transfers to about 3,000 annually.

UT Austin reached a peak fall enrollment of 48,145 in 1981.

Counties declared disaster areas

AUSTIN (AP) — Hidalgo and Cameron counties have been declared disaster areas because of heavy rain, flooding and high winds on July 15, Gov. Mark White said Wednesday.

The designation will allow eligible individuals and business owners to receive long-term, low-interest rate loans from the Small Business Administration.

Applications will be accepted Thursday at the Mercedes City Hall.

Commission votes for exemption

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Highway and Public Transportation Commission voted Wednesday to exempt farm tractors and other farm implements from width restrictions imposed by a federal highway act.

The commission approval was based on a legal opinion received earlier from Don Ivers, chief counsel for the Federal Highway Administration.

Ivers said in his opinion that the intent of Congress was to apply its 102-inch maximum width rule to "commercial motor vehicles," which does not include "farm tractors and implements of husbandry."

The measure applies to all highways in Texas.

Trustee appointed for home

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday a trustee has been appointed to oversee the Trailwood Manor Nursing Home in Mesquite and $5,000 in civil penalties levied against the home.

Mattox said the action was taken by State District Judge John M. Marshall at the request of the state.

The trustee will be Four Seasons Nursing Centers Inc. of Oklahoma City.

Mattox said the state also obtained $2,500 in attorneys' fees.

Trailwood Manor agreed earlier this summer to upgrade its nursing staff and care for patients. However, state Health Department officials found during inspections that problems remained at the home and it was decertified July 31. Another inspection was made in September and five instances of improper medical care were reported.

Travel agents seek end of Soviet Union tours

AUSTIN, (AP) — A city travel agents group wants to stop the promotion of travel to the Soviet Union because of the downing of a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet.

President Reagan already has barred American carriers from selling tickets on Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, since the Soviets destroyed the Korean jet Sept. 1, killing 269 people died.

Winston Harwood, owner of Harwood Travel and a member of the Travel Agents Council of Austin, called that ban "an empty gesture," because few U.S. travel agents sold Aeroflot tickets.

Most agencies book flights through European carriers that fly to Moscow, he said.

The council, representing 27 of 70 travel agencies in Austin, is seeking to "go one step further" than the president "and say we won't sell flights to Russia on any carrier," Harwood said.

The sanction will cost member agencies an estimated $100,000 a year in business, the travel agents said.

"This is a loss we can live with," said Meta Hunt, an officer of the council who works for Gay Gillen Travel Designers. "We don't want to be promoting the Soviet Union at this time," she said.

Jury ends inquiry into alleged abuses with welfare vouchers

SAN DIEGO,Texas (AP) — A Duval County grand jury investigation into alleged abuse of welfare vouchers and county travel funds by public officials has ended without an indictments.

Grand jurors ended their seven-mont investigation into alleged abuses in the county's welfare department with a recommendation Wednesday that county commissioners adopt stricter guidelines for issuing welfare vouchers and disbursing travel funds.

"Many individuals connected with the welfare department have already been punished and this grand jury does not believe in overkill," grand jury foreman Ramon H. Tanguma said while reading the report.

"This report more or less concludes the investigation," said Tanguma.

A federal investigation into voter fraud in Duval County resulted in 26 felony convictions of supporters of both candidates for county judge in the May 1, 1982, Democratic primary election.

County Commissioner Fidencio Saenz was among those convicted following a year-long federal investigation into vote buying in the South Texas county. Saenz was convicted of conspiring to use welfare vouchers to buy votes.

Saenz, along with Duval County Judge Gilberto Uresti and Duval County Commissioners Richard Barton, Alejo Garcia and W.E. (Sonny) Wiederkehr appeared before grand jury members Wednesday before grand jury members convened in the district court to issue a report of the investigation.

Tanguma said grand jury members found instances of "unethical" but not illegal uses of travel funds. He declined to comment on the nature of the unethical use of the funds.

Following the grand jury's report, Uresti said county commissioners had already adopted stricter welfare department guidelines in June 1983.

Under the new guidelines, Duval County residents participating in the state food stamp program are no longer eligible for food voucher assistance. Recipients now must sign a certificate stating they applied for services because of "need only and that no political motive or promise" was involved in the request.

Mattox ordered to appear in court

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, who was indicted last week on charges of commercial bribery, was ordered to appear in court today and formally tell the judge who his lawyers are.

"What it amounts to is a docket call, where the court identifies the defendant and makes an entry as to who his attorneys of record are and then advises them when to show up for a pre-trial" hearing, said defense lawyer Roy Minton of Austin.

Minton said previously he planned to ask the court to throw out the indictment, which he says is flawed. But he will have to wait for the pre-trial hearing before filing any such motions.

Mattox is accused of threatening the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski in trying to get it to stop trying to question his sister in a civil lawsuit that involved the state and Mobil Oil Corp.

Mattox has denied he issued any threats or violated any laws.

Minton has said the charge against Mattox is defective because "I don't think what it alleges is a crime."

The indictment alleges that Mattox threatened to withhold the attorney general's approval of Fulbright & Jaworski's government bond business.

"That's just not offering a benefit," said Minton, who said other pre-trial motions were also in the works.

Police suspect a link between caller, baby abductor

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Police were trying to determine if the woman who abducted a 3-month-old infant from a day care center in this Dallas suburb was the same person who called another center saying she was searching for her kidnapped daughter.

Meanwhile, the FBI released a composite drawing of the suspect in the abduction of Jessica Davis. The infant was taken Monday from the Jack & Dee Doshier Learning Center by a woman posing as the child's aunt, authorities said.

The owner of a DeSoto day care center, who asked not to be identified, said she told the FBI Wednesday that she received a telephone call two or three weeks ago from a woman who said she was looking for her 3-month-old daughter, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

"She said, 'Do you have a 3-month-old child at your center named Jennifer?'" the center operator said. "She said, 'My husband kidnapped my baby and I want her back.'"

When the Davis infant was abducted, the kidnapper told a day-care center staff member that she had come by to pick up "Jennifer," police said.

The DeSoto center owner said she told the caller she could not release the names of children.

"She said, 'If I came to pick her up, what would you do?'" the owner said. "I told her if there was a dispute, we would have to call police. She said, 'Is that what would happen in all the centers?' It sounded like she was just asking for general information.'"

Grand Prairie police detective R.E. Garcia said investigators were checking with other day care facilities for similar calls.

"The day care center said the woman didn't sound like a distraught woman who had lost her baby," Garcia said. "We'd like to know if other day care centers have also received a similar call."

The Davis baby was abducted from the Grand Prairie center by a woman claiming to be the infant's aunt, authorities said.

According to police, the center had received a call earlier from a woman, claiming to be Jennifer's mother and requesting that Jennifer be released to her aunt Susan. When the woman arrived, the attendant brought her a baby named Jennifer, but the woman pointed to Jessica and took her instead.

Police said the woman who took the baby was in her late 20s, about 5 foot 5 and weighed about 130 pounds. She had acne scars on her face, brown eys and wavy brown hair pulled back in a bun and was dressed in a blue hospital lab coat with the initials OB/GYN embroidered on the front, investigators said.

An FBI artist prepared a composite sketch of the woman Wednesday. Authorities said the sketch would be distributed to area hospitals and to residents who live in the neighborhood near the day care center.

Politician carries on battle of great-grandfather

GIBEON, South-West Africa (AP) — Hendrik Witbooi puts on a cockaded top hat and leads a mock commando raid across these gravel plains once a year to honor his legendary great-grandfather's rebellion against Germany.

In real life, Witbooi leads a struggle to end South African control of this territory, also known as Namibia.

"My great-grandfather couldn't succeed because the Germans were able to divide us and rule. And that's exactly what we are fighting today," Witbooi said in an interview.

He added that South Africa, which took the territory from Germany during World War I, also "divides and rules" by setting up regional governments on racial and ethnic lines, claiming this brings democracy to the 11 groups.

But, Witbooi charges, the white ethnic groups have the best schools, farms and hospitals.

Witbooi, 49, is a father of four children, pastor of the Gibeon African Methodist Episcopal Church, principal of a Methodist school he built with local and outside help and chief of the Witbooi clan of the Nama Tribe.

He was named vice president of the South-West African People's Organization in April and serves in the legal political wing of the party within the territory; the external wing is waging a guerrilla war from neighboring Angola.

He was chosen partly to show that SWAPO is not dominated by Owambos, the territory's biggest tribe and the founding base for the movement, and because of his considerable personal popularity.

No small part of that popularity is the fame of his great-grandfather, "Capt. Hendrik Witbooi." German colonizers played one tribe against the other in the late 19th century while conquering the arid territory.

The Namas were among the Germans' toughest foes. Like the Bushmen, with whom they share many characteristics including a language punctuated with clicks, the Namas had been constantly on the move in the face of white settlers and advancing Bantu-speaking blacks.

The Namas had first felt the effect of the concept of divide and rule from Dutch pioneers who drove them out of what now is South Africa.

Great-grandfather Witbooi warned the other tribes to unite or end up "carrying the sun on your back." But he failed in his efforts and German soldiers are said to have killed half his Nama Tribe and 75 percent of the Herero people.

The great-grandfather was killed in a battle Oct. 29, 1905, now celebrated with a two-day ceremony each year.

The tribes were gradually confined to reserves and the Namas wound up in this rock-strewn region, buffeted by the dry wind blowing east from the Kalahari Desert.

Egypt breeds Arabian horses

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — On a tree-studded patch of desert surrounded by Cairo's crowded suburbs, the Egyptian government is breeding the same line of Arabian horses that the Turkish sultans rode 200 years ago.

Horsebreeders from all over the world buy purebreds from Al-Zahra, the largest stud farm in Egypt and one of the main centers for breeding Arabians in the world.

When the facility was built in 1931 the area was a wilderness. The location was selected because the dry climate was similar to the Arabians' original homes in Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Al-Zahra is now surrounded by the busy Ain Shams residential area. High black walls and shrubs isolate the horses from teeming crowds and chaotic traffic.

The 60-acre farm is divided into large corrals where the horses roam freely on desert sand, and stone bungalows with shady pathways where the veterinarians and grooms work.

"Our aim is to keep and maintain Arabian horses," said Dr. Soliman Khalil, deputy director of Al-Zahra, told a visitor to the farm. "It is the only farm in the Middle East on such a scale where you can find Arabian horses."

The Turkish rulers of Egypt were the first to import and breed the Arabians. This tradition was continued in the 20th century by the then-reigning Egyptian royal family, which had founded the Royal Agricultural Society and the royal stables.

Both institutions were nationalized during the 1952 revolution that toppled the monarchy and brought Gamal Abdel Nasser to power. The society was renamed Al-Zahra and was put under control of the government-owned Egyptian Agricultural Organization.

About 250 horses are kept on the farm and the surplus is sold. The mares and their brood stay together for a year, then colts and fillies are separated in different pens. Stallions are kept in individual stables and are only taken out for short exercise periods.

There are about 100 grooms, six veterinarians and four agricultural engineers to look after the horses in "our paradise" of Arabians, said Dr. Ibrahim Zaghloul, director-general of Al-Zahra.

He said nearly 25 horses, mostly colts and fillies, are sold annually, and each buyer is given the family tree of the horse which goes as far back as 10 generations. He said the best stallions and mares are kept on the farm while their offspring spread their reputations around the world.

Army has discipline problems with young soldiers

BERLIN (AP) — East German army honor guards goose-step past a war memorial in a precisioned display of Prussian-style marching discipline. Then there are the young recruits, coming raucously out of beer halls, their uniforms sloppy and refusing to salute their officers.

Western diplomatic analysts in East Berlin say the 150,000-member, Soviet-supplied National Peoples Army is "well-trained and efficient" but at the same time it has disciplinary problems in its ranks, especially among draftees.

The analysts commented on the problem following the publication in a recent issue of the journal Militaerwesen (Military Affairs) of an article by a senior East German officer who indicated official concern about breaches of discipline.

Col. Guenther Fritz of the East German military academy wrote that laxness in following orders cannot be permitted.

"If a decision is made and laid down in valid regulations, it must be carried out through persuasion and coercion — no half-heartedness can be tolerated," Fritz said.

"An order is law," the article quoted the deputy defense minister, Col. Gen. Heinz Kessler, as saying. "This iron-clad principle is decisive for high fighting morale and combat preparedness."

The article provided no details about disciplinary problems or slovenly recruits, but the Western analysts said they regarded it as a warning to commanders to tighten up controls over unruly young soldiers.

Starting at age 18, East German youths are inducted for 18 months of active duty. They vow to be "honest, brave, disciplined and vigilant" and to show "unquestioned obedience" to superiors.

The draftees face "harsh punishment" and the "contempt of the working people" if they disobey orders.

Well-disciplined members of the army goose-step on parade past the country's communist leaders on National Day every Oct. 7 and stand a motionless guard for 30 minutes at a time outside the old Royal Prussian guard house in East Berlin, now the "Monument to Victims of Fascism."

Nevertheless, lax discipline among troops is not an uncommon sight in East Berlin. Groups of soldiers can occasionally be seen, their uniforms in disarray and singing at the top of their voices. Military police patrols step in when the drunken hilarity gets too loud.

The boisterous soldiers are often recruits on their first leave. They must wear their uniforms and are obliged to salute superiors, but they seldom do.

"There is a problem with alcoholism in the East German army," said a Western analyst.

Child abuse causes outrage

LONDON (AP) — Alongside Bugs Bunny, Tom and Jerry and other TV cartoon favorites, British children now watch a 20-second public information film called "Say No to Strangers."

Made by the government's Central Office of Information with police help, the film features a 10-year-old girl and a shifty-eyed stranger trying to entice her into his car with candy.

It's being aired by both the British Broadcasting Corp. and Independent Television. A longer version is being shown at schools around the country.

"Say No to Strangers" is an attempt by authorities to curb a threat that has caused public outcry in Britain — attacks on children by sexual molesters, killers, thugs out for money or shiftless youths.

Responding to the anger, Home Secretary Leon Brittan ordered a major review of how police investigate such assaults.

The subject has rarely been out of the headlines this summer.

It started with the abduction and murder of a 5-year-old girl from Edinburgh in Scotland in July. Police hunting the killer believe he also kidnapped and killed an 11-year-old girl last year.

A 5-year-old girl at Nottingham in the Midlands was lured from outside a tavern where her father was drinking and sexually assaulted. A 2-year-old girl was sexually assaulted at Willesden in north London.

A 15-year-old youth armed with a knife sexually assaulted four boys, aged 5 to 7, at Tamworth in the Midlands. Three girls, 9 and 11 years old, were attacked and sexually assaulted in Plymouth in southwest England. Police warned parents in Fulham in west London not to let children out alone after a 5-year-old girl was sexually assaulted.

Muggers at Walworth in south London slashed an 8-month-old baby's face and leg with a broken bottle to terrorize her mother into handing over jewelry worth $75.

Muggers in Brixton in south London grabbed an 8-week-old baby by the neck and threatened to strangle him. They only let him go when the 12-year-old girl pushing his carriage handed over a ring and 12 cents, all the money she had with her.

In Dublin, Ireland, four youths squirted inflammable liquid from an aerosol can into the face of a 9-year-old girl and lit it. Her face is hideously blistered. There appeared to be no motive for the attack.

But the attack that caused the biggest headlines involved a 6-year-old boy from Brighton on the south coast. Police say three men subjected him to a savage sexual assault before dumping him, sobbing and terrified, six miles from home.

nation in brief

Shuttle to include females

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The crews of two space shuttle flights next summer will include female physicians who had babies in 1982 and are married to other astronauts, NASA says.

Dr. M. Rhea Seddon, 35-year-old wife of astronaut Robert Gibson, and Dr. Anna L. Fisher, 34, the wife of Dr. William Fisher, will be mission specialists on flights in June and August respectively, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Wednesday. Astronaut Judith Resnick was earlier picked to fly early next year.

Sally Ride became the first American woman in space on the seventh shuttle mission.

NASA also announced that a military shuttle mission carrying a secret cargo has been rescheduled for July, instead of this year.

Fighting was 'civil commotion'

NEW YORK (AP) — Lebanon's Christian-Moslem fighting of 1975-76 was legally a "civil commotion," not a civil war, a judge said in ruling that an insurer must pay for damage to a Beirut Holiday Inn.

Aetna Insurance Co. said Wednesday it might appeal the ruling by U.S. District Judge Charles S. Haight Jr. He traced the history of Lebanon's religious conflict and concluded there was no evidence the Moslem groups were trying to overthrow the Christian government, as would occur in a civil war.

Aetna — which is not related to Aetna Life & Casualty Co. — had argued the damage, estimated by the hotel at $11 million, fell under policy exclusions for war, insurrection or civil war.

Suing speeds return of child

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Divorced parents are less likely to kidnap their children if they know that ex-spouses having legal custody can sue them for monetary damages, the state Supreme Court says.

The court, ruling 6-3 Wednesday on a 1981 suit, said federal and state laws allowing parents to sue do not provide for recovery of the the legal expenses involved. Also, the court said, the right to sue is likely to speed the return of the child if the abduction has already occurred.

Justice Charles Wolle dissented, saying he would prefer "a freeze on new weapons of domestic warfare."

'One-stop welfare' being tested

NEW YORK (AP) — The city welfare office says distribution of welfare benefits and food stamps at banks and check-cashing outlets will end the problem of forgery, which costs the city about $800,000 a year, and of mailbox thefts.

The "one-stop welfare" system has been tested since November 1981 in part of Manhattan and will be in use for all of the city's 1.1 million recipients by late 1984, Jack Deacy, deputy administrator of the Human Resources Administration, said Wednesday.

Recipients will take identification cards with pictures and coded strips to banks or check-cashing outlets, where the cards are placed in computers that print out the amount to be paid out.

Veto may result in losses

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. George Deukmejian's veto of a bill restoring $108.5 million for state tuition-free community colleges will result a "catastrophic" loss, says Chancellor Gerald Hayward.

In his veto Wednesday, Deukmejian said serious students would not have been discouraged by a $50-per-semester tuition he proposed in July when he cut the money from the total budget for the 106-school system.

Hayward said if the cuts stands, the schools face the loss of 166,000 students and 10,000 workers and part-time instructors.

Two men dive to save woman

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Two men who saw a truck sink in an alligator-infested canal dove in and saved one of two sisters, says a witness who rowed out and kept a small boat between the rescuers and three 8-foot alligators.

The men "knew there were 'gators in the canal" when they jumped in Tuesday night, said Mitch Jordan, who watched while the men freed 18-year-old Danielle Fenichel of Miami Beach. Police divers later removed the body of Janet Cakora, 21.

The Florida Highway Patrol charged Miss Fenichel with careless driving and driving under the influence of alcohol. The identities of her rescuers were not available from authorities.

Fire officials seeking cause of plant blast

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Workers mixing chemicals may have set off four sulfuric acid explosions that injured nine people, destroyed part of their factory and chased about 75 families from their homes, fire officials said.

But a company spokesman said it was too early to tell what caused Wednesday's blasts and fire at Proctor Chemical Co. in downtown Salisbury, 22 miles north of Charlotte.

Witness said one big explosion and three smaller ones ignited flames that shot 200 feet in the air.

Half a dozen plant workers escaped from a small building flattened by the blast, said Henry Barry, a spokesman for the company which is a division of National Starch and Chemical Co. and makes chemicals for the textile industry.

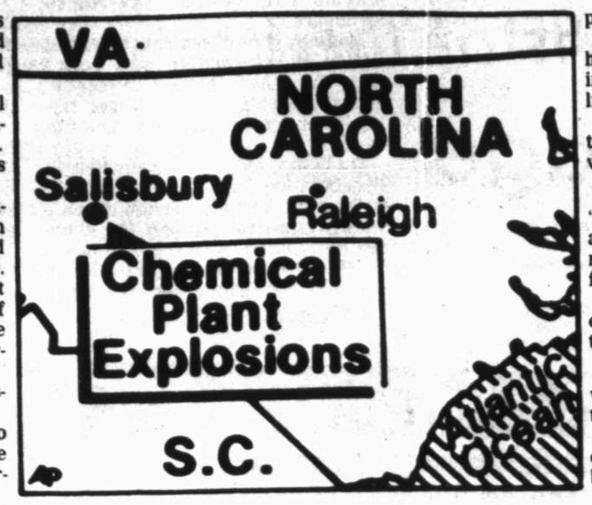

The company initially said five people were killed, but no bodies were found and authorities concluded none of the 60 employees had died. Firefighters had controlled the late-morning fire by early afternoon but continued pouring foam on the rubble.

State and local officials planned to continue their investigation today, said Tom Lowman, assistant fire chief.

"When we have daylight on our side, we'll be able to learn more," said Lowman early this morning. "We have the area secured and there seems to be no danger of further explosions. Everything seems to be under control."

Two workers were admitted to Rowan Memorial Hospital for second-degree burns. Two others were treated for burns or cuts, and five firefighters were treated for burns or smoke inhalation.

Salisbury Fire Chief Fred Shipton said Wednesday he believed employees mixing chemicals had caused the explosion.

But Bill Powell, the company's vice president for domestic manufacturing, said the only certainty so far is "that part of our plant was totally destroyed."

Powell, who flew in from the company's New Jersey headquarters, said a one-story, 50-by-100-foot brick building was demolished. Hundreds of barrels of chemicals had lined the walls, he said.

Russ Edmonston of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said there appeared to have been no violations of state laws on chemical handling.

"I was lying in the bed and I heard something go 'kaboom,'" said Anthony Wallace, 21, who said he was awakened at his home about two miles from the plan. "I ran out here, looked up at the plant and saw barrels on fire."

A plant employee who asked not to be identified said employees "heard a big boom, then we were told to leave the plant."

"We didn't know what was going on," she said. "We were all scared and we could smell smoke. We got out of there in a hurry."

Police evacuated residents of a five-block area bordering downtown Main Street. All the residents were back home by Wednesday night.

Patty Morgan, supervisor at Rowan Memorial Hospital, said Samuel Howard, 42, and Michael Hill, 27, both of Salisbury, were admitted with second-degree burns. Ronnie Kesler, 29, of Salisbury was treated for cuts and Kenneth Kluttz, 38, of Salisbury was treated for first-degree burns.

Guard recovering after five days in wrecked car

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — A woman pinned in the wreckage of her car for five days was incoherent and "angry" after her ordeal, and the hitchhiker who found her was "down the road" before he could be thanked, her sister said.

Alta Rose Allen, a 31-year-old security guard with three children, was discovered Wednesday by the hitchhiker who noticed the car partly submerged in Rapid Creek. The man called police, who had failed to find her in air and foot searches Sunday and Monday.

Detective John Zen of the Grand Junction police said Ms. Allen was delirious as rescuers cut her from the smashed car.

"A paramedic reached into the car to see if there was a pulse and she said, 'Do you think you guys could get me out of the car now?'" said Zen.

Ms. Allen was in serious condition early today in the intensive care unit of St. Mary's Hospital with frostbite, a broken arm and foot, a concussion, bruises and severe dehydration, a spokesman said.

"She is real incoherent and was fighting the doctors," said Ms. Allen's sister, Judy Cable.

"Knowing my sister, she was hollering" during the ordeal, but "no one came. No wonder she's angry," Ms. Cable said.

Ms. Allen, who lives in Orchard Mesa, had been missing since she left her home early Friday.

Colorado State Trooper C.M. Cox said Ms. Allen apparently fell asleep while driving. The car went off the right side of Interstate 70 about 10 miles east of Grand Junction, plunged down the concrete spillway of Rapid Creek and slid under a bridge.

The hitchhiker, Roger Bowman, on his way to Pontiac, Mich., spotted the wreckage while waiting for a ride along I-70 Wednesday morning.

Ms. Cable told police he "noticed that the battery was still in and thought that was unusual, because they (wrecked cars) usually get stripped, so he climbed down."

"Then he saw a hand. And he saw the hand move," she said.

Bowman ran a quarter-mile to the Roadside Mine in Cameo and called authorities.

"There was about six inches of water in the spillway and it was shimmering," said Zen. "With the silver color of the car, there is no way you could see it from the bridge."

Ms. Cable said she wished she had had a chance to thank Bowman.

"After he talked to someone from television, the next thing we knew, he had his thumb out and was going down the road," she said. "He was like Alta's guardian angel."

Family outraged at jury's verdict

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The outraged father of Dominique Dunne accused a judge of withholding information from jurors in the trial of John Sweeney, cleared of murder and facing at most six years in prison for strangling the actress.

Miss Dunne's father could not contain his rage Wednesday as Superior Court Judge Burton Katz, thanking the jury after it convicted Sweeney of voluntary manslaughter and misdemeaneor assault, said "justice was served."

"Not from our family, it wasn't," snapped Dominick Dunne, 57.

The judge later told Dunne he would be given a chance to speak to jurors at Sweeney's sentencing hearing, set for Oct. 31 — a year and a day after the fatal attack on Miss Dunne, 22.

"Too late then," Dunne replied. "You withheld important information from this jury about this man's history of violent behavior."

Dunne apparently was referring to the judge's ruling excluding testimony from a former girlfriend of Sweeney's about injuries he had inflicted on her.

Much of Sweeney's testimony was a discourse of his love for Miss Dunne, a love his attorney, Michael Adelson, described as "romantic."

"I wanted to choke him (Adelson)," Miss Dunne's mother, Ellen G. Dunne said after the verdict. "That was not romantic love."

Outside the courtroom, Dunne said the jury was presented a narrow picture of the relationship between Sweeney and Miss Dunne, a niece of novelists John Gregory Dunne and Joan Didion.

"Our daughter was in deep, deep, fear of him for the last five weeks of her life," he told reporters.

The verdict was considered a victory for Sweeney, who was found innocent of more serious charges of second-degree murder and assault with intent to do great bodily harm to Miss Dunne, his estranged girlfriend. The assault charge stemmed from a Sept. 26, 1982, attack on the actress while she and Sweeney were still living together.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Many parts of the body replaceable

Dear Dr. Solomon: I hear a lot about hip replacement operations and I would like to know whether other points of the body can also be replaced. In other words, is it really possible to make a six million dollar man like they had on that television program? — Bruce, Anchorage, Alaska

Dear Bruce: I'm not certain about a bionic man, whether or not he may be worth six million dollars, but hips are not the only replaceable joints. According to Dr. Andrew B. Weiss, of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark, surgeons are now able to replace knees, ankles, toes, fingers, knuckles, shoulders and elbows.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is an all-around athlete, and when he gets involved in something, he seems to forget everything else. He even forgets to drink water when he is competing, and even his coach has told him that he may be hurting himself because of this. Is there any way I can tell whether he's getting enough water? I enjoy seeing him compete, but I don't want him to injure his health. — Morrie, Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Morrie: One way to guage an athlete's need for water is to weigh him both before and after he competes. The difference in weight can be attributed to water loss and indicates the amount of water that nees to be replaced.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a new mother and I must admit I'm still a little overanxious. My own mother says I dress the baby too warmly when I take him out and that this could cause a fever. Is this true? — Mrs. J.S., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Mrs. S.: I can't say whether or not you dress your baby too warmly — you should discuss this with your pediatrician — but your mother is correct in saying that excessive clothing may be a cause of fever.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I coach a neighborhood basketball team made up of teenagers, and I have been following your articles dealing with sports very carefully. I know from reading your column that the kids should be permitted to drink as much water as they want. But when they sweat, they also lose salt, and you have not recommended the use of salt tablets. Why not? — Eddie, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Eddie: Sweat is really a very dilute solution of electrolytes, and these are readily replaced by consuming the normal American diet. Therefore, only the water an athlete loses during competition or training has to be replaced, and supplements such as salt tablets are not required.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has diabetes and the last time she went to her doctor, I went with her. When she was leaving the office, he told her to try and relax, an this got me to thinking. Is this something that doctors say to all of their patients, or is there something special about a person who has diabetes? — Ms. D.S., Santa Rosa, Ca.

Dear Ms. S.: I can't know for certain what your mother's physician had in mind, but studies have shown that diabetic patients can help themselves by learning how to relax. More specifically, those patients who learn to relax can lower their blood sugar levels.

Drs. Mark N. Feinglos and Richard Surwit, of the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., say that even everyday situations, such as getting stuck in a rush-hour traffic jam, can cause blood sugar levels to rise in patients with diabetes. On the other hand, individuals who do not have diabetes are able to adapt to the stress.

In one study, a group of patients who underwent a period of relaxation training similar to that used in the treatment of chronic pain, anxiety, or hypertension were compared with a group of patients who did not receive such training. Those who did have training showed definite improvement; the others actually became worse because of the stress they experienced as a result of being patients in a hospital setting.

Surveyors continue to map America

DEATH VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Gary Bohren, burly, bearded and deeply tanned, stands on a dusty little hilltop on a sweltering spring day and squints through a surveyor's transit.

Several miles away, in a heat-shimmering sea of white sand and baby tornadoes called dust devils, another surveyor squints back. An assistant marks the spot with a twinkle of sunlight flashed from a heliograph, a signal mirror cavalrymen used during the Indian Wars.

"OK, I got him," Bohren says, and, after much twirling of dials, reads off coordinates to Tim Brown, who records them in a black notebook marked "Field Notes."

U.S. Geological Survey surveyors like these have stepped on just about every square foot of America. They've looked through transits — now high-tech versions called theodolites — and marked up "Field Notes" for 104 years.

"This is the fun part," Bohren says halfway through a hectic day that began at dawn and ended well after dusk. "This is the closest we come to really doing surveying. We don't cover the ground like we used to."

Racing about by helicopter, the crews covered 200 square miles of Death Valley before dark.

"It's a good job if you like to see a lot of country and be outdoors," says Bohren, whose three children spent most of their childhood in a 15-by-40-foot house trailer that moved every few months.

"If Powell and those guys from the old days were out here with us," Bohren says, "they'd know exactly what we're doing."

Powell was John Wesley Powell, a flamboyant explorer who lost an arm in the Civil War and was best known for his 1870-73 expeditions down the Colorado River and through the Grand Canyon. He ran the river enthroned in a chair lashed to an open boat.

Powell became the Survey's second director in 1881 and forged the agency into the pre-eminent mapper of the continent.

But things are different today. Sunburned surveyors — spiritual descendants of Powell, of Lewis and Clark — are changing or disappearing.

Men and women like Bohren, who "wanted to be a surveyor ever since I was kid," are moving indoors. The 41-year-old farmboy turned civil engineer is now district cartographer for the USGS Western Mapping Center at Menlo Park and spends less and less time in the field.

The agency wins headlines now with scientists who study the nature and prediction of earthquakes and volcanoes and even describe the landscape of planets and moons scattered throughout the solar system.

But that first duty — mapping America and its geology — remains, and, in four regional centers, it's being revolutionized by computers and satellites.

The need for heliographs and transits is dwindling. Aerial photographs, satellite images and computers do most things surveyors have done since the Egyptians invented the art 3,000 years ago.

Refreshing candor

The only complaint we have about U.S. Deputy Ambassador Charles M. Lichenstein's response to a Soviet diplomat's absurd allegation that the United States may not be a fitting host nation for the United Nations is that we didn't say it first.

In case you missed it, Lichenstein responded to the diplomat's allegation by telling the U.N. Host Country Relations Committee: "We will put no impediment in your way. The members of the U.S. mission to the United Nations will be down at dockside waving you a fond farewell as you sail into the sunset."

Keep in mind all Lichenstein said was "if" the members of the United Nations feel they are not welcome in this country and are not being treated with the "hostly consideration that is their due," they are free to move the United Nations from these shores. That's it; nothing more, nothing less.

It should be noted that he did not remind member nations that the United States pays a full 25 percent of the world body's operating budget of $750 million while most nations pay much less or faces mostly insurmountable odds in attempting to bring about any degree of world pressure in combating terrorists and murderers because of the Security Council veto of the Soviet Union.

Lichenstein merely said to the world body, and we paraphrase here, if you don't like how you're being treated in this country, you're free to leave. We'll venture to speculate that there are more than a few Americans who fully agree with Ambassador Lichenstein and would have even liked to have seen him go further. But such is the world of diplomacy.

Some seem to believe that for one to question the United Nations' effectiveness in promoting world peace, security and the betterment of mankind, one also questions the reasons the United Nations was organized in the first place. Nonsense! The United States remains as committed to the goals in the U.N. Charter as ever. But in the world of diplomacy, too often the real meaning of a diplomat's utterings are muted.

Ambassador Lichenstein spoke bluntly and clearly. He made the point obvious to the entire world and his candor truly was refreshing.

Giving what's due

The Canadian government has had some justification for its sensitivity about being neglected by other nations, especially its good friends the United States and Great Britain. It may be labeled as benign, but it is neglect just the same.

Some American presidents have treated Canada like a poor relation. It has been 43 years since a British prime minister addressed the Canadian Parliament. Sir Winston Churchill visited Ottawa at that time.

This atmosphere of international coldness is considered by some to be merely a mirage. Be that as it may, the climate is getting warmer. President Reagan visited Canada and let it be known his administration wanted to renew and reinvigorate the old Canadian-American friendship. Secretary of State Shultz reinforced the good will mission on his visit north of the border.

Now we have another encouraging development in London. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has just announced that she will address a joint session of the Canadian Parliament. And she is not going to wait until next year, either. The "Iron Lady" is scheduled to address her friends and allies across the Atlantic later this month.

Mrs. Thatcher's sojourn is certain to take some of the strain out of the sometimes strained relations between London and Ottawa. This is good news not only for Canada and Great Britain, but for the free world.

Another View: Spoiling the fun

From the British science magazine, Nature, come tidings that will be of interest to householders, manufacturers of insect repellents, pet (especially dog) owners and, in general, those suffering from the late summer heat.

E.G. Gray, writing from London's National Institute for Medical Research, reports that the resistance of houseflies to swatters is explained by their "high-speed (millisecond) reflex system" which alerts them at an instant to approaching weaponry and permits them to fly off at a sharp angle. Such evasive genius is wearily familiar to anyone who has ever chased a fly around a house, knocking jars off shelves, pictures off walls, ashtrays off table tops and flipping window curtains helplessly up and down.

Gray suggests that the solution lies in a two-handed approach: "A piece of tissue paper is taken in each hand and the fly approached from the left and right, keeping the hands equidistant from the fly and moving to and fro slightly, then both hands simultaneously pounce. The fly cannot cope with this situation since its central nervous system circuitry is geared to avoid approaching movement in only one part of its visual field at a time. Two simultaneously approaching swats render the fly immobile, for its central nervous system now cannot compute at which angle to take off."

Perhaps so; we have been reluctant to conduct the experiment. The reason may be that this is yet another instance of mundane science spoiling the mythology of everyday life. Indeed, far from calculating that they have a high-speed reflex circuitry, we have always assumed that houseflies possess magical powers. How else can we explain their uncanny ability to disappear in mid-flight, their unerring sense to land on fragile decorative objects, their apparent immunity to chemicals, incantations, clapped hands and rolled-up newspapers?

Everyday life is full of minor mysteries: How does a wire coat hanger, left alone in a closet, manage to reproduce spontaneously? Why do light bulbs only burn out when replacements are unavailable? How can a microscopic insect that doesn't bite drive human beings to impotent rage? It is well that we can dissect such questions and devise scientific solutions, but it may be better that we sometimes leave them alone. "There's a divinity that shapes our ends Rough-hew them how we will," said Shakespeare. For all we know the housefly is divine rather than diabolical, and its infernal buzzing the music that keeps us humble.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rivalry may have killed Aquino

WASHINGTON — While world attention has been focused on the downing of Flight 007 and the fighting in Lebanon, someone has been getting away with murder in the Philippines.

Jack Anderson

Secret intelligence reports don't say who assassinated Filipino dissident Benigno Aquino in Manila last month. But they suggest cautiously that he may have been murdered on the orders of First Lady Imelda Marcos, without her husband's knowledge.

Here's the background:

According to the intelligence reports, President Ferdinand Marcos has a serious kidney ailment that could cause him to relinquish the dictatorial power he has held for nearly 20 years. Aware of this, Aquino felt the time had come for him to leave his sanctuary in the United States and return to the Philippines.

It's no secret that Marcos would like to see his wife succeed him. Though he used to deny this, pointing out she wasn't even a member of the Cabinet Executive Committee, he appointed her to that committee last year.

Marcos also sponsored the rise of her closest military ally, Gen. Fabian Ver, who is now chief of staff of the Philippines armed forces, with 250,000 troops under his command. Ver also directs the Philippines intelligence services and presidential security.

Aquino made no secret of his hope to forestall a transfer of power to Imelda and the establishment of a Marcos dynasty. His return to the Philippines, therefore, was the greatest threat to Imelda's ambitions.

Sources with access to intelligence reports from the Philippines believe Imelda and Ver may have arranged Aquino's assassination to eliminate their most charismatic rival. One responsible administration source discussed this possibility at length with my associate Dale Van Atta, who has also seen highly sensitive CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency reports on the subject.

As the man in charge of presidential security, Gen. Ver had been keeping track of Aquino throughout his exile in the United States. Ver and Imelda also stacked the Philippines Embassy in Washington, as a secret DIA report explained:

"The new (military) attache team was selected by Benjamin Romualdez, ambassador-designate and brother of First Lady Imelda Marcos, and confirmed by Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fabian Ver," the report states.

The DIA report continues: "The new team is also expected to monitor Philippine dissident activity in the U.S. The attaches will undoubtedly report on, and possibly operate against, anti-Marcos Philippine activists in the U.S."

Their top target in this country was Aquino. The intelligence reports view Imelda Marcos' meetings with Aquino with some cynicism, particularly her warning to him last May that he might be assassinated if he returned to the Philippines.

"Mrs. Marcos can be expected to become one of many candidates to succeed her husband, and her maneuvering will add greatly to the political turmoil and instability that will follow his departure," a CIA profile noted, adding that "in the political confusion, she might succeed."

Imelda's biggest hurdle, the CIA figures, is the Philippine military brass, whose loyalty to her husband is personal and does not extend to her. That, presumably, is where Gen. Ver comes in.

Imelda, whom the CIA calls "the steel butterfly," has chosen her military allies well. Commanders of most military units in the Manila area — crucial to any seizure of power — are, like Gen. Ver, natives of Ilocos Norte province in northwestern Luzon. This is also Marcos' home turf.

In fact, Imelda's power play has reached such a point that supporters of her chief rival, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, are quoted in a highly classified CIA cable as saying: "We must keep our heads down and our mouths shut. Unless we do, we will not survive .... (We must) smile and do what is necessary to stay alive."

PERILS OF PAINTING: Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., has asked Interpol to check out what he says "appears to be a well-organized scam operation" aimed at American and foreign artists. He's also asking federal agencies to have a look at the Salon des Nations in Paris.

The Salon has circularized artists for $790 apiece to cover costs of exhibiting their work at a November show in Paris. But some U.S. and European art groups are suspicious of the Salon, and have urged artists not to participate in the show. Critics suggest that the Paris show, billed as "an important artistic event," is nothing more than an attempt to get fledgling artists to pay through the nose for a chance to exhibit their work.

POOR PROTECTION: Sources close to U.S. Trade Representative William Brock glumly predict that some sort of "domestic content" legislation will pass Congress this year. It will require that cars sold in this country contain a certain percentage — probably 90 percent — of American-made parts.

The point of the legislation is to protect American jobs. But the trade officials claim it would have an exactly opposite net effect. Reason: 5 million Americans work in jobs directly related to the nation's $220 billion export industry. If a domestic-content law is passed, foreign nations will likely retaliate and the result could jeopardize more jobs than the legislation would protect.

But under pressure from the United Auto Workers, the domestic-content bill is expected to pass.

GEORGE F. WILL

Jogging: Finding value in pain

WASHINGTON — It is meet and right that youth, when vexed by the world's ways, seeks wisdom from persons well-stricken in years. So I have turned to a Solomonic figure, Henry E. Catto, concerning something about which I am at a loss and he is a scholar.

George F. Will

Catto, 52, has just been paroled from his sentence as assistant secretary of defense for public affairs. In this and other vocations he has become much-traveled. And he has studied the art of passing through the lobbies of the world's finest hotels while dressed for jogging — how to avoid wilting like a salted slug beneath the withering gaze of the concierge.

It is the unshakable policy of tony hotels to acquire their concierges from the ranks of people who, when young, missed their calling if they were not minor police officials under France's Vichy regime. They are the sort of severe, icy people you would expect to be born in a marriage between, say, Captain Bligh and Indira Gandhi.

Confronted by the average concierge, the average human is reduced to something akin to those henpecked Thurber men who would not say "boo!" to a goose. In "Lord Jim," Joseph Conrad wrote that even if you had been the Emperor of the East and West, you would have felt inferior in Jim's presence. That is a concierge in a nutshell: We weep with delight when he gives us a smile and tremble with fear when he frowns.

With a confidence born of meager experience, I recently undertook to walk, dressed for jogging, through one of London's lobbies. I was dressed in an outfit (gray shoes, orange shorts, maroon T-shirt) which did, I concede, look as though it had been woven from Irish stew. The concierge did not exactly gasp — such displays of discomposure are against the strict code of the concierge — but he was visibly, and not agreeably, stirred.

However, what is a person to do? I asked a veteran of such confrontations — Catto, who has braved the disapproval of the front desks at the Hassler in Rome, Brown's in London and the Okura in Tokyo. He is a typical jogger, which is to say: Dynasties may fall, earthquakes may level cities and locusts may ravage the countryside, but he will jog. He used to be ambassador to El Salvador, where joggers learn to take evasive action. He also has been chief of protocol, so nothing is missing that could complete the perfection of his manners.

His suggestions for lobby-crossing are disappointing. They are: Wear a spiffy warm-up suit; run with someone, because there is strength in numbers; use back entrances and exits, and walk up stairs to spare elevator passengers close confinement with your sweaty self.

Catto's geopolitical thinking is fine, but such jogging advice you could have gotten from Neville Chamberlain. Rear exits, indeed! For this we fought at Lexington and Concord? With such accommodationist thinking even in the Pentagon, Andropov must sleep like a man without a worry.

The jogger's dilemma is one that drives us back to basics: There is no substitute for American confidence of the sort shown by the late Bear "Be Good Or Be Gone" Bryant. Once when a fellow football coach, John McKay, went hunting with Bryant, Bryant shot at a duck but the duck kept flying. "John," said Bryant, "there flies a dead duck." Confidence, that's the stuff.

Any Milquetoast can run a few miles, but it takes a moral giant to walk 15 yards through a lobby, dressed oddly and fragrant as a gym locker. Never mind aerobic benefits from jogging. The principal virtue of jogging is that it makes the spirit muscular. Joggers develop an Olympian indifference to opinion.

Of course, it is conceivable that jogging may come to be considered just another of the wretched excesses of the 1970s, like baseball's designated-hitter rule or the War Powers Resolution. Whenever I meet a doctor, I urge him or her to tell me that jogging is worth the pain and trouble. Almost always the doctor replies that walking briskly does about as much good to the lungs and muscles, and does so without the kind of trauma to the joints that is going to keep orthopedists in Porches for years to come.

Sound thinkers reject this advice on religious grounds. That is, they subscribe to the Protestant Ethic of Exercise: If it does not hurt, it does not help. And if it is pleasant, quit doing it.

ART BUCHWALD

In Lebanon, it's mission impossible!

The most important thing to do before you send men into combat is explain to them why you want them there.

Art Buchwald

I would hate to be the briefing officer on a Marine amphibious ship explaining to the troops why they are being sent into Beirut.

"All right, men, let's knock it off. I am here to explain your mission for the next few months. You are being sent into Beirut as a peacekeeping mission. Any questions?"

"Yes, sir. What's a peacekeeping mission?"

"It is a mission by which a neutral power stations troops in a volatile area to keep the various factions from killing each other until a government can become strong enough to defend itself. Now you people will take up positions around the Beirut airport down here on the low ground. Up here in the hills overlooking the airport are members of the Druze sect armed with heavy artillery, mortars and snipers. Over here are the Christian Phalangist militia, also heavily armed. The Christians are also in this part of Beirut next to the airport, and Moslem forces, not to be confused with the Druze, have control of this part of Beirut here. Intelligence also indicates there are 1,000 PLO troops who returned to the area since Israel pulled out of the city to this position down here. Is that clear?"

"Sir, are we supposed to keep the peace between all of them?"

"That's your mission. But you can only do this by remaining in the Beirut airport area."

"If they all have the high ground and we have the low ground, how do we keep the peace?"

"You will not be alone. We have a large naval task force off the beaches that will cover you."

"Cover us from what?"

"Artillery and mortar fire from the hills, as well as snipers in the city. We now have the authority to use air power when you become a target of one of the dissident factions."

"You mean we're sitting ducks?"

"It means you will dig in as deep as you can until President Reagan, your Commander-in-Chief, can arrange a cease-fire between the Druze, the Christian Phalangists, the present Gemayel government army and the Syrians. Once this cease-fire is arranged and holds and a new government coalition of the various antagonists can be formed, you will be permitted to leave."

"Why are we called a peacekeeping force if we can't use our guns to keep the peace?"

"Because, since you are designated as such, the president has the authority to keep you there as long as he deems necessary. If you are sent in as a combat force, the War Powers Act has to be put into effect, and then Congress may dictate foreign policy. Technically, the U.S. Marines have been engaged in 'hostilities,' but the White House cannot admit that without giving up the president's executive powers. Is that clear?"

"No, sir."

"Good. We will continue. As a peacekeeping force your mission is not to take sides in a family dispute. What is going on now is that the Druze, Moslems and Christians are settling old scores that go back hundreds of years. They have committed atrocities against each other for centuries. If Washington can get them all to sit around a table and forget the past, we can bring peace to the Middle East."

"And if Washington can't, we get our butts shot off."

"I can assure you Washington has no intention of your getting your butts shot off. If we wanted to we could waste Lebanon in 10 minutes. Okay, you know all you need to as to what your mission is. Now remember, men, hold your fire. As a peacekeeping force you can't afford to get mad at anybody."

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1776, Nathan Hale was hanged as a spy by the British, and he uttered the words: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

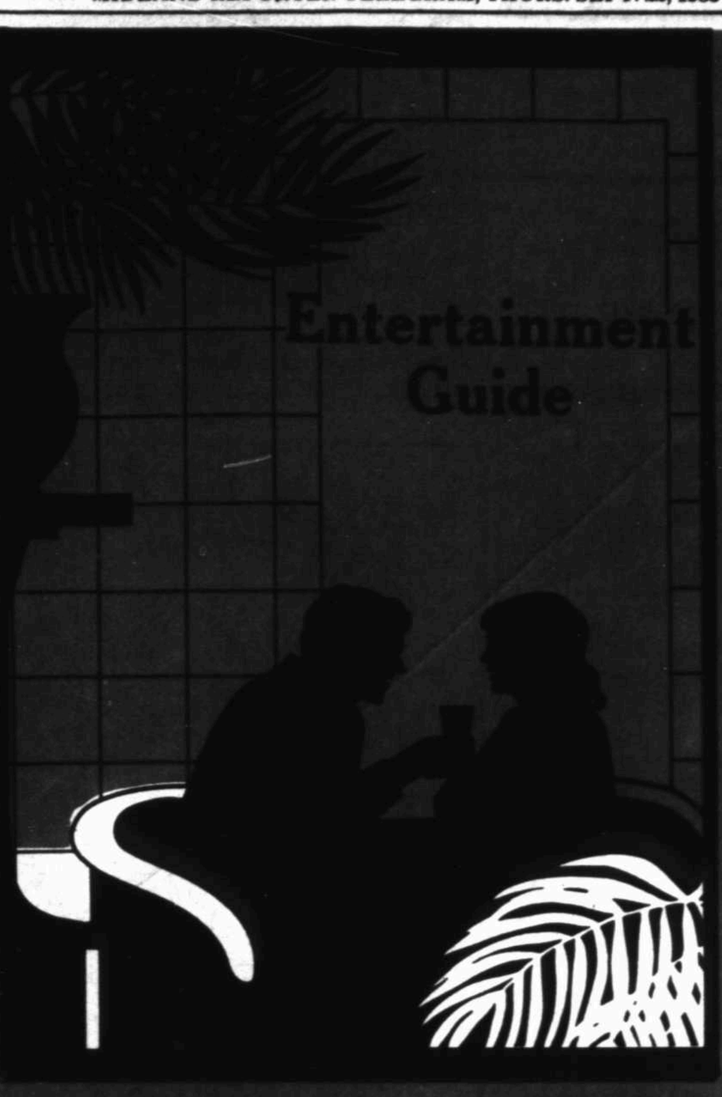

Five years ago: U.S. civilian and military aircraft were engaged in a major relief effort in hurricane-ravaged Honduras.

One year ago: Emergency legislation was passed by Congress and signed by President Reagan to force striking locomotive engineers back to work.

Today's birthdays: Actor-director John Houseman is 81. Singer Debby Boone is 27.

Thought for today: "No mind is thoroughly well organized that is deficient in a sense of humor." — Samuel Taylor Coleridge, English poet (1772-1834).

RITZ OFFERS BEST ENTERTAINMENT VALUE

Everyone knows that inflation is, and has been, a problem in the last 15 years. Many couples just don't go out as much as they used to, because they simply can't afford it any more. By the time you pay for a babysitter, have dinner, and then go to a movie, you have spent well over $50, on the average. That is a little expensive for one couple to spend for one evening out. The Ritz Theater, 203 N. Main in Midland, is doing their part to help by offering current movie releases at every day low prices.

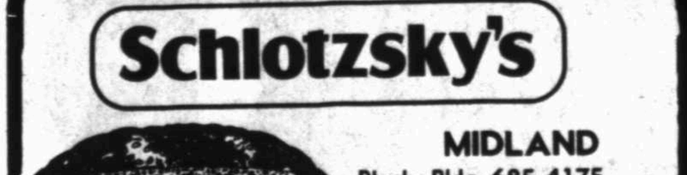

If you have recently wanted to go see a movie, but didn't feel like fighting the crowds, or perhaps you just missed it. The Ritz Theater is the place for you. The Ritz brings you current second-run movies at prices you have to see to believe. Currently showing is Trading Places, with Eddie Murphy and Dan Akroyd. Beginning tomorrow, Psycho II will show at the Ritz. Then, the next five weeks will bring Superman III, Octopussy, Flashdance, Staying Alive, and War Games. All of these movies are recent releases, and highly rated, being shown only at The Ritz for $3 for adults and $1.50 for children.

So why not wait a few weeks and save yourself some money? The Ritz has recently remodeled and now more than ever offers you the best value for your dollar. And to go one step further, The Ritz offers dollar day on Tuesday. That's right, every seat at The Ritz on Tuesday is ony only dollar.Now, that is what you might call inflation in reverse. How long has it been since you went to a movie for only a dollar? Why, even the matinees at most theaters are more than that!

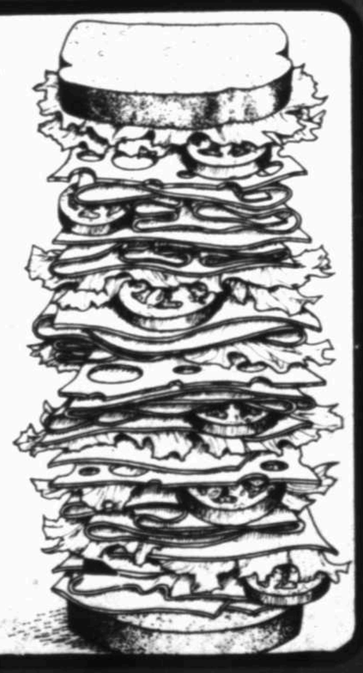

On weekends, The Ritz offers G Rated movies during the day. The first showing only, all seats will be a $1.50. Then at night, the current release is shown at The Ritz. And remember, the showings are only $3 for adults!

So come on down to The Ritz tonight and see your favorite movie for only $3. The Ritz Theater offers you by far the best value for your entertainment dollar. The Ritz theater is located at 203 N. Main, and may be reached for ticket information at 684-7757. Save yourself some money, and enjoy a night out tonight.

Marcos threatens 'extremes' as rioting rocks Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, in an angry response to the bloodiest anti-government rioting in his 18-year rule, today warned he would resort to "extremes that you already know of" if violence continues.

Marcos, appearing on national television, blamed his political opponents for the night of rioting he said killed 11 people. He said the opposition had misread as a sign of weakness his government's tolerance of earlier demonstrations.

"Henceforth, we will be firm" in handling violence, Marcos said. "I warn the opposition: do not force my hand, do not compel me to extremes that you already know of."

His statement was an apparent reference to the imposition of martial law in 1972. Thousands of opposition politicians — including assassinated arch-rival Benigno Aquino — were jailed along with journalists and alleged subversives when martial law was declared.

In a satellite interview Wednesday with Ted Koppel for the ABC television network's "Nightline," Marcos said he was not ready to reimpose martial law but then added, "I might if I am compelled to do so."

"...We'll see what the developments are. This matter is a matter of judgment. I don't believe it's necessary right now."

It was the slaying of Aquino Aug. 21 as he returned from three years of self-imposed U.S. exile that spurred the series of anti-government demonstrations.

Aquino's widow, Corazon, who lead the main rally Wednesday in an "oath to freedom, independence and democracy," decried the violence.

"I sincerely hope no more of these tragic occurrences will take place," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Manila Archbishop Jaime L. Sin criticized the Marcos government for what he said are its Nazi-like practices and also faulted demonstrators for resorting to violence.

"As though by magic, all the peaceful intentions of the demonstrators disappeared...," Sin said in an address prepared for delivery at a local civic club.

Sin, the nation's only Roman Catholic cardinal, referred without elaboration to government "adherence to practices that bring back memories of Mr. Goebbels of Nazi Germany" and said it must share the blame.

But Marcos, in his television appearance, said, "I might at this time announce that the government holds the opposition and its leaders responsible for the unfortunate incidents last night and early this morning."

Opposition seeks Japanese neutrality

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger will arrive in Tokyo Saturday to find America's most important Asian ally debating the reliability of U.S. security guarantees and the government's pro-defense policies.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government, which is firmly pro-American and pro-defense, has been criticized by opposition figures for taking sides in East-West confrontations.

In a parliamentary debate this week, Masashi Ishibashi, the leader of the opposition Socialist Party, insisted Japan should remain neutral and unarmed.

"As long as we do not sow the seeds of conflict, there is little possibility of invasion," he said during a two-hour debate with Nakasone.

Ishibashi told the Diet, or Parliament, that Japan's defense force of 240,000 men was incapable of halting an invasion on its own. He added that security guarantees from the United States were not to be counted on in a possible war.

But Japanese officials, including Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, are expected to assure Weinberger of the government's intent to beef up its defenses, and of its faith in the U.S. guarantees.

world in brief

Priest's death questioned

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The Jesuit superior of Honduras is questioning the army's claim that an American priest died of exhaustion while fleeing with guerrillas pursued by government troops.

"Loopholes exist in the version of his death which we hope will be clarified in time," the Rev. Jose Maria Tojeira said Wednesday, referring to the Rev. James Francis Carney.

Elsewhere in Central America, a former U.S. judge visited the courthouse in El Salvador where the case of four murdered American churchwomen will be tried, and anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua claimed to have inflicted more than 100 casualties on government troops in fierce fighting.

A Honduran army spokesman said Carney, a 58-year-old Roman Catholic priest from St. Louis, died as he lagged behind an insurgent force in jungles near the Nicaraguan border.

But Col. Cesar Elvir Sierra said Carney's body had not been recovered and he refused to explain how he knew exactly when or how Carney died.

Irish unification supported

HARROGATE, England (AP) — Britain's centrist Liberal Party has voted to support the unification of Ireland and called for replacing the 10,000 British troops in strife-torn Northern Ireland with a European peacekeeping force.

The resolution was offered by the party's youth wing and adpted Wednesday by a 395-324 vote at the party's annual conference. It was a major rebuff to the party's leadership and left the Liberals at odds on Irish policy with the Social Democratic Party, their partners in a centrist alliance.

The SDP supports continued British control of Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland, with greater provincial say in its own affairs. The Liberals previously opposed the withdrawal of British troops from Ulster.

Soviet diplomats expelled

OTTAWA (AP) — Two Soviet diplomats were expelled last week for trying to steal top-secret high technology, but the Canadian government kept it quiet to avoid any link with its denunciation of the Soviet downing of a Korean airliner, the Foreign Office says.

Victor Tsekovisky, a Soviet trade mission official, and Anatoly Solousov, a member of the secretariat staff of the International Civil Aviation Organization, were told ordered to leave Sept. 12, John Noble, an aide to Foreign Secretary Allan MacEachen said Wednesday.

Solousov was not in Canada at the time and was told not to return. Tsekovisky has since left the country, Noble said.

Health emergency declared

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The government has declared a national health emergency to combat the spread of diseases brought into the country by political refugees from Nicaragua.

Health Minister Juan Jaramillo Antillon said Wednesday the arrival of large numbers of Nicaraguans disenchanted with the leftist Sandinista government has caused an outbreak of malaria, diphtheria, polio and venereal diseases.

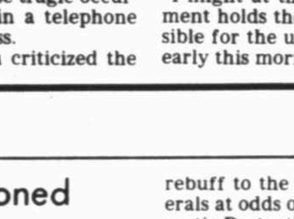

Reporter still suspect in diary case

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The reporter implicated in the Hitler diary hoax remains a chief suspect despite his release from jail and will "certainly" be tried, the Hamburg prosecutor's office said today.

"As before, Heidemann remains under urgent suspicion," prosecutor's spokesman Peter Beck told The Associated Press, refuting a claim made Wednesday by Gerd Heidemann's lawyer that his client had been completely cleared."

"The court ruled only that there is no grounds for an arrest warrant against Heidemann. It emphasized that suspicions against him have not been removed," Beck said.

The former star reporter for Stern magazine was released from jail Wednesday in a routine judicial review.

Rugged rivals may be making of Rangers

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

With one week to go before beginning district play, area teams are taking breathers or are scheduled for tune-up games Friday when six teams get into the action.

Already, district races are beginning to take shape, with a high level of competition making the races tough to call at this early stage.

The area slate has six games on tap this weekend, and each will pit two good teams.

Greenwood's Rangers actually get district play under way this Friday, when the Rangers host Sterling City. Greenwood finally put things together last week at Iraan, where the Rangers escaped with a 14-7 win.

Iraan, a pre-season Top 10 pick, has been a mystery at 0-3. Greenwood, at 1-2, has faced a tough-as-nails schedule, and might have rounded into form against Iraan. Coach Joe Longley intentionally scheduled top teams against his squad in hopes of building towards the district slate. If the Iraan result is any indication, the Rangers are ready.

It is no secret that Greenwood's plan offensively is to run the ball. Against Iraan Greenwood was able to do the job, gaining 217 yards on the ground. Leading the Ranger rundown is fullback Roger Smith. Smith and Todd Foris scored Greenwood's two touchdowns, Foris' score coming on a 31-yard bolt. Smith has been a workhorse. At his current pace, the senior transfer from Ballinger should gain over 1,000 yards rushing this year.

The district race in 7-A is wide open. In fact, the way things stand right now, Greenwood has the fewest wins among 7-A teams. But the other district foes haven't had the schedule to match.

Irion County, 3-0, has shown the most power. Thus far, Irion has outscored its opponents 129-14. Robert Lee and Water Valley are also 3-0.

It's Homecoming week for Greenwood, and the Rangers are coming off of their best effort of the season.

In McCamey, the Badgers have delivered a message that has rung out loud and clear: the Badgers are for real.

McCamey's toughest task to date in running up a 3-0 mark was an opening night win in Iraan. This week the Badgers will try for their third consecutive shutout when they host Ozona.

McCamey's shocking of Iraan was followed by a couple of tune-up tests, a 36-0 shelling of the Midland High JV and a 42-0 pasting of out-manned Rankin. The Badgers have been consistent rushing the ball, making first-year head coach Buster Leaf very popular in McCamey.

Ozona, a classification higher than the Badgers (District 6-AAA), has lost only to Wall. Wall, of course, is McCamey's chief competition in district 8-AA. Ozona beat 8-AA foe Reagan County last week, 28-13. If McCamey wins Friday, the Badgers will begin looking towards another tough test at Crane.

As for Reagan County, coach Richard Davis' team has been erratic so far. However, that situation is normal. The Owls are traditional late-bloomers. The hopes in Big Lake are that the Owls bounce back this week in their home return against Coahoma.

Coahoma has been impressive. Reagan County has had offensive inconsistencies. Once again, the Owls are climbing up the classification ladder to play Coahoma. If RC can re-establish the ground game that was so effective against Sanderson, and if Bobby Gunnels has a typical game at quarterback, the Owls could easily even their slate at 2-2.

Other area games Friday:

Van Horn at Crane: The Golden Cranes are 3-0 and have shown improvement with each game. Crane is a team on the move and bigger things are expected with each success. Their 27-0 wipeout of Stanton last week was the latest conquest. Behind the hot hands and feet of Jim and Joe Vasquez, Crane has ignited its attack.

Stanton at Hamlin: The rap against the wishbone offense is that it loses effectiveness as a come-from-behind scheme. Stanton hasn't been able to generate much yardage in its two consecutive losses. Against Crane last week, the Buffs totaled only 13 yards rushing. Stanton's success at Hamlin should determine whether or not coach Dale Ruth will make key changes before district play.

This week's featured game: Ozona at McCamey.

Britton sets City pace

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Even with a bad back, Susan Britton, as expected, took the first day lead in the Women's City Championship golf tournament at Hogan Park Wednesday.

Britton had an unimpressive round of 80, but it stood up for a three-stroke lead over Nancy Coalter, the only one in sight of Britton heading into today's last round.

Britton has won 11 straight city titles, but wasn't sure late Wednesday if she could put the final clamp on No. 12 today.

"I have a terrible back problem. I played in a tennis tournament over the weekend and I guess I hit too many balls," said Britton. "I had to roll out of bed Tuesday morning and I thought I would loosen up during the round. However, I had to almost crawl in from the 13th hole.

"I just hope I can show up for the last round. I'm to the point now where I just have to hope or trip somebody along the way," said Britton.

Coalter fired an 83 and she too wasn't pleased with her round Wednesday.

"I couldn't stay in the fairway all day and I three-putted from eight feet on No. 18. I should have scored around 76, but I didn't," said Coalter. "I know I can do better than Wednesday. I don't know if I can catch Susan or not, but I'll give it my best shot."

Today's final round, which began this morning at 8:30 a.m., appeared to be a two-woman race. Sue Campbell and Jo Dickson come next in the pecking order with 86s while Mary Robinson and Fran Locker both stand at 88. Ella Heath and Sandy Wilkerson stand at 90.

High winds Tuesday shortened the tournament this year to only 36 holes of play. Cool weather early Wednesday helped keep scores generally high across the board.

Margaret Vann's 91 led the first flight while Clara Boyd and Lois Guthrie both posted 91 to share the second flight. Florence Larsh leads the third flight with a 95 while Treva Gieb leads the fourth flight with a 100. Pat Epley leads the fifth flight with a 106.

In other action, Coalter won the closest to the pin on No. 9 while Larsh took that honor on No. 13. Maurine Phillips won the chipping contest, by chipping to within six inches of the cup and Coalter took the longest drive competition on No. 18.

Tony Dorsett
...speed adds zip to Cowboys

Dorsett proves hard guy to hurt

By SKIP BAYLESS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Tony Dorsett reminds me of Mr. Magoo. Not that he sounds like Jim Backus or has a Chinese houseboy or can't see the wall the eye chart is on. No, Dorsett has a thousand eyes, all 20-20.

But he was blessed with Magoo's knack of avoiding danger. Magoo miraculously finds the gaps in Indy 500 traffic. Magoo teeters through a skyscraper project, stepping on girders just as they swing into place. Magoo strolls through a lions' cage, which he thinks is a cocktail party, and stoops to tie his shoe as two roaring beasts collide above him.

Oh, Magoo, you've done it again.

These Sundays, Magoo is alive and well and carrying the football for the Dallas Cowboys. Anthony Drew Magoo, No. 33. Oh, he bolted 16 yards through a New York skyscraper Sunday, hitting a hurtling girder a moment too soon. He did miss the last 12 minutes of the Giant game with an undeterminded right knee injury.

Possible ligament damage, said the doctors. Prepare for the worst, said Coach Tom Landry: "You can't be hurting that bad and expect to come back that quick. I wouldn't be surprised if he were out for a while."

Out where? Dancing in the traffic? Tony Dorsett bopped into the locker room Monday as if he had been at a cocktail party Sunday. Sheath the knife, doc. The knee is merely bruised. Dorsett is "probable" for next Sunday. Dorsett, said the Cowboys, will practice Wednesday, as always.

"I couldn't believe it," said Dr. Bob Ward, the Cowboy conditioning coach.

Oh, Dorsett, you've done it again.

Two things have baffled me about No. 33: why he doesn't break more long runs and how his 190 pounds, though stout, have survived six seasons and three games without serious injury, especially to the knee, which God hasn't perfected.

At Landry's knee, I am learning that Dorsett can have long runs or long life. Not lots of both. From Landry, Dorsett finally learned that 30 carries a game would be suicide. "Tony just isn't as big as an Earl Campbell or a Walter Payton," Landry repeats.

And from Dorsett, Landry has learned that No. 33 will run hard only when his thousand eyes sense light. Dorsett has two unscarred knees because he seldom creates daylight. If you have him, he surrenders. In that regard, you down-on-Dorsetters are right. The guy dogs it.

The guy also is "probable" for New Orleans, whose George Rogers probably won't play. Strained ligament, right knee.

In Dorsett's one-in-a-million case, Landry would rather have a live coward than a hospitalized hero. Not that Dorsett is yellow. That Monday night in Washington, Dorsett's 77-yard dash overshadowed lots of six- and eight-yard smashes straight up the Redskin gut.

And though his totals against St. Louis (35 yards, two lost fumbles) and N.Y. (49 yards, one lost) were cursable, the Cowboys had 260 and 220 yards passing. You can bet No. 33's mere presence contributed to victory. How many times have you said, "Ooo, he almost broke that one"? Linebackers say the same thing. No matter how quickly Dorsett says uncle, give him a crack and he will be off to a race you won't win.

Tony DorThreat: Seventy-seven yards, waiting to happen. If he never gains another, they will have to keep an eye peeled.

DorThreat can jet. But I am baffled again, coach. Dorsett doesn't have the "Soul Train" moves of a Joe Washington, which is why I have never found him breathtaking. Sure, he occasionally puts the spin on somebody. But only when it's safe on the blind side. Only if it's more north-south than east-west.

Dorsett knows he has one thing nobody does: zero to 60 in no time flat. Down, set, Dorsett: He is at very full speed before you can pop your clutch. And the one called Hawkeye seems to know where you're diving before you do.

"He has an ability to perceive all possible opponents coming at him and take appropriate action," Ward said. "He is an artist, a master of absorbing energy. In milliseconds, he can perceive changes and give into them."

Meaning, you will seldom catch his knees locked in extra-effort drive. Dorsett's knees are like Ali's chin, always rolling with the punch. Of Dorsett, Lombardi would have said, "The knee, never the knee."

O.J. Simpson finally lost one. Campbell is beginning to look like a punch-drunk pug. Wilbert Montgomery, more Dorsett's size, lives in the training room.

It's true, Lee's lethal, but...

Midland Lee is one of the meanest and lethal teams in the state. If you don't believe it, just read the state ranking polls. Lee can be found, depending on which poll you read, standing as high as No. 4 and as low as No. 7 in the state.

It's all right there in black and white. Proof positive of just how good you are — Right? The only trouble with the polls, however, is the fact that two District 4-5A teams are ranked ahead of Lee in most of the polls with Odessa Permian and San Angelo making big noise this year also. That could mean a third place in district and no playoff berth.

LEE FOOTBALL fans really don't know how to accept this news. After all, being ranked is a relatively new thing in Midland.

You can love or hate polls. They are only as valid as last Friday night's performance, and, obviously, Lee's performance over the last three Friday nights have been impressive. The Rebels have scored 103 points and have allowed seven. Yep, quite impressive.

But one Lee fan said prior to Lee's 34-0 victory over El Paso Eastwood last Friday, "How can you tell this early in the season who is good and who is not? Two games seems a little early to be making polls."

But polls come before the season and during the season. It's good mid-week reading. People who make polls don't really care if they are accurate or not. They can always be changed weekly to reflect the big winners. Lee, as well as the others in the Top 10, are only a slip away from being replaced. That's life in the polls.

LEE HEAD coach Spike Dykes doesn't place much importance in polls. "I think the rankings are very good for the teams in small communities where the teams don't get much publicity. I remember when we were ranked when I was coaching at Coahoma, it brought the whole community together.

"But being ranked doesn't help you win football games. It won't help us against Odessa High. Here's a team that isn't ranked in the Top 10 and, who knows, they may be better than all of us. Rankings won't help us beat Odessa High, but some points might."

Polls will never have much to do with whether a Midland team beats an Odessa team or vice versa. Polls are not the incentive in games like these. The last time I heard, Coach Jerry Milsapps' Bronchos were going to show up Friday night at Ratliff Stadium.

And if OHS is there with Lee, you can bet there will be a football game worth watching. Over the last eight years, the two teams have split right down the middle, with each winning four. Three of those games were decided by one point and three more were within seven points. Now that's a close series.

BUT TO say that polls never affect a game would be equally ludicrous. Polls can place some games under the pressure cooker. For instance, if Lee defeats Odessa High Friday and San Angelo downs Abilene Cooper, that will mean that two of the state's so-called elite will be squaring off against each other next week at Memorial Stadium.

That game then comes under the eye of the entire state. Pressure mounts and expectations soar. The game suddenly takes on a greater meaning than a mere district game. In the scope of a season, it is really not a bigger game at all, but it will seem that way to all concerned. Rankings can produce an illusion of importance.

However, Lee assistant coach Van Tom Whatley has an effective way of deflating the power of polls over the Lee players.

AFTER LEE'S 38-7 win over Lubbock Coronado to open the season, the Rebels moved quickly into the state's Top 10. Naturally, that excited some of the Lee players.

Several Rebels approached Whatley with great joy and said, "Hey coach, we're No. 10 in the state."

Whatley returned a stern glare and answered without pause, "Well, that's real nice boys. You're No. 10 in the state and No. 2 in the city. You ought to be real proud."

Whatley doesn't want any Rebel to forget a certian 14-6 loss that ended last season. Rankings haven't been mentioned since at the Lee Fieldhouse.

Maryland man pleads guilty to conspiracy

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A Maryland man indicted with Washington Redskins safety Tony Peters on charges of taking part in a cocaine ring has pleaded guilty in federal court to conspiracy and distribution of the drug.

Prosecutors Wednesday dismissed nine other counts against Ronald Kirby Wood, 38, a former landscape company operator, in return for his guilty pleas on the two charges. U.S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. set sentencing for Oct. 21.

Prosecutors alleged that Peters, who earlier this month pleaded guilty to two of nine felony charges brough against him, introduce undercover agents t Wood. Wood later sol cocaine to the agents prosecutors charged.

NJ Generals change hands

From wire reports

FOOTBALL—The USFL New Jersey Generals have been sold to New York real estate developer Donald Trump. Owner Walter Duncan, who owns 90 percent of the franchise, has been rumored to be interested in selling the team after losing about $3 million last season...

Curtis McClinton Jr., former pro Kansas City running back, was named deputy mayor of the District of Columbia. Currently an official with Amtrak, McClinton was AFL rookie of the year in 1963 while with the Chiefs...

GOLF— Former major-league pitcher Joe Horlen is the new assistant golf coach at UT-San Antonio. Horlen, who spent 11 years the Chicago White Sox and Oakland A's, said he will work with the second-year golf program on a volunteer basis...

BASEBALL—Pitcher Steve Carlton has changed his mind about breaking his four-year-old vow of silence after he wins his 300th game. Larry Shenk, Phillies' PR director, said Carlton has reneged on a compromise that would have allowed reporters to ask the left-hander questions indirectly. Carlton had agreed to go on the club's post-game radio show to answer questions submitted by reporters to Harry Kalas, the club's broadcaster. Shenk was going to screen out questions he thought Carlton would refuse to answer. But Shenk said Carlton told the club Tuesday: "The issue has become me talking and not the team in a pennant race. Milestones are nice but secondary to winning."...

Kansas City's Royals will operate the Memphis Chicks AA Southern League farm in 1984-1985, terminating their relationship with Jacksonville of the same league...

BASKETBALL— Danny Manning, the 6-foot-11 star whose father became an assistant coach at Kansas U. this week, will be joining the Jayhawk program. "It's been between North Carolina, North Carolina State and KU all along. I narrowed it to three. Then my family moved here. I always wanted my family to be able to see me play."...

San Jacinto, Alamo win girls basketball

San Jacinto Green and Alamo Grey were the winners in this weekend's seventh and eighth grade girls basketball tournaments.

SJ Green received a bye in the first round of the tournament and went on to defeat Alamo Red 42-24 in the second game and Goddard white, 24-23, for the title.

For Alamo Grey, the title trail started with a victory over San Jacinto White, 57-37; Goddard Black 55-40 and Goddard White in the championship game, 55-43.

Goddard Black finished third in the tournament with Alamo Red winning consolation.

Owls need teams

BIG LAKE—Reagan County needs two varsity teams for its girls tournament Dec. 1,2,3. The teams may be from any division. Also girls games, any division opposition, are needed for either Dec. 29-30 or Jan 5-6. Contact Ron Taylor (884 2772).

Fiesta Tourney

Fiesta Del Rancho, Ranchland Hills Country Clubs annual couples invitational golf tournament, will be held Saturday and Sunday with 64 teams entered. One team will come from as far away as California.

Other teams will come from Houston, Arlington, Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo, and Del Rio.

One man and one woman teams will play a two-da, eclectic 36-hole better ball team format. Teams will be divided into five flights by handicap. In eclectic play, second day scores are recorded only on holes improved from the first day.

Butch makes up mind

DALLAS (AP) — Disgruntled Dallas Cowboys' wide receiver Butch Johnson says he's made up his mind on what he'll do at the end of the season.

But Johnson won't say if he'll stay with the National Football League club, retire or force a trade.

"I've made up my mind what I'm going to do at the end of the season," Johnson said Wednesday. "But I'm not going to say what it is because it would only be a distraction."

Johnson spent Monday in Cancun, Mexico after being granted a day's leave by Coach Tom Landry. He's caught only one pass in the Cowboys' first three games.

Asked if Johnson had requested a trade, Landry said, "Butch is constantly wanting to be traded. And I don't blame him to an extent. Anytime he gets down in the dumps he wants to be traded. I'll consider it. I'll always consider it. But he's too valuable to us to be traded."

Chisox' LaMarr Hoyt ...notches 22nd win.

Magic number is 3 for Birds

By The Associated Press

John Lowenstein hit a grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning and Joe Nolan followed with another homer, capping a six-run outburst and rallying the Baltimore Orioles a 7-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers and a sweep of their double-header Wednesday night.

The sweep increased Baltimore's lead over second-place Detroit to 8½ games in the American League East. The Orioles' magic number is now three. Baltimore has 11 games remaining this season and Detroit has 10 left.

In the opener, Mike Boddicker pitched a five-hitter for his fifth shutout and Eddie Murray, Cal Ripken and Lowenstein each homered to give Baltimore a 6-0 triumph.

In other pennant-race games, Ron Oester's sacrifice fly scored Gary Redus in the ninth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves and a split of their double-header. The Braves won the first game 9-1 behind the five-hit pitching of Craig McMurtry and the hitting of Chris Chambliss and Dale Murphy.

THE SPLIT dropped the Braves four games behind Los Angeles in the National League West after the Dodgers beat Houston 2-1 in a late game on the West Coast. Bill Russell lined a double down the left field line to score Steve Sax from second base with two outs in the seventh inning and break a 1-1 tie.

Fernando Valenzuela broke a personal four-game losing streak with a six-hitter.

Jody Davis' sacrifice fly and Larry Bowa's infield single drove in the tying and winning runs in the seventh inning and lifted the Chicago Cubs to a 7-6 victory over Pittsburgh. The Pirates fell into third place in the East, 2½ games behind Philadelphia, which was rained out at Montreal. The Expos are two games back in second.

Elsewhere in the AL, Tony Armas belted his 34th home run and Bobby Ojeda earned his fifth consecutive victory as the Boston Red Sox beat the New York Yankees 3-1.

FORMER MIDLAND Cub Scott Fletcher doubled home Tom Paciorek with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 7-6 win over the Minnesota Twins and a sweep of their double-header Wednesday night. In the opener, Harold Baines ripped an RBI-single in the seventh inning to give LaMarr Hoyt a major-league leading 22 victories as Chicago won 2-1. It was Hoyt's 11th consecutive victory.

Milwaukee's Don Sutton broke his personal eight-game losing streak with his first victory since July 14 as the Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 10-7.

Consecutive sacrifice flies by Bill Stein and Pete O'Brien in the sixth inning and Mike Smithson's five-hitter carried the Texas Rangers to a 4-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Jesse Barfield's RBI-single capped a four-run third inning that enabled Doyle Alexander to win his fifth straight game as the Toronto Blue Jays downed the Seattle Mariners 4-3.

GEOFF ZAHN fired a five-hitter and Gary Pettis tripled and scored two runs to pace the California Angels to a 3-0 win over the Kansas City Royals.

In other NL games, Dave Bergman, a late-inning defensive replacement, belted a two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth, lifting the San Francisco Giants to a 5-4 victory over the San Diego Padres.

John Stuper pitched a five-hitter and drove in two runs with two singles, leading St. Louis to a 9-3 victory over the New York Mets to stop the Cardinals' seven-game losing streak.

What if no one came?

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

What if they gave an Olympics and nobody came?

No, that's not a bumper sticker on the Hollywood Freeway, that's the very real fear of Peter Ueberroth of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and Roone Arledge of the ABC television network. Lloyds of London is probably not too happy, either.

They're in an agonizing posture of "Let's don't be beastly to the Russians," the most awkward position since 1936, when Avery Brundage just held his breath and hoped Adolf Hitler would hold off busting up synagogues for awhile.

As you all know, the Russians have been behaving like Russians of late, doing things only they can do with panache, and the resultant reaction has found them cancelling out on pre-Olympic appearances. And, various state legislatures and special-interest lobbies in Congress have urged barring them from an Olympic appearance in 1984.

BUT, THE United States can't bar them from the Olympics. We can only bar ourselves, as we did in 1980. If we seek to ban the Russians, it will no longer be our Olympics because the International Olympic Committee will have no choice but to jerk the games out of the U.S. for abrogation of contract.

The real fear is the Russkis will bar themselves out of resentment over the outcry over the downed Korean airliner. If you don't think that will tear a big hole in the Olympics, you don't know Olympics. The Russians will take with them the East Germans, the Poles, Bulgars and others, or nearly half the real strength of the track-and-field portion of the Games. What's left is just another track meet. ABC doesn't want to pay $225 million for what is, effectively, the Modesto Relays.

It's a very real problem. You see, when the Communists joined the athletic world in the 1952 Games at Helsinki, track-and-field buffs the world over rejoiced. The Games now had what every drama, every morality play needed, a "heavy." It's great for box office. It lifted a track meet from an off-beat recreational sport for a handful of figure nuts, fraction filberts, into cowboys and Indians, good guys-bad guys, black hats vs. white hats, the staple of sellout, standing-room-only drama. They would like to preserve it.

I THINK I can tell them how. You see, to get into the Olympic Games nowadays, you have to meet a set of minimal standards. You have to be able to high jump 6-10 or so, run the 100 under 11 seconds. And so on.

It is my proposal to impose on the Russians a set of standards, the bare minimum of common behavior they will have to meet to be accepted.

To get in the 1984 Games, the Russians must agree to the following:

1 – They will not invade any country under 14 million in population.

2 – They will not open fire on anything until they at least know what it is.

3 – They will not open fire on (a) tricycles (b) ambulances (c) lifeboats (d) school buses, even if they know what they are, and they will not set fire to orphanages even if they think the CIA planted a bug in there.

4 – They will try to muffle the screams in Lubyanka Prison while people are trying to sleep.

5 – They will take the next boatload of criminals Castro wants to send out of his country.

6 – They will kill no more than the absolute minimum to maintain terror.

7 – They will stop certifying as insane those who wish to emigrate from the workers' paradise.

8 – They will limit the number of KGB agents disguised as weight-lifter coaches, trainers, shoe salesmen and journalists to two per athlete at the L.A. Olympics.

9 – They will thank the farmers of America for saving their regime by feeding their people.

10 – They don't have to honor the Helsinki Accords, but they should try not to laugh at them.

11 – They should keep the tanks out of Prague and Budapest till after the Olympics and tell that Polish general to make his lips move at least when he's spouting the party line.

Do some of this and maybe we can save the Olympics this time. They don't have to sign anything, just bring along a copy of the Molotov-Ribbentrop agreement to show their heart's in the right place.

Caldwell seeks 1st tour victory

ABILENE (AP) — While Fuzzy Zoeller and Hal Sutton are engaged in a head to head struggle for the PGA Tour's money-winning lead, Rex Caldwell continues his personal, career-long quest for his first victory.

"I want to win," he said before teeing off today in the first round of the $350,000 LaJet Coors Classic.

"I want to win so bad.

"It's a personal thing with me.

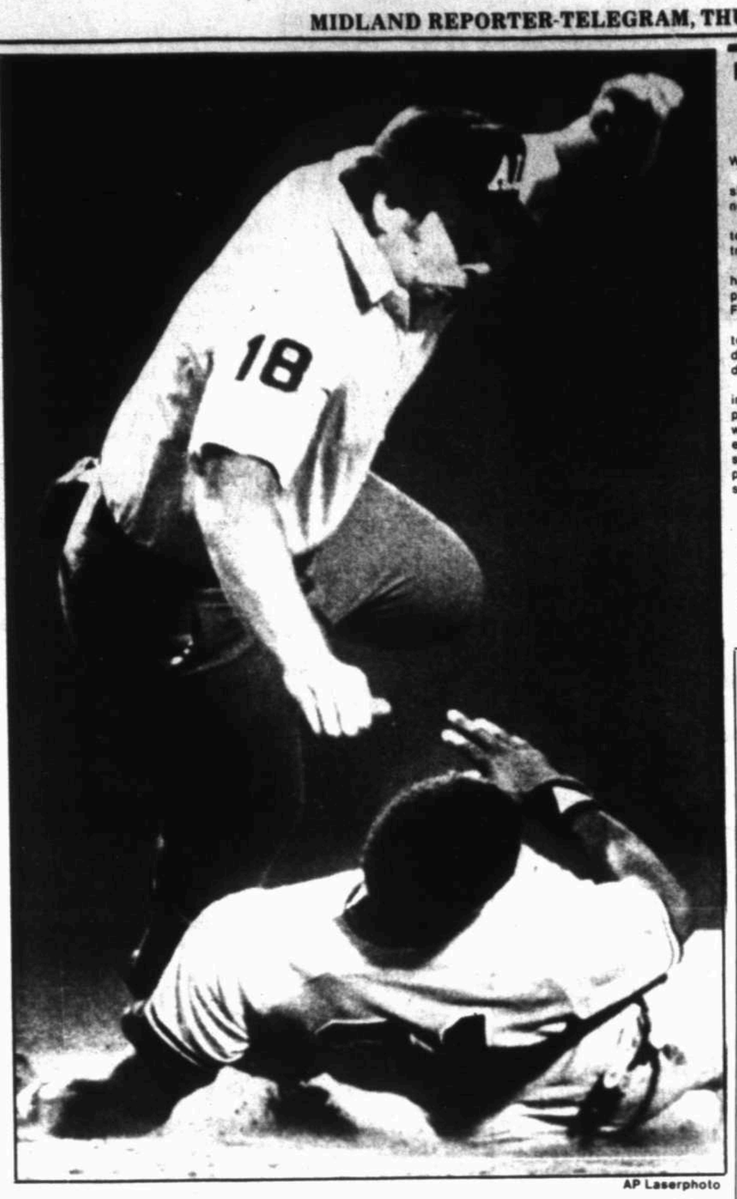

"The money's important. Sure. But let me win and they can pay me $10.

"I think I'm a good enough player to win. But I haven't done it. Not yet. And that's what I want.

"Just one time, I want to be able to say I went out there against the best players in the world and on that one week, I beat 'em.

"It seems like everybody else on the Tour is winning. Am I the only guy on the Tour, the only guy not a rookie, who hasn't won? It seems like it. You've got guys out here trying to quit the Tour, and they come up and win one. Look at Pat Lindsey. He's ready to pack it in, and he wins and he's exempt for two years. No way in the world he can quit now.

Inamori attracts best

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, at 44 playing some of the best golf of her career, says the $175,000 Inamori Classic at Torrey Pines Golf Course offers a test because "this course isn't like any other we play."

"You've got to be able to carry the ball a long ways in the (ocean) air, and a lot of the girls hit a low hook and watch it run. A lot of that is going to be taken away here, so it's going to favor the long hitters," said Carner, who is seeking her third victory in the last five tour events.

Carner is on the verge of becoming the first woman in 10 years to win three money titles in a row.

Dokes doesn't fear Coetzee's vaunted right

CLEVELAND (AP) — Michael "Dynamite" Dokes doesn't think much of Gerrie Coetzee's "bionic" right hand, while the challenger doesn't believe the champion's punching power lives up to his nickname.

"His power doesn't seem to be a problem for me," said Dokes, who will make a scheduled 15-round World Boxing Association heavyweight title defense against the top-ranked Coetzee Friday night at the Coliseum in Richfield, Ohio.

"He's a devastating puncher, but devastating punchers never really intimidate me," Dokes said Tuesday at a news conference here. "Guys with one punch never knock me out."

Coetzee has scored 17 knockouts in winning 28 fights against three losses and a draw. But his power failed him in two bids for the WBA title.

He hurt John Tate with a right hand in the fourth round, but was unable to follow it up and lost a unanimous 15-round decision at Pretoria, South Africa, Oct. 20, 1979, for the title made vacant by Muhammad Ali's retirement.

He had Mike Weaver in serious trouble in the eighth round, but let him off the hook and got knocked out in the 13th round Oct. 25, 1980, at Johannesburg.

IT WAS after Coetzee knocked out Leon Spinks in the first round to earn the fight against Tate that a publicist tagged Coetzee with the "bionic" hand because he had had bone-fusion surgery on it.

While the hand is not bionic, it certainly had been brittle. The South African has broken it five times, most recently last October.

Coetzee said he favored his right in fighting a 10-round draw against Pinklon Thomas Jan. 22 at Atlantic City, N.J., but that the hand is fine know.

But Jackie McCoy, a veteran California trainer who is working with Coetzee for this fight, doesn't feel that the challenger is a one-handed fighter. McCoy feels Coetzee has a good left jab and left hook.

"That would be the only chance he has, if he's developed his left hand for this fight, and I don't think he has," said Dokes.

COETZEE said his loss to Weaver was "a matter of fatigue. But he hits hard ... harder than Dokes. Dokes is a better boxer and ring technician, but doesn't have the punch."

Dokes, who at 25 is three years younger than Coetzee, won the title last Dec. 10, at Las Vegas, Nev., when he knocked down Weaver, then stopped him with the fight just 63 seconds old. In a rematch, ordered by the WBA because of widespread criticism of referee Joey Curtis for prematurely stopping the fight, Dokes kept the title on a 15-round draw at Las Vegas May 20.

That draw gave Dokes a 26-0-2 record, with 15 knockouts.

While both men claim to be disdainful of the other's power, each is predicting he will win by a knockout.

The fight, which will be televised live by Home Box Office, is scheduled to start at 9:22 p.m.

DOKES IS reportedly getting $750,000, while Coetzee's purse is $250,000.

The night Dokes kept the title on the draw with Weaver, Tim Witherspoon tried to win the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship from Larry Holmes and lost a 12-round split decision.

Witherspoon, who is 16-1 with 11 knockouts and is ranked No. 2 by the WBC and No. 4 by the WBA, will appear on the card in a scheduled 10-rounder against James "Quick" Tillis, who is ranked ninth by the WBC and No. 8 by the WBA.

Tillis, 24-3 with 18 knockouts, lost a unanimous 15-round decision to Weaver in a title bid in 1981.

The winner could get a match against Dokes if Dokes is successful. He said he plans to fight again in December and then in February.

In another 10-round heavyweight bout, Renaldo Snipes, rated No. 4 by the WBC and sixth by the WBA, will fight Alfredo Evangelista.

Wednesday's stars

PITCHING — Mike Boddicker, Orioles, pitched a five-hitter for his American League-leading fifth shutout and struck out a career-high 12 as Baltimore defeated Detroit 6-0.

HITTING — John Lowenstein, Orioles, hit a homer in the first game and a grand slam in the ninth inning of the nightcap as Baltimore won the second game 7-3.

IN OILER SHUFFLE

Giff back as starter

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Gifford Nielsen has lined up in the Houston Oiler depth chart behind such glittering names as Dan Pastorini, Kenny Stabler and Archie Manning.

Yet when the dust settled from Tuesday's block-buster trade that sent Manning and tight end Dave Casper to the Minnesota Vikings, there was Nielsen, back on top as the Oiler starter.

Just call him a survivor.

"I've had a lot of ups and downs on this team and played behind three good quarterbacks that have come and gone and I'm still here," Nielsen said.

"I'm thrilled at the chance to play. It's been a tough three games (three regular season losses). But I've got confidence in myself and in the team that we can put things together."

Nielsen is getting his fourth chance to take charge of the Oiler quarterbacking position. He went to training camp as the starter the past three seasons but was sidelined twice by injuries and beaten out this season by Manning.

But when the Oiler offense went into a tailspin after enjoying brief success against the Green Bay Packers and when Manning tossed eight interceptions in three games, Coach Ed Biles decided to return to youth.

"Gifford performed well when he played for us," Biles said. "Archie just didn't fit into our long-range plans. No one game had anything to do with this decision."

Nielsen's next challenge may not be any farther away than the next National Football League draft, however. He expects the Oilers to choose a quarterback with the draft choices they obtained from the Vikings.

"They have to draft a quarterback next year, I'm sure," Nielsen said. "But I'm not worried about it. If they do draft a quarterback I hope he's a great one and can help this football team. I just hope he doesn't start."

The shakeup also will offer a chance to see if third-string quarterback Oliver Luck, a second-year player from West Virginia, will figure in the Oilers' future plans.

"I have mixed feelings about Archie," Luck said. "I think he liked it here and wanted to stay. But I'm also happy for myself. I want the opportunity to play, too."

Ex-Chi Bear new Cubs president

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Finks, whose career in football has familiarized him with the intricacies of trading players, has switched sports — trading football for baseball.

The former vice president and general manager of the Chicago Bears was named president and chief executive officer of the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday, essentially taking complete charge of the baseball team.

"I came to grips last weekend as to what I wanted to do," said Finks, whose move to the Cubs had been rumored since late August. "Being chief executive officer, it makes me responsible for the club.

"I am here to do the best job I can. I don't have a baseball background, but sports has become such a large business that specialization is necessary."

The announcement was made by Stanton R. Cook, president and chief executive officer of Tribune Co., which purchased the Cubs from the Wrigley family two years ago.

Finks, 56, will assume many of the duties previously performed by Andrew J. McKenna, chairman of the board, and will be above General Manager Dallas Green.

"This is heady stuff for a country boy from Southern Illinois," said the native of Salem, Ill., who once quarterbacked the Pittsburgh Steelers, was an assistant coach at Notre Dame and ran the Minnesota Vikings for 10 years as general manager and vice president before joining the Bears in 1974.

"I will be responsible for the overall operation of the club, heavy in administration. Dallas will be in charge of the baseball operations and the players," Finks said.

Finks said Green would continue to negotiate player contracts.

"I've been in the role Dallas has," said Finks. "No one knows more than Dallas on baseball contracts and negotiations."

Finks resigned his position with the Bears on Aug. 24.

"One of the first calls I received was from Andy McKenna," he said.

The move obviously was a setback for Green.

Interview with Willie

Mays handles tough questions errorlessly

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Willie Mays fields provocative questions the way he used to make those basket catches for the Giants and Mets — sure-handed, no room for debate.

"What do you think about Hank Aaron's suggestion that he should be considered for commissioner of baseball?" somebody asked him.

"If Hank thinks so, fine," Willie responded. "But you gotta ask yourself, "Is he qualified?' You gotta be more than a one-time great ball player. You can't pick a commissioner on the color of his skin or just to make up for past injustices.

"It's a big job. The commissioner must be a lawyer, a negotiator, a businessman and a diplomat. He has to know all about TV contracts, player-management relations and stuff like that.

"More than anything else, he has to be strong."

WHEN ASKED if there was anybody he thought might be right for the job, which Bowie Kuhn vacates at the end of the year, Willie rolled his eyes, pondered a moment and replied:

"I don't want to say."

Asked if he himself were interested, the all-time All-Star indulged in the luxury of a belly-laugh.

"Me?" he said. "Not my thing."

Mays was one of the special guests at New York's 21 Club restaurant Wednesday to promote the second annual "Greatest Sports Legends" reunion next month at Bally's Park Place Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J.

Some 60 super stars from a dozen sports will assemble for the party, including Larry Holmes, Eddie Arcaro, Bob Feller, Johnny Unitas, Mark Spitz, Bobby Riggs, Wilma Rudolph, Billy Casper and Gordie Howe.

Willie took a $100,000-a-year job as director of community affairs for the New Jersey casino some two months after he was formally inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame Aug. 5, 1979.

COMMISSIONER Kuhn immediately ordered him to sever all working relations with baseball on the premise that, as an employee of a gambling casino, he would be exposed to unsavory influences. Later, the same action was taken against Mickey Mantle, another Hall of Famer, who accepted a similar position with a rival hotel.

Mays was crushed. His had been a lifetime infatuation with the game. He made numerous appeals, without success. "I don't smoke, I don't drink, I never go near the gambling tables," he said. "I miss being around baseball."

Unfortunately, baseball has never found a commensurate haven for its heroes, whether they be Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio, Mantle or Mays.

"Do you expect the new commissioner to reinstate you?" Willie was asked.

"I hear talk," he answered. "I don't know. Some people tell me it's likely so."

When people discuss the greatest ball players of all time, Willie's name is always included along with those of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Hank Aaron. Many will tell you that Willie's name "leads all the rest."

Willie is happy with baseball as it is presently structured and would make few changes, not even the controversial designated hitter rule.

"I don't think it's so bad for them to be different," he said. "It's good to have that rivalry. I know the American League would break their necks to beat us in the All-Star Game."

IN FOOTBALL, however, he prefers the old-fashioned way.

"I think a man ought to play both ways," he said, in disavowal of the platoon system. "I remember Marion Motley (Cleveland Browns), fullback on offense, linebacker on defense. He was a complete player."

Mays was reminded that, when he retired in 1973 at age 42, he might have extended his career five more years as a "dh" in the American League.

"Never considered it," he said. "I didn't just want to hit. I liked to field, catch, throw and run the bases."

He acknowledged that when his years were running down with the San Francisco Giants, he had a tempting offer to play in Japan.

"I asked Joe Reichler (an aide to the commissioner) about it," Willie said, "and he talked me out of it. He said Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb didn't do it. It was okay for some, but not the No. 1 — it would demean the game."

DeLeon retains ring title

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Carlos DeLeon's first defense since regaining the World Boxing Council cruiserweight title in July wasn't close, and it wasn't pretty.

The young champ took apart veteran Alvaro "Yaqui" Lopez to retain the title in a scheduled 12-round bout.

The fight began Wednesday night with the 24-year-old Puerto Rican decking Lopez 40 seconds into the first round with a left hook to the nose, a blow that brought the first blood.

It ended at 2:51 of the fourth when referee Hank Elespuru stopped it with Lopez on his feet in his corner. A straight left and short right had torn the skin over Lopez' right eye like a piece of cheap paper. Blood pumped wildly from a ragged two-inch cut.

"My face, it no help me anymore," said Lopez, 32. "The veins are really tender."

Elespuru, a ring veteran, was shocked by the cut.

"It's the biggest cut I've ever seen," Elespuru said with a grimace. "It wasn't so long as it was deep. You could see inside the skin."

Cheered by old-time fans and friends in the crowd of 2,449 at the small, outdoor stadium, the Mexican-born Lopez, who lives in nearby Stockton, had bounced right up from the first-round knockdown.

He'd lost four light heavyweight title bouts in his 11-year, 75-fight career and he knew this was his last chance. He hung on, absorbing straight lefts, hooks and one good right to the head.

Lopez showed again that he can take punishment. He didn't back up and a face that had been cut and stitched back together dozens of times barely held against DeLeon's twisting jab.

In the second and third rounds, Lopez demonstrated that he still knows how to bang combinations to the body. But he was slow and mechanical, not the fighter who, in his prime, battled 15 furious, championship rounds with John Conteh and 30 rounds in two title fights with Victor Galindez.

DeLeon, now 35-2-1 with 25 knockouts, never was hurt. He waited only for the appropriate moment to end the bout in the sparse division between heavyweight and light heavyweight. Both fighters had come in at 188¾, but DeLeon was stronger and quicker.

Lopez looked tired and sad as he crossed his chest at the start of the fourth round, as though he knew the end were near.

CBS college football coverage sophomoric

An AP Sports Analysis
By DAVE GOLDBERG

The difference between the ABC and CBS college football telecasts is the difference between a graduate student and a sophomore. The graduate students (ABC) project an air of authority and knowledge; the sophomores (CBS) are ... well, sophomoric.

A comparison:

In the second quarter of ABC's Oklahoma-Ohio State telecast last Saturday, Oklahoma's Spencer Tillman ran 37 yards for a touchdown. Keith Jackson, immediately identified Tillman as a prime Oklahoma high school product who had been red-shirted as a freshman.

"In my opinion, he's one of the finest running backs in the country," said Jackson, unmistakeable authority in his voice, "He just happens to play in the same backfield as Marcus Dupree."

AT ABOUT the same point of the Texas-Auburn game, Rick McIvor and Kelvin Epps combined on an 80-yard touchdown pass play. "McIvor," CBS' Pat Haden said, "is a hoss and a half." Fine Pat, how would he do at a mile and an eighth?

Both ABC and CBS had ranked teams playing each other Saturday — Texas and Auburn on CBS went to 55 percent of the nation; Ohio State and Oklahoma on ABC were national. The perfect forum for each network to show its best.

They did. Make it 21-7, ABC.

Why?

Maybe it's the perception that ABC seems to have been doing college football forever — the ring of authority in Jackson's voice. Throw in Frank Broyles and Jim Lampley, along with producer Chuck Howard and you have a group able to project a feel for the sport and its background.

CBS, IN only its second season at college football, is still learning. Haden and Gary Bender simply don't have that authority and there's no one in the studio with Lampley's knowledge of the most arcane college football lore.

Haden is a smart man with some good insights. But too often, he's a voice over pointing out on replays what the viewer can see for himself. "A good block, there," he says as the tape shows a good block. "Talk about athletic ability," he enthuses on a spectacular interception by Texas' Jerry Gray.

Bender is one of those play-by-play men who shouts at a three-yard gain and can't seem to get beyond the cliche. "Hook 'em horns," he says as the camera shows some celebrating Texas fans. "They're restructuring, they're trying to get back in the game," he says as the camera shows an Auburn assistant diagramming plays with his team trailing 17-0.

THE ABC crew isn't perfect. Jackson is prone to cliches like "they dodged a bullet" and "it's gut-check time out there" and Broyles is so laid-back he's sometimes sleep-inducing. But Jackson can come up with some dandies, too, as when, after Tillman and other unknown Oklahomans broke off good gains, he noted: "They've got more than one barrel to load."

Broyles does what Haden too often fails at — he tells WHY something happened. When Ohio State quarterback Mike Tomczak overthrew a receiver and was intercepted, Broyles noted that "from a coach's point of view, you want the quarterback to throw the ball below the shoulder pads. When you overthrow it, you get intercepted."

But even with its deficiencies, CBS also suffers from circumstances largely beyond its control — the older guys almost always seem more authoritative.

NBC, for example, is the more authoritative on baseball, thanks in large part to the enduring presence of Joe Garagiola and the camera innovations of Harry Coyle, although Al Michaels' presence as ABC's voice has helped close the gap.

Australia II stays alive

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Resilient Australia II stayed alive in the America's Cup battle thanks to a must-win, comeback victory.

That meant she needed only two more must-win victories.

Still, Aussie skipper John Bertrand, who conquered crippled Liberty in Wednesday's fifth race, says the tide is flowing his way.

"We certainly have momentum now," Bertrand said after Australia II sailed to a one-minute, 47-second victory that cut Liberty's lead in the best-of-seven series to 3-2. "Now, we've got two races to win."

"I think we could win 50 in a row with this yacht," said Australia II syndicate chief Alan Bond, whose boats won just one of 13 races in his three previous Cup campaigns. "The victory today proves we can win in any wind conditions."

Winds in the 10-20 knot range were forecast for today's sixth race.

Australia II was thought to be vulnerable in the fairly strong winds of 16-18 knots and choppy seas on Rhode Island Sound Wednesday. But it charged ahead of Liberty late on the first of six legs and never trailed again.

A victory by Australia II today would send the America's Cup to a seventh race for the first time. A victory by Liberty would make America's 25th defense of the Cup, which it has held since the first competition in 1851, a successful one.

"I won't feel comfortable until we win, but I'd rather be three wins and two losses than two wins and three losses," said Liberty skipper Dennis Conner. "Obviously, Australia II's a very good boat and very strong in all wind conditions."

The pre-series predictions — Australia II's superiority upwind and in light to moderate airs and Liberty's superiority downwind and in stiffer breezes — have not held up. The series has been unpredictable.

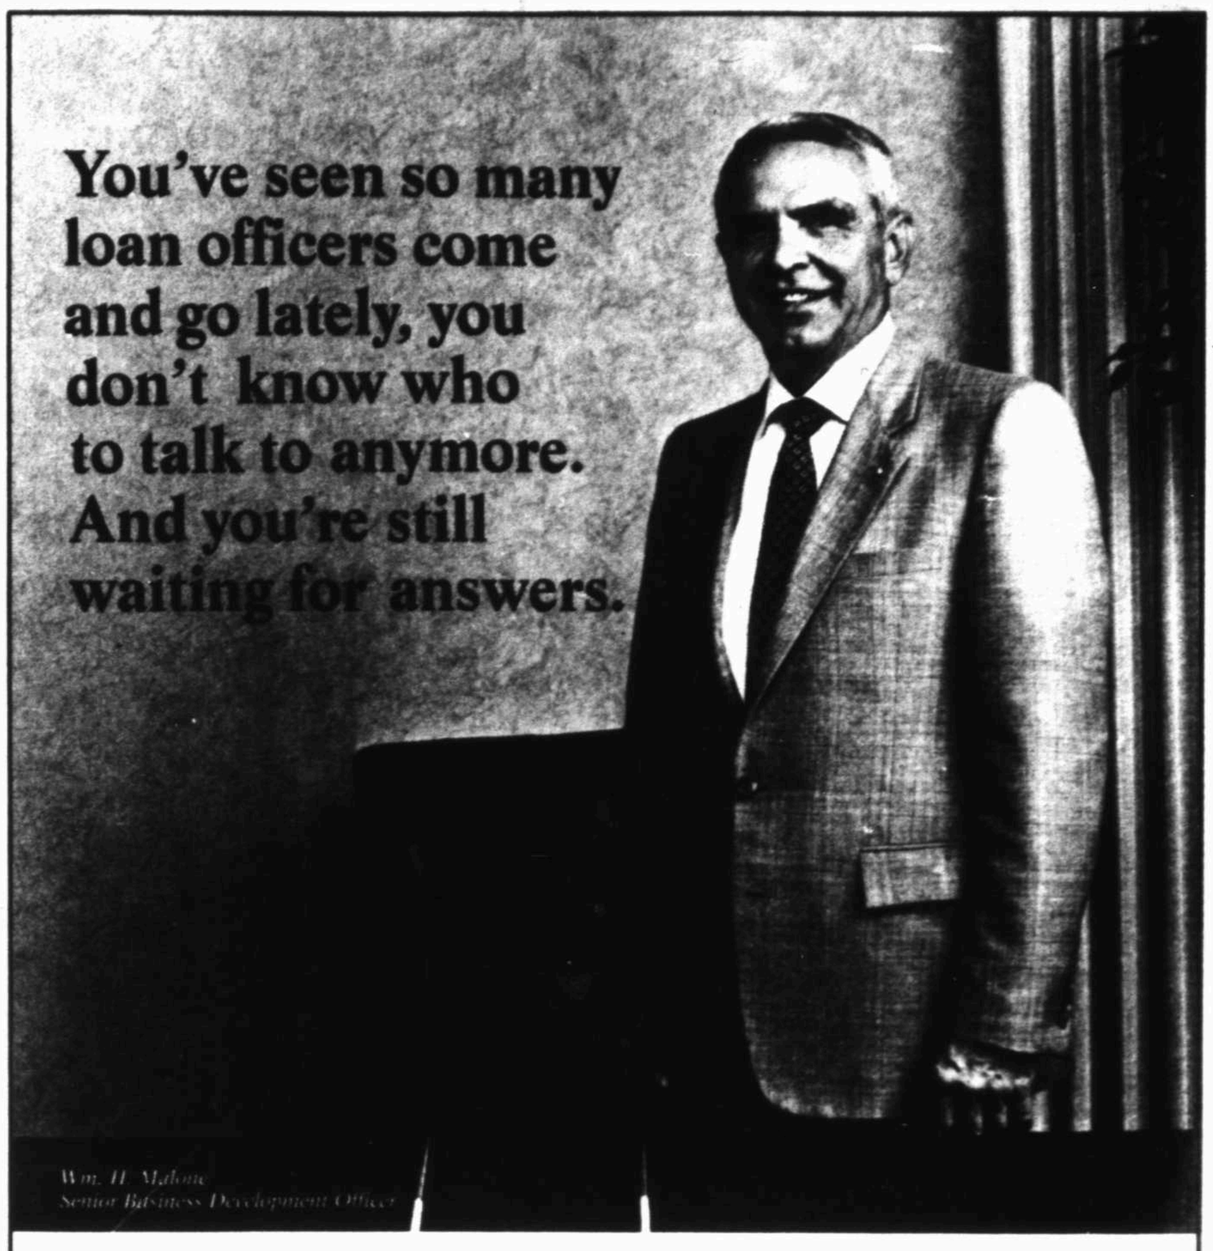

So was Wednesday's race.

Australia II, plagued by equipment failures the first two races, seemed to be in control when one of Liberty's two hydraulic jumper struts, V-shaped supports for the mast, bent and collapsed about an hour before the race. Then, as Liberty's crew tried to set its jib to start the first leg, a luff tape on it tore, forcing Conner to use his second choice for the headsail.

But Liberty seized on Bertrand's second consecutive poor start to grab a whopping 37-second advantage.

Finally, good fortune and the winds shifted back to Bertrand, who rode on a directional change in the breeze to a 23-second lead at the first mark.

When the jumper strut collapsed, Liberty crew members Tom Rich and Scott Vogel went up the mast to dismantle it and replace it with another one that had been rushed in from shore. The job was done two minutes before starting maneuvers were to begin. But about three minutes into the race, the replacement collapsed.

NY Jets troubles reflected by sad Sack Exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Klecko doesn't see his switch from end to tackle as a demotion — actually, just a lateral move.

"It doesn't make any difference where I play," says the strapping New York Jets' defensive lineman. "I'll play where they want me to. I always thought I was best at tackle, anyway."

Klecko is familiar with the position, of course. He played there in 1979 and just as recently as last week in the Jets' 23-13 loss to the New England Patriots. But he is far better known as one of the premier defensive ends on the Jets' so-called "Sack Exchange," a bullish, bookend twin to Mark Gastineau.

In 1981, Klecko and Gastineau combined for 41 quarterback sacks as the "Sack Exchange" cashed in 66 sacks altogether, one short of the National Football League record.

But the "Sack Exchange" has virtually gone out of business so far this season, collecting only three sacks — two by Klecko and one by Gastineau. Klecko was out with an injured right knee most of last season and has been trying to find his old form after an operation. The effectiveness of the front four has been further hindered by an injury that has shelved defensive tackle Abdul Salaam. And the Jets got more bad news last week when Gastineau injured his ankle and was listed as "questionable" for Sunday's game here with the Los Angeles Rams.

In short, opposing offenses have been piling up yardage, mostly by running, and points on the Jets, who have lost two of their first three games. The Jets' coaches are now hoping that Klecko's straight-ahead power will be more effective at the tackle position to stop the run. Kenny Neil, younger, lighter and more agile than Klecko at this point, will take over the right end spot.

"Neil's more comfortable at end (than at tackle)" says Jets Coach Joe Walton. "I think he has better size for end (6-foot-4). Kenny's an aggressive kid."

Of the move to put Klecko at tackle, Jets defensive Coach Joe Gardi says: "It's been in the back of our minds for some time now. Klecko was a great defensive end. Who knows? He could be a great defensive tackle, too."

Ironically, both of Klecko's sacks this year came as a tackle, in the game against the Patriots. But something is obviously missing in Klecko's game, thinks Walton.

"He's still tryng to find himself," Walton says. "He's coming off a bad knee operation and he can't be like he was in the past. He has to redevelop his confidence."

Before last Sunday, Klecko's last sack was also against the Patriots, on Sept. 19, 1982. It was then that he went down screaming with a ruptured tendon in his right knee and started his recent troubles.

In the Jets' opener this year against San Diego, Klecko got close to Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts and helped force one interception. But against Seattle, he was ineffective against rookie running back Curt Warner and quarterback Jim Zorn and Klecko admits, "I had a bad game."

Defensive tackle Marty Lyons, the other member of the Jets' front four, thinks that Klecko has earned a bad game or two after seven intense years in the NFL.

"Nobody can ask more of Joe Klecko than he's given his teammates," Lyons says.

Russians' ice hockey tour to U.S. zapped

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The planned tour of a Soviet Union hockey team to the United States this December to compete against the American Olympic team reportedly has been canceled.

Soviet authorities, in making the decision Wednesday, charged that the team's safety was jeopardized by anti-Soviet actions being whipped up by U.S. officials, it was reported in today's Los Angeles Times.

That reason was similar to the one given by the Soviets last Saturday when they canceled the planned visit of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to the United Nations in New York.

But the international department of the Soviet Sports committee denied the cancellation, while indicating that such a move was possible.

A cancellation might underline recent suggestions by official spokesmen that Soviet athletes might be kept away from the Los Angeles Olympics next year if their safety is not assured, the Times said.

The Soviet hockey team had originally been scheduled to play six games against the U.S. Olympic team.

Three of the games were canceled by promoters. Arena owners in Detroit and Philadelphia had said they would not allow the Soviets in their buildings.

Reagan's economist changes recovery forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's chief economist, buoyed by fresh evidence of a robust economic rebound, is changing his forecast to show an even stronger recovery in 1983 than earlier expected. It's the third revision this year.

But some private economists say the brighter estimate may include a dose of "wishful thinking."

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, predicted Wednesday that the economy would grow around 6.5 percent when the final figures are tallied for the year.

That's up from the 5.5 percent forecast in the administration's mid-year revision in July and more than double the weak 3.1 percent initially predicted in January.

Kathleen Cooper, senior financial economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, called Feldstein's new forecast "fairly ambitious but not outside the realm of possibility."

Added Thomas Thomson, chief economist for San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, "I think 6.5 percent has a touch of wishful thinking about it. ... I hope he's right."

Ms. Cooper is looking for a 5.7 percent gain, as measured by the inflation-adjusted gross national product between the fourth quarters of 1982 and 1983.

Both private economists expect a weaker performance in the final three months of the year with an easing of consumer spending and residential construction.

Bolstering Feldstein's predictions was a Commerce Department estimate Wednesday that the gross national product expanded at a strong 7 percent annual rate in the third quarter.

Still, it is cooler than the surging 9.7 percent of the April-June period, but much better than the 2.6 percent of the first three months of the year.

Feldstein praised the new report as "very good."

"We're really on track and a track that I think can be sustained," he said. "The odds are quite high of the recovery continuing at a reasonable pace, a pace consistent with falling unemployment" for the next 18 months.

Feldstein's fresh revision would put the current recovery dead in the center of the 6 percent to 7 percent average pace of economic growth recorded in the first year following other recessions in the past several decades.

For 1984, the administration economist held to the previous predictions of a 4.5 percent growth pace.

At the same time, he said inflation will "undoubtedly go up from its current level ... because the current level is obviously abnormally low."

It's running about 3 percent in the July-September quarter, according to a GNP-linked measure, and the administration projects it will turn in a 4.6 percent performance for the year as a whole.

Continental Quality at Southwest prices.

HOUSTON	BROWNSVILLE	McALLEN
$65/$50	$75/$60	$75/$60

CORPUS CHRISTI	NEW ORLEANS
$85/$65	$85/$65

Peak fares are in effect weekdays from 7:00 a.m. until 7:59 p.m. Off-peak fares (lower fares) are in effect weekdays from 8 p.m. until 6:59 a.m. and all day Saturday and Sunday.

Absolutely no restrictions. Every flight, every day.

Now when you fly Continental Airlines, you can get the comfortable, convenient services you expect from a full-service airline. All at a price you don't expect.

For instance, you'll be able to reserve an assigned seat ahead of time.

Once you're on the plane, you'll find plenty of space for hanging your garment bags.

And with our TravelBank℠ frequent traveler program, you can earn bonuses of 500 miles or more toward free vacations in Mexico and other exotic spots with each flight you take.

So fly Continental Airlines.

After all, why fly an airline that gives you none of this when you can fly the airline that gives you all of it for the same price?

For reservations or information, call your travel agent or Continental Airlines at 563-1710 or call toll free at 800-392-3390.

TAE shares discovery

Texas American Energy Corporation (AMEX Symbol TAE) recently announced it participated in a joint venture with Moran Energy Inc. of Houston, which has resulted in the successful discovery of a dual zone gas and oil well in southern Louisiana.

Through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Texas American Oil Corporation, Texas American Energy owns a 12.5 percent working interest in thewell, located in Terrebonne Parish. The well flowed at a daily rate of 7.9 million cubic feet of natural gas through a choke opening of 18/64 inch from depths of 11,247 feet and 11,249 feet. In a separate zone, the well also flowed 540 barrels of oil per day through a 12/64 inch choke from depths of 10,667 feet and 10,671 feet.

The well, LeTerre No. 1, is operated by Moran Energy Inc. that owns a 43.9 percent working interest. In addition to Texas American's 12.5 percent working interest, other partners in the well are: Lae Energy Inc. of Houston, 18.6 percent; and Amerada-Hess Corp. and Enterprise Resources Inc. 1981-83 Limited Partnership, with 12.5 percent each.

See Apple®'s Revolutionary New Personal Computer for the Office... Only at CTA!

Introducing Lisa.™ So advanced, you already know how to use it. Lisa™ is nothing short of a revolution in personal computing for the office. It represents a totally new software technology, over 200 person-years in development. The hardware is awesome: MC68000 32/16-bit processor, 1-Megabyte RAM, 364 lines X 720 dots bit-map display, dual 860K disk drives (1.4-Megabytes unformatted), 5-Megabyte ProFile hard disk. But the real revolution is in Lisa™'s totally new approach to software.

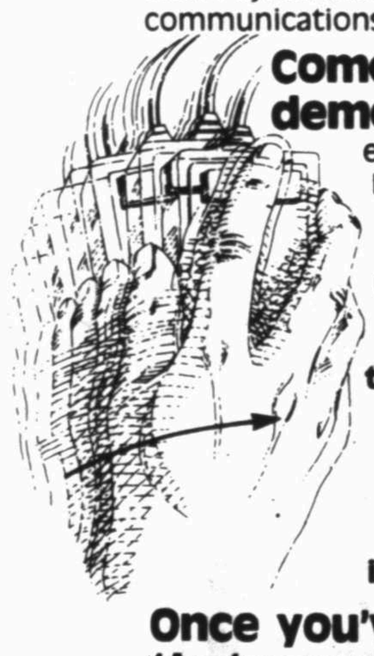

Lisa™ works the way you do

All Lisa functions are selected with the pointer from the Menu Bar, so you don't have to search through a manual.

Lisa's familiar symbols simulate the way you work at your desk.

To use conventional personal computers, you first have to program yourself by studying the manual and learning computer commands. Lisa™ replaces those commands with pictures that let you work in the same familiar way you've always worked at your desk. File folders look like file folders. There's a calculator, stationery, even a wastebasket. To tell Lisa™ what you want, all you have to do is point to the appropriate picture using a clever device called a "mouse." With more software on the way, Lisa™'s integrated software packages now cover every major business application: LisaCalc electronic spreadsheet, LisaList electronic personal database, LisaWrite executive word processing, LisaGraph business graphics, LisaDraw design graphics, LisaProject electronic project management and LisaTerminal data communications.

Come in to CTA this week for a "hands-on" demonstration

Of course, the only way to appreciate everything Lisa™ can bring to your office is to experience Lisa™ for yourself. So every day we're open this week CTA will provide a free Lisa™ demonstration and seminar at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. at our San Miguel Square store. Please call for an appointment to make sure our trained, qualified instructor can answer all of your questions. Computer Technology Associates was selected to be the only authorized Lisa™ dealer in the Permian Basin because we're the only ones that sell and support the full line of Apple® products. And, as in the past, we will provide the best selection of hardware and software and the authorized, factory-trained service and support you deserve for your computer investment.

Once you've seen Lisa,™ you'll be glad to know that now you can get Lisa™ for only $6995. Invest just $6995 and get the complete Lisa™ hardware package. Or get Lisa™ hardware along with a Lisa™ software package for only $8190. Even if you want the whole revolutionary Lisa™ system - hardware, software and printer - it's only $8490. But remember, you'll find these prices only at CTA. Computer Technology Associates — your full-line, full-time, full-service computer store!

Pipeline firm, homeowner sue appraisal district

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A San Antonio pipeline company and a Midland homeowner have filed suits in Midland's 238th State District Court in charging that the Midland County Appraisal District's valuation of their properties exceeds the fair market values from almost 100 percent to 300 percent.

In refiling an old suit, Valero Transmission Co. of San Antonio says Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson appraised its pipelines running through Midland County at $3,385,060. After protesting the 1983 valuation before the district's Appraisal Review Board (ARB), he valuation was set at $3,101,460.

Valero says the gas lines are worth $1,581,640 on the fair market but had rendered their value at $1,595,160.

"The chief appraiser and the ARB...appraised the property in an amount that exceeded its market value by more than 96 percent and exceeded the value rendered by Valero by more than 94 percent," says Valero.

The transmission company claims the property was appraised "unequally in comparison to the level of appraisals" of other property in the district.

"The Texas Constitution and the (Texas Property Tax) Code imposed a duty upon the the chief appraiser and the ARB to appraise the property at its market value," says Valero, which claims Wilkinson and the ARB, chaired by Jack Mogle, disregarded those constitutional and statutory mandates.

Valero is asking the court to "fix" market and appraised values on the property at not more than $1,581,640.

In the other suit, Midlander Joe G. Roper says the appraisal district valued his under-construction main residence in northwest Midland County, barn and other structures on a 10-acre site at $462,000 in 1983. A year earlier, it was valued at $161,820, he says. Roper is claiming the 300 percent increase is unfair although some construction had been done on the residence in 1982.

The property was in a "state of suspended construction" and remodeling from Aug. 1, 1982 to Aug. 1, 1983.

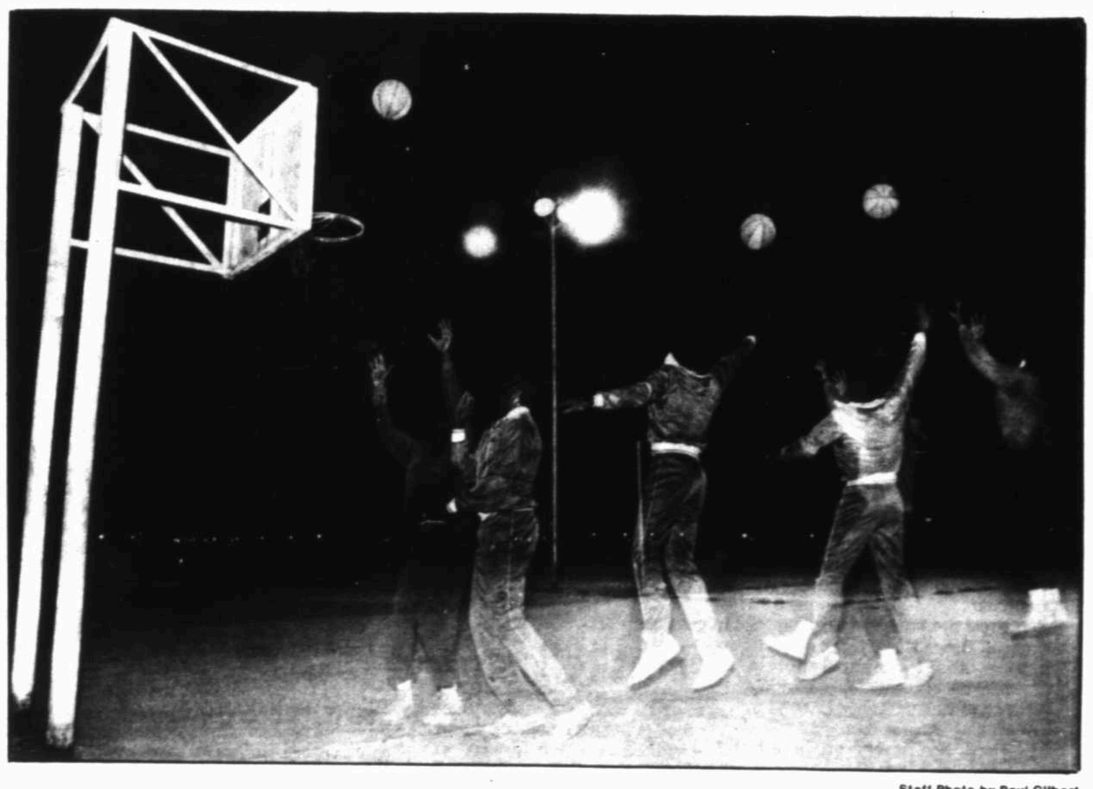

"The work done during the seven months of 1982 when a contractor was intermittently working on the project was no more than 10 percent of the total work required for completion of construction," says Roper. As a result of the construction delay, the property by Jan. 1 had progressed to 60 percent completion, "which is considerably below the 80 percent completion" used in the appraisal district's valuation of his property in January 1983.

Roper says his main residence contains 4,700 square feet and not the 5,417 square footage claimed by the appraisal district. Further, he says the residence is "not new construction but is essentially a remodeling of an older strucuture."

The property's fair market value is "speculative," he says, since a buyer "would bear the undetermined cost of completion...before the main residence would be a habitable structure."

Roper recommended the court order a $177,000 valuation on the property.

His 1983 county, school, college and hospital taxes on the property totaled $5,217.37, according to court records.

Mosbacher seeking senate seat

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

He's never been elected to an office, but Rob Mosbacher, 32, of Houston is seeking the Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate on the premise he is the only candidate with Senate experience.

Mosbacher, who has worked behind the scenes in Republican politics for several years, including six as an aide to U.S. Sen. Howard Baker, explained his candidacy during a news conference Wednesday afternoon at the Midland Hilton.

He will be in the primary with Ron Paul of Lake Jackson and Phil Gramm of College Station, who will announce his candidacy today. Gramm will hold a news conference at 10:15 a.m. Friday at Midland Regional Airport. The Senate seat has been held the past 21 years by John Tower, also a Republican, who announced recently he wouldn't seek re-election.

In outlining his platform, Mosbacher said he believes President Reagan has "put the country on the right road by reducing the cost of government spending" and by rebuilding national defense.

The attorney-businessman has been on Reagan's Task Force on Private Sector Initiatives to put the idea into action. "We've identified creative ways to address social and economic problems in this state."

He cited an example in Houston where the Harris County Medical Society put together medical help for persons who had been unemployed for a long time and no longer had health insurance. Of 4,500 physician members, 1,000 are participating in the program, treating these people at no cost.

Also on his list of private initiative successes is Midland's Christmas in April program where local persons and businesses volunteer time and money to repair houses of low-income elderly and/or handicapped people. Such efforts can be duplicated across the country, he contended.

"This country has a lot of generosity and it became dormant over the last generation or two" when people began to depend on the government for help, Mosbacher said.

"If we want to continue economic recovery, we must reduce the role of government," he said, adding that it doesn't mean saying there are no longer problems. Instead, those problems should be turned back to the local private iniative project.

Mosbacher supports a strong national defense, but he wants to address wastes in the military budget. He would like a seat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, saying "it's critical to this country and to this state."

Tower, he noted, has been on that committee.

Looking at the state's problems with immigration and the influx of Mexican nationals into Texas, Mosbacher said he doesn't agree with one government proposal requiring employers to verify a person's nationality before hiring him. Instead of the Border Patrol being reduced, as it has been, Mosbacher said it should be increased.

As president of RAM Drilling Company, Mosbacher acknowledged financial problems many energy firms are experiencing and advocated decontrol of natural gas.

Women and Hispanics need to be brought into the party, and Mosbacher said he feels he can do this easier than Gramm, whom he described as having a more conservative philosophy than he.

Mosbacher plans to do this not by creating special interest programs, he said, but by showing these people are needed in the party. He is aiming for support from the 25-40 age group.

The primary isn't until May 1984, and Mosbacher expects to spend almost $2 million to get the Republican nomination. His strongest opponent is Gramm, he said, agreeing the congressman has a stronger name identification statewide. And there is a possibility of a runoff with Gramm.

The Democrats, Mosbacher contended, haven't come up with a candidate to excite the crowds, except in West Texas. Kent Hance, who represents the 21st Congressional District that once included Midland, has elicited the strongest reaction in West Texas Democrats of all the candidates, including Bob Krueger.

Mosbacher's finance chairman is his father, who was national finance chairman for Gerald Ford's presidential campaign in 1976, George Bush's presidential campaign in 1980 and then the Reagan-Bush campaign.

Clean Midland needs volunteers

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Clean Midland is looking for volunteers interested in improving the city's appearance, according to Nancy Sharp, the organization's director.

"Our primary effort is directed toward the overall reduction of litter, not just periodic cleanups," she said.

The volunteer drive is an ongoing effort, she noted, but next week will mark a special six-week recruitment effort.

Volunteers are needed to staff the organization's five committees, which she refers to as "the working arms of Clean Midland."

"For instance, the civic committee works with various civic organizations on projects to keep parks and streets clean and to improve the appearance of yards and alleys.

"We want to educate people on what individuals can do to improve the appearance of Midland. We need to change the attitudes and habits people have, instead of just cleaning up all the time."

A second facet of the drive is to gain financial independence for Clean Midland, which currently is supported jointly by city and Chamber of Commerce money.

Students can join for as little as $1; while others can participate financially with contributions ranging from $5 for individual memberships to $250 or more as a "benefactor."

Clean Midland officially began last February when it was certified as a member of Keep America Beautiful Inc., a network of more than 300 communties nationwide that are trying to reduce litter in their area.

Last May, Clean Midland spearheaded a citywide cleanup of large appliances, and on Oct. 8 the Midland Lions Club will participate in cleaning up special areas such as railroad rights of way and Scharbauer Draw. Volunteers are also needed for that effort, according to Ms. Sharp.

"We're taking a systematic approach to the litter problem," she added.

Funds reach 25 percent mark

Funds for the United Way of Midland campaign tipped the 25 percent mark, it was announced today during the noon report meeting at the Yucca Theatre.

Total funds for the first report reached $431,424 of the $1,712,000 goal for the campaign.

Special gifts totaled $141,498 of the $353,706 goal, or 40 percent, while residential contributions reached 3,500 of the $15,000 goal, or 23 percent. Independent funds came to $1,565 of the $85,923 goal.

Industry and Commerce topped $114,146 of the $521,226 goal with major firms contributing $105,013. Pacesetters reached 10 percent of the $76,266 goal and small business brought in $1,758 of its $25,000 goal.

Oil companies reached 25 percent, or $135,583 of the $536,205 goal. Contributions included: $105,704 from major oil; $18,470 from intermediate oil; $8,809 from service companies and $2,600 from drilling companies.

Public and Professional funds totaled $35,132 of the $199,956 goal, or 18 percent. Professional reached $7,046 of the $95,061 goal, while government/services reached 70 percent of the $39,900 goal, or $28,086. No funds for education's $64,995 goal was reported.

Grand jury indicts three persons

A federal grand jury in Midland on Wednesday indicted two Odessans and a Midlander for embezzlement, forgery and possession of stolen mail.

Indicted were:

—Georgejean Norman, 30, of Odessa, who was charged by indictment on two counts of embezzling U.S. Postal Service blank money orders on Aug. 24, 1982. Maximum penalty for each offense is a five-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine.

—Richard Allen Womack, 24, of Odessa who was indicted for forging the endorsement "Kevin D. Allison" on a $1,633 U.S. Treasury check in July 1982 and for possessing a letter which was stolen from the U.S. mails. Maximum punishment for the forgery offense is a 10-year prison sentence and a $1,000 fine. Possessing stolen mail is punishable by a five-year prison sentence and a $2,000 fine.

—Janette Rivers, also known as Frances Jenette Rivers, Frances Jenette Shelton and Mrs. Charles Rivers, 29, of Midland. She was indicted for forging the endorsement "Espinola Taylor" on a $570.06 U.S. Treasury check and for possessing stolen mail addressed to Espinola V. Taylor of 510 S. Calhoun St. Maximum penalty for forgery is a 10-year prison sentence and a $1,000 fine. Possessing stolen mail is punishable by a five-year sentence and a $2,000 fine.

ED TODD

Does anyone know what he's talking about?

Just who knows about x, y, z and tutti-frutti?

Who says anybody, no matter how self-assured, knows what he's talking about?

Would you assign Howard Cosell to narrate a classical ballet or Don Meredith to talk about nuclear physics in a tea garden, Ronald Reagan to give a definitive study on Lyndon B. Johnson at a Democratic Party convention, or Richard Nixon to talk about how it could have been had Watergate not emerged?

To do so or not might depend if you're going for comic effect, a scholarly approach or the ludicrous.

Would you assign Ed Todd to cover a rock 'n' roll concert, a football game or a computer session? Not if you want a credible report.

A few years back, an editor at this newspaper was soliciting a volunteer to cover and write a review of a Ted Nugent rock concert. No one came forward until this fellow, Todd, who has an aversion for hard rock, out of curiosity decided to check out Nugent.

The upshot: Noisy Nugent was no Glenn Miller. He didn't bring a dance band to town. He was loud. He spat. He screamed. He lusted. He performed with the gusto of a wild fraternity initiation party. The youthful audience seemed hypnotized by the screaming decibels, the flashing colors and the stirring movements of Nugent & Co.

Others, including Todd, stuffed cotton and paper tissue into their sensitive ears. It was still almost unbearable. The music quaked the body, sorely affected the ear canal, and jarred the brain. Aside from the toll on the flesh, it's a wonder Chaparral Center today is not rife with cracks and chasms.

Football. What learned soul would take the time to watch 22 armored and helmeted guys line up on a green field and play with an egg-shaped ball covered with pigskin?

Millions of folks do, and thousands write and talk about it for a living. Some people know what they're watching and somehow make sense out of the huddling, grunting, ball chasing, hitting, tripping, tackling, ball slamming and rump patting.

You can sort of sense the fun of throwing a ball into a crowd and seeing if your man can catch it. But what's the fun of knocking somebody for a loop or being the one knocked down and out?

It must be the pay or the girls; maybe the gals like to see their guys in the arena. It's an unholy war. Otherwise, it surely would take a masochist to suffer through the pawing. Maybe the after-the-game glory is worth the agony. Only the athletes know or maybe they don't. Anyway, the sports writers speculate.

Computers. As the computers get more and more ingrained in people's lives, maybe the computer mystic will die out. The computer is fast on the multiplication tables and has vast retention — often mislabeled as "memory." The computer has no more memory than does your filing cabinet. It just stores stuff and other data you might put into it. It's no panacea.

Computers, football and rock music have much in common. They're hybrids of business and entertainment. And those who care to try to make sense out of any of them can hack away.

Insurance executive flees two abductors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An insurance executive kidnapped and robbed by two knife-wielding men managed to escape when the pair made one too many stops for beer, authorities said.

Stanley Pisano, 64, said he was abducted by two drunken, shabbily dressed men who confronted him in the parking lot of the Brackenridge Park golf course.

The men held a knife to his throat during a two-hour drive through South Texas, but Pisano said he escaped when they made one of their periodic stops for beer and the driver relaxed and reached to get a can from his friend.

The two men were arrested in Atascosa County after Pisano bolted from the car and they crawled under an abandoned frame house to hide, Sheriff Tommy Williams said.

"They kept telling me they were going to kill me if I tried anything," Pisano said Wednesday. "They were desperate and mean-looking."

Pisano, vice president of the local branch of Alexander and Alexander, said one of the men had first approached him about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday and asked for a ride.

"I immediately smelled booze when he came up to the car," he said.

Pisano said the man stumbled away when he was refused a ride.

Man killed in accident

BIG SPRING — A Coahoma man was killed in a two-vehicle accident near here shortly after 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Howard County Judge Milton Kirby was 68-year-old Haskell Autrey. His body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Autrey was westbound on the north shoulder of Interstate 20 about 8:10 a.m. when a westbound GMC dump truck went out of control and swerved into his 1982 Ford pickup truck.

Driver of the dump truck, Phillip Searfoss of Big Spring, was not injured. The accident occurred 7.5 miles west of Big Spring when Searfoss leaned over to turn on the truck's heater, a DPS spokesperson said.

Man gets life for killing

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — Calvin Loyd Padgett has been sentenced to life in prison for the fatal shooting of a Pizza Hut employee in this East Texas community 16 months ago.

The jury that convicted him Tuesday for the murder of Howard Leroy McClaflin, 25, decided during seven hours of deliberations Wednesday against death by injection for Padgett.

District Attorney Charles Mac Cobb said he was pleased about the conviction, but "disappointed that the jury was not able to agree that he was a continual threat" to society and should be sentenced to die.

Padgett also is charged with capital murder in the deaths of George Dwain Landrum, 42, and Shirley O'Bier Thompson, 24.

Defense attorney Jerry Birdwell announced plans to appeal.

"The conviction is wrong. I think he is innocent," Birdwell said.

"I think all the evidence clearly showed — from his past criminal record and the facts of the case and the opinion of the psychiatrist — that he is extremely dangerous and will be a continual threat," Cobb said.

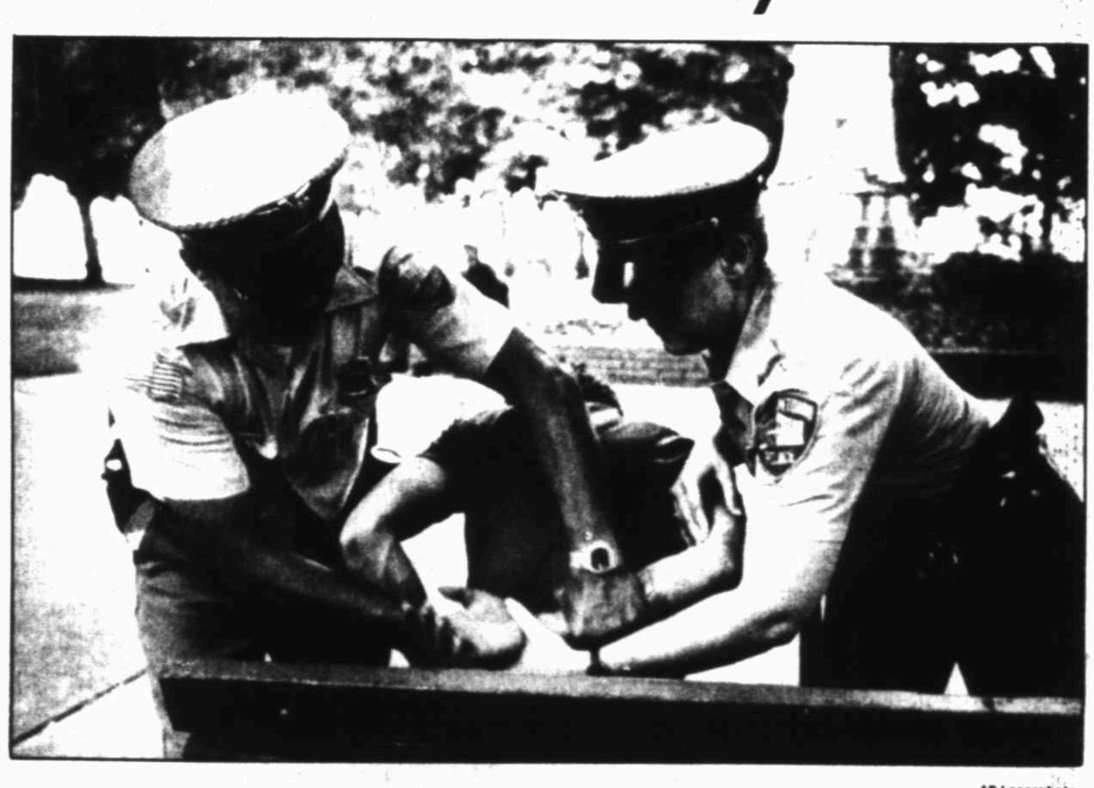

However, Cobb declined to say if he would try Padgett on the remaining capital murder charges.

The bodies were found in or near a walk-in cooler at the rear of the restaurant. All had been shot, and Landrum had also been hit in the head with a hammer, authorities said.

"Something that disturbs me is that I observed a lot of sympathy for the defendant's mother and sister, much more than has ever been expressed for the family of the victims," Cobb said.

Several people congratulated Padgett's mother and sister after the sentence was read.

Policewomen walk a lonely beat

AP Laserphoto

San Antonio police officers Chris Vieyra and Sherry Caruso arrest a man for public intoxication. Ms. Caruso and fellow policewomen face some criticism from male law enforcement officers who privately say that a "broad with a badge is worthless."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The first arrest of the evening was fast and easy. He was a lean, bony transient sleeping on a bench in Travis Park.

Foot Patrolman Chris Vieyra leaned over and smelled the man's breath for alcohol. He frisked the suspect, then nodded to his partner.

Sherry Caruso snapped on the handcuffs and yanked the man to a sitting position.

"Why are you taking me in?" the transient asked, blinking his eyes in confusion. The two officers told him he was being booked for public intoxication and reassured him it would be only for the night.

IT WAS A SIMPLE arrest. No muss, no fuss.

But they're not all like that. Especially on hot summer nights when tempers flare and violence lurks behind the next call.

Those are the nights that separate the men from the boys — and the male officers from their female counterparts.

Those are the nights when grizzled officers say privately that a "broad with a badge" is worthless.

"BEING ARRESTED by a woman is like being sent to your room by your mama," a veteran patrolman grumbled.

Such remarks are not merely locker-room "maschismo." Depite official lip service about the effectiveness of policewomen and their growing role in the department, many male officers fear a woman at their back in a tight situation is worse than no back-up at all.

"Sometimes a soft touch can help control a guy, but I'd rather see someone 6-foot-3 and 200 pounds standing behind me," said one young patrolman.

"Sometimes there is a need to go ahead and get physical," he said. "Women have a tendency to delay doing that and a call can be blown out of proportion because they didn't act in a physical way."

PATROLMAN GERI Garcia, a soft-spoken mother of two, came up against such attitudes when she graduated from the police academy in October.

She readily acknowledges that most female officers are physically smaller than their male counterparts. But sometimes the "machismo" of a male officer only serves to inflame a confrontation, she said.

"The majority of us are not the same size and strength as men, so you have to use more tact," she said. "If a guy needs to go to jail, he goes to jail. There's a big difference between going in there and screaming back and being part of the problem, or resolving it in another way."

The more chauvinistic officers claim women are spared more physical confrontations simply because of their sex.

"A MAN IS LESS likely to jump on a woman just because she's a woman," a young patrolman said. "There's no honor in (it)."

Women have come a long way in the San Antonio Police Department since World War II, when the first "powder puff squad" was activated to control prostitutes at Fort Sam Houston.

Today, the feminine influence can be felt almost everywhere. But statistics indicate it still is a minor influence, at best.

Women constitute less than 4 percent of the entire department. Of 1,116 officers, only 40 are women.

DESPITE THE FIGURES, there is a general consensus among the rank-and-file that women are here to stay. Most agree women are needed vitally in such areas as the juvenile division and sex crimes.

For Mrs. Garcia, like other women in the department, becoming a police officer was not a carefully plotted plan she nurtured from childhood.

Nor was it the pay, the hours or life on the streets that attracted her.

"It's some kind of fever you catch that stays with you," she said.

MALE OFFICERS concede the sensitivity that female officers bring to the job is an asset when dealing with the traumatized rape victim or an abused child.

But it is that same quality that also is criticized in the male-dominated world of the San Antonio Police Department.

Deputy Chief Marion Talbert, one of the high-ranking officers, is well known for his outspoken views on female officers.

Women share the pay, but not the danger, Talbert contends.

WOMEN ARE FINE when it comes to "writing reports or handling children," but in a barroom brawl situation, they can't deal with it, he said.

"It's my opinion that they're not earning their equal pay," he said. "I haven't seen any of them that could handle the rough, physical aspects of the job.

"When they get to be a significant portion of the force, you're going to get in trouble," he said.

Mahalia Ritchey, one of the department's two female detectives, began mulling over the idea of becoming a police officer when her father, a robbery detective, informed her the department was accepting applications from women.

Burglaries reported

In complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, the Exxon Service Station at 1000 Andrews Highway was reported broken into Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

Taken were a metal box containing $90 to $100 in change, a vinyl money bag full of quarters and an envelope containing $366 in cash and checks. Entry was gained by breaking a window, according to police.

In another burglary complaint, Edward Holloway, no address available, told officers a tool box and tools worth a total of $400 were taken from his vehicle while it was parked at the Lexington Motor Inn, 1003 S. Midkiff Road, Wednesday.

And an $823 saxophone was reported stolen from Alamo Junior High, while a $377 flute was reported taken from Goddard Junior High.

In a vandalism complaint, police said a 26-year-old transient jailed on public intoxication charges Wednesday did an estimated $250 damage to a bunk after he became unruly and started banging on the cell in which he was confined.

Prosecutor not to be disciplined for comment

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton of Houston has decided against disciplining Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Berg for a comment in court that drew an official rebuke from the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In his order released Wednesday, Singleton said criticism of Berg's performance in previous cases has been justified. But Singleton added that Berg did not intend to strike a "foul blow" in the recent brouhou.

Berg has been rebuked four times in as many years, including the recent flap for asking "an offensive question" during a trial.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans criticized Berg for asking a defendant a question that implied he was guilty of a crime for which he was not on trial.

But in a Sept. 8 hearing on the latest rebuke, every witness who testified, including several lawyers and five federal judges who submitted letters, argued against punishing Berg.

In 1981, three circuit court judges noted that Berg's privilege of practicing in federal court "may be forfeited ... we shall issue no further warnings."

Two cases were reversed on appeal because of Berg's trial tactics.

Hospital releases three rescued fishermen

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Three fishermen rescued after their boat sank in the Gulf of Mexico have been released from a hospital and a fourth, who spent 46 hours in the water, has greatly improved, a hospital spokesman said.

Ned Cameron of Bay City, who staggered ashore Monday after nearly two days and nights in the water, was in satisfactory condition in the Matagorda General Hospital today.

His friends, all of whom were rescued Sunday, the day after the accident, were released Monday, a spokesman for the Brazosport Community Hospital in Freeport said.

Those men were John Ward, 53, of Houston; Jerome Kovar, 59, of Bay City, and Ed Waligura, 38, of Sugar Land.

The four men were fishing 30 miles offshore from Freeport Saturday night when Ward's boat, the Crackerjack, capsized and sank.

The men became separated when Cameron and Waligua attempted to swim to a shrimp boat 300 yards from where Crackerjack sank.

Cameron made it to the shrimp boat, but was unable to climb aboard or to attract the attention of crewmen on board.

Waligua was rescued by the Coast Guard on Sunday, and Kovar and Ward were rescued by fishing boats Sunday morning.

Ex-official indicted for indecency

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — The former director of the Catholic Youth Organization of San Antonio archdiocese has been indicted on two counts of sexual indecency with a child.

A Comal County grand jury on Wednesday returned the indictments against Duncan Cameron Whitney, 46.

The charges stemmed from an investigation into reports of an alleged fondling incident on Aug. 4 involving two brothers, officials said.

Whitney had long served as executive director of the CYO. He had worked in the youth department of the archdiocese for 20 years before his arrest here last week.

Whitney surrendered last Thursday after being named in an arrest warrant charging him with indecency with a child.

Comal County officials said they began an investigation based on an account a 12-year-old San Antonio boy gave his parents.

Master of arts degree recipients were Betty Depew, secondary education; Teresa Jimenez, education; Wanda Mohn, behavioral science; and Cynthia Savage, secondary education.

Midlanders receiving the bachelor of business administration degree were Timothy Parsons, management; Todd Parsons, management; Kelly Sewell, management; and Cindy Williams, accounting and information systems. Receiving a master of buiness administration degree was Constance Fradenburg Ladd.

Recipients of bachelor of science degrees in geology were Charlene Blackburn, Robert Daniels, Rebecca Egg, Rebecca Kernan, Thomas Kirwan, Gregory Kruse, Martha Petraitis, Janice Roberts, James Stewart, Sigrid Franz and Jerry Suggs Jr.

Area graduates from Big Spring were Bettie Cox, MA in secondary education; Mariane Boyer and Kenneth Randall, both of whom received master of business administration degrees. Those from Andrews included Angie Jones, MA in education, and Joe Barnes, bachelor of business administration in management. Lance Edwards of Crane received the bachelor of business administration degree in accountancy and information systems.

Council to hold fall workshop

The Region 18 division of the Texas Joint Council of Teachers of English will hold its annual fall workshop at McCamey High School. It will be 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, and the featured speaker is Dr. Joyce Armstrong Carroll of McMurry College in Abilene. For more information contact Ron Williams, 652-8603, or Betty Valentine, 652-3391.

TCU campaign drive to begin

The annual Midland/Odessa campaign on behalf of Texas Christian University will begin Monday with Jim Lucas of Midland as general chairman. Managers for the 1983 fund drive seeking $75,000 in donations will be Jay Disney, head of the alumni group in Midland, and James Cox, friends and parents group leader for Midland.

A music educators workshop is scheduled at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Oct. 8. It will be sponsored by Midessa Musica, a student music organization. The day-long event is part of a district event for the Texas Music Educators Association.

Featured guest artist is David Holt, nationally-known performer and music educator from Houston. A performance workshop for music teachers with Holt is planned for the morning, and a session on computer applications for music is scheduled for the afternoon. It will cover story-telling techniques; hambone rhythms; playing spoons, bones and paper bags; clog dancing; and use of an Apple music computer.

Holt will perform in a 7:30 p.m. concert in the performance hall. It is free and open to the public.

Senator accepting applications

Senator John Tower (R-Texas) has announced he is accepting applications from Texas students who wish to compete for his nomination to the nation's four service academies.

Potential candidates must be between the ages of 17 and 22, unmarried and a U.S. citizen. Interested seniors may obtain an application from Tower's Dallas office at 1100 Commerce, Dallas, TX 75242.

The deadline for completing the application is Dec. 15. Tower is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

'Block grant' system hurts urban districts

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — After a year's experience with the Reagan administration's controversial "block-grant" method of giving federal money to local schools, federal support of urban-desegregation efforts has fallen off dramatically. At the same time more districts are using federal aid to expand libraries, buy computers and teach people how to use them.

These are conclusions reached in half a dozen private and federal studies examining the effect of one of the two block grants in the Education Consolidation and Improvements Act of 1981, a centerpiece of the administration's effort to restructure domestic spending.

The studies, coming at a time when the block-grant concept is under increasing criticism, diverge on many key points, but they agree on the overall conclusion that the losers in the new system tended to be poor urban-school districts, while the winners tended to be private schools and districts that had fared poorly or opted out of the competition for the 27 programs that were replaced by the block grant.

The dramatic falloff in federal support for desegregation efforts meant urban districts such as St. Louis, Philadelphia, Seattle and Chicago had to dip into other programs, lay off teachers or go to court to find money for desegregation plans, according to information collected by a congressional committee.

But at the same time the number of participating districts increased sharply, and more than a third of districts sampled in a survey by the national school administrators' organization reported that their federal grant money doubled under the block grants.

Overall, the same survey showed, districts that received less than $7,500 under the old system nearly doubled their receipts, while school districts receiving more than $100,000 lost, on the average, more than 85 percent of their money. The survey was done for the General Accounting Office, the investigating arm of Congress.

"What you are experiencing," said Education Department assistant secretary Lawrence Davenport, is "the local educational agencies, the elected school boards and their superintendents making decisions on how they best feel they can utilize their dollars."

The report by the American Association of School Administrators had a slightly different perspective: "First, (federal block grant funds) are helping local school districts move into the high technology era. Secondly, this block grant delivery system is creating a serious equity problem."

In June the House passed legislation to reestablish a modified version of the Emergency School Aid Act, the original program providing backup support for school districts with voluntary or court-ordered busing plans.

The block grant at the focus of these varied reports is Chapter 2 of the Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981, a $450 million program combining 27 earlier programs.

Designer Cleopatra to visit Midland

Designer Cleopatra will be in Midland to present a trunk show at Robbie Casey's tomorrow and Saturday.

Elizabeth Taylor wore one of Cleopatra's creations at her recent engagement party and ordered eight additional outfits, one of which she may wear to the Washington D. C. tribute to David Ben Gurion.

What distinguishes Cleopatra Broumand's collection is its singular unity of design. Every piece is related to every other piece and all are part of the overall concept which Cleopatra calls her "Energy Concept." Her belief is that energy flows from the sun to vitalize the natural fibers of her fabrics, the clothes themselves, and the people who wear them.

She has built her entire collection around four ancient motifs to which she gives an avant garde interpretation: a bold "sun man" mask; a softer "lady sun" with spiralling rays; a starburst with attendant little crescent moons and an abstract pattern of unfolding fans. Each comes in different and brilliant colorways.

In a remarkable design feat not unlike a musical statement of theme and variations, Cleopatra plays the same designs against each other in different sizes and on all her fabrics. In the fall collection, they're woven into her jacquard knits, printed on silk jacquard and challis, beaded on tulle and appliqued in paillettes on panne velvet.

For resort/spring her unique symbols are interpreted in beautiful silk jacquards, cotton damask and matelasse with a lighter, younger attitude that's right in tune with the season.

The "sun mask", a bold motif in the fall collection forms all all over design in the striking black and white matelasse group of separates that move from sunup to sundown with aplomb.

A positive-negative fan print jacquard shapes up a more casual group of cottom damask separates featuring a full, bias skirt with a swingy scooped armhole top and a loose, square shape top with a 3/4 length yoked shirt.

The silk jacquards are soft, rich and romantic, emblazoned with "lady sun", "fan" and other signature motifs. Highlight of this group is a draped, one shoulderankle-length dress with scallop hemline. Feathery-light quilted jackets, a soft,rounded cocoon and a straight, architectural 3/4 length are perfect coverups for Cleopatra's grand entrance evening dresses.

Loose, languid cotton/silk knit dresses and separates with whimsical "sweet pea" and "big apple" motifs worked in multi-shaped, multi-size checks round out Cleopatra's exhilirating resort/spring collection designed for women withastrong sense of individuality.

Cleopatra was born in Teheran and came to the States in her early teens. She went to high school in Indianapolis, and then to The Fashion Institute of Technology in New York. Long an American citizen, she has worked in Europe, the Middle East and the Orient. Her home is in New York where she is, indeed, a rising sun on the fashion scene.

Dramatic white and grey silk jacquard dress is boldly emblazoned with Cleopatra's "lady sun" signature motif. The deftly detailed top with soft folds andtucked shoulders falls to a drawstring that ties at the waist or hip. About $700 retail.

High-fashion look in '83 from N.Y.

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — In showrooms along Fashion Avenue which really is a stretch of Seventh Avenue, sleek models wear black stockings and high-heeled pumps with the fall clothes that fashion designers are presenting.

This year designers are showing lots of big fake jewelry called "faux" by those in the know; plaid suits; gray flannel pants; glittering sweaters and an assortment of what could only be called very strange clothing from Japan. But even this, fashion writers from Europe point out, is more practical and less fanciful than that shown recently in Paris, Milan and London.

"The American collections are much more realistic," said Tione Raht of the German edition of Vogue magazine. "A woman can always wear the clothes American designers are showing,. In Europe, designers often make up an item just to illustrate an idea, not to sell the actual clothing. They want you to get the idea of a huge sleeve, for instance."

But there are similarities between Europe and America, she said.

"Black and gray are the big colors here, as they were there."

With the beginning of a week of shows here given over to well-tailored sportswear and suits, the end of the showings seemed to concentrate on unusual evening gowns. Perry Ellis, Halston and Michaele Vollbracht each presented interesting collections. Among the highlights:

Ellis went in big for high-waisted, almost ankle-length skirts which fit tightly down to the hips, then swing out at the bottom. A narrow belt marked the natural waistline, and these skirts were shown with cropped sweaters and tops he called "coatlettes." These little jackets flared out in back, ended above the waist and had long sleeves. Most were in wool but there were some in fur.

Halston's 20-minute show spotlighted his short and long togalike dresses with a front panel forming a scarf which draped up and over one shoulder. Some of his sweaters had huge flowers knit in, which were then decorated with sequins.

There were so many sequins floating along the clothes being shown that the spokesman at designer Pauline Trigere pointed to a coat with big faux diamond buttons, and said: "We had to use those because there wasn't a sequin left on Seventh Avenue." But Halston got his share. Several of his mini-dresses were totally paved with sequins in a triangular design at the top over a solid bottom, also sequined.

Vollbracht said he was "going my own way this year," and the collection of one-of-a-kind clothes showed it.

It was a strange mix of past and future: feathers from some undoubtedly prehistoric bird were used to decorate a graphic Space Age print. There were sweaters with shaggy leather trims, feathery muffs, black and gold minis and prints vaguely reminiscent of an Indian blanket. Vollbracht himself, when he came out to take bows after the show, wore a white shirt, no tie and gray pants. All the men designers follow this "uniform" for themselves, but didn't present a uniform for their women customers.

There were lots of suits with big-shouldered jackets over slim skirts to above or just below the knee, others with longer, fuller skirts. And almost everybody showed tailored pants, although buyers said no pants were shown in the Milan and Paris shows.

With all these options up and down Seventh Avenue, one buyer from Chicago summed up the season succinctly:

Thirty years of Service and Over $300 Million Strong

DEAR ABBY

Wife privately pans husband's performance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is the second marriage for both of us, and I haven't the courage to face my family and friends and admit that it was a mistake. I feel like I'm just a cook, housekeeper and sex partner whenever my husband is in the mood. I am starved for some real affection. All he wants is a five-minute sex affair with no hugging, kissing or sweet words. When we first met he was very passionate, and insisted on going all the way on our second date. I should have known he wasn't a real lover -- that all he wanted was sex.

I am 74 and he is 80, and we've been married for five years. I had been a widow for three years, and he had recently lost his wife before he gave me the grand rush.

I don't need his money and he doesn't need mine - our lawyers drew up a prenuptial agreement. We appear to be an ideal couple. If we were to divorce, our children would be shocked and our pastor would be surprised. Don't recommend a marriage counselor, Abby. This man would never listen to anybody. I just know that I would be so much happier if I didn't have to keep putting on a front. What should I do? - MADE A MISTAKE

DEAR MADE: "All the world's a stage," and this is no dress rehearsal, so don't worry about what your friends, family or pastor will say. Tell your husband where he has disappointed you. If he wants a chance to win you by changing his ways, give him a limited probation period. And if he doesn't shape up - ship him out. Life is too short.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to correct "Old Retired Banker From Dallas," who objected to the phrase "safety deposit box" on the grounds that nouns don't modify nouns. In countless phrases such as "alarm clock," "mountain goat," "baseball bat" and "weather report," nouns DO act as modifiers. Imagine saying "alarming clock," "mountainous goat," "baseballish bat" or "weathery report."

If our retired banker insists on saying "safe deposit box," let him also shave with a "safe razor," fasten diapers with "safe pins" and wear a "safe belt" aboard an airliner.

Furthermore, if "safety" cannot modify "deposit," how can "deposit" (also a noun) modify "box"? Should we call it a "safe depositing box"? He may if he chooses, but he will not be speaking English. -- LAURENCE SHATKIN, PRINCETON, N.J.

DEAR LAURENCE: Hooray for our side! As Waldo Cohen from Oak Ridge, Tenn., pointed out: "The English language is replete with nouns serving as adjectives. Is not 'Old Retired Banker' a letter writer, and are you not a newspaper columnist?"

(For Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" - for people of all ages -- send $2, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Gel-cell may keep strobes firing

AP Newsfeatures

Among newspaper photographers, one of the hottest new items is a gel-cell they're using to power their strobe units. There are two types of these lead acid batteries and a number of makes, including Bogan, Workhorse, The Eliminator and Quantum.

They're made to fit a variety of strobes. Many newspaper photographers seem to prefer the Vivitar 283.

What's the advantage of the gel-cell? It's an external battery pack that will give you more flashes per charge, faster recycling time and, most important, it has no memory.

Most photographers use either a rechargeable nicad battery in their strobes or the hi-voltage battery pack which contains a relatively expensive 510-volt battery that must be thrown away when it is used up.

Nicad batteries are cheaper in the long run but a nicad battery has a memory.

The nicads remember how much they were used and only recharge that much. That's memory. Pretty soon the batteries will only run one or two rolls of film and then die.

Entertaining a mystery

By ERMA BOMBECK

When I entertain, I do it with all the charm of a charging rhino.

I do not have time for superfluous conversation like "hello" and "goodbye." The only time I mingle with my guests is when one wanders into the kitchen looking for the bathroom. And my dinner partner remembers me as a blur.

I honestly don't know how other women do it. I do everything they do. Set the table the day before. Chop all morning. Have the dessert in the freezer. The coffee pot ready to plug in. The main casserole draped in foil. The moment the doorbell rings announcing the arrival of the first couple, I panic.

A friend once told me the first recollection she had of meeting me was when she and her husband were invited to our house for dinner. The door swung open and as she extended her hand to me, I turned to my husband and said, "Check the hall bath. Make sure the boys flushed!"

The problem is I am reluctant to let people see how we really live. It's not easy being a phony. I want them to think that we always have fresh flowers from the florist on the dining room table. One afternoon, I picked a bouquet from the yard that made a breathtaking centerpiece. By the time the guests sat down to dinner the blossoms had tightened up into little knobs that looked like bait.

"What kind of flowers are they?" asked one of the guests.

"They're African daisies," I said. "However, in Africa, they eat before the sun goes down."

I want them to think we always serve soup from a tureen even though the price tag glows like it had a light over it.

I want them to think I always cook in something long and flowing even if it has a tomato seed lodged in the cleavage and a hot mitt tucked in the belt.

I know a lot of women who are as insecure as I am about entertaining. We're the women who put off having a few friends in until we get the sofa covered, the kids are married, the kitchen has new wallpaper, the toilet stops running, the big tree in the front yard blooms, oysters are in season, the annual reports are out at the office, we get our tax refund, we've seen the last of the roaches, or we get 12 iced tea glasses that match.

My husband said the other day, "When are we going to have some people in for dinner?"

"I'm working on a big party with a theme and the timing has to be right," I said.

"What's the occasion?" he asked.

"Halley's Comet in May 1986."

Tips for accident victims offered

LONG GROVE, Ill. — You have just had a car accident. If you're a smoker, a cigarette may calm you down. It might also blow you up. Cigarettes ignite spilled gasoline, compounding the mishap.

So what do you do if you're involved in one of the 28 million auto accidents each year? Here are some tips from the Kemper Group, a major auto insurer:

—Turn off the ignition. Guard against further damage by directing traffic around the accident. Set off two flares or put up two reflection triangles, one at least 300 feet behind the vehicles, the other at least 12 to 15 feet away from the scene.

—Make calls. If there are injuries call an ambulance. Notify police but don't leave the scene; to do so could constitute hit-and-run, a criminal offense.

—Exchange information with the driver of the other car, including name, address, telephone number, insurance company and policy number. This is the only information you should give the other driver. Do not discuss the accident or accept responsibility.

—You should also get the names and addresses of any witnesses and all passengers in both vehicles, whether or not they are injured.

New anti-cancer substance tested on humans

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A type of bacteria-made interferon that appears to break down solid tumors without harming healthy tissue is being tested for the first time on human cancer patients, its developer says.

Doctors at a hospital in the Netherlands gave injections of the substance, called gamma interferon, to a lung cancer patient last week and about 25 more patients will be tested there soon, said Biogen Inc.

More experiments are planned in the United States, England and Germany, said Dr. Walter Gilbert, a Nobel Prize winner who is Biogen's chairman.

Sculptor no longer bored with life

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"I've never had any art training in my entire life," says Arizona sculptor Bob Parks. "I didn't even take it in high school."

Parks will be at Midland's Decorating Center, 1608 N. Big Spring St., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday for a one-day showing of his works.

Since he began a little over a decade ago, he has sculpted approximately 50 bronzes in limited editions of 15 to 35. His commissioned work includes "Gene Autry" commissioned by Gene Autry, now in the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, and the "SMU Mustang" for Southern Methodist University.

Today he has his own gallery in Scottsdale, Ariz., where, he says, "We out sell just about everybody that's in the business." The average price on his pieces is from "$5,000 to $10,000," but the range is from "$1,000 to $40,000."

Yesterdays ago before sculpting, Parks says, his voice cheerful and sounding anything but bored, "I was bored with my life."

Looking back, Parks recalls the seemingly inconsequential event in his life which changed its course.

"I was working in an art gallery in Scottsdale. A young man came in and was selling his bronzes. He had them all in a suitcase and they were clinging together — he didn't think much of them.

"But at the time I didn't really know what a bronze was. I just really liked his. I bought one from him, took it home and put it on my mantle.

"I told my wife, 'Heck, I can do as good as that guy.'

"And she said, 'Why do you say that?'

"And I said, 'Well, there's something wrong with this piece.' I got out my wildlife book and I showed her the anatomy was all wrong.

"She said, 'You're looking for something to do. Why don't you go to a foundry and find out how they're doing them?' "

Parks took his wife's advice.

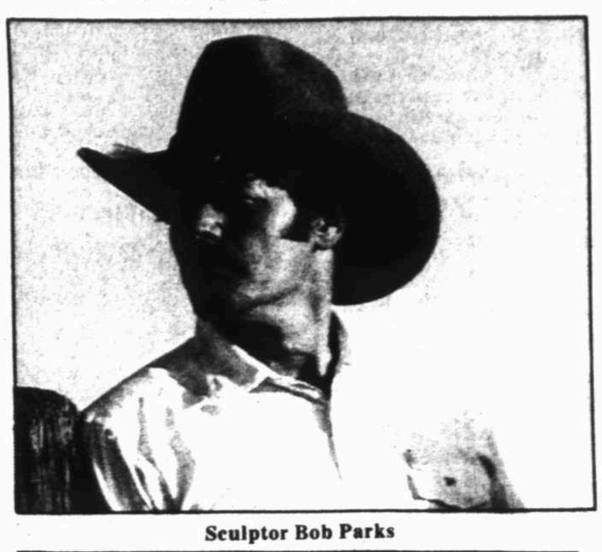

"I started carving in wax and using his as a model. My first one anatomically turned out better than his but I lost the whole concept of art. And that is you've got to show motion and feeling and tell a story."

He kept sculpting. When he finished a piece, he placed it in the gallery where he worked. And they sold.

Then his favorite subject — "anything pertaining to horses" — opened his mind again.

"When I first started doing'em, I did several Arabian horses for these Arabian horse dealers. They kept commissioning me to do pieces. And then one of them, said, 'Bob you need to get yourself a shop on 5th Avenue (Scottsdale, Ariz.) where people can see your work.'

"And that's what I did," Parks says, laughing as he remembers the first months he was in business.

Sculptor Bob Parks

ENTERTAINMENT

"The first three or four months I was opened I said, 'Oh boy. I just made the biggest mistake I ever made in my life.' I wasn't selling anything. And I had this big rent payment."

That was 11 years ago. "All of a sudden people started coming in during the tourist season and we started selling like crazy. And it's been fairly good ever since."

There have been other rough times, but he's stayed in the business through, he says, "stubborn tenacity and a lot of hard work.

"The odds of making it as an artist are 3 million to one. It's just like singers. There's a lot of good singers out there, but how many people make it? You have to put the total package together. There's a lot of good artists out there that are starving to death. There's got to be a combination of everything."

A part of "the total package" is being available to customers.

"I have customers who walk in this gallery and buy from the girls that are in here that when I'm in here we sell twice as much and then the customer comes back for more and more and more."

Summing up his attitude about providing a market for his work, Parks says, "People have to like you and your work. They're buying part of you when they're buying your work. And everybody is a personal friend when they own your bronzes."

Diana Hart

Former cheerleader pursues her dream

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Former Dallas Cowboy cheerleader Diana Hart is pursuing the career she has long dreamed of.

"I've always geared myself toward music," says Miss Hart, who believes she could sing before she could talk. Her non-professional singing career began when she sang gospel as a child.

Miss Hart will perform, along with Johnny Rodriguez, at The Crown Royal Club, 1110 Scharbauer Drive, Friday. Tickets, priced at $10 in advance and $12 at the door, may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa, Crown Royal Club, High Chaparral and KNFM—Radio. The dance is sponsored by Crown Royal and KNFM-Radio.

Barely five feet, Miss Hart stands up very straight to look as tall as possible (admiting she has added inches, when she thought her height might keep her from acomplishing a goal). She laughs frequently when she talks. Although her speaking voice sounds less mature than her singing one, it still carries a note of determination.

During her last year in high school, Miss Hart auditioned for Six Flags Over Texas' Crazy Horse Saloon show and worked there for a full season. In 1981, she organized a girl's trio, "Texas Sunrise," and began her professional career. The trio made several appearances at the Grapevine Opry and the management invited Miss Hart back as a solo act when the trio disbanded.

Her 1982 first place in the Wrangler Jeans/Ray Price Talent Show in Dallas, offered her the opportunity to perform at, among others, Billy Bob's in Fort Worth. This same year, she auditioned for and became a Dallas Cowboy cheerleader.

"What I'm doing now is probably not as big to a lot of people as cheerleading was," says the 21-year-old. "It is to me because it's always what I've wanted to do."

Unfortunately, 1982 was not a good year for cheerleaders because of the NFL players strike (which left a short season — nine games instead of 16).

Avid fans felt as if the strike would never end. They weren't alone. The cheerleaders were worried, too.

"It's hard working for something every week not knowing if you're going to get to do it or not. But you wouldn't believe the celebration we had," her voice taking on added inflection, "when we found out it was over."

Silent Network ready to start up in January

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Quick quiz: Who is the No. 1 TV viewer in the country? What well-known septuagenarian is among the 10 percent of the nation's populace that is inadequately served by television of all sorts? What instantly recognizable Californian recently made front-page news when he attended a public function wearing a new hearing aid?

President Reagan has his problems with the TV networks, especially their news divisions, and hearing them may be one. But soon there will be a new national program service designed especially for him and about 22 million other hearing-impaired or deaf viewers.

The Silent Network is set to debut Jan. 5. Starting with two hours a week of advertising-supported programs, network President Sheldon I. Altfeld, hopes to open the airwaves to people who have been all but ignored by TV since the beginning.

"I found it ludicrous (that) in the 25 years of television, 10 percent of the population was never addressed," Altfeld, a commercial-TV producer of long standing, said in an interview last week.

"When I met the deaf community, I immediately realized they needed assistance. So I decided to do it."

Altfeld has spent the last four years developing and producing 258 programs aimed at the hearing-impaired community.

Former Cowboy cheerleader pursuing her dream

Being a cheerleader is not necessarily an easy road.

"It was a lot of hard work, but it was all worth it. It was hard to make it. And it was really hard to stay in it once you got in, because even though you made the squad that didn't automatically guarantee you a position.

"They were so strict. They would cut girls for attitude and things like that. When you were in it, you still had to be on your toes."

Miss Hart feels the experience gained her more than name recognition.

"I learned a whole lot. Its helped me to handle a lot of situations that come up now," Miss Hart says, citing as an example, signing autographs.

"When I go out to sign autographs, I wouldn't have known how to handle myself had I not gone through cheerleading. It's really like a training ground for what I'm doing now."

But after a year, she knew she had to try for a full time singing career. "Like so many other people who are trying to break into the music business, I was just determined that I was going to stay with it until something happened."

That "something" began for her when she signed with Fleetwood Bros. Productions Company, Midland, this April. Since that time, she has opened for, among others, Merle Haggard, Conway Twitty, John Conlee, George Strait, Reba McEntire, Michael Martin Murphey and Gary Stewart.

Next up, Johnny Rodriguez.

MC faculty to perform

The opening Midland College faculty recital for the 1983-84 school year will be held today at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts auditorium at MC.

Performing a program of music written for two pianists at one piano will be Dr. Betty Walker Morris, keyboard instructor, and Judy Congdon, adjunct instructor of organ. Selections include Mozart's Sonata in C Major, K.V. 521, the Hindemith Sonata for Four Hands and the Bizet's "Jeux de'Enfants" suite.

The public is invited to attend.

Will 'Flashdance' sequel end up as television series?

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Every year, one movie comes out of nowhere to be a box-office smash. This year's candidate is "Flashdance," which has sold $85 million worth of tickets since its debut last spring and, in the process, initiated dance, fashion and music crazes.

The next obvious step is a "Flashdance" sequel, given Hollywood's predilection for self-mimicry. For evidence, look at some of the movies released this past summer: "Superman III," "Porky's II," "Psycho II" and "Return of the Jedi."

Casting calls were held over the weekend in Los Angeles and other cities for "Flashdance II" dancers. Producers Don Simpson and Jerry Bruckheimer are also seeking a replacement for star Jennifer Beals, who first portrayed the Pittsburgh-based welder-turned-dancer with balletic aspirations. (Beals has decided to continue her studies at Yale rather than stay with the role.)

But will "Flashdance II" be shown in theaters, like its predecessor? Or will it end up on television, as a two-hour pilot for a "Flashdance" TV series on NBC?

Paramount Pictures, which financed and released the movie, is not sure yet.

"This is really unusual," agreed Jeff Sagansky, senior vice president for series development at NBC. "'Flashdance' was such a hit feature, we initially thought it was a terrific premise for a series. But Paramount wanted the right to do a sequel. If they're willing to put up $7 million to launch 'Flashdance II,' it can only help us.

"We may have to wait until next fall (to put the series on the air)," Sagansky said. "But we think it's worth the wait."

Herbert thinks fans will like his 'Dune' movie

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Frank Herbert, author of the cult favorite, "Dune," believes its millions of readers will be pleased with the movie version of the science fiction epic.

"I know what they're doing to my baby — they're doing a really good job," he said in an interview at Churubusco movie studios where the movie is being shot.

The multimillion-dollar movie, directed by David Lynch and scheduled for release next year, sticks closely to the story line of "Dune," although Herbert said it will expand on "the pictorial possibilities."

The movie is based on the first book of four in the "Dune" series. A movie version of the second in the series is in the works.

A fifth book, "The Heretics of Dune," will be published soon, and Herbert is four-fifths of the way through a sixth. He says he never tires of the fictional universe he has created.

"It's a fascinating palate, and I like to paint on it," he says.

The 62-year-old author, with a receding hairline and a full gray beard turning white, was making his third brief visit to the "Dune" set since shooting started earlier this year. Herbert described his role as being a "resource" for the director, although he noted that he's helped with some lines and with the cutting of the original script.

Lynch, the movie's writer and director, also did the cult "midnight" movie, "Eraserhead," and the Academy Award-nominated film, "The Elephant Man."

He said Herbert has provided "moral support — real support. He's read all the scripts and he's very happy."

Herbert said "Dune" developed in the 1960s when he had an idea for a book about the urge to be a messiah. He started researching comparative religions.

Trio to play at church Sunday

A recital of Rebecca Clarke's music will be presented by three members of the Texas Tech University music faculty Sunday at 3 p.m. at Midland's First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave.

Works to be performed on the program are Sonata, Passacaglia on an Old English Tune for Viola and Piano, Two Pieces for Viola and Violoncello and Trio for Violin, Violoncello and Pianoforte.

Performing on this tour through various cities of the Southwest are Susan Schoemfeld, viola; Arthur Follows, vioncello; and Jennifer Garrett, piano.

The public is invited to attend.

No charges anticipated

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP) — An investigation into the death of Shawn Lewis, wife of singer Jerry Lee Lewis, is finished, and no criminal charges will be filed, a prosecutor says.

"As of now, there is no investigation being conducted by this office," Bill Ballard, a prosecuting attorney for Desoto County, said Wednesday.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, Sept. 23, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Mickey Rooney, whose career has spanned 60 years and won him an Oscar, shares your birthday. Also born on this date: the late columnist Walter Lippmann, musical genius Ray Charles, rock star Bruce Springsteen and Chicago White Sox pitcher Dennis Lamp. A little mystery helps romance along. Avoid revealing too much too soon. Style counts for a lot in the months ahead. Concentrate on making a good first impression. A wish moves closer to becoming reality. Allow family members to help but not dominate you. A newcomer makes you reevaluate some long-held opinions. Admit past mistakes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not neglect an important personal relationship while pursuing your career. A friend's well-intentioned advice could cost you time and money. Avoid a showdown. Time will prove who was right.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel and research are in the spotlight today. Interviews, conferences enjoy favorable influences. A last-minute change of plans will prove pleasing. You go after the big money!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work may not go according to plan. Figure out how to improve your presentations. Bank loans are easier to obtain than in the past. Romance is favored this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your business and financial plans receive widespread support. Entertaining at home is favored if you do not spend too much money. Informality is the best way to put shy guest at ease.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others back your ideas. You beat out the competition. Do not jump to conclusions about a loved one's interest in a newcomer. This evening is an ideal time for entertaining.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New financial gains are possible today. Your weekend plans are shaping up nicely. Get together with old friends tonight. Entertaining at home will be fun if you keep costs down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make the best possible use of your talents. You will be astounded by the results. A decision you make today will contribute to your financial security. Stay within your budget when shopping.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek the services of a lawyer and you could avoid expensive court costs. A letter sheds new light on a close relationship. Resist the temptation to embroider and stick to the facts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Something astonishing takes place at work. Once you have a chance to recover, you begin to see the whole picture. An on-again, off-again relationship comes to a screeching halt. You benefit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The ability to speak a second language could land you a fabulous new job. Self-improvement projects are favored. You may need roller skates to tend to everything on your schedule!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use the element of surprise to get what you want at work. The competition will be thrown off-balance. A friend or letter supplies the answer to a puzzle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A confidential tip from a former employer could lead to new employment or extra income. Give a wide berth to people who like to stir up trouble. Move in different social circles.

CBS gets comfortable with ratings

From Wire Reports

HOLLYWOOD — Solid is the word for CBS as television slips into the fall season with new programming. NBC is hurling nine new prime-time shows into the breach. ABC is countering with eight.

CBS, cozy and comfortable in its high ratings, believes it's necessary to introduce only five new shows among its 22 hours of evening programming.

Monday night is the big new-look night at CBS, when three programs will be newcomers to the lineup. Wednesday will see another fresh show and Saturday the fifth of the week. The other nights will be unchanged.

There will be changes in some returning shows. For instance, Cliff Robertson is joining the "Falcon Crest" cast as Chase's cousin, a physician who moves into the lovely, back-biting life in Tuscany Valley.

William Devane as a state senator is a presumed shot in the arm for the steamy "Knots Landing." Devane is not worried about being equal to the task. He's using this new role, he says, for money and visibility.

Ready or not, here is how the new CBS series stack up, based on pilot watching and interviews:

"Scarecrow and Mrs. King." Mondays, 8 p.m. This hour-long series is almost as precious as its title. Kate ("Freeze!") Jackson is back in action as a crime fighter, teamed with Bruce Boxleitner, who lasted one season in the jungles of Southeast Asia under his Frank Buck pith helmet.

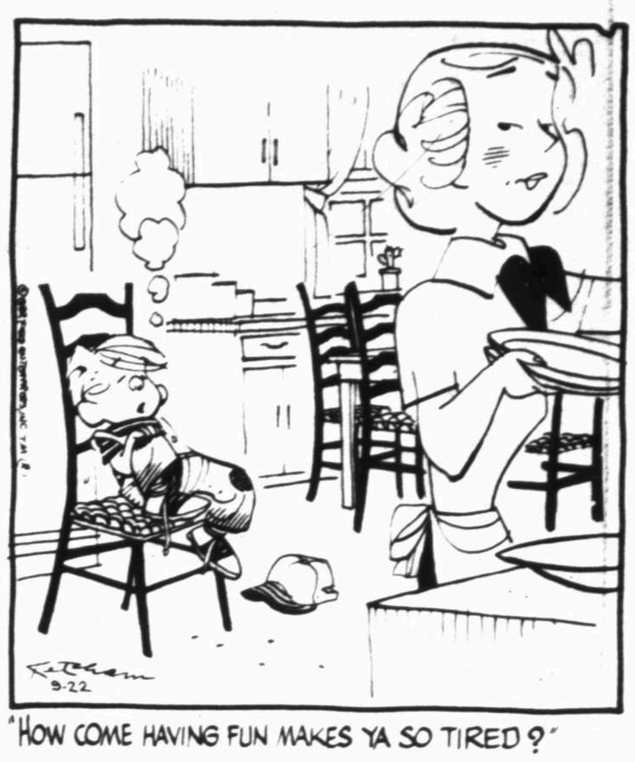

Set in Washington, "Scarecrow" is about a housewife and mother (Jackson) who, thanks to her common sense and honest face, makes a good amateur agent for "the agency." She runs around town with her professional partner (Boxleitner), code named "Scarecrow." The two kid around as fellow agents get blown away. Clever lines and presumed amusing situations clash with car chases and shootings. Nick and Nora Charles they aren't.

"After MASH." Mondays, 9 p.m. Three survivors of the Korean War, Sherman Potter, Maxwell Klinger and John Mulcahy (Harry Morgan, Jamie Farr and William Christopher), stick together as the rest of their "MASH" buddies scatter to the winds.

They all work at a veterans' hospital in Missouri. Klinger marries his Korean girlfriend (Rosalind Chao) and Potter's much-talked-about but never-before-seen wife, Mildred, will be part of the cast.

"Emerald Point N.A.S." Mondays, 10 p.m. Dennis Weaver, who has gone from "Gunsmoke" sidekick and New Mexico lawman to junkie real estate salesman, now becomes a Navy commodore commanding a fighter base. He's challenged by pressures of the job and raising three daughters.

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

In an exciting and close final, Brazil edged Argentina in the South American Championships. In so doing, the Brazilians qualified to represent their zone in the World Championships, about to start in Sweden.

On this hand from the final, Argentina had the upper hand. A fairly straightforward auction saw Argentina's South become declarer at a contract of four hearts, which is in jeopardy because of the prospect of losing three spade tricks and a diamond.

West was reluctant to make an aggressive lead for fear that it might cost a trick, so he settled on a trump. Declarer drew all the outstanding trumps, then led a low club. When the king appeared, he took three rounds of clubs and then ruffed a club to set up a long club in dummy. Now he exited with a spade.

If West played a spade honor, he would be forced to return a diamond, and the same position would result as described below. Instead, he opted to play low, and East won the ten of spades.

The best East could do was to cash the ace of diamonds and continue with the queen. But declarer countered neatly by refusing to ruff, instead discarding a spade from his hand. East had nothing left but diamonds, and his forced continuation of that suit permitted declarer to pitch his remaining spade as dummy's jack won the trick. Declarer lost only one spade trick and two diamonds.

Diana plugs ears; Rockers plug charities

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana, wearing a dazzling all-silver outfit and carrying earplugs in her handbag in case they were needed, met some of the biggest stars of rock music as she and Prince Charles attended a charity concert.

The show Wednesday night at the Royal Albert Hall featured Eric Clapton, Bill Wyman, Jimmy Page, Stevie Winwood and others in one of the largest assemblages of rock'n'roll stars ever seen on one British stage.

As the royal couple met the musicians before the show — organized to help Prince Charles' trust fund for deprived children — Diana asked bass guitarist Wyman of the Rolling Stones: "I've got my earplugs in my bag. Do you think I'm going to need them?"

Wyman laughed and told her: "I don't think so."

The princess thanked Clapton for organizing the show, which raised 45,000 pounds — $67,500 — for the trust.

Debby Boone

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Debby Boone, who rocketed to fame in 1977 with "You Light Up My Life," has checked out of Cedars Sinai Hospital after giving birth to twin girls, described as "happy, fine and wonderful."

The babies, brunette Gabrielle Monserrete Ferrer, and blonde Dustin Boone Ferrer, were born to the 26-year-old daughter of singer Pat Boone on Saturday.

They are the second and third children for Miss Boone and husband Gabriel Ferrer, son of actor Jose Ferrer and singer Rosemary Clooney. Their release from the hospital Wednesday and condition was reported by a secretary to Boone, Margie Scudder.

The couple's first child, Jordan, was born July 8, 1980.

The twins are the fifth and sixth grandchildren for Pat and Shirley Boone, Ms. Scudder said.

Miss Boone recently was voted Outstanding Working Mother of 1982 by Working Mothers of America.

George Wallace

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace will not be in a movie about the late Alabama football coach Bear Bryant, the producer says, because "Up to now, I've not been welcomed to the state of Alabama."

"It takes a formal invitation from the governor to do a film in the state," producer Larry Spangler told the Huntsville Quarterback Club Tuesday night. He said he wrote to Wallace about a month ago, but, "So far, I haven't heard a word from him."

"George was going to be in the film," said Spangler, "but since he hasn't called me, he was immediately eliminated."

The governor's press secretary, Billy Joe Camp, said he had not "heard anything about it."

Spangler and relatives of the late coach have been at odds over several matters including casting. "Politics," Spangler suggested, is the reason he hasn't heard from the governor. "I imagine he's heard from the Bryant family."

Spangler said he will begin production on the movie, "The Bear," Oct. 24, probably at Texas A&M, where Bryant coached before he returned to Alabama in 1958.

"We'll shoot at Texas A&M, Kentucky, Maryland and hopefully Alabama," he said.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — David Letterman might be switched back on by Channel 33 in Baton Rouge at the request of some university students — and Louisiana's secretary of state.

Secretary of State Jim Brown praised the peaceful protest efforts of Louisiana State University students who are miffed at WRBT-TV's decision to cancel "The David Letterman Show" after its ratings in Baton Rouge had slipped.

"I've talked to the station owner and he's told me that it's just a matter of dollars and cents," said Brown. "But, they're taking a good, hard look at putting the show back on.

"If they do," he said, "I'll declare statewide a day to commemorate the David Letterman show and maybe even Channel 33."

Matt Dillon

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Actor Matt Dillon, whose movies include "The Outsiders," was pestered during the filming of his latest movie — leading to charges against a California man, police say.

Oscar Casillas, 25, of San Francisco, was arrested Sept. 10 and charged with criminal trespass and harassment, said Acting Detective Sgt. Thomas LaBarbera on Wednesday. Casillas allegedly went to the Mamaroneck home of the 19-year-old actor to look for him and made telephone calls to his New York agent.

Word of the arrest was withheld because ABC Motion Pictures didn't want to create unwanted publicity during the filming of "Sweet Ginger Brown," LaBarbera said.

Casillas had been released from jail in Dallas County, Texas, on probation after serving a robbery term, the officer said, and is being held without bail in the Westchester County Jail awaiting extradition to Texas for parole violations.

Other pictures in which Dillon has been featured include "Over the Edge," "Little Darlings" and "My Bodyguard."

SCHUYLER, Neb. (AP) — Kermit Wagner, 67, owner and president of Wagner Mills in Schuyler and Columbus and a former member of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, died Tuesday of an apparent heart attack.

Joining his father's grain storage and merchandizing firm in 1937, he was vice president and general manager of Wagner Mills until he assumed the company presidency after his father's death in 1973.

Boys Clubs honor youth of year

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — He's the kind of kid to make a parent glow. Smart. Polite. Eager to be of service. Goes to church. Excels in sports. Is prone to look on the bright side of life.

His elders can't find enough nice words to say about him.

The 18-year-old paragon fitting that description is Mark Perry of North Little Rock, Ark., named Wednesday as the 1983 National Youth of the Year of the Boys Clubs of America. He is not nearly as stuffy as the title suggests.

The award got him a $5,000 scholarship, a smile, a handshake and a pat on the back in the Oval Office from President Reagan and a picture to put on the wall of his dormitory at Hendrix College in Arkansas.

The title means that Mark was chosen, after a year-long national competition, as the best that the 1.2 million member Boys Clubs have to offer. Predictably, club publicists call him one in a million.

Mark came to Washington as one of five regional finalists and was told of his selection at a congressional breakfast. President Reagan "installed" him.

"I would have been disappointed if I hadn't won, but I would have handled it," Mark said.

At first meeting, Mark seems to be one of those young men who is majoring in Serious. His thoughts are well-chewed before they are spoken. He talks about the pleasure he gets from giving service.

A GOOD USED CAR...
MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and year out...cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true! Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value, because the next year's models have arrived.
There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, specially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one...that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
