House OKs energy bill

Controversial amendment raises Texans' ire

Oil refiners dodge one bullet in legislation

Associated Press

While Texans were mostly concerned about the far-reaching implications of the Markey Amendment, other provisions also were voted on in the passage of the National Energy Bill.

One stumbling block to passage of the National Energy Bill was averted when it was decided 235-135 to delete a provision in the bill that would have required refiners to divert 1 percent of their oil to the government's strategic petroleum reserve.

Oil companies had vigorously opposed the provision, calling it equivalent to an oil tax, and the Bush administration had threatened to veto the entire energy package if the oil set-aside remained.

The measure was defeated, although Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., a key sponsor of the energy bill, had argued that the set-aside is needed

The House of Representatives passed the National Energy Bill Wednesday by an overwhelming 381 to 37 margin, even though the bill contained the controversial Markey Amendment giving Congress the power to regulate natural gas in Texas.

Reps. Lamar Smith and Larry Combest, whose districts each include part of Midland, said they voted against the bill because of the amendment and that they were both surprised and disappointed at the large number of votes for the bill.

In a telephone interview, the congressmen said a number of members of the petroleum industry had been to Washington urging them to vote against the bill, even though it contained several positive provisions for the oil industry.

THURSDAY NEWS WATCH

Oil futures weave

NEW YORK — Oil futures retreated Wednesday, but they managed to hold onto most of the big gains made a day earlier on indications that Saudi Arabia wants higher prices. Light sweet crude oil for delivery in July settled at $21.92 per barrel, down 8 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. In the previous session, oil had shot up by more than $1 per barrel amid the apparent policy reversal by Saudi Arabia, OPEC's biggest and most influential member. The Saudis have traditionally favored moderate petroleum prices, for fear high prices would encourage consuming nations to seek alternative energy sources.

Area kickoff's set

Country-western singers Ronna Reeves and Gene Watson and a grand entrance by a "Lottery Express Rider" will provide entertainment tonight at the Midland-Odessa lottery kickoff party.

The party, at the Confederate Air Force Hangar from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., will open with music by a local Tejano group, Twin City Band, and a rider on horseback delivering a batch of lottery tickets.

Keith Montgomery and Julie Rich of KNFM-92.3 FM will serve as masters of ceremonies. Everyone is invited to the free festivities, and 3,000 peeople over age 18 will receive a free lottery ticket.

Abortion rulings

SAN FRANCISCO — A California law requiring unmarried girls under age 18 to get a parent's or judge's permission before an abortion was ruled unconstitutional Wednesday by a judge. Also, a judge in Ohio declared unconstitutional a state law that would have required women seeking an abortion be told about fetal development and abortion alternatives and to get counseling from a doctor./7A

Killing adds to rage

BAT YAM, Israel — A Palestinian stabbed and killed the rabbi of a Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip on Wednesday, adding to a torrent of rage that has engulfed Israel since an Arab killed a 15-year-old girl here on Sunday. Settlers in Gaza retaliated for the killing of the rabbi, Shimon Biran, by beating Palestinians, overturning cars and setting fire to Arab-owned greenhouses and fields./4A

DeVaughn holds mixed emotions about departure

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

For most people, two years in a community is not enough time to have any real influence.

But the Rev. Michael DeVaughn has done what he can.

"I've always believed the church should shape society," DeVaughn said. As minister of St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, he has supported youth programs, treatment and support for the addicted, and a food bank for the needy.

Then he became the first black member of Midland's City Council. But a transfer to Tyler means the 32-year-old DeVaughn will be forced to leave Midland on June 7.

It's a bittersweet plan. He'll miss many people in the community but is excited about his opportunities. In Tyler, he's expecting to resume pastoring, but also will teach religion and social ethics at Texas College.

A graduate of Indiana University and a native of Boston, DeVaughn once wanted to be an attorney. He majored in English and journalism, never expecting to become a minister.

Now he has two books in progress, one about traditions of the black church and another tentatively titled, "The Plight of the Black Male and the Church's Response."

DeVaughn hopes his successful try at the District 2 council seat last year will open doors for others. Already, members of the local black community are expressing interest in replacing him in the seat.

"We ran our campaign through the churches," DeVaughn said. "For me it was an attempt to get the black vote out. I wanted to show them that they should not run two or three candidates, but get behind one and support that

Lottery officials downplay game kickoff parties

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Lottery officials are deliberately downplaying their kickoff extravaganza parties tonight — no TV ads, no big-name stars, no giveaway cars.

And contrary to their previous announcement that every adult who goes to a party will get a free lottery ticket, only 3,000 lottery tickets will be available at each of the lottery-eve party locations around Texas, officials said.

Approximately 300 million scratch-off tickets began arriving Wednesday.

Although lottery tickets will be limited, officials hope to have other souvenirs available, such as T-shirts, caps and ticket scratchers, lottery director Nora Linares said. They also promise that several people attending will receive 100 free lottery tickets each.

"I think we have enough promotional items as well so other people can get other stuff," Linares said at a news conference Wednesday.

Recipients of the free lottery tickets will be eligible for prizes of $2 to $10,000 — whatever their tickets uncover. Winners won't be able to collect their money, however, until Texas Lottery tickets go on sale at 6 a.m. Friday. The tickets will cost $1 apiece.

With less than 48 hours to go before the official start of the Texas Lottery, officials Wednesday frantically tried to get retailers set up to sell tickets and verify winners. The scratch-off tickets be-

Jury convicts lover in 'fatal attraction' murder case retrial

Carolyn Warmus

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A millionaire's daughter was convicted Wednesday of killing her lover's wife in a case that juxtaposed sex, violence and suburban affluence and was likened to the thriller movie "Fatal Attraction."

Carolyn Warmus, a 28-year-old former teacher whose first trial last year ended in a hung jury, stared straight ahead and displayed no emotion as the verdict was read.

EPA: Texas is No. 1 industrial air polluter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas skies remain among the dirtiest in the country, helping the state retain its dubious ranking as the nation's leading industrial air polluter, the Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday.

Texas industries are among the nation's leading sources for toxic chemical releases into the air, ground and water, according to an annual EPA inventory of toxic releases.

The petrochemical industry in Texas — which accounts for 57 percent of the nation's petrochemical production — is responsible for much of the toxic chemical releases.

Although the state has made strides to slash its toxic chemical output in recent years, much of the reduction in 1990 was due to changes in reporting techniques, EPA and state officials cautioned.

"It is an improvement, but more or less we realize it's a paper improvement," said Helen Pitts, a spokes-

Midland speller advances to national bee's 2nd day

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — He may not have known what they meant, but 13-year-old Jeremy Gengler knew how to spell both "moiety" and "defeasible," on Wednesday, and that was enough to propel him into the second day of the 65th annual Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee today.

Along with spelling moiety, which means a half or two equals, and defeasible, which means something that can be undone or made void as in a contract or deed, Jeremy also correctly spelled "simile," a figure of speech in which one thing is likened to another.

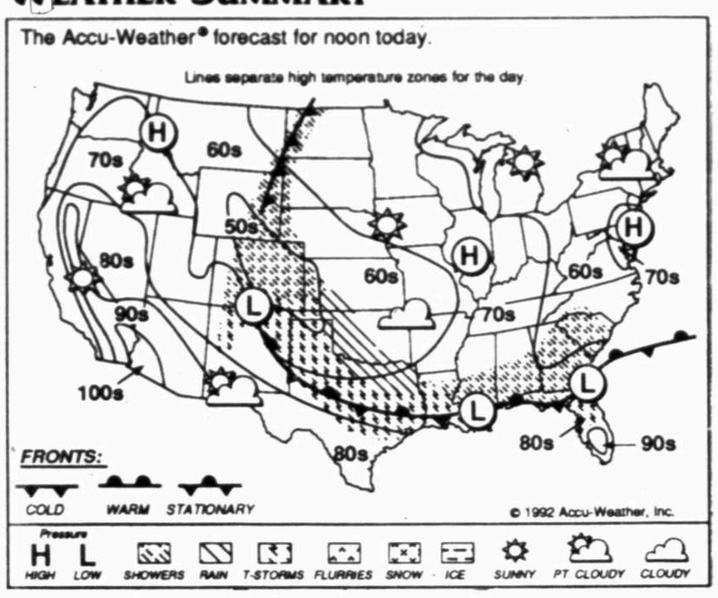
WEATHER SUMMARY



What's new? Chance of rain

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the lower 70s with northeast winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and a high around 70 to 75.

After an overnight low of 55, Wednesday's high reached 82 compared with the record high for that date of 101 set in 1985. The record low for that date is 50 set in 1973.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms brought wind damage, flooding and large hail to Southwest and Central Texas on Wednesday, and storms were expected to continue into the weekend's start.

An upper-level low pressure system combined with a weak stationary front across the midsection of the state to trigger the storms, the National Weather Service said.

Flash flood and severe thunderstorm watches were posted for wide areas of the state, including the Hill Country, Panhandle and Rio Grande Valley. The weather service also reported possible twisters west of Wildorado and near Lake Travis and Round Mountain, southwest of Austin.

Scattered damage resulted around the lake from winds gusting to 70 mph and large hail, a Travis County sheriff's officer said.

NATION

Rain fell on much of the Midwest on Wednesday, accompanied by unseasonably cool temperatures. Cool weather also prevailed along the East Coast, while the Southwest generally enjoyed sunny skies and warm temperatures.

In Cheynee, Wyo., the rain turned to snow at mid-morning Wednesday. By early afternoon, 3.7 inches had fallen, breaking the 1947 snowfall record for the date by nearly half an inch.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ENERGY: Reps. Smith, Combest vote against bill

(From 1A)

Smith said it appeared that most of the Texas congressmen had voted against the National Energy Bill. He said of six Texans he had checked with, five had voted against the bill.

"What we need," Smith said, "is a national energy strategy. This was a national energy tragedy." He said he would not vote for a bad bill just because it contained one good provision — the repeal of the Alternative Minimum Tax.

Combest said the Alternative Minimum Tax was about the only good thing left in the bill for Texas producers.

"We feel the amendment is unfortunate, because it is unfair and pits region against region, and creates animosity. I think most of us from energy producing regions feel that we have been down this road before," Combest said.

The Markey Amendment, added on the House floor without the benefit of committee input, was a reaction by consuming states to new proration rules enacted by Oklahoma and Texas. Northern states called the action an attempt to create a "Redneck OPEC."

Both Combest and Smith said they would vote for the National Energy Bill if the Markey Amendment were removed in the Senate-House Conference Committee. The Senate approved its own energy legislation earlier this year and a final compromise bill is expected to go to President Bush before the November election.

"The amendment was intolerable. It would have taken away the right of the State of Texas to regulate its own natural gas," Smith said.

Combest said he sees the Conference Committee as the best bet for getting the amendment removed: "The amendment is not in the Senate version and some senators have vowed to kill it. If they will only stick to their guns in face of the high vote for it, they can kill it."

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, also said the Conference Committee offered a good chance to have the amendment removed.

Combest said the National Energy Bill has gone to as many as nine committees and there could be as many as 100 conferees on the Conference Committee. He also noted that it could probably take weeks of discussion before the bill would be ready for a vote.

Smith and Combest said they still have no knowledge whether the President would veto the energy bill if it passed with the Markey Amendment. But Smith said it would definitely go to court, perhaps to the U.S. Supreme Court, because of the states' rights issue. "I would hope it doesn't have to go that far, but it may."

Smith said the lopsided vote for the energy bill was an indication that there was not enough appreciation for the energy industry, or the need to rebuild a decrepit industry and limit foreign imports.

DODGE: A stumbling block to passage is averted to make sure the target of 1 billion barrels for the reserve is reached and is available in a crisis.

An attempt by Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., to restrict the location of low-level radioactive waste sites to sparsely populated areas lost 293-117. The House also acted to keep Nevada from interfering in tests to determine whether a high-level radioactive waste site should be built at Yucca Mountain about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The House floor debate on energy capped months of congressional wrangling that included nine committees that had a say in molding the more than 1,500 pages of legislation.

Among its key provisions are:

■ Tax incentives to promote the development of renewable fuels such as solar, wind and biomass as well as conservation through use of mass transit and van pools.

■ New conservation measures, including improved energy standards for buildings, appliances and lights plus requirements for the government to use less energy.

■ Easing regulatory barriers for construction of nuclear power plants, including a one-step licensing of commercial reactors aimed at cutting years from the time it takes to put a plant into operation.

■ Restructuring the electric power industry to allow for increased competition in the production of electricity. For the first time, all energy producers would be given access to utility transmission lines.

■ Requiring wider use of alternative fuel vehicles by both government and private fleet operators in hopes of reducing the country's reliance on gasoline as the dominant transportation fuel.

The legislation also expands restrictions on offshore oil and gas drilling, prohibiting government lease sales until 2002 in all waters except in the Gulf of Mexico from Alabama to Texas.

Lease sales off North Carolina's Outer Banks, off the Gulf coast of Florida and in Alaska's Bristol Bay would be canceled, a major victory for environmentalists.

But the most controversy in two days of floor debate on the bill was over nuclear power. In most cases, the nuclear industry and its supporters in the House won.

First, the House, after sharp debate, approved a proposal to make it easier to build nuclear power plants by requiring that a utility be required to obtain only a single license to build and operate a reactor.

Critics of the proposal had argued that the public would be prevented by the one-step licensing from raising safety issues after a plant is completed. The nuclear industry maintained that a streamlining of the licensing process is needed if the industry is to ever build another reactor.

BEE: Midland speller advances to fourth round wasn't sure of the meaning of the first two words, he was able to spell them. "I was really scared that I would get a hard one," said a relaxed but relieved Jeremy after the first three rounds. "I'm just glad I get ones that I knew."

Jeremy also met his goal of reaching the second day of competition, making him the second champion of the Reporter-Telegram Regional Spelling Bee to do so. In the four previous years that Midland regional champs have come to the national bee, only one other speller has survived the third round. Jeremy, a seventh-grader at Goddard Junior High School, is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

"He just stood right up there and spelled those words without any hesitation," said his mother and escort for the Washington trip, Richelle Gengler, a preschool teacher in Midland.

But both mother and son said success was partly a "luck of the draw," acknowledging that some contestants stumbled on more difficult words, such as "oppugn," which means to call into question or to fight against, or "amblyopia," meaning a loss of sharpness of vision. The 1992 bee marks the first time that more difficult words have been included in the early rounds.

The jousting will be even more strenuous today, with even harder, more arcane words to spell and 93 fewer contestants. On Wednesday, 93 out of the original 227 spellers were eliminated in three rounds.

After dinner at the Hard Rock Cafe here, Jeremy and his mother planned to brush up on a popular guide of words used in previous bees, "Words of the Champions," before going to bed early in preparation for today's match. There are no other study lists for contestants to bone up on for the second day, apart from perusing the Webster's Dictionary.

"And we can't look up every word in the dictionary," Jeremy sighed.

DEPARTURE: DeVaughn holds mixed feelings

(From 1A)

person.

"The voter turnout was small, but the effort was tremendous," he said.

He credits his supporters in the community and especially the leaders of the church for the success.

"They were always supportive of me, whatever I wanted to do," DeVaughn said. "This has been a wonderful church."

Churches are the center of the black community, the sounding board for members and the starting points of social change, DeVaughn said.

"The movements for civil rights, education and the black feminist movement, they all began in the church," he said. But now he has a sense that churches, as a whole, are not meeting the needs of the congregation.

"Men say the church is not meeting their needs," DeVaughn said. He points to the problems facing black men as a manifestation of that complaint, citing some frightening statistics — four out of 10 black men are in prison and eight out of 10 under 30 have a record. Added to unemployment and the high murder rate, those statistics indicate a crisis, he said.

"The church needs to prepare itself to confront these issues," he said. "In every era, the church has different issues to confront. This time, it's the preservation of the family and our heritage."

As a child, DeVaughn lived with an extended family that included grandparents and other relatives. He believes that, plus the influence of youth organizations like Boy Scouts and church-sponsored activities, gave him the confidence he needed to succeed.

It also led to a strong support of youth programs, which he thinks are vital to any community.

"Right now, 70 percent of black children live in single-parent homes," DeVaughn said. "I believe children need a force outside the home that says, 'You are OK, you are loved and you can do anything you want to do.'"

His grandmother gave him that message, telling him every day that she loved him.

"It got old at the time, but I look back on it and that was a very good thing to have," DeVaughn said.

"I like that system where you have older people you look up to, who give you advice," he said.

In the local community, DeVaughn names the Rev. Tony Williams and Dr. Viola Coleman as two of his greatest influences. DeVaughn's mother, who had been living in Midland, died of cancer earlier this year, leaving him without family nearby.

He is not married, considered rare for a minister.

"Everyone seems to expect me to have a wife and family, but the church is my family," DeVaughn said.

His influence has touched a number of issues that affect the city, especially with regard to race and community development.

"He's given leadership in the community," the Rev. Williams said of DeVaughn. "He's been an inspiration to both the young and older people as well. We're going to miss him. But we wish him all the best."

DeVaughn's work included the battle for better housing. The minister-council member served on a statewide committee for the Comprehensive Housing Affordability Study (CHAS). Midland will use its own document to identify needs and apply for federal money.

DeVaughn also organized two groups aimed at bettering the community — the Coalition of 100 Black Men and the Coalition of Economic Development and Community Services.

"In the black church, it was always tradition that the minister would go out and work to improve the quality of life for the people," he said. "That still exists today."

His activities and efforts have been rewarded with kindness from others, even strangers.

DeVaughn said that when his mother died, Midlanders of all races and backgrounds sent cards and notes of support.

"People were so supportive, not just blacks, but white and Hispanic as well," he said.

"I've enjoyed living in Midland," DeVaughn said, adding that he may return to the community to retire. "It's a great community."

Midlanders will pay tribute to DeVaughn's work in the community with two events next week. At the Southeast Community and Senior Center, friends and well-wishers will gather at 7 p.m. June 6 to honor the minister-councilman.

Then the following day his church, at 409 S. Lee St., will honor him with a farewell service at 3 p.m.

PARTIES: Tickets begin arriving gan arriving in the stores by UPS truckloads Wednesday.

(From 1A)

In anticipation that the 300 million tickets in the first instant-win game will sell out quickly, the 200 million tickets for the second game are scheduled to begin arriving at lottery headquarters today.

Tonight's parties at 14 Texas locations are designed as a low-cost kickoff for the game of chance. No admission is being charged. The entertainers, some of whom are not well known, run the gamut from country to blues to Tejano music. They include the Kilgore Rangerettes and Johnny Dee and the Rocket 88s.

By contrast, when the Louisiana Lottery began in September 1991, that state hosted a superstar party at the Superdome featuring Vanna White, Huey Lewis and the News, Gladys Knight and Fats Domino. A brand-new candy apple red Corvette was a door prize.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp later called that opening party excessive and "ridiculous."

"We wanted to make sure of two things" with the Texas kickoffs, Linares said. "We didn't want to spend a whole lot of money and we wanted to be sure we got out to everybody and didn't just have one event in Austin."

In other lottery developments:

■ Gov. Ann Richards is scheduled to buy — not sell, as her office earlier announced — the first lottery ticket in Austin at 5:55 a.m. Friday. Her plans changed when state attorneys said it might be illegal for her to sell a ticket because she doesn't work for a licensed lottery retailer.

■ Lottery tickets will be available at 14,712 retailers around Texas, give or take a few last minute changes. Most major food, gasoline and convenience store chains are selling the tickets. Exceptions include non-sellers HEB grocery stores and Wal-Mart, Linares said.

■ When people collect their winnings at the claims centers, their names will be matched against lists of those who owe state taxes, child support and state-guaranteed student loans.

PROBE: Grand jury asks continued investigation

(From 1A)

Phelps.

Since its probe began early in 1992, the grand jury has handed down perjury indictments against Lt. Tim Rogers, a sheriff's investigator, and Ronnie Tucker, an independent investigator, former Midland County deputy sheriff and former investigator for ex-Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch.

Phelps presented evidence to the grand jury that resulted in the indictments against Rogers and Tucker.

Earlier Phelps headed the investigation of a Ward County grand jury that indicted Tucker and Upchurch, 46, for alleged wrong-doing in an August 1989 reverse-sting operation. The sting apparently had its roots in Monahans but was carried out in Sherman.

On Wednesday, Phelps' motion to dismiss the Ward County indictments against Tucker for misapplication of funds and theft was granted by visiting Judge Larry Fuller in the 143rd District Court in Monahans.

The charges against Upchurch stand, Phelps said.

In explaining the dismissals against Tucker, Phelps said "some of the facts in the case suggested that it may be in the best interest of the state to try the case in Dallas."

The indictment had charged that Tucker, in the reverse-sting operation to catch illicit-drug traffickers and their money, had sold marked marijuana for $275,000 in Sherman in August 1989.

Afterward, en route to Monahans, Tucker allegedly had skimmed $68,750 off of the $275,000 in Dallas and then split that amount with an informant. The remainder was taken to court in Monahans for forfeiture and was represented as the total amount taken in the sting.

Phelps had claimed that Tucker was working as an investigator for then-District Attorney Hal Upchurch. Tucker claimed he was not then on the District Attorney Upchurch's payroll.

Phelps said he plans to re-indict Tucker in Dallas and try the case there.

Meanwhile, Phelps said an aggravated perjury charge against Tucker in a Monahans case still stands.

The Midland County Grand Jury, which was impaneled for a six-month term last September by 142nd Texas District Court Judge Pat Baskin, requested and was granted a 90-day extension in February.

State law allows only one extension, Cahoon said.

"Therefore," Cahoon wrote on behalf of the grand jury, "we request that the Attorney General's Office continue its work with other agencies so that the work we began can be brought to a conclusion."

"We are just concluding and turning everything over to Shane Phelps," Cahoon told the Reporter-Telegram. "I guess that's the end of our duty. Time ran out before we could look into many of the reverse stings."

Phelps said the Midland County grand jurors "have some questions that are unanswered."

"They ran out of time," Phelps said. "An investigation of this nature requires a lot of work. The grand jury was just frustrated that they didn't get to finish the work they started. We are going to do everything we can to honor the wishes of the grand jury."

Phelps said that "if anything turns up" in the Attorney General's continued probe into reverse stings carried out by Painter and his operations captain, Clayton McKinney, "then, certainly, we will" present evidence for indictment to another Midland County Grand Jury.

RETRIAL: Jury finds ex-teacher guilty in love-triangle murder case

(From 1A)

"The right person was punished. ... Our mistakes should not have led to this," said Paul Solomon, the victim's husband and Warmus' former lover.

The prosecutor, who called Warmus an obsessed "bad side of a love triangle," said Warmus shot Betty Jeanne Solomon nine times at the couple's Greenburgh apartment on Jan. 15, 1989, then met Solomon for drinks and sex.

Warmus' lawyer argued that she could have been framed. Solomon, who met Warmus when both were teaching at a suburban elementary school, was given immunity from prosecution.

Gasps could be heard in the packed Westchester County courtroom as Warmus was convicted of second-degree murder and felony weapon possession. She was handcuffed and led away.

The verdict came on the seventh day of deliberations. The first trial ended 13 months ago with a jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of conviction.

Warmus, who is be sentenced June 26, faces a maximum possible prison term of 25 years to life. She also faces forgery charges stemming from an allegedly fake telephone bill the defense used as evidence in her first trial.

"Carolyn Warmus is obviously shocked ... at the verdict," said defense lawyer William Aronwald. Asked why she showed no emotion, he said: "She has been under medication for some time and ... that has had some effect."

In promising to appeal, Aronwald said Judge John Carey should not have allowed into evidence a blood-specked glove that prosecutors said Warmus left behind at the crime scene. The glove was not seen at the first trial, but Solomon said he found it in time for the second.

"My feeling is that if the glove had not come into evidence, the result would have been different," Aronwald said.

Prosecutor Douglas FitzMorris said the jurors were "focused on the evidence. ... There were no distractions created during this trial."

The case gained wide attention because of comparisons to the 1987 movie "Fatal Attraction."

Published reports focused on stormy episodes in Warmus' life, notably her parents' bitter divorce and her troubled relationships with men. But Carey ruled that her past could not be raised by prosecutors.

The key prosecution witness was Vincent Parco, a private investigator who testified that in early 1989 he sold Warmus a gun equipped with a silencer he had paid a machinist to make.

A school nurse, Patricia January, testified that Warmus told her that she bought a gun to protect herself while living alone in New York City.

Prosecutors produced telephone records in claiming Warmus called a gun shop in Plainfield, N.J., from her Manhattan apartment. It said Warmus then went to the store to buy ammunition with a stolen driver's license before driving to the Solomons' apartment, where she shot Mrs. Solomon.

Solomon testified that Warmus met him later that evening at a nearby motel, where talk and drinks led to sex in her car. He said he returned home to find his wife's body in the living room.

RANKING: State is nation's top polluter woman for the Texas Water Commission, which compiles state data for the EPA's Toxics Release Inventory Program.

(From 1A)

Toxic output in Texas declined from 700 million pounds in 1987 to 418 million pounds three years later. That's a paper reduction of 60 percent — but an actual reduction of about 11 percent, she said.

Factories in Texas accounted for 418 million of the 3.5 billion pounds of toxic chemicals released by the nation's industries in 1990 — second only to Louisiana.

Texas led the nation in amount of toxic chemicals released into the air, accounting for 7 percent of the U.S. total. Of the 2.2 billion pounds released nationwide into the atmosphere, Texas accounted for 163 million pounds.

Texas smokestacks were among the biggest polluters in the country, accounting for 5.7 percent of the 1.5 billion pounds of toxins spewed into the nation's atmosphere. Only Utah and Tennessee had higher stack emissions.

The state ranked first in disposal of toxic chemicals in wells, accounting for 239 million, or a third, of the 725 million pounds of liquid wastes injected into underground wells.

The state also ranked first in amount of toxic chemicals released into the atmosphere from equipment leaks, spills and other so-called fugitive releases. Those releases accounted for 75 million, or 11 percent, of the 681 million pounds generated nationally.

The main toxic chemicals released into the environment by Texas industries were ammonia, nitric acid, ethylene, methanol and ammonium nitrate.

Texas didn't take top honors in the amount of toxic chemicals disposed of in landfills or buried on other property. The state ranked 13th in releases to land, accounting for 2.5 percent, or 11 million pounds, of the 441 million generated nationally.

The state also fared better in amount of toxic chemicals released into streams, lakes and other bodies of water, ranking at the lower end of the scale with 4 million of the 197 million pounds poured into waterways.

Texas also transfers more toxic chemicals to off-site locations than any other state. Of the 1.2 billion pounds of chemicals hauled to off-site treatment locations nationwide, Texas accounted for 116 million pounds or 9 percent.

The state hopes to make real reductions through a Clean Texas 2000 program implemented in April, Ms. Pitts said. The program targets the 40 top toxic chemical and hazardous waste producers in the state, seeking to find ways to reduce their emissions.

Monsanto Co. in Alvin ranked as the biggest producer of toxic chemicals in 1990, accounting for almost 65 million pounds, the EPA said.

The vast majority of that was ammonium sulfate, which is pumped into a pocket far below the earth's surface, said plant spokesman Don Meade.

"We are injecting into an area a mile deep in the ground that already contains salt water. It's too salty to be used for anything else," he said.

Monsanto has pledged to cut its air emissions by 90 percent at the end of this year and its organic waste by 70 percent by the end of 1995.

Settlers retaliate for rabbi's death

N.Y. Times News Service

BAT YAM, Israel — A Palestinian stabbed and killed the rabbi of a Jewish settlement in the Gaza Strip on Wednesday, adding to a torrent of rage that has engulfed Israel since an Arab killed a 15-year-old girl here on Sunday.

Settlers in Gaza retaliated for the killing of the rabbi, Shimon Biran, by beating Palestinians, overturning cars and setting fire to Arab-owned greenhouses and fields.

On Tuesday night, thousands of angry residents shouting "Death to Arabs!" rioted and battled the police in this working-class town four miles south of Tel Aviv to protest the death of the girl, Helena Rapp.

The unrest appeared to sharpen the polemics of Israel's accelerating election campaign. Settlement leaders and right-wing politicians called for a tough crackdown to stop Arab attacks, and the Labor party accused its Likud rival of failing to insure security.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted this week as saying that terrorists who tried to kill Israelis should be killed on the spot. The remarks, published in the local press, drew protests from critics who said Shamir was creating a lynch atmosphere.

In a rare statement, the most prominent Palestinian leader in the West Bank, Faisal al-Husseini, condemned the slaying of the girl in Bat Yam. Speaking at a public meeting in East Jerusalem, Husseini said Palestinians could not demand international censure of Israeli killings in the occupied territories without condemning the killing of innocent Israelis.

The killing in the Gaza Strip occurred outside Kfar Darom, a Jewish settlement. Witnesses said a Palestinian brandishing a knife chased Biran, 32, as he walked to a study institute, stabbing him in the back and through the heart. A soldier shot and wounded the attacker, who was identified as Ahmad Ibrahim Ahmad Abu Rihan, 19, from the neighboring town of Deir el Balah.

Angry settlers set fire to fields, smashed and overturned cars and vandalized a gas station. Two damaged vehicles belonged to the U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees.

Settlers also rammed the gate of a U.N. school with a bulldozer and broke several windows before they were stopped by soldiers, according to witnesses. At least two Palestinians were reported beaten; others were pelted with stones as they drove by.

Army bulldozers uprooted trees in an Arab-owned orchard near the site of the stabbing and the assailant's house was ordered demolished. A curfew was imposed on Deir el Balah.

Speaking at the funeral for Biran, the Religious Affairs Minister, Avner Shaki, warned that "extemely harsh measures" would have to be taken to put an end to the Arab attacks.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens ordered the Gaza Strip sealed off for three more days, extending a closing imposed after the killing in Bat Yam. The ban prevents 30,000 Palestinian laborers from reaching their jobs in Israel.

Leaders of Jewish settlements called on the government to begin wholesale expulsions of Palestinian militants, and at Kfar Darom, residents parked four trailer-homes near the scene of the stabbing, establishing a makeshift settlement.

Simmering anger was also evident in Bat Yam, where a tense calm prevailed after a night of rioting in which residents blocked streets, smashed store-windows, set fire to garbage bins and attacked police vehicles. Club-swinging police officers charged the crowds, arresting about 100 people.

Rioters broke into restaurants and bakeries, searching for Arab workers. Jewish mobs had attacked Arabs in the town and in neighboring communities on Sunday after the teen-age girl was stabbed and killed. The police arrested a 19-year-old Palestinian, Fuad abu al-Amrin, who was caught on the scene with a knife.

U.N. votes to maintain sanctions against Iraq

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council decided Wednesday to maintain crippling economic sanctions imposed on Iraq after the invasion of Kuwait.

Council members are concerned that President Saddam Hussein's government is still not fully disclosing details about its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, which must be destroyed under Gulf War cease-fire resolutions.

Earlier Wednesday, Iraq contended in a letter to the council saying it was providing information and eliminating those weapons. It said the sanctions should be lifted because Iraqis are suffering.

The 15-member council, meeting behind closed doors, agreed to keep the sanctions in place for at least two more months. The council reviews the measures, which ban all trade with Iraq except in food and humanitarian supplies, every two months.

Iraq's foreign minister, Muhammad Said al-Sahhaf, wrote that his country was prepared to turn over complete details of its weapons programs but was waiting for the United Nations to decide how the material should be submitted.

A report by a U.N. inspection commission Tuesday charged that Baghdad reneged on a promise to cooperate on long-term monitoring and verification of its weapons programs, tampered with the equipment of U.N. inspectors and doctored documents.

The report said the Iraqis at first contended they no longer had missiles with a range greater than 90 miles. But Iraq later admitted it had 92 more missiles that previous disclosed and claimed it destroyed the rockets without U.N. supervision — a violation of cease-fire resolutions.

The report also said Iraqis were still refusing permission for U.N. aircraft to land in the Baghdad area and were protesting high-altitude surveillance flights authorized by the Security Council.

But Rolf Ekeus, the inspection commission's chairman, said Iraq apparently did provide accurate information about the destruction of its chemical weapons and has cooperated in destroying long-range missiles and related factories.

On Wednesday, Ekeus told reporters he was prepared to reduce surveillance of Iraq's weapons programs if Baghdad complied with U.N. requirements.

U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins said Baghdad had shown "a little movement, but Iraq has got a long way to go before they comply."

Haiti military bans civilian guns

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The military on Wednesday responded to rising violence by banning civilians from carrying handguns. Soldiers beat up students at an anti-government rally, rounded up young men at a market and detained the former mayor of Port-au-Prince.

The handgun order came after at least 17 politically motivated killings in Port-au-Prince since May 20. The violence has come at a time of protests against the government's unwillingness to allow the return of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

U.S. Coast Guard cutters Wednesday returned 587 more Haitian boat people who tried to flee the Caribbean nation. More than half were sent back under President Bush's executive order authorizing the direct repatriation of Haitians.

Few of those returned under the executive order appeared aware of their rights to apply for political refugee status, and not many heard a loudspeaker announcement on how to get to the U.S. Consulate to apply.

The latest load of returnees included 335 Haitians intercepted Tuesday in the Windward Passage. The remaining 252 came from a refugee camp at the U.S. Navy base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, which now holds more than 12,000 Haitians.

Some 34,000 Haitians have been intercepted at sea since the army overthrew Aristide in September. The Organization of American States imposed a crushing embargo to press for Aristide's reinstatement.

The Bush administration is strengthening the embargo by banning foreign ships that do business with Haiti from stopping at U.S. ports, deputy State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington. A resolution approved May 17 by OAS foreign ministers asks all member states to take such action.

The Ministry of Defense's order banning civilians from carrying handguns did not mention army or police, whom human rights activists blame for many of the killings.

In a statement announcing the ban, the government tied the increase in violence to "certain politicians who are dissatisfied with the turn of events."

It said the politicians, who were not identified, were trying to "spoil the fine work accomplished by the military and the provisional government in trying to pull Haiti out of the crisis."

It was not clear if the statement was referring to leftist legislators or conservatives trying to court different factions of the military.

The interim president and prime minister reportedly agreed Tuesday to approve a plan calling for a new consensus government, but that plan does not call for the return of Aristide and leaves the presidency vacant.

Soldiers entered a private secondary school in Port-au-Prince on Wednesday morning to break up a demonstration, Radio Tropic FM reported. The radio reported several of the students were beaten in the courtyard of College Philosophes Reunis.

The government has closed public secondary schools this week after a series of demonstrations demanding the return of Aristide.

Police also rounded up young men in the market of Petionville, just outside the capital, witnesses said, in a sweep apparently aimed at Aristide supporters.

The witnesses said at least six men were taken away in one police van after a police captain stood in the street and directed his officers: "Take this one, take that one."

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said former Port-au-Prince Mayor Evans Paul was briefly detained Wednesday by military security when he tried to board a flight abroad. He was freed when diplomats intervened.

Paul, a prominent supporter of Aristide, has been arrested and badly beaten by soldiers on several occasions, and had recently been protected by foreign embassies.

Many Russians speak English-laced lingo

By T. Elaine Carey
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Russian just ain't the same language it was in the Communist days.

Now Russians are talking about fast-buck artists going "over the hill" to bring back "greeni." Translated, that means a black marketeer has gone abroad to smuggle back dollars.

Lots of Russians, especially older ones, don't understand this new slang.

The post-Communist infatuation with the West has created the lingo, which consists of Russian littered with English words and phrases.

The Russian language has also become more vulgar and aggressive since 1985 when Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev set out to restructure the Communist system, according to linguistic expert Leonid Krisin.

Russians now call the leader of the city a "mayor" instead of the Communist term in Russian for "chairman of the city executive council."

Teens talk about what is on the "hit parade" and the new "steps" that are danced. Rock groups search for a "sponsor" now, abandoning the proper Russian word, which is "medcinat."

Virtually any word relating to computers is not translated from English. Thus, the word for computer is "computer." A printer is called a "printer." There is talk of "interfacing."

Even the Russian term for arms control has been Americanized. The two Russian words for "arms control" are made plural, even though it is incorrect Russian grammar. "We do it because it makes it sound more in step with the West," Krisin said.

Now that the press is free from Communist control, the media have jumped on the English bandwagon. Scribes refer in English to "press releases" and "briefings."

The Communists used to preach that they were saving their people from the decadence and vulgarity of the materialistic, immoral West. Some older Russians now think the Communists might have been at least partly right.

Western films are on television and in the cinemas. So suddenly, Russians have begun repeating the abundant English cursing used in the scripts of American films.

The four letter English words aren't subject to strict translation into Russian. It is just as well, because curse words are seldom used in public. When they are, the loose-of-tongue can expect to be punched because obscenities are considered such an outrageous insult.

For that reason, some four letter words are rendered less blunt and churlish when translated from English. But even the milder Russian variations given for such words as prostitute and fornication shock many here.

Russians not only say "greeni" for dollars, but they also use the word "bucks." Russian rubles, on the other hand, are disparagingly called "cabbage" these days.

Even how to initially address someone on the street or in a shop has changed as Russians try to avoid making a political statement that could set the wrong tone for a conversation merely meant to ask the time of day or the cost of a dress.

Do you use the Communist term "comrade" or the capitalist one "Mister?"

"Lots of people have just started to say 'I'm sorry' or 'excuse me' to avoid making that choice," Leonid Krisin said.

But the most chic farewell these days is not English. Instead of "goodbye," hip Russians prefer the trendy "Ciao."

Reduction treaty changes debate

It seemed almost anticlimactic, but the signing by the United States and four former republics of the Soviet Union of an agreement to implement the START missile-reduction treaty Saturday actually provides the means for carrying out a reduction of nuclear weaponry that threatened a world holocaust for four decades. In that regard, the treaty represents the fulfillment of the "safer world" President George Bush and other leaders have been talking about for months.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev called the agreement "one of the most important international documents that have been worked on in recent times."

Secretary of State James A. Baker noted that the treaty "significantly lowers the risk of nuclear war."

Well, at the very least, the terms of the treaty — which call for removal of all long-range nuclear weapons from Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus, and a reduction of about 38 percent overall in Soviet long-range nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines — mean that a nuclear war likely would be less devastating, if that is possible. The United States, meanwhile, will be required to reduce its nuclear arsenals about 30 percent.

The treaty is not in effect, of course. Before it reaches that point, it must endure Senate ratification hearings and negotiations with Russia to trim strategic nuclear arsenals below the decreases already mandated by the accord.

But the missile-reduction pact at least moves the two nations that once were considered the greatest threat to world peace back from the nuclear threshold and onto a starkly different and — some would argue — even more dangerous course.

The threat of nuclear war is not and never has been about nuclear weaponry. If anything, the weaponry kept the United States and the Soviet Union from discussing the real issue: the political system in each of those nations.

That issue was pushed to the forefront at the end of the 1980s with the democratic revolution in Eastern Europe which dramatically altered the political roadmap of Europe. The political clash of ideals suddenly was moved to a higher plane and, in that regard, backing away from the nuclear threshold became a realistic maneuver.

The START treaty is just another step along that path and needs to be carefully scrutinized by the U.S. Senate.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, May 28, the 149th day of 1992. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred years ago, on May 28, 1892, the Sierra Club, dedicated to the cause of conservation and preserving nature, was organized in San Francisco.

On this date:

In 1533, England's Archbishop declared the marriage of King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn valid.

In 1863, the first black regiment from the North left Boston to fight in the Civil War.

In 1929, the first all-color talking picture, "On with the Show," opened in New York.

In 1934, the Dionne Quintuplets — Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne — were born to Elzire Dionne in Callender, Ontario, Canada.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt pushed a button in Washington signaling that vehicular traffic could cross the just opened Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

In 1937, Neville Chamberlain became prime minister of Britain.

In 1940, during World War II, the Belgian army surrendered to invading German forces.

In 1957, the National League gave its approval for the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants baseball teams to move to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

In 1972, the Duke of Windsor — who had abdicated the English throne to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson — died in Paris at age 77.

In 1977, 165 people were killed when fire raced through the Beverly Hills Supper Club in Southgate, Ky.

In 1985, David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, Lebanon, was abducted (he was freed 17 months later).

Ten years ago: Pope John Paul II began the first-ever papal visit to Britain with an appeal to Britain and Argentina to end their fighting over the disputed Falkland Islands.

Five years ago: Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old West German pilot, stunned the world as he landed a private plane in Moscow's Red Square after evading Soviet air defenses.

One year ago: Ethiopian rebels seized control of the capital of Addis Ababa, a week after the country's longtime Marxist ruler, Mengistu Haile Mariam, resigned his post and fled. U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other NATO defense chiefs agreed to create a rapid reaction corps as part of a broad plan to reshape the Western alliance in the post-Cold War era.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Carroll Baker is 61. Los Angeles Lakers General Manager Jerry West is 54. Singer Gladys Knight is 48.

Thought for Today: "Like other spurious things, fastidiousness is often inconsistent with itself, the coarsest things are done, and the cruelest things said by the most fastidious people." — Caroline Matilda Stansbury Kirkland, American author (1801-1864).

Perot's rise to power indicates cultism

WASHINGTON — Herman Rorschach, a Swiss psychiatrist, gauged patients' mental states by what they saw in inkblots. Ross Perot is America's Rorschach test. His rise reveals America's dangerous cult of presidential leadership.

Will

Perot's popularity is fresh (and redundant) evidence that the public suffers from what psychiatrists call cognitive dissonance, an incongruity between attitudes and behavior. That often is brought on by the mental incoherence of professing, simultaneously and fervidly, incompatible beliefs. The public wants Perot to put an end to what the public's wants have produced — the fiscal crisis caused by the public's demand for increased government and decreased taxes. And while the public claims to want more modesty from politicians, the public flirts with Perot, a politician (especially political in his denial that he is a politician) of stupendous vanity.

Freud, the vainest person who ever lived, believed that no one prior to him had ever understood anything, his insights being indispensable and sufficient for understanding everything. But Perot's political vanity is impressive. He seems to think America has problems because it has not had the benefit of his willfulness; that compared to him, everyone in public life lacks courage or common sense; that he can assuage conflict and reconcile competing values by establishing, in his person, an electronic communion with "the people" through televised "town meetings." (Never mind that town meetings are supposed to serve a polity the size of a small New England town, not a continental nation, and that such meetings are for discussions and decisions, not gatherings to give a leader information.)

Perot's childlike fascination with gadgetry envisions government as a great telephone answering machine. The evident idea behind his electronic town meetings is that government is not properly responsive because the public's wishes are not well-measured. Actually, government today involves minute measurement of public appetites by servile politicians worshipful of those measurements. Such government reflects the decay of deliberative democracy into plebiscitary, answering-machine democracy.

The core principle of our republicanism is representation: The people do not decide things, they decide who will decide. Representatives are supposed to deliberate about the national interest, not just broker demands registered from various factions. But Perot's idea of the plebiscitary presidency reflects Woodrow Wilson's revolution against the Founders' idea of deliberative democracy.

The Perot phenomenon is a consequence of Wilson's mystification of the presidency. Wilson's theory of presidential government makes the president the indispensable catalyst of mass opinion. He defined the primary business of government as the massing of opinion by a strong leader. More than a decade before he became president, Wilson the political scientist wrote:

"A nation is led by a man . . . in whose ears the voices of the nation . . . sound . . . like the united voices of a chorus, whose many meanings, spoken by melodious tongues, unite in his understanding in a single meaning and reveal to him a single vision, so that he can speak what no man else knows, the common meaning of the common voice."

Pentagon works magic with budget, planning

By speaking the magic word "shazam," a comic strip character could transform himself from a 15-year-old newsboy into superhero Captain Marvel. And by rewriting their controversial defense strategy paper, Pentagon leaders have metamorphosed from globocops into milomats, military mavens who appreciate the calming power of diplomatic words.

Gelb

The February draft of the paper caused a furor. It aimed U.S. planning guns at former enemies like Russia as well as friends like Germany and Japan, and it reeked of unilateral U.S. military action. Then shazam: A revised draft extends a less paranoiac hand to almost all and puts new emphasis on collective security.

Even more magically, Pentagon planners managed these major alterations in doctrine without losing a dime in the Pentagon budget. Double shazam.

Captain Marvel could not hold a candle to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, his top planner, Paul Wolfowitz, and chief general, Colin Powell. These guys now present a world that is far less hostile and threatening than in their earlier draft and retreat substantially from their earlier go-it-alone military philosophy — and they still salvage in totality their plans to spend $1.5 trillion over the next five years.

That said, words and ideas have a way of driving reality. Military planners are serious people who have to run large and complicated organizations. They cannot disregard the importance of official words. In time, the new Cheney-approved doctrine will begin to shape Pentagon budgets and forces.

And whatever the Cheney-Wolfowitz-Powell reasons for changing Pentagon guidance, their new words are good words.

In the February version, the world was still very much shadowed by a Russian Dracula that could rise from the dead suddenly, once the democratic stake was removed from its imperialistic heart. In the new draft, the planners rightly worry about a resurgent and authoritarian Russia. But there is now no pretense that Moscow could pose a serious threat, at least for many years to come. Sensibly, the new document even calls for a "democratic partnership" with Russia and the other ex-Soviet republics.

Gone also is the implication that Germany and Japan need to be viewed as potential military rivals. Such notions smacked of self-fulfilling prophecies and rightly rankled Bonn and Tokyo. In any event, both drafts come to the correct conclusion for dealing with future security concerns in Europe and Asia. That is to do so by bucking U.S. political pressures and keeping significant U.S. forces on both those continents.

Israel will be pleased to see that in the new draft it is reinstated under America's defense umbrella. And India will be happy to learn it has been removed from the list of potential enemies.

Importantly, the new draft also strikes a better balance between unilateral and collective action. It contains language that will make military planners first think hard about cooperative undertakings, without surrendering the right and capability to act independently if need be.

Defense planning for the United States is a tricky and difficult business. This is all the more so in the post-cold-war world where threats seem abstract and distant.

Throw deadbeat dads in jail

As I listened to Dan Quayle I had mixed emotions as he expounded on family values.

It seemed that we agreed, as I chose to stay home, raise a family and celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary this past year. But wait a minute! Wait just a doggone minute, Murphy Brown did not have that option.

Her husband chose to leave her and bum around the world. He came home, declared his undying love, and they made plans to have a home and family. With Murphy pregnant, he just could not bear the thought of being tied down, so took off for parts unknown, leaving her, like too many women today, to be the only (single) parent willing to take the responsibility for the child.

The only other choice was abortion. Is that what the good ol' boy Quayle was saying? I think not.

That is the problem with mostly men running the government — most of them have the Adam Syndrome, "It's either woman's fault or God's fault for creating her."

Why not advocate going after deadbeat fathers who abandon women and children and make it a felony to start another family until the first family is taken care of? Give them a little supplemental integrity. If they don't accept the responsibility, throw their worthless carcass in jail.

At present thousands of women and children are suffering and hungry while the deadbeat fathers go about their business not caring if they are hungry, sick or on welfare.

This is more of a problem in America than the one we fought the Gulf War over — why not declare war not on poverty, but on those who create it? Poverty is only a symptom.

Quayle shows courage

I am very pleased that Vice President Dan Quayle has the courage to express the real problems in our inner cities and in our society in general. A return to Judeo-Christian values of the traditional family would go along way toward curing the ills of our nation.

The aid package being debated in Congress, the right to an abortion, or more education will not cure the ills of our inner cities. These programs have been in place in some form or fashion for 20 years. Will more of the same improve the situation? Of course not!

The solution to the unwed mother problem is not abortion. The solution to broken homes is not more education. The solution to killing, arson and immorality of every kind in our city streets is not money, education or more "rights." This is a morals problem and morality is not being taught.

There must be a return to the Judeo-Christian values that were once taught in our homes and schools. It is a disgrace that our courts and educators have departed so far from the ideas of our country's founding fathers, that documents such as the Mayflower compact and parts of the Constitution would be iliegal to discuss in school because of the strong references to God!

It is time for leaders and educators, fathers and mothers to return to the Judeo-Christian values on which our great nation was founded. We cannot let the liberal media and liberal educators continue to lead our nation into moral decline. We need more leaders like Dan Quayle to speak up!

Incumbents feel heat from check overdrafts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defeat of two more House incumbents who wrote bad checks sent a new round of shivers through Congress on Wednesday, with the season's biggest round of state primaries just a week away.

Lawmakers who had hoped the issue would simply go away are being unpleasantly surprised — and sent packing.

"Most controversies fade in the public memory fairly quickly," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist. "This one already has shown it has staying power beyond the norm. . . . It certainly suggests that it might last all the way to November."

In Arkansas, 12-term Democrat Bill Alexander, whose 487 bad checks at the now-closed House bank ranked him among the institution's worst abusers, was soundly defeated Tuesday by a former aide, Blanche Lambert.

And 18-year-veteran Carroll Hubbard, D-Ky., who wrote 152 overdrafts, was stunned by Paducah businessman Tom Barlow.

Another bad-check writer, Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., was forced into a June 9 runoff after he failed to win a majority in a three-way primary.

The returns were another painful reminder for House members of the anger in the American electorate this year. In Ohio, where two bad-check writers face tough primaries next week, a statewide poll showed 59 percent of adults rate Congress as "poor" or "very poor."

Government reports 4.8 billion pounds of chemicals released

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's factories released 4.8 billion pounds of toxic chemicals, including many cancer-causing substances, into the air, ground and water in 1990, about 11 percent less than the year before, the government reported Wednesday.

But the Environmental Protection Agency cautioned that some of the reductions may only reflect changes on paper with companies using new reporting techniques.

And while overall numbers were reduced, the volume of toxic chemicals poured into rivers, lakes, and streams increased by 4 million pounds, or about 2 percent in 1990, the agency said.

Nevertheless, EPA officials said the pollution figures covering 313 toxic chemicals used at 23,648 industrial plants seemed to represent a steady movement toward reduced emissions since the reports were first required in 1988.

"We think there are real reductions happening," Mark Greenwood, the EPA's director of pollution prevention, said at a news conference.

The releases are legal and the raw numbers give little indication of risk to the public since they do not reflect actual exposure. The health threat of chemicals also ranges widely from some that may pose minimal risk to others that are known carcinogens.

Direct year-to-year pollution comparisons have been difficult because not all companies are required to report each year and even the chemicals subject to reporting and the reporting criteria may change from year to year, officials said.

Edwin Rothschild of Citizen Action, an environmental group that has tracked past toxic release findings, said he doubted that all of the reductions in the 1990 figures came from improved pollution controls.

Citizen Action surveyed 50 companies that reported emission reductions in 1989 and found that all but 13 reported largely paper declines, he said.

Judges in 2 states strike down rulings on abortion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A California law requiring unmarried girls under age 18 to get a parent's or judge's permission before an abortion was ruled unconstitutional Wednesday by a judge.

Also Wednesday, a judge in Ohio declared unconstitutional a state law that would have required women seeking an abortion be told about fetal development and abortion alternatives and to get counseling from a doctor.

"There is no evidence to the effect that an abortion may proceed more safely 24 hours after the required information is imparted to the woman," Judge Guy Reece Jr. of Franklin County Common Pleas Court wrote in his decision. The Ohio law was to take effect Thursday.

The U.S. Supreme Court is considering a Pennsylvania law similar to Ohio's. The high court is expected to rule on that case this summer.

The California law, adopted in 1987 yet never enforced, was modeled on others that federal courts have upheld. But Superior Court Judge Maxine Chesney said the measure violates a minor's right to privacy under the California Constitution.

She rejected the state's arguments that the law would improve family communication and give young women vital parental advice.

"Rather than furthering the state's interest in the health of minors and in the parent-child relationship," the judge wrote, "the legislation in question will actually work against those interests."

Chesney said minors generally are as capable as adults in deciding on abortions; for those who aren't, a safeguard exists in the law requiring doctors to get the patient's consent to perform any medical procedure.

The law requires an unmarried woman under age 18 to get written consent from one parent for an abortion. As an alternative, she could seek a superior court judge's approval on grounds that she had the maturity to make that decision, or that an abortion was in her best interest.

The law was to take effect in January 1988 but was blocked three days earlier by another San Francisco judge after doctors and family-planning groups challenged it. A state appeals court upheld that ruling and found the state constitutional guarantee of privacy broader than federal privacy rights.

The law remained unenforced while the case was returned to Chesney for a non-jury trial. She heard weeks of testimony from conflicting experts on medicine, psychology and other fields about the likely effects of the law.

In Columbus, Ohio, the judge said a law requiring women to receive information on fetal development and abortion options 24 hours before an abortion was unconstitutional.

Jury convicts sect leader, 6 followers of conspiracy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A jury Wednesday convicted black religious sect leader Yahweh Ben Yahweh and six followers of conspiring to kill, maim and burn to enforce discipline and intimidate non-members.

Some of Yahweh's 15 co-defendants were acquitted of conspiracy and racketeering. Jurors, who had reported confusion and disagreement during five days of deliberation that followed a five-month trial, deadlocked on other counts, including a racketeering charge against Yahweh.

Chief U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger declared a mistrial on the deadlocked counts. Prosecutor Richard Scruggs said he may seek a new trial on those charges.

Yahweh, the self-proclaimed "son of God," was charged with conspiring to kill black "blasphemers" and "white devils" as his Nation of Yahweh, a small Miami religious group, grew into a real estate empire.

Defense attorneys claimed he was being persecuted for religious and racial reasons.

Yahweh and 15 followers were accused of plotting 14 murders, two attempted killings and the firebombing of a city block. Yahweh and 10 others were charged with conspiracy and racketeering; five others were charged only with conspiracy.

Six followers were convicted of conspiracy, which carries a possible sentence of 20 years in prison. Seven were cleared of conspiracy. Six were acquitted of racketeering, also punishable by up to 20 years in prison.

Jurors deadlocked on racketeering charges against Yahweh and four others, and on conspiracy charges against two followers.

One by one, the defendants, wearing the sect's traditional white robes and turbans, stood up in the center of the courtroom as Roettger read the verdicts. The judge then freed nine of the defendants, though four of them were immediately arrested on state first-degree murder charges.

The freed defendants kissed Yahweh on the hand or lips. Yahweh embraced his attorney, Alcee Hastings.

"The prosecution has suffered a major blow and it ain't over yet," Hastings said as other defense lawyers cheered and patted each other's backs outside the courthouse.

Scruggs, the prosecutor, said: "We are pleased with some of the verdict and disappointed with others. However, the jury has spoken and we have the utmost respect for their decisions."

Deliberations began Saturday, after Roettger urged the nine whites and three blacks on the jury to set aside any religious or racial differences with the defendants — all of them black.

Jurors saw bloody autopsy photos and gripping testimony from former sect members, including one woman who survived having her throat cut after leaving the Nation of Yahweh in 1983.

Yahweh's attorney said the racketeering statute was abused to destroy a movement that threatened the white establishment. Hastings argued that Yahweh was prosecuted "because his teachings caused the blind, black men of America to see that white people caused at least some of their trouble."

Bush treats big donors better, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporations and business executives who donate $100,000 or more to Republicans have benefited from a "clear pattern of favorable treatment" from the Bush administration, a watchdog group said Wednesday.

Common Cause said in the current issue of its magazine that the administration made policies and changed regulations to help contributors and assisted them with grants and trade rulings.

The article said no direct exchanges of money for favors were found.

Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer said, however, that several "questionable actions and policy reversals" left the appearance of "a White House on the auction block."

"Wealthy donors are being taken care of by the Bush administration at a time when most people in this country believe their problems are being ignored by the government," Wertheimer said in an interview.

Bush general campaign chairman Robert Mosbacher, the former commerce secretary who set up the party's program for $100,000 contributors in 1988, scoffed at the notion they get special treatment.

"That's absolute baloney," Mosbacher said in a telephone interview. "They don't get anything and they don't expect anything." He said any company or executive could get equal help in spurring economic growth and opening new trade opportunities.

Common Cause cited one case in which the Justice Department — against the wishes of staff lawyers — dropped a two-year tax investigation involving a Georgia utility whose president contributed $105,000, the magazine said.

The company said the decision proved it was innocent. And IRS Commissioner Shirley Peterson, then a Justice Department lawyer who ended the investigation in 1990, said political pressures were not involved.

In another case, Common Cause said, a government agency tried to reduce Occidental Petroleum Co.'s proposed fine for alleged oil overcharges from $710 million to $205 million. The company and its executive vice president have donated $334,780 to the Republican Party since 1988, the magazine said.

President: Hospital cuts indigent care costs

■ Innovative management techniques result in more efficient treatment, board president says.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Enhanced treatment of indigent patients and innovative management techniques apparently have resulted in more efficient out-patient and in-patient treatment at Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

The approaches have substantially reduced the cost in tax dollars for the Midland County Hospital District, according to Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, out-going president of the seven-member hospital board.

The district's 17.74-cent tax rate per $100 valuation will generate about $6.6 million this year to finance healthcare for "those who cannot take care of themselves," Wiesenfeld said. The tax base is $3.7 billion.

Last year, the hospital experienced more than a $2-million deficit in indigent care, said board member Jean Pittman. "This year, we are looking at between a $600,000 and a $700,000 deficit," which will be covered by hospital operating revenues from paying patients and their insurance carriers.

"We are facing a difficult situation on taxes" both locally and nationally, Wiesenfeld said in reference to taxpayers' protest against higher taxes. "We are going to have trouble raising taxes for awhile" to cover indigent care.

Meanwhile, the hospital and its medical staff are attacking indigent-care costs by, in part, the treatment of indigent children and expectant mothers at the hospital's Community Healthcare Center.

Hospital President Howard Rubin said the clinic, which is staffed by two full-time pediatricians and by nurses and nurse-midwives has paid off.

The clinic "is saving the taxpayers $450,000 so far this year," Ms. Pittman said.

"We are trying to practice a lot of preventative medicine (and) to teach patients how to take care of themselves," Rubin said. "We are seeing less hospitalization. When we do hospitalize, (there often is a) shorter length of stay."

Margaret Williams, who was elected to succeed Wiesenfeld as board president Wednesday, offered a "qualified 'yes' " in response to the question if she will seek to hold taxes at their current effective rate — 17.961 cents per $100 valuation based on the 1992 tax base. The effective tax rate is the rate needed to generate the same amount of revenue as the preceeding year taking into account changes in the valuation of property.

Following the swearing in of board members Jo Ann Viney, Charles Coffman and Jean Pittman by 142nd Texas District Court Judge Pat Baskin, the board elected Ms. Williams as pres-

Singer Riley tops Wink's Orbison fest

Staff report

WINK — Country music star Jeannie C. Riley, whose hit song "Harper Valley PTA" sold over 8 million copies, will headline the fourth annual Roy Orbison Memorial Festival at Wildcat Stadium on June 6.

A native of West Texas, Riley released four dozen albums through the 1980s, and today is a successful songwriter, known for her insights into life, the heart and Texas family heritage.

Orbison

Also, returning to Wink for the fourth time will be nationally known Roy Orbison imitator Kenny Morrill. Morrill, a nightclub performer who bears a striking resemblance to Orbison in looks and voice, helped launch the first Orbison Festival in 1989 and has appeared at each of the annual events since.

This year's festival, honoring Wink's favorite son promises to be bigger and better than ever, organizaers say. Stephen Pride, younger brother of Charlie Pride, will make his third appearance in Wink, and Patsy Cline imitator Kandi White, also returns from the 1991 show.

Making their initial appearance at the festival will be the Daniel Townsend Band of Hobbs, N.M.

In four years, the Roy Orbison Festival has become a prime musical attraction in West Texas-Southeastern New Mexico and has been recognized by the Texas Department of Commerce and Texas Monthly magazine.

Scheduled events for the 1992 show include a four-hour concert, a "Pretty Woman" pageant, a reunion of the Orbison family, friends and fans and a country and western dance featuring vocalist Mary Dodd and the Texas Express Band.

In addition, the Wink High School Class of 1953 will hold its 40th reunion in the Wink School Cafeteria. Former school superintendent Frank R. Barton will welcome the exes, and lunch will be catered in the cafeteria by Peggy Sue's Restaurant of Wink. All other Wink High School exes are invited to the reunion.

Many of Orbison's earliest friends and musicians will be on hand for the festival in this community, where the rock-a-billy star launched his career in the '50s. Ex-

Seasonal trends increase April's unemployed rate

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

The TEC figures did show an increase in the civilian labor force, to 50,000 from 49,900; it was at 49,500 a year ago.

Seasonal influences continue to flatten Midland's job market, according to figures released Wednesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

Midland's unemployment rate for April was 7.2 percent, up from 7 percent in March and from 5.5 percent in April 1991.

In Odessa, the rate was 9.8 percent, up from 9.3 percent in March and from 6.9 percent a year ago.

Meris Kidd, manager of the Midland TEC office, said the local economy "continued to show signs of sluggish activity across all categories."

The TEC figures did show an increase in the civilian labor force, to 50,000 from 49,900; it was at 49,500 a year ago.

However, the 100 who entered the labor force were apparently unemployed, as total unemployment also rose by 100, to 3,600 from 3,500 in March. A year earlier, total unemployeement was 2,700.

"Increases are generally new entrants and re-entrants reentering the labor force," said Kidd, who added that these new entrants and re-entrants are, as a rule, high school and college students or graduates just getting out of school, or school employees seeking summer jobs.

Midland's total employment remained at 46,400 for a second month; it was 46,800 in April 1991.

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked 13th, tied with Wichita Falls, Odessa 23rd. Bryan-College Station continued to have the lowest unemployment in the state with 3.5 percent, followed by Austin with 4.9 percent, Amarillo and San Angelo with 5.7 percent and Abilene with 6 percent. The highest rate was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission, 16.3 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate was flat with March, 7.4 percent. Last year, it was 6.9 percent.

The number of jobless Texans increased by 6,300 over the month, totaling 648,000, while total employment showed a modest increase to nearly 8.1 million, the TEC reported. Most of that in-

Richards to buy first lottery ticket, not sell it

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards had to change her plans to sell the first Texas Lottery ticket on Friday. State lawyers said it might be illegal.

But the governor still will be getting up early to arrive at Polk's Feed Store in Austin at 5:55 a.m., where she will be buying the ceremonial first ticket instead.

"It could be against the law," deputy press secretary Margaret Justus explained Wednesday. "You have to be an employee of a licensed lottery dealer to sell a ticket. Obviously, she's not."

The $1 instant-win tickets go on sale statewide at 6 a.m. Friday in the first lottery game ever run by the state. More than 14,700 retailers have been licensed to sell tickets.

The governor herself earlier this month said she planned to sell the first ticket, and Friday's event was arranged for her to do that until her legal staff advised otherwise, Ms. Justus said.

"She's not going to get behind the counter and sell. She's going to buy," Ms. Justus said.

State Comptroller John Sharp, who oversees all lottery operations, said Wednesday he hopes neither the governor nor any other top state official wins a big prize.

"My biggest nightmare is having to give a $1 million check to my father. My second biggest nightmare is giving one to a statewide official," Sharp said.

The Texas Lottery plans 12 drawings through the summer with $1 million prizes being awarded to each of the dozen winners.

Special education teacher Doreen Davis reads to her students.

Teacher 'blind' to students' shortcomings

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

There's no doubt that it takes someone with tenacity to teach special education students, but Doreen Davis said it also takes someone who can see beyond appearances.

"You just have to see the potential in a student," she said. "You have to see what they can do, and help students feel good about themselves."

For her efforts at building self-esteem, several parents nominated Ms. Davis for the Teacher of the Month Award, an honor bestowed upon her by the Midland Chamber of Commerce for the month of May.

In her nomination letter, one mother wrote: "I feel this teacher has and does carry a very heavy load. I know when she chose to be a special education teacher she knew the responsibilities and the very many different children she would have to deal with ... it takes much love, understanding and patience ... and Mrs. Davis has this special touch."

Ms. Davis oversees 12 children age 6-10 in her classroom. She and two instructional aides — Cooky Fuentes and Ruth Amos — employ an interactive style of teaching using the Aided Communication System.

The communication system, which involves students pointing to a card with a sign language symbol or using sign language to communicate, allows students with speech handicaps to participate in lessons and answer questions. And students are encouraged and reinforced when they attempt answers, she said.

"Not everything these students do is right, according to usual standards. But, it's OK to make a mistake, even though society says that you — your hair, your clothing, and everything — have to be perfect," the educator said.

She said that she praises students when they are wrong, before giving them the correct answer, to let them know that their efforts are valued.

A special education teacher for 11 years, 10 of them in Midland public schools, Ms. Davis said her interest in helping the handicapped started in her youth.

"I come from a military family with four brothers," she said. "We were stationed in Spain when my mother decided to work with the handicapped for a Christmas show. At first, I said: 'I can't do this.' But I observed and watched, and discovered that she treated the other children like she treated us. I realized that the handicapped are more like us than

Perry Nunley

Services for Perry L. Nunley of Midland are set for 2 p.m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Nunlet died Monday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers are Ronnie L. Nunley, Dan Nunley, Scott Nunley, Stan Nunley, Phillip Nunley, Mark Nunley, Perry Nunley and Pete Monnig. Honorary pallbearers will be grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

HOSPITAL: New methods save tax dollars

(From 1B)

ident, Ms. Pittman as vice president, and Coffman as secretary.

Wiesenfeld offered thanks to retiring board members Tom Bruner and Dr. Shelton Viney, a Midland physician-surgeon whose wife succeeded him on the board in the recent hospital district election.

Coffman and Ms. Viney are new to the board. Ms. Pittman, who has changed single-member districts, is into her second year on the board.

"I'd like to thank Steve (Wiesenfeld) for all of his leadership this past year," Ms. Williams said.

Ms. Viney expressed concern over taxpayers' anti-tax sentiment and the cloud of increasing taxes.

"They (taxpayers) are going to revoit" even more than they did last year if taxes are raised, she suggested.

In his first meeting as a board member, Coffman proposed that the hospital appoint an ad hoc committee "to study how to reduce healthcare costs" and how to "increase efficiency" of hospital operations.

Coffman proposed a "comprehensive audit of all hospital activities from admission to discharge"; the analysis of tasks; the interviewing of patients on care and billing.

Rubin said the hospital staff does conduct exit interviews of patients through patient-satisfaction surveys.

In reviewing hospital finances, Ms. Pittman, who advocates preventative medicine, noted that the hospital's cost-containment policy is evidenced in tighter control over pharmacy charges, particularly in the use of generic drugs instead of more expensive name-brand pharmaceuticals, and the cost-saving practice of treating many indigent patients in the Community Healthcare Center.

So far, the hospital district has spent $4.125 million of its budgeted $6.6 million for indigent healthcare. Of that, slightly more than $6 million, or 89 percent, has been collected, according to Jim Kendrick, the hospital's chief financial officer.

"We have a cash balance of $1.998 million" to last until end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30, Ms. Pittman said.

In the past, Ms. Pittman noted that the hospital board had "reduced the tax rate," but the "costs of inflation caught up with us ... and, all of a sudden, we were behind the times." Taxes in recent years were increased to pay for indigent medical care.

"I think that we have always been compassionate," Ms. Pittman said of the hospital. And she noted that many private physicians take indigent patients into their practices and absorb the costs.

Joseph I. O'Neill III, chairman of the hospital's appointed board of trustees, noted that the hospital's finance department "has done a heck of a job in identifying costs.

"And with incredible cooperation with the medical staff, we have been able to shift treatment in some cases and medication to optimize treatment."

"Doctors are responsible for the treatment," O'Neill said, while the hospital is "here to provide a roof over their heads. You can only do so much, and then you need the cooperation of the medical staff. And we are getting it."

"Physicians are more cognizant of healthcare cost," Rubin said. "They are working and trying to prevent hospitalization. The concern over the most effective use of available healthcare dollars is heightened throughout the medical community."

different."

Ms. Davis said her young charges cheer her on even the most dismal days. "They are so enthusiastic. They notice all of the little things — like flowers blooming — and point them out to me. It causes me to reflect on life and look at all the things I have that I take for granted."

The teacher said an esteem-builder for her students is the PALS (Partner at Learning Skills) program which allows fifth graders to come into her classroom and work with her students.

"The way they interact is really wonderful. The fifth graders are so caring and concerned. If one of my students is absent, they say: 'Mrs. Davis, call their mother! Find out what happened.''

She said PALS was organized by Mamie Williams, Scharbauer principal, and the program is in its sixth year.

As the school year draws to a close, Ms. Davis said she is planning to see four students off to a higher level program and take on two younger ones next fall.

"I get them for four years," she said, beaming. "I get them when they are tiny, around 6. Now two of my boys are taller than me."

The teacher — who has two children of her own — said her offspring and her husband are supportive of her career, which includes visiting her students and their families at home.

"If I could change one thing, it would be to have more time to visit the parents of my students, to go to their workplace if they don't have time to come out to the school," she said.

Ms. Davis said that the most surprising dividend of her job is that she has become "blinded" to her students' shortcomings. "My aides and I were talking about this. We don't see the handicap or the delay in social skills. We see that this student can write his name, this one will be tying his shoes soon, and that one can say all of the sounds of the letters of the alphabet — quite an accomplishment."

"We see the potential and the ability in every student," she added. "You have to go a little deeper to find the potential. There is a lot more inside there than what you can see from the outside."

WINK: Hobbs, N.M., band is on festival slate

pected again this year are members of both the "Wink Westerners" and the "Teen Kings" bands, which paved the way to fame for Orbison.

The Pretty Woman pageant, which will feature competition for girls of all ages in both beauty and talent, will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday. Following a break for lunch, it will resume at 2 p.m.

The concert will begin at 6 p.m. in Wildcat Stadium and continue until 10 p.m. when the dance will get underway at the Winkler County Exhibition Building. Admission to the concert is $10 for adults, $5 for children under 12 years of age. Tickets to the dance are $5 each.

More than 3,000 fans are expected to attend from throughout the U.S. and from foreign countries.

T-shirts, caps, buttons and other Orbison souvenirs as well as food and refreshments will be availble throughout the afternoon and evening.

Funds from the Roy Orbison Memorial Festival will be used to construct a bronze, larger-than-life statue of Orbison in downtown Wink and to further improve the Roy Orbison Museum.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Police seek two

Staff report

ODESSA — Police are searching for two men who robbed a Kent Kwik Convenience store early Wednesday morning, police said.

The men entered the store at 3:15 a.m. and attempted to open the beer cooler. Store clerk Paul L. Smith, 52, told the men it was too late to sell beer and one man pointed a knife at Smith and demanded money. The men took an unknown amount of cash from a safe and escaped with five packs of cigarettes, police said.

The men are believed to be in their mid-20s and both are described as about 5-feet-7, 150 pounds with short black hair and brown eyes. One man was wearing a dark cap, a light gray jacket, a blue shirt and blue jeans. The other man is only described as wearing a red shirt.

Man sentenced

A 23-year-old man has been sentenced to 20 years in prison for committing 21 bank robberies in three different states, including the Nov. 5 robbery of Team Bank in Midland, federal investigators said Wednesday.

Alvin Shinette Jr. will served the sentences concurrently but will not be eligible for parole under the federal system, FBI supervisor Tom Kirspel said.

Shinette, a native of Galveston, committed 19 of the robberies in California and one in New Mexico, in addition to the Midland robbery. He pled guilty to the crimes on Jan. 4.

Drug arrest

A 28-year-old man was arrested Tuesday evening allegedly in possession of 3.39 ounces of cocaine, federal officials said.

Lemarn Anthony Merchant was arrested by police after being stopped while traveling eastbound on Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa, officials said.

He has been charged with conspiracy to possess with intent to deliver a quantity of cocaine, and possession with intent to distribute the drug.

Merchant made an initial appearance before a U.S. Magistrate Wednesday and will have a detention hearing on Monday.

The Drug Enforcement Administration assisted the Midland police in the investigation that led to the arrest.

Guilty plea

A 47-year-old man pleaded guilty Wednesday to computer fraud and was sentenced in U.S. District Court to 18 months in prison.

Daniel Lee Price allegedly provided confidential information obtained through his employment as an engineer with Mobil Oil, to outsiders bidding on Mobil leases.

The conviction was a result of a joint investigation by the Midland County Sheriff's Department and the FBI office in Midland.

Police arrest man after crash

Staff report

A 32-year-old man, who lost control of his truck and crashed into a city-owned fence and a house Wednesday afternoon, was arrested hours after the incident and charged with three misdemeanor counts — including public intoxication, police said.

Rebel L. King, 4607 W. Illinois Ave., was turning right at the corner of Storey Avenue and Edgewood Street, when he failed to control his 1988 gray pickup and barreled through two sections of a five-foot cyclone fence before hitting the house.

King, who ran from the scene, was charged with public intoxication, failure to comply with state reguirements for leaving the scene of an accident and disorderly conduct.

He remained in the Midland County jail late Wednesday night on bonds total $755.

JOBLESS: Unemployment rises

(From 1B)

crease was in seasonal job climbs in construction, and eating and drinking establishments.

"The economic picture in Texas is absolutely flat," Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said.

"Our job growth is considerably down from previous years," she added.

Ms. Nabers said wages are losing ground to inflation and most job growth is in lower-paying jobs.

"If this continues, and the trends are well-established, the standard of living for all Texans will ultimately drop," she said.

The largest number of jobs created between 1980 and 1990 were janitors and cleaners, while real average weekly wages when adjusted for inflation have decreased statewide since 1984, the TEC said.

"We have our work cut out for us in the area of economic development," Ms. Nabers said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Lee High students earn honors

Staff report

Members of the Lee High School Chapter of the Business Professionals of America participated in the recent National Leadership Conference in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Melinda Butts received a second place award in the Office Specialist Contest.

Anthony Hernandez, Steven Kollar and Tiffany Henry comprised the Financial Analysis Team which placed sixth in their event.

Approximately 3,000 secondary students from throughout the United States participated.

Jody Nix presents concert at Dos Amigos

Staff report

ODESSA — Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys will play for a concert and dance at 9 p.m. Friday at Dos Amigos.

Partial proceeds go to benefit the Permian Basin Advertising Federation.

Tickets to the concert/dance, which is sponsored by KNFM-92.3 FM, are $6 in advance and may be purchased in Odessa at Dos Amigos, 47th Street at Golder, and at Luskey's Western Wear, 623 42nd. St; and at Luskey's in Midland, 2310 W. Michigan Ave.

Tickets will be $8 at the door.

Perot makes ballot in Texas, Florida

AUSTIN (NYT) — The campaign to put Ross Perot in the White House scored a significant victory Wednesday by qualifying him for the ballot in his home state of Texas.

Texas Secretary of State John Hannah announced that followers of the Dallas billionaire had collected enough valid signatures to put Perot on the November general election ballot as an independent presidential candidate.

And the Perot Petition Committee in Dallas announced Wednesday that the Board of Elections in Florida has notified petition officials that Perot has more than enough signatures to get on the ballot in that state. The committee said Perot plans a trip to Florida Friday.

Texas and Florida are the largest states by far to put Perot on the ballot, and Texas had the earliest petition deadline.

"I am honored and humbled by the support from the people of Texas and Florida," Perot said in a prepared statement. He has not officially declared his candidacy but has indicated he will run.

With Perot on the Texas ballot, this year's presidential election has a strong Southwest flavor. Perot is a native Texan, Republican President George Bush claims Texas as his adopted home state, and the likely Democratic nominee, Gov. Bill Clinton, comes from next-door Arkansas.

Also on the ballot in Texas will be the Libertarian Party's presidential candidate, Andre Marrou of Nevada.

Not since 1980, when U.S. Rep. John Anderson of Illinois ran as an independent candidate, has anyone qualified for the presidential ballot in Texas by submitting a petition, Hannah said. Anderson drew 2.5 percent of the vote in Texas.

Perot already has qualified for the ballots in Tennessee, Utah, Maine, Delaware, Kentucky and Wyoming. New Jersey officials said he likely would qualify there, and petitions are awaiting certification in Alaska.

In Texas, Hannah sent a letter to Perot informing the computer magnate that "many more than the required 54,275 signatures on the petitions were valid and in accordance with state law."

Rather than attempt to verify thousands of signatures, the secretary of state commissioned a University of Texas professor to perform a statistical analysis that relied on 115 randomly chosen signatures from the petitions, which contained 228,219 signatures.

The 115 signatures were examined to see if the signers had filled out the petition properly, were registered to vote and if they had voted in the March 10 primaries. Signers had to be registered voters who had not cast a ballot in the primary.

The screening found that 66 "satisfied all requirements," the analysis said.

Officials: School vandals went too far

HOUSTON (AP) — High school seniors who spray-painted their campus, draped a flag and put things in lockers as part of a prank went too far when they included racial slurs, a Confederate flag and dead animals, officials said.

About 25 Spring Woods Senior High students, scheduled to graduate in four days, used shoe polish to write racial slurs on the outside of the school's auditorium on the sidewalks. There also was a drawing depicting a black person impaled on a cross.

Some students also taped a rebel flag at the top of the school's flagpole, and placed a dead racoon and opossum in two empty lockers.

"They just took something too far," Principal Perry Pope said of what students said was a senior farewell prank.

Lt. Chuck Brawner, police chief of Spring Branch Independent School District, said he is deciding whether there will be criminal charges filed against the students.

The school, which is 13 percent black, 25 percent Hispanic and 13 percent Asian, was vandalized about 10 p.m. Monday.

"The students were incensed," Pope said. "There is no support whatsoever for the kids who did it."

Most of the students involved were identified and called to the office for questioning Tuesday. They admitted being on the campus Monday night, Pope said, but no one confessed to writing the racial slurs.

Pope said there is a chance the seniors will not be allowed to participate in graduation ceremonies.

VOLUNTEERING

Volunteers are at the heart of change. Celebrate National Volunteer Week May 24 through June 2 by joining the swelling ranks of volunteers in Midland.

A variety of volunteer opportunities are available for persons of all ages wishing to be at the heart of change.

■ The Center for Nonprofit Management and the Business and Economic Center of Midland College are sponsoring a seminar April 23, titles "The Three R's of Successful Volunteer Management: Recruitment, Retention and Recognition." This seminar is designed to enhance volunteer coordination and utilization within nonprofit agencies, groups, and churches. Call today for more information.

■ The American Heart Association needs volunteers to assist with membership and donor file updating, memorial acknowledgements and general clerical assistance. You can truly be at the "heart of change" by helping this vital agency. Call the Volunteer Center to learn more.

■ The Midland Chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau needs you. Your smiling face, congenial manner and knowledge about Midland is all that is needed to become a member of the Volunteer Host Group. Featured fashion for fall is fur

AP Laserphoto

This sumptuous Fendi sable with jagged edges like a caveman's wrap was part of the Fendi fur fall-winter 1992-93 collection presented in Milan recently.

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Birger Christensen, the Danish manufacturer, deftly illustrated the range of fur designs for next fall with three designer collections presented back to back in its Seventh Avenue showroom.

The show started with venturesome avant-garde styles by Marc Jacobs for Perry Ellis, transferring to furs the same quirky themes he developed in his Ellis sportswear.

Some styles that were translated successfully from fabric to fur were long rectangular stoles with alternating white and black mink stripes, boas in fluffy fox, animal patterns like zebra stripes in sheared beaver, vests reversing from leather to nutria and the ubiquitous jean jacket done in broadtail rather than denim.

With accents like python-pattern boots and skinny pants, shiny jump suits and flowered vests, the furs acquired a contemporary beat, even in traditional mink.

Actually, the mink coats weren't that traditional. Some were printed to resemble leather. Others could be reversed to show their smooth leather or suede side. And an elegantly shaped, lightly fitted mink coat with gold buttons was in searing red. All reinforced Jacobs' position as the season's most successful iconoclast.

A collection sold under the Birger Christensen name and designed by Christina Frycklund in Copenhagen segued easily from fox-trimmed anoraks to those glories of the furriers' trade, chinchilla, broadtail and sable coats.

THE STYLES ran easily from casual to formal, with just enough fashion detailing to avoid looking boring. This is in line with Ms. Frycklund's aim to avoid frightening off women who have something classic in mind and yet offer something special to set off one fur coat from another.

'I love working with furs.'
— Christina Frycklund, designer

One of the few women in the world of fur designers, Ms. Frycklund has been with Birger Christensen for 20 years, having started as an assistant. "I love working with furs," she said. "They are inherently exciting, but you don't want to change their character."

She doesn't mind changing their color, though, and she has achieved a particularly credible gold color in her mink lineup. Her reversible coats, mink on one side and silk on the other, are useful and effective.

The Birger Christensen trilogy ended Hollywood style with Bob Mackie's "movie star" furs, which included nifty little luxuries like a sable jacket casually belted over a 1920's beaded dress, its thigh-high skirt much shorter than the dresses flappers generally wore.

Mackie showed his chinchilla jackets over velvet or jeweled pants, which drove the electrical currents sky-high. But he calmed down the voltage with baseball jackets in sheared mink with leather, reversible parkas in nutria and faille and supple-looking shear-ling coats over long, skinny knit dresses.

KARL LAGERFELD, whose furs for Fendi make him virtually unchallenged as the world's leading fur designer, showed another collection for Maximilian that affirmed his reputation for irreverence and imagination. In top position is a white sheared beaver coat inlaid with colorful antique chairs.

Yes, chairs. Long ago he used chairs as a motif when he designed the Chloe dress collection in Paris. More recently he has used them in jewelry. But nowhere have they been more effective than imbedded in living color in a fur coat. In addition to white, the chairs also decorate black beaver.

These and other lively designs — including hooded parkas in fox the color of blueberries or purple grapes — were shown with long, skinny, transparent black skirts made of stretch wool, and platform pumps. They also reaffirmed the case for long skirts.

Louis Dell'Olio of Anne Klein translated his basic American sportswear ideas into fur for Goldin-Feldman, including fur vests with leather jackets, and linings that button in and out of coats in almost any material. Shearling coats are a specialty, and the designer maintains that styles like a very long shearling coat in black will go anywhere a standard mink can be worn.

Christie Brothers, an old-line furrier, offers sporty styles like duffel coats in mink and reversible coats with rain-resistant silk shells, in addition to standard luxury furs. Broadtail with leather is one intriguing reversible combination; electric blue and violet are fresh colors in mink.

The Giorgio Sant'Angelo collection for Robert Sidney is a bit over the edge; what with fur chaps made of curly Mongolian lamb and bikinis made of white mink or gray Persian lamb. The styles are "advance gear for the younger woman," said Martin Price, who designs them, and he wasn't off the mark.

But there were also more respectable chinchilla sweat shirts and short zippered jackets of sheared mink with broadtail inserts and wild mink collars that wouldn't cause eyes to boggle quite so much.

Furriers see encouraging signs

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

Like their counterparts in the ready-to-wear business, New York's furriers did not stage big fashion shows during the recent fall openings. The recession has taken its toll on all areas of fashion, particularly the luxury level. But fur manufacturers sounded anything but discouraged.

"Business has been coming back sensationally," said Stanley Schulman, the president of Alixandre Furs, which makes Valentino and Calvin Klein furs. "One reason is that store inventories have bottomed out, just as people with money are beginning to spend again. Those of us remaining in business are doing better."

Schulman said store orders were up for the first time in three years, despite the fact that many retailers have phased out their fur departments, including Lord & Taylor, I. Magnin in Chicago and Frederick & Nelson in Seattle.

Some furriers, including Mohl, which makes Arnold Scaasi's designs, and Wagner, which makes Oscar de la Renta's, have found greater acceptance in international markets, like Japan, Switzerland and Italy, where the spray-paint can is not an everyday threat.

The language used in some of our "best" movies and some TV shows is very low-down and vulgar. I do not know a single person who uses such filthy language.

Abby, maybe I am out of step. Would you please take a poll to find out if I am alone in my complaint? I am not talking about "hell" and "damn." I mean the words beginning with "s" and "f." Thank you. — AN AVERAGE 33-YEAR-OLD FEMALE

DEAR AVERAGE: Count me as one for your side. OK, readers ... postcards only, please. Take note of this special address: P.O. Box 539, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DEAR ABBY: During several recent trips to my brother's home, I have witnessed some behavior that I believe to be sexual abuse. I am writing to you because I believe his behavior to be subtle enough to be ignored as abusive, and I am sure my brother would not participate in it if he were made aware of it.

He has ignored my warnings and thinks I am being extreme. The behaviors are:

1. Calling his 4-year-old daughter his "lover" while holding her and kissing her.

2. Taking baths with her and skinny-dipping with her in a small, secluded backyard pool.

My psychologist friend tells me that this kind of behavior with children 2 years old or older constitutes sexual child abuse. Please respond quickly. Maybe he will pay more attention to you. His wife is blind to all of this. — WORRIED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR WORRIED: While your brother may not be guilty of sexual abuse (standards vary from family to family), he is guilty of inappropriate behavior.

He and his wife should consult a professional to discuss what the behavior you mentioned means TO HIM — and, if it is indeed innocent behavior, he needs to learn more appropriate ways of expressing affection for his daughter.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my 90s and have been telling my friends that I am slowing down. The other day, I had a note from a retired dean of a college. He wrote, "I am 77, and I have slowed up."

I asked my nephew which expression was correct, "slowing up" or "slowing down," and he said, "That's a good question." (No answer.)

Then I asked a Sunday school teacher. He said, "Write to Dear Abby. I'll bet she will have the answer for you, and I will be waiting to read her answer in the newspaper."

So, Dear Abby, which is correct: "slowing down" or "slowing up"? — A LITTLE OLD LADY IN OTTUMWA, IOWA

DEAR LADY: Since "slowing up" and "slowing down" mean the same thing, they are both correct.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very low-paying job. It is unskilled labor, and I hate it when somebody asks, "Where do you work?" Or, "What kind of work do you do?"

It is very painful for me to answer that question. I have tried saying, "I do not like my job and I'd rather not discuss it." But for some reason when I say that, people get annoyed, and it is usually the end of the conversation.

Abby, I do not like to lie, but when I tell the truth, it puts people off. They usually say, "You ought to be glad you're not on welfare," or, "What do you care, as long as it's honest?"

Abby, am I so wrong to want some privacy about what I do until I find a better job? — ASHAMED IN LEBANON, ORE.

DEAR ASHAMED: You are not wrong; you have every right not to discuss your job if it makes you uncomfortable.

When asked where you work or what kind of work you do, reply, "I am not at liberty to talk about it," or, "I'm sorry, but I cannot discuss my position." (Some may suspect that you work for the CIA or the FBI.)

Perhaps you should look into training to upgrade your job skills — many state employment offices offer free job skills training. Also, inquire at the career counseling office of your local community college.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Summer tops provide sizzle

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

If you are searching for a summer jacket, you will probably have to settle for a blazer. It's what you put underneath it that supplies the oomph.

Head for the lingerie or bodysuit department of most stores to find tops that are saucy but still enough unlike lingerie to peek out from under a tailored jacket.

Bodysuits with the most cachet have molded, seamed and underwire construction, just like a push-up bra. Tapemeasure's black lycra eyelet-patterned style with a bra-like top has cap sleeves.

It costs around $70 at Bloomingdale's, Macy's and Saks Fifth Avenue. Bloomingdale's also has a black-and-white gingham stretch camisole from the Anne Klein A Line Collection. It is tres Brigitte Bardot, for $155.

Henri Bendel's bra-top cotton-and-lycra bodysuit is printed in a bold black-and-white houndstooth pattern. It is $45. (Bendel's will also soon have this sporty style in a red bandana print.) Bendel's also has a stretch ribbed tank top in black cotton that buttons down the front with good-size pearl ball buttons for $58.

Any one of these tops looks sexy, but quite OK, when the jacket is removed. And later on, when the weather turns really steamy, they will look fine on their own with a pair of pants, or a skirt that is on the long side.

Expert advises softer hair styles

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Beth Minardi, owner of Minardi Minardi Salon, recommends softer hair styles to complement fashion's longer hemlines.

For short hair devotees, she suggests a length just below the ear.

"While short hair will always be a choice for some women," she says, "gone are the days of buzz cuts and shaved napes."

For the long-hairs, try loose curls and waves with lots of body, says Minardi, recipient of the first Clairol Salon Professional Mentor Award. The company-sponsored program matches leading career women with aspiring counterparts.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new alliance could provide the impetus for a relocation or return to school. A summer vacation you spend in your own back yard could unify the family. A child's special needs could mean additional expenses next November. An overdue bonus or promotion comes in handy at year's end. Focus on a very special relationship early in 1993. Marriage is likely by next April. Make the most of your social contacts.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: basketball star Jerry West, singer Gladys Knight, actress Sondra Locke, Olympian Jim Thorpe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Diplomacy and compromise will help you win over difficult clients. Spend time on activities that will boost your self-esteem. You are making steady progress on the romantic front.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can clearly see the path to success, needing only to put your thoughts into words and action. Be a pillar of strength to relatives in distress. They will welcome you with open arms.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Important business details or communications could get lost in the mix today. Delays only compound the confusion. Stay alert! A young person's advice makes good sense.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You continue to exude power and charm. Actively promote a long-range endeavor and events at a distance. Your buying and selling expertise comes in handy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Confidential talks can lead to new financial success or a quality buy. Also, distant or foreign sources may yield special findings. You are in touch with people who share your aims.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If work pressures mount, a serious, steady manner is essential. Refuse to panic. New career or business opportunities surface through your friendships.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone who has both experience and administrative skills would make an ideal associate. Try to win this person over to your side. Those who are intuitive will evaluate a new trend correctly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your originality impresses those in authority. Seize an opportunity to advance a favorite cause. Business negotiations should go unusually well. Play your cards close to your chest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The work scene could be pretty hectic today. Keep to your own space and duties. An opportunity to share your views will arise this evening. Trust your own intuition over friendly advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tap your ESP or meet behind closed doors to find fame and fortune today. You will really wow an audience! In conversations with key personnel, watch a tendency to overstate your case.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your path will be a lot smoother if you do not insist on always getting your own way. Jovial chats bring freedom and fun, and that is your No. 1 priority. Be a team player.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are most impressive today when dealing one-on-one. Light a fire under someone whose enthusiasm has cooled. Tying up some loose ends will help restore domestic harmony.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are bright, intuitive and creative — with a special flair for the dramatic. Many of these youngsters will have an imaginary playmate that they will later write stories about. A love for the arts could lead to a career in design. These Geminis' work or home environment will reflect their fascination with light and shadow. They prefer comfortable, somewhat cluttered surroundings to the minimalist look. An early interest in antiques could become a lifelong passion.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Even the strongest of us can be tempted by the lure of an overtrick. See what happened to South, declarer at five diamonds, on this hand from a team match.

At this vulnerability we would have made a takeout double of one diamond with the West hand. While we might be a point or so light in high cards, the perfect distribution offers a high degree of safety. Note that game in a major depends only on guessing the heart situation. North bounced directly to five diamonds because he didn't want to have the opponents competing in a major suit.

West led the king of spades and East followed with the nine—a suit preference signal for the higher of the remaining side suits, in this case, hearts. Being a good partner, West dutifully shifted to a low heart and declarer saw no harm in letting it ride round to the queen. East's king completed the defensive book, and with clubs distributed the way they were, declarer eventually had to concede a trick in that suit for down one. Unlucky.

We can find no good reason for refusing to believe the defenders' signals. The contract is cold unless West holds four clubs headed by the jack (if East holds club length, the ten can be finessed). In that event, declarer will need to engineer an endplay to bring home the bacon.

Declarer should rise with the ace of hearts at trick two, come to hand with a trump and ruff a spade. Another trump provides the entry for another spade ruff and the king and queen of clubs are cashed.

When East shows out on the second club, declarer simply exits with a heart. If East wins the trick, the defender is forced to yield a ruff-sluff; if West wins, either a ruff-sluff or a club into declarer's tenace nails down the contract.

Turner, Fonda buy New Mexico ranch, plan to raise buffalo

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. — Ted Turner says he and his wife, Jane Fonda, have bought a 300,000-acre ranch west of here.

Turner

"We're really impressed with the area and more impressed with the friendliness of the people we've met," Turner said Tuesday in a statement.

Turner, founder of Cable News Network, also owns baseball's Atlanta Braves, a Montana ranch and plantations in Florida and South Carolina.

Turner has said he wants to raise buffalo in New Mexico.

He angered ranch groups last year when his TBS network aired a program called "The New Range Wars," depicting allegations that cattle are overgrazing the West.

JACKSON, Miss. — Magazine executive Timothy C. Forbes will be asked to join the Tougaloo College board of trustees next fall as the private college embarks on a $25 million fund-raising drive.

The board of the mainly black 122-year-old college is considering asking Forbes when it meets Oct. 9, said board president Robert Jones.

Forbes, 38, son of the late publisher Malcolm Forbes, is president of American Heritage magazine.

Forbes is vice president and director of Forbes Inc., publishers of Forbes magazine.

He is a 1976 alumnus and trustee of Brown University, which has longtime ties to 1,000-student Tougaloo College.

NEW YORK — It's not official yet, but look for Bernadette Peters and Martin Short to star on Broadway next season in a musical version of Neil Simon's "The Goodbye Girl."

Peters

Theatrical Index, a theater trade publication, reports in its current issue that the performers will star in the show that has a book by Simon, music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by David Zippel. Gene Saks will direct.

Peters last appeared on Broadway in "Into the Woods," the 1987 Stephen Sondheim musical. Simon has two plays currently running on Broadway — "Lost in Yonkers" and "Jake's Women."

The movie "Goodbye Girl" starred Richard Dreyfuss and Marsha Mason, Simon's former wife.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Wynonna Judd will perform solo near her home turf for the first time since her mother quit the singing duo last year.

The country star's performance Sunday will wrap up the Summer Lights Festival, which begins tonight.

Wynonna Judd's first song as a solo artist, "She Is His Only Need," was a No. 1 country hit this spring.

Naomi Judd quit performing late last year because of a liver ailment. As the Judds, the mother-daughter duo recorded such songs as "Grandpa" and "Love Can Build a Bridge."

Summer Lights officials project attendance at 200,000. The event was nearly canceled this year because of sagging attendance a year ago.

Other headline performers include the Forester Sisters, Paulette Carlson, Eddy Raven and Bela Fleck and the Flecktones.

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii — Miss America Carolyn Sapp is being criticized for bowing out of an appearance at Konawaena High School in her native Hawaii.

Sapp, a Big Island resident and the Hawaii's first Miss America, was scheduled to speak at the school's June 6 graduation ceremony but had to cancel several appearances in Hawaii and elsewhere because of rehearsals for a movie she's starring in.

Sapp will play herself in a movie about her relationship with Nuu Faaola, a former University of Hawaii and pro football player she has said used to beat her and once tried to throw her out of a moving car.

Konawaena students said they are angry at Sapp's decision and are trying to put the matter behind them. Sapp couldn't be reached for comment. A call to Miss America pageant headquarters Wednesday in Atlantic City, N.J., was not immediately returned.

LOS ANGELES — The Green Hornet came out of retirement to crack down on thieves who were disrupting his new business: radio communications.

Van Williams, who portrayed the comic-book crusader in the 1966 television crime series, roamed the streets for months in a specially equipped van, searching for the illegal users of his two-way radio frequencies.

He found one of them, Richard Chaidez, 29, a movie extra who lives in Hollywood. Chaidez pleaded no contest to theft two weeks ago.

Williams opened his communications company in Santa Monica 10 years ago.

AT WIT'S END

A little padding can go a long, long way

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is taking a week of vacation. The following column originally appeared Dec. 1, 1988.

By Erma Bombeck

It's not as if I don't already have enough lumps on my body to keep track of. Now I've got shoulder pads.

Why did I think that after a couple of seasons they'd go away? Every time I bought a blouse or a dress, the first thing I did was rip out the shoulder pads. The minute I did that, I was punished. The shoulders dropped, making my chest look like I was backing out of a room. The sleeves covered my hands, and the hems dragged on the floor. I couldn't walk into a room where people didn't look at me and ask, "What happened?"

Bombeck

Shoulder pads are designed using the same principle as fun-house mirrors. Make the top of you look wide, and in contrast the bottom of you will look small. This is true, but I always feels as if I'm Scarlett O'Hara wearing the draperies with the rods still in them.

For some strange reason, I never throw the shoulder pads away. They're like those subscription cards that fall out of magazines. I save them and hate myself for not being able to throw them away. When my discarded pads spilled out of two drawers and threatened to take over my bedroom, I finally admitted to myself that they were here to stay.

Now I play a little game called the Shoulder Pad Chase. (Suitable for ages 15-79. One player at a time. Batteries not included.) You are standing around at a party making conversation when you feel your entire left shoulder slump forward. You cast your eyes downward to see a chest that gives new meaning to the phrase "peaks and valleys." You are a victim of a wandering shoulder pad. Your mission is to get it back on the shoulder where it belongs without attracting attention.

There are ways. There's the "Fake Cough," where you throw your head forward, at the same time jerking your left shoulder back, hoping the pad will balance on your shoulder once again.

There's the "Bumping Into the Wall Ploy," where you pass by the corner of a wall to reposition the pad. A riskier way is the "Shock Reaction," where you grab your throat in horror at what is being said, and in a movement that is faster than the speed of light, slip your hand inside your dress and hike the shoulder pad back to its original position. When I see someone staring at my bulges, I usually say lamely, "I retain water."

All of this is reminiscent of the old joke in which a woman used to store two nose tissues in her bra, and one night when she was fishing around and got caught, she said, "Funny, I had two of them when I came here."

Some people have it down to a science. As my husband watched a pro football game the other night, 22 men came out on the field in shoulder pads that would have thrown Donna Karan into shock. The pads never moved! I think they were implants.

Chaps fall just short

Williams' dream unfulfilled in 5-4 loss to Anderson

Staff report

CORPUS CHRISTI — Midland College tennis coach Joe Williams' goal of bringing home national junior college championships in both men's and women's tennis in the same year fell just shy Wednesday, as the Chaps fell to Anderson College, 5-4, in the finals of the NJCAA men's tournament in Corpus Christi.

The loss was the last team match ever for MC, as the school voted to disband the sport earlier this spring.

"We played well, and had our chances," Williams said. "We just got beat by a better team.

"I think if we would've won this match, it would've probably been the best team effort we'd ever had. It all fell in line with strategy and everything else. We won where we were supposed to win, and lost where we were supposed to lose."

Except at No. 3 doubles. MC's Robin van Beveran and Gene Highfield lost in straight sets to Anderson's Inigo Unciti and Alissandro Teixeira, 7-6, 6-4. Van Beveran-Highfield were up 5-3 in the first-set tiebreaker with only two points needed to win the set. The MC doubles team also went up on service breaks twice in the second set before losing the match with a 6-4 second-set defeat.

In another upset, David Draper and Toby Curtis, the No. 1 junior college doubles team in the country, fell to Anderson's No. 1 team of Alex Lindholm-Greg Muller, 7-5, 6-3.

Ironically, Muller, a former MC player in 1990-91, not only defeated the Chaps in his No. 1 doubles spot, but also at No. 2 singles, where he upended Cyril Buscaglione, 7-5, 6-4.

All tolled, the Chaps' top three singles and No. 1 and No. 3 doubles teams fell. Draper, at No. 1 singles, fell to Lindholm, 7-5, 6-4.

"I'm sure nerves had a little to do with it," Williams said. "That and the pressure of the situation.

Ferry fined

Ferry

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Ferry of the Cleveland Cavaliers was fined $5,000 for throwing two punches at Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls during Game 4 of the Eastern Conference final playoff series.

The incident occurred with 10:05 remaining in the second quarter of Cleveland's 99-85 victory Monday. Afterward, Ferry was ejected.

7th game Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) — If the Cleveland Cavaliers and Chicago Bulls need a seventh game to decide their NBA Eastern Conference final, it will be played Sunday night at Chicago.

The NBA said Wednesday the game would begin at 5:30 p.m. CDT.

Chicago took a 3-2 lead over Cleveland after a win Wednesday night (see story this page).

McEnroe bad again

PARIS (AP) — John McEnroe could be in trouble again for swearing on the court.

McEnroe reportedly shouted obscenities at courtside photographers Tuesday during his first-round loss to Nicklas Kulti of Sweden. The remarks were picked up by courtside microphones and heard over European television broadcasts.

Stefan Fransson, a tournament supervisor, said Wednesday that officials were listening to tapes of the match and interviewing linesmen to determine whether McEnroe had violated verbal abuse rules.

A decision was expected Thursday.

McEnroe was fined $10,000 at Wimbledon last year after officials examined television tapes of his outburst against a linesman.

Stich sticks it to Connors

Jimmy Connors returns a serve during his loss to Germany's Michael Stich.

■ With the elimination of Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe, France has lost its crowd favorites.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — Jimmy Connors went "beyond the wall" and slipped into a "dark hole" of exhaustion. He never climbed out.

For the second year in a row, Connors ran out of gas in a five-set match in the French Open.

Last year, Connors quit in the fifth set against Michael Chang when he could barely move. On Wednesday, the 39-year-old Connors went the distance against Wimbledon champion Michael Stich but had nothing left in the last two sets and lost 7-5, 3-6, 6-7 (7-4), 6-1, 6-2.

With John McEnroe eliminated in the first round Tuesday, the tournament has quickly lost its two sentimental favorites.

French Open

Connors lived up to his billing in the first three sets, delighting the center court crowd with his slashing strokes, his theatrical stoking and fist-pumping, and his banter with friends and spectators.

Wednesday was traditional Kids Day at Roland Garros, and fans young enough to be Connors' children were continuously chanting "Jeem-eee! Jeem-eee!"

But after he won the third set tiebreaker, it was clear Connors was ailing. He repeatedly stretched his back and right shoulder, and his trainer, Bernard Dellaly, twice came onto the court to provide treatment.

Connors gave away the fourth set, not even bothering to run after shots.

"Basically I was tired," he said. "After winning the third set, I thought if I let the fourth set go I could get a little bit of energy and recuperate a little bit. But my energy level didn't come back where I'd like it. Why? Probably because I'm 40 years old.

Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario

"I was going to try to stay out there and play. But there is a point where you go beyond the wall, and today was my first trip beyond the wall.

"You just push yourself and drain every bit of energy out of you and it's a dark hole. I made my first excursion into a dark hole today and it was scary. It wasn't a pretty sight."

Connors came out stronger at the start of the fifth set, breaking Stich in the first game with a forehand passing shot. But he couldn't keep it going.

Serving at 2-5, Connors pointed at the approaching clouds and implored them for rain.

"When I saw the clouds moving in, I was praying for rain," he said. "But obviously they didn't understand my French."

Finally, Stich ended the match with an overhead. Just as they had done for McEnroe on Tuesday, the spectators gave Connors a standing ovation as he walked off.

"To play like that, to have that kind of reaction from the people in the stands, that's pretty nice," Connors said.

Bulls win; take 3-2 lead

N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — By protecting their homecourt, the Chicago Bulls moved closer to reaching the National Basketball Association finals for the second straight year.

Chicago took a 3-2 lead in the four-of-seven-game Eastern Conference championship series, defeating the Cleveland Cavaliers on Wednesday night, 112-89, at Chicago Stadium.

The Bulls can end the series by winning Game 6, Friday night in Chicago.

Midland 10-runs Jackson

■ The Midland Angels had to wait out two rain delays and even an interruption caused by lightning before making official their 14-4 win over the Generals.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Midland Angel manager Don Long may want to cancel that call to California's roving batting instructor.

That's because the Angels broke out of their six-game slump in a big way Wednesday at Angels Stadium.

After posting 16 scoreless innings in losing both doubleheader games Tuesday against Arkansas, Midland opened its five-game series against Jackson with a 14-4 rout of the Generals in a game that saw 35 minutes in delays for a power outage and rain.

The Angels posted 18 hits, their second best bat production of the season next to a 21-run, 26-hit outing May 10 against Wichita. While no home runs were hit, Midland amassed eight doubles in the game, as Palm Springs newcomer Dan Rumsey and J.R. Phillips both hit a pair.

In addition, catcher Mick Billmeyer earned three of his four RBI on a bases-loaded two-bagger in the fourth inning to put the Angels on top 11-3. Posting three-hit nights were Phillips, who was 3-for-5 with two RBI, and centerfielder Jim Edmonds (3-for-4, one RBI and a double).

But the most relieved Midland player could have been starting pitcher Paul Swingle. After seeing rain erase a dismal 10-earned run, two-inning outing last Friday against Arkansas, Swingle (3-4) put together a solid start to pick up the win.

He was perfect through the first three innings, and left the game after six innings having given up three earned runs. Swingle was followed by a parade of Angel pitchers, who have had trouble getting their innings because of a day off

Glavine first seven-game winner in bigs

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Glavine became the National League's first seven-game winner and Lonnie Smith, starting his first game since April 22, drove in two runs to help the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-3 on Wednesday night.

Smith, who entered the game batting .091 (3 for 33), had an RBI double in the fifth inning and a game-tying sacrifice fly in a three-run seventh.

Glavine (7-3) gave up six hits and three runs, two earned, walked two and struck out four in seven innings as the Braves won for only the fourth time in 11 games. Juan Berenguer pitched the last two innings.

Glavine, who had lost his two previous starts, also singled off loser Cliff Brantley (2-3) to start the seventh-inning rally, which overcame a 3-2 deficit.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Todd Benzinger hit a third-inning grand slam to back knuckleballer Tom Candiotti's four-hitter over eight innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Candiotti (5-3) kept the Cardinals off-balance, allowing only four singles, just one after the second inning. He struck out six and walked four. Roger McDowell pitched the ninth.

Expos 8, Astros 5

MONTREAL — Moises Alou hit a three-run homer in the first inning, his first home run in the majors, and the Montreal Expos beat the Houston Astros in a game marred by a bench-clearing incident.

After Xavier Hernandez hit Tim Wallach with a pitch in the fifth inning, Hernandez came close with a pitch to Montreal's Dennis Martinez, who then walked about 10 feet toward the mound. Martinez was intercepted by catcher Ed Taubensee, and both benches emptied. Although players pushed, no punches were thrown and no one was ejected.

Martinez (5-4) won his fourth consecutive game, allowing all five runs and seven hits in five-plus innings. John Wettleland got three outs for his eighth save.

Mark Portugal (4-2) gave up four runs and seven hits in four innings.

Alou, one of two major leaguers on a team managed by his father, homered after Marquis Grissom singled and Delino DeShields walked. The Expos added two more runs in the first on a throwing error by left fielder Pete Incaviglia and a single by Bret Barberie.

NL Roundup

Giants 6, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — John Burkett (5-1) allowed six hits and one run in six innings as he improved his record against the Cubs to 4-0 lifetime. He has allowed just one run in 20 innings.

Greg Maddux (4-5) lost his fourth consecutive decision and for the fifth time in his last six, giving up two runs and four hits in seven innings.

Willie McGee, who had three hits, put the Giants ahead with an RBI double in third, but Andre Dawson's run-scoring single tied it in the fourth.

Padres 8, Pirates 7

SAN DIEGO — Darrin Jackson doubled in the tying run with one out in the bottom of the ninth and pinch-hitter Craig Shipley singled with the bases loaded to give the San Diego Padres a victory over the slumping Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates lost their fifth straight game and their 11th in their last 12, finishing 1-8 on the West Coast.

Reds 1, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Tim Belcher allowed three hits in 8 1-3 innings to lead the Cincinnati Reds over New York, the Mets' third straight shutout loss at home.

Darnell Coles' two-out single in the seventh inning scored Barry Larkin, who doubled off Sid Fernandez (3-5) with one out and went to third on Chris Sabo's groundout, with the game's only run. Coles battled Fernandez for 10 pitches before lining the 11th to left field to give the Reds their fourth straight victory, three by shutout.

Rangers pull into first-place tie

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan failed to get a win again, but Texas rallied to tie the score in the ninth inning and beat Chicago 4-3 in the 11th Wednesday night on Kevin Reimer's run-scoring double.

The Rangers' fifth straight victory moved them into a tie with Oakland in the AL West.

Reimer's game-winning hit came after Donn Pall (2-1) had walked Juan Gonzalez with two outs in the 11th.

Floyd Bannister (1-0) pitched three innings of one-hit relief for his first major league victory since 1989.

Ryan has gone 52 days without a victory, the longest span in his 26-year career at the start of a season without a win. It's Ryan's second longest winless streak since he went 66 days without a victory in 1987 with the Houston Astros.

Steve Sax had a two-run single in the sixth off Ryan and Tim Raines hit a solo homer in the eighth off reliever Edwin Nunez to give the White Sox a 3-1 lead.

Ryan, who has 314 victories, struck out eight and walked none in his seventh start of the season. He made 116 pitches, 86 for strikes.

Alex Fernandez scattered five hits and one run in 7 2-3 innings before Scott Radinsky relieved.

Radinsky walked Ruben Sierra leading off the ninth and Gonzalez then doubled against Bobby Thigpen. Reimer hit a sacrifice fly with Gonzalez moving to third. Ivan Rodriguez then tied the score with another sacrifice fly.

Chicago broke a scoreless tie in the sixth. Craig Grebeck singled and moved to third on a double by Raines. Sax then singled over second to knock in two runs.

The Rangers came back in their half of the inning on a two-out homer by Gonzalez, his sixth. The homer traveled 431 feet, longest in Arlington Stadium this year by a Ranger.

Indians 4, Athletics 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Paul Sorrento homered twice off Dave Stewart and Albert Belle also homered off the four-time 20-game winner as the Cleveland Indians beat the Oakland Athletics for a three-game sweep.

Sorrento' two-run homer in the fifth tied the score at 2-all, an opposite-field drive that curled just inside the left-field foul pole.

Belle led off the seventh with his ninth homer of the season and fifth in five games, giving the Indians a 3-2 lead. Sorrento hit his sixth home run of the season one out later.

Scott Scudder (3-5), who hasn't pitched a complete game in 50 big league starts, allowed both runs and eight hits in 8 1-3 innings before Steve Olin finished for his ninth save.

Mariners 7, Orioles 1

SEATTLE — Erik Hanson stopped his six-game losing streak, and Ken Griffey Jr. and Edgar Martinez homered as the Seattle Mariners beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Hanson (2-7) won for the first time since April 12 and improved his record against Baltimore to 5-1. He allowed one run and four hits in 6 1-3 innings, struck out six and walked three.

Russ Swan allowed an RBI groundout to Billy Ripken after relieving Swan in the the seventh, and Jeff Nelson finished the five-hitter as the Mariners won for the third time in four games.

Tigers 11, Royals 2

DETROIT — Homers by Lou Whitaker and Mark Carreon keyed a five-run first inning as the Detroit Tigers crushed Kansas City, handing the Royals their fifth consecutive defeat.

Whitaker's sixth homer was a two-run shot and Carreon's came with two runners on base. Whitaker drove in two more runs with a single as the Tigers scored six more in the fifth, sending 11 batters to the plate.

Cecil Fielder had three doubles, but just one RBI. Tony Phillips had two doubles and two RBIs.

Kevin McReynolds hit his sixth homer, in the Royals' sixth, with Gregg Jefferies aboard.

Mike Boddicker (0-3), making only his third start of the season for Kansas City, was pounded for 10 runs on nine hits and five walks in four-plus innings. He gave up five of the runs in the fifth without retiring anyone.

Detroit's Scott Aldred (2-4) allowed two runs on six hits in six innings. Both Aldred's wins have come against the Royals, now 7-18 on the road.

Philips started the first with a double and Whitaker followed

Brewers 8, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Paul Molitor and Greg Vaughn hit home runs as Milwaukee beat slumping Toronto in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing brawl in the fourth inning and two player ejections.

The brawl started when Brewers starter Jaime Navarro (4-4) hit Joe Carter with a pitch just above the right elbow. After being struck, Carter fell to the ground, stood up a few seconds later and charged the mound.

The Blue Jays, trailing 5-0, rushed the field and the Brewers then ran out of their dugout. Some punches were thrown and after about eight minutes of pushing and shoving, both benches retreated.

Twins 5, Yankees 1

MINNEAPOLIS — John Smiley pitched his best all-around game since Minnesota acquired him in spring training, scattering seven hits over eight-plus innings in a victory over the New York Yankees. It was the fourth win in five starts for Smiley, who went 20-8 with Pittsburgh last season.

Melido Perez allowed six hits and six walks in seven innings, dropping his career record against Minnesota to 2-7.

Minnesota, which has won 12 of 16, stopped the the Yankees' three-game winning streak. Rick Aguilera pitched a scoreless ninth.

MC: Individual play begins today

(From 1C)

Yeah, it's a tough loss, expecially after coming so close (to winning). But the guys gave 100 percent, and tried as hard as they could."

In their 17 trips to the NJCAA tennis tournament, the Chaps brought home one outright championship (1988-89), one tri-championship ('77-'78), two second place finishes ('76-'77, '91-'92), three third-places ('75-'76, '86-'87, '90-'91), three fourth-places ('84-'85, '87-'88, '89-'90) and two fifth-places ('78-'79, '85-'86).

In all, the MC men had 12 Top 5 finishes in 17 tournaments.

The MC men begin play in the individually seeded tournament today at 8:30 a.m. in Corpus Christi.

Martin no longer worried about title

Associated Press

CWS

OMAHA, Neb. — Florida State baseball coach Mike Martin has been to the College World Series six times and never won it all.

This year the Seminoles are the No. 5 seed in the eight-team series for the NCAA Division I baseball title that begins Friday.

"I used to be literally obsessed with winning it," Martin said.

Now, he said, "I look at it as you have a job to do and you do the best you can do, then turn it over to the Lord. We've always done everything we could do."

Martin said he is no longer overwhelmed with desire to win the CWS, "although that would be nice, don't get me wrong."

But he said he is happy to have teams good enough to get into the series.

"The more times you play golf, the more times you have a chance to make birdie," he said. "The more times we get to Omaha, the more chances we have to win one. That's the way I'm thinking about it."

Friday's Bracket One has No. 1 Miami (53-8) against No. 8 California (35-26) at 3:06 p.m. CDT and No. 4 Fullerton State (42-15) against No. 5 Florida State (48-19) at 6:36 p.m.

No. 2 Wichita State (56-9) faces No. 7 Pepperdine (44-11-1) at 12:06 p.m. Saturday in Bracket Two, and Oklahoma (42-22) plays at 6:36 p.m. against third-seeded Texas (46-15)

Martin's Florida State team entered the 1991 CWS as the No. 1 seed but went home after two early losses.

"To me that's not adversity," he said. "You just get beat. I think the media played it up because we were the No. 1 seed and we lost two straight.

"I can't say getting beat two in a row and going home was real adversity," he said. "There are 250 other teams out there that would like that kind of problem."

Martin brings a 48-19 team to Omaha this season, but he said it has gone through more tests than any of his previous Seminole ballclubs.

"We lost four in a row twice," Martin said. "We lost five of six to Clemson. We lost five in a row to Miami before we beat them in the sixth game with a diving catch with two out in the ninth. That was a thing of beauty.

"This ballclub is just a bunch of fighters. People probably use that all the time but this team has been through more adversity than any Florida State team I can remember."

Will that convert to Florida State's first national title?

Martin won't go that far.

"This is a reward," he said of the CWS berth. "This is not work. This is fun. This is a way to display your talents to a great bunch of people in Omaha. We're coming to have a good time."

CWS Capsules

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Capsules of the eight 1992 College World Series qualifiers:

CALIFORNIA (35-26)

Coach Bob Milano's Golden Bears got hot at the right time. Losers of five straight and seven of its last eight, Cal then swept its last four East Regional games at Gainesville, Fla. Pitcher-first baseman Jon Zuber (6-3) shut down Florida 4-3 in the final to earn the school's fifth World Series trip. Zuber, batting .360, also drove in the game-winner in the 10th inning. Cal won the national title in 1947 and 1957. Troy Penix adds a .370 average and team-leading 76 RBIs, while Chris Clapinski (.374) and Matt Luke (.368) add offensive punch. Team batting average is .310 but ERA is 5.60.

FLORIDA STATE (48-19)

The Seminoles lasted just two games in the '91 Series, but coach Mike Martin's pitching staff is among the nation's best with a team ERA of 2.92. Chris Roberts (8-3) has a 2.20 ERA, Tim Davis (8-4) 2.48 and Roger Bailey (15-4) 3.02. Shortstop Linke Jarrett is batting .339 on a team that averages .305. John Cook, one of three catchers, has a .363 average in 91 at-bats. Roberts, who also plays the outfield, is the top RBI man with 59. He also has 12 home runs. It will be the Seminoles' 12th CWS appearance. And they're still looking for their first championship.

FULLERTON STATE (42-15)

Coach Augie Garrido is back with the Titans, who won the titles in 1979 and 1984. He left for Illinois and returned this season. Phil Nevin leads a .325 hitting team with his .390 average, 20 homers and 75 RBIs. Chris Powell and Jeremy Carr also average .380 or better. James Popoff (12-2) and Dan Naulty (11-3) lead a pitching staff that has a team ERA of 3.41. It is the seventh trip to Omaha for Fullerton, the last in 1990.

MIAMI (53-8)

In coach Ron Fraser's final season, he's hoping his top-ranked Hurricanes can win one more championship. They won in 1982 and 1985. Strong pitching helps the Hurricanes, with Gus Gandarillas (7-1) leading the way with a 1.83 ERA. Jeff Alkire (12-2) is among six pitchers with ERAs under 2.50. Team ERA is 2.83. Juan Llanes is the top hitter with a .331 average. Luis Hernandez hits .326, while Charles Johnson is at .320 with a team-leading 12 homers and 55 RBIs. Team batting average is .300.

OKLAHOMA (42-22)

Coach Larry Cochell brings his third school to the CWS — a record. He previously brought Oral Roberts (1978) and Fullerton State teams (1988, 1990) to Omaha. The Sooners have been to six previous nationals, including a title trip in 1951, but haven't been to Omaha since 1976. Brian Eldridge hits .391 and Scott Marr .351 to lead the team. Eldridge also has 23 homers and 77 RBIs. Casey Mendenhall (11-1) is the only pitcher with double-figure wins. Team ERA is 4.67 but gets help from a top-rated defense.

PEPPERDINE (44-11-1)

Coach Andy Lopez, making his first trip to the CWS, has onw of the more balanced teams. Team batting average is .306 and ERA is 3.20. Kevin Dell'Amico is the Waves top hitter at .367. Dan Melendez hits .352 and is one of two Waves with 10 homers. Catcher Scott Vollmer leads in RBI department with 51. Patrick Aherne is 13-2, while Steve Montgomery (9-2) has seven saves and a 1.72 ERA with 89 strikeouts in 73 1-3 innings.

TEXAS (46-15)

Coach Cliff Gustafson breaks the tournament appearance record he shared with Southern Cal's Rod Dedeaux (15) when he steps on the field for his opening game Saturday. Texas extends it record CWS showing total to 26 but the last trip to Omaha was 1989. Outfielder Calvin Murphy (.356) and pitcher-DH Brooks Kieschnick (.341) are best hitters on a team that averages .310. Chris Abbe leads team with 15 homers. Scott Harrison (11-2) and Kieschnick (10-2) are the top pitches on a staff with a 3.53 ERA.

WICHITA STATE (56-9)

The Shockers are making a fifth trip to Omaha, with a national title in 1989, seconds in 1982 and 1991, and third in 1988. One of nation's top-ranked teams all season, Gene Stephenson's team hits .328, averages a nation-leading 9.95 runs and has team ERA of 2.60. Scott McCloughan (.394) and Todd Dreifort (.382) are the top hitters, with Jason White adding 15 homers.

Blackhawks to 'lean on' Mario

Associated Press

Stanley Cup

PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux will be the prime target for the Chicago Blackhawks in Game 2 of the Stanley Cup finals on Thursday night.

Lemieux

"We gave him too much room to operate (in the opener Tuesday night) and we have to lean on Mario a little more," Coach Mike Keenan said.

Keenan was disappointed in the defensive job the Blackhawks did on the Penguins — especially Lemieux — in Tuesday night's 5-4 loss.

"We gave him 200 feet of open ice," Keenan said at a news conference on Wednesday. "No one touched him."

Keenan specifically referred to an end-to-end rush late in the second period when Lemieux came down the right side with Kevin Stevens and scored on a bad-angle shot from behind the goal line.

"We just gave Lemieux a free ride on that one," Keenan said.

Lemieux scored two goals, including the game-winner with 13 seconds remaining. Once again, he was left in open ice. Nobody had picked him up.

"That was Steve's job and he didn't do it," Keenan said, referring to forward Steve Larmer.

It was one of many mistakes the Blackhawks made in the opening game, according to Keenan.

He singled out, among others, goaltender Ed Belfour and Jeremy Roenick for playing poorly.

"A lot of guys didn't play well," Keenan said. "We'll just have to see how they respond tomorrow night."

But part of the Blackhawks' mission will be to contain the Penguins' higher-profile players, such as Lemieux and Jaromir Jagr.

Those two were especially tough on the Blackhawks in the first game. Jagr scored the tying goal on a highlight-film move with 4:55 left.

"We let a hockey game get away from us," Keenan said. "It was inexcusable."

Tuesday night's loss was the first for the Blackhawks since April 22.

Expectant dad Daly may throw down clubs

Associated Press

POTOMAC, Md. — With his wife expected to give birth any day, John Daly doesn't know whether he'll be spending this weekend driving off the tee or driving to the hospital.

The baby is due Friday, the second day of the Kemper Open. If Daly is on the course at the time, he might throw down his clubs and head for the hospital. Then again, he could play all 18 holes and join his wife, Bettye, afterward.

"I've got permission from Bettye — I can still play if it happens while I'm on the golf course," Daly said. "It depends. I'll just have to wait and see how I'm doing."

Ben Brundred, general chairman of the Kemper, hopes Bettye can hold off until Sunday night. Because only one of the top 10 money winners for 1992 (No. 5 Mark O'Meara) is on hand at the 7,005-yard TPC at Avenel course, Daly is one of the biggest names at the $1.1 million tournament.

So what if he's currently ranked a ho-hum No. 88 on the money list? The long-driving Daly has attracted huge galleries ever since his storybook victory in the 1991 PGA Championship.

"We're just hoping he'll be here the entire week," Brundred said.

And Daly hopes to be in the tournament past Friday, Bettye's condition notwithstanding. After being named 1991 PGA rookie of the year by his peers, Daly has missed the cut in three of 12 events this year and has not finished better than a tie for eighth, in the LA Open.

Now Daly is set to become a Daddy. Tests show the baby will be a girl, and the couple have already picked a name: Shaynah Hale Daly. Now the only question is when the stork will come calling.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil futures retreated Wednesday, but they managed to hold onto most of the big gains made a day earlier on indications that Saudi Arabia wants higher prices.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $21.92 per barrel, down 8 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

During the uncertain session, WTI traded as high as $22.21 per barrel and as low as $21.80 on the July delivery contracts.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $1.590 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 4.0 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in July settled at $19.82 per barrel, down 8 cents.

The seminar is eligible for 2 CPE credits and 1.75 CLE credits.

There is a $25 fee and information is available by calling 683-1516.

Airfare war

NEW YORK — American Airlines slashed its lowest fares in half a day after Northwest Airlines created a dilemma for American with a sale that lets an adult and a child fly for the price of one ticket.

American's chief rivals, Delta Air Lines and United Airlines, said later Wednesday they would match the discounts, although the cheaper fares are expected to cost the airlines a bundle of money. USAir also matched American's plan.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose broadly in active trading on world currency markets Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 129.78 Japanese yen from 129.15 yen on Tuesday.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — The stock market staged a small upswing Wednesday, recovering from its slide in the previous session as traders reappraised the outlook for oil prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 22.56 points Tuesday, rose 6.23 points to 3,370.44.

Oil prices likely to go back down

■ Chairman of Ashland Oil Co. tells members of PBPA that Iraq and Kuwait's re-entry into market will bring prices back to $20 range.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Despite this week's rise in oil prices caused by Saudi Arabia's stated commitment to higher prices, John Hall, chairman of Ashland Oil Co., said it is likely to be short-lived.

Speaking to members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Wednesday, Hall said that while the Saudi move may temporarily increase oil prices, the reentry of Kuwait and Iraq into the world market would bring oil prices back into the $20 range where they will remain for the next several years.

He also noted that gasoline demand would grow only 1 percent per year, perhaps contributing to the $20 price range.

Hall

Even though lower oil prices are predicted for the next several years, Hall said he hoped independents would not give up on the United States, but would continue to explore the many good prospects that are still available.

Hall had harsh words for government actions that he said were taking a toll on the oil industry. "It is difficult for me to understand, given the high dependence on foreign oil, why our government will not provide any assistance to the producing oil industry."

He noted that present policy was only accelerating U.S. dependence on foreign oil and called upon the government to improve access to new potential drilling areas; provide relief from the Alternative Minimum Tax and offer more reasonable environmental laws.

He said it was easy to see why the major oil companies were restructuring and taking their exploration efforts overseas. "Access to good prospects is being denied oil companies and stricter environmental rules are making it more difficult to continue to operate stripper wells."

Hall noted that the refining industry too, had been faced with environmental regulations that had been taken to the extreme. He said Ashland would have to spend about $300 million just to meet new requirements for low sulphur diesel fuel. "We are not certain yet, what it is going to cost to produce reformulated gasoline, because we haven't been given the final rules."

Ranked at 52 among the Fortune 500 companies, Ashland is the 13th largest oil company in the United States with refining capacity of 350,000 barrels daily. The company was formed in 1924, when founder Paul G. Blazer purchased a small refinery on the banks of the Big Sandy River which divides Kentucky and West Virginia.

In 1982 Ashland purchased Scurlock Corp. and last year purchased Permian Corp. merging the two as Scurlock Permian. "Today," said Hall, "Scurlock Permian handles approximately 450,000 barrels daily."

Hall told the gathering of oilmen and guests that Ashland was proud of its position in the Permian Basin and was prepared to invest in new projects to improve its service.

Finishing touches

Artists, including Keith McClackland, apply finishing touches to a hand-painted mural that graces the lobby of the landmark Stouffer Standford Court Hotel in San Francisco. The mural, 6 feet high and 120 feet long, depicts the city's history and cultural diversity.

Three local companies among firms with high accident rates

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Three Midland companies and 19 Odessa-based firms are among 776 Texas employers with high job-related accident and illness rates, the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission reported Wednesday.

Several companies around the state, however, were highly critical about the accuracy of the list, which is based on a formula established by an insurance reform bill the Legislature enacted last year.

The bill authorized the Texas Department of Insurance and the workers' compensation commission to identify and work with companies that have high accident rates.

Companies on the list must contract with a certified safety consultant or the workers' compensation commission to put a comprehensive accident prevention plan into effect.

Companies can be fined as much as $5,000 a day if they fail to hire a safety consultant within 30 days of notification or implement a safety plan within 90 days.

All the companies on the "rejected risk" list already receive workers' compensation insurance coverage through the state's high-risk pool, the Workers' Compensation Insurance Facility.

Midland companies on the list were Bill Smith's Pumping Unit Service Inc.; H.T. Ardinger & Son Co. Inc.; and Woodruff Drywall Systems Inc.

Odessa companies listed were: AAA Welding & Engine Co. Inc., Basin Well Service of Odessa Inc.; Bates Well Service Inc.; Burnsco Inc.; Diamond B Lease Work; Dixie Electric Inc.; DPM Engineering & Testing Inc.; E.E. Hensley & Son Inc.; Insulation Specialists Inc.; J's Service Inc.; Jay's Power Tong Rental Inc.; Lonnie Musick Construction Co. Inc.; MSA Industries, Inc.; Penatek Industries Inc.; Quality Tank Sales & Service Inc.; Safety International Inc.; Saulsbury Electric Co. Inc.; Tripp Construction Inc.; and Western Coating Co. Inc.

Orders up for 'big ticket' items

WASHINGTON (AP) — New orders for "big ticket" factory goods rose in April for a fourth straight month, the longest streak in five years, the government said Wednesday.

Economists noted that last month's 1.4 percent gain was heavily influenced by military orders but said nonetheless that the economy is still looking slightly less feeble than previously believed.

The National Association of Business Economists said Wednesday that consumer and business demand for durable goods such as autos would support economic growth of 2 percent this year.

That represented a half-point upward revision from their forecast of three months ago. Their projection for 1993 remained at 3 percent growth.

Even more significantly, the survey of 44 professional forecasters rated the chances that the recovery could falter, as a similar rebound did last year, at only one in five.

Still, the NABE forecast served to underscore the general view that this recovery will be one of the weakest on record. In the two years following the 1981-82 recession, the economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, grew at rates of 3.9 percent and 6.2 percent.

The April advance in durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, followed gains of 2.3 percent in March, 0.2 percent in February and 2.3 percent in January.

Durable goods, products ranging from autos to battleships, had not posted so many successive gains since rising for six months from February through July, 1987.

But economists noted that most of April's strength came from a huge 21.6 percent surge in demand for military hardware. Demand for civilian goods edged up 0.2 percent.

President Bush, at a Republican fundraising dinner in Atlanta, said Wednesday night he was heartened by signs the economy was picking up.

"It is moving stronger, and the new feeling of confidence ... I think, send a wonderful signal to all of America," he said. "We're beginning to see things changing after a long, dreary period of recession and economic gloom."

Lawrence Hunter, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, called the overall April increase "yet another sign of a weak recovery."

He said that in a normal recovery orders for manufactured goods normally post monthly increases topping 3 percent. He said he was also concerned that the backlog of unfilled orders dropped for an eighth consecutive month, edging down 0.2 percent in April.

California women sue Albertson's for sex and race discrimination

N.Y. Times News Service

Five California women filed a lawsuit against Albertson's Inc., charging the nation's sixth largest grocery chain with discriminating against employees on the basis of sex and race.

The class-action lawsuit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco, seeks damages in excess of $30 million and could affect as many as 5,000 current and former Albertson's employees in California, said Jocelyn D. Larkin, an attorney for the women.

The suit contends that Albertson's refused to promote female or Latino employees beyond lower-paying checkout clerks and baggers, and prevented them from receiving the training and experience needed to move up to managerial positions.

Albertson's, which has 639 stores in 19 states, would not comment on the specific charges of the suit, but denied engaging in unlawful discrimination.

"We have a non-discrimination policy," said Terri Hughes, a spokeswoman for the Boise, Idaho-based company.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tax filing rules for elderly couples varies

By Bill Doyle

Q: I called the closest Internal Revenue Service office and asked how much income a husband and wife, both over 80 and living together, must have to be required to file a federal income tax return.

The woman who answered said, "I don't have that figure" and hung up.

A local tax preparer either did not know or would not tell.

Doyle

I found this information for 1989 in your column: It was $10,400. Has it changed?

A: Yes. It increases every year because of "indexing." It was $11,300 last year and is $12,000 for 1992 returns. It is the total of your personal exemptions and your standard deduction.

Those numbers are for gross income and apply to a married couple, both 65 or older and living together at the end of the year or on the date one spouse dies. There is no change after you both pass age 65.

Different gross income filing requirement figures come into play depending on marital status and age. The list takes up the better part of a page in federal income tax return instruction booklets and is too long to be printed here.

Every IRS office has that detailed information. So does every tax preparer worth his or her salt.

The steady increases in these numbers result from one of the many sensible parts of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, known as the "Reagan Tax Law."

Among other things, the legislation provided that individual income tax brackets, the standard deduction and personal exemptions be adjusted for inflation annually, beginning in 1985.

Thus, those numbers go up every year by an amount equal to the percentage increase in the U.S. Labor Department's Consumer Price Index for the previous year. This enables taxpayers to keep pace with tax increases formerly brought on by inflation. In short, it eliminated "bracket creep."

Q: I purchased a large single-premium insurance policy on my life, with my wife as beneficiary. Is the death benefit taxable federally?

A: There is no federal income tax on life insurance death benefits. When you leave this vale of tears, your wife will receive the policy's full death benefit without any income tax bite.

Past that, things get complicated. Because you own the policy, its death benefit will be included in your estate for purposes of federal estate tax, which is quite different than income tax.

Assuming everything goes to your wife, no federal estate tax will be due, because a spouse can leave to the surviving spouse unlimited amounts free of that tax.

However, if someone else is the beneficiary and the total of the policy's death benefit plus everything else you leave to people other than your spouse tops $600,000, federal estate tax will be due. Depending on the size of the estate, that tax ranges from 18 to 55 percent.

Also, all 50 states now have estate or inheritance taxes, some of which can be quite severe. Check that in your state capital.

You can remove your life insurance policies from your estate by assigning ownership to someone else at least three years before your death. To do that, you must give up all "incidents of ownership," including the right to change beneficiaries.

NBA: Ferry gets extra boo-time from crowd

(From 1C)

If Cleveland wins Game 6, Game 7 will be played Sunday in Chicago.

Led by their bench and their swarming defense, the Bulls opened the fourth quarter with a decisive 15-0 run, expanding their lead from 73-71 to 88-71 with 6 minutes 20 seconds left to play. Cleveland was held scoreless for the first 5 minutes 40 seconds of the fourth quarter.

Cliff Levingston started the surge with a baseline jumper, Scott Williams added a 10-foot jumper. After a Michael Jordan steal, Jordan passed to Williams, who made a layup after two pump fakes while being fouled John Williams.

Then after Jordan missed a lane jump shot, Scottie Pippen grabbed the offensive rebound and made a 4-foot jumper.

Then a two-on-one Bulls' fast break, resulting in a layup by B.J. Armstrong, forced Cleveland Coach Lenny Wilkens to call timeout. But it didn't help.

Jordan added two free throws, Pippen scored on a dunk, and Jordan added one more free throw. Brad Daugherty finally ended Cleveland's drought by making a free throw, but it was much too late to help Cleveland.

While the Bulls were taking control, the Cavaliers could not buy basket. During the first four minutes of the fourth quarter, the Cavaliers missed six shots and committed five turnovers. The Bulls' defense turned up its intensity, and the Cavaliers' offense fell apart.

Chicago entered the fourth quarter with a precarious 73-71 lead. Mark Price, Cleveland's All-Star point guard, led the Cavaliers' rally with a 16-point third quarter.

Price did everything — making three 3-point shots in the period, making off balance driving shots, and making the Bulls wonder how to stop him. Price had to step up, because some of his teammates had to sit down.

Larry Nance committed his fifth personal foul with 7:41 left in the third quarter, forcing him to sit the rest of the quarter. He was joined on Cleveland's bench three minutes later by Mike Sanders, who committed his fourth foul.

But while the Cavaliers had foul trouble, the Bulls had foul-shooting trouble. Pippen missed 4 of 6 free-throw attempts in the third quarter, squandering precious points. With Pippen struggling, the Bulls turned to Jordan, who had a 12-point third-qaurter, giving him 32 points when the fourth quarter began.

The Bulls led at halftime, 46-38, and they needed strong defense to do it. Jordan was their lone offensive first-half threat, leading all scorers with 20 points.

Although Jordan said he did not want to carry the offense, he did not have much choice. None of the other Bulls seemed willing, or able, to give Jordan the scoring help he wanted. Still No Rhythm

All-Star forward Pippen continued to struggle, committing three personal fouls in the first half, forcing him to sit for 10 minutes.

As usual, the Chicago Stadium fans kept the volume turned up. They booed loudly when Danny Ferry entered the game late in the first quarter. Ferry was fined $5,000 today for throwing two punches at Jordan in Game 4, but the fans wanted to make sure Ferry knew he wasn't forgiven.

Chicago's Michael Jordan, with ball, shoots over Cleveland's Brad Dougherty.

Despite trailing by 8 points at halftime, at least the Cavaliers were still within striking distance. During the first three games of the series, either one team or the other built a huge first-half lead. But this was a typical playoff game: tense, defensive-oriented and physical.

Lynam now GM, Moe coach in Sixers' shift

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Jim Lynam, who got control of the Philadelphia 76ers and brought in Doug Moe to succeed him as coach, now has to decide what to do with Charles Barkley.

Moe

Owner Harold Katz, criticized for player moves in recent years, said Wednesday he is handing over control of basketball decisions to Lynam, a condition the former coach requested.

"Whatever happens to Charles Barkley ... right here," Lynam said. "You come right here if you don't like it.

"If you don't like the draft choice that we make, come right here because it'll be my pick."

Lynam replaces Gene Shue — who didn't have such control under Katz — as general manager. Shue becomes player personnel director.

The moves come at a crucial time for the club. Barkley is the 76ers' only established star, and with the NBA's rigors taking their toll on his 29-year-old body and his verbal outbursts becoming more frequent, speculation on a trade is rampant.

Not lucky enough to get one of the top three places in the draft lottery, the 76ers are left with the ninth overall pick in the June 24 draft. Predictions vary on whether that makes Barkley more or less likely to be traded.

Moe, who promised to bring his running style to Philadelphia, said he's not familiar with the complaints surrounding Barkley and said he had not spoken with him yet.

"I figure he'll be too busy scoring points to complain," said Moe, 53. "Barkley is a type of player if he is playing at his maximum I think can raise other players to a higher level and at one point did."

Barkley didn't return a phone call placed through the 76ers, but repeated earlier statements that he wouldn't play for the Sixers as currently constructed.

FRANCE: Connors won't say if he'll return to Paris

(From 1C)

Stich, the fourth seed, received virtually no support from the fans. They cheered his errors and greeted his winners with silence.

"It's tough to play in these conditions," the German said. "You're not playing only against Connors, you're playing against a lot of other things."

After losing to Connors in Memphis earlier this year, Stich blasted the American for his showmanship. He appeared disturbed by Connors' antics again Wednesday.

"Some people like the way he does his kind of show, the way he behaves and talks to the crowd," Stich said. "I don't have to like it. But it's no problem."

Connors didn't care. "I'm certainly not out there to please him," he said.

While McEnroe said Tuesday this was his last French Open, Connors was noncommittal.

"I better wait and see how I feel next year," he said. "But playing five sets on clay is very difficult for me. Maybe if they change my matches to two out of three sets..."

Connors has won eight Grand Slam titles in his career, but never made it past the semifinals of the French Open.

"I've gotten the most out of my career," he said. "I've given it hell everytime I've gone out there."

Connors took a swipe at the new generation, suggesting it lacks personalities.

"I'm still playing and McEnroe's still playing — mabye that's what's wrong," he said. "Nobody has taken the handoff. It's time for someone to take over."

The world's new No. 1 player, defending champion Jim Courier, had his second-round match against Thomas Muster of Austria postponed by rain. Also rained out were matches pitting Andre Agassi against Italy's Gianluca Pozzi and Pete Sampras versus Laurent Prades of France.

In men's first-round play, No. 5 Michael Chang beat Paul Haarhuis, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, and No. 13 Aaron Krickstein defeated Mark Koevermans, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

No. 6 Guy Forget of France became the first major upset victim, losing a second-round match 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 to Belgium's Bart Wuyts.

Three top women advanced to the third round. No. 2 Steffi Graf beat Nathalie Housset of France, 6-2, 6-1; No. 4 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, the 1989 champion, beat Switzerland's Emanuela Zardo, 6-3, 6-2; and No. 6 seed Mary Joe Fernandez beat fellow American Shaun Stafford, 6-1, 6-4.

Riviera rolls along as mid-size sporty luxury coupe

By Bob Plunkett

Riviera ranks among the oldest continuing series for the Buick division of General Motors.

Still, the model rates as a serious contender in its class of domestic mid-size personal luxury coupes, those sporty things packed with all the gizmos and gear for comfort as well as sporty driving.

It presents a sharply dropped prow and roundish body lines, sends power from a beefy V6 directly to front wheels, and provides an enormous trunk along with custom-fitted front buckets inside and a surprisingly spacious rear seat sculpted for two adults.

Riviera also adds a long list of optional equipment that permits a buyer to customize this cruiser to personal standards of luxury and taste.

So what's the problem?

Well, there really isn't any, as long as you measure Riviera against standards of other American cars — like its sister, Oldsmobile Toronado, or Ford's Thunderbird and the Mercury Cougar.

It is only when you attempt to jump the comparative fence to international standards currently being set by Asian imports like the dazzling — and much more expensive — Lexus SC 400 or Acura Legend Coupe that one-on-one comparisons with Riviera begin to fray.

But Buick never intended for its personal coupe to duke it out in any head-to-head battle with the Japanese because buyers of Buicks, in general, simply don't take kindly to such standards nor those staggering sticker prices.

Buick Riviera

Left to a close examination of its own merits, Riviera comes across as a handsome thing that will impress you with its sleek styling, its overall feel as a solidly built and keenly crafted car, and its gutsy performance guise.

Riviera also adds some safety-oriented hardware to sweeten its deal — like an airbag tucked into the hub of the steering wheel and a computerized link from the four-on-board disc brakes to an anti-lock system.

Two of its most important components consist of the powerful engine and smooth automatic shifter.

The powerplant, GM's "3800" series 3.8-liter V6 rigged with port (multi-point) fuel injection, manages to spit out up to 170-horsepower and a fair amount of torque, too.

Even factored with Riviera's hefty weight (about 3,500 lbs.), that engine propels this Buick right on down the road in a lively attitude that kindles a certain sporty spirit.

Then the auto shifter, with four forward gears for overdrive mode and fair fuel economy, permits quick down-shifting from fourth to third when you stomp the accelerator — use it to scoot quickly around another vehicle when you move into the passing lane.

In a recent test, Riviera's standard suspension did not impress as well as did the power mode, as it exhibited a tendency to mush out on freeway maneuvers and tilt too much when turning tightly.

Not so, though, with Riviera's Gran Sport package, an option that brings wider tires and stiffer spring and shock rates for a firmer and more controlled ride quality.

Pick the Gran Sport package and you'll also get a leather wrapped steering wheel and gear shifter knob and quick-ratio element added to the car's power rack and pinion steering system.

Even the base Riviera packs on the luxury equipment, though, beginning with an automatic climate control system, twin bucket seats in front with reclining backs and a power-operated driver's seat, power windows and door locks and power-operated twin outside mirrors.

There's a console with padded armrest positioned ideally between the front buckets and a tachometer installed in the dash display that includes full electronic gauges (like oil pressure and coolant temperature) that function like the analog variety.

Riviera works best for driver and front passenger — think of it as a two-seat sports car on a luxury scale.

But, when you need to carry more, there are two seats carved out of the elegant rear area, and they're set in comfortable quarters that afford a surprising amount of leg, head and shoulder room, particularly for a two-door coupe design.

The only catch is that you've got to work a little to climb aboard, stepping past the fold-forward seatback from a front bucket, yet that's an obstacle for any coupe rider.

New on the 1992 Riviera is a convenient item once available only optionally — solar-control glass. Now a standard feature, the glass is designed to filter and therefore reduce quantity of the sun's ultraviolet rays (as well as heat) to protect the car's interior environment.

Smart Cars take to the road. . .the correct road, that is

By Frederick Standish
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT — Tired of getting lost? Tired of wrestling with that impossible-to-refold road map? Can't break away from a TV?

You need a "smart car."

Experiments have been under way in California and Florida testing a system designed to warn drivers of traffic congestion or lay out a route to a specific destination.

Cars are being fitted with small TV screens near their steering wheels which display a moving map and locate the cars on specially equipped roadways.

By using the computerized dashboard map in conjunction with traffic reports by local agencies and roadway sensors, motorists can spot traffic jams and navigate around them.

Or, they can just lay in coordinates and the map will show the drivers where their destination lies and roads to take there.

State and local governments aiming to unclog highways are experimenting with the technology in cooperation with private companies in California, Florida, Michigan and some other places. None of the systems is beyond the testing or evaluation stage.

"The 'smart' highway concept will allow us to use whatever roads we have more efficiently, recognizing that we still don't have enough roads," says Tom Barry, head of central Florida operations for that state's Department of Transportation.

It works like this. Say it's 5:30 p.m. and a hungry driver headed for a dinner date wants to know if the road ahead is congested. The driver turns on the dashboard computer and punches in the destination, using buttons at the side of the screen.

The car and destination appear on a map on the screen, which measures 4 inches diagonally and reads information from a compact disk player.

As the car moves, the map does, too, in sync with the car's location. The vehicle indicator points straight ahead; the map moves under it. The system calculates speed by wheel rotation and direction by compass.

The technology has been getting a tryout in traffic-choked Los Angeles, with 25 specially equipped cars on a 13-mile stretch of the Santa Monica Freeway. The 18-month experiment, called "Pathfinder," wound up late last year. It used an on-board computer map system called Travelpilot, which sells for $2,000 to $3,000.

"As long as (motorists) are given the information and some sense of how long the congestion will last, then they're willing to sit longer," says Steve Leung, chief of the traffic systems branch of the California Department of Transportation in the Los Angeles district.

The current testing ground is Orlando, Fla., where millions of car-renting tourists need guidance every year to get to such attractions as Walt Disney World, Universal Studios Florida and Sea World.

General Motors Corp. is supplying 100 computer-equipped cars for the project: 75 for rental-car companies and 25 to residents. A surveillance system will monitor traffic on busy Interstate 4, which runs right through town.

A lot of money is being sunk into smart cars and smart highways, but Barry, of the Florida transportation agency, said all the investment isn't likely to solve anything.

"We don't characterize this kind of project as a panacea," he says, "because if you just have too many people going on one road, telling people that it isn't the way to go isn't going to fix it."

A public-private partnership in Schaumburg, Ill., called ADVANCE is the largest of the U.S. projects. ADVANCE stands for Advanced Driver and Vehicle Advisory Navigation Concept.

Approximately 250 square miles in the northwestern suburbs of Chicago, including O'Hare Airport, is involved.

Program manager Joe Ligas said prototype vehicles will take to the road this year, with the use of the 5,000 vehicles about a year away.

HEALTH

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Your food might contain aspirin

By Jean Carper

Did you know there's aspirin in your food? It's true. People who are sensitive to aspirin are warned to avoid foods rich in the drug's active ingredient salicylate. Eating such foods can provoke reactions similar to taking aspirin.

Carper

But new research suggests that regular low doses of aspirin help prevent heart attacks, strokes and even colon cancer. The question: Does eating foods with salicylates offer some of the same protection as taking aspirin? Could this natural drug be one more reason certain plant foods seem to push down rates of cardiovascular disease and cancer?

"It's an exciting possibility," says Timothy Byers, Ph.D., a researcher at the Centers for Disease Control. He and other experts intrigued by the idea say it needs to be investigated.

In the meantime, here are foods highest in salicylates: Of fruits, high on the list are raisins, prunes, dates, dried currants, raspberries, blueberries, cherries. Among apples, Granny Smith has the most. Vegetables are low except for gherkins (small pickles), which are loaded with salicylates. Most spices are extremely high, notably curry powder and hot paprika.

The Blood-Alcohol Puzzle

Why do people who drink a little alcohol — a drink or two a day — have lower odds of heart disease? One theory is alcohol boosts good-type HDL cholesterol that helps keep arteries unclogged. Now researchers in France and Wales say they have discovered another possible reason.

In their new study of 1,600 middle-aged Welsh men, the scientists discovered that regular moderate alcohol intake "thins the blood," much the same way aspirin does. In other words, the alcohol inhibited the clumping of blood platelets, discouraging blood-clot formation. Alcohol also seemed to aid the body's mechanism that dissolves blood clots.

This anticoagulant effect showed up even in men drinking only a couple of drinks on the weekend and less than a drink a week. For unknown reasons, alcohol had the greatest effect in men who also ate the most saturated animal fat.

Caution: This does not mean non-drinkers should start drinking to try to avoid heart disease. Or that people who drink should drink more. Heavy drinking damages the heart, often triggering sudden death, and encourages strokes — not surprisingly, brain hemorrhages or "bleeding" strokes.

Juice Reality

Juice is good for you, but claims that juice is superior to whole fruit are shaky, say experts. According to U.S. Department of Agriculture figures, you may gain a few nutrients but lose others by juicing whole fruits and vegetables. First, virtually all the insoluble fiber is lost — destroying any anti-constipation benefits. You also lose soluble fiber. The USDA's James Duke, Ph.D., figures that apple juice contains only 10 percent as much pectin as whole apples. Pectin, a soluble fiber, is a known cholesterol-reducer.

Dr. Duke also says USDA figures show most juices on a weight basis contain slightly less beta carotene, vitamin C and vitamin E than whole fruits. All three are antioxidants that help guard cells against disease-producing assaults. Juicing fruits also disposes of much of the protein, he says.

Tests at Emory University in Atlanta show that juices are usually devoid of glutathione, another potent antioxidant in fruits and vegetables. Only orange juice contains any — about half that of a whole orange.

But Dr. Duke says you may absorb proportionately more calcium, iron and zinc from juice than whole fruits, because the fiber that block absorption has been removed.

Journal publishes first evaluation of liquid diets

N.Y. Times News Service

The first scientific evaluation of a commercial weight-loss program using a very-low-calorie liquid diet shows that participants who stick with the six-month program lose a significant amount of weight quickly.

And 60 percent of the lost pounds stay off for at least a year for those who complete the program.

But nearly half those who were enrolled in the diet program dropped out before completing the 26-week regime and only one in five who stayed until the end managed to maintain their entire weight loss for at least one year.

"This is certainly not a breakthrough in obesity treatment," Dr. Thomas A. Wadden, an obesity specialist at Syracuse University who directed the research, said in an interview recently.

In a report published early this month in the journal The Archives of Internal Medicine, Wadden and his colleagues said that long-term results using the liquid diet studied, Optifast, were no better than those achieved with well-designed low-calorie diet programs that rely entirely on regular foods and behavior change.

On average, the Optifast study showed, dieters, who are supposed to be at least 30 percent overweight to be accepted into the program, lose about 20 percent of their body weight in 26 weeks or less.

But within a year of the program's completion 40 percent of the lost pounds find their way back, and 11 percent of participants regain all they lost or more.

In all likelihood, the program dropouts and the one-quarter of dieters who did not return for a follow-up evaluation did even more poorly, Wadden said.

Wadden applauded the developer of the Optifast program, the Sandoz Nutrition Corp. of Minneapolis, for being the first to permit outside researchers to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of the diet regimen as it works when commercially administered.

Sandoz provided some financial support for the study.

"The real significance of this study is that a commercial program has been willing to evaluate the short-term and long-term results of treatment so that consumers can have the kind of information they need to make an informed decision about how to try to lose weight," Wadden said. "Now the rest of the diet industry has to come up with this kind of information."

Flo Cohen, a spokeswoman for Sandoz, said: "We're pleased with the result. The fact that it is possible to keep significant amounts of weight off for a long period of time, that's encouraging. Regain is a real phenomenon and everyone always focuses on that but it's not inevitable."

Wadden and his co-authors pointed out that Americans spend $10 billion a year on weight-loss programs and an additional $22 billion on diet aids, the benefits of which have never been properly evaluated despite often extravagant advertising claims for their success.

The diet industry has been subject to minimal regulation by federal agencies.

Wadden and his colleagues based their study on the Optifast program as administered at commercial diet clinics at 18 hospitals around the country.

All the clinics used Sandoz's Optifast program in which dieters are supposed to consume only a high-protein liquid formula providing 420 to 800 calories a day for 12 weeks and then to be gradually reintroduced to food.

The average normal-weight person consumes 2,200 to 2,600 calories a day.

The Optifast dieters meet weekly in groups at which trained counselors encourage them to adopt a regular exercise regime and teach them how to modify their eating behavior and attitudes toward food.

The complete program lasts 26 weeks and costs $60 a week plus $8 to $10 a day for the Optifast formula.

All told, 517 obese patients — 407 women and 110 men — participated in the study. Of these, 285 participants stayed in the program until its end; they lost about 50 percent more weight than those who dropped out, typically after about 11 weeks.

The average weight loss for the women was 42 pounds, down from a starting weight of 225 pounds. The men lost an average of 59 pounds, down from a starting weight of 283 pounds.

Of the 118 people who returned for follow-up evaluations after completing the full-course of treatment, 21 percent had maintained their full weight loss, while 11 percent had regained all the weight or more.

Experts urge new attitude toward asthma

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors should adopt a sweeping change in the way they view asthma and treat it as a chronic disease, an international panel of experts says.

Besides treating the inflammation that is the core of the malady, doctors should monitor its severity by measuring lung function, the panel said.

Doctors also should teach patients how to avoid triggers and work with patients and their families in managing the disease, the panel said.

Anti-inflammatory drugs, preferably inhaled corticosteroids, should be the first-line therapy for anything more than occasional mild asthma, the 18-member International Asthma Management Project said.

The panel, convened by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said beta agonist dilaters commonly used as first-line therapy, are endorsed only for exercise-induced asthma.

Their report, summarized in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, underscores recent research that found the greater a person's reliance on beta agonists, the greater the risk of dying from asthma or of suffering a near-fatal attack.

Asthma, characterized by attacks of breathlessness and wheezing, is believed to affect one in 20 Americans. Asthma deaths have more than doubled in the past decade, to 4,868 in 1989.

Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said the panel's report "should have a major impact on the way asthma is viewed and treated on a worldwide basis."

BUILD YOUR OWN VANITY
As most bathrooms are designed to fit in a 5' x 8' area, this vanity was designed with that space in mind. Only 36" wide (with optional 24" or 48" widths), this unit gives you the most storage for the least space. Step-by-step instructions, photos, drawings, and materials lists show you how to construct the cabinet and drawers, as well as apply the laminate.
