Colombian volcano triggers floods

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A volcano in western Colombia erupted twice triggering floods and mud flows that hit a town of 50,000 before dawn today, Colombian radio stations reported. Thousands were feared killed.

Officials said Armero, a town about 30 miles from the volcano and 105 miles northwest of Bogota, was inundated by mud that was swept down the Langunilla River after the eruption of the 15,500-foot high volcano, Nevado del Ruiz.

Civil defense workers had found 52 bodies by this morning, the Bogota radio chain IRCN said. Thirty-eight bodies were recovered in the adjacent town of Mariquita and 14 others in the nearby town of Chinchina.

Officials said most of the inhabitants of Armero apparently were asleep when the mud avalanche covered the town.

Artemo Franco, director of the Red Cross in the area, said thousands may have been killed.

"It is an inmense tragedy," he said. "There's talk of 20,000 dead."

The Bogota radio station Caracol quoted a pilot as saying that mud covered almost all the town of Armero.

Radio stations quoted officials as saying victims were swept away by the river Lagunilla which carried mud and snow from the avalanche.

There are other small towns along the river closer to the volcano, but they apparently were spared because they sat on hills. The town of Chinchina, with about 70,000 people, is only six miles from the base of the volcano.

Raul Ramirez, a reporter for the radio chain Todelar, was one of the first people at Armero. He said 90 percent of Armero was destroyed.

"The mass of mud is up to five yards high in some areas," he said. "Some people were able to escape and climb over walls that weren't covered by the avalanche and were rescued with the help of ropes and horses."

The volcano had been dormant for more than a century when it began throwing out smoke, ashes and gas in October 1984.

Sgt. Ruben Garcia, the fire chief of Chinchina which sits on a hill 750 feet above the river, said 14 people were killed in an area of about 200 houses along the river.

"We've rescued many injured," Garcia said. He added many of the homeless were put in shelters set up at schools and churches and schools.

Reagan expected to tell of new exchange pact

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is expected to announce to the nation tonight completion of a new agreement with the Soviet Union providing for broader exchanges of culture, students and scientists.

In a nationally broadcast address at 8 p.m. EST, Reagan also was likely to outline his hopes for success at next week's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

State Department officials said after a year and a half of negotiation, an "umbrella framework" for the exchange agreement had been worked out through emissaries in Moscow and Washington. It replaces an agreement suspended in 1980 to punish the Soviet Union for sending more than 100,000 troops into Afghanistan the year before.

■ Other summit stories — Page 5D

Reagan and Gorbachev could sign the new accord when they sit down together in Geneva, Switzerland next Tuesday and Wednesday, said the State Department officials, who insisted on anonymity.

"There are a few dots and dashes remaining, but they should not present a problem," one of the officials told The Associated Press Wednesday night.

"It's good news. It's a gain," the official said. "It can yield a lot of understanding."

Meanwhile, The New York Times reported in today's editions that the two nations will announce at the summit that they have agreed to combine efforts to halt the spread of chemical weapons. Unidentified administration sources told the Times that Moscow has agreed to the accord on the weapons and the administration has agreed in principle, although the Pentagon was continuing to resist giving its final approval.

Although the cultural exchange arrangement preceded the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, there have been cultural exchanges between the two superpowers, on a case-by-case basis.

No action on 'cover-up' expected

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland grand jury discussed allegations of a Police Department cover-up with four city officials Wednesday, but no further action is expected to result from the Aug. 25 incident, District Attorney Al Schorre said this morning.

"Their whole purpose was to sit down and kind of update them (the city officials) on the problem they saw last week," Schorre said. "There isn't going to be a report issued or any other action taken at this time."

"They were asking a few questions and sharing some insights into the situation," said City Councilman Bart Hotchkiss, whom the grand jury had asked to appear along with Mayor G. Thane Akins, City Manager Jim Brown and Police Chief Wayne Gideon.

"The grand jury looked in depth into it (Nos. 6) and no-billed," Hotchkiss said this morning. "As far as I'm concerned, it's over."

Gideon was unavailable for comment this morning, and the other officials declined to give details of the meeting, citing the secrecy of grand jury deliberations. But Akins, Brown and Hotchkiss all said they were satisfied the incident had been handled properly by the Police Department.

Visiting counselor shares tips on withstanding peer pressure

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Parents can be the best protection children have against drug abuse, says Sharon Scott, a licensed professional counselor.

The common denominator in most teen situations is peer pressure. It is the main reason children experiment with drugs, she said. They often get inaccurate information from their peers who glamorize drug use.

That's where Ms. Scott comes in. Her talk Wednesday evening at San Jacinto Junior High was sponsored by the Junior League of Midland in cooperation with Midland Independent School District.

Peer pressure is not easy to overcome, she said, but it can be minimized if a child's parents have taught him accurate information about peer pressure situations.

Ms. Scott has authored a book outlining a skills program that both parents and professionals can use to teach today's youth to say "no" without losing their friends.

The book, "Peer Pressure Reversal," draws on Ms. Scott's knowledge in the area accumulated through 15 years experience as a training consultant, lecturer and licensed professional counselor.

That experience includes seven years with the Dallas Police Department, during which time she served as head of the department's pioneer "Youth Services First Offender Program."

Since setting up the program in Dallas, Ms. Scott has helped police departments nationwide establish similar programs for delinquency prevention and youth rehabilitation. Her firm, Scott and Associates, offers training and consulting services to school districts, counseling agencies, police departments, parent and youth groups.

Ms. Scott's approach to peer pressure reversal (PPR) is direct; her clear, concise, step-by-step approach offers parents, teachers, counselors, youth directors or anyone else involved in working with children, an immediate opportunity to teach and train children in PPR.

What she does is show persons how to teach children a four-step method:

- Look and listen when confronted with a peer challenge (stand tall; give eye contact).
- Apply the trouble rule (does it break a law or will it get someone in control mad?)
- Look at both sides (good and bad).
- Act to avoid trouble (leave, ignore, make an excuse, change the subject, make a joke, act shocked, use flattery or suggest a better idea, return the challenge, say "no.").

Recovering from surgery to reattach her arm is a Weatherford nurse, Neoma Patterson.

Nurse's act helped save severed arm

WEATHERFORD (AP) — A nurse who cut off her arm with a bandsaw kept a cool head that enabled surgeons to save her — and the arm. She staunched the bleeding, wrapped up the severed limb and then phoned for help.

Neoma Patterson was in stable condition Wednesday at Harris Memorial Hospital, where she was recovering from 8½ hours of surgery performed after the accident last week.

"If she had panicked, she would have definitely lost her arm," said Dr. Manucher Nazarian, who took part in the operation.

Said her husband, E.A. Patterson: "This lady's tougher than a keg of nails."

Doctors say Ms. Patterson, 56, should be out of the hospital in a couple of weeks, but faces extensive physical therapy.

She severed the arm last Tuesday while working with an electric bandsaw outside her farm home northeast of this west central Texas town.

"It was cool that morning, and I had put on a flannel shirt," she said. "Some way, the suction from the saw sucked my shirt sleeve into the saw, and there my arm lay on the table, suddenly just cut off."

State highway department begins anti-litter campaign

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation is launching a $4 million campaign to stop littering because officials said they want to spend more on repairing roads and less on cleaning up trash.

Costs for trash cleanups have jumped from $2 million in 1970 to $20 million in 1984, said Don Clark, with the department in Midland Wednesday.

"We view it as a cost-saving measure," Clark said.

"We feel $20 million is unacceptable. We would like to put it to better use than picking up trash."

About $2 million will be spent on a media and public awareness campaign that includes distributing bumper stickers with the message, "Don't Mess With Texas."

"It's more aggressive," said Betsy Todd of the Highway Department. Ms. Todd says she hopes an aggressive request will be more effective than the traditional pleas to "Please Don't Litter."

"We know it has a macho image, but with the target population, we know a macho image is needed," she said.

Ms. Todd said a study by the highway department found the average litterer is male and between the ages of 18 and 34.

Habitual litterers also tend to eat a lot of fast food, soft drinks and beer, Todd said, based on the trash found along the state's highways.

About $1 million will be used by the state to contract with local law enforcement agencies to crack down on litterers. In Texas, fines can go as high as $400 for littering outside of cities, and up to $1,000 for those found littering along state highways within cities, Clark said. The maximum fine for littering in Midland is $1,000.

"There are some people out there that the only way you're going to reach them is to slap a fine on them," he said.

Another $1 million will be used for local education and volunteer community cleanups, Clark said.

Thunderstorms, weakening snow front moving eastward

Associated Press

A killer storm that stranded hunters and hikers, tore down power lines and buried two skiers in an avalanche cast its weakening snows eastward across the Plains today behind violent thunderstorms that piled hail up to 6 inches deep.

Travelers advisories for slick, snow-packed roads extended from California to western Minnesota, where six inches of snow fell in six hours overnight on the town of Breckinridge.

Flash floods were possible today in southwest Missouri, where more than five inches of rain had fallen since Tuesday night.

"The main thing about the storm is that it has weakened," Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "It's still uncertain at this time whether it'll gain strength, but I think we've seen the worst of the storm."

Since Friday, the storm system has been blamed for at least 26 deaths from the Pacific Northwest to the upper Mississippi Valley.

In Utah, where some ski resorts got up to 29 inches of snow, one cross-country skier died and another was hospitalized in critical condition after they were buried for 20 minutes Wednesday by an avalanche in Big Cottonwood Canyon, authorities said.

Four people died Wednesday when a single-engine plane crashed in a field during a severe thunderstorm in southeast Kansas, state police said.

Five people in Broken Arrow, Okla., received minor injuries Wednesday after a powerful thunderstorm tore the roofs from three junior high school classrooms and heaped golf ball-sized hail 4 to 6 inches deep on city streets.

"It's all one big system, actually," Reynolds said, "but the thunderstorms are triggered primarily by the frontal boundary from west Texas to northern Indiana."

By Wednesday night, about two feet of snow had fallen on South Pass and Lander, Wyo., in 24 hours.

Electricity to thousands of utility customers from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Sidney, Neb., was being restored Wednesday after freezing drizzle or wet, heavy snow pushed down power lines, officials said.

REAGAN

Negotiations on the new, formal agreement picked up over the last six months, with most of the work being done in Moscow, the State Department official said.

But despite the breakthrough, U.S. summit expectations remain modest. A senior administration official says the success or failure of Reagan's meeting with Gorbachev may not be clear until Soviet behavior around the world is measured months later.

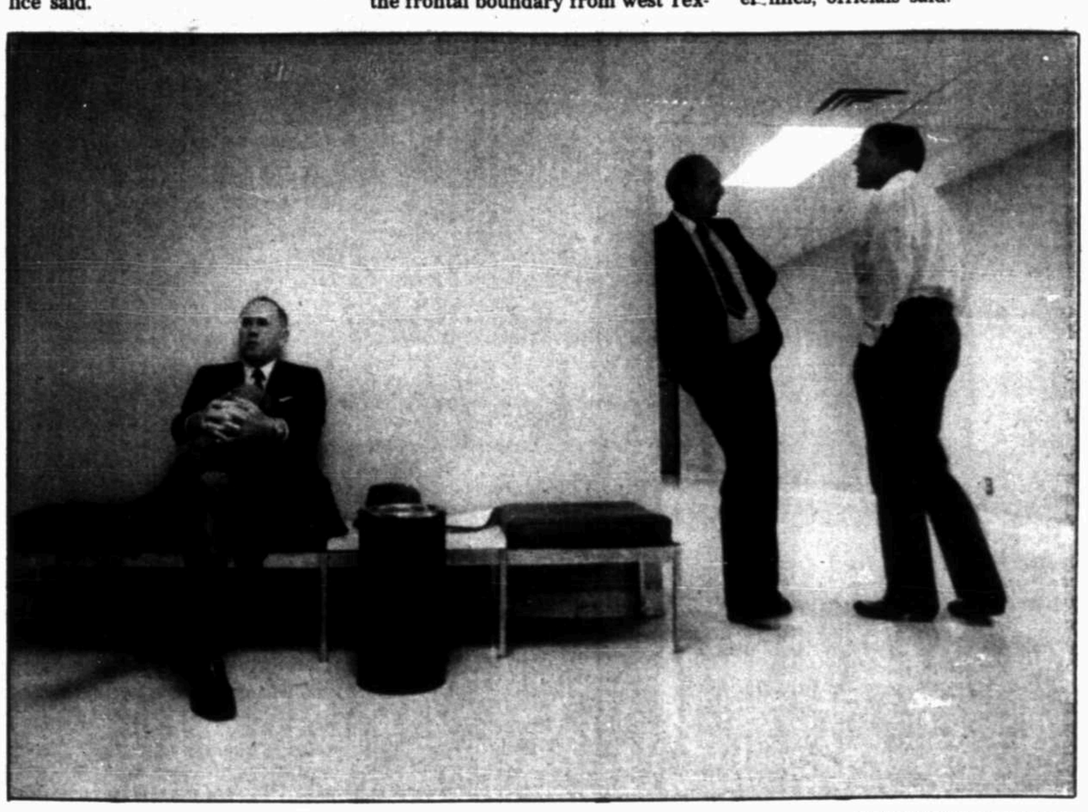

With major nuclear arms control agreements already ruled out, the official told reporters at the White House on Wednesday that Reagan hoped to alter Gorbachev's attitudes about the United States but realized fundamental Soviet policy would not be changed in Geneva.

"The president doesn't have any illusions this meeting will change the ideological underpinings of the (Soviet) state," the official said.

He described the president's mood as both calm and excited, and said he was reviewing the history of past U.S.-Soviet summit meetings and the "chemistry" of the participants to prepare for his talks with Gorbachev.

In their meetings, the official said, "the president wants to establish a basic understanding in the mind of the General Secretary of what our concerns are" and to tell him U.S. research into an anti-missile defense system was neither "visionary" nor "a political stunt."

In that regard, the official said "there is a Soviet attitude of mistrust of us" that Reagan hoped to change through "personal dialogue" with Gorbachev.

The allegations stemmed from an Aug. 25 traffic accident involving an off-duty patrol sergeant who failed to complete a left turn from Weatherford Street on to Mississippi Avenue and hit a utility pole.

The traffic report made out by officers at the scene indicated Sgt. Vince Castillo appeared under the influence of alcohol, but he was never given a breathalyzer test or blood test. Instead, Sgt. Jerry Morris drove Castillo to Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was given 18 stitches for a gash on his forehead, and treated for an injured shoulder. Police officers and nurses who saw Castillo at the hospital didn't think he was drunk, according to Patrol Capt. Herman Wicker, who conducted an internal investigation.

Someone at the Police Department apparently leaked the accident report to Cynthia Grubb, president of the Midland chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Ms. Grubb took the report to Schorre, who presented it to the grand jury Nov. 6. After hearing from more than a dozen police officers, the jurors decided not to indict Morris or anyone else for official misconduct.

Wicker has blamed the controversy over the incident on "a few malcontents" within the department "with an axe to grind."

The officer who made out the accident report has been transferred to the Midland Air Terminal unit at his own request, according to Gideon, and Ms. Grubb said another officer who was at the scene has been transferred to a different shift.

"As far as I'm concerned, the issue's not dead," Ms. Grubb said this morning. "We (the MADD board) are in agreement that we have other options."

Brown declined to comment on Ms. Grubb's statement this morning.

"I can't add anything constructive to what's been said," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, it's over. There's no use throwing fuel on the fire."

Akins said he was satisfied with the way the incident was handled by department, but said he didn't object to MADD continuing its own investigation.

"We welcome any kind of further investigation," he said. "My interest is in getting to the truth of the matter."

LITTER

Cities also will be able to compete for up to $20,000 worth of landscaping from the highway department along state roads from a $700,000 fund, Clark said.

Other states have reduced litter by passing laws that place deposits on containers, Clark said. However, he said the highway department has no comment for or against such legislation in Texas.

"In Texas, the political climate is not appropriate to get a bottle bill passed," Clark said.

ARM

"I can't put into words what my eyes saw. There's no way," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "First and foremost, I knew I was going to die."

She said wrapped the arm, which was still attached about an inch of skin, in a her shirttail, and held it to her chest while using her right hand to staunch the terrifying rush of blood.

"I put my finger in the artery. They were all bleeding, but I could plug the biggest one with my finger and I said, 'Lord, help me; give me composure,'" she said.

Ms. Patterson walked about 50 yards to her house, kicked the phone off the table, let go of the bleeding stump long enough to place the receiver between her knees and dialed the operator.

"I have just completely severed my left arm and I'm bleeding to death," she said, asking the operator to call an ambulance and her physician-employer, Dr. Loyd Ripley.

Ms. Patterson said she went out to the patio to await help — or death.

"I said, 'I'm here to die. I'll die right here sitting in my chair.' But the good Lord didn't let that happen," she said. "I was so afraid my son was going to come home for lunch and find me dead in all that blood, and I was determined he wasn't going to have to go through that."

An ambulance arrived in about 10 minutes and took her from the Zion Hill community, about three miles northeast of Weatherford, to Campbell Memorial Hospital. She was later transferred to Harris for the reattachment surgery.

Doctors say her prognosis is good.

"Once the nerves grow back, we expect muscle function to come back, and she will hopefully have a useful arm," Nazarian said.

Ms. Patterson said the experience changed her profoundly.

"I have so much to live for. This has made me see things differently," she said. "Now it seems like what's really important is just to enjoy the people I love."

PEERS

Most children, Ms. Scott says, refuse to believe that they are so easily manipulated by their peers. "The average kid's initial comment is 'nobody can make me do anything I don't want to.' Peer pressure is not forced pressure — it's verbal pressure or emotional blackmail. It's subtle lines that kids use to try to influence another. The child goes along because of the fear of the loss of his friends."

Aside from pressure regarding drugs, drinking, sex and crime, peer pressure may be at the root of smaller problems such as talking in class, going into an off-limits area or copying homework.

Most parents, she points out, have never discussed with their children what to do when someone asks, "Are you chicken?"

So what do you do?

If someone says, "Whatsa matter are you chicken?" and you say "No I'm not," then they're going to come back, "Prove it."

Then you're really in a corner, Ms. Scott said. It's a lot safer to say, "Yes I am chicken," especially if you do so with humor and say something like, "I'd rather be a chicken than a jail bird."

Ms. Scott said, "The first thing I say to a child is that if your friend asks you to do something you shouldn't do, if he drops you like a hot potato, what kind of friend is it? It's just someone showing off, that wants to be the leader, the head of the crowd, the tough one. A real friend might get upset, but it may only last a day. Most kids can live with that."

Woman takes controls, survives crash

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A woman who had never flown a plane before took the controls when her husband collapsed, and flew for an hour guided by radioed instructions before crashing three miles from an airport when she lost power.

Ella Faye Wilcoxson, 45, of Anchorage, Alaska, survived the crash and was in stable condition Wednesday night at Washington Regional Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Chris Krueger.

Her husband, Joe T. Wilcoxson, 53, was found dead, but it wasn't clear whether he had died before the crash or as a result of the accident. An autopsy was ordered by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The twin-engine Cessna Skymaster piloted by Wilcoxson took off Wednesday afternoon from Bentonville, about 30 miles north of Fayetteville. Moments after takeoff, Wilcoxson collapsed, his wife told James Bryant, the first person to reach her after the crash.

She then radioed, "Mayday, mayday," said Mary Jarnagan of Benton County Air Service, operator of the Bentonville airport.

Wayne Fryar of Aero Tech Services Inc. of Fayetteville went up in a plane to search for the aircraft, but never found it. Lynn Goodrich, a pilot flying with Fryar, talked with Mrs. Wilcoxson by radio as they tried to get her to turn south to avoid bad weather and head for the Fayetteville airport.

Goodrich said the woman told him just before she crashed: "I'm coming in out of the clouds, guys," and then paused. "I'm underneath the clouds, guys, and I don't think I have any power."

Goodrich said he told her she was three miles from their plane and "don't go back into the clouds."

Then he asked her, "Faye, this is Lynn, can you hear me?"

There was no response.

The plane came down in a pasture just inside Fayetteville.

Bryant's 19-year-old daughter, Laura Lea, said she was sitting on the front porch when the plane smashed across the driveway, clipping a large cedar and throwing Mrs. Wilcoxson from the cockpit into ankle-high grass.

"It was coming southbound and it went over our neighbor's house, and it looked like it would hit another field, and then it just rode over our land and crashed," she said. "It went back up and then looked like it was going to land elsewhere and then crashed."

Rick Hickman, a mechanic at the Springdale airport who was the second person to reach Mrs. Wilcoxson, said the woman was conscious but obviously in great pain.

Joe Rhine, deputy county coroner, said an autopsy had been ordered for Wilcoxson to determine how and when he died.

VOLCANO

Dr. Darrell Herd, deputy chief of the U.S. Geological Survey's Office of Earthquakes, Volcanoes and Engineering in Reston, Va., said he has been working with Colombians to prepare volcano hazard plan for Nevado del Ruiz. His doctoral dissertation was on that mountain.

When told of the eruption, Herd said: "Oh my God. That's very very sad because what we were trying to do is get them ready and it looks like they might not have been."

Herd said he was at the mountain most recently in the last week of September to help Colombians organize their response to possible catastrophic eruption of volcano.

He said the latest eruption, before today, was at 1:30 p.m. local time on Sept. 11. Herd said it continued strongly into the next day and left a small coating of ash on nearby cities of Manizales and Chinchina.

"The volcano has remained in nearly continuous eruption since that time, although eruptive activity has significantly lessened since around the 24th of September."

Until now, the eruptions have been phreatic, or steam and ash, non-magmatic in character, which means no lava was produced, he said. Herd said the activity was similar to the March and April, 1980, activity at Mount St. Helens, before St. Helen's May 18, 1980, catastrophic blast. In his words the eruptions before now have been "literally clearing out the volcano's throat," tossing out old ash.

Nevado del Ruiz is northernmost active volcano of the Andes. The last major eruption was in 1595, although mountain was intermittently active in 1600s, 1700s, and early 1800s. There was a brief steam and ash eruption in 1916.

Nevado del Ruiz reawakened last December, with a series of strong earthquakes on Dec. 22, between then and the steam and ash eruption Sept. 11, it averaged about 35 earthquakes a month.

In September, Herd said, there were "thunderous detonations in the area of the volcano and large lightning strikes in the area of the summit, presumably from ash generated by the eruption.

Peres wants to prevent collapse of government, but still fire Sharon

Ariel Sharon

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres pledged today to do all he could to prevent his shaky coalition government from collapsing, but did not retract his threat to fire Cabinet member Ariel Sharon for attacking his peace overtures toward Jordan.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who heads the coalition's Likud bloc, said earlier that if Peres fires Sharon, the prime minister must resign and bring down the government.

"I think that both large political parties have no better political alternative than to continue the existence of the national unity government," Peres said on Israel radio. "I personally will do everything I can to uphold the unity government."

Peres is scheduled to meet Labor ministers before convening the party's central committee this afternoon, where he was likely to announce whether he was firing Sharon.

Shamir, also speaking on the radio, said Peres had agreed not to fire any ministers without Likud agreement and said if he fired Sharon, "then this coalition agreement which is at the foundation of this government will cease to exist."

In such a case, Shamir said, "It is the premier's job, his duty, to go to the president and tell him that the national unity government can no longer survive, and to resign."

The right-wing Likud and left-of-center Labor Party, Israel's main political foes, formed a tense national unity government 14 months ago. Sharon is a leading Likud member and aspires to its leadership.

A Likud walkout probably would lead to elections. Some Labor Party members have urged Peres to call elections to cash in on his rising popularity in hopes of forming a government without Likud, giving him a freer hand in peace maneuvers.

But Peres said on the radio, "I am very concerned that going to an election would halt the economic recovery and would be liable to damage our diplomatic efforts" to start peace talks with Jordan.

Peres announced his intention to fire Sharon at a three-hour Cabinet session Wednesday night, but delayed handing him a letter of dismissal to await an apology.

Sharon, minister of commerce and industry, told the Cabinet he regretted insulting Peres, but refused to withdraw his criticism of Peres' policies, said ministers who emerged from the late-night session.

Edry said Peres wanted Sharon to apologize specifically for six separate accusations.

Cabinet ministers were divided over whether the delay in handing Sharon his dismissal notice meant that the crisis threatening the government had been averted.

"I think there is hope of removing tensions that existed in the government," Sharon told reporters after the Cabinet session.

"A minister must express his views. It's not only a right, it's a duty. That's why we sit in the Cabinet," he said.

Sharon, a former general who was defense minister during the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon, has called Peres "weak and spineless" for some of his foreign policy decisions and accused him of planning to include Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization in peace talks without Likud's consent.

By law, Sharon's dismissal would take effect 48 hours after he is given notice. Peres could rescind the notice at any time during those two days.

Peres opened the Cabinet session by reading the three-line letter of dismissal and distributing a six-page list of reasons for sacking the former general, said Interior Minister Yitzhak Peretz.

Peretz, who tried throughout the day to mediate a compromise, quoted an angry Peres as telling the ministers after his brief opening, "With this I see the meeting as being over."

But Shamir refused to let Peres adjourn the meeting.

Israeli bulldozers level abandoned refugee camp

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli army bulldozers leveled 5,000 abandoned mud huts Wednesday in two Palestinian refugee camps near the Jordanian frontier, the West Bank military commander said.

Maj. Gen. Amnon Shahak said the buildings were demolished because they provided shelter for "criminals and terrorists."

The homes, schools and mosques of 3,660 refugees were left intact in the United Nations-administered camps during the 10-hour operation, Shahak and a U.N. official said.

Some inhabitants, most of whose families fled from Mediterranean coastal villages during Israel's independence war in 1948, said they feared the Israelis were trying to force them to leave.

"Maybe they're just trying to move us all out without saying it," Taysir Said Kamal, 24, told the Palestinian-owned al-Fajr weekly published in east Jerusalem.

Ron Reagan to expose summit for Playboy

GENEVA (AP) — Ron Reagan, son of President Ronald Reagan, plans to cover next week's U.S.-Soviet summit for Playboy magazine.

Swiss authorities have accepted the younger Reagan's request for accreditation as a journalist to cover the Nov. 19-20 Geneva meeting between his father and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, said Ursula Mayor of the summit press center handling the applications.

Lebanese security guards and militiamen at Beirut Airport whisk Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy, through a pushing throng of reporters and television cameramen after he arrived Wednesday to negotiate the release of American hostages held by Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon.

Special envoy says he's contacted kidnappers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy said today he had made contact with kidnappers of missing Americans and that his efforts to free the hostages had "reached a critical and dangerous point."

The envoy, Terry Waite, told an impromptu news conference in the lobby of the Commodore Hotel in west Beirut, "Progress is being made and we're moving forward."

He declined to say how he made contact with the kidnappers for security reasons, but he said contacts had been established in several different ways.

His only demand is that he meet the captors face-to-face, but there also is a chance he will be allowed to visit the American hostages, Waite said.

"We have reached a very critical point and a very dangerous and difficult point. We have procedures being worked out now and I think we shall have those worked out in the course of the day," he said.

Waite flew from London on Wednesday and was driven by armed militiamen to a west Beirut hotel. He left three hours later and was driven to an undisclosed destination in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

Waite, a 46-year-old layman, walked today into the Commodore, base for foreign journalists in Beirut, and talked to reporters as he sipped coffee. He declined to say where he was staying.

His surprise appearance apparently came after he spotted reporters and photographers near where he was staying and feared they would jeopardize his mission.

Waite came to Beirut after four of the six missing Americans sent a letter to the archbishop of Canterbury in London last week. Waite launched his mission after he was in contact with an unidentified intermediary in Beirut.

Also today, the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio quoted the Rev. Jesse Jackson as appealing to the kidnappers for a meeting to negotiate the release of the hostages. An envoy sent by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar also arrived to seek the release of the Americans, a Briton and four Frenchmen.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem group believed loyal to Iran's revolutionary partriarch, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has claimed it kidnapped the missing Americans and Frenchmen and said Oct. 4 it killed one American, diplomat William Buckley.

It released blurred photographs purported to be of Buckley's body, but U.S. officials say there is no proof Buckley died.

Four other hostages signed letters to President Reagan and Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie delivered last week to the Beirut bureau of The Associated Press. They are: Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of the AP; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, the university's dean of agriculture.

There has been no word lately on the sixth hostage, university librarian Peter Kilburn.

Waite reiterated to reporters today his plea to "give me some space" to conduct the delicate negotiations with the kidnappers.

"I'd like to make a particular plea that I'm not to be followed by anybody because if that happens, then that will jeopardize my own safety and the safety of other people," he said.

"It's extremely important because of the great, great sensitivity of the situation that I am left totally alone because anything I have to do beyond this point will have to be entirely by myself," Waite said.

"I will keep in touch with the press as far as I'm able, and make a sort of appearance. But I make a particular plea because of the danger and uncertainty surrounding the situation," he said.

Asked what progress he had made in the day since his arrival, Waite said: "I have been in touch (with the kidnappers)."

When asked who was holding the hostages, he said: "I don't want to say. I want to protect them as much as I want to protect myself.

"If I'm going to protect the lives of the hostages and protect my own life, I also want to protect the lives of the captors," he said.

"I'll be here as long as is necessary to see this through to a reasonable conclusion. If it got to the point where I think we're not making any progress, there's not any point in my staying," he said.

Ireland likely to have say in governing Ulster

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An agreement giving the Irish Republic a consultative role in running predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland appears imminent, and preparations are under way for the British and Irish prime ministers to sign it, newspapers said.

The British and Irish governments said their cabinets were scheduled to meet today, and the newspapers said they were expected to approve an accord.

They said the agreement would give Ireland an unprecedented "consultative role" in Ulster's affairs. The papers said the summit could take place Friday.

Officials from both sides held another round of talks Wednesday, and the newspapers reported signs of preparations at four different sites in the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland for a meeting between prime ministers Garret FitzGerald of Ireland and Margaret Thatcher of Britain.

Officials of the two governments refused to comment on the reports which appeared in The Irish Times, The Irish Press and The Independent. The newspapers did not reveal their sources.

In the British House of Commons, lawmaker Harold McCusker brandished a copy of the Irish Press and said it was "deplorable that members of this house, who have been systematically and deliberately kept in the dark about the outcome of these talks, should learn of their conclusions from a paper printed in Dublin."

British leaders have been at pains to reassure the Protestants that British sovereignty will be unchanged.

The agreement also would reportedly repeal the ban on flying the Irish flag in Northern Ireland, encourage Irish language studies, promote Irish sports and permit streets to be named after Irish historical figures.

It reportedly include promises of greater cooperation between the Irish and British governments in curbing the activities of the mainly Catholic Irish Republican Army, which is fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland.

Speculation that the summit would be held in Northern Ireland kindled outrage among Protestant leaders.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, a militant Protestant political leader, said a summit in Northern Ireland would "add insult to injury."

"The stage is set for the cruel betrayal of the Ulster unionist people," he said. Unionist is the word by which Protestants loyal to Britain refer to themselves.

Officials have kept a tight blanket of secrecy around the talks, which began in earnest last February.

FitzGerald is under bitter attack from his parliamentary opposition led by former Prime Minister Charles Haughey, who claims the deal would sell out the national goal of uniting the island that was partitioned 1921.

FitzGerald argues that unification is still a goal, but is so far off that something must be done in the meantime to ease the plight of Northern Ireland's Catholic minority.

Many Protestants, who comprise two-thirds of Ulster's 1.6 million population, have been angered by reports that Ireland will be allowed to open a secretariat in Belfast to exercise its consultative role.

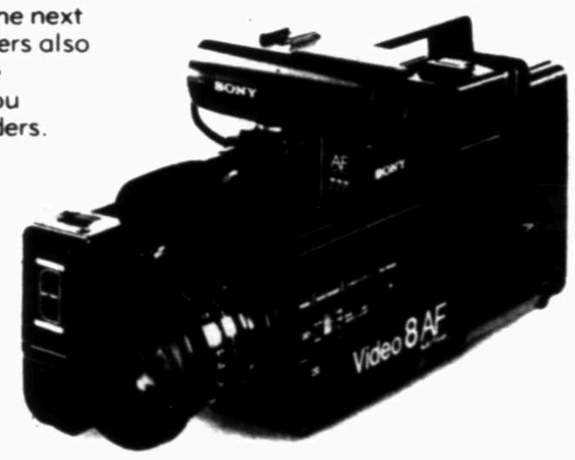

It would represent the first time that Dublin has been recognized to have any say in the governing of the province, and the Protestants say it would inevitably weaken their link with Britain and could eventually force them into a union with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

Northern Ireland Catholics see the secretariat as a place to which they could take their grievances if British authorities could not help them.

Official: Mercenaries, Cubans behind coup

LONDON (AP) — A Liberian government official claimed soldiers captured mercenaries from Cuba and from neighboring African countries who took part in a failed attempt to topple President Samuel K. Doe.

Patrick Kugmeh, Doe's spokesman, also told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday that life in the capital city of Monrovia should be returning to normal today.

Some shooting was reported in Monrovia Wednesday night, but the city was otherwise calm, said Kugmeh. He attributed the "minor firing incidents" to soldiers patrolling the streets and said Doe himself had toured the city.

The British Foreign Office in London said its embassy reported that Doe had regained control following the Tuesday coup attempt. The U.S. Embassy in Monrovia, reached by telephone, reported the capital unusually quiet.

Kugmeh quoted Liberian military chief of staff Lt. Gen. Henry Dubar as saying between 20 and 40 people had taken part in the abortive attempt to seize control of the West African nation.

They took control of the government radio station Tuesday morning, but government soldiers recaptured it in the afternoon, Kugmeh said.

Rebels who were not captured fled, Kugmeh said. The arrested insurgents, including the Cubans, were taken to the Executive Mansion and the Ministry of Defense, he said.

He said he expected the insurgents to be put on trial for attempting to overthrow the government.

Government troops also captured "sophisticated weapons from the Eastern bloc, including some from Czechoslovakia and one rocket launcher," Kugmeh said.

"Five persons on the government side were wounded and perhaps 10 or more rebels were killed," Kugmeh reported. In a Liberian radio broadcast Wednesday, monitored in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, Doe said his troops had foiled the coup attempt, killed 10 insurgents and captured 16.

Kugmeh quoted Dubar as telling a news conference in the Liberian capital that "key rebel leaders" had been arrested, and that most of the fighters were mercenaries from Cuba, the Ivory Coast, Sierra Leone and Guinea.

He did not give any more details on the nationalities of those who were captured.

The official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, denied any Cubans had been involved in the coup attempt. A dipatch from Havana, monitored in Mexico City, said Cuba had only diplomats in Liberia and said they followed Cuban policy of "no interference in the internal affairs of that state."

There was no immediate comment from Liberia's African neighbors. It was not immediately clear whether Liberia was accusing their governments of taking part in the coup attempt, or only non-government mercenaries based in those countries.

Black anti-apartheid groups

☐ United Democratic Front—The largest anti-apartheid coalition claims more than 2 million followers in 600 affiliated groups in black townships. The UDF accepts white participation in the fight for black majority rights but demands unconditional negotiations for power-sharing.

☐ Zulu Inkatha—A million-member organization of the Zulu tribe, it is headed by Gatsha Buthelezi, chief minister of the Kwa-Zulu homeland. He is an outspoken foe of apartheid but has been criticized by more militant activists who oppose the homeland system, which denies blacks rights in South Africa.

☐ African National Congress—Banned in 1960, the ANC went underground and began a sabotage campaign. As an exiled guerrilla group, it is trying to make the black townships "ungovernable." The government says UDF is a front for ANC, whose leader, Nelson Mandela, is serving a life prison term on charges of plotting sabotage.

☐ Azanian People's Organization—With the motto, "Black Man, you are on your own," its founder, the late Steve Biko, rejected white help in the liberation struggle. The group accepts a white presence in South Africa but not as part of the government.

☐ Pan Africanist Congress—An offshoot of ANC, this outlawed group rejects whites as indigenous to Africa and believes in "Africa for Africans." It wants whites neither in the struggle for black majority rule nor in the government.

SWAPO guerrillas attack town

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — Insurgents in the north of Namibia (South-West Africa) attacked a border town with mortars, rockets and small arms fire early today and six of them were killed by government forces pursuing them into Angola, the South African military said.

It was not clear whether the 3 a.m. strike against Ruacana represented the start of the Angolan-based South-West Africa People's Organization's annual effort to infiltrate the territory under cover of the rainy season.

The rebels have been fighting a guerrilla war for two decades against South African dominance in Namibia.

Strikers offer themselves to South African police

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 700 striking nonmedical workers at a black hospital voluntarily climbed into police vans today after police took several strike leaders into custody, police and witnesses said.

"The idea was, if you are arresting any of us, arrest us all," said a reporter who witnessed the arrests at Baragwanath Hospital in Johannesburg's black township of Soweto.

The hospital's non-medical staff, including cooks, cleaners and porters, walked out Wednesday to demand higher pay.

A police spokesman said 144 men and 574 women were being charged at a Soweto police station with attending an illegal gathering.

The spokesman said they probably would be released and told to appear in court Monday. He said they also might be charged with staging an illegal strike.

There was no count of the number on strike at the hospital, which employs about 8,000 people.

Baragwanath is the only hospital in Soweto and is considered the best black hospital in the country.

In Cape Town, the wife of a detained anti-apartheid activist said about 300 jailed activists began a three-day hunger strike Wednesday.

Heather Peterson, wife of detained Congregational minister Robert Peterson, said the fast was launched to support 32 activists at Pollsmoor Prison near Cape Town who began a week-long hunger strike Sunday. The 32, including Peterson, are demanding the government release people jailed under the July 21 state of emergency and allow prisoners access to lawyers.

She said those who began fasting Wednesday are at Victor Verster Prison in Paarl, east of Cape Town.

Police reported scattered rioting in 11 black townships nationwide from late Wednesday through this morning, but no new deaths in the 15-month-old anti-apartheid unrest that has left more than 800 people dead.

Witnesses at Baragwanath Hospital said hundreds of strikers were chanting and singing freedom songs this morning when police arrested about seven strike leaders.

"Then the crowd started swarming toward the police, and police chased the people down one of the roads on the hospital grounds and surrounded them. Then the strikers started getting into the vans themselves," said the reporter.

"The moment another police truck came in, they rushed for it like hotcakes, they packed inside and off they went to Moroka police station," he said. "Those remaining cheered and sang, and waited for more trucks to come."

A hospital spokesman said student nurses were refusing to work in sympathy. Medical and administrative staff were helping do the work of the strikers, but some operating facilities were shut down.

Black reporters who slipped past police into the hospital said conditions were chaotic, with long lines in the X-ray and emergency wards and very few meals being served.

South African offers Namibian election plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Africa Wednesday revealed the type of elections it envisions for Namibia but continued to link independence for the territory with the removal of an estimated 25,000 Cuban troops from Angola.

The insurgent South-West Africa People's Organization, which has been fighting since 1966 from bases in Angola for Namibia's independence, dismissed South Africa's move as a "calculated subterfuge."

Namibia, also known as South-West Africa, is between Angola and South Africa, which continues to administer the territory over the objections of the United Nations.

Foreign Minister Roelof F. "Pik" Botha notified U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar by letter that the South African government favored a system of proportional representation for elections leading to the independence of the territory.

Botha set no date, however, for implementation of the seven-year-old U.N. plan for independence.

Botha's notification came just before the Security Council met to hear demands by the non-aligned nations and the 51-nation U.N. African Group for comprehensive sanctions against South Africa for blocking Namibian independence.

South African Ambassador Kurt von Schirnding told the council, "We hope that the decision on the electoral system will go some way toward achieving progress toward the resolution of the last outstanding problems affecting the international settlement plan. The fact remains that a firm agreement must still be reached on the withdrawal of the Cubans from Angola."

The envoy also raised new doubts by his government on the impartiality of the United Nations, which under the independence plan is to supervise election of a constituent assembly in Namibia following a cease-fire between South Africa and SWAPO.

The world body, he said, had been "persistent in its adherence to bias in favor of SWAPO."

Special envoy says he's contacted kidnappers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury's special envoy said today he had made contact with kidnappers of missing Americans and that his efforts to free the hostages had "reached a critical and dangerous point."

The envoy, Terry Waite, told an impromptu news conference in the lobby of the Commodore Hotel in west Beirut, "Progress is being made and we're moving forward."

He declined to say how he made contact with the kidnappers for security reasons, but he said contacts had been established in several different ways.

His only demand is that he meet the captors face-to-face, but there also is a chance he will be allowed to visit the American hostages, Waite said.

"We have reached a very critical point and a very dangerous and difficult point. We have procedures being worked out now and I think we shall have those worked out in the course of the day," he said.

Waite flew from London on Wednesday and was driven by armed militiamen to a west Beirut hotel. He left three hours later and was driven to an undisclosed destination in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

Waite, a 46-year-old layman, walked today into the Commodore, base for foreign journalists in Beirut, and talked to reporters as he sipped coffee. He declined to say where he was staying.

His surprise appearance apparently came after he spotted reporters and photographers near where he was staying and feared they would jeopardize his mission.

Waite came to Beirut after four of the six missing Americans sent a letter to the archbishop of Canterbury in London last week. Waite launched his mission after he was in contact with an unidentified intermediary in Beirut.

Also today, the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio quoted the Rev. Jesse Jackson as appealing to the kidnappers for a meeting to negotiate the release of the hostages. An envoy sent by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar also arrived to seek the release of the Americans, a Briton and four Frenchmen.

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem group believed loyal to Iran's revolutionary partriarch, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has claimed it kidnapped the missing Americans and Frenchmen and said Oct. 4 it killed one American, diplomat William Buckley.

It released blurred photographs purported to be of Buckley's body, but U.S. officials say there is no proof Buckley died.

Four other hostages signed letters to President Reagan and Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie delivered last week to the Beirut bureau of The Associated Press. They are: Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of the AP; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, the university's dean of agriculture.

There has been no word lately on the sixth hostage, university librarian Peter Kilburn.

Waite reiterated to reporters today his plea to "give me some space" to conduct the delicate negotiations with the kidnappers.

"I'd like to make a particular plea that I'm not to be followed by anybody because if that happens, then that will jeopardize my own safety and the safety of other people," he said.

"It's extremely important because of the great, great sensitivity of the situation that I am left totally alone because anything I have to do beyond this point will have to be entirely by myself," Waite said.

"I will keep in touch with the press as far as I'm able, and make a sort of appearance. But I make a particular plea because of the danger and uncertainty surrounding the situation," he said.

Asked what progress he had made in the day since his arrival, Waite said: "I have been in touch (with the kidnappers)."

When asked who was holding the hostages, he said: "I don't want to say. I want to protect them as much as I want to protect myself.

"If I'm going to protect the lives of the hostages and protect my own life, I also want to protect the lives of the captors," he said.

"I'll be here as long as is necessary to see this through to a reasonable conclusion. If it got to the point where I think we're not making any progress, there's not any point in my staying," he said.

Ireland likely to have say in governing Ulster

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An agreement giving the Irish Republic a consultative role in running predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland appears imminent, and preparations are under way for the British and Irish prime ministers to sign it, newspapers said.

"The stage is set for the cruel betrayal of the Ulster unionist people," he said. Unionist is the word by which Protestants loyal to Britain refer to themselves.

Officials have kept a tight blanket of secrecy around the talks, which began in earnest last February.

FitzGerald is under bitter attack from his parliamentary opposition led by former Prime Minister Charles Haughey, who claims the deal would sell out the national goal of uniting the island that was partitioned 1921.

FitzGerald argues that unification is still a goal, but is so far off that something must be done in the meantime to ease the plight of Northern Ireland's Catholic minority.

Many Protestants, who comprise two-thirds of Ulster's 1.6 million population, have been angered by reports that Ireland will be allowed to open a secretariat in Belfast to exercise its consultative role.

It would represent the first time that Dublin has been recognized to have any say in the governing of the province, and the Protestants say it would inevitably weaken their link with Britain and could eventually force them into a union with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

Northern Ireland Catholics see the secretariat as a place to which they could take their grievances if British authorities could not help them.

Official: Mercenaries, Cubans behind coup

LONDON (AP) — A Liberian government official claimed soldiers captured mercenaries from Cuba and from neighboring African countries who took part in a failed attempt to topple President Samuel K. Doe.

Patrick Kugmeh, Doe's spokesman, also told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday that life in the capital city of Monrovia should be returning to normal today.

Some shooting was reported in Monrovia Wednesday night, but the city was otherwise calm, said Kugmeh. He attributed the "minor firing incidents" to soldiers patrolling the streets and said Doe himself had toured the city.

The British Foreign Office in London said its embassy reported that Doe had regained control following the Tuesday coup attempt. The U.S. Embassy in Monrovia, reached by telephone, reported the capital unusually quiet.

Kugmeh quoted Liberian military chief of staff Lt. Gen. Henry Dubar as saying between 20 and 40 people had taken part in the abortive attempt to seize control of the West African nation.

They took control of the government radio station Tuesday morning, but government soldiers recaptured it in the afternoon, Kugmeh said.

Rebels who were not captured fled, Kugmeh said. The arrested insurgents, including the Cubans, were taken to the Executive Mansion and the Ministry of Defense, he said.

He said he expected the insurgents to be put on trial for attempting to overthrow the government.

Government troops also captured "sophisticated weapons from the Eastern bloc, including some from Czechoslovakia and one rocket launcher," Kugmeh said.

"Five persons on the government side were wounded and perhaps 10 or more rebels were killed," Kugmeh reported. In a Liberian radio broadcast Wednesday, monitored in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, Doe said his troops had foiled the coup attempt, killed 10 insurgents and captured 16.

Kugmeh quoted Dubar as telling a news conference in the Liberian capital that "key rebel leaders" had been arrested, and that most of the fighters were mercenaries from Cuba, the Ivory Coast, Sierra Leone and Guinea.

He did not give any more details on the nationalities of those who were captured.

The official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, denied any Cubans had been involved in the coup attempt. A dipatch from Havana, monitored in Mexico City, said Cuba had only diplomats in Liberia and said they followed Cuban policy of "no interference in the internal affairs of that state."

There was no immediate comment from Liberia's African neighbors. It was not immediately clear whether Liberia was accusing their governments of taking part in the coup attempt, or only non-government mercenaries based in those countries.

South African politics

Black anti-apartheid groups

☐ United Democratic Front—The largest anti-apartheid coalition claims more than 2 million followers in 600 affiliated groups in black townships. The UDF accepts white participation in the fight for black majority rights but demands unconditional negotiations for power-sharing.

☐ Zulu Inkatha—A million-member organization of the Zulu tribe, it is headed by Gatsha Buthelezi, chief minister of the Kwa-Zulu homeland. He is an outspoken foe of apartheid but has been criticized by more militant activists who oppose the homeland system, which denies blacks rights in South Africa.

☐ African National Congress—Banned in 1960, the ANC went underground and began a sabotage campaign. As an exiled guerrilla group, it is trying to make the black townships "ungovernable." The government says UDF is a front for ANC, whose leader, Nelson Mandela, is serving a life prison term on charges of plotting sabotage.

☐ Azanian People's Organization—With the motto, "Black Man, you are on your own," its founder, the late Steve Biko, rejected white help in the liberation struggle. The group accepts a white presence in South Africa but not as part of the government.

☐ Pan Africanist Congress—An offshoot of ANC, this outlawed group rejects whites as indigenous to Africa and believes in "Africa for Africans." It wants whites neither in the struggle for black majority rule nor in the government.

SWAPO guerrillas attack town

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — Insurgents in the north of Namibia (South-West Africa) attacked a border town with mortars, rockets and small arms fire early today and six of them were killed by government forces pursuing them into Angola, the South African military said.

It was not clear whether the 3 a.m. strike against Ruacana represented the start of the Angolan-based South-West Africa People's Organization's annual effort to infiltrate the territory under cover of the rainy season.

The rebels have been fighting a guerrilla war for two decades against South African dominance in Namibia.

Strikers offer themselves to South African police

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 700 striking non-medical workers at a black hospital voluntarily climbed into police vans today after police took several strike leaders into custody, police and witnesses said.

"The idea was, if you are arresting any of us, arrest us all," said a reporter who witnessed the arrests at Baragwanath Hospital in Johannesburg's black township of Soweto.

The hospital's non-medical staff, including cooks, cleaners and porters, walked out Wednesday to demand higher pay.

A police spokesman said 144 men and 574 women were being charged at a Soweto police station with attending an illegal gathering.

The spokesman said they probably would be released and told to appear in court Monday. He said they also might be charged with staging an illegal strike.

There was no count of the number on strike at the hospital, which employs about 8,000 people.

Baragwanath is the only hospital in Soweto and is considered the best black hospital in the country.

In Cape Town, the wife of a detained anti-apartheid activist said about 300 jailed activists began a three-day hunger strike Wednesday.

Heather Peterson, wife of detained Congregational minister Robert Peterson, said the fast was launched to support 32 activists at Pollsmoor Prison near Cape Town who began a week-long hunger strike Sunday. The 32, including Peterson, are demanding the government release people jailed under the July 21 state of emergency and allow prisoners access to lawyers.

She said those who began fasting Wednesday are at Victor Verster Prison in Paarl, east of Cape Town.

Police reported scattered rioting in 11 black townships nationwide from late Wednesday through this morning, but no new deaths in the 15-month-old anti-apartheid unrest that has left more than 800 people dead.

Witnesses at Baragwanath Hospital said hundreds of strikers were chanting and singing freedom songs this morning when police arrested about seven strike leaders.

"Then the crowd started swarming toward the police, and police chased the people down one of the roads on the hospital grounds and surrounded them. Then the strikers started getting into the vans themselves," said the reporter.

"The moment another police truck came in, they rushed for it like hotcakes, they packed inside and off they went to Moroka police station," he said. "Those remaining cheered and sang, and waited for more trucks to come."

A hospital spokesman said student nurses were refusing to work in sympathy. Medical and administrative staff were helping do the work of the strikers, but some operating facilities were shut down.

Black reporters who slipped past police into the hospital said conditions were chaotic, with long lines in the X-ray and emergency wards and very few meals being served.

South African offers Namibian election plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Africa Wednesday revealed the type of elections it envisions for Namibia but continued to link independence for the territory with the removal of an estimated 25,000 Cuban troops from Angola.

The insurgent South-West Africa People's Organization, which has been fighting since 1966 from bases in Angola for Namibia's independence, dismissed South Africa's move as a "calculated subterfuge."

Namibia, also known as South-West Africa, is between Angola and South Africa, which continues to administer the territory over the objections of the United Nations.

Foreign Minister Roelof F. "Pik" Botha notified U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar by letter that the South African government favored a system of proportional representation for elections leading to the independence of the territory.

Botha set no date, however, for implementation of the seven-year-old U.N. plan for independence.

Botha's notification came just before the Security Council met to hear demands by the non-aligned nations and the 51-nation U.N. African Group for comprehensive sanctions against South Africa for blocking Namibian independence.

South African Ambassador Kurt von Schirnding told the council, "We hope that the decision on the electoral system will go some way toward achieving progress toward the resolution of the last outstanding problems affecting the international settlement plan. The fact remains that a firm agreement must still be reached on the withdrawal of the Cubans from Angola."

The envoy also raised new doubts by his government on the impartiality of the United Nations, which under the independence plan is to supervise election of a constituent assembly in Namibia following a cease-fire between South Africa and SWAPO.

The world body, he said, had been "persistent in its adherence to bias in favor of SWAPO."

Pigskin rivalry

If one were to ask the question: "Where did high school football rivalry originate?" the correct answer would not be "Midland and Odessa."

But it would be almost impossible to convince anyone familiar with the Odessa Permian-Midland Lee rivalry of that fact. To long-term followers of the rivalry, the Mojo-Rebel tradition ranks up with the Texas-Oklahoma collegiate matchup or the Dallas Cowboys-Washington Redskins professional battle.

So it was virtually understandable that the two communities took it in stride when reporters for Time magazine showed up in October to cover this year's meeting of the two teams. After all, the rivalry was well known enough that local television stations bid for broadcast rights for the game, and the winner — KTPX-TV — pre-empted the National League baseball playoffs to air the game Thursday, Oct. 10.

It was no small potatoes, either, that the game had been sold out since before the season even began.

That's merely the brand of high school football rivalry in the Permian Basin evidenced by Odessa Permian and Midland Lee high schools.

Now Time is on local newsstands and on Page 14 is Gregory Jaynes' American Scene view of the rivalry between Lee and Permian. It's a view some readers doubtless will find heavy on the "corn" — notably when Jaynes ladles on the syrup when referring to how residents say the oil business, thawlbidness.

But the point of the Time article is not — and should not — be missed. Here are two communities strongly supportive of a high school football rivalry unequalled in much of the state, even the nation.

The rivalry is strong enough to eclipse other high school football teams in both cities, outstanding teams in the immediate area, and even famous statewide football rivalries. That means there are thousands of fans in both Midland and Odessa who stand behind their schools 100% and that the support stems from a single source.

No, high school football rivalry didn't originate in Midland and Odessa. But it's more than clear it's being perfected in the two cities.

Reason to punish

Two Border Patrol agents who sent a defecting Soviet seaman back to his ship are to be disciplined. We believe that's entirely appropriate.

Commissioner Alan Nelson of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said the two acted hastily and violated INS regulations when they forced seaman Miroslav Medvid to return to the Russian grain ship Marshal Koniev, which was anchored in the Mississippi River north of New Orleans Oct. 24.

Irene Padoch, an interpreter, spoke to Medvid on the telephone after he had jumped ship and swam ashore. She insists she then told the agents that Medvid was pleading for political asylum. But the agents say they believed Medvid was a stowaway who did not want asylum.

They turned him over to a shipping agent who sent him back to the grain vessel. While returning, Medvid once again jumped into the Mississippi and swam ashore. Soviet seamen came ashore to take Medvid physically in charge.

Later, the State Department arranged for the sailor to be taken aboard a Coast Guard cutter for questioning. Medvid, obviously frightened by his Soviet superiors, said repeatedly that he wanted to go back to the Soviet Union. The Soviet vessel finally left American waters, with Medvid aboard.

Two concerns are obvious. First, the fact that Medvid was struggling to get away from the Soviet ship is evidenced by his diving twice into the Mississippi. Second, the fact that Medvid may be mistreated since he is back under the jurisdiction of Soviet officials is likely.

The two Border Patrol agents made an incredible and humanly expensive blunder. They failed to follow regulations which require them to notify their superiors in such cases.

It is the policy of the United States to take in the politically oppressed. Obviously we didn't in the case of Miroslav Medvid. Officials should take steps to make certain such blunders do not occur in the future.

Another View:

Poor Helmsmanship

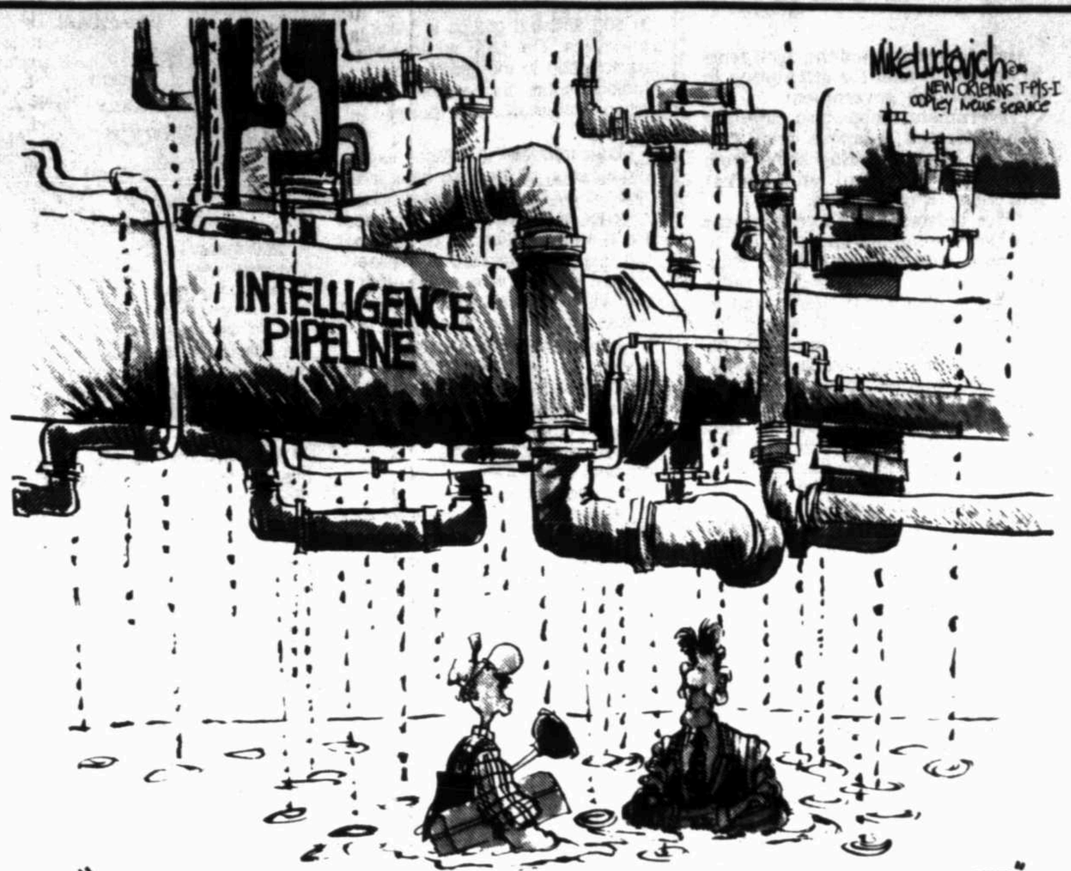

The Immigration and Naturalization Service badly botched its handling of the Ukrainian sailor, Miroslav Medvid, who twice jumped overboard and whom the INS hauled back, kicking and screaming, to his Soviet ship. The service's methods for distinguishing a plea for asylum from an AWOL lark were so inept as to be cruel. They must be revised, and the INS's agents retrained, so that the same tragedy of errors doesn't happen again.

The State Department, when it finally got Medvid off his ship for the interview he should have had days earlier, made so many mistakes of its own that it's impossible to put much faith in the department's eventual conclusion that Medvid genuinely wanted to go home. Too much about his physical condition — about the drugs the Soviets gave him and the threats they may have made to his family — was simply unexamined. As a result, no one here knows if the sailor's ultimate decision not to defect was freely taken. And that failure of procedure, too, should be investigated — as should the failure of communication among federal bureaucracies, which also marked this confusing incident.

But for sheer stupidity, none of those errors matches the dangerous farce played out by Sen. Jesse Helms and his colleagues on the Senate Agriculture Committee, who rather than calling for the appropriate investigations of what went wrong, decided to take the matter into their own hands. With their subpoena hijinks, their independent negotiations with the Soviet Embassy, their silly stuffing of legal papers into cigarette cartons — and with the confusion they wreaked on the Coast Guard, which was first ordered to hold up the Soviet ship and then to escort it to safety — Helms and company could have precipitated a major international incident. They did create a major international embarrassment.

If the Soviet Union had chosen to play tit for tat, the senator's grandstanding could have endangered the safety of American citizens in the Soviet Union. As it was, however, the senator "only" managed to stage a spectacle in which, for several days, the U.S. government spoke to the world with a dozen conflicting voices, in which the control of its own Coast Guard appeared to be up for grabs, and in which the orderly execution of American foreign policy was shown to play second fiddle to senatorial theater.

Solons need prod to cut waste

WASHINGTON — The No. 1 concern of the American people, according to a confidential survey by President Reagan's pollster, is the way the federal government squanders their money.

Jack Anderson

Pollster Richard Wirthlin found that Americans are fed up with federal splurging. They are angry about multi-billion-dollar overcharges for weaponry; they are tired of footing the bill for $640 toilet seats and $659 ashtrays; they want an end to wasteful procurement practices.

The drive against government waste is spearheaded by J. Peter Grace, a crusty industrialist who knows how to track a dollar through the federal maze. He has found 2,478 ways to reduce government waste, inefficiency and overspending.

For his trouble, he has been bitterly assailed by special interests that would lose benefits if federal spending is cut. He has been savaged, too, by government administrators who would lose salary and status if their budgets were reduced.

But he has the support of President Reagan, who invited him to meet behind closed doors with the Cabinet a few days ago. The president said he hoped to implement 83 percent of Grace's recommendations. Reagan ordered the Cabinet to carry out these reforms; he also asked his new budget director, Jim Miller, to report to him regularly on the progress.

Most of the reforms, however, will require congressional action. And the special interests have usually been able to obstruct fiscal reforms by bringing intense political pressure on Congress. Grace hopes to counter the special interests by appealing to the public interest; he will call upon the American people to bring their own pressure on Congress.

"We want to build a broad coalition of concerned citizens," he says, "dedicated to the overall well-being of our nation, representing the rights of the many rather than the demands of the few."

Thus, members of Congress will be confronted with an uncomfortable choice: whether to succumb to the pressure of the organized lobbies or to face an aroused citizenry. Many members are rushing to join the Grace Caucus, which is pushing legislation to implement Peter Grace's proposals.

Even some lobbying groups have put the general interest ahead of their special interests. For example, 38 trade associations, under the leadership of public advocate Wayne Smith, are actively lobbying on Capitol Hill for action on Grace's recommendations.

The U.S. Jaycees has received a grant from the J.M. Foundation to educate the public on government waste. The Jaycees, according to spokesman Mike Fernandes, hope to "wake up the nation to what's going on in Washington."

Also, most of the watchdog agencies — the General Accounting Office, Congressional Budget Office and the federal government's own inspectors general — endorse Grace's objectives, though they disagree on some of the specifics.

Meanwhile, the voters now have a way to determine whether their congressmen support the war on waste. They need merely to inquire whether the congressmen belong to the Grace Caucus.

Footnote: Jack Anderson is co-chairman with Peter Grace of the campaign to reduce government waste.

NO PLACE TO HIDE: Basil Tsakos, the Greek entrepreneur and arms dealer, skipped town for Athens when his attempt to buy support for an African oil pipeline project made headlines here. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., helped promote the project while his wife was being paid $50,000 in consulting fees by Tsakos. The senator was cleared by his colleagues and re-elected by his constituents, and his wife gave the $50,000 to charity. But the free-spending Tsakos is now the subject of an investigation by the Greek government, which wants to know if he bribed Greek defense officials in a tank sale some years back.

MINI-EDITORIAL: A new vigilante group is "monitoring" professors who are suspected of spreading "liberal" ideas on American college campuses. This transparent effort to intimidate teachers into conformity with the group's views is repugnant enough. The last thing we need is a sophomore lynch mob setting out to blacklist professors who may simply be trying to promote a free exchange of ideas among their students. But the self-appointed witch-hunters are calling themselves "Accuracy in Academia," and there's no such word in Webster's unabridged; the proper word is "academe." Come, come folks, let's be accurate, shall we?

GEORGE F. WILL

'Shoah': Telling the unspeakable

WASHINGTON — There has never been anything like it, or its subject, so there is something flat about saying that "Shoah" is the finest film ever. So say this: It is the noblest use to which cinema — the technology, the techniques — has been put, ever.

George F. Will

Claude Lanzmann's nine-and-a-half hour masterpiece "Shoah" (the Hebrew word for annihilation) contains a frame from the '40s. It is an elicitation of memories of the Holocaust and it proves that the unspeakable is not inexpressible.

No subject is too large or lurid to be encompassed by words well chosen. And when words are joined with pictures that do not subordinate the words to visual values, even plain words are set like diamonds in platinum.

Cinema rarely rises from a craft to an art. Usually it just manufactures sensory blizzards for persons too passive to manage the active engagement of mind that even light reading requires. Cinema, with its enervating bath of sights and sounds, usually is a medium for modest attention spans. But, paradoxically, "Shoah," a near-perfection of cinematic art, is brilliant because it is an act of cinematic modesty. It uses pictures — usually of people plainly framed or landscapes slowly panned — as a sort of silent music behind the words.

Rhetorical flourishes are few and far between. (A death-camp survivor says: "If you could lick my heart, it would poison you.") There are some moments of savage illumination, as when an SS veteran replies to a question about how many were killed at a particular place: "Four something — four hundred thousand or forty thousand." As eloquent as even the most eloquent words are the silences, the pauses, the flickering expressions as facial muscles register the struggle for composure.

The most stunning episode in this shattering film lasts about five minutes and involves "only" the talk of a barber now in Israel. While he clips the hair of a customer he talks, never needing to raise his voice to be heard over the small sounds of a familiar ambience. He describes his duties in Treblinka, cutting hair from naked women on the threshold of the gas chamber, and the day a fellow barber saw his wife and sister enter the room.

The film's recurring image is of trains rolling across Poland's flat terrain. There is a sinisterness, a menace in the mere clackety-clack of wheels rolling down a single track between lovely pines toward a shimmering clearing, a camp. A locomotive engineer, old now, his face the texture of elm bark, tells how he was plied with vodka to enable him to push to unloading platforms the freight cars packed with Jews dying of thirst.

One reviewer got it exactly right when he described Lanzmann as a "cinematic pointillist." He works in minutiae which, cumulatively, become portentous. He asks a question such as, "Was this road asphalted then?" and the person questioned begins to talk and a narrative builds, detail piled upon detail, until you have hell in a monotone, and it is the more hellish for its matter-of-factness.

One person, after seeing "Shoah," wrote to Lanzmann that it was the first time he had heard the cry of an infant in the gas chamber. He had not, of course. What he had heard was the quiet description by an Auschwitz survivor of the way bodies were jumbled when the gas-chamber doors opened, and what that jumble of flesh and blood and vomit and excrement told about the final minutes in the dark when fathers lost their grips on their sons and the strong climbed over the weak as the gas fumes rose.

Here is a task — a duty — for Jewish and other organizations: subsidize the sale of cassettes of this film. No church or school should be without it. Lanzmann's little questions ("What color was the truck?") wind up answering one big question: What was it like? The answer to that contains the answer to another big question, the question that is the title of the only other film Lanzmann has made: "Why Israel?"

The Nazi project was to erase European Jewry — not just kill but erase traces. So the Nazis ground to dust the bones that would not burn and threw the dust in rivers and lakes. "Shoah," like Solzhenitsyn's "Gulag," is an act of continuing resistance to a continuing atrocity.

Continuing? Yes, it is an assertion of memory against a program of erasure, a program that will not be fulfilled until memory fades and indifference reigns. Lanzmann cites a philosopher's statement that Europe's massacred Jews "are not just of the past, they are the presence of an absence." Wherever "Shoah" is seen, and for as long as it lasts, they are present.

Language a barrier at summit

WASHINGTON — President Reagan upped the ante Wednesday — just two days before his summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev — by suggesting it is time to "stop futzing around." — From front page of USA Today, November 7, 1985

Art Buchwald

When Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev read the quote he called in his Kremlin advisers.

"What does futzing mean?" he asked them.

"I don't know," his foreign minister said. "We've asked the White House to clarify it. Here is their reply: 'Don't play dumb. You do it all the time.'"

Gorbachev was furious. "The President knows we don't know. Why would he send us a message we don't understand? Can't anyone in our embassy in Washington find out what it means?"

"Our ambassador advises us futzing has to do with putting our medium-range missiles along the Czech border."

A Soviet marshal said, "He's mistaken. It refers to the buildup of conventional forces in Poland. The Americans are saying they want us to pull them out or they will futz us."

"You're both wrong," the KGB director said. "Futzing is another word for defecting. Reagan couldn't believe it when our man, after defecting, turned around and redefected to us. We futzed the CIA and the President didn't like it."

Gorbachev said, "You all have theories but you don't have facts. How can I face Reagan in Geneva when I have no idea what he is talking about?"

The General Secretary's scientific adviser said, "My people have studied the message and conclude it has to do with 'Star Wars.' Reagan was talking about the shield the U.S. plans to build to prevent our missiles from hitting them."

Gorbachev declared, "What is my response if he tells me in Geneva to stop futzing around?"

"You tell him you'll be glad to when he stops futzing around with 'Star Wars,' and not a minute sooner."

"He won't go for it," Gorbachev said. "Why don't I offer to cut back on futzing by 50 percent, provided Reagan does the same?"

The Soviet marshal said, "They will cheat."

"Then we'll cheat too. We will match them futz for futz," Gorbachev told them. "But I still have the feeling the President was talking about something else."

The foreign minister said, "Did you do any futzing in your private life that Reagan may have been referring to?"

Gorbachev shouted, "They're lies, all lies."

The KGB director said, "I can attest to that."

The press chief said, "Perhaps the President misspoke and didn't mean to use the word futzing at all. He's been known to say something and then take it back three hours later."

Gorbachev was getting impatient. "We can't speculate. We have to find out exactly what his message meant or cancel the summit."

A secretary came into the room and handed a cable to the KGB director whose eyes almost popped out of his head.

"Our language experts have tracked down the word. It's Yiddish and means 'fooling around, or not being serious.'"

"You're crazy. What is Ronald Reagan doing speaking Yiddish?" the foreign minister said.

"It makes you wonder," Gorbachev mused. "Find out what his name was before he changed it to Reagan."

"Yes, sir," the KGB director said. "And," Gorbachev continued, "also get me a Yiddish dictionary so I can answer him in kind."

"We can't, sir. They've all been burned."

Gorbachev not prepared to budge

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's concern for the Soviet economy gives new impetus toward improving U.S.-Soviet relations, but he will not be pushed at the Geneva summit into positions that the Kremlin might later regret.

In the months since the meeting with President Reagan was announced, the Soviet Uion has taken the public position that arms control should be the main business.

Gorbachev and his staff have been hitting at the issue relentlessly but have conceded there is little chance of any breakthrough at the two-day summit, which begins Tuesday. At the same time, the Soviets have outlined their counterattack on human rights and regional issues, indicating they do not plan to give ground.

In the years before the summit, the Soviet Union has faced criticism from the West for its crackdown in Poland, the intervention in Afghanistan, the downing of the South Korean airliner and human rights concerns. The Kremlin also walked out of the 1983 arms control talks and underwent three leadership changes.

Next week's meeting is a political boost for Gorbachev, and any positive developments will give the 54-year-old leader momentum as he forges domestic policies and heads into the all-important National Communist Party Congress in February.

However, in the days leading up to the summit it appeared the prospects of a joint U.S.-Soviet declaration, especially on arms control, were dim.

Soviet commentaries preparing the public for the summit began to reflect the Washington position that the meeting at best would constitute a "new start" in superpower relations and that it was unrealistic to expect meaningful results.

The commentaries placed the blame on the United States for its refusal to give up the Strategic Defense Initiative, to reciprocate a Soviet nuclear test moratorium and for testing an anti-satellite weapon.

"All this continues and raises doubts as to what the Americans expect in fact from the Geneva meeting," said Georgy Arbatov, head of the U.S.A.-Canada Institute, the chief Kremlin think tank of American politics, economics and society. "Do they want to wreck it, or do they want to provoke the Soviet Union to do so?"

U.S. specialists visit crash site

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. specialists will comb what Vietnamese officials say is the site of a B-52 crash near Hanoi in the first joint search by the two former foes for the remains of Americans missing in the Vietnam War, both sides said today.

An official at the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok said the excavation to be carried out next Monday by members of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center and other American officials is a "milestone."

"We have attempted to gain agreement for the joint excavation and activities and this is the first one," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

He said the Vietnamese previously have said such joint efforts were not appropriate since the two countries did not maintain diplomatic relations. Communist North Vietnam toppled the U.S.-supported regime of South Vietnam in April 1975.

According to the Vietnamese, the B-52 bomber was shot down during the 1972 Christmas air offensive that then-President Nixon ordered on the Hanoi-Haiphong area.

The U.S. Embassy official said about a dozen American B-52s were downed during that period. A B-52 normally carries a crew of six persons.

The official Vietnamese news agency, monitored today in Bangkok, said the excavation will take place in Yen Thuong village in the district of Gia Lam. The official at the U.S. Embassy said the Americans did not know if a B-52 crashed at that location, but said they had no reason to disbelieve the Vietnamese account.

The U.S. Embassy official said the four-man team from the casualty center was holding a routine "technical meeting" with Vietnamese officials in Hanoi. The two sides discuss cases of the remains of missing Americans and ways to retrieve them at the sessions, which Hanoi recently agreed to increase from four to six a year.

WORLD in brief

Resignation puts Zimbabwe closer to one-party state

HARARE, Zimbabwe (LAT) — The resignation of Zimbabwe's first black prime minister, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, from his party, the United African National Council, pushes his party toward extinction and moves Zimbabwe another step closer to becoming a one-party state.

The 60-year-old bishop, who was government leader in 1979, had tendered his resignation in a letter sent two months ago to party officials here, leaving the party in the hands of remnants of its hierarchy, but there have been no central committee or national executive meetings since national elections in early July.

The diminutive bishop secretly left the country on the first day of the voting and went to the United States, where he was on leave from his studies at the United Methodist Church's Scarrit College in Nashville, Tenn. His leave ended in October, but he has applied for an extension and is not expected to return to Zimbabwe until July.

Last month, the bishop narrowly avoided having his luxurious home in the exclusive Harare suburb of Borrowdale auctioned off after he failed to keep up mortgage payments. The payments were eventually made in time, and the auction was canceled.

In the July elections, his party gathered only 65,000 votes and won no seats, and thousands of supporters are believed to have defected since then. The ruling Zimbabwe African National Union (Patriotic Front), also known as ZANU (PF), won 2.2 million votes in the same election.

Ship's hijackers to be tried

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Four Palestinians accused of hijacking the Achille Lauro cruise ship last month will be tried Monday, a prosecutor said. But they and an alleged accomplice will first face charges of possessing illegal arms and explosives.

A second trial on charges of murder and kidnapping would come later, the prosecutor said Wednesday. Leon Klinghoffer, a passenger from New York, was shot to death and thrown overboard during the hijacking.

Judicial sources said an arrest warrant was issued for Mohammed Abbas, a PLO official accused by the United States of masterminding the hijacking. He had been allowed earlier to leave Italy for Yugoslavia. His whereabouts after leaving Yugoslavia has not been confirmed, although he holds an Iraqi passport.

Genoa deputy prosecutor Francesco Meloni refused to confirm that an arrest warrant was issued for Abbas. But he said 11 arrest warrants have been issued in connection with the hijacking.

Meloni said the five men will be tried on charges of possessing, and illegally bringing into Italy, four Soviet-made Kalashnikov automatic rifles, eight hand grenades and nine detonators. If convicted, each could be sentenced to three to 12 years in prison and a fine.

'Peaceniks' detained

MOSCOW (AP) — Two members of a peace group were detained en route to the U.S. Embassy Wednesday with signatures on an appeal to President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, a member of the group said.

A caller identifying himself as Yuri Medvedkov of the Committee to Establish Trust Between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A., told The Associated Press that nine other members of the group were held briefly, either at home or on their way to the meeting, then released.

He said two plainclothes policemen and a uniformed officer arrested Nikolai Khramov and Larisa Chukayeva and took them to a local militia station.

Last week, Medvedkov said, the group distributed to Western embassies and news organizations what he called an open letter to Gorbachev and Reagan concerning their summit Tuesday and Wednesday in Geneva, Switzerland.

U.N. condemns Soviets

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Pakistani diplomat says the General Assembly's overwhelming approval of a resolution demanding Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan will help President Reagan at next week's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The assembly Wednesday voted 122-19 for the resolution, the largest margin on the issue in its six years before the world body. Twelve members abstained.

Counties forecasts

Gaines and Andrews counties: Tonight cold with 40 percent chance of showers, becoming mostly freezing rain or snow late tonight. Little or no accumulations. Low near 30. Wind northeast 10 to 20 mph. Friday partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of show showers and a high in the mid-40s. Wind north 5 to 15 mph.

Temperatures fall; Dusting of snow possible in Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

A drop in temperatures, along with a chance of showers, make the likelihood of snow a possibility in the Permian Basin area tonight, but no accumulation is expected, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Temperatures are expected to dip to a low in the mid-30s tonight with a 20 percent chance of showers, possibly mixed with snow, forecasters said. Winds will be from the northeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Conditions are expected to clear somewhat Friday as partly cloudy skies and a high in the lower 50s are forecast. Winds will decrease from the north at less than 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 77 was 6 degrees below the record set in 1973. This morning's low was 52 degrees above the 1976 record of 13 degrees.

STATE

A winter storm watch has been issued for extreme northern sections of the Texas Panhandle for late tonight and Friday.

Forecasters say there may be as much as two to four inches of snow in northern sections of the Panhandle by late Friday and snow may fall as far south as the Midland-Odessa area during the night and early Friday. But they say there will be no accumulation in that area of the South Plains.

Forecasters say cold moist air associated with a low aloft that was over northern Arizona early today is expected to move eastward through Friday crossing the watch area.

A low pressure system in southeast New Mexico will continue to draw colder air in from the north and moist and relatively warm air in from the southeast.

Scatttered showers and thunderstorms in the the Panhandle southward early today were expected to gradually change to mixed rain and snow and freezing rain and eventually snow late tonight and Friday.

It was possible a winter storm warning may have to be issued for the area later today, forecasters said.

NATION

Snow fell today from northern Utah through central Minnesota from a lingering storm that left Wyoming buried under two feet of snow, and heavy thunderstorms from Oklahoma to Illinois triggered flash flood watches.

Southwest Missouri got more than 5 inches of rain in 36 hours, with more expected. A flood warning for the Spring and Shoal rivers was posted through the morning.

Young shatters guard's image

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Football's position of offensive guard could use its own public relations firm. The image definitely needs some polish.

You know the offensive guard. He's the one who can't walk and chew gum at the same time — the guy who speaks in Neanderthalic syllables. He's the hulk for whom practical jokes were made.

About the only positive image for a guard ever to come out of Hollywood is the role of body guard and chief protector, but he is never allowed to have a mind of his own.

So what is a Jake Young doing at offensive guard for Midland Lee's playoff bound Rebels? This could be the image mismatch of the century.

At 6-foot-5 and 220 pounds, Young fits the obvious image, but that's about as far as you can carry any preconceived ideas.

MANY THINK Young might be Lee's most valuable player in 1985. Coaches across the state, both high school and college, sing praises of Young. Opponents sit up nights trying to figure out ways to minimize his blocking talents. College coaches call him a "blue chip" prospect.

And this kid can chew a fist full of gum and walk a tightrope at the same time. He is president of the Lee student body, a member of the National Honor Society and owns a grade point average that is higher than Hollywood's IQ.

Young also has been a starting guard for the Rebels in the last 24 games. Lee has posted a record of 20-4 over that two-year span.

So, with talent and brains to match, how come a Jake Young plays offensive guard? Lee offensive line coach David Browning has the answer.

"We always try to put our bigger and better blockers at the guard position," said Browning. "To win in this district, you have to control the defensive tackles. It takes a good athlete to be able to block a big defensive lineman, but at the same time own enough speed to lead the power sweeps. Our guards have to be big, mobile and agile.

"Obviously, Jake fits the mold of what we are looking for at guard. He's big enough, has great feet, can stay on a block and has great acceleration."

Browning, a former offensive lineman himself at Texas Tech, added, "I know what people think of offensive linemen, but you have to be pretty smart to play in the line at Lee because the things we do on the field are so complex. You have to be able to adjust on the field from series to series."

Young has almost become a legend among Lee lineman. About the only glory that a Rebel lineman can hold onto is a statistic called "pancakes."

Browning says, "A pancake is a hit where the opponent's head is the first thing to hit the ground. We grade the films every week and a pancake has to be on the film. All the kids try to talk you into to giving them some that weren't on film."

AS A junior, Young set a Lee record with 24 pancakes in 14 games. This year he has 27 in just 10 games and looking for more Saturday against Amarillo High at 2 p.m. in Lubbock's Jones Stadium as the state playoffs begin.

Still, offensive guard isn't a glory position. Young does his work in almost total obscurity as far as the fans are concerned. It makes little difference to Young.

"I have my reward if the team does well," says Young. "There aren't a lot of ways that an offensive lineman can tell how good or bad he is, but if the team has a good offensive output, it shows you've done your job.

"Really, my only goal is for the team to be as good as the '83 bunch and go to the state finals. We've still got a lot of work to do before that happens."

Young played at around 180 pounds as a junior, but reported before school at 220 with no excess fat.

"That took a lot of eating and working out every day with weights," responded Young.

Still, Young considers himself a student first, but admits that it has been tougher this year keeping the grades at the high level he expects. The state's new no-pass, no-play rule has had an effect — even on the good students.

"It's been hard on everybody. The burden has been on grades because it's such a big deal now. But everyone has kept them up so far," said Young.

Going into the season, Lee knew it would be strong in the offensive line. Browning was smiling all summer long. Lee returned six starters on the offensive front, led by Young's 14 starts last season.

Guard counterpart Ricky Lee has started in 18 games, center Wade Wiesepape in 13 and tackle Mike Little in 16. Tight ends Anthony Dickens and David Almand have combined for 24 starts in two years with both playing in all those games.

It's a crew that makes offensive backs shine and opposing defenses shrink in fear.

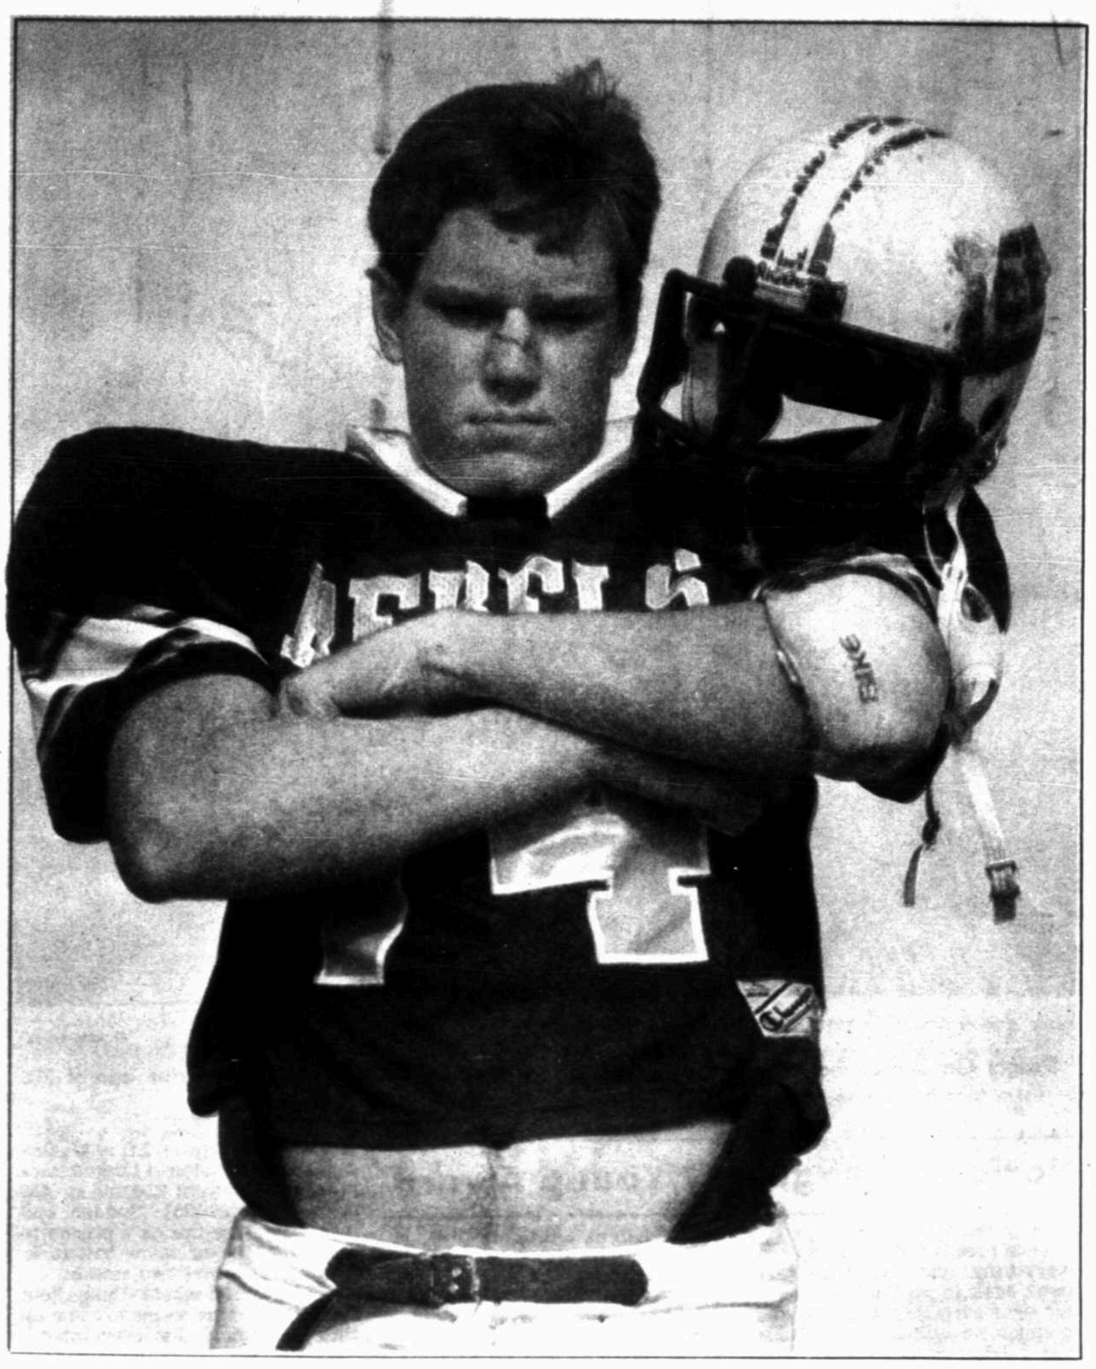

"It's been easy coaching the Hawgs this year," said Browning. "I did all my work last year. They were a little green when we started, but they've earned the veteran status now.

"I may be prejudiced, but I really feel like we have the best two guards and center in the league. As a group, I think Lee and Young are the best pair of guards I've had in the eight years I've coached at Lee. And you can't say enough about what the others have done."

Young also thinks 1985 has been easier for the offensive line.

"We've worked together four years now and we now know what each other is thinking even before it happens," says Young. "The level of communication is better and everyone knows what to do. Coach Browning has brought us along together and I think we are much more experienced than at this time last year."

In fact, Lee's offensive line has been so good this year that Browning has been seen wearing a pin labeled, "I'm High on the Hawg." A rare compliment from a coach who treats workouts like a "Hawg Swallow."

Sophomore key to Owls' playoff bid

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

BIG LAKE — They say you can't change horses in midstream, but because of injuries, Reagan County was forced to do that this season and they did just fine, thank you.

With sophomore Scott Lipsey taking charge at quarterback for injured Bobby Gunnels, coach Ronnie Reeger and the Owls squeezed into a runnerup spot in District 8-2A and will play District 7-2A winner Van Horn Friday night at 7:30 in Fort Stockton in a Bi-district matchup. The winner will play the Shallowater-Haskell winner in an Area contest.

The Owls were the preseason favorite in 8-2A, but when Gunnels, a three-year starter, went down and with sophomore Lipsey at the controls, they lost their first district game to McCamey. The picture looked bleak. Reeger stuck to his guns and Reagan County won its final four games to advance to the playoffs.

VAN HORN, 4-0, 4-5 on the season, did not win a game in pre-district play but turned on the juice when the season was on the line. Coach Glenn Reyes' team became a defensive dream, allowing just 19 points in district play.

"Our defense has held us together," Reyes said. "But Reagan County is really impressive. We'll have to play an errorless ballgame. You can't get away with mistakes against them."

The Owls have made a bruising ground game their bread and butter this season, and after a brief transition period, Lipsey has taken control of the Owl offense.

"Scott has done a heckuva' job for us since taking over," Reeger said. "We've changed some things up to utilize his strength. We're running more option-type plays. He's a good runner and he reads the defense very well for a sophomore. He picks things up very quickly."

WITH LIPSEY in charge, the Owls have turned from an aerial squadron to a ground battalion. Not only because Lipsey doesn't throw as well as Gunnels, but because Lipsey is also the team's leading receiver, catching 19 passes in the first five games.

Wilkins, James cross coaching paths again

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — Odessa Permian and the playoff trail are well known to each other. It's almost etched in stone that the two will meet at the conclusion of every football season. This year is no exception.

The Panthers are making their sixth consecutive trip down the path, their 15th in 25 years. They've followed the path to its conclusion seven times and have claimed four state titles, 1965, 1972, 1980 and 1984, a championship they shared with Beaumont French after fighting to a 21-21 tie.

This year the Panthers are taking a near-perfect record into the playoffs, with only a 7-7 tie to Abilene High marring their season. It was the tie that kept the District 4-5A title up for grabs until the final week of play.

The Panthers clinched the crown, a record sixth straight, with a lopsided 37-7 victory over Odessa High at Ratliff Stadium Friday night to finish with a 9-0-1 overall record, 6-0-1 in league play.

Only Midland Lee, 8-2, 6-1, had a shot to dethrone Mojo. Lee's 27-21 victory over Midland High made no difference after Permian beat OHS. As usual, Mojo rules. The king refuses to abdicate his throne.

As champs, the Panthers open Bi-district play against District 3-5A's Amarillo Palo Duro, a team they faced last year on the path to Irving and again this year in a pre-season scrimmage.

Palo Duro came within seconds of an unbeaten record at 8-0-1 only to give up a field goal with no time left on the clock to Amarillo High, 9-1, and ended up as the 3-5A No. 2 team.

This is the second consecutive year for the Dons in the playoffs, finsihing second a year ago to the Plainview Bulldogs. In all, they've started seven trips down the path.

THE FIRST time Permian and Palo Duro met in the playoffs back in 1970, there were two young coaches on the Dons' staff. John Wilkins, now at Permian, and Doug James, now at Palo Duro. Friday, at 8 p.m., the two coaches and their teams will meet at Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

"We've played twice in the playoffs, last year and once when I was a coach at Palo Duro. I was an assistant at Palo Duro in 1970 when we played. Doug James and I were assistants together at the same time."

Both coaches have a lot of respect for the other team's capabilities.

"Palo Duro uses misdirection spelled with capital letters" said Wilkins. "They run about 75 percent misdirection, traps, counter traps, reverses."

Wilkins believes that kind of offense presents a lot of danger to his team's defense because, "We've got a fairly quick defense and we run at the football well. They'll start you one way and come back the other. They can trap you.

Permian coach John Wilkins

"On defense, they've got excellent linebackers in A.J. Nichols and Cecil Echols. They play a straight 5-2 defense. The linebackers are 195 pounders and they can run. They have skill people in the secondary, a couple of the same people as offense. One of them is their quarterback, Cal Hero, a two-year starter and was All-District last year."

"Permian has several strengths," said James. "They run the football well. Greg Anderson is another. Permian is physical but can finess you when they want to finess."

James is as impressed with Anderson's capabilities as a coach can be. "He's going to make any quarterback an All-State quarterback because he's made a lot of circus catches.

"They work hard on swarming the football, probably the quickest defense we'll play all year."

Against misdirection, a quick defense can be hurt. But, "it didn't seem to hurt them when we scrimmaged in August," said James."

BECAUSE OF the mutual respect, both coaches look for the game to be a tough one. The fact that Permian had to scratch out a victory last year was also considered.

"We've got an awfully tough game, no question about it," said Wilkins. "We're really concerned about Palo Duro. They moved the ball on us last year and scored on us last year. We just outscored them, 41-21. But, it was 21-14 late in the third quarter.

"Pettis, Hero and both linebackers started last year. Their fullback also started, Richard Owens. They've got experience and they've played us before. I don't think they'll be intimidated in the least."

One player who will be missing the game, at least from a playing standpoint, is Permian junior tailback Woody Bryant.

This week in practice, Bryant dislocated his sternum and was taken to the hospital for an operation. However, it turned out to be unnecessary.

After receiving anesthesia, the muscles in Bryant's chest relaxed and the sternum popped back into place.

"I'm certainly happy they didn't have to operate," said Wilkins. "At this point, we don't know what his status is. He's definitely out the next couple of weeks. There's a possibility he'll be back, but I can't say at this point."

Marfa tests McCamey momentum

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

McCAMEY — Marfa football coach Bob Berger should have no trouble getting one familiar message across to his players this week as they prepare to take on the 9-1 McCamey Badgers in a 2A Bi-district game: "Never underestimate the power of momentum."

If any team has picked up a full head of steam in the regular season, it is Buster Leaf's Badgers, winners of nine straight and the undefeated champions of District 8-2A. Marfa, the runners-up in District 7-2A at 3-1, finished the year 6-4. The two will clash Friday night in Alpine at 7:30 for the right to advance to Area play and face the winner of the Hamlin-Martin game.

The Badgers' only loss came at the hands of Class A power Iraan on opening night. Since then, McCamey has not only won, it has steamrolled its opposition, allowing just 20 points in its last eight games while rolling up 250 points.

"Physically they're a lot better team than we are," Berger said. "They're more seasoned than we are — we start five freshmen. We'll just have to try and make things happen and control the football to keep it out of their hands."

AFTER A district opening loss to Van Horn, Marfa also had little trouble advancing to Bi-district. In the second game of the season, McCamey manhandled the Shorthorns, 42-19.

"We didn't play any defense in that game," Berger said. "We came out flat and fumbled the ball early and before we woke up we were out of the game."

The 19 points Marfa scored, however, is the most the Badgers have given up since opening night. Marfa may even look like an easy touch for a team with the Badgers' credentials, but don't mention that to Leaf.

"Marfa has every advantage in this game," Leaf insists. "First, the site. Alpine is much closer to them and the crowd could be on their side. Second, the revenge factor. It is much harder to beat a team the second time in a season. And third is their quarterback Cosme Roman is an extremely gifted athlete.

"IT WILL take a special effort for us to get by Marfa."

If there is a coach that can ask for that special effort and get it, it's Leaf. His teams are known for their preparation, both mentally and physically for every game. At times, he gets his players so sky-high they hurt themselves with mistakes. Just as often, they are able to play over those mistakes and cause the opposition to make even more.

The heart and soul of the McCamey game is defense, as evidenced by five shutout games this season.

"We stress gap-control, pursuit defense. We're gonna' cover every lane and every man has pursuit responsibility," Leaf said. "We use multiple fronts, but we run from the Basic Five and slant from there."

John Slaton, Shawn Curlee and Mike Sample anchor the line of scrimmage while nose guard Dan Baiza and floating end James Thomas pressure the quarterback.

BUT THE linebacking crew of Miley Barrandey and Nandy Zarate, an all-district pick last year, represent what the swarming Badger defense is all about.

Surprise! Gooden gets Cy Young

NEW YORK (AP) — There were still three days left before Dwight Gooden would turn 21 years old, and already he had added the National League's Cy Young award to his list of birthday presents.

"I guess things have moved along pretty rapidly in my career," Gooden said Wednesday from the dais, a birthday cake with 21 candles on it in front of him.

At the tender age of 20, Gooden had been voted unanimously as the best pitcher in the league, one year after he had been recognized as the league's best rookie.

"Last year, I won the rookie award, and that was special because you only have one chance," Gooden said. "And the Cy Young is a great honor after finishing second last year."

With his birthday coming on Saturday, Gooden became baseball's youngest Cy Young winner ever and also the first player to win the rookie and Cy Young awards in successive years. The right-hander had a record of 24-4 and led the National League in earned run average, strikeouts, complete games and innings pitched in 1985.

GOODEN RECEIVED 120 points, including all 24 of the first-place votes cast by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. He thus became the seventh pitcher to receive the award unanimously.

John Tudor of St. Louis, 21-8 during the season, was second with 65 points, followed by Orel Hershiser of Los Angeles with 17, Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis with 6, Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles with 4, Tom Browning of Cincinnati with 3 and Jeff Reardon of Montreal with 1. Tudor was listed second on 21 ballots, with the other second-place votes going to Hershiser, Andujar and Valenzuela.

The other unanimous Cy Young winners were Sandy Koufax in 1963, 1965 and 1966 — years when the Cy Young voting covered both leagues — Denny McLain in 1968; Bob Gibson in 1968; Steve Carlton in 1972 and 1977; Ron Guidry in 1978, and Rick Sutcliffe in 1984.

Votes are cast by two members of the BBWAA from each National League city with a first-place vote counting five points, second three points and third one.

Gooden was 13 days younger than Valenzuela when the Dodgers lefty won the award on Nov. 11, 1981 — 10 days after turning 21. And although Valenzuela is the only pitcher ever to win the Cy Young and rookie awards in the same year, Gooden was the first pitcher to win the awards in successive seasons.

IN FACT, only four players other than Gooden have won both awards — Valenzuela, Sutcliffe, Tom Seaver and Don Newcombe.

Soft-spoken and not given to hyperbole, Gooden said he had not yet felt the full impact of his accomplishments.

"I don't really feel special now, but everything that I've done really hasn't sunk in yet," he said, admitting some surprise that he had done so much so quickly "because last year I didn't even know if I would make the team."

In 1984, when he won the NL rookie award, Gooden had a record of 17-9, giving him a two-year total of 41-13. This year, he had an ERA of 1.53, a team record, and a major league-leading 268 strikeouts. He also led the league with 276 2-3 innings pitched and 16 complete games, and his eight shutouts were two short of Tudor's league-leading 10.

In a four-man, rather than five-man, rotation, Gooden feels he could possibly win 30 games some season.

"Hopefully, I'll do it one day before my career is over," Gooden said. He said a shorter rotation would be "a good challenge. It would probably take a couple of starts to get used to it, but I think I could do it.

"I came into this season shooting for 20 victories," he said. "I accomplished that, but I didn't think I would lose only four games."

When Gooden won his 20th game of the season on Aug. 25, he became the youngest pitcher to accomplish that feat. He was 20 years 9 months 9 days old, compared with the 20 years 10 months 5 days of Bob Feller when he won 20 in 1939 with the Cleveland Indians.

And, by leading the league in the triple crown categories of victories, ERA and strikeouts, he became only the seventh pitcher to do so and the first since Koufax in 1966. Besides Koufax, who turned the triple three times, the others were Walter Johnson, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Dazzy Vance, Lefty Grove and Hal Newhouser. Of those, only Newhouser failed to make the Hall of Fame.

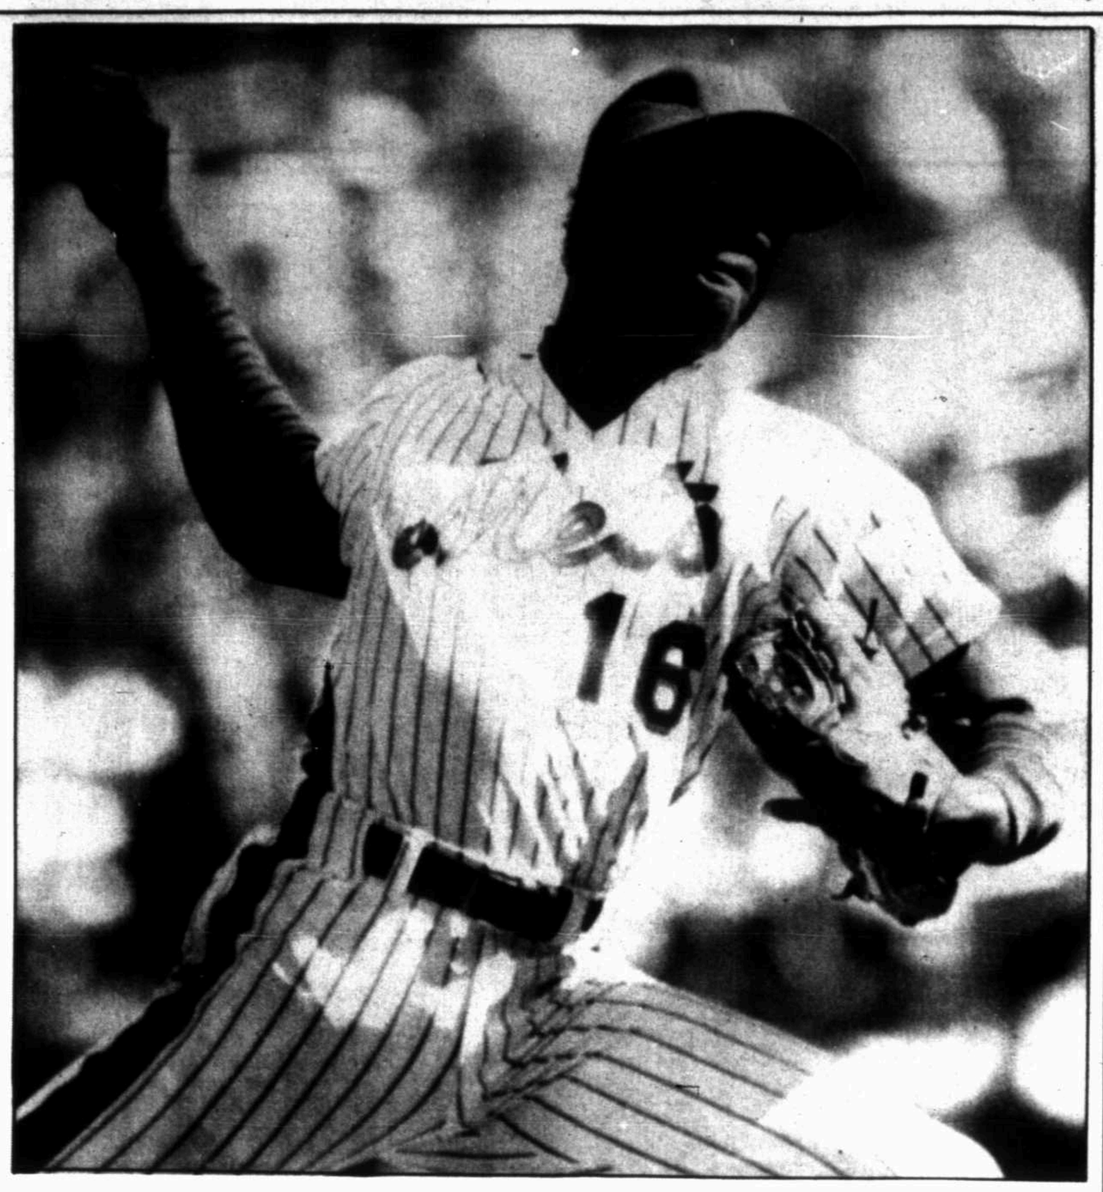

Gooden's winning percentage of .857 was the highest for a 20-game winner in the National League since Preacher Roe went 22-3 for an .880 percentage in 1951. Gooden and Herb Score are the only players to strike out 200 or more batters in each of their first two seasons.

"The most remarkable thing about Dwight is that he seems to come up with something new every start," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "Just when you think you might have seen it all, he amazes you again."

Gooden came into the league in 1984 with a 95 mph fastball and parabolic curveball. This season, he added a changeup, which he used sparingly. He says his changeup and his pickoff move to first base are the two things he would most like to improve.

As for goals?

"This, of course, is a goal of every pitcher," Gooden said of the Cy Young. "But I'm also looking forward to getting into the playoffs, maybe next year. ... I'll just try to get better every year. A World Series ring would sure be great."

Dallas fans hot for tickets

DALLAS (AP) — Summer should be so hot.

Fans are so desperate for tickets to Sunday's showdown between the Chicago Bears and the Dallas Cowboys that the usual $19 stubs have soared as high as $250 apiece, ticket brokers say.

"This is the biggest regular-season game they've (Cowboys) ever had in terms of demand," said Texas Tickets owner Scott Baima.

"Maybe a Washington game several years ago, but the price wasn't this big," he added. "You could get in for $50. This is off the wall because of the Bears."

Those Bears are the only undefeated team in the National Football League, and the Cowboys are now tied for first in their division.

Mets, Red Sox deal eight players

BOSTON (AP) — A couple of years ago the Boston Red Sox dealt away one of their experienced left-handed pitchers.

John Tudor spent one season in Pittsburgh, then became the National League's top southpaw this year, pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to the pennant and to within one victory of the World Series championship.

Now the New York Mets are hoping they've pulled out another prize from the Boston pitching bag.

AFTER A fifth-place finish in the American League East this year, the Red Sox elected to gamble again Wednesday, sending veteran left-hander Bobby Ojeda to the Mets in an eight-player deal.

"We didn't think of the Tudor deal (for Mike Easler) for a moment," Boston General Manager Lou Gorman said. "As long as I get what I want, I'm happy. And I'm happy with this deal — so much so, that I hope the players we've given up can go over there and help the Mets win the pennant."

The Red Sox sent three minor league right-handers — Tommy McCarthy, 24, John Mitchell, 20, and Chris Bayer, 21 — along with Ojeda to the Mets.

Boston received right-handed pitchers Wes Gardner, 24, and Calvin Schiraldi, 23, and minor league outfielders John Christensen, 25, and LaSchelle Tarver, 26.

"We wanted both Gardner and Schiraldi," Gorman said. "They are big, strong, and we think both are outstanding. I think Gardner can become the best reliever in baseball, and Schiraldi isn't far behind.

"They just didn't get a chance to pitch for the Mets. We're looking at Gardner as a stopper, an impact pitcher who can get the last four or five hitters out. Schiraldi throws 91 and 92 m.p.h. and can start and relieve. We'll have to wait until spring training to decide his role.

"Christensen and Tarver also have a chance to help us at the major-league level next year."

"We feel Bob Ojeda is a quality left-handed pitcher who should complement our present staff," said Joe McIlvaine, Mets director of player personnel. "Our reports on him are good and we feel that another left-hander on our staff will give us a better balance, particularly against teams that run well."

OJEDA WILL become the fifth starter on a staff that already includes right-handers Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling and Rick Aguilera and left-hander Sid Fernandez. That fifth spot had belonged to right-hander Bruce Berenyi, who missed most of the 1985 season after undergoing arm surgery.

"It's not that we don't have confidence in Berenyi, but last year we needed a spot starter, and Ojeda solidifies our pitching," McIlvaine said. "We're not sure how fast Bruce will come back and how strong his arm will be. With Ojeda, we have more of an option in the bullpen. He has the experience."

In another trade the Detroit Tigers have sent infielder Barbaro Garbey to the Oakland A's for switch-hitting outfielder Dave Collins.

Collins, 32, is an 11-year veteran who has played in both leagues and now is joining his sixth major league team.

"We were looking for a player who can steal some bases and generate some offense. Collins is the kind of player who can get on base, steal another and make a lot of things happen," said Tigers General Manager Bill Lajoie. "He adds another dimension to our team."

LAST SEASON, Collins batted .251 for Oakland, appearing in 112 games. He tallied 52 runs, 29 RBI and 29 stolen bases.

Collins joined the California Angels in 1975 and also has played for Cincinnati, Seattle, the New York Yankees and Toronto.

He was traded by the Blue Jays to the A's along with infielder Alfredo Griffin before the 1985 season in exchange for relief ace Bill Caudill.

Collins has a lifetime batting average of .275 with 342 stolen bases in 1244 games. He stole 79 bases for the 1980 Reds and led the American League with 60 steals for the Blue Jays in 1984.

Garbey, 28, came to America from Cuba in 1980 and has played for the Tigers the past two seasons. This past season, he batted .257 with six home runs and 29 RBI in 86 games.

OWLS

So when Gunnels went down with a broken leg, Reeger was faced with a dilemma. In the last four games — all wins — Lipsey's play has made Reeger's move look like a stroke of genius.

Fullback Tim Tatum has caught fire, passing tailback James West as the team's leading rusher with 889 yards. He is nearly impssible to stop near the goal line as well, racking up 13 touchdowns on the year.

But with Tatum cracking up the middle, West keeps the defenses honest on the outside. Just a sophomore, West has overcome knee surgery last spring and a nagging shoulder problem this fall to total 831 yards rushing. Lipsey has also been effective when carrying the ball with 253 yards running.

BLOWING OPEN the holes for the Owl backs are a powerful line led by imposing center Mitchell Martin, all 6-5, 235 pounds of him. Reeger also credits the move of Kelly Baggett to the tight end spot for improving the blocking scheme.

Defensively, Reeger employs the tackle, nose guard, tackle formation, the "TNT" front. And with what they like to do to opponents, it's no wonder. Martin, Terry Townsend and Tim Nichols are the foundation there, but linebackers Tatum, Junior Romero and Zeke Harkelroad comprise the structure of the Owl defense.

In the secondary, all-district performer Robert Saldibar leads the way at one corner, while a trio of sophomores follow his hard-hitting lead. West, Lipsey and Gil Castillo round out the defensive backfield.

The Eagles rely on their linebacking trio of Jesus Corrales, Fernando Acostal and Rodolfo Rivas for their strength on defense. As a unit, Van Horn has allowed just 19 points in its last four games.

IN NON-district action, however, the Eagles were shown to be quite porous. District 8-2A champion McCamey rolled up 63 points against the Eagles and two other schools were also able to blank them. Wink opened with a 14-0 win and Alpine later defeated Van Horn, 19-0.

Since then however, Reyes has brought in sophomore Alfredo Mendez who has run for more than 350 yards in his last three games to add to the more than 800 by halfback Corrales.

"We like the running game most of all, but we try to have a balanced attack," Reyes said. "Ramirez has thrown the ball pretty good the last three games or so.

"Our strength is our quickness off the ball, because we're not big. We'll have to beat them to the punch on the line of scrimmage. We'll have to hit 'em quickly."

Sandy Lyle finds golf course suited to game

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — An international group of contenders could only shake their heads and shrug their shoulders at Sandy Lyle's continued mastery of the Kapalua Golf Club's Bay course.

"The golf course definitely favors a long hitter," Corey Pavin said.

"I believe Sandy Lyle may be the longest hitter in the world right now," said Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

Mark O'Meara put it all together with a resigned shake of his head.

"If there ever was a golf course built for one player, it is this course built for Sandy Lyle. He carries the fairway bunkers and he's hitting irons to all the par-5s," O'Meara said.

On Wednesday, it all added up to a 6-under-par 66 for Lyle and a one-shot lead after the first round of the $500,000 Isuzu Kapalua International.

But it was expected. Lyle, a 27-year-old Scot who holds the British Open title, now is 45 shots under par for his last nine competitive rounds on this resort course that winds down to cliffs overlooking the Pacific surf.

He won this event a year ago by an 8-shot margin. He won the individual title in the Nissan Cup on the same course last week with a 21-under-par total. In his last nine rounds here, his high score is 69. And in his last two starts, he's won $205,000.

Lyle, however, has only a one-shot margin in the chase for another $125,000 this week. And his challengers are some of the world's best — Langer, Pavin, Hawaiian Open champ O'Meara, Andy Bean, John Mahaffey, Hawaiian club pro David Ishii, Canadian Dan Halldorson and Lanny Wadkins, the 1985 Player of the Year on the American Professional Golfers Association Tour.

U.S. Open champion Andy North shot a 70 in the hot, muggy weather, and Lee Trevino was five shots off the first-round pace at 71.

The pros played with four-man amateur teams and it took more than five hours to play a round. As a result, two players — D.A. Weibring and Gary Hallberg — were stranded on the course by darkness. They marked their positions and came back today to complete first-round play. Neither had a chance of overtaking the leader.

Lyle got away to a shaky start. He made a couple of 10-foot par putts, took a bogey from a fairway bunker and was one over par after four holes.

McCAMEY

"We just turn 'em loose and tell them to cover from sideline to sideline," Leaf says. "We expect them to cover everthing — find the football and get there."

While in the secondary, Adam Arana and Vivian Garza are candidates for all-district honors with 10 intercepts between them. Sophomore Emmit Brown and senior Juan Carillo cover the corners.

On offense, it is Zarate who runs the show. Injured in the first game against Iraan, Zarate did not return to full strength until the district season. But when he did, Leaf was able to get back to the offensive philosophy he love best — the option.

"We are an option football team," Leaf loves to say. "We set up to run all different types of options and that's what everybody tries to take away from us. If they don't take it away, we won't change. We don't call very many passes."

AND WHY should he? With Zarate and a trio of backs like Arana (349 yards), Oscar Rodriguez (587 yards) and tailback Rodney Terry (738 yards in less than six games) moving the ball on the ground.

Marfa leans the other way on offense. The Shorthorns move the ball through the air on the strong arm of Roman. The senior has thrown for more than 1,200 yards. His favorite target is Patrick Garnett who has caught 34 passes for 590 yards.

In the backfield, Berger gives the ball to senior fullback Arturo Vasquez, more than 500 yards this season, and freshman tailback John Fellows. Fellows has gained 590 yards in five games, running for a 74-yard TD in his first varsity carry.

On defense, the Shorthorns rely on the linebacking trio of Vasquez, Alan Thompson and Tony Jimenez, who are one, two and three on the team in tackles.

Bird cold, but Celtics win

Mavericks finally shake cobwebs

Associated Press

One reason the Boston Celtics have been in the National Basketball Association finals for two consecutive years is that they can play well even when Larry Bird isn't.

Bird, the NBA's Most Valuable Player the last two seasons, led Boston with 15 rebounds and seven assists Wednesday night, but shot a dismal 6-for-21 from the floor and finished with 18 points.

Nevertheless, Dennis Johnson compensated for Bird's "off-night" with 30 points, his high since joining the team in 1983, as the Celtics defeated Indiana 118-114 for their seventh consecutive victory after a season-opening loss to New Jersey.

"Larry has been shooting bricks out there and D.J. has been picking up the slack," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "Dennis is pumped up on both ends and is doing the job."

Johnson scored 11 points in both the third and fourth periods as Boston broke away from a 58-58 halftime tie.

Johnson's 11 points in the third quarter helped Boston take an 88-81 lead after the halftime deadlock. Then, after sitting on the bench while Indiana rallied for a 91-91 tie early in the fourth quarter, he scored nine of his 11 fourth-quarter points in a two-minute span as the Celtics pulled away again.

"I can't explain why I had that stretch in the fourth quarter," Johnson said. "If I could, I'd bottle it and save it for the next game. Those things just happen."

"He hurt us when we did not sign him as a free agent and he hurt us tonight," said Pacers Coach George Irvine, referring to the off-season offer sheet Johnson signed with Indiana that was matched by Boston. "He had a great game and did it basically against a tough defense."

"D.J. made some real tough shots," Indiana's Terence Stansbury said. "We played good defense on him, but he made the big shots. They weren't easy shots he got. All you can do when a player is going like that is to keep playing him tight and hope he misses the next one."

The Pacers were led by Herb Williams with 27 points, Vern Fleming with 22, and Clark Kellogg with 21, while Robert Parish contributed 23 for the Celtics.

NBA Roundup

Mavericks 115, Jazz 100

Dallas, struggling with a 3-6 record after being touted as one of the best teams in the Western Conference, got 37 points from Rolando Blackman to win on the road against Utah.

"I tried everything on Blackman," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "I almost put Barbara (Layden's wife) on him at him at one point. This is the real Dallas team. The Mavericks are a polished team, much better than their record indicates."

Blackman, who played only 11 minutes in Dallas' loss to Seattle on Tuesday after dislocating a finger in practice Monday, made 17 of his 23 field-goal attempts and scored 16 points in the third quarter as the Mavericks pulled away to a 90-70 lead after three periods.

The Mavericks led 30-18 after one period as Utah shot only 30 percent from the field. Adrian Dantley led the Jazz with 17 points, 14 under his average.

Bucks 137, Pistons 118

Milwaukee moved into first place ahead of Detroit in the Central Division as Ricky Pierce and Alton Lister both scored 22 points.

The Bucks scored 11 straight points to grab a 36-22 lead late in the first quarter, and the Pistons moved no closer than eight points the rest of the game.

Pierce hit 10 of 13 field-goal attempts for Milwaukee, while Lister was 9-for-13 and added 12 rebounds. Terry Cummings scored 21 points for the Bucks, who had seven players in double figures.

Kelly Tripucka led the Pistons with 32 points while Bill Laimbeer had 21 points and 17 rebounds.

76ers 110, Bulls 106

Philadelphia got 21 points and 15 rebounds from Moses Malone and outscored Chicago 30-18 in the second quarter to build a 17-point halftime lead, then held on to hand the Bulls their sixth loss in their last seven games.

The Bulls, who got 32 points from Orlando Woolridge and 25 from George Gervin, trailed 77-59 midway through the third period before scoring 10 consecutive points to get back in contention. Chicago cut the deficit to 84-78 on a layup by Gene Banks with 15 seconds left.

But seven straight Philadelphia points, four of them by Julius Erving, rebuilt the 76ers' advantage to 102-90, and the Bulls got no closer than four points.

Sonics 93, Clippers 89

Jack Sikma scored 13 of his season-high 20 points in the fourth quarter to keep Seattle ahead of Los Angeles.

Sikma and reserve guard Ricky Sobers combined to score 11 of the first 13 points of the final period as the SuperSonics, who trailed by 13 points in the first half, built a 79-69 lead.

But Derek Smith, who led the Clippers with 26 points, led a 15-8 spurt that cut the deficit to 87-84, but Los Angeles could get no closer.

Hawks 108, Suns 101

Cliff Levingston scored 23 points and Atlanta withstood a late three-point shooting display by Walter Davis to beat winless Phoenix.

The Suns, 0-9, trailed 104-90 with 2:18 left in the game, but Davis hit three consecutive three-pointers to cut the margin to five with 1:24 to go. But two free throws by Eddie Johnson and a basket by Levingston clinched the victory for the Hawks.

Dominique Wilkins scored 20 points for Atlanta, while Larry Nance had 20 for Phoenix. Davis added 17.

Flood shakes playoff spirit

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Football doesn't seem as important these days for Tucker County High coach Bill Haddox, after the flooding Blackwater River ravaged houses, businesses and bridges and washed away entire communities.

Haddox, preparing for his first playoff appearance, converted his football field into a pasture for displaced cattle and had to rely on messages at a service station to tell players about practice after last week's flooding turned Tucker County into a federal disaster area.

"When you're at practice you think about football," Haddox said Wednesday. "But when you drive back into town and see all the houses missing and upside down and dirty and see furniture in all the yards, you feel sorry for those people."

Residents of Parsons, the county seat, and the nearby town of Hambleton, where the school is located, have been busy cleaning up from last week's floods, which killed at least two people in Tucker County and 31 statewide. Damage throughout West Virginia has been assessed at $275 million, with about 8,000 families homeless.

Tucker County, a school of 417 in the upper three grades, will take an 8-2 record into its Class AA first-round game Saturday with unbeaten Chapmanville. Despite the flood damage, Tucker County supporters have chartered a bus to take them to the game, 230 miles away.

HADDOX WAS one of the fortunate ones. His house was spared by the flood waters, so he spent last week helping others clean their homes.

"It's a tough situation. Not a lot of people are talking about the playoffs because there are too many bad things going on," he said.

The flooding knocked out telephone lines throughout the county, making it impossible for Haddox to call his players and tell them about practice, so the coach went to the local service station and had a worker there spread the word whenever players drove past.

"The hardest thing of all was that we had no phone service for a week and a half to round up your football team and get everything OK'd," he said.

"I just started telling a bunch of people, 'If you see so and so, tell them we're going to practice.'"

About half of the team lives in Davis 15 miles away. After the water receded, Haddox drove to town to spread the word.

"We couldn't call them so I drove up there. I went to a filling station and a guy there teaches with us. I told him to try to get as many as he could. Tell them, 'Heh, coach called practice.' All you could do was tell people.

"The first day 10 weren't there, but every day we had more and more. Today (Wednesday) we had a full go."

Haddox also had to find another place for his team to practice after the school's football field was turned into a pasture. He arranged for practice at Elkins High School 20 miles down the road.

"There was no other place for the cows to go when they came over the hill," Haddox said. "We put them up on the field because there was no other place with a fence around it that was dry.

"When they put them up there in our field for five days, it sort of messed up the field. There was a little bit of everything out there. ...

"Well, first things are first. A guy's cattle are more important than us having a place to play football or practice."

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

A little bit or larceny appeals to most of us. It enabled East-West to pick defender's pocket on this hand from a pairs tournament, and walk off with three tricks more than they were entitled.

Whether they ended in hearts, making 12 tricks, or diamonds, scoring 13, every North-South pair came away with a large plus score. Every pair except one, that is. At the table we kibitzed, East elected to open with a weak two spade bid, but North-South still got to four hearts on the auction shown. Now watch what happened in the play.

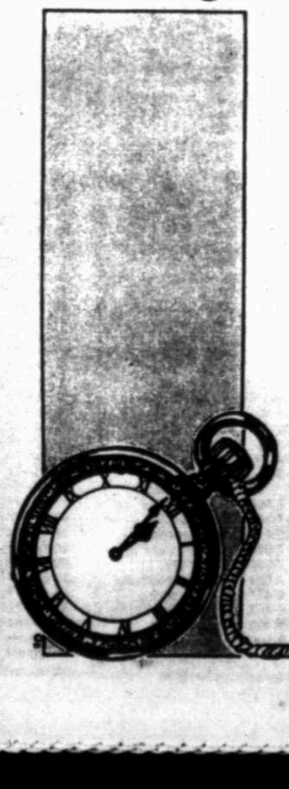

West led the four of spades. Believing that East held six spades and that the four was, therefore, a singleton, declarer won the ace. He now decided to lead the king of clubs and, when East did not produce the ace, he discarded a spade from hand—after all, if West won the trick he "couldn't" return a spade. But West could and did, choosing the two.

When East won and continued the suit, declarer was convinced that West would ruff this time if he ruffed low, so he chose to ruff with the queen of trumps. That not only promoted a trump for the defenders, but almost brought on a fit of apoplexy from declarer when West produced a third spade.

Declarer cashed two high trumps and, aware of the fact he had already blown a trick or two, he decided the only way he could salvage some matchpoints was to finesse West for the queen of diamonds. This did not prove to be the greatest success, and declarer ended up down one. However, he does have a story with which to regale his cohorts for years to come—if he dares to tell it.

Dylan honored as collection released

NEW YORK (AP) — Reclusive rock superstar Bob Dylan was hailed as the most influential musician of the past 20 years at a star-studded bash marking the release of "Biograph," a five-record retrospective of his works.

Billy Joel, Roy Orbison, Lou Reed and Roger McGuinn were among those representing the music world; filmmakers Paul Schraeder and Martin Scorcese also attended, as did actress Mary Beth Hurt and model Christie Brinkley.

Dylan, 44, wearing a white suit with a blue polka dot shirt, ducked into the party Wednesday without speaking to reporters at the Whitney Museum, which displayed Dylan videos and music ranging from the 1960s documentary "Don't Look Back" to the current "Tight Connection To My Heart."

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A national journalism fraternity has denied cable television's C-SPAN permission to film a "roast" of CBS newsman Walter Cronkite, triggering a claim that journalists have a double standard.

C-SPAN planned to film tonight's event at the convention of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, for broadcast on Saturday night.

Russ Tornabene, executive officer of the journalism organization, said Wednesday his group canceled the taping because participants in the "roast" were unaware comments would be used for telecast.

C-SPAN producer Carl Rutan called the decision "a little ironic."

"The editors and publishers would scream to high heaven if they weren't allowed to cover a newsworthy meeting, yet they organize a newsworthy meeting and turn around and say, 'We're different. No cameras, please,'" Rutan said.

"The whole thing about it is that these guys are journalists. If the president were roasting the vice president and they weren't allowed in, they'd scream bloody murder," he said. "It's clearly a double standard.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lorenzo Lamas is back on the set of "Falcon Crest" after breaking a collar bone in a racing-car accident earlier this week at Riverside International Speedway.

No script changes were required Wednesday when Lamas resumed his role as Lance Cumson, said a spokesman for Lorimar, which produces the prime-time soap opera for CBS.

It took 20 minutes Sunday to extricate Lamas from the car he was driving in a Formula Ford race after it hit an oil slick on the track and struck a concrete wall. Lamas was treated at a hospital and discharged.

NEW YORK (AP) — Vanessa Williams, who lost her Miss America crown after nude photographs of her appeared in Penthouse, has added the magazine and publisher Bob Guccione to her $250 million lawsuit against a photographer.

Miss Williams, in court papers filed Wednesday, said Guccione, his magazine and photographer Gregg Whitman invaded her privacy by publishing the nudes in the January 1985 Penthouse. Whitman took the pictures in August 1982.

Miss Williams lost her crown after nude photos of her, taken by Tom Chiapel in July 1982, were publicized by Guccione in July 1984 and published in the magazine's September issue. She is suing Chiapel.

Guccione has said he had gotten signed model release forms before publishing the photos.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Actress Angie Dickinson, who said in 1959 she wouldn't return to her native North Dakota if she could help it, has lent her likeness to a promotional ad for the state.

A native of Kulm, N.D., Miss Dickinson — who was born Angeline Brown and left the state at age 7 — was blasted in The Bismarck Tribune for "snide remarks" after the interview appeared.

Asked by the interviewer why she didn't want to go back to the state, Miss Dickinson was quoted as answering, "Have you ever been to North Dakota?"

Sara Jones, a spokeswoman for the state Economic Development Commission said Miss Dickinson made the ad for free. It features her photo, with the handwritten notation, "Come on in to my state — North Dakota!"

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says he's exhausted from a strenuous crusade in Romania and Hungary, but expects to be out of the hospital later this week after undergoing cardiac tests.

Graham, 66, said in a telephone interview Wednesday from St. Marys Hospital that he had no cardiac symptoms, but Mayo Clinic doctors wanted to perform an angiogram after he underwent a routine treadmill stress test on Tuesday.

The angiogram involves threading a catheter into the heart and injecting a dye so doctors can get a sharp X-ray reading of his heart vessels.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Stuntman Steven T. Trotter, who this summer became the first American since 1961 to survive the 172-foot plunge over Niagara Falls, celebrated his 23rd birthday by dangling from the Golden Gate Bridge.

Trotter, of Barrington, R.I., was tethered Wednesday to a rope about 50 feet above the San Francisco Bay and dangled about 45 minutes before jumping into the water and being rescued by the Coast Guard, officials said.

The stuntman, who was fined $370 after becoming the sixth person to successfully shoot the falls, would be cited for trespassing on the bridge, police said.

Unknown Horn gains 310 yards in one half

UPPER MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — Montclair State sophomore tailback Leroy Horn worked his way into the NCAA record book, rushing for 310 yards on 21 carries against Jersey City State in a Division III game Saturday. That's an average of nearly 15 yards per carry.

And, incredibly it all came in the second half.

It's never been done before on any level of collegiate football level, said Steve Boda, the associate director of statistics for the NCAA.

"Few people have ever rushed for 300 yards in a game, let alone a half," said Boda. "We don't keep half records for Division II and Division III, but when there is a performance that is likely to be a record, I'll put it in the book. I'm putting this one in the book."

The NCAA currently lists half records for Division I-A and I-AA.

Jerry Drew of California holds the Division I-A record of rushing for 268 yards on seven carries in the second half of a game against Oregon State in 1954. The Division I-AA mark was set by the late Joe Delaney of Northwest Louisiana who gained 263 yards on 19 carries in the second half of a 1978 game against Nicholls State.

"I wasn't even thinking about it," said Horn, who scored on a 58-yard touchdown run on his first carry and tacked on TDs of 58 and 75 yards. "I just wanted to win and I kept looking at the scoreboard every time the offense wasn't on the field. I was getting worried about winning the game."

So was Indians Coach Rick Giancola, who sent Horn into the game early in the third quarter when starting junior tailback Tony Fleming couldn't continue because of bruised ribs. Horn had rushed for 192 yards on 46 carries entering the game.

"I didn't realize how many yards he had until the announcer came on the PA system and said he had just broken the school record with 275 rushing in a game," said Giancola.

"When we heard he had 275 yards, we knew there was another series to go so we told the coaches to put Leroy back in and let's go for 300 yards," said offensive tackle Ernie Giampietro. "I never heard of anybody getting 300 yards."

There have been a couple though. The record for most yards gained in a collegiate game is 382 yards and it's shared by Kelly Ellis of Northern Iowa and Pete Baranek of Carthage. Ellis rambled for that much in 1979 in a Division II game against Western Illinois, while Baranek turned the trick earlier this year in a Division III against North Central.

Hogs' Richardson put on hot spot

SWC Basketball Preview

DALLAS (AP) — Arkansas' Nolan Richardson and Baylor's Gene Iba join the Southwest Conference basketball coaches' fraternity this year and Richardson has been put on the hot spot as the favorite.

Richardson replaced Eddie Sutton who went to Kentucky and Iba comes into a troubled Baylor program that was hit by a scandal last season, costing Jim Haller his job.

"I think Arkansas should be the favorite because the Razorbacks return 13 lettermen," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

Richardson, who built the University of Tulsa into a basketball power, doesn't mind the hot seat.

"We have the talent to have a good basketball team," he said. "We're not going to play basketball, we're going to play 'Hawgball.' We want to be greedy with the basketball.

"When we don't have the ball, we want to do what it takes to get the ball. We will have a chance to score off our defense. We will press and play a lot of different defenses."

The SWC is expected to be more balanced this year because dominating centers have gone to the National Basketball Association.

Seven-foot Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist and 6-11 Joe Kleine of Arkansas are in the National Basketball Association along with Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon of Houston, who left the league two years ago.

"I think it will be really a wide open race," said Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth. "It looks like Texas A&M returns the most starting talent but you just can't count out teams like Houston and Arkansas. Everyone has a chance to figure in this thing before it's over."

Texas Tech is the defending champion but the Red Raiders of Coach Gerald Myers lost all five starters.

"Replacing the five senior starters off last year's team will be a challenge for us as a team," said Myers. "Our team should have good confidence going into the season based on the way last year went for us. A lot of the players on last year's team learned about what it takes to win and that should help us a lot."

Myers said the SWC race could be a "crazy one. There really isn't any one team that should just dominate the whole conference. Arkansas, Texas A&M and SMU will all be strong again and Houston will be tough as always.

"The rest of us have a chance to develop into good teams as the year goes on so it should make for an interesting race."

Iba said, "It's very difficult for me to tell how we will do during the upcoming season. Our players have to adjust to a new system and sometimes this is difficult."

Richardson said he expects the Razorbacks to be under the gun from the very start.

"I inherited a good job but an extremely tough schedule," he said. "The Southwest Conference is a strong conference and I'm glad to be a part of it. Houston always has good teams and I understand Texas A&M has almost everyone back from a very good team.

"SMU has been strong and I know Texas Tech always will be well coached. If our young players come along, we hope to be a contender."

The top returning players include Winston Crite of Texas A&M, Carven Holcombe of TCU, Carlos Briggs of Baylor, Butch Moore of Southern Methodist, Alvin Franklin of Houston, and William Mils and Andrew Lang of Arkansas.

Wrestling, football opens up open for San Diego girls

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For the first time in the history of the Board of Education, female students have been given the right to join city schools' wrestling and football teams.

School board members approved the rule change Tuesday after taking into consideration the wishes of 15-year-old Kerry Hanley, who announced her interest in trying out for a high school wrestling team earlier this month.

Hanley's request to try out for the team prompted district administrators to review their policy prohibiting girls from competing in football and wrestling.

"I feel pretty good about it," said Hanley, a 4-foot-11, 93-pound sophomore at Mira Mesa High School. "I would have felt really depressed about it if they had said 'no' after all this."

The board passed the measure 3-1, with support coming from all three female board members. School board President Larry Lester abstained and board member John Witt opposed the measure, saying girls might be injured in wrestling matches with boys.

Witt also argued the sport might be compromised if girls took part, saying there are "certain aggressive activities that young men have, that they need to take part in, that are compromised if young women participate in the same activities."

Lester said he abstained from voting because he believes boys should be permitted to participate in sports limited to girls if girls are allowed to try out for all-male sports.

Currently, volleyball is limited to girls under California Interscholastic Federation rules for the San Diego Section.

The board's three women — Kay Davis, Susan Davis and Dorothy Smith — said the change is a step toward guaranteeing equal opportunities for girls in public schools.

"I think that what you're implying is that all women are weak and all men are strong," Smith told Witt.

Dallas teams brawl way to probation

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas high schools have been placed on probation for the remainder of the school year in the wake of an investigation into a brawl that forced referees to end a high school football game early.

Dallas Adamson High School and North Dallas High School were placed on probation Wednesday after a three-hour meeting in which the district's University Interscholastic League committee viewed films of the football game and talked to the principals of both schools.

The committee ruled that both schools had violated rules regarding clean play and good sportsmanship.

The probation does not impose any sanctions on the schools, but it means that if any other team or school organization violates league rules, the schools could be banned from all league competition, said committee chairman Wayne Pierce. Pierce is prinicipal at Woodrow Wilson High School.

"A lot of people in the public will think this is a spank on the hand, but it's really serious for the schools, said Loie Harris, the district's athletic coordinator.

Witnesses said about 100 people from both teams were on the field swinging fists during the brawl. No injuries were reported.

The brawl erupted last Friday night with Adamson leading, 22-7, when a North Dallas player was ejected by referees and returned to the field after he was taunted by Adamson players, witnesses said.

Abe Lemons brings suit against UT

AUSTIN (AP) — Abe Lemons, the colorful former Texas basketball coach, claims in a lawsuit against the UT Austin athletic director that he was allegedly defamed by statements during a summer alumni meeting.

The suit was filed Tuesday in Travis County district court against UT's DeLoss Dodds by C. Robert Dorsett, attorney for Lemons.

The lawsuit alleges that Dodds made "defamatory statements" about Lemons on July 31 while addressing a Fort Worth meeting of the University of Texas Ex-Students Association.

Dodds claimed Lemons was "fired from his position as head basketball coach at the University of Texas because of 'NCAA problems,' " according to the suit.

University officials fired Lemons on March 10, just after the season ended.

The suit contends the "reputation and professional standing of (Lemons) have been greatly harmed as these remarks suggest that (Lemons) was guilty of violations of NCAA regulations and as such is some form of a 'cheater.' "

Lemons, now the head coach basketball coach at Oklahoma City University, could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"We have not ascertained the damage at this point," said Dorsett.

Dodds denied that he made the statement about Lemons.

"If we have any differences, I'd like to see them worked out another way, said Dodds. "If that's the way Abe wants to handle it, that's the way we'll handle it."

Dodds said he knew of the suit "a couple of weeks ago." But he noted he has not seen a copy of Lemons' suit and could not comment on it.

Lemons coached the Longhorns from 1977-1982, compiling a 112-63 record. His best season was 1978, when the Horns finished 26-5 and won the National Invitation Tournament in New York City.

Work-related injury, illness show increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials say work-related injury and illness rates in private industry in 1984 showed the biggest single-year increase in the history of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The increase of more than 11.6 percent was regarded as an alarming sign by somefety experts. Labor Secretary William Brock said he was "deeply concerned and disturbed" by the report.

The department will "re-examine, re-evaluate and re-double our efforts to assure we are doing everything possible to make the American workplace as safe as it can be," Brock said in a statement Wednesday following release of the report.

The incidents of injury or illness were reported for every 100 full-time workers last year, compared with 7.6 in 1983. That is the largest single-year increase in the history of OSHA dating to 1973, according to the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. Injury and illness rates were up in every sector of the economy except finance,which showed a negligible decline.

The increases followed four straight years Karked improvement in injury and illness rates, and the latest figures brought into question several new policies of the OSHA, the key Labor Department agency which monitors workplace safety.

"There's nothing in the data to show any of their programs are working," said Margaret Seminario, a health and safety specialist with the AFL-CIO.

Early in the Reagan administration, OSHA embarked on a cooperative approach between management and government inspectors on health and safety regulation. OSHA also has adopted a targeted inspen program putting many of its limited resources into monitoring of manufacturing and construction sites with poor safety records.

In addition, the size of the OSHA inspection force was cut by 20 percent to 25 pcent. There now are 1,200 inspectors.

"I think the figures suggest a reassessment, a review of everything we are doing," OSHA spokeswoman Chriss Winston. She said, however, that increased economic activity had led to some of the increase in injury rates, although "how much is difficult to say."

She added that there were some positive signs in the report. For example, the agency emphasized inspections of heavy construction contractors, and injury rates there showed only a small increase, she said.

The number of injuries and illnesses overall went up to 5.4 million in 1984, a jump of half a million from the previous year. Some of the increase was expected because total employment rose by more than 4 million people last year, but the rising levels of injuries and illnesses far outpaced a 6.6 percent increase in hours of exposure due to more hiring by employers.

Increasing employment generally means the hiring of many new and inexperienced workers, who historically account for nearly 50 percent of all workplace injuries.

"The Department of Labor and OSHA have for several years been pointing to declines in injury rates as evidence of the success of cooperative programs between management and governement and ... discounting the effects of the business cycle," said Karl Kronebush, an analyst with the congressional Office of Technology Assessment. "Today, the department has rediscovered that the business cycle is an important factor in determining occupational injury rates."

Injury and illness rates rose from 8.4 incidents per 100 full-time workers in mining in 1983 to 9.7 last year; 14.8 to 15.5 in construction; 10.0 to 10.6 in manufacturing; 8.2 to 8.8 in transportation and public utilities; 7.2 to 7.4 in wholesale and retail trade; and from 5.1 to 5.2 in the services sector of the economy.

Consumer debt hits record high for September

Consumer debt soared to record levels in September and auto sales slumped early in November as a result of the end of cut-rate financing offered by the major U.S. automakers at the end of the 1985 model year.

Americans took on $10.6 billion more debt than they paid off in September, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday, saying most of the gain was due to the buying of cars.

The increase topped the record $9.09 billion set in May 1984 and far outdistanced the $6.3 billion increase for August, prompting warnings by some analysts of a coming consumer spending slowdown.

"The consumer is over-extended given the current economic conditions," said Sandra Shaber, an economist at Chase Econometrics, a research firm. "Consumer demand isn't going to collapse, but it certainly is going to slow down sharply from what we had in the first nine months of the year."

Cut-rate financing offered in late August and early September by the major automakers prompted part of the debt increase. The Fed said $7.4 billion of the September increase was for auto loans — nearly double the May record of $3.8 billion.

The special financing and other incentives led to inventory shortages in early November, which analysts blamed for the 12.4 percent drop in sales the nation's automakers reported for Nov. 1-10, compared with last year.

The slump dropped the industry's annualized sales rate to 5.9 million, far below its 8 million capacity.

Ford Motor Co. sustained a 32.4 percent drop for the period compared with a year ago, while Chrysler Corp. reported a 6.6 percent drop and General Motors Corp. sales fell 4.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the U.S. House of Representatives on Wednesday approved and sent to the Senate a measure to enact a short-term increase in the $1.824 trillion debt limit and forestall the possibility that the government would stop issuing checks on Friday.

Swiss explore Basin trade possibilities

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

"We want to do more business with Texas." That was the message the Consul General of Switzerland for Texas, Gilbert Schlaefli, and his commercial advisor, Michael Wenner, who were in Midland today to explore trade possibilities between the Permian Basin and Switzerland, delivered at a press conference at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The pair who were on a driving, fact-finding tour of Midland-Odessa, Lubbock, Abilene, Amarillo and San Antonio noted that there were possibilties for export, import and investment between Midland and Switzerland. The areas mentioned for commercial cooperation were precision machine tools, oilfield technology and venture capital.

While not referring directly to the intense machine manufacturing facilities in Midland-Odessa, Schlaefli hinted that the area might be interested in Swiss percision. "Switzerland is known throughout the world for its precision machine tools and high-quality parts, which we supply to numerous U.S. industries including the space industry."

He also indicated that Swiss trading firms would certainly be interested in playing a role in helping to distribute Permian Basin oilfield technology to all parts of the world.

The Consul General for Texas said Swiss investors and banks already had a high stake in the Texas energy industry, but that both private capital and banks may be interested in expanding their role in Texas energy.

"We can't tell you if they will play ball or not," said Wenner, "all we can do is provide both parties with names and try to get them together."

He pointed out that Switzerland, which is only a seventeenth as large as Texas, was the third largest financial center in the world behind New York and London and that a great deal of energy financing was already taking place in banks in Geneva. He also noted that Switzerland's three largest banks are represented in Houston. Wenner said he thought Switzerland could help the Permian Basin with its energy production.

Schlaefli said that the current trade balance between Switzerland and the U.S. were almost balanced and that his country shared the same fair trade philosophy as that of the U.S.

"There are 655 U.S. companies in Switzerland with an investment of $15 billion. Swiss investment in the U.S. is $7.5 billion and Swiss firms here provide 140,000 jobs for Americans, he said.

He noted that Switzerland viewed Texas and Atlanta as strongly developing areas and the place to be in the U.S.: "We want to do more business with Texas, and welcome any inquiries from local business."

Hodel assails bill limiting California offshore drilling

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Interior Donald P. Hodel assailed a House bill Tuesday that would implement an agreement he made last July with the California congressional delegation permitting limited oil and gas development off the state's coast.

Hodel, who reneged on the agreement under pressure from the oil industry, told a House Interior Committee hearing that the legislation was "terribly, terribly flawed."

"It does not even come close to striking a balance or being in the national interest," he said.

But Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., chief sponsor of the measure, sharply disagreed, contending that it "provides for a reasonable balance between energy and environmental and economic concerns."

The bill would permit oil and gas leasing in 150 offshore tracts now covered by a congressional moratorium on such leasing. The remainder of the 36.5 million acres covered by the moratorium would remain exempt from leasing until the year 2000.

That was the agreement originally struck by Hodel and a majority of the California congressional delegation.

The legislation is backed by 33 of California's 45 House members and by Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Pete Wilson, R-Calif.

On Thursday, the House Appropriations Committee will decide whether to reimpose the moratorium, which has been approved by Congress each of the last four years.

Efforts will be made to attach the moratorium to a "continuing resolution" needed to fund most of the government through next Sept. 30.

The moratorium would serve as a holding action until Congress acted on the legislation implementing the agreement that had been reached with Hodel.

At Tuesday's hearing, Hodel clashed with Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., over the origin of the agreement.

Levine contended that the 150 tracts selected for leasing, which oil companies later said had low potential for oil and gas, were chosen from "information handed to us by your (Hodel's) staff. We didn't dream these tracts up."

"These tracts were thrown at me at the 11th hour," Hodel responded. He said that he had told the California House members at that time that he was not sure what the industry interest in them would be.

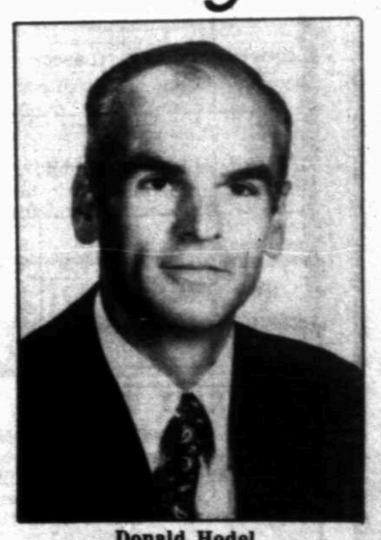

After oil company representatives expressed unhappiness with the choices, Hodel pulled out of the agreement Sept. 10, proposing that the 150 tracts be swapped for others with a higher potential.

Also appearing at the hearing were California city officials and representatives of business and fishermen's groups, who said that the bill was needed to protect California's $16 billion tourism and $2 billion fishing industries.

Among those opposed to the measure were oil industry spokesmen and Reps. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., and William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif.

Dannemeyer said that the idea that California should be given more protection than Gulf Coast states, where 90 percent of the outer continental shelf has been explored, "smacks of elitism."

Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, agreed, saying that the dispute boiled down to aesthetics, which "shouldn't be an issue." But, he noted: "Those who live on the California coast simply do not want an oil rig in their sunset."

Pennzoil-Texaco suit nears end

HOUSTON (AP) — Testimony is over in Pennzoil Co.'s $15 billion lawsuit against Texaco Inc. and jurors will probably start their deliberations this week, the state district judge hearing the case said.

Attorneys are scheduled to make their final arguments Thursday. State District Judge Solomon Casseb said jury deliberations should start the next day.

Pennzoil claims in its suit that when Texaco acquired Getty Oil last year, it forced Getty to break a previous agreement to merge with Pennzoil. But Texaco claims Pennzoil and Getty never had a firm agreement for their merger.

Texaco bought Getty's outstanding stock for $10.1 billion in the second largest merger in U.S. corporate history. Chevron Corp.'s $13.3 billion acquisition of Gulf Corp. last year was the largest U.S. merger.

Alfred C. DeCrane, Texaco president, said during the last day of testimony Tuesday that he did not ask Pennzoil officials last year if the proposed Pennzoil-Getty merger was final because "we don't discuss any aspect of our business with our competitors."

Getty officials assured Texaco that they were free to consider other offers for their stock, DeCrane testified.

Pennzoil stated in a Jan. 4, 1984 press release that it had reached an "agreement in principle" with Getty Oil's major stockholders — the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum — to form a partnership with Getty Oil.

But two days later, Texaco issued a statement saying it would buy the museum's 11.8 percent of Getty Oil stock and would later buy the entire oil company.

"All our research, everyone we talked to, all our contacts assured us there wasn't an agreement between Pennzoil and the museum or between Pennzoil and the trust," DeCrane said.

Pennzoil is seeking $7.5 billion in actual damages and $7.5 billion in punitive damages for what it calls "tortious interference" by Texaco.

Pennzoil is basing its damages claim on the 1 billion equivalent barrels of oil and gas it would have gained in a merger with Getty Oil.

Also Tuesday, a California's 3rd District Court of Appeals in Sacramento ruled that the state cannot undo the Texaco-Getty merger because the Federal Trade Commission had already decided antitrust issues raised in the merger.

Getty owned an oil refinery in Bakersfield, Calif., and pipeline to transport heavy crude from its fields to the San Francisco Bay area. But Getty produced more heavy crude than it could refine and sold the excess to independent refiners.

Texaco, meanwhile, produced less crude than it had the capacity to refine.

The FTC feared Texaco would send Getty's excess crude to its own refineries.

Former thrift chairman admits to defrauding association

DALLAS (AP) — The former chairman of a North Texas savings association admits he defrauded the association by accepting $21,867 for approving two loans and failing to report the felony crime to federal authorities.

The admission was made Wednesday in federal court documents filed with the guilty plea of William A. Wylie, former chairman and chief executive officer of First Savings & Loan Association of Burkburnett in Wichita County.

The Burkburnett association is one of at least six Texas savings associations whose loans for condominium developments along Interstate 30 currently are under investigation by a federal grand jury, the FBI and the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Wylie's wrongdoing "was discovered in the course of the investigation but was not related" to the I-30 condominium financing, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Williamson said.

Wylie, 56, pleaded guilty to concealing a felony for failing to report his receipt of a broker's fee for the approval of two loans on Dec. 9, 1983, when he was president of the Burkburnett association.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of three years in federal prison and a $500 fine. Wylie is scheduled for sentencing Dec. 18 before U.S. District Judge Joe Fish.

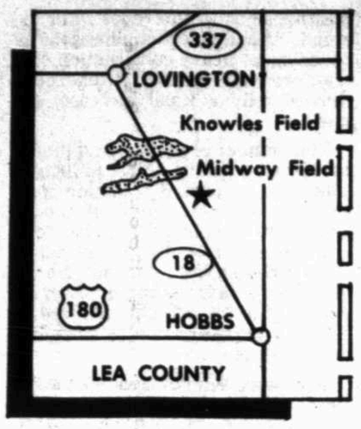

Wylie resigned his association post Aug. 13. The firm has been under the supervisory control of the Texas Savings and Loan Department for more than a year.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Tipperary finals 753 barrel well in Lea

From Staff Reports

TIPPERARY CORP., Midland, and W.A. Moncrief, Jr. have completed a prolific confirmation oil well in the Shipp Strawn field in Lea County. The Tipperary 4 State, No. 1, staked five miles southeast of Lovington, tested at 753 barrels of oil per day and 720,000 cubic feet of gas per day from the Strawn formation through perforations from 11,064 ft. to 11,130 ft.

The field well, located 2,310 from west and 660 from north of Section 4-17s-37e, offsets the discovery well for the Strawn field, Pennzoil's No.1 Viersen which completed approximately three months ago for 1,050 bopd. Now producing on a half-inch choke at over a 500 bopd allowable, the Viersen may be an indicator of the strength of the Tipperary well and other wells to come in the field. Pennzoil is almost down on its second well; starting a third and spotting a fourth in the field, while Tipperary has spotted another well one location of the State 4.

Regional development of the play could develop as other operators search for similar structures. According to Jim Gleitman, vice president production for Tipperary, the Strawn play was keyed on a dry hole drilled by Tipperary. "Pay zones consist of bank formations where there has been an accumulation of organic matter. There is little relief and the reservoirs, which have a pinch out for a trapping mechanism are extremely hard to find." He says the reservoir rock is very porous and very permeable.

Deane Stoltz, Tipperary chairman, said the well could mean a net increase of 200 bopd to the firm.

Tipperary and Moncrief each own a 50 percent interest in the well.

Exxon completes well for 50 barrels crude

EXXON CORP., Midland, continued development and extension of the St. Lawrence field of Glasscock County with the completion of the No. 1 Alfred Schwartz "B".

The well, which was the third producer in the field, pumped 60 barrels of 37.8 gravity crude and 30 Mcfd from perforations 7,423 to 7,454 ft. The interval was treated with 3,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 500:1.

The well was drilled to 7,570 ft. and 4½ inch casing was set at 7,565 ft. Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,715 ft., include Dewey Lake at 830 ft., Salado at 1,245 ft., Yates at 1,884 ft., Seven Rivers at 2,000 ft., Queen at 2,515 ft., San Andres at 2,964 ft., Leonard at 5,063 ft., Upper Spraberry at 6,222 ft., Lower Spraberry at 6,736 ft. and Wichita at 7,265 ft. Pay was topped at 7,243 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 2,000 ft. from east lines of Section 48, Block 35, T-4-S, T&P survey, 8.5 miles southwest of Garden City.

The discovery, Exxon's No. 1 Edwina Cope, was potentialed 10/18/84 to flow 552 barrels crude and 112 Mcfd from perforations 8,551 to 8,592 ft.

Spraberry discovery finaled in Sterling

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO., Odessa, has finaled a Spraberry discovery in Sterling County.

The No. 1 Joel D. Sugg "A" tested to pump 36 barrels of 37.4 gravity oil from perforations 4,882 to 4,894 ft. Treatment included 1,000 gals. acid and 24,000 gals. gel. The well, drilled to 6,500 ft., was plugged back to 5,064 ft. with 5½ inch casing set at 5,116 ft.

The well topped the Spraberry at 4,882 ft. Location is 467 ft. from north and 2,034 ft. from east lines of Section 1, Block A, GC&SF survey, and 12 northeast of Sterling City.

Runnels gains Middle Capps oil discovery

Runnels County gained a middle Capps oil discovery with recompletion of All Southwest Petroleum Inc., Lubbock, No. 2 Walter Adami, former Palo Pinto oil producer in the Freeman multipay field, five miles west of Crews to pump 95 barrels of 40 gravity oil, plus 190 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 527:1.

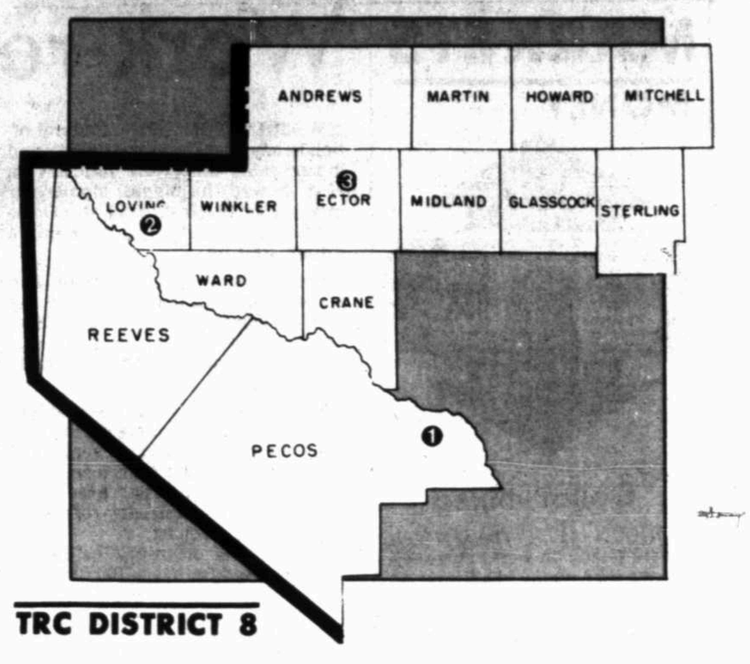

Production was through perforations at 3,788 to 3,802 ft., which had been acidized with 750 gallons.

It originally was finaled May 31 to pump 18.5 barrels of 47 gravity oil, plus 3.7 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 54:1 through perforations at 3,384 to 3,890 ft.

The following tops were picked on ground elevation of 1,733 ft: Palo Pinto, 3,384; Middle Capps, 3,784; and Gardner, 4,032 ft.

Location is 572 ft. from south and 1,545 ft. from west lines of Juan Jose Ximenes Survey No. 265, Abstract 569.

EPNG files proposal with FERC

EL PASO (SWN) — El Paso Natural Gas Co. has filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission a proposal designed to permit firm natural gas transportation, primarily to serve the enhanced oil recovery market of central California.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Coastal forms new company to transport gas

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coastal Corp. announced it has formed a new company that will handle intrastate gas transmission and sales that are not regulated by the federal government.

The new company, called Coastal States Gas Transmission Co., will sell and transport gas in Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama, according to a statement released Tuesday by Coastal Corp.

Houston-based Coastal Corp. is an energy company with operations in natural gas pipelines, coal, trucking, and oil and gas exploration, production and refining.

Kirby Exploration tells third quarter results

Kirby Exploration Company, Inc. announced net earnings for the third quarter ended September 30, 1985 of $1,782,508, or $.07 per share, compared with a restated net loss of $3,449,982, or $.14 per share, for the comparable quarter of last year. This year's quarter included earnings from continuing operations of $128,729, or $.01 per share, and earnings of $1,653,779, or $.06 per share, from a previously discontinued coal mining operation, and resulted from the reversal of a contingent loss reserve.

Net earnings for the first nine months of 1985 were $2,386,620, or $.10 per share, compared with a net loss of $30,902,869, or $1.29 per share, as restated for the same period of 1984. The 1985 nine-month results included earnings from continuing operations of $732,841, or $.03 per share. Last year's nine months included a restated loss of $1,756,260, or $.07 per share, and a loss of $29,146,609, or $1.22 per share, for the cumulative effect on prior years of a change in accounting for impairment of proved oil and gas properties. Consolidated revenues for the nine months of 1985 totaled $59,404,928, up 10 percent from $53,975,051, for the similar 1984 period.

EPNG receives FERC clarification on spot gas

EL PASO (SWN) El Paso Natural Gas Co. said that it has received clarification from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission which will allow it to resume transportation of large volumes of "spot" gas to its customers. The movement of this spot gas was terminated October 31. El Paso said deliveries of the spot gas would begin Tuesday with full deliveries by Wednesday.

El Paso had halted transportation of spot gas when it failed to receive FERC guidance on the implications of a recently adopted rule which provides for voluntary, open access transportation by interstate pipelines. While not opposed to the concept, El Paso had sought either to stay the rule or clarification on existing spot transportation. It was El Paso's belief that continued transportation of spot gas would automatically subject it to the open access ruling, without giving El Paso sufficient time to resolve "significant and crucial services-related matters with its cutomers." FERC late Friday clarified the points of contention which allows El paso to resume the transportation of spot gas without electing at this time to become an open access pipeline.

An El Paso spokesman said that the total amount of spot gas being hauled on an average day by El Paso prior to October 31 was about 20 percent of its total throughput or some 600 million cubic feet.

Devon, Stauffer announce acquisition plans

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Devon Resources Investors will acquire the oil and gas properties of Stauffer Oil and Gas for $17.7 million, according to a joint announcement made by J. Larry Nichols, president of Devon Energy Corp., which is general partner of Devon Rsource Investors, and Roy Sambrook, president of Stauffer Chemical Co. Stauffer Chemical is a subsidiary of Chesebrough-Pond's, Inc.

"The acquisition of the Stauffer properties is a significant step in the building of a strong oil and gas asset base for Devon Resource Investors," Nichols said. "The acquisition will add an estimated 1.7 million barrels of oil, 1.7 billion cubic feet of natural gas to Devon Resource Investors' reserves, as well as 16,000 net acres of undeveloped leasehold."

"Stauffer's presence in the oil and gas business is non-strategic for us," said Stauffer's President Roy Sambrook. "We have decided to sell these assets and use the proceeds from the sale to reduce the debt that Chesebrough incurred when it acquired Stauffer in March, 1985."

Devon Resource Investors also announced the filing of a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering the offering of two million Units. Of this amount, 1,800,000 will be primary Units and 200,000 will be secondary. The proceeds from the sale of the primary Units will be used to fund the acquisition of the Stauffer properties. PaineWebber, Inc. and A. G. Edwards & Son, Inc. will co-manage the underwriting of the units.

New strength may loom for textile bill

Bill moving toward Senate showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advancing under threat of a presidential veto, major trade legislation to curb textile and apparel imports appears to be gaining strength among Western lawmakers as it moves toward a Senate showdown.

Senators from copper-producing states, rebuffed by President Reagan in their quest for import relief for the mining industry, adopted a plan Tuesday that could mean fresh backing for the textile bill.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said following the meeting of the 11-member Copper Caucus that an industry amendment was certain to be attached to the textile bill and that it would switch at least three votes, including his own.

"I've decided that I'm going to do what I must, and to the extent that this is a change in my attitude with reference to textiles, so be it," the Senate Budget Committee chairman said.

The defection of even a scattering of the textile bill's Senate opponents would mark a severe setback for the Reagan administration's efforts to defuse protectionist sentiment in the congressional debate over trade.

The textile bill, the major import measure advancing in Congress amid heightened concern over the U.S. trade deficit, would force sharp cutbacks in shipments of cloth and apparel from Taiwan, South Korea and Hong Kong. It also would slow the growth of products arriving from nine other nations.

The measure, passed by the House in more stringent form, has won four test votes in the Senate since Oct. 2. The toughest roadlock left — other than a possible veto override — comes today when sponsors plan a move to choke off in advance any filibuster efforts.

Such an action needs the support of three-fifths of the Senate, well above the 54 votes obtained by sponsors on Oct. 30 in the most recent test.

The sponsors, Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., are counting on the Senate to remove roadblocks in the key vote today to avert a recurrence of delaying tactics by textile industry supporters that forced leaders to shelve two unrelated measures over the last six weeks.

Following the move to choke off debate, the Senate plans to launch into more than 20 amendments ranging from a proposal to spur farm exports to import quotas on toys for dogs and cats.

The vote on final Senate passage is set for noon Thursday. If textile forces win, the measure then returns to the House.

"I'm confident we can get the textile bill passed on the Senate floor," Hollings said Tuesday. And, "despite what's been said, I still believe the president will sign this bill."

The about-face by Domenici and, possibly, other copper-state senators marked the second time since the White House set out to defeat the bill that its trade decisions have boomeranged into more support for the measure.

Reagan declined Aug. 28 to follow a recommendation of the U.S. International Trade Commission on import relief for the non-rubber footwear industry. Within a month, shoe quotas were harnessed to the bill, expanding its support among New England lawmakers.

On Oct. 30, Reagan rejected a request from Western senators for talks with copper-exporting nations aimed at obtaining production restraints.

Domenici said he had reached his decision "because copper was being treated very poorly and very shabbily by the administration."

"We're working with the principle sponsors of the textile bill so that what we put on their bill will be helpful to them in their effort to get a House override of a veto," Domenici said.

Cutbacks called for by the bill would average 30 percent for Taiwan and South Korea and 12 percent for Hong Kong. Besides restrains on shoe imports, the measure also contains luggage quotas.

The measure is supported throughout the giant textile and apparel industries, which employ 1.9 million Americans, or one in 10 U.S. industrial workers, and by two major unions, the International Ladies Garment Workers and the Textile Workers.

The Reagan administration is joined by retailers and importers in condemning the measure as being guaranteed to narrow the choice for consumers, hurt the poor by raising prices, bring retaliation against U.S. exports and violate various trade pacts as well as the nation's long-standing free-trade doctrine.

However, proponents say the bill is needed to stem job losses caused by export competition. The Commerce Department puts the layoff total at about 200,000 over the last five years.

One man killed in oil barge explosion

HARVEY, La. (AP) — A petroleum barge, docked in the Harvey Canal for cleaning, exploded in a bomb-like fireball and sank Wednesday, killing one man, injuring five others and scattering chunks of metal over a quarter-mile area.

The Jefferson Parish Coroner's Office said it could only tentatively identify the dead man as Norris Billiot, 55, of Marrero, who was known to have been the only person actually on the barge when it blew up at the Gretna Machine & Iron Works.

A coroner's spokesman, Bill Donovan, said only unidentifiable human remains were found afterwards.

Witnesses said they watched pieces of deck tumble from the sky like petals.

"It was like if you'd taken a whole garbage can full of metal and just shook it down on us," said Ronnie Chiasson, an employee of Industrial Welding Supply, next door to Gretna Machine & Iron Works where the barge was docked. "Metal just kept falling and falling and falling."

"I mean it was awesome," said Chiasson. "The sky was filled with flying metal and I felt the heat on my whole body — it was that hot."

The force of the blast blew out picture windows a block away, rattled homes all over the suburban New Orleans area and filled the sky with flame and debris, witnesses said.

Phu Doc Thinh, 44, who came to Marrero from Vietnam 10 years ago, said he was about 10 feet from the barge when it exploded. Bits of metal hit him and landed in his hair, he said.

"It look like bomb," he said in broken English. "We run. We lie down. We run. We don't know what happen."

Capt. Lynn Sherman of the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office said cause of the blast was not known. The 280-foot Exxon barge which last carried oil was brought to Gretna Machine to be cleaned, he said.

"Part of the barge decking was thrown over 100 yards," Sherman said. "It ripped everything apart. All the machinery adjacent to it was all but totally destroyed."

West Jefferson General Hospital admitted three men to be treated for burns and treated two others for minor scrapes, said spokesman Bill Baker.

He said Peter Caillateau, 30, of Gretna and Danny Page, 28, of Boutte and Marcus Ray, 20, of Marrero, were being treated for burns.

Joseph Smith, 41, and Thinh, both of Marrero, had minor scrapes, he said.

Fire broke out on the barge shortly after the explosion, but it was contained quickly, officials said.

Besides the injuries, Gretna Marine had about $200,000 damage to its yard, said George Fegert, president of the company. "It's the first time we've ever had an accident like this."

"It knocked down part of our suspended ceiling," said Andre Jeanfreau, a salesman at Industrial Welding Supply Co. Inc., across the canal from Gretna Machine. "When we ran outside, we saw two big chunks of barge about 200 feet up in the air."

Nuclear project six months behind schedule

AUSTIN (AP) — Builders of the South Texas Project nuclear power plant announced a delay of six more months in the project, but say they are still budgeting the long-delayed plant at $5.5 billion.

The latest delay means that Unit 1 of the project will not have its fuel loaded until mid-1987 rather than December 1986, managing partner Houston Lighting & Power said in a statement Wednesday. The delay puts the start up date for the plant to December 1987 at the earliest, a San Antonio City Public Service spokesman said. CPS is one of four partners in the project, along with utilities in Houston, Austin and Corpus Christi.

"The fact that we may not achieve the full measure of our schedule objective does not diminish the significant achievements in both quality and cost effectiveness," HL&P said.

Announcement of the delay, based on a preliminary annual review of the construction status, came only hours after HL&P petitioned the Public Utility Commission to cancel its consideration of a proposed $750 million lawsuit settlement with the plant's former builder, Brown & Root Inc.

The two developments are expected to stir debate between project supporters, who say the Matagorda County plant is finally on target to provide vitally needed electricity, and opponents, who believe the project has been a colossal waste of money.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Tank builders settle strike, return to work

DETROIT (AP) — Most unionized tank builders returned to work at General Dynamics Corp. plants in three states Wednesday, a day after voting to end a seven-week strike that idled 5,000 workers.

But about 500 employees will not be recalled until the giant defense contractor reaches full production during the next few weeks, company spokesman William Sheil said.

"As various assembly line tasks are phased back into the manufacturing process, those employees not currently working will be recalled," Sheil said.

General Dynamics is the sole supplier of the Army's M1 and M1A1 battle tanks. Sheil said the company met Army orders for tanks in September, but management and non-union personnel built only 31 tanks in October, falling short of the 70 tanks built monthly on average.

The United Auto Workers union members voted 2,227 to 1,943 in favor of the pact, a margin of 53-47 percent.

Dismissed TMI operator now training others

WASHINGTON (AP) — An operator of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant who was dismissed following a cheating incident is now training reactor operators for another firm, according to Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass.

A Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigator found in April 1982 that Gregory Hitz of Elizabethtown, Pa., engaged in "a pattern of cheating" on operator licensing examinations required by the NRC. The report said he was fired in August 1981.

Hitz, who was never criminally prosecuted, was a TMI operator and he now heads a department of 20 people at General Physics Corp. of Columbia, Md., which provides training and engineering services to the power and defense industries. He instructs operators and technicians for pressurized water reactors and develops course training material.

Hitz's continued employment in the nuclear industry was the subject of a letter last week by Markey, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommitee on energy conservation and power, to NRC Chairman Nunzio Palladino.

UPI split confirmed, third bidder still trying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agreement to buy United Press International calls for Mexican publisher Mario Vazquez Rana to put up 90 percent and Houston developer Joe Russo to contribute 10 percent in a package worth more than $40 million, a source said.

Meanwhile, a third bidder decided on Wednesday to submit its offer to buy UPI, despite the deal between Russo and Vazquez Rana, who had earlier been rival bidders. It was announced on Tuesday that Vazquez Rana and Russo had been selected by UPI's chairman, the news agency's creditors and the Wire Service Guild.

New York-based Financial News Network Inc., which was coordinating the bid proposed by a consortium of four U.S. and two British firms, decided to go ahead with its offer Wednesday because "we had promised" to do so after contacting the six investors to make their proposal more appealing, said FNN President Paul Steinle.

UAW local, Chrysler reach tentative pact

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — A tentative agreement was reached today between Chrysler Corp. and one of two striking United Auto Workers locals hours after workers walked off the job at two plants, the union said.

Hourly and salaried UAW workers struck the Huntsville plants at midnight Wednesday in a dispute over their local contracts. The walkout, which affected 3,300 union workers, came 18 days after the UAW ended its nationwide strike against the No. 3 U.S. automaker.

Four hours after the strike began, a tentative agreement was reached on a contract for hourly workers, said Bill King, shop chairman of Local 1413, which represents the group.

The second unit, Local 1929, representing salaried workers at the two plants, did not have an agreement and was still on strike, he said. Officials of that local would meet with Chrysler officials later today for further negotiations, he said.

Local 1929 chairman Julian Brown said progress had been made Wednesday in negotiations until Chrysler took a hard line on several issues, including pay equity and seniority at the two plants, which manufacture electronics parts for cars and military equipment.

Arlington firm accused of sexual harrassment

DALLAS (AP) — An Arlington-based company has been ordered by a federal judge to stop sexually harassing its female employees.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer on Tuesday issued the temporary restraining order against ABC Rentals at the request of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

A two-month investigation by the EEOC into allegations against the rental company followed claims by two former employees of the company that they were sexually harassed.

Buchmeyer's order also prohibits ABC from interfering with the EEOC investigation. EEOC officials said they asked for the order after learning from other workers that the company was threatening to discharge those cooperating with the investigation.

Low- and moderate-income applicants will be eligible for 30-year mortgages at 9.7 percent. A down payment of 5 to 10 percent will be required.

To qualify, an individual applicant must have an adjusted gross income of $33,000 a year or less. Total family income cannot exceed $42,000 a year.

In most areas of the state, the loans will be limited to first-time homebuyers or applicants who have not owned a home for three years.

Culp swears local lawyers into state bar

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Even as Judge Vann Culp offered advice and counsel to the fledgling lawyers, he also advised them of American inventor Thomas Alva Edison's advice not to give advice: "I don't pay any attention" to any of it.

But Culp, 238th State District Court judge, tendered sincere advice on the legal profession on Wednesday, minutes before he swore in several lawyers who had passed the State Bar of Texas Exam and were admitted to practice law.

Culp cited the range of diverse people and groups — from presidents and congressmen to the poor and dispossessed — served by lawyers and quoted former Chief Justice Jack Pope of the Texas Supreme Court:

" 'Lawyers represent the despised, the unpopular, and the hated,' " he quoted. " 'They accept opportunities to advise the worst of people. They absorb the hostility of the community so that our guarantee of rights may be safe for everyone in this great country.'"

Sworn in were Nanette J. Baker and Michael A. Skawin of the Bullock, Scott & Neisig law firm; Craig L. Evans, Rick G. Strange and Scott A. Williams of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson law firm; and Frank N. Cramer, Jeffrey M. Johnston, Patricia D. Long and Michael C. Tighe of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder.

The lawyers were among the 1,512 law school graduates who passed the most recent bar exam; 2,254 graduates from the eight law schools in Texas had been seated for the 2½-day test. Of those, 67 percent passed but that percentage included re-treads — those who re-took the exam after previously failing it. Of the first-time takers, 76 percent passed, the State Bar said. Only about 30 percent of the re-takers passed the test.

Culp told the new lawyers:

- Continue your education in law.
- Next to being capable, availability is "the most important element to a successful practice."
- Always adhere to and be guided by the Code of Legal Ethics. "Always maintain a good image as a fair, intelligent and honest lawyer with your fellow lawyers and the public."
- Do not permit "monetary remuneration to be the compelling motive for performing legal work. Providing legal services for the poor and indigent will be very, very rewarding," he said. Such service will offer the lawyer "an inner sense of satisfaction" that no amount of money can buy. "If you perform good legal services in an ethical manner, monetary remuneration will follow."
- Support the U.S. Constitution. "The Constitution is the wisest instrument of government the Earth has every known."

John Gunter, president of the Midland County Bar Association, told the lawyers "the practice of law is an art more so than a science."

Medferd Owen, former president of Midland Young Lawyers Association and a board member of the Texas Young Lawyers Association, congratulated the lawyers for doing an "outstanding job on the bar exam" and complimented the Midland law firms for hiring the graduates before they took the exam.

Michael McElwrath, president of the Midland Young Lawyers Association, noted that "The bar in Midland is extremely gentlemanly in its conduct."

McElwrath said clients expect their attorneys to be dedicated. "All the knowledge in the world is not going to make your client happy."

PBRPC favors retarded program funds

By RAMONA NYE

A $48,138 request to continue a Midland program providing alternative living for retarded individuals received favorable comment from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Wednesday.

The $48,138 funding request will now go to the Texas Planning Council for Developmental Disabilities. The same amount of money will be matched by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens through local fundraising to make up the alternative living program's 1986 budget of $96,276.

The program's second-year budget is a $22,000 increase over its first-year operating expenses.

Staff additions, salary increases and the November opening of a second apartment complex for seven people caused the increase, said Ray Unterbrink, MARC's executive director.

The program, which allows retarded citizens to move out of institutions and into alternative living arrangements, saves taxpayers money and is more humane, Unterbrink said.

Keeping residents in the program costs about $25 per day compared to the $54 a day it costs to keep people in institutions, Unterbrink said.

Fourteen apartments are available in Midland for retarded individuals, but about 150 people from the Permian Basin area need this type of housing, Unterbrink said.

The program serves Ector, Pecos and Midland counties.

"A lot of people wouldn't send their sons and daughters to an institution and I don't blame them," Unterbrink said.

Putting people in institutions makes them unproductive and dependent, he added.

"It dehumanizes them. It takes away the zest for life. You're treated as a group instead of an individual. If you go in and don't have behavioral problems, you'll get them," he said.

In other action, the regional commission passed favorable comment on:

- A $385,000 proposal to the federal Highway Administration for making a 1.1 mile section of West Yukon Road from FM 1882 to West Loop 338 into a four-lane highway.
- A $92,413 planning grant request to the governor's office for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission's 1985-86 operating budget.
- An $18,500 grant request to the Governor's State Planning Office and to the Texas Department of Community Affairs to enable the regional commission to work with the Texas Community Development Program.
- A $42,000 contract request for an regional alcohol and drug abuse planning program.

Midland has 'young, healthy population,' report shows

Local death rates down; birth rates above average

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland has a "young, healthy population," according to an official with the Texas Department of Health. The TDH released a report showing trends in Texas for birth, death and infant mortality rates.

"From the figures, it appears that Midland County has a relatively young and healthy population," said Bill Barrington, director of statistical services. "The death rates are down for Midland County and the birth rates are a little above the state average."

According to the 1983-1984 comparison, said Barrington, Midland had 8.4 percent fewer births last year but was still ahead of the state average by 2 percent.

Midland also had 1.9 percent fewer deaths than the state average of 7.3 deaths per 1,000 people. The infant mortality rate — commonly used as a gauge to measure the quality of health care — was down substantially in Midland County from the previous year. Infant deaths locally were down from 14.5 percent in 1983 to 8.6 percent last year.

Barrington reported that in 1983 Midland County had 2,491 births, 625 deaths and 36 infant deaths. In 1984, 2,285 births, 617 deaths (all ages) and 20 infant deaths were reported.

County records for 1985 to date reflect those rates could be less for the current year.

"As of Nov. 11, we recorded 1,957 births, 10 fetal deaths and 494 deaths," said Mary Medrud of the Midland County Clerk's Office. "The fetal deaths recorded does not include all infant deaths, however."

Midland Memorial Hospital, where the majority of the county births occur, records an average of 187 births per month. With that average of 6.2 births per day applied to the remaining 50 days of court records, the birth rate would be slightly less than the previous year at 2,267 births.

Both Ms. Medrud and MMH, however, say that hospital records and county records cannot be compared.

"There are a certain number of women that use mid-wives that do not have their babies at the hospital," said Ms. Medrud.

Cynthia Brust, MMH public relations director, agreed that it would be like comparing apples and oranges.

"There's no way you can compare those figures," she said.

Statewide, 298,756 births, 116,755 deaths and 3,118 infant deaths were reported.

Overall, said the report, the state's death rate remained at a low 7.3 percent per 1,000 for the third year in a row.

"The actual number of infant deaths decreased...for the same period while the number of births increased by 1.2 percent," said Barrington's report. "The infant mortality rate is a traditional index of quality of health care."

The TDH stated that Texas "is lower than the provisional national rate of 10.6. Texas had 10.4 infant deaths per 1,000 births.

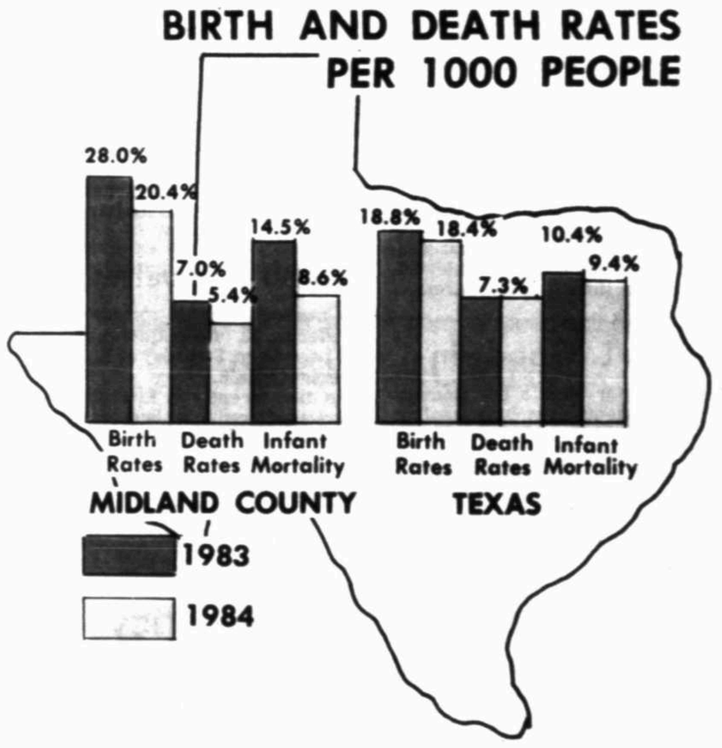

The U.S. Census Bureau estimated the state's population as of July 1, 1984, at 15,989,000. The excess of births over deaths added 182,000 to the Texas population last year.

According to the TDH, the leading causes of death for the state were: heart disease (39,782); cancer (23,794); cerebrovascular disease (8,974); accidents (7,240); bronchitis, emphysema, asthma and allied conditions (3,655); pneumonia and influenza (3,339); homocide (2,187); suicide (2,153); diabetes mellitus (1,972) and certain conditions originating in the perinatal period (1,461).

All together, said the report, the four leading causes of death in Texas were responsible for seven out of 10 deaths in 1984.

The leading causes of death nationwide in 1984, based on provisional national data, were the same in the sixth highest categories (heart disease; cancer; cerebrovascular disease; accidents; bronchitis; emphysema, asthma and allied conditions and pneumonia and influenza). Other national death leaders in the top 10 included (7) diabetes mellitus, (8) suicide, (9) chronic liver disease and cirrhosis and (10) atherosclerosis.

W.D. Carrol, chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, reported that the bureau now maintains nearly 26 million records for the state, including 15.6 million birth records, 5.6 million death certificates, 3.2 million marriage records and 1.4 million divorce records.

Justice challanges Gibson's charge he is to receive funds

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez has challenged former Odessa state Rep. Jay Gibson's charge that he is one of several high court candidates targeted to receive funds from a Houston-based group known as the Texas Supreme Court Justice Committee.

Gonzalez was quoted Wednesday by the Associated Press as saying he is "not for sale" and that he has "not met with the group."

Gibson, who announced Tuesday he will seek the Democratic nomination to run for the State Supreme Court seat now occupied by Gonzalez, charged that "a powerful group of elitist lawyers who do not like some of the rulings made recently by the present majority of the court has vowed to buy four seats' in the 1986 elections.

Gibson, who served three terms in the Texas House before being defeated last year by Republican Kelly Godwin, charged the Houston-based group "apparently has annointed Justice Gonzalez and plans to give his campaign $1 million." Gonzalez said he would not accept such a campaign donation from any group and resents that Gibson would "try to cast doubts on the court."

At a news conference Tuesday, Gibson handed out a copy of a memo from Larry Thompson, an attorney representing the group, which outlined the thrust of the campaign.

The memo bearing Thompson's name stated the effort should be nonpartisan to successfully raise funds. Referring to Gonzalez, the memo attributed to Thompson observed Gonzalez "is probably committed to the Democratic ticket, but he might have a better chance as a Republican." Gonzalez was appointed to the high court last year by Gov. Mark White.

In announcing his intention to challenge Gonzalez for the Democratic nomination, Gibson said his record as a legislator demonstrates his independence, as well as his "abilities to understand and resolve complex issues." The former Odessa representative stated, "That is one reason that the Texas Monthly magazine named me one of the 10 best members of the Legislature" in 1983.

Gibson, who obtained his law degree from Southern Methodist University law school after earning a bachelor of science degree from the University of Texas at Austin, has been in general law practice for 10 years.

Hazards of country living seemed to be without end

If the so-called sophisticated denizens of Big Town, U.S.A., think they have it rough with the plethora of insidious ills that abound and flow and creep into their precious bodies or just generate therein, they're off base to complain.

They have the you-should-know-better learning.

They should have grown up in the country. The hazards there were without end, it seemed. And it wasn't a matter of doing or not doing or being moral, immoral or amoral. We didn't have to know to stay out of bawdy houses or massage parlors or pool halls or beer joints or dance halls. There were none around anywhere at all. None. And we lived far from Dallas.

Our hazards as youngsters were that of a mine field, as any country bumpkin can tell you.

In the summer, we ran around barefooted. We got nails in our feet and tiny worms in our bowels.

It's not that we were ignorant. We just didn't adopt the city ways.

We ate lots of peanut butter and crackers and probably got stopped up. We ate until we were full or until the food ran out.

We learned the taste of green things, such as the styptic persimmons, and how to pucker up without intending to so. We tasted raw figs, green watermelons, and ate dirt-scratching chickens and mud-wallowing pigs, cooked our grease-fried foods in lard long before we ever heard of poly-unsaturated foods and cholesterol, and savored butter and home-made ice cream but had rather not churn.

At first, we didn't ruin our natural dirt roads by covering them with asphalt and crushed rock. We believed in keeping it natural and complicated. It was a chore to go down or up a mud dirt road. That's just the way it was.

We learned to live with blisters and calluses from the cotton fields. We figured that getting stung by a wasp, bee or ant was just as natural as falling off a galloping horse or being spanked by our parents and teachers or being verbally whipped by some preacher who screamed about "hell fire" and "damnation" and warned us against "painted women" and the sins of the come-hither looks.

We learned how to split spinning tops and crack marbles on the school playgrounds.

We knew how to play in the dirt, go swimming in the pools and creek, get lost in the thick timber land, hide in the hay stacks.

We survived the hazards of the sun and the wrath of an occasional crusty soul.

We lived through the mumps, chicken pox, sore throats, and, yes, the dreaded hiccups and nightmares and ghostly tales.

It was easy, folks.

Family into miniature horse business in a big way

GAINESVILLE (AP) — If it's true that good things come in small packages, then the Vern Brewer famly of Gainesville has a lot of "good things" trotting around on short, furry legs.

The Brewers are the owners of Brewer Family Miniature Horses. And while the stock may be tiny, the operation is no small fry. Together, Brewer, his children and their families own about 170 miniature horses.

"We operate as a family deal," Brewer said. "Each member owns his own horses. We all go to the shows. Sometimes we even show against each other."

Miniature horses are a new idea for many people. But for Brewer, dealing with small horses is a way of life.

"We raised Shetland ponies for about 35 years," Brewer said. "It's been about 20 years since we had them. We enjoyed that as much as any business we ever had."

The Shetland ponies are gone now, but it's evident Brewer is hooked on the minatures.

"We feel like they have a good future," he said. "We enjoy animals, especially horses and especially small horses. And these are about as small as you can get."

Roy Brewer shares his father's enthusiasm and fondness for the small horses.

"They have a disposition different from other horses," he said. "They're friendlier, more curious and more affectionate than any other horses. That's why they make such great pets."

The minature horses were developed in Europe in the 1600s to work in low-bedded coal mines, the younger Brewer explained. Several royal Eruopean familes took a fancy to the miniature horses and adopted them as pets, he said.

"They had them running on their estates, the same as people have dogs now," Brewer said. He added that the miniature horses cost about as much as a medium-sized dog to keep. A mini-equine eats about a quart of oats each day, and a bale of hay each month.

The Brewer family began its venture on a small scale, with six miniature horses.

"We thought that might be enough, but we had them for about 30 days before we went looking for more," Vern Brewer said.

Today, the Brewers are among eight or 10 horsemen who own more than 100 miniature horses. There are 7,500 to 8,000 miniature horses in existence. Most valuable are the 400 or so that are less than 30 inches tall.

Selecting horses for their herd has taken the Brewers to several states, including Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The Brewer herd, a mix of refined and draft-type miniature horses, boasts eight stallions.

The pride of the herd is the senior herd stallion, Orion. Brewer bought 42 miniatures from a Belgian breeder in order to buy Orion. Three of Orion's offspring (Yashica, Yin and Happy Appy) earned the stallion the coveted "Get of Sire" honor in national competition at the State Fair of Texas this year.

In addition, Yashica was named National Reserve Champion in the junior stallion competition, and Yin was named first in the yearling filly class. Yin and Yashica also were named "Best Matched Pair" in the national competition.

The pair followed in the footsteps of previous Brewer champions. In 1984, a Brewer yearling stallion was named National Junior Champion in the American Miniature Horse Association competition. A Brewer mare was named national Grand Champion in both the American competition and the International Registry competition.

During the national competition at the State Fair, members of both organizations voted to merge, Brewer said.

Brewer is justifiably proud of the horses' honors, especially Orion's "Get of Sire" award.

"I really think that's most important in the halter show," he said. "It shows consistency in the sire."

Jury sentences Odessan to 99 years in prison for man's murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 358th District Court jury of nine men and three women deliberated about three hours Wednesday to find a 30-year-old man guilty of murder and less than 30 minutes to sentence him to 99 years in prison.

Harry Lynn Herring, 6410 Ector Ave., was convicted of the Feb. 3 fatal shooting of 28-year-old Allen Dale Smith. Herring is also charged with attempted murder in the shooting of his 30-year-old former wife, Leslie Faye Herring.

Herring could have been sentenced to as little as 20 years in prison if jurors had found him guilty of the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter.

The shooting occurred in the early morning hours of Feb. 3 at a home in the 1100 block of East 52nd Street where Mrs. Herring, Smith and two other couples had gone after leaving an Odessa nightspot.

Mrs. Herring, who was separated from Herring but not divorced at the time of the incident, testified Tuesday she was in an upstairs bedroom when she heard someone knocking loudly on a door.

As she went downstairs, her husband passed her on a landing. She followed him back up the stairs, she said, but stopped when she heard gunfire and went back downstairs to the living room and was lying in front of a couch when Herring came downstairs and shot her. A bullet struck her in the thigh.

Smith was wounded in the abdomen, back and left arm by three bullets fired from a .357-Magnum revolver. Mrs. Herring and Stephen Scott identified a chrome-plated Sturm Ruger pistol as similar to the weapon carried by Herring at the time of the shootings.

In testimony Tuesday, Scott said he looked out from the bedroom he was in and saw Herring shoot Smith.

TDC bus transporting 75 prisoners to Huntsville breaks down near Midland

From Staff Reports

Midland Sheriff's deputies were scrambling this morning to find a tire for a Texas Department of Corrections bus carrying 75 prisoners to Huntsville which broke down southeast of town.

Officers from several law-enforcement agencies were guarding the bus, which broke down on State Highway 158 near FM 1213 about 6:30 a.m. after leaving the Midland County Jail, according to Sheriff's Office reports. Late reports indicated a tire had been found in Odessa, and the bus would soon be rolling again.

In other reports, a 53-year-old Piedmont, S.C., man was listed in fair condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning with several fractures after a Wednesday night traffic accident on Interstate 20 about four miles west of Stanton, according to hospital and Department of Public Safety reports.

Homer Davidson was injured about 9:15 p.m. while riding in a truck-tractor driven by William Reid Webb of Gastonia, N.C. The truck, carrying 40,000 pounds of fiberglass rolls, was westbound when it struck from behind a westbound 1977 Ford driven by Victor Manuel Rodriguez of Albuquerque, N.M. The truck ran into a bar ditch, struck a culvert and jack-knifed, according to DPS reports.

Webb, 44, was treated for bruises and abrasions and released from the hospital, the spokeswoman said.

Romanian seaman says he defects to U.S. because of religious freedom

HOUSTON (AP) — A Romanian seaman who walked off his ship as it was docked in the Port of Houston said one of the reasons he decided to defect was because of religious freedom.

Paul Firica, 44, said he wanted to leave Romania so he could practice his Romanian Orthodox Church faith and not do "voluntary work for the communist party."

Firica asked U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials Wednesday for political asylum.

Paul O'Neill, INS district director in Houston, confirmed that a Romanian seaman had left his ship and applied for asylum. But O'Neill and a U.S. State Department spokeswoman said federal authorities usually don't reveal defector's names, for fear their relatives will face reprisals.

The seaman said in an interview with the Houston Post that he had dreamed for years of defecting to the United States. He said he had waited until his family, which includes a wife and two daughters, ages 17 and 23, were able to live without his support. "With the help of God, they'll manage," he said with teary eyes.

Firica walked off the Romanian vessel Zalau Tuesday night. The ship, loaded with cattle hides, left for Romania Wednesday night.

Firica said he had heard during his voyage — which included a stop in Cuba — of Miroslav Medvid, the 25-year-old Soviet seaman who tried to defect in Louisiana last month, only to be returned to his ship.

"He was worried about that," said interpreter Bego Memet of Spring, himself a Romanian defector. "He thought they were going to send him back on the ship. If he would have been caught, the only alternative would have been suicide."

Memet said he was visiting a friend at the Harris County Jail in downtown Houston Tuesday night when he heard someone speaking Romanian. Firica had gone there, not knowing where to apply for asylum and unable to speak more than a few English words.

"He wants to live in this country and to work and to be free and be an honest citizen for the rest of his life," Memet said. "He's one of us now."

Ector County man's indecency trial expected to go to jury today

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The indecency with a child trial of a 41-year-old Ector County man continued in 244th District Court today with the case expected to go the jury sometime this afternoon.

Abel Carrasco Castillo, Route 12, Box 3214, is charged on nine counts of indecency with a child and one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child.

The incidents are alleged to have occurred between March 1983 and May 1985 and involved three girls, ages 9, 10 and 12, and a 9-year-old boy.

Assistant District Attorney Carson Grimm rested the state's case against Castillo late Wednesday afternoon before District Judge Joe Connally recessed the trial. Castillo's Houston attorney, Jose Medina, began presenting his client's case as the trial resumed this morning.

The indecency charges against Castillo allege he exposed himself to several children. An aggravated sexual assault charge against him alleges Castillo sexually abused a 9-year-old boy.

District Attorney Eric Augesen said late Wednesday he expects to bring Castillo to trial on that charge at a later date.

Texas to get funds for fish, wildlife

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas is getting $8 million from a federal excise tax for restoration of fish and wildlife, says Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis.

The money, $167 million nationwide, was generated by a "user tax" on sporting equipment. It will be used in Texas for programs such as wildlife research and purchase of land for state fish and wildlife agencies, said Barton, a member of the House Interior Committee.

Half the Texas share comes from a 10 percent excise tax on fishing rods, reels and baits, and the other half from an 11 percent tax on sporting arms and ammunition, archery equipment and a 10 percent tax on pistols and revolvers.

White promises to help town hit by gas explosion

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has promised to see what he can do to help the people of Mont Belvieu, a Southeast Texas refinery town rocked by a recent explosion.

"He appreciates the position the people are in," Mont Belview Mayor Fred Miller said after a Wednesday meeting with White. "He indicated he would do whatever he could. He has to look at the problem to see what he can do."

The governor said he would get back with city officials within 10 days, Miller added.

City officials want oil companies to buy the homes of families near the underground gas storage site where a recent explosion killed two men.

The governor said he was "going to get with the companies" to talk about the possibility of their buying out the homeowners, Miller said.

"I don't know what the state's role could be," the mayor said. "All we want out of the state and out of the governor is some help to get the people to the table to do what they should have done five or 10 years ago, which is take care of the problem they created and get the people off the hill."

White

Miller

The city is preparing a $125 million damage suit against industries in the refinery town.

Mont Belvieu, 30 miles northeast of Houston, is perched atop one of the world's largest salt domes. A dozen oil companies store gases used in petrochemical production in the dome.

The Nov. 5 blast at the Warren Petrochemical Co. plant occurred when an underground pipeline ruptured, spewing ethane, propane, isobutane and gasoline and triggering a series of explosions and a blaze that took firefighter six hours to control.

Two welders working on the pipeline before the blast were killed. Officials from Chevron, Warren's parent company, say the exact cause of the blast is unknown, but that it may been caused by a worker cutting the wrong pipe or failing to drain the line.

In 1980, about 820 million cubic feet of gases leaked from a Warren Petroleum underground well, forcing the evacuation of more than 70 families — some for as long as six months.

Last year, a Dow Chemical Co. pipeline ruptured, causing an explosion and fire that destroyed one home and damaged four other buildings.

Refinery town files suit to stop hydrocarbon storage

STATE

MONT BELVIEU (AP) — Attorneys for this refinery town filed a lawsuit seeking to enjoin industries from storing hydrocarbons in the town's salt dome and to collect $125 million in damages.

Houston attorney Lee Gill said Wednesday he will attempt to combine the latest lawsuit with one concerning a 1980 gas leak so he can get an early trial on the latest matter.

Mont Belvieu, a Chambers County community of about 1,700 residents, is perched atop a salt dome and about a dozen oil companies store gases used in petrochemical production underneath the town.

City officials Monday authorized attorneys to sue and take whatever other action is "necessary to protect the public interests of its citizens."

The council approved a suit seeking at least $25 million in actual damages and $100 in punitive damages.

Among the defendant companies in the suit is Warren Petroleum Co., a Chevron Corp. subsidiary and owner of a Mont Belvieu plant where a series of explosions on Nov. 5 left two men dead.

Chevron officials declined to comment on the litigation.

Other companies which use the salt dome include Conoco Inc., Tenneco Inc, Exxon Corp., Diamond Shamrock Corp, Arco Inc., Xral Storage and Terminaling Co., Citco Inc., Texas Eastern Corp. and Entex Inc.

"The ultimate goal of the city is to protect its citizens through whatever means available and recover damages to the city," attorney John White said. "One positive result could be improved safety procedures."

Scarce housing causes rents to soar in Mexico City

DALLAS (AP) — Thousands of people left homeless by Mexico City's twin earthquakes are battling for already scarce housing, pushing rents up as much as 100 percent in some parts of world's largest metropolis.

Burgeoning inflation coupled with the peso's declining value is aggravating the housing crunch, urban planners, real estate agents and tenants told The Dallas Morning News.

"In many cases, rents for housing have at least doubled," said Martha Schteingart, an urban planner with El Colegio de Mexico, a Mexico City-based think tank.

The Sept. 19 and 20 quakes destroyed or damaged an estimated 3,300 structures and caused approximately $4 billion in damage in the Mexican capital, the Morning News said in a story published Wednesday.

Officials said about 20,000 housing units, mostly rental property, were destroyed and hundreds of office buildings collapsed or were irreparably damaged.

"The effect this loss has had on the rental market is great," said Mrs. Schteingart. "Housing was expensive before, and this has made it worse."

In addition, the annual inflation rate was expected to be 60 percent to 65 percent, substantially above the government's target of 35 percent, officials said. The peso, trading at about 380 to the dollar just after the earthquake, went as high as 500 to the dollar last week.

The Mario A. Macias engineering firm, for instance, wasn't prepared for the time it took to find new office space or the cost of the new quarters.

"In many cases, rents for housing have at least doubled...The effect this loss has had on the rental market is great. Housing was expensive before, and this (earthquakes) has made it worse."
— Martha Schteingart, urban planner in Mexico City

"It took three weeks to find another office, and we are paying 100 percent more in rent," said Noemi Fuentes, a firm employee.

President Miguel de la Madrid said after the quakes that the government would strictly enforce existing laws on rent increases to protect tenants' rights.

But the Federal Consumer Protection Agency has received scores of complaints daily that landlords are trying to raise rents beyond legal limits.

Raul Cervantes, an agency spokesman, said Mexican law prohibits rental charges in U.S. dollars and annual housing rent increases over 85 percent of the yearly increase in the minimum wage.

But daily advertisements in Mexico City newspapers quote dollar prices for rents. And residents pay higher and higher percentages of their salaries for rents.

An advertisement appeared recently for a two-bedroom apartment in the fashionable Polanco neighborhood and a price of $800 was quoted in a telephone conversation.

The owner, who would not give her name, said payment would only be accepted in U.S. dollars.

Another Polanco apartment which rented for 72,000 pesos in August was being offered for 300,000 pesos last month.

"The law is the law of supply and demand in the jungle of speculation," said Sergio Puentes, an urban planner with El Colegio de Mexico.

Doris Bulnes, a real estate agent, said she has been inundated with requests for houses to rent since the quakes.

"We've received a tremendous amount of calls," said Ms. Bulnes. "There was a hysteria the first month.

"There is definitely a lack of housing," she said. "Most of the people looking are people whose homes were damaged or want to live in a safer part of the city. There are fewer houses for rent now than I've ever seen."

Workmen preparing Capitol Goddess for helicopter ride

A workman lowers one of the arms removed from the Capitol Goddess, in preparation for the upcoming helicopter hoisting of the remaining statue. A new statue will be cast and fitted in place of the current deteriorating one, which has sat atop the state Capitol since 1883.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Goddess of Liberty, who has held the lone star over the Texas Capitol since 1888, is now armless, and there's a chance she will be headless by the time she's removed from the dome.

The weather-beaten, 16-foot statue will be brought down by helicopter Nov. 24, according to Capitol Architect Roy Graham. A replacement statue, a duplicate of the original, is in the works.

Graham said he already planned that her left arm, which holds the lone star, had to be removed before the Goddess could be lifted. But the right arm, which holds a sword, was removed Wednesday as an "extra precaution," he said.

Also removed were laurels from the Goddess' crown and parts of her tunic.

"They're looking at her piece by piece," Graham said. "It's like getting her prepared for surgery."

The architect would like to complete the project without removing the statue's head, but he said further study is needed to determine if that is feasible.

Graham announced last month that the statue has become a potential hazard because of structural damage that could cause parts of it to fall from the 311-foot-tall Capitol dome.

After it's lifted from the dome, the statue will be re-assembled and displayed on the Capitol grounds for several days, he said.

Also Wednesday, Graham announced a plan to replace the diseased and dying elms along the Capitol's main south walk.

About three dozen sycamores will be planted next year. The existing elms, expected to live no more than five more years, will be left standing, Graham said.

"This strategy of placing new trees between the old ones provides a graceful transition into the future," he said. "We do not wish to remove the existing trees until they are actually dead."

For years, the elms provided a natural archway leading to the Capitol.

The planting project, scheduled to begin in February, will be supervised by the State Preservation Board in conjunction with Project Greenscape, an Austin Chamber of Commerce project.

The 14-foot sycamores are expected to grow quickly. Graham said records indicate sycamores were the first trees planted along the walkway in 1888 or 1889. Elms were added in 1903.

The sycamores are expected to resist the disease that has killed 23 of the original 36 elm trees along the walkway. Twenty-one elms have been removed.

Experts who studied the elms found incurable disease, insect infestations and defoliation.

Man who posed as female charged with murder in infant boy's death

DALLAS (AP) — Grand jurors have upgraded to murder the injury to a child charge against a man police say posed as a woman to get baby-sitting jobs.

Richard Arthur Gilbert initially was charged with injury to a child because the medical examiner's office had not ruled a baby's death homicide when the original indictment was returned Oct. 23, prosecutor Rider Scott said.

Gilbert, 29, is accused of dipping a 4½-month-old University Park boy he was caring for in scalding water on Sept. 26. The child died of his injuries on Oct. 16.

Gilbert is also accused ot sexually assaulting a 2-year-old boy he was baby-sitting earlier this year.

Police said the two children's mothers thought Gilbert was a woman. He used the name Jean Gilbert and wore women's clothing and makeup, they said.

Dallas council OKs smoking ban

DALLAS (AP) — Saying a law is needed to protect public health, City Council has informally approved an ordinance to regulate smoking in many Dallas buildings but delayed a formal vote until next month.

The delay is to accommodate a Dec. 4 public hearing that is expected to draw debate among smokers and opponents, as well as questions from small-business owners who must implement the proposed regulations.

"There will be an ordinance governing smoking, but at this point I'm not sure what it will be," Mayor Starke Taylor said Wedesday after a work-session debate.

"The city certainly has a responsibility to protect non-smokers," he added, "but at the same time, we have to be fair to smokers and the business owners."

As proposed, the ordinance would make smoking illegal in many public and private buildings unless it is specifically authorized by a sign.

Columbians jailed on drug charges

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Two Colombians are in the Nueces County Jail after U.S. Border Patrol agents said they found nearly $10 million worth of cocaine in a secret compartment in an 18-wheel tractor-trailer.

U.S. Magistrate Eduardo De Ases denied bond to Dario Gallego-Ocampo and Jose Ignacio Castrillon-Ocampo, both 37. They are charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

They were arrested at a border patrol checkpoint near Falfurrias Wednesday morning after 284 pounds of cocaine were found in a secret compartment in the trailer's sleeper, said Silvestre Reyes, chief of the McAllen border patrol sector.

He said after a routine check of the vehicle marijuana was found in a glove box and then agents searched the entire rig.

"They found a concealed compartment in the sleeper of the truck with 284 pounds of cocaine," Reyes said, adding that the cocaine was worth $9.88 million.

Bluebonnets could be cash crop

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A research project has been started to check out the potential of the bluebonnet — Texas' state flower — as a cash crop.

Edward Schneider, chairman of the biology department at Southwest Texas State University, said bluebonnets are among the most difficult wildflowers to grow, and seed is expensive.

"If bluebonnets can be successfully grown and harvested as a crop, the increased seed supply will lower prices," Schneider said. "The knowledge gained in this study will increase the ability to successfully establish bluebonnets in gardens, yards, parks and on other public and private lands."

The study is being conducted by botany faculty and graduate students from Southwest Texas State's biology department, the National Wildflower Research Center at Austin and the U.S. Department of Interior.

New Plainview police chief named

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Roy L. Osborne, who was a captain in the Big Spring Police Department, has been hired as Plainview's new chief of police.

Osborne, 31, was officially hired for the $32,500-per-year job during Tuesday night's City Council meeting. He was chosen from a field of four finalists.

AUSTIN (AP) — Arturo Eureste of Houston has been designated as treasurer of the new Mexican American Democrats Political Action Committee, which will raise funds for 1986 elections.

Other members of the committee include Ruben Bonilla, chairman of Mexican American Democrats of Texas (MAD); Minnie Garcis, San Antonio; Mickey Solis, El Paso; and Norberto Salinas, Hidalgo County.

She refused to identify anyone the group would consider "bad guys," but said "there are bad guys, but we are going to overcome them."

Burned body identified as banker

HOUSTON (AP) — A charred body found in an expensive sports car last week has been identified as that of Houston banker Edward G. Baker, Harris County medical examiner's officials said.

Harry Hall with the medical examiners office said Wednesday that Baker, 52, had been identified through dental records.

The banker's charred 1984 Jaguar was found Friday in far west Harris County. Baker founded Vanguard Group Limited, an investment company, in 1977.

His wife of six months, Sandy Baker, told reporters Sunday she feared two Miami mobsters ordered her husband executed after they lost about $1 million in a Vanguard investment venture.

"He told me they were going to kill him," Mrs. Baker, 41, said.

Houston private detective Clyde Wilson, hired by Mrs. Baker, said Baker was trapped in a serious financial bind.

One of the largest debts he owed was to two Miami investors with reputed underworld connections, he said. One of his deals with the men soured, and they lost about $1 million.

Despite numerous leads, Sgt. Earl Bockel said, "I'm afraid we're still at square one. We've developed no real suspects at this time."

Investigators also were checking on a second unidentified body found a quarter-mile away from the charred Jaquar car.

Reagan eases Star Wars stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan approaches his summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, no issue presents a greater test of the American president's negotiating skill and determination to achieve arms control than "Star Wars," the Strategic Defense Initiative.

For many months, critics of the president pointed to his unyielding public position on the missile defense system and said it doomed any chance for meaningful progress toward arms control.

But now there are signs that the White House is interested in a compromise that would allow laboratory research on the SDI to continue. So far, Gorbachev, who once indicated the Soviets would agree to such research, is taking a hard line against any continuation of work on it.

And as the president signaled a willingness to modify his position on the defensive system, he came under fire from many of his conservative supporters at home.

Those supporters recently were outraged by the administration decision to continue development of the defensive system under the limitations of a strict interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

"What has happened is that the State Department has succeeded in bargaining away SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative, the official name of the system commonly referred to as Star Wars) even before the summit starts," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The concerns voiced by people on all sides of the debate reflect widespread uncertainty over what position the two leaders will take when they sit down Tuesday and Wednesday in Geneva, as well as general agreement that Star Wars is a critical issue in any effort to make progress on arms control.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., one of six senators in a bipartisan group that met with U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva last month, said he found "cause for muted hope."

The senator, who has been active on arms control issues, said he believes there is "a slim possibility of some compromise being explored on SDI."

But he added "the degree of interest in compromise on SDI is unclear either in the Soviet Union or here."

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said he believes the United States would "lose a lot as a country if there wasn't some give and take on SDI" at the summit.

But Chafee said he wouldn't expect the president to tip his hand in advance.

On the question of development of Star Wars, Reagan's position seems clear and firm.

"It's going to continue," he told a news conference in mid-September.

The questioner noted the president was "known as a pretty good negotiator," and wondered if this was a case where there might be more room for compromise than he was willing to admit before sitting down with Gorbachev.

"This is too important to the world to have us be willing to trade that off for a different number of nuclear missiles when there are already enough to blow both countries out of the world," he replied.

Despite that firm line there is ample speculation in the capital that a compromise could be worked out, perhaps on the question of testing.

"We've got to remember the president has always shown a capacity to negotiate in order to achieve a worthwhile end. He has shown an ability to back off from fixed positions," Chafee said.

Chafee has long advocated that both the United States and the Soviet Union ought to continue their current research efforts on strategic defense but agree to a halt to testing or deployment in exchange for "deep and stabilizing cuts" in offensive weapons.

Gore referred to statements by Soviet officials that some research would be acceptable and also the criteria spelled out by U.S. arms control adviser Paul H. Nitze for proceeding beyond the research stage.

American bishops pray for best at summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expect no miracles but pray for the best, leaders of America's Roman Catholic bishops are saying in pre-summit comments on next week's U.S.-Soviet talks.

"Expectations for this meeting must be realistic," said Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. "The two sides have been hostile to each other for a long time (and) their world views and political systems embody different traditions and values."

"Yet it is essential to hope for a reversal of the nuclear arms race and to urge world leaders to take steps to make this hope a reality," said Malone, promising to pray the summit would "contribute to improved relations."

About 300 bishops, attending their annual meeting this week, tentatively agreed on Wednesday to adopt Malone's statement as their own. However, they were to be given a chance to amend or add to it before the meeting ends.

Crocker: Soviet Union promotes terrorism in Horn of Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says the Soviet Union has "systematically exploited" internal turmoil in the Horn of Africa as part of a bid to "destabilize governments across the continent."

In a major policy address Wednesday night, Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker said Moscow has supported "terrorism and dissidence" against established governments in that area and encouraged ethnic violence.

Crocker, speaking to the Washington World Affairs Council, said the United States cannot ignore the Soviet activities because of the U.S. need for access to airfields and harbors in the Horn in times of crisis in the Persian Gulf or Indian Ocean.

Crocker's speech was described by associates as intended to call attention to U.S. objections to Soviet behavior in the Horn of Africa in advance of next week's summit meeting in Geneva between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan, in his speech three weeks ago before the United Nations, had called on Moscow to help resolve conflicts in five pro-Soviet countries, including its key ally in East Africa, Ethiopia.

Crocker's speech, going well beyond what the president had said, contrasted the American and Soviet roles in the area.

"Via the Horn, the Soviet Union seeks a foothold in Africa whence it can destabilize governments across the continent," he said, adding that Soviet opportunities to "remake the world in a Stalinist image" will be foreclosed in an environment of "true non-alignment and economic and political growth."

Crocker said the Soviets' principal method of extending their influence in the Horn has been through the export of weapons.

"At the same time, the Soviets ignore the massive needs of the people," he said. "Indeed, the Soviets stood by almost mute as their own client state, Ethiopia, wrestled with one of the greatest human tragedies of our time, the devastating drought of the past year."

Of the 1.5 million tons of emergency food sent to Ethiopia since 1984, less than 1 percent was provided by the Soviets, he said.

In contrast to Soviet attitudes, Crocker said the United States is pursuing a policy of cooperation in the cause of "peace, stability, respect for territorial integrity and the improvement in the lives of all the people in all the countries of this region."

He said the United States, without attaching political strings, has helped save millions of Ethiopian lives with emergency food deliveries.

Crocker said that in Ethiopia, the Soviets have gained their "greatest foothold in the Horn" because of the "sellout by a small band of Marxist ideologues."

"Ethiopia stands not only as a bastion of Soviet influence but also as a case study of Soviet policy in Africa. Soviet influence and near domination have reduced this once-proud and traditionally fiercely independent nation, with a history dating back to biblical times, to near vassalage," he said.

While scorning U.S. overtures for improved relations, Crocker said, Ethiopia has pursued aggressive policies toward neighboring Sudan and Somalia.

"Under Soviet domination, Ethiopia has lost its reputation for peace, its chances for development, its internal stability," he said.

"It has become the one country of the region that makes no efforts toward peaceful solution of the region's many conflicts."

Crocker said Ethiopia occupies two small areas of Somali territory and also is the only country in the region "which puts its full support behind military actions in southern Sudan and blocks those who try even to see the SPLM (rebel) leaders to talk peace."

With Senate sewed up, textile trade stitches toward Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jubilant after an unexpectedly solid Senate victory, textile industry forces are focusing on a drive to dissuade President Reagan from a threatened veto of major cutbacks in Asian imports.

"I still don't think that President Reagan will veto this bill," Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said Wednesday after the Senate passed the measure 60-39 to restrict certain foreign imports.

Even though the final count exceeded by six the bill's margin of victory in the most recent test vote Oct. 30, the tally remained seven votes short of sufficient support to override a White House veto.

Hollings, a chief sponsor, said a veto would be "devastating" to Republicans in 1986 congressional campaigns and added that executives of the giant textile and apparel industries would soon pay a call on the president.

Passage of the measure, which now returns to the House for a vote on alterations made by the Senate, came after Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., again warned that a Reagan veto was inevitable.

Reagan has not said publicly he would veto the measure, but Evans quoted him as saying at a recent White House meeting: "I will not...sign any protectionist legislation that diminishes competition abroad or in the United States."

The bill is the only major import measure advancing in Congress amid heightened concern over the nation's burgeoning trade deficit, which totaled $123.3 billion in 1984 and is expected to rise by $25 billion this year.

Under the measure, textile and apparel imports from Taiwan and South Korea would be rolled back an average of 30 percent and those from Hong Kong an average of 12 percent. It also would curb shipments from eight other Asian nations and Brazil, as well as place quotas on shoe and luggage imports.

Critics say the bill would hurt consumers, break more than 34 international trade agreements and trigger retaliation in Asia against farm exports and other U.S. goods. Proponents counter that cutbacks are needed to slow layoffs in the textile and apparel industries caused by imports.

"Free trade is going to destroy America," an arm-waving Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., shouted as textile forces repeatedly throttled amendments offered by critics.

One opponent, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, charged the bill aimed not at solving U.S. trade problems but at commercial gain for home-state industries of the Senate's "raw protectionists."

"I don't mind people being protectionist," Gramm said. "I resent the cloak of the American flag that they drape over their shoulders."

Gramm labeled as unfair provisions that impose some of the harshest cutbacks on Hong Kong, which he called "a paragon of fairness" in trade relations.

"It's a port, it's a dock," Hollings retorted. "If you don't step carefully, you'll fall into the Sea of China." He said the British colony accepts "billions of yards of textiles from the People's Republic (of China) and grinds them into apparel" for export.

The Senate killed, 68-30, a Gramm amendment to exempt Hong Kong. Minutes later it also rebuffed, 68-31, another Gramm proposal to put Taiwan on an equal footing with mainland China, which escapes the bill's toughest provisions.

The Senate rejected, 60-39, a plan by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., to exempt overseas buyers of more than $400 million in U.S. farm products annually.

"It says to agriculture that we're going to kiss you goodbye, it's all over, we're going to send you down the drain," Baucus said.

"This amendment would tend to gut the textile bill," Thurmond retorted.

As textile forces scored victories in one round after another, some critics scrapped plans to offer amendments and Senate leaders telescoped an expected two-day debate into nine hours.

"This bill is really bad," said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., who was among opponents who scrapped amendments. "It is an embarrassment to Congress to pass a bill like this."

"We won't have a textile industry" without the bill, Thurmond replied, noting that, "what we're talking about is jobs and Americans."

The surprisingly strong margin for the measure on final passage came after textile forces reached an agreement with Western senators disgruntled over the Reagan administration's treatment of the import-battered copper industry.

Army toughens physical fitness tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, convinced that too many of its soldiers are passing their physical fitness tests without regularly exercising, has decided to toughen the semi-annual exam.

The changes, outlined last week in a directive sent to all Army units, will have the greatest impact on men over age 40 and women.

Female soldiers, for example, will have to perform nearly twice as many sit-ups as they do now to achieve a passing score. The new standards also will be applied to all members of the National Guard and Reserve.

The changes become effective next Oct. 1.

"Although some soldiers feel that existing test standards are adequate, there are several shortcomings in the current standards which have now been corrected," wrote Lt. Col. Robert Tetu, the chief of the Army's Individual Training Branch.

"The new standards are reasonable, but will require soldiers to participate in regular exercise programs. Under the old standards, many soldiers could pass the test without regular exercise. The Oct. 1, 1986, effective date was selected to provide adequate time to work up to, or exceed, the new standards."

Each of the nation's military services uses a different physical fitness test and scoring standards, with the Marine Corps' test considered the most difficult. In the one event that is common to both services — sit-ups — the new Army standard will match that of the Marines.

And unlike the Marines Corps, which makes its test voluntary for those over age 45, the Army is setting new, mandatory standards for all its soldiers right up to the age of 60. Currently, soldiers over the age of 40 must take the fitness test but need only pass a lower, "go-no-go" standard.

"Medical evidence shows that soldiers over 40 can physically stress themselves as much as they could when younger, as long as they are medically screened and healthy," Tetu explained.

The current Army test is based on the number of sit-ups and push-ups performed in two-minute spans and the time it takes to run two miles. Each event is scored on a 0-to-100 scale, with a score of 60 deemed passing. The minimums for that score of 60 differ for men and women as well as by age group.

For example, a man aged 17-to-21 must now perform a minimum of 40 push-ups and 40 sit-ups and run the two miles in 17 minutes, 55 seconds to pass. A woman the same age must perform 16 push-ups, 27 sit-ups and run the course in 22 minutes, 14 seconds.

Under the new standards, that same man will have to perform 42 push-ups, 52 sit-ups and run the two miles in 15 minutes, 45 seconds. The female soldier will have to perform 18 push-ups, 50 sit-ups and run the course in 18 minutes, 45 seconds.

Men and women over the age of 40 will face similar increases. A man between the ages of 42 and 46, for example, will now have to perform 26 push-ups instead of 2 in two minutes; 29 sit-ups instead of 25, and run the two miles in 19 minutes, 12 seconds instead of 21 minutes.

Even a general aged 60 will be expected to run the two miles in no more than 20 minutes compared to the current minimum of 22 minutes.

Morgan's killer has AIDS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marvin Pancoast, the man convicted in the baseball bat slaying of the late Alfred Bloomingdale's mistress, Vicki Morgan, is suffering from AIDS, his attorney said Wednesday.

"It's sad, but it's true," said attorney Charles Theodore Mathews, who is attempting to speed up an appeal for his client who was convicted in July 1984.

Pancoast, 36, was sentenced to 25-years-to-life in prison for murdering Miss Morgan, a former model who was mistress to Bloomingdale, the founder of the Diners Club and a close friend of President Reagan.

Mathews said Wednesday he remains convinced his client is innocent. Because of Pancoast's reported affliction with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the attorney said he wants the appeals process speeded up.

Sub-to-air message works

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon researchers, in the first successful test of its kind, have managed to transmit messages to a submarine cruising at "operational depths" using a laser aboard a high-flying airplane.

The experiment, conducted a year ago off the coast of California, was disclosed in an article written by a high-ranking officer with the Space and Naval Warfare Command.

The officer, Rear Adm. Thomas K. Mattingly, and other sources agreed such a laser system, if made operational, could have far-reaching implications. One of the more significant problems facing nuclear strategists is that of communicating reliably with ballistic missile submarines without requiring the sub to come up near the surface where it can be detected by an enemy.

Such a laser system also could allow easy communication between carrier battle groups and attack submarines, allowing airplanes or helicopters that locate an enemy sub to pass that information on.

Police commissioner quits

NEW YORK (LAT) — Philadelphia Police Commissioner Gregore (cq) J. Sambor, who has faced harsh criticism as chief architect of the May 13 police assault on the radical group MOVE that left 11 dead and 61 homes destroyed, said Wednesday that he is resigning for "personal reasons."

Mayor W. Wilson Goode accepted the resignation and said he will announce plans Monday for a complete "restructuring and reorganization" of the city's 7,000-member department, which has seen a widening FBI probe of police corruption reach into top ranks.

Sambor's resignation, the second of a top city official, comes as public approval of Goode's actions during the MOVE crisis appears to be falling and as Goode's credibility is being increasingly questioned, according to a series of public opinion polls since the MOVE confrontation.

Dump deadline moved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel approved a bill giving most states seven more years to establish new dumps for low-level radioactive wastes.

The Senate Energy and Natural and Natural Resources Committee, by a 15-1 vote Wednesday, approved a bill continuing until 1993 the availability of three currently operating disposal sites in South Carolina, Washington state and Nevada.

The measure, which already has been approved in slightly different versions by two House committees, is aimed at averting a potential disposal crisis in January when three states could begin denying other regions the use of the current facilities.

About 75,000 cubic meters of the low-level wastes are generated each year. Most come from nuclear power plants, but about 20 percent is generated by hospitals and radiopharmaceutical companies as a result of the some 200 million nuclear medicine procedures now performed annually.

Reagan speaks tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The major television networks plan live coverage of President Reagan's scheduled speech at 8 p.m. EST tonight, network spokesmen said.

CBS, NBC, ABC and CNN will broadcast the speech, which is expected to last about 20 minutes, the networks said Wednesday.

The three commercial broadcast networks also said they plan to delay their prime-time programming until Reagan's speech is completed so the shows will be seen in their entirety.

Suicide donates organs

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 35-year-old man walked into a hospital emergency room, asked a nurse if he could donate his body organs and then shot himself in the head, authorities said.

William D. Raney died about four hours after the incident, according to hospital officials who said Raney's eyes and kidneys had been removed for possible organ donation.

Tested drug melts membrane, disables AIDS virus

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists searching for the Achilles' heel of the AIDS virus believe they have found a promising new strategy — a drug that wrecks the crucial outer coat of the lethal microbe.

The medicine has not been tested on victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. But in the test tube, at least, it appears to be a powerful weapon that destroys the germ's ability to cause an infection.

The medicine, called AL 721, seems to carry no dangerous side effects, a major advantage over other experimental AIDS drugs.

In a cautiously worded letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine, researchers said this apparent safety "makes AL 721 a promising new candidate for clinical investigation in the treatment of AIDS and AIDS-related complex."

The report continued, however, that "it should be emphasized that results so far are preliminary and that much more work will be required to determine the clinical usefulness of this agent."

The letter by Dr. Prem S. Sarin of the National Cancer Institute and other researchers said that in test tube studies, the drug could protect vulnerable white blood cells from infection by the virus.

It attacks the virus but spares normal human cells.

"This compound is very non-toxic," said Sarin. "It doesn't do anything to normal cells at the concentration we used."

Researchers say that if it works, the medicine will represent an entirely new approach to fighting germs.

AL 721 removes cholesterol from the outer membrane, or envelope, of the virus, changing its structure. Without an intact envelope, the virus is powerless to infect and do harm.

Another of the researchers, Dr. Fulton Crews of the University of Florida, said experts have long known that solvents can kill viruses. But until now, no one has considered assaulting them inside the human body by drawing out the cholesterol that is part of their outer membranes.

"Cholesterol makes membranes rigid and hard," Crews said. "So when you pull the cholesterol out, the membrane does, in essence, melt."

Several other experimental AIDS medicines work by attacking reverse transcriptase, an enzyme the virus uses to take command of infected cells. However, many of these drugs also have damaging side effects that could limit their long-term use.

AL 721 was developed at Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel. It is being tested in the United States by researchers at Praxis Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif.

The AIDS virus attacks crucial, disease-fighting white blood cells known as T-4 helper cells. The cells are subverted into becoming virus factories, and they are killed in the process. Without these cells, victims fall prey to otherwise harmless germs that produce overwhelming infections.

Sarin said experts won't know how well the drug works until they test it on AIDS victims.

"It's too early to say whether it will be a cure," he said in an interview. "I think it will kill all the virus that are being produced by the virus-producing cells."

Presumably, these infected cells will eventually die. "So if virus-infected cells start disappearing, and the virus is made non-infectious, you can probably talk of a cure at a later stage," he said. "But that would imply you have removed all of the virus that could technically infect an uninfected cell."

Even if the medicine works well enough to do this, he said, it will probably be necessary to provide other drugs that would stimulate the body to replenish the destroyed helper cells.

Crews said that many other varieties of viruses, including herpes, have large amounts of cholesterol in their outer coats and might also be susceptible to drugs like AL 721.

"This membrane engineering may provide a whole new therapeutic approach to a large variety of viruses," he said.

The medicine could have other uses as well. It is being tested in Europe as a treatment for cystic fibrosis. Doctors believe it will dissolve the thick mucus that clogs victims' lungs.

More than 14,000 cases of AIDS have been reported to the national Centers for Disease Control since it was first recognized in 1981.

Bill would require AIDS test before marriage license

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — People seeking marriage licenses would be required to undergo medical testing for AIDS and those with the disease "in a communicable stage" could not marry in New York under bills proposed by two legislators.

But state Health Department spokeswoman Frances Tarlton said Wednesday she can't understand how the bills could be enforced if they become law, because "there is currently no test for AIDS. It doesn't exist."

And a New York Civil Liberties Union spokesman denounced the proposals as unconstitutional.

At present, the only way a doctor can diagnose acquired immune deficiency syndrome is if someone has symptoms of the disease, Ms. Tarlton said. "A few highly sophisticated research labs have a complex test for the virus, but that isn't generally available."

The bill released Wednesday by Assemblyman Frederick Schmidt would require everyone seeking a marriage license in the state to get a medical examination, including a blood test "as may be necessary for the discovery of acquired immune deficiency syndrome."

Sen. Ralph Marino said his bill would require all applicants for marriage licenses to undergo a test chosen by the state or New York City health commissioner.

Both lawmakers plan to file their bills this week.

Gov. Mario Cuomo said Tuesday he is not considering endorsing proposals calling for any mandatory testing.

While both measures say that the discovery of AIDS "in a communicable stage" would bar the victim from getting a marriage license in the state, they don't specify how a doctor should reach that diagnosis.

AIDS, which destroys the body's ability to fight infection, can be spread by contact with infected semen and blood.

"People applying for marriage licenses presumbably aren't in the high-risk groups for AIDS," Ms. Tarlton said. "About 70 percent of all cases diagnosed so far in the state have been among homosexual or bisexual males, with another 20 percent among intravenous drug users."

She said only about 1 percent of AIDS cases are believed to have been transmitted from men to women in heterosexual intercourse and there are no proven cases where the disease has been transmitted sexually from a woman to a man.

Thomas Stoddard, a lobbyist for the New York Civil Liberties Union, said the Marino and Schmidt bills are "unquestionably unconstitutional. Marriage is a fundamental constitutional right and it's protected by the federal and state Constitutions. The state may not interfere with that right.

"We need less hysteria, less misinformation and more compassion and clear thinking."

Stoddard said the bills would accomplish nothing under any circumstances, because people could always get a marriage license in a neighboring state.

According to state and federal health statistics, 5,491 of the nation's 14,288 AIDS cases since 1981 have been in New York state. About half the victims in the state and nation have died.

AIDS guidelines won't restrict health care, food workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government guidelines indicate no restrictions need be placed on most food handlers and health care workers with AIDS because there is no evidence that the virus is spread by casual contact, according to published reports today.

The new guidelines by the Department of Health and Human Services also recommend against the wholesale screening of workers for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, according to reports in The Washington Post, The New York Times and the Los Angeles Times.

Such precautions are not needed, the rules say, because there is no evidence that the virus is spread through the types of contact that usually occur at the workplace.

"AIDS is a bloodborne, sexually transmitted disease that is not spread by casual contact," according to a document that was being prepared Wednesday for final printing.

The rules were expected to be announced today at a news briefing by acting Assistant Secretary for Health Dr. James O. Mason. They are to be published Friday by the federal Centers for Disease Control.

The guidelines contrast with proposals in many states and in Congress to test workers such as teachers, food handlers and health care workers, and to put restrictions on potential AIDS carriers.

A summary of the recommendations says that since AIDS is not transmitted through the preparation of food or beverages, "food service workers known to be infected with AIDS should not be restricted from work unless they have another infection or illness for which such restriction would be warranted."

Health care workers are advised to be careful when handling blood or fluids in which the virus could be transmitted.

The guidelines say that no restrictions need be placed on health care workers infected with AIDS because there is "no evidence" the virus could be transmitted to patients under most conditions.

Caution is necessary, the rules say, because there is a theoretical risk that AIDS could be transmitted during major medical operations in which blood is exchanged between a worker and the patient.

Half of the more than 14,000 reported cases of AIDS in the United States have been fatal. Officials have estimated that about 1 million Americans may be carriers of the disease, although most of them are apparently healthy.

Fear of DTP vaccine side effects doubles whooping cough rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whooping cough cases among American youngsters, some of them fatal, have nearly doubled over the last three years as parents wary of possible side effects of the vaccine apparently have chosen not to immunize their children, medical experts say.

The American Academy of Pediatrics says 2,258 cases of whooping cough had been reported to federal epidemiologists from Jan. 1 through mid-October, compared with a total of 1,342 cases in all of 1982.

Dr. Martin H. Smith, the academy's president, also cited 10 local "near-epidemic" outbreaks of pertussis, the disease's clinical name, during the past year, some of them resulting in brain damage or death.

Smith called the outbreaks alarming and attributed them to fears among parents of rare side effects from the diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccine, generally known as DTP. Too many parents are worrying about the vaccine without concern for the much greater risk of the illness itself, he said.

"Clearly, scientifically valid information about the pertussis vaccine isn't reaching parents as quickly as it should, while misinformation and half-truths are rampant," Smith said.

The disease is still rare by historical standards. In 1930, doctors reported some 250,000 cases a year, with deaths ranging from 4,000 to 5,000 annually. Mass vaccination, started after World War II, virtually wiped out the disease.

But the vaccine does carry some risk. A British epidemiological study conducted from 1976 to 1979 found that serious brain damage resulted within seven days of vaccination in one of every 110,000 vaccinations.

That risk has been the focus of congressional hearings into the question of whether pharmaceutical companies who produce the vaccine should be liable in court for the damage, or whether the government should absolve them of liability because of the greater good of protecting thousands of children's lives.

Legislation is pending in Congress to create a compensation program to provide financial relief for children who are stricken with the rare side effects without punishing drug companies and possibly forcing them out of the business.

Publicity surrounding those hearings has frightened many parents and overshadowed the risk of the disease itself, Smith said.

The pediatrics academy said the risk of suffering the same brain damage from whooping cough itself is one in 9,500 cases. The risk to infants is even higher. A study published in "The Journal of Respiratory Diseases" calculated that an infant less than a year old faces a 1 in 500 chance of dying if stricken with pertussis.

Insurance premiums tax obstetricians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Malpractice insurance premiums for obstetricians have risen an average of $9,871 over the last two years, prompting a growing number of physicians to leave the field or limit their practices, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said today.

The professional organization, releasing the results of a survey of some 1,400 obstetricians-gynecologists, said the rising malpractice insurance fees threaten to limit women's access to quality care by driving physicians to fields with a lower risk of being sued.

"The most dramatic and discouraging trend is the growing proportion of physicians who are decreasing the level of high-risk obstetrics," said Dr. William Mixson, the organization's president.

Record harvests in farm states are filling grain storage space, causing thousands of bushels of milo to be piled down two blocks of Main Street in Elk Creek, Neb.

Bountiful harvest bulges grain belt

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A bountiful harvest is filling Farm Belt granaries to overflowing, and in one town, mountains of milo have been piled up on Main Street because there's no place else to put the grain.

The 1985 harvest is not complete, and based on crop projections issued Tuesday by the Agriculture Department, analysts said granaries could still be bulging a year from now because of this year's record yields.

University of Nebraska agriculture economist Lynn Lutgen said the bountiful harvest should not significantly affect grain prices now because officials had projected large yields. But Lutgen said the effect on the depressed agricultural economy next year could be serious.

"Prices may drop a little in the near future, but I'm more concerned about the problems we're going to face next year with even an average or mediocre crop," Lutgen said. "Some guys are going to be better off, while for others the hole is just going to get deeper."

Mounds of milo, or sorghum, cover two blocks of the street in downtown Elk Creek, but there have been few complaints from the 140 residents of the southeastern Nebraska town.

Francis Searcey, owner of the Elk Creek Grain Co., estimated that more than 300,000 bushels of milo are on the street in piles 30 to 35 feet high.

"In some ways, we're just tickled we've got the problem. It's better than having a lean year," Searcey said.

"People in the community don't seem to mind because they know we all live off this pile of milo. Every business we have in this town is based on agriculture."

Searcey said elevators he owns in Filley and Lewiston also are filled, causing grain to be piled on the ground in those communities.

The problems caused by the shortage of storage space are more serious than the inconvenience Elk Creek residents face because Main Street is blocked, Searcey said.

In Nebraska, farmers cannot receive warehouse receipts unless their grain is placed in licensed granaries. Without receipts, they cannot get government loans available to farmers participating in federal programs.

"For a lot of farmers, it means they've harvested their crops, but don't have anything to show for it. Our producers need the money and they need it now," said Searcey.

But Steve Miller, a grain warehouse examiner with the Nebraska Public Service Commission, said the storage requirement is necessary. "If we write a receipt it becomes collateral on the loans, and we can't guarantee the grain on the ground isn't going to spoil because it's exposed to so many elements."

House floats water package to Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, trying to end a nine-year drought on new Corps of Engineers water projects, is asking the Senate to consider a $20 billion public works package that offers something for almost everyone.

The measure, which passed the House, 358-60, on Wednesday, contains 230 new projects and proposes expansion of or repairs to another 150 or so existing efforts. Included are flood-control dams, harbors, hydroelectric facilities, beach restorations, roads, bridges, inland waterways and loans for municipalities for drinking water systems.

But to call the bill "pork barrel" is "total nonsense," according to the man who spent nearly three years putting it together, Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the Public Works water resources subcommittee.

Roe says the huge authorization measure is "the most comprehensive and environmentally sensitive bill ever developed...a major legislative initiative that will determine the nation's water policy for the rest of the century."

Webster's International Dictionary defines pork barrel as "government money spent for political patronage, as for local improvements to please the voters in a district."

If nothing else, the measure is the biggest omnibus package of its type in 15 years and is part of compromise process that members of Congress hope will break a deadlock that has prevented approval of any new Corps projects since 1976.

The impasse has centered on assertions by the Senate and various administrations that local beneficiaries should begin paying a greater share of the cost of a project.

In the House bill is language that, for example, would force a locality to come up with 25 percent of the cost of a flood-control dam. It also would slap a 0.04 percent tax on exports and imports to help pay for port projects.

Supporters of cost-sharing, including the Reagan administration, say it will help the deficit-ridden federal Treasury and weed out nonessential projects if local beneficiaries have to help pay for them.

Legislation still being studied by Senate committees would require even greater levels of local contributions. The Senate bill proposes authorizing 167 projects at an estimated completion cost of $10.1 billion.

Roe says that even though the House voted for cost-sharing below what the Senate proposes and the administration wants, he will support higher levels when House conferees sit down with their Senate counterparts to resolve their differences.

The House bill also does some long-overdue housecleaning by seeking deauthorization of more than 200 Corps projects that never have been fully completed or in many cases even begun.

Many members of Congress weren't even in their offices when the bulk of these musty projects were approved. Some even date back to the last century, such as the Ohio River Open Channel in Illinois, which was authorized March 2, 1827.

With the Christmas recess fast approaching, Roe says he doesn't expect the Senate to pass its version of the bill until early next year.

And even after Congress agrees on a package that President Reagan will sign, the money is not expected to begin flowing anytime soon. Authorization is just the first step.

Before work can begin on a project, Congress must enact separate legislation appropriating money for it, and the fiscal 1986 appropriations bill for the Corps of Engineers already has become law without funds for the new projects.

But the House bill contains a provision that could smooth the appropriations process. It names two facilities on the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway after Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala.

Bevill is chairman of the Appropriations energy and water development subcommittee.

Water bill gives Texas $550 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas would receive more than $550 million for flood control, recreation and navigation water projects if Congress passes and funds the water projects bill.

The $550 million is the total estimated cost of completion of the Texas projects, except for the Houston Ship Channel, for which no cost estimate was available.

In the list of Texas projects, "SH" means the project is included in the Senate and House versions of the legislation. "S" means it is in the Senate bill only. "H" means it is in the House bill only.

Plan to give vouchers for private schools denounced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposal to give poor parents vouchers they could spend on public or private schools faces formidable obstacles in Congress and a certain legal battle should it ever clear all the legislative hurdles.

Reactions to Secretary of Education William J. Bennett's TEACH plan — a loosely drawn acronym for "The Equity and Choice Act" — were predictable Wednesday: most public educators denounced it with a vengeance, while parochial school leaders offered hymns of praise.

Robert L. Maddox, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, which won a recent Supreme Court decision barring the use of public school teachers to conduct remedial classes in parochial schools, said the vouchers were "just one more effort by the Reagan administration to funnel public funds into parochial schools."

Maddox said the voucher plan was patently unconstitutional and he vowed to go to court if the bill ever becomes law.

The Education Department estimated the average voucher would be worth $600, but it could range from a few hundred dollars to $1,300 per pupil in some places, depending on how many children shared in the Chapter 1 aid, undersecretary Gary L. Bauer estimated.

Bennett aides said Wednesday that legislation authorizing the TEACH initiative would be introduced sometime this week by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, and in the House by freshman Republican Patrick L. Swindall of Georgia.

Swindall said the bill would reintroduce "the concept of free enterprise to our educational system."

The administration's failure to enlist a more prominent House Republican to carry its flag signaled the difficulties the voucher plan faces in the heavily Democratic House.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., the chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, which has jurisdiction over the $3.7 billion Chapter 1 remedial program from which the voucher funds would be taken, denounced the plan as a "backdoor attempt to dismantle federal aid to education."

At least one public educator, however, said he wasn't afraid of vouchers.

Herb A. Sang, superintendent of the Duval County system in Jacksonville, Fla., said, "I like that competition. In my opinion, we wouldn't lose anyone. It's hard to beat being free because all expenses are paid to attend public schools."

"The poor deserve the right to choose the type of school that best serves their needs," said the Rev. Jack Meyers, president of the National Catholic Educational Association.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Featured items not always on sale

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. As a warning to other readers, I would like to tell you what happened to me in a supermarket. As I was going down the aisle, there were some cardboard boxes stacked along the side. On top of the boxes were about 30 small boxes of chocolate mints. On an impulse I decided to put a box of these mints in my cart. Going down the next aisle, I encountered the same thing.

I decided to get another, but this time looked around both aisles for a price. There wasn't any. Since the boxes were very small, I figured they were 50 or 75 cents each and kept both. When I got home, I went over the register tape and saw that they were $2.50 each. I had spent $5 for a handful of mints!

I think it is a devious practice to stack products away from their usual place without a price. Is this what computer pricing is going to lead to?

A. I, too, have fallen victim to impulse buying, especially when the product is away from its usual place. For some reason, we tend to think it's on sale.

I contacted the supermarket in question, and its public relations representative apologizes for this "error" and the inconvenience it caused you. Incidentally, have you ever searched around a large ice cream case in a supermarket, trying to find prices? Some of the so-called gourmet ice creams can cost twice as much as you think they do, so beware.

Q. Someone told me that it's a scientific fact that every time a fly lands, it defecates. For instance, if you're eating a sandwich and a fly lands on it, you can be sure that it has deposited fecal matter on your food. Is this true? L. C., Red Hook, N.Y.

A. Donald Rutz, a professor of entomology at Cornell University, states that defecation does not occur every time a fly lands. However, flies do regurgitate and defecate while feeding and also while resting.

"Flies," says Rutz, "by nature of their structure and opportunistic habits are an important disease-transmitting insect. They feed readily on both human and animal food and their excrement. Therefore, since we don't know where flies have been walking or feeding prior to landing on our food, we should make every effort to prevent flies from doing so."

Incidentally, if you're one of those people who feels guilty every time you swat a fly, hear this: The progeny of two flies mating in April would, if all survived, cover the earth by August with a disgusting blanket 47 feet thick. (So reports Bernice Lifton in the book "Bug Busters.")

Q. I have noticed that sometimes the word whiskey is spelled without an "e", as whisky. This difference in spelling is seen on bottles and some ads. Why is this?

A. The word whiskey, or whisky, comes from the Celtic word "usquebaugh," which means "water of life." The British prefer to spell whisky without the "e", so that in ads or on bottles of alcohol made in England, Scotland or Canada the "e" will generally be omitted. On bottles of alcohol made in America, it's spelled "whiskey."

Q. I know skim milk has no fat; I can understand milk with 1 percent fat and milk with 2 percent fat. But what is the percent of fat in regular whole milk? It's not listed on milk cartons. Betty Bowden, Bridgeton, N.J.

A. Regular whole milk is 3.25 percent fat. Then there is 2 percent lowfat and 1 percent lowfat. Skim milk has .25 percent fat. The lowest in fat is nonfat, dry instant milk with a mere .17 percent. Buttermilk belies its name, only .88 percent fat.

As far as calories are concerned, chocolate milk with 2 percent lowfat has 179 per cup, with regular whole milk coming in second with 150 calories, 2 percent lowfat with 121 calories, 1 percent with 102, and nonfat dry milk, reconstituted, with 82.

Reader Feedback:

R.C., Palo Alto, Calif.: "A while back you had some suggestions from readers as to what to do with the 35mm plastic film canisters everyone has lying around. I have a suggestion. Since I travel a lot, I was always misplacing the little keys and locks that go to my various pieces of luggage. Although I hardly ever lock them up, occasionally I have to. What I do now is store them in a film canister which I keep in the largest suitcase. When I lock everything up, I transfer the canister with the keys in them to my purse. Very handy and easy to find."

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Ice cream resistible

By LINDA ANDERSON

My 4-year-old taste-tester is now a 5-year-old.

In honor of this auspicious occasion, we found something to taste-test that is actually a combination of two of her favorite things.

Tootsie-Roll ice cream (really!) is vanilla ice cream with a ribbon of Tootsie Roll-flavored chocolate laced through it. The duet of two favorite sweets (the 5-year-old is only one of a long line of ice cream connoisseurs in the family) was too irresistible. We often find it impossible to resist ice cream, of nearly any flavor, or Tootsie Rolls. But the two combined?

The ice-cream-loving adults, children and teen tasters eagerly checked out this new twist on an old favorite for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Like most ice creams, Tootsie Roll is available in half-gallon containers. The price per half-gallon was $2.50. Name-brand ice creams often cost from $2.50 to $3, though store-brands tend to be cheaper (and taste just as good), sometimes even as low as $1.69 per half-gallon, on sale. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising described the ice cream as "homestyle" and "old fashioned home freezer style." It also claimed the product was "An American Tradition," though whether that statement referred to the Tootsie Roll or the ice cream was never made clear. How can a brand-new flavor be a tradition?

The label also claimed the product had "artificial flavor added." The artificial flavor was joined by strange-sounding items, including guar gum, locust bean gum, polysorbate 80, calcium carregeenan and annatto color, as listed in the ingredient label.

But all those enormous words didn't stop us from tasting the product. Ice cream, whether homemade or store-bought, is, after all, the staff of life.

I hate admit it, but this new "American Tradition" was a disappointment to the tasters. The vanilla ice cream part was delicious, but the Tootsie Roll ripple was — well, awful. It tasted too strong, too Tootsie Roll, if that's possible.

We did finish the carton. But we probably won't buy it again. However, I've seen other frozen dessert items flavored with Tootsie Roll that I have got to try ...

Using seatbelts especially important during holidays

CHICAGO (AP) — Holidays are a time of increased automobile travel for family visits and celebrations. It is also the time when it's most important to remember to buckle up, warns the American Association for Automotive Medicine here.

Traffic crashes are the third largest killer in the United States, after cancer and heart disease, notes Elaine Petrucelli, executive director of the association.

In fact, she adds, a report recently issued by the National Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta stated that more than 50 percent of deaths and serious injuries from automobile collisions could be prevented by wearing safety belts.

Although in many states the use of seatbelts is now required by law, it is important to get into the habit of buckling up even where their use is not mandatory, Petrucelli points out.

Petrucelli offers these tips to insure that nothing will mar the festive season during holiday travel:

• People generally drink more during the holidays. Although you may not be drinking, the danger from your fellow drivers makes it even more important than usual to wear your safety belt.

• It's a good idea to stow packages in the trunk of your car, instead of on the back seat or on passengers' laps. That way, there will be no excuses for not wearing a seatbelt.

• Be sure to dig out all the safety belts in your car — both front and back — before setting out on your holiday journey. Easy accessibility encourages balky passengers to use their belts.

• If you are driving in snowy or icy weather, your chances of having a collision are greater than in fair weather. So just when buckling up seems most inconvenient (bulky clothes, etc.), it's especially important to wear your seatbelt and fasten it properly.

• Before making a lengthy drive, you may want to remove heavy overcoats for both easier buckling up and a more comfortable temperature during your trip.

• For the best protection, be sure that the lap part of your belt is positioned as low as possible on your pelvis. Your shoulder belt should have no more than a fistful of slack, to allow you to move around.

• Look to community resources for child safety seats. Some local police departments and community organizations now stock quantities of child safety seats to accommodate additional youngsters who may be visiting your household during the holidays.

• If you're planning to rent a car for your trip, make sure child safety seats are available. Some car rental services will provide seats if notified ahead of time. Other companies are sure to follow if they receive enough requests.

• To raise your teen-ager's consciousness on the lifesaving value of safety belts, clip out dramatic statistics and newspaper stories about holiday accident fatalities and put them where the kids will see them.

Zinc necessary

By MARIAN FARR

Zinc — the same mineral used for covering pipes and galvanizing buckets — is an essential element in the diet, but not necessarily one you need to get from a pill.

Zinc is available in a wide variety of foods including red meat, liver, poultry, eggs and seafood. Zinc is also found in whole grain products like whole wheat or rye bread, oatmeal and whole corn, although it's in a form that is less available to the body than the zinc contained in meat.

For example, two 3½-ounce servings of red meat, two slices of whole wheat bread and an egg would meet an adult's daily requirement for zinc. Most people will not need more zinc than they can get from eating a balanced diet, and in fact, can create a mineral imbalance in their bodies by consuming zinc supplements.

The Recommended Dietary Allowance for adults is 15 milligrams of zinc per day, with an additional five milligrams during pregnancy and an extra 10 milligrams during lactation. The most prominent signs of a zinc deficiency are loss of appetite, failure to grow, skin changes, impaired wound healing and decreased taste acuity.

If you think you have a zinc deficiency, it's important to consult with a doctor before taking supplements because too much zinc will interfere with other vital body functions. Taking large amounts of zinc in some forms can cause vomiting and gastrointestinal irritation, and may also interfere with other essential minerals in the diet.

Complainers make good customers

ARNOLD, Md. (AP) — Companies that cultivate complaints about their products or services are finding that complainers make loyal customers, according to a marketing expert.

"It is in every company's best interest to encourage what they dread most, and to ask for complaints," says George R. Walther of the Telemarketing Foundation.

"If the complaint is resolved quickly, the complainer is nine times as likely to continue as a customer," he noted.

DEAR ABBY

'Rivalry' ending

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: First this appeared in my column:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of four lovely daughters. The eldest is 11. I'll call her Agnes. When Agnes was 3, her father died. Two years later, I remarried. Every summer, the parents of my first husband take Agnes for a month. Their son was their only child, and Agnes is their only grandchild. So far Agnes has been to Disneyland, Hawaii, Mexico and Europe. My husband and I cannot afford to take our other three children on trips like that, and they are understandably envious and resentful. I'm sure with all the divorces, deaths and remarriages, this is a common problem. If you or any of your readers have a solution, I'd appreciate knowing it. — TORN

"DEAR TORN: What are your alternatives? To deny Agnes those exotic trips with her grandparents in order to avoid being envied by her half-sisters? Not fair to Agnes. To ask the grandparents to take one of the half-sisters along every year in the interest of family unity? Rather presumptuous. It would be very generous if they were to offer, but that idea would have to originate with them. Readers?"

Did I get letters!

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Torn" was appalling! How can you be so insensitive to the feelings of the younger siblings? Look ahead: Agnes will grow up to be a snob, thinking she is better than her sisters, who will surely grow to hate her. It's just human nature.

"Torn" should not permit those grandparents to take Agnes anywhere unless the sisters are included. Admit you were wrong, Abby. — LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: The solution to "Torn's" problem is so simple, I'm surprised you didn't see it. While Agnes is off with her grandparents, the parents should treat the other girls to picnics, visits to the children's museum, the amusement park, the zoo, an overnight camping trip or a fun weekend staying at a motel.

It would be as thrilling for them as a trip to Disneyland. And that way the sisters at home wouldn't feel so left out. — J.J., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: "Torn" could be expressing her own feelings of anger and resentment rather than that of her three younger children. Their ages must be anywhere from infancy to 6 years old — too young to have formed their own feelings of envy and resentment. Instead of harboring such feelings, "Torn" should rejoice in the knowledge that her 11-year-old has loving grandparents who can afford to take their only grandchild on exotic trips. — MICHIGAN SOCIAL WORKER

DEAR ABBY: "Torn" should use this opportunity to teach her children two valuable lessons: (1) Learn to accept the things you cannot change. (2) Life is not always fair. The earlier they learn these lessons, the stronger they will be. I think we parents try too hard to protect our children from "bumps" and bruises, so their childhood will be as painless and smooth as possible. This is doing them no favors. They need to be equipped to live in the "real" world where they will be dealt more serious bumps. — MARY IN CORBIN, KY.

DEAR ABBY: "Torn" seems to expect that Agnes' grandparents treat her (Torn's) three younger children like they treat Agnes. May I ask "Torn" how she treats her former in-laws? Does she take all her children to visit them, and refer to them as "Grandma and Grandpa Jones"? Are Mother's and Father's Day cards signed by all the children and sent to them? Are the girls encouraged to make presents for them on birthdays and St. Valentine's Day? Does "Torn" invite them for family dinners on Thanksgiving and Christmas — or any other time? To put it bluntly, does "Torn" and her three younger daughters treat these people as well as she treats her new in-laws?

There are exceptions, of course, but I think the grandparents will treat the "new" kids equally if the kids and their mom will make the first move. The ball is in "Torn's" court. Feel free to use my name. — LAURA B. IN MAPLE VALLEY, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: You'd better tell "Corney Venhemann" that Dizzy Dean must have been listening to radio when he "originated" that line, "Lot's of people who don't say ain't, ain't working."

Will Rogers said it first.

But, on the other hand, it was a laid-back zany football player named Joe Don Looney who first said: "I never met a man I didn't like — except Will Rogers." — WESTPORT PETE

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Pamphlets cover laundry, phones

Copley News Service

There are two consumer publications available that may be of interest this time of year — one compares long-distance competitors of AT&T and the other will help the novice wash clothes.

By now, those college freshmen who don't mail home their laundry are probably facing a giant load of dirty clothes. Procter & Gamble Co. anticipated this and came up with a light-hearted course published in a booklet called Cleaning 101.

It teaches the basics of doing the laundry, giving lessons on how to wash various kinds of materials at what temperature.

While Cleaning 101 does plug P&G products, it also explains some of the problems students may encounter, such as wine stains, yellowing fabrics, dirt around the waistband or static electricity.

There's even a segment on prewash soaking.

While the "course" doesn't mention other brands, the information is sufficient that it can be used for comparison shopping. Although it is aimed at the college crowd, the free, 18-page booklet is available to anyone by writing Cleaning 101, 79 Madison Ave., Third Floor, New York, NY 10016. It might make a useful stocking stuffer for Christmas.

The other publication, a long-distance rate comparison chart, is being published by an independent consumer group in Washington, D.C. — Telecommunications Research and Action Center, a non-profit membership organization that says it is devoted to protecting the consumer in telephone matters.

Chinese buying U.S. electronics

HONG KONG (AP) — China purchases of U.S. electronic technology equipment are climbing at a rapid pace, reports a computer information management publication.

According to MIS Week, sales nearly tripled last year to $3 billion from the $1.1 billion reported for 1983.

The purchases are a key part of the program by the Chinese to modernize their own electronics industry by the year 2000.

To gain expertise in manufacturing for domestic and overseas markets, priority items include integrated circuitry, telecommunications and computerized testing equipment.

Overall, the Chinese goal is for a full range of electronics items by the end of the 20th century and a six- to eightfold increase in the total value of electronics output, according to MIS Week.
