Chamber event slated...

Top SACROC post filled

The new superintendent for SACROC operations here has now reported for work, H.J. Payne, who served a one-year stint at SACROC earlier in his career as a drilling engineer.

Payne, 36, is relocating locally after two years as an area superintendent for Chevron U.S.A. in its Oklahoma City office.

His arrival will coincide with an appreciation event slated for SACROC Thursday by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

This will be part of a series planned by the local chamber which has seen "thank yous" extended to Wall's Industry, the local teaching profession and TUElectric.

The event honoring SACROC will be at the SACROC offices on the Lamesa Highway from 3-5 p.m.

Payne is replacing John Daniel, who was named in September as the assistant general manager for the entire eastern region of Chevron U.S.A. based in New Orleans.

Daniel had headed SACROC operations locally for just over two years.

Payne is completing his 13th

ISD may add single member district

Ruling on case in Midland affects Snyder district

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

It now appears the single member district representation on the Snyder school board will be expanded due to a decision from a federal appeals court involving a voter discrimination lawsuit against Midland ISD.

Currently, the Snyder board is a 4-3 arrangement--four trustees representing specific areas, so-called single member districts, and three trustees elected "at-large," or by a vote of all school district voters.

Following the decision of the Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in the suit LULAC vs. Midland ISD, this representation may have to change from 4-3 to 5-2, adding an additional single member district.

The immediate change would see at-large trustee Billy Bob McMullan, elected to the board last April, required to switch his board representation--a move which could effectively end his board membership after the 1990 election.

Many school district residents will be affected as boundary lines for single member districts inside the city limits will be redrawn, expanding the number from three to four.

The area outside the city limits would continue to comprise one single member district, but its number would change from District 4 to District 5.

On the school board, McMullan would be singled out since--in an agreement reached prior to his being elected--it was determined the at-large trustee receiving the largest number of votes in April would be named to the newly added single member district.

The local changes stem from the Midland lawsuit. In that case, LULAC alleges that school districts under the single member district system must have at least 70 percent of its board membership elected from a specific area.

Under Snyder's current 4-3 ratio, 57 percent of the board is elected from specific areas.

When the Snyder single member district agreement was finalized last March, the Midland case was still pending with the Fifth Circuit court of appeals.

Since that time, the court has ruled in favor of plaintiffs seeking the 70 percent representation.

The next step in an appeals process would be for Midland ISD to ask the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the case. Midland officials reportedly have not made this decision as yet, but attorneys representating Snyder ISD in its discrimination case have advised local school officials that this option currently does not appear likely.

Snyder school board members have been aware of this possibility since completion of local negotiations to implement a

College schedules its fall production

Tickets are now on sale for the five-day run of the Western Texas College theatre department production of "Wild Oats."

The college's fall production will begin Thursday in the Fine Arts Theatre on campus.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students and may be reserved by calling the box office at 573-8511, ext. 240. WTC students will be admitted free with their ID card, but are asked to make reservations so seating can be arranged.

"Wild Oats" was written by James McLure and based on a famous 18th century Restoration comedy by John O'Keefe. The current version retains the basic plot structure of the original while transferring the events and people to the American frontier.

The locale is moved from a drawing room of Restoration England to the saloons and prairies of the Old West.

Likewise, the characters are transformed to music hall girls and cavalrymen.

"Wild Oats" will be performed nightly Thursday through Monday, Nov. 23. All performances will be at 8 o'clock nightly with the exception of next Sunday's show, which will be at 8:30 p.m.

Smokeout supporters urging 'just say yes'

The local unit for the American Cancer Society--slated to hold its annual Great American Smokeout here Thursday-- has some encouraging words for the nation's 54 million smokers: "Just say 'yes'."

The society hopes that at least one in five smokers will say "yes" to participating in the Smokeout, a national campaign to encourage smokers to give up their cigarettes for 24 hours next Thursday.

"The Great American Smokeout accentuates the positive benefits of quitting," said Lavada Cates, Smokeout Chairman of the American Cancer Society's Scurry Unit. "That's why we're asking smokers to say 'yes' to the Smokeout...and planning lots of support for those that do."

"This year's Smokeout activities in Scurry County will include activities in the public schools, a balloon release at Snyder High School, adopt-a-smoker and adopt-a-dipper, and Newborn T-Shirts in Cogdell Hospital," she said.

According to a Gallup Survey, a record 23.8 million smokers participated in last year's 10th anniversary Smokeout by quitting or cutting back for the day.

"The Great American Smokeout is a light-hearted event, but it is a serious attempt to deal with a serious issue," Cates said. "The tragic fact is that 350,000 Americans die each

Noah Project solicits 'Ark-Angel' backers

Noah Project, the local shelter for families whose lives have been disrupted by violence in the home, has announced plans for an "Ark-Angels" fund raising campaign to culminate prior to Christmas.

To become an Ark-Angel, the Noah Project advisory committee is asking for pledges of support. Those who contribute will be honored at an event on Sunday, Dec. 6, from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the student center on the campus of Western Texas College.

Each Ark-Angel who gives a $25 or more donation will be recognized and will receive a commemorative token of appreciation. Reservations for this event may be made by sending tax-deductible donations to P.O. Box 425, Snyder, by Dec. 3.

Services are provided to battered women and their children, abused children, the elderly, or any victim of family violence.

The Noah Project provides shelter (up to six weeks) where victims may live in safety, emotionally as well as physically.

The Noah Project provides a supportive atmosphere where victims may re-think their lives, and plan for a more positive future. Other service activities include a 24 hour crisis hotline (573-1822): provision of food and

The feller on Deep Creek says, "People who do things which count never stop to count them."

WTC's Aline Parks noticed an article recently concerning the Dairy Queen on I-20 in Colorado City. She said she wasn't surprised that the C-City DQ is among the top ten in sales in Texas.

The article was written by Tumbleweed Smith and noted that DQ headquarters are in Minneapolis and stores are found in every state except Rhode Island. Texas has 800 stores, more than any other state.

The Texas DQ store with the most sales is Crockett. Others in the state's top ten are Vernon, Athens, Decatur, Mabank, Clyde, Nocona, Rockwall and Rio Grande City.

Used to, a DQ could be started with $40,000. Today it costs at least a half million for land, building and equipment. Still about 200 new locations open each year.

Aline said the story about the Dairy Queen reminded her of an old joke:

A couple driving through Texas stopped in Mexia to eat. They liked to learn about the places they visited and struck up a conversation with the waitress.

"We saw the sign outside town and wondered how you say the name of this place," they told her. "Say it for us, slow and clear, so we will be sure we understand it.

The Mexia waitress looked at them, shrugged her shoulders, leaned closer and said slowly and carefully, "Day-ree-Queen."

Retiring barber Bill Emerson says he's got proof that there are major differences between men and women.

In addition to different tee boxes on the golf course, he offered the following evidence:

Women will wear anything new, now matter how uncomfortable. Men will wear anything comfortable, no matter how old.

Ask Us

Q. — Will the prison system hire any local people, if so, what type of jobs will be open for application?

A. — A TDC spokesman estimated that likely 80 to 85 percent of the work force would be hired locally. This would be primarily in security--by far the majority of the work force--and clerical positions, he said.

Yule plans

The Scurry County Museum will be making and putting up Christmas decorations during the week and invites volunteers to come help.

Volunteers will be welcome from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day this week, Shirley Leftwich, museum director, said. Work tables will be set up and patterns and materials will be available for making decorations and some decorations already on hand will be put up.

Information about the decoration project can be obtained by calling the museum at 573-6107.

The museum has scheduled its annual Christmas Happening on Dec. 6.

Second juvenile charged in killing

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — A second juvenile has been formally charged in the slaying of a Midlothian officer who posed as a high school student to investigate drug use.

The youth's attorney, Constance McGuire, said the youth had nothing to do with the killing of George Raffield Jr., 21, and is innocent of all charges against him.

The youth, unidentified because he is a minor, was charged Friday with capital murder and conspiracy to commit capital murder. He will remain free pending a hearing scheduled for Nov. 24 when prosecutors will ask that he stand trial as an adult.

"I certainly feel he was aware of what was happening and we felt he was in on the planning of Raffield's killing," said Mary Lou Shipley, Ellis County district attorney.

"Because of what we believe his involvement in the offense to be, we felt we should allow him to stay with his parents until he is certified," she said.

Police have said the youth told them that Greg Knighten, 16, talked of plans to kill the undercover officer. Raffield was shot twice in the head Oct. 25.

Police said the the youth also told them he agreed to meet Knighten and Richard Goeglein, 17, near a field where Raffield's body was later found and gave them a ride back to Midlothian.

Goeglein was indicted Tuesday on a capital murder charge. Prosecutors will ask an Ellis County grand jury Nov. 24 to approve a capital murder indictment for Knighten.

Dukakis barely passed college physics

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis wears contact lenses, drives a 1983 Dodge Aries, got all A's in high school but barely got through college physics, and is the beneficiary of more than $1 million in trust funds.

Those are some of the personal tidbits revealed by the Democratic presidential candidate on a package of documents — including birth and marriage certificates, school report cards and tax forms — released to the news media on Friday.

The documents confirm what many Massachusetts residents already knew about their 54-year-old, third-term governor: that he is healthy, wealthy, married and out of debt.

Financial documents confirmed earlier reports that Dukakis is a current or potential beneficiary of more than $1 million in trust funds left by his father and by his wife's family.

Perhaps the most interesting disclosure was an omission. Dukakis declined to list his former campaign manager, John Sasso, among his "personal friends and associates," even though Dukakis said Sasso was like a brother to him just before accepting Sasso's resignation Sept. 30.

In a package of photocopied transcripts, forms and letters, Dukakis gave the most detailed accounting to date of his schooling, employment and personal finances. The documents provided no dramatic new disclosures and painted a picture of a studious, serious, prosperous man.

The materials were prepared at the request of The New York Times and released to other news media on Friday.

In response to a question from the Times about his friends, Dukakis listed seven people, among them Paul Brountas, a friend from law school days who chairs the Dukakis campaign committee; high school friend Haskell Kassler, now an attorney for the Democratic State Committee; and campaign treasurer Robert Farmer.

The others were Dr. Nicholas Zervas, chief of neurology at Massachusetts General Hospital; Frank Sieverts, a roommate from Swarthmore; and Don and Merna Lipsitt, who were not further identified.

After scoring all A's at Brookline High School, where he played in the band and graduated No. 2 in a class of 439 in June 1951, Dukakis slipped to a C in his first semester at Swarthmore College in introductory philosophy, then sank to a D in physics in the spring term.

It was that low grade that turned Dukakis off the path toward medicine, the governor has often said. His father, the late Panos Dukakis, was a physician and until that fateful spring term had high hopes that his son also would become a doctor.

At the same time, Dukakis was racking up A's in introductory political science, Greek literature, economics and a political science course on the British Welfare State.

Before graduating in June 1955 from Swarthmore, Dukakis earned highest honors and election to Phi Beta Kappa. But curiously, he withdrew from an honors seminar on "Political Parties and Electoral Problems."

After two years in the Army, Dukakis enrolled at Harvard Law School, where he earned mostly A's and B's in the mandatory subjects of the first and second years. In his final year, Dukakis elected to study business planning, evidence, labor law, property and trial practice.

Dr. Gerald Plotkin of Brookline supplied a letter attesting that he has been Dukakis' personal physician since 1971 and has seen him for minor ailments and check-ups over the last 16 years.

"Throughout this period you have been in excellent physical health and condition," Plotkin wrote. "You have had no major ailments during your entire history which should interfere with your ability to serve as president."

In reply to a question about his own legal history, Dukakis wrote: "To the best of my recollection, I have never brought suit, nor have I ever been sued, other than in my position as Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

SHL is raising funds for an endowment

The Silver Haired Legislature, an advisory group created by the Texas Legislature, is raising money for an endowment, area SHL representative Delbert Downing of Snyder said this week.

In a Wednesday meeting at the Senior Citizen Center, Downing said the group wants to create an endowment in part so that the 116 representatives may be reimbursed for some of their expenses.

"If each Texan 60 or older contributed only $1 to the fund, that would amount to $2.25 million," he said. "That amount, put into interest-bearing accounts, should cover the expenses of the SHL permanently."

Downing represents 12 counties and about 20,000 senior citizens.

He and the other representatives were elected by persons 60 and older at senior centers around the state in May 1986 and met for the first time for three days that September to formulate recommendations to the legislature.

The body convenes biennially in even-numbered years.

Other business at the Wednesday meeting included the introduction of Ruth West as a member of the Senior Citizen Center Advisory Council. Mrs. West succeeds Margaret Johnston, who was given a painting print by Austin artist Dalhart Windberg in appreciation for her services.

Center director Jerry Baird reported that the Golden K Kiwanis Club had donated funds for the purchase of 24 folding chairs and four folding tables.

Officials: remains used in Satanic ritual

FORT HANCOCK, Texas (AP) — Bits of human remains and occult paraphernalia found eight months ago near a West Texas highway were used in a satanic ritual, authorities said.

There were no signs of foul play, but Hudspeth County officials are investigating the mysterious discovery, Deputy Bob Bray said.

A U.S. Border Patrol agent found some occult literature scattered about 300 yards south of Interstate 10 and called the sheriff, said Bray, who is in charge of the investigation.

Bray said he later found other occult items in plastic bags at the site, a clearing on state land next to a railroad track, about four miles west of Fort Hanckock and 30 miles east of El Paso.

One bag contained human bone, ligament tissue and teeth, he said.

"I found a 60-foot-wide circle with a pentagram drawn on the inside, which had been carved in the sand," Bray said. "I also found sand impressions that led me to believe at least two people had been lying down inside the circle."

A pentagram is often part of satanic rituals.

Dough art class slated Tuesday

A Continuing Education class offering instruction in making dough art ornaments for holiday decorating is scheduled at Western Texas College on Tuesday night. The class will be repeated on Nov. 24. Meeting time for each class will be 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Students will make at least four ornaments to take home and will receive patterns and instructions for 15 ornaments to be made at home. Instruction will include basic techniques such as mixing the dough, adding dry tempra for color and shaping dough for leaves and hair.

Martha Gist will be the instructor for the classes. Fees will be $20 per person and this includes all supplies. Students are to bring a cookie sheet, an old towel for cleaning hands and a large mixing bowl.

Contras criticize cease-fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has put forward a detailed plan for a cease-fire with the rebels fighting his government, but Contra leaders immediately criticized parts of the proposal.

The Reagan administration did not comment directly on Ortega's proposal Friday, but the White House criticized House Speaker Jim Wright for his high-profile role in meetings with the Nicaraguan leader in Washington this week.

Wright, D-Texas, dismissed the criticism, saying he was invited to the meetings and his only interest is in helping to bring peace to Central America.

Ortega's proposal calls for a cease-fire to go into effect Dec. 5 and remain in place for a month. Rebel troops would have to move to one of three designated cease-fire zones and remain there.

As the Noah Project enters its fourth year of operation in Snyder, it faces the same economic "crunch" that most Scurry County residents have borne, supporters note. The paradox remains, however, that as the economic trends worsen, incidences of family violence rise.

Since January 1, 1987, shelter-based services have been provided to 80 families (159 children). These service statistics reflect a 40 percent increase over the number of families helped during this same period last year.

Noah Project Advisory Committee members include: Marsha Krenak, chairman; Evelyn Davies, vice chairman; Pam Zeck, secretary; Keith Collier, treasurer and members Gussie Gray, Billie Brice, Maxie Cain, Bobby Sparks, Deanie Mills, Carl Dillaha, M.D., Jeana Duke, Kenny Ballinger, Yvette Sickler, Keith Hackfeld, Jim Kelley, Jodie Grisham and Stew Warren.

Suspect sought in Friday chase

Police Saturday were seeking to arrest a 24-year-old Snyder man for driving with his license suspended and evading arrest in connection with a late Friday-early Saturday chase on east U.S. 180.

The incident began at 11:48 p.m. Friday when a city patrolman started his pursuit of a brown Datsun 280-Z, and he reported later that he had lost sight of the car about 15 miles east of the city.

The driver was subsequently identified but had not been arrested at mid-day Saturday.

A 15-year-old girl was arrested for public intoxication at 12:34 a.m. Saturday at 37th St. and Ave. V and was later released to her mother at the county jail.

Two men, 21 and 18, were taken into custody for public intoxication at 1:24 a.m. in the 1900 Block of Coleman Ave.

A 19-year-old man was arrested for DWI at 3:10 a.m. in the 3900 Block of College Ave.

Burglary is investigated

Police are investigating a motor vehicle burglary in which an Escort radar detector and a Royce C.B. radio control box were stolen.

The burglary was discovered Friday morning by Gary Brashears of 3709 College Ave., whose 1986 Cadillac had been broken into, officers said.

RICHARD & GLAD CURLEE

Award winning musical drama slated here Sunday

"McIntosh" will be presented at 11 a.m. Sunday at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. The award winning, musical drama features veteran Christian performer Richard Brown Curlee. Admission is free.

"McIntosh" is the story of a Texas cowboy and the varied experiences his life has held. Telling stories that set the stage for each musical ballad, Curlee uses a bare stage and the listener's imagination as a canvas. He paints a vivid and very humorous portrait of the different characters that cross the cowboy's ride across history.

Curlee, who wrote "McIntosh" to help pass time, was quite surprised when it won the prestigious Special Achievement Award from the National Religious Broadcasters Association.

Curlee and his wife, Glad, tour the country about nine months of the year, presenting this program along with comedy concerts and a family seminar on relationships.

Between recording, writing, working on a new comedy video and television appearances, Curlee gets little time off.

He has recorded two albums along with a video version of the musical. He's appeared across the country with Willie Nelson, Michael Martin Murphy and others before becoming a Christian in 1974. Since then, he's shared his music and humor in concerts with Mike Warnke, Steve and Annie Chapman, Rez Band, and others.

year with Chevron U.S.A., which serves as operator for the unitized SACROC field.

He joined the company following his graduation from the University of Texas at Austin. Payne holds both a bachelors degree, earned in 1973, and a masters degree, earned in '74, in petroleum engineering from UT. He is a native of Illinois.

He joined Chevron U.S.A. in February of 1975, starting as a production engineer in Denver.

His second assignment was with SACROC here as a drilling engineer, serving during 1977.

He relocated from Snyder to Houston, where he worked for six years with ARAMCO (Arabian-American Oil Company), an oil industry group comprised of a partnership which includes Chevron, Exxon, Texaco and Mobil.

This portion of his career saw Payne travel frequently to Saudi Arabia.

He was next assigned to Denver again for 1½ years as a reservoir engineer, then promoted to the area superintendent's post in Oklahoma City.

In this capacity, he oversaw approximately 100 staffers and supervised Chevron activities in the southern and western areas of Oklahoma as well as the Texas Panhandle and North Texas.

At SACROC, he will be in charge of an operating budget estimated at some $130 million annually.

He and his wife Candy have two sons, James, age 5; and Matt, age 3.

Pearl Harbor proposal set

Scurry County commissioners Monday will hear a request from a Snyder man to declare Dec. 7 "Pearl Harbor Day."

Veteran John Roddy is scheduled to appear at the 10 a.m. meeting to make the request.

Other business will include the re-appointment of Dwaine Williams to the county appraisal district board and a presentation by Cogdell Memorial Hospital administrator Cy Miller on auditing the hospital's finances.

Clyde Hall of Snyder Insurance Agency will appear for the second conseeutive Monday to continue a discussion of the county's property insurance, which will entail a 27-percent premium reduction next year.

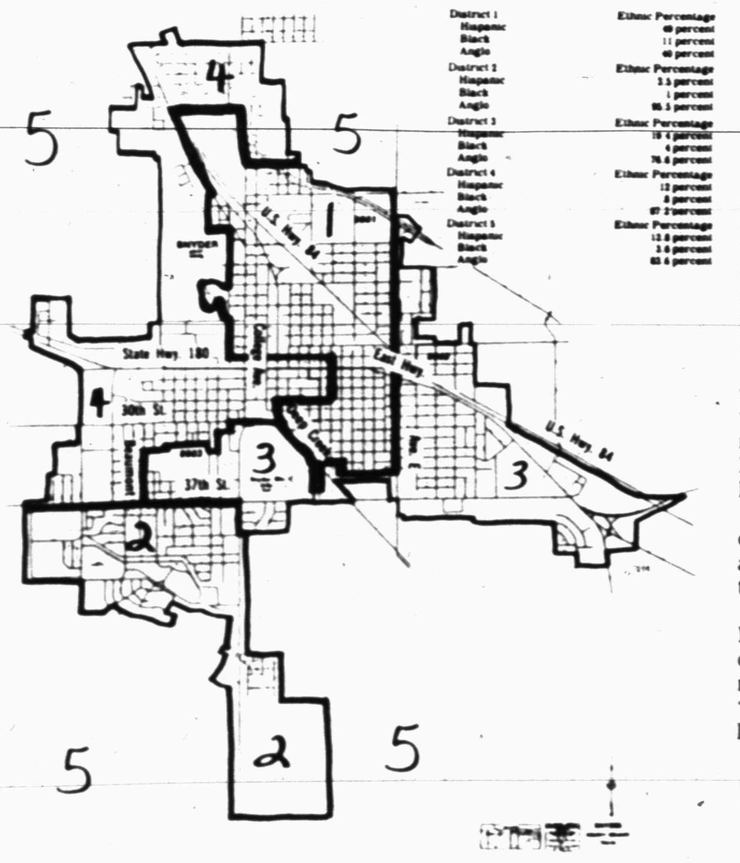
THE CURRENT PLAN — Under the current 4-3 arrangement for the Snyder school board, four trustees represent specific areas, so-called single member districts. They include Ignacio Benitez in District 1; Mike Jordan in District 2; Charlene Light in District 3; and Ben Wilcox in District 4. The possible expansion of this plan would add a fifth district. (Snyder ISD Illustration)



THE PROPOSED PLAN — If Snyder ISD is required to change to a 5-2 makeup involving single member districts, the new boundary lines will look like this. On the board, the immediate change would see a:-large trustee Billy Bob McMullan the new representative for District 4–an area he could not represent after 1990 since he does not live within the district. (Snyder ISD Illustration)

In line with this, a contingency plan for a 5-2 board was agreed to at the same time the 4-3 plan was finalized.

Two different sets of maps outlining the school district under both systems were prepared as well (see illustrations).

To create a fifth single member district, boundary lines within the city would be altered. One single member district would continue to be the area outside the city limits of Snyder. Inside the city, the districts would expand from three to four.

Under the current system, one district--District 1 represented by trustee Ignacio Benitez--is comprised of an estimated 55 percent minority population. Only one other has a minority population greater than 20 percent, District 3 represented by Charlene Light.

If the entire school district is redivided into five single member districts, District 1 would increase to a minority population estimated at 60 percent. The highest percentage for the remaining four would be 23 percent.

The contingency plan outlines also the steps to be taken to drop one at-large school board member and to replace this member with a single member district trustee representing what would be called District 4.

It is this stipulation which directs that the at-large school board member polling the most votes in the previous election would represent the new District 4.

This would occur regardless of where that school board member actually lived. In addition, he would hold this seat until the spring of 1990, at which time an election would be held to elect a representative who actually resides within the new District 4.

Following this plan, McMullan was the at-large member polling the largest number of votes. He received 904 votes while Luann Burleson polled 696 and Ken Branam polled 610.

If no changes to the board occurred, McMullan's term as an at-large member would expire in the spring of 1989.

If the 5-2 plan is put into effect, McMullan will gain a year on his current term but will be unable to run in the district he would "represent" since he does not live in this area.

Assuming the implementation of the 5-2 school board, the schedule for school board elections includes:

—Spring of 1988: Trustees representing single member districts 2 and 3 would come up for election. These seats are now held by Charlene Light and Mike Jordan.

—Spring of 1989: Trustees representing the at-large board seats--Burleson and Branam--would come up for election.

—Spring of 1990: Trustees representing the three other single member districts would come up for election. This would be Ignacio Benitez in District 1; Ben Wilcox in District 5; and the newly created District 4.

If the 5-2 plan is not implemented, McMullan could run as an at-large candidate again in 1989 and the 1990 election would feature only districts currently represented by Benitez and Wilcox.

The potential for change on the board will be decided in the weeks ahead as Midland ISD considers its option for further appeals.

Complete season with 21-0 victory...

Ragin' Tigers blank Lamesa in '87 finale

Snyder's Ragin' Tigers capped the 1987 varsity football season with a big victory here Friday night as they came up with a good defensive effort to shut out the Golden Tornadoes of Lamesa, 21-0.

"That was fun," grinned Snyder Coach Dennis Tomlin, who was the victim of a sneak water-cart attack, ala the NFL's New York Giants. "I said before the game that the team that played the best defense would win the ballgame and that's what happened. That was the difference in the game."

There were several key moments in the turnover-plagued contest. Snyder scored midway through the first period to jump out on top, then denied a touchdown by stopping the Tors on a fourth down play at the Tigers 1-yard line. The other crucial effort came on a second-half drive which didn't produce any points, but did take 6:53 off of the fourth-quarter clock.

"Those were all real big situations for us. We needed to get out in front first and we did. Then, it may have been the turning point when we kept them out of the end zone that time. Our last drive took any chance away that they might come back," agreed Tomlin.

Snyder was set up on its first touchdown by a Benny Hill fumble recovery - one of three for the night by the 5-10, 172-pound junior. Hill pounced on the ball at the Lamesa 26, and it took Snyder six plays to score.

Scott Lanier took the payload into the end zone on a 1-yard run with 7:39 left. Tony Anderson tacked up the PAT for a 7-0 advantage.

Key plays in the drive included a 13-yard run by Trey Wilson and a 6-yard pass from Lee Fletcher to Vyron Clay.

Clay, who ran for 127 yards on 19 carries and had 16 more on two pass receptions, was Snyder's offensive mainstay all night.

"That's the hardest Vyron has run this season. He really attacked the defense and made a lot of things happen when we needed it," said Tomlin.

Lamesa fumbled its next possession away, too, but Snyder gave the ball back when Jim Horton picked off an errant pass at the Tiger 11. A personal foul penalty put the ball at the 5-yard line, and it appeared as if the Tors might tie the game.

Snyder's defense didn't buckle, however. Three carries put the ball at the 1, and when James Williams tried the left side on fourth down, Miller, Manuel Espinosa, Tommy Lane and Trey Tippens were all there to stop him.

Snyder punted the ball back to the visitors after three plays, but regained possession when Tippens intercepted another Lamesa pass at the 27. This time, the Tigers offense worked in unison. Snyder drove 83 yards in 14 plays to score with 7:24 to go in the half. It was fitting that Clay carried the score in. The junior tailback toted the ball six times for 42 yards on the drive, including a 15-yarder in which he broke three tackles.

The TD run came from four yards out. Clay ran right, bumped off the line, then bounced outside and ran untouched to the corner of the end zone.

Anderson kicked the PAT for a 14-0 Snyder lead.

The scoring was wrapped up with 3:42 left before intermission on a 32-yard, three-play drive by the Tigers. Randy Morris did the honors, scoring on a 27-yard reverse. Anderson followed it up with his third conversion kick.

Sweetwater, Monahans book playoffs

Sweetwater and Monahans tuned up for the Class 4A playoffs with impressive victories Friday night as District 2-4A closed out its regular schedule.

Sweetwater, which wrapped up the title a week ago, burned Lake View 34-6 in San Angelo, while Monahans hosted and roasted Fort Stockton, 40-0.

Fort Stockton went into the game hoping for an upset victory to force a coin flip for second place, but it didn't happen as the Loboes completely dominated.

Tailback Charles Thompson ran for an unofficial 248 yards and five touchdowns on 23 carries for the Loboes.

In other 2-4A games Friday, Big Spring clubbed Andrews 21-9 and Snyder put Lamesa in the cellar with a 21-0 spanking. It was the second straight season for the Tigers to shut out the Tornadoes in the season finale. Last season, Snyder ripped Lamesa 43-0.

Sweetwater, 8-0 in district play, takes a 9-1 overall record into the playoffs - the Mustangs' fourth straight postseason appearance. Monahans is 7-1 and 9-1.

Sweetwater will take on 1-4A runnerup Borger while Monahans will meet Canyon in the playoffs. Sites and dates are yet to be determined.

Fort Stockton and Big Spring tied for third place in the loop with 5-3 records, though the Panthers won one more regular season game. Andrews finished at 3-4-1, Pecos at 2-5-1, Lake View and Snyder at 2-6 and Lamesa at 1-7.

Meanwhile, the Big Spring ISD accepted Coach Quinn Eudy's resignation on Thursday. It had been rumored that Eudy, who took the Steers to the 1986 2-4A title, would be leaving.

With Walker or Dorsett

'Pokes run up against Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) - The New England Patriots have an excuse for their weak running game. They don't have outstanding backs like Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker.

The Dallas Cowboys don't have that excuse.

The Patriots - with Tony Collins and Mosi Tatupu as their starting backs - and the Cowboys - with Dorsett and Walker - try to improve their ground attacks at the others' expense when they meet in an NFL game Sunday.

Each team is 4-4 after losing its last game. New England is in a five-way tie for the AFC East lead, while Dallas is tied for second in the NFC East, two games behind Washington.

"We just haven't run the football at all," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who is seeking the best way to use Dorsett and Walker, who play the same tailback spot. "We have to play them both because I think we're stronger by doing that. If one of them is going strong, we'll go with him longer."

In the three games since the strike, Walker has rushed 34 times for 147 yards and Dorsett 36 times for 64 yards.

"Herschel's such a strong runner that he breaks tackles, where Tony's a little different," Landry said. "Tony likes to get some daylight and we just haven't found the daylight."

In a 33-24 victory over the New York Giants Nov. 2, Dallas ran 24 times for 26 yards, a record low for the team. One of those runs was a 24-yarder by Walker.

With two first-year starters and two second-year starters on the offensive line, Dallas is tied for 21st in the NFL in rushing. The Patriots rank fourth in the league in fewest yards allowed per carry.

New England's rushing offense, last in the league in 1986, is tied for 23rd and must face a Dallas defense ranked third in fewest yards allowed per run.

Although the Patriots ran for just 73 yards in last Sunday night's 17-10 loss to the Giants, Coach Raymond Berry found some hope.

"Our offensive line, overall, did a good job," he said. Against Dallas, however, it may be without starting left tackle Steve Moore, who left the Giants' game with an ankle injury.

In that contest, Collins ran 13 times for 49 yards and Tatupu six for 13. In the five games with regular players, Collins has averaged 54.8 yards per game and Tatupu 26.6.

Dusters sprint past Queens; everyone gets playing time

ODESSA – Western Texas College's Lady Dusters wore down depth-weak Howard College here Friday night to pick up their fifth win of the season.

The Dusters utilized 12 players and they all scored in defeating the Hawk Queens 79-56.

"Howard has a pretty good team," said Coach Kelly Chadwick. "They just don't have any depth. They give out and they wear down."

It was the sixth loss of the season for the Queens, who have only an eight-player roster.

Chadwick was pleased with the Dusters' performance

"I thought our press might have looked a little better. It wasn't so much us making them turn the ball over but we didn't give up as many easy baskets as we had been. I thought they (the Queens) attacked our press better than some teams," said the coach.

Western's scoring was well-balanced. Lisa Houston led with 12 points while Stephanie McKnight and Julie Roewe bagged 10 each. Carolyn Colbert and Staci Smith added 8 apiece.

"Stephanie came through and really got some quality playing time," said Chadwick of the freshman from Snyder. "She ran the team well, played good defense, and ran the break well.

"The game was good for us, I think, because it gave us a chance to play everybody, and play them a lot. We had several kids that got out there and were real nervous. They played four or five minutes, and sat down, then went back out there and played much better. I think it helped them a lot to get some good playing time," added Chadwick.

Western, 5-1 now, was to play Dodge City, Kan., at 6 p.m. Saturday.

"They'll be a different type team. They aren't huge, but they are a pretty big team," Chadwick said.

Dotson traded to NY Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) - The "Von Hassey Express" between Chicago and New York is rolling again, this time carrying pitcher Rich Dotson from the White Sox to the Yankees along with the fourth player in two years to make it a round-trip excursion.

The deal brings pitchers Dotson and Scott Nielsen, who took the express from New York to Chicago only last January, to the Yankees for outfielder Dan Pasqua, catcher Mark Salas and minor-league pitcher Steve Rosenberg.

The trade was the fifth between the two clubs in less than two years and made Nielsen part of a tour club that is growing less exclusive by the month.

Besides Nielsen, the two clubs have re-exchanged catcher Ron Hassey and minor leaguers Mike Soper and Glen Braxton in a series of rapid-fire deals that began in December 1985. Hassey, in fact, has gone from the Yankees to the White Sox to the Yankees to the White Sox after first coming to New York from the Chicago Cubs.

"I did mention to somebody today that I could be back to the White Sox next week," Dotson said as he talked to reporters via conference call from Reno, Nev. "I've played with a few of the guys who went back-and-forth.

"I talked to Scotty Nielsen today, and, of course, there's Hassey, who breaks the all-time record for going back and forth."

The Yankees needs for pitching are obvious. They made deals that brought Rick Rhoden, Steve Trout, Charles Hudson, Bill Gullickson and Cecilio Guante to the club last season, during the course of which they used 15 different pitchers as starters.

Westerners effort good one but Trinity triumphs, 90-88

BIG SPRING – Western Texas College battled tough here Friday night, but came up two points short to a highly-respected Trinity Valley team, 90-88, in the Howard College Tournament.

WTC, 1-6, was to play Kilgore at 5 p.m. Saturday as the tourney continued at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

"We led the entire first half but I guess we just can't stand prosperity," mused Coach Tony Mauldin.

Western's Gerald Wells took a 10-foot shot with two seconds to play in the game but it wouldn't fall. Darrell Nelson managed a followup effort, but it couldn't find the hoop either.

The Westerners had three players foul out of the game and shot only 17 free throws to Trinity Valley's 30.

"It just seemed like we couldn't get any breaks at all in the last six or seven minutes of the ballgame," Mauldin said. "We shot pretty well from the free throw line (13 of 17) but we didn't get many shots. Still, we had some chances to win the ballgame."

Nelson led the Westerners once again with 29 points. Walter Martin cashed in for 16 points while Chris Jackson and Bobby Spear put in 15 points each.

The Westerners played the game without 6-7 sophomore Harvey Marshman, who has been dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons. Marshman was one of only three sophomores on the Westerners ball club.

Bullets bag 60 free throws to punch Knicks, 108-101

by The Associated Press

The New York Knicks were in a fouling mood and the Washington Bullets made them feel worse.

The Bullets made an NBA record 60 foul shots Friday night and won their first game of the season, beating the winless Knicks 108-101.

"When you play against them, you have to make your free throws because you're going to get fouled," Washington Coach Kevin Loughery said.

That's what the Bullets did. They made 30 straight during one stretch and finished 60-for-69 from the foul line. Washington also took 69 shots from the field, but made only 24.

Washington broke the free throw mark of 59, set by Syracuse during a five-overtime game against Anderson, Ind., on Nov. 24, 1949. Boston, in 1954, and Chicago, in 1970, held the regulation-time record of 56.

Moses Malone, who had 30 points, was 18-for-21 on free throws and Jeff Malone, who had 19 points, was 13-for-14. Bernard King and Frank Johnson were each perfect on their eight tries.

In other NBA games, Boston beat Cleveland 128-114, Chicago defeated New Jersey 103-85, Detroit downed Philadelphia 113-94, Seattle beat Dallas 103-85, Utah topped Phoenix 109-92 and the Los Angeles Clippers defeated Golden State 97-94.

The host Bullets outscored New York 32-6 from the foul line in taking 62-50 lead at halftime. Washington, 1-3, made just one shot from the field in the fourth quarter but still held off the Knicks, 0-5.

Overall, the Knicks were called for 42 fouls to Washington's 28. New York also got three technical fouls for playing illegal defenses and Coach Rick Pitino picked up two technical fouls for arguing shortly before halftime and was ejected.

Celtics 128, Cavaliers 114

The undefeated Celtics maintained their homecourt hex over Cleveland, beating the Cavaliers for the 23rd straight time at Boston Garden since 1978.

Larry Bird scored 34 points as Boston, trailing 74-64 in the third quarter, rallied for its fifth straight victory.

Dennis Johnson scored 11 of his 23 points in the third period and the Celtics came back for a 92-90 lead entering the fourth. Johnson, who also had 13 assists, made a jump shot with seven minutes remaining to break a tie at 104 and rookie Mark Acres added eight points. Danny Ainge finished with 28 for the Celtics.

Bulls 103, Nets 85

Michael Jordan scored 36 points and Chicago improved to 4-0, the best start in the Bulls' 22-year history.

Jordan scored 12 straight points in the second quarter as host Chicago took a 51-38 lead at halftime. New Jersey got within 64-61 with three minutes left in the third quarter before Jordan scored 13 points in the final period.

SuperSonics 103, Mavericks 95

Dale Ellis scored seven points during a 12-0 burst in the fourth quarter that sent Seattle over host Dallas.

Ellis, a former Maverick, made a 3-point shot and a pair of 15-foot jumpers as the SuperSonics held Dallas scoreless for 5:38 and charged to a 102-89 lead with one minute left. The sellout crowd at Reunion Arena, usually one of the loudest and most supportive in the NBA, booed the rest of the game.

Ellis finished with 22 points, Tom Chambers 20 and rookie Derrick McKey 18, 12 in the fourth quarter.

Pistons 113, 76ers 94

Reserve Vinnie Johnson scored 27 points, 23 in the first half, and Bill Laimbeer keyed a third-quarter streak that helped Detroit win at Philadelphia.

With Detroit leading 57-56 early in the third quarter, Laimbeer scored 10 points during a 23-8 surge. Detroit outscored Philadelphia 32-12 in the period.

WTC boosters to meet

The Western Texas College Booster Club will meet at noon Monday at the Golden Corral for a Dutch treat luncheon.

All basketball fans are invited to attend and may purchase season tickets and Booster Club memberships at the meeting.

Coaches Kelly Chadwick and Tony Mauldin plan to report on the weekend tournaments at the meeting. The Dusters played in the Odessa College tournament while the Westerners were in Big Spring for the Howard College tournament.

The Dusters will host their annual Holiday Basketball Festival in Scurry County Coliseum on Nov. 27-28. Season tickets will be honored for the event.

NMJC wins tourney; Western cops fourth

ODESSA – New Mexico Junior College got one-over-par shooting from three players and won the final Western Junior College Athletic Conference golf tournament of the fall season by 11 strokes here Friday.

Per Neyman, Ulf Sannitson and Tom Cismoski all shot 109 for the 27-hole tournament, played at Mission Country Club. New Mexico, defending WJCAC champion, etched a team score of 435.

Western Texas freshman Darrell Cofer also shot a 109, but couldn't get help from his teammates. WTC finished fourth in the five-team field with a 465.

Marty Scolls of Midland won medalist honors with his one-under 107. He helped the Chaps to a second-place 446.

Odessa college took third with a 453, followed by Western Texas and New Mexico Military Institute with a 479.

"This round was no different from the whole semester; we start out slow and can't get anything going until it is too late," said Western Texas Coach Dave Foster. "We didn't have any consistent play out of the team. The only good thing out of the semester is we played a lot of different players, mainly freshmen, and hopefully we got them familiar with the tough competition you face in this conference.

"Starting Monday, we will go into an off-season program and continue until the Christmas break," he added.

Gary Schoen turned in a 116 for Western while Clint Adams fired a 120, Lance Jones a 123 and Mark Burgen and Jeff Beal 126s.

New Mexico JC leads the season standings and is the fall champion with 15 conference points. Midland has 9, NMMI 8½, Odessa 7½ and Western 5.

IT'S GOOD, BUT HOW? – Tony Anderson puts a conversion kick through the uprights during Snyder's 21-0 victory over Lamesa here Friday. The long lens used for the photo makes it appear as if it Jim Echols (23) blocks the ball, but he does not. Tracy Odom is the Tiger holder. Also pictured for Lamesa are Russell Cox, Jim Horton and Johnny Ramos. (SDN Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert) twice in the second half, but Lamesa was able to thwart both drives. The first one came late in the first quarter on a 60-yard march to the Tor 25-yard line. Jim Echols intercepted Fletcher there, however.

The march included a run of 28 yards from Clay and an 18-yarder from Lane.

The other threat came as Snyder took possession with 11:53 to go in the game. The 14-play drive went for 62 yards before the Tigers came up short on a fourth down play at the Lamesa 10. It did serve to eat up all but five minutes off the scoreboard clock, however.

The Tigers rolled up 281 yards rushing while limiting Lamesa to only 90. Woodberry, last year's 2-4A sprint champion, was held to 60 steps on 13 carries.

Tor quarterback Santos Moreno was sacked for minus-21 steps. Miller, Chad Hall and Robert Talamantez were continually in the Lamesa backfield.

"Defensively, Miller, Hall, Tippens and Talamantez just controlled them. Moreno wasn't getting much time to pass," noted Tomlin.

There were nine turnovers in the game. Lamesa intercepted four Snyder passes and gave up two of their own. Morris picked off one of the tosses, bringing his total to seven for the season.

Snyder completes the schedule with a 2-8 record overall; 2-6 in District 2-4A play. Lamesa finished at 3-7 and 1-7.

Chargers tops in AFC West

The San Diego Chargers have found a way to pass the Raiders by, and it hasn't been only on the strength of Dan Fouts' throwing arm.

With a sound running game and a revitalized defense, the Chargers take on struggling Los Angeles at San Diego on Sunday night. The Chargers have won seven straight and lead second-place Seattle by two games in the AFC West.

The 36-year-old Fouts needs only four touchdown passes to equal Sonny Jurgensen's 255 career TD passes, which rank third on the all-time NFL list.

"I'm playing like this is my last shot," Fouts said.

The Raiders, 3-5, have lost five straight and haven't lost six in a row since the start of the 1962 season. Coach Tom Flores has scuttled Rusty Hilger at quarterback and put Marc Wilson back in the starting role.

Flores said Marcus Allen remains the starting running back, but that rookie Bo Jackson would get plenty of playing time and both Heisman Trophy winners may be in the backfield at times.

There should be some unscrambling Sunday in the AFC East, where all five teams - Indianapolis, Miami, New England, Buffalo and the New York Jets - have 4-4 records.

Indianapolis is at home against Miami, New England plays host to Dallas, Buffalo visits Cleveland and the Jets journey to Kansas City.

In Sunday's other games, it's New Orleans at San Francisco, Detroit at Washington, Houston at Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Rams at St. Louis, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, the New York Giants at Philadelphia, Cincinnati at Atlanta and Green Bay at Seattle.

Chicago visits Denver on Monday night.

Washington, 6-2 and the leader in the AFC East, is a big favorite to beat Detroit, 2-6 and coming off a win over Dallas last week.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon, has prime receivers in Drew Hill and Ernest Givins. Pittsburgh's Mark Malone is the lowest-rated NFL quarterback. Both teams are 5-3.

Deficit-cut talks said upbeat as week long session ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House and congressional officials finished their third week of bargaining over cutting the federal deficit, saying they have ridden out a contentious period and are continuing to close in on a deal.

Negotiators met for less than two hours Friday, but agreed that the session moved them closer to completing work on a package that would slash at least $75 billion from the deficit over the next two years.

The previous day's session had ended with some Democrats and Reagan administration officials accusing each other of hardening their positions and upsetting what looked like an impending agreement. But the tone was different Friday after the 15th day of talks ended.

"I got a very good sense of constructive and serious and down-to-work attitudes on the part of everybody," said House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

"There's a little optimism back in the air," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, the ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

The participants agreed to meet again Monday.

The bargainers have said they are working against a deadline of next Friday. Unless they have agreed on deficit reductions of at least $23 billion by that date, the Gramm-Rudman law will trigger automatic spending cuts of that amount, divided equally between defense and domestic programs.

Under language in the Gramm-Rudman legislation, however, lawmakers could extend that deadline by several days, and they have said they may do so if they are close to an agreement.

Participants in the talks say the focus now is on a proposal that would slice about $31.8 billion from the deficit for fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1, and $44 billion to $50 billion in 1989.

The package would include about $10 billion in new taxes.

99 year sentence ordered for aggravated robbery case

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Jurors sentenced a man to 99 years in prison after convicting him of robbing a photographer who was later slain because they realized it was the kind of crime most people fear, a prosecutor said.

A Jefferson County jury gave Jefferey Dean Moore, 19, of Beaumont that sentence Friday, minutes after convicting him of aggravated robbery. Moore was accused in connection with the April 17, 1986, kidnapping, robbery and slaying of Beaumont photographer and businessman Chris Owens.

District Attorney Tom Maness called the crime "one of the most serious offenses we try in Jefferson County.

"It's the type we live in fear of," Maness said. "The jury sensed that. The evidence that came out as cold and brutal as it was, that's the reason they came back with a 99-year sentence."

Moore and his boyhood friend, George Brady Sanders, 19, were indicted on charges of capital murder in connection with the shooting of Owens, 26.

Last month, another grand jury issued additional indictments charging Moore with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated robbery.

The indictments said the pair approached Owens at his business, Photo Concepts, forced him to accompany them in his own car and killed him at a convenience store.

On Sept. 16, Sanders pleaded guilty to one charge each of murder, aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnapping. He received two consecutive 99-year sentences on the aggravated robbery and kidnapping charges and a life term for the murder charge.

The state will not prosecute Moore for murder, Maness said.

"We plan to try Moore for aggravated kidnapping, and if we get what we feel is a proper verdict, we'll ask (a judge) to have the sentences run consecutively," he said.

During the four-day trial, Moore took the stand in his own defense, claiming Sanders forced him at gunpoint to participate in the crimes.

Moore said he accompanied Sanders to a shopping center to steal a car to take them to Dallas.

When the pair could not find a car in the parking lot with keys in it, Sanders abducted Owens, stole his car and money and forced Moore to accompany him, Moore testified. Sanders shot Owens after he tried to escape, Moore said.

During the punishment phase of the trial, Moore's court-appointed attorney, Jerry Holmes of Nederland, asked the jury to give his client probation.

Markets focus on deficit reduction talks

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar's rise stalled and the stock market closed out the week on a down note as traders awaited signals from Washington that a compromise on substantially cutting the budget deficit is at hand.

"I think people are a little exhausted after these weeks," Hank Striefler, senior vice president at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York, said Friday.

"I think everybody is just sitting back, waiting to see what's coming out of Washington over the weekend," Striefler said. "Somebody said it's the Friday-the-13th effect."

Talks between White House and Congressional negotiators adjourned Friday with no clear indication a compromise was close.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 61.01 points Thursday after the government announced a drop in the September trade deficit, closed 25.20 points lower to 1,935.01, bringing its loss for the week to 24.04 points.

HUD Project No. 133-44032

Date and Time of sale: 3:00 p.m. November 23, 1987

Location of sale: Scurry County Courthouse

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) mortgagee by assignment, intends to submit a bid of $345,000.

$34,500 of the purchase money for said premises must be in the form of a cashier's or certified check payable to Franklin J. Harberg, Jr., Foreclosure Commissioner, and presented to the Commissioner at the time and place of sale. Each person who wishes to bid on the property must satisfy the Commissioner of his or her preparedness to meet the deposit requirement. The balance of the purchase price will be required to be paid in cash or certified check (payable to Franklin J. Harberg, Jr., Foreclosure Commissioner), and presented to the Commissioner within sixty (60) days of the sale or at such other time as the Secretary may determine. If the high bidder fails to deliver the remainder of the purchase price within the required period, the sale will be cancelled and the deposit will not be refunded.

Property Description: This complex is comprised of 7, two-story buildings, of 60 units (20, one BR, 28, two BR, 12 three BR). The complex has a laundry room, playground, and storage area. It is situated in a residential area, and is close to schools.

Use restriction: Of the 60 units, 30 are subject to a Section 8 HAP Contract. This contract is in effect until July 31, 1989 with the option to renew for two consecutive five-year terms. The successful bidder other than the Secretary, will be required to assume the present owner's obligations under the Section 8 HAP Contract with HUD under which HUD provides subsidies under the Section 8 program, 42 USC 1437f, and to execute a use agreement with the Sectretary which contains the terms and conditions under which the successful bidder will be required to operate the project. Copies of both the assumption and use agreements may be obtained from Franklin J. Harberg, Jr., 2100 Summit Tower, 11 Greenway Plaza, Houston, Texas 77046. The successful bidder must receive previous participation clearance through the HUD 2530 process.

Project must meet local code and/or HUD quality Standards to retain eligibility for subsidy.

Iran scrambles to buy grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exclusion of the United States as a supplier is forcing Iran to search far and wide for grain to fill its record import needs, says an Agriculture Department expert on the Middle East.

"Iran has praeticed a policy of not buying American food since 1982, at the same time it sought to maximize exports to the United States, especially petroleum and high-value agricultural commodities," said John B. Parker of the department's Economic Research Service.

Meanwhile, Iran is attempting to buy a record amount of grain from foreign countries in 1987-88, probably as much as 6.3 million metric tons, because of a reduced harvest this year.

"While Iran is in the process of importing more grain than ever before, boycotting the United States tends to limit its options, and makes striking deals with available suppliers more urgent," Parker said.

The import level of 6.3 million tons is expected to include a record amount of wheat, estimated at about 4 million tons, plus wheat flour, rice and feed grains, he said. That would compare with 3.7 million tons of wheat imported by Iran this year and 2.5 million tons in 1986.

Iran's leaders tended to put off necessary imports in recent years until serious shortages developed, Parker said. Exaggerated production claims helped foster premature self-sufficiency statements, and Iran's shortage of foreign exchange also tended to hamper purchases.

But Parker said the recent rebound in oil revenues "has provided Iran with ample funds to import necessary food." The goal now is to find adequate foreign supplies at low prices.

The United States is the biggest holder of available grain supplies at present, while some other potential foreign sources have reduced amounts they will export, according to recent USDA reports.

Parker said Iran "may have been thinking of returning to the United States as a grain supplier before recent efforts to curb all trade were made by Washington."

That was a reference to President Reagan's Oct. 26 announcement of a total ban on oil and other imports from Iran.

"The dramatic increase in Iran's wheat imports in the coming year will not include any purchases from the United States, as the boycott begun in 1982 continues," Parker said. "Australia is expected to be the top supplier of Iran's wheat imports in 1987 and again in 1988."

Argentina and Canada also are expected to share the Iranian wheat market. Other suppliers in recent years have included the European Economic Community, Turkey, Sweden, Pakistan and Uruguay.

Parker's analysis of the Iranian import situation was included in papers circulated for review within the agency and do not represent official USDA statements. He reaffirmed some of the main features of the reports in an interview on Friday.

Iran showed promise of continuing as an important U.S. agricultural export market, even after the seizure of the U.S. embassy in Tehran in 1979 when the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ascended to power.

In 1981, U.S. agricultural sales to Iran were valued at $247 million, rising from only $8 million in 1980. But the rebound was short-lived, and exports dropped to $24.7 million in 1982. During the 1983-86 period, sales remained below $3 million a year, and consisted primarily of seeds donated by international agencies.

"Purchases requiring foreign exchange appear to have been banned after 1982, and U.S. sales declined from $2.1 million in 1984 to only $331,000 in 1985," Parker said. "In 1986, Iran even eliminated purchases of U.S. seed. A small glimmer of shipments to Iran slipped through this year as embassies at Tehran apparently purchased $18,000 worth of U.S. frozen poultry."

Thus, he said, what could have been one of the top 15 foreign markets for American farmers was closed out, halting an upward trend that began in the 1970s.

KENNETH IRWIN

Kenneth Irwin is AF graduate

Kenneth Irwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denyer Irwin of Snyder, graduated Oct. 21 from basic training at Lackland Air Force Base.

He is presently taking technical school training at Lackland. He is a 1986 graduate of Snyder High School.

Pageant slated here on Dec. 5

The national headquarters for Kids of America has announced the date of Saturday, Dec. 5, for the upcoming Snyder Kids of America pageant to be held at Northeast Elementary School.

Babies, ages 0-35 months, may compete in four different areas of competition.

The beautiful baby competition is judged on personality, grooming and alertness. Baby glamour/baby handsome competition is judged on facial appearance only. Playwear competition is judged solely on the garment selection. Photogenic competition is judged from the photograph submitted to the Dallas headquarters and is judged by print and media people.

The baby division is divided into three age categories: 0-11 months, 12-23 months, and 24-35 months and there is one winner per competition in each age division.

Each child is presented on stage by a chaperone and will be presented in front of a professional panel of judges. Beautiful baby winners will go on to represent this preliminary pageant at the national finals to take place in Dallas in the summer of 1988.

Talent is another phase of competition that is open to both boys and girls between the ages of 3-17 years. Each talent presentation may not be more than three minutes long. A top five finalist will be selected from each age category and the winner will advance to the national finals.

A beauty competition will be offered for girls only. Beauty is judged on interview (group), casual wear and party wear (short dress 3-12 years, evening gown 13-17). A top five finalist will be selected from each age category and the winner will advance to the national finals.

Glamour/handsome will also be offered and is judged on facial features and overall projection. There will be one winner per age division for glamour and handsome. The photogenic competition is for individuals that would like to submit a photograph of their choosing to be judged by the major agencies in the print and media area.

Age divisions are divided into groups of 3-6 years, 7-9 years, 10-12 years, and 13-17 years. For more information call 573-0916 or 573-6972 or the national headquarters in Dallas at (214) 328-KIDS.

Commodities to be distributed

Commodities of cheese, butter, rice, and flour will be distributed to senior citizens and handicapped persons on Tuesday from 9-11:30 a.m. and to other eligible residents of Scurry County on Wednesday from 9-11:30 a.m. and 1-4 p.m. Items will be distributed at the Senior Center, 2603 Ave. M.

Eligibility guidelines for citizens of Scurry County are posted at the Senior Center. There will be no make-up day and all individuals are asked to enter through the north door of the building and to bring paper sacks or boxes to transport commodities.

Failure of Panhandle bank brings Texas total to 45 in all

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Another Texas bank has closed because of poor lending practices, a shortcoming cited in the failures of several of the 45 banks in the state that have been declared insolvent this year.

State Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield declared West Texas State Bank of Canyon insolvent and named the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as receiver. It is the largest bank to fail in Amarillo or Canyon.

The FDIC then agreed to allow First National Bank of Amarillo to assume the failed bank's deposit liabilities, FDIC spokeswoman Caryl Austrian said.

West Texas State Bank's sole office will reopen Monday as a branch of First National, and its depositors automaticaly become customers of the assuming bank, Ms. Austrian said.

The West Texas bank had total assets of $19.9 million and loans totaling $10.5 million, $3 million of which were bad loans, said Jesse Craddock, FDIC closing manager.

Littlefield said that liberal lending practices of former officers, coupled with inadequate credit administration, lax supervision by the board of directors and a sagging local economy, resulted in loan losses exceeding the bank's capital.

"It was basically just a situation of poor lending practices, primarily by prior loan officers," Littlefield said. "The economy also was a major factor."

Regulators who had reviewed the bank's books several times during the past 90 days told bank executives about a month ago that capital was desperately needed to shore up loan losses.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

Stanley Clark of Snyder loves a challenge and nothing challenges him quite like making jewelry.

He has been interested in jewelry making for years, but when he started out he couldn't find anyone who would share their "trade secrets." Several years ago he took a short course in jewelry making in Fort Worth and the rest he has learned through "trial and error."

For the past seven years, Clark has been making all types of jewelry including bracelets, rings and watch cases. He has about nine different bracelet designs he can use, of various widths. He can work with silver but he prefers to make gold pieces. He has made numerous pieces of jewelry for his family including a wedding band for wife, Marie.

Clark also takes special requests for jewelry. In those instances he works closely with the customer to determine what they want. "If they can provide a picture of what they want I can usually design it," Clark said.

"I like to be creative," he explained.

Clark has designed some unusual pieces in his time including a horseshoe ring and a gold belt and and 14 karat gold buckle which weighed three pounds.

"I had made it for a man and he must have later traded it because I have since learned that it is on display at the La Grand Hotel in Las Vegas."

Clark orders his gold from Dallas. He either uses the gold provided by the customer or he starts with pure gold and then alloys it to the correct karat desired.

Clark also makes his own rubber molds. They can, however, also be purchased in Dallas since there are companies which provide this service, he said.

Clark said he "knows his limitations" and realizes that he "cannot do it all." However, he can do a great deal. He often has to deal with customers who don't understand jewelry making and thereby expect the impossible.

He remembered one individual who brought him scrap gold and asked him to make a gold chain. He had to turn the order down because he could not do it.

Clark has no qualms about sharing the knowledge he has acquired with other people. In fact, he said one person he has helped now makes a living at making jewelry.

He is sometimes asked to demonstrate his skills for clubs and organizations and is scheduled to display his wares for an upcoming meeting of the Snyder Christian Women's Club.

Various types of equipment is involved, but Clark said that anyone who was interested in making jewelry could learn how to do it.

There are many steps involved in jewelry making, but Clark said the actual work involved takes about three days. That does not include time spent on planning and designing the piece.

The basic process starts with a sprue base. Pieces of the bracelet are placed in a wax model which is filled with plaster of paris. This is called an investment. After it hardens the base is pulled off, leaving an indentation.

Then it is baked in a very hot oven. Clark says he gradually increases the temperature to 1,350 degrees. The heating process then incinerates the wood or plastic that was used in making the original design of the jewelry piece.

After baking the piece it is cooled to 1,100 degrees and placed in a centrifugal casting machine. As it spins around and around the gold melts into the cavity.

Then the piece is ready to be cleaned, cut, fastened and polished.

He keeps the equipment needed in his office at Clark Propane.

Clark moved back to Snyder three years ago to take over Clark Propane. Since then he had thought about moving away from the jewelry making business but things have not worked out that way. He loves the intricate work involved in making jewelry and says he cannot resist the challenge.

'Intelligent' floors aid robot vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — An "intelligent" floor for managers who want to use robot vehicles for interoffice transportation is being developed in Japan, reports MIS Week.

The floor consists of square plastic tiles back-coated with ferrite guideways that work with robot vehicles fitted with magnetic sensors and microcomputers.

According to the management information systems journal, the foot-square tiles have either I-shaped or L-shaped ferrite coating and can be arranged in the same manner as carpet tiles to create the guideway pattern hidden underneath.

The robot vehicle can be programmed to move from one point to another in the office via the microcomputers which process data obtained from magnetic sensors and keep track of the ferrite guideways underneath.

Experimental robot vehicles have operated at a speed of 1.5 miles per hour.

British explorer Sir John Franklin died of exposure and starvation on an Arctic island in 1847. Franklin, who had been knighted in 1829, made three expeditions to the Arctic. On his third mission in 1845, the one from which he did not return, he was in search of a Northwest Passage. For almost a decade, search parties looked for Franklin's ill-fated party, but it was not until 1854 that the contents of a cairn discovered on King William Island revealed its fate.

HYPERTENSION

An Oregon research team believes calcium may be the key to reducing or preventing high blood pressure. "Seven studies all suggest that calcium has a therapeutic effect on hypertension," says Dr. David McCarron of Oregon Health Sciences U. He believes that a lack of calcium and dairy products (low-fat) in the diet are more important in causing hypertension than too much salt and sodium.

La Leche meets

La Leche League will hold its next meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church.

A movie featuring Katheryn Ross of "The Colbys" will be featured with other actresses. Dr. William Sears and nursing mothers and professionals will comment on breast feeding.

All pregnant and nursing mothers are urged to attend. Nursing children are always welcome. For information call 573-7844.

TURKEY SPECIALS KEEP COST DOWN

Thanksgiving dinner may be one of the most economical you eat this year — especially if you have a family tradition of serving a whole bird and making side dishes from scratch. Most supermarkets use turkey to attract holiday shoppers, so retail prices don't necessarily reflect wholesale prices. Unbasted, store brand turkey could be as low as 60 cents a pound, while basted, national brand turkey will be in the 90 cent to one dollar per pound range.

A whole bird is the traditional favorite and considerably less expensive than further processed turkey parts or roasts. For example, cooked drumsticks are running about $1.80 per pound, prebasted breast about $1.40 per pound, and boneless smoked turkey about $4.85 per pound.

THAW TURKEY THE RIGHT WAY

Because a large frozen turkey can take several days to defrost in the refrigerator, people start to take shortcuts like putting the bird on the kitchen counter to thaw. This practice allows salmonella bacteria to flourish. The only safe way to thaw a turkey in a hurry is to use a microwave oven or to thaw in cool water in the sink, changing the water every 30 minutes. If you don't want to bother with thawing, you would be better off buying a fresh turkey, which can be kept refrigerated for one to two days before cooking.

DON'T STUFF TURKEY TOO SOON

It might seem like a convenience to stuff your Thanksgiving turkey in advance, but it could be dangerous. When a turkey is stuffed it creates ideal conditions for the growth of bacteria in the cavity. In a home refrigerator, it's very difficult to keep the stuffing inside a pre-stuffed turkey below 40 degrees fahrenheit, which is cold enough to keep most bacteria from growing. For that reason, the U.S. Department of Agriculture advises against buying pre-stuffed turkey. Prepare and refrigerate the stuffing in advance and place it in the turkey right before cooking.

Conserving trumps

By James Jacoby

An important lesson in trump management is not to draw too many trumps if they are needed for a special purpose. In today's bidding, South pressed by jumping to three diamonds (a game force) after partner's spade response. He traded on his shape and presumed that North's hand would fit one of his suits. When North now bid four clubs before going to five diamonds, South correctly interpreted that as showing the club ace and slam interest. Anyone who would jump to three diamonds over one spade would hardly back off now, so he bid the slam.

The contract was reasonable but the play was lacking. Declarer won dummy's club ace, played to his heart ace, ruffed a heart and then played ace of diamonds and a diamond back to his king. Now came the queen of hearts. West played low, and declarer had to choose. He decided that East, with only one diamond, was more likely than West to have the heart queen, so he ruffed. Later West's heart king was the setting trick.

Declarer succeeds without having to guess the heart position if he plays only the ace of diamonds after ruffing a heart. He comes to his hand with the spade ace and ruffs another heart. East has no trump to overruff with, and there is still a trump left in dummy. South is thus still able to ruff out the king of hearts. West makes only the diamond queen, and the slam comes home. What if the trump distribution were different and East could overruff on the third round of hearts? The slam would still make provided East had no other trumps.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

A WOMAN OF EGYPT. By Jehan Sadat.

Beautiful, courageous and controversial, living in a world wholly dominated by men, Jehan Sadat defied the traditions of her country and culture. More than a witness to the tumultuous years which saw Egypt gain its freedom from British colonial rule and become a republic, Jehan Sadat is among those who have made her country's and the world's history.

"A Woman of Egypt" is a frank and compassionate account of a life lived as a patriot, feminist, wife, mother, a heroine. It is an autobiography from the Islamic world such as we have not yet had.

APPROACHING MARRIAGE — Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sappington of Lubbock and Mr. Ben Sims of Alvin announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Terrisu Sims, to Richard Mann, son of Mrs. Pat Jones and the late Maxie Mann. The couple will be united Nov. 27 at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church Chapel. (Ted Bigham Photography)

MR. AND MRS. CRIS MORENO

Promises are made

CORPUS CHRISTI — Sharon Quintela became the bride of Cris Moreno, both of Corpus Christi, at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 17. Judge Armando Flores officiated the double-ring ceremony held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mario Olivarez.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Domingo Quintela of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Adolfo Moreno.

Stephanie Moreno, sister of the groom, provided musical selections for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a tea-length gown of white taffeta with a fingertip veil of silk illusion flowing from a band of silk flowers. She carried a bouquet of white and rose pink roses with accents of crystal and pearls.

Christy Quintela of Snyder, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor.

Best man was James Rivera of Corpus Christi.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Ray's Restaurant in Corpus Christi.

Following a honeymoon trip to Port Aransas, the couple will be at home in Corpus Christi.

Because of an 18th-century Chinese emperor's passion for jade, 1,000 workmen spent three years hauling a 6-ton nephrite boulder, and artisans spent another seven years carving it into an intricate design.

Build new relationship with older children

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — When a son or daughter goes away to college, parents must learn new communication skills to have a successful, long-distance relationship.

Orientation staffers at the University of Rochester suggest these tips for parents: Listen carefully, be patient and avoid jumping to conclusions. Keep students informed about what is happening at home, sharing even the bad news.

Parents should take more than a superficial interest in their child's activities and learn to trust their child's decisions. Most important, they should remember to squeeze in an "I love you" during phone calls.

Some Hotel Owners Delighted When Rooms Go to the Dogs

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago we stopped at a motel near Charleston, S.C., and before registering, my husband asked if we could keep our three dogs in our room with us overnight.

The motel owner said "Certainly," and handed us a card that read something like this: "We never had a dog that smoked in bed, got drunk, stole our towels, nor did we ever have to call the police to break up a dogfight."

The above is not exactly quoted, but it is the general idea. I lost the card. Will you please ask your readers if any of them know the actual wording, as we would like to have some cards made up to distribute to our local motels in order to persuade them to accept pets.

CLARITA M. MOESER,
HUMANE SOCIETY,
BRUNSWICK, GA.

DEAR CLARITA: I published that message several years ago. It was sent to me by a dog lover who had seen it framed, above the registration desk, in a small hotel. And here it is:

"Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

DEAR ABBY: It has happened again! One of the people I baby-sit for "forgot" his checkbook again, and can't pay me until Monday. That means I am unable to take care of an obligation I planned on this weekend.

This has happened several times before with him, and some of my other customers I often wonder what they would say if their paycheck wasn't in their hands at the proper time.

Several of the people I baby-sit for on a weekly basis drive expensive cars and take lovely weekend trips. But it is a different matter when it comes to paying their baby sitter. They never hesitate to ask me for special favors.

Please tell me how to deal with these people with "poor memories." I am a very reliable sitter.

NOT "MRS. GOT-ROCKS"

DEAR NOT: Inform these "amnesiacs" that payment is due at the time the services are rendered, because their "forgetfulness" puts you in a financial bind. Then rearrange your client priority list, with the slow payers at the bottom. A reliable sitter is hard to find. And if you become a little harder to get, it may improve their memories.

DEAR ABBY: If you received a wedding invitation containing the business card of the store where the bride was registered, what would you think?

The woman at the gift registry was horrified and offered her condolences. My poor husband was mortified and embarrassed.

A DISGUSTED RELATIVE OF THE GROOM

DEAR RELATIVE: I would think that the bride was woefully in need of an etiquette book.

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown man (age 42) and I'm having problems with my parents who live in Minnesota. I have a very lovely home in Scottsdale, so two years ago I invited my parents to visit me during the winter for a month. My only rule: No smoking in the house. My father smokes cigars and my mother smokes cigarettes, so when they wanted to smoke, they went outside.

Last winter I went to Asia for six weeks and invited my parents to have the use of my home in my absence. They knew the rules, but when I got home, the stench was terrible. I was furious, and told them so. It took me three weeks to get the smell out of the house.

Two weeks ago, I decided I'd go to California for January and February, so I called my parents to offer them my home again. My father said that since I complained so much about the smoke in my house, he never wanted to see Arizona — or me — again, and he promptly hung up on me! Within a few days, I received a letter from my mother saying that I was a terrible son, and they want to disown me.

Please advise me as to how I should handle this situation.

PARENT PROBLEMS

DEAR PROBLEMS: If your parents accepted your hospitality on the condition that they wouldn't smoke in the house, and they smoked anyway — shame on them. And if you invited them back, knowing this, shame on you.

To invite habitual smokers to stay in your home for months at a time, and expect them to go outside every time they want to smoke, is unrealistic. Inasmuch as your parents were also house-sitting, I think you owe them an apology. And if you are really that intolerant of smoke, issue no more invitations with a "no smoking" proviso.

DEAR ABBY: Just suppose a lady bookkeeper for a small business — always in the hole with its creditors — ran across this problem:

The boss in the above situation grabs up any cash that comes in for jobs, pockets it — then tells this bookkeeper to disregard the work order.

The job is important to the bookkeeper, so she's really in a bind. Is she an accessory to something if she follows her boss's instructions? It could cost her job if she refuses.

WORRIED ONE

DEAR WORRIED: The bookkeeper is an accessory to the underhanded business of helping her employer pocket money — a part of which should go to the government as "income." The word from here is: Aforementioned bookkeeper should start looking for a more honest boss. She may not eat as well, but she'll sleep better.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Recently at school there has been a vicious rumor going around that I'm pregnant. What should I say? I'm only 14.

TROUBLED IN FRESNO

DEAR TROUBLED: Say nothing — just stick around for eight months and you shouldn't have to "say" anything.

Judge orders freedom for three incarcerated men

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government has ordered the release of three men charged in the 1985 slayings of six Americans, including four U.S. Marines. U.S. officials said the suspects should be prosecuted.

Military Judge Jorge Alberto Serrano on Thursday ruled the suspects must be freed under an amnesty program called for by the Central American peace plan.

Since Nov. 6, the government has authorized the release of 473 political prisoners under the amnesty program.

It was not immediately clear when the three suspects ordered freed Thursday would be released from prison. Under Salvadoran law, it is not uncommon for suspects to be held for long periods of time without being brought to trial.

The U.S. Embassy said in a statement, "As a matter of policy, we believe that those responsible on both the right and left for terrorist acts or crimes against U.S. citizens should not be allowed to escape justice."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the United States believes the suspects should be prosecuted, but understands the desire of President Jose Napoleon Duarte to offer the broadest possible amnesty.

The United States supports the Salvadoran government in its 8-year-old war against leftist guerrillas that has killed more than 65,000 people.

Thursday's ruling was denounced by John R. Handwork of Beavercreek, Ohio, whose son, Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, was one of the four Marines killed.

"They were murderers. They were not political prisoners," the elder Handwork said of the three suspects. "Their release is a crime."

He recalled that President Reagan said his administration would "move any mountain, ford any river to find the jackals and bring them and their colleagues in terror to justice."

"We had a letter a couple of months ago from (Secretary of State) George Shultz," Handwork said in an interview Thursday. "I know Reagan and Shultz will pursue this — there's no doubt in my mind."

Thirteen people were killed June 19, 1985, when assailants wearing Salvadoran army uniforms opened fire with automatic weapons on patrons at two outdoor cafes in the "Pink Zone," a strip of trendy restaurants and clubs.

The three men ordered freed Thursday were identified as Juan Miguel Garcia Melendez, Jose Abraham Dimas Aguilar and William Celio Rivas Bolanos.

A little known leftist group, the Mardoqueo Cruz Urban Guerrilla Commandos, claimed responsibility for the massacre. The group is an offshoot of one of the five guerrilla armies in the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

Under the amnesty program recently enacted by the National Assembly, judges who first tried the prisoners review their cases and decide who will be freed.

House sitters bring human touch to residences

DALLAS (AP) — The dog, Rufus, wants to go out, so Mickey Gallagher naturally gets up to open the back door. A cat, Ringo, comes in moments later and makes himself comfortable on the sofa beside her. Another cat, Domino, remains outside. He is allowed in the house only twice a day, to eat, then he goes back outdoors.

Each animal has its own routine, and Ms. Gallagher adapts herself to fit in. The pets are not hers, though she talks to them and strokes them as if they are. The elegant North Dallas home isn't hers, either. She is but a temporary keeper, a professional house sitter, there for the pets' comfort and protection of the property while the owners are away.

"I love it," she said. "I had pets all my life, and I don't now, and I miss not having them very much."

Ms. Gallagher, soon to turn 70, is one of a growing number of senior citizens who are finding increasing opportunities for employment after retiring. With the over-65 population in this country increasing at a record pace, many retired men and women are finding positions ranging from sales clerks to consultants.

A woman with a voice that seems to soothe the animals, Ms. Gallagher opted nearly six years ago to be a house sitter, joining a firm called Home Sitting Service of Dallas. Since then, the business has changed hands twice. The owners since August are Gary and Barbara Kauper, who contract with about 25 men and women to sit with clients' houses.

All but one of these house sitters is past retirement age, Barbara Kauper said. There are two husband-wife teams the rest are single.

The company charges clients $24 a day to have a bonded sitter live in the house, water plants inside and out and look after a couple of pets, Mrs. Kauper said. The rate increases for additional pets or responsibilities — if the sitter must maintain a swimming pool, for instance.

The sitters receive commissions, which were established to keep income-tax obligations to a minimum, Ms. Gallagher said.

"Most of the people have pets," she said. "They're leaving town, but they don't want to put their pets in a kennel. They grieve in a kennel, you know.

"Usually the owners see right away that I get along well with their pets. They like me. I gear myself to the animals. If the animal sleeps on the owner's bed at night, he sleeps on the bed with me."

She regularly takes care of 27 pets, she says, and she can call off their names with barely a pause. One of them is a Great Pyrenees dog that, at 110 pounds, outweighs her by 10 pounds. Fortunately, she said, he has elected to sleep beside the bed rather than on it.

Ms. Gallagher has a small apartment, "But I've only spent about 10 days there in the last two months, and those weren't consecutive days, either."

She says she enjoys the diversity, the grand surroundings in which she frequently finds herself — a client "has to be someone who is reasonably well-off in order to afford it," she says — and, of course, the pets, although keeping up with their schedules sometimes is confusing.

Sitting jobs range in length from two days to two or three weeks. Most go without incident. There was the time, though, when a bathroom pipe sprang a leak during a holiday period when plumbers were scarce.

For the 24 hours before the plumber arrived, Ms. Gallagher said, she lived in fear.

"I spent a lot of time mopping the floor and trying to catch water," she said.

Carlucci...

Nothing sacred in Pentagon budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank C. Carlucci, who is expected to be approved next week as the new secretary of defense, says nothing in the Pentagon budget should be "sacrosanct" during efforts to cut the federal deficit.

"We have to look at everything," he said Thursday, although he refused to be specific about what, if any, weapons might have to be canceled.

The deficit-cutting effort could mean "we may be looking at a smaller military force," Carlucci testified at a confirmation hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee. About half the Pentagon budget is taken up by personnel costs such as military pay, housing expenses and related items.

"I'd rather have a smaller force that is effective than a larger one that is ineffective," he said.

"Nothing can be sacrosanct" in the effort to cut the deficit, he said.

The Armed Services panel planned Friday to vote on Carlucci's nomination and no opposition was expected, according to Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., committee chairman.

The full Senate is likely to vote next week and "I fully expect that you will be confirmed," Nunn told Carlucci during Thursday's hearing.

Carlucci, currently Reagan's national security adviser, was praised generously by senators of both parties, who noted that he has spent almost three decades in a variety of high-level federal jobs, including a two-year stint as deputy secretary of defense.

Carlucci was nominated by Reagan last week to replace Caspar W. Weinberger, who is retiring after a seven-year tenure during which Pentagon spending doubled. Weinberger will remain in office until Carlucci is confirmed.

Carlucci was cautious in his statements Thursday, breaking no new ground as he defended administration policies on a variety of national security issues.

Many of the senators' questions and comments involved the Pentagon budget, which has been a chief subject of negotiations between legislators and the White House in the effort to reduce federal budget deficits. Carlucci has been involved in those talks.

Nunn cited a "need to bring the defense budget into sync with fiscal reality," explaining that the Pentagon assumes it will receive increases of 3 percent above inflation for each of the next five years. That is "an unattainable level," said Nunn, noting that defense budgets have been cut in each of the past two years.

Carlucci promised to work closely with Congress, a statement that contrasted with Weinberger's steadfast refusal to tell Congress where the military budget could be reduced with the least harm to U.S. military forces.

"My style in the past has been to function in close collaboration with the Congress," he said.

Crosby grateful for drug conviction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer David Crosby says he's grateful for his drug and weapons convictions, which cost him five months in prison before they were thrown out by an appeals court.

"Even though they put me in the penitentiary on a case they shouldn't have, I feel gratitude because it may have saved my life," Crosby said after a Texas appeals court ruled Thursday he was caught in an illegal search.

"I hope other people will learn from my experience and avoid drugs. I've been clean for nearly two years now and I have the state of Texas to thank for it," he said.

Crosby, who became famous with The Byrds and later with Crosby, Stills and Nash, was arrested in 1982 in his dressing room at a night club in Dallas. He was convicted on cocaine and handgun possession charges.

"Because I'm no longer a convicted felon that means that I get my vote, which is very, very valuable to me. I care a great deal about it," he said. "It also gives me my right to travel and means I'm off parole and that's nice."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled, 5-4, that a Dallas policeman had no right to search Crosby's night club dressing room on April 12, 1982. The policeman found Crosby crouched on the floor with a propane torch in one hand and glass pipe in the other. On his lap was a bag of cocaine, according to court records.

Police also found a pistol after they took Crosby to city hall. He was sentenced to five years in prison for the cocaine conviction and a three-year sentence, to be served at the same time as the cocaine sentence, for unlawfully carrying a weapon in a tavern.

The dressing room search was illegal because the officer testified he went into the dressing room after "I got curious as to whether there was a law being violated or not in there," the appeals court said.

Crosby, who had acknowledged that he had a drug-use problem, was released from prison Aug. 8, 1986.

The appeals court will be asked to reconsider its decision, Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Donald Davis says. If the court refuses, Davis said a decision would be made on whether to retry Crosby.

The fact that Crosby has served time in prison would not influence the retrial decision, he said.

A retrial seems improbable because the Court of Criminal Appeals ruling means prosecutors could not use as evidence anything that was taken in the improper search, defense lawyer Jay Ethington said.

A majority opinion by Judge M.P. Duncan's said a ruling that the search was legal "would be providing peace officers of this state with the power and authority to conduct general, exploratory searches."

"This we will not, nor can we constitutionally, do," Duncan said.

Judges agreeing with Duncan were Sam Houston Clinton, Marvin Teague, Chuck Miller and Charles Campbell concurred.

Presiding Judge John Onion and Judges W.C. Davis, Bill White and Michael McCormick dissented.

Funeral home staff discovers bruises

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland says alert funeral home workers foiled what might have been a perfect homicide.

Copeland said the workers noticed bruises on a 63-year-old woman's body and tipped investigators, who later determined the death was a homicide and arrested a 46-year-old man for murder.

The body of Augusta May Oberlander was found slumped on a couch in her home Nov. 7. Officials believed she had died of a heart attack, but her death was ruled a homicide Thursday by the Bexar County Medical Examiner's Office after bruises were found on the woman's head.

"I'd say Alamo Funeral Home was on its toes," Copeland said. "I'm afraid that body could have been buried and we'd never have known it was a homicide," the sheriff told the San Antonio Express-News.

Roger John Allison, 46, was ordered held in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Medical examiner's office spokesman Dewey Cashwell said,

"This (head injuries) could have easily gone unnoticed," said the victim's grandson, Richard Erney, 24.

Earny said family members had only recently learned from friends of Oberlander that she had complained in the past of being hit or beaten.

Copeland said that deputies sent to the woman's house did not see any signs of foul play and paramedics said it appeared the woman had suffered a heart attack.

Frank Castillon, chief medical investigator of the Bexar County Medical Examiner's office, said a medical investigator wasn't called to the death scene.

Authorities said they conferred with the woman's doctor and decided that natural death was a logical possibility based on the reports from the scene. Her body was then taken to the funeral home where workers discovered the bruises a few hours later.

An autopsy determined that the head injuries caused the woman's death.

Trey Vaughn, assistant manager of the funeral home, said several employees saw the bruises.

"We just felt like it was something the medical examiner should look at," Vaughn said.

"As far as I'm concerned, through the funeral home's diligence and alertness, we were kept from burying a homicide victim," Castillon said.

Agents thought to be burglars

HOUSTON (AP) — The wife of white supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr. says she shot at Mexican federal agents trying to arrest her husband because she thought they were burglars.

"The police here keep saying I'm lying," Sheila Marie Toohey, 20, told the Houston Chronicle Wednesday. "I just want them to give me a fair chance."

She is being held in the Jalisco State Prison outside Guadalajara, Mexico, charged with assaulting a federal police officer and possessing an illegal weapon.

Whirlpool may be the problem

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — At my health club, the whirlpool is supposedly set at between 90 and 100 degrees, but it is so hot that I can't stand to get in. Is my temperature out of whack or is this too hot?

DEAR READER — Some people tend to be heat-sensitive. They are intolerant of saunas and whirlpools. Listen to what your body is telling you; if the whirlpool is uncomfortable, stay out of it — or enjoy one that isn't as hot. In addition, you might want to check the water temperature of the unit in your health club. Perhaps the whirlpool is too hot, and you might be the first sensible person to voice a complaint about improperly functioning equipment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Who can keep up with these food fads? Now, believe it or not, my father, 63, has started drinking a daily glass of 15 drops of hydrogen peroxide mixed with water. He claims it will keep his system clean. Is there any harm in this practice?

DEAR READER — The amount of hydrogen peroxide your father consumes each day will not harm him. It won't help him, either.

I agree that the claims and counterclaims about nutrition are confusing to people who aren't specialists in the topic. That's why I've found the following resource material to be so helpful. "Popular Nutritional Practices: A Scientific Appraisal," by Jack Yetiv, M.D., Ph.D. (Popular Medical Press, Box 4031-G, Menlo Park, CA 94026). The book costs $12.95 (including postage and handling) and can be ordered directly.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 18 and can sweat through three shirts, a sweater and a winter jacket. My parents say it's normal, but if that's true, why aren't any of my friends walking around with huge sweat stains on their clothes? This has been going on for five years and is driving me crazy.

DEAR READER — You seem to be describing hyperhydrosis — too much sweating. Although this condition can be normal for many individuals, in others it may reflect an underlying disease, such as hidden infection or thyrotoxicosis (overactive thyroid). I think that you should be checked by a doctor to make sure that you aren't suffering from an undiagnosed disease.

For Dr. Gott's complete discussion of problems and treatments of the prostate gland, write for your copy of Dr. Gott's new Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

What doctors really recommend

After several months during which I scrutinized my mail and carefully analyzed the claims made in television ads, I think I have discovered the Rosetta stone, the secret of how drug companies come up with their "four out of five" doctor endorsements. I thought you might be interested in my theory about how advertising agencies doctor the doctors.

A few times each year, I receive unsolicited checks for $1 or $2, ostensibly to compensate me for the time it takes to fill out a short questionnaire on the back of each check. In return for endorsing the check, I am asked to indicate my prescribing habits about certain drugs. Sometimes the questions pertain to recently released medicines. For example: How often in the past week have I prescribed Gorillacillin, the new antibiotic that mangles all germs on contact? Is the price of Gorillacillin (a mere $10 a pill) a problem for my patients? Why would I use Gorillacillin in place of other, cheaper and more traditional antibiotics? (multiple choice)

More often than not, the questionnaire asks about my use of common over-the-counter drugs. For instance, how many times a month do I recommend aspirin, Bayer aspirin, acetaminophen, Tylenol, Advil and Anacin?

Doctors recommend a lot of medicine, even medicine that is not by prescription. We have our favorites, it's true. However, physicians usually make decisions about over-the-counter drugs by using criteria that are, in truth, somewhat vague, depending on the healer's mood, the patient's age, the severity of symptoms, the phase of the moon and what comes to mind at the time. The office transaction may sound something like this:

"I think you should use some aspirin for your arthritis, Gladys. Try it for a week and let me know how you feel."

"Should I use coated aspirin, Bayer or just plain aspirin, doctor?"

"Well, what have you got at home?"

"Oh, some regular aspirin we've had in the medicine cabinet for a while."

"OK, try that."

Of course, if the patient is a child with a fever, a doctor would probably recommend acetaminophen, because aspirin is a suspected cause of Reye's syndrome, a dangerous brain disorder.

"Use what for my child, doctor?"

"Acetaminophen."

"Aceta what?"

"You know, acetaminophen. Tylenol."

When I get down to filling out the questionaire, I — being more or less honest about this sort of thing — usually check off all the drugs. Let's see: I probably recommended aspirin about two dozen times. Yes, a little Bayer, too, because three patients preferred that brand. Oh, sure, some acetaminophen or Tylenol a few times. Maybe some Advil or Anacin thrown in along the way.

So it goes. The check questionnaire clears the bank and returns to the polling company that has been hired to tally up the score by collating the thousands of checks received from nerds like me.

A few weeks later, I am treated to a TV ad proclaiming that four out of five doctors prefer Bayer aspirin over competing brands. That's the message printed on the screen. The voice-over says that four out of five physicians in a survey recommended Bayer. And that's a big difference. Doctors recommend a lot of things. Recommending is not synonymous with endorsement or preference, necessarily — but there you are.

In my opinion, drug companies find out what medicine we're using and then fit the data to their own nefarious purposes. I wouldn't be surprised to discover that, in reality, four of five doctors recommend everything. The fifth doctor, a pathologist or psychiatrist, probably doesn't recommend anything.

I haven't yet figured out how to beat the system. It's no good to ignore the questionnaires, there always will be physicians who will fill out the darned things. Maybe doctors should be less forthright and indicate that we are recommending only the most esoteric and unknown drugs. But that won't work, either; an obscure drug company will reap the benefits. Perhaps the answer lies in a public that will eventually discover the truth. Doctors prescribing habits are highly individualized, change from day to day, and do not mean that one product is necesssarily superior to another identical or similar medicine.

Meanwhile, life in the fast lane of drug promotion goes on.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Refusing to treat patients unethical

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors have an ethical obligation to treat AIDS victims and people who are infected with the virus but have not developed the disease, the American Medical Association says in its first pronouncement on the issue.

The nation's largest organization of doctors believes as always that "when an epidemic prevails, a physician must continue his labors without regard to the risk to his own health," said the AMA's Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs.

"The AMA's code is the most widely used code of ethics of America's physicians, and the AMA's 280,000 members agree to be bound by it when joining the association," the association said in a statement Thursday.

AMA chief counsel Kirk Johnson said that the AMA had no plans to "actively enforce" the policy, but that patients could file complaints with state medical societies, and the doctor could be expelled from the state society and AMA.

Dr. Nancy Dickey, a member of the AMA council, said she believes a "very small number" of doctors refuse to treat patients who have AIDS or AIDS antibodies indicating exposure to the virus.

But "because of the public's immense concerns, it only takes one physician saying he or she is not going to treat patients that have AIDS to create a perception of a problem," she said.

U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has previously called doctors who decline to treat AIDS patients "a fearful and irrational minority."

Anne M. Sims, a spokeswoman for the national Centers for Disease Control, said the government knows of 12 cases in which health-care workers became infected with the AIDS virus, eight of them in the United States.

Some were pricked with needles, several had long exposure to infected body fluids and others were briefly exposed to large amounts of blood from infected patients and had cuts or abrasions through which the virus might have entered, she said.

The AMA has previously said doctors should have "the freedom, except in emergencies, to choose whom to serve." But that does not permit discrimination against a person because of infection with the AIDS virus, the eight-member council of doctors said Thursday.

Nor should a doctor who is infected with the virus "engage in any activity that creates a risk of transmission of the disease" to others," the council said.

The council also recommended that doctors report to public health authorities the names of AIDS-exposed patients "who refuse to refrain from activities that might result in further transmission of the disease."

Johnson said this is the first time the AMA has gone on record as supporting such a move, and the first time it has said that if alerting public health authorities doesn't work, the physician should warn endangered individuals.

Hundreds attend funeral

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 1,000 people mourned Elizabeth Steinberg, a 6-year-old girl who died allegedly at the hands of her adoptive parents, and prayed that their grief and outrage could help save other little lives.

"The world is getting crueler and crueler," said John deBernardi, who wept Thursday as he placed a small bunch of flowers atop the casket. "It's one red rose for every year of her life."

The mourners included the girl's biological mother, Michelle Launders, who won a court fight to bury the daughter she said she had seen for only 20 seconds before giving her up for adoption.

Most of the mourners were unacquainted with the girl until the death made national headlines and her adoptive parents were charged with murder.

Elizabeth, known to family and friends as Lisa, died following three days on life-support systems after police found her Nov. 2, comatose in the Greenwich Village apartment of her adoptive father, lawyer Joel Steinberg.

"We want to believe that Lisa's death is an isolated case, a freak of nature, but yet we know that it is not," said Rabbi Dennis Math, who conducted the service with the Rev. Kevin O'Brien, a Catholic priest.

"We must risk being wrong, embarrassed, or even evoking a neighbor's anger when we feel a child is being harmed," he said.

Steinberg and his live-in lover of 17 years, Hedda Nussbaum, are Jewish; Ms. Launders is Catholic.

Deportation possible mistake

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A 3-year-old girl is back in her mother's home today after a mix-up that led police to think the girl had been accidentally deported along with her Mexican baby sitter.

Lysette Guadalupe Gomez was reported missing Wednesday along with the maid who had moved in with the Gomez family Monday, police said.

The baby sitter, 18-year-old Maria Jesus Gonzalez-Armandaris of Juarez, took the girl across the Rio Grande Wednesday to deliver a letter to a former employer.

But she was turned back by border authorities when she tried to return to El Paso, said Mike Williams, chief agent for the U.S. Border Patrol in El Paso.

"At that time she gave the name for the baby as Elizabeth Acosta Juarez of Mexico and said she was a friend of the (child's) family," Williams said after Lysette was returned to her mother Thursday afternoon.

Why would anyone in their right mind publish--let alone read--a complete list of Texas high school football scores every Saturday morning?

For those who might ask it, we have an answer--one which involves more than football, although that is the only part most native Texans will ever own up to.

In our mind, reading these lists is a seasonal way of letting folks reacquaint themselves with that strange place called Texas--a region much pointed to, ill-defined and, in our estimation, as much an attitude as it is a territory.

We also believe it is read because it feels good.

A Yankee brethren from Rochester, N.Y., for example, could read the list for information. But, to really enjoy and understand it, he would have to have lived in Texas for several decades and to have traveled its landscape a minimum of five out-of-town road trips per year dating back to the onset of puberty.

If you grew up in the smaller West Texas communties, where everybody and their spastic cousin played football, this experience likely included riding in the back of a bumping "yellowhound" bus, nursing your pimento cheese sandwich and apple after-game meal provided by the lunch room ladies and wearing your entire football uniform minus shoulder pads and helmet because the opposing team called that morning to say the plumbing in the dressing room busted a pipe and showers will be temporarily discontinued.

Because of such experiences, the reader of this Saturday morning list is seeing both the scores of Friday night, the cities in which these contests were played, and a fuzzy area called "other" football games.

It is this final category which we might call "rosier when remembered."

With sufficient years of such memories under your bonnet, just reading the list is enough to set off a pleasant buzz of adrenalin--getting your jollies from unfamiliar teams in the familiar towns of Abernathy, Amarillo, Albany and Anton; Burkburnett, Breckenridge, Brownfield and Belton; Chillicothe, Clarendon, Cleburne and Crane.

Reading through this litany of old familiar names each fall is a ritual not unlike one form of prayer--10 Hail Mary's said for exoneration, comfort and joy.

For, blessed art thou among O'Donnell versus Sundown and Shallowater versus Morton. Forgive us our sins at Stratford versus White Deer and Sundan versus Lorenzo and be with us all the days of our lives at Crosbyton versus Ralls, New Deal versus Tahoka and Springlake-Earth versus Olton. At Frenship versus Dumas and Albany versus Hamlin. At Panhandle versus Gruver and Whitharral versus Amherst. Now and at the hour of our death. Amen.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

While visiting a friend in Dallas recently, I found myself one evening surrounded by a group of people (male and female), most of whom I had just met, who were all divorced. (Dallas holds the dubious honor of having more divorces, per capita, than any other city in the nation.) I soon discovered that ex-bashing was to be the evening's entertainment. For a while, I marveled at the creativity employed by some in that particular diversion; I'd never heard individuals described in those terms before. Apparently these poor unfortunate souls had all married Hitler's cousins. But after a couple of hours of this, I began to feel uncomfortable (or maybe I should say, "more uncomfortable.") Finally, in a sheepish voice, I admitted, "Gee guys, I'm sorry, but I happen to be happily married."

Like a pack of wild dogs, they turned on me.

"But you've got what we all want!" exclaimed one.

"Yeah, we envy you," added another.

"You're just a lucky so-and-so," shouted one. "That's right," echoed the rest.

That did it. Up until then, I'd managed to keep my mouth shut, which was a small miracle in itself. I felt my eyes narrow and my lip curl.

"LUCK!" I asked. "You think it's LUCK that makes a good marriage? What d'ya think, I was tripping along underneath the rainbow, picking flowers, when along came this great guy on a white horse, and we just rode off into the sunset to live happily ever after? Grow up!"

They shrank back a tad. "Sure," I said, "I found a great guy. But first, I dated plenty of fine young men, so that I would have a good idea, not just as to what I wanted, but what I needed in a relationship. I finished my education and lived for awhile on my own — I gave myself time to grow up. Then, I made a clear-headed decision — not ruled by blind passion — on someone whom I knew would not just make a solid, dependable husband who obviously loved me, (and whom I loved), but would also make an excellent father. Just because some guy wines and dines you doesn't mean he'll sit up all night with a vomiting child or patiently teach his daughter to throw a softball."

The room was growing silent, but I didn't care. They had pushed me too far. "Then, when we got married, we made a commitment. Never once, in almost fourteen years together, have we ever used the 'D' word." There were gasps and rounded eyes all around. "That's right. Never once.

"Marriage is like a garden. You have to tend it with the sweat of your brow, keep the weeds out, and give it what it needs, but not too much. See, you can drown a garden with too much water or burn it up with too much fertilizer. Likewise, a love that is obsessive and possesive suffocates. You have to give each other room to breathe. You have to trust each other, and respect the other's right to privacy.

"At the same time, you support and encourage each other up the career ladder; you don't feel threatened by a partner's success." I knew I was getting wound up, but couldn't seem to stop myself. Since nobody else tried, I went on.

"It's accepted, for example, that there be no verbal or physical abuse. When you fight, fight fair. Don't call each other nasty names or dredge up things from the past. Stick to the issue. And you don't run off at the first sign of trouble. You understand that marriage travels in cycles, like seasons; there will be times when things aren't going so well, usually during financial reversals or heavy work periods, like a garden in the dead of winter. But in a good marriage, you know that these times will pass and that you'll be stronger for it, come spring. If you need a little help, don't be afraid to get counseling. Sometimes an objective viewpoint makes all the difference in the world.

"You NOURISH your relationship, give it time and attention, even if it means leaving the kids with friends or family for a weekend so you can have the time to talk, really talk, (and listen, really listen), and make love without interruption. And you stay attractive to one another; you don't get slovenly or take each other for granted."

All right, maybe I was lecturing, but they had asked for it. "Never relinquish control of your life to alcohol or drug abuse, because then you've given your life over to be destroyed, and the marriage with it." Someone pushed away a beer can. "Of course, it goes without saying that you remain true to one another, because nothing rots away the core of marriage worse than infidelity.

"But I've left out the most important thing," I said, noticing that everyone was listening, albeit awkwardly. "There's no way a marriage can be healthy and strong and long-lasting without being firmly rooted and grounded in a mutual faith in God." That got 'em. "Oh, sure," I went on quietly, "a marriage can last 50 years or more without that, but if you want the garden of your marriage to yield a rich and joy-filled harvest, plant it on faith.

"And I'm not talking about token church attendance that looks good on your resume. I'm talking about prayer and Bible study and family devotionals. Real faith. Faith in God will renew your faith in one another in the bad times."

No one was looking at me. I got up to leave the room, but before I left, I made one parting shot.

"Just don't call me LUCKY," I said. "It really ticks me off."

Scurry County gins have processed about a tenth of the apparent bumper-class cotton crop, with six of the county's seven gins reporting 5,189 bales ginned, it was reported Sunday. Gin spokesmen predicted total production of about 60,000 bales.

The first monthly reporting period for Snyder building permits reflect a sizable increase over last year's miserly start--a 12-month reporting period which ended 50 percent below the previous year, it was reported Sunday.

MONDAY
November 9

A new Department of Public Safety trooper has been assigned to the four-man Snyder DPS office, Steve Torres, 24, a native of San Angelo, it was reported Monday.

TUESDAY
November 10

With a 16-month building period projected, the effort to complete a 1,000-bed Texas Department of Correction prison unit in Scurry County--a project announced in Austin Monday--is expected to be underway here "as quickly as possible."

TDC public information officer David Nunnlee said Tuesday morning that exact details for the construction are still in the architectural drawing phase.

There is a chance that the Texas Department of Corrections unit to be built near Snyder will be doubled in size a short time after it is completed, County Judge Bobby Goodwin said Tuesday.

Goodwin noted that TDC Chairman Al Hughes told the Snyder delegation in Austin that the agency will ask the legislature for funding to double the size of all the 1,000-inmate units that were announced Monday in the next legislative session, which will begin in January 1989.

The area adjacent to the Scurry County Coliseum is to gain its second historical building as members of the Scurry County Historical Commission unveiled plans Tuesday to move the old Dermott School building on site.

Permission to use the county-owned property was granted by commissioners Tuesday morning.

The first freeze of the year was recorded in Snyder early Tuesday morning as the temperature dipped to 30 degrees.

WEDNESDAY
November 11

Members of the Scurry County Economic Development Committee played one final card at the political poker game involving Texas Department of Correction officials--a game featuring a $6.7 million annual payroll as the pot, it was reported Wednesday.

Just prior to the county's oral presentation for one of six TDC prison projects, committee members opted to donate to TDC the Scurry County Industrial Foundation building in exchange for either a 2,250 or a 1,000-bed unit.

Veterans Day finds Scurry County with four surviving World War I veterans--a ginner, a schoolteacher, a farmer-rancher and a yard contractor, all retired and in their early or middle 90s.

The veterans profiled Wednesday include D.V. Merritt Sr., 91; Elmer Taylor, 94; Tollie A Faver, 92; and Jay Dunn, 95.

THURSDAY
November 12

The City of Snyder is seeking some $226,000 in state grant monies to replace water lines serving areas of the city primarily comprised of low to moderate income families.

Ten water lines have been identified, city engineer Don Osborn said Thursday.

The unemployment estimate for Scurry County remained near the 7.4 percent level during September, according to the figures from the Texas Employment Commission reported Thursday.

The number of individuals said seeking work remained approximately the same, but the number of persons listed as employed dropped slightly. This caused a shift upward in the percentage, from 7.2 percent in August to 7.4 percent in September.

Western Texas College trustees Thursday night heard the announcement of a new policy to suspend or permanently expel students who are caught with drugs on campus and put on probation or suspend students linked to the use of alcoholic beverages.

FRIDAY
November 13

In a change designed to improve academic performance at Snyder High School and junior high, parents are now being notified each time their child fails to turn in homework assignments from the previous night, it was reported Friday.

The change was put into effect earlier this month and was prompted by concerns voiced by teachers at both levels regarding the high rate of zeros being given for failure to complete homework.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to use your column to reach the many people in Snyder with whom I and 100 other ladies came in contact with the weekend of Oct. 31. The Lubbock Diocesan Council of Catholic Women met at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church and Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church for their annual meeting.

We were all treated very cordially as we drove into town and many of us had to ask for directions. The Great Western Motel had a welcome sign put up especially for us, and that was a great welcome. We each received a "goody bag" and many merchants had donated items for it.

Among them were the following: G&G Glass, the Chamber of Commerce, McWhorter Tire, West Texas State Bank, an Avon representative, Lillie Raschke, the Snyder National Bank, the Great Western Motel, and the American State Bank.

I apologize in advance if I left anyone out. The ladies of the parishes mentioned above did a fantastic job of organizing the two-day affair.

I would also like to make special mention of the police escort which was assigned as the ladies made a pilgrimage from one church to another, crossing a main thoroughfare, but with the help of the local police deparment, we walked the distance with no problems. This was a very special pilgrimage and a very special part of our day, so we really appreciated the cooperation from the police.

Thanks also to all the citizens we encountered on that walk — those who pulled over and waited for us to pass, and those of you who gave a friendly smile and a wave.

Snyder folks, our hats go off to you for your courteousness and friendliness especially at the

Gorbachev says...

Former protege overreacher

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev said his former protege, Boris Yeltsin, was fired because he put "personal ambitions above the interests of the party" and blamed others for his own shortcomings, Tass said Friday.

The Soviet leader's charges against the ousted Moscow Communist Party chief, carried by the official news agency, represented an extraordinarily detailed account of an intraparty squabble. Tass also followed Gorbachev's charges with a scathing attack on Yeltsin by other, unidentified party leaders.

The 56-year-old Yeltsin was removed Wednesday from his post by a plenary meeting of Moscow's party committee.

The ouster came after Yeltsin, in a closed Oct. 21 meeting of the party Central Committee, criticized the party's style of leadership and said Gorbachev's reforms were being adopted too slowly. He threatened to resign.

According to Tass, Gorbachev said at the Wednesday meeting that Yeltsin's speech to the Central Committee plenum, "was on the whole politically immature, extremely confusing and contradictory."

Gorbachev added that Yeltsin "went as far as to say that (the Soviet leader's policy of) restructuring was giving virtually nothing to people."

Yeltsin, who still holds a non-voting seat on the ruling Politburo, was the highest ranking protege of the Soviet leader to lose his post since Gorbachev became Communist Party general secretary in March 1985.

Although there had been some doubt whether Gorbachev sought Yeltsin's removal or was pressured into going along with it, the Tass account put the Communist Party chief's stamp on the firing. Yeltsin had been a fervent proponent of the restructuring of the Soviet economy and society.

The Tass dispatches provided the fullest account yet of the Oct. 21 meeting. Yeltsin's remarks to the Central Committee reportedly drew a rebuke from Yegor K. Ligachev, the No. 2 Kremlin leader and reportedly a conservative.

Tass disclosed that Yeltsin had informed Gorbachev of his intention to resign after the general secretary returned from vacation this fall.

The two men "agreed it was not an appropriate time to discuss this issue" on the eve of the Soviet Union's celebration of the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, Tass said.

"Nevertheless, Yeltsin, in breach of party ethics, raised this issue directly at the plenary meeting in circumvention of the Politburo," it said.

The Tass account also suggested that Gorbachev wanted to dispell concern that Yeltsin's firing would chill "glasnost," his policy of encouraging greater openness of expression.

Gorbachev was quoted to have stressed that a Central Committee member making critical remarks at a plenum "should not in itself be viewed as something extraordinary." But Yeltsin, the report said, "tried to sidetrack the work of the plenum," which was called to consider Gorbachev's speech opening the anniversary celebration.

Tass said, "Reflecting on what had happened with Boris Yeltsin, Mikhail Gorbachev said that Boris Yeltsin had placed personal ambitions above the interests of the party."

It said Yeltsin's party organization tried to achieve change by pressure, and when that didn't work, Yeltsin "tried to place responsibility for his own major shortcomings in work on others."

The news agency said that, in violation of orders, he launched a round of personnel reshuffling.

Yeltsin has said he replaced about 40 percent of the people in the Moscow party organization to get rid of opponents of Gorbachev's programs.

Charges vacated against Mandel

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Gov. Marvin Mandel said he won't return to politics after a federal judge threw out the 1977 mail-fraud and racketeering conviction that sent him to prison for 19 months and forced him from office.

"My political future is behind me," the 67-year-old Mandel said after the ruling Thursday. Nodding toward his wife, Jeanne, he added, "You see my future right here. She wouldn't let me run for office."

Mandel went to prison after being convicted of influencing legislation to help five political associates get extra racing days for the Marlboro Race Track, which they secretly owned.

U.S. District Judge Frederic N. Smalkin, citing a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling, threw out all convictions in the case Thursday and ordered the government to repay all fines paid.

U.S. Attorney Breckinridge Willcox said the government will appeal because of concern the ruling could destroy the government's ability to prosecute local corruption cases.

The indictment alleged that Mandel's political associates gave the colorful and controversial former governor $380,000 in money, clothes, jewelry and financial help in his divorce settlement with his first wife, Barbara.

In June, the Supreme Court ruled that the 115-year-old mail fraud statute protects only rights in money and property and cannot be used to prosecute public officials for defrauding citizens of their "intangible rights" to honest government.

Federal prosecutors had used the intangible-rights theory in their case against Mandel and co-defendants Irvin Kovens, W. Dale Hess, Harry W. Rodgers III, William A. Rodgers and Ernest N. Cory.

The prosecutor in the case, former U.S. Attorney Barnet D. Skolnik, said, "Nothing will ever change what Mr. Mandel did. He sold his office. All the courts are doing now, 10 years later, is deciding whether it should technically still be considered a federal crime when a state governor sells his office.

"Either way, he sold out the people of Maryland and that's never going to change."

Mandel was formally stripped of his office under state law in 1977 but was reinstated two days before his term expired in January 1979 when a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the conviction.

The full court, on two tie votes, reinstated the convictions, and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Mandel's appeal. He was sentenced to four years in prison and fined $40,000. Similar sentences were given to the other defendants.

Mandel said he was innocent and felt fully vindicated by Thursday's decision, adding, "I am eternally grateful to the people of the state of Maryland, who over the years ... have stood by us."

To the editor,

Let us say "Thanks" to a concerned citizen.

The recent plight of little Jessica McClure in Midland touched the hearts of people all over the world.

This brave and tough little girl came out with some damage, but thank God, she is ok and will recover.

There have been others in the past and probably more in the future, who will not be so fortunate.

One local citizen, an ex-water well service man, began to look for potential hazards in our area. It did not take hime long to locate one.

Located some 150 feet off South 37th St. and some 30 feet off another street there was an abandoned well cased with 10-inch steel pipe with no cap on it.

To make matters worse, this location is very near one of our local day care centers, where several children come each day and also near one of our elementary schools.

Our local citizen did not rest until he contacted our law enforcement officers and had a steel plate welded on top of the well casing.

Now will you join me in saying thanks to Johnny Portis.

This world and our town is better off with men like him.

To the editor,

Well, I see where we are getting a hospital out of Lubbock to tell us how to run our "poor" little old country hospital (free).

Do not be misled, you do not get someone to tell you how to run your business for free.

Like our county appraisal district, they hire a company out of Dallas (for 50,000 to 60,000 dollars a year with our taxes) to tell them how much to tax us (poor) old Scurry County tax payers.

There is a real rich man in Dallas who tells us how much money in taxes we are to spend on higher education and this just might be the answer to our problem if we could get all of our hired, elected and appointed county officials to go back to school to learn how to run our own Scurry County business.

I want to express a special thanks to the businesses and individuals of Snyder and the surrounding area who donated goodies for registration bags, food, ice, or time to the Diocesan Council of Catholic Women's Convention held at St. Elizabeth Catholic Parish Center Oct. 30 and 31.

It was a very successful and enjoyable event with many compliments given to the friendliness of our town. Thanks again.

FDA announces approval of new heart patient drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced approval Friday of a new clot-dissolving drug that could save the lives of thousands of heart attack patients each year.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young termed approval of the genetically engineered drug — widely known as TPA — "a major advance in the management of coronary heart disease."

It is an emergency treatment most effective when administered within the first minutes or hours after a patient has suffered a heart attack. The official labeling will call for its use "as soon as possible after the onset of symptoms."

Officials of Genentech, Inc., the California company that developed the drug, said initial distribution will be to hospitals and that it should be available nationwide within two or three weeks.

While not the first drug developed through biotechnology, TPA is regarded as the first destined to have a dramatic and widespread impact and is expected to prove a financial bonanza for Genetech.

Company officials said the cost for U.S. doses has not been determined, but added that it likely will be in the $2,000-per-dose range established in other countries.

Candidate says...

Border remains problem

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — The economic growth that U.S. firms have brought to border areas in recent years hasn't necessarily been a boon to Mexicans, the man expected to be Mexico's next president says.

"We know that there has been an important economic dynamic here," Carlos Salinas de Gortari said Thursday in a campaign swing through this border city 10 miles south of McAllen.

"But this economic growth has not translated into well being in the daily lives of all the border's inhabitants," he said. "The growth of the maquiladoras has brought a notable increase in the population."

Lack of housing and inadequate transportation are the most glaring problems with the "maquiladora" industry, where primarily U.S. companies employ Mexican labor in plants just south of the border, Salinas de Gortari said.

Local residents, including hundreds of rank-and-file labor union members, greeted the 39-year-old Harvard-educated candidate Thursday for a rally orchestrated by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party at Reynosa's Plaza Miguel Hidalgo.

The party is known in Mexico as the PRI for its Spanish acronym.

A special box was set up at the plaza for people to make known their concerns by leaving notes to Salinas de Gortari on stationery supplied by the PRI.

"I don't have a house. That's what I'm going to tell him," said Maria Martinez, 51, as she prepared to put her note in the box marked "Write to Salinas de Gortari."

Ramiro Basaldua, 26, said he was going to write about the inadequate public transportation that forces him to leave an hour early for work to ride in crowded vans known as "peseros."

Salinas de Gortari campaigned in the border city of Matamoros Thursday night after leaving Reynosa. Earlier in the day, he made appearances in the border city of Nuevo Laredo.

The former budget secretary to President Miguel de la Madrid has campaigned extensively since his announcement Oct. 4 as the official candidate of the PRI, which has not lost a presidential or gubernatorial election since its founding in 1929.

Several bands also greeted the candidate, including the marching band from the local electrical workers union band, wearing khaki uniforms and yellow hard hats.

Supporters cheered when Salinas de Gortari promised to address the problems of housing and transportation.

From Texas to California, hundreds of maquiladora plants have sprung up along the Mexican side of the border since the Mexican government started the program about 20 years ago.

Amnesty International won't take case

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Amnesty International is not likely to come to the defense of alleged white supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr., who has pleaded innocent to the sedition charge against him, officials say.

Beam, 41, is jailed in Fort Smith awaiting trial. Indicted April 21 with 13 other white supremacists, Beam has gone on a hunger strike and seeks to be regarded as a political prisoner, said his attorney, Kirk Lyons of Houston.

Authorities arrested Beam in Guadalajara, Mexico, last Friday and brought him to Fort Smith on Monday. Sedition is a charge of plotting the overthrow the U.S. government by violence or other unlawful means.

Beam's wife, Sheila Marie Toohey Beam, 20, also was arrested last Friday. FBI agents said she opened fire on Mexican police and critically injured one officer. She is held in Mexico.

Jacqui Hunt, spokeswoman with Amnesty International in New York, said late Thursday in a telephone interview, "It appears it is doubtful we would adopt him as a prisoner of conscience."

She said that news accounts about Beam's desire to have the status of a political prisoner made it necessary for Amnesty International to clarify its policies and procedures about political prisoners and prisoners of conscience.

"Mr. Beam is in jail for allegedly conspiring to cause the violent overthrow of the U.S. government, including the assassination of the president and various government officials. Amnesty International has never adopted as a 'prisoner of conscience' any individual imprisoned on the basis of a crime involving the use or advocacy of violence," she said.

Beaum, who appeared without an attorney before U.S. Magistrate Ned Stewart Jr. Thursday in Fort Smith, pleaded innocent to the sedition charge. He asked the judge to appoint a local attorney to assist Lyons. Beam said Lyons is not licensed to practice in federal court.

Stewart reviewed Beam's assets and said it appeared he would be eligible for a court-appointed attorney to assist Lyons, who has said he is working free for Beam.

Stewart said documents said that Beam has $3,000 equity in a 1979 Ford Thunderbird, $4,500 equity in some home computer equipment, $38,000 equity in 10 acres of land in the Houston area and $20,000 equity in a house in the Houston suburb of Angleton.

However, Beam said he does not have title to the car, the computer equipment is in his house at Chalapa, Mexico, the Texas Veterans Land Board holds title to the land and the mobile home in Angleton is rented with his brother holding title.

A detention hearing that had been set for Beam on Thursday was postponed until Tuesday.

A federal marshal said Beam rejected a hamburger offered to him Thursday for his noon meal. Sebastian County jail authorities said Beam would not eat food they provided him as well. Beam told a judge Monday that he had not eaten since noon Friday before Mexican police arrested him and his wife.

A trial has been set for Feb. 16.

Beam has been described as a participant in the Aryan Nations white supremacist group, which also has had ties to The Order, an extremist group. Several members of The Order have been convicted of crimes such as murder and armed robberies.

Bill zeroes in on Nevada for nuclear waste location

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate version of a $16 billion energy and water development bill virtually singles out reluctant Nevada as the future burial ground for the nation's high-level nuclear wastes.

By a 63-30 vote Tuesday, the chamber approved a major overhaul in the five-year-old nuclear waste program. The measure not only would make Yucca Mountain, Nev., the probable site for a permanent repository, but it would scuttle plans under current law for an identical facility somewhere in the upper Midwest or East.

The Senate resumes debate on the bill today.

The new plan, adopted after bitter debate in the Senate and sure to face stiff resistance in the House, would reward the repository state with $100 million in annual federal payments. Likewise, it would pay the host state for a related, interim facility called an MRS — for monitored retrievable storage — $50 million annually.

In an unorthodox move that skirted the Senate Environment Committee, Sens. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and James McClure, R-Idaho, rewrote the 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act by attaching their plan to the energy and water appropriations bill.

Though the legislation does not specify Yucca Mountain as the preferred site for disposing of nuclear reactor fuel and other high-level wastes that will remain dangerous for 10,000 years, it clearly tilts toward that location, on the government's atomic test site.

Under current law, Yucca Mountain, as well as sites at the Hanford nuclear reservation in Washington state and Deaf Smith County, Texas, are candidates for exploratory work — including the drilling of deep shafts — costing nearly $6 billion.

Johnston's measure calls for that exploration to be done in sequential, rather than simultaneous, order, in hopes that the first site to undergo major testing will prove suitable for the repository — and that work at the other two can be canceled at a savings of $3.9 billion.

Technically, it would be left to the Energy Department to decide by Jan. 1, 1989, which site should be moved to the top of the list. But the legislation indirectly favors Yucca Mountain by revamping the priorities of certain criteria to be considered by the department.

The British tested their first atomic bomb off the coast of Australia in 1952.

Your Birthday

Nov. 15, 1987

Be alert in the year ahead so that you can distinguish between real opportunities and those that are merely wishful thinking. If your choices are wise, the results will be extremely gratifying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Involvements that have strong elements of risk should be avoided today, because your fear of losing might take precedence over your will to win. Major changes are ahead for Scorpios in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) As resistance to your aims stiffens today, there is a possibility that you'll slow down instead of pushing harder. Be tenacious and consistent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful today that you don't create unnecessary problems for yourself. Think before you act; and be your own wisest adviser, not your worst enemy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Assess your finances realistically today, and spend accordingly. This is not a time to be extravagant or to borrow from others.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep important objectives in focus today, or else you might drift off on tangents. Something that could have been opportune may go unachieved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will prove wise today to temper your grandiose conceptions with a healthy sprinkling of realism. For best results, maintain a sensible perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A proposal presented to you today by someone you don't know too well could have strings attached. Examine the package from every angle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The collective resources of you and your mate could be in for a pull-and-tug session today. Strive for mutual agreement on how funds should be allocated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) People performing work or a service for you today might not act in compliance with your wishes. Be on the spot to check what is being done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard not only against your own extravagances today, but also those of a friend. This person may try to involve you in something costly. Both conditions bear watching.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's best to do one thing today and to do it properly, than to attempt several things in which you can't give adequate attention to any of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're not apt to be too successful today in talking others into doing something for you which you should attend to yourself. Don't be a shirker.

Nov. 16, 1987

In the year ahead you are going to make an important change socially. You will become involved with several new friends who will be the type of pals for which you have always hoped.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you are disciplined and budget-minded today, you may fritter away your resources in a frivolous fashion. Waste not, want not. Major changes are ahead for Scorpios in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be sure that your objectives are meaningful today, or else you may waste a lot of time and energy chalking up achievements of little value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Flashes of inspiration you get today should be carefully reviewed before you spring into action. Under the microscope, they may not look as good as they sound.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A close friend is more apt to change some annoying habits if you set an example by altering some of the things you do that bug him or her.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let associates make career decisions for you today. Call the shots yourself. That way, if anything goes wrong, you'll have only yourself to blame.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have to perform complicated tasks with new people today, be both patient and watchful. Be sure to double check their work instead of taking it for granted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to steer clear of financial or physical involvements today that have strong elements of risk. You might be tempted to take chances you shouldn't.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Promises or commitments you make today for the sake of expediency could cause complications down the line. Don't agree to anything about which you're insincere.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A co-worker will try to even the score later if you blame him or her for your mistakes today. It's best to bite the bullet and 'fess up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're indifferent regarding your commercial interests today, there's a possibility you'll let a profitable opportunity slip through your fingers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to be successful today, you must be consistent and pace yourself properly. Instead of using up all of your energy initially, save some for the finale.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're rather good at keeping secrets, but this may not be the case today. Be careful to whom you talk about matters that are confidential.

New trial ordered for woman

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has ruled that a Henderson County woman convicted of killing her husband for insurance and retirement benefits cannot receive the death sentence.

The capital "murder for remuneration" charge can be used only in cases of murder-for-hire, the court said in a 6-3 ruling Thursday.

The decision sets "a very significant legal precedent," said Gilbert Hargrave of Athens, an attorney for Betty Lou Beets, who was convicted in the 1983 shooting death of Jimmy Don Beets.

The issue could have prevented the execution of Ronald Clark O'Bryan of Houston — the so-called Candy Man convicted of poisoning his son with cyanide-laced Halloween candy for insurance money — if it had been raised in that case, Hargrave said.

"If O'Bryan was still alive, I think you would see he would get a new trial, but it's too late for him," he said. O'Bryan was executed in 1984.

Judge Marvin Teague, who wrote the criminal appeals court decision, was the attorney in O'Bryan's trial and initial appeal. He did not return calls from The Associated Press.

Houston attorney Will Gray, who handled O'Bryan's case after Teague became a judge, said he does not think the argument that prevailed in the Beets case would have had the same effect in O'Bryan's case.

"With the facts of his case, I think the court would have rejected it summarily. It's not so bad when a woman kills her husband," Gray said.

Mrs. Beets faces a new trial on murder charges in the deaths of Beets and a previous husband, Doyle Wayne Barker, said Henderson County District Attorney Billy Bandy. But the appeals court barred a death penalty in those cases.

The remains of both men were found buried in the Beets' back yard at the Cherokee Shores mobile home subdivision near Payne Springs.

Bandy was angered by the Court of Criminal Appeals ruling.

"They're liberals. They're going to turn these people loose one way or another," he said.

A spokesman for the Harris County District Attorney's Office, which prosecuted O'Bryan, called the decision "a distorted interpretation of what the law is."

"I don't think the Legislature intended that. That's the most egregious kind of capital murder there is, when somebody actually insures somebody and then kills them," said Calvin Hartman.

Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union said the decision, and its possible relationship to the O'Bryan case, shows the unfairness of the death penalty.

"It underscores the argument that death penalty opponents consistently make, and that is the irreversibility of the punishment ... This is a dramatic demonstration of how the system fails.

"The responsibility for this doesn't rest on the attorney for failing to raise the issue, but upon society in general" for allowing the death penalty, he said.

Mauled girl returns home

HOUSTON (AP) — An 8-year-old girl who was mauled by a lion has returned home after a month-long hospital stay, but doctors say more surgery will be necessary.

Roxanne Marie Hernandez was greeted at home Thursday by family, friends and mariachi music.

She suffered a cracked skull, leaving part of her brain exposed after she was attacked by the 300-pound lion Oct. 10 at a Houston flea market.

Teachers might boycott meetings

DALLAS (AP) — A teachers group says administrators have done little to thwart vandalism occurring for years during night parent-teacher conferences and is urging members to boycott the meetings during the upcoming American Education Week.

Recently, tire slashings, verbal assaults and thefts have plagued the Dallas Independent School District conferences, said Gene Epperson, president of Classroom Teachers of Dallas.

In one case, a flaming object was thrown through a classroom window while a teacher was in the room, Epperson said.

Teacher organizations have urged DISD administrators to take action against the vandalism since 1982, when the district formed a study committee to look at the problem, officials said.

But representatives for teacher organizations said the administration's reaction has been unsatisfactory, and that teachers remain frightened.

"Until the Dallas Independent School District does something about it, there is going to be low attendance at night meetings," said Epperson, who met with about 200 teacher representatives Tuesday night to discuss the problem.

Teachers at the meeting said they wished to boycott future night meetings and agreed to begin the action next week, when many schools were to hold open houses to commemorate American Education Week.

Epperson said teachers from 23 schools throughout the city also have agreed to compose reports on crime that will be compiled and submitted to the Dallas school board.

The school district proposed placing custodians in parking lots to protect teachers and their vehicles, said assistant superintendent William Cotton.

But Epperson said the use of custodians could endanger teachers because custodians are not trained as security guards. He also said the security duties would take custodians away from their regular jobs.

Cotton said administrators still are seeking other ways to stem the vandalism.

Dallas Federation of Teachers President Maureen Peters criticized DISD's response to the problem as "blase."

"I mean, it's like (crime) is something you have to expect if you work in the district, and 'Don't bother us (school administrators) with it,' " said Ms. Peters.

She said she was not encouraging DFT members to boycott night meetings.
