Reagan blasts congressional 'meddling'

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan fired another round at Congress today for second-guessing him on foreign affairs, saying the lawmakers should not meddle once U.S. goals are set.

His blast at "activism" on Capitol Hill dominated a policy speech in which Reagan reaffirmed his determination to reduce nuclear weapons but offered no new initiatives to woo the Soviets back to the bargaining table.

He ruled out "simplistic solutions" to the weapons buildup and informed the Kremlin that deterrence would remain the cornerstone of his foreign policy.

In criticizing Congress, the president said "if we are to have a sustainable foreign policy, the Congress must support the practical details of policy, not just the general goals."

Couched in an appeal for bipartisanship, Reagan said "legislators must realize that they, too, are partners."

Behind the criticism, which has already led to a feud with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., is White House irritation with efforts by Congress to limit U.S. operations in the Middle East and Central America.

A senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on the speech, said that when American lives are at stake and after some public debate, Congress should restrict its objections to meetings with Reagan, letters to him and other private forums.

"Full and open debate is fine before the decision," said the official, who declined to be identified. "Full and private criticism is fine after that."

Reagan, in the remarks prepared for the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, said Congress has a responsibility "to go beyond mere criticism to consensus-building that will produce positive, practical and effective action."

The president said his administration had taken the nation into a new era of stength. "Gone are the days when the United States was perceived as a rudderless superpower, a helpless hostage to world events," he said. "American leadership is back."

Reagan called congressional activism the most far-reaching consequence of the 1970s. He said more than 100 separate prohibitions and restrictions on White House powers abroad were enacted.

At his news conference Wednesday night, Reagan said Congress "must take a responsibility" for the loss of American lives in Lebanon. At the center of his argument is a belief that congressional debate over stationing the Marines there was interpreted as a lack of U.S. resolve.

O'Neill, striking back on Thursday, told reporters: "He is responsible for the deaths of the Marines over there and nobody else."

The leader of the House Democrats said Reagan's policy failed as a result of "ineptitude on his part."

That policy, O'Neill said, was "the biggest blunder, the biggest mistake, the president has made in the White House."

He said of Reagan's criticism: "It's the qualms of a guilty conscience."

Last Dec. 27, Reagan took full responsibility for the security lapses that allowed for the terrorist bombing Oct. 23 of the Marine headquarters in Beirut and the loss of 241 American lives.

"If there is to be blame, it properly rests here in this office and with this president," Reagan said.

His remarks came after military investigators appointed by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger recommended that disciplinary action be considered against the commanders who, the investigators said, failed to provide adequate protection for the troops.

The president had an opportunity to respond to O'Neill later Thursday, as he visited a day care center in New York City.

Surrounded by children playing with dolls and finger paints, the president said "everything in here is making more sense than that." He declined to make any other comment.

Apart from his jabs at Congress, the president's speech today mixed a reaffirmation of U.S. commitment to arms control efforts with a determination to maintain American military might.

Soldiers revolt in Cameroon

PARIS (AP) — Soldiers guarding the presidential palace in Cameroon apparently revolted today in the West African coastal nation, informed sources said.

Information reaching Paris indicated the rebellion was under way this morning, said the sources, who requested anonymity.

The sources said the palace guards apparently were angered by a presidential order Thursday requiring the transfer of all guards in the northern part of Cameroon. It was not known why they were ordered to transfer, or where.

The sources in Paris said palace guards who remained loyal to President Paul Biya apparently had requested reinforcements to put down the mutiny.

There was no information on the whereabouts of Biya.

The rebel guards may have attacked the presidential palace and military headquarters, the sources said. They said the mutinous soldiers apparently were being led by a colonel who originates from the north.

The airport in Cameroon's capital of Yaounde was closed.

Cameroon Radio went of the air at mid-morning amid reports of sporadic and at times intense firing in Yaounde, said radio monitors in neighboring Libreville, Gabon. It began broadcasting military music, but did not report on any fighting.

Western diplomats in Yaounde said by telephone they heard gunfire for two hours in the city of 313,000 people before dawn but were unable to reach government ministers by telephone.

They reported there were military roadblocks at some points and a column of armored vehicles headed for the presidential palace and the home of the chief of staff of the armed forces.

Efforts to reach Yaounde by telephone from Paris were not successful, nor was it possible to call Douala, the country's commerical center.

The turmoil in Cameroon comes three days after a coup in Guinea, also in West Africa, which followed the death of longtime President Ahmed Sekou Toure. Army Col. Lansana Konte became Guinea's new president Thursday.

Despite the early morning gunfire, many people in Yaounde went to work and traffic flowed, reports reaching Paris said.

Former President Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon, who lives in exile in southern France after resigning suddenly in the fall of 1982, refused to say if he had anything to do with today's events.

He told Radio Monte Carlo that if his supporters were involved they would gain the upper hand.

Baby Jane Doe leaves hospital

STONY BROOK, N.Y. AP) — The deformed infant known as Baby Jane Doe has gone home from the hospital, where she been since birth while her parents fought a legal battle to refuse her surgery that might prolong her life.

The 6-month-old baby was discharged from University Hospital on Thursday afternoon, said Daphne Nelson, a nursing supervisor at the hospital. She refused to provide any details on the release of the infant, who has become the center of a court battle between her parents and the Reagan administration.

The child, whose first name is Keri-Lynn but whose last name has not been revealed, was born Oct. 11 with spina bifida, an incomplete closure of the spinal cord, excessive fluid on the brain and an abnormally small head.

Her parents, identified only as Dan and Linda, have chosen a conservative course of treatment for the baby, who doctors say may be paralyzed and may not live past her 20s.

One person killed in train collision

GOLDTHWAITE, Texas (AP) — Two freight trains collided head-on today, killing one person and igniting a freight car containing a liquid gas, the Department of Public Safety said. Two people were injured.

The accident occurred at 6:40 a.m. about seven miles south of this west-central Texas town, said department spokesman Larry Todd.

Officers at the scene reported one person dead and two others injured, Todd said.

A freight car containing "some kind of liquid gas" was burning, but had not ruptured, Todd said.

Shuttle crew to attempt first satellite repair

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Five astronauts rode Challenger today into orbit 290 miles above Earth, highest yet for a shuttle, and set off in pursuit of a crippled solar observatory for a daring first attempt to repair a satellite in space.

The flight, in which astronaut George Nelson will use a jet-powered backpack to fly 200 feet from the ship and snare the satellite, began with a rumbling liftoff right on schedule at 8:58 a.m. EST.

"You looked great going up the hill," Mission Control told the crew after the shuttle climbed through cloudless blue Florida skies and settled into orbit.

"The view from here is as spectacular as ever," replied commander Robert Crippen, the first astronaut to make three shuttle flights.

■Day's schedule outlined; Related story — Page 2A

Accompanying the crew were 3,300 honeybees and the shuttle's heaviest cargo so far — an 11-ton package of experiments, including 13 million tomato seeds, that will be dropped off in orbit and picked up next year.

The 100-ton space plane rose from its launch pad swiftly on 7 million pounds of engine thrust and darted eastward over the Atlantic Ocean.

Challenger's trail of fire and smoke was visible for several minutes to tens of thousands who watched from ocean and riverfront viewing areas.

Two minutes into the flight, the shuttle shed its two solid propellant booster rockets and they parachuted into the Atlantic, where ships were to recover them for use on a later mission.

As the astronauts soared into orbit, the target satellite was half a world away, 11,500 miles in front of the shuttle. Crippen will lead Challenger on a chase of 828,000 miles over two days until he moves to within 200 feet of his goal.

It was the 11th shuttle launch, the fifth for Challenger. The flight is to end next Thursday with the second landing back at Cape Canaveral.

Crippen is in charge of an all-rookie crew of pilot Dick Scobee and mission specialists Nelson, Terry Hart and James van Hoften.

The flight is the last directed by Air Force Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, NASA's shuttle chief.

Civilian joblessness steady during March

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate held steady at 7.8 percent in March, breaking a six-month string of declines, as the expanding economy created just enough work to take care of new job seekers, the government said today.

Economists had expected the past year's startling slide in unemployment to slacken later in the year as economic recovery slows, but most had predicted small decreases in the jobless rate for at least a few more months.

Still, no one is expecting any significant reversal in the downward trend.

Despite the unchanged overall rate, the report showed "signs of improvement" in the labor market and "continued strength in the economy," according to Janet Norwood, commissioner of the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The employment gains, though smaller than those of recent months, were quite widespread. This diffusion throughout the economy is, I believe, an additional sign of continued strength in the labor market," she said in testimony prepared for delivery to the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

The new report said that about 250,000 jobs were created in March while the civilian labor force increased by about 220,000. The resulting decline in total unemployment was too small to change the overall jobless rate.

Total civilian employment reached a record 104.1 million, while about 8.77 million people remained officially categorized as unemployed, the Labor Department said.

The combined civilian-military rate also remained unchanged, at 7.7 percent, last month. That rate takes into account the 1.69 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States in addition to the 112.9 million-member civilian labor force.

The Labor Department also reported that the number of "discouraged workers" — those without jobs but not counted as unemployed because they have given up looking — totaled 1.34 million last month, down from 1.46 million in December, when the quarterly calculation was last made. At its recession peak in late 1982, the number of discouraged workers had totaled 1.8 million.

"Women and blacks continued to be disproportionately represented among the discouraged — 64 percent and 30 percent respectively," the report said.

The overall unemployment rate last month remained at the lowest level since the 7.6 percent of September 1981, when the recession of 1981-82 was just taking hold.

Fully 10.7 percent of the civilian labor force was unemployed by December 1982, the highest rate in 42 years. But the rate since then has fallen much faster than government officials and most private economists had expected.

Since that peak, total employment has risen by 2.9 million for adult men and 2.2 million for adult women, while the number of jobs held by teenagers has remained unchanged, the report said.

Texas unemployment jumps to 6.5 percent

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate jumped to 6.5 percent in March, up .8 percent from the previous month, because the number of people entering the state's labor market outstripped the number of new jobs, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said today.

But the still-strong Texas economy was able to give jobs to more than 108,000 of those people, said Bryan Richey, regional commissioner for the bureau in Dallas.

"Most of the ones entering the job market found jobs. About 108,000 did, but a substantial number did not find jobs — about 77,000 did not," Richey said.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for February was to 5.7 percent, he said, but was 6.9 in January and 7.7 last December.

"A year ago at this time we were at 8.7 percent unemployment," Richey said.

The National Weather Service forecasts rain and snow for Saturday for northern New York and New England. Showers are forecast for the Southeast Plains. The northern half of the country will be colder.

Midland might get showers Saturday, weatherman says

From Staff and Wire Reports

Don't count on it, but the weatherman says rain may reign over dusty Midland on Saturday.

But he's only giving a one-in-five — 20 percent — chance for showers or thunderstorms to moisten the dry land.

More certain, however, is the weatherman's prediction for a cloudy and warm night and day. For tonight, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a low in the mid-50s and southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

For Saturday, he is predicting a high in the low 80s and southwesterly winds breezing along at 15 to 20 mph.

Thursday's high temperature was 76 degrees, which was somewhat below the record high of 92 degrees for an April 5 in 1959. The overnight low of 47 degrees was nowhere near the record low of 25 degrees for an April 6 in 1936.

STATE

A ridge of high pressure brought mostly fair skies to Texas today, but forecasters expected scattered showers and thunderstorms to dampen the weekend outlook.

Before dawn today, clouds were confined to southern sections of the state. Thin high clouds covered much of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, while low clouds hovered over the middle coast.

Some light fog was noted in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the middle 30s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the lower 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Readings across the rest of the state were in the 40s and 50s.

Southerly winds under 5 mph were the rule across the eastern half of the state, while southerly breezes at 10 to 15 mph were noted across the west.

The forecast called for fair skies to give way to increasing clouds tonight and Saturday. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to develop Saturday across West, East and North Texas, as well as northern sections of South Texas.

NATION

Torrential rains from Maryland to Maine caused flooding in northeastern New Jersey, western Pennsylvania and New York today.

Thousands of New Jersey residents were forced from their homes by rising rivers in five counties after 4 inches of rain fell by this morning. The storm system over the Northeast was expected to linger through the weekend.

New York City was swamped with 4.15 inches of rain Thursday, breaking the record for the date of 1.95 inches set in 1947.

Fair skies dominated the Midwest, the Plains, the Rockies and the Southern states.

Showers moved through the Pacific Northwest into the northern intermountain region.

Rain lingered across the northern half of the Atlantic Coast states, and scattered rain and snow flecked the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley.

Today's forecast called for rain spreading over the Pacific Northwest, the intermountain region and the northern Rockies, with snow in the higher elevations.

Today's highs were expected in the 70s in the desert Southwest, the southern Plains into the lower Mississippi Valley and over Florida and the central Gulf Coast region.

Readings in the upper 30s and 40s were expected across the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and northern Maine.

11th flight has two big missions

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The major goals of the 11th space shuttle mission are the deployment of an 11-ton payload carrying 57 experiments and a bold first attempt to retrieve and repair a satellite in orbit.

The payload is the Long Duration Exposure Facility, or LDEF, which is packed with 57 technology, science and materials experiments. Another shuttle crew is to recover and return LDEF to Earth next February. Purpose is to determine the effects of long-term space exposure on the experiments.

The satellite to be recovered is called Solar Maximum, which has been ailing for three years with a faulty control system and failed electronics box.

Commanding the five-man crew is Navy Capt. Robert L. Crippen, 46, making his third shuttle flight. The others are Francis R. (Dick) Scobee, 44, the pilot; and mission specialists Terry J. Hart, 37; George D. (Pinky) Nelson, 33; and James D. (Ox) van Hoften, 39.

Here are the day-by-day highlights:

DAY ONE

llenger rockets into an orbit 288 miles high at 17,400 mph. Crippen and Scobee execute first of several engine-firing maneuvers to track down the solar satellite. Hart remotely exercises the 50-foot mechanical arm located in the cargo bay.

DAY TWO

Hart, using the robot arm, lifts the LDEF payload out of the cargo bay and deposits it overboard into its own orbit. Nelson and van Hoften check the space-walking suits they are to wear for the Solar Max retrieval and repair. Crippen and Scobee execute a second rendezvous maneuver.

DAY THREE

Challenger catches up with Solar Max and "parks" about 300 feet away, flying in formation. Nelson and van Hoften, wearing space suits, exit from an airlock into the open cargo bay. Nelson dons a jet-powered backpack, flies untethered to the satellite, attaches himself to a knob with a grappling device and stabilizes the slowly rotating payload. The shuttle moves in close and Hart locks the end of the robot arm onto Solar Max, lowering it into the bay. Van Hoften installs a special work station that operates like a utility worker's "cherry picker" onto the arm and climbs aboard. Hart maneuvers him into position to remove and replace Solar Max's faulty control box. Nelson and van Hoften return to the cabin.

DAY FOUR

While engineers on Earth remotely monitor the health of Solar Max, Hart and van Hoften recharge their space-walking suits. Crippen and Scobee twice fire Challenger's jets to reach an altitude of 330 miles, highest yet for a shuttle. Purpose is to increase the lifetime of Solar Max when it is returned to space by reducing atmospheric drag.

DAY FIVE

Nelson and van Hoften take a second space walk, returning to the cargo bay to replace a Solar Max electronics box that controls a coronograph, a camera intended to photograph the outer layer of the sun. Van Hoften dons the jetpack and maneuvers around the 60-foot crgo bay in an engineering evaluation of the device.

DAY SIX

Engineers on Earth check Solar Max. If something is amiss, the satellite will be berthed in the cargo bay and returned to tex ground for repair. If everything is OK, Hart uses the robot arm to redeploy the payload into a separate orbit, to resume its long-interrupted study of the sun. Crippen and Scobee check the ship's flight control systems in preparation for landing.

DAY SEVEN

Challenger comes back to Earth, landing on a three-mile runway at Cape Canaveral's Kennedy Space Center, just four miles from the shuttle launch pad, after a flight of 143 hours 11 minutes.

Yeager believes shuttle makes space flight 'fun'

HOUSTON (AP) — Chuck Yeager, the first man to fly faster than the speed of sound, says he thinks the space shuttle "has returned the fun of flying" to the space program.

The man who broke the sound barrier in an experimental plane in 1947 said Thursday he would like to pilot the space shuttle, but said it would be "a waste of money" to let him do so.

"I wouldn't lend an awful lot to the program," the retired Air Force brigadier general said during an appearance before the National Congress on Aerospace Education, at which about 700 educators and industry executives are attending.

Yeager said he wouldn't care to be a passenger on the shuttle.

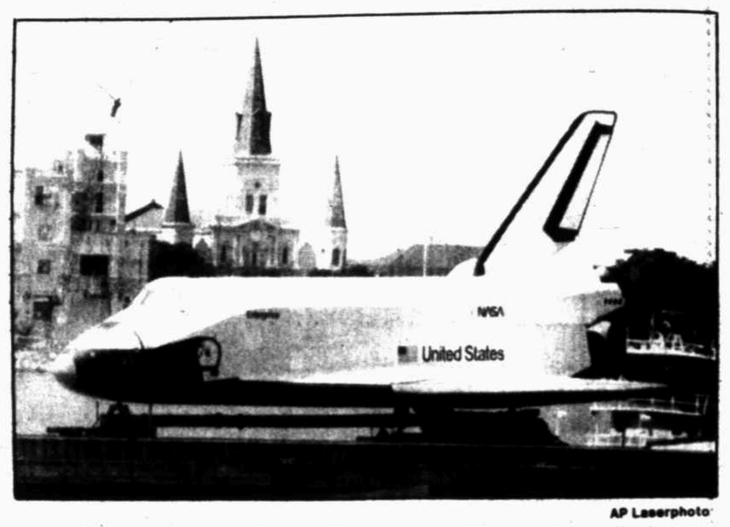

"If I can't fly one, I don't want to ride," he said.

Yeager and other test pilots were scornful of astronauts during the infancy of the manned space program because they felt the new job did not require much skill.

"It's not too hard to train a man to strap a capsule to his fanny and go into space," Yeager said in 1963.

Yeager said his only regret about being the first to break the sound barrier was that "I didn't patent it." Commercial airliners now conventionally fly at the speed Yeager and his fellow test pilots considered such a challenge — about 660 mph at 30,000 feet above sea level.

Yeager was portrayed as the paragon of jet test pilots in Tom Wolfe's book "The Right Stuff," which was made into a movie last year.

The Enterprise, a mockup of the space shuttle used in flight testing, looks a little out of place as it "flies" uo the Mississippi River by barge Thursday, passing the historic St. Louis Cathedral in New Orleans' French Quarter. The Enterprise will be on display at the world's fair this summer.

New 'smallest nation' may be formed

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia — The 170 adults of the Cocos Islands voted today on whether to become an independent nation. If they opt to break formal ties with Australia, the string of 27 coral atolls in the Indian Ocean would be the world's smallest country.

Officials from the United Nations and from Australia, which was given the islands by Britain in 1955, are supervising the vote.

The Cocos, which cover 5.5 square miles and have a total population of about 300, were for years ruled by the descendants of a Scottish sea captain under a grant from Queen Victoria.

John Clunies-Ross, a descendant of the sea captain, lost control of the islands in 1978 when Australia forced him to sell the land after growing complaints of slavery. He did so for about $6 million, keeping only his family estate.

Although they produce nothing but coconuts and fish, the Cocos Islands acquired importance as the superpower rivalry moved into the Indian Ocean in recent years. The islands, 1,670 miles west of Australia, are among the few staging areas in the region, and Australian and U.S. military planes regularly use its airstrip to refuel.

The voters have three options today: independence, free association with Australia under which Canberra would protect their external interests such as defense, or full integration with Australia.

Australian reporters accompanied government officials who are supervising the election, but foreign journalists were not allowed on the plane that carried the group.

The islands were settled in 1827 by Clunies-Ross' ancestor, Capt. John Clunies-Ross, who planted coconuts and imported indentured workers from Malaysia and Indonesia to work the plantations. The inhabitants of the islands are descendants of the indentured workers.

Britain later took possession of the islands and Queen Victoria ceded control to the Clunies-Ross family.

The latest Clunies-Ross totally controlled life on the islands, wearing a long dagger in his belt to symbolize his authority. Under him, the islanders worked in his plantations. They were paid with plastic tokens that could only be redeemed at his store. They say they made the equivalent of $2 a week.

Islanders said they were not allowed to speak to Australian government officials stationed on the islands, and anyone who left was never allowed to return.

With the imposition of Australian minimum wage, islanders are now paid many times more than in the past and they earn their wages in Australian currency.

Clunies-Ross, an Oxford University graduate, still owns most of the islands' businesses. He has campaigned for independence or free association. Integration with Australia would mean the loss of the tax-free status of nine corporations he has based on the island.

Clunies-Ross has argued that the islanders would prefer his rule. But island leaders have disputed his claims.

Island Council chairman Bin Yapat says the islanders want Australia to remove Clunies-Ross from the island.

"Supposing Mr. Clunies-Ross is one of our people, why does he live in a house which is very fine whereas our houses are not so good," he wrote to an Australian magazine recently. "If Mr. Clunies-Ross is one of our people, why did he not go looking for coconuts every day, why did he not husk coconuts as we did, which he made us do ...."

Love-hate reaction to bad news probed

By PATRICIA A. PAQUETTE
Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Like sex, drugs and overeating, bad news attracts because it sits in that shady area between what people think they should do and what "our brains tell us we shouldn't," says a researcher studying morbid curiosity.

But too much bad news sets off a "vicious upward spiral" in which people need "more and more negative stimuli to get the same amount of gratification," Jack Haskins, a journalism professor at the University of Tennessee, told a symposium that opened Thursday.

The group of scientists, psychologists and media experts are seeking to find out why bad news sells — a question that Haskins has been studying since the early 1970s.

Haskins said he did not know precisely why people are attracted to graphic depictions of gore, horror movies, violent rock videos, televised violence, reports of disasters and catastrophes and other negative messages.

However, he said, it can be explained in part by a "neurotic paradox" — the conflict between "what we think we should do and what we do. Like sex, drugs and overeating, we like to do it and at the same time our brains tell us we shouldn't."

Haskins, leading the symposium with a $10,000 grant from the Gannett Foundation, describes morbid curiosity as "an abnormally strong interest in and voluntary search for information about events normally considered unpleasant and harmful and which serves no pragmatic purpose."

That can include anything "unpleasant, gruesome, death-dealing, frightening, punishing, appalling, revolting, shocking and otherwise disturbing," he said.

North, South Korea may pair for Olympics

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea agreed today to meet with its bitter enemy, South Korea, to discuss forming a joint team for the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, the official Radio Pyongyang reported.

In a broadcast monitored here, the radio said North Korean Olympic Committee Chairman Kim Yoo Soon wrote his South Korean counterpart Chung Ju-yong, accepting the proposal to meet Monday at the truce village of Panmunjom.

The North Korean letter criticized South Korea for mentioning in its letter a terrorist bombing last Oct. 9 in Rangoon, Burma, that killed 17 South Koreans, including four cabinet members, in an apparent attempt on the life of President Chun Doo-hwan on a state visit.

"As for the 'Burmese incident' you referred to in the beginning of your letter, it has nothing to do with us, as is already known to the world," Kim's letter said.

"It is unbecoming indeed for a sportsman to take issue with us as if he were a spokesman of the authorities."

Chung's letter had urged that North Korea apologize for the attack. It has been blamed officially on a group of North Korean agents, two of whom were captured and subsequently sentenced to death by a Burmese court.

North Korea proposed March 30 that a single team be organized for international sports competition, including the Olympics.

South Korea agreed last Monday to try to form a single sports team and proposed that a meeting be held between four-member delegations headed by the deputy chairmen of the respective Olympic committees.

Panmunjom, in the demilitarized zone between South and North Korea, is where the Korean Military Armistice Commission holds its meetings to police the 1953 armistice agreement that ended the three-year Korean War.

The Korean peninsula was divided at the end of World War II, and the northern and southern halves fought in the bloody Korean War. All attempts at unification over the years have failed thus far.

Architect's death 'in character'

HOUSTON (AP) — Architect William Frank Wortham Jr., killed as he tried to help a security officer subdue a robbery suspect, was a sensible person who would characteristically aid anyone in need of help, his stepson says.

No arrests had been made in the shooting early today.

Wortham, 63, died late Wednesday of a gunshot wound in the chest, said homicide Detective R.L. Maxey.

The gunman ran to a nearby apartment, abducted three people and later escaped, Maxey said.

Officials said Harris County Deputy Constable Clyde Phillips, working as a contract security officer, tried to arrest a man he spotted sitting in Wortham's Cadillac.

As Wortham stepped outside, apparently intending to help the officer, the gunman seized the officer's .357-caliber pistol and fired a shot which struck the architect. The man fired another shot at Phillips but missed.

"If only he hadn't gone outside to help," said Wortham's stepson Robert Hinton. "He was anything but a belligerent person. But under those circumstances, it would have been an automatic and instantaneous reaction for him to go out to aid somebody in trouble."

After firing the second shot, the gunman ran to a nearby apartment and forced three family members to drive him to a location in southeast Houston, where he tried to rob them, Maxey said.

"He cocked the gun and put it to the head of one of them and threatened to kill them," Maxey said.

But one of the victims grabbed the pistol, which fired but did not hurt anyone, Maxey said. The gunman jumped out of the car and ran away, he said.

Authorities said they believe the gunman had an accomplice and were investigating reports that another man was seen speeding away from the neighborhood at the time of the shooting.

Wortham, a native of the Rio Grande Valley, graduated from the University of Texas.

Defense to claim Lucas mentally ill when he confessed to murder

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Defense attorneys say they will introduce medical evidence today to show that Henry Lee Lucas was mentally ill last year when he confessed to a murder they say he could not have committed.

The defense called four witnesses Thursday to testify that Lucas was at work for a roofing and sheet metal company in Florida, more than a thousand miles away, when an unidentified woman was killed and her nude body dumped into a culvert near Georgetown.

Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh rested the state's case Thursday against Lucas, a 47-year-old handyman and drifter who is charged with capital murder in the Oct. 31, 1979, slaying of the woman. The trial was moved to San Angelo because of extensive pre-trial publicity in Georgetown.

"Experts will say that Henry Lee Lucas had a long-standing mental disorder and defect that was operative in October of 1979," defense attorney Parker McCullough said Thursday.

Lucas served time in a Michigan prison and in a mental hospital for the 1960 murder of his mother. Lucas has also told authorities he has killed about 150 people in 17 states from 1972 to 1982. He has already been convicted of two Texas murders.

"Tests will indicate that this condition was such as to cause Henry Lee Lucas to give false confessions to (Williamson County) Sheriff (Jim) Boutwell."

Lucas said many of his victims were women that he had sex with after killing, including a woman hitchhiker he picked up near Oklahoma City and strangled, leaving her body near Interstate 35 in Williamson County.

After the state rested its case Thursday, the defense called forth Eileen Knight, a secretary-bookkeeper, who had daily and weekly time sheets showing that Lucas was working at Southeast Color Coat in Jacksonville, Fla., for most of 1979, including October and November, when prosecutors say Lucas was in Oklahoma and Texas.

Later, supervisors Mack Caulder and Fred Ellis testified they kept records that indicated Lucas was on the job from Oct. 25 through Nov. 1, 1979.

Monir Yazgi, owner of Buy Rite Supermarkets in Jacksonville, testified that Lucas regularly cashed paychecks at one of his stores and that he recognized Lucas as a regular customer. He identified a Lucas paycheck, issued Nov. 1, 1979, as one he cashed either Nov. 1 or Nov. 2.

Outside the presence of the jury, Caulder admitted that he had been convicted on charges of attemped burglary and forgery in California during the mid-1960s and of federal and state forgery charges in Alabama in the late 1960s. Ellis, first denied, then admitted convictions for issuing worthless checks in 1975 and 1979.

But Caulder denied prosecution suggestions that he had accepted kickbacks to give employees credit for days worked when they had not been there.

"I am saying under oath or anything else, that is a lie," Caulder said.

Blacks file suit seeking single-member districts

AUSTIN (AP) — Black leaders have filed a lawsuit seeking elections by district because they claim Austin's at-large city council elections diminish the power of black voters.

The lawsuit was filed Thursday. It also contends the city has not been responsive to the needs of blacks.

John Hall, NAACP president, said election by districts would cut campaign costs and allow blacks to run without seeking money "from people who have very little interest in the welfare of our community."

Quarreling way of life for small town

PATTON VILLAGE (AP) — Political quarrels aren't new to Patton Village, but at least one argument became so heated that the U.S. Department of Justice intervened.

The small Southeast Texas town's five-member board of alderman left the judge's position off the ballot in 1982, deciding instead that they would appoint one.

But the Justice Department declared their action a violation of the Voting Rights Act. And so, the city will hold an election for the position Saturday.

One candidate for the judge's bench is former Police Chief Carlton "Bud" Watson, 24, who was fired from Splendora Police Department after he was convicted of oppressing a prisoner. Watson pleaded guilty and also admitted he had sex while on duty with a woman who was riding in a car he stopped for a traffic violation.

Also running for judge is retired bus driver and former City Magistrate Floyd Duval, who left the job last summer.

Before he resigned, Duval told aldermen he would not prosecute traffic violators on the heavily-traveled U.S. Highway 59 until the city proved it had legally annexed the property abutting the highway. A case is pending in state district court that will decide the city's jurisdiction in the area, where traffic fines make up 90 percent of city revenues.

Virginia DeHarden, a former city secretary, also wants the job. Ms. DeHarden claims the city owes her $6,000 in wages from 1981, when she was locked out of her office and fired. She has already received $3,000 of the money owed her.

Dorothy Johnson, a nurse who was city judge until the Justice Department ruling, is running in hopes of regaining her former job.

Also at issue is the mayor's position.

Wilson Holder was elected mayor in April 1983, but the board ousted him claiming he ignored the policies they set.

Holder says he was removed illegally and is suing the board to get his job back. He is also suing Alderwoman Elaine Norton and her daughter, assistant court clerk Valerie Davis, on grounds of nepotism.

A hearing on both Holder's claims is scheduled for state district court this month.

Meanwhile, Holder, who is waiting for the court to rule on his job status, sits with board members at their meetings, interrupting and repeating the words of Mayor Pro Tem Mary Allen.

Feuds among city leaders are so abundant in Patton Village that national, state and county authorities are used to getting complaints.

Allegations that city officials have engaged in misconduct, malfeasance and criminal activity have been made to the FBI, the U.S. Department of Justice, U.S Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the state attorney general's office, among other agencies.

Lawyer wants trial delayed

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The attorney for nurse Genene Jones has asked for a delay in her trial on charges of administering a life-threatening injection to a young boy at a San Antonio hospital.

State District Judge Pat Priest today planned to consider Royal K. Griffin's motion for a continuance, along with a request to move the upcoming trial out of San Antonio because of prejudicial publicity.

Ms. Jones, 33, has been convicted of murdering an infant girl in nearby Kerr County with drug injections.

She is accused in Bexar County of injecting a month-old boy with an overdose of a blood-thinning drug in January 1982.

Homeowner in dog house over alligators in back yard

Hearst Feature Service

YORBA LINDA, Calif. — Will no one come to these gators' aid?

Three midsize alligators are enjoying the Southern California good life, thanks to the good graces of a young homeowner here who allows them the run of his spacious back yard.

But now the gators, who seemed to enjoy lounging in owner Kraig Kavanaugh's back yard Jacuzzi, taking slow strolls down a neighborhood bridle path, and sunning beside a small pond reserved exclusively for their use, are in the doghouse.

After receiving complaints from some of Kavanaugh's neighbors, the city is trying to expel the reptiles, which Deputy City Attorney Craig Labadie says are a public nuisance.

Allegations against the alligators include violation of a city zoning law that forbids the presence of wild beasts in suburban back yards.

The city began to put the bite on the nearly albino gators in February, when Kavanaugh was given a 15-day notice to send his pets packing. When he failed to comply by March 1, he was given a 15-day extension.

With the gators still lounging in Kavanaugh's back yard this week, the city got tough. According to Labadie, the city of Yorba Linda filed a lawsuit against Kavanaugh for having "failed and refused to remove the alligators from his property."

Neighbor Charles Feeney says Kavanaugh, who could not be reached for comment, owns a limousine service and was preparing a traveling Plexiglas tank that could be fit into the back of a stretch limo that would allow him to chauffeur his pets in style.

A teen-age neighbor who asked not to be identified said her father notified the city of the whereabouts of the gators, which measure 5- to 6-feet long.

She said, however, that the charges against the gators are a big crock.

"I don't see anything wrong with having them here, but Dad says it isn't safe," the girl said. Because of their light coloring and their lack of motion while sunning, the girl said "they don't even look real."

Feeney says the alligators never bothered him and that Kavanaugh seemed to take good care of the animals, which are alien to Southern California.

According to the lawsuit, "the maintenance of alligators at the property is harmful to the neighbors ...and the community as a whole, and injurious to the public health and offensive to the public senses, yet serves no redeeming social purposes."

INS: Record number of aliens being caught

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Border Patrol is catching a record number of undocumented aliens trying to sneak into the United States from Mexico, with an increasing percentage of non-Mexicans among them, reported the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

For the first five months of fiscal 1984, which began Oct. 1, the Border Patrol apprehended 366,696 persons, an increase of 12 percent over the same period a year ago, INS Commissioner Alan C. Nelson told reporters.

"If this rate continues," he said, "we'll break the record for southern border apprehensions set last year" when 1,034,000 were caught attempting illegal entry.

Nelson said that while the number of non-Mexicans has been increasing, "I can't tell yet whether it's a significant trend."

The only data Nelson had showed a jump of 60 percent in non-Mexicans caught in the Chula Vista, Calif., Border Patrol sector. Most of them were Salvadorans, he said. Mexicans, however, continue to comprise the bulk of undocumented aliens trying to cross the border, Nelson added.

Most of the Salvadorans who are caught have asked for political asylum, claiming they would be persecuted if forced to return to war-torn El Salvador. But only a few have been granted asylum, the INS said, because most have been unable to prove that their motive in coming to the United States was other than to improve their economic situations.

Nelson said the 50 percent increase in Border Patrol personnel proposed in the Reagan administration's budget for fiscal 1985 would make the border more difficult to cross. He said, however, that only congressional passage of the comprehensive Simpson-Mazzoli immigration control bill would provide an effective deterrent.

Nelson criticized the alternate immigration bill introduced last month by Hispanic members of Congress because it omits the employer sanctions provision.

Some residents of Michigan want to secede

ROCK, Mich. (AP) — In what could be described as a down-home campaign, some residents of northern Michigan are trying to secede from the state with a petition drive financed by bake sales.

"It's not going to be like it is now," said Jenny Vallier of Rock, president of the Interim New State Authority. "I used to be part of Michigan, but not any more."

The group, formed in 1979, hopes to collect enough petition signatures to force a vote this year on whether the Upper Peninsula and 21 counties in the northern Lower Peninsula should form a new state, tentatively named Superior, Mrs. Vallier said.

Authority members and supporters charge that Michigan's tax and regulatory policies are crippling their region.

The state of Superior would collect no income, sales, inheritance or single business taxes and would require a popular vote on imposition of any tax, she said.

The authority also would consider building a "floating capital" that could be towed to various locations "to bring government to the people, rather than people to the government," she said.

The group has 10,000 signatures and needs 26,000 more, Mrs. Vallier said, adding that printing and mailing of petitions has been financed by bake sales. A similar drive in 1979 fell 10,000 signatures short, she said.

TO ALL VOTERS AND TAXPAYERS OF MIDLAND

A STATEMENT FROM SOMEONE WHO'S BEEN THERE

During the late fifties and early sixties I served on the Planning and Zoning Commission For The City of Midland. Those were "boom" times.

Then in 1963 I began four years of service to the City as a Councilman. By the end of that service, times had turned tough.

In 1968 I was elected to the first of two terms as your mayor. Times were still hard. We didn't have revenue sharing, and the City collected its first sales tax rebate after my last term expired. Everything had to be financed through services income and ad-valorem taxation.

Many of you remember how it was. Times were tough, there was not enough money to cover every project and pay for all the services Midland was expected to render to its citizens.

MAYOR THANE AKINS HAS BEEN THERE TOO. Through times of "boom" and the hard times that have followed.

I think THANE and the Council have done an excellent job of husbanding and managing the City's resources without unduly adding to the tax burden.

Scientists study black bears' physiology to aid humankind

MADISONVILLE, Pa. (AP) — "Ursanus Americanus" — better known as the North American black bear and considered Pennsylvania's top trophy game animal — has mystified man for centuries.

Without a doubt, the black bear is one of the wiliest and most adaptable creatures in nature's kingdom. Legends, in fact, have grown out of this noble creature.

But "Ol' Moccasin Joe," as many veteran hunters dub him, has been the subject of intensive study and research over the past several years.

And while the research had previously been aimed at helping the bears themselves, the overall picture has been changing. Now the interest in the black bear is centering on how some of its physiological feats can be used to help humankind.

Gary L. Alt, a Pennsylvania Game Commission biologist, has been researching the state's bear population since 1974. Perhaps better known as "the bear man from Madisonville," Alt, along with his studies on the black bear, has become nationally recognized.

And one day recently, his home literally became a research base for scientists and various other experts from a number of institutions when word spread that a female bear he'd trapped and had in a denning chamber in a barn on his property had given birth to three cubs.

They were tiny fluffs of fuzz, just one day old, when the various researchers arrived, seeking the rare chance to carry out their tests on cubs that young.

Included among those who hurried to Alt's rural home were Dr. Ralph Nelson, professor of medicine at the University of Illinois Carle Foundation Hospital, Urbana, Ill.; Dr. Robert Wolf, of the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston, Texas; Dr. Daniel DeLama, of the Patagonia Game Research Institute in Argentina; Kathy Golos, from the University of Illinois, working on her master's degree in the Division of Nutritional Sciences, and teams from the Smithsonian Institution and the National Zoo, both in Washington, D.C.

Inside Alt's home, they cradled the cubs in the palms of their hands as they weighed, measured, probed and took blood and other tests.

The almost hairless baby bruins, their eyes still shut, squalled and bawled their protests as the researchers methodically carried out tests aimed at various avenues of their respective research.

Alt estimated that some 25 expert researchers took part in the organized confusion as they used syringes, infra-red cameras, isotope material and other sophisticated technological equipment.

Why all this attention? The answers depend on whom you ask.

Nelson, for instance, has been studying bears for many years in connection with how they physiologically handle their hibernation. Holed up for the long winter sleep (though not true hibernators), bruins do not urinate or defecate. Nelson believes there could possibly be some link which could aid human renal patients.

Union officials convicted of accepting bribes

HOUSTON (AP) — Two union officials have been convicted of accepting bribes to influence the awarding of an insurance contract, ending a trial which dragged on for nearly half a year.

Sherman Fricks, the former secretary-treasurer of the Texas AFL-CIO and formerly the business manager of Pipefitters Local 211, and Harold Grubbs, former chairman of the local's apprenticeship and training committee, were convicted Thursday of conspiring to accept and of accepting $16,912 in bribes.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods said the case was "so open and shut I can't believe we've spent five months and two days here."

The trial began Nov. 1 but recessed four times because of jurors' trips and illnesses.

The six-man, six-woman jury deliberated about seven hours over two days.

Fricks and Grubbs each face up to eight years in prison and a $20,000 fine. U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald set sentencing for May 21.

The trial centered on more than 30 conversations taped by Joseph Hauser, a government informant and twice-convicted swindler who posed as a Prudential Insurance Co. agent during the FBI's investigation of bribery and labor. The operation was code-named "Brilab."

Hauser allegedly paid Fricks and Grubbs to ensure that Prudential would win a lucrative insurance contract.

But defense attorney Fred Bennett called Hauser the "messiah of insurance con men" and argued the recordings failed to prove a crime had been committed.

"What Mr. Grubbs says to Mr. Hauser is not a crime. It's just talk," he said.

Grubbs testified that Hauser paid him $12,000 in insurance "commissions." He said he was told he could legally accept the money since he was a licensed insurance agent.

He said federal laws that prohibit taking money to influence union financial matters did not apply because he was not an elected union official.

Officers seize car belonging to suspect in murder spree

BEAUMONT (AP) — Law officers seized an abandoned car found in a Beaumont parking lot which belongs to a man suspected in a possible interstate spree of abductions and murders, authorities said.

FBI technicians were searching the 1973 Chrysler New Yorker Thursday for fingerprints, receipts, hair, blood traces and other clues which might lead them to Christopher Bernard Wilder, Beaumont police officer Jim Carpenter said.

The 39-year-old Florida resident was placed on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list Thursday. The FBI calls him the "prime fugitive" in the abduction and slaying of nursing student Terry Walden, 24, whose body was found March 26 in a canal west of Beaumont.

He has been charged with kidnapping in the March 20 abduction of a 19-year-old Florida State University student who escaped to tell police she was tortured and raped. In addition to that crime and Mrs. Walden's slaying, FBI officials have said they want to question Wilder in five other abductions in Florida, Colorado and Las Vegas.

Mrs. Walden had gone to a Beaumont shopping mall March 23 to pay bills, said her father-in-law, John Walden.

He said his son, John, called police immediately when administrators of a day-care center contacted him to say Mrs. Walden had failed to pick up their 4-year-old daughter, Mindy.

"It was not like Terry" to leave without notice, Walden said. A nationwide search is now underway for Mrs. Walden's car, an orange 1981 Mercury Cougar XR7 with Texas license plates.

Assistant FBI Director Oliver "Buck" Revell said if Wilder is involved in all the abductions in which officials suspect him, "it would be a classic case of sexual, serial murders.

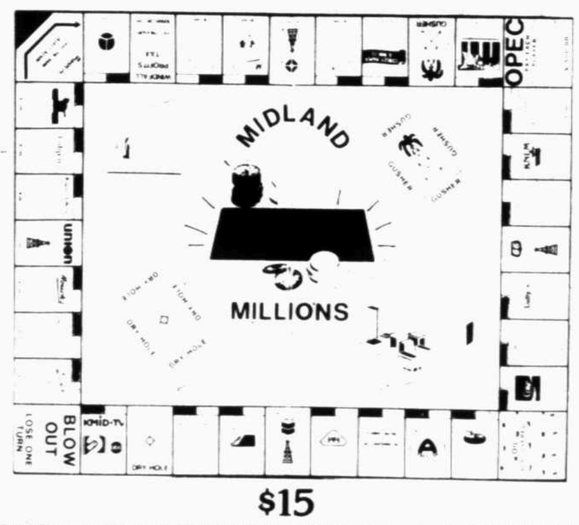

"He's making contacts on an almost daily basis, and this is potentially a very prolific situation," said Revell.

Convicted murderer escapes from TDC unit

ANGLETON (AP) — A convicted murderer escaped today from the Darrington Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections, triggering a manhunt in the immediate area around the prison complex, authorities said.

Brian Mimier, who was serving a 20-year sentence on a murder conviction from Rusk County, climbed a fence about 2 a.m. and dodged five shots fired by a guard, according to Brazoria County sheriff's dispatcher Becky McCall.

Mimier, 25, is a martial arts expert, Ms. McCall said.

Prison officers were joined in the search by sheriff's deputies and Department of Public Safety troopers, the dispatcher said.

Angleton is located about 45 miles south of Houston.

Guidelines developed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Thursday declared April to be child abuse prevention month in Texas and said 11 state agencies have agreed to new guidelines for reporting and investigating abuse in state institutions.

"The people of Texas have a right to expect that children entrusted to the care and supervision of the state will be adequately protected," White said.

He said the new agreement should result in prompt reporting of abuse cases to authorities. It also will lead to methods by which independent investigations can be made of such cases.

"These guidelines will assure timely reporting of all alleged child abuse to outside authorities and will set basic standards for conducting interal investigations. They also provide a uniform framework for agency staff training in how to recognize child abuse allegations," he said.

Judge protects courthouse

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin judge has extended an order barring Randall County commissioners from knocking down their old courthouse or taking furniture out of it.

State District Judge Joe Hart, in an order announced Thursday, told the commissioners they can't do anything to the 1909 courthouse until the trial of a lawsuit filed by the Texas Historical Commission.

No trial date has been set.

Randall County commissioners had wanted to take furniture and fixtures out of the old courthouse and put them in a new building. However, state law requires counties to give the Texas Historical Commission six months notice of any plans to demolish or damage courthouses.

Candidates focus on Reagan's policies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Democratic presidential rivals pick up their nomination struggle today after a debate in which they largely ignored each other and instead directed their criticisms at President Reagan on arms control, human rights and ethics in government.

"This president frightens me to death" when it comes to nuclear weapons, Sen. Gary Hart declared Thursday night in one of the sharpest jabs either he, Walter Mondale or the Rev. Jesse Jackson threw at Reagan in a debate five days before the Pennsylvania primary.

Mondale, who has said a "sleaze factor" taints the administration, declared, "Every day another rotten apple falls from the tree in Washington and the president is looking somewhere else."

He said Reagan's standard for government service apparently is, "You can stay in government, you can be attorney general, if you haven't been indicted and convicted of something."

Chimed in Jackson, "He is taking from the poor and giving to the rich" with his economic policy. Jackson said the United States should pursue a "peace policy" and not a "war policy."

And it was Jackson who talked first about human rights, declaring that change in the Philippines is inevitable and the United States "ought to be on the right side of history" by being tougher with President Ferdinand Marcos.

Even though Pennsylvania has 172 delegates at stake in next week's primary, all three men arranged appearances today in Wisconsin. Voters in that state hold caucuses on Saturday to begin selecting 78 convention delegates.

Hart won a narrow victory in a non-binding presidential primary there on Tuesday, but Republicans were permitted to vote. Only Democrats will be allowed to attend caucuses.

The debate produced occasional barbs among the Democrats, such as when Mondale referred to Hart's Senate vote against a federal bailout for the Chrysler Corp., and Hart declared that the administration of Jimmy Carter "was not as efficient as it ought to be." Mondale served as Carter's vice president.

But that was tame compared to recent debates in which Mondale and Hart have gone after one another in sharp, sometimes bitter terms, and Jackson has sought to act as referee.

Mondale said afterward he was "not changing my approach to this campaign." But he was much less aggressive than he has been in recent debates and sounded more like he did when he was the clear front-runner earlier in the year.

Hart had decided before the debate to try to avoid a running battle with Mondale. Hart's aides believe that Mondale's performance in two tough debates last week helped him to his big win in the New York primary.

Jackson declared both men decided they were "losing ground talking about (television) commercials."

"There's a measure of maturity setting in," he said.

Even the format of the debate contributed to the outcome.

The candidates each sat behind a podium, unlike round-table settings used in the past two debates, and moderator Elizabeth Drew kept strict control of each candidate's time.

Hart tried to set the tone near the beginning, when he declared that all three Democratic rivals hold similar beliefs.

"I think Fritz Mondale and Jesse Jackson and I are all equally committed" to goals such as arms control and civil rights, he declared.

"It has been suggested that there are degrees of commitment ... and I don't see that difference."

Vote Saturday

Saturday may bring a beautiful spring day to Midland and the surrounding area, but nothing — not weeding the garden, mowing the lawn or washing the car — should take priority over going to the polls. That's because voters will be electing a number of local leaders in elections.

Nearly every one of us is guilty from time to time of complaining loudly about our elected officials and then not taking a few minutes to go to the polls and vote for the candidates of our choice. That really isn't fair; it's hypocritical.

Each of us has a duty as a resident of this community — and this state and nation — to fulfill that cherished right and privilege to vote. When we do not take part in elections, we undermine the most cherished system of government ever devised — a nation of people governing themselves. When we have the opportunity to vote but fail to do so, we are actively condoning government by the few. Do we really want that?

During the next couple of years challenges will arise that the representatives to be elected Saturday will need to address. Those challenges undoubtedly will affect every Midlander in some manner — either in the form of higher taxes, increased medical costs, larger tuition bills at the junior college or one of the many educational concerns now being discussed. Voters may not have the opportunity to cast their ballots on those individual issues, but they can elect the candidates whose political philosophies most closely resemble their own. That is how our system works. We elect men and women to serve as our representatives who will best serve our interests.

Saturday Midlanders will elect a mayor, two city councilmen, two Midland Independent School District board members, three Midland Junior College District board trustees and two directors of the Midland County Hospital District.

Voters have had the opportunity to make themselves aware of the individual candidates and the issues in the various elections.

Now we all should fulfill our responsibility to this community by voting Saturday for the candidates of our choice.

Another View:

Stop chemical war

United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, on his own, sent scientific experts to Iran. They brought back and have now made public the first politically and evidentially unchallengeable account of Iraq's use of poison gas. The experts, limiting their report to what was before their eyes in the battlefields, hospitals and mortuaries of Iran, did not state that Iraq is doing the gassing. But that is the only possible conclusion.

This is not the first time the U.N. secretariat has filled some part of the vacuum left by the inability of member nations to take hold of the Iran-Iraq war. The secretariat first drew the conflict to the Security Council's formal attention; it has sent mediators there repeatedly, and it has put a spotlight on such collateral effects as damages done to civilians. Now it has put the spotlight on poison gas.

Unfortunately, the political side of the U.N. has consistently dillydallied. On Friday, for instance, the Security Council reacted to the secretariat's report with the timid device of a consensus statement made in the name of the members by the council's current president; none of the members had to stand up in public for it. The statement did condemn the use of gas. But it shied away from identifying Iraq as the guilty party. This was, as one observer put it, "a very U.N.-y exercise."

The United States, which was a part of that council maneuver, earlier had moved on its own to "strongly condemn" the Iraqi practice. To its credit, it did so even though it has been tilting toward Iraq in the Gulf war (so far without much evident effect). But this is not all that the Reagan administration has done. It is now making intelligence information available on Iraq's preparations to go beyond its apparently limited use so far of nerve gas and to mass-produce this terrible substance.

Some of the new information indicates that in making the gas Iraq has used equipment sold, innocently, by a firm in West Germany and that it has sought in the United States chemicals that could be used for that purpose. These reports suggest the remedy: all such exports should be halted.

Condemnations of one sort or another, publicity and export bans may seem like slight obstacles to put in the way of Iraq's conduct of this outlawed form of warfare. In many minds, too, there is a certain tacit reluctance to bear down on Iraq, which is now fighting to clear its territory of a foreign force, when Iran, earlier the victim but currently the invader, has done something no less revolting by forcing child soldiers to take part in suicide attacks.

But there can be no temporizing on chemical warfare. It is a horrible thing. Nations must do what they can to induce Iraq to stop it. The most urgent need is to redouble efforts to stop the war.

Ford can't help arm bodyguards

WASHINGTON — It has been seven years since Gerald Ford moved out of the White House and disappeared into the corporate woodwork. The long absence from Washington has so eroded his influence that he can't even arrange a small favor for his son-in-law.

Jack Anderson

The son-in-law is Charles F. Vance, a former Secret Service agent, who used to guard the first family. He met Susan Ford, later married her, and they now live in the Washington area. He operates a protective service, MVM International Security Inc.

Vance has trained some crack bodyguards, but they need guns to protect their clients. This violates a District of Columbia police regulation, which forbids the issuance of firearms licenses to private bodyguards.

As the political hub of the nation, Washington attracts more crackpots and terrorists with murder on their minds than any other American city. Yet it is the only jurisdiction in the country that won't let bodyguards carry guns. City officials feel that lifting the ban would undermine Washington's tough gun-control law.

Their uncompromising attitude has been bad for Vance's business. Last November, for example, the State Department contracted with Vance to protect visiting Queen Aishwarya from Nepal. But Vance was told that the bodyguards — and possibly the queen herself — would be subject to arrest if her entourage were armed. Result: The contract was cancelled.

As "a last resort," Vance told my associate Tony Capaccio, he asked his father-in-law for help. The former president agreed that the Nepalese episode was "ridiculous." So last January, he wrote to an old political sidekick, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

Ford hasn't forgotten the art of political persuasion; he chose his intermediary shrewdly. Specter is chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that decides how much federal money the D.C. government will get.

Ford's "Dear Arlen" letter asked the senator to "help me resolve an unjustified problem." He reminded Specter of the trouble encountered by the Reagan Inaugural Committee's security force when it sought protection for entertainers during the festivities.

Not only did the Washington police refuse to provide bodyguards for the celebrities, Ford recalled, but they wouldn't let the Inaugural Committee hire off-duty D.C. cops for the job. Indeed, the committee was told that any off-duty officers from other jurisdictions would be arrested if they showed up in the city with guns.

Responding to Ford's letter, Specter had the staff director of the Appropriations subcommittee call D.C. officials and ask for "clarification" of the policy against armed bodyguards. The officials were unimpressed and unmoved.

Footnote: Where political clout has failed, economic self-interest may eventually succeed. Security expert John Nolan recently wrote to the editor of Successful Meetings magazine to offer "a word of caution to your readers who plan meetings in the District, which involve corporate dignitaries or high-profile speakers." Nolan warned that the city's anti-bodyguard policy makes Washington "an unattractive site."

VEGAS STING UPDATE: I reported recently on the FBI's attempt to trap an honest Internal Revenue Service official in a bribery setup because he had refused to shave $3.5 million off the tax debt of an FBI witness.

The official, Gerald Swanson, was asked by the FBI in Las Vegas to reduce the $16 million tax debt of Joe Conforte, owner of the Mustang Ranch bordello, in return for Conforte's testimony against a federal judge charged with bribery.

After an IRS investigator flew to Brazil and interviewed Conforte, Swanson decided the proffered testimony wasn't worth the $3.5 million Conforte demanded, and told the FBI so.

The head of the FBI's Las Vegas office, Joseph Yablonsky, then tried to hook Swanson on a bribery charge, using intermediaries. Swanson declined the bait. But on dubious charges of misconduct, he was reprimanded, demoted and transferred. So much for honesty.

The Justice Department later investigated Yablonsky's vain attempt to nail Swanson, but sources say that Attorney General William French Smith was reluctant to discipline the FBI man.

At a cocktail party in Nevada last August, the state's attorney general, Brian McKay, mentioned the matter to Smith. McKay wanted to know what Smith planned to do about the wayward G-man.

Not surprisingly, Yablonsky was let off with no more than an official reprimand for his botched attempt to entrap an honest government official.

EVANS & NOVAK

Issue isn't Meese but court

WASHINGTON — Whether or not Edwin Meese III ultimately concludes his ordeal by winning Senate confirmation as attorney general, his once open path to the Supreme Court now seems barred — confirming a grim forecast made privately to President Reagan's counselor more than two months ago.

Rowland Evans

Shortly after the nomination was announced Jan. 23, a trusted colleague advised Meese that he would be battered bloody by the confirmation process. Although Meese would be the victim, he continued, really at stake would be Reagan shaping the high court for the next two decades.

Robert Novak

That points up one of the 1984 presidential campaign's underlying issues. With only two justices named during the past 12 years, actuarial probability suggests wholesale vacancies the next presidential term. More than any other issue, the prospect of Reagan packing the Supreme Court with justices in his own image, who would practice judicial Reaganism long after his departure, energizes liberal Democrats this year.

It also is a subject of private conjecture inside the White House, as was made clear when Meese was nominated. In rejecting pleas from conservatives that he be replaced as counselor by brewer-conservative activist Joe Coors, the president's pragmatist aides argued that Meese had no great interest in economics and foreign policy; what really concerned him were social issues that the administration simply could not do much about.

Only the Supreme Court can really change abortion, school prayer, quotas and law-and-order, the argument continued, and that was Reagan's great opportunity. His first appointment, Sandra Day O'Connor, has turned out to be more conservative than anybody dreamed, and the president's men advise that stronger medicine will be prescribed for future vacancies.

Specifically, according to Reagan aides, the second term could see the first three vacancies filled by men of demonstrably conservative ideology: Interior Secretary William Clark, U.S. Appeals Court Judge Robert Bork and Ed Meese. Of these, only Meese lacks the legal and judicial experience for the Court, a deficiency that would be remedied by a hitch as attorney general.

Indeed, liberal Democratic members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have eyed Meese less as today's attorney general than tomorrow's Supreme Court justice. Their assault on him derived less from suspicions of corruption than their desire to prevent somebody hard on law-and-order and soft on civil rights from sitting on the Court the next 25 years.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy raised precisely those issues in the early days of the confirmation hearings, but aroused little interest. It took Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, a warrior who will try to bring down any Reaganite, to endanger Meese by painting him as corrupt rather than conservative.

"I would honestly doubt that Meese really has done anything wrong," one Senate liberal confessed to us. "But I don't feel sorry for him that he messed things up for himself." On the contrary, this liberal is exultant that by forgetting to list in his financial disclosure statement a $15,000 loan to his wife, Meese may have removed himself as a permanent future thorn in the side of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

Unlike earlier embattled conservatives forced out of the Reagan administration, Meese — strongly supported by his wife, Ursula — will not jump. The president, who regrets the greased departure of Richard V. Allen, and perhaps others, has no intention of pushing Meese. He is angry about anti-Meese leaks that seemingly originate in the White House. However, there are no cries from either Senate Republicans or White House aides for withdrawal of Meese's name.

Still, the administration must face perhaps six months or more while the special prosecutor sifts through charges against Meese. Who will run the Justice Department during that time is not yet determined. Nor does a clean bill of health from the special prosecutor ensure Meese's ultimate confirmation.

Even if Meese wins his uphill fight for confirmation, however, the Supreme Court looks distant today. His staunchest Senate supporters flinch at the prospect of guiding him through a war over control of the judicial branch — a war that could consume a Reagan second term. That suggests the ACLU has parlayed one man's absent-minded personal accounting errors into a signal victory over Reaganism.

Deficits dangerous

Your March 25 editorial pages had two editorials, of opposing emphasis. One advocated a positive change, a new approach to national defense. The other advocated continued deficit spending.

William Randolph Hearst, Jr. gave a worthwhile introduction to the new, non-nuclear defense concept, the "High Frontier" advocated by retired Lt. Gen. Daniel O. Graham. We look forward to Editor-In-Chief Hearst's subsequent columns on this subject.

In that same issue you quoted a Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Journal editorial opposing the balanced budget amendment to our U.S. constitution. We were told that such could be "dangerous." What is more dangerous to our economy than continuing deficits?

The editorial writer suggests that congress could balance the budget, without an amendment requiring that spending be kept under control. Congress after congress has failed to do so. Here in Texas we also used to have deficit spending, by state government. Some years ago our Texas Constitution was amended to prohibit spendings beyond income. Several decades have proved this a blessing to our state, not a danger.

The danger in all levels of government is the ease to spend. Especially on the federal level has deficit spending brought the value of the dollar down and down, and at the same time has caused interest rates to rise to unprecendented highs. Government spending on interest is now greater than the total cost of government of a few years ago. Such a burden is bad for consumers, for business, and for government.

Trash covering city's pride?

I have just returned from a visit to Midland and was compelled to write and ask a big why? Maybe I should write to the city fathers and ask them, but I thought if enough people in Midland would read this and get out and ride around they could get a message to them that something needs to be done about the trash that litters your city or their city. Where has the pride gone?

I lived in Midland in 1961 and 1962. I started in Lee High School that year in the 11th grade. That's the year Lee High opened. We, the students, were proud of it. In fact the whole town was proud of it. A little incident happened to me that has stuck with me ever since 1961.

A group of us boys were riding around one day and I threw a piece of paper out the car window. Nothing big but still litter. A policeman happened to be in the right spot to see it thrown out. He pulled us over and gave us a pretty good talking to about being litterbugs. It was a good lesson to me. Over 20 years latter I carry a litter bag in my car.

Has anyone driven down I-20 on the south side of Midland between Rankin Highway and Cotten Flat Road? It is a disgrace. The whole area is a public dump grounds. In fact from the railroad south is a mess.

How can the city look the other way and let this go on? As thousands travel through the south side of Midland on Interstate 20 and see this the impression they get must be the same as mine — simply a disgrace that a city such as Midland would let this happen.

Even though I have no ties with Midland now, let me say, please clean up your city and be a model city again.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, April 6, the 97th day of 1984. There are 269 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 6, 1789, the House and Senate held their first joint meeting, with the House sitting in as the Senate counted the electoral votes for president.

On this date:

Also in 1789, the first Roman Catholic diocese in the United States was established in Baltimore.

In 1841, John Tyler was sworn in as the 10th president of the United States, two days after the death of William Henry Harrison.

In 1893, boxers Andy Bowen and Jack Burke fought for seven hours and 19 minutes in New Orleans and wound up splitting the $2,500 purse when neither could continue beyond the 110th round.

In 1909, American explorer Robert Peary reached the North Pole.

In 1917, the United States declared war on Germany.

And in 1980, Easter services were held for the American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Iran.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon conferred with several West European leaders in Paris after the funeral for French President Georges Pompidou.

Five years ago: The Labor Department reported that the unemployment rate was 5.7 percent — its lowest level in 4½ years.

House OKs $1 trillion outline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, after approving outlines for the nation's first $1 trillion budget, is ready to consider a Senate-passed bill that would give $61.7 in military aid to El Salvador and $21 million to rebels trying to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua.

On Thursday, the House approved by a 250-168 vote a target 1985 budget favored by Democratic party leaders that would reduce the federal deficit by about $182 billion over the next three years.

The plan, passed after Democrats killed a Republican proposal to chop $205 billion from the deficit, would set aside money from tax hikes for any increases in spending that exceed inflation.

The House deficit plan would scale back increases in military spending by $95.7 billion and provide $49.8 billion in tax increases. The plan would also cut domestic spending $14.1 billion and save $21.6 billion in national-debt interest payments.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved the aid package for the Salvadoran government and Nicaraguan rebels by a 76-19 vote Thursday, climaxing more than a week of fractious debate. Liberal Democrats and some Republicans failed to weaken the bill by adding amendments limiting uses for the money.

"In my 22 years in the Senate, I have never seen a more shameful and more dangerous piece of legislation," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who led the attack on the aid bill. "The Senate has voted for wider war in El Salvador, secret war in Nicaragua and the brink of war in Honduras."

In contrast, Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., called the passage "a fine hour in the history of the Senate."

The House is expected to take up the measure when it returns from recess next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, publicity about attorney general-designate Edwin Meese III took another turn for the worse as a House civil service subcommittee announced an investigation into whether a federal job was created for Gretchen Thomas, whose husband once lent Meese $15,000.

In the Senate, investigators questioned Meese's failure to report reimbursements from private groups for more than 30 trips he took as White House counselor, a congressional aide said Thursday night.

The Ethics in Government Act requires that senior federal officials report reimbursements for trips costing more than $250. Meese provided Senate investigators with a list of more than 40 such trips, but only eight of them were reported on the financial disclosure statements filed in the last three years.

Leonard Garment, Meese's attorney, said the charge that Meese failed to properly report payment for the trips is an example of "piecemeal and misleading stories about overcomplicated factual issues ... that have been extremely unfair and hurtful to him."

Judge limits pickets as striker hit by car

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Aiming to end picket-line clashes as a hotel workers' walkout stretched into a fifth day today, a judge has set limits on the number of union demonstrators allowed outside casino entrances, where a second striker was hit by a car.

Up to 300 pickets had crowded in front of some resorts since the beginning of the strike by four unions representing 17,000 workers, and hotel managers complained that casino patrons were being harassed.

By late Thursday, 132 people had been arrested in strike-related incidents, said Metropolitan Police Sgt. Larry Irvine.

With police investigating the second case of a striker being hit by a car on a picket line, state District Judge J. Charles Thompson issued a restraining order late Thursday allowing only six pickets and one supervisor on driveways at least 20 feet wide.

"What's most important to me is we have safety and security on picket lines and people stop hurting each other," said Thompson, who allowed only two pickets and one supervisor on smaller driveways.

The four unions, representing culinary workers, stagehands, bartenders and musicians, are striking over job security.

A striker identified as Diana Redding, 20, was treated and released from Southern Nevada Hospital after being struck by a car outside the MGM Grand Hotel on Thursday, said Metro Police Sgt. Larry Irvine.

Irvine said the driver, identified as Jack Andrews, 63, was arrested for investigation of battery with a deadly weapon.

Police and pickets clashed Tuesday in a club-swinging melee at the Las Vegas Hilton, and on Wednesday, 23-year-old striker Jim Turner was run over by a car driven by a temporary security worker at Caesars Palace, police said. Turner was reported in stable condition Thursday at a Las Vegas hospital, and the driver was not charged.

Sheriff John Moran has denied the union's charges of police brutality in the Hilton incident.

However, a spokesman for the Culinary Union said Lane Kirkland, head of the AFL-CIO, had asked U.S. Attorney General William French Smith to investigate the charge and send federal marshals to Las Vegas to protect the pickets.

nation in brief

Ten-year-old gives birth

CHICAGO (AP) — A 10-year-old girl who didn't know she was pregnant has given birth to a healthy 6-pound, 4-ounce baby, and police say she may have been raped.

"There are alleged to be two suspects in this," Sgt. Montgomery Jackson said Thursday. "One might be an uncle, one might be the husband of one of the little girl's babysitters.

"We're not pushing the little girl for information. We are handling the matter very delicately," Jackson added.

Police speculate the rape occurred in July or August 1983.

The girl, who is 10 years and 8 months old, is the second youngest mother to give birth in Chicago history and one of the youngest in the nation, according to Cook County Hospital spokesman Ron Wise. A girl who was four months younger gave birth here by Caesarean section in 1964.

Wise called Thursday's natural childbirth "medically uneventful," considering the girl's age. She had gone to St. Anthony Hospital on Wednesday complaining of abdominal pains and was transferred to Cook County Hospital's high-risk maternity unit before giving birth early Thursday.

Wise said the girl's parents probably will care for the new infant and allow their daughter to continue with school.

The youngest mother recorded in medical literature studied by county hospital officials was a 6½-year-old Peruvian girl whose child was stillborn, said Wise.

Stricter control urged

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — A fishermen's association says it will point to the latest in a series of gasoline spills in pushing for stricter controls over navigation in the Hudson River.

A barge carrying more than 2 million gallons of gasoline struck a rock Thursday, sending a sheen over a 10-mile stretch of the river but not effecting municipal water supplies.

John Cronin of the Hudson River Fishermen's Association said the spill was the seventh in the same place in the last 15 months.

He said the spills were caused by unfamiliar captains and "plain poor navigation," and Thursday's would be used "as the example to change things."

Airline talks stalled

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Talks were reported stalled between Northwest Airlines and a flight attendants' union after members rejected the company's final contract offer and set an April 15 strike deadline.

Dennis Quinn, spokesman for Airline, Aerospace and Allied Employees Local 2747, said 78 percent of Northwest's 2,900 attendants voted against the offer Thursday. Rejection by more than two-thirds was needed to authorize a strike, he said.

Northwest spokesman Matt Gonring said the company's final offer would place the flight attendants among the highest-paid in the industry. Quinn said the offer called for a six-month pay freeze, followed by annual increases of 6, 6 and 3 percent, starting in July.

Condor embryo alive

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Zoo officials say a California condor embryo "is alive and kicking" and should hatch this weekend, but a second chick may be dead in its egg.

Examinations with a high-intensity lamp show that the troubled embryo of the nearly extinct species hasn't moved for two days and the air cell inside the pale blue egg isn't expanding, zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said Thursday.

He added, however, that the egg is still seven days from hatching and "could be OK."

Cuban may be hit man

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Cuban refugee charged with two murders may have been a hit man for a "massive Cuban-Colombian cocaine ring" possibly linked to 50 unsolved drug war murders, authorities said.

Roberto Lopez, 31, is accused of murdering Hector Falcon, 26, and his wife, Teresa, 29, over a $2,000 drug debt. He also is under investigation in two other slayings, authorities said.

Deputy District Attorney Jeff Jonas said Thursday that Lopez is believed to be "one of the hit men" in some of the 50 unsolved murders in Los Angeles County in the last two years. The slayings were the result of drug dealers warring over territory, he said.

Move over, Wilt! Jabbar breaks record

The Right Stuff

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar dunks home the basket that tied him with Wilt Chamberlain on the all-time NBA scoring list. Jabbar hit a sky hook moments later to set the new scoring mark with 31,421 points.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit a soft sky hook, a shot he has perfected in 15 professional seasons, to break Wilt Chamberlain's previous mark and set a new all-time National Basketball Association scoring record Thursday night of 31,421 points.

The Los Angeles Lakers' 7-foot-2 center turned on the baseline and hit the 10-footer over two Utah Jazz defenders with 8:53 left in the game as a sellout crowd of 18,359 roared its approval.

"It was a big burden off my shoulders and a big burden off the team's shoulders," Abdul-Jabbar said. "Our goal is winning a world championship. We can focus on that now."

Abdul-Jabbar hit 10 of 14 field goals and both of his free-throw attempts as he scored 22 points in the Lakers' 129-115 victory over the Jazz.

But it was almost a mark he was forced to wait until Friday night in Los Angeles against Kansas City to set.

After scoring 16 points in the first half, he managed just a single basket in the third quarter and, with the Lakers enjoying a big lead, Coach Pat Riley moved to take him out of the game.

"Pat asked if I wanted to be taken out," said Abdul-Jabbar. "I told him no, I'd rather get it done."

With the crowd cheering everytime he touched the ball, Abdul-Jabbar said he was aware of how many points he had.

"They started looking for me when I got within a basket," he said of his teammates. "I could hear the crowd and everybody knew what was going on."

The shot that broke the record, which came after a pass by Earvin "Magic" Johnson, was nothing spectacular, said Abdul-Jabbar, just one of the many sky hooks he has hit throughout his career.

"I just faked the pass to whoever was out there, and I just shot it," Abdul-Jabbar said.

"It's kind of hard not to have a sense of history about this. Everybody's been talking about the significance of this," he said. "It's a great moment for an individual who has been consistent and, I guess, excellent over the years."

The crowd gave him a standing ovation after he broke the record as his teammates surrounded him in a circle at midcourt.

The referees stopped the game and NBA Commissioner David Stern went to midcourt to congratulate Abdul-Jabbar.

"I'd like to give thanks to the great Allah for gifting me," Abdul-Jabbar told the crowd over the public-address system. "I'd like to give thanks to my parents who are both here tonight for a lot of inspiration and a lot of courage and a lot of support.

"I want to give my best to my family and lastly, I want to thank all of you fans for your tremendous support," he said.

Chamberlain, who had been expected at the game, was not in attendance.

Riley substituted Mitch Kupchak for Abdul-Jabbar after he broke the record.

Abdul-Jabbar's shot came after he missed a sky hook in the Lakers' previous trip down the court.

With his parents Cora and Ferdinand and Lewis Alcindor looking on, Abdul-Jabbar wasted no time in going after the record, scoring on a left-handed hook with less than two minutes gone in the game and quickly following it with a dunk.

Abdul-Jabbar hit his first six shots of the game and his stuff with four seconds left in the first half gave him 16 points, five short of the record.

The six-time NBA Most Valuable Player, who had scored 20 or more points in his last 17 games, moved to within three of the record when he hit one of his patented sky hooks midway through the third quarter.

But, with the crowd roaring everytime he touched the ball, Abdul-Jabbar missed his only other shot of the quarter.

With 10:45 left in the game, Abdul-Jabbar took a feed from James Worthy and dunked to tie the record.

Less than two minutes later, with the crowd on its feet clapping in unison, Johnson looked for the ball, waited for Abdul-Jabbar to get downcourt, and then hit the great center on the right baseline. Abdul-Jabbar turned to his left, and guarded by two defenders, hit his record-breaking shot.

Abdul-Jabbar, who turns 37 on April 16, began his NBA career in 1969 with the Milwaukee Bucks and was the league's rookie of the year.

In 1971, he changed his name from Lewis Alcindor to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. He was traded to the Lakers before the 1975-76 campaign and is about to lead them in scoring for the ninth straight year.

Kareem has only known success

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

When Wilt Chamberlain's magnificent 14-year National Basketball Association career ended in 1973, he had scored 31,419 points — a record many thought would never be surpassed.

However, like many supposedly untouchable standards before and since, Chamberlain's record is history because of the brilliance, consistency and stamina of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

And while he might not be able to do all the things he could five or 10 years ago, Abdul-Jabbar might put the record he now owns out of sight, at least for the time being, if he continues to play the way he has this year.

Abdul-Jabbar, who turns 37 on April 16, signed a two-year contract with the Los Angeles Lakers before the current season. He said at the time, and has repeated since, that he would retire when the contract expires.

That would mean he will have played 16 years in the NBA and logged more than 1,200 games.

If he changes his mind, plays a 17th season and stays healthy, he will become the all-time NBA leader in total games played.

How well has the 7-foot-2 center played lately? He was named the NBA's Player of the Month for March, a month in which he averaged 26.2 points and 7.3 rebounds in his team's 15 games.

In each of those 15 games, he scored a minimum of 20 points, increasing his streak of scoring in double figures to 530 straight games.

Abdul-Jabbar grew up in New York City as Lew Alcindor and had an extraordinary high school career at Power Memorial where his teams went 95-6 over four years, including a 71-game winning streak.

NCAA swamped with 60,000 hoop orders

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — At last count Thursday, an estimated 60,000 letters had been sent to P.O. Box 1985 B, and they still were arriving.

"Mine's in there, swimming amongst the thousands," said Tom Masse, a clerk at the U.S. Postal Service's main office. "I think I wasted 20 cents."

If he did, Masse won't be alone. Officials said that only about 6,900 tickets would be available to the public for the NCAA Final Four at Rupp Arena in 1985.

Under NCAA rules, each letter could seek no more than four seats. Only those postmarked April 3 will be accepted for the lottery to determine who gets tickets.

The 60,000 letters represented just the overnight mail, from a range of 300 to 600 miles from Lexington, said Jim Hughes, director of mail processing in Lexington.

More than one of every three letters had a Lexington zip code.

"You're talking about 20,000 to 25,000 requests out of Lexington," said Harold Wynn, a postal supervisor.

Seattle, site of this year's tournament, had between 30,000-35,000 entries in its lottery, plus a "very small percentage" that did not meet NCAA guidelines, said Brian Donohoe, a spokesman at the Seattle Kingdome.

Ticket-hunters tried most of the usual tricks to draw attention to their requests. Mixed in the stacks of letters were several padded manila envelopes that were two feet long. One huge envelope had a basketball and hoop painted on it — and the ball was going in.

Others arrived in cardboard tubes, or in letters decorated with shiny decals.

Post offices in Kentucky were deluged with ticket seekers trying to meet the deadline.

Ticket requests had to be accompanied by certified checks or money orders; Lexington post offices alone sold $65,000 worth of money orders Tuesday. On a normal day, sales are closer to $15,000.

Fred Hynson, chairman of the tournament planning committee, said local and NCAA officials would be finalizing plans for the April 27 lottery in the next few days.

But an NCAA spokeswoman warned that it could be late June before tickets are sent off or money is returned.

Tournament officials "need to have time to process the orders they are going to fill," said Debbie Connelly at NCAA headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan.

Steve Simmons, a Lexington insurance agent who entered 10 ticket requests along with a friend, figured he had about "a five percent" chance of getting tickets.Then he thought some more, and changed the guess to one percent.

MHS staff takes shape

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

When a head football coach leaves a school, only part of the battle is won when his successor is named. There is still the matter of finding the assistant coaches that will fit into his new program.

Doug McCutchen was hired to replace Pat Culpepper at Midland High on Feb. 14 and he is just now getting his staff together in time for the upcoming spring football season. It's a mixture of old and new faces.

Next year there will be three new assistant coaches in purple and gold uniforms: Davis Corley, Robert Carr and Greg Manship.

Corley is a long-time friend of McCutchen, but this is the first time the two have worked together as coaches. "He'll be the defensive coordinator and coach linebackers," said McCutchen. "He's coming here from Palacious."

"We grew up in Bronte together," said McCutchen. "We went to school together and played football at Texas Tech at the same time. He was a defensive tackle and defensive end at Tech."

Previously, Corley has coached at Lubbock Estacado, Texas A&I, Jasper and Palacious. "He was the defensive coordinator at Jasper and Palacious," said McCutchen.

Corley has already reported to work at Midland High and the two other newcomers will be here on Monday.

"Robert Carr is from Brenham and has been a defensive coordinator," said McCutchen. "He'll be coaching the defensive secondary and offensive receivers. I know he coached at Sweetwater, Lufkin and he has been at Brenham for the past three years. He's coached at more places than that but I don't remember where they were."

Manship will be filling the same post at MHS that he held in his previous job with McCutchen at Klein Forest.

"He's coached with me the past four years as offensive line coach and with defensive tackles at Liberty and Klein Forest," said McCutchen.

Manship has also been at San Angelo Central and Tahoka.

Five coaches are returning from the Culpepper era and beyond. They are: Johnny Williams, who has seen several coaches come and go at Midland High; Bernie Hagins, Randy Quisenberry and two of three coaches yet to be determined. The three in the running are Rick Samples, Rick Wood and Larry Morris.

"Two of these three will be back," said McCutchen. "I'm trying to work another position in for the third in the junior high or freshman school. I don't know yet if I can, I'm still working on it."

The only two coaches on last year's staff not returning are Bob Howell and Tim Smith.

McCutchen is happy with the team of coaches he has put together and now he's starting to turn his thoughts toward organizing them into the unit he's looking for.

"I'm extremely pleased about this staff," said McCutchen. "I think we have a very close knit staff and will work well together. I'm extremely pleased with the people who will be on it. I think everyone is very enthusiastic about the changes and are looking forward to it.

"It's always a big concern, getting the hiring resolved so we can start work with the team," continued McCutchen. "It's always great when you get the coaches to know who they will work with and what their responsibilities are so they can give total concentration to working with the kids."

Cleveland steals Yost, Rangers blind in 7-3 AL victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

American League catchers had better circle the wagons before the Cleveland Indians wind up circling the bases.

The Indians ran wild on new Texas catcher Ned Yost, swiping six bases Thursday night in a 7-3 victory over the Rangers. The six steals tied the record for the most ever against the Rangers — the Indians twice stole third — and three of them led directly to runs. Ironically, Yost was acquired from Milwaukee last December in a trade for catcher Jim Sundberg, a six-time Gold Glove winner for his fielding prowess.

"We're going to be a running team," said Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales. "I'd be disappointed if we didn't steal over 200 bases this year. We're going to try to do this all year."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Kansas City Royals shelled the New York Yankees 15-4, the Detroit Tigers trimmed the Minnesota Twins 7-3, the Toronto Blue Jays pounded the Seattle Mariners 13-5 and the Boston Red Sox downed the California Angels 7-4. Baltimore, Chicago, Milwaukee and Oakland were not scheduled.

Otis Nixon and Brett Butler stole two bases apiece for Cleveland and Tony Bernazard and Julio Franco each had one. Yost threw out only one would-be base-stealer, and a television replay showed Butler was safe on that one.

"I think the umpires were starting to feel sorry for them," Butler said.

Both sides, however, defended Yost.

"Yost is a decent catcher," said Butler. "We were stealing off the pitcher, not stealing off him. He has a good arm."

Texas starter Dave Stewart agreed that "it was my fault. Any time a runner steals a base, it's not off the catcher. You have to give him a chance."

The Indians took a 3-0 lead in the fourth inning on Ron Hassey's RBI single and a two-run single by George Vukovich. They made it 5-0 in the fifth inning on Franco's RBI single and Pat Tabler's sacrifice fly.Texas scored all its runs off winner Neal Heaton in the bottom of the fifth on Gary Ward's solo homer and a two-run blast by Yost.

Royals 15, Yankees 4

Frank White drove in four runs, Steve Balboni slugged a three-run homer and every Kansas City starter scored at least once. Larry Gura, whose 18 losses led the major leagues last year, had a perfect game through five innings but walked Ken Griffey leading off the sixth and one out later Tim Foli singled.

The Royals scored nine times in the second inning — Darryl Motley contributed a double and single, White had a two-run triple and Don Slaught a two-run double — and hammered Shane Rawley and Bob Shirley for seven runs apiece in rolling to a 14-0 lead after three innings. Balboni's homer in the fourth was his first since coming to Kansas City in a trade with the Yankees last December. The Yankees scored all their runs in the seventh, three on Rick Cerone's homer.

Tigers 7, Twins 3

Kirk Gibson hit a three-run homer and Alan Trammell homered, tripled and singled twice for Detroit.Dan Petry scattered five hits over seven innings for the Tigers, who rallied against Frank Viola after falling behind 2-0 in the second inning.

Trammell's homer made it 2-1 in the third and Gibson's homer put the Tigers ahead 4-2 in the fourth. Detroit added a run in the sixth on Chet Lemon's RBI double and scored twice in the seventh on Darrell Evans's RBI single and a bases-loaded balk by Larry Pashnick.

Viola said he didn't think Gibson's shot to straightaway center field would clear the fence. "To tell you the truth," he said, "when he hit it, I thought it was a pop-up. It was a good fastball, but it got too much of the plate, and he's so strong you can't give him anything."

"When you make contact, funny things can happen here (the Metrodome)," Gibson said. "In Tiger Stadium it would have been a routine fly ball."

Blue Jays 13, Mariners 5

Lloyd Moseby drove in three runs and George Bell and Dave Collins collected three hits apiece in Toronto's 18-hit attack. The Blue Jays erupted for six runs in the second inning to chase Jim Beattie. They collected six hits in the inning, including Moseby's RBI double and Alfredo Griffin's two-run single. Willie Upshaw also homered for Toronto while Pat Putnam and Ken Phelps connected for Seattle.

Red Sox 7, Angels 4

Dave Stapleton's tie-breaking two-out double drove in the first of three ninth-inning Boston runs. Mike Easler opened the inning with a double off Curt Kaufman and scored on Stapleton's double. The other runs scored on Jerry Remy's single and Dwight Evans' double.

California's Ron Romanick, a 6-foot-4, 23-year-old right-hander, was sailing along with a three-hitter and a 2-0 lead in his major-league debut when Tony Armas and Rich Gedman singled to open the Boston eighth. Stapleton bunted back to Romanick, who had plenty of time to make a play at third base but threw the ball into left field as Armas and pinch runner Reid Nichols both scored. Hoffman followed with a double that scored Stapleton and he eventually scored on Evans' sacrifice fly. The Angels tied it in the bottom of the eighth on Rod Carew's two-run homer.

Rangers tie Big Apple feud

By The Associated Press

Brilliant goaltending by Glen Hanlon paced the New York Rangers past the four-time Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders 3-0 Thursday night, evening their best-of-five National Hockey League playoff series at one game apiece.

Meanwhile, the Montreal Canadiens and goalie Steve Penney again surprised the Boston Bruins 3-1 to take a two games-to-none lead in their matchup.

Hanlon stopped 45 shots in the Patrick Division semifinal as the visiting Rangers handed the Islanders their first postseason shutout since May 1980.

"I don't know how many saves were that big. It doesn't mean a heck of a lot because we both still need two wins," said Hanlon after posting his first Stanley Cup victory.

Some of Hanlon's saves came as the Rangers killed off nine Islanders power plays.

"It's not unusual to run into a hot goaltender in the playoffs and that's part of what happened to us tonight," said Mike Bossy of the Islanders.

Reijo Ruotsalainen and Peter Sundstrom scored power-play goals for the Rangers.

The third game of the series will be played Saturday night at Madison Square Garden, the Rangers' home where they won all three regular-season games against the Islanders this season.

Penney, who had never won an NHL game before beating the Bruins in Boston in Game 1 Wednesday night, turned aside 26 shots, including 13 in the third period of their Adams Division semifinal.

Montreal, whose 35-40-5 record this season represented the most losses in Canadiens' history, will play host to Boston — whose 104 points this season were tied with the Islanders for second-best in the NHL — in Game 3 Saturday night.

Craig Laughlin and Dave Christian scored 32 seconds apart in the third period, sending the Washington Capitals onto a 6-2 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers and a 2-0 lead in the other Patrick matchup.

Laughlin's goal at 2:53 snapped a 2-2 tie in Landover, Md., as the Flyers lost their eighth straight playoff game over three seasons. Game 3 will be Saturday night in Philadelphia.

Dale Hunter's two goals led the Quebec Nordiques to a 6-2 triumph over the Buffalo Sabres and a 2-0 edge in an Adams semifinal.

Quebec raced to a 4-0 lead early in the second period before Buffalo's Mike Foligno and Sean McKenna tallied 14 seconds apart. The Nordiques, who won the first two games in Buffalo, will play host to Game 3 Saturday night.

Rookie Steve Yzerman scored with 11:17 remaining to break a 3-3 tie and send the visiting Detroit Red Wings to a 5-3 victory over the St. Louis Blues in a Norris semifinal, evening their series at one game apiece.

Danny Gare added an empty-net goal with 38 seconds left for Detroit, which plays host to Game 3 Saturday night.

Al MacAdam sent Minnesota ahead in the third period, and Willi Plett and Neal Broten added goals to send the host North Stars over the Chicago Black Hawks 6-5 in the other Norris semifinal, tying that series at one game each. Game 3 is Saturday night in Chicago.

Defenseman Randy Gregg scored 21 seconds into overtime as the Edmonton Oilers downed the Winnipeg Jets 5-4 to take a 2-0 lead in their Smythe Division semifinal.

The Oilers, who have now beaten Winnipeg 14 straight times, scored twice in the final nine minutes of regulation to force the overtime. Then, Gregg's long wrist shot slipped by Jets goalie Marc Behrend to win it.

Game 3 is Saturday night in Winnipeg.

Jim Peplinski and Mike Eaves scored 63 second apart in the second period to overcome a 1-0 deficit and lead the Calgary Flames to a 4-2 victory and a 2-0 lead over the Vancouver Canucks in their Smythe semifinal.

Dave Williams gave the visiting Canucks a 1-0 lead at 9:32 of the second period before Peplinski scored 34 seconds later. Game 3 will be Saturday night in Vancouver.

Scoring record heads NBA play

By The Associated Press

It was a rather routine shot, something that he had done thousands of times.

But when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar sank a soft sky hook Thursday night, it put him where no NBA player has ever been before.

That shot with 8:53 left in Los Angeles' game with the Utah Jazz in Las Vegas, Nev., pushed the Lakers' great 7-foot-2 center past Wilt Chamberlain and into the record books as the league's all-time leading scorer with 31,421 points.

"I just faked the pass to whoever was out there, and I just shot it," Abdul-Jabbar said simply.

He went into the game needing 21 points to set the mark, and his teammates "started looking for me when I got within a basket," he said. "I could hear the crowd and everybody knew what was going on."

After scoring 16 points in the first half, he made one basket in the third quarter.

Going into the fourth quarter, with Los Angeles enjoying a large lead, Lakers Coach Pat Riley asked Abdul-Jabbar if he wanted to come out of the game and wait to set the record Friday night at home against Kansas City.

"I told him no, I'd rather get it done," the six-time NBA Most Valuable Player said.

Abdul-Jabbar tied Chamberlain's record with a dunk with 10:45 left and then, after missing a sky hook, the Lakers got the ball back and passed to Johnson, who waited for Abdul-Jabbar to get down the court. Johnson tossed the ball to Abdul-Jabbar on the right baseline, and with the crowd roaring, the center turned to his left and made the shot over two defenders.

"It was kind of hard not to have a sense of history about this," he said. "Everybody's been talking about the significance of this."

The referees stopped the game after his record-breaking shot and NBA Commissioner David Stern went to midcourt to join in brief ceremonies. Abdul-Jabbar, speaking on the public-address system, thanked his parents — who were in attendance — and the sellout crowd of 18,359.

The Lakers shot 72 percent from the field in racing to a 77-69 halftime lead and coasted home. John Drew led Utah with 24 points.

Bucks 113, 76ers 103

Forward Marques Johnson scored nine of his 18 points in the fourth quarter to help Milwaukee blunt a Philadelphia comeback.

The visiting 76ers scored the first seven points of the fourth quarter to pull within 88-87 before a free throw by Sidney Moncrief and a three-point play by Johnson boosted the Bucks' margin. Later, Milwaukee ran off a 9-2 streak to take a 101-91 lead.

Lanier added 18 for Milwaukee while Andrew Toney scored 29 and Moses Malone 28 for Philadelphia.

Cavaliers 114, Bulls 99

Lonnie Shelton scored 21 points and reserve Paul Thompson added 19 as host Cleveland sent Chicago to its ninth straight defeat, matching the longest losing streak in the NBA this season.

World B. Free scored 11 of his 13 points in the fourth quarter as the Cavaliers, who led 83-76 after three quarters, went on to build a 14-point margin.

Free, bothered by a swollen knee, became the 46th player in NBA history to score 14,000 points.

Rockets 129, Trail Blazers 114

Ralph Sampson scored 27 points and Lewis Lloyd added 22 as visiting Houston ended Portland's eight-game winning streak.

Sampson scored seven points early in the fourth quarter during a 13-4 Houston streak that broke a 91-91 tie.

Jim Paxson scored 26 points for Portland.

Warriors 128, Nuggets 124

Mike Bratz, who averages 6.9 points per game, scored all of his 23 points in the fourth quarter as Golden State ended Denver's 13-game home-court winning streak.

Bratz hit seven of his eight shots from the field in the final period, including a pair of three-pointers, and also hit seven of eight tries from the foul line.

Silfver repeats win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Conny Silfver of Angelo State won the discus and shot put Thursday to amass 7,867 points and capture the decathlon competition of the Texas Relays.

Silfver, the 1982 decathlon champion here, outpointed Mike Ramos of Washington, who was second with 7,732 points, and Greg Culp of Abilene Christian, who had 7,732 points.

The heptathlon was won by Sheila Tarr of Nevada-Las Vegas, who took the 100-meter hurdles, the high jump, the shot put and the javelin in scoring 5,658 points.

Arias hot in River Oaks loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Everyone seemed convinced that top seeded Jimmy Arias had been eliminated from the field of the $250,000 River Oaks International tennis tournament – everyone except Arias, that is.

"That was the most incompetent umpiring I've seen in my life," Arias fumed Thursday after he was upset 6-3, 6-7, 7-5 by unseeded Mark Dickson on a disputed call at match point. "That last ball missed by two inches.

"The linesman had no idea where the ball hit. He couldn't idenfity the mark and wouldn't even look for it."

Arias' protests were overruled, however, putting Dickson into Saturday's semifinals against the winner of a match today between fourth seeded Bill Scanlon and Steve Denton.

Finals in the $250,000 World Championship tennis event are scheduled Sunday with $75,000 going to the winner.

Sammy Giammalva struggled early before defeating Vijay Amritraj 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 in Thursday's other quarter-finals match.

Dickson used his big serve to score the upset victory, hitting five aces and 25 service winners in the match and had a steady forehand that he used to hit 24 winners.

Sammy Giammalva struggled in an earlier quarter-finals match before defeating Vijay Amritraj 3-6, 6-4 6-3.

Giammalva played poorly at the start of his match, eventually losing the set when Amritraj broke his serve on backhand errors in the sixth and eighth games.

Giammalva started his rally in the second set when Amritraj double faulted at game point to lose his serve in the second game. Giammalva took a 5-3 lead into the ninth game but lost his serve and had to break Amritraj in the 10th game to win the set.

"Vijay wasn't putting any pace on the ball so I felt I had to do more and I was making mistakes," Giammalva said. "But by the third set, I was feeling better."

Giammalva's game improved drastically in the third set when he hit 19 winners and had only six errors. Giammalva hit 38 errors for the match compared to 50 for Amritraj.

His semifinals opponent will be the winner of a Friday match between second seeded Tim Mayotte and Pat Cash.

Giammalva said he was so nervous in anticipation of Thursday's match, he could not sleep Wednesday night.

"I got up at 4 a.m. and did two loads of laundry," Giammalva said.

Padres bounce back over Bucs

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Steve Garvey carries a big bat. But he's more interested these days in talking about little things he thinks can make the San Diego Padres a contender in the National League West.

The veteran of many a pennant race with the Los Angeles Dodgers drove in four runs Thursday, two on a third-inning home run, as the Padres ran their record to 2-0 by rallying from a 5-0 deficit to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6.

But he talked afterward about a potential double play ball he hit in the sixth that turned into a mere forceout when newly acquired Graig Nettles slid hard into Pirates shortstop Dale Berra. That allowed Terry Kennedy's sacrifice fly to score the insurance run.

"Those are the kind of things that good teams do," Garvey said. "Atlanta has done that the last couple of seasons and that's what the Dodgers used to do when I was with them all those years."

Added Padres manager Dick Williams: "Nettles broke up a double play ball by Garvey, then we get the sacrifice fly for a cushion. This is a 25-man team and this is a team victory."

In the only other National League games Thursday, the Los Angeles Dodgers topped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-2 on Mike Marshall's three-run homer in the 12th and the Chicago Cubs beat the San Francisco Giants, 11-7.

Pittsburgh led 5-0 after 2½ innings, with four of the runs coming on a grand slam by rookie Doug Frobel off Andy Hawkins in the top of the third.

Garvey triggered the Padre comeback in the bottom of that inning with a two-run homer off Jose DeLeon, then slashed a two-run single to cap a five-run fourth that gave San Diego a 7-6 lead. Then came that insurance run in the sixth.

Luis DeLeon pitched hitless ball for 2 1-3 innings to pick up the win, then Williams turned to his new bullpen weapon, Goose Gossage, to pitch the ninth. Williams said he was satisfied that DeLeon could finish, but added:

"If I've got a guy who's been doing it year after year, I'm going to use him unless he's tired. Goose has said he'd prefer to start an inning rather than pick up somebody else's mess whenever possible, and I'll honor that."

Dodgers 5, Cards 2

Marshall cracked his opposite field shot into the right-field bleachers off a 2-0 pitch from Jeff Lahti. It followed Terry Whitfield's leadoff single, a sacrifice by Ken Landreaux and an intentional walk to Pedro Guerrero.

"That'll teach them," cracked Marshall, who has driven in six runs in two games. "I told you I'd get a lot of RBI if they keep walking Pedro.

"I'm happy batting behind him. I'm going to be batting with a lot of men on base. I guess I just have to earn their respect."

Orel Hershiser, the third Dodger pitcher, notched his first major league win, retiring the Cards in order in the top of the 12th.

The Cards got both their runs off starter Rick Honeycutt in the second when David Green doubled home George Hendrick and Darrell Porter singled to score Green.

The Dodgers tied it in the sixth on a wild pitch by Cards starter Bob Forsch that scored Dave Anderson and Steve Sax' infield out.

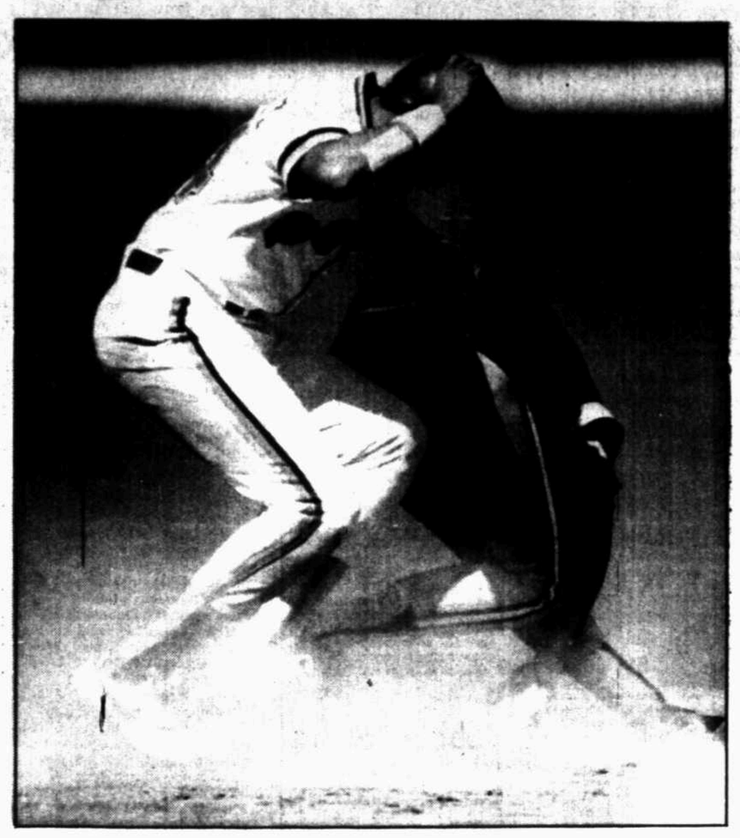

Cubs 11, Giants 4

Ryne Sandberg drove in four runs with two singles and a homer as the Cubs opened up a 10-1 lead over the first 5½ innings to post their second win in two games at Candlestick Park.

Chuck Rainey, who drove in two runs with a single and a bases-loaded walk was the winner, although he gave up 12 hits in 5 1-3 innings. Mike Krukow was the loser for San Francisco.

"Chuck pitches like that a lot. He gives up hits, then gets them to hit ground balls for outs. It's tough to put a rally together against him," said Sandberg.

Tim Stoddard relieved Rainey, but Lee Smith had to come on to get the last out in a three-run Giant ninth for his second save in two games.

Tall City Relay finals to be under lights

From Staff Reports

The running of the Tall City Relays was scheduled to get underway at Memorial Stadium today at 2:30 p.m. with running finals slated for 7 p.m.

Field event finals and running preliminaries were to end this afternoon, but the major portion of the meet will be held under the lights.

Midland Lee and Odessa Permian were expected to be in a dog fight for team title honors as action got underway today. San Angelo also is considered to have a title shot. Other teams include Midland High, Odessa High, Big Spring and Hobbs, N.M.

There is no admission charge for this year's meet, so it should be a good chance for Midland track fans to see Memorial Stadium's new all-weather running surface being put to good use.

The MHS and Lee girls were also scheduled to compete in the District 4-5A girls' meet in Odessa today at Ratliff Stadium. That meet too had a 2:30 p.m. starting time with 7 p.m. finals.

The top two individuals in each event will earn Region I berths for Lubbock in two weeks. A team champion will also be named.

Ranger netters win

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood tennis team won three Region I playoff berths Wednesday in the District 6-A tennis meet.

Adam Teraoka won the boys singles title with a 6-2, 6-4 win over Klondike's Kevin Held and Belinda Duke won the girls singles title with a 6-0, 6-2 win over Chrissy Dulan of Highland.

Greenwood's other Region I berth came in the boys doubles where Darrell Stratton and Pat Milligan placed second, losing to Klondike's Turner and Mitchell in the finals, 6-4, 6-4.

Duke will compete in Region I action April 18 in Levelland while the boys will advance to the Levelland tournament May 1.

Greenwood just missed two other chances at Region I berths in doubles action. In the boys division, Troy Wallace and Ken Wallace ended up third with a 6-7, 6-2, 6-4 win over Garza and Sawyer of Grady in the third place match. The top two finishers earn Region I berths. In girls doubles, Greenwood's Chrissy Wallace and Deona Dean defeated Hanks and Sanderson of Klondike, 6-0, 6-3, in the third place battle.

Long drive contest

Local qualifying for Golf Digest's 10th annual National Long Driving Championship will be held Monday at 11 a.m. at Hogan Park Golf Course.

The nationwide competition determines golf's longest hitter and is open to all golfers, professional and amateur. Entry fee is $5 for every three balls hit, with all proceeds benefitting the PGA Junior Golf Foundation.

Over 9,000 contestants at 150 local qualifying sites across the country are expected to enter. Local qualifiers will advance to one of 15 district championship rounds to be contested from mid-May to late July at PGA tour sites. The championship will be decided in August during the PGA Championship at Shoal Creek in Birmingham, Ala.

Terry Forcum, a 41-year-old former bull rider from Ponca City, Okla., is the defending champion with a drive of 307 yards at Riviera Country Club in Los Angeles.

Wood, North locked

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Andy North birdied the final hole in a chilly wind, finishing off a four-under-par 68 and tying rookie Willie Wood for the first-round lead Thursday in the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm not even thinking about the lead — I don't care if it's four under or 10 under — it's just nice to play a little bit better," said North, a non-winner since capturing the 1978 U.S. Open championship.

North, who underwent surgery on his right elbow last year, said he "felt like I was getting close for the last two or three weeks."

"But I was all involved in technical things. When you get so technically oriented, it's sometimes difficult to just go out and play.

"Today, I just made up my mind to go out and have fun, try not to try so hard."

His 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole at the rain-soaked Forest Oaks Country Club course completed a back nine of 32. Like Wood, he chipped in for a birdie.

Wood, in the first group off the tee, finished before the winds reached their peak and the wind-chill factor sent the late starters scurrying for foul weather gear. The course was saturated by heavy overnight rain.

Buddy Gardner, who hit all 18 greens, veteran Al Geiberger and Tony Sills were one off the pace at 69.

The group at 70 included David Peoples, Corey Pavin, Peter Jacobsen, Jay Haas, George Burns, Mac O'Grady, Mike McCullough, Tommy Valentine, Gary Hallberg and D.A. Weibring.

Some of the game's more prominent figures had their difficulties, however. Fuzzy Zoeller struggled to an 81. Craig Stadler shot a 75. Cal Peete had a 74.

Peterson leads LPGA Dinah Shore tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Lauri Peterson's caddy believes the young golf pro has a bright future on the LPGA Tour.

"If she can make the changes in her swing she's working on now and keep progressing, she'll be one of the best players on the tour," said her caddy, Paul Peterson, who also happens to be her husband.

His prediction looked good Thursday, as she fired a 68 to take the first-round lead in the women's richest tournament, the $400,000 Nabisco Dinah Shore.

Using a new wrinkle in her swing — cocking her wrists sooner in her backswing — Peterson clipped four strokes off par over the Mission Hills Country Club course to forge a one-shot lead over LPGA Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth and Patty Sheehan.

Coming off a rookie campaign during which she won once and collected a total of $51,930, the Arizona State product said she felt she has a chance to win the prestigious tournament, but added, "There's still 54 holes to go."

Peterson, 23, said she was trying to keep the event in the proper perspective, commenting: "I just keep telling myself, 'Hey, it's a big tournament, but it's just another tournament.'"

But she added later: "I'm really thrilled with the way it went today, since it is the Dinah Shore tournament. I keep trying to put that in the back of my mind, but it keeps popping out."

Her husband, who said he plays to a two handicap, realizes that being with his wife on the course has its negative as well as positive aspects.

"She can say things to me she couldn't to another caddy and blow off some steam," he said. "I may take more abuse than other tour caddies, but it goes with the territory.

"But sometimes I'll say something at dinner like, 'Hey, why did you hit that 6-iron into the bunker today?' I know, of course, that she didn't want to hit it into the bunker, but it's hard to stop myself.

"So it's difficult to draw the line between what happens on the course and off," he said. "That's one of the disadvantages. Still, there are more benefits than drawbacks."

Heading into the second round of the tournament, Juli Inkster, Patti Rizzo and Judy Clark were two strokes off the pace.

A group of seven — including defending champion Amy Alcott, Donna Caponi and Hollis Stacy — carded 71s.

JoAnne Carner was in another group at 72, and Nancy Lopez struggled to a 75.

Maulers bench Huther in personality clash

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Middle linebacker Bruce Huther, the Pittsburgh Maulers' leading tackler, says his benching for Sunday's game against New Orleans is "a total embarrassment" and is blaming assistant coach Joe Haering.

"He questioned my athletic ability and I questioned his coaching ability. We got into it hot and heavy," said Huther, formerly of the Dallas Cowboys and Cleveland Browns of the National Football League.

"It's funny. How many years have the Dallas Cowboys been evaluating talent? They told me I came off my best year last year and possibly was their frontrunner at middle linebacker. Then, I get here and Joe Haering questions my talent."

Huther's benching, announced Thursday, came only two weeks after he publicly criticized the Maulers' 20 player personnel moves in the first month of the season. He speculated then that the Maulers were feeling "pressure from above" — team owner Edward J. DeBartolo — to win quickly.

"I wanted to get these things out in the open because I felt it would help the team," Huther said. "A lot of my teammates came up to me and said I won a lot of respect by speaking out. They said they wanted to say the same things, but couldn't ... From that point on, they've been taking me out of games in the second quarter."

Huther, an eight-year pro, will be replaced by rookie Ernest Adams, who has been cut twice previously by the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles and by the USFL's Chicago Blitz.

"I want to wish Ernie the best of luck, because he's going to need it," Huther told The Pittsburgh Press. "He not only has to worry about overcoming New Orleans on Sunday, he has to worry about overcoming Joe Haering. That's a lot of pressure to put on a young kid.

"I can't believe this is happening. We're playing an important game Sunday, a nationally televised game (on ABC-TV) against a 5-1 team and they're taking out their leading tackler and defensive signal caller. It's a total embarassment to me."

Haering, 40, a former assistant coach at the University of Kentucky, Boston University and with the New York Jets of the NFL and the Blitz, defended the Huther benching, saying the Maulers are "trying to get our best people on the field."

Olympic dream ends for Smith

University of Texas basketball star Annette Smith discusses the leg injury that ended her season early and canceled a chance to play for the U.S. Olympic team.

By STEVE NICKLAS
Bay City Tribune

BAY CITY (AP) — The tall and slender figure that climbed out of the back seat of the mid-sized car was a more mature but yet familiar sight to the high school she was returning to visit.

The promising young girl who the coaches and teachers fondly remembered from her high school days was now a celebrated woman. Her radiant smile and flowing style still seemed the same though, as did her abiding relationship with high school basketball coach Mattie Sue Ringgold.

But as Annette Smith hobbled slowly on crutches along the concrete walkway through the front doors of Bay City High School, a long white cast that stiffened her left leg was different — a sign of injury unknown to the people of Bay City who have eagerly followed her basketball career at the University of Texas.

It has been a dazzling career. But on that Friday it came to a screeching halt on the gymnasium floor where the UT women's team practices.

"I felt one part of my knee went one way and the other part went the other way," Smith said, while slouched in an arm chair inside her favorite high school counselor's office, with the fully-casted left leg propped up.

The 5-foot 11-inch Smith, using the quickness from her center position that has drawn praise from peers such as Cheryl Miller of USC and Janet Harris of Georgia, was all alone on a fast break when the injury occurred.

"When I'm on a fast break I tend to make this hop step, where I plant both my feet and go up for a jump shot," she said. "They say I put a lot of pressure on my knees when I do that, but I never had any problem with it."

Surgery at nearby St. David's Hospital was immediately done. Some cartilage was repaired and a cracked tibula (shin bone) was mended. The plaster cast that runs the length of Smith's left leg will remain on for some six weeks, and an extensive rehabilatation program will take eight months to a year.

"When I first hurt it it pained real bad, but I didn't cry," Smith said. "The only thing that made me cry was that I couldn't play the rest of the year."

The UT women's team was ranked No.1 in the country at the end of the regular season before losing to Louisiana Tech in the NCAA playoffs. But there was another goal that Smith would miss, one that she set soon after arriving in Austin her freshman year.

The U.S. Olympic Committee had already invited her to attain the goal, but now it will be impossible. Smith said she may still get a ticket to the summer games, but it will only be a sideline pass to watch the U.S. women's basketball team compete in the Los Angeles extravaganza.

That is part of the emotional strain that Smith has had to accept with the injury, sometimes more painful than even the most extreme of physical suffering.

"I feel a lot better than I did before," Smith said. "I'm just trying to get adjusted to this cast."

As she squirmed in her chair inside the high school office, Smith was nonchalantly drawing the kind of attention that accompanied her high school career, when she led the Bay City girls' basketball team to the state finals.

Students walked by the office with big eyes, and remembering teachers offered words of greeting and inspiration.

Her younger brother, LaBradford who as a freshman was an all-district forward for the regional finalist Bay City boys' team, quietly slipped into the office.

The Smith family, which includes younger sister Audrey who picked up some of Annette's scoring while helping the injury-torn UT team through the Southwest Conference playoff games last week, has basketball blood in its veins.

"It's kind of like we grew up around it," Annette said, as the brother-sister competition nurtured their skills along.

"He says he taught me," Annette cracked about 6-foot-3-inch baby brother LaBradford, who just smiled with the confidence that his sister has exuded throughout her fabulous career.

Smith was named the Southwest Conference women's player of the year for the second straight year. The 2000-point career scorer — in only three years — has already started for the gold-medalist 1983 U.S. national team in the World University Games, where her national recognition began.

Colts face legal battles

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The legal wrangling over who rightfully claims the transplanted Colts has shifted to Indianapolis, where the team's attorneys have won a temporary restraining order barring prosecution of a Maryland lawsuit.

"We expected them to do something out there," said Baltimore City Solicitor Benjamin Brown.

"We'd actually have to see what they've filed and what kind of court order has been signed to make a determination," about what the next move will be, Brown said.

Attorneys for the Colts filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court here seeking to block court action in which Baltimore lays claim to the National Football League franchise owned by Robert Irsay.

The Indianapolis suit also asks that the court declare the existence of the Indianapolis Colts valid and declare that Baltimore authorities no longer have any jurisdiction over the team.

Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut announced last Saturday that a deal had been sealed four days earlier bringing the franchise to the Indiana capital. Moving vans appeared at the training facility in Owings Mills, Md., on the night of March 28 and hauled away everything inside except telephones and trash.

The legal tussle over the team began when Baltimore filed suit last Friday in Baltimore city Circuit Court in an effort to pave the way for an eminent domain action by the city.

Circuit Judge Robert Karwacki issued a 10-day restraining order March 30 that would prevent the team from playing football in a city other than Baltimore.

In a petition filed Monday, Joshua R. Treem, a lawyer for the Baltimore Football Club Inc., contended the case should be heard in U.S. District Court in Baltimore since the parties involved are from different states.

The Indianapolis suit was filed in federal court here on behalf of the Colts against Baltimore's mayor, city council and the Capital Improvement Board of Marion County.

The Capital Improvement Board is a defendant because, like Baltimore, it lays claim to the Colts, said William M. Evans, an attorney handling the case in Indianapolis.

"There's a conflict. We felt the best way to resolve it was to ask the federal court to decide the difference between the rights of the two claimants," Evans said.

"At least we've got these questions resolved in one court. The Baltimore Court wouldn't have jurisdiction over the Capital Improvement Board in Indianapolis," Evans said.

The temporary restraining order issued by Steckler is in effect until further order, Becker said.

The complaint is seeking a declaration that the suit in Baltimore is without merit and should be dismissed, Becker said.

Fireworks heat Cincy airspace

CINCINNATI (AP) — One of the Cincinnati Reds' newest fan attractions — the firing of fireworks at Riverfront Stadium during games — has run afoul of the federal government, which says the fireworks are being shot into controlled airspace.

San Juan Romero, a Federal Aviation Administration official, said Thursday that the company which shoots the fireworks for the Reds promised to defuse the problem by reducing the amount of powder used in the rockets. He said he expects that measure to reolve the problem, although the FAA intends to continue monitoring the fireworks.

"There's no big problem, we don't have a big problem," said Romero, air traffic manager at Greater Cincinnati International Airport. "It was resolved yesterday (Wednesday) that if the fireworks was too high and was going up into controlled airspace, they could just reduce the amount of powder and keep the fireworks from going up that high."

The FAA got involved after the pilots of three aircraft that towed banners above Riverfront Stadium during Monday's season opener complained to the FAA about the height that the fireworks reached. None of the aircraft was reported struck by the fireworks.

The Reds added the fireworks this season as a crowd-pleaser. The rockets are to be fired off to celebrate Reds' victories and home runs. The club enjoyed neither Wednesday night, losing 2-0 to the New York Mets in a rain-delayed game. The Reds beat the Mets 8-1 Monday.

Romero and other FAA officials met Wednesday with representatives of the Reds, the city and Rossi's Famous Fireworks, the company which shoots the fireworks. FAA officials manned the top of Carew Tower, a 630-foot office tower near the stadium, to monitor a fireworks test that Rossi's personnel sent up Wednesday night for the FAA.

The fireworks are permitted to be shot to a height of 600 feet above ground level, Romero said. Controlled airspace over the stadium begins at 750 feet. The fireworks monitored by the FAA reached 750-800 feet, agency spokeswoman Marjorie Kriz said.

Romero said his initial concern was that the fireworks might pose a problem for jetliners approaching or leaving Greater Cincinnati International Airport, located about eight miles from the stadium. But, he said, there is no problem. The big jets are supposed to be 2,500 feet off the ground in the stadium's vicinity.

UNM coach, AD ink contracts

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The University of New Mexico's basketball coach and athletic director said they were primarily seeking job security in new contracts they signed.

Coach Gary Colson said Thursday his new contract, which runs through June 1987, calls for a pay increase of almost 17½ percent — from $46,000 annually to $54,000.

But the length of the contract was more important than the pay increase, said Colson, 49.

"I didn't ask for any financial consideration," he said. "What I wanted was a little more security. I'm not a spring chicken anymore."

The Lobo basketball squad posted a 24-10 record this past season and received a berth in the National Invitation Tournament.

Athletic Director John Bridgers said Thursday he signed a contract, but the financial terms would be determined sometime next week. Bridgers currently makes $57,245 a year.

He also said the length of the contract was more important than a pay boost.

"I think everybody is interested in making more money, but that wasn't the big factor," Bridgers said. "I was looking for some security, some stability."

He was given a two-year revolving contract. The contract said that if he is not notified by June 30, 1985, that he is being released, the contract automatically is extended through June 1987.

The current contracts for Bridgers and Colson run through June 30.

Bears hunt mile record

AUSTIN (AP) — A national college record could be in the offing in the 1,600-meter relay when Baylor, the record holder, and several other top teams line up in the final race of the 57th Texas Relays.

Finals in the "slow heat" of the college distance medley and 3,200-meter relay were scheduled at the end of preliminaries today. Other running finals were set for Friday night and Saturday.

The relays field includes more than 2,400 athletes representing 177 schools.

Baylor won last year's 1,600-meters at the relays in 3 minutes 1.98 seconds, and returns three of four runners.

The Bears from the Southwest Conference will be challenged by another SWC team, Texas Christian, which recently ran a 3:04.82 indoors — the fastest in history — and Southern Illinois, which dipped under 3:04 in beating Baylor two weeks ago at Baton Rouge, La.

Alabama, second in the NCAA last year, and indoor winner Oklahoma also are entered in the 5:40 p.m. race Saturday.

With former world indoor record holder Billy Olson out of the pole vault because of a hurt ankle, attention has shifted to Joe Dial of Oklahoma State and Dale Jenkins of Abilene Christian. Dial won this year's NCAA indoor vault and was runner-up outdoors last year. Jenkins won the college vault at the 1983 relays with a division record of 18 feet 4 inches.

The invitational 100-meter dash matches Rod Richardson of Texas A&M, winner of this year's indoor 55-meter dash, and Bruce Davis of Baylor, who was third.

Meet director Cleburne Price, track coach of the Texas Longhorns, said the high school 100 meters Friday night should be one of the better races. Junior Roy Martin of Dallas Roosevelt has run a wind-aided 10.07, and he could be tested by Tony Jones of Houston Sam Houston, last year's relays winner and an A&M football recruit.

Cletus Clark of Houston, runner-up in the indoor 55-meter hurdles, will defend his 1983 record-setting relays victory of 13.56 in the 110-meter hurdles.

Mike Conley of Arkansas, who won the long jump and triple jump at the NCAA indoor meet last month, is favored in those events at the relays.

The featured field event is the javelin, and Einar Vilhjalmsson of Texas is the favorite. Vilhjalmsson won the NCAA last year with a meet record throw of 295-2, and now ranks No. 8 in the world.

Perez has charge reduced

SANTIAGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Atlanta Braves pitcher Pascual Perez appeared nearing the end of his three-month imprisonment Thursday as a three-judge appeals court upheld his March 23 conviction on the reduced charge of cocaine possession, the equivalent of a misdemeanor.

However, Perez was returned to the Fort San Luis prison, where he has been held since his arrest on Jan. 9, to await the possible appeal of the ruling by the prosecution to the Dominican Supreme Court.

Both sides have 10 days to file an appeal of Thursday's ruling.

The panel handed down the ruling after a 5½-hour hearing in which witnesses were recalled and evidence re-examined.

The court also upheld the $1,000 fine imposed on Perez by Criminal Court Judge Fanny Cervantes for the possession conviction. Perez has already paid the fine.

"I'm very happy," the 26-year-old right-hander told The Associated Press as he left the crowded courtroom. "I knew that my innocence would be proven once again."

The prosecution had asked the appeals court to restore the felony charge of drug trafficking and impose the minimum sentence of two years imprisonment and a $500 fine.

Prosecutor Miguel Garcia Cordero said after the appeals court ruling was announced: "I'm going to calmly consult with my pillow on what to do about this case."

Perez's defense attorneys said they would not appeal Thursday's ruling if the prosecution did not appeal. The defense had asked for an acquittal on all charges.

Perez was questioned by the three judges for more than 30 minutes and repeatedly protested his innocence during that time. The judges warned him several times to be frank with the court and tell the whole truth.

At one point, he was cautioned "not to tell tales" to the court when he insisted he had forgotten he had the envelope of cocaine in his wallet.

Perez's defense lawyers charged in open court that Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn was out to get the hard-throwing pitcher "because he (Kuhn) has serious differences with Ted Turner, owner of the Braves, who opposed his re-election."

Defense attorney Jorge Gobaira told the court that Kuhn called the Santiago district attorney's office more than 10 times to ask about the progress of the case against Perez.

He said Kuhn also tried to learn the identity of the woman who allegedly gave the cocaine to Perez in an Atlanta hotel room two days before he returned to Santiago from contract negotiations.

Perez has insisted since his arrest that the envelope was given to him by an unidentified woman in Atlanta for delivery to a third person.

He told the appeals court Thursday that he didn't remember the woman's name, although he was with her two or three of the four days he spent in Atlanta in January.

Perez said the woman gave him the envelope "as a gift."

Gobaira told the court it was because of Kuhn's interest in the case "that we have tried to show that Pascual is innocent.

"We're afraid that he's going to have problems over there, in the United States, once his legal problems in the Dominican Republic are resolved."

Kuhn imposed one-year suspensions on three players from the Kansas City Royals and Los Angeles Dodgers relief pitcher Steve Howe for drug involvement last winter. Two of the players, Willie Wilson of the Royals and Jerry Martin, now with the New York Mets, won May 15 reinstatements in arbitration. But the ruling confirmed the commissioner's disciplinary powers in drug cases.

Stock prices tumble as prime rate rises

By The Associated Press

Stock prices tumbled to their lowest level in nearly a year after major banks nationwide raised their prime lending rates, and analysts were divided over whether interest rates would climb much higher.

The hike in the prime — to 12 percent — was the second such increase in three weeks and put major banks' base corporate lending rate at his highest level since October 1982.

On the New York Stock Exchange, the closely watched Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stocks fell 18.01 points Thursday to 1,130.55 — its lowest level since last April 8.

While the rise in the prime rate had been anticipated on Wall Street, analysts said some investors apparently were fearful of further rate hikes. But other analysts said they expect interest-rate stability.

Just one day earlier, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan had said that while he believed interest rates had probably peaked, the economy appeared strong enough to withstand another small rise in the prime rate.

First National Bank of Chicago, the nation's eighth-largest commercial bank by deposits, led the way Thursday, quickly followed by second-ranked Citibank and No. 3 Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, and later by industry leader Bank of America in San Francisco.

The big banks had raised their prime rates to 11.5 percent from 11 percent on March 19.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday that its M1 measure of the nation's basic money supply rose $2.2 billion in the week ended March 26. The rise was slightly higher than analysts had expected, but it left M1 within the central bank's target for money growth.

"I think rates over the very near term are likely to remain fairly stable or perhaps decline a little bit," said Jeffrey Leeds, money market economist at Chemical Bank in New York.

Meanwhile, major U.S. retailers posted mixed sales results for March, and blamed poor weather and a late start to the Easter shopping season for sluggish sales growth compared with a year ago.

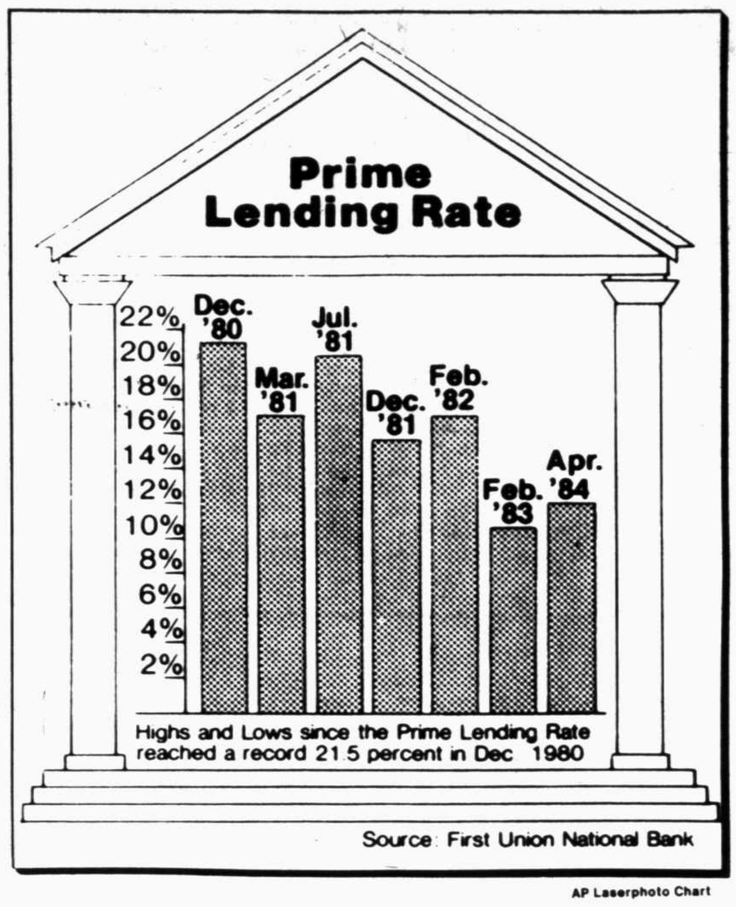

Industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported a 2.4 percent rise in sales. Third-ranked J.C. Penney Co. had a 7.7 percent gain. Sales fell 0.2 percent at No. 2 K mart Corp. and were off 0.4 percent at No. 7 Woolworth Co.

In other economic news Thursday:

— Directors of Chrysler Corp. put off a decision on whether United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber is entitled to the board seat now occupied by former UAW chief Douglas Fraser. Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca has contended that the union was never guaranteed a permanent position in the Chrysler board room.

—Shell Oil Co. said oil prices, which have been unusually stable after a decade of relentless increases, could nearly double in the next 10 years and surge more than six fold in 20 years.

— Exxon Corp. retained its top position on the Fortune 500 list of U.S. industrial companies in 1983.

Major banks raised their prime interest rate to 12 percent Thursday. Chart indicates the highs and lows since the prime rate peaked at 21.5 percent in December 1980.

Shell says oil prices may double in future

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices, unusually stable for the past year, could nearly double in the next 10 years and increase more than six-fold in 20 years, one big oil company estimates.

Analysts said Thursday that the projections by Shell Oil Co. were realistic, at least through 1993, adding that for the most part oil prices would rise only as fast as the projected inflation rate for the next decade.

"After that, it's anybody's guess," said John Lichtblau, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, a private study group financed by oil companies.

Meanwhile, Conoco Inc., another large oil company, predicted that the non-communist world would become more dependent upon oil produced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in the years ahead.

"Complacency about the U.S. energy situation is unwarranted," Conoco said in its annual forecast covering the period through the year 2000. It predicted oil prices would rise "moderately" faster than inflation in the 1990s.

Shell projected the price of Saudi Arabian Light, a grade of crude oil that is the benchmark for world prices, would remain at $29 a barrel through 1986, then rise to $52 a barrel in 1993 and $192 a barrel by 2005.

Shell's projection was made as part of the strategic forecasts the company makes twice a year for internal use by its management. But it was made public as part of an offering statement distributed Wednesday to shareholders in connection with a $58-a-share bid by the Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Companies for the 30.6 percent of Shell stock it does not already own.

Shell tempered the projection by noting that planning forecasts in general, "and the crude oil price assumption in particular, are considered highly uncertain."

Oil prices have been notoriously volatile over the past decade, rising from about $2 a barrel in 1972 to about $12 by late 1973, $32 in 1979 and peaking at $34 in 1981. Last year, OPEC cut the price of oil to $29, its first reduction ever, and limited oil production within the cartel in an attempt to hold prices from falling even further.

Analysts noted that just a few years ago, before a worldwide economic slowdown and a global oil glut, there were widespread projections that oil prices would reach $55 by 1985.

Under the Shell outlook, oil prices would keep pace with inflation through 1990, then outpace inflation at an average annual rate of 5.1 percent through 2005.

Occidental oil stock soars as result of takeover talk

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — David Murdock, a director and the largest shareholder of Occidental Petroleum Corp., met into the evening with Chairman Armand Hammer and other directors, sources told the Los Angeles Times, as the oil company's stock price rose in the fourth straight day of heavy trading spurred by takeover talk on Wall Street.

The meeting at Occidental's headquarters here apparently was not a regularly scheduled board meeting but is believed to have involved matters that led to recent public speculation about a possible Murdock move to take control of Occidental from Hammer, the 85-year-old executive who built the oil and chemical giant.

Occidental's spokesman did not return several calls from The Times Wednesday.

Murdock, who runs a private investment empire from an office across the intersection from Occidental's headquarters, also was unavailable for comment.

The financier has kept silent about his intentions, although late last week he disclosed to the Securities and Exchange Commission that he had increased his stake in Occidental's common stock to 5 percent from 3.6 percent.

When Murdock joined the Occidental board in February 1982, he agreed not to acquire more than 5 percent of Occidental's stock for 10 years or until Hammer died or Murdock failed to be renamed to the company's board and its executive committee.

The company has not yet issued its proxy statement for its May 21 annual meeting. The proxy will show management's slate of nominees for the board.

Survival of steel industry crucial to economy

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The three Democratic presidential candidates all agree that survival of the U.S. steel industry is crucial to the nation's economic health, and all say their policies would achieve that goal.

But there were few details provided Thursday night in the candidates' debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters where each appealed for votes in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary.

Gary Hart, in his only direct question to Walter F. Mondale, asked the former vice president what he would do to help the steel industry.

"I would do for steel what we did for Chrysler," said Mondale, referring to federal loan guarantees adopted during the Carter administration in which Mondale served. "I helped save 600,000 jobs and restore this auto industry to prosperity and I am proud of it."

Mondale has criticized Hart for voting against that loan guarantee.

Beyond that, Mondale said, "The most key question is bringing those (federal budget) deficits down" to help steel and all other industries. And he said "we need a realistic international trade policy" to ensure fair competition for U.S. firms.

Mondale also cited an instance in which Carter administration officials participated in negotiations that helped Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Co. avoid closing as "an example for the future. I helped work out an arrangement where they got back on their feet. Over 1,000 jobs were saved. That is something I stood up for."

Hart was asked by moderator Elizabeth Drew of The New Yorker magazine which industries he would work to revitalize as president.

Exxon tops 1983 Fortune 500 list

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil companies dominated the 1983 Fortune 500, with Exxon Corp. leading the list of industrial rankings for a second consecutive year and four other oil companies making the top 10.

Exxon is still No. 1, but its sales dropped by $8.6 billion to $88.6 billion, according to the list released Thursday by Fortune magazine. Not far behind was General Motors Corp., whose sales soared by $14.6 billion to $74.6 billion, widening its lead over Mobil Corp., No. 3, by $20 billion.

Ford's sales jumped $7.4 billion, and the company replaced Texaco Inc. in the No. 4 slot. Texaco fell out of the top five for the first time since 1974, as International Business Machines Corp. moved up a notch from No. 6.

Behind sixth-place Texaco was No. 7 Du Pont Co.; No. 8, Standard Oil Co. (Indiana); and No. 9, Standard Oil Co. of California.

General Electric Co. returned to the Top 10 as No. 10 after a two-year hiatus.

By profit, IBM was first, with $5.5 billion, followed by Exxon's nearly $5 billion.

Here are the Top 10, followed by sales and 1982 position:

1—Exxon, $88.56 billion (1).
2—GM, $74.58 billion (2).
3—Mobil, $54.61 billion (3).
4—Ford, $44.45 billion (5).
5—IBM, $40.18 billion (6).
6—Texaco, $40.07 billion (4).
7—Du Pont, $35.38 billion (8).
8—Standard Oil (Indiana), $27.63 billion (10).
9—Standard Oil of California, $27.34 billion (7).
10—GE, $26.8 billion (11).

The biggest sales increase — 114.3 percent — was by James River Corp., the paper company, No. 209. Coachmen was second with 80.4 percent.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 252 taxable funds)		36	9.15	8.98

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 252 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased by $125.2 million to $166.6 billion for the week ended April 4, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 9.15% from 9.03%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.98% from 8.89%. The funds' average maturity increased one day to 36 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Average yields of taxable money funds continued their upward trend this week. The 7-day average yield is at its highest level since mid-October, 1982. Assets of taxable money funds available to individual investors rose $378.8 million while institutional fund assets decreased $504 million. The institutional asset outflow may be due to the end of quarter distributions to beneficiaries of the trusts managed by these funds. Tax-free money fund assets continue to grow, this week by $710 million to bring their asset total to $21.3 billion."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate-adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Loving, Cognac Field gains significant producer

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

MEG Energy Inc., San Angelo, has drilled another significant well in the Cognac (Delaware Sand) field in Loving County.

The No. 2 San Angelo Bank opens a new zone (Cherry Canyon) in a field which already produces from as many as 12 zones. Most zones in the field will probably produce enough oil to be classified as oil wells with a high GOR. A pipeline is in place in the new field and gas is being sold to Intratex.

MEG now has six wells in the field and MR Petroleum, Monahans, has two. MEG,MR and Exxon are the leaseholders in the field.

Ted Swiderski, vice president MEG, reports that his firm will spud another two wells within two days and will add a well per month to the field until it is defined.

New wildcats

Three new wildcats were staked, according to the Texas Railroad Commission records. They are:

— 1-M Wallace, located 1,980 ft. from the south line and 660 ft. from west line of section 49, blk S, H&GN survey, 15 miles southwest of Clairemont, in Kent County.

— No. 1 Exilde, located 1,980 ft. north line and 2,080 ft. from east line of Section 4, Block 34, T&P survey, 7.5 miles south of Garden City, in Glasscock County.

— No. 1 Wolf, located 660 ft. from north line and 957 ft. from west line of Section 30, Block 25, H&TC survey, 2 miles west of Vincent in Howard County.

The No. 2 Wolf will be 7,600 ft. to test above the Penn. in the Vincent N. (Penn) field. Hudson Reserves is the operator.

Transierra Exploration, Midland, is operator for the No. 1 Exilde, to be drilled to 11,000 ft. to test the Spraberry, Strawn and Dean. The well is in virgin territory on a new structure predicated on seismic and sub-surface data.

TXO, Midland, plans to test the Ellenburger with its 7,600 ft. 1-M Wallace. The well will create a new area of interest as it trys to move a 1 mile, southeast extension of the North Polar field. It is in an area of typical Eastern Shelf geology with little well control.

Operators hope to prove oil in an eroded Ellenburger zone, but fear the zone may be low or too eroded to produce. It is a structure play and greater hope to gain structure from the North Polar field.

In December 1982, Maralo, Midland, completed 8 wells 1 mile to the northwest of the drill site.

Replacement well

Phillips Petroleum Co. has completed a gas well in the Puckett (Ellenburger) field for 6.1 Mmcfd. Regretably, the well was not an extension or improved definition of the field, but a replacement well for a well that developed problems. The well was the 2 Rosa A. "We are happy for the successful completion," Phillips informed the Reporter-Telegram, but we would have been happier if the well could have made a larger impact."

Texas Crossover to join two major pipelines

LOMBARD, IL — MidCon Corp. has anounced that its largest interstate transmission subsidiary, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) plans for the construction and operation of a 185-mile pipeline joining its two major pipeline systems.

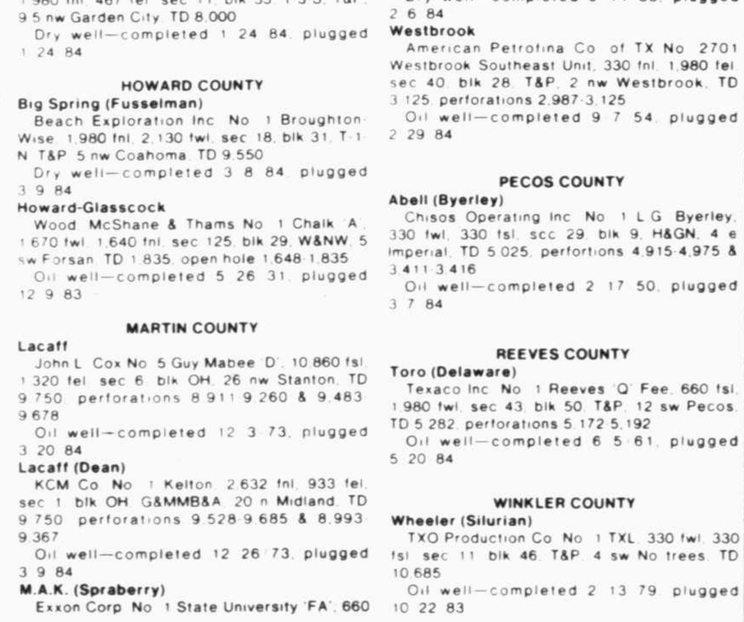

Called the "Texas Crossover", the 24-inch line will run from St. Jo, Texas to Atlanta, Texas, and have an initial capacity of 200 million cubic feet of gas per day. It will cost approximately $87 million.

William C. Terpstra, president of Natural, said the pipeline is a cost-effective way to make the most efficient use of Natural's existing facilities, thereby bolstering the company's position as a low-cost gas supplier.

Terpstra explained, "The Texas Crossover will connect the two main lines of our pipeline system near the south end, giving us greater operating flexibility, reducing fuel and transportation costs, providing access to new gas supply areas, and further increasing our ability to manage our gas supply. These benefits will greatly contribute to Natural's ongoing efforts to maintain its low city gate price, currently the lowest of the major interstate pipelines.

In addition, with subsequent expansions, the line could enable us to transport larger volumes of gas for others from the Anadarko, Rocky Mountain and Williston Basin gas-producing areas of the United States as well as from Canada."

Natural Gas Pipeline Co.., an interstate gas transmission compay, operates a 12,750-mile pipeline network supplying gas to 49 utility and municipal customers serving 12 million consumers in a nine-state area. It is asubsidiary of MidCon Corp., based in Lombard, Ill.

Six major oil firms settle 11-year-old conspiracy suit

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Six major oil companies paid Florida $3.5 million in settlements in an 11-year-old antitrust suit alleging that they tried to create a nationwide fuel shortage to force up the price of gasoline, the state attorney general's office has reported.

Some of the money could be returned to customers, but it's unclear how they would be identified, said Don North, a spokesman for Florida Attorney General Jim Smith.

The companies said they were not admitting guilt in settling the case.

The settlement was paid by Standard Oil Co. of California, Phillips Petroleum Co., Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, Sun Co. Inc., Cities Service Co. and Union Oil Co. of California.

Exxon Corp., Gulf Oil Corp., Mobil Oil Corp., Shell Oil Co. and Texaco Inc. are still involved in litigation.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Tenneco announces oil discovery

HOUSTON — Tenneco Oil Co., on behalf of itself and partners LAXMO (London and Scottish Marine Oil) Ltd. and Conoco Petroleum Ltd., announced a significant oil discovery offshore The Republic of Gabon.

Tenneco said the Obando Marin P1 wildcat flowed at a daily rate of 2,400 barrels of 36 API gravity oil from Upper Cretaceous sands between 8,632 and 8,678 feet through a 32/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,131 pounds per square inch.

Tenneco said its affiliate, Tenneco Oil Co. of Gabon Inc., plans additional drilling upon completion of evaluation of this test, the first drilled by the group in the 250,000-acre block acquired in 1982.

The well, drilled to a total depth of 11,896 feet, is in 160 feet of water 20 miles offshore about 30 miles southwest of Port Gentil, Tenneco said.

Tenneco, as operator, holds a 50 percent working interest in the well while LASMO and Conoco each have 25 percent interests.

Tenneco Oil is a major operating unit of Tenneco Inc., headquartered in Houston.

The man who succeeded him, Brig. Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, pledged when he was sworn in Thursday to keep the military subordinate to civilian rule.

In neighboring Nicaragua, special U.S. envoy Harry Shlaudeman ended a one-week tour through Central America by saying that Cuba — which suuports Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government — is the main stumbling block to peace in the region.

"There are many factors that have prevented peace from being achieved in Central America," Shlaudeman told a news conference Thursday before returning to Washington. "But we reiterate that Cuban interference. ...is the principal obstacle to the achievement of peace in the region."

Also Thursday, the opposition Nicaraguan neewspaper La Prensa failed to publish for the 23d time in two years because government censors rejected certain articles.

Co-publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro Barrios said one artcile dealt with Deputy Interior Minister Luis Carrion, who ordered Nicaraguan police to comply with court orders to release prisoners. There have been complaints that police often ignore jail release orders signed by judges.

Nicaraguan Supreme Court President Roberto Arguello Hurtado said Wednesday the government will have to end restrictions on the press and on open meetings if Nov. 4 elections for president, vice president and a legislature are to be truly free. Opposition parties have said the government does not plan for the voting to be free and will use it to strengthen Sandinista power.

Nicaragua imposed a state of emergency law on March 15, 1982 following rebel attacks from Honduran and Costa Rican bases.

Explosions rock several Beirut neighborhoods

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's warring factions fought their heaviest battles of the past 10 days in and around Beirut early today as the government assembled a 2,000-member police force intended to separate the combatants.

Explosions rocked several Beirut neighborhoods, including the old commercial district, the port and the suburbs. Flares illuminated the night skies and ambulances raced through the streets with wailing sirens.

Four people were killed and 21 wounded in overnight duels with artillery, mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns, police said.

Despite the escalation of fighting, local radio stations said President Amin Gemayel hoped that planned summit talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus next week would help him stabilize a cease-fire and form a national coalition government to introduce political reforms.

Syria, a longtime supporter of the anti-government militias in Lebanon, has been working with Gemayel's administration on an increasingly close basis since the multinational force withdrew from Beirut.

Besides the fighting along the "green line" separating Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem west and in nearby hills, heavy battles also raged during the nigth around the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb, police said.

The hilltop town controls the mountain routes to Gemayel's presidential palace and the Defense Ministry compound on the hills east of the capital.

The army's 8th Brigade and Syrian-backed Druse rebels accused each other of mounting overnight ground assaults to improve their positions, using field artillery and tank cannons to back up the attempted advances.

The state radio and private stations said a military committee representing the army and all the warring factions was trying to negotiate a cease-fire.

The committee, mandated last month by Lebanon's factional leaders during a conference in Switzerland, has agreed to the key points of a new disengagement plan which calls for combatants to pull back 300 to 700 yards from fronts along the green line and in the central mountains east of the capital.

The buffer zones would be patrolled by Lebanese police and army reserve members.

Government sources said Gemayel's administration has ordered the police department to put 2,000 officers on standby to patrol buffer zones.

The sources also said the government was expected to ask France to increase the number of French observers to help in the disengagement process. Forty French commandos have been policing the main mid-city crossings since last Thursday as truce observers.

Lebanese news photographers staged a one-day strike today to protest Thursday's beating of a Christian colleague, Assad Mashalani, by local militiamen in west Beirut. Mashalani was in the hospital today with severe bruises on his face and body.

On Thursday, the Higher Shiite Moslem Council in Beirut urged the U.N. Security Council to pass a resolution demanding an Israeli withdrawal from all Lebanese territory occupied since a June 1982 invasion.Attacks on Israeli forces occupying Lebanon's predominantly Shiite south have occurred almost daily.

Also, the U.S. Embassy announced that $300,000 in U.S. aid was being granted to help 12,000 displaced and needy Druse and Moslem families in Beirut's southern suburbs and the Chouf Mountains.

American veterans want information on MIAs

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A delegation from the Vietnam Veterans of America is in Cambodia seeking information about Americans listed as missing since the Vietnam war, according to the official Cambodian news agency in Phnom Penh.

A well-informed diplomatic source in Bangkok said today the group had quietly gone to Vietnam's capital, Hanoi, on March 28 before proceeding to Cambodia.

The private eight-member delegation, led by VVA President Robert O. Muller, arrived in Phnom Penh on Thursday and was met by officials of Cambodia's Foreign Ministry, the SPK news agency said in its report, seen in Bangkok today. No further details were given.

The source, asking not to be identified, said the same group had visited Hanoi about two years ago seeking information on U.S. troops listed as missing in action, known as MIAs. They also discussed Amerasians — children of American-Vietnamese parentage — and Agent Orange, a herbicide U.S. forces used during the Vietnam war, the source said. Many veterans blame the effects of the herbicide for chronic health problems.

The source said he had no information on the current trip. He said he knew of no other private groups that had gone to Phnom Penh to discuss MIAs.

U.S. military performance in Grenada to be probed

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A member of the House Armed Services Committee asked the panel yesterday to investigate charges in a report on the U.S. military peformance in Grenada that elite units botched their missions, too many helicopters were lost and the Pentagon played politics in the deployment of troops.

The report, released yesterday, was prepared by a Senate military staff aide, William S. Lind, who criticized the Army for its battlefield tactics and, in some instances, for "breakdown of discipline."

Saying the report contained "many facts which I have personally corroborated," Rep. James Courter, R-N.J., asked the chairman of his Armed Services Committee, Melvin Price, D-Ill., to have the panel investigate the charges.

Lind, a part-time military aide to Sen. Gary Hart, D-Col., and a defense consultant, is a member of the Military Reform Caucus, a bipartisan congressional group that advocates maneuver over attrition warfare, emphasizing speed, deception and infilitration. Courter, who is also chairman of the New Jersey Reagan re-election committee, heads the House reform caucus membership.

Lind's report, based on what he said were interviews with participants in the operation and other defense sources, claimed that the original plan of using Navy and Marine units for a quick assault to isolate the Cubans near the Point Salines Airport from the capital and the rest of the island was overruled by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Instead, he said, the joint chiefs "demanded that all four services be involved — just like the Iran rescue mission."

Role in assassination plot denied

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, in charge of security at Manila's airport the day Benigno Aquino was assassinated there, said today he was aware of plots to "liquidate" Aquino six months before the opposition leader was killed.

Ver, testifying before a fact-finding board appointed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos, said intelligence reports showed the assassination was planned by communists and not supporters of Marcos.

The general, Marcos' closest political advisor, was in charge of the arrangements for Aquino's return from three years of voluntary exile in the United States.

Aquino, a former senator and Marcos' chief political rival, was killed Aug. 21 while under military guard seconds after he left a China Air Lines plane.

The government said he was shot by alleged communist agent Rolando Galman, who himself was immediately shot and killed by soldiers.

Aquino's family and supporters accused the military of involvement in the assassination, and there have been suggestions Aquino was killed by one of his guards.

Ver took the stand today in a hearing room jammed with about 400 people. Scores of people left outside pushed and shouted trying to get in.

Ver said he received information as early as February 1983 of plans to "liquidate" Aquino upon his return. The plotters included Aquino's personal enemies and communist rebels who wanted to discredit the government, he said.

He said under questioning that he had "no knowledge" of anyone in Marcos' administration "who may have motives to assassinate Sen. Aquino."

The military first heard of the plots from an agent who overheard two unidentified men drinking and talking in a restaurant "about a plan to liquidate Sen. Aquino," Ver said.

Reports from a military agent planted in the communist movement indicated communists wanted Aquino killed. Ver said the military had rated the informant as "usually reliable and the information itself probably true."

Ver said this why the government warned Aquino a few weeks before he came back to delay his return for a month so it could apprehend the plotters. Mrs. Marcos delivered the warning to Aquino during a visit to New York in May.

The military first planned to send Aquino back to Taiwan, where his flight originated, if he came without proper travel documents, the general said.

But Ver said he changed the order a few hours before Aquino arrived and ordered that Aquino be arrested and taken to a suburban army camp where Marcos previously had jailed him for nearly eight years on subversion and murder charges.

Ver said this was to better protect him from plotters and also because a military court had reaffirmed a verdict that Aquino die before a firing squad.

Group wants reforms

CAPETOWN, South Africa (AP) — A government commission is urging sweeping reforms for this white-ruled nation's judicial system and says its segregated courts are "morally indefensible."

The Hoexter Commission, appointed in 1979 to review the judicial system, presented its conclusions Thursday to Parliament. Among them were recommendations to change South Africa's "pass law," to try whites and blacks in the same courts, and form a multiracial judicial advisory board.

The commission said violations of the law requiring blacks to carry passes allowing them in white neighborhoods put "non-criminals" into the prisons, which are filled at 46 percent above capacity.

The findings said special courts for blacks were "obsolete."

Blacks go to special courts for violations of the pass law and other laws aimed at separating races. However, whites appear in regular courts when charged under laws requiring them to carry passes to enter areas designated for blacks.

This is the first time since the ruling National Party took power in 1948 that a government-authorized study has urged changes in the pass law and said all races should be subject to one judicial system.

Woman has 25th child

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A woman who gave birth to her 25th child this week says her husband sold 23 of their children to other families, the state-run news agency ANOP reports.

The report quoted Corina da Costa Braz, 38, as saying two of her children are in West Germany and that one, a 6-year-old boy, lives with her and her husband at their home in Sao Bartolomeu de Messines. She does not know where the other children are, ANOP said Thursday.

The woman said her farm laborer husband, Jose Coelho da Silva, sold their children for about $7,500 each, ANOP said.

The women was reported to be in a hospital after giving birth to a daughter Wednesday, but her doctor could not be reached for comment on the report.

Britain may quit group

LONDON (AP) — Britain, joining ranks with the United States, says it is may quit UNESCO unless the organization improves its operations and depoliticizes its activities.

The United States said last year it would leave the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at the end of 1984, but that it might change reconsider if the 161-member group changed its policies. The Americans complained of an anti-Western bias in the agency.

Britain said in a letter to Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, UNESCO's director-general, that it would review its position on membership by the end of this year.

The letter from Timothy Raison, minister for overseas development, made public Thursday, said "it will become increasingly difficult to justify our membership of UNESCO unless we can point to real improvement in its operations."

A four-member team from the U.S. General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, is reviewing UNESCO's fiscal and management policies.

Liberians sentenced

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Thirteen Liberians have been sentenced to death for plottinga coup, the third such conspiracy reported since Samuel K. Doe came to power by the same means four years ago.

The defendants were charged with high treason, murder and mutiny following the discovery of the plot in this small West African country last November.

Execution is by firing squad in Liberia.

Doe, then a noncommissioned army officer, came to power April 12, 1980, through a military uprising that toppled the civilian government of President William Tolbert.

Country songwriter finds it 'hard to toot your own horn'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

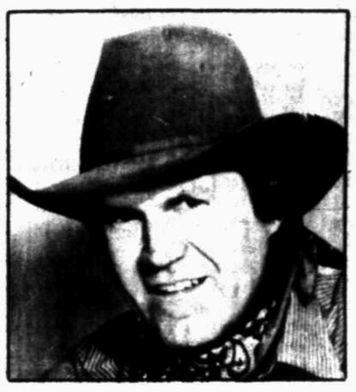

Songwriters often remain unknown. Country music listeners remember who sang "I'm Just an Old Chunk of Coal (But I'm Going to Be a Diamond Someday)," "Ride Me Down Easy," "I Couldn't Be Me Without You" and "You Asked Me To." They know these No. 1 hits were recorded by John Anderson, Johnny Rodriquez, Waylon Jennings and Bobby Bare.

However, it takes a country music aficionado to know who wrote them.

Billy Joe Shaver knows. This songwriter turned singer-songwriter, who will be at Leo's Oyster Bar Saturday, has acquired a few knocks trying to explain the origin of these as well as other country songs to fans who approach him after a performance.

Laughing on the phone Shaver says, "I used to get upset and go get drunk, but now I say 'Thank you.'

"The thing is when you get up there and you go to singing these songs and people come up to you and say, 'I sure do like the way you did that Tom T. Hall song,' or 'I like the way you did that Bobby Bare song,' they don't really realize that you've written the songs. It's kinda hard to get up there and toot your own horn and tell everybody that you have.

Billy Joe Shaver

"I FEEL LIKE I do the songs as good or better than some of the guys that recorded them, but during the time that they recorded them I couldn't have done them that good because I wasn't concentrating on the entertainment part of it.

"It wasn't difficult for me to accept it until I started concentrating on entertaining myself in front of other people. I've been doing that all along, just kinda playing around here and there, I've done it all my life.

"Then I kinda got where I said, 'It's about time for me to get a little credit for this and that. I want to go out and I want to play in front of people cause I'm real good at that too.'"

When the fans find out Shaver is singing his own material, their attitude changes.

"I gain a lot of fans as I go along. The more exposure I get, the more fans I get. All the tunes that I do on my shows, are all original material songs that I've written."

Shaver will be bringing his music to Midland Saturday for a one-night stand at Leo's Oyster Bar and two nights, April 13-14, at the Chicken Ranch between Midland and Odessa. Showtime at Leo's is around 10 p.m. Ticket price is $5.

His interest in music dates back almost to his beginnings, when he started singing at age 5. He compares it to whistling; it "was just something a kid picks up."

HIS FIRST stage was in a general store.

"I lived with my grandmother. My mother and father split up actually before I was born, and my mother went on to another town and got work. My father also left, and my grandmother raised me. She raised me on her old age pension in Corsicana, Texas.

"Down the road from us was a general store where my grandmother would get credit. Lot of times her check wouldn't come in on time and we'd go down there and my grandmother would ask the lady there if she'd give an extension on her credit.

"The lady knew that I sang and she would say, 'Yeah. If you can get that kid to sing me a song or two.'

"I thought I was really doing something. They'd stand me up on a cracker barrel and I'd just sing my heart out. I sang 'Pins and Needles in My Heart,' and stuff like that. We didn't have a radio but what I could hear of it I would sing that part and then whatever else I didn't know, I'd just make it up. I guess that's where I kinda got started writing and singing."

Chuckling again, Shaver admits that from singing on a cracker barrell he went "on to bigger and better things."

HIS GRANDMOTHER died, and Shaver went to live with his mother.

"My mother, she was a honky-tonk girl, she worked at honky tonks and stuff. As a matter of fact one of my tunes, 'Honky Tonk Heroes,' I wrote about a place where my mother and an old gal named Blanche used to run a place there in Waco called Green Gables. Waylon Jennings did a whole album of tunes called 'Honky Tonk Heroes' of the songs that I'd written and in that one particular song it mentions the Green Gables if somebody wanted to catch up on it there.

"But when I was 12 I went on to Waco where my mother, she got religion, and married a Bohemian fellow. I lived there with them for a little while. During that time I got to writing poetry in school and an English teacher encouraged me a lot."

After a stint in the Navy, Shaver returned to Waco to work at Cameron Mills, a salt mill there. It was at this point that his life took an unexpected twist.

"I got my right hand hung in a machine and it pulled a couple of fingers off of it (three). It was kind of hard for me to get the thing back moving again for about six months. They had to put electrodes and things on it. I finally got it moving again and I decided I wanted to learn how to play a guitar then. I was about 26. So I started writing songs and playing guitar."

IN 1966, Shaver went to Nashville. His break came in 1969 when he met Bobby Bare who hired him to work for his company.

"Of course, I went on from there to writing a lot of songs. Kris Kristofferson did a tune of mine — 'Good Christian Soldier' — and Bobby Bare and Tom T. Hall did my first ones, the first songs that I ever recorded.

"I've had songs recorded by over, I guess, 30 major artists. Willie Nelson just recently did a whole album of my tunes and it'll be out soon. Just a gang of folks have done 'em and I've been real lucky."

Now 44 years old, if Shaver's life were the way he wanted it to be today, he'd have "a hit song and a bus," he says, laughing again. Then, his voice takes on a more serious tone as he says, "I'd like to have a hit tune out by myself and I could take care of the rest of it. That's about all I want, really."

He doesn't view the current trend in crossover music as a problem.

"I think it's probably all getting better. As far as putting a label on it, I think it's a little bit harder now to do that, it's all gotton kinda mixed in together. Things they're calling country now, couple two or three years ago would have been kinda labeled as rock'n'roll. And again there're some things in country that to me are just a little too sweet or a little too slick, but then that's only my opinion."

HE DOESN'T like to label his music.

"It's probably my ego speaking but I couldn't hardly label it. I'd just like to say that it's good. I remember when Creedence Clearwater Revival arrived on the scene, nobody really put a label on them. But yet they had their distinctive style, it actully couldn't be labeled it was just them. So I'd rather think it would just be considered good music and forget about those labels."

Local races have something for everyone

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

From dull to exciting, from ho-hum to eye-popping, there's something to satisfy the tastebuds of every voter in the citywide elections Saturday.

For voters who prefer a race with a hot, spicy flavor, there's the contested mayor's race or the one for Place 5 on the City Council. For voters who like a sensibly-seasoned dish, there's the contested races for Midland Independent School District Board and Greenwood school board. And for voters who prefer no special flavorings there are the uncontested races, such as for Midland College or Midland County Hospital Board.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. for voters to pick from the menu.

Heading up the ballot will be the City Council races with the mayor's battle on top. Incumbent Mayor G. Thane Akins is seeking re-election to a third two-year term, standing on

Odessans will also go to polls Saturday

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Voters will go to the polls Saturday to pick a mayor, two city council and school board members, and three junior college district representatives.

Mayor Bob Bryant, 51, is seeking a third term. His opponent, John Minor, 32, wants the incumbent's place at the head of the city council which voted to terminate him in November 1983.

Minor was the municipal court administrator for 10 years before a struggle for control of the warrants division left him, a part-time municipal judge and three warrant officers out of a job.

The warrants division is now part of the police department. Before his termination, Minor filed complaints that led to the arrest of City Manager John Harrison and Fiscal Services Manager John Muser. One warrant officer, Pat Trout, remains under investigation by the FBI.

Bryant has run on his record with the city, starting on the tail-end of the last boom and continuing through the recessionary periods in the city's economy. Minor, a computer consultant, has based his campaign on making the city government more accountable to the public and reorganization of the management structure to cut "bureaucratic fat."

Another interesting race pits incumbent Thomas Perkins against David Godoy and David R. Narbaez for the District 1 City Council seat. Perkins, a black man, was elected during the city's first election since the change to single-member districts.

One of his opponents in the 1982 election, Jake David Dominguez, is the same man running this year with the last name of Godoy after making the change legal.

Incumbent Councilman Dick Sivalls is not seeking re-election to his District 2 Spot. Running to fill this spot are Susan Gibson, ex-wife of State Rep. Jay Gibson, and John "Nicky" Sheets, chairman of the Odessa Crime Stoppers citizen board. Both have platforms calling for industrial diversification and cooperation between Midland Odessa.

Four residents are seeking Position 6 on the Ector County Independent School District Board of Trustees vacated by Shirley Huffaker. The quartet gives voters a choice of real estate investor David Stice, attorney Jim Nelson, oil man Barry Hogans or insurance salesman A.C. "Clayton" Edwards.

Sam Gipson, currently holder of the Place 2 position on the school board, faces opposition from accountant Roger Ellis.

Of the three junior college district board spots, two have only one candidate. Incumbent Place 7 Boardmember Joe Zant Jr. is running unopposed for another term. Dr. Radames Martinez Jr. has no challenger in his bid to replace Dr. Wilbur Green as the Place 7 representative.

Bill Saunders, an Odessa High School coach, is opposing incumbent Art. G. Green for Place 8.

The city is hosting the joint election, with voters casting ballots for the city, school and junior college elections at one of 22 voting places across the community. The voting locations are posted at city, school and Odessa College offices.

Odessa fans cheer Home Sports Channel

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Sports fans are cheering the arrival of Home Sports Channel, giving the city's cable TV viewers this option before Midland.

At the forefront of this success story is cable activist and baseball fanatic Eric Evenson, who has been pushing Community Cablevision of Odessa and the City Council to improve cable TV service for nearly a year.

Local dissatisfaction grew after northeast Odessa went without cable viewing over the Thanksgiving holidays, much to the chagrin of football fanatics.

General Manager Terry Arnold and other Community Cablevision representatives have been called before a critical City Council to explain the problems. While much of the criticism leveled at Arnold and the cable franchise dealt with service, many of those unhappy kept calling for more programming — particularly sports.f

All Odessa cable subscribers will get a free preview today through Tuesday. Anyone wanting to continue the sports channel will be expected to sign up for the special service, which will cost $11 more each month.

Texas sports will be featured on HSC. Southwest Conference events, Texas Rangers and Houston Astros baseball, Dallas Mavericks basketball, tennis and boxing will make up the bulk of the programming.

"Everybody in town's tickled pink," insisted Evenson, who has already signed up for HSC. "A lot of people in town, they got more excited than I did."

But Evenson is a large part of the reason HSC has come to Odessa. He has flooded city hall and Community Cablevision's switchboards with calls, gathered support and collected information on cable companies from across the country in hopes of convincing the city and Arnold's company changes needed to be made.

"We should give Eric some credit," said Arnold, "The survey just confirmed what Eric said." A recently completed survey of viewer tastes found they wanted more sports programs.

Understandably enthused with the concession, Evenson said, "The city council couldn't even get them to put more channels on and I did."

Because of the improvements the company has made, Evenson said he would ease up on the cable franchise. "They're giving us what we want." But he still supports the formation of a citizen board to watch the company.

"If we had a board, it might not take as long," he said. Boards formed in other towns have met with varied levels of success.

"Usually Midland gets these things first," said Evenson, "but Odessa did this time."

Subscribers paying the $11 extra will receive HSC and USA Network. Added to the $8.50 monthly charge for the basic cable, viewers' bills will total $19.50. The total package available in Odessa, which would also include a 12-channel tier of different programming, will cost $24.50 per month.

Star Trek's chief engineer 'beams down' to Odessa

By LINDA ANDERSON
Staff Writer

ODESSA — James Doohan presented a program at Odessa College Thursday night.

OK, so the name might be unfamiliar to many, but to those addicted to "Star Trek," a visit from Doohan — better known as Lt. Cmdr. Montgomery "Scotty" Scott, chief engineering officer of the Star Ship Enterprise — is an opportunity not to be missed.

Star Trek, a science fiction television series of the late 60s and early 70s, has not only spawned two (soon to be three) highly successful theatrical movies, but has also inspired devotion in millions of fans who still consider the program television's finest hour.

Doohan's presentation, in Odessa College's Main Auditorium, included a film on the Space Shuttle Columbia, which he narrated for NASA; "The Trouble With Tribbles," one of the most popular episodes from the television series; and a fan-pleasing reel of Star Trek "bloopers," or outtakes from the filming of the program.

Casually dressed in a pull-over shirt and sweater, Doohan chatted about the three films he was presenting with his talk, about the Star Trek series and movies and about himself with the enthusiastic crowd.

Doohan said he is interested in science and is very proud of the film he narrated for NASA. He described the space shuttle as "the greatest engineering feat in the world — and it's all yours."

Following the showing of the blooper reel, Doohan invited questions from the near-capacity audience.

The third Star Trek movie, "In Search of Spock," will open June 1 in about 1700-1800 theatres across the country, he said, adding that some "consider it to be the best we've done.

"I haven't seen it yet, but I know it's a great script. There's not one page where we didn't have a lot of action."

Doohan was questioned about the fate of Mr. Spock, a popular Star Trek character who "died" in the final minutes of "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan." While Doohan did not give away the plot of the third movie, he said, "Some secretaries who work for some other people at Paramount (movie studios where Star Trek movies are filmed) called the Star Trek office to say they had seen Leonard Nimoy (actor who plays the character of Spock) directing with his ears on!"

When asked about the possibility of Star Trek being reborn as a television series, Doohan said, "I would say the chances of that are just about zilch because they're making too much money on the movies!"

He said people connected with the series "had no idea Star Trek would be the hit it became. We did know we had good scripts. Star Trek has some super kind of magic with it and nobody knows what it is. People just love it — and love it all over the world. Certainly in 54 countries."

Doohan, who has been in the entertainment field nearly 40 years and who has hopes of one day playing King Lear, said typecasting is "the terrible thing Hollywood does to you. Once they see you in one role you become typecast because they don't believe you can do any other roles — no matter what you did before."

The series Star Trek ran on network television three seasons. The first of its 79 episodes was filmed in May 1966. Doohan said the series, which is still popular 14 years after the last original episode was shown, was "kicked off (regular network schedule) because of Nielson ratings. Which tells you something about Nielson ratings."

Doohan, whose Star Trek character is from Scotland and speaks with a broad brogue, closed his talk with a Scottish toast, which he translated: "Nobody could possibly be as good as we are. If they were that good they would have to be dead."

Bell's latest request for hearing postponed

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell's latest request to charge customers for individual local telephone calls has been postponed until Texans have their say about the proposal.

Public Utility Commission Hearing Examiner Shelia Bailey postponed the hearing from May 14 to Sept. 24 despite the objection of a Bell lawyer who said he's tired of hearing consumer organization lawyers stand up and say, "Me too, me too, me too."

Attorney Jon Dee Lawrence, who has tangled with consumer groups for years, said, "Every time (Consumers Union attorney Carol) Barger and the public counsel open their mouths the public interest comes flowing out," but when company lawyers speak, "corporate greed" comes out.

"Every time (Consumers Union attorney Carol) Barger and the public counsel open their mouths the public interest comes flowing out."

— Bell Attorney John Dee Lawrence

"That is bushwah and they (consumer advocates) know it," he said at the Thursday hearing.

The latest battle is over Bell's request to allow local measured service as an option. Under the proposal, customers could choose to pay for local calls on the basis of time of day, duration and distance — as opposed to the current flat-rate billing.

Lawrence, saying the company has spent $100,000 to notify customers of the May 14 hearing, fought the postponement sought by Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle. But Ms. Bailey ordered the delay in order to allow hearings in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, Harlingen, Amarillo and Odessa. No dates were set.

Consumer groups and Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle are fighting the proposal, which has been denied by the commission in previous Bell rate cases.

Man dies as bar patrons continue to shoot pool

AUSTIN (AP) — Police are hoping witnesses come forward after a man was found bleeding to death on a tavern floor while other bar patrons continued playing pool just a few yards away.

"All I have right now is a deceased person. If anybody knows anything — and I'm sure somebody does — he hasn't come forward yet," Sgt. David Parkinson said.

Moments before the stabbing, as many as 75 customers were in Martin's Drive Inn, but few remained when officers arrived late Tuesday to find James Arthur Teague bleeding from multiple stab wounds, police reports said.

Despite the large number of possible witnesses, police said they have neither suspects nor a motive.

Teague, 27, died of a stab wound to the left side of his neck, said Dr. Robert Bayardo, Travis County medical examiner. The wound severed the man's carotid artery and jugular vein, and Teague died within five minutes, Bayardo said.

He said Teague, a former high school football player, also had been stabbed in the face, shoulder and chest. The wounds were made by a knife with a 3½-inch blade, the medical examiner said.

Police arrived at the tavern after receiving a call about an injury at the bar. However, it was not known who made the call or where it came from.

'Instant' Kingdom Hall 'act of brotherly love'

Some refer to it as an "instant" Kingdom Hall.

But scores of Jehovah's Witnesses from Texas and New Mexico who will converge on Midland this weekend to build a new congregation meeting hall in just two days call it "an act of brotherly love." Reviving the idea from the old-fashioned "barn-raising," when neighbors would get together to build a new settler's barn between daylight and dark, entire families of Jehovah's Witnesses will come to Midland Saturday and Sunday, volunteering their time and service to build a local 4,900-square-foot hall.

The location of the new hall will be at 1406 Westcliff Drive, south of the Ortloff Corporation at 4805 Andrews Highway. Arriving in cars, vans, pickups and large trucks, the Witnesses will begin the project at 7 a.m. Saturday. When they leave Sunday evening, the building will be finished. The Kingdom Hall will host an open house Monday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In recent months, Kingdom Halls have gone up in two days at Levelland, Breckenridge, Fort Worth, Seguin, Oklahoma City, Okla., Guyman, Okla., and Lake Charles, La.

Stressing that the Kingdom Halls they erect are not prefabricated, Neal Baker, local minister, says, "The prerequisites that make the project feasible are having the foundation ready and waiting, all building materials are on the site and equipment is immediately accessible."

Baker said that before the two-day technique was perfected, 44 Kingdom Halls were partially completed during a weekend. Until recently, of the 21 "instant" Kingdom Halls completed in two days, Sequin has been the largest, with 5,000 square feet of space.

The local congregation plans a Kingdom Hall with more than 4,900 square feet of space. The structure will be entirely bricked outside. The auditorium will be carpeted and the stage will be finished with a mural.

At 7:30 p.m. today there will be a slide program at Midland High School Auditorium. All interested parties are invited to attend.

Meals will be served every six hours, including Saturday at midnight, for workers. Many will also be going from house to house talking with people about Jehovah's Witnesses.

Baker said of the weekend building project, "One of the main reasons for building so quickly is the time it saves the local congregations. The brothers could work on weekends all year. But this would take them away from their families and preaching responsibilities. This way, the Kingdom Hall is built, ready for use, and the congregations are not sidetracked from their more important Christian duties."

Nalco Chemical Co. applies for amendment to permit

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Nalco Chemical Co.'s Odessa facility has applied to the Texas Department of Water Resources for an amendment to its permit dropping sections dealing with irrigation.

The facility, open since 1976, had a permit to irrigate wastewater on its property, but a company spokesman said Thursday the irrigation equipment had only been used once and was no longer operable.

Nalco is an industrial chemical company with offices on the southside of I-20, about two miles southwest of the highway's intersection with F.M. 1788 in far west Midland County.

Rather than using the wastewater (run-off from incoming and outgoing trucks), the company uses the water in treating oilwells, said the spokesman. The wastewater collects in an evaporation basin on the site.

The facility is located in the watershed of the Monahan's Draw which flows into Midland Draw, which flows into Mustang Creek, Beals Creek and the Colorado River in the Colorado River Basin.

The amendment is scheduled to be considered by the Texas Water Commission at 10 a.m., April 17 in Room 118 of the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building in Austin.

Anyone intending to protest the amendment must file written protests with the TWC at least eight days before the meeting, according to TWC guidelines.

his record. Challenger Frank E. Lasater Jr. is calling for a change of leadership.

Place 4 on the council falls under the ho-hum portion of the menu with only incumbent Steve Davidson on the ballot. He is seeking a third two-year term.

Place 5 sees a choice of three: Col. Wilson H. Banks, former aviation director for the city; Bart Hotchkiss, chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission; and Jimenez Salazar, who runs every year for a council position but never campaigns.

MISD board is offering a selection of candidates. Going for Position 3 are Fred M. Newman, owner of an oilwell plugging service, and James Ramsoure, a former board member. Under Position 4 are A. Joseph (Joe) Reed, a hydrologist with seven children; Don R. McCarty, former employee of KCRS radio and now general business manager with a core analysis company; and Bobby G. Williams Sr., a warrants officer for the city.

The Greenwood school board slate gets a little blander with James Brooks and Ted Benton the only candidates for Positions 3 and 4, respectively. Adding a little seasoning is the fight for Place 5 between Archie L. Blackwell and Charles Gardner.

Rounding out the uncontested category of the menu are Pat Estes and Tevis Herd seeking re-election to the hospital district's board of directors. And Jack Huff, Ralph L. Way and Kenneth Peeler are running unopposed for their seats on the Midland College board of trustees.

Woman to 'tell the story' at church

The workshop is designed for those who work with children. It is open to the public for a $5 fee.

Odessans cheer new sports channel

Midlanders pay $9.50 per month for their basic cable, $1 more than Odessans. Also available in Midland — and not in Odessa — is the new Disney Channel ($11.95 per month), two movie channels and a tier offering a variety of specialized programming such as MTV and the USA Network.

Gaye Bagwell, general manager of Times Mirror Cable TV of Midland, said her company did not feel subscribers wanted the service badly enough to pay the added charge.

"It really just depends on subscriber desire," she said, adding that an ongoing monitoring was being done to study the popularity of services in other markets and the benefits of adding these services in Midland.

James "Doc" Dodson — trainer for the Midland Independent School District, a graduate of the Southwest Conference and Texas Christian University and an avid sports fan — agreed with Bagwell.

"I don't think people would pay that," he said, "What we get is enough (from the basic cable offering on ESPN and the networks.)"

But Odessa sports fans are happy, and apparently willing to pay. Along with Evenson, Arnold estimated at least 10 people have signed up and more than 100 have inquired about the service — before the first program has hit the screen.

"It'll probably be of more interest to people in this part of the country than ESPN," said Gary Warren, another Odessan who wasted no time signing up for HSC.

Revealing his zeal, Evenson said "It's worth $11 per month. Look how much season tickets cost."

With 400 miles of new cable installed as of Wednesday, ending a rebuildng project ongoing since late 1982, Arnold and his employees can set to other tasks, such as improving service and programming.

Next on the agenda is a tier of family entertainment programming.

"We're not going to let them get off," said Arnold.

Bank bag taken from parked car

From Staff Reports

In burglary complaints to city police, Suzan Smith of 4400 Andrews Highway said a bank bag containing $6,000 in checks was taken from her car while it was parked at 311 Dodson Thursday.

Also missing were assorted credit cards, $25 in cash and her drivers license. The checks were made out to Lowell Templer and the Midland Orthopedic Center.

And Harold Stewart, 706 S. Lincoln, told officers a TV set and AM-FM radio and cassette player were taken in a burglary of his residence. A bedroom window was broken to gain entry.

Odessa youths held in shooting

ODESSA — Two youths are in juvenile detention today in connection with the shooting of another Odessa boy Wednesday.

The 15- and 16-year-old boys were apprehended Thursday, and a petition is to be filed with the court for a hearing on accusations of attempted murder, police Lt. Rusty Baker said.

Jaime Castillo, 16, is in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital after being shot in the stomach. The incident occurred on a North Sam Houston street sidewalk following an altercation at Bowie Junior High School.

Country songwriter finds it 'hard to toot own horn'

Although he doesn't encourage labels, he was willing to comment on several which have been attached to him in the past, such as progressive country music.

"I think Willie Nelson got that kind of thing started. Not that everybody was copying Willie or anything like that. It was just the time that everybody who seemed to be coming up at that time was writing that type of music. It was just you'd never heard anything exactly like it before."

He's been considered one of the original members of the Texas — Nashville — Outlaws.

"I don't think anybody really asked for that label. It just got stuck on there. People that write articles and things like that, I guess they have to do something to describe it to the people, and I guess that was the best they could do, which was alright." Pausing briefly, he adds, his voice ending on an upbeat, "It was pretty good."

His own music he describes as "very simple.

"I say or I try to say in as few words as possible as much as I can. And I try to appeal to the most simple person so the simplest person can understand it. Of course the smart ones will grab it real easy. That's the way my music is."

Those wondering if Billy Joe Shaver writes from personal experience, have only to ask him. His answer is soft and to the point.

"Yes Ma'am."

Stilts supporting the four new log-cabin duplexes show above the Glendale Freeway in the Silver Lake section of Los Angeles.

Log cabin duplexes demand attention

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Perched on a cliff and supported by stilts above the Glendale Freeway in the Silver Lake area are four new log cabin duplexes. Such incongruity demands attention.

The use of raw logs in the construction of the duplexes in a frontier style by itself is peculiar in semi-arid, urban Los Angeles, but not unique. Other log cabins have been built here.

However, putting the log duplexes in the form of cabins containing a total of eight units on stilts above a freeway lends the development that little extra character that places it within the distincly Los Angeles tradition of idiosyncratic residential architecture.

Few residential designs could be more American than a log cabin, which long has stood as a symbol of the frontier and an independent, rough-hewn life style. It certainly served Abraham Lincoln well in his campaign for the presidency and in the subsequent stories of his life, prompting more than one log cabin to be built on the back lots of Hollywood studios.

Of course, log cabins are not very representative of the pioneer days of Los Angeles and cannot in any way be labeled vernacular architecture, as it might be in the Sierra or Rocky Mountains. Vernacular architecture generally describes a building made of easily obtainable indigenous materials, which in Southern California were not logs but adobe brick.

Nevertheless, once the railroad came to the region bringing other building materials, the settlers and builders let their fantasies wander as far as their budgets and limited experiences allowed.

The log cabins on Corralitas Drive were designed by Jim Vlahakis for a private client as a rental development. The eight two-bedroom, two bath apartments each are about 1,150 square feet and will rent for about $900 to $1,000 a month.

Rosie's right: Bounty 'quicker-picker-upper'

By LINDA ANDERSON

When I was younger I never thought much about paper towels. They hardly ever crossed my mind.

Paper towels have become a part of life for me now that I'm older and have a family of my own. We use them for just about everything — mopping up spilled milk and splashed baby food, wiping down kitchen counter tops, washing off little faces and hands, coping with emergency clean-ups in the car, wiping early morning dew off car windows, etc.

With four mess-prone children in the family (not to mention two clutsy parents and a big dog who thinks he belongs in the house), we use paper towels a lot.

For years I have watched commercials showing Nancy Walker as "Rosie" extolling about the benefits of Bounty paper towels — "the quicker-picker-upper!" I couldn't stand it any longer — I decided to find out once and for all if she was right. In my house I need all the help I can get.

We tested Bounty against Zee, Scot and Brawny paper towels for strength, practicality and advertising accuracy. All four brands were tested the same way — first, identical puddles of water were soaked up by each of the four brands to see which absorbed moisture quicker. Next, the towels were soaked in water and stretched over identical containers. We placed a one-cup measure full of water on each one to test them for strength. Then we gave each brand of towels a "tear test" by wetting one towel from each roll and comparing the resistance each had to tearing.

The final test was the toughest — we used them the way we always use paper towels at home.

These are the results:

— Bounty really did pick up its puddle of water faster than the other three brands, but Zee wasn't far behind.

— All four paper towels supported the weight of a one-cup measure of water without breaking, although Zee and Scot showed signs of weakening. The Zee towel sagged farthest into its bowl, and the Scot developed tiny holes in regular patterns across its surface.

— In the tear test, the Bounty towel felt stronger than the other three brands. Honorable mention in this test was given to Brawny.

— Brawny felt softest of all four brands tested and proved to be quite strong and showed almost as much resistance to tearing as Bounty.

Brawny towels measured largest of the four brands — 11 by 13.8-inches. Bounty paper towels were 11 by 11-inches, Zee and Scot towels measured 11 by 9.3-inches.

The towels' prices varied somewhat. Scot cost 79 cents for an 84-square foot roll of 119 towels. For a 78-square foot roll of 110 Zee towels, the cost was also 79 cents. Bounty sold for 99 cents for a 77-square foot roll of 92 paper towels. Brawny, because the towels are bigger than the other three brands, had only 80 towels on its 84-square foot roll. Brawny cost 85 cents. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Zee and Scot manufacturers claim the towels to be "better value towels." Both are one-ply towels (one layer thick) and are cheaper in price than the other two brands tested. Both towels have adequate strength and are useful for small messes. For large jobs, more than one would be needed which would cause the rolls to be used faster, eliminating the economy of these brands.

Brawny and Bounty advertisements proclaim "toughness," and our tests showed they are stronger than Zee and Scot. Both Brawny and Bounty are two-ply (two layers thick), which gives them added strength, and both are better for large clean-up jobs. However, for small clean-ups Bounty or even larger Brawny would be wasted.

All four brands tested were useful for mopping spills and light general cleaning around the house. The most economical towel depends on the job for which it is used.

These four brands were used enthusiastically by all the testers and are highly recommended. But Bounty really did absorb water faster.

Drinking binge may harm fetus, new study warns

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A single drinking binge near the end of pregnancy or during nursing can slow a child's brain development and lead to motor impairment and learning disabilities, a new study warns.

Tests performed on rats indicated that an expectant or nursing mother may be doing her baby more harm by one drinking binge than if she drinks a little every day, said researchers at the University of Iowa and Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm, Sweden.

A related study by Canadian doctors concluded that alcohol consumption by pregnant women could decrease levels of the sugar glucose in children, which researchers said may explain growth retardation, mental deficiency and other problems before and after birth.

The results of both studies were released at the 68th annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Studies have shown that alcohol consumption during the early stages of pregnancy can produce physical and mental deficiencies in the unborn child, the Iowa researchers said. However, little research has been done on excessive alcohol consumption late in pregnancy or during nursing, they said.

The last trimester of pregnancy, like the first trimester, is a period of rapid brain development in the child, the scientists said. The intensive growth continues for the first 18 to 24 months after birth, they said.

In the study, one group of young rats were fed a moderate amount of alcohol from the sixth day to the 16th day after birth. A second group was given a slightly larger dose of alcohol on just the sixth day. A third group was given no alcohol at all.

The rats fed the moderate amounts over the 10-day period were found to have lower brain weights and poorer balancing ability than the no-alcohol group, the study said.

The scientists found that the group fed a larger dose of alcohol on one day had even less brain growth than the group fed small amounts over a longer period.

The second study, by doctors from the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, showed that alcohol consumption by pregnant women could cause decreased glucose levels in children, which may explain prenatal and postnatal growth retardation, mental deficiency and other problems.

The brain of the fetus is almost entirely dependent on glucose for its energy needs and any decrease could cause growth problems, said Dr. Joseph Leichter.

However, Leichter said, the question of why maternal alcohol consumption should cause the decrease in glucose in the fetus needs further study.

Fruits, vegetables may cut mouth, throat cancers risk

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Women eating 20 or more servings of fruit or vegetables a week cut their risk of mouth and throat cancers in half, according to a new study by the National Cancer Institute.

Those cancers will strike an estimated 8,800 women and 18,700 men and cause approximately 9,350 deaths this year, according to the American Cancer Society.

The study of 227 women in North Carolina, which has among the highest rates of oral cancer and cancer of the pharynx in the country, also found that women consuming moderate amounts of fruit and vegetables — 11 to 20 servings per week — cut their risk by 35 percent.

Men were not included in the study, which was published in the March issue of Cancer Research and described Wednesday at the American Cancer Society's annual science writers' seminar.

"All too often people assume fatalistically that everything they eat has the potential to cause cancer," Regina Ziegler of the cancer institute wrote in a summary of her research. "They forget that certain dietary patterns actually seem to reduce the cancer risk."

Dr. Paul Talalay, a pharmacologist at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, said the studies by Ms. Ziegler, Robert Hoover and other colleagues were among the first to look carefully at the link between diet and cancer.

Earlier studies merely showed correlations between diet in certain parts of the world and cancers common in those regions, Ms. Ziegler said.

Bread and cereals were also found to have a smaller protective effect against those cancers, and meat and fish consumption boosted the risk, Ms. Ziegler said.

An earlier study by the same researchers of mostly poor black men in Washington, D.C., found that those who were well-nourished had half the risk of cancer of the esophagus as did those who were poorly nourished.

Both studies support the theory that vitamins A and C protect against cancer, the researchers wrote.

However, the scientists did not recommend that vitamin supplements be taken to cut cancer risk. The studies dealt only with vitamins occurring naturally in food, Ms. Ziegler noted, and the protective effect might have been due not only to vitamins but to other substances in the foods.

I helped Jonas Salk fight polio.

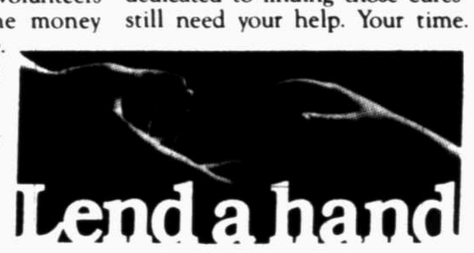

Polio. A crippling, often fatal disease that could strike anyone, any time. Newborn children. Young adults. Even a President of the United States fell victim to it.

In 1938, a group of volunteers organized to raise the money needed to find a cure. They succeeded. But they didn't do it alone.

They needed the help of thousands of people. People from all walks of life who gave their time, their money, to help. To lend a hand. And in 1955, when Jonas Salk developed the polio vaccine, they shared in his success. Together, they found a way to control a disease that had been uncontrollable.

But the fact is there are still diseases for which there are no cures. And the organizations dedicated to finding those cures still need your help. Your time.

Your talents. Your money.

What you give isn't so important. That you do give is.

Code of ethics: Step to strengthen relationship

By LINDA TRUITT

Whatever the relationship, in order for both parties to prosper they must respect each other, exhibit a willingness to communicate and realize each has rights and responsibilities.

In the marketplace, over the years the buyer/seller relationship has deteriorated because mutual respect and communication has been absent. Because of a few con men who use words instead of pistols to rob, many consumers have lost respect for business. At the same time, faced with mounting consumer legislation and consumer threats, many businesses are defensive.

With this loss of respect has come a breakdown in communication. Sellers often see consumer complaints as nuisances. Consumers, frustrated with lack of help, spread the word of business "rip-offs."

One of the major contributors to the deteriorating buyer/seller relationship is failure to understand both parties have rights and responsibilities. Unfortunately in today's market with consumer legislation and customer pressure increasing, sellers feel they only have responsibilities and not rights, and many buyers agree. Many consumers, through their actions, say they have rights but no responsibilities.

The buyer/seller relationship can be improved by each side taking positive steps. Establishing a Codes of Ethics for businesses is one step. The Better Business Bureau proposes the following Code of Ethics for consumers:

— 1. Exhibit the same kind of honesty expected from the business firm. Be kind and courteous in all dealings. Being a customer does not automatically give the right to be rude. No one appreciates rudeness.

— 2. Read all contracts carefully. Many wild charges against businesses are the result of the consumer signing a contract before reading it.

— 3. Have respect for merchandise handled. Damaged merchandise increases the cost of doing business, which must be passed on to the consumer.

— 4. Don't switch price tags — it's costly. Both time and money are wasted, and it is dishonest.

— 5. Don't abuse return privileges — it only helps raise prices. While return privileges are very convenient, the customer should still make every effort to shop before buying.

— 6. Keep a record of payment dates and pay on time. Every time a company has to "remind" a customer, it costs money.

— 7. A customer should point out mistakes a clerk may make, whether in the consumer's favor or the company's.

— 8. Remember — mistakes do happen. Do not be too quick to claim "false advertising." Human errors are unavoidable and there are times when circumstances cause mistakes.

— 9. If complaints or problems arise, get all necessary facts and be prepared to discuss them, in a rational manner, with management.

— 10. Follow the Golden Rule — Do unto business as you would want business to do unto you.

'Strange' eating disorder causes severe health problems

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Pica is the term used to describe a strange eating disorder that has not had much attention focused on it, but nevertheless can cause severe health problems.

It is generally the habitual eating of non-food substances such as peeling paint, dirt, laundry starch, clay and ice. The compulsive eating of a particular food such as celery or lettuce in unbelievably large quantities is also a part of the phenomenon of pica.

What causes such bizarre eating practices is not clear and is currently under investigation. New studies of the eating habits of some health clinic patients in rural communities have reported that 75 percent of the pregnant women eat starch and that as many as half of them eat clay. Why?

One possible explanation, shown by recent laboratory experiments with animals, seems to associate this kind of behavior with a nutritional deficiency. It is well known, of course, that if animals are deficient in certain vitamins and minerals, they will instinctively eat foods that are rich in them. Do humans tend to do the same thing? Possibly, but not everyone seems to react in the same way. There are undoubtedly many causes for triggering the pica practices.

Anemia has been strongly suggested as a motive for eating large quantities of ice. One researcher reported that 50 percent of the patients being treated for anemia in his clinic ate huge quantities of ice.

If the anemia is corrected by taking oral iron supplements will the ice-eating stop? Yes, in certain cases, as reported by medical literature over several years. However, if anemia victims are seeking iron, they are not going to get it by eating ice.

Some of the questions surrounding anemia, raised the speculation that it may cause a compulsion in some people to dwell on, and eat, one thing specifically. One woman athlete related her intense need to eat lettuce, and she ate several heads a day. Another case revealed the daily consumption of huge quantities of celery.

For the most part, oral iron supplementation has been shown to not only cure the anemia, but stop the cravings for the specific foods, in many cases.

But, it's not always that easy. There are others who will argue that pica and anemia are not such clear-cut factors and that stress may indeed play a part. A study of anemic children recently compared those who exhibited pica practices and those who did not. The pica children were far more apt to come from homes that were stressful than the other anemic kids, and that pica may be a response to stress.

Another study of mentally retarded people showed little or no difference in the iron intakes of those who practiced pica and those who did not, but the iron levels of the pica group were significantly lower. So, the question is, in some people, may the pica behavior cause the anemia, and not in reverse, where the anemia causes pica?

In the South, the eating of non-food substances is often thought to be handed down from one generation to the next. It is a learned practice that may or may not have its roots in anemia. Other mineral deficiencies can also develop.

Consumer group seeking tougher test kit restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group is asking Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler for more restrictions on birth defect test kits recently approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

The Health Research Group, in a letter being sent to Mrs. Heckler today, charges that the FDA "has seen fit to allow mass-marketing of alphafetoprotein test kits under conditions that are likely to be disastrous."

The Health Research Group, part of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization, is concerned that without special safeguards and precautions on the test kits, women might get abortions because of false test readings.

The FDA on Feb. 17 gave two companies permission to market the kits, which measure the alphafetoprotein level in a pregnant woman's blood to help determine if the fetus has a neural tube defect such as spina bifida.

The approval came eight months after the FDA dropped regulations it proposed in 1980 that would have imposed several restrictions on labs that wanted to market the test kits.

The test results are not definitive. The kits can measure the alphafetoprotein shed by the fetus after four months in the womb. An elevated level can signify a defect, but it can also mean the woman is carrying twins or triplets.

The Health Research Group said an elevated level on the first test indicates about a 2 percent chance that a fetus has a neural tube defect. An elevated level on a second blood sample means a 4 percent to 10 percent chance of a defect.

In those cases, the women are supposed to undergo further screening with ultrasound and, if necessary, amniocentesis and amniography. Of the 3 million children born in the United States each year, 6,000 are afflicted with neural tube defects.

The Health Research Group told Mrs. Heckler that it expects obstetricians to start routinely ordering the test for fear of being sued for malpractice. If that happens, it said, "the likelihood that unnecessary abortions will be performed will increase dramatically."

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists has also written Mrs. Heckler asking her to reconsider the FDA's decision, saying that "the benefits of routine screening do not justify the costs."

Bill Grigg, an FDA spokesman, said the test kits have been used experimentally for 10 years. He said the FDA discarded its more stringent regulations because "they added to the expense of the kits without really adding to their safety or effectiveness."

As it stands, the companies marketing the test kits must provide informational brochures to physicians and patients, and conduct follow-up studies on 1,000 patients to make sure the kits were used properly.

The companies that received the FDA's approval to market the kits were Wampole Laboratories, a division of Carter-Wallace, Inc., of Cranbury, N.J., and Kallestasd Laboratories, Inc., of Chaska, Minn.

Computers help screen treatable cancer patients

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Computer measurements of the shape of cancer cells have allowed researchers to predict which patients will improve with chemotherapy and have shed light on how a normal cell becomes cancerous.

The new technique correctly determined which 15 patients from among a group of 30 with prostate cancer could be successfully treated with anti-cancer drugs, said Donald Coffey, professor at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore.

"We're not diagnosing cancer," Coffey said Monday at an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers. "We're taking these patients that already have cancer and asking how bad is the tumor going to be."

Experienced doctors have long been able to identify in crude terms which cancer cells are more deadly. One pathologist told Coffey that cancer cells "look angry" under the microscope, and the Pap smears that detect cervical cancer in women are examined for just such angry-looking cells, Coffey said.

However, Coffey has shown that his computerized system can pick up subtleties that can't be discerned even by the trained eye.

He uses an electronic tablet to trace the image under the microscope of a cancer cell's nucleus, the central core containing the cell's genes.

The computer then calculates how much the nucleus deviates from a uniform, spherical shape, Coffey said. The more distorted its shape, the more deadly the cancer tumor of which the cell is a part.

The research has not pointed the way to better treatments, but it is part of a broad scientific investigation into the nature of the fragile "skeleton" that holds the cell nucleus in shape, Coffey said.

This structure, called the nuclear matrix, is turning out to be very important in the growth and divison of cells. Because cancer is a perversion of that process, studies of the nuclear matrix may also shed light on how cancer cells grow, Coffey said.

DEAR ABBY

Men's ponytails, earrings split family

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our two daughters are successful businesswomen in Los Angeles. Both are married to welders who wear ponytails and one earring.

These are men of good character, treat our daughters well, and there is nothing wrong with them except they look like a couple of hippies instead of the good guys they are.

Because of their appearance, we have told them that they are not welcome in our home. Our daughters refuse to visit us because their husbands can't come to our home, and we're certainly not invited to their homes.

We're losing contact with our daughters because of two ponytails and two earrings — how's that for dumb?

We still write to one another and sometimes phone, but there are no concessions or negotiations on either side. What do we do next, Abby? — ARIZONA PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: What you should do next is call your daughters and invite them AND their husbands to your home — ponytails, earrings and all. Apologize for your inexcusable snobbishness and hope they accept.

DEAR ABBY: In your answer to a recent letter, you made reference to your "Irish" gynecologist, Dr. John A. Haugen. Where did you ever get the idea that Haugen is an Irish name? Haugen is a Norwegian surname meaning "dweller on the hill."

Abby, please correct this error in your column, as we Norwegians are rather proud of our heritage. — S.E. HAUGEN, OREGON

DEAR S.E. HAUGEN: "Uff-da!" I'll take 20 lashes with a Norwegian salmon. I just checked with Dr. Haugen, who confirmed that he is not Irish, he's 100 percent Norwegian. He also added good-humoredly that he doesn't dwell ON a hill, he's OVER it.

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Irritated Neighbor" could have been more helpful. She wrote: "Over the Christmas holidays, a neighbor asked our 13-year-old son if he would feed her cats and fish and bring in her mail while she and her family were out of town. She promised to pay him, but at this writing he hasn't been paid. Should we just forget about it, or remind her of her promise? Our son is too shy to ask her himself."

Abby, instead of telling the mother to speak for her son, you should have advised her to insist that her son handle it himself. It would have been educational for him to have collected what was owed him. Example:

"Mrs. ( ), would you please pay me for the service I rendered to your household while you were away? As a student, I need this money for my regular expenditures. I hope my work was satisfactory."

It would encourage the youth to settle his own problems and bring to a satisfactory conclusion his first business venture. — CARROLL H. LUHR, MONTICELLO, KY.

DEAR MR. LUHR: Thank you. Your answer was better than mine.

CONFIDENTIAL TO PATRIOTIC IN CHICAGO: Consider this: "We must face the fact that the United States is neither omnipotent nor omniscient, that we are only 6 percent of the world's population and that we cannot right every wrong or reverse each adversity, and that therefore there cannot be an American solution to every world problem." — JOHN F. Panel aids appliance owner

Copley News Service

When you buy a new appliance, like a freezer or refrigerator, you should maintain a record of the purchase and subsequent repairs.

That's so you will have evidence should you ever have to complain to MACAP, 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60606.

The toll-free number is 1-800-621-0477.

MACAP is an acronym for Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel.

It is an industry court of last resort. You should attempt to resolve all appliance problems with your local retailer and manufacturer before asking the panel's help.

MACAP recommends that in order to get satisfaction from your appliance you should:

— Know your service agency and the terms of the warranty before you buy. In San Diego, some discount stores will not service appliances. Instead, they will refer you to an authorized manufacturer's service shop. Some local retailers, on the other hand, have their own service departments.

— Keep an appliance file containing use and care manuals, warranties, sales receipts and service history for all your appliances in a convenient spot for easy reference. Practically every household should have a file cabinet.

— Study the use and care manual and refer to it often.

— Have the installer, electrician or plumber check to make sure your household wiring and gas lines are adequate. (That's particularly important in older homes and apartments.)

— Include appliance repairs and replacement in your household budget.

— To save money on unnecessary service calls, check plugs, fuses, pilots, controls and your use and care manual before calling for service.

— Call your dealer, the service agency he recommends or an organization "franchised" by the manufacturer if your appliance needs service.

Major appliances represented by MACAP include compactors, dehumidifiers, dishwashers, disposers, gas incinerators, home laundry equipment, microwave ovens, ranges, refrigerators and freezers, room air conditioners and water heaters.

MACAP has published a "MACAP Handbook for the Informed Consumer."

It has 64 pages, and MACAP describes it as a comprehensive consumer reference book on the purchase and proper and safe use, care and maintenance of major appliances.

You may obtain it by sending a check or money order for $1.10 to MACAP, 20 N. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60606. You must send remittance with your order, MACAP advises.

Refrigerator doors affect performance

Copley News Service

The door of a refrigerator may tell you a lot. Have you listened to one lately?

That may sound a bit strange. However, consider this: The design of your refrigerator is important. If it has separate doors, that tells you one thing. If it has a single door — as 6 percent being sold today do — that tells you something else, and it might be cause for a yellow flag.

The two-door models allow you access to either the freezer unit or to the refrigerator section without having to expose the unused section. Single-door models require that you open the door to the entire unit to gain access to the "freezing unit."

Here's where a problem could develop.

The Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel in Chicago reports it has received complaints that some "freezing" units leave ice cream and similar foods with the consistency of "cold soup."

The panel, which handles consumer complaints against the appliance industry, investigated.

It discovered that there are two types of freezing units in single-door refrigerators. One is meant simply to store food, and about the only thing it will freeze is water for ice cubes, and that's done slowly. The other is designed to freeze food as well as water.

The first is for short-term storage of frozen foods. For example, you bring in a frozen chicken or package of peas and place them in the unit for storage. They will stay frozen several days.

Non-frozen foods, however, may not freeze in the units. That's because they were designed to reach a water freezing temperature of about 32 degrees F. When foods have additives, they need a lower temperature.

The second type of unit reaches a much lower temperature. However, that also can present a problem. If you lower the thermostat too low, you may freeze everything in the refrigerator, making butter a yellow brick road to frustration.

If you are buying a single-door refrigerator, how do you know which one will freeze foods in the "freezing" compartment?

The Chicago panel reports this:

If the freezer compartment is described as a "food freezer" or "frozen food storage compartment," as in double-door units, you can expect it will store already frozen food several days or even months without deterioration.

However, the panel cautions, if it is called a "freezer section" or "freezer compartment," found in single-door refrigerators, it may freeze only ice cubes.

You find this out by reading the available literature before buying. If you don't see the information, ask a sales clerk.

An appliance sales manager for Gemco's Balboa Avenue store said two-door refrigerator-freezers have a big advantage over single-door models — each compartment has its own thermostat and is insulated from the other.

In a single-door appliance, if you want ice to freeze faster, you can adjust the thermostat so the freezer is colder — but at the same time, you make the entire unit cold and run the risk of freezing milk, for example.

Separate thermostats for separate compartments eliminate the problem.

Why have the single-door models at all?

They do have advantages. Generally they are compact and ideal for small apartments that are cramped, especially in the cooking area. Single people find them handy. And they are generally inexpensive.

Make it clear at the time of purchase if you want a refrigerator that freezes foods or keeps ice cream firm.

Franchises' importance grows

NEW YORK (AP) — Franchise operations, which were once primarily fast food chains, are now being created to sell products that range from telephones to chocolate chip cookies to real estate, according to Arthur Lipper III, chairman of Venture, The Magazine for Entrepreneurs.

"In 1983, franchises accounted for more than $400 billion in retail sales, or one-third of all retail sales," Lipper said. "By 1992, 60 percent of all retail sales will be through franchises," he predicts.

Bike redesigned for U.S. cyclists

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — It has two wheels, a handlebar and pedals, but that's where the prototype of the bike that many U.S. cyclists will ride in the Olympic Summer Games parts company with any bicycle you've ever seen.

This bike has tiny wheels, flat handlebars, no exposed bolts, washers or cables, a chain that attaches to a solid disc sprocket and a frame with a streamlined shape much like airplane wings. Every detail on the bike, from the toe clips to the tire tubing, has been aerodynamically tested to cut down wind resistance and increase speed. The bike cost $60,000 just to design, and that doesn't include parts.

Take the wheels: They're 24 inches in diameter (compared to the standard 27), weigh 4 ounces each, take 220 pounds of air pressure, have special teardrop-shaped tubing and less than half the "rolling resistance" of standard racing wheels.

It will be the first time in 50 years that an American-built bike is good enough for a U.S. cyclist to ride in the Olympics. But as for looks go, even the U.S. team calls them "funny bikes."

"It may look funny, but it works," Chester Kyle, head of the team that designed the bike, said with a mixture of pride and defensiveness. "We'll be as good as anybody in the world with this thing."

The streamlined "funny bikes" are expected to be a major advantage for the U.S. team, especially in long-distance track events such as the 100-kilometer team race. Road racers will ride modified versions of the new bike.

The bike itself is only one part of a total strategy devised by Ed Burke of the U.S. Cycling Federation to put the '84 cycling program in high gear by applying scientific principles to the sport. The plan, called the Elite Athlete Program, offers one of the best examples of how science and technology, combined with corporate money, can change the face of a sport.

The new wave bikes are especially important for the L.A. Games since the International Cycling Union, the governing body for cycling, recently relaxed the rules to allow design changes. Until '84, racing bikes had remained fairly standard because of strict ICU regulations.

"The big jump is now," said Kyle, a professor of biomechanical engineering at Cal State Long Beach and founder of the International Human Powered Vehicle Association. "Unless they relax the rules again, we won't see this kind of technological jump again."

The idea for rebuilding American cycling started about three years ago when Burke watched American athletes compete, dismally, against East and West European riders in international events. It was a sight that left Burke, a physiologist, more than slightly perturbed, so he quit his teaching position and went to work full time for the USCF.

First, he went around to colleges and corporations, drumming up ideas and money for the Elite Athlete Program. In 1982, Burke began his plan to "apply the latest developments in technology, biomechanics, physiology, medicine and psychology to the sport of cycling." And he lined up such high-powered sponsors as the Huffy Corp. (owners of Raleigh Bicycles of America), Nike, Bell Helmets and the Southland Corp. (7-11 Stores) to put up the approximately half a million dollars needed to implement his vision.

The largest investment — and biggest payoff — will be in the area of design, according to experts.

In cycling, athletes expend 80 to 90 percent of their energy fighting the wind. Kyle said the new bikes can reduce wind drag by as much as 7 percent. For racers, that could be the difference between victory and defeat. Kyle estimates that in a 4,000-meter race, an aerodynamic bike could knock 10 to 12 seconds off a racer's time — a big edge in races that are often decided by less than a second.

The new bikes bear only a slight resemblance to those used even a few years ago. Holding up the 16-pound bike, Kyle pointed out that "we've taken out anything with holes in it." That includes even the wheel spokes, which for Olympic competition will be covered by a lightweight metal similar to the cover of a steel drum to further reduce wind resistance.

AT WIT'S END

Technology marches on

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is not a day goes by that something doesn't change in this country. Technology is racing to keep pace with our lifestyles. Cars are becoming smaller, phones are mobile, and everyone remembers the day when shoestrings were replaced in running shoes by Velcro tabs.

For awhile there, I was afraid to sit down for fear I'd become obsolete.

And then I look at the refrigerator and figure I've got a few more good years left. It has maintained its original form and use for the last 50 years. No one has deemed it necessary to design a refrigerator for this generation, despite that fact that most of our children have no idea what a refrigerator is for. It just came with the apartment. They have vague memories of growing up with one that stored the leftovers until it was time to throw them away. And every time they opened it, someone yelled, "Shut the door!"

But beyond that, kids today have no idea what to do with those large, massive dinosaurs that dominate their kitchens. There they stand, 16 cubic feet of refrigeration, and do you know what's inside of them? If we're talking about sons, on a good day there will be a quart of milk that has gone from beverage to solid status, a can of beer, and a doggy bag from a restaurant that closed three years ago. If it is your daughter, there will be six cans of diet something, a couple pairs of pantyhose, a bottle of cologne and three eggs. (An omelette looms eternal.)

This generation has found the secret of life . . . fast foods!

I looked in my son's fridge a few weeks ago and was appalled. There was nothing in it to even justify a box of baking soda to remove the odors. "Don't you even have any leftovers?" I asked.

"What's a leftover?" he said.

Refrigerators are not a priority in the scheme of technology, but when they do get around to them, there's no doubt in my mind what they'll look like. They'll sit on the countertop like a microwave and have a cork door for messages. When you open the door, it will reveal a wine rack for eight bottles of white wine and a cheese keeper.

They won't have the history mine did . . . the formulas, the suppositories, meal worms, snowballs, or prom corsages. Or maybe that's what my mother said when she clung to her icebox with the pan underneath that had to be emptied.

New device checks volcanoes

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Geologists are using a new device to monitor hot spots in volcanoes.

The device, a fully integrated night attack system for aircraft, was developed by Hughes Aircraft Co. for the U.S. Navy. It was used in early 1980 when Mount St. Helens began to heat up. Geologists, in cooperation with the Navy, discovered hot spots on part of the volcano's increasingly unstable north slope.

Saroyan's 'Human Comedy' sings onto Broadway

ENTERTAINMENT

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK — Galt MacDermot and William Dumaresq have made William Saroyan sing.

MacDermot, the composer of "Hair," and Dumaresq, a Canadian journalist, have taken Saroyan's novel "The Human Comedy" and expanded its ringing affirmation of home and hearth into a spirited, emotionally affecting musical, a joyous celebration of small-town America. It opened Thursday at Broadway's Royale Theater after an 11-week run downtown at the New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater.

The time is World War II; the place Ithaca, Calif., a farming community where he ongoing global conflict means buying war bonds, listening to the radio for news of the fighting or getting an unexpected telegram from the War Department.

The story concentrates on the Macauley family — Kate Macauley, a widow with four children, three boys and a daughter. The oldest son, Marcus, is in the Army. Another son, Homer, delivers those ominous telegrams after school. Little brother Ulysses spends his time waving at railroad trainmen and wondering where they're going.

What we get are a series of vignettes from the book, slices of life in Ithaca with MacDermot setting Dumaresq's libretto to music. It's almost continuous melody, an outpouring by MacDermot that encompasses a variety of styles that includes rock, folk, swing, gospel and jazz.

The whole show is sung, and some of the songs are extraordinarily effective. In one early scene in the telegraph office, MacDermot has placed no less than eight songs including a haunting number called "Beautiful Music," which recalls the wonder of transmitting messages across telegraph wires.

It's followed by a scene in which a 1940s-style pop song is juxtaposed with the grief experienced by a mother who receives word from Homer of her son's death.

The expansiveness of the score allows almost every major character in the large cast to shine. But it's Bonnie Koloc, as Mrs. Macauley, who anchors the show. Her soaring soprano dominates such songs "Long Past Sunset" and "The World is Full of Loneliness," plaintive melodies of love lost too early.

Stephen Geoffreys makes an appealing Homer, especially when he's trying to convince his prospective employers "I Can Carry a Tune" in order to get a job singing telegrams or when he's extolling the virtues of "Cocoanut Cream Pie."

Pop star Rex Smith has grown in assurance as a musical comedy performer since his appearance in "The Pirates of Penzance."

Stars to shine bright in new Oscar fashions

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — The fashion parade on Oscar night should be a tad more glamorous than in years past, thanks to a designer who is creating gowns for some female performers and presenters free of charge.

"This was my idea to give us a better-looking show," said designer Ron Talsky of his unprecedented offer, which is being arranged in cooperation with the apparel manufacturer Carole Little.

Those who accepted — including Joan Collins, Dyan Cannon, Joanna Pakula, Lani Hall, Donna Summer, Jennifer Holliday and Irene Cara — get to keep the custom-made outfits after Monday night's extravaganza.

However, they will have to return the coordinated jewelry Talsky is borrowing from Van Cleef & Arpels.

Before putting pen to paper, Talsky met with each actress and obtained photographs showing face and full figure. Then he submitted sketches along with fabric swatches for approval, after which measurements were taken. The women all had final fittings as well.

Talsky's offer did not extend to nominated actresses, who were again left to their own devices.

In years past this has sometimes led to unusual results. Fashion observer Mr. Blackwell, famous for his annual list of the world's 10 worst-dressed, cites among the all-time Oscar dress disasters Barbra Streisand's 1969 see-through outfit.

"The biggest disappointment of all time was Bo Derek, right after she became the sex symbol of the world," Blackwell added. "She wore almost an Indian type of caftan that was totally devoid of any resemblance to that new great star image that was forming. She could have been the sex image of Hollywood and she blew it."

Most observers say Oscar wear tends to be spectacular rather than fashionable — and Blackwell feels that's the way it should be.

"The world is waiting for a glamour show," he said.

It is likely to get one from this year's nominees, a number of whom released descriptions of their outfits.

Cher, nominated for her role in "Silkwood," has promised a return to the drop-dead glamour of her Las Vegas days via her longtime designer, film industry veteran Bob Mackie.

"If she has any sense at all, she'll come in 44 yards of white fox," said Blackwell.

Shirley MacLaine will be gowned by the New York designer Fabrice. Jane Alexander will be clad in a midnight blue, soft satin creation by Mary Lou Brady.

"She (Miss Alexander) said it looked like John Singer Sargent's painting of Madame X, with a somewhat plunging neckline," said Nancy Potts of the New York public relations firm Smith & Siegal.

Others have also opted for period looks. Glenn Close will arrive in "a black antique lace dress that has been reworked by film costumer Ann Roth," said spokeswoman Katharine Olim.

For Amy Irving, designer Ralph Lauren created a black, ankle-length Melbourne skirt and high-necked white blouse of handkerchief linen with a lace inset at the throat, worn over a linen slip top. Black antique lace-up boots will complete the ensemble, a Smith & Siegal spokeswoman said.

Big Spring Symphony to present first concert

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Symphony has its first concert slated for 8 p.m. Saturday in the Big Spring High School Auditorium.

The program, performed by 35 musicians from West Texas and New Mexico, includes Mozart's "Overture to Don Giovanni," the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in D minor for strings, the "Rumanian Folk Dances" by Bartok, "Cant del Ocells (Song of the Birds)" for cello and string orchestra by Pablo Casals and Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C Major.

The Big Spring orchestra will be directed by Dr. Marianna Gabbi, conductor and musical director of the Las Cruces Symphony, N.M., and the Chamber Players de Las Cruces. Guest soloist will be cellist Samuel Woodward, a former general manager of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Association.

The concert will be dedicated to the memory of Bill Bradley. Bradley was for many years band director for the Big Spring Independent School district and an active supporter of the arts in Big Spring.

It was during his tenure as chairman of the the Chamber of Commerce's Cultural Affairs Committee that the Big Spring Symphony Association was formed and a regular season of concerts established.

Tickets are priced at $7.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Visa and Mastercard are accepted at all locations.

Alabama comedian's act is own brand of 'clean humor'

GULF SHORES, Ala. (AP) — Comedian Andy Andrews says "I'm still a baby." But he's growing up on stage.

And funniest thing, his comedy act is clean.

Since abandoning a career goal at Auburn University to become a veterinarian, Andrews, 24, the son of a Baptist minister of music, has worked his way across country entertaining with his own brand of "clean humor."

"I'm a real party person," he jokes. "I went to three parties last week and ended up with more Tupperware than I'll use in a lifetime."

"My show is clean," he said in a recent interview after a performance in Mobile. "I don't do any dirty stuff. It's not a goody-goody show, but there are no four-letter words or sex routines."

"I always had (it) in the back of my mind becoming a comedian," he said. "I didn't know how to do it. At Lee High School in Columbus, Miss., classmates talked me into (a) talent show...I won. The singers and piano players lost. The guy who disrupts class won. The teachers were all mad.

"At Auburn, I got involved in radio and put together my own comedy show."

Andrews broke into the national comedy scene several years ago as a sketch writer for "Saturday Night Live."

"I had already written for several comedians," he recalled. "Everybody was telling me I'd never make 'Saturday Night Live,' because it was the hottest show in television."

He got on the show through a comic reverse route — by writing rejection letters to the "Saturday Night Live" brass.

"I wrote letters that said, 'Please quit bugging me. I have no interest in being on your show.' I did that for twice a week for nine months.

"They finally got in touch and did a sketch about a kid who was writing them rejection letters."

That led to Andrews' writing some sketches for the show's "Weekend Update."

However, he'd rather be performing, said Andrews, who had a Valentine's Day appearance at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville with Dottie West this year. In the meantime, he plays college and private audiences.

"I don't do clubs anymore," he said. He earns enough now to support himself and his sister, who lives at Jackson, Ala.

Like every comedian, he's "dying to get on the Johnny Carson show."

He says that requires getting noticed by the show's directors.

Tarantulas make great pets

KENMORE, Wash. (AP) — Looking for a neat, quiet pet that can take care of itself while you're on vacation? Has Allan McKee got the critter for you!

Sure, it takes a little time to warm up to a tarantula. Why, McKee himself used to have trouble sleeping with just one in his house. But now, as proprietor of Al's Tarantula Ranch, he routinely shares his home with 3,000 to 5,000 of the giant spiders, in various stages of development from egg to adulthood.

The tarantulas live in what was Fran McKee's sewing room until her husband, who also works as a telephone company technician, launched his venture. That happened when his mother-in-law brought a Mexican Red-leg tarantula for the McKee's daughter.

McKee said in a recent interview that he was "terrorized" at first, until he learned, he said, that the spiders' bite is roughly like a bee sting and is dangerous to people who are also allergic to bee stings. Now he sings his pets' praises.

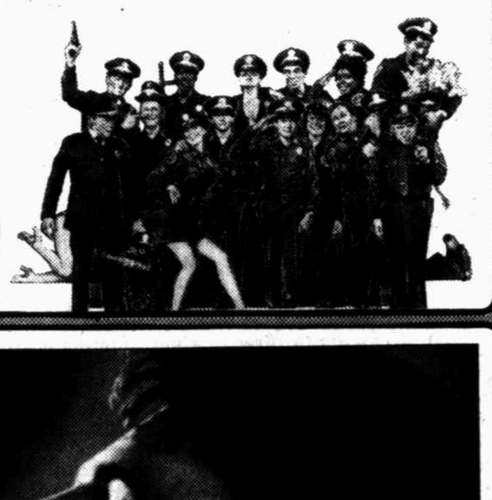

"They are easy to care for...don't make a mess, eat modestly (live crickets) and, because they don't need water, you can go away on a vacation and not need a pet-sitter."

And they've got staying power, he says — tarantulas have "been on earth for an estimated 360 million years."

Now admit it, can you say all that for man's best pal?

More Palestinians learning Hebrew to make life easier

JERUSALEM (AP) — More Palestinians are learning Hebrew than ever before.

They learn in Israel and in the major occupied West Bank towns, from Jews, Israeli Arabs and West Bank Palestinians who learned before them. Jewish West Bank settlers travel to villages offering instruction in the language that helped forge the modern Jewish nation.

It is just one manifestation of a growing interaction between Palestinian and Israeli society.

To right-wing Israelis it means Palestinians would accept annexation of the West Bank, while left-wing Israelis believe it shows Palestinians are ready to live in friendship in their own state.

In 1968, a year after Israeli troops swept Jordanian troops from the West Bank, 10 Palestinians studied at a single Jerusalem ulpan or language school. Their fellow students, most of whom were new Jewish immigrants from eastern Europe, considered them intriguing oddities.

In 1983, Palestinian and Israeli teachers estimate, 2,000 Palestinians studied in their own classes. Israeli and Palestinian teachers say about 200,000 Palestinians or nearly half of the West Bank population between the ages of 10 and 40 now speak good to fluent Hebrew.

Many Palestinians say they learn Hebrew to make life easier, to study and to get jobs under an Israeli administration, but they also talk about the freedom it gives them to walk about Israeli cities without feeling like strangers.

Knowing Hebrew has increased Palestinians' awareness of Israeli culture and society. And when they use Hebrew to make demands for an end to Israeli occupation, they help to overcome the suspiciousness many Israelis feel when criticized in Arabic.

The change is noticeable in Israeli television and radio news programs. Palestinian nationalists reach Israeli viewers directly in flawless Hebrew where 10 years ago their words would have been have been translated in subtitles.

In one Jerusalem school where Palestinians learn Hebrew next door to Israelis studying Arabic, student Riyad Awaydeh said he wants to study business administration at Jerusalem's Hebrew University. He said he had mixed feelings toward Israel.

"I learn Hebrew because I want to talk to people in the street, but they are not friendly," he said. "I want to study at the Hebrew University because it has a high reputation, but they have an Arab quota."

He said he was firmly in favor of Palestinian independence but feared that Israel would expel its 450,000 Arab citizens if a Palestinian state were established.

Unassuming house monument to Trumans

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — The familiar beige trenchcoat and tan felt hat with the narrow band and upturned brim — "Made expressly for the Honorable Harry S. Truman" — have hung by the back door since the president last took them off.

"It's as if he just came back from a walk through the neighborhood," said Norm Reigle, a National Park Service superintendent in charge of preparing the home for the public tours scheduled to begin a week after the 100th anniversary of Truman's birth on May 8.

In the apple-green kitchen, painted decades ago by Harry and Bess Truman's only child, Margaret Truman Daniel, a well-worn ironing board leans in the corner.

"This is more like grandma and grandpa's house," Reigle said. "If you took down the pictures of the president and Mrs. Truman, and you didn't know what Margaret looked like, you wouldn't know whose house you were in. It's very unassuming."

The white, gingerbread-trimmed Victorian is a monument to the unaffected people who called it home from the time they were married in 1919 to the time they died. Few are the signs that the 33rd president of the United States lived here, that this was the summer White House from 1945 to 1953.

"It appears that at this house, politics stopped at the front door," Reigle said.

The free, 15-minute public tour will begin at the front gate of the black fence around the yard. The fence was erected in 1947. Reluctant at first to have it installed, Truman eventually heeded former President Herbert Hoover's warning that "if you don't, they (souvenir hunters) will tear the place down."

Step inside, and on the right is the living room and an adjoining bedroom. This is where the Trumans spent most of their time in the final years. The president died in 1972, the day after Christmas. Mrs. Truman died a decade later.

Across the hall, in the music room, sits a baby-grand piano topped with photographs, including one of Lyndon B. Johnson. Johnson's autograph is on the photo. The two men were friends, fellow Democrats. Johnson used to come to Independence for political advice.

This same piano nearly crashed through the floor of the White House in the summer of 1948, prompting Truman to tell his sister: "The White House is about to fall in. Margaret's sitting room floor broke in two but didn't fall through the family dining room ceiling. Now my bathroom is about to fall into the red parlor. They won't let me sleep in my bedroom. I'm using Old Abe's bed and it is very comfortable."

An accomplished pianist, Truman played whenever he could. He said that while waiting in Kansas City's Muehlebach Hotel for 1944 election returns, he sat down at the keyboard and played "a little Mozart and maybe some Chopin. I always played Chopin every chance I got."

Next on the tour is the dining room. White House china is in the cabinet. A silver epergne, a wedding gift to Mrs. Truman's mother and father, stands in the center of the table. Margaret's splintery wooden highchair sits along the north wall.

Then, to perhaps the president's favorite place in the house — the study, lined floor-to-ceilng on three walls with books and records. There, sitting in his stuffed chair in the bay window with Bess seated to his left flipping through the latest murder mystery, he would read history or biography, Mark Twain or Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

"I could never find time enough to read all the things I wanted to," Truman said in his book, "Mr. Citizen."

On top of the phonograph are baseballs the president threw out at opening games of the Washington Senators and Kansas City Athletics in the 1950s. In the corner are the canes he used on his "120-paces-a-minute morning walks" down the wide, tree-lined streets of Independence. A Burlington Northern Railroad calender has not been changed since October 1982. That's when the former first lady died.

Back through the kitchen — the two small paintings on ceramic above the table are originals by Grandma Moses — and onto the screened-in porch, where the visit ends. It was under the gentle swirl of the ceiling fan that Mrs. Truman and her friends would convene for bridge.

Under a stipulation in Mrs. Truman's will, the second floor of the two-story home will not be open to the public as long as her daughter is alive. Mrs. Daniel was born in an upstairs bedroom.

"This is the house where I was born," Mrs. Daniel said recently in a telephone conversation from her home in New York, "and quite frankly I don't like seeing it opened up. But I won't be living there, and it would fall apart."

Mrs. Truman bequeathed the home to the federal government. In May President Reagan signed into law a bill to preserve the home.

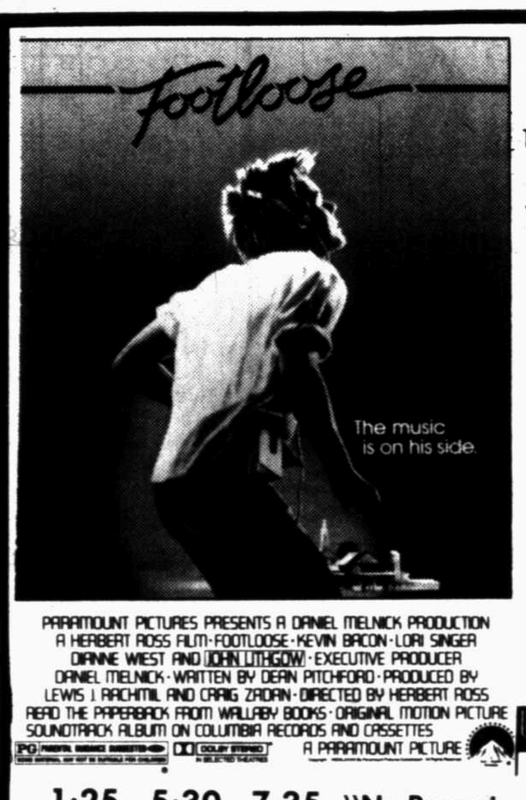

Court changed mind

In 1869 the U.S. Supreme Court held insurance not to be a transaction in commerce and affirmed the validity of state regulation of the insurance industry. In 1944 the court held that it is commerce and when conducted across state lines is interstate commerce and therefore subject to federal laws.

Attempting too much?

Housewives who attempt suicide are usually "overachievers" involved in "10 outside functions such as Girl Scouts, car pools and the like," says Dr. Robert Cancro, chairman of the New York University psychiatry department.

Miniseries will surprise TV viewers

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Fielder says "George Washington," upcoming on CBS over three nights starting Sunday, will surprise many viewers, particularly those who think they know history.

"It's almost a direct reverse of what most Americans will expect to see about the father of our country," says Fielder, who wrote the script based on James Thomas Flexner's four-volume biography, then produced the eight-hour miniseries, which will continue Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

"When I read Flexner's books," he says, "it was a revelation. I had studied history in college, and all of a sudden, I was learning things about Washington I never knew. There's this image of George Washington, but the man himself has disappeared from history."

The miniseries tracks Washington's life from the death of his father in 1743 — Washington was 11 — to 1783, and the victorious general's farewell to his troops. It's a fascinating, and little-known, period in Washington's life, Fielder says.

"At 22," the writer says, "to be a colonel on the Virginia frontier, to make certain blunders largely because of an impulsive nature, to be troubled by his own temper, to struggle with all these problems, then to lead a ragtag bunch of colonies in what was frequently a discouraging war; it can almost be said he lost a series of battles, and won the war."

Barry Bostwick plays Washington, Patty Duke Astin his wife, Martha, Jaclyn Smith is Sally Fairfax and David Dukes her husband, George William Fairfax.

The miniseries was shot entirely on location in Virginia and Pennsylvania, and many scenes were enacted on sites where the historic events actually occurred.

General Motors Corp. is the sole sponsor for "George Washington," which was directed by Buzz Kulik, an Emmy-winner for the 1959-60 season of "Playhouse 90." His other work includes the TV movies "Brian's Song" and "Babe" and the miniseries "From Here to Eternity" and "Rage of Angels."

David Gerber, who won an Emmy for "Police Story" in 1975, was executive producer of "George Washington."

Fielder produced "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a CBS series last season, but he is best known as a writer, and his long list of credits includes scripts for acclaimed series like "Kraft Theater," "Alcoa Presents," "Studio One," "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Gunsmoke" and "The Waltons."

"I've wanted to do this kind of thing since I started writing," he says.

5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Here's a chance for you to test your technique. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and see how you would play five clubs after the lead of the king of hearts.

It is not easy to reach three no trump. That contract has nine tricks on any lead. Now, however, you must justify your bidding by making eleven tricks at your club contract.

Obviously, you have no trouble if East has the queen of spades. You can win the ace of hearts, finesse the jack of spades, win any return, draw two rounds of trumps, cash the king of spades and then ruff a spade in dummy. So your only problem arises if West has both the ace and queen of spades.

But there is another danger. You cannot allow East to gain the lead, for he will shift to a spade and you will lose two spade tricks in addition to the trick you conceded to East — down one.

Your best chance is to concede a trick that you would not normally have to lose — allow West to win the king of hearts! Now your contract is virtually ironclad.

Assume West shifts to a trump — as good a defense as any. Win in your hand, cross to the ace of diamonds and discard a diamond on the ace of hearts. After ruffing a diamond high, return to the table with a trump and ruff another diamond. Dummy's diamonds are established, and since you still have a trump entry on the board, you will make an overtrick.

What if the diamonds are 4-1? You can still set up the suit with a ruffing finesse if West turns up with a singleton diamond honor. And if East started with four diamonds to the king-queen, you will have to fall back on the spade finesse for your contract.

Followers claim 'omniscient' guru can perform miracles

PUTTAPARTHI, India (AP) — Hundreds of disciples sit cross-legged in a semicircle on the sandy earth, their eyes closed and heads bowed in meditation. Chants of "Om" flow out of the Hindu temple before them.

Suddenly, the chanting stops and a 5-foot-tall man with a huge Afro hairdo, a full-length orange robe and lips dyed red by betel leaf emerges from the shrine.

The disciples strain to glimpse their guru. Women kiss his bare feet as he slowly walks among them, sprinkling them with sacred ash that he seems to materialize out of thin air.

After collecting letters from devotees seeking his advice, he picks a dozen people for a private audience and disappears into the pastel-colored temple.

It is the typical early morning "darshan," or daily blessing ceremony, of the 57-year-old Indian guru called Sai Baba.

Sai Baba, which means Divine Mother and Father, has become the biggest cult figure in India since Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the Beatles' guru and founder of the Transcendental Meditation movement.

He also commands a much bigger following here than Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, the guru who left India in 1981 to set up a commune of about 2,500 followers in rural Oregon.

This remote south Indian community in Andhra Pradesh state is the site of Sai Baba's sprawling ashram, called Prashanti Niliyan — "Abode of Supreme Peace."

About a three-hour drive from the nearest city, Bangalore, the commune lies in a barren valley of rocky hills, cactus plants and coconut trees.

The complex includes a university, dormitory-style housing, a cafeteria, a bookstore and other facilities. It has about 1,000 permanent residents, while other guests come for a few days, weeks or months.

The worshippers pay the equivalent of less than $1 a day for food and lodging. Most are Indian, but visitors from 40 countries make pilgrimages here.

Ashram officials claim Sai Baba has 10 million followers worldwide. Most foreign adherents are from the United States, Europe, Scandinavia and Southeast Asia.

The best known is Antonio Craxi, brother of Italian Premier Bettino Craxi. He quit his job as a businessman to live here permanently with his wife and four children.

"Six years ago, I met Swami here because of family problems," Craxi, 47, said of Sai Baba. "Swami solved the problem and I decided to stay here because I was so full of love for Swami."

Sai Baba claims to be an avatar, the incarnation of Hindu God.

His followers say he is omniscient, can heal the sick and wounded and perform miracles such as stopping flood waters or bringing a dead man back to life.

Although he was born a Hindu, the overwhelming majority religion in India, he preaches that all religions are one.

"There is only one caste, the caste of humanity; only one religion, religion of love; only one language, language of heart," he said while sitting in a swiveling, red-velvet, throne-like chair inside the temple's small private room.

Except for the handful of married couples at the ashram, men and women are not permitted to mix. Even at the daily darshan, the men and women sit apart.

Also prohibited are smoking, drinking of alcohol and eating of meat and eggs. The posted rules advise the adherents to "devote your time to spiritual activities and... confine all conversation to spiritual matters as far as possible."

Sai Baba said the ashram is paid for by private donations from devotees. The commune also has a trust, but no one here said they knew its worth.

"There is no money collections," Sai Baba said. "A big trust is there. I don't want any help from others."

Among his believers is a young couple from Fort Lee, N.J. Michael and Faith Hollander got married on the ashram and are now considering settling here.

What message has Sai Baba given them?

"Where there is love there is peace," said Hollander, 32. "Where there is peace there is truth. Where there is truth there is bliss. Where there is bliss there is God."

NASA studies space sickness

From Wire Reports

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Three of the four scientists aboard the Spacelab shuttle mission last December became space sick and vomited, but researchers believe the experience has provided important clues to solving the space sickness problem.

Nearly half the astronauts who have flown in the shuttle missions have experienced space sickness to one degree or another, and NASA has been seeking an explanation and a cure.

Two doctor-astronauts were sent aloft last year to investigate the malaise, but last week physiologists reported on studies in orbit for the first time. On the basis of the crew's experiments on the Spacelab mission, "We believe space sickness is a form of motion sickness," said one of the researchers, Charles M. Oman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The most serious cause of space sickness appeared to be erroneous visual cues caused by the loss of clearly identifiable references to up and down. Looking at fellow crewmen in unusual attitudes was "provocative" of space sickness, the researchers found.

The crew members reported that using the drug Scopdex (the anti-seasickness drug Scopolomine combined with Dexedrine) helped alleviate the symptoms, as did reducing activity, maintaining visual verticals and wedging themselves into a corner.

Friends mourn Marvin Gaye

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Friends and colleagues of Marvin Gaye, including Stevie Wonder, Smokey Robinson and Dick Gregory, mourned the soul singer at a memorial service but lingered thanks for his music and friendship.

"I will miss Marvin's smile, with that little half-grin," Gregory, the comedian-turned-political activist, said in a eulogy Thursday. "When he smiled, you knew what a good day in June looked like."

"We're sharing a great loss with the world, but not really, because his music will always be left as a legacy," singer Robinson said of the man whose hits included "I Heard It Through the Grapevine," "What's Goin' On" and "Sexual Healing."

About 450 family and friends gathered Thursday — proclaimed by Mayor Tom Bradley as a day of mourning for Gaye — at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in the Hollywood Hills to say a last goodbye.

Gaye's body lay in an open casket in the chapel, which was filled with flowers and the electronic equipment that helped Gaye make his music.

"He's somewhere where nobody can hurt him from now on," said Robinson.

Wonder, playing a synthesizer in the funeral hall, sang a tribute to his longtime friend, a new song he said he started on Saturday, the day before Gaye was shot to death.

"I really thought we could have made it to that forever and a day," Wonder sang, "but destiny and fate decided to give it away."

Gaye was shot Sunday, the day before his 45th birthday, in the Crenshaw area-home he shared with his parents.

His father, retired minister Marvin Gaye Sr., 70, has been charged with murder and authorities allege he shot his son when the singer intervened in an argument his parents were having over a misplaced letter.

At Thursday's service, Little Richard, the 1950s rock 'n' roll star, was one of several people who sang hymns. About 20 members of Gaye's band filled the room with a jazzy medley of his music, ending with a crescendo of drums and cymbals, as Gaye's children and mother, Alberta, listened.

"Strengthen us, especially this mother," said Bishop S.P. Rawlings, superintendent of the House of God Inc., who presided at the ceremony.

Rawlings said he was a longtime friend of Gaye Sr., who was being held on $100,000 bail. A judge ordered him to undergo psychiatric examinations and entered an innocent plea for him.

"I wish Marvin Sr. was sitting here so I could tell him I love him," Gregory said.

Another 'Night of Stars' shines

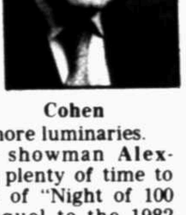

Cohen

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Dynasty" triangle of John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Joan Collins will be there, so plans for a repeat of the "Night of 100 Stars" extravaganza are moving right along — as soon as the organizer signs up 97 more luminaries.

But Broadway showman Alexander Cohen has plenty of time to complete the cast of "Night of 100 Stars II." The sequel to the 1982 event, which brought together more than 200 of the biggest names in show business, isn't being held for 10 months.

Cohen said Thursday that the next celebrity gathering will be taped on Feb. 17, 1985, at Radio City Music Hall, and will be televised later that spring as a three-hour special on ABC.

Basie

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz bandleader Count Basie, who has suffered two heart attacks in recent years, is being hospitalized for treatment of a "rather severe" ulcer, a spokesman says.

Wayne Hutchison, a spokesman for Willard Alexander Inc. in New York City, Basie's booking agent, said Thursday that the 79-year-old pianist was in a Florida hospital, but he declined to disclose exactly where.

Hutchison said Basie's doctor told him not to reveal the bandleader's whereabouts.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — King Carl XVI Gustav and Queen Silvia of Sweden made two distinctly different stops during their first day in Rio de Janeiro.

After flying in from Sao Paulo on Thursday, the royal couple first participated in a solemn ceremony marked by military pomp and a 21-gun salute at a bayside monument dedicated to Brazil's unknown soldier who died fighting for the Allies in World War II.

Later in the afternoon, they visited Rio's richly decorated Saint Benedict Monastery, or Sao Bento, as it is called in Brazil's Portuguese language. There, in sharp contrast to the somber war monument ceremony, the king and queen were greeted by laughing schoolchildren who slipped through the frustrated Brazilian security agents to get a closer look at them.

In Sao Paulo, the couple officially inaugurated an "Art in Sweden" exhibit at the Sao Paulo Museum of Art.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, continuing to sweep the entertainment world's highest honors, won best pop video and best male performance for "Beat It" at the second annual American Video Awards.

Jackson's videos also won two technical awards in ceremonies Thursday.

Cyndi Lauper was honored for best performance by a female with "Girls Just Want To Have Fun," and The Police won for best group performance in "Every Breath You Take."

Herbie Hancock won first place for soul video with "Rockit," and Merle Haggard and Willie Nelson's "Pancho & Lefty" video scored first for best country video.

Bob Giraldi took best director honors for "Beat It."

The two-hour presentation, sponsored by the 500-plus members of the American Video Association and hosted by disc jockey Casey Kasem, was taped for coast-to-coast TV syndication at a later date.

Michael Nesmith, performer, producer and director, was inducted into the video association's Hall of Fame.

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A woman who says her marriage crumbled while her ex-husband spent $75 a week on lottery tickets contends she deserves a share of the $1 million he won one month and two days after their divorce.

But the ex-husband, who has since quit his factory job, says he spent just $15 a week buying chances in the state's lottery games, and argues that his child support payments should be cut in half because he now has custody of one of the couple's teen-age children.

Nancy Anderson, a 34-year-old administrative secretary who has since remarried, filed suit against her ex-husband, John Radzik, in Worcester Probate Court to change the provisions of the original, pre-Megabucks divorce settlement.

Radzik won $1,003,700 playing the state's Megabucks game on Aug. 27, 1983. He receives the money in 20 equal annual payments.

Philip exhibits philosophic rationality

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — One of the most remarkable personalities in Europe today is Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh.

He is remarkable not because he is the consort of Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain, but because of the philosophic rationality of his outspoken views on a wide range of political, economic, educational, scientific, religious, environmental and human problems.

Under the British parliamentary system, the monarch can publicly express views concerning domestic or foreign problems only on the advice of and in accordance with the policies of the government in power. Whether this restriction applies to the spouse of a monarch is a question on which British officials profess to have vague knowledge. No attempt, however, has been made to apply it to the handsome, popular Greek-born Prince who married the then Princess Elizabeth in 1947.

With a wisdom that he may have inherited from such Greek philosophers as Socrates, the 62-year-old Prince has publicly expressed over the past 20 years views that will give no comfort to bigots.

He has no sympathy "with people who claim to know what is good for others." He thinks the average individual, including the housewife, should be "released from the bondage of perpetual work" and given the opportunity to choose doing what they would really enjoy doing.

Because of the immense increase in world population, he favors birth control. Because he believes "orderly peaceful existence depends on discipline and restraint," he advocates restriction and control of human existence, both individually and internationally."

Critical of religions which are too zealous in the propagation of their faith, he thinks "probably the most glaring examples of the corruption of systems by the least attractive qualities and instincts of human nature can be found in some of the world's great religions." In an obvious reference to Ayatollah Khomeini's Islamic fundamentalist revolution, he wrote recently that such fanatical religions preach "peace, goodwill and the brotherhood of man, and yet many of them have been used by the unscrupulous to cause more human conflict and misery than any other system, save perhaps communism."

He takes to task the local communities and the educational systems for not making sure young people are exposed to the worthwhile things in life. "The increasing isolation of individual families, the increasing materialism in ordinary education and the increasing divergence of science and religion have all made it more difficult for young people to find a convincing set of rules for living. Result: boredom, frustration, anti-social or more usual anti-authority behavior, deliquency and the excitement of crime."

He believes youth must be allowed to "live dangerously without being destructive, to be enterprising without being criminal," and that young people should be encouraged to engage in such adventures as mountain climbing "where the fascination is not in risking death by ignorance or incompetence but in successfully overcoming the risks by careful training and preparation."

He thinks too much permissiveness has developed into "a dictatorship of licence" and there is need for a return to a higher sense of morality and self-discipline.

These candid views of the great, great grandson of Queen Victoria are set forth in his book, "Men, Machines and Sacred Cows," just published in London and which includes some of the lectures and speeches he has made dating back to 1967.

Among some of his philosophic maxims are:

"There is nothing wrong in this world that cannot be cured by people;"

"Some highly trained intellectuals seem to have such poor judgement;"

"Boredom and idleness are poverty of the spirit;"

"Decency has nothing to do with intelligence. There are really only two categories of people, the good and the bad or the decent and the indecent;"

"It is tempting to suggest that nuclear weapons are the ultimate social and cultural challenge of modern technology, but it would not be quite accurate. The challenge is not to such abstract concepts as society or culture. The challenge is directly to our human nature and to the way we think and the way we use our brains. The question is whether the threat of a cataclysmic disaster can possibly bring those traditional origins of conflict, human greed, ambition and good intentions, under some sort of rational restraint and control."

A different kind of luxury car.

The 1985 Buick Electra.

No longer can a luxury car be judged by the thickness of its seats and the smoothness of its ride alone. Now there is the new Electra. Of course, its seats are comfortable and its ride unruffled. That's to be expected from any car bearing the name Electra. But now there's more. There's the response of Multi-port Fuel Injection. The precision of power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering. The traction of front wheel drive. And the ride of a four-wheel independent suspension.
