MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 2.—One American marine was killed and five wounded in a fight with the rebel forces of General Sandino yesterday afternoon, while marching to reinforce the marine garrison at Quilali, near which a sanguinary battle was fought on Friday, when five Marines were killed and 28 others wounded.

After a sharp skirmish, the rebels were defeated and fled to the mountains. Their losses could not be determined.

First Sergeant Thomas G. Bruce of the United States marine corps who also was a lieutenant in the Nicaraguan national guard, was killed in yesterday's fighting. His home was in Philadelphia.

Lieutenant Merton A. Reichel, United States marine corps of Wisconsin, was seriously wounded. Four other marines were wounded but their names had not been reported here today.

Bitter Campaign Waged By Leader

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 2.—United States marines were engaged today in a bitter campaign against rebels led by General Augustino Sandino after a sanguinary battle in which five marines were killed and 22 wounded.

The marines, operating with Nicaraguan national guardsmen, drove the rebels from the Sandino headquarters near Quilali, a few miles south of the Honduran border, Friday. The rebels, informed by spies of the 4,900 advance, were fully prepared to meet the attack and the patrol was forced to defeat a thoroughly trained and well equipped force of 500 insurgents to gain their objective.

Outside Aid Received

It is regarded as certain that Sandino is receiving outside aid because his men are better equipped and armed than heretofore.

A gun battle ensued when a policeman entered the store and Thoms was killed. Immediately after Hickman's confession Hunt was arrested. Mrs. Thoms is said to have identified him and Hickman as the robber pair.

HIGHWAY CLUB OF TEXAS LAYS BIG PROGRAM

EIGHT VITAL PLANKS IN PLATFORM GIVEN FOR NEW YEAR

PORT WORTH, Jan. 2 (AP)—A major highway improvement campaign for 1928 will be launched next month by the Highway Club of Texas, it was announced today by W. T. Wheeler, general manager of the club.

The campaign will contain eight vital planks for Texas which call for a continued aggressive campaign designated to improve road conditions as they affect the motoring public and to give the state in the shortest time possible a complete and comprehensive system of durable highways, according to Wheeler. This campaign includes:

1. A constitutional amendment providing the state with full authority to establish, construct and maintain state designated highways. This amendment, it was pointed out, is necessary in order that the state highway department may map out a program of highway construction covering a period of years, instead of as under the present system, less than two years.
2. A constitutional amendment authorizing a $100,000,000 revolving fund highway bond issue, to be used exclusively in building durable highways. A two-cent gasoline tax to be set aside to provide interest and sinking fund to provide these bonds.
3. A survey under the direction of the state highway engineer, classifying designated highways as A, B, C, etc., according to their importance to public service, completing at least two trunk lines running from north to south and at least two from east to west, within the shortest possible time.
4. Statutory provisions requiring road contractors to provide and maintain satisfactory detours under supervision of the state engineer during the construction of state roads. The contractor may figure in the cost and maintenance of the detour in his bid for construction work.
5. Readjustment of automotive license fees, not reducing the fees, but equalizing them, also equalizing weights.
6. An enactment of all such parts of the Hoover motor car act as may be deemed necessary, supplementing the body of our present laws.
7. Amendments to the statute empowering counties to protect county roads that are not part of the state system.
8. Statutory provisions empowering counties or districts to match state and federal aid in highway bridge construction in order that full benefit may be derived from the amendment to the original federal aid act of 1915, passed in the last session of congress, which will eliminate privately owned toll bridges on designated highways.

FAMOUS DANCER DIES IN PARIS OF PNEUMONIA

(By Associated Press)
PARIS, Jan. 2.—Loie Fuller, dancer who became center of controversy during Queen Marie's tour of the United States in 1925, died today of pneumonia.

Loie Fuller gained fame as a dancer in the nineties and was a wartime friend of Queen Marie. She preceded Marie to the United States and it was reported that she was trying to influence the Rumanian queen in her social activities in New York.

Left user's Train
When Queen Marie's special train reached Spokane, Washington, Miss Fuller joined the royal party with May Birkhead, a press agent, and Miss Gabrielle Bloch, a secretary. The Fuller party became involved in much controversy aboard the train and they left it at Denver on November 10, 1925. It was announced that Miss Fuller left on her own accord. On rumors that the dancer had been banished, both Miss Fuller and the royal party were silent.

The dancer, who was born on a farm near Chicago, went to Paris after triumphs in America. She began her stage career in the Academy of Music in Chicago, in child parts and later became a soprano. Invention of the "serpentine" dance won her fame as a dancer.

Progress Shown In College Activities

A concrete example of the progress of the South Plains in the matter of business after the two years of financial stress is evidenced by the fact that five students of the Lubbock Business College were placed in new positions today and several other calls have been placed with the college for office help.

Miss Jack Alcorn was placed in the office of Sheriff Douglas, Muleshoe, Texas, while Miss Emma Lou Jones was placed with the Pontiac-Oakland sales agency, Littlefield, Texas, and Miss Myrtle Sansome with a real estate office in Littlefield; Edward Gray went to Stanton with the Williams Auto Supply company and Miss Lucille Williams with the Pierce Oil company in Lubbock.

Under the decision of Judge Leuders, Remus was ordered committed to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Lima.

Mr. Thompson took the position only on the earnest invitation of the commission, Mr. Teer said and with the understanding that he would be relieved when an organization had been built and the work started well under way.

"He (Thompson) feels that his responsibility has been discharged and plans, I understand, to open an engineering consulting office in Dallas."

had escaped injury despite a minimum of 10 degrees Monday. At Childress the temperature Monday morning was 18 degrees. Gulf coast towns reported temperatures far below the freezing point. At Galveston, a minimum of 21 was reached but the temperature was rising slowly Monday under a warm sun. Beaumont shivered under a 17 degree minimum Monday morning and reported that more than six hundred automobiles with burst radiators were towed to garages.

Truck growers in the Laredo district suffered losses of thousands of dollars, it was said, when the temperature dropped to 18 degrees Sunday night. Most of the vegetables, except onions, were badly damaged.

Freezing Weather Grips Entire West

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 2 (AP)—Freezing temperatures today continued to protect the snow blanket covering the west as the mercury slowly started its climb from zero and below.

While points east of the continental divide generally reported relief from the bitter cold experienced over the week-end, snow, sleet and rain moved along the western slope, Montana, claiming the record with 94 below, still was confronted with sub-zero readings.

Although numerous traffic accidents occurred, casualty lists were comparatively small. Five persons were injured when a Union Pacific passenger train hit a snow and rock slide as it crawled through a blizzard 30 miles east of Portland, Ore. One of the two locomotives, mail car and baggage car plunged into a shallow river. All but two of the eleven coaches were derailed.

Snow and sleet was general in Washington, Oregon and parts of Idaho.

Thermometers rose slowly in Oklahoma and northern Texas.

Score Known Dead Over Middlewest

CHICAGO, Jan. 2 (AP)—King winter said: "Happy New Year" with a heavy snow storm and below zero weather which gripped the entire middlewest, caused a score of deaths from exposure and accidents and left many sections still snowbound, with a forecast of continued sub-zero weather today.

The weather—man predicted slightly rising temperatures late today or tomorrow, however.

North Dakota Coldest
Chicago's highest temperature yesterday was seven degrees above zero, but with nightfall the mercury hurried down toward a predicted five degrees below. The lowest reading was from Edmonton Alta., with 30 degrees below, while Williston, N. D., recorded the coldest in the United States with 24 degrees below at 7 p. m.

Snow And Blizzard Grips New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP)—Heavy snows and a cold snap which wintered the lowest temperatures of the season, today had northern Pennsylvania and New York state in its frigid grasp.

In Erie, Pa., from four to five feet of snow paralyzed traffic.

In Wilkesbarre, one death was attributed to the cold, a resident being found dead on the porch of his home.

Blizzards In North
In the southern portions of New York state, including New York City, biting winds and cold clear weather prevailed, but northern counties reported the added complication of blizzard conditions in several sections.

In New York City, the municipal lodging house and havens maintained by philanthropic organizations, were besieged by those seeking shelter. A child was killed when struck by a heavy scaffolding plank loosed by the gale.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 2 (AP)

Stung by the coldest barbs this winter yet has cast the south today continued its greetings to the New Year through chattering teeth since whirling gales has chased the mercury overnight to new low seasons levels. The temperature ranged from four degrees below at Asheville, N. C., and three below at Louisville, Ky., to 22 degrees above zero at Jacksonville, Fla., and New Orleans, 35 at Tampa and 43 at Miami. Atlanta had two above and Birmingham six. The weather bureau predicted but slight changes in the next 48 hours.

Large Shipment Of Delco Plants Here

Indicative of the progress and prosperity of the rural sections of the South Plains, a shipment of 40 Delco light plants, the largest ever sent to the South Plains was received today by Davis Brothers, local dealers, to be distributed in homes in the county and adjoining territory. The machines are the latest in design and well equipped to serve modern farm home and plant.

The management reports practically the entire shipment is now sold and will be delivered to the customers this week. Davis Brothers have been dealers for the Fridaire and Delco light products in Lubbock since August.

England's View
WE have been hearing a great deal about British propaganda lately. Here is a reaction to it from the other side, as expressed by John Foster Fraser, in the London Graphic.

"Of course it does not matter two hoots what I think about America. But as many 100 per cent Americans have been telling British the truth about themselves, a little reciprocity ought not to be out of place."

"My disadvantage is that on and off, I have lived for only five or six years in the United States. I lack the keen penetration and crisp intelligence of alert Americans who make a rush tour through the decadent lands of the Atlantic, and then, on returning to their home towns, give illuminating interviews on 'What's Wrong with Europe.'"

"The vibrant patriotism of Americans thrills me. The chief of the British foreign relations committee in Congress—who boasts he has never been abroad, and is not going abroad, because he recognizes that coming in contact with alien influences might just conceivably give a tremor to the foundation on which his effulgent patriotism is built. No English statesman has the courage to make a stand like that."

"Really, I do not know why any Americans should allow themselves to be perturbed by what stodgy European say about them. But they are nervous and jumpy, some old role of a monarchical country has devolved on their sweet democratic vigidity. And now Big Bill Thompson, master of the buried out what similarly educated countrymen of his have been quietly thinking."

"Just now the world is called upon to witness the dastardly behavior of little England toward a great and glorious nation which times its population. Big Bill Thompson has sounded the tocsin.
His declaration has rung the fiery bell which has sped from Hoboken to Hollywood and all true Americans have been called upon at $10 a piece to sign a petition which will save their country from being annexed to the British empire. Whatever the cost, King George shall not be allowed to set up his capital in Chicago."

"Though America is believed to have the riches of the gold of the world, a tremor seems patriotic Americans whenever an Englishman approaches, for he will have more gold in his pouch for purposes of bribery and corruption—and bribery and corruption is a noxious foreign sin of which Americans want to know nothing.
It is notorious that the British ambassador has bags of gold to subvert the loyalty of congress—but so far congressmen have stood adamant against graft, rebuffs and subventions."

"We have done our worst to quander brotherly feeling between the United States and the Latin republics on the American continent.
We have been suggesting that the reason republics south of the United States do not like Uncle Sam is because they resent his big brother-with-the-big-stick attitude towards them. The truth is that little republics like Nicaragua would have flocked up to America, like a cat purring on being stroked, if it had not been for our unduehand propaganda."

"In new school books, written so that the youth of the United States shall know real history, England will be taught where it gets off. Of course there will be some sympathy for the poor wretches in England who are down-trodden by haughty lords and such atrociousisms. But on our side it is not advisable to extend any sympathy to America for the appalling amount of crime which hangs over that great land like a devastating fog. That is none of our business.
It is our gold-weighted propaganda which makes millions of Americans wake up in the middle of the night, and utter the words, 'The king's privy has been hoisted over the head of the Knights of the Round Table.'"

That Girl on Broadway says these days whiskey is a lot like pyrotechnics. Four out of five have it, —and the fifth knows where to get it.

Now that all our New Year's resolutions have been made and broken we can again settle down to enjoying ourselves.

The Plainsman is feeling particularly cheery this evening. He has just woke up to the fact that two of his prognostications have come true—which is some record for any columnist.

Regular patients will no doubt remember the dissertation on the $5,000 blood-money reward, offered by the Bankers' association of Texas, which was criticized in no uncertain terms by The Plainsman. A number of our leading citizens became highly excited and disagreed violently with the attitude taken by this column. However, none of them have had anything to say since three Mexicans were planted in front of a Stanton bank and shot down by gentlemen whose moral judgment was overbalanced or entirely obliterated by the dollar sign.

The Plainsman still contends that the blood-money offer is un-American and decidedly in opposition to our constitution, which says that every man is entitled to a trial by jury when he has been charged with the commission of a crime. If the Bankers association wishes to do something to discourage the robbing of its institutions, it should insist that something should be done to make the practice less popular—a reward for the arrest and conviction of bank robbers would be a great deal more fair.

In the case of little Eddie Hickman the polished and neat appearing Sunday school lad who kidnapped and brutally murdered little Marian Parker, The Plainsman takes another opportunity to say, "I told you so." Just as prophesied in this column the day after the crime was discovered, Eddie has been received as his legal counselor a reputable attorney and an insensible plea is already a certainty. There is no doubt of certain conviction and a death sentence for Eddie but The Plainsman can see no reason for dragging the trial out. The fiend who murdered a little child in a period of less than an hour will probably not be convicted and will be set free in less than two months span of time. That may be justice, swift and sure, but not in The Plainsman's way of figuring it.

That Man on Avenue Q says there are 2734 languages in the world and when his wife gets mad he can speak them all. Fortunately!

From what The Plainsman has been able to hear some of the faculty members of Texas Tech have become highly incensed over a greek letter name being given a social club made up of college students and an expert entering members of the organization to change the name is expected in the near future. Although a mere layman and admittedly out of touch with a great many of the problems which confront the great state institution which is an important part of our community, The Plainsman knows of a number of other problems of more importance to the college to which faculty members might look first in an effort to better conditions on the campus and among the students. What's in a name?
Suppose this innocent little organization has taken greek letters as its insignia? Suppose the name is changed, will it make any difference? A rose, by any other name is just as sweet, so would this little club remain the same in intent were the greek letters dropped and another commoner substituted.
Such reform in a great institution like Texas Tech seems just a little bit petty. Faculty members and students alike should have more weighty problems on their minds.

Nowadays it's popular to get a degree at college and a decree at court.

The man whose mother used to make ties out of an old dress now has a daughter who makes dresses out of old ties.

The husband who writes blank checks to his wife is not nearly so popular as the one who writes blank checks.

The lady who wants to put a "chair of love" in a southern university probably doesn't know they have park benches in that town.

Hatched, I admit my ignorance of the dark designs to incorporate America within the empire—highly already outrageously embraces one-quarter of the habitable earth. But I, beseech America not to quiver, not to be downhearted.

Dutcher Is Wondering If They've Got Something On Al Smith; Nicky Longworth Has Lost Some Poundage

IN NEW YORK
SEE-SAWING
and
DOWN BROADWAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—It was one of Speaker Nick Longworth's numerous admirers who first called your correspondent's attention to the fact that he had lost what she called his tummy.

Between sessions, it appears, he golfed and biked off perhaps as much as 20 pounds. Just now he is somewhat concerned over his inability to exercise in the afternoon when the house is in session, and finds the excess weight beginning to creep back upon him.

But, while others ride horseback this very amiable and popular man and his famous spots often take long walks through Rock Creek park. Thus far, Speaker Nick has acquired no new regular walking companion. For years he walked old over the place with Senator Jimmy Wadsworth of New York and for a time Congressman Crumpacker of Oregon accompanied them. Wadsworth lost his seat in the Senate last year and returned to New York In the summer, Crumpacker committed suicide. Now Longworth generally walks alone.

One hears so many stories these days which center on Governor Al Smith of New York that one cannot be sure of anything but the importance of such matters, as important than such matters are whether any of them are more Speaker Nick's weight or not.

For instance, a tale comes from a strong center of anti-Smith influence to the effect that his enemies at last believe they have something on Al Smith. It is whispered gleefully that soon after the first of the year, the mouthpiece chosen to spill the evidence against Smith will begin to spout.
Smith-haters hope to ruin his chances for the Democratic nomination.

One hears so many things in this gossip mart. If this particular report is true it will mean that your correspondent had a good advan-tip on an important news break. If the attack on Smith doesn't develop as predicted, it will only be another indication of the searching scrutiny which is being applied to the New York governor's public and private life. There is a minority in this country which hates him bitterly and will continue to do so, though the relative strength of the pro-Smith element remains to be determined.

There have been many attacks on Smith, but the man has displayed a remarkable genius for emerging unscathed and delivering some terrific clouts at his attackers. Every New York Republican leader who has grappled with Smith has been driven to cover and when Charles Evans Hughes comes not to be a candidate the organization couldn't find a Republican in all that great state who could even function as a favorite son to hold the New York delegation together in next June's national convention.

Some attempt seems to be in progress to convince Al that he is the early church paintings. You rather feel that, at least some of them, are likely to remain secretaries.

With such introductions the piece strikes a humanizing note. It may deal in billions but one of its desks is quite as cluttered with papers as your own. If you could find a poker man, a bar and a couch, you might like to join Mr.
23—if the dues were not too stiff.

LOOKING THEIR BEST
Now that censorship of bobbed hair has ceased, the style is losing popularity with women. Boyish bobs, shingled neaps, swirl bobs and their equivalents are becoming daily less evident in fashionable circles, and the notes everywhere of glory in the growing-out stage. The fashionable winter couture of girls and women is the lengthy bob curled or marcelled and drawn back of the ear into tiny curls. Hairpins, consequently, are again being used, though the most popular ones have changed their style in order to meet the needs of stubby growing-out locks.

This does not mean that bobbed hair is absolutely passe. On the contrary, it gives promise of enduring for many a day but the fashion is old enough now to have lost its allure and leadership, and no longer regard it with favor. One who wears a bob unrestrained by pins or invisible clasps, or one who indulges in a very short hair cut is not smart, as fashionists have a way of saying.

Deer Season Ends
At Year's Closing

Today marks the end of the open season on deer and turkey, according to announcement made by Res-coe Parks, district deputy game warden, who issued a warning to hunters that deer and turkey slain after December 31 will bring a severe penalty.

Wild turkey in West Texas, while scarce in some parts, is by no means gone, hunters report, and many such fowl have filled Lubbock household larders.

The season on quail lasts until January 15, Mr. Parks said.

The Blazing Horizon

THE STORY THUS FAR
When JEFF HARRISON, gambler, is killed in a poker game in Caldwell, Kan., his 13-year-old son, TONY, is taken to the Bar K ranch in the Indian territory by JOE CRAIG, who promises himself the boy's guardianship.

There TONY is welcomed by TITUS MOORE, owner of the Bar K brand, and his little daughter, RITA. Another who has befriended Tony is GORDON W. LILLIE, who later becomes known as PAWNER BILL, whom he teaches school at the Indian reservation in Pawnee.

In the months that follow, reports come to the Bar K of the activities of the now notorious Benton gang, TOM BENTON being the murderer of Jeff Harrison. Joe and Tony depart for Pawnee to visit Pawner Bill. There they learn that he is going to take a bunch of Indians with him and join BUFFALO BILL's wild west show.

CHAPTER XX
It was rather lonely at the ranch as Moore and his wife and daughter had gone to Virginia for visit, with the likelihood that she and her mother would remain at the girl be placed in a finishing school in Richmond.

Mr. Moore had decided that Rita had had enough of the school in the city, and he had decided not to send her in that way. He had decided himself to seeing less of his wife and daughter until things had cleared themselves more definitely in the Indian territory.

He explained the situation to Tony Harrison when he returned. Rita's mother never did like it over here anyway, and now that Rita's growing up she figures it's no place to rear her as a young lady—as she puts it—and give her some of the educational advantages that young girls ought to have.

"I reckon I can see her way of reasoning all right," he looked over toward the rustic structure, half back and half dugout that he had dignified with the name of ranch house. "I guess it is sort of uncomfortable here for a woman who's been accustomed to luxuries most of her life. In Kansas it wasn't so bad; I had a decent house to live in and a barn that wasn't an eyesore. Here, half of the thing that I call a ranch house is dug in the side of a hill, and the excuse is that it has a few rough times thrown together for the excuse purpose of keeping the winter winds and snows off that Kentucky-sounding of mine."

But he added it couldn't be helped. There certainly was little wisdom in erecting expensive buildings on a ranch that was his only source of income, the Cherokee Indians. The rude buildings were a constant reminder of the uncertainty of the status; there was no telling when the government might decide to run him, and others like him, out of the territory.

He had a little to tell to Tony, who here because I was selfish enough to grab at a chance to run a ranch with no overhead to it, was unable to lay any plans looking ahead to a permanent stay, in price I pay for it. He cast a speculative eye toward her and his men, a few rods distant. The spring roundup was on, and Craig was busy supervising the loading of new calves. "I guess," Mrs. Moore continued with a smile, "his mother was pretty good to let it out down here as long as she did. She's forgotten what a neighbor looks like."

They agreed with him. "I think you're mighty fine of her, considering. And it will be nice for Rita to go to school in the east," he said. And it was a quizical that the boy. "I'll start this mornin'." "What you?" "I'll be giving Joe Craig and boys a hand."

It had been inevitable, of course. This country was a very certain place for a woman—not yet at least. Mrs. Moore had made many sacrifices, but denying her daughter the advantages that their money commanded and letting her remain in a wild-uncertain country where the peculiar conditions of cattle-raising were so dubious as to forbid even the erection of a suitable home, were not included among them. Mrs. Moore was certainly not to be blamed.

When Rita inquired when she was to get to school, he grinned. "That's right, I'll be giving Joe Craig and boys a hand."

"What you?" "I'll be giving Joe Craig and boys a hand."

"I've got a living to make, and there's plenty of time to think about that later. I thought maybe I'd like to go with you school where it might be arranged for me to pay all the bills." He spoke awkwardly, realizing he was making a bad job of putting his thoughts into words.

The boy looked away before answering. "I'm real obliged to you for the offer, but right now I can't do that way. I've got some money myself, so far as that's concerned, and I wouldn't have had that if it hadn't been for you."

He pressed Titus Moore's hand earnestly. "I just want to stay on the Bar K for a while, Colonel." He swung around abruptly and left, and whistled the air of a cowboy long he had learned from Craig.

He was not anxious for the colonel to know the true state of his feelings. "I'll sure hate to leave him," he soliloquized, and turned a moment later to look back. Titus Moore appeared to be engaged in earnest conversation with the beloved Fancy. He was shaking his head, a gesture that Tony interpreted as an expression of his disappointment that his offer had gone unheeded. With another, Tony might have argued the matter, but the point of insistence, but the best of it, better than any, the kindness of the boy's nature and his own delicacy prevented him from pursuing further what Tony.

In his independent way, might have construed as an offer too charitable to permit of acceptance.

"I guess I was a fool, Fancy," he said to the mare. "The boy's got more education in his head than most high school graduates, and more down-right sense than most people twice his age. He had the advantage of an intelligent father—which is what you have, Fancy. I guess human beings and horses are pretty much alike, after all."

Tony Harrison was thinking, as he fell to work that the summer ahead of him would be something to be endured rather than enjoyed. Therefore summer had always meant the presence of Rita Moore, who, if she was properly minded, was more to him than he had begun to realize until a few short weeks before. He closed his eyes and Rita stood before him as he had last seen her the day she had left for Virginia. Her hair was that curly mass, her eyes gray and downturned behind lashes of startling length and blackness; her face with its square little chin and its impudent little nose, across the whiteness of which there trailed a handful of tiny freckles, wreathed in a shy smile.

That smile, he reflected, had been the revelation of a new Rita. It lingered with him, to puzzle him during the daylight hours and set him to thinking far into the night. He had never seen her smile like that before, and there had been something infinitely saddening in it, as if it had spelled the end of their careless comradeship and summoned him to a realization that childhood for her had ended.

Rita was 15, and how like a young lady she had looked as she had boarded the train at Caldwell! Her hair, which he had been accustomed to seeing in a disordered mass of curls about her shoulders, had been gathered up behind with a few ringlets left to stray down below her ears. A tiny hat, the color of the prevailing mode, had been pinned on top, well toward the front, and he had beheld her for the first time in a full length skirt. Her ears had been pierced to accommodate the small but beautiful pearl ornaments her father had given her on her fifteenth birthday.

Everywhere he went now, as he rode the range in company with Joe Craig or followed the trails he and Rita had ridden over in days past—himself often reluctantly and protesting—he thought of her and so constant reminders of her former laughing presence. Here it was that she had summoned him so completely for their first ride together and Joe Craig had been in aid to come to his rescue; here it was that Outlaw had dragged his unconscious form the time she had wanted him into riding the vicious horse, here where they had sat together, his leg in splints, and he had told her about himself and Jeff Harrison's banks.

Along the banks of Cottonwood creek he rode past hundreds of red-bud trees in flaming purple bloom and sought the spot where he had killed the huge black snake that had wrapped itself around the leg of her horse and frightened her into momentary hysteria. He had been proud that day of his marksmanship and his coolness, and not a little contemptuous of her panic.

It was the same everywhere he rode; hardly a spot but conjured forth some poignant memory, and he felt as one who has suffered a great loss. She was gone now and the ranch would not know her again as it had known her in the past. She might return at the summer's end, but she would not be the same, and a brief visit, and she would go back after a brief visit, and she would go back after the solemn-faced Virginians had their mother and father had moved among.

It had been inevitable, of course. This country was a very certain place for a woman—not yet at least. Mrs. Moore had made many sacrifices, but denying her daughter the advantages that their money commanded and letting her remain in a wild-uncertain country where the peculiar conditions of cattle-raising were so dubious as to forbid even the erection of a suitable home, were not included among them. Sailors fear the "doldrums." The doldrums are zones of calmness when a steady wind is lacking and ships under sail can make no progress. Steam ships do not fear such zones because they have the power of steam and make their own progress.

In the same way, merchants who use the "steam" of Advertising, do not fear the calm of business. They go straight ahead.

630 Farms Visited By Eaton In Year

Six hundred and thirty farms in Lubbock county were visited by County Agent D. F. Eaton, during his past year's work, it was revealed by his annual report which was completed yesterday. These farms were located in ten different communities. According to the report, he had 116 boys to complete their club work during the year. The club membership in the county totalled 233 boys. Two hundred and twenty-seven and a half days were spent in the field by Mr. Eaton during the year while 39 1-2 days were spent in office work.

LUBBOCK TO BE REPRESENTED IN TURKEY EXHIBIT

One of the biggest turkey shows that have ever been held in the southwest will be staged at Dallas January 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16, under the supervision of the Southwestern Turkey club.

G. R. Warner, Denton is the secretary-treasurer of the club and has written the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce that things are shaping up for a big turkey exhibit. Officials of the club are anxious that a large number of turkey breeders from each district of the southwest send in entries to the show.

Entries should be mailed at once to Warner at Denton. Lubbock and South Plains people have found that the raising of turkeys is a profitable industry. Hundreds of farmers over the section have marketed hundreds of dollars worth of turkeys this year. The fowls are being marketed in ever increasing numbers on the Plains. The exhibits at Dallas will tend to increase the interest in the turkey raising industry. Publicity of the show will tend to attract attention of buyers of the north and east and will help create a greater demand on the markets for Texas turkeys.

Science and art are said to be flourishing in Russia. There are now 30 institutes of industry, chemistry and technology in Russia, all supported by the Soviet government.

Cupid's Dart True But Plan Is Halted

At least one Lubbock county couple have found the course of true love does not run smooth, and are now trying to find out what can be done after the girl's father tore up the marriage license after the young man had taken it out from the office of the county clerk here.

Both the young man and the girl are of age, the girl giving her age as 24, and the young man as 32. The license was issued last Saturday, and the two intended to be married last Sunday. The girl, however, took the license home, and her father, who objected to the match, found it and tore it up.

Legally, the girl's father is liable to prosecution, as both parties are of age, but neither of the couple wishes to take this recourse.

STUDENTS ARE PLAN OFFERED ENROUTE HOME TO REORGANIZE FROM DETROIT ALL EDUCATION

TEXAS DELEGATIONS MUCH IN EVIDENCE AT ANNUAL MEET

(Special To The Journal) KANSAS CITY, Jan. 2.—Approximately 100 students from Texas colleges and universities started their jaunt homeward today after attending the tenth Quadriennial Student Volunteer conference which closed here last night after a four day session featured by discussion of educational religious problems of the world. More than 3,000 students from practically every institution in the United States and Canada were present at the conference.

Texas Well Represented Texas delegations were as representative in the conference as any state in the union and featured in the meetings. They traveled a greater distance than any other delegates.

The high lights of the conference consisted of addresses by Dr. H. T. Hodgkin, a prominent worker in foreign mission fields and founder of the English Fellowship of Reconciliation, and Francis Wei, president of the Central China Christian university at Wuchang. Included in the entertainment of the guests was a complete tour of the plant of the Ford Motor company.

The Tech delegation will arrive in Lubbock about noon Wednesday, according to a wire received from them this morning. Delegates attending the conference from Lubbock and the Tech are Jack Maddox, Dale Wallace, Clarence White, Warren Huff, Roy McCullough and Misses Mary Hope Westbrook Irene Corner and Margaret Turner.

Marine headquarters were informed that the conduct of the rebels in battle was greatly improved and that the men carried both machine guns and rifles.

It was estimated that for every marine casualty there were ten among the rebels, which would put the rebel dead around 50 and the wounded near 230. Since Sandino's removal they had been directed to save them from direct fire. The exact number of rebel casualties will probably never be learned.

Heaviest Casualties The marines suffered the heaviest casualties since American forces were landed in Nicaragua more than a year ago. The dead included: First Sergeant John E. Hemphill, Chicago.

Corporal Adolph Theilhart, Middleville, L. I., New York.

Private, first class, George E. Goldstein, Des Moines, Iowa.

Private, first class, Grady W. Watson, Point Coupee, La.

Private, first class, Easler G. Brown, Pleasant Plain, Ohio.

Seriously injured: Captain Richard Livingston, Philadelphia, Pa.

Sergeant Fred Correll, Anacostia, Mont.

Private Robert H. Collins, Cobtown, Ga.

Private Bernard W. Coyne, Framingham, Mass.

Private Charles E. Turner, Terre Haute, Ind.

Private Leonard J. Smith, New York.

The slightly wounded included: Private Raleigh R. Brandenburg, Louisville, Ky.

Private Jason Little, Taylorsville, N. C.

Private Arthur J. Fitzpatrick, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Private Harry M. Blanchard, Violett, La.

According to marine corps advisers to Washington a 23rd marine was wounded when Private John P. Coyle was slightly hurt the same day in a separate engagement with Landis near Guana Castillo.

Reinforcements Go In A marine reinforcement numbering 200 men with a pack train of 200 mules carrying supplies and ammunition was on its way today from Ocotul and Telpaneca to Quilali.

Sandino, who has been repudiated by leaders of the liberal party, the official opposition to the government, had known for several weeks that the marines were preparing to make a drive on Quilali. He made extensive preparations to resist them with a picked force of 500 men.

General Sandino fortified his forces on the outskirts of Quilali on the only trail leading into the town. This trail is mountainous, rocky and heavily timbered. The marines knew that in order to capture the town the rebels would have to be driven out from the road.

Sandino Opens Fire As the marines were ascending the mountainous trail, Sandino's men opened fire on them from their hiding places along the road. The slightly wounded were injured by bursting bombs.

Captain Livingston, who was in command, fell seriously wounded. Lieutenant Gould, who was later slightly wounded, immediately took command.

By separate and hard fighting the marines dislodged the rebels. Airplanes aided them but were not as effective as previously since Sandino had scattered his men instead of grouping them.

After dispersing the rebels, the marines pushed on towards Quilali. Sandino had told his followers that the second time he met the marines he would emerge victorious. The defeat at Ocotul last July when

PRESENT SYSTEM GETS BLAME FOR WASTE AND OMISSIONS

(By Associated Press) NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 2.—A reorganization of general education in the United States beyond the first six grades, so that the omissions and wasteful duplication of present curricula might be avoided, was suggested today to the education section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Many Gaps Shown The speaker was Prof. William C. Ruediger, dean of the school of education at George Washington University. Citing figures to show that high schools and colleges were leaving many gaps in the education received by students, Professor Ruediger recommended the organization of two related cycles after the sixth grade.

"The first cycle," he said, "would aim for breadth. It would introduce courses in all the basic fields of human culture and achievement. A tentative curriculum shows that this cycle could be covered in about six years. This time span would even allow some leeway for depth."

Depth Basic Aim "But depth would be the basic aim of the second or collegiate cycle. In this cycle specialization would be the keynote, although courses for breadth would be omitted altogether. Students would branch off into pre-medical, pre-law, pre-teaching and other more or less specialized curricula. For completion of this cycle three years would be required, at the end of which time a bachelor's degree would logically be conferred. The student would then be ready for entrance into a professional school."

Professor Ruediger presented data to show that whereas large percentages of college students had never had courses in physics, chemistry, zoology, physiology or the history and appreciation of art, many subjects had been "wastefully repeated."

"This means," he asserted, "that many students had essentially the same subjects in both high school and college, in spite of the fact that most of these students had not yet had certain other fundamental subjects at all."

System Is Blamed "These omissions and wasteful applications are the result of the lack of an educational system in this country. We have elementary schools, high schools and colleges, but we have no integrated educational system. The chaos, for present at least, is being exacerbated by the introduction of junior high schools and junior colleges. Each unit is attempting to organize its own curriculum quite regardless of what came before and what is to come after. Yet, each unit is too short alone to give a rounded education and so long as our present lack of articulation between units continues, the outcome is bound to reveal yawning gaps and wasteful duplications."

Professor Ruediger pointed out that present trends in educational organization were toward a system similar to the one outlined by him.

The occupation of Quilali forced him to shift his headquarters to El Chipote, 18 miles from the captured town. El Chipote is near the Coco river, which will be used by the rebel leader as an avenue of escape if he is hard pressed. The river empties into the Atlantic at Cabo Gracias. Once on the river escape would be comparatively easy as the stream flows through an unexplored wilderness.

Managua is anxiously awaiting the wounded. It will be several days before they can be brought here. They will be taken on mule back to the nearest landing field, either Ocotul or Telpaneca. From there they will be sent to Managua by plane.

The dead were buried at Quilali.
