committee in a 27-21 vote. But the ballot fell far short of the two-thirds majority required for the approval of India's nomination by the full assembly.

"Not Standing Down" "We don't say we are standing down," Menon told the assembly, "because we have not been a candidate. But as members of this general assembly we feel that the best course to be adopted is not to force it to a vote."

Lodge Lauds Action United States Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., who had waged successfully a vigorous campaign to keep India out of the Korean parley, took the speaker's stand to withdraw India's nomination.

Menon's move, Lodge said, "is generous and statesmanlike." "I would like to repeat what I have said many times," Lodge told the assembly. "Our position is not directed against India as such. On the contrary, we feel deeply that at any later conferences on Far Eastern problems, India must play

REP. ROGERS DECLARES

U.S. Spending Too Much For Too Little On Foreign Aid

Declaring America is spending too much money on foreign aid, Rogers said he is receiving little or nothing for his efforts.

"From 1946 to 1952," he said Europe open imports exceeded their exports to the United States by $45 billion. They paid this by loans of $11 billion from the International Bank, and drawing on their reserves of another $2 billion. The rest was paid for by the United States taxpayers.

The joint committee proposed by a house member and two senators last year was passed by the end of the fiscal year figuring out ways to spend what is left so they will get the same or larger appropriation.

Details of the get-acquainted picnic to be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow by the Prairie Village Community Association were practically complete today, temporary committee chairman John Phelps, 1037 Huff, reported.

Highlight of the picnic, being staged in the Prairie Village Park, will be awarding of prizes in the Best Yards Contest held through the month of August. The prizes are being awarded by the Hughes Development Co., builders of the annex.

Included among the local dignitaries invited to the affair are Rep. Walter Rogers, Mayor Tom Rose, and the County City Commission, and County Judge J. B. McGuire. Managers of the three utilities, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Empire Southern Gas Co., and Southwestern Public Service Co., judges of the best yards contest were three women, none of whom live in Prairie Village. They were Mrs. H. M. Luna, Mrs. P. T. Randall, and Mrs. Fred Haiduk.

There are some 800 property owners in the Gardens, Widgren said, adding that "a big crowd is expected the public is invited."

Each Garden—there will be 12 in all—will have a different central memorial. Widgren continued, explaining that his concern expects to finish one each year in the 25-acre plot of land.

Establishment of the series of Gardens got underway about a year ago, he concluded.

San Francisco, Aug. 28 —UP—Two fugitive Communist party leaders, disguised with dyed hair, mustaches and crew cuts, were in federal custody Friday after FBI agents trapped them in a dramatic raid on a remote mountain hideout in the High Sierra.

Robert G. Thompson, 38, one of the top 11 American Reds concealed by the party underground since his conviction on Smith act charges four years ago, was held in Alcatraz prison.

Sidney Steinberg, also 38, a second-string Red leader who had been evading arrest since June, 1951, when 21 Communist organizers were indicted for conspiracy, was in San Francisco county jail.

Three other persons, charged with harboring the two fugitives in a cabin two miles north of the California summer resort of Twain Harte, were in jail with Steinberg.

All five were arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Joseph Kareah Thursday night less than nine hours after they were caught in a well-laid FBI trap.

Almost simultaneous with the arraignment of the five here, other FBI agents arrested a sixth person implicated in the huge Communist cover-up.

A woman identified as Patricia Blau, 42, alias Janet Conroy, was stopped as she drove from Modesto to Stockton, Calif. The FBI said her car "had been used" recently by the two fugitive Red leaders.

The woman, who also uses six other aliases, was held in San Joaquin county jail at Stockton where she was to be arraigned on charges of harboring fugitives. The FBI said Mrs. Blau was active in the Communist party in Bangor, Me., in 1946 and in Colorado from 1948 to 1950.

Nearly a score of FBI agents, unshaven and dressed as campers, swooped in on the mountain retreat near Sonora in California's Tulare county.

Thompson and Steinberg were in the yard outside the comfortably furnished cabin. The others were inside when the posse closed in from the woods on all sides.

Special Agent William M. Whelan, who led the carefully planned raid, said both of the fugitives had changed their physical appearance. Thompson had grown a mustache which he dyed strawberry blonde. His hair also was dyed the same color and his eyebrows were tinted reddish-brown. The FBI said he had put on about 30 pounds.

Steinberg had lost considerable weight, agents said. He had grown a mustache and had his hair cropped to a crew cut.

Also arrested were Carl Edwin Plasi, 40, a Minnesota Communist leader; Samuel I. Coleman, 42, New York, Red functionary, and Mrs. Shirley Keith Kremen, 21, described as a one-time member of the "Young Progressives."

Mrs. Kremen rented the cabin for a four-month period last June, the FBI said. Agents declined to reveal how long they had been watching the place.

The two fugitives and their confederates spent their time in the Sierra posing as ordinary tourists by going hiking and fishing, but they cautiously avoided local townspeople and other vacationers.

Arrest of Steinberg and Thompson left only five Communist leaders convicted or indicted on Smith act violations still listed as fugitives.

Federal agents were reluctant to discuss minute details of their dramatic arrest which concluded one of the most intense manhunts in the country.

"We've got five other Reds to track down," a spokesman said. "We won't want to tip them off to our methods."

Commanding officer of the unit is Capt. Charles Robison.

At camp the eight officers, three warrant officers and 80 enlisted men who comprise the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 474th Field Artillery Observation Battalion, have been attending artillery school and working out problems with other Texas Guard units.

Seventeen military plus a few civilian vehicles made the trip to Fort Sill, leaving early the morning of Aug. 16.

MIAMI — (Special) — Two Miami girls returned home recently after extended vacations. Annette Lowe is at home again after several weeks in California visiting relatives. Matilyn Reeves returned from counselling duties at camp.

Both girls are 1953 graduates of M.I.S. and both are making plans for college this fall. Annette plans to go to West Texas State, and Marilyn will go to Oklahoma A.M.

Sarah O'Laughlin is making plans for leaving for Dallas where she will attend high school this fall. Sarah is a junior and has been active in athletics and all school activities while in Miami.

Rev. and Mrs. Grady Adcock and family have returned from a two weeks vacation to Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Wisconsin.

Harold Sanderson accompanied a group of Explorer Scouts to Creighton this week. Making the trip were Jerry Mayo, Arthur Turner, Dale Greenhouse, Johnny Lopez, and Dwayne Gill.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fisher of Tulsa, Okla., were visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Talley recently.

Miss Theresa Lile of Shamrock visited friends in Miami last week. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jackson of Vandalia, Mo., have returned to Miami to spend the winter after having spent the summer in their home in Vandalia.

Aburto identified the woman who it was said gave birth to the six girls.

Aburto has sent to Mexico City for a jeep to begin the expedition into the mountains.

The effort was expected to be laborious.

Dr. Jose Maria Aburto, chief of Zitacuaro's department of public health, said "Plan del Olivo" was "four hour ride by horse from the nearest town that can be reached by car."

That town, Tuzantla, is a six-hour trip by bus or jeep from Zitacuaro, the doctor said.

Aburto said he had received "various reports" that the woman had given birth to six girls who all were living and healthy, but all have been unable to confirm them.

"We can not confirm the births until we get into the area," he said, "but some of the persons who have brought these reports in from the mountains maintain the event is a certainty."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 —UP—Federal agents last month seized nearly 700 stills that were producing illegal liquor in the South, the Internal Revenue Service reported Friday.

In a report on anti-bootlegging activities, the service said a total of 803 stills were captured across the country.

The report shows that 400 stills were seized and destroyed in Florida, Georgia, and North and South Carolina. In Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi, federal agents confiscated 164 stills.

In the Louisville district, which included Kentucky and Tennessee, 132 stills were found.

In Oklahoma and Texas, 15 stills were seized. Arkansas, Kansas, and Missouri lost 11. Other states had less.

Representative Walter Rogers, Pampa, was on the optimistic side as he talked to the Thursday noon get-together of the Pampa Lions Club and said:

"We'll be at peace till next spring." He was quoting the so-called "experts" who figure that the Russians, knowing their own winters, would not think of mounting an offensive till that time.

And if the United States has till next spring, he continued, "there can be a certain area of agreement (established) in which we'll not lose face or give up our principles."

Emphasizing that "war's got to stop sometime in civilization," Rogers maintained he had voted against further foreign aid to friendly countries "because we were not getting dollar value out of it."

"When a government continues to get something for nothing," the congressman went on, talking of foreign aid recipients, "they get so they depend on it and it strikes at their very moral fiber."

He rounded out his talk with a discussion of American imports and exports.

WETUMKA, Okla., Aug. 28 —UP—Wetumka citizens believed Friday's Sucker Day festival would be the biggest and best yet—but the main guest of honor had not shown on the scene.

Confidence man F. Bam Morrison, who city-slicked Wetumka merchants four years ago on a circus promotion scheme, had promised the Sucker Day sponsors he would attend this year.

Morrison talked Wetumka merchants into buying supplies for a circus that never appeared. Then, the merchants had to hold a celebration to get rid of the stuff. That started the first Sucker Day, and it was such a success, it became an annual affair.

Chairman Armand Gibson said Morrison was due to arrive Wednesday, "but so far, there's no sign of him." However, Gibson said with or without the main guest, the celebration Friday and Saturday will be Wetumka's biggest.

"Some 5,000 persons are expected, and if old F. Bam shows up, we'll draw at least a thousand more," the chairman said.

The town holds no grudge against the confidence man. As Gibson put it, "he put our town on the map." Morrison was found in a Warrensburg, Mo., jail last May, in connection with a circus promotion swindle. He promised Argie Taylor of the Wetumka Sucker Club that he would attend the celebration this year.

The merchants who even laid in stores of hay for elephants four years ago, promised Morrison immunity from prosecution, and the "time of his life."

The sucker club has a stock of foot-long cigars for Morrison, and has made up a fancy wardrobe. And some 6,000 lollipops — another form of sucker — will be distributed.

TOKYO, Aug. 28 —UP—A repatriated prisoner of war from Tulsa, Okla., said at Tokyo that Communist intelligence agents asked him a "lot of questions about Fort Hood, Tex.," when they learned he once was stationed there.

The released POW, Cpl. George E. Walden, 28, of 136 Richmond St., Tulsa, said he was forced to draw a diagram of Fort Hood "and they wanted to know how many men were stationed there."

"I don't know why they asked us so many questions. They had a lot of Army manuals there, and they would ask you a question and then check to see if the answer was right."

Doctors Say Many Calls Unwarranted

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 —UP—Twenty five per cent of the requests for doctors to make house calls are unwarranted, and two-thirds of the unnecessary calls are to treat women, it was reported Friday.

Three Decatur, Ill., doctors reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that a two and one-half year study of 1,000 consecutive residential calls made by them showed one in four cases did not need a house call. The physicians are Drs. William T. Couter, Alvin T. Held and Charles L. York.

Publisher Thinks Red Chinese Made 'Sound Progress'

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 28 —UP—John W. Powell, former publisher of the Shanghai China Weekly Review, believes the Chinese Communists have made "basically sound progress" since they won control of China.

Powell arrived Thursday with his wife and two sons. He gave up his English-language newspaper because "it went broke."

"My feeling is that the overall picture in China is good," he said. "The progress that has been made is basically sound."

He said "in some ways" the Chinese businessman is "better off" than the American businessman.

"There are many restrictions, but the rate of profits is very high."

He said the Chinese government is not so much a Communist government as a coalition, "although the Communists predominate." However, he added "there is no deception about its goal."

"The present stage is a period of controlled capitalism. The goal is to achieve socialism next, and eventually communism."

Phone Pickets Seen In Washington Area

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 —UP—The CIO Communications Workers of America established picket lines around telephone exchanges in the District of Columbia and in scattered sections of Maryland and West Virginia Friday.

The pickets sought to back up the union's wage demands. It has been asking for pay increases of from $2 to $3 a week.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. used supervisors to keep the switchboards going. A company spokesman said service would not be affected because of use of automatic equipment.

The union claimed more than 7,000 operators and maintenance and commercial workers were out in the Washington area. The company claimed that up to 50 per cent of the workers in some West Virginia exchanges have refused to go out.

The union reported pickets at 12 exchanges in five Maryland cities: Towson, Baltimore, Salisbury, Annapolis, and Laurel. There were two to four pickets at each exchange, the union said.

H. H. Vogel, C & P vice president, issued a statement shortly after the strike began here at 6 a. m. ed.

Ike Patters Around Ranch

Mr. Eisenhower came here Thursday to spend six days at the Byer's Peak ranch of Aksel Nielsen, an old Denver friend. The chief executive had hoped to get in a lot of fishing, painting, cooking and loafing.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President would do nothing but loaf and supervise the cooking Thursday. Mr. Eisenhower directed preparation of lunch Thursday when the noon menu included cold cuts, fried mush, bacon and fried rainbow trout caught by members of the President's party.

Friends Greet Hero At Midland Airport

BIG SPRING, Tex., Aug. 28 —UP—Marine Lt. George O'Brien Jr., Texas' latest Congressional Medal of Honor winner, was home Friday and a hero's welcome was planned by city officials.

The Korean hero flew into Midland air terminal Thursday and a Marine honor guard surrounded the plane, but his friends and relatives pushed through the guard and literally mobbed him.

Quiet and shy, O'Brien gave his fellow Marines credit for the incident which led to receiving this nation's highest military honor.

"We were on the western front at a place called 'Hook,'" O'Brien said. "The Chinese overran our position and we were told to retake it. We did. That's all there is to it. The others did as much as I did."

The citation told of O'Brien's extreme bravery in leading his platoon of men against an overwhelming force of Communists last Oct. 27.

Wounded in the arm and knocked down twice by concussion grenades, O'Brien charged ahead and led his men back to safety. He didn't know he had won the Congressional Medal of Honor until he stepped off a ship in California last Sunday.

His wife was there to greet him at the Midland-Odessa airport. Dressed in a bright blue dress and happy and excited, she said she couldn't get her husband to tell her about how he won the Congressional Medal.

Upon his arrival home, O'Brien saw his six-month-old son, George Michael, for the first time. The boy was born last Valentine Day, Feb. 14. The O'Briens have a three-year-old daughter, Terry Jo.

O'Brien's mother and his father, George H. O'Brien Sr., who left a sick bed to greet him, were among the 500 persons waiting the hero's arrival at Webb Air Force Base.

An Air Force guard of honor stood at attention as O'Brien ar-

Drouth Forces Rural School To Close Doors

LAMESA, Tex., Aug. 28 —UP—An extended drouth that forced families of all but 17 students to move into town was blamed Friday for closing the Union Rural school district high school.

Dawson County Supt. P. K. Humes said the Union Rural school board decided it could not maintain a high school this year, and it appeared doubtful if one ever could be operated in the farming country some 14 miles north of here.

Humes said the 17 remaining pupils at the closed school would be transported by bus to Lamesa high school and back home daily.

The superintendent blamed the drouth for the situation. He said 34 students attended Union Rural high school last year, but that nine of them moved to Lamesa and other families moved elsewhere.

Jim O'Brien of the Lamesa Daily Reporter explained that "there is just no livelihood for these people" in the area served by the high school. He said it was 90 per cent cotton country and is "nothing but a sand dune now."

Humes said Union Rural school district would continue to operate an elementary school for about 80 students.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

"I have been requested to find out the answer to a question about Canasta from my husband who is in Korea," writes a lady in San Diego, Calif. "He tells me that several rule books have been consulted but no definite answer has been found. He and his friends are having a mild disagreement about this question, and wanted me to consult the experts."

"Here is their question: Side A has 5200 points and goes out. Side B has 5800 points. Which side is the winner—side going out, or side with more points?"

The side with more points wins the game. In this case, the side with 5800 points wins, and the margin of victory is that difference of 600 points.

The reason this question isn't answered in the textbooks is that nobody thought that the question would arise. In a game of baseball, to use an example from another sport, you don't decide a game because one side scored in the ninth inning; you take the final score to pick the winner.

Perhaps a closer example is furnished in a game of bridge. Side A plays every hand, some with good results and some with very bad results. At the end of the rubber side A has certainly won the bonus of 700 points for winning both games—but has managed to get into so many disastrous contracts that Side B is a thousand points ahead. Who wins the rubber? Side B is the winning side because it has more points than Side A.

The object of the game of Canasta is to score points. It isn't merely a race to see which side can meld out faster. Sometimes you deliberately refuse to meld out because you think you can pile up a bigger score by prolonging the hand. This principle guides you throughout the game and also determines the winner when the game ends.

It's easy to see that the answer to this question might have a bearing on the way you play a hand when both sides are close to 5000 points. If you can win the game by merely melding out—regardless of the score—you would melding out quickly.

Actually, since melding out has nothing to do with the matter, you play the last hand of a game just as you would any of the earlier hands—to pile up the biggest possible score and to prevent the enemy from piling up a big score.

"Quit pretending you can't hear me, Junior Spence, or so help me, I'll take a can opener to you!"

Honest Money

This is a frank bid for support and lobbying between now and the time Congress re-convenes in the fall in aiding Sen. Styles Bridges and Rep. Carroll Reece get through both houses a "Gold Redemption Act."

Basically, the bill proposed and scheduled for hearing as soon as the fence-mending legislators have returned to Washington, will permit a citizen to demand of the federal government gold in exchange for paper promises to pay. This was the result of President Roosevelt's order of 20 years ago of the seizure of the privately held gold of the country and starting the United States on the way to a thus-far un-ending inflation.

President Eisenhower and the Republican party, in the last national convention promised the voters that action would be taken to "restore sound money freely convertible into gold coin." Such a promise, if carried out by the Republicans who have thus far ducked the issue, would not mean that anyone immediately would rush greenbacks into the federal treasury to exchange them for gold any more than people did when the dollar was sound and redeemable. Because there are many complexities connected with the establishment of a sound dollar and the use of gold as a medium of exchange, we are borrowing from the Gold Standard League some questions and answers that may provide readers with information that will enable them to make further study of the subject. The League presents this:

What difference does it make whether we have redeemable currency or not?

It means that we have honest dollars to do business with, dollars that are actually worth one-thirty-fifth of an ounce of gold, and not just pieces of paper that buy less and less.

Will it have any effect on extravagant government spending?

It certainly will. The Bridges-Reece bill gives you the right at any time to demand solid gold for any and all paper money which you have. The slightest evidence of a "run" on the gold reserve will make the most extravagant politician think twice before he casts his vote.

But doesn't the government have to spend more money than it can collect in taxes as long as the world is in turmoil?

Decidedly not. The best defense in an unsettled world is a sound economy. What the government needs is not more money but more efficiency. The present administration has made progress but so far has only hacked at the edges. The best incentive to a real reconstruction job is the necessity, not just the wish, for a balanced budget.

Wouldn't we be playing into the hands of Russia by reducing defense spending?

We can reduce defense spending without reducing defense. As to playing into the hands of the Communists, that is exactly what we are doing by cheapening our currency. Lenin is quoted as saying, "The surest way to overturn an existing social order is to debase the currency."

Didn't we have to go off the gold standard in 1933? We did not. Our gold reserve was quite safe and sufficient. As one economist put it, "The gold standard did not collapse. Government abolished it in order to pave the way for inflation."

But the money in circulation today is so much more than it was thirty years ago; do we have enough gold in reserve to safely return to the gold standard?

Plenty. We not only have many times the amount of gold we ever had when we were on the gold standard; the ratio of gold to currency and demand deposits is greater than it was during the years we enjoyed the right of redemption.

What will happen to our foreign trade if we return to the gold standard?

It will encourage foreign trade by private citizens.

What will be the effect on international economic relations in general?

We will be paving the way for more stable and profitable economic relations, such as we enjoyed in the years before the first World War.

What will be the effect on public support of our national debt through purchase of government bonds?

It will encourage the individual purchase of bonds because the purchaser knows that he will be paid in the same kind of money he gave the government.

Will resumption of the gold standard reduce taxes? Gradually, yes, as it forces government to live within its means.

What will be the effect on wages?

Inflation is always a cause of discontent among workers as they discover that fatter pay envelopes only mean higher prices. Resumption of the gold standard will give them wages whose buying power they can count on and plan with.

Will people on fixed incomes — salaries or retirement payments — benefit if the resumption bill is passed? Unfortunately not immediately. Salary advances always lag behind wages, but when advances come they will be real increases that will continue to count. And those who are approaching retirement can make plans that mean something, knowing that they will not be cheated as shamelessly as their elders have been.

And what will be the effect on business firms and manufacturers?

Very much as on private individuals. Reserve funds for replacement and expansion will not evaporate to half their buying power when they need them. They can plan for the future instead of trying to guess what the future will bring.

BETTER JOBS

CIO's Comments On Outlook

If I have time, I usually read the bulletin issued by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, Department of Education and Research of the CIO, which is called "Economic Outlook." Not that I expect to get any facts or information from the bulletin, but I want to see what means they propose to better man's lot.

I think their means instead of improving man's lot make it finally more difficult for him to have a decent living. I think they keep the standard of living down instead of being a party to raising it, as they pretend.

I, of course, will admit that if they get control of some of the necessities of life and have a monopoly on them by seniority that they can improve their lot temporarily from a material standpoint. They, of course, lose from a moral and spiritual standpoint because their proposals simply mean taking from one group of people for the benefit of those they let into the CIO.

The pamphlet is rather pessimistic because they do not understand one of the fundamental principles of economics. They do not understand that wealth has to be distributed in order to benefit the owner. They are fearful that when the demand by the government for war material is reduced that those who have wealth will not use it, but will hoard it. They do not understand that a machine, or a farm, or a store, or livestock, or a railroad, or any form of capital is of no value to the owners unless it is used and worn out and renders a service that will benefit the consumer. In fact, it will produce no income, but it will deteriorate in value by depreciation and obsolescence and taxes and the natural deteriorating of elements.

Even if the savings are in the form of credit, they will deteriorate in value if we have more and more inflation. And if savings are in the form of credit in the bank or life insurance companies, they will do their best to loan this credit so that it will benefit them and the owners of the credit.

The C.I.O., of course, believes in more and more government interference with voluntary contracts and agreements. They want more of what is called "social security," more workman's compensation and unemployment insurance and minimum wages and all these socialistic, un-American fantasies.

They, of course, want more strength for organized labor. They do not realize that organized labor is one of the primary causes of unemployment. That is true because they increase the cost so much that those who have savings in the form of credit can buy less and those who are compelled to compete on a lower than competitive basis are not able to buy the products that are produced on a non-competitive basis.

Trade Union Pressure — They use the usual argument that it took me six months to see the error. Some presidents and colleagues are still using this error. The error is this: "Trade union pressure for wage increases and improved working conditions has been an impetus to management to reduce unit production costs through improved efficiency."

What the labor union leaders do not see is that it only diverts capital from where it is most needed to have it put where it is least needed. Thus it makes certain workers use inefficient tools and produce less than the total production would be if capital was allowed to be invested where it would save the most labor.

So the next time you hear anyone contending that organized labor prods the employer into putting in better tools, simply remind the person that it only diverts capital from one place to another.

Organized labor never created a nickel's worth of capital and has prevented billions upon billions of dollars of capital from being created. This is true because of strikes and because of seniority and the closed shop that keeps the less efficient man in a job where a more efficient man would be if the worker was selected on the basis of the man who would do the most for the money. And if workers were selected on the basis of the man who will do the most for the money that this savings due to lower costs willilly has to be passed on to the consumer eventually. Then the consumer becomes the boss, as he should be, rather than the worker or the manufacturer.

Every worker in the world could work all the hours he wanted to at an ever increasing wage, due to more and better capital, if we had an unhampered market for production and labor, and the two primary interferences with an unhampered market are labor unions and the government.

The labor unions would not be so effective in their interference with production and an unhampered market if it were not for the fact that they are able to persuade the politicians that they are more likely to stay in office if they vote to give organized labor special privileges.

There is nothing more needed than to get more and more voters to understand that organized labor, as practiced under collective bargaining, is a denial of moral law, and anything that violates moral law is not good economics and not good for society as a whole.

McKay Power Policy Typical Middle-Road Maneuver By Ike

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The recently enunciated and over-advertised plan for the development of the Niagara River power project by the Eisenhower administration is a typical middle-road maneuver by Ike.

McKay withdrew the Truman-Chapman opposition to the Idaho Power Company's bid to construct the Hells Canyon project, it is true, and that was hailed as a great victory for the "power trust." But all he did was to terminate unwarranted executive interference with the Federal Power Commission, a semi-judicial body created by Congress to decide these questions.

EXPERT-OVERIDDEN — On the other hand, the White House insisted on building Oahe Dam in North Dakota as a federal project, despite condemnation of the plan by Interior and Budget experts. Ike surrendered to the governors and senators from that area in a clear violation of his original belief.

The White House approved FPC's award of the St. Lawrence River power venture to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's New York Power Authority. It also gave quiet support to Dewey's demand for the right to undertake the great Niagara project, as against the offer of "four private firms."

This intervention killed the private bill after it had passed the House by an overwhelming vote. And to the conservatives, state control of power is tantamount to federal inroads in this field.

IMPORTANT VOICE OF CONGRESS — Congress will have an important voice and check, however, through its authority over appropriations. In the recent session, it imposed rigid restrictions on federal generations of power by steam plants and competition with private interests in hauling hydro. And it will get even tougher next year, unless McKay and Ike show more courage in their championship of private enterprise.

POLITICAL, ECONOMIC FACTORS — The factors behind the Eisenhower-McKay retreat are both political and economic. It is significant that the more recent statements came after the President had attended the Governors' Conference at Seattle, and after a McKay tour of the West. Otherwise, there would be no reason for issuing these pronouncements during the August dog-days.

Power and water are live issues in about thirty states, especially in the normally Republican West and in Southern and Southwestern areas which Ike carried last November. With their life-and-death need for irrigation, the people and politicians of these sections do not care whether public or private interests provide hydroelectricity for their factories and water for their crops and cities.

Moreover, they think they have a better chance to obtain these things from Uncle Sam: No private utility wants to take over such enterprises, but unprofitable operations as flood control, irrigation, reclamation, reforestation, improvement of navigation.

UNPOPULAR ACTIONS — As in many other instances, including price supports for farm crops, reducing taxes and balancing the budget, returning to "sound money," labor-management relations and foreign aid appropriations, Eisenhower has learned that it is extremely difficult—and unpopular—to uproot New Deal - Fair Deal reforms. The 87 per cent vote for wheat marketing quotas and federal subsidies was a warning and an answer on that problem. Anyway, as of today, save for

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JORDAN, M. D.

"We have one normal granddaughter, one who is mongoloid, and are expecting another grandchild," writes Mrs. L. "The parents are 28 years old and apparently healthy, but I am greatly worried. The birth of a mongoloid child is indeed a shock to the parents, relatives and friends. It occurs without warning and comes to the most normal and healthy parents as readily as to those who are frail or have some physical disorder."

What is the basic cause for the birth of a mongoloid infant is still unknown, although a few factors have been established. About one child in a thousand will be mongoloid. This means that some 3000 to 5000 children are born each year in the United States, out of the total of more than 3,000,000 babies born.

Questions like that submitted by Mrs. L. come up constantly. If a mother has borne one mongoloid child, what are the chances of having normal babies? Judging from what is known, the answer is that she would have 19 chances out of 20 of having a normal child. The chances are not as good for the mother who has not had a mongoloid infant, but are not too bad.

Another point that is important is that a woman who becomes pregnant after the age of 40 has a somewhat increased chance of having a mongoloid child. She should not worry about this during pregnancy, however, since the older mother is much more likely to have a perfectly normal infant than a mongoloid.

There is no way of improving the mental capacity of mongoloid children and therefore most physicians feel that they should be placed in an institution just as soon as possible. Mongoloid children always appear happy and friendly and do not suffer from their condition or from being in an institution.

Another fact which I am confident Bob Moses knows is that the people who qualify for such apartments on the ground that their earnings are under stated levels, winner and in many cases have a total family income which enables them to pay the full, reasonable rent.

But I am getting away from the basic fact that the reason why the government feels obliged to pay part of the cost of building housing for some of the people is that the government purposely takes so much of their income that they can't pay their own way. The purpose has been to make us all dependent on the national treasury rather than reliant on our own earning capacity. If it goes just a little further, then we will have to get subsidies on our groceries and clothing. Education is subsidized already and in return for that subsidy the federal government thinks it has a right to teach our young that Democracy is a religion, but without a deity unless

Fair Enough... Pegler Discusses Government Subsidies And The Tax Laws

By WESTBROOK PEGLER (Copyright, 1953 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Bob Moses stands so high in my book that I feel as though I am disputing myself in writing that his remarks at the dedication of some new subsidized tenements were New Deal claptrap and no credit to a man who knows better. Mr. Moses was one of the orators at the climax of a hopped-up fiesta which could have been called Barney Baruch Week inasmuch as they unveiled a bronze head of the old speculator and President Eisenhower came all the way from Denver to pay the personal and official homage of a Republican president to a Roosevelt Democrat.

In those comments, Mr. Moses, also a Republican, said: "As to our older rookeries, there can be no real neighborhood construction without the unflinching surgery which cuts out the whole cancer. Unfortunately, recent cuts by Congress have indicated a deplorable resurgence of hard-boiled reactionaries to whom acreage is more important than people. As a result, Baruch Houses, the mass of apartment buildings which were consecrating, among others, have been cut in half."

Mr. Eisenhower regarded this as a mild kick in the rompers and made a retort which was just as far beside the point.

The point, which both of them missed is that the government of the United States has no reasonable or proper duty to take money out of the earnings of George Speilvin to pay a large part of the rent of a home for Joe Dokes for any immigrant from any foreign land, however unhappy Mr. Dokes or the stranger may be.

The government of the United States has no right to do it. It has got the power but it abuses that power and that is one of the reasons why so many people can't pay the full rent for the kind of homes that Baruch Houses contain.

Bob Moses knows beyond the slightest doubt that the principle reason why the government must assume the duty of subsidizing tenements is that it is unable to do the kind of homes that Baruch Houses contain.

It be Franklin D. Roosevelt, whereas Democracy is a corruption abhorrent to the Republican form of government prescribed by our Constitution.

Moses should have said the urgent need was a reduction of the income tax to a level at which it would become a tax again rather than a socialistic device to put us under obligations to Washington for shelter, food and clothing. If the U.S. Treasury has money to spend on housing subsidies, it has got more than it needs and should reduce the income tax. And if we are so hard up for living quarters, what did Eisenhower mean by shoving through a Democratic Party law to admit 214,000 unscrupulous foreigners for whom we have no living-room?

I doubt that anyone ever has told President Eisenhower that the people could pay their own rent and that private capital could build and offer good quarters at a fair price. If our federal government took its dirty hands off our earnings and the management of private property, he could eliminate thousands and thousands of useless, expensive government employees, too. Moses, of course, knows all this, but a public man living around New York sometimes forgets that our government was designed to serve the people, not to degrade us to the status of so many Uncle Toms and Elizas.

LOOKING SIDWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

"As a man who is not customarily harnessed to the task of reporting the motion pictures, I do not ordinarily mention these cheapside pellicles in the same way that I would not get caught off base with a few prose words on Bowditch on navigation or the atomic components of raw phosphorus. But as a man who occasionally works up a little steam over what might be going on in outer space, on the premise that it is idiotic to believe that our speck of infinitesimal coal is the only life-bearing planet for miles around, I want to take a few posies to the front door of a movie called "The War of the Worlds." It is conceived, written and directed by the late H. G. Wells. The impressive factor in the picture is not so much its brilliant invention and photography, a high level job in technical excellence, as its plausibility. It is in its plausibility, arrived at by a certain deceptive calm, that nightmares will be bred for millions of citizens. It doesn't say, "This may happen in 2364," but it says, "Last Saturday night, at about 8:15 o'clock, in the hilled desert near Linda Rosa, California, while people were shopping or getting ready to go to the movies, a flaming meteor was seen to approach and a few miles later it skidded to a stop in a nearby canyon."

It makes a direct, uncomplicated approach to an invasion of the world. It doesn't postulate monsters or nine-eyed green dragons or little men with pot bellies and filaments for arms. It just shows you what happened when they were wondering what movie to see or what color of yard goods to buy. There wasn't much excitement when it happened. Forest rangers dutifully reported that the meteor had set some brush afire. The police poked that in, skidding to a stop it ploughed up enough sand and desert pebbles to cover itself, and one or two fellows thought they might make a buck by setting up a hasty hot dog stand at the site.

In time they got the brush fire out and the mound began to cool. Then a lid began to screw off and a flexible metal tube, like the neck of an adjustable desk lamp, raised up with an electronic eye at its end and began making little rhythmic ringing sounds.

From that point on you'll have to see for yourself what happened to the world we know and how, at the last desperate moment, we won against the invaders thanks to a weapon no scientist had thought of using and which it would not be crickets to identify and thus spoil the show for you. Enough that it is a weapon that do with explosions, artillery, gunfire or any other military object. It was the one thing we had plenty of — and which the invaders hadn't thought of, either.

The heroes of this science-fiction job out of the top drawer are the technicians in Hollywood. The cameramen who created fantastic scenes so plausible that you become concerned over the possibility of truth. The special effects men who put upon the film things that could not possibly be yet seem enormously real and possible. Five or six of the best cameramen in Hollywood worked on this job and a platoon of inventive, eager men worked on the tricks. Among them they achieved something that gives the film terror — they destroyed the element of fantasy and made it all look impressively like something that could happen tonight. Hereafter, these science-fiction films have ching to fantasy, outrightly and deliberately.

Red Flannel Jumper

This red wool flannel sleeveless jumper for campus wear has new low cut, is worn with black jersey turtle neck sweater. Black patent leather belt defines a tiny waist. Kodak camera has sized, hooded view-finder for easy picture-taking during college years.—By Gale Dugas, NEA Woman's Editor.

Manners Make Friends

Here are two novel, interesting apple desserts which offer an inviting change from the usual pies, dumplings and puddings. These require only a minimum of preparation time and both are especially timely now while local markets are featuring those popular, spicy red Washington State Winesap apples. This particular apple variety is all-purpose so it can be used equally well for eating as is, and in refreshing salads and you'll find the Winesap also holds its shape and texture and flavor superbly under cooking processes.

If you like the gourmet flavor of sour cream, this makes a delicious topping for the creamed apple slices but, if you prefer, you can serve with plain or whipped cream. The brown sugar apple crumble, served warm, may also be topped with cream or whipped cream.

Creamed Apple Dessert
Four red Winesap apples
Four tbs. sugar
Two tsp. cinnamon
Cut unpeeled red Winesap apples into half inch slices. Spread with sugar and cinnamon and dot with butter. Broil under moderate heat until tender, about 10 mins. Top with sour cream, plain or whipped cream. Serves four.

Brown Sugar Apple Crumble
Six red Winesap apples
1/2 cup flour
2-3 cup brown sugar
Four tbs. butter or margarine
Core apples and cut into thin slices. Arrange in baking dish. Combine flour, brown sugar and butter or margarine to make a crumbly mixture and spread this over the apple slices. Bake in a hot oven (325 degrees) 35 mins. Serve warm. Serves four.

RUTH MILLETT

"When we stop learning we begin to grow old. When we stop being interested, we begin to grow old. When we stop using our bodies, we begin to grow old."

"There is no physiological age at which we must stop all activity. Hence there is no age at which we MUST grow old. The interests, arts and skills which we recklessly toss away on entering adulthood may be the very tonic which could lift us over the darkest moments of our life."

That warning comes from the book, "The Will to Live" by Dr. Arnold A. Hutschnecker. It's a warning that housewives especially should take to heart. For it is so easy for a housewife to begin when she is still young to give up one by one the interests and outside activities that could keep her from growing old. So easy to put them aside until she has more time.

That time rarely comes until her children are grown and by then she may well decide that she is too old to go back and begin again the abandoned activities.

So if you are a housewife, still in the busy years, perhaps you had better check up on yourself. Are you holding on to outside activities and interests, replacing those you drop with new ones?

Do you still go in for some active outdoor sport or work? It doesn't matter whether it is golfing, swimming, tennis, hunting, fishing, gardening, or just joining in some of the active games of your children.

Are you still inquisitive enough so that you want to learn all you can about any number of things? If you're cut down on your interests and activities, ceased caring about learning more and more, and given up all forms of outdoor recreation, then you are heading for old age.

MATURE PARENT

By MURIEL LAWRENCE
A friend of mine teaches first-graders in a fashionable suburban community.

Last term, she noted a certain aimlessness and timidity in one of her little students. On investigation, she found that Mary's mother, an ardent bridge player, was seldom at home and that Mary spent her time in the care of a maid.

After much thought, the teacher decided to see Mary's mother and broach the idea that this preoccupation with social activities might have something to do with her child's lack of confidence.

Said Mary's mother: "Aren't you being officious, Miss X? Don't you read any child guidance books? Don't you know they tell parents to have fun and never neglect their own lives?"

No child guidance book ever published suggested that a bridge prize was more important than a child. None I ever read hints that organizing a literary club's program is as important as making home welcome to a child. None.

If these books are going to be so misinterpreted, perhaps, somebody better add to the chapters on how working mothers can soften the effects of absence. Somebody ought to explain how bridge-fan mothers can do it, too.

Though we most surely have a right to recreation occasionally, we shouldn't use this right to justify our desire to escape from boredom with our child.

If we don't take as much pleasure out of associating with Mary as we do out of playing canasta, our feeling for motherhood is confused and the confusion should be openly admitted.

If Mary hates us, we do not know her and she does not know us.

Resistance to parenthood is a most subtle thing. One reason we are so ashamed to admit it is that we live in a society that loves to bow before an idol of the self-denying Mother.

From early childhood, the role of Mother is publicly associated with gush and sentimental jamborees. But no self-respecting female in her right mind wants to make a "Bother Machree out of herself. So when the poor dear finds she's going to have a baby, she's scared out of her wits.

Without being aware of it, she promptly digs her emotional heels in and thinks, "None of this 'furored brow' business for me!" Of course, she doesn't dare confess this rebellion even to herself. She just feels it. So when her baby is born she begins to look defiantly about for acceptable excuses to avoid losing herself in her child's life.

It is quite impossible to preserve our old selves after we have borne children and when we deny what has happened to us, we impede our own growth. Mary's mother has never accepted motherhood. Her social activities are simply a convenient device for hiding this shameful knowledge from herself.

I am sorry she is ashamed of it. Because if she could confess it to herself, she would experience a great sense of relief. She would see how much of her restlessness and tension was due to her inability to decide to take on the tremendous thing that happened when Mary was born.

Mrs. Richardson Hostess To Circle

The Kestle Mae Circle of the Baptist Church met recently in the home of Mrs. Eugene Richardson for a stewardship lesson led by Mrs. Sterling Bearden. The group is studying the book, "Sacrifice and Song." Prayers were given by Mrs. Bearden, Mrs. Clifton Kelly, and Mrs. Glendon Young.

Present were Mrs. Bob Lutz, Jay Phillips, Young, Kelly, and Bearden.

The next meeting, with Mrs. Howard Lyons will be a Royal Service program with the Lottie Moon Circle.

Hobart Mission WMU Plans Circle Division

Hobart St. Mission WMU met this week in the home of Mrs. Humpy Matheny, with Mrs. Mage Keyser in charge of the program. Mrs. P. D. Body opened the meeting in prayer.

Mrs. Leonard Foster taught the mission book, after which plans were made to divide the circle. Mrs. W. O. Coil read a scripture and presented a gift from the circle to Mrs. Keyser, who has been leader of the present group over two years.

Mrs. Mildred Stephens closed the meeting with prayer. Refreshments were served to 21 members.

Miss Betty Jackson, September Bride, Feted With Kitchen Gadget Shower

A coffee and kitchen gadget shower held this morning in the home of Mrs. Grundy Morrison honored Miss Betty Jackson, bride-elect of James Youngjohn of Hammond, Ind. Mrs. M. K. Griffith was co-hostess.

The honoree's chosen colors, bronze and gold, were carried out in table arrangements. The green linen cloth was centered with an arrangement of bronze mums in a wooden bowl. The centerpiece was flanked by the silver coffee service, and two wooden horses pulling miniature carts filled with melon balls and grapes. Apricot-filled rolls further carried out the color scheme.

Mrs. Doyle Osborne, the bride-elect's aunt, presided at the coffee service, and Miss Betty Boswell secured names for the register.

The hostess gift was a collection of kitchen gadgets attached to a broom to form the shape of a woman. Mrs. Morrison read an original poem to the honoree, then presented the bridal gifts arranged in a large basket.

Invited guests were Mrs. J. R. Holloway, Johnny McFarland, Jim Campbell, Girtha McConnell, George Scott, J. P. Osborne, J. L. Chase, C. A. Burton, Robert Redell, J. R. Spearman, C. E. Boswell, M. M. Moyer, Doyle Osborne, Harold Osborne, W. B. Jackson, H. C. Graham, Lowell Osborne, O. D. Von, Emmett Osborne, Lloyd Hicks, B. S. Jackson, N. J. Parker, Ben Graham, W. C. Moseley, and Glen Tarpley.

Misses Madge Rusk, Florence and Fay Jackson, Billie M. Osborne, Vickie Osborne, Betty Joyce Scott, and the bride-elect's attendants, Misses Nellie Lou Osborne, Ann Moyer, Nina Spearman and Miss Boswell.

Out of town guests included Mrs. Karl Stephenson, Miami; Jack Montgomery, Shamrock; D. W. Osborne, Panhandle; and Vance Robinson, Panhandle.

A dinner party Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Doyle Osborne, 2107 Russell, honored Miss Betty Jackson. Co-hostess was Mrs. W. B. Jackson.

The dining table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a collection of individual corages carrying out the bride-elect's chosen colors, bronze and green. Leading from the centerpiece were green ribbon streamers marking the places.

Present were Mrs. F. W. Jackson, the honoree's grandmother; Mrs. Glen Tarpley, Mrs. Jimmy Campbell, Mrs. Karl Stephenson, and Misses Joyce Harrah, Ann Moyer, Nina Spearman, Betty Boswell, Jan Sanders, Betty Wells, Pat Williams, Nellie Lou Osborne, Etta Haney, and Mrs. Osborne and Mrs. Jackson, both aunts of the bride.

Miss Jackson and Mr. James Youngjohn are to exchange wedding vows here Sept. 8.

Oilers Stay 3 1/2 Games Out Of 4th Despite Loss To Hubbers

Lewis' Hit Streak Broken At 18 Straight

Pampa's Oilers stayed 3 1/2 games out of the first division last night although they dropped a 5-0 decision to the Lubbock Hubbers at Lubbock. Plainview's Ponies defeated Abilene last night to move into undisputed possession of the third place while Clovis, who bowed to Albuquerque, dropped to fourth, 3 1/2 games ahead of Pampa in fifth place.

Lubbock pitching for the second straight night proved too much for the Oilers last night as the Pampans were again held to three hits, the same number they collected last night. The two Hub ace, Bob Galey and Charlie Garmon, were the pitching masters for the Hubbers in the two games. Garmon spun last night's shutout. It was his 19th victory. He struck out 10 Oilers, walked two and hit one batsman.

Garmon halted the hitting streak of Doug Lewis who had hit in the previous 18 Oiler games. Lewis, however, was on twice with a walk and a hit batman. It is the first time Lewis has failed to hit since Aug. 9 in a game against cellar dwelling Abilene.

Max Molberg, returning to action after a 10-day rest period, hurled creditable ball for the Oilers last night. Garmon's efforts were a little superior and Molberg thus suffered his 11th loss.

The Oilers only managed one serious threat and that was in the second inning when Doug Lewis led off with a walk and Porky Fawcett poked a single to right center, Lewis moving to third. But Garmon tightened up to get John Sanderson on a short fly to left and when Ed Krewall fanned, Schindler's faked off third and he was doubled out to end the inning.

With two out in the eighth, Quincy Barbee singled to center and was stranded when Lemons fanned. And in the ninth, Deck Woldt led off with a single and was stranded as Ben Felder, Manny Tames and Lewis went down in order.

Outside of three singles, a walk and a hit batsman, Pampa was unable to reach second or third for the Oilers.

Molberg pitched good ball too, matching Garmon until Metzger's homer. He got out of trouble in the first when he escaped damage in the third when two more runners were stranded.

In the sixth, Bobby Fernandez lined a double off the left field fence and Featherstone followed with his eighth homer.

Lemons escaped trouble in the seventh due to a Texas League single by Garmon and an error by Lewis, but it caught up with him in the eighth. Fernandez led off with a line drive to center field only to be picked off. But Featherstone and Al Kubski walked. Metzger was nicked to load the bases and Schindler hit the first pitch to center for two runs.

Friday night it will be Jake Henson on for the Oilers and Doug Aarons for the Hubbers.

Indians Trip Yankees Meyer Proving A Big Help To Bums

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—UP—Russ Meyer may not have to pound that nail into the wall after all—it looks like he'll be using that pitcher's glove next year instead of hanging Sox 8 to 4 as Vinny Trucks won his 18th game to cut the Yankee first place lead to 9 1/2 games. The Senators piled up 12 runs in the first three innings to top the Tigers 12 to 5 and at St. Louis the Browns beat the Athletics 5 to 4 and 3 to 1. In the only other National League game the Cardinals came from behind to whip the Giants 6 to 3 with four runs in the seventh.

Yogi Berra hit a two-run game-breaking homer to give Mike Garcia his 16th victory with a five-hit effort. The White Sox ousted the Red Sox 8 to 4 as Vinny Trucks won his 18th game to cut the Yankee first place lead to 9 1/2 games. The Senators piled up 12 runs in the first three innings to top the Tigers 12 to 5 and at St. Louis the Browns beat the Athletics 5 to 4 and 3 to 1. In the only other National League game the Cardinals came from behind to whip the Giants 6 to 3 with four runs in the seventh.

Brooklyn Power Helps Pitchers Meyer may not win his 18 games but he'll come close and he has proved to himself and to the Dodgers he can be a consistent winner, especially when that Brooklyn power explodes to help a hurler out.

That was exactly the way it worked Thursday when Meyer won his 14th game, 7 to 5 from the Cubs, even though he yielded 12 hits and had to have help from Clem Labine, who struck out the last batter in the ninth.

Meyer was coasting along with a 4 to 1 lead when an error by Jim Gilliam and a couple of questionable hits gave the Cubs three runs and a 4-1 tie in the seventh. But Duke Snider came through with his second homer of the game (his 13th of the month and his 33rd of the season) in the bottom of the inning and Meyer was out of trouble again. Roy Campanella hit his second triple of the game and Gil Hodges followed with his 28th homer in the eighth to give Brooklyn a cushion and prevent Chicago from tying it when Ralph Kiner singled home a run in the top of the ninth.

The victory put the Browns 9 1/2 games ahead of Milwaukee which had an open date, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh also were idle.

Yankees bow to Cleveland In the American League the Yankees blew a 4 to 2 decision to Cleveland in 11 innings when Wally Westlake hit a two-run game-breaking homer to give Mike Garcia his 16th victory with a five-hit effort. The White Sox ousted the Red Sox 8 to 4 as Vinny Trucks won his 18th game to cut the Yankee first place lead to 9 1/2 games. The Senators piled up 12 runs in the first three innings to top the Tigers 12 to 5 and at St. Louis the Browns beat the Athletics 5 to 4 and 3 to 1. In the only other National League game the Cardinals came from behind to whip the Giants 6 to 3 with four runs in the seventh.

Eight Straight Hits For Nats The Browns put over two runs in the eighth to break a 1 to 1 tie as a walk with the sacks loaded and a long fly by Jim Dyck provided the winning margin for reliever Marlin Stuart who gained his eighth victory in the second game. In the opener Vic Wertz hit a two-run homer in the ninth, his second of the game and his 17th of the year to give St. Louis its eighth triumph.

Washington connected for eight straight hits including a three-run homer by Gil Coast to score seven runs in the first and then breezed to victory as Spec Shea won his fourth game, an 8-0 shutout at Detroit.

Rip Repulski sparked the Cardinals winning rally over the Giants with a three-run homer to give St. Louis its 11th victory in 12 games, a 4 to 2 victory over the Yankees.

Thursday's star—Wally Westlake of the Indians, whose two-run homer in the 11th gave them a 4 to 2 victory over the Yankees.

Service Nines To Clash In S-Pro Feature

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 28.—UP—The only unbeaten teams left in the 19th annual National Baseball Congress tournament clash Friday night in a fifth-round game.

The Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Hilltoppers meet the San Diego, Calif., Marines in one of two games on the program.

Both have won four games. Fort Leonard Wood, a finalist last year, beat the defending Champion Military District of Washington Colonials 8 to 1 Wednesday night.

In a second game, Fort Wayne, Ind., North American Van, a four-time winner of this tournament, meets Peoria, Ill., LeTourneau-Westhouse. Both have won three games against one loss and the loser will be eliminated.

Three teams were sent home with two losses Thursday night as the field, originally 32 teams, was cut to seven.

The Military District of Washington overcame a four-run first inning deficit to eliminate the Springfield, Mo., Generals 8 to 6.

The San Diego, Calif., Navy Sky-riders downed Springfield, Mass., Westinghouse Electric 4 to 3 in 12 innings, and the Wichita, Kan., Boeing Bombers ousted the Columbia, Tenn., Monsanto Chemicals 9 to 1.

Some 4,000 fans watched the defending champion Colonials, threatened with elimination, come from behind with a four-run sixth inning to overtake Springfield, Mo.

Doubles by Ray Cattaneo, Jack George, Doug Cossey and Bob Reitz and a single by Alex Konkowski figured in the run-making.

The Colonials advanced into Saturday's quarterfinal round with the Wichita, Mo., Generals.

Righthander Vernon Frantz pitched a four-hitter to move Wichita into the quarterfinals over Columbia. The game was called at the end of seven innings under the tournament's eight-run lead rule.

Third baseman Kenneth Peterson doubled catcher AJ Jones home with the winning run in the 12th inning in San Diego Navy's 4 to 3 win over Springfield, Mass.

THE CHAMPS—The Skelly Oilers, 1953 men's softball champions of Oiler Park last night with a stirring 8-3 decision over Cabot. The victory, which was achieved by scoring seven runs in the seventh, gave Skelly the playoff finals in three straight games. The Skelly team will meet Phillips tonight at Oiler Park in a Crippled Children's Benefit game sponsored by the Pampa Lions Club.

Skelly Oil Crowned Industrial Champs

Skelly Oil is the 1953 Men's softball champions of Pampa. The Oilers last night clinched the Industrial League crown with an 8-3 victory over Cabot which gave the Oilers the best three-out-of-five playoff series, three games to none.

To win last night's tilt, the new champs had to stage a last ditch rally to down the Cabot team. Cabot led 3-1 going into the seventh and last frame. But a lead off homer by Salty Garrett rattled Cabot hurler Bob Stevens and before Stevens could get the Oilers out the Skelly nine had chased across seven runs and the victory.

John Wilde, who gave up two runs in the first inning and another in the sixth, pitched 3 1/2 ball for the winners.

Skelly will take on Phillips Men's Club of Phillips in an exhibition tilt at Oiler Park. Game time has been set for 8 p.m. today.

The local Lions Club is sponsoring the game. Proceeds taken in at the game will go toward supporting the Lions sponsored Crippled Children's Hospital in Kerrville. Admission prices are 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

In last night's game, Cabot took a 2-0 lead in the first frame with Weldon Trice and Dwayne Lyon scoring for the losers. Cabot was never headed until the big seventh inning rally by the Skelly nine.

The victory last night gave Skelly the playoff in three straight games. It was the 33rd win of the season for Skelly in 38 starts. Buster West is the Skelly manager.

Last night's line score:
SKELLY 8
CABOT 3
Wilde and Yeager; Stevens and Scott

Turner, Ellis In Early Lead
ODESSA, Tex., Aug. 28.—UP—Amarillo professional Dick Turner and amateur Wesley Ellis of San Antonio held a three stroke lead as second round play opened Friday in the $7,500 Odessa Pro-Amateur Golf tournament.

The pair teamed to shoot a best low ball 10-under-par 62 Thursday in the opening 18 holes over the flat, treeless Odessa Country Club course.

Three teams tied for second place with seven-under-par 66s. They were Doug Higgins and Ernie Vossler, Fort Worth; Boyd Huff, Midland, and Willard Crenshaw, Dallas; and Bo Winger, Oklahoma City, and Don January, Dallas.

Ray Montgomery, St. Louis, and Millard Barber, Texarkana, were in fifth place with a 66, and five teams tied at 67.

A total of 77 teams battled the 35-37-72 par layout as a gallery estimated at 1,000, largest on opening day in the five year history of the event, followed action.

A Mexican team of Al Escalante, pro at the Mexico City Country Club, and amateur Juan Antonio Estrada of Torreón, finished with a 71 that kept them in the running.

Help Good Cause By Attending Tonight's Softball Exhibition At Oiler Park

WE VENTURED OUT TO OILER PARK last night to take in the finals of the Industrial League softball playoff and were disappointed at the small crowd that was on hand.

We dare say the Lions Club made expenses for the game. There should have been enough interest in the game to warrant a good crowd.

The Lions Club was in hopes that they could clear some on the game in order to lend aid to the Lions sponsored Crippled Children's Hospital in Kerrville. But we doubt they were able to offer any aid from last night's gate receipts.

Another top flight game is on tap tonight at Oiler Park with the newly crowned Industrial champion Skelly Oil taking on a classy Phillips Men's Club team of Phillips. These two clubs are the class of the Panhandle in the softball ranks and tonight's game should be a dilly.

Having seen Skelly play last night, we can assure you that this team will be worth coming out to watch. And we understand the Phillips team is just as rugged. In fact, Skelly and Phillips have met twice before with each team winning one. So tonight's game will be the "rubber game" of the series.

Skelly has played 38 games this season, winning 33 and losing only five. You can hardly picture the record. In league play, the Skelly team won 24 and dropped three and then won five straight in the playoffs including last night's uphill victory over Cabot.

Skelly is one of few sponsors in the area softball ranks who is going to a lot of expense in fielding a softball team. They have furnished the players flashy uniforms and they hire fellows to work for the company who can play softball.

Why not go out tonight and see a top notch softball game at the Oiler Park and at the same time be helping a good cause. Contributions to such a worthy institution as the Crippled Children's Hospital is, of course, a fine thing and we sincerely hope that local sports fans will lend their support by attending tonight's game.

And the price is right where all can attend, 25 cents for adults and a measly dime for children.

IT'S THE CLOVIS PIONEERS now whom the Oilers will be battling for first division berth. Plainview has caught fire and has moved up to third. The Ponies, however, have been fattening up on cellar dwelling Abilene which the Oilers and Pioneers have been engaging in some rugged tests against the two top dogs, Lubbock and Albuquerque.

The picture may change after these series are completed. In fact the Oilers have six games remaining with Plainview which they could be getting hot, improve much on their first division hopes.

A win tonight in the series finale at Lubbock will keep the Oilers within seeing distance of the first division but a loss would certainly darken the picture.

Hoover Replies To Attacks On FBI

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28—UP—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover insists his agency had not usurped states' rights by investigating complaints police violated the civil rights of individuals.

Hoover's statement was a reply to attacks by Governors John S. Fine of Pennsylvania, John S. Battle of Virginia and Allan Shivers of Texas, made at the recent governors' conference in Seattle.

Hoover, passing through Thursday en route to Washington, said the protests of the governors gave the impression the FBI had "usurped the rightful law enforcing functions of the state."

He said investigations in the field of civil rights were made pursuant to an act of Congress, and if the governors oppose the laws, they should seek their repeal through Congress rather than attacking the FBI.

"The attorney general has not only the right but the duty of establishing as a matter of policy that the FBI should investigate the alleged violation of such acts of Congress," he said. "The FBI is not a policy making; it is a service agency."

He said when the FBI can enforce a law of its own choosing "we will have a gasp, and I will not permit the bureau to be a party to that repugnant un-American tyranny."

KIWANIS FAMILY — One of the many families to attend the Pampa Kiwanis Club picnic Thursday night in the Hobart St. Park was that of Jim Finnell, flanking Mr. and Mrs. Finnell are their sons, Howdy (left), 4, and Bobby, 7. Spread out before them is some of the barbecue prepared by John McFall, another Kiwanian. Some 175-200 persons were on hand for the feed which was attended by 26 Amarillo Kiwanians and their wives. Get-together was actually an inter-club meeting of the two clubs. (News Photo)

Tulane Professor Heads AEJ Group

EAST LANSING, Mich., Aug. 28—UP—George E. Simmons of New Orleans, head of the Tulane University Journalism Department, has been named president of the Association for Education in Journalism.

Simmons was elected at the closing session of the association's annual convention at Michigan State College to succeed Dr. Earl English, dean of the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Other new officers are Roscoe Ellard, Columbia University, first vice president; DeWitt Reddick, University of Texas, second vice president; and Elmer F. Beth, professor of journalism at the University of Kansas, secretary-treasurer.

Judge Cooperated

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 28—UP—James I. Mudge, 38, asked police Judge Gordon S. Lower to sentence him to jail so he could recover from a drinking bout. The judge gave him 30 days, but Mudge said it wasn't enough. "Give me 30," he said. The judge obliged.

Heroic Engineer Saves Passengers From Sure Death

AULT, Colo., Aug. 28—UP—One hundred twenty people owed their lives Friday to a heroic train engineer who stuck to the controls of his flaming engine after it hit an oil truck.

The engineer, John Elsie, 62, of Wheatridge, Colo., clung grimly to the controls of the Union Pacific's "Portland Rose" after the truck burst into flames and covered the engine and some of the cars with burning oil. Elsie managed to bring the train to a stop two miles from the point of impact, and died of burns seven hours later.

Elsie's fireman, Paul F. Evans, 35, of Laramie, Wyo., was hurled 160 feet through the air to his death by the impact of the collision, which occurred on a crossing one mile south of here. He died almost instantly of a broken neck.

The steam locomotive was not equipped with an automatic stopping device, known among railroad men as a "dead man's throttle." Through Elsie's action, the train was stopped without injury to the 120 passengers. He waited until the train had cleared the burning truck before setting the emergency brakes which stopped it.

The driver of the oil transport, 44-year-old William L. Barker of Cheyenne, Wyo., escaped injury by leaping from the cab just before the engine hit the oil-laden trailer. He told officials he did not see the approaching train until it was only 200 yards away and bearing down on him at 60 miles per hour. He managed to clear the tracks with the cab but did not have time to pull the trailer across.

American Experts Aid Peru Farmers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—UP—Fred Wheeler has brought back some interesting observations from a mission to Peru.

He says Peru claims to have developed the Irish potato. "Some visiting Chinese," he said, "is believed to have invented the Irish stew, although I understand there are a few challengers on this from other parts of the world."

Not a "giveaway"

All of this was interesting to Wheeler, whose business is to know all about things that come from the good earth. He has spent the last two years in Peru with a field party of the Bureau of Inter-American Affairs. His job has been that of a dungree diplomat—a representative of the State Department who helps Peruvian farmers help themselves in an agricultural and natural resource development program.

Wheeler, who will return to his Peruvian assignment shortly, made it clear the project is NOT a "giveaway."

"We're just there to help," he said. "The Peruvian farmers buy their own machinery. We help them to improve their grazing lands and their herds and flocks. We are getting them away from the oxen and onto tractors and threshing machines. Our main object is to help the farmers to increase their food production."

Peruvian Government Cooperates

The government of Peru is cooperating with enthusiasm and as the American expert puts it, "the two governments are a team."

Peru provides most of the funds for the work, while the U.S. representatives "stand by and give advice, and even do some of the work—in dungarees."

The program embraces just about everything that grows there. Cattle, sheep, poultry—and in the fields, sugar cane, cotton, corn, potatoes (Irish, of course), beans and many kinds of produce. There also are fruits—like bananas and oranges, plus coconuts.

The American party had a rough go of it at first.

Sheep Herders Helped

"Our fellows," Wheeler said, "found that before they attempted to improve the herds of cattle, it was necessary to clear the jungle. They cross-bred the local, or mongrel type cattle, with imported Brahmas. After the jungles were cleared, they experimented with several kinds of grass, including Kentucky blue grass, clovers, timothy, and elephant grass."

Bulldozers, tractors, and spraying equipment were brought into use to replace the primitive methods.

The Americans have done a lot for the sheep ranchers. They improved the pasture lands and gained control over the grazing problem by putting up fences. The result: Better wool, better mutton. The idea caught on and more and more Peruvians are now shepherds.

Wrong Plane to Watch
CLINTON, Okla., Aug. 28—UP—Donald Gowdy, driving along a highway near here, decided to clock the speed of an airplane flying overhead. When he reached 90 miles an hour, Gowdy discovered, to his sorrow, the plane was a highway patrol aircraft with two-way radio to a patrol car ahead.

Ike Secluded For Week Of Fishing

FRASER, Colo., Aug. 27—UP—President Eisenhower goes into well-protected seclusion Thursday, intent on six secluded days of fishing and painting and no work, if possible.

Mr. Eisenhower was scheduled to motor 70 miles from Denver to the Fraser ranch of Aksel Nielsen, Denver businessman and one of the President's favorite fishing pals.

This rugged mountain country and the elevation of the ranch is about 9,000 feet. St. Louis Creek winds through the Nielsen property, which lies on a plateau between towering mountains. The temperature during many recent nights has fallen below freezing, and it was 28 degrees early Wednesday.

Other fishing companions may join the President, who was expected to remain here through next Tuesday, but their talk won't deal with such weighty problems as the new cost of living index or the United Nations.

Instead, they will debate the relative merits of dry and wet fly fishing, the best spots along the creek, why fish bite at some times, not at others.

Mail and official communications, telephoned and written, will be held to a minimum to give the President the greatest freedom possible, but brief, from the pressures of his office.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerly said he expected no visitors with business except possibly Robert Cutler, special assistant to the President and White House expert on national security matters. Cutler may fly out from Washington to talk briefly with the President while he is in Fraser.

Mrs. Eisenhower, who flew to Denver with her husband Aug. 8, will not come to Fraser, but will remain in Denver at the home of her mother, Mrs. John S. Doud. The President will return to Denver next Tuesday or Wednesday, and stay there at least through Labor Day.

Dog Shoots Men

BARNSTAPLE, Eng., Aug. 28—UP—Two hunters were recovering Friday from shotgun wounds. A dog shot them.

Authorities said the dog stepped on the double-barreled weapon, discharging it and wounding Col. Louis Murphy and Ralph Slocombe.

School Unchanged

HOUSTON, Aug. 28—UP—School apparently is the same for today's youth as it was for previous generations.

A sign near the Golfcrest elementary school usually reads "Public School — Drive Slow." But it was altered during the night, with crayon, to read, "Public Prison — Drive Slow."

The Kinsy Influence . . . Hank Gives Report On A Book That Probably Wasn't Written

By HENRY McLEMORE

For eighteen years Dr. Cuthbert Clingstone has been at work on a report which will reveal the behavior of American women in such widely different settings as to name just a few, fish fries, tennis matches, rummage sales, balloon ascensions, turkey shoofly dinners, kitchen showers, floor waxing, quilting bees, and bear baiting.

His report is five years from completion but so great has been the interest in his findings to date that several days ago he invited the press to his home for a private reading.

We were met at the door by Dr.

Clingstone, or by a man who said he was Dr. Clingstone, and who bore a striking resemblance to the good doctor. He showed us first to the library where we signed a pledge not to reveal any of the contents of his manuscript. He explained that he took this precaution to prevent any of the sensational findings from being published prematurely and thus hurting the sale of his book in 1958.

"I can't live on a professor's salary and like it," he said.

He then led us to his study. Rather, we pushed and shoved our way there because the hallway and the living room through which we had to pass were packed with women of all sizes, shapes and ages. "These are part of the group," Dr. Clingstone said, "that I will interview later this afternoon to find out their behavior at taffy pullings, cat shows, and home economic demonstrations."

Through French doors we could see hundreds of women milling around the front lawn.

"They are tomorrow's batch," the doctor informed us. "From them I hope to learn the feminine reaction to finding themselves with nothing to wear to a wedding except a middy blouse, bloomers, and high-buttoned shoes, one with a heel off."

The very first case was a shocker.

He had asked each of 10,000 women how she would behave if she found a loaded and cocked .38 revolver under her husband's pillow, a one-way ticket to Paris in his wallet, a jug of hair dye and a false beard in his closet, a ship's anchor under her bed, and a letter addressed to her parents saying not ever to expect a letter from her again and to please send any Christmas checks to him, care of General Delivery, Paris, France.

Thirty-eight per cent said they had experienced this or a similar situation, twenty-four per cent said they would definitely be suspicious. Twenty per cent said their behavior would be completely normal as their husbands were either interested in boats or collected false beards. Seventeen per cent said they would move to the Y. W. C. A., preferably to a top-floor room. The remaining one per cent, equally divided between graduates of correspondence schools and wives of sideshow barkers, said it couldn't possibly happen to them, as their parents never sent money for Christmas, only book-ends.

This is typical of the explosive stuff that jammed every page of the doctor's report. How in the world he ever got them to confide in him I'll never know. But confide they did, and there can be no doubt of the authenticity of his stuff.

He swears by it, and to know Dr. Clingstone is to trust Dr. Clingstone.

His book is tentatively entitled, "I Talked to 267,334 Women," or "How Crazy Can You Get?"

It's Your Deal

By OSWALD JACOBY and ALFRED SHEINWOLD
Written for NEA Service

"Please answer a question on etiquette in card games, if there is such a thing," asks a Pittsburgh correspondent. "My husband and I play the game of 500 regularly with another couple, friends of ours. The women are usually partners against the men.

"Everything goes well until we are ready to bid out, at which time our husbands make fantastic bids in order to prevent us from getting the bid and winning the game. Many times they will make a bid on a bunch of small cards.

"I finally blew my top the other evening and accused them of playing dirty. They were very hurt and said that their kind of playing was most acceptable and that I had the wrong idea entirely.

"If I accused them unjustly I would like to make amends. But I still feel that their way of bidding shows a lack of sportsmanship and poor etiquette.

"Who is right?"

To begin with, there is such a thing as etiquette in card games. (There probably is such a thing as etiquette in everything that people do together, but we can speak authoritatively only about games.) In this case the men did not violate any rule of the game or any principle of etiquette.

The trouble is that the game, as played by these two couples, is badly arranged. The only question is which side will win a game—and it doesn't matter by what score the game is won or lost.

Under these circumstances, the men have nothing to lose when they deliberately overbid towards the end of a game. If they are lucky, they may get a few good hands later on and thus make up for their overbid; if they are unlucky, they will merely lose a game that they were bound to lose anyway.

It is perfectly sporting and fair to make a deliberate overbid in a game of this kind. As a matter of fact, it would be impractical to adopt any other attitude. Who is to say when a bid is a deliberate overbid and when it is foolishly optimistic?

Is a bad player ethical when he overbids without realizing that he is bidding too much? And is a good player unethical when he makes exactly the same bid, knowing in advance that he will be defeated?

The solution to the problem is to keep a running score, giving the full amount by which a game is won or lost. Then it won't pay the loggers to make hopeless over-

One Most Wanted Criminal Caught

SEATTLE, Aug. 28—UP—Jack Gordon White, one of the FBI's 10 most wanted criminals, awaited return to North Carolina Friday after his capture on a waterfront street.

The search for White had narrowed to the Pacific Northwest when four Boise, Idaho, filling station operators identified him from pictures as the man who held them up in the last two weeks.

An off-duty policeman, Ed L. Parker, spotted White's car Thursday morning and followed it to a hotel. Parker then telephone police who closed in on the fugitive as he drove down the street late in the day.

White made no resistance, although a pistol was in the car. He had been traveling under the name of Zack Ralph Taylor.

FBI agents said White confessed to robbing 28 filling stations and stealing "two or three" cars since he became a fugitive. The FBI placed him on its 10 most wanted list July 6.
