Young: Resignation was 'amicable agreement'

Greenwood ISD, former superintendent cite new direction, need for change

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

The need for a new direction in Greenwood ISD was the main reason Superintendent Doug Young and his wife D'Laine Young decided to resign from their roles in the district.

The GISD board of trustees unanimously approved a settlement and release claim with the Youngs during Wednesday's special board meeting.

Young arrived in Greenwood in July 2007. It was his first superintendency. D'Laine Young has served as curriculum director. After trustees opted not to renew her contract on April 8, she was moved to the position of Brooks Middle School assistant principal.

Doug Young emailed the following statement to the Reporter-Telegram on Thursday afternoon regarding his resignation:

"After careful consideration by the GISD Board of Trustees and myself, we all came to the conclusion that a new direction was needed for GISD. D'Laine and I are greatly appreciative to the community of Greenwood for the six years we were here. I wish the students, staff, and all of the Greenwood community nothing but the best in the future. I have no hard feelings toward anyone in Greenwood. This was an amicable agreement and I support and respect the decision of the Board."

Terms of the settlement were not available Thursday, and the Reporter-Telegram has filed an open records request.

The Youngs' administrative contracts were last renewed in 2012, when Doug Young's was extended through June 30, 2016 and D'Laine Young's through June 30, 2014, according to meeting minutes. It is customary for superintendents and administrators to be on multi-year contracts.

Doug Young was awarded a 7.5 percent raise in 2012 when his contract was extended, making his annual salary $123,345, according to the Texas Education Agency's superintendent salary report.

"We just came to an amicable decision to go separate ways," said GISD Board President Cody Mebane following the meeting. "After discussions with both (Doug and D'Laine), we felt this was the best option for both parties. We wish them the best."

Trustees named Greenwood High School Principal Ariel Elliott as interim superintendent.

Townhomes set for north Midland despite opposition

- Initial reactions from neighboring homeowners cite fear of traffic, lower property values

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

It took a meeting with concerned neighbors next to a proposed townhome community in north Midland for their fears to be lessened, but they're not completely gone.

Stonebridge townhomes, planned to be located on the east side of Lamesa Road a half mile north of East Loop 250 North, is in development by Mark Payne Homes. Neighbors who received notices about the rezoning for the townhomes' future site became concerned that the townhomes would actually be apartment complexes, said homeowner Owen Rust.

Much like other residents who recently have spoken against developing townhomes and apartments at meetings of the City Council and Planning and Zoning Commission, some of the concerns neighboring residents had were traffic increases and property value decreases.

"Harming the quality of life and financial value of homes along the streets of Porterfield, Cedar Creek and Milltown will set a negative precedent and could dissuade future homeowners from seeking new development," the homeowners said in an open letter to news media.

After developer Mark Payne noticed the growing opposition, he held a meeting on June 13 at a model home to explain the development. Payne explained how the townhomes will be single-family units that will all be connected to each

UT/TT poll: Texans split on permissibility of abortions

By Ross Ramsey
Texas Tribune

Texas voters remain split on the permissibility of abortion but favor banning the procedure after 20 weeks of a pregnancy, according to the latest University of Texas/Texas Tribune Poll.

The survey also found a divergence of opinion about public schools: Voters with school-age children give schools much better ratings than all voters as a group.

The divide on abortion — evident in past UT/TT polls — persists. Forty-six percent of Texas voters say it should never be permitted or permitted only in cases involving incest, rape or when the woman's life is in danger. On the other hand, 49 percent say it should be allowed after the need for an abortion has been clearly established, or that the choice should be completely left to the woman. Within those numbers, 16 percent said abortion should never be allowed, and 36 percent said that a woman should always be able to get an abortion as a matter of personal choice.

Laws restricting abortion should be stricter, according to 38 percent of the respondents, while 26 percent said the laws should be less strict and 21 percent said they should be left as they are now.

"What you see is what you would expect in a relatively red state," said poll co-director Daron Shaw, a professor of government at the University of Texas at Austin. "It's a slight pro-life lean. It's probably pushed a little bit because of the question about late-term abortions."

The poll split a question about abortions after 20 weeks — an effort to see whether talking in the context of fetal pain changed the responses of Texas voters. It didn't: 62 percent said they would support "prohibiting abortions after 20 weeks based on the argument that a fetus can feel pain at that point," and that same percentage said they support "prohibiting abortions after 20 weeks." Nearly half — 49 percent in the first question and 47 percent in the second — said they would strongly support those prohibitions.

"In terms of substantive policy, most of this is not particularly right wing," Shaw said. "Maybe the abortion stuff. These are abortion positions that are actually not strongly opposed — there is a 2-to-1 preference for that."

It's a strongly partisan issue, however, with 85 percent of Republicans in favor of the ban and nearly half of the Democrats against it. Fewer than 10 percent of Republicans oppose the 20-week ban; fewer than two in five Democrats support it.

When asked about the public schools, 45 percent of voters give K-12 education ratings of excellent or good. Voters with children

Alito tells Dallas lawyers about highest court

Associated Press

DALLAS — Samuel Alito came to the Supreme Court with two ideas about how he would conduct himself when questioning lawyers. He would try to ask real questions — "with a question mark at the end" — and he would wait for the lawyer speaking to at least conclude a paragraph.

Instead, he found himself playing what he called a "contact sport."

"Trying to get in a question at oral argument is really like trying to grab an item that's on sale at Wal-Mart the day after Thanksgiving," Alito said Thursday at the State Bar of Texas' annual meeting.

After he was introduced by Harriet Miers — who was once nominated for the seat he received in 2006 — Alito delivered a 40-minute speech in which he took a few gentle digs at some of his colleagues and the perception commentators and the public have of them.

The Supreme Court has yet to announce decisions in several key cases argued this term, including a high-profile case concerning the University of Texas' use of race in admissions. Alito, who was giving a speech he called "Ten Things People May Not Know About the Supreme Court," joked that those decisions weren't going to be the things he revealed during his talk.

Instead, he talked about how justices generally evaluate cases and how they work together. While theories on evaluating the Constitution and the law matter, Alito argued that the high court's previous rulings on an issue mattered more.

Visitors to the Supreme Court building in Washington who watch oral arguments see only a small part of the justices' work, Alito said. Justices and the clerks spend many more hours reading legal briefs and discussing the cases privately, he said.

"Hearing oral argument is a small and comparatively unimportant part of the work that we do," Alito said.

Associated Press

Supreme Court Justice Samuel Alito visits before speaking at the State Bar of Texas' annual meeting Thursday in Dallas. Alito gave a talk called "Ten Things People May Not Know About the Supreme Court."

While justices often disagree on cases, sometimes vociferously, Alito said his colleagues are "not at each other's throats" the way it might seem to some people.

Alito acknowledged he had his clerks once clip editorials from a few newspapers on court opinions. He joked about a few "small and harmless episodes" in which a commentator once said Alito had worked for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce — he hadn't — and that he was listed online as having five law clerks, instead of the customary four.

More troubling, he said, was the criticism the court sometimes received from high-ranking officials in other parts of government, particularly since justices customarily don't comment on stories and "cannot respond back in kind," he said.

He described such criticism as "simplistic and sometimes downright false."

While Alito did not name names, he famously was caught on tape in the audience shaking his head when President Barack Obama said during the 2010 State of the Union speech that the court's Citizens United decision would open "the floodgates for special interests, including foreign corporations" to influence elections.

Alito, sitting with five other justices, was seen to mouth, "Not true." He has not attended a State of the Union since.

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Police search for man accused of robbery, kidnapping

The Midland Police Department is looking for a man who allegedly committed both aggravated robbery and attempted kidnapping twice early Thursday, according to the city's public information officer.

Midland police responded to the first incident in the 1100 block of West Kentucky Avenue at about 12:08 a.m. The investigation found a male subject had given a ride to two females, who admitted during the investigation that they did not know the subject. The first female was dropped off at an apartment located along East Industrial Avenue before the man exhibited a knife to the second female and demanded her purse. He tried to kidnap the second female, but she escaped, according to Sara Higgins, public information officer for the city.

Authorities then responded to a second robbery that resulted in a stabbing at about 12:52 a.m. in the parking lot of the Wal-Mart located in the 4500 block of North Midland Drive.

The suspect, whose description matched the one given by the alleged victim of the first incident, stabbed a woman in the arm as she entered her truck and then tried to enter the truck before fleeing the scene. The woman was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital with injuries that were not life threatening, Higgins said.

The suspect is described as a black male, 5 feet 4 inches to 5 feet 6 inches tall with an average build. He fled the scenes of both incidents in a light-colored, four-door sedan, possibly a Cadillac or Lincoln, Higgins said.

Anyone with information about this suspect is asked to call Midland Police Department at 432-685-7108 or Midland Crime Stoppers at 432-685-TIPS (8477).

MPD: Man arrested for alleged Academy Sports thefts

The Midland Police Department has arrested a man wanted in connection with several thefts at the Academy Sports store on Wadley Avenue, according to a press release by the city's public information officer.

Rocha

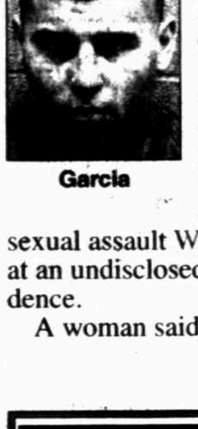
MPD officers arrested 37-year-old Fernando Rocha on Thursday after receiving tips regarding the suspect's identity. They located Rocha at his residence in the 300 block of West Jax, and he was taken to the department, where he gave a full confession to the aggravated robbery. An aggravated robbery warrant was issued for Rocha, who, according to MPD, then turned himself in to the Midland County Central Detention Center.

He is charged with a first-degree felony charge of aggravated robbery. If convicted, he faces five to 99 years in prison.

18-year-old accused of sexually assaulting female child

A Midland man was arrested Wednesday afternoon for sexually assaulting a child younger than 14 years of age, according to his arrest affidavit.

John Michael Garcia, 18, was being held Thursday on a $100,000 bond for a second-degree felony charge of sexual assault of a child.



Garcia

Midland County deputies responded to the alleged sexual assault Wednesday at an undisclosed residence.

A woman said she dropped her children off at her mother's house that morning. When she walked into the house, she could hear one of her children crying in one of the bedrooms. She entered the bedroom to find Garcia on top of her daughter. The mother hit Garcia to get him off her daughter. He put on his clothes and fled the scene, but another male family member chased after Garcia, caught him and brought him back to the house, according to the arrest report.

Deputies arrested Garcia, who said he had smoked a bunch of marijuana the night before and passed out. He said he did not remember touching the girl inappropriately but said he was sorry if he did, according to the report.

If convicted, he could face up to 20 years in prison.

2 San Francisco men guilty in Texas pot plane case

A pilot and passenger from California have pleaded guilty in a drug case involving a rented plane hauling marijuana and stopping to refuel in Texas.

Prosecutors in Lubbock said Michael Gallanter and Ethan Oliver Wynne-Wade pleaded guilty Thursday to possession with intent to distribute marijuana. Investigators on April 17 found more than 150 pounds of pot in duffel bags on the plane that landed in Lubbock.

No sentencing dates were immediately set for the San Francisco men, who face up to 20 years in prison and $1 million fines.

Federal agents received information that the plane was traveling under suspicious circumstances, including the men paying for fuel with cash.

Gallanter's flight plan was from northern California to Atlanta. The plane refueled in Page, Ariz., before arriving in Lubbock.

School district apologizes to valedictorian

A North Texas school district has apologized to a high-school valedictorian whose microphone was switched off during a graduation ceremony when he deviated from prepared remarks.

Joshua School District Superintendent Fran Marek apologized to Remington Reimer after meeting with him and his attorney Thursday. In a statement, Marek said she wishes Reimer "success for all future endeavors."

Reimer's microphone was switched off during the June 6 ceremony after he deviated from prepared remarks and began talking about his religious beliefs.

He also alleged that his principal threatened to contact the U.S. Naval Academy, where Reimer has been accepted, to complain about his bad character. But Marek said "the district has never intended to, nor will take, punitive action."

Reimer said he's thankful and knew the school district would support him.

Top lawmaker to seek UT System regent's ouster

A top Texas House Republican says he's drafting a resolution to impeach a University of Texas System regent.

State Rep. Jim Pitts accuses Regent Wallace Hall of gross interference with the flagship Austin campus and its management. The Waxahachie Republican chairs the powerful House Appropriations Committee and also serves on the Joint Oversight Committee on Higher Ed Governance.

Pitts told The Dallas Morning News that he was moved to act after Hall made an open records request for emails and other information regarding the UT School of Law and its foundation. The request included information emails between UT President Bill Powers and his deputy Nancy Brazzil and members of the Legislature.

The request came after the Senate confirmed three men nominated by Gov. Rick Perry to the regents.

30 arrested in sweep of notorious gang

Federal agents arrested 30 alleged members and associates of a prison gang Thursday on charges that they worked with Mexican organized crime to bring drugs into the U.S. in South Texas and distribute them north.

Thursday's sweep was the result of a four-year investigation by the DEA and FBI into the notorious Mexican Mafia prison gang and its drug trafficking, said U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration Special Agent in Charge Javier Pena. The gang has close ties with the Zetas cartel, which maintains a stronghold in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico across the Rio Grande from Texas.

For years, Mexican drug trafficking organizations have used U.S.-based prison gangs to handle some of their enforcement activities, as well as their U.S. drug distribution. The gangs are generally run by leaders who are behind bars, but they maintain an extensive network of members on the outside.

The Mexican Mafia allegedly brought drugs across the border at Laredo and moved them up through San Antonio, Austin and Fort Worth. One of those arrested Thursday was the alleged Mexican Mafia captain who oversaw the gang's activities in Laredo, Pena said.

"We will not tolerate any type of gang activity or organized crime," Pena said from Laredo. "If they are working an area, we're going to target them."

Woman who killed boss with arsenic released

A North Texas woman convicted in the arsenic poisoning death of her millionaire boss has been released from prison.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice said Debra Lynn Baker was released Thursday after spending a decade behind bars. But that was for parole violations.

In 1994 she was convicted of killing Clay County racehorse owner Jerry Sternadel but was sentenced to 10 years' probation and fined $10,000.

As Sternadel's bookkeeper, Baker was suspected of embezzlement. Prosecutors also said Baker was close to Sternadel's wife and poisoned him in 1990 before he could divorce her. The wife was never charged.

Becky Sternadel, the victim's daughter, told the Wichita Falls Times Record News that "a terrible injustice" was done.

5 utility workers suffer electrical burns

Five utility workers have suffered significant electrical burns in an accident while doing maintenance on a downtown Houston building.

The Houston Fire Department said the CenterPoint Energy workers were hurt Thursday morning in an electrical vault accident at the Southwestern Bell building. The cause of the accident remains under investigation.

CenterPoint spokeswoman Alicia Dixon had no further details on names of the victims or extent of their injuries.

Dixon said the electrical contact happened as the crew was doing routine maintenance in the basement. The vault stores equipment to serve underground power lines that supply electricity to buildings.

Dixon said the building and two other structures were impacted — losing electricity because of the accident or power was later halted to make repairs.

Today in history

In 1932, heavyweight Max Schmeling lost a title fight rematch in New York by decision to Jack Sharkey, prompting Schmeling's manager, Joe Jacobs, to exclaim: "We was robbed!"

In 1982, a jury in Washington, D.C., found John Hinckley Jr. not guilty by reason of insanity in the shootings of President Ronald Reagan and three other men.

In 1989, a sharply divided Supreme Court ruled that burning the American flag as a form of political protest was protected by the First Amendment.

EPA won't confirm fracturing-pollution tie

Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced Thursday it is dropping its longstanding plan to have independent scientists review its finding that hydraulic fracturing may be linked to groundwater pollution in central Wyoming.

The EPA is standing by its findings, but state officials will lead further investigation into the pollution in the Pavillion area. The area has been a focus of the debate over whether fracturing can pollute groundwater ever since the EPA's initial report came out in late 2011.

"We stand behind our work and the data, but EPA recognizes the state's commitment to further investigation," said agency spokesman Tom Reynolds in Washington, D.C. The EPA will let state officials carry on the investigation with the federal agency's support, he said.

Wyoming officials have been skeptical about the theory that fracturing played a role in the pollution at Pavillion, but Reynolds expressed confidence the state could lead the work from here. He described the shift as the best way to ensure Pavillion-area residents have a clean source of drinking water.

Even so, industry officials who have been doubtful about the EPA findings all along praised the change as confirmation of their view that the science wasn't sound.

"EPA has to do a better job, because another fatally flawed water study could have a big impact on how the nation develops its massive energy resources," Erik Milito, director of upstream and industry operations for the American Petroleum Institute, said in a release.

Richard Garrett, energy and legislative advocate with the Wyoming Outdoor Council in Lander, said he believes Thursday's announcement shows the EPA is finding it more difficult than originally expected to come to grips with the full environmental effect of fracturing. He noted that the EPA is pushing back other work aimed at gauging the how energy production may pollute groundwater.

Texas auction house to sell John Brown leg irons

Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — The leg irons that restrained abolitionist John Brown after his failed 1859 raid on a federal arsenal in Harpers Ferry are being sold Saturday in Texas, but two historical parks dedicated to his legacy can't afford to bid on them

Dallas-based Heritage Auctions estimates the shackles are worth at least $10,000, but some Brown memorabilia has fetched much more. In 2007, a rare daguerreotype sold for $97,750 at a Cincinnati auction.

John Boling, of Buhl, Idaho, whose family has long owned them, said his family hopes that whoever buys the shackles will display them publicly.

"We believe that history should be learned and understood," said Boling, whose great-great-great-grandfather, Hezekiah Atwood Jr., apparently obtained them shortly after Brown's execution on Dec. 2, 1859, in what is today West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle.

History long regarded Brown as a domestic terrorist, and some Southerners still do. Many scholars consider Brown and his raid to be flash points, hastening the start of the Civil War.

But many now see him as a martyr, ahead of his time in trying to end slavery. The Connecticut native spent months plotting to seize 100,000 weapons from the arsenal and use them to launch a guerrilla war with the slaves he believed would join him.

Yet the first casualty in the Harpers Ferry raid was a free black man, a baggage handler who bled to death while Brown's raiders grabbed hostages and holed up at a fire engine house. Within 48 hours, the rebellion was dead, along with at least four civilians, 10 raiders and a U.S. Marine.

Brown was tried for treason, murder and inciting a rebellion. He was hanged in Charles Town, and is buried on his former farmstead in North Elba, N.Y., now home to the John Brown Farm State Historic Site.

An official with New York's parks system said the state has no plans to bid.

"The raid didn't happen here, and we don't have the resources at this time," said Brendan Mills, manager of the site near Lake Placid. "If they were donated, we would take them,"

Much of the Harpers Ferry National Historical Park is devoted to the story of John Brown, but Superintendent Rebecca Harriett said Monday that she was unaware of the auction. Funding would also be an issue, she said, "especially on such short notice."

Don Ackerman, consignment director for the auction house, said historians had to sift through a lot of "murky family lore" to verify the shackles are authentic. Among the stampings are the initials ER, for a well-known Shepherdstown locksmith, Elijah Rickard.

Boling's ancestor served with the First Maine Volunteers in the Civil War and was in Charles Town at some point, perhaps to put down the rebellion, Ackerman said.

At least four newspaper articles published between 1889 and 1893 reported that Atwood obtained Brown's leg irons from an elderly black woman, providing her a substitute pair that he bought for $8.

Online bidding ends today at 10 p.m. Live bidding starts Saturday morning but can also be done by phone or through the Heritage website.

House approves redistricting map

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas House approved voting maps on Thursday, but the redistricting chairman surprised many lawmakers by accepting tiny changes to a handful of districts, angering members of both parties.

The so-called tweaks to House district maps also broke with Gov. Rick Perry's call for the special legislative session by varying from the court-drawn maps used in the 2012 election. The House must still give final passage to the bills on today.

Democratic Rep. Rafael Anchia and Republican Rep. Bennett Ratliff changed the border between their Dallas-area districts to move only two precincts that contained voters. One of the precincts included the home of Ratliff's tea party rival, Matt Rinaldi, prompting Rep. Pat Fallon, R-Frisco, to call Ratliff a "big liar" when coming out of a closed-door Republican meeting about the change.

"The Ratliff amendment that was accepted was to draw myself, a potential challenger, out of his district," Rinaldi told The Associated Press.

The only other changes accepted by the Republican majority on Thursday dealt with small precinct changes in Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Webb counties, mostly to consolidate minority voters into districts represented by minorities. The adjustments, though, only affected a few thousand people and frustrated Democrats who wanted more profound, widespread changes.

UTPB earns honors from U.S. News and World Report

From staff reports

U.S. News and World Report recently ranked UT Permian Basin first among Texas public universities for online bachelor's degrees.

In addition to being ranked 46th nationally for the online bachelor's degree program, UTPB's online graduate program in education was ranked 113th nationally in the annual performance rankings.

"UTPB online and campus offerings are the best. It is wonderful when U.S. News and World Report confirms it," said UTPB President David Watts in a news release.

"Rankings are calculated on a number of factors, including quality, student success rate, class size and affordability," said Bill Fannin, provost and vice president of academic affairs. "These results boil down to one thing: student success."

other.

Payne said to the Reporter-Telegram on Thursday that 71 units are planned and prices will start at $140,000 to $175,000. The target market for the townhomes will be young and old professional couples. The lawns will be maintained by a homeowners association and design plans have yet to be finalized, he added.

"Unified opposition to the rezoning effectively dissolved after the Thursday (June 13) meeting," Rust said.

On Monday, the Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously approved the zoning for the townhomes. Rust was the only resident in attendance.

When asked if there is still opposition remaining, Rust said several neighbors feel that they have been "misled" when they were first buying their homes. He said that the neighbors were told that future development east of them — the site of the townhomes — were to be single-family homes, not townhomes.

"With no ground having yet been broken east of Granger Road, some residents are concerned that the planned townhomes could evolve into something less desirable by the time construction begins," Rust said.

Marbles champions decided

WILDWOOD, N.J. — An 11-year-old girl from Shaler, Pa., and a 12-year-old boy from Middletown Valley, Md., are this year's national marbles champions.

Emily Cavacini won the girls' championship Thursday at the National Marbles Tournament in Wildwood, N.J. Cooper Fisher won the boys' title.

The four-day tournament featured 26 boys and 26 girls competing to knock marbles out of a circle.

Emily and Cooper said it's fun playing against their friends in the tournament, which is celebrating its 90th year.

POLL

currently enrolled in school were much more positive, with 82 percent giving their own children's schools excellent or good ratings. About the same numbers — 14 percent of all voters and 13 percent of those with kids in school — gave public education (or their own children's schools) a "terrible" rating.

"It's not unlike what you see with other institutions, like with Congress," said Jim Henson, who runs the Texas Politics Project at UT-Austin and co-directs the UT/TT Poll. "In the way that voters tend to like their members of Congress and elect them over and over again and then turn around and say they disapprove of Congress, people tend to see flaws in the education system overall, but they know their teachers, they like them, they're taking care of their kids."

Many candidates in 2012 heard from voters about tests required for high school graduation, and lawmakers decided to cut the number of those exams to five from 15. That move has the support of 60 percent of voters, including strong support from 35 percent. Nearly a third of voters opposed cutting the number high-stakes tests.

During the regular session of the Legislature, lawmakers tinkered with high school curriculum and graduation requirements to take professional training for non-college-bound students into account. Nearly half of Texas voters said schools should set requirements to encourage all students to go to college, while 38 percent said the schools shouldn't do that.

"That 38 percent are the people who think that public education isn't geared strictly to get people into college, that there are other paths and that the schools ought to facilitate that," Shaw said.

Two years ago the Legislature cut $5.4 billion in public education funding, and this year it restored more than half of that. That was the right solution for about 17 percent of voters, while 11 percent said the cuts should have been left in place and 8 percent said more cuts were needed. Another 19 percent would have restored all of the money cut in 2011, and 23 percent said the Legislature should have restored those cuts and increased spending from there.

"This is a consistent finding, even in a red state — there is an appetite for spending the public good and a particular appetite for spending on public education," Shaw said. "Even when debt and taxes and those things are on the table, they're still willing to put money into education."

With most of the state in the midst of a record-setting drought, lawmakers put together a $2 billion water plan that will be presented to voters in November as a constitutional amendment. That money would come from the state's Rainy Day Fund, an idea supported by 68 percent of the voters, and opposed by only 20 percent.

"This is one of the areas where we were eager to see if the flare-up of fiscal conservatives to funding the water from the Rainy Day Fund was going to register in public opinion," Henson said. "There's no evidence of that. That could have implications going into a fall constitutional amendment election.

"As it stands now, you have an uphill battle to beat the amendment," he said.

The University of Texas/Texas Tribune internet survey of 1,200 voters was conducted May 31-June 9, 2013, and has a margin of error of +/- 2.83 percentage points. Numbers in the charts might not add up to 100 percent, because of rounding.

Plan B One-Step approved for OTC sales; age limit lifted

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The morning-after pill is finally going over-the-counter.

The Food and Drug Administration on Thursday approved unrestricted sales of Plan B One-Step, lifting all age limits on the emergency contraceptive.

The move came a week after the Obama administration ended months of back-and-forth legal battles by promising a federal judge it would take that step. Women's health advocates had pushed for easier access to next-day birth control for more than a decade.

"Over-the-counter access to emergency contraceptive products has the potential to further decrease the rate of unintended pregnancies in the United States," FDA drug chief Dr. Janet Woodcock said in a statement announcing the approval.

It wasn't clear how quickly Plan B One-Step would move from behind pharmacy counters to sit on drugstore shelves. Until now, customers could buy that morning-after pill and competing generic versions without a prescription only if they proved to a pharmacist that they were 17 or older. FDA said the product will have to be repackaged to reflect the change. Drugmaker Teva Women's Health didn't immediately respond for comments. FDA has not lifted age limits on competing generics.

The morning-after pill contains a higher dose of the hormone in regular birth control pills. Taking it within 72 hours of rape, condom failure or just forgetting regular contraception can cut the chances of pregnancy by up to 89 percent, but it works best within the first 24 hours. If a girl or woman already is pregnant, the pill, which prevents ovulation or fertilization of an egg, has no effect.

Back in 2011, the FDA was preparing to allow over-the-counter sales of emergency contraceptives with no limits when Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius overruled her own scientists in an unprecedented move. She said she worried that girls as young as 11 could use the pill with no supervision, a concern that President Barack Obama echoed.

In April, U.S. District Judge Edward Korman blasted that decision as putting politics ahead of science and ordered the FDA to allow unrestricted sales of emergency contraceptives. He said hardly any 11-year-olds would use the pill, which costs about $50. The Obama administration lost a round in the appeals court, too, before telling the judge it would approve the one-pill brand.

Doctors' groups and contraceptive advocates have long argued that easier access to emergency contraceptives would cut unintended pregnancies and said the drugs are safe even when used at young ages.

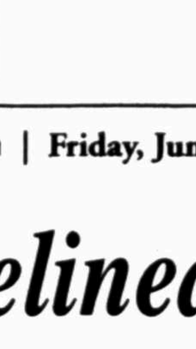
Obama has U.S. sidelined, barely relevant in Syria

■ The president's inaction means that gains made in the Middle East for decades, even through the Iraq War, are gone. Another other countries are taking advantage.



CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER

Washington Post Writers Group

The war in Syria, started by locals, is now a regional conflict, the meeting ground of two warring blocs. On one side, the radical Shiite bloc led by Iran, which overflies Iraq to supply Bashar al-Assad and sends Hezbollah to fight for him. Behind them lies Russia, which has stationed ships offshore, provided the regime with tons of weaponry and essentially claimed Syria as a Russian protectorate.

And on the other side are the Sunni Gulf states terrified of Iranian hegemony (territorial and soon nuclear); non-Arab Turkey, now convulsed by an internal uprising; and fragile Jordan, dragged in by geography.

And behind them? No one. It's the Spanish Civil War except that only one side — the fascists — showed up. The natural ally of what began as a spontaneous, secular, liberationist uprising in Syria was the United States. For two years, it did nothing.

President Obama's dodge was his chemical-weapons red line. In a conflict requiring serious statecraft, Obama chose to practice forensics instead, earnestly agonizing over whether reported poison gas attacks reached the evidentiary standards of "CSI: Miami."

Obama talked "chain of custody," while Iran and Russia, hardly believing their luck, reached for regional hegemony — the ayatollahs solidifying their "Shiite crescent," Vladimir Putin seizing the opportunity to dislodge America as regional hegemon, a position the U.S. achieved four decades ago under Henry Kissinger.

And when finally forced to admit that his red line had been crossed — a "game changer," Obama had gravely warned — what did he do? Promise the rebels small arms and ammunition.

That's it? It's meaningless: The rebels are already receiving small arms from the Gulf states.

Compounding the halfheartedness, Obama transmitted his new "calculus" through his deputy national security adviser. Deputy, mind you. Obama gave 39 (or was it 42?) speeches on health care reform. How many on the regional war in Syria, in which he has now involved the United States, however uselessly? Zero.

Serious policymaking would dictate that we either do something that will alter the course of the war, or do nothing. Instead, Obama has chosen to do just enough to give the appearance of having done something.

But it gets worse. Despite his commitment to steadfast inaction, Obama has been forced by events to send F-16s, Patriot missiles and a headquarters unit of the 1st Armored Division (indicating preparation for a possible "larger force," explains The Washington Post) — to Jordan. America's most reliable Arab ally needs protection. It is threatened not just by a flood of refugees but by the rise of Iran's radical Shiite bloc with ambitions far beyond Syria, beyond even Jordan and Lebanon to Yemen, where, it was reported just Wednesday, Iran is arming and training separatists.

Obama has thus been forced back into the very vacuum he created -- but at a distinct disadvantage. We are now scrambling to put together some kind of presence in Jordan as a defensive counterweight to the Iran-Hezbollah-Russia bloc.

The tragedy is that we once had a counterweight and Obama threw it away. Obama still thinks the total evacuation of Iraq is a foreign policy triumph. In fact, his inability — unwillingness? — to negotiate a Status of Forces Agreement that would have left behind a small but powerful residual force in Iraq is precisely what compels him today to re-create in Jordan a pale facsimile of that regional presence.

Whatever the wisdom of the Iraq War in the first place, when Obama came to office in January 2009 the war was won. Al-Qaida in Iraq had been routed. Nouri al-Maliki's Shiite government had taken down the Sadr Shiite extremists from Basra all the way north to Baghdad. Casualties were at a wartime low, the civil war essentially over.

We had a golden opportunity to reap the rewards of this too-bloody war by establishing a strategic relationship with an Iraq that was still under American sway. Iraqi airspace, for example, was under U.S. control as we prepared to advise and rebuild Iraq's nonexistent air force.

With our evacuation, however, Iraqi airspace today effectively belongs to Iran — over which it is flying weapons, troops and advisers to turn the tide in Syria. The U.S. air bases, the vast military equipment, the intelligence sources available in Iraq were all abandoned. Gratis. Now we're trying to hold the line in Jordan.

Obama is learning very late that, for a superpower, inaction is a form of action. You can abdicate, but you really can't hide. History will find you. It has now found Obama.

State Legislators quietly hiked their retirement pay

San Antonio Express-News

Some measures that get passed into law during the final of hours of the Legislature's regular sessions are alarming.

Legislative rules allow items that might not have progressed very far under regular protocol to get resurrected and quietly slipped into other bills without much debate or notice. Many proposals considered dead until the next regular session are attached to high-stakes legislation and shoved through as riders.

After months of public discussion on state spending, lawmakers — with little public notice — included a last-minute rider to the state budget bill that will increase their already generous retirement pay.

They were able to do that by increasing the pay of Texas district judges by 12 percent, setting the judges' annual salaries at $140,000 a year. Few taxpayers would begrudge a pay hike for the state's hardworking district judges, but other expenses triggered by those pay boosts are problematic. Lawmakers' retirement and the salaries of county court-at-law judges are tied to the judges' pay.

County court judges' salaries must be set within $1,000 of district judges' pay. In Bexar County, that unexpected pay hike will cost taxpayers an additional $15,000 a year for each of its 15 county court-at-law judges. And the county will have to pick up some of the increased pay for the district judges. The state pays most of the salary of a district judge, but the counties are liable for 40 percent.

This is another unfunded mandate from the state, and those are seldom good news for local taxpayers.

For legislators, the district judge's pay hike means a hefty increase in their state retirement benefits. The formula for lawmakers' retirement pay is 2.3 percent of a judge's annual salary multiplied by a lawmaker's years of service. A minimum of eight years in the Legislature is required.

A lawmaker with eight years service can start collecting the pension at 60; a legislator with 12 years can claim the state retirement at 50. The judges' pay hike boosts the retirement of lawmakers with 20 years of service from $57,500 to $64,400 a year. It is not surprising that proposed legislation to break the link between legislators' retirement benefits and state district judges' salaries did not pass.

State lawmakers, despite public posturing about transparency, failed to serve taxpayers on this one.

Unfunded mandates are bad public policy. The quiet increase in legislative pension benefits adds insult to injury.

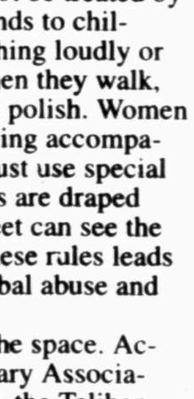
How do we talk with the Taliban?

■ President Obama has his work cut out for him and the U.S. if he thinks he can talk with a group that will lie to achieve its goals.



CAL THOMAS

Tribune Media Services

After 12 years of fighting, the Taliban in Afghanistan have announced they are ready to talk peace with the United States. The Taliban opened a political office in Qatar. The talks will take place there, but without the Afghan government, which is refusing to take part in the "peace" talks.

President Obama says there will be "a lot of bumps in the road" during the talks.

More like sinkholes.

The history of talks with Middle East terrorist groups, apparently, has taught us little. It appears such groups use talks like these to mostly re-arm and/or advance their cause until they can either get back to the killing field or enforce their political and religious will on the masses.

What is there to talk about with the Taliban? How can any "infidel" Western diplomat believe anything they say about "peace," since their definition of the word is likely much different than ours? The Koran teaches that it's permitted to lie to infidels in order to achieve Islamic goals. It's called "Al-taqiyya."

"Taqiyya (deception) is of fundamental importance in Islam," writes Raymond Ibrahim for the Middle East Forum. "Practically every Islamic sect agrees to it and practices it. We can go so far as to say that the practice of taqiyya is mainstream in Islam, and that those few sects not practicing it diverge from the mainstream. ... Taqiyya is very prevalent in Islamic politics, especially in the modern era." (http://www.meforum.org/2095/islams-doctrines-of-deception.)

Before 9/11, I attended an event in New York hosted by some female celebrities who wished to draw attention to the plight of Afghan women. I heard stories from female doctors and teachers about how the Taliban had made women's lives miserable. They were not permitted to leave the house, unless accompanied by a male relative. A male relative had to deposit their bus fare in the coin box. Women were banned from working in public places. Women had to wear a burqa if they went outside and the windows in their homes had to be covered so no one could see inside. Girls and women were not allowed to attend publicly funded schools.

That is only a partial list of restrictions. According to various reports, there are others: Women are denied access to basic health care, but when they do get it, they cannot be treated by male doctors (this restriction extends to children); no exposed ankles, no laughing loudly or wearing shoes that make noise when they walk, no white socks, no makeup or nail polish. Women cannot use public taxis without being accompanied by male relatives and they must use special female-only buses whose windows are draped with curtains so no one on the street can see the passengers. Failing to adhere to these rules leads to public beatings, whippings, verbal abuse and even death.

There's more, but I don't have the space. According to RAWA, the Revolutionary Association of the Women of Afghanistan, the Taliban has also issued a general ban — for both men and women — on listening to music, watching movies, television and videos or celebrating the traditional new year. If you were given a non-Islamic name, you have to change it to an Islamic one. Certain games are banned, including kite flying. "Non-Muslim minorities must wear a badge or stitch a yellow cloth onto their clothing to differentiate them from the majority Muslim population," writes RAWA. Now what does that remind you of?

If the Taliban view things like exposed ankles and white socks as horrors offensive to their god, how do so-called infidels, whom they consider worthy of death, negotiate with them? If such twisted ideas are accepted as doctrine, what could the Taliban possibly give up in negotiations ... and in exchange for what? Furthermore, if we reach an agreement with them, how will we know they're even telling the truth?

Border security gives boost to Senate immigration bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A breakthrough at hand, Republicans and Democrats reached for agreement Thursday on a costly, military-style surge to secure the leaky U.S.-Mexican border and clear the way for Senate passage of legislation giving millions of immigrants a chance at citizenship after years in America's shadows.

Lawmakers in both parties described a southern border that would be bristling with law enforcement manpower and technology as a result of legislation at the top of President Barack Obama's second-term domestic policy agenda. The emerging deal called for a doubling of the Border Patrol, with 20,000 new agents, 18 new unmanned surveillance drones, 700 miles of fencing and an array of fixed and mobile devices to maintain vigilance.

"This is a border surge. We have militarized our border, almost," said Sen. Lindsey Graham, a South Carolina Republican.

"Boots on the ground, drones in the air," summed up Sen. Chuck Schumer, the New York Democrat who has been at the center of efforts to push immigration legislation through the Senate.

The plan was announced by Sens. John Hoeven, of North Dakota, and Bob Corker, of Tennessee, Republicans who had been publicly uncommitted on the legislation. Both said other GOP fence-sitters would also swing behind the measure if the changes were incorporated, and by late in the afternoon, two had done so.

A final vote on the legislation is expected by the end of next week.

The next move would be up to the House, where majority Republicans are opposed to granting citizenship to immigrants living in the U.S. illegally.

The White House declined to respond to requests for comment on the Senate proposal, even though congressional officials said administration officials were involved in the formal drafting of the terms.

Under the emerging deal, an estimated 11 million immigrants living in the United States illegally would be eligible to obtain legal status while border security was increased. They could not be awarded green cards, which bestow permanent residency status, until the entire border enhancement plan had been put into place.

That effectively would give the government a decade to set up the additional security because the legislation envisions a pathway to citizenship that gives immigrants provisional status after six months but requires them to wait at least a decade before they become eligible for green cards.

Obama to nominate Comey as FBI director

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama on Friday plans to nominate President George W. Bush's former No. 2 at the Justice Department, Jim Comey, to lead the FBI as the agency grapples with privacy debates over a host of recently exposed investigative tactics.

If confirmed by the Senate, Comey would serve a 10-year tenure and replace Robert Mueller, who has held the job since the week before the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001. Mueller is set to resign on Sept. 4 after overseeing the bureau's transformation into one the country's chief weapons against terrorism.

The White House said in a statement that Obama would announce his choice of Comey this afternoon.

Comey was a federal prosecutor who served for several years as the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York before coming to Washington after the Sept. 11 attacks as deputy attorney general. In recent years he's been an executive at defense company Lockheed Martin, general counsel to a hedge fund, board member at HSBC Holdings and lecturer on national security law at Columbia Law School.

The White House may hope that Comey's Republican background and strong credentials will help him through Senate confirmation at a time when some of Obama's nominees have been facing tough battles. Republicans have said they see no major obstacles to his confirmation.

House rejects farm bill; 62 Republicans vote no

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House rejected a five-year, half-trillion-dollar farm bill Thursday that would have cut $2 billion annually from food stamps and let states impose broad new work requirements on those who receive them.

Those cuts weren't deep enough for many Republicans who objected to the cost of the nearly $80 billion-a-year food stamp program, which has doubled in the past five years. The vote was 234-195 against the bill, with 62 Republicans voting against it.

The bill also suffered from lack of Democratic support necessary for the traditionally bipartisan farm bill to pass. Only 24 Democrats voted in favor of the legislation after many said the food stamp cuts could remove as many as 2 million needy recipients from the rolls. The addition of the optional state work requirements by Republican amendment just before final passage turned away many remaining Democratic votes.

Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., and No. 2 Democrat Steny Hoyer, of Maryland, both of whom voted for the bill, immediately took to the House floor and blamed the other's party for the defeat.

Cantor said it was a "disappointing day" and that Democrats had been a "disappointing player."

Hoyer suggested that Republicans voted for the food stamp work requirements to tank the bill.

"What happened today is you turned a bipartisan bill, necessary for our farmers, necessary for our consumers, necessary for the people of America, that many of us would have supported, and you turned it into a partisan bill," he said.

The Senate overwhelmingly passed its version of the farm bill last week, with about $2.4 billion a year in overall cuts and a $400 million annual decrease in food stamps — one-fifth of the House bill's food stamp cuts. The White House was supportive of the Senate version but had issued a veto threat of the House bill.

If the two chambers cannot come together on a bill, farm-state lawmakers could push for an extension of the 2008 farm bill that expires in September or negotiate a new bill with the Senate and try again.

Some conservatives have suggested separating the farm programs and the food stamps into separate bills. Farm-state lawmakers have for decades added food stamps to farm bills to garner urban votes for the rural bill. But that marriage has made passage harder this year.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Frank Lucas, R-Okla., said Thursday that the committee is assessing all its options and will continue its work in the "near future."

Just before the vote, Lucas pleaded with his colleagues' support, saying that if the measure didn't pass people would use it as an example of a dysfunctional Congress.

"If it fails today I can't guarantee you'll see in this Congress another attempt," he said.

Minnesota Rep. Collin Peterson, the senior Democrat on the House Agriculture Committee, said he believes the work requirements and a vote that scuttled a proposed dairy overhaul turned too many lawmakers against the measure.

"I had a bunch of people come up to me and say I was with you but this is it, I'm done," Peterson said after the vote.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, voted for the bill but lobbied for the dairy amendment that caused some dairy-state lawmakers to eventually turn on the legislation. Cantor vocally supported the amendment that imposed the work requirements, coming to the House floor just before that vote and the final vote to endorse it.

Though passage has been in the balance all week, the vote against the bill was larger than many expected. When the final vote count was read, House Democrats cheered loudly, led by members of the Congressional Black Caucus who had fought the food stamp cuts.

The defeat is also a major victory for conservative taxpayer groups and environmental groups who have unsuccessfully worked against the bill for years. Those groups have aggressively lobbied lawmakers in recent weeks, hoping to capitalize on the more than 200 new members of the House since the last farm bill passed five years ago. Many of those new members are conservative Republicans who replaced moderate rural Democrats who had championed farm policy.

Those groups were emboldened after the vote.

"We need to put farm subsidies on a path to elimination and we need to devolve food stamps to the state level where they belong," said Chris Chocola, president of the conservative advocacy group Club for Growth.

Rep. Mike Conaway's reaction

"Democrats torpedoed this important legislation for one reason: because they couldn't accept a 2 percent cut in food stamps. These Democrats were willing to sacrifice production agriculture and the men and women who feed and clothe our country to prevent modest yet meaningful reforms to this entitlement program. I am disappointed that a discussion on the country's nutrition and agriculture programs devolved into a spectacle of fearmongering and hyperbole. Our nation's farmers and ranchers deserve better.

"Today's vote represents a missed opportunity for real change in Washington. This bill would have cut nearly $40 billion in spending in 10 years, ensured the sustainability of American agriculture, and made the most extensive reforms to food policy since 1996.

"I am pleased, however, that the House did advance two amendments I cosponsored that would have benefitted Texans, including the lesser prairie chicken and ensuring Mexico complies with a 1944 water treaty. I will continue to push these issues in the House."

The numbers game muddies NSA surveillance debate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seeking to win back public trust, the Obama administration has been throwing around a lot of numbers as it tries to describe — in as much detail as possible without jeopardizing national security— the terror plots it says were thwarted by the government's sweeping surveillance of U.S. communications.

There's 50, 12, 10 and four. You also hear 20 and 90 in statements and official testimony, and even 702 and 215, though those aren't for estimates of plots.

The numbers game is just part of the effort to convince skeptical Americans that the recently disclosed National Security Agency spy programs are vital in detecting and stopping extremist plots. But the approach has produced relatively limited, often vague information, and it has ended up confusing many in Congress as lawmakers grapple with how to assure people that their privacy rights are protected along with their security.

There are questions about effectiveness that still lack answers, "and we've gotten some answers that need further clarity," House Intelligence Committee member Rep. Adam Schiff, D-Calif., said Thursday. He was referring to the so-called 215 program, which refers to the section of the anti-terror Patriot Act that authorizes the NSA to collect Americans' phone records.

And, he added, "we also should ask in those cases where it was successful, how dated were the records."

Another NSA program — known as 702 — authorizes the agency to sweep up Internet usage data from all over the world that goes through nine major U.S.-based providers.

Officials have used the rest of the numbers in Capitol Hill testimony over the past week as they have sought to allay Americans' concerns that the programs violate their privacy.

Top officials told Congress that the programs have been key in thwarting at least 50 terror plots across 20 countries. And, they said, an estimated 10 to 12 of those plots were directed at the U.S. They publicly offered four examples among the 50-plus cases:

■ An NSA-provided phone record led authorities to identify a terrorist financier in San Diego who was arrested in 2007.

■ The NSA's surveillance of Internet usage in 2009 revealed that a Chicago man, David Headley, was plotting to bomb a Danish newspaper that had published a cartoon of the prophet Muhammad, Deputy FBI Director Sean Joyce said. The FBI had been tipped off that Headley was involved in the deadly 2008 Mumbai terror attacks.

■ Information from the NSA's Internet usage surveillance of overseas operatives helped thwart a 2009 plot to blow up the New York City subway system. NSA Director General Keith Alexander said this information led investigators to Najibullah Zazi in Colorado. And the phone records collection gave investigators the connections between Zazi and his associates. Zazi ultimately pleaded guilty and provided information that helped send two of his friends to prison.

■ A plot to blow up the New York Stock Exchange was thwarted in its early planning stages because the NSA was able identify an extremist in Yemen who was in touch with Khalid Ouazzani in Kansas City, Mo., Joyce said. This enabled investigators to identify co-conspirators and prevent the attack he said. Ouazzani pleaded guilty in May 2010 in federal court in Missouri to charges of conspiracy to provide material support to a terrorist organization, bank fraud and money laundering. Ouazzani was not charged with the alleged plot against the stock exchange.

The administration has yet to provide firm numbers of precisely how many plots have been stopped worldwide because of these programs — in part because intelligence officials are still trying to figure that out.

"The reason I'm not giving you a specific number is we want the rest of the community to actually beat those up and make sure that everything we have there is exactly right," Alexander said Tuesday during a House intelligence committee hearing. "I'd give you the number 50-X, but if somebody says, 'Well, not this one. Actually, what we're finding out is there's more. They said you missed these three or four.'"

Alexander said, "These programs are immensely valuable for protecting our nation and securing the security of our allies." And the NSA's authorization to sweep up Internet usage data has contributed to 90 percent of the information used to thwart at least 50 terror plots Alexander and his deputy told lawmakers.

On Wednesday, outgoing FBI Director Robert Mueller told the Senate Judiciary Committee that there are 10 to 12 cases in which the phone records surveillance program, authorized in the Patriot Act, contributed to breaking up terror plots.

He said that "of those, domestically, I think there will be anywhere from 10 or 12 where 215 was important in some way, shape or form."

Midland church hosts 24-hour poverty simulation

■ Event planned for June 28 will allow participants to experience some of the struggles of being homeless

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

Plunge2Poverty, a 24-hour homelessness simulation experience spearheaded by Church Under the Bridge Midland, will kick off June 28. The simulation is meant to stretch participants outside their comfort zones as a way to look at the needs of the poor with new eyes.

During the simulation, participants will face their own materialism and cultural values, and refocus on the biblical mandates regarding helping those in need in the community, nation and world, said Evan Rogers, who is coordinating the event as founder and president of Church Under the Bridge Midland.

"A lot of Americans live below the poverty line and experience extreme hunger and insecurity on a daily basis. For 24 hours, this will give those of us who aren't an idea of what it's like to be homeless or live in poverty on a daily basis," Rogers said, noting simulation participants are likely to become more compassionate and caring for those experiencing homelessness and poverty after experiencing it for themselves.

Rogers' desire to serve those in poverty is fueled by Matthew 25:40, which says "Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one

Plunge2Poverty FAQ

What do we bring? You will pack as if you were going on a simple retreat. A sleeping bag, pillow, extra clothing and so on, is encouraged. We discourage bringing jewelry, lots of money and electronics.

Is the simulation safe? You will never be alone. You will always be supervised and we have hired an off duty officer as our security at night.

What should I expect? To see things about yourself that you did not know and would not necessarily choose to know.

Will I be miserable? You will need to pack a good attitude and have a desire to know God in a deeper way. When you love someone, you know what breaks their heart.

What will I eat and where will I sleep? You will have some choice of necessities, such as food and shelter.

Offenders graduate from innovative seminary at Fort Stockton prison

By Rachael Gleason
rgleason@mrt.com

A first-of-its-kind prison seminary is making waves at Fort Stockton's Lynaugh Unit.

The seminary recently awarded Christian-faith degrees to offenders with sentences ranging from 18 months to 10 years. But unlike other programs, offenders also served as instructors.

"It's something that's not the norm. You don't put 30 offenders in a classroom with an offender teaching them," said Chaplain Gary Raines, who has served as a spiritual leader for the medium-security prison's 1,400 offenders for three years.

The seminary's 18 students and 8 instructors received accredited degrees through Shalom Ministry, Bible College & Seminary in Iowa, Raines said.

After four-hour afternoon classes, five days a week for 18 to 20 months, the students earned associate's degrees in New Testament studies; one student received a bachelor's degree and another, a doctorate. Of the eight instructors, two earned doctorates while the rest received bachelor's degrees, he said.

"It was amazing. The class had high school dropouts — folks with no GEDs, no high school diplomas. When they finished the class, they were all reading and writing the Greek language," Raines said.

And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

1 John 4:16

Do you know God's love?
And if you do know
God's love, do you believe in the love
God has for you? If you do, you have something better than all the money in the world. You have the peace of mind that comes with knowing
God is in control of your life and
He has you in the palm of His hand.
What better place is there to be?

Christian legal group complains about assignment

COLUMBIA — Columbia State Community College officials say they're investigating a professor's assignment about gay rights.

According to The Daily Herald a Christian legal group sent the college a letter about Professor Linda Brunton's psychology class assignment. The Alliance Defending Freedom said students complained to the group.

Some students objected to being told to wear a rainbow ribbon and make statements in support of gay rights. They were then to write a paper detailing discrimination they faced for their perceived support.

Travis Christopher Barham, legal counsel for the Christian group, stated in the letter to the college that Brunton's assignment violated principals of the First Amendment.

"This assignment posed serious problems for students who did not wish to convey this message and particularly those — like those who contacted us — whose religious convictions prohibit them from supporting conduct their faith teaches is unnatural and immoral," Barham wrote.

On its website, the alliance describes itself as an American conservative Christian nonprofit organization dedicated to "defending the right to hear and speak the Truth."

The group asked the college to investigate the assignment, discipline Brunton and order her to apologize to students.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

State court: Tax credit can't be used at religious schools

CONCORD — A judge has declared New Hampshire's new scholarship program unconstitutional but allowed it to continue as long as none of the money goes to religious schools.

Under the program created last summer, businesses get tax credits for donating to a private organization that awards scholarships to students attending either private or public schools. The program's supporters argue it would provide educational choice to low-income parents, while opponents have cast it as a back-door voucher system that diverts taxpayer money to religious schools.

The program was enacted by Republican lawmakers who overrode a veto by then-Gov. John Lynch, a Democrat. It survived a repeal attempt earlier this year, but was significantly altered by Monday's court ruling.

In his ruling, Strafford County Superior Court Judge John Lewis sided with the New Hampshire Civil Liberties Union and Americans United for Separation of Church and State, which challenged the program on behalf of a group of taxpayers.

JERUSALEM

Streisand criticizes treatment of women by ultra-Orthodox Jews

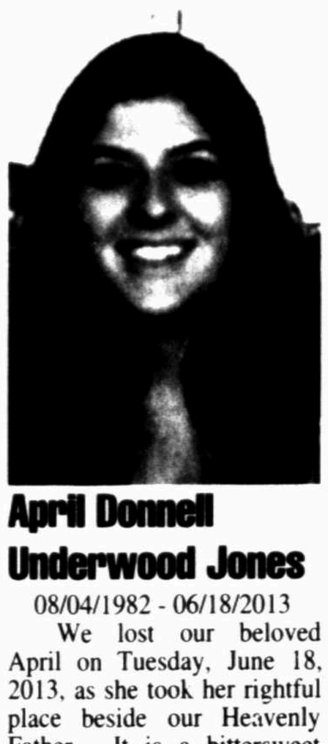
Entertainer Barbra Streisand waded into one of Israel's touchiest issues Monday on the first major stop of her tour of the country — Jewish religious practices that separate men and women.

Speaking at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem on Monday, where she received an honorary doctorate, she took aim at cases of ultra-Orthodox Jews targeting women, even as she warmly praised the country.

"I realize it's not easy to fully grasp the dynamics of what happens in a foreign land," she said.

But "it's distressing to read about women in Israel being forced to sit in the back of the bus or when we hear about 'Women of the Wall' having metal chairs thrown at them when they attempt to peacefully and legally pray."

Obituaries



April Donnell Underwood Jones

08/04/1982 - 06/18/2013

We lost our beloved April on Tuesday, June 18, 2013, as she took her rightful place beside our Heavenly Father. It is a bittersweet passing as we gained one precious life, while losing another.

April was preceded in death by her grandfather Miguel (Mike) Guadarrama and her Uncle Vernon Lee Underwood. April was survived by her loving husband, John Paul Jones, son, Patton Laurence, daughter, Isabella Laurence and the new arrival, Kaylee Jolene Marie Jones. She was also survived by her dad and mom, Glenn and Marina Underwood of Wink, brother, Glenn Ray Underwood of Wink, brother, Rudy and wife Eva Underwood of Midland, sister, Mickey Underwood of Wink and nephew William Underwood and niece Elizabeth Underwood of Wink, grandmother Mickey Guadarrama of Rockwell, Tx and numerous Aunt's, Uncle's and Cousins scattered throughout the State of Texas.

April was an extraordinary woman, she was an exemplary wife with an undying love for her husband, she was a mother that would sacrifice it all for her children, she was a sister that loved her siblings more than words can do justice, she was a daughter that respected and adored her parents and she was a dear friend to anyone and everyone she met. So many things can be said of April but "Amazing" is the word that describes her best.

April will forever be remembered for her beauty, inside and out, and for her infectious smile. She was known for lighting up any room she entered and for having the ability to de-fuse any situation. April was the ultimate peacemaker; she was "The Light" in the darkness. April has, without a doubt, received her jeweled crown and is dancing among the angels in Heaven, waiting for the rest of us to arrive.

We would like to express our gratitude for the many people that have called, sent cards, e-mailed, brought food or simply dropped by to give us a hug. The outpouring of love in the communities of Wink and Kermit is simply breathtaking and will never be forgotten.

Public viewing hours will be noon to 5 pm. June 21, 2013 at Family Service Funeral Parlor in Kermit Texas.

Funeral services will be held at the Wink High School Auditorium, Saturday June 22, 2013 at 1:00 pm officiated by Pastor Joe Mohler. Graveside services will follow at Kermit Cemetery. Pallbearers will include: William Wilkinson, James "Bubba" Acker, Chris Crawford, Sam Haring, Rudy Underwood and Glenn Underwood Jr.; Honorary Pallbearers will include: James Lee Underwood, William Tom Underwood, Blake Jones, Clay Fernandes, Zane Croker and H. D. Laurence. Arrangements are entrusted to Family Services Funeral Parlor and online condolences may be sent at fsfp.com.

We ask that, in lieu of flowers, a donation is made to the "Benefit for John Paul and April Jones" account at the Winkler County Credit Union in Kermit, Texas.

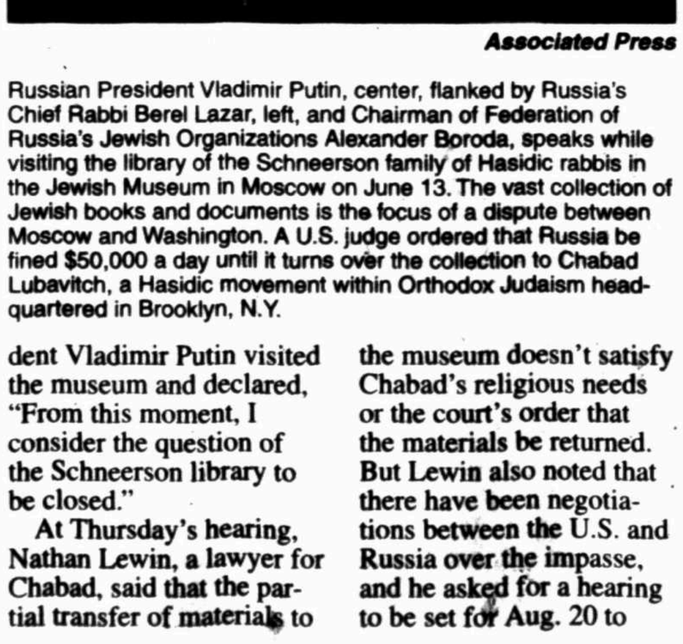
US judge says Russia acting like 'scofflaw'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge Thursday accused Russia of acting like a "scofflaw" and an "outlaw" by refusing his order to hand over a Jewish group's historical books and documents.

Royce Lamberth, chief judge of the U.S. District Court in Washington, made the comments at a court hearing in a longstanding lawsuit against Russia. In January, Lamberth slapped Russia with a $50,000-a-day civil contempt sanction for refusing his earlier order to give the documents, known as the Schneerson library, to Chabad Lubavitch, a Hasidic movement within Orthodox Judaism headquartered in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Russia has refused to recognize the authority of the U.S. court and claims the documents are state property. The country has transferred some of the documents to the new Jewish Museum in Moscow. Last week, Russian President Vladimir Putin visited the museum and declared, "From this moment, I consider the question of the Schneerson library to be closed."



Associated Press

Russian President Vladimir Putin, center, flanked by Russia's Chief Rabbi Berel Lazar, left, and Chairman of Federation of Russia's Jewish Organizations Alexander Boroda, speaks while visiting the library of the Schneerson family of Hasidic rabbis in the Jewish Museum in Moscow on June 13. The vast collection of Jewish books and documents is the focus of a dispute between Moscow and Washington. A U.S. judge ordered that Russia be fined $50,000 a day until it turns over the collection to Chabad Lubavitch, a Hasidic movement within Orthodox Judaism headquartered in Brooklyn, N.Y.

At Thursday's hearing, Nathan Lewin, a lawyer for Chabad, said that the partial transfer of materials to the museum doesn't satisfy Chabad's religious needs or the court's order that the materials be returned. But Lewin also noted that there have been negotiations between the U.S. and Russia over the impasse, and he asked for a hearing to be set for Aug. 20 to give those talks a chance to bear fruit. Several rabbis from Chabad were in the courtroom from New York, California and Israel.

Lamberth, who granted the request, said that Russia "is not willing to obey the laws of the United States, or any other country."

The Russian embassy declined to comment Thursday. Putin had earlier criticized Lamberth's ruling imposing the sanctions, saying "discussion of this problem has taken on elements of confrontation," Russian news agencies reported. The Russian Foreign Ministry called the ruling "an absolutely unlawful and provocative decision" and threatened a tough response if U.S authorities try to seize Russian property in an attempt to pay for the sanctions. The Obama administration had urged Lamberth not to issue the sanctions, arguing they wouldn't help resolve the dispute and would hurt U.S. foreign-policy interests.

Russia had earlier halted all art exhibit loans to the U.S., fearing they would be seized and held hostage in the court battle. That's despite Chabad's assurance in court filings that it will not go after any art deemed culturally significant by the State Department, which is the case for major exhibitions. Such art is already protected from legal claims under the Immunity from Seizure Act.

There are two collections at issue: 12,000 religious books and manuscripts seized during the Bolshevik revolution and the Russian Civil War nearly a century ago; and 25,000 pages of handwritten teachings and other writings of religious leaders stolen by Nazi Germany during World War II and then transferred by the Soviet Red Army as war booty to the Russian State Military Archive. The books and manuscripts, some hundreds of years old, record Chabad's core teachings and traditions.

Hunger

of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me."

"I took that passage literally and interpreted it as helping those in extreme poverty, those with addictions, setbacks and living on the street," Rogers said. "... Giving them food will satisfy them for a minute, but ultimately they're searching for something else to satisfy them for a longer term. These people need Jesus and they're not going to come to our corporate church because they don't feel welcome, so we brought the church to them to make them comfortable."

He established Church Under the Bridge Midland on May 4 as a way to serve and worship with members of the homeless community. The group meets for breakfast at 9:30 a.m. Saturdays in the parking lot of Amistad Christian Fellowship, 401 S. Main St. A worship service begins at 10 a.m.

Feeling called to help homeless people, but knowing he couldn't do so until he knew how they lived, Rogers participated in a 48-hour simulation at Mission Waco this spring where he experienced headaches, stomach pains and a bad mood as a result of his hunger.

"Living in America, and living in Midland where the wealth is so great, nobody should ever have to experience that. Now I can relate more to them and understand their needs," Rogers said.

Though he couldn't go into too much detail about the simulation because organizers want program participants to be caught off guard, Rogers said they will be prompted to complete many tasks that homeless and food-insecure individuals go through on a daily basis.

"No one's ever put in harm's way and they're never alone. We've hired an off-duty police officer to stay with us overnight and there's no risk to it," Rogers said.

The simulation will kick off at 8 p.m. June 28 and end 24 hours later at 8 p.m. June 29. Though participants will be sent into different parts of Midland for specific activities during the simulation, they will base out of Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

"After 24 hours the people who sign up for this will go home to their bed and pantry full of food, but they'll never forget the experience of doing this exercise," Rogers said.

The simulation is open to the whole community, but getting word out has been a bit more difficult than expected, Rogers said. He hopes local youth pastors will try out the simulation so they can later bring their youth groups through the experience.

It's Rogers' hope this becomes an annual event and helps change people's perspectives about those living in poverty.

"When I was in Waco I was so hungry and noticed an orange laying in a church parking lot. Normally I would never consider eating something off the ground, but in this case I was so hungry. ... It was the best orange I've ever had in my entire life because I was so hungry and thirsty at that moment."

"Now, when I see somebody at the corner, whether they're panhandling or I know they're in a bad situation, if they felt at all how I felt when I was looking for food, nobody should ever have to go through that, especially living here with too many people with money to help people," Rogers said.

For more information, visit www.churchunderthebridgemidland.org and download the participation release form. Those interested in participating should email info@churchunderthebridgemidland.org to reserve a spot. Payment can be accepted at the beginning of the event June 28.

Prison

a turnaround at Louisiana State Penitentiary, also known as Angola.

"It was the bloodiest prison in the world. Today you can walk across Angola and not hear a curse word anywhere in the complex," he said.

One of the first prison seminaries in the state — the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at the Darrington Unit in Rosharon — also made an impression. But instead of hiring professors, like at Darrington, Raines selected offenders who had all the qualifications of a Christian lifestyle to teach the curriculum.

"They're coming from a different perspective," Raines said. "And they're not coming from doctrinal perspective. This class is not being taught from Southern Baptist, Pentecostal, Methodist or any other point of view. It's taught book by book, word by word."

The Kairos Prison Ministry funded the seminary. Raines said support from the nondenominational organization's local branch, which has sponsored ministry programs at regional prisons for about 15 years, is invaluable.

"They live in the darkness and need some light," said volunteer Clayton Alexander. "We go in because we feel God is directing us to."

Kairos, Greek for the word "time," is meaningful in prison, said Alexander, whose goal is to build up the church in prison.

"Many of these guys have never experienced God's love," Alexander said. "They think, 'I'm here, nobody in society wants me.' We show them that there is a lot of good out there. They have worth in God's eyes."

Offenders and prison officials celebrated June 15, but the road to graduation wasn't easy. Students and instructors originally received pushback from other offenders, who didn't believe the efforts would pay off, Raines said.

"The other offenders kept saying it wasn't true," he said. "It happened. It came true, and when it came true, it shocked a lot of people."

Interest in future classes has since doubled. For the first class, 35 offenders submitted applications for 30 spots, and 37 offenders applied for a class currently offered in Spanish, Raines said. For a class that starts July 9, with an expected March 2015 graduation, 61 offenders applied.

"Most people thought we would fail. They did not believe we would be successful with that first class because it's never been done, we used offenders as teachers and we were demanding a difficult curriculum," he said. "They succeeded. Not only did they succeed but with an overall of GPA of 93.8. Every man in the class with the exception of two graduated cum laude or better."

Raines said offenders will be able to use the degrees to pursue ministerial or pastoral careers when they're released.

"These offenders have those credentials. They (can) walk into the world and know they are qualified to render services that are needed," he said.

For 59-year-old offender Thomas Opfel, the best part of the program was the fellowship.

"We became close as a class. I truly call them my Christian brothers," Opfel said. "Body of Christ — it was amazing."

Raines said the offenders came from all walks of life, and some were arrogant when they started the class.

"They thought of themselves as important people in the free world, and (in prison) they were still trying to carry that importance," Raines said. "To see them by the end of the class as such humble men who were walking the walk of Christ — that was true beauty."

Christian group apologizes to gay community

By David Crary
Associated Press

The president of a leading Christian ministry dedicated to helping gays repress their sexual urges through prayer has apologized to the gay community and says the group is shutting down.

Alan Chambers, in a statement posted Thursday on Exodus International's website, said the group wants to apologize to the gay community "for years of undue suffering and judgment at the hands of the organization and the church as a whole."

Chambers also made an apology in a speech to his ministry's annual conference, saying, "We've hurt people."

"While there has been so much good at Exodus, there has also been bad," he said. "We've fought the culture war, and we've lost. It's time for peace."

Exodus International, which is based in Orlando, Fla., was founded 37 years ago and claimed 260 member ministries around the U.S. and internationally. For decades, it offered to help conflicted Christians rid themselves of unwanted homosexual inclinations through counseling and prayer, infuriating gay rights activists in the process.

Exodus had seen its influence wane in recent years as mainstream associations representing psychiatrists and psychologists rejected its approach. However, the idea that gays could be "converted" to heterosexuality through prayer persists among some evangelicals and fundamentalists.

The announcement that Exodus would close was not a total surprise. Last year, Chambers — who is married to a woman but has spoken openly about his own sexual attraction to men — said he was trying to distance his ministry from the idea that gays' sexual orientation can be permanently changed or "cured."

In his statement Thursday, Chambers said the board of Exodus had decided to close it and form a new ministry, which he referred to as reducefear.org.

"Our goals are to reduce fear and come alongside churches to become safe, welcoming, and mutually transforming communities," he said.

Gay rights activists welcomed Chambers' apology, while reiterating their belief that Exodus had caused great damage.

"This is a welcome first step in honestly addressing the harm the organization and its leaders have caused," said Sharon Groves, director of the Human Rights Campaign's religion and faith program. "Now we need them to take the next step of leadership and persuade all other religious-based institutions that they got it wrong."

Truth Wins Out, another gay rights group that had been harshly critical of Exodus, praised Chambers for "integrity and authenticity."

"It takes a real man to publicly confront the people whose lives were destroyed by his organization's work, and to take real, concrete action to begin to repair that damage," said the group's associate director, Evan Hurst.

However, Hurst noted that some of Exodus' former followers — disenchanted by Chambers' evolution — had formed a new group called the Restored Hope Network, which calls itself an "ex-gay ministry" and continues to promote the idea that gays can be converted to heterosexuality.

Faith leaders asked to help members get legal help

By Travis Lollier
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — When Grace Liverman needed to write a will, the 66-year-old who suffers from lupus and other health problems didn't know where to turn. So she called her pastor at Hamilton United Methodist Church in Nashville.

Liverman didn't know it, but the church had recently begun participating in a pilot program that provides attorneys to needy members at no cost. Soon after that call, an attorney came to her home and helped her draft a will.

"I was totally depressed and stressed out, not knowing what was going to happen," Liverman said. "It was like a miracle, almost, that someone would do this for me."

Tennessee's faith-based initiative is unusual compared to most legal aid programs across the country because it recognizes that many people who could use an attorney's help would never go to a legal aid clinic even if it were held at their house of worship. That's because they don't recognize their problem as a legal one.

"People show up every day at churches and synagogues and mosques, and they may not ask for legal help. They may need food assistance. But often there is an underlying legal problem," said Tennessee Supreme Court Justice Connie Clark, who helped the faith-based initiative get off the ground. "We realized we can help more people by going to where they are already going for help."

The Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services estimates there are approximately 1 million low-income Tennesseans in need of civil legal help. Although there are no good national numbers, the Legal Services Corp., which funds legal aid clinics around the country, estimates that few low-income people get the legal assistance they need.

In criminal cases, defendants are entitled to an attorney and the state appoints someone if they cannot afford it. But there is no such provision in civil cases. That means people in need of legal help to fight eviction, settle issues with creditors, file for divorce or even fight for custody of their children must pay for an attorney on their own or make do without.

"The whole system is built on the assumption that everybody has lawyers, and almost nobody does," Richard Zorza said. "But over the last 15 years or so, there's been an explosion of ideas for different ways to solve the problem."

Zorza is an advocate for the Access to Justice movement that is generating those ideas. Access to Justice commissions exist in 27 states and are being considered in a half-dozen more, according to a report from the National Center for State Courts. Each state operates a bit differently, but the idea is the same: helping people who cannot afford a lawyer get the legal assistance they need.

In Tennessee, that has included changing the rules to make it easier for retired attorneys to provide free services, developing a toll-free legal hotline and posting online videos about navigating the justice system.

The faith-based initiative began in February with a pilot project in Methodist churches in the Middle Tennessee region, but Clark said it's already expanding to other Christian denominations, other faiths and other parts of the state.

Besides finding people who need help through their pastors, rabbis and imams, the faith-based initiative also works through houses of worship to recruit the attorneys who donate their services.

"It's a great opportunity for people of faith to carry out their principles by helping people who are weaker and who are in need," Clark said.

The Tennessee courts' pro bono coordinator, Palmer Williams, recently presented the faith-based initiative to a group of state Supreme Court justices and Access to Justice commissioners from around the country at an event connected with the American Bar Association's Equal Justice Conference.

"Everyone was really excited. They'd never heard of anything like it before," she said. "... There was definitely interest in knowing how we got started and how we recruited attorneys and churches."

Zorza called the initiative "a wonderful example of the use of creativity to challenge what a few years ago seemed an insoluble and overwhelming problem where the only idea was to raise more money.

"Now a whole range of creative ideas are being put in place, and making a real difference," he said. "If this is successful, it will surely be picked up in other states."

Pitt and his zombies entertain in 'World War Z'

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press

Might there be a real-life zombie apocalypse one day? Not likely, but then again, the way zombies have chomped their way into our pop culture the last several years, it's maybe a bit less implausible than it once was.

What IS increasingly quite plausible, alas, is a scary global pandemic, and "World War Z," the long-awaited Brad Pitt thriller, cleverly melds that real-life threat into the more fanciful zombie premise. Talk about more bang for your buck: Once you've settled back into your seat after a good snarling zombie chase, there's nothing like the thought of a SARS outbreak to get the blood racing again.

But let's just say right here that the one apocalypse you won't see in "World War Z," based on the 2006 novel by Max Brooks (son of Mel), is an artistic one. There was lots of talk about this mega-budget 3D movie, co-produced by Pitt and directed by Marc Forster, falling on its $200-million plus feet, what with a postponed release, a re-shot ending, endless script drafts and major crew changes along the way.

But in the end, it's pretty much what you'd want in a summer blockbuster: scary but not-too-gross zombies, a fast-paced journey to exotic locales, a few quite thrilling action scenes, and did we mention Brad Pitt?

Oh right, we did. Surely this isn't a performance to rival Pitt's work in "Moneyball" or "The Tree of Life," but given the lack of time for nuanced character development, it hardly seems meant to be. What Pitt offers the film is pretty much what his character, a level-headed former U.N. investigator, offers the endangered planet: Nothing too flashy, just a comfortable, intelligent presence that keeps things grounded and just might win the day.

That last part, of course, remains to be seen: The filmmakers hope "World War Z" is just the first in a franchise. And so, the story may have a long way to go.

But the beginning — especially the first half of this movie — is promising. As fans of the book know, it was written as an oral history, a collection of individual accounts. The filmmakers wisely ditched that format for the sake of immediacy.

We begin in Philadelphia, on a sunny morning in the kitchen of Gerry Lane (Pitt), his wife Karin (Mireille Enos, expressive well beyond her few lines), and their two daughters. We learn quickly that Gerry has abandoned his former harrowing work — investigating crimes in places like Rwanda, Bosnia and Liberia — in favor of a nice home life.

As the family drives off for the day, though, life changes in an instant. The streets of Philadelphia are suddenly and terrifyingly overrun by packs of wild, raging zombies. Once bit, it takes only seconds for a human to turn into one.

Talk about a leadership vacuum: The president is already dead. Thanks to his former U.N. boss, Gerry's family is whisked to an aircraft carrier, but there's a wee price for this protection: Gerry must head out to find the source of the outbreak.

For an hour, the action is swift: Clues gathered at a prison complex in North Korea lead Gerry to Israel, the only country to have smartly employed the use of walls, artificial and ancient. But then those persistent zombies stretch themselves into a teeming, terrifying tower of un-humanity. Gerry escapes just in time — for a seriously harrowing plane-crash sequence.

The final act takes place on a dramatically smaller scale, and at a slower pace. Not to give away too much, but this is where Gerry's scientific instincts — and that Brad Pitt calm — will come into play.

It's worth noting that there are, amid the mayhem, occasional touches of humor. And one of them serves as a prudent reminder — to turn off those cellphones. After all, it's not just your movie-going partner you'll annoy here.

Cellphones also happen to awaken zombies. Consider yourself warned.

"World War Z," a Paramount Pictures release, is rated PG-13 for intense frightening zombie sequences, violence and disturbing images. Running time: 116 minutes. Three stars out of four.

"Monsters University"

"Monsters University" — Pixar's prequel to 2001's "Monster's University" is neither a bold return to form nor another misfire following "Brave" and "Cars 2," but a charming, colorful coming-of-age tale that would be a less qualified success for all but Pixar. The profusion of sequels is indeed dismaying for a studio that so frequently has prized originality. But this is nevertheless pleasant, amiably animated family entertainment. Our expert "scarers" to be — the wise-cracking pipsqueak Mike Wazowski (the perfectly paired Billy Crystal) and the burly James B. Sullivan (John Goodman) — are college freshmen with high aspirations in Monster University's prestigious Scare Program. Wazowski is a lime green ball of wide-eyed idealism, a bookworm oblivious to his total lack of fright-inducing menace. Sully is a naturally talented legacy, a lazy jock and son of a famous scarer. Director Dan Scanlon, a veteran Pixar storyboard artist, populates the collegiate life with rich detail and sly but not forced references. The film ultimately makes a surprisingly sharp lesson on the hard truths of limited talent: Giftedness remains a continuing Pixar theme. Rated G. 103 minutes. Three stars out of four.

Greenwood grad Bawcom enjoying time in Triple A

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Logan Bawcom seems to be enjoying life pitching for Triple-A Tacoma.

The Greenwood High grad and Midland College product is living in the Northwest, gets to travel by plane to some scenic cities around the Pacific Coast League — all while waiting for his shot with the big league Seattle Mariners.

"Everything's been pretty good so far," said Bawcom after pitching a perfect ninth inning in the Rainiers' 16-4 victory at Colorado Springs on Wednesday. "The team's winning, I've been pitching well and everything is on the up and up."

Bawcom, the 6-foot-2, 220-pound right-hander, has come a long way since being drafted in the 17th round in 2010 out of the University of Texas at Arlington. Not only has the 24-year-old reached Triple-A but he's gone from one organization to another.

Bawcom

After spending two years with the Los Angeles Dodgers organization, the team that drafted him, Bawcom was dealt last July to the Mariners in a trade that involved reliever Brandon League going to L.A. Bawcom just took it as part of the business and a shot to make an impact with another organization.

He finished out 2012 with Double-A Jackson and went 2-0 with six saves and a 1.88 ERA.

This year, he got invited to big league camp but was reassigned to Tacoma in late March where he's currently 0-1 with 11 saves and a 3.41 ERA in 34 1/3 innings of work. He also has 32 strikeouts against 16 walks for the Pacific Northern-leading Rainiers.

"It's a learning process," he said. "Obviously, there are better hitters than where I was at last year, and they make you pay for your mistakes. I'm learning that each outing and every time I go on the mound, I've learned that one pitch can change an entire outing and that every pitch matters. The talent part of the game

Title eludes Spurs

San Antonio's Tony Parker looks during Game 7 of the NBA Finals as the Miami Heat go on to win the NBA Championship on Thursday in Miami. The Spurs lost, 95-88.

San Antonio falls short in Game 7 against Miami

Miami wins series, 4-3

MIAMI — LeBron James and the Miami Heat remain atop the NBA, and not even a proud push from the San Antonio Spurs could knock them down.

James led the Heat to their second straight title, scoring 37 points and grabbing 12 rebounds in a 95-88 victory Thursday night in a tense Game 7 that lived up to its billing.

Winning the title they needed to validate the best season in franchise history — and perhaps the three-superstar system they used to build it — the Heat won the second straight thriller in the NBA's first championship series to go the distance since 2010.

"It took everything we had as a team," Dwyane Wade said. "Credit to the San Antonio Spurs, they're an unbelievable team, an unbelievable franchise. This is the hardest series we ever had to play. But we're a resilient team and we did whatever it took."

Two nights after his Game 6 save when the Heat were almost eliminated, James continued his unparalleled run through the basketball world, with two titles and an Olympic gold medal in the last 12 months.

"I work on my game a lot, throughout the offseason," said James, who was MVP for the second straight finals. "I put a lot of work into it and to be able to come out here and (have) the results happen out on the floor is the ultimate. The ultimate. I'm at a loss for words."

Miami forward LeBron James (6) reacts after he was fouled during the second half in Game 7 of the NBA Finals against the San Antonio Spurs on Thursday in Miami.

Tony Parker when he had to, and did everything else that could ever be expected from the best player in the game.

The Heat became the NBA's first repeat champions since the Lakers in 2009-10, and the first team to beat the Spurs in the NBA Finals.

Players and coaches hugged each other after the game, the respect between the franchises that was obvious when the series started becoming even more apparent after two straight classics.

Fans stood, clapped and danced across the final minutes, when every score was answered by another score, each stop followed by a better stop. The Heat pushed their lead to six points a few times midway through the fourth but the Spurs would never be deterred.

The Spurs, so close to a fifth title just two nights earlier, couldn't find a way to grab it in this one, perhaps the last shot Tim Duncan, Parker and Manu Ginobili will ever get together.

They were trying to become the first road team to win a Game 7 on the road since Washington beat Seattle in 1978, but those old guys ran out of gas just before the finish.

Duncan had 24 points and 12 rebounds for the Spurs, but missed a shot and follow attempt right under the basket with about 50 seconds left and the Spurs trailing by two.

James followed with a jumper — the shot the Spurs were daring him to take earlier in the series — to make it 92-88, sending San Antonio to a team a timeout as Glenn Frey's "The Heat is on" blared over the arena's sound system.

He then came up with a steal and made two free throws for a six-point lead, and after Ginobili missed, James stalked toward the sideline, knowing it was over and he was the last one standing again.

Wade had 23 points and 10 rebounds for the Heat, who overcame a scoreless Chris Bosh by getting six 3-pointers and 18 points from Shane Battier.

Midland's Darwin Perez swings against the San Antonio Missions on Thursday at Citibank Ballpark. Perez was one of two runners that scored in the 8th inning for the RockHounds thanks to Conner Crumbliss' double in Midland's 4-2 win.

Midland RockHounds manager Aaron Nieckula said leadoff hitter Conner Crumbliss is a table-setter for his team.

On Thursday night, the left fielder not only set the table from the leadoff spot but he delivered the big blow for the RockHounds.

Crumbliss connected for a two-run double in the eighth inning to back up another solid start by pitcher Arnold Leon and help the RockHounds to a 4-2 victory over the San Antonio Missions at Citibank Ballpark.

With the game tied at 2 in the eighth, with one out and David Freitas and Darwin Perez on base, Crumbliss connected on a 2-1 fastball by Jeremy McBryde (1-3) down the left field line to give the RockHounds the lead.

"It was a fastball on the outside part of the plate. I just tried to get the barrel on it, and luckily it stayed fair," said Crumbliss, who was 2 for 4 with two RBI, two doubles and a run scored. "It was awesome. We definitely try to go into the ninth with the lead. I'm just glad it stayed fair and we won."

Added Niekula about the double, "It was a good hit. Coming in and facing a good pitcher with a good fastball, and that was a handy

Softball joins volleyball, basketball at coaching clinic

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

The name has expanded over the last few years, but the basis for what former Odessa High volleyball coach Linda McMillan started seven years ago is still intact.

Beginning today, coaches from across West Texas and New Mexico will make their way to Odessa for the annual Basin's Best Volleyball/Basketball/Softball Clinic. For two days, those coaches will have a chance to learn from and chat with some of the state and country's top volleyball, basketball and for the first time this year, softball coaches, at Odessa College.

Originally, the clinic was for volleyball coaches, but it expanded with basketball last year and now softball this year, and the goal is to give coaches at all levels in this part of the state a chance to learn more about the profession and their sport without having to travel long distances.

"As a varsity head coach, the district would always help me to go to things that I wanted to go to," McMillan said. "But very few districts have the money to send my assistant coaches and junior high staff, and it would come out of their own pockets for travel costs. I was trying to have something that is affordable for junior high coaches, club coaches, select coaches ... anybody that swing right there. That was a good read by Perez at first base and that ended up scoring two. That was the hit of the game in terms of it being the game-winning hit. But you have to credit (the at-bats) by Freitas and Perez for getting on base."

Nieckula said he's not surprised to see Crumbliss come up with big hits after managing him in 2010 at Single-A Kane County.

"He was an on-base machine, had an on-base percentage of over .400 and led the league in walks that year," Nieckula recalled. "Nothing's changed. He has a solid approach, works the count and gets on base at least once or twice a game. He has an opportunity to score a lot of runs for us."

Crumbliss also scored the run that tied the game at 2 in the fifth inning.

After San Antonio had taken a 2-1 lead with a run in the top of the frame, Crumbliss led off the bottom of the inning with the first of his two doubles with his hit to right-center. He then scored when Vinnie Catricala punched a double to left field.

"We try to score as many runs as possible," Crumbliss said. "Some nights it's going to be four. Hopefully, more nights it will be nine or 10, but we'll take it."

The heroics by Crumbliss was helped made possible with the solid start by Leon, who went six innings, allowed two runs on nine hits, walked one and struck out four in the no decision.

"He does great every time," said Crumbliss about Leon. "He keeps us in the game. We kind of a gave up a run early with the triple and the error (in the third inning), but he hung in there and kept it close for us. Anytime you get a start like that you've got a chance to win."

Added Nieckula about his starter, "The last couple of starts he's been very good. We're starting to see the real Arnold and the guy he can be. He utilized his fastball and worked the zone."

Frank Gailey and Mike Demark, who picked up his third save of the season, closed out the win by going a combined three scoreless innings.

HOUND BITES: RockHounds DH Anthony Aliotti was a late scratch. This is the third straight game he's missed after fouling a ball off his right knee in Monday's game at Frisco. Midland manager Aaron Nieckula said Aliotti is day to day. ...RockHounds 2B Dusty Coleman made a great play in the fourth inning. Coleman dove to make a catch on a blooper hit by Rocky Gale in shallow right field. After making the catch, Coleman got up and doubled off Everett Williams, who led off with a double. ...The one walk issued by RockHounds starter Arnold Leon was the first for the right-hander in 32 2/3 innings. "That's what happens when you pound the zone and pitch to contact," Nieckula said.

TODAY'S PROBABLES: The RockHounds host the Missions in the second game of a four-game series at 7 p.m. Midland is expected to start RHP Sean Murphy (4-2, 4.99 ERA) against San Antonio RHP Don Roach (5-6, 4.40).

Withrow optioned back to Triple A

From staff reports

After three games with the Los Angeles Dodgers, former Midland Christian pitcher Chris Withrow was optioned down to Triple-A Albuquerque on Thursday.

Withrow, a former first-round pick, was called up to the majors for the first time in his professional career June 11 and made his major league debut the next night against the Arizona Diamondbacks.

In three games, Withrow had an ERA of 5.40 in 3 1/3 innings, allowing two runs on four hits with three strikeouts and two walks.

is more consistent at this level and each hitter, one through nine, can do some damage like take it over the fence or hit it into the gap if you leave a pitch up."

Bawcom has to be aware of how important pitches can be during a game as he either enters in the seventh or eighth inning or closes the game, which is what he prefers to do if he's fortunate to get to the big league level.

"Closing is something I've done the past two or three seasons, and I love it," Bawcom said. "I know it sounds funny but I enjoy the pressure. It's fun to have the team count on you to get some of those crucial outs of a ballgame. I try to take the same approach every time I go out there — try to put zeros on the board, take it pitch by pitch, out by out and batter by batter."

And with that approach, he hopes that call to join the big league team will come soon. But in the meantime, Bawcom said he's just relishing the opportunity to play pro ball.

"I try to never look at it like I'm pitching to get to the majors," Bawcom said. "If it does come I will be ready. I'm getting a chance to play pro ball. When I was in high school or at Midland College, I didn't even know what pro ball was. The fact that I'm here, I feel lucky and blessed each day and I'll enjoy it as long as it lasts. I definitely didn't vision myself being here."

Texas merges men's, women's track programs

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The University of Texas has promoted Mario Sategna (suh-TAYN'-yuh) to head coach of the Longhorns' newly combined men's and women's track and field programs.

The announcement came in a university statement Thursday. Sategna had been associate head coach of the men's team. He succeeds retiring men's coach Bubba Thornton and Bev Kearney, who resigned as women's coach in January after the revelation of an improper relationship with one of her athletes in 2002.

In a federal complaint filed in March, Kearney also described years of friction between herself and Thornton.

Sategna has been on the UT track coaching staff since 2003.

RANGERS 4
ATHLETICS 3

ARLINGTON — Ian Kinsler put Texas ahead for the first time with a two-run single in the seventh and the Rangers held on for a series-clinching victory over AL West-leading Oakland.

Texas pulled within a game of the Athletics by winning three times in the four-game series.

Kinsler came to the plate right after Leonys Martin's hustling infield single, getting to first base ahead of Sean Doolittle (3-2) when the pitcher was taking the toss from first baseman Brandon Moss. That loaded the bases with two outs, and Kinsler hit a full-count pitch through the middle of the infield.

The game ended when Josh Donaldson was thrown out at the plate trying to score from first on Seth Smith's single to center.

Tanner Scheppers (5-0), the fourth reliever after starter Josh Lindblom, worked 1 2-3 scoreless innings before Nathan struck out two in the ninth and got his 22nd save in 23 chances.

TIGERS 4
RED SOX 3

DETROIT — Jhonny Peralta hit a two-run homer off Andrew Bailey in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 4-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Thursday night.

Boston led 3-2 when Victor Martinez drew a leadoff walk off Bailey (3-1), and Peralta followed with a line drive over the fence in left field for his seventh homer of the year.

David Ortiz homered and drove in a tiebreaking run with an eighth-inning single to put Boston up, but Drew Smyly (3-0) replaced Phil Coke for Detroit and prevented any further scoring by the Red Sox. He struck out four in two innings of relief.

RAYS 8, YANKEES 3

NEW YORK — Evan Longoria homered twice and drove in three runs, and Matt Moore ended a personal three-game skid in Tampa Bay's victory over New York.

Longoria reached 500 career RBI with a sacrifice fly in the third inning. He homered against Andy Pettitte (5-5) leading off the sixth and connected off Joba Chamberlain to open the eighth.

Tony Gutierrez/AP

Texas' A.J. Pierzynski holds the ball up for umpire Jordan Baker after a collision with Oakland's Josh Donaldson, right, in the ninth inning Thursday in Arlington. Donaldson was out on the play to end the game.

Yunel Escobar hit a two-run shot off Boone Logan later in the eighth. Tampa Bay had 14 hits after totaling 15 in a 6-2 win over Boston on Wednesday night.

Moore (9-3) pitched into the seventh inning and gave up three runs.

TWINS 8
WHITE SOX 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Dozier's two-run homer was one of a career-high four long balls hit off Chicago starter John Danks, and Minnesota finished their first three-game sweep of the season and their first over White Sox in three years.

Oswaldo Arcia went deep in the second inning ahead of Dozier. Clete Thomas and Eduardo Escobar hit back-to-back shots in the fourth, sending the White Sox to their seventh defeat in the last eight games. They fell to a league-worst 13-27 on the road and 5-13 overall in June.

Danks (1-4) lasted only five innings, giving up 12 hits and six runs. Paul Konerko and Adam Dunn hit consecutive home runs against Scott Diamond (5-6) in the sixth inning, but that wasn't nearly enough.

National League

NATIONALS 5
ROCKIES 1

WASHINGTON — Jordan Zimmermann pitched eight innings to win his 10th game, Adam LaRoche had three hits including a two-run triple and the Nationals spoiled Roy Oswalt's return to the majors with a 5-1 win over the Colorado Rockies on Thursday night.

Ian Desmond homered for the second straight game, and Denard Span and Steve Lombardozzi added a double and a single apiece for Washington.

Zimmermann (10-3) allowed an unearned run on six hits. He retired 16 straight in one stretch, throwing 112 pitches — 85 for strikes — while fanning nine and walking one.

Oswalt (0-1) went five innings in his Colorado debut, allowing four runs on nine hits. He struck out 11 and didn't walk a batter.

METS 4
BRAVES 3

ATLANTA — David Wright hit two solo homers, New York's bullpen pitched five-plus scoreless innings to overcome an injury to starting pitcher Jonathon Niese in a victory over Atlanta.

Niese left the game in the fourth with left shoulder discomfort and the Mets trailing 3-2, but the Mets' bullpen shut down Atlanta for the next 5 2-3 innings.

Closer Bobby Parnell earned his 11th save in 14 chances by facing the minimum in the ninth.

LaTroy Hawkins (2-0) earned the victory after allowing two hits and striking out two in two innings.

The Mets have won four of six, thanks in part to a bullpen that's 1-0 with a 1.55 ERA over the last nine games.

Mike Minor (8-3) allowed nine hits, four runs and two walks in six-plus innings for Atlanta.

CARDINALS 6
CUBS 1

ST. LOUIS — Lance Lynn earned his 10th victory to tie for the NL lead and Matt Holliday homered and drove in two runs in St. Louis' victory over Chicago.

Lynn (10-1) allowed a run on three hits in six innings with six strikeouts and has reached double digits in wins before the All-Star break both of his years in the rotation, going 11-4 last year and making the All-Star team. He joined teammate Adam Wainwright and Washington's Jordan Zimmermann for the league lead.

Welington Castillo homered leading off the third for the Cubs.

Castillo's second homer of the season and first since April 8 briefly tied it at 1 after David Freese's run-scoring groundout off Scott Feldman (6-6) had given the Cardinals the lead.

PIRATES 5
REDS 3

CINCINNATI — Pedro Alvarez hit a solo homer, bases-loaded double and single to drive in all of Pittsburgh's runs in a victory over Cincinnati and a split of their NL Central showdown.

The Pirates remain a half-game behind second-place Cincinnati after the four-game set.

Alvarez had an RBI single and his 16th homer off Homer Bailey. After Alfredo Simon (5-3) loaded the bases in the seventh, Alvarez doubled off left-hander Tony Cingrani to snap a 2-all tie.

The five RBI were a season high for a Pirate and one shy of Alvarez's career high.

Interleague

ASTROS 7
BREWERS 4

HOUSTON — Carlos Pena hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning to send Houston past Milwaukee.

Carlos Corporan struck out but reached on a wild pitch with one out in the 10th and J.D. Martinez followed with a double. Pena then launched the first-pitch homer off Michael Gonzalez (0-3) to the second deck in right field.

Tar Heels oust NC State from CWS with victory

By Eric Olson
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — North Carolina's Hobbs Johnson combined with Chris McCue on a five-hitter, and the Tar Heels stayed alive in the College World Series with a 7-0 victory over North Carolina State on Thursday night.

Michael Russell drove in three runs for the No. 1-seeded Tar Heels (59-11), the first on a sacrifice fly that resulted in a close play at the plate to open the scoring in the fourth inning.

Johnson allowed five singles, walked two and struck out six before leaving with one out in the ninth.

NC State's Carlos Rodon started on three days rest after throwing 108 pitches in an 8-1 win over Carolina. He gave up two runs on four hits and threw 80 pitches in his five innings.

Carolina must beat UCLA twice — first on Friday and again Saturday — to reach the finals. North Carolina State finished 50-16.

Adam Hinojos won the 106 pound class in the boys 13-14 year old division, also beating a fighter from San Antonio.

Alexis Hinojos finished second in the 101 pound weight class of the girls 13-14 year old division.

Uncle: Patriots player had link to homicide victim

By Bridget Murphy and Erika Niedowski
Associated Press

BOSTON— New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez had a connection to a homicide victim found in an industrial park near the athlete's home, but family and officials were mum on the nature of their relationship, two days after police first visited the upscale division.

The body found about a mile from Hernandez's sprawling home in North Attleborough was that of 27-year-old Odin Lloyd, according to a prosecutor's office. His cause of death wasn't released.

Lloyd was a semi-pro football player for the Boston Bandits and had a connection to Hernandez, whose home was searched by police, his family said Wednesday.

Hernandez's attorney Michael Fee acknowledged media reports about the state police search of Hernandez's home as part of an investigation but said he and the player wouldn't have any comment on it.

"My son is a wonderful child," said, Lloyd's mother, Ursula Ward, as she cried outside the family home in Boston's Dorchester neighborhood. "He's a family guy. He hasn't done anything to hurt anyone."

Ward would not say how Lloyd knew Hernandez and did not say if police told her how her son died. An uncle said Lloyd had a connection to Hernandez but wouldn't elaborate.

Hernandez

North Attleborough sits on the Rhode Island state line not far from the Patriots' stadium in Foxborough. They referred questions about the investigation to the office of Bristol District Attorney Samuel Sutter.

Sutter's office said investigators were asking for the public's help to find a silver mirror cover believed to have broken off a car between Boston and North Attleborough.

Sports Illustrated, citing an unidentified source, reported Tuesday that Hernandez was not believed to be a suspect in what was being treated then as a possible homicide.

Two troopers knocked on the door of Hernandez's house Wednesday morning, but no one answered. The night before, police spent hours there as another group of officers searched the industrial park.

Later Wednesday, at least seven state troopers searched both sides of a road just off the street where Hernandez lives. The officers used thin poles to pull back plants and search through undergrowth along the road.

Hernandez returned home during the early afternoon Wednesday. He did not speak to a crowd of reporters staked out about 100 feet away.

The Patriots drafted Hernandez out of Florida in 2010. Since then, he has combined with Rob Gronkowski to form one of the top tight end duos in the NFL. He missed 10 games last season with an ankle injury and had shoulder surgery in April but is expected to be ready for training camp. Last summer, the Patriots gave him a five-year contract worth $40 million.

Patriots spokesman Stacey James said the team did not anticipate commenting publicly during the police investigation.

Sports Illustrated reported that the link between Hernandez and the case was a rented Chevrolet Suburban with Rhode Island plates that police had been searching for. The Associated Press could not independently confirm the report.

Lloyd's neighbor Larry Connors said a black Suburban with Rhode Island license plates was towed out of the yard of Lloyd's house after his body was found. Lloyd had been driving it for a few days, but Connors had never seen it before that.

Neighbor Paul Sandefur, a retired transit police officer, said he had known Lloyd since he was in diapers and was at a loss to explain what might have led to his death.

"He'd tease me about coming over to play basketball because I used to tell all the kids I could beat them," Sandefur said. "He was an exceptional kid. It's just inconceivable that something would happen to him."

Cowboys cut DE who was among bounty suspensions

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys have released defensive end Anthony Hargrove, a little more than a month after signing the nine-year NFL veteran to a one-year deal.

The Cowboys announced Hargrove's release Thursday.

Hargrove sat out the 2012 season after he was suspended as part of the New Orleans Saints' bounty scandal. Hargrove was given an eight-game ban after the NFL said the Saints paid cash rewards to defensive players for hits that injured opponents from 2009-11.

Hargrove's suspension was eventually reduced to two games, but he never signed with another team after Green Bay released him during the preseason last year.

The nine-year veteran was with Seattle the season before the bounty scandal broke. He was suspended the entire 2008 season for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Finals

From 1C

year in a row, but this one meant so much more after how close the Heat were to losing it.

They were down 10 in the fourth quarter of Game 6 before James led the charge back, finishing with a triple-double in Miami's 103-100 overtime victory. This one was nearly as tight, neither team leading by more than seven and the game tied 11 times.

Kawhi Leonard had 19 points and 16 rebounds for the Spurs, who had been 4 for 4 in the championship round. Ginobili had 18 points but Parker managed just 10 points on 3-of-12 shooting.

The Heat collected the Larry O'Brien again from Commissioner David Stern, presiding over his final NBA Finals before retiring next February.

He couldn't have asked for a better way to go out.

James avenged his first finals loss, when his Cleveland Cavaliers were swept by the Spurs on 2007. That helped send James on his way to South Florida, realizing it would take more help to win titles that could never come alone.

Miami's Dwyane Wade (3) takes the ball to the hoop as San Antonio's Kawhi Leonard (2) and Manu Ginobili (20) defend during the second half in Game 7 of the NBA Finals on Thursday in Miami.

He said he would appreciate this one more because of how tough it was. The Heat overpowered Oklahoma City in five games last year, a team of 20-something kids who weren't ready to be champions yet.

This came against a respected group of Spurs whose trio has combined for more than 100 playoff victories together.

Duncan is 37 and Ginobili will be a 36-year-old free agent next month, the core of a franchise whose best days may be behind them.

Meanwhile, it's a potential dynasty along Biscayne Bay, but also one with a potentially small window. Wade's latest knee problems are a reminder that though he came into the NBA at the same time as James and Bosh, he's a couple of years older at 31 with wheels that sometimes seem older.

James can become a free agent again next summer with another decision — though hopefully not another Decision — to make. He's comfortable in Miami and close with Wade, and the Heat have the leadership and commitment from owner Micky Arison and president Pat Riley to continue constructing a championship core around him.

Why would he want to leave here?

San Antonio's most recent title came at James' expense, a sweep of the Cleveland Cavaliers in 2007. The Spurs' exploited the weaknesses in James' game though knew someday they would be gone, Duncan telling him afterward that the league would someday belong to James.

And James simply isn't giving it back.

He came in averaging 33.8 points in Game 7s, already the best in NBA history, and was even better in this one.

Gay, Gatlin easily advance in 1st round of 100

By Pat Graham
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Tyson Gay was barely out of breath after breezing through his 100-meter heat. Moments later, Justin Gatlin was hardly even huffing after he finished.

Gay and Gatlin scarcely worked up a sweat as they easily cruised through the first round of the 100 on Thursday at the U.S. track championships. Their times were not blistering, but that wasn't the point on this windy day, only advancing in as little effort as possible.

By moving on, they're moving toward a showdown in Friday's final.

"It felt good," said Gay, who trimmed his hair to be more aerodynamic. "Just get the nerves out."

This was a game within a game between the two — show just enough, but not too much.

Gay powered down his lane to win his heat in 10.28 seconds. Gatlin easily cruised across the line in 10.37, taking second in his heat. He estimated he ran at maybe 70 percent, conserving his energy for when he really needs it, possibly to hold off Gay.

"Tyson is something of an enigma," Gatlin said. "When he's healthy, he's one of the most dangerous sprinters you can compete against."

And Gay's healthy, maybe as healthy as he's ever been. Asked about his hip, the one that's given him problems for quite some time, Gay simply said, "Feeling good."

Gay has the world's top time this season. But Gatlin has something perhaps even more impressive — a recent win over Usain Bolt, which very few sprinters have done since the Jamaican's rise to power.

While Gay and Gatlin were the center of attention early on at nationals, Dentarius Locke of Florida State stole some of the spotlight as he turned in the top time of 10.19, just ahead of Jeff Demps.

"I just went out there and ran my race," Locke nonchalantly said. "I know tomorrow will be a different day. Hopefully everything will fall into place."

Things certainly fell into place for Galen Rupp, who closed out the first night of competition by winning his fifth straight 10,000-meter national title.

"Just keep it rolling as long as I can. It's fun winning national championships," said Rupp, who won silver at the London Games.

Shalane Flanagan had no trouble in the women's 10,000, winning by more than 30 seconds.

In other finals on Thursday, Omar Craddock and Andrea Geubelle took home triple jump titles, while Brittany Borman won the javelin.

The women's 100 lacked some star power as world champion Carmelita Jeter was out with a sore right quadriceps and Allyson Felix skipped the race to save energy for the 200. Barbara Pierre won in 11.18.

For Jeter, there's a safety net, with an automatic spot at worlds reserved for her courtesy of her win in 2011. Given that, her coach, John Smith, said there's no reason to take any chances. He feels confident Jeter will be ready to defend her title in Moscow in August, provided she backs off the throttle now.

The 33-year-old Jeter captured three medals at the London Olympics, finishing third in the 200, second in the 100 and helping the 400-meter relay team to gold.

"When she goes out, she wants to win everything," Smith said. "When you are nursing yourself back to real good form, you have to be really mindful of where you are within your running."

Felix sat out simply to be ready for the 200, by far her stronger event.

A year ago at the Olympic trials, Felix was in the middle of some drama when she and training partner Jeneba Tarmoh finished tied for third in the 100, with only three women allowed to represent the country in London. Caught without any rule governing that sort of result, USA Track and Field scrambled to come up with a way to break the tie, with the athletes eventually settling on a head-to-head sprint.

coaches a sport to come to something they could afford."

McMillan said the clinic charges $35 for coaches in Odessa and Ector County ISD, along with junior high staffs in Midland, and it's $55 for other coaches.

McMillan has worked through the years to bring in some of the state's top coaches, and even she's been surprised with how easy it's been to get coaches to come to the Permian Basin to speak.

"The people that speak, I didn't know seven years ago," McMillan said. "I didn't know (Austin Westlake volleyball coach) Al Bennett, and I asked him and he said he would be here. He's come every year from Austin to speak."

This year's lineup will include Bennett again, and for the softball lineup, McMillan said that Dennis "Nemo" Tessicini, who is based in Oregon will speak.

McMillan said the hardest part has been finding hotel rooms for the speakers, but said she was able to work a deal with the MCM Elegante Hotel. Plus, she said other people such as Jason's Deli, Sports Imports, among others have helped to make the clinic a success.

Athletes pursue class action lawsuit against NCAA

By Paul Elias
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Former college basketball standout Ed O'Bannon and his lawyers sought on Thursday to dramatically expand his lawsuit challenging the NCAA's ban on compensating athletes in a move that could expose the organization and its member schools to billions of dollars in damages.

O'Bannon and his lawyers asked a federal court judge to turn their antitrust lawsuit into a class action, representing thousands of former and current college athletes. The lawsuit demands that the NCAA find a way to cut players in on the billions of dollars earned by college sports from live broadcasts, memorabilia sales, video games and in other areas.

U.S. District Court Judge Claudia Wilken didn't rule on either the merits of O'Bannon's case or his demands to turn the case into a class action. It could take weeks, even months, before Wilken rules.

Instead, she ordered O'Bannon's lawyers to revise the lawsuit to fix some legal technicalities, including explicating adding current players to the lawsuit. Lawyer Michael Hausfeld said he will file a new lawsuit that includes current players, but will seek to keep their names confidential.

"They are afraid of retaliation," Hausfeld told the court.

NCAA lawyer Greg Curtner is against certifying the lawsuit as a class action, arguing that the claims of thousands of collegiate athletes are too different to be treated the same. For instance, certain athletes bring in more revenue than others and have different legal claims at stake.

The NCAA argues that many of the athletes receive scholarships in exchange for playing sports and to pay student athletes would ruin amateur athletics. To pay athletes more than that would ruin collegiate sports, the NCAA argues.

The debate over compensating college players is almost as old as the NCAA, founded in 1906. Amateurs have been expected to compete for free and the love of sport — or at least the cost of a scholarship and the pursuit of an education.

The NCAA is steadfast in its position that student-athletes are prohibited from receiving payment for participating in sports. It also said it has done nothing wrong in marketing itself for the benefit of its member schools and will continue to vigorously contest the lawsuits

But the NCAA's revenues have skyrocketed in recent years — it recently signed a $10.8 billion, 14-year television deal for basketball — and so have the demands of athletes to share in the money.

"I'm doing this for change," O'Bannon said outside court.

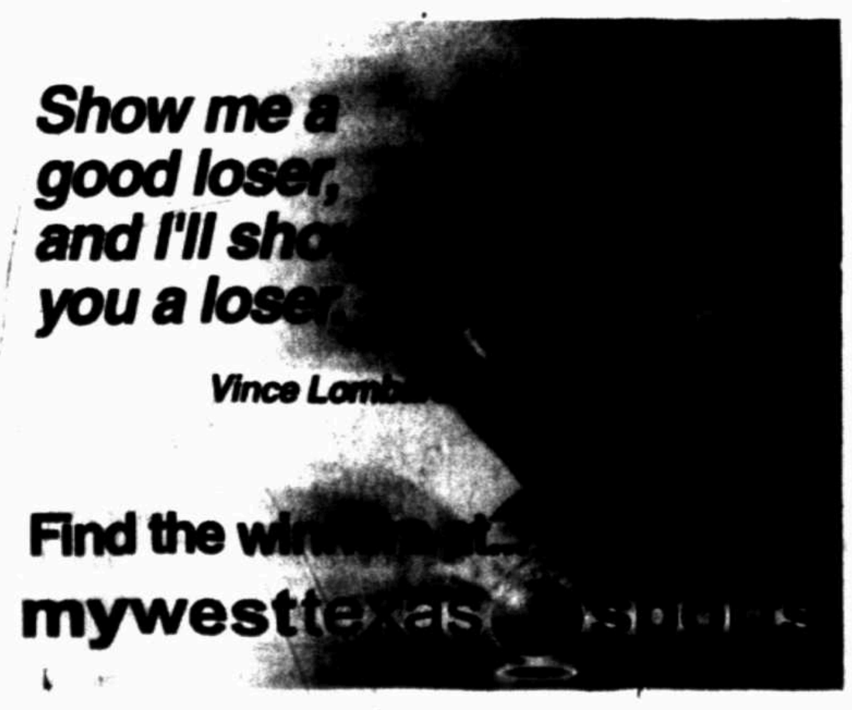
The star of the NCAA 1995 basketball champion UCLA Bruins traveled from his Las Vegas home to attend the hearing Thursday.

He said he first became aware that others were profiting from his image in 1995, when he visited a friend's house and was shown an avatar resembling O'Bannon playing for the 1995 Bruins in the game. Two years later, he filed a lawsuit that focused attention from lawmakers, college administrators and others on just how much money the NCAA and its member schools earn each year.

The schools argue that money-making sports like football and baseball help support sports such as volleyball and gymnastics with smaller fan bases.

That may be, O'Bannon said, but he still thinks student athletes who help generate the revenues are entitled to a cut.

"I believe the kids coming through the system can do better than I did," he said. "I never thought this lawsuit would get this big, but now that it has, I hope it forces big changes."



Mercedes pleads for leniency in F1's 'Tire-gate'

By John Leicester
Associated Press

PARIS — Mercedes pleaded Thursday for leniency from the governing body of motorsport, saying it deserves no more than minor punishment for taking part in tire-testing that rival Formula One teams howled was unfair.

Lawyers for Mercedes, tire manufacturer Pirelli and the International Automobile Federation (FIA) rifled through thick binders of evidence as they debated back and forth at an all-day disciplinary tribunal hearing in Paris.

A thrust of the FIA's argument was that the 620 miles of private tire testing with Pirelli in May in Barcelona offered an advantage to Mercedes that other teams didn't get. F1 bans the use of current-season cars for track tests.

In response, Mercedes portrayed itself as having done a service to the whole of F1, because by offering up its car and drivers, it was helping Pirelli make its tires safer.

The tire manufacturer, for its part, outright rejected the FIA's case, calling the charges against it "totally inadmissible."

Immediately at stake was whether Mercedes and Pirelli would be sanctioned. A longer-term worry for F1 was whether the case risked antagonizing two big players in the sport — the German auto manufacturer that also supplies engines to other F1 teams and Pirelli, which supplies all of the tires for motorsport's premier series.

"Pirelli cannot accept and will not accept that its image and the quality of its products and its credibility be tarnished because of a case which is not admissible and which is unfounded," lawyer Dominique Dumas, speaking for the manufacturer, told the panel of four judges and a hearing president.

For the FIA, lawyer Mark Howard said Pirelli trialed a variety of tires, organized the test and paid for the Barcelona circuit. But Mercedes' 2013 car, driven by current drivers Nico Rosberg and Lewis Hamilton, was used and this offered an advantage to the German team, Howard argued. The testing could have provided Mercedes with potentially valuable information about its cars and their reliability, he said.

"They have been enabled to do something which the other teams have not done," he said. "By testing the Mercedes car for three days, the 2013 car, with the current drivers and the current engineers, Mercedes may be said to have obtained an unfair advantage."

Pele supports peaceful protests in Brazil

Associated Press

FORTALEZA, Brazil — Soccer great Pele says he supports the Brazilian protests sweeping the country as long as they're peaceful.

Pele

Pele has being criticized online for telling Brazilians to forget about the protests and focus on cheering on the national team in the upcoming Confederation Cup.

Pele said in a television interview the country should only "think about the national team," prompting Brazilians to flood social media sites to mock his comments.

Pele had expressed support for the nationwide protests in the same interview, but only the part in which he told Brazilians to "forget about this mess that is happening in Brazil" went viral.

He later released a statement reiterating his support of the protests for better public services, as long as they're non-violent demonstrations.

Hoffman shoots 61 for early lead at Travelers

By Pat Eaton-Robb
Associated Press

CROMWELL, Conn. — Charley Hoffman missed the course record by a stroke, but shot 61 Thursday to take the lead after the first round of the Travelers Championship, a year after he blew a two-stroke advantage on the tournament's final two holes.

In his latest round, Hoffman hit a 126-yard approach shot within 3-feet of the pin to help him birdie 18 and separate himself by a stroke from Hunter Mahan, who posted an early 62. Bubba Watson was two strokes back.

Hoffman said he thought he might have a chance to go even lower, and was flirting with 59 after making eagle on 10 and 12, and going to 8-under par with a birdie on 16. His 28 on the back nine was the lowest 9-hole score on Tour this year

Hoffman

"I knew I had some chances coming in," he said. "But when it's said and done, as I displayed last year, 16, 17 and 18 aren't an easy test. So I was just trying to make some pars coming in."

Hoffman, Mahan and Watson all have interesting histories in Connecticut.

Hoffman finished tied with Watson for second last year after it seemed he had the tournament sewed up. He made double bogey on 17, then bogeyed the 18th after failing to get up and down from a greenside bunker, handing Marc Leishman the title.

"It's nice to come back after that finish last year, and come back and shoot 61 and put myself back in the lead," Hoffman said.

Mahan is the 2007 champion and has two second-place finishes in his 11 previous starts at the TPC River Highlands.

"I think this is the most comfortable course on tour for me," he said.

Coming off a fourth-place finish after being in the final pair at the U.S. Open, Mahan kept it rolling here, opening the day by making the first of eight birdies during a bogey-free round. He was also at 8-under with three holes to play before shooting par on the final three holes.

"This is a golf course where you can be aggressive off the tee if you want to be, but you can also play it safe," he said. "I choose to be mostly aggressive, and it gives me some short irons. I'm happy to take on pins with my short irons. So it's a combo of things, but all I know is when I step on that tee, I feel like I can hit any shot out here."

Watson finds himself in contention again after winning in 2010 and tying Hoffman as the runner up a year ago. He said there is a reason so many familiar names are at the top of the leaderboard.

"These are guys that love this course, that love this tournament, they love Travelers and how they've treated us here," he said. "And so, you're always going to see pretty much some of the same guys up there because they enjoy this area and this golf course."

CONFEDCUP

TAHITI 0

RIO DE JANEIRO — World Cup winner Spain routed the Pacific islanders from Tahiti 10-0 on Thursday at the Confederations Cup — a result that wasn't as bad as some had suggested beforehand.

Tahiti coach Eddy Etaeta said he feared Spain might score 15 or 20.

Still, the winning margin was the largest in a Confederations Cup match. The previous record margin for the World Cup run-up tournament was six, when Brazil beat Saudi Arabia, 8-2, in 1999 and when Brazil beat Australia, 6-0, in 1997.

Fernando Torres, who missed a penalty late in the match, scored four goals. David Villa added three goals, David Silva two and Juan Mata one.

Tahiti was the crowd favorite at the Maracana stadium with Brazilians wildly cheering the underdogs and jeering Spain. When Spanish midfielder Mata tried to score with a bicycle kick with the score at 4-0, the effort was met with loud booing.

NIGERIA 1

SALVADOR, Brazil — Diego Forlan celebrated his 100th appearance for Uruguay in style, setting up one goal then scoring the winner in a 2-1 victory over Nigeria on Thursday to move his team within sight of the Confederations Cup semifinals.

Forlan's decisive goal came in the 51st minute with a sweetly-struck left-footed drive, when he finished off a swift counterattack that involved all three of the South American champion's forwards, starting with Luis Suarez and Edinson Cavani.

Malaga defender Diego Lugano put Uruguay ahead in the 19th following a cross from Forlan and Chelsea midfielder John Obi Mikel equalized for Nigeria in the 37th.

Uruguay and Nigeria are level with three points each in Group B but Uruguay will be expected to win its next match against underdog Tahiti while Nigeria faces World Cup holder Spain.

Mom who abandoned daughter now won't leave her alone

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I was taken away from my parents at 13 and placed into foster care, where I stayed until I aged out at 21. My biological mother is a drug addict who abandoned me to my father when I was 11. She never tried to contact me while I was in care.

I am now 24, and she won't leave me alone. She sends Facebook messages that alternate between begging me to let her get to know me, and condemning me for being vindictive and not having forgiveness in my heart. Abby, this woman exposed me to drugs and all manner of seedy people and situations. I was molested and beaten by some of the men she picked up to pay the bills.

Am I a horrible person for ignoring her? I'm close to losing my temper and letting her know exactly how angry I am, but I know it would do no good. I just want to move on with my life and advance in my profession without having to worry about this. What do you think? — STALKED IN NEW YORK

DEAR STALKED: Silence sends a strong message. I think that when the harassment started, you should have immediately blocked this woman on Facebook. It's not too late to do that now. If she continues to annoy you, consider getting a restraining order.

Because you are on a path to success, allow NOTHING to divert you.

DEAR ABBY: On March 14 you printed a question from "Jim in New Jersey" who asked if brand-new clothing should be washed before wearing. Having worked in a shirt factory for years, let me tell you how many hands handle the shirt before it goes into that neat little bag.

1. Someone spreads the fabric and lays the pattern.
2. The cutter cuts it.
3. Someone else ties the different parts together.
4. Another person takes the parts to the sewing people.
5. One sewer attaches the pocket to the front.
6. Another sews the yoke to the back.
7. Another sews that back to the front.
8. Another sews in the sleeves.
9. Another sews the side seams.
10. Still another hems the bottom.
11. Another adds the collar.
12. Another sews on the cuffs (if long-sleeved).
13. Someone else sews on the buttons.
14. Another reinforces the buttonholes.
15. An inspector examines the garment for loose threads.
16. An auditor gives it a final check.
17. And finally, someone folds the shirt and puts it into that nice, clean-looking bag.

Don't even ask how many times it may have fallen on the floor — or if we washed our hands. Abby, I NEVER wear anything until I wash it! — JOANN IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR JOANN: And neither will I. Thank you!

DEAR ABBY: I'm 59 years old and still take my baseball mitt with me when I go to games in hopes of catching a ball. At what age should a guy stop doing it? (We usually sit in the lower level near the front.) — MINNESOTA TWINS FAN

DEAR TWINS FAN: Stop taking it when you have grown so aged and feeble that when the ball comes your way, you can no longer fend off the younger fans who are also diving for it. And not one moment sooner.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	2♡	2♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

The bidding is routine. North should not count two points for the queen of hearts — the auction suggests strongly that it is worthless.

West starts with king and ace of hearts, East echoing to show a doubleton, and continues with the jack. Since it would be futile to ruff in dummy, declarer discards a diamond loser from the table, as does East.

Declarer had intended to switch red-suit losers, but East's discard puts paid to that plan. That leaves just one hope remaining — that East started with four diamonds or only two trumps.

No luck. No matter how declarer continues, he will either lose an overruff or a diamond. Another good contract ruined by an unlucky distribution. Get on with the next deal!

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, June 21, 2013:

This year will be spectacular, as long as you keep your feet grounded in reality. A long-term dream could come to the forefront and become a reality. Stay realistic. In the next few weeks, you'll be entering a brand-new life cycle. The first year will be the luckiest. If you are single, you could meet someone who will help you write your life history. If you are attached, as a couple you greet a new beginning. SAGITTARIUS does not understand what nurturing means to you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You might be ready for a mini-vacation. Be spontaneous when making plans. You simply might want to take off for a visit to a friend who might have a beach house or a home in the mountains. A change of scenery will re-invigorate you. Tonight: People surround you.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20) ★★★★★ Keep reaching out to others. Your voice tends to encourage others to lighten up. Tap into your creativity with a suggestion that emerges in a meeting. Your imagination will perk up because of an insightful conversation with a friend. Tonight: Go with a partner's suggestion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You'll become more aware of a financial situation. Advice from a respected friend could be more confusing than helpful. A meeting could set the tone for the rest of the day. Others naturally take on your role of cheerleader, which will give you some space. Tonight: Join friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone you care deeply about. Something serious could occur when you least expect it. There will be a sense of confusion around what happens. Give yourself some time to feel out the situation. Some space will serve you well. Tonight: Be where you can relax.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might want to consider implementing some new, creative ideas. Understand that your perspective of a problem could offend a loved one. The less said at the present moment the better. Trust that you will know when the timing is better. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ You might want to stay focused on your family and home. Concentrate on your immediate circle, and create more of what you want. Take news with a grain of salt. A partner could surprise you with his or her recent actions. Be prepared for anything. Tonight: Head home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Others seek you out, and you'll be flooded with calls, requests and invitations. Pressure builds when dealing with a superior or an older friend. Understanding happens through a discussion and your willingness not to be right. Tonight: Hang out with a friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Be aware of the fact that you might not feel the way others do about an investment or a risk. Your sense of direction emerges when dealing with a rather thrifty person in your life. Knowledge is power. Recognize what is needed. Tonight: Treat some friends to happy hour.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You feel better than you have in a while. Loosen up and enjoy the company of a favorite person. One-on-one relating, whether you're at work or home, brings unique rewards. Someone might share a dream that strikes you as preposterous. Tonight: Friendliness works.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others seem to know what they want, and they won't hesitate to ask you to help. You might want to prevent a contest of wills, so just allow this person to have more of what he or she desires. A family member or roommate might surprise you. Tonight: Do your own thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Try to focus on your friends, especially as one might seem off-the-wall at the moment. Realize that others could be deceiving themselves. You do not want to confront anyone at this point. Know how supportive they have been of you. Tonight: Be where the gang hangs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Your imagination could go haywire right now. Take the lead, if need be. Make a point to take off your rose-colored shades so that you don't set yourself up for disappointment. A parent or older relative could be very important — perhaps more than you realize. Tonight: TGIF!

Three reasons not to panic about the market — yet

By Bernard Condon
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks dropping across the globe. Six weeks of gains wiped out in the U.S. The biggest drop in the Dow Jones industrial average in 1 1/2 years.

It's easy to give into panic and sell along with everyone else. But there is a good case for staying calm.

Three reasons you may want to hold on to your stocks:

Stronger economy

Nothing kills a stock rally like a recession. Four of the five previous bull markets ended as investors sold during a recession, or anticipated one.

Are we anywhere near a recession now? It doesn't seem so.

Americans spent more at stores in May, despite higher payroll taxes. Sales of previously occupied homes topped five million last month for the first time in 3 1/2 years.

Better yet, the jobs picture is brightening. Since October, employers have added an average of 196,500 jobs a month, up from 157,000 a month in the previous eight months. And unemployment, still relatively high at 7.6 percent, looks likely to head down. The Fed said Wednesday that it could fall as low as 7.2 percent this year, then down to 6.5 percent next year.

One warning: Recessions are difficult to predict, so anything is possible.

Stocks seem reasonably valued

Major U.S. stock indexes have dropped more than 2 percent this month even though corporate profits are at a record high.

All else being equal, investors who buy now could be getting stocks at a good price.

One way to value stocks is to look at their price-earnings ratio. To calculate a P/E, you divide the price of a stock by its annual earnings per share. A company that earns $4 a share and has a $60 stock has a P/E of 15, for instance. The lower the P/E, the cheaper the stock.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index is trading at 16.1 times earnings per share over the past 12 months, according to S&P Dow Jones Indices, which oversees the index. The average since World War II is 17.5. Translation: Stocks are slightly cheaper than the long-term average now.

To be sure, there are other ways to value stocks, and not all are as encouraging.

You can compare stocks to companies' book value per share, for instance, or to the annual average of their 10-year earnings per share. Both measures suggest stocks are still rich. And big earnings in the past year are no guarantee of big ones next year.

Still, it's not clear that stocks are wildly overpriced. If you believe the economic recovery will continue, earnings are likely to grow, too.

Cash aplenty

Don't be surprised if companies launch yet another round of stock buybacks. This could help lift stock prices, or at least limit the losses.

The impact of stock buybacks on the market has been big.

Nearly every other large player in the stock market — insurers, brokerages, state and local governments, pension funds — have been selling. And yet stocks have more than doubled from their recession lows. A big reason is that U.S. companies, not counting financial firms, have bought more than $1 trillion of their own stock in the five years through 2012, according to the Federal Reserve.

Depending on your point of view, the outsize role of buybacks is either good or bad.

Skeptics say buybacks show companies don't have anything better to do with their money, a bad sign for future profits. Stock bulls say it shows that the people who know their companies better than anyone else — corporate executives — think their stocks are a bargain, and so should you.

Whoever is right, buybacks are likely to continue because companies have plenty of firepower. Companies in the S&P 500 have $1 trillion of cash, according to S&P Dow Jones. The cash hoard has never been higher.

Gold plunges as traders anticipate Fed exit

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Gold plunged below $1,300 an ounce for the first time since September 2010 after the Federal Reserve said it might start to slow down its bond-buying program later this year.

Gold for August delivery dropped $87.80, or 6.4 percent, to $1,286.20 an ounce Thursday. July silver plummeted $1.80, or 8.3 percent, to $19.823 an ounce.

The prospect of less economic stimulus from the Fed greatly diminished the appeal of gold and silver as insurance against inflation and a weak dollar.

In other metals trading, copper for July delivery fell 7.9 cents, or 2.5 percent, to $3.062 a pound. July platinum fell $60.10, or 4.2 percent, to $1,363.80 an ounce. Palladium for September delivery fell $31.30, or 4.5 percent, to $665.10 an ounce.

North Dakota sees record oil shipments by rail

The percentage of North Dakota oil shipped by pipelines has dramatically slipped in the past year as producers have turned to trains to reach faraway U.S. refineries where premium prices are fetched based on foreign crude prices.

But state and industry officials believe the pendulum may be swinging back in favor of pipelines as the price differential narrows between domestic and overseas crude.

Rail shipments accounted for about three-fourths of the record 794,000 barrels of crude produced daily in April, said Justin Kringstad, director of the North Dakota Pipeline Authority. Trains accounted for only 39 percent of the North Dakota's oil shipments for the same month a year ago, data show.

"Rail has not only been able to meet the needs of producers, it has exceeded the needs by providing that extra value to North Dakota crude oil," Kringstad said.

Pipeline shipments of sweet crude from the state's rich Bakken and Three Forks formations slid from 21 percent of total production in March to 17 percent in April, Kringstad said, citing the most recent data available.

North Dakota has become the U.S.'s second-biggest oil producer behind Texas, but its infrastructure wasn't capable of keeping up with the rapid growth of the oil industry. The problems that North Dakota producers have had in getting their product to market has forced them to sell for up to 30 percent less than the benchmark price for light sweet crude that's set in Cushing, Okla., the major crude hub where most U.S. shipments are sent.
