Cathey

Board picks acting school chief

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

With Superintendent James Trusty scheduled to resign next month, Pampa school trustees named one of his assistants as interim superintendent Monday night.

Tommy Cathey, assistant superintendent for support services, was named to replace Trusty, effective Dec. 11, following a 45-minute closed-door session.

In naming an interim superintendent, trustees heeded the advice of Texas Association of School Boards consultant James Jeffries. The board has hired the TASB to assist in the search for a permanent superintendent.

Jeffries had recommended during a September meeting in San Antonio that the board employ an interim superintendent and wait until spring to hire a permanent replacement for Trusty. He said the school district would have more qualified candidates to choose from than if it attempted to hire a permanent superintendent in mid-year.

Trusty announced Aug. 5 that he would resign in December. He has been employed by the district for 30 years and was named superintendent in 1983.

Cathey came to the district in June 1984 from Floydada, where he had worked for 15 years as a teacher, assistant high school principal and business manager. He was the Floydada district's business manager for nine years before moving to Pampa.

Prior to working in Floydada, Cathey was a teacher for six years in Stinnett.

Cathey said Tuesday night that he hopes to aid the board in its search for a permanent superintendent but has no current plans to seek the job himself. He said that once a permanent replacement is found, he anticipates stepping back into the assistant's job.

Trustee James Duggan said Tuesday that naming Cathey is the first major step the board has taken in replacing Trusty. Board members could not say when a permanent superintendent may be found.

Cathey will continue to perform work related to his assistant's job during the time he serves as interim superintendent, and to compensate him, trustees voted Tuesday to pay him an extra $1,000 per month. Cathey currently earns about $43,000 per year.

As interim superintendent, Cathey's first duty will be to immediately take over as chairman of the 1986-87 textbook committee, also appointed by the board Tuesday night.

The board accepted two other personnel recommendations following the executive session. Susan Parrish was added as a first-grade teacher at Lamar Elementary

CIA waged secret campaign in Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has conducted operations in Iran for seven years designed to thaw relations with Tehran and simultaneously help its internal opponents, a published report says.

The Reagan administration's once-secret program of contacts and arms shipments to Iran was just a part of that effort, which started during the Carter administration, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

At the same time, Pentagon and administration officials told The Associated Press that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is prepared to tell Congress that the Pentagon knew nothing of President Reagan's decision to ship military supplies to Iran to improve relations with that country.

The Post report, citing intelligence and other sources it did not identify, said the CIA provided the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with a list of between 100 and 200 names of people said to be Soviet collaborators and intelligence agents. About 200 suspects were executed, dealing a major blow to Soviet operations and influence in Iran, the report said.

Under President Carter, while 52 Americans were being held captive in Tehran, the CIA began several operations against Khomeini, designed to gather information and inflict "punishment" on the Iranian government, the article said.

Since then, the CIA has supported opponents of the Khomeini regime, the report said.

These efforts have included sending nearly $6 million in aid to the Front for the Liberation of Iran, the Paris-based main group of Iranian exiles opposed to Khomeini, providing equipment

WTSU regents support president

CANYON (AP) — West Texas State University regents gave President Ed Roach their wholehearted and unanimous support despite a previous no-confidence vote from the school's faculty.

"The board feels that Dr. Roach had done an outstanding job during these times of financial difficulties for higher education," Board President T. Boone Pickens said after the Tuesday vote.

The vote follows two weeks of controversy at the university during which time faculty members voted no confidence in Roach, and the Alumni Association gave Roach its support.

"In as far as Dr. Roach is concerned, the task at hand is not completed and the job will not be easier, but we as a board wish to express our appreciation to him and offer our total support," Pickens said.

The board also postponed any decision regarding cost overruns of the president's house and discussed in a 1½-hour executive session real estate the university may need as its campus undergoes changes, said Ralph Spencer Sr., an Austin architect.

Pickens asked Regent Tom Christian, chairman of the board's finance and administrative services committee, to look into options the university has to pay the $211,000 it owes for the president's house.

The president's residence project was originally approved by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, for $494,900.

But, WTSU spent $991,000 on the house.

In October, coordinating board members said they could justify $285,700 in cost overruns but voted to require the university to pay the remainder with private funds.

The expense for the president's residence added to the controversy surrounding Roach.

Faculty members complained the home was being built at a time when the school was forced to make deep cuts in its budget.

Molester who quits chemical castration gets 50-year term

HOUSTON (AP) — A 27-year-old man whose probation for molesting a Waco girl consisted of taking part in a "chemical castration" program was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

State District Judge Miron Love imposed the sentence on Mark A. Hollingsworth after prosecutor Jan Krockner told the judge there was no other way to deal with Hollingsworth.

Already under a 10-year deferred adjudication prison sentence from McLennan County for fondling the 9-year-old Waco girl, Hollingsworth pleaded "true" to accusations of fondling another girl in July, a violation of his probation.

The judge revoked Hollingsworth's 10-year probation and sentenced him to 50 years. Deferred adjudication means no conviction appears on the person's record if the probation is successful.

Media expected to pin Reagan to the wall

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, struggling to get off the defensive and quell reports of dissension within his administration, faces questions at a news conference about sending arms to Iran, a nation he accuses of fostering terrorism.

The president meets the White House press corps tonight for the first time in three months, and questions are certain to focus on recent turns in the Reagan administration's foreign policy.

Attention was expected to turn to matters such as Reagan's denial that he had swapped arms for hostages with Iran, as well as the confusing results of his Iceland summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

On the domestic front, Reagan most probably will be asked about his failed campaign to hold onto a Republican Senate and whether he plans to take a confrontational or cooperative style with the new Democratic Congress during his final two years in office.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Tuesday that Reagan and his staff prepare so extensively for the quizzing that "we can guess 99 out of 100 questions that you guys pose and we can tell 'em nine times out of 10 who's going to ask them."

Reagan's news conference comes a week after he attempted to curb media speculation about the deal with Iran in a nationally televised speech. Reagan said he wanted to give the facts to the American people because he had been forced by media reports to make public the secret relationship with Iran.

Fourteen percent of 1,464 adults polled nationwide by The Los Angeles Times last weekend said they found Reagan's statement essentially true.

The president said he had approved a secret effort to establish contacts with moderate elements in the Iranian government and admitted that some U.S. arms had been shipped to Iran as a result. He denied that the arms were traded for the release of three Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

The arms shipments to Iran were part of a seven-year pattern of CIA operations to gain favor with the Tehran government while at the same time trying to destabilize it, according to unnamed sources cited by The Washington Post today.

Reagan also is expected to be queried on the apparent split within his administration over the Iranian connection and his reasons for not informing congressional leaders and the Joint Chiefs of Staff about the operation.

Secretary of State George Shultz has clearly distanced himself from the admininistration's decision and has refused to make clear whether his aversion to the plan might prompt him to leave the administration. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger also is reported to be uncomfortable with the administration's actions.

The New York Times reported today that Shultz asked Reagan to promise he would send no more military aid or make diplomatic contacts with Iran without State Department involvement.

The White House and State Department denied a National Public Radio report Tuesday saying Shultz offered his resignation to the president, who asked him to stay on the job for at least two months.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting anonymous sources, reported today that Shultz has decided against resigning because he believes he succeeded in reversing the administration's position on supplying arms to Iran.

Pam Crockett, formerly a curriculum department aide, was named a kindergarten aide at Travis Elementary. Trusty said the appointment now leaves a vacancy in the curriculum department.

In other business, the board expressed support for a proposal by Robert Dixon of the Pampa Optimist Club to begin a "Just Say No Club" in Pampa schools.

Dixon told the board "Just Say No" is a nationwide program sponsored by Optimists. It focuses on elementary students, he said, to make them aware of the peer pressure faced in the higher grades with regard to drugs and alcohol.

He proposed to pilot the program for fourth- and fifth-grade pupils at one Pampa elementary school, to be designated later. Club members would be given membership cards and T-shirts, and all costs would be paid by Pampa Optimists, Dixon said.

"I'm not saying we have a serious problem," he said. "This program is to prevent having a prob-

The Post, quoting administration sources, also reported that among the supplies Reagan sent Iran in recent months were parts for Hawk anti-aircraft missiles and for TOW antitank missiles.

Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the joint chiefs, has been called to testify next Tuesday before the House Armed Services Committee. The officials, who asked not to be named, said neither Crowe nor the other members of the joint chiefs had been informed about the secret Iranian arms shipments.

"The chairman had no knowledge," said one. "There's nothing he can add to that."

Publicly, spokesmen for Crowe and the Pentagon declined to discuss what the admiral will say.

Robert Sims, the Pentagon's

chief spokesman, told reporters on Tuesday that Crowe "will certainly say what he wants to without any constraints from the department."

Sims refused to discuss Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's knowledge of, or opposition to, the Iranian arms shipment program, which was run by officials of the White House's National Security Council. Sims said Weinberger had no intention of commenting publicly "on matters discussed at the White House."

Secretary of State George Shultz has made no secret of the fact that he opposed providing military hardware to Iran.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Shultz has asked Reagan for a firm commitment not to provide more military equipment to Iran and to agree that future diplomatic contacts with Tehran have State Department participation.

The newspaper quoted unidentified officials as saying that Shultz had told Reagan that unlem. This program is designed to combat that peer pressure, give them another type of peer pressure, a more affirmative, positive program."

The clubs would take about 30 minutes of class time per month, Dixon said. He added he would like to see the pilot program in place by January.

Trustee Joe VanZandt said the new program should be coordinated with the Impact drug awareness program, currently in place at the middle school and high school.

Board President Robert Lyle advised Dixon to meet with Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele, then elementary school principals, to begin implementing the program. He said the board will probably vote on the idea in December.

The board also approved participation in the TEXCEL economic development program by offering tax incentives to new or expanding industries in the target area. Trusty said that although the board approved participation in the program, it still must consider each tax incentive proposal on a case-by-case basis.

less those requests were honored, it would make no sense for him to keep serving in the administration.

State Department and White House spokesman also denied a National Public Radio report Tuesday that Shultz had offered his resignation to Reagan.

Despite the fact that the disagreement of Shultz with the administration became public, Reagan is not annoyed with the secretary and wants him to stay on, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

He said also that the president wants his national security adviser, John Poindexter, to stay on the job. Poindexter has been widely reported to have coordinated the secret diplomatic contacts with Iran, which have been criticized sharply on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

The Senate and House Intelligence committees are scheduled to hold hearings on the Iranian contacts on Friday.

API members to hear talk on crude prices

Leon Littleton, representative and manager of special projects with The Permian Corp., will discuss crude oil price trends at the Panhandle Chapter of American Petroleum Institute meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Littleton's topic will be "Update on Crude Oil Price, and Where It Is Going." He will compare world crude oil reserves and production with that in Texas and in the Texas Panhandle.

He also will discuss OPEC agreements through December 1986 and special problems related to the state and the Panhandle regarding crude oil and condensates.

The API meeting will begin with a social hour, followed by a dinner at 7:15 p.m.

Joe E. Curtis, local API chapter officer, said Littleton will discuss where Texas Panhandle oil reserves stand in comparison to OPEC.

"This is a question that is monitored and watched closely on a day-by-day basis," Littleton said. "The answer lies heavy on OPEC. If OPEC produces less, the result is the price of oil goes up here."

Curtis said the API has a specific goal in mind: to inform persons in the oil related businesses that they need to be aware of crude oil problems, their effects and how to solve them.

Littleton is an authority on special problems related to Texas crude and condensate, Curtis said. Upon graduation from Texas Tech University at Lubbock, Littleton served as an officer in the U.S. Army during the Korean War.

In later years, his travels have taken him all over the world as he worked in the foreign oil, pipeline and transportation business.

Littleton has worked nine years for Pure Oil Co., eight years for Coastal States Corp. and 10 years with Diamond Shamrock Refining and Marketing, where he has been vice president of fuels and feedstocks for the past three years.

He is serving on the Crude Oil Committee for IPAA and on the Executive Committee for Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Curtis said no reservations are needed for those attending the meeting. Cost of the dinner will be $8.50 per person.

Report says foreign oil threatens national security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weak prices for oil and the resulting decline in domestic production could jeopardize U.S. national security in the event of a military mobilization, according to a report given to a cabinet-level group.

However, administration officials have been skeptical when the argument of national security has been raised, saying it masks a plea for economic relief from a financially ailing industry.

The National Defense Council Foundation, a conservative study group, has submitted a paper making the mobilization argument for review by the cabinet group headed by Deputy Energy Secretary William F. Martin.

The foundation's energy expert, Milt Copolous, attacks the conclusions of a Pentagon study in March that the United States could get enough non-Middle East oil to handle the 30 percent increase in demand that mobilization would bring even with heavy curtailment of civilian use.

That study assumes U.S. production in the lower 48 states would remain at the current 8.8 million barrels a day, Alaskan production could increase by 0.5 million barrels.

Violators of this form of probation can be sentenced to the full range of punishment for the crime. Hollingsworth could have been sentenced to life in prison.

Court documents indicate that at 16, Hollingsworth spent a year at a Texas Youth Commission facility for attempted rape. In 1977, he was sentenced to six years in prison for a rape in Harris County.

He was paroled in 1979 and then arrested on two charges of sexually abusing juveniles in the summer of 1981.

The two cases were not settled until February 1983 when Love granted Hollingsworth probation and directed him to enter the chemical program using Depo-Provera.

Depo-Provera is a female hormone that lowers the testosterone levels and men's ability to fantasize sexually.

Hollingsworth began receiving the painful injections and continued until 1984, when the drug's side effects began taking a toll on him, defense attorney Jane Wynegar said.

She said he not only gained 40 pounds but also became alarmed about getting diabetes and heart disease from the injections.

"He made a sincere effort toward recovery," Ms. Wynegar said.

After leaving the program, Hollingsworth moved to Waco to live with his parents. Court officials, however, were not informed he had left the program. The drug must be taken continuously to be effective, the prosecutor said.

Supreme Court denies execution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let Florida authorities execute multiple murderer Ted Bundy for the 1978 slaying of a 12-year-old girl in Lake City, Fla.

The court, without any recorded dissent, turned down the state's emergency request aimed at dissolving a federal appeals court order that postponed Bundy's scheduled execution.

He was to have died in Florida's electric chair Tuesday morning, but the death warrant for his execution was good through noon today. Florida authorities asked Justice Lewis F. Powell to let them execute Bundy by then.

Powell referred the request to the full court.

State board grants hike for homeowners' rates

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance companies that claim destructive weather in recent years hit them in the pocketbook have been granted an average increase of 8.6 percent on Texas homeowners' insurance premiums.

The new rates approved Tuesday by the State Board of Insurance include increases of as much as 23.1 percent for homeowners who opt for reduced deductibles in their coverage.

The insurance industry, citing three years of weather-related losses, pushed for a 19.9 percent statewide average increase in homeowners' rates.

"Obviously, we want what we wanted," Rick Gentry of the Texas Insurance Advisory Association said after the board set the rates Tuesday.

But Gentry said the industry would not challenge the new rates, which take effect March 1.

Actual rates vary by territory and type of coverage. For example, the annual premium on a $100,000 brick veneer home in Houston, with 1 percent deductible, will increase from the current $541 to $559. The increases are more severe for homeowners who opt for lower deductibles.

Gentry said the industry needed higher premiums because of weather-related losses dating back to Hurricane Alicia in August 1983, severe winter weather in December 1983 and a series of losses in 1985.

"In terms of dollar losses we ranked second in the nation in 1985 although we did not experience any hurricanes," Gentry said.

Board members Lyndon Olson and David Thornberry voted for the increase as approved by the board staff. New board member Jim Nelson did not vote because he was not a member when the case was heard in July.

Overall, the board approved a 5.3 percent increase, or $69 million, for all forms of property coverage, including a 10.8 percent cut in renters' insurance.

Also Tuesday, the board began its workers' compensation rate hearing. The industry is seeking a 31.3 percent increase that would add $680 million a year to premiums for workers' compensation coverage.

The board staff has recommended a 17.7 percent hike that would mean about $400 in additional premiums.

Property insurance rates are divided into three territories. The largest increase, 11.2 percent, was approved for the North-Northwest region. Homeowners in the Central region will see an 8.7 percent hike, and the increase in Seacoast area will be 7.8 percent.

Board members voted to allow insurance companies to charge more for policies with reduced deductibles. Standard policies include a deductible of 1 percent of the home's value, but some homeowners choose to pay higher premiums to knock the deductible down to as low as $100.

"The cost of that had not been adjusted in about 10 years," Gentry said. "The people who were buying that deductible at $250 were being subsidized by all the people that didn't buy it. It was too cheap."

Rates for coverage with $250 deductible will go up as much as 21.8 percent in some cities. Rates for coverage with $100 deductible will increase as much as 23.1 percent in those cities.

Neighbors stunned by man's shooting rampage at Killeen

KILLEEN (AP) — A man described by neighbors as a loner is accused of rambling through his neighborhood firing at neighbors and police in a bloody shooting spree.

In a matter of minutes, William Douglas Riley gunned down three of his neighbors and a Killeen policeman in a flash of violence police say they cannot explain.

Police said Riley, 64, had never filed complaints against his neighbors nor did he offer any reason for the shootings when questioned.

Monday, Riley was charged with attempted capital murder, three counts of attempted murder and burglary of a habitation with intent to commit a felony. He was held Tuesday in Bell County Jail under bonds totaling $95,000.

Neighbors in the federal housing complex where Riley lived said the old man was known as being very withdrawn.

"He had nothing to say to nobody," said neighbor Robert Edwards. "He was a loner."

But Sunday night, after being startled by gunshots, Edwards and his neighbors watched in shock as a man they identified as Riley walked calmly along the sidewalk pumping a shotgun.

Riley first struck at his next door neighbor's home.

Cenobia Escamilla, Riley's next door neighbor, was a friend of Riley's daughter and said hello to him occasionally. She knew him better than any of the other neighbors.

Escamilla, her husband Felix Bargas, cousin Cornelio Lopez and her parents were watching television about 7:20 p.m. when they heard what they thought was a car backfiring.

Moments later the family was diving for cover after a shotgun blast shattered the back window. Escamilla was struck in the abdomen and Lopez suffered a severe wound to his side.

Escamilla lay still on the floor pretending to be dead but waiting for the next blast she knew would kill her, she said from the hospital where she was listed in stable condition.

Riley walked coolly from the house and returned home for more ammunition.

"I just can't believe how calmly he walked back to his house," said Mary Perez, a neighbor.

Police said the assailant then shot into his other neighbor's home, grazing Judy Assed's forehead as she stood in her window.

The first two officers on the scene were met with gunfire. Officer Jeff Fohler was struck in the left side. He was treated and released from an area hospital.

The incident finally ended five hours later when police fired tear gas into Riley's home. The army retiree came out unarmed. Inside the home police found a .12 gauge-pump shotgun, two handguns and ammunition.

Forest clearing given okay

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has cleared the way for the U.S. Forest Service to continue cutting trees for pine beetle-infested sections of Sam Houston National Forest near Huntsville.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox had asked U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes to issue a temporary restraining order to stop the destruction of trees in the Four Notch Area of the forest south of Huntsville pending the outcome a lawsuit filed by the state.

But the judge on Tuesday refused to issue the order.

A Dec. 9 hearing, however, was set for a preliminary injunction to again try and stop the tree-clearing operation.

Environmentalists at the hearing called the judge's decision a major setback.

"There seems to be a blatant and total disregard of the ecosystem," said Sierra Club member George Russell of Huntsville. "The web of life at Four Notch is a national treasure."

Environmentalists have criticized the operation saying it needlessly destroys plants and wildlife.

A 52-ton tree-crusher is used to mow down trees in the area. When the clearing is completed, officials plan to burn the area.

Forest service officials said the area was still wet from recent rainfall and they were not sure when they would proceed with the clearing operation.

In a lawsuit filed by Mattox last week, he asks that further study of the clearing project be required to determine whether work should proceed. But forest service officials testified Tuesday that the project was approved in a 1978 land management plan.

State officials argued the plan was too broad and that specific environmental impacts at the site have not been studied.

A state Parks and Wildlife biologist testified that an endangered species, a red-cockaded woodpecker, that lives and feeds in the area is already being killed because of the operation.

Forest service officials, however, said knocking down the pines and hardwoods will allow new trees room to grow.

Pine seedlings will be planted and the hardwoods will grow back on their own, said Dave Oates, a forest service timber specialist.

Some Earth First members at the hearing said they may stage further protests.

Killing called 'gay bashing'

KYLE (AP) — The slaying of an Austin businessman, whose body was found in a burning auto, may be an extreme example of "gay bashing," says a national homosexual rights group.

But a police investigator says that motive is only one possibility in last week's murder of Edward Schiffrers, 39.

Schiffrers was found dead in the front seat of his burning car at an Interstate 35 rest stop in Kyle. His hands were tied behind his back with baling wire, he was partially clothed and had been struck in the head, police said.

A preliminary autopsy indicated that the cause of death was smoke inhalation.

Jeff Gutierrez, a spokesman for the Gay and Lesbian Service Center of Los Angeles, said the rest stop where Schiffrers was killed may have drawn people intent on attacking homosexuals because it was "a notorious meeting place for gays."

Both Schiffrers' business partner and a former roommate told the Austin American-Statesman that their friend was homosexual but not the sort of person who would frequent such a hangout. They said he may have been attacked while stopping to use the rest room, the newspaper reported Tuesday.

Gutierrez said he heard about the slaying from a friend of Schiffrers while helping to establish an information clearinghouse to keep track of and publicize assaults against homosexuals.

The issue of "gay bashing" has received increased news media attention in recent weeks. Attacks on homosexuals have "been going on for centuries," Gutierrez said, but they have intensified this year because of public fears about the spread of the AIDS virus.

Gutierrez said his information on the slaying is limited to the reputation of the rest area and the fact that Schiffrers was a homosexual.

Police have reported neither suspects nor witnesses in the case. Firefighters found Schiffrers' body about 4 a.m. Wednesday when they were called to the blaze by a passing motorist.

Hays County Sheriff Alford Hohman and state trooper Jeff Sones, who patrols the interstate through Kyle, said they had heard rumors that the rest stop was a hangout for homosexual men.

Hohman said he had heard similar rumors about other rest areas, but both men said they knew of no previous violent incidents there involving homosexuals.

Bond buyer agrees to make good

AUSTIN (AP) — Bids on $300 million in short-term Texas government notes will be made good despite a multi-million dollar error, a New York investment firm says.

"We accept responsibility for the error and will take delivery of the notes," said William M. Moore, spokesman for a syndicate consisting of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets and Dillon Read & Co.

The wrong bid allows the state to pay as little as 0.03 percent interest the next nine months on the notes to temporarily help finance state government through Aug. 31, 1987, the end of this fiscal year.

Texas' state revenues have been hard hit by declining oil and gas taxes, which pay a substantial part of state government cost.

The syndicate purchased $300 million in notes, which the state will buy back during the next nine months.

The successful bids on the other $300 million in notes charged the state higher interest, said Bill Cryer, spokesman for the Treasury. With the Merrill Lynch syndicate bids included, the average net interest being charged the state is 2.08 percent on the $600 million, he said. That means the state would save somewhere in the neighborhood of $7 million.

In a brief statement issued from his New York City office, syndicate spokesman Moore attributed the mistake to "a mathematical error."

Officials of the New York firm said its bid should have been in the range of 3 percent to 4 percent interest.

Cryer said the syndicate made bids on four lots of notes, at interest rates ranging from 0.03 percent to 0.309 percent.

"In our view, we do not characterize it as an error they can correct," Cryer said.

This was the first sale of the notes under legislation passed by the recent special session of the Legislature to help the state through cash-flow problems.

State Treasurer Ann Richards told a news conference that 19 firms submitted bids on the notes, which were divided into six portions.

She said the interest rate, ranged from the 0.03 percent bid by Merrill Lynch to a high of 3.92 percent.

"This sale will allow us the opportunity to invest our tax dollars more effectively and increase the yield on those investments," she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

President has bold work in Congress

The optimist, goes the old saw, views the glass as half full, while the pessimist views it as half empty. President Reagan seems to be optimistic by nature. Viewing the election result of 1986, he could have reason to see a historic opportunity — assuming that he really has in mind a Reagan Revolution with a lasting impact on the American policy rather than serving the remainder of his term as the grandfatherly, likable, aw-shucks sort of leader who retains the superficial affection of the many by doing little to offend vested interests.

Both houses of Congress are now under control of the Democrats. The prospects for getting many of the president's programs through such a body unscathed are substantially reduced. That could work toward a caretaker presidency for the next two years — or it could move the president toward greater boldness in fashioning initiatives that would actually get the government "off our backs and out of our pocketbooks."

Our system has evolved into one where the president's proposals over the next two years may determine his niche in history. Policy proposals always undergo an intricate process of give-and-take and compromise in Congress. If Reagan wants to be seen, years from now, as the first president of the Reagan Era rather than the nice old man of the Reagan Interlude, he should propose genuinely bold programs that embody little or no compromise from what he claims are his true principles — reduced government spending, regulation and taxation.

So long as the Senate was in Republican hands, administration proposals had to be fashioned, to some extent, with conventional wisdom about political reality in mind. The incentive was strong to push proposals that had a strong to push proposals that had a strong chance of passage with little amendment, that GOP senators could defend as-is. Thus the process of compromise began within the administration, before proposals took shape.

Now there is no need for such wishy-washiness. Congressional opposition to virtually any administration proposal is guaranteed. Why not make them the kind of proposals that can set the agenda for the next decade or two? Why not begin the process of getting on the table and offering for debate proposals that will actually cut back the size and scope of government rather than merely retarding its growth slightly?

Why not, for starters, make a serious effort to eliminate the Department of Education and the Department of Energy, rather than fill these bureaucracies with conservative time-servers?

Why not propose the outright elimination of regulatory agencies like the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Consumer Product Safety Commission, OSHA and a dozen others?

Why not offer legislation embodying every proposal to eliminate waste and duplication contained in the Grace Commission Report?

Why not propose deep cuts in every agency?

An environmental disaster

President Reagan, who has blamed air pollution on trees and harbored James Watt as interior secretary, largely deserves the general public skepticism about his commitment to a clean environment. His pocket veto of an extension of the Clean Water Act invites the conclusion that Reagan's real complaint was the goal of clean water, not just the means Congress chose. But this time, the president was right.

Enacted in 1972, the Clean Water Act had an admirable purpose — cleaning up the pollution of our lakes, rivers and harbors. To that end it provided matching funds to states and local governments for 75 percent of the cost of building sewage treatment plants.

That was exactly the wrong way to go about cleaning up the nation's water. It transformed an idealistic enterprise into a congressional pork barrel, with grants made as much on political grounds as environmental ones. A huge amount of money has been spent — 2½ times as much as originally estimated — but the program has achieved far less than promised.

The list of failures is long and costly. County officials built a $53 million wastewater treatment plant outside Las Vegas to head off a pollution threat that, it turned out later, didn't exist. An $18 million facility that has kept Lake Tahoe clean has killed fish in the adjacent county, where the treated water is dumped. A $9 million federal investment in Maine yielded a plant that couldn't be used when it was completed, because it didn't work.

A 1981 investigation by The Washington Post discovered that of the 18,000 plants envisioned in 1972, only 2,000 plants had been finished, most of them in small communities without serious pollution problems. Worse, it found that "at least 60 percent of them, and perhaps as much as 90 percent, don't perform up to anti-pollution requirements more than half the time." The General Accounting Office has said that "violation of permits is the norm, not the exception."

Despite some publicized success stories, the Post concluded that "what little information exists suggests that there has been little or no change in basic water quality since 1972. . . . Certainly there is no evidence that the $30 billion grants program has helped measurably."

Since then, the price tag has grown to $44 billion. Under Reagan's plan to phase out the federal aid by 1991, another $6 billion would be spent. The bill he vetoed provided three times that much, besides delaying the phaseout. But wasting more money won't solve the problems.

The reasons for the program's failure are two: federal money and federal control. By giving Washington the chief responsibility for financing the cleanup, it induced members of Congress to use the grants as political assets instead of anti-pollution weapons. A 1979 House Appropriations Committee report said, "There have been extreme pressures to make grants for questionable projects." It also encouraged local officials to lobby for all the money they could get, because their local taxpayers wouldn't have to foot the bill.

The federal control had the effect of imposing rigid, expensive solutions on local governments. Many of the most notorious white elephants were built at the insistence of the EPA. Its endless reviews and bias toward complex, high-tech remedies have caused widespread resentment among the people who have to build and operate the treatment plants — besides driving up costs and delaying cleanup measures.

Another problem lies in the overambitious dreams of the original act. Making every body of water in the country "fishable" and "swimmable" would be nice if it were free. But rivers and harbors in dense urban areas can be made and kept pristine only at staggering cost. In those, a less demanding standard of cleanliness should be allowed.

The president's approach is to give the states and local governments the responsibility for paying for cleaning up wastewater, while keeping federal standards. That is much the same as the established policy toward industrial polluters, which has worked well. By tying funds to responsibility, it will compel the cheapest, most effective solutions.

The bill will be back next year, and Congress, which approved the extension of the Clean Water Act without a dissenting vote in either house, is likely to pass it over Reagan's protest. When the opportunity arises to take a stand on the irreproachable aim of clean water, everyone is eager to show pure intentions.

Reagan will probably fail, but he deserves credit for trying to halt the stampede.

Three parties in Congress

Republicans are good losers. Republicans are promising to work with Democrats in Congress, however necessary.

Republicans are good losers. Republicans are lousy winners. Republicans are oriented more to competing than to cooperating.

Most are free-wheeling individualists. When they win they promptly start fussing and fighting among themselves.

As witness the hellish time President Reagan had in the 99th Congress mobilizing support from his own party.

But Republicans are good losers. If only because they're more accustomed to losing.

In the Congress of the United States right now we have Republicans and Democrats — and Southern Democrats.

There's not been much mention of nor deference to Southern Democrats since Reagan swept the South.

At the Democrats' convention in San Francisco there was hardly any attention given to "Southern Democrats." They were written off as dinosaurs, as ghosts of a past age, barriers to progress.

Southern Democrats, whom history has taught patience, marked time.

The patience paid off. Since the Nov. 4 election, look who's wielding the balance of power in both houses of the United States Congress!

Head of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate, Mississippi's John Stennis.

The important committees will be in the hands of conservative moderate Southern Democrats:

Defense — Sam Nunn of Georgia.
Budget — Lawton Chiles of Florida.
Finance — Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.
Energy — J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana.
Commerce — Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Intelligence — David Boren of Oklahoma. And there are four new Southern Democrats in the Senate.

Within hours of the election the first voice publicly to promise not to re-raise taxes was Democrat Richard Shelby of Alabama.

And in the House half of Congress, there are enough old and new Southern Democrats to command respect.

Ours is again a Congress of three "parties," and that combination has heretofore worked very well in our behalf.

Democrats can't kill the Reagan revolution

By William A. Rusher

It's been a long time since anything good happened to the Democrats, so they are entitled to crow a bit about their recapture of the Senate, but in truth the results of the off-year elections were remarkably mixed.

The turnout was the lowest in 40 years, depriving Republican candidates of many of the votes (notably in the younger categories) that swelled Ronald Reagan's total in 1984. Virtually all of the Senate contests were won by razor-thin margins that could just as easily have tilted the other way. The Republicans, moreover, were defending 22 seats; the Democrats only 12. (The Democrats have 19 coming up in 1988; the Republicans just 14.)

In the House, Democratic gains were held to a bare half-dozen, though it must be remembered that they started with an already comfortable majority of 71 and could hardly have been expected to increase their margin by more than 10 or 15.

It was among the governorships, however, that the GOP did best. Two big swing states (Illinois and California) were kept in the Republican column and another (Texas) was added — a factor that may easily turn out to be decisive in the 1988 presidential contest. Moreover, the series of Republican gubernatorial victories in the South (Florida, Alabama and Texas) suggests that, despite some of the excited remarks on Nov. 5, realignment, or at least dealignment, is far from dead: The South has long been voting Republican in presidential elections, but now the habit seems to be spreading to the state level.

Even in the Senate, the ideological balance is not likely to change much. For example, conservatives are predictably going to be unhappy with Senator-elect Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, whose cumulative voting score in the House (as rated by the American Conservative Union) was 6 out of a possible 100; but the liberal Republican she replaces, Charles Mathias, scored only 14 himself during his long and damaging career in the Senate. And Mark Andrews of North Dakota (whose rating was 23) isn't likely to be missed much either. In addition, a number of the new Democratic senators — Breaux of Louisiana, Shelby of Alabama and Graham of Florida for starters — are distinctly conservative, as Democrats go.

Nor, for that matter, will all the Senate committee chairmanships pass into the hands of liberal Democrats. Liberal Republican Mark Hatfield will be handing over Appropriations to conservative Democrat John Stennis. The Finance Committee will pass from Hatfield's almost equally liberal Oregon colleague Robert Packwood to Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Some of the changes, it is quite true, are far less reassuring (Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, for example, takes over at Foreign Relations); but even in the Senate the picture is by no means unrelievedly dark.

The real losers in the election are the American people, who apparently remain unable to realize how they cripple their government by dividing its powers between a Republican president and a Democratic Congress. We are now doomed to two years of paralysis, in which Congress (with its eye fixed firmly on 1988) will reject or modify into ineffectuality all of President Reagan's major proposals, including testing of the Space Shield and further military aid to the Nicaraguan contras. Instead, Congress will send him legislation (starting with protective tariffs) fiendishly designed to be vetoed, to the outrage of as many voters as possible. Mr. Reagan will duly veto such bills (as well as any attempts to raise taxes), but that is just about all he can do. Truly effective government is on hold until at least 1989, and we have only ourselves to blame.

Of the liberals' rather comical attempts to interpret these tangled tea leaves as proclaiming the death of the "Reagan revolution," however, more anon.

Withholding forms expand to 4 pages — this is simplification?

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 million workers are about to have their first encounter with the new overhaul of the federal income tax.

Within the next several days, employers across the nation will begin receiving supplies of a revised Form W-4 that every worker is required to file to adjust the amount of taxes that will be withheld from paychecks once the new law takes effect Jan. 1.

The sooner the form is filed, the better for most workers, says the Internal Revenue Service. Under the law, employees have until Oct. 1 to complete the form, but a person who waits that long could face a penalty for having too little withheld earlier in the year.

Whatever simplification is expected from the new tax law, it is not evident in the new W-4 forms. The old form and its instruction covered two pages; the new version, unveiled by the IRS at a news conference Tuesday, covers four pages and includes a 22-column table of figures.

It could have been made simpler, said IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs. But in 1988, when workers begin filing tax returns under the new law for the first time, "many taxpayers would learn they owed thousands more in taxes and, in some cases, penalties as well," he said.

"Going from two pages to four means a more complicated-looking form and the greater likelihood of some public confusion but doing so also means people's withholding will be reasonably close to the actual amount of tax owed," Gibbs said.

The W-4 form has been revised to reflect that the new tax law raises personal exemptions and standard deductions but reduces some itemized deductions and repeals others. The aim is to permit workers to bring their withholding reasonably close to their actual tax liability.

About three-quarters of the 102 million tax returns filed this year claimed refunds, meaning those taxpayers had too much withheld from their paychecks. Refunds averaged $982. Many people deliberately have taxes over-withheld because they like to get a one-time refund, but Gibbs said those who want to balance withholding and liability will find it easier under the revised form.

To fill out the form, workers will have to estimate what adjustments (such as Individual Retirement Account contributions), itemized deductions and tax credits they will have under the new law for 1987.

Over half of all workers — chiefly those who do not itemize deductions and do not have a working spouse — will be able to adjust withholding on the new form without making any calculations at all, said Arthur Altman, the IRS official in charge of forms.

A worker may claim one withholding allowance each for self, spouse and dependents. A special allowance will be permitted a single person with only one job; a married person who has only one job and a non-earning spouse, or a married person whose second job earnings or spouse's earnings total $2,500 or less.

In 1987, one allowance will be worth $1,900, the value of the personal exemption under the new law. That means that for each allowance claimed, $36.54 of a worker's weekly wages will be exempt from withholding.

The new form gets more complicated for those with a working spouse, more than one job or a significant amount of non-wage income. And it will be more complicated still for those who itemize deductions, claim a tax credit, take the special new deduction for being 65 or blind, or those with such deductible IRAs, business expenses, moving expenses or other adjustments.

would remain at the current 8.8 million barrels a day, Alaskan production could increase by 0.5 million barrels, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve could supply 2.7 million for six months and imports could rise to almost 10 million from the current 7 million.

The flaw, according to Copoulos, is that U.S. production is likely to decline soon to 6 million barrels a day. Low prices are leading companies to cut exploration and abandon marginal wells.

Health group says seafood may present risks to eaters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seafood, which makes up a growing proportion of American diets because of its health benefits, also may present health risks because it is among the least regulated of foods, a private health advocacy group said today.

"The vast majority of seafood reaches the consumers' plates without being inspected by any government agency, state or federal," said a report by Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, a non-profit nutrition advocacy group.

The group said thousands of Americans become ill each year from eating seafood contaminated with bacteria or viruses, and many others are at long-term risk from consumption of products that contain toxic chemicals.

The report said the federal government should assume responsibility for setting uniform national standards for fish and seafood and set up an inspection program to make sure those standards are met, much like the program governing meat and poultry.

"The microbiological and environmental contamination in seafood is widespread and presenting harm, risks and unnecessary costs to the public," the group's report said, although it acknowledged that data on health consequences are sketchy because of inadequate reporting.

Inspection is handled primarily by the National Marine Fisheries Service, an arm of the Commerce Department. But that inspection is entirely voluntary and intended more to promote sales of seafood than to protect consumers, the group said.

The service's inspections have been declining at the same time that U.S. seafood consumption has risen, the report found. In 1985, the average American ate a record 14.5 pounds of fish and shellfish, an 11 percent increase since 1980.

The service inspected 567 million pounds of fish in 1983, about 18.6 percent of all consumption. By 1985 that figure had dropped to 443 million pounds, about 13 percent of all fish and shellfish eaten in the country.

"The lack of a unified (inspection) program, coupled with the failures of the existing programs, put the seafood consumer in a precarious position," the report concluded.

Richard Gutting, vice president for government relations of the National Fisheries Institute, said the seafood industry has been pushing for improved inspection for 20 years, and has won passage of a $350,000 appropriation to design such a program over the next two years.

"Consumption has been increasing, and we think it's because consumers realize the health and nutritional aspects" of a low-cholesterol source of protein, he said.

'Dallas' star's parents killed

BOULDER, Mont. (AP) — The parents of "Dallas" star Patrick Duffy were killed at a bar they owned in this western Montana town, and two men were arrested, Boulder police said today.

Spokesman Mike Lavigne identified the victims as Terence and Marie Duffy, the parents of the actor who plays Bobby Ewing on the popular CBS TV series.

He said they were apparently killed Tuesday night, and their bodies were found early today. No motive was known, he said.

Two Helena men, Sean A. Wentz and Kenneth A. Miller, both 19, are in custody "on suspicion of deliberate homicide with bond set at $250,000 each," Lavigne said.

Cheap oil could hurt military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weak prices for oil and the resulting decline in domestic production could jeopardize U.S. national security in the event of a military mobilization, according to a report given to a cabinet-level group.

However, administration officials have been skeptical when the argument of national security has been raised, saying it masks a plea for economic relief from a financially ailing industry.

The National Defense Council Foundation, a conservative study group, has submitted a paper making the mobilization argument for review by the cabinet group headed by Deputy Energy Secretary William F. Martin.

The foundation's energy expert, Milt Copoulos, attacks the conclusions of a Pentagon study in March that the United States could get enough non-Middle East oil to handle the 30 percent increase in demand that mobilization would bring even with heavy curtailment of civilian use.

That study assumes U.S. production in the lower 48 states

Environmentalist, oilman dispute Alaska wilderness value

EDITOR'S NOTE — The conflict in Alaska's northeastern corner looms as large as the land involved. Should we keep a Delaware-size expanse of tundra pristine or open it to oil exploration? Two participants in the debate, each in his element, tell what they would do.

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

LAKE SCHRADER, Alaska (AP) — Wilderness guide Roger Rom and oil executive Harold Heinze agree on this much: the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge represents a last hope.

The agreement ends there. From where Roger Rom sits — at the moment, on a lichen-covered rock in the heart of the refuge — this cold and lonely corner of Alaska has value as the nation's northernmost tract of wilderness. It is a home for polar bears, waterfowl and 180,000 caribou; a place where visitors can soak up the undiluted essence of nature.

From where Harold Heinze sits — 600 miles to the south in an office atop the tallest building in Anchorage — the beauty of the refuge lies beneath the surface. Its coastal plain may hold the continent's best and last chance for a major oil discovery.

For years, environmentalists like Rom have wanted Congress to make the refuge's Delaware-size coastal plain an official wilderness area, closed to roads, settlement and oil exploration. Heinze and others in the oil industry have wanted it opened to drilling.

Congress put off the issue in 1980 by ordering a study of the area's oil potential and wildlife resources. But now that study is nearly finished, the debate has revived.

It's a major concern of national groups on both sides of the wilderness vs. development debate.

One side wonders if it's worth endangering a wildlife treasure for the chance of finding a few years' supply of oil. The other asks why oil and wildlife can't mix, and questions whether the nation needs to expand a wilderness system that has increased nearly tenfold in the last two decades.

The answers, of course, depend entirely on where one sits.

"This would be the only protected wilderness on the Arctic coast," says Roger Rom, still perched on his rock. "They can drill on just about the entire coastline of Alaska. We're not trying to lock it up. We're just trying to stop development in one area that we believe is so special it shouldn't be developed."

The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge is the largest in the country's refuge system, occupying 18 million roadless acres of tundra, tundra and gravel-domed mountains in Alaska's northeastern corner. Nearly half the refuge is already designated wilderness, and Rom is deep within it.

In late July, the height of the brief arctic summer, he led nine people on a backpacking trip in the mountains of the Brooks Range, at the coastal plain's southern edge. A reporter joined them for a few days at Lake Schrader, a sparkling alpine lake alive with trout and arctic char.

Alone on the wind-combed tundra, the hikers seem to have all 18 million acres to themselves. They almost do. Natives from two small villages hunt and fish on the refuge, and recreational use is limited to about 600 people a year, refuge managers say.

Cost and cold keep down the crowds. A traveler from Anchorage can spend $1,500 on scheduled and chartered flights to reach the refuge, where even in July the average temperature is only 41 degrees.

Rom loves the solitude of the northern places, where he figures he spends 100 days a year "on the trail." He migrated from northern Minnesota to Alaska in 1980 and now runs Alaska Wilderness Inc., a guiding business he says has never made a profit.

At 31, the brown hair that once reached his waist now just grazes the collar of his pile jacket. A compact man, he can walk — and talk — all day without tiring.

This day, Rom and the reporter have left the others in camp and are hiking the length of Lake Schrader. They follow trails carved in the waterlogged tundra by the hooves of caribou.

Rom says he led the group up a north-facing ridge a few days earlier.

"I wanted people up on the ridge so they could envision the coastal plain with big trucks and a pipeline on it," he says. "That's just totally alien to wilderness."

They saw a 1.5 million-acre expanse of tundra — rolling hills in the foreground, a river-sliced plain near the coast. There, each June when the snow finally melts, the Porcupine caribou herd's 180,000 winter-weary animals gather and the cows give birth.

Environmentalists say the herd's annual migration between Canada's Yukon Territory and the coastal plain is one of North America's most spectacular wildlife events. They fear that oil development, with its noise, pipelines, roads and construction camps, would disrupt the caribou's calving.

"Caribou are the main focus of the argument," Rom says. "But there are probably a hundred other arguments for preserving the wilderness. Aesthetics, recreation, the importance to the polar bear, the brown bear, musk ox, Dall sheep, snow goose. This is an extremely important habitat area for animals."

Wilderness may put the romance in Alaska, but oil fills its bank accounts.

Anchorage, the state's largest city, sprawls at the feet of high-rise office buildings built by oil companies — and the highest of all belongs to Arco-Alaska Inc.

There, in a many-windowed suite on the 21st floor, company president Harold Heinze is holding forth on the coastal plain's amazing geology.

"This is not a boring area of rock," Heinze says, his feet propped up on a glass coffee table. "There are oil seeps on the surface. There are outcrops that, if you smell them, you get the smell of methane."

Schooled as a petroleum engineer, he speaks with animation about the coastal plain, and with frustration at not being allowed to explore its potential.

There's a museum for everything — or so it seems

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Americans are pack rats, attic-stuffers, beachcombers, closetcrammers, garage-clutterers, album-keepers, savers of string. The incredible diversity of the things they collect is reflected in their museums. There are museums in America for everything from toy trains to birds' eggs. There are probably no tattoo museums in the Soviet Union.

There is one in San Francisco.

In a little volume titled Directory of Unique Museums, published by Oryx Press of Phoenix, Ariz., Bill Truesdell, a Michigan advertising writer, has gathered some of the most remarkable examples, with hours, addresses and phone numbers.

For instance, there is the Cookie Jar Museum of Lemont, Ill., with Lucille Bromberg's collection of more than 2,000 cookie jars, some over a century old. In Prescott, Ariz., there's the Bead Museum, with beads that date back to Mesopotamia, 2,200 years before Christ.

Down the road in Phoenix is one of the nation's several museum collections of firefighting equipment and memorabilia, "The Hall of Flame."

In Fort Mitchell, Ky., the Vent Haven Museum preserves the art of ventriloquism, 500 voiceless dummies, plus films, records and a library.

Did you know that George Washington and Abe Lincoln were part of the liquor industry? George distilled it, Lincoln sold it. The records are part of the collection at the Oscar Getz Museum of Whiskey History, Bardstown, Ky., with an 1854 bottle put out by E.C. Booz, from whom we get the word "booze."

The National Knife Collectors

Museum of Chattanooga, Tenn., has thousands of knives, swords, cutlery, razors.

There are over 4,000 dolls at the Enchanted World Doll Museum of Mitchell, S.D.; 3,000 more at the McCurdy Historical Doll Museum of Provo, Utah; some 600 collector dolls at the Victorian Doll Museum of North Chili, N.Y. They are the result of 17 years of collecting by Linda Greenfield who began as an 8-year-old by cutting open a doll to see where the bones were.

Most of the dolls at the Museum of Antique Dolls, Savannah, Ga., predate 1900. At Eureka Springs, Ark., the more than 2,000 dolls from around the world are the result of 40 years of collecting by Hilda and Milton Geuther.

Angel's Attic in Santa Monica, Calif., specializes in antique dolls and miniatures, and the Mary Merritt Doll Museum of Douglassville, Penn., displays 1,500 of some 5,000 dolls, several dozen doll houses and a full-size replica of a mid-19th century Philadelphia toy shop.

In Bristol, Conn., there are 900 clocks and about the same number of watches at the American Clock and Watch Museum. The Time Museum in Rockford, Ill., records the evolution of time-keeping from Stonehenge to the atomic clock.

Carved clocks, products of life-long whittling of the Bily family, are on exhibit in Spillville, Iowa. The oldest is 500 pounds and 8 feet high, carved from cherry and walnut. There are 1,000 exhibits at the National Association of Watch and Clock Collectors Museum in Columbia, Pa.

Potato Museum director Tom Hughes displays some potato kitchen equipment at the Washington, D.C., museum.

Pope John Paul II is greeted by petal-throwing girls in Bangladesh.

Pope urges people to end distrust, fear

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Pope John Paul II today urged the estimated 50,000 people attending an outdoor Mass to brush aside "fear and distrust" between the less than 300,000 Christians and almost 100 million Moslems in desperately poor Bangladesh.

"Everyone, especially the young, must learn always to respect one another's religious beliefs and respect freedom of religion which is the right of every human being," he said in a homily at the Ershad Army stadium where he also ordained 18 Bengali priests.

The Mass was held just hours after the 66-year-old pontiff arrived for a one-day stop in Bangladesh — the first leg of a six-nation Asian and Pacific tour. He also planned to visit an independence war memorial and meet other religious leaders and Catholic bishops before leaving Thursday for Singapore.

Bangladesh, a tiny overcrowded nation of 103 million people, is more than 86 percent Moslem, 12 percent Hindu.

This, the pontiff's 32nd foreign trip, is his longest-ever pilgrimage to spread his message of brotherly love, social justice and unity among religions.

"There are many things that Christians and Moslems have in common as human beings and as believers," he told the predominantly Christian crowd, which included a small number of Moslems.

"Sometimes Christians and Moslems fear and distrust one another as the result of past misunderstanding and conflict," he said. "This also is true in Bangladesh."

Standing in front of the outline of a huge lotus and a red sun, the pontiff told the crowd that showing "your Moslem brethren and others that your Christian faith, far from weakening your pride in your homeland and your love for her, helps you to prize and respect the culture and heritage of Bangladesh."

Gunmen kill Enrile's friend in ambush

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen dressed as women ambushed the car of a right-wing businessman and friend of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile today, killing him and two others, police reported.

The killing of David Puzon, 65, occurred six days after the slaying of Rolando Olalia, a prominent leftist whose death supporters blame "fascist elements" allied with Enrile.

There have been no arrests in either attack.

Enrile, a harsh critic of President Corazon Aquino's policy of negotiating with the communist insurgency, has denied any involvement in Olalia's slaying.

Today, Mrs. Aquino instructed her negotiators to seek a cease-fire this month with the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front, which broke off talks after Olalia's slaying.

Police said Puzon's car was attacked at about 7:30 a.m. in San Jose del Monte, about 10 miles north of Manila, as Puzon was traveling to a family-owned lumber yard in Bulacan province. His driver Romeo Reyes and a factory manager, Manuel Viloria, also were killed and his daughter-in-law, Eva Puzon, was wounded.

Lt. Col. Leandro Mendoza, chief of police in Bulacan province, said about six to 10 gunmen dressed as women, leapt out of a jeepney — a small bus used in the Philippines — and sprayed automatic fire onto the car.

"All of a sudden people with guns were shooting at us," Mrs. Puzon told a television interviewer from her hospital bed. "As for me, I pretended to be dead. That's why they did not shoot at me any more."

Puzon had been a prominent businessman in northern Luzon for years. His interests included logging, banking, shipping and fishing.

He was elected vice governor of Cagayan, Enrile's home province, in 1957 and in 1965 was elected to the Congress which then-President Ferdinand E. Marcos dissolved in 1972 in imposing martial law.

Puzon was elected to the National Assembly in 1984 under the New Society Movement banner. The assembly was abolished after Mrs. Aquino came to power on Feb. 25 when Marcos was ousted in a civilian-military uprising, which Enrile helped lead, following controversial elections.

Mrs. Aquino, at a cabinet meeting today, ordered negotiators to produce a cease-fire this month with the communist rebels, Ramon Mitra, one of the negotiators, said.

"The president has given us new instructions just now and she has directed us to produce a cease-fire this month," he told reporters. Asked if he thought this was possible, Mitra replied "I don't know."

Group attacks Lebanon bank

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A rocket-propelled grenade was fired at Lebanon's Central Bank in Moslem west Beirut today, police reported. The attack came a day after the Lebanese pound plunged to a record low against foreign currencies.

State-run Beirut television said an anonymous telephone caller claimed the attack on behalf of a new underground group calling itself The Black Panthers-The People's Poor.

The group, which announced its formation Monday in a statement to news offices in Beirut, vowed to strike at "monopolies and foreign currency speculators" responsible for the persisting decline of the Lebanese pound.

The grenade crashed into the sixth floor of the eight-story Central Bank building across the street from Prime Minister Rashid Karami's office in the commercial district of Hamra and slightly injured an employee, police said.

Casey Jones moves it

By ROSEMARY HARTY
Beaumont Enterprise

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — It was a story of friendship and a story of revenge. Casey Jones the moving man winks and lowers his voice as he tells the tale of the house he stole.

He's moved the wrong house before. And once, just once in his 70 years in the moving business, a barn got carted off by mistake. Jones put them back.

But it was a day way back in 1930-something when he deliberately picked up and hauled away a house, acting on impulse to help a friend who was bailing out of a bad marriage.

"She wasn't gettin' along too well with the old man," Jones says.

"So she calls me one day and asks, 'Casey, can you move a house in half an hour?'"

The woman owned the house; her husband held title to the land. Every morning the husband went to milk the cows at 5:30. It was the only chance to sneak a house out from under him.

Jones went out that night to plot the move.

"I drove by real quick, and just sneaked a look out of the corner of my eye," Jones says.

The job went off without a hitch. Friends in the neighborhood watched the abandoned husband drive up to his property.

"He just sat there in the truck and stared, about a half an hour," says Jones, chuckling at the memory. "The only thing left on the property was a privy."

The signs outside the office and on the Jones Boys' trucks say "We Move Anything," and no man has had a chance to call Garland Sublet "Casey" Jones, 78, a liar.

In a small office off Highland Avenue, Jones relays stories with relish, as delighted at the worn-out yarns he spins as a visitor who hears them for the first time.

His red-and-white cap won't sit straight on his head but favors a perky sideways angle. He won't help out on any moving jobs today, but he's clad in his usual uniform of blue coveralls with a tape measure jutting from a pocket.

Measuring is important in the moving business, when houses ride inches from the ground and high wires threaten from 17 feet above.

So is good planning. Most important, he says, is believing that you can move anything.

Even a 1 million-pound gas turbine, one of Jones' biggest jobs, isn't heavy when you know how to move it.

"When the Lord is with you," Jones likes to say, "you can move anything."

Jones adapted to the moving business smoothly, although he learned a trade in school and dreamed of becoming "the best pattern maker in the steel business."

But steel plants just couldn't match the 50 cents a day Jones' father, Kell, paid for a day of moving.

Kell Jones was a Tennessee tobacco farmer who came to Beaumont to ride the good times of the Spindletop oil boom just after the turn of the century. He joined a brother who made a business out of hauling the boilers and pipe Texas wildcatters needed to pump gold from the mud.

Many among Beaumont's Christian community know Jones from the Full Gospel Businessman's Fellowship, an organization he started in 1955. The fellowship has brought dozens of people from around the world to tell their stories, and Jones travels to give his testimony when he's not at a structural movers convention.

Jones is proud of the things he has moved — the gas turbine on the oil rig in the North Sea, a whole village on the move of Gov. Bill Daniel's ranch.

Group says kids should avoid fat

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association says that what's good for adults is good for children, and for the first time has broadened its dietary, exercise and anti-smoking guidelines to include youngsters.

In three position papers published in the current issue of the medical journal Circulation and released today, the heart association recommended that children should avoid excess fat and cholesterol in their diets, should exercise moderately and should, above all, stay away from cigarettes.

"We are advising all children to begin now creating the habit of healthy living," said Dr. William Wiedman, former chairman of the heart association's Council on Heart Disease in the Young.

Weidman, one of the people most directly responsible for the children's guidelines, said Monday at a news conference during the annual meeting of the American Heart Association that they are virtually identical to the guidelines for adults.

"It would have been a disaster if there had been one set of recommendations for people over 18 and one for people under 18," said Wiedman, professor of pediatrics at the Mayo Medical School in Rochester, Minn.

He said he advises parents to eliminate excess cholesterol, fat and salt from their children's diets, to get them into the habit of aerobic exercise, to be sure the children maintain a normal weight, "and really lean on them about cigarette smoking," one of the leading causes of coronary heart disease.

"It has to be a family effort," he said.

Lady Harvesters win, but boys lose

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — Palo Duro Coach Ed Smith was concerned about the hardcourt conditioning of football-playing team members prior to Tuesday night's basketball opener with the Pampa Harvesters.

"We're going to find out what kind of shape we're in," Smith said before the tipoff.

Well, at least one basketball-playing griddler, namely a William Thomas, was in excellent shape as he led the Dons to a come-from-behind 72-65 win over the Harvesters.

Thomas, a 6-2 senior who just returned from quarterbacking the Dons into the playoffs, came off the bench to score 19 points to lead all scorers. Thomas was a terror on the offensive glass and his 10-point fourth-quarter helped the Dons pull away.

Troy Owens, a 6-0 junior, led Pampa scorers with 13 points while 6-0 senior Lonnie Mills, another football player who just reported for practice this week, chipped in 12. Jason Farmer, a 6-2 junior, added 11 points for the Harvesters. Both Owens and Mills also pulled down 5 rebounds, but the Dons had an overall 29-22 rebounding edge.

Turnovers always seem to be a factor in an opener and last night's non-district game was no exception, but it was the Dons' quickness on a full-court press that gave them an edge in that department. Pampa committed 22 turnovers while PD was charged with 15 miscues.

The lead changed six times in the first ten minutes of the game, but Pampa threatened to run away from the Dons by building a 10-point lead in the second quarter. After Chris Evans scored off a steal to give the Harvesters a 34-24 bulge 2:33 before halftime, the high-leaping Thomas starting making his presence felt. Thomas converted a 3-point play, tossed in another foul shot and scored again on an offensive rebound as the Dons cut the gap to three, 37-34, at halftime.

With the score tied at 48-all after three quarters, the Thomas-led Dons started taking control at the 6:50 mark of the fourth quarter. PD ran off six straight points, four by Thomas, to take a 58-50 lead and the Harvesters never got closer than four points the rest of the way.

Robert Hale, Pampa's new head coach, was pleased for the most part with the overall performance of his Harvesters.

"I wanted them to be able to do two things — work hard and have fun. I feel like we accomplished both," Hale said. "I was disappointed that we let them get away just before halftime when we had them down by 10."

Others scoring for the Harvesters were Evans 8, Derrick Ryan 7, Mark Spain 6, Grant Gamblin 4 and Kerry Brown 4.

Ed Harper added 12 points for the Dons.

Pampa's next opponent is defending Class 5A champion Amarillo High Friday night in the Sandies' gym.

Pampa also lost both the sophomore and junior varsity games.

The score in the JV game was 73-52. Woods was Pampa's top scorer with 12 points. The Pampa sophomores lost 75-43. Trevor was high scorer for Pampa with 19 points.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters opened the basketball season last night with a convincing 72-49 win over Amarillo Caprock in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa's press forced 26 turnovers as the Lady Harvesters built an early lead.

Landee Cummings led Pampa in scoring from her guard spot with 16 points and also provided excellent leadership.

"Landee did a real fine job for us. She did a good job of bringing the ball down the floor and I was real pleased with her intensity," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols.

Jackie Reed and Hope Henson added 14 and 13 points respectively while Yolanda Brown chipped in 12 points and 13 rebounds. Reed led Pampa in assists with 5.

Others scoring for Pampa were Keitha Clark 5, Sara Miller 4, Camilla Brown 4, and Holly Hoganson 4.

Pampa lead by 9 at halftime and outscored the visitors 22-8 in the third quarter to break the game open.

The Lady Harvesters' next outing is Tuesday night against Sanford-Fritch with the game starting at 6:30 p.m. in the Fritch gym.

"Sanford-Fritch has a real strong club and they're picked to win their district," added Nichols. "I saw a lot of their girls play summer league basketball and they are real caliber players."

49ers continue struggling with ground game

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

The question to Bill Walsh was simple and so was the San Francisco coach's answer.

The question: Was the difference between the San Francisco offense that scored 43 points against St. Louis and just six against Washington simply the difference between the Cardinals and the Redskins?

The answer: "I'd say so, yes."

To put it more simply, the reason the two-time Super Bowl champs are 6-4-1 and struggling for a playoff berth is much more basic than whether Joe Montana has been at quarterback in just three games.

It's that they can't run the ball.

In only four of their 11 games have the 49ers averaged more than four yards per rush — against the Dolphins, Colts and Cardinals, three teams that are hardly the model of defense and against the Redskins, against whom they stopped trying early in the game.

One reason Montana was so effective in his return seven weeks after back surgery in the 43-17 victory over St. Louis is that San Francisco ran the ball — 33 carries for 184 yards with Joe Cribbs picking up 105 yards in 21 carries. Montana had to throw only 19 times, completing 13 for 270 yards and three touchdowns.

But Monday night against Washington, the 49ers ran just 18 times — for 83 yards — leaving Montana to throw 60 times, one reason the game lasted almost four hours. He completed 33 for 441 yards and became the second NFL quarterback to throw for over 400 yards without throwing a touchdown pass — Cleveland's Bernie Kosar did it just the Monday night before — and the first whose team failed to cross the goal line.

"We just didn't feel like we could run effectively," Walsh said. "They overpowered us up front."

Walsh was roundly criticized in the Bay Area for releasing the fumble-prone Wendell Tyler, the mainstay of the rushing game for four years. And Roger Craig isn't halfway to duplicating his 1,000-yard rushing-receiving double of last year — in fact, he may have become too battered by the work to repeat.

But up front is the basic source of the 49ers' trouble.

Four of the five interior offensive linemen have played together since Walsh took over in 1979. Tackle Keith Fahnhorst, guard Randy Cross and tight end Russ Francis are former All-Pro and center Fred Quillan has been to the Pro Bowl.

Honors keep rolling in for Boston's Clemens

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

KATY, Texas (AP) — Boston pitcher Roger Clemens and his family have celebrated winning the American League's Cy Young Award and Most Valuable Player Award the past two weeks.

Clemens and his wife, Debbie, are expecting their first child in four days and the couple is busy decorating the nursery and trophy rooms in their new home.

But awards and fatherhood won't soften Clemens' approach to pitching when he returns next season.

"I guess I just get mean when I get between the lines because that's the way I make my living," Clemens said Tuesday after becoming the first starting pitcher in 15 years to win the AL's MVP title.

Last week, Clemens became the third player in history to earn the AL Cy Young Award by a unanimous vote after leading the Red Sox to the World Series with a 24-4 record.

"When I go between the lines, I change," Clemens said. "It's not arrogance or cockiness. I just realize that I only get about 35 chances to go out there in a season and I have to make the most of each opportunity."

Clemens, 24, received 19 of 28 first place votes for 339 points in easily outdistancing Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees and Boston teammate Jim Rice in the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Mattingly, the 1985 MVP, had five first-place votes and 258 points but failed to become the first player to win the award in consecutive years since the Yankees' Roger Maris in 1960-61.

Rice, the league's 1978 MVP, was third with the other four first place votes and 241 points in the balloting by two writers in each of the 14 league cities.

Clemens made a spectacular comeback from shoulder surgery last August.

He won his first 14 games, set a major league record by striking out 20 batters against Seattle April 29 and became the Red Sox' slump breaker, winning 14 of his games following a Boston loss.

"I didn't plan it that way but it was a challenge that presented itself and I was fortunate enough to capitalize on the opportunities," Clemens said.

Clemens realizes that his awards will become targets for opposing hitters next season.

"I'll go to spring training in the best shape possible," Clemens said. "I know I have to be at the top of my game every start."

"When I go against a Reggie Jackson, George Brett or Don Mattingly, I'll have to have total concentration or I won't see the ball again."

Clemens is the third AL pitcher to win the Cy Young Award unanimously, joining Detroit's Denny McLain, 1968, and New York's Ron Guidry, 1978.

Vida Blue of the Oakland A's in 1971 was the last starting pitcher to win both the MVP and the Cy Young the same year.

Since the start of the MVP award in 1931, only six other pitchers have won both honors the same season — Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1963, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals and McLain of the Tigers, both in 1968, Rollie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981 and Willie Hernandez of the Tigers in 1984. Fingers and Hernandez were relievers.

Mattingly had another outstanding season as the Yankees finished second in the AL East.

Fightin' Irish having trouble winning wars

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Notre Dame has won eight of nine battles but only four wars.

Translated, that means the Irish have outgained eight of their nine opponents — all but Pittsburgh — but they pay off on points, not yards, and the record is only 4-5.

Coach Lou Holtz will tell you that Grantland Rice was wrong. It's not how you play the game, it's whether you win or lose. And Notre Dame outgained Penn State 418 yards to 314 on Saturday but lost 24-19.

"There were some very difficult losses to swallow in this season, and this was one of them," Holtz said.

During a three-game winning streak, which ended against Penn State, Notre Dame committed only two turnovers to eight for the opposition. In the other six games, the Irish turned the ball over 16 times and took it away 10.

And they have been absolutely snakebitten when they get into scoring position.

Three times each against Michigan (a 24-23 loss) and Michigan State (a 20-15 setback) Notre Dame reached the opponent's 20-yard line and came away empty-handed. Against Michigan they fumbled at the 6 and 15 and threw an interception in the end zone. Against Michigan State they fumbled at the 3, threw an interception at the 18 and missed a field goal after reaching the 20.

In a 28-10 loss to Alabama the Irish reached the 37, 36, 30 and 29 without putting points on the board. In a 10-9 loss to Pitt they reached the 37, 24, 24 and 20 without scoring.

And against Penn State they came away with nothing after reaching the 21 and the 6 and had to settle for field goals after first downs at the 6 and 22.

"Going into the season, I thought we had some problems and would be getting better, and we have been getting better," Holtz said. "I feel we have an excellent team. I didn't feel that way in the beginning of the season, but I feel that way now and I don't see how these kids could do anything but get better."

"It's frustrating, but a week from now everybody is going to be talking about what a disappointing season it was and how we let everybody down, but I feel that our players know that it will weigh itself out in the long run."

"I refuse to classify these athletes as losers. We have had some bad breaks. Other teams have made good plays against us and sometimes we don't do the little things that we need to."

Sports Forum

Warren Hasse

All of the controversy over drug testing of athletes must be very confusing to anyone ever kicked off a team for being caught smoking a cigarette. It's just another example of the changing times in the coaching business that has resulted in a great lessening of respect for coaches by the athletes and fans.

It used to be that no soft drinks or candy were permitted to be used by athletes during their season. Now they are fed these items at halftime, perhaps erroneously, for quick energy. Coaches prohibited eating of pancakes and waffles during their season; now they are fed as pre-game meal items. And the use of tobacco products of any kind led to automatic dismissal. Now many coaches smoke openly in front of the athletes and obviously have little objection to the use of tobacco products by their players. Volumes and volumes of authenticated medical reports of the damage inflicted upon an individual and his associates through the use of these products has little effect on the men charged with the well-being of these young bodies. These men and women who are supposed to be models of athletic prowess, demanding rigid discipline from their young charges, cannot discipline themselves when it comes to tobacco use, thus setting the poorest of examples.

Last Saturday coaches could be seen smoking on the sidelines as their fifth and sixth grade boys were participating in the Optimist Football Tournament at Harvester park. I walked into a high school gymnasium last season and viewed the coach standing in front of his team smoking a cigarette as he talked to the squad assembled in the stands. The first coach I ever saw smoke openly in front of his players was Babe Curfman when he was at Pampa HS. He'd try to cup the no-no from sight, but a stream of smoke revealed the lack of self-discipline, which overflowed into his team.

Unless you could get through the front door and four rooms to the den, plus getting past his wife, you never would know Tom Tipps to have smoked. And Clifton McNeely used a victory cigar, ala

Red Auerbach, in his early coaching days, always out of sight of the athletes, a practice he discarded quickly. And I cannot now think of another successful head coach I have known who uses tobacco. I'm sure there have been some, but they have been discreet enough to avoid the double-standard, hypocritical view it offers their athletes about team rules and regulations.

In a letter to the Editor of The Little Harvester school newspaper, published last Friday, a member of the Pampa ISD athletic staff responds to complaints by the student body about rules concerning use of tobacco products on the PHS campus. He writes:

"The administration also tried to allow the students to keep their privilege of tobacco use by strategically placing spittoons around the school grounds. However, students misused their privilege by continuing to spit on the walls and grounds and throwing cigarette butts everywhere except in the trash.

"By attempting to discourage tobacco use by the students at school, we as adult teachers hope it will discourage this addiction that we may have already acquired and that we perhaps learned too late. Perhaps this is one reason we are called teachers — to teach you what we did not learn."

The role of coach carries even more responsibility than the word teacher, and certainly places the person with that title in an even more responsible position because of the longer and closer association with the athletes. We would urge all coaches to take the necessary time for a self-evaluation and career-evaluation tonight concerning their own tobacco use and its relationship to their young charges.

Then, join millions of others tomorrow in The Great American Smokeout. It might make you a better coach, doing wonders for your own self-confidence and pride, to say nothing of the health benefits for those who have to associate with you every day... your athletes, your staff, your friends, your families, and yourself.

Pampa soccer roundup

Eight Pampa teams participated in last weekend's Amarillo Soccer League action.

The U-8 Thundercats, sponsored by Radcliff Electric and Simmons and Simmons, shut out the Sharks 13-0. The U-10 Bulls, sponsored by The Process Co., fell to the Javelinas 6-1, but rebounded on Sunday to defeat the Organizers 5-2.

The U-10 Renegades, sponsored by Thomas Automotive and A Cut Above, coasted to a 9-1 win over the Jammers II. The U-10 Tigers, sponsored by Bowers Ranch, came back after being down 2-0 with under four minutes left in the game to tie The Mean Soccer Machine 2-2.

The U-10 Cougars, sponsored by Malcolm Hinkle and Mr. Gatti's, bombed the Bombers 14-0.

The U-12 Rowdies, sponsored by First National Bank and Enron, kicked the Canyon Cosmos 10-3. The U-12 Panthers lost to the Dawgs while the U-12 Warhawks, sponsored by Bob Finney, defeated the Excels 9-6 in a fierce battle of two determined teams.

The Pampa teams will be traveling to the Amarillo Soccer Arena at the fairgrounds each weekend until mid-January. Matches are played on Saturday and Sunday.

Pampa coaches are Mark Kinney, Rick Welch, Rick Lemmons, Nick Slaymaker, Terry Bixler, Scott Smiles and Durwood Dunlap.

Pampa soccer officials urged fans to come out and support the local youngsters.

Bellard wants Houston job

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas A&M and Mississippi State head coach Emory Bellard says he is interested in the head coaching job at the University of Houston.

Bellard, who led the Aggies to a 48-27 and a share of the 1975 SWC title, has been out of coaching the past year but says he'll return next season.

"I'm going to get back in it next fall at the college level," said Bellard, who has lived in north Houston the past year. "I'm going to play it very deliberate. I want a spot where I'd have a 50-50 shot of making a good showing."

Bellard, 59, coached for six seasons at A&M and seven years at Mississippi State. If selected, he would replace Houston Coach Bill Yeoman, who is stepping down after 25 years at the school at the end of this season.

Bellard called the Houston job "interesting."

"Houston has a chance to recruit very well because of its location, and that's a big part of it. I haven't heard anything from anyone over there but I understand my name has been mentioned around."

Houston interim athletic director Michael Johnson said Bellard, former Houston Gamblers Coach Jack Pardee and Philadelphia Eagles defensive coordinator Wade Phillips are among names forwarded to the search committee.

Tulsa Coach Don Morton, meanwhile, said he was not interested in the Houston job. Morton's Hurricanes have just completed a 7-4 season and Morton is considered a leading candidate for the head coaching job at Wisconsin.

Johnson said the search committee was working on a mid-December deadline for naming a new coach.

Chamber sponsoring cage tournament

Brackets for the first annual Pampa Chamber of Commerce Invitational Basketball Tournament have been announced by Tournament Director Bill Harris. The event will be held in McNeely Fieldhouse Thanksgiving weekend, with six games being played Friday, Nov. 28, and six more on Saturday, Nov. 29 in the double-elimination tourney.

Included in the field are a state champion and another state finalists from last year, as the participants represent all classifications from 2A to 5A.

The defending state champion is 2A Morton taking that title with a 73-59 victory over Dripping Springs. The Indians are coached by Tony Mason, president of the Texas High School Basketball Coaches Association. And they return all-state 6-4 senior Jerry Joyce in a bid to repeat. Morton faces Plainview in Game 2 at 12:45 p.m. Friday. A 5A school, Plainview reached post season play last season under first-year coach Carl Irlbeck, and anticipates even greater success this season.

Opening play at 11 a.m. will be another 5A school, Amarillo Tascosa, which will face perennial state powerhouse Dimmitt. The Bobcats reached the 3A state finals last year, losing to Cleveland, 57-56, thus denying Coach Kenneth Cleveland still another state crown despite a 32-6 year. The top half of the eight-man field appears exceedingly tough.

Pampa opens play at 2:30 Friday, in game three. Providing the opposition will be 5A Big Spring. Both schools are starting the season with new head coaches. Concluding first-round play at 4:15, 5A Amarillo Palo Duro, hoping for momentum from a successful football season, goes against 1-4A member Lubbock Dunbar. Losers of games one and two meet at 6 p.m., and losers of games three and four battle at 7:45, to conclude the first day of play.

Saturday action begins at 11 a.m. and continues at 12:45 with first-round winners battling to see who can reach the championship game, set for 8 p.m. Meanwhile play will continue all day for seventh, fifth and third place awards.

The tournament is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the Pampa High School Athletic Department. The 23-member Chamber Sports Committee, chaired by Randy Harris, is conducting the event, with plans to make it an annual affair. Pampa business firms are participating as guest hosts for all the teams who, along with their fans, are expected to join the holiday weekend in Pampa.

Wheeler girls hold off Wellington, 42-37

WELLINGTON — Marlo Hartman scored 15 points, 12 of them from the field, as the Wheeler varsity girls basketball team stopped Wellington 42-37 Tuesday here.

DeAnn Jolly posted four field goals and three free throws for the Lady Mustangs and pulled down 15 rebounds. Hartman grabbed 12 rebounds.

Wheeler, 1-0, took a 14-9 lead in the first quarter and Wellington never quite closed the gap. At halftime, the score was 22-19. In the third quarter, Wellington, 0-1, outscored the Lady Mustangs 10-9, but Wheeler held a 31-29 edge.

In the final stanza, Wheeler came back with 11 points while holding Wellington to eight.

Penny Baker collected four steals and Tera Henderson "set up our offense and handled the ball well." Wheeler coach Jan Newland remarked, Newland expressed satisfaction with the victory, but added "We can play a lot better."

In the girls junior varsity game, Wellington edged Wheeler 30-28. Dede Dorman scored 19 points to lead the Wheeler JV and played most of the game with a broken left hand. The fracture was not discovered until the teams returned to Wheeler, Newland said, and apparently occurred in the first quarter of the game.

The Wheeler boys varsity basketball team has postponed opening the basketball season as long as the football team remains in the playoffs.

Wheeler — 14 - 8 - 9 - 11 — 42

Wellington — 9 - 10 - 10 - 8 — 37

Wheeler — Hartman, 6-3-1; Wallace, 2-4-4; Jolly, 4-3-2.

Wellington — Duncan, 6-1-3; Daniel, 3-0-4; Williams, 3-0-4

Kelton High cagers open basketball season with doubleheader victories over Darrouzette DARROUZETTE — After taking an early lead, the Kelton boys varsity held off a determined Darrouzette squad for a 57-54 victory Tuesday night. Perry Alves led the Kelton Lions with 24 points.

"We had an eight to nine point lead once or twice, but they kept coming back," Dave Johnson, Kelton coach, said.

Kelton jumped to 19-14 lead in the first quarter, but the Longhorns rallied to close the gap to two, 28-26, at the intermission. After three periods, the Lions held a 46-41 lead.

"We looked a little sloppy," Johnson said of his Lions' second victory of the two-game-old season. "We shot the ball well, but we made mental mistakes that let them back in the game."

Chad Caddel also hit double figures for the Lions with 18 points and five steals. Brett Buckingham led the Lions in rebounding with seven.

Kelton will play in the Mobeetie Tournament Thursday at 2:30 p.m.

Kelton — 19 - 9 - 18 - 11 — 57

Darrouzette — 14 - 12 - 15 - 13 — 54

Kelton — Alves, 7 - 10 - 1; Caddel, 9 - 0 - 2; Buckingham, 3 - 3 - 3; Andy Singleton, 2 - 0 - 2; Scott Bodine, 1 - 0 - 1.

Darrouzette — Duke, 12 - 2 - 2; Born, 1 - 2 - 3; Bonham, 5 - 2 - 0; Keith, 2 - 0 - 2; Eastep, 2 - 0 - 5; Harris 2 - 0 - 3.

The Kelton girls varsity was still playing volleyball when their basketball season was supposed to start, but that ended Saturday. They had one day to practice before Tuesday's game at Darrouzette.

Even with that short preparation time, the Lady Lions still halted the Longhorn feds, 58-50.

Darrouzette stayed close during the first two quarters and trailed by two points, 22-20 at the half. But the Lady Lions uncorked an 22-point outburst in the third quarter while limiting Darrouzette to 12 points.

Janette Hink led the Lady Lions with 18 points, 16 of them from the field. Others in double figures included Michele Keelin with 16 and Leslie Johnson with 12.

Hink and Johnson led the rebounding for Kelton with seven each and Keelin topped the steal stats with two.

The girls are scheduled to play at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Mobeetie Tournament.

Kelton — 8 - 14 - 22 - 14 — 58

Darrouzette — 6 - 14 - 12 - 18 — 50

Kelton — Hink, 8 - 2 - 3; Keelin, 8 - 0 - 3; Johnson, 6 - 0 - 3; Wanda Taylor, 2 - 0 - 3; Sue Keelin, 3 - 0 - 1; Melinda Davidson, 1 - 0 - 1.

Darrouzette — Harris, 9 - 5 - 3; Smallwood, 7 - 4 - 3; Maurer, 3 - 0 - 2; Crouch, 1 - 0 - 0; Wheatley, 1 - 0 - 2.

Lakers rally past Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks have spent much of the young NBA season specializing in close losses. Tuesday night was no exception.

They suffered their first home loss this season when they wasted a seven-point fourth-quarter lead in a 114-110 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

The defeat was the Mavericks' fifth loss in 10 games. Those losses have come by one, three, four (twice) and seven (in overtime) points.

Still, Dallas coach Dick Motta said his team is not getting discouraged, at least not yet.

"We've been right there with all the games," Motta said after watching his team drop to 4-1 at home.

Daughters of Republic boost Texas

By CARLOS VIDAL GRETH
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — On Feb. 19, 1846, Anson Jones, the last president of Texas, ended the ceremony that made his nation a state with the declaration: "The Republic of Texas is no more."

The spirit, however, lives on in the hearts of the 5,200 women who belong to the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

The Daughters, a patriotic society dedicated to perpetuating the memory of those who achieved the independence of Texas, is not for everyone.

"We're not snooty — just proud," said Opal Hollis, former president general. "You have to be seriously interested in the people who made this state what it is."

Membership is limited to women. Men may join the Sons of the Republic of Texas, youngsters the Children of the Republic of Texas.

Also, members must have had an ancestor living in Texas during the colonial period, 1821-1836, or during the days of the Republic, 1836-46.

The Daughters won't take your word for it. You must prove kinship with birth, marriage or death records for every generation between you and your forebear.

The genealogical research required to join can take months, but members say it often proves personally rewarding.

Michelle Frizzell, 29, joined the Daughters four years ago. Her great-great-grandmother, Ellen Boren Robertson, a daughter of a citizen of the Republic, was responsible for selecting the bluebonnet as the state flower.

"Ellen loved the Indian paintbrush," Mrs. Frizzell said. "But she decided she loved blue more."

Mrs. Frizzell, state chairman of the publicity committee, can claim an even more illustrious ancestor in Gen. Edward Burleson, elected vice president under Sam Houston in 1841.

"When I was a little girl, my grandmother told me about the family," she said. "Now I tell my first- and third-graders the same stories about the crazy Burlesons, and how they chased Mexicans and fought Indians. It's a favorite bedtime deal around my house."

The Daughters of the Republic, 300 of whom live in the Austin area, cherish the heritage of all Texans as much as individual family histories.

The society is charged by the state with the maintenance of the Alamo in San Antonio, including the Long Barrack museum and Texas History Research Library on the same grounds. The Daughters also operate the French Legation in Austin, which the state of Texas bought in 1945.

The organization manages the Daughters of the Republic of Texas Museum on the southeast corner of the Capitol grounds and the "Cradle," the building in Galveston where Hally Bryan and Betty Balingier conceived the idea for the organization in 1891. Funds for the upkeep and renovation come solely from the purses and fund-raising efforts of the Daughters.

Texans can thank the patriotic women for saving the Alamo, the land where the Battle of San Jacinto was fought, and other historic sites from developers and decrepitude. They also have fostered research in state history with scholarships, publications, educational programs, libraries and museums.

The number of women who want to support the Daughters in their efforts increases each year. The organization has doubled in size since 1970, and women are signing up at a rate of two a day. The Sesquicentennial has attracted more members — almost 1,000 this year — than any event since the founding of the organization.

"History has become OK again," said Karen Thompson, custodian general. "We're not seen as dusty, funny old people any longer. The Sesquicentennial made it all right to care about the past."

Though their interests lie in antiquity, the Daughters has grown younger in recent years. The average age of members has decreased to the mid-40s, about a decade younger than in the last generation.

"Our members are just as concerned with modern women's issues and equal rights as any women's group," Thompson, 42, said.

Shannon, Simmons honored at faculty reception

Beth Shannon, chemistry instructor at Clarendon College - Pampa Center, was selected as 1986 Educator of the Year at the college's faculty reception Monday at the Pampa Community Building.

Larry Gilbert, director of the Pampa Center, said Shannon was chosen for the honor for her work that "goes beyond the call of duty." Shannon teaches chemistry, anatomy and physiology at the community college, yet also takes from her personal time to clean up and organize the college's laboratory, Gilbert said. He pointed out that the Educator of the Year award goes to "one person to represent all persons."

Paul Simmons, chairman of the advisory board, received special recognition and a clock plaque honoring his longtime service to the Pampa Center, also.

The faculty reception, hosted by Coronado Community Hospital, is held yearly in appreciation of the Clarendon College - Pampa Center faculty members. Most of the faculty is made up of part-time instructors who also hold down full-time jobs, Gilbert explained. "They are the lifeblood of this institution," he said. "They are the people who really deserve the biggest hand tonight."

Shannon, right, accepts plaque from Gilbert.

Opening the entertainment program were round dancers led by instructor Russell Hollis. The dancers demonstrated what they had learned at round dancing classes, a part of the college's community courses. Also featured were The Harvesters Four, a quartet from the Mary Ellen & Harvester Church of Christ, and Richard Gresham of Clarendon, a music major from the main campus.

Dorothy McMurtry, elementary and intermediate bridge instructor at Pampa Center, spoke on her participation as an instructor at the college. "I have been associated with Clarendon College since its inception - from its first faltering steps to its present success," she said. "It's the best thing that ever happened to Pampa."

Stacey Ladd spoke as a representative of the part-time students who attend Pampa Center. A student for 1½ years, Ladd said, "I was pretty apprehensive about going back to school after so many years." Now a wife and mother, Ladd had not attended school since her graduation from high school in 1979. Though she had anticipated many situations that would arise when she went back to school, Ladd said she was "pleasantly surprised and impressed by the faculty."

"You are what has made Clarendon College such an asset to our community," she said.

Steve Young, a fulltime student majoring in secondary education, spoke on how the Pampa Center is helping him work towards a degree after he was laid off from Halliburton. "The instructors I have are exceptional," he said. He was especially impressed by one instructor who told him that "she's here to see students pass, not see how many she can fail."

"I'm looking forward to the next three semesters," he added.

Donna Holland, divorced and mother of five children, is an example of Pampa Center's successful secretarial science program. She told of how one of Pampa Center's full-time instructors, Pat Johnson, encouraged her to go back to school after her divorce. Finally, Holland was convinced and last April graduated from the nine-month secretarial science program. Holland now has a position as assistant manager for the Caprock Apartments, she said, "because of the skills that Clarendon College gave to me. Thank you for helping me."

"We have a natural resource here," she added. "I encourage Pampa to tap it."

One day without cigarettes can change a smoker's life

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow will mark the 10th Annual Great American Smokeout, an upbeat, good-humored, one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours — just to prove they can do it.

The idea was conceived by the American Cancer Society, which insists that anyone who can live without a cigarette for 24 hours can quit forever. So, if you're hooked on cigarettes (or cigars) and you really want to quit, why not start tomorrow — just for 24 hours?

The following information may motivate you: According to John F. Banzhaf III, executive director of ASH (Action on Smoking and Health) in Washington, D.C., lung cancer is the single largest contributor to the total cancer death rate. It accounts for 25 percent of all cancer deaths in the United States. It is estimated that 85 percent of all lung cancer cases are due to cigarette smoking. As a smoker, you are 10 times more likely to die of lung cancer than a non-smoker.

This year there will be 100,000 lung cancer cases among men and 49,000 among women. Of these, 89,000 men and 41,000 women will die of the disease. The number of women who will die of lung cancer is increasing at an alarming rate. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women — now it's lung cancer!

A word about smoking-related diseases — emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease. This year an estimated 350,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. deaths in World

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

War II: it is eight times as many people who die in automobile accidents.

A congressional study has just reported that health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $100 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured. (And how does one measure the amount of heartache, remorse and guilt suffered as a result of a preventable, self-induced tragedy?)

What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it actually damaging to non-smokers to be in the presence of those who are smoking? Yes! Furthermore, studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt.

"How about the rights of smokers?" you ask. Of course they are entitled to smoke if they wish. But they will have to find a place where they can smoke to their hearts' content without offending those who can't tolerate it.

"Quitting cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers have told me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest way. Cutting down is less traumatic, but the temptation to smoke is often too powerful to resist while smoking just one, two or three cigarettes a day.

Those who are heavily addicted may require professional help to break the habit.

So, if you're hooked on cigarettes, or have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow — just for 24 hours?

It won't be easy, but I can promise you, it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you.

The American Cancer Society has put together a wonderful booklet, "How to Stay Quit Through the Holidays." It's free. Pick one up at your local American Cancer Society office, or write for one, and please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. The address is in your telephone book.

P.S. A favor, please? If you quit tomorrow even for 24 hours, I want to hear from you. Then write again and let me know how long you were able to stay clean. Good luck. Keep me posted. I care.

Information on leadership awards

Ten high school seniors who have distinguished themselves in the world of work will be honored with a $1,000 scholarship each in a new leadership awards competition launched by Careers magazine. Winners will also receive a ring specially created by ArtCarved Class Rings, one of the sponsors contributing to the awards program.

Any graduating high school senior between 16 and 19 years of age is eligible to enter if he or she has worked at least 10 hours a week during the school year or full time during the summer (at least five days a week for six consecutive weeks), as well as any senior who has started a business.

Entries, accompanied by a 500-word statement about the student's work experience, must be postmarked by Jan. 1, 1987. Final selection of the 10 winners will be determined by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The awards ceremony will take place on April 7 at the headquarters of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D.C. where representatives of the White House and other dignitaries will be present.

Full information on the Careers Magazine Leadership Awards, as well as official entry forms, may be obtained from Rheams Diamond Shop in the Pampa Mall.

Quest for cheese balls

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

A reader called in last week asking if we would print a cheese ball recipe. She had lost her recipe and with the holidays coming up, she was in need of another one.

"Sure," I told her. "It will be in next Wednesday's paper." Little did I know what I was getting myself into.

First, I didn't realize that cheese balls have more than one definition until I began looking up recipes in some of my books. Believe me, there's more than one way to make a cheese ball. There's all kinds of ways to make cheese balls!

Cheese balls can be a combination of cheeses mixed and rolled into a ball, then rolled into some kind of outer coating. That's one way to make a cheese ball - with endless combinations.

Another way, which is what I had in mind when talking to the caller, are the cheese balls that are a pastry. These too are called cheese balls in the recipe books.

What I had thought would be a simple little recipe to turn on my food page one day has run into a quest — the quest for the right cheese ball.

Here are several recipes for cheese balls. Most of them I have tried and found to be good. The recipes come from two local cookbooks, The Heritage Art Club Cookbook, and Our Favorites, Pampa Garden Club's new cookbook.

CHEESE BALL
Crystal Cruzan - Heritage Art Club
3 (3 oz.) pkgs. cream cheese
1 (10 oz.) pkg. cheddar
Garlic salt
Chili powder

Finely chopped pecans
Softened cheese to room temperature. Work together until thoroughly mixed. Sprinkle in garlic powder to taste. Mix well.

Make into ball and roll in chili powder which has been sprinkled on wax paper, then roll in nuts. Refrigerate a few hours before slicing.

Serve with favorite crackers.
Fay Palmer submitted this recipe for a spicier cheese ball to the Pampa Garden Club cookbook.

MINI CHEDDAR CHEESE BALLS
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
8 oz. cheddar cheese, shredded (2 cups)
1 t. dry mustard
1 t. Worcestershire sauce
½ t. cayenne
Garnish, dried parsley flakes, finely chopped nuts

Beat together cheeses, mustard, Worcestershire sauce and cayenne until smooth. Refrigerate until easy to handle. Shape rounded tablespoonsful into balls. Roll in garnish until coated. If desired, place into small foil baking cups or in two-inch rounds of foil folded up. Serve at room temperature to spread on crackers. Store airtight in refrigerator. Will keep four weeks. Makes 18. (About ½ cup of garnish coats 18 balls.)

Nadine Hill's Cheese Puff Balls recipe in Heritage Art Club's cookbook is the pastry form that is deep fried.

CHEESE PUFF BALLS
¼ c. grated cheddar cheese
1 t. grated onion
2 t. flour
¼ t. salt
1-2 drops hot sauce
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
3 T. fine bread crumbs

Oil for deep frying
Mix cheese, onion, flour, salt and sauce. Fold in egg white. Shape in small balls and roll in bread crumbs. Fry in oil at 385 degrees for two or three minutes; drain on paper towels.

Our managing editor Jeff Langley waxes eloquent about his mother's cheese balls with an olive in the center. This recipe submitted by Zella Mae Gray in the Heritage Art Club cookbook features the olive, also.

CHEESE BALLS
1 c. flour
1 stick margarine
1 t. paprika
2 c. grated cheese
About 40 stuffed or manzanilla pitted olives, toweled and drained
Cream flour and margarine; add rest of ingredients. Make 40 little balls, ½-inch in diameter. Wrap around olives, bake 15 minutes at 375 degrees. These can be made ahead and frozen, if needed.

One of my favorite cheese ball recipes is actually called Sausage Balls. Pauline Carlson included her recipe in Pampa Garden Club's cookbook.

SAUSAGE BALLS
1 lb. sausage
1 lb. cheddar cheese
3 c. biscuit mix
6 drops hot sauce
* Mix all ingredients. Roll in balls and bake at 350 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes.

I discovered — the hard way — that you cannot make this recipe with turkey sausage. It just doesn't have enough fat in it to hold the balls together.

I hope that somewhere in this collection of recipes is the one our reader lost. If not, let us know and we'll do our best to find the right one.

'Smokeout' plans underway

Pampa volunteers of the American Cancer Society are wrapping up loose ends as they prepare for the local observance of The Great American Smokeout on Thursday.

Theme for the 10th annual Smokeout is "Take A Day Off From Smoking," starting what American Cancer Society members hope will be a lifelong commitment to stop smoking.

Locally, volunteers will be manning information tables during banking hours at Citizens Bank & Trust, First National Bank and Security Federal Savings and Loan. They will be handing out literature and "Kiss me, I Don't Smoke" buttons.

From 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Shirley Woodbridge and Betty Tom Graham will be offering coffee and doughnuts at the Pampa Mall and inviting people who have quit smoking in the past 10 years to come by and "walk the red carpet."

Smokeout chairman Jim Fink-enbinder said tanks driven by members of the National Guard will be positioned around town Thursday with the National Guardsman offering literature and buttons to those who stop by. State Representative Foster

Whaley is a supporter of The Great American Smokeout. "I encourage anyone who smokes to stop (that day). It's a good time to stop."

Whaley and two of his fellow representatives have offices in what has been named "the no-smoking suite" in Austin, he said, and a plaque on the door says so. Whaley also has plaques on his desk that say "No smoking, please," and "Thank-you for not smoking, the life you save might be mine."

"I recognize the right of people to smoke if they want to," Whaley, who has never smoked, said. "But non-smokers are forced to stay in a situation where others smoke." He says he's concerned about the proven affects of secondary smoke to non-smokers.

"It's just a matter of time when people won't be allowed to smoke in public. Many restaurants already have smoking and non-smoking sections. I can see a time when smoking in hospitals will be forbidden," he added. "There are already ordinances (restricting smoking) in Dallas and Austin."

A few tips for those who decide to quit smoking during the Smokeout Thursday include:

- Hide all ashtrays, matches, etc.
- Lay in a supply of sugarless gum, carrot sticks, etc.
- Drink lots of liquids, but pass up coffee and alcohol.
- Tell everyone you're quitting for the day.
- When the urge to smoke hits, take a deep breath, hold it for 10 seconds and release it slowly.
- Exercise to relieve the tension.
- Try the "buddy system," and ask a friend to quit, too.

Shultz claims nuclear bargaining to be tough

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State George P. Shultz says negotiating nuclear weapons reductions with the Soviets will be "tough and probably drawn-out" because Moscow wants to hold off agreements until all issues are settled.

But Shultz said this week the U.S. anti-missile program and a buildup of U.S. nuclear and conventional forces would force Soviet military planners to consider reducing their nuclear arsenals.

While Shultz was counseling patience in a Monday speech at the University of Chicago, a U.S. official in Washington disclosed that senior American and Soviet negotiators had tentatively agreed to meet early next month in Geneva.

This means the two sides will not put their talks on reducing nuclear weapons and on the controversial U.S. "Star Wars" missile defense program on hold until mid-January.

The United States and Soviet Union are known to be in virtual agreement on dismantling their medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, but the Soviets want that to be part of a broader agreement that also limits the U.S. anti-missile program to laboratory research.

Shultz, describing the Soviet position in his Chicago speech, said: "Make no mistake about it. Tough, and probably drawn-out negotiations will still be required if we are to nail down any formal agreement on offensive force reductions. For example, the Soviets are now linking agreement on anything with agreement on everything."

The Reagan administration has rejected any such deal. Shultz said the Soviets wanted to restrict U.S. research on anti-missile defense "in a way that would cripple the American SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative) program. This we cannot accept."

His description of the Soviet stance suggested Moscow had hardened its position on missile reductions even though Reagan and Gorbachev "set a new arms control agenda" in Reykjavik.

The Soviets in the past had tried to restrain the U.S. anti-missile program. But Shultz suggested Moscow was linking all arms control issues that are under negotiation to their stance on Star Wars.

The last round of negotiations in Geneva ended last week without agreement. But the Soviets proposed the three principal negotiators for both sides meet Dec. 2-5 in the Swiss city.

The U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said this represents a "de facto" extension of the formal negotiations. "It's kind of perplexing because basically they gave us stonewalling through the last round," the official said.

Chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman and his two principal deputies, Ron Lehman and Maynard Glitman, will hold the Dec. 2-5 session with a Soviet delegation headed by Viktor P. Karpov, the chief Soviet negotiator.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Monday night the United States would never trade Star Wars or balanced conventional strength in Europe for a new arms control accord with the Soviet Union.

Taft Broadcasting to sell TV stations

CINCINNATI (AP) — Taft Broadcasting Co. says it will absorb an estimated $50 million loss from its sale of five independent television stations, including one in Texas, to Virginia-based TVX Broadcast Group Inc.

Cincinnati-based Taft has announced that it will sell the stations for $240 million.

The stations, which have no network affiliation, are WTAF, Philadelphia; WDCA, Washington, D.C.; WCIX, Miami; KTXA, Fort Worth-Dallas; and KTXH, Houston.

Taft is selling the stations to concentrate on its operation of network-affiliated television stations, said Charles S. Mechem Jr., Taft's chairman and chief executive officer.

"In light of this emphasis, it seemed proper that our independent be sold to someone whose major focus is in this increasingly specialized segment of the broadcast business," Mechem said in a prepared statement. "TVX is such a company."

Taft said its preliminary estimate is that the deal will result in a charge to earnings of $45 million to $50 million, or $4.80 to $5.40 per share. However, Taft said the sale will improve future earnings by reducing interest expense and other charges related to the stations.

Polk Laffoon, a public relations spokesman at Taft's Cincinnati headquarters, declined to say how much the company paid to buy the stations. Analysts estimated that the five Taft stations had a combined worth of between $303 million and $600 million.

Taft officials said the company plans to use proceeds from the sale to reduce existing long-term debt. Selling the stations will improve Taft's earnings by cutting debt and eliminating depreciation and amortization costs of the stations, officials said.

Taft also owns seven network-affiliated television stations, 47.5 percent of the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team, is co-owner of 16 cable television stations and holds shares of several amusement parks. The company also produces and distributes television programming.

The deal is subject to approval by the Federal Communications Commission and other regulators. TVX, which owns independent stations in eight cities, will be required to shed one because federal regulations limit a company's holdings to 12 stations.

San Angelo group lobbying for Israel

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A Baptist minister and about 30 Christians have formed a caucus aimed at garnering political support for Israel.

The group of Christians teamed with the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a political lobbying group, to try to ensure that Israel remains a Middle East power.

The caucus, formed in September, is believed to be one of the first such groups in the nation with a Christian chairman and a primarily Christian membership.

Members say their spiritual interest in Israel leads naturally to practical, political support of the country.

Dr. James Miller, pastor of Park Heights Baptist Church and the caucus' chairman, said his involvement is spiritual, not political. He said he perceives a link between Judeo-Christian interests and enabling Jews to build a strong Israel.

"It's just good politics to support a democratic government," said caucus member Kay McDonald. "Israel is the only democratic and stable government in the Middle East. It is our only reliable ally. It keeps us from having to keep a strong military presence in the area, which would cost us more than financial aid."

Politics prompted the organization of the pro-Israel caucus in San Angelo, said Merrie White, a Christian community coordinator for AIPAC.

She said the 21st Congressional District race between Pete Snelson and Lamar Smith drew AIPAC's interest.

UT names frat review panel

AUSTIN (AP) — A 23-member commission, including students, faculty, staff and alumni, has been appointed to conduct a comprehensive study of fraternal organizations at the University of Texas at Austin.

The commission was announced this week by UT-Austin President William Cunningham, who selected the members.

"While it is clear that many fraternal organizations have had a positive impact on the university community, it is also evident that the role, nature and activities of these student groups suggest periodic review and discussion," Cunningham said.

A Travis County grand jury is reviewing the case of a UT fraternity pledge who died of an alcohol overdose after a fraternity-related activity.

Cunningham said the commission, appointed Monday, will specifically review hazing and alcohol abuse.

The commission will review Greek letter organizations, as well as campus groups such as the Orange Jackets, Silver Spurs, Spooks, Tejas Club and Texas Cowboys.

Astro-Graph

Nov. 20, 1986

I've good news for you, Scorpio. It looks like your bank account will be much fatter by your next birthday than it is at the time of this year's celebration. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The smaller pieces will slip into place today once you perceive the general outline. Don't try to put the details first. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Confidential information given to you today will eventually prove to be to your benefit. However, secrecy is essential for the present. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your assessment of a situation is especially keen today, so rely upon your judgment. You won't miss any relevant clues when sifting through the evidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In career situations today, your greatest asset is your ability to take a nominal opportunity and enlarge it into something really worthwhile. Use it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) What may appear to be a moderate gesture of good will from a loved one might turn out to be something far grander than you first imagined.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're in the thoughts today of someone with whom you have powerful emotional links. This dear friend is ready to help you where needed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Paint your canvas with bold strokes and bright colors today. Your bigger ideas will do better than any of your lesser ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Most days, we have to work very hard for what we get, but this is one of those times when you may do well materially without having to put in too much effort.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't be hesitant to take control today where you see persons who are supposed to be in charge just floating. If you can do better, do it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A project that interests not only you, but several others as well, will meet with success today if everyone involved looks out for one another.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you may have to influence a small, select group. If this is true, single out the key people. Work closely with them instead of with the majority.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is the time for Librans to try to figure out ways to expand upon good things they already have in the mill, especially the moneymakers.

Whetstine displays the 1,905 carat sapphire that has been appraised at $2.28 million.

Gem buyer isn't running out to purchase any Rolls-Royce

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer

LONGVIEW (AP) — Roy Whetstine, who pulled what experts call the world's largest uncut sapphire out of a grab box, isn't running out to buy a Rolls-Royce with the profits of his $10 purchase.

Whetstine is putting the 1,905-carat gem, bought from a rock dealer who thought it was one of his less attractive junk stones from Idaho, in a trust fund for his two sons.

"We're normal people and we work for a living," said Whetstine, a wholesale gem dealer. "It's phenomenal that a dadgum little pebble in God's universe found its way to us."

Since Whetstine went public with his find earlier this month, he and agent Jim Griffin, a Longview jeweler, have fielded preliminary inquiries from representatives of two Middle Easterners and an investors' group from Chicago.

Whetstine has a simple explanation for how he obtained the stone — "a miracle."

"I really, truly believe God was behind it all," he said.

The sapphire, officially named "The Life and Pride America's Star," was a fairly well guarded secret for nine months until Whetstine had experts verify that he had indeed picked up one of history's most extraordinary gems.

The name summarizes how Whetstine, 47, regards the stone. "The life is the security it will represent for my boys and the fact that I don't have to worry about their lives being taken care of," said Whetstine, who has undergone 10 heart bypasses. "Pride (as) in pride of ownership and pride that it was found in this country."

The stone, which has been appraised at $2.28 million, is on the market for $1.5 million.

"That's not to say that if we get a couple of fellows trying to get it, the price couldn't go higher," Whetstine said.

Just how big is the stone?

"The average size of rough (stone) that is found is 12 to 15 carats and under," Whetstine said. "This stone weighs 1,905 carats."

According to Whetstine, the only two sapphires comparable to his sons' are the Star of India and the Star of Queensland, both on display at the Smithsonian Institution. He said the stone could bring $10 million to $15 million after it is cut.

The story began when his two sons, Johnathan, 11, and Stephen, 4, each gave him $5 for a rock from a gem show last February in Tucson, Ariz. He almost didn't go, but changed his mind at the last minute so he could visit his sick father.

Whetstine said he isn't sure exactly why he went to a hotel hosting the rock dealers instead of gem sellers, why he went through the back door and why he wound up in the room being used by a dealer from Idaho.

The light-blue sapphire — which was in a box marked "Your Choice $15" — seemed to be waiting for him, he said.

"I went by the first two rooms on either side of me and went into a third room, straight to the window and saw the stone and saw the end of the stone glowing," he said.

After taking a couple of minutes to compose himself, Whetstine asked the dealer if he really wanted $15 for the stone. The dealer, who suggested there were better rocks to be found, wasn't in a mood to argue.

He took $10 for the stone.

Whetstine said he's since talked to the dealer, whose identity he protects at the man's request.

"He said, 'Roy, I'm tickled to death for you. I hope you get $15 million for it,'" Whetstine said.

Secrecy was needed until Whetstine and Griffin had the stone verified and appraised and arranged for insurance. Appraisal and documentation cost several thousand dollars, Whetstine said.

"If you don't get your beans in a row, the skeptics just flat won't believe it," Whetstine said. "Another thing was to educate my boys. I told them, 'Hey, you own something valuable and there are bad people out there.'"

Griffin said David Boehm, editor-in-chief for the Guinness Book of World Records, called last week to verify the gem's statistics.

The gem has been certified at 1,905 carats by the Gem Trade Laboratory Inc., of Los Angeles and is registered with the Gemological Institute of America, considered to be the authority on stones, Whetstine said.

Lawrence A. Ward, of Fallbrook, Calif., who appraised the gem, said his initial inspection made "cold chills run up and down my spine."

"I'm wondering what else I could see in my lifetime that could be so awe-inspiring," said Ward.

suffered before dying.

A screwdriver was driven into one of the victim's eyes and went "all the way through the brain," Jurado said. A second screwdriver was found pushed into her lower body, the prosecutor said.

Domingo Hirlas Jr. was 15 years old at the time the Rio Grande Valley woman's body was found in the kitchen of her two-story house east of Edinburg. District Judge Raul Longoria certified Hirlas as an adult during a hearing Nov. 3. At a hearing last week, District Judge Arturo Guerra found probable cause to send the case to a grand jury.

Hirlas, of San Carlos, is being held in the county jail on two complaints of murder and two complaints of capital murder that allege Ms. Matheny was killed in the course of a burglary and sexual assault, Jurado said.

Within two weeks the case is expected to go to a grand jury, which will decide whether Hirlas will be indicted and on what charges, Jurado said.

If convicted, Hirlas faces an automatic life sentence but under Texas law could not receive the death penalty because of his age, the prosecutor said.

The teen-ager was arrested after his father contacted the Hidalgo County sheriff's office, Jurado said.

"The kid had made an utterance that he killed an old lady," Jurado said.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, honored by sportscasters for her fight against drug abuse, is urging the sportscasters to help her.

Mrs. Reagan on Tuesday was awarded the American Sportscasters Association Hall of Fame's Humanitarian Award and a 30-inch-high porcelain giraffe with the inscription: "For sticking her neck out for kids."

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth thanked her for "raising the consciousness of this country," and she asked for sportscasters' help "because you're visible, you're respected."

In other presentations, veteran sportscaster and former New York Mets announcer Lindsey Nelson was inducted into the hall of fame; Bryant Gumbel, host of NBC's Today Show, received the Graham McNamee Award, given to a former radio or television sportscaster who makes a mark elsewhere; and NBC sportscaster Dick Enberg was named sportscaster of the year.

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's royal princes performed a traditional sword dance for Prince Charles and Princess Diana as the British royal couple wound up a nine-day tour of the Arabian peninsula.

The line of dignitaries at the desert ceremony Tuesday at Thumamah, northwest of Riyadh, was led by Prince Sultan, Saudi Arabia's first astronaut, and his father, Prince Salman, the brother of King Fahd.

Clad in their traditional dishdasha gowns, gilded cloaks and Arab headgear, the Saudi royals waved swords as desert warriors chanted ballads.

Charles and Diana also were treated to a sports show that included falconry, camel riding and horsemanship. Today was the last day of their tour, which included Oman, Qatar and Bahrain.

LAURIUM, Mich. (AP) — President Reagan sent a check for $1,000 to this northern Michigan town to help finance a recreation area named after its most famous native, George "The Gipper" Gipp.

Reagan as an actor played the Notre Dame football player, uttering the famous line "Win one for the Gipper."

Paul Vertin, a 24-year-old student at Michigan Technological University, said he wrote Reagan about two months ago asking for help.

The check, signed by the president, was drawn on Reagan's personal account with the Beverly Hills Bank of America, Vertin said.

HONOLULU (AP) — Bob Hope, who at 84 still is a globe-trotting comedian, traded lines with his wife when reporters asked him about retiring.

Hope and his wife, Delores, arrived at Honolulu International Airport on Tuesday on the last stop of a trip that included filming a television special in Tahiti and appearing at a cancer benefit golf tournament in Tokyo. He planned to perform at a hospital benefit in Honolulu.

"Mr. Hope, do you work for money or just for people," a reporter asked at an airport news conference.

"He better do it for money if he's going to support me," Mrs. Hope said.

Another reporter asked Hope if he ever planned to retire. "Retire? Retire? I don't know how to spell that," he said, then looked at his wife. "Would you want me to retire?"

"I told you, you can't afford it," Mrs. Hope said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Van Dyke says he'd like to team up with his brother Dick again in a comedy television show.

"I've been trying to get him to do The Odd Couple. I loved working with him," said Jerry Van Dyke, who is performing at this resort this weekend. The last time the brothers worked together was on The Dick Van Dyke Show.

Jerry Van Dyke appeared on national television twice this week, in the comedy Fresno and a daytime series, Fame, Fortune & Romance.

For Fleet Productions, he recently completed two films that will be out later this year. One is a dramatic murder story, Run If You Can. The other is a high-tech comedy and action movie, A.L.V.I.N.

LONDON (AP) — Albert Finney was chosen best actor at the London Standard Drama Awards for his performance as the mysterious visitor in Lyle Kessler's Orphans, which originated at Chicago's Steppenwolf Theater Co.

In other awards Tuesday, Christopher Hampton's Les Liaisons Dangereuses was chosen best play and Andrew Lloyd Webber's The Phantom of the Opera was named best musical. Both shows are expected to be seen on Broadway in 1987.

Julia McKenzie was chosen as best actress for her role as a housewife staving off madness in Alan Ayckbourn's Woman in Mind.

The Standard awards are named for The London Standard newspaper. Winners are selected by a panel of London theater critics and insiders.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Chimpanzee expert Jane Goodall and the head of a Tucson-based foundation are planning a multimillion-dollar international behavioral-sciences research complex.

William M. Clements, president and chief executive officer of Golden Eagle Distributors Inc., said the first phase of the complex could cost up to $50 million.

Goodall said the center would be named for Clements and that the bulk of the funding would come from the William M. Clements Foundation.

Goodall, 52, has been studying chimpanzees for 26 years. Her study of Tanzanian chimpanzees is partially funded by the foundation.
