Man pleads innocent to 1964 murder

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

A man charged with killing his wife 22 years ago waived arraignment and had a plea of innocent entered for him today but the victim's brother promised to sue those who let the case go if justice is not done.

Albert E. Branscum, who has been quietly operating as salvage yard in Kenowa, Okla., after leaving Gray County in 1964, appeared at his arraignment hearing on crutches and did not speak as his attorney told 223rd District Judge Don Cain that Branscum would be waiving arraignment on a charge of murder.

In a tiny courtroom packed with family and friends of both Branscum and his late wife, Cain entered a plea of innocent for the 56-year-old defendant and scheduled a hearing for Dec. 5 on pre-trial motions filed by Branscum's attorney, John Mann of Amarillo.

Branscum is charged with shooting his estranged wife, Glenna Fay Branscum, in October, 1964, before turning the gun on himself and shooting himself in the head. He was indicted on a murder charge the following December but the case was dismissed by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny in 1972 for lack of prosecution by the state.

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton, who re-opened the case this year after Mrs. Branscum's brother, Jerry Hollon of Amarillo, asked about it, said those responsible for prosecuting the case in 1964 apparently believed the defendant was incapable of standing trial because of his self-inflicted wounds. However, Hamilton said, his office's investigation turned up nothing to indicate Branscum was ever treated for mental or emotional illness.

Hollon told reporters outside the courtroom this morning that his search for justice against his former brother-in-law will not end "if they pat him on the hand and send him home."

Hollon said if justice is not done, he will seek civil action against those "who let him (Branscum) go" in 1964, including Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan and former District Attorney Bill Waters, who now has a private practice in Pampa.

"Even if it takes another 22 years," another family member said.

"The way I look at it, if I was going to shoot somebody, I'd drag them to Gray County and do it, then pack my suitcase and leave," Hollon said, adding he will not be satisfied with a light sentence or "a pat on the back."

Hollon called the murder premeditated and planned and said he would like to see Branscum "get 99 years or the chair." With a charge of murder, not capital murder, Branscum faces a maximum sentence of five to 99 years or life in prison if convicted.

He said he brought the case up again after 22 years because it had been bothering him that nothing was ever done about it. He praised Hamilton and investigator Michael Hartsock for pursuing the case.

"After you think on it for 22 years every day and hope that the DA will do something about it, it's time for something to be done. It eats on a man," Hollon said.

Two of Mann's motions ask that the case be dismissed on grounds that bringing Branscum to trial now would violate his right to a speedy trial under the Speedy Trial Act, passed since the incident occurred. Mann said this morning he needs time to locate some of the doctors he says treated Branscum in Okmulgee, Okla., after the incident for use as witnesses.

"It depends on how many people are still alive," he said. "I might be able to resolve that tonight but I don't know."

Branscum is free on a personal recognizance bond by agreement of Mann and Hamilton.

Reagan to report on Reykjavik failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan reports to the American people tonight on the frustrating failure at the Reykjavik summit, where potential agreement on a sweeping arms treaty fell apart over "Star Wars" testing and dashed plans for another meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The two-day meeting at the little house on Reykjavik Bay was one of the most disappointing superpower encounters of the post-war generation, and in the downbeat aftermath, there were recriminations all around.

Following the suspenseful final act, Gorbachev said it "would have taken a madman" to accept Reagan's proposals. Soviet official Georgi Arbatov blamed the United States for an arms control "dead end."

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said: "The Soviets are the ones who refused to make a deal. It shows them up for what they are. The Soviets finally showed their hand."

After bidding farewell to Gorbachev, Reagan flew back to Washington late Sunday. Asked for comment on his trip upon returning to the White House, Reagan said, "Tune in tomorrow night."

Reagan plans to deliver a speech today from the Oval Office of the White House, beginning at 8 p.m. EDT.

Absentee voting to begin Wednesday

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

With the Nov. 4 general election a little more than three weeks away, area voters can begin voting absentee Wednesday.

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said voters who know they will be out of town on Election Day can vote absentee in her office in the courthouse, beginning Wednesday from 8 a.m. until 12 noon and from 1 to 5 p.m., or can have absentee ballots mailed out of the county to addresses where they know they will be during the absentee voting period. Absentee ballots will be mailed in Gray County to disabled voters and those 65 and older.

Special hours will allow voters to cast absentee ballots from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. beginning Oct. 27.

Carter said individuals who need to vote absentee also can request an application by mail and should include precinct numbers if available.

Absentee ballots requested by people living overseas were mailed early and Carter said several have already been returned.

Gray County voters will vote on eight county races, a battle for 13th District Congressman and nine state races.

U.S. REPRESENTATIVE
First-term 13th District Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, faces a challenge from Wellington farmer Doug Seal, a Democrat. Boulter upset veteran Democratic Congressman Jack Hightower in 1984 on a conservative plank and now seeks re-election for the first time.

Seal has served four years as a member of the state Democratic Executive Committee and four years as Collingsworth County Democratic Chairman. He has also served as state chairman of the Democratic Agriculture Caucus for eight years and is a member of several agricultural organizations.

PRECINCT 2 COUNTY COMMISSIONER

The race for Precinct 2 County Commissioner pits Ronnie Rice, an incumbent running as a Republican for the first time, against his primary opponent of four years ago, Democrat Jim Greene. Both reside in the Pampa area in a precinct that covers northwest Gray County and the southeast corner of the city of Pampa.

Rice, who is involved in the feed and fertilizer business in Pampa, switched parties last winter after serving two full terms as a Democrat and topped three challengers in the GOP primary last May. He was first appointed to the commissioners court in 1977 replacing Dan Hinton after Hinton was named county judge to replace Don Cain, who moved up to district judge.

Greene, a farmer northeast of Pampa, lost narrowly to Rice in the 1982 Democratic primary when the incumbent was still a Democrat. He won the Democratic primary in a June run-off victory over W.C. Epperson and is currently chairman of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce's Agriculture Committee. He is also past president of the Gray County Farm Bureau.

PRECINCT 4 COUNTY COMMISSIONER

Three men, two of them from McLean and the other a write-in candidate, are vying for the Precinct 4 County Commissioner's seat. The precinct covers the McLean-Alanreed area and northeast Pampa.

Incumbent Ted Simmons, a farmer and rancher in McLean, joined Rice in switching to the Republican Party last winter after serving three terms as a Democrat. He defeated Earl Smith of Pampa in the May primary and was first elected in 1975.

Simmons' Democratic challenger is Tony Smitherman, also a farmer and rancher in the McLean area, who topped Glen Curry of McLean in their primary race. Smitherman has served on the McLean Independent School Board and is presently on the Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau Board of Directors.

A late entry into the race is Pampa Public Golf Association President Buddy Epperson, of 1714 Dogwood in Pampa, who filed as a write-in candidate last month. He is a retired Celanese employee and a former Pampa Independent School Board member.

DISTRICT CLERK

Neither woman running for the district clerk's job, incumbent Mary Clark and challenger Vickie Walls, both of Pampa, faced any primary opposition.

Clark, a Democrat, is completing her first term after serving 4½ years as chief de-

Trustees to consider consultant's proposal

A proposal by a superintendent search consultant with the Texas Association of School Boards and the 1986-87 tax rate will be under consideration when Pampa school trustees meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

The meeting will be held in the cafeteria at Baker Elementary School, 300 E. Tuke, as the board continues its plan to meet in each of the district's schools over the next several months. The board's Sept. 16 meeting was held at Austin Elementary.

Trustees met with James Jeffrey, director of superintendent search services for the TASB, in San Antonio last month and asked him at that time to submit a proposal by Oct. 14. Jeffrey, who recently helped Childress Independent School District hire a superintendent, advised the board to hire an interim superintendent and wait until spring to replace resigning Superintendent James Trusty.

Trusty announced in August that he plans to resign effective Jan. 1. He has worked for the district for 30 years.

The board also plans to set the 1986-87 tax rate, which had been placed on hold pending the outcome of the special session of the Texas Legislature. Trustees had expressed concern over possible cuts to education and decided to wait until the session ended before setting a tax rate.

The board adopted a plan Aug. 25 to use surplus funds to make up an $850,000 deficit in the district's $12.3 million budget without raising the 71.8-cent tax rate or cutting salaries. But trustees warned at the time that if the legislature cut funds to local districts, the loss would be made up evenly by taxpayers and teachers.

Legislators made no apparent cuts to the Pampa district and it appears the district's tax rate will remain at 71.8 cents.

In other action Tuesday, the board plans to:

- consider a resolution honoring Pampa High School teacher Ramona Hite, chosen as state business education teacher of the year;
- accept property insurance bids from two firms;
- review a study of school enrollment patterns;
- discuss personnel matters, including resignation, reassignment and employment, in a possible executive session.

Hike and bike trails bids to be considered

Pampa city commissioners will consider awarding bids on the parks system's hike and bike trails during their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Lovett Memorial Library.

Also to be considered in the bids are resurfacing of the tennis courts in Central Park and the basketball court at Marcus Sanders Park.

The commission also will consider naming the suspension bridge west of M.K. Brown Pool "Jiggs Bridge" in honor of former Public Works Director Jiggs Cooke.

The bridge name has been suggested by the Pampa Garden Club to honor Cooke for his support of the parks during his tenure with the city.

In other matters, the commission will consider:

- adopting on second reading an ordinance providing a stop sign at Charles and Decatur and an automatic traffic control signal device at 23rd and Duncan;
- adopting on second reading an ordinance amending Appendix C of the Southern Standard Mechanical Code relative to fees;
- granting final approval of the plat of the Sikes Addition;
- approving a change order relative to the handicap ramps on Cuyler Street;
- establishing the Christmas holiday schedule for city employees for 1986;
- appointing a Municipal Court judge; and
- excusing absences during the 1986 fiscal year.

Raided businesses say illegal aliens are hard to replace

WACO, Texas (AP) — Local companies raided by immigration officials this summer say the raids have hurt their business and forced them to cut back or shut down because undocumented workers aren't easy to replace.

Many of the businesses replaced the undocumented workers through the Immigration and Naturalization Operation Cooperation program, but some said they were compelled to join the program just to keep their companies afloat.

Stephanie Neme, operations manager at V. R. Fashions, said her company went through 300 people trying to get U.S. citizens to work at the plant. "It's hard to find experienced operators. We can get bodies, but we hear every excuse in the book, like 'I don't work on Fridays,'" she said. "We've lost so much money it's unreal."

Because of its difficulties, V.R. Fashions closed one of two plants and cut its workforce from 150 to 75.

V.R. Fashions and several other Waco businesses were raided in June, resulting in the deportation of about 300 undocumented workers. Five Waco-area companies joined the Operation Cooperation program after the June raids, said INS Special Agent Roca Montes.

The program requires the companies to disclose employment records for periodic checking by the INS. In exchange, the INS agrees not to conduct unannounced raids as long as the companies cooperate.

Montes said the INS helps employers detect fraudulent documents and if they receive a complaint that the company employs undocumented workers, INS officials will contact the management rather than raid the firm.

The companies are checked six months after a raid to insure illegal aliens have been replaced, Montes said.

Groundwater hearing in Amarillo

AMARILLO — Area residents concerned about the quality and quantity of groundwater are asked to attend a hearing 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Texas A & M Research Center, 6500 Amarillo Boulevard West.

The Texas Water Commission and the Texas Water Development Board are conducting the hearing to determine if the Ogallala Aquifer, the main groundwater source for the area, should be delineated as a Critical Groundwater Area.

TWC officials say that this will be an informal meeting and it is not necessary to prepare testimony. They add that anyone who wishes may speak or make comments.

At the hearing, TWC officials will explain House Bill 2, which enables local water districts to set up water assistance programs.

Any part of a county that is within a critical groundwater area and within a water district is eligible for state funds for water conservation, distribution and development. Those areas not within a district must join an existing district or form a new one in order to be eligible.

An advisory committee made up of people from the area will be appointed to help the TWC determine the future groundwater plan for the area.

Under HB 2, passed in November, 1985, the TWC was charged with delineating the critical groundwater areas of Texas. They have completed the preliminary delineation and listed 36 Panhandle counties as part of Critical Groundwater Area 2. There are four groundwater conservation districts in the area.

Disaster drill planned in November

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

In cooperation with the State of Texas Division of Emergency Management, the Pampa-Gray County Office of Emergency Management will participate in a community-wide disaster drill on Nov. 11-12.

The Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) Committee will spearhead the planning efforts for this disaster drill.

The drill will center on an ice storm hitting the entire Panhandle.

The Amarillo office of the Texas Department of Public Safety, as well as several communities at the county and state level, will participate in the disaster drill on a regional basis. Pampa and Gray County will participate, as will CAER members.

Locally, plans are underway to expand the drill, making it a much more comprehensive undertaking than just planning in the event of a paralyzing winter storm.

The CAER Training Committee has begun the task of expanding the drill to include an explosion on the grounds of the Celanese Chemical Co. plant and a simultaneous transportation accident either adjacent to or inside the Pampa city limits.

These events should combine to severely tax the ability of the Pampa-Gray County Emergency Management capabilities to respond in the event of a disaster.

The drill should last for a period of about three hours. The city, county and state governments will be involved in the exercise. Private utilities and industries also will participate. The hospital will test its disaster plan, along with the city and county, by participating in the drill also.

The Pampa-Gray County warning system will be activated to test the ability to warn the citizens of the city and county. At the same time, it will test the ability of local government to get information out to the citizens regarding an emergency situation.

This exercise should test our ability to do some of the following:

- determine the capability of the Emergency Medical Services and the Health Department to handle effectively mass casualty type accidents;
- determine the adequacy of the procedures for establishing and operating emergency shelters for displaced citizens;
- determine the effectiveness of mutual aid plans and the coordination between jurisdiction or organizations in responding to a major emergency;
- determine if needed resources can be located, requested and delivered to the emergency scene in a prompt manner;
- determine the effectiveness of procedures for requesting resources from a higher level of government;
- determine the level of cooperation and coordination between agencies, departments and organizations of the jurisdiction in responding to problems associated with a major emergency; and

- determine if local government has the ability to provide adequate information to the general public during and after a major emergency.

This exercise is designed to comply with the Texas state law requiring that each jurisdiction exercise its emergency plan annually.

The effort is being undertaken by the local industries in Gray County, the county and city governments and the State of Texas.

Anyone desiring further information on this planned disaster drill may contact our Emergency Management Coordinator, Steve Vaughn, at 665-8481.

You will be reading and hearing more about this drill in the local media as preparations for it unfold.

Teenage problems

There's a new motto around the office: You know, it's Monday when Cathy's writing her column.

Fred Parker, formerly our cure of the Monday blahs, decided he needed more time to plan his literary masterpiece. So, because I usually end up spending boring Sunday afternoons writing my blather anyway, we switched.

Actually, today's piece almost never got written. Any fall festival that could possibly take place took place this weekend. Saturday was spent following band kids around Borger, sloshing around Hobart Street Park for the Chili Cook-off and hibernating in the darkroom. Sunday was spent procrastinating on five personality pieces I had to do for an upcoming special section.

And, with the exception of a couple of hours during church Sunday morning, I neither felt nor looked presentable enough to want my mug published in a daily newspaper. So I put that off. I threw the other mug away because I got tired of it.

The truth of the matter is that I don't want my picture taken until I can get rid of a colony of zits that have set up camp on my face.

Any normal person my age already suffered through this problem 10 years ago, and knows what skin product works and what doesn't but not me. As miserable as my teen years were, I was blessed, I guess, with a clear face as well as a clear conscience. Unfortunately, having a clean, smooth face didn't keep the boys at school from barking at me or the girls from shoving me into lockers and calling me spiteful names.

Consequently, I never stocked the bathroom with Clearasil PhisoHex or other zit blasting potions because I didn't really need to. Nor did I buy the line that giving my "face something to smile about" would actually make me a happier person. The only thing I ever did in addition to a daily dose of soap and water was to rub 1006 astringent on my face. And the only reason I did that was because it made my face tingle and my nose giddy.

I may have been a sloppy, daydreaming loner but at least my face was clear.

With the exception of the multitudes of freckles that swamped me each summer, a blackhead family that paid occasional visits on my cheekbones and my share of mosquito bites and cuts, my face has just about remained crystal clear. Until now.

As my contemporaries were tossing out their tubes of skin colored cover-up and their fermenting bottles of astringent, I went along my merry soap-and-water way thinking it could never happen to me.

But I learned the dreadful truth one morning as I woke up and rubbed my fingers across my face. There they were, tiny bumps and dips placed in strategic places all around my mouth.

I tried blaming the water, lamenting that no matter what special soap or medication I used, the City of Pampa hated me and deliberately ran salty, hard water through the pipes. And the more I rinsed, the worse the skin seemed to get.

Desperate, I scoured such valuable sources as Tiger Beat, Young Miss and other teeny-bopper mags for advice. Most of the products should be sold only by someone with a liquor license. They seem to work for some kids, but after being knocked senseless by the odor, who notices?

Then I had an inspiration. We've been studying Exodus in Sunday school, learning how God often resorts to unusual acts to get His point across. Then I remembered His writing on the wall from the book of Daniel and it occurred to me. Maybe God has called me to a higher level of communication than the written word. God must have punched out some profound braille prophecy on my cheeks.

So, it may be a while before you see a new shot of me. I refuse to let a camera anywhere near my face until it is soft, shiny and blemish free.

I just hope by that time, my youthful, wrinkle-free face is still intact.

Otwell appears at local church in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Rev. W.N. Otwell, wanted in Texas for failing to appear at a court hearing, preached at an Indianapolis church Sunday, receiving the support of a local pastor and members of the congregation.

"We do not consider him some kind of a rebel against the state (of Texas)," said pastor Greg Dixon.

Otwell, 49, faces heavy fines for ignoring a court order to close the unlicensed boys home operated by his Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, a suburb of Fort Worth, Texas.

He has been on the move since last Monday, when he failed to appear at a contempt of court hearing in Austin, Texas, before the judge who ordered the boys home closed.

After Otwell failed to appear, State District Judge Paul R. Davis issued an arrest warrant for Otwell for contempt of court.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has ordered the sale of parts of Otwell's church for collection of fines. Otwell and other workers at the boys home owe fines totalling $400,000, said Otwell's son, Rocky Otwell, 27, associate pastor of the church.

But the senior Otwell, speaking before a gathering at the Indianapolis Baptist Temple on Sunday, defended his right to run the boys home as he sees fit.

"It don't belong to the taxpayer, it does not belong to the state of Texas, it does not belong to the United States government, it belongs to God," he said of the home.

Otwell said he is scheduled to speak during a national conference at the Indianapolis church, and that he arrived early to meet with Dixon. Otwell is scheduled to speak to the group Tuesday, Rocky Otwell told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"We don't consider him a lawbreaker," said Dixon. "We believe that he is in the tradition of those who, down through the centuries, have fought for religious liberty."

Louis Stadler of Indianapolis said he has two teenage sons at Otwell's school and said he sympathizes with the minister.

"It's a sad day for the United States when a man of God cannot live by his religious convictions," Stadler told a reporter for WTHR television of Indianapolis.

"The only crime that I've committed against the state of Texas is the fact that I've sinned against an agency," Otwell said. "I mean they tell you who to hire, who to fire. They tell you the type boys you can take, the boys you cannot take. They screen the personnel. All we've ever done is try to help the boys and girls."

Computerized system to monitor highways

HOUSTON (AP) — A $275 million computerized traffic "cop" system designed to watch the city's busiest highways will soon be on the lookout for hazardous traffic conditions of one freeway, officials say.

By using cameras, sensors and overhead message signs, the system can close lanes and alert drivers to accidents or vehicle breakdowns, which together cause half of all traffic delays, said Dick McCasland of the Texas Transportation Institute.

Although the first leg of the surveillance system will be operational in about a month on the Katy Freeway transitway, a section of Interstate 10, city officials said it will take nearly 20 years before the system can command some 514 miles of Houston's busiest highways.

"The magnitude of it is what sometimes boggles my mind," said Dexter Jones, a traffic design engineer for the Texas highway department's Houston district.

Jones has spent a dozen years planning "probably the most comprehensive system in the world ... and we've got about 17 or 18 years to go. I won't ever see it finished in my working life. The max I can work is 11 more years."

The system involves buried sensors that can detect a car slowing because of a problem such as a blown tire. The sensors prompt a nearby television camera to focus on the incident.

PUC digs deep to plug wells

DALLAS (AP) — As the money-troubled Texas Railroad Commission struggles to fill abandoned wells, the chances increase that oil, gas and saltwater will seep from leaky well shafts into streams, lakes and water tables, officials concede.

The task of pouring concrete down a tapped-out well is falling to the commission as more drillers and industry-related companies are driven under by depressed oil prices.

And as more and more wells need tapping, less and less funding is available.

The average well costs about $4,000 to plug, said railroad commission spokesman Brian Schaible.

"The size of the problem is big in terms of the number of wells," said Schaible. "They're inactive wells, unplugged, and something needs to be done about it."

Schaible says the commission is not certain how many unplugged wells dot the Texas landscape, but some estimates put the number as high as 50,000.

The commission has records of 5,000 unplugged wells it has identified that need to be filled, Schaible said.

Plugging the 5,000 wells would cost the commission almost $20 million, he said.

But the plugging program budget stood at only $4.7 million before the first special legislative session. Funds for plugging wells comes from $100 permit fees drillers pay to drill new wells.

In addition, the Legislature transferred $2.4 million out of the fund to ease the state's fiscal crunch, a move commission Chairman Jim Nugent said last week will severely limit the agency's efforts to plug the wells.

Schaible says wells that pose an immediate threat to water supplies are filled as quickly as possible, but in most cases the commission first tries to find out whether the well's operator has enough money to do the work without state help.

Lately the state has recovered little money to cover the plugging costs.

"We've got more wells out there than we can ever hope to plug," Schaible said. "In a relatively small percentage—30 to 20 percent at most—we can recover part of the costs."

Hispanic leaders oppose immigration compromise

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas state and local governments cannot afford to pay the cost of enforcing proposed new regulations for undocumented aliens, some Hispanic leaders say.

"We need 100 percent reimbursement to state and local governments," Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, chairman of the Mexican American Legislative Caucus, told a news conference Saturday.

Luna and other Hispanic spokesmen held the news conference to voice their opposition to several provisions of the immigration reform measure now in a House-Senate conference committee in Washington.

The Saturday session came after the conference committee in Washington recessed until Tuesday. One of its last moves was to reach tentative agreement limiting how much federal money would go to states and cities for enforcing the act.

"This will still leave state and local government holding the bag for the rest of the cost," Luna said, "after all we have been through in this economic crisis."

Luna said Hispanic organizations want the federal government to pay the entire cost of any compromise bill.

Luna told the news conference he expressed the feelings of the caucus, the Southwest Voters Registration Project, Mexican American Democrats of Texas, and Mexican American Chambers of Commerce concerning the compromise talks.

Willie Velasquez of the voter registration project criticized the House-Senate conference committee for refusing to allow Hispanic organizations to take part in the negotiations.

"They should listen to people from the fastest growing population in the United States," he said.

Luna said Texas Mexican-American leaders will support the immigration bill only if House-Senate negotiators make important changes.

Both House- and Senate-approved bills contain employer sanctions that would make it illegal for employers to hire undocumented persons, Luna said.

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Have you noticed that the more you scratch a mosquito bite, the more it itches?

Anger is a lot the same way. The more you fuel it, the larger it grows. Sometimes it erupts and causes a lot of hurt.

Paul said, "Do not let the sun go down while you are still angry...."

A dab of medication cures the mosquito bite. Resolving anger eliminates the damage it can do.

WE CARE.

CONTACT LENSES OR GLASSES?

If you've been wearing glasses, should you change to contact lenses? A lot depends on personal preference. Both glasses and contact lenses do the job they're supposed to do: help you to see better.

Contact lenses are most popular with young people who are nearsighted and older people who have had cataract surgery. At the same time, new developments in contact lenses have made them more attractive to ALL groups of vision patients. Over 15 million Americans have been fitted with contact lenses; and another million-and-a-half put them on for the first time each year.

Contacts don't steam or fog up when the temperature suddenly changes. They don't interfere with peripheral vision. Furthermore, they don't interfere with your natural good looks. Of course they do require more care, and may not be right for everyone. Uncertain? Your optometrist can help you decide what's best for you.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Economic sanctions benefit white chiefs

President Reagan would have been able to make a more persuasive case in opposition to economic sanctions against South Africa if he did not have a history of supporting and proposing economic sanctions against other regimes. But an administration that has imposed an embargo against Nicaragua, that has upheld both sanctions and subsidies against the Soviet Union, that has imposed an embargo against Libya and has already imposed certain limited sanctions against South Africa is hardly in a position to make the sensible case that economic sanctions are not a legitimate or effective tool of foreign policy.

That case happens to be very powerful. The U.S. government cannot impose direct sanctions against another country's government. All it can do is to limit the freedom of U.S. citizens to trade or deal with people who live in the "pariah" country of the moment. That action in turn generally reduces the independence of whatever forces in that country are trying to retain some freedom from its government and strengthens the hand of the government.

Rep. William Gray III, D-Pa., a proponent of sanctions against South Africa, has said: "Sometimes we need to feel good about who we are and what we stand for." Unfortunately giving a few American legislators some "warm fuzzies" for a few minutes is about all that economic sanctions are likely to accomplish — especially for black people in South Africa who must cope with the apartheid regime daily.

A previous limited flurry of disinvestment-style activity following the Sharpeville massacre in the early 1960s led to foreign-owned businesses and properties being sold at "fire-sale" prices — mostly to the Afrikaner businessmen who were in the best position to profit from forced sales. This further entrenched both the economic and the political power of the white Afrikaner minority. If foreign-owned business activities are forced out of South Africa now, the immediate result will be to enhance the power of the white minority regime and its supporters.

Perhaps more important than the immediate results of sanctions, however, is the principle that in a free country the private economic transactions of citizens should not be subject to arbitrary and capricious regulation by government. If U.S. citizens were forbidden to trade with people in any country whose government abused its citizens, they would do little if any international trade. A sensible policy would be for government not to restrict such trade, however noxious the government involved, since that would restrict freedom in an arbitrary fashion.

Unfortunately, however, politicians seem addicted to actions that give them an opportunity for moral posturing. Proposing economic sanctions is always tempting. Imposing economic sanctions on Nicaragua made the Reagan administration feel good about itself. Proposing economic sanctions on South Africa will make Congress feel good about itself. Tra la, tra la.

Meanwhile the freedom of U.S. citizens is restricted just a little more, and citizens oppressed by overseas governments are not helped. If that's what it takes to make politicians feel good about themselves, one has to wonder about their sense of values.

Market should set mileage

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recently struck a blow for the sovereignty of the consumer and the health of the American auto industry. In that decision, the last gasp of the misguided energy regulation of the 1970s was audible.

The event was NHTSA's announcement that it would relax the Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) standard established for cars built in the 1987 and 1988 model years. In an effort to ration what then was perceived to be our rapidly vanishing supply of oil, Congress decreed in 1975 that cars would have to become more fuel-efficient.

Starting from a fleet average of 18 miles per gallon in 1978, Detroit was required to improve the average to 27.5 by 1986 and to keep it there forever after. When it became clear General Motors and Ford couldn't meet the 1986 standard, NHTSA postponed the deadline. When it became clear that they still can't meet it, NHTSA said: The customer is always right.

Had the decision gone the opposite way, GM and Ford stood to pay some $410 million in penalties. For what crime? Selling too many big cars and too few small ones — in other words, satisfying the demands of the auto-buying public, whose tastes are different from what some members of Congress think they should be.

Rep. Edward Markey, a Massachusetts Democrat, accused NHTSA of trying to "torpedo the will of Congress." The will of Congress, expressed in the 1975 law, was that reaching 27.5 mpg was desirable — unless matters like "economic practicality" were to demand a lower standard. NHTSA, given the power to make that judgment, said economic practicality did so demand.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, whose company largely has abandoned the big-car market and thus has no trouble meeting the higher standard, said the decision "makes a mockery of the law." Makes you wonder if he has read it. Odder still is his short memory. Iacocca has forgotten how he got NHTSA to lower the mileage standard to accommodate Chrysler's 1981 light trucks.

Since the law was passed, as the agency realized, a lot of things have changed. For one thing, price controls on crude oil and on gasoline have been lifted. By encouraging production and discouraging consumption, decontrol has turned the oil markets upside down. Instead of frantic consumers bidding prices ever higher, we have the heartwarming spectacle of oil-producing nations and companies repeatedly cutting prices to attract buyers.

It was not the federal rules but the marketplace that brought about the shift toward smaller, less thirsty cars. GM and Ford already had begun to redesign their fleets before the 1975 law was enacted: What drove the shift was a change in the preferences of consumers, spurred by the rising cost of gasoline. A recent study for the Brookings Institution concluded that "the improvement in fuel economy for the industry was very close to what it would have been without the CAFE standards."

That improvement has been dramatic. Between 1974 and 1984, the automakers cut 865 pounds off the weight of the typical new car, a 22 percent drop. The average engine size shrunk by more than a third. The average car's mileage per gallon of gas rose by 54 percent — despite having to cut exhaust emissions to comply with stringent new federal rules that reduce fuel efficiency. Relaxing the CAFE standards won't undo that progress.

If gasoline consumption were the only consideration in designing cars, buyers would force the automakers to do even better. But fuel economy conflicts with other goals that some consumers think are more important. The lighter a car, everything else being equal, the less gas it will use. But the heavier a car, the less vulnerable it is in a collision. Keeping the higher mileage standard would have compelled some Americans to drive cars that are less safe than they would prefer.

It also would conflict with broader social goals. Strict fuel economy standards make it harder to minimize the air pollution caused by cars. Then there are the economic costs. Forcing GM and Ford to comply with the old standard, the Federal Trade Commission reported, would raise big-car prices by 22 percent, cut Detroit's production by more than 900,000 cars over the next two years and wipe out 130,000 jobs.

Pursuing fuel economy at the expense of all other worthy objectives would be as pointless as it would be costly. If the experience of the past seven years has proved nothing else, it has proved that on energy matters, the best regulation is the least regulation.

Increasing life expectancy

If you have ever had ulcers...
If you have ever had high blood pressure...
If you have ever had an appendectomy or diabetes or an acute allergic reaction or complications during childbirth...

You are fortunate to have been born when you were.

Had you been born 50 years earlier, you would not likely have survived any one of those illnesses.

Modern medicine — for all that it has not yet accomplished — is the only reason you are alive!

When this century turned the corner 15 percent of all infants did not make it to their first birthday. The big killers were pneumonia, influenza, tuberculosis and infectious intestinal diseases. Life expectancy was 50 years.

Life expectancy for men today is 71.1 years, for women 78.3.

Medical, nutritional and sanitation sciences have added 16 weeks to the average human life span in the past 24 months!

If you read in the obituary columns that more Americans are dying of heart disease, cancer and strokes — that testifies to the "success" of modern medicine.

It is the fact that Americans these days are surviving the infectious diseases that used to kill them young — are surviving long enough to die of afflictions associated with aging.

The American Council on Science and Health affirms that statistically "today's health practitioners are better at preventing, diagnosing, treating and curing illness than ever before."

The ACSH recognizes the purification of water supplies as a major factor in today's longer life expectancy and the purification of milk for reducing infant mortality.

But we sometimes forget that warnings about air and water pollution began as long ago as 1910.

Vitamins A and B were not isolated until 1913.

The bacterium for whooping cough was not isolated until 1913.

We did not know how to store blood for transfusions until 1916.

Our understanding of Vitamins E and D occurred in 1922.

The vaccine against typhus came along in 1930.

The vaccine for polio became available in 1954.

The measles vaccine, not until 1963. The mumps vaccine, 1968.

And we did not have a vaccine against serum hepatitis until 1980.

Presently, most of our worst health problems are our own fault — resulting from smoking, over-drinking, over-eating and promiscuous sex.

With nothing more than self-discipline, Americans could right now expect to enjoy a healthy, active, pain-free 100 years. But it will take self-discipline.

Presently we are killing ourselves in cars, 900 a week.

Comet named for woman astronomer

By Rusty Brown

Scanning the heavens from California's Mount Palomar Observatory one August night last summer, a young astronomer spotted a celestial visitor. Taking a closer look through the telescope, Christine Wilson, 24, decided the object was an approaching comet. She was right, and it is an important discovery.

What's more — the comet has been named for her.

Stories and photos of the California Institute of Technology graduate student have run in newspapers all over the country. Comet Wilson is expected to be visible to the naked eye in the Southern Hemisphere in April and May, when it zooms within 50 million to 60 million miles of earth. And it is likely to outshine the earlier, much-hyped Halley's Comet.

"It's so bright, it's funny nobody else saw it before," commented Wilson.

She is not the first woman astronomer to make a significant sighting, but she is the first to get this much attention. Her predecessors, for the most part, were undervalued, overlooked and decidedly unrewarded. Many fall into the category of "lost women" — whose names and achievements are largely unrecorded in the annals of science.

One of the unknowns, for example, is Caroline Herschel (1750-1848). She was the first woman in the world to discover a comet — and went on to find seven more. In 1789, the very British and very prestigious Royal Astronomical Society published two catalogs of stars she compiled, yet refused to admit her into its exclusively male membership.

As a young woman growing up in Germany, Herschel was beginning a career as a concert singer when her astronomer brother, William, asked her to give up her music and come to England to help him with his work and be his housekeeper.

Reluctantly, at first, she took notes on his observations, but later on, really got into it — teaching herself mathematics in order to make the necessary calculations and even learning to build telescopes.

Maria Mitchell, on Oct. 11, 1847, became the first American woman to discover a comet. Her father had taught her how to sky-search with a telescope on the roof of their house and how to calculate orbits. She was the first woman elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 1865, Vassar College made her director of the college observatory and professor of astronomy.

Mitchell's prominence is the exception, however.

Most women find that an education in astronomy and academic posts in the field are hard to come by, according to Vera Rubin, one of three female astronomers in the National Academy of Sciences. In an article in a recent issue of "Science 86," she recalls that in 1947, when she sent a postcard to Princeton University asking for the graduate school catalog, she was informed that the school did not accept women in the graduate astronomy program. Princeton did not change that policy until 1975.

Many potential graduates are intimidated by male-dominated classes, professors reluctant to work with them, and the lack of women faculty members as role models and/or advisors.

That's all the more reason to be proud of Christine Wilson, who already has made a name for herself. Heaven can't wait for the next one!

Agent Orange ordered by father ravages son

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vietnam War was raging and the casualty rate for Navy river patrol crews had soared to almost 75 percent a year when Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr. ordered the dense riverbank jungles sprayed with Agent Orange.

The chemical defoliant burned away the ambush cover where enemy snipers hid, and Zumwalt felt confident he had minimized the risk for his men, including his own son, Elmo Zumwalt III, commander of a "swift" boat.

Today the Zumwalt family is haunted by that decision, convinced that Agent Orange exposure caused two forms of cancer that may kill the younger Zumwalt, and a brain disfunction suffered by his own young son.

But in their newly published autobiography, both the retired admiral and his cancer-stricken son say although they didn't learn until after the war that Agent Orange was carcinogenic, they would make the same decision to use it even with that knowledge.

In fact, the elder Zumwalt said in a recent interview, he feels that as commander of naval forces in Vietnam, he helped his son live longer by destroying enemy cover with Agent Orange.

In "My Father, My Son," which also contains passages written by other family members and friends, the 66-year-old admiral and his 40-year-old son tell of their admiration for one another and the close family bond sustaining them through the cancer crisis.

"He's always been a fighter and courageous beyond measure," Zumwalt said of his son. "I have found myself for 35 of Elmo's 40 years tremendously inspired by his courage," he added in reference to his son's childhood bouts with polio and a heart ailment.

Elmo III suffers from two rare cancers, the deadly, fast-spreading Hodgkins disease, and lymphoma, a slow-moving cancer of the lymphatic system. Both were contracted within the last three years, 13 years after his return from Vietnam.

The Zumwalts also believe the father's exposure to Agent Orange caused his 9-year-old son's learning disability, called sensory integration dysfunction.

The admiral and his son have criss-crossed the country in recent days to promote their book and to tell their tragic story.

"I've been absolutely amazed," at the supportive reaction from veterans, cancer victims and others, the younger Zumwalt said in a telephone interview as he headed back to his wife and two children in Fayetteville, N.C.

He accompanied his father on the 10-day book tour even though he is still undergoing the slow recovery from a February bone-marrow transplant that he described as "the most physically agonizing thing anybody can put himself through."

His purpose, he said, is to focus attention on the plight of Vietnam veterans and the Agent Orange issue, and to show that "even in this day and age, deep feelings can make a difference," whether in the brotherhood of Navy comrades or the family support for a cancer victim.

Some industries OK, others doing poorly, leaders report

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The country's top business leaders are expressing unease about the future, reflecting the fact that while some segments of the economy are doing well, many industries are in difficulty.

The 66-member Business Council, composed of executives from many of the nation's largest corporations, met here this past weekend to assess economic prospects.

In a report, they predicted the economy will continue growing over the next two years but at a sluggish rate. While not predicting a recession, the business executives said there was little to suggest economic growth will improve much from the weak pace of the past two years.

"The economy overall continues to be spotty with frustrations in the industrial sector and serious problems in energy, real estate and farming," James D. Robinson III, vice chairman of the council and head of the American Express Co., said in presenting the group's economic outlook.

The individual reports from the business leaders reflected the unbalanced nature of the recovery at present.

Firms specializing in consumer goods reported continued strong sales.

But executives from manufacturing companies said they were battling stiff foreign competition with only faint signals that America's trade problems are showing any signs of turning around.

This year, oil companies have suffered the steepest slump, with massive layoffs forced by plunging energy prices.

"All you have to do is visit Louisiana, Texas or Oklahoma to see that things are pretty tough in the oil patch," George M. Keller, chairman of Chevron Corp., said.

The Business Council said one area of continued strength will be consumer spending, which has been the driving force behind the four-year-old recovery.

Clausen to return to Bank of America

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A.W. Clausen, who began at BankAmerica Corp. as a clerk counting cash in a vault and oversaw the company's expansion in the 1970s, is returning to the top post of the embattled financial giant.

"I am eager to get at the job," said Clausen, 63, after he was named Sunday as chairman and chief executive officer for both BankAmerica Corp. and its Bank of America unit. "I don't intend to waste time looking back."

Clausen, who retired this year as president of the World Bank, replaces Samuel H. Armacost, who succeeded him and resigned Friday after five stormy years as chief executive of the nation's second-largest banking concern.

"Clausen is a strong executive who knows the company inside and out," said Don Crowley, a banking industry analyst for Keefe, Bruyette and Woods. "He's got probably as good a chance as anyone to turn it around as quickly as possible."

Joseph Arsenio of Birr, Wilson & Co. said, "Analysts, at least, are going to view Clausen's return to the bank with mixed feelings."

Clausen joined the company in 1949 as a clerk and quickly rose through its executive ranks, displaying a penchant for hard work and attention to detail.

Under Clausen's leadership from 1970 to 1981, Bank of America grew to 83,000 employees, 1,106 branches in California and 116 overseas, and had assets of $110.7 billion.

Back in his cavernous office on the 40th floor of the corporation's headquarters, Clausen faces several problems that have hit BankAmerica in recent years.

From 1981 through the first half of this year, the company suffered loan losses of about $4.6 billion, and earlier this year eliminated its common stock dividend for the first time since the Depression.

In addition, BankAmerica was slapped with a record $4.75 million fine in January by the U.S. Treasury Department for violating currency transaction reporting requirements.

Clausen "will bring the authoritative and calming management direction that is necessary to the bank's success," said John R. Beckett, chairman of the executive committee of BankAmerica's board of directors.

An unidentified, high-ranking bank official quoted by the San Francisco Examiner in its Sunday edition said Clausen's appointment would be temporary, possibly only six months, while the company sought a long-term replacement.

But BankAmerica spokesman Arthur Miller dismissed that.

"Our understanding is that it's not interim," Miller said. "It's an appointment as CEO, and he serves at the pleasure of the board."

Clausen will be paid the same $575,000 annual salary that was paid Armacost, and Armacost will receive a severance package worth roughly $1.7 million, said Miller.

Veterans vie against upstarts for honors

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Veteran performers, led by Willie Nelson, vie against a pack of upstarts tonight at the 20th annual Country Music Association awards show.

Nelson, an entertainer for a quarter-century, is a finalist for the top award, entertainer of the year. The other four nominees are comparatively youthful: the Judds, Reba McEntire, Ricky Skaggs and George Strait.

The live show at the Grand Ole Opry House, with Nelson and Kris Kristofferson as hosts, will be broadcast on CBS from 9:30 to 11 p.m. EDT.

Strait, the reigning male vocalist of the year, is up for that award again, along with veterans George Jones and Hank Williams

Jr., newcomer Randy Travis and actor-singer Gary Morris of the television series "The Colbys."

Miss McEntire seeks to become top female vocalist for the third straight year, an achievement accomplished only by Tammy Wynette in the late 1960s. The other finalists are Rosanne Cash, Janie Fricke, Emmylou Harris and 15-year veteran Anne Murray.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, are finalists for five awards, as is Miss McEntire, a former rodeo barrel racer.

The Judds are finalists for single, album and music video of the year, all for "Grandpa (Tell Me 'Bout the Good Old Days)." They also are up for vocal group of the year, as well as entertainer of the year.

Miss McEntire completes her nominations with ones for single, album and music video, all for "Whoever's in New England."

Winners are chosen by the 7,500 singers, musicians, songwriters and others who belong to the Nashville-based CMA, a trade organization.

Nelson, who was voted entertainer of the year in 1979, spearheaded concerts in Texas and Illinois during the past two years to raise funds for American farmers.

Skaggs, known for his hit "Country Boy," won entertainer of the year last year. He is a finalist this year only in that category.

'Farm program' called improvement over PIK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional agency says a privately designed model "farm program" produced greater farm income, on paper, than did the Agriculture Department's payment-in-kind plan, while costing the taxpayer less.

The General Accounting Office, in a report to Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, said its analysis underscores the need for decision-makers at USDA to study alternatives "before committing to major program changes like the PIK program."

The GAO, the watchdog arm of Congress, commissioned the consulting firm of Missouri Valley Research Associates to fashion an alternative farm program to serve as a basis for comparison and demonstrate that there are other types of policies that can be considered before opting for a plan such as PIK.

Under the 1983-84 PIK program, wheat, corn, sorghum, cotton and rice farmers were paid with government surplus commodities instead of cash to take land out of production. The object was to reduce the surpluses and the number of acres planted to keep down future oversupplies while increasing farm income without an excessive burden on the taxpayer.

The model program for 1983 through 1986 developed by the consulting firm would have relied on increased cash payments instead of in-kind payments.

Compared with the PIK program, the GAO said, the model program, over the four-year period, would have resulted in:

- Farm program costs $3.7 billion lower.
- Planting of program crops reduced by 47.4 million acres.
- A 23 percent reduction in commodity inventory levels.
- A $6.2 billion increase in farmers' net cash income.

The GAO did put some qualifications on the findings, saying that "a comparison was not made of the possible overall societal impacts of the two program options on consumers, U.S. export sales and rural economies."

"For example, the MVRAdesigned program, while reducing government costs, could boost commodity prices more than the USDA-designed program would have, contributing to higher consumer costs and a dampening of commodity exports," it said. "On the other hand, higher cash incomes could have a positive impact on rural economies."

The PIK program was designed as a supplement to other government payment programs designed to reduce surpluses.

The Dream Pill System features the extraordinary Dream Pill. The Dream Pill combines natural substances L-arginine, L-lysine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry."

In the year ahead, you might find yourself involved in ventures that you previously have felt were far beyond your scope. Now you'll realize that you have the abilities to do them easily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be afraid to speak up today if you aren't getting what you're entitled to. The oversight could be honest and readily correctable. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to keep things on a friendly, sociable level today, even your commercial affairs. Convivial exchanges will gain what greed can't.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An interesting turn of events is in the offing today. Someone who you think you are helping is going to be the one who ends up helping you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Lady Luck could intervene today and set things in motion so that others will take care of a problem you thought you'd have to handle unaided.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Conditions that were working against you yesterday will be running in your favor today. This should be especially so where your career is concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You are likely to be luckier than your associates today, so keep the control of important matters under your personal direction. Try not to delegate responsibility.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There is a possibility that you will derive benefits today through something of a secretive nature. You won't be anxious to discuss it, and you shouldn't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you are negotiating an important matter today, it has a good chance of working out well, provided all parties involved treat the others fairly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll be more successful today if you work directly with authority figures instead of their representatives or subordinates. Demand to talk to the boss.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Although you might not think so, if a popularity contest was conducted today, you would easily out-poll your peers. It's nice to be well liked.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A change currently taking place that has you a bit concerned is going to work out OK. Your job is to be optimistic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) After carefully analyzing a sticky situation today from every angle, make your judgment and stick to it. Indecisiveness has no value.

Tall and smart

CHICAGO (AP)—Tall children tend to be do better on IQ tests than short children, say researchers who are at a loss to explain the phenomenon.

But the Stanford University researchers, writing in the October issue of the medical journal Pediatrics, said they didn't think growth hormones would make kids smarter.

"Until careful clinical studies examining this issue have been completed, any effect of such growth-promoting therapies upon intellectual development or academic achievement must be considered unlikely," the article said.

About five years ago, the researchers began examining data from the National Health Examination Survey of 14,000 children conducted during the 1960s by the National Center for Health Statistics.

"They were a specially selected group to represent the entire U.S. population of children," Dr. Darrell Wilson, an assistant clinical professor who headed the research team, said in a telephone interview Friday.

While not the focus of their study, family size, income and birth order also affected youngsters' IQ scores, the data indicated.

Young mother's faith won't cover up topless career

DEAR ABBY: I was disappointed in your answer to "Concerned and Praying," the young single mother who says she is a good Christian, yet she supports her children by dancing topless in a nightclub. I admire her for going to college and living a respectable lifestyle, but when she asked you if a person could believe in God and dance topless, you should have replied with a firm no!

This woman is mistaken if she considers her job harmless to her spiritual life. No woman can dance topless and be a Christian. If she reads her Bible, she will know that merely believing in God does not make her a good Christian — it's how she lives in front of others that counts.

This woman is actually instilling lust in men, and the Bible tells us that any man who looks upon a woman with lust has already committed adultery in his heart. So even if (as she says) she doesn't go out with anyone after work, she has already done the damage. I will pray for her.

I am a Christian counselor. Please forgive this poorly typed letter, but it isn't easy sitting in an office trying to write a letter while the phone is ringing and people keep bursting in unannounced. Perhaps you can pray for me, too. Ha ha!

SINCERELY IN CHRIST
IN OHIO

DEAR SINCERELY: My mail has been running 100-to-1 in your favor. But in the interest of fairness, let's give the other side a chance to be heard:

DEAR ABBY: I read in our local paper, The Daily Reflector, the letter from "Concerned and Praying."

Dear Abby

who was concerned about her topless dancing. In my opinion all good things cometh from the Lord! I also believe that a thing of beauty is a joy forever.

May I also add that there is none of us righteous. No, not one, and if there be in us any righteousness whatsoever, it is not in ourselves, but we are made righteous through the sacrifice of the blood of Jesus who died on the cross.

If "Concerned and Praying" never does anything worse than dancing topless, she is a better Christian than many of those she sits beside in church.

MARVIN TURNER,
GREENVILLE, N.C.

DEAR MARVIN: Amen, brother.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Different in Indiana," who wanted to be married in black, called to mind this little poem I've known since childhood:

Married in white, you've chosen right,
Married in blue, you will always be true.

Married in green, ashamed to be seen,
Married in red, you'll wish you were dead.

Married in brown, you will live out of town,
Married in gray, you will go far away.

Married in yellow, you're ashamed of your fellow,
Married in black, you will wish you were back. (single)

I never thought I'd ever write to Dear Abby, but I couldn't resist the temptation.

OKLAHOMA WIDOW, AGE 96

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Quiet, Please," who hated "background music" while dining, has prompted me to write.

Years ago I played the organ in a popular restaurant in the Midwest. I often was asked to play special numbers, and with those requests was usually sent a dollar or two.

The waiter once brought me a note with a $10 bill, which was a lot of money in those days. The note read: "Will you please take a 10-minute break so we can hear each other talk?"

LIVING WELL IN LA JOLLA

Color is a many splended thing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Imparting color to oldtime black and white movie classics such as "Casablanca," "High Sierra," "The Maltese Falcon" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is a long, painstaking and intricate process, according to Multichannel News.

Each film first requires extensive research to verify color choices and maintain historical accuracy, notes the journal, which reports on the cable television industry over which the newly colored films will be viewed.

Specialists then work from colored still photos based on that research, coloring each frame individually through a computer automation process.

Currently, the color studios can produce only nine minutes of colored film each day.

Even in Hollywood's earliest days, the journal recalls, producers were hand coloring films in turn-of-the-century movies. Tinting and toning pictures was in vogue later with the 1931 version of "Frankenstein" tinted green to achieve an eerie effect.

DON'T OVERLOOK
DECORATING VALUE OF THE COFFEE TABLE

A lot of people take coffee tables for granted and don't realize how they can magically transform a room.

There are many things to consider when evaluating your coffee table, or in choosing a new one. The first thing is its beauty, because the right coffee table can become a center of attraction in itself.

Aside from its beauty a coffee table should complement the sofa it is in front of, and have the right height and size in relation to the sofa.

Speaking of size, many coffee tables are not adequate for all that you want them to hold. Don't overcrowd coffee tables; if practical, get a larger one, so it can hold flowers and other accessories and still have room for coffee cups, glasses, etc.

Don't overlook the possibilities of the different shapes of coffee tables available. Perhaps a circular one, or a rectangular one, or something in between is better for you. You might want to consider several smaller tables or one large one.

In any case, the choice of your coffee table or tables can do so much for your living room, and we are here to assist with a good selection and help in getting the right one, or ones, for you.

Great Scott!

Houston ace Mike Scott breaks three records to lead Astros over New York, 3-1; tied series resumes today

Houston's Mike Scott beats Mets again.

(AP Laserphoto)

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As most any Texan will tell you, when you've got a good dog you let him hunt. And that's exactly what Houston Manager Hal Lanier is doing with pitcher Mike Scott.

Scott continued his dominance over New York in the National League playoffs Sunday night, pitching a three-hitter as the Astros defeated the Mets 3-1 to even the best-of-seven series at two games apiece.

Houston catcher Alan Ashby hit a two-run homer in the second inning and shortstop Dickie Thon had a solo shot in the fifth to provide Scott with all the offense he would need.

The Mets' 6-5 comeback win Saturday prompted Lanier to bring back Scott, who was 18-10 and led the major leagues with 306 strikeouts during the regular season, on only three days' rest. It showed in Scott's fastball, which wasn't nearly as swift as it had been in Game 1 when he pitched a 1-0 five-hit victory.

"I didn't have the good fastball, so I knew I had to go to the split-finger (fastball) more," Scott said.

"I had a little arm fatigue in about the sixth inning. That's when I decided to continue to go more with the split-finger fastball. There are times when every pitcher doesn't feel that he is 100 percent, but they still have to go out and do all they can."

Scott's five strikeouts, coupled with his 14 in Game 1, gave him a record 19 for the series, breaking the major-league playoff record of 18 by Toronto's Dave Steib last year.

Scott's 16 consecutive scoreless innings and two complete games also are playoff records.

"It was too late to worry about wearing him out," Lanier said. "If the series goes seven games, I'll use him in Game 7 and hopefully he'll be sharp again."

"We needed this game tonight desperately, or else we were looking at elimination on Monday."

Game 5 was scheduled for 2:05 p.m. CDT today with Mets' ace Dwight Gooden facing rookie Jim Deshaies. Tuesday will be a travel day and the series will resume in Houston's Astrodome on Wednesday.

Scott, who clinched the NL West Division title with a no-hitter for the Astros, carried a no-hitter through 5-2-3 innings before Ray Knight singled sharply to left.

"Once he gets two strikes on you, he's probably the hardest guy in the league to get the fat part of the bat on," Knight said.

"I still feel confident that we can win. We're too good an offensive club not to make adjustments."

The Mets were still complaining that Scott was doctoring the ball, scuffing it in some way to make it break more sharply on its flight toward the plate.

"When you have 15 or 20 balls that have been scuffed, you know it's not done by fouling them off," Knight said. "I don't know how he was doing it. I assume it's something in his glove hand."

Left-hander Sid Fernandez, 16-6 during the regular season, gave up a leadoff single to first baseman Glenn Davis in the second.

Fernandez, who yielded three hits and all three runs in the six innings he worked, struck out Kevin Bass and Jose Cruz, but Ashby, who hit only seven home runs during the regular season, hit a 3-2 pitch over the left-field fence for a 2-0 Houston lead.

Ashby got a second chance when his foul pop down the left-field line fell in the first row of the stands. Shortstop Rafael Santana called third baseman Knight off, but then pulled up.

Thon, who hit only three homers all season, hit a solo shot over the left-field fence with one out in the fifth.

The Mets lone run came in the eighth.

Mookie Wilson reached on an infield single behind second, raced all the way to third on Knight's hard smash to third baseman Phil Garner. Wilson scored on a sacrifice fly to center by Danny Heep, the man Houston traded to the Mets for Scott after the 1982 season.

Dykstra started the Mets' ninth with a single, but Scott was equal to the task, getting Wally Backman on a hard bunt, then retiring Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter on routine plays.

"They are a good ballclub," Scott said. "They can get something going in a hurry. Take the ninth inning of Saturday's game as an example. They won 108 ballgames."

Red Sox keep hopes alive

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Games 4 and 5 of the American League playoffs were like an amusement park ride and there might not be an end in sight.

"It's been a roller-coaster out there, really emotional," Boston designated hitter Don Baylor said Sunday after he and Dave Henderson hit two-run homers in the ninth inning to give Boston a 6-5 lead, and the Red Sox went on to beat California 7-6 on Henderson's sacrifice fly in the 11th.

"We were down to the last pitch, the last out," Baylor said. "The emotion was unbelievable."

"With the type of pitcher (Dennis) 'Oil Can' Boyd is, emotional, I expect to get right back on the roller-coaster again Tuesday night."

Boyd, who lost Game 3, will face California's Kirk McCaskill, the loser of Game 2, in Game 6 at Fenway Park.

"It was a very emotional game," catcher Bob Boone, who homered for California's first run, said. "I'm sure everyone is drained, but we will be ready to go again Tuesday night."

The Angels got good news when it was announced that rookie first baseman Wally Joyner would be on the team's flight to Boston. Joyner, the club RBI leader this season and their top hitter in the first three games of the playoffs, was hospitalized Saturday for treatment of a bacterial infection in his right leg.

With its twists and turns, Game 5 bore a strong resemblance to Saturday night's 4-3 come-from-behind victory by the Angels. They, too, went down to their last strike but came back from a 3-0 deficit to score three times in the ninth, then won it in the 11th on a single by Bobby Grich.

The Angels went into the ninth with a 5-2 lead and how they got that lead only added to the aura of Game 5.

Henderson, normally a late-inning defensive replacement, had entered the game in the fifth in place of injured center fielder Tony Armas. But in the sixth, a fly ball by Grich deflected off Henderson's glove and went over the center-field fence for a two-run homer that gave California a 3-2 lead.

Henderson threw his arms up in despair and Boston starter Bruce Hurst knelt with his head down near the mound as Grich circled the bases triumphantly. "I thought I had it all the way," Henderson said.

The Angels added two more runs in the seventh, setting the stage for Baylor and Henderson.

Baylor hit his two-run homer off Mike Witt with one out in the ninth to pull the Red Sox within 5-4. After Witt got Dwight Evans on a pop, California Manager Gene Mauch summoned left-handed reliever Gary Lucas to face lefty Rich Gedman for the final out. Lucas, however, hit Gedman with a pitch.

Donnie Moore relieved Lucas, and Henderson went to 2-2 on the count before he ripped a pitch into the left-field seats.

Henderson's three runs batted in matched the total he had this season with the Red Sox, who acquired him in an August trade with Seattle.

The Angels came back to tie it again on Rob Wilfong's run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth, but the Red Sox won it two innings later when Moore hit Baylor with a pitch, Evans singled, Gedman beat out a bunt, and Henderson hit his sacrifice fly to center.

Reliever Steve Crawford was the winner and Calvin Schiraldi, victimized by the Angels in their victory the previous night, pitched a perfect 11th for the save.

Teams take deserved rest

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — After exchanging 11-inning victories in less than 24 hours, the California Angels and the Boston Red Sox needed a breather today in their American League playoff series.

"It was a very emotional game and I'm sure everyone is drained, but we'll be ready again Tuesday night," California catcher Bob Boone said as the Angels were forced to make a trip to Boston for Game 6 and, if necessary, Game 7 in the best-of-seven series for the AL pennant.

"The hill we have to climb still is steep, but we are still in there," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "This might be the most competitive and exciting game I have ever seen. This was a tough loss for the Angels, but don't forget that they are still in the drivers' seat."

With a 5-2 lead in the ninth, champagne was waiting on ice in the California clubhouse. However, the Red Sox spoiled the party.

"It was very emotional from the time we got up this morning," Baylor said before the Red Sox headed home. "It was like we were on a roller coaster all day, first up, then down, back up, down again and finally back up."

Asked about Game 6 in Boston's Fenway Park with Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd due to pitch for the Red Sox, Baylor said:

"Oil Can is an emotional person and you can be assured our game will be."

Dallas 'Walkers' over 'Skins

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Add a potential quarterback controversy to the Dallas Cowboys. But scratch one running back controversy. Herschel Walker is getting along just fine as a receiver, thank you.

Digging themselves out of a monstrous hole on their first series, the Cowboys dug themselves out of what could have been a big hole in the NFC East race Sunday by crushing the Washington Redskins 30-6 and handing the Redskins their first loss.

And who should emerge in Dallas' fifth 30-point game in six starts but two new guys — quarterback Steve Pelluer, subbing for the injured Danny White, and the indomitable Walker?

Pelluer completed 19 of 30 passes for 323 yards, and Walker had almost half those yards — 155 on six catches, including a 69-yarder that got the Cowboys out of a deep hole on their first series and set up a touchdown.

"He's pretty fast for a big man," Cowboys Coach Tom Landry quipped about the running back who joined his team when the USFL went dormant in early August.

"They were playing a lot of man-to-man on me and trying to cover me with a linebacker," said Walker. "I don't want to put anyone down, but I don't think you can cover me with a linebacker."

Walker also ran for 45 yards in 13 carries and rushed for two 1-yard touchdowns as an alternate at tailback with Tony Dorsett. Dorsett returned after missing two weeks with knee and ankle injuries and gained just 22 yards in 18 carries.

Total for Walker: 200 yards, not counting a 36-yard pass interference call he drew when he badly beat Washington linebacker Rich Milot. That set up one of Rafael Septien's three field goals.

The win improved Dallas' record to 4-2, a game behind the Redskins and New York Giants at the top of the NFC East. A loss and the Cowboys might have dropped out of sight.

And a loss is exactly what it looked like on Dallas' first series. The Cowboys were spared a safety when the officials ruled a Dallas lineman had moved and the play whistled dead before Dexter Manley's sack of Pelluer in the end zone.

But the Cowboys still faced a third-and-18 from their own 1. On the next play, Pelluer heaved the ball down the left sideline in the direction of Tony Hill, and the ball landed out of bounds. But Washington's Barry Wilburn was called for pass interference, and the Cowboys had new life.

"That may have been the biggest play of the game," Pelluer said. "We were just looking for some way to get out of there. I don't know what would have happened if we hadn't gotten out of that hole."

"We didn't make the plays," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. But he also hinted — without specifically saying so — that he didn't think the officials made them either.

"I think everyone saw it," he said of the pass interference call. "I certainly saw it, but I'm not going to get into criticizing the officials."

Two plays later, Walker streaked by two Washington defenders, but Pelluer under-threw him. Walker circled back, let two Redskins run by him, and caught the ball at the Washington 32.

From there, he outraced three Redskins to the 1, where he was brought down by Darrell Green, winner of the NFL's recent fastest man contest.

Then Walker plunged over from the 1, and it was 7-0 Cowboys. By halftime, it was 16-0 on field goals of 21, 36 and 38 yards by Septien.

Washington, meanwhile, was bumbling its chances. Mark Moseley missed a 39-yard field goal attempt and Steve Cox missed from 50 and 51 yards in the first half. Moseley also missed the extra point after George Roger's 2-yard TD run in the third quarter cut the margin to 16-6.

It marked the first time in 92 games that Moseley failed to score a point.

The Cowboys broke open the game in the fourth period with a 27-yard touchdown pass from Pelluer to rookie Mike Sherrard that Sherrard wrested away from Green after it appeared the Washington cornerback had intercepted.

Walker got the final touchdown with his second 1-yard scoring run of the day.

"It's ironic that the two passes I threw the worst were our biggest plays," said Pelluer, who was able to scramble out of trouble repeatedly.

But once White is recovered from his pulled hip muscle, Pelluer goes back to the bench. There will be no immediate controversy for a team that for the two previous seasons seasawed between White and Gary Hogeboom, who was traded to Indianapolis during the summer.

"If Danny is right next week, then he'll start," Landry said.

Pelluer said he understands.

"I don't think anyone is happy on the bench," said the third-year man from Washington. "But Danny's the one."

Giants drub Philly; Jets deny New England

By The Associated Press

The New York Giants, playing at the Meadowlands in New Jersey at the same time the baseball Mets were playing in New York's Shea Stadium, got the same defensive performance as their Big Apple buddies Sunday, but drastically better results.

The Giants' defense limited Buddy's Boys, head coach Buddy Ryan's Philadelphia squad, to 117 yards and just three points enroute to a 35-3 smashing of the Eagles. The Mets also allowed three points, but lost to Houston's Astros 3-1.

NFL Roundup

At least New Yorkers had football to cheer about. The Giants' win, along with Dallas' 30-6 thrashing of Washington, moved them into a first place tie with the Redskins in the NFC East at 5-1.

In other games, it was Miami 27, Buffalo 14; Chicago 20, Houston 7; Detroit 21, Green Bay 14; Cleveland 20, Kansas City 7; Atlanta 26, Los Angeles Rams 14; New Orleans 17, Indianapolis 14; New York Jets 31, New England 24; St. Louis 30, Tampa Bay 19; Los Angeles Raiders 14, Seattle 10; Denver 31, San Diego 14, and Minnesota 27, San Francisco 24 in overtime. Pittsburgh visits Cincinnati tonight.

Giants 35, Eagles 3
Philadelphia Coach Buddy Ryan knows a good thing when he sees it... even on the other side of the field.

"The Giants were a super team today," Ryan, whose team fell to 2-4, said. "It was a complete team effort and we don't have any alibis."

New York won its fifth straight game, its longest winning streak since 1970, with Phil Simms' throwing two touchdown passes. The Giant defense, led by linebacker Lawrence Taylor's seven tackles, two assists and four sacks for 25 yards in losses, held the Eagles offense to 117 yards.

Linebacker Harry Carson caught the first touchdown pass of his career on a fake field goal.

Jets 31, Patriots 24
Despite holding a 24-0 halftime lead, New York Coach Joe Walton was wary of New England, with good reason.

"We talked about not letting them rally in the third quarter, but they did anyway," Walton said. "The key was we gathered ourselves in the fourth quarter and stemmed the tide."

The Jets, 5-1, withstood Steve Grogan's three second-half touchdown passes and a career-high 401 yards to take command in the AFC East with their fourth straight victory.

New York's Johnny Hector ran for a career-high 143 yards, including three one-yard touchdowns. Pat Ryan, subbing for the injured Ken O'Brien completed 14 of 25 passes for 148 yards.

Broncos 31, Chargers 14
Fear can be a positive motivator.

"We were scared to death coming out here," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "All we talked about all week was how we hadn't been successful out here."

The victory was only the eighth for the Broncos in 27 visits to San Diego.

Quarterback John Elway engineered four scoring drives of at least 65 yards, Gerald Willhite scored two touchdowns and Mike Harden returned a punt return 41 yards for a score as Denver ran its record to 6-0 to match its best start ever.

Bears 20, Oilers 7
Chicago's Walter Payton became the league's first 20,000-yard man, but he wasn't entirely satisfied.

"When we come to a game, it seems to raise the level of intensity of the other team," said Payton, who gained 76 yards rushing and caught a pass for 30 yards for combined 20,045 career yards on rushing, receiving and returns. "It wasn't one of our better efforts."

Quarterback Jim McMahon, playing with a painful right shoulder, completed just 13 of 33 passes for 209 yards.

Dolphins 27, Bills 14
The Miami defense, ranked last in the NFL, knew it had its work cut out when it took on the league's top-ranked passing offense.

"It's only a step," Dolphins defensive coordinator Chuck Studley said. "It's certainly not an exonerator or redemption for what has happened."

The Dolphins, 2-4, have allowed 190 points.

Lorenzo Hampton ran for touchdowns of one and four yards, Dan Marino passed 30 yards to Mark Duper for another score and Fuad Reveiz kicked field goals of 22 and 36 yards. But the Dolphin defense stood out by forcing four turnovers.

Jim Kelly threw one touchdown pass for Buffalo, which fell to 1-5 in absorbing its 20th straight road loss.

Falcons 26, Rams 14
Gerald Riggs won the battle against Eric Dickerson, and as Dickerson goes so go the Rams.

Riggs rushed for 141 yards, including a four-yard touchdown, to give the Falcons, 5-1, a one-game lead in the NFC West.

Dickerson, who entered the game as the NFL's leading rusher, gained only 73 yards, including a one-yard touchdown run, as the Rams fell into a tie with San Francisco for second place in the division.

Mick Luckhurst kicked field goals of 32, 49 and 41 yards for Atlanta.

Vikings 27, 49ers 24
San Francisco's Ray Wersching demonstrated that football is a game of inches. His 33-yard field goal attempt hit the left upright as the fourth quarter ended.

Four minutes into overtime, Chuck Nelson connected on a 28-yard field goal for Minnesota.

Raiders 14, Seahawks 10
Los Angeles is playing more like the Raiders of old... as in Jim Plunkett.

The 38-year-old quarterback, subbing for the injured Marc Wilson, led the 3-3 Raiders to their third straight victory. He threw scoring passes of nine yards to Dokie Williams and 49 yards to Jessie Hester for a 14-0 lead in the second period.

Browns 20, Chiefs 7
Cleveland, 4-2, took advantage of Kansas City injuries to claim a half-game lead over Cincinnati in the AFC Central.

Bernie Kosar passed for 287 yards, including touchdown passes to Earnest Byner and Ozzie Newsome, against the Chiefs, 3-3, who played without five starters.

Lions 21, Packers 14
The agony continued for Green Bay, which fell to 0-6.

Detroit, 3-3, was led by running backs Gary James and James Jones. James rushed for 140 yards and scored his first NFL touchdown, and Jones added 99 yards.

Eric Hipple's two-yard scoring pass to David Lewis wrapped up the game with 7:07 remaining. Green Bay scored with just six seconds left.

Cardinals 30, Bucs 19
While Green Bay continued to flounder, St. Louis registered its first victory.

The Cardinals, giving Stump

Mitchell more work since trading Otis Anderson to the Giants, broke a seven-game losing streak and gave Coach Gene Stallings his first NFL victory.

Mitchell scored on runs of three and 31 yards and Neil Lomax passed for 228 yards.

Lady Harvesters blister Levelland

LEVELLAND — The Pampa Lady Harvesters knocked Levelland out of the unbeaten ranks in District 1-4A with a 15-13, 15-4 win Saturday.

The Lady Harvesters take sole possession of second place in the district standings with a 4-2 record.

Levelland is tied for first with Dumas at 6-1.

"A lot of people would consider this an upset, but I told the girls this was something they were supposed to be doing all season long," said Pampa coach Phil Hall.

Levelland started off like it was going to make Pampa a lopsided victim, taking an 11-4 lead in the first game. Hall then called a timeout and his sideline pep talk sparked the Lady Harvesters.

"I told the girls they could do much better, and they proceeded to go out and prove it," Hall added. "Melinda Jackson was the key to Pampa's comeback win in the first game, Hall said.

"Melinda was very intimidating at the net. She shut down Levelland's big gun (Danelle Terrill). We also got a strong performance from Susan Gross. Those two also ignited us the second game and the rest of the seniors followed suit," Hall said.

The second game belonged to Pampa all the way. Levelland never got closer than 5-4. Andrea Hopkins finished off the Lady Lobos with an ace.

Pampa also won the junior varsity match 16-14, 15-12.

Pampa, 10-11 overall, travels to Dumas Tuesday night for a crucial district match.

"If we can win this one, it will put us in the driver's seat," Hall added.

Man in Rambo-like garb finally apprehended, held in shooting

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — A man dressed in combat fatigues and armed with three knives and a rifle shot a policeman, led authorities on a wild, 100 mph auto chase on a beach, then escaped for about five hours by diving into a canal and swimming away, officials said.

"Officers on the scene said he looked like Rambo," Corpus Christi Police Capt. Primitivo Rodriguez said. "He was dressed in fatigues and had knives strapped all over him."

Robert Lynn Cooper, 31, a Port Aransas police officer, was shot four times in the back around 4:30 a.m. Sunday after stopping the Rambo-like character for driving erratically on the beach, Port Aransas Police Chief Don Perkins said.

Cooper was listed in good condition today at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi, about 20 miles west of Port Aransas.

Two men, one 20 and the other 25 and described as brothers from Killeen, Texas, with criminal records were taken into custody Sunday morning, police said. Charges were expected to be filed against them today, Perkins said. Both were in cars that had been reported stolen, Perkins said.

Authorities said Cooper had stopped the first car and noticed the Rambo-like appearance of the driver when a second car drove up. Its driver shot Cooper two or three times in the back with a .22-caliber pistol, officers said.

Cooper returned fire, striking the second man once in the leg and once in the foot, but the first suspect then opened fire, hitting Cooper again in the back before driving off, Perkins said.

Backup units from at least five law enforcement groups joined in the chase, which reached speeds in excess of 100 mph on the beach, said Dee Wayne Mathews, a constable. Other officers took the man who remained behind into custody.

Mathews' deputy chased the fleeing car south on the beach for about 10 miles, the constable said.

"My deputy was going in excess of 100 miles-per-hour on the beach and he couldn't keep up," Mathews told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Corpus Christi Police units tried to set up a roadblock at park roads 53 and 22, but the suspect made no attempt to stop, Mathews said. The man lost control of his car, and it flipped over as it entered a subdivision, Mathews said.

The man then got out and ran, and was wounded superficially with a shot by a Corpus Christi police officer, but escaped by jumping into the water, officers said.

Texas Rangers, police department scuba divers and a helicopter from the Department of Public Safety joined in a manhunt. At 9:20 a.m., police officers spotted the suspect hiding beneath a canal seawall, officers said.

The suspect again jumped into the water and tried to swim away, but an officer jumped in after him and captured him, officers added.

The man was treated for his gunshot wound at the same hospital as Cooper, then was taken to Corpus Christi City Jail. The other suspect was listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital.

The brother clad in camouflage gear carried a .22-caliber rifle, an 11-blade Swiss Army knife, a 5 1/2-inch hunting knife and a camouflage knife strapped to his leg, officials said.

Summit failure gives Demos ammunition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats say the failure of the arms talks in Iceland gives them new ammunition to fight President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative and could help them pick up seats in next month's elections.

But Republicans are applauding Reagan's decision to walk away from a Soviet "trap," and saying the Soviets' eagerness to scuttle the space-based anti-missile system shows just how important it could be to the defense of the United States.

A disappointed Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said Sunday night, "This weekend, President Reagan had a chance to cash in 'Star Wars' for the best deal the Russians have offered us since they sold us Alaska, and we turned it down."

"I predict that the failure in Reykjavik will give the arms control issue razor-sharp edges that will cut against the Republicans in November," said Markey, a liberal who has sponsored a nuclear freeze resolution.

Walls, now a Republican, ran as a Democrat in 1982 and lost a run-off election to Clark. She has worked as an advertising executive, secretary and personnel manager and is active in several local organizations.

COUNTY CLERK

Incumbent County Clerk Wanda Carter, a Democrat, and her Republican challenger, Carol Peet, also faced no primary opposition.

Carter, of Pampa, was first elected to the office in 1970 and served as a deputy to Charlie Thut for 17 years. She is currently secretary-treasurer of the Panhandle Community Services board of directors and is a member of the Texas County and District Clerk's Association.

Peet, also of Pampa, currently manages the audiovisual department at Pampa High School and has been a teacher and secretary. She has served as president of the Pampa Talented and Gifted Association and the Panhandle Area Women's Aglow Fellowship.

COUNTY TREASURER

The race for county treasurer pits Lodema Mitchell against Scott Hahn. Both are from Pampa.

Mitchell, a Democrat, has been chief deputy in the county treasurer's office for 15 years. She formerly worked as a bookkeeper for her husband, John C. Mitchell, who owned a service station.

Hahn, her Republican opponent, was a manager for Firestone for 20 years, managing the Pampa store for the last nine years. He is a Boy Scout troop committee chairman and is on the executive board of the Adobe Walls Council and the board of directors of Genesis House.

Muns, a Republican, has worked as a fingerprint technician for the FBI and was a member of the U.S. Park Police in Washington. He is secretary of the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club in Pampa.

Steele, manager of the Shop-A-Minit store in Lefors, won the Democratic nomination in a run-off election with Mary Lou Winegeart in June. She has worked as a bookkeeper and a volunteer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture Food Program.

JP PRECINCT 2

Two Democrats, one a write-in candidate, are hoping to replace David Potter as Justice of the Peace in Precinct 2.

Wayne Roberts, who narrowly bested Jeanine Augustine in the Democratic primary, has worked as a security guard. He resides in Pampa and has taken law enforcement courses in connection with his security guard work.

Margie Prestidge moved to Pampa last winter to be able to run as a write-in candidate. She served as JP in Lefors for 15 years.

El Salvador quake death toll rises to 890

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP)—The death toll from the earthquake that shattered this war-ravaged nation's capital rose to at least 890, and President Jose Napoleon Duarte said hospitals were desperately short of medicine to treat the injured.

In a nationally televised news conference Sunday night, a haggard-looking Duarte announced the new death toll, nearly triple the figure of 300 he gave Saturday.

He said 10,000 people were also injured in the Friday quake that leveled sections of San Salvador.

"(There) are many people who are still buried and places where we have not reached," he said, suggesting the death count would go even higher.

An estimated 150,000 people, many of whom had been living in shacks, lost their homes and 100,000 were left jobless when businesses were destroyed or shut down by the quake, he said.

Duarte said his personal estimate of material damage was $2 billion, but that an official figure would have to await a survey.

All government buildings in the capital were damaged, including the presidential palace, he said.

"We are practically going to have to reconstruct all of the city," he said.

Duarte estimated the number of homeless would rise to more than 300,000. Although he did not explain why it would increase, it appeared to be because the count was not yet complete.

Many refugees from civil war fighting between leftist guerrillas and U.S.-backed government troops live in shacks around San Salvador and have swollen its population to about 800,000.

Those shantytowns and buildings in the city center suffered the most damage in the Friday quake.

Aftershocks, most of them slight tremors, continued throughout Sunday.

Twenty mercy flights have arrived with food, medicines, clothing and temporary shelters, Duarte said. But he said there is a shortage of temporary shelter and medicines such as tetanus vaccine, anesthetics, antibiotics and analgesics.

The six major hospitals in the city were damaged in the earthquake and many of the injured were sent to Santa Ana, the largest city in western El Salvador, which was undamaged.

In a vacant lot near the heavily damaged Bloom Children's Hospital, doctors and nurses worked in a makeshift field hospital. In another field, the homeless built shelters of tin and wood from crates.

Meanwhile, rescuers picked their way through the rubble with the aid of specially-trained dog teams brought in from the United States, Switzerland and France.

On Sunday, officials said rescuers had dug more than 70 survivors from the wreckage of buildings.

Encouragement for gunrunning will lead to deaths of Americans

WASHINGTON (AP)—Praise for private gun-running operations in Nicaragua, such as that voiced by a high State Department official over the weekend, will only lead to more Americans being captured, killed and put on trial, the vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee says.

Eventually, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Sunday, "nobody is going to see a distinction of whether they are there officially working for the United States or only with the encouragement of the United States."

Congress in 1984 barred military aid from the United States to the Contra rebels battling the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua, but later authorized non-military aid.

The question of whether the U.S. government has gone beyond that has come under renewed scrutiny since Eugene Hasenfus, an ex-Marine who once flew for Air America, a CIA-operated airline in Vietnam, was captured in Nicaragua after his arms-loaded plane was downed Oct. 5 by a Nicaraguan missile.

Hasenfus told a news conference in Managua on Thursday that a man named Max Gomez and another Cuban-American "work for the CIA (and) did most of the coordination" for the gunrunning flights he took part in.

Published reports on Friday said Vice President George Bush's national security adviser, Donald Gregg, helped place Gomez at a military airfield in El Salvador from which Hasenfus's plane took off.

The Los Angeles Times said Saturday that Gomez told associates that he reported to Bush in his role as head of the Contra air supply operation.

Bush said Saturday he had met Gomez three times, and "he's a patriot," but the vice president denied directing the gunrunning operation.

Nobel medicine prize awarded to American and Italian-American

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—The 1986 Nobel Prize in medicine was awarded jointly today to an American and an Italian-American for their discoveries of the mechanisms that regulate the growth of cells and organs.

Stanley Cohen of the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn., and Rita Levi-Montalcini, of the Institute of Cell Biology C.N.R. in Rome, were cited by the awarding body "for their discoveries of 'Growth Factors'."

The Nobel Assembly of Stockholm's Karolinska Institute said in its prepared statement that Cohen, 63, and Ms. Levi-Montalcini, 77, were singled out for discoveries "which are of fundamental importance for our understanding of the mechanisms which regulate cell and organ growth."

Ms. Levi-Montalcini was born in Italy but worked for many years in the United States. She holds dual Italian and American citizenship.

Ms. Levi-Montalcini, a developmental biologist, and Cohen, a biochemist, were cited for their "discovery of nerve growth factor (NGF) and epidermal growth factor (EGF), respectively, which could show how the growth and differentiation of a cell is regulated."

The assembly said that as "a direct consequence" of the discoveries, medical science had increased its understanding of many diseases such as developmental malformations, degenerative changes in senile dementia, delayed wound healing and tumors.

The cash stipend in each prize category this year is a record 2 million Swedish kronor, about $290,000 at the current rate of exchange.

The Nobel Prize in physiology or medicine is the first to be announced in this year's series of awards established in the will of Alfred Nobel, the Swede who invented dynamite.

The remaining announcements this week are the Nobel Peace Prize, to be announced by the Norwegian Parliament's Nobel committee in Oslo on Tuesday; and the physics and chemistry prizes, both to be announced Wednesday by the Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm.
