Big George Earnshaw Makes Baseball History In Winning Series For Macks

Philadelphia Sluggers In Apparent Hurry to Ice Game Away

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—Athletics 7, Cardinals 1.

When the whiskers are long and gray on the trembling chins of the baseball bugs of today, and the kids of tomorrow start talking about their great pitchers, we'll up and tell 'em of George Earnshaw.

We'll tell 'em how big George pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to three victories over the St. Louis Cardinals, in the world's series of 1930, although the goofey baseball rules officially allotted one of them to "Lefty" Grove.

Stands 'Em on Ears

We'll tell 'em George whipped the National leaguers by the score of 6 to 1 in the second game of the series in Philadelphia, and stood 'em on their ears for seven innings in the fifth game down St. Louis way, holding 'em to two hits and no runs, only to see "Lefty" snag the credit for the 2 to 0 triumph on two innings of pitching.

Finally—and this will be the big punch of our story—we'll relate how big George got a shave and a haircut, and a few hours sleep, and then shambled out on the Cardinals in the sixth game in Philadelphia, to blind 'em with his speed and curves, and closing up the series as the A's won 7 to 1.

Out of the six games played, the Cardinals won two, both in St. Louis. Perhaps the mightiest series right-hander since the days of Christy Mathewson, called the "old master," Earnshaw had the Cardinals helpless right from taw today.

Applause for Earnie

As he shuffled up to the plate in the Athletics' batting side of the eighth to hit a fly to Douthit, the crowd of nearly 30,000 began applauding, not with cheers, but with hand-clapping that grew in volume until it took on the sound of a tremendous machine gun barrage. These Philadelphians are not particularly demonstrative, but they had to let out a few notches for Earnshaw.

He grinned sheepishly at the ovation, and he twigged at the black peak of his cap by way of acknowledgment.

He was close to another shut-out in the game this afternoon that gave the series to the Athletics, four games to two, but in the ninth inning Andy High, who had taken "Sparkey" Adams' place at third, singled, Earnshaw lost control and walked Watkins. Frank Frisch hit into a double play, Jimmy Foxx grabbing his liner, and stepping on first to efface Watkins.

Grove Warms Up

Hafey doubled down the third base line, scoring High. Jim Bottomley walked. Down in left field, "Lefty" Grove, who had been warm-

'Baering' Down On The News

With ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Congressman Britten wins an important detail for doctors by flattening the plan of an application every two months for one quart of liquor.

THAT'S NOT ONLY UNSANITARY, BUT TOO LONG TO WAIT.

Doctors can now go wet marketing for six bottles at a clip. You require a diploma to drink nowadays.

This whisky is used in medical offices and operating rooms. When a lady faints the doctor gives her a drink.

THEN THE DOCTOR TAKES A DRINK. AND HE FAINTS.

As an anesthetic producing the sleep that passeth all understanding and amendments, its soporific qualities are equivalent to having your hair parted with a chunk of lead pipe.

We forgot that the six bottles are supposed to last a year. Very often the doctors forget it too.

Its antiseptic and therapeutic values are highly provided you take a forkful every hour.

HUEY P. LONG APPOINTS GIRL

Secretary, 24, Given High State Position

By BARRY J. HOLLOWAY

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 8 (UP)—A 24-year-old girl, attractive of face and figure, today became the first woman secretary of state for Louisiana.

She is Miss Alice Lee Grosjean, former confidential secretary to Gov. Huey P. Long, who commissioned her secretary of state less than eight hours after the death of James J. Bailey who was serving his fourth term.

Miss Grosjean's appointment startled Louisiana political circles more than any other of the official or unofficial acts of the 36-year-old governor who also is Democratic candidate for the United States senate.

Bailey, who long has been a prominent figure in state politics, died early today following a week's illness of pneumonia. His death was a shock as his condition had seemed improved. He was 57 years old.

Miss Grosjean was divorced from James Terrell, El Dorado, Ark., four years ago, two years after she accepted a position as Long's stenographer at the age of 18.

During Long's campaign for the Democratic nomination to the United States senate, Terrell threatened suit against Long for alienation of Miss Grosjean's affections.

Miss Grosjean assumed her new duties at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Politics and public office are not new to the bright-eyed brunette secretary of state.

She began supporting herself at 16, upon her graduation from Shreveport high school. Two years later she began working for Long when he was running for public service commissioner.

Miss Grosjean aided in directing two gubernatorial campaigns for Long, the last two years ago, which was successful. She was active in his senatorial campaign in September.

IRA ANDREWS ACQUITTED ON MURDER COUNT

Jury Frees Oklahoman After Young Sister Testifies

BROTHERS FACE TRIAL

Alleged Slayers of Altus Officer Get Hearing Monday

Special to The Record News

ALTUS, Okla., Oct. 8.—Ira Andrews was acquitted of the murder of Charlie Martin, the asserted father of his sister's child, by a jury in district court here Wednesday afternoon. The acquittal followed a three-hour deliberation.

Martin, who was married and the father of five sons, was slain on the streets of Duke, Okla., last June. Andrews claimed self-defense, but the principal defense witness was Leona Andrews, 18-year-old girl mother, who told of her love affair with Martin and asserted that he was the father of her infant daughter, born since the shooting.

In her testimony, the girl said she had appealed to her brother after she was left penniless and hungry in an Altus rooming house, unable to get in touch with Martin. She said Martin had sponsored a "proxy" marriage by which she became the legal bride of Elmer Brown, alias Lloyd Moore, in Lawton last spring. After the wedding, she and Martin left together, the girl testified. Brown is under charges of marrying under a false name in Lawton.

ROBSIONS FACE TRIAL MONDAY

Special to The Record News

ALTUS, Okla., Oct. 8.—Even though several minor criminal cases and a full docket of civil cases involving large sums of money and property in several instances are scheduled for hearing the remainder of this week in district court, interest is already centering principally on the murder charge to be faced Monday by George Robsion and Vernon Robsion, brothers from Frederick, and Ernest Jackson from Vernon, Texas. These men are charged with murder of Elmer Carter, deputy Jackson county sheriff, the night of Aug. 29.

Carter was killed in a gun battle when he, assisted by Joe Whitt, city policeman, attempted to arrest the three above named men. Carter died within a few minutes after being shot without making a statement. Whitt also suffered a gun wound and as result has been left almost totally blind.

Assistant Attorney General W. P. Brown from Oklahoma City has been secured to assist in prosecution of these three men. Ross Rutherford, Jackson county attorney, will also be assisted by C. G. Womack, deputy county attorney, and Clay Snodgrass, local attorney.

P. Mounts of Frederick and Guy P. Horton of Altus will represent the Robsion brothers, while Jackson will be represented by Texas attorneys who have not as yet been announced.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. (US)—A trend toward economic improvement in many European countries and the Far East, with conditions unchanged in South America, is indicated in reports to the commerce department today.

Maddened Broncs Die In Frenzied Stampede Aboard Unfamiliar Railway Car

DALLAS, Oct. 8. (UP)—Driven from their native haunts on a Kansas ranch, corralled and confined in a darkened, rumbling railroad car on their first night in civilization, 40 "bucking bronchos" stampeded and fought to their deaths last night as a train bore them to Dallas where they were to perform at the world's championship rodeo at the Texas State fair.

M. H. Barnes, promoter of the rodeo, who had an interest in the horses, recounted the story of the tragedy at his hotel room here tonight. He had not been informed of it until he arrived here late today.

None survived the maddened struggle in the railroad car. Trainmen said they heard the noise last night, but the tragedy was not learned until cowboys opened the car at Marlin, Okla., to feed the horses.

World's Toughest

The horses were shipped from Broggs Bros. ranch, near Polista, Kan. It was the first night they had spent from under Kansas skies, their first experience with four confining walls, roofed and floored, with stifling atmosphere and in a car that carried them over familiar prairies without effort on their part.

All were from 2 to 5 years old, the "toughest and meanest critters in the world," according to M. H. Barnes, of Chicago, promoter of the Dallas rodeo, who had an interest in the animals. They had been corralled for the show here and none had felt the touch of human hand.

Barnes said he was at a loss to account for a stampede that would have killed every one of the horses. "There must have been one or two exceptionally 'mean' ones in the bunch," he said. "In all my experience of handling horses I have never heard of a similar occurrence.

Bodies Torn

First indication that anything was wrong inside the car came when attendants, armed with ropes and halters, approached the train to remove the broncos to the livestock barns. An ominous silence was noticeable about the car. One of the men saw bloodstains which dripped down the side and onto the wheels.

The door was opened cautiously, the cowboys fearing a maddened rush for the exit. Still there was no sound from within. The horses lay in a heap, torn and crushed. Inside was a scene of confusion. There was no means of determining how the stampede started or what, if anything had frightened the animals. One thing was apparent, all had taken part in the frenzied scramble.

More Bronchos Ordered

"It may have been the darkness, the rocking of the train or the close quarters," one remarked. "They were all spirited high-strung, that's the reason we use them at the rodeo. It wouldn't take much to get them started in a place like that, I guess."

Tonight fair officials telegraphed for more broncs for the "broncho busters" who were here to defy the wild, fighting animals and ride and "break" them to the amusement of thousands of rodeo fans.

CRASH FATAL TO GEOLOGIST

Dr. George Steiner Killed When Plane Falls

HOUSTON, Oct. 8. (AP)—Dr. Geo. Steiner, 35, Houston geologist and geophysicist, was burned to death today in the crash of his cabin monoplane 20 miles from Kountze, Texas, in Tyler county, his office here was advised tonight.

The ship, taking off in a wooded section, was dashed to the earth as its wing top hit a pine tree. It caught fire within sight of Earl Callahan, one of Dr. Steiner's assistants, who was on the ground, and Callahan's efforts to drag his chief from the flaming cabin were unavailing, the heat being intense. The geologist, it was assumed, was knocked unconscious as he fell.

Doctor Steiner learned to fly recently here and received a federal license two months ago. Associates said he had had about 100 hours in the air.

Dr. Donald C. Barton, who worked with Doctor Steiner, said the latter had flown to the Tyler county location on business this morning and was taking off to return to Houston when the accident occurred. Callahan had to go 12 miles to a telephone to report the accident.

A resident of Houston about five years, Doctor Steiner was a native of Hungary, having come here directly from that country, he was a naturalized American.

Survivors include his widow, now in Paris, who had planned to sail for home Saturday, and his mother, who resides in Hungary. He was American representative for the Eotvos Torsion balance, a device used to determine whether oil is beneath the surface of the earth. Since learning to fly had been using an airplane in connection with his practice, which took him to many remote oil localities.

Kountze is in Hardin county but the spot where the crash occurred is just over the Hardin county line in Tyler county.

SCHOOL BOARD TO CONSIDER COLLEGE PLAN

Meeting Monday to Hear C.-C. Proposal for $300,000 Bond Issue

PROJECT APPROVED

Directors Abandon Plan For County School For Present

The Wichita Falls school board will take action Monday night on recommendations for a new Junior college here, as submitted to and approved by the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at its meeting Wednesday in the Wichita club, according to Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of schools.

The meeting of the school board Monday night will be a regular session and although the board of education originally had in mind the erection of a county junior college, its approval of the recommendations as accepted by the chamber of commerce will leave a clear way for an immediate election for the voting of bonds solely by the Wichita Falls independent school district to finance and maintain a junior college here, Dr. Cantwell said.

Early Election Asked

Following the report of the Junior college committee, the directors of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce at the meeting Wednesday, voted to adopt the recommendation that an early election be called to vote a bond issue of $300,000 for a new junior college building. The recommendation also included that the provisions of the state junior college act, which segregates junior college and high school students to separate buildings, be accepted by the Wichita Falls independent school district, and that the state legislature at its next session be asked to amend the special act of the Wichita Falls school district to permit an increase of 15 cents in the present tax rate to erect and maintain a junior college. The present tax rate of the district is $1 on the $100 valuation.

The 12 votes of the directors were cast 10 for the recommendation, one vote against and one not voting. The chamber of commerce directorate is composed of J. S. Bridwell, president; Lamar Fain, W. M. McGregor, Jerry Vinson, Pat

Jury Bills Makers Of Wine Syrup

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8. (UP)—The California Vineyards company, with headquarters in Chicago, was charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act in an indictment returned by the federal grand jury late today.

The company was alleged to be selling a concentrated syrup which generated a strong alcoholic content under a certain process.

The company was said to have claimed more than a quarter million customers in various cities.

Officers named in the indictment were: Carl A. Futter, president; William J. Vaughn, former president; Calvin George, secretary; Z. C. Futter, treasurer, and M. J. Futter, vice president, all of Chicago; Thomas Stone, Los Angeles, sales manager; G. Frerices, warehouse manager; J. W. Goldberg, local salesman, and J. S. Payne, all of Los Angeles.

Federal authorities said they had been working on the case for several months. It will not conflict with the recent ruling making it legal for home owners to make wine for their own use, it was said.

According to the indictments, the defendants were in possession of a secret process under which grape juice could be purchased from them and taken home, as such, but would turn to wine within 30 or 60 days.

Port, sherry, claret, Sauterne and even champagne were produced through the process, it was charged.

J. T. 'Heartbreak Girl' Drops Out of Marathon Dance Contest

Van Winkle From Olney Wins Crowd's Favor in Effort to Survive

Hazel Ross, called the "heartbreak girl" of the Marathon dance contest now in progress here, dropped out of the running for the prize money at 6:40 o'clock Wednesday morning after a valiant fight of 485 hours.

Little Miss Ross, who Tuesday lost her popular partner, Jerry Armstrong, tried to carry on in the gruelling contest alone, and was aided in every way possible by the other contestants. She was forced to give up the fight, however, and lost her chance to participate in the $1,000 in prizes awaiting the last three couples on the floor.

Miss Ross was dubbed the "heartbreak girl" Tuesday night when Martha Withers, radio star, dedicated the theme song for The Record News' new serial to her. The song, which carries the same title as the new story starting today in The Record News, has a lilt and rhythm that was effectively used by Miss Withers in singing it for Marathon and radio fans. The number is being featured during the remainder of the Marathon contest.

Five couples remained in the contest Wednesday night, although H. F. Sullards, manager of the contest, declared that the end is near for all those participating. The dancers are showing unmistakable signs of being on the verge of collapse, he said. As the contest now stands there are two teams from Iowa Park, one from Wichita Falls, one from Vernon and one from Olney remaining. Girls slept out on the floor of the dance hall Wednesday night, where those in attendance could see the fraction of a minute that it took for the tired bodies to succumb to sleep.

H. J. Fairchild, called the Rip Van Winkle of the contest, continued Wednesday to keep the crowd in an uproar in his efforts to stay awake and to maintain an upright position on the dance floor. The Aztec roller rink, where the contest is in progress, was jammed Wednesday night by the largest crowd that has attended since the opening of the contest more than three weeks ago.

Scientists Peer Through Window In Rabbits' Ear to Study Tissue Growth

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8. (AP)—Through a window in a rabbit's ear scientists are enabled to study the microscopic details of the growth of living tissue.

Through its use, says an announcement by the school of medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, information regarding the manner in which abnormal cellular reactions occur in infectious diseases, such as tuberculosis, and tumor growth, such as cancer, will be obtainable; the new method opens the door to enormous advances in knowledge.

A transparent, double-walled chamber, or window, is put into a small hole made in the ear of a rabbit, like a woman's earring.

One side of this window is of celluloid or glass, and the other of a very thin sheet of mica. The edges of the space intervening are left in contact with the tissues of the ear and from them the blood vessels and other living tissues invade the chamber until they form a complete new layer.

Fire Trucks Accompany Speakers to Schools

A novel method of bringing the importance of fire prevention to the minds of school children was employed Wednesday when the Junior chamber of commerce, which is sponsoring Fire Prevention week here, sent speakers to a number of grade schools to address the students.

Preceding the appearance of the speakers at each school, arrangements had been made for a fire drill which brought the children out on the grounds, where they were assembled about a bannered fire truck and the fire prevention talk given. The school children were urged by the speakers to remind their parents that this is Fire Prevention week and to make all efforts to remove fire hazards about the home.

the city fireman lying unconscious. While they lifed his head to determine if he still were alive, an other shot rang out, this time inside the house, they said.

The men attempted to enter but found the doors locked. They went to a nearby residence, notified the police and called an ambulance. Officers had to break down a screen and a door to gain entrance. Mrs. Gallivan, they said, was moaning and crying "oh please don't hurt me."

The victims were carried to a hospital. Mrs. Gallivan died about 40 minutes after the shooting.

Gallivan was shot once in the left side with a small caliber pistol.

In notes found in the house, Mrs. Gallivan said she had been in ill health for some time. "I hope I am sane," she wrote. "My mind seems to be in a turmoil." In the remainder of the messages she philosophized about her hardships in life.

"Hereafter I am going to stick to my last—a line of conduct which I earnestly recommend to my brethern in God's ministry," he said. "I am through with tinkering with the sort of things that should be done, after all, by men who are devoting their lives to secular affairs."

He charged that modern churches are hopelessly over-organized and pitifully excited about extraneous matters and that the quality of preaching is steadily deteriorating.

"My deepest instinct tells me," he said, "that a preacher is better off if he abstains from activity in politics. It deteriorates his spiritual life and tends to destroy his influence as a spiritual leader."

His determination to alter his life, however, will not make him mute, he concluded, adding that he will always be open to invitations to speak when it is understood he is to speak on some religious question.

forecast of a month ago was said today by Carl Williams, cotton member of the farm board, to be "of no moment as compared with the prospective world's use of cotton this season."

The total indicated production, as reported by the department of agriculture today on condition as of Oct. 1 was 14,486,000 bales of 500 pounds gross, an increase of 1 per cent over a month ago.

By contrast, Mr. Williams pointed out, "exports thus far in the fiscal year exceed those of the same period of last year by 25 per cent more than the government's estimate of increase in the prospective yield."

Averages 154.7 Pounds

The indicated total was approximately 342,000 bales below the production of last year, with the average yield placed by the report at 154.7 pounds per acre, four-tenths of a pound below the average yield for the 10-year period 1919-1928.

This year's cotton ginned prior to Oct. 1, was reported by the census bureau to have totaled 6,304,608 running bales, including 194,160 round bales, counted as half bales, and 3,883 bales of American-Egyptian but exclusive of linters.

Cotton condition was 53.5 as compared with 53.2 per cent of normal on Sept. 1, 55 per cent a year ago and 53.1 per cent for the 10-year average.

OLNEY, Texas, Oct. 8.—Deploring the fact that Southern Baptists used over 80 per cent of $200,000,000 spent for denominational causes in the last five years within a radius of five miles of the contributing churches, George J. Burnett of Memphis, Tenn., admonished representatives of all churches in the Throckmorton-Young county Baptist association assembled here to use more diligence in managing their church affairs.

"We must use the same systematic business methods in our churches that we use in our business if the church is to continue to be the vital factor in the welfare of our nation," he said.

In conclusion Mr. Burnett appealed to the audience to see to it that adequate financing be given to benevolent causes of national and international importance.

WHEN PAIN COMES···

Two hours after eating

WHAT many call "indigestion" is very often nothing but excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. The best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard anti-acid with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this more pleasant way. A small bottle is sufficient to show its merit.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for more than 50 years in correcting excess acid. 25c and 50c a bottle; any drugstore. Complete directions for its many uses, are enclosed with every bottle.

The Genuine Milk of Magnesia is always a liquid—never a tablet. Look for the Phillips' name on the bottle.

HOOVER GIVEN 'HAND' IN SOUTH

President Back Home After Carolina Address

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. (AP)—President Hoover returned to Washington today, tired but contented with receptions accorded him in the Southland, which climaxed the most strenuous speaking tour undertaken since his inauguration.

En route to the capital from King's Mountain in the Carolinas where he made his fourth set address in six days yesterday, the president last night yielded to requests for nearly half a dozen stops of his train in one of the four states of the solid South that gave him a majority in 1928 and appeared with Mrs. Hoover on the rear platform to greet the crowds awaiting him.

At only one point, Charlotte, had a stop been scheduled—this was at the request of Representative Jonas, a Republican running for re-election—but brief halts also were made at Annapolis, Salisbury, High Point and Greensboro, all in North Carolina. Crowds jammed the station at each point and applauded the president and his wife as they went to the platform of their car.

At two points in North Carolina, the president made a brief talk, and at a third, Danville, Va., he assumed the role of humble listener while a textile striker, in working clothes, told him of the textile strike in that city and heard the president repeat what he had said from the train earlier in the day at the same point that such troubles must be adjusted in a peaceful manner.

At Salisbury, the president heard a man shout from the crowd as his train started away: "We're for Hoover 100 per cent."

"Now that you have the habit, keep it," the president replied and the crowd joined him in laughter.

Dispensing with the formality of his speaking trip, he told a large group at Charlotte that his ancestors came from that region and "after looking over the industrial development of this section, which has proved itself one of the most progressive in the United States, I wonder why they ever left it."

He thanked the people of the Carolinas for his reception, which he said had "overwhelmed" him.

Rural Migration to Make Future Citizens 'Dwellers in the Earth'

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Director, Record News Information Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—That a considerable portion of the people of American cities will spend a large part of their time underground is indicated by the trend of construction development in the larger metropolises. The fifteenth census has shown that the movement of population from the rural districts to the cities has not halted city dweller seldom has occasion to but, if anything, has accelerated. This means that new expedients must be found to accommodate the congested millions.

Already the underground business development of the larger cities has gone far. What has been done, however, has only served to prove the practicability of the idea and therefore may be regarded merely as a start downward. It is a safe prediction that the city of the future will do perhaps a quarter of its business below the surface level.

Underground Riding

Startling as it may seem to the dweller in rural districts or in small towns and cities, more than half of the transportation business of New York City is carried on underground. Although millions ride on the elevated lines, the surface cars, taxicabs, and buses in addition to those who throng the streets on foot, they are less than half of the people who are moving about employing transportation. The majority are on the underground, in the bowels of the earth.

It is axiomatic that trade will follow population. Trade, therefore, is burrowing into the earth to meet the subterranean travelers at least half way.

This development is relatively new in cities where the subway systems are important. There have been news stands, cigar stands, and the like at sugway stations, along with the inevitable gum machine with its traffic-clogging mirror, for years. But now real estate men and merchants have begun to have a lively appreciation of the value of underground properties adjacent to such stations, for the more general uses of trade.

Stores Below Street

At certain subway stations there are more stores below the street level and confronting the emerging subway passenger before he can reach the street level than many a small town boasts. Here is a center of trade, clustering around the station, set wholly apart from ordinary stores.

Subways in various cities reach levels below the surface, depending upon contour of the land above. It is possible, in case of deep subway stations, for a two or three story department store to exist entirely below the street level. Already there are numerous restaurants, haberdashers, barber shops, specialty shops, and the like.

Valuations Rise

New valuations have come to be placed on real estate in large subway-served cities. Heretofore, the subsoil has only been regarded as having a positive value when it was underlain by oil or other rich mineral. Now, real estate men are adding a quite definite and realizable value to below-surface properties.

Land in a big city, therefore, is getting to be a precious possession. One has something of value to vend not only in the surface on which may be reared a 50-story building but in the subsoil which may be excavated and tunnelled indefinitely. To be sure, deep basements have long been used in large cities for bank vaults, wine cellars, storage space, and what not. The federal reserve bank of New York, for example, extends five full stories below the street level.

Now, with the upper regions becoming increasingly congested, the underground values have risen perceptibly and it is seen that there is no reason why theaters, general mercantile establishments, and, perhaps, even residences should not exist below the surface. So much advance in this direction already has been made that a whole school of specialists in underground architecture has grown up in that profession.

First Subways Crude

The first subway stations were rather crude affairs. No one had any idea that such a station would ever be anything more than a convenient hole in the ground at which the subway trains could be boarded. A newer conception of subway stations now exists. In London the tube companies recently have rebuilt a number of important stations and made them into things of beauty. Some of them have all the splendor of decoration of the foyer of an opera house. Hundreds of thousands of pounds have been spent on enlargement, redesigning for greater convenience, and especially on artistic ornamentation. Mural paintings by celebrated artists adorn the walls, elaborate mosaics contribute to the decoration, and impressive sculptures attract the eye of the subway passenger. Epstein, the celebrated German sculptor, has executed some of his finest work in stone for the beautification of London subway stations. In the newer stations in New York the same improvement is to be noted.

Cities Lie Underground

Thoroughfares, other than subways, are expected soon to be constructed in the larger cities as the only escape from increasing traffic congestion. Already vehicular tunnels connect New York City with the New Jersey short but, as these go under the Hudson river, opportunity for collateral development is scant. Entire streets, however, are to be constructed underground. Stores with gleamingly illuminated show windows will line these avenues. Automobiles will traverse them and pedestrians hasten along their sidewalks. Days, conceivably, may pass without any emergence to the upper airs by the people living and working in this mole's world. Fantastic as that may seem, there are already many underground arcades lined by shops. Long underground streets are the next inevitable step.

The task is not an easy one. It is immensely complicated by the existence underground of the nerves of the cities in the form of water and gas mains, sewers, and electric transmission conduits. The casual think of the network of pipes and wires that lies below him. He is standing, constantly, on a network so intricate that only experts can trace its ramifications.

Work Necessary

Cities which have subways know more about this difficulty than others. Whenever a new subway is constructed it is necessary to rearrange a countless number of underground facilities.

There is in New York City, for instance, an archive chamber which contains the maps and charts showing every water main, electric conduit, or other underground facility. There are, running under nearly every large city, streams of water which once rippled along in the open air through field or forest. The cities have folded over them, enclosing them in huge cylinders. All this intricacy of detail is charted. So important are these records showing where all these invisible pipes and wires extend that it has been proposed in New York that a duplicate set be made to be housed in a specially constructed building out in the country somewhere. The idea is to make certain that the plans will not be destroyed in some great fire, earthquake, explosion, or similar disaster.

CHARGES FILED IN CAR THEFTS

Additional Autos Expected To Be Recovered

HOUSTON, Oct. 8. (AP)—Seven automobiles have been returned to Houston and felony theft charges filed against six men after an investigation into what police called an automobile theft "ring" operating between Houston and Corpus Christi.

Lieut. B. W. Payne, head of the police department's automobile theft bureau, returned here today and said he expected to recover about 14 more automobiles which he alleged were stolen in Houston and sold in Corpus Christi.

The men charged are Tom C. Nye, Richard Moody, A. B. Evans, J. Arcia, H. J. Bartee and Sanford Bartee. Moody and Sanford Bartee were placed in jail. Arrest of the others was expected momentarily.

Payne said the investigation started with the arrest of Sanford Bartee in Houston. He alleged Bartee was caught while attempting to sell an automobile here that had been stolen in Corpus Christi. Two charges of felony theft were filed against Bartee, and he was sent back to Corpus Christi.

Next, Payne said, he got a telegram from Deputy Sheriff Jim Shown of Corpus Christi saying he had information about a "ring." Payne left immediately for Corpus Christi. Since that time there has been a succession of trips between Houston and Corpus Christi by Payne and detectives.

"The ring was being operated through a finance corporation at Corpus Christi," Payne said. "The cars were being picked up in Houston and sold to the finance corporation at a flat price of $200 each.

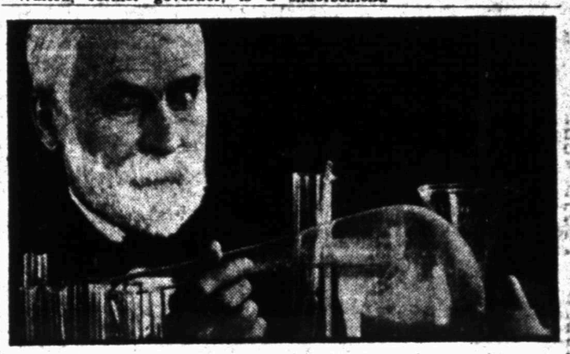

"The finance corporation was getting $375 and upward for the same cars. When the prospective purchaser didn't have the money, he would be financed at a charge of about 35 per cent interest."

Special to The Record News.

TEMPLE, Okla., Oct. 8.—In a verdict returned after an inquest here Wednesday afternoon, a coroner's jury declared that Mrs. J. S. Bennett, found fatally shot in her bed early Wednesday morning, had died from self-inflicted wounds.

The verdict followed an all-day investigation in which her husband to whom she has been married only a few months, was questioned.

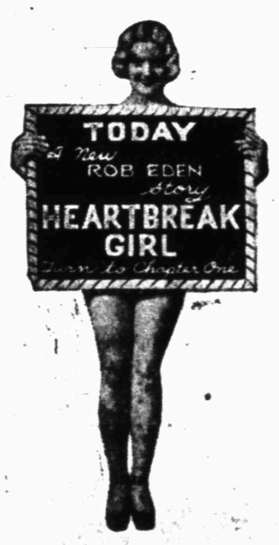

Mrs. Bennett, 56 years old, slept Tuesday night on the screened front porch of the home near Temple. Both doors were locked when the shot, fired from a .38 caliber pistol, was fired. The gun lay beside Mrs. Bennett's bed. The bullet had entered her head just above the right ear. She died 20 minutes after she was found by her husband.

Funeral arrangement had not been completed late Wednesday.

Surgeons Find Cure for Clammy Hand and 'Cold Feet' Nuisance

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 8. (AP)—The cold and clammy hand now may be changed to an appendage capable of a warm handclasp, the Southwest Clinical conference was told by Dr. L. G. Rowntree in a lecture here today.

The change, he said, is effected by cutting two little nerves that lie along the spines of persons whose hands and feet are cold.

Persons with arthritis or bone fever also may be cured by the operation which increases the blood supply in the cold or afflicted regions.

Similar operations, Dr. Rowntree said, alleviate agina pectoris, a heart ailment and they may be offered as a cure for other ills. Dr. Rowntree is from the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn.

CONFERENCE TO DECIDE SESSION

Pink Parrish Tells Moody Of Farmers' Needs

AUSTIN, Oct. 8. (AP)—Declaring the need for money more acute now than it was before the recent rains, Senator Pink Parrish of Lubbock today asked Gov. Dan Moody to call a special session of the legislature to appropriate funds for stricken farmers.

The governor was noncommital, saying further conferences would be held with Parrish, one tomorrow morning, when "we have more time to talk about it." The governor said, he had a sheaf of telegrams and letters, both for and against the session, and had not decided whether he would call it.

Studies Records

Senator Parrish planned to remain in Austin three or four days, delving into the records of the 1918 legislature, which appropriated funds for a similar purpose.

Parrish said he believed the cost of a special session would not exceed $20,000. Members should not be asked to serve without pay, he said, and he estimated that $8,000 would pay the traveling expenses, $1,000 a day the pay of members, and other incidental expenses bringing the total to not more than $20,000.

He had no set plan for the legislature to follow in enacting relief measures but presumed that the plan of 1918 when each county was allotted a certain sum to be divided by the county commissioners, might be followed.

Seed and Feed Needed

Recent rains, he declared, have made the need even greater, for now there are prospects for crops, whereas befoee there was no prospects. Two things are needed, he said, seed to plant and feed for livestock. If farmers should be given money to buy these two necessities, he expressed the belief they could take care of other expenses themselves until the next harvest season.

Farmers in the stricken area, he declared, have given up hope for any relief except what might come from the state.

The detour is still rough, despite the work of crews all day Wednesday, but is passable for light vehicles, D. M. Puckett, division engineer of the state highway department announced.

The water which destroyed the temporary provisions on the main highway is receding slowly and the road will not be open for several days, Mr. Puckett said.

The engineer reported that emergency repairs on the Olney-Throckmorton road at Miller creek had made the highway passable within a few hours after the heaviest downpours, although the strip of road near the creek is still extremely muddy.

"GOOD to the LAST DROP"

THE first coffee to achieve a genuine national popularity in America was Maxwell House.

From the place of its origin in the Old South it grew and grew in favor until it embraced every neighborhood in the nation.

It is only natural that such success should attract imitators.

All too frequently, however, the chief hope of such imitators is the dubious magic of the outworn claim "just as good."

To achieve a coffee good as Maxwell House would be no simple matter.

For despite the modern science that surrounds its production this coffee fundamentally is still that matchless beverage of the golden age of American dining.

In essence it is the very same coffee created by a Tennessee gentleman for his own private use with no thought of commercial destiny.

Into his experiments went the most precious coffee beans obtainable and out of them came the most fragrant mellow-smooth quintessence of delight that has ever reposed in a cup.

This taste-quality of Maxwell House is not arguable—it is something which must be experienced.

It is at once the denial and the despair of any other coffee claimed to be "just as good."

That is why, year after year, Maxwell House has gone steadily forward winning new friends and holding old ones.

That is why the friendly blue tin now waiting at your grocer's is today the best coffee-bargain that money can buy. ★

★ Maxwell House Coffee has been reduced 11¢ a pound to the wholesale trade since July 1, 1929. This reduction parallels the reduction of green coffee, and you may now enjoy Maxwell House Coffee at the lowest prices in years

RULING ON OIL CLAIMS 'FALSE'

Suspended Employe Tells of Shale Deal

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. (UP)—Ralph S. Kelley, suspended interior department employe, charged today in a copyrighted article in the New York World that former Secretary of Interior Hubert Work's decision validating millions of dollars worth of paper claims on western Colorado oil shale lands was based on a false theory.

Work's ruling, according to Kelley, voided the homestead claim of George L. Summers and recognized the oil land claim of J. D. Freeman. The decision was based, Kelley said, on the assertion of lawyers that the ground in question was impregnated with oil.

"The engineers and attorneys of the Denver field division knew the falsity of the theory," Kelley stated. "They knew, as I did, that it would not hold against the facts, which showed that the oil lands were far from being 'mineralized,' that, in truth, whole areas under the surface was as barren of oil as a snowdrift."

Kelley, who formerly was chief of the field division of the general land office at Denver, quoted from a previous decision denying Freeman's claim to substantiate his charge. Previously Kelley had asserted that the Freeman-Summers decision set a precedent that validated claims of oil companies to public lands worth $20,000,000,000.

The hearing held by Work was ex parte and was attended by lawyers representing the following oil companies according to Kelley: Pure Oil Co.; Union Oil Co., of California; Prairie Oil and Gas Co.; Midwest Refining Co.; Continental Oil Co., and Carter Oil Co.

In Conference on Oil Land Charges

FRANCE DENIES YANKEE RIGHTS

American Pays for Home But Can't Get It

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. (AP)—Charges of discrimination against American property owners in France, which may involve the entire question of reciprocal Franco-American treaty rights, are being investigated by the state department.

Attention of the department has been called to the case of Capt. Paul Rockwell, an American, who purchased a home in Paris in 1926 and has been defeated in every effort since that time to obtain possession of his home from a Frenchman who was a tenant when the purchase was made. The tenant, it was alleged, upon learning the new owner was an American, declined to move from the premises under terms of the so-called French rent laws.

Under the Franco-American treaty of 1853, French citizens in the United States and American citizens in France were accorded equal rights with citizens of the country in which they resided, so far as property ownership was concerned. This treaty now would accord these rights to some 155,000 Frenchmen in the United States as compared with only about 12,000 Americans residing in France.

Captain Rockwell, who fought in the French army in the world war and was decorated for bravery, with several of the highest honors which can be given in France, has met with no success, however, in pressing his case as a test before the French courts on five different occasions.

In one instance, it was charged, the judge, as the case opened before him, asked Rockwell's attorney if his client was an American citizen. Receiving an affirmative reply, it was said, the judge replied:

"Then leave the court. An American citizen has no rights here. If he wishes to enjoy the rights of the French laws, he must become naturalized."

The judge, according to information before the state department, refused to allow the case to proceed and delivered from the bench remarks uncomplimentary to the United States.

Aside from watching the situation, which has deprived a considerable number of Americans in Paris of possession of property they have purchased, the state department has done little. The matter was brought recently to the attention of Under Secretary of State Cotton, but there was no action until Captain Rockwell returned from France to appeal personally for assistance.

Interesting Programs Are Given At Wednesday Clubs

Wednesday is Study club day in Wichita Falls. The maids and matrons meet to take up the various courses they have chosen. With its arrival a group of young matrons, sponsored by the New Century club, organized and held their first meeting as the 1930 Study club. Modern fiction will make up their programs and they have adopted purple and gold as club colors.

The first meeting was held with Mrs. J. H. Campbell at her home on Taylor and Mesdames Fred T. Couper, J. A. Fisher and Ben G. Oneal of the New Century club were present.

Mrs. Couper welcomed the members as the "baby club" of the New Century and Mrs. Oneal made an inspiring talk on federation.

Officers are Mesdames J. H. Campbell, president; George Mobley, vice president; W. H. Baker, recording secretary; Ray Thompson, corresponding secretary; Jack Rayzor, treasurer; Dudley Foy, parliamentarian; E. D. Malone, critic; and A. A. Spencer, press reporter. Members include these officers and Mesdames Fay Hardeman, E. D. Malone, Roy Grimes, John Swanner, F. P. Pace and R. V. Fite.

Mrs. Campbell served delightful refreshments to the guests and members after the business meeting Wednesday. Mrs. R. V. Fite was the only member absent.

New Century Junior

Miss Marguerite Fisher was hostess to members of the New Century Junior club when roll call was answered with assigned topics. Mrs. S. M. Gose discussed "Fundamentals of Child Study" and Mrs. John Hampton talked on "Being Well Born."

Refreshments were served to Mesdames Overton Abernathy, Ray C. Arnhold, Joe Carrigan, Ted R. Krohn, Dwight Ross, Gordon West, Chester Wynne, Eugene Clark, A. R. Dillard, S. M. Gose, John Hampton, Misses Marguerite Fisher, Elva Killingsworth, Ethel Moran and Crystelle Waggoner.

Unity Junior

In the business meeting, Mrs. J. Truman Stevens was elected a member of the club. Mrs. C. E. Bailey acted as leader and the roll call was answered with statements of birth, rearing or travel in connection with the Southern states. The feature was an enjoyable manner in which members became better acquainted.

Mrs. C. L. Baum read a splendid paper, "The Old South and the New," which was commented on with much favor. A paper on "The Old Literature and the New" was given excellently by Mrs. L. L. Boardman. Mrs. Houston Rogers discussed the "Southern Press" in an interesting manner.

Members present were Mesdames C. E. Bailey, C. L. Baum, L. L. Boardman, R. D. Bone, R. R. Clark, S. L. Conn, Frank B Creighton, J. M. Isbell, W. H. Weaver, R. A. Lincoln, W. R. Little, O. P. Roll call was answered with the names of foreign playwrights and Mrs. J. A. McFall, the leader, gave a vividly interesting paper on "Starting a Career." "A Star," the paper given by Mrs. G. H. Watson, told of the different plays in which Arliss had starred. A round table discussion, closing the program was one of its most interesting features.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Mrs. Newton Maer is making "promptness" one of the watchwords of her regime as president of the Woman's Forum. It strikes us there could be no better.

Waiting at business meetings and social functions, we have already wished this autumn season there were more women who respected the word "Time."

Webster says in definition "an hour." But to few women an hour set means that particular hour. A program luncheon or dinner for which they probably pay a stated sum is set for, let us say, 6:30; they arrive at 7 or 7:30.

In a private home, it seems to us that to be late for a luncheon or dinner is an insult to the hostess. We mean of course an avoidable tardiness. If a guest feels that she cannot be prompt, she should refuse.

One may rob herself; but when she is late and holds a luncheon or a program back, she is not only robbing herself, but committing highway robbery on the time of others.

Time is a precious thing to us. We resent it when we are held up and lose our golden hours.

We are not alone. Women of all ages cry every day that they are not able to run their homes and take the part that is asked of them in church or club work.

Yet, if a club meeting is scheduled for 12 o'clock sharp, they loiter in at 12:15 or 12:30. We have known women who were never on time. The word promptness was not in their dictionary.

There is no more excuse for a woman being late than there is for a man. Fancy how long an engineer or a conductor on one of our great trunk lines would hold his place if he was not on hand to take out his train.

In business offices, one sees women wasting time. A cardinal virtue in the business world is promptness as well as efficiency.

Mrs. L. M. Hogsett, addressing the Business and Professional Women's club Tuesday night said the only woman who had ever reached prominence in the Metropolitan Insurance company reached that place by always being where she was expected to be.

Time is a jewel that cannot come back. Why waste it?

Twain Study Club To Meet Tuesday, Oct. 14

Members of the Twain Study club will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 14 with Mrs. W. W. Voss, 1613 Collins, at 2 o'clock, instead of on Thursday, Oct. 9 as announced.

First Methodist W. M. S. Completes Mission Textbook

Members of the First Methodist W. M. S. closed the study of the textbook, "Trailing the Conquistadores," by Dr. Samuel Guy Inman, in the third day of study Wednesday, with Mrs. Q. B. Lee in charge of the interesting course. Mrs. Jason Walker led the devotional following the congregational singing that opened the meeting.

Mrs. Victor B. Lowrey gave lovely special vocal numbers with Mrs. J. W. Akin at the piano, and topic four, "Porto Rico, a New Problem for the United States," was taken up in a discussion by Mrs. Lee, who told of the size of the island, 35 by 100 miles, with its population of 1,500,000 and stressed the responsibility of the United States since its acquisition during the war with Spain.

Mrs. D. A. Cook gave a review of "Overpopulation and Underfeeding," telling of the lack of industrial outlet, the educational, industrial and agricultural problems and that of the government.

Mrs. E. B. Leharck used National Geographic and Mentor magazines in illustrating her talk on the beautiful old buildings and the primitive manners in which industries were handled. The pictures brought the situation before the audience more clearly than words could have done. She spoke of the pleasure of trips through the islands with their delightful winter climate.

Mrs. D. A. Cook spoke of the duty toward the islands and the conquest that must be made in this day stressing the many natural advantages of which the United States must make the most.

Mrs. Lee closed the study of the book with a discussion in the way of an opinion test. Among the interesting questions asked, were "Should the United States protect the Western world from European intermeddling?" Was congress right in raising the tariff on Cuban sugar to protect the industries of the United States and secure labor for her unemployed?" and "Are Latin Americans correct in their belief that missionary enterprise is the forerunner of political and economic aggrandizement on the part of the United States?" The discussion was of keen interest.

Engagement Announced At Lovely Luncheon Wednesday

In an exquisite setting of white and green, announcement was made Wednesday at the Wichita club of the betrothal and approaching marriage of one of the most charming girls in Wichita Falls when Mrs. A. K. Jarrell entertained a group at luncheon, honoring her daughter, Miss Adele Jarrell, who will become the bride of Col. Ralph Emmet Spake in a quiet home wedding, Oct. 17.

No color but green was used in the decorations; masses of white chrysanthemums with feathery sprays of fern, and white in silver holders with ruches of white tulle made a table that suggested bridal beauty. Place cards and announcement cards were unique in their combination. Rings with tiny bouquets of lilies of the valley and sprays of fern lay at each place and beneath each ring, on the place card was engraved "Ralph-Adele, Betrothed, Oct. 17."

The wedding will be a simple but beautiful home ceremony, taking place at 7:30 on the evening of Oct. 17 and will be attended only by members of the family. A reception will follow from 8 to 10.

Miss Jarrell is one of the loveliest and most popular of Wichita Falls society girls and Colonel Spake, who remains in Wichita Falls to attend to business here is lieutenant colonel in the reserve air corps of Kansas.

Covers were laid at the lovely announcement luncheon for Mrs. F. H. W. Krenning of St. Louis, Miss Margaret Smith and her guest, Miss Ruth Slaton of Lubbock; Mesdames Warner Zimmer, Curtis Atkinson, C. E. McCutchen, R. O. Harvey, Walter Priddy, J. W. Akin Jr., R. L. Hardeman Wheat Crop Responds to Rainfall

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Oct. 8.—Wheat prospects for 1929-31 pastures are very much brighter since the 2.61 inches of rain which well here last week-end, ending a four months drouth. The rain fell slowly, all soaking into the parched ground, and already the wheat fields are showing green.

Hundreds of acres of wheat had been drilled "in the dust" and these farmers are jubilant over the prospects.

The far eastern end of the county did not share in this general rain, but had had other rains during the period when the western and central parts of the county did not get any.

October of 1915 produced 5.97 inches; 1919, 3.27; 1920, 3.80; 1923, 10.27; 1926, 3.15. Up to Oct. 6, 1930, the rainfall had exceeded the rainfall of the month of October, 1929.

"Danderine" dissolves the Crust of Dandruff

So Easy to Use! It Soothes, Tones Scalp, Gives New Life to Hair!

Dandruff is unsightly! And what is worse, it steals life itself from the hair; makes it dull, brittle, scraggy; starts it to falling out; makes you gray before your time.

Why tolerate this? There's no use when you can get "Danderine" from any drug store for just a few cents.

Danderine is no experiment. It has proven its merit by years of use and popularity. It dissolves the scalp of dandruff in a hurry. The scalp is cleansed, soothed and toned by the first application. Excess oil is removed from the hair; it's own natural color is brought out marvelously; it is soon sparkling with new life and lustre. Used consistently, Danderine keeps the scalp in the pink of condition; encourages the hair to grow long, thick, more youthful looking.

Five million bottles used a year shows Danderine's popularity! And you won't wonder at this when you learn its easy use and see how quickly it gives health to the scalp and vigor and youthful appearance to the hair!

Every drug store and toilet counter sells Danderine; 35c bottles.—Adv.

"He's your Dog" exclaimed the Police Captain*

"YES, HE'S LOP-EARED . . . Sure. It's the right one."

Police-Captain Smith frowned into his telephone. How many times, he wondered, must he repeat these details?

Two hundred miles away at Jonesboro, an anxious owner was hanging on every word that came over the telephone wires. Hopefully, he was seeking to identify his lost dog.

"What?" barked the captain irritably. "You want to speak to him!"

Then—understandingly—"By George! I believe you've hit the nail on the head. Just a moment. I'll hold him up to the telephone."

What was said is known only to the man and the dog. The dog's actions, however, spoke for themselves.

* * *

"He's your dog, all right," exclaimed the police captain.

Thus, happily, ended a two-week search.

Incidents like this furnish constant proof of the value of "long distance." Whether it be the identification of a lost dog, a business deal involving thousands of dollars, or sweethearts' important nothings, your telephone stands ready to serve you.

If you aren't accustomed to using "long distance," you will be surprised at its speed, clarity, low cost.

Most calls are completed while you remain on the line. You can usually hear as clearly as though you were talking to your next door neighbor.

The cost is low. You can talk a hundred miles for 60 cents (station-to-station rates).

DENVER FIGHTS R. I. PETITION

Road Protests Reopening Shamrock Case

Special to The Record News.

SHAMROCK, Texas, Oct. 8.—Vigorously answering in detail all of the contentions of the Rock Island railway in its motion for rehearing and modification of the order of the Interstate Commerce commission permitting both the Fort Worth and Denver Northern and the Rock Island Railways to build in this area, the Fort Worth and Denver has filed its brief and argument with the Interstate Commerce commission in Washington, praying that a rehearing of the matter be denied.

A copy of the brief received this week by members of the local railroad committee, reflect the contentions of the Denver in the railroad controversy. The Rock Island has sought to reopen the case on three grounds. First, the certificate provides for a joint line construction from Shamrock to a point six miles soith of Wellington, and the Rock Island contends that this was not in issue in the original case, and it was not within the power of the commission to impose such condition upon the construction of the railroad.

Answers Arguments

The Rock Island contends secondly, that it should have all local traffic originating in the Shamrock and Wellington area and in the intervening country, and the Rock Island contends in the third place that the Denver should not, under any conditions, be permitted to come into Shamrock, but should be compelled to stop its line four miles west of Shamrock, then operate over the Rock Island lines to a point six miles south of Wellington, but give no service of any kind, either passenger or freight, to Shamrock, Wellington, or intervening points.

The Denver, in answer to the first point of the Rock Island, cites the interstate commerce act which gives the commission power to "attach to the issues of the certificate such terms and conditions as in its judgment the public convenience and necessity may require." And in answer to the second point of the Rock Island, the Denver points out that, although it will divide the local traffic in the Shamrock and Wellington area, the Rock Island line at Quanah and on to Fort Worth will cause a division of revenues for the Denver at Quanah, Vernon, Seymour and also a division of revenues from Amarillo.

Entitled to Lines

The Denver further points out that Shamrock is entitled to each of the two lines of railroad and their service, even though they operate on the same track, and should not be confined to the construction and service of the Rock Island line.

The Denver points out further in its reply that it has made an effort to reach a joint-line agreement with the Rock Island, but the president of the Rock Island advised that they did not desire to comply with the order of the commission with reference to the joint track arrangement. The Denver further points out that it has at all times been willing to accept the order of the commission and has already negotiated with Pampa, Shamrock, Wellington and Childress with respect to rights of way, station ground and other facilities, and has made a detailed survey of its new road, and states that it is anxious and ready to proceed with the actual construction at the earliest possible moment.

Rains Bring Big Grain Acreage Near Anson

Special to The Record News.

ANSON, Texas, Oct. 8.—At least 30,000 acres of land in Jones county will be sowed in either wheat, barley or oats due to the recent rains according to a conservative estimate made by a local grain dealer. This is the largest acreage sowed in grain crops in this county since 1919 and possibly since 1915, the estimate disclosed.

The figures show that three-fourths of the estimated 30,000 acres will be sown in wheat with oats next in line and a very small per cent, possibly one-sixteenth, in barley.

Law Requiring Bond For Drilling Wells Upheld

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—Action of the Oklahoma county district court in upholding the city ordinance providing for a $200,000 bond before drilling an oil well within the corporate limits was upheld late yesterday by the state supreme court.

The court denied Walter H. Gant, A. D. Hudspeth and Knox L. Garvin their petition for an injunction restraining the city from interfering with the wells, located in East Grand, Eckroat and Mead's addition.

California Court to Rule Oct. 13 on Return of Alleged Oklahoma Slayer

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8. (UP)—Joseph R. Adkins will learn Oct. 13 whether he must return to Oklahoma on a charge that he is Robert Atchison, the man who committed murder in Indian Territory 33 years ago, according to a decision on file in federal courts today.

The court deferred until that time its ruling on the legality of a U. S. commissioner's order for removing Adkins to Oklahoma as the alleged slayer of August Coontz, a railroad man, in 1897. Harry Atchison has told authorities that Adkins was his brother and was convicted of slaying Coontz but escaped from jail.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—A special session of the Oklahoma legislature will have to be called if Joseph R. Adkins, identified as Robert Atchison, convicted on a murder charge, is returned to Oklahoma from California, Atty. Gen. J. Berry King said today.

The state has no funds to return Adkins and such funds would have to be appropriated at a special legislative session, King said. Neither Custer or Canadian county officials will sanction funds for his return.

Atchison was convicted on a murder charge in the death of Joseph Coontz 33 years ago in Indian territory on land now in Custer county. He escaped in Canadian county.

National Willingness to Pay Tribute To 'Robber Barons' Blamed for Crime

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. (UP)—The nation's crime wave is due to a national willingness to pay tribute to "robber barons" for liquor and to purchase special privileges, Col. Robert I. Randolph, head of the Chicago Association of Commerce, declared here today.

Speaking at a New York board of Trade luncheon, the man who is leading the civilian anti-crime drive in Chicago declared New York is the "port of entry for much of the crime in the country and Chicago is perhaps the largest distributing center."

Prohibition and racketeering, he held, lay at the root of the crime wave.

Gigantic Sales

"It has been conservatively estimated that the gross sales of illegal liquor in Chicago amount to $3,000,000 a week and New York's weekly bill is probably much greater than that.

"An army of thieves, thugs, gunmen and rascals has been built up in the last 12 years, and government has broken down in this country because respectable citizens by the millions pay a constantly mounting tribute to these robber barons for stuff they wouldn't drink if it was lawful. . . . Booze, gambling, prostitution, none of them could exist if the laws against them were enforced and the law enforcement agencies, city, state and national are incompetent or corrupt whenever these violations are found."

"Worm Turns"

Randolph suggested, however, that the "worm is beginning to turn" in protest against present conditions.

He attacked crooked business agents of unions and dishonest organizations of employers or contractors. Chicago leaders had united to clean house, he said, adding:

"If we don't save ourselves, no one will save us, and the maggots of Communism are always crawling and breeding in our spots waiting patiently and subversively and surreptitiously in the hope of an ultimate and complete breakdown of our Democratic form of government."

APPEALS SENTENCE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—Tony Axtell filed an appeal today in the criminal court of appeals from the one-year penitentiary sentence he received in Oklahoma county on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. John P. Eccio filed an appeal from the 30-day jail sentence and $50 fine he received in Pittsburgh county when convicted of possession of liquor.

WHAT PRICE BUBBLES?

Try White King today. Its economy will surprise you—a teaspoonful is plenty for the wash basin, a cupful ample for the washing machine, even in hard or lukewarm water. It's condensed. Sold by your grocer.

'Airport of Plains' At Waynoka, Okla. To Be Abandoned

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—Recent mergers and air mail contract among major air line companies wipe out the "airport of the plains," the Transcontinental Air Transport airport at Waynoka, in northwestern Oklahoma, it was learned today from company headquarters at New York.

For 18 months the little plains town has enjoyed the prosperity of being a major link in transcontinental air and rail service and the home of an elaborate $300,000 port of the T. A. T. company. After Oct. 15, the personnel and equipment here will be transferred to Amarillo, Texas. The port's lack of airmail volume was believed responsible for the change.

Removal of the airport was announced yesterday in a United Press dispatch from the Alva Review-Courier.

Meanwhile, other shifts in plane schedules were being made in the Southwest. Oklahoma City, which lost the Southwest Air Fast Express passenger service when the company was awarded the southern air mail contract, has been assured of a plane on a trunk air line of the American Airways, Inc., operating from Chicago to Dallas. Tulsa also will be a point on this route.

Negroes and Whites Fight for Road Work

PEARL RIVER, La., Oct. 8. (UP)—Unemployed white men and negroes working on a highway construction project engaged in a free-for-all fight here today. Parish officers were called to end the disturbance, and reported no one injured.

The fight was said to have been caused when the whites sought to force the negroes to leave work, and give them their jobs.

Drink Central American Coffees for 3 Days

And You'll Never Go Back To Less Flavory Kinds

Twice the Richness —Twice the Flavor Try this 3-Day Test

IT'S not the name on the package that tells how coffee will taste.

It's the coffee inside. And where that coffee was grown! For Nature herself puts the flavor in the growing berries.

That's why your first taste of Folger's will be a revelation. Because the coffee itself is different—grown in an entirely different district.

We procure it from along the West Coast of Central America, a region where coffee grows unlike any known before.

Only one pound out of every 20 grown in the world comes from this district. The supply thus is limited. Few people in a lifetime ever get the chance to taste this royal flavor.

We don't want to tell you how good it is. We want you to try it. Find out for yourself what an amazing difference in coffee richness there can be.

Drink It 3 Times

8 in 10 people who drink this coffee three times will probably find that it spoils their taste for ordinary coffees. Other kinds taste "flat" and "thin" afterwards. We have built one of the largest coffee businesses in the world simply by letting people taste the real flavor of Central American coffees.

For a real adventure in coffee flavor try this test today.

A Pound to Try—At Our Risk

Just go to your grocer and buy a pound of Folger's. Drink it tomorrow morning. Next morning serve the coffee you have been using. The third morning serve Folger's again. Then choose between them.

If for any reason you decide against Folger's your grocer will refund your money. We'll pay him. And you will have a pound of coffee without cost. But if you do as 8 out of 10 do, you'll never be satisfied to return to less flavorful coffees. And you'll become a regular customer of ours. That's why we can afford to make this offer. Try it. You'll be glad you did.

A Monument To Spain's Ancient Glory
Many of the marvelous old buildings of the Conquistadores have been destroyed by earthquakes. But here is a beautiful survivor of the period when Spanish civilization in Central America was at its height. It was built about 1550—long before the Pilgrim Fathers saw the Mayflower.

Native Coffee Huller
Formerly the outer hull was removed from all green coffee by this primitive method. Today this work is done by machine.

The New World's Coffee Eden—Central America—In the tiny spots shown on the map are grown coffees unlike any known before. These rare coffees give your breakfast cup of Folger's its extra richness and flavor.

HOME DECORATION TALKS—NO. 8

by Fay Fraser

HAPPY WORKSHOPS

This is a true story. My sister had been married about five years when she moved from a delightful home in Houston to Tulsa. They bought a house in the suburbs. She found that the kitchen depressed her for some reason. She didn't understand why. She took a positive dislike to cooking.

Finally one day she was talking with an old friend of hers who asked her why she didn't make her kitchen more cheerful. Then my sister realized what the trouble was. No one can work in a gloomy workshop. I recommended Flex—that marvelous new color finish, to brighten up her kitchen. Flex is neither a lacquer nor an enamel, but combines the better qualities of both.

With my help we arranged a charming decorative scheme in the kitchen of Dove Gray and Old Ivory Flex, with little stencil patterns in Orchid Flex on the cabinet. She found that Flex was unusually easy to use. It spread so smoothly and dried without any brush marks. Now she says she would not change her kitchen for any other in the world.

Flex comes in a choice of eighteen brilliant colors. It forms a tough, elastic surface, lustrous and smooth as rubbed porcelain. Perhaps your kitchen or some of your other rooms are gloomy. Try a can or so of Flex and you will soon see how a few touches of sparkling color change the appearance of your home.

A Martyr to Science
High Cost of Beauty
Atonement Needed
A Star Dies Out

By EMILE GAUVREAU

In 1911 Dr. Christian Deetjen, of Baltimore, had a finger removed from his left hand in the interests of X-ray. Yesterday he deliberately had his left arm cut off in the same cause. The arm had become affected by constant use of the X-ray.

Dr. Deetjen is a living martyr to science. In the past 30 years he has submitted to eight operations. An associate of Roentgen, discoverer of the X-ray, he typifies the spirit of self-sacrifice as only a true scientist can.

It is hard to believe that such men as Dr. Deetjen live in the same country and era along with such men as Vause, Capone, "Legs" Diamond and the wholesale buyers and sellers of bench jobs.

The high cost of living, and loving, has been commented on often enough. But the high cost of beauty, long suspected, has now come in for its own round of publicity.

No doubt a "thing of beauty is a joy forever." But husbands and lovers in America, who have to shell out $750,000,000 a year to support this joy may not agree with John Keats. The lipstick and plucked eyebrow, the mud pack and the perfumes from Shalimar, have combined to constitute themselves one of the major businesses of the world. Who would think that the vanity of Cleopatra on the Nile and her prototypes of today along the Hudson and Lake Michigan could build up so vast an enterprise? But, then, all is vanity.

If the power of prayer can effect change, now is the time for it. Wednesday night in synagogues, all over the world, Jews started their Yom Kippur, followed by a day of prayer, meditation and fasting.

The sins of the world are many, and a Day of Atonement might very well be participated in by all creeds, nations and peoples. But denying the lusts of the flesh one day in the year is also to be recommended for universal observance.

Thousands will mourn the brilliant, young musical comedy star, Jack Donahue, who dies at 38, amid fame and fortune. He tried to do too much and his heart gave way. A man too busy to take care of his health is like a mechanic too busy to take care of his tools. Good health is above wealth but Donahue did not have time enough to find it out. When his heart began to give out, the only medical advice he could buy was, "Don't overdo anything." If he had heeded it 10 years ago he would be alive today.

Fight Against Helium Embargo Wins Approval

PARIS, Oct. 8. (UP)—Warm praise for the initiative of Rear Admiral William A. Moffet and others in Washington for their efforts to obtain removal of the American embargo on helium was expressed today by French aviation officials.

"Efforts to obtain removal of the embargo and permit European airships to use helium instead of inflammable hydrogen gas in peace time is excellent," said Minister of Air Laurent Eynac, referring to the discussion that followed the explosion and fire which destroyed the dirigible R-101.

"Helium is the only safe gas in existence and unfortunately it is rare, difficult to obtain and most expensive."

ATTENDS CONFERENCE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—State Charities and Correction Commissioner Mabel Bassett left today for Louisville, Ky., to attend the national conference of juvenile agencies in the annual convention of the American Prison association. Mrs. Bassett is vice president of the prison association.

"Heart haim haint worth a dime in this court," thundered Judge Pusey today after warnin' Miss Flose Furviance to stay in her class an' leave ole men alone. Miss Gert Bentley has thumbed so many rides that she kin now open the door of any make of car.

A school superintendent in New Jersey thinks that every classroom should be equipped with radio receiving sets. For sitting-up exercises, undoubtedly.

A witty fellow who died happy was the one who had the presence, when drowning in a Swiss lake, to cry "Alp! Alp!"

The Idealism of Youth

PEOPLE who address college students usually begin by assuring their audience that it is nothing less, collectively, than the light of the world. The hope of the future is mentioned freely, and all hands are told that they will do great things when they plop out into the world.

The other day, however, the Rev. Elmore M. McKee, chaplain of Yale university, sounded off for Yale undergraduates by declaring bluntly that today's youth has no idealism, clings to outworn conventions and shows no desire to lead its generation "to any but the conventional wares of Main street's glittering externalism."

Mr. McKee followed this by advising his hearers to cultivate the old-fashioned virtue of humility, and begged them to develop at least one thinker who could "show us the vulgarity of our sophistication."

All in all, this is strange and refreshing doctrine for college students. Humility and Yale are not often mentioned in one breath, and a reference to the vulgarity of sophistication sounds strange when it comes from that glittering New Haven campus. One can only wish that the speech might be repeated on every campus in the land, and that the rising generation would think about it a little.

The world is a much more trustful and confining place than is often realized; and year after year it goes on looking to its young college graduates for some sort of guidance that will be a little bit cleaner and higher than the sort it ordinarily produces for itself. But that sort of guidance proceeds only from high ideals, and high ideals, as Mr. McKee points out, are not popular these days, with youth or with age.

So it is that leadership of the right sort is lacking. Hands that reach out for bread find themselves clutching stones. Our most honored thinkers, our most exalted writers, wrinkle pessimistic brows, assure us that man's destiny is low and his nature is evil, and moan dolefully over the inherent cruelty of the cosmos; and youth accepts the cue and sets forth, diploma in hand, to get what is gettable while the getting is good.

Youth, indeed, is not to blame. It takes its tone from the world around it, and it is hardly youth's fault if that tone has gone a bit sour in recent years. And the rest of us, being blind, pat youth on the back for conforming, and rejoice that there is no heresy on the campus.

What is needed is more talking like Mr. McKee's. Let youth be reminded that our sophistication is vulgar and our eye for the main chance is jaundiced. Let it be urged to rise above our level and discover, once more, that the soul is something more than an outworn word. If it does we shall begin by being vastly alarmed—but we shall wind up by falling in line and regaining our lost hopes.

The Decay of a Theory

IT IS interesting to wonder just what that old English economist, Thomas Malthus, would think and say if he could get a look at the world of 1930.

A number of years ago Malthus begat a great wave of pessimism by demonstrating logically that the world's population tends to increase faster than the means of subsistence. This, he pointed out, condemned mankind forever to a sharp competition for the necessities of life. It made it futile to dream of ever wiping out poverty or doing away with hunger or gaining world peace. The earth could not ever produce enough to feed its children, and its children must inevitably kill each other off every so often in consequence.

Malthus' doctrine became popular. It had a very wide effect on the thinking of many learned and influential men. It did a good deal to spread gloom among the intelligentsia, who are usually gloomy enough without any outside stimulation.

Today, however, Malthus' reasoning sounds quaint and outmoded.

Instead of suffering from dearth, the world is suffering from plenty.

The means of subsistence, far from lagging behind the increase in population, have increased so rapidly that several millions of farms in the United States alone have been abandoned. Every country in the world suffers from a profound economic depression, one of the chief reasons for which is the fact that the earth has cut loose altogether too lavishly. The tillers of the soil are suffering because the world has too much to eat.

But food is not the only necessity of life; and the conditions in other fields are the same. Factories in Detroit and in Essen, in Liverpool and in Pittsburgh are idle, or partly idle, simply because they are too productive. They made things faster than people could use them, and now they have to wait for the surplus to be consumed.

All of which seems to leave Malthus and his famous theory high and dry on a sand bar, with the tide ebbing farther each day.

The fact is, of course, that the increase in population tends to slow down, for a variety of reasons, after reaching a certain point, while men have discovered ways of making the earth and their own hands more productive than was the case formerly. Malthus could not foresee either of these developments; so his theory, once formidably buttressed by unassailable logic and demonstrable facts, has collapsed.

That, by the way, is what often happens to profound theories. Our own age has its own theories, all unshakable just at present—and all, very likely, due to explode under the eyes of our grandchildren. That is a good fact to keep in mind. Don't believe anything too implicitly.

A Word for the Pessimists

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S recent speech at Cleveland was worth listening to. A non-political address dealing with economic conditions, it displayed the president at his best.

Especially worth attention was this remark:

"The economic fatalist believes that these crises are inevitable and bound to be recurrent. I would remind these pessimists that the same thing was once said of typhoid, cholera and smallpox."

There is a world of good sense in that paragraph. No believer in progress can fail to agree with it. It is the only attitude of mind that will ever make possible a steady, uninterrupted era of evenly-distributed prosperity.

Resignation

I am a dreamer, living in the past
Of silver nights that came and swiftly went;
Your lovely ghost still owns the power to cast
A cloak of romance over nights we spent;
I am a vagrant, fallen by the way,
Stripped of the kingly cloak that once was mine,
Yet as I dream old dreams of yesterday,
Glamour steals back—a rare and heady wine.

There was a time my kisses did not pall,
There was a time you trembled at my touch;
Now as all beauty dies before the Fall,
I know that nothing matters over much;

And since the heart must have its seasons, too—
I am so glad that spring was spent with you.

—Don Wahn.

Two Gun Ethel

Ethel Barrymore's great ambition in life, to hear her talk, is to shoot newspaper men—preferably critics, one presumes. There was the time, some of you probably recall, that she said one of us ought to be shot at dawn, and now, according to a Columbus, Ohio, rag's reporter, Ethel is gunning again.

The reporter suggested to Miss Barrymore, via the telephone, after her premiere in "Scarlet Sister Mary," that she might be dissatisfied with her new starring vehicle. "Why, I think it is the greatest play I ever had," she said, "and if you dare say anything else I'll shoot your heart out!"

Now, looka here, 'Miss Capone!

In Fewer Words

Take it from George Jean Nathan there is no such thing as a dirty theme. There are only dirty playwrights.

By Way of Report

The Crusaders is a new national organization to oppose the 18th amendment. Charter members will pay $25 for a pretty button and a dollar for regular membership. They are aiming for ten million members. The following slogan is suggested: "Water will rot your shoes. Just think what it will do to your insides!"

Nifty

Leave it La Guinan to furnish a laugh when you want one most. At the opening of her new boobyhatch on 54th St., the other yawning, Texas introduced Judge Shephard of Florida. "Can you introduce Judge Crater?" interrupted a clown.

"I can do everything," snapped Guinan, "except magic."

Squelch

And when a certain actress (who puts her hat on with a shoe horn) snubbed her when Tex tried to be affable, Tex turned on her high voltage sarcasm: "See here," yelled the reckless Texas, "don't put on the Ritz with me. I heard you were thrown out of there last week!"

Izzatso?

Al Dubin who has the distinction of writing more hit songs for the chin-emas than you or you, was discussing Heywood (Columnist) Broun's candidacy for Congress. "The reason more columnists do not run for something," Dubin hissed, "is that they are too busy running from something."

Newspaper Man Stuff

Lord Castlerosse, the visiting London journalist, recalls the time when he was a cub reporter and how he was rebuffed by a prominent Britisher he went to interview.

"Your wife," said Castlerosse, "has run away with your best friend!"

"Really," was the indifferent reply, "why did she run?"

Fickle Broadway

Some one may have already shown you the gesture that accompanies the remark: "Good old Broadway and its loyal pals" (then you run your index finger across the throat as though the digit were a razor). But what we started out to say was that at a recent movie premiere 20 cops were assigned to check the expected crowds which didn't congest the pavement.

"How is he doing?" a rival asked another. "Well," was the devastating but mercilessly truthful retort, "they should have sent the cops into the theater to help fill up the orchestra."

The Alibi Swelegant

Helen Plunkett encountered one of those boasting but incessantly idle movie hams on Broadway the other afternoon.

"You're getting to be the champion lay-off in the world, aren't you?" said Helen, who hasn't worked so steady herself.

"What do you mean?" answered the lad, who is an actor between promises, "didn't you see me in 'The Big House'—that prison movie?"

"I saw Chester Morris in that picture," said Helen, "and I saw Lella Hyams and Robert Montgomery in it. But I didn't see you! What part did you play?"

"Solitary confinement," was the reply.

Aw, Nuts!

"You see," writes Mark Hellinger (with tears in his I's), "I'm a simple sort of a guy, and during the excitement of a first night I find myself wishing that I were sitting by a quiet stream with a rod in my hand and a dog by my side."

The Showdown

Donna saw Gardner, incredulity and rage mingled on his countenance in the doorway. Behind him was Granby, and the latter was making frantic signs to her, signs which could have had no meaning to any onlooker save Donna, but which to her were easily translatable. She was to say nothing, to leave the situation in his hands.

"What are you doing here, Donna?" demanded Frank.

"Does that matter?" she asked.

"Matter? Well, I'll say it matters. Don't you think it matters that I find my fiancee in Ran Granby's apartment?"

"No, I don't," she replied

"Then I'd like to know what you think does matter," he cried.

"What you think about my being here—that's what matters," she said. "It doesn't seem to me very important why I'm here. What is important is the construction you place upon my being here."

"What construction can you possibly expect me to place upon it?" he asked.

"What I expect doesn't count, either. It's what you think, Frank."

"I don't know what to think," he stammered.

"Then, before you say anything, think," she advised.

"My God, are you trying to put me in the wrong?"

"I'm not trying to do anything, Frank," she gently told him. "But I want you to put yourself in the right."

"A lot of words," he cried. "I want to know—here, look here! Look at this!"

He waved a sheet of paper before her eyes.

"I got this from the office of Chit-Chat," he said. "They sent a man up to me this morning—I wanted to kill him—he gave me this—it's a photograph of a letter you wrote to Ran Granby asking for money—Chit-Chat bought it from a valet of Granby's—I saw the original copy, all pieced together—Chit-Chat got hold of it only yesterday, and when our engagement was announced—their man came to see me—to blackmail me—"

He paused, out of breath, ablaze, however, with rage.

"Why didn't you come to see me about it? Why did you call on Mr. Granby?" asked Donna evenly.

"Because I wanted the truth," said Gardner.

"And thought that I might not give it to you?" asked Donna.

"I didn't say that. I mean—is this your handwriting, Donna?"

From another pocket he produced another piece of paper, the pasted-together letter which Ran Granby had torn up contemptuously and tossed in his waste-paper basket months ago, and which had been retrieved by Curtin, his valet.

Donna shook her head.

"It probably is, but I don't care to read it. If it is a request that Mr. Granby give me money—I wrote such a letter to him. Moreover, he's been trying to make me accept much more money from him today."

Gardner wheeled on Granby, threat, menace, in his movement. But the older man merely shrugged his shoulders, turned his back, walked—heavily, it seemed to Donna—to a chair and sat down.

"Why are you trying to give her more money, Ran?" asked Gardner.

"Trying?" His laugh was bitter. "I suppose you had difficulty in persuading her—"

"Stop right there, Gardner," said Granby. "And I'm not taking any more chance with a maniac like you. The next time I'll put a bullet right through that silly head of yours. Miss Raynor has refused any more money from me. Further, I've been arguing with her that she must not tell you anything about having taken money from me before. She's been insisting that she must tell you—"

"You expect me to believe that?" cried Gardner.

"I expect you to believe every single word that either Miss Raynor or myself tells you, Gardner," said Granby. Donna had not known that his voice could be so flatly hard.

Gardner sneered.

"You won't blame me if I find it difficult, though. I'm given evidence that my fiancee has had an affair with you—I buy the evidence from Chit-Chat to shut their filthy mouths—come to talk the matter over with you and find my fiancee here. Then, with proof in my hand, I'm expected to believe that she was about to confess everything to me."

"That's exactly what you are expected to believe, Gardner," said Granby, still in that curiously flat, hard tone.

The younger man stared at him a moment. Baffled by the look in Granby's eyes, he turned to Donna.

"Well, explain," he said.

She shook her head slowly.

A Tale of Hollywood by the Author of "STEP-CHILD"

CHAPTER 1

THE powerful car sped along in the gathering dusk toward the red ball which was the sun. The sharp crimson glare of it hurt Nick Walther's eyes.

A blood twilight tinged the road, the orange trees he was passing, the ranch houses. Now and then a window flashed like a signal beacon, bright for a moment, dulling the next.

A car flew by him, and he automatically pressed his foot on the throttle, then thought better of it. There was no need to hurry. Besides he was tired. Almost all day at the wheel. He shuddered a little when he thought of the hot desert behind him. All afternoon on the desert. He wanted to enjoy the cool of the evening.

Orange Scented Breeze

The hum of the tires on the smooth pavement was good to his ears. Comforting. The fresh, orange scented breeze on his face. He took a deep breath that ended in a sigh.

San Bernardino. He slowed down through the city.

The crimson was fading in the west. Only dull streaks of it left in the sky, as if a dirty brush had been swept across it, with a bit of vermillion still on the camel's hair. Soon that would be gone.

He was rounding a curve when he saw the boy resting on the side of the road, his head in his hands, his shoulders bent wearily. Beside him was a knapsack. The lights from the car flung themselves on the small, frail figure quickly, then as quickly turned away. The boy had not looked up even in the glare of the sudden blinding light. He seemed to notice nothing.

Walther slid his foot on the brake, indecisively, then threw his gear in reverse. The boy loked so tired. Probably had been hiking a long time. Wouldn't mind a lift.

"Get in, sonny," he called when he had drawn up beside the youth, who started up at the sound of his voice.

"Get in!" Impatiently, because the boy appeared dazed.

"You mean — ride?" The youth's voice was clear, high, unchanged.

"Of course."

He watched the boy pick up his knapsack slowly, then as slowly walk the few feet to the car, dragging one foot after the other painfully.

"Tired?"

"Awfully."

He heard the sigh as his passenger settled himself beside him, a tired thankful sigh.

It was quite dark now, and the few stars in the night sky were pale, and insipid, as if they were struggling mightily to break the blackness of the heavens.

There was no conversation between man and boy. Once Walther glanced curiously at his silent passenger, but could not see him very well. The dash lights were off. He caught a glimpse of the slim figure huddled into the far corner; a white face, too white, the curve of a young cheek. Fifteen or sixteen he thought idly. No business to be hiking on the highways. Maybe younger than 15. Short, though, not more than five foot four. He had seen that much as the boy had stepped into the car. The knapsack was on the floor between the boy's feet, an ordinary knapsack, rather heavy it seemed for the slender chap.

Peculiar, too, that the boy wasn't talking. Usually hikers talked too much. One reason Walter didn't like to pick them up. He hated to be annoyed with their aimless conversation. But now that the boy wasn't saying anything, he wanted to know why he was traveling on foot — why he was so tired.

"How far are you going?" he asked, more to have the boy answer than anything else.

Homesick?

The answer was slow in coming, and very soft when it came. "As far as you go, please."

At any rate the chap was polite . . . .

Another town. Nick looked again at his passenger, as they passed through.

The boy's face was turned to the road, and his wide brimmed sombrero hat was pulled far over his eyes.

Had he run away from home? Was that why he was so quiet? Homesick? For obviously the boy didn't want to talk.

Nick smiled to himself at the thought. He had been just 13 when he had run away from home. From the farm. Long years since then. Hard years. Had he known they would have been so hard he might not have gone away so eagerly. Thirteen. He was 35 now, and he had what he wanted — almost what he wanted, anyway. Money that he had earned. Lucky, too, he had been, but then it hadn't been all luck, a lot of it hard work. He could afford to drive leisurely.

At 13 he had thought it would be easy. Perhaps that was what the boy was thinking. That it would be easy. The future. Perhaps the boy was dreaming, as he had dreamed long ago. He should warn him. No, better not. Youth hates warnings. Too cocksure, too important.

The long stream of traffic into Los Angeles. Nick hated it, but tonight he was too busy with thoughts of his boyhood to bother. He was walking along a road, a bundle tied in a red bandanna handkerchief slung carelessly over his shoulders. Besides few clothes there was food in the bundle. A long time since he had thought of this trip. The memories it brought back were bitter.

A Good Dinner

Was his passenger carrying food, too? He'd give the boy a good dinner when they reached Hollywood. Stuff him full of food, give him some money and send him on his way. If someone had done that to him when he was a boy, the road wouldn't have been so hard, nor so long.

He saw that the boy's head was bent on his chest. A wave of pity passed over Walther.

The lights of Hollywood boulevard. Walther swung to the left and stopped at an imposing apartment house on Franklin avenue. Quickly he opened the door of the car and stepped stiffly into the street. The ride had been a long one, the air had made him sleepy.

He yawned, and jerked open the back compartment. His bag was there. His passenger did not make a move to alight. His head was still sunk on his chest.

Carries Him in His Arms

"Out here," he said kindly. Still the boy did not hear. Gently Walther tapped him on the shoulder. Then more roughly as his passenger did not respond. He didn't have the heart to force the youth awake, so, dropping his bag on the sidewalk, he took the slender frame in his arms, and went into the lobby with it.

The elevator boy looked at him curiously as he got into the car wth his burden.

Walther smiled but said nothing. After all, the boy wouldn't wake up, and there was the meal that he had promised himself to give.

In his apartment he laid the boy down on a couch in the living room, and snapped out the lights that burned from the lamp above it.

Wong, his Chinese servant, padded in silently, He glanced at the couch but said nothing.

"Two for dinner tonight," Walther said quietly. "Better wait awhile too, until—my guest awakens."

Gently Walther took off the boy's hat, marveling at the sleep that was almost deathlike in its stillness. For the first time he saw his passenger's face clearly. Queer how you could carry a boy miles, and miles, and not know what he looked like.

Long silky, dark thick lashes lay on pale cheeks. A thin heart-shaped face, with broad cheek bones, narrowing into a small well-shaped chin. Fresh young skin. Soft. Delicate nostrils, and tiny mouth, entirely inadequate, Nick thought. The lips drooped a bit at the corners. Short curly brown hair, so dark that against the red leather couch cushions it seemed almost black. Untidy.

Violet Eyes

He felt a light touch on his arm, and looked around. Wong was behind him peering down at the sleeping boy.

"Pretty boy," the servant offered, with unchanged expression.

"Too pretty for a boy," Walther muttered.

"Looks like girl," Wong continued. Walther shot a quick look at the Chinaman. Wong's face was an enigmatical as ever.

"Think she girl," Wong went on. His eyes met Walther's. Nick turned away first, and he appraised the form on the couch again. It was boyish and yet not boyish. The hands lying so still were beautifully formed, well kept. The nails were rather long, the skin soft and white.

The eyes fluttered open. Great violet eyes. They closed almost immediately, as if the effort of keeping them open was too great.

"What you think?" Wong persisted. "You think she girl?"

"Looks like it. Better get dinner on the table—"

The servant disappeared, and Walther remained standing over the couch. He was waiting for the eyes to open. They did presently, looked at him in worried amazement. A white hand raised and brushed the low forehead wearily.

"Feeling more rested?"

There was a nod, nothing else, and a fleeting frightened look came into the deep violet eyes. The slim khaki clad figure struggled to its feet, then sank down on the couch again.

"Better rest awhile yet," Walther warned. He was still puzzled. Was this a boy or a girl he was entertaining?

"Hungry?"

A nod in the affirmative, then a decided negative one, as if to contradict the first.

Nick drew up a chair and placed in directly in front of the couch. He looked searchingly into the face before him. "Would you mind telling me before me eat why you are masquerading in boy's clothes?"

The eyes showed fright again, the lashes quivered over them pitifully. Walther thought he had never seen such large expressive eyes. However, there was no answer. A hand caught at the collar of the brown shirt and pulled it close to a white throat. The lips opened as if to speak, then pressed tightly together.

"Strange Guest"

"You are a girl, aren't you?" Walther was smiling a little. He was positive now his strange guest was a girl.

"I must go!" The khaki legs started up, but Nick barred the way.

"You're going to have dinner with me."

"No—thanks."

"Please. Besides, you're hungry."

"I'm not." There was a sob in the voice that answered.

"You are, so you'd better sit still. I'm not going to hurt you, child. When I thought you were a boy, I promised you a dinner—of course you didn't know it, but I did. Now that I find you're a girl, the invitation is still good."

"I am a little hungry—" a smile quivered on the lips, and then faded immediately.

"And tired?" He liked the voice, and wanted to hear more of it.

"And tired." It repeated. The shoulders sagged back to the cushions, and rested there.

"You are a girl?"

"I thought you knew!" A flush stained the soft face, and a white tooth bit at the pale lips.

"I do, but I want you to admit it."

"I do."

"Then, why this masquerade?"

Walther wanted to see her blush again. It was becoming, devilishly becoming. The red tinging her cheeks like dye, then fading out swiftly. She was trying to smooth her brown locks with her fingers, but not succeeding. Her eyes were on the toe of a sturdy shoe, travel stained and scuffed.

"You were going to tell me why you are dressed as a boy," Nick reminded her. Just then Wong announced dinner, and they went into the dining room. He saw her eyes rest inquiringly on the the table set with crude peasant china. On the Welsh dresser loaded with pewter.

Wong served them silently as usual. Once Walther thought he saw a gleam of amusement in the servant's face, but could not be sure.

The girl ate heartily. Nick saw the color seep into her lips, her cheeks. Her eyes sparkle. Peculiar eyes he saw. Beautiful but something unusual about them. Their gaze disconcerted him a little, although he did not care to admit it.

She seemed well bred. well educated. Nick, himself, did not press the conversation at dinner, as he felt she was really very hungry. It would be time to ask questions after dinner.

"Your Name?"

"I must go now," she announced when they arose from the table.

"Why?" Nick asked lazily. He was interested in the girl.

"Because I must."

"You haven't answered my questions yet — about yourself. I don't even know your name. You might at least tell me that."

"My name is Gail Stuart." Gingerly she sat on the edge of the leather couch, her eyes on the door. Wong brought in some Chinese lacquer coffee cups, and poured their coffee.

Gail was decidedly uncomfortable. She wasn't used to going to a man's apartment. Much less having dinner with him at home. Girls didn't do that in Fairview, Kan. And yet she couldn't help herself. Silly of her to have fallen asleep in the car. Her own fault. But she had been so tired. She felt better now. More like herself than she had felt in weeks. To be sure her feet ached but she was used to that by now.

"You must have walked miles today," Walther prompted, sipping his coffee.

"Miles. I was trying to make Hollywood by midnight—"

"Well, you have."

"I'm in Hollywood now?"

"Of course. Didn't you know?"

"No." Her lips closed. Nick thought they were trembling.

"Why Hollywood?"

Gail flushed, and hung her head. She couldn't explain to this man. It would seem foolish to him. So useless. He was nice and sympathetic.

But she couldn't tell him. That was all.

The weary miles she had come. Horrible miles. Tired all the time. It had seemed so easy when she started out, so terribly easy. It was only after the first five miles that traveling had become hard, and she had thought of turning back. Anything to get off the road. Off her feet.

Instinctively she touched her belt, and sat back relieved. Her money was still there. Fifty dollars. All she had left from the $75 she had started with.

Months of Saving

Months it had taken her to scrape together that $75. Saving on lunches, denying herself things she really needed. When she had it she couldn't realize it. Couldn't believe she was ready to leave Fairview.

She had planned in the beginning to save enough for railroad fare, but when she had seen how hard and long that would be had decided to hike on foot. It would be all right. Dressed as a boy, she could make the trip comfortably, and safely.

Seventy-five dollars when she started. How quickly that $25 had gone. She had spent some of it on food, and cheap hotels, on the doctor when she had rubbed a blister on her heel in Arizona.

Fifteen hundred miles — and she had walked most of it. Afraid to take too many rides. Something held her back. The curious looks people gave her when they saw her on the road. Peering into her face. Telling her she was too pretty for a boy— How long had she been traveling? Years it seemed. More than years. Unending centuries.

When she had first looked up the mileage on a map, 1,500 miles seemed so short. Now she knew just how long it was. There was the map now in her pocket, marked up with the little black pencil she carried. Dates circling every town. For Gail had planned her journey very carefully. Conned over it for months before she started.

Dates she had put down in Fairview, confident she could keep to her schedule. She hadn't, and that was what the other figures meant below the first ones.

Two weeks longer than she had planned. But how could she guess about the blister which had held her up for three days? And the rain storm during which she had huddled in a barn for a whole day? And the desert . . . And a dozen other hindrances. Once she had lost the road. Pure carelessness on her part. She watched more closely after that.

Fifteen hundred miles from Fairview to Hollywood. Hungry every place she had stopped. Forcing herself to eat as little as possible to save her precious capital. The knapsack so heavy. She had purposely put few things into it. A change of outfit when she reached Hollywood, so she could be herself again. Hat, dress, coat, pumps, underwear, a few trinkets she couldn't bear to leave in Fairview. Some food, enough to last her a few days. Sandwiches, stale after a day. Cheese, fruit which she had been forced to throw away because it was too heavy.

"You were going to tell me?" Walther's voice came to her. She nodded impatiently. Would he laugh? As people in Fairview would have laughed if they had known? They didn't know, thank goodness, and wouldn't until she . . . Not even Aunt Margaret. Aunt Margaret knew she was going away, but didn't know where.

Changes Clothes

Gail had left the house, dressed as usual in the one outfit she had now in her knapsack. Aunt Margaret had kissed her on the cheek, and said she was sorry she could not go to the train. Gail had counted on that. So the girl sauntered away, a small cheap bag in her hand. At the edge of Fairview she had sought a barn and changed her clothes. The ones she had been wearing she folded carefully, and put into the knapsack which was in readiness in the grip. From the grip, also, she had taken the boy's clothes she had gotten together secretly. For Aunt Margaret would never have approved of them, had she known. Gail had lived with her mother's maiden sister from early childhood and knew what she favored and what she didn't.

Margaret Mayhew had been good to her. As good as she knew how. But Miss Mayhew couldn't understand the dreams of girls, and never had. Probably she had never had them herself.

The relief the girl felt when she left the ugly yellow cottage, the only home she had ever known. The prim, doily covered chairs, the flowers under their globes of shiny glass on the marble topped table in the front parlor. The never used organ standing in the corner. Not that Gail and her aunt didn't get along. They did, but Gail knew in her heart that her aunt really welcomed her departure. Affection between them but nothing else. Miss Mayhew was not one to inspire love. She had done her duty by her sister's child, and that was all she intended to do. Miss Mayhew had enough money for herself but nothing more. Gail, even when her trip was just a dream hindered by finances, never thought for a moment of borrowing money from her aunt. In truth, Miss Mayhew did not have it to lend.

Fairview meant Troy's store. Clerking. She was glad now she had had her dream. It had kept her going. After she had graduated from high school she had started to work for Mr. Troy. At first aimlessly because she had to work, and there wasn't enough money to send her to business college. Then later instead of spending her money, she saved it. The dream was to become a reality. She had few confidants in Fairview. To the ones she had, she said nothing about her hopes.

Something she couldn't talk about. Something that brought quick tears to her eyes when she thought of it, and a tight feeling to her throat.

The man was waiting. Strange, he hadn't told her his name. Of course she hadn't asked it yet. Should she? He was nice. She rather liked him. Tall but not handsome. Not at all handsome in face. His mouth was too large, his lips too thin. His eyes were good. Grey eyes with fine laughing lines at the corners. Light hair, sandy, and straight.

His body was strong, and his shoulders broad. An outdoor look about the firm knit limbs that was very attractive. She wondered how old he was. Sometimes he looked 30, sometimes 40. When he smiled he looked younger. His skin was healthy, bronzed, almost too tanned for his sandy bleached hair. Just now he was smoking a cigar, sprawled in the deep leather chair. The smoke curled to the high ceiling slowly.

Was he laughing at her already? Was he a person to confide in? Gail was doubtful but she must give some answer. She crossed her slim legs, and bent her head so he wouldn't see her eyes. Tears started to floow them.

"I came to Hollywood — to get into the movies—"

She sprang angrily to her feet, when he threw back his head and laughed. The laughter was ringing in her ears as she blindly sought the door. Her hand was on the knob when she felt his over it; drawing her back to the couch.

In tomorrow's installment Gail is given an opportunity to meet a press agent.

Bloodless Surgery

The science of surgery has progressed to such an extent that it is now possible to operate on every part of the body and to remove at least portions of any of the organs without producing death. Surgeons are thereby often encouraged to perform unnecessary operations which could be avoided if the patient were willing to remove the real causes which were producing his trouble.

The word "surgery" comes from two Greek words which mean "hand work." Unfortunately, this original meaning is now somewhat clouded by the skillful work which is performed with the knife. There is much valuable work which can be done in straightening out organs and deformed limbs with the skillful work of the hands and without the use of the knife. Much advancement has been made in what has been aptly called "bloodless surgery." When bony structures are out of alignment, they may be restored to their normal position with a return of their proper functioning. Misplaced organs are often replaced by the hands of bloodless surgeons. The circulation of the blood and lymphatic circulation may be likewise restored. Adhesions often yield to the trained fingers of the hand surgeon without the use of the knife. Adhesions are formed by connective tissue growing to inflamed surfaces and often bind together vital organs and in this way interfere with their normal working.

It is true that the knife when skillfully used has often been a life saver and has corrected many deformities. However, the severing of tissues with the scalpel is always attended with danger, and the shock of the injury to the body under the anesthetics often brings about a complication of disorders. There are some cases where a knife is necessary, but there are many more which could be benefited by the skillful manipulations of bloodless survery.

All therapeutic measures have their proper place in the healing art of today and when intelligently and conscientiously used have been the means of relieving much distress and unhappiness. However, no amount of treatment, regardless of how skillful, will ever correct the faulty habits of life which lead to most of the diseases from which humanity suffers. Those errors of diet, lack of exercise, faulty posture, destructive thinking, etc., must be corrected if we are to expect continued good health. The surgeon, whether his tools are the knife or the hands, can at best only patch up a condition usually caused by the patient, himself, through injudicious living.

Many patients are satisfied to return for one operation after another because they refuse to heed the lesson of their first surgical experience; which lesson, if properly understood, would have prevented future mutilations.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Eczema

Question: G. H. Writes—"I am 15 years old, and for seven years I have been troubled with eczema on my hands. For about three months out of the year it heals up and then comes back again.

Answer — Hyperacidity of the stomach is the fundamental cause of all such skin eruptions as eczema. Such over-acidity of the stomach causes an acidosis in the entire system which causes an irritation of the skin with a great many people who are subject to this trouble. The same cause is responsible for many other disorders which develop in other parts of the body.

Uncooked Spinach

Question: Mrs. H. K. asks—"Is not the oxalic acid in spinach injurious when this vegetable is used as a raw salad?"

Answer—The amount of oxalic acid in spinach could not be considered injurious to the average person. It is one of the richest in iron of the leafy vegetables, and those who have a deficiency of hemoglobin or red corpuscles in the blood should use a plentful supply in the raw form.

Tuberculosis

Question: Mrs. M. A. writes—"My mother died of tuberculosis. Do you think it is hereditary, and what should I do to avoid developing the same disease?"

Answer—Diseases are usually only hereditary as the habits of the mother may be copied by the children. Tuberculosis is a disease of enervation, and above all things you must remember that it is necessary to build up the general strength and develop strong lungs and a good diaphragm. You then do not need to fear any hereditary influence toward tuberculosis.

Law Enforcement Commission Meets

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. (AP)—Confronted anew with reports which might help on any conclusions they care to draw regarding prohibition, the eleven members of the Hoover law enforcement commission met today for the first time in almost four months.

The data represented a harvest from summer work of the commission's investigators. The gathering as usual was closed and no public statement was immediately forthcoming.

Chairman George W. Wickersham declined again to comment on the course the commission will pursue. He had studied the reports, but indicated he would hold to the policy of secret sessions and silence on matters under discussion until some action has been taken.

Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition, was in the commission offices today. She quickly disposed of consequent speculation with the remark that she had come to recommend a friend for a secretarial position.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—A requisition asking the return to Kay county of W. E. Bert where he is wanted on charges of wife and child abandonment, was served today by Gov. W. J. Holloway upon the governor of Missouri. Bert is held at Stockton, Mo.

The governor of Kansas asked the return today to Garden City of Harrison Davis, now held at Sayre, in Beckham county. Davis is wanted in Kansas on a charge of forgery.

COYOTE SQUAD LOSES TWO MEN DUE TO 10-SEMESTER RULE

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Ben G. Oneal, state senator-elect from this district, was re-elected president of the Izaak Walton league chapter Tuesday night, by acclamation. Rising to thank his comrades, the popular leader of sportsmen in this section of the state, uttered, a la Coolidge, only one sentence. But it was a sentence that not only expressed a thought, but clothed a feeling, a feeling of deep regard for his fellow-workers in the league.

"I would rather be president of the Wichita Falls chapter of the Izaak Walton league than state senator," said the leader.

Of course, Mr. Oneal did not mean that literally. Had his desire been only to remain president of the local chapter, he certainly would not have gone to the expense and toil incurred in seeking the state office.

The statement, looked at coldly, seems rather far-fetched. But it was the thought behind the statement that made his comrades cheer—the thought that the presidency of the chapter really means something to him, and that he holds every one of his fellow workers in the highest esteem.

The Rambler is not much of a fisherman. In fact he would consider himself an expert if he could tell the difference between a minnow and a whale, but he does take pride in the fact that his ears are pretty alert, ready to catch the opinions that men have of each other.

And it is a pleasure to report that Mr. Oneal's followers hold him in the same esteem that he holds them.

Generals to Graduate

Coach Barry Holton is with the Coyotes for his second year. He is still laying the foundations of his "Rockne system," in developing young talent for his future football teams. But at the end of this season he's going to get a severe setback, a set-back, indeed, that is comparable to the jolt the Spudders received at the end of the baseball season.

For among the boys on the first team who will graduate at the end of this school year are both of his quarterbacks, Fightin' Danny Cox and Hammerin' Hamlin Rugeley.

Fightin' Danny is the regular starter this season, but when he needs a rest Hammerin' Hamlin can go right in and steer the team through weal or woe. Both are remarkably good. Both have plenty judgment, and both are fast-stepping backfielders who can carry the ball far.

Their graduation next June will leave the Coyotes in much the same shape the Spudders are in now, with "Levey or Euller to Storti to Burns" destined not to appear in Spudder box scores next year.

The Eligibility Rule

A recent interpretation by the Interscholastic league clears up the 10-semester rule of high school football eligibility, according to S. H. Rider, dean of Junior college and principal of the high school.

The rule reads a player shall not be eligible after being in attendance at high school 10 semesters, or five years. Cases where the player enters high school, drops out possibly a year or so, and then returns to school, are not specifically covered in the rule.

The interpretation, however, states time begins to count against the player just as soon as he enrolls in the eighth grade, and continues throughout the five years whether the player attends school or not.

Mr. Uff, Please

Prexy Bill Huff, and Sec'y Guy Airey returned Tuesday from St. Louis, after seeing three days of great baseball.

An amusing incident was related by the Spudder president.

Before leaving for St. Looey he asked his wife to wire him the result of the Coyote-Lubbock football game Saturday. That's how much he thinks of our Coyotes. Up there in position to watch some of the world's best athletes, he was very vitally interested in how the home town youngsters fared.

Well, he waited and waited, and the telegram never came. Finally, on Sunday, a breathless messenger boy came up wanting to know if he (Mr. Huff) was Mr. Uff. The telegraph office had neglected to stick on the "H."

And a few minutes later a telegram burning up the local Western Union office was dispatched, collect, to Charlie Pogenpohl.

But really, Mr. Huff, alias Uff, and Mr. Pogenpohl, are very good friends.

Prexy Bill said he and Airey had a fine time, and he also brought back the news that St. Looey baseball fans think Lin Storti is the best of the lot the Spudders sent up there. He emphasized the fact that this was the opinion of the fans, not the baseball officials. Bill Killefer, Browns' manager, was not in town, so Mr. Huff couldn't get a line on the baseball world's opinion of our boys.

All of them had departed for their homes—Levey, Storti, Burns and Crouch. That was unfortunate, Mr. Huff could have brought us some interesting facts on how the boys liked it up where the big boys play.

The Spudder president was highly impressed with the work of Shortstop Gelbert of the Cardinals.

Keep on looking around, Mr. President, and you'll find one as good as Jimmy Lavey—maybe.

Stamford Class Names Miss Pinson Yell Leader

Special to The Record News

STAMFORD, Texas, Oct. 8.—Miss Josephine Pinson, popular member of the junior class and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pinson of this city, has been elected as yell leader of the newly organized pep squad.

Fifty-two girls wearing the class colors of blue and white in the natty blue and white sweaters with white skirts and tams are boosting the Bulldogs in their struggle for the class B championship this year. Miss Byron Lewis is faculty sponsor of this group.

The Friday game when the Bulldogs meet the Olney team in a practice game at Olney is looked forward to with a great deal of interest since the Olney team was sectional champion last season.

PACK TAKES HEAVY DRILL

Parish Changed Over To Tackle Position

Two lads, both of them promising football players, followed the Coyote drill Wednesday afternoon with eyes that were eager at times, but none the less downcast.

They were Leland Richards and Frank Stanfield, reserve linemen who after showing much promise on Holton's squad, learned just at the wrong time they were ineligible to play under the interscholastic league's 10-semester rule. The rule provides students may not participate in the sport after five years has elapsed since registration in the eighth grade, whether they attend school all the time or not.

Both Showed Grit

Both had shown fight and determination on the gridiron, and both had good prospects of becoming first string men, Coach Holton said. Richards was an end, substituting for Mauldin on the right wing, while Standfield was a guard. Both were reserves.

The absence of these two men will further deplete the squad, which has already been cut considerably through ineligibilities and other causes almost to the breaking point.

Coach Holton Wednesday afternoon made one change in his lineup, shifting Parish, who has played end, to left tackle. This change, however, was made in scrimmage drill, and may or may not be effective when the Coyotes tackle the Electra Tigers at Electra Saturday.

The drill was stiff Wednesday. Coach Holton started off by giving J. R. Holton and Chick Holden a brief period of punting, and this was followed by a session at the tackling dummy, a brisk and vigorous workout. Straight scrimmage drill then followed until dusk.

Electrans Inspired

Only two days remain until the Electra fray, a game that has annually stirred students of both schools to intense rivalry, and a game that will be hard for the Coyotes to win.

"For," said Carter McGregor, member of the school board who is on hand for every workout, "the Coyotes don't play Electra each year; they played an inspired team. The Electra bunch always gets tough as nails at the bare mention of the Coyotes."

Reports from Electra bear out this declaration. The Tigers are reported drilling constantly for the battle, which will be staged as a dedicatory ceremony for the new Electra stadium.

ELECTRANS EAGERLY AWAIT BATTLE

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Texas, Oct. 8.—The Electra High school students are keyed to the highest pitch of pep and enthusiasm this week as they eagerly await the annual Tiger-Coyote battle which will be played Saturday on the local gridiron. Numerous pep rallies are being planned for the remainder of the week, and the girls will wear their new uniforms Saturday for the first time this season. The Electra band will be on hand for the game, and members of the Lions club, the Rotary club, the chamber of commerce and other civic organizations will be at the game.

The pep squad will send representatives to Wichita Falls Thursday evening to join the Wichita Falls organization in presenting a pep program over station KGKO at 10 o'clock. The Electra girls who will go are Ruby McGlaughn, Marjorie Beasley, Margaret Owens, Oneta Culpepper, Alla Mae Swafford, Blonnie Wear, Frances Carnohan, Reba McKinnis, Christine Hamilton, Rose Mary Magee, Corrine Reed, Doris Owens, Blanche Chowning, Olga Bashara, Leona Parr, and Elvis Arber. Bill Bethune boy yell leader, will help with the songs and yells. Wilbur Presson and Miss Ethel Varnell, teachers in the high school, who are in charge of the pep squad will also attend.

Archer B Team Trounces Reagan

Special to The Record News

ARCHER CITY, Oct. 8.—Led by the speedy Billy Fleming and Clabe Long Jr., another backfielder, the Archer City B team got sweet revenge for their 6 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Reagan Junior high team of Wichita Falls last week, when they trounced the Wichitans, 14 to 0, here today.

Fleming scored the first touchdown, in the first quarter, running 70 yards to score after breaking through the Reagan line. Long scored the second on a line plunge in the second quarter. Fleming, quarterback, displayed good generalship in leading his team.

The Reagans played a hard, clean game, and were praised here for their sportsmanship.

San Angelo Meets Ranger Saturday

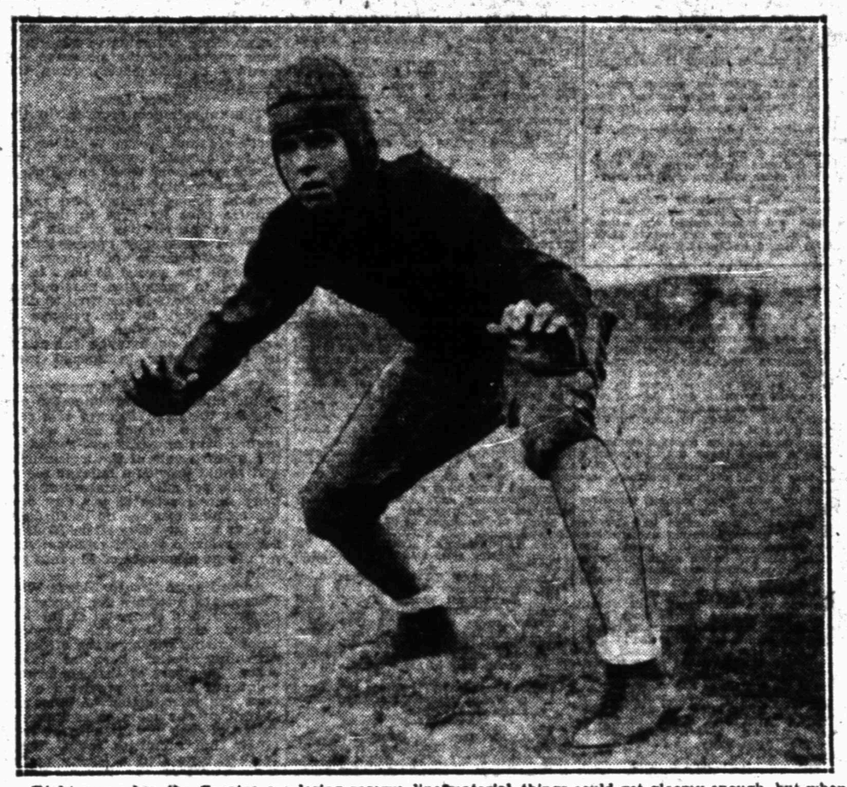

Special to The Record News

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Oct. 8.—Doped to lose by several touchdowns both on the basis of comparative scores this season and less experienced material, San Angelo High school's Bobcats in invading Ranger Saturday for their second Oil Belt football game of the year will strive to shake off a three-year jinx held by the Bulldogs. Ranger defeated San Angelo here last year, 7 to 6, won at home the season before, 7 to 0, and in 1927 nosed out the locals here, 7 to 6.

Last Saturday the charges of Coaches Bissett and Wright barely were able to achieve a 7 to 6 victory over Brady, a class B school which Brownwood defeated, 13 to 0, on Sept. 26. A week earlier Ranger defeated Brownwood, 32 to 0. Ranger is rated by most of the critics second in the district only to Cisco, while the majority also pick Breckenridge, state finalists with Port Arthur in 1929, and Abilene to finish the schedule ahead of San Angelo. In four games to date the Bobcats have not tasted defeat, scoring 80 points to the oppositions' 13, but only one of the victories was over an Oil Belt school, Sweetwater being beaten, 25 to 7, on Sept. 26 at Sweetwater.

Connie's Athletics Will Rule The Roost Another Year

One Reason Why That Line Will Hold Saturday

Right now when the Coyotes are losing reserve line material, things could get gloomy enough, but when the first stringers are considered, it 'sn't so bad after all. Consider Lester Daniel, above. Coach Barry Holton's star right tackle. Daniel, "the boy with the football heart," plays the game hard and fast, and the Tigers had better watch him.

HAWKS GROOM FOR ZUNDY MEN

New Strength Added To Backfield

By PAT WILEY

IOWA PARK, Texas, Oct. 8.—The local gridmen are preparing for the coming scrap with the Zundelowitz eleven on the Hawks' field. The local bunch have been rearranged in the lineup and a much stronger squad is improving daily under the direction of Coach Neal. The coming event is reported to be one of the best games of the season for either of the squads.

With the boys showing more pep than heretofore displayed in any practice session or in games a victory is assured the local gridsters. New strength was added to the backfield by several new plays which will be inaugurated in the coming fray, and the line has been materially strengthened by shifting men from the center of the line to the backfield and the men from the rear ranks to the line. Pop Burnham is showing up good as a new substitute center.

With Kildow back in the game things are much livelier than at any time during his absence. This 155 pounds of brain and brawn will be one of the chief reasons for the boys to expect an overwhelming victory over the Zundy gridsters. In past encounters with the Zundelowitz gridmen the Hawks have left the field victorious for the past three years, or in every entanglement with them.

Captain Cobb is very optimistic about the coming event as is Coach Neal. He states that the many changes in the line and backfield is one of the biggest assets handed to the squad this season. He also stated that with the loyal support that is going to be on the sidelines the squad as a whole was confident of victory on the eve of the game, and every man in tip-top condition.

Red Smith and Mule Harbour on the end position are two more factors that promise to deal havoc with the Wichitans. They are eagerly waiting for the initial kick-off to get into action. Dick Burney, our burry-headed center, is wanting to burst into action with the statement that all he is able to give will be put into his attack with the assurance that he will be ably replaced in case of a mishap on his part.

Abie Maier, a new man in the backfield, is expected to be in the starting lineup Friday and is expected to be another menace to the visiting gridsters. Although a new man he has developed into a powerful plunger and line backer-up. The Cowart brothers are in fine shape and expect to hold the line and open up the opponents' stronghold, while Cork Davis will play on the side of the birds as the blond wonder at tackle.

Coach Neal expects to start Smith and Harbour as ends, G. Cowart and Davis at tackles, V. Cowart and Monroe will enter the combat as guards, and Burney as the hard-headed wonder at center. Kildow will start as fullback, Walker and Maier at half, and Captain Cobb at quarter.

Many local supporters are expected from both schools and from the other fans as well.

IN DIVORCE SUIT

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 8. (AP)—Edward Patrick Walker, the famous "Mickey" of pugilistic fame, appeared before an advisory master in chancery today to testify in a divorce action brought by his wife, Margaret. He was accompanied by his manager, Jack Kearns. Mrs. Walker alleges intemperance and cruelty.

Waltons Place 3,000 Fish in Waters Of Lake Wichita and Lake Kemp

Bass, bream, crappie and green perch, numbering more than 3,000 fish, went into Lake Wichita and Lake Kemp Wednesday when members of the Izaak Walton league placed the second recent shipment from the federal hatchery at Fort Worth.

The fish arrived here Wednesday morning in 24 cans, eight of the cans containing bass, eight holding crappie and eight holding bream and green perch. The bass were placed in Lake Kemp and the bream, crappie and green perch went into Lake Wichita. All of the fish were estimated by Walton league members to be large enough to survive the cannibalistic tendencies of their mates in the two Wichita lakes. The bass and crappie ranged around three and four inches while the bream and perch were somewhat smaller.

LAMESA, Texas, Oct. 8.—The Big Spring Calves were defeated here today by the Lamesa Whirlwinds to the tune of 6 to 0. The strength of the reserves of the two schools indicated they were evenly matched. The game was played by the second string men of the two schools.

Seymour Roadsters Play Vernon Here Today

Tulsa Champ To Meet Cochrane

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 8. (AP)—Favorites survived opening round competition today in the annual International Petroleum Exposition golf tournament at the Tulsa Country club, but one of them, either Logan L. Van Zandt, Tulsa, defending champion, or Tom Cochrane, Wichita Falls, Texas, former title holder, is due for elimination tomorrow when the two meet.

Van Zandt disposed of E. C. (Kitty) Mead, Tulsa, 3 and 1 in the first round while Cochrane scored a 3 to 2 victory over R. E. Adams, Tulsa.

Jimmy Manion, St. Louis, former trans-Mississippi champion, turned in the best performance of the day, stroking his way around the 18-hole course in 70 one under par, to beat C. A. Stover, Pittsburgh, Pa., 2 and 1.

Mrs. Kate Brooks of Bethany, Mo., 101 years old, voted for the fist time in a recent election.

CARDS LOSE BITTER SERIES

Earnshaw Wins Fourth And Deciding Game

ing up intermittently throughout the afternoon, turned and watched the field of play closely, half expecting a summons to relieve Earnshaw, but big George turned on the full strength of his thick right arm for Wilson, and he hit a high fly to Miller in right field for the final out. As Miller came trotting in with the ball, the crowd was pouring out on the field, and some of them struggled with "Bing" for the ball. But he wouldn't let go.

The mob swarmed about the triumphant A's, champions of the baseball world for a second year, but the players quickly followed their sparse old leader, Connie Mack, into the little door that leads to their dressing room. Big George came in for a few resounding thumps on the back as he trotted in ungainly fashion from the field.

Game Won Early

To all intents and purposes, the game was over early as the sluggers of the American league popped away briskly at the left-handed delivery of "Wild Bill" Hallahan, who was indeed wild this afternoon. The St. Louis hero of the third game, "Wild Bill" lacking control, and "stuff" too, was soon taken out by Gabby Street, manager of the Cards, and then came a succession of pitchers.

By the end of the seventh inning, the Cardinals were so hopelessly licked it seemed unkind for the little band posted in the upper tier of the grandstand to start blasting away dirges with the "St. Louis Blues." As the crowd was slowly dispersing from the yard, a shrill and long-drawn-out voice came wafting through the radio amplifier over the right field in a sad vocal rendition of the old levee lament, but by that time there was no St. Louisans left to hear it.

Jimmy Dykes, the pudgy third baseman of the A's who had half elected himself to the post of the series "goat" in St. Louis, banged a home run into the left field pavilion today. So did Simmons. The A's had their slugging clothes on, meantime, Big George was holding the Cardinals to five hits, a total of but seven off his delivery in 16 innings. Old Cornelius McGillicuddy certainly juggled his two star pitchers around well for this series. In fact, the old fellow's strategy was sound in every way throughout.

The Cardinals made a game fight of it as far as they went. They took the field this afternoon behind Hallahan with confidence, but the A's got a two-run punch over so quickly that the Cards never quite recovered. It was a pretty good series as these things go, and the St. Louis club certainly made a better fight than the Cubs of last year.

Strikes Out Douthit

The crowd woke up for the first time when Earnshaw dropped a third-strike on Douthit in the opening inning, Douthit swinging at the ball. Down in left field, Lefty Grove was warming up as the game began. Adams grounded out to Foxx, unassisted, and Watkins also struck out, swinging at three consecutive pitches.

The crowd received the slender Hallahan curiously as he took the mound. He had a little bag of resin in the box, and rubbed his hands on it vigorously as he began pitching to Bishop, who popped to Frisch. Jimmy Dykes, who almost "gummed" the St. Louis games, got a big hand as he stepped to the plate from the fans in sympathetic mood. He had a count of three and two when he walked. Cochrane took a strike, then slummed the ball past Bottomley in a terrific drive. Bottomley just did touch it with his gloved hand, but there was too much momentum on the pill for him to hold it.

Watkins Makes Error

Watkins in right field let the ball get away from him, and Dykes scores easily, as Cochrane raced to third. It was a two-base hit, with an error going to Watkins for that extra base that Cochrane took.

Simmons struck out on a wide curve. Jimmy Foxx got a grand blast of applause from the mob as he waddled to the plate. He walked. Hallahan was pretty wild, and his first two pitches to Miller were called balls. Then Miller whaled what the boys call "a cripple," the next pitch being right over the plate. It was a sharp double to center and Cochrane scored. Foxx got around to third, though a faster man would have made home. Moore raised a fly to Douthit.

Simmons made a great catch of Frisch's long fly to center in the Card's batting side of the second, taking the ball coming in over his left shoulder as he ran backward with the drifting drive. Not many outfielders can get that kind. Simmons also got Hafey's high hoist. Bottomley hung up his fourth consecutive strike-out, and his ninth of the series.

First Hit Batsman

Gelbert chucked out Boley and Earnshaw fanned in the A's second. Hallahan tickled Bishop's elbow with a pitched ball, the first hit batsman of the series. Battery errors were causing the Cards plenty of trouble. Dykes walked on four pitched balls. Lindsey, of the Cards, began warming up in right field, as Hallahan looked pretty bad. He had Cochrane two and two when Mickey fouled to Adams.

Dykes threw out Wilson on a slow bounder in the Card's third. Gelbert, who comes from Ambler, right outside of Philadelphia, got a hand from the crowd as he stepped to the plate. Connie Mack once refused a chance to get Gelbert at $3,000 per year, and lost one of the greatest players in the game. Gelbert raised a fly to Simmons. Fisher batted in place of Hallahan, and doubled to center, Fisher is a utility outfielder with the Cards, who was once with the Giants. Boley tossed out Douthit.

Sylvester Johnson, a right-hander, took up the pitching for the Cards as the A's went to bat in the third. He whipped two strikes over on Simmons, then dropped in a couple of balls. Simmons blasted the next pitch into the left field pavilion for a home run. The ball fell into the lower stand. Foxx hoisted to Frisch. Miller doubled past Adams. Johnson didn't seem to have much on the ball, on that one, but he fanned Moore on three pitched balls. Boley hit a fly to Watkins.

Dykes Hits One

Earnshaw struck out in the A's side of the fourth. Bishop walked. Dykes hit a line fly into the left field pavilion for another homer, scoring Bishop ahead of him. Frisch fell down getting Cochrane's smash, and threw to first from a sitting posture in time to get Mickey who was loafing on the punch. Adams threw out Simmons.

The Athletics got another run in the fifth after Earnshaw had easily abated the Cards in the first half of that inning. Foxx hit a two-bagger across second and took third as Bottomley tossed out Miller to Frisch at first. Haas hit a long fly to Douthit that permitted Foxx to score easily after the catch.

Blades hit for Johnson in the Card's sixth, and struck out. Andy High batted for Adams after Douthit popped to Cochrane, and was thrown out by Earnshaw. Then High went to playing third base, and Jim Lindsey took up the pitching for the Cards. Lindsey appeared in one of the Philadelphia games last week, as did Johnson.

Another Tally

With one out in the A's sixth, Bishop walked, and Dykes doubled to left center putting Bishop on third. Cochrane raised a sacrifice fly to Douthit and Bishop scored. Dykes stuck to second. Simmons hoisted a fly to Watkins.

Big Jim Bottomley got aboard the bases in the Card's sixth by a base on balls, but nothing came of it.

Ernie Orsatti, of Los Angeles, finally got into the series, batting for Lindsey in the eighth, Foxx grabbing his bounder down the first base line and making the put-out unassisted. Bell took up the pitching for the Cards as the A's went to bat in their side of the eighth. Probably if the game had lasted much longer, Gabby Street would have been in there chucking them himself.

Bell had an easy time of it. Gelbert tossed out Boley and Earnshaw flied to Douthit. He then threw out Bishop for the third out and the Cards came to bat for their last chance of the game and the series.

They Ruin Shut-Out

Reliable Andy High singled to right to start the Red Bird activities. Watkins was walked on four pitched balls and the Card fans sat up praying for a run that would spoil the shut-out. Frankie Frisch lined to Foxx, who stepped on first doubling Watkins. Chances for a run were slim as Chick Hafey went to bat. With two strikes on him, Hafey doubled to left, tallying High with the Cards' only run. Bottomley walked but Wilson ended all St. Louis hopes by flying out to Miller for the third out.

PORKERS HOLD LAST WORKOUT

Team Leaves Today For Fort Worth

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 8. (AP)—Arkansas held its last workout today, a heavy scrimmage, before departing for Fort Worth where the Razorbacks will open the Southwest conference football season Saturday with Texas Christian university.

A green, injured team will face the Horned Frogs with three regulars, Holmes, quarterback; Erwin, tackle; and Clark, guard, slated for the sidelines on account of injuries.

Coach Thomsen sent the Porkers through a heavy workout today. The squad will leave Thursday afternoon.

FROGS FINISH WITH THREE-HOUR DRILL

FORT WORTH, Oct. 8. (AP)—A last hard scrimmage before their first conference game was held by the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian university today. Coaches Schmidt and Wolfe sent their squad against the freshmen, who used Arkansas plays in a drill that lasted three hours.

The Frogs will take a stiff drill Thursday: A light workout Friday on the eve of their clash with the Razorbacks, who help Texas Christian university to dedicate the new stadium.

It appeared that Johnny Vaught will start the Saturday affair at guard in place of Standard Lambert. Lambert was out with an injured knee last week. Vaught played such a steady game that he is likely to draw the Saturday assignment particularly so since the Lambert knee still ails him.

WINNING PLAYERS GET LESS THAN LAST YEAR

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8. (AP)—The victory of the Athletics today gave them the winner's end of the money, approximately $5,000 per man, figured on a basis of their total of $136,027.69 being split into 27 shares.

Last year, each Mackman collected $5,620.57 for whipping the Chicago Cubs, the players' pool being much larger than this time.

The Cardinals will have their feelings soothed to the approximate extent of $3,350 each figuring their purse of $90,684.14 on the same split-up basis as the A's.

The gate receipts for the series exceeded $800,000 and were the nearest to the million dollar mark since 1926.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. (AP)—The government cotton crop report today was preceded by a decline which carried all the active months into new low ground for the season, and followed by an advance.

New December contracts sold off to 10.13 during the early trading under liquidation and Southern selling, but when business was resumed after publication of the crop figures advances to 10.38 on covering or some rebuying. That delivery closed at 10.32, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 7 to 8 points.

The opening was barely steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 6 points under Southern selling and liquidation promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables.

The government report placing the condition of the crop at 53.5 and the indicated production at 14,486,000 bales was little above the averages of private reports but about in line with the recent canvass of New York cotton exchange members showing an average expectation of 14,443,000 bales. The action of the market was regarded by local brokers as indicating that the report had been pretty well discounted.

There was little or no comment on the ginning returns showing 6,304,608 to Oct 1. As an immediate market factor. Exports today 24,026, making 1,439,782 so far this season. Port receipts 70,019. U. S. port stocks 2,964,757.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 8. (AP)—The cotton market felt the usual activity of bureau day but fluctuations were not as wide as usual as the government crop estimate of 14,486,000 bales was close to general expectations and had been well discounted in advance. Prior to the release of the bureau figures, prices declined 13 points on poor cables, hedge selling and some belated liquidation.

After the report was issued prices were at first unchanged but soon advanced 24 to 25 points from the pre-bureau lows on covering by disappointed shorts and trade buying. The market later eased off 15 to 17 points owing to weakness in stocks and hedging but recovered most of this loss in late trading. The close was steady at net gains for the day of 4 to 7 points.

Liverpool came in 3 to 5 points worse than due and first trades showed losses of 5 to 7 points. After a rally of 2 to 5 points after the opening call prices eased off again on hedge selling and liquidation, December dropping to 10.12 and January to 10.22 or 13 points below the previous close and the market was at the lows when the bureau figures were issued. There was trade buying and shorts covering in late trading and December closed at 10.30 and January to 10.41 or 18 to 19 points above the lows and showing net gains for those active months of 5 to 6 points.

Port receipts 70,038, for week 347,815, for season 2,968,567, last season 2,400,062. Exports 23,795, for week 98,540, for season 1,411,432, last year 1,186,597. Port stock 2,970,799, last year 1,504,180. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 116,285, last year 137,408. Spot sales at Southern markets 47,552. Last year 50,110.

Lessening of Selling Movement Discernible in Stock Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. (US)—The stock market continued heavy today yet there was discernible some lifting of the selling hysteria which has been responsible for the recent weakness. Prices of virtually all leading stocks were in new low ground, but the volume was not exceptionally large, slightly over 2,000,000 shares. There was a continued disposition to regard fluctuations as reflecting primarily speculative activities, although in certain directions the selling was obviously of more important character. When the market closed prices of all principal groups were at new lows. Throughout the day there was preponderance of bearish developments, including unfavorable steel trade reviews, disclosure of a sharp drop in steel mill operations to a level of 56½ per cent of capacity from 60 per cent last week, additional setback in wheat prices and the usual reports which, however, have greatly decreased in number since the stock exchange campaign was inaugurated. The one cheering, but as yet uninfluential, factor was the continued ease in money despite substantial calling of funds by the banks.

Beyond question of doubt, the stock exchange campaign against the bears, whatever its real intent, has had decided influence on many operators. This column is definitely aware of several very large covering operations by formerly aggressive bears. It is the bears' desire to remain temporarily inactive pending results of the campaign. In this respect, the short interest has been materially reduced. More important covering, however, has been proceeding in various stocks on a firm belief of former active bears that the market is fully entitled to a recovery. Such covering has included buying by some of the most thoughtful operators in the market, who point out that pessimism once again has reached such a deep gloom as to bring about a situation in the market itself where a recovery may be experienced.

The market itself failed to reflect any heavy buying demand. While short selling might be advanced as the cause of weakness in many issues, it hardly explains the persistent weakness in a stock such as Pullman, which today slumped to a new low for the year. This stock has always been regarded as among the prime investment group, yet at the low today its yield, assuming maintenance of the $4 dividend, was over 7 per cent. Another stock under heavy pressure was Canada Dry, which likewise established a new low, while Gillette, already heavily battered, broke an additional 8 points to a price which indicates quite plainly danger to the $5 dividend. Railroad stocks as a group slumped to new low ground for several years and utilities, which on Tuesday failed to join the late rally, were again disappointing.

Whatever concentrated pressure was responsible for the market's weakness was particularly evident in Steel common and the entire market seemed to revolve around the possibility of the stock breaking through 150, the panic's low. It dropped to within a half-point of this level, but rebounded. Except for its psychological influence, the price itself is of little importance, but through that level Steel common undoubtedly would attract considerable investment buying.

It would be more pleasing to the constructionists if the buying were of different character than now being witnessed, but the very fact that many bears are inclined to stay on the sidelines may grant the market a respite which may extend into a sizeable rally. As a matter of fact, the net losses on many leading stocks for the day was modest, American Can being down half a point, International Nickel one-fourth, General Electric 1⅛, Radio three-fourths, General Motors three-fourths. Steel common was off 2⅝ at the close, while Westinghouse sold off 4 points.

The South American situation continued a depressing factor in issues directly concerned, International Telephone and American Foreign Power establishing new lows. Yet, even in speculative issues such as Vanadium, the declines were relatively small, this issue being down little over a point. J. I. Case, normally a most volatile performer, was down three points. The pressure of outright liquidation, which has been the chief contributor to the weakness, was notably less effective.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. (AP)—Grain prices succumbed today to the influence of breaks in the stock market, and finished flat at virtually the day's lowest level. Contributing to the downward course of wheat values were reports that rains had improved southern hemisphere crop prospects, and also that Russia was now shipping wheat out of her northern ports as well as by way of the Black Sea. Wheat price rallies that accompanied news of threshing delays and damage to crops in Canada failed to last.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy ¾@1⅛c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 1¼c down, oats ⅛@¼c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15c.

Sympathy with stock market weakness showed itself most conspicuously in the wheat pit after word came that United States Steel shares had sold at new low record prices. Before this period, the wheat market had shown notable rallying power, and had responded quickly to buying orders that to a large extent came from houses with eastern connections.

Corn and oats went lower with wheat, but were less affected by the stock market depression than was the case in wheat. Demand for corn available for use at once was extremely active, with shipping sales of corn here the largest in some time.

Provisions owed their upturns more or less to an upward tilt of hog values.

Closing indemnities: Wheat, December 77¾@77⅞c, 80¾@80⅞c; March 80⅜c, 84½c; May 83¾@83⅞c, 87½c. Corn, December 81¾@82c, 85⅝c; March 82⅝c, 86½c; May 84¾@84⅞c, 88⅝@88½c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. (US)—Feeling that the broadening interest in the buying side of grains so noticeable last week was "nipped in the bud" by the fresh declines in the stock market, most wheat traders were inclined to feel that nearby action in the wheat market will largely depend on developments in the situation in Wall Street.

Stein, Alstrin & Co. say: "Outside factors are largely responsible for the present depression in grain prices, but we think the grain markets will break away from these influences shortly and reflect the inherent strength of their individual positions."

Rumsey & Co. say: "We are not bearish on corn, but cannot see the logic in discounting food under feed at more than five cents a bushel."

Thomson & McKinnon say: "There is excellent accumulation of wheat on all the weak spots and we believe the market is in shape to advance if relieved of the pressure of a weak stock market."

SOLONS URGE AMENDMENTS

More Efficient Legislature Goal of Changes

Members of the state legislative committee, appointed to sponsor the proposed constitutional amendments affecting the legislature which are to be voted upon in the general election in November, have begun their campaign to win statewide support for the measures, according to information given the Record News.

Better Laws

The amendments proposed by the 41st legislature purpose to alter section 5 and section 24 of article 3 of the state constitution. The first amendment would substitute a 120-day regular session for the present 60-day session, and would require that its first 30 days be given to introduction of bills, passage of emergency appropriations and confirmation of recess appointees; the second 30 days to be devoted to committee hearings on proposed bills, and the final 60 days to be utilized for the passage of bills, and for action upon such emergencies as may be submitted by the governor in special messages.

The second proposed amendment would allow each legislator $10 per day for the first 120 days of a regular session (which may be extended over an additional period by a four-fifth vote of the legislature) and would provide a mileage fee of 10 cents per mile. Members of that body now receive $5 per day during regular sessions up to 60 days, and $2 per day thereafter; $5 daily for service in special sessions; and a mileage allowance of 20 cents per mile.

According to Senator Edgar Witt, Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, and chairman of the legislative committee, the proposed amendments will have the effect of providing better laws at lower costs. Members of that committee point out that the provision of 30 days for introduction of bills will permit of the more careful preparation of such measures before they reach the committee room. They further urge that a 30-day period for consideration of proposed measures in committee will permit not only closer study by the committeemen, but will make possible the hearing of private citizens and interested parties who are often unable, under the present system, to meet the entire committee in whose hands the fate of a proposed bill rests.

Saving in Expense

During the past 14 years, the committee has pointed out, the legislature has been in session an average of 137 days for each two-year period, representing 20 special sessions in addition to the seven regular sessions. About one week of each special 30-day session, it was stated, is lost in the formalities of organization, printing of bills, etc., at a cost to the state of about $3,600 per day. It has been estimated that passage of the proposed amendments will save the state about $60,000 per term by adding 60 days to the present duration of the regular session.

Mileage costs in the past for each special session have been about $12,000, the committee report shows, and there have been on the average three special sessions for each two-year period.

Besides Senator Witt, the legislative committee consists of Senators Julian P. Greer, J. W. Stevenson, and Joe M. Moore; and Representatives Coke Stevenson, Charles S. McCombs (secretary), W. E. Pope, Clyde Warwick and Phil Sanders.

Radium Fish

MONTREAL—When the fish stories coming in from the lake country near Paudash, Ont., commenced to get bigger and bigger, scientists decided to find out why fish in this country were growing so large. Tests of the lake waters of the vicinity made at McGill university here showed the water to be strongly charged with radio-active material, which probably caused the fish to grow to abnormal size.

Mexican Floods Take Heavy Toll of Life

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8. (UP)—Serious flood conditions existed in the state of Hidalgo and other adjoining regions today, with heavy loss of life reported.

Fifteen passengers and crew of a motor launch were drowned in a storm on Lake Chalapa, state of Jalisco, yesterday.

Dispatches from Pachuca, reporting about three score persons missing and feared drowned, said the bodies of a woman and two children had been recovered. The search for other victims continued. The disruption of communications made it difficult for officials to make any estimate of the dead.

The Age of Youth

"I don't think I want to explain, Frank," she said.

"You mean you can't?" he asked.

"I mean that I don't want to, Frank," she reiterated.

"You can't mean that, Donna. Why, you're engaged to marry me."

"Am I?" she asked.

"My God, aren't you?" he demanded.

"That depends," she said.

"On what?" he asked.

"On you," she told him.

"On me? What have I done? You've taken this man's money—wrote and asked him for it, said you wanted the proper setting to get a rich husband. Apparently he gave you the money you wanted."

"Well?" she said, as he paused.

"I want an explanation," he said.

"The matter explains itself, doesn't it? Mr. Granby gave me $25,000. I used it as I had told him I'd use it, to put myself in a position where I could—meet men like you. That's about all there is to it."

"And Granby asked nothing?"

"And wanted nothing, and got nothing, Gardner," interjected Granby.

"But might have got something," said Donna.

Gardner turned back to her.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked.

"I mean that if I weren't successful—if at the end of two years I weren't married or engaged, I told Mr. Granby that—well, he wouldn't have to marry me."

"You mean—you'd have been his mistress?"

"That is the usual term for such things, isn't it, Frank?" she asked.

"You speak as though there were nothing surprising in your attitude," he said.

"I don't think there is," she said.

"I do. It's a bit of a surprise to learn that the woman I loved contemplated being another man's mistress," he commented.

"Any man—every man, I think, would be surprised if he knew the thoughts that sometimes were in the mind of the woman he cared for," she said.

"Decent women don't think that sort of thing," he said.

"How do you know they don't?" she countered. "Have so many of them told you so? Is passion an exclusively masculine possession, Frank?"

"And yet, having made such an arrangement with Granby—"

"Don't be silly, Frank," said Granby. "You know perfectly well that Donna would never have gone through with it."

"Yes, I would," said Donna. "And will," she cried.

"I wouldn't let—"

She cut Granby short:

"We made a bargain. If by any chance it is necessary, in fulfillment of that bargain, that I—come to you—I won't shirk."

"And you tell him that in front of me?" cried Gardner. "The man you intended to marry?"

"How do you know I intended to marry you?" asked Donna. "You insulted me publicly. The only way I could prove to the world that you could have had no basis for your charge was to become engaged to you. So—I did that very thing."

"And didn't intend to marry me?"

"I don't know."

"I suppose," he sneered, "that if I say to you now that I'm willing to believe everything you want me to believe, that you're a good woman and all that, and ask to marry you, you'll refuse me."

"I don't know," she said.

His attitude changed. He had been certain of things, but now he was uncertain.

"Donna, don't you love me?"

"I don't know," she said.

"But if I'm willing to forgive—"

"Forgive what?" she interrupted.

"Why—your taking money from Granby," he replied.

"What business is that of yours?" she demanded. "Have you ever given money to women?"

"What has that to do with it?" he evaded.

"If it's your business that I have accepted money from a man, why isn't it my business that you have given money to women?"

"Men and women are different," he declared.

"In what way? What's wrong for a man is wrong for a woman. I have asked you no questions. I will listen to none from you."

"Surely you'll admit that a girl owes some obligation to her fiance," he said.

"Then you're not engaged to me. You want release? Well, I give it to you. And now, will you go?"

"And leave you here with Ran Granby? Look here, Donna, you can't blame me for feeling as I've felt."

"It isn't a matter of blaming you," she said. "It—it—the whole thing is impossible; it always was impossible. Men—I wouldn't expect any man to—to—accept a situation like this and make no fuss about it. Blame you? Not a bit, Frank. But—I wish you'd go. I—I want to talk to Mr. Granby."

Gardner turned to the older man. He tore in pieces the patched letter and the photostatic copy. The pieces fluttered to the floor.

"Better burn them this time," he suggested. "They might be picked up by another servant. Chit-Chat destroyed the plates. The matter, I believe, will never arise again through them. I—ought to be pretty sore with you, Ran. But I'm not, somehow. I—believe you and Donna."

"Donna, forgive me. I'm crazy about you. I know you couldn't lie. I—I can understand your letter to Ran. I—I can understand your—bargain," he gulped at the word, "with him. I know perfectly well that Ran is too decent a sort to have—taken advantage of a bargain like that, and I know perfectly well that you'd not have gone through with it, either. Come, dear."

"Come where?" asked Donna, in surprise.

"We're going to be married," he said.

She shook her head.

"No, Frank."

"But you love me, don't you?"

Obvious of Granby's presence, he pleaded his cause.

"I told you that I didn't know. I don't. Please go."

"I won't leave you here," he declared.

"Despite your great faith in me?"

He colored at the sneer in her words.

"Donna, I want you to forgive me."

She smiled wryly.

"Life with you, Frank, would be one forgiveness after another, wouldn't it? You'd forgive me, and I'd forgive you—please go."

He took out his watch.

"Donna, I don't think any wrong of you and Ran. It was a shock—you won't maintain that taking his money was a conventional thing to do, will you?"

"I won't maintain anything," she said.

"I'll leave you here. I'll be waiting downstairs. I'll wait exactly half an hour. If you aren't down by then, I'll wait no longer. I'll assume that we are no longer engaged, that you don't intend to marry me."

He turned to Granby.

"If Donna comes downstairs, Ran, I wish you'd let me send you a check for—whatever amount she borrowed. You won't mind?"

Granby's expression did not change.

"If Donna marries you, you may repay me," he said.

"Well, settle up your affairs quickly, Donna," said Gardner to her. "I—I'm sorry for the way I acted. I still believe that I had occasion for suspicion, for anger—for whatever I showed. Only, knowing you, Donna—oh, well, there isn't anything I can say. But—after everything that's happened—you should know now, Donna, as well as you'll ever know, whether you care for me or not. A hundred years of acquaintance wouldn't change you, wouldn't help you to make up your mind. You know, now, all that is worst in me, and I hope you know some of the things that aren't so bad."

He drew a long breath.

"Telling about your love, in front of a third person, isn't easy. One doesn't ever expect to have to. But—the whole situation is a bit off the normal, isn't it? I don't mind Ran knowing how I care. I haven't any silly, false pride about my love for you. I can't be ashamed of the decentest feeling I've ever had.

"And, Donna, these things will never be mentioned between us again. Be certain of that, my dear. Goodby, Ran."

"Good-by, Frank," said Granby.

LIONS URGE HOME REPAIRS

Move Started as Aid To Unemployed

Home-owners in Wichita Falls will be urged to have painting, repairing, or other small jobs on their houses to the amount of $15 or $20 done during the ensuing three months as a means of supplying employment to local laboring men, according to plans adopted by the Lions club Wednesday noon after a short talk on the subject by Frank Cripliver, president.

Mr. Cripliver pointed out the need of such work by hundreds of working men here, and declared that practically every residence property needs a small amount of work done to put it into first-class condition.

McClure Gives Talk

"The money which is spent on these improvements," said Mr. Cripliver," will return to home owners almost immediately through the payment of bills, and the purchase of commodities. I have put off having my porch repaired, but I'm going to have it done now as my part of this campaign. Many roofs need repairing since the heavy rains."

Fire prevention was discussed by Fire Chief J. L. McClure in connection with fire prevention week.

"More than $50,000 was added to insurance premiums paid by citizens of Wichita Falls this year for fire protection as a result of our poor record in recent years," he said. "Only a few years ago we had the maximum good fire record credit of 15 per cent. It is now six per cent. Eighty per cent of fires, I believe, are due to carelessness. We had 536 fires in this city last year, and already have had 524 for 1930."

In connection with Mr. Cripliver's suggestions about property improvement, James Lyle, head of the safety council, recommended that home owners spend some time and money to clean out trash and weeds as a measure of improved fire prevention.

Aid for Children

Dr. W. P. Bolding submitted a motion providing that members of the club hereafter eat a less expensive luncheon at their weekly meetings, devoting the unused portion of the usual price to buying lunches for public school pupils who are unable to buy lunch for themselves. A committee is to be named to study this matter, it was announced.

Musical entertainment consisted of solo numbers by Mrs. C. N. Cameron and a duet by Mrs. Cameron and Mr. Baldwin Montgomery. They were accompanied by Mrs. Lucille Brooks Huff.

I. O. O. F. to Confer Royal Purple Degree

Officers of the Wichita encampment No. 6. I. O. O. F., will confer the Royal Purple degree on a class of candidates at the Odd Fellows hall Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Members of the Encampment association of Odd Fellows will be special guests. The association embraces all encampments in North Texas and Southern Oklahoma which includes branches from Burkburnett, Iowa Park, Electra, Seymore, Petrolia, Henrietta, Bellevue, Archer City and Grandfield. Delegations from each encampment are expected to be in attendance.

Little Mitzi Green, nine-year-old comedienne and second only to Marie Dressler, is included in the cast of characters for "The Santa Fe Trail," opening at the Strand Friday...which means that Mitzi will probably steal the show.

'Tis said that Mitzi, after delighting Hollywood with her clever imitations of Chevalier and several other notables, was asked why she didn't do an imitation of Rudy Vallee. "There isn't anything to imitate," she is said to have chirped." (From the mouths of babes...!)

Mitzi should be making a few short features, similar to the incomparably funny two-reel comedy made recently by Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. Her parts in full-length features are not big enough.

A "Silly Symphony" at the Majestic, with a three-headed Cerberus, old Plato himself and a lot of little sprites making Hades interesting, is set to the music from Grieg's Peer Gynt suite, with "In the Hall of the Mountain King" and "Anitra's Dance" predominant. There isn't any person who shouldn't enjoy a silly symphony, but it should be particularly delightful to Grieg enthusiasts. Incidentally that simile about " a bat in hell" is a lot more picturesque now.

RITES SET FOR AGED PASTOR

Nocona Minister, 109, Dies In Farm Home

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, Oct. 8.—Funeral services for Rev. M. Beasley, 109, who died at his home near Nocona early Wednesday morning, will be held in Nocona Thursday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Beasley had been a minister of the Protestant Methodist church in Montague county for the past half century. He was believed to be the oldest man in the county or state at the time of his death.

Despite his extreme age, Rev. Mr. Beasley continued the operation of his farm near here until a few days before his death and his work in the church was undiminished.

He is survived by his wife and six children. Burial will be in Nocona.

Gil Resigns as Party's Leader

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8. (AP)—Emilio Portes Gil, former Mexican president, today resigned his presidency of the national revolutionary party, principal factor in Mexican politics.

In a message to the executive board of his party he pleaded poor health as a reason, and said he intended to return to his private practice of law in Tampico.

Portes Gil has been president of the party for several months, having resigned the interior portfolio in the cabinet to accept the place. Since he assumed party leadership he has been the subject of repeated attacks by Luis Morones, head of the C. R. O. N., or Mexican labor federation, who has accused him of communistic leaning and plotting against President Ortiz Rubio.

Little Theater Names Four New Directors for One-Year Terms

Four new directors of the Wichita Falls Little Theater were elected, and several committee appointments made in preparation for the work of the ensuing season, at a meeting held early this week, according to information given The Record News Wednesday.

Mrs. James P. Bowen, Jefry Moffett, H. H. Ferrell, and J. C. Straus Jr., were elected to serve one-year terms, filling vacancies which occurred recently when terms of four one-year directors elected in 1929 expired. All of the new officers have been constantly active in the organization, particularly the three men, who have appeared in numerous plays produced in the Little Theater's playhouse during the past 12 months.

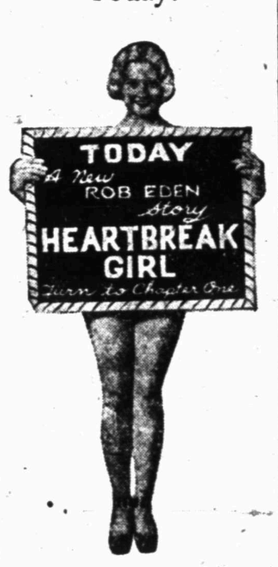

Other members of the board of directors are Mrs. A. D. Duck, Frederick Sehmann, Ernest Robertson, Baldwin Montgomery, Paul Barnett, Mrs. Ewing Watkins, and Emil Hermann, president.

Ernest Robertson was made chairman of the play-reading committee, which reviews available plays for the purpose of recommending to the director, F. C. McClung, those which may be included in the local organization's season. Other members of Mr. Robertson's committee are Miss Marguerite Fisher, Arnold Cureton, and Mrs. Ewing Watkins.

Mrs. Bowen and Mr. Moffett were made the new publicity committee, J. C. Straus Jr., was named stage manager, and Mr. Ferrell and Mrs. Watkins were appointed as business managers.

Rehearsals are being held nightly on "Kick In," Willard Mack's mystery-drama, which will open the 1930-31 season on Oct. 27.

NASH

Announces . . .

3 new EIGHTS and a new SIX

NEVER was such motor car quality offered at prices so sensationally low. The literally startling difference becomes at once apparent when you contrast the prices of the new and finer Nash series, with prices of corresponding models a year ago.

Its low non-productive overhead, its elimination of borrowed capital, and remarkably foresighted manufacturing alone enable Nash to offer so much for so little. The unique example in value-giving thus provided the industry was planned last November. At that time, C. W. Nash and the strong group of executives surrounding him, clearly foresaw present conditions. They at once began to design cars affording value so great, so unmistakable, as to overcome all buying reluctance.

The result is instantly apparent. Even casual inspection of the four new Nash cars establishes the fact that nothing even remotely approaching them in downright dollar value has ever been available in their respective price fields.

SENSATIONALLY PRICED!

STUDY THESE SENSATIONAL PRICES!

Compare what is probably the most remarkable achievement of Nash in greater value-giving—the New Six—with the Single Six it succeeds. The new Six offers a multitude of superiorities—at prices which range from $160 to $140 below the prices of the Single Six.

Body Style	The New Six W. B. 114"	Last Year's Six W. B. 114"	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$845	~~$1005~~	—$160
Coupe	$795	~~$940~~	—$145
Coupe (rumble seat)	$825	~~$980~~	—$155
Sedan (2-door)	$795	~~$935~~	—$140

Compare the New Eight-70 with its two additional cylinders, its longer wheelbase, its larger, more luxurious body, with the six-cylinder car it replaces. Then consider the remarkable fact that there is actually a basic price differential in favor of the New Eight!

Body Style	The New Eight-70 W. B. 116"	Last Year's Six W. B. 114"	Price Difference
Sedan (4-door)	$995	~~$1005~~	—$10
Coupe	$945	~~$940~~	+$5
Coupe (rumble seat)	$975	~~$980~~	—$5
Special Sedan (4-door)	$955

Compare the New Twin-Ignition Eight-80 Series with the 6-cylinder car it replaces. The Eight-80 is larger, longer. Design, appointments, upholstery are finer—prices are radically lower.

Body Style	The New Twin-Ignition Eight-80 W. B. 121"	Last Year's Twin-Ignition Six W. B. 119"	Price Difference
