Fulton Man Feared Drowned

The United States Coast Guard today (Thursday) was conducting a search by boats and aircraft in Aransas Bay for Jack Thornburg, 38, Fulton, who is feared drowned after his 27-foot sailboat "Princess" drifted ashore on St. Joseph Island.

Allen McLester, a rancher on the island, notified authorities last night that a sailboat had drifted ashore near his ranch.

The Coast Guard personnel at Port Aransas immediately started their search and also launched an investigation into the ownership of the boat. They learned that the boat was owned by Thornburg, who lived in a houseboat in Fulton. He left Fulton Beach Tuesday noon in his boat and has not been seen since that time. Thornburg was described as a "loner" who kept to himself, had no family here and was known by very few people.

The Coast Guard was able to learn the name of the last owner of the boat by checking the boat's identification numbers and find that it formerly was owned by John Walker of Corpus Christi. Walker said he sold the boat to Thornburg.

C. C. Area Tourist Bureau Will Erect 60 Highway Signs

The Corpus Christi Area Tourist Bureau will erect 60 highway signs in 1966 at various locations in South Texas. The purpose is to encourage passing visitors on highways such as 77, 281 and 59 to visit this region.

All the signs will indicate "you're in the Corpus Christi Play Area," but each will feature one city in the Coastal Bend. A special section of the sign will indicate "Rockport," "Aransas Pass," "Lake Mathis," etc. About seven changes are planned.

These 10 feet by 40 foot signs will be erected immediately. This is a joint project of the Tourist Bureau and Rollins Outdoor Advertising, which is cooperating with the Bureau on a public service basis.

Tourist Bureau President A. C. Lloyd said this is the first time the Bureau has gone into a vast highway bulletin project in eight years.

Medicare Cards Being Mailed

People 65 and older who have made the proper application are now receiving their health insurance cards under the social security Medicare program.

The first applicants all over the nation to sign up for the hospital and the medical insurance received their red, white and blue admission cards in the mail Monday, according to H. M. Cleveland, District Manager, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 1802 S. Staples Street, Corpus Christi.

"Almost all residents in this area who are 65 or over," Cleveland said, "are eligible for the Medicare benefits beginning July 1, 1966. Those who never worked under social security, and persons who are still working, as well as those who receive social security retirement benefits are eligible for the insurance. However, to qualify for the medical insurance, an application must be filed by March 31."

Eligible persons who have not applied are urged to take action soon in order to get their enrollment cards on time. Those who fail to enroll by March 31 will not have another chance for two years, Cleveland said.

Any Rockport area person wanting more information may write to Cleveland or call him at Tulip 3-5511, Corpus Christi.

Along The Waterfront

This past week, fishing in Sea Gun Sports Inn's basin has been excellent. With the continued cold northers sending the fish into deeper water, the fishermen have been catching large stringers of trout and redfish weighing from one to six pounds. Fishermen are having good luck on plastic worms, silver spoons and dead shrimp.

Sea Gun's three-month fishing tournament opened Feb. 1 and runs until April 30. Weekly and monthly prizes will be awarded to each of three divisions: I, men, II, women and III, children 16 and under for the largest fish caught in the bays surrounding Sea Gun. A grand prize of a complete fishing weekend will be awarded May 1. The tournament is open to anyone who resides outside of Aransas County.

Pirates Win Again, Remain Undeclared

The Aransas County Pirates continue to play topflight basketball and remain undefeated in District 30-2A competition, heading the district standing with nine straight victories and no losses.

On Tuesday night, Coach Dave Segler's high scoring team swamped Aransas Pass 59 to 40, with "Skyscraper" Tom Lewis leading the way with 35 points. For the losers, J. T. Marshall scored 13 points. Aransas Pass' standing in district play is now 1-8.

Last Friday night, the Aransas County High School team crushed Gregory-Portland 63 to 32. As usual, Lewis headed the scoring for the Pirates with 26 points.

On Tuesday, Feb. 8 the scrapping Pirates will tangle with West Oso in a district game here.

BASKETBALL GAMES HERE TONIGHT

Harrist Files For Re-Election

Ernest Harrist who last week said, "I haven't made up my mind," did so yesterday and filed for re-election as Alderman in Ward 2.

N. C. Vandagriff, a retired tailor, filed yesterday as a candidate for Alderman in Ward 1.

Up to the time The Pilot went to press this week, Harrist and Vandagriff were the only candidates filing this week for the city election to be held April 5.

However, lots of rumors were flying around. At least one businessman who has not filed was making no secret of the fact that he is considering entering the race for mayor.

Also, one announced candidate for mayor told The Pilot he would withdraw if the above mentioned businessman does decide to run.

So far, Simon Lee Sorenson and Wallace Maley are the only announced candidates for mayor. Hollis Collum, the present mayor, is still "considering running again for mayor." Maley is alderman from Ward 1 whose term is expiring. Sorenson, a plumbing contractor, has not sought or held public office in the past.

The deadline for filing is March 5.

Regarding Auto License Plates

Mrs. Margaret Weber, Aransas County Tax Assessor-Collector, has two requests regarding auto license plates:

(1) For those persons who requested certain numbers or letters and who already have turned in the necessary papers and fees, their plates are ready and can be picked up.

(2) Some people have left papers but no money and others have failed to turn in either the papers or fees. They should contact Mrs. Weber and correct the situation in order to get their plates.

Mrs. Margaret Weber, Aransas County Tax Assessor-Collector, reported this week that with the passing of the Jan. 31 deadline to pay poll taxes, 1648 persons paid theirs, and 48 persons received exemptions because of age. Men and women who became 60 before Jan. 1, 1965 were exempt. Last year, 1260 persons paid their poll tax and 32 received exemptions.

March of Dimes Mother's March

If a mother, a girl or a boy knocks on your door tonight between 6 and 9 p.m., it may be a volunteer for the Mothers' March in connection with the March of Dimes.

Mrs. Louise Pierce, chairman of the March, has lined up quite a few people to take part in this worthwhile cause and go door-to-door tonight seeking contributions.

Mrs. Pierce points out that if by any chance you are not called on, and if you wish to give, please make your check payable to March of Dimes and mail it either to the First National Bank or to Ed Harper, Key Allegro Estates, Rockport. Harper is chairman of the March of Dimes campaign in this county.

As you know, the money raised is used mainly for research to attempt to learn how to prevent birth defects.

Mrs. Beatrice Welch, local chairman for the Texas Heart Association fund raising campaign, needs from 15 to 20 workers for a door-to-door drive to be conducted Feb. 22, 23 and 24.

She asks that those willing to help in this worthwhile cause are to contact her by phoning SO 4-2928.

Mrs. Welch held a benefit coffee at her home recently during which $36.83 was contributed by those who attended. She suggests that all persons who wish to contribute by check should make them payable to the Texas Heart Association and mail them to Mrs. Welch, Box 1313, Rockport.

SAVINGS BONDS TOTAL $51,193

Bond sales in Aransas county during 1965 totaled $51,193 according to a report received from Fred Bracht, County Savings Bonds chairman. The 1965 goal for Aransas County was $60,000 and 85 per cent was achieved.

Texas sales during 1965 were $143,972,304 which represents 94 per cent of the state's sales goal of $152.8 million.

"The Aransas County Savings Bonds Committee was pleased to learn that the Treasury has announced its intention to raise the interest rate on both Series E and H Savings Bonds. Also, the interest rate will be raised on those bonds now being held. The new interest rate, as yet, has not been announced, but we know the increase of interest earned on Savings Bonds will make them even more attractive," Chairman Bracht announced.

Letter to the Editor

When an organization—regardless of its size or backing—is allowed to step in and take over control of an individual's private facilities, such as cutting off utilities (which are a necessity and not a luxury.) Then we are definitely heading for Communistic or Nazi-type government.

I am all for refusing an individual service when he consistently fails to pay his bill. But, when he fails to pay because of an error somewhere along the line and is not even aware of the fact that he is due at least the courtesy of being notified before he is left waterless, gasless, lightless or what-have-you!

MISS BARBARA BARNARD WEDS LESLIE HAYNES STEWART JAN. 29

Christ Church Cathedral in Houston was the setting for the marriage of Miss Barbara Sharon Barnard and Leslie H. Stewart on January 29. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Very Rev. Robert T. Gibson, Dean of the Cathedral. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Edward Barnard.

In the candle lighted church the altar was banked with white stock and white gladioli. On the side of each lectern were white candelabra and large white baskets of stock and gladioli.

The wedding music was provided by the church organist, William Barnard. Miss Mary Slocumb sang "The Lord Is My Light" and "O, Perfect Love."

The bride's gown was of white brocade styled in princess lines. The neck was bordered with seed pearls. The fitted bodice was fashioned with long tapering sleeves, and her veil of illusion was held in place by a pill box of seed pearls.

She was attended by Miss Carolyn Washington as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. John Daniel, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. David Clack, and Mrs. Harold La Fitte. The flower girl was Beverly Barnard, sister of the bride. She wore a mint green velvet dress and carried a white basket from which she dropped rose petals. The bridesmaids wore emerald green silk dresses and carried corsages of Tropicana roses.

The bridegroom was attended by Jim Funderburk as best man. Groomsmen were Charles Holmsten of Texas City, Ronny Crouch of Waco and Ralph Riggs of Houston. Ushers were Thomas Carter, Jerry Pizzatola, Dan Gardner and Brian Barnard, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Barnard, mother of the bride, wore a Windsor blue silk suit, and her corsage was of miniature Tropicana roses. Mrs. Basil M. Stewart, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gold brocade suit and carried yellow roses.

The reception was held in the Christ Church Parish Hall. Mrs. William Ritchie presided at the guest book. Those in the house party were Mrs. Jim Funderburk, Mrs. Kent Funderburk and Mrs. Tommy Mears.

For a wedding trip to Monterrey, Mexico the bride wore a pink knit suit with tan accessories. On her suit she wore a white orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The young couple will live in Houston where Stewart is a student at South Texas School of Law, and Mrs. Stewart is employed by Tenneco Oil Company.

The rehearsal dinner was held in the French Room of the Sheraton-Lincoln Hotel. The table was in the royal arch form and the center arrangement was of white gladioli and white mums. Banked on either side were crystal candelabra around which green fern and white mums were cascaded the length of the table. There were 30 present for the dinner.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Crawford, Mrs. B. W. Peterson, Mrs. Edward Lott, Dr. H. E. Schulze from Navasota, Texas; Mrs. W. R. Holmsten of Texas City, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Deekard from Port Arthur; Ronnie Bearden from Beaumont, Texas, and Lee Curry from Brenham, Texas.

Mrs. C. A. Barber was admitted to John Sealy Hospital last week.

Rockport: City of Marinas

This city can be called the Marina City of the Coastal Bend, there are so many of them surrounding it, giving access to the waters of Copano, Aransas, St. Charles and Redfish Bays.

One of the oldest and largest is Key Allegro, where Carl Krueger and his associates took the low-lying Frandolig Island, renamed it Key Allegro, and then laced its area with interlocking canals furnishing docks for practically everyone. In addition, they constructed a marina in which there are seventy covered stalls, capable of holding boats up to 50 feet or more, and 14 open stalls for transients.

At Sea Gun Sports Inn, on the north shore of Aransas Bay, Jerre Ledbetter, manager, says that they have 30 open and 24 covered stalls, capable of holding up to 50 footers, and a floating dock capable of handling 12 small boats.

Along with this are the usual fuel and boating supplies, a restaurant, motel, and eight 26-foot inboard charter boats than can be hired for as long as fishermen want them.

East of Sea Gun is the Neptune Harbor development, put on by the Toddie Lee Wynn interests of Dallas, who also own the marina. Neptune Harbor is interlaced with canals, providing homeside mooring for lot owner's boats. Adjoining it is Indian Cove, being developed by Frederic Johnson of Sinton. Indian Cove has a harbor and lots abutting the water.

At Palm Harbor, south of Rockport, there is a marina, a canal 2,000 feet long, with moorings for boats beside the owner's homes, in addition to 14 boat slips in the marina. Mrs. Raulie Irwin said that plans call for further development starting this summer by the Brashear-Irwin Co., which owns 4,000 feet of bank of the Intracoastal Canal to the north of Palm Harbor and another 3,000 feet fronting the Intracoastal Canal on the south.

West of town, is a 1,500-acre development including Copano Cove, Copano Cay, and Copano Ridge, are more than 11 miles of canal ranging from 60 to 90 feet wide. Mrs. R. B. Sipe who has sold most of the land in the area, said there were about 65 families living there now, with more homes to be built this summer.

The land belongs to George Strickhausen, who is also developing a marina-type subdivision between Rockport and Aransas Pass, with more canals and waterside moorings.

Another recently completed marina is that at the Sandollar Motel on Fulton Beach, which has a capacity of around 50 boats, with motel, swimming pool, restaurant and club facilities. — Corpus Christi Caller.

Dutch bleaching of linen was a long process, lasting six to eight months.

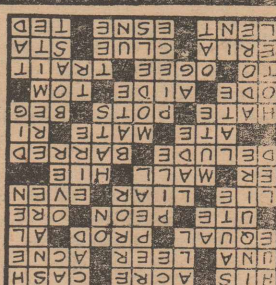

STILL ALIVE? According to Klaus Eichmann, son of Nazi hangman Adolph Eichmann, Martin Bormann is still alive. Klaus has said that his father told him that Bormann, Hitler's right hand man, shown above, escaped the collapse of the Third Reich, and is still living. West German prosecutors have placed a $25,000 price on Bormann's head.—WFS Photo

BUSINESSMEN SHOULD GET INTO POLITICS

Sen. Thurston Morton (R-Ky.) made a speech a few days ago before the National Broiler Council in which he told businessmen to forget that old saying that businessmen should not engage in politics for fear it will hurt business. It's baloney, he said. People like to do business with men in the public light. It's a myth that needs to be dispelled, he said.

The country needs businessmen, he said, who will take part in political activities in order to offset some of the crackpot theories now being heard.

For one thing, we pass too many laws today. Some of them are instrumental in destroying citizens' will to build and work. Businessmen can help to defeat such legislation.

As an example, he pointed out that we now have the third generation on welfare rolls. Grandmothers, he said, may be young but they are there and have been there for a number of years. And, too, we have youngsters coming up who don't know any means of getting what they want except to look to the government.

"Blame the system," he said.

Businessmen can help change the system. If by no other means than accenting the fact that the way to success is by the sweat of the brow and the corns on hands.

A JUDGE HAS A HEART

Judges aren't always rough and tough. They have hearts like anyone else and they demonstrate it quite frequently, public opinion notwithstanding. They don't always get the credit they deserve.

Recently Municipal Judge John Santora in Jacksonville, Fla., fined a man $30 for drunkenness.

The man's wife came forward and said:

"This is my husband. I have six children and I'm expecting another one. He stays drunk all the time and won't work. Yesterday, I got a welfare check for $81, the first one I've ever gotten. He took that check and spent every dime of it."

Hearing her, the Judge called back the defendant and upped his fine to $500 and 90 days in jail.

Then he announced to the filled courtroom that those holding traffic tickets calling for $5 fines would be given suspended sentences—if they donated the $5 fines to the lady.

She went home with $200, the first real hunk of money she had had in a long time.

We hear so much about judges meting out stiff sentences, we just wanted you to know that it isn't always a case of the judge being heartless. They're human, too, and pretty good-hearted.

If the price of meat keeps climbing, Yankees may stop sneering at Southern grits and Southerners at Yankee hominy.

EDITOR'S VIEWPOINTS

COMPUTERIZED CONTROL?

Long before traffic congestion reached the state of near paralysis that exists in some cities today, comedian Will Rogers offered a solution. Make all northbound vehicles travel on a Monday, southbound on Tuesday, and so fourth.

Nothing so drastic has been adopted anywhere; meanwhile, traffic control has been taken out of the hands of police and given over to engineers. In New York City, for instance, the city's arteries would be permanently clogged were it not for a multi-million-dollar computerized central control that keeps traffic moving, if not exactly flowing.

Something similar has been proposed for London; lights would be permanently synchronized and open fire routes would be provided emergencies. Motorists staying within the speed limit would be able to hit a series of green lights.

What cannot be programmed into any computer is a cure for all the human faults that make traffic control an even bigger problem than it ought to be. Illegal U-turns and left turns, light-jumping, double parking, speeding or dawdling—all are beyond control by red and green lights. Along with synchronized lights, motorists need massive doses of good manners, self-control, and patience. Given these, traffic problems might diminish by half. — London Free Press.

WHAT PRICE PRIVACY?

News from outer space is such that we tend to accept the activities of our astronauts with unconcern.

Especially is this true when we hear of them sitting in underwear listening to music over the radio.

There's an element of danger to the earth-bound male who indulges in such luxury that the astronauts need not fear.

The woman next door isn't going to walk in unannounced to borrow a cupful of sugar.—Dayton (Ohio) Daily News.

NEXT STEP: KEEPING IT ON THE TRACK

The 109-mile train trip from Hartford, Conn., to New York now is covered in two and a half hours, or 150 minutes.

A new 160-mile-an-hour train, using aircraft engines and design, has been submitted by United Aircraft Corp. The claim is that it will make the run in 100 minutes with three stops.

This may develop into the first of the speed runs designed to bring back train passenger travel—if they can keep it on the tracks!—Anderson (S.C.) Independent.

THIS AND THAT

By JOHN R. KINSEY

Judge Wendell has a beautiful new car. In design and from an engineering standpoint, it is completely different from any other American car now being manufactured.

From a design viewpoint, it resembles some of the Italian-designed sport coupes. The design is such that the car almost looks like it's streaking down the highway even when it's standing still.

From an engineering standpoint, it is the only front-wheel-drive stock car now being made in the United States. I believe the last front wheel drive was the famous Cord.

It would be advertising if I mentioned the make of Judge Wendell's car. However, I'll give you a hint. It's one of General Motors' best cars and it's not a Cadillac or Buick. And the name of this particular model is not Tornado but that's pretty close.

Now the judge won't know about this little item until he reads it or some friend shows it to him. Nor does he know that I'd love to drive his car since I'm an automobile (enthusiast or nut) depending on your viewpoint—and I'd never dream of asking a man to let me drive his car.

ing for a complaint, and the ever-present Mrs. Olsen is shown in the background. Hubby says to his wife: "Sister, you sure make lousy coffee."

Wife bursts into tears and runs from the room. Hubby leaves in a huff and a blue serge suit.

Next scene: Wife returns to room, wiping tears from her eyes. Mrs. Olsen pulls a jar of "you know what" coffee from some mysterious place under her coat and says to sad wife:

"I tanke maybe your trouble is de coffee you bane using. Try dis here kind. It's bane growing way up in de hills."

Final scene, that evening: Hubby finishes dinner, sips his coffee and says to his wife: "My sweet little honey, this here java is the mostest. My, my, y'all sure has found out how to please my innards."

Of course, what the sweet wife should have done that morning when hubby crabbed about the coffee was to bat him on the head and shout: "If you don't like my coffee, brother, go on home to your maw and wallow in her coffee. She's still using that beat-up old pot and making egg coffee."

Incidentally, egg coffee sure used to taste good.

CHANGE IN DRAFT POLICY ANNOUNCED

Austin.—Men who receive orders from draft boards to report for armed forces services will no longer have their orders cancelled if they subsequently join reserve or national guard units.

This change in draft policy was announced Tuesday by Col. Morris S. Schwartz, state Selective Service director.

A man will still be able to enlist in the regular active-duty forces under the same circumstances, Col. Schwartz said, if a representative of the regular armed forces is prepared to enlist him on or before the date set for his induction.

Colonel Schwartz said the new policy, announced Jan. 20 by Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, reached him and Texas draft boards Monday.

Action was taken after the following recommendation was received by the director of Selective Service from the assistant secretary of defense for manpower.

"I recommend that you revise your Selective Service procedures to restrict cancellation of induction orders by your draft boards to individuals who have been accepted for regular enlistments."

Will The Turtles Return? No One Knows!

Some time in 1966, if all goes well, some of the 330 baby turtles released on the shores of Padre Island, will return to the beaches of the long white island reaching from Corpus Christi to Brownsville, and lay their eggs, perhaps re-establishing the Texas turtle fishery which flourished during the last century.

The green giants were brought to Padre Island in 1963 by airplane and released by Dr. Henry Hildebrand, marine biologist of the University of Corpus Christi, as an experiment in migration.

And, a year or two later, inhabitants of the southern portion of the island may look for the return of still another sea turtle, the result of Daryl Adams' dream and persistence.

Hildebrand released his turtles, flown in from the black sand beaches of Tortuguero, Costa Rica, about half way down Padre Island; in the center of the area set aside for Padre Island National Seashore, and they were green turtles.

Adams went about matters in a different way; he transplanted the eggs of another marine species—the ridley—whose breeding grounds were discovered two or three years ago on the Mexican coast, and waited for them to hatch.

The end result, both men hope, will be the same, with turtles becoming common again on the Texas coast.

One of the oldest commercial fishing enterprises in the State of Texas was the capture of green sea turtles, of which hundreds were caught in the bays around Rockport and canned by a packing company that took on their conversion to turtle soup and steaks after the cheap beef of the longhorns was sent north on the hoof, instead of being turned into pickled beef and tallow at packeries along the coast.

One cannery here started to can delicacies from the sea, and even shipped some turtles north to New York on the decks of sailing schooners.

Records show turtle canning was a flourishing industry at Indianola before it was wiped out by a succession of hurricanes.

Civilization, a disease that wiped out most of the turtle grass on which the giants fed, jetties, and a number of other causes combined to wipe out the turtle population, once so plentiful in the bays, and organized fishing for the turtles ceased at the end of the last century. Since then, only an occasional one has been caught.

In parts of the Caribbean the turtles are facing the same fate, largely because of the delicacy of its own flesh. Well enough equipped by nature to survive the dangers of the sea since pre-historic times, turtles were unable to flee from hungry people and predatory beasts on shore.

Hungry natives of the Caribbean coasts regard all turtles as delicacies, and if this were not enough, packs of wild dogs and coyotes dig up their eggs and eat them also.

Such inroads have been made on the turtle population in the Caribbean during the last few years that it has all but vanished, and only the interest of men like Hildebrand, Dr. Archie Carr, of the University of Florida, and Adams, offer it much chance of survival.

Carr, on grants from the National Science Foundation, spent six years hiking over Caribbean beaches, making detailed studies of turtle migrations.

From Carr's studies came a book, "The Finward Road," and, as a by-product, the Costa Rican government set aside a five-mile stretch of beach at Tortuguera, sent groups of riflemen to slaughter the wild dogs so destructive to turtle eggs, and limited the catch of turtle brokers to 1,000 per season.

Once immediate danger of extinction was past, Dr. Carr started his search for new hatching beaches, as he believes that the ungainly sea reptiles return to the beaches where they break from the egg, and this is where Hildebrand came in.

The turtles he released on Padre Island in 1963 were part of this experiment and, if the plan works, this section of the beach about midway down the stretch set aside for the National Seashore, will once more become a nesting ground, helping repopulate the Gulf and Caribbean Sea with turtles.

Adams, who operates on the lower end of Padre Island, had no help, but he has spent plenty of money and a good deal of his time during the past two years attempting to establish another species—the ridley—on the beaches of the island.

Ridleys were long an enigma. No one knew where they originated or where they had their nesting grounds until Dr. Hildebrand discovered them several years ago, laying eggs along an isolated stretch of the Mexican coast. Smaller than the green turtle, they are just as good eaters.

Adams became interested in ridleys and brought eggs from the Mexican beaches near Tampico to the sands of the lower end of Padre Island.

A few turtles were hatched last year, but not enough to satisfy Adams. This year he went all out in his efforts and built special boxes in which he could transplant turtle nests almost intact, and buried a number of them in what he hoped would become their new Texas home.

No hen ever brooded her eggs more industriously than Adams did his turtle eggs, and, as hatching time neared, he hovered over them constantly, without the appearance of a single baby turtle. Some of them that he dug into had no eggs at all, for they had apparently been dug up by coyotes or other predators. Adams returned to his home and business in Brownsville, leaving his camping equipment on the island. When he returned to get the equipment, he was amazed to see little ridleys all over the place.

Fishing and food were forgotten, as Adams and his companions dug into nests that were undisturbed, and found still more turtle babies.

His theory now is that hatching had been delayed by cool weather, and that winds piled sands deeper over the nests than usual, giving the youngsters a tough time to dig to the surface.

Although discouraged when the turtles did not hatch on schedule, Adams wasn't about to give up. He was prepared to build coyote-proof fences and other protection for next spring.

But now the turtle story has a happy ending. So far it has been a personal project of Adams and some of his friends, with money coming out of his own pocket and the time off of his own calendar.

LAND USE AND ZONING

Publishers' Note: This is the second in a series of articles on land use and zoning related to Rockport. Last week we traced the history of Rockport up to World War I.

The area continued as a tourist center until World War I, when the Heldenfels Ship Building Company located here and constructed a number of wooden-hulled ships.

In 1919, two disasters contributed to the problems of Rockport: The old Aransas Hotel burned in March. The old hotel was built in the boom days and was widely known as one of the fine resort hotels of Texas. Six months later the disastrous 1919 hurricane hit the Texas coast and caused the inundation of the town creating widespread damage.

Since that time the town and the area have been gradually growing in significance as a tourist and summer resort area. Its position as a tourist and recreation center has recently been greatly enhanced by the completion of the Little Bay development in front of Rockport the construction of many new motels, Key Allegro and many other developments.

The Rockport area is now considered one of the leading resort areas on the Texas Gulf Coast and promises to grow in size and significance.

Land Use Analysis

The first step in analyzing land use in the city is to make a complete inventory of how the land is now used or occupied. This involves a land use survey, the purpose of which is to record on a map the use of each parcel of land according to a standard classification. To do this, a field check of all property was made in the latter part of 1964. The City Council employed McClendon and Associates, consulting engineers, who retained William W. Anderson, professional city planner, to make the land use survey.

Because of the large amount of development just outside the present city limits, the land use survey includes as much of the adjacent area as appeared to be reasonable.

The field check consisted of an on-the-ground inspection of each parcel of property, classifying its use or occupancy, and recording such use on a map.

All property and uses are classified as follows: Single family dwelling, two-family dwelling, apartment (3 or more units), business or commercial industrial, railroad, public or semi-public, parks and playgrounds, streets and alleys, and vacant.

After the completion of the field check of property and the preparation of the land use map, each parcel of land was measured and tabulated, giving the total amount of land in the city and the area devoted to each use. The data obtained was compared with Taft, Mathis and Premont, nearby cities having many characteristics similar to Rockport.

It has been found that the portion of a city that is occupied and developed for urban purposes is comparable with the developed portions of other cities. There is no uniformity between cities, however, in the amount of vacant land included within a city. Therefore, the figures on developed area for other comparable cities become meaningful and important as guide lines in analyzing land use matters for Rockport.

To further analyze the conditions and problems of land use, data is presented for the amount of land now occupied for a unit of population, acres per 100 people. This data not only provides a common denominator as a basis for comparisons and measure of adequacy but also provides a basis for future land use projections. Knowing the amount of land in each classification required to accommodate the present population and knowing the size of city for which planning is being done, the data can be used, with caution, to arrive at a reasonable estimate of the amount of land required for each type of use for the future city.

Discussion of Existing Land Uses

The city is laid out in a grid or waffle pattern. In spite of the fact that many sections of the older city are compact and well occupied, there are many large sections of the city that are vacant or occupied by scattered development.

A great deal of development is taking place outside the city limits of Rockport. In fact, the majority of the new development is taking place outside the city limits. This is due largely to the fact that nearly all of the townsite was laid out many years ago and much of the property is widely scattered and is in relatively small tracts. Most modern subdivisions are developed on large tracts in a much more efficient manner than the present grid pattern.

Because it is difficult to obtain large vacant undeveloped tracts within the city, such developments have been located outside the city. It therefore becomes doubly important to analyze the conditions inside the city with a view to suggest whatever corrections appear necessary and practical.

Because of the economic characteristics of Rockport with its retirement and tourist population, it is unlike most other cities. Therefore, any comparisons should take these factors into consideration. (Next week, dwelling uses will be discussed).
