Area OIL News

KIRK FIELD ACTIVITIES
Following is a report on the activities in the Kirk Field, Gorman, for Tuesday, July 20:
W. B. Johnson Drilling Co. have hit it again on their No. 1 Sanders. On an actual official test this well produced 305 barrels of oil in 15 hours under a 20-64 inch choke with 400 pounds on tubing. This sounds even better than the 4 good wells which Johnson had to come in on the Arlan Watson Tract which is in a diagonal offset from this Sanders tract.

National Coop. Refining Association reports on their No. 2 Albritton that they perforated Monday and are preparing to acidize Tuesday afternoon.

Commercial Production Co., No. 2 Roy Parker on the back-pressure official test reports the absolute open flow to be 1,000,000 cubic feet per day. Since a good test in this area runs from 1,000,000 up, this appears to be a good gasser, for the Roy Gaines outfit.

Hunter and Mellard are still underreaming on the No. 1 Blackwell at approximately 845 feet. More water seems to have been encountered.

Burton and Gregg No. 1 Phillips being, getting ready to perforate Tuesday afternoon.

Burton and Gregg making a new location on their Phillips lease—the No. 2 Phillips. This will be on the east side about the middle of the east side.

A spudder is moing in today on the B. F. Porter tract. This outfit is being brought in from Snyder and the facts are not available as yet. The outfit was in town trying to find out how to reach the location.

It Took 12 Years But New Car's In Sight

PEORIA, Ill. (UP)—Harry Carr is a patient man.
In 1936 he decided he wanted a new car, but he also wanted to pay cash for it. He started an "Automobile fund." Each week Carr faithfully put aside two dollars, and added a dollar or two whenever he could cut a corner on an expense.
Now, 12 years after he began the fund, Carr's thrift is paying off. His name is at the top of the list for a new 1948 automobile.

MARSHALL SAYS U.S. WILL TRY TO AVOID WAR

WASHINGTON, July 21 (UP)—Secretary of State George C. Marshall said today that the United States will take all possible measures to reach an acceptable agreement with the Russians in Berlin in order to "avoid the tragedy of war for the world."
But in seeking the agreement the United States "will not be coerced or intimidated in any way," he said.
Marshall made his blunt statement at his weekly news conference in response to a reporter's question regarding the possibility of "war dangers" in the Berlin impasse between the Western Powers and the Soviet Union.

Marshall gave his firm views on the Berlin situation as Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military chief in Germany, and his political adviser, Ambassador Robert Murphy, were enroute with a first-hand report on the seriousness of the Soviet Union's starvation blockade of Berlin.
Meanwhile, other American officials reported that the Soviet attitude on Berlin may be interpreted as meaning that the Russians are prepared to force a showdown on Berlin at the risk of war.

Too Much Baby Sitting By Girls Depreciated

MINNEAPOLIS (UP)—Don't let your daughter do too much baby sitting.
That's the advice of Dr. Harold B. Hanson, Minneapolis public school psychiatrist. He said an increasing number of emotional breakdowns in high school and junior high school-age girls can be traced to baby-sitting and other outside activities.
Hanson said girls who mind babies too often tend to be "pushed into adulthood" too soon and become over-stimulated emotionally.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—Oscar the robin broke a wing and faced the problem of how to get up in his tree limb retreat without flying.

Republicans May Try To Expand The Civil Rights

WASHINGTON, July 21 (UP)—Republican leaders discussed today expanding proposed civil rights legislation in the emergency summer session to cover the right to work.

Under the contemplated amendment, a worker abused during labor disorder or blocked from his job by mass picketing could have federal protection if local officials failed to provide it.
"It doesn't make much difference," said one House Republican, "whether a person is clubbed by Southern lynchers or by a Northern mob. Civil rights have been violated in each instance."
The GOP would expect Democratic New Dealers and perhaps President Truman to balk at such extension of the civil rights program, assuming that it could pass both Houses.

18-Year-Olds Volunteering By Thousands Today

WASHINGTON, July 21 (UP)—Business boomed at military recruiting centers throughout the country today as thousands of 18-year-olds sought to beat the peacetime draft by volunteering for 12 months of service.

Under the new draft law, 18-year olds who volunteer for one year's service in this country will be excused from the 21-month draft when they turn 19.
Taking advantage of this "escape clause," hundreds of youths queued up at recruiting centers to sign up with the Army, Navy or Air Corps.

The new draft act provides for registration of men 18-through-25, but only those 19-through-25 may be inducted.

It authorizes voluntary enlistment of 18-year-olds.
The $20 bill is vying with the $10 bill as a most popular greenback. There is now $8,750,000,000 in $20 bills in circulation, compared with $6,000,000,000 in $10 bills.

WILL REQUEST CONTROL OF PRICES ON SOME ITEMS

WASHINGTON, July 21 (UP)—President Truman will present his legislative program to the special session of Congress in person at 10 A. M. (CST) next Tuesday. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said today the President will deliver his message to a joint session of the House and Senate on the second day of the special session.

The timing of his appearance was worked out in consultation with Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders.

At the same time, Ross told reporters that Mr. Truman would not ask Congress "to go off on any wild goose chase."

"Obviously he is not asking Congress to enact the Republican platform," Ross said. But he said that as "a matter of fact," several proposals which the President will make to the special session are included in the Democratic platform for 1948.

Ross said that "in large part," the program to be put forward by the President is "already in Congress . . . some of it far along in the legislative process."

It was understood Mr. Truman will request again the enactment of price-control measures on certain commodities and "stand-by" authority to check spiraling prices of others.

The special session called by Mr. Truman to consider an anti-inflation program and other matters will convene at 10 A. M. (CST) Monday.

Mr. Truman's spokesman said he could not discuss at this time the possibility the President might include a report on the current Berlin crisis in his message.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

U. S. Greatly Expands Project Of Information and Education

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—This month the State Department's Information and Education Program for foreign countries begins tripling operations under Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen. For Congress has stepped up the spending money from the $10,000,000 of last year to $28,000,000 for next.

What this means is more American libraries and cultural centers operating abroad, exchange of more students and learned men, more U. S. technical experts to foreign governments, more American documentary films about the United States for showing to foreign audiences, and last but not least, more "Voices of America" programs beamed in foreign languages to countries where it is important that the American story be told straight.

Biggest problem of "the Voice" under its new boss, Lloyd Lehrban, is of course keeping out of trouble at home. The recent hullabaloo in Congress over a series of corny feature shows beamed to Latin America has resulted in withdrawal of the private broadcasting companies from this field. The State Department will do it all.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY ALLEN says that the aim is "to present our civilization in its true color, which is gray—not lily white. We are willing to admit our imperfections and to tell the truth as clearly as we can ascertain it."

To keep the American Voice from going sour, an advisory board is being appointed by the White House. It will be headed by Mark Edridge, Louisville publisher, and will include Erwin Canham of the Christian Science Monitor, Mark May of Yale Institute of Human Relations and Philip Reed of General Electric.

Of the $28,000,000 new money which Congress is putting into the information and education program, roughly $7,000,000 will go to the Voice. Four and a half million more will be spent on construction of new relay stations abroad, so that the programs will have better reception in foreign countries.

Another $4,500,000 will go for the State Department's daily wireless bulletin—some 6000 words of condensed news sent to U. S. diplomatic and consular offices all over the world.

Two and a half million will go for administrative expenses and salaries in the U. S. Expenses abroad will be over $7,000,000 a year. The final $2,000,000 of appropriations will go to OEX, or the Office of Educational Exchange.

The 60 American libraries now open in foreign countries will be increased to more than 80. A dozen new cultural centers will be opened in addition to the 30 or more now operating. Preference is to be given to Marshall Plan countries and the Middle East, where it is important to get over American ideas.

Another part of this work is to arrange for translation of important American books into Arabic, Chinese, French, Greek, Turkish, Polish and other languages. Arrangements are being made to send over 150 U. S. engineers and scientists to foreign countries. They will help solve economic, public health, labor, safety, farm and other problems. These projects are selected from foreign government applications by Interdepartmental Committee on Scientific and Cultural Co-operation, representing 15 U. S. agencies. Aid is also to be given to private agencies interested in all these fields.

Administration of the Fulbright act also comes under OEX. By this law, American scholars may study or teach abroad on grants of money coming from the sale of U. S. war surpluses in foreign countries. China, Burma, Greece and the Philippines have already signed agreements for this exchange, and a dozen more countries are negotiating. In the next 20 years, it is anticipated that some $250,000,000 will be spent on Fulbright fellowships.

THE SCOREBOARD

Joe Louis Ranks Eighth on Roche's Roster of Champions

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Now that Joe Louis has retired, what is the long-time Brown Bomber's place in ring history?

This will surprise a lot of people, but Billy Roche, the man best qualified to speak, ranks Louis eighth among heavyweight champions. Roche, one of the greatest of referees and a famous manager and promoter now 80, lists them in this order: John L. Sullivan, James J. Jeffries, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack Johnson, James J. Corbett, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis.

"Unfortunately," says Roche, "fighters generally are remembered as they were in the ere and yellow of their careers, but the Sullivan whom I place at the top was a trim Roxbury, Mass., boilermaker, standing 5 feet 10 1/2 inches and weighing just under 180 pounds. "Fighters were brought from all parts of the world to tackle Sullivan, and none could stay four rounds. When he was an old man and all through, it took the young and remarkably swift and skillful Jim Corbett 21 rounds to knock him out.

"Sullivan introduced the one-two, the jab followed by the straight right. He was the first to knock out opponents by hitting them on the point of the chin.

"Jeffries wouldn't have been hurt had he been struck by a runaway locomotive.

"Fitzsimmons, the freak, was the craftiest of all, hit like a pile-driver."

ROCHE rating Tunney ahead of Dempsey will also shock the bulk of the more moderns, but the ring's elder statesman points out that the Manassa Man Mauler was easily hit, calls the Manly Marine the brainiest man who ever sidled through the hemp.

"Louis had as fast a pair of hands as ever swung from a heavy-weight's shoulders. But he couldn't take it. His stance was poor, as Jack Johnson said. He was easily knocked down. And in the first Schlegel fight he showed that he didn't like the rough going. His ability was magnified by lack of real competition."

Sign of a well-known New York stakeholder, backer, trainer and second, Roche has been closely identified with boxing since he was a youngster. He managed mysterious Billy Smith and Edwina McFadden.

When James W. Coffroth broke in as a promoter following the turn of the century, Roche went to San Francisco with Big Jim Kennedy, New York's Tex Rickard of the period.

There Roche added to his reputation as a referee, being the third man in the more spectacular 45-round matches in Flutiana's golden days in the golden west.

As director of boxing for the Knights of Columbus in France and Germany during and after World War I, Roche had a hand in the development of Tunney.

Billy Roche's ratings are controversial, of course, but no one has a better right to make them.

"Hi-Ho, Hi-Ho, It's Back To Work We Go!"

Here's Help For Lost Golf Ball Troubles

By John Rosenburg
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW LONDON, Conn. (UP)—Golfers may relax.

Take your eye off the ball. Forget that back-swing. Have fun.

Mort Mencher, manager of the Griswold Country Club, says he has the antidote to golfers' most maddening bugaboo, the lost ball. "We have eliminated that off-the-fairway nightmare," he said.

It took two years of experimentation, Mencher explained. Two years of trial and error.

"But we have the answer," he said. "Our golfers rarely lose balls up here."

It should be a comfort to every golfer, he added, especially at the price of golf balls today.

What is the great discovery? Well, Mencher said, he hated to broadcast it because people might think he was crazy. But the modern method of keeping safety while in the rough is—

"Dogs," he said. "We have trained a pack of pointers to hunt for our lost balls. When the ball is found the dog comes to a point and waits for the player to make his next shot."

Mencher said it wasn't easy to train the dogs.

"We tried everything to give the balls a scent the dogs would follow," he said.

First the golf balls were rolled in ground beef and dog food. It didn't work.

"One pooch almost choked trying to swallow one of our steak treated balls," Mencher said. "We had to give that idea up."

But the ingenious Mencher, who is credited with inventing the luminous golf ball for night play, didn't give up.

"I finally hit on the idea of giving the balls a pheasant scent," he said. "It worked on the first try."

Mencher said that after the first successful experiment he arranged with a pheasant farm in Lake-wood, N. J., for a continuous production of pheasant-scented golf balls.

"It was fairly simple," Mencher said. "The owner of the pheasant farm merely put the golf balls in the pheasant nests and the hens would sit on them."

Mencher said his idea isn't perfected yet, but it's workable.

Mencher thinks a breed of dogs that would hunt golf balls with an unnatural scent-stimulus would be ideal.

THE STORY: Jessica dances with the stranger from the airport. His name is David Gregory. Jessica is attracted to him. She feels guilty about it. He drives her home, wants to see her again. She refuses. He phones her several times. Jessica always says she's busy. But this brief glimpse of a different world has made her more restless and unhappy in her present environment than ever.

XIII

JESSICA talked to Doris. It was a relief to pour out her bewilderment to the other girl who listened gravely and then tossed aside her cigarette and said, "You've had a tough break, but there's no solution that I see but to put it squarely up to Tom. Either that or leave Akron and go back to Kentucky."

"That would be running away, wouldn't it?"

"That's up to you," said Doris. "My father won't take me back. Do you want to go?"

"I haven't the chance," said Jessica evasively.

Doris said, "Maybe you want to run away from something more than a mother-in-law. Her shrewd hazel eyes fastened upon Jessica's downcast face.

"What do you mean?"

"I saw you come home a week or two ago in that swanky roadster with David Gregory."

"You know him?"

Doris shrugged. "Would he know me? He's a new man at the plant and comes through the factory occasionally. He was an ace pilot in the first years of the war. He's an authority on synthetics now and Hugh Linton's right-hand man. Gets a huge salary and lives at a downtown club. Anything else?"

"I'm not interested in him."

"Then you're the exception, for plenty of girls are."

Jessica explained, "I've met him twice. He talked to me at the airport and I met him again at the Mayflower one afternoon and he insisted upon bringing me home."

Doris sat staring thoughtfully across the street. "The Blakes know about him?"

"There's nothing to know. Lucy was properly shocked, but everything shocks Lucy. She never looks at a man except her employer."

DORIS made no comment and shortly afterward Jessica left. She found Lucy just returning from the office looking drawn and haggard. She refused the supper Jessica offered to prepare for her.

"Where's Mother?"

"Gone to a church meeting. Betty's in bed and asleep and I went across and talked to Doris for a few moments."

"I can't understand your interest in that girl," Lucy took off her plain felt hat and ran her fingers through her blond hair and loosened it.

Jessica stood watching her. How lovely Lucy could be if she'd only try. Something of this colored her tone as she said, "You can't understand anything but working like a slave for a man who probably doesn't appreciate what you do."

Lucy whirled. "But he does! Hugh Linton took me in to work for him when I was inexperienced and he held just a minor position at the factory. That was four years ago. He says that he owes much of his present success to my efficiency, and I owe him everything. . . . Her voice broke and she sank into a chair and leaned her head against the back and closed her eyes. Then she sat up and said apologetically, "I didn't mean to seem abrupt, but my job means everything to me. Mr. Linton has been liberal, as you must know, for my salary helps to keep this home. Mother had only a tiny income from an insurance policy my father left her."

"What was he like?" asked Jessica curiously.

"My father?" Lucy stared thoughtfully at her clasped hands for a moment. Then she said, "I don't think he was any success. He was lazy. He worked at different jobs, as I remember, and then became a city fireman." She smiled faintly. "As far back as I can remember, Mother always listened for the fire siren, and even yet she has a passion for attending fires. It seems silly, doesn't it, when she's so strong-minded and emotionless?"

"My father was killed in a fire downtown. I was only 13 years old and Tom was 14. Tom worked after school at odd jobs until he was old enough to go into the factories. Mother went to work by the day and I took care of children nights. You wouldn't understand a life like that, would you?"

Jessica shook her head.

Lucy went on, "Mother and Tom provided the money for my business course because they didn't want me to go into the rubber factories. When Mr. Linton gave me a position as his secretary I was proud."

Work and save. That had been Lucy's life. Jessica rose impulsively and kissed her. She said briskly, "Nevertheless, there are limits to what any girl should do for her family."

She went downtown the next day, leaving Betty with Doris, and told the jeweler with whom she had left her ring that she had decided to sell it. He smiled, well pleased. He said, "Mr. Linton will be delighted. He is quite determined to have the ring."

"Mr. Linton?" she asked.

"Hugh Linton. He's an executive in one of the rubber plants and a very good customer."

Jessica didn't want that thin-lipped arrogant man with the cold light eyes to possess her mother's ring. She concealed her astonishment that he and Lucy's employer were the same. She debated whether to tell Lucy that she had seen Hugh Linton. But then if she discussed Hugh Linton with Lucy, she would have to divulge the possession of the money brought from the ring's sale; and for the present she determined to keep that money a secret.

New Theory Offered On Drunken Driving

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UP)—You're safer driving when you're "dead drunk," than when you're simply "high," Frank Andrews, Evanston, Ill., police lieutenant, told a conference of traffic court judges and prosecutors here.

Andrews explained that the driver who has had just enough drinks to slow his reaction time and to dull his sense of responsibility doesn't realize the danger of his condition.

On the other hand, the person who is thoroughly intoxicated usually knows he can't handle the automobile properly, and is likely to drive more carefully.

Nobody Loves Forever

THE STORY: Doris tells Jessica that very eligible David Gregory is right-hand man to Hugh Linton, the boss lawyer in town. Jessica decides to sell her ring, is astonished to learn from the jeweler that the man who was so interested in buying it is the same Hugh Linton.

XIV
"Jessica debated ways and means of using the money from the sale of her ring to further her plan to take a business training. But Lucy discouraged the job. "It will place an added burden upon mother," she hinted, and she has quite enough to do already."
"This was the Lucy Jessica disliked. The martyred Lucy who refused to have fun like other girls and constantly flaunted her rigid adherence to home obligations. Duty—Lucy was a slave to duty, her home and her work. The latter claimed more and more of her time and energy, until one evening in late September, when she dragged about the house completely exhausted, Jessica asked her, "Why are you such a complete idiot, Lucy? A man like Hugh Linton doesn't appreciate all this self-sacrifice in the line of duty."
"What do you know about Hugh Linton?"
"Jessica wasn't too sure just how to explain. She said lamely, "Doris works at the same plant. She's told me about him."
"Mr. Linton doesn't know that Doris exists."
"Probably not, but that doesn't alter the fact that she has seen him and hears—"
"What does she hear?" demanded Lucy, her eyes flashing.
"How should I know, but I judge he might be the type—"
"What do you mean?"
"Lucy's thin cheeks were flaming red with anger. She tossed aside the evening paper she had been reading and left the room."
WHAT, I mean? puzzled Jessica. "Exactly nothing, in fact she had fished when she mentioned Doris, for Doris had never spoken to her about Hugh Linton."
Now her curiosity was aroused, and the next time she saw Doris Jessica asked her, "Tell me something about Hugh Linton. What is he like?"
"Why do you want to know?" Doris stooped to stuff leaves deeper into the bushel basket she was filling. The scent of burning leaves was in the air.
"Because I'm curious," Jessica moved a swirl of leaves closer to Doris' basket with her shoe. "Because Lucy goes into hysterics whenever his name is mentioned. He must be a saint."
"Quite the contrary," said Doris dryly. She paused to dump the leaves from her basket on the heap outside the curb. When she returned she and Jessica sat on the steps and watched the pile of leaves go up in flames.
Jessica said, "He has my ring—at least I'm quite certain Mr. Linton bought my mother's ring."
"Your mother's ring?"
Jessica explained. Doris shrugged. "Probably a present for some sweetie," she said briefly. "Let's go in, it's getting cold."
Jessica refused and went back across the street remembering that Lucy was alone working on a piece of needlepoint.
But Lucy left the house as she came in, explaining that she was worried about her mother. The bonfires might easily start a fire and her mother worried about fires.
"That's ridiculous," Jessica said. Lucy stood shuffling into her coat. "No," she said, "not if you understand Mother. She always went to fires as far back as I can remember."
Jessica said, "I can understand your mother's anxiety, when your father was a fireman, but why should she worry now?"
"You can't change Mother."

Lucy stated flatly as she left Jessica and hurried off down the smoke-fogged street.

IT rained that night and the fallen leaves lay damp and sodden on the walks the next morning. Betsy escaped from the house and played outside for a half hour before Jessica discovered her absence. She caught a dreadful cold. Several terrifying days and nights followed for Jessica until the baby's fever broke and she was out of danger.
Then Betsy was up again and able to be bundled up in her new coat, and in spite of Mrs. Blake's dark forebodings that fresh air would bring a return of her illness, Jessica took her out one bright, unusually warm October afternoon and went to the park half way across the city.
The afternoon sun was as hot as August and Betsy ran up and down on the grass and squealed and laughed and looked more like herself than at any time since her illness.
Jessica whipped off her hat and felt the sun warm and welcome on her own face after the long weary days in a sickroom. There was a tang in the air, the air of drifting leaves overhead. She watched the ears circle past in a constant stream. Then suddenly she straightened up and called sharply to Betsy who ran about a little distance away, "Come, Betsy, we must go."
"She was too late. The driver of the big red car moving along the drive slowed and halted; the car swung open and David Gregory leaped down and strode toward her.
"Jessica!" He seized her hands and held them tightly in his own firm hands. Betsy raced toward them, stopped, smiled, and said, "Mans." David dropped Jessica's hands and lifted the baby and sat down beside Jessica with Betsy on his knees.
Jessica's heart raced. She had almost forgotten him—No, that was not true, she had kept the thought of David hidden, only to revive it now as her thoughts whirled and she felt tongue-tied and self-conscious.

Says Germans Still Feel Like Fighting Again

FRANKFURT, Germany (UP)—Fritz von Unruh of New York, well-known German-born writer, fears that "the real democratic forces of the German people may be too weak to overcome nationalism."
Unruh, touring western Germany, said in an interview that he had not expected a democratized German people.
"I fear that those who endeavor to establish a real democracy in Germany will try in vain because of the dangerous rebirth of nationalist movements," he said.

Unruh said recent developments in Hesse, where the newly-founded National Democratic Party—charged to the fascist by the military government—could make substantial election gains are "disappointing and alarming."
Blames U. S. Party
He added that the U.S. military government attitude toward the German problem in some cases furthered nationalists and militarists feelings. He mentioned the recent announcement of an American foreign legion and said, "This could become the death blow to all anti-militarist endeavors in Germany."
Unruh said that "if you ask a

German whether he would be willing to become a soldier again, he undoubtedly would answer yes and not even care what he is supposed to be fighting for."
"Just give them a gun—they'll march," Unruh said. The gray-haired writer, who valiantly fought nationalist Germans before Hitler came to power, and left Germany in 1932 when he recognized that the wave of nationalist-militarist forces would seep the country.
He said he plans a new book about his impressions in Germany. "It will be a tragic song of misdirected and vain attempts to restore democracy to Germany," he declared.

British Pact Is Prosperous For Irish Farmers

By Charles J. McDonnell
United Press Staff Correspondent
DUBLIN (UP)—A golden era lies ahead for Irish farmers as a result of the new four-year Anglo-Irish trade pact signed in London.
The fact that British now will pay higher prices for fat cattle will put millions into the pockets of Irish cattle raisers. For some time, despite the severity of the meat ration in England, British buyers had to stand by and see cattle which they could have used go to other countries of Europe. The British would not authorize the higher prices which the continentals were prepared to pay.
James Keogh, chairman of the Irish Livestock Exporters and Traders' Association, said the Eire delegation had obtained everything that the country and the cattle trade could wish for.

Britain also is to take as much bacon, butter, eggs and poultry as Eire can supply, so that the immediate future will see a tremendous stepping up of those products here.
Opinion in Irish industrial and manufacturing circles is not however, unanimous as to the merits of the pact. Patrick J. Kanagah, president of the Irish Manufacturers Federation, pointed out that it is evident that currency difficulties and the problem of Eire's adverse balance of payments barred Eire from important benefits.
"However," he added, "some of our capacity to protect our industries has been recovered by this agreement."
Other manufacturers approve the condition whereby Britain guarantees adequate coal supplies and are relieved that Eire's dollar shortage has been eased. It had been feared that the problem of providing Eire with enough dollars to maintain present imports of petrol, oil and other industrial essentials from America might prove insuperable.
Eire, however, must look forward to a period of austerity for a while. Imports, particularly of luxury goods, must be severely restricted to offset the country's huge adverse trade balance.

Eire now imports from Great Britain ten times as much in goods as the value of her exports to that country. The question loomed large at the London talks, where it was agreed that Eire must cut imports from Britain as well as her trade figures showed a healthier balance.
The Eire government must now decide what form import restrictions will take. The axe must fall on a range of commodities which can be excluded with least hardship to the community, and inevitably will include a wide range of luxury imports, including, possibly, motor cars. Restriction on automobile imports would for the greater part affect trade with America, since the vast majority of cars used here are from the United States groups.
As yet, Premier John A. Costello has declined to reveal how the dollar crux was overcome, but he did say that the arrangements were related to the Marshall aid plan.

BOSTON (UP)—The New Haven Railroad's fast train, the Yankee Clipper, had to be clipped in half to get it out of South Station when a locomotive was derailed on a parallel track.

Half of the Yankee Clipper could get past the jutting overcatcher of the locomotive, so yard workers unhitched the train in the middle.

Most abstractors were wondering when the next order would come from them. Then came the gradual rise in the price of petroleum products, release of more building materials, and increased inflation which swelled the price of lands out of all reason. These factors and others contributed greatly to the demand for title work. But through good times and bad—for more than 25 years—we have never thought it wise to sacrifice quality for quantity. And that's our business platform today!

THE STORY: Jessica Gordon, aristocratic southern belle, has eloped with Yankee soldier Tom Blake in defiance of her father and in spite of her own qualms. At Tom's insistence, she is living with his mother and sister, Lucy, while he is overseas. They are working people and Jessica, accustomed to luxury, tries in vain to accommodate herself to their kind of life. Tom's sister is cool to her and his mother openly antagonistic. Jessica goes to the airport for an outing one Sunday afternoon and an attractive man picks a conversation with her. Jessica is attracted but discourages him. Determined to seek independence for herself and her two-year-old daughter, Betty, before Tom's return, she takes a valuable ring that had belonged to her mother downtown and leaves it at a jeweler's for appraisal and sale. Feeling extravagant on the way home, she stops into a fashionable hotel for lunch. A voice says: "Hello! What luck to find you here." It is the man from the airport. He insists she have a drink with him.

XII
 "HE drinks came. Cigarettes were lighted. He asked, "How's Betty?" which put the conversation on a good firm basis. She talked about Betty. How old she was and whether she resembled "She's like her father." That was a safe subject, too. He said, "My name's David Gregory," and ignored the reference to her husband. After a bit of hesitation she said, "Mine is Jessica Blake." He laughed. "I remembered that. You knew that I would try to see you again, didn't you, Jessica?" She thought, This must end right now. Lucy was right, in spite of all her primness, and it is dangerous to trifle with men like David Gregory. David Gregory. She liked the name and she liked the man who bore it in spite of the fact that she determined to discourage any further meetings, and it is dangerous to trifle with men like David Gregory. She pushed aside her glass and declared she must go. "Without a dance?" "The music encouraged dancing."

DAVID GREGORY telephoned the day following the meeting at the Mayflower. He called several times and always Jessica told him that she was busy, unable to make any engagements. Two weeks passed with no further attempt upon his part to get in touch with her and she felt a certain relief. Mrs. Blake answered the telephone upon two occasions and viewed her afterward with something akin to horror. Lucy told her that her mother was completely upset by the idea that Jessica would converse with a strange man. Why had the man called her? Who was he?

The fact that David was the man who spoke to her at the airport only aggravated Lucy's disapproval. She had met him again? Jessica explained. On a shopping trip downtown she had met David Gregory and he had brought her home in his car. Nothing more. Lucy persisted. "He stopped you on the street?" "No." "Flatly, "I met him at the Mayflower?" "The Mayflower?" "What's wrong with that?" Jessica was impatient now and in a case remembering how startled she had been when David appeared so unexpectedly, remembering the dance and her own reaction to his touch, but determined to give the meeting no significance whatever. She picked Betty up from the floor and started to leave the room, then paused and, over her shoulder, said indifferently, "I'll never see him again and I've told him so repeatedly."

"Tom will be home soon," said Lucy. As though that would solve everything, thought Jessica as she wearily mounted the long stairs. She could not explain the restlessness which dogged her constantly ever since the day she met David Gregory. It was untrue to have caught a glimpse of a different life, for her own would not be too changed with Tom's return. For a while at least they must remain with his people and she would be one against three, for Tom would agree at all times with his mother and Lucy. The prospect was disheartening. (To Be Continued)

HE STAYED: Lucy disconcerted when training herself for job, saying it would place an added burden on Mrs. Blake. She ran up when Jessica taught her to work herself to exhaustion for her boss, Hugh Linton, who is playing with Betty in a park where Gregory drives and David Gregory jumps out. Her car begins to race. She feels uncontrolled and self-conscious. David sits down beside Jessica with Betty on his knees.

DAVID'S eyes studied Jessica over the baby's golden head. "Do you realize that it has been three months since I saw you? I called repeatedly. Don't you think you acted rather silly, Jessica?"

"No."
He persisted. "You wanted to see me, didn't you?"

She tried to deny that and couldn't. David set Betty down and said, "Run along, baby." His eyes were grave and for a little while he said nothing. They sat and watched Betty dart about in the patches of sunlight.

Then David said thoughtfully, "It's the very devil to meet the one girl you've wanted to meet all your life and to find that she's married. I've tried to fool myself into believing that I'd forget you. He turned and smiled at her. "That didn't work. Now I'm not letting you slip away again without telling you that I love you."

Jessica spoke sharply. "Don't!"
"Why not? Why not be honest about it?"

"You don't know me."
"I know enough to love you. I know that you're married to some guy overseas and you probably think me a heel to try to cut in."

"You couldn't."
"No," he said thoughtfully, "probably I couldn't."
He stood up and called to Betty. He said, "Look, why can't we be friends, you and I and Betty? This is a perfect day for a ride. I've got a thermos and we'll pick up

Nationwide Survey Shows Growing Use Of Home Freezers

A rapidly widening use of home food freezers, both as a means of providing fresh food on a year-round basis and because they can be made to pay for themselves through food economies, is indicated by nationwide surveys, according to Mr. H. Pullman of the Pullman Store, local dealer for Carrier Corporation, leading manufacturer of air conditioning and refrigeration equipment.

One study by recognized experts in this field showed that the market for food freezers was expanding faster than did that for domestic mechanical refrigerators in their early days, Mr. H. Pullman said.

The economic advantage of freezing sizeable quantities of fresh foods, which can be served anytime with all of their original goodness, texture and flavor intact, he pointed out, is appealing not only to housewives on farms and in cities but to restaurants and other establishments as well.

"There is no question about the average American housewife becoming frozenfood conscious," Mr. Pullman continued. "She is David moved impatiently. He picked up a stone at his feet and flung it down the little hill on which they stood.

"You made a mistake, Jessica. You took a silly schoolgirl infatuation for love. Love is something quite different. I want to teach you how different. I want—"

He ended abruptly. He caught her by the arms and drew her toward him, closer and closer, with his bright blue eyes intense and dark, probing her own.

"I want to kiss you, Jessica," said David softly. "Will you let me kiss you, darling?"

THE RANGER DAILY TIMES

Presenting the Candidacy of

COKE STEVENSON

Of Junction, Texas

for the UNITED STATES SENATE

FIRST, We all know our A B C s —

- A—That campaign promises and running the other fellow down don't mean a thing.
- B—That what a candidate can and will do after he is elected is all that counts.
- C—That what a fellow is likely to do after election is to be judged mainly by his past record.

NOW —

- Coke Stevenson makes no campaign promises except honest and faithful service.
- He is the only man in this race who has a well known record from having served the whole state of Texas, in the legislature as well as in the Governor's office.
- That record is extra good or you wouldn't bump into somebody strong for Coke, town or country, and all over Texas, every time you turn around.
- By the record he has done more for highways, farm-to-market roads (to get them started any way), pensions, school per capita, protection of farmers and ranchmen from predatory animals, and on down the lines, than anybody else in the race.
- Coke Stevenson is a man of the soil and always has championed the cause of the farmer and cattleman.
- He is the only man in this race who seems to attach any importance to constitutional and State rights.
- He is the only candidate for the U. S. Senate that has a past record to show that something can be done about waste in operating the government, and who wants to talk and do something about the subject.

Are These Things Not Better Than Mere Promises?

If you think they are, then

Americans Human, Japanese Decide On Seeing Plays

By EARNEST HOBERECHT United Press Staff Correspondent TOKYO (UP) — The Japanese are finding out that Americans are human.

They are making the discovery by attending American plays. For the first time since the war, Japanese theatre-goers are being given an opportunity to see a continuing flow of American plays enacted by Japanese.

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" just closed, after playing to standing-room-only audiences in Tokyo. "Three Men on a Horse" is now playing to packed houses here.

The Toho Company, which produced the two plays, aims to acquaint Japanese with the American way of life through presentation of varied modern American productions.

production are "Skin of Our Teeth," "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois," "On Borrowed Time," "Etahn Frome" and "Lillom." Also scheduled for showings are "No time for Comedy" and "Yellow Jack," which now are being translated.

Except for a production of Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine" in 1946, "Our Town" and "Three Men on a Horse" are the first American plays to be staged commercially in Japan since 1941. Two plays of British origin, "The Mikado" and John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," were performed in 1946 and last year in Tokyo.

Pointing out the rapt attention demonstrated by Japanese audiences seeing "Our Town," one reviewer commented: "There were few, if any, lurches eaten during performances."

Human Subjects Submit To Tests In Cancer Study

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—One of the world's unique laboratories for the study of cancer has begun full operations in San Francisco with the opening of a ward for human research patients.

The laboratory is a co-operative venture of the University of California medical school and the National Cancer Institute. It is financed by the U. S. Public Health Service and quartered by the city and county health service.

Dr. Michael B. Shimkin, director of the laboratory, said the new human research ward is the heart of the laboratory's program. Only 15 patients will be accommodated in the ward at one time. They must sign an agreement to the effect that they are willing to be used for research purposes. Patients will be treated free of charge.

Dr. Shimkin outlined a four-point program of study, including: 1. The electronic characteristics of normal and malignant growth. 2. The physiologic changes in patients with cancer.

3. Experimental chemical treatment of cancer. 4. Characteristics of common malignant tissues.

One of the interesting parts of the investigation will center on the use of radioactive isotopes on studying the fundamental problems, diagnosis and treatment of cancer.
