Council limits wells, tank batteries

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

After adding restrictions on where tank batteries could be located, the Midland City Council passed an ordinance Tuesday that adds regulations to drilling oil and gas wells within the city limits.

The action culmintated almost two months of discussion on how the ordinance should be revised, with residents and oil industry personnel taking opposing sides. Nor could the two sides agree on when the vote should be taken, with the citizens calling for it at the meeting and oil representatives wanting "just two more weeks."

Even the council split over when the vote should be taken, but finally passed it on an emergency basis after learning more oil companies had requested permits to drill under the old ordinance. This means the new ordinance becomes effective immediately.

Although representatives from oil companies had complained at the Jan. 10 meeting the proposed regulations would restrict drilling, Councilman Tom Sloan said after Tuesday's meeting that it won't stop drilling.

No drilling is allowed less than 175 feet from the well bore to an occupied structure. However, if the company can obtain signed approval from all property owners within the 175 feet and the council passes it by a three-fourths margin, the drilling will be allowed.

From 175 feet out to 642 feet, drilling will be allowed if the company follows all the ordinance's regulations. A public hearing will be held and notices will be mailed by the city to all landowners within the area.

From 1,320 feet or beyond, a company can drill without the public notices.

Electric lines must be installed in the same fashion as those in the neighborhood. If the lines are buried, then the oil company must bury theirs.

Tank batteries won't be allowed less than 175 feet from an occupied structure. From 175 to 467 feet, the company will require approval by all landowners and by three-fourths of the council.

Other requirements include installing a steel fence around the drill site and using steel-lined sludge pits.

Martin Allday, attorney for Parker & Parsley whose requests for drilling in 349 Ranch Estates prompted the revised ordinance, argued he hadn't seen the newest copy of the ordinance and needed two weeks to study it. But a woman from 349 Ranch Estates said she had a copy and he'd had the same chance to get one as she.

"I don't see any zeal to pass it today," said Mayor G. Thane Akins.

"I don't think there's any reason not to pass it," replied Sloan.

It was approved on a five-to-one vote with Councilman Jesse Hatfield dissenting. The only reason he voted against it, he said, was because the petroleum side hadn't studied the ordinance.

Reagan preparing speech

President Reagan prepares for tonight's State of the Union address.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, using his State of the Union speech tonight to raise the curtain on an anticipated re-election campaign, will tell the nation it has moved "from the problems of the '70s to the solutions of the '80s," a senior White House official says.

The president will use the address to endorse a manned space station and budget reform proposals, the official said.

All but the finishing touches were completed on the speech the president will give from the well of the House of Representatives at 9 p.m. EST, before an audience of senators, members of the House, the Cabinet and diplomatic corps, as well as a nationwide television and radio audience.

The president's aides view the address as a key political document and one of the first salvos he will fire in the 1984 presidential campaign. It precedes by four days the five-minute speech he will deliver from the Oval Office Sunday night disclosing his political plans.

Even before the day of the State of the Union speech arrived, Reagan's policies were drawing renewed fire, and not just from Democrats.

Former President Gerald R. Ford urged Reagan on Tuesday to stretch out the defense budget, and impose new taxes as well, to stem what he called the "dark, ominous cloud" of deficits approaching $200 billion for years to come.

In a pre-emptive strike at the president's speech, Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the House Democratic leader, said that the nation's priorities had grown "cruelly deranged" at the White House, with spiraling military spending draining human resources.

He delivered a virtual campaign platform to reverse Reagan's policies, "to revive the American dream, to renew the American spirit, to rekindle America's faith in our future."

The senior White House official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, said Reagan would keep the speech free of details about new initiatives. Instead, he will set out themes that are likely to reappear in campaign speeches if he seeks a second term.

MISD opposes electives proposal

■ Midland, Greenwood and Ector County school trustees meet — Page 1C

Like mothers and doctors, the State Board of Education is telling local school officials that medicine must taste bad to work. But Midland school trustees contend there are some remedies worse than the disease.

Trustees Tuesday charged that policies passed on first reading by the state board will deny students the opportunity to take electives and severly restrict participation in extracurricular activities.

School officials plan to present their objections to House Bill 246 in writing, and encourage the state board to maintain local flexibility.

The intent of the bill is to standardize public school curriculum. It was only presented to state board members a few weeks ago, and many aspects of it were never discussed with local school officials or during local hearings this summer, trustees complained.

New graduation requirements would call for the awarding of two types of transcripts — general and advanced. The general would basically apply to vocational students, according to Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Duane Moore, and the advanced is designed for college-bound students.

The advanced program requires students to earn 22 credits to graduate, the same number Midland Independent School District now requires. In addition to those courses currently required by the district, these students must take two years of a foreign language, a year of fine arts, a year of computer science, another year of mathematics, another year of science and an additional year of either mathematics, science or language. MISD requirements for social studies may have to decrease from 3 units to 2½, and for physical education from 2½ to 1½.

With an advanced transcript, students are only allowed two electives over four years. If the MISD did not lower it's social studies and physical education requirements, students would only be allowed a ½ unit elective.

A student who is in band or athletics would be denied electives, and anything more than two credits would not apply towards required credits for graduation. In most cases, physical education courses or athletics taken the junior or senior years would not count. Students would have to pass a state physical fitness test before being allowed to substitute.

Exemptions must be claimed by May 1

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County taxpayers who have not yet claimed their homestead exemptions have until May 1 to do so at the Midland County Appraisal District office in Dellwood Mall, according to Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson.

Unless previously claimed, any homestead exemption will go into effect with the 1984 taxes and will not affect the already-due and mostly-paid 1983 taxes.

Four homestead exemptions are available to taxpayers:

—General homestead exemption. This entitles Midland homeowners to an automatic $5,000 exemption. Taxes on a house appraised at $50,000, for example, would be computed at $45,000.

—Homestead exemption for taxpayers age 65 and older. Those citizens are entitled to a $10,000 exemption in addition to the $5,000 general exemption. In this case, a house appraised at $50,000 would be subject to taxes computed on $35,000.

—Homestead exemption based on work-related disability or illness.

The disability, which would be verified by the U.S. Social Security Administration or by a physician, would afford a $10,000 exemption.

"It's an either-or situation," said Wilkinson. If age 65 or older, a disabled taxpayer has to chose between the homestead exemption due to disability or the exemption related to his age. He cannot claim both. Wilkinson said he advises taxpayers to take the $10,000 65-or-older homestead exemption. Unlike the disability exemption, the other does not have to be renewed from year to year.

Radical mastectomy gives way to 'rather experimental' surgeries

EDITOR'S NOTE: In laboratories across the United States and elsewhere, researchers are gradually bringing humanity's most feared diseases under control. In Part Three of a 10-part series, AP science writer Paul Raeburn deals with the steady — and sometimes remarkable — progress that has been made.

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

Few ailments provoke as much controversy as breast cancer. Surgical removal of the breast, the usual treatment, can be psychologically devastating.

As a result, researchers have looked to other therapies and in recent years have markedly reduced their dependence on extensive surgery. Radical mastectomy — surgery to remove the breast, underlying muscle and associated lymph glands — is done much less frequently now than it was even a decade ago.

"We have not carried out radical mastectomy for early breast cancer for maybe 10 years," says Dr. Michael Osborne, a surgeon at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

"It's moved away from that to modified types of surgery," he says. But he adds a word of caution: The modified surgery "still remains rather experimental."

Many doctors who treat breast cancer are unhappy with the almost universal condemnation of radical mastectomy by the public. "It's a subject where there's been more emotion than light," says Dr. Bernard Fisher, chairman of a national breast cancer study begun in 1958.

With regard to the increasing use of less drastic surgery, Fisher says. "The press would have you believe that these changes happened because people wanted them to." In fact, he said, "It has nothing to do with anything but our new appreciation of breast cancer."

That new appreciation can be traced to Fisher's pioneering work in the 1960s, when he showed that breast cancer was a disease of the whole body.

Honduran boy braced for dream come true

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Wilfredo Alvarenga, who hobbled about his Honduran hometown on all fours after polio left him crippled, now anxiously awaits braces which will allow him to walk.

The 12-year-old has been brought to the Houston area and measured for the metal braces and crutches through the kindness of Margaret Anderson, who worked as a volunteer nurse in Wilfredo's village, La Virtud.

"One day he came up to me and out of the blue asked if I could help him get braces for his legs," Miss Anderson said. "He said he just wanted to be able to walk straight like all the other children."

When she returned home to the Houston area from the Central American country at Thanksgiving, Wilfredo came with her.

Last month, Wilfredo was measured for braces and crutches at the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children in Houston. While waiting for the devices, he's staying with Miss Anderson and her parents in their Texas City home.

"This is a dream come true," said Miss Anderson, who credits her father, the Rev. Allan Anderson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Texas City, and some divine intervention for making it all happen.

"A man in our church named Odbert Myers is a Shriner and he said he would be glad to help out," Anderson said. "The Shriners have underwritten most of the medical costs and the congregation has taken care of things like travel expenses."

Wilfredo said he is baffled by the generosity of the strangers.

"I got all these presents for Christmas from people I didn't even know," Wilfredo said. "I am a rich man."

Miss Anderson said the child, who had never been more than 10 miles outside his village before, was homesick for his family at first.

"It was unnatural for him to have his own room and he was lonely," Carmen Anderson, Margaret's mother, says. "He would come into our room and want to climb in bed with us. He' a very sweet, thoughtful and considerate child."

The braces are expected to be ready soon. Wilfredo hopes to learn to ride a bike, "walk like everyone else does and play soccer," Mrs. Anderson said.

Kohl, Shamir discuss arms, peace talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany met with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today to discuss Bonn's plans to sell arms to Israel's Arab neighbors and proposals for new Middle East peace talks.

The two leaders emerged smiling from the 90-minute meeting at Shamir's office, their second session since Kohl arrived Tuesday, but no details of the talks were revealed.

Kohl later laid a wreath at the monument for Israeli war dead outside the Knesset, or parliament, and was greeted there by a police honor guard and three army trumpeters.

Three Parliament members — two of them survivors of the Nazi Holocaust — walked off the floor as Kohl was given a warm welcome by Speaker Menachem Savidor. A fourth legislator displayed a placard with the Hebrew word for "remember" emblazoned in black letters on a yellow Star of David surrounded by a drawing of barbed wire.

Kohl, who was 15 when World War II ended, showed no visible reaction.

He conferred with 10 Israeli lawmakers in an hour-long roundtable discussion, and told them the Knesset visit was "one of the highlights of my trip" because the legislature represented a common system ofdemocracy shared by the two countries.

Security at Shamir's office and the Knesset was extremely tight, and there were no signs of demonstrators. Police stood watch for several blocks around the prime ministry, where West German and Israeli flags fluttered on the gate and roof, and a helicopter circled overhead.

An anonymous bomb threat Tuesday night sent police units to the hotel where Shamir was hosting a state dinner for Kohl. A police spokesman said no bomb was found and the dinner was not disturbed.

AP Laserphoto

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Tuesday examines a display in Jerusalem's Yad Vashem memorial to Holocaust victims.

The threat came as Kohl ended the first day of a six-day visit. He was trailed constantly by a small but noisy band of concentration camp survivors, veteran guerrilla fighters and young Israelis from the Betar youth movement of Shamir's Herut Party.

At their first meeting, Shamir and Kohl tackled the two thorniest problems on their agenda: Germany's offer to sell sophisticated weapons to Saudi Arabia, and Kohl's support for legalizing a banned veterans' organization of the Waffen SS, an elite unit of the stormtroopers who ran Nazi concentration camps.

Shamir's spokesman, Avi Pazner, said the Israeli leader told Kohl the Saudis either would use the German weapons against Israel or give them to another hostile state.

"Saudi Arabia is not the moderate state that people in Europe think it is," Pazner quoted Shamir as saying.

West German spokesman Peter Boenish did not give Kohl's reply. But Bonn is believed to be committed to providing defensive weapons to Saudi Arabia even though it has scrapped plans to sell it Leopard 2 tanks because of Israeli pressure.

Kohl's visit has been shadowed by the past. His first stop Tuesday was Yad Vashem, the memorial to the 6 million Jews killed in Hitler's death camps.

Guided through the museum housing a history of the Holocaust, Kohl said: "I can assure you in Germany it will never happen again."

Outside the memorial about 200 demonstrators, some dressed in concentration camp uniforms, held placards reading, "We will never forget."

Kohl stressed that he represented a new generation that refused "to accept collective guilt" for the Nazi butchery but would not shirk its historic responsibility.

Shamir, who lost his parents and two sisters in the death camps, lamented the victims "annihilated by the Nazi monster."

Kohl reiterated Europe's offer to help bring Israelis and Arabs to the negotiating table.

Grenada residents launch Bishop memorial projects

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — Supporters of slain Prime Minister Maurice Bishop have launched memorial projects to keep his ideals and "spirit" alive — moves which may signal an attempted political comeback by Grenada's leftists.

Some 75 people packed the second floor of a downtown home last Saturday for the dedication of a memorial to Bishop and 13 other supporters killed in an Oct. 19 Grenadian army takeover that followed a split between Bishop and more radical elements in his government.

The three surviving loyalists from Bishop's Cabinet — three other ministers were executed with Bishop — have begun gathering photos, cassettes and videotapes of Bishop for display at the new Memorial House, a museum of the Bishop Foundation.

They sold T-shirts with Bishop's likeness and slogans such as "His Spirit Lives" and "Remember Maurice" to raise money to build a monument, and said they would seek to have public schools named after him.

Kenrick Radix, who held several portfolios in the ousted government, also announced formation of a trust fund he said would be used to help the poor and oppressed on this Caribbean island.

He and the others denied that they were in effect announcing a reorganization of Bishop's political party, the New Jewel Movement, but former Agriculture Minister George Louison said those commemorated were politicians and so "when we distribute anything about their ideals it will be political."

And Radix's 30-minute dedication speech assailed the interim government, the U.S.-led invasion Oct. 25, and the return Saturday of Sir Eric Gairy, the prime minister ousted in the New Jewel's 1979 coup. Radix called Gairy a "fascist dictator."

Radix, referring to the U.S. government's apparent reluctance to complete the Cuban-built international airport here, said "we demand from the U.S. that those who invaded must finish the airport," which he called Bishop's major project.

"To us the Cubans are an exemplary people," he added. "Not the criminals of the propaganda we're hearing now."

Radix said former Deputy Prime Minister Bernard Coard — currently held in prison with 34 others from his faction in the New Jewel Movement — betrayed Bishop and allowed the U.S. government to achieve its goal of toppling the Grenadian left.

A senior U.S. official here showed little reaction to the potential re-emergence of the New Jewel Movement.

Diplomatic efforts continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, seizing the initiative on a touchy election-year issue, is urging Congress to keep the Marines in Lebanon while Middle East mediator Donald Rumsfeld tries to pry some conciliation from Syria.

But while Reagan told Republican leaders Tuesday that "we've made genuine progress," Rumsfeld described the Syrians as a stubborn obstacle to arranging a government of national unity for Lebanon.

And Reagan, in a letter Monday to two key House Democrats, Lee H. Hamilton of Indiana and Les Aspin of Wisconsin, said Syria and the Soviet Union were complicating U.S. diplomatic efforts.

Reagan wrote the letters and visited Capitol Hill before the newly convened second session of 89th Congress could get started on moves to bring the Marines home.

Shamir picking up support

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Parliament today debated whether to bring down Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's coalition government because of its economic policies, but Shamir picked up key support before two no-confidence motions reached the floor.

The raucous debate began late this morning, after two undecided groups indicated they would provide the votes needed to keep the government in place.

Honduran investigation urged

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government is asking Honduras to conduct a "rigorous" investigation of reports that Honduran troops slaughtered 200 Miskito Indians near the Nicaraguan border.

The Nicaraguan government said it was advised by 1981 Nobel Peace Prize winner Adolfo Perez Esquivel that the Miskitos were massacred Jan. 6 near Honduras' Atlantic seacoast as they were headed back to Nicaragua.

Hong Kong pact possible

PEKING (AP) — The new leader of China's team negotiating the future of Hong Kong said today he looks forward to a "satisfactory result at an early date" in the talks with Britain.

Assistant Foreign Minister Zhou Nan's remark to reporters came at the opening of a new round of talks. On Tuesday, Hu Yaobang, the Chinese Communist Party's general secretary, said an agreement "acceptable to both countries" was now possible.

Britain's 99-year lease on the New Territories, the bulk of the colony's land mass, expires in 1997. The trading and financial center on China's southeast coast has been occupied by Britain since 1841.

Japanese miners mourned

TOKYO (AP) — Sirens wailed at local government buildings and nearby mines today as a community in southwestern Japan mourned the death of 83 people in a coal mine fire a week ago.

About 2,000 people attended memorial services in the Omuta city gymnasium, where an altar was decorated with flowers, including those sent by Emperor Hirohito and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, a city official said.

Trudeau starts eight-day trip

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, frustrated in his efforts to see Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, today began an eight-day trip to Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Romania in a continuing bid to reduce East-West tensions.

In recent months, Trudeau has pressed his initiative with leaders of the Western alliance in Washington and elsewhere, with heads of neutral countries, and with Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

Choir would no longer be an option for physical education. Students in choir, a fine arts course, could only count their first year of participation towards graduation, except as an elective. Fall semester marching band only could be substituted for physical education.

The result could conceivably be a loss of students to music and other extracurricular programs, Moore said.

Currently, MISD requires 12 or more students to sign up before a class will be offered. The new policy states a course that is required for a student to graduate or one in which at least 10 students participate shall be offered.

The implication, Moore said, is that additional teachers and classrooms will be necessary. Because the number of electives a student could take would be limited, many elective courses would have smaller class sizes.

"The potential is that we would offer fewer electives," Moore said.

Students missing more than three clases per semester or five classes per year for any school activity would not receive credit for that class. Speech and debate participants usually miss at least 10 days a year for tournaments, according to one debate teacher.

This policy could result in cutbacks in competitive and service programs such as field trips, Moore said. It would have serious complications for students involved in multiple activities and allows no flexibility for districts which must travel longer distances.

"It's unfair," Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi asserted. "In Dallas, Houston and Austin they can participate in all activities without going more than 20 miles. We have two schools within 20 miles."

In addition, the grading system must change from letter grades to number grades, with 70 or above considered passing. Currently a D (60) is a passing grade.

Also, seventh- and eighth-grade students who are reading two or more grade levels below where they should must take an additional remedial reading course. Such students would lose the opportunity to take an elective, including band or choir, unless the district lengthened the school day or moved to seven 45-minute periods instead of six 55-minutes ones.

Any student taking five honor courses will be designated an honor graduate, regardless of grade, the policy says. Currently MISD students must earn a 4.0 GPA to be an honor graduate.

"It dilutes it," Moore said. "It doesn't speak to the issue of level of acheivement. It simply says you take five courses and your an honor graduate."

Another provision says credit will be awarded on the basis of subject mastery and not time spent in class. Currently, repeated tardiness and unexcused absences result in a lower grade for MISD students. Moore said he was not sure if this proposal means attendance is not important as long as students do well on tests.

He also speculated that mastery may have to be determined by performance on a district or state test, meaning a student would have to pass such a test before credit was awarded.

Other changes that would be required under the new policy include:

—Districts must place new students promptly and cannot wait for receipt of transcripts. MISD currently insists on a report card or some type of record in order to determine proper placement.

—Science courses must be at least 40 percent laboratory or field activities. MISD has no policy.

—Students in vocational education could only count five work-study credits toward graduation, instead of the current seven.

—Mainstreaming of Limited English Proficiency students would be accelerated.

—Developmental Reading and Vocabulary Development, two college-preparatory courses, would no longer be substitutes for English IV. This not only reduces flexiblity but engdangers these electives, Moore said.

Those proposals dealing with elementary curriculum and the number of credits needed to graduate will affect Midland very little, Moore explained.

"We don't want to in any way suggest we are against upgrading curriculum," Moore qualified. "We just want local autonomy and control left to the districts as much as possible."

President Bill Jackson said he was amazed the state board, so late in the year, would "come up with something of this magnitude without input from the schools."

"It needs a lot more thought and discussion before they act on it," Baressi said. "It needs input from local schools. In all honesty, they (the previous standards) were too low. But they've raised the floor and lowered the ceiling. School districts like ours will be handicapped."

The policies have already passed on first reading, and most will go into effect this fall if approved on second and third readings. Second reading of the policies will be Feb. 9.

Fewer radical mastectomies performed

"We now recognize that systemic treatment is probably more important than the local treatment," he says. Scattered cancer cells begin migrating through the body from the very start of the illness.

Breast cancer is an especially dangerous cancer because of its propensity to spread to other parts of the body.

The American Cancer Society estimated that 114,000 women would get breast cancer in 1983, and 37,000 women would die of it. An astonishing one of 11 American women will get breast cancer sometime during their lives.

Although official figures are not yet available, The American Cancer Society estimates that 114,000 women contracted breast cancer in 1983, and 37,000 women died of it the same year. An astonishing one in 11 American women will get breast cancer sometime during their lives.

The warning signals are the appearance of lumps, thickening, swelling or other changes in the breast. Among women whose cancer is detected early (before it has spread substantially to other parts of the body), 87 percent will survive five years or longer. That's up from 78 percent in the 1940s.

Research on less radical surgery began in the 1970s. By 1979, researchers meeting at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. concluded that total mastectomy — removal of the breast but not the lymph nodes or chest muscles — could be as effective as radical mastectomy if combined with a follow-up treatment.

The follow-up consists of removal of selected lymph nodes that show cancerous changes. Eighty-five percent of American women with breast cancer qualify for this approach, the researchers decided.

Some researchers are advocating an even more drastic change in treatment. They feel that some cases of breast cancer can be treated by lumpectomy — removal of a tumor from the breast without removal of the breast. This is followed by radiation therapy to kill remaining cancer cells.

In 1981, a widely publicized study in Italy suggested that lumpectomy followed by radiation was as effective as radical mastectomy. "Many people are totally convinced that it's okay," says Michael Osborne.

Osborne isn't. The follow-up in that study was only three years, he notes — too short to be sure that the cancer has been eradicated.

Also, advances in reconstruction of the breast have been so dramatic that many women, according to Osborne, can have a breast removed, have the breast reconstructed with an artificial implant, and "have the best of both worlds."

"By leaving the muscle, the potential to reconstruct the breast is there," he says.

Other advances have been made in the area of chemotherapy. Drugs are being used for periods of six months to two years after surgery to block the spread of the cancer, Osborne says.

The drug therapy is being refined to the point where the side-effects, once quite substantial, are minimal. Many women, for example, can resume their jobs while on chemotheraphy.

Researchers have also found that certain breast cancer tumors thrive on estrogen, a female hormone. In patients with estrogen-sensitive tumors, removal of the ovaries or the use of an estrogen-blocking drug called tamoxifen can stop the cancer's growth.

There is hope that in some patients tamoxifen alone may be enough to stop breast cancer. But further research is needed to find out whether that's true.

Until now, there has been no way to prevent breast cancer. Now, however, clues to the prevention of breast cancer are appearing.

"We feel there's evidence that we may be able to determine biochemically who is a risk for breast cancer," says Osborne. "The significance of that is that if you had a test you could do, there might be the potential for prevention."

The "area of prediction, of who will get breast cancers," Osborne says, "is at the fringe of new developments."

Warm spell turns ice into plane-grounding fog

By The Associated Press

A welcome warm spell that melted off a morning ice storm in the Northeast turned to trouble when it spawned a thick foggy shroud that grounded airplanes for hours, snarled evening traffic — and trapped a foul odor over metropolitan New York.

Tuesday's rise in temperature caused as many problems as it relieved when the fog settled in just as motorists who had inched through a slippery ice storm in the morning began heading home.

"It was by far the worst day of the year for motorists," said police Lt. Robert Falzarano of Passaic Township, N.J.

The most unusual development was the mysterious stench, likened to rotten garbage or burning rubber, that hung over metropolitan New York and northern New Jersey. Thousands of curious residents called authorities before the smell dispersed early today, with New York City's emergency 911 number logging 5,000 calls between 5 and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

New York Fire Department spokesman John Mulligan blamed the stench on a "temperature inversion" — occurring when the ground in colder than the air — that trapped fumes from the area's petrochemical plants.

In this situation, the National Weather Service explained, "Particulates thrown into the atmosphere, whether from industry, automobile exhausts or other sources, are not dispersed."

The fog, which slowed traffic and forced the periodic cancellation of flights at airports in the mid-Atlantic states Tuesday night, began to lift early today. Temperatures were expected to remain above freezing today throughout most of the nation, and "I don't think we'll get down to the real cold territory for a while," said Gene Hathaway of the National Weather Service.

Homestead exemptions may now be claimed

—Homestead exemption for Disabled American Veterans. Depending on the degree of his disability, a DAV can get from $1,500 to $3,000 reduced on the value of his homestead, business, or personal property, such as a boat, recreational vehicle or airplane. "He could split it (among his properties)," Wilkinson said. That exemption would be in addition to the general $5,000 exemption and to the 65 or over $10,000 exemption. A DAV age 65 or older could deduct up to $18,000 off the assessed value of his homestead in computing taxes.

Once the homeowner has applied for the exemptions, he doesn't have to re-apply, Wilkinson said, unless he is taking the $10,000 disability exemption or until the homeowner sells and re-locates his homestead.

"The disabled have to come in and bring their proof of disability," Wilkinson said. Others may make application for homestead by mail, but, said Wilkinson, "We want them all to come in personally."

The homeowners age 65 or older also may benefit from the school-tax freeze, which went into effect in 1979. Under that provision, the appraised value of a house remains fixed almost "no matter what," Wilkinson said. However, should the value of a house appraised at $50,000 be depreciated to $40,000, then the latter appraised value would become the new fixed value for school-taxing purposes.

On the other hand, should that same $50,000 house go up in value, even to $100,000, the former value still would remained fixed for school-taxing purposes.

But if the homeowner were to sell that house and get a new homestead, then he would have to reapply for another school-tax freeze. "He has to start his qualifications on the new one (homestead) on the year he buys," Wilkinson said. Current values would apply at that time, he said.

Some older citizens trade down and get less spacious and less expensive houses to own and maintain, he said.

"We've seen it go the other way where they trade up in houses," Wilkinson said.

The chief appraiser said the school-tax freeze was designed by Texas legislators who "were trying to provide as much relief as possible to citizens age 65 and older because they usually are on fixed incomes."

Wilkinson noted that in Midland and across the state, school taxes are the dominant taxes.

In Midland, the tax rate set by the Midland Independent School District board of trustees is 77 cents per $100 valuation based on 100 percent of the fair-market value.

Of the $57.5 million total tax levy for the six taxing entities (city, school, county, college, hospital, Greenwood ISD) in Midland County, the Midland ISD accounts for $29 million or about 51 percent.

Junior Achievement begins drive

From Staff Reports

The General Gifts Drive of Junior Achievement of Midland kicked off with a meeting this morning at Midland Hilton.

The drive will seek to raise $135,000 in operating funds for 1984-85, including $25,000 in class sponsorships for the Project Business program in Midland Independent School District's and Trinity School's ninth grade American history classes. The goal represents a $10,000 increase over two years ago.

Drive chairman is Darryl Pounds, executive vice president of First City National Bank; while division chairmen are Loyd Whitley, senior vice president of finance for Adobe Oil and Gas; Jim Alsup of Lunch Chappell Alday & Alsup; R.Y. Walker, business manager of Arco Oil and Gas Corp.; Ernie Barbee, district manager of customer operations for TESCO; and John Delong, manager of human resources for Gulf Oil Exploration and Production.

The junior achievement company counseled by Gulf Oil was judged in JA Western Regional competition to be the overall best in the state for 1982-83, while the most recent statistical rating of the high school program shows Midland ranked fourth nationally.

Membership in the local high school program for 1983-84 is the largest in nine years.

Car crashes through living room, but it's no surprise to family

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — A car ignored a flashing red light and smashed through the living room wall of D.J. and Doris Gaspard's house — but the family wasn't very surprised.

The accident Sunday was the eighth in 11 years.

"I'm sick to my stomach about it," Doris Gaspard says. "This is the eighth time it's happened and we're scared. They've hit the bedroom twice, the living room once and a motorcycle hit a window once. Four other times they stopped in the yard.

Tank batteries added to drilling regulations

Before taking a vote, the council heard from Hank Krusekopf with the Midland office of the Railroad Commission. He explained the deadly hydrogen sulfide gas can be found in wells as close as four miles east of the city limits. The ordinance's distance for limiting drilling should be "more than needed" as a safeguard for residents.

In other action, the council continued its pursuit of a Flight Service Station at Midland Regional Airport, denied a rezoning for east Midland and hired a new city secretary.

Aviation Director Victor White reviewed the city's application to the Federal Aviation Administration to construct a $1 million flight service station. Midland is among the top 20 cities being chosen as the site for the 90-county headquarters. Midland's proposal to construct the building went in last August. Last week, the FAA called and asked Midland what it would do to "sweeten the bid," said White. The council decided to add that it would pay the costs of janitorial services and maintenance of the building.

With the 110 employees that would be brought into the community with the station, White estimated it would mean $2.5 million in payroll. Over 20 years, it could generate as much as $40-60 million in economic impact.

"I'd like to see it come to Midland because of the status and prestige it brings," White said. "But it also calls for a big expenditure of dollars. Who will pay for it?"

Councilman David Godfrey was against pursuing the station because of the unknown price tag. But the rest of the council went with the proposal.

Concept Construction was turned down on its appeal to the council for a zone change from single family to duplex on portions of Magnolia, Hickory and Scharbauer Drive between Tyler and Butternut.

Willie Barber, 1311 E. Magnolia, gave a slide presentation on the area and contended duplexes wouldn't be an improvement. He cited problems with other houses being rented and constantly-changing tenants. Barber also felt the duplexes would be a detriment after a new YMCA is constructed nearby.

Bill Clanton was appointed deputy city secretary. He will assume the post of city secretary on March 1 when James McCullough retires.

State lawyers wait for word from court on execution stay

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — As the hours ticked away today on Anthony Antone's license to live, state lawyers awaited word from a U.S. Supreme Court justice on their request to be allowed to electrocute the 66-year-old contract killer.

But a new defense effort to block the execution was already pending before an appeals court in Atlanta.

Florida Attorney General Jim Smith asked Justice Lewis Powell on Tuesday to revoke a stay issued just six hours before the scheduled 7 a.m. Tuesday execution at Florida State Prison near Starke.

That stay was to expire at noon today, but state officials said they were waiting for the Supreme Court to act before taking further steps in the case. A death warrant for Antone remains in effect until noon Friday.

"I believe the time has come to carry out justice," said Gov. Bob Graham, who issued the warrant.

Antone would be the 12th prisoner in the United States and the third in Florida to be put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976.

Convicted of arranging the 1975 murder of former Tampa vice squad detective Richard Cloud, Antone maintained silence Tuesday and had no visitors in his death-row cell watched over by an armed guard and equipped with a bed, a toilet and a television.

The temporary stay, granted by a three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, was to allow defense lawyers to make a last plea to the Supreme Court.

But lawyer Tom McCoun first sought a review by the full circuit court, asking it to reconsider the three-judge panel's decision rebuffing Antone's claim that he had had ineffective counsel.

Justice Powell was reportedly awaiting word from Antone's lawyer before making any kind of ruling. The nation's highest court twice before refused to hear Antone's appeals.

Antone, raised as a Roman Catholic, did not ask to see a priest and made no request for a traditional last meal, which had been offered to him prior to his original date with death, said Vernon Bradford, spokesman for the Department of Corrections.

His last visitors were his sister and brother-in-law on Monday afternoon, prison officials said.

Antone, convicted of being a middleman in the contract killing, reasserted Monday that he was an innocent "fall guy." He told reporters that two detectives had visited him over the weekend, trying to learn more about the murder, and he told them nothing.

Cloud's widow and police officers who knew him claim that not everyone involved in the murder has been brought to justice. They say Antone arranged the murder for higher-ranking mobsters than Victor Acosta, a man who died of a drug overdose in jail before he could be tried in Cloud's murder.

Antone claimed police knew who was to blame for the murder. "They know who it is. I don't have to point fingers."

But Graham said Antone has run out of time.

Knott's Berry Farm sues parents of injured child

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Knott's Berry Farm has countersued the parents of a 4-year-old, charging they were negligent in allowing their son to be run over by a stagecoach at the amusement park, an attorney said.

The complaint in Orange County Superior Court alleges that Craig and Alice Kramer of Mesa, Ariz., were not supervising the child, Shawn, when he fell beneath the horsedrawn stagecoach Nov. 25, Knott's lawyer Kenneth Garrett said Tuesday.

Rural community supports prisons

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — This rural county seat doesn't mind being Florida's execution capital — in fact, one local politican says residents would be delighted if the prison system were expanded.

"A lot of communities don't want prisons," state Rep. Frank Williams, whose district includes Starke, said Tuesday. "Not us."

Sprawling Florida State Prison — home of the state's electric chair — is 11 miles from Starke, the seat of Bradford County, on land adjacent to another major prison, Union Correctional Institution.

The state Department of Corrections is the biggest employer. More than 2,300 prison workers earn $44.5 million a year at four penal institutions in Bradford and Union counties, southwest of Jacksonville, according to state figures.

Prisons and the electric chair are clearly the area's most famous features, and support for the death penalty is overwhelming, politicians and educators agree.

"We're developing a reputation as the hanging capital," said Randy Rowell, who operates a radiator service in Starke. "I love it. I think they ought to have electric bleachers and just tell them (Death Row inmates) they're going to watch a football game or something."

But while residents are proud to play host to the institutions, they say they'd also like their hometown to be known for its other attributes.

"We're very big in agriculture," said Mike Cooney of the local Chamber of Commerce. Bradford County's poultry industry grosses $10 million annually, and its strawberries are known for their high quality, he said.

Most people here were aware of this week's scheduled execution of convicted contract killer Anthony Antone, who was seeking last-minute appeals before his death warrant runs out on Friday, but they simply viewed it as part of the routine.

A main topic of discussion around town Tuesday was efforts to move a two-story house down the main road through Starke.

Some merchants make extra money during executions because death penalty opponents and advocates, state officials and reporters visit Starke. However, this silver lining has diminished along with the nation's fascination with capital punishment as executions become more frequent.

"In 1979, during the Spenkelink execution, people came here begging for rooms," recalls Billie Gassett, an assistant manager at the Best Western Motor Inn at Starke.

Reagan's choice

To say that President Reagan has been in no rush to announce his candidacy for re-election would be a gross understatement. His quietness about his plans has become almost a game.

In a way, that's refreshing in this day and age of longer and longer campaigns with bigger and bigger pricetags. What with local, state and national elections, voters obviously have been suffering from "election fatigue" in recent years.

Oh, politically one can't fault the candidates. Each wants a little edge on all the others and getting in at the very start of the game might provide it.

The Democratic candidates are in full swing now, debating, slingin' mud and generally providing a bit of amusement here at the start of the long campaign for the White House. Little damage is being done, though, and real "meaty" issues remain undiscussed.

Center ring of the political circus is bound to heat up when Reagan announces his plans. That's expected to come in a brief televised debate Sunday, according to Editorial Research Reports.

If Reagan seeks re-election, he obviously will be a formidable opponent for any presidential aspirant. During his four years in office, the inflation rate has been reduced significantly and overall the economy appears to be rebounding from the downturn. A resounding military victory in Grenada gave Americans something to cheer about — not the least of which was a revitalized military force. Reagan has stood up to the Soviets time and again and, while critics complain that his tough talk has created a chill in relations, appears to have given the Kremlin something to think about in lumbering around creating trouble throughout the world.

But Reagan doesn't seem to be the kind of politician who needs the self-gratification from another term in office. That's probably a large part of the reason many Americans "think" he'll run for re-election but can't say he will for sure.

That's fine. Reagan's performance so far in office has given him the advantage of sitting atop a credible record. He has been under no pressure to announce his plans and he hasn't.

That a relaxed style of leadership a lot of politicians should emulate.

Another View:

Syria holds cards

American efforts to discover greater flexibility and moderation in Syria's position on Lebanon have failed. Donald Rumsfeld, the special U.S. envoy who met with the Syrian leadership in Damascus last week, has reported not only no success but also a stiffening in Syria's line. Syria had been insisting on the abrogation of Lebanon's peace agreement with Israel and the withdrawal of all Israeli forces from southern Lebanon before it would even consider a military pullback of its own. Syria now demands as preconditions too the pullout of U.S. and other members of the multinational force from the Beirut area.

To underscore its powers as a spoiler, Syria has had its Druze allies in Lebanon remove their support from what had seemed to be an agreement for the disengagement of local sectarian militias. With that backward step, heavy fighting has again broken out in the Beirut area.

The Syrian attitude may disappoint Washington but should not surprise it. Damascus has clearly calculated that it can get what it wants in Lebanon without the bother of making any substantial concessions, and that indeed its interests will be furthered by showing just how uncompromising it can be. Syria is not only seeking to assure itself a position of strong influence or even dominance in Lebanon. It also perceives the opportunity for added political benefits by demonstrating that it faced down the United States in the process of achieving its goal. This is the bitter pill that it is holding out to Washington. No sweeteners are being proffered, nor are any likely. Damascus knows that President Reagan, in an election year, cannot afford to keep the Marines at their thankless and onerous task in Beirut much longer. Damascus is also aware of the popular, political and now even military pressures building in Israel to end what has become a costly and unrewarding occupation. A partial Israeli pullback within a short time is almost certain. A complete withdrawal before long is possible.

Syria is not going to make it easy for the United States to call it quits in Lebanon, any more than the feuding Lebanese have made it easy by being willing to bury their differences in order to salvage their country. What, then, is the point in the United States holding on? There is no point, save the hope that, somehow, something will turn up, something that will allow an American retreat from an untenable position in circumstances that won't seem to amount to a victory for terrorism or Arab radicalism. That hope may be worthwhile, but it is not credible. The harsh facts have to be faced. Syria holds all the high cards in Lebanon. No new deal can be expected. It is time for the United States to throw in its hand and walk away from the table.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On Jan. 25, 1981, the 52 Americans who had been held hostage by Iran for 444 days arrived back in the United States.

On this date:

In 1915, Alexander Graham Bell spoke over a telephone line from New York to San Francisco, inaugurating transcontinental phone service.

In 1949, the first Emmy awards were presented, in Los Angeles, with the outstanding TV personality award going to KTLA's Shirley Dinsdale and her puppet, "Judy Splinters."

In 1961, John F. Kennedy held the first presidential news conference to be televised live — a 38-minute session at the State Department building.

And in 1971, Charles Manson and three young women were convicted of the murder of actress Sharon Tate and six other people in Los Angeles.

Ten years ago: Vice President Gerald Ford said he had decided not to examine evidence that the White House said would clear President Richard Nixon of involvement in Watergate.

Five years ago: Pope John Paul II arrived in the Dominican Republic on his first overseas trip as pope.

Today's birthdays: NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman is 65 years old. Actor Dean Jones is 53. And actress Elizabeth Allen is 50.

Thought for today: "To a quick question, give a slow answer." — Italian proverb.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reagan's 'landlord' understands

WASHINGTON — Unlike most of the nation's renters, President Reagan has an understanding and compassionate landlord — the General Services Administration. The president pays for his office space in the White House and the annual rent for the East and West Wings covers less and less each year of the actual maintenance and operating costs.

Jack Anderson

But that's no problem; the landlord eats the difference.

The care and maintenance of the first family's living quarters and the White Bouse grounds are taken care of by the Interior Department. For cleaning, repairs and other services in the two office wings, the GSA collects a "standard-level user's charge."

Internal projections estimate it will cost $1,411,900 to keep the wings in shape this year. But the rent authorized by Congress is only $617,000. That will leave a deficit of $794,000.

In 1982, the rent deficit was $782,371; in 1981, it was a stiff $962,382. John Rodgers, presidential assistant for management administration, explained to my associate Tony Capaccio that the high figure for Reagan's first year as tenant was made necessary by "deferred maintenance" from the Carter years, when the annual deficits ranged from $125,000 to $370,741.

A GSA official said philosophically that "there will always be some winners and some losers" among the government tenants that occupy GSA-managed buildings in the Washington area. The White House is clearly one of the fiscal "losers."

One problem, from GSA's point of view, is that it must give its White House tenant extra-fancy service. A recent internal audit by GSA's inspector general points out, "services such as those performed by interior designers, personal services and movers are above the standard level of service that GSA provides" to its less illustrious renters.

For example, in 1982 the salaries for two designers and three "servicers" totaled $120,000; another $110,000 to $150,000 was budgeted for the salaries of four movers. It also costs GSA $40,000 a year to put up and take down the flags required for state visits, and another $4,000 for "packing of presidential gifts, packing materials and storage."

The biggest problem the landlord has is Congress, which decrees what the Office of the President may pay for rental of the two office wings. For 1983, Congress set the rent at $13.22 per square foot, the GSA report noted, but the actual maintenance and operations cost was $30.51 per square foot.

And though the White House has been asked for another $1.85 per square foot this year, that won't shave much off the actual expense, which is expected to climb to $30.97.

GSA auditors faulted the agency for increasing the cleaning staff for the White House wings from 62 to 77 — "a quarter more people than needed" — between April and July last year. "The staff increase does not appear reasonable due to the recent reduction in the number of buildings cleaned by GSA staff assigned to the White House District Office," the IG noted.

Also, for several months in 1982 the troublesome tenant refused to pay the $32,400 salary of a paper-shredder operator and $35,000 for the White House briefing room electrician and "the standby elevator operator." But now, the White House and Secret Service pay these salaries from their funds.

WHOPPER OF THE WEEK: Shortly after the near-disaster at the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor in March 1979, a plant employee told a Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigator that key safety data had been systematically falsified. The false data involved the amount of water leaking through valves. It was a valve problem that triggered the accident.

"That leak rate had to be fudged every time we got it," the plant employee told the investigator. "We kept asking, 'What are you going to do about these valves? They're leaking.'"

But somehow the whistle-blower's charges never were included in a massive "special inquiry group" report that the NRC issued on the accident — though the investigator dutifully reported them.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., wanted to know about this curious omission. NRC Chairman Nunzio Palladino offered this disingenuous alibi:

"It appears that the substance of the (investigator's report) was not included in the SIG report primarily because of time constraints. At this point in time, the commission would question the wisdom of that decision."

I question Palladino's explanation. My sources note that the employee originally made his charges in late May 1979 — about the same time the NRC special inquiry group first began its investigation.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Tape-happy Charles Wick, director of the U.S. Information Agency, embarrassed embassy officials in Bonn recently when he insisted on videotaping his half-hour meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. The chancellor went along with the odd request like a trouper.

— The Polish government is trying to play down the discovery of 28 bodies by a building crew in Gdansk last year, claiming that they date back to World War II. But there are rumors that the bodies were found in plastic bags — which weren't available then. This means the bodies could be victims of widespread police shootings in 1970.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Coalition stresses power of purse

WASHINGTON — Congressional critics of President Reagan's foreign policy hope to hobble him by denying the administration the money required to stop the spread of communism in Central America.

William Giandoni

Much of the sound and fury will be heard in the House Foreign Affairs and the Senate Foreign Relations committees, both of which have been critical of U.S. military aid for Central America.

But, the liberal Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy pointed out recently, if the Reagan administration wants extra funds quickly for Central America, "all decisions will be determined in the House and Senate Appropriations committees and, more specifically, their respective subcommittees on foreign operations."

They have the power of the purse and have used it to frustrate the president's efforts before.

The House Foreign Operations subcommittee is chaired by Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., and its Senate counterpart by Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis.

Last year, Long used the administration's request to reprogram money for El Salvador, that is, to shift funds already appropriated by Congress from one spending account to another, to force the appointment of a special, roving ambassador to Central America.

If the administration seeks a supplemental appropriation, as it did last year, Long's subcommittee "is likely to repeat and expand upon a very clever strategy it initiated last November on the continuing resolution," the emergency bill that funds programs that had not received regular appropriations when the fiscal year began, the coalition predicted.

That strategy amounted to taking a sizable cut from the president's military aid request, tying up a percentage of the remaining military aid with inflexible language on a matter of concern to Congress, and characterizing the subcommittee's action "as approval of the president's policy as soon as tangible results take place on these concerns," the coalition said.

Such concerns could involve the cases of the U.S. churchwomen murdered in El Salvador, land reform, death squads and the like.

In 1983, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., tied 30 percent of U.S. military aid to El Salvador to a verdict in the churchwomen's case in the Senate subcommittee.

Something similar may be expected this year if the administration needs funds for Central America before summer.

Work on the foreign aid bill for fiscal year 1985, which begins in October, is expected to take the entire legislative session. It must pass through an authorizing and appropriating process.

The Foreign Aid Authorization Bill would be the legislation to which a human rights certification process on El Salvador and other conditions would be attached. Authorizations for Central America would be set by the House Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee, then discussed in the full Foreign Affairs Committee and the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee, debated on the floor and voted on in the House and Senate, submitted to a conference committee for compromise of differences and offered to the president for signature or veto.

The Foreign Aid Appropriations Bill starts in the subcommittees on foreign operations, goes to the full appropriations committees of both houses, to floor votes, conference, and presidential signature or veto.

Both are time-consuming procedures and, as the coalition said, "Approving money for foreign aid is a tricky question for many members of Congress at any time, let alone an election year."

Congress has not acted on a foreign aid appropriations bill since 1960. Last year it did not even pass a foreign aid authorizations bill. Funding was provided by the continuing resolution.

According to the Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy, the estimated $45 million that the Reagan administration still has available for military aid for El Salvador should run out in May or June and the administration will be desperate for supplemental funds.

"The power to grant the supplemental funds lies in the same hands which so cleverly tied up the current (fiscal year) '84 moneys," the group reported.

The coalition is a group that speaks in the name of a number of human rights organizations, ranging from the American Baptist Churches USA to the Young Women's Christian Association. Also included are the American Friends Service Committee, Americans for Democratic Action, Council on Hemispheric Affairs, National Council of Churches, OXFAM USA, Washington Office on Latin America and some 45 others.

ART BUCHWALD

More guns, butter won't bake peace!

The Kissinger Report to the president recommends more money and more guns for Central America. It suggests that only a minimum of $8 billion will save the area.

Art Buchwald

What it doesn't deal with is how you distribute the economic aid and military arms. It's much easier for the United States to vote funds to save a country in Central America from going Marxist than it is to see that it gets to the right people.

"Ah, General Regardias. We have good news for you. We are shipping 10 thousand tons of grain to the eastern part of the country to win the hearts and the stomachs of the people."

"Gracias, senor."

"Can you supply us with the trucks to get the grain to the countryside?"

"Alas, Colonel Grappas sold all our trucks to the rebels last week."

"I hope you've court-martialed Colonel Grappas for treason."

"We've done something worse than that. We made him our military attache in Paris."

"Without trucks how do we get the grain to the eastern part of the country?"

"That's a good question. The bridge over the Horonunco River has been blown up. You could build us a new bridge, or I guess my cousin Pedro could just sell the grain on the black market in the capital."

"That isn't exactly what we had in mind when we decided to supply you with economic and military aid. The most important thing in defeating Godless Marxism is to wipe out the corruption that is rampant in the land. If the people believe their leaders are cheating them we will never achieve democracy in Central America."

"We can achieve it providing you give us modern police equipment so we can keep people in line."

"We're willing to supply the equipment, but you can't use it to torture innocent people or opposition leaders of the state."

"Who is left?"

"Criminals, Communists and suspected subversives."

"What about nuns?"

"No nuns."

"I knew there would be strings attached."

"Mr. Kissinger's commission believes that by tripling military aid to your country you can beef up your army and drive the rebels out of the country. Do you think that with the right equipment your people can do the job?"

"Certainly. Once you pay the Salvadoran soldier a decent wage he won't have to sell his equipment to the other side anymore."

"Now General, one of the sticking points as far as Congress is concerned is you people are going to have to give up your death squads and punish those who are responsible for all the innocent people killed in your country."

"We're working on that right now. Anyone caught heading up a death squad is going to have to answer for it. If found guilty he will be sent to some godforsaken embassy in Rome or Rio de Janeiro."

"I'm sure that will satisfy the critics of human rights in Washington. But it would also be nice if you could hold a few trials of the people who killed Americans in your country."

"That's asking an awful lot from the military."

"It was just a thought. No one is going to press you on it if it will hurt the morale of the army. Now what we would like to do is send you $300 million in military aid the first year. Do you people think you can pacify the country with that?"

"I don't see why not. The more firepower in the cities, the less reason the El Salvadoran soldier will have to go out into the jungle and fight."

"You also have to guarantee us that our economic aid will help your people achieve a better standard of life."

"I don't see any problem there. My cousin Eduardo knows all the needy people in El Salvador."

"Well, that seems to take care of the problem. Is there anything I've forgotten?"

"Could you let me have an advance of $1 million until our elections? In case things don't work out I'd like to buy a condominium in Florida."

President likely to propose tax law changes, Regan says

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan is likely to propose far-reaching changes in the tax system early next year if he wins re-election, says Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

In an interview with The New York Times published today, Regan said the changes could include a "simplified" income tax system that would eliminate many deductions and also lower tax rates.

He said the administration also would hope to persuade Congress to bring the rate of spending increases below the rate of the increase of federal revenues, thus lowering the budget deficit over several years. The administration expects the annual deficit to approach $200 billion for several years.

"If we're going to have a 7 or 8 percent increase in revenues, one year over the next, what we have to learn to do is have the rate of increase of the federal budget of only 3 or 4 percent," Regan said.

Last week, Regan said the Treasury Department is examining a variety of proposals to simplify the tax system, but focusing on two broad plans. One would keep the basic tax on income but scrap most or all deductions; the other would tax the amount of income spent, rather than earned.

Judge rules for anti-war group

CHICAGO (AP) — An Army officer says he doubts recruitment will drop despite a judge's ruling that city public schools must give an anti-war group equal access to high school students.

U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton, ruling in a suit filed by Clergy and Laity United, said Tuesday the city school board's "broad discretion" over what ideas can be presented to students must take account of the anti-war group's free-speech right.

The Rev. Andrew Skotnicki, head of the group, said pupils weighing careers in the military should know it "takes people's lives."

"We don't go to schools to sell war," said Lt. Col. William Knapp of the Army Recruiting Command at Fort Sheridan, Ill., who said he did not think recruiting would be hurt.

Man charged with killing horses

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — A stable operator is being held on $250,000 bond after being charged along with 18 others in the killing of 10 race horses to collect $226,000 in insurance.

If convicted on all counts, Daniel Chansky, the alleged ringleader, could face up to 337 years in prison and fines of more than $1 million, said Monmouth County Prosecutor John A. Kaye on Tuesday as the 19 were indicted. In all, 28 people face related charges.

The horses, nine of them standardbred harness racers, died between June 1980 and March 1983 — most shot or suffocated with plastic bags, Kaye said. One horse's neck was broken by Chansky, he alleged.

Jurors questioned in Miami trial

MIAMI (AP) — Lawyers have questioned 11 potential jurors in the trial of a Hispanic policeman charged with shooting a black man, an incident that set off rioting in the city's Overtown section.

One prospective juror said she would be impartial, even if the result was another riot.

"I'm not afraid of civil disturbance," said the woman Tuesday. "We've weathered two in recent times and I think we could weather another." The selection process was to continue today.

Officer Luis Alvarez is charged with manslaughter in the Dec. 28, 1982, shooting of Nevell Johnson Jr.

Street rampages followed the Johnson shooting, and in May 1980 the acquittal of four white police officers in the killing of a black man touched off a riot in Miami that killed 18.

Accused mother to undergo tests

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A 25-year-old mother accused of drowning her four children in a river has been ordered to undergo psychological tests and her lawyer says she will mount an insanity defense.

Superior Court Judge Rudolph J. Rossetti, who ordered the tests, set bail at $150,000 Tuesday for Jeanne A. Wright of Camden, who has pleaded innocent to four counts of homicide. Her public defender, Anne Manning, said it was doubtful she could raise the bond.

Man gets both death, life sentence

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — In a verdict that the judge called "unusual," a jury had determined that a convicted double murderer should die for one of his crimes and receive life imprisonment without the possibility of parole for the other.

The San Mateo Superior Court panel returned the verdict Monday in the case of Donald Beardslee, 40, of Redwood City, who was convicted in October of the April 1981 slayings of Paula Geddling, 23, and Stacey Benjamin, 19.

The jury, which took three days to reach its decision, leaves it up to Judge Robert D. Miller to determine whether Beardslee should go to the gas chamber.

Elderly still forced to give up pets for housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elderly people who live in federally-subsidized housing are still being told to give up their cats, dogs and other pets, even though a new law forbids the practice.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who wrote the new law, said Tuesday he has gotten mail telling him an 84-year-old woman was forced to give up her cats in order to secure a federally-subsidized apartment. Another letter told of a 70-year-old woman who passed up better housing rather than part with her dog.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development confirmed it is still allowing the practice while waiting for guidelines for pet ownership to be written.

Agency blames 'sloppiness' for files' mishandling

WASHINGTON (AP) — An openly embarrassed State Department blames "sloppiness" on the part of at least three department officers for allowing secret and highly sensitive data to be shipped by mistake last fall to a prison where it circulated among inmates.

But a department official said all three officials still hold the positions they occupied last year when the "unique incident" occurred and that no disciplinary action has been taken.

"I'm not sure to what extent anyone is going to be disciplined," said Robert Lamb, assistant secretary of state for manangement.

Lamb refused to give the name or ranks of the people involved. He said a continuing FBI investigation poses the possibility that criminal charges may be filed, apparently under a law that makes gross negligence in the handling of classified data a criminal offense.

Lamb said the department's own investigation has uncovered no harm to national security from the case, in which classified papers were shipped by mistake to the Lorton Correctional Facility, a prison in suburban Virginia where the District of Columbia houses its prisoners. Also with the papers were at least two unerased memory typewriters used to compose secret documents.

However, Lamb said U.S. intelligence agencies still have not concluded a "damage assessment" on the incident.

The classified documents, including nearly three months of secret daily intelligence summaries prepared for the personal use of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, were contained in a file cabinet in a room where a decade of such summaries were being microfilmed to reduce their bulk.

The department said the responsible official failed to look inside the file cabinet before authorizing its removal from the department.

"We would have to call this sloppiness, no question," Lamb said. "We found laxity in our procedures.

Mondale reaps early benefits from well-sowed campaign

By The Associated Press

Hollings

For Democratic presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale, it was a day to reap early benefits from his methodical campaign for the White House — three more national convention delegates, endorsements from two Hispanic leaders and a union audience shouting "We want Fritz" as he attacked President Reagan's economic policy.

Mondale had all this by midafternoon Tuesday in Washington while his campaign rivals toured America, scattering criticisms of him and Reagan and speaking of early leaders who failed in earlier campaigns.

"I'm glad I'm not the front-runner," Sen. Alan Cranston told an audience in Oklahoma in a reference to failed front-runners of the past three decades.

Mondale won his delegates as House Democrats continued picking a 164-member delegation to next summer's party convention. His harvest for the day gave Mondale an unofficial total of 17 out of 35 delegates selected so far.

Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew has four, all from his home state, while Cranston and Sen. John Glenn have two each. Colorado Sen. Gary Hart has one, and nine are uncommitted.

Another 129 delegates remain to be slated today and Thursday for ratification by the House Democratic Caucus next week. Voters begin picking delegates at party caucuses in Iowa on Feb. 20 and in a primary in New Hampshire eight days later.

Mondale's endorsement came from Rep. Robert Garcia of New York — who is expected to be picked as a convention delegate later this week — and New Mexico Gov. Tony Anaya.

The union audience was courtesy of the United Auto Workers, and Mondale tailored his remarks to his audience, declaring that he sees "management using King Kong tactics to accept Hong Kong wages."

When he turned his attention to Reagan, Mondale said the president's policies are threatening to make the American middle class "go the way of the Edsel."

The former vice president got a benefit from his union connection when the United Food and Commercial Workers Union paid $100,000 for a satellite hookup that enabled the front-runner to address an estimated 15,000 workers at 17 locations around the country.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, speaking in New York, said he was the only Democrat who can "go toe to toe" with Reagan on economic issues. The South Carolina senator unveiled a revised plan that would virtually balance the budget by 1988, including $257 billion in higher taxes, a five-year cut of $148 billion in the president's defense buildup, and elimination of next year's cost of living increase for Social Security and federal pension programs.

Reagan to endorse space station

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will endorse in his State of the Union speech tonight an orbiting space station where six to eight men and women could be working in 1991 or 1992, government sources report.

The station would signal a permanent U.S. presence in space and could expand to such objectives as a manned lunar base and an expedition to Mars early in the 21st century, said the sources, who asked to remain anonymous.

The initial station, which could grow through the years with additional modules, would cost an estimated $8 billion. As a down payment, Reagan will ask for about $150 million in his proposed fiscal 1985 budget, which will be sent to Congress Feb. 1, the sources said.

They said Reagan will urge Congress to support a station as a means of moving the United States ahead commercially and technologically in space. He is expected to cite commercial opportunities offered by an orbiting platform, where humans can manufacture pure pharmaceuticals and exotic materials that can't be made on Earth because of gravity.

Experiments conducted aboard the space shuttle have demonstrated that such items can be processed in the weightless vacuum of space. Several American industrial firms and foreign governments have expressed an interest in contributing to a U.S. station to conduct commercial and scientific experiments.

The president called for a "grander vision" in space last October on NASA's 25th anniversary. He challenged the agency to develop more long-term goals, such as a lunar base and manned flight to Mars, instead of just focusing on winning approval of a space station.

Preliminary 1985 spending projections given earlier this month to Republican congressmen by budget director David Stockman show the administration wants to add $6 billion to NASA's budget over the next five years.

Reagan leads Mondale in latest Times-CBS poll

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan, riding high marks in public opinion of his handling of economic matters, leads Democratic presidential front-runner Walter Mondale in public support, according to results of a New York Times-CBS poll published today.

In addition, the poll indicates that Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, has slipped badly in public favor. Glenn has fallen into a tie with the Rev. Jesse Jackson, with the support of 14 percent of the registered Democrats polled. Mondale garnered the support of 44 percent.

Reagan's high scores on his handling of economic matters offset concerns over his foreign policy to give him 57 percent approval of his handling of the presidency, compared with 32 percent disapproval.

Looking toward November, the pollsters said a hypothetical race found Reagan leading Mondale by 46 to 41 percent.

The poll queried 1,443 persons between Jan. 14 and 21. The Times said that among those who have registered to vote, fear of war and other foreign policy issues had become almost as important as economic issues.

Forty-nine percent said they believed the U.S. Marines should be pulled out of Lebanon.

Anders returns, but he'll play even less

HOUSTON (AP) — Benny Anders, who left the University of Houston basketball team Dec. 26 complaining of a lack of playing time, rejoined the squad Tuesday, claiming he never intended to make his departure permanent.

Anders said that when he flew home from a tournament in Hawaii, "I didn't say anything about leaving the Houston Cougars. I said I was leaving Hawaii."

But confronted by reporters whom he had told otherwise, Anders said, "That's what you wanted to hear so I just told you that."

The 6-foot-5 Anders practiced with the team Tuesday.

Coach Guy V. Lewis said Anders visited his house every night Jan. 15, 16 and 17, seeking forgiveness and begging for reinstatement.

The coach vowed that Anders would have to fight his way back to the amount of playing time he had when he quit the team.

"He was dissatisfied before not getting over 18 minutes playing time," Lewis said. "There is no way he is going to appproach 18 minutes of playing time now. He will be starting at the bottom."

"I'll do whatever you want by way of transferring or if you decide to come back, I'll be glad to let you rejoin the team next year, but I say 'no' for this year," Lewis said he told Anders.

But Lewis said he was persuaded by 7-foot center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon to take Anders back for the remainder of this season.

Sooners outgun Cowboys

College Basketball

By Associated Press

The venerable basketball rivalry between Oklahoma and Oklahoma State is called the "Bedlam Series" for obvious reasons, and the 159th renewal certainly lived up to the name.

Playing before a noisy, standing-room-only crowd of 11,463 at Norman, the Sooners and Cowboys staged one of their typical wild shootouts Tuesday night with Oklahoma outgunning Oklahoma State 115-100.

"The way they played tonight, they're a Top Ten club," Oklahoma State Coach Paul Hansen of the 11th-ranked Sooners.

Held to 10 points in the first half, Oklahoma center Wayman Tisdale broke loose for 26 in the second during which the 16-2 Sooners poured in 71 points and broke or tied several records in the process. The Sooners set a club mark and tied a Big Eight high with their second-half point total, and set a conference record by hitting 26 field goals in the final 20 minutes.

In the only other game involving a ranked team Tuesday night, No. 18 Georgia was upset 77-69 by Florida.

Top Twenty

Five Oklahoma players scored in double figures, but Tisdale's 36-point, nine-rebound performance stood head and shoulders above the field.

After hitting the 30-point level for the fourth straight game, Tisdale said that he felt "stronger now than ever. Tonight, I felt really good out there."

He finished with 14 of 23 field goals and eight of 13 free throws, leading the parade of Oklahoma scoring. David Johnson added 24 points and freshman Tim McCalister had 19, all in the second half.

Joe Atkinson, Oklahoma State's 6-7 center, had a career-high 30 points to lead the Cowboys. Ray Crenshaw added 24 and grabbed 12 rebounds.

"I knew if Oklahoma State wanted to come in and run with us, we'd score that many points on them," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, whose team boasts a 92-point-per-game scoring average, second best in the country. "But I was a little surprised they scored as many as they did."

Eugene McDowell scored five straight points on a dunk and a three-point play, wiping out a four-point deficit and triggering Florida over Georgia.

Throughout the night, the Gators' inside game proved too much for Georgia. After they got the lead, the Gators' second-half free throw shooting of 20 of 27 kept them in front. Georgia got only seven free-throw chances after intermission, making five.

Ronnie Williams led the Gators with 22 points, while McDowell added 18 for Florida.

"Florida dominated us on the boards," Georgia Coach Hugh Durham said. "We just didn't have the conviction to get after them in that area of the game. Our strength is in the backcourt. Our strength didn't end up where we wanted it to be and their strength dominated."

Unranked Teams

In other action, Charles Barkley scored 18 points and Chuck Person added 17 as Auburn held off a late Tennessee rally to win 79-72. It was only the fourth time in 33 trips to Knoxville that Auburn has beaten the Volunteers.

Chris Mullin scored 15 of his game-high 29 points in the final eight minutes to spark St. John's to a 63-62 victory over Seton Hall. Mullin said the Redmen played "sloppy but we hung tough. Winning this one prevented a long ride home."

Albert Butts scored 25 points as La Salle defeated Penn 96-85; Randy Cozzens converted 14 of 15 free throw attempts and scored a season-high 28 points to spark Army to a 67-56 victory over Colgate, and J.J. Crawl drove for two baskets in the final 30 seconds as West Virginia held on to beat St. Francis (Pa.) 74-69.

10 races horses killed in fraudulent scheme

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — An indictment released Tuesday charged 19 people with participating in a wide-ranging conspiracy in which 10 race horses were killed to collect $226,000 in fraudulent insurance claims.

Monmouth County Prosecutor John A. Kaye said the indictment brings to 28 the number of people involved in the scheme since it was uncovered last June. The 101-count indictment included charges of arson, conspiracy, theft, falsifying records, cruelty to animals, perjury, forgery, criminal mischief and attempted race-fixing, he said.

The $226,000 was received from 13 insurance companies on fraudulent claims involving the horses as well as nine motor vehicles and one boat, Kaye said.

Kaye said the animals, nine of them standardbred harness racing horses, were killed between June 1980 and March 1983.

"The first was murdered with a shotgun during deer-hunting season," Kaye said. He added that three were shot with arrows, and implements such as branches and fence posts were stuck into the wounds to make the deaths look accidental.

Kaye said five other horses were suffocated by placing plastic bags over their heads and the alleged ringleader of the conspiracy, Daniel Chansky, 33, of Jackson Township, broke the neck of one with his bare hands.

The prosecutor said all 10 horses were insured for amounts far above their value before they were killed.

Ten people previously pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the investigation by Monmouth County investigators and the state police, said Col. Clinton L. Pagano, state police superintendent.

Permian, Abilene win

In light of Midland Lee's stunning 54-52 upset of Midland High, the District 4-5A picture is getting less and less clear.

Odessa Permian and Abilene High kept district-leading paces going, both doing something Midland's Bulldogs could not: win in-city bragging rights.

Permian's Panthers posted a 49-46 win over Odessa High to keep tied with Abilene at 6-1. Rocky Hendrix led Mojo with 17 points, while Joe Terry netted 14 for OHS and Boyd Cowan added 10 for the Bronchos.

Abilene kept in the running for first with a 61-54 win over Cooper. Phil Molina (13 points) and Tony Roberts (10) paced the Eagles and offset the scoring of Bob Estes and Joe Melson of Cooper. Estes had 14 and Melson 17.

San Angelo trailed the aptly named Steers of Big Spring 26-22 at the half, but the Bobcats got motivated and blew Big Spring out, 61-39. Michael Pfluger scored 19 for Angelo and Brian Ross added 13.

Midland High visits Permian Friday and will try to avenge a season-opening, 59-54 loss at home. Permian has won three straight over the 'Dogs. Lee tangles with Odessa on the road.

Upset at Chap Center

Midland Lee's Derek Westbrook (30) comes down with a rebound in front of Midland High's Fred Franklin (34) while Lee's Anthony Dickens looks on during key District 4-5A basketball game Friday night at Chaparral Center. Westbrook led a 54-52 win over the Bulldogs with 1[illegible] points.

Lee posts 55-53 victory

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When Midland Lee's basketball team was struggling to keep a lead late in a game at Odessa Permian, Jan. 13, the pressure got to the Rebels. Permian hit a shot at the buzzer to beat the Rebs 55-53.

Tuesday, the Rebels found the taste of winning in that fashion much more likeable, and the resourceful Rebs stunned the Bulldogs with a come-from behind upset, 54-52.

Lee earned the win, and MHS probably deserved the loss. The Rebs were outsized physically, but as the saying goes, the size of a person's heart is unmeasurable. After squandering an early lead and trailing by as much as seven late in the third quarter, Lee fought back to take the victory.

ALMOST AS critical as Lee's determination to win was Midland's inability to make a basket - any basket - in the final five minutes of play. The Bulldogs had several chances to win, but cashed in on none of them.

"I feel weak, limp, awful, mad, sad, whatever word you want to use," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson after the game. Perhaps the best word would be unsatisfied, because Stephenson looked ready to coach the overtime.

"We made our free throws down the stretch," Lee boss Paul Stueckler said, which is definitely true where Tyrone Thurman is concerned.

Thurman, Lee's pocket-size rocket, is only 5-4. That didn't hurt Thurman in his role as starting halfback for the Rebel state-finalist football team, and it didn't hinder his performance against MHS.

Thurman got the Rebs started on the right foot, and ending on a winning note. Thurman hit six straight shots at the charity stripe in the fourth quarter.

Lee needed them all, and in fact scored 11 of their 21 fourth period points at the line. The Rebs had started the game quickly, as Thurman's little feet hit the floor running. Thurman hit two jumpers in the first minute and a half, and the Rebs raced to a 6-0 lead.

But Midland High, now 27-5, has been steady under pressure, and fought back with a rally. MHS got most of its points from in close, as scoring leader Chris Rooker had an off night. Rooker still managed to score 14 points, but for the offensive minded guard, 14 points is sub-par.

Darrell Davis (16 points), Kenneth Johnson (12) and Eric Brunson began asserting themselves inside, and as a result, the trio scored all 12 of MHS' opening quarter points.

Lee led 14-12 after one, and the score was tied at 24 at the half.

In the third frame, MHS got serious and showed the form that has served them well in 1983-84. Rooker began to contribute with things other than points, feeding Johnson for a hoop, then stealing the ball twice and scoring with one of them. One of the steals came off Thurman, something that must still be a surprise to both parties.

MHS bulit the lead back up to five (44-39), and then the Rebels started to pick things up while MHS reverted to its sluggish start. Suddenly, the MHS goal seemed to have a lid on it.

DAVIS MISSED a layup, and Lee won the ensuing jump ball. Lee's Alton Davis hit a pair of foul shots after Davis fouled Davis on the exchange. MHS, 44-41.

Lee trailed, 46-41.

"We went to a man-to-man defense and a full court press," said Stueckler. "The change in defensive strategy got us some turnovers and some foul shots."

The change played havoc with the MHS backcourt. In quick succession, MHS threw the ball away, fouled, travelled, fouled, committed a lane violation on a free throw, and had the ball stolen. Lee converted the errors into six points, the last two coming on a 24-foot bomb dropped by Alvin Henry.

Henry was cold all night, but his long-distance jumpers in the second half were crucial. As Lee's leading scorer, Henry was also off Tuesday, but chipped in with eight points.

MHS continued to stagger. Rooker missed a layup, then Davis fouled, giving away one point. Thurman swiped the ball from Rooker, who thought he was fouled, and Derek Westbrook took Thurman's feed for a 50-46 lead with 1:02 left to play.

ROOKER SCORED, then Thurman nailed his fifth and sixth straight freebies after a foul against Rooker. Johnson answered with a tip-in, making it 52-50 with 38 seconds left.

Davis got his fifth foul trying to prevent an easy score by Henry, and some Lee cheerleaders, egging Davis on, almost started a free-for-all. In the aftermath, Henry missed the two-shot intentional freebies.

Midland Lee defies statistics

The mind says that this was a District 4-5A basketball stunner. Midland Lee 54, Midland High 52.

It was not the feeling that Lee didn't have the talent to win a game like this. It was more on pure facts.

For instance, Lee had 13 victories going into the big cross town shootout. Midland High had 21. The Bulldogs owned a three game stretch of domination, going back to 1982. The Bulldogs also were ahead of the Rebels in this year's standings heading into this one. And MHS went into league play in many minds as the district favorite. Lee wasn't on anyone's ballot.

But the big thing that is hard to erase from the mind is Lee's record last year. The Rebs were 3-27 a year ago. A disaster. A washout.

Derek Westbrook, who canned 17 points to lead all scorers, also remembers the numbers of 3-27.

"I remember last year. There is no question about that. We just didn't seem to know what we were doing last year. But I've been waiting all year for this. I knew we wouldn't have a season like last year again," said Westbrook.

"We lost some close games early in district, but now we are winning them. We've won three in a row after losing three in a row and I think things are beginning to fall into place."

Lee coach Paul Stueckler also feels that things may be falling into place.

"I've always said that in order for a team to be good, something good has to happen in a big game along the way. This may be the something good for us. It's the first really big win we've had against a great team and it could give us the confidence for some bigger things down the road. I hope so," said Stueckler.

Stueckler added, "Derek keeps things together for us on the floor. He did a great job against the Bulldogs."

But it is no coincidence that Lee's current surge started with the emergence of guard Tyrone Thurman. Thurman started basketball six weeks late due to a small matter of playoff football. It took him a while to get his feet wet.

"To tell the truth, I was horrible when I started basketball. I didn't feel comfortable. I wasn't playing under control and was turning the ball over a lot," said Thurman, who scored 14 points, including six of seven free throws in the fourth period. "I started hot against Midland High, but then got cold and started dishing the ball off to Westbrook. He hit them and then I got a chance to do something at the free throw line and I knew I had to put them in when we were behind."

Thurman has now dipped into double figures for four straight games. Lee has won three of those and the other was a narrow loss to Permian in Odessa.

"There is no question that Tyrone is coming on strong," says Stueckler. "He wasn't very good when he got out of football, but we knew it was only a matter of time before he made himself known. He started for us last year."

Still, Lee's victory has thrown a monkey wrench into the 4-5A race. Both local teams are now two games behind Abilene High and Permian with only seven games left to play. Both teams have to make a hard stretch run.

For MHS, this has to be a low point in the season. They have lost two in a row and face the task of meeting league leading Permian Friday in Odessa. Permian has beaten MHS three straight times. Lee hosts OHS, a team they have already beaten this year.

MHS must face Permian, Abilene High, Odessa High and Abilene Cooper on the road in the second half, a very tough task. Lee gets home games with Permian, Odessa High, Abilene High and Cooper.

Friday's games now become paramount for both squads. There's no room for slipups or narrow losses.

Eyes will be on Permian and Abilene High. Life is sweet for them right now. They are headed for the playoffs if they can stand life at the top. Judging from the closeness of nearly every 4-5A outing this year, life at the top is a fleeting experience at best. There is a race still to be decided.

Greenwood teams keep records intact

Greenwood's Rangers continued their winning ways Tuesday night, sweeping boys and girls games from Sands in District 11-A action.

The boys had to go into overtime to preserve their unbeaten league record with a 40-38 win, the closest call this season.

The girls had a lark, winning 58-23. Belinda Duke scored 22 points to show the way as Greenwood opened up a 26-11 halftime lead.

Greenwood's boys are 16-5 for the season and 4-0 in league play while the girls went to 4-0 in district.

Davis quits Longhorns

Former Midland High baseball standout Tim Davis dropped off the University of Texas squad, observing it was no longer fun.

Davis, a freshman catcher-outfielder, hit .397 and was named to the all-state team last spring at Midland High.

Davis became the second player to leave Coach Gus Gustafson's defending national champions in recent weeks. Freshman outfielder Daryl Derryberry, San Marcos, left to attend Tylor Junior College.

Gustafson had labeled Davis "a definite major league prospect" when he signed the Midlander.

Rebels beat Bulldogs

Johnson got the rebound, but MHS lost the ball under the Lee basket out of bounds. Rooker fouled Thurman at the 0:13 mark, and he finally missed one, but Fred Franklin's driving finger roll rolled right off the rim, forcing MHS to have to foul anyone in white.

They chose Westbrook, who hurt MHS all night from the floor, but sewed the game up by hitting both free throws.

"It's an emotional game," Stephenson said afterwards, doing a good job of acting unaffected by the tough loss. "It was certainly a good game for the spectators, but there were a lot of mistakes."

The MHS and Lee JV got the night under way with a hint of things to come. The Bullpups' Anthony Deande hit two free throws, and Elvin Mackey and Mike Lyon each hit a single free throw in the last seconds to give MHS a dramaric 64-62 win.

Mackey lead all scorers with 24 points, but Deande's foul shots were the difference. He hit them after a technical foul was assessed against Lee for calling one too many timeouts.

Lyon finished with 11 points, and Lee's Jason Fuller scored 14 in the loss.

U.S. cager punished

LONDON (AP) — American basketball player Greg McCray received one of the stiffest penalties in the history of the sport in this country when he was banned for four games. McCray, 24, lost his temper and pushed the ball in the face of ref Paul Chapman at the final buzzer Jan. 14 as Palace defeated Birmingham. The ref suffered a cut lip. Palace claimed it was an accident, but the English Basketball Association ruled against the 6-5 cager...

Military spending costs private foundation

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The private foundation that sponsored the first Army-Navy football game on the West Coast could be about $1 million in debt, the Pasadena Star-News reported.

"We know we have a shortfall because we didn't sell out the stadium," said Rolfe Arnhym, executive vice president of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and the man most responsible for bringing the Nov. 25 game to the Rose Bowl.

Arnhym refused to discuss anonymous reports that the foundation could end up as much as $1 million in the hole.

"I can't accept or deny that number," he said. "Any numbers anyone could put out right now would be guesses."

The Army-Navy '83 Foundation planned to raise about $6 million to bring the 9,000 cadets and midshipmen to Pasadena for the game won by Navy 42-13. Ticket revenues were expected to be $2.5 million, based on a sellout of the 100,000-seat Rose Bowl. However, only about 81,000 seats were sold. At $25 per ticket, that means the foundation started out about $450,000 short of its estimate.

TV revenue was expected to be about $1.85 million, with the remainder of the money coming mostly from fund-raising events and private and corporate donations. Part of the foundation's problem is that Arnhym still doesn't have all the bills.

A Pasadena city official confirmed that the foundation still hasn't been billed for the use of the Rose Bowl, which is expected to be a major expense. The bill should be ready later this week, said Mary Bradley of Pasadena's finance office.

Although Arnhym traveled to the two military academies earlier this month to get the final figures, he found both academies still hadn't finished their audits. "We don't know yet whether we have to pay them money or they have to pay us money," he said.

Some money to defray expenses still is trickling into the foundation from advertising revenue, pledges from local residents and money from souvenir sales, Arnhym said.

Women golfers offered bonanza

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The stakes are multiplying in women's golf with a $1-million bonus awaiting any player capable of winning both the Nabisco-Dinah Shore and J&B Scotch tournaments.

And that's not all. Any golfer who can beat the odds and win each of the events both in 1984 and 1985 would collect $4 million in bonus money.

The Dinah Shore is scheduled at Mission Hills, Rancho Mirage, Calif., April 2-8. The J&B will be held at Las Vegas' Desert Inn the following week.

A million dollars also await a golfer winning 1984 and 1985 in either event and $2 million if she won the Shore and J&B this year and Shore in 1985.

"What an incentive," said defending J&B champion Nancy Lopez, "There's going to be a lot of choking, but, overall, it's pretty wonderful and exciting for the players and fans."

Both events said the bonuses are better than anything male golfers can shoot for.

Donna Caponi would have won $2 million in 1980, winning the Shore and J&B events that year and J&B again in 1981.

Lopez would have won $1 million with J&B wins in 1982-1983.

Top skiers miss Games

KIRCHBERG, Austria (AP) — When the Alpine skiing starts at the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, three of the world's top skiers will be absent.

Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark and Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein are ineligible and neither will Marc Girardelli, an Austrian skiing for Luxembourg, one of the world's top slalom racers.

Stenmark and Wenzel were barred from the 1984 Olympic Games by the International Ski Federation (FIS), because they took out so-called B-licenses after the 1980 games at Lake Placid.

This allows them to promote ski equipment and collect the advertising proceeds directly. Amateurs who lend their names to products keep their eligibility by receiving payments through their ski federations.

Girardelli was not permitted to join the Austrian team and does not have Luxembourg citizenship.

With Stenmark and Wenzel out, there were no safe favorites for gold in either the men's or women's division. But the list of key contenders is narrowing down in World Cup races.

They include downhillers Franz Klammer and Erwin Resch of Austria and Urs Raeber of Switzerland, along with giant slalom skiers Pirmin Zurbriggen and Max Julen of Switzerland and Jure Franko of Yugoslavia.

Other contenders are Phil and Steve Mahre of Yakima, Wash., who have failed to win a race this season.

Steve Mahre was fastest in a slalom at Parpan, Switzerland, on Jan. 16, but both he and Phil, the overall World Cup champion the past three years, were disqualified for mixing up their start numbers.

In the women's division, Wenzel and Erika Hess of Switzerland were triple winners this season. Wenzel won two downhill races and one giant slalom; Hess two slaloms and one giant slalom.

Two Swiss downhillers, Maria Walliser and Urs Raeber, are World Cup double winners this season.

Veteran Franz Klammer of Austria, the 1976 Olympic downhill champion, has made an impressive comeback. He won his 25th World Cup race before 30,000 fans last Sunday in Kitzbuehel, Austria.

The next World Cup races before the Olympic Games were scheduled for Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany; Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, and Borovetz, Bulgaria in the men's division, and Megeve, France, for the women.

Sarajevo still waiting

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Heavy snowfall finally hit Olympic venues although it evaded the town where the 14th Winter Games start in two weeks.

After several days of warm southern winds and mild temperatures started to melt the snow on mountain sites near this central Yugoslav city, a late heavy snowfall Wednesday brought cheers from the organizers.

Although organizers here have not been too worried about possible lack of snow during Games, there has been some apprehension.

Snow was falling on Mt. Bjelasnica, where the men's Alpine events will be staged and where the snow cover has been the deepest, over three feet, and on Mt. Igman, the site of Nordic events, most threatened by the warm winds.

Igman traditionally is one of the coldest spots in Yugoslavia but the winter has been mild.

On Jahorina, the venue for women's Alpine events, snow also was reported falling.

Notre Dame, UT series looms

HOUSTON (AP) — Look for Notre Dame and Texas to schedule a home-and-home series.

But don't go rushing for tickets right away.

It's not likely the Longhorns and Fighting Irish will meet in a regularly scheduled game until the 1994-95 or 1995-96 seasons, UT AD DeLoss Dodds says.

"Gene (Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan) and I have talked about it several times and every time we talk about it, it sounds better," Dodds said.

"It's going to happen," Corrigan said. "We've talked at length about it and we have decided that we are going to do it.

"We are going to change our scheduling around some in the future so that we can get into each area of the country once every five years."

Corrigan said Texas would replace Penn State on an Irish schedule which already includes such football powers as Michigan, Southern California, Alabama and Pittsburgh.

"There's no way we're going to play Penn State and Texas in the same season, not with all the other tough games we have," he said.

The two teams have met eight times previously, with Notre Dame winning six of the contests.

Cummings sparks Clippers

Aguirre's 32 leads Mavericks

By Associated Press

A double injection of talent did wonders for the San Diego Clippers.

Terry Cummings, who skipped one game because of problems with his disability insurance coverage, and Bill Walton, who broke his hand Dec. 4, returned to uniform Tuesday night. They played key roles down the stretch to help the San Diego Clippers nip Portland 118-113.

Cummings scored 13 of his 26 points in the fourth period, while Walton's basket in the final minute defused a Trail Blazer rally. Walton had five points and seven rebounds while playing only 15 minutes, eight of them in the fourth period.

Cummings, who also led San Diego with 10 rebounds, refused to play last Friday after his $1-million personal disability policy expired.

But Cummings, who missed part of last season with a heart ailment, worked out an agreement with the Clippers that provided him with another insurance policy.

Red Wings' goalie sticks to Islanders

By Associated Press

With a stick or without a stick, Greg Stefan stuck it to the New York Islanders.

The 23-year-old Stefan, in his second full year in the NHL posted a 4.25 goals-against average last season and had allowed an average of 4.14 goals this season.

But he turned away 32 shots Tuesday night, including five without a stick midway through the third period to draw a tremendous standing ovation from the 17,200 fans at Detroit's Joe Louis Arena, as the lowly Red Wings stunned the haughty Islanders 4-0.

It was Stefan's first NHL shutout and only the second of his entire organized hockey career and it enabled the Red Wings to snap a nine-game losing streak.

"I don't know what it was, but I was psyched up all day," Stefan said. "This is great to break this streak. We wanted to get this thing turned around."

Ivan Boldirev scored two goals for Detroit and Stefan, who called the shutout his greatest thrill in sports, handled the defense.

Stefan's only other shutout came a few seasons ago when he played junior hockey for the Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey League.

NHL

Jets 5, Nordiques 3

Quebec had won 11 and tied three of its last 14 home games but Winnipeg's Dale Hawerchuk and Paul Maclean each had a goal and an assist to help end that string. The Nordiques took a 1-0 lead on Wilf Paiement's goal at 4:03 of the opening period, but fell behind 3-1 by the end of the session on Winnipeg goals by Hawerchuk, Maclean — 25 seconds later — and Tim Watters.

Canadiens 7, Whalers 7

Blues 6, Maple Leafs 3

Brian Sutter had two goals and an assist and Bernie Federko a goal and two assists for St. Louis. Sutter's second goal, on a power play, helped St. Louis build a 4-1 lead midway through the middle period and gave him 17 points in seven games against the Maple Leafs. Toronto whittled the deficit to 4-3 but could get no closer and suffered its eighth straight setback on the road.

Cougars resurface Indy

Texas basketball? Hey, man, you are in ACC country. North Carolina, NC State, Virginia, Maryland....those are our teams. When are the Blue Demons on again? How do you figure those dudes in the Big East, just when it looks like Georgetown is head and shoulders....

Do they actually play college basketball in Texas?

About the only time West Texans get to see Southwest Conference basketball any more is when one of the networks brings on Houston to serve as a punching bag for one of their favorites.

Sunday was a good example. Houston took its usual nose dive when confronted by the TV cameras.

Up at Texas Tech the other night, the Cougars looked like an updated version of Wooden's UCLA teams. Against Kentucky, the glare of the bright lights was too much. They resembled one of those old boxing trial horses, somebody impressive, but harmless, served up to make a top contender look good.

FROM AN emotionally prejudiced point of view, Houston got the customary Lexington home-cooking job. The game came on late, so most folks weren't aware that Houston was wearing white to open the game, but by the time WT tuned in the coals were hot and the uniforms were red.

It's a wonder the Wildcats ever lose at home, but that's no excuse. Houston should have blown 'em out anyway.

The game made it evident why they call them the Phi Slamma Jamma. Unless they've got their wrist in the cash register, these guys can't score.

AGAINST NORTH Carolina State last year in the NCAA's finals, their foul shooting was terrible, and it hasn't improved any since. Against Kentucky, any time they had to put it up from five feet away from the hoop, they were crosseyed and tongue-tied. They looked like the Redskins offense.

This must be the most unskilled major college team in existence. Sunday Michael Young looked like the most overrated underrated player in America. The way he was shooting, it looked like he was trying repave Indy.

Guy Lewis recruits his players from brickyards. They can sure jump, but don't ask them to shoot at anything they can't look down into.

As bad as they were, the Cougars could have won. On the fourth foul against Akeem, he was karate chopped in the scramble for the ball on the floor under the basket. The officials ignored that one and waited until the players went up for the rebound, then nailed Akeem.

Kentucky led by three with the clock inside a minute. A Cougar hit a two-pointer as a hand pushed him from behind. The official called walking. No basket, no foul, no replay, either.

No wonder I was in a foul mood even before the Super Bowl started.

Ewing best in America

Hoyas' star to finish college

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patrick Ewing is "the best player in America," according to Georgetown coach John Thompson, and doubtless many NBA scouts feel the same way.

But Ewing said in an interview Tuesday that he will spurn all offers to turn professional before he graduates from Georgetown next year. His mind is set on two goals: winning a national championship for the Hoyas and playing for the U.S. Olympic team.

"My mind has been made up since I came here," the Jamaican-born Ewing told the Washington Times in an interview published Wednesday. "The Olympics has always been my goal since high school, when I was the youngest (age 16 in 1980) to try out for the U.S. team."

The 7-foot Ewing, who averages 16.2 points and 10.3 rebounds a game for fourth-ranked Georgetown despite being double-and triple-teamed, would be a top selection in the NBA "hardship" draft if he chose to come out early, scouts have said.

"For those who don't believe he is the best player in the nation in college, Patrick will damn well show it in the pros when he gets single coverage (the NBA outlaws zone defenses)," said Thompson. "I was laying in bed and broke out laughing when someone on the radio said Patrick was overrated. I think Red Auerbach must have started those rumors."

Thompson was referring good-naturedly to the Boston Celtics general manager, whose team Thompson has said he'd like Ewing to play for when he does turn professional.

Thompson and Ewing comprise mutual admiration societies. "He is definitely the best coach in the world," Ewing said of Thompson. "I'm biased, of course, because I play for him. But he helps you grow off the court. He cares about you enough to make you learn about what's in your future."

In regards to Thompson's comment that Ewing is the best player in the country, Ewing said, "I thanked him for the flattery. But I've worked hard to get where I am. My parents always told me, 'If you work hard, you cherish your accomplishments more.' I try to apply that to everything I do. The better you are, the harder you have to work."

Ewing "does not allow himself to loaf," according to Thompson.

Lester Hayes still in clouds

HONOLULU (AP) — A couple of days and thousands of miles removed from Super Bowl XVIII, Lester Hayes still was floating in the clouds.

"It gives me a stupendous feeling of euphoria," said the Los Angeles Raiders' cornerback, colorfully demonstrative in word as well as deed.

"There's such a feeling of euphoria because we went into the game against Washington as the underdogs, and we gave the Redskins the drubbing of their life."

The "drubbing of the Redskins' life" was Los Angeles' 38-9 triumph over them last Sunday in Tampa, the most lopsided score in Super Bowl history.

While running back Marcus Allen powered the Raiders' offense, gaining 191 yards and scoring twice, it was the Los Angeles defense that controlled the National Football League championship game.

And the superb job by Hayes and his counterpart at the right corner, Mike Haynes, on the Redskin wide receivers was one of the prime ingredients in the Raiders' dominance.

Hayes and Haynes limited Charlie Brown and Art Monk, the most feared Washington receivers, to just four receptions.

Jersey seeks bail club

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — State officials say they should know by the end of 1984 whether it makes sense to bring a major league baseball team to the sports complex in northern New Jersey's meadowlands.

A stadium to house the team probably would be built within a 20-to 30-mile radius of the complex, Mulcahy said. He added that the facility, with an estimated cost of from $50 million to $75 million, would have about 50,000 seats.

THE PUTTING GREEN

Golf constant quest for edge

By BOB GREEN

SAN DIEGO (AP) — If there is a truism in golf, it is that the game — at any level — involves an unending quest for an edge, just a tiny advantage, anything that will improve the average by the smallest fraction.

That being the case, it creates a situation in which gimmicks, aids, devices, innovations — some of outlandish nature — survive and flourish.

Obscure pros have become wealthy men when they have discovered — and, more importantly, marketed — The Secret.

The Secret, of course, varies greatly. It can involve things mental or metal, methods or machines, equipment, nets, games and hypnotists. Generally, however, The Secret has two constants:

1 — IT costs money to be initiated to The Secret or to acquire the device, equipment or aid that will improve your game to a level that will have Jack Nicklaus quivering in terror, and

2 — Principal beneficiaries are golf-oriented publications that carry the advertising necessary to advise a panting public about the discovery, invention or birth of the particular Secret. Multiple pages are purchased to picture, for example, a player with braces on hand, elbow and knee, bound by straps elbow-to-elbow with cords attaching an ankle to opposite knee.

Many are, obviously, gimmicks. Some are absurd. Quite obviously, however, some are legitimate breakthroughs. There were those who scoffed, for example, at steel shafts and the death of the gutta percha ball. And those innovations changed the game.

Now there is a concept involving the use of lighter heads and more flexible shafts that, touring pro D.A. Weibring predicts, "will revolutionize golf."

"It will," Weibring insisted, "make obsolete every set of clubs in the United States."

WITH SOME 20,000,000 golfers in this country, the potential financial outlay — not to mention the mental anguish involved in adjusting to new clubs — is mind-boggling.

"The possibilities," agreed Weibring, "are awesome."

He is not alone in his advocacy of the concept. Tom Kite, a former Vardon Trophy winner, leading money winner and Player of the Year, is experimenting, in Tour competition, with his own version of the clubs.

(The clubs, devised by Dave Pelz of Abilene, Texas, are being marketed under the name "Featherlite." Some pros are building their own, simply using a more flexible shaft and drilling weight out of the clubheads.)

THE NEW theory is that the lighter club and more flexible shaft provide more clubhead speed at impact.

"I'm getting better accuracy and maybe 10 yards greater length," Kite said.

Simmons undergoes surgery

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas running back Edwin Simmons underwent corrective surgery on his right knee Tuesday in the first of two operations facing the star freshman, officials said.

Doctors realigned Simmons' kneecap, Longhorn officials said. They said Simmons' right leg is slightly shorter than his left, and that had caused a chronic irritation.

The first operation was successful, doctors said, but added Simmons will miss spring training and faces extensive rehabilitation in order to be ready to play this fall.

No-genius Flores just other coach

By TOM CUSHMAN
Copley News Service

TAMPA, Fla. — It will be noted that a developing trend is for the coach who escorts his squad to a Super Bowl championship to automatically be proclaimed genius, thereby joining Aristotle, Plato, and others whose musings have contributed to the advance of life on our planet. Who knows? If the Yankees corner the pitching market, by summer's end perhaps Yogi, too, will have joined the great thinkers on their perch.

Bill Walsh was confirmed as a genius when his 49ers arose from studied mediocrity to claim the NFL title two winters ago, but Bill since has returned to a more pedestrian existence, ceding the genius title to Joe Gibbs of Washington, who spit it up here Sunday afternoon.

Indeed, for additional testimony one can retreat to 1981 and the eve of the Raiders' Super Bowl strangling of the Eagles. Listening carefully, one will hear Gene Upshaw, then in the twilight of his career with the Raiders, who is saying:

"The word they keep using to describe our guy is genius ... and, if he's not, someone had better redefine the term."

THERE WAS, on that occasion, a contradiction of sorts, for the guy to whom Upshaw was referring was Al Davis, owner and architect of the Raiders, not the coach, Tom Flores. Two days later Flores would direct the Raiders to a second Super Bowl title, but Tom left New Orleans without the genius brand being stamped upon his forehead.

Nor has there been a rush to anoint Flores now that his Raiders have won the most crushing Super Bowl victory of them all, causing the Redskins to flee for their tepees along the Potomac. It is just as well, for Tom does not choose to run.

"I don't ever want to be called that," he said. "Einstein was a genius. I'm just a football coach, hopefully a good one."

That comment, understated as it is, probably is as accurate a reflection of the Flores style as can be obtained. In a profession where ego at full gallop is the norm, Flores brings to its pinnacle a measure of sanity and rare perspective. He seems to be saying, "This is enjoyable, but let's not make too much out of it. You know ... a game, even when adorned with Roman numerals, still is a game."

As the field leader of a gang that is one step ahead of the guys with the nets, he is the eye in an emotional hurricane. Much is made of Tom Landry's placid manner on the sidelines, but compared to Flores, Landry is a contortionist. While wild men cavort all about him, Flores folds his arms, or studies his play card like a guy reading Sanskrit.

THE CONTRAST is heightened by the knowledge that he is the successor to John Madden, el toro of the bench set. "Madden coached like the lineman he had been," says Gene Upshaw. "He kicked chairs, screamed, raised hell with the officials, was always crashing through a door.

"Tom is what you would expect of a successful quarterback. He's calm, thoughtful, cool under pressure, always on top of the game. He's also very fair, and very disciplined. He doesn't attract attention, but I think he is as good as anyone coaching."

To those who care to listen, Flores offers a sense of humor in keeping with his profile, wry rather than robust, often trafficking in self-deprecation. Appearing in 1981 before a Friday conference with members of the media who had devoted the week to panting after the eloquent and energetic Dick Vermeil, Flores began by introducing himself:

"I'm the other coach in the Super Bowl," he said.

IT TOOK some coaxing to get him to talk about the game when, as quarterback for College of the Pacific (now University of Pacific), he had led his team to a rout of a San Jose State squad quarterbacked by Vermeil. "I was so good," says Flores, "that I couldn't get drafted, even though the NFL had 29 rounds back then."

He eventually signed with Calgary of the Canadian League, this in 1958. "They cut me after two months," he says. "After that, I caught on with the Redskins, and they cut me."

Out of football, Flores turned to teaching, but eventually would return as one of the Raiders' first quarterbacks in the days when the old AFL was in its formative period. "I hadn't planned on being a professional coach," he adds, "but football gave up on me as a player before I was ready to give up on it. An opportunity to coach the quarterbacks in Buffalo came along, after which I got a chance with the Raiders."

Flores still was a member of the Oakland staff seven years later, when Madden suddenly bolted for the broadcast booth and all the Lite beer he can drink. Tapped by Davis, Flores quietly has gone about the task of helping the boss Raider assemble one of the deeper and more talented units ever to take to a playing field.

Despite Flores' success, it was at Gibbs' feet that the media again worshiped this week. Those few who strayed to the opposite camp would be rewarded with no long dissertations on theory.

"We attempt to draft tough, emotionally strong people," Flores said Monday morning, repeating a comment he had made earlier. "It's a violent game we're involved in."

THE RAIDERS' style, as first choreographed by Al Davis, is described by Tom Flores as "attack football."

Santee rejects attempt to ban pro boxing

SANTEE, Calif. (AP) — Suggestions to ban boxing in Santee, where a fighter was critically injured during a bout a week ago, have been rejected by the City Council, which voted instead to look into ways to make the sport safer.

On a 4-0 vote, the council agreed to investigate new methods of regulating boxing within city limits, including possible imposition of minimum age requirements and a requirement that fighters wear protective headgear.

Councilman Jim Bartell had suggested an outright ban on the sport after welterweight Stewart Darden collapsed during a Jan. 10 pro match at a skating rink in Santee, located about 20 miles northeast of San Diego.

Bartell changed his mind, however, when the other members of the council indicated they would not support the ban.

Darden, 24, who underwent surgery to relieve swelling and bleeding in his brain, was in a coma for two days before regaining consciousness. Officials at Grossmont Hospital in nearby La Mesa upgraded his condition Monday from serious to fair.

Former world heavyweight champion Archie Moore, state boxing commissioner Martin Denkin and highly-regarded middleweight James "The Heat" Kinchen attended the meeting to voice their support for the sport.

Moore said he opposed a ban because boxing helps deter young people who participate in the sport from gang violence, drugs and crime.

A resident, developer Martin Casper, said he thought the city should impose the ban because the object of boxing is to "knock the other guy unconscious.

"Sometimes the other guy wakes up and sometimes he doesn't," said Casper.

Darden, a San Diego resident with a 13-2 record, was leading on all the judge's cards when he took an uppercut from Steve Acosta that sent him to the canvas with 38 seconds left in the 10th and final round of the bout.

He lapsed into unconsciousness and was taken to the hospital, where doctors operated on him for three hours to control bleeding in his brain.

Games security cause for concern

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Several countries, including Israel, have asked if they can provide their own security for athletes during the Summer Games, Los Angeles Olympic officials said Tuesday.

"We have discussed that," said Philip N. Brubaker, senior vice president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. "No specific requests right now," but he acknowledged "there have been a number of teams we are under discussion with for providing their own security."

But Brubaker would not elaborate and the scope of the security requests was unclear.

In another development, Brubaker said approximately 30 countries, including several Communist nations, have placed deposits for quarters in the Olympic villages. Those countries represent more than half of the anticipated 12,000 athletes, coaches and trainers expected at the games.

"Well over half of the anticipated participants are confirmed," Brubaker said. He declined to name the countries, but said they included "many of the larger ones."

Brubaker, who made the remarks during an Olympic press briefing on housing, declined to identify other countries who asked about providing supplemental security.

Israel and other nations have been obsessed with athlete security since 11 Israeli athletes were taken hostage and killed by Palestinian terrorists during the 1972 Summer Games in Munich, West Germany. International tension has been one of the major concerns of Olympic security planners.

Under the International Olympic Committee charter, the host sponsor, in this case the LAOOC, coordinates security with a wide variety of law enforcement agencies.

Ed Best, director of security for the LAOOC, confirmed that Israel was one of the countries interested in safeguarding its own athletes. The Israelis have talked with LAOOC security and the Los Angeles Police Department about the possibility, he said in a statement issued after Brubaker's comments.

Best said the Soviet Union has not asked about protecting its own athletic delegation.

Most of the athletes will be staying in campus resident halls at the UC-Los Angeles and USC. It is the first time that Olympic athletes will be housed in two villages; a move based on the LAOOC's cost-cutting plan to use existing facilities rather than build a new expensive compound.

Most of the delegations will stay at UCLA or USC. Approximately 1,200 will be quartered at the University of California-Santa Barbara for rowing events.

Hagler wants Sugar

BOSTON (AP) — World middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler predicted he will knock out former welterweight champ Sugar Ray Leonard if they ever meet, but right now he's concentrating on making money.

Hagler, fights Juan Roldan of Argentina March 30 in Las Vegas, said.

"In Vegas they bet on roaches, but if you want prestige and money you go there, New York or Atlantic City," said Hagler, who lives in nearby Brockton. "I go where the greens are."

Hagler, 29 and successful in eight title defenses, said there's "a big hope" he eventually will fight Leonard, who is planning a comeback after eye surgery which forced an early retirement.

"Basically, I want to show I'm the best fighter in the world. And it seems all the big money guys are smaller than me. I'm a professional fighter and look at things money-wise, but I also think of the national attention there would be when I knock out Sugar Ray Leonard. And I will knock him out if we ever meet,

"I'd hate to leave the game of boxing and have people always wanting it to happen. I'd like to have that (Leonard) fight and maybe a fight with (Thomas) Hearns."

Rice warns Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice has given the Boston Red Sox an ultimatum: Pay me big money or forget about me.

"I'm not holding a gun to their head, I just want what other top players are getting," Rice said.

Rice, who has two years left on a seven-year contract providing a reported $750,000 a year, made his demands public in an interview published today in The Boston Herald.

"I have a contract for the next two years and I'll honor it, but when it expires and they're not willing to pay me what some others are getting I'll leave," Rice said.

"I feel that with the numbers I put on the board over the years, I've earned it," Rice added. "I just want what others are making. If I don't get what I am worth, I'll probably test the free agent market."

The 30-year-old slugger has a lifetime average of .305 with 286 home runs and 954 runs batted in in slightly more than nine years with the Red Sox.

"I don't want to leave Boston, but if they won't pay me, I'll have to leave," Rice said. "There will be no bitterness on my part."

"I passed up my chance at free agency the last time around (after the 1978 season) and I see guys who are not better players in the game becoming free agents and making big money.

"All I want is what players who have done what I have, and are making the big money," Rice said.

Smallest consumer prices increase helps wages outpace 1983 inflation

By The Associated Press

The smallest increase in consumer prices in more than a decade helped Americans' average wages outpace inflation in 1983, the Labor Department reports.

The nation's five major automakers, meanwhile, said Tuesday that sales of new cars in mid-January rose 22.7 percent from a year earlier, led by Ford Motor Co.'s 40.2 percent boost.

Counting sales by American Honda Motor Co. Inc., which was not yet producing cars in America at this time last year, the increase totaled 24.3 percent.

Inflation at the consumer level was 3.8 percent in 1983, the lowest since wage and price controls in 1971-72 limited inflation to 3.4 percent for each of those two years, the Labor Department said.

The moderate rise in consumer costs last year followed increases of 3.9 percent in 1982, 8.9 percent in 1981 and 12.4 percent in 1980.

Retail inflation rose 0.3 percent last month, matching November's increase.

Helping to restrain the 1983 increase was the lowest rise in medical costs in a decade, 6.4 percent; a 2.7 percent rise in food costs, the lowest since 1976; and a 0.5 percent decline in energy prices.

"The stabilization of inflation in 1983 is the most remarkable economic achievement of the last three years," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Martin Feldstein, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, said that by all the key measures of inflation, "1983 was an outstanding year." Earlier this month, the government said prices at the wholesale level rose 0.6 percent in 1983 — the best showing in two decades.

Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjustment for rising prices, climbed 2.5 percent last year to place wages ahead of inflation, a separate department report showed. In 1982, such "real" earnings had risen only 0.5 percent.

However, between 1967 and 1983, workers' earnings adjusted for inflation and seasonal factors were down 6 percent to $174.40 last year, from $185.25 in 1967.

American workers' average gross weekly earnings, before adjustment for those factors, totaled $289.68 in December, compared with $273.70 a year earlier, the Labor Department said.

The U.S. carmakers said they sold an average of 19,734 cars a day in mid-January, the best showing for that period since 20,927 were sold in 1979.

Chrysler Corp. said sales rose 29.6 percent, General Motors Corp. posted an 18.5 percent gain, American Motors Corp.'s sales rose 2.4 percent and Volkswagen of America's sales edged up 0.8 percent.

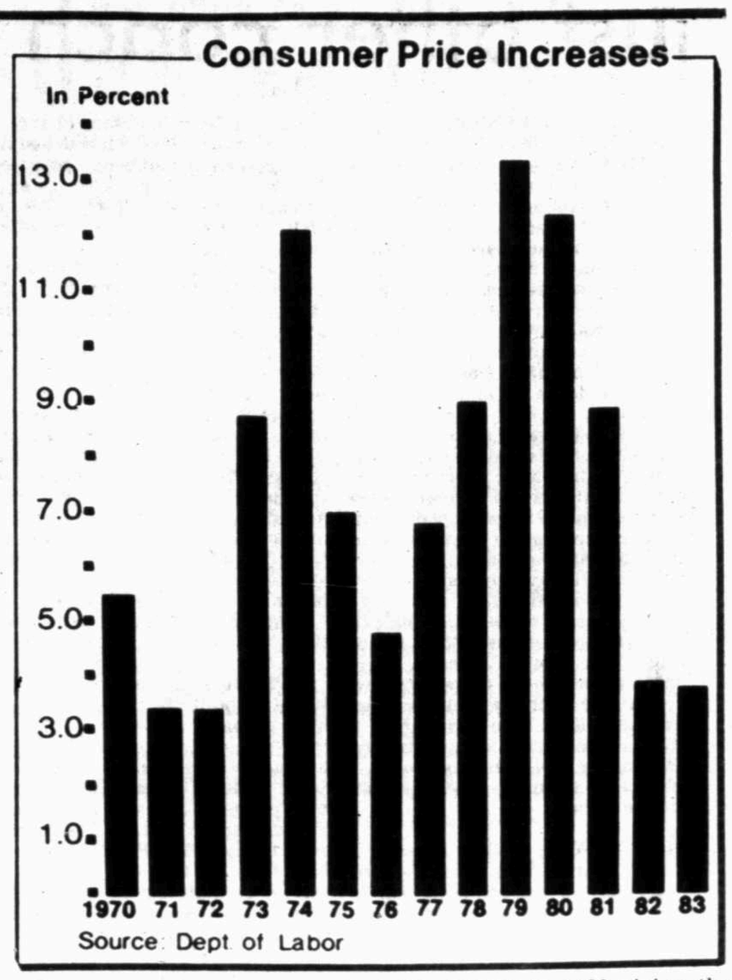
—Pennzoil Co. takes its fight against Texaco Inc.'s proposed takeover of Getty Oil Co. to court today, arguing it should get $7 billion in damages because Getty backed out of an earlier deal with Pennzoil. In a separate action, Pennzoil has challenged the Texaco-Getty deal on antitrust grounds.

—Shell Oil Co.'s board is expected to consider later this week the Royal Dutch-Shell Group's $5.2 billion bid for the 30 percent portion of Shell that the group does not already own. The Anglo-Dutch oil concern said Tuesday it is prepared to pay $55 a share for the rest of Shell's 309 million shares. That amounts to about 94.5 million shares that would be purchased by Shell Petroleum NV, the principal holding company of Royal Dutch-Shell. Shell is the eighth largest oil company in the United States.



Consumer prices rose a modest 3.8 percent in 1983 giving the economy its best performance since 1972, according to Labor Department statistics released Tuesday.

Democrats draw line on social program cuts

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Split down the middle by the growing concern over federal deficits, House Democrats are signaling there are new limits to how far they will go in trying to reverse Reagan administration cuts in social programs.

The House drew the line Tuesday on extending a multibillion-dollar program to reduce the home heating costs of poor people by insulating their homes.

With some Democratic leaders joining a freshmen's revolt, the House voted 233-142 to cut the extension from 10 years to five years and agreed to a one-year freeze in spending for the program. It was the first legislative action by the House this year, and the Democratic sponsor of the spending cut amendment said he hoped it was a sign of things to come.

The overall cost of the program, estimated at $28.5 billion from now through 1994, may not change because of the action. Congress could approve the money for the second five years later. Even under the shorter version, the Congressional Budget Office has estimated the tab could exceed $3 billion a year by 1988.

But the Democrats, fresh from a recess where they were barraged by voter complaints over deficits, said clearly they were not ready to embark on the full program now.

"Essentially, I set the tone today for the remainder of the year — I hope," said Rep. Thomas R. Carper, D-Del., the freshman congressman who sponsored the spending cut amendment.

Carper is a member of the Democratic Budget Study Group, comprising about 25 first-term congressmen who hope to reduce the deficit through a combination of spending restraints and increased taxes.

Despite his freshman status, his plea for spending restraints was sufficient to persuade both House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and House Budget Committee Chairman Jim Jones, D-Okla., to buck leaders of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and support a scaled-down bill.

The measure before the House was intended to weatherize the homes of poor people — add insulation, caulk windows and make other improvements to reduce spending on heating bills. The bill set a goal of working on all eligible homes, estimated at 13 million, by 1994.

A weatherization program has been in effect since 1976, and about 1 million houses have been renovated. But the program peaked in the year before President Reagan took office, and he has proposed no money for the program for the last three years.

While Congress has refused the administration's attempts to kill the program, spending has dropped. The 1984 appropriation stands at $190 million. And Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., said at current spending levels, it will take 50 years to reach all the eligible homes.

The bill, sponsored by Ottinger, chairman of the House Energy subcommttee on energy conservation and power, would have begun a major expansion. It authorized spending of $500 million on weatherization next year and "such sums as may be necessary" through 1994 to reach all the homes.

Durable goods orders down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders placed with factories for durable goods fell 1.1 percent last month, but for the year orders jumped 16.9 percent in yet another sign of the strength of the economic recovery, the government reported today.

The 16.9 percent annual increase compared to a decline of 10.3 percent in 1982, during the depths of the recession, the Commerce Department said.

These increases are in current dollars without discounting for hikes caused by inflation. The "constant dollar" figures, which will not be released for several weeks, will show the first real increase in durable goods orders since 1978, Commerce Department economists said.

The report said December's decline followed an adjusted increase of 3.4 percent in November. In December, the value of new orders dropped $1.1 billion to $95.4 billion, the report said.

The December drop marked only the second month new orders have fallen since hitting a recession low of $70 billion in October 1982. Since that time, new orders had increased every month except for a 2.9 percent decline last July.

Texaco to reply promptly to FTC's latest request

Texaco Inc. has been notified by the Federal Trade Commission that the commission has requested additional information in its inquiry into Texaco's proposed merger with Getty Oil Co.

In a statement released last night, the company said it had been cooperating fully with the FTC and will provide the additional information promptly. The company also noted the FTC's request was not unusual and should not pose any barrier to successfully completing the merger.

In Midland, at Texaco's division headquarters which employs about 350 persons, employees Tuesdaywere put on "stand-by alert" by the company to be ready to respond to the additional information requested by the FTC.

A company spokesman in Houston said employees in Midland and at other Texaco divisions in the U.S., were needed to develop and expedite the information requested by the FTC. The spokesman called the process "the mechanics of complying with the FTC's request."

He said the reason for the "stand-by alert" was because Texaco intends to comply "promptly" with the FTC's request. The spokesman also said putting the information together was a "task" that requires many employees from managers to secretaries to work overtime.

The spokesman would not say if the FTC had given Texaco a time limit in which to respond.

Texaco recently upped its record bid of $9.9 billion for Getty Oil by $237 million.

Hodel, Percy agree on steps to solve energy problems

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Americans should be confident but not complacent about the nation's ability to weather a 1970s-style energy crisis should one occur, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Energy Secretary Donald Hodel said Tuesday.

Percy, chairman of a Senate energy panel, and Hodel, the Reagan administration's top energy official, agreed that the United States has taken several steps to ensure against the fuel shortages that walloped the nation during the previous decade.

But that, they warned, shouldn't delude Americans into thinking an energy crisis can't happen again or that such a shock could be handled easily.

"I am extraordinarily encouraged by the progress that has been made," Percy said. But "the age of energy shortages may not be over ... Preparation for an oil disruption is as important today as it ever indeed was."

Said Hodel: "There is much to be done still. We have not solved the energy problem. I am fond of commenting that energy is a process, not an event. We do not solve the energy problem. We continue to work on it."

The assessment of America's energy picture came at a hearing of the Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on government energy policy, which Percy heads. Hodel was the main witness at the hearing, called to review policies of the Department of Energy.

Those policies are geared toward offsetting the effects of energy crises such as the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and the Iranian petroleum cutoff of 1979, both of which caused long gasoline lines and skyrocketing fuel prices.

Although the memories of those events may be fading in the minds of Americans, the "severe cold weather most of the nation has experienced over the last two months provides us with a not-so-subtle reminder of the work that still must be done," Percy said.

Percy was optimistic that a cutoff of foreign oil would not affect the United States to the degree it did during the 1970s.

He noted that U.S. dependence on imported oil has decreased substantially during the 1980s and that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve – huge stockpiles of petroleum stored in underground tanks – provides the country with a backup source of fuel in the event of a crisis.

"Today, any group of nations would think twice about the effectiveness of an embargo," the three-term senator said. "I trust that motorists will never have to stand in long lines again, schools and businesses will not have to close because of insufficient energy supplies."

But Percy warned that as the economic recovery continues, energy demand probably will rise. Americans, he said, must remember to conserve.

Hodel agreed that the drop in U.S. oil imports from a peak of 18.8 million barrels a day in 1978 to 15.1 million barrels a day last year means the nation is more insulated against a cutoff.

However, oil from the Persian Gulf remains essential since two-thirds of the world's current excess oil production of 10 million barrels a day is in that region, he said.

"There are thinkable events which could occur in the world which could cause this country and our allies serious difficulty," Hodel said. He cited as an example a fulfillment of Iran's threat to stop the shipments of oil through the Straits of Hormuz.

On a related issue, Hodel said he hoped the Senate would try to reach a compromise on legislation to decontrol natural gas prices, but urged lawmakers not to approve any "quick fix" that would freeze prices at the wellhead.

"A quick fix is probably the worst thing that could happen," he said. "I'm fearful (it) would have the effect of driving down the production of gas ... and we could encounter a shortage."

The Reagan administration supports a bill being pushed by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, which would strip price controls from all gas.

Hodel said "it's unfortunate" that no decontrol legislation was approved in time to help beleaguered gas consumers this winter.

Federal labor relations panel upholds employer's request to move operation

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its second major pro-management decision this month, a federal labor relations panel has upheld an employer's decision to move operations to a non-union plant to avoid paying wages negotiated under a labor contract.

The decision, which was released Tuesday by the National Labor Relations Board, carries broad implications for unions seeking to prevent their employers from closing unionized plants and relocating to non-union settings to cut labor costs.

As was the case in a decision issued two weeks ago, Don A. Zimmerman, the lone Democrat on the four-member board, dissented from the majority ruling by Reagan administration appointees.

In the earlier ruling, the board's majority held that a company lawfully fired a man who refused to drive an unsafe tractor-trailer rig because the man had not acted collectively with fellow workers — and thus was not covered by provisions of labor law giving sanction to "concerted activity" by workers.

The plant relocation ruling involved a decision by the management of the Milwaukee Springs division of Illinois Coil Spring Co. to move its assembly operations from Milwaukee, Wis., to a non-union facility in McHenry, Ill. Although the move was never made, the company had sought to lower its unit labor costs by seeking wage concessions from 100 UAW employees in Milwaukee.

When the unionized workers rejected management's proposal for wage concessions, the company announced it would move its Milwaukee operation to the non-union plant.

The UAW challenged the company's plans, saying the relocation move violated provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, a nearly 50-year-old law that protects the rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively. And the NLRB held in October 1982 that the company had violated the law.

The company filed a petition for a review of the board's decision by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and the court remanded the case to the National Labor Relations Board here.

The majority decision, which reversed the board's 1982 stance, was signed by board chairman Donald L. Dotson and members Robert P. Hunter and Patricia Diaz Dennis, all Reagan administration appointees.

Since the 1982 decision, the NLRB's political complexion has changed from liberal to conservative. Conservatives now hold three of the four seats. One seat is currently vacant. Two years ago, two Democrats and a liberal Republican who has since retired formed a liberal majority on many decisions.

In the latest decision, the board's majority took the position that a company may relocate from a union to non-union plant — even while a contract with a union is in force — if the company has satisfied any obligation it has to bargain about the decision. Such a move would have been barred only if the union had specific contractual language prohibiting management from unilaterally making the decision to move, the NLRB said.

The October 1982 decision in favor of the UAW suggests that the board at that time may have concluded that the company's relocation decision violated sections of the law prohibiting alteration of previously negotiated wages and benefits without the union's consent, the three-member majority said.

"While it is true that the company proposed modifying the wage and benefits of the contract, the union rejected the proposals," it added.

In his dissenting opinion, Zimmerman said he concluded that the company, by seeking to relocate while a contract with the UAW was still in force, and without the union's consent, " ... acted in derogation of its bargaining obligation" under provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

Dollar retreats in lackluster trading

Silver rallies against dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar eased against most currencies in lackluster early trading today, retreating from Tuesday's broad advance. Gold prices rose.

The fluctuating dollar was aided Tuesday by a combination of high interest rates and a low U.S. inflation rate of around 3.8 percent.

Sterling rallied against the dollar after hitting a near-record low of $1.3985 late Tuesday. It cost $1.4009 to buy one British pound early today.

The currency, linked to Britain's North Sea oil, had been depressed by speculation of further declines in world oil prices.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar closed at 234.35 yen, slightly up from Tuesday's late rate of 234.02 yen.

Other morning rates compared to Tuesday's late levels:

—8.6330 French francs, down from 8.6425.

—2.2459 Swiss francs, slightly down from 2.2475.

—1,714.74 Italian lire, down fro 1,716.40.

—3.1760 Dutch guilders, down from 3.1815.

—1.24825 Canadian dollars, slightly up from 1.2474.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $366.40 an ounce, 90 cents up on Tuesday's close in quiet trading.

The center's five major bullion houses later "fixed" the recommended morning trading price at $366.375.

In Zurich, the precious metal opened at a bid price of $366.75, $2 up on Tuesday's closer. But it eased by mid-morning to $366.30.

Gold closed earlier in Hong Kong at a bid price of $368.09, up $1.08 from Tuesday.

Silver opened higher in London at a bid price of $8.05 an ounce. It closed Tuesday at $7.96 dollars bid.

Procrastination CAN Lead to Performance!

How?

By deferring income taxes on a portion of your income until retirement — with an Individual Retirement Account at Petroplex Savings. You can begin your IRA at Petroplex with as little as $100 and deposit at least $100 as often as you like up to a maximum of $2000 per year for each eligible person.

That could mean as much as $4000.00 each year — tax deductible — you file a joint return! Even better, the daily compounded interest your IRA earns at Petroplex also accumulates tax-free until you retire.

You can open an IRA at Petroplex at any time. We can even lend you the money to start your account. But, to claim the deduction on your 1983 tax return, the IRS gives you until April 15th.

Task force proposes Odessa school be torn down

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Carolyn Halford

David Stice

ODESSA — A task force appointed to study future uses for the original Odessa High School building recommended Tuesday night that the historic structure be demolished unless private donations can be found to fund its retention.

The Ector County Independent School District's Board of Trustees accepted the report and discussed the various alternatives listed in the 12-member committee's report.

The overall recommendation to the board was:

—"The school district should not spend taxpayer's money on a building that does not have a specific use for the near future."

—The building should be preserved until June 1 "or such a time deemed sufficient by the board" to allow time to raise private funds for renovation of all or part of the building.

—"If sufficient funds are not collected by the established date, it is recommended that the building be demolished."

—Educational use of the building should take into consideration alternatives listed in the report. These included use as a magnet or alternative school, and a civic, computer-technology, community-education or multi-purpose center.

The report listed the cost to demolish the building at $60,000-$65,000 and cost to retain as $40,000. The land is valued at $250,000-$300,000 and the cost to renovate varied from $1.2 million to $3.5 million in the report, depending on the purpose intended for the rebuilt structure.

Holm said that Odessa College had indicated no interest in the building, dropping this possibility from the final alternatives. The Ector County Historical Commission was not interested in using the building for a museum, said the report.

The most popular alternative rated by the task force was saving the south wing (the original structure built in 1928) and using the remaining land for a playground or parking lot. A close second was razing the entire building and using the land for a playground for the elementary school next door.

But the final recommendation was to demolish the building unless private funding could be developed before June 1. The board might extend this deadline if interest had been shown in private fund raising.

Carolyn Halford, a committee member representing the county historical commission, questioned whether the district could find an educational program that could be housed at the structure which at different times has sheltered college, high school, junior high and elementary students.

"I admit the committee was not able to find a better solution," said Ms. Halford, adding that she was not convinced that demolition was the "best solution."

She questioned the validity of figures furnished on costs of various renovations and noted that the committee had no way to verify the truth of costs listed. Ms. Halford said "My continuing concern is that after the building is demolished, there are uses that are going to come up," but the school board has found no use for the building.

"They have no use they want... it for," said Ms. Halford.

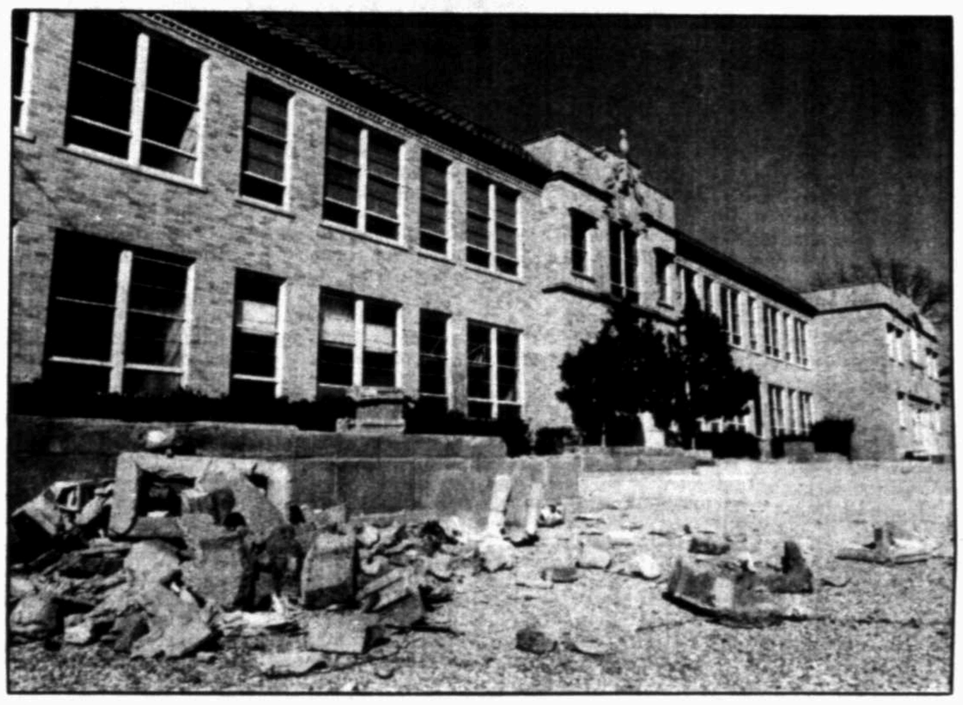
She wondered how the board expected private interests to donate money without an amount and purpose being identified.

"There isn't any other structure in this city that represents the development of education the way that building does," she said. Over the years it has been Odessa High, Crockett Junior High, the first site of Odessa College and temporarily housed elementary students when their building was under construction.

Committee member David Stice, who opposes the demolition, referred to petitions from an old-timers luncheon which suggested that the building be used for a magnet school. He also favored development of the structure as a health center for use by school teachers.

Shirley Huffaker and Sam Gipson, the two board members on the committee, said they were not in favor of demolishing the building during the meeting. But the reports final recommendation calls for demolition if private monies are not found by June 1.

"All these people concerned, we would like to see them come forward," said Ms. Halford. "I wouldn't consider this over until the wrecking ball arrives."



Window into the past

Most recently known as Crockett Junior High School, this building, left, is now used for storage by the Ector County Indendendent School District. During its 56 years in use, the building also served as the city's first high school, the first site of Odessa College and temporarily housed elementary students. The school's empty halls, above, show that the old building is no longer being used for educating students. Built in 1928, the Ector County school board received a task force report Tuesday that suggested demolition unless private funding could be found for renovation.

Hail Odessa High School
Hats off to thee.

ODESSA — Alumni of Odessa High School recall their school song 40 years after graduation. If school board members follow the recommendation of a task force assigned to study the future use of the historic building, memories of their school could be all that remains.

The Ector County Independent School District's Board of Trustees discussed briefly the fate of the original Odessa High Tuesday night, while accepting the report which recommended demolition of the building after June 1 unless private donations can rescue it.

One committee member referred to a petition signed by 150 "old timers" at an October 1983 luncheon which asked that the building — which also served as the first site for Odessa College and as a junior high and elementary school during its 56-year career — be left standing. Petitions circulated around the community have netted more than 5,000 signatures supporting its preservation.

Not all the graduates of old Odessa High stayed in Odessa. A large number now live in Midland, but their school-day memories are of their days as Broncos walking the halls of the old building.

"There's a lot of us concerned, but I was the only one concerned enough to go to the meeting," said Margaret Surratt, a graduate of the class of 1941, who attended a previous meeting concerning future use of the structure. She estimated at least 25 Midlanders graduated from the old Odessa High.

"In Midland and Odessa, there are so few old things left," said another former Bronco, Bettysue Caudle. "I would really hate to see them destroy it."

Mrs. Caudle's husband, Fred, was a star halfback on the 1939 football team. He recalls days on the gridiron and at high school.

"Mercy, I hadn't thought about it in years," said Caudle. "It's a pretty good old building. I'd kind of like to see the school stay if they can find a use for it."

Built in 1928, the building was the original Odessa High School. The name and age restrictions were changed in 1945, but the building was in use as Crockett Junior High School until 1981.

It was the original site for the city's junior college. When construction of Fly Elementary was not complete in 1982, its student body used the old building for half the year.

But now, the building is used for storage. Old "Crockett Band" and "Crockett High" decals still stick to windows, but there is little sign of use.

"I'd hate for them to tear it down," said Corene Albright, who was a cheerleader and part of the school's last graduating class in 1945. Along with memories of school — "I remember those cheerleaders cheerleading so well" — Mrs. Albright recalls helping her mother operate the "Casparis School Store."

Before the cafeteria was constructed, students crossed the street to the store, which sold everything from groceries to notebooks. An old-fashioned soda fountain supplied Cherry Cokes and other soft drinks for past Bronco classes.

"I grew up working in it," she said.

"Everybody either went over there to buy their food or brought their lunch," recalled Mrs. Caudle.

But the store is no more. Mrs. Albright would like to see the old school saved.

"I was a true Bronco," she said. "I went there every day of my life. It'll make me feel bad, it really will." She watched the destruction of the previous school, a red sandstone structure that housed all grades before the construction of old Odessa High.

"If nothing else, if just the original school building is kept, I'll be happy," said Mrs. Surratt. The task force suggested the original portion be kept, but only if private funding can be found.

"I'm a Midlander now," she said "They don't care very much about Midlanders going to the Odessa school board meetings."

But the task force has suggested demolition unless private interests generate the funds to maintain the building. The school district is faced with budget cuts in the aftermath of the Jan. 21 rollback election.

"There's so many people that don't have old ties there," said Mrs. Surratt. "They don't really understand."

The school song, "The Corral," was written by an Odessa High student in the 1940s. Should the school board follow the task force recommendation, it may be the building's swan song.

Group of Midlanders complain to council about crime problem

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"You get what you pay for," Neal Meares told the Midland City Council on Tuesday. And in his opinion, the council isn't devoting enough money to the police department to put a halt on crime.

Meares, as head of a group of citizens which collectively calls itself Neighbors Against Burglars and Drugs (NABD), said he would be back in a month with some suggestions on what the council and Police Department can do to alleviate the crime problem.

Rather than throwing money at the problem, Mayor G. Thane Akins told Meares and several from NABD that money won't solve the problem. It's citizens banding together to help each other that serves as the biggest deterrent to burglars.

During the council's regular session in City Hall Council Chambers, Meares pointed out the Police Department has two persons in the crime prevention unit "and both are overworked. Police could use an intelligence department to find out where stolen goods are going."

Meares also complained that no "significant" number of officers was added to the staff in 1983, although the city grew in size with annexation, and these officers didn't get a pay raise.

"They're asked to do more for less," Meares said. "You get what you pay for. Evidently, we aren't paying enough." NABD recommended the city raise taxes next year and direct the additional monies to the Police Department.

Last year, there were 1,031 home burglaries in Midland, which translates into 2.8 home burglaries a day, said Meares.

He is involved in a Neighborhood Crime Watch program that includes 700 to 800 homeowners in an area bounded by Cuthbert, Garfield, Golf Course and A streets. That group was initiated after several homes in the area were burglarized. "We also know it's drugs tied into the burglaries. These people are looking for possessions they can fence."

In the almost eight years he has been on the council, Mayor G. Thane Akins said he didn't know of a time when the council wasn't strong on law and order. "Whatever requests they came to us with we tried to meet their needs. We have to rely on professional people to give us an opinion. I don't think you're a professional, and I'm not. What you've said is an indictment of us."

The Police Department is not the council's only concern, noted the mayor. "We have a lot of other things to consider besides just the police department. We've got to do what we can with the revenue we have. A blanket raising of taxes hoping it will cure the crime problem won't get it."

Instead, the best cure is what the citizens are doing. "It's the best thing in preventing crime than by hiring 50 more officers," the mayor added.

A woman asked the council why, if the police department was doing such a good job, were there still house burglaries in Midland.

"This is a pretty well-to-do community," replied Councilman Tom Sloan. "They can get more when they break in here."

From Staff Reports

The Greenwood school board Tuesday evening set trustee elections for April 7.

Three positions are to be filled, those of James Brooks, Ted Benton and Charles Gardner. Benton said he intends to run for re-election, while the other two have not indicated a decision.

Filing dates for the election are Feb. 6 through March 7. Absentee voting will be March 19 through April 3. Because spring break is March 19-23 and personnel will not be at the school, trustees will consider combining their absentee voting with that of Midland County.

The board also voted to hold classes Feb. 20 to make up for a missed school day last week. The date had previously been designated a student holiday for teacher in-service.

In other action, trustees voted to purchase a new school bus, accept the resignation of a speech and drama teacher and hire a replacement.

MISD trustees approve budget guidelines

Board also approves trustee election

Midland school trustees Tuesday approved budget guidelines for maintenance, supplies, travel, library expenses, test materials and graduation.

The recommendation called for an 8½ percent increase, from $1,034,290 to $1,122,418. The figures represent 2.2 percent of the total budget.

In the fall trustees voted to draw up a budget based on a per-student cost of $3,045, up from $2,925 this year. That represented an increase of 4.1 percent.

In other action the board:

—Called the trustee election for April 7. Two positions, those of Ann Page and the late Gary Hopper, will be vacant. Candidates may file between Feb. 6 and March 7. Absentee voting will be March 19 through April 3.

—Accepted a $10,000 donation from The Fasken Foundation and $10,000 from the Mr. and Mrs. Deane Stoltz Fund of the Communities Foundation of Texas Inc.

Both grants are matching donations toward the district's computer program. The district has received $41,000 in gifts, as well as an additional $41,000 from an anonymous foundation, toward the program.

—Authorized advertising of bids for lighting for Midland Memorial Stadium. Estimated cost of $42,000 will be funded with the more than $69,000 in receipts from five football playoff games, not including the state championship.

While average field lighting for most football stadiums is 50 footcandles, that of Midland's stadium is 23. With 60 fewer lamps, the new equipment will raise lighting to an average of 90 footcandles. The new equipment will use less energy, according to plant services director Wilson Heidelberg.

—Gave a standing ovation in honor of retiring police officer Oscar W. "Preacher" Roberts, who has supervised and assisted three generations of students at Midland High School.

Investigator announces candidacy for JP

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dewey Lee

Dewey Lee, chief criminal investigator for District Attorney Vern Martin, today announced his candidacy for Midland County justice of the peace, Place 1, Precinct 1.

Lee, who will be seeking the Republican Party's nomination for the job, will be trying to succeed Peace Justice Charlie Sprayberry, who last week said he would seek another four-year term of office.

Yet another JP contender, Midland schoolteacher Robbie Rucker, later today was to announce her candidacy for the job.

"My primary consideration in coming into this race is what I can bring to this office and how I can best serve the people of Midland County," Lee said.

He cited his expertise in law enforcement and his rapport with fellow officers among his qualifications for the job. He has 23 years in law-enforcement work.

"I sincerely believe the qualifications I will bring to this office will be an asset in the administration of the Justice Court."

He has been the DA's chief investigator since 1977.

"In this position, I do all types of felony investigations, prepare cases and assist in the prosecution of felony offenses in the district courts," Lee said. "Through diligence and hard work, I have been able to collect and return to businesses and individuals several hundred thousand dollars of restitution in felony hot checks, as well as criminal mischiefs, thefts, assaults and various other property offenses."

Lee noted that he carried the DA's "whole load" of criminal investigation for four years until that office hired two additional investigators to assist him when the workload increased.

"I did all the hot checks, all the walk-in investigation, field work, prepared cases for trial, secured the witnesses and assisted in courtroom prosecution of cases," Lee said. "I look back now and wonder how I did it, but we carried on."

Before he joined the district attorney's staff seven years ago, Lee was a criminal investigator for former Midland County Sheriff Ed "Big Ed" Darnell for a year. For 13 years prior to that, he was a deputy sheriff in Phoenix, Ariz. There, he was responsible for "initiating all types of investigations," including traffic accidents and crimes. Before that, he was on the Avondale, Ariz., police force.

Lee is a captain in the Texas State Guard.

I addition to criminal investigation, Lee said he has "worked extensively in civil divisions, which has given me a good insight into the workings and needs of the people of this area."

Lee said he has not become a candidate "just for a job," which in 1984 is paying almost $30,000.

"I am entering this race because I believe I can bring many elements to Place 1 that are presently missing. The Justice of the Peace Courts are created by our constitution," he said, "and serve a very important element in the judicial system of our county. For most people, the Justice Court is their only contact with our judicial system and how they are treated there leaves a lasting impression on them."

In citing the two justices of the peace in Midland, Lee said, "I admire and respect Judge Bob Pine for the job he is doing in Place 2." He said Pine has been carrying approximately 65 percent of the total Justice Court caseload.

"As both Justice Courts share equal jurisdiction in Midland County, parity is one of the main elements that is missing in Place 1. I believe I have a good rapport with the various law enforcement agencies and the people in this county to carry an equal share of the caseload in Place 1."

At 53, Lee said he is "young enough to serve the Justice Court vigorously, yet old enough to have the experience to be fair and impartial, as well as understanding in all matters that come before me."

Commission to study effect of radioactive waste facility

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — The effect a low-level radioactive waste facility would have on local governments in Hudspeth, Borden or Dimmit counties is the subject of a $23,550 study by Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

The commission, a state agency which maintains overviews of how state policy affects local governments, was asked to conduct the study by Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority. The Authority is charged with determining a site for the disposal facility, which is expected to handle all of Texas' low-level radioactive waste by early 1988.

Jim Reed, a research analyst with the commission, has said the study also will examine "how intense the opposition is and whether it would be worthwhile to go ahead" with the the project. "Now, it's a political problem. We're going to stay neutral."

Considerable opposition has been expressed by some local governmental officials to placement of the waste facility in their areas.

Jay Stanford, executive director of the Advisory Commission, said the study also will determine if the facility "will have serious impact on such things as streets, water supply, sewer system, emergency service. We want to find out how this depository site would affect indeterminate programs, if it would cost more money, have an impact on budgets."

For example, he said, heavy truck traffic to and from the facility could create "wear and tear on roads," making necessary increased maintenance or widening of thoroughfares. Additionally, the Advisory Commission will study what effect an influx of employees would have on housing and the counties as a whole.

"We'll be talking to local officials and get hold of their budgets and look at what the results might be," said Stanford.

Initial interview trip will be to Dimmit County next week, he said.

A preliminary report on the study will be given the Waste Disposal Authority by mid-March, with a final preport due by the end of March.

Stanford noted that after a final site is selected by the Authority, the government, by law, must provide impact assistance if needed. The study, he explained, would be instrumental in determining the degree of assistance.

Borden, Dimmit and Hudspeth counties pare being scrutinized most heavily by the Waste Disposal Authority, but 13 other counties also are still under consideration.

Serious negotiations are under way with The University of Texas for land in Hudspeth County and a private landowner in Dimmit County.

After final selection of a site an environmental study will be conducted and an operating license obtained from Texas Department of Health.

The facility is expected to have a payroll of $500,000-$750,000 and employ 20-25 persons, said Reed.

Ex-Howard County probation officer indicted

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — A former Howard County chief probation officer was indicted along with five other Big Spring men by a federal grand jury in San Angelo for cocaine distribution.

Harold Gaida Talbot, 37, president of Talco Inc., an electronics security company which sells burglar alarms, was indicted on four counts: two of distribution of cocaine and two of conspiring to possess and distribute cocaine from Aug. 4, 1981 to Feb. 5, 1982.

Talbot, a former chief probation officer in Howard County, was also a former investigator in the 118th district attorney's office.

Also indicted was Robert Mendoza, 35, on seven counts of cocaine distribution, from Sept. 3, 1982 to Oct. 31, 1983. His occupation was not known.

Santos Arzola Mendoza Sr., 56, Santos Arzola Mendoza Jr., 21, and Felipe Juarez, 55, were indicted on four counts of distribution of cocaine between May 13, 1983 and July 1, 1983. Mendoza Sr. was named in all four counts, Juarez in three and Mendoza Jr. in one.

The younger Mendoza, a painter in Trini's Body Shop, was also indicted Oct. 29, 1980, for possession of marijuana but was not convicted, according to records. Juarez pleaded guilty and received a six-year probated sentence for delivery of marijuana April 13, 1982, in Big Spring, records indicate.

Richard Dalton Carr, 28, an employee of Cosden Oil and Chemical Co., was indicted on two counts of distributing cocaine on April 27 and April 28, 1983.

Other indictments handed down by the grand jury in San Angelo included three counts against Noel Lee Sanchez, a former cook at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, for accepting money from Gary Grove. Sanchez is accused of taking $1,500 for providing liquor for inmates at the camp last November. The two other counts charge him with introducing alcoholic beverages into the camp Nov. 21 and Nov. 25.

Lutheran minister added to hospital staff

From Staff Reports

Alan Williams, an ordained Lutheran minister, has been added to the staff at Midland Memorial Hospital as chaplain and director of pastoral care.

Living in Canada for the past 12 years, Williams had served in congregational and chaplaincy assignments. More recently, he began a program of pastoral care at the Cross Cancer Institute, a research and treatment center in Edmonton, Alberta.

With a home care nurse, he developed a team approach program that focused on reducing the suffering and stress of the terminally-ill patient and his or her family members. This work led him to serve on a palliative care committee which presented a comprehensive proposal to the provincial government for a program in Edmonton.

Williams also initiated a bereaved parents' support group which resulted in a branch of Compassionate Friends forming in the city; provided six clergy three-day residency programs in cancer care and ministry; and served as president of the Alberta Pastoral Care Association, which initiated a conference on team building in hospital and community care settings.

He received his bachelor of arts degree from Capital University in Columbus, Ohio, and attended Evangelical Lutheran Theological Seminary. He did doctoral work at Indiana University Medical Center and earned his Doctor of Ministry in pastoral counseling at Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis, Ind.

While a student, he worked with the mentally ill as a chaplain in Columbus State Hospital and with general medical care patients at Indiana University Medical Center.

Reservoirs unsafe

Over half of Britain's 2,000 large water reservoirs are more than 100 years old and many are considered unsafe.

Midlanders Convenience store robbed of cash

From Staff Reports

The city's first convenience store robbery of the new year occurred early today when a man entered the 7-Eleven at Midkiff and Wadley shortly after 1 a.m. and escaped on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash. He was described as black, about 6-feet tall and weighing 180 lbs.

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Bert Kunkle of 4800 W. Storey said he returned home Tuesday and found his front door ajar and the house ransacked. Taken were silverware, liquor, a cordless phone and $300 in change. Total loss was placed at $1,465.

And Augusta C. Spencer of 3100 N. Fairgrounds Road told officers she returned Tuesday from a weekend trip to find tools, a shotgun, jewelry and $50 in cash had been taken in a break-in of her mobile home. Entry was gained through a window.

Fire of undetermined origin caused "very heavy damage" to a two-story house owned by Gene Gross at 125 Cheryl Lane Tuesday morning. It was erroneously reported in Tuesday's Reporter-Telegram that the home had been levelled by the blaze, which took 2,150 gallons of water to extinguish. Six fire department units responded to the 7:26 a.m. call and firemen spent more than four hours at the scene.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon reviewed last year's statistics, which reflected an increase in house burglaries. The number went from 744 in 1982 to 1,031 in 1983. But the total number of offenses went down, from 6,304 in 1982 to 6,197 last year.

In the number of crimes, 56 percent had someone arrested last year in Midland, compared with the national average of 19 percent. "By comparison with the rest of the nation, our police force is doing a bang-up job," said Sloan.

As to money, the council noted it is paying $600,000 for a computer system to be installed in the Police Department that would speed up identification of stolen items.

Another member of NABD said, "We're not here to criticize. Whatever you want to do, we're here to help you. But we don't want to do nothing."

For the February meeting, NABD will research crime statistics in neighboring West Texas towns, such as Lubbock and Abilene, said Meares.

Cause of ship's gash remains unknown

HOUSTON (AP) — The cause of a 25-30 foot gash found in a sunken American drilling ship remains unknown, an official of the ship's owner said.

Divers examining the wreck of the Glomar Java Sea found a large indented fracture which ran from top to bottom of the starboard side, Fred Glander, drilling superintendent for Global Marine Drilling Co., said Tuesday.

The split is three to four feet wide at its broadest point, he told a panel of marine investigators trying to determine the cause of the wreck.

Glander and a diving crew visited the ship about one week after its Oct. 25 sinking to explore and film the wreck, which lies on its side in 320 feet of water.

Glander narrated as investigators viewed a brief portion of the videotape.

The 5,930-ton ship, leased by ARCO China Inc., sank at its drilling site about 60 miles south of China's Hainan Island and 200 miles east of Vietnam when a typhoon in the area brought 75 mph winds and 26-foot waves.

Poor visibility required the divers to film the ship wreck at close range, making its sections almost indistinguishable.

Divers also found broken lifeboat lines, which Glander said indicated that crewman may have launched the ship's two lifeboats. Each lifeboat accommodated up to 64 people.

Other structural damage included broken portholes, which probably burst from ocean bottom pressure, Glander said.

Divers also tried to film through a large broken window in the ship, Glander said, but "it was completely chaos on the inside. Everything was turned over."

The panel expected to hear testimony today from several Global Marine employees, including Bruce Leavitt, the company's vice president of drilling; Dick Johns, vice president of operations-support; and safety and training manager Dan Hansen. Also expected to testify were assistant engineers Ken Rice and Charles Iverson.

Earlier testimony Tuesday included Bill Riddle, vice president of drilling for Global Marine, who was the last person to talk to crewmen over the radio. Coast Guard spokesman Lt. John Baker said Riddle testified that crewmen reported they were putting on their life jackets and preparing for the storm, but specified no plans to evacuate.

In other testimony, Capt. Bill Ledbetter, master of one of the ship's alternate crews, said he would not have launched the lifeboats during the severe weather conditions of the typhoon. Ledbetter said he had studied the tracks of typhoons that had swept through the area during the past 20 years and found that "a very small percentage of them" had moved across the site where the Java Sea sank.

Asked if he thought Capt. Gustav Swenson, who was in command of the ship when it sank, should have tried to run from the storm, Ledbetter said, "I would have to have been there to be able to answer."

No lifeboats, bodies or survivors have been found from the ship's 81-man crew, which included 37 Americans and 35 Chinese. Names of the missing crewmen were released Monday by U.S. Coast Guard officials, who say they still hope survivors will be found.

The U.S. and Chinese governments are separately investigating the possibility of survivors.

Chagra charged with ambushing prosecutor

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra remained subdued during a hearing where he was formally charged with the ambush of a federal prosecutorwa "joke" when he learned which judge would preside over the case.

Chagra, acquitted of charges he masterm a "joke" when he learned which judge would preside over the case.

Chagra, acquitted of charges he masterminded a federal judge's murder, appeared before a U.S. magistrate Tuesday to hear that he has been charged with plotting and paying for the November 1978 ambush of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

U.S. Magistrate Robert B. O'Connor detailed the indictment to ensure Chagra, who will enter a plea at a later hearing, understood the charges against him.

Chagra answered O'Connor's questions with barely audible acknowledgements until he learned that Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions had been appointed to the case.

Sessions presided over the trial where Chagra was convicted of obstructing justice in the investigation into the May 29, 1979, slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The judge also sentenced him to 30 years without parole for a continuing criminal enterprise conviction.

"How do I happen to hit Judge Sessions every time?" Chagra asked the magistrate Tuesday. "You mean judges get to pick who they want to prosecute?"

When informed that Sessions had been randomly assigned, Chagra laughed loudly and said, "It was randomly selected? What a joke!"

The two-count indictment issued in the Kerr ambush named Chagra and James R. Kearns, who is accused of actually pulling the trigger.

At the time of the attack, Kerr had been directing a federal investigation into unlawful drug traffic by Chagra and members of his family.

Kerr often prosecuted drug cases in Wood's court, and the two men were ambushed only six months apart.

Attorney Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas, Nev., represented Chagra during the Wood trial. O'Connor agreed to Chagra's request Tuesday that Goodman again be appointed.

Doctor said he found drug in tissues

GEORGETOWN (AP) — At the end of a long day of often-numbing scientific testimony, after the defense tried one more time to keep the testimony out, jurors in the nurse Genene Jones murder trial heard the evidence that could help convict Ms. Jones of killing a baby.

The words came from an Austrian-born toxicologist who tested tissues taken from the little girl who allegedly died of a drug injected by the nurse.

"In my opinion, I detected, identified and measured succinylcholine present in a number of the specimens" taken from Chelsea McClellan's body, Dr. Fredric Rieders testified Tuesday.

Prosecutors say it was succinylcholine — a powerful and hard to detect muscle relaxant — that killed Chelsea after a September 1982 visit to a Kerrville pediatrician's office.

Ms. Jones was a nurse at the office, and she gave 15-month-old Chelsea two injections that were supposed to carry routine immunizations.

Rieders, who runs a suburban Philadelphia toxicology lab, did the tissue tests at the Sweden lab of the poison expert who developed the process.

On Monday, State District Judge John Carter turned down a defense motion to bar the testimony. Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire has called the test a "magic wand" technique not accepted by the scientific community.

Late Tuesday afternoon, when Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton asked Rieders the key question, defense lawyer Burt Carnes interrupted:

"We'd like to raise our objection again," Carnes said.

But Carter said the jurors could hear from Rieders about the tests, developed by Dr. Bo Holmstedt of Stockholm.

In Tuesday testimony, Holmstedt said succinylcholine can produce "horrifying" effects. The condition he described was similar to Chelsea's reaction, as recounted Monday by Petti McClellan, the girl's mother.

Mrs. McClellan testified Monday that her daughter's eyes looked strange after the injections. Holmstedt said Tuesday that the eyelids are among the first muscles to be affected by succynlcholine.

Mrs. McClellan testified her daughter seemed to stop breathing after the shots. Holmstedt said the last muscle to be blocked by succinylcholine is the diaphram, crucial to breathing.

Earlier Tuesday, the defense asked for a mistrial after Carter scolded television cameramen for "sticking" television cameras in jurors' faces.

Carter denied the mistrial motion, but promised to punish cameramen who violated his order against photographing jurors in the murder trial.

The judge said jurors had complained that cameramen "harassed them all over the (courthouse) square" on Monday. He said jurors reported television cameras were aimed into their cars as they left the courthouse area.

"The stations that photographed jurors will be placed off of county property," Carter said. "I am going to find out who did it."

"They don't want you sticking cameras in their faces," he said.

Glenn calls for surtax on incomes

John Glenn

FORT WORTH (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, winding up his two-day Texas tour, criticized President Reagan for cutting federal programs and former Vice President Walter Mondale, his chief rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, for promising to expand them.

Glenn, D-Ohio, told audiences in Abilene and Fort Worth on Tuesday that a 10 percent federal surtax on personal and corporate incomes is needed to reduce the federal budget deficit.

"That's strong medicine, to ask for a tax increase in an election year," Glenn said. "But it's honest, it's straightforward. It's a lot better than making promises you can't keep."

Speaking in Fort Worth, Glenn said that Mondale "promises everybody everthing and doesn't really worry much about what the bill's going to be in the end."

Earlier Tuesday in Abilene, Glenn said that Mondale promises would add $89 billion to $169 billion annually to the federal budget.

Glenn, citing a Mondale proposal to match foreign governments' subsidies to their industries "dollar for dollar," said such a program would cost from $50 billion to $130 billion a year.

"My campaign promises are on a pay-as-you-go basis," Glenn said.

During a news conference in Abliene, Glenn called Reagan "penny-wise and pound-stupid," and said the president's cutbacks in the number of Internal Revenue Service agents falls into that category. Glenn said an IRS agent returns fivefold his keep in increased revenue collections.

Glenn said he would seek to implement the 10 percent surtax as soon as possible, if elected. He also favors a postponement of tax indexing provisions.

Bank official indicted

ABILENE (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a former vice president of the Abilene National Bank on allegations that he failed to report a $38,500 cash transaction and procured favors in connection with loans, according to court records.

Duwayne Nall was named in a three-count indictment, returned Tuesday in San Angelo and filed in federal court in Abilene.

The indictment alleges that Nall, also a former loan officer at the bank, failed to file a report of the cash transaction on Jan. 19, 1982.

Federal law requires reports on cash transactions in excess of $10,000.

Nall was also accused of requiring that he receive $50,000 for real estate in Palo Pinto County as a condition for a loan to Terry Davis, president of Western Power Tong Inc. of Abilene, on Jan. 14, 1982.

The indictment said the purchase price was paid by Davis to Nall. Authorities said the real estate was a lake cabin at Possum Kingdom which was purchased above the market price.

Nall also is accused of procuring a $200,000 promissory note, payable to himself, in return for a $4.25 million loan.

TSTA endorses Mondale

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas State Teachers Association has endorsed former Vice President Walter Mondale in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, TSTA President Dale Young said Tuesday.

Young said the endorsement was voted by the TSTA State Executive Committee on a recommendation from the association's political action committee, TEPAC.

"During his 12 years in the U.S. Senate, Mondale has been an unwavering advocate for public education, leading fights that created and supported education programs," Young said.

Body found in trash receptacle

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The body of a 61-year-old man was found found early Tuesday by city garbage collection workers who said he apparently had climbed into trash receptacle downtown to sleep.

Police identified the man as Tommy Mitchel Wilkerson. An autopsy, which could determine if the man was crushed by a garbage truck, was ordered by the Wichita Falls medical examiner's office.

Wilkerson apparently had been in a large receptacle emptied into a trash collection truck, said Joe Leonard, transfer station manager.

Military institute starts at A&M

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M officials said the program at the university's newly authorized Military Studies Institute will feature special seminars and lectures on the armed forces.

The scholarly institute, which begins operation Feb. 1, will sponsor research on past and current military topics and support ongoing teaching as well as special seminars and lectures by scholars and representatives of the military, government and industry, officials said Tuesday.

Texas A&M President Frank E. Vandiver said said the institute would also serve as a depository for military documents and related items of historical significance while also providing a facility for studying defense policy.

Paper: Manhole used in getaway

DALLAS (AP) — Three armed men who kidnapped a banker's family and escaped with an undisclosed ransom used a false-bottomed trash can placed over a sewer manhole to aid their getaway, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The newspaper quoted a police source as saying the extortionists carried out the scheme "like a military operation."

Robert J. Bigham Jr., president of Promenade National Bank, dropped an undisclosed amount of money into a trash can Friday morning while the three gunmen held his wife and daughter hostage at their home.

But law officers never saw anyone step up to the trash can, which was placed over a manhole leading to sewer lines, the source told the newspaper.

White appoints school regents

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Tuesday appointed Ed Aiken Jr. of Sweetwater, Gerald Phariss of Seagoville and H. Gene Evans of Waco as regents at Texas State Technical Institute for terms extending to August 1979.

Plant conversion proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin city councilman has proposed that the partly built South Texas Nuclear Project, beset by delays and cost overruns, be converted to a coal-burning power plant.

Roger Duncan said Tuesday that he would take the idea to the next meeting of the project partners, scheduled for Feb. 28. The city of Austin is involved in the project along with San Antonio, Corpus Christi and Houston Lighting & Power Co.

The proposal follows last week's announcement that three Ohio utilities plan to convert the William H. Zimmer nuclear power plant near Cincinnati to a coal-burning facility.

Duncan said the South Texas Nuclear Project is less than half completed, and much of the work done could be converted for use in a coal-burning plant.

PUC counsel recommends all or nothing

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim Boyle of the Office of Public Utility Counsel says Southwestern Bell and AT&T Communications are conducting a "shell game" that could make it more expensive to call long distance within Texas.

General counsel Allen King of the Public Utility Commission said Tuesday as far as the PUC staff is concerned the commission should grant AT&T $103.7 million in additional long-distance rates, or nothing.

The staff recommendation prefaced a hearing Tuesday at which PUC examiner Phillip Holder reviewed AT&T's request for an immediate increase of $115.4 million in intrastate long-distance rates. This would amount to an average 10.9 percent hike in long-distance rates.

Holder has rejected AT&T's request once, and the company also failed twice this month to get Austin courts to grant the increase.

Asked about one theory that lower long-distance rates would result from the court order that made AT&T Communications and Southwestern Bell separate entities on Jan. 1, Boyle said, "I think we've got a little bit of a shell game here...We have Southwestern Bell, we're supposed to watch that hand for a minute, and then all of a sudden our attention is directed to the other hand, AT&T.

"The problem is that both of them are grabbing for more than they are entitled to had divestiture not occurred, and for that reason I'm very fearful that we're going to see, perhaps, a long-distance rate increase that we shouldn't see here."

King said the staff's recommendations for $103.7 million or no increase depends on which test the three-member PUC uses.

King said if the PUC sticks with the "primary test" of whether AT&T shows a positive cash flow, the staff recommendation is zero. However, he said, "since this case did arise under very unusual circumstances, the commission may decide that it's appropriate to utilize what we call the 'good cause' exception to the normal application of the interim rate rule."

Should the commission use the "escape clause," King said, the staff recommendation would be $103.7 million.

The "unusual circumstances" King mentioned undoubtedly is the federal court-ordered divestiture of American Telephone & Telegraph.

King said the staff had shown that AT&T is earning a positive cash flow, but he added, "We have remained neutral as to which approach they (the PUC) deem appropriate. That is their decision to make."

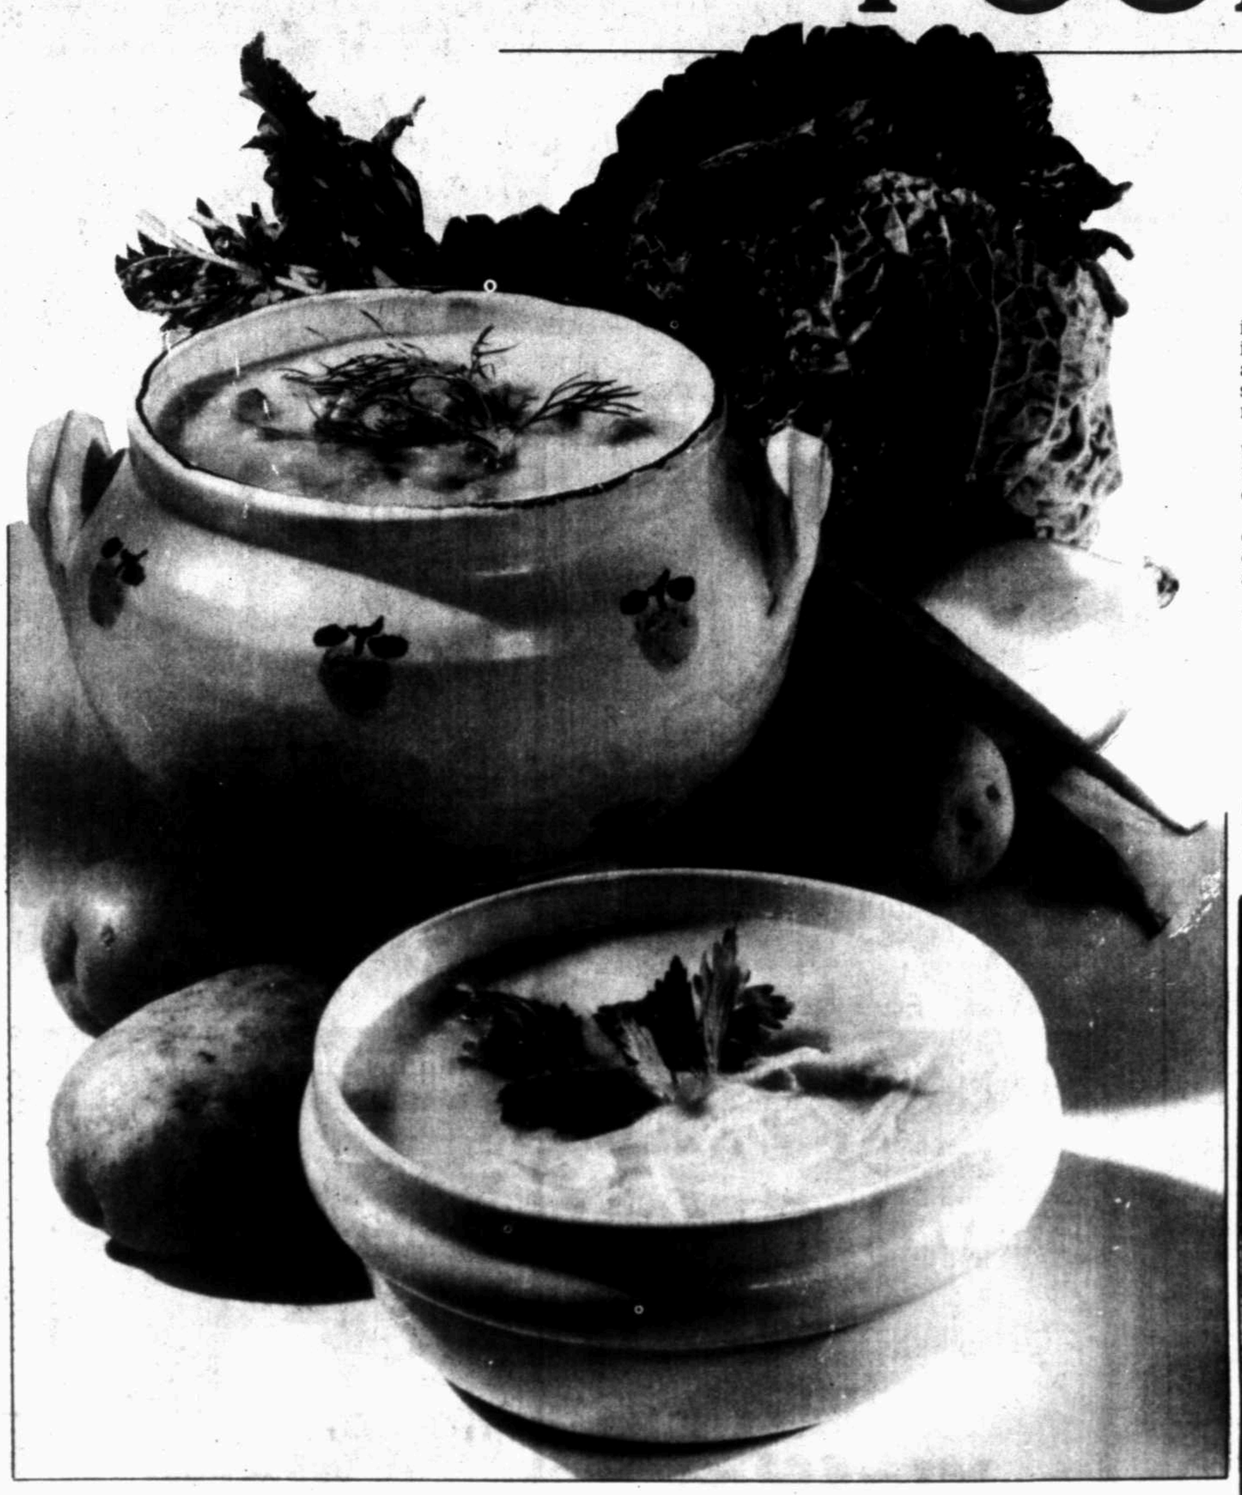
FOOD



This Potato Soup Base allows unlimited variations with the addition of vegetables, meats and seasonings.

Leftovers spice up soup base

From Staff Reports

The National Nutrition Consortium of Washington, D.C. found that consumers think of foods in three basic groups: (1) foods eaten because they are enjoyed, (2) foods eaten because they are considered healthy, and (3) foods not eaten at all, no matter how "healthy" they may be.

A medium potato provides 35 percent of the U.S. RDA of vitamin C, 20 percent of vitamin B-6, 15 percent of iodine and 10 percent of niacin, copper and iron, all for only 100 calories.

Making a potato soup base is easy and economical. Once you make the base the variations are endless. Leftover meats and vegetables can be added, as well as your own favorite seasonings.

Here are three variations on the potato soup base:

TRIO OF POTATO VEGETABLE SOUPS

POTATO SOUP BASE

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, sliced
5 cups boiling water
2 tablespoons instant chicken or vegetable bouillon
1-1/2 pounds potatoes (4 to 5 medium), peeled and sliced 1/8-inch thick

In three-quart saucepan over medium heat saute onion in butter for five minutes. Add water, bouillon and potatoes. Bring to boiling. Cover and cook gently until potatoes are tender, about 10 minutes. In two batches blend until smooth in electric blender. Return to saucepan. Use as a base for one of the following soups.

HUNGARIAN POTATO CABBAGE SOUP

Mix into soup base three cups lightly packed shredded cabbage and one teaspoon dill weed. Simmer 10 minutes. Mix in salt and pepper to taste.

CHEDDAR POTATO AND CELERY SOUP

Mix into soup base two cups thinly sliced celery and 1/2 teaspoon thyme. Simmer 10 minutes stir in 1-1/2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese and salt and pepper to taste.

CURRIED POTATO CARROT SOUP

Mix into soup base two cups lightly packed shredded carrots, two tablespoons chopped parsley and one to two teaspoons curry powder. Simmer 10 minutes. Mix in salt and pepper to taste.

Makes about two quarts or six to eight servings.

Note: Cooked diced poultry or meat, shrimp or sliced sausage may be added to soups and heated through for main dishes.

This steaming tureen of Bouillabaisse fits right in with today's elegantly simple, nutrition-minded style of entertaining.

Seafood chowder part of menu trend

French cooks will probably never agree on exactly how to make a classic Bouillabaisse since every area of the French Mediterranean claims its own "authentic" version. We do know that this elegant seafood chowder originated as a simple fisherman's soup, although true lovers of Bouillabaisse insist that it was invented by Venus, goddess of love, as a treat for her handsome husband.

Knowledgable American cooks have been treating their guests to various adaptations of this hearty main-dish soup for years. Now it appears they were in the forefront of several trends.

Americans are eating more fish than ever, according to a recent American Food Preferences Study. In fact U.S. fish consumption climbed 20 percent from 1970 to 1980.

Chicken and turkey consumption jumped 24 and 31 percent respectively during the same period, while complex carbohydrates such as rice, pasta, ready-to-eat cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables showed significant gains. Cheese was shown to have gained a 53 percent increase in usage over a decade ago.

Attitudes and lifestyles are changing. More people are concerned about health, fitness and nutrition.

But cooking is an art — which brings us back to Bouillabaisse, a traditional dish that seems made to order for today's tastes and easy style of entertaining.

BOUILLABAISSE

1 cup sliced onion
1 can (about 16 oz.) tomatoes, cut up and drained
4 medium cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 medium bay leaf
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cans (10-3/4-oz. each) condensed chicken broth
2 soup cans water
2 medium potatoes, sliced
Generous dash ground saffron or tumeric
1 pound fillets white fish, cut in 2-inch pieces
1 pound fillets red snapper, cut in 2-inch pieces
12 small fresh clams, scrubbed
1/2 pound medium shrimp (31-35 per pound), shelled and deveined

In large saucepan cook onion and tomatoes with garlic, parsley, bay leaf and pepper in oil until tender. Add broth, water, potatoes and saffron. Bring to boil; reduce heat. Simmer five minutes. Add remaining ingredients except shrimp; simmer five minutes. Add shrimp; simmer five minutes more or until done. Stir gently now and then. Remove bay leaf. Makes about 16 cups, 16 servings.

Chowder originally created to honor fishermens' safety

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Ask for a definition of chowder and a dispute as strong as the division between New England and Manhattan loyalists is likely to boil up.

"It's a thick soup made with fish and milk," some will assert. "It has to have salt pork," another insists. "Potatoes are the definitive ingredient," someone else will put forth.

The word chowder derives from the French chaudiere, a kettle. Some sources describe the pot as an enormous copper cauldron where French fishermen, returning to their coastal villages, would toss parts of the day's catch for the community to concoct a soup in honor of the men's safe return from the sea.

Of course no one would argue that clam chowder, whether awash in cream or tomato, cannot withstand any challenge to its position as leader of the pack.

NEW ENGLAND CLAM CHOWDER

2 tblsp. butter or margarine
1 small onion, diced
1-2 cup diced celery
2 cups cubed peeled potatoes
2 cups water
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon black pepper
2 cups milk
1 (7 1-2 -ounce) can minced clams
Paprika

Melt butter in large saucepan. Add onion and celery and cook until tender but not browned. Add potato, water, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer until potato is tender, about 15 minutes. Add milk and clams and heat. Serve in warmed bowls and sprinkle with paprika. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MUSSEL CHOWDER

1-2 onion, chopped
1 stalk celery, sliced
4 shallots, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1-4 cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon olive oil
1-2 cup flour
5 cups fish stock
1 cup dry white wine
3 1-2 cups cubed potatoes
2 1-2 cups half-and-half
1-2 teaspoon fines herbes
Salt, pepper
1 1-2 to 2 pounds green and-or blue mussels
1-2 to 1 pound large shrimp in shells
Chopped parsley

Saute onion, celery, shallots and garlic in butter and olive oil until tender. Blend in flour. Add stock and wine and bring to boil. Add potatoes and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. Add half-and-half. Stir in fines herbes and season to taste with salt and pepper. Cook over low heat just until very hot. Add mussels and shrimps. Cover and cook until mussels open and shrimp turn bright pink, about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SOUR GRASS CHOWDER

2 quarts water
2 cups chopped cooked smoked pork or leftover ham
1-2 cup barley
2 cups diced potatoes
2 carrots, peeled and diced
2 stalks celery, with leaves, diced
1 cup sauerkraut, rinsed and drained
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Salt, pepper
Sour cream

Bring water to boil in large pot. Add pork and barley and simmer, covered, 20 minutes. Add potatoes, carrots and celery and cook until potatoes are just tender, about 15 minutes. Add sauerkraut and parsley and cook about 10 minutes longer or until barley is cooked and vegetables are tender. Season to taste with salt, if desired, and pepper. Serve in individual soup bowls with dollop of sour cream, if desired. Makes about 8 servings.

CORN CHOWDER WITH CHILES AND CHEESE

1-4 pound bacon slices or chorizo, chopped
1 cup chopped onion
1-2 cup chopped celery
1-4 cup chopped celery leaves
1 (4-oz.) can diced green chiles, drained
Dash cumin
2 tablespoons flour
1 (16-oz.) can whole-kernel corn
3 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon black pepper
1 1-2 cups shredded jack cheese
Avocado slices

Fry bacon in saucepan, then remove and drain on paper towels. Set aside. Pour off all but 3 tablespoons fat. Add onion, celery, celery leaves and chiles. Cook until vegetables are tender, about 8 minutes. Add cumin and flour and stir until blended. Add undrained corn, milk, salt and pepper. Cook and stir until soup comes to boil and is slightly thickened. Just before serving, stir in 1 cup cheese. Pour into soup bowls and sprinkle with remaining cheese and bacon. Garnish with avocado slices. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

VEGETARIAN CHOWDER

4 cups water
2 potatoes, diced
3 carrots, diced
1 onion, diced
1 stalk celery, sliced
3 vegetable bouillon cubes
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon white pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 bay leaves
1 (1-pound) can tomatoes, crushed
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 zucchini, halved lengthwise, sliced
1 cup sour cream

Bring 2 cups water to boil. Add 1 potato and cook until very tender. Turn into blender or food processor and blend until smooth. Set aside.

Put remaining water in pot and add remaining potato, carrots, onion, celery, bouillon cubes, salt, pepper, garlic and bay leaves. Stir in potato puree. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Add tomatoes with liquid, tomato sauce and zucchini. Simmer until diced potatoes and squash are tender, about 15 to 20 minutes longer. Serve with dollop of sour cream, if desired. Makes about 8 servings.

MANHATTAN CLAM CHOWDER

1-3 cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon diced salt pork
1 cup diced onion
1 cup diced celery
1 clove garlic, minced
1-4 teaspoon minced shallot
1-4 cup flour
2 cups chicken broth
1 cup clam liquor or juice
1 cup drained minced clams, canned or fresh
1-2 cup diced peeled tomatoes
1 cup diced peeled potatoes, cooked and drained
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 1-2 teaspoons thyme
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon black pepper

Melt butter in large heavy pot. Add salt pork, onion, celery, garlic and shallot and cook until lightly browned. Stir in flour and cook over very low heat 15 minutes, stirring now and then. Combine chicken broth and clam liquid and heat until steaming. Add to vegetables, stir until smooth and simmer 40 minutes. Add clams, tomatoes and potatoes and simmer 10 minutes. Add parsley, thyme and salt and pepper. Makes about 4 servings.

HEALTHY NEW ENGLAND CLAM CHOWDER

2 tablespoons margarine
1 large onion, finely chopped
1 (8-ounce) bottle clam juice
1 cup water
2 to 3 medium potatoes, peeled and diced
2 (7 1-2 -ounce) cans minced clams
2 cups nonfat milk
1 small can evaporated skim milk
Salt, pepper

Melt margarine in large saucepan. Add onion and saute until limp. Add clam juice, water and potatoes. Simmer until potatoes are tender. Add clams and milks. Heat slowly over low heat about 45 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes about 6 servings.

'Negative aspects' hard to find

By ERMA BOMBECK

A couple in England who wanted to adopt a child were turned down because they were too happy and officials said, "The child would not be exposed to the negative aspects of life."

Boy, that's something we all fight every day, isn't it?

With a houseful of kids dancing around, spilling sugar, destroying furniture, clogging up the toilet, borrowing your car, and changing clothes every three hours, it's really hard not to "go with the flow" and succumb to terminal happiness.

That's why, early in motherhood, I made up my mind that my kids were going to get all the advantages of being exposed to the "negative aspects of life" if I had to sit up nights.

It was a rotten job, but someone had to do it.

My children have never told me to my face, but I hear from other people they have declared me the best bluebird of misery ever to come down the pike.

I try. "Negative aspects" are more effective when a child is happy.

Example: You have just told your child he can go with you on an airplane to visit your sister in Pennsylvania. He jumps up and down with ecstasy and you say, "You keep bobbing up and down like that and you're going to hit your head on the cupboard and end up in the hospital with a concussion and you can just stay home."

Prom nights can also be made depressing if you try. "You look wonderful, but if you're not home at curfew, we're going to be waiting up for you and you'll regret this night for the rest of your life."

Even the occasion of a new bicycle is fertile ground for negativism. "Happy birthday! And remember, if you so much as leave this bike unlocked, just once . . . it's gone. They never find them and you'll be back to pedaling your feet!"

Frankly, it's hard for me to imagine a home where parents never point out life's pitfalls. They never know hostility. They never know anger. What do they talk about?

Sometimes, I feel I spoil my children with so many advantages.

Nontraditional carrot soup recipes differ

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

The most famous carrot soup in culinary history is the French Puree of Carrot Soup called Crecy (Potage de Carottes, dite Crecy).

In 1896, when Fannie Farmer's "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book" first appeared, a recipe for "Crecy Soup" was included.

For many years after Fannie Farmer, recipes for American carrot soups were sparse. But in recent years they have appeared in abundance and in several versions. One version uses a white sauce base. Another version uses only cream for flavoring and thickening, and sometimes includes potatoes.

One of the most interesting carrot soup variations I have found was given by Trader Vic, the well-known restaurateur and cookbook author. This recipe adds nutmeg and a soupcon of peanut butter — a piquant and surprising combination.

CARROT SOUP

1 small (1⅓ ounces) onion, finely chopped (¼ cup)
1 pound carrots minus tops, pared and sliced ⅛-inch thick (4 loosely packed cups)
Two 13¾-ounce cans clear chicken broth
¾ cup water
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1½ tablespoons cream-style peanut butter
¼ cup heavy cream

In a 3-quart saucepan bring to a boil the onion, carrot, chicken broth, water and nutmeg; simmer, covered, until carrots are tender — 20 minutes. Cool enough to whirl in an electric blender.

In the blender, whirl half the carrot mixture until smooth; turn into a saucepan. Turn the remaining carrot mixture into the blender and add the peanut butter; whirl until smooth; add to the first batch of soup. Stir in the cream.

Reheat soup, stirring often, and serve at once. Or refrigerate in a tightly covered container and reheat at serving time. If used, garnish with parsley.

Makes 6 servings.

Cranberries featured in salad

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

CRANBERRY WALDORF MOLDED SALAD

No sugar is added.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 cups cranberry juice cocktail
1 medium (4 ounces) red eating apple, unpeeled and cubed (¼ inch) to make about 1 cup
2 small inner ribs celery, diced (¼ inch) to make about ½ cup
Lettuce, mayonnaise and coarsely broken walnuts

In a 1-quart measure sprinkle gelatin over 1 cup of the cranberry cocktail and let soften — about 5 minutes. In a small saucepan heat remaining cranberry cocktail until it begins to boil; pour over gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add apple and celery; chill until partly thickened. Stir to distribute apple and celery. Turn into six ½-cup molds or 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. At serving time unmold and garnish with lettuce, mayonnaise and walnuts. Makes 6 servings.

Pineapple, papaya combined

PINEAPPLE PAPAYA

Easy, delectable and repeated by request.

Turn an 8¼-ounce can of chunk pineapple in heavy syrup (undrained) into a medium-size serving bowl. Pare a 1-pound ripe papaya and cut in half lengthwise; scoop out seeds and discard. Cut papaya into pieces about the size of the pineapple chunks; add to the pineapple with 2 tablespoons domestic or imported kirsch and mix gently. Cover tightly and chill until serving time. Makes 6 servings. —(AP)

BETTER BUSINESS

Careless consumer may be stampeded by beef ads

By LINDA TRUITT

With busy schedules and escalating prices, many Permian Basin residents are deciding to buy goods in quantity when they see a "special" advertised. While most of the time this practice makes sense, the consumer can wind up being a loser if he's not careful, particularly when buying meat in bulk.

A practice used by certain meat companies in the past involved "bait and switch" advertising. An advertisement would entice customers into the store by offering meat at low prices. When they asked to see the advertised beef the butcher showed them an unappealing fatty piece of meat. The butcher would then proceed to discourage purchase of the advertised meat and to encourage the purchase of more attractive, higher-priced beef.

Also these merchants often exaggerated the quality of the higher-priced beef and misrepresented the amount of fat and bone waste that was lost in the cutting and trimming of the carcass. Sometimes the customer who paid a hefty price for good quality beef later discovered he acutally received a lower and inferior grade.

Meat descriptions in ads are often a key to bait-and-switch practices. Below are some of the label scams that less-than-ethical meat dealers use:

— "Free Steaks." This generally comes with a statement "free steaks for setting up an appointment," or "free steaks for looking over the meat selection." The steaks the consumer gets free will probably be part of the inflated price of the order submitted.

— "Beef Halves." This doesn't mean a "side of beef," which it implies. It means an assortment of beef cuts that may not even come from the same animal. In the meat business a side of beef is a forequarter and a hindquarter from the same beef animal.

— "Beef Order." What does a "beef order" contain? Only the dealer knows. Better find out before you buy.

— "U.S. Fancy Beef." It implies a grade. There is no such grade as "fancy."

— "USDA Grade A." There is no "Grade A" in the U.S. Department of Agriculture meat grades.

— "Graded." All meat is inspected. Unless it bears the designation "prime," "choice" or "good," it is not government graded. Grading and inspection are different.

— "Yield Grade." This is how butchers indicate the percentage of a yield within a grade of trimmed cuts. The scale is one to five. Grade 1 is the highest yield; Grade 5 is the lowest. For example if the ad reads Yield 5 or Y-5, the meat is the highest in waste.

— "Beef Hinds." The usual hindquarter weight is less than 200 pounds. If the order weighs between 300 and 400 pounds the order has been "loaded" with meat from other cheaper parts of the animal.

— "Same As Cash." This time-payment technique may be another scam. The customer will pay for borrowing money in the price of the meat.

— "Executive Cuts." This is the special box section of the ad or meat case in the store. This is your clue to what the retailer is really selling and the real price.

Most bulk meat suppliers are honest but the consumer needs to beware of high-pressure sales tactics as well as bait-and-switch and misleading labels. Watch out for meat deals offering you free chickens, hams, pork chops and other meats and vegetables with a purchase. The cost for this free meat may be hidden in the price of the meat bought.

Monterey Jack cheese gives zest to pasta

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

RIGHT-AWAY MONTEREY PASTA

8-oz. package elbow macaroni
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. all-purpose flour
3 cups milk
12 oz. Monterey Jack cheese, grated medium-fine
Paprika

Cook the macaroni according to package directions. Drain in a colander; cover. In a 2-quart saucepan, over low heat, melt butter. Stir in flour. Off heat, gradually stir in milk, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling.

Spread half the cooked macaroni over the bottom of a buttered shallow 2-quart baking dish. Sprinkle with half the cheese. Layer with remaining macaroni. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Pour the still hot sauce as evenly as possible over the top. Sprinkle with paprika.

Bake uncovered in a preheated 400-degree oven until bubbling around the edges and hot in the center (about 20 minutes). Let stand 5 minutes or so before serving. Cheese will be pully and chewy. Makes 6 servings.

Sundaes made with rum, pineapple

LEILA MUSTACHI'S PINEAPPLE SUNDAES

A New York friend, who hails from Canada, improvised this.

8¼-ounce can crushed pineapple in heavy syrup
2 tablespoons (or more) dark rum
1½ quarts coffee ice cream

Stir together pineapple (undrained) and rum; cover tightly and chill. At serving time top scoops of the ice cream with the pineapple mixture.

Cottage pancakes low-cal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

COTTAGE PANCAKES

Good for calorie-watchers, because they are very thin.

3 large eggs
8 ounces (1 cup) creamstyle cottage cheese
¼ cup unbleached all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoon butter, melted

Into an electric blender turn the eggs, cottage cheese, flour, salt and butter. Whirl until smooth. Onto a well-greased hot (360 degrees) electric griddle, pour the batter by 3 tablespoonfuls (a very scant ¼ cup), well apart. Bake until golden on the bottom and the top is no longer soft in the center; turn and bake until moist sides are golden. As pancakes are made, keep hot in a warm oven. Makes about 14 thin pancakes. Serve with strawberry jam.

Fruit bar has tropical flavor

While winter weather is in an unfriendly mood, set a brighter tone by thinking "warm." Establish a sunny atmosphere quickly by getting out the slides or home movies from a sunny vacation. Or reminisce over photos of the summer backyard barbecue.

Tantalize taste buds into thinking warmer with a tropical-flavored treat like Tropical Fruit Bars. Coconut and pineapple team up in a refreshing and chewy bar.

TROPICAL FRUIT BARS

Pineapple filling (recipe follows)
1 package (13.5 oz.) snack cake mix
1¼ cups quick-cooking oats
½ cup flaked coconut
½ cup margarine, softened
2 tablespoons water
3 tablespoons flaked coconut

Heat oven to 375-F. Prepare pineapple filling — reserve. Mix cake mix (dry), oats, ½ cup coconut, margarine and water; reserve 1 cup. Press remaining crumbly mixture in unreased 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Spread with pineapple filling. Sprinkle reserved crumbly mixture over top. Sprinkle with three tablespoons coconut. Bake until top begins to turn golden brown, 25 to 30 minutes. Cool; cut into bars 2 x 1-1/4-inches. Makes 36 bars.

PINEAPPLE FILLING: Mix one can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in juice, 1/4 cup packed brown sugar and two teaspoons cornstarch in one-quart saucepan. Heat over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear; cool.

DEAR ABBY

Unwed mother made her own choice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently found myself pregnant, and like many other young girls in this situation with no marriage in sight, I had a very big decision to make. I was in no position to support myself and a child.

I considered having an abortion, but when the time came, I couldn't do it; I knew that I had to give that little life a chance.

I then considered adoption, and with my parents' support, I placed my baby for adoption. The unhappiness I suffered was a small sacrifice for the joy I gave a childless couple.

Abby, I want to tell others facing what I faced that there is an alternative to abortion that can make someone happy at the same time.

The pain I suffered was worthwhile in the end. I know that my baby is being raised by parents who really want a child and are able to handle the responsibility of being parents. I couldn't. — NO REGRETS IN MISSOURI

DEAR NO REGRETS: You are to be congratulated for your courage, maturity and unselfishness. Thousands of childless couples are praying for the kind of gift you have made possible. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman with two daughters, ages 8 and 11. I have custody of the girls, but their father has them every other weekend.

My "ex" has recently remarried and joined his wife's church (Baptist). Our children were baptized Catholic and have always attended Mass every Sunday with me.

My "ex" now wants to take the girls to Baptist services on the weekends he has them. He says that neither he nor his pastor sees anything wrong with this.

I think consistency in their religious upbringing is very important — that going back and forth between the Catholic church and the Baptist church will confuse them, so my "ex" should take the girls to Catholic services when he has them for the weekend.

He doesn't see this as a workable solution. Your opinion is needed. — CONSCIENTIOUS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I agree that consistency in religious upbringing is essential. The minuet your ex-husband proposes between the Catholic and Baptist churches could get your daughters off on the wrong foot.

DEAR ABBY: You stated that the widow of "John Smith" should call herself "Mrs. John Smith." I don't agree with you. I have a name, and I am a person in my own right. In the wedding ceremony it says, "Till death do you part." Well, if your husband dies, you are no longer married. I don't want to feel like I belong to someone who is dead. I am not his possession.

Of course, I will still use his last name, which became our family name, but if there is no "John Smith," how can there be a "Mrs. John Smith"? It doesn't make any sense at all.

I prefer to use MY first name and HIS last name.

I wonder if anyone else feels the way I do. — JOHN IS DEAD; I AM LIVING IN OHIO

DEAR LIVING: You may call yourself anything you wish, but the rule of etiquette is: A widow is "Mrs. John Smith" until she dies, unless she marries again. A divorcee is "Mrs. Mary Smith."

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Mexican tortilla soup rich with garlic flavor

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — Garlicky soup is not exactly what one would order for a romantic dinner for two in a far-off tropical paradise.

Yet that is one of the best dishes at El Set, a Puerto Vallarta restaurant renowned for its spectacular cliffside location and dramatic views of sunset over the Pacific.

El Set's chef uses not one or two cloves of garlic but a whole cluster of the pungent bulbs, turning the restaurant's Tortilla Soup into a heady concoction that leaves an aromatic air around those who consume it, to say the least.

Half the garlic is simmered with chicken, tomato and other vegetables to make the broth. The remainder is ground right into the broth. The aftermath hardly matters in view of the pleasures of the soup itself — a bowl full of wonderful, slightly spicy broth, tender chicken, wedges of avocado that cut coolly through the richness, fried tortilla strips to crunch on and pale cheese melted over the top.

One might have a small serving as a starter when dining at El Set. But the soup is really best as a main dish in a bowl large enough to show off the appetizing ingredients. A salad, French bread and tall glass of beer round out a meal that would be as delightful in a humble setting as it is at the glorious El Set.

EL SET'S TORTILLA SOUP

1½ pounds chicken pieces or half chicken, cut up
1½ quarts water
1 head garlic
1 medium onion
1¼ pounds tomatoes (five small)
1 stalk celery
Salt
2 guajillo chiles
6 corn tortillas, cut into strips
Oil
3 slices bacon, cut up
⅛ teaspoon Maggi seasoning
⅛ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Pepper
1 to 2 avocados
1½ cups shredded Jack cheese
Lime wedges

Place chicken pieces in large saucepan. Add water, half of garlic, ¼ of onion, ½ of tomato and celery. Season to taste with salt. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, until chicken is tender, about 45 minutes.

Meanwhile, soak chiles in warm water until soft. Remove stems and seeds. Cut into strips and set aside. In small skillet, fry tortilla strips in ½ inch oil until crisp. Drain on paper towels and set aside.

When chicken is done, remove meat and strain broth. Shred meat and set aside. Measure 1½ quarts broth. If necessary, add water to bring to measure. In blender, combine remaining garlic, onion, tomatoes and enough broth to blend. Blend thoroughly.

Brown bacon in large saucepan. Add chile strips and cook a few moments. Add blended broth mixture, any remaining broth, shredded chicken, Maggi and Worcestershire and season to taste with salt and pepper. Simmer 10 minutes.

To serve, place ¼ to ⅓ avocado, depending on size, in each individual bowl. Add soup. Add fried tortilla strips and sprinkle with cheese. Serve lime wedges on the side. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Note: Guajillo chile is a dried chile available in some markets carrying Mexican products.

Russian immigrant family into own industry makes old soup recipes

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Back in 1905, a Russian immigrant named Louis Tabatchnick came to America, pockets crammed with recipes from his homeland's Jewish community, including the family formula for vegetable soup.

Tabatchnick eventually set up a chain of delicatessens in New Jersey featuring pickled herring, smoked salmon and other native specialties.

Years later, grandson Seymore Tabatchnick opened a delicatessen chain of his own in New York and New Jersey, featuring the Russian delicacies, plus the soup.

So popular did the soup become that Seymore's wife, Isabel, began brewing a dozen varieties, ranging from the original vegetable, to chicken dumpling, barley and cabbage. Soon she was making a hundred gallons a day.

Today the family is turning out soups in 500-gallon drums in a factory, packaging them in boil-in bags, and shipping them to supermarkets in many states.

Quite naturally, Mrs. Tabatchnick will not reveal the recipes for her soups. But she did give me the formula for a curry stew in which her chicken soup is used. Here it is.

CURRY SOUP

Whole chicken (about 2 pounds) cut into eighths
2 packages of the family's frozen chicken soup with noodles and dumplings
2 small onions, quartered
⅓ teaspoon yellow curry powder
1 pound frozen peas
2 cups chunky apple sauce
1 red Delicious apple, unpared, sliced and cored

Brown chicken. Defrost soup and heat. Drain soup, taking out noodles and dumplings and setting aside. Add soup to browned chicken. Add onions and cook 30 minutes. Add apple sauce, the sliced apple, peas and curry, which has been mixed with 1 cup broth from pot. Cook 15 minutes. Add the noodles and dumplings, cook 5 minutes more and serve. Serves 4.

Fresh dill sprig, if desired

Make up the Dill Dressing and refrigerate.

Shell and devein the shrimp. Bring the water to a boil; add the salt, peppercorns, bay leaf and lemon slices; boil 2 minutes. Add the shrimp; bring to a boil again; cook until shrimp turn pink — 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from heat; let stand 2 minutes; drain and cool.

Reserve 4 whole shrimp for a garnish. Cut the remaining shrimp crosswise into small chunks; toss with the celery, scallions; cover and chill.

At serving time, cut the avocados in half lengthwise, twist apart and remove pits; brush cut surfaces with the lemon juice; arrange on lettuce on individual plates. Spoon shrimp mixture into the avocado cavities. Garnish lettuce with the reserved shrimp and, if used, the lemon wedges. Spoon some of the Dill Dressing over the shrimp mixture and garnish with some of the salmon caviar.

Turn the remaining Dill Dressing into a small attractive bowl and garnish with the remaining salmon caviar and, if used, the dill sprig. Pass with the salads.

Makes 4 servings.

DILL DRESSING

1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup sour cream
Lemon juice to taste
Finely chopped fresh dill or dried dill weed to taste

Whisk together the mayonnaise, sour cream and lemon juice until smooth. Stir in the dill. Store any leftover, tightly covered, in the refrigerator to use on other salads.

'Latchkey children' increase

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Since the 1960's there has been a dramatic increase in the number of working mothers and a corresponding concern about the effects on their children. About 19 million women, including 7.4 million women with preschool children, now work outside the home.

Research on the effects of maternal employment on children has been limited. However, "latchkey children," or children who care for themselves for a portion of the day, are now being studied.

In 1976, the Census Bureau reported that 13 to 15 percent of children aged 7-13 with employed mothers cared for themselves and, in some cases, for younger siblings as well, for a part of the day. This percentage has probably increased in the last few years.

New patterns of family makeup intensify the problem of child care. Mobility contributes to an increasing number of nuclear families where uncles, aunts or grandparents are seldom found.

In addition, housing trends contribute to more age-segregated neighborhoods. This means the opportunity for intergenerational support and interaction has been greatly diminished. Modern urban environments also tend to create social isolation, so fewer adults are taking on responsibility for other people's children.

Whether a child is safe in a self-care situation depends on a number of factors. Parents should consider the crime rate, availability of support persons in the neighborhood, age of the child, accessibility to the telephone by both the parent and the child, amount of time the child is alone and the emotional climate of the home.

Some children find a challenge in self-care while others may be harmed. Each child needs to be assessed as an individual with special talents and special needs.

Parents can play an important role in improving the self-care environment for their children and other children in the community. For example, a group of neighbors can start a "hotline" phone service for youngsters at home alone. Older residents may open their homes to neighborhood children from 3 to 6 p.m. and usw this service to supplement their incomes.

The possible options for neighborhood support are unlimited. But parents must plan and organize to develop successful after-school options for their children and the neighborhood.

The Midland County Extension Service Home Economics Associations will be presenting the following programs in February:

February 2 — Jean Williams from the Oster Corp. will demonstrate basic and special techniques for preparing food with kitchen appliances. Food processors, woks and grills will be used along with some exciting menus and sample tasting will be included in the program.

February 16 and 18 — Clotilde, nationwide clothing specialist, will present three programs — "Ultra Suede," "$500 Look" and "Tailoring" — at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

To register for these programs call the Midland County Extension Service at 682-9481, extension 437.

Old-fashioned baked apples updated

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

My friend, the late Emma Rylander Law, took particular delight in revising old-fashioned recipes with scanty directions so modern cooks could use them with good results.

She inherited much of her culinary skill from her grandmother, Emma Rylander Lane, who at the turn of the century invented America's famous Lane Cake.

Many years ago, when Emma Law and I first worked together, we decided to straighten out an old-time recipe for baked apples with lemon sauce. We found preceding recipes for this dessert untrustworthy. It was particularly gratifying to develop one that worked.

BAKED APPLES WITH LEMON SAUCE

4 small baking apples (each about 4 ounces)
2 tablespoons water
1 large egg, separated
½ cup sugar
¼ cup milk
Grated rind of 1 medium lemon
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup butter, melted and cooled

Rinse apples and dry with paper toweling; core, but do not cut through blossom end. With a small sharp knife, make 6 equidistant slits from the top of each core cavity to about ½ way down each apple. This will help the apples hold their shape.

Stand the apples, blossom side down, in a 2-quart casserole (about 8 inches across the top and 3 inches deep) that has a cover. Add the water — it should cover the bottom of the casserole. Cover and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until just soft when pierced with a fork — about 25 minutes. Remove casserole from oven but leave control at 350 degrees.

Just before the apples are baked, in a small bowl beat the egg white until it holds straight stiff peaks when the beater is slowly withdrawn. In another small bowl, without washing the beater, beat the egg yolk slightly; add the egg white and beat gently until blended. Add sugar, milk, lemon rind, lemon juice and butter; beat until combined.

Remove any liquid in the bottom of the apple casserole. Pour the egg mixture over the hot apples, filling their cavities. Return to the 350-degree oven and continue baking uncovered until the foamy top is set — about 8 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 4 servings.

Air Evac hospital ambulance on wings

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dramatic, lifesaving incidents are a daily occurrence for Air Evac, a hospital-based medical air rescue service that is celebrating its 15th anniversary this year.

Since it was founded in 1969, the rescue service has flown thousands of patients ranging from car-accident to heart-attack victims, under every kind of emergency situation, reports Larry T. Cooper, program director.

It has rushed "high risk" mothers to emergency rooms, brought in drug overdose cases, saved the lives of countless premature babies, has flown in organ donor teams with their precious cargo and has transported blood, drugs and other needed medical supplies.

"The advantage of hospital-based rescue is that hospitals are prepared to receive emergency patients and, in fact, are informed the moment an emergency happens," says Cooper.

According to Cooper, a former Air Force fighter pilot, Air Evac pioneered the concept which has now been copied throughout the United States. It was the idea, he said, of Dr. Harry L. Reger and Stephen M. Morris, the latter then with the Samaritan Health Service and now chairman and chief executive officer of SamCor Inc., the parent company in Phoenix.

Their aim, Cooper said, was "to combine knowledgeable hospital and knowledgeable aviation personnel."

"Most of the fixed-wing air ambulance services (at that time) consisted of pilots willing to take a seat out of an airplane and lay a blanket on the floor for a patient," Cooper explained. "They had few medical skills. Air Evac put hospital-trained nurses and paramedics in the air, with pilots who knew something about emergency rescue.

"The planes, too, were equipped for medical transport. And the service was connected to hospitals whose staffs were highly trained in emergency medical care as well as having the resources of a variety of medical specialists."

Today, Air Evac has 21 flight nurses, 20 paramedics, and six helicopter pilots and several fixed-wing pilots all experienced in air emergency rescue, Cooper notes.

It has two pressurized fixed-wing aircraft designed for high altitude, cross-country transport, and two twin-engine specially designed and equipped helicopters.

Each is a mini-hospital outfitted with the most modern lifesaving equipment, including cardiac monitoring devices, respirators and more. Cooper described them as "airborne intensive care units and flying emergency rooms combined."

Air Evac nurses are CCRNs, having at least three years of critical care experience and have completed a 400-hour flight nurse training course, among other requirements. Paramedics who fly as members of the helicopter team only have similarly rigorous training in emergency care.

In the air, paramedics and nurses can begin emergency procedures that can mean the difference between life and death to a critically ill patient, Cooper points out.

In 1983, Air Evac teams, always on 24-hour alert, flew some 3,035 patients on more than 2,972 transport flights. Cooper estimates that since its founding it has flown over 1 million miles.

In addition to serving the Southwest, Air Evac uses its pressurized fixed-wing Cessnas to transport patients non-stop cross-country, taking patients with acute medical needs to a specific specialty hospital or treatment center.

Engelmann spruce tested for violins

Concert-quality violins are traditionally made of Norway spruce, a tree not native to North America. Tests are under way to see if Engelmann spruce grown in the United States can replace European tone woods as the main component in concert violins, cellos and perhaps even violas and bass instruments.

Being tested is wood from trees grown in southern Utah at an elevation of 9,000 feet or higher and harvested in January, when most of the sap is in the roots instead of in the wood.

Thomas to star in CBS movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Thomas has been a working actor since he was 9 years old. Today, at 32, he may well be television's busiest leading man.

On Jan. 31, he appears on CBS in his first swashbuckler, "The Master of Ballantrae," co-starring Michael York and John Gielgud. Last month, he appeared with Sharon Gless and Jack Warden in "Hobson's Choice" on CBS.

"It only got a 24 share, but that's because we were opposite 'Dynasty,'" Thomas said. "Most of my TV movies get a respectable rating — good though not monster. The exception was 'Roots,' but that was something unique."

Many of the Thomas TV movies have been memorable: "The Red Badge of Courage," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "To Find My Son," "Johnny Belinda," "The Hank Williams Jr. Story." They have displayed a versatility that was not expected when Thomas left "The Waltons" after five years as John-Boy.

"The Master of Ballantrae" runs Tuesday night for three hours.

The Robert Louis Stevenson adventure was filmed last year in England, with Thomas the only American in the cast. That presented problems with British Equity, which finally agreed to let him work. It still was an uncomfortable situation.

"The British were a little standoffish at first," he said. "They weren't cool, but I think they were waiting to see if I was going to be another series actor thrown in to help the rating in America. I was a bit nervous the first few days, then I announced, 'You gotta help me; I'm the only Yank here!' After that, I found them very affectionate and sweet."

Thomas is content to do TV movies and stage productions, where he has stretched his talents with everything from "Saint Joan" to "Streamers." Theatrical movies, he admitted, rarely come his way.

"I don't get a lot of feature scripts," he admitted. "The studios seem to be opposed to hiring actors who appear often in TV. Sometimes, I've had interviews with directors, but nothing usually comes of it. ... I'm satisfied to devote myself to television and the stage."

The actor has enough to keep him occupied at home. He and his wife, Alma, have four children: son Richard, 7, and triplets Barbara, Gwyneth and Pilar, all 2½.

"I think that having one problem child would be more difficult than having triplets," he said. "Fortunately, none of our girls is a problem. That doesn't mean they can't be difficult, and it would be a real problem if they were all difficult at the same time. But I think they have learned that they all can't clamor for affection at once, so they take turns."

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

When a competent declarer knows the distribution, a defender can find that trying to guard two suits is an impossible task. Consider this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships in Miami.

North's bid of four spades almost led to disaster. Since South could have doubled four clubs had he been interested in hearing about spades as well as hearts, he read his partner's bid as a cue-bid in support of hearts, so he cue-bid his ace of diamonds. This led to the precarious contract of five hearts.

West started with the queen of clubs and the defenders soon had their book. East might have posed a problem for declarer had he continued with a third round of clubs, but he chose to shift to a diamond, won by declarer's ace.

South was Vicente Reyes, a former Philippine internationalist now living in Los Angeles. He drew three rounds of trumps, and was delighted to find that it was East who followed to all three rounds. That meant that ten of East's cards were known—seven clubs and three hearts. Therefore, he had only three cards in spades and diamonds, and unless he had started with a doubleton honor in diamonds, the burden of guarding both those suits would fall on West.

Reyes played out his remaining three trumps. On the first two of these, West could discard the eight and queen of diamonds. The last trump, however, ruined West. He was down to four spades and a diamond, as was dummy. If West sluffed his spade, the table's four spades would be winners. If he discarded a diamond, the last four tricks would go to the high diamond and three spades. Either way, the contract was home.

Sean Lennon, eight-year-old son of the late former Beatle John Lennon, stands close to his mother Yoko Ono at the gates of Strawberry Fields in Liverpool, England, Tuesday. The place became famous with the Beatles release of the song "Strawberry Fields." Sean and his mother were making an emotional visit to the Beatles' hometown.

Will 'Languid Living' beat Jane Fonda?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

Mulligan's Stew

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — It came in a trice, a bolt out of the blue — or the gray actually, since it was snowing — the idea that will make my name and fortune.

If I were a cartoon character, as some readers annoyingly suspect, a light bulb would appear over my head to indicate an incandescent burst of sudden inspiration.

In 1984, I shall devise and edit the "Mulligan's Stew Workout Book and Easy Guide to Languid Living."

Why not? Jane Fonda, who just turned 46 in the week before Christmas, has launched a whole new career in leg warmers and high cut black leotard and is certain to become a millionairess all over again, if she hasn't already hit the magical seven figures in the booming suet and sweat industry.

Her workout book, seasoned with a few nasty digs at those of us who prefer to project the profile of a William Howard Taft or a G.K. Chesterton, has sold more than a million copies in hard cover and been on the best-seller list in the New York Times Book Review for 93 weeks. It retails for $19.95, although a paperback version is available for a slimmed down $9.95.

In Louisville, Ky., this past fall, the Oscar-winning actress turned exercise guru turned author told a convention of Associated Press managing editors about the new Jane Fonda workout clinics opening across the country. There was no rush from the auditorium to enroll, but at happy hour the custodians of our national conscience figured she was onto a good thing.

Everyone else seems to be grabbing some of the health and fitness action, so why not the squire of Hardscribble House, where living at a gracious pace is a hallmark or at least a benchmark by the fireside?

Richard Simmons became a hot TV property by boiling down his blubber in public and retailing it to morning viewers. His "Better Body Book" is an alternate selection of the Literary Guild. Dinah Shore is out with a diet cookbook. Victoria Principal, queen of the nighttime soaps, has edged ahead of Jane Fonda on the Times best-seller list with "The Body Principal: Exercises for Women." Passing Scribner's window on Fifth Avenue the other day, I caught the bulging biceps of Charles Hix reaching out in a golden glow of perspiration from the cover of his "Working Out: the Total Shape-up Guide." In an adjoining pyramid of books, Nancy Strong in abbreviated tutu smiled under stress and exertion from the book jacket of her tome on aerobics and slimnastics.

The "Mulligan's Stew Workout Book and Easy Guide to Languid Living" will break new ground in the publishing field by being the only one on the market which absolutely guarantees that any reader can do these simple exercises with greater agility and frequency than the author. The encouraging thing about the Mulligan workout regimen is that the faithful followers thereof will not be obliged to invest in a new wardrobe. He or she will look about the same at the end of the course as at the beginning, if not a little more so. But, not to worry, the Tip O'Neill, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibee look has never really gone out of style. Tessie O'Shea and Jane Darwell lived well and didn't have to contend with obscene phone calls.

Along the lines of the Jane Fonda workout book, the Mulligan bible for anti-fitness freaks will have chapters dealing with "warm ups, cool downs, abdominals, breathing, buttocks, etc." Only the advice will be of a far more practical nature.

Take Chapter 13, for instance, which deals with what the author (I, himself) calls "Le Penseur Principle," after Rodin's famous statue of The Thinker. This exercise calls for slouching in a chair with one elbow firmly placed on an arm rest and the hand curled stiffly and safely under the chin. The position enables a person to fall asleep in the office or at an opera or lecture without toppling over, or letting his mouth fall open but with the head lowered enough so that the hooded eyes cannot be immediately detected by a casual observer.

A more advanced version of the same exercise calls for crossing the legs at the ankle, which is believed by some to prevent telltale snoring.

The workout book is loaded with little hints like putting on slightly damp wool socks so someone will mistake you for a skier at an Alpine lodge, wearing joggers' togs to the supermarket or sneakers into the board room, tying the hair up in a sweat band while relaxing on the porch hammock, serving custard cream pudding in a yogurt cup, how to change the subject when the marathon comes up, and other survival techniques in a world of wearisome jocks.

One chapter deals in detail with the Roman Principle of La Giacchetta Seconda — or the second jacket — which has enabled so many Italian bureaucrats and technocrats to enjoy a longer siesta, take in a porn movie on company time or even work a second job during office hours. Basically, this delicate exercise entails bringing an extra jacket to work and draping it over the back of your chair. When the boss or anyone else inquires, "Where is Soggins?", your office mate can answer, "He (or she) must have just stepped out for a moment, there's his jacket."

Italian tailors, as the Mulligan workout book reveals, are justly famous for their one pants, two jacket suits.

But don't rush to your nearest book store. Take your time, relax a little, our book is still in the planning stage.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ringing in ears usually due to wax buildup

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been bothered with a ringing in my ears and a friend of mine says I ought to try biofeedback. Will you explain what causes the ringing in most cases, and whether it is possible that biofeedback would do me any good? — Edward, Clearwater Beach, Fla.

Dear Edward: According to Dr. Sandford Hoffman of the University of Buffalo, the most common cause of the condition you describe, which is called tinnitus, is a buildup of wax in the ear. If this is your problem, removal of the wax by a physician should clear up the ringing you hear and at the same time correct any hearing loss you may have.

As for biofeedback, the technique may be effective for some patients. One report has indicated tht a combination of biofeedback and relaxation exercises resulted in improvement in 60 percent of a selected group of patients.

On the other hand, if the condition is caused by damage from noise or aging of the inner ear, Dr. Hoffman says, there is no available cure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter recently started menstruating and she feels very uncomfortable at such times. Is this common? I never had such problems and I don't know how to help her with them. — Mrs. J.S., Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. S.: It has been estimated that anywhere from more than 50 percent to as many as 90 percent of all women have some discomfort around the time of their menstrual period, so the condition is not uncommon. Some women experience backache and abdominal cramps, as well as nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and headaches. Others have water retention and some develop mood swings. The symptoms often start within one or two days of the beginning of the menstrual period and continue throughout it.

I suggest your daughter see a gynecologist to rule out any underlying problem. In addition, there are medications that can be prescribed to relieve her symptoms.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know a woman who is pregnant for the first time and she is going to have amniocentesis done. But she doesn't believe in abortion and says she won't have an abortion regardless of what the test shows. Can you explain why a woman would want to have the test done if she's not going to do anything about it? — Clara, Oakland, Calif.

Dear Clara: Even though a woman might not contemplate having an abortion, she might want amniocentesis out of a need for reassurance. In addition, if the fetus is found to be affected, amniocentesis would give the family time to plan for the baby's birth and to make the necessary adjustments.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother was put on lithium about nine months ago, and since then she has gained some weight. Is it possible that this is a result of the medication she is taking? — Trudi, Newport, R.I.

Dear Trudi: Lithium does tend to increase a person's appetite. Therefore, your mother's weight gain may be related to her treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our electricity went off during a storm, and everything in my freezer got unfrozen. I wanted to refreeze the food but I didn't know whether it would be safe to do so, so I cooked everything I had. I would like to know if something like this happens in the future, whether I would be able to refreeze the food. — Mrs. G.P., Akron, Ohio.

Dear Mrs. P.: The labels on packaged frozen products sometimes indicate whether they can be refrozen, and I suggest you check the labels first. As for meats, it would be safe to refreeze them as long as they still contained crystals of ice.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I hear a lot about iron deficiency anemia, but I don't understand how important this is. My doctor tells me that my iron is a little low, but all he says is that I should eat more chicken and fish, but that I don't need pills. Should someone with low iron like myself be doing anything else? — Mrs. E.S., Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Mrs. S.: It has been estimated that about one out of every four women of reproductive age has a low iron reserve, but this usually is not an important consideration. However, it may be important in women athletes since they tend to tire if their iron is low. These women might benefit from an iron supplement.

Although the absorption of iron from food is generally low, iron intake can be improved by increasing the consumption of red meats and eggs, as well as chicken and fish. Grains and vegetables also contain iron, but iron from these sources is not absorbed as readily.

The absorption of iron is facilitated if acid is also present. For example, orange juice added to a breakfast that includes eggs will triple the amount of iron absorbed from the eggs. For the same reason, women who take an iron supplement might do well to take a vitamin C supplement at the same time.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies buy will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Raiders not only winners in Super Bowl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS solidified its lead in this season's TV rankings derby, sweeping the top three spots in the weekly Nielsen ratings on the strength of two Super Bowl programs and its popular newsmagazine, "60 Minutes."

As the Los Angeles Raiders were mounting a 38-9 victory over the Washington Redskins on Sunday, CBS coverage of the Super Bowl was also claiming a runaway first in the viewing survey.

CBS got a rating of 46.0 for the hour and 20 minutes of the game that spilled over into prime time.

That helped put CBS back in first place for the week ending Jan. 22 after losing out to ABC the week before. ABC had won largely on the strength of its movie on incest, "Something About Amelia." ABC fell to second and NBC remained in third place.

The network's coverage of the game also got a 67 percent share of the audience. That part of the game in prime time equaled the 46.0 rating ABC got for "The Day After," the highest-rated show of the current season. "The Day After" had a share of 62 percent.

Second in the ratings for the week was CBS's Super Bowl Post Game Show, which got a rating of 33.3.

CBS won the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey with a network average of 19.8. ABC was second with 17.5 and NBC was third with 15.0. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 19.8 percent of the television homes were tuned to CBS.

For the season-to-date CBS remained ahead with a rating of 18.2. ABC was second with 17.1 and NBC third with 15.1.

"60 Minutes" from CBS was third for the week, and the highest-rated show from another network was ABC's "The American Music Awards," which was fourth.

Other shows in the Top 10: CBS' "Dallas," fifth; ABC's "Dynasty," sixth; NBC's "The A-Team," seventh; CBS' "Simon & Simon," eighth; CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," ninth; and ABC's "Hotel," tenth.

The new CBS series "Airwolf," starring Jan-Michael Vincent and Ernest Borgnine in a high adventure featuring a super helicopter, was 12th in a special two-hour premiere.

Two debuting NBC series did not fare as well. "The Master," starring Lee Van Cleef as a martial arts master, was 50th and "Legmen," starring Bruce Greenwood and John Terlesky as two college students who work for a private detective, was 64th.

Benefit for boxer loses money

Seales

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Despite appearances by entertainment heavyweight Sammy Davis Jr. and boxers Muhammad Ali, "Marvelous" Marvin Hagler and Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, a benefit for the only U.S. boxer to win a gold medal in the 1972 Olympics still lost money.

"We generated $97,000 in expenses for the benefit and we only took in $71,000," said Sugar Ray Seales' former manager, Ed Garner, of the concert last Friday in the 25,000-seat Tacoma Dome.

Sugar Ray Seales, 31, is legally blind from the punches he took during his professional career.

Garner, who handles Seales' business affairs, said tickets went for $15 to $25, but the event attracted only 3,900 paying customers. Another 900 tickets were given away.

Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — A veteran of many election campaigns, former President Richard Nixon will be watching with special interest the outcome of a vote to determine whether he and his wife Pat will be moving back to Manhattan.

The directors of a cooperative apartment building cleared the way Tuesday for a vote next week by residents of an apartment co-op on whether they want Nixon as a neighbor.

Nixon, who has lived in Upper Saddle River, N.J., since 1981, has tentatively concluded a deal to pay $1.8 million for a 12-room apartment on the Upper East Side. The location, at Park and 72nd Street, has been identified by sociologist William H. Whyte as the geographical center of New Yorkers on the Social Register.

The sale was blocked last week by one co-op director, Jacob Kaplan, 93, a millionaire philanthropist, who said in court papers that Nixon's presence "will no doubt bring on a host of sightseers, security guards, newsmen and others." But directors voted Tuesday to allow the deal, subject to the co-op members' vote.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Making her movie debut, country singer Barbara Mandrell will play a Washington geologist helping a small town threatened by an underground coal mine fire, state officials say.

The CBS-TV film, "Coal Fire," is to be shot in Anderson and Campbell counties in east Tennessee starting in mid-February, said Pat Ledford, director of the Tennessee State Film Commission.

Miss Mandrell, 35, is known for her country hits, "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool," "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed," and "In Times Like These."

She also starred with her sisters, Louise and Irlene, in the NBC television show, "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," in 1981 and 1982.

Jay

LONDON (AP) — Peter Jay, former ambassador to the United States and more recently head of a British television production company, says he will support his ex-housekeeper's 3-year-old son if blood tests confirm that he is the boy's father.

Jane Tustian, 33, who was nursemaid to Jay's three children for 11 years, said Sunday she became pregnant by Jay in 1979 while he was ambassador in Washington.

In a statement released by his London lawyers Monday, Jay, 46, said he had been told the test results so far were "inconclusive but not inconsistent" with his being the father of Miss Tustian's son, Nicholas, born in Washington in August 1980.

Jay was separated from his wife Margaret, 43, the daughter of former British Prime Minister James Callaghan, in 1980 after 19 years of marriage and amid widely published reports that she had an affair with Watergate journalist Carl Bernstein. Mrs. Jay now is a reporter with British Broadcasting Corp. television.
