Hurricane kills at least five persons

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — National Guard troops carrying shotguns and rifles patrolled this storm-battered island city early today, helping enforce a strict nighttime curfew imposed to discourage looting in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia.

At least five people died in the season's first Atlantic hurricane, which crashed into the Texas' upper Gulf Coast with 115-mph winds and a 12-foot storm tide Thursday, ripping through homes, businesses and trees from here through Houston, 50 miles inland.

A sixth victim was killed in Dallas in a wind-related traffic accident as remnants of Alicia lashed that area with thunderstorms Thursday afternoon, 14 hours after the hurricane moved ashore.

Stunned coastal residents surveyed the damage Thursday afternoon as the storm subsided. Many among an estimated 42,000 who left in fear came back home. Officials said the clean-up will take weeks.

"Even those of us who are Houston natives can't remember anything like this," said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, 37.

She said the biggest problem today was a lack of fresh water because electric pumps were without power. Residents were urged to conserve water and boil tap water before drinking it.

In Galveston, thousands of residents spent a second night huddled in homes without electricity.

Alicia's screaming winds demolished many homes on the island, defaced hotels, uprooted trees, and sent debris slashing and tearing at the historic island's buildings like shrapnel.

Hundreds of homes througout the stricken area were flooded. The storm surge flooded both highways leading to the mainland, completely isolating Galveston for a time.

When floodwaters receded, the highways were left littered with broken limbs and other debris.

Expensive yachts were left piled in heaps like children's toys.

Four of the dead were crushed by falling trees. One man drowned. Several other victims were hurt in the storm, but amazingly, there were no serious injuries.

"I've stayed through hurricanes before, but no more," vowed Milton Carter, 44, of Galveston. "This is the worst I've ever seen."

The storm spawned about a dozen tornadoes in the Galveston-Houston area as it slammed ashore. Later, Alicia was downgraded to a tropical storm and rolled north toward Dallas with heavy rains.

By early today, remnants of the storm were centered near Fort Worth, its violent power spent.

Houston Lighting & Power officials estimated 330,000 homes in southeastern Texas remained without electric power late Thursday.

"It's the worst damage we've ever had," said spokesman Graham Painter. The storm ripped down hundreds of electric power lines, setting at least 10 homes on fire, and Painter said it would take at least a week to restore all power.

Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said damage left by Alicia could run "in the billions," but an insurance industry spokesman in Austin said any damage estimate this soon would be "irresponsible."

President Reagan directed all federal resources be used to help residents cope with the damage.

"We deeply sympathize with the people of Galveston and South Texas," he said.

Texas Gov. Mark White asked the president to declare six counties that were in the path of Alicia a disaster area.

U.S. reaction to plan criticized

Andropov's proposal called 'basis for negotiations'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Novosti news agency today called President Yuri V. Andropov's proposed ban on anti-satellite weapons a "basis for serious negotiations," and criticized the U.S. State Department for not reacting more enthusiastically.

"The initial reaction...is not very encouraging," the news agency said of the State Department's comment that it would study "any serious Soviet proposal on space arms control."

Novosti's commentary criticized Washington officials for not specifically addressing Andropov's offer, made during a meeting Thursday with nine Democratic senators.

"After all, if Washington was sincere in its declared desire to seek agreement, the latest Soviet suggestions should be given serious consideration, as they can serve as the basis for constructive negotiations," Novosti said.

Radio Moscow, however, was more optimistic, quoting Western news agencies as saying the State Department was studying Andropov's proposal seriously.

The nine senators today had a second meeting with officials of the Supreme Soviet, or Parliament, Tass reported. It said the two delegations "completed the exchange of views on international problems."

The senators said their "very substantive" Thursday session with Andropov raised such issues as human rights, the Soviet presence in Afghanistan and nuclear missiles.

But delegation leader Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island said the "only degree of optimism" came from Andropov's proposal to "dismantle" existing anti-satellite weapons and ban development of new ones.

The senators said they hoped the offer would lead to serious treaty talks, cautioning it could simply be a "ploy" to maintain the Soviet monopoly on space weapons by forestalling U.S. testing.

In Washington, Alan Romberg, deputy State Department spokesman, said President Reagan had said on July 4, 1982, that the United States "will consider verifiable and equitable space arms control measures that would ban or otherwise limit testing and deployment of specific weapons should those measures be compatible with U.S. national security."

Thurcaq's ssstiinqosBv time a U.S. government delegation met Andropov since Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz talked with the newly appointed Communist Party leader for 30 minutes just before the funeral of his predecessor Leonid I. Brezhnev last November.

Pell told a news conference he believed Andropov agreed to receive the senators because he is annoyed the Senate has not ratified the SALT II treaty and because there are "signs of very, very modest improvements" in U.S.-Soviet relations.

He apparently was referring to the recent U.S.-Soviet grain deal, and the compromise at the Madrid Security Conference.

But the official news agency Tass said Andropov told the senators U.S.-Soviet relations are "tense virtually in every field."

Addressing persistent reports that Andropov is in bad health, Pell said he spoke "vigorously. ... What he really needs to do his job is his mind and it seemed absolutely first class."

Tass, which announced the Soviet anti-satellite-weapons moratorium offer as a "flash," quoted Andropov as telling the senators "the U.S.S.R. is prepared ... to agree on the elimination of the existing anti-satellite systems and the prohibition of the development of new ones."

But Pell said the Soviet Union, believed to be the only nation with an operational anti-satellite weapon, is "well ahead" of the United States in the field and added:

"It could mean very little other than a desire to forestall planned tests with which the United States hopes to close this gap. We hope it is not a ploy."

Pell said the senators also suggested a summit between Reagan and Andropov, but that Andropov repeated his position that a summit should be held only if there were a good chance it would produce "something substantive."

Included in the delegation headed by Pell were Russell Long of Louisiana; Dale Bumpers, Arkansas; Patrick Leahy, Vermont; Howard Metzenbaum, Ohio; Donald W. Riegle Jr., Michigan; Paul Sarbanes, Maryland; James Sasser, Tennessee, and Dennis DeConcini, Arizona.

He was described as black, husky, 30-35 years old and about 6 feet tall. The woman was also black, thin, about 5 feet, 5 inches tall and 25-30 years old.

A man matching the same general description, according to police, held up the CIC Finance Co. at 905 S. Main St. about noon Tuesday. He took a watch, ring and undisclosed amount of cash and fled in a white-over-red car.

Son of Soviet diplomat returns to Moscow

Decision carefully coordinated with embassy

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's complex solution to the diplomatic impasse involving a Soviet diplomat's son who allegedly wanted to stay in the United States was coordinated in virtually every detail with the Soviet Embassy here.

But it raised questions about whether U.S. officials were more anxious to learn the Soviet teenager's true feelings or to find a way to end the week-long dispute before it became a major new thorn in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Andrei Berezhkov, 16, left Washington for Moscow Thursday night with his mother and his father, Valentin Berezhkov, a first secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

In the end, the Soviets prevailed in their refusal to let U.S. officials talk with Berezhkov. The State Department finally relented after demanding all week that officials interview the teen-ager to be sure he was returning to Moscow of his own free will.

(See BOY'S, Page 2A)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrei Berezhkov, the 16-year-old son of a senior Soviet diplomat, is flying home to Moscow after denying he ever begged President Reagan for asylum. His last words on American soil: "Say hi to Mick Jagger for me."

Hours later, after his plane landed at Charles de Gaulle Airport in Paris, he again asked that his regards be relayed to the rock singer and his musical group.

"Say hello to Mick Jagger, say hello to the Rolling Stones. Yeah, they're my favorite," young Berezhkov told reporters before boarding a flight to the Soviet Union.

The teen-ager's departure ended a week-long diplomatic standoff between the two superpowers marked by exchanges of accusations and demands.

The impasse was resolved Thursday in an elaborately orchestrated operation involving senior U.S. and Soviet Embassy officials with the participation of major American news organizations.

First behind the walls of the Soviet residential compound in Northwest Washington, then in a waiting room at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia, Andrei Berezhkov denied to reporters that he had written the president and The New York Times to plea: "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country. I want to stay here."

On Thursday he twice declared: "I want to go home and not stay here."

Those words untied the diplomatic knot.

They met the criteria set by the State Department that the teen-ager be permitted to express for himself what he wanted his future to be.

And they cleared the way for the boy and his parents, Valentin and Valeriya Berezhkov, to board a Trans World Airlines jet for Paris en route to Moscow.

The plane took off at 7:09 p.m. EDT, almost a week to the hour of the State Department's announcement that the youth was believed to have written a letter to the president asking to remain in the United States and that the department was insisting on a personal interview with him "to ascertain the young man's intentions."

But on Thursday the department backed off and agreed to a pair of stage-managed news conferences — one of them free of Soviet controls — and said it would be satisfied by the results.

And when the Soviet teen-ager, in the presence of two senior U.S. officials, had made his final statement at the airport to reporters for The Associated Press, United Press International and The Washington Post, the department said the Berezhkovs could go.

Houston citizens boil tap water in Alicia's wake

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — People in the nation's fifth largest city were warned to boil tap water before drinking it today because of a lack of water pressure in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia.

Police patrols guarded against looters during the predawn hours in a downtown area littered with broken glass, twisted metal and other debris.

About 330,000 homes in the Houston area remained without electricity after Alicia hit the city with winds of up to 94 mph, tearing down hundreds of power lines. The gales sent windowpanes and signboards spinning Thursday through the sky-scraper-lined downtown.

The Houston Police Department beefed up its patrols downtown Thursday night after arresting 40 accused looters, said Police Chief Lee Brown.

Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who said the storm was the worst she had ever seen in her native city, said the "most serious problem" Houston faced today was the lack of fresh water.

"Much of the city is without water" because the electricity failed at a city water treatment plant, she said, advising that residents with water boil it before drinking.

The mayor planned to tour the city for storm damage by helicopter later today with Gov. Mark White, who has asked President Reagan to declare a six-county area that includes Houston a disaster area to make it eligible for federal relief funds.

A Houston Lighting & Power spokesman said it would be at least a week before power is restored to all residents. The hurricane dealt the power company its "worst damage ever," said HL&P's Graham Painter.

Roaring off the tepid waters of the Gulf of Mexico, Alicia killed at least six people, including two in Houston.

The winds, whistling through the skyscrapers, sent newsracks, glass, plywood panels and tree limbs flying down major arteries. Alicia ripped off the skylight at the Hyatt Regency hotel and punched out windows in the downtown's sleek, glass-clad business towers.

"I'm extremely worried about the downtown, especially the office buildings where windows are gone and the rain and wind have gotten inside," said Mrs. Whitmire after touring the central business district.

Man 'ready to die' hijacks plane

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man who claimed he was "ready to die" hijacked a Delta Air Lines jet to Havana by waving a liquid-filled detergent bottle and repeatedly flicking a cigarette lighter, passengers said today after their safe return.

Flight 784, carrying 72 passengers and a crew of seven, returned safely at 2:39 a.m. after refueling in Cuba, the second air piracy this month and the 10th to Havana since May 1.

The pilot of the Boeing 727, which took off from Miami at 9:47 p.m. Thursday for Tampa and Cincinnati, radioed air traffic controllers shortly before 10 p.m. to say the plane had been hijacked, according to Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta.

The hijacker said over and over, "I want to go to Havana. Tell the pilot," said a passenger, U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Donald Mosley.

The man carried a plastic detergent bottle in his left hand and flicked a lighter on and off with his right hand, Mosley said.

Barker earlier had said there were reports the liquid in the bottle was flammable, but later indicated that only could be confirmed by the FBI.

Henry Derricks, of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, said he was sitting across the aisle from the hijacker who drank from the bottle after pouring some of the liquid on his body.

"When he started pouring it on himself, he took at least two swigs," Derricks said. The hijacker then said, "I'm ready to die. I don't care."

Whenever anybody tried approaching the man, he held both hands in the air and threatened to light the bottle, said passenger Robert Glantz of Tampa.

The hijacker's nationality was not know, said Barker, who added the man was reported to be "calm."

The plane landed safely in Havana at 10:56 p.m., where the hijacker was taken into custody, Barker said.

There were no injuries, said Louis P. Vinciguerra, Delta district marketing manager in Tampa. Hollis Powell, Delta district director of marketing in Tampa, said there was no sky marshal on the flight.

Nine other south Florida flights have been skyjacked to Cuba since May 1, with passengers thwarting two attempted diversions to the island.

Federal officials, however, said they don't recommend airborne heroics.

After the hijacking spate began, the FAA ordered increased security, returning armed sky marshals to some flights, making closer security checks of passengers and their carry-on baggage, and issuing warnings of harsh prison terms awaiting hijackers in Havana.

Officials said they are convinced the hijackings would stop if Cuba would return air pirates to the United States.

A rash of hijackings in late 1980, blamed on disenchanted refugees, ended after several hijackers were sent back to the United States and prosecuted.

Delta diversion 10th to Cuba since May 1

MIAMI (AP) — The diversion of a Miami-to-Tampa Delta Air Lines flight carrying 79 people to Cuba Thursday night was the 10th successful air piracy to the communist island since May 1. Here are details of the other hijackings:

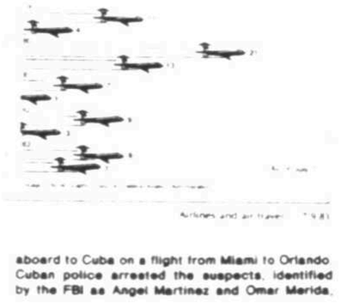

—Aug. 4: Capitol Air Flight 236 carrying 252 people from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami and Chicago went to Havana after a 52-year-old Cuban exile splashed a flammable liquid in the cabin and claimed to have explosives.

—July 19: Eastern Flight 1 from New York to Miami with 220 people aboard changed course to Havana under orders of a Latin man claiming to have a "blockbuster" of a bomb in his briefcase. Officials said no explosives were found.

—July 17: A Delta Air Lines jet carrying 107 people on a Miami-to-Tampa flight was diverted to Havana. One hijacker held a knife at a stewardess' throat while another reportedly ignited an aerosol spray. Cuban authorities took seven people — three men, two women and two children — into custody afterward.

—July 7: An Air Florida jetliner carrying 47 people from Fort Lauderdale to Tampa was hijacked to Havana by a man claiming to have a bomb and described by passengers as "an All-American boy." The hijacker was identified as Robert Richter, 26, and was named in a federal complaint filed in Fort Lauderdale.

—July 2: Two men shouting "Go to Cuba" and flicking cigarette lighters near a bottle of gasoline diverted a Pan Am jetliner with 61 people aboard to Cuba on a flight from Miami to Orlando. Cuban police arrested the suspects, identified by the FBI as Angel Martinez and Omar Merida, both of whom arrived in Florida during the 1980 boatlift from Cuba.

—June 14: A New Orleans man shouting "Cuba! Cuba!" hijacked an Eastern jet with 96 people aboard on a Miami-New York route by locking himself in the lavatory and threatening to blow up the plane with a bottle of liquid unless he was taken to Cuba.

—May 19: A wildly gesturing man claiming to have explosives forced an Eastern Airlines jet with 132 people aboard to Cuba on a Miami-New York route. Passengers said he had several sticks of dynamite, but FAA officials later said there was no bomb.

—May 12: A woman armed with a plastic flare pistol hijacked Capitol Air Flight 236 with 248 people aboard from San Juan to Miami and Chicago.

—May 1: Also on Capitol Flight 236, a man tossed leaflets across the cabin publicizing his "hunger, unemployment, misery and grief." He barricaded himself in the lavatory and threatened to blow up the plane and the 212 people it was carrying unless it went to Havana.

—Feb. 15: A man identified as Hussein Shey Kholye, a 37-year-old former Iranian air force pilot, hijacked a commuter flight from Killeen, Texas. He wanted to go to Cuba but the plane could not fly that far and landed instead in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

In addition, two recent hijack attempts were thwarted by passengers — a Pan Am flight with 128 people aboard from Miami to Houston on Aug. 2 and a Northwest Airlines flight carrying 97 passengers from Tampa, Fla., to Miami on July 21.

Efforts begin to recover victims of plane crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Helicopters and alpine crews will be needed to reach the bodies of a pilot and nine Italian tourists killed when their sightseeing plane slammed into a mountain during a flight through the storm-shrouded Grand Canyon.

The grim task of removing bodies and wreckage from a plateau facing the canyon was to begin today, with crews rapelling down from helicopters or the face of the 5,800-foot Arizona mountain 110 miles east of Las Vegas.

Las Vegas Airlines Flight 88, its pilot attempting to dodge thunderstorms that blanketed the canyon, flew into the mountain about noon Wednesday. The charred debris was found 24 hours later by another of the airline's pilots. A helicopter and paramedics who flew to the scene said there were no survivors.

"It's a wonder they even spotted the wreckage," said photographer Rene Germanier, who flew over the scene. "There was just nothing there. The biggest piece of the plane was a small section of the tail."

"It looks like it ran head-on into the mountain near the 5,800-foot level," said Earl Leseberg, owner of Lake Mead Airlines. Leseberg spotted the wreckage shortly after it was found by the Las Vegas Airlines pilot.

"The only way they're going to get in there to get the bodies is with a helicopter," Leseberg said. "They can't even get horses in there."

"Weather conditions were very poor, very poor," said Sgt. Sam Whitted of the Coconino County, Ariz. Sheriff's Department. "There were widespread thunderstorms in the area, especially along the flight path of the airplane."

Sheriff's Sgt. Ron Anderson said the plane struck 75 feet below the rim of the 5,800-foot mountain, and the debris came to rest 50 feet below the point of impact.

The plane disintegrated, Anderson said, adding "How could anyone survive?"

The Italian consulate in Los Angeles said the nine passengers had been identified as two couples from Rome, their teen-age children and a nephew. Their names were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The pilot, however, was identifed as Wallace S. Gustafson Jr., 48, of Las Vegas.

Boy's return carefully orchestrated

U.S. officials agreed instead to be satisfied with Berezhkov's answers to questions put by a few American reporters at carefully orchestrated news conferences at the Soviet diplomatic compound and at Dulles International Airport.

At both press conferences, the teen-ager was flanked by Soviet Embassy officials and his parents. While State Department officials insisted they could still stop him if they weren't satisfied with his answers, there seemed virtually no chance that would happen, and it didn't.

Berezhkov denied he had written letters to President Reagan and the New York Times saying he hated the Soviet Union and wanted to stay in the United States which he loved. "I want to go home and not stay here and that is the main thing I wanted to say," he said at the airport.

Two assistant secretaries of state, Richard R. Burt and Elliott Abrams, who quietly listened during the airport news conference they helped arrange, issued a statement afterward saying they were sure that Berezhkov "was voluntarily leaving the United States."

Burt and Abrams asked no questions of their own — their silence agreed to in advance with the Soviets.

But an apparently off-hand remark by Berezhkov cast doubt that the U.S. assessment was the correct one. "Say hi to Mick Jagger for me," he said with a slight smile, after the press conference had ended.

They were his last known words before he boarded the commercial aircraft. And they almost certainly reflected his interest in a Western life-style represented by Jagger, the leader of the popular rock group, "The Rolling Stones."

He also told reporters he wanted to be an actor, suggesting he might regard his denial of wanting to stay in the United States as something read from a carefully scripted part. Asked if he wanted to be an actor in the United States, he said, "No, in Moscow."

State Department officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the press conferences and the departure were carefully negotiated by U.S. and Soviet officials in meetings this week.

A group of U.S. reporters was briefed by a senior State Department official in advance on what to expect. The Soviets had handpicked three American reporters to attend their news conference.

It was explained that for the Dulles airport meeting three other reporters, whose names were picked by lot by U.S. officials, were to appear as if by chance at a pre-arranged location in the terminal building where Berezhkov would pass by, accompanied by Soviet and U.S. officials. It would look as if "they just happened to run into you," said the senior official, who insisted on anonymity.

He said Soviet officials would then agree to let Berezhkov answer a few questions which the official was sure would be "the questions we all want to know." He said "it was mutually understood" between Soviet and U.S. officials that this was the way to end the diplomatic impasse.

The Soviets played their role. Although insisting loudly that they wouldn't allow American reporters to put questions to Berezhkov at either the diplomatic compound or the airport, embassy officials nevertheless allowed them, as everyone knew they would.

But there were enough contradictions during the day to raise questions about the motives of American officials in letting Berezhkov leave the United States without first questioning him.

For example, although the youth insisted at both press conferences that he did not write the letter to Reagan, or a second one to the New York Times, the airport statement issued by Burt and Abrams treated the letters as authentic.

"Andrei's letters to President Reagan and the press raised reasonable doubts as to whether Andrei's travel would be voluntary," the statement said, explaining why the administration intervened to try to question him in the first place.

What was unexplained in the statement was why the State Department believed Berezhkov's statement about wanting to return to the Soviet Union and if it disbelieved his statement claiming the letters were forgeries.

Founder of group to locate abducted children rewarded

MATTAWAN, Mich. (AP) — A mother who gained fame by founding a group to help locate abducted children got the only reward she ever wanted for her efforts — the return of her 6-year-old daughter, who had been missing for over a year.

Leslie Campbell, founder of HEART (Help Every Abduction Return Today), found her daughter Erin on Wednesday, ending a year-long search that cost thousands of dollars. Erin had been missing since she went camping with her father in July 1982.

"I told her mommy had been looking for her, and if I had known where she was I would have gotten her sooner," Mrs. Campbell said after she and Erin returned to Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Mrs. Campbell was awarded permanent custody of Erin after her divorce from Ken VanFleet. Father and daughter had been living in Orlando, Fla., and Erin did not recognize her mother when she was discovered at an apartment complex swimming pool, Mrs. Campbell said.

Besides her work with HEART, Mrs. Campbell also helped gain approval for a state law that makes it a felony for a parent to abscond with his or her children. The law won final passage July 1, but because it was not retroactive, it was too late to help Mrs. Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell, who lives in Mattawan in the southwestern part of the state, hired a private investigator from Texas, Jim Popp, to trace Erin. He located VanFleet in Orlando two weeks ago, and arrangements were made for Mrs. Campbell to meet Popp in Florida and obtain a Florida court order for the return of the girl.

But Mrs. Campbell discovered that getting back her daughter would not be that simple.

"When I got to Florida and talked to an attorney, we were not certain (an order could be obtained) without alerting Ken and going through a long, expensive litigation," she said.

Instead, Mrs. Campbell acted on a tip that Erin was swimming at the apartment complex where she lived with her father, and she, Popp and another investigator hustled the girl off to the Tampa airport.

"I went onto the first step of the pool, knee-deep in the water, and picked Erin up," Mrs. Campbell said. "I said, 'I'm mommy, I'm mommy.' But she didn't recognize me."

Mrs. Campbell said she didn't recognize her daughter at first, either.

"She was four to five inches taller, she was thinner, she had lost a tooth, her hair was wet and I was yards away," she said. "I almost fainted."

But once in the airplane, headed back to Michigan, the two became reacquainted.

"In the airplane our relationship just blossomed," Mrs. Campbell said. "We were best friends again."

Mrs. Campbell said that during the approach to Metro Airport, Erin kissed the window of the plane and cried, "Detroit! We're home!"

VanFleet alerted Florida authorities of Erin's departure.

Remnants of Hurricane Alicia classified as 'dangerous storm'

HOUSTON (AP) — Remnants of Hurricane Alicia continued moving slowly north-northwest early today, spreading heavy rains and wind across East and North Central Texas and heading for Oklahoma.

The highest sustained winds were reduced to 20 mph with gusts to 35 mph, but the National Weather Service said Alicia was still a "dangerous storm which may produce further flooding and possible tornadoes" through today.

Nearly 24 hours after it slammed into the Texas Gulf Coast with 115 mph winds, meteorologists reported today that the "ill-defnied storm center" was about 38 miles north of Waco, moving northwest at 18 mph.

Hurricane warnings were lifted at 2 p.m. Thursday as the storm began breaking up after passing through Galveston and Houston.

Flood watches remained in effect throughout a wide area of southeastern Texas this morning.

Mattox investigation to continue

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle says a grand jury investigation of Attorney General Jim Mattox will continue for "a few more weeks."

"It will be over when it's over," he told reporters.

The grand jury met Thursday without hearing any witnesses. Earle would not say if the panel discussed Mattox.

For several weeks the grand jury has been investigating Mattox's 1982 campaign finance records, an alleged threat to a private law firm over a personal dispute, and other allegations of misconduct.

Mattox has said he has done nothing illegal and even if he were guilty of everything alleged, it would amount to nothing more than misdemeanor offenses calling for fines.

Fishing vessel missing in Gulf

GALVESTON (AP) — Coast Guard officials are looking for a 30-foot fishing vessel that remains unaccounted for in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia.

A Coast Guard spokesman said two other vessels listed as unreported in the Gulf of Mexico were located Thursday.

Martin Taylor, the spokesman, said a 114-foot tugboat with five people aboard and a 31-foot pleasure craft were contacted by radio.

Taylor said the tugboat, bound for Cameron, La., had not been heard from since Tuesday night. The other vessel, en route to New Orleans, dropped out of radio contact Wednesday morning, according to Taylor.

The 30-foot fishing vessel, named the Delilah, was headed toward the Texas City dike area before the Coast Guard lost radio contact with it Wednesday morning.

Galveston presses don't stop

GALVESTON (AP) — The Galveston Daily News, Texas' oldest newspaper, published a Thursday edition despite the onslaught from Hurricane Alicia.

"We put one out late Wednesday but I don't know how many people got it," City Editor Richard Fogaley said.

The newspaper has been publishing since 1842 and "as far as I know we've never missed a day," he said.

Despite a total blackout on Galveston Island, Fogaley said he hoped a Friday edition could be published by mid-day by using the facilities of another newspaper or hopefully power would be restored.

Common Cause submits list

AUSTIN (AP) — Common Cause of Texas has submitted a list of 30 Texans for possible appointment to the new State Ethics Advisory Commission.

Common Cause said Thursday it had solicited recommendations from public interest groups and civic organizations.

Those recommended included Robert Calvert, former chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court; former state Rep. John Hannah, Tyler attorney; former state Sen. Charles Herring, Austin; Max Sherman, former state senator and dean of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs; and Dagmar Hamilton, associate dean of the LBJ School.

Amarillo lawyer indicted for murder

AMARILLO (AP) — An Amarillo lawyer was free on a $100,000 bond today after a Potter County grand jury returned a capital murder indictment against him in connection with the 1977 slaying of an Amarillo clothier.

James Durham Jr., 42, was accused by the grand jury Thursday of helping arrange the murder of Frank Potts, who was stabbed 23 times in 1977.

Durham was released on $100,000 bond following a short hearing before State District Judge Edward B. Nobles.

The grand jury accused Durham of helping arrange Potts' slaying and delivering the money to George and Bedale Hicks to carry out the slaying.

During the hearing, Durham's wife, Connie, testified that her husband has terminal pancreatitis and needs medical care. She added that Durham has remained in the city even though he has had many chances to flee.

"He has been before many grand juries on the same matter. He has had ample time to run away, he will be here until the day he dies," Mrs. Durham said.

Potts was killed Oct. 8 1977 at his downtown Amarillo store, Barney's Factory Direct Clothing. The murder investigation went unresolved until Potts' business partner, Kevin Francis, and the Hicks were indicted in 1979.

Francis was sentenced to a 40-year prison term in 1980 after his conviction on a charge of soliciting capital murder. But a state appeals court ordered a new trial, which is pending.

The Hicks were convicted and are serving 99-year prison sentences.

Francis allegedly solicited the killing to collect a $175,000 dollar life insurance policy on Potts.

District Attorney Danny Hill asked Nobles to appoint a special prosecutor "due to a special conflict" in the prosecutor's office.

Hill said he knows Durham and once shared an office with him. Letterhead stationary used by Durham's law firm around the time of the slaying listed Hill as an associate.

Nobles said he would take the request for a special prosecutor under advisement.

Tafoya sentenced to six years in prison for tax fraud

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Eugene Tafoya has been sentenced to the maximum six years in prison for tax fraud after reading a rambling 40-minute statement that included his contention that his former employer, ex-CIA agent Edwin Wilson, had recently plotted to kill him.

Tafoya, 48, was convicted last month on charges he failed to report to the federal government at least $88,000 drawn in 1980 and 1981 by performing covert activities for Wilson.

U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle assessed the sentence Thursday, but did not rule on a request by the Canadian government to extradite Tafoya to face charges filed in a 1979 car bombing.

The judge also did not rule on a motion seeking to revoke the former Green Beret's indigency status.

Tafoya must complete the federal sentence before beginning to serve the two years he received for the 1980 shooting of a dissident Libyan student in Fort Collins, Colo.

In asking for leniency, Tafoya said the FBI had just informed him that he was on the "not-so-famous list" of people Wilson is charged with plotting to kill.

Wilson has been convicted of smuggling arms and tons of explosives to Libya. He also is accused of trying to hire assassins to kill two federal prosecutors that handled his case, according to witnesses who testified against him, and his ex-wife.

Several witnesses testified at Tafoya's tax trial that Wilson hired Tafoya — at the request and expense of the Libyan government — to shoot the Colorado student.

Tafoya, who worked in Wilson's Libyan operation, has testified he thought he was on a CIA mission when he pumped two bullets into the student's head.

"After realizing I was duped by people who misused their credentials, I returned home to get my life in order," he told the judge Thursday.

White asks Reagan to declare emergency

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, saying the state alone cannot handle the havoc left by Hurricane Alicia, has sent President Reagan a telegram asking him to declare an "immediate major emergency declaration" for six Southeast Texas counties.

"The damages are of such magnitude and severity that effective response is beyond the capability of state and local governments," White said he wrote Reagan.

Speaking at a news conference Thursday after he was briefed by the state's top emergency officials, White said Reagan telephoned him and "indicated he would move as quickly as he could."

The governor said he asked for emergency declarations for Galveston, Harris, Chambers, Fort Bend, Brazoria and Matagorda counties. He added that he would include more counties in the emergency request "as warranted" and clean-up efforts would begin as soon as the storm passed.

"It's seems like it's clearing up pretty fast behind the storm," he said.

White said he was "hopeful we'll get immediate response" to the request for disaster aid.

In addition, White said he had mobilized 100 National Guard troops to Galveston, where power was out, to prevent looting of businesses. He said he had already had "several" reports of looting in the island after Hurricane Alicia smashed against its shores and knocked out power lines.

A Public Utility Commission spokesman said most underground utility lines were unaffected by the storm, though overseas power lines to Galveston Island and a main transmission line to Freeport were lost.

PUC spokesman Bob Matthews said it was unlikely that electricty would be restored to Galveston Island before Friday.

White predicted damages from Alicia would run into "hundreds of millions of dollars," but he added the storms' path of destruction could have been much worse. He said he would personally survey the damage by helicopter today.

"I think we have been very lucky," said White, "I'm pleased we have no further reports of deaths, but it's a little early to say we won't have anymore."

White unleashed criticism against some residents who remained in their homes after repeated appeals by state weather officials to evacuate.

"Not a badge of courage, I don't think, for those who stayed," White said, "If there's one thing we can't bring back is someone life's that has been lost."

Five people died in Houston as Alicia moved inland and a truck driver was killed in Dallas Thursday afternoon after wind blew over a billboard and smashed his truck.

Attorney General Jim Mattox told White that environmental lawyers were on hand in Houston because there were ships anchored in the Houston Ship Channel "with some very dangerous cargo."

A water resources department spokesman said, however, there were no reports of spills from the vessels, even though some barges unable to reach moorings have intentionally grounded themselves on reefs.

Federal officials begin assessing hurricane damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials have already begun assessing hurricane damage in Texas as part of the process of deciding whether to declare parts of the state a disaster area in the wake of hurricane Alicia.

Bob Blair, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which recommends to the president whether such a declaration should be made, said late Thursday that the agency was in the "very, very early stages of damage assessment."

He said Air Force planes had been taking photographs of areas hit by the hurricane but that damage surveyors had not yet been able to fly over the areas because of high winds.

"In a situation like this...it's difficult to get around to assess the damage," said Blair. He also said that "it's difficult to evaluate flood damage by air."

However, Blair said "that should not delay us" in making a recommendation to the president on a disaster declaration.

For an area to qualify for such a declaration, damage must be of such a magnitude as to be "beyond the capacility of the state and local governments" to respond, said Blair.

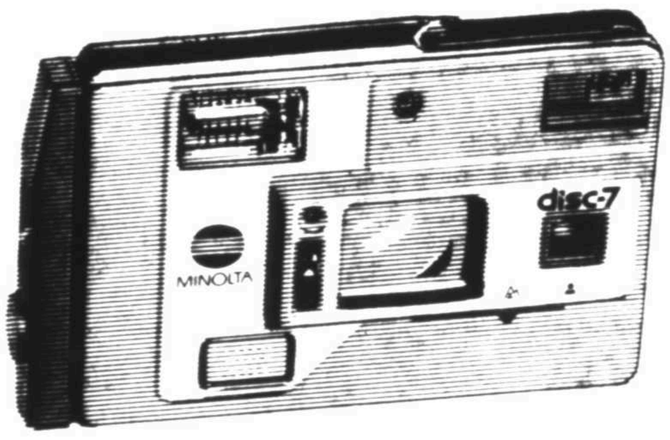

He said that about half the state requests for such declarations are turned down.

Blair said that such a declaration would make hurricane-ravaged areas of Texas eligible for various forms of special federal aid.

Under the program, 75 percent of the cost of repairing or restoring public facilities would be paid by the federal government and 25 percent by state and local governments, he said.

Management, unions discuss money saved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bell System and union officials, still at odds over terms for a new contract, also disagree over whether the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is saving money while more than 675,000 workers are on strike.

AT&T officials deny the company or its Bell System and Western Electric Co. subsidiaries will gain any windfall by not having to pay wages to striking workers.

They cite the overtime being paid to supervisors to keep the phone system running, including weekend work; living expenses for supervisors who have been posted at out-of-town facilities; the likelihood that large amounts of overtime will have to be paid when the strike is over; the hiring of temporary workers in some cases, and lost business through fewer long-distance calls and unfilled service orders.

Officials of the striking Communications Workers of America, however, claim AT&T has saved upwards of $100 million a day in wages and fringe benefits since the walkout began Aug. 6, and that no amount of overtime will compensate for that savings.

CWA economist Lorel E. Foged says that estimate was developed using figures agreed upon by the union and company before bargaining started, showing the average total compensation for a CWA member in both wages and benefits equals $17.60 an hour. She acknowledges, however, the estimate is rough and doesn't take into account CWA members who had scheduled vacation and hence are still being paid; those on sick leave, or the employees who pay CWA dues but aren't members and are still working.

"There's no reason to feel that anybody outside the business has any better feel than we do about what we're losing or what we're saving," says AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner. "And nobody can say now ... The people who keep track of these things are out there working the switchboards. But we certainly don't go into bargaining trying to promote strikes as a money-saving opportunity."

Financial analysts and government officials weren't predicting Thursday whether AT&T would save any money in the long run, but they agreed the job action was having little effect on the national economy.

Deficit may be higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congressional Budget Office, in a report certain to prompt demands for deficit-cutting moves, says that red ink will total $47 billion more over the next three years than Congress estimated when it passed its budget scarcely two months ago.

In a mid-year report scheduled for formal release over the weekend, budget office analysts say that even if Congress approves the spending cuts and tax increases mandated in this year's budget — a prospect that many observers rate unlikely — the red ink will total $191.6 billion in the fiscal year beginning on Oct. 1, $180.4 billion in 1985 and $146.5 billion in 1986.

Taken together, these figures add up to $47 billion more than the estimates that congressional leaders used to win passage of the compromise tax and spending plan.

They are also higher that the administration's most recent forecasts of a $179.7 billion deficit in 1984; followed by $170.2 billion in 1985, and $129 billion in 1986, a figure that assumes enactment of a "standby" tax increase.

Major elements of the budget office report were made available in advance of the publication date by congressional sources who asked not to be identified by name.

For the current year, the report estimates the deficit at $206.5 billion, slightly below the $208.6 billion figure that is contained in the budget plan that Congress approved in June.

The report is expected to include a cautionary word that if Congress fails to make the deficit-cutting steps mandated by the budget, red ink will remain in the $200 billion range for the next several years.

But it also notes that the deficits could be slightly lower than now forecast if Congress does not spend all of the money set aside for anti-recession programs to be authorized later. That fund totals $8.5 billion in 1984, and $14 billion over three years, and while congressional leaders say some of it will eventually be spent, they doubt all of it will.

Many economists, including Martin Feldstein, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, have argued that additional steps are needed to reduce deficits and give the economic recovery room to grow.

But even the steps outlined in the current congressional budget may be extremely difficult to achieve.

President Reagan has been strongly opposed to any tax increase for the next fiscal year.

Snail darter may not be endangered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The snail darter is off the hook, but nobody seems too excited now about the tiny fish that swam all the way to the Supreme Court.

The three-inch perch that stopped a $120 million dam is about to be kicked off the government's endangered species list.

While the country's rivers and streams are not exactly teeming with snail darters, they have been found in sufficient numbers that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service believes it can no longer justify classifying the fish as near extinction.

The service gave notice of its intention to downgrade the fish's status last month in the Federal Register and invited the public to comment. So far, nobody has Environmentalists, who used the fish as a rallying point for their opposition to the Tellico Dam, have been silent.

The snail darter proved to be a highly successful lever. After Etnier found the fish in 1973 and proved it was a new species, it was put on the government's endangered species list in 1975. At the time it was thought to exist only along a 17-mile stretch of the Little Tennessee River that would be flooded by completion of TVA's Tellico Dam.

Town officials to gather cats

SEARSPORT, Maine (AP) — Town officials say they'll go ahead with a plan to begin rounding up dozens of stray cats this weekend, despite irate animal lovers' complaints that "labeled us murderers."

The callers apparently thought all the strays would be killed, Town Clerk Sue Lessard said Thursday. "We're not going to go around assassinating cats," she said, explaining that "totally wild" felines will be put to sleep but domesticated animals will be held at an animal shelter until claimed by owners or adopted.

The roundup was ordered after residents complained that stray cats had taken over their barns, attics and gardens.

Pilots may get double back pay

NEW YORK (AP) — As many as eight Trans World Airlines pilots may receive double back pay since 1978 after an appeals court ruled that their forced retirement at age 60 was discriminatory.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, overturning a lower court ruling, said that although federal rules bar commercial flying after age 60, three TWA pilots were entitled to jobs as flight engineers, allowing them to work until 70. Five more pilots may be eligible for the award, which will be paid by TWA and the Air Line Pilots Association, the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission said.

The award amounts, handed down Aug. 1, are variable, but a senior flight engineer makes $70,000 a year, a plaintiffs' lawyer said.

Trip may create problems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A city councilman's proposal to send derelicts to an out-of-town work farm during the 1984 Olympics "would create serious constitutional and civil liberties problems," an American Civil Liberties Union attorney says.

Councilman Gilbert Lindsay suggested sending Skid Row bums to a now-abandoned "drunk farm" to grow vegetables during the games "so we give a good impression to visitors." However, ACLU staff lawyer Gary Williams said Thursday that the idea will work only if the derelicts are given the choice of leaving town voluntarily.

Williams said the ACLU would fight the forcible removal of street people who have committed no crime "except to be an eyesore."

Precedent set for tipsy bicyclists

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey judges now have a legal precedent for finding tipsy bicyclists guilty of drunken driving, based on a court ruling upholding the conviction of a college sophomore.

Michael Tehan, now 20, of Somerville, was fined $250 in December after Superior Court Judge Arthur S. Meredith upheld his conviction on drunken driving charges. The state court system's Committee on Opinions approved the ruling for publication in law books, providing a precedent, defense attorney Earl Ross said Thursday.

Ross, who fought the conviction on grounds that a bicycle is not a motor vehicle, said no further appeal is planned because the case is "not worth spending $1,000 to overrule."

U.S. to study space arms control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the United States will study "any serious Soviet proposal on space arms control" in response to a call by Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov for a ban on anti-satellite weapons.

Andropov voiced the proposal to a group of U.S. senators visiting the Soviet Union.

In making the announcement, State Department deputy spokesman Alan Romberg pointed out that the Soviets have the only operational anti-satellite system.

He said President Reagan had said on July 4 of last year that the United States "will consider verifiable and equitable space arms control measures that would ban or otherwise limit testing and deployment of specific weapons should those measures be compatible with U.S. national security."

Shuttle to return at night

From Wire Reports

When the space shuttle Challenger returns to Earth on Sept. 5 from its next mission, it won't be met by teeming crowds and live cameras mounted on chase planes.

The shuttle's next landing at California's Edwards Air Force Base will be in the black of night – 12:41 a.m. local time – and land-bound shuttle buffs aren't invited.

NASA announced last week that the public would be banned from the desert landing strip next month, partly because there will be little to watch and partly because officials would not be able to see rule-breakers crossing lines onto the runway.

"Basically, you just aren't going to be able to see very much," said NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson. "You'll see the touchdown with floodlights, and then it'll roll out right back into the darkness."

Early reports gave "inadequate nighttime accommodations" as the reason the public was banned. But Jackson admitted that the areas which repeatedly have been filled with 150,000 people at previous landings of the space shuttle have not been changed.

"People have a good time over there, which is fine," said the official. "We don't want to restrict them, but we feel we might lose control of the crowds. On every shuttle, we've had people go out and try to cross the lakebed (where the shuttle lands). In the dark, we're afraid we wouldn't be able to see them."

Jackson gave reasons for the nighttime landing, which will follow a 2:30 a.m. takeoff from Cape Canaveral, Fla., Aug. 30. The shuttle will be carrying a new communications satellite for India, and to put it in orbit directly above that country, the shuttle must take off at night. And a nighttime takeoff makes a nighttime landing almost mandatory, he said.

A near-dawn landing might have been possible, Jackson said, but "we feel that to be truly operational, we have to demonstrate our capability to land at night."

Mission commander Richard Truly and his crew of four – including the world's first black astronaut, Guion Bluford, should have no difficulty finding their runway in the dark, NASA says. Lighting Challenger's route to California will be six high-intensity xenonarc lamps, flanking the runway in an arrow configuration that points in the direction of the landing.

The Ritz returns

Midland's newest entertainment outlet actually is one of the city's oldest — the reborn Ritz Theatre. It's good to have the Ritz entertaining Midlanders again — for more than one reason.

One of the most common complaints heard from youthful Midlanders is that there's nothing to do in Midland. That's a little accurate in one respect and a lot inaccurate in another, especially since the reopening of the Ritz three weeks ago or so.

It's true that Midland doesn't enjoy much of nature's free entertainment provided by lakes, streams, forests and the like and no city can ever have too many attractions specifically geared for youngsters. But the number of movie houses, swimming pools, water amusement parks and city parks available here renders the charge that there's nothing to do in Midland completely false.

What's more, the Ritz is offering another entertainment dimension to Midlanders. For those who have grumbled for years that the movies being shown today are filled with violence, drugs and sex, the Ritz offers a fresh alternative in the form of G-rated movies, foreign films of the classic period and, perhaps later on, Spanish language films.

The Ritz has been operating in Midland — off and on — since the 1920s, but closed in 1980, presumably for good. Now its back with a purpose — to offer Midlanders an entertainment option they do not now have. Welcome back!

Biting the bullet

At the risk of alienating the liberal wing of his party, Colorado Gov. Richard D. Lamm, a Democrat, is agitating to reform America's immigration laws and to crack down on the flow of illegal aliens from Mexico.

A few months ago he incurred the wrath of Hispanic politicians in his state when he called upon a Denver hospital to deny public health benefits to illegal aliens.

In so doing, however, the thrice elected governor demonstrated he is less concerned with votes than he is with the solvency and prosperity of his state, the very qualities he was chosen by the people to uphold. And, as Gov. Lamm has pointed out, the unemployed in Colorado as well as across the country are going to be short-changed as long as the United States continues to accept twice as many immigrants as the rest of the world.

Gov. Lamm's track record is unassailable, otherwise the people would not have elected him to three consecutive four-year terms. So he can be believed when he contends that his position on illegal aliens is not racist but common sense. And he is to be believed when he maintains that decisions on immigration to this country should be made by the U.S. Congress and not by Fidel Castro and professional alien smugglers.

Another View:

Public land abuse

Interior Secretary James Watt has withdrawn 2.5 million acres under his jurisdiction from the Reagan administration's land-sale program. He now says the program is a "mistake." He is right. "Privatization," as the sales program is called, is as mistaken politically as it is economically. Its purpose is to reduce the federal debt. But using federal sales to pay down the nation's debt is like trying to empty Lake Superior with a leaky thimble.

Unfortunately the controversy that surrounds Watt has eclipsed the serious arguments by people who favor privatization. Their thesis is that because public lands belong to everyone, the lands belong to no one and therefore tend to get abused.

Privatization advocates argue that bureaucracies, like most other enterprises, exist principally for their own benefit; that those who run them view success as a larger staff and a larger budget. Such oversimplifications ignore abundant evidence of good intentions by people in most bureaucracies, public and private. But agencies that manage public lands do seem susceptible to self-serving influences.

In some western national forests, for example, the value of wood sold repays only a fraction of the cost of managing and selling the timber — not to mention the cost in lost wildlife habitat, silted streams and other environmental degradation. A private owner likely would leave the timber standing rather than cut it at a loss. But federal agencies can fudge on profit and loss. Their greater worries are the special-interest pressure exerted by timber companies and the number of jobs and dollars their agency will get next year. So the bureaucrats go on cutting timber that would be better dedicated to protecting watershed and wildlife.

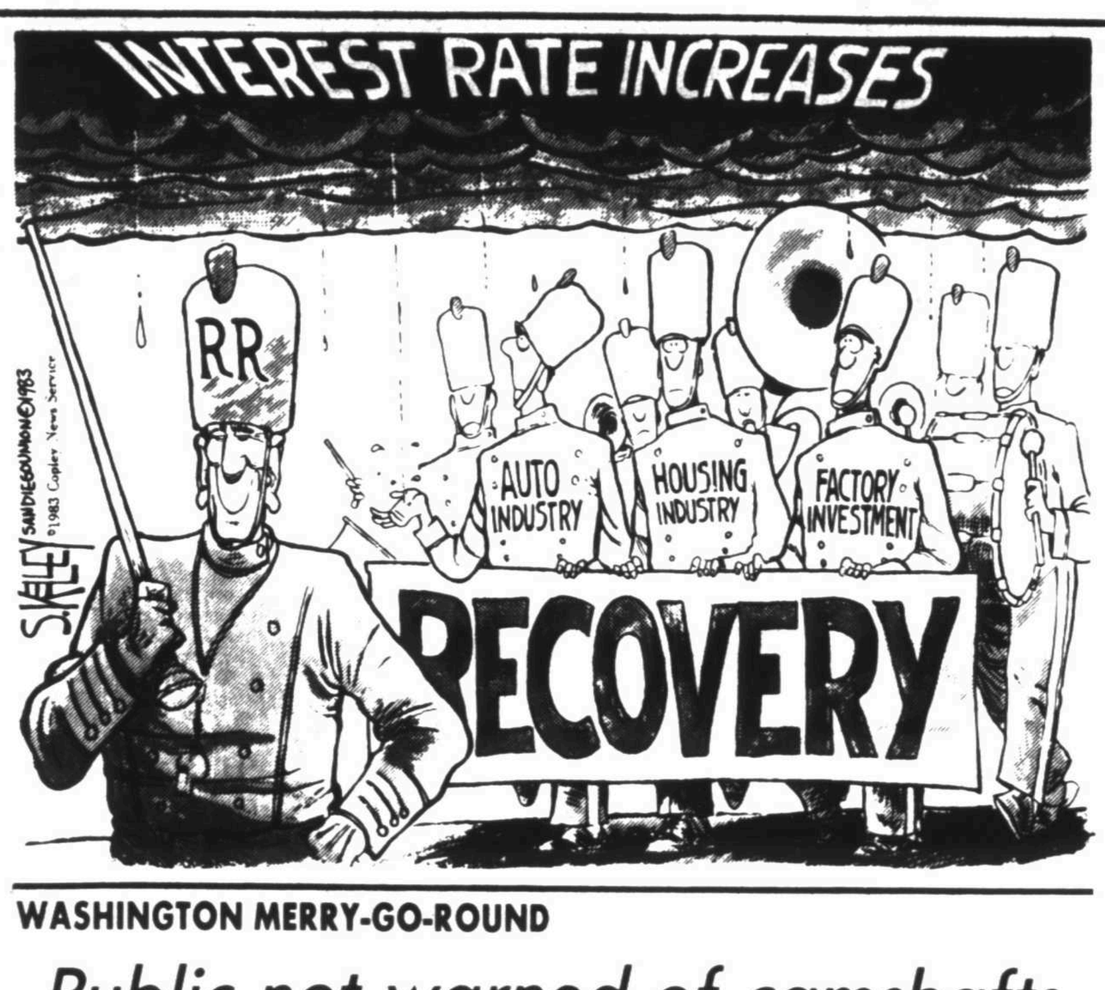

Similarly, ranchers have only a tenuous claim on the federal lands they use to graze their cattle or sheep. Because that claim can be revoked, ranchers have little incentive to conserve the land for the long term and every reason to mine it for all they can get into this year's herd. The result is often overgrazing, soil erosion and reduced carrying capacity.

The problem with privatization as a solution to these abuses is that it gives inadequate weight to the benefits of public ownership. Access is the most important. Ranchers who could not hope to buy their summer range can rent it for reasonable fees. Everyone has equal access to the national forests, wilderness areas and other public lands, the streams that flow across them, the animals they shelter and the lakes they contain. No one has yet devised a workable plan to guarantee continued access to lands transferred to private owners.

Moreover, the free market should not always determine land use. The market reads prices well, but is blind to other important elements. A rich man and a poor man may value a lake equally for its beauty. But one could bid far more to maintain that beauty. Only the political process is able to interpret, albeit imperfectly, the strength of important non-economic values that people attach to the land.

For most public land, privatization is a bad idea. But that should not blind Americans to the problems in land management that advocates of privatization seek to correct. Ways must be found to build into the federal land-management system better safeguards against the pressures that make land abuse an unwanted by-product of public ownership.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Public not warned of camshafts

WASHINGTON — When the average American buys a new car — kicks the tires, slams the doors and tries out the padding in the seats — the chances are pretty good that the salesman never mentions the camshaft. It's an integral part of the engine and is pretty much taken for granted.

Jack Anderson

But General Motors failed to warn 15 million car buyers that using a certain type of engine oil would cause premature wear in the camshafts of their V-8 engines, in use since 1974. The result of using the wrong oil could be a $400 repair bill, according to Federal Trade Commission documents.

The problem with the GM camshaft usually crops up after 25,000 miles on Chevrolets, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and GMC trucks. Normally, a well-lubricated camshaft should last the life of the vehicle.

To keep the magnitude of the camshaft problem from the car-buying public, GM arranged with the FTC to use local arbitration boards and handle complaints on an individual basis. The FTC has not given final approval to this. Meanwhile, the true extent of the camshaft problem has been hidden from the public under a 1980 court order sealing hundreds of documents.

My associate Tony Capaccio has obtained evidence of GM's cover-up from internal FTC documents turned up by Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., and interviews with industry insiders familiar with the case.

In the mid-1970s, according to these sources, GM learned that certain types of oil, classified for use in both gasoline and diesel vehicles, were causing camshaft failure because they lacked sufficient anti-wear protection.

Cleveland FTC files showed that camshaft failure occurred "in 70 percent of the reported cases at 20,000 miles or later, with an average failure at 28,000." The FTC staff was aware of 3,345 complaints of camshaft failure.

According to the documents, GM claimed only a 1 percent failure for its camshafts. Even accepting the company's estimate, that would mean a minimum of 150,000 defective camshafts. With an estimated average of $400 for each repair bill, that means GM car buyers have laid out $60 million for repairs that might have been avoided if the company had told its customers what it knew.

And it's a lead-pipe cinch that GM knew about the camshaft problem early on. Internal documents show that GM told its dealers about the oil problem between 1976 and 1978 — but waited till 1980 to tell its customers.

"It appears that significant consumer injury did occur due to GM's non-disclosure," stated one FTC analysis. "Consumer loss that did occur could have been easily avoided if GM had adequate oil-use instructions in its owners' manual once it learned, at least by 1975, of the problem.... Absent such disclosure, GM owners were unlikely to learn of the problem."

Footnote: A GM spokesman said: "We feel we took responsible measures to protect our customers from the problem.... We encouraged the oil companies to reformulate their oil." He also said the camshaft problem "had nothing to do with a defect inherent in the product."

PENTAGON PIPELINE: Stupid planning almost led the Army to spend $7.5 million on mess halls it didn't need in Germany. Fortunately, General Accounting Office auditors found out about it and four of the seven planned mess halls have been canceled. Auditors blamed the mess hall mess on the Army's faulty method of computing the number of personnel who will eat GI rations when off-base options are available. The auditors said they have no idea how often the armed services build unnecessary mess halls; they only checked seven.

— The Defense Department's inspector general discovered that the Air Force has been skimping on testing of electronic weapons to meet production schedules. One high-speed missile, for example, was tested only half as many hours as specifications required, even though full testing was deemed necessary to establish reliability. In another case, an electronic jamming system lacked support equipment and a technical manual, without which proper testing was impossible. But the Air Force ran the tests anyway.

AIDS HOTLINE: Critics charge that the Reagan administration's response to the growing medical problem of AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — has been inadequate. They claim that since 1981, when AIDS first surfaced, the National Institutes of Health have spent only about $12 million on the disease out of a total of $11.2 billion in medical research expenditures. And though the Department of Health and Human Services has set up a hotline to answer questions about AIDS, only about half the calls actually get through. Even then, critics charge, the calls are answered by public-relations people who give stock answers that do little to quiet the callers' fears.

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviet radar sets Reagan course

WASHINGTON — Disregarding risks to next year's election campaign, President Reagan has quietly signaled national security adviser William P. Clark to damn the torpedoes and go full speed ahead in challenging the Soviet Union to explain apparent violations of nuclear treaties with the U.S.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Not surprisingly, Reagan's admonition was music to Judge Clark, whose ears are finely tuned to the question of the Soviet Union playing fast and loose with the SALT treaties. Intimates say Clark has reluctantly concluded that evidence of a massive new Soviet radar — this one in central Siberia — looks like "smoking gun" evidence of Soviet cheating on the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) treaty.

What surprised hard-line Reaganauts was not Clark but the fact that Secretary of State George Shultz and Foggy Bottom's Soviet experts are also convinced that the long-suspected smoking gun may now be in hand. That ends more than three months of high-level vascillation on whether Reagan should risk going to the mat with the Russians on SALT violations. With Clark and Shultz — backed by the Pentagon and the CIA — now agreeing, only the politicians warn the president to go slow.

But warnings that taking the Kremlin to the woodshed could damage Reagan's political prospects by putting confrontation back in vogue cut little ice with the president. What the politicians have had in mind is continuation of the gradual — if meaningless — warming trend between Ronnie and Yuri to be followed by a Reagan-Andropov summit extravaganza sometime before midyear 1984.

That would finally remove the Ghengis Khan cloak draped over Reagan's shoulders in the 1980 campaign and replace it with the olive branch of peace. Reagan campaign strategists have been trying to advance that political scenario for months, led by White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver.

The latest fact to intrude on Deaver's dream of running Reagan for re-election as the peace candidate was the discovery by U.S. spy satellites of a major Soviet radar installation that is a clear violation of the ABM Treaty. The White House was alerted July 15 with a cautiously-worded statement from the intelligence community that the new radar base "appears to be inconsistent" with the treaty.

Far tougher language is used at high levels of the State Department to describe the new radar base, which resembles five others, including the battle-management radar covering Moscow. The Moscow radar is linked to a missile-defense system — the sole anti-missile system permitted by the ABM Treaty.

At State, officials make no pretense of underplaying the new radar. One top diplomat told us that the only question is whether the violation it represents is "pernicious" or something less. Except for the missile-defense system covering Moscow, the treaty permits only early-warning or tracking radars and requires them to be sited along the "periphery" of the Soviet Union.

The new Siberian radar station is aimed at the Pacific Coast facing Alaska, nearly 2,000 miles away, not at China, to the South. By itself, that is an airtight case of violating the ABM Treaty.

But the new radar also happens to be near several sites of intercontinental missiles. That suggests an intent to harness it to a missile-defense system to protect those offensive missiles, a violation that would be clearly "pernicious."

As new chairman of the president's top-level Arms Control Policy Group, the only inter-agency group he chairs, Clark will accept neither a "nyet" nor an undue delay from Moscow to the American request for an emergency U.S.-Soviet meeting. The U.S. wants to take up the radar question and other long-pending U.S. suspicions that the Russians are building new offensive missiles ruled out by SALT II.

Clark's impatience reflects the president's. Despite undercover planning for a pre-election summit, Reagan insists that the unresolved question of Soviet violations must be answered, whatever the impact on U.S.-Soviet cordiality. So long as Clark remains by his side, no one is likely to change his mind that the best 1984 politics is to tell the truth about Soviet deceit and let American voters make up their own minds.

CHARLEY REESE

Immigration reform bill offers start

The United States has the fastest rate of population growth in the industrialized world and nearly 50 percent of that growth is due to immigration, both legal and illegal.

Charley Reese

To give you an idea of the pressure from illegal aliens alone, Donald R. Coppock, former chief of the U.S. Border Patrol, said recently that while the Border Patrol apprehended about 44,000 illegals in 1964, the apprehensions today are running at a rate of over a million a year.

Our country today cannot control its own borders and as much of the world sinks lower into poverty or is set afire by revolution and war, more and more people try to find a haven in the United States.

Mexico, for example, has an unemployment rate of about 40 percent and is approaching economic collapse as a result of the mismanagement of its government.

You can't blame the illegals. They are human beings who are trying to survive and find a better life for themselves and their families. It is basic to human nature that when your boat sinks, you swim toward the closest floating object rather than drown.

That happens to be us. It is also a cruel truth that if too many people pile into a lifeboat, the boat will sink, drowning not only the latest arrivals but the first occupants of the boat as well.

It is time for Americans to realize that they must look to their own survival. I'm not suggesting that we cut of all immigration. I'm saying we absolutely have to control our own borders and let only those in that we choose to let in.

A reform of our current immigration laws, the Simpson-Mazolli bill, has twice passed the U.S. Senate and has been acted upon by our committees in the House. It is being bottled up in the House rules committee by the Democratic leadership who are afraid of offending special interest groups.

Even this bill leaves a lot to be desired. It grants amnesty to illegal aliens and that is a gross error, for it will simply encourage more illegal immigration. But it does beef up enforcement activities and apply legal penalties to employers who hire illegal aliens.

It is time to break it out of the grip of the Democratic leadership and let the House vote on it. The present situation, which is getting worse by the day, is helping to drive down wages and to keep Americans unemployed. It is adding to costs of government and filling up some of our cities with people who have no special fondness for democratic government.

The Federation for American Immigration Reform has recently paid for a national poll of black and Hispanic Americans and found that substantial majorities of both black and Hispanics favored penalties against employers of illegal aliens and increased funding for the Border Patrol.

In short, as is usually the case, it is not blacks and Hispanics who oppose immigration reform — it is black and Hispanic organizations who claim to speak for people who are not even members of their organizations.

Unfortuantely, the pols in Washington too often listen to spokesmen instead of to people with whom they prefer not to associate if at all possible.

If you care about yourself and your family and your country, you'd better let your congressman know that you want immigration reform passed just as soon as the August recess is over.

Greek government presses tax dispute with shipping heiress

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Christina Onassis' summer vacation on her private island has been marred this year by a tax dispute with Greece's Socialist government that could cost her more than $40 million in inheritance duties.

The government wants the 33-year-old shipping heiress to pay four billion drachmas — $44 million — in taxes on her late father's properties in Greece. They include luxurious villas, some undeveloped real estate and the island retreat of Scorpios off the western Greek coast.

Authorities say it is the biggest inheritance tax claim ever made in Greece. But Miss Onassis, according to her lawyers, is convinced she does not owe the Greek state any money.

Legal observers say it may reflect a hardening of official attitudes toward wealthy Greek expatriates who fly in occasionally on vacation but make few investments here.

'My client is being persecuted. She is being treated infinitely worse than the average Greek citizen," Stelios Papadimitriou, Miss Onassis' lawyer.

The plump, dark-haired heiress, who shuns publicity and rarely visits Greece, went to Scorpios early this month for a holiday with friends.

Her arrival coincided with a tax court rejection of her lawyers' request to defer starting death duty payments pending an appeal court hearing of the case.

"It is an unusually high amount, but given her substantial means Miss Onassis is able to pay," the court ruled.

She is required to pay $31 million in inheritance taxes and another $13.3 million in interest and fines for failing to file a Greek tax return after her father, Aristotle Onassis, died in 1975.

To help secure its claim, the court already has sequestered a one-acre lot near Athens that belongs to Miss Onassis.

But her lawyer claims that Miss Onassis is not liable to pay Greek taxes.

He said four Panama-based companies owned the Greek firms that controlled Aristotle Onassis' property in Greece. He added that Onassis, a Greek born in Turkey, held an Argentine passport and was never an official resident in Greece.

Onassis began building his shipping empire in the 1930s and after World War II married a daughter of Greek shipowner Stavros Livanos. He then became the brother-in-law of Stavros Niarchos, another shipping magnate, and the three men became a powerful force in the world's shipping industry.

Christina Onassis' summer vacation on her private Greek Island has been marred by a demand from the Socialist government of Greece that she pay $44 million in taxes on her late father's estate.

Police fear for captive

LETTERKENNY, Ireland (AP) — Police held six suspected Irish National Liberation Army extremists under heavy guard today after a raid that freed the kidnapped sister and stepfather of guerrilla informer Harry Kirkpatrick.

But the organization, which says killing informers' relatives is their "only option" to silence the growing band of traitors in guerrilla ranks, still holds Kirkpatrick's wife, and police fear for her life.

Police in Dublin said they believe 24-year-old Elizabeth Kirkpatrick is held by the guerrillas in the remote countryside of County Donegal, in the north of the Irish Republic.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was abducted May 18 from her home in Roman Catholic west Belfast in Northern Ireland. The Irish National Liberation Army guerrillas have threatened to kill her "in the very near future" because of her jailed husband's decision to betray his former comrades to British authorities.

Police and troops were searching for the four suspected INLA men still at large after Thursday's pre-dawn raid that freed Kirkpatrick's 13-year-old sister, Diane, and his stepfather Richard Hill, 45. Both were found alive and well. They were abducted Aug. 3 at the family's holiday home in the Irish Republic's County Mayo, 90 miles from where police found them.

Wednesday night, the INLA issued a statement in Belfast saying Kirkpatrick had "decided to condemn his family to death."

Hill, a theater manager, told reporters he and the girl were listening to a radio Wednesday night with their captors when news of the INLA statement was broadcast.

"It was rough, very rough. I don't think I would want to wish that on my worst enemy after what we have been through," he said. "The worst time was the actual abduction and then last night (Wednesday) when we heard on the radio, quite by accident, the plans that lay ahead of us."

The four fugitives, believed by police to have been part of a 10-man INLA gang holding the girl and Hill captive in a house near the County Donegal village of Falcarragh, were thought to be hiding in the county's Derryveagh Mountains. Police described the four as "armed and very dangerous."

Alerted by a lookout and leaving their two captives behind, the gang fled the house minutes before machine-gun toting detectives from Ireland's Special Task Force raided the building.

Weinberger denies report

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has strongly denied a Lebanese report which quoted him as saying he concealed a Saudi arms request from President Reagan, calling the report a "crude attempt at disinformation."

The account in the Lebanese magazine "Al Sapir" had prompted an inquiry from New York Mayor Edward I. Koch.

The magazine on July 17 printed what was purported to be a transcript of a meeting between Weinberger and Saudi Defense Minister Sultan Ben Abd el Aziz.

Secretary Weinberger is dismayed that Mayor Koch would so promptly and publicly use the alleged transcript with no attempt whatsoever to check its authenticity with the secretary by a simple, direct phone call.

Military claims evidence that Cuba, Nicaragua behind subversion attempt

While leftist-rightist fighting raged in El Salvador and Nicaragua, the Honduran military claimed it has "concrete evidence" that Cuba and Nicaragua are behind efforts to overthrow the government of pro-American Honduras.

Col. Cesar Elvir Sierra, chief of the Honduran army's public relations, on Thursday presented three men he claimed had defected from a group of about 3,000 Hondurans said to be trained in subversion by Cuba and Nicaragua.

Elvir Sierra claimed this shows the military high command "possesses concrete evidence that Nicaragua and Cuba are fully identified as promoters of a subversive escalation against Honduras."

He also said: "We also have confirmed reports about the massive training in Nicaragua and Cuba of Hondurans who, subtly deceived, are trained to alter the peace of the republic and our democratic system obtained at the voting boxes."

Earlier this week, Honduran military chief Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez accused Nicaraga's leftist Sandinista government of helping about 200 Honduran rebels he claimed were trained in Cuba and the Soviet Union enter Honduras. Both he and Elvir Sierra said the force had been "neutralized."

Relations between Nicaragua and Honduras have worsened since the Sandinistas came to power, ousting the late Nicaraguan rightist President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

The Sandinistas accuse Honduras of aiding and harboring U.S.-supported insurgents operating in northern Nicaragua. Many of the insurgents are Somoza loyalists.

In Nicaragua, an army officer said Thurday that a heavily armed force of about 2,000 rebel invaders from Honduras crossed into Nicaragua's northern Jinotega province and Zelaya province in the northeast 15 days earlier. He said 140 guerrillas and 60 Sandinista soldiers have been killed since then in 18 encounters.

The officer, who spoke on condition he not be named, said fighting persisted near the towns of Wiwili, San Jose de Bocay and San Rafael del Norte, all about 100 miles north of the capital of Managua.

There had been no previous announcement of a major rebel incursion into the remote areas and the report could not be verified independently.

The Defense Ministry announced Thursday night that a band of about 100 rebels at Sairiniaya on the isolated Caribbean coast ambushed a Sandinista reserve battalion, killing 10 of the government forces while suffering at least one casualty. He said the fight happened recently but did not specify a date.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega described the situation in northern Nicaragua as "difficult" and said the offensive was stronger than those launched in March and May during which an estimated 2,000 people on both sides were killed.

President Reagan has described the Nicaraguan rebels as "freedom fighters."

LASER MUSIC by SONY

A Sound Barrier Crumbles

It all begins with striking, dramatic improvements in musical reproduction. When you first audition the CDP-101, you'll be immediately struck by the outstanding quality of the sound.

The digital and laser technology enabled us to eliminate many of the previous limitations only too evident in today's conventional records. Distortion in the compact disc is lower than ever before in any medium. Dynamic range approaches the perfection of a live concert. Frequency response spans the entire sonic spectrum, yet remains ruler-flat. Wow and flutter cannot be detected at all, even by the most sensitive test instruments. Surface noise, too, is completely absent. And a signal-to-noise ratio of over 90dB produces depth and clarity that you won't even recognize as recorded music. It's that impressive.

Sound is very difficult to describe in words — its very nature demands that it be heard. Suffice it to say here that if you're used to conventional analog records — even the best, most meticulously crafted direct-to-disc LPs — the digital reproduction that's possible with compact discs and the CDP-101 will far exceed even your loftiest expectations.

So digital compact discs are capable of unparalleled sonic reproduction. But as you'll see on the following pages, there is a great deal more to the CDP-101.

Waters flood Hindu holy town

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Raging waters of the Bhima River swollen by heavy rains have swept into the Hindu holy town of Pandharpur in western Maharashtra state, forcing more than 3,000 people to flee low lying areas, officials said.

At least three temples were flooded in Pandharpur, a popular pilgrimage site 180 miles southeast of Bombay, and parts of the town were knee deep in water Thursday, officials said.

People forced from the flooded lowlands were sheltered in a bus station, a railway shed and other temples, the United News of India reported.

Crewmen eject before crash

KARUP, Denmark (AP) — Two crewmen escaped unhurt from a U.S. Air Force F-4 jet fighter by ejecting just before the aircraft crashed as it approached the NATO base here for a landing, a Danish Air Force duty officer said.

Lt. Klaus Christensen said the Phantom went down Thursday in a flat, unpopulated area about a mile from the runway. The cause of the crash was unknown.

The plane was on a routine mission in the Karup area, Christensen said.

U.S. Air Force headquarters in Ramstein, West Germany, identified the Phantom pilot as Capt. Wayne A. Hermandorfer, 27, of Easton, Conn. His navigator was identified as 1st Lt. Timothy P. Brennan, 26, of Lula, Ga.

Warplanes accused of damage

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angola has accused South African warplanes of destroying a town in southern Angola and urged an immediate halt to what it called South African "aggression."

An Angolan Embassy press release Thursday said the fighter-bombers destroyed the town of Cangamba in Moxico province Sunday.

Judge indicts former officer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A federal judge investigating the activities of right-wing death squads in the mid-1970s has indicated former junta member and retired Adm. Emilio Massera in connection with the terrorism.

It was the first civil court indictment of a former officer in connection with the abduction and summary execution of people for political reasons.

A former navy chief, Massera was a founding member of the junta that replaced President Isabel Peron March 24, 1976.

UN committed $1 billion to China

PEKING (AP) — United Nations agencies have committed more than $1 billion in aid and loans to China since it decided in 1978 to accept the world body's assistance, a new U.N. booklet says.

The assistance has gone to help bring China into the computer age, relocate about 270,000 Vietnamese refugees in China, strengthen family planning work, boost agriculture and adopt other modernization, the booklet says.

technical representative for the AspenAir™ Air Processor™ System, will demonstrate this amazing and unique air cleaner. He will explain the principles of "open space" electrostatic precipitation employed by this system to remove air pollutants such as tobacco smoke, household dust, pollen, virus, bacteria, and odors which are trapped by today's well insulated and sealed homes and offices -- microscopic pollutants, small enough to be inhaled directly into the lungs.

As compared to the obsolete fan filter systems which can only remove particles of pollution 5 microns or larger (less than 10% of the problem) the AspenAir™ purifier silently removes invisible pollutants as small as .001 microns -- the invisible 90% of our problem!

Aspen vs. The Others

Grant smiles at forecast

WACO (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff listens to predictions of a second-division finish for his Bears and smiles.

"Nobody gives us much of a chance," he says. "Of course, the experts have done that to us before."

Teaff has brought the Bears Southwest Conference football championships in 1974 and 1980 on years that started out like this one.

He has a lot of talent but it's mostly untested, particularly at the vital quarterback position.

If it were a horse race, the Bears would be listed as 25-to-1 shots behind Texas, Southern Methodist, Arkansas, Houston, and Texas A&M.

The last time Baylor was picked sixth in the conference the Bears finished sixth in the nation.

The Bears will trot out a brand new offense and a new defense this year in the season opener against high-scoring Brigham Young on Sept. 10.

Teaff moved to the I Formation so he could put swift Alfred Anderson at tailback.

The Bears will unveil a 4-4 defense or wide tackle six, if you prefer, which was used sparingly but with some success last season.

Teaff also has had to revamp his staff because he lost four assistants.

"We're a team in transition in both the personnel and coaching standpoints," said Teaff. "It should be an interesting season."

A player who could make things very interesting for Teaff is quarterback Cody Carlson, who is a freshman in eligibility because he was hurt last season.

"He could be the best we've ever had around here," said Teaff. "Tom Muecke could be a great one, too."

"Cody is a better passer than Tom and Tom is a better runner than Cody but neither one is a slouch at either one," said Teaff. "They're both capable of becoming All-Southwest Conference quarterbacks."

The Bears have two gifted receivers in Gerald McNeil and Bruce Davis, who are swift and sure-handed.

Anderson rushed for 822 yards last season, the most yards of any back returning in the SWC for the 1983 campaign.

Defensively, the Bears are tough up front but green in the secondary. Giant 290-pound tackle Pat Coryatt anchors the defense.

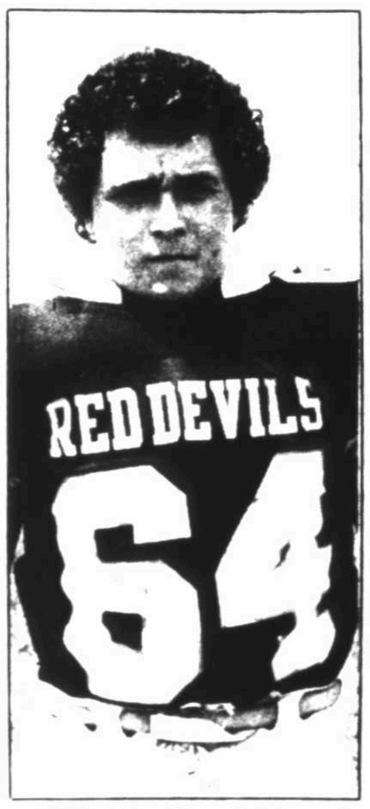

Teaff said the key to the season should be how the Bears fare in the first three games.

"If we are to be successful, we need to come out of those games in good shape," Teaff said. "Opening with Brigham Young will be one of the biggest challenges that any team I've ever coached has had.

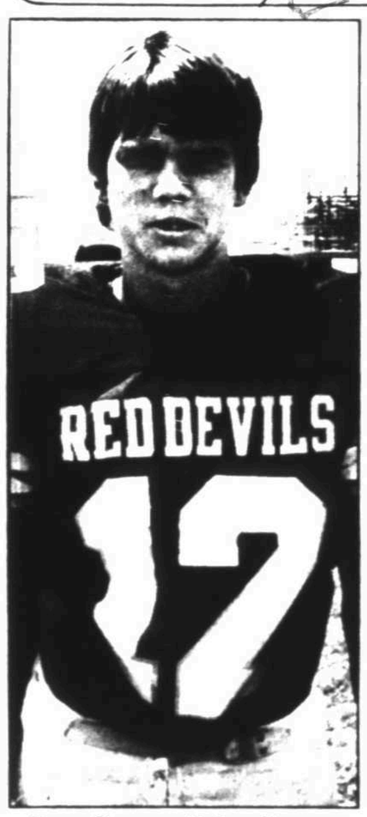

"Then we play UTEP (Texas-El Paso) and they're coached by my former assistant Bill Yung. They're well coached and he'll have them ready to play. then we have Texas Tech at home to open the conference. The conference opener is always critical."

How does Teaff see the SWC race? He picks Texas, saying the Longhorns "should be head and shoulders above the rest of us."

Of course, that's what the experts said in 1974 and 1980.

Eddie Don Templeton provides expereince for youthful Red Devils.

Doug Doege will handle quarterbacking duties for Rankin this season.

Red Devils lurk in bushes

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Rankin Red Devils enter 1983 in the kind of position head coach Dwayne Turner loves.

The Devils aren't looked at to be the team to beat in district 6-A. The 19-player squad is shy on numbers, obviously, doesn't have impressive size and aren't very seasoned, what with only five seniors suiting up.

If that seems to bode poorly for Rankin, then Turner has the opposition just where he wants them - unaware.

It is not a new place that Turner will occupy. In the 13 previous years he has been at the Red Devil helm, Rankin has won its share of games. In fact, Rankin has been a chief contender in the district. But this year's squad has an uphill climb if they are to repeat last season's 6-4 mark.

"We lost 16 seniors," laments Turner. "And we had to cancel the junior varsity games last year because there was not enough players." Nevertheless, Turner saw 34 players come out of the Rankin woodwork that want to wear the red. That kind of enthusiasm, typical of the football-frenzied populace, "was more than I expected," said Turner. "It tickled me to death."

Turner's boys may not have the physical specifications of a champion, but there are intangibles and a nucleus of young talent that inspire optomism.

Offensively, the Red Devils will attack from the wing T formation, which means Turner wants to get a running game going. "We're based on running, but we hope to develop into a passing ballclub," said Turner. The signalcaller in this scheme is senior Doug Doege, an end last season. Doege is 6-0, 154, and one of the larger squadmen. Doege played a few games at the position last year, but this will be his first full season at quarterback.

Behind Doege, and expected to play a major role in the ballcarrying is sophomore fullback Randy Fulton. Fulton, 5-7, 156, played strictly one way last year on defense, thus he is a newcomer to the offense.

"We lost all our backfield, offense and defense," said Turner. "Our defense is by far ahead of our offense."

Defensively, the Red Devils are counting on a small but rangy bunch of players lead by guard Eddie Don Templeton. Templeton, 5-9, 170, has been on the scene in some way since his freshman year. As for this team, which will look to him for leadership he says: "They like to play football." Templeton and Turner both realize that the quickest way to overcome offensive questions is through defense. "We've got to play defense," he said. "That's the main thing. There's no better offense than a good defense."

Figuring in that defense is Rob "Ox" Leck, a 5-10, 200 pounder who is a junior. Leck is the biggest squadman in the Devils' 4-3 scheme.

So what shall be expected of this young squad?

"We've got lots of young kids, and at least one freshman will be starting," Turner said. "Injuries would kill us, but any team is that way. Our kids are going to have to rise to the occasion and do the best they can. They haven't played a lot of football."

The Devils have no breaks in the schedule, which only adds to the climb. The road has claimed more than a few young teams and figures to be a harsh master for Rankin. The Red Devils face McCamey, seventh-ranked Iraan, and first-ranked Wink away this year.

Rankin practices on top of a hill overlooking the town. It is a forbidding place, one without shade or respite from the task at hand - football. "They take a lot of pride in this old nob hill," Turner smiles, "It is a definite plus. We are in good physical shape, as good as anytime.

We've got a real rebuilding job to do."

As the saying goes, some people don't rebuild, they reload. If Turner is Turner, it's likely that he hasn't played his hole card yet. The Red Devils seem to be a little short in just about every area, but football is a funny game. By season's end, the Red Devils could have the last laugh.

Red Devil Report Card:

Offensive Line, B - team strong point.

Receivers, C - could improve.

Quarterback, C - Doege untested, freshman backup.

Running Backs, C - small, but has promise.

Defensive Line, B - not big, but quick.

Linebackers, C plus - good range, and Devils need it.

Secondary, C - not great speed, but decent.

Overall: C - the Devils have some dedicated players and a good coach, but no size, experience or depth, not to mention a murderous schedule. But desire has won a lot of ball games.

Predicted finish: 4-6.

Prado silences 'Banner'

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Ricardo Prado said he had heard the "Star Spangled Banner" played once too often at Pan American Games awards ceremonies, so he did something about it.

Through the first six swimming races and two diving events, the United States was a winner every time, but Prado, a 5-foot-6, 142-pound Brazilian who trains in California and Texas, ended the streak Thursday night.

"I was tired of hearing the 'Star Spangled Banner,'" a chuckling Prado said after winning the 400-meter individual medley, his world record specialty, in Pan Am record time of 4 minutes, 21.43 seconds.

Prado eclipsed the 1979 meet standard of 4:21.63 by Jesse Vassallo of the United States and finished six seconds ahead of silver medalist Jeff Kostoff of Upland, Calif. Mike O'Brien of Mission Viejo, Calif., tied with Canadian Peter Dobson for the bronze.

When Kathy Bald of Canada set another meet record in the next race, the 200-meter breaststroke, beating Susan Rapp of Eden Prairie, Minn., and Kim Rhodenbaugh of Cincinnati, the American hope of equalling the 1979 feat of winning 28 of 29 races ended.

But the U.S. team still isn't doing badly in the water, or on land, either.

Matt Gribble of Miami lowered the games record in the 100 butterfly twice Thursday and he and Cynthia "Sippy" Woodhead, who won the 200 freestyle for her sixth overall Pan Am gold medal, led two 1-2 American sweeps. The U.S. team also won the men's 800 freestyle relay, and Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo put on another in a long string of impressive diving performances in winning the three-meter springboard.

U.S. boxers Dennis Milton and Louis Howard easily won their bouts, the baseball team stayed undefeated after four games and U.S. shooters won four more golds for a total of 18.

In the medal standings, the United States has 39 golds and 77 overall. Cuba's count is 29 golds and a total of 63, while Canada has 6-40 and Venezuela 2-21.

Prado, the only Brazilian swimmer considered a medal threat, said he was put under plenty of subtle pressure by team officials.

"I stayed at a hotel Wednesday night instead of the Village and they reminded me that I was the only one (to get that treatment)," said Prado, who attends Southern Methodist University. "They said they were doing me a big favor and I should appreciate it by winning. They don't care if I set a world record. They want medals."

Louganis, the world and defending Pan Am champion in both the springboard and 10-meter platform, dominated the springboard so completely that he could have skipped the last of his 11 dives and still won.

He finished with 724.02 points, while Abel Ramirez of Cuba was second with 631.26 and David Burgering of Mission Viejo third with 616.15. Going into his final dive, Louganis already had 640.32.

"I realize that in the springboard, I'm largely competing against myself," said Louganis, who increasingly is being called the best diver ever. "So, I have set a goal of 800 points. To do that, I would have to be nearly perfect."

The California-Irvine student has a personal best of 752.67.

Gribble became the third swimmer to lower the Pan Am record in the men's butterfly in qualifying with a clocking of 54.64 seconds. He erased the meet record times of 55.54 by Canadian Tom Ponting and 55.27 by Morales, from Santa Clara, Calif., set in earlier heats.

Then Gribble came through with a 54.25, with Morales following .37 later for the silver.

Woodhead, of Riverside, Calif., the star of the 1979 Pan Am championships in San Juan, Puerto Rico, with five gold medals, one world record and five meet records, and Mary Wayte of Mercer Island, Wash., finished 1-2 in the 200 freestyle final. Woodhead was timed in 2:01.33, more than three seconds slower than her own world record.

"I hadn't even thought about winning six gold medals," said Woodhead, who has come close to retiring in recent years when swimming no longer was fun for her. "Four years seems so long ago. It's like it was a different sport."

In boxing, Milton scored a third-round knockout of Jamaica's Anthony Logan in the 156-pound class. He scored a pair of standing eight counts, and the referee stopped the bout with six seconds remaining.

Fernando Valenzuela exchanges glances with 10-month old youngster. If there seems to be a similarity, there is. That's Fernando, Jr.

Are these same White Sox who?

That Chicago White Sox team that comes into Arlington tonight to start a weekend series...that can't be the same White Sox over whom last rites were administered last April and May, can it?

This is, isn't it, the same team, that Carlton Fisk plays for? Last spring, Fisk was so bad folks were wondering if he'd bother to finish out the season before retiring.

And, this is the same team that had that shaky rookie throwin from the Steve Trout-for-Randy Martz deal with the Cubs at shortstop, isn't it?

The last time the White Sox won a pennant was in 1959 when they were known as the Go-Go Sox and many with long memories felt that after the Black Sox Scandals of 1919, even that was too soon. It was a series against the Dodgers which became famous for a trivia question....What major leaguer played in both a Rose Bowl game and World Series?....

FISK NOT only is back, swinging the bat better than ever, but there is no longer a hint of retirement.

And that rookie shortstop with the shakes was benched for a while, but Scott Fletcher, the ex-Midland Cub, is back, steadying the infield and proving that he can hit in the major leagues just like he did in the minors with an average hovering around .300.

It was written somewhere not long ago that the kid has struck out only three times all year.

Dennis Lamp, the off-the-field jokester and impressionist, is another ex-Midland Cub contributing, both as a short relief pitcher and spot starter.

The sinker ball pitcher can be very effective either way. Well, actually, until the White Sox began to make their run, Denny's specialty was long relief. However, he has filled a void as witness nine saves in the brief period in which he has been performing in the short relief role.

THE once-dead White Sox have a six-game lead over Kansas City and lead defending American League West champion California by nine games.

The Comiskeys' turn in fortune just illustrates how a streak or a slump can change the complexion of a season. Just a month or so ago, the Texas Rangers, their weekend opponent, were in first place before the All-Star break and Arlington fans were on the verge of pennant hysteria.

Ranger fans hadn't let themselves go yet. Cynicism is ingrained deeply in Texas fans, be they from the Metroplex or Houston. Disappointment is a way of baseball life in the Texas majors.

Still, the Rangers aren't so far back that a hot streak can't rekindle those flag hopes.

THE WHITE Sox, winners of seven of their last 10, are playing so well, they could make the American League Playoff a legitimate championship series. They have moved into fifth place in the overall AL standings, passing the Yankees.

The White Sox have a .551 percentage, but five AL East teams are ahead of them... Milwaukee (.571), Baltimore and Detroit (.559) and Toronto (.558).

All AL teams place each team in the league the same number of times, so the divisional standings are in reality subterfuge. In contrast, the National League teams play divisional rivals more often than inter-divisional rivals. The West may be vastly superior to the East in the NL, but, at least, it is camouflaged.

In the AL, the East is the first division and the West is the second division, plain and simple. As matters now stand, if the White Sox win, it would be a fifth place team playing a first place team, if the AL playoffs were to begin tomorrow.

However, most people accept the standings at face value and never question the legitimacy of the post-season playoffs.

The trivia answer. Chuck Essigian, a former Stanford footballer, played in the Series and earlier a Rose Bowl. By this time, it's probable that he isn't the only answer to the World Series-Rose Bowl question anymore.

Do Trojans really need grid coach?

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A lot of people were surprised when USC hired a football coach. They didn't think the Trojans needed one.

I mean, the prevailing opinion is, the Trojans have this little man out in a cave in the forest some place with a carpenter's apron on or this mad doctor with a whole bunch of test tubes and live wires and, every so often, someone at the university gets on the intercom and hollers down "OK, send up another Heisman. Also, we need five lineman about the same specs as last time.

"What? Oh, 6-8 or so, 290. They must be able to run the hundred in 9.6 and be able to bend crowbars without grunting. How are you coming on those split ends who turn invisible in sunlight? Can you have it all here by 4 o'clock?"

AT BEST, the SC coach's job would be ceremonial. He would be like the vice president or the Lord Mayor of London. He'd cut ribbons, dedicate plaques, help the guys on with their shoulder pads and turn off the showers and pick up the towels. You could tell him to sit at the end of the bench and look out for the horse.

The simple facts of the matter were that SC needed a new coach like Liz Taylor needed a new husband. It was nice. But not necessary.

I remember once, at a coaches' convention when an SC coach, with a half-dozen of his players, was demonstrating strategy on the stage of the Los Angeles Hilton and the president of the football coaches' association, Dan Jessee, from little Trinity College in New England, whistled. "Never mind the plays. Give me those players!"

THE MOLD was established many years ago. Howard Jones, an austere autocrat, humorless and demanding, used to comb every high school and junior college in the state for the biggest, fastest, strongest sons of the pioneers he could shoehorn past the academicians and they used to call his team "The Thundering Herd" and it went to the Rose Bowl every year and beat Pitt, 35-0, or some undefeated, untied, unscored-on team from Duke, or it bowled over UCLA, 76-0.

They called Howard the "Head Man," no one ever called him "Howie" or "Jonesy" and, when he left, they got rid of coaches who could only go 8-2 for the season as Jess Hill and Don Clark did in their last years.

They turned the teams over to Jaunty John McKay, a quippy, cheerful ex-scatback who couldn't believe his good luck — or his tailbacks' — the first time he saw an SC front-line which looked like a stand of sequoias in cleats.

McKay had a whole bunch of one-liners — and Heisman dinners — throughout his career and his coaching contribution was the ever-lovin' "Student Body Right," an offensive technique that had all the subtlety of a forest fire.

McKay's strategy consisted of giving his resident Heisman the ball 40 or 50 times a game and, when someone asked if that weren't a lot of times to carry the ball, answered "Why? It ain't heavy."

JOHN ROBINSON pretty much accepted the scheme of things and won three Rose Bowls and assorted Bluebonnet Bowls and beat UCLA and Notre Dame more or less regularly.

Usually, when any coach left, as McKay and Robinson did, the alumni set up a clamor for the university to hire a Paul Brown, a Vince Lombardi or resurrect Joan of Arc or the Archangel Gabriel. But they were curiously quiet and docile this time when the university reached down and tapped an assistant coach with no previous head-coaching experience.

TED TOLLNER doesn't look like a guy you'd call "The Head Man," or "Bear" or "The Silver Fox" or even "Rock" or "Pop." He has the owlish, bespectacled appearance of a guy who's in plastics or commodities. He doesn't look like he's in football players. He's tall (6-3½), young (43). He signed a 5-year contract; so, he's also smart.

Is he also window-dressing? Is the SC program so smooth it's self-perpetuating? Is all Ted Tollner, like the manager of the Ruth Yankees, going to have to do is make out the lineup card and wait to be carried off the field after the game? Did Man o' War need a good jockey? Did the German Army need an admiral?

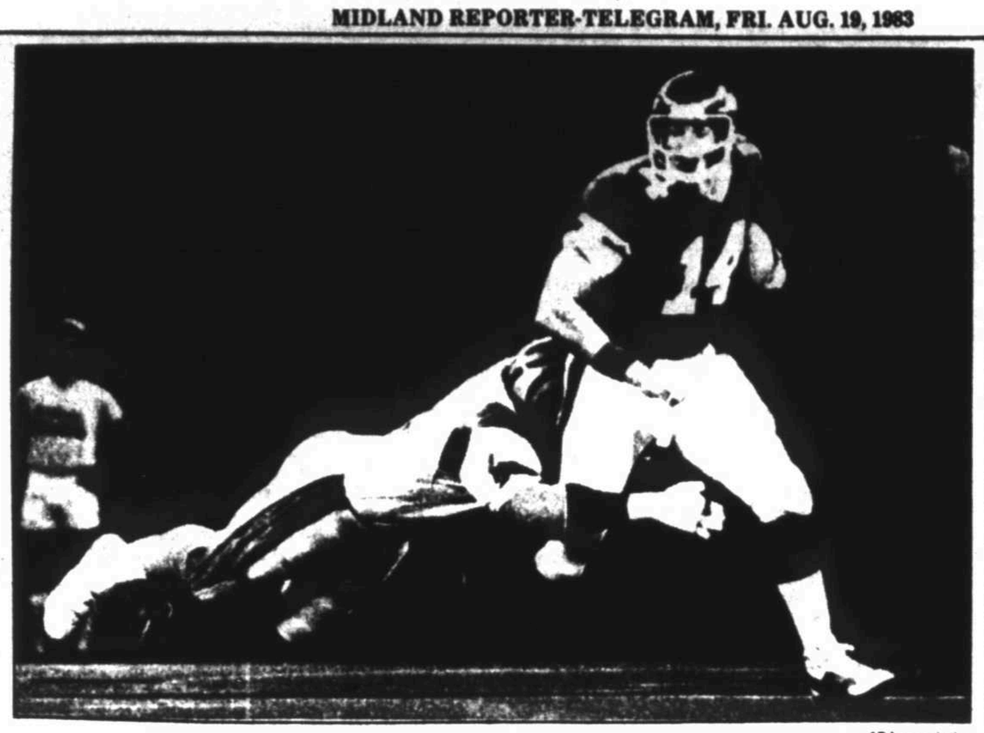

Ted Tollner thinks the Trojans need a new horse. He can't be a pushbutton coach. You can't just sit there and wait for the home runs any more. "Student Body Right" may be "No Gain On The Play" from now on.

"We have a tradition that says we can run with the ball. We don't want to lose that running back prestige. But you can't run when the other guys put up an 11-man line against you.

"John Robinson recognized this his last year. That's why I was brought in. My reputation was in the diversified attack, the passing game."

If the Trojans take to the air, it will be like the Yankees beating you with the glove, the Germans resorting to leaflets.

No longer will an SC coach, in trouble, be able to order up a 63-yard touchdown off tackle. Something new will be added to the coaching staff - the worried look. With the passing game, the SC bench not only need a coach, it will need a chaplain.

Bengals die by the pass, 20-17

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals usually prosper through the pass.

On Thursday night, they buried themselves by it, with New York Jets kicker Pat Leahy tossing the last shovel of dirt.

Bengal quarterbacks were intercepted three times, with the last one setting up Leahy's 31-yard field goal in overtime that gave the Jets a 20-17 victory in an NFL exhibition game.

"We wound up killing ourselves throwing the ball," Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg said.

The Jets, who boosted their exhibition record to 2-1, tied the score in the fourth quarter behind backup quarterback Pat Ryan. He engineered a 55-yard scoring drive, tossing an 8-yard touchdown pass to rookie Mike Harmon with just over six minutes to play.

After a Cincinnati fumble, Ryan then drove the Jets 43 yards to the Bengals' 28. But with 44 seconds to play, Leahy missed his second straight field-goal attempt, this one from 45 yards out.

"I was very upset at myself," Leahy said. "But that was a long one."

The second Jet interception of the game nearly gave him a shot at a shorter one. Backup quarterback Turk Schonert threw downfield on the next play and defensive back George Floyd intercepted, giving New York the ball on the Cincinnati 31.

This time, the Jets did themselves in. Ryan hit Mike Augustyniak with a 9-yard pass, and the fullback fumbled away the ball.

One play later, the game went to overtime.

Cincinnati, looking for its first exhibition victory, took the kickoff and decided to bring in rookie quarterback Jeff Christensen. The first play was a pass, and Christensen fired the ball to linebacker Mark Jerue. He returned it 8 yards to the 22, and the Jets ran three plays before Leahy booted the winning field goal 2:15 into overtime.

Oilers Casper arrested

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Houston Oilers tight end David Casper was arrested early Thursday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated after his car crashed against a light pole, police said.

The 31-year-old Casper, a 10-year NFL veteran, was initially arrested for not having proof of insurance after officers found him standing beside his badly damaged Jeep at about 12:45 a.m., investigators said.

Master Patrolman Kenneth Kothmann said the DWI complaint was added after Casper agreed to take a chemical breath test.

Casper was released from Tom Green County Jail on a $500 personal recognizance bond, Sheriff Ernest Haynes said.

Formal charges against Casper had not been filed late Thursday.

Van Slyke homer nips Houston

By Associated Press

Andy Van Slyke of St. Louis said he wasn't looking to hit the ball over the wall. Philadelphia's Bo Diaz said he wasn't expecting to hit the ball — period.

Each got a 10th-inning pitch he liked and each pounced on it, Van Slyke's home run giving the Cardinals a 5-4 victory over Houston, Diaz's homer boosting the Phillies past San Diego 4-2.

In the rest of the National League, Cincinnati edged Pittsburgh 6-5, Chicago blanked Atlanta 3-0 and San Francisco defeated Montreal 5-3. New York's game at Los Angeles was rained out.

In the only American League action, the Kansas City Royals concluded their 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees in the Pine Tar game suspended July 24 following George Brett's controversial home run.

Van Slyke, said he was just trying to get on base when he drilled his liner to right field. "I was really busting my tail going around first," he said. "When I heard the crowd roar as I reached second base, I thought that I did it ...I try not to pressure myself. I don't consider myself to be a pure power hitter."

Van Slyke also singled, tripled and walked, scoring each time. His triple preceded Willie McGee's single that tied it 4-4 in the eighth inning.

The loss was only the third in 12 games for the Astros and prevented them from gaining ground on Atlanta in the NL West. The third-place Astros trail by seven games.

Phillies 4, Padres 2

Diaz said that with two outs, a runner on first and a 3-0 count, he expected to take a pitch from Gary Lucas, perhaps to draw a walk. But third base coach Dave Bristol was wig-wagging different signals.

"It was kind of confusing to see the hit-and-run sign in that situation," said Diaz. So he decided to check the dugout. "I kept looking in and (coach) Bobby Wine and (manager) Paul Owens were going, 'Yes, yes.' "

"We were going like this, telling him to swing at it," Owens said, swinging an imaginary bat.So Diaz swung his real one and crashed Lucas' next pitch into the left-field bleachers to snap the Padres' four-game winning streak.

The Phillies' other runs came on Joe Morgan's sacrifice fly and RBI single.

Reds 6, Pirates 5

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner kept throwing relief pitchers at Cincinnati, and the Reds kept jumping on them, Duane Walker administering the coup de grace with a three-run double that wrapped up their five-run ninth inning and halted the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

"We've been winning and coming back like that, but this is the first time in a while it's happened to us," said Tanner.

The Bucs took 3-1 lead into the ninth, thanks in part to homers by Tony Pena and Jason Thompson, Cincinnati's run coming on Johnny Bench's homer. And with Kent Tekulve, unscored upon in his last 19 appearances, warming up, it looked safe for the Pirates.

When Gary Redus led off with a homer off Cecilio Guante, Tanner went to Tekulve. He got two outs but also gave up a single to Bench and a walk to Nick Esasky.

So Tanner brought in Rod Scurry, who walked Eddie Milner and Ron Oester, forcing in the tying run. In came Manny Sarmiento — and up came Walker, who ripped his double off the right-center field wall.

"I go up and look for a pitch I can handle," Walker said. "I don't have too much scientific stuff. I do what I can."

Cubs 3, Braves 0

Chicago's Jody Davis broke up a scoreless tie in the fourth inning when he followed Keith Moreland's bloop double and Leon Durham's infield hit with a towering home run off Pete Falcone that saddled the Braves with their fourth consecutive loss and cut their NL West lead over Los Angeles to 3½ games.

Ferguson Jenkins pitched 8 2-3 innings of seven-hit ball and got last-out relief from Lee Smith.

Giants 5, Expos 3

Darrell Evans hit his 25th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning, and Tom O'Malley homered in the seventh to lead the Giants past Montreal.

Manny Trillo, traded to the Expos by Cleveland on Wednesday, reported to his new team but was not activated for the game.

Pine Tar issue finally settled

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't the World Series. It wasn't even the playoffs.

It wasn't as big as the Black Sox Scandal of 1919, nor even as memorable as Bill Mazeroski's home run that won the 1960 World Series for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

But, Dan Quisenberry, who pitched the final three outs in the historic pine-tar game, said it would be "remembered as a completely different scenario."

It took just 12 minutes to play the final four outs of the suspended pine-tar game. And finally, at 6:20 p.m. EDT on Thursday, it went into the books — although New York Manager Billy Martin filed one last official protest.

The Kansas City Royals had beaten the New York Yankees 5-4 on a two-run homer back on July 24 by George Brett.

Brett, who hit the homer with an illegally tarred bat, wasn't even around to witness the end to this most bizarre event in baseball.

Brett's homer originally was nullified by umpires because of his excessive use of pine tar. Four days later, American League President Lee MacPhail made history by returning the homer to Brett, along with his bat. But, at the same time, MacPhail ejected the Royals third baseman along with Manager Dick Howser, coach Rocky Colavito and pitcher Gaylord Perry for their part in disputing the umpires' call.

The only one of the four at the resumption of the game Thursday was Howser, who watched on television in the Royals' clubhouse. The other three had gone on to Baltimore, where the Royals begin a three-game set on Friday.

"I didn't start to get nervous until about 30 minutes before the game," Howser said. "I was relieved because I didn't enjoy watching the game on television. I'm not a very good fan.

"I keep saying this. We're in a pennant race," Howser said. "All I could think about was Baltimore."

Quisenberry, who earned his major league-leading 33rd save with just 10 pitches in the ninth inning, said the culmination of this controversy represented "only a half a game for us closer" to the AL West-leading Chicago White Sox.

"We do not go the World Series because we won. We do pass go and collect $41 meal money," he said.

No Taiwan in LL series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — For the first summer since 1976, a team from Taiwan has failed to qualify for the Little League World Series, the league said Thursday.

Instead, a team from Osaka, Japan, will represent the Far East when the tournament convenes here next Tuesday, said league spokesman Tim Hughes.

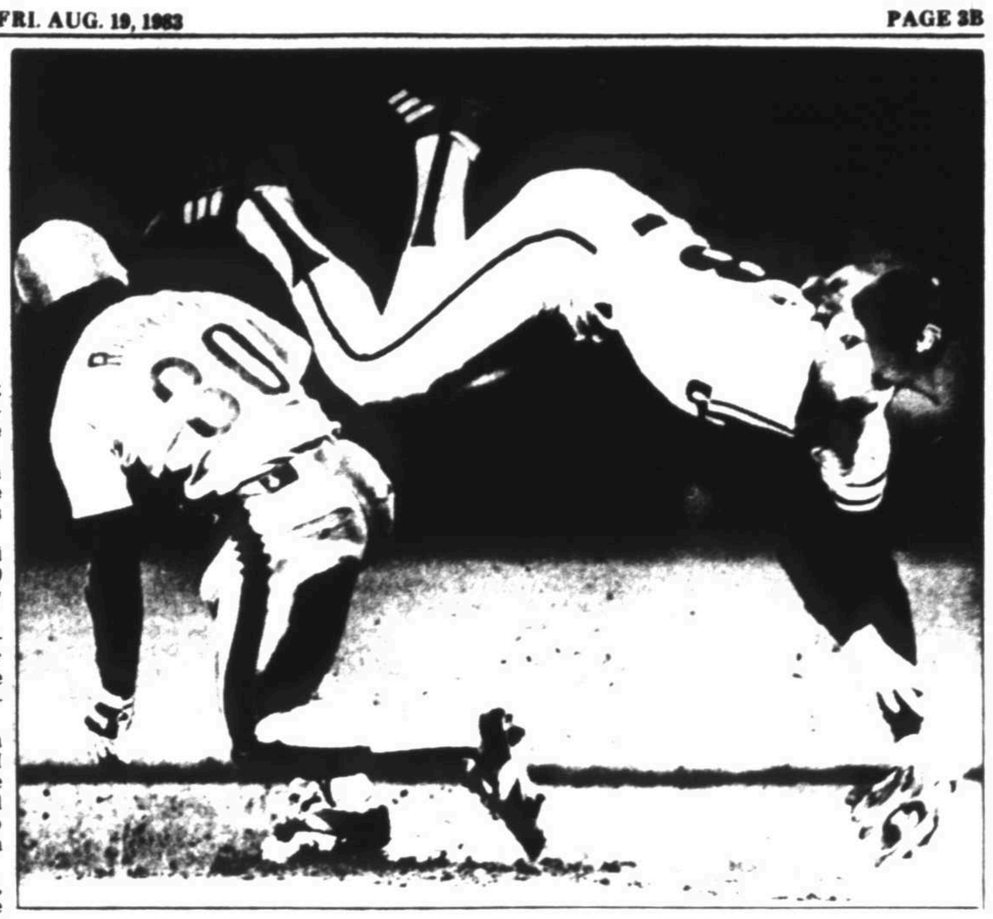

The Japanese team blanked Guam 3-0 on Aug. 1 to advance here with the best mark in the Far East round-robin tourney. Earlier, Japan had defeated Taiwan 2-1, Hughes said.

Teams from Taiwan had won the series for five straight years before the Kirkland National Little League of Kirkland, Wash., won it last year.

Japan last advanced here in 1976, when the Chofu Little League of Tokyo became the champion.

This year's Japanese representative is the All-Star Osaka Yodogawa Little League.

Besides Japan, the Arabian Gulf Little League of Al Khobar, Saudi Arabia, has also qualified.

Regalado shares lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Victor Regalado had gotten pretty used to the old golf clubs he'd used since 1965, when he was a teen-ager.

But in June, just before the Western Open, he decided he needed a change and broke in a new set of clubs. Though he said he played well, "I wasn't scoring," Regalado said.

He missed the cut at the Western, tied for 53rd and 51st the following two weeks and hasn't made the cut in a Professional Golfers Association tournament for more than a month.

Regalado decided on Monday that he'd had it. He picked up his old clubs again. Three days later, he was one of four first-round leaders in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

"I probably have more feel with the old clubs," Regalado said after shooting birdies on five of the last six holes he played Thursday for a 7-under-par 64 on a soggy Wethersfield Country Club course.

That tied him with Fred Couples, DeWitt Weaver and Payne Stewart.

"I've been playing with the old clubs since 1965, when I was 14 or 15," said the 35-year-old Regalado, who was born and raised in Tijuana, Mexico, but who now lives in southern California.

Regalado started the first round on the back nine of the par-71, 6,579-yard course, eagling the par-5 14th on a straight drive, a 4-wood shot that placed him within six feet of the pin and a short putt.

Later, far away from the leaders after bogeying the par-3 third, he birdied the 4th through 8th holes to tie Couples for the first-round lead. The two later were joined by Weaver, an alternate in the tournament, and Stewart.

Defending champion Tim Norris shot a 1-over-par 72 Thursday. At this time last year, he was carrying a one-stroke lead. PGA champion Hal Sutton shot a 70.

Five players were a stroke behind the leaders at 6-under-par 65 — Lindy Miller, George Archer, Brad Bryant, Hale Irwin and Morris Hatalsky. Ten were at 66.

Archer and Miller had shared the lead at 6-under after their 18 holes. But Couples was still on the course early Thursday afternoon shooting birdies on 14, 15 and 16 to jump into the lead and Regalado was making his charge.

Weaver eagled his way to the top, chipping in a 40-foot shot on the par-5 second. Stewart, wearing lavender knickers, knee socks and a white cap, was 4-under after playing the back nine. He bogeyed the par-4 first hole then birdied 4, 7, 8, and 9.

British lass swims channel

DOVER, England (AP) – Britain's Samantha Druce, aged 12 years, 120 days, Friday became the youngest girl ever to swim the English Channel, Audrey Scott, secretary of the Channel Swimming Association reported.

Samantha made it across the 21-mile channel dividing England and France in an estimated time of 15 hours,27 minutes, the association reported, snatching the title from another British girl, Alison Wetherly, who had held it for only four hours.

Alison, who is 43 days older than the new title holder, reached the French coast from this south England port in about 16 hours.

Mrs. Scott said both girls' times still have to be ratified by the association, probably next week.

The record for the youngest person to swim the Channel is held by a British boy, Marcus Hooper, who was aged 12 years, 53 days when he made the crossing in 1979 in 14:37.

In a second record set Friday, Dutch student Irene Van Der Laan swam the channel twice in 18:15 minutes, the fastest time recorded for a double crossing, the association reported.

Once lofty-goaled Pitt yearns for respectability

One of a Series
By ALAN ROBINSON

Football Preview

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The talk at the University of Pittsburgh this season isn't about a national championship, or even a national ranking. It's about mere respectability.

"All I know about our schedule is that we start with Tennessee, we finish with Penn State and there are a lot of good football teams in between," says second-year Coach Foge Fazio.

Last year, the Panthers were the odds-on favorite to follow three consecutive 11-1 seasons with a national championship. Instead, with a veteran team led by three first-round pro draft choices, they went 9-3, lost to Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl and finished 20th in the final Associated Press Top Twenty poll.

This season, some have predicted the Panthers will have their first losing season since a 1-10 record in 1972, even though eight starters return, four each on offense and defense, including All-America offensive tackle Bill Fralic.

"Everyone was disappointed it didn't work out last season," said Fralic, a 6-foot-5, 290-pound junior. "We wanted to win 12 games, but we didn't. We won nine. We didn't play well enough to win 12 games.

"But hopefully, it's the same situation this year as last year. The predictors were wrong about us then," he said. "Maybe they'll be wrong again."

The Panthers' major concerns are inexperience at quarterback, where junior John Cummings apparently will start, and with the demanding schedule, which includes six potential Top 20 teams.

Cummings has thrown two passes in two seasons as Dan Marino played nearly every down at quarterback for four years, at least when he was healthy. Cummings has been battling with sophomore Chris Jelic for playing time, but Jelic has been bothered by a hand injury.

"I have a lot of confidence in myself," Cummings said. "I just need some experience."

The schedule includes games with Top 20 contenders Tennessee, Maryland, West Virginia and Florida State in the first five weeks of the season, plus a game at Notre Dame and the annual intrastate war with defending national champion Penn State.

"What game is the most important? They're all important," Fralic said. "But right now, Tennnesse is the most important because it's the first game."

"We know they are going to have 90,000 screaming fans at Tennessee," said senior wide receiver Dwight Collins of the Panthers' Sept. 3 opener. "We just want to show them that we can do a few things, too."

Collins, a 6-2, 205-pound senior, caught 50 passes for nearly 900 yards and 10 touchdowns as a freshman, but has battled hamstring injuries since. "We still think he is one of the finest receivers in the country," Fazio said.

"We've got some talent, and we recruited some high school All-Americans," Fazio said. "The cupboard's not exactly bare."

Steve Yeager is merely Los Angeles Dodgers' catcher of moment

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Even though he is injured at the moment, he is not the Dodgers' Catcher of the Future. That title would fall to young Gilberto Reyes, or maybe Dave Sax.

He was not supposed to be the Dodgers' Catcher of the Present. They were sort of counting on Mike Scioscia to come around. Remember that boot-camp spring training regimen the Dodgers put Scioscia through to whip him into shape to handle the catching?

He's not the Dodgers' New Hope at catcher. That was supposed to be Jim Sundberg, for whom the Dodgers were willing to part with front-line pitching, and more.

If you need a title for Steve Yeager, I guess you could just call him the Dodgers' Catcher.

The kids weren't quite ready and Scioscia still wasn't hitting and finally got hurt, and Sundberg stayed in Texas. The Dodgers looked around for somebody to stick behind the plate, and there was Steve Yeager.

They tried to give the catcher's job to everybody but Holden Caulfield, but nobody wanted it.

Nobody except old Boomer, age 34, still a good arm but not much bat, bad knee, only seven home runs his last three years. But somebody's got to play catcher, so Boomer was it.

Last year he hit a homer every 95 at-bats. This year he was knocking one out every 18 at-bats.

And he's doing it all in spite of a long list of minor-to-moderate injuries, bumps, bruises, aches and pains. It takes him an hour and a half just to get warmed up and taped up for a game, and afterwards he plods through the clubhouse looking like Quasimodo, wearing enough ice bags for a large cocktail party.

That's all part of the fun. The hard times came all those years when he was sitting on the bench, getting platooned or worse, nothing hurt but his feelings.

"This is the most I've ever played," Yeager said before a recent game.

Oklahoma horses head field

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Stablemates Mr Master Bug and Miss Squaw Hand both scored impressive victories Thursday in qualifying for the upcoming $1.6 million All-American Derby for quarter horses.

Mr Master Bug, winner of last year's All-American Futurity as a 2-year-old, had the fourth fastest qualifying time in Thursday's trials. The pace was set by Miss Squaw Hand, who romped to a 1¼ lengths victory in the day's top time of 21.65 for the 440-yard distance.

Both Mr Master Bug and Miss Squaw Hand are owned by Ada, Oklahoma horseman Marvin Barnes. The two speedsters last year ran 1-2 in the $2.5 million All-American Futurity.

Mr Master Bug has earned $1,375,737 and is the second leading money winner of all time in quarter horse racing. Miss Squaw Hand has won $468,550 in two years on the track.

Also in the field is Dynago Victory, owned by Clarence Scharbauer, Jr., of Midland, Texas.

The All-American Derby, which will be run Aug. 28, features a total purse of $1,694,694. The winning horse will collect $564,333. Ten horses qualified for the derby with another 20 qualifying for a pair of consolation races.

The trials Thursday were run under varying weather conditions, a major consideration since the derby qualifiers are determined by their times over 440 yards and not the order of finish in each race. The first four trials were run on a fast track against a headwind. In the seventh race, heavy rains fell, and were accompanied by a tail wind. The wind largely subsided for the rest of the program, although the track remained sloppy.

Despite the varying conditions, qualifiers came from throughout the program.

The list of qualifiers in the order of times and their owners included:

—Miss Squaw Hand, 21.65, Marvin Barnes, Ada, Okla.

—Top Nobleman, 21.79, James Killing, Giddings, Texas.

—Bartendress, 21.80, Sam Henderson, Odessa, Texas.

—Mr Master Bug, 21.81, Marvin Barnes, Ada, Okla.

—Tres Pass, 21.82, Jerry Rheudasil and Joe Turner Jr., Lewisville, Texas.

—Bette Full Moon, 21.83, Bette Full Moon Inc., Ltd., Westerville, Ohio.

—Camelot King, 21.83, Huston-Richardson Farms, Throckmorton, Texas.

—Stepping For Te, 21.84, Jerry Wells, Purcell, Okla.

—Dynago Victory, 21.86, Clarence Sharbauer Jr., Midland, Texas.

Make Mine Cash, owned by R.D. Hubbard of Wichita, Kan., and Rare Jet, owned by the 440 Ranches of Aubrey, Texas, tied for the 10th qualifying spot, both timed in 21.94 seconds. A draw was scheduled Friday to break the tie and determine which horse advanced into the derby. The loser of the draw would be placed in the first consolation field.

Auburn, FSU best bets

North Carolina ACC favorite

Football in South

ATLANTA (AP) — If the South produces its fifth national college football champion in six years, Auburn or Florida State could turn the trick.

Auburn is favored to win the Southeastern Conference championship, but must overcome one of the toughest schedules in the nation, and Florida State is a solid choice to finish the year as the area's top independent.

"If we had a favorable schedule, then realistically I would be a lot more excited about our chances of finishing high in the nation and the possibility of winning it," Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "I think there is still a chance. I don't think you can rule it out."

The Tigers will be tested in the conference by the SEC's two most dominant powers for more than a decade — Georgia and Alabama — and also have tough battles with Florida and Tennessee. The slate against outsiders is tough, too, including Texas, Southern Mississippi, Maryland and Florida State.

FSU TURNED a rebuilding campaign into a 9-3 record last year with an explosive offense.

"If we can keep everybody healthy and get the answers to a couple of questions, then, yes, we could be as good as anybody," FSU Coach Bobby Bowden said.

FSU's showdown with the Tigers will be played Oct. 1 at Auburn.

The South's national titles in recent years went to Alabama in 1978 and 1979, Georgia in 1980 and Clemson in 1981. Penn State beat Georgia in the Sugar Bowl game last Jan. 1, in a battle of the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 teams, to end Dixie's stranglehold on the championship.

Alabama and Georgia could be in the hunt again, although each lost one of the game's top personalties.

Bear Bryant died a month after retiring at Alabama with the most coaching victories ever.

Georgia's Herschel Walker, the Heisman Trophy winner who was expected to shatter the NCAA career rushing record this year, bypassed his final season of eligibility to accept a lucrative contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

NORTH CAROLINA is expected to edge out Maryland for the championship in the Atlantic Coast Conference, which Clemson has won the last two years. Clemson is on probation, ineligible for the ACC title, and the Tigers' games will not count in the conference standings.

FSU's strongest competition in the independent ranks should come from Miami of Florida and Southern Mississippi.

Auburn has 15 starters returning from last year's 9-3 team, including two of the SEC's top running backs — Bo Jackson and Lionel James — who will operate behind an experienced line featuring tackle Pat Arrington, guard David Jordan and tight end Ed West.

The Tigers will be tough on defense, too, with nose guard Dowe Aughtman, tackles Donnie Humphrey and Doug Smith and linebacker Gregg Carr considered among the top defenders in the conference.

"I like our football team at this point," Dye said. "But there are so many intangibles and so many variables that determine what kind of season and what kind of record you have."

Ray Perkins stepped down as head coach of the New York Giants of the National Football League to return to his alma mater as the successor to Bryant at Alabama. He has shelved the Wishbone offense that had served the Crimson Tide so well during the 1970s, choosing to go with a pro attack led by quarterback Walter Lewis, wide receiver Jesse Bendross and running back Linnie Patrick.

"I think we'll have another good team," Coach Vince Dooley of Georgia said. "What we are talking about is being good and being a champion, which has been the standard for three years. He (Walker) may be the difference between those two."

Barry Young, a fullback, will move into Walker's tailback spot.

John Lastinger, recovering from a spring knee ailment, will be the quarterback once he's completely healed. All-American Terry Hoage heads a talented defensive secondary, but the defense lost All-SEC safety Jeff Sanchez, who broke his left arm in spring practice.

ELSEWHERE IN the SEC, Florida should again be strong behind quarterback Wayne Peace and linebacker Wilber Marshall, and Louisiana State could challenge with a strong ground game featuring sophomore stars Dalton Hilliard and Garry James.

Coach Dick Crum has 12 starters back at North Carolina from an 8-4 team that knocked off Texas in last year's Sun Bowl game. Tailbacks Tyrone Anthony and Ethan Horton, who combined for more than 1,200 yards in backup roles last year, will battle to replace the departed Kelvin Bryant.

Maryland also has 12 starters back, including quarterback Boomer Esiason, who threw for 2,302 yards last year.

The area's top quarterback could be Ben Bennett of Duke, last year's ACC Player of the Year. Bennett has passed for 6,528 yards and 38 touchdowns in his career, and has a shot at Jim McMahon's NCAA career passing mark of 9,536 yards.

The top returning running back is Robert Lavette, who rambled for 1,208 yards last year for Georgia Tech, which will be eligible to compete for the ACC football crown for the first time this season. Clemson is expected to be exceptionally strong defensively, building around 320-pound middle guard William Perry.

Quarterback Kelly Lowrey, who threw for 1,671 yards last year, gets plenty of help at FSU from tailback Greg Allen, the leading scorer in the nation last year.

Among other top individuals in the independent ranks are middle guard Jerald Baylis and running back Sam Dejarnette of Southern Mississippi, wide receiver Robert Griffin of Tulane, offensive tackle Terry Long and defensive back Clint Harris of East Carolina, linebacker Mike Johnson of Virginia Tech and linebacker Jay Brophy of Miami.

Sore shoulder helps Haynie

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — While Sandra Haynie's sore shoulder kept her from playing golf for three weeks, it helped her shoot a steady 2-under-par 70 for a share of the first-round lead with Donna White in the $200,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.

"Sometimes I tend to swing a little long, especially in my backswing," Haynie said after Thursday's first round. "I still have a little stiffness in my back. It's really a positive thing, because I have a really controlled swing with it."

Haynie, who finished eighth in the tournament last year, was the only golfer in the 12-player field to avoid bogeys for the first 18 holes on the par-72, 6,225-yard Shaker Heights Country Club course.

She had not played since coming down with a stiff shoulder during the U.S. Women's Open three weeks ago.

NCAA prexies to play larger role in policy-making

NEW YORK (AP) — The presidents of 27 universities are interested in playing a larger role in the NCAA and will meet next week to discuss a plan which will give them more policy-making power in the athletic organization.

The private gathering is set for next Monday and Tuesday in Keystone, Colo.

Led by Harvard President Derek Bok, the group will discuss a proposal to give the school presidents a bigger voice in the NCAA, according to a source familiar with the plans who would talk about the proposal only if he was not identified.

"University presidents don't believe institutional control exists in intercollegiate sports," said James Wharton, chancellor of Louisiana State.

Under discussion will be a proposal to create a new policy-making body of 36 higher education chiefs to rule on questions of finances, academics and ethics, the source said. Those powers now belong to the 46-member NCAA Council composed primarily of presidents, other college administrators and faculty representatives.

The ultimate decision-making body is the NCAA convention, an annual gathering of representatives of 788 colleges and universities.

The committee hopes to submit a proposal to the NCAA's annual convention in January in Dallas. Passage would require a two-thirds majority of the 788 NCAA member schools.

"As far as I'm concerned, the presidents have to become more involved in questions involving athletics on campus," said Glen R. Driscoll, president of the University of Toledo.

"What we're doing is looking for ways for presidents to get a more significant role in shaping NCAA policies regarding athletics on campus. Some more formal or structured way seems vital to accomplishing that goal," said Cecil Mackey, president of Michigan State.

In Kansas City, NCAA president John L. Toner expressed reservations.

"I do not believe (NCAA members) would look with favor upon a committee veto structure which, at a minimum, would be disruptive to the established NCAA democratic process," said Toner, who is athletic director at Connecticut.

'Safety' ropes introduced

From wire reports

New boxing ring ropes, designed to make the sport less dangerous, are being tested in New Jersey, Attorney General Irwin I. Kimmelman said. The ropes, designed by Everlast, set up at Atlantic City, N.J., includes a thicker, more heavily padded bottom rope that may reduce the chances of fighters suffering whiplash. The old rope was made of 1-inch-thick manila hemp with some padding while the new rope is 1⅛ inches thick with a shock absorbent foam that has four times the absorbency of floor padding, plus a cover of velvet corduroy...

Former University of Arizona punter Bob Boris, 24, has filed a lawsuit against the USFL, challenging the league's new "hands-off" rule toward college underclassmen adopted since the controversial signing of Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker, according to a published report.

Boris claims that the USFL's new policy warning teams not to recruit or sign college underclassmen prevents him from earning a living. Steve Erhart, director of administration and counsel to the commissioner of the USFL, said the league was served with the papers in the Boris case last week and that all the league's franchises were named in the suit...

Four Southern University players will be punished for breaking team travel rules, even though a jury set them free on charges they took part in a gang rape after their season-ending football game last year, Coach Otis Washington said. The players were tried on charges of aggravated rape. The players admitted having sexual relations with the woman, but insisted she was an eager partner...

Keel feud simmers on

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Dennis Conner threw another lump of coal on the simmering feud over Australia II's keel. But the foreign powerhouse poured cold water all over his inflammatory claim.

The skipper of Liberty, one of three U.S. candidates to defend the America's Cup, accused the Aussies of not going all out in their shocking two-minute, 50-second loss to Britain's Victory '83 Thursday in the foreign semifinal trials.

"Obviously, the Australians sandbagged today to lay off the controversy," charged Conner, who beat Defender by margins of 3:11 and one second in their two races Thursday. "I would if it were in my best interests to try and take the pot off the stove."

But Warren Jones, executive director of the Australia II syndicate, countered, "Today we got beaten fair and square."

The amazing success of Australia II led to a claim by the New York Yacht Club Race Committee that the boat rated as more than a 12-meter yacht because of its innovative winged keel.

The International Yacht Racing Union's executive committee meets Aug. 30 to consider whether its Keel Boat Technical Committee should take up the issue.

If Australia II, which lost 1:58 on the final leg, wanted to give the impression that it could be beaten, British syndicate head Peter de Savary was a willing recipient.

"Today was an encouraging indication in that direction, that you can sail with Australia II," he said. "They should drop all these moves against Australia II and get out on the water and race Australia II around the course."

Aussie II skipper John Bertrand admitted that he was experimenting with a new mainsail but said, "The boats, I thought, were very even, as they have been in the past."

Australia II is 41-5 in the foreign trials but its loss tied it with Victory '83 with 5-1 semifinal records. Each needs one more win in the nine-race semifinals to clinch the two spots in the best-of-seven foreign final series that will determine an opponent for a U.S. defender of the America's Cup next month.

Canada 1 was mathematically eliminated from a berth in the foreign finals when its semifinal record fell to 0-6 with a loss to Azzurra of Italy by 3:56. Azzurra, 2-4, will be out of the running with one more loss.

All the races, except for the second American match, were contested over 24.3-mile America's Cup courses. They were subjected to course changes because the light winds of 4-8 knots shifted from southwesterly to southerly.

Ponce homer beats Dodgers

By Associated Press

A grand slam home run by Carlos Ponce in the bottom of the ninth inning cinched El Paso's 10-7 win over San Antonio in Texas League baseball action.

In other league play Thursday, Shreveport edged Jackson 4-3 in overtime, Arkansas whipped Tulsa 5-3 and Beaumont's home game against Midland was postponed for the second night by rain from Hurricane Alicia.

El Paso was down 7-6 before Ponce's slam.

The Diablos also had three other homers. Bill Max contributed a two-run effort in the fifth, followed by Jim Paciorek's solo in the sixth. Juan Castillo swatted a solo home run in the same inning.

A.J. Reynolds scored a solo in the seventh for the Dodgers.

Ray Gallo, 4-6, was the winner. The loser was Morris Madden, 4-5.

Shreveport first baseman Mark Schuster hit an opposite-field home run in the 10th inning to win it for the Captains. It was Schuster's 29th of the season, and snapped a string of 11 at-bats without a hit.

Mark Grant, 10-8, allowed just four hits over the distance of 10 innings. He gave up two homers to Jackson designated hitter Mike Bishop, his third and fourth in two games.

Grant struck out 13 and retired 16 in a row.

The loser was Dennis Long, 3-5.

Left fielder Larry Reynolds tripled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning for the Travelers.

Winning pitcher Allen Morelock pitched his second straight complete game to move his record to 2-0. Tulsa starter Marty Leach, 1-3, picked up the loss.

The Drillers took an early lead with one run in the first inning. Second baseman Steve Bueschele and left fielder Chuckie Canady singled and designated hitter Kevin Buckley walked to load the bases. A single to center by first baseman Dan Murphy drove in Bueschele.

Synfuels quarterback now lineman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Victor A. Schroeder, second only to President Reagan in the salary he is paid by the federal government, is giving up his $135,000-a-year job amid criticism from his colleagues.

Schroeder, who was paid $44,000 a year more than Vice President George Bush or House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., resigned Thursday as president of the government's Synthetic Fuels Corp. Reagan is paid $200,000 a year as president.

A former Atlanta real estate developer, Schroeder, 62, said he is quitting because of "dissension in recent months" among the corporation's directors over his work.

However, he said he intends to keep his seat on the quasi-government corporation's seven-member board until his six-year term expires in 1987.

"If I can't be quarterback, I can sure be a lineman, and that's what I intend to do," Schroeder said after corporation chairman Edward E. Noble accepted his resignation.

"I've led a lot of people in this industry to spend a lot of money and their own time and I would hate to see some kind of contention reduce the viability of the program," he said.

Three of Schroeder's fellow directors had been calling for his dismissal since last May, accusing him of mismanaging the 3-year-old, $15 billion federal effort to develop a fledgling synthethic fuels industry.

"The board of directors of the corporation was so polarized that it was in danger of becoming paralyzed," Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, said Thursday.

Cohen chaired two days of hearings last month on growing divisiveness among the corporation's directors over what direction the troubled program should take now that falling oil prices have made synthetic fuels much less attractive economically.

Three board members — Howard Wilkins, John Carter and Robert Monks — accused Schroeder of offering another director, Milton Masson, help with a private business deal in exchange for Masson's support of Schroeder's plan to reorganize the agency. Wilkins, Carter and Monks opposed the reorganization.

The corporation was given nearly $15 billion under the 1980 Energy Security Act to foster the commercial development of technologies for converting coal, lignite, shale and other solid fuel sources into liquid and gas petroleum substitutes.

In response to the energy shortages of the 1970s, Congress said it wanted a synthetic fuel industry producing the equivalent of 500,000 barrels of oil a day by 1987.

"Thinking this thing over last weekend, I remembered that President Carter said the Energy Security Act was the 'moral equivalent of war,'" Schroeder said Thursday. "That's turned out to be a little more realistic than I thought."

Despite the promise of gigantic price supports and loan guarantees, the Synthetic Fuels Corp. has been unable to lure private companies with sufficient financial resources of their own to take a gamble on developing synfuels.

It wasn't until last April that the agency handed out its first money for a project. And despite the Reagan administration's support of the program, bills are now pending in both houses of Congress to abolish it.

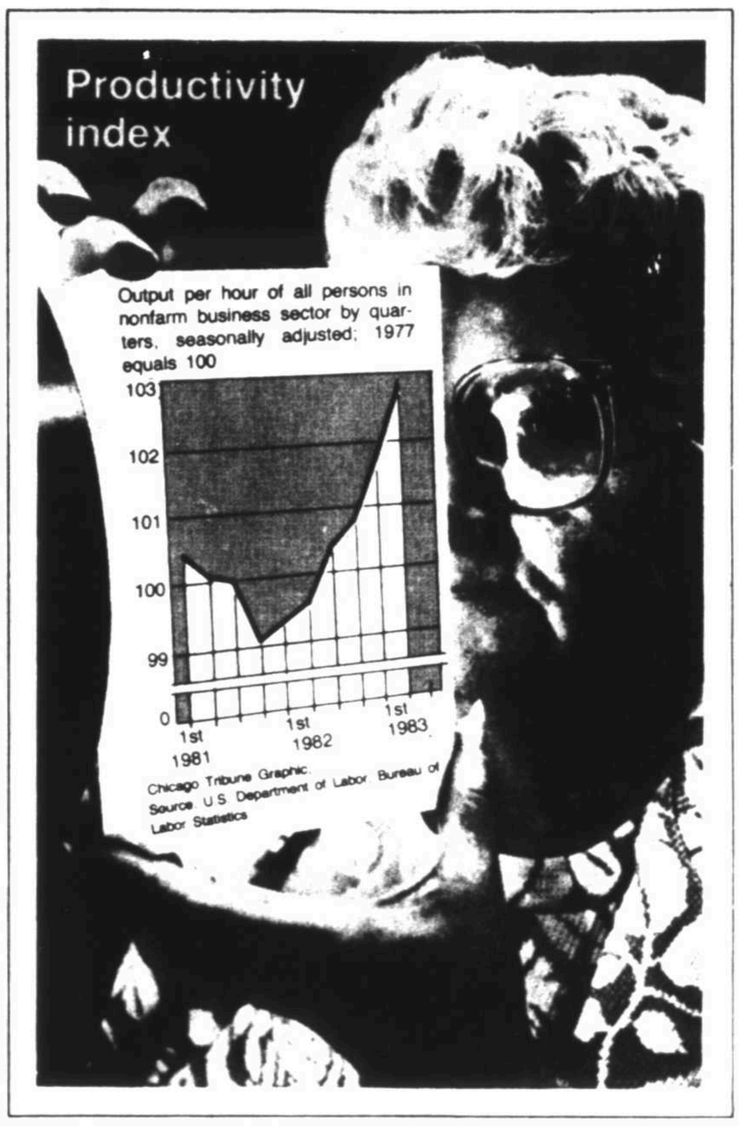

Wilkins, Carter and Monks blamed Schroeder, accusing him of not developing projects in a manner that would attract private investors.

Schroeder also was criticized before the Senate subcommittee for steering $124,000 in consulting contracts to two Atlanta men who had done work for him in the past.

In addition, critics said if was only after auditors challenged it as improper that Schroeder agreed to repay a $19,500 broker's fee that he had charged the agency as a relocation expense in moving to Washington.

Schroeder repeatedly has denied any wrongdoing and maintained that there was nothing irregular about any of the transactions.

The corporations's board is expected to discuss a replacement for Schroeder as president at its next meeting Aug. 29. James Bowden, the agency's executive vice president, is acting as chief operating officer in the interim.

Davis says discovery 'significant'

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DENVER — Billionaire Marvin Davis has struck oil again in Wyoming.

His privately held Davis Oil Co. of Denver announced Wednesday that it has made "one of the most significant" gas and oil discoveries in the Rockies in more than a decade outside the huge Overthrust Belt, which sprawls beneath parts of Wyoming and Utah.

"We're very much encouraged," said Ed Lafaye, chief geologist for Davis Oil.

Although the company declined to estimate the worth of its Powder River Basin find, a spokesman called it one of the most significant in the region since Bell Creek in 1967 and Hilight in 1970.

The new development, called the Amos Draw Field Complex, is 15 miles west of Gillette and midway between the Bell Creek Field in the Powder River Basin and the Hilight Field nearby in Montana.

The much-heralded Bell Creek Field has produced 119 million barrels of oil and 30 billion cubic feet of gas. Since 1970, Hilight has produced 70 million barrels of oil and 210 billion cubic feet of gas. Bell Creek's potential is rated at 200 million barrels and Hilight's at 100 million barrels.

Davis' discovery in the Powder River Basin covers a roughly rectangular area about 11 miles east and west, and 7 miles north and south.

Production casing has been run on 32 wells averaging about 10,000 feet deep to a formation called Cretaceous Muddy. Lafaye said the company plans to drill 30 or more wells this year, adding that he expects it to take at least two years to drill the field.

"We have four rigs busy in the area, and we plan to keep them busy," he said. Lafaye put the cost of each well at $800,000 to $900,000.

"It's perfect timing," Lafaye said, noting that drilling costs are down 40 percent to 50 percent from two years ago. Prices, although down from their peak during the 1980-81 oil boom, have not dropped anywhere near as much as operating costs.

"We have been very successful there and we intend to keep up an intense exploration effort," Lafaye said. He declined to disclose the Davis Oil Co. reserves or production, but said the company has been successful enough to replace the reserves it had when Davis sold the bulk of his production to Walker-Home Petroleum Inc. two years ago for $600 million.

After the sale in early 1981, Hiram Walker Resources Ltd. of Toronto, parent of Walker-Home Petroleum, said a study showed the reserves purchased from Davis Oil totaled 8.2 million barrels of oil and 83 million cubic feet of gas. Production from the properties sold reportedly totaled the equivalent of 8,000 barrels of oil a day.

The Davis No. 1 Felix Unit was the discovery well for the new complex. It tested 2.1 million cubic feet of gas a day and 150 to 200 barrels of oil from the Muddy formation in January 1982. Davis then began a wildcat drilling program to determine the extent of the field.

Lafaye said the Felix, Amos Draw and Andy Fields are designated as separate fields, but they appear to produce from a "common and relatively continuous reservoir." The Safebrush Field four miles west of Amos Draw and Sapphire Field three miles west of Sagebrush may link with production in Amos Draw, he said.

Lafaye, in his present capacity with Davis for four years, said it is too early to estimate the reserves of the discovery-development. "It's hard to say how many wells there will be, since we haven't completely defined the limits of the field," he said. "It could be well over 100 wells.

"It's a little bit deeper than most of the other wells that produce from the Muddy formation," Lafaye said. He added that most of the wells in this formation are 7,000 to 9,000 feet deep.

Both Western Gas processors and Phillips Petroleum have gas pipelines into the field, and Independent Producers Marketing Co. has an oil pipeline nearly completed, Davis Oil said.

Taco Villa going public

Taco Villa Inc. announced Thursday it has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for a public stock offering.

The Midland-based chain of fast food restaurants said the initial offering will be for one million shares. President Bobby D. Cox said the price is yet to be determined but company officials estimated it will be between $10 and $12 per share.

Taco Villa Inc. owns and operates Taco Villa fast food Mexican-style restaurants. The first store opened in Odessa in 1968. The chain has since grown to include 39 company-operated and five franchised restaurants in Texas and New Mexico.

Company officials and attorneys filed the registration statement Thursday morning with the SEC after a final proof-reading of the prospectus, according to Taco Villa spokesman Craig Van Amburgh. Further information will be released, probably next week, according to SEC guidelines, he said.

The registration statement filed Thursday does not become effective until then, and the securities may not be sold nor may offers to buy be accepted before the statement becomes effective.

The offering will be made by a group of underwriters managed by Adams, James, Foor & Company Inc., Oklahoma City.

Save your L T there's still plenty of B

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Mercantile Exchange declared a "pork belly emergency" this week, but save your tomatoes and lettuce, there's plenty of bacon around for sandwiches.

A pork belly — also known as uncured bacon — is the fatty slab of flesh on the underside of a pig.

Pork bellies are one of the most talked-about commodities in the futures trading industry, but understanding a "pork belly emergency" requires a primer in futures trading.

Livestock analysts agree that even in a trading emergency, grocerers and butchers will have plenty of bacon at least through the end of the year. And they add a bit of good news: the price is likely to go down.

The emergency is a shortage of frozen bellies that the Mercantile Exchange has approved for delivery to traders who bought contracts at the exchange for future delivery.

Those contracts total about 50 million pounds, but there are less than 13 million pounds of pork bellies in the 54 warehouses where the exchange has certified stocks.

Buyers rarely receive the bellies — or intend to.

About 95 percent of the time, the buyers sell the contract back before the delivery date, at what they hope will be a higher price.

It's the 5 percent who actually take delivery that has caused the problem at the Merc, as the exchange is known.

Bacon consumption is usually highest in the summer, when tomatoes in backyard gardens ripen and bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches are at their most popular, said John Ginzel, a livestock analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in Chicago.

Producers generally build up inventories in freezers until they reach about 100 million pounds by early June, then use the frozen bellies through the rest of the summer to supplement the production of fresh bellies, Ginzel said.

This year, though, there are too few frozen pork bellies to cover all the outstanding futures contracts.

As a result, the Merc imposed new rules that will encourage traders who bought contracts to sell them. The new rules require traders with large numbers of contracts either to sell them or deposit large amounts of cash, about $27,000 per contract.

But pork processors can buy bellies anywhere they please, and Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson-American Express noted that the slaughter has been averaging about 300,000 pigs a day. This produces about 38 million pounds of pork bellies a week and will provide ample supplies to keep grocery coolers well stocked.

And, he said, as the drought in the Midwest pushes up the price of grain, farmers are liquidating their livestock herds, which will increase the supply of hogs until the end of the year and push prices lower.

Saxon, Entex to drill 70 Spraberry wells

DALLAS — Entex Inc., Houston; its subsidiary, Big Chief Drilling Co., and Saxon Oil Company, Dallas, recently anounced they will participate in a $28 million drilling program to develop 70 infield locations on Saxon acreage in West Texas.

The wells to be drilled are located in the Spraberry (Trend Area) Field in Reagan County, where Saxon operates approximately 400 wells.

Saxon announced Aug. 15 that it had settled $60 million of trade debt resulting from its activities in the deep gas play in the Fletcher Field in the Anadarko Basin in southwest Oklahoma.

In the initial phase of the infield program, Entex has committed to drill and finance a minimum of 10 wells offsetting existing Saxon-held wells on farmouts from Saxon and its limited partners in various public limited partnerships.

The wells will be drilled by Big Chief at an average depth of 7,700 feet and $400,000 cost per well. Saxon Oil will be the operator.

Bill Saxon, chairman and CEO, SAxon Oil, said the Spraberry Field has been developed mostly on 160-acre spacing. It has been apparent for years, he said, that the wells did not drain 160 acres and infield drilling should be done on 80-acre spacing.

"The present slow down in drilling activity creates a pefect time to do this type of infield drilling. It allows Big Chief to run its rigs and allows us to develop oil and gas reserves for our public programs and for Saxon Oil," he said.

Additional infield and offset development locations are being prepared for future drilling ventures, he added.

Big Chief, a wholly-owned Entex subsidiary, will move two rigs from Oklahoma to Reagan County to start the drilling program. It plans to establish a contract drilling operation in West Texas and in the future, may bring more rigs to the area from Oklahoma.

Big Chief, along with its subsidiary, Comet Drilling Company, operates 27 rigs in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana and California.

Entex is a natural gas distribution company which is also active in oil and gas exploration and production. It also owns Texas-based University Savings Association.

OIL FACTS

1917

In Massachusetts, the Webster & Southbridge Gas and Electric Company reported it installed 11 miles of three-inch pipe by "modern methods," using a small gasoline-engined-powered trench digger, a modern type pipe layer, a trench back-filler, tampers to compress the backfill, and an electric welder to weld together the miles of pipe required.

1918

January 1 — The first gasoline pipeline was placed in operation, a 40-mile, three-inch line from Salt Creek to Casper, Wyoming.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 250 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $227 million to $182.6 billion for the week ended August 17, 1983.

The taxable money funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.73% from 8.57%. The taxable money funds' 30-day average yield also increased to 8.56% from 8.45%.

The funds' average maturity increased one day to 37 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "The average 7-day yield on taxable money funds continued its upward trend this week, surpassing by 15 basis points the 8.58% average for money market deposit accounts reported by Bank Rate Monitor. Banks apparently have chosen not to be competitive with money funds as banks can choose rates for their MMDAs while money fund yields are determined by the investments held in their portfolios." Tesoro Petroleum secures credit for ENSTAR deal

By GARDNER SELBY
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In its apparent bid to gain control over ENSTAR Corp. of Houston, formerly Alaska Interstate, the company that absorbed Midland's C&K Petroleum, Tesoro Petroleum Corp. of San Antonio recently secured a $200 million line of credit from five banks, Tesoro revealed in a statement filed Tuesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

If Tesoro decides to purchase additional stock in ENSTAR, the document states, $200 million "would be available for this purpose" under a revolving credit agreement reached Aug. 8 "between Tesoro, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, Bank of Montreal (California), European American Bank & Trust Company, National Bank of Detroit and InterFirst Bank Dallas, N.A."

The statement, which itemizes Tesoro's 1983 purchases of ENSTAR common stock, is required of firms that acquire 5 percent or more interest in other companies.

On Monday, ENSTAR's board of directors announced that, in an effort to avoid a Tesoro takeover, they had voted to issue a dividend of one share of convertible preferred stock for every 10 shares of common stock, with each preferred share to be convertible into seven shares of common stock.

If Tesoro "elects to seek control (of ENSTAR), Tesoro may propose a tender offer or a merger or other extraordinary corporate transaction, or a combination of transactions, in which (ENSTAR) shareholders ... receive cash, Tesoro securities, or some combination, ...and Tesoro would seek representation on the (ENSTAR) Board of Directors," the San Antonio company said in the statement.

Under terms of the $200 million loan, for which Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company is acting as Tesoro's agent, the amount available will be cut by $40 million on Dec. 31, 1984, with equal $40 million reductions each year through 1988.

Although Tesoro currently owns only 1.1 percent of ENSTAR's common stock — 172,600 shares — it has agreed to acquire 1,288,000 additional shares, constituting 8.4 percent of the common stock, from Roy M. Huffington, a Delaware corporation.

On Aug. 6, Tesoro reached an agreement to purchase the Huffington shares for $39,937,300, or $31 per share. If that deal is not completed by Oct. 7, the statement says, it will be annulled.

The $31 per share figure is roughly $10 more per share than ENSTAR was trading for on the New York Stock Exchange Aug. 4, according to the statement.

If the deal goes through as planned, Tesoro will have spent $43,764,272 on acquiring a 9.5 percent interest in ENSTAR, which has issued 15,340,000 shares of common stock, according to the statement.

If Tesoro reaches 10 percent control, the statement says, it may become subject to the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, which apparently forbids ownership of a utility in addition to other interests.

In such a case, Tesoro plans to request an exemption from the act from the SEC, the statement says. If that is not granted, Tesoro will divest itself of interest in an ENSTAR utility company in Alaska.

Allowable 100%

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission on Thursday set Texas' statewide oil allowable for September at 100 percent of potential, extending a pattern that dates back to 1972.

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,444,632 barrels a day next month, a decrease of 10,035 barrels a day compared with August requests.

As usual, the large East Texas field was restricted to 86 percent production to avoid possible waste, and nine other fields also were assigned legal rates of flow lower than 100 percent.

Chairman Mack Wallace reported that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the United States averaged 5,364,000 barrels daily for the four weeks ending Aug. 5, down 107,000 barrels from the same period in 1982.

Drought has one good side effect

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The drought which plays havoc with farmers' and ranchers' credit, bankroll, land and morale does have at least one good side effect.

"Looking at the bright side," said Greenwood farmer Roy Graham, "this old land benefits from the rest. But you'd like to do it on a volunteer rotation basis."

Rainfall in West Texas this year has been scant and scattered. Except for about 2,000 acres of irrigated cotton land, Midland's 1983 cotton crop is nil. Dryland cotton didn't "make." Last year, 33,000 acres of cotton were harvested in Midland County.

If the topsoil hasn't blown away, the cropland should rebound next year if rainfall is adequate, said Graham.

Range land is not so resilient.

"It takes pasture land a long time to recover from the drought," noted Graham, who said the range land's recovery time is five to six years.

When farmers and ranchers talk about the current dry spell, they often refer to the prolonged drought of the 1950s.

"This year has been just as severe as any in the '50s," said the farmer. "We just haven't had any rain."

AS IT TURNED OUT, Graham was among the more fortunate of Midland County's farmers. Earlier in the year, he opted not to plant any cotton and instead placed his acreage under the federal government's payment-in-kind (PIK) program which is aimed at reducing the cotton surplus and driving up the depressed cotton prices. Farmers in the PIK program will be paid for what they would have produced had they planted and had it rained. Others took the luck of the weather.

"No," said Graham, "I had no idea it was going to be a drought...I've got some dry-land pasture — no cotton — but there's nothing to eat on it."

Graham referred to the federal disaster loans the government is making available to farmers and ranchers.

"If it's borrowed money, it sure won't do you any good (unless it rains). There will come a day when it becomes due."

By itself, one dry season won't devastate a farmer's livelihood. But the drought coupled with inflation — rising fuel, seed, fertilizer, insecticide and equipment costs — and depressed cotton prices could do a farmer in.

"In some instances," said Graham, "it may be the straw that breaks the farmer's back."

FARMER MARC Traweek is riding out the drought on leased land. Some is dryland; it's barren except for the weeds. The other is irrigated. But without rainfall, irrigated land will produce considerably less cotton per acre than it normally would produce in a good and hot but rainy season.

Earnest Kiker, Midland County's agricultural agent, surveyed Traweek's nonexistent crop and, lacking any rain-making powers, brought forth humor: "It's sure a pretty cotton stand."

Cerebral Palsy Center prepares for new year

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

For a little more than two weeks during this summer, the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center's swimming pool is not swarming with children and the classrooms and halls aren't crowded.

From Aug. 5, the summer program is over and preparation is being made for the regular year, which begins Aug. 29.

With a new wing added onto the facility at 802 Ventura, the extra 5,500 square feet house a new gymnasium and lunch room, auditorium and stage, two classrooms and a staff room. The $289,000 wing, financed through private donations and completed in February, recently was dedicated to Dr. Thurston Dean.

Dean, who served as medical director of the center from 1973 until 1981, has been an orthopedic surgeon in Midland for 23 years.

According to Jim Crawford, director of the center, one classroom will be used for the severely handicapped, ages 3 through 21. The other classroom will be used as a "storytime-type unit," Crawford said.

Diabetes control like juggling act

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Controlling diabetes can be likened to a complicated juggling act involving food intake, exercise and medication.

That's the message a three-member San Antonio medical team imparted to an audience of about 50 people during a special two-hour "Town Hall" meeting at Midland Memorial Hospital Thursday night.

The program, entitled "Innovations in Diabetic Care," outlined progress being made against the disease and sought to clear up misconceptions about the ailment, which afflicts millions of people in this country alone.

"You need to understand the basic physiology of diabetes," said Barbara Walz, head nurse for the Diabetes Center of Humana Hospital in San Antonio.

She noted two basic types of diabetes: type one, where the pancreas doesn't produce any insulin at all; and type two, where insulin is produced but not in sufficient quantities to control the body's blood sugar level.

"There are also some situations where insulin is present in the body but can't be absorbed by the insulin receptor sites of the cells because the sites are clogged with fat," she added. "That's why some people can simply lose weight and be 'cured.'"

Type-two diabetes often can be controlled by diet and the supplemental use of oral medication to stimulate insulin production, while people with type-one are relegated to daily insulin injections.

Red Cross reports on aid efforts

Red Cross Hurricane Alicia District Headquarters in Beaumont, Houston, Victoria, Corpus Christi and Harlingen report 33 mobile feeding vans are in place along the coast, supported by hundreds of local staff and volunteers already in position to feed and shelter victims.

The Midland Red Cross disaster truck left late Tuesday night with Al Sisk, of the Midland Amateur Radio Club, and Jeff Wickham and Dwayne Armstrong. Wickham and Armstrong, employees of the Midland Hilton, have remained in the disaster area with the cooperation of their employer.

Sixty disaster specialists in neighboring states are on alert or enroute to assist as needed. A disaster vehicle from San Angelo joined the Midland trained volunteers and additional volunteers in Midland and Odessa are standing by.

A mobile administration supply unit with enough clerical supplies and equipment to support a 10,000-family disaster is enroute to Texas from the Midwest. Ten thousand comfort kits, or toilet articles, are also being shipped to the scene for use in shelters as needed.

Financial contributions for support of the disaster relief efforts may be given or mailed to any local Red Cross chapter. Checks and money orders should be plainly marked "For Hurricane Alicia Relief" and will be immediately forwarded to the disaster assistance centers.

Donations may be made to the following:

GISD pleased with new school

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — With praise for the workmanship of K.A. Sparks Contractor, Inc., Greenwood Independent School District board Thursday accepted the completed portion of the new junior high and high school building.

The $6,031,000 facility, already 14 months in the making, is approximately five-sixths finished and will open its doors to students at 8:15 a.m. Monday for the first day of the school year.

Approximately $1 million of work remains to be completed, including the gym, cafeteria, auditorium and shops. Contractor Ken Sparks of Hamilton told the board he hoped to have "the balance of the construction finished in the next few weeks," though when questioned privately he narrowed it down to "six weeks."

The new facility came as the result of unprecedented growth in the school district and initially is expected to handle 230 junior high and 220 high school students.

Reaction by board members to the spacious building after a 45-minute tour ranged from "gorgeous" to "beautiful job."

Bob Krueger, Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, talks with, from left, Lou Williams, Tamra Oatman and Carole Hillman, all of Midland, during a fund-raiser Thursday night for the Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus. The event in Odessa was held to mark the organization's first year.

Krueger woos voters at fund-raiser

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Sounding already like the Democrats' choice even though the primary isn't until next May, Bob Krueger appealed to about 100 persons here Thursday night for their vote to put him in the U.S. Senate.

Krueger was the primary speaker at a fund-raiser for the Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus, celebrating its first anniversary. Lloyd Doggett, also invited, couldn't make it out of Austin because of bad weather but sent a statement to be read. He, too, is seeking the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate. Although unannounced, incumbent Sen. John Tower is expected to seek re-election on the Republican ticket.

Doggett's statement, read by Jerry Moore, included: "Every issue is a women's issue. We need to have a real alternative to John Tower."

Krueger criticized what he called Tower's lack of support on civil rights and oil and gas issues.

Six years ago, Krueger as a congressman battled Tower for the Senate seat. In the end the incumbent squeaked out a victory by .3 of 1 percent of the vote. This time will be different, Krueger contended, pointing to an increase in voters with Democratic leanings from 1978 to 1982.

In the election year, 1978, 2.3 million persons voted in Texas. In 1982, when Democrats regained control of the state government, 3.1 million Texans voted, he said. And, he added, "I'm four times better known now."

With the next election not until November 1984, Krueger has started his campaign. In his visits throughout Texas, the candidate said he's noticed "the people are deeply concerned about government."

Steering an interview to oil and gas, Krueger said when in Congress he had introduced a bill to take the price controls off oil. And in 1976 he had tried to get natural gas deregulated but the legislation was defeated by two votes. Oil and gas people in Texas have fared better under Democrats, said Krueger, than under the current administration.

If Krueger had won that election five years ago, as a senator he would "have moved to see we got decent energy legislation rather than see it tied up in the Senate for so long...and would put taxes on imported oil."

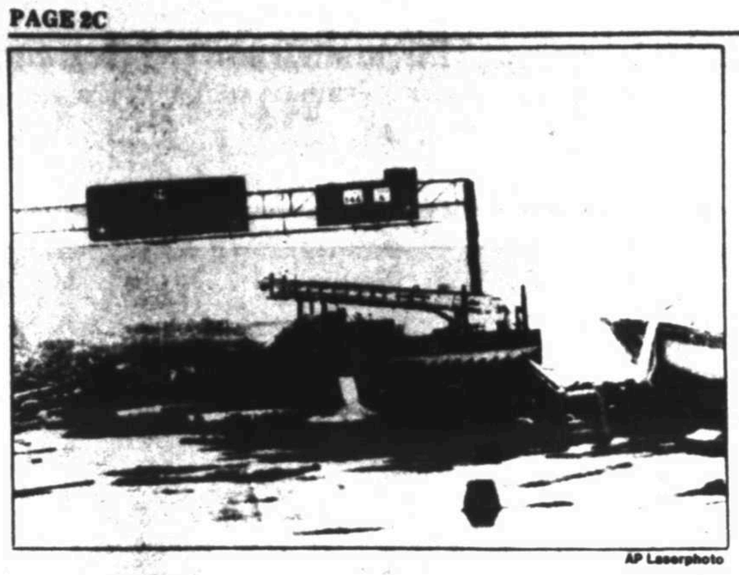

During his talk before the women's organization, Krueger — with gray strands swirling through the close-cropped curly hair — sang the notes that form the theme of the political caucus: "We won't have to give up on the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment), or the rights of women to make their own choices. We won't have to give up on the American people.

"These issues are not just rhetoric to me; I voted for these. What the women's political caucus wants, like every group wants, is for public figures to speak as straightforward as possible."

Krueger knocked on the civil rights issues, saying, "I worked very hard for the voting rights act; Tower voted against it. With every piece of civil rights legislation, he voted against it."

Another reason for the fund-raiser was to bring attention to the local women's political caucus. The group's state comptroller, Cecelia Burke of Austin, said the state organization will focus on a November ballot issue involving garnishment of wages. The local caucuses will promote the issue through telephoning and mailing literature.

The political caucus's membership is growing throughout the state, according to Ms. Burke, who believes women will make a difference in the outcome of the 1984 election.

Boats, cranes and other debris line the highway leading from Houston to Galveston Thursday after Hurricane Alicia came ashore. Alicia's 100-mph winds pushed tides across the roadway.

Party-goers ride out storm in west end of Galveston

GALVESTON (AP) — As Hurricane Alicia crushed homes to rubble and buried debris all around them, Linda Miller and four fearless friends threw a party in a rickety house on stilts in Galveston's storm-battered west end.

"We rode it out here," Miss Miller said. "The house shook and rumbled and felt like it would crumble at any minute. It was like an Astroworld ride that never ended."

All around the wooden house, other homes were shattering in the heavy winds Thursday. A trailer across the street exploded, scattering insulation and furniture into a fence. Another house was lifted from its cradle of pilings and tumbled end over end for 150 feet before it cracked like an eggshell.

But the party went on, and all five merrymakers survived without injury.

Just up the beach from Miss Miller's party, Fred Wise, owner of the Gulf Stream Stables, had an unusual problem — 40 horses roaming free in the midst of the hurricane.

Wise said over a mile of fence was ripped down by water and wind, and he spent a restless night Thursday worrying about his horses.

In the wet early dawn, he wound his way through fallen tree limbs to his field and found that none of the horses had been even slightly hurt. "They got into a salt cedar break, turned their tails to the wind, and not a single one got a scratch," he said.

Traweek left a small trail of dust when he walked.

"You came to the right place looking for a drought," said Traweek. "They're not having much of a drought in Houston right now."

Like other farmers, Traweek had hoped that the hurricane in the Houston-Galveston Gulf Coast area would send rain to parched West Texas.

He dug into the soil and picked up an unsprouted cottonseed.

"There's some cotton-picking cottonseed," he said. "If it got rain on it, it'd sprout and come up."

Meanwhile, Traweek and other farmers are "chiselling" their barren land to keep the soil from blowing and to keep the weeds down. It's a tall order.

"You're supposed to keep it weed free and keep it from blowing, but how do you keep it weed free and keep it from blowing?"

EVEN WHEN the drought was evident, farmers planted seed anyway. They were certain it wouldn't sprout and bear fruit without rain. But they "had" to plant to satisfy the government's requirements for financial relief just in case the government declared portions of West Texas a drought-induced disaster area.

"They plant to satisfy government programs," Kiker said, "and nothing came up. If you don't plant, then they (the government) can't declare you a disaster."

Such plantings waste a farmer's time, fuel and seed and add to the wear on the equipment.

"When they planted that cotton, they knew it wasn't going to come up. They knew they were in a drought, but they had to plant anyway," the county agent said. "They didn't know the govenment was going to declare this a disaster area. There was no guarantee the government was going to declare this a disaster area."

"AIN'T IT PITIFUL," Hoot Leonard, a farmer who is manager of the Midland Farmers Co-operative cotton gin, said of the meager cotton crop. "Of course, we simply missed it."

Last year, the gin turned out 12,600 bales of cotton. This year, he expects only up to 2,000 bales. Some of the county's bigger farmers, including Graham, who irrigates, put their acreage in the PIK program to "let their land rest."

"I was farming back in the '50s," said Leonard, "and it's drier now than it was then. These old fields weren't as barren then as they are now...

"We've got to go ahead and keep trying like everybody else, hoping for better days," Leonard said. "After the old land rests, maybe it'll give us a better crop (next year)...if Mother Nature will give us some rain."

Norman Koonce, who farms west of Midland, is waiting for next year and a better season.

"It's still hot and dry out here," he said. "All we've got is clouds.

"All we're doing is summer furrowing to keep the dust from blowing," Koonce said. "All we're doing is taking it easy and trying to hold down expenses. It's too late for anything but another year."

His older brother, Louie Koonce, has gotton out of farming, though he is leasing land for farming.

"It (the drought) is especially going to hurt the young farmers and borderline farmers to stay in business another year."

He said that the government's low-interest disaster loans "are going to help a little bit; it's not going to help much...It looks awfully bad for the farmers...

"This year, we never did have a planting rain," Koonce said. "No one figured that it wouldn't rain at all."

Alvey Bryant, who has been through droughts since the 1930s, said that the 1983 drought so far has been drier than that of 1933 and the 1950s.

"IN THE '50s, we'd get rain in July, and this year, we just didn't. We planted feed, mostly for grazing. In some of the '50s, we would plant cotton. We didn't make much cotton in '51, '2 or '3."

It was so dry in January 1962 that Bryant moved his cattle to grazing land north of Durant, Okla. But the drought set in there in the summer, and by September, the springs and creeks had stopped flowing. He shipped his cattle off to Fort Worth and took a loss. "I was out of water, and the market had broke," he said.

"I'm not going to run from the drought any more," Bryant said. "I'm just going to sell. We just have hope now that it will rain in September, so our land won't blow away in December."

In some cases, the drought is thinning out cattle herds and forcing some ranchers to ship their cattle to the Panhandle and New Mexico where there still is grass to graze.

"Buyers are coming into this area and trying to capitalize on this drought," said Kiker. The cattle buyers will purchase lean cattle, fatten them on pasture land or in feedlots, and sell them at a profit.

"So far," said Enos Howle, co-owner of the Southwestern Livestock Auction Co. in Midland, "prices have been good due to the (lean) condition of the cattle" and eager buyers.

RECENTLY, THE Tuesday sales at the auction barn have leaped from 800 or 1,000 head to 1,500.

"The cattle are leaving this country," said Howle. "Nobody is buying cattle to leave here, except these little five-acre farmers...I know some ranchers personally who are selling out. There's nothing to feed them (cattle)."

Rancher Matt Faudree said he is holding onto his cattle, though he, like the Scharbauer ranchers, are moving cattle into grazing land in the Texas Panhandle and New Mexico until the drought subsides.

"We haven't sold any cattle other than dry cows," he said. "If we don't grow grass, there'll come a time when we'll have to de-stock."

Much of his land got about an inch of scattered rainfall in early August.

"If we don't have any rain after the 15th of September, that's the deadline — the end of our growing season."

Still, Faudree was hopeful for rain.

"We've got some pretty good clouds building up."

Bobby Matthews, foreman of the Glass & Johnson Lazy Z Ranch, said "We're just trying to hold on 'til the 15th of September and hoping it'll rain...We'll have to sell a few and feed a lot of them" unless it rains again, he said.

Unlike some other ranches, about three inches of rain fell over three-quarters of the Lazy Z Ranch about five weeks ago.

"We hit it pretty lucky," Matthews said. "If we hadn't had that, we sure would be in bad shape."

He's waiting for more rain.

"If it doesn't rain by the 15th of September, it's going to be a bad winter...and thin cattle. We'll just try to feed them through. I'm just hoping that hurricane will run us some rain up here...."

GISD likes new school

"Mighty good job, in my opinion," reflected James Brooks. "It's way ahead of what I expected."

Upon returning to chambers, the board decided to pay the facility's entire electric bill — reflected on a single meter — while finish-up construction continues. Sparks agreed to credit the district with 15 percent of that bill, a figure he came up with after studying the bills for the last two months and determining the number of hours per day his workers will continue on the job.

The board also decided to acquire insurance on that portion of the building it accepted.

In other business, the board:

— Passed a 40 percent tax reduction for homesteads on the 1983 tax rolls.

— Appointed members Charles Gardner and Brooks to study the proposed acquisition of a new 71-passenger bus and van.

— Passed on Midland County resident Harold McClure's request to transfer his 14-year-old son from Midland schools to Greenwood.

— Passed on a proposed contract with nearby mobile home park owner Theron Vaughan that would have brought a 30-gallon-a-minute water well near the new school into the district's control. Although trustees took into consideration the fact that the line from Vaughan's well runs directly across the grounds of the new facility — a possible trouble spot should a line burst — they decided to have their own well drilled.

— Accepted the resignation of elementary school aid Betty Pruitt.

— Passed on a proposal by Midland YMCA for a care program in which children would have been kept at GISD facilities from 3:30-6:30 p.m. for $60 a month per child, and kindergartners for a half-day for $35 a month per child.

— Decided that, since the new cafeteria will not be operational for several weeks, students would be fed sandwiches the first day of school and parents would be sent a note asking them to provide sack lunches.

The next meeting of the board will be in the old cafeteria at 7 p.m. Monday, when it will conduct a public hearing on a proposed increase in taxes over the three percent level.

The gymnasium includes several swings that hang from the ceiling as well as other playground-therapy equipment. A folding wall separates the gym from the lunch room and the stage, equipped with lights and ramps, can be used as a therapy classroom or for musical activities such as the rhythm band.

The staff room provides a meeting place for volunteers, employees and physical therapists at the center, which serves some 350 children.

Diabetes control like juggling act

The complexity of the disease, she said, "is why different patients require different treatments" and why there is much confusion among people who suffer from it.

Adding to the confusion is the fact that there are about 60 different forms of insulin available today — the result of advanced knowledge about blood sugar chemistry and the way insulin works to control it.

"The word 'diet' produces negative feelings and makes people think of a strict regimen and boring meals," said Antoinette Holford, clinical dietician for Humana.

"But diet is simply the way we eat. Carbohydrates, protein and fat are very important in controlling blood sugar, which automatically goes up when we eat. The trick is not to let it stay high or plummet."

Accomplishing that task "is a balancing act," said Dr. Jerome Fischer, an endrocrinologist at Humana.

Noting that until recently insulin has been produced largely from the pancreases of pigs and cows, Fischer added: "But insulin from animal pancreases is not the same as insulin from human pancreases. The body reacts suspiciously to it and produces antibodies.

"But there have been marked breakthroughs. Humans are much closer to pigs than cows" and insulin produced soley from pigs "causes fewer antibodies to form."

Also, he noted, insulin can be artificially produced today, and mechanical "insulin monitoring and delivery systems" are becoming available to reduce uncertainty in maintaining a "normal" insulin-blood sugar ratio.

In addition, pancreas transplants — some 100 of which have been done to date — are appearing on the horizon for diabetics. "But," said Fischer, "their success rate is small and the procedure needs perfecting."

More information about the illness can be obtained by calling the Midland Chapter of the American Diabetes Association at 682-0314.

Foy Johnson not 'bully'

Foy Johnson, who was shotgunned to death outside his home last April 17, was not a "bully," his common-law widow, Doris Spencer, said Thursday.

Johnson's accused slayer, 60-year-old Henry Dirl Rice, was convicted Tuesday by a 238th State District Court jury of shooting Johnson, also 60, in ending a five-year feud. Rice's defense was based on self-defense.

In the account of the murder trial in Wednesday's newspaper, The Reporter-Telegram referred to Johnson as a "bully."

"Foy was not a 'bully,'" said Ms. Spencer. "The man (Rice) was convicted of murder; Rice was the 'bully.'"

The story's reference to Johnson was based on defense attorney Tom Hirsch's labeling Johnson a "bully" who allegedly had harassed Rice since a dispute in a bar five years ago.

In turn, state prosecutor Steve Bruneman termed Rice "a hot head," "a bully" and a "mean" person.

Johnson's widow, family and friends were upset over the "bully" reference.

"I ain't the only one in town that got fired up," she said. "You got that right."

As was Rice, Johnson was a World War II veteran, Ms. Spencer said, and was disabled.

Gas supervisor no-billed in shooting

FORT STOCKTON — Clifton Hood, a Bakersfield gas plant supervisor who shot and killed a McCamey man wanted in connection with the murder of an Upton County deputy, was no-billed Thursday by a 112th District grand jury.

The jury decided against indicting Hood after hearing testimony relating to the shooting death of Richard Graham, 40, the object of a manhunt after Upton County Deputy Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro was shot to death while responding to a silent alarm in McCamey.

When shot by Hood, Graham reportedly was attempting to steal a pickup from the Intratex Co. plant near Bakersfield in Pecos County.

Thomas Graham, 18, sustained shotgun wounds in the same incident.

Walnut sideboard is Victorian Renaissance revival.

Sideboard valuable piece

By JAMES G. MCCOLLAM
Member, Antique Appraisers Assoc. of America
Copley News Service

Q. Enclosed is a picture of three copper items — lamp, bowl and candleholder. The mark on the bottom of each piece is also shown.

What can you tell me about the vintage, value and maker?

A. These are Roycroft metalwork made by Elbert Hubbard in East Aurora, N.Y., around the turn of the century.

The following are approximate values: lamp, $500 to $600; bowl, $35 to $45; candleholder, $65 to $75.

Q. What can you tell me about this beautiful sideboard?

It is solid walnut with burl walnut and hand-carved trim.

A. This is a Victorian Renaissance Revival sideboard made in the third quarter of the 19th century.

It is an exceptionally choice antique, easily worth from $2,000 to $2,500.

Q. What can you tell me about this hand-painted porcelain cake set? It consists of a cake plate and six dessert plates decorated with poinsettias.

I have copied the mark which appears on the back of each piece.

A. This is the mark used by Erdmann Schlegelmilch prior to the use of his RS Prussia mark. It dates back to the 1860s. Schlegelmilch founded his company at Suhl, Germany, in 1861.

Installing hardwood floor hard on nerves

By JACK SMITH
By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

For years, as I have noted here before, I have suffered a chronic case of low-degree emotional trauma brought on by the dark purple carpet in my wife's bedroom. That a person can actually suffer emotional distress from continued exposure to a particular color is well established, I believe, in psychology.

The patient's symptoms are anxiety, melancholy and a feeling that he is trapped in a menacing world. These symptoms are especially acute when the feared color is on the bedroom floor — the last thing one must walk over before retiring to an uneasy night.

Also there are minor frustrations. If you are in the habit of eating raisins while reading in bed, and drop a few on the floor, they are impossible to see in the purple carpet, and can be discovered only accidentally by stepping on them in your bare feet. That is also the only way to find your reading glasses if you drop them on the floor.

Ironically, our other bedroom has an orange carpet. Orange is my favorite color. It raises my spirits; it dispels my fears; walking on an orange carpet is like walking in a field of poppies. Wordsworth felt that way about yellow.

Unfortunately, the bedroom with the orange carpet is my wife's workroom, and I am not allowed in it. It is her sanctum.

But for months she has mentioned now and then that she might get rid of the purple carpet.

"Fine," I would say, not wanting to sound too eager. "What would you put in its place. Orange?"

"No," she would say. " I think maybe I'd like to put in hardwood."

"Hmm," I would say. "Sounds like a good idea."

Months ago she got an estimate, but nothing happened, and I was afraid she had dropped the idea.

Then a week ago, when I was home in a state of emotional and physical exhaustion, in need of solitude and quiet, she began bringing all the drawers out of the bedroom furniture into the living room, and all the books and magazines, which covered the dining room table to a height of two feet, and all the pictures and clocks and bric-a-brac and mementos, including her mother's china clock. Naturally I asked what she was doing.

"The men are coming tomorrow," she said.

"What men?" I asked, my normal anxiety soaring to paranoid apprehension.

"To do the floor."

They did a beautiful job. The floor has the lovely sheen of polished dark wood.

I just pray that she doesn't decide on a purple throw rug.

Wallpaper borders create architectural character

AP Newsfeatures

Today's new fashion of putting up wallpaper borders on the walls borrows a decorative ploy that was popular in the 18th and 19th centuries.

In the past, a wallpaper border was used as a rule to finish an already papered wall. Nowadays, borders may be used in this way, but are just as likely to be applied alone to a painted wall as a decorative accent.

This practice has two advantages. First, today's often featureless rooms cry out for the imaginative use of borders to create an illusion of architectural detail. Borders are available which imitate cornices, plaster mouldings and other architectural flourishes which once were commonplace in homes.

Second, both the original purchase of material and the cost of application are considerably less for a border than for a full wallpapering job.

One of the nice things about borders is that they offer the do-it-yourself decorator considerable scope, says Bob Jaxon, a wall-coverings designer who recently completed a border collection for a wallpaper manufacturer.

Prepasted, dry-strippable borders such as the ones he designed can be applied around windows and doors, on cornices and at the ceiling, chair rail or baseboard level on walls.

In addition, said Jaxon, he has used them to create supergraphics and customize windowshades, valences, mirrors, room dividers and folding screens as well as to dress up poster frames, and as accent trim on doors, cabinets and furniture.

Jaxon advises using a wallpaper border to correct architectural flaws in a room. For example, to raise a low ceiling, paint the ceiling a light color and extend the ceiling paint one foot down onto the walls. Paint the rest of the walls a darker hue and where the two colors meet, apply a purchased wallpaper border in a compatible design. The illusion of a higher ceiling will be the result.

To lower a ceiling, reverse the trick, painting the ceiling a dark color and the wall beneath it a lighter color.

Jaxon has also used a wallpaper border in a geometric Greek key design to create a trompe l'oeil headboard by applying the border to the wall behind a platform bed.

Another idea is to apply a border to a sliding glass door by carrying the wallpaper border across the window.

One of the most successful uses of the inexpensive borders he designed for Printpack Inc. is to decorate children's rooms. A hobby horse motif border was used, for example, to trim a crib, on the wall at crib level, to frame a bulletin board and to decorate an old truck refurbished to hold toys. The same border also decorates an inexpensive lamp and a waste bucket.

"Later, as the child grows and matures, you caw strip off the juvenile border and select something more sophisticated," Jaxon said.

Another advantage to borders over a full room of wallpaper is their more subtle effect.

"As rooms have gotten smaller, we have had to learn discipline and work for smaller effects. In a small room, which could be overwhelmed by too much strong color and pattern, a border can add distinction without being too loud," said Jaxon.

Wallpaper borders come in a wide range of sizes — from a 2-inch width to as wide as 8 inches. Personal taste is the usual guideline in size selection. But as a rule of thumb, the farther away the border from eye level, the larger it can be.

"A 2-inch border wouldn't mean much in a very high-ceilinged room," said Jaxon.

Scars remain after sex 'therapy'

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Evelyn Walker went to a psychiatrist for help, but instead was pumped with pills, seduced and then charged $110 a week for sexual encounters that took the place of therapy.

"He maintained he loved me, he maintained he cared about me and he was the only one who cared about me," recalled Walker, who was married and the 34-year-old mother of two at the time. "He said no one else would take care of me."

Lori Brown was 16, a teenager who had been physically and sexually abused by numerous foster parents and who was further mistreated by the psychologist she sought help from.

"I HAD BEEN shuffled around to 40 different schools and I didn't have much of an education," she said. "He would let me take books from his office but in exchange for the books, there was a little petting, a little kissing and a little touching."

At 21, Jan was a college dropout, a victim of lingering depression and a survivor of a suicide attempt. At a community mental health center, she met a 50-year-old therapist, a "Svengali" who promised the road to recovery with a mix of counseling and sex.

"I didn't think it was immoral or unethical," said Jan, now 29, married and the mother of two small children. "I thought I was his very special patient. He took me out to dinner, he fixed my car, he was there at 2 in the morning if I needed him."

Feelings of rejection, loyalty, betrayal and anger bombarded Jan after her psychologist ran off to Nebraska with another patient he had married. But on the surface she fared better than Walker and Brown.

THEY ENDED UP in psychiatric hospitals — but first their stomachs were emptied of the pills they had hoped would end their lives.

In some states, it is illegal for a therapist to have sex with a patient. Intimacy also is forbidden by the code of ethics of the American Psychiatric Association, the American Psychological Association and the National Association of Social Workers.

Yet the rules are violated by some 6 percent of practicing therapists, many whose offenses go unreported, said Jacqueline Bouhoutsos, Ph.D., a clinical professor of psychology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

They include psychiatrists, psychologists, licensed clinical social workers and marriage, family and child counselors.

FURTHERMORE, NINE OF 10 patients who have intimate relations with their therapists suffer ill effects, according to a recent study headed by Bouhoutsos and funded by the California State Psychological Association.

Of some 559 patients who told 318 therapists of a prior sexual involvement, 90 percent had suffered some negative effect, from feelings of mistrust of all therapists to significant emotional problems and even suicide. Half said they did not know the relationship was illegal or unethical.

"When a person goes into therapy, they are prepared to bare their souls," Bouhoutsos said. "A great deal of intimacy develops very rapidly. The therapist becomes the recipient of all the unresolved emotional problems. He takes on the role of the parent. It's called the transference phenomenon. Part of that is falling in love with the therapist."

IN A HEALTHY situation, the therapist works through the patient's feelings until the problems are resolved and the magical charm is gone, Bouhoutsos said. But a disturbed therapist, she said, will act out his own fantasies.

In early 1974, Walker considered herself a happily married homemaker, fortunate to be wed to her husband of 14 years and lucky to be the mother of two sons, 12 and 9. But when the San Diego woman was plagued by bouts of depression she attributed to an unhappy childhood, her husband told her "to get it fixed."

Her neighbor, a psychiatrist, suggested three well-known psychotherapists and she picked Zane Parzen simply because she liked his name.

The impulse led to a three-year destructive relationship, culminating several years later when she sued the prominent La Jolla, Calif., psychiatrist for malpractice and was awarded $4.6 million, the nation's largest judgment in a case of psychiatric abuse.

Tablet cuts risk of heart attack

BOSTON (AP) — The aspirin in a single Alka-Seltzer tablet, taken daily, can cut in half the risk of heart attack and death in people who have a dangerous form of heart pain — and the "plop-plop, fizz-fizz" prevents stomach upset, a new study shows.

Victims of this condition, called unstable angina, should take daily doses of aspirin, the researchers said. They recommended Alka-Seltzer because it is less likely than plain aspirin to cause stomach irritation when used for long periods of time.

An Alka-Seltzer tablet dissolved in water contains 324 milligrams of aspirin — the same as an ordinary aspirin pill — along with buffering ingredients.

"We think that the active ingredient is aspirin and that the buffered solution added to the safety," said Dr. H. Daniel Lewis Jr., who directed the study at 12 Veterans Administration hospitals. "I would think that aspirin would work as well."

The study, published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, did not test rival products that are similar to Alka-Seltzer, Lewis said.

Aspirin has been widely studied in recent years as a way of preventing heart attacks.

DEAR ABBY

Wife's gift a sure bet

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22nd wedding anniversary coming up, and he asked me what I wanted. I asked him how much he planned to spend, and he said about $500.

I told him I couldn't think of anything I wanted, but I owed my bookie about that much and if he cleaned up my bill, I'd consider it a nice present.

He agreed, and that's what he gave me.

My question: What do I tell people who ask me what my husband gave me for my anniversary? - LIKES THE HORSES

DEAR LIKES: Tell them he paid off your bookie. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: Denny and I lived together for a year, then we had a falling out and he left for a few weeks. Denny is 23 and I am 28. While we were apart, Denny took up with "Marcie," who is 22, then he came back to me saying he still loves me but he also loves Marcie. She is pregnant by him, and he is going to marry her. They both moved in with me and we get along great. There is no jealousy between Marcie and me. Denny still loves me and wants me to have a baby by him. He wants to marry me, too, and if that's the only way to keep him, I am agreeable. I know this sounds weird, but we three are very happy together. (We even sleep together.)

Do you think our sharing arrangement will work? Do you think we are weird? Are there any states besides Utah that allow multiple marriage? - SHARING IN SYRA-CUSE

DEAR SHARING: There are NO states -- including Utah - that permit multiple marriages. Do I think your sharing arrangement will work? I don't know. Do I think you're weird? Yes.

DEAR ABBY: Which is correct: "The bride walked UP the aisle" or "The bride walked DOWN the aisle"? - MADE A BET

DEAR MADE: I'm inclined to believe that the bride walks DOWN the aisle. After the ceremony, she walks (or runs) UP the aisle.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for the young man in jail who chose to get his high school diploma:

Hurrah for you! But don't settle for a high school diploma. Many prisons offer courses that can prepare you for work on the outside, so take advantage of them. Don't be just another "ex-con" when you get out.

My husband is an instructor at the prison in Vacaville, Calif., so I know something about the programs offered there. Not only can inmates earn a high school diploma, they can also learn clerical skills, electronics, lens grinding, horticulture and auto mechanics. They can become dental technicians, nursing assistants, X-ray technicians and cooks, as well as expert craftsmen in wood, jewelry, leather, pottery and ceramics.

Don't let one mistake ruin your life. Learn from it. Study hard, and good luck. - JANET GOLDSTEIN, SACRAMENTO

Sweetener may change behavior

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors should be alert for possible behavioral problems caused by aspartame, a new sugar substitute being used in soft drinks, a physician warned today.

Dr. Richard J. Wurtman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said animal studies show that this substance may change levels of chemicals in the brain that affect behavior. He said people who already have underlying brain disorders, such as Parkinson's disease and insomnia, are most likely to be affected by aspartame.

Wurtman, a physician and professor of neuroendocrine regulation, said there has been no clear evidence yet of behavior difficulties in humans because of the sweetener. But he alerted doctors to the possibility in a letter published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Aspartame is made in part from an amino acid called phenylalanine. In the brain, this is used to manufacture neurotransmitters that relay messages from one nerve to another.

"The increases we are seeing here in brain phenylalanine are well beyond the level I think that man has ever had in his evolutionary history," Wurtman said in an interview.

A tabletop form of aspartame called Nutrasweet has been on the market as a sugar substitute in the United States for two years. Canada, Denmark, Sweden and Ireland already allow aspartame in soft drinks.

Wurtman says that problems are most likely to occur when people drink several cans of aspartame-sweetened soda along with a sandwich, candy bar or some other form of carbohydrate. The carbohydrate lowers blood levels of other amino acids that ordinarily compete with phenylalanine for access to the brain.

"The neurotransmitters that we would anticipate as being affected by aspartame are involved in a wide variety of behaviors — mood, appetite, sleep and vigor," he said.

His research on rats showed that a combination of aspartame and carbohydrate quadrupled brain levels of phenylalanine.

"The dose of aspartame used in these studies is consistent with the amounts that an 8-year-old child might consume, during a hot afternoon, if the sweetener is added to soft drinks at the level currently used in Canada," the letter said.

Coca-Cola Co. began introducing aspartame-sweetened soda on Wednesday. But it mixes the sweetener with saccharin, and it will add substantially less aspartame than Canadian bottlers use.

Series star doesn't mind the insults

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Franklin Cover gets insulted at work and he doesn't mind it a bit. The fact is, that's the reason he goes to work.

Cover plays Tom Willis, who is sort of a verbal punching bag for George Jefferson (Sherman Hemsley) on the long-running CBS hit comedy series, "The Jeffersons."

"The Jeffersons," entering its 10th season, was a spin-off by producer Norman Lear from another highly successful comedy, "All in the Family." The Jeffersons were Archie Bunker's neighbors, and George Jefferson was the black equivalent of the bigoted Archie.

As the series began, Jefferson had just struck it rich in the dry cleaning business and he and his wife, Louise (Isabel Sanford), moved to an expensive apartment building on Manhattan's East Side.

One of their neighbors was Tom Willis, a white man married to a black woman. He quickly became Jefferson's foil for many racial jokes and needling about his portliness. Adding to Jefferson's ire was the fact that his son married Willis' daughter.

"Tom is much nicer than I am," Cover said, but that may be just a bit of modesty, because Cover is a gracious and pleasant man. In fact, it's hard to picture him as the nasty lawyer he once played on the soap opera, "All My Children."

"He's a publisher who's done well," he says of his character. "He's a bit naive. That's when he gets into trouble with George Jefferson. George can usually talk him into something against his will. Then they both get into trouble. It becomes like Laurel and Hardy."

Willis is also henpecked by his wife, Helen, played by Roxie Roker.

Cover said that in the years the show has been on the air, Tom Willis has changed and is now less of a straight man than he was.

"When you talk about a character on a situation comedy, it's not just the actor," he says. "It's the writers, too. I've seen a lot of writers come and go. Some come in and say the Willises are boring. Some say they're interesting. We need the stimulation of new blood, new ideas."

"Everything I've done until 'The Jeffersons...were all in New York," he says. "My family lives in New York and I live here while the show's in production. We have a house on Cape Cod and we spend part of the summer there. My family comes to visit me. I never thought the show would last this long.

Cover was also seen in last year's Emmy Award-winning production of "A Woman Called Golda," starring the late Ingrid Bergman in a film biography of Israeli Prime Minister Gold Meir. He flew to Israel for a small part as the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

No one would accuse bridge players of being an overly religious crowd. But most of the better ones have learned that if they cast their bread upon the waters, there is no telling how it will come back.

South had the sort of hand we dream about — a classic three no trump opening bid. The auction was over in one bid.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer could count only eight tricks. The optimists held up the ace of clubs one round and then cashed their red-suit winners. Next came the ace of spades and a low spade. They would have been alright if East had won the second spade, but unfortunately West held the king and he took three more club tricks for down one.

The other declarers were charitable. They held up the ace of clubs for two rounds, discarding a spade from dummy on the third club. They, too, cashed their red-suit winners, but then they elected to give West his club tricks by exiting with a club, again letting go a spade from dummy. West could cash his last club, on which dummy sluffed the last spade.

Now the table was down to two red jacks, both high, while declarer held the ace-ten of spades. Depending on his hand, West now had a choice of how to present declarer with his contract. If he led a red card, the board's two jacks would win the last two tricks. If he led a spade, declarer's ace-ten would do the trick. Either way, the defenders could get no more than their four club tricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Rock group leader Sly Stone, of Sly and the Family Stone, dozes during his bond hearing in a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., court.

Sly slept like a Stone throughout bond hearing

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Rock singer Sly Stone, arrested during a show on grand theft charges, was released on $10,000 bond after bailiffs had to shake him awake repeatedly during a court hearing.

"Are we keeping you awake?" Broward County Judge Harvey Ford asked Thursday as the 39-year-old leader of the rock group Sly and the Family Stone dozed through much of the bond hearing.

Police entered a downtown nightclub Wednesday night and interrupted Stone in the middle of a set to arrest him. The singer was arrested two months ago in Fort Myers on drug charges.

Detectives in neighboring Pompano Beach had issued a warrant after hotel owner Mary Ann Magness filed a complaint charging that Stone stole a jeweled ring as she showed it to him on Aug. 6.

Stone, whose real name is Sylvester Stewart, hit the charts in 1968 with a series of hits, including "Dance To The Music," "Family Affair" and "I Want To Take You Higher."

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Gov. Richard Snelling says his plan to appoint himself justice of the peace for a day in order to officiate at the marriage of two friends is "perfectly proper" and just not worth all the hubbub it's created.

"It's perfectly legal, it's perfectly proper, and all of the people who are involved are happy to have it happen," the governor said Thursday of his plan to preside at the wedding of House Speaker Stephan Morse and Jill Spiro.

Snelling has asked David Webster, the justice of the peace in his hometown, to resign for a day so he can name himself to the post, perform the marriage, resign and then re-appoint Webster. However, Secretary of State James Douglas last week criticized the proposal, saying it might trivialize the local office.

"What is the possible danger?" Snelling responded. "If I find that to be fun, and Steve and Jill find it to be fun, and David finds it to be fun — who is it that doesn't find it fun? Jim Douglas. Well, he's got to learn to have fun."

Koo Stark

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Laughing and patting her stomach, Koo Stark, one-time girlfriend of Britain's Prince Andrew, denied reports that she is expecting a baby in January.

The 26-year-old American actress, who agreed to a rare television interview Wednesday night under an agreement there would be no questions about Andrew, said the Japanese magazine report was false.

"You have got to read the press very carefully," she said, noting that the reports were never attributed to anyone.

Miss Stark said it was her natural impulse not to comment to reporters and denied there were royal orders of silence. "I don't like gossiping and this is all this is, gossip getting right out of proportion," she said.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The audience wasn't seeing double when Sen. Gary Hart endorsed Sen. Gary Hart for the 1984 Democratic nomination for president — it was California state Sen. Gary Hart endorsing U.S. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado.

The two Democrats, who bear a slight physical resemblance but are not related, joked over their names at a news conference Thursday before the presidential hopeful renewed his attack on President Reagan's Central American policies.

"It is my pleasure to introduce my good friend, Sen. Gary Hart.... I feel I have a vested interest in his campaign," California's Hart, of Santa Barbara, said.

"I have had the honor of knowing Gary Hart for some time," Colorado's Hart replied with a laugh.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. says surviving the heart surgery and critical complications he suffered through this summer is "sort of like being born again to me."

John Brown Jr.

Brown, 49, appeared Thursday with his wife, Phyllis, at his first news conference since he was released from the hospital more than three weeks ago. He told reporters that medical experts said he was lucky to survive the post-operative Adult Respiratory Disease Syndrome that put him in critical condition, because fewer than 40 percent of patients who have it live.

"The doctor was always confident, Phyllis was always confident, and I didn't know the difference," Brown said.

The governor said he has given his lifestyle a complete overhaul since the operation, dropping much of his excess weight, working out daily and giving up a four-pack-a-day smoking habit.

"I'm feeling super," he said, adding that he expects to be back on the job in a month or so.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Henry Winkler and his wife, Stacey, became parents for the second time and both mother and son were reported in good condition, a publicist for Winkler said.

The boy, named Max, weighed 7 pounds, 6 ounces, was 20½ inches lor ʒ, and had bright red hair, said Richard Grant of Lippin & Grant of Beverly Hills.

"They're both doing great," Grant said after the birth Thursday, referring to Mrs. Winkler and Max, who were at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in West Los Angeles.

Winkler, who is starring in the 11th season of the television show, "Happy Days," and his wife have a daughter, Zoe Emily, who will be 3 on Sept. 30, Grant said. Mrs. Winkler has a 12-year-old son, Jed, from a previous marriage, he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson has been dropped as a defendant in a $70 million lawsuit by two former partners in a Beverly Hills bank which Carson co-founded, spokesmen for the plaintiffs said.

"There was no basis for proceeding against Carson," said the statement released Thursday by Rogers & Cowan, a public relations firm which said it was representing plaintiffs Arnold Kopelson and Michael Miller.

The statement said the plaintiffs were persuaded to drop the action against Carson on the basis of recent information. However, it said the civil suit in U.S. District Court will continue against Henry Bushkin, Carson's attorney. Bushkin was formerly Kopelson's law partner.

The suit alleges that Bushkin "manipulated" the affairs of the bank and attempted to engineer a "potential buy-out of plaintiffs' shares and ruin plaintiffs both financilly and emotionally."

Buskin has called the allegations of the suit "baseless."

DOVER, England (AP) — Britain's 12-year-old Samantha Druce today became the youngest girl to swim the English Channel, the Channel Swimming Association reported.

Association secretary Audrey Scott said the girl took the title from another British girl, Alison Wetherly, who had it for only about four hours before Samantha, who is 43 days younger, reached the French coast.

Mrs. Scott said she did not know how long it took either girl to make it across the waterway between England and France because the swim monitors had not provided the exact figures.

Margrit Bass, 20, of Webster, N.Y., who was making her second bid to swim the waterway between England and France, again failed to make the crossing.

Line-up fine for 'Louie' lovers

LOS ALTOS HILLS, Calif. (AP) — In the '60s, nobody could get enough of "Louie Louie," the raucous hit song whose lyrics glued teen ears to the radio and even got it banned from some airwaves.

But this weekend, a 250-watt college radio station is offering all the "Louie Louie" anyone could ever want — 400 different versions, in a daylong marathon dubbed "Maximum Louie Louie."

KFJC, a student-run station at Foothill Community College south of San Francisco, is kicking off the event at 6 p.m. today. The program will continue until every version is played — rock versions, disco versions, elevator-music versions, a religious choral version and even a 40-minute version recorded at a Hell's Angels Halloween party.

"It will run no less than 30 hours and maybe as long as 36," said Jeff "Stretch" Riedle, KFJC's music director and resident "Louie Louie" expert. Eighty-five of the 100 records being used for the program came from his private collection.

"There's enough variety between each version that I hope people will able to appreciate the difference," he said. "Granted, there will be people who aren't as crazy as us and who won't listen, but I think many people will be amused."

Richard Berry, who wrote the song in 1955, will be at the station during the program. He'll even perform the tune live, with the help of a local backup band.

Berry first recorded his two-minute, 13-second song about a sailor who misses his girlfriend in 1956, as the flip side of a single by his band, Ricky Rivera and the Rhythm Rockers. But "Louie Louie" became the more popular side, and the record sold 130,000 copies.

Two years later, a Seattle group called the Wailers recorded it, and it became a jukebox hit in the Pacific Northwest. But it wasn't until 1963, when it was recorded by the Kingsmen, that the song gained national notoriety.

Much of the appeal — and criticism — of the Kingsmen's version stemmed from some unintelligible lyrics that were rumored to be spicy. Berry was even summoned before the Federal Communications Commission to defend the song after several radio stations banned it.

What actually happened is that the Kingsmen's singer, Jack Ely, learned the song from a jukebox and mumbled the words he wasn't able to understand. But the rumor persisted, and "Louie Louie" became a nationwide hit.

In May 1981, when Riedle was working as a disc jockey on the station's graveyard shift, he decided to play as many versions of one song as he could find. He dug up 33 renditions of "Louie Louie" for a program that lasted 90 minutes.

Later that year, KALX, a student station at the University of California's Berkeley campus, borrowed the 33 copies and added 17 more. KFJC came back in May 1982 with an 88-version program, and last December, the Berkeley station topped that with a 12-hour, 200-version marathon.

To commemorate the event, Rhino Records of Los Angeles is bringing out a "Best of Louie Louie" album, featuring 10 of the finest versions. And to show that Reidle isn't the only KFJC "Louie Louie" nut, faculty adviser Robert Pelzel wrote the liner notes.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Effects of prostate surgery vary

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know there are no guarantees, but maybe there's at least an educated guess. I may need prostate surgery. If I do, how would this affect my ability to have sex? — Ronnie, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Ronnie: The effect of prostatic surgery on a man's sexual functioning varies widely from patient to patient. However, Dr. Robert L. Rowan, of the New York University School of Medicine, provides the following guidelines:

A man who is sexually active before surgery will likely be sexually active after surgery. A man who is sexually inactive before surgery will probably be sexually inactive after surgery. And a man whose sexual functioning was decreasing before surgery will probably lose sexual function after surgery. In a few patients, sexual functon may show some improvement following prostatic surgery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Please correct me if I'm wrong. From the way I understand it a person gets angina when an artery becomes so narrow that not enough blood can get through. Therefore, a person who gets a lot of attacks must have narrower arteries than someone who gets an attack only once in a while. Is this right? — Hal, Towsono, Md.

Dear Hal: I would have to give you a 50 percent grade on the two points you make. First, it is true that angina is caused by coronary arterial stenosis — that is, the narrowing of the coronary artery. However a patient's symptoms do not necessarily indicate the extent of the narrowing.

For example, one patient may experience symptoms of angina only after severe exertion, while another patient, with the same degree of stenosis, may experience symptoms after mild exertion or even while at rest.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is taking some medication because he has been depressed and his doctor also sees him once a week for counseling. If the medicine is supposed to be good for depression, why does he also have to make these weekly visits to the doctor? It seems to me that one or the other would do the job. — Mr. T.H., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Mr. H.: I would not suggest that every person who is taking medication for depression should also see a physician weekly. On the other hand, for some patients the medication will be much more effective when combined with psychotherapy than when it is used alone.

Permitting a patient to talk about his problems in a neutral, non-threatening environment can itself be very therapeutic and may speed up the time when your father will be able to get along without the medication.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I followed your advice and cut down on my use of salt, mainly because my blood pressure was a little high. What surprises me now is that I don't even miss it. I don't have the strongest willpower in the world (I still smoke) but I'd like to tell your readers that if they can get by without a lot of salt for a few weeks, they'll have it made. — Morris, The Bronx, N.Y.

Dear Morris: Your experience is borne out by the results of a study by Dr. Gary K. Beauchamp, of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia. He reports that patients who can remain on a sodium-restricted diet for from two to three months experience a reduced desire for salt. The adjustment may be difficult at first but becomes easier as time goes on.

Now how about using some of your willpower to kick the smoking habit? It would be a shame if the health benefits that stemmed from your reduced salt intake were negated by your smoking.

For Jackie, Wheaton, Md.: A new test has been developed that can detect with almost complete accuracy the presence of active genital herpes in a pregnant woman. This test can help physicians decide whether a vaginal or Caesarean delivery would be more advisable to avoid exposing the baby to infection.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).
