Texas Supreme Court Justice Barbara Culver visits with Culver Youth Home In-take Officer Chuck McDaniel at Thursday's re-opening and dedication ceremony of the facility. Culver's namesake recently had undergone $829,000 in renovations to enlarge and expand the detention home for minor children who violate the law.

Culver re-opens namesake facility

Thursday's re-opening of Culver Youth Home was met with all the pageantry and fanfare fitting for a ribbon-cutting ceremony, including a celebrated keynote speech by its namesake, Texas Supreme Court Justice Barbara Culver.

"December 23, 1968, is the day we dedicated and opened the original home. It was right at Christmas time and I think the first thing we added to the home was a Christmas tree," Culver recalled. "This morning when I woke up and it was snowing and looked like Christmas in Midland, I thought somehow that was appropriate."

Culver, a former Midland County judge, served as judge of 318th District Court before being appointed last month by Gov. Bill Clements to the state's Supreme Court.

On the justice's first visit to the Tall City since she took the oath of office, Culver told guests attending Thursday's dedication that she didn't know how County Commissioners had the courage to name the detention facility, located in the 3800 block of Lamesa Road, in her honor.

"It was an extreme honor — one in which I take pride everytime I hear the place mentioned," she said.

Construction crews broke ground on the $829,700 renovation project last April, with work originally scheduled for completion on Oct. 31, 1987.

The renovation was part of a $3 million 1985 bond issue passed by voters to renovate the youth home and county jail. It was also the first expansion of the home built in 1968 to provide a place for minor children who violate the law.

The remodeling added four maximum security rooms for boys and two for girls. Four additional minimum security rooms, a classroom and offices for the five-member juvenile probation staff also were built on to the facility.

Juvenile Judge Willie Dubose credited Midland County for recognizing the necessity for a juvenile detention facility long before other counties had seen the same need.

"Through her (Culver's) the Commissioners Court back in the late '60s built the original home. The commissioners at that time decided the appropriate thing to do was to name that facility after Judge Barbara Culver," he said.

Culver explained that a growing necessity for the expansion project resulted after Congress in December, 1985 passed legislation which prohibits the incarceration of juveniles in county or city jails.

"The laws have changed and now a young person may not stay in a jail — a sheriff's jail or a city jail — because of certain requirements that a juvenile be held elsewhere," she said. "We can't say anymore that they're going to go to jail if they're not good.

"That's the reason why the commissioners and Judge (Bill) Ahders were compelled to include in their bond issue money to expand and enlarge this youth home," said Culver. "It's going to help these young people. That's what it's built to do."

Dallas police shoot man after chase

DALLAS (AP) — Police shot a man to death early today near Southern Methodist University's McFarlin Auditorium, the scene a few hours earlier of a debate between Democratic presidential candidates, authorities say.

The shooting, the fourth involving Dallas police this year, came after an 11-minute chase that began when officers noticed that a car's front and rear license plates had been concealed with strips of cloth.

Thomas Holloway, 34, of Dallas was pronounced dead at 4:07 a.m. CST at Parkland Memorial Hospital, said Bill White of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office.

During the chase, officers were told it was believed the driver had been involved in one, possibly two, robberies involving a man armed with a knife, a police spokesman said.

Officers said the man was shot after the car was chased onto the SMU campus and the man got out of the car armed with a knife. After he cut one officer on the hand, the officer fired one shot that struck the man, police said.

The officer's partner then opened fire when the man allegedly threatened him with the knife as well. At least five shots were fired, police said.

The shooting took place beside one of the satellite uplinks used to relay signals from the presidential debate that ended at 10 p.m. CST.

The fatal shooting came about 30 hours after a man who pointed a loaded pistol at an officer was shot to death by the officer's partner. Ronnie Lewis Jones died about an hour after he was shot Wednesday night by officer Brian Wolff.

Jones was free on $5,000 bond on an aggravated robbery charge at the time of the shooting, police said.

Wolff said Jones had pointed a loaded 9mm pistol at officer Steven Johnson after the men confronted Jones and two other men who had pulled their car into the driveway of a darkened east Dallas home.

Police Chief Billy Prince had ordered that officers patrol in pairs following two earlier shooting incidents in which officers died.

A transient was killed by police Jan. 23 after he shot and killed officer John Chase in a downtown parking lot. In that incident, officers said some bystanders waiting at a bus stop had urged the transient to shoot the officer.

On Jan. 14, off-duty police Cpl. James Joe injured one of two burglary suspects in a northeast Dallas apartment complex parking lot. Joe was killed in a shootout with the suspects.

Gore takes aims at Gephardt, Dukakis

DALLAS (AP) — Democrat Albert Gore Jr., moving to set himself apart from his rivals, sharply accused rivals Richard Gephart of flip-flopping on issues and Michael Dukakis of foreign policy inexperience in a combative debate that Gore said signaled the "beginning of the main event" of their presidential race.

Gephardt and Dukakis, who are battling the Tennessee senator in the delegate-rich primaries across the South less than three weeks away, found themselves under attack almost immediately Thursday night and countered in a series of testy exchanges.

"It's quite natural he would launch an attack," Gephardt, the Missouri congressman, said afterward. "He probably thinks I'm ahead in the South and he's got to jump start his campaign to have a chance."

With Jesse Jackson and Gary Hart included, the five candidates debated for two hours in a televised session with a heavy focus on the South — the major battleground of both parties' nomination fights before the March 8 Super Tuesday primaries. One candidate, Paul Simon, bypassed the event to concentrate on Minnesota and South Dakota, which have earlier contests.

A similar debate was scheduled tonight for the four remaining Republican candidates.

But it was placed in jeopardy when Bob Dole withdrew Thursday saying he feared it would become a pep rally for Vice President George Bush, and Pat Robertson followed suit. That left only Jack Kemp to debate Bush, and sponsors said they hoped it would still go on — with empty chairs on the stage for the absent contenders.

The Democratic debate contained what were some of the most pointed exchanges among the candidates, most of whom have met each other in more than 20 debates over the past year.

Change of venue request likely in kidnapping case

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Kenneth Parker is escorted to the side entrance of the federal courthouse in Midland this morning by Midland County sheriff's officers.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The attorney appointed for a man accused of conspiring to kidnap two women to sell them into prostitution, including the still-missing June Gilkerson, said today he would begin "digging deeply" into the case and would probably ask for a change of venue.

Tom Morgan, a former Midland County prosecutor, was not at the hearing when he was appointed to represent 41-year-old Kenneth Wayne Parker. But, when told of the appointment he was not surprised.

"I'm glad I got the appointment," Morgan said. "Mr. Parker is presumed absolutely innocent, and I will be visiting with him immediately.

"I don't know that much about the case, but I'm going to start digging deeply right away."

At the morning hearing, Parker was asked by U.S. Magistrate Darrell Smith if he intended to hire an attorney.

"Sir, I have 39¢," the bearded Parker said in a gruff voice.

Morgan will defend the former Vietnam veteran against charges he conspired with 21-year-old David Alderink to kidnap Ms. Gilkerson and another woman, Susan Lindsay.

The 6-foot 5-inch Parker, dressed in a gold T-shirt, khaki pants and tennis shoes, sat with his arms crossed as he awaited the start of the hearing. While some officers talked quietly around him, he said nothing.

Plane crashes into El Paso mall's parking lot

EL PASO (AP) — A small private plane barely missed Interstate 10 traffic as it smashed into a shopping mall's parking lot this morning and burst into flames. At least two people were killed, officials said.

"It looked like it was going to attempt maybe to come onto the freeway, but as soon as it got over the freeway, it just nosedived," witness Victor Armendariz said. "There's not much left. It's just charcoal."

Three parked cars in the parking lot caught fire after the crash, but those flames were quickly extinguished, El Paso police Sgt. John Loy said.

No casualties on the ground were reported, but at least two people aboard the twin-engine plane died, he said. The victims' identities were not immediately known.

"All I can tell you is that the plane was in touch with the airport, and then they lost radar contact," Loy said. "From the eyewitnesses we talked to, (the plane) didn't have any power on the way down. It was silent."

An Associated Press reporter who witnessed the 8:45 a.m. crash said the plane's left wingtip came within 50 feet of striking I-10 traffic before it crashed in a Bassett Center Mall parking lot and exploded into flame.

The crash scene on the south side of I-10 is about three miles away from El Paso International Airport. Airport authorities said they did not know where the plane was based.

Pro-Iranian group claims kidnapping; Amal captures six in retaliation

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iranian group said today it kidnapped a U.S. Marine colonel serving with the U.N. peacekeeping force in south Lebanon and released identity cards bearing his photograph.

The claim by Oppressed of the Earth was made in a typed Arabic-language statement delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut. It was accompanied by two identity cards, one in English and one in Hebrew.

Both bore photographs of Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., and what appeared to be his signature. It was the second claim of responsibility for the abduction.

Shiite Amal militiamen today seized six activists of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, in Tyre in a dragnet for Higgins and the gunmen who kidnapped him just south of the southern port city on Wednesday. Amal sealed off a 300-square-mile area.

The Oppressed of the Earth statement accused Higgins of using his leadership of an observer group attached to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon to mask his undercover work for the CIA.

Oppressed of the Earth is believed made up of Shiite Moslem zealots loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

It has claimed responsibility for hijackings, bombings and and kidnappings including the abduction of 12 Lebanese Jews in Moslem west Beirut since 1984, eight of whom it said it killed.

Oppressed of the Earth also claimed to have staged the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner in which a U.S. Navy diver was killed.

The captors had demanded Israel free several hundred Arabs it held. Although Israel denied any deal was made, the prisoners were released in batches in the weeks that followed the Americans' release.

Higgins, a decorated Vietnam veteran, heads a 76-man observer group that operates along the Lebanon-Israel border and has its headquarters in Jerusalem.

He was kidnapped by gunmen as he was driving from Tyre to UNIFIL headquarters in the border town of Naqoura.

An Amal spokesman said the fundamentalists were rounded up in pre-dawn raids on houses in the port city.

"We suspect they were monitoring Higgins' movements in Tyre before his abduction. They will be interrogated," said the spokesman, who refused to be identified.

The abduction brings the number of foreign hostages in Lebanon to 25, including nine Americans. Most are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite extremists, whose main Hezbollah militia has been challenging Amal's dominance in south Lebanon.

Amal, the main Shiite militia in Lebanon, is headed by Justice Minister Nabih Berri.

The roundup suggested that Amal suspects Hezbollah of engineering Higgins' kidnapping.

Police and Amal officials have quoted an unidentified bus driver as saying he saw gunmen block the coastal highway, force Higgins out of his vehicle into a brown Volvo.

A bulldozer driver told reporters Thursday that he saw four uniformed men in a brown car racing toward a valley southeast of Tyre around the time of the kidnapping.

Agencies take risks to aid hungry

By LAURINDA KEYS

SENA, Mozambique (AP) — Getting food to hungry people caught in Mozambique's guerrilla war has become more and more risky and expensive for international relief agencies.

Anti-government guerrillas, who have sabotaged rail lines and roads, now have threatened to shoot down relief planes.

The International Red Cross stopped flying to areas outside provincial capitals last Christmas after receiving a threat from the guerrillas.

CARE International, which runs a famine relief food transport program in cooperation with Mozambique's government, is now operating airlifts to remote areas the Red Cross once seryed.

"But we don't know how long we can keep it up," said David Neff, an American who is CARE's director in Mozambique.

He said it costs eight times more to move food by air than by truck, but 16 districts in four provinces can be supplied only by plane. Six towns cannot be reached at all, he added, because of sabotage to the rail and road routes or the heavy concentration of the Mozambique National Resistance guerrillas fighting the Marxist-led government.

On a recent CARE flight that carried reporters to Sena, the main highway could be seen below pitted with trenches and blocked by tree branches. Tracks on the railroad line were torn up.

The guerrillas have rocket-propelled grenade launchers, many of captured from the army, "but they can bring down a plane with a pistol if they hit you right," said Mike Mispelaar, CARE's international operations manager.

The guerrillas have blown up the longest railroad bridge in Africa, near Sena. They often carry away railroad tracks, set explosives on the lines and have made road travel so dangerous that 85 percent of Western food aid doesn't move unless it can join an army convoy.

"We can't count the cost of vehicles sitting idle, waiting for convoys," said Neff.

Most of the difficulty in getting grain from a seaport to a hungry refugee in the drought-stricken bush is due to guerrilla attacks on the transportation system.

Until last year, the guerrillas kept one of the nation's primary rail, road and oil pipeline routes, the Beira Corridor, inoperable most of the time.

But in 1987 Mozambique arranged for troops from neighboring Zimbabwe to guard the corridor between Harare and Beira and help defend the Indian Ocean port. The corridor is Zimbabwe's cheapest route to the sea.

Other neighbors also help: Soldiers from Malawi are stationed along the Nampula-Nacala route in the northern part of Mozambique where sabotage still occurs regularly; troops from Tanzania have been assigned to guard recaptured towns, freeing Mozambican troops to retake other vital targets.

"If you protect 10 percent of Mozambique you protect 90 percent of the economy of the country," said Trade Minister Manuel Jorge Aranda-Silva in an interview. "You need only have the transport system trucks we had kept back on standby. Bags start piling up, looting starts. linked with that 10 percent. This is survival. It is not growth."

Most of the Beira railroad track has been relaid with concrete ties instead of timber ones, Canadian rails, and heavier ballast. It is much harder to sabotage and an explosion is less likely to derail a train.

The Nampula-Nacala line, most useful for Malawian exports in the north, still needs to be relaid, as does a line from Zimbabwe down the Limpopo River to Maputo. It goes through arid regions where security is difficult, and where the track is so flimsy a saboteur can simply walk away with the rails.

Moving donated food from overseas to nearly half of the Mozambican population under such conditions requires constantly shifting strategies, explained Mispelaar, who is from India.

"Immediately after you hear about a local highway blocking, you move spare food up on available charters, get everything off the roads in that area, move other shipments up by sea, reschedule certain donations so they go to a different port," he said. You can tip the balance with the smallest mistake."

CARE, nevertheless, distributes more than 300 tons of food a day to market places and refugee centers throughout the country.

Planes unload bags of corn and rice on air strips. Women wearing only wrapped skirts in the blazing sun trudge in single file for hours, carrying the bags on their heads. They often are guarded by soldiers.

Some food is loaded onto tractors and taken over roads where land mines are hidden. Other bags are carried by canoes to isolated farming settlements.

Food is a priority, so there are shortages of clothes, tools and seeds.

"There are more people coming out of the bush to the resettlement camps," said Mispelaar. "They come with nothing but if you can give them a few seeds, basic tools, some bamboo poles and a little food, they start building, they start planting, they are not totally dependent on handouts."

"When the bandits (rebels) came to know about a shipment and attacked 60 kilometers (37 miles) north of Chokwe, we couldn't move the other

Residents return to homes after chemical spill

FREMONT, Ohio (AP) — About 5,000 people evacuated after a toxic chemical leak tainted the Sandusky River were permitted to return to their homes today after fumes dissipated, the mayor said.

A water emergency remained in effect in this northwestern Ohio city of 22,000 after an estimated 100,000 gallons of flammable toluene spilled Wednesday from a ruptured Sun Co. pipeline south of here.

Reserve tanks which hold about 4 million gallons of water were expected to last until late this afternoon, Mayor Fred Singer said.

At least three people were treated for injuries after an undetermined amount of the chemical flowed into the river, and as many as 5,000 residents were evacuated Wednesday and Thursday because of the fumes, officials said.

Toluene can produce irritating or poisonous gases, according to an emergency response guidebook published by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

City and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency officials assessed the air quality during the night.

PRI hopeful cites need for growth

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — The presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party said the nation needs sustained economic growth if it is to continue meeting payments on its enormous foreign debt.

Carlos Salinas de Gortari said the nation does not want a confrontation with its creditors but "firm negotiation."

Negotiations, he said, should start "from the premise that we will only service the debt if the nation can effectively grow."

Mexico has built up a foreign debt of $105 billion, the second highest in the developing world after Brazil. Annual interest payments run $8 billion to $9 billion, Treasury officials say.

Salinas de Gortari also told a rally at the University of Guadalajara, which is 360 miles northwest of Mexico City, that if elected, he would increase aid for the nation's universities.

He said Mexico needs strong universities to meet the challenges of industry, the countryside, politics and the arts.

As the ruling party's nominee, Salinas de Gortari is virtually assured of being sworn in on Dec. 1 as the nation's new president.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

asinine — (adjective) Donkeys and burros are part of a group of animals known as "asses." They resemble horses, but are smaller and have longer ears and shorter tails and aren't supposed to be as smart or as cooperative. Whether or not it is deserved, asses have a reputation for being stupid, silly and stubborn. This is why people who display these characteristics are said to be "asinine," or "like an ass." Be careful to spell asinine with only one s. The word can be traced back thousands of years to Asia Minor.

Magazine's ad doesn't 'liv up to ecspectations'

DENVER (AP) — Denver may have the highest per-capita level of education in the nation, but you might not know it from an advertisement boasting that fact in Business Week magazine.

The full-page ad reads, "It's really very simple: Smart people perfer to live" in the Mile High City.

Perfer?

Richard Fleming, president of the Greater Denver Chamber of Commerce, which paid for the ad, said he was unaware of the typographical spelling error until a reporter asked him about it.

The typo "certainly doesn't change the fact that Denver has the highest per capita level of education in the country," Fleming said recently.

Trustee, teacher set example for district

AP Laserphoto

Kim and Laurie Kincannon of West Columbia, Texas, work with their children — from left, Kyle, 8, Kate, 2, and Kent, 4 — on their personal computer.

By JOHN MITCHELL

WEST COLUMBIA (AP) — The family room is decorated in early-American nursery school, with crayons coloring the carpet and toys obstructing entrance to the dining area.

Lined along one side of the room is a child's play kitchen, spotless before the next big meal. On the floor by perhaps the most popular item in the house, the computer, a white kite waits for wind. Written across its face are the words "shoot for the stars."

Welcome to the home of Kim and Laurie Kincannon.

The Columbia-Brazoria Independent School District trustee and his wife, a history teacher at West Columbia Junior High School, stay involved with the educational process out of a sense of responsibility to the community.

"I'd like for our district to become an example of an exemplary school district," Kim Kincannon, 36, who works as an engineer at the Dow Chemical Co., said. "It's very possible."

Surrounding that motivation are the reasons for the clutter they return home to each day. The changes and improvements the couple are working to bring will make the district a better place for their three children.

"Ninety-nine percent of the things we do have a direct impact on the kids," Laurie Kincannon, 36, said. "Our kids come first."

The intertangled roots of history have encircled the area natives throughout their lives.

Kim Kincannon was born in the Dow hospital and, growing up in Lake Jackson, stayed with a woman who lived two houses down from the former Laurie Beal. Despite the closeness, the two never met until graduating from college he from Texas A&M, she from Southwest Texas State.

Only Kyle currently is attending school, and the couple longs for the day when they can travel with the children to different parts of the world, and let them get the hands-on education they lack from videos and computer programming.

Reserved and particular in his choice of words, Kim Kincannon said the variety of experience Dow offered was a selling point when he started in 1973. "I like to come up with new ideas," he said. "It was really a great opportunity for a young engineer."

The two met after Laurie, who was born and raised in West Columbia, returned from a two-month vacation in Europe earned by graduating with English and history degrees.

"He thought I was very stuck up," she said. "All I wanted to do was talk about this trip."

She, in turn, assumed he always was too busy based on the four or five different cars constantly parked out in the front yard.

"Finally I found out they all belonged to him," Laurie Kincannon said.

The vehicles were sold when the Dow engineer was transferred to Baton Rouge, La. Laurie joined him and the two were married in 1978.

While his wife was teaching English at a Louisiana Catholic school, Kim Kincannon began to get more interested in education. "I thought she was extremely dedicated," he said, of his wife's enthusiasm. "I envied her involvement with the kids."

Naturally outgoing, Laurie Kincannon finds it easy to get involved. When the couple moved back and settled in West Columbia, her longtime passion for a forgotten Texas led to her teaching history at the junior high.

She has since been involved with the city's Sesquicentennial celebration, Stephen F. Austin Trail Drive, San Jacinto Day planning as well as countless other groups.

"I'm big into civic responsibility," she said. "I teach it every day."

That attitude rubbed off on Kim Kincannon, when he decided to run for the trustee post in 1986.

"It's a lot more work than I thought it was," he said, adding he enjoyed the direct impact the job allowed.

The district has a negative image in people's minds because of its higher-than-average tax rate, but Kim Kincannon said quality teachers willing to go the extra mile and increasingly better test scores fill the trustee position with possiblities.

Laurie Kincannon said her husband's tenure on the board has been the best thing that ever happened to their relationship because it got him involved. "Now he's the one that's always on the phone," she said. "I'm the one that always has to babysit."

Surprisingly, they do not talk much about their educational endeavors when together. In fact, Laurie Kincannon only has been to two meetings since her husband was sworn in back in March 1987.

"I lost my best babysitter when he got elected," is her favorite comment about his trustee work.

It reinforces that their true responsibilities lay with their children Kyle, 8, Kent, 4, and Kate, 2.

And their children prompted them to settle in West Columbia.

"Both of us wanted our children to have the opportunity to participate and excel," Laurie Kincannon said. "We felt like in a smaller school, our children would have more of an opportunity to participate. "

Their schoolwork has given the Kincannons a better understanding of how to deal with their children's education.

All the dealings with parents have taught Laurie not to treat them as perfect. "I made up my mind a long time ago that I was a parent whose child has faults," she said. "I was going to work with those faults."

Only Kyle currently is attending school, and the couple longs for the day when they can travel with the children to different parts of the world, and let them get the hands-on education they lack from videos and computer programming.

When the future dominates the conversation, the Kincannons have a lot to say. Laurie Kincannon said a love of writing at age 12 has enabled her to finish the rough draft on a children's book she hopes to sell. She also does not rule out one day becoming a state representative.

Kim Kincannon said he hopes to build a house on land the family owns near the Varner-Hogg Plantation.

"It will be a great place for the kids to bop out the back door and do things outdoors," he said.

'Dakota Bill' known as 'crazy white man'

MITCHELL, S.D. (AP) — Many people know him simply as Dakota Bill.

That's the only name Bill Zemina of Mitchell uses on his business cards.

Residents near the Missouri River west of here have a different label for him.

"When I get down on the reservation, the Indians mostly call me that crazy old white man that chases rattlesnakes," he said.

That suits Zemina just fine. He doesn't care so much if people remember his name. He hopes he's instead remembered for the work he does.

Zemina has the nerve to do what a lot of people who love to craft items from what they find in the great outdoors won't do — even the brave hunters who take to the fields in the Mitchell area each year.

Like a rancher on a cattle drive, he regularly rounds up prairie rattlesnakes from the Missouri River area, brings them home and literally tans their hide.

The end result is a collection of belts, buckles, billfolds and checkbook covers, all featuring the unique pattern and texture of rattlesnake skin.

Years ago, Zemina made billfolds, pocketbooks, belts and purses out of plain leather, like everyone else.

"Then somebody stole the tools out of my truck, and that put me out of business for about a month," he said. Since things were slow, Zemina decided to visit an arts and craft show, "and I saw this guy walk by and he had this belt on, covered with rattlesnake skin."

That ended Zemina's crafting with just leather. "I talked to the guy, and he told me how he did it, and then I got enough tools together to do it."

He was already somewhat familiar with rattlesnakes.

"When I was a kid, we'd find rattlesnakes all the time when we were out in the fields shocking," he said.

Zemina admits he had to do more than just wish he could be successful at crafting items out of the hide of rattlesnakes.

"If you want to do something, most of the time you have to do it yourself and you have to have a determination that you want to do it instead of just thinking you want to," he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders who coped with the 2-inch snowfall Thursday will get a breather this weekend as temperatures are expected to climb into the middle 50s under sunny skies.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport say tonight will be partly cloudy with the low in the middle 30s. Winds will be from the north at 5 to 15 mph.

On Saturday, skies will be sunny and the high is expected to reach the middle 50s. Winds will be from the north at 5 to 15 mph.

Thursday's high of 53 was 32 degrees cooler than the record of 85, set on that date in 1986. The overnight low of 26 was 7 degrees warmer than the record of 19, set on this date in 1936.

STATE

Some snow is forecast in the mountains of Southwest Texas tonight while show activity is possible in southern portions of North Texas and in South Texas Saturday.

There is a chance of some rain in the lower elevations of Southwest Texas tonight and the snow is expected to be mixed with rain in the mountains.

Forecasts are calling for the possibility of some light rain in southern portions of North Texas Saturday and for possible thundershower activity in South Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from near 20 in the Panhandle to the 50s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Saturday will be in the 50s statewide.

Low overcast clouds covered the eastern third of the state early today and skies were clear over the rest of the state except in the Valley where skies were cloudy.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the 20s in West Texas to the 50s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 24 at Amarillo to 56 at Brownsville.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 32 at Wichita Falls, 42 at Fort Worth, 43 at Waco and Austin, 40 at San Antonio, 47 at Houston, 46 at Corpus Christi, 29 at San Angelo, 27 at Lubbock, 31 at Midland and 42 at El Paso.

NATION

Heavy rain spread across the South today, touching off high-water alerts, while snow was widely scattered in the Plains and West and Southern California had high winds.

A drenching rain fell in northern Florida. Rain spread across Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, and prompted flood warnings in sections of southeast Louisiana. Flash flood watches were issued in sections of southeast Mississippi, southern and central Alabama and the Florida Panhandle.

A narrow band of rain and snow extended from northeast Oklahoma across southeast Kansas and west central Missouri.

Rain and mountain snow dotted eastern Arizona and western New Mexico.

Strong winds developed across much of southern California. High wind warnings were posted for much of the region warning of gusts of 60 to 70 mph.

Today's forecast called for rain widespread from the middle Mississippi Valley across the Tennessee and Ohio valleys into the mid-Atlantic states and Carolinas; showers and thunderstorms from the central Gulf Coast across Georgia and northern Florida; snow over southwest Michigan and northern sections of Illinois and Indiana; and rain and mountain snow showers across southeast Arizona and southern New Mexico.

Highs were expected to be in the 30s from the Dakotas across the upper Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes and across portions of Illinois, Indiana, northern Maine and the central rockies; 60s and 70s over California, southwest Arizona, south Texas, the central Gulf Coast region, northern Florida, southern Georgia and coastal South Carolina; 80s in central and southern Florida; and 40s to 50s across most of the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from zero at Craig, Colo., to 74 degrees at Key West, Fla.

1989 budget battle should be mild

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's $1.1 trillion budget for fiscal 1989 is his first spending plan in years that is not being called "dead on arrival" by his Democratic opponents in Congress.

And even though there were mutterings on Capitol Hill of Trojan horses and smoke and mirrors, it seemed clear Thursday that despite likely fights over federal priorities, this year's budget battle should be relatively mild.

The spending plan contains a deficit of $129.5 billion, less than the $136 billion target required by the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. The government would spend $1.094 trillion, while taking in $965 billion in receipts.

The reason this spending blueprint has been better received by lawmakers than have others in recent years is that it strives to conform with the budget accord Reagan reached with the Democratic-controlled Congress last November.

Under that so-called summit agreement, drawn in the aftermath of the October stock market crash, legislators and the administration set this budget's overall spending ceilings for military, domestic and foreign aid spending. In addition, Reagan already has signed $14 billion in new 1989 taxes called for in the pact.

With 1988 an election year, lawmakers are unlikely to insist on revisiting those painful subjects.

"It's like tying two cats by the tail and throwing them over the clothesline," Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a member of the Senate Budget Committee, told reporters. "There'll be a lot of small intramurals, but nothing really's going to happen."

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., added, "Although I have always felt that more could be cut from the budget through a (spending) freeze, I think our first responsibility is to affirm the summit agreement."

Others, however, predicted that although the budget's overall shape appears settled, skirmishes will be fought over how that money is divided up.

"It's a little like looking at a Trojan horse," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the budget panel's chairman. "It's an attractive horse, but you've got to look on the inside."

Reagan's budget contains proposals that pleased many lawmakers:

—Spending to combat AIDS is increased by more than one-third to $1.3 billion.

—Education gets a $1.5 billion boost to $20.3 billion.

—The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's budget grows nearly 20 percent to $11 billion.

—$2.5 billion is provided for a five-year fight against acid rain.

But there are spending slashes in other programs that Congress has rejected before and is likely to ignore again.

The president would:

— End $600 million in federal subsidies for Amtrak, the passenger railroad.

— Reduce mass transit aid from $3.3 billion to $1.4 billion.

— Eliminate the $200 million Urban Development Action Grants program.

— Sell government assets such as loan portfolios, the Alaska power administration and the Naval Petroleum Reserve.

"The battle will be fought on domestic differences," said Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee.

The budget is also the first submitted by Reagan that does not allow Pentagon spending to keep abreast of inflation. Thus, it allows a military spending increase from $285.4 billion to $294 billion in fiscal 1989, and contains a reduction in the size of active-duty forces and drops the goal of a 600-ship Navy.

It does, however, grant servicemen and women 4.3 percent pay raise, well above the 2 percent granted other federal employees.

The performance of the economy will be a weighty factor in determining how docile the 1989 budget wars will be.

The budget's expected $129.5 billion deficit is based on projections by the White House Office of Management and Budget. It projects healthy economic growth, along with continuing low interest rates, inflation and unemployment, which taken together mean lower government spending and higher government revenues.

The Congressional Budget Office, which studies the budget for Congress, expects a weaker economic performance this year and has projected a $176 billion deficit.

Chiles said he expected Congress to be able to adhere to the budget summit agreement unless "the economy totally goes South."

Others, however, were critical of OMB's projections, but conceded that lawmakers had little taste this year for tackling the massive deficit slashing that would be needed if CBO's forecast is accurate.

"This is the year of the big wink, the high art of blue smoke and mirrors," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

If the lower deficit projection proves accurate, it could be the third consecutive drop in federal red ink. Since reaching a record $221 billion in 1986, the deficit fell to $150 billion last year and is expected to fall to $146 billion this year.

One possible bone of contention is the promise Reagan has made to try to cancel spending for fiscal 1988 — which began Oct. 1 — on several spending projects that lawmakers obtained for their home districts. The president is expected to raise the issue next week.

Restaurateur comes to girl's aid

CHICAGO (AP) — Fitness instructor Dick Wolt says he does thousands of push-ups a day as part of his job. But this week he's taking on challengers for the sake of a 7-year-old girl who can't see.

The little girl from Istanbul, Turkey, Dilek Erdogan, was born with skin covering both eyes. She has been in the United States only about two years and speaks little English. But she and her benefactor, restaurateur Matt Deletioglu, have won the hearts of Wolt and other residents on Chicago's North Side.

Wolt's push-ups are part of a weeklong fund-raiser at the Lehmann Sports Club to raise $100,000 for a series of eye operations for Dilek, who was brought to the United States with her mother by Deletioglu in 1986.

Deletioglu, 44, a native of Antioch, Turkey, saw Dilek's picture in a newspaper from his home country and decided to help her.

"I had never met her," he said, "but one picture was worth a thousand words."

For the past two years, Dilek and her mother, Guldane, have been living with Deletioglu and his family, as doctors at the University of Illinois Hospital work to open her eyes. Drs. Joel Sugar and Allen Putterman are donating their services, but hospital bills have mounted.

"It keeps going on and on," Deletioglu said. So he went to his fitness club to seek help in raising money.

Members of the club, in return, went to other merchants in the community and put together a weeklong series of events that will wrap up with a party and raffle tonight.

AP Laserphoto

Dilek Erdogan, 7, shares a hug with benefactor Matt Deletioglu and his daughter Mary. Dilek, born in Turkey with skin covering her eyes, is a candidate for corrective surgery.

Six weeks ago, Putterman began the first of several operations that, doctors say, could allow Dilek to see. He took lining from inside her mouth and used it to start forming an eyelid on the girl's right side, Sugar said.

"In about a month, we hope to reopen her lid and then attempt a cornea transplant," Sugar said in an interview Wednesday. "Her condition is called cryptophthalmos, meaning hidden eyes, because her eyes are hidden."

It's likely Dilek will need about six operations on her eyes, Sugar said. And she will probably never have normal vision.

"The likelihood is that her sight will be limited. Our best hope is that she'll be able to see enough to get around," Sugar said. "If that fails, at least she can be fitted with a cosmetic shield to help her appearance."

PARKER

After the hearing began, Smith read the two-count indictment to Parker, informed him of his rights, and told him that if convicted, he could face up to life in prison.

Each time Parker was asked a question by the magistrate, he appeared to hesitate, and at one point, when he was asked to fill out a form, said "I just can't write anymore."

Smith also set a hearing for Tuesday on a government motion to deny Parker bond. In the motion, Parker was described as "a serious risk to flee" and a "danger to the community."

Morgan said he would be ready for the Tuesday hearing, and would "definitely oppose" the motion denying bond.

A motion to move the trial is also likely, because of the "tremendous" amount of publicity the case has received since Nov. 8, 1986, when Ms. Gilkerson, 24, was reported missing.

"I can't think of a case that has received any more publicity than this one in my 13 years practicing criminal law," Morgan said.

Parker, who was indicted Jan. 25 by a Midland federal grand jury, was arrested without incident Feb. 4 near the video store in Garland where he worked. He moved there from Midland, where he worked as a maintenance worker at the county public library.

Following his arrest, he was held at the Lew Sterrett Criminal Justice Center in Dallas. He was transferred from Dallas by the U.S. Marshals Service, and was booked into the Midland city jail about 5:40 p.m. Thursday.

Morgan added that because of the complexity of the case, he would ask the court to appoint an investigator.

DEBATE

Gore came out swinging immediately, using the first question to charge Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, was without foreign policy experience and had said in a recent televised interview that he was willing to tolerate a "Soviet client state" in Nicaragua.

"I'm not going to sit here and listen to that," Dukakis shot back, denying he said or believed such a statement. "If you're going to be president of the United States you better be accurate."

Gore turned to Gephardt moments later, saying his calls for tough trade policies would invite a trade war and cost American jobs. But it was his accusations that the Missouri congressman had shifted positions on a range of issues from Reaganomics to abortion that drew a sharp rebuttal.

"When you make a lecture on consistency, maybe you better take a look at your own record first," Gephardt said.

In a reference to the recently withdrawn GOP candidate, he added, "Lately you've been sounding more like Al Haig than Al Gore." Gore responded: "That line sounds more like Richard Nixon than Richard Gephardt."

Gore clearly came into this debate eager to use it as an opportunity to take the battle to the two contenders he views as his chief opponents, while leaving Hart and Jackson relatively untouched by his barbs. Gore campaign manager Fred Martin sat watching a television in a nearby room, grinning as Gore threw some of his most intense charges.

Gore defended his strategy in talking with reporters later, saying consitency "is a legitimate issue" and the race had now moved into his territory.

Dukakis and Gephardt are the two winners so far in the 1988 Democratic nomination race, Dukakis winning in New Hampshire earlier this week and Gephardt winning Iowa's caucuses the week before.

Turning to Gephardt, Gore said "I'm going to lay it on the line now Dick," and accused him of voting in Congress against increases in the minimum wage, against a Department of Education and for tuition tax credits. In each case, he said, Gephardt has taken different positions now.

"You voted for Reaganomics; now you say, well, where are you this week on Reaganomics?" Gore said.

Gephardt has acknowledged changing positions on some key issues, saying time and circumstances have changed. Meeting with reporters after the debate, he said: "All of us in public life should try to re-examine issues. That's what I've tried to do."

But Gephardt vigorously denied during the debate the suggestion he had taken differing positions in different regions of the country.

Dukakis and Gephardt tangled amongst themselves some too. Dukakis said "we were all surprised" Gephardt had said he was proud he voted for President Reagan's tax-cut bill while campaigning in New Hampshire last week "when he'd said all over Iowa he was against it and only voted for it as a last resort."

The sharp exchanges left Hart and Jackson out of the spotlight much of the time. Hart at one point said he was not withdrawing from the presidential race despite critics who said he should because of "two poor performances" in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Hart said that with the withdrawal from the race of Bruce Babbitt, he was the only candidate who had laid out his plans for a federal budget as he has challenged them to do. "Men, when are you going to produce your budgets?" he said.

Jackson, who has a strong following among black voters in the South and leads in polls of some Southern states, drew one of the loudest rounds of applause when he said the United States is making products that consumers don't want.

At another point, stressing the need for government to help poor children and welfare mothers, Jackson said he was "a graduate" of the nation's underclass.

Houston police officer drowns in bayou

HOUSTON (AP) — A police officer drowned after his car plunged into a bayou and divers were unable to rescue him from the murky waters, authorities said.

The accident Thursday evening apparently was trigged by a car that ran a red light, striking Officer Andrew Winzer's car, said police spokesman Dan Turner.

The officer's car went into a spin and the patrolman crashed through a guardrail and into Buffalo Bayou, he said.

"We have conflicting stories at this time, but the witnesses are telling us that the citizen ran the light striking the (patrol car) in the intersection," Turner said.

An off-duty patrolman, who was following Winzer in an unmarked car, and patrons of a nearby bar dived into the murky waters in an attempt to save the officer, he said.

"We saw bubbles so we tried to locate the car. It was too deep, we couldn't reach it and they called for divers," said a man at the bar who dove into the cold water.

"It's very disappointing we couldn't get to the car. It was a terrible moment thinking that he may still be alive. We just couldn't get to the car," said the man who declined to give his name.

It took police department divers more than an hour to pull the officer from the car which had all its doors locked. Officers were still attempting to pull the car from the bayou, a few blocks from the downtown police station, late Thursday.

The male driver of the other car was not seriously injured and taken to police headquarters for questioning, Turner said.

Winzer, whose age was not immediately known, had been with the police department about four years, Turner said.

"As far as I can remember, one of them had blood all over his face," said the witness, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Oppressed of the Earth claim of responsibility was the second in two days. The first was made by a previously unknown group calling itself the Islamic Revolutionary Brigades.

An anonymous man, speaking in Arabic, telephoned a Western news agency in Beirut on Thursday and said the group had kidnapped Higgins, accusing him of being a CIA agent.

The caller said a statement with a photograph of Higgins would be released later. There was no way to authenticate that claim.

U.S. State Department spokesman Charles Redman denied Thursday that Higgins had CIA links.

When Higgins was seized, he was violating U.N. rules for travel by Americans in dangerous areas, UNIFIL spokesman Timur Goksel said. But, the spokesman added, the colonel "felt he couldn't abide by these restrictions."

Pope calls for end to East-West split

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today called for eliminating the division between East and West and blamed it for a host of economic and social injustices that he said made developing countries "cogs on a gigantic wheel."

In his seventh encyclical, the Polish-born pope said East-West rivalry based on "unacceptably exaggerated concern for security" was a main reason for the widening gap between rich and poor countries.

The 102-page document is an authoritative statement of the church's social doctrine. Titled in Latin "Sollicitudo Rei Socialis," meaning the social concern of the church, it represents an effort by John Paul to give force to themes he has espoused during the 9½ years of his papacy.

The pope said the church took a critical view of both liberal capitalism and Marxist collectivism and that both systems needed urgent reform. He also called for democratic political change in nations with corrupt, dictatorial or authoritarian governments.

John Paul said world peace won't be achieved "unless the world's leaders come to recognize that interdependence in itself demands the abandonment of the politics of blocs, the sacrifice of all forms of economic, military or political imperialism, and the transformation of mutual distrust into collaboration."

He called for reform of the international trade, monetary and financial systems and free access for all to advanced technology. The document also said the church should avoid accumulating "superfluous church ornaments and costly furnishings."

"It could be obligatory to sell these goods in order to provide food, drink, clothing and shelter for those who lack these things," it said.

At a Vatican news conference today, two prelates said the passage on selling church property was "prophetic" but did not represent a new position.

Cardinal Roger Etchegary, president of the Vatican's Justice and Peace Commission, said the passage was symbolic, recalling the time John Paul gave away his pastoral ring during a visit to Brazil.

Etchegary said the encyclical was not for the Third World or any particular groups. "Its strength of attraction consists in the insistence of depicting the world in its globality and its fundamental unity," he said.

The pope reviewed problems of social development in the two decades since the encyclical "Populorum Progressio" (Development of Peoples) was published by Pope Paul VI in 1967.

John Paul broke new ground in his forceful attack on the division of the world into ideological and military blocs, which he called "a direct obstacle to the real transformation of the conditions of underdevelopment in the developing and less advanced countries."

A Vatican official familiar with the drafting of the letter said it reflected the pope's Polish background, and addressed problems of people living in the East bloc that had not been raised in Paul VI's encyclical.

John Paul complained of the suppression by some governments of economic initiative, which he said led to emigration, and that some countries were deprived of political and economic sovereignty.

While the East and West blocs existed in 1967, "in light of the subsequent economic and political repercussions and dependencies, the danger is seen to be much greater," the document said.

"Each of the two blocs harbors in its own way a tendency toward imperialism...or toward forms of neocolonialism," it added.

The pope said tension between the two blocs has dominated the world political scene for 40 years through the "cold war," "wars by proxy" and the threat of nuclear war.

"Conflicts...between East and West (are) an important cause of the retardation or stagnation of the South," the document said.

Obando y Bravo urges Contras to accept truce

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Seeking to break an impasse in peace talks, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo urged Contra rebels to accept a 30-day truce in exchange for four major concessions from Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

The Contras said they accepted "in principle" the proposal forwarded Thursday night. The leftist Sandinistas called it "interesting and constructive," but said it needed clarification.

Obando y Bravo, leader of Nicaragua's Roman Catholics, is mediating the talks, whihc were to resume today.

The concessions requested of the Sandinistas are:

— A "full, general" amnesty for the several thousand political prisoners in Nicaraguan jails, including all members of the National Guard of former dictator Gen. Anastasio Somoza, whom the Sandinistas overthrew in 1979.

— Full freedom of the press, which now is granted only to a few communications outlets, including the opposition newspaper La Prensa and Radio Catolica, the voice of the Catholic Church.

— A promise to "reconsider" a mandatory military draft law, which has sparked violent disturbances in several Nicaraguan cities by young men and the mothers of draft-age youths. The most recent disturbance was in Masaya only a week ago.

— Renewal of a dialogue with the Sandinistas' internal political opposition, which is calling along with the Contras for 17 changes in Nicaragua's Constitution. The talks broke off last year.

Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, said the cease-fire proposed by the cardinal was "vague and ill-defined" and would have to be clarified before the government could respond to the plan.

"The four requirements for the Nicaraguan government are very clear and very well defined," Tinoco said. "The requirement for the Contras is not quite clear."

Tinoco said the cardinal did not define "when the cease-fire is going to happen, how long it is going to be, where it is going to be" or how it would be verified. "We have to clarify what the Contras are going to give in exchange," he said.

Obando y Bravo said he offered the plan after the two sides were unable to agree on the philosophy underlying a cease-fire.

The Contras had argued that any truce must be preceded by democratic reforms, while the Sandinistas contended hostilities must end before real change can begin.

"We argued a long time," the cardinal said. "We could not come to agreement on the definitions."

The concessions requested by Obando y Bravo of the government were among many the Contras have been demanding for some time.

The rebels have also been seeking tri-partite talks among the Sandinistas, their internal opposition and the Contras. The cardinal did not forward that demand.

Nor did the requested concessions specifically address other Contra concerns, including constitutional changes that would prevent a Nicaraguan president from succeeding himself, separate the army from the Sandinista political party and establish a tribunal to guarantee rights.

Obando y Bravo said the inability of both sides to "define a cease-fire" led to "an impasse" after just two hours of talks Thursday, the opening day of their second round of face-to-face peace negotiations.

The first direct talks took place in San Jose, Costa Rica, in late January, only a week before the U.S. House of Representatives rejected President Reagan's request for $36.2 million in additional Contra aid.

The two sides presented their basic bargaining positions in the San Jose talks, which all participants characterized as cordial but lacking in progress.

Salvadorans detain two American women

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Police Thursday detained and questioned two American women working in a resettlement camp then turned them over to the U.S. Embassy, officials said.

An Episcopal minister, the Rev. Donald Lewis of San Marino, Calif., identified the two as Kathleene Hoy and Mary Parmenter of Pasadena, Calif. He claimed their detention was a part of increased harassment of U.S. ecumenical workers by Salvadoran authorities in recent months.

The two California women were detained "for entering restricted areas without authorization," said agent Orlando Ramirez of the Treasury Police, whose jurisdiction includes investigations of customs and immigration violations.

Ramirez said they were apprehended at the Copapayo camp near Suchitoto, about 25 miles northwest of San Salvador. Guerrillas frequently carry out operations in the area.

He said the women, along with seven Salvadorans, were detained Thursday morning and brought to the capital. The two U.S. citizens were released into the custody of U.S. Vice Consul Mark Schall after several hours of questioning, he said.

U.S Embassy spokesman Jacob Gillespie said the Privacy Act prevented him from confirming the women's names or details of the incident. But he agreed with the Treasury Police report that two American women were detained and later released.

Lewis, chairman of a diocesan task force for Salvadoran resettlement, said he was informed of the detention by telephone by a U.S. Embassy official in San Salvador.

He said the military has been harassing Americans providing humanitarian assistance in El Salvador since about 20,000 Salvadoran refugees in Honduras decided to return to their homeland last fall.

"Since then, the government nervousness and harassment of ecumenical workers has increased...Our concern is that this kind of caseworker harassment has happened to others who are strictly down there for humanitarian reasons," he said.

Guerillas from five leftist groups have been fighting since 1980 to overthrow the U.S.-backed government.

Israel sends 1,500 police into Arab neighborhoods

JERUSALEM (AP) — Authorities today launched one of the largest police operations in Israeli history, sending 1,500 volunteer officers into Jerusalem's Arab neighborhoods for round-the-clock patrols to head off Arab riots.

National Police Commissioner David Krauss said the operation aims to curb an anticipated new wave of unrest linked to the visit of U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who is scheduled to leave for the Middle East next Wednesday.

Israel radio said that in the first stage of the operation, 600 officers were stationed today at the sacred Temple Mount, the site every Friday of Moslem prayers and, since the riots began, anti-Israeli demonstrations.

Today's prayers took place without incident. But the prayer leader criticized the security presence, saying it desecrated the holy site.

He called on the people to consider their fight against the Israeli authorities as a holy war and to increase their struggle.

Security at the mosque was evident but discreet. A few dozen Arab women gathered and chanted for a few minutes but dispersed quietly.

At the Jabaliya refugee camp in the Gaza Strip, several hundred people began demonstrating after noon prayers, carrying Palestinian flags and throwing stones. Soldiers fired tear gas at the Arab marchers as army reinforcements arrived.

In Gaza City, soldiers threw stones and bottles at demonstrators leaving the mosque after prayers. They also fired tear gas.

Krauss, speaking on Israel radio, said: "We are carrying out this operation...to ensure law and order and prepare for the Shultz visit."

On Thursday, Israel imposed tough rules on its occupied territories intended to cripple the Palestinians economically unless they stop strikes, withholding of taxes and other acts of civil disobedience.

Palestinians have been heeding calls for an economic boycott of Israel to accompany violence in the streets since Dec. 8. U.N. officials say Israeli gunfire has killed at least 55 Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

No casualties were reported Thursday. But Israel radio said soldiers arrested 21 Arabs suspected of inciting and participating in riots in Burka, a West Bank village.

The radio described the police operation in Jerusalem as "one of the largest in the history of Israeli police." It said all of the estimated 1,500 police officers had volunteered and the round-the-clock patrols would begin Sunday.

City spokesman Rafi Devara said the municipality had asked that police avoid using collective punishment measures, such as curfews. He said many Arab residents had asked for police intervention "because they don't want some 100-200 young rioters to rule over a whole neighborhood."

About 340,000 Jews and 135,000 Arabs live in Jerusalem, once regarded as a symbol of Arab-Jewish coexistence.

"Coexistence between Arab and Jews has collapsed," Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek told reporters earlier this month as he toured a refugee camp within city limits that had been put under curfew.

For the first time in 20 years, curfews have been imposed on the Shufat refugee camp and Al Tur Arab neighborhood and the 31 Arab public schools that teach 15,000 students have been closed.

Since the unrest began, at least 417 Arabs have been arrested in Jerusalem.

There have been no fatalities in the city. But in two separate clashes in Shufat this week, police reportedly used live ammunition for the first time since December, wounding two Arabs.

The new economic restrictions announced Thursday on Arabs in the territories are aimed at hindering the influx of money from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Increasing numbers of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza have adopted passive resistance measures to the Israeli occupation.

Leaflets and radio broadcasts urge them not to pay taxes to the Jewish state, work for Israelis or buy Israeli-made goods.

Only about half the 105,000 Palestinians who worked in Israel before Dec. 8 now do so. Only a small percentage have paid taxes so far this year, according to the Arab-run Palestine Press Service and the army's information center.

Contras attack vehicle carrying U.S. journalists

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contras fired rifles and threw grenades at a vehicle carrying two U.S. journalists, but the Americans were unhurt and the rebels later apologized, one of the journalists said Thursday.

Photographer Jason Bleibtreu of the Sygma photo agency told The Associated Press that he and Mary Speck, a reporter with the Fort Lauderdale (Fla.) News and Sun-Sentinel, escaped unharmed when 10 Contra rebels ambushed their Toyota Land Cruiser in the town of Quilali in northern Nuevo Segovia province on Saturday.

The Toyota had "TV" written on it in masking tape, a standard marking for the press in Central America, and was flying a white flag when it was attacked, Bleibtreu said.

The attackers tossed two grenades, one of which failed to explode, and raked the truck with AK-47 rifle fire, he said.

The U.S.-supported rebels have been fighting the leftist Sandinista government since November 1981.

Bleibtres said the firing stopped after he yelled in Spanish, "Don't shoot! I'm a journalist, we're civilians." He said the Contras told them the area was a war zone and they didn't know the occupants of the vehicle were journalists.

The local Contra commander, known as "Nolvyn," later apologized to Bleibtreu and Speck for the ambush, the photographer said. The journalists also met with a member of what Bleibtreu said was the Contra human rights commision.

Bleibtreu said he and Speck were in the region to visit a child wounded two weeks ago during a Contra attack, and that they knew the area was a war zone. They returned to Managua Wednesday night.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mexicans protest pact

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Protests persist against the administration's Economic Solidarity Pact, although President Miguel de la Madrid says inflation will be managed prudently.

Inflation soared to a record 159.2 percent in 1987 and rose by 15.5 percent in January, the highest ever for one month.

The pact was decreed in December in an effort to bring the inflation under control.

Many private analysts believe, however, that inflation will persist this year in triple digits.

Labor leaders are threatening massive strikes in March unless major salary increases are granted.

He was describing a central part of the pact which starts March 1, an indexation plan that will boost wages and prices a certain amount each month based on project inflation.

Sudanese rebels ambushed

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Former guerrillas who now support the government ambushed and killed 83 rebels in southern Sudan, a senior army commander said Thursday.

Maj. Gen. Amin al-Sayed Abushoak, commander of the Upper Nile province, said the paramilitary Anyanya II movement ambushed fighters of the Sudan People's Liberation Army last week as they attempted to move toward Bentiu, 350 miles southwest of Khartoum.

It was the latest success claimed by Anyanya II, an outgrowth of a former southern rebel group that switched to the government side. Earlier this month, it reportedly helped the army's raids on rebel camps in the same province.

Abushoak did not give casualty figures for the Anyanya group, and did not elaborate on the battle.

The Sudan People's Liberation Army took up arms against the Moslem-dominated Khartoum government in 1983, demanding greater autonomy and economic and social reforms for the mainly Christian and animist south.

Colombian officer killed

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas in northern Colombia killed an army colonel and his three guards, the Defense Ministry said Thursday.

Other guerrillas who kidnapped nine mayors and three reporters in northeast Colombia in a one-week span released three of the mayors after warning them to spend more money on projects to help the poor, officials said Thursday.

One reporter also was freed Thursday.

The Defense Ministry said about 100 members of the People's Liberation Army guerrilla group were stopping traffic on a highway Wednesday afternoon near Tierralta, about 280 miles north of the capital of Bogota.

Fighting broke out when the guerrillas approached the colonel's car, the ministry said, without giving details.

Drug war demands unfailing resolve

Mexican president Miguel de la Madrid isn't on the firmest moral ground when he lectures the United States about the hemisphere's drug crisis. Mexico, after all, is the largest source of heroin and marijuana flowing into this country, much of it through the vast West Texas area. Additionally, one-third of the cocaine reaching the United States arrives by way of our southern neighbor after being manufactured elsewhere.

Sinaloa, the Mexican state in which de la Madrid and Ronald Reagan held their final summit meeting Feb. 13, is itself a leading producer of marijuana and heroin, as well as home to several prominent gangs that move South American cocaine north to the U.S. market. Some Mexican officials, without question, occupy strategic posts along the drug pipeline.

The reality is, as President de la Madrid well knows, that the United States is the world's largest market for illicit drugs. Drugs are estimated to be at least a $100 billion business in this country, equivalent in value to 10 percent of the nation's industrial production. A major share of urban crime can be attributed to drugs, major U.S. banks are implicated in the laundering of illegal drug profits and drug-related deaths continue to rise. It's a familiar, and depressing, story.

De la Madrid must wonder how serious the United States is about waging a "war on drugs" when we cut federal expenditures for drug education and rehabilitation programs. He must question our priorities when he sees how, in the service of an anti-communist crusade, we have tolerated a Central American strongman who has transformed Panama into the hemisphere's drug clearing-house. And, he must question our sense of national security when he sees how we have ignored the involvement of Honduran military officials in the drug trade; our war against the Sandinistas was obviously more important than our war on drugs.

But cynicism must not erode resolve. De la Madrid need look no further than Colombia to see what happens when the tentacles of a drug cartel grasp the heart and soul of a nation. And we need look no further than Panama to see the potential for chaos and political disorder that a drug-infected ally can produce.

Drug trafficking is a problem for the Americas — Mexico and the United States included. It requires the same resolve, the same inter-American cooperation and the same commitment of resources that the Reagan administration has sought in its war against Central American communism. The drug threat, too, is a "revolution without borders" that must be stopped. In our war on drugs, nothing less than the health of the hemisphere is at stake.

Another View:

Breaking the cycle

The plight of poor young women and children has galvanized state legislatures and Congress to review social policy in hopes of breaking the cycle of welfare dependency.

But what of "the forgotten half" — the non-college youth who are the fathers of those children but, all too often, not the husbands of those young women.

Even though a higher proportion of America's youth are completing high school and delaying parenthood than ever before, they have less and less to show for their accomplishments, as statistics compiled by the William T. Grant Foundation Commission on Work, Family and Citizenship make plain.

The real incomes of 20-to-24-year-old male high school graduates fell by 28 percent between 1973 and 1986. In 1986, fewer than half of high school graduates not in college had full-time jobs two years after graduation. As a result, only 43.7 percent of non-college young men now earn enough to support a wife and child at or above the official poverty line. Lacking adequate incomes, they are less able to marry or hold families together. One American child in five is now born to an unmarried woman, a proportion that has tripled in a generation.

Part of this decline in the well-being of the young stems from causes that have afflicted the entire economy. The slump in U.S. manufacturing and the shift toward service jobs with higher educational requirements has decreased employment opportunities for non-college youth. Fifteen years of inflation and slow growth have squeezed incomes across the board.

But a larger part of the problems of non-college youth stems from sheer institutional neglect. While the United States lavishes more than $100 billion a year on education for college students, it invests a pittance in preparing non-college youth for the work world. Much of public vocational education is outdated, the federal Job Partnership Training Act serves only a small fraction of low-income youth, and the Job Corps has only 40,000 slots a year.

"For the students not going on to college, school ends one day and the search for a job — any job, not a career — begins the next," the commission notes.

In the case of welfare mothers, policy-makers now recognize the need to link recipients to the world of work through the training and educational services of workfare programs. But the larger need is to build reliable bridges between school and work for all non-college youth.

In West Germany, half of all 15-to-18-year-olds participate in apprenticeships that combine schooling with on-the-job training and produce, at graduation, a young person with a skill, a job and an opportunity for adult responsibility.

Such institutions need a serious look in America, as does the whole range of programs the Grant Foundation report recommends: improved schooling for non-college-bound youth, more opportunities for national and community service and greater access to training and educational remediation for dropouts and high school graduates needing to upgrade their job skills.

Without a serious effort to improve the lives and opportunities of non-college young men, America's hopes of ending the welfare cycle, and the wasted lives it produces, are slim.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 19, the 50th day of 1988. There are 316 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 19, 1803, Congress voted to accept Ohio's borders and constitution. However, Ohio statehood wasn't formally ratified by Congress until 1953.

On this date:

In 1473, the astronomer Copernicus was born in Torun, Poland.

In 1807, former Vice President Aaron Burr was arrested in Alabama. He was subsequently tried for treason and found innocent.

In 1846, the Texas state government was formally installed in Austin.

In 1878, Thomas Edison received a patent for his phonograph.

In 1881, Kansas became the first state to prohibit all alcoholic beverages.

In 1945, during World War II, U.S. Marines landed on the Japanese-held island of Iwo Jima in the Western Pacific.

'Three Amigos' run domestic policy

WASHINGTON — The Three Amigos of the House of Representatives — a powerful Democratic trio whose names are hardly household words — will run domestic policy in America this year.

Jack Anderson

Forget Ronald Reagan. The lame duck president is concentrating on leaving his mark on foreign issues. And forget the Senate. Senators are quite distracted with the presidential and Senate elections.

In Washington, where no power vacuum lasts for long, the gap will be filled by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas; Majority Leader Tom Foley, D-Wash. and Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif.

After years of Eastern domination in the House, these three Westerners have surprised the Capitol with their ability to be a tight, cohesive trio with a minimum of ego bruising among them.

Their one-for-all, all-for-one musketeerism has made them difficult to beat in a year when both parties will suffer turmoil and splits over presidential candidates.

Our sources say their big push this year will be for passage of major bills involving catastrophic health insurance, education, trade, welfare reform and clean air. They will try to clean up this year's budget by April, the biggest chunk of appropriations bills before the Democratic convention in July and the rest of the agenda before the Republican convention in August.

Coelho conceded that it is rare for a trio of representatives to hum along so well. "All of us in public life have egos," he said. But the threesome works because "all three of us are in positions we basically like and enjoy. Our roles are nicely defined."

Coelho's role is as No. 3 in the political pecking order. The 45-year-old majority whip is the implementer. He works on strategy with Wright and Foley and then garners the votes in Congress to make the strategy work.

Foley, the No. 2 man, acts as the counselor and spokesman for the leadership. An attorney, Foley, 58, questions everything the Three Amigos discuss. He looks at issues from a dozen different ways and then publicly speaks for the policies.

Evidence of the high regard for Foley on the Hill was his recent ranking in a poll of 317 senior Capitol Hill aides. Foley was rated the "most effective" leader in Congress. Second place went to Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and third place went to Speaker Wright. Foley, Dole and Wright also ranked first, second and third in the "most respected" category.

Wright's actions suggest he is making headway as the speaker and shedding some of the good-old-boy stigma. We have criticized Wright in the past for his dictatorial leadership and his heavy-handed protection of failing Texas thrift institutions, among other issues.

But friends say Wright, 65, is going through a makeover this year, trying to evolve from an old-style, Sam Rayburnesque leader into a slicker '80s man. More persuasion, less dictum.

That has meant a softening of relations with the press. Wright hired an aide to correct what he saw as misconceptions in the press about himself. When the aide stepped out of bounds, berating reporters in shrill letters, the new Jim Wright tactfully apologized. We ourselves received a gracious apology after Wright's aide made a questionable reference to our religious affiliations.

CANCER TREATMENTS — A significant number of cancer victims are not getting the latest treatments, according to a survey by the General Accounting Office. In the case of colon cancer, 94 percent of the patients did not get what the National Cancer Institute considers state-of-the-art treatment. The number was 60 percent for rectal cancer patients, 25 percent for patients with one type of lung cancer and 20 percent for those with Hodgkin's Disease. In some cases, the treatment the patient missed has been approved and been in use for more than 10 years. In all cases, the treatments have been shown to extend the patient's life. The GAO report did not place blame, and cautioned that not all treatments are right for every patient.

BRILLIANT DEDUCTION — The Internal Revenue Service is working to plug a tax loophole that may have already cost the federal treasury up to $10 million. Some businesses have been claiming a tax deduction for the fines they pay to the Environmental Protection Agency when they are caught polluting the air and water. One steel company in Pennsylvania was fined $1.6 million for violating EPA air and water quality standards. The company claimed the fine as a business expense and saved itself $736,000 in taxes. The IRS has since disallowed the deduction and is trying to improve its communications with the EPA so auditors can be alerted to phony deductions stemming from pollution fines.

MINI-EDITORIAL — In a world where waste and consumption are the bywords, it is comforting to find a guy like George Shultz. The secretary of state attended the Reagans' annual party for foreign diplomats this month and wore a 20-year-old tuxedo. Imelda Marcos buys hundreds of black bras. Superpower first ladies stage clothing summits. Yuppies squander their wealth on designer spaghetti makers. And inside traders grab for more money than they can ever spend in a lifetime. But George Shultz is still wearing the tie and tails he bought when Richard Nixon was president. He won't make the cover of GQ, but then Ralph Lauren will never be secretary of state.

The success of the left in killing U.S. support for Nicaraguan anti-communist forces is yet another reminder that unless democracies find a way to deal with domestic subversion, they are doomed.

Charley Reese

Certainly in the U.S., with our freedoms, none of which we wish to sacrifice, it is an extremely difficult problem. At the present time, our legal system is totally unequipped.

We have laws against espionage, assassination, and sabotage, but these overt crimes have nothing to do with subversion. The subversive does not violate any of our present laws. He operates entirely within the law to further the interests of a foreign power. He cannot even be prosecuted under the ridiculously minor law requiring foreign agents to register, since no one who does not receive direct payment is required to register.

Moreover, with our constitutional definition of treason, it's impossible to prosecute without a formal declaration of war by Congress. The definition of treason is providing aid and comfort to the enemy but with no declaration of war, in a legal sense, there is no enemy.

That's why Jane Fonda and her hubby, Tom Hayden, could not be prosecuted for treason, though they clearly and openly gave aid and comfort to the North Vietnamese forces while they were in the process of killing 57,000 Americans. The government of North Vietnam, in a legal sense, was not an enemy. That in itself shows the folly of committing American forces to sustained combat without a declaration of war. We should never allow a president to do that again.

With Nicaragua and Vietnam, we have two distinct case studies of how subversion in America coupled with military action in the foreign country results in a communist victory which could not be won by arms alone.

What then is subversion and what is a subversive's job?

Well, in a free country, policy results from a consensus. Even if the government attempts a policy without first forming a consensus, it must either form one or the policy will fail. A consensus or general agreement is reached by the process of democratic discussion and debate in which differences are gradually eliminated or at least reduced.

The job of the subversive is simply to poison that debate and either prevent a consensus on a policy which would harm the foreign cause or even form a consensus supporting the foreign cause. Usually, there is a directed and consistent campaign of slander and calumny against the anti-communist force and its supporters coupled with a persistent campaign to depict communist forces as the good guys — agrarian reformers or honest nationalists or social democrats.

The problem for democracy is this: how do you distinguish between the loyal American with an honest difference of opinion and the disloyal subversive, secretly working for a foreign power or cause? It's not always easy. Furthermore, we do not wish to curb or repress honest dissent.

There are some things we could do without any new laws at all. Believe it or not, the Constitution really works if people will just follow it. In the case of American troops going into combat, allow it only with a formal declaration of war. That then allows you to support those combat troops by prosecuting subversives for treason.

A formal declaration of war does not mean that we have to unleash nuclear missiles and mobilize the whole country. It simply provides the proper legal and Constitutional framework for taking whatever military action is needed.

We could, in fact, declare war and not use any military force. A formal state of war exists, for example, between Israel and Syria and has for decades but they only fight now and then. A formal declaration of war against Nicaragua, for example, would have given legal sanction to the assistance we provided to the contras and to the mining of the Nicaraguan harbors. It would have committed the U.S. to a firm policy which was entirely overt and legal as well as provide the means for prosecuting subversives.

Improved toothpaste tube stops squeeze!

Normally, I'm against most anything that is supposed to be new and make my life easier.

Call waiting was new and I came to hate it. People call me on the phone and then say, "Can you hold a minute? I've got another call."

Grizzard

No, I can't wait while you talk to somebody else. You called me, remember?

And who messed with the shower knobs? There used to be two knobs in the shower. One was marked "C" and the other was marked "H."

You turned on a little "C" and a little "H" and you had yourself a nice shower. Now, however, there's something new.

There's only one knob in most showers you run into today and Thomas Edison couldn't figure out how to keep from being scalded trying to find a comfortable water temperature in which to shower.

But I must admit I have finally found something that is new, and will, in fact, improve all our lives.

I'm talking about toothpaste that now is available in a "new, neat and easy spout."

I bought some the other day. You don't squeeze the tube to make the toothpaste come out, as we have been doing as long as there has been toothpaste, I suppose.

There's a little spout at the top of the tube and all you do is press a button and out comes the toothpaste.

You can press just long enough to get a small amount of paste or you can press and get gobs.

This should help men and women get along better, as well as making brushing your teeth an entirely new experience.

One of the basic differences between men and women is that men squeeze a tube of toothpaste in a random manner. It's not a big deal to us.

Women, however, squeeze from the bottom of the tube of toothpaste first. As the bottom of the tube becomes empty, they roll that part neatly toward the top.

There are reasons for this. One, it says clearly on the tube, "For best results, squeeze from the bottom."

Women think reading a tube of toothpaste is like reading the Bible. If you don't follow the instructions on the tube, you will go to hell.

Women also think squeezing from the bottom is practicing sound economics. Squeeze from the bottom, they have been led to believe, and you get more toothpaste for your buck.

So what if you save three cents worth of toothpaste every three months? That's 12 cents a year, which will make a nice down payment on a new condo.

Women have been complaining to men about their toothpaste habits for years, causing much friction.

But that's all in the past now. With the "new, neat and easy spout," toothpaste tubes will no longer be an issue in male and female relationships.

Now, men and women can fight and break up over more important reasons. Like leaving empty beer cans on the carpet and hanging panty hose to dry in the shower.

Police give up time off to protect candidates

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police had to cancel officers' days off so they could spend more than a month with federal agents preparing for the intricate security plans to protect candidates at nationally televised presidential debates.

Separate teams were assigned to follow each candidate's movements, and even as those candidates gather at Southern Methodist University for the debates, the agents focus only on their assigned candidate, said Lee Parker, assistant special agent in charge of the Secret Service's Dallas field office.

For additional security, flight arrival times have been staggered and motorcade routes are also being kept secret.

"It's going to take everyone we've got and it's going to change a lot of people's hours, but it's nothing we can't handle," said Sgt. Tom Shelton, commander of one of the department's eight tactical teams.

"The only thing that makes this tough is the number of...(candidates) we have coming all at the same time" for the debates at SMU's McFarlin Auditorium, he said.

Republican candidates meet today at 8 p.m. CST in the second of two debates broadcast on the Public Broadcasting System. Kansas Sen. Robert Dole and religious broadcaster Pat Robertson withdrew from the debate Thursday night.

The Democratic candidates debated Thursday night.

Agents from Secret Service branches in Fort Worth, Lubbock and Tyler are assisting, Parker said. Other federal agencies in Dallas also are being called on to provide protection, but Parker declined to say how many agents are in Dallas.

All 64 officers in the city police department's tactical section are on duty, Shelton said.

Candidates have to meet requirements set by a Senate committee and the Treasury Department to qualify for Secret Service protection.

Of the presidential candidates arriving in Dallas, several have Secret Service agents with them, Parker said: Vice President George Bush, Sen. Albert Gore, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Gary Hart and Rep. Dick Gephardt.

Agents will not discuss the candidates' plans or how candidates mixing with crowds affects attempts at protection. But Shelton said the tactical unit is keeping a line of officers between the candidates and crowds at all times.

"If they want to shake hands, we're certainly not going to stop them, but we're going to have a uniform presence at all times," he said.

The candidates' movements have been scheduled to prevent them from crossing paths and creating too large a security risk, he said.

Dole, Robertson back out of Dallas debate

DALLAS (AP) — GOP presidential hopefuls Sen. Bob Dole and Pat Robertson said they won't participate in a debate here tonight. Their campaigns charged the event would be packed with supporters of Vice President George Bush.

The withdrawals leave only Bush and New York Rep. Jack Kemp scheduled to attend. Bush was saying Thursday that he still planned to participate.

"We had one of those (Bush) pep rallies in Houston. I don't see why we have to have two of them in one candidate's home state," Dole told reporters after a rally in the rotunda of the Georgia Capitol.

Richie Martin, Robertson's state campaign director, said he also thought the event was "stacked for Bush."

Dole complained that organizers of the debate at Southern Methodist University — sponsored by The Dallas Morning News, KERA-TV and Texas Monthly magazine — had given his campaign only 60 of 2,600 tickets for the debate audience.

But Burl Osborne, president and editor of the Dallas Morning News, said all the campaigns received 60 tickets each.

"It is preposterous to try to blame their decision to withdraw on the Morning News as Dole's representatives have tried to do," Osborne said in a statement.

"He complains that he received only 60 tickets. That is the same number of tickets allotted to each candidate — no more, no less," the statement said.

Osborne said 304 tickets went to SMU for distribution on campus.

Debate organizers received on-again, off-again reports that Dole would withdraw and that Dole was trying to persuade Robertson to pull out too, Osborne said.

"We hope that Sen. Dole and Mr. Robertson do not write off Texas and merely go away. We will have chairs for them at the debate and we hope they use them," he said.

The Democratic presidential candidates, except for Sen. Paul Simon, debated Thursday night under the sponsorship of the same organizations.

Hopefuls shouldn't ignore college vote, CSN head says

DALLAS (AP) — Presidental candidates would be wise to realize the potential that college students have in shaping campaigns and elections, says the president of a network beaming the Texas Debates to universities nationwide.

"The college vote is a force to be reckoned with and politicians would be making a mistake to take it lightly," said Jack Calmes, president of the College Satellite Network Inc.

"There are a lot more student activists than people have understood...They are a tremendous resource to candidates if properly used," he said Thursday.

Students who tuned in to CSN's telecast of the debate Thursday night for the Democratic candidates were given a toll-free number to call to volunteer for a presidential campaign, and organizers planned the same routine for tonight's debate among the Republican candidates.

Their names will be forwarded to the candidates' national offices, organizers said.

Calmes said 200,000 students would watch the debates each night at 450 colleges and universities participating in the live telecast. Another 150 schools are receiving the telecast from Southern Methodist University on a delayed basis.

Viewers were to participate in a straw poll and a poll on the issues of the 1988 campaigns.

Although the emotionalism of the student activists of the 1960s has been replaced with what may seem to be apathy on college campuses in the 1980s, Calmes said it's actually a mood of cynicism and concern for the nation's leadership.

"There's a lot of thought behind it. They want to be told what's going on," Calmes said. "There seems to be true enthusiasm for the political process."

CSN, which has been beaming educational and entertainment programs to college campuses since 1985, planned a 3½- to four-hour telecast of the debates, which have been plagued by last-minute cancellations by Republicans Robert Dole and Pat Robertson.

Kathy Cronkite, daughter of veteran CBS newscater Walter Cronkite, planned a half-hour preview, followed by live coverage of the first hour of the debates. Student leaders questioned candidates during a portion of the second hour, followed by issue segments prepared by various colleges and then one-on-one appearances by the candidates.

CSN is based in Dallas and Chicago and has 600 member universities and colleges.

Bunton to get hot seat in chili cookoff war

PECOS (AP) — A hotly-contested dispute between rival chili cookoff sponsors is in the hands of a federal judge.

The argument began when Frank X. Tolbert broke from Chili Appreciation Society International Inc., formed his own group of the same name and started a rival chili cookoff near the Big Bend ghost town of Terlingua.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton must decide who gets to keep the Chili Appreciation Society International name and acronym — the larger, incorporated group, or the spinoff "Tolbert group," both of which hold an annual international championship cookoff near Terlingua the first weekend of November.

Bunton heard arguments Wednesday from the plaintiffs, who are the larger group; and the defendants, Tolbert's widow, son and daughter. The judge said he would decide within 20 days which group will get to keep the name.

Bunton likened the argument to the child-custody dispute King Solomon resolved by ordering the baby cut in half.

"That's exactly what's happened to Terlingua," Bunton said. "The baby is split. Terlingua doesn't need two cookoffs."

Bunton offered a tongue-in-cheek solution that probably left a bad taste in the mouths of defendants and plaintiffs alike: keeping one cookoff in Terlingua and letting the other organization start a menudo cookoff in nearby Lajitas.

The first cookoff was organized in 1967 by Tolbert. The only two contestants, writers Wick Fowler and H. Allen Smith, tied.

The contest, at first designed to publicize the ghost town, grew. In the late 1970s, the contests began to take on some semblance of organization, testified Bob Neale, a Dallas advertising executive and one of the early organizers.

Another one of Tolbert's early partners, Ray King, testified that Tolbert agreed in 1980 to incorporate as Chili Appreciation Society International, but backed out because "he didn't care much for rules and organization. He liked it like it started out."

King and others incorporated the group, and Tolbert accepted the organization's honorary title of "Supreme Pepper."

Cisneros abandons domed stadium plan funded with tax

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros has abandoned a domed stadium plan funded through a ½-cent sales tax increase in favor of an option where the city would provide incentives for private financing.

A majority of City Council members reacted favorably to the new proposal Thursday night.

In choosing the plan, the mayor gave up for now his proposal to pay for the domed stadium with a ½-cent increase in the VIA Metropolitan Transity Authority sales tax.

"It's not a slam-dunk," Cisneros told the council and VIA board members at the unveiling of the plan. "And I am not here tonight to tell you that a deal has been put together."

Cisneros said if talks with the private development group fall through, he would like to consider holding the sales tax election next January, assuming the 70,000 signatures collected for a May 7 election on the tax proposal can remain valid through next January.

The plan basically calls for the private development group to invest $150 million for the stadium.

In exchange, the city would commit $45 million, which the mayor claimed could begin returning profits after 10 years.

However, a long-term look of the city's participation shows the city eventually will invest as much as $82 million in the project once it has paid off certificates of obligation that are part of its financing plan.

Cisneros said the city would reap $113 million from various types of revenues to the city as the result of the facility.

Magazine's attorneys to attack psychiatrist

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for Soldier of Fortune magazine were to attack the credibility of a prominent forensic psychiatrist today who contends a classified ad in the publication led to the slaying of a Texas woman.

The woman's family is seeking more than $22.5 million from the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers," claiming the magazine was negligent in accepting the ad. Testimony in the case was to resume today.

"In my opinion, the advertisement was a proximate cause of death for Sandra Black," who was gunned down in 1985, Dr. Park Dietz said Thursday.

Dietz — who headed the federal forensic team that evaluated John Hinckley, the man who attempted to assassinate President Reagan in 1981 — said Soldier of Fortune was without question the magazine of choice for people who would look through its classified ads to find someone willing to engage in illegal activity.

The ad brought Mrs. Black's husband, Robert Black, together with John Wayne Hearn, who placed the ad, prosecutors say. Black is on Texas' death row for paying Hearn $10,000 to carry out the killing at the Blacks' home in Bryan. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for other slayings.

Marjorie Einmann, Mrs. Black's mother, and Gary Black, the victim's 18-year-old son, are seeking $2.5 million in actual damages and $20 million in punitive damages.

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of the magazine in late 1984, offering the services of former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "high-risk assignments" in the United States or overseas.

Hearn has testified that the ad drew responses from people seeking work as well as asking for criminal jobs to be performed.

Dietz said the ad's reference to "high-risk assignments" meant criminal activity.

Describing the findings of his studies of the magazine, Dietz testified that a disproportionate segment of the magazine's readership included people who were paranoid.

"These are people who view the world with distrust, are preoccupied with violence," he said. "Soldier of Fortune tells such people what they want to hear. The magazine gives them the tools to prepare for the troubled things that will happen. It confirms their knowledge that the world is a terrible place."

Dietz said the publication's own marketing survey determined that its readers owned an average of 9.4 firearms each, while the average subscriber owned 13.1 firearms.

Despite repeated defense objections, Dietz said he also gathered at least a half-dozen news reports of crimes — killings, extortions and a jailbreak — linked to personal-services classified ads run by the magazine.

Magazine attorneys, however, contended Dietz was a hired witness being paid $250 per hour and that he stood to make thousands of dollars from the case. They also noted at the start of cross-examination Thursday that a good deal of Dietz's annual income came from his testimony at trials.

Earlier Thursday, Robert K. Brown, publisher and founder of Soldier of Fortune, said he was unaware of news reports that tied the classified ads to criminal cases.

But he said that as of 1984, when Hearn's ad ran, that he might have been the only member of his magazine's staff to favor continued publication of such ads.

Brown said if he had known of the reports, he would have investigated to see if his Boulder, Colo.-based magazine somehow was involved.

"I would have conducted an investigation to see if it was an aberration or a pattern," he said. "If we could have developed a pattern, then I would have discontinued the ads."

Brown also denied a new formal advertising policy adopted in May 1984 was in response to police inquiries about crimes that may have been linked to classified ads in the magazine.

The policy established for the first time since the magazine began in 1975 was a formal rejection procedure for classified ads.

"It was a matter of setting policy to preclude events that might happen," Brown said. "One of the motives was to upgrade the image of the magazine."

Hearn said in a deposition read into testimony Wednesday that his ad brought responses from people who were looking for help with bombings, assaults, jail breaks and killings.

Attorneys for the magazine do not dispute the magazine ad brought Hearn and Black together, but they insist Brown had no way of knowing the ad was for illegal activity.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower looks over a selection of organically grown Texas products during a press conference.

New label can turn manure into gold

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas consumers will be able to tell at a glance if their grocery's vegetables are organically grown under a plan to slap a state seal of approval on such products.

The "Certified Organic" label also will help Texas producers tap into the $3 billion-a-year national organic food market, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower told a news conference Thursday.

"Manure can actually grow money for the Texas economy," Hightower said. He added that Texas producers need a boost because 90 percent of the organic food sold in the state comes from California.

Pete Holcombe of Arrowhead Mills near Hereford, the largest national marketer of whole grains and organic oil, agreed that the seal will be "a tremendous marketing advantage" because such state action is rare.

Of nine states with laws defining organic food, only Washington certifies farms. The industry certifies itself elsewhere, Hightower said.

Under rules to be finalized next month, a "Certified Organic" label will be placed on products that state inspectors verify meet strict standards. The standards were developed by a task force including farmers, grocers, consumer representatives, processors and academic experts.

Among more than 25 pages of standards are requirements that a farm be off synthetic pesticides for at least three years, and off synthetic fertilizers for at least two years. Organic meat, eggs and dairy products must be produced without hormones or growth promoters.

"This is truly a step in the right direction not only for the consumers, but for the land and the water," said Bay Laxson, a Carrizo Springs organic farmer and a founder of the new Texas Organic Growers Association.

The seal will help protect consumers from deception and assure quality products, said Lanetta Cooper of Consumers Union. She and other task force representatives spoke at the news conference.

"I deal every day with the customer who says, 'I want safe food' — and we all know about Texas loyalty — 'and I want it from my state,' said Fleur Hedden of Whole Foods Market, which has stores in Austin, Dallas and Houston.

"I'm tired of bringing it in from California and Colorado and Arkansas. Let's get it from Texas," Ms. Hedden said.

The first state-certified organic products should be available to consumers in May or June, and about 100 organic Texas producers should be certified this year, Hightower said. Non-organic farmers who want to diversify their operations can get a special "Transition-to-Organic" label for their goods, he said.

The labeled organic goods will be promoted as part of the department's agriculture marketing program, Hightower said.

Group helping undocumented immigrants seeks lawyers

EL PASO (AP) — A group working to help undocumented immigrants appeal amnesty denials says it needs about 1,500 lawyers willing to work for free.

"We're trying to get each volunteer lawyer to handle two cases," said Jose Rodriguez, who helped found the newly created Legalization Appeals Project. "Of course, we don't expect to get 1,500 lawyers, but we are calling for help."

Undocumented immigrants have until May 4 to apply for amnesty from deportation. To be eligible for amnesty, they must be able to prove they have lived illegally in the United States continuously since before 1982.

As of the end of the first week of February, 23,351 amnesty applicants had been interviewed in El Paso, said Pete Reyes, assistant chief of the El Paso Legalization Center. Of those, 15,785 have been granted amnesty, 3,974 have been denied and 3,592 are awaiting a decision.

Applicants who are denied amnesty have 30 days to appeal, and they can stay in the United States as long as the appeal is pending.

The normal fee for a lawyer handling an amnesty appeal could run as high as $2,000, depending on the complexity of the case, said Rodriguez, who works full time as director of an Immigration Task Force for El Concilio de El Paso, an umbrella group for 30 Hispanic organizations.

Most applicants have not had legal assistance, which might explain why so many have been turned down, said Carol Wolchok of the American Bar Association.

STATE in brief

Texan behind credit scam

Hearst News Service

BEAUMONT — A Texas man masterminded a scheme to arrange sham marriages for Mexican and Honduran nationals who wanted visas to enter the United States, federal officials say.

Richard C. Arriola and nine other people, including four women who allegedly married aliens for pay, are named in federal conspiracy indictments unsealed Wednesday.

The indictments allege Arriola arranged fake marriages between women and the aliens so the men could gain legal entry into the United States.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Stevens said the aliens would pay Arriola, a towing company employee, about $500 for the fake marriages. The women would be paid about $200 for the marriage with a promise of another $200 for a divorce, Stevens said.

"This was not a marriage in the normal context of marriage," Stevens said. "They said 'I do, I do' and that was the last they saw of each other."

MHMR chairman resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the Texas Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation has resigned from the panel, citing business reasons, the Department of MHMR announced.

Roger Bateman of Corpus Christi, chairman of the board of Bateman Investments, resigned Wednesday, the department said Thursday. His resignation is effective immediately.

"I've enjoyed the challenge and the reward of working with the fine people at the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. I regret that I must leave at this time," Bateman said.

Bateman was appointed chairman of the MHMR board by Gov. Bill Clements in August. He has served on the board since 1981, and was reappointed in May when his first six-year term expired.

R. Coke Mills, board vice chairman, will perform the duties of chairman until Clements appoints someone to that position.

Texas gets new jobs

AUSTIN (AP) — A total of 83,000 new jobs in the last half of 1987 offers solid evidence that Texas' economic decline is over, the state comptroller's office said Thursday.

The comptroller's office said Texas' economy should continue to grow modestly throughout 1988 and would match the growth in the national economy if oil prices remain stable and there is no national recession.

The comptroller said in the publication Fiscal Notes that since bottoming out in the summer of 1987, "the Texas economy has been on the rebound, gaining workers in all major industries except finance, insurance and real estate."

"The signs of recovery are solid and widespread," the comptroller's report said.

Education board hopefuls stress state aid

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Four of the six candidates hoping to represent West Texas on the 15-member State Board of Education were here Thursday night touting answers to hard-line questions. They agreed on many of the issues.

The forum featured questions created by the sponsor of the debate, the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

Question subjects included standardized testing, school finance and students who are at risk of dropping out.

Those four candidates present included Republicans Peter Micale of San Angelo; Donald Dorsett of Stephenville and Democrats Jim Wilks of Sweetwater and Bill Hudson of Wichita Falls.

All candidates said they believed that state aid to local school districts should not be based on a student's performance on standardized testing scores, and that public educators should not be held exclusively responsible for those test scores.

Micale argued that test scores should be the last thing state aid is based on, and that no education administrators like to place much weight on standardized tests.

Wilks said basing aid on standardized scores would be a vicious circle in which districts with lower scores would be subsidized less and less with the opposite happening in those districts with brighter students.

Dorsett described the two scenarios as unrealistic. "I don't think it will happen...teachers would wind up teaching to the tests."

House B. 72, the sweeping educational reform of two years ago, set up many mandatory rules districts must follow without the benefit of financing suggestions.

Candidates also agreed that the Texas Education Agency should issue waivers to districts that cannot afford to implement all the programs at once.

Micale advocated funneling a majority of state gambling proceeds to education.

Hudson reiterated all the candidate's claim that the State Legislature should not pass laws and then say "funding is up to you."

Hudson cited the fact three classroom addition bond issues in West Texas alone — identical in nature to that which the Midland Independent School District is pushing for the local election in May — have failed this year.

Classroom additions have been the answer for many of the state's 1,062 districts' compliance with a HB72 law mandating smaller classroom-teacher ratios.

Dorsett worried that too liberal a waiver policy would allow districts to circumvent the law — "not hire certified teachers but put new Astroturf on the football field" — but advocated some sort of waiver system anyway.

Identifying and helping students who run the risk of dropping out is another mandate in HB72. Schools are required to have specific "at-risk" coordinators.

Thirty-two percent of the 3 million students in Texas drop out yearly, the candidates said.

Dorsett advocated putting more emphasis on parental involvement, while Micale insisted on making English the primary language of all students in Texas.

Hudson said honor students are in danger of dropping out as well as lower achievers because they get bored with programs designed for the average student.

The candidate from Wichita Falls advocated a program allowing for auxiliary vocational training for all levels of achievement and interests — not just mechanics or woodworking, for instance.

The field of candidates has been traveling through West Texas' District 14 for several months to educate the public who will narrow the field down to two candidates in March's Super Tuesday primary.

Runaway couple lands in Stanton

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — Romance on the run took a couple from the Midwest to Europe and Australia and, finally, by way of a 1973 Ford Maverick with Oregon license plates, to Stanton, into jail, and onto the birthing table.

As it turned out, they fell into hospitable company, noted Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders.

The runaway couple, Randall "Randy" Shoemake, 33, and his wife, Michele Varacalli Shoemake, 30, were seeking to escape the quarrels of their ex-spouses when last week they stopped off in the San Francisco suburb of Hayward, Calif., to pick up the woman's 8-year-old daughter, Nicole Silva, and to head to a haven in Dallas, Saunders said.

But there were problems with that move.

The daughter, who apparently was willing to travel, was in court-ordered custody of her father.

Mrs. Shoemake became wanted for parental kidnapping, Saunders said.

And her husband, Shoemake, already was wanted on an Illinois offense which Mrs. Shoemake said was contrived by her ex-husband and Shoemake's ex-wife to deny Mrs. Shoemake custody of her daughter.

Two years earlier, the couple had met in Chicago, where Mrs. Shoemake said they both were instructed in computer repairs for a major computer company. They "fell in love at first sight," later sold her house, and escaped to paradise via a round-the-world trip, Mrs. Shoemake recalled from her hospital bed in Stanton.

On Feb. 14, 1987, they were married in Sydney, Australia, where they ran out of money and returned to the States.

The couple's escape took them into Stanton last Saturday, when they sought out a restroom for Mrs. Shoemake who then was nine months pregnant, Stanton authorities said.

After driving around a bit, they ended up at a Dairy Queen, where Stanton police officer John Young spied the Oregon license on the Shoemake car.

He became leery.

"We're suspicious about cars from Midland over here, let alone from Oregon," said Sheriff Dan Saunders. "That's the truth."

Stanton, an agricultural community of 2,300 about 20 miles east of Midland, is just off Interstate Highway 20. The policy of Stanton lawmen is to run routine checks on cars, bearing out-of-state tags, which pass through Stanton, Saunders said.

The felony warrants on the Shoemakes were uncovered.

After the car pulled out of Stanton and again was on the interstate highway, the car was pulled over by three lawmen: Young, Sheriff's Deputy John Castro, and Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Wade Turner.

"You don't know what you're facing in a car with felons in it," Saunders said in explaining why the arrests weren't made in town. "Our first obligation is to protect our citizens. They made the arrests without incident," the sheriff said.

"They scared us to death," Mrs. Shoemake recalled. "They got out with shotguns. It freaked us out."

But the arrests and the end of their escape became "kind of a relief, anyway," Mrs. Shoemake said. "We don't have to run anymore. Maybe we can straighten this thing out. You can't run away from everything forever. I'm not bitter," she said. "That's the last thing I'll be. It could be whole lot worse. They treated us real good" in Stanton.

Monday, as Mrs. Shoemake experienced labor pains, she was transferred to the Martin County Hospital, where the baby, Jennifer Lauren, was delivered by Dr. Thomas Miller at 7:38 a.m. Tuesday. She weighed seven pounds, 13 ounces.

"Both are doing fine," Saunders said.

Once the mother has recovered, she and her husband will be extradited to face charges. The 8-year-old daughter, who is being cared for by the Texas Department of Human Resources, will be placed in temporary custody of her grandparents in California until the family dispute is settled.

Mr. and Mrs. Shoemake each are under $100,000 bond.

Mrs. Shoemake said that the sheriff, Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport, the hospital staff and others have been "great" to her and her family.

Deavenport gave Nicole a tour of the old historic Martin County Jail-Museum on Sunday afternoon. "She was real proud and thrilled about it," Mrs. Shoemake said.

And on Saturday night, the judge and the girl "sat around (the courthouse) and ate peanut butter and crackers," recalled Deavenport, who said he enjoyed the company.

"Whenever there is a child-custody fight," the judge said, "it is the kid that gets hurt."

The mother seemed relieved that the ordeal was concluding.

"I'm glad it happened here," Mrs. Shoemake said. "The people in the hospital have been great." And the sheriff permits Shoemake to leave the jail and "come over here about everyday" to visit mother and baby daughter.

"Where else would this happen?" she asked. "Randy has always told me about his Southern hospitality, and I'm getting a good dose of it."

The sheriff, who said that the town has been hospitable to the family, noted that, "Of course, we're hearing just one side of the record. Our job is to arrest people, detain and hold them. And we're only one arm of the judicial system. We're not judge and jury," Saunders said.

"We try to treat everybody like we would like to be treated if the circumstances were reversed," Saunders said.

New Volunteer Park sight for sore eyes

By RAMONA NYE

What once was an eyesore along Big Spring Street should become the city's newest park by April, said a Midland organizer Thursday.

Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful (formerly Clean Midland), said the Volunteer Park will be dedicated on April 23.

The about one-and-half acre park on Big Spring Street, across from the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St., will become a green space with 56 trees ranging from beanless Honey Locusts to pecan varieties to be planted.

The Midland organization, which helps combat litter in the city, was awarded in 1986, $100,000 from the Governor's Community Achievement Award.

The state money will pay for the laying of cement for the park's sidewalks, lighting, irrigation and landscaping.

The park is laid out in two sections, with sidewalks forming a wagon wheel design in each area, said Ray Vaden, who chairs the Parks and Beautification Committee of Keep Midland Beautiful.

Former Midland firm, Blue Heron Designs of San Antonio, was awarded the park construction bid.

The park's construction — which began Dec. 10 last year — is being overseen by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Keep Midland Beautiful also raised $30,000 from private sources to plant grass, and erect a 25-foot commemorative wall honoring Midland's volunteers, Ms. Hotchkiss said.

Lawmakers find bills too taxing, representative says

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State lawmakers are tired of tax bills and will make no major changes in the Texas tax structure next year unless they face "a multibillion-dollar deficit," the sponsor of the record $5.7 billion 1987 tax hike said Thursday.

Even if the Select Committee on Tax Equity recommends a massive overhaul in state taxes, Rep. Dan Morales said, such changes will require at least a decade to enact. With a surplus or "no significant deficit" in 1989, he said, the Legislature likely will make no changes at all.

"We've passed tax increases the last three times we've been together," Morales, D-San Antonio. "I am having (House) members come up to me privately and telling me, 'Dan, we helped you last time, we helped you in '84, we helped you in '86, we helped in '87, we can't help anymore. Another tax bill, just politically, I can't support it back home.' "

Lawmakers won't know the fiscal situation they'll face for the 1990-1991 budget cycle until late this year when Comptroller Bob Bullock compares his revenue forecasts with the Legislative Budget Board's spending recommendations.

If that comparison brings another multibillion-dollar shortfall, Morales said, the Legislature will have no choice but to consider changing the state's sales-tax reliant tax structure.

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Law enforcement officers today continue to seek a 44-year-old prisoner who walked away from the Ector County jail Thursday afternoon while emptying trash with three other jail trustees.

Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said there were reports late Thursday night that Leonardo Ramos, being held on a burglary of a vehicle charge, knocked on the door of a southside Odessa home about 10 p.m.

Kloss said deputies searched the area a short time after the report was received but were unable to locate Ramos.

Kloss said after Ramos disappeared a 13-inch knife was found missing from the jail kitchen.

"We have to assume he may have taken it," Kloss said.

Ramos is described as being 5-feet 7-inches tall and weighs about 151 pounds.

Late Thursday, Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford issued a warrant charging Ramos with escape.

Because of the knife missing from the jail he is considered armed and dangerous, according to Kloss

Midland-based Ranger involved in probe of voter fraud

EAGLE PASS (AP) — A South Texas grand jury has returned 19 indictments following an investigation into allegations of voter fraud in Maverick County, authorities say.

The grand jury will continue the investigation, a prosecutor said Thursday.

Other allegations that will come under scrutiny involve claims that some people were allowed to vote 10-12 times in a single election, convicted felons were allowed to vote and that people were "hauled" from other areas to vote.

Another phase of the investigation involves a ballot box that was missing for several weeks. When it was found, the 40 votes inside changed the outcome of a judicial election that was finally decided after three recounts, including one conducted by state election officials in Austin.

The grand jury Thursday returned 14 sealed indictments alleging voter fraud and five sealed indictments alleging official misconduct, authorities say.

The Maverick County District Attorney's office would not discuss the official misconduct indictments.

The indictments, however, were believed to be connected to the Eagle Pass School District, the San Antonio Express-News reported today.

Ironically, the indictments were issued as absentee voting began for the "Super Tuesday" primary election.

District Attorney Amado Abascal III said six indictments for voter fraud allege tampering with governmental records resulted from an investigation into voter registration.

The other eight voter fraud indictments were for illegal voting, he said.

Those named in the indictments will not be identified until they have been arrested and charged, Abascal said.

Texas Rangers Capt. G.E. Powell of Midland, who headed the investigation, praised the work of the grand jury.

"I think they're a very hard-working and conscientious jury, interested in doing what they can to see the election process is run in Maverick County as it should be," Powell said. "I think they're working to restore the people's faith in the election process."

The grand jury was recessed Thursday by Abascal, but he said they will hear more testimony in several weeks concerning voting irregularities during the Democratic primary May 3, 1986.

After the primary and two recounts, complaints were made to federal and state lawmen about coercion and "vote hauling."

The grand jury also was to look into allegations that some people were allowed to vote 10 to 12 times.

The alleged irregularities grew out of the race for the 293rd District Court seat, in which Rey Perez defeated Judge Ben Martinez.

The election was decided after three recounts, including a final recount conducted by state election officials in Austin.

During the election, a precinct ballot box containing 40-plus votes was discovered missing. It was found several weeks later in the vault at the Frontier State Bank in Eagle Pass.

After the third recount, Texas Rangers, the FBI and the state Attorney General's Office received complaints from citizens of coercion and registration irregularities.

Archaeological sites found near planned dump

AUSTIN (AP) — New questions about a proposed low-level nuclear waste dump have surfaced with a report on archaeological sites discovered in the area.

A state board looking at a far West Texas site for the dump, however, heard that there is a chance the facility can be in operation by Jan. 1, 1993, if lawsuits do not hold up completion.

Ruben Alvarado, director of technical programs for the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, said Thursday whether the 1993 federal deadline can be met depends on future lawsuits "and that sort of thing."

The main proposed site is 11 miles northeast of Fort Hancock in Hudspeth County, which is adjacent to El Paso County.

Board chairman John Simek said the board would consider meeting in Fort Hancock or El Paso this spring to hear views of local residents about the disposal facility.

"I feel very strongly about input from the region," said board member Dr. Elbert Whorton Jr. of the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

The Texas Supreme Court on Jan. 27 dismissed an appeal by El Paso County, which was seeking a temporary injunction to halt site selection for the dump.

A motion for rehearing is pending. Darcy Frownfelter, special assistant attorney for the county, has said if a rehearing is denied, plaintiffs in the case will file additional pleadings in district court.

The board Thursday approved staff requests to sign a contract with the Rio Grande Council of Governments to establish a technical advisory board and to negotiate a lease with the General Land Office that would allow the building of roads and drilling of wells to take site samples.

Additional questions about the project were raised when David Batcho of Las Cruces, N.M., reported that an archaeological survey by his firm had found seven prehistoric archaeological sites in the area.

He estimated there are at least 10 such sites in the area that would be considered significant under the National Historic Preservation Act.

"We literally tripped over sites," Batcho said, mentioning 50 campfires two miles east of the proposed dump.

Batcho also said the survey had found 22 prehistoric rock art and-or habitation sites: "The setting and rock art go together — they really can't be divorced."

"We're looking at locally important stuff, as well as stuff that is very, very important on a broad regional scale," Batcho said.

"The body of information which these sites can offer through a combined program, perhaps, of preservation and research — whatever — can contribute greatly to an opening on an area that is completely unexplored," he said.

Crime Stoppers seeks data on store's robbery

This week, Crime Stoppers is seeking information on a robbery of the Kent Station at 1709 S. Rankin Hwy.

Shortly before 2:30 p.m. on Nov. 23, a man entered the store and went into the restroom. He came out a few minutes later wearing a plastic bag over his head and brandishing a red-handled screwdriver. After ordering the clerk to open the cash register, the suspect took all of the money, then walked out the front door.

Once outside, he turned and ran north up the alley.

The suspect was described as a white man in his mid-30s, 6 feet tall, weighing about 185 pounds with dark brown and gray hair. He was wearing a long-sleeved red flannel shirt and blue jeans.

Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for any information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for this robbery.

Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

Veteran skydiver jumps into darkness

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Brilliantly colored stripes highlighted the parachute against the clear blue sky, but as Don Levesque prepared to jump he saw only darkness, 9,500 feet of it.

A Vietnam land mine explosion blinded Levesque on April 10, 1969, at 3:33 p.m. "The day a Timex took a lickin' and stopped tickin'," the 44-year-old combat veteran calls it.

At Gainesville Municipal Airport earlier this month, he took another step, or jump, on the road to proving disabled veterans can accomplish anything "with the right people behind them," he says.

The point is to stress ability over disability, says Levesque, something he has been doing for the past 18 years.

After returning from Vietnam he spent 16 weeks in rehabilitation, then enrolled in Providence College, eventually graduating with honors.

Since then, he's worked with blinded veterans, helping them market their skills for employment. He is currently a coordinator for visual impairment services at the Veterans Administration Southeastern Blind Rehabilitation Center in Birmingham, Ala.

Levesque's jump was actually a warm-up for the Sixth Annual Death Valley Marathon, a 100-mile run by a team of highly decorated Vietnam veterans that begins with a parachute jump on Sunday into Death Valley Junction, Calif.

However, he was almost eliminated when James Cazar, the United States Parachute Association safety advisor for Central Alabama, said he wouldn't allow the jump because of the risks involved.

Said Cazar, "It's hard enough for a person with all his faculties to jump, let alone an individual that doesn't have sight. He can do whatever he wants in California, but I don't want him getting hurt in Alabama."

Instead, Levesque did exactly as he wanted in Texas. He and his wife made the 15-hour drive to Gainesville after Joan Mahony, a jump master with the USPA, contacted the airport here for approval.

It's for people like Cazar that Levesque said he made the jump.

It's because of people like Mahony that it was successful.

"I've got a good team here to help me," he said. "This isn't a daredevil event. Sure, there's the chance for injury but we've taken every precaution possible."

His preparation began two months ago in Homewood, Ala., where David W. Slimp operates his Skydive South instruction company. With the help of North Texas Parachute Center here, it ended Feb. 6 with two successful jumps.

The day began at 9 a.m. with Mahony and Lavesque rehearsing movements to be made in the air.

To orient himself with the falling sensation, Levesque's first dive utilized a relatively new method of skydiving called "tandem" jumping, in which two people are strapped together and use one chute. Veteran parachutist Bob Coker tandemed with Lavesque for the first dive.

It went off perfectly.

Said Lavesque, "Oh man, what a rush! It's a lot like a real fast motorcycle ride with no handlebars."

A 30-second, 120-mph free fall probably contributed to that sensation; however, it was an icy motorcycle ride with temperatures at 15 degrees at the high altitude.

Small business workshop set for Midland College

From Staff Reports

A two-night workshop on "The Fundamentals of Starting a Business" is scheduled at Midland College March 1 and 3.

The workshop is one of several such community assistance programs being offered through the Midland Economic Development Center at Midland College.

Included will be such topics as "Exploring the Risks," "Doing What You Know Best," "Conducting a Market Feasibility Study," "Sources of Financing," "Putting Together a Financial Statement," "Business Organizational Alternatives," "Keeping Business Records" and "Regulations, Taxes and Insurance."

Experts in these fields will be leading the workshops, which will meet from 7-10 p.m. both nights in Room 107, Allison Fine Arts Building.

Cost for both nights is $5 per person.

Enrollment forms are available from any sponsor or at the Midland College Continuing Education Office, Administration Building.

"We are attempting to assist the many people in the community who have been thinking about starting their own businesses, either as an alternative to working for someone else or because of employment cuts," said Dr. Jerry Jones, chairman of the Midland College Business Studies Division and coordinator of the Midland Economic Development Center.

Co-sponsors for the workshop are the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Service Corps of Retired Executives/Active Corps of Executives, Small Business Administration, Joint Training Partnership Act, Midland Chamber of Commerce, and Students in Free Enterprise.

Funding for the workshop came from a grant from the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System, utilizing funds from the Federal Carl D. Perkins Act. The registration fee covers refreshments.

Initiation ceremony set

From Staff Reports

Initiation ceremony for 39 new members of Phi Theta Kappa, national community college academic honorary society, is scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 28.

The ceremony will be held in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

State District Judge Pat Baskin will speak at the ceremony. Connie Miller is president of Midland College's Alpha Beta Phi chapter of Phi Theta Kappa. Membership in PTK is open to students who achieve a 3.5 grade point average while carrying 12 hours. Aline Collins and Larry Griffin serve as sponsors for the organization.

Students from Midland being inducted include: Brenda Alldredge, David Bennett, Suzanne Bryant, Jeff Cloyd, Steve Courtney, Debbie Dorff, Ellen Franklin, David Gaylon, Boyce Hardin, David Heath, Johnny Hewitt, Randel Hicklin, Rosa Hoh, William Husak, Victoria Jensen, Abigail Johnson, Kristye Kahlich, Jeannine Lane, Jeff Lightfoot, Richard McCasland, Marion McCrary, Gloria Maddox, Karla Messick, Patricia D. Morgan, Helen Oliver, Steve O'Neal, James Ramsey, Ricky Rangel, Lezlie Rayner, Kimberley Russell, Deborah Slaughter, Jeff Stewart, Doris Taylor, Rob Watkins, Jimmy B. Whitlock, Susan Wilkinson, Steve Wood, Shannon Wooten, and Trina Yerby.

Also being inducted are Paul Kelley of Rankin and Stacie Weaks of Odessa.

Midlanders nominated

From Staff Reports

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, has nominated four Midlanders for appointment to the nation's military service academies.

"The competition this year was extremely intense," Smith said in announcing his nominations.

"Almost all of the applicants who were considered by my Service Academy Screening Board were superbly qualified," he said. "The board had a difficult time choosing the very best."

Smith nominated three for admission to the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. They were John C. Allee, 3312 Cardinal Lane; Keith Beck, 4309 Arroyo Drive; and William Reinert, 3203 Apperson St. He also nominated Donnie Doan, 1402 Ainslee, for a spot in the Class of 1992 at the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, N.Y.

All the nominees live in the 21st Congressional District, which Smith represents. Smith's other nominees come from San Angelo, Marfa, Ozona, Fredericksburg, San Antonio, New Braunfels, Boerne and Kerrville.

Obtaining a nomination is the first major hurdle service academy applicants must clear. After conducting physical examinations, physical aptitude tests and other evaluations, the academies will announce a complete list of their appointments in April.

Because of the complex set of admission rules, however, only a total of five of the final appointments will go to those specifically nominated by the congressman.

Chicago waits for Odessan

From Staff Reports

A former Odessa police officer, indicted Feb. 12 by a Chicago federal grand jury on charges of mail and wire fraud and interstate transportation of stolen property, is "on his way to Chicago" to report to the U.S. Marshal's office, according to U.S. Marshal Gale Boggs.

Milton Fletcher, 58, was arrested Feb. 16 in Midland by FBI agents and arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Darrel Smith, FBI Special Agent Ron Butler said today. Smith released Fletcher on a $4,500 personal recognizance bond and ordered him to surrender himself to U.S. Marshals in Chicago by Feb. 27.

Fletcher and Fayez Karim were jointly named in 28 indictments alleging fraud by wire and mail and interstate transportation of stolen property.

According to Allen Coco, City of Odessa personnel director, Fletcher served about 14 months on the Odessa Police Department from April 1977 to June 1978. Personnel records indicate Fletcher voluntarily resigned June 13, 1978, he said.

Videotape shows supremacist saying 'hate is our law'

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — A reporter's videotape shows a white supremacist who is accused of sedition telling an audience, "Hate is our law, revenge is our duty."

Peter Lake of Los Angeles taped Richard G. Butler, 69, of Hayden Lake, Idaho, making the statement at two events in 1983: a cross burning in Los Angeles, and the swearing in of two Aryan Warriors, making them members of Butler's Aryan Nations group in Idaho.

Lake was the government's first witness in the trial of 14 white men in federal court — 10 on charges of plotting a violent overthrow of the government, five for plotting the murder of federal officials, and two for transporting stolen money.

He testified Thursday about how, using the name Peter Lawrence, he went to Butler's Aryan Nations compound in Hayden Lake and pretended to become a follower of the group's beliefs.

Butler, who knew he was being taped, made the statement in a context in which he said the Aryans had the law of hate and the duty of revenge so long as "the alien is in the land" and occupies "the seat of power."

Conviction of conspiring to overthrow the government by force has a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $20,000 fine; plotting to murder federal officials has a maximum penalty of life imprisonment. Transporting stolen money has a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Lake, a writer and television producer, said he investigated Butler for a report for a Los Angeles TV station and a magazine published by Larry Flynt.

Under cross-examination, Lake said that he carried three .45-caliber pistols on an airliner in his luggage on the trip, that he lied to Butler and others at the compound, that he took the initiation as an Aryan Warrior insincerely, that no one ever told him that as a warrior he would have to kill or bomb or try to overthrow the government by violence, and that his companion on the trip, a felon, also was armed.

Because of the large number of defendants, opening statements took two days, even though four defendants put off statements until the government has finished its case.

Defendant Ardie McBrearty made his own statement, telling the jury that the government's case was "a little truth here, a little truth there, and a whole lot of imagination in between."

Attorney N.C. Deday LaRene said his client, the Rev. Robert Miles, of Cohoctah, Mich., believes the races should be separate. "He speaks of being at war with the government," LaRene said, but likened Miles' rhetoric to a coach telling his players before a game, "cripple them, go in there and kill them."

PARK

The Midland Jaycees may begin a program honoring a volunteer of the year, Ms. Hotchkiss said.

The wall would bear a bronze plague each year with the volunteer chosen by the Jaycees, she said.

Also private contributions will be solicited for four flag poles sporting the United States, Texas, Midland and a volunteer flag to be erected in the park, she said.

The flag poles are expected to cost around $6,400, she said.

Eventually when Big Spring Street is made into a one-way street north and Marienfeld Street converted into one-way south the park will be the "entry focus" into Midland.

"They wanted something really attractive," said Ms. Hotchkiss of the park.

"We wanted something graphic to catch the eye of motorists," she added.

Anyone wishing to support the activities of Keep Midland Beautiful, Inc. through financial contributions to the non-profit, tax-exempt organization can contact Ms. Hotchkiss at 68-CLEAN.

Contributions of any amount are welcomed, and a membership can be obtained with a minimum contribution of $25.

A contribution of at least $500 qualifies a person as a benefactor, a contribution of at least $250 qualifies a person as a sponsor and persons donating between $25 and $250 are named special members.

TAX

A staff report from the Tax Equity Committee Thursday pointed out that Texas' 6-percent state sales tax rate ranks third highest among the 45 states that levy a sales tax, while the base — those goods and services subject to sales taxation — ranks 19th.

"We can't raise existing (tax) rates sufficiently to generate multibillion-dollar amounts of revenue," he said. "The only option is structural modification: either expanding the sales tax base or moving toward some sort of profit-sensitive option."

If a large deficit forces lawmakers to begin work on a new tax plan — such as adding more services to the sales tax base — next year, Morales said, the final steps won't come until late in the 1990s.

"There is no way that we will be successful in completely scrapping the existing structure and implementing a brand new structure in the next session," he said. "You don't do something as profound as fundamentally alter the way a $38 billion entity funds, operates and administers itself in a five-month period of time."

World travelers can find familiar food franchises

AGRICULTURE

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The odds are increasing rapidly that Americans traveling abroad can find a fast-food place that bears a familiar name.

"McDonald's in Munich, Pizza Hut in Fiji and Taco Bell in Sydney are just three examples of the trend toward expanding foreign markets for U.S. restaurant fanchises," says an Agriculture Department report.

In 1985, there were 6,122 international franchise units, up 36 percent from 3,943 in 1980. Figures by the Commerce Department show that Canada and Japan account for almost half, with Australia and New Zealand ranking next.

The report was written for the department's National Food Review magazine by two economists, Charlene Price and Hal Linstrom of USDA's Economic Research Service.

"As you might expect, the popularity of the different restaurants varied around the world," the report said. "For example, Canada was the largest market for hamburger units, and Japan accounted for the greatest share of the chicken market. Australians and New Zealanders enjoyed pizza."

McDonalds, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Burger King and Wendy's — the four largest U.S. restaurant chains — accounted for 31 percent of the world total, franchising 4,626 restaurants internationally by 1986, up from 272 in 1974, the report said.

As the largest food service organization in the world with about 9,400 establishments, McDonald's led the international scene with about 2,138 outlets, compared with 370 five years earlier, the report said.

Kentucky Fried Chicken, a division of PepsiCo Inc., operated more than 6,500 units, including 1,854 in 54 foreign countries.

Burger King, part of Pillsbury Foodservice, operated 4,744 outlets in 1986, including 403 in 24 foreign countries and Puerto Rico.

Wendy's, which grew to the world's fourth-largest restaurant chain in 17 years, operated almost 4,000 outlets, including 231 in 17 foreign countries.

Of the four largest franchisers, only Kentucky Fried Chicken operated outlets in Africa in 1986, and also held sole position in the Middle Eastern countries, the report said.

"Franchise growth overseas will continue in existing markets," the report said. "At the same time, some chains are entering previously untapped areas. Kentucky Fried Chicken and Pizza Hut, for instance, recently negotiated with the Chinese and Russian governments to bring fast food to those countries."

Most franchise restaurant companies probably will keep expanding their menus and services abroad as well as in the United States, particularly to meet a growing interest in diet and "light" foods.

"Strong growth in Mexican and oriental foods may also mean introduction of new menu items," the report said. "Following the U.S. trend, breakfast offerings are also likely to increase in overseas restaurants."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A shot or two of carbon dioxide — the stuff used in some fire extinguishers — may be just the thing to help sensitive plants such as raspberries and blueberries survive the stress of heat therapy, says an Agriculture Department plant pathologist.

The result one day could be a new assortment of plants for nurseries and home gardeners.

Heat is used in special chambers to rid fruit and vegetable plants of viruses. At 100 degrees Fahrenheit, the heat forces the plants to grow faster than the viruses lurking in them, said Richard H. Converse, who works for the department's Agricultural Research Service, Corvallis, Ore.

But that's too hot for blueberries and many raspberries, he said in a recent report by the agency. If carbon dioxide is raised to 1,100 parts per million in the chamber from the 350 parts normally present in the air, the plants are able to withstand the heat.

Converse said the process of raising carbon dioxide levels had been used previously by Australian scientists to heat-treat grape plants.

EPA restrictions could affect farmers

Associated Press

The piping plover, bonytail chub (a fish) and wild monkshood (an herb) are just three of dozens of endangered species protected by new Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) pesticide restrictions in 1988.

According to Successful Farming magazine, the restrictions mean certain farmers in specified counties are limited as to what chemicals they can use on pasture and cropland. The restrictions, designed to protect endangered plants and animals, severely limit the use of many chemicals in target counties.

Some states are harder hit than others. For example, all of Florida's 67 counties are affected, while only four counties in Kansas are targeted. Across the nation, about 900 counties are home to one or more of the endangered species. Eighteen states, and 135 counties therein, are affected by the law as it applies to pesticide use on crop land. More states fall under restrictions on forest or pasture and rangeland pesticides.

The "range maps" defining the area where individual endangered species are found have been the most controversial part of the regulations. States were only given 21 days last fall to review the maps. In many cases, states felt the ranges were too broad. In an extreme case in Alabama, an endangered plant growing in a 5- to 10-acre area resulted in pesticide restrictions for the entire county, covering more than 500,000 acres.

The first group of restrictions covering eight crops, pasture and rangeland, forests and mosquito larvicides took effect Feb. 1.

Plans for protecting some individual species will be delayed. For example, restrictions designed to protect the freshwater mollusks in Clayton County, Iowa, along the Mississippi River will be delayed a year in order to develop more accurate maps of where the mollusks are found. In addition, some states have elected to develop their own plans for protecting the endangered species.

"We're more oriented toward encouraging compliance in 1988 than in coming down on those who are unfamiliar with it and make technical violations," says Larry Turner, manager of EPA's implementation project. "We can't do this without voluntary compliance."

Late winter and early spring from the combination of rain and melting snow.

Altered tomatoes approved for tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has approved another field test of genetically altered tomato plants that can survive spraying of a chemical herbicide to kill surrounding weeds.

James W. Glosser, acting administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said Tuesday a permit for the field test was issued to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Wilmington, Del. The company expects to begin testing this spring near Brandenton, Fla.

The plants were designed to tolerate sulfonylurea, described as a new class of low-risk chemical weed killers.

The du Pont field trial is the third test approved by the USDA agency.

Brush control better with high soil moisture

Kiker

Mechanical brush control methods such as rootplowing, grubbing and chaining work best when soil moisture conditions are good.

Rootplowing is an effective method of controlling brush but is more efficient when soil moisture is sufficient to allow the blade to pass through the soil without resistance. Seeding of forage species is often necessary and desirable following rootplowing.

Because rootplowing is expensive, it should be used on sites with high production potential. Root plows with fins usually provide the best brush control but they also destroy existing turf. A thin bladed root plow without fins will minimize turf damage but may result in reduced brush control.

Chaining involves dragging a heavy anchor chain over brush — uprooting or breaking off brush species. Chaining of live brush species provides only temporary control because of resprouting. However, more live plants are uprooted when soil moisture is high. Chaining can provide temporary brush control that will allow sufficient grass growth so that prescribed burning can be used as a follow-up treatment.

Chaining is used effectively to retreat areas that have been treated with herbicide. For example, mesquite may be controlled effectively by chaining an area three years after spraying with herbicide. With high soil moisture, many previously sprayed trees are uprooted. Dead or damaged mesquite trees are easier to uproot than live trees. Chaining is most effective on plants with a main stem diameter of five inches or more.

Power grubbing is generally used as a maintenance practice. It is most useful with scattered plants large enough to be easily seen by the equipment operator. The efficiency of grubbing also increases as soil moisture content increases. A large portion of the plant's root system is pulled from the soil when soil moisture is high.

So, ranchers interested in one or more of these methods of mechanical brush control will obtain better results if used in the winter while soil moisture conditions are favorable.

RICHARD MINZENMAYER

Check plants before oil application

Minzenmayer

Dormant deciduous trees and shrubs in West Texas should be checked for scale insect infestation before applying dormant oil applications. Dormant oil sprays are used to control most scale insects and certain aphids on deciduous trees and shrubs. A dormant oil application would be of little benefit if treated deciduous tree or shrub was not harboring a moderate to heavy scale investation.

Scale insects are among the most harmful of plant-feeding insects. Most scale insects are very small and have a hard, waxy, scalelike covering over their bodies. They often appear in large numbers and may weaken or kill a plant by sucking out its juices.

A dormant oil may be used anytime in the dormant season. Best results have been obtained when it is used in late winter or early spring just before the buds break and begin to grow. If applied after the buds break, foliage burn may occur.

Dormant oils should be applied when the temperature is between 40 and 85 degrees F (4 and 18 degrees C). For best results, avoid application if freezing conditions are likely to develop within 12 hours. Dormant oil should not be applied to tree roots.

Dormant oil sprays of about 4 percent strength may be used on deciduous trees in late winter for control of scale insects. Check the label on a dormant oil container for specific instructions on mixing and applying the product. Sprays are increasingly effective as the temperatures become warmer in the spring and insect metabolism resumes activity.

Since oil and water do not mix naturally, an emulsifier is dissolved in the oil concentrate to make it mixable with water. Before spraying, each batch of spray should be checked for mixability. The spray should be a milky color. If any oil fails to emulsify, it should not be use.

When mixing and applying dormant oils, extreme care should be take to use only the recommended amount listed on its container. Check the label of plants that are sensitive to oil sprays. Good spray coverage of treated plants is essential, but avoid excessive application.

Check deciduous trees and shrubs for scale insect infestations before applying dormant oils.

Richard Minzenmayer is Extension Agent for Entomology in Midland, Martin and Howard counties.

American doctors operate 'miracle clinic' in Mexico

By LISA PETRILLO
Copley News Service

LA PIEDAD, Mexico — The man without a face waited here in the pig capital of Mexico for the famous American doctors to save him.

Word of their miracle clinic reached him when newspapers, radio and the considerable grapevine announced the return of COAD International, a San Diego medical team that doctors the poorest of northwest Mexico.

So the faceless man was there when the top plastic surgeons from San Diego came, as they do twice a year, to La Piedad's Cruz Roja, the Red Cross hospital behind a Carta Blanca beer warehouse on the only decent highway from Guadalajara to Mexico City.

But the doctors came too late to save him. About 10 years too late.

Cancer has chewed away the entire right side of the old man's face, from his eye down, as if shot away by a cannonball. A bandana worn Billy-the-Kid-style hides his shame.

There's nothing we can do. The doctors arrange for other medicos, three hours away in Guadalajara, to provide pain medicine that may ease the faceless man's slow death.

The doctors turn to examine where hot cooking oil has curdled the skin and scalp of 8-year-old Edward. They shake their heads. Tell him next time.

CNS Photo

United States surgeons work on a child's cleft palate at a clinic in La Piedad, Mexico. This surgery teams helps many Mexican people who at one time were hopeless.

OUTSIDE THEIR stifling examining room stand another 450 poor villagers — most of them deformed — all awaiting salvation from these American doctors.

They suffer from deformed lips, hunchbacks, mouths twisted by cleft palates, festered gunshot wounds, patches of thick fur on their faces and bodies that make them look like animals. Once a villager appeared with a hand growing out of her back.

Doctors must screen through the pitiful to find the salvageable. This time, they can repair only 100 of the stricken, for there are only 10 nurses, four doctors, four anesthesiologists, two medical students and one resident to do the work.

The medical team has only six operating tables for the next 30 hours of surgeries — an average of five procedures an hour, per bed.

This turns out to be the biggest clinic yet. The Americanos credit their success to Roger Dupon. Long ago, Dupon sacrificed everything to live among the oppressed Indians and help revolutionize their little corner of the world, only to be almost killed last year by a jealous villager.

"They love Roger. He is a saint to them," says nurse Margret Merlock.

Dupon spent five months in San Diego recovering from bullet wounds, and this clinic is his homecoming. To show their respect, the sick arrive dressed in their best, as if they were going to church.

The doctors fly into Guadalajara on Thursday, and after a bumpy, three-hour bus ride to La Piedad — the name of the place means "the mercy" — they launch immediately into five hours of work. They will not see daylight again until Sunday morning, when it is time to get on a bus for the trip back to the airport.

AT THE end of the first night's screening and setting up for the next two marathon days of operations, Dr. Mert Suzuki sits in the hotel coffee shop reflecting over a Carta Blanca beer exactly why he does this.

"It's the real essence of medicine, without any of the distractions of the states, none of the inertia and the stress," says Suzuki, who started with COAD almost 10 years ago as a plastic surgery resident at the University of California at San Diego Medical School. Now he practices in Poway, Calif., and teaches at UCSD.

"It takes you back to the early years when you felt good with what you did," Suzuki says.

Later that long weekend, a villager travels all day and waits hours outside the Cruz Roja, just to thank Suzuki for fixing the twisted mouth of her granddaughter. The woman, a Tarasco Indian from the mountains east of Guadalajara, gives him loaves of decorated bread and pounds of fruit — enough food to feed her family for a week.

Nurse Maureen Dalton carries in the grandmother's gift, shining with pride as she stops everyone who rushes by to show them.

"I feel like we get much more than we give," says Dalton, who considers this volunteer nursing in Mexico no big deal because she does basically the same kind of work every day back in San Diego.

Dalton arrives before dawn at the Red Cross clinic on Friday and Saturday with her blonde hair curled. At the end of each 15-hour day she changes out of her bloody surgical scrubs into a neatly pressed skirt and stockings for dinner.

Yet she appears at ease in this dusty Mexican farm town that smells like the 3 million pigs raised here, in fly-filled operating rooms where lice crawl off the patients.

FOR 14 years the COAD-UCSD partnership has operated under primitive MASH-like conditions here and in La Paz and Mexicali, 20 times a year in all. Only one patient has died on the operating table, a little boy whose cleft palate was being repaired.

"People in the U.S. want to sue you; here they want to kiss your hand," Dalton recalls. "The family was so thankful. They said that they were happy that he went to heaven with a full face."

For two nights Afelardo Jiminez Campos and his Indian mother sleep in the dirt outside the Cruz Roja. For two days, Afelardo dances around and smiles shyly at all the gringos in their funny green doctors' clothes.

When his turn finally comes on the third day, he jumps with excitement and strips off his filthy striped shirt and green trousers — his best clothes, his only shoes.

Afelardo has been waiting 12 years for God to fix his face, says his mother, Blandina Jiminez. Afelardo's grandfather made the small wooden chairs of the region and sold them at the market to raise the 10,000-peso bus fare (about $4.50 and a week's wages) to bring them to the big city of La Piedad.

After the surgery fixing his severe cleft lip, Afelardo rests in the dormitory-style recovery room, where children wail and two nurses watch over 10 beds. Around the corner are 15 more beds, but only those first 10 have sheets — and only one clean one each for the weekend of 100 patients. "Not like in real life," says one nurse.

YET AFELARDO'S mother looks sad as she waves flies away from her groggy son, even though his cleft lip is stitched into one piece and he already looks like a regular little boy. They have told her that when the COAD-UCSD team returns this June, Afelardo will get his cleft palate fixed and his mouth will be as perfect as the rest of him.

She is sad, she tells the nurses, because she knows so many more people suffering from disfigurements such as Afelardo's in her village back in Arantepacua, in the southern Mexico state of Michoacan. The natives call them "pig people," and refuse to accept them.

This news excites Merlock.

"A whole new village we can crack; this is great," Merlock says. She tells Afelardo's mother that the Americanos will pay bus fare and feed any of the sick villagers, if only they will come to the clinic.

Merlock is another veteran of these mercy missions of COAD, which is an Old English word meaning "to carry out a plan." Experience has shown her how hard it is to reach the Indians of Mexico, and get them to trust outsiders.

Yet, they smile here in the Red Cross clinic as almost every doctor, nurse and volunteer snaps away at every patient for before-and-after pictures. They carry them in their wallets. Anesthesiologist Dr. Clyde Jones, formerly a medic in the front lines of the Vietnam War, is on his third scrapbook.

WHEN THE Mexican residents and medical students who assist and observe at the clinic arrive late one morning, nurse Sue Gouveia chews them out. And when the same Mexican doctors neglect to tell the patients what to do after surgery — such instructions as how to keep the dressings clean and what not to eat — Gouveia yells at them again.

"They told me there are three kinds of medical insurance in Mexico," Gouveia says. "So I asked them, 'What if you don't have any of those?' and they said, 'Then you die.'"

When Guadalupe was born 14 years ago, doctors told her mother, Marina Aguirre de Rodriguez, not to bother to feed the deformed baby because she wouldn't last.

WHAT FOLLOWED was years of doctors' false promises to fix Guadalupe's twisted mouth, lack of nose and split lip.

In school the other children teased her so severely that she dropped out in the second grade. Her mouth was so messed up she couldn't talk — she could make mumbles that only her mother understood.

But now it is Saturday, and the final surgery of this long COAD clinic is on young Guadalupe. With all that she has experienced, how can the mother trust any doctor?

She smiles and explains, "Every day I pray to God that it won't be the doctors who operate on my daughter but Jesus Christ."

When Dr. Wendell Smoot hears Guadalupe's story, his tired face lifts into a smile and he remarks, "I don't mind playing second fiddle."

Dedication of barracks at Fort Davis planned

From Staff Reports

The National Park Service at Fort Davis National Historic Site will formally dedicate a recently restored and refurnished enlisted men's barracks 2 p.m. Saturday.

Restorations funds were raised by the Friends of Fort Davis, all volunteer members, as well as grants from the Burkitt Foundation of Midland and the Meadows Foundation of Dallas.

Preceding the dedication, there will be pre-program music beginning at 1:40 p.m. provided by the 62nd United States Army Band of Fort Bliss.

The hour-long assembly will begin at 2 p.m. with Bob Glenn playing the bugle, followed the Presentation of Colors by the 1884 Color Guard of Fort Davis and Fort Concho.

The invocation will be given by the Rev. Sam Magbee, and the welcome and closing remarks will be given by Superintendent Stephen T. Miller.

An awards presentation will be conducted by John E. Cook, regional director of the Southwest Region, NPS, and William Penn Mott Jr., director of the National Park Service.

Guest speakers will be Dr. William H. Leckie, author and retired professor of history; Lt. Gen. Emmett Paige Jr., commander of U.S. Army Information Systems Command of Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Alex Haley, author and genealogist.

The benediction will be given by the Rev. Larry Castillo-Wilson. The presentation will be followed by a reception hosted by the Fort Davis Historical Society.

The restored rooms represent the summer of 1884 when they were occupied by the black enlisted men of Company H, 10th U.S. Cavalry. Company H was organized in July 1867 at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., as part of the new all-black regiments authorized by Congress the year before.

Fort Davis has the only restored barracks in the United States dedicated to the black "buffalo soldier" on the western frontier. The barracks were occupied by black troops from 1867 to 1885.

When entering the restored barracks, visitors can see iron bunks with belts, sabres and clothing hanging on the walls behind them. Spare blankets and winter overcoats are stored on shelves and in the center aisle of hte room are arms racks with Springfield carbines, heating stoves and a barrel for water.

'Patient Pride' helps recovery

Copley News Service

What's inexpensive, takes only 15 minutes, makes patients feel terrific and may even shorten recovery time? Give up?

It's Patient Pride, a color therapy program conceived by Phoenix, Ariz., homemaker Beverly Barnes. Begun in January, 1986, this free service treats female patients to personalized color analysis and daily makeup applications.

Based on the premise that a patient who looks better will also feel better, Patient Pride delivers the pampering that nurses are often too busy to provide. Ten trained color therapists staff this innovative program offered at Mesa and Valley Lutheran Hospitals in Mesa, Ariz., and Humana Hospital-Desert Valley in Phoenix. Several area nursing homes participate, as well.

Performing about 1,800 makeup applications a month, therapists see dramatic changes in patients, including increased self-esteem and a marked decrease in pain. At first skeptical, some physicians now request that specific patients receive Patient Pride visits. One doctor even prescribed it on his pad!

The program is the subject of upcoming research to determine its actual impact on recovery time. Conducted by the Arizona State University School of Nursing, in consultation with a psychiatrist and social worker from Mayo Clinic, Scottsdale, Ariz., the study will compare a control group with patients who receive daily Patient Pride pampering.

FAMILY MATTERS

Eliminating block results in better communication

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: I have been having a problem talking to my husband for some time. He always seems to either be at work or have his head buried in the television or the newspaper. He says it helps him relax. I've accepted that, but now I think that I am having a problem talking to my children. We have a 13-year-old boy and a 9-year-old girl. According to my son, nothing that I tell him is right or it's old-fashioned.

I don't think that I can put up with only being able to talk to my daughter. The reason that I am writing you is that I am worried that I won't even be able to talk to her when she gets to be a teenager. Is there anything that you can suggest that would help me be able to talk to my children? SILENT

DEAR SILENT: Listening and responding appropriately are two very important parts of communication. "Communication blocks" are behaviors and comments that block the flow of sharing between individuals. For example, your husband's behavior blocks communication with you, while sending the message that his pastimes are more important than talking to you.

Some of the more common communication blocks are:

- Ordering the other person to do something instead of seeking his support.
- Questioning the other person's motives or reasons.
- Distracting the other person by changing the subject.
- Responding with sarcasm to the other person's problem. Sarcasm is probably the most destructive communication block, because it confuses children and offends adults.

The first step to improved communications is to find the communication blocks. Eliminating the blocks gives true communications a chance to start.

DEAR FAMILY: My brother-in-law is a farmer. The last time that I went to visit my sister, she told me that they were having some big money problems and might lose the farm. Later that week I tried to talk to my brother-in-law about his problems, and he just got up and walked out of the room. My visit ended on a sour note even though my sister tried to apologize. I was just trying to help.

I got a call from my sister this morning and she was very upset. Apparently the bank refused to loan them any more money and they can't buy whatever it is they need to plant for next year. I don't have any money to loan them, but I would like to be supportive. What can I do that won't offend my brother-in-law like last time? HELPFUL

DEAR HELPFUL: Your support is very important to your sister and her husband. Unfortunately, farmers appear to feel that when they have financial difficulties or lose their farms, their friends, relatives and neighbors seem to withdraw. Possibly these people withdraw in order to help minimize the family's embarrassment, but it is not interpreted that way. Others report being afraid of saying or doing something that might lead to a tragedy, such as suicide or the killing of a loan officer.

I strongly recommend that you go visit with your sister and, if possible, your brother-in-law. Be there just like you would if someone in their family died. Help them acknowledge and experience the change in their lives. They may try to "control" their emotions — for example, your brother-in-law leaving the room — rather than experiencing and sharing them.

I hope that you will be able to visit them and just be available. An important supportive aspect is just caring enough to be there. Praying together is very helpful. We must in some way turn ourselves over to God.

DEAR ABBY

Early sexual experience can cause health problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had to write to you after reading your response to "A Private Person in Atlanta." It appears her company was offering their employees health insurance and one of their questions was: "At what age did you have your first sexual encounter?" She stated it was nobody's business, left it blank, and you agreed with her.

Well, Abby, that is a pertinent question for any company that takes on the health risks of women. The earlier a woman engages in sexual activity, the higher her risk for early development of cervical cancer.

It is a scientific fact that women who have their first sexual intercourse at a young age are at greater risk for cervical cancer.

I doubt that you will print this letter, but I think you should, not so much for "A Private Person in Atlanta," but for all the adolescent women who are considering becoming sexually active. They should have as many of the facts as possible before making their decision. — NICK GIANNONE, M.D., FREEPORT, TEXAS

DEAR DOCTOR: Thanks to readers like you, I am always learning. I hope your important message reaches women of every age who will share this knowledge.

DEAR ABBY: I am the single mother of a 10-month-old daughter. I am on a very limited budget, but "Sandra," a dear friend of mine, has a daughter a year older than mine, and she gives me the clothes her daughter has outgrown. They're as good as new.

I am grateful for her generosity, but every time Sandra sees my daughter in something she has given me, she never fails to comment to everyone who happens to be present that my daughter is wearing her daughter's hand-me-downs. I find this embarrassing. Lately, if I think I might run into Sandra, I either leave my daughter at home or make sure she's wearing one of the few outfits I was able to buy for her myself.

I don't want to lose Sandra's friendship and the clothes she gives me help a lot, but I just can't take the embarrassment anymore. Should I tell her, or what? — SENSITIVE

DEAR SENSITIVE: Even well-to-do friends and relatives welcome children's hand-me-downs without feeling like "charity cases." However, since you find Sandra's public announcements embarrassing, you could either tell her privately how you feel, or you could beat her to the punch and proudly tell your friends how lucky you are to come into such lovely things due to Sandra's generosity.

"How to Be Popular" is for everyone who feels left out and wants an improved social life. It's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Abby's Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Professional communicators prove helpful

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Dealing with the media has become such an important part of our lives that many of the major companies are grooming spokespersons trained to speak for them.

Our fire department has a designated spokesperson who looks the camera in the eye and assesses the damage, the estimated cost of the blaze and how it got started.

Lawyers act as spokespersons for their clients, agents front for stars, and press secretaries speak for the President and the First Lady.

It occurred to me that there are a lot of professions that would do well to use go-betweens. Two of them are football and baseball teams. I watched a football player being interviewed the other night who, when asked about the strategy of the game, said, "We came here to play ball." (I think I already knew that.) The interviewer persisted, "Could you elaborate on that?" The ballplayer answered, "I think it says it all."

Baseball players are not much better. No matter if they're questioned on their views on contract negotiations, what they feel about the team moving to the West Coast or the disruptive fans, they roll a wad of tobacco around their mouth, spit and mumble, "I'm feelin' good."

Presidential hopefuls should never be allowed to speak for themselves. They're self-destructive. A spokesperson for them would never end up saying things like, "If you think I'm a womanizer, then follow me around."

Television is never kind to the official who feels because he knows a lot about the subject he can communicate with the public. A case in point was the National Aeronautics and Space Administration authority who announced, "The normal process during the countdown is that the countdown proceeds, assuming we are in a go posture, and at various points during the countdown, we tag up the operational loops and face-to-face in the firing room to ascertain the facts that project elements that are monitoring the data and that are understanding the situation as we proceed are still in the go direction."

Someday down the road, I hope to see media professionals fronting for most of the car dealers who appear on television to sell their own cars. The ones who appear with dogs and children and are dressed as clowns, Superman and Mr. T to tell you they're "dealing like we've never dealt before."

Until that day ... Yogi Berra will sound like a Harvard scholar.

Look, feel of resume important

By MIKE DALE
and CHUCK EDWARDS
Copley News Service

If you're an engineer or in the health care field and your resume is printed on gray or ivory paper, you're in trouble. A study by Vitae International out of Virginia shows that employers in those professions prefer resumes printed on white or off-white paper.

Employers in finance, accounting, law and computer sciences prefer white or off-white resumes. Business management, architecture, marketing and communications outfits don't mind gray or ivory resumes. Advertising is partial to light gray.

However, no profession tolerates bright or flowery resumes.

Vitae spokeswoman Joan Ferguson says the study also shows that the average employer glances at a resume only 20 seconds — 20 seconds. Therefore, she says, the look and feel of a resume make all the difference in the world.

And is this Midwestern club's song 'Thick As A Brick'?

As the West was being settled, many developing towns had their own brick plants. In those days, the plants produced solid bricks and some of the bricks — often one out of a batch of 12 — were marked with the name of the town or the plant. Those marked bricks are the ones collectors seek.

By BETH POWELL

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Ask one of Luke Robison's friends "What have you got in this suitcase, bricks?" and the answer is likely to be "Yes."

Robison and his wife, Anna, are among the founding members of the International Brick Collectors Association.

Each year they hold the spring meeting for the association's approximately 350 members at their home in far east Oklahoma City.

Collectors gather in the couple's yard, open their car trunks, pull down the tailgates of their pickup trucks and exchange bricks from around the world marked with names of towns, companies, slogans and designs.

Brick collectors from Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas began to gather informally in the 1970s in conjunction with a brick throwing contest in Stroud, Robison said.

Then as more collectors began to discover they weren't alone in their passion for the clay blocks, the group became more formalized.

"Some of them said that they had started with a brick or two, and then after a few years they found out other people were collecting also," Mrs. Robison said. "They had thought they were the only crazy people."

As many as 400 people have joined the organization since it was formed by a group from Kansas in 1983. From 300 to 350 members are still active, Robison says.

The Robisons say the appeal of bricks is in the history that they hold.

As the West was being settled, many developing towns had their own brick plants. In those days, the plants produced solid bricks and some of the bricks — often one out of a batch of 12 — were marked with the name of the town or the plant. Those marked bricks are the ones collectors seek.

"The towns were just beginning to spring up, at that time," Mrs. Robison said.

Luke Robison has written a book, "Made out-a Mud," telling the history of brick plants in Oklahoma.

"A lot of them, when they satisfied the town's need, they went out of business because some of the bigger manufacturers were shipping them in cheaper than they could produce them," Robison said. "Coffeyville, Kansas, flooded this whole Indian Territory.

In Robison's collection of about 1,000 bricks from around the world, are bricks marked OSP, from the Oklahoma State Prison at McAlester, and I.T., dating back to when Oklahoma was an Indian territory.

A popular brick comes from a Kansas plant. "Don't spit on the sidewalk" was an early 20th century health warning about the dangers of infectious diseases like tuberculosis, according to literature from the association.

An Oklahoma City woman has one of the rarest bricks from Oklahoma. It has a relatively common geometric design with Gotebo written in small letters in the center.

"Her mother lives in Gotebo, and she had it for a door stop," Robison said. "She got it, and that's the only one anybody's been able to find."

Brick collectors go to great lengths to get new bricks for their collections. Stories about their searches are exchanged along with bricks at their biannual meetings.

A Kansas City couple told last year about finding a great cache of Kansas bricks with a sunflower imprint in the crumbling sidewalk of a dying Kansas town and taking them home to use in remodeling their kitchen, Robison said.

"A few days later this fellow got a letter from the sheriff and told them his pickup with his firm's name on it was seen taking bricks from the sidewalk so they told them to bring 'em back," Robison said. "So they did. They took 'em back, and all the town people gathered 'round and watched them put 'em back in the sidewalk."

"By the way, they didn't get all of 'em cause they already had some laid in the kitchen floor," Robison said.

Bricks are found in alleys, at old building sites or being used as decoration in yards and gardens. Robison's first bricks marked "McLoud" came from a house that he was remodeling in 1973.

"Sometimes people will even see a brick set up in someone's flower bed," Robison said. "Some of them will knock on the door and ask them to look at the bricks. Some of them are quite nice and some of them are quite uncivil."

Tascosa's Rebels eliminate Lee girls from playoffs

By JOHN FREY
MRT Correspondent

LUBBOCK — The names were the same, the Lady Rebels from Midland Lee versus the Lady Rebels from Amarillo Tascosa. But that is were the similarities stopped as Tascosa rolled to a 63-42 Class 5A bi-district basketball victory.

Tascosa, in their black and red, looked like a bunch of redwoods in a forest of oak trees compared to the smaller Lee Rebels. Coach Jim Wilcoxson seemed to pull a different six-footer off his bench in waves, causing Lee many problems on the boards. Tascosa finished with 16 offensive rebounds to Lee's 12. But only two of the twelve came in the first half.

The game started out even as Lee fought hard on the boards and trailed only 7-4 with four minutes gone. But a cold streak was soon to come for Midland while Tascosa was able to pound the the ball inside for much better shots. Lee finished the quarter hitting only three of thirteen shots and trailing 15-8.

Just when you thought their shooting woes could not get any worse, they did. After Khristie Davis hit on their first possession of the second quarter the well went dry. Lee managed just eight more shots in the quarter, missing all of them.

This time, however, Tascosa did not hit from inside every time. They did not have to as their perimeter game was sizzling, hittting 11 of 17 shots, mostly from the outside, putting the game out of reach at 40-14 at the half.

"We shot the ball better tonight than we usually do against the zone," coach Wilcoxson said. "We do not always do that but we have been getting better."

Lee coach Shirley Stephenson had a game plan to use the zone and force Tascosa to shoot the outside shot. That plan worked but it wasn't the first time Tascosa has seen that type of defense.

"Most teams in our district zone us," Wilcoxson said. "They really try to take away the post and force us outside. We have been getting better at the outside shot and tonight it just fell into place."

Lee switched up in the second half going to a hard man-to-man defense. This pumped some life into the Midlanders but the Tascosa size was still too much to handle. Lee kept up the pressure the entire half and outscored Tascosa 27-23 to make the score a bit more respectable.

Lee was led by junior Monica Ramirez with 12 points and Kristi Grady with eight. Sheri Hermsmeyer and Von Netzer led a balanced Tascosa attack with 14 and 10 points respectively.

"We just did not think that they could shoot that well from the outside," coach Stephenson commented. "I thought we did a decent job on their post game but they just hit the outside shot and we couldn't stop both. They really played a super game.

"Our girls were disappointed at halftime but they really played hard in the second half. These girls have played with a lot of pride all year long and tonight was no different. I am very proud of what they have done this year."

To go along with their strong inside game Tascosa received tremendous guard play form Kristin Von Netzer and Tina Burgan. Despite facing the Lee zone pressure in the first half, the two protected the ball as if it were their own and combined for only one turnover by halftime, a number Wilcoxson said had to be a season low.

"Our guards really did play a fine game. They are both about 5-10 but they are deceptively quick. They have seen the pressure all year long and are now starting to handle it much better. Hopefully we are peaking at the right time."

Lee's season ends with an 18-11 season mark while Tascosa moves to the area playoffs next week against an El Paso team that is still to be decided.

District 4-5A champion San Angelo also took a quick tumble from the playoffs, losing 62-47 to Lubbock Monterey in Big Spring.

Double dip basketball set tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

District 4-5A basketball concludes regular season play tonight, but Midland Lee has invited along a local friend to help close things out at Chaparral Center.

Midland College will host Clarendon in Make-up II at 5:30 p.m. while Lee will host playoff bound Abilene High at 8 p.m. in a college-high school doubleheader.

The Chaparrals of Midland College have already clinched entry into the Region V JC tournament, which will be held in Midland in two weeks, but would like to build momentum heading into that key tournament, where a national tournament berth in Hutchinson, Kan., can be earned.

It will mark the third game this week for both MC and Clarendon after last Saturday's snafu when Make-up I was scheduled for 2 p.m. at the Chap. Clarendon showed up for a night game. At first, the game was considered a forfeit for MC, but Clarendon objected, thus Make-up II tonight as part of the doubleheader with Lee and Abilene High.

ABILENE HIGH will come roaring into Chaparral Center for the nightcap with hopes of nailing down the 4-5A title with a victory over Lee. The Eagles will claim the outright crown with a win, but Lee would like nothing better than to send the Eagles a little message heading into the playoffs by forcing AHS to play a 4-5A championship game with Odessa High, which has already completed regular season play with a 9-3 record, ½-game behind the 9-2 Eagles.

Lee, 4-7 in loop play, needs a victory to end the season at the .500 mark. Lee is 14-15 heading into tonight's game.

Midland High, 14-16 on the season, will end against Abilene Cooper on the road. MHS is 5-6 in loop play and will win fourth place with a victory over the Cougars. Lee could share fourth with MHS if the Rebels win and the Bulldogs lose.

Third place San Angelo will travel to Odessa Permian in a game that means little to the Bobcats. San Angelo can not move up or down in the standings with a victory or a loss. It's a different story for Permian, the defending league champion. The Panthers must win to insure finishing out of a basement tie with Cooper. If MHS beats Cooper, Permian will finish sixth by winning or losing, but if Cooper wins and Permian loses, Permian and Cooper would share the basement tag.

Since this is the last night of regular season play in 4-5A, there are some individuals who have some goals to shoot at. San Angelo's Scott Marschall has 207 points in 11 games, averaging 18.8 points per district game. Marschall is nine points ahead of Midland High's Greg Lewis, a junior. Odessa High's Lester White has 215 points, but is idle tonight. Marschall needs only eight points to pass the 6-6 White for the scoring title while Lewis will need at least a 20-point night to have a chance at the scoring title.

Chaparrals bust century barrier

From Staff Reports

Snyder — Midland College coach Reggie Franklin hopes his team is peaking for the Region V tournament.

If the Chaps' performance here last night against Western Texas College is any indication, he may be right. The Chaps had a 25-8 lead with less than eight minutes gone and the game was almost over. Final score was 102-74 as the Chaparrals captured their 20th win of the season.

The fastest tempo of the year erased WTC's only lead, 2-0, as the Chaps ran, passed, stole and scored in bunches. Billy Ray Smith, Skeeter Henry, David Martin, Smokey McCovery, and Clifton Jones took turns with steals, assists, and fast-break buckets.

The Chaps had leads of 5-2, 11-4, and 19-6. First year WTC coach Tony Mauldin used a couple of time-outs in an effort to slow the Chaps. It worked briefly as the Westerners cut the lead to 27-16, but WTC got no closer. At the half, it was Midland 46, Western Texas 30.

David Martin had contributed 16 points in that half and Skeeter Henry had 12. The Chaps were going without star point guard reliever Stewart Barnett, who fractured a bone in his left wrist from a hard fall during Monday's game with Howard College. He sat out Thursday, but may be playing Friday with a soft cast to protect the break.

With Barnett out, that means the Chaps haven't had any player participate in every game played this season. Last year's team, for example, had five players who were in every game. But it didn't matter Thursday. McCovery and Jones scored on fast breaks to open the second half and it was more of the same.

Skeeter Henry made it official when he buried a three-pointer. Sophomore Nate Curvey came off the bench and had a college-high 13 points, 11 in the second half. But freshman Sydney Rice did better than that. He slammed home 15 points and had five blocked shots, all in the second half. Franklin used all 12 available players and his starters rested the last 10 minutes of the game.

The Westerners tried the three-point shot in an effort to cut the margin, but they got only three of 16 all night, both from Melvin Thompson. Their All-American candidate Darrell Nelson, who averages more than 29 points a game, got just 24 as the Chaparral defense really put a blanket over him.

Six Chaparrals were in double figures for the game, headed by Henry's 19. Martin had 16, Billy Ray Smith 16, Rice 15, Curvey 13, and McCovery 10.

Jansen falls again, Boitano gives gold hope

Winter Olympics

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Dan Jansen fell again in his last chance to win a medal in his sister's memory, and, with America's medal chances falling too, Brian Boitano brought new hope of gold Thursday night at the Winter Olympics.

Jansen fell in the 1,000-meter speed skating race, four days after his first fall and the death of his sister, Jane, to whom he had dedicated these Olympics.

"It was very disappointing," Jansen said. "But what happened in the past week has just put things in an absolutely different perspective. I don't feel as bad as I could."

Boitano overtook Soviet Alexander Fadeev, the leader after compulsory figures, with his short program Thursday night. He finished the program, looked up and mouthed the words "Thank you, God," then bowed to the crowd, knowing he carried the gold-medal hopes of America.

"There's a lot of pressure on us for medals," Boitano said. "We're trying to psyche each other up and also be calm and help each other. ... You have to go out and be yourself and not worry about the gold, but I know the Americans would like to see some gold."

Through six days of the Olympics, America has just one medal, a bronze in pairs figure skating. Boitano can add to that Saturday night in the men's freestyle, and it could well be gold.

After the short program, Boitano was first, followed by world champion Brian Orser of Canada, who actually won the short program. Fadeev blew the lead when he bobbled a combination triple axel-double loop jump.

"With all the pressure going on out there, I can't be happier," said Boitano, 1986 world champion from Sunnyvale, Calif. "I think this is one of my all-time best, and I'm very proud of it."

Fadeev, 1985 world champion, is considered a weaker freestyle skater than either Boitano or Orser, although the Soviet has been working on a quadruple jump he may try in the long program. No skater has ever landed a quadruple jump in competition.

It was a day of disappointment for other American Olympians. There was a downhill skier with a broken leg, Pam Fletcher. There was a luger, Bonny Warner, without a medal even though she had America's best finish ever in an Olympics. And there was a brave, persistent hockey team that could not overcome the Soviets.

And then there was Jansen.

"I couldn't believe it," he said. "I think I was on a gold-medal pace. What happened — it's hard to say why. For some reason it did happen."

Jansen, 22, the world sprint champion from West Allis, Wis., appeared to have the race in hand, passing each intermediate timing point quicker than any of the previous skaters in the 1,000 meters, including the winner, Nikolai Guliaev. He could have won.

"That's something we'll never know," said Jansen's brother, Mike.

Then, on the backstretch of the final lap, he tipped over on the outside edge of his right skate and fell.

He sat on the ice and rocked back and forth with his face buried in his hands. Occasionally, he would stare skyward in disbelief, looking for answers. There were none.

"I felt really good through the whole thing," Jansen said. "I came out of that turn at 600 meters and felt very, very strong in the backstretch. I felt like I was accelerating, and I put my right skate down, and it caught the outer edge. I couldn't roll back over, and I was down."

Coach Mike Crowe and teammate Nick Thometz finally helped Jansen off the ice, although he was unhurt physically. The pain was mental, and it was excruciating. It was apparent in his face.

After he left the ice, he embraced his fiancee, Canadian speed skater Natalie Grenier, and cried in her arms.

He fell, too, last Sunday, just hours after his 27-year-old sister, Jane, died of leukemia. That time he fell on the first turn of the 500 meters, one of his best events. He chose to stay for the 1,000 meters rather than return home, but now he goes home without a medal.

"I've had so much support all week, from friends, family and people I don't know around the world, in the United States and Canada," Jansen said. "It's just really helped a lot. A lot of them said how proud they were of me — to go out there and try my best. It really lifted my spirits."

Gooden takes arbitration pay cut

Associated Press

Dwight Gooden lost his case, Frank Tanana won his pitch and Frank Viola began throwing as spring training opened while salary arbitration hearings neared an end.

Gooden will take a $100,000 pay cut from the New York Mets, who will pay their ace pitcher $1.4 million instead of the $1.65 million he sought.

Arbitrator Richard Bloch made his decision Thursday, a day after a four-hour hearing in New York. Gooden, who missed two months while undergoing cocaine rehabilitation, went 15-7 with a 3.21 earned run average.

"We felt the hospitalization, arranged and paid for, and the salary paid demonstrated that we were in his corner," Mets vice president Al Harazin said. "Support and understanding, yes; reward, no."

GOODEN SAID he is already looking toward the future. He will check into spring camp on Sunday, the official reporting date for Mets pitchers and catchers.

"Now that the case is over I'm looking forward to having a strong 1988 season," Gooden said. "Both sides handled the case professionally and it could have gone either way. As far as I'm concerned, the Mets are still No. 1 with me."

The Minnesota Twins, baseball's No. 1 team last season, and 12 other clubs opened camp Thursday. Viola, the World Series MVP, was among nine Twins who worked out on their own.

The presence of Billy Martin, back for his fifth term as manager of the New York Yankees, overshadowed the arrival of his pitchers and catchers.

"People think of me as Billy The Kid. And that's the way I am. I'm the same Billy," he said.

TANANA, HOWEVER, has changed. He's now a millionaire.

Tanana, 15-10 with a 3.91 ERA for Detroit, was was awarded $1.1 million by arbitrator Frederick Reel. It was a $437,500 raise and the sixth-highest salary ever won in arbitration. Detroit had offered $800,000.

Gooden's loss and Tanana's victory left the arbitration scorecard at owners 10, players five.

Bob Boone of California, Tim Burke of Montreal and Mark Thurmond of Detroit are scheduled for hearings today, the last three arbitration cases this year.

Three players in arbitration settled Thursday. Shortstop Steve Jeltz agreed to a one-year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies for $215,000 plus $25,000 in incentives just before his hearing was about to begin.

Mark Langston, who led the American League in strikeouts in 1987, accepted the Seattle Mariners' offer of $820,000 plus $42,000 in performance bonuses.

First baseman Sid Bream came to terms with the Pittsburgh Pirates for $360,000, plus in $25,000 in award bonuses.

ALSO THURSDAY, the Kansas City Royals re-signed free-agent Steve Balboni, a first baseman-designated hitter, to a one-year contract. He became a free agent when the Royals did not offer him a contract by Dec. 20.

Don Fehr, the players' union head, did not view Gooden's case as a landmark.

"I'm not going to make any sweeping statements until I've heard the arguments that were made," Fehr said. "We've had no procedure with drugs since the owners canceled the agreement. There are a lot of considerations and I'm not yet ready to draw any conclusions."

Barry Rona, chief of the owners' Player Relations Committee, said: "What the case demonstrates is that Dwight Gooden is extremely fortunate that he is employed by major league baseball.

CHAPS——

Midland achieved the 20-win mark for the 11th time in 13 seasons, failing only in its first year when it was 17-12 and in former coach Jerry Stone's first season, when the team was 16-15.

Going into this evening's 5:30 p.m. game against Clarendon College in Chaparral Center, Midland College is 20-6 with a 9-4 conference mark. The Clarendon game is the twice-postponed tilt against the Bulldogs. It was originally scheduled for Jan. 28, but delayed because the Clarendon coach's son was hospitalized. Midland thought the game was reset for 2:30 p.m. last Saturday, but Clarendon arrived a couple of hours after that, claiming the game was set for 7:30 p.m.

Clarendon was blasted Thursday night by Odessa College, 102-64, and likely will be a bit unhappy about having to stay over to play Midland. But the Chaps are tuning up for post-season play and they did it with ease in Snyder.

With barely time for a deep breath, the Chaps make their final regular season appearance Monday, hosting South Plains College at 7:30 p.m. in Chap Center. In their last meeting, SPC won 71-66 in overtime at Levelland. Final regular season game is at Borger Thursday, when the Chaps take on Frank Phillips College.

The Region V Tournament begins March 3 in Chaparral Center with Odessa, New Mexico Junior College, South Plains, and Midland representing the Western Conference. They'll go against the top four teams from the Northern Conference, with the championship game set for March 5.

Cooper's Tom Toney is the only other 4-5A player with a scoring title shot. He is eight more points behind Lewis. However, Toney needs 26 points while hoping Marschall and Lewis are held in single digits.

Midland Lee's Darren Dortch, another junior, doesn't have a chance to catch the leaders, but he has moved into fifth place in the scoring race and is one of the hottest players in the league down the stretch. Dortch is averaging 14.3 points per game and has scored in double figures in eight straight, averaging 15.6 points over that span. He has not been under 17 points in his last four games.

Lewis has 14 straight games in double figures, raising his season average from 13.1 to 15.2 over that span. Lewis and Dortch could be dominant forces in 4-5A next year.

LEE——

Sherry Blackwell led Monterey with 18 points while Michelle Manning had 15 for the Bobcats.

San Angelo played to a 9-9 tie until Monterey went on a 7-1 spurt and the Bobcats never got closer than five points the rest of the game.

Monterey, 23-7, advances to the area playoffs next week against El Paso Eastwood. The winner of that game advances to the Region I tournament in Midland Feb. 26-27. San Angelo ends the season with a 24-5 record.

Lakers leave Rockets in pad

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

The Los Angeles Lakers have a good idea about how to handle the Rockets in Houston — leave them standing at the launching pad.

For the second straight time, the Lakers shocked Houston with a 41-point first quarter Thursday night, and the Rockets never recovered, losing 111-96.

"A lot of teams expect us to run but nobody's stopped us yet," said Byron Scott, who scored 11 of his 27 points as Los Angeles grabbed 41-21 lead. "We have so many weapons on this team, it's hard to do."

It was the Lakers' third straight victory this season over the Rockets and their seventh in a row over two years. In their last meeting in Houston on Jan. 18, Los Angeles led 41-22 after one quarter and won 121-110.

"We just came out ready," Scott said. "We've got so much respect for them. We knew we had to come out hard and get ahead early."

"We simply got off to a great start," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "The game wasn't decided in the first quarter, but we did put a lot of distance between them and us."

Houston got as close as 68-61 with 9:25 to go in the third quarter, but that was as close as the Rockets could get.

"I looked up and we were already down by 15 points," said Houston center Akeem Olajuwon, who had 20 points and 20 rebounds. "That puts a lot of pressure on you."

Spurs 122, Suns 114

San Antonio broke a five-game losing streak and handed Phoenix its 15th loss in 17 outings as Alvin Robertson scored 31 points and Johnny Dawkins 27.

The Spurs, behind 104-101 with 5:48 remaining, took a 114-104 lead with a 13-0 run. Robertson scored six points and Dawkins five during the spurt.

Two 3-point goals by Walter Davis, who scored 21 points for the Suns, got them within five points with 1:02 to play, but San Antonio stayed comfortably in front with free throws in the final minute.

Mike Mitchell scored a season-high 26 points and Frank Brickowski had 22 for the Spurs. Jay Humphries had 26 points for Phoenix.

Pistons 108, SuperSonics 95

At Pontiac, Mich., Detroit won its sixth straight to move a half-game ahead of idle Atlanta in the Central Division on the strength of Vinnie Johnson's 27 points.

Knicks 108, Kings 104

New York won its ninth straight home game, its best showing since 1976, as Gerald Wilkins scored 18 of his season-high 39 points in the fourth quarter, including the game-winning basket with 1:12 left.

The Knicks also got a big defensive play with three seconds remaining when Patrick Ewing blocked a shot by Ed Pinckney with New York leading 106-104. It was Ewing's seventh blocked shot of the game.

Sacramento had tied the game at 104-104 with 1:30 left on two free throws by Otis Thorpe, who led the Kings with 30 points and 17 rebounds. But Wilkins, whose previous high this season was 29 points, drove the baseline for the go-ahead points.

Pacers 88, Cavaliers 83

Indiana's Steve Stipanovich drove around Brad Daugherty for the go-ahead basket with 1:11 left and the Pacers held the Cavaliers scoreless the rest of the way to win their sixth straight game.

The game was tied 19 times and also had 19 lead changes. The Pacers, who tied their club-record for consecutive home victories at eight, opened an 83-76 lead with 3:17 remaining before Cleveland tied the game.

Stanton bombs Van Horn, 55-13

From Staff Reports

You might say Stanton's Lady Buffaloes had the edge over Van Horn Thursday night in a Class 2A bi-district basketball playoff in Monahans. Buffs 55, Van Horn 13.

Stanton, who got a game high 20 points from Kristi Fryar and 12 from Kody Newman, jumped to a 27-7 first half lead and Van Horn didn't score again until the fourth quarter.

Stanton is now 26-4 for the year and will meet the winner of tonight's Wall-Stamford bi-district game in the area round next week. Van Horn, the 5-2A runnerup, ends the season with a 9-14 record.

In Andrews, Crane's girls made a quick playoff exit with a 55-34 Class 3A bi-district loss to Slaton. Kenda Johnston led Slaton with 28 points while Monica Allen led Crane with 18 points.

Crane ends the season with a 19-8 record.

Van Horn (13): Angie Sanchez 7, Chello Guillen 1, Ardra Morse 1, Angela Johnson 2, Raquel Ramirez 1, Melinda Flores 1. Totals: 4-5-13.

Stanton (55): Kaki Elmore 9, Kelli Galespie 4, Karen Graves 4, Stacie Tom 1, Kristi Fryar 20, Heather Colburn 2, Kody Newman 12, Tricia Gonzales 1, Courtney Duke 2. Totals: 24-7-55.

Aztecs stun No. 7 BYU

Williams' OT bank shot turns trick

Associated Press

College Basketball

Seventh-ranked Brigham Young, which began the month undefeated, has two losses all of a sudden.

San Diego State, which had lost big to BYU when they met earlier in Utah, upset the Cougars 82-80 Thursday night on a seven-foot bank shot by Bryan Williams with three seconds left in overtime.

"Nothing's easy in this business, but give them (the Aztecs) credit," said BYU Coach Ladell Anderson, whose team fell to 20-2 overall and 9-1 in the Western Athletic Conference.

"We beat them by 27 on our court (in Provo on Jan. 9). I studied that tape and we actually didn't play all that well then. We're better now ... and they're better," he said.

San Diego State scored the first seven points of overtime to take a 77-70 lead with 2:20 to go, but Brigham Young recovered to tie the score 80-80 on a rebound tip-in by Andy Tolson with 28 seconds to go.

San Diego State took a timeout with 16 seconds remaining, and Williams controlled the ball, driving the lane before putting up the winning shot.

"I really wanted this game badly," Williams said. "BYU's at the top, they're winning the league. They were undefeated in conference."

San Diego State, 10-13 and 3-8, upset a top-ranked team for the second time this season. The Aztecs beat New Mexico, then ranked No. 18, 64-59 on Jan. 14.

No. 3 Arizona 103, Southern Cal 68

Sean Elliott scored 19 points and No. 3 Arizona clinched a tie for the Pacific-10 crown with its easy victory.

Arizona, which handed the Trojans their worst defeat ever (92-48) last month in Tucson, led by as many as 37 points down the stretch as it improved to 24-2 overall and 13-1 in the Pac-10.

Five Wildcats scored in double figures, including Tom Tolbert with 16 points, Steve Kerr 14, Anthony Cook 13 and Harvey Mason 10.

Ronnie Coleman had a career-high 23 points for the Trojans, who fell to 3-10 and 5-17.

No. 11 UNLV 94, Utah St. 74

Gerald Paddio scored 23 points and Stacey Augmon added 17 as Nevada-Las Vegas regained the Pacific Coast Athletic Association lead.

The Runnin' Rebels, 22-3 overall and 11-2 in the PCAA, used a tenacious defense to hold the Aggies scoreless for seven minutes midway through the first half and scored 19 straight points en route to a 45-22 halftime lead.

Jarvis Basnight, Paddio, Augmon, Keith James, Richard Robinson and Clint Rossum contributed to UNLV's scoring spree.

UNLV took a 26-point edge two minutes into the second half but saw the lead melt to 70-58 with 6:25 remaining.

Utah State, 16-7 overall and 11-3 in the conference, was led by Reid Newey, who scored 19 points, including two 3-pointers during the Aggies' second-half comeback, and Kevin Nixon, who added 15.

No. 14 N.C. State 88, Clemson 63

Sophomore Brian Howard scored 26 points and grabbed nine rebounds, both career highs, and Chucky Brown added 25 for North Carolina State, 18-5 overall and 6-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"I just tried to play a good game. The shots just started going in," said Howard, who made all three of his 3-point shots.

"Our game plan in the first half was to shoot the 3-point shot," Coach Jim Valvano said. "I should have told Brian Howard that years ago."

Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said his team played poorly defensively in allowing the Wolfpack to shoot 64.9 percent from the field. Clemson, losing its sixth straight, fell to 11-11 and 1-8 in the ACC.

"I am disappointed in our defense," he said. "There was no desire, no grit. There were too many uncontested shots."

No. 17 Bradley 83, Creighton 67

Hersey Hawkins, the nation's leading scorer, scored 35 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Bradley to its Missouri Valley Conference victory.

"He killed us," Creighton Coach Tony Barone said. "He got a ton of baskets on loose balls. What that shows is his work ethic is outstanding."

Bradley, 18-4 overall and 8-2 in the conference, scored seven straight points early in the second half to take a 40-31 lead.

Creighton had dubbed the game "Hershey Chocolate Night" and handed out chocolate bars to symbolize the Jays' quest for "sweet revenge" for Bradley's 98-68 victory last Saturday.

Creighton, 13-13 overall and 5-7 in the conference, hurt itself with 17 turnovers, many of which turned into easy fast-break baskets for Bradley.

No. 19 Wyoming 79, Air Force 63

Wyoming, 19-5 overall and 8-5 in the Western Athletic Conference, allowed Air Force, 11-11 overall and 4-7 in the league, just 23 points in the second half and held the Falcons scoreless over the final 4:30.

"We had to keep them outside in the second half with our defense ... We attempted to control the game in the second half, and eventually wear them down," Coach Benny Dees said.

Wyoming's Fennis Dembo scored 24 points, including three of four free throws down the stretch.

"I consider this game to be one of our best road victories of the season," Dees said.

It's Couples...or Watson in lead

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples had the lead in the first round of the $650,000 Andy Williams Open golf tournament. At least that's what the scoreboard indicated.

But a pretty good argument could be made that Tom Watson is no worse than in a tie for the lead going into today's second round.

Watson shot a 7-under-par 65 on the South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club. And that layout, overlooking cliffs and crags above the Pacific, generally is considered at least two shots harder than the North course, where Couples shot a 63.

"On the North course, if you don't shoot 68, you feel like you're losing ground," said Couples, who closed with three straight birdies.

"On the South course, anything under par is good and a score in the 60s is great," he said.

Watson, however, was having none of it.

"The South is probably a shot or two harder," Watson said. "But Fred Couples is the leader. He had a 63. And he won the $50,000 (zero coupon) bond" that goes to the daily leader.

The players will switch courses today before the field of 156 is cut for the final two rounds at the longer, tougher South course.

All share Jansen's tears

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The distance was dissolving, evaporating meter by meter under the urging of Dan Jansen's skates.

Jansen was on his way to 1,000 meters Thursday night and traveling there in the fastest possible fashion, the ice swallowed up in huge gulps by his smooth, easy strides as he sped around the Olympic Oval.

He was skating on automatic pilot, taking a textbook trip around the rink, negotiating the treacherous turns, gathering speed, hustling down the straightaway into the next turn, through the backstretch and into another turn.

First came 100 meters.

JANSEN BARELY made it that far in his first race Sunday, when he fell in the first turn. Not this time. This time, by 100 meters Jansen's jets were firing.

This was his last chance for a medal, his last chance to mark the memory of his sister, Jane, who died Sunday morning, hours before his 500-meter disaster. Now, four nights later, Dan was skating for Jane again and this time everything was working for him. It was the perfect trip.

On to 200 meters.

His split time was 16.80 seconds, fastest in the race at that point. He was leaning into the turns with precision, his body bent at the waist, his hooded, skintight silver and orange suit making him look like a skating Spiderman. His left arm was behind his back, his right swinging in perfect rhythm with his purposeful, powerful strides.

The 1,000 is not Jansen's best distance but he had no choice in the matter. The 500 was history. This would have to be his Olympic moment and so he was making it work for him.

Speed skating is simple. It's you against the clock. There is no judge frowning at your form, no referee to blame for a bad call. It's just you, the ice and the clock.

And for Dan Jansen, there was Jane.

After the race, he would fly home for her wake and funeral. All week, there had been messages of support from across Canada and the United States from people he did not know, people who wanted him to know how sad they felt about his sister's death.

Another turn. Another straightaway.

It takes 2½ trips around the Olympic Oval to travel 1,000 meters. 2½ trips over the ice, not unlike the thousands he had made preparing for these Games. After they were over, there would be another trip for Jansen, the long, sad trip home to West Allis, Wis.

Three hundred meters. Four hundred meters. Five hundred meters. Everything on target. "I felt really good the whole time," Jansen would say later. "Just real smooth."

At 600 meters, Jansen's split was clocked at 44.02 seconds, still the fastest time in the race at that checkpoint. The medal dream and a happy ending for this sad story seemed well within reach.

AND THEN, incredibly, disaster.

Skating alone on the backstretch, Jansen's feet suddenly went out from under him. He had lost an edge, skater's jargon for putting too much weight on the outside of a skate and throwing himself off balance.

Down he went, sprawled on all fours, skidding over the ice like a bumper car spinning out of control. When his ride ended, Jansen sat there on the ice, his legs spread wide, his mouth open in pained astonishment, for what seemed an eternity.

"I could not believe it," he said.

Slowly, he left the ice, his head leaning on the shoulder of teammate Nick Thometz. It was over now and as he reached the starting line, he embraced his fiancee, Canadian speed skater Natalie Grenier.

Then a week of emotion caught up at last with Dan Jensen and he began to cry. He wasn't the only one.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Both decisions and success will come more easily. Financial worries should be a thing of the past! Building your savings will still take careful money management. A relationship you thought was over will be revived. Do not be surprised if it is better than ever! Continue to do things for others, but also look out for your own interests. The opportunities that come to you are the ones you should pursue. Climb that career mountain now!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Peter Strauss, director Robert Altman, actress Sandy Duncan, hockey star Phil Esposito, actress Jennifer O'Neill, actor Sidney Poitier, designer Hubert de Givenchy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A goodwill gesture pays off handsomely. Stick to your diet and exercise resolutions. Someone close to you wants an accounting. Your secret fears about a loved one are unfounded. Have more faith.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your personal plans can be advanced, thanks to an influential person's cooperation. A change of lifestyle benefits you and your loved ones. Adopt a positive approach to anything you undertake today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A great time to beautify your home. Encourage close associates to air their views. Show an older person your willingness to learn. Someone asks personal questions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Domestic affairs require the lion's share of your attention. An investment you make in a hobby could lead to a second income. Seek experts' advice, however, before getting in too deep.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An excellent time to work on secret projects. People who must work today find that personnel matters go exceptionally well. Think of others' welfare first. Romance is a source of happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Much can be accomplished today. Romance may not be on the horizon, but friendship certainly is. A day trip proves entertaining or profitable — maybe both.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Think of yourself as an independent person and make more decisions on your own. Mate or partner will feel new respect. Take care of outstanding debts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Someone who owes you money may be hard to track down. Friends offer leads. Singles will find this a particularly rewarding day. Curb a tendency to be overly critical. Boost mate's ego.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Adopt a positive approach to the projects you tackle today. Experimentation can be highly rewarding. Family life is a source of deep satisfaction. A good day to talk about family finances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Business plans are unlikely to be carried through on schedule. Delays may be unavoidable if traveling by car. Do not fret. Flexibility will help you make real progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Forget about work and concentrate on family needs. At home entertainment holds more appeal than going out. A generation gap is easily bridged today. Loved ones relax and share their innermost thoughts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Check appointments with influential people before you start out. A change of scenery adds to your enjoyment. Visiting a museum is a good way to pass time without spending much money.

There should be a law against players who bid badly profiting from the error of their ways. We do not know what South was trying to accomplish in the auction. Nevertheless, he serendipitously landed in the right strain, albeit a level too low.

South's jump to two no trump deserves an award as the year's worst bid. With no tenaces and a weak doubleton, he had every reason to suppose that no trump would play better from his partner's side of the table. North's three diamonds inquired about South's major-suit holding, and his redouble confirmed the ace of diamonds. Why South suppressed his heart holding and near solid club suit during the rest of the auction will forever remain shrouded in mystery.

As a result of East's double of three diamonds, West had no trouble getting his side off to its best start. Since there was no need to duck if suits were breaking, and no point to ducking if they were not, declarer rose with dummy's ace. He cashed the ace-king of hearts and crossed back to the table with the jack of clubs to see if the hearts would split out.

When that suit failed to break, declarer came to hand with the king of spades and tried to run his clubs. West's stopper in the suit was a considerable disappointment, but all was not lost. East was forced to come down to three spades and a diamond, and dummy was reduced to the same holding. Declarer carefully led the ten of spades to the ace and, reading the distribution perfectly, exited with the jack of diamonds. East was forced to win and concede the contract by leading from his J-7 of spades into the board's Q-9 tenace.

CBS' Douglas Edwards retiring

Edwards

NEW YORK (AP) — Douglas Edwards, Walter Cronkite's predecessor and the nation's first nightly television news anchor, is retiring April 1 after 46 years with CBS.

Edwards, who covered World War II on radio with the legendary Edward R. Murrow, says he's "a little sad, but exhilirated" about retirement.

"I've had a daily TV news report without a break since April 15, 1948, which is a record, almost 40 years now," Edwards said Thursday. He laughed and added: "That and a dollar will get you a ride on the subway."

"He's been solid and accurate and straightforward and reliable through the years," said Mike Wallace, who worked with Edwards on radio nearly 50 years ago, before the two met again at CBS. "He has not been flashy, and he has not been sensational, he's been solid."

In 1948, then-CBS President Frank Stanton tapped Edwards to anchor "Doug Edwards and the News." After 14 years in the job, he was succeeded by Cronkite on the "CBS Evening News."

Edwards, 70, still does the network newsbreaks and a weekly show, "For Our Times," as well as regular radio broadcasts.

"Doug Edwards has been a friend and a mentor since before I joined CBS News," said Dan Rather, only the third TV news anchor in the network's history. "He's a giant in our craft, and all of us in television and radio news are indebted to him."

"His name has been synonymous with CBS News since the dawn of television," said CBS News President Howard Stringer. "Doug will be sorely missed, his accomplishments long treasured."

Edwards already had 10 years of broadcast experience when he joined CBS Radio in 1942 at age 25. He joined Murrow's staff in London in the final months of World War II. Afterwards, he became Paris bureau chief. A interview on the local New York CBS station about his foreign coverage impressed CBS executives.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock diva Madonna has a date on Broadway in her new play, "Speed-The-Plow," even though the curtain has yet to go up on the production at a small Lincoln Center theater.

"Speed-The-Plow" begins preview performances March 29 at Lincoln Center's 299-seat Mitzi Newhouse Theater and will run through April 24. An official opening date has not been announced.

It will reopen April 26 at the 1,058-seat Royale Theater on Broadway.

Ticket requests have been so overwhelming that the computerized ticket agency Telecharge has installed a special number for the Broadway version, said show spokesman Merle Debuskey.

The David Mamet play, also starring Joe Mantegna and Ron Silver, is about two Hollywood producers and their office "temp."

Bacall

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall says Humphrey Bogart did not give their marriage much chance after they wed when she was 20 years old.

But the union produced a son and daughter and did not end until Bogart's death 12 years after the marriage. That's longevity by Hollywood standards. And Miss Bacall credits it to Bogart's determination not to allow work to separate them.

"I never went on location to shoot a film," she said in an interview in the current issue of Us magazine.

"The agreement before we got married was that I would not take off and leave him behind. When he went on location I went with him," the sultry-voiced actress said.

Bogart, who was a quarter-century older than Miss Bacall when they were married in 1945, once said he had "figured I would leave him in five years, because I didn't know anything about life and the world at that point," said Miss Bacall.

LONDON (AP) — Director John Boorman says his movie "Hope and Glory," which received five Academy Award nominations, almost was not finished because of financial problems.

"Hope and Glory" won best picture and best director from the Los Angeles Film Critics and 13 nominations Feb. 9 from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts. Its Oscar nominations announced Wednesday included best picture, direction and script.

Boorman, 55, recalled the day in June 1986 when he found himself $3 million short of the $9 million needed to finance the movie.

"I was going down to the set on a Friday morning at 7 o'clock to give the men all their notices to stop the picture," he said in a telephone interview from his Paris apartment.

But both the money and a studio, Columbia, were eventually found. The critics and word of mouth did the rest.

Alda

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Alda, star of the "M-A-S-H" television series, makes his debut this weekend in advertising for IBM, and may team up with other cast members from the popular show already pitching the company's computers.

International Business Machines Corp. said Thursday that Alda, who played wisecracking surgeon Hawkeye Pierce in "M-A-S-H," signed a multiyear agreement earlier this month to appear in its commercials.

The company would not say how much Alda was being paid.

The first ads featuring Alda will appear Saturday during ABC-TV's Olympics broadcasts, IBM said, and will continue on several programs through April.

Alda will initially appear alone in the IBM ads. The company eventually plans to work him into ads featuring other former "M-A-S-H" actors, said Dave McGovern, an advertising executive for IBM.

IBM launched advertising last April for a new family of personal computers featuring seven former "M-A-S-H" cast members, including Gary Burghoff, who played Radar O'Reilly; Harry Morgan, who was Col. Sherman Potter; and Loretta Swit who played Hot Lips Houlihan. In the ads, they played office co-workers.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A television station that preempted two minutes of "Jeopardy" to report on a plane crash later broadcast the missing game-show footage during its news programs after viewers complained, station officials said.

"Viewers missed less than two minutes of 'Jeopardy.' But those were the final minutes, and so we replayed them," said WXFL-TV general manager Jim Saunders.

Two people were killed Tuesday when a twin-engine plane slammed into a house in Dunedin.

On Wednesday, WXFL broadcast the end of "Jeopardy" twice, once during the station's noon and 6 p.m. news shows.

Saunders said he did not know how many complaint calls were received Tuesday, but a source at the station told the Tampa Tribune the number was "well over 300."

TEC flooded with tax complaints

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Employers locally and across the state are hopping mad about large increases in unemployment taxes and have inundated Texas Employment Commission offices with complaints.

Bills for 1988 unemployment taxes, mailed to Texas employers a little over a week ago, have already generated 8,000 telephone complaints, according to Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers of Austin. The problem, says Nabers, is that more than 60 percent of the tax notices showed at least a 200 percent increase.

In addition to the 8,000 telephone calls Nabers added that her office had also receives 40 to 50 letters daily: "And I don't think all the notices have reached employers yet."

Locally, Susan Thomas, assistant office manager of the TEC's Midland Tax Office said her office also handled a number of calls. "We received quite a few calls, especially the first week. Quite a lot of concern was expressed over the rates," she said. "We have seven auditors in our office, and we were all pretty busy answering calls for three or four days." She added that she expects calls to increase during April, when employers must pay the first quarter installment.

She said an employer with one employee who earned $7,000 a year would have paid .44 percent or $30.80 in 1987. In 1988, that same employer would pay 1.41 percent, or $112. Along with the higher tax rates, TEC raised the wage base from $7,000 to $8,000.

Thomas and Nabers both attributed the jump in unemployment taxes to the high unemployment the state suffered when oil prices plunged from $31 a barrel to a low of $9 a barrel in 1986. In order to continue paying unemployment claims, the TEC had to borrow from the Federal government, and now owes $550 million that must be repaid through employer taxes. Thomas noted that the higher taxes are also meant to replenish the fund.

Nabers said that in 1986, the "blue collar" workers suffered the most layoffs, while higher-salaried middle and upper management workers suffered more layoffs in 1987. "Since claims are based on salary, the trust fund was hit harder last year by the higher benefits being paid."

Despite advance notices as well as stories in the media, Nabers said many employers were still caught by surprise. "The average employer either didn't realize it was coming, or he thought it was going to happen to the other guy," she said.

One Midland employer who registered her unhappiness was Donna Baker, an assistant at Abbott Builders. "I'm hot about it," she said. "The basic thing is, with the bust, we've had to lay off people to keep the doors open, and our rates still skyrocket. We went from 300 employees to 25, and our rate's at the maximum, 8.77 percent. With those rates, we can't hire people back the way we normally would. You can't get what you need to run the business as efficiently."

As a result of the increase, Baker and her employers have contacted State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, as well as the TEC, and plan to push for legislation to change the benefit structure. "Craddick was sympathetic, but he said there wasn't anything he could do," Baker said. "He said businesses would have to get together and push for new legislation, and that would still take time."

Baker and her bosses also plan to get involved in the Texas Business Council, which Nabers helped organize. The Council is a new organization that will tour the state with programs designed to bring together tax payers and high-placed representatives of the state's six largest taxing and regulating agencies. The programs are meant to allow the state officials to offer suggestions on ways to cut taxes and other business costs, Nabers explained. The program will be in Midland on May 26.

The Business Council is one piece of good news the TEC has to offer Texas employers, Nabers stated. Other positive indicators she offered include the fact that job orders placed with the TEC are already up 77 percent over the same time last year, the number of unemployment claims being filed has fallen 28 percent so far in 1988, and payouts have been reduced two-thirds. "I do think we're seeing things turning around, but we still have to pay for last year," Nabers said. "Next year will definitely be better, but I think the next year (1990) will be the year we're looking for."

Oil prices off as traders test market

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices slid lower Thursday, as traders tested the market to find its new trading range.

Contracts for March delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $16.45 per barrel, down 16 cents from Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among refined products, wholesale contracts for unleaded gasoline closed at 45.97 cents a gallon, down 0.69 cent, while wholesale heating oil was down half a penny at 45.08 cents a gallon.

"It was a big volume day," said Stephen J. McKiernan, president of the McKiernan & Co. commodity brokerage firm.

He said many traders were selling the market short in anticipation that it would head lower, at least over the next few days.

Also, he said, "there's the same underlying bearishness we've had for months," mainly because of abundant supplies.

Reagan sees no recession; Factory utilization flat

Associated Press

The Reagan administration is predicting the economy will plug along without a recession for the foreseeable future, while manufacturing continues to show strength.

President Reagan's $1.1 trillion federal budget request to Congress on Thursday contained no forecast of recession, outlining sluggish growth in 1988 followed by a rebound in 1989 and beyond.

Separately Thursday, the Federal Reserve said the nation's industrial operating rate remained at its highest level in nearly eight years in January — 82.2 percent of capacity.

The administration derided as "greatly exaggerated" the recession fears stirred by the record 508-point drop in the New York Stock Exchange's Dow Jones industrial average on Oct. 19, contending that the economy had escaped with "few signs of serious damage."

The administration predicted the gross national product, the total output of goods and services, would expand at a modest rate of 2.4 percent this year, down from 3.8 percent growth in 1987, when measured from the fourth quarter of 1986.

"In the last couple of years, the administration has lightened the tint on their rose-colored glasses although their outlook is still a lot rosier than we think is justified," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., one of the country's leading economic forecasting firms.

In the capacity utilization report, the Federal Reserve said cutbacks in the production of steel and autos offset gains in other areas.

University leases net $2.1 million

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Approximately $2.1 million in leases were sold Thursday at the University Lands' sealed auction at the Midland Hilton, according to Wallie Gravitt of the University Lands.

Gravitt, manager of the system's oil, gas and mineral interests in Midland, said he was pleased with the results. Ten companies bid on 35,329 acres offered in Crane, Loving, Pecos, Terrell, Ward and Winkler counties. Of that offering, the Board for Lease sold 60 tracts totaling 18,904 acres — just over half.

Dollar rises in lackluster trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against major foreign currencies in Europe early today in lackluster trading. Gold prices fell.

The dollar was underpinned by recent signs of U.S. economic expansion, said a trader in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Although the dollar shed some early gains, it was holding fairly steady in the absence of market-moving news, traders said.

Midmorning dollar rates in Europe compared with rates late Thursday:

—1.7080 West German marks, up from 1.7040

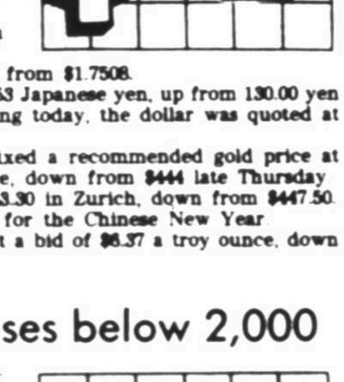
—1.4035 Swiss francs, up from 1.4010

—5.7735 French francs, up from 5.7555

—1.9236 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9130

—1,257.15 Italian lire, up from 1,254.63

—1.2715 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2690



The British pound fell to $1.7460 from $1.7508.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 130.53 Japanese yen, up from 130.00 yen on Thursday. In later London trading today, the dollar was quoted at 130.35 yen.

London's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $443.45 a troy ounce, down from $444 late Thursday.

The metal traded at a bid of $443.30 in Zurich, down from $447.50.

Hong Kong markets were closed for the Chinese New Year.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $6.37 a troy ounce, down from $6.43.

Pickens pursuing 15 percent of Texaco

By BARNABY J. FEDER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — T. Boone Pickens, the Texas oilman and corporate raider, has notified Texaco Inc. that he is seeking clearance from antitrust regulators to buy up to 15 percent of the company.

Texaco said Thursday that it was not clear how much stock Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership intended to buy or when the purchases would be made. Texaco also said it had not talked to Pickens but hoped he would support management's plans for the company if he became a major shareholder.

Pickens said in a telephone interview Thursday that he would not comment on his investment goals but that he would support the efforts of Carl C. Icahn, Texaco's largest shareholder, to purge Texaco's bylaws of anti-takeover measures fashioned by the present management.

Icahn, who controls nearly 15 percent of Texaco's shares, and four associates have said they will run against five directors seeking re-election to Texaco's 14-member board at the annual meeting in May.

"Poison pills and golden parachutes are not in the interests of shareholders," Pickens said, referring to provisions that force a company to go deep into debt and make

Texaco may sell refinery stake to Saudis

LONDON (AP) — Texaco Inc. plans to sell a stake of about 50 percent in its extensive U.S. gulf coast refining operations to Saudi Arabia for more than $1 billion, according to the International Herald Tribune.

A final agreement between Petromin, the Saudi Arabian oil holding arm, and Texaco is expected to be reached within a month, the Herald Tribune reported Thursday, quoting an unidentified Texaco executive and unidentified Arab oil executives attending an annual conference of the Institute of Petroleum in London.

In White Plains, N.Y., a spokesman at Texaco's headquarters refused to confirm or deny the accuracy of the report.

"On Jan. 8, Texaco announced as part of its restructuring plan that it would aggressively move foward to get partners in joint ventures based on its downstream operations," said K. Peter Maneri. "At this stage, it would be inappropriate to issue public statement regarding those discussions."

Saudi Arabia has been considering taking a large stake in the refining and marketing arms of one of the U.S. major oil companies which were once shareholders in the Arabian American Oil Co., or Aramco, oil industry officials said.

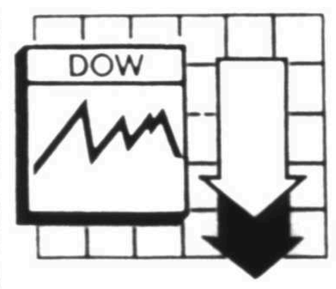
Those companies are Chevron Corp., Exxon Corp. Mobil Corp., and Texaco.

Over the past few months, all four companies have been given preferential access to Saudi Arabia's crude oil at market-related prices, which are below officials prices, while most other companies have had to pay official prices for the oil.

Texaco has been the largest single buyer of Saudi crude oil for the past year, oil industry sources said.

Stock market closes below 2,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground in late trading Thursday as traders apparently shied away from the 2,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.



Dow Jones's average of 30 blue chips dropped 14.58 to 1,986.41 after closing slightly above 2,000 in the week's first two sessions.

Declines outnumbered advances by about 7 to 6 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 688 up, 813 down and 478 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 151.43 million shares, against 176.83 million in the previous session.

Analysts said there was little in the economic news to prompt traders to take big positions either way.

The market rallied last week and Monday as some of investors' worst fears about the business outlook eased.

But expectations for economic growth and corporate profits remain subdued, and many market participants were evidently reluctant to buy stocks with the Dow hovering around the 2,000 level.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $10.31 billion, or 0.40 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .58 to 145.14.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 175.83 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 1.61 to 296.98, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.30 at 257.91.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market edged up .35 to 355.63. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 277.92, down 1.17.

Big Hill SPR facility included in '89 budget

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Construction of the Big Hill Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) facility near Beaumont would continue on schedule in fiscal 1989 under the budget request President Reagan sent to Congress Thursday.

The proposal contains money for continued leeching of the salt dome where oil supplies will be stored to guard against disruption of oil supplies during a national emergency. That funding is part of the President's $160 million request for SPR storage facility development by the Energy Department.

"I am cautiously optimistic that Big Hill will remain on schedule," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont.

Brooks and other members of Congress from oil-producing states successfully fought off several attempts by the Reagan administration to scrap plans for the Big Hill facility and to cut back on congressionally mandated fill rates.

Now, however, with oil imports nearing 40 percent of current demand in the United States, the SPR program has taken on new significance. Brooks said it appears likely the storage facilities on the Texas and Louisiana Gulf Coast will be filled with 750,000 million barrels of oil by 1991, the amount agreed by then-President Nixon and Congress in 1975.

On Thursday, Reagan asked Congress for $334 million in fiscal 1989 to continue filling the SPR at the current rate of 50,000 barrels a day.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Budget plan boosts AIDS research, air safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan proposed his smallest Pentagon increase but sharply higher spending for AIDS research and airline safety in a $1.1 trillion fiscal 1989 budget.

The spending plan revealed on Thursday only hints of the "Reagan revolution" years as it strives to comply with the administration's agreement with congressional leaders last November to reduce the federal deficit.

Budget calls for cut in agriculture spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's 1989 budget proposal calls for a 5 percent cut in agriculture spending, including sharp reductions for two major rural development agencies.

But the budget packaged unveiled Thursday does not call for new legislation or cuts in most farm commodity programs. Officials said the one major exception will be an administration attempt to overhaul the U.S. sugar program, which includes protective import quotas and price supports.

Ford Motor earnings jump 19 percent

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s earnings jumped 19 percent in the fourth quarter and 41 percent for all of 1987 as the No. 2 automaker outearned General Motors Corp. for the second straight year.

The results announced Thursday were good news to Ford workers, who will earn record profit-sharing checks, but some experts on Wall Street had expected even better earnings from the company.

After the earnings announcement, Ford's stock fell, finishing down $2.25 per share to $42.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Ford, British employees settle strike

LONDON (AP) — A majority of striking employees at Ford Motor Co.'s British plants voted to accept a two-year contract offer, signaling the end of the country's first major industrial strike in three years.

The offer represented the first significant union victory in Britain in seven years. Ford made several concessions to end the strike, which began Feb. 8.

Voter returns Thursday night showed 70 percent of the workers at the 22 British plants favored the offer. The company said it expected workers to be back on the job Monday.

Advertisers start '88 with flair

Howland

In the spirit of the equal time doctrine (it is the election season after all), I don't want to leave the impression from a recent column — in which I criticized several of my least favorite television ads — that I feel all advertising is "badvertising."

With the recent Super Bowl and current Olympic Winter Games, many advertisers have unveiled new TV ad campaigns — several of which I find appealing.

My personal favorite features the return of the most talented canine ever to lap up a beer. No, not Spuds McKenzie.

However, Alex the Stroh's beer dog even manages to take a swipe at the more famous English Bull Terrier in the latest ad for the Milwaukee-based company.

Alex, a golden retriever, does his impressions of famous dogs including Walt Disney's Benji and Tramp from My Three Sons. And, when he does his grand finale — Spuds — his owner and friends don't have any idea who the brew hound is supposed to be.

It makes for a clever, sophisicated and natural outgrowth from Alex's previous efforts. (That better be water you're drinking!)

Locally, although it's not new, my favorite local ad campaign during the past year was recently recognized by the Advertising Federation of the Permian Basin with an Addy for its creators at Dominey & Etheridge. The ads in questions are for Kent Lube centers and involve Buster Tleman's amalgamation of characters that he played in Greater Tuna.

The blend of humor and sales message was imaginative, effective and deserving of its honor. The Addy D&E won for it was one of four the agency garnered during the AdFed presentation last month.

Other multiple Addy recipients were Midland's Admarc, which hauled away an even dozen Addys and Womack/Claypoole/Griffin Advertising of Odessa, which took away five plus the Best of Show honors for a radio service announcement put together for the Army Corps of Engineers.

Other honored campaigns were Venerable Insurance's push centered on legendary movie characters like Charlie Chan and Sherlock Holmes. Also recognized was Admarc's series of It's Up to Me! ads for Home Savings Association (now BancHome).

Alex's return to the small screen isn't the only good news in national advertising.

The visual pun works for me and can be adapted to print as well as electronic media. Two of the most effective current such ads are both for imported cars — Volvo and Honda.

The Volvo ad sets a truck atop a 700 series sedan and asks, "How does your car stand up to heavy traffic?" A Honda Prelude is obscured by a stampede of wild horses as the announcer talks about the car's "horsepower."

The Volvo ad is also appearing in many national magazines.

Another outstanding — and adaptable — print magazine campaign is the long-running Absolut Vodka campaign which has used everything from Kenneth Haring's art to microchip music built into its ads to make a two-word point about the drink. The imagination and execution are supremely evident.

Absolut brilliance.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Reentry nets Strawn production

From Staff Reports

A reentry in Winkler County has resulted in additional Strawn gas production in the Crittendon field of Winkler County.

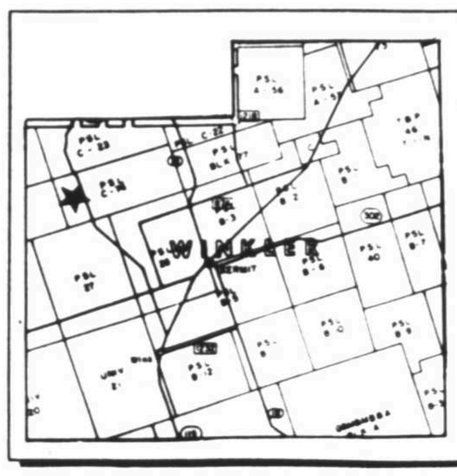
HERITAGE RESOURCES, INC. reentered the No. 1 Tubb "10" Unit, completing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.9 Mmcfd. Gravity was 53.3 degrees, and gas-liquid ratio was 9,049:1. Production is from perforations 14,488 to 14,512 ft., which had been acidized with 8,000 gallons of acid.

Cleaned out to 14,580 ft., the well was plugged back to 14,575 ft. A five inch liner was hung from 12,543 to 14,580 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,895 ft., formation tops include the Delaware Lime at 4,940 ft., Cherry Canyon Member at 6,190, Bone Spring at 8,877, Wolfcamp at 11,897, and the Strawn at 14,490 ft. Pay was topped at 12,883 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from north and west lines of Section 10, Block 74, PSL survey, 15 miles northwest of Kermit.

The well was originally drilled and abandoned by Atlantic Richfield on July 29, 1969.



★Winkler reentry

Heritage Resources reentered an abandoned well in Winkler County, completing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.9 Mmcfd in the Crittendon (Strawn) field.

Concho field gains 55 barrel extension

CARR EXPLORATION CORP., Dallas, has added a second producer the Arena (King) field of Concho County, extending the field northeast.

On potential test, the No. 1 Rabon pumped 55 barrels of 35 gravity crude and no water from perforations 2,152 to 2,154 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 3,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 2,160 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 2,156 ft.

Location is 1,875 ft. from north and 1,438 ft. from west lines of L.F. Brown survey 4, Abst. 1683, seven miles southwest of Eden.

Operator extends two pays in Runnels field

Shortly after being reopened, the Serratt pay of the Patsy field in Runnels County has gained a second producer, extending the pay northwest.

In addition, the operator, SHENANDOAH OIL, INC., Fort Worth, added a third Swastika producer to the field as well.

The second Serratt producer, the No. 2 Patsy Serratt Unit, was tested to pump one barrel of 43 gravity crude and no water from perforations 2,397 to 2,406 ft.

Shenandoah completed the No. 8 Patsy Unit as the third Swastika producer in the field, a southeastern extension. The well tested to pump one barrel of 43 gravity crude and 245 barrels of water from perforations 2,526 to 2,537 ft.

Strawn gas well has CAOF of 10.0 Mmcf

Additional Strawn gas production has been added to the Whitehead field of Crockett County.

SONORA SOUTHWEST PARTNERSHIP, Irving, tested the No. 161 Alford "E" for a calculated absolute open flow of 10.05 Mmcfd from perforations 8,876 to 9,087 ft., natural production.

The well was drilled to 9,520 ft. and plugged back to 9,358 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,436 ft.

Location is 2,200 ft. from south and 1,850 ft. from west lines of Section 6, Block G, GC&SF survey, 16 miles southeast of Ozona.

DEVELOPMENT

■ EXXON PLANS PROGRAM IN ANDREWS FIELD. Exxon Corp. Midland, plans to add four new producers to the Fullerton field of Andrews County. All four are in the Fullerton Clearfork Unit, with proposed depth of 7,400 ft.

■ FIVE PLANNED FOR HOWARD FIELD. D.L. Ray, Inc., Richardson, has applied to drill five new producers in the Iatan North field of Howard County. Two are in the W.L. Foster "B" lease, and three are on the W.R. Read et al "B" Sec. 48 lease. Proposed depths range from 2,992 ft. to 3,124 ft.

SALE

The average price per acre was $108, with Mobil submitting the high bid of $201 per acre for a parcel in Pecos County. Mobil also submitted the highest single bid for a tract of land — $66,308 — also in Pecos County.

Gravitt pointed out that Thursday's sale was the fourth and final installment in a University Lands experiment. "Normally, when we have a sale, it covers the whole West Texas area," he explained. "Starting four sales ago, we began offering tracts in selected areas of West Texas, beginning with Andrews and Martin counties, then went clockwise around the area, until we ended up with this last sale."

In effect, he said, it took four sales to cover the West Texas area, and those four sales brought in a total of $10.5 million. The first sale, in January 1987, leased 39 tracts in Andrews and Martin counties and raised $3.7 million.

While Gravitt hesitated to say the sale indicated a rise in optimism about the oil industry, he did say it indicated increased interest in University Lands. "We've always been well supported by the industry, which we appreciate," he said.

Next for the University Lands is a possible area-wide sale, most likely at year's end, he said.

Also, the system is looking for ways to stimulate interest in the University's frontier acreage — acreage in distant areas such as Hudspeth and Brewster counties. Gravitt observed that the University has approximately 500,000 acres in Hudspeth County, none of which is leased. The University has 2.1 million acres in West Texas, of which 700,000 acres is under lease. "We've got plenty of land to lease," Gravitt said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Steering clear of 12b-1 plans can be tricky

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Your column taught me to steer clear of mutual funds with 12b-1 plans. One mutual fund in which I had invested asked shareholders to vote on the adoption of a 12b-1 plan. Naturally, I voted "NO." To my surprise, enough other shareholders voted "Yes" for the plan to be approved. I immediately redeemed my shares.

A couple of months ago, another one of my mutual funds dropped its 12b-1 plan, which I didn't even know it had. As you have pointed out, information about those rip-off plans often is tucked away in a fund's prospectus and can be most difficult to find.

When, oh, when will the Securities and Exchange Commission — supposedly the great guardian of the small investor and champion of full disclosure — get off its duff and do something about this?

Doyle

A. At long last, it has done "something." Not much, but something. Almost eight years after passing its infamous Rule 12b-1, which permits mutual funds to use existing shareholders' money to pay the cost of selling shares to new investors, the SEC has come up with new regulations spelling out how those costs must be disclosed.

Every mutual fund prospectus printed after April 30 will be required to "prominently" display a standardized table showing how all charges cut into the value of a $1,000 investment over one-, three-, five- and 10-year periods.

The charges in the tables will include commissions at the time shares are purchased, rear-end loads such as redemption fees and contingent deferred sales charges when shares are redeemed, 12b-1 plan charges and other fund expenses.

The new rule also says that every prospectus will have to provide a brief description of how mutual fund management uses the 12b-1 fees. So, by reading the new prospectus, shareholders of some funds will finally learn how management spends the 12b-1 money extracted from the funds' assets.

Q. Newspaper tables of mutual fund prices have an "r" next to any fund with a rear-end load. That's enough to warn me away from those funds. But there's nothing in those tables indicating which funds have 12b-1 charges, which can be worse rear-end loads. Why?

A. Progress can be reported on that front. If all goes as planned, a new symbol will appear next to mutual funds with 12b-1 plans by the end of March.

The National Association of Securities Dealers compiles mutual fund price quotations and provides them to the Associated Press and United Press International, which transmits those quotes to newspapers.

Adding the 12b-1 symbol and an appropriate footnote to the mutual fund tables will require changes in computer software at NASD and the two wire services. Hence, the delay.

Q. I'm told the SEC has tightened the guidelines for mutual fund advertising. Is that true? If if is, it's long overdue.

A. It's true. That federal agency has adopted two basic changes in the rules regulating fund advertising. Both aim to clear up the mishmash of fund ads that have existed since March 1979, when the SEC scrapped its "statement of policy" controlling ads.

Under the new rules, any fund advertising its performance will have to include its average annual total return for the past one, five and 10 years in its ad. That will prevent a fund whose shares shot up in value in, say, 1987 from bragging about that in an ad, while ignoring results in other periods.

Also, income funds will be required to advertise a uniform 30-day yield figure. If a fund wants to tout its dividends, it will have to use the same formula and time span all other funds must use. Some of the worst advertising abuses have been by income funds, which previously were free to use what ever time span made them look the best — and even use highly suspect formulas for calculating yields.

Reagan calls Higgins family

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Reagan called to console the family of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, stung by the double blow of Higgins' abduction in Lebanon and the death of his father a day later.

"The President telephoned the colonel's wife this afternoon and offered all the support he knew how to give her.... I think it helped her tremendously," Harold Fisher, Higgins' brother-in-law, said Thursday.

Fisher, noting that eight other Americans are being held in Lebanon, said, "one of the hardest parts is seeing how they are held captive, with no resolution in sight. Being the ninth, you just don't know."

The family learned of Higgins' kidnapping by Islamic revolutionaries Wednesday when they telephoned his wife, Marine Maj. Robin Higgins, who works in the Pentagon's public affairs office, with news of the elder Higgins' imminent death.

William F. Higgins, 72, died from cardiopulmonary arrest and kidney failure Thursday morning without knowing of his son's ordeal. The last time father and son saw each other was in September 1987, when Higgins came home on emergency leave from the Middle East.

Higgins, 43, was abducted as he returned from a meeting in Tyre with officials of Lebanese Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shiite Amal militia to discuss efforts to free foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Biaggi could be ousted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Mario Biaggi, convicted in one trial and facing another, will become the first House member since 1980 and only the second since the Civil War to be drummed out of Congress if the House accepts the recommendation of its ethics committee.

Biaggi says he'll go the House floor to fight the recommendation made Thursday by the ethics panel, which cited Biaggi's conviction in September for obstruction of justice and accepting illegal gratuities.

"This fight is far from over," said the 10-term Democrat from the Bronx, N.Y. "I am bitterly disappointed by the committee's action, coming as it does before my appeal has even been heard."

Biaggi, once the most decorated policeman on the New York City force, faces another trial next month in Manhattan federal court on racketeering and bribery charges in a case involving the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

FBI to report conduct

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI officials will report publicly to senators next week on the conduct of agents who spied on and infiltrated an organization opposed to President Reagan's policies in Central America.

The Senate Intelligence Committee asked for an internal probe after publicly released documents showed the bureau conducted a broad investigation of the Committee In Solidarity with the People of El Salvador.

The group, known as CISPES, contends that the FBI's motives were political and that it was targeted because it opposes Reagan's policies. CISPES pointed out the March 1983-June 1985 investigation was closed down without any charges filed.

FBI Director William S. Sessions was asked by the committee in closed session Feb. 2 to conduct an internal probe of the bureau operation. Although top FBI officials will present their interim findings Tuesday, Sessions will not appear until a later session, the committee said.

Park Service threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The effectiveness of the National Park Service is threatened by political interference, a problem that is getting worse and can only be solved by making the agency independent, according to the nation's principal park advocacy organization.

"The popularity of the national parks inspires political appointees to curb the National Park Service's independence and limit its clout," said the National Parks and Conservation Association in a set of recommendations released Thursday.

"There is an urgent need to make the National Park Service an independent agency, responsible directly to the Congress and the president" because of "increasing politicization," the association said.

The recommendations ranged over a wide field, calling for, among other things, establishment of 75 new park units in the 340-unit system and expansion of 200 existing units.

Gore comes out swinging; Bush 'intends to win'

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Southerner Albert Gore was mainly on the sidelines in early campaign contests, but he came out swinging as Democrats sparred at their lead-off debate of Super Tuesday season. And Republican George Bush made a flat prediction about the March 8 mega-primary: "I intend to win."

Their ranks thinning rapidly, the presidential contenders campaigned mainly in the South — where every state save South Carolina holds primaries or caucuses on March 8, Super Tuesday — or in Minnesota and South Dakota, whose contests next week offer candidates a chance to go into Super Tuesday a winner.

In Nevada, Bush won a non-binding GOP presidential straw poll Thursday night. But his tally was nearly equaled by undecided votes — many of which were believed to have been cast by supporters of Pat Robertson in a bid to control later balloting. Robertson also got a large chunk of votes outright.

Democrat Paul Simon skipped the Dallas debate Thursday night to campaign in Missouri, a Super Tuesday state, and Minnesota.

After a disappointing second-place showing in Iowa and a third-place finish in New Hampshire, Simon had said he needed a win in Minnesota or South Dakota next week to stay in the race. But then he announced that an outpouring of support had changed his mind.

"At one point I said I had to win, but we've had such a response since then that we are reconsidering," said the Illinois senator.

There was no such change of heart for Democrat Bruce Babbitt and Republican Pete du Pont, who made their exits from the race on Thursday. Neither expressed regret about his underdog candidacy.

Babbitt called his quest for the nomination "the greatest joy of my entire public life" and du Pont declared: "Our campaign lowers its flag, but our crusade continues to march."

That marked a trio of withdrawals from the White House race in a week — Republican Alexander Haig, the former secretary of state, bowed out last Friday in New Hampshire.

Withdrawing from races for their parties' nominations to the presidency are Republican hopeful Pete du Pont, left, and Democratic candidate Bruce Babbitt. Du Pont served as governor of Delaware; Babbitt once held that post in Arizona.

At the Dallas debate Thursday night, Gore quickly took the offensive, asking Michael Dukakis why he was willing to tolerate a Soviet client state in Central America.

"I never said that, Al," snapped Dukakis, who racked up a big win in the New Hampshire primary on Tuesday.

Gore also scrapped with Rep. Richard Gephardt, the Democratic winner in Iowa, taking the Missouri congressman to task for shifts on issues.

That got a rise out of Gephardt, who retorted: "Maybe you ought to start looking at your own record first," and went on to claim that Gore has moved to the right on military issues since entering the race.

"Lately you've been sounding more like Al Haig than Al Gore," Gephardt said sharply.

"That line sounds more like Richard Nixon than Richard Gephardt," Gore fired back.

Gary Hart, mired at the back of the Democratic pack, got in a few digs, saying if Gephardt's trade bill ever took effect it would be "a catastrophe."

And Jesse Jackson, who has a big Southern following, drew applause when he criticized wasteful military spending.

Gore, who bypassed the Iowa caucuses and ran only a limited campaign in New Hampshire, is staking his hopes on a Southern strategy. The setting of the debate — in the biggest Super Tuesday state — underscored the Tennessee senator's urgent need for a strong showing in the region.

At one point, Gephardt jabbed Gore for playing down the early contests.

"I don't think people vote for political strategies," he said.

The Democrats had another confrontation scheduled tonight, this one in St. Paul, Minn.

And there was a Republican debate set for tonight in Dallas, but only two of the contenders — Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp — were scheduled to appear.

Sen. Bob Dole and Robertson, the former television evangelist, both said Thursday they wouldn't attend, with Dole deriding the event as a "pep rally" for Bush. The Robertson forces also said they thought Bush backers would pack the event.

Debate organizers said the campaigns were all allotted the same number of tickets, and criticized Dole, saying he had lobbied Robertson to stay away too.

The debate debate wasn't the only contention within Republican ranks.

Bush, campaigning in Missouri, insisted "I'm telling the truth" about Dole. The Kansas senator has been complaining about 11th-hour ads Bush ran in New Hampshire, attacking Dole's stand on taxes, oil import fees and arms control.

Dole, in North Carolina, made it clear the commercials were still a sore point.

"I wanted to get here before the TV ads," the Kansas senator said in Charlotte. "Before you see some TV ad saying Bob Dole will raise your taxes, say you've heard it from the candidate himself. ... We don't need any more tax increases."

Kemp, campaigning in South Carolina, was asked about his prospects in the state. "We expect to be very competitive," the New York congressman said. "We're going all the way to New Orleans," site of the GOP national convention.

NRC orders 3M to recover, test ionizing air guns for radiation leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has ordered a blanket suspension of the use of a popular industrial device blamed for leaking tiny radioactive particles at more than 100 plants around the nation.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Thursday also ordered the 3M Corp. to recover and test all 45,000 of the suspect devices, ionizing air guns used to control static electricity and remove dust from product containers.

Robert Bernero, deputy director of the NRC's office of nuclear materials safety, said that of 828 plants inspected so far, "detectable" — though virtually harmless — contamination had been found at 118. Of those, he identified 39 plants where the radiation exceeded the reportable limit of 0.005 microcuries.

However, he cautioned that the list is still incomplete. "It changes daily," he said.

Last week, the NRC issued successive recalls of particular 3M models used in the food, beverage, cosmetic and drug industries, involving about 2,500 units. The latest order affects all industries and applies to all the guns made since they were first marketed in 1965.

Echoing earlier reports, NRC and Food and Drug Administration officials said they still have no evidence that the faulty devices have posed any health hazard, either to workers at plants where radioactive contamination was found or to consumers of the products made at those facilities.

Bernero said in more than 1,000 tests of product samples, there was only once instance in which radiation was detected. That case involved a food supplement made by Ross Laboratories of Altavista, Va., and the amount was so low it could have involved naturally occurring radiation, he said.

But he cited another case, involving Moto Photo of North Dartmouth, Mass., where he expressed greater concern about what the inspectors don't know, rather than what they found.

NRC Chairman Lando Zech said the suspension and broadened recall order was necessary in light of the growing list of plants where inspectors found the devices had failed, leaking microscopic ceramic spheres containing polonium 210, which emits a weak form of radiation incapable of penetrating the skin but which could prove harmful if ingested in sufficient amounts.

FDA Administrator Frank Young said "we're doing this to ensure there's not the rare gun out there that's leaking a lot more than anything we've found so far."

Ted L. Pickens, a 3M spokesman, said, "We're certainly going to comply" with the order.

Teen-ager arrested in ax murders

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Authorities today arrested a 16-year-old boy in the ax murders of his parents, a brother and a sister, and prosecutors said they would seek to try him as an adult on murder charges.

"The boy has been captured and they are interviewing him now," said a police dispatcher who refused to give his name. The boy, who had dyed his hair black and partially shaved his head before the bodies were found, was taken into custody at a phone booth at the main Rochester Post Office, he said.

Olmsted County Attorney Raymond Schmitz said at a news conference that "our intent is to file a petition charging him with four counts of first-degree murder. Then we'll petition to try him as an adult."

"The officers who took him into custody said he was quite nervous and frightened," Officer Bill Verdick said.

The bodies of Bernard Brom, 41, his wife, Paullette, about 40, and children Diane, 14, and Rick, 9, were found in their nightclothes Thursday evening at their home in suburban Cascade Township, said Olmsted County Sheriff Charles Von Wald.

The four were believed to have been slain early Thursday morning, the sheriff said. A bloody ax 2 to 3 feet long was found in the basement of the home in a quiet, well-to-do area just outside this southeastern Minnesota city of 60,000, he said.

Law enforcement officials talked with friends of the 16-year-old who had spoken with him Thursday, the sheriff said.

"He indicated he was having some trouble with his parents," Von Wald said. "One student said he was having trouble with his dad because of a tape he had bought and he didn't want him listening to it."

The boy was at Lourdes High School on Thursday morning. Friends at the Roman Catholic school said he had dyed his hair black, shaved the sides of his head and spiked the hair on the back of his head, the sheriff said.

The boy also bought a wig and makeup, Von Wald said.

The family van had been missing but was found late Thursday near Methodist Hospital in Rochester, Von Wald said. A car and another car's license plates were reported stolen from the vicinity of the school, he said.

The family's priest, the Rev. Syl Brown of the Pax Christi Roman Catholic Church, said Bernard Brom worked in a supervisory position for IBM in Rochester and Paullette Brom was a homemaker.

"There are no explanations to strange things, mysteries like this," Brown said. "It's an exemplary family. They were very active in every phase of the parish. There's no indication there was any difficulty in the family."

The priest said the 16-year-old attended church with his family every week.

Von Wald said frends and neighbors described the boy as "a nice young man" who was a very good student.

"He babysat for one of the neighbors, and recently had shoveled the sidewalk for another neighbor," the sheriff said.

Bernard and Rick Brom's bodies were found in their upstairs bedrooms, and Paullette and Diane Brom's bodies in an upstairs hallway, the sheriff said.

"We believe the father and son were probably surprised and didn't have a chance to defend themselves," Von Wald said. "We believe the mother and daughter were going to investigate and were confronted."

Anthony M. Kennedy, left, takes the constitutional oath from Chief Justice Wiliam Rehnquist on Thursday. Holding the Bible is Kennedy's wife, Mary.

Justice Kennedy quickly gets down to cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony M. Kennedy is quickly getting down to cases after taking his place as the newest member of the Supreme Court with a pledge to uphold a Constitution that he said makes the United States unique.

"The Constitution of the United States is the single idea, the single fact, the single reality, the single moral principle that sets the United States apart from other nations, now and throughout history," Kennedy said during a White House swearing-in ceremony. "I shall honor that Constitution."

Kennedy, 51, on Thursday became the 104th Supreme Court justice in U.S. history, restoring the court to full strength for the first time in eight months and inheriting a pivotal vote on key issues.

Today he meets in a private conference with the other eight justices to discuss pending cases and prepare for the court's return Monday from a four-week recess.

Kennedy, who has been reading legal briefs in preparation for his new duties, appeared relaxed as he posed for cameras outside the court building.

"I've been working. I'm ready for Monday," he said.

One of the first cases in which Kennedy will hear arguments next week focuses on whether private clubs may exclude women and racial minorities as members.

The case has attracted considerable attention and Kennedy's participation will be watched closely. He was criticized during his Senate confirmation hearings for his past membership in such exclusive clubs.

Kennedy took part in two oath-taking ceremonies Thursday.

At the first in the ornate courtroom where the justices meet to hear arguments, he said, "I do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons and do equal right to the poor and to the rich."

He then took his seat at one end of the high court bench reserved for the Supreme Court's newest member.

Later, Kennedy went to the White House to a take a second oath of office in the presence of President Reagan.

Judge could block enforcement of abortion regulation

BOSTON (AP) — A federal judge is considering whether to issue an injunction blocking proposed regulations that would prohibit some 4,000 federally funded family planning clinics nationwide from offering abortion counseling services.

"If I were to grant an injunction, why should I not enjoin (Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen) from enforcing these regulations anywhere in this country?" U.S. District Judge Walter Skinner said at the end of a two-hour hearing Thursday.

The HHS regulations, which take effect March 3, are being contested in U.S. District courts in Colorado, New York and Massachusetts.

A federal judge in Denver this week granted a preliminary injunction in the suit filed there, but the ruling apparently will only temporarily block the regulations from affecting clinics in Colorado and Utah.

Skinner, however, told attorneys Thursday that he believed a single federal district court could hold "national jurisdiction" and issue one broad opinion that could end "this business of raising the same issue in 92 districts."

The judge gave no indication when he would release his decision on the injunction sought by the state of Massachusetts, the National Family Planning and Reproductive Health Association and 13 other local and national family planning groups.

But attorneys speculated Skinner would rule soon since an injunction request was scheduled to be argued late today in New York.

Unlike the Denver judge, who partially based her ruling on the regulations' impact on physicians' relationships to their patients, Skinner said, "Medical ethics is not my problem."

He said the issue was whether the regulations were constitutional.

Congressional intent in establishing the Family Planning Program under Title X of the Public Health Service Act in 1970 was at the heart of Thursday's arguments.

Thomas Millet, a Justice Department attorney representing the Health and Human Services agency, contended that the law bans the use of federal funds in "programs where abortion is a method of family planning."

Assistant Massachusetts Attorney General Paul Glickman and James Feldesman, attorney for the family planning association, argued that Congress was fully aware abortion counseling was being provided through Title X programs.

Retarded teen wielding toy gun slain

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A 13-year-old boy, who reportedly was mentally retarded, was shot and killed by police officers when they mistook a toy gun in the boy's hand for a real pistol and opened fire.

The youth, shot through the forehead, was taken to San Francisco General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival Wednesday evening. A hospital spokeswoman identified the boy as Silvielo Grohse.

Sgt. Jerry Senkir, police spokesman, said the officers involved in the shooting were Michael Huddleson, an eight-year veteran, and Janet Campbell, who has been with the police department less than a year.

Senkir confirmed that Grohse had been carrying a toy gun, which he described as a realistic model of a .22-caliber pistol. He also said there was no evidence that the officers had acted improperly.

The officers were dispatched to the area after reports of shots fired, Senkirsaid. They spotted the boy, described as very big for his age, walking along carrying what appeared to be a weapon. After pulling within 40 feet of Grohse, the officers got out of their patrol car, crouched behind the open doors with guns drawn and ordered the boy to stop and throw down his gun.

"The suspect then turned and pointed the gun at the officers," Senkir said. "At the same time, he crouched down and let out a yell. Both officers immediately opened fire."

Mecham critical of Mofford's actions

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Impeached Gov. Evan Mecham says acting Gov. Rose Mofford is replacing his administration before the Senate can decide whether to remove him permanently, but a Mofford aide said she has "bent over backward" to be fair.

"May I ask you to recognize that I have only been accused and not convicted of any act," Mecham said Thursday in a letter to Mofford. The embattled Republican also demanded that Mofford forward all his mail unopened.

"I must convey my deep disappointment and surprise at the way your people are turning a temporary acting governorship into a complete disruption and replacement of my administration," Mecham said.

The Republican-controlled House impeached Mecham on charges he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan, misused $90,000 in state money and obstructed justice. His impeachment trial in the Senate is scheduled to start Feb. 29. He also faces a criminal trial in March in connection with the campaign loan.

Mecham's letter came as Mrs. Mofford, a Democratic secretary of state who became acting governor upon Mecham's impeachment, accepted the resignation of Washington lobbyist Fred Craft.

Last week, Mecham urged Mrs. Mofford to retain Craft, who has helped Arizona lobby for the federal superconducting super collider and rented part of his law offices for use by Arizona. Craft tendered his resignation Feb. 11.

Mecham's efforts to use Craft on the superconducting super collider and other issues were controversial and stirred allegations that he had tried to get around the state procurement code.

Mrs. Mofford issued a statement Thursday, saying, "Members of the (Arizona) congressional delegation have promised to continue to be especially vigilant."
