Cloudcover lingers over Permian Basin

Climbing temperatures renew threat of floods

The Associated Press

Temperatures began climbing in the Rockies today, renewing the danger from a record snowmelt runoff, and the toll from a week of flooding and mudslides rose to five people dead or missing when the body of an Idaho man was found in a partially submerged car.

Tiny mountain mining towns and plush resorts threatened by overflowing rivers and traveling walls of mud took advantage of a brief cooling spell Thursday to dig out, clear out or build new sandbag barriers.

The Air Natpnal Guard on Thursday flew thousands of sandbags to several Wyoming towns bracing for the next round of floodwaters while the tiny town of Baggs remained under waist-deep water.

In the ritzy Colorado resort towns of Vail and Beaver Creek,some residents were told hursday to leave their expensive homes because of impending mudslides.

Mountain areas had baked under 90-degree heat that sent floodwaters surging through valley towns and mudslides cascading into dozens of homes, but the mercury fell to the 60s Thurs ay. The relief, however, was temporary.

"The spring thaw will come no matter how gradually," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecat Center in Kansas City, Mo. "Idoubt any kind of season — unless we hadanother winter — would avoid flooding."

He predicted temperatures i te 70s today and in the 80s by early next week.

"Even if the temperatures stay in the normal range, it would still be bad because of the record snowpack," zhuke said today. "They will have a very severe river situation for weeks to come."

Bill Alder of the National Weather Service in Salt Lake City said that onl 20 percent to 30 percent of the 13-foot deep snowpack had melted in the higher elevations.

Clearing due by weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can expect rainclouds to hover overhead through Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Thursday forecasters predicted the skies would clear by the weekend. But, perhaps in answer to pleas by farmers and ranchers for "just a little more," the clouds are lingering a little longer, pushed by leasurely 5-to-10 mph winds.

By this morning the area had received another three-quarters of an inch of rain, bringing the total for the past few days to nearly three inches. Midland's rainfall for the week, and the month, totals 2.91 inches. The average rainfall in May is only 2.08 inches.

But the first four months of the year were so dry, Midland will probably come up short in total inches by the end of May, forecasters said. By May 31 the area usually has 4.4 inches of rain for the year. The recent rains have only brought the 1984 total to 3.5 inches.

County's Republicans, Democrats gather Saturday

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Democrats and Republicans will take their yearning masses into separate huddles Saturday morning to choose players and decide tactics to play the game of politics through the rest of the year.

Democrats will kick off their gathering at 10 a.m. in Goddard Junior High School. Republicans take the field at 9 a.m. with registration and then begin the plays at 9:30 in San Jacinto Junior High.

Democrats will focus on selecting delegates to the state convention and decide on resolutions to adopt. Republicans will work on polishing up resolutions to be sent to the state and national conventions.

"It's an entirely new ballgame," said Midland County Chairwoman Janet Massey of the Democratic huddle. Delegates selected at the precinct meetings after the primary on May 5 on the basis of presidential candidate preference will attend to see who is picked for the state convention. The same ratio of delegates for each of the three presidential candidates — Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson — will be retained, said Ms. Massey.

Based on the number of persons who voted for the Democratic candidate in the last gubernatorial election — 1982 — Midland County is allowed 20 delegates and 20 alternates. Also because of the voter turnout that year, Precincts 105, 106, 208, 305 and 306 are allowed one delegate each. "They will caucus among themselves and will elect their own delegate," said Ms. Massey.

The remaining county precincts are divided into 11 pairings and each pair will select a delegate. That leaves four at-large delegates to come out of the nominations committee for ratification by the convention as a whole, she explained.

"We have to go on a percentage basis to the state convention," she said of trying to obtain the correct proportion of Mondale, Hart and Jackson candidates as was selected in the primary caucuses. The four at-large delegates will be chosen to offset any inconsistencies from the precincts.

Only those persons who were elected as a delegate or alternate may sign in to take part in the county convention. Delegates not attending will be replaced with an alternative, if possible someone with the same presidential preference as the delegate, according to Ms. Massey.

She expects to see three, if not four, Jackson delegates going from Midland to the state convention. Her theory is based on the number of Jackson delegates selected from some precincts.

Several resolutions will be introduced, but most submitted through the precinct meetings focus on restructuring the primary and caucus system, she said.

"It really isn't fair," Ms. Massey said of the caucus sessions after the primary. Voters were unable to choose their presidential candidate if they didn't attend the caucus meeting that night. "People who vote absentee and who are invalid are disenfranchised from voting for a presidential candidate."

The Democrats should complete their game plan by 2 p.m. Democratic Women's Club will be selling sandwiches and cookies; Young Democrats will sell soft drinks. Featured speaker will be David Smith, an Odessa attorney who is opposing Midlander Tom Craddick for the 76th District seat as state representative. Providing entertainment will be Mrs. Robert Latham.

Republicans will choose 52 delegates and a like number of alternates to the party's two state conventions. Unlike the Democrats, this delegate selection won't be based on precinct or presidential preferences. Ronald Reagan already is the party's choice.

The 52 delegates may be the largest number of persons from Midland County going to the state, according to Midland County Republican Chairman Bill Shaner. Like the Democrats, the number also is based on the 1982 gubernatorial race Republican turnout.

"This is the second step in the grassroots development of the party," he said.

A nominating committee "is getting people to serve as a delegate. They will leave some slots open for people who think they have been overlooked."

A resolutions committee is reviewing proposals from precinct meetings. Any delegate with additional resolutions may submit them in writing to the committee Saturday morning, according to Shaner.

Midlanders selected 630 delegates and the same number of alternates to this county convention at the precinct meetings, said Shaner, who noted the May 5 primary ranked as one of the best in voter turnout for the Republican Party since 1960.

Both county chairmen pointed out the conventions are open to the public. Observers must sign in as guests and won't be allowed to take part in discussions or votes.

Salvadoran president, en route to U.S., alleges Nicaraguan action

The Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — El Salvador's President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte, en route to a meeting Monday with President Reagan, accused Nicaragua of impeding peace in Central America by aiding Salvadoran guerrillas.

Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat who takes office June 1, stopped in Honduras and Guatemala on Thursday. He travels to Costa Rica today and Washington on Saturday.

While in Honduras, Duarte said Nicaragua, by aiding leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government, presents a "serious obstacle" but "one which we are willing to confront with serenity and patience" in a quest for regional peace. He did not elaborate on his comments.

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista junta accused anti-Sandinista rebels based in Costa Rica of attacking three border points, but a Costa Rican security official denied the allegation.

Earlier this week, Nicaragua and Costa Rica signed an agreement calling for a commission to monitor the border and suggest solutions to problems between the two countries.

The Reagan administration says Nicaragua funnels weapons and ammunition to the Salvadoran rebels.

Duarte began his Central American swing in Honduras, which fought a brief war with El Salvador in 1969 over border disputes. Mistrust has lingered between the two countries since then.

Nicaragua's Sandinista government has criticized Honduras for allowing a U.S. military buildup there and for letting rebels operate there in their fight to topple the Nicaraguan government.

In Guatemala, Duarte said of Nicaragua: "They have been helping the Salvadoran guerrillas ... this is a clear declaration of intervention."

Duarte praised U.S. military aid to his country as "valuable and important" but once again ruled out the possibility that U.S. troops would go into combat in El Salvador.

During his stopover here, he met with Chief of State Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores and other officials.

In Honduras, he met with President Roberto Suazo Cordova and Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, chief of the armed forces.

At the end of the visit, Suazo Cordova and Duarte announced their intention "to work for the peace and common well-being of Central America, as a task that will require the maximum effort of governments disposed to favor the interests of their peoples."

Duarte told reporters: "We cannot resolve the Central American phenomenon bilaterally. Because of this, my position is to establish a unification of all sectors of the Central American isthmus in search of a lasting peace in benefit of our nations."

The Contadora group — Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia — has been working since January 1983 to establish peace in the region by means of negotiated settlements.

The nation's economy is growing at a robust rate, standing at $1,606 billion for the first quarter of 1984.

GNP reflects economic growth

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy grew at a robust rate of 8.8 percent in the first three months of the year as the enduring strength of the recovery continued to surprise the experts.

The Commerce Department today once again revised upward its projections of growth from January to March, a period which many economists had once expected to exhibit a marked slow down.

Instead, the 8.8 percent performance marked the fastest pace for growth since a 9.7 percent spurt turned in from April-June of 1982, as the recovery from the 1981-82 recession was gaining momentum.

That 9.7 percent rate for the gross national product, the total output of goods and services in the economy, was followed in the second half of last year with gains of 7.6 percent and 5 percent.

Many economists had first predicted the first quarter of 1984 would look much like the final three months of 1983 with growth between 4 and 5 percent. Thus, the government's first estimate of growth at 7.2 percent took economists by surprise and they predicted it would be lowered substantially in later revisions.

However, the number was boosted last month to 8.3 percent and, today, to 8.8 percent.

Most economists predict this will be the high-water mark for growth this year with estimates for growth in the current quarter averaging 5 percent and dropping to 3 percent to 4 percent for the final half of the year.

This pace would still be enough to boost the real GNP, output adjusted for inflation, to around 5 percent for the year.

Real GNP grew at a rate of 3.4 percent in 1982 as the nation recovered from the worst recession since World War II. It had fallen by 1.9 percent in 1982.

Despite the upward revision today to 8.8 percent, inflation remained moderate during the quarter. As measured by a standard that takes into account changes in prices and demand, the pace of inflation was 3.7 percent in the first three months of the year, down from a 3.9 percent rate from October through December.

The department said today's stronger economic growth resulted from upward revisions in estimates of inventory investment by businesses and farms, stronger consumer spending and increased investments in industrial plant and equipment.

These gains were somewhat offset by a worsening foreign trade deficit.

The department put the growth in the GNP on an annual basis at $33.5 billion with $21.4 billion of that improvement coming from increased investment in inventories as businesses worked to restock shelves in an effort to keep up with sales.

The department said that after-tax corporate profits for the first three months of the year rose 3.9 percent compared to a decline of 0.8 percent in the final quarter of 1983.

Vote results certified by the State Democratic Executive Committee gave Lloyd Doggett the most votes in the party's May 5 primary. Kent Hance, talking with reporters outside the SDEC meeting place in Austin Thursday, predicted he will be back on top today when votes from Dallam County are recorded correctly.

'Lash' LaRue ready to return to silver screen

AMARILLO (AP) — Al "Lash" LaRue, a veteran silver screen cowboy star in the 1940s noted for his all-black garb and expertise with a bullwhip, is hoping to be back in pictures again soon.

But, he added today, "I'm trying to get away from westerns. There are more opportunities in other pictures."

LaRue is in Amarillo as a celebrity guest for the 1984 Tri-State Regional Manufactured Housing Show.

After a long lapse from the Hollywood scene, LaRue ran an ad in a Hollywood trade paper asking for work in pictures again.

He's now being considered for a part as a college professor in an upcoming film he didn't name.

LaRue said he never planned to become an actor.

"I started out in dramatics at school to overcome a speech impediment. Then I got into a play and had a screen test," he told the Amarillo Globe-News.

He had been a fatherless youth who had "lived everywhere" until he finished his schooling in California, he said.

"I sold newspapers on the street when the gangsters were the biggest buyers. I came up the hard way."

LaRue was turned down for gangster parts at Warner Brothers studios, though.

"At the time I tested at Warners, they had several 'heavies' under contract already," such as Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney and Edward G. Robinson, he said. His first movie contract during World War II was with Universal Studios.

LaRue's big break came in 1945 when an independent producer, Robert Emmett Tansey, signed him to play the Cheyenne Kid in both "Song of Old Wyoming" and "Caravan Trail," which starred Eddie Dean. Although both pictures were classed as B westerns, they had something that most movies at the time did not have -- color. Each garnered extra bookings because of the rarity.

Dean played sort of a singing Destry-type cowboy who didn't want to use his pistols unless he had to. LaRue, dressed in black and adept at the use of a bullwhip, gave his role something of a tough guy turn, but eventually came to the aid of Dean. Audiences loved the chemistry. Many even thought LaRue had outshone Dean in both pictures.

But LaRue said he had a problem getting into the Cheyenne Kid role because he had told the producer he could handle the whip. Actually, the lash was a new thing to him, he said.

"Three days into the picture I told Tansey I couldn't handle the whip. I showed him the marks on my back. He thought it was very funny."

A whip expert was called in for lessons and LaRue learned quickly.

"It's not hard to learn the rudiments of the bullwhip," he said.

LaRue said he still sees such veteran cowboy actors as Charles (Durango Kid) Starrett, Bob Steele, Monte Hale and Pat Buttram.

LaRue, a native of Louisiana who won't admit to being 67 although he has no qualms about saying he's on Social Security, doesn't like to discuss the adult film he made years ago.

"God forgave me, but man won't let it blow over," he said.

LaRue said he worked only two days to shoot his role for the picture, not knowing where it would be used. It was a straight role for him, he said.

"They put it into this picture afterward," the actor said.

"But I've done a lot of hospital shows for the Shriners. The stories about me in that picture never mention that," LaRue said. "I became a Mason because I like what they do for the crippled children."

He also won't discuss reports that he's been married 10 times. But he's proud of his three sons in California and two daughters in Atlanta.

"I have been credited with a lot of marriages," he said. "I have been married more than one time. But I've gotten my head straight. I've learned that to be loved is to love. Funny thing, I learned that after the gray came into my hair."

LaRue also spent a while in the ministry, although his stay was short, he said.

SDEC certifies Hance, Doggett for run-off

AUSTIN (AP) — Bob Krueger, unofficial third-place finisher in the Democratic U.S. Senate race, watched closely as the State Democratic Executive Committee collected uncounted votes from at least one county.

"We're just waiting until they get in all the votes and then we'll decide what to do," said Al Schoenbaum, Kreuger's campaign manager, when asked about a possible recount.

Kent Hance, who was the No. 1 vote-getter in unofficial returns but dropped to second behind Lloyd Doggett in Thursday's SDEC count, said he would emerge again on top when new results from Dallam County are in.

The governing body of the state Democratic party certified Thursday that Doggett and Hance would be in the run-off according to "official" incomplete returns.

The SDEC said, counting a last minute addition of 1,126 votes from Willacy County but minus a corrected report from Dallam County, that Doggett got 456,018 votes in the May 5 primary, Hance 455,621 and Krueger 454,568.

Hance told reporters the SDEC reports showed he received only 76 votes in Dallam County when he actually received 806.

"I'll be in first place again tomorrow," Hance said.

The SDEC motion to approve the primary results, approved without opposition, gave State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle the power to make any changes made necessary by vote counts in counties, after verification by the SDEC.

In other action the state party's 66-member executive committee sidestepped proposals to junk the caucus system of selecting national convention delegates.

Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston, state coordinator for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, complained that the caucus system caused "many, many irregularities" unfavorable to his candidate.

Slagle said he had agreed with Edwards to work in the county and state conventions to give Jackson his share of representation in Texas delegation to the national convention.

Mel Phillips, of Amarillo, the chairman of the Texas Democratic County Chairmen's Association, presented a resolution asking the SDEC to abandon the caucus system in favor of a binding presidential primary.

Ed Miller, of Texarkana, offered a substitute motion, supported by Slagle, authorizing the chairman to appoint a commission, after the November general election, to recommend changes in the caucus system.

Slagle said he would appoint Edwards and U.S. Rep. Martin Frost -- state coordinator for Gary Hart -- and a leader in the Walter Mondale campaign.

"I support the presidential primary but now is not the time to make a change," said Millie Bruner, Dallas, a member of the National Democratic Committee. "It could affect our September state convention and it could affect the November election. The Democratic Party is going to get smaller and smaller unless we open it up and let more people have a part."

Man found guilty of trespassing at abortion clinic plans appeal

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for an anti-abortion protester convicted of trespassing in a women's clinic says he's upset his client was found guilty, but glad for the chance to fight abortion through appealing the case.

Jack Hoffart, a 28-year-old printer, was sentenced to six months' probation and fined $500 Thursday for criminal trespass. He was convicted in connection with his entry into a west Houston clinic Feb. 4.

Hoffart told patients inside the building they were preparing to commit murder. An off-duty police officer arrested Hoffart as patients in the lobby cheered.

Prosecution witnesses included clinic personnel who said that Hoffart was told by workers not to enter the clinic.

Hoffart's attorney, Richard Schmude, immediately filed notice of appeal and said that he will use the case to fight the constitutionality of abortion.

Schmude said he was "sorry for Hoffart personally but thrilled at the opportunity to strike at this evil which is abortion."

Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross also ordered Hoffart to perform 50 hours of a community service to be determined by officials of the community service program.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Rain is forecast Saturday for the central Great Plains states, with other areas of the nation expected to have clear skies, according to the National Weather Service.

WEATHER

Tonight's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers. The evening may be a little cooler than preceding ones. Lows should drop into the upper 50s, accompanied by southerly winds of 5 to 10 mph.

Saturday, however, is expected to be slightly warmer, with the highs in the low 80s. Mostly cloudy skies are predicted, along with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds should be from the southwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Thursday's high was only 70, falling 27 degrees short of the record 97 reached in 1978. The overnight low was a steady 62, 17 degrees warmer than the 45 mark recorded in 1967.

STATE

Heavy rains fell on parts of West and Southwest Texas for the first time in more than a month, and residents said although the moisture was welcome, they needed more.

As much as 2 inches of rain fell in Midland, Odessa and Wink, and the National Weather Service said the prospect was good for more precipitation today and Saturday.

Thursday's rain stopped [illegible] string of days without rain at 39 — the longest dry stretch in 14 years and eighth-longest in the city's recorded history. The record is 73 days in 1970.

Farther south, in the San Antonio area, farmers and ranchers were said to be literally standing in their parched fields with outstretched arms, enthusiastically scooping up the rain as it fell.

"This is the most significant rain in quite sometime. We see a pattern of above-normal shower activity in San Antonio through Saturday," said meteorologist Roger Smith at the NWS office in San Antonio.

Russell Masters, assistant to the manager of the Edwards Underground Water District, said at least 3 inches of slow rain is needed over a period of two or three days to replenish a dwindling San Antonio water supply.

"The little rain we've had is nice, but three-tenths of an inch isn't going to do diddly," Masters said.

Helen Steubing, who with her husband raises cattle on ranches in Bexar, Frio, Comal and LaSalle counties, called the rain "a beginning."

Houston teen shoots girl, himself

HOUSTON (AP) — A high school student suspended for fighting with his girlfriend last week returned to the building with a pistol, wounded the girl, then killed himself with a shot through the head, officials said.

Christopher Ross, 18, was pronounced dead at Booker T. Washington High School of a .25-caliber pistol wound Thursday morning.

Shon Carper, 17, was in stable condition at Hermann Hospital early today with a gunshot wound in her side.

Rose Marie Ross said her son was given permission to return to school Thursday after assistant principal Herman Mabrie told him "he and Shon shouldn't have anything to do with each other."

Students said the two fought in a school hallway May 11 and Ross ripped a necklace from Ms. Carper's neck.

Ross apparently was carrying the pistol as he talked with Mabrie, school spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said.

"He walked directly to that class," she said.

Houston homicide detective Danny Moorman said Ross "walked up the stairs with a friend, and he said, 'You know, I'm going to kill that woman.'"

Moorman said the friend told him Ross "had said that before."

Police discovered a suicide note in Ross' pocket in which he declared his love for Ms. Carper and expressed the hope that she would always remember him.

"It was a boyfriend-girlfriend incident," police spokesman J.C. Mosier said. "They had broken up and he couldn't handle it."

Ms. Konigsberg said Ross went to a typing class, pointed the pistol at the teacher, then turned the gun on Ms. Carper, wounding her in the side.

Witnesses told police Ross then put the gun to his head and pulled the trigger.

The shooting was the third in a Houston high school this year.

An assistant coach at Sharpstown High School was shot in the face in January by a student who had been firing a gun in the school's parking lot. Last year, 21-year-old student Daniel Samudio shot and killed his wife in a classroom at Reagan High School and then killed himself.

In the wake of the incidents, HISD Superintendent Billy Reagan offered metal detectors to any principal in the district who felt the devices were needed for added security, but none have been installed.

Iowa students die in similar incident

ALTOONA, Iowa (AP) — An honor student was gunned down at her high school because her assailant, who then killed himself, was distraught that she was going to graduate a year early and go away to college, police say.

Valerie Rockafellow, 16, and Todd Dunahoo, 17, died at separate Des Moines hospitals within hours of each other after the shootings Thursday.

Dale Moritz, chief of the Polk County Sheriff's criminal investigation division, said Dunahoo fired three bullets from a .38-caliber revolver into Miss Rockafellow's shoulder and chest. Dunahoo suffered a single wound to the head, Moritz said.

"She was outside the classroom taking a test and he had been in the same classroom," Moritz said. "He left the room, walked down the hall, turned around and came back to where she was seated and at that time shot her."

Classes immediately were dismissed at Runnells Southeast Polk High School, located in a rural area about four miles southeast of Altoona. All students were sent home, and school officials declined to comment on the incident.

Miss Rockafellow, although only a junior, was due to graduate Sunday. One school official, who asked not to be identified, said Miss Rockafellow recently had been awarded a scholarship to Wartburg College. She was a member of the school's chapter of the National Honor Society.

Dunahoo was also a junior, and had another year of high school remaining. Moritz said the youth was evidently troubled at Miss Rockafellow's impending move to college. "The information we have is that he was depressed at the possible breakup in their relationship," Moritz said.

But the girl's father, Dyle Rockafellow, said he did not think his daughter had been seeing Dunahoo.

"She just knew the guy at school, that's all," Rockafellow said in a telephone interview.

Iraq claims two more attacks on ships

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes today attacked two ships south of Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal in the latest of a series of raids — blamed on both Iran and Iraq — that has alarmed governments and oil shippers in the region.

An Iranian leader appealed to his nation to "prepare itself for war throughout the world" in the event other nations intervene in the gulf.

"There is a possibility that an extremely momentous development, the consequences of which cannot be predicted, will come about in the region," Tehran radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, as saying today. "Therefore, our nation should pay a great deal of heed and prepare itself for a prolonged move and jihad." Jihad means holy war in Arabic.

"Should the way be opened in the gulf to the superpowers and everyone of the second rate powers, our nation should prepare itself for war throughout the world against the interests of every country desirous of intervention in the gulf," Rafsanjani said.

An unidentified Iraqi military spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad state radio, said the Iraqi jetfighters attacked two "big" naval targets south of Kharg Island, set the ships ablaze with "direct and effective hits" and returned safely to base.

The communique did not identify the type or nationality of the ships, and there was no immediate confirmation of the report from shipping sources.

The communique came a day after the foreign ministers of six Persian Gulf nations — members of the Gulf Cooperation Council — decided to seek help from the Arab League and the U.N. Security Council to protect oil tankers from hazards of the 44-month-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iraqi warplanes fired on two Saudi supertankers on April 25 and May 7. Two Kuwaiti tankers were attacked Sunday and Monday outside Iranian territorial waters, and a Saudi tanker was attacked in its own territorial waters Wednesday. The ministers blamed the three attacks earlier this week on Iran but did not mention the attacks attributed to Iraq.

The Iraqi spokesman said today's attack "underlines our capability to maintain" a four-month sea blockade on Kharg Island and other Iranian ports.

During the blockade, at least 19 Iranian and foreign ships sailing across the gulf region have been attacked.

Defense funding still won't include nerve gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has pursuaded Congress to approve billions of dollars for thousands of weapons as part of his record Pentagon buildup, but he still can't win approval for nerve gas, a weapon he says is "absolutely essential."

The House of Representatives voted 247-179 Thursday to reject a Defense Department request for $95 million in fiscal 1985 to build components for gas bombs and shells.

The vote came as the House worked its way through a huge bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $285 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, the fourth year of Reagan's five-year blueprint to "rearm America."

Chemical weaponry is the only major new Reagan program Congress has rejected.

Although the Republican-dominated Senate still has yet to consider the nerve gas questions, the margin of defeat in the Democrat-controlled House likely spells defeat for the program.

That is what happened last year, when the House overwhelmingly rejected nerve gas and the Senate approved it by a single vote. The issue went to a House-Senate conference committee for resolution and the House ban prevailed because of the size of the opposition vote compared to the narrow Senate approval.

Reagan, in a letter to House members, said "it is absolutely essential that we act now" to authorize new nerve gas weapons and strengthen the U.S. hand in U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at eliminating chemical weapons.

"I share your revulsion" of chemical weapons, Reagan wrote, but he said new gas weapons are the only way to get Moscow to negotiate.

DEATHS

E.L. Kownslar

CEDAR CREEK LAKE — Services for E.L. Kownslar, 73, of Cedar Creek Lake and formerly of Midland, were to be at 4 p.m. today in the Eubank Funeral Home Chapel at Mabank. Burial will be in Oaklawn Cemetery, Mabank.

Kownslar died Wednesday in a Dallas hospital after a lengthy illness.

He was born July 22, 1910, in Rodgers and married Jeanette Woodward on Sept. 5, 1975, in Dallas. He worked as a district superintendent for the Sun Oil Co. in Midland, retiring in 1970. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church of Mabank and the Cedar Creek Lake Kiwanis Club.

Survivors include his wife of Cedar Creek Lake; two daughters, Mrs. Lana Clark of Monroe, La., and Mrs Karen Robinson of Houston; and four grandchildren.

C.L. Schuelke

STANTON — Clarence Louis Schuelke, 60, of Houston, died Thursday at a Houston hospital after a sudden illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Monday at the Church of Christ in Stanton with Roland Hayes of Farmers Branch, and Deral McWhorter of Stanton, officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Schuelke was born Aug. 15, 1923, in Creedmoor. He moved to Houston 6½ years ago from Abilene. He was a World War II veteran and received the Bronze Star. He also was a veteran of the Korean Conflict. He married Iwana Hope Pinkerton July 24, 1943, in Midland. He was a division manager for Permian Corp. of Houston.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Rhonda Schuelke of Amarillo, and Karen Schuelke of Bellaire; four brothers, Cecil Schuelke of Midland, Herbert Schuelke of Stanton, Fred Schuelke of Ackerly, and Otto Schuelke of Port Lavaca; and two sisters, Etta Mae Robertson of Lake Brownwood, and Birgie Johnson of Stanton.

Robert Johnson

Robert Johnson, 58, of Midland, died Wednesday at his home after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Greater Ideal Baptist Church with the Rev. Johnnie Mitchell officiating. Burial will be at Fairview Cemetery directed by Roscoe V. Jackson Mortuary.

Johnson was born April 17, 1925, in McClennan County. He moved to Midland in 1952.

Survivors include his wife, Mary; four children, Carol Bowden and Robert Wayne Johnson of Dallas, and Kenneth Graham and Gregory Webster of Midland; his mother, Maggie Smith; and seven sisters, Ellen Tottenham of Temple, Sylvia Jefferies of Kansas City, Myrtle Haynes of Midland, Rose Lee Filmore of Odessa, Louise Solomon and Dorothy Crawford of Fort Worth and Bernice Booker of McGregor; and five grandchildren.

'Baby Melika' still shows promise

By DIANE M. BALK
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Ohio — A baby who weighs 14 ounces and is believed to be one of the smallest surviving infants in the country shows more promise the longer she lives, hospital officials say.

"Baby Melika" was born 18 weeks prematurely on April 26.

"When she was born, she was not expected to live, but she's been hanging in there for 2½ weeks. One of the doctors told me she seems to have the will to live," said Lydia Housman, a spokeswoman for Children's Medical Center.

"It's a day-by-day thing and it's difficult to make a prognosis," but Ms. Housman said that so far, the child has been doing well.

The child's mother, who has not been identified, was admitted to Grandview Hospital and Medical Center April 19. The child was born about 18 weeks before her due date and weighed 450 grams — less than an ounce short of a pound.

Once stabilized, the child was transferred to Children's Medical Center's Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

The baby recovered well from surgery performed May 9 to close an opening between the main artery and the pulmonary artery, Ms. Housman said. Although the opening normally closes on its own, doctors often intervene in premature babies to prevent possible damage from a respirator, she said.

The infant was listed in fair condition today, said nursing supervisor Sharon Mitchell. Her vital signs are stable but the prognosis is uncertain, Ms. Housman said.

Because the child is premature, she needs a respirator to breath and is being fed intravenously in a temperature-controlled environment. When she was last weighed Tuesday, she weighed 390 grams — about 14 ounces.

It is not uncommon for babies to lose weight after birth, Ms. Housman said.

Oxford English Dictionary to be computerized

LONDON (AP) — A century after scholars set out to define every English word from "aardvark" to "zymurgy" for the Oxford English Dictionary, an army of keyboard operators is preparing to produce a computerized version of the bulky reference book.

Announcing the $10 million project, the Oxford University Press said the computerized New Oxford English Dictionary was the biggest job it had undertaken since it started compiling the dictionary in 1884.

It will take 120 keyboard operators 12 to 18 months to type all 60 million words from the dictionary into computer memories, officials said. When the job is complete, every word in the language since 1150 A.D. will be ready for printing.

The first computer-generated version will be available in 1988, George Richardson, chief executive of Oxford University Press, said in a news conference. The main advantage of computerizing the dictionary is that it will be easier to update than it is now, he said.

The project also will allow the creation of an electronic dictionary accessible to any subscriber with a home computer, he said. Etymologists will be able to update the electronic computer daily, instead of having to publish supplements every few years.

The electronic version will also include national dictionaries of English as it is spoken in Australia, Canada and South Africa.

The computer science department at the University of Waterloo in Ontario has been commissioned to devise the software, and IBM, the U.S. computer giant, will provide the hardware.

The computer experts will have the challenge of designing a system that searches for words quickly, since the most advanced computer available now would take up to half an hour to conduct a word search through the entire dictionary, said Wes Graham, Waterloo's dean of computing.

Experts say the computerization of the dictionary will also help in the race to develop a new generation of computers which talk conversational English instead of today's cryptic dialect with its "bytes" and "gosubs" and "algorithms."

The first Oxford English Dictionary took 50 years to complete. The unabridged version, with 21,000 pages in 12 volumes plus four supplements, costs $770, and about 1,000 sets are sold annually. The Oxford University Press makes a much heftier profit from its smaller dictionaries.

James Murray, the chief compiler of the original Oxford English Dictionary, worked from slips of paper on which he defined individual words in elegant handwriting.

Murray left school at age 14, but was a teacher of Latin, Greek, French and German, English, geography and history. Before moving to Oxford, he wrote his dictionary entries in a gas-lit shed which he called his scriptorium, on the grounds of a London school.

Some of the words he catalogued were his own creations, such as anamorphose, "to distort into a monstrous projection." In the dictionary entry, he quoted himself as the source.

Allergies cripple lifestyle

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — LaNett Heinold has become a prisoner in her own home.

The captor is her extensive allergies.

Mrs. Heinold is allergic to such foods as beef, chicken, pork, milk, milk products, eggs, soybeans, anything with citric acid, and lettuce — to name only a few.

Other allergies that keep her inside her home include any type of tobacco smoke, animals, mold, dust, varieties of grasses, and the only tree she is not allergic to is mesquite.

"Tobacco smoke is by far the worst because it doesn't let me get out among people. We live in a society where many people smoke and it's hard," said Mrs. Heinold.

As if the above allergies are not bad enough to cripple the 31-year-old mother's lifestyle, her Victoria doctor discovered in February that she also has chemical sensitivities. Things that include gasoline, hairspray, perfumes and cologne, all of which are a part of our everyday lives.

And still another complication is a disease that doesn't allow her to eat sugar of any kind, artificial preservatives, flavorings or coloring, wheat, oats, rye, barley, cheeses or mushrooms.

Her doctor has her on daily shots, which she gives herself, and a rotating diet. In her diet, she can eat small amounts of the food she is allergic to so long as she eats it only every fourth day.

And the food she is not allergic to cannot be eaten two days consecutively. Obviously, her diet is difficult.

But the most difficult thing for her to do is to protect herself from the outside world. Her doctor has recommended that she wear a heavy mask, similar to surgical masks.

"The mask is the hardest thing of all. People look at me like I am a freak. They actually stop and stare," said Mrs. Heinhold.

She has just begun to wear it out in public or to the grocery store. She has, however, worn it at work (Harris Printing) for some time.

Harris Printing, as any office, has dust and chemicals from the ink that have adverse effects on her, so she has forced herself to wear the mask.

Mrs. Heinhold has given her notice to quit work because of her allergies.

But for the first time in 10 years, she is happy.

Her reactions and symptoms to her allergies are different. She has suffered migraine-type headaches, severe nausea, extreme fatigue, and rapid weight loss.

"I have seen doctors in five states and been checked from one end to the other. Twice!" said Mrs. Heinhold.

Since the doctors were unable to find something physically wrong to fit the symptoms, they decided it was "all in her head," but she said she knew differently. Her symptoms were very real.

"There were times my husband, as I did, thought maybe the doctors were right. I was so tired of being sick," she said.

Then her mother-in-law recommended a doctor in Victoria who specialized in women's diseases and allergies. In September 1983, Mrs. Heinhold met Dr. Richard Maybray, who discovered her problems were a result of severe allergies.

After testing to determine what she was allergic to (or in her case, what she is not allergic to), Mrs. Heinhold began treatment.

Her home had to be "desensitized," which meant removing all items that sit and collect dust and her only source of heat — a wood burning stove.

Family members washed down all the walls, cabinets, furniure, and ceilings — twice. They washed the carpets and the draperies.

Mrs. Heinhold's bedroom, which she describes as her "oasis," is also her place of solitude.

Her bedding, draperies and furniture must be washed weekly, her pillows dried in a dryer, and an air filter runs 24 hours a day to clean her air.

Because of the dust that circulates when cleaning, she must go to her "oasis" and shut the door while her children clean.

After the dust particles have settled, she can then move around in the house again.

Mrs. Heinhold says that even though it has been difficult, some good has come about.

Some bodies identified from sunken drilling ship

From Staff and Wire Reports

HOUSTON — Preliminary identifications of bodies found aboard an American drilling ship which sank seven months ago have left relatives of the dead grieving but relieved to finally know the truth.

"The unknown is what drove us crazy," Audrey Battiste of St. Elmo, Ala., told the Houston Chronicle on Thursday.

Officials of Global Marine Inc. of Houston told her Wednesday the body of her husband, Gerald, was one of 31 bodies retrieved from the wreckage of the Glomar Java Sea.

"Thank the Lord the body was found," she said.

Dick Vermeer, vice president of the Houston company which owns the ship, said 28 of the 31 bodies recovered, including 10 Chinese, have been identified.

Midlander Bernard Patrick Cates, 40, and Houstonian John Lawrence, 39, son of J.W. and Virginia Lawrence of Big Spring who recently moved to Iowa Park, were not among those identified by the Chronicle.

Houstonian Mark McCurry, son of Sue McCurry of Brownwood, was identified as one of the dead.

Vermeer refused to release a list of those identified.

But the Chronicle reported that, in addition to Battiste and McCurry, families identified the dead crewmembers as Kenneth Bart Rogers of Austin; David P. Clifton of Harvey, La.; Russell E. Reynolds of Kennebunk, Maine; Michael E. Thomas of Humboldt, Kansas; and Jerry Manfrida, working for Atlantic Richfield Co., the firm leasing the vessel.

Others were Raymond Miller, hometown unknown; Terance Green, Timothy Jarvis and Christopher Sleeman, all British employees of Analysts/Schlumberger; John Jennings Jr., hometown unknown; Kevin Swanson of Jackson, Miss.; and David Higgins, hometown unknown.

The Chronicle was unable to determine the identities of four other non-Chinese workers.

"I keep fluctuating between logic and hope," Patti Cates told the Reporter-Telegram this morning. She is the wife of Patrick, a sub-sea engineer aboard the Glomar Java Sea when it sank Oct. 25 during Typhoon Lex in the South China Sea carrying a crew of 81.

Divers recovered 31 bodies from the wreck in March and sighted three others which could not be retrieved. Forty-seven crewmembers are unaccounted for.

"Logically, there's not much chance," said Ms. Cates, who moved from Midland to Coleman last week to be closer to her family. "But until they bring all the bodies in, there is that thin shred of hope."

Cates has two children, Tina, 18, and Ben, 15. Living in Midland are his mother, Elate Cates; sister, Maril Cates Simmons; and Ms. Cates' brother, Alton Kidd.

Keeping in touch with relatives of other crew members has helped during the seven months of waiting, Ms. Cates said, "because they know exactly what you are feeling.

"I didn't know any of the wives until the ship went down."

At a meeting Global held in November, she said she met many relatives with whom she has kept in close contact by phone. Two of those are Betty Rogers, wife of Bart, and Linda Reynolds, wife of Russell, identified as two of the dead.

"She's in shock," Ms. Cates said after speaking to Ms. Rogers in Austin. "But we weren't expecting the identifications to be made for three more weeks."

Ms. Cates, who has had problems obtaining dental records on her husband, who had his wisdom teeth pulled in 1976, from a Fort Worth oral surgeon, said petitions are being circulated by several relatives in the area demanding that Global raise the ship.

There are four known bodies still on the ship and "very strong indications that there are more," Ms. Cates said.

"It would be difficult, it would be time-consuming and it would be expensive. But we're talking about four bodies that would bring some measure of knowledge, if nothing else, to some families.

"It's costly, but, compared to the families' peace of mind, it is the decent, moral thing to do. We're pushing that pretty strong. If Global won't do it, maybe the government will. ARCO, if neccessary, should assist. They have a responsibility to their employees."

Dry weather may spoil rafters' fun

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — Dry weather threatens to spoil Memorial Day for rafters and canoeists who generally populate the Guadalupe River.

Guadalupe River Basin Authority general manager John Specht said Thursday that the flow from Canyon Lake might be cut off completely if the drought continues. It was cut to 50 cubic feet per second Monday when the incoming flow fell to 35 cubic feet per second.

"If there is no inflow, there can be no release from storage unless there is a need for delivery of water to a bona fide purchaser downstream," Specht said.

When the lake level is below 909 feet above mean sea level, the river authority controls the rate of release downstream, where outfitters rent rafts, canoes and inner tubes to weekend "river rats."

Specht said the lake had dropped to 903.04 feet above sea level by Wednesday, a record low. He said he could not recall a time when the outflow was reduced below 50 cfs, except for temporary cutoffs for maintenance.

"We'll just have to wait and see what the weather does," he said.

Betty Walls, owner of Texas Canoe Trails, said Thursday that she is already booking trips for Memorial Day — May 26-28 — and said business is not alarmingly slow. But she is concerned about the possible cutoff.

"Back in '79, it (the river) got this low. It was at 50 cfs for 14 months, so we've been through similar conditions before. We're not doom and gloom. We're still open," she said.

She said the low level of the river encourages more families to come out because the flow is smoother, but likewise, the lack of "rapids" discourages thrill seekers.

Only tubes and canoes are being used because the currents are too narrow for the big commercial rafts, Ms. Walls said.

"People are still coming off the river and having a good time," she said. "But if it doesn't rain soon and they have to decrease the output, I don't know what will happen."

The low level of the Guadalupe also affects the Comal River, which flows into the Guadalupe. When the Guadalupe is low, the spring-fed Comal River drains faster, said Rusty Brandt of Camp Warnecke Resorts.

"Naturally we're concerned," he said. "But we don't have any direct effect as yet. We are getting a lot of questions about the water."

Brandt said the resort might lose some people if the drought continues.

"The philosophy we're taking is there's other things to do in New Braunfels," he said. "We're trying to stay optimistic."

South Texas cattlemen sell off breeding stock

LAREDO (AP) — Many South Texas cattlemen, faced with drought conditions, high interest rates and increasing prices for feed and ranch supplies, are being forced to sell off their herds, one veteran cattle buyer says.

Dr. Ben Hopson says bankers "should understand that cattlemen are in a real emergency situation," while Hopson's son, who raises cattle, warns that the industry may never fully recover from its current woes.

Webb and Zapata County ranchers also still feel the effects of last winter's freeze which destroyed grazing pastures and vegetation.

"There has not been enough rain since to revive the grass and brush," said Alfredo Vidaurri of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Laredo.

"We are now in the most drastic situation in the cattle business that I can remember. Range conditions have never been worse."

— Alfredo Vidaurri, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service

Cattle have nowhere to forage for food and "10 to 15 percent of the cattle now being sold at auction are weak and undernourished," said Hopson.

"We are now in the most drastic situation in the cattle business that I can remember," he said. "Range conditions have never been worse."

The light, scattered showers of the last two days have done little to help, he said.

Hopson said ranchers, who at first were selling off mature cattle rather than letting them starve on the parched range, "now are selling their breeding stock."

He estimated that 50 percent of the breeding herds in Webb County have already been liquidated.

Hopson's son, Ben, who grazes about 70 of his own cows on leased land, said the cattle industry may never recover from the current crisis.

"We had a drought about eight years ago and we've never recovered from that," the younger Hopson said, adding that Webb County once grazed more cattle than any other county in the country.

The younger Hopson said South Texas ranchers are experiencing the same difficulty West Texas cattlemen have had since the drought began last year.

Teachers, pupils like four-day week in spring

SANTA ANNA (AP) — There was no school today in Santa Anna.

But that's no surprise to the 390 students in the school system. They have not been to class on a Friday this month. Or last month. Or the month before that.

For the second year now, Santa Anna, 22 miles west of Brownwood, has used a four-day school week during the spring.

"Teachers like it, kids like it, and there have been no problems with it," Superintendent R.C. Smith told the Abilene Reporter-News.

The Texas Education Agency has no objections with it, he said, so long as the school gets in the required 175 days of class. Graduation will be May 25, which is no later than usual. To make up for the days of class missed on Fridays, the school did not have a spring break.

"This is one of the ways of solving Mr. Perot's complaint of students missing school," Smith said, referring to H. Ross Perot, the outspoken chairman of the governor's committee studying Texas public schools. Perot has criticized schools for allowing students to miss class.

As a result of the four-day week, attendance has been up, the superintendent told the Reporter-News.

Students are missing fewer classes because of University Interscholastic League events held on Fridays, he said, and there is less temptation to "play hooky," which usually occurs on Fridays.

The four-day week began in response to spring UIL events such as track, golf, tennis and literary meets that were causing students to miss class, mostly on Fridays.

"In a school our size, with about 100 in high school, a track meet for boys and girls takes about 50 kids and two teachers away from school," Smith said. "Consequently, we were unable to hold much class."

Vacant school means hard choices for communities

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — A year ago it was a school auditorium. Today it's a community theater workshop where actors, directors and lyricists can experiment far away from the hot breath of criticism.

It was once the school guidance center. Today it's an office for author Marjorie Michaels, who is finishing a book on the harmful effects of cosmetics. Ms. Michaels' rent is $116.50 a month — about one-fourth the cost of comparable office space in this affluent New York City suburb.

Further down the school corridor, bronze sculptor Herzl Emanuel forges his works in the same classroom where his son Adam attended first grade, before the Greens Farms School last June closed its doors to children forever.

Greens Farms, a 59-year-old brick building with Tudor arches and lush vistas, is one of more than 4,000 schools across the country shut down in the last decade or so because of declining enrollments.

SOME HAVE FALLEN prey to vandals and arsonists. In Providence, R.I., for instance, two of the nine schools closed in recent years have burned down in suspicious fires.

But many other vacant schools across the country are getting fresh leases on life as apartments, community centers or new businesses, although often not without heated neighborhood battles over those reincarnations.

Westport, long a haven for artists but desperately short of affordable studio space, decided last October to rent the school, temporarily at least, to community artists and actors.

But some residents favor converting Greens Farms into affordable housing. The Greens Farms artists, who occupy the school on a month-to-month leasing arrangement with the town, now fear they may lose their space.

"It's unfortunate," said Emanuel. "Some of the worst periods in my life were when my tenancy was uncertain. A lot of people wouldn't have joined this effort if we'd known our tenancy was so uncertain."

Actress June Havoc and actor Keir Dullea rehearse often in the Greens Farms auditorium and have joined the struggle to make the school the permanent Westport Center for the Arts.

MS. HAVOC broke off rehearsals for a new one-woman show, "An Unexpected Evening with June Havoc," to tell a reporter: "Having this place to work means we don't have to go to New York. It will attract other artists to Westport. I hope the community realizes that."

Towns with empty schools must first decide whether to sell them, or else keep them and lease them. That can depend on whether city fathers believe school enrollment might head up in the future.

Many now believe that nationwide enrollment in public elementary and secondary schools, which has dropped from 46 million to about 40 million since 1971, has bottomed out and will start to rise in 1985. But it's too early to say whether or when that will slow the trend of school closings.

BUT MONEY IS just as important. School districts increasingly can't afford extra school space.

The most frequent use for vacant schools "unquestionably" is housing, said Paul Abramson, director of the New York office of Educational Facilities Laboratories, a private, nonprofit organization that advises communities on recycling school buildings.

Conversions into condominium or cooperative housing often face fewer zoning obstacles than conversions into commercial space. And renovating a school into housing is usually 60 to 80 percent of the cost of putting up a new building.

A spot check by The Associated Press found former schools being converted into housing in, among other places, Minneapolis and Duluth, Minn., Prince Georges County, Md., Providence, R.I., Denver, St. Louis and Boston.

Local government often takes over school buildings. Many vacant schools have been recycled into child care centers, senior citizen centers and other social service agencies.

BUT OTHER KINDS of government takeovers can be less popular. Residents in Tulsa, Okla., protested and ultimately blocked plans to convert the abandoned Thoreau Elementary School into a police station.

"We objected because of the adverse traffic, and the fact that they'd be bringing criminals into the neighborhood," said Ken Adams, a public utility official.

Presidential candidates focus on group of 'super' delegates

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
The Associated Press

Walter Mondale and Gary Hart are battling in New Jersey while their campaigns scour a special group of unpledged delegates — party pros in each state — in search of crucial Democratic presidential nominating votes.

The third candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, remains in California where his appeal to minority voters shifted Thursday to Asian-Americans, and where he holds a fund-raiser tonight at the Los Angeles home of Jim Brown, former running back for the NFL's Cleveland Browns.

Mondale was flying to New Jersey today as Hart was leaving after a day of campaigning.

New Jersey's primary on June 5, with 107 delegates at stake, has emerged as a pivotal battleground, along with California. And Hart's backers were starting to talk optimistically about the Garden State, once seen as likely Mondale territory.

"We have an upset in the making," said New Jersey state Democratic Party chairman Jim Maloney, a Hart backer. He acknowledged, however, that Mondale probably leads in the state now.

Hart was heading to Idaho, which decides 18 delegates next week, and on to California, where 306 delegates are at stake June 5.

On the Republican side, President Reagan's campaign unveiled a set of new television commercials — with $2 million worth being aired over eight days starting Monday.

Each shows a cheery scene, without Reagan, as an announcer says, "It's morning again, America." The idea, said campaign manager Ed Rollins, is to stress that things are looking up in the country under Reagan.

As the Democratic hopefuls campaign, their staff delegate-hunters are focusing on what are being called "super" delegates — and Mondale has a formidable lead among them.

They are the 568 delegates being selected from the ranks of Democratic congressmen, other elected officials and party activists. Under party rules, they are free to back any candidate they like.

AP Laserphoto

Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson grasps the hands of two members of the Asian-American for Jackson coalition during a campaign stop in the Little Tokyo district of Los Angeles Thursday. Jackson's stop marked the first by a presidential candidate in that district.

Among the 372 super delegates chosen thus far, Mondale leads, 172 to 32 for Hart. Jackson has 11, Chicago Mayor Harold Washington is backing himself, and 156 say they are uncommitted, according to the latest Associated Press delegate count.

Mondale now has 1,609.05 delegates to 980.75 for Hart, with 700 still to be selected, including 196 "super" delegates. It takes 1,967 to win the nomination.

Thomas Donilon, deputy director of Mondale's campaign, said, "To date, Gary Hart has shown no ability or little ability to gain the support of unpledged delegates and uncommitted delegates."

But Carol Casey, a Hart delegate hunter, said "Mondale has gotten almost all the endorsements he can" from super delegates and that Hart has wide support from state legislators who may be chosen to fill out the super delegate slates.

Personal financial statements for both Hart and Mondale were made public Thursday, and Mondale's showed he continues to receive $10,000 a month from his Washington law firm this year while he campaigns.

Girl returned to home where she was allegedly raped by family members

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A children's advocate attacked a decision to let an 11-year-old girl stay with her family even though she was allegedly raped by her father and abused by two brothers, but a state official said the action was "appropriate."

"Just because a child is abused in the home doesn't mean it's not where the child belongs," said Tom McFadyen, of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

The girl's father is in jail, charged with raping her. Her 14-year-old brother, who recently served time in a juvenile detention center for sexually abusing her, has been returned to the center for allegedly attacking her again, officials say. And police say a complaint has been filed against her 16-year-old brother, accusing him of also sexually abusing her.

Georgia Mann, founder of Justice for Children, an advocacy group for child abuse victims, said she received a call from a woman who is a neighbor of the family in Wahneta asking that some action be taken.

"She said, 'I know all about it (the abuse). And I saw her. She's still living there,'" Mrs. Mann said, adding that she has voiced her concern to Gov. Bob Graham and state Rep. Beverly Burnsed, who chairs the House Committee on Health and Rehabilitative Services.

"I want to know why they (officials) didn't act. If we cannot protect this 11-year-old child, it doesn't say much for us as adults or human beings," Mrs. Mann said.

The department believes it did the right thing in recommending to a judge that the victim be allowed to live at home, according to McFadyen, who oversees the department's Child, Youth and Family Division in Polk County. The girl reportedly told officials she did not want to be removed from her family.

"I have reviewed this case several times," he said Thursday. "And I'm more convinced that our original treatment plan was appropriate."

McFadyen said the state confidentiality law forbids him to discuss a specific case. He would say only, "It's a very, very complicated case."

In general, he said, the department always tries "to protect the child first — that's our prime objective. After we're assured of that, we look to do everything we can to support a family situation.

"You have to strike a balance between the family structure and the protection of the child," he said.

"Sometimes to take a child out of an environment where he or she feels safe and protected, and put that child in with strangers where he or she is not comfortable, can be traumatic."

Names are not being published to protect the girl.

The father has been in jail since March, unable to make $13,000 bond on charges of sexual battery and incest for allegedly raping the girl in their home in Wahneta, a town 60 miles east of Tampa.

Sheriff's deputies have filed an affidavit alleging the girl's older brother also raped her. The youth reportedly fled the family's trailer after his father and brother were taken into custody.

Circuit Judge J. Tim Strickland said Wednesday that compassion and a hope of rehabilitation prompted him to put the 14-year-old on probation after the youth had served 20 days in Polk Regional Detention Center.

Reagan softened attack on Federal Reserve Board

By DAVID HOFFMAN
The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan softened the administration's criticism of the Federal Reserve Board this week after some of his economic advisers, led by Office of Management and Budget director David A. Stockman, warned privately that the attack on the Fed was a serious mistake.

Reagan "had to rein in the whole excercise," said an informed administration official. "It was futile."

A second official said Reagan intended to criticize the Fed but the episode "got out of hand."

The criticism of the Fed was leveled by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and presidential spokesman Larry Speakes after major banks raised the prime rate to 12.5 percent on May 8. They accused the Fed of an overly tight monetary policy at a time when the economy appeared to be growing at a "healthy pace" and not overheating while inflation remained low.

The jump in the prime rate sent election-year shudders through the White House, revealing how seriously rising interest rates are viewed by Reagan's advisers as a threat to the president's re-election campaign.

IT ALSO exposed, once again, the deep divisions among Reagan's top economic advisers, particularly the tension between Regan and Martin S. Feldstein, who submitted his long-expected resignation as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers the day after the Fed criticism was aired.

In retrospect, several officials said the administration's reaction was overheated by these tensions. They said the White House had intended to express a mild dissatisfaction with the Fed, but the rhetoric was fueled beyond their expectation by festering disagreement between Regan and Feldstein.

"It was supposed to be a subtle repositioning of Reagan in case things went sour later on," said one official. "But it became a blunt instrument, it became Fed-bashing."

Concern about interest rates had been simmering at the White House even before the prime-rate increase, particularly with White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and presidential assistant Richard G. Darman, officials said.

The Fed influences interest rates by its control over the money supply; although technically independent, the Fed often has been pressured by presidents to loosen the money supply in an election year. In past campaigns, Reagan had often decried this practice, saying it contributed to the rampant inflation of the 1970s.

THIS SPRING, Reagan's advisers were concerned that the Fed was tightening the money supply further than necessary, given the economy's pace and the current low inflation. They noted that the most commonly used money supply measure, known as M-1, was near the bottom of the Fed's target range, and that interest rates were creeping upward.

Privately, Reagan signaled Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul A. Volcker about this concern, officials said.

At the same time, the president was using a purposely vague public statement on the subject, saying he wanted enough growth in the money supply to "continue the recovery without returning us to inflation," but not specifying what that was.

When the prime rate hit 12.5 percent, the third increase this year, Regan and Feldstein sent the White House proposed responses. Feldstein said it was "a normal reaction to the rise in the cost of funds to banks" and attributed the overall rise in interest rates to the "strength of demand" from borrowers. His statement suggested support for the Fed's policies.

Regan's statement expressed "disappointment" that the prime went up and noted that the economy was expanding at a "healthy pace" with low inflation. It then accused the Fed of "not accommodating real economic growth." Regan also said that deficits were not at fault for the rise in interest rates.

BAKER AND Darman chose the Regan statement, which was stronger language than the administration had previously used. They modified it to leave out the line about deficits, and the president approved it. Speakes delivered it to reporters that afternoon.

Feldstein, however, continued to express his own views, unfettered by the official statement. This angered Regan, according to one official familiar with his thinking. Regan's criticism of the Fed escalated in days that followed, and he said at one point that the central bank might drive the economy into another recession.

De Lorean chief witness details past

By JOHN KENDALL
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Jowly, pale and graying, James Timothy Hoffman, the government's chief witness in the John Z. DeLorean cocaine-trafficking trial, discussed his drug-smuggling past from the witness stand Thursday and admitted that he turned informer "to stay out of jail."

Hoffman, 43, a big, soft-looking man in a three-piece light brown suit, raised his right hand and swore to tell the truth as DeLorean, 59, and his 34-year-old wife, model Cristine Ferrare DeLorean, watched from across the room.

Moments before Hoffman entered the guarded courtroom, DeLorean told reporters sitting nearest him, "I forgive him. I forgive all these people. God created those kinds of human beings."

It was Hoffman who first told government agents nearly two years ago that DeLorean wanted to invest in a narcotics deal to save his car company. After an investigation, DeLorean was arrested on charges 4-220 pounds of cocaine into the United States.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James P. Walsh Jr. questioned Hoffman about his past in apparent expectation of an all-out attack on Hoffman's credibility by defense attorney Howard L. Weitzman, who said Thursday, "I look forward to cross-examining him."

Guided by the prosecutor's questions, Hoffman described three successful smuggling trips to Ecuador in 1976. He calculated that he had rec$tal of $35,000 for helping to bring in 70 pounds to 80 pounds of refined cocaine and 275 pounds of raw cocaine paste.

Hoffman, a former aircraft salesman, said that he worked for a drug smuggler named Robert Durand n's job to find a plane and provide "cover," he said.

He took his wife and children and invited neighbors to go along to make it appear that the flight to South America was for business or pleasure. On return flights, he said, the cocaine was hidden in a bathroom wall.

Hoffman testified that he had a falling out with Durand and did not smh about three years until 1979, when he plotted with Durand to importSouth America and Thailand.

He had expected to become a millionaire in April of that year by smuggling 5,000 pounds of marijuana into Florida by plane and boat. But the flight plan went awry.

The pilot of that flight was William Morgan Hetrick, 52, the Mojave, Calif., air service company owner, who later would be arrested with DeLorean. About five years earlier, Hoffman had worked for Hetrick selling jet aircraft modified by the pilot-inventor.

Under Walsh's questioning, Hoffman admitted that he had lied in a deposition filed in San Diego in 1979. The sworn statement said that Hoffman had perjured himself in a Ventura County Superior Court when he testified that Hetrick had taken a $10,000 kickback for sale of a modified aircraft.

Welcome rain

Wouldn't you know it! For months it doesn't rain. Long months when the soil dries out, blowing dust becomes a permanent part of the Midland atmosphere and "drought" returns to common usage in the English language.

Then one day when the time seems right, a decision is made to — once again — editorially call on President Reagan to make disaster assistance available to farmers and ranchers in this part of Texas. What happens? Oh, nothing. It's just raining straight down when the newspaper — and the drought assistance editorial — hits the streets.

Of course that doesn't matter, even if we did come out soaking wet and feeling a bit foolish. It wasn't the first time and probably won't be the last because in this business one pays his money and takes his chances.

The larger reason it doesn't matter is that the two-inch rainfall that was recorded as of mid-morning Thursday — the first significant rainfall to be recorded in Midland this year, it might be noted — did not change facts in any regard. The rain was enjoyable. The rain was soothing. The rain was envigorating. The rain was ... well, it's impossible to say enough good about it.

But the rain, aside from the obvious charactefistics such as its extremely poor timing, really was too little, too late. Nothing will be changed, except that Midland may green up a bit in coming days and vegetable gardens may do better than expected. For the farmers and ranchers in this area and elsewhere in West Texas, the drought has already taken its toll. A lot of cattle already have been sold because of the lack of pasture grass and planting has been overlooked in some areas.

Any help that is forthcoming still is needed.

One more thing. Don't look for any more drought editorials any time soon.

Working for kids

A Midland group concerned about the low number of black Midlanders volunteering as foster parents for black youngsters are doing something about it. They've organized and this Saturday will be conducting a gospel and contemporary music festival to raise funds for [illegible] primarily black foster children.

The group, known as Kids Foster Home, Inc., already has found a house and a lot that can be used for the purpose. All they need is $5,000 to get the house moved and [illegible]. After the house is [illegible], they say, they'll worry about getting the funds to furnish it, refurbish it and operate it.

The Texas Department of Human Resources office in Midland will [illegible] for placement of up to six foster children and will take applications and study anyone interested in serving as foster parents in the home.

The effort is commendable in a number of respects. These are Midlanders who are willing to act to improve the quality of life for youngsters in their community. They're not relying on government sources for funds; they're willing to work to raise local funds for that purpose. They're goal is to make a positive change for children in the community — all children, although the group's initial thrust has been in the black community.

Freewill is taking steps to bring about positive change. Midland will never have too many organizations like that!

Another view

On with the show

Surely the time has come to take the Soviet Union at its word, at least when that word applies to Russian participation in the Los Angeles Olympic Games. Moscow's decision to boycott the Games, according to Soviet Sports Minister Marat Gramov, is "irrevocable." That declaration, made one week after the first announcement that the Russians would be staying home, is both as official and as firm as a rejection can be, and those who still hold some finite hope that the Soviets might be coaxed into changing their minds ought to recognize it as such. At this point further hand-wringing or pleading with Moscow becomes unseemly.

Gramov did at least add a few lurid details to the concerns that the Soviets claim motivated their boycott plans. The situation in the United States, he said, "threatens not just the tranquility and health of our athletes but their very lives." Specifically, "methods have been developed to pressure Soviet people not to return home, including using psychotropic hallucinogenic drugs," as well as "kidnapping." That goes one better the fears expressed the other day by Victor Louis, a Russian journalist who is often used as a conduit to the West. Louis, invoking the specter of Soviet athletes being preyed on by "blond starlets" riding around in "white Cadillacs," worried that the athletes would have to expend so much energy fending off the seductive lures of the locals that they would be in no shape to compete in the Games.

Those Games will in any case go on. The absence of Soviet bloc athletes means that the competition in some venues won't be truly world-class, but the pageantry and excitement need not be any the less for that. The Soviets have made their choice, and there is no reason to think that they will reverse themselves. The focus now ought to be on getting on with the best possible Games. The Olympics have been diminished, but they remain the Olympics — a showplace for the best in athletic talent, a gathering of nations, a spectacle that in scope and color has no rival.

Early tests showed chopper fault

WASHINGTON — I've cited evidence in the past that the Army would rather spend money on fancy new hardware than on making their existing equipment safe. So hundreds of GIs have died in accidents that might have been prevented.

Jack Anderson

A case in point is the Army's workhorse helicopter, the venerable OH-58. My associate Donald Goldberg has seen the Army's internal safety records on the chopper, and they are disturbing. While the brass hats bicker over what to do about the OH-58, accidents keep happening, and they're often fatal.

According to the Army's own experts, the problem with the copter is that it has an alarming tendency to lose power in the tail rotor while operating at low speeds and low altitudes. This is most likely to happen during takeoffs and landings. When the tail rotor's power goes, the OH-58 spins out of control and crashes.

This fatal drawback should have been no surprise to the Army. "The marginal effectiveness of the OH-58 tail rotor was documented through developmental testing prior to acceptance of the helicopter by the Army," one internal document states. But apparently no one regarded this as a serious problem at the time.

From 1980 through 1982, the Army's OH-58 choppers were involved in 47 accidents, resulting in four deaths and 11 major injuries. Of the 47 accidents, 34 began at altitudes lower than 100 feet, and 25 of these were due to either tail rotor or engine problems.

But the brass mysteriously delayed spending the several hundred million dollars that would have corrected the problem. Safety experts, in an "eyes only" cable, expressed their dismay: "Such a delay would unnecessarily continue to expose our air crews and aircraft to a proven safety hazard."

This warning brought an "eyes only" response that cleared up the mystery, if not the problem. Allocating funds to make the OH-58 safe, the cable explained, would be "contrary to the aviation community's conscious decision to buy new assets at the expense of product-improving our current fleet."

In other words, the "aviation community" would rather buy new helicopters than make the old OH-58s safe. If the Army stalled long enough, maybe Congress would give it money for new ones.

Understandably, this candid admission was not supposed to be spread around. The cable warned: "No reference should be made to this message in other ... channels."

Evidently in hopes of justifying the delay in making the helicopters safe to operate, the cable continued: "A careful review of OH-58 accidents shows that pilot error was the primary cause (78 percent of the time). Admittedly, loss of tail rotor effectiveness was a contributing cause in (13 percent of the ... accidents."

Blaming the pilot was easy enough, since the Army admits that there is little or no margin for error in the OH-58. Anything short of perfection could lead to disaster. But the Pentagon Pollyannas suggested that such superhuman pilot performance was simply "a matter of training, discipline and leadership."

So instructions were wired to all commands using the OH-58 that it should not be flown at less than 35 knots when at altitudes below 500 feet unless absolutely necessary. As several commands were quick to point out, pilots were already painfully aware of this.

FAST FOR LIFE: I've reported before on the dubious evidence used to convict American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier for murder in the deaths of two FBI agents during a 1975 shootout on the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota. Affidavits by an Indian woman were self-contradictory, and the FBI allegedly doctored ballistics evidence.

The Indian leader recently won an evidentiary hearing to determine whether a new trial is warranted because of the challenged ballistics evidence. But it may come too late for Peltier.

In mid-April, Peltier and two other prisoners began a hunger strike at the federal pen in Marion, Ill., where Peltier was sent to serve two consecutive life sentences. They complained that prison authorities had confiscated and destroyed their religious artifacts, and they were no longer able to practice their traditional Indian beliefs. So they refused to eat until they were allowed to practice their religion.

"They have taken away the only aspect of our lives that kept us spiritually alive and human," Peltier said, so the hunger strike is the only religious expression left to them. That's why they call it a "fast for life."

Two weeks ago, the three prisoners were moved to a prison hospital at Springfield, Ill., where attempts were made to force-feed them. They got a court order forbidding the force-feeding.

EVANS & NOVAK

Feldstein leaves legacy of anger

WASHINGTON — When Dr. Martin Feldstein returns triumphant to Harvard, he will leave a legacy of anger, frustration and second thoughts in the White House about naming non-Reaganites to make policy in the Reagan administration.

Rowland Evans

Feldstein announced his long-scheduled resignation in the style that dominated his tenure as chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers (CEA). He neglected the courtesy normally shown a chief executive, using the event to command the news media with direct hits on President Reagan's economic policy.

Robert Novak

Such performances have made Feldstein a hero to Reagan critics — in the news media, among liberal Republicans but most particularly among partisan Democrats getting ready for the 1984 presidential campaign. White House staffers, who in August 1982 rejoiced that they had picked as the president's adviser a prestigious economist free of political or ideological taint, have long tasted regret.

Those regrets were reinforced May 8 when the prime rate vaulted to 12.5 percent. Republican euphoria over Reagan's re-election turned to fear over a tight-money debacle. Cautious White House prodding of the Federal Reserve Board to aim at nurturing the economic recovery, not shutting it off, had failed. Thus, the president's men gathered in near despair to decide what "guidance" to give spokesman Larry Speakes.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, the loyalist, advised the White House not to scapegoat bankers but instead blame the Fed. Feldstein's alternative "guidance" was to praise his good friend, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, for holding down an alleged inflationary upsurge, which is thus far invisible to the naked eye. As usual, Regan's advice prevailed. As usual (but in violation of customary governmental practice), Feldstein publicly voiced his dissent.

However, he went one step further this time. At 8 o'clock the next morning, selected economic reporters summoned to Feldstein's office for coffee heard him disclose long-scheduled plans to leave Washington in July for Harvard's fall semester. The normal courtesy of first exchanging letters with the president was ignored. The White House learned of Feldstein's action through calls from newsmen to presidential aides arriving in their offices at 9 o'clock.

But courtesy's loss was publicity's gain. Feldstein's reiterated praise of the Fed's tight-money policy was not only spread over newspaper front pages across the nation. It poured out over no less than eight national television shows on which he personally appeared.

The notion of the Harvard don scampering around Washington from one TV studio to another contradicts the carefully-constructed image of the incorruptible academician who puts truth above political expediency. Actually, Feldstein bungled his key CEA duty of economic forecasting.

While publicly dissenting from administration policy by urging higher taxes, he consistently underestimated growth (3.1 percent for 1983, just half the actual performance) and overestimated unemployment (10.3 percent for the last quarter of 1983, compared to the actual 7.8 percent). Two days after his resignation-publicity coup, the Producer Price Index was announced at 0.0 percent — scarcely validating Feldstein's worries of renewed inflation.

While Feldstein projects himself as a non-political visiting professor, he has succumbed to the old Potomac malady of sudden political wisdom. Lately, he has expressed concern about the administration's vulnerability to the "fairness" issue. He consequently has been advising Republicans in Congress not to stick to a pure flat tax but to put a surcharge on incomes over $100,000 — sounding like Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson.

But the potentially most effective Reagan countermeasure on the "fairness" question — doubling the dependents tax exemption — came under Feldstein's fire in a supposedly confidential memo he sent to the president. The memo was quickly leaked, providing ammunition for Democrats when — as is probable — candidate Reagan unveils the doubled exemption as a pro-family device.

The White House brought all this on itself nearly two years ago by picking an economic adviser who was on record against Reagan tax policies. Old Reaganites were fleeing the administration then and new ones were not wanted. Within a year, the senior staff decided Feldstein must go. But opera bouffe bungling last summer, highlighted by Speakes's seemingly intentional mispronunciation of Feldstein's name, interfered. Ronald Reagan never likes to fire anybody and, warning of claimed anti-Semitism, found his excuse for keeping Feldstein on.

So the president must accept much of the blame for Feldstein's legacy, which includes this paradox at a time of maximum economic and political danger for the administration: Don Regan is exposed to charges of vilification for promoting the president's policies; Feldstein, having failed tests of both political loyalty and economic competency, is lionized as the man of courage standing above impending ruin.

CHARLEY REESE

Fortress America a dead end

Isolationists who want to retreat into a fortress America may get their wish if the Congress continues to nickel and dime our allies, undercut every effort to stand up to aggression, chop defense spending, and put strings and conditions on aid to every ally who does not meet their utopian standards of being a perfectly humane democracy.

Charley Reese

When that happens, of course, they will discover what it's like to live in a fortress under siege. One of the things which happens is economic hardship as supplies from outside are cutoff and massive unemployment results. Another thing which happens is that the battles are fought inside the fortress so that it's our homes and our children who will become the victims of bombs and bullets.

Fortress America under siege will be a doomed Alamo. There will be no calvary to ride to the rescue nor will there be a Sam Houston to avenge us in a latter battle. We are it and when we fall, as we surely will if we are isolated, that will be that. Kaput. Finito. End. Thirty. The next war will be the war between the totalitarians as they fight over the carcass of freedom.

Many Americans have a pathological will to disbelieve three things:

1. That the Soviet Union is indeed an evil empire, powerful, aggressive, and engaged in a war to destroy the United States and every other democratic government.

2. That as part of its war, it operates a fifth Column inside the United States the purpose of which is to hamper our defense buildup, discredit our allies, prevent us from aiding them effectively, disparage our leaders and our institutions, and in every way weaken our ability to withstand the Soviet Union.

3. That every war, even an undeclared one, requires sacrifice and discipline.

These same Americans tend to believe:

1. That all conflicts can be resolved by negotiations.

2. That war can be prevented by disarmament conferences.

3. That if something is really horrible, it is impossible, and that if it is not impossible, then it cannot happen to us.

The rest of the world does not labor under these illusions, but geography, luck, and prosperity have combined to create a narcosis in the United States. For some reason it has become fashionable to downplay the reality of the Soviet Union.

For example, there is an enormous clamor over some political assassinations in Central America carried out by extremist groups in the midst of a civil war, but nothing is said much about the Soviet Union, as part of its official, premeditated policy, constructing booby-trapped toys and then dropping them in Afghanistan. The purpose is to blow the hands and arms off children and thus create despair and terror among the Afghan villagers.

In my hierarchy of horrors, it is worse for a government to blow the hands off children to gain a political objective than it is for one politician to shoot another politician.

I do not believe that people who would construct such a policy have sufficient moral character to be trusted in any kind of agreement. Can you really trust a man willing to maim children on purpose to keep his word? Can you trust a government which is excessively secretive and which routinely lies even about such innocuous subjects as egg production?

It is true, of course, we ourselves have done savage things in past wars, like fire-bombing Tokyo and nuking Hiroshima and Nagasaki. I don't doubt that under sufficient provocation we would do similar things in the future.

It is not and never has been my premise that we are saints and the Russians are devils, only that the Russians are devils and that they threaten us. Survival necessarily precedes perfection of our souls.

I would suggest to those Americans so stricken with guilt that they do not feel worthy of survival that they heed the words of Marcus Aureluis: "The door is always open."

The rest of us will manage our guilt and concentrate on defeating our enemies.

Workers of the BMW car factory in Munich, Germany, take a break in some unassembled seats shortly before they staged a two-hour walkout Thursday. They protested the closing down of the assembly lines announced by the company for late Thursday night due to the lack of car parts. Car parts have to be delivered from the strike-affected Stuttgart area.

House, Senate deadlock on aid to Nicaraguans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration official predicts the House will approve emergency military aid to El Salvador and undercover assistance to Nicaraguan rebels following the breakdown of negotiations with the Senate on key Central American spending issues.

"It will be fight, but I think we can do it," William L. Schneider, undersecretary of state for security assistance, said after two days of talks by a House-Senate conference committee ended in disagreement Thursday.

Senate conferees continued to support the $62 million emergency appropriation for El Salvador and the $21 million in spending for the Nicaraguan guerrillas that were approved by the Republican-controlled Senate last month.

Conferees from the Democratic-controlled House, which has not voted to appropriate funds this year for either purpose, refused to go along with the Senate or to strike a compromise. This set the stage for votes, probably next week, in the House.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, conceded that "we could lose on the House floor" on the Salvadoran issue, since the House voted 211-208 last week to authorize military aid to the Central American country.

But Democrats said they believe the House, which voted last year against the undercover operation in Nicaragua, remains opposed to assisting the guerrilla insurgency against the leftist Sandinista government.

The conferees met against a backdrop of new revelations concerning CIA activity in Central America, where the Reagan administration says U.S. aid is needed to prevent the leftist government of Nicaragua and Marxist-led rebels in El Salvador from spreading their influence.

Administration and congressional officials said the Reagan administration proposed using the CIA to secretly ship 14 helicopters to El Salvador's army, but the plan was abandoned after Democratic leaders of the House Intelligence Committee protested.

Two sources said six of the helicopters were to be armed, combat copters and the other eight were for transportation and medical evacuation. El Salvador now has about 20 helicopters. The sources, who declined to be identified, said the Intelligence Committee leaders objected to bypassing congressional appropriation procedures.

In another development in the debate over Central America, Senate leaders sent a letter to all senators counseling them to check with the Senate Intelligence Committee before divulging any intelligence information, regardless of where they obtain it.

The letter stemmed from Intelligence Committee complaints about a speech by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., saying the CIA had backed Jose Napoleon Duarte in his successful campaign for the Salvadoran presidency. Helms said he got his information from sources in El Salvador, not from the Intelligence Committee.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., in their letter to senators, said:

"If any senator receives information about alleged intelligence activities from sources other than the Intelligence Committee, he or she should bear in mind that such information may well be classified and the subject of the committee's oversight. Accordingly, he should seek the advice of the committee before making any public comment."

Long, who played a key role in blocking conference committee agreement on the Salvadoran issue, plans to meet with Duarte next Tuesday during the Salvadoran president-elect's visit to Washington.

"The best way to help Duarte is to hold the money up" to put pressure on the Salvadoran military to cooperate with the country's new administration, Long argued.

Although the committee failed to reach agreement on the key issues, it did agree on $7 million for refugee assistance to El Salvador, $500,000 to protect witnesses and jurors in the case of four murdered U.S. churchwomen in El Salvador and several conditions which the Senate voted to apply to the emergency aid.

Strikes spreading through auto industry

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Audi and BMW automakers decided to shut down their factories today, saying a spreading strike by workers seeking a 35-hour work week has made it impossible to keep assembly lines moving.

Workers in the auto parts industry began striking Monday, and auto manufacturers said they were forced to stop production because of dwindling inventories.

The strikers want the shorter week with no cut in pay. Union leaders say the change will create jobs for some of West Germany's 2.25 million unemployed workers, 9.1 percent of the labor force.

Employers adamantly oppose a 35-hour work week without pay cuts, saying it would increase costs by 14 to 18 percent and cripple West Germany in the international market.

The campaign for slashing five hours off the 40-hour work week also has hit the West German printing industry. Union leaders said the workers' actions would stop the presses at major newspapers in West Berlin, Frankfurt, Munich, Cologne and other cities or force publishers to put out thinner editions today and Saturday.

Audi and BMW said they would shut down their assembly lines at 5 p.m. today. The BMW plant in Munich produces about 2,000 cars a day; the two affected Audi plants prduce a total of about 1,700 units daily.

About 8,000 workers at BMW's Munich plant put down their tools for two hours Thursday to protest management's decision to stop production.

Ford of Cologne, a subsidiary of the American auto company, said it will have to curtail production next week if strikes in 15 car parts factories are not resolved in time.

Volkswagen told workers at six factories it would be forced to curtail production beginning Wednesday because of the parts' shortage.

Audi announced it will close its assembly lines at Ingolstadt and Neckarsulm for the same reason.

The IG Metal metalworkers union Thursday ordered 33,000 members in the West German state of Hesse to join the wave of strikes on Monday. This will also put 12,000 non-union workers out of a job, IG Metal said.

The largest automaker to be affected in Hesse is Adam Opel AG, a subsidiary of General Motors.

The metalworkers union called out 13,000 members at 15 car part factories in the Stuttgart area Monday to pressure automakers on the work-week issue.

On Thursday, pickets blocked the gates to the Mercedes-Benz car plant in suburban Stuttgart. A plant security official said picketing strikers prevented workers from entering the plant.

The company announced Wednesday it was shutting down production because of dwindling supplies of parts.

In the industrial Ruhr town of Dortmund, 10,000 workers left their jobs and marched to the city center to demonstrate solidarity for the strikes in the Stuttgart area.

Political dissidents form group

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Leading South Korean political dissidents today announced formation of a political group which they said will pursue "a struggle for democratization."

The move was in direct defiance of a special law enacted by the government of President Chun Doo-hwan in 1980, since most leading members in the new political group, including former opposition leader Kim Young-sam, are on a political blacklist drawn up under the special legislation.

Soviet Union recalls diplomat

PARIS (AP) — The Soviet Union has recalled a diplomat at France's request after French counterintelligence reported that he had approached officials and engineers of several high-technology companies, official sources say.

Asked for comment, the Foreign Ministry said Thursday there had been "no expulsion," but "there may have been some personnel changes" at the Soviet Embassy.

France expelled 47 Soviet diplomats and embassy personnel in April 1983 for conduct "not conforming" with their stated missions in France — a clear reference to espionage activities. Government sources said later the expulsions were connected to a major Soviet effort to steal classified technology.

The recalled Soviet diplomat was not identified, but the sources said he was part of the 200-man Soviet commercial delegation in France.

Iranians flood polls for elections

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Millions of Iranians went to the polls in the second phase of parliamentary elections for 151 seats left unfilled in the first phase.

The elections Thursday were for races in which no candidate received more than 50 percent of the vote in the April 15 balloting.

IRNA, the official news agency, said an "enthusiastic turnout" had necessitated a two-hour extension of voting time. The agency said the results of the elections are expected to be announced next week.

The new 270-member assembly would be Iran's second parliament since the Islamic revolution of 1979. Its main task would be to endorse the policies of Tehran's clergy-dominated regime.

Conservative arrested at gay club

LONDON (AP) — A member of Parliament arrested at a homosexual night club that features male strippers has been charged with indecent assault, authorities said.

Conservative Keith Hampson, who resigned Saturday as a top aide to Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine, was served with a summons Thursday, the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions announced.

Hampson, 40, is accused of indecent assault on a plainclothes policeman in a club in London's Soho district May 3 and is due to appear in magistrates court June 4, the office said.

Hampson, who kept his seat in Parliament, told Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association, that he was innocent.

Pitti Palace museum reopens

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — The famed Pitti Palace museum has reopened after crews cleared away rubble from explosions last Saturday that injured 10 people.

Officials at the museum, which reopened Thursday, said they were convinced the blasts were caused by a gas leak. They occurred in administrative offices and did not damage the museum's priceless collection of 16th and 17th century paintings.

Italian newspapers said Thursday that prosecutors had issued legal papers warning a local gas company it was being investigated for negligence in connection with the explosions.

Police Commissioner Umberto Catalano said it was "almost 100 percent certain" a gas leak was to blame. He said the odorless gas exploded when someone lit a cigarette.

Five killed in shooting at clinic

Espinosa

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Police in Matamoros continued the hunt for six gunmen who stormed a health clinic, killing five people and wounding a doctor during an unsuccessful gangland hit of a reputed organized crime kingpin.

Federal, state and municipal investigators, who had joined in the search, had no solid clues but believed the six fatigue-clad assassins who swept through the Clinica Raya at about 7:30 a.m. Thursday had returned to the United States.

The target of the bloody attack, Casimiro Espinosa, 31, escaped unharmed when he threw himself under a bed. Espinosa was in the clinic being treated for a bullet wound suffered in a shootout earlier in the week, authorities said.

Espinosa's sister, Norma Emilia Espinosa-Campos, 35, was killed as she shielded her brother from the gunmen, said Inspector Ernesto Danache, Matamoros police chief. The guard outside Espinosa's door, Nestor Torres Torres, 25, also was killed.

Bullets from automatic weapons pierced the walls beside Espinosa's bed. One of them struck and killed Virginia Sifuentes, 34, who was resting in a bed in the next room.

Two other clinic patients, Victor Raul Revulcada, 35, and his son, Norberto, 17, being treated in a room down the hall, also died from bullet wounds, Danache said.

Dr. David Arrevelo, who was working in the clinic at the time the gunmen burst in, was listed in grave condition at Matamoros General Hospital, a clinic spokeswoman said.

After the shooting, Espinosa was transferred to his elaborate two-story home across the street from the clinic. Armed guards were posted at the iron gate in front of the home Thursday afternoon. Four police officers and private guards stood at the front door. Six other officers guarded the house from the roof.

Police did not say why they were guarding the house.

Espinosa was featured earlier this year in a series written by the Brownsville Herald on car theft. He was portrayed as the kingpin of an organization that smuggles stolen cars from the United States into Mexico.

Police fanned out throughout the city, searching for the six young gunmen who fled the scene in a pickup truck, a Plymouth valiant and Mercury Marquis.

At the time of the attack, Espinosa was in the clinic recovering from a gunshot wound to the chest that authorities said he received at the home of an acquaintance last week. Police said he fled the scene of that incident in his 1984 Chevrolet, and drove several blocks before losing control of his car and crashing into a tree.

Police said they had recovered six pair of fatigues, two of the getaway vehicles, three rifles, three automatic weapons and six pistols. They did not specify where the weapons had been found.

Markings on the weapons and clothing indicate they originated in Houston and Brownsville and have led police to believe the gunmen might be from those cities, said Salvador del Tor, Matamoros district attorney.

But he said police had no leads on the identity of the gunmen and made an appeal for help.

Del Tor said it's possible the gunmen already had escaped into the United States and said he had alerted Brownsville authorities.

"We don't want to alarm the public, but we are asking everyone to help out and hope to have some results soon," del Tor said.

He said gangland-style killings "were snowballing" in Matamoros, but declined to say how many had died in related incidents since the first of the year.

As the gunmen fled, several members of Espinosa's family, who live in houses near the clinic, poured into the street and fired at the getaway cars, said Esther Espinosa Campos, a family member.

A spray of bullets struck homes across the street from the clinic. Several pierced a wall and window a few feet where a baby lay asleep in a crib, police said.

Mrs. Espinosa declined to speculate on the motive for the attack, but said, "A lot of problems are still unsettled. My brother thought he had settled them, but apparently he had not."

Gretzky answers questions

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky had questions to answer. He had never scored a goal in the Stanley Cup finals and the fans, the media and his own teammates were wondering what was going on.

As usual, Gretzky had the answers.

Gretzky and Willy Lindstrom each scored twice Thursday night as the Edmonton Oilers belted the New York Islanders 7-2 in Game 4 of the National Hockey League championship series. The quick, confident Oilers can win their first Stanley Cup with a victory here Saturday night.

"WHEN I scored, it was the most relief I've ever felt," Gretzky said of his breakaway goal just 1:53 into the contest. "I was working my hardest in this series, but even my teammates were beginning to question me and were worried a little.

"I don't mean question verbally because we all stick together. But you play 80 games and three playoff series to get here, and until that point, I think I did the best I can to contribute."

But he wasn't getting any goals and it bothered him. He quickly took care of that in the Game 4, setting up a possible Cup clincher as they Oilers grabbed a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"It will be the biggest game of the year, the hardest and most exciting one we've ever played," he said. "It would be awful tough to go back to the Island."

Islanders captain Denis Potvin, who along with defense partner Ken Morrow was caught up ice on Gretzky's goal, blamed himself for the defeat.

"His goal set the tone and it was my fault," Potvin admitted. "I wasn't where I was supposed to be."

Islanders Coach Al Arbour wondered why his team came out unprepared.

"We weren't ready and it was clear from the first period," said Arbour. "Our success is built on the work ethic, and we didn't have it tonight."

BY WINNING here Saturday night, the Oilers would capture their first Stanley Cup in just their fifth NHL season. They joined the league when it merged with the World Hockey Association in 1979-80, the first season of the Islanders' reign as champions.

That reign will come to an end unless the Islanders figure out a way to offset Edmonton's superior speed. And the champions will need a return to form by goalie Billy Smith.

Gretzky got things started just 1:53 into the game when he was fed for a breakaway by Dave Semenko. The NHL scoring king — who had only four assists in last year's finals sweep at the hands of New York and only two assists in this series — beat Smith with a backhander.

Lindstrom, a 10-year veteran from Sweden, took advantage of sloppy play by Smith and defenseman Tomas Jonsson to poke in a loose puck at 3:22.

New York's Brent Sutter rifled a 35-foot wrist shot over the shoulder of goalie Andy Moog to make it 2-1 at 14:03. Moog was in goal because regular netminder Grant Fuhr was sidelined with a sore shoulder suffered when checked by Pat LaFontaine in Game 3.

But Mark Messier outraced defenseman Potvin down the left wing with the teams skating three a side and put a wrist shot past Smith at 17:54.

Edmonton turned the game into a rout in the middle period, connecting three more times for a 6-1 advantage. Lindstrom converted from short range on a power play after Paul Coffey's pass was tipped by Messier at 5:21, breaking New York's streak of 28 consecutive penalties killed.

Only 97 seconds later, Pat Conacher got his first goal of the playoffs on a short backhander after Pat Hughes bumped defenseman Dave Langevin off the puck and fed Conacher.

Coffey made it 6-1 when he pushed a wrist shot through a shaky Smith's pads at 10:52.

NEW YORK'S Pat Flatley tipped in a Clark Gillies shot to close the gap to 6-2 with 16 seconds to go in the second session.

Gretzky faked Smith to the ice and knocked in a backhander with 5:59 remaining for his second goal of the night.

The three defeats in this series are as many as the Islanders have suffered in their previous four years in the finals. They lost twice to Philadelphia in 1980, once to Minnesota in 1981 and swept Vancouver and Edmonton the last two years.

Only two teams have ever rallied from 3-1 deficits to win a Stanley Cup series.

Indy 500 crash mars practice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan made the biggest strides Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as practice, interrupted by a crash in which Canadian driver Jacques Villeneuve suffered a concussion, continued for the final weekend of qualifications for the May 27 Indianapolis 500.

Villeneuve, 28, the brother of the late Formula One racing star Gilles Villeneuve, was hospitalized after hitting the wall during the practice session. He was reported in satisfactory condition.

Sullivan, whose team got its new Lola T-800 racer on the track for the first time Wednesday, continued to make fast progress. He steadily improved his top speed from just over 202 to 206.801 on Thursday.

The 34-year-old driver from Louisville, Ky., who spent last season in Formula One racing, already has qualified for the race. However, his new DSR race car is the slowest among the 28 in the tentative lineup and would be the first bumped from the field once the final five spots are filled this weekend.

UNLESS IT rains Saturday and Sunday, the Shierson Racing team will withdraw the DSR, which qualified at just over 196 mph, and try to earn a starting spot in the faster Lola. The new car is identical to the one Mario Andretti has driven in practice at more than 212 mph.

"We ordered this car, but we couldn't get it in time for last week's qualifications," Sullivan said Thursday. "But we had nothing to lose by qualifying the other one. What if it rains all day Saturday and Sunday? At least we've got a car in the show."

No other car among those driven by non-qualifiers has gone faster than the new Lola.

"I was pleasantly surprised," he said of his first practice laps in the Lola a day after the Shierson team finished putting the car together. "I thought it would be a good car, but I didn't know how long it was going to take. I hadn't run 200 before, so I didn't know how it would feel to me.

"Right now, it's a lot easier to drive (at 206) than the other car at 196," he said.

Johnny Rutherford, a three-time Indy winner who started the month as Sullivan's teammate, also was unable to get up to speed in another DSR and left to drive one of A.J. Foyt's backup Marches.

With 26 of the 28 first-weekend qualifiers in the field at more than 200, including Villeneuve, it appears there is a good chance that this will be the first event in motorsports history where every starter qualifies above that once-magic figure.

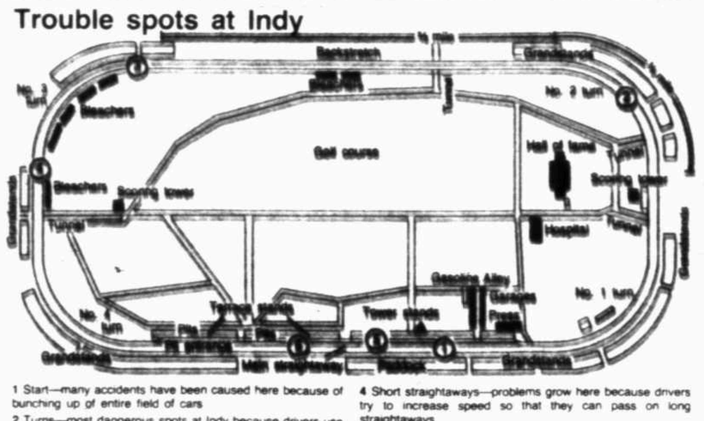
TWELVE OTHER drivers not yet qualified have practiced above 200, while several more are nudging that mark at around 199.

Rookie Stan Fox, whose best lap had been 199.866, improved his speed to 202.338 on Thursday and put himself in a good position to make the starting lineup.

Others above 200 in practice include Rutherford, Ireland's Derek Daly, rookie John Paul Jr., George Snider, Scott Brayton, Phil Krueger, Dennis Firestone, Steve Chassey, Pete Halsmer and — for the first time this month — Johnny Parsons and Kevin Cogan.

Parsons hit 200.982 Thursday in the 1983 March-Cosworth abandoned earlier this week by Desire Wilson, who was unable to get it up to speed.

Trouble spots at Indy



1 Start—many accidents have been caused here because of bunching up of entire field of cars
2 Turns—most dangerous spots at Indy because drivers use them to battle for position
3 End of straightaways—perilous because most of passing occurs here
4 Short straightaways—problems grow here because drivers try to increase speed so that they can pass on long straightaways
5 Pits—cars entering and leaving the area, the mad rush of the workers and the above-ground fuel tanks all cause problems
6 Front straightaway—no small problem because 50-foot wide area has walls on both sides

Chap women see hopes fall

From Staff Reports

OCALA, Fla. — Midland College lost three straight matches here Thursday to end up in fifth place in the NJCAA women's national tennis tournament.

The Chaparrals ended with 24 points in the tournament while Tyler and Palm Beach, Fla., were to fight it out for the team championship in today's final round of play.

Tyler owned 34 points heading into today's action while Palm Peach had 33. Indian River and McLennan each had 26 points and no chance of catching the two leaders.

MC dropped from tournament play with losses in the singles bracket Thursday. Therese Devine, playing in the No. 3 singles and seeded second, lost to Indian River's Maria Vinterstrodt, 6-3, 7-5, Thursday to be eliminated. Devine had beaten Hutchinson's Jami Redman, 6-2, 6-2, Wednesday in third round action.

Jill Wertenberger, seeded No. 3 in the No. 4 singles, lost to Anki Holm of Palm Beach Thursday, 6-4, 6-3, after a Wednesday victory over Jefferson State's Sonya Stefanu, 6-0, 6-1.

The last MC player to fall was Donna Van Auken, seeded second in the No. 6 singles slot. Van Auken lost to Michelle Angena of Indian River, 6-2, 6-1. In third round action Wednesday, Van Auken had beaten Holly Moseley of Abac, 6-0, 6-0.

Wednesday was the day the Chaps lost its chance at winning a national championship with six losses and three wins.

No. 1 singles player Liz Burris fell to Broward's Dyan Castillejo, 7-5, 6-1; and Nicolle Barrett fell in the No. 2 singles to Indian River's Josie LaMerre, 6-3, 6-1. Jane Howe fell out of contention in the No. 5 singles with a 6-0, 6-7, 6-1 loss to Palm Beach's Libby Lock.

MC also lost three doubles matches Wednesday as Burris and Barrett fell to Lavarock-Massey of McLennan, 7-5, 7-5, in the No. 1 position. Devine and Wertenberger lost a No. 2 doubles match to Scoggins-Baremont of Tyler, 6-3, 0-6, 6-4. The No. 3 team of Howe-Van Auken lost to Nichlas-Summers of Tyler, 6-2, 6-4.

The Chaps went unbeaten through Tuesday's play before losses came quickly on Wednesday and Thursday.

Boston enjoys another blowout

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics enjoyed another blowout, but there was no gloating after going up 2-0 in their playoff with the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Celtics guarded against giving Milwaukee any added incentive to come back at them Thursday night after whipping the Bucks 125-110 in the second game of a best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference championship.

Kevin McHale's comments putting the New York Knicks in the grave after Boston won the first two games of the conference semifinal were remembered.

"I think everybody realizes that we can't go into Milwaukee and let Kevin or anybody else say a few words," veteran guard Dennis Johnson said. "We're not in a situation where we want to give anybody any extra incentive. Let's just go out there an play."

"We know we still have a long way to go," said McHale, mindful of how his words came back to haunt the Celtics as they were extended to the seven-game limit by the Knicks. "We now have two tough games in Milwaukee before their home crowd. The Mecca is going to be rocking."

Larry Bird scored 32 points, Johnson 26 and McHale 24 as the Celtics charged to a whopping early lead and rolled over the Bucks for the second time within 24 hours.

"They are a very good team, solid everywhere," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "It's very tough having to play a team like that coming from behind. It's important to start strong in any game, especially in the playoffs. We haven't done that yet."

Turner experiences Preakness underdog role

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Billy Turner has a perfect record in Triple Crown races. Of course, he had the perfect horse in 1977 with Seattle Slew.

In Saturday's 109th Preakness at Pimlico, Turner sends lightly-raced Play On against nine 3-year-old rivals, including Swale, the Kentucky Derby winner who was sired by Seattle Slew.

"Being the underdog is a whole lot different," said the 37-year-old Turner Thursday. "The last time the only way we could lose if we did something wrong. Now, we've got to do everything right to pull it off."

The track oddsmaker has established Swale as the early 6-5 favorite from the No. 5 post position for the 1 3-16-mile test, 110 yards shorter than the Derby.

"Slews have a basic look and you can see the old man in him," said Turner. "Swale isn't as muscular as Slew but he's the same color. Swale is Triple Crown material. He was the iron horse last year."

Gate Dancer, disqualfied from fourth to fifth in the Derby for interference, was listed at 4-1 and Play On next at 6-1.

"We've got one serious contender to contend with," Turner said. "We're on a par with the rest of them."

Play On, who drew the outside No. 10 post, is coming off a victory in the May 9 Withers over one mile at Belmont Park. He had two seconds in his previous starts this year and won his only start as a 2-year-old.

The son of Stop The Music, owned by the Welcome Farm, was being pointed for the May 5 Derby but it wasn't until that Turner felt the colt was ready for top competition.

"Ideally he should have had a couple of more races, two more races," said Turner. "It would have made training a lot easier."

Jean-Luc Samyn will ride Play On.

Jim Palmer's release brings tears

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner in 19 years with the Baltimore Orioles, was released by the American League team Thursday at an emotional news conference that had both the veteran pitcher and his boss fighting tears.

Palmer, used as a spot starter and infrequent relief pitcher this year, had asked for his release so he could continue his quest for 300 career victories. But later Thursday, he said he was leaning toward retirement so he could spend more time with his family.

"I'm not sure I want to go somewhere else," he said. "I've been selfish enough all these years being away from my kids."

The Orioles have offered Palmer a non-playing job in their organization. But Palmer, who has made his face and figure familiar in a series of underwear ads, said he had many options open, including films and TV work.

At the news conference, Palmer said, "I still think I can pitch. I have a desire to do that."

He has 268 victories in his career, but is 0-3 with a 9.17 earned run average this season.

The 38-year-old right-hander broke down four times during the news conference. After the final time, he thanked reporters and club employees and left Memorial Stadium.

General Manager Hank Peters was almost as emotional as he praised Palmer for his 521 career starts and 268 victories, and explained the club's position in granting Palmer's wish.

Professionals are hired to make unemotional decisions, Peters said, "but this does affect me and I am pained by it. This was a very difficult decision for us to make."

"Jim Palmer has been much more than a great pitcher for the Orioles," Peters said. "He has served as an excellent role model for the young pitchers to emulate and has been generous in sharing his experience and knowledge with everyone on the club.

"He has always had the Orioles' best interest at heart."

With the need for another pitcher who could both relieve and be a spot starter, the Orioles recalled 27-year-old Bill Swaggerty from Rochester.

Palmer, who gained his first victory for Baltimore 19 years ago Wednesday, made just five appearances for the defending World Series champions this spring. He was used twice in relief, the last time giving up five hits and four runs in the final two innings of a 12-2 defeat last Saturday night.

Reached at his home, Palmer said he felt comfortable in his role as a fifth starter and that "at some point, I felt I would have been able to help the club."

"I didn't mind," he said, "they (management) had more trouble with it than I did."

Palmer said 300 victories would be nice, "but it would have to be under the proper conditions. To go somewhere else and sit on the bench would be a waste of their time and mine.

"I'd have to look at a situation and see if I'm really needed. If would have to be the right kind of offer to pry me away. My kids are very important."

Peters said the Orioles offered to retire Palmer at full pay, keeping him with the club in a capacity still undetermined, assign him to another club or grant his release.

Although Palmer opted for release, the Orioles will honor his 1984 contract of some $600,000, and Peters said the job offer would remain open should Palmer want to come back.

Both Peters and Ron Shapiro, Palmer's attorney, denied that talks in recent days had involved negotiations over Palmer's contract.

Rain washes Cubs, Drillers

From Staff Reports

Thursday's Texas League meeting between the Tulsa Drillers and Midland Cubs was postponed due to wet grounds.

Midland defeated the Drillers by an 11-2 margin Wednesday night in the first game of a five-game series. Thursday's game will be made up Saturday with a 6:30 p.m. doubleheader.

The two teams were to meet today at 7 p.m. if weather permits.

Jacobsen has birdie binge

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fit and sassy Peter Jacobsen has staked an early but impressive claim on the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation golf title.

"There's nothing better to boost your morale than starting birdie-birdie-birdie," said the personable sharpshooter, the leader entering today's second round of the prestigious NIT.

Jacobsen birdied the three opening holes Thursday, slashed six strokes from par and rode a sparkling 64 to a two-shot lead over a quintet of touring veterans that included Tom Watson.

"There's no reason why I can't do it again (today)," dead-panned Jacobsen, whose first, last and only tour victory was at the 1980 Buick-Goodwrench Open. Pausing only a moment, he added with a grin:

"There's no reason why I can't shoot a 63."

Stumbling but once, a bogey at the treacherous fifth hole that embraces the Trinity River, Jacobsen dropped birdie putts of 8, 1, 20, 20, 40, 2 and 20 feet and barey missed a 12-footer at the 18th that would have tied the course record.

"I felt great out there," he said, recalling that back problems forced him to withdraw at Houston three weeks ago and sent him home to confer with his doctor.

Peter Jacobsen

"He told me I wasn't 22 anymore," he said. "The older you get, the more attention you have to pay to your body."

Jacobsen said he started exercising, changed his eating habits and began losing weight.

"I feel better now," he said. "And the better you feel, the better your attitude's going to be out there."

Watson, the leading money winner this year with two victories and $318,468, said he "got by" with a number of mistakes and used a hot putter to fashion a fine 4-under-par 66.

"Anytime you shoot 66 at Colonial you've got to be satisfied," he said, at the same time pointing out that the tricky, swirling Texas wind was unusually mild Thursday.

"It started out calm but got a little windier and a little windier," added Gil Morgan, one of the late finishers who captured a share of second place.

"The scores are really going to be low if the weather stays like this," said Mark Lye, also tied for second with Watson, Morgan, Mike Reid and D.A. Weibring.

"The wind isn't blowing," said Lye, a tinge of disbelief in his voice.

Many in the field of 102 took unprecedented liberties with Colonial's par 70 standard. Thirty-five broke par and another 14 matched it, with many of the game's top players within easy striking distance of the lead.

A group of 11 at 68 included two-time Masters champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain, former Colonial winner Bruce Lietzke and David Edwards, the runnerup last Sunday at the Byron Nelson in Dallas.

Hebert's Durley leaves behind wake of tears

By JOHN CURYLO
Orange Leader

ORANGE (AP) — It was a cold, damp day Dec. 11, 1976 in Austin.

Alex Durley stood in Memorial Stadium and cried after his Hebert football team had won the Class 4A state championship.

It was a comfortable afternoon Dec. 18, 1982, in the Astrodome.

Durley was lifted to the shoulders of his West Brook football team in celebration of the 5A state title.

Both were milestones in the career of the man who died of cancer April 30 in Beaumont.

The real accomplishments came on the practice fields, in counseling sessions with his athletes and in the halls of the schools where he worked.

Durley's teams were flashy in their offensive attacks, but not undisciplined. Talents were molded and channeled, not allowed to run free and accidently win.

The plays were diagrammed on a blackboard and fine-tuned in practice, not drawn in the dirt during a timeout.

Durley's team won 98 games in nine seasons. He was considered a vital member of staffs at Hebert and South Park, a major reason for their success.

Desegregation was fought in the South Park School District for more than 10 years. Durley was a key figure in one attempt to avoid integration, then he was instrumental in mandated integration working.

Durley was moved from Clifton Ozen's Hebert staff to South Park in an attempt to integrate faculties instead of student bodies.

It was always his dream to be the head coach at Hebert, a goal he realized in 1975. Still a 5A school, Hebert went 8-2 (9-1 if a forfeit by Bryan is counted). French won district that year, ruining a great story.

Durley's team demolished Forest Park to end the 1975 season. He wept when his team carried him off the field.

He talked of how wonderful it was for two different schools — two different environments — to come together like they did that night. Durley felt his team was on the way.

Durley went through spring training in 1983 knowing he had cancer. It was thought he wouldn't live to see the opening kickoff of West Brook's second season.

Durley was physically drained during the 1983 season. He missed school and practice during the week, but he was there on game nights. His assistant coaches marvel at the alertness he showed, in spite of what was going on inside his body.

It was said he called few, if any, wrong plays last season.

An early injury to his quarterback resulted in a bi—district loss after a 10-0 regular season.

On the night of Sept. 23, 1983, West Brook had overcome crucial first-half stakes to beat West Orange-Stark 21-12.

Durley was exhausted after the game, but paused to visit in the hall of the West Campus. As usual, the "kids" and the coaches had done a great job, according to Durley.

He had to move slowly as he walked away, needing help to push the door open.

It was my turn to cry.

Cincinnati pitcher Mario Soto (right) is congratulated by Dave Concepcion after going the distance for the second straight time.

Soto cools off Chicago Cubs

By The Associated Press

Mario Soto tossed a three-hitter Tuesday as the Cincinnati Reds cooled off the Chicago Cubs with a 5-3 victory that knocked the Cubs out of first place in the National League East.

Soto, who was one out away from a no-hitter in his last game, now has allowed only five hits in his last two starts, both complete games.

He struck out eight to become the seventh Cincinnati pitcher to go over the 1,000 mark and had trouble in just one inning, the seventh, when Chicago scored its three runs on Ron Cey's RBI double and Jody Davis' two-run homer.

"When I'm going good, I'm going real good," said Soto, who won his fifth straight game and sixth in seven decisions. "It's great to stop a three-game losing streak. And it's good for me to get that win, because it kept my winning streak alive."

IN OTHER games Thursday, the San Diego Padres edged the Montreal Expos 5-4 as Alan Wiggins stole five bases to tie a National League record; the Atlanta Braves topped the St

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 19, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: American portrait painter Sarah Peale and Black Muslim leader Malcolm X were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: "Good Morning America" host David Hartman, Yankee catcher Rick Cerone, actress Nancy Kwan, San Diego pitcher Eric Snow and football's Archie Manning. Romance plays a major role in your life. A change in a business situation works to your advantage. You feel less restless and are easier to live with. Try to be more detached when dealing with a difficult family member.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You feel a delightful new sense of belonging to your community or a social group. Plan a family get-together. Loved one's ideas are acceptable to an older person. Romance looks promising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Think things through before taking action. Tackle that paperwork you have been postponing. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Go ahead with a dinner date. Spend more time with children.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Focus your energies on one project at a time. Home improvements will increase the value of your property. Be careful not to spend too much money on luxuries and entertainment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mate or partner's spending habits could make you nervous. Speak up. The atmosphere at home is excellent for working on complex projects and hobbies. Get together with good friends this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your judgment may not be as good as usual today. Postpone making important decisions. Spend your time reading, studying or pursuing a favorite hobby. Loved ones are congenial.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Forget about housework and concentrate on family projects. A good friend will be receptive to an impulsive suggestion. Try out a new recipe this evening. Entertaining at home has great appeal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Respect a loved one's hunches and you make new financial gains. Small at-home gatherings are more fun than large public events. Invite guests who will be compatible and keep things simple.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give more thought to your responsibilities. You may have plenty of energy but be short on money. An at-home business promises both extra income and tax advantages.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although bargains abound, this may not be the time to buy. Look for free entertainment in a local park. You get the green light on an investment or change of residence. Move swiftly!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The pieces of a puzzle begin to fall into place. Your doubts disappear. Be kinder to someone who loves you. Someone's mischief-making could be causing you discomfort. Speak candidly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may need a special favor now. Get in touch with an individual who has been generous in the past. Romance accelerates. Someone may be observing you without you being aware of it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You suddenly notice the romantic appeal of someone you have ignored in the past. Mate could be the center of attention tonight. Your patience with a young child will be richly rewarded.

Special reports get big play

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent full-page newspaper ad for WCBS-TV pictured a gray-haired woman, a concerned younger female and this headline: "Will You Be Able To Take Care Of Your Mother As Well As She Took Care Of You?"

Another splashy ad for WABC-TV, also in New York, featured a family around a birthday cake as a white-haired woman prepared to blow out the candles. Its headline read, "Living Longer: Find Out How You Can Beat Father Time At His Own Game."

Not to be outdone, WNBC, the third network-owned TV station here, plans a story this month on grandparents and their legal rights.

In Los Angeles, KNBC-TV had a report called "Old Age Hurts," while rival KABC-TV will focus on issues affecting the elderly.

May is Senior Citizens' Month. It also happens to be a sweeps month, one of four months each year when ratings for local stations are measured, determining advertising rates for the next several months. In major cities, a slight ratings increase could add hundreds of thousands of dollars in yearly revenue.

Some stations believe that well-promoted special reports will attract greater sampling for their newscasts. "We try to do these things all year 'round, but during ratings months, there's an additional incentive to do better," said Fran Preston, public relations director for Chicago's WLS-TV.

In the sweeps months — February, May, July and November — the networks try to help their affiliated stations attract viewers to the late-night newscasts by scheduling major miniseries and movies in prime time.

Last year, when ABC ran the blockbuster "Winds of War" in February, local news for ABC's stations gained viewers, but so did local news on CBS affiliates. David Poltrack, CBS vice president for research, said the miniseries attracted infrequent viewers, some of whom then switched to CBS for news.

The current interest in the elderly may reflect a more sober attitude about special series, which, in the past, often seemed to spring from police blotters or Times Square marquees. It also suggests that the public may be getting wise to exaggerated, sensational reports, designed to inflate ratings.

"My favorite was one on kiddie porn — 'Is your 7-year-old daughter going to wind up in a porno flick?' " said Steve Friedman, a former local news producer who now runs NBC's "Today" show.

Last February, for example, WABC had special reports on video pornography and soap-opera romances on- and off-camera.

It is unsound fiscal policy to put your money in a bank which might fold at any minute. We can make that statement even though we know of a number of players who do not seem to subscribe to that point of view — the West of today's hand was one such player.

North's Stayman inquiry of two clubs is the accepted way to start an invitational sequence while at the same time probing for a major-suit fit. With a near maximum, South was justified in continuing to three no trump. As the cards lie four hearts is an easy contract, but there is no reasonable way to get to that spot.

East played the king of clubs on the first trick and, when declarer ducked, he continued with the ten. This, too, declarer allowed to hold, so East led his last club and declarer won perforce.

Since the clubs were now established for the defenders, declarer had to hope that the player with the long clubs did not have the ace of spades. He ran his heart tricks and then led the ten of spades. When East turned up with the ace, declarer scored an overtrick.

West had erred grievously. When East returned the ten of clubs at trick two and declarer followed with the nine, West could see that there was no point to setting up club tricks since there was no entry to his hand to cash them.

If the contract was to be defeated some other source of tricks had to be found. Obviously the only suit that offered any hope was diamonds. Therefore, West should have overtaken the ten of clubs with the jack to shift to the ten of diamonds. That would establish two tricks in that suit for the defenders, in addition to the two club tricks already in the bag and the ace of spades yet to come.

Nation's seventh-largest bank looking for buyer

CHICAGO (AP) — Stung by bad loans and a run on deposits by foreign investors, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. is seeking a buyer while using $7.5 billion in emergency aid from the federal government and commercial banks, officials said.

The $7.5 billion — $5.5 billion from an enlarged, existing line of credit and $2 billion from the government and banks — is the second rescue package this week for the nation's seventh-largest bank and the largest bailout ever orchestrated by the federal government.

At a news conference Thursday, Continental Chairman David G. Taylor said the package will help the bank ride out its "temporary liquidity squeeze" and assured customers their money is safe.

"This bank is not insolvent, it's not about to fail ... it just needs a little more time," Taylor said.

The bank, hamstrung by $1 billion worth of sour loans stemming from the collapse of the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma City two years ago, has hired the investment banking firm Goldman, Sachs & Co. to find a buyer, The New York Times reported in its editions today.

The Times said that because Continental lacks an attractive retail base, catering mostly to major depositors instead of small customers, it's unlikely to be taken over by a domestic bank. This has fueled speculation that the suitor would be a foreign bank.

Continental last week was the subject of rumors ranging from a impending takeover to a collapse. The reports led large foreign investors, whose deposits exceeded the $100,000 limit for Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. protection, to begin withdrawing their money.

Speaking in Paris today at a meeting of the Anglo-American Press Association, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said that in helping to arrange the rescue operation the government wanted to lay to rest rumors about the bank's ability to finance.

"I have stated that the U.S. government will stand behind its banking system and I mean it," Regan said.

Regan, who is in Paris for a meeting of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development, said this did not mean every bank would stay afloat or independent, "but we will make certain there are no calamities in our banking syxtem."

Under Thursday's aid package, the FDIC will contribute $1.5 billion and fully insure Continental deposits, waiving the $100,000 limit. The Federal Reserve Board, meanwhile, agreed to meet any "extraordinary liquidity requirements" of Continental while the package is in place.

The bank, owned by Continental Illinois Corp., borrowed $3.6 billion from the Federal Reserve of Chicago on May 11. Then on Monday, Continental announced that 16 of the nation's biggest banks had approved a 30-day, $4.5 billion line of credit.

That line of credit, of which half had been used, was expanded Thursday by $1 billion. It is said to encompass 28 banks.

The latest package was assembled by the FDIC, the Federal Reserve Board and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. It was unveiled by Continental in Chicago and the FDIC in Washington.

A Treasury Department official in Washington, who spoke on condition he not be named, said that Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker met with other federal bank regulators Tuesday to map out the package.

In a statement, the FDIC said the infusion of capital "will be available for the period necessary to enhance the bank's permanent capital, by merger or otherwise."

When Penn Square collapsed, Continental was left holding $1 billion in energy-related loans it had purchased from the ill-fated Oklahoma lender. Continental already had $1.3 billion in non-performing loans on its books.

Shareholders to vote today

Merger would create second-largest steel firm

CLEVELAND (AP) — Shareholders of Republic Steel Corp. and LTV Corp. were preparing to vote today on their proposed $750 million merger, which would create the nation's second-largest steel company.

The merger would combine Republic's steelmaking operations with those of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. of Pittsburgh, a subsidiary of LTV. The new company would be known as LTV Steel Corp., and would be based in Cleveland, using existing Republic headquarters.

LTV is based in Dallas, where the LTV shareholders' meeting was scheduled. Republic shareholders were meeting in Flemington, N.J.

If the merger is approved, the new company would be second in size only to U.S. Steel Corp.

The original merger proposal, announced last Sept. 28, was opposed by the Justice Department's antitrust division. On Feb. 15, J. Paul McGrath, assistant U.S. attorney general, rejected the merger, saying it would weaken competition in the steel business by increasing concentration of ownership in stainless steel sheet and in carbon flat-rolled steel. The two types of steel are used in making automobiles, appliances and other consumer goods.

Company representatives and antitrust division officials then had a series of meetings, and considerable debate went on within the Reagan administration.

McGrath then approved the merger March 21, after LTV and Republic agreed to sell Republic's carbon steelmaking plant in Gadsden, Ala., and Republic's stainless steel operations in Massillon, in northeastern Ohio.

The companies would have until Dec. 1 to sell the plants, or U.S. Court of Appeals officials in Washington would appoint a trustee to sell the mills.

If created, LTV Steel Corp. would be headed by E. Bradley Jones, chairman of Republic. Jones would be chairman and chief executive ot LTV Steel, while David Hoag, president of Jones & Laughlin, would be president and chief operating officer.

The companies have not said much about how they would consolidate their staffs and plant operations. Both Republic and Jones & Laughlin have large plants in the Cleveland Flats, near downtown. Officials have said saving money from combining the plants is a primary reason for the merger.

Republic, which reported a 1983 loss of $326.5 million, has 25,250 employees. Jones & Laughlin, which had a 1983 loss of $180.7 million, has 20,000 employees.

GM reopens plant to discuss hiring

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — When the last car rolled off the assembly line two years ago at the General Motors Corp. plant here, a sign tacked on its front implored: "GM is my whole life — Save the plant."

That plea was answered in part Thursday as executives opened the plant doors to discuss plans to hire 2,500 employees for a joint venture between GM and Toyota Motor Corp. of Japan.

The newly formed company, New United Motor, Inc., plans eventually to produce 200,000 subcompact cars a year at the sprawling plant 30 miles southeast of San Francisco.

The first car is scheduled for proction in December, with full plant capacity expected by 1986, said Tatsuro Toyoda, New United's president and chief executive officer.

"It was very tragic to have this plant idle, and through New United Motors, this plant will come alive very soon," he said.

GM and Toyota, the world's first- and third-largest automakers, signed a limted 12-year joint operating agreement on Feb. 17, 1983.

Since then, the giant manufacturers have foughtAAhe¾stempts to block the venture, including an antitrust suit filed by Chrysler Corp. The Federal Trade Commission approved the limited production arrangement on April 11.

Dollar rises on foreign markets; Gold slips

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose further on foreign exchange markets early today, boosted by nervousness over attacks on ships in the Persian Gulf. Gold bullion prices fell.

Money markets were reported quiet today and small adjustments in exchange rates were routine for week's end, dealers said. The British pound strengthened against most currencies but fell against the dollar.

News that Iraq claimed its jets hit two naval targets today near Kharg Island in the gulf was a background factor supporting the dollar, dealers in Frankfurt said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 233.85 yen from Thursday's 232.20. It was also 4.10 yen higher than last Friday's close of 229.75.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Thursday:

–2.7725 West German marks, up from 2.7525.

–2.2790 Swiss francs, up from 2.2705.

–8.5095 French francs, up from 8.4535.

–3.1165 Dutch guilders, up from 3.0915.

Revolution in energy thinking may be necessary

AUSTIN — Describing natural gas as "the most misunderstood and maligned energy resource in America today," Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace said a revolution in our energy thinking may be necessary to give the nation a secure energy supply.

Speaking at a natural gas conference at the University of Texas sponsored by the Texas Petroleum Research Committee, Wallace said the natural gas issue isn't complicated or difficult to understand.

"In the plainest of terms, we are using it faster than we are discovering it," he said. "And, this is occurring at a time when the national interest requires a record-setting rate of exploration and development of new reserves."

Wallace told conference participants that despite a 10 percent decline in natural gas production in Texas between 1982 and 1983, Washington still effectively discourages increased exploration. He said Congress needs to listen to the statesmen among its members instead of the demagogues.

"I, for one, am sick and tired of reading pronouncements to the effect that a free, unregulated gas market will automatically create huge industry windfalls and widespread public poverty," he said.

Wallace took issue with the latest attempt in Congress to settle natural gas disputes, the Dingell/Sharp bill, and called the notion that price controls will provide exploration and production incentives "absurd."

"Although this proposal is cleverly disguised as a consumer protection meassure, Americans, I believe, would be worse off than before and ought to be forever unforgiving of such extreme shortsightedness," he said.

"The solution being offered now is unacceptable," he continued. "It will not produce one cubic foot of natural gas. It is a demogoguery of the rankest form to ignore the issue of adequate supply and embrace the political expediency of price controls supposedly in the interest of consumers."

Wallace told the conference that "governmental pricing and regulatory schemes must be put aside, individual regions must stop their squabbling and look beyond their own borders and toward national energy interests, development of alternative fuels must be vigorously pursued, and energy and environmental conflicts must be tempered."

He advocated a "Texas" answer to the energy challenges of the state and nation through a pooling of talents and energies from the academic world, industry, government and from the public itself.

"This is no time for surrender, retreat, or defeatism," Wallace said. "It is a time for leadership."

TXO announces plans of Alabama Intrastate supply

SOUTHWEST NEWSWIRE

DALLAS — Texas Oil and Gas Corp. (TXO) announced today that TXO, Alagasco, Inc. and a unit of Pacific Lighting Corp. have entered into agreements calling for the construction of the Alabama Intrastate supply system which will connect Black Warrior Basin gas supplies to Alabama Gas Corporation's distribution system in Birmingham.

The pipeline will initially consist of 84 miles of gathering line, and 70 miles of 16-inch main line with a capacity of 75 million cubic feet (MMcf) of gas per day. A partnership formed by subsidiaries of TXO, Alagasco and Pacific Lighting will own the line, with the esti-mated $30 million construction cost being borne equally by each of the partners. A new TXO subsidiary, Alabama Intrastate Gas Corp., will construct and operate the system.

In addition to owning the line, the partnership will purchase gas at the wellhead in Lamar and Fayette counties of Alabama and, under a new gas sales agreement, sell Alabama Gas Corporation an average of 40 MMcf of gas per day. The initial source of gas for the system will come from purchases from TXO Production Corp., Terra Resources, Inc. and Alagasco Energy Company, Inc., all of which are affiliates of the partners owning the system.

Texas Oil and Gas Chairman William L. Hutchison and Forrest E. Hoglund, President and Chief Executive Officer, said, "We believe this new Birmingham market will afford excellent future opportunities to increase throughput volumes and company-owned production. TXO already holds substantial leasehold acreage and has an aggressive drilling program in the Black Warrior Basin area. We anticipate that about one-third of the new line's initial throughput will come from TXO pro-duction which is currently shut-in."

Texas Oil and Gas Corp. is engaged primarily in the gathering, transportation and processing of natural gas, and exploration for and production of gas, crude oil and condensate. -30-CONTACT: C.D. (Chuck) Williams, Vice President-Investor Affairs, Texas Oil & Gas Corp., 214/954-2290, or 800/527-7671, New York Office, 212/267-6200.

Transcontinental, Marlow Energy sign joint agreement

SHREVEPORT, La. — Transcontinental Oil Corp., the oil and gas subsidiary of Transcontinental Energy Corp., has announced that it has signed a joint exploration agreement with Marlow Energy Co. under which Transcontinental will develop oil and gas exploration prospects in conjunction wit Marlow. The agreement calls for an expenditure by Marlow for lease acquisition and seismic evaluation in return for which Marlow will have the first right of refusal of any prospects developed by Transcontinental in its Upper Gulf Coast region, which includes east Texas, north Louisiana, south Arkansas, and Mississippi. The agreement covers 1984 with options for two additional years. Marlow Energy Co., located in Shreveport, La., is a joint venture of O'Brien Operating Co., Marlin Exploration Inc., David Crow Interests, Byrum W. Teekell and Jerry R. Webb.

Transcontinental anticipates that 11 prospects, representing total capital expenditures of approximately $8 million, will be generated in 1984 under the agreement. Transcontinental conducts its oil and gas exploration through three divisions, Upper Gulf Coast, West Texas and Rocky Mountain. The company's 1984 exploration plan calls for the internal generation of 38 oil and gas prospects spread among the three divisions. Transcontinental's total exploration program, which will represent capital expenditures of about $30 million, is expected to be drilled in connection with various industry partners throughout 1984 as prospects are developed.

Transcontinental Energy Corp. is engaged in the exploraton for development of crude oil and natural gas, primarily in the Rocky Mountain, Permian Basin and Upper Gulf Coast regions of the United States. Transcontinental also owns and operates drilling rigs in these same areas, drilling for other operators as well as the company.

Course offered in oil, gas microprocessor technology

LAFAYETTE, La. — A two-day course to be offered by the University of Louisiana's Petroleum Training Service on May 25-26 will provide an introduction to the utilization of digital and microprcessor technology in instrumentation systems.

Emphasizing the money-saving applications of these technologies in the oil and gas industry, "Microprocessor Instrumentation Applications in the Oil and Gas Industry" will require little or no prior knowledge of digital and microproseccor systems.

The course, to be held at the UL Alumni Conference Center, will be valuable to those persons who are in or who interact with the high technology, electronic instrumentation industry. Personnel involved with specifying, purchasing, or marketing digital/microprocessor instrumentation will find this course useful.

The course will be of special benefit to production personnel, drilling superintendents and foremen, toolpushers, rig design engineers, drilling fluids engineers, mud logging engineers and personnel, production superintendents and foremen, service personnel, and instrumentation engineers and technicians.

The course instructors are Gamini Weerasekera of the UL Industrial Technology Department and Madhu Reddy of Scientific Research Laboratories in Dayton, Ohio. Both are actively involved in the design and application of digital/microprocessor instrumentation systems.

For detailed information about the course and to register, call the Petroleum Training Service at (318) 231-6232.

Trent Lott to address API meeting

WASHINGTON — House Minority Whip Trent Lott (R-Miss.), will be the keynote speaker at the American Petroleum Institute's Midyear Marketing Meeting at the Hyatt Regency-Crystal City Hotel in Arlington, Va., May 21-23.

Some 250 senior oil industry marketing executives are expected to attend the session.

Lott, a six-term congressman and the Republica whip in the House of Representatives since 1980, will discuss energy matters currently facing Congress in a speech to the anual Oil Marketer's Luncheon May 22.

Harken Drilling ahead of projections

ABILENE — During the Harken Oil and Gas, Inc. annual meeting, Midel D. Faulkner, President, has announced to shareholders that its newly formed subsidiary, Harken Drilling Co., is ahead of its revenue projections. Three of the company's rigs, which were acquired at a very low cost through the bankruptcy of another firm, are currently under profitable contract and ahead of schedule. This trend is particularly significant since the second quarter historicaly has had lower rig utilization in the industry.

If this utilization rate continues, annualized revenues could be close to $1.8 million for this activity along. Additionally, the producing oil and gas properties acquired from the same bankrupt company should be contributed significantly to Harken's profitability in 1984.

Number of seismic crews increased

TULSA — The total number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters during April was 473, representing an increase of two from the March total of 471 crews. There was a decrease of one land crew, but an increase of three marine vessels for a net increase of two crews.

The April total represents an increase of one percent over last month, a five percent increase over April 1983, a 24 percent decrease from April 1982, a 27 percent decrease from April 1981, a five percent decrease from April 1980, a 31 ercent increase over April 1979, and a gain of 38 percent over the same month in 1978.

Potential seen in chemicals operations

PITTSBURGH — Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) — with first quarter chemical earnings of $59 million — sees additional potential in its chemicals operations.

Standard enjoys a "very competitive position in those parts of the petrochemical industry in which it participates," Executive Vice Presient Walter R. Peirson told the Pittsburgh Society of Security Analysts. These operations "should benefit from improving economic conditions and higher rates of capacity utilization."

In 1983, profits from Standard's worldwide chemicals business improved by 48 percent, spurred by economic recovery. "Our net profit of $113 million was second among the leading American oil companies with chemicals operations — six of which reported losses," said Peirson.

Six new gold blocks staked in Manitoba

DENVER — Barringer Resources Inc. has announced that Westmin Resources of Calgary has staked six new potential gold claim blocks in northern Manitoba based on information optioned from Barringer Magenta Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Barringer Resources.

The information comes from an extensive geochemical/geophysical exploration program carried out by Barringer covering some 380,000 square miles (an area roughly the size of california, Nevada and Arizona combined) in various parts of Maitoba, saskatchewan, and the Northwest Territories of Canada. The claims staked by Westmin cover the number of gold targets in various regions of Maitoba.

Firm suspends sulfur removal process

MONUMENT, Colo. — Western Energy Development Co., Inc. has announced suspension of its participation in a research and development joint venture to tst, develop and market a low cost process to remove sulfur from crude oil. Phase I of the venture, which was to maximize sulfur-removal in "test tube" exprimentation, did not meet all objectives.

The sulfur-removal process may still hold promise. However, different tests to analyze sulfur removed yielded conflicting results. WEDCO's partners will continue their research efforts if consistent test results are obtained.

MGF Oil, lenders agree on $149 million debt

MGF Oil Corporation has announced that it has reached an agreement with its secured lenders on its approximately $149 million of bank debt which, subject to certain restrictions, including the successful completion of a equity exchange offer for substantially all the remaining subordinated debt, provides for (1) approximately $29.6 million of bank debt to be converted to convertible preferred stock; (2) the maturity of the remaining approximately $119 million of secured bank debt to be extended to June 30, 1989; and, (3) a line of credit not to exceed $4 million.

The $119 million, which matures on June 30, 1989 and is secured by substantially all of MGF's assets, will be divided into three separate notes: (1) a $24.6 million note to bear no interest for two years, then 5 percent per annum until June 30, 1989; (2) a $12.3 million note to bear 8 percent interest per annum until June 30, 1989; and (3) a note of approximately $82 million to bear interest at 9 percent per annum until June 30, 1989.

Under the new agreement, additional interest accrues annually beginning Jan. 1, 1987 to a maximum of the difference between prime plus 1 percent and the stated rate of interest in each note, subject to such amount being limited to 50 percent of annual net income before taxes. Such additional interest, if any, can be paid annually in either cash or common stock beginning April 1, 1988.

W. Phillip Marcum, president and chief executive officer, stated there are no minimum principal repayments prior to maturity, and principle and interest is payable primarily from percentages of cash flow. Under the new agreement, MGF will reduce its annual bank interest payments in the first year of the agreement by approximately 34 percent or $4.4 million compared to the amount which would have been paid under the prior notes. Texas Commerce Bank National Association is MGF's agent bank.

In connection with its debt restructuring, MGF will not make the interest payment of $2,073,540 due May 1, 1984, payable in common stock or cash, on its $69,118,000 principle amount of 6 percent Senior Senior Subordinated Debentures due Nov. 1, 1988 (6 percent Debentures) nor the cash interest payment of $1,513,945 due May 1, 1984 on its $20,882,000 principle amount of 14-1/2 percent Senior Subordinated Debentures due May 1, 2001 (14-1/2 percent Debentures). The non-payment of interest will be an event of default of the 6 percent Debentures and the 14-1/2 percent Debentures if not paid within 30 days.

MGF has previously announced that it does not believe the Dec. 1, 1983 interest payment on its 8-1/4 percent Convertible Subordinated Guaranteed Debentures due Dec. 1, 1995 (8-1/4 percent Debentures) will be made.

MGF intends to file a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission which will provide for registration of equity securities which MGF expects to be offered in connection with its debt restructuring, which will include the 6 percent Debentures, the 14-1/2 percent Debentures and the 8-1/4 percent Debentures, as well as substantially all other subordinated debt and other unsecured creditors. The bank restructuring is contingent upon acceptance of a very high percentage of each issue of MGF unsecured debt.

Marcum stated he expects the total debt restructuring to take most of the balance of 1984. If successful the company should be able to expand its oil and gas operations. MGF, as a part of the corporate restructuring, will hire a chief operating officer by year-end for its oil and gas operations.

MGF currently expects to file its Annual Report on form 10-K for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983 with the Securities and Exchange Commission by May 15, 1984.

Accountant to be sentenced in tax scheme

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland accountant William M. Morris is to be sentenced June 8 in federal court in Richmond, Va., for his role in a scheme to encourage taxpayers to violate federal tax laws by purchasing in-home "church" ministry charters.

Morris, 31, a certified public accountant until May 3 when he surrendered his CPA license, had pleaded guilty in federal court to conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government, aiding and assisting in the preparation of false Internal Revenue Service (IRS) tax returns, and to mail fraud.

He pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge D. Dortch Warriner.

Morris could be sentenced up to 13 years in prison and fined $16,000 for his part in the church-charter scheme, operated by the now-defunct Liberty Ministries International of Richmond. He was LMI's executive vice president and vice president of finance in 1979 and 1980.

"IT'S ANCIENT history to me," Morris said from his Midland office on Thursday. "I left the organization almost four years ago." While working for LMI, Morris said he, though a CPA, "was not in public practice."

He said he opted "to voluntarily" give up his CPA license rather than "waiting for them to come see me...I don't like living around in dark shadows."

Morris, who left LMI in September 1980, has lived in Midland since 1981.

He was indicted by a federal grand jury on Dec. 12 on 27 counts. He has agreed to be a government witness in the prosecution of LMI's former president, Thomas K. Williams and his wife, Linda S. Williams, and LMI's former secretary-treasurer, Robert M. Jacobs.

Morris is charged with preparing a "tax strategy letter" in 1980 which the government says outlined ways taxpayers could file returns by claiming either a "vow of poverty" or deductions of 50 percent of adjusted gross income.

THE CHURCH charters and other documents sold for a $3,000 "donation" per packet, the government says in its summary of evidence. Further, the government says Morris's role with LMI caused the "filing of hundreds of additional false and fraudulent tax returns" in 1979 and 1980 and resulted in a federal tax loss of more than $1 million.

Jacobs was a major promoter and salesman for LMI, the government says, and the Williamses are charged under 32 counts of tax and postal violations. They are to be tried in September. But prior to Morris's guilty plea, five persons had been convicted in federal court for their role in the church-charter tax scheme, which the government says operated on a pyramid basis. Some of the defendants, including a notary public, received sentences of 30 days to four months in prison.

"Our purpose was to recruit more people," Morris had said, according to the Richmond Times Dispatch. "The more people we had, the more money the organization had. We were not a religious organization...We operated as a business. We were out to maximize our return."

Morris said he "knew very well" the scheme was "a means of hiding behind a paper tax structure..."

In its eight-paper summary, the government noted that LMI operated a pyramid-type scheme involving "elders" (major salesmen) and Morris-prepared "missionary reports," which listed the names of new charter purchasers, the amounts they paid to join LMI and the amounts of "return donations" (commissions or kickbacks) paid to each elder. LMI's missionary program was its marketing scheme.

Defense claims man has personality disorders in Odessa murder trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Attorneys for Johnny Foote began laying the groundwork Thursday for his defense in the 22-year-old Odessan's trial for the murder of a Permian Mall cleaning lady one witness said "was like a mother to all of us there."

Foote was diagnosed as having an "organic personality syndrome" by both a psychiatrist and psychologist, meaning he had sustained some damage to his brain, reducing his mental capabilities.

"He's not very smart, but he's not mentally retarded," said the psychiatrist, hired by the court to determine whether Foote was mentally competent to stand trial. Dr. Noe Neaves of the Permian Basin Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation said Foote might have given a false confession to police because he was intimidated by authority.

Under questioning by prosecutor David Rosado, Neaves said the mental disabilities could have been caused by habitual use of alcohol. Foote told both doctors examining him he had habitually used alcohol since he was 10 years old, one testifying Foote had said he'd begun drinking with the aunt who had raised him from early childhood.

Foote also told the doctors he had been abused by his stepfather at an early age, had never progressed past a seventh grade education and been in special education classes, but none of this information had been verified by the examiners.

A second examination was performed by a UTPB psychologist, Dr. James Olson, who was hired by the defense to determine why Foote had confessed, assuming he was not guilty.

Olson recounted much of what the MHMR pyschiatrist had said, though he suggested Foote was impulsive, contrary to Neaves' findings. Olson did add that the organic personality syndrome could have been caused by blows to the head Foote might have sustained by being struck by his stepfather or in fights during schoolyears, by problems at birth or excessive alcohol consumption.

Olson seemed to confirm Neaves' suggestions that Foote could have given the confession to "get the police off his back."

"Johnny Foote did not think of the long-term consequence," said Olson, adding the defendant might have confessed falsely because of his "naive approach to the legal system where he felt he would be cleared if he confessed" to stabbing 65-year-old Velma Nesset to death.

Olson also admitted there was "always a possibility" Foote was fooling the doctors with his answers during the examinations. But he said, "I don't believe Mr. Foote has the capacity to fool me."

During questioning by Rosado, Olson admitted Foote had lied about the number of times he had been questioned by police. The prosecutor also attacked the reliability of the tests which Foote was given assessing his personality.

A 19-year-old former girlfriend of Foote's quietly admitted the defendant had told her he had confessed because "he needed help and to get everyone off his back."

Ms. Nesset was found April 19, 1982, stabbed to death in a culvert near the mall. Foote was arrested about 18 months later for the murder, one of five killings which occurred during a week's time to Odessa residents.

The defense again brought up the possibility Henry Lee Lucas or Ottis Toole could have committed the murder, noting Lucas had admitted to having murdered a woman the day before in Hobbs, N.M. Det. Jerry Smith said he had questioned Lucas about the murder in December 1983, after Foote's arrest, as he understood that would be one area on which the defense might concentrate its case.

Mall manager Nancy Nold recalled Ms. Nesset as being "like a mother to all of us." She also explained to jurors how all hourly mall employees, including Foote, marked their time cards when arriving at work.

Cards entered in evidence showed Foote's card marked at exactly the same time on April 19 as the card of two other employees he rode to work with who are expected to testify they were with Foote when the murder is alleged to have occurred, from 4:30 to 5 a.m.

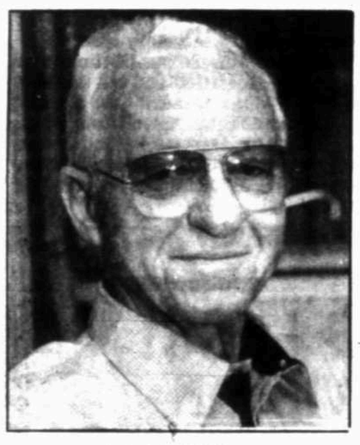
Pioneer history

Nancy L. McKinley, left, and Eileen Welch of the Midland County Historical Society prepare a promotional mailing for the society's book on Midland Pioneer history. The book is a compilation of the histories of Midland County's pioneer families, the ones that settled the area in the 50 years before oil was discovered. The society has also collected hundreds of old photographs of Midland's early days, many of which will be incorporated into the book. The book is being sold on a subscription basis, so interested Midlanders should place their order now with Mrs. McKinley at 682-2931.



J.C. "Calvin" Williamson

Pioneer returns to Odessa

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

ODESSA — J.C. "Calvin" Williamson is back in town — this time to rekindle old friendships and maybe establish a new one or two.

Williamson is a pioneer Odessa businessman who's being honored during the city's second annual Boomtown Days Festival this weekend at the Ector County Coliseum.

The 71-year-old Columbia, Miss., native and former oilfield roustabout owned and operated Williamson Well Service Inc. from 1947 until 1957.

At the peak of operations the firm laid claim to 37 oil service rigs, some 200 employees scattered through five yards in the Permian Basin and upwards of $175,000 in monthly gross receipts — about 40 percent of which was eaten up by payroll.

After selling the company in 1957, Williamson "traveled and traveled till I got tired of it." He then returned to what he knows best: "Working eight days a week, 48 hours a day."

Between the time he owned the well service company and his official retirement in 1980, he bought and sold a 2,400 acre cattle ranch in Mississippi, the M&M Machine Shop in Odessa, an 18,000-acre spread near Notrees and the Lesgo Rental Tool Co. in Odessa.

He also found time to sit on the board of directors of the Odessa Savings and Loan Association and the State National Bank of Odessa.

Of his rather extensive travels and the reason he grew weary of all the free time, Williamson says:

"I've been most everywhere except China — including Siberia. The cleanest places were the Scandinavian countries. The most interesting were probably Moscow and Leningrad.

West Texas not as desolate as it seems

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

When the uneducated, unappreciative eye gazes over a vast expanse of typical West Texas terrain it sees little more than dust and mesquite.

But even the desolate-looking plain has a variety of plant and animal life that most people never notice. That is why the Outdoor Learning Center at Hogan Park was established in 1979.

And that is why Midland life science teachers take students along a nature trail through the 49-acre site in the spring and fall.

Wednesday the group consisted of seventh graders from San Jacinto Junior High School and teacher Cynthia Williams.

"This is West Texas, and there's a lot of beauty out here. You just have to see it and be able to appreciate it," she told her students.

Ms. Williams pointed out dozens of different plants and explained their characteristics and uses. The children studied specimens with such unusual names as sneezeweed, wild lettuce, broom snakeweed, snake herb, sawtooth daisy, plains brittlegrass, catclaw, lotebush, black grama and leatherweed.

Mesquite, Ms. Williams explained, was the aftermath of allowing cattle to overgraze land. This resulted in the dustbowl of the 1930s, which was followed by the introduction of mesquite in West Texas.

Life science teacher Cynthia Williams gives her students a taste of cattails as she takes them on a nature walk through the Outdoor Learning Center at Hogan Park.

Indians used mesquite for food and ground it for flour, she said. Flowers from the yucca plant were also a source of food for early Americans, she added. The plant itself was used to make baskets and soap.

Sneezeweed is poisonous to sheep, the children learned as they walked along the gravel trail crawling with inchworms. Leatherweed, named for the texture of its leaves, was used by Indians to season meat and make tea. An adrenaline-like substance found in broom snakeweed was used in various medications, she said.

The Outdoor Learning Center sports one of Midland's rare natural groves. At least, Ms. Williams called the handful of elms, salt cedars and honey locusts a grove.

A lush patch of six-foot-high cattails bordered a small pond. Its correct name is polya, Ms. Williams informed. "The buffalo would wallow out a place on the prairie and leave an indention in the soil that would fill up with water."

But now the stagnant-smelling pond — filled with moss, algae, tadpoles, tiny fish and bugs that made rippling rings — had no buffalo, just dozens of dirty, discarded cups.

"The entire plant is edible," Ms. Williams said, pulling out a cattail and offering each student a taste.

"Oh, it's disgusting!" one girl said, gagging. "Gross," another agreed. Some less-emotional students said it tasted like grass or celery.

A red-winged blackbird perched on a fence. A prairie dog scurried into its hole. Orange, yellow, white and purple wild flowers bloomed.

And the students were able to find things of interest and beauty in what first appeared to be nothing more than a vacant lot.

Ten persons arrested in Midland drug probe

From Staff Reports

Ten persons have been arrested and one suspect is being sought in connection with a four-month undercover drug investigation conducted by agents of the Department of Public Safety and the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

In the county jail Thursday under bonds ranging from $20,000 to $50,000 were Leslie Baker, in her 20s, of South Midkiff Road; Dana Green, in her 20s, of 4309 Harlowe; Terry Dial, in his 20s, of 4309 Harlowe; Vernadean Marlowe, in her 20s, also of the Harlowe Street address; Daniel Bustillos, in his 20s, of 300 E. Gist; and Martin Caballero, in his 20s, no street address available, Midland.

Released on bonds ranging from $10,000 to $25,000 were 44-year-old Juventino "Tino" Perales of 300 E. Gist; Robert Whiteaker, in his 30s, of South Midkiff Road; Frank Whiteaker, in his 40s, also of South Midkiff Road; and Noel Dubors, in his 20s, no street address, Midland.

Still being sought is Fred Villareal, in his 20s, no street address available, Midland.

According to a sheriff's department narcotics officer, all 11 suspects were named in 14 sealed indictments handed down by the Midland County grand jury on May 3.

Seized in connection with the case were a quantity of drugs, including seven grams of cocaine with a street value of $840, two lbs. of marijuana worth $1,200, two grams of heroin valued at $400 and two grams of speed worth $400.

The bonds were set by State District Judge Pat M. Baskin.

'Bells' provides direct line to entertainment

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

A Review

"It's a perfect relationship," Ella says. "I can't see him and he can't see me. Our love will never lose its mystery. I'll never meet him. He'll never meet me."

How does one form a romantic relationship sight unseen? By correspondence? Sometimes. But not this time. Instead, the answer lies in a more modern contraption, the telephone.

When Betty Comden, Adolph Green, Jerome Robbins and Jule Styne were looking for an idea for an original musical show, one of the four happened, in 1955, to be glancing at a New York City phone directory and, turning the directory over, discovered on the back cover a full-page advertisement for a telephone answering service. Firmly planted in the middle of the advertisement was the picture of a friendly-looking girl complete with wires stretching from her head to representations of people from different walks of life.

Thus "Bells Are Ringing" was born. The musical opened in New York Nov. 29, 1956, ran for 27 months (close to 1,000 performances) and closed March 7, 1959.

Thursday, ACT IX and Midland Community Theatre's production of "Bells" opened with a gala $75-per-couple evening. The production, which is being staged as a fund-raiser for MCT by ACT IX, opens to the public today at 8:30 p.m. and closes June 2. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office 682-4111.

MCT's production is, for the most part, effectively staged and choreographed by guest choreographer Jerry Yoder. The strongest exception is the subway scene where, for no apparent reason, the ensemble enters and leaves the subway car through its walls, rather than its door. By contrast, the visually attractive "It's A Simple Little System," "Drop That Name" and "The Midas Touch" are a delight to watch.

The musical itself is rather loosely strung together and at times stretches the imagination a bit too much. Thus, it is vitally important that MCT do as tight a production as possible. For the most part, the theater succeeds. But, on occasion, the production is rescued just in time.

For example, MCT's production opens with a film, the intent of which is never quite clear. Apparently, it is to set the audience up for the pitfalls of telephone calls and or missing telephone calls. (The film has some very funny moments.)

Since the calls in the film are being made by a bored boy who, angry with his mother, starts dialing numbers at random, when the play opens with an announcer (Scott Hammond) selling the idea of an answering service to young ladies so they don't miss important calls, the link between the two is faulty. Who wants to get a random call?

Perhaps the point is that with an answering service, calls are screened. And, of course, this answering service is unlike any I've ever known. The leading lady, Ella Peterson (a role played by Judy Holliday in the original New York production), takes a personal interest in the customers. Answering her lines in a manner that would make any customer feel confident, she becomes friends with the clients. In one particular case — writer Jeff Moss' — her interest is so intense that she falls in love with a voice.

The role of Ella is crucial to the play. If this character is miscast, the musical rings off, leaving the audience shackled to a dial tone. In MCT's production, Arlene Jara plays the friendly, funny, wacky Ella to the max.

Thus, the only real agony the audience sits through is the interminably long, long, long first act — all 15 scenes of it. By comparison, Act II with seven scenes is a working line.

Noteworthy among the supporting players were the performances of Jim Bartlett (he's wonderful!) as Dr. Kitchell and dancers Ken Mechler, Daren Taylor and Rogers "Scooter" Tilley. Also, Paul Talbot as Sandor was memorable when he explained in song "It's A Simple Little System."

The weakest lines were Marilyn Allen as Sue, the owner of Susanswerphone; James Brazell as Moss; and Hammond as the announcer and as Larry Hastings.

Ms. Allen looked the part, but too often she couldn't be heard when she spoke.

Brazell had the same difficulty when he sang. He simply didn't project. His lack of power was even more obvious when he sang opposite Miss Jara, whose voice could be heard throughout the house.

Although Hammond relaxed as the show progressed, he also had a vocal problem. The tone of his words didn't carry conviction.

The ensemble work rang true in the dance routines and in singing, except on a few occasions, such as, when the troupe members got off-key in "The Party's Over."

Also weak was the opening of the scene in Larry Hastings's penthouse when Hastings (Hammond) was balancing a wine glass on his forehead. He had everyone's attention, but when he received a long distance call and stood up they all discovered he had been razzing them — the glass had a suction bottom. But, no one seemed surprised. They just let it go and moved on to the next thing.

The orchestra, conducted by Darryl Knapp, played an upbeat show.

Directed by Ted Strickland, "Bells Are Ringing" has its Midas moments and is not a bad call for musical comedy lovers.

"...THE EVIDENCE shows that LMI would not have had the great success it did in the promotion, sale, marketing and distribution of church packets if it were not for assistance given Thomas and Linda Williams by William M. Morris," the government says. Morris played a role in the selling of 1,100 charters in 32 states.

The church documents included a vow of poverty, letter of direction, constitution, by-laws, and an auxiliary LMI church charter and "copy-not" pens. Ink from those pens could not be photocopied or microfilmed, the government says.

"The (documents) conveyed the impression that the purchaser had given up all of his assets and income to what was portrayed as an independent church organization, affiliated with LMI," the government summary says. "In reality, the purchaser controlled the organization and continued to enjoy the benefits of his or her income."

In another scheme, the purchaser of LMI's packet could deduct up to one-half of his adjusted gross income by depositing his income in his "controlled auxiliary church checking account" and then claiming those deposits as "tax deductible contributions to a tax-exempt organization." The funds deposited in the account were available for use by the purchaser "who controlled the checking account."

"Mr. Morris knew from his training and experience and from his prior membership in the Life Science Church, after which LMI was patterned," the summary says, "that the false promises and representations of tax benefits were the main inducements to purchasing the LMI packets."

Witnesses once aligned with LMI, the govenments claims, said they had relied on Morris's professional opinion, as a CPA, that LMI tax programs were legal before they purchased the church packets or sold them.

The card of another employee, Mark Hensley, was marked at shortly before 7 a.m. Hensley — who testified Thursday that his neighbor at the time, Ms. Nesset, had told him of "mysterious knockers and obscene phone calls" she had been receiving before her death — was a suspect in the murder.

District Judge Joe Connally, presiding over the case in the 244th District Court, has sequestered the jury. He told jurors Thursday to expect to hear remaining testimony Friday, with deliberations likely beginning Saturday.

Court officials had predicted the trial could last 10 days.

"But when you work all your life and wake up one morning with no job, you're in a hell of a fix."

He and his wife Margaret now divide their time between their home in Temple and a summer house in Palacious:

"When we get tired of Temple, we go to Palacious," he said. "When we get tired of Palacious, we get in this (a newer model Winnebago) and travel."

Does he miss the business world?

"Oh yeah. I enjoyed it. It's about the only thing I know. I put in lots of 24-hour days back then."

But he'll spend this weekend relaxing with old friends and some of the people with whom he once worked. "I'm looking forward to it," he says with a smile crossing his unwrinkled face.

Boomtown Days celebrates the oil boom of the 30s and 40s, and last year drew 15,000 visitors.

Big Spring orthodontist elected president of society

Dr. Douglas Smith, Big Spring orthodontist, was elected president of the Permian Basin District Dental Society, effective at the conclusion of the 114th annual session of the Texas Dental Association May 3-6, in San Antonio.

Smith, a specialist in orthodontics with a main office in Big Spring and branch offices in Colorado City and Snyder, is a native of Loraine.

He received his bachelor of science degree from McMurry College in Abilene in 1950, and served for three years in the U.S. Air Force during the Korean War, from 1950-

Smith graduated from the University of Texas Dental Branch in Houston in 1962. He received his master of science degree in health sciences with certification in orthodontics from the Dental Branch of the University of Texas Health Sciences Center in Houston in 1971.

Smith has been an orthodontist in Big Spring and Snyder since 1971. He opened a branch office in Colorado City this year.

He serves as secretary-elect of the University of Texas Orthodontic Alumni Association and is a member of the Texas Dental Association, American Dental Association, Texas Orthodontic Association, Southwestern Society of Orthodontists and the American Association of Orthodontists.

Ex-POW chapter seeks donations

The Permian Basin Chapter of American Ex-Prisoners of War is seeking donations for a fishing dock for patients at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring.

The dock, which would be on the Old Cosden Lake in Big Spring, would give the patients a place to get away from the hospital for a little recreation. It would be especially appreciated by those patients who are confined to wheelchairs.

Some of the materials needed have already been donated by local companies, and labor will be supplied by Big Spring Federal Prison, but many materials are still needed, including plywood sheets, pine boards, galvanized bolts with nuts and washers, nylon straps, lag screws with washers, hinges and nails.

Cash donations can be mailed directly to First Federal Savings and Loan in Big Spring, marked "for account 103172, POW fishing dock fund." Anyone with materials to donate can call Joe Dobbs in Midland (694-5043), Carl Ruse in Odessa (332-2792) or W.R. Purser in Big Spring (263-1933).

Woman reports rape to police

A 38-year-old Midland bar manager told police she was raped early this morning.

The woman, spotted by a patrolman as she walked along Loop 250, said she was assaulted about 3 a.m. No other details were available early today, as detectives were still investigating the incident.

In other police activity, a Midland man said rings, coins, a rifle and color television set, with a total value of $2,230, were taken in the burglary of his house earlier this week.

In the burglary case, Ruben Ornelas, 26, of 1911 English Drive, said his house was broken into between Sunday and Thursday. The home was not ransacked, police said, and just how the burglar got into the house was not immediately determined.

Feuding Republicans take dispute to court

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Feuding Bexar County Republicans have taken their battle for local party control to court, a move which some Republicans said could end in political bloodshed at Saturday's GOP senatorial district conventions.

Party moderates filed two lawsuits in state district court on Thursday, charging local party officials are withholding minutes of the May 5 precinct conventions.

The moderates have indicated they will make major efforts to wrest leadership posts from conservatives during the senatorial district conventions.

In the lawsuits, the moderates charged that their efforts to participate fully in the senatorial district conventions have been "prejudiced by not being allowed to inspect the minutes of the precinct conventions."

Named as defendants in the suits were 19th District State GOP Committeewoman Mary Morton Jackson.

People go to dogs: Exotic canines popular

Copley News Service

What is the world's saddest-looking dog, has a black tongue and loose, rippled skin that sometimes looks more washboard than canine, is powerful, pugnacious and swift of movement — yet so gentle a child can use it for a pillow?

The answer is a Shar Pei (pronounced shar-pay), a Chinese fighting dog that heads the list of exotic and expensive breeds being purchased for show and for pets.

While at the top in terms of price — about $2,000 per puppy — Shar Peis have plenty of company on the list, which includes:

— Portuguese water dogs — shaggy, medium-size black or brown working-class canines that formerly earned their biscuits as a fisherman's companion with the ability to dive 12 feet to retrieve lost gear.

— Affenpinschers — toy-size animals with faces like monkeys and a forefather in the Brussels griffon.

— Ibizans — tall, lean, greyhound-like animals that click their teeth but rarely bark.

— Kuvasz — large white dogs that are native to Hungary and take their name from the Turkish word meaning "armed guard of the nobility."

— Cromwell Bedlingtons — terriers that look like lambs and hail from the mining district of Bedlingshire in Northumberland, England. They are believed to be related to the Dandie Dinmont, the terrier named after a character in Sir Walter Scott's "Guy Mannering."

— Bouvier des Flandres — large, spirited working dogs native to southwest Flanders and the French northern hills.

CNS Photos

THE SHAR PEI itself is so little known that it isn't yet recognized by the American Kennel Club, which went into something of a tizzy when the breed was featured as a luxury his-and-her gift idea in the most recent Neiman Marcus Christmas catalog.

Virtually extinct in its native China, where the breed is believed to have dated from 200 B.C., the first Shar Peis appeared in this country in the '60s. The dog was looked upon as an oddity, but gradually it was bred so that the population now has reached about 4,000.

June Collins of San Diego is one of a select group of American keepers and breeders of Shar Peis. She bought her first Shar Pei from an Arkansas breeder in 1977 after becoming intrigued by a photo in a Canadian newspaper.

"They looked like dogs with very strong characters and interesting personalities," says Collins, "and I wasn't disappointed."

So far, she has bred eight litters of about a half-dozen puppies each and has had no trouble selling the pups. Four adult Shar Peis — Ruby, Ah Chong, Ming and Ah Dah — romp happily through her home along with two 16-week-old puppies, although the dogs also remain extremely protective of both house and owner.

LIKEWISE, THE Bouvier des Flandres is very protective, which is why some are now being used for police work, says David Galbraith, a Fontana, Calif., breeder and owner of Galbraith's Fairelaroue CBX, a 3.5-year-old champion Bouvier.

"Yet, they are very gentle in a home situation," he continues, "and well worth the money for people looking for a very special dog." (Exotic breeds currently are coming onto the marketplace demanding prices of $600 and up.)

Margaret Osborn of Imperial Beach, Calif., is the proud owner of a pair of champion Ibizans, believed to be descendants of dogs kept as palace pets by the Egyptian pharaohs, whose tombs often carried likenesses of the hounds. Like the Shar Peis, the dogs became extinct in their native land and were rediscovered in latent forms in the mid-1950s on three Egyptian islands.

Osborn says that a desire to perpetuate the rare breed is one of the reasons she began to breed Ibizans six years ago.

Like the standard greyhound, the Ibizan is noted for coursing and running speed, but Osborn says her dogs have readily adapted to a live-in household.

Actually, the two champions — Al Bahr's Sun Storm and Sun Sweet Sue — love to spread themselves over household couches and chairs and avoid running at all costs. "I love them, too," Osborn remarks, "because they are remarkably clean and quiet animals."

Vitamins reduce dogs' stress

Hearst Feature Service

Canines — particularly those undergoing stress — are the latest candidates to pop Vitamin C, according to Dr. David S. Kronfeld, professor of nutrition at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine. Kronfeld adds Vitamin C supplements to his recommendation for a higher protein diet before and during prolonged stress — physical, mental, emotional or simply triggered by too many fleas.

A veterinarian since 1952, Kronfeld recently spent a lot of time studying racing sled dogs in the icy Alaskan wilderness and says that work may be important to dogs and possibly even their stamina-minded owners.

"Canine athletes competing in the sled race withstood physical stress and strain much better if the protein and Vitamin C content of their food was increased. That finding could be significant for treating the problem of 'sports anemia,' a human disorder in which the red blood cell count declines. Dogs developed 'sports anemia' if they were fed diets containing less than 30 percent protein.

"But we found we could prevent it if the dogs were fed a complete and balanced high-protein diet based on meat by-products."

He calls carbohydrate-loading, a practice aimed at delaying fatigue in muscles, dangerous for both dogs and people. "It causes the same disease of the muscle, called 'tying up,' in horses, dogs and human marathon runners. It is rare, but it can be lethal, and people need to know about the risk."

'Dog in sheep's clothing' no killer

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

HAMERST, Mass. — Not too many years ago, if you told an American sheep rancher that you could train a dog to protect his flock against predators, he would have looked at you as if you were crazy.

Dogs kill sheep, just like coyotes, wolves and cougars. There is just too much evidence of the carnage dogs have done in sheep pens; ewes with their necks twisted grotesquely, splattered with blood. "Lassie Come Home" is fiction, he would have said.

But the New England Farm Center of Hampshire College here is slowly but surely convincing sheep ranchers that they are wrong. Over the past eight years the center has been raising a breed of dog known throughout the Mediterranean region to protect sheep.

These dogs, the Maremma, anatolian and Shar Planinetz, are now being looked at as a solution to a problem that has tormented many a sheep rancher in the United States. In 1979, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported more than 1,294,000 sheep, or 10 percent of the domestic stock, were killed by predators.

Jay R. Lorenz, a research associate at the center, said there are no hard results yet from the college's livestock-guarding dog program, but early reports are encouraging.

One Colorado rancher, who has a flock of about 2,000 sheep, was losing between 200 and 300 a year to coyotes. That was 20 percent of his lamb crop right off the top. After we gave him two of our dogs, he only lost 75. The next summer, he reported losing only eight," said Lorenz.

Lorenz said the would also protect flocks against cougars.

"The cats will kill 15 to 20 sheep in one night. They may come only once a season, but when they hit, they hit hard," he said.

Lorenz said the dogs are big enough to kill one of the cats, but generally, their mere presence is enough to scare them off.

The 80-pound shaggy canines, which come from Yugoslavia, Turkey and Italy, have been called "dogs in sheep clothing" by some ranchers. When they are in the midst of a flock, they are almost indistinguishable from sheep.

"They go up to them and lick their faces and sniff their behinds," said Lorenz.

As a testament to their protective nature, Lorenz likes to tell the story about Bernie, whose ancestors come from the Anatolian region of Turkey.

"Not too long ago, some hunters were chasing a coon and it tried to escape by going into the flock.

"The hounds went under the fence after the coon and Bernie picked them up by the neck, one by one, and killed them," he said.

Lorenz said there are now 550 dogs on sheep ranches in 31 states. The ranchers pay a yearly leasing fee of $120, about the cost of one ewe. In return, the ranchers are required to fill out an annual questionaire that is used in the college's research program.

The Hampshire College researcher said the dogs were not only appreciated by the sheep ranchers, but wildlife people as well.

Because of the great damage predators cause among the flocks, the ranchers have struck back with a vengeance.

Coyotes, for example, are shot from helicopters, hunted, tracked and gassed in their dens, trapped, snared and poisoned.

The livestock-guarding dog program was started by Raymond Coppinger, a biology professor at Hampshire College.

Swiss doctor issues warning on tight jeans

By ERMA BOMBECK

I know all of you can't be expected to remember every earth-shaking fact you hear, so I will refresh your memory. It was exactly one week ago today that I announced in this column that I broke down and bought my first pair of jeans, possibly making me the last woman in North America to cave in to fashion pressure.

Yesterday, a doctor in Switzerland, issued a statement saying, "Tight jeans can be hazardous to your health and result in a real pain in the seat." (And that's not to mention the pain in the assets of jeans-makers everywhere.)

I'm not surprised. If I watched "Wizard of Oz" out of season, the next day someone would discover that it causes blurred vision and lower-back pains.

My only amazement is how fast they got the research in gear. They must have telexed the column to Lucerne where a group of doctors said, "Bombeck just bought a pair of jeans. Get us 200 research mice, a treadmill, and 200 mice designer jeans with a quarter-inch waist, two inches in length, with room for a tail. We've got work to do."

It happens all the time. Everytime I take a new product or increase my consumption of a food or beverage, researchers discover it's bad for you.

It's like they don't want me to have a good time. Maybe if they would occasionally zero in on something I hated, I'd have more respect for their findings.

Like how come they never find a lethal agent in squash? I hate squash. And I've been waiting for years to have them declare pantyhose a life-threatening piece of apparel that causes disorientation and surliness. And you'd think they could give me a legitimate reason for not buying a bathing suit with legs up to the armpit, like mirror gross-out.

It's not like wearing jeans will shorten your life. It's just that if you wear them tight enough, it puts pressure on the cutaneous nerve, which runs from the lower spinal cord to the thigh, and leads to inflammation and extreme pain.

The doctor who conducted the research said one of his patients was a teenage girl who refused to take off her jeans for the treatment because she feared she wouldn't be able to put them on again.

Ridiculous? Who is to say? All I know is I can only assume Brooke Shields has a cutaneous nerve somewhere in her body and that her jeans are tight enough to bring about discomfort and inflammation.

I think I've been looking for that kind of pain all my life.

College education may increase self-confidence

By ADELE SCHEELE, PH.D.

Q. Up until this point in my career I haven't found the lack of a college education to be an obstacle or an embarrassment. But of late, I hear more and more about it being the vehicle to success.

I am beginning to feel somewhat inferior about my lack of a degree. Other than enrolling in a college degree program, which I have done, what can I do to alleviate my feelings?

A. College is certainly not the end-all in life. If you want to boost your morale you can find a long list of millionaires who never even enrolled. But if you would like the experience, then this is the time.

The process of testing oneself is often more than just subject matter. It is testing whether we are smart.

College offers you that chance to compete and to develop more self-confidence. But do some research to find a college geared to working people — alternative colleges, colleges without walls, weekend colleges — for greater support of faculty, staff and fellow students.

Q. I'm a 50-year-old association vice-president and editor in the broad field of public relations for 20 years. How can I best channel the ambition of an overly aggressive managing editor? She is so busy promoting herself (and feeling hurt if she doesn't get all the recognition she seeks) that she is neglecting the basics of doing a good, efficient job.

A. Talk to her. Tell her when she is good and when you need more from her. Deal with both aspects: doing the job itself and getting rewarded for it. Also confront her ambition.

Does she not get enough attention? Is there a possibility for her to get promoted if her work and personality warrant it? This will be a difficult session for you both. Most bosses err by not being direct; it's hard to do. But you may save a valuable editor or have to find another one. Either way, you will be better off in doing your own job and helping office morale.

Q. I'd like to be a successful entrepreneur, but I'm one of those "daddy's little girls" who was nurtured to not take risks but to do safe, stable things. How can I break out of it?

A. The solution lies directly in the problem. Take these summer months to experiment.

Go to a growth center, like the Esalen Institute in Big Sur if you can afford it, or find a good therapist to help you on a regular basis. You will be able to change much of your dependency, but not all at once. Don't expect to be a successful entrepreneur until you work with one, or become partners with one.

You need to develop the strength to drive yourself to please only yourself. That's possible. So many have done it. But it takes graduated steps and time.

Risk means more than putting money or time on the line. It means learning to put one's own reputation on the line. And that often means coming to terms about feeling like a fraud, or being seen by others as one. Being a "daddy's little girl" teaches you not to risk, not to face the fear of doing and being alone.

Time exposure called key to tanning

MEMPHIS (AP) — Correct time exposure is the key to developing a healthy-looking tan, advises Dr. Robert Sayre, director of Coppertone's Solar Research Center.

Your first exposure to the sun should be before 10 a.m. or after 2 p.m. The sun's rays are strongest at midday, he explains, when you will be more likely to burn.

Build up exposure time gradually, staying out in the sun a little longer each day until you have acquired a base tan, Sayre says, adding that you should always wear a sun care product containing a sunscreen.

Most sun care products carry SPF (Sun Protection Factor) numbers 2 to 15. Fair or sensitive skin, he says, needs sun care products with higher SPF numbers, especially for the first exposure to the sun, and can switch to lower numbers after getting a base tan.

Be careful of the sun even on cloudy or overcast days, he warns. You can receive a sunburn even when there isn't any direct sunlight. Be especially careful when near reflective surfaces, such as sand or snow.

Nordic countries' infant mortality lowest

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — With the world's best record in keeping babies alive, the Nordic countries offer daily proof of the link between infant mortality and social and economic well-being.

All the Nordic countries have socialized medicine, with free or nearly free prenatal and postnatal care. Midwives and doctors at clinics and nurses making house calls see patients frequently, and the population is well-educated. In addition, abortions are routine and free of charge.

"The children that are born were wanted," said Professor Bent Friis Hansen of the neonatal department at Copenhagen's National Hospital.

"The mother is more motivated to eat sensibly, live sensibly, have minor diseases treated during pregnancy, and that's what counts."

A study released last summer by the Population Reference Bureau in Washington showed that in 1980, four Nordic countries — Sweden, Finland, Norway and Denmark — were among the five nations with the lowest infant mortality rates.

Sweden's 6.7 baby deaths per 1,000 live births was the lowest. Japan was next at 7.4, but then came Finland, Norway and Denmark, all with fewer than 8.5 deaths per 1,000 births.

After the first five, only three countries — the Netherlands, Switzerland and France — had fewer than 10 deaths per 1,000 births. The 25 countries with the lowest rates — mostly from Europe and North America — ended with Czechoslovakia's 16.6 per 1,000.

Infant mortality covers babies who die before their first birthday.

"It's very much related to high social welfare standards," said Professor Bendt Zachau-Christiansen of the National Hospital's pediatrics department, who has studied the subject for decades.

Zachau-Christiansen said mortality diminished in the Nordic countries as economic conditions improved on the lower rungs of society's ladder.

Nevertheless, he said, "We can't throw stones. In Greenland, where 1 percent of Denmark's population lives, the rate is five times higher than in the rest of the country, about 40-50 per 1,000."

The 50,000 people of Greenland, the world's largest island, are home-ruled subjects of the Danish monarch, but their standard of living is only a fraction of that in the country proper.

DEAR ABBY

Boyfriend sees no humor in April Fool's joke

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Chuck" and I have been going together for five months. We're both 36 and divorced. Chuck told me he'd been in the service for 12 years but was out now because he developed colitis. He said colitis could be controlled with medication now, and he hoped to get back in again.

About a month ago I called Chuck and said, "I just came from the doctor's, and I'm pregnant." He said, "Don't 'B.S.' me — if you are pregnant, it's not mine," then he hung up before I could say, "April Fool!"

I called him back and said it was only an April Fool's joke. Then he got really mad, called me an idiot and hung up on me.

The next day I called to apologize, and he said, "Your joke was a terrible shock to my system. Now I'm bleeding real bad and don't want to talk to you." Then he hung up.

Two days later he called to tell me he had just taken his physical to get back in the service. He didn't pass, and it was all my fault! By this time I was feeling really rotten. I called and tried to explain that I didn't mean to hurt him, but he said, "You really screwed things up for me but good, and I never want to see you again." Then he hung up.

Abby, how can I make amends? I feel just terrible. — NOT FUNNY

DEAR NOT FUNNY: Consider it a good learning experience and don't try to make amends. I think you were lucky to learn that Chuck had (a) no sense of humor, and (b) no sense of honor.

It's just as well that Chuck chucked you, because I'd have advised you to chuck Chuck.

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. I have a sister-in-law who is the nosiest person I've ever known. She's the kind who will pick up a person's personal letter and read it if she gets the chance. I caught her going through my checkbook once. Anyway, here's what happened, and I am fuming.

After being gone all afternoon, I came home and my phone was ringing. It was her. She told me she had been shopping and came across a good bargain on strawberries, so she bought a box for me and put them in my fridge. I asked her how she got in and she said she took the screen off the back bedroom window and climbed in.

Abby, she broke into my house. The nerve of that woman! I'm sure while she was there she snooped around because she wouldn't miss an opportunity like that.

Couldn't I have her arrested for breaking and entering? My husband tells me I am overreacting. (She's his sister.) But I need to know what I should do about this. — STILL FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Simmer down. Don't have her arrested, but do ask her not to go through any more windows when you're not home.

DEAR ABBY: I can top that senior citizen who took a premarital blood test and was horrified when it came back positive for syphilis:

Last year, after I had blood and urine tests for my annual physical, the doctor's office phoned to ask me if I knew I was pregnant.

I told them no, I didn't, but I was going to call the newspaper right away because I'm 73 years old and had a hysterectomy 14 years ago. — IT HAPPENED IN SIOUX CITY

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Cholesterol plan suggested

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors should find out their patients' cholesterol levels and fight excess cholesterol with a new three-step diet plan, the American Heart Association says.

Excess cholesterol increases the risk of hardening of the arteries, and recent studies show "the smoking gun evidence" that reducing cholesterol will cut the risk, said Dr. Antonio Gotto Jr., president of the heart association.

He said some 11 million Americans have too much fat — cholesterol or triglycerides — in their blood. That represents the 5 percent of the population with the highest blood fat levels, an arbitrary criterion, Gotto said.

Apart from doctors, "everyone should know their own cholesterol level, just as they know their own blood pressure and assess their own smoking," said Dr. W. Virgil Brown, chairman of the association's nutrition committee.

Cholesterol and triglyceride levels are checked with a blood test that costs $10 to $35 and should be done every three to five years if levels are acceptable, Gotto said.

To reduce unacceptable levels, the heart association recommends a three-level plan of increasingly severe 2,300-calorie diets. Patients begin at the first level and move to the other diets if necessary, but they stay on some sort of diet for the rest of their lives.

Exercise leaflet available free

NEW YORK — Exhausted after sitting all day? Plagued by unsuppressed yawns? Always drowsy in the middle of the day?

Many who are sedentary workers feel chronic fatigue, although not participating in physically tiring activities.

Actually the reason for this fatigue is a lack of movement, not an excess. Believe it or not, exercise at the end of a physically inactive day dispels this fatigue, invigorates the body, helps the person look and feel better, promotes muscle tone and reduces the risk of heart attack.

Information about the benefits of regular moderate exercise is contained in "Exercise," a leaflet in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's series of Health and Safety publications.

Some of the questions answered in the leaflet are:

— What are aerobic, anerobic, isometric and isotonic exercises?

— Is a medical check-up necessary before joining a health club offering group exercise sessions?

In answer to the questions the leaflet offers advice on exercise. Walking is recommended as a superior form of exercise because it is available everywhere and requires no special training or equipment.

To receive a single free copy of the leaflet, write to: "Exercise," Health and Safety Education Division, Department J.P., Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., One Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010. Please include a 9-1/2 x 4-inch stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Fishermen worry that sea otters will devour catch

CORDOVA, Alaska (AP) — Hunted to the verge of extinction for their luxurious fur, sea otters are making such a strong comeback in Alaska waters that biologists fear they are on a collision course with fishermen.

Voracious feeders, their favorite foods include shellfish highly prized by those who harvest the bounty of the sea off Alaska — Dungeness, king and tanner crab, and clams.

Sea otters have few natural predators, and they are protected by federal law. That has enhanced a steady repopulation of areas once wiped clean by fur hunters. But it also has sparked resentment from fishermen.

A prime example is Prince William Sound, a natural larder of seafood at the northern reaches of the Gulf of Alaska.

In 1911, only remnant populations of otters remained in the sound, but the number has now burgeoned to an estimated 10,000, with otter overrunning once-prime Dungeness fishing grounds in the Cordova area.

"IN THE LAST 15 years they've eaten the bays clean of Dungeness," says Pete Isleib, who started fishing the waters around Cordova in 1963.

Sea otter predation has been so high that there has been no commercial season for Dungeness in the Cordova area for the past four years.

"Yes, there is a growing resentment among crab fishermen," says Al Kimker, state shellfish biologist at Cordova.

It is estimated that in the 126 years before Russia sold Alaska to the United States in 1867, some 800,000 sea otters were taken by fur hunters.

The Russian-American Co. limited the otter harvest in the three decades prior to 1867, but uncontrolled hunting started again after 1867, and the otter population went into a tailspin.

IN THE DECADE of the 1870s, 40,283 sea otters were taken, but during the decade ending with 1910, fur hunters harvested only 572.

Small, isolated colonies survived only in Prince William Sound, lower Cook Inlet, the Kodiak Island area, the Alaska Peninsula and the Aleutian Islands.

"Probably no more than several hundred remained," says Ancel M. Johnson, chief of marine mammal research for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Alaska.

Protected from all but natives, first by treaty in 1911 and then by the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972, the sea otter population has rebounded to an estimated 150,000 to 200,000 animals.

THE GROWTH OF the otter population has been limited only by the availability of food — crabs, clams, sea urchins, abalone, mussels.

A study of eating habits by sea otter in Nelson Bay, near Cordova, indicated adults consumed an average of 14 Dungeness crab of various size daily (legal-size Dungeness weigh an average of two pounds). Sub-adults put away an average of about 10 Dungeness.

"Any otter old enough to support itself is going to require at least 10 pounds of food a day," says Johnson.

"The data strongly suggests that otter were the primary cause of a decline (in the late 1970s) in the number of Dungeness in northeast Prince William Sound."

Fishermen took an average of one-half million to one million pounds of Dungeness annually from Orca Inlet alone during the 1960s and 1970s, but as sea otters moved into the area the Dungeness disappeared, Isleib says.

"I'd still be operating in Orca if the otters hadn't moved in," says Isleib. "They pretty much ate everything in sight."

Oliver Holm, a commercial fisherman in the area for 10 years, says fishermen complain that sea otters are being allowed to increase at such a rate with no attempt at management.

"MOST FEEL THERE should be a controlled harvest, rather than let the population explode," he says. "If they're allowed to increase to the maximum carrying capacity of an area they're going to eat everything in sight."

Johnson says several management possibilities are available, although he emphasizes he is not a proponent of any specific program.

"I'm only trying to tell people what is happening, that the otters are moving back in," Johnson says.

Students lining up for American school

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The clock ticks toward lunchtime but seventh-graders Karsten Mendoza and David Santos appear oblivious to life around them.

The boys — one fair skinned, the other dark — are huddled over a laboratory table, their heads nearly touching as they explore the remains of a dissected frog.

Until last year, the New York-born Mendoza lived with his parents in Miami, Fla. Santos is from Monterrey.

Today, they share a frog, two languages, two cultures and a school.

This is Monterrey's American School, where students — Mexicans and Americans — learn reading, writing, arithmetic, a respect for one another and, most importantly for the majority, the English language.

They listen to two national anthems, pledge allegiance before two flags and learn "the best that both cultures have to offer," said School Board member Eric Gustafson.

"We really do live in two worlds," school Superintendent William Stockebrand said, referring to the obvious American influence on this northeastern Mexican city just a 2½-hour drive from Laredo and Reynosa in Texas.

As such, this school may be the closest to the U.S. border of any American school outside the United States. Most, at least at the start, were founded to provide American-style education to the children of U.S. nationals living abroad.

The private, non-profit system here was established in 1928 by two U.S. companies, American Metals and American Smelting and Refining, to provide education to their American employees' children.

The children of the companies' Mexican employees began attending the school in the early 1930s. Ten years later it was opened to the community and now is run by a foundation.

With the exception of a few high school courses and the required Spanish classes for Americans, all classes are taught in English.

Of the school's 1,400 students from nursery levels through senior high, 80 percent are Mexican and 17 percent are American. The remaining 3 percent come from other countries.

The school — which is accredited in the United States and Mexico — has a prestigious reputation for attracting the children of politicians and wealthy businessmen who later go to universities, many of them to the United States.

Its challenge, said Stockebrand, "is to educate the children of the current leadership of Monterrey and even of Mexico because someday they'll have to assume that leadership themselves."

Stockebrand is an American who holds a doctorate in educational administration from Temple University in Philadelpha, Pa.

Half-day English classes for 3- through 5-year-olds prepare Mexicans to enter first grade at the same level as Americans.

The system seems to be working.

Based on annual achievement tests, American School students are one to two grade levels above the U.S. average and 99 percent go on to colleges and universities.

"I'm not saying we're exceptional in terms of private schools (in the United States), but this is a second language for a lot of these kids and they're performing as if they were native English speakers," Stockebrand said.

"The students here are not necessarily brighter than those in the States, but they take advantage of a good school and they succeed," said Sara Driver, 16, the first full-year exchange student from the school's sister system in Topeka, Kan.

Despite what one board member called the "broadening" exposure of learning in an interculture atmosphere, students interviewed said they associate outside of school mostly with others of their own nationality.

"It's not that we are saying 'down with Americans' or they are saying 'down with Mexicans,'" said 17-year-old Enrique Zuniga. "It's just that they form their group and we form our group."

"Generally, the Mexican students say their own pledge of allegiance and American students say their own pledge," said Michael Severeid, high school principal.

Tuition in peso terms "increased tremendously" since the 1982 devaluation of the peso, Stockebrand said.

The range in the 1981-82 school year was 39,400 to 69,085 pesos; the range now is 162,000 to 296,000 pesos.

> "The students here are not necessarily brighter than those in the States, but they take advantage of a good school and they succeed."
>
> — Sara Driver
> Exchange student

That is $910 to $1,663 at the current exchange rate of 178 pesos to the dollar.

The waiting list for admission is so widely known that that some parents reportedly try to register their children before birth.

"It's a wait forever for some people," said Stockebrand. "We have 22 places left in the nursery and 342 applications for that grade for the fall."

The school's foundation had planned to open a new 2,400-student capacity school by 1985, but fund raising was put on hold because of the current economic crisis in Mexico.

Donald won't duck out on celebrations

Donald Duck

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Donald Duck, the bellyaching sidekick to Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse, turns 50 this spring, but the Oscar-winning cartoon character isn't slowing down. He'll be headlining golden anniversary parades, shows and tours from New York to California.

Although Donald's birthday isn't until June 9, the festivities begin here Saturday at Disney World with a parade headed by Donald and featuring 50 specially trained, snow-white ducks in party hats.

On Monday, he'll plant his webbed footprints in the cement at Mann's Chinese Theater in Hollywood. Other plans over the coming weeks include a Donald Duck film festival in New York, the proclamation of Donald Duck Day in Los Angeles and a tour of 14 cities.

Joe Frazier

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier, whose latest bout is as an actor, says he was surprised to learn he will lose a fight to a short, balding, underweight policeman in the movie he's making here.

"I did not realize that was the way it ended," Frazier, 40, said of the plot twist in the film "Benny and Beauford."

Frazier, who co-stars with Sherman Hemsley of TV's "The Jeffersons" and Cuban-born actor Luis Avalos, called the movie "a simple comedy without a message, just a lot of fun."

The plot centers on two New York policemen, one black and one Puerto Rican, who end up in a house haunted by a ghost who is a bigot. Avalos ends up fighting Frazier and winning with the spirit's help.

Ed Asner

MOSCOW (AP) — Edward Asner, formerly television's "Lou Grant" and now president of the Screen Actors Guild, wound up a work-and-pleasure trip to the Soviet Union by saying, "This is the hardest week I've had in a long time."

Asner, 54, whose visit ended Thursday, came to Moscow last weekend for an international actors' conference on the status of artists.

Among the resolutions adopted by the conference, attended by 100 participants from 40 countries, was one pledging to promote the role of women in the performing arts, Asner told a news conference. The aim was to correct the "terrible percentage" of unemployed women artists, he said.

STROUDSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Fred Waring Sr. and two family-controlled businesses have filed four lawsuits against his son, but the younger Waring's lawyer claims the band leader's wife and two business advisers are behind the suits.

Virginia Waring and the advisers, Ralph Friedman and George Steinberg, "have taken it upon themselves to see that Fred Jr. doesn't operate his father's business enterprises," attorney Peter O'Brien said Thursday.

Nine months ago, Waring Jr., 47, filed suit against Mrs. Waring, 38, and his 84-year-old father's music-publishing company, Shawnee Press Inc., which Mrs. Waring heads. The younger Waring sued for breach of contract, after he and his wife, Rachelle, 38, were fired from their jobs at Shawnee Press.

The latest lawsuits, filed over the past two weeks in the Monroe County Court of Common Pleas, seek repayment of loans and advances to Waring Jr. and acuse him of misusing Shawnee Press funds.

Helen Hayes

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Award-winning actress Helen Hayes told graduates of a New Jersey arts school that they must persevere in the face of great odds in order to succeed as thespians.

"Even if you don't make it as an actor, it's an act of courage to try," said Ms. Hayes, who was presented with the du Cret School of the Arts' Humanitarian Award at the institute's 57th annual commencement Thursday.

The 83-year-old actress also offered a sharply negative opinion of the state of the theater today.

"I know I shouldn't sound like an old fogey, but theater is not the way it used to be," she said. "There's too much difficulty with economics. Playwrights are not free to write with charm and excitement. They have to write a play with a small cast of small sets or no set. There are so many limitations."

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Ruth Graham, wife of evangelist Billy Graham, was in good condition two days after surgery on her esophagus at St. Joseph Hospital, a spokesman said.

Mrs. Graham was admitted Monday and the surgery was performed Tuesday, hospital spokesman Mike Wadum said.

"She had been suffering from a chronic cough and difficulty swallowing," Wadum said Thursday.

Mrs. Graham probably will stay in the hospital for several days, "very typical" for the type of surgery which she underwent, he said. Then she is to go home to Montreat, N.C., before rejoining her husband, who is in England.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A surgeon who removed a pituitary tumor from the skull of Marvin Gay Sr., who is accused of murdering his soul-singer son, says such tumors rarely influence behavior.

Gay, 70, was doing well after surgery Thursday to remove the benign, walnut-size tumor, said County-USC Medical Center spokesman Tony Tripi.

The tumor was discovered during psychiatric tests to determine Gay's competency to stand trial. A hearing scheduled Wednesday was postponed for the operation.

Gay's son, Grammy-winner Marvin Gaye, who added the "e" to his name when he went into show business, was shot to death April 1 at his father's Los Angeles home after an argument. Gaye was known for such hits as "I Heard it Through the Grapevine" and "Sexual Healing."

Crowned Miss USA during a pageant held Thursday night in Lakeland, Fla., is Mai Shanley of Alamogordo, N.M.

New Mexico woman wins Miss USA crown

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The new Miss USA, 21-year-old Mai Shanley of New Mexico, credited her win to her lucky Irish ancestry — and promptly pulled up the bottom of her white evening skirt to reveal a green cloth cloverleaf sewn in the seam.

The dark-haired education major at New Mexico State University was crowned queen of the Miss USA pageant Thursday night, besting 52 other contestants from across the country to win more than $175,000 in cash and prizes.

"Ah, the luck of the Irish," she said when flashing her bit of the green. Her composure, she said, was only a facade — "My head is like scrambled eggs."

The 21-year-old Alamogordo, N.M. native was chosen over runner-up Miss West Virginia, Kelly Anderson.

Miss Tennessee, 24-year-old Desiree Daniels from Chattanooga, was second runner-up. Miss Missouri, 20-year-old Sandy Percival from Sunrise Beach, was third runner-up, while Miss District of Columbia, 21-year-old Steffanee Leaning, was fourth runner-up.

Miss Shanley's mother is of Taiwanese ancestry, her father is Irish.

She said she was excited about returning to Florida for the Miss Universe pageant on July 9. "It's been a dream of mine and I didn't think I'd make it this far."

Miss Shanley is 5-foot-7 and weighs 117 pounds. She lists her hobbies as singing, dancing, acting and traveling.

Condor chick's condition critical despite surgery

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 3-day-old California condor that survived emergency surgery to relieve a blockage in its intestinal tract remained in critical condition today, officials said.

"The bird seems to be recovering from the surgery," said San Diego Wild Animal Park spokesman Tom Hanscom. "Unfortunately, it's not showing any signs as yet that the surgery was a success.... At this point we still consider the bird in critical condition."

Although veterinarians were heartened that the chick — named Yosemite — was "awake and moving about" several hours after Thursday's operation, Hanscom said it was still "too early to tell if the chick would recover."

Hanscom said that park veterinarian Dr. Don Janssen had attempted to feed the chick a glucose and nutrient solution, but the bird has not been able to digest the fluid.

"The purpose of the fluid is to help the bird bring its strength back up," Hanscom said. "It's similar to those solutions given intravenously to humans."

The chick hatched Tuesday at the park's sister facility, the San Diego Zoo.

Man's sugar pill treatment possible

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother-in-law sometimes tells whoppers and I don't know when to believe him. He says his doctor gave him a pill that cured his peptic ulcer. Later, the doctor told hom it was not medicine, but just a sugar pill. Is this possible? — Carl, Boston

Dear Carl: Many peptic ulcer patients get better regardless of the type of treatment they undergo. In fact, Dr. Elizabeth L. Roger, of the Univertsity of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore, reports that of 15 patients who were treated with placebos, 11 were completely cured by the end of five weeks.

Your brother in-law's story may be completely true.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read where a college athlete died suddenly during practice, and then they found out that he had had a heart condition since childhood. Why wasn't this found out long before he got himself into a competitive situation that was too much for him? I would imagine he should have been warned not to play ball. — Joe, N.Y.C.

Dear Joe: There are a number of congenital heart diseases that generally do not become apparent until adulthood. It is possible for a person to engage in athletics and remain completely unaware that he or she has a heart cndition. Unfortunately, the first indication that there is in fact something wrong may be sudden death.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a 35-year-old woman who has a mid-level managerial position and I have given birth to my first child. More importantly, things couldn't have gone better, and I know two other women my age who have had the same experience. Why then is there all this fuss abut the risks that women face if they delay becoming pregnant until their thirties? It seems to me that it only proves that if you say something often enough, people will begin to believe it whether or not it is true. — Mrs. K.R., Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Mrs. R.: Your comments appear to be substantiated by the result of a study conducted at Pennsylvania State University. It indicates that the risks of late pregnancy, both for the mother and the baby, have been exaggerated. The important factors in determining the outcome seem to be related to the individual woman's own health and medical history.

The study did show, however, some association between maternal age and the risk of Down's Syndrome.

An important aspect of pregnancy in later years that may not have been given sufficient attention is the recent trend towards fitness. Better nutrition, exercise, and concern for one's overall health make the 35-year-old woman of today much younger physiologically than was her counterpart of just a few decades ago.

For Clarice, Hoboken, N.J.: Insulin that is derived from pork is almost identical to human insulin. Human insulin can be produced either by chemically changing pork insulin into human insulin, or through genetic engineering.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Europe's "Car of the Year." Your car for the future.

Audi 5000S Sedan

Audi When Audi created the new 5000S, they did more than design the most aerodynamically efficient sedan ever. They did it with style. Elegant, luxurious style.

That's why 53 journalists from 16 countries voted the Audi 5000S Europe's "Car of the Year." Drive it. You'll call it #1, too.
