Mexican cartels steal billions from oil industry

Country challenged to tame brutal drug cartels that rule region

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

CIUDAD MIER, Mexico — Mexico overcame 75 years of nationalist pride to reform its flagging, state-owned oil industry. But as it prepares to develop rich shale fields along the Gulf Coast, and attract foreign investors, another challenge awaits: taming the brutal drug cartels that rule the region and are stealing billions of dollars' worth of oil from pipelines.

Figures released by Petroleos Mexicanos last week show the gangs are becoming more prolific and sophisticated. So far this year, thieves across Mexico have drilled 2,481 illegal taps into state-owned pipelines, up more than one-third from the same period of 2013. Pemex estimates it's lost some 7.5 million barrels worth $1.15 billion.

Pemex director Emilio Lozoya called the trend "worrisome."

More than a fifth of the illegal taps occurred in Tamaulipas, the Gulf state neighboring Texas that is a cornerstone for Mexico's future oil plans. It has Mexico's largest fields of recoverable shale gas, the natural gas extracted by fracturing rock layers.

Mexico, overall, is believed to have the world's sixth-largest reserves of shale gas — equivalent to 60 billion barrels of crude oil. That's more than twice the total amount of oil that Mexico has produced by conventional means over the last century.

The energy reform passed in December loosened Mexico's protectionist

Lawmaker calls for outreach to Hispanics

■ Jason Villalba calls for better articulation, shifting policy and preaching values to secure new voters in the GOP.

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

State Rep. Jason Villalba (R-Dallas) addressed a Midland County Republican Party luncheon Thursday about the importance of recruiting the new and emerging voting blocks into the GOP.

"I'm a little concerned about what I see on the horizon, because there are storm clouds forming," Villalba said. "What I mean by that is the demographics in Texas are changing in such a way that unless we're able to capture the new vote — young people, Hispanics, African Americans and Asians — in larger proportions than today, we are going to lose control of this great state."

Villalba added that, if the GOP loses Texas and the state goes blue, a Republican will never be in the White House "for the rest of our lives."

His message of outreach to young voters and minorities came four days after he and Mayor Jerry Morales participated in the Texas Tribune Festival panel discussion on the topic in Austin. They, and the other panelists, spoke about being tolerant of other philosophies, such as libertarian millennials, and accepting them into the Republican Party.

Preparation a must for Trans-Pecos Festival

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mrt.com

MARFA — In my interview with David Garza in Thursday's Weekender, he explained how the Trans Pecos Festival isn't the usual bash a la Coachella or Burning Man. He called it serene and magical. Garza was so right.

However, he didn't offer advice on how to prepare for Trans Pecos but other people have. Trans Pecos definitely isn't like all the others. But there's stuff to know before heading out.

Thankfully a slew of friends, acquaintances and festival organizers all pitched in to prepare me (and you) for the experience.

Well prepared

With a campsite secure and minimal camping experience, I packed more than needed. However, Marfa Public Radio's Paige Phelps suggested that before heading down, to do three things.

CRIMEBRIEFS

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Man arrested for allegedly sexually assaulting girl

A 45-year-old Midland man was arrested Monday for alleged forced oral sexual contact on a female victim younger than 14, according to court documents.

Kenneth Ray Conger was being held Thursday on $100,000 bond for the first-degree felony of aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Conger

A local investigator received a report July 15 about a juvenile victim in San Antonio and requested an interview be conducted with the child, according to the arrest affidavit. The girl told the interviewer in San Antonio that Conger told her to go into his bedroom and lay on the bed so he could photograph her. Conger then put a pillow over her face, pulled down her pants and forcibly made oral sexual contact with the girl, though she pushed him away and told him to stop, according to the affidavit.

The girl then pulled her pants up and ran out of the room, court documents state.

The affidavit doesn't indicate the girl's city of residence.

If convicted, Conger faces between five and 99 years in prison for the first-degree felony.

Midlander charged for indecency with a child

A 62-year-old Midland man was arrested Tuesday for reportedly kissing a juvenile female victim all over her body, according to court documents.

Everett Arthur Riley was being held on $100,000 bond Thursday for the second-degree felony of indecency with a child.

Riley

The alleged victim's father called the police on Sept. 16 to report that his wife went on an unspecified date to get the girl, who was visiting Riley's trailer to watch cartoons, when she witnessed Riley on top of the alleged victim, according to the affidavit.

Riley jumped up and claimed he was "just tickling" the juvenile. When the wife and girl returned home, the alleged victim said Riley was on her and kissing her neck, chest and below her stomach, according to the affidavit.

Following her father's report to police, the juvenile was interviewed by a forensic interviewer when she repeated he kissed her on those same places on her body, court documents state.

If convicted of the second-degree felony, Riley faces up to 20 years in prison.

MPD: Man fired shotgun outside SE Midland bar

A 30-year-old Montgomery man was taken to Midland County Jail after allegedly firing a shotgun while drunk in the parking lot of a bar late Saturday night, according to court documents.

William Ryan Kight was being held Thursday on a $50,000 bond for the third-degree felony charge of deadly conduct discharge of a firearm.

Kight

Midland Police Department officers were dispatched at 11:48 p.m. Saturday to Club Remy, 200 N. Lee St., in reference to a shots fired call, where a white male subject in a white truck was shooting a gun in the parking lot, according to the affidavit.

Officers observed the male, later identified as Kight, standing near a white pickup with the driver's side door open and other people standing near by. The officers detained Kight and then noticed there were two shotgun shells on the ground near where he had been standing, the affidavit stated.

Kight appeared intoxicated and said an unknown person stole the shotgun from his truck and he was offering bystanders $100 to get it back for him, the police officer wrote. Kight denied shooting the gun, but officers determined the shotgun shells were freshly discharged and that it was likely Kight who did it, according to the affidavit.

Police arrested Kight because the firearm was discharged at or in the direction of one or more people, a building, habitation or vehicle, court documents state.

If convicted of the third-degree felony, Kight faces up to 10 years in prison.

MPD: Man robbed driver who gave him ride

A 25-year-old Midland man was arrested Wednesday morning for allegedly punching then stealing the wallet of another man who gave him a ride, according to court documents.

Quincy Lamar Henry was being held Thursday on $100,000 bond for the second-degree felony of robbery.

Henry

Police responded to an accident on South Jackson Street where a driver wrecked into a fence after a passenger he'd agreed to give a ride to robbed him.

Officers were transporting the alleged victim when he spotted the man who robbed him, later identified as Henry, according to the affidavit. Both men were taken to the Midland Police Department to be interviewed.

The alleged victim told police that sometime after midnight, he was sitting in his car, listening to music, when Henry approached him for a ride. The man initially refused, but Henry was persistent so he agreed. After "driving continuously" without getting to Henry's home, the driver pulled the vehicle over and refused to go anywhere else, according to the affidavit.

Henry then struck the driver on the head twice, causing his head to hit the window and subsequently black out momentarily. Henry then grabbed than man's wallet, which contained $80, and left, court documents state. Because the driver did not put the car in park when he pulled over, he lost control of the vehicle when he was struck, according to the affidavit.

The alleged victim identified Henry from a photo lineup at the station, but Henry denied robbing the man. Henry told police instead that two black males and one Hispanic man robbed them both at gunpoint. A fresh marking on Henry's right knuckles also appeared consistent with the alleged victim's injuries, according to the affidavit.

If convicted of the second-degree felony, Henry faces up to 20 years in prison.

How sick are you?

Midland Memorial Hospital has partnered with Medical Center Hospital in Odessa for the telephone nurse triage program "88-NURSE" to bring the service to the entire Permian Basin.

The program is designed to help people determine whether their health situation warrants a trip to the emergency room. Midland residents can call the line by dialing 686-8773.

The program is free and available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Local nurses are available to help you determine the best place to receive care for your situation. 88-NURSE can help you save time and money by directing you to the most appropriate healthcare option, whether it's a neighborhood clinic, urgent care center, emergency room or just at home.

Takeaways: Taste of the Permian Basin

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Taste of the Permian Basin came and went again this year, offering new and longtime Midlanders the opportunity to sample the best of what local and national restaurants and eateries have to offer in the area.

The event on Thursday took place at the Commemorative Air Force, which was filled to capacity with attendees and vendors in an exchange resembling food nirvana. For $35, one can go from stall to stall and load up their plate with brisket, burgers, sushi, tacos, arepas and desserts.

The experience is overwhelming if you're going for the first time, so here are some takeaways and advice from a Taste of the Permian Basin newbie:

■ Even though you are given sample-sized portions, you will get full easily. Eat lightly all day and come into the event very hungry, as you will be filling up multiple plates.

■ The locals stole the show. From Junior Urias' Up in Smoke BBQ brisket to Mayor Jerry Morales' Gerardo's Casita shredded beef tacos, the locals had the best food in their respective genres. I have to mention Cafe Unique's arepas, which were, well, unique to West Texas.

■ The place gets incredibly packed the moment the doors open at 6:30 p.m. The lines get long immediately, so dart straight for the vendor you know you want to try first. Then go into the next line and savor the first bite of the night. Rinse and repeat until the lines get shorter.

■ Once the lines are manageable, fill up your plate with an assortment of different foods. It's quite alright to mix and match sushi with brisket, this is a sampler-type deal, not a formal dinner with a salad course.

■ The seating for the general admission hours was pretty scarce. The organizers set up standing tables, which weren't completely full all the time. Fill your plate and get to one of the standing tables and munch.

■ Going back to the idea of the locals owning the show, Odessa College Culinary Arts had the best desserts of the show. They had cakes pierced with plastic droppers filled with some sort of liquid. The idea was to push down on the dropper as you ate the tiny cake bite.

■ There were definitely some odd choices at the event. I won't list specific companies because I acknowledge that the event is an opportunity for them to advertise themselves. But really, who pays $35 for a food event to eat fast food?

■ Event organizers plan to add a food trailer court outside the CAF hangar for next year's event. Seeing as how food trucks and trailers are popular nationwide, and the hanger is reaching critical mass, it's a smart decision on the organizers' part.

■ When the event draws to a close, go back to your favorite vendor and chat it up. Ask about the catering jobs they offer, the restaurant's location, or just be upfront and say you want seconds.

OUTREACH

Thursday that in three more election cycles, Hispanics will be the majority in the state. Highly conservative areas such as Midland and Ector counties will still be red at that time, but the major metropolitan areas are where the Hispanic vote will need to be courted, he said.

Villalba identified better articulation as one of three ways for the state GOP to capture the Hispanic vote. He told a story about how he asked women out on dates in college by "talking sweet."

"You win them with honey, not with vinegar," Villalba said.

The second way to win over Hispanics is to shift the party's issues on policy. On immigration, Villalba called for establishing a guest worker program that provides a path to legal citizenship status.

And the third way Villalba listed is telling Hispanics that they are already Republicans because both groups share the same values, such as the sanctity of life, opportunity, freedom, liberty and family.

Midland County Republican Chairman James Beauchamp said that in order to engage voting groups, whether it's women or Hispanics, the elected members have to be representative of those groups.

"I think (Villalba) is inspiring to a lot of people because here is someone who is a Latino, a Hispanic, in a non-minority district," Beauchamp said. "This is an example of showing there is room in our party for everyone. Everybody should have a voice, participate and be part of the process."

CARTELS

policies, opening the way for Pemex to seek foreign investors and expertise to help it exploit its shale fields. It hopes to draw $10 billion to $15 billion in private investment each year.

The attractiveness of the venture may hinge on bringing Tamaulipas under control.

"The energy reform won't be viable if we aren't successful ... in solving the problem of crime and impunity," said Sen. David Penchyna, who heads the Senate Energy Commission. "The biggest challenge we Mexicans have, and I say it without shame, is Tamaulipas."

One foreign oil company that had a brush with violence appears undeterred.

In early April, gunmen opened fire at a hotel in Ciudad Mier, in Tamaulipas' rough Rio Grande Valley, where eight employees of Weatherford International Ltd., a Swiss-based oil services company, were staying.

They were not injured, and Weatherford said in an email message that "Mexico continues to be a focused market for us with growing potential in 2014 and 2015."

But other potential bidders may be put off by such incidents.

Energy analyst David Goldwyn said the Mexico government is going to have to be a lot clearer about its security plan for most shale exploration and production companies, which don't have experience working in risky areas.

"What's the government going to do, what kind of protection, what is it going to allow the operators to do inside their fence line?" he said in a recent conference call with reporters.

Two rival gangs, the Zetas and the Gulf cartel, long have used Tamaulipas as a route to ferry drugs and migrants to the United States and, in recent years, diversified their business: stealing gas and crude and selling it to refineries in Texas or to gas stations on either side of the border.

At least twice a day, the gangs pull up to one of the hundreds of pipelines that crisscross the state. Workers quickly shovel down a couple of yards (meters) to uncover a pipeline and siphon their booty into a stolen tanker truck, said army Col. Juan Carlos Guzman, whose troops have raided a number of such illegal taps.

A dirt farm road led down to one site outside Ciudad Victoria, 180 miles southwest of McAllen, Texas. About a half-mile from a nearby highway, thieves had dug out a pit and inserted a large needle-like device into the pipeline. By the time soldiers arrived, the gang members had fled, and only the driver of the half-loaded gasoline truck was arrested.

The knowledge needed to tap into the pressurized pipelines leads authorities to suspect the gangs have infiltrated Pemex or co-opted company workers.

"It is impossible to do this without information on the timing and level of flows," said Marco Antonio Bernal, a federal congressman from Tamaulipas who is drafting legislation to toughen punishment for pipeline thefts.

The suspicions were reinforced earlier this month when detectives nabbed a Gulf cartel leader who was found carrying a fake Pemex employee credential, complete with his photo and a false name.

Pemex is installing more automated pipeline shut-off valves operated remotely from a control room in Mexico City. Such controls allow them to not only stop spills often caused by illegal taps but to avoid having to send workers out to unpopulated, dangerous areas to turn off valves manually.

With thousands of miles of pipeline stretching over far-flung regions of Tamaulipas, stopping oil theft is proving hard to do. Mexico has taken steps to rein in the cartels, putting military leaders in charge of the state's security and sending in soldiers, marines and federal police to patrol key cities.

Arrests and violence have taken out so many key Zetas leaders that the cartel's members have taken to camping out in the bush, dragooning Central American migrants into their ranks. They live off the land and change campsites constantly to avoid detection.

"They don't have structures. They sleep under the trees, near rivers to get water," said Gen. Mario Lopez Miguez, who commands nearly 600 soldiers at a base in the once cartel-dominated town of Ciudad Mier.

The Gulf cartel, for its part, remains in control of Tamaulipas' largest city, Reynosa, which sits across from McAllen, although the military has increased its patrols, making some residents feel safer.

"The situation has gotten a lot better," said Nora Gonzalez, who runs a secondhand furniture shop near downtown Reynosa.

Still, just a few blocks away, Reynosa remains dangerous.

TRANS-PECOS

"Bring snacks, fill up on gas and make dinner reservations now," she exclaimed.

Yes, exclaimed. Snacks and gas were checked off the list, but I'm still hoping to get into Cochineal and/or Maiya's, the two restaurants Phelps highly recommended.

Trunk show

Festival organizer Isadora McKeon gave tips that were both practical and surreal. On the former side, she recommended swim trunks for two reasons: Hippie Soup and Balmorhea.

People gather in the wood-fired hot tubs at the end of the each night, which has been dubbed Hippie Soup. Soup + people = I may personally pass on that one.

But McKeon highly suggested breaking away to hit up Balmorhea.

"There is an incredible swimming spot and it's only 45 minutes away. So bring those trunks," she said.

Done.

Nailed it

A friend explained The Stump game, which clearly sounded like I had to be there to appreciate it. If I understand it correctly, people take turns with hammers driving nails into a stump and the winner is the person whose nail isn't completely hammered in. Rumor has it that the "game" runs until early morning. Great.

Play Ball

I had no idea there was a baseball game amid the festivities. McKeon explained the Saturday event.

"It's this completely manufactured rivalry between Austin and Marfa, but we're all friends," she told me.

I nodded with a certain familiarity. "Just like Midland and Odessa," I thought.

Mind blown

With clear skies, gorgeous weather, Marfa is truly an enchanting spot. The music doesn't blare, it fits into the scenery and people seem to vibe with each other easily. McKeon advised newbies to take it all in but be careful of one thing.

"Be careful of the altitude, especially to those who are drinking because that can affect you faster," she said. "And also, look up. Take pause and realize that you're at a festival in a magical part of the world. We're super proud of this place and it's so rare to be around an intimate environment where everyone gets along."

Rifle used in deadly 1966 rampage for sale

By Emily Schmall
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A rifle used in the 1966 sniper rampage at the University of Texas that left 16 people dead and dozens more wounded is being sold in an online auction.

Bids are starting at $25,000 for a rifle Charles Whitman used to shoot from the top of a clock tower on the campus in Austin.

Donald Weiss of Dallas told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday that he's helping the owner of the Remington 700 sell the weapon, which has changed ownership several times over the decades. Bids are being accepted on the website of Texas Gun Trader.

The rifle was listed in a probate court inventory in Travis County, according to a copy of the 1967 document shared with AP. The executor of Whitman's estate sold the weapon and six others recovered from Whitman's arsenal at the tower to a Wichita Falls gun dealer, according to Weiss.

Audit: Problems in Perry's deal-closing fund

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

AUSTIN — A pet program of Republican Texas Gov. Rick Perry that has given a half-billion dollars in taxpayer funds to companies including Toyota and Facebook failed to support claims about job creation and competition from other states, according to a state audit released Thursday.

The critical report, which also found that some companies never submitted applications before receiving money, is the latest bad news for the possible 2016 presidential candidate's economic development funds. Perry credits them with helping fuel a booming Texas economy — and his office defended them again Thursday — but the programs have become increasingly unpopular among conservatives.

According to the audit, about a third of all the money handed out since Perry launched the Texas Enterprise Fund in 2004 went to companies that never submitted applications.

Prices at the pump head below $3 in much of US

By Jonathan Fahey
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The price of a gallon of gasoline may soon start with a "2" across much the country.

Gasoline prices typically decline in autumn, and this year they are being pulled even lower by falling global oil prices. By the end of the year, up to 30 states could have an average gasoline price of less than $3 a gallon.

The average in Springfield, Missouri, is already below $3, according to Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service and GasBuddy.com. Several other cities are on the brink.

"And there will be more, many more," Kloza said. Cities in high-priced states such as California and New York will not be among them, though, which will probably keep the national average above $3.

At the current national average of $3.35 a gallon, gas is a dime cheaper than a year ago at this time. The gap is 20 cents or more in seven states, including California, Kansas, South Dakota and Connecticut, according to AAA.

Lower fuel prices help the economy in a few ways. They make goods cheaper to ship and make travel more affordable. Drivers are left with a few extra dollars in their pockets. And consumers grow confident enough to make other purchases, perhaps even a big-ticket item. Consumer spending is 70 percent of the U.S. economy.

Aidan Obrecht, a 20-year-old community college student from Boothwyn, Pennsylvania, said gas in his area has fallen 10 to 20 cents over the past couple of weeks. He paid $3.27 a gallon Thursday to fill up his Ford Taurus on his way to work at a CVS pharmacy.

"I'm living paycheck to paycheck, so it's nice to be able to save" he said. "Even if it's $5 or $10 extra (after a fill-up), it adds up over the long run."

Fall is when refiners are allowed to switch to a cheaper blend of gasoline for the cooler months, and driving demand declines after summer vacations have ended.

Refinery problems or hurricanes can halt the typical autumn price decline temporarily by reducing gasoline production. For example, a reported outage at a refinery in Eastern Canada that supplies the Northeast with gasoline is likely to push the price at the pump slightly higher in some markets over the next few days.

But by late October prices are usually well on their way lower.

Last year, the national average fell 28 cents per gallon between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31. This year, gasoline had a head start. It entered September at its lowest level for the beginning of the month in four years — and the price of crude oil was rapidly heading lower.

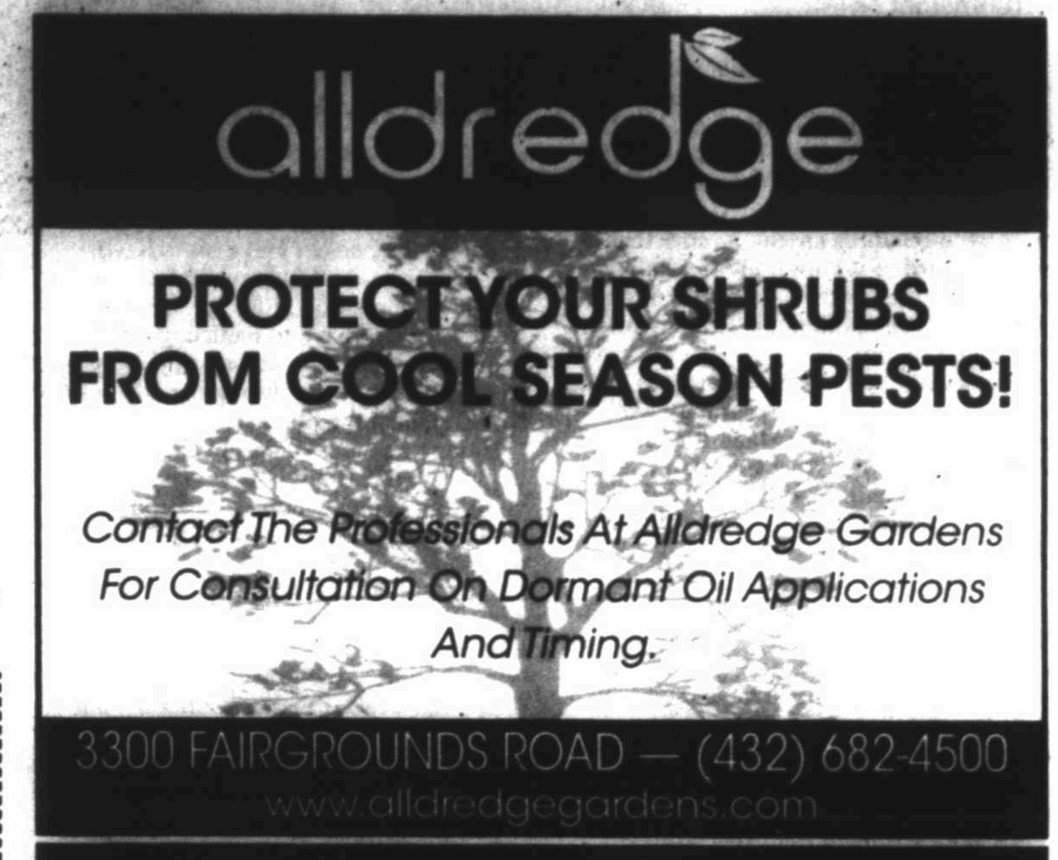
Apple's response to iPhone glitches is key

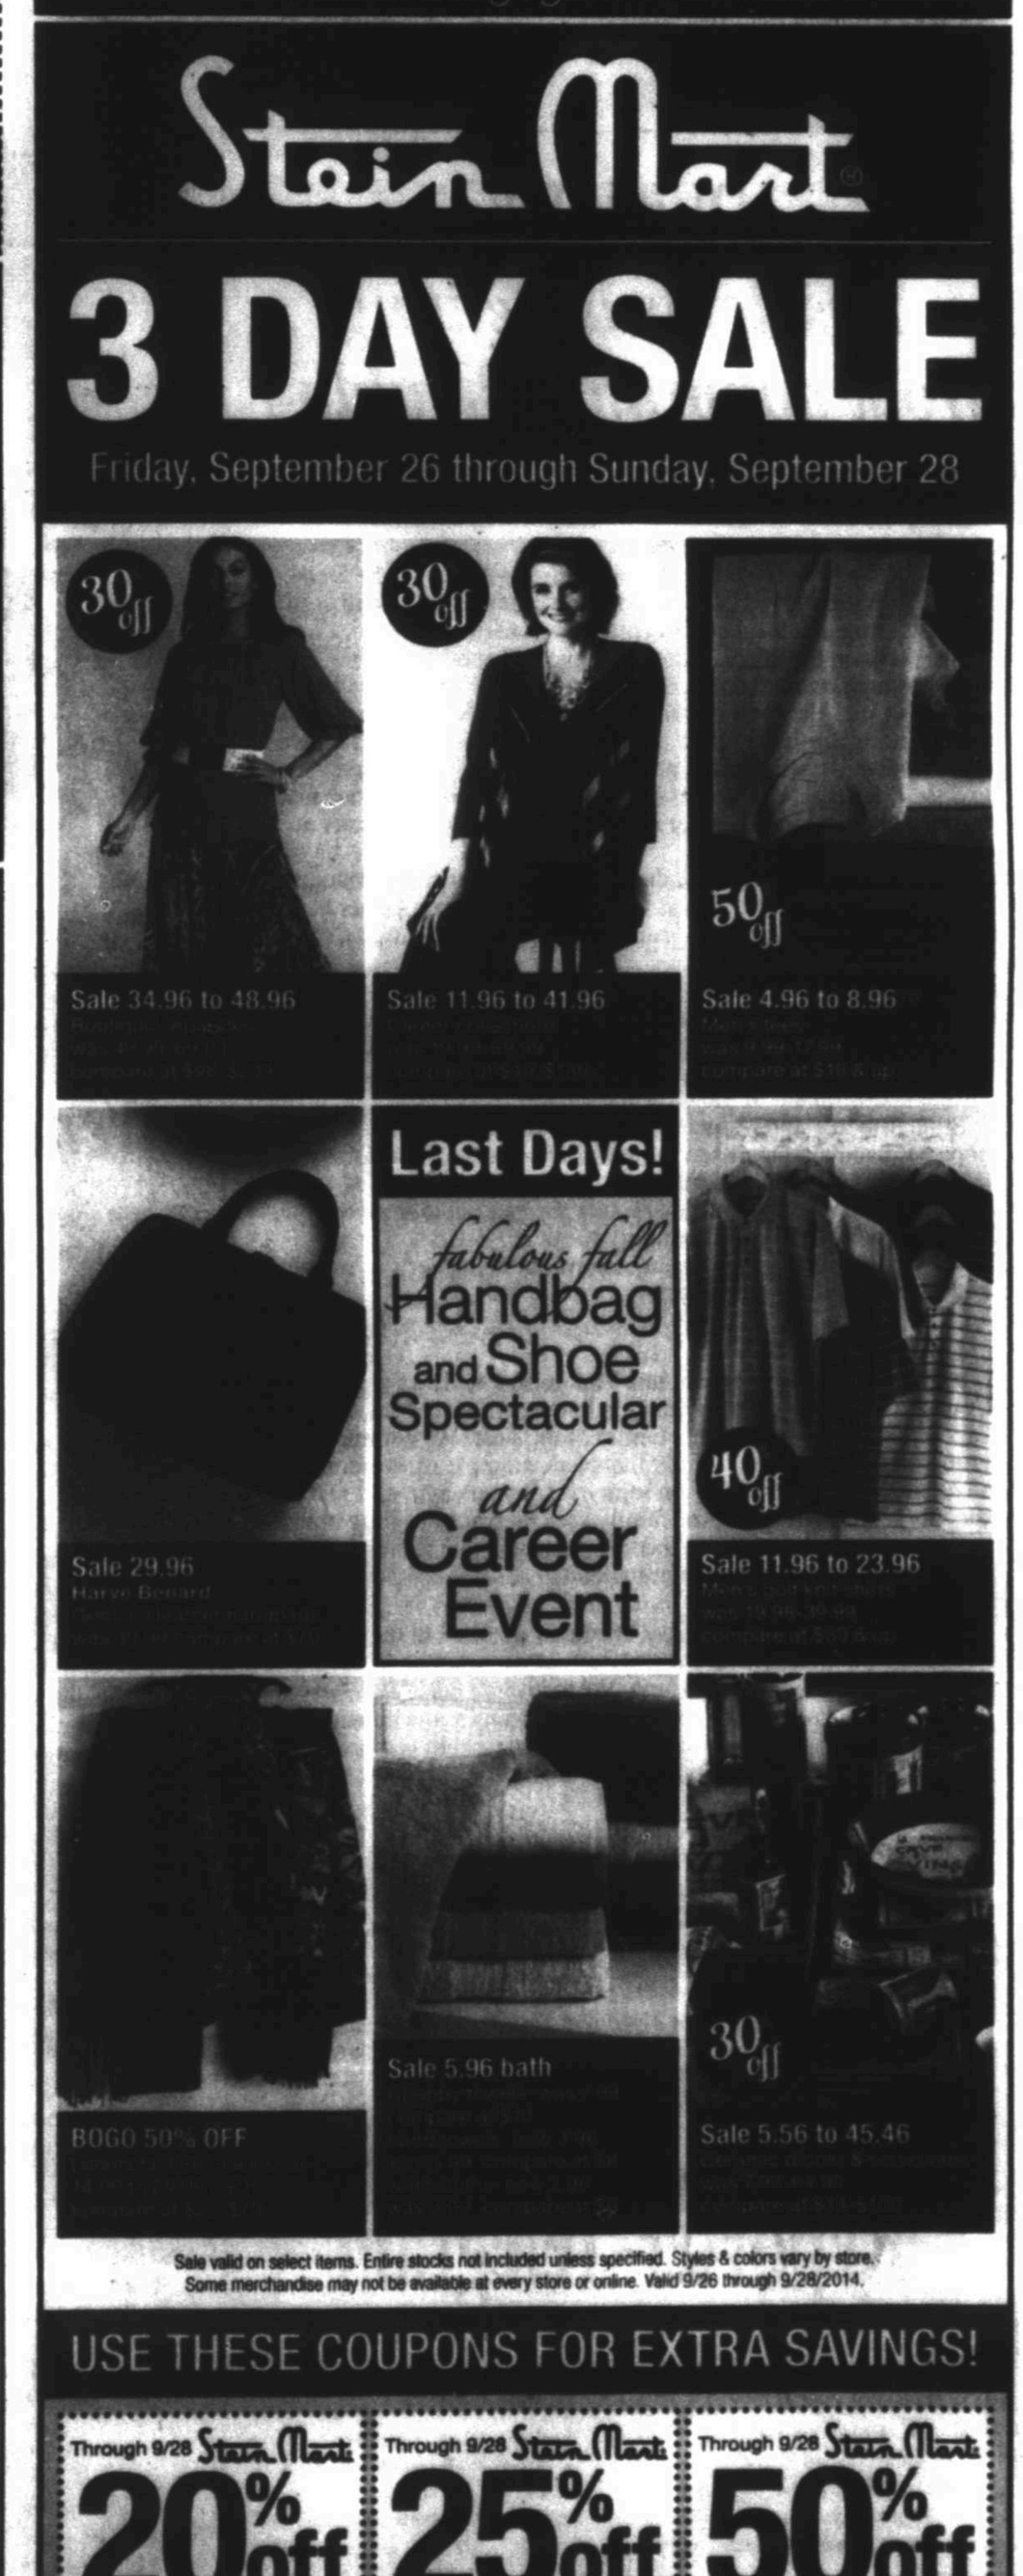
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple's response to a high-profile gaffe involving its iPhone software may be more important than the glitch itself.

As the giant tech company scrambled to fix a software glitch that left some of its new iPhones unable to make calls, some analysts said Thursday that Apple is doing the right thing by quickly acknowledging and apologizing for the problem — which it was slower to do with earlier iPhone problems.

"There's a certain perception that Apple has to get things right, and when they don't, the whole company gets questioned," said Carolina Milanesi, chief of research at Kantar Worldpanel. "But they came out and said 'We apologize; we're working 24/7 to fix it.' I think that's what matters."





Our real Syria strategy is containment-plus

■ It's the best we can do under the circumstances

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

Late, hesitant and reluctant as he is, President Obama has begun effecting a workable strategy against the Islamic State. True, he's been driven there by public opinion. Does anyone imagine that without the broadcast beheadings we'd be doing anything more than pinprick strikes within Iraq? If Obama can remain steady through future fluctuations in public opinion, his strategy might succeed.

But success will not be what he's articulating publicly. The strategy will not destroy the Islamic State. It's more containment-plus: Expel the Islamic State from Iraq, contain it in Syria. Because you can't win from the air. In Iraq, we have potential ground allies. In Syria, we don't.

The order of battle in Iraq is straightforward. The Kurds will fight, but not far beyond their own territory. A vigorous air campaign could help them recover territory lost to the Islamic State and perhaps a bit beyond. But they won't be anyone's expeditionary force.

From the Shiites in Iraq we should expect little. U.S. advisers embedded with a few highly trained Iraqi special forces could make some progress. But we cannot count on the corrupt and demoralized regular Shiite-dominated military.

Our key potential allies are the Sunni tribes. We will have to induce them to change allegiances a second time, joining us again, as they did during the 2007-2008 surge, against the jihadists.

Having abandoned them in 2011, this won't be easy. But it is necessary. One good sign is the creation of a Sunni national guard, a descendant of the Sons of Iraq who, fighting with us, expelled al-Qaida in Iraq (AQI) during the Anbar Awakening. Only they could push the Islamic State out of Iraq. And surely only they could hold the territory regained.

Syria is another matter. Under the current strategy, the cancer will remain. The air power there is unsupported by ground troops. Nor is anyone in Obama's "broad coalition" going to contribute any.

Perhaps Turkey will one day. But Islamist President Recep Tayyip Erdogan is not just refusing to join the air campaign. He has denied us use of his air bases.

As for what's left of the Free Syrian Army, Obama has finally come around to training and arming it. But very late and very little. The administration admits it won't be able to field any trained forces for a year. And even then only about 5,000. The Islamic State is already approximately 30,000 strong and growing.

Not that air power is useless. It can degrade and disrupt. If applied systematically enough it can damage the entrenched, expanding, secure and self-financing Islamic State, turning it back to more of a fugitive guerrilla force constantly on the run.

What kind of strategy is that? A compressed and more aggressive form of the George Kennan strategy of Soviet containment. Stop them, squeeze them and ultimately they will be defeated by their own contradictions. As historian David Motadel points out, jihadist regimes stretching back two centuries have been undone by their own primitivism, barbarism, brutality — and the intense hostility thus engendered among those they rule.

That's what just eight years ago created the Anbar Awakening that expelled AQI. Mahdi rule in Sudan in the 1880s and '90s was no more successful. As Motadel notes, half the population died of disease, starvation or violence — and that was before the British annihilation of the Mahdi forces at Omdurman.

Or to put it in a contemporary Middle East context, this kind of long-term combination of rollback and containment is what has carried the Israelis successfully through seven decades of terrorism arising at different times from different places proclaiming different ideologies. There is no one final stroke that ends it all. The Israelis engage, enjoy a respite, then re-engage.

With a bitter irony born of ceaseless attacks, the Israelis call it "mowing the lawn." They know a finality may come, but alas not in their time. They accept it and go on living.

Obama was right and candid to say this war he's renewed will take years. This struggle is generational. This is not Sudan 1898. There is no Omdurman that defeats jihadism for much of a century.

Today jihadism is global, its religious and financial institutions ubiquitous and its roots deeply sunk in a world religion of more than 1 billion people. We are on a path — long, difficult, sober, undoubtedly painful — of long-term, low intensity rollback/containment.

Containment-plus. It's the best of our available strategies. Obama must now demonstrate the steel to carry it through.

OUR VIEW

Residents benefiting from nonprofits shouldn't require political affiliation

When Wendy Davis visited Odessa last month, the Democratic Party's candidate for governor made a campaign stop at a local crisis center for women.

She went on the attack, railing against her opponent. She received high praise from the center's director, forcing our newspaper to ask why the center would get involved with a gubernatorial candidate right in the middle of the race. At the time, we said we hope Midland's nonpartisan nonprofits don't put their respective facilities front and center in a political race like this, because the residents seeking their services don't do so as Democrats or Republicans.

The Odessa Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's annual banquet and installation of officers was Wednesday. Attorney General Greg Abbott, the Republican running for governor, was the guest speaker.

According to our reporter at the event, Abbott's appearance did provide a contrast with Davis' event. Abbott didn't bring up his opponent during his 17-minute speech that was filled with talking points we've heard before, and the Hispanic Chamber didn't offer a virtual endorsement of the GOP candidate.

Still, Abbott's appearance at the event fits into the gray area we hope Midland's nonpartisan organizations don't follow. During campaign season, if a high-profile candidate appears at your banquet or function, please make sure the candidate from the other major party has had an opportunity to speak.

We would prefer to see organizations not being seen as siding with one candidate or one party.

We commend the group on its choice — a family that is an example of overcoming adversity. Mai suffered a brain injury 3 1/2 years ago, and just as she works through rehab, the family sees its place as being able to not only survive but thrive. And they see their role as helping others who go through a similar situation.

■ For the editor. On Tuesday, we had a story about the renewal of the contract to manage the Horseshoe, and the headline didn't really portray what the article was about. While county commissioners are deciding on the path going forward as it pertains to the manager's contract, there is no reason to believe that the current manager will be replaced. The headline indicated that was a possibility.

Wendy Davis' reaction not 'meltdown'

■ Not everything heard after the gubernatorial debate was necessarily as it seems

KEN HERMAN
Cox Newspapers

Join me for a few political observations. Ridicule is appropriate for anyone using any form of "meltdown" to describe anything Democrat Wendy Davis did during the Friday night gubernatorial debate. The pejorative word flew when she tried to make a point after Republican Greg Abbott responded to a question from her.

Debate panelist Ryan Wolf, a South Texas TV guy, cut Davis off, telling her the rules barred what she was doing. Davis kept speaking while Wolf interrupted. Turns out Wolf was wrong. The rules allowed Davis a 45-second rebuttal, a fact debate organizers acknowledged after the event.

And even if the rules weren't on Davis' side, what she did was many, many degrees short of anything remotely approaching a meltdown. It was a candidate trying to make a point. We're OK with that.

But that didn't stop Abbott's team and supporters from calling it a meltdown. "Watch Sen. Davis Melt Down During Debate," said an Abbott campaign promo of video of the moment. An Abbott campaign release invited folks to "click here to watch Sen. Davis meltdown during the debate."

The Abbott Response Team's Twitter account also told folks to watch the "debate meltdown." Abbott adviser Dave Carney tweeted: "The meltdown in McAllen goes viral." Not only was there no meltdown, there was no debate in McAllen. It was in Edinburg.

What Davis did, in addition to being within the rules, was well within the bounds of reasonable discourse. It was nowhere near a meltdown, which, to me, implies totally losing it. Watch it and see if anybody melted down.

The meltdown allegation is unconscionable, uncalled for, unnecessary, unfair and unhelpful toward the goal of more civilized politics. I'm guessing you'll never hear "meltdown" from Abbott's mouth. He should tell his minions to likewise eschew it.

A day after the debate, at the Texas Tribune Festival, Davis was asked about what it would be like to be a Democratic governor working with a GOP-controlled Legislature, as it's sure to be next year. Davis went with the I-can-work-across-party-lines mantra, something that always leaves me uncertain because there are some issues that legitimately defy bipartisanship.

Davis said she'd veto GOP-backed legislation to repeal in-state tuition for state university students who are not legal U.S. residents and legislation banning so-called sanctuary cities.

But, after discussing the possibility of using executive action to approve the Medicaid expansion opposed by most Republicans, Davis acknowledged that while she could veto legislation she opposes, she'd have no way to win approval of legislation GOP lawmakers oppose.

That means, for example, she could block additional abortion restrictions — though she could also face the possibility of veto override, a Texas rarity — but do nothing about rolling back existing restrictions that survive court challenge.

"Elections matter," she said.

Which leads me to the excellent article by the Austin American-Statesman's Asher Price and Christian McDonald slicing and dicing Gov. Rick Perry's 8,000 appointees to state posts. The story noted the appointees are far whiter than the state's diverse population.

Keep this in mind about the real world: The universe of potential appointees for any governor is not the entire population. To a huge extent, it's limited to adults of his or her party. Fact is, that's what folks who elect governors expect those governors to do.

Another fact is that, for whatever reason, a large majority of minorities choose not to be Republicans. Nothing wrong with that, but it helps explain why they're underrepresented when GOP governors make appointments.

That gets us back to Davis: "Elections matter."

Please keep that in mind. The last day to register is Oct. 6, early voting is Oct. 20-31, Election Day is Nov. 4.

Holder resigning: Attorney general backed rights

By Nedra Pickler
Associated Press

Associated Press

President Barack Obama, right, and the audience applaud as Attorney General Eric Holder wipes his eye in the State Dining Room of the White House in Washington on Thursday, where the president announced that Holder is resigning. Holder, who served as the public face of the Obama administration's legal fight against terrorism and weighed in on issues of racial fairness, is resigning after six years on the job. He is the first black U.S. attorney general.

WASHINGTON — Eric Holder, America's first black attorney general and an unflinching champion of civil rights in enforcing the nation's laws, announced his resignation Thursday after leading the Justice Department since the first days of President Barack Obama's term. He is the fourth-longest-serving attorney general in U.S. history.

Holder, the administration's point man on the civil rights investigation into the police shooting of an unarmed 18-year-old in Ferguson, Missouri, won't leave until a replacement is confirmed, which means he could remain in office for months.

Senate Republicans signaled they were preparing for a confirmation fight after years of battles with Holder. Said Senate GOP leader Mitch McConnell: "I will be scrutinizing the president's replacement nominee to ensure the Justice Department finally returns to prioritizing law enforcement over partisan concerns."

In an emotional ceremony at the White House, Obama called Holder "the people's lawyer" and credited him with driving down both the nation's crime and incarceration rate — the first time they have declined together in more than 40 years.

"Through it all, he's shown a deep and abiding fidelity to one of our most cherished ideals as a people, and that is equal justice under the law," Obama said.

Holder responded by speaking of how he was inspired as a boy by Robert Kennedy's leadership on civil rights at the Justice Department, his voice choking as he expressed his thanks to Obama and his own family. "You got through it," Obama could be heard telling Holder as the audience stood and applauded.

In a speech earlier this week, Holder described the dual perspective he brought to the job and how it applied to the Ferguson shooting, in which a young black man was shot and killed by a white policeman. He said he had the utmost respect for police as a former prosecutor and the brother of an officer. But, he added, "As an African-American man who has been stopped and searched by police in situations where such actions were not warranted, I also carry with me an understanding of the mistrust that some citizens harbor."

Holder told The Associated Press in an interview that he's not sure whether the Justice Department will finish its investigation into the shooting before he leaves. "I don't want to rush them," Holder said. He said once out of office, he will direct attention to "issues that have animated me" during his tenure, including criminal justice and civil rights.

"If you asked me what my biggest regret was, I would say that it was the failure to pass any responsible and reasonable gun safety legislation after the shootings in Newtown," Holder said. He said he thought in the aftermath of the school shootings in Connecticut that the nation would embrace change that was "not radical but really reasonable" on gun ownership.

Holder aggressively enforced the Voting Rights Act, addressed drug-sentencing guidelines that led to disparities between white and black convicts, extended legal benefits to same-sex couples and refused to defend a law that allowed states to disregard gay marriages. He oversaw the decision to prosecute terror suspects in U.S. civilian courts instead of at Guantanamo Bay and helped establish a legal rationale for lethal drone strikes on suspects overseas.

He was a lightning rod for conservative critics and faced a succession of controversies over, among other things, an ultimately abandoned plan to try terrorism suspects in New York City, a botched gun-running probe along the Southwest border that prompted Republican calls for his resignation, and what was seen as a failure to hold banks accountable for the financial system's near-meltdown.

The Republican-controlled House voted two years ago to make Holder the first sitting Cabinet member to be held in contempt of Congress — for refusing to turn over documents in the gun-running operation known as Operation Fast and Furious. The administration is still fighting in court to keep the documents confidential.

Islamic State kills Iraqi woman activist

By Vivian Salama
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Militants with the Islamic State group tortured and then publicly killed a human rights lawyer in the Iraqi city of Mosul after their self-proclaimed religious court ruled that she had abandoned Islam, the U.N. mission in Iraq said Thursday.

Gunmen with the group's newly declared police force seized Samira Salih al-Nuaimi last week in a northeastern district of the Mosul while she was home with her husband and three children, two people with direct knowledge of the incident told The Associated Press on Thursday. Al-Nuaimi was taken to a secret location. After about five days, the family was called, by the morgue to retrieve her corpse, which bore signs of torture, the two people said, speaking on condition of anonymity because of fears for their safety.

According to the United Nations Assistance Mission in Iraq, her arrest was allegedly connected to Facebook messages she posted that were critical of the militants' destruction of religious sites in Mosul. A statement by the U.N. on Thursday added that al-Nuaimi was tried in a so-called "Sharia court" for apostasy, after which she was tortured for five days before the militants sentenced her to "public execution." Her Facebook page appears to have been removed since her death.

"By torturing and executing a female human rights' lawyer and activist, defending in particular the civil and human rights of her fellow citizens in Mosul, ISIL continues to attest to its infamous nature, combining hatred, nihilism and savagery, as well as its total disregard of human decency," Nickolay Mladenov the U.N. envoy to Iraq, said in a statement, referring to the group by an acronym. The statement did not say how she was killed.

Among Muslim hardliners, apostasy is thought to be not just conversion from Islam to another faith, but also committing actions that they believe are so against the faith that one is considered to have abandoned Islam.

Mosul is the largest city held by the Islamic State group in the self-declared "caliphate" it has carved out, bridging northern and eastern Syria with northern Iraq. Since overrunning the once-diverse city in June, the group has forced religious minorities to convert to Islam, pay special taxes or die, causing tens of thousands to flee. The militants have also enforced a strict dress code on women.

In August, the group destroyed a number of historic landmarks in the town, including several mosques and shrines, claiming they promote idolatry and depart from principles of Islam.

Al-Nuaimi's death is the latest in a string of attacks by the militant group to silence female activists and politicians. In July in the nearby town of Sderat, militants broke into the house of a female candidate in the last provincial council elections, killed her and abducted her husband, the U.N. said. On the same day, another female politician was abducted from her home in eastern Mosul; she remains missing.

US-Russian space crew lifts off for station

Associated Press

BAIKONUR, Kazakhstan — A U.S.-Russian space crew has blasted off successfully for the International Space Station.

The Russian Soyuz-TMA14M spacecraft lifted off as scheduled at 2:25 a.m. today from the Russian-leased Baikonur launch facility in Kazakhstan. It's carrying NASA astronaut Barry Wilmore along with Russians Alexander Samokutyaev and Elena Serova for a six-month stint at the station.

The Soyuz entered a designated orbit in about 10 minutes after the launch. It is set to dock at the orbiting outpost in about six hours after the launch, joining an international crew of three currently manning the station.

Serova is making her first space mission, while Wilmore and Samokutyaev have already flown to space.

Serova is the first Russian woman to fly to space since 1997, and the fourth woman in the history of the Soviet and Russian space programs. Valentina Tereshkova became the first woman in space in 1963.

Byrom excited to take reins as KMB director

By Steve Kuhlmann
skuhlmann@mrt.com

It was only a matter of time before Amanda Byrom joined Keep Midland Beautiful on a full-time basis. The former volunteer and board member was recently appointed as the organization's executive director, and she couldn't be happier.

"I'm just really excited to be here," Byrom said. "I tell everybody that I'm really lucky that I get to work from my passion and get paid for it. I really do consider myself very fortunate that I get to extend a mission that I'm actually passionately behind."

While she said that she claims to be from Midland, Byrom moved here from Lubbock in her junior year of high school and returned again when she finished college. She didn't immediately find herself working in the environmental field, but she knew it was what she wanted.

While working in the marketing department of Midland Memorial Hospital, Byrom first came in contact with Keep Midland Beautiful.

"I found Keep Midland Beautiful through the hospital where they had participated in the twice-a-year cleanups," Byrom said. "It was through that that I first got involved with Keep Midland Beautiful and became a regular volunteer."

Eventually, Byrom even served on the organization's board, further investing herself in the nonprofit's mission and building her relationships with those within it.

"I've had a history with the organization," Byrom said. "Whenever this opportunity

Pets get chance to run with their owners in upcoming 5K

By Steve Kuhlmann
skuhlmann@mrt.com

Midland's Lone Star Sanctuary for Animals is hosting its second Runnin' Fur Rescues 5K event, once again giving dog owners an opportunity to bring their pets along for company during the run.

"Last year was a tremendous turnout, so it seems like people want to do something where they can bring their animal," said Beth Armstrong, manager of the animal shelter. "There wasn't a single dog fight or dog problem; it was very smooth."

Armstrong said that the inaugural race drew in nearly 400 runners and 200 dogs. While she was advised to prepare for double the turnout — and despite already doubling pre-registration for the run — Armstrong said that she is preparing for around 500 participants.

"Midland is not exactly the most animal-friendly city, and there are not a lot of places or events where you can take your dog," Armstrong said. "We just wanted to do something where their animals could be involved, and this just seemed like the best idea."

Hoping to raise $40,000 to $50,000 during the event, Armstrong said that all of the money will go toward the general upkeep and operations of Lone Star Sanctuary, such as medical bills for the animals and, because of recent flooding, repairs to the building.

Registration is $30 per person.

"With that they get their T-shirt and then they also get a goody-bag — some for cats and some for dogs — that have toys and little bags of treats and handmade bandanas for the dogs," Armstrong said.

The event will also include more than just the 5K. Armstrong said there also will be live music, a raffle — with the chance to win a Giant Talon 4 Mountain bike in addition to other prizes — and the opportunity for $5 dog pedicures and $15 pet micro-chipping.

Please see RUN/4B

Want to take part?

Runnin' Fur Rescues 5K, for the benefit of Lone Star Sanctuary for Animals, will begin 9 a.m. Saturday at the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College.

Registration is $30. To register in advance, go to the "events page" at www.lonestarsanctuary.org. Day-of registration begins at 8:30 a.m.

We want to make sure we have good staff and that everything is running smoothly so that these kids can have the best opportunity possible while expanding their great futures and seeing what they can possibly achieve," he said.

BYROM

came available, I just saw it as a natural progression for me in my interest of this organization."

Thanks to her previous knowledge and involvement with Keep Midland Beautiful, Byrom said that the transition has gone smoothly so far.

"Really, I've just hit the ground running, and I'm thankful for my background knowledge of the organization to get me through a little less clueless," Byrom said. "Since I served on the board in the past, I really do have a good understanding of the organization and what it does, so I'm familiar with all of the events. I've volunteered at every single one since I've been involved, and so I really have a great starting position in the organization by understanding all that."

Now that she is there, Byrom plans to increase the nonprofit's digital and social media presence to share the organization's message with the community.

"I'd like to increase our web presence, so I'd like to develop more of our social media and make our website really great," Byrom said. "Along that same vein, I'd like to be more green (and) for us to do as much as we can digitally and just kind of digitize the whole organization as much as possible."

More than anything, however, Byrom wants to make sure the community not only hears the nonprofit's message, but understands that message.

"I think that one of our biggest obstacles is getting the community to understand that Keep Midland Beautiful is not responsible for the litter that we see everywhere, that it's not our job to clean it up," Byrom said. "We do clean it up regularly, but our actual mission is litter prevention. We're trying to get the city cleaned up, but the real challenge is to get people to keep it clean and to get them to ... be mindful of securing their loads, tying their trash bags and keeping litter off the ground and out of the roadways to begin with and not just cleaning it up."

The organization's next scheduled event is the Make a Difference Day Clean up on Oct. 4.

"We are still signing up groups and we would like to have the community come out and have a picnic on us," Byrom said.

Judge: Ten Commandments monument can stay

The Ten Commandments monument at the Oklahoma state Capitol in Oklahoma City is seen June 20. The privately funded monument on the grounds of the Oklahoma Capitol does not violate the state constitution and can stay there, an Oklahoma County judge said Sept. 19 in a ruling that attorneys who filed the lawsuit in question vowed to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

OKLAHOMA CITY — The privately funded Ten Commandments monument on the grounds of the Oklahoma Capitol does not violate the state constitution and can stay there, an Oklahoma County judge said Friday in a ruling that attorneys who filed the lawsuit vowed to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

District Judge Thomas Prince granted a motion filed on behalf of the Oklahoma Capitol Preservation Commission to block the lawsuit from going to trial.

The 6-foot-tall granite monument was authorized by the Legislature in 2009 and was erected in 2012 after Republican state Rep. Mike Ritze and his family paid nearly $10,000 for it. The monument's placement has led others to seek their own on the Capitol grounds, including a satanic group that earlier this year unveiled designs for a 7-foot-tall statue of Satan.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed the suit on behalf of the Rev. Bruce Prescott of Norman, a Baptist minister, and others who allege the monument's location violated the state constitution's ban against using public property to support "any sect, church, denomination or system of religion."

Prince disagreed, ruling that the monument serves a secular — not religious — purpose and occupies a small plot on the north side of the state Capitol that's part of a 100-acre complex which has 51 other monuments.

The ruling was praised by Attorney General Scott Pruitt and others who support the monument.

"The Ten Commandments monument on the Oklahoma Capitol grounds is constitctional because of its historical value," Pruitt said in a statement. He also said the U.S. Supreme Court in June 2005 ruled that a nearly identical monument at the Texas state Capitol was constitutional.

Brady Henderson, legal director of the ACLU of Oklahoma, said he'll appeal Friday's decision to the state Supreme Court. He said the plaintiffs don't want the monument removed because it's offensive, but because they feel the Ten Commandments are being used for political purposes.

The ACLU has 30 days to appeal to the state's highest court.

"Everyone involved knew today wasn't going to be the last word in this case," said Ryan Kiesel, ACLU of Oklahoma's executive director.

While this lawsuit is pending, the preservation commission is not accepting applications for other monuments, though requests have been made from a Hindu leader in Nevada, the satirical Church of the Flying Spaghetti Monster and a group seeking to erect a monument to the U.S. Bill of Rights.

A second lawsuit challenging the Ten Commandments monument was filed in federal court in January by a New Jersey-based nonprofit group, Americans Atheists Inc., and two of its members. The case is scheduled for trial on March 10.

Pope removes divisive bishop

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Pope Francis has removed a conservative bishop from a Paraguayan diocese after he clashed with his fellow bishops by opening his own seminary and promoting an Argentine priest accused of inappropriate sexual behavior.

The Vatican said Thursday that Francis took the "onerous" decision for the good of the church in Ciudad del Este and for the sake of the unity among bishops in Paraguay.

Bishop Rogelio Ricardo Livieres Plano, a member of the conservative Opus Dei movement, has defended the establishment of his seminary, which follows a more orthodox line than the main one in Asuncion.

The Lone Star Sanctuary for Animals is a nonprofit organization that, according to its mission statement, provides "a compassionate, caring and professional sanctuary for the protection of homeless or abused animals, and placing those animals in permanent loving homes where they will be cared for and loved for the remainder of their lives."

In 2013, the organization took in 698 animals from the area and adopted out more than 530 to new owners.

SHOOT

shooting competition, Stonedale said that the best team will win "bragging rights between companies."

Some fundraisers are not cost-effective, but "the great thing about a clay shoot is (it's) so inexpensive for us," said David Chancellor, executive director of the Boys & Girls Club of the Permian Basin. "It's a fun time, it doesn't bog down our staff and you don't have big expenses so it's a win-win-win for everyone."

Between the two heats — which Stonedale said are expected to run for "a few hours" each — the club will host a luncheon and three raffles for participants. For one raffle, Stonedale said that one in eight participants will win a firearm. In the second raffle, participants will enter to win a Browning Citori 725 rifle. And in the third raffle, five winners receive gift cards from Academy, Best Buy, Southwest Airlines, Lowe's or Hotels.com. Raffle tickets cost $10 each.

"We're really doing our best to try to get the community involved so we've got to get good prizes," Stonedale said. "We really believe in our mission here."

Individual shooters can register for $175 and a six-person shooting team can register for $1,050. Advanced registration is preferred.

"We'll actually take teams the day of until we're full, so if people would like to come, they absolutely can," Stonedale said. "But we would like to have it done by the beginning of next week, especially if people want to be part of the sponsors or a station sponsor. We need to get all of that in so that we can get the signs made."

Participants who don't own a shotgun, can use a rental if the shooters provide advance notice.

Stonedale said that in choosing a clay shoot as a fundraiser, the organization was "looking for a new, fun way to create awareness about the Boys and Girls Club and try to (raise) more money and try to get some of these companies around the area more involved in changing lives and helping the community."

The Boys & Girls Club of the Permian Basin serves more than 3,400 children in the area, providing them with rides to the club after school, athletics — flag football, volleyball and cheerleading — educational programs and even meals for those children in need.

"To be a club kid is 12 cents per day," Chancellor said. "We're a jewel that most people don't know about. We've (recently) revamped the Midland clubs (and) we have some of the best unit directors in the state."

Group to determine size of NM Jewish population

SANTA FE — The Jewish Federation of New Mexico has launched a survey of New Mexico's Jewish community to probe the population size and its history.

The federation recently hired a Denver firm to contact Jewish residents affiliated with a synagogue and to contact nonaffiliated Jews through random calling and identification of Jewish family surnames.

It's estimated that the Jewish population in the state is around 4,000 to 7,000. Officials say so far the survey has reached more than 300 families.

The federation's study will be to try to identify the descendants of crypto-Jews who escaped the Spanish Inquisition in the 16th and 17th centuries to settle in the Spanish new world, but might not have openly practiced Judaism.

Inmate sues to be able to worship Satan

SANTA FE — A state prison inmate says New Mexico correction officials aren't allowing him to practice his religion and properly worship Satan behind bars.

KRQE-TV reported that Bernard Pritchard recently filed a lawsuit in state court alleging the chaplain and deputy warden at the Southern New Mexico Correctional Facility in Las Cruces treat his faith differently than others.

Pritchard is asking a judge to force the New Mexico Corrections Department to let him worship Satan more freely and wants $140,000 in damages.

The lawsuit doesn't spell out specifically how Pritchard believes his rights were violated.

The New Mexico Corrections Department declined to comment on the lawsuit. Anthony Romero, deputy director of adult prisons, said officials try to accommodate all religions.

NEVADA

Historic church reopens as cultural center

AUSTIN — In time for Nevada's 150th anniversary of statehood, a historic Austin church building is the center of another celebration.

St. Augustine's Catholic Church building, standing on a hill in the central Nevada town of Austin, has been closed for years, but it's beginning a new life as a cultural center for the community.

A reopening celebration is scheduled for Saturday.

Restoration took 10 years and more than a million dollars, mostly from grants from the Nevada Commission for Cultural Affairs.

"As far as adaptive reuse of the building, it's really made possible by the state Commission for Cultural Affairs," said Peter Dube of Reno, the historical architect for the project. "They give grants for historic structures — nonprofits — used for cultural centers."

Jan Morrison, the chairman of the nonprofit that owns the building, bought the church from the Catholic Diocese of Reno several years ago. She created the nonprofit organization, Dube said, and deeded the building to the organization.

The rehabilitation includes a lower-level meeting space with Americans with Disabilities Act access and a restaurant, Dube said.

Over the years, the building was painted, the roof was replaced along with a retaining wall and windows.

Original murals by Raphael Jolly were preserved and the Kilgen pipe organ was refurbished.

When the church closed years ago it was a blow to the community, Dube said. There were other churches, but St. Augustine's stands on a prominent hill.

"So the town is pretty excited to have it open," he said.

The first Roman Catholic church built in Nevada was St. Mary's in the Mountains in 1860, but the wooden structure collapsed under heavy winds that first winter, according the church website. St. Mary's parish was established in 1862. A brick church built in 1868 burned in 1875. It was rebuilt the next year.

St. Augustine's parish was established on Oct. 16, 1865, said Brother Matthew Cunningham, former Diocese of Reno administrator.

The church dates from 1866, making it the oldest surviving Catholic church building in Nevada. Dube said.

St. Augustine's has its historic high points. Opera singer Emma Nevada received her first communion and sang at the church, according to the Nevada 150 web site. The Henry Kilgen pipe organic is a historic relic. And in the late 1930s, Lake Tahoe artist Raphael Jolly painted 14 murals on the interior walls.

The church, which cost $50,000 to build, is built into the hillside on granite, the 150 website says, with bricks and granite from the Austin quarry and brickyard that flourished in the 1800s. Its spire is 75 feet high.

Catholic schools follow jobs out of the inner city

By Allan Turner
Houston Chronicle

Houston Chronicle

The Rev. Sean Horrigan, photographed in Houston on Sept. 17, is the pastor of the church and the Christ the Redeemer Catholic School. The new school was finished in 2013, and the first day of class was August 21, 2014.

HOUSTON — It was morning Mass at Christ the Redeemer Catholic Church, and rows of children — well-scrubbed, uniformed scholars at the church's new elementary school — silently fidgeted as they awaited the homily from the parish priest, the Rev. Sean Horrigan.

Horrigan, a large man in emerald green vestment, laid out the ABC's of mastering the "Three R's." But with nurturing warmth reminiscent of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," he added another letter to the alphabet soup of the parochial school's curriculum.

"L," he told the group, "stands for 'love.'"

"Say a prayer," Horrigan admonished. "Do your best to get an 'A,' but also strive for an 'L.' Let 'L' lead you, because love never fails."

Now four weeks into its first year, the Cypress-Fairbanks-area campus offering pre-kindergarten to fourth-grade classes is emblematic of demographic changes transforming Roman Catholic education.

Once immigrant strongholds in the heart of the nation's oldest cities, inner-city parochial schools increasingly are closing, consolidating or relocating as the faithful disperse first to the suburbs, then, often, to economically vibrant Sun Belt communities.

Christ the Redeemer is the Galveston-Houston Catholic Archdiocese's second suburban school to open in just two years. And despite the closing or consolidation of four inner-city schools in 2009, the 167-year-old system, with its almost 19,000 students in 61 schools, remains the state's largest parochial school district. The current school year started with a waiting list, and education officials confirm that they are exploring opening more campuses.

Nationally, though, the fate of Catholic schools seems less clear.

Since 2004, the Rev. Robert Bimonte, president of the National Catholic Educational Association, said 1,300 elementary schools have closed or consolidated. While 347 new schools have opened, most of the growth has taken place in southern, southwestern and western states, far from the traditional immigrant Catholic enclaves of the Northeast and Midwest.

"People have to follow their jobs," Bimonte said. "Before they moved South, they moved to the suburbs."

Only 13 of Galveston-Houston Archdiocese's schools, or about 20 percent, remain in inner-city neighborhoods.

Cypress-Fairbanks, home to Christ the Redeemer, is one of Harris County's fastest-growing unincorporated communities. According to the last U.S. Census, the area grew by 70 percent in just 10 years, tallying a population in excess of 600,000. The public Cy-Fair Independent School District, the state's third-largest, this year enrolled more than 100,000 students.

In the face of such jarring demographic shifts, the need for some options — Catholic schools, specifically — remains eternal, said archdiocese school Superintendent Julie Vogel, who oversees campuses in a 10-county region.

Houston Chronicle

Christ the Redeemer Catholic School Principal Betty Sierra reads Sept. 17 to first-graders as part of a tradition she is creating of reading to the different classes once a week so she can get to know the students better.

"I don't think the need has ever changed," Vogel said. "I don't think the mission has ever changed. I believe parents who raise their kids in a faith-based setting always have been part of who we are."

Vogel, 49, this summer came to head the Houston-area parochial system from Portland, Ore., where she spent 14 years with Catholic schools. As a principal, she was credited with turning around a struggling school, increasing enrollment by 74 percent in a single year and eliminating debt while maintaining key academic programs. Most recently, she was the Portland system's director of instructional services and accreditation.

Vogel's immersion in the local parochial system was swift.

"My short-term goal right now is to really have a clear sense of what's happening in Galveston and Houston," she said. "I don't want to make any decisions until I have that background."

Already she has visited 10 schools, including Christ the Redeemer, meeting faculty, students, parents and priests. "I want to meet each particular community. We are united in faith, but there are subtleties," she said.

School system leaders are open to building inner-city schools if demand is sufficient, Vogel said.

"We are carefully watching the inner city as well as the suburbs and are committed to providing a Catholic education in any location where there is interest," she said.

Vogel said she was struck by the ethnic diversity of the Houston area and its parochial schools.

Since the 2009-10 school year, Hispanic enrollment has grown from 29 percent to 34 percent in elementary schools and from 22 percent to 29 percent in high schools. African-American enrollment held steady at 8 percent in elementary schools and increased 1 percentage point to 9 percent in high schools. Total system enrollment grew from 16,995 in 2004-05 to 18,902.

Horrigan said his parish, where 172 students are enrolled in the new school, reflects the diversity of the larger Houston community.

"We're not a private school; we're a Catholic school," he said, "and the mission of Christ the Redeemer looks a lot like that of the church. Our archdiocese is one of the most diverse in the country. The mission is to be open to all people, to respect the dignity of the human person. They are created in the image of God, regardless of skin color. They are all part of the body of Christ."

Construction of the school grew out of a 2008 master plan that pinpointed optimum neighborhoods for new schools. Since then, the archdiocese also has opened Frassati Catholic High School in suburban Spring and Cristo Rey Jesuit College Prep School in an inner-city neighborhood near Hobby Airport.

Still, in 2009, the same year Cristo Rey opened, the archdiocese closed or consolidated four schools in low-income, inner-city neighborhoods, spawning accusations that it was seeking to serve the affluent at the expense of the poor.

"It's a sin of omission," C.E. Johnson, a school board member at one of the affected schools, said at the time. "You see a problem, and you do nothing about it."

Cardinal Daniel DiNardo defended the action, saying the schools targeted for closure suffered dwindling enrollment, financial pressures and, in some cases, aging infrastructure.

Locally and nationally, Catholic education leaders said, parent demand is among the strongest determining factors of where schools will be built.

When French missionary the Rev. Jean Marie Odin arrived in Galveston in 1840, he was surprised to find that Catholic parents had opened their own religious schools in Galveston, Houston and Victoria without the help of priests.

At Christ the Redeemer, said principal Betty Sierra, parish parents have helped shape the school from its inception.

"They have beaten down the doors to volunteer," she said. "They really want to be involved. They want to make sure they're part of it."

The new school opened its doors early last year as a facility for the religious training of more than 2,000 parish youngsters. Plans, Sierra said, called for expanding it to offer pre-K through third-grade instruction, possibly in the 2015-16 school year. Parent demand, though, accelerated the process, the principal said.

"Third grade came up on the radar," added Horrigan. "As we took the plunge into third grade, the response from parents was tremendous. I had 15 or 18 emails saying that if we'd open fourth-grade classes they would provide the kids."

Plans call for adding a grade level each year up to eighth grade.

Pizza nights are just one way the Rebels' line bonds

Walk into Gatti's Pizza on a Wednesday evening, and the reason for Lee's offensive line success is evident.

Most would think this revelation is hardly surprising. After all, a pizza free-for-all should be an offensive lineman's dream.

And while the members of Lee's o-line can put away slices of pepperoni with the best of them, it's not actually the copious amount of pizza and extra calories that have made the difference.

Instead, it's the table the group sits at, specifically the time spent together at it. The Lee offensive line meets every week for "Gatti's Wednesday," a night when the group can bond off the field. It's not the only gathering of the tribe during the week either. The group eats at least two dinners together a week, not to mention daily meals in the school cafeteria.

This may sound trivial, but it's a significant factor in the offensive line's success

In describing what the Midland High offensive line did against El Paso Franklin, Midland High head coach Craig Yenzer put both hands together at the finger tips and moved them away from his body.

The hand gesture was used to illustrate just how well the Bulldogs offensive line was moving El Paso Franklin's defensive front off the line of scrimmage. The performance was quite possibly the group's best of the season and the moment he knew that they were in the type of groove, that made it easy for him to call plays.

"Anytime you watch film in a game and you are sitting there watching and you see the whole front start going this way ... all five," Yenzer said as he moved his hands away from his body. "That really got my attention. They are still learning some zone concepts and those kind of things. But just to see them embrace the physical part of the game ... man that's just exciting."

Even with the loss to the Cougars, the Bulldogs' offensive line was a major bright spot for the Midland High offense. The group will have its work cut out for today as Midland High (3-1) takes on undefeated Amarillo High (4-0) at 7:30 p.m. at Grande Communications Stadium.

But this group is a collection of players who longtime offensive line coach Jim Conger said has the potential to be the best group he's had in Midland.

Mustangs ready for new district, new challenge

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

The travel to two states, the loss in Louisiana and last week's victory against Class 6A El Paso Americas has led to this week for Midland Christian.

The Mustangs will begin play in TAPPS Division I, District 1 at 7:30 p.m. today against Dallas Bishop Lynch at Mustang Field.

From the day last September when it was announced that Midland Christian would take its three straight Division II state championship rings into the best private school football district in state, the Mustangs have been more than ready.

McClendon

It's all part of what has been a transition season and a new era for Midland Christian football. The days of the Mustangs dominating district opponents on a weekly basis is over.

Midland Christian will join a district that has produced the last six TAPPS Division I state champions, and teams from the district have won 13 state titles in the division since 1996.

"Every team you play you look up there and think, 'That's a dang good team,'" Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said. "We are going to be in a dogfight. You have to dot your I's and cross your T's again, and make sure your offensive and defensive game plans, and special teams are ready to go."

Thompson steady force as Greenwood tries to rebound

The way Justice Thompson sees it, if he does his job the way he's supposed to, that's one less thing that his team and coaches have to be concerned about on a daily basis.

The 6-foot, 160-pound junior wide receiver and safety for Greenwood has been one of those players that head coach Shad Hanna doesn't have to worry about much, even during a three-game losing streak that has the Rangers standing at 1-3 heading into tonight's non-district home game against Snyder (1-3).

Thompson

Hanna said Thompson is one of those players who is getting better and better at both positions.

As a receiver he's only caught two passes for 21 yards, but Hanna said he's not only been catching the ball well but has been really good at blocking down field. As a safety, Thompson is third on the team in tackles with 37 and to go with two passes defended and Hanna said he's been very good in coverage.

Thompson has been so dependable that Hanna has nicknamed him "Mr. Steady."

"He's turning into a good leader for us," Hanna said. "He's dependable. He's kind of a quiet kid, he doesn't say a lot. He just listens."

Thompson is not a rah-rah type of player. He is the kind of kid who is focused and listens so he can get better at playing one of the sports he loves.

"I just work hard on every play and I do not mess around," Thompson said. "I try to be dependable. You don't have to worry about me messing up, they can worry about other things."

While he's been playing football since the third grade,

No. 24 Oklahoma State holds off Texas Tech

By Cliff Brunt
Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Daxx Garman threw for 370 yards and four touchdowns to help No. 24 Oklahoma State beat Texas Tech 45-35 on Thursday night.

Garman completed 17 of 31 passes and ran for a score in his second start since stepping in for the injured J.W. Walsh.

Marcell Ateman had career highs of six catches and 130 yards, James Washington had three catches for 87 yards and two touchdowns, and Desmond Roland ran for 86 yards and a score for Oklahoma State (3-1, 1-0 Big 12).

Davis Webb passed for 374 yards and four touchdowns for Texas Tech (2-2, 0-1) before leaving the game in the fourth quarter because of a left shoulder injury.

Brad Marquez had eight catches for 106 yards, Jakeem Grant had a career-high 12 catches for 100 yards and a touchdown, and Reginald Davis caught two touchdown passes.

Oklahoma State has won six straight against the Red Raiders and has averaged 55.5 points in the past four wins. The Red Raiders haven't won in Stillwater since 2001.

Mike Smith took over as Texas Tech's interim defensive coordinator after Matt Wallerstedt resigned from their shared position as co-defensive coordinators. The Red Raiders surrendered 528 yards.

It was a typical shootout in the series. The teams combined for 1,034 yards. They also combined for 287 yards in penalties.

Texas Tech marched down the field on its opening drive, and Webb found Davis down the middle for a 21-yard touchdown strike. Webb was 7 of 9 on the drive.

Oklahoma State tied late in the first quarter when Washington made an in-air adjustment in the end zone to snag a 33-yard pass from Garman.

Webb completed 18 of 26 passes for 175 yards in the first quarter.

Ramon Richards, playing because Ashton Lampkin was injured in the first quarter, intercepted Webb's first pass of the second quarter. Texas Tech's defense held, then Webb found Marquez for an 18-yard touchdown pass that gave the Red Raiders a 14-7 lead.

Jeremy Seaton's leaping 28-yard catch between three defenders set up a 1-yard touchdown run by Roland that tied it with 7 minutes left in the second quarter.

Kevin Peterson intercepted Webb's pass, then Garman quickly took advantage on the next play with a 39-yard touchdown pass to Washington that gave Oklahoma State a 21-14 lead.

Texas Tech gained 340 yards in the first half, yet scored only 14 points.

Garman struck again early in the third quarter with a 47-yard touchdown pass to tight end Blake Jarwin.

Tech hung tough. Justin Stockton caught a 17-yard scoring pass from Webb to make it 28-21, but Garman came right back and hit Tyreek Hill deep for a 50-yard touchdown pass that put the Cowboys up by 14 again. The ball appeared to be overthrown, but Hill, a track sprinter, shifted into another gear and caught it in stride near the goal line.

Later, Seth Jacobs intercepted Tech backup Patrick Mahomes' pass, and Garman kept on a read play to put the Cowboys up by 17.

Sue Ogrocki/AP

Texas Tech defensive back Justis Nelson (31) is called for pass interference as Oklahoma State wide receiver Jhajuan Seales (81) attempts to catch a pass in the first quarter Thursday in Stillwater, Okla.

Beltre homer in 9th sends Rangers past A's

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

Rangers	2
Athletics	1

ARLINGTON — Adrian Beltre hit a walk-off homer in the ninth inning, and the Texas Rangers kept Oakland from getting closer to clinching an AL wild-card spot with a 2-1 victory against the Athletics on Thursday night.

Beltre sent a drive just over the wall in right field off Luke Gregerson (5-5) with one out for his team-leading 19th homer of the season and just his second since Aug. 10.

The A's (86-73) lost a chance to clinch a wild-card spot when Seattle won at Toronto 7-5 earlier in the day in a game shown on the big video board in the Rangers' ballpark.

The last-place Rangers won for the 12th time in 13 games. The A's, who were swept by Texas in Oakland last week and started the day tied with Kansas City for the wild-card lead, have lost seven of 10.

Texas closer Neftali Feliz (2-1) pitched a scoreless ninth as the Rangers kept Oakland's magic number for clinching a third straight playoff spot at two.

Oakland's Coco Crisp reached base five times on two singles and three walks, but Josh Reddick went 0 for 5 behind him and never moved him up to second base.

Jason Hammel made his first start for Oakland since the birth of his second child over the weekend in Massachusetts. He had a one-hitter in the sixth when Leonys Martin reached on a bunt single with two outs, stole second and scored on Elvis Andrus' single for a 1-1 tie.

The right-hander, just 2-6 since coming over from the Chicago Cubs in a trade at the deadline, was replaced after allowing consecutive singles to Beltre and Jake Smolinski to start the seventh. Dan Otero got two strikeouts to keep the Rangers from taking the lead.

REBELS

this season. With only two seniors back to anchor the unit, an inexperienced group needed to make strides toward chemistry quickly, AND that's where the pizza comes in.

"(It's) real important," senior center Griffin Quintero said. "It makes us feel closer and that we can trust each other better, so we don't have to worry about what's going on next to us."

Quintero leads a starting unit that consists of senior Michael Marsh, a converted defensive lineman, and juniors Nick Dennis, Mark Pena and Brock Murry. Of the five, Quintero is the only player who had any tangible varsity experience entering the season. Cobbling together five linemen together before a season can often be disastrous, and it's a reason the group was a question mark in the spring.

But time eventually gave way to chemistry.

"We've gelled a lot better than I thought we would have jelled," Quintero said. "Last year the group wasn't as close as we are. This year, we have team lunches, team dinners. (We're) always making jokes and messing around with each other."

Tight end Kaleb Nunez, who is a part-time member of the offensive linemen fraternity, said the close knit environment the group creates is almost scary — in a good way.

"They're like brothers," Nunez said. "It's crazy. They crack jokes all the time. It's hilarious. They talk to each other like they're the (best) of friends."

The offensive line is the driving force behind Lee's explosive rushing attack, which has averaged 225 yards per game in 2014.

Rebel running back Aron Dobbins, who has rushed for 675 yards through four games, couldn't be more complementary of his offensive line. Actually, he couldn't even contemplate where his rushing total would be with a less effective group.

"Without them, I don't really know what I'd be able to do," Dobbins said. "I don't think I'd be able to do anything without the o-line."

Dobbins also hinted at another big reason for the unit's quick improvement this year. Dobbins said in a chat with coach Michael Connelly, he asked who watched the most film on the team. And much to his surprise, Connelly said after the quarterbacks, it was their protectors that proved the most studious.

The o-line isn't perfect. Quintero said they need to work on their pass blocking consistency. Head coach James Morton also points to the group's technique as an area targeted for improvement.

But Morton could not be more pleased by the way the offensive line has come together in a few short months.

"The whole thing to an offensive line is communication and teamwork," Morton said. "They really do have to rely on each other. They're starting to have more confidence in the offensive line. They're doing a good job in working and communicating together."

That aspect of the group will only improve with time, one slice of pizza at a time.

LEE AT ABILENE COOPER
When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Shotwell Stadium, Abilene
On the air: KCRS (550 AM)
Records: Lee 1-3, Abilene Cooper 0-3
Last Game: El Paso El Dorado 51, Lee 44 (2OT); South Grand Prairie 42, Abilene Cooper 19
Last meeting/series: Lee 42, Abilene Cooper 35 last year; Lee leads the all-time series 25-23-2.
Weather Forecast: High of 94 with 10 percent chance of rain

Five things you need to know

■ This is the first time Lee and Abilene Cooper have not been in the same district since 2009. Cooper was dropped down a classification to 5A, formally known as 4A, when the districts were redrawn earlier this year. Formerly, Cooper was a member of 2-5A along with Lee.

■ Lee's quarterback situation was still up in the air as of Thursday. Either Wesley Hall or Jon Schwalbach could start under center. Earlier in the week, Morton said he wouldn't be opposed to the two splitting time.

■ Morton said he wants this game to be about his team taking the next step. At 1-3 he's seen some good things from his team, but the Rebels have been unable to finish. He expects this final tuneup game before district to be a test for his group.

"I think it's big to get back on the right side of the win column," Morton said. "We want to continue to see improvement, but it's gotten to the point where we need to take that next step."

■ Cooper has very much missed graduated quarterback Lorenzo Joe, who signed with Texas as a WR, as the offense has sputtered through Cooper's first three games. The Cougars have scored 21 points or less in every game, a total they exceeded in all but three games last season.

■ Lee wide receiver/cornerback Juwan Lee, who missed last week's game with a shoulder injury, will play against Cooper. Starting corner Darrien Wallace, who missed the El Dorado game with an illness, is also available this week. Rebel's starting center Griffin Quintero is questionable with a knee injury.

Next: Lee vs. Odessa Permian, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 10; Abilene Cooper at Amarillo High, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 3.

THOMPSON

his other love is being a calf roper. Every weekend, Thompson will go and compete as a roper, something he has been doing since the seventh grade when an uncle got him hooked on it.

Hanna, who lives nearby to Thompson, said he never sees him on the weekends because he knows he's following his other love.

"I just love the competition," Thompson said. "It's kind of addicting, fun and It's pretty challenging."

Much like football, being a roper takes practice. Thompson said he tries to take the same work ethic and dedication to both sports.

"You just have to practice hard and do everything right," Thompson said.

Thompson and Hanna hope that work ethic carries over to the team as the Rangers look to break their recent slide.

The Rangers would also love to have something positive to take into the open week and before beginning District 2-4A Division II play in two weeks against Lamesa.

"We just have to work hard and have a good week of practice," Thompson said. "We've got to go out there with the right mindset and give it our all. We have to come out fast and not slow like we have in the last three games. We've just had little breakdowns that have kept us from winning and this game is important just to get back on track before district."

SNYDER VS. GREENWOOD
When/where: 7:30 p.m., J.M. King Memorial Stadium
On the web: www.audiosportsonline.net/2014fall/greenwood
Records: Greenwood 1-3; Snyder 1-3
Last game: San Angelo Lake View 40, Greenwood 7; Sweetwater 58, Snyder 40
Last meeting/series: Snyder defeated Greenwood 56-13 last year and owns a 7-3 record in the all-time series
Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with temperatures in the mid 70s at kickoff.

Five things you need to know

■ This game features two teams that were in the same district, 4-3A, the last two seasons. This season, Greenwood is in 2-4A Division II, while Snyder is in 3-4A Division I.

■ Greenwood coach Shad Hanna said WR/DB J.P. Contreras and RB Stace Bell are both expected to play after recovering from their concussions. Contreras has been out since the first play of the first game with his injury. WR/DB Austin Ulcak (knee) is questionable.

■ Hanna said Snyder does not look like a 1-3 team and added that the Tigers have played a good schedule with losses coming to Littlefield (28-0), Monahans (42-13) and Sweetwater.

Hanna said Snyder's quarterback, Kodi Maxfield, is talented, the Tigers have a big offensive line and they also have some speed at the skill positions.

■ Hanna said the key for his team will be to cut down on mistakes.

"We have focused a lot on the mistakes that we have made and we have corrected a lot of them," he said. "It's just taken some time to get some confidence. We're close, we just have to finish what we're doing."

■ Against Sweetwater, Maxfield — the 6-foot, 190-pound senior — was 21-of-38 passing for 271 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions, to go with 119 yards and on TD on 20 carries.

BULLDOGS

From 1C

There are some second-year starters and first-year starters, and a little bit of size — all six are over 6-foot-1 and 240 pounds. But for this year's group what is different is the chemistry.

Last week's performance was the culmination of the last six weeks of learning and coming together as a group. Against the Cougars, the Bulldogs had more than 500 yards of total offense and more than half of that came on the ground. Four turnovers, though, overshadowed the front's performance in a 42-28 loss.

"We knew that this team was going to be better than last year, and we were going to come together better than last year," Evans said. "There is better leadership and everybody has gotten along with each other."

Even with the addition of a sophomore in Heiting, who Conger said is possibly the first sophomore to start for him while at Midland High, the group's cohesion has been strong.

"Our personalities match, and everyone gets along," Payan said. "We are not divided into our own little groups and everyone talks."

Conger said along with the weekly work on technique and game planning, he said that the players still have to be a little more aggressive. Conger said Carillo has a little "nasty" in him, but added the other players understand their job but now need to bring some aggressiveness with that.

Conger, though, sees plenty of potential with this group, and said they are far from reaching their peak.

"They can be as good as I've ever had or they can be average," Conger said. "Like we say all the time, if you want to be average just show up, but if you want to be above average or great, you have to work toward that. It's going to be a great test for them this week."

AMARILLO HIGH AT MIDLAND HIGH
When/where: 7:30 p.m. Friday, Grande Communications Stadium
On the air: KNFM (92.3 FM), Midland
On the web: www.mrt.com
Records: Midland High 3-1, Amarillo High 4-0
Last game: El Paso Franklin 42, Midland High 35; Amarillo High 27, Odessa High 0
Last meeting/series: Midland High won 24-17 in double overtime in 2011; MHS leads the overall series 13-5
Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with a high of 78 and no chance of rain

Five things you need to know

■ Midland High senior running back Darius Reed is expected to play in today's game after being transported to the hospital during halftime of last week's game. It is still not known what happened to Reed but he was back practicing this week and held out of contact drills.

■ Amarillo High is off to its first 4-0 start since the 2006 season. The Sandies' four-game winning streak to start that season ended at Grande Communications Stadium against Midland High. The Bulldogs won 35-6.

■ The Sandies are churning up yards on the ground with their wing-t offense. Amarillo High is averaging 383.5 yards a game this season, and 344 of that is coming on the ground. Senior Spencer Simpson is the team's top running back, rushing for 658 yards and 11 touchdowns. Last week, the Sandies tallied 324 yards rushing in a 27-0 victory against Odessa High.

■ Defensively the Sandies are allowing 211 yards a game on defense in victories against Amarillo Palo Duro, Wichita Falls Rider, El Paso Montwood and Odessa High. Coach Craig Yenzer said the defensive front is one of the most physical the Bulldogs have played this season.

"They are physical and play technique really well," Yenzer said. "It's the right team to play at the right time for us and it will be a physical game."

■ The three wins to start the season guaranteed the Bulldogs a winning record in non-district play for the first time since 2011. In 2012 and 2013, Midland High was in the nine-team District 2-5A and split its two non-district games both of those years. In 2011, the Bulldogs started the season at 5-0 before finishing at 6-5.

MUSTANGS

From 1C

Along with loading up on TAPPS hardware, the district routinely has players that are being recruited by Division I schools, including this week's opponent Dallas Bishop Lynch and running back Rawleigh Williams, who has committed to Arkansas.

Friars coach Ben Dasch has been coaching at the school for the last 11 years, the last two as head coach. And he said Midland Christian joining the district just adds to the league's competitiveness, and added the Mustangs' accomplishments recently are no fluke.

"I don't consider them any different than any other opponent that we have had in our district for the last decade," Dasch said. "Their accomplishments speak for themselves, and they were the class of that level last year. We expect they will be ready to play and ready to go and not miss a beat. We've got a lot of work ahead of us."

The Mustangs haven't changed how they game plan for teams but what has changed is the fact that they will have to make more adjustments during halftime than they have during games. In many games during their recent run, the Mustangs were ahead at halftime by so many points they used a running clock in the second half.

Midland Christian has already experienced making adjustments in a game that wasn't in their control even if they were leading, and it's something that McClendon said the staff has embraced.

"You get a flutter in your stomach and get your juices flowing," McClendon said. "I think it's good. We've settled down and I think it's challenged us to put our kids in better situations to have more success."

How much success the Mustangs have over the next seven weeks remains to be seen, but both the coaching staff and the players are ready for what lies ahead and excited for the opportunity to make some noise in a new district.

"It's felt like a new era for us all year long," McClendon said. "Overall, it's been really good for us. Even going to Louisiana and turning the ball over and getting beat has been good for this football and important in the making of a good football team."

DALLAS BISHOP LYNCH AT MIDLAND CHRISTIAN
When/where: 7:30 p.m. Friday, Mustang Field
On the web: bit.ly/watchmcs
Records: Midland Christian 2-1; Dallas Bishop Lynch 3-1
Last game: Midland Christian 35, El Paso Americas 10; Dallas Bishop Lynch 40, Celina 21
Last meeting/series: Dallas Bishop Lynch beat Midland Christian 34-7 in 2003; Bishop Lynch leads the overall series 2-0
Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with a high of 78 and no chance of rain

Five things you need to know

■ Midland Christian will put its 23-game district winning streak on the line today. The Mustangs have not lost a district game since 2009.

■ Midland Christian won its first game against a Class 6A opponent last week, beating El Paso Americas 35-10 at Mustang Field.

■ Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said that Kaleb Warren suffered a foot injury in last week's win against El Paso Americas and is questionable for today's game. Justin Fender and Davis Fender will play at the middle linebacker position today. McLane Mannix, who injured a knee against Shreveport Calvary Baptist, should be back today, McClendon said.

■ Dallas Bishop Lynch finished 3-8 in 2013 and lost in the first round of the TAPPS Division I playoffs. The Friars have a strong tradition in TAPPS, though, winning Class 5A state titles in 2002 and 2003.

■ Rawleigh Williams is among the best running backs in the district this season and he is coming off a big game against Class 4A power Celina. Williams rushed for 310 yards on 22 carries and had six touchdowns. Williams, who has committed to Arkansas, has rushed for 936 yards and 13 touchdowns this season.

GLENEAGLES, Scotland — As if players don't already face enough pressure in the Ryder Cup, the walk into golf's most boisterous arena goes through a tunnel of time.

One side of the short tunnel is painted American red and celebrates past victories, with images of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, Paul Azinger and Ben Hogan. The other side is European blue with a roll call of winners that feature Tony Jacklin and Nick Faldo, Colin Montgomerie and Bernhard Langer.

Emerging from the tunnel, players immediately see blue bunting on a three-story hospitality suite with the words, "Where Legends are Forged."

Take a breath.

They make their way to the first tee, where a U-shaped grandstand has 1,892 seats filled with fans who are chanting, singing and stomping.

This is no ordinary golf tournament.

"It's like walking into a football stadium," said Stephen Gallacher, who grew up near Gleneagles and has never seen the course looking like this. Not with fans 10-deep on both sides of the fairway, draped in flags of the European Union, the nine European countries represented, and yes, even the Stars & Stripes.

"That tunnel has got some iconic images through it, and you'll hear the crowd, you'll hear the noise," Justin Rose said. "You really begin to sense that even on the practice range. The atmosphere really amps up. ... I can only imagine that by the time you walk to the tee, you're fully ready to go. There's absolutely no doubt."

And there was one more touch to add inspiration to the home team.

From the first tee, players can't help but notice a message written across the back of the 50-foot grandstand behind the 18th green to the left. It's a quote from Seve Ballesteros, forever the face of European golf in the Ryder Cup.

"As a player and captain, there are unforgettable moments when you are competing for the people of your continent."

Four long days of speculation and anticipation give way to the most frenetic three days in golf, starting with a tee shot unlike any other.

"It's definitely the most impressive first hole we play throughout our careers," Sergio Garcia said. "That tee shot on the first is always different, the way they build it up and all the songs you hear and everything."

It all unfolds onFriday morning when Bubba Watson and Webb Simpson go for a third straight victory in fourballs against Rose and Henrik Stenson.

Considering the last two Ryder Cups — both European victories — were decided by one point, every match matters.

Europe has won seven of the last nine times, and it has not lost on home soil since 1993 when Tom Watson was the American captain. Going back in time to change its fortunes, the U.S. team brought back Watson to lead the way. At 65, he is the oldest captain in Ryder Cup history.

Watson stuck with what has worked, and he threw in a few wrinkles. Bubba Watson and Simpson won both their fourballs matches at Medinah, wrapping up both of them on the 14th hole. Keegan Bradley and Phil Mickelson went 3-0 at Medinah, and they are the anchor match against Rory McIlroy and Garcia, Europe's most powerful tandem.

"We're looking to hand them their first defeat tomorrow morning," McIlroy said.

The new wrinkle? Old Tom Watson created the youngest pairing in Ryder Cup history with 21-year-old Jordan Spieth and 24-year-old Patrick Reed going against Europe stalwart Ian Poulter and Gallacher, another rookie and the lone Scot in a Ryder Cup that has not been held in the home of golf since 1973.

"I would imagine for the rookies, it's going to be a bit of a shock," Lee Westwood said of the first tee. "It's a bit of an intimidating atmosphere, but nothing they can't handle."

Watson has been preaching redemption from the Americans' meltdown at Medinah, where they lost the largest lead ever by a home team. Europe captain Paul McGinley is talking about a template of success, even though his four teams on Friday morning are entirely new.

"The fun is only starting now," McGinley said. "We relish the challenge."

Adding to the fun are the final two matches.

Poulter is like a peacock, strutting around Gleneagles, eager as ever to show off his Ryder Cup feathers. He was singled out even ahead of McIlroy — a four-time major champion and golf's No. 1 player — as the one guy Americans would love to knock off. Watson is sending out a pair of rookies against him who have nothing to lose.

"I told them today, 'I'm going to throw you in the ocean without a life preserver. You're on your own. You get out there and you get it done,'" Watson said.

As for the anchor match involving Mickelson and McIlroy? Watson compared that match with the "main event in the first round."

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ABILENE HIGH AT SOUTHLAKE CARROLL

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Dragon Stadium, Southlake

On the air: KZQQ (1560 AM), Abilene

Records: Abilene High 4-0, Southlake Carroll 3-0

Last game: Abilene High 38, Hurst L.D. Bell 12; Southlake Carroll 56, Lee 6 (Sept. 12)

Last meeting/Series: Southlake Carroll 38, Abilene High 24 in 2010; Southlake leads the all-time series 3-1.

Weather Forecast: High of 88 with a 10 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Abilene High has scored 38 points in each of its first four games this season. The Eagles will likely need more than that in order to topple the Dragons in Southlake, however.

■ Since 2010, the Dragons have faced a member of District 3-6A on five occasions. In those games, Carroll owns a 5-0 record with a combined point spread 277-54. The Eagles are the only team to stay within two scores of the Dragons, losing 38-24 in the 2010 playoffs.

■ This is the first time these two state powers have met in the regular season. The Dragons and Eagles have met four times previously with each game coming in the regional round of the playoffs. Carroll owns a 3-1 all-time series lead, with the Eagles only win coming in 2007.

Next: Abilene High at San Angelo Central, 7:30 p.m.; Oct. 10; Southlake Carroll vs. Coppell, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 3

SAN ANGELO CENTRAL AT LAREDO ALEXANDER

Where/When: 7 p.m., Bill Johnson Student Activity Center, Laredo

On the air: KIXY (94.7 FM), San Angelo

Records: San Angelo Central 3-1, Laredo Alexander 3-1

Last Game: San Angelo Central 36, Wolfforth Frenship 14; Laredo Alexander 63, Sharyland 35

Last meeting/Series: The two teams have never met

Weather Forecast: High of 88 with a 40 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Central head coach Brent Davis said Alexander throws the ball extremely well, and the Bulldogs actually run a very similar offense to what the Bobcats employ.

■ Davis said the Bobcats are making the trip to Laredo because they couldn't get anyone in West Texas to schedule the team for their final non-district contest. Central will have only traveled twice in the non-district, to Arlington and Laredo, portion of the season at the conclusion of this game. But total, those two trips were over 1,180 miles.

■ This is the first time Central and Alexander have met. Actually, this is the first time the Bobcats have ever played a team from Laredo.

Next: San Angelo Central vs. Abilene High, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 10; Laredo Alexander at Laredo LBJ, 7 p.m., Oct. 9.

ODESSA HIGH AT WOLFFORTH FRENSHIP

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Peoples Bank Stadium

On the air: KMCM (96.9 FM), Odessa

Records: Odessa High 2-2, Wolfforth Frenship 2-2

Last Game: Amarillo High 27, Odessa High 0; San Angelo Central 36, Frenship 14

Last meeting/Series: Wolfforth Frenship 38, Odessa High 15 in 2006; Wolfforth Frenship leads the all-time series 1-0.

Weather Forecast: High of 75 with a 10 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ After scoring a combined 87 points in its first two games, Odessa High has been shut out in two straight games against Amarillo Tascosa and Amarillo High. It's the first time since 1944 that the Bronchos have not scored in consecutive contests.

■ Both Odessa High starting quarterback Nick Adams and running back Sebastian Galindo are nursing injuries. Head coach Ron King said he is unsure if either will play, though he is hopeful both can go.

■ King said Frenship, which was ranked in the state rankings earlier this season, is a power running team in a similar vein to what the Bronchos have seen the past two weeks against the two Amarillo teams. He said the key beating Frenship is to keep them off the field and win the battle up front.

"They run about 80 percent of the time. They are very physical up front, and we've got to do a good job of keeping them off the field and getting three and outs."

ODESSA PERMIAN VS. LUBBOCK CORONADO

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Ratliff Stadium, Odessa

On the air: KICKS (99.1 FM), Odessa

Records: Odessa Permian 4-0; Lubbock Coronado 1-3

Last Game: Odessa Permian 31, El Paso Coronado 21; Randall 60, Lubbock Coronado 7

Last meeting/Series: Odessa Permian 38, Lubbock Coronado 35 last year; Permian leads the all-time series 6-1.

Weather Forecast: High of 81 with a 10 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Permian is 4-0 for the first time since the 2008 season, a year the Panthers finished the regular season undefeated.

■ Panthers starting quarterback Heath Wood is probable to start under center after he dislocated his shoulder against El Paso Coronado last week. If Wood cannot go, Trey Potter will get the start.

■ Lubbock Coronado is 1-3 on the season, but Permian head coach Blake Feldt was very complimentary about the Mustangs' athletes.

"They are scary," Feldt said. "They've got great athletes, and two of the best athletes I think we will see all year. We are going to have to be at our best Friday night."

Next: Odessa Permian at Lee, 7:30 p.m., Oct. 10; Lubbock Coronado at Hobbs (NM), 8 p.m., Oct. 3.

NO. 10 BIG SPRING VS. NO. 8 GRAHAM

When/Where: 7:30 p.m., Newton Field, Graham

On the air: KBEST FM (95.7), KBYG FM (106.3), Big Spring

Records: Big Spring 4-0; Graham 3-1

Last game: Big Spring 41, Hereford 14; Argyle 35, Graham 27

Last meeting: First meeting between the two schools

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with a 10 percent chance of rain and temperatures in the lower 80s at kickoff

Three things you need to know

■ Big Spring had arguably its best game of the season with its blowout win over Hereford. The Steers were led by QB Tobyn Tannehill, who passed for 183 yards and rushed for 164 yards and three touchdowns.

■ Graham and Argyle were tied at 14 at the half before Argyle outscored the Steers 21-13 in the second half. Graham junior QB Landry Turner was 12-of-21 passing for 154 yards and two interceptions, while junior RB Nick Martin added 120 yards rushing and three TDs.

■ Big Spring coach Phillip Ritchey said Graham is extremely talented with both size and speed.

"It's hard to find any weaknesses," Ritchey said. "Plus, they're coming off a loss and it's going to be at their place, so you know they're going to have a bigger chip on their shoulder. The key is scoring points and we've got to be able to handle their size in the box."

SWEETWATER VS. ANDREWS

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Mustang Bowl, Andrews

On the air: KACT FM (105.5), KACT AM (1360), Andrews

Records: Andrews 4-0; Sweetwater 4-0

Last game: Andrews 35, Monahans 25; Sweetwater 58, Snyder 40

Last meeting: Sweetwater defeated Andrews, 39-30, in 2013

Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with temperatures in the mid 70s at kickoff

Three things you need to know

■ Andrews used a 21-point outburst in the first quarter to spark a win at Monahans last week. RB Tajh Kelly had 197 yards and one touchdown on 12 carries, while QB Jase Hammack completed 9 of 17 passes for 204 yards and one TD for the Mustangs.

■ Sweetwater had 547 total yards against Snyder last week. Senior QB Kaegan Jeffery was 19-of-22 passing for 272 yards, one touchdown and one interception. Senior WR Bray Amos accounted for 152 total yards and four TDs.

■ Andrews coach Ralph Mason said Sweetwater is a complete change of pace from Monahans as his team goes from facing a wing-T team to a spread team. He said it's going to be key to avoid game-changing mistakes on both sides of the ball.

SEAGRAVES VS. STANTON

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Trinity's Will Brown gets wrapped up by Rankin's Jonathan Storie on Sept. 5 at Red Devil Stadium in Rankin. Trinity is at Sanderson today, Rankin hosts Grandfalls-Royalty.

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Buffalo Stadium, Stanton

On the air: The Fuse (94.3 FM), Big Spring

Records: Stanton 2-2; Seagraves 4-0

Last game: Abernathy 33, Stanton 7; Seagraves 50, Lamesa 7

Last meeting: Stanton defeated Seagraves 37-28 last year

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with temperatures in the mid 70s and a 10 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Stanton coach John Peterson said that the Buffaloes will be without RB/DB Alex Martinez (concussion) and WR/DB Jonathon Tomlinson (concussion) for this game. The Buffs had already lost RB/DB/K Estevan Chavez and OL/DE Aaron Garza for the season with injuries.

■ Despite the loss against a good Abernathy team, Peterson said he saw improvement from his team on both sides of the ball but added that his team's lack of overall depth was too much to overcome.

■ Peterson said the Eagles, who are co-ranked at No. 12 in the latest Associated Press Class 2A poll, are very athletic and RB Cory Kyle is the kind of back that can succeed in any classification. Peterson added that it's going to be important to contain the Eagles' speed, play well on offense and play four solid quarters.

Next: Colorado City at Stanton, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10; Lubbock Trinity at Seagraves, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3

COAHOMA VS. IRAAN

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Brave Stadium, Iraan

On the air: KBST (1490 AM), Big Spring

Records: Coahoma 4-0; Iraan 4-0

Last game: Coahoma 46, Miles 16; Iraan 55, McCamey 14

Last meeting: Coahoma defeated Iraan, 26-0, the last time these two teams played in 1993

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and temperatures in the lower 80s at kickoff

Three things you need to know

■ Coahoma is off to its first 4-0 start since 2008 as the Bulldogs are coming off an impressive win against Miles. Coahoma rushed for 288 of its 374 total yards. FB Joseph Melendez rushed for 95 yards and two TDs, while QB Braxton Iden accounted for three TDs (two rushing).

■ Iraan had no trouble in its win over rival McCamey as the Braves jumped out to a 35-0 halftime lead and out-gained the Badgers 442-144. QB Jarrett Doege passed for 145 yards and accounted for four TDs (three rushing) in the win.

■ Coahoma coach Trey Gardner said Iraan is the most talented team his Bulldogs have faced. He added that the Braves, who are ranked at No. 11 in the latest Class 2A Associated Press poll, have a ton of speed and it's going to be important for his team to control the ball.

Next: Ballinger at Coahoma, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10; Iraan at Sundown, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3

FORSAN AT MILES

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Bulldog Stadium, Miles

Records: Forsan 3-1, Miles 3-1

Last game: Forsan 17, Reagan County 6; Coahoma 46, Miles 16

Last meeting: Forsan beat Miles 25-14 in 2007 and holds a 3-0 lead in the overall series.

Weather forecast: A high around 81 degrees with a 60 percent chance of scattered thunderstorms.

Three things you need to know

■ The Buffaloes have reeled off three wins in three weeks after starting the season with a 6-2 loss to Coahoma. In those three victories, the Buffaloes have outscored their opponents 107-6. The Buffaloes gave up their lone touchdown in that three week span last week against Reagan County.

■ Forsan is off to its best start since 2012 when they started that season 4-0.

■ Miles lost its first game of the season last week against Coahoma. Forsan coach Jason Phillips said the Bulldogs are similar to the Buffaloes in a number of areas, which has made preparation a little bit easier this week.

"They are similar to us offensive and defensively, and that's always good when you are preparing for a team," Phillips said. "It's real similar to what we do on both sides of the ball, and they are a solid football team."

GRADY AT WATER VALLEY

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Wildcat Field, Water Valley

Records: Grady 2-1, Water Valley 2-2

Last game: Grady 66, Rankin 36; Water Valley 74, Anton 71

Last meeting: This is the first meeting between the two teams

Weather forecast: A high around 80 degrees with a 60 percent chance of scattered thunderstorms.

Three things you need to know

■ The Wildcats have rebounded from a tough loss three weeks ago to win their last two games against Lubbock Kingdom Prep and Rankin. Against Rankin last week, E.J. Rodriquez accounted for eight touchdowns — six rushing and two passing.

■ Grady coach Chris Kuykendall said Water Valley has lost some key players from recent years, but still is as physical a team as it has been in the past.

"They are go-getters," Kuykendall said. "They are physical and they come and get you. They are not as fast as they have been in the last couple of years, and their skill guys are not as big."

■ In a wild victory against Anton last week, Water Valley running back Cody Zuniga rushed for 178 yards on nine carries and had four touchdowns. Kade York threw for 143 yards and three touchdowns and also rushed for 102 yards.

Next: New Home at Grady, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3; Water Valley at May, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4

BALMORHEA AT GARDEN CITY

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Bearkat Stadium, Garden City

Records: Garden City 3-1; Balmorhea 2-2

Last game: Garden City 70, Highland 42; Richland Springs 52, Balmorhea 20

Last meeting: This is the first meeting between the two schools.

Weather forecast: A high around 78 degrees is expected with a 30 percent chance of isolated thunder storms.

Three things you need to know

■ This game is not only the first meeting between the two programs but it's also the first time that former Bearkat coach Vance Jones has faced off against his former team. Jones has been at Balmorhea for three years, after leading Garden City to state championships in 2009 and 2010.

"It's going to be a really fun game for us, and me personally because I worked for Vance Jones for several years," Garden City coach Matt Odom said.

■ Garden City rebounded after a loss to Sterling City by using a big fourth quarter to roll past Highland. Isaac Enriquez, Isaiah Enriquez and Ismael Ramirez all rushed for 100 yards in the game.

■ Isaiah Enriquez will be out for today's game because of a broken arm he suffered in the game against Sterling City on Sept. 12.

Next: Robert Lee at Garden City, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3; Balmorhea at Grandfalls-Royalty, 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 3

GRANDFALLS-ROYALTY AT RANKIN

When/where: 7:30 p.m., Red Devil Stadium, Rankin

Records: Rankin 2-2, Grandfalls-Royalty 3-1

Last game: Grady 66, Rankin 36; Grandfalls-Royalty 56, Marfa 22

Last meeting: Rankin beat Grandfalls-Royalty 62-24 in 2008; Rankin holds an 18-11-1 edge in a series that dates back to 1938

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with a high around 80 degrees and a 20 percent chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Rankin will be looking to rebound after its second straight loss. The Red Devils began the season with victories against Balmorhea and Trinity, but have since dropped two straight to Borden County and Grady.

■ The Cowboys, who are the defending Six-Man Division II state champions, rebounded with a victory against Marfa last week. Grandfalls-Royalty, though, has been hit with some recent injuries as they will suit up 10 players for today's game.

■ The Red Devils and the Cowboys have played off and on since 1938, but since both teams have been six-man, Rankin has won all three of those meetings.

Next: Rankin at Sterling City, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10; Balmorhea at Grandfalls-Royalty, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 3

TRINITY AT SANDERSON

When/where: 7:30 p.m. Eagle Stadium, Sanderson

Records: Trinity 3-1; Sanderson 1-3

Last game: Trinity 59, Lubbock Christ The King 0; Fort Davis 50, Sanderson 6

Last meeting: Trinity beat Sanderson 65-20 in 2005; the series is tied at 2-2

Weather forecast: Mostly sunny with a high of 78 and no chance of rain

Three things you need to know

■ Trinity will head on its first extended road trip of the season with the three-plus hour drive to Sanderson. Trinity's only other road trip this season was a trip to Rankin.

■ Trinity has won two straight games since falling to Rankin on Sept. 5. The Chargers have beaten Grandfalls-Royalty and Lubbock Christ the King last week by the mercy rule. Trinity held Lubbock Christ the King to minus-8 total yards last week.

■ The Eagles have had a tough start to the season, losing three of its four games by 40 or more points. Sanderson lost to Grandfalls-Royalty 56-6, Marfa 53-8 and 50-8 in last week's game against Fort Davis.

Husband's first marriage is a shock to his widow

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently passed away, and among his papers I discovered evidence of another previous marriage. It came as a shock because he had never told me.

Should I ask his family how long this previous marriage lasted, or should I let it go and be grateful for the good and loving husband he was during our 27 years together? He was a widower with no kids and I was a widow when we met. What do you think? — NUMBER THREE IN ARIZONA

DEAR NUMBER THREE: Your husband may have been divorced from wife No. 1, or the marriage could have been annulled and he didn't think it "counted." While I agree that you should be grateful for the 27 happy years you spent together, I can't ignore the fact that such an important piece of information was withheld from you. If you have questions and think the family can answer them, you are entitled to know.

DEAR ABBY: My sister is difficult, and our relationship has been extremely rocky over the years. She insists upon doling out unsolicited advice and asking pointed personal questions about my finances, health, sex life, etc. I have told her more than once that these things are none of her business unless I choose to discuss them. Her response is she's "only trying to help."

Our mother died six months ago and my sister is again making overtures. I'm hesitant about speaking with her again because she's so volatile. I'll do it only if she respects my boundaries.

I am searching for the right words to tell her a relationship will work only if both parties respect each other, and that trust has to be earned. I'd appreciate any suggestions. — GUARDED SIBLING IN FLORIDA

DEAR GUARDED SIBLING: Please accept my condolences for the loss of your mother. I am unclear as to why you would want to accept the overtures from someone with whom you have such a difficult relationship. However, because you feel that it would be possible under your terms, my advice is to write her a letter and tell her you will be willing to try only under the circumstances you described to me. To do so would not be rude, and it will be interesting to see if she is able to comply.

DEAR ABBY: I'm being married next year and want to make sure I send written thank-you notes to everyone. I have been a diligent thank-you note writer for years.

Can you tell me what's the best way to get everyone's address? I have had problems with this in the past. I hate having to call and ask because the people always want to know why I want the information. Would it be OK to have as part of the wedding website a place where guests who attend can confirm their mailing address? — BRIDE-TO-BE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BRIDE-TO-BE: How do you plan to invite your guests to the wedding? Most brides send their invitations via U.S. mail, which requires the person's name, address and ZIP code on the envelope.

However, if you plan to issue your invitations online, then I see no reason you can't ask your guests to confirm their information on your wedding site. It wouldn't be a breach of etiquette.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Sept. 26, 2014:

This year you will be able to pull white rabbits out of a black hat. You will manifest at least one of your goals. Your circle of friends expands, and you enjoy your life more. If you are single, Cupid is nearly at your beck and call. If you want a committed relationship, you will have many potential sweeties to choose from. If you are attached, your good luck seems to run off into your relationship. A problem with possessiveness could occur. If it does, that will need to be handled. SCORPIO might be too emotional and intense for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You might find others to be more verbal than usual. You could be overwhelmed by everything you hear. Deal with people directly if you really want to be effective. They will appreciate your time and attention. Tonight: Be imaginative when making plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You might want to understand what is happening with a loved one. Asking questions still might not open him or her up. Simply observing this person could reveal much more about what is going on. Schedule a late lunch. Tonight: The party goes on and on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You'll need to be more open with those around you. Though you might start the day with a Friday mentality, a daily issue could dominate your thoughts by the afternoon. Brainstorm with someone you find to be very creative. Tonight: You might want to head home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You could have a difficult time getting started in the morning, but by the afternoon, you seem to be up for nearly anything. You'll be able to shorten your to-do list if you maintain your focus. Listen to your feelings. Tonight: Make calls to a loved one at a distance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Schedule an important discussion in the morning, when you are more open. By the afternoon, you'll need some quiet time to ponder a personal matter. You have had so little time to yourself lately that you'll really need some downtime. Tonight: Only what you want to do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Check your finances before you make any plans. You could be taken aback by everything you have to do. Lighten up, and just get done what you must. Delight a friend or loved one by inviting him or her to join you once you are free. Tonight: TGIF! Enjoy the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You might need to clear the air and express your thoughts with a specific person or possibly several people. Do it in the morning, when your audience will be more receptive. Understand what is happening with a financial issue. Tonight: Honor your budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Your mood might shift dramatically from the morning to the night. It appears as if you have held yourself back and worried way too much. Once you start a conversation in the afternoon, you could be delighted by the feedback you get. Tonight: Add some romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Use the morning to focus on a specific goal, and understand what your objectives are. Take news with a grain of salt. You might want to pull back and get more facts before making any decisions or acting on the news. Tonight: Not to be found.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You could be taken aback by a situation that pops up from out of nowhere. You'll want to understand more of what a friend expects from you. Realize what is happening within your immediate circle. Don't do anything you don't want to. Tonight: A must appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Keep reaching out to a friend or loved one at a distance. An authority figure might make a demand that you'll feel you must respond to. Make no financial decisions right now, as you easily could make a mistake. Tonight: Read between the lines.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ A conversation in the morning might not resolve a minor issue as you might have hoped it would. You will need to have this conversation all over again later. A trip could be in the offing. Don't allow anything or anyone to interfere. Tonight: Let your imagination rock and roll.

Opening lead: King of ♣

The battle of the boards was raging once again at the club's Saturday night duplicate.

Hard Luck Louie arrived in slam on the given auction. He won the opening spade lead in dummy and led a club to his ace, followed by the queen of clubs. West did not cover and Louie let it ride, winning the trick. Louie thought he was home free. All he had to do was ruff a low club in dummy, draw trumps, and concede one club trick. Louie was devastated when East over-ruffed the third club and returned a trump. With the diamond queen off-side, Louie finished down one.

"The injustice of it all," said Louie. "Clubs 5-2 and the diamond queen offside. If it weren't for bad luck, I'd have no luck at all."

Lucky Larry played the same contract and also received the king of spades lead. He also won in dummy and played a club to his ace. Instead of leading the queen of clubs, however, he led a low club and ruffed it in dummy. Larry followed by drawing trumps and leading the queen of clubs, conceding the king to West. The 5-2 club split was of no importance to Larry — he just discarded his remaining low club on dummy's king of diamonds. Six hearts, bid and made!

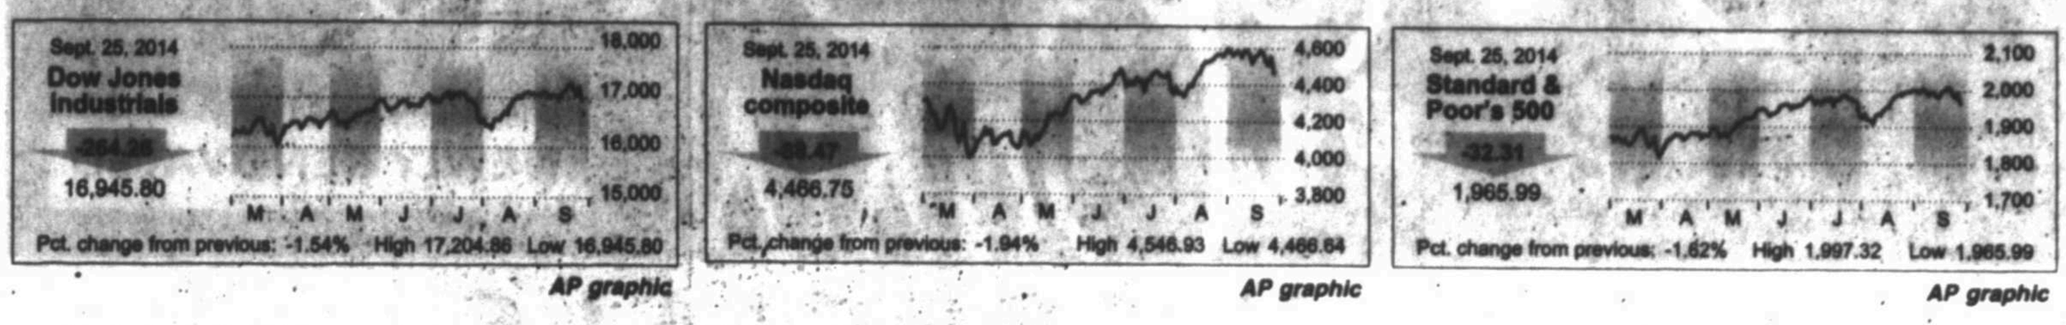
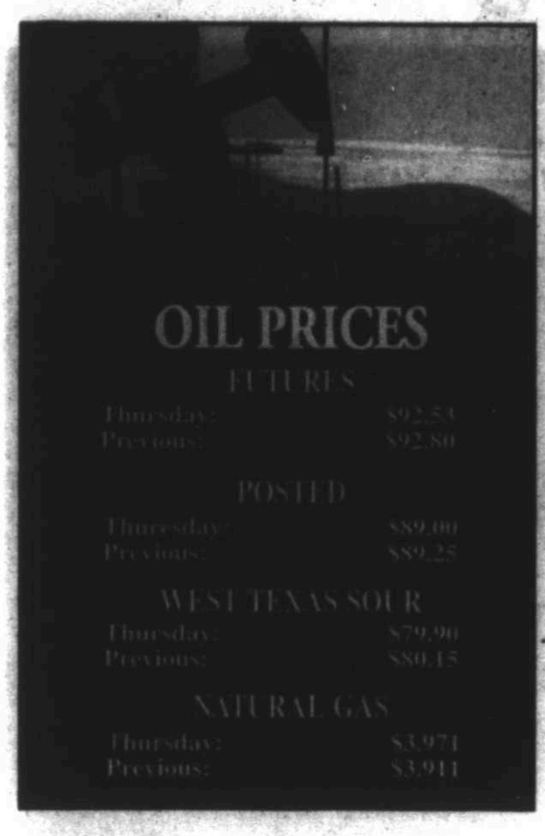
A DAY ON WALL STREET





US Bank refunding $48M to credit card customers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. Bank is refunding about $48 million in the latest federal settlement by a major bank over improper billing for extra credit card products that customers didn't receive.

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau announced the agreement Thursday with U.S. Bank, the sixth-largest bank by assets. The bank was ordered to repay about 420,000 customers who signed up for credit monitoring products and charged for services they didn't receive. In addition, the Minneapolis-based company is paying $9 million in penalties to the CFPB and the Treasury Department agency that oversees national banks.

It was the latest in a string of sanctions against major banks over billing for credit card "add-ons," which are optional products or services sold to cardholders at additional cost. Federal regulators have been examining the financial industry's marketing of add-ons for several years, after consumer complaints and bank inspections alerted them to the problems.

The director of the CFPB, Richard Cordray, has said the agency will "continue cleaning up this market as necessary to ensure that consumers are treated fairly."

The biggest settlement over credit card add-ons was with Bank of America Corp., which agreed in April to pay $772 million in fines and issue refunds to about 2.9 million customers. JPMorgan Chase & Co. paid about $309 million in refunds and $80 million in fines. The CFPB also has taken similar actions with American Express Co., Discover Financial Services and Capital One Financial Corp.

In the U.S. Bank case, the regulators said customers signed up for products that promised to monitor their credit and alert them to potentially fraudulent transactions. Customers were charged for the products as soon as they enrolled, without having given written authorization for the services. They were then billed for services they didn't receive, and unfairly charged interest and fees, the CFPB said.

The fees sometimes pushed customers above the credit limits on their accounts, which led to additional fees. Under the agreement with the CFPB, U.S. Bank is reimbursing customers the amount they paid for the products, as well as interest and any over-limit fees they incurred.

Customers "may have been under the impression" that their credit was being monitored for fraud and identity theft, but in fact those services either weren't being performed at all, or only partially, the agency said.

The add-on programs were serviced by a vendor, Affinion Group. U.S. Bank said it terminated its relationship with Affinion about two years ago.

In a statement, the bank said it intends to compensate the affected customers and issue an apology.

"U.S. Bank adheres to the highest levels of ethical business practices to ensure that customers confidently receive quality products and services from their bank," the statement said. "We regret that errors occurred when our customers purchased credit monitoring and identity theft products from ... Affinion, and that some of our customers did not receive the full benefit of those products."

Apple bites stock market

A stumble by Apple set off the worst rout in the stock market since July on Thursday.

Apple dropped nearly 4 percent following its announcement late Wednesday that it had pulled a software update which prevented users from making phone calls. Other technology stocks also slumped.

The selling started early and picked up strength in the afternoon. By the close of trading, all 30 big companies in the Dow Jones industrial average and the 10 industries in the Standard & Poor's 500 index lost ground.

Most investors said the drop wasn't a sign of worry because the forces behind the market's long rally remain in place. It was only a week ago that the S&P 500 touched a record high, and strong runs are usually followed by short breaks. The index has lost 2 percent this week but is still up 6 percent for the year.

"There's just an absence of real news to chew on," said Mark Luschini, the chief investment strategist at Janney Montgomery Scott. "When you're at a peak, markets need more and more good news to keep climbing."

The S&P 500 index lost 32.31 points, or 1.6 percent, to close at 1,965.99.

The Dow slumped 264.26 points, or 1.5 percent, to close at 16,945.80. The Nasdaq composite, which is dominated by technology companies, dropped 88.47 points, or 1.9 percent, to 4,466.75.

Sears, already struggling, loses key lender

New York Times News Service

With losses piling up, Sears Holdings, the beleaguered retailer owned by billionaire hedge fund manager Edward S. Lampert, has lost a crucial lender when it is most needed.

On Thursday, Fairholme Capital Management, one of Sears' largest shareholders, said it was unable to reach an agreement with St. Joe Co., a Florida real estate company, to participate in a $400 million loan to Sears. Earlier this month, Sears announced that it had turned to Lampert for the $400 million loan.

Fairholme, which has a 23 percent stake in Sears, had been working to broker a loan deal with St. Joe Co. and Lampert's hedge fund ESL Investments to help Sears fend off looming financial losses.

"The St. Joe Company was unable to agree on terms for such a participation in light of its investment criteria and has declined the opportunity to participate," Fairholme said in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Fairholme added that it was in discussions with lenders about providing a smaller short-term loan but did not have any other plans or proposals at the time of the filing. It did not disclose how much St. Joe would have contributed to the $400 million loan.

The timing could not be worse for the Sears, based in Hoffman Estates, Illinois, which has been hemorrhaging money. Last month, the retailer told investors that it lost nearly $1 billion in the first half of the year. The results failed to meet Wall Street analysts' already-pessimistic forecasts, hitting the retailer's share price hard.

Sears, which has been hurt by years of underinvestment in its stores and declining sales, has sold off real estate and spun off businesses like Land's End to stem a negative operating cash flow estimated at $1 billion to $2 billion.
