Reagan: Tax hike last resort

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In another attempt to clarify his stand on a tax increase, President Reagan says he should "never say never" to a tax hike.

■ Mondale attacks Reagan defense policy — Page 2A

Reagan's statement, issued Sunday in Santa Barbara, tries to reconcile divergent views within his administration, but could leave him vulnerable to continuing charges by Walter Mondale. The Democratic presidential nominee maintains Reagan has a "secret plan" to raise taxes in a new term.

Reagan again ruled out an increase in personal income taxes "of working Americans." But he said he agreed with Vice President George Bush that he should keep his options open on raising taxes as "a last resort" to reduce the massive federal budget deficit.

"A president of the United States should never say never, but a tax increase has always been for me a last resort," Reagan said. "I will first want to do everything I can to reduce the deficit by keeping our economy growing and reducing wasteful federal spending."

Reagan arrived in Los Angeles Sunday following a two-week vacation at his ranch near Santa Barbara. He planned to meet later today with American medal winners in the Olympic Games, which concluded Sunday in Los Angeles.

Reagan scheduled a lunch with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, followed by a meeting with Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti.

Officials silent about Reagan's alleged 'bomb Soviet Union' joke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — White House officials maintained a stony silence toward widespread reports that President Reagan had joked into a microphone Saturday that the United States would bomb the Soviet Union "in five minutes."

Gannett News Service, CBS radio and other news outlets all reported that Reagan made the joke while testing a microphone in preparation for his regular weekly radio address, which on Saturday dealt with criticism of the House Democratic leadership.

Reagan was quoted in the CBS report as saying in a clearly joking tone: "My fellow Americans, I am pleased to announce I just signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

It was known that CBS and the Cable News Network recorded Reagan's comment at the time it was made, although neither played the president's words on the air Sunday, when the incident was first reported.

Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, had told an Associated Press reporter who learned of the joke on Saturday that anything the president said before his radio address was "off the record."

It is unlikely the matter would be quickly forgotten since the low state of relations between Moscow and Washington has become an issue in the presidential election campaign.

Reagan's past harsh comments about the Soviet Union, including his now famous "evil empire" speech, have led critics to accuse him of being overly confrontational toward Moscow.

It wasn't the first time that Reagan has made joking comments into the microphone while testing it for his Saturday broadcasts.

Prior to a radio address on Oct. 9, 1982, Reagan joked that the leaders of Poland were "a bunch of no-good lousy bums."

Irish police hunt American

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police searched Roman Catholic west Belfast today for banned IRA sympathizer Martin Galvin after the New York attorney escaped during a police assault on the headquarters of the IRA's political front.

One civilian was killed and 20 wounded, including women and children, when officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary stormed the Sinn Fein headquarters during a rally Sunday, swinging truncheons and firing plastic bullets.

The assault by the predominantly Protestant police force touched off a wave of gasoline bomb attacks on police patrols by Catholic youngsters.

A police spokesman, Inspector Bernie Hamilton, said police were attacked in Catholic areas of Belfast as rioters hijacked cars and set them afire to form blazing barricades.

He said police fired more plastic bullets to disperse the crowds, but no serious casualties were reported. During the hunt for Galvin, police seized caches of milk-bottle gasoline bombs, Hamilton said.

Also Sunday, police reported the death of the 199th officer to be killed since Northern Ireland's sectarian blood feud began its current phase on Aug. 12, 1969. Sunday was the 15th anniversary of that date.

Hamilton said Sgt. Malcolm White, 26, died in the hospital from wounds he suffered in an Irish Republican Army landmine ambush in County Tyrone on Saturday. Sunday's fatalities raised the known death toll in Northern Ireland over the past 15 years to at least 2,386 — 44 of them this year.

The man slain in the police assault was named by Sinn Fein as Sean Downs, 22, was killed when a police officer fired one of the rock-hard plastic bullets at a range of about six feet.

The 4-inch-long plastic bullets were designed to be fired from more than 30 feet at human targets.

The police moved in when Galvin appeared at the rally to defy a British ban on him entering Northern Ireland.

Galvin, 34, is publicity director of the Irish Northern Aid Committee, a Bronx-based fundraising organization that supports the outlawed IRA's guerrilla campaign to end British rule in the two-thirds Protestant province and unite with the Catholic Irish Republic.

The aid committee, in a statement issued today in New York, denounced the police attack as "unprovoked and savage." It also accused the U.S. State Department of collaborating with Britain to curb travel to Northern Ireland by Americans.

Several thousand Catholics, including a 130-member delegation from the aid committee giving clenched fist salutes, attended Sunday's rally, organized by Sinn Fein to mark the 13th anniversary of the introduction of internment without trial for suspected guerrillas on Aug. 9, 1971.

Galvin was introduced by Sinn Fein's president, Gerry Adams. The American emerged from Sinn Fein headquarters and rushed up to the microphone with arms outstretched in a victory salute as the crowd cheered.

Motorist deliberately rams into tourist-filled cable car

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A motorist waited for a tourist-filled cable car, then gunned his engine, crossed a double-yellow line and rammed it at 60 mph, killing himself and sending passengers hurtling through the air, injuring 26 people, authorities said.

"I've never seen one like this, a head-on collision, apparently deliberately, at speed," said Art Curtis, San Francisco Municipal Railway operations manager.

The San Francisco County Coroner's Office has identified the driver of the automobile as in his mid-30s, but is withholding his name pending notification of relatives.

Passengers, mostly tourists, were smashed into windows of the vintage car and some were tossed into the street when the two vehicles collided at 4:40 p.m.

"There was a violent crash and a jerk. The next thing I knew, the gripman was flying past me and through the window," said Christian Holtz, 29, of Los Angeles.

Police estimated the automobile was traveling at 60 mph when it hit the cable car. Investigators found no skid marks, indicating the driver did not try to stop.

Gripman Ray McCann, who was thrown through a glass partition into the passenger area of the cable car, picked himself up and ran back to the controls, bringing the car to a stop after it rolled 1 1/2 blocks, hitting two cars and a van, said Harold Geisenheimer, general manager of the railway system.

"There was a violent crash and a jerk. The next thing I knew, the gripman was flying past me and through the window."

— Passenger Christian Holtz

McCann and 13 injured passengers were taken to San Francisco General Hospital where they were treated for minor injuries, hospital spokeswoman Gloria Rodriguez said. A 73-year-old woman was kept overnight for observation.

Six other passengers were treated and released for cuts and bruises at Mount Zion Hospital, spokeswoman Elaine Levy said. Six others injured in the crash refused treatment.

"When he saw the cable car coming, he bombarded it," said Officer Ray Shine. The driver of the late model sports car was dead at the scene after he slammed into the cable car lumbering up Russian Hill at its usual 9 mph.

Erin Newkirk, 17, of Oklahoma City, Okla., said she barely had time to react before the two vehicles collided and she was thrown out of the cable car.

"We were going up this hill right here and this car came right for us and didn't stop. It knocked me off (the cable car) because I was right up in the front," Miss Newkirk said, adding that this was her first cable car ride and likely to be her last.

William Spence, 37, of Aptos, Calif., was driving the van the cable car hit as it rolled down Hyde Street. "All of a sudden, the cable car was in front of us. I threw the car in reverse and tried to get out of the way. It happened so quickly."

Shine said the motorist waited at the intersection of Hyde and Chestnut streets, just four blocks from the popular Fisherman's Wharf, until the cable car started up the hill.

Then he sped toward the wharf and slammed into the cable car.

Cable cars were stopped 460 times because of accidents, malfunctions and inspections in the fiscal year before the system was shut down in September 1982 for a 20-month, $60 million overhaul.

The overhaul, completed in June, involved laying new track over 69 city blocks, replacing underground pulleys and bringing the cable car barn — the heart of the system — up to 20th century and federal earthquake standards.

The most serious accident in the system's 111-year history occurred in December 1967 when a runaway cable car piled into 10 automobiles, killing two people and injuring 43.

Chairman Angelo would be lost without phone

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Some people are born with a silver spoon in their mouth. Ernest Angelo Jr. was born with a phone glued to his ear.

After being tapped to be arrangements chairman for the Republican National Convention in Dallas, Angelo turned to his best resource for handling the monumental task — the telephone.

His close circle of friends joke about Angelo's inability to pass a phone booth without stopping and making a call — even if the plane is leaving in four minutes. But it's that organization and delegation of authority that has helped Angelo survive the volunteer job.

As the convention neared, Angelo would spend his weeks in Dallas and his weekends in Midland at his office working to earn a viable income at his petroleum engineering business.

But they were not quiet weekends. The jangle of the telephone constantly interrupted his concentration on the week's worth of mail stacked on his desk. Peering through his silver-rimmed glasses, Angelo would mentally sort through problems on a well, difficulties on convention arrangements or places to put teen-agers to work.

FOR 1 1/2 YEARS, Angelo has officially carried the title of convention arrangements chairman, although he's been working on the once-every-four-years event for more than two years.

The job of chairman is a new one this time, he said. "The rules were changed in 1980 to have a convention arrangements chairman." Previously, the chairman of the Republican National Committee also was responsible for setting up the convention.

Although the jobs were separated, Angelo still works closely with RNC Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr. The working association is one with which Angelo is familiar. As mayor of Midland from 1972-80, Angelo worked with the city manager on a similar basis.

As arrangements chairman, Angelo handles the strategy and political responsibility; Fahrenkopf tackles the day-to-day problems.

Operating on an $8 million budget, the Midlander's job has ranged from getting acceptable contracts with the city, putting together a staff, selecting contractors, constructing the podium and platform — which is the focal point for millions of television viewers for four nights — designing the seating chart, putting in sound and lighting to meet certain standards, allocating tickets, expanding viewing for volunteers and guests by putting in closed circuit television in a nearby hall and meeting the requests of 10,000 media representatives.

ON TOP OF THAT, everything must meet the consent of the Secret Service and FBI, he said.

The campaign and White House staffs have planned the program, "which is the main thing the convention will present to the public." Angelo's handiwork will only be viewed behind-the-scenes.

The biggest hurdle to clear has been in allocation of tickets, Angelo said. "There's so much greater demand for tickets and you have to make some tough decisions. There are many categories of people who won't get as many as they thought."

The demand, he indicated, comes because the convention is in Dallas. "It's a friendly atmosphere. Support for the president in Dallas-Fort Worth is probably stronger than any other comparably-sized urban area in the United States. We could have filled the hall with people from Dallas-Fort Worth."

Although guest tickets for Texans are in short supply, the state has gained one advantage this year with the convention location and arrangements chairman. Texas delegates no longer have to sit at the back of the hall, as they did in 1976 at Kansas City, Mo. These delegates will have a front row-center location, as will the California delegation, according to Angelo.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Midland got brief rainfall;
There's no chance for more

Although one brief shower passed over Midland this morning, no rain was recorded overnight and it looks as though that's the way the it's going to stay.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, partly cloudy skies and a less than 20 percent chance of isolated thunderstorms is in the forecast for tonight. Tuesday should be mostly sunny with no mention of rain, leaving statistics around 2.11 inches recorded for the month and 9.09 inches for the year.

Temperatures are expected to drop into the middle 60s tonight and climb near 90 Tuesday.

Winds tonight should blow from the southeast at 5-10 mph, increasing to 5-15 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 87 missed the record high of 107, set in 1936, by 20 degrees. The overnight low of 67 was six degrees warmer than 1931's record low of 61.

STATE

A weak surface air mass brought scattered showers and thunderstorms today from the southern high plains of West Texas to the Coastal Bend, and forecasters predicted rainfall should continue in western and eastern sections.

The National Weather Service said dense fog was reported on the Texas Gulf Coast near Houston and near College Station. And skies were cloudy in the upper coastal plains, South Central Texas and much of the Edwards Plateau, High Plains and Panhandle.

Elsewhere in the state, skies were clear. Winds were light and variable in most areas. Temperatures ranged from the 60s to 70s. Extreme low readings were 59 degrees at Marfa and 78 at Kingsville.

The weather service said scattered thunderstorms were expected over western, central and northern sections of the state through Tuesday.

Skies should be mostly cloudy over much of South Texas, with numerous thunderstorms, the weather service said. Otherwise, partly cloudy conditions were expected with widely scattered thunderstorms over West and East Texas.

High temperatures Tuesday should range from 93 to 98 in North Texas, with scattered afternoon thunderstorms.

In West Texas, highs Tuesday were expected from the mid 80s in the Panhandle to the upper 90s in the Big Bend of the Rio Grande.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms erupted at scattered locations across the upper Ohio Valley early today and fanned out over the mid-Atlantic states, the southern Atlantic Coast and the Gulf Coast states.

Up to 8 inches of rain fell over the weekend in the Virginias, and rains threatened more flooding today. On Sunday, about 60 residents of Armstrong County in western Pennsylvania were evacuated in floods, and 14 West Virginia counties were under a flood watch early today.

Other storms hit the lower Mississippi Valley, eastern Colorado and northern New Mexico, the northern Rockies and northern Nevada.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms to be scattered from New England to Florida, then across the Gulf Coast states to central Texas.

Scattered thunderstorms also were expected from Montana through the Great Basin to the southern Rockies.

Sunny skies dominated the Plains, the mid-Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley.

High temperatures were expected in the 70s in parts of Maine, the upper Great Lakes, western Washington and along the northern two thirds of the Pacific Coast.

Readings of 100 were predicted across much of North Dakota, rising as high as 110 over the desert Southwest; the 90s over the northern Rockies and the remainder of the Plains; and the 80s elsewhere.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 48 degrees at Marquette, Mich., to 92 at Yuma, Ariz.

Towns trying to forget
tornadoes 4 1/2 months ago

BENNETTSVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Rubble litters parking lots, 200 families make do in trailers and tree stumps stand where oaks once offered shade — signs that it will take years to "get rid of the reminders" of the tornadoes that plowed through the Carolinas 4 1/2 months ago.

On March 28, a series of tornadoes toppled homes, churches and businesses; tore trees from the ground; and killed 59 people and injured 1,800 others.

Budget cuts left National Weather Service offices in the Carolinas understaffed, weakening the tornado warning system, members of a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration survey team said last week. And a more sophisticated radar unit, which reportedly won't be available until the end of the decade, would have detected tornadoes that were not picked up, the NOAA report said. But for the people who lived through them, it's rebuilding and turning to other matters that count. There was a recent sheriff's race in Bennettsville, S.C., that took people's minds off it.

But there are plenty of reminders in towns like Bennettsville, Newberry, Winnsboro and McComb, S.C., and in Red Springs, N.C., among the hardest hit by the tornadoes' fury.

Shopping carts, a time clock hanging by a wire and glass litter the Northwood Shopping Center parking lot. The center itself remains in piles of bulky metal, its future uncertain as its Atlanta owners mull over insurance proceeds, Weaver said.

Off to one side is a makeshift drug store, open for business in a trailer since April.

Mondale attacks Reagan defense policy

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is expanding his long-distance debate with President Reagan to defense policy this week, accusing Reagan of weakening national security with a foolish military spending binge that has done nothing to improve U.S. armed forces.

"The question in this campaign is not whether we can afford to be strong. We can, and we must," Mondale said Sunday in a paid radio address broadcast nationally. "The question is how to strengthen America, how to invest in defense that is smart, lean and tough."

Mondale was underscoring the theme today by meeting with his former rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Gary Hart, who also is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and an advocate of military spending reform.

Also attending the meeting at a Minneapolis hotel was Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on defense, and Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., a member of the House Armed Services Committee. Former Pentagon officials also were attending. During their often-bitter race for the Democratic nomination, Hart advocated military spending cuts of about $140 billion over five years, laying out specific policies and weapons he would change or drop. He challenged Mondale to be as specific.

Now, Hart has pledged to back Mondale and is offering advice on defense policy.

Beginning Tuesday, Mondale is scheduled to make a four-state southern swing that will conclude Wednesday evening.

It will be his third campaign trip in as many weeks.

On Tuesday, Mondale will be in Little Rock, Ark., and Memphis, Tenn. On Wednesday, he will visit Louisville, Ky., and Macon, Ga

NATION IN BRIEF

Attorney to ask for death penalty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charges that a man convicted of two killings also committed five other "trailside slayings" will be significant in arguing that he deserves the death penalty, a prosecutor says.

Santa Cruz County District Attorney Arthur Danner said he will ask a jury to order death in the gas chamber for David Carpenter, 34.

The penalty phase begins today to decide whether Carpenter should be executed or imprisoned for life for the killings of two 20-year-old women in Northern California parks.

Carpenter has not yet been tried on charges he killed five people along trails in Marin County in 1980.

Altitude may have caused act

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — High altitude may have caused a man with a pair of scissors to act "very erratically," prompting a Frontier Commuter flight to make an unscheduled landing, police said.

The man, Leander W. Duhring, 33, of San Francisco, was released without charges after the landing in Cheyenne, police said.

Thin air at high altitude sometimes causes people to "act real dumb," Sgt. Blaine Smith said, adding that Duhring apparently did not threaten anyone during the flight carrying 39 passengers from Denver to River-ton on Saturday, Smith said.

Test underway to test materials

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Tests are being done on food and other materials at a Mississippi farmhouse where a pesticide has killed a second child and made five other children sick, authorities said.

Pamela Murphy, 4, of rural Tunica, Miss., died Sunday at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center, eight days after the death of her sister, Sonya, 11, hospital spokesman John Donica said.

Their five siblings have been released from the hospital, he said.

Mississippi medical experts said methyl parathion apparently was sprayed at the home two weeks ago to kill spiders, but they were not sure exactly how the children became sick.

Explosion not connected to bombs

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — An explosion that critically injured a 21-year-old man has no connection to a series of pipe bombs found in the Midwest in May and June, authorities said.

Bruce A. Niederhuth, of Prospect Heights lost his hands, nose and an eye in the blast, and was in critical condition today at Cook County Hospital, a spokesman said.

A pipe, some wire and a burned dry-cell battery were found at the site of the explosion near the Great Lakes Naval Station, said North Chicago police Sgt. Patrick Boyland. No charges were filed Sunday.

A suspect in the 21 bomb plantings in the Midwest is in custody in St. Cloud, Minn.

Thirty arrested after protest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirty leftist demonstrators who tried to rally at a statue of actor John Wayne were turned back by police, and seven people were arrested in the melee that followed, authorities said.

In the fray after Saturday's protest organized by the Revolutionary Communist Party Youth Brigade against the Olympics and American nationalism, three demonstrators and a policeman were slightly hurt, said Sgt. Richard Roach.

Six protesters remained in jail Sunday on charges including investigation of carrying a deadly weapon and inciting a riot, said Officer Robert Arguello. A seventh, arrested on a misdemeanor charge, was released, Arguello said.

Family stands nude on highway

VANDALIA, Ill. (AP) — Four members of a family were found standing nude in the middle of an interstate highway as their injured 6-month-old baby lay unconscious nearby, authorities said.

The mother, Josie Mills, 37, had told her family that their clothes were cursed, said state trooper Harold Brooks. Mrs. Mills was taken to the Anna Mental Health and Development Center about 30 miles north of Cairo, he said.

The father, Roosevelt Mills, 43, was charged with endangering the lives and health of a child, Brooks said. Mills posted a $100 cash bond and was released, the officer said.

The baby boy was listed in serious condition Sunday at St. John's Hospital in Springfield, hospital spokeswoman Aggie Hayner said.

A Fayette County deputy sheriff who spotted the St. Louis family standing on Interstate 70 Saturday afternoon was unable to get the four to move, so he radioed for help, Brooks said.

Walesa calls for release of leader

NEW YORK (AP) — The release of Solidarity leader Bogdan Lis from prison would "be a sure sign that something is really changing" in Poland, Lech Walesa said in a U.S. television broadcast.

Walesa hailed Poland's recent amnesty for political prisoners, but said more steps are needed to end his country's political divisions.

The interview was recorded Thursday in Gdansk, Poland, and televised Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Kroc thanks contributors for funds to heirs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joan Kroc, widow of McDonald's Corp. founder Ray Kroc, took out full-page ads in two newspapers this weekend to thank people who contributed to a fund for survivors of the July 18 McDonald's shooting spree.

Mrs. Kroc established the fund the day after James Oliver Huberty killed 21 people and injured 19 in a crowded McDonald's restaurant in neighboring San Ysidro. Huberty was slain by a police marksman.

The fund now stands at about $1.3 million, including a $100,000 contribution from Mrs. Kroc and a $1 million donation by McDonald's Corp. The fund is also expected to receive about $200,000 from a tennis benefit last week in San Diego which featured Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl.

Mrs. Kroc's letter appeared Sunday in The San Diego Union and the San Diego County edition of the Los Angeles Times.

It read, in part, "Your outpouring of generosity and caring for the innocent victims of the San Ysidro tragedy has demonstrated that our community has responded in the true spirit of brotherhood."

"I believe that the people of San Ysidro whose lives have been shattered can, with their strength, and our help and prayers, begin to restore and rebuild their lives. I am proud to be a San Diegan."

Meanwhile, tourists wanting a glimpse of the site of the worst one-day mass killing by a gunman in the nation's history are visiting the abandoned McDonald's restaurant by the thousands.

"You should see this place on weekends. There must be thousands coming by here," said H. Collier, one of the security guards hired by McDonald's Corp. to protect the building in the border community 20 miles south of San Diego.

"We made a special trip to come here," said Nena DePeralta of Washington, D.C., as she stood outside with her sister, Tessie Remonte, of London, England.

"This is the first place I wanted to see after I got here," said Ms. Remonte. "I just had to see it for myself because I'd read so much about it and I saw it on TV."

McDonald's initially intended to reopen the establishment but changed its mind because of vigorous opposition in the community.

Crews hired by the company have removed all corporate logos and trademarks from the building, but no decision has been made about what to do with the property or the building on it. A brick and steel fence around it has been adorned with placards and flowers in memory of the victims.

A loose-knit group of community activists is waging a petition drive in hopes of convincing McDonald's to turn the site into a memorial park.

About 30,000 signatures have been collected on the petitions, including those of visitors from all over the United States and from Ireland, Germany, Canada and France, said Tom Arena, a volunteer in the petition drive.

Not all residents in this predominantly Hispanic community favor a memorial park.

Heavily promoted 'Call to Glory' lives up to ABC network's hype

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was 1962 — before the Beatles, before men on the moon, before cable TV. John Kennedy was in the White House and Ronald Reagan was in Hollywood. America was proud being America, and it didn't need to show it with flag pins waving in its lapels. Life may or may not have been better, but the recalled perception was that it was less complicated. It was easier to separate heroes from villains. The military was mostly right, and strong family values existed without being worn so openly on political sleeves.

That's the spirit and setting behind ABC's "Call to Glory," the heavily promoted series that, for once, lives up to network hype. It starts tonight.

But if you've been watching ABC's Summer Olympics, you know that, having seen promotional snippets the past two weeks that add up to more time than the two-hour opener.

Stated simply, this episode of "Call to Glory" is the best series program ABC has done in recent memory. The show about a test pilot and his family in the 1960s is not about the military; it's about humanity with a military backdrop.

Tonight's storyline believably integrates the real Cuban missile crisis of 1962. Col. Raynor Sarnac (Craig T. Nelson) commands a squadron of pilots who fly reconnaissance missions over Cuba to take detailed pictures of suspected Soviet-built offensive missiles there.

The show is packed with realistic tension, breathtaking aerial footage

(most of it real Air Force flying), and it explores all facets of the emotional rollercoaster experienced by an always ready-to-air flyboy's family.

The series will have five more episodes this summer, then return with seven more as a replacement for one of ABC's inevitable cancellations.

It's precisely because this series, created by filmmakers Jon Avnet and Steve Tisch ("Risky Business"), is so unlike ABC's standard fare of glitter, car chases and fantasy that the network is working hard to interest its regular audience by placing "Call to Glory" against rerun competition right after the extraordinary promotional exposure of the Olympics.

"ABC is letting us go on the air preserving the spirit and heart of the pilot (first episode)," said Tisch. "They haven't asked us to give them a jeep crash or plane crash every 20 minutes."

Nelson will remind viewers of Gary Cooper: strong, solid and stoic. He's a character worthy of respect for his beliefs and values, not because he can fly a plane at daredevil speeds. Nelson remembers being "anti-everything" in the 60s. "I was a drama major," he said.

Sarnac's family includes wife Vanessa (Cindy Pickett), a strong-minded and supportive woman, and three children.

Sixteen-year-old Jackie (Elisabeth Shue) is in that limbo period between silly adolescent and serious teenager. She wants her grandfather (Keenan Wynn) to teach her to fly, but her mother forbids it.

Wesley (David Hollander) is 12, a bit bratty and very interested in G.I. R.L.S. Eight-year-old R.H. has stopped talking, apparently because he's seen pilots go down and fears for his father's life. Also, paranoia was in the air. School air-raid drills were big back then.

Events of the '60s, supported by newsreel footage like tonight's speeches by Kennedy on Cuba and U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson's famous "hell freezes over" remark to the Soviets, will provide emotional and historical context.

Tisch said some future stories will involve reactions to Kennedy's assassination, the impact of Martin Luther King and even how the Beatles' appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" changes Jackie's life.

Music plays an important role here, with songs such as "I Know Something About Love," "Surfin' Safari" and "There's a Summer Place" helping define the time period. The producers pored over old Life magazines to reproduce the era's clothing and hairstyles.

Two shows with a military setting, NBC's "For Love and Honor" and CBS' "Emerald Point, N.A.S.," failed last season, but "Call to Glory" has much more going for it. Human beings actually are underneath those uniforms.

The only "military" show that succeeded recently was "M.A.S.H.," which, of course, lambasted the army's macho mentality from the safe perspective of the pre-Vietnam '50s.

Is the nation ready for another military series, especially one that treats the military seriously, sensitively and, so far, sympathetically?

Yes — as long as "Call to Glory" continues to manifest warmth, credibility and compelling drama, while its military portrayal is realistic, human and not too heavy on hardware and a gung-ho, damn-the-consequences mindset.

Group begins nationwide tour

MARY CAMPBELL
Newsfeatures Writer

Crosby, Stills and Nash are on the road again. They're out for two months, with a possible two or three-week extension. "We've still got songs to sing and things to say," Graham Nash says.

"I think it started from interest from promoters anticipating a hot summer and they'd taken a chance on us last time and been very successful and they wanted to do it this time." Nash adds, "Almost everybody was afraid to go out this summer, thinking the Jacksons have taken all the audience."

The tour starts just as Stephen Stills' new album, "Right by You," on Atlantic, and single, "Stranger," are released. He says, "I used synthesizers and lots of kids' new toys this time." He sings rhythm 'n' blues with Michael Finnigan. Nash sang on five numbers. Stills says, "I'm going to demand that Nash finish his solo album. I feel he has one in him he needs to get out of his system."

For anybody who doesn't remember their history, David Crosby from the Byrds, Stills from Buffalo Springfield and Nash from the Hollies got together in 1968. The first album in 1969, "Crosby, Stills and Nash," contained the single "Marakesh Express."

Nell Young, also from Buffalo Springfield, joined and made it Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young in 1970 and '71. Briefly, it was Crosby, Stills, Nash, Young, Taylor and Reeves, when Greg Reeves and Dallas Taylor joined the line.

Through the mid-1970s it was no group at all. But mostly it has been Crosby, Stills and Nash. They went on the road as a threesome for the first time in 1977, after the "CSN" album. And sometimes, after an argument, it was no group again, solo careers instead. Did they ever think, during one of those splittings that they'd never play together again?

"No," says Crosby. "It's been bad but never that bad," agrees Nash.

And the arguing when they're together is more under control now, they say. Stills says, "I found myself raising my voice in rehearsal not long ago. I thought David wasn't listening to me. I was mortified. Once, it would have turned into a major deal and lasted for hours."

"But I didn't raise my voice back, did I?" asks Crosby.

"But you didn't notice that later on in the afternoon I did just what you said," Stills exults. "And then I went back to what I was doing before."

"We care about each other a lot. We're learning," Crosby says. "The longer we live, the more we realize the time we spend together gets to be more and more precious and we treasure it more."

Stills says, "I think the good Lord got it backwards. Where is the young body that should go with this wisdom?"

"It's right here, Steve," answers Nash, the still-elim member of the trio.

"We gave you that passport; we can take it back," Stills threatens.

Nash was born in Blackpool, England and he became a U.S. citizen on Crosby's birthday in 1960. "I got quite emotional about it," he says. "I felt quite moved. It was in the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion. Crosby and I did a successful concert there once."

In 1962, in a Dallas nightclub where Crosby was playing a solo show, police found cocaine and a gun in his dressing room. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to five years. His lawyers are appealing. "I'm not a bad guy," Crosby says. "Somehow I hope it will work out all right."

Crosby, Stills and Nash toured in the United States in 1962 and in Europe in 1963. Atlantic brought out "Allies" in 1963. "Daylight Again," which started as a Stills and Nash record and was worked on more than a year, came out in 1962. Art Garfunkel sang on the title song. When Crosby joined the project, he says, "I asked them to keep it. I only wanted to add to it rather than replace it."

"In a lot of places it's four of us, with Michael Finnigan," Stills says. "There were a couple of places," Crosby says, quickly changing that to, "somewhere between a lot and a couple." He adds, "We don't argue as much as everybody thinks."

"Yes, we do," says Stills. "We do not," responds Crosby. A lively exchange leads the three into several Monty Python routines, with Stills acting out the Minister of Silly Walks and Philosophers Football. "I'd like to become them," Stills says. "They can become us when they want to play music."

No games to play

The 1984 Olympics have come and gone, just as did the 1980 Olympics, and Soviet troops are still mired in Afghanistan, fighting what seems increasingly an endless war with resistance rebel forces. The United States' boycott of the 1980 Games now seems as futile as the Soviets' boycott of this summer's competition.

Shortly after Russian tanks rolled into Afghanistan more than 4½ years ago, a number of observers speculated it would only be a matter of months until resistance was conquered and the Soviets mopped up and headed home. Those observers underestimated the resolve of the fierce mountain rebels and any number of other difficulties the Russians have encountered.

"Afghanistan's geography — its wild contours, hidden bright green valleys and baked mud villages — is its best defense," noted a recent edition of The Economist. "The country's roads are few and poor; most of it is passable only on foot. Tanks may be ideal for rolling over Europe; they are of limited use in Afghanistan."

That isn't to indicate that the Soviets won't ultimately work their will in Afghanistan. It is to indicate that they're not finding a people who will just roll over and play dead at the first sign of conflict and a hospitable terrain in which to carry out their warfare. What the Soviets have found in Afghanistan is a little like what Americans found in Southeast Asia in the Vietnam War: A protracted battleground with mounting casualties and an unconventional adversary.

Of course the Soviets aren't plagued with visible dissent from a segment of the Russian people, like Americans were during their Vietnam. But then, the old men in the Kremlin don't care for dissent.

Regardless, what the Soviets aren't finding in Afghanistan are fun — and Olympic Games.

Another View:

Agent Orange action

A series of events this summer has moved the Agent Orange dispute toward resolution. A legal framework for resolving uncertainties and conflicting claims is being constructed.

At the same time, progress is being made by doctors and scientists who are trying to determine what diseases and defects, if any, can be linked to Agent Orange.

In May, parties to a civil lawsuit filed in New York announced a tentative settlement. The action, alleging a wide variety of injuries, had been brought by Vietnam veterans against seven companies that produced the chemical.

The potential costs of litigation were astronomical and can be illustrated by the fact that more than 1,000 lawyers were involved in the case. And there is no assurance at all that the veterans would have collected anything after years of litigation.

Juries are thought to be favorable to the former servicemen, but since there is not firm scientific evidence as yet that more than two or three rare disorders are linked with Agent Orange, many legal observers believed that a generous verdict would have been overturned on appeal.

Without conceding that there is a connection between the chemical and any illness, the parties have agreed to the creation of a fund of $180 million that will accumulate interest and eventually be distributed to those with valid claims.

The mechanics of adjudicating these claims have not yet been settled, but the veterans have been assured a good deal of money, and the chemical companies have been saved the enormous expense of drawn-out litigation.

This week, Judge Jack B.

Weinstein, who is handling the case, begins a series of hearings around the country before deciding whether to accept this settlement. The alternative involves high risk and big money for all the parties.

While this private litigation is proceeding, some veterans have been seeking disability compensation from the federal government. All but a few of these claims have been rejected by the Veterans Administration because the connection between Agent Orange and disability has not been proved.

Last month the Senate passed a bill directing the VA to set up a mechanism for processing claims if and when they are verified.

A scientific advisory board will make initial judgments; regulations — reviewable by courts — are to be drawn up, and in all cases, the benefit of the doubt is to go to the veteran.

This bill is a great improvement over the House version, and the Senate is expected to prevail in a conference to be held next month.

Scientific studies ordered by Congress are proceeding, but take time. The major epidemiological survey by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta will take another four or five years.

But later this month the first part of the CDC study — on birth defects and Agent Orange — will be released. If a link is shown, a new veteran compensation program will have to be enacted, since only disabilities suffered by veterans themselves are now covered.

If no evidence of a connection is produced, these most difficult and emotionally charged cases will probably be set aside. Steadily and sensibly, this troubling legacy of the Vietnam War is being moved to resolution.

President Reagan's SECRET PLAN to Raise taxes:

JACK ANDERSON

Statements contradict senator

WASHINGTON — Witnesses have given the Senate Ethics Committee sworn statements that contradict Sen. Mark Hatfield's account of his dealings with Greek arms merchant Basil Tsakos.

After I raised questions about the Tsakos-Hatfield relationship, the Oregon Republican asked the committee to investigate the matter to clear his name. His request came after the committee had already taken affidavits from two former employees of Tsakos.

According to the sworn statements, which have been obtained by my associate Corky Johnson, the employees believe Hatfield did not give the press an accurate account of the Tsakos affair.

They dispute, for example, Hatfield's explanation of the money that Tsakos paid to the senator's wife, Antoinette. They say that payments totaling about $40,000 were made to Mrs. Hatfield during the same two-year period that the senator was helping Tsakos promote a $15 billion trans-African pipeline project.

The senator contends that the money was a "finder's fee" for his wife's work in locating a Watergate condominium for Tsakos and a professional fee for her consultation on remodeling the apartment.

But Tsakos' former employee, Marilyn Mangan, accused Hatfield in her sworn statement of "lying about the money received by his wife." The affidavit called the senator's account "a significant transgression of public good faith, of outright lies." Ms. Mangan also said the Greek arms merchant treated Hatfield like an "errand boy."

Here are other details from the sworn statement:

— Tsakos' former personal assistant, Margaret Stocker, said that she was the one who had supervised the Watergate apartment renovation and that Mrs. Hatfield was not involved. "Mrs. Hatfield was never anywhere near the apartment when it was redone," the affidavit states.

It was inconceivable that Mrs. Hatfield could have been consulted, Ms. Stocker claims, because of the "totally Greek style" of the renovation. "He was making a Greek temple out of it," the affidavit says.

According to Ms. Stocker, Tsakos first hired the Lascaris Design Group, run by a Greek, Climis Lascaris. Many of the furnishings were imported from Greece, she adds.

Fran Cowan, the decorator from Lascaris who handled the job, also told my associate that Mrs. Hatfield was not involved.

When Lascaris dropped out over a money dispute, the Tsakos assistant recounts, Greek architect Jason Rizos was brought over from Athens to continue the work. During that time, Ms. Stocker swears, she hired all the workers and was with Mrs. Tsakos when the drapes and carpets were selected. She also kept the books and wrote the checks for the renovation. She issued no funds to Mrs. Hatfield, Ms. Stocker says, and the senator's wife was never mentioned.

Ms. Stocker also attests that she wrote a check for $5,000 to Susan Hurley, for setting up the apartment purchase. Ms. Hurley told my associate it was she, not Mrs. Hatfield, who introduced the Tsakoses to the apartment sellers, David and Sarah Yerkes.

Two of the checks delivered to Mrs. Hatfield were written to "the bearer" and recorded as paid to "A.H." Ms. Stocker said. Tsakos often used initials or "code names" in recording checks whose purpose he did not want to disclose, she said.

Hatfield has said he didn't know about Tsakos' attempt to sell attack helicopters to Iran from Tsakos' Washington office. But Ms. Mangan says she delivered a telex from Tsakos' Athens office detailing the Iranian deal to Hatfield's Georgetown home last April, with a note from her warning the senator that it was only "the tip of the iceberg."

Hatfield acknowledged receiving a report that outlined Tsakos' alleged criminal record in Greece, but said he gave the report to his lawyer, Henry Lavine, who reported back that Tsakos was "clean." But Lavine was also Tsakos' attorney at the time, and he later resigned when Tsakos reportedly would not disclose certain payments he had made in Europe.

Meanwhile, Greece's assistant attorney general, Anthony Vgontzas, confirmed by telephone the authenticity of the report on Tsakos. Vgontzas said Tsakos had been convicted of six felonies.

WHOPPER OF THE WEEK: Some bureaucrats will go to any length to save face, apparently. I recently reported that the Energy Department had finally closed down the nuclear weapons assembly plant at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico after four years of warnings that it was vulnerable to terrorist attacks.

Los Alamos officials refused to comment on the matter to my office. Instead, they released their own weird version of the episode to a local newspaper, the Los Alamos Monitor.

Los Alamos laboratory director Donald Kerr was quoted as stating it was his decision to shut down the weapons plant, saying:

"If people were going to be in a position to criticize us for hypothetical incidents ... it's impossible to devise a security system that's immune to every hypothetical incident. ... So rather than try and outwit the scenario writers, we said, 'To heck with it, we'll move it.'"

The truth that Kerr is so reluctant to admit is spelled out in a letter from Energy Secretary Donald Hodel to Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., whose investigators had unearthed the safety problems at Los Alamos. Hodel wrote that the decision to shut down the facility was made by DOE's "field office manager" — not the lab — "immediately upon receipt of confirmed findings" of substandard security.

Ferraro finds gold at Olympics

WASHINGTON — The late decision by Rep. Geraldine Ferraro to enjoy unprecedented television coverage by attending Sunday's Olympic closing ceremonies points up how the White House masters of media politics missed the boat in Los Angeles.

President Reagan and Vice President George Bush not only were not present for the finale but did not attend a single competitive event.

Thanks to nervous security men, the president did not get the full exposure of his appearance at the opening of the Games by going onto the field at the Los Angeles Coliseum. A seldom-used underground tunnel would have given Reagan maximum protection.

A footnote: Ferraro's appearance at the closing ceremonies was suggested by Joe Cerrell, a Los Angeles-based political consultant who is a member of the Coliseum Commission. State Assembly Speaker Willie Brown invited her, but made clear privately he had no interest in Walter F. Mondale as a substitute if Ferraro could not attend.

tary advisers in El Salvador.

Weinberger fears that if military support for the Salvadoran government gets too visible, Reagan will have even more trouble getting Congress to keep the aid program going. That position is backed by uniformed Pentagon chiefs, with Vietnam still very much in mind. That dictates no more than 51 American advisers in El Salvador and about 800 U.S. troops in neighboring Honduras.

Shultz argued hard on diplomatic grounds for an increase in the U.S. presence, but lost in the White House. Even with the hold-down, congressional willingness to keep the aid program financed at levels Reagan wants is still nip and tuck.

PLATFORM POLITICS

Grumbling by members of the Republican Platform Committee about President Reagan's emissary, former transportation secretary Drew Lewis, peaked when he handed an early version drafted by the executive committee to maverick liberal Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut.

Weicker, a Platform Committee member but not on the executive committee, has been an across-the-board critic of Reagan policies. Consequently, loyalist Republican senators, unable to locate a committee draft, complained bitterly. Lewis also is blamed by Platform Committee members for news leaks that they have bowed to the White House on tax language.

The highly-regarded Lewis got off to a bad start with the executive committee when he informed them that the White House would run a policy office in Dallas under senior presidential aide Richard Darman, not a favorite of several committee members (especially the chairman, Rep. Trent Lott). White House chief of staff James A. Baker III later reassured the committee there would be no such office.

NO' ON JERUSALEM
Even though he chairs the Republican platform foreign policy subcommittee and looms as a potential successor to Ronald Reagan, Rep. Jack Kemp failed to win a plank pledging to move the American Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

The opposition to Kemp was formidable: a promise by Reagan to veto any bill Congress sends him ordering transfer of the embassy as advocated by the pro-Israeli bloc in Congress and the government of Israel.

The veto promise doomed Kemp's effort. It also leaves the Democrats, who have pledged since their 1976 platform to move the embassy, ahead of the Republicans on the most emotional issue between the U.S. and Israel. But the GOP platform will contain a resolution condemning anti-Semitism that the Democratic National Convention refused to consider for fear of offending the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

BULGARIA GOES SCOT-FREE
Although a formal Italian government finding of major Bulgarian complicity in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II is expected soon, House conferees refused to go along with Senate language gently punishing the Soviet satellite.

The Senate appropriations for the Commerce Department ruled out U.S. trade help for American businesses in Bulgaria, effectively cancelling U.S. participation in an early-autumn trade fair in Plovdiv. But when the bill got to conference with the House, the effort to express U.S. anguish and anger at Bulgarian links to the assassination attempt was excised at House insistence.

That comports with Reagan administration silence during long legal proceedings in Rome that have tied Bulgaria to Mehmet Ali Agca, the would-be assassin. Nothing whatever is likely to be said officially in Washington until the Bulgarian connection is proved beyond a shadow of doubt.

Deficits really not main issue

In advance of the presidential debate, here is a question for both Walter Mondale and Ronald Reagan: Why are you trying to con us on the question of deficits?

If I break that question down the game will be clearer. If indeed Mondale and the Democratic Party were serious about controlling deficits, then they would not have to wait until after the election to do something about them.

There are right now 267 Democrats in the House of Representatives and only 167 Republicans. The Democrats have a 100 vote majority, control of all committees and control of the agenda. There is no way House Republicans or President Reagan could stop the Democrats if they, in fact, wanted to pass a budget with a two-thirds reduction in the deficit.

Whether it passed the Senate or ran into a presidential veto is beside the point. The Democrats are screaming doom, doom about the deficit, yet even though they have the power to save us from this horror they elect to talk on the campaign trail rather than take action. Don't forget, House Speaker Tip O'Neill is Geraldine Ferraro's best buddy.

But let's not let President Reagan off the hook either. The proper question to him is how do you propose to balance the budget by submitting unbalanced budget proposals? How do you propose to eliminate deficits by submitting budget proposals which contain deficits? And how do you propose to lay all the blame on the Democrats for big deficits when you have not even asked them to pass a budget with a smaller deficit?

Now I've carried you through this exercise for a purpose. Here we have the two presidential candidates and the two major political parties all agreeing that deficits are terrible yet neither is acting to reduce them. What do you suppose is going on?

I think they are all carrying water for the New York big money center banks — wittingly or unwittingly. The financiers in New York are a lot smarter and a lot richer than the politicians in Washington. The name of the game those guys are playing is don't let the public realize why interest rates are so high. Currently they are blaming high interest rates on big deficits so it is in their interest for everyone to scream and focus their attention on deficits. If you remember, however, interest rates were high when the deficits were low. Back then they were blaming high interest rates on inflation. Now that inflation is low and interest rates are still high, they have to come up with another excuse.

Now bankers are going to jump up and say, "Hey, money is a commodity and the price of it (called interest rates) is determined by the marketplace."

That is not entirely true because money is not a commodity in the normal sense of the word. Under the fractional reserve banking system banks create new money when they lend it. In other words, they don't just lend a portion of their depositors' dollars, they lend more money than they have on deposit and this new money is created with a book-keeping entry.

That's why a bank is not a business in the normal sense of the word. The government, when it grants a bank charter, is actually licensing an organization to create something out of nothing (money) and earn a profit by lending it.

The federal government used to regulate the amount of interest banks could pay to depositors. This had the effect of limiting the amount bankers could charge borrowers with a straight face. The New York money center banks, however, flung the government to de-regulate interest rates and the cow has been out of the barn ever since.

There are two things New York money center bankers don't want worse than they don't want leprosy. One is for the government to re-regulate interest rates. The other is for the Congress to get rid of the Federal Reserve System. They walk a tightrope between their greed and their fear of provoking the public into action.

The Federal Reserve System, which is another creature of the New York money center banks, is the root cause of the problem. It is a sweet system for the bankers. When the U.S. Government wants to issue bonds, instead of issuing it, it issues bonds which the Federal Reserve buys with a bookkeeping entry. Thus, under this system, the money supply is increased by increasing debt to the banks.

Thomas Edison, who was no fool, once observed that if the government could issue bonds backed only by its power to tax and good credit, it could just as easily issue currency backed by its power to tax and good credit and avoid paying interest to the banks.

Dallas counts down to opening of GOP convention

DALLAS (AP) — Construction workers soon will put the finishing touches on the Dallas Convention Center and a fence that will separate protesters from delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Hundreds of tents will be set up for the protesters at a levee near downtown and the Dallas Police Department has at least 80 contingency plans to respond to emergencies.

After two years of preparations and thousands of hours of work, city officials are ready for the convention, scheduled for Aug. 20-23.

"If we haven't thought about it, we don't know it exists," Deputy Police Chief William Newman said of the pre-convention security measures.

"It's like spending two years to build a 1,200-member police force and then after a week, you disband it," Newman said.

Almost complete is a public relations campaign that hopes to promote Dallas as an emerging international city.

The convention has spawned dozens of hospitality committees, almost all geared toward welcoming an estimated 25,000 visitors who are expected to spend about $30 million during the four-day political affair.

Officials have initiated programs aimed at getting rid of junk cars, overgrown weeds, litter and dirty highways. At the same time, new traffic signs have been posted, medians have been sodded and road stripes have been repainted.

But not all in Dallas have been enthusiastic about the attention paid by the city to the Republicans.

NATION

Former Dallas County Democratic Chairman Bob Greenberg has criticized the city for spending "millions and millions of dollars" on the GOP. City officials have denied using public money for the convention, saying all costs will be covered by private donations.

Several protest groups tried to force the city to provide them with the amount of money they believe Dallas is spending on the convention. The most they could get, however, was a guarantee from the city to solicit donations and to pay for sanitary facilities at "Tent City" along the Trinity River that will house protesters.

Inside the Dallas Convention Center, the site of the political meeting, work crews are scheduled to lay carpet in the delegate seating areas today, to install signs for state delegations Tuesday and to finish technical checks Friday.

Outside the convention center, the city must complete construction of a 1.5-mile-long "crowd control fence" that will keep protest groups about 400 feet from the main northside entrance. The rest of several concrete barriers will be in place around the center by the first of the week.

Other security measures taking effect this week are the closing of the downtown library public parking lot, package inspections at City Hall and placement of concrete barriers at the county courthouse.

Solidarity, church join in urging poles not to drink

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity activists and the Roman Catholic Church are calling on Poles to quit drinking vodka this month in an action that, if successful, would strike at the heart of Poland's most profitable industry.

A sobriety pledge has been taken by thousands of worshippers at Masses throughout the country and distributed by more than 15 underground Solidarity organizations in workshops in at least seven cities.

The church appeal is couched in religious terms and stresses the moral and health dilemmas of alcohol abuse, but church figures and Solidarity acknowledge there are political motives behind the boycott.

They view it as a form of protest against an unpopular government, reasoning that Poles' taste for vodka saps their will and makes them easier to suppress.

Government officials deny allegations they have not done enough to combat the problem, noting that Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski has listed reduction of alcoholism one of his top social goals.

Alcoholism is widely regarded as Poland's leading social problem. A recent public opinion survey published in the weekly Communist Party newspaper Polityka indicated that Poles feel more endangered by the threat of alcoholism than by another world war.

The government news agency reported last month that during the first quarter of the year, more than 75 percent of all murders, rapes and assaults were committed by people under the influence of alcohol, and that drunks were responsible for one of every four crimes.

Per capita consumption is estimated at more than 18 pints of pure alcohol a year, one of the highest levels in the world.

Anti-alcohol groups estimate that one-third of the average Polish family's yearly food budget goes toward alcohol and that 4.5 million people drink enough to be considered alcohol abusers.

The statistics provide ammunition for critics who question the effectiveness of the government's anti-alcoholism program. They cite a decision by Parliament this year to allow the sale of beer before 1 p.m. as an example of the authorities' mixed attitudes.

Government officials defend the Parliament's action as a response to desires by communities to gear the times of alcohol sales to local consumption patterns.

The state-run Polmos alcohol monopoly recorded sales of 444.5 billion zlotys, or $4 billion, last year, nearly double the amount of the second-largest concern, the giant oil refinery and petrochemical plant in Plock 60 miles west of Warsaw, according to Polityka.

Polmos' $3.8 billion profit in 1983 was three times greater than that recorded by Poland's two largest refineries combined.

It is impossible to measure the effectiveness of the boycott, and no one is predicting complete success, but supporters hope it will force people to recognize both the health and political ramifications of alcohol abuse.

The appeal by Solidarity, the outlawed free trade union movement, calls on all Poles to refuse "to buy and drink all products of the (Polmos) monopoly in order to counter the wave of demoralization and enslavement sweeping our land."

"The totalitarian government aims at a complete subjugation of all our people," it says. "It attempts to institute a modern form of slavery. Promotion of alcoholism is a very effective method whereby this aim can be obtained. We have to counter it."

Church appeals have been nearly as strong.

"Every drunk should remind us this month about the yoke of occupation and be a symbol of those who suppressed, exploited and repressed us at any given time," wrote Bishop Jan Mazur, a leader of the church's anti-alcoholism movement, in a pastoral letter.

Some church figures see alcoholism less as the result of conscious government policy than as a symptom of a feeling of hopelessness created by life in a repressive society.

"There was a great revival in the struggle against alcoholism when Solidarity was created," said the Rev. Jan Szymberski, leader of the Warsaw archdiocese's alcoholism program, in an interview. "People became aware that because of alcohol the nation is unable to decide about itself. It always reappears when people want to escape from reality into a world of illusions."

Leftist Roman Catholic priest defies Vatican

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest serving in the leftist government says he and three other priests will not give up their posts and are braced for any penalty the church imposes on them.

"We are ready to receive the punishments they impose on us because we will not cease to serve the people in the posts they assign us," said Culture Minister Ernesto Cardenal in an article Sunday in the pro-government newspaper Barricada.

The Vatican issued one of its toughest warnings against priests in politics in a message Friday addressed to Cardenal; his brother, Fernando, who was recently appointed education minister; the Rev. Miguel D'Escoto, minister of foreign affairs; and the Rev. Edgardo Parrales, Nicaragua's ambassador to the Organization of American States.

The Jesuit order had warned Fernando Cardenal in July that he faced "most painful" consequences if he took the job. The Vatican statement Friday said the Holy See was in "full accord" with the warning and again ordered the four to resign their government posts.

If not, they "could be reduced to lay status," said a Vatican official who spoke on condition his name not be used.

In another development, Nicaraguan junta leader Daniel Ortega said the presence of a fleet of U.S. ships cruising the Pacific coast of Central America is a "serious threat" to the region.

He also said the fleet's presence "signifies that the United States is perfectly able to invade Nicaragua or El Salvador."

Ortega's remarks, during a speech Sunday in the town of Bluefields, referred to the U.S. warship Iowa and its several escort boats.

The Iowa last Monday made its first stop on the Central American strip when it entered the Pacific port of Balboa in Panama. The ship had come from the Caribbean Sea through the Panama Canal.

Ortega did not say exactly where in the region the flotilla was.

On Monday, sources at the American embassy in Panama said the fleet was going to spend "no fewer than 10 days" on the coast.

Hijackers arrive at Taiwan base

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Six Chinese who hijacked a Chinese commercial airliner to South Korea last year arrived in Taiwan today after the South Korean government freed them from jail and expelled them.

Taiwan's vice foreign minister, Ding Mou-shih, said the five men and one woman arrived at a military air base in central Taiwan this afternoon aboard a plane which was sent to pick them up in Seoul, the South Korean capital.

The hijackers had said they commandeered the Chinese airliner in May 1983 in an attempt to flee mainland China and seek asylum in Taiwan.

The case was a sensitive one for South Korea, which has close ties with the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan but also has been trying to improve relations with the Communist government in mainland China.

There are no diplomatic relations between Seoul and Peking, but the hijacking case brought the first officially acknowledged contacts between the two governments when a Chinese delegation came to retrieve the hijacked airplane.

In an official announcement today, South Korea said: "Assuming the six have fully repented during their more than one-year imprisonment and in consideration of appeals from various sectors for their release, it has been decided that their sentences will be suspended and they will forcibly be expelled from the country because their entry was not legitimate."

"On the basis of humanitarianism, they will be allowed to choose their destination by their own free will," the statement said.

The six were convicted of hijacking a Chinese domestic flight, carrying 105 passengers and crewmen, to South Korea on May 5, 1983. Two crewmen on the British-built Trident were wounded in a shooting that broke out when the hijackers seized the aircraft.

They were charged with violating South Korean laws on aircraft safety, immigration control, fire arms control and aircraft navigation.

They were tried by the Seoul District Court in August 1983, and the court's findings were later upheld by the Seoul Appellate Court and South Korea's Supreme Court.

Zhuo Chang-ren, 36, the leader of the group, was sentenced to six years in prison, two others to five years, and three to four years.

Peking had demanded that they be returned to China for trial, while Taiwan said they were "freedom seekers" and requested that they be turned over to Taiwan authorities.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Summer Olympics ended as they began — as a celebration by Americans, a celebration of America and the world.

Sixteen days after welcoming the world to its shores, the United States bade farewell on Sunday night to 139 of its neighbors on this globe, distributing a fair share of gold to the departing guests but keeping most of it right at home.

The Soviet Union and its closest friends might well have carted off a healthy chunk of bullion. But they chose to stay away, just as the United States and some of its allies boycotted the 1980 Moscow Games.

WITHOUT THE challenge of the Soviets, the East Germans, the Cubans and other boycotting nations, the United States won 174 medals, including 83 gold that surpassed the Olympic record of 80 set four years ago by the Soviets.

The East Germans were the runners-up in the medal count four years ago. Perhaps fittingly, the West Germans were second this time with 59.

And the Romanians, often applauded by the crowd in appreciation of their refusal to join the Soviet boycott, were rewarded with a second-best 20 gold medals. China, an Olympic absentee since 1952, swept back into the world's athletic community by winning 32 medals, 15 of them gold.

With the last of the blood, sweat and tears shed by the athletes of the XXIII Olympiad, it was time to party.

It was a party for the world's most physically fit men and women. So Los Angeles in general and Hollywood in particular — which spawned Jane Fonda and Richard Simmons — celebrated the athletes' prowess with a spectacle which rivaled the pageantry that opened the Summer Games on July 28.

After thousands of athletes mingled with each other and cavorted around the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum track, the Olympic flag was turned over to Mayor Bo-Hyun Yum of Seoul, South Korea, host of the 1988 Summer Games. The 1984 Games were declared closed.

And then Hollywood producer David Wolper's show really swung into high gear — a Close Encounter with a spaceship, a laser-light star war, a fireworks salute to all Olympic cities and a rock concert, a futuristic celebration of the past.

Olympics of the future will be measured, as always, against Olympians of the past. The next generation has its work cut out for it.

Track star Carl Lewis, welterweight boxer Mark Breland and gymnast Mary Lou Retton are candidates to become among the most gilded American athletes of the future as contracts and endorsement offers pour in. But for the moment, Li Ning is clearly the most gilded athlete of the present.

THE GYMNAST from China won six medals, the most of any athlete here. Three were gold, two silver and one bronze. The gold champions, with four apiece, were Lewis, the track star whose name will almost certainly be inexorably linked with that of Jesse Owens, and Ecaterina Szabo, the heir to Nadia Comaneci's crown as Romania's super gymnast.

There is the possibility, of course, that Li, Lewis and Szabo may compete again four years hence. Maybe not. The flame extinguished Sunday night in Los Angeles is scheduled to be ignited on Saturday, Sept. 17, 1988, in Seoul. But the Soviet Union has already raised the issue of whether it will attend the 1988 Games if the political climate remains unchanged.

More remarkable than most of the athletes' performances the past two weeks was the fact that Los Angeles' climate remained unchanged. The city that made words like "smog" and "gridlock" part of the American lexicon experienced virtually none of either. The dire predictions of choking air and choked streets never materialized.

Neither, for that matter, did the financial bonanza envisioned by local merchants — unless they were dealing in Olympic pins. There were hundreds of different kinds of national and commercial pins, all being traded, some selling for more than $1,000.

The first truly commercial Games, subsidized almost entirely by corporate America, may have turned a profit. But many stores, vendors, restaurants and amusement parks suffered losses as the regular clientele, chased out of town by the pre-Games scare stories, never were replaced by free-spirited tourists.

Perhaps the biggest scare story was one of terrorists somehow disrupting the Olympics. But that, too, never happened and was dissipated by the light-heartedness of the city and its inhabitants, by the Olympic villages and their inhabitants and — unlike the gun-metal memories of Montreal — by the official colors of the Games, a shower of pastels.

AND RED, white and blue, too. The Olympics quickly became known as "America's Games," not only because of the profusion of American medal winners but because of ABC's television coverage. The network was accused, here and abroad, of being America's Cheerleader, giving short shrift to any competitor who didn't represent the Stars and Stripes. Eventually, ABC appeared to pay more attention to foreign athletes.

There was Li and his Chinese teammates, middle-distance runner Maricica Puica and Szabo and their Romanian teammates, two-time decathlon gold medalist Daley Thompson of Britain, all-around men's gymnastics champion Koji Gushiken of Japan, West German swimmer Michael Gross and marathoner Carlos Lopes of Portugal — and the enduring courage of Swiss marathoner Gabriela Andersen-Schiess.

But for the most part, ABC was right. These were America's Games.

There was Lewis fulfilling his dream of four

And sprinter Valerie Brisco-Hooks winning three.

And Greg Louganis displaying unmatched perfection in both springboard and platform diving.

And the grace and artistry of Mary Lou Retton and Peter Vidmar and Julianne McNamara and Mitch Gaylord and all the gymnasts who will almost certainly have parents across the nation catapulting their kids into neighborhood gyms.

And Tracy Ruiz, transferring the precise beauty of gymnastics to the swimming pool.

And Tracy Caulkins and Rowdy Gaines and Mary T. Meagher and Rick Carey and Nancy Hogshead and the rest of the aquaducks who tied the record for the most Olympic swimming golds.

And Breland and Meldrick Taylor and Paul Gonzales and the rest of the boxers who beat the rest of the world to the punch a record nine times.

Hall adds five to Famer's list

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — It is an annual rite, like the swallows returning to Capistrano. Each summer, the ballplayers come for a weekend to tuck-away Cooperstown, to visit baseball's birthplace and to honor the game's greatest shrine, the Hall of Fame.

"You never lose the glow. You just rekindle the fire," said Don Drysdale, who on Sunday became one of the five newest inductees in the modest, red-bricked museum on Main Street.

HARMON Killebrew, Luis Aparicio, Pee Wee Reese and Rick Ferrell joined Drysdale on the dais for the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies, the 45th to be held here since the original class of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson was inducted.

"When I first came to this country 30 years ago, there was not much in my pockets, but I was full of dreams," said Aparicio, the first Venezuelan-born player to be enshrined. "I thank all of the people in this great nation."

Aparicio, a shortstop, began his career with the Chicago White Sox on April 17, 1956, the same day Drysdale made his major league debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"It is very intimidating, believe me, to stand here," said the 6-foot-6 Drysdale, who used an intimidating style to win 209 games with the Dodgers during a career that lasted through 1969.

Killebrew, the slugger with 573 home runs who was nicknamed "The Killer," provided some of the more touching and emotional moments of the day, particularly when he talked about his deceased father.

"When I was a boy, my father would play with my brother and I in the yard. My mother would say,

"You're tearing up the grass." And my Dad would say, "We're not raising grass, we're raising boys."

At one point, he momentarily broke down while discussing Harmon Killebrew Sr., and paused to say, "Excuse me," while he regained his composure.

Among those in the crowd of 5,000 — the village of Cooperstown has a population of 2,500 the rest of the year — were 24 returning Hall of Famers, including Stan Musial, Bill Terry and spitballing pitcher Burleigh Grimes, who will turn 91 this week.

Killebrew, the last of the five inductees to be announced, said, "This is the toughest clean-up hitting I've ever done."

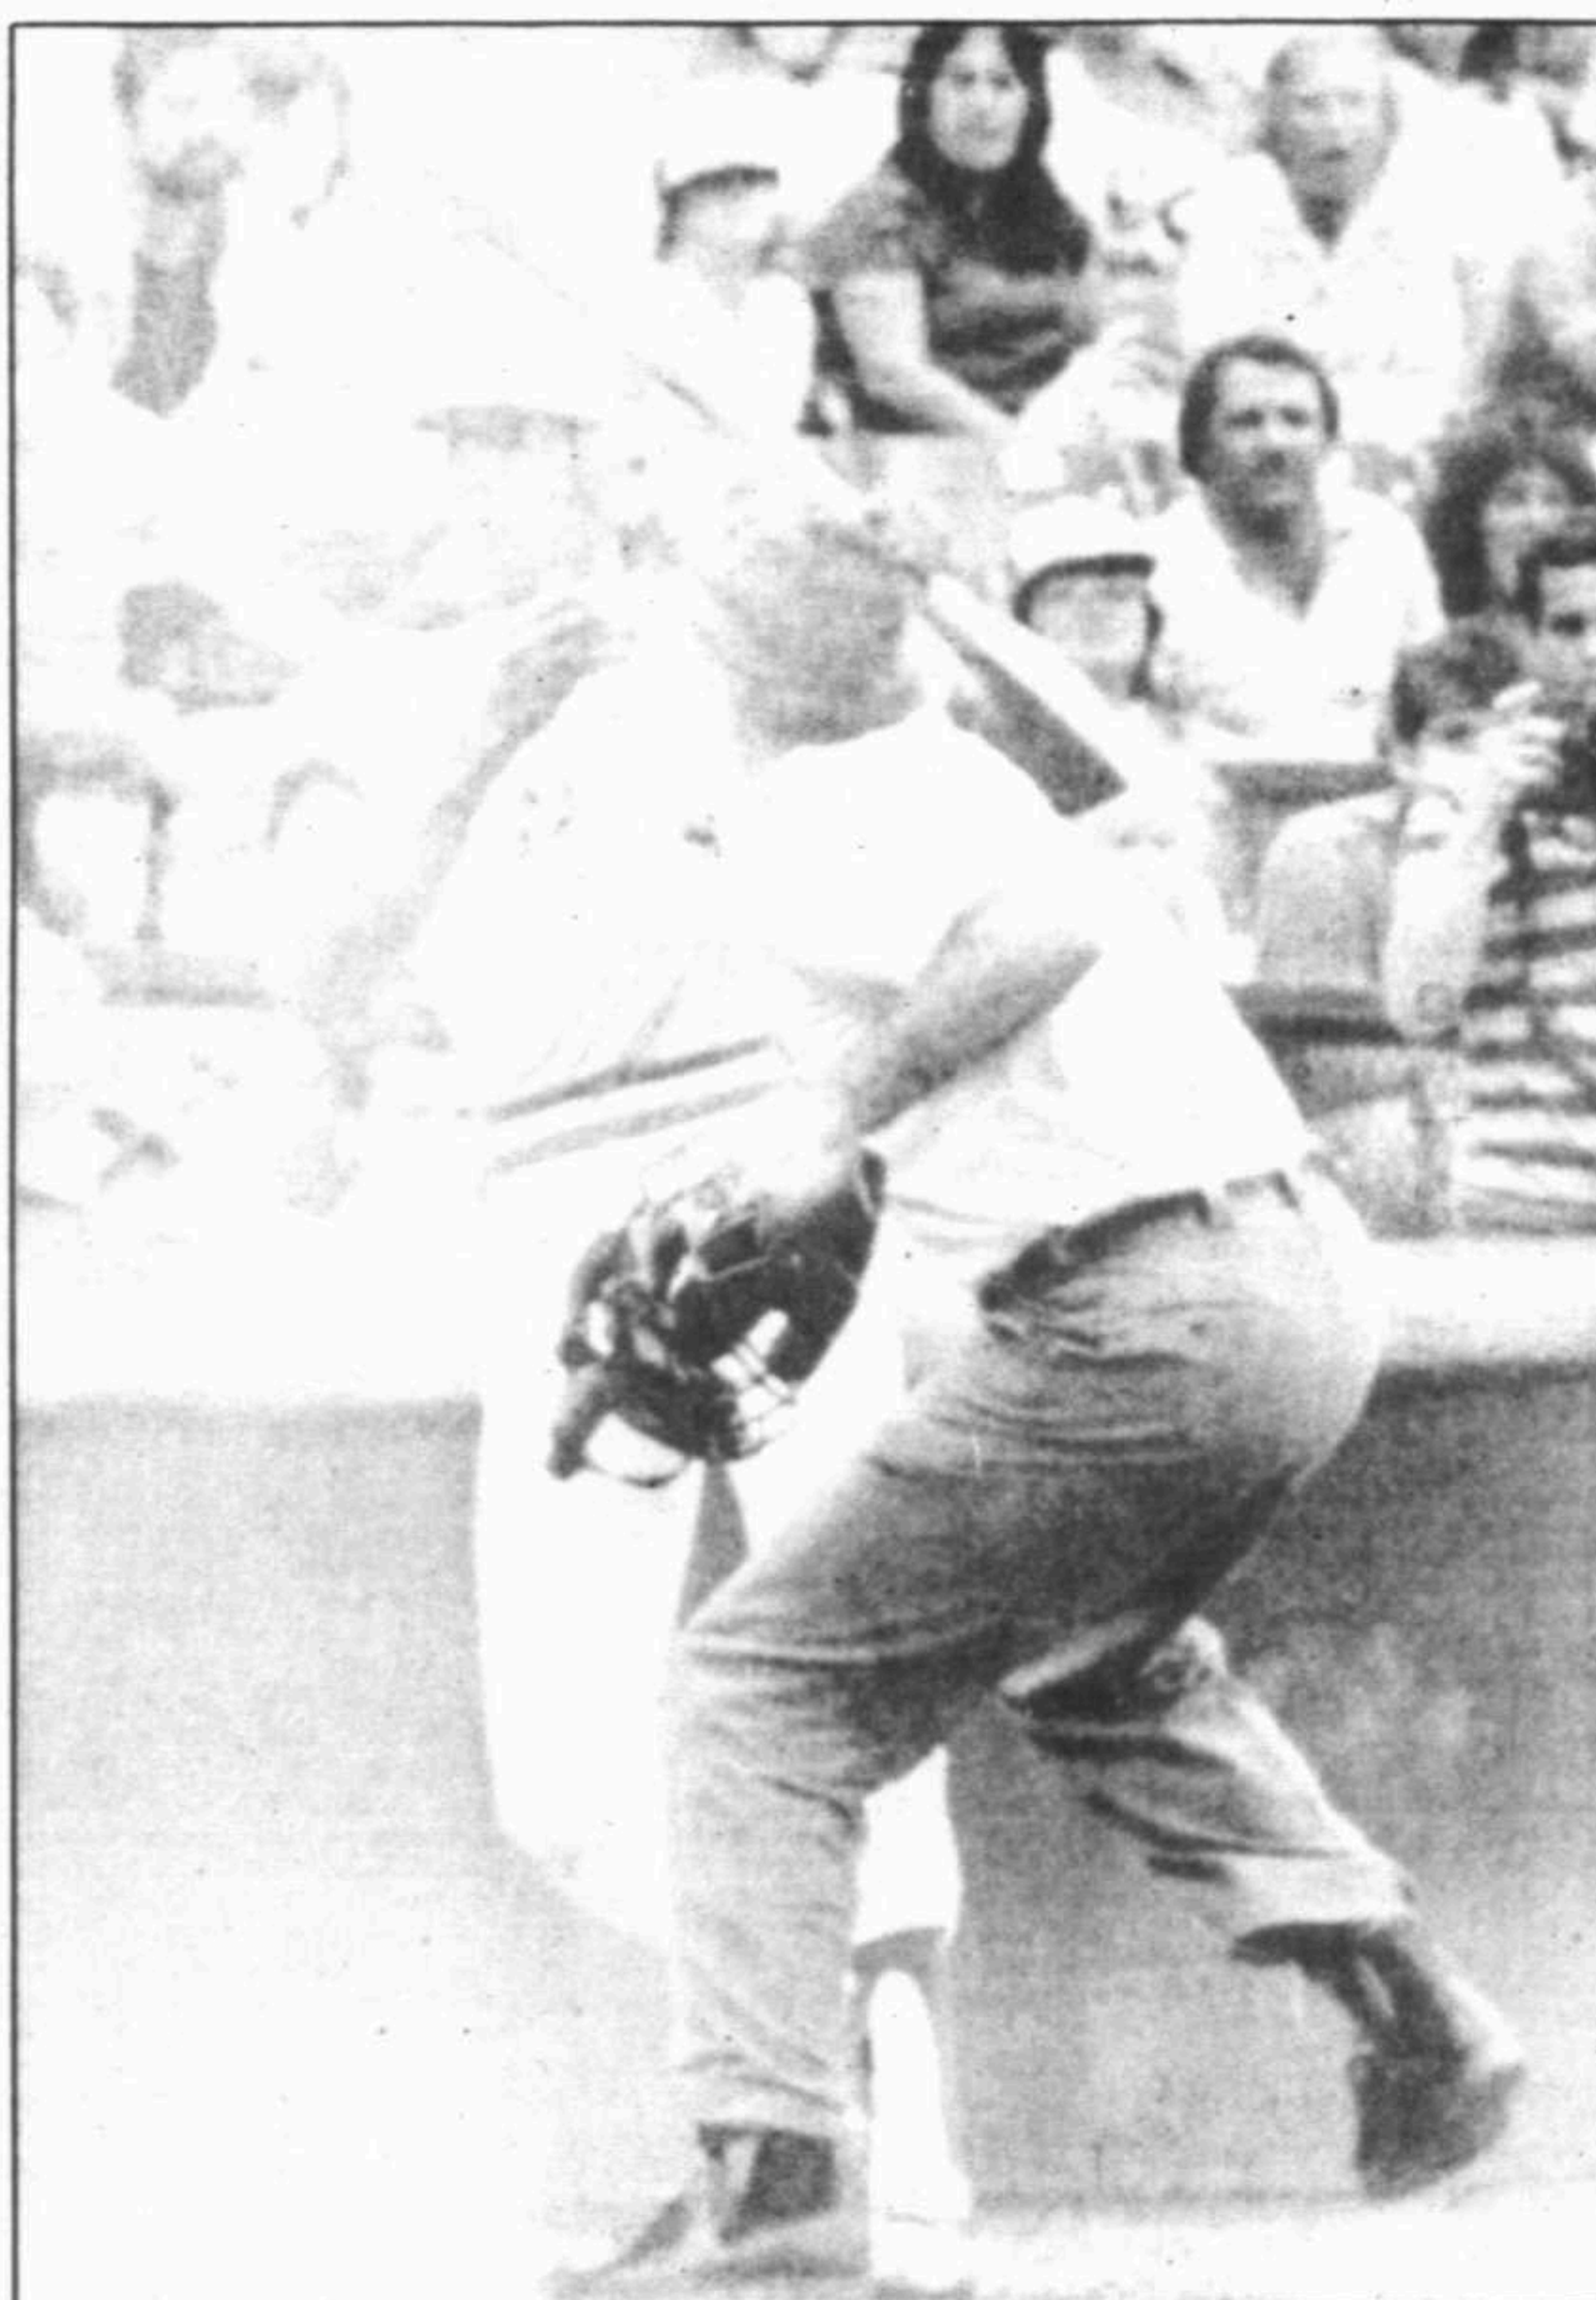

The long-time veteran of the Minnesota Twins was cheered on by his five children, including a son who had come from Austria and a daughter from England.

REESE, THE shortstop and captain for Brooklyn in the 1940s and 1950s, was praised for his "intangible qualities of leadership," along with helping to ease Jackie Robinson through baseball's color barrier.

The bronze plaque for Ferrell, now 78 and a consultant with the Detroit Tigers, commended him for his defensive prowess in catching the four knuckleballers in the Washington Senators' starting rotation in 1945. Ferrell, who began his career in 1929, teamed with brother Wes to form a fine battery for many years and caught 1,805 games, the most in American League history.

He was one of several speakers to thank Kuhn for his help over the years.

Also honored Sunday were sportscaster Curt Gowdy, with the Ford C. Frick Award for broadcasting, and long-time writer Ken Smith, with the J.G. Taylor Spink Award.

Umpire Steve Rippley clutches the jersey of Atlanta batter Pascual Perez as he goes after San Diego pitcher Ed Whitson, who threw a brushback pitch. In all, 13 people were thrown out of the game.

Reptiles chew on Cubs twice

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Beaumont's Gators won the Texas League pennant last year. The Golden reptiles won the first half West Division race this year going away and are turning the second half into a runaway, yet one wonders if this year isn't a wasted year in the players' development.

Seven every day players are back from last year's championship club and even Manager Bobby Tolan admits that most of them should be playing Triple A.

"But there's just no room," he says. "The Padres made some trades during the winter, so players who should have moved up stayed here."

That includes Mark Gillaspie, last year's MVP in the Texas League.

The Gators swept the Midland Cubs 7-5 and 8-1 at Cubs Stadium Sunday night to take the rain-abbreviated series 3-1. Two more victories, yet how much of a challenge was it? If there is any potential on this year's club, it isn't being developed. The Gators simply outclass their opposition.

If Midland had held back Bill Hatcher, Trey Brooks, Tom Lombarski, Rick Baker from last year's club, they might be equally as formidable at the AA level.

IN BOTH games, the Gators pounced on the Cubs early. In the opener, Midland made a run at Beaumont, thanks to Gary Varsho's three-run triple in the fourth and Jeff Jones 15th homer, good for two runs, in the sixth, but victory was left on-base as Midland stranded 10 runners, twice leaving the bases loaded.

James Steels, one of those hold-overs from last year's club, collected three hits in four trips, which made him 33 of 90 against Midland this year. That's a third of his hits for the entire season.

The Cubs held Steels hitless in the nightcap, but trouble broke out everywhere else as the Gators jumped on Joe Housey, 6-8, for seven runs in the first two innings. Gillaspie carried the big stick for the Gators with three RBI on two hits, but six Midland errors were an even bigger factor in the Gators' winning margin.

Still, hard-throwing Lance McCullers, 3-1, didn't need much help. He pitched four hit ball, two of which were of the infield variety, while mowing down nine Cubs on strikes in going the route.

Kevin Towers, 4-2, got the win in the first game, getting last inning relief help from Pete Kutsukos, who notched his 19th save.

In this one, it was 6-0 after three innings. Steels tripled home a run in the first, Bill Wrona knocked in two runs in the three-run second and Steels' doubled launched a two-run third.

Larry Hrynko, 1-6, who lasted just 2 1/2 innings, was the loser.

Braves, Padres play 'brush' ball

Joe Carter homers twice, knocks in six runs

Associated Press

Atlanta starter Pascual Perez was the central figure in brushback incidents that resulted in the ejection of four pitchers, both managers, five other players and two replacement managers as the Braves defeated the San Diego Padres 5-3 on Sunday.

The brawls also involved fans, several of whom were led off in handcuffs by police. The game ended with policemen on top of both dugouts and the benches cleared by order of the umpires.

San Diego starter Ed Whitson and relievers Greg Booker and Craig Lefferts were ejected after throwing tight pitches to Perez, who hit Alan Wiggins with the first pitch of the game. The pitches by Booker and Lefferts touched off brawls, as did Donnie Moore's delivery, which hit San Diego's Graig Nettles in the ninth.

Padres Manager Dick Williams was ejected after Whitson's brushback pitch. Replacement managers Ozzie Virgil and Jack Krol were ejected after the pitches by Booker and Lefferts, respectively.

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre and Moore were thrown out of the game following the ninth-inning incident.

Bobby Brown and Champ Summers of the Padres and Rick Mahler, Steve Bedrosian and Gerald Perry of the Braves were ejected in the brawls.

Perez, 11-4, was at bat in the second when a pitch by Whitson, 12-6, sailed behind Perez's head.

After a threatening motion to Whitson by Perez, both squads spilled onto the field, but no blows were struck. The pitch brought a warning from home plate umpire Steve Rippley.

Baseball Roundup

Perez was at bat again in the fourth when a high inside pitch from Whitson knocked Perez down. Rippley then ejected Whitson and Williams from the game. Whitson was replaced on the mound by Booker and Williams was replaced in the dugout by Virgil.

Then, in the fifth, with Perez once again at bat, Booker threw a high inside pitch that brought both his own and Virgil's ejection.

A full-scale brawl erupted in the eighth when Perez was hit by Lefferts. The game was delayed for some 10 minutes before order was restored. Lefferts and Krol were ejected, with bullpen coach Harry Dunlop taking over as manager.

Meanwhile in the American League, former Midland Cub Joe Carter drove in six runs with homers in consecutive innings — a two-run shot and a grand slam — and Bert Blyleven fired a five-hitter as the Cleveland Indians beat the New York Yankees for the first time in 12 games this season 6-0.

In other NL games, Ron Cey broke a sixth-inning tie with a two-run homer and Rick Sutcliffe, 10-1, won his eighth decision in a row while striking out 12 as the Chicago Cubs beat the Montreal Expos 7-3.

Nolan Ryan struck out 11, combining with Frank DiPino on a five-hitter as Houston overcame the Cincinnati Reds 6-1. A three-run homer by Jose Cruz and a two-run shot by Terry Puhl supplied the power for the Astros.

George Foster's two-run homer helped Ron Darling to his first victory since the All-Star break and sparked the New York Mets to a 6-3 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Candy Maldonado, who entered the game as a defensive replacement in the ninth inning, hit a two-out homer in the top of the 10th to give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies were rained out.

In other AL games, Darrell Evans, Ruppert Jones and Alan Trammell each drove in two runs as the Detroit Tigers defeated Kansas City 8-4 to sweep a three-game weekend series and avenge last weekend's four-game sweep by the Royals.

Eddie Murray slammed a game-tying three-run triple and Mike Young added a two-run homer as the Baltimore Orioles rallied for five runs in the eighth inning and defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4.

Ben Oglivie rapped a homer and two singles, driving in two runs, and Bob McClure checked Chicago on three hits in eight innings to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to an 8-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox and a sweep of their three-game series.

Frank Viola scattered six hits in hurling his fourth shutout of the season as the Minnesota Twins beat the Seattle Mariners 3-0.

Gary Pettit tripled home two runs to tie the score in the eighth inning and scored on Rob Wilfong's bad-hop single as the California Angels outlasted the Oakland Athletics 10-9 and snapped a four-game losing streak. Dwayne Murphy hit his 24th and 25th homers for the A's, while Reggie Jackson clubbed the 497th home run of his career and Juan Beniquez had two homers for the Angels.

In an American League night game, Boston defeated Texas 3-2 in 11 innings.

Noll in better shape at quarterback than Landry

Associated Press

While Pittsburgh's Chuck Noll still doesn't know who will be his No. 1 quarterback, the Steelers coach says he has a good feeling about both candidates — David Woodley and Mark Malone — as the National Football League preseason reaches its midpoint.

"They both play well. They both have the ability to move and lead our football team," Noll said after his team defeated the Philadelphia Eagles 20-17 in overtime Saturday night. "It's going to be a tough decision."

Noll may be facing a difficult choice when the regular season begins Sept. 2, but Tom Landry's options in Dallas may be more limited after Gary Hogeboom hyper-extended his right elbow on the opening series of the Cowboys' 24-13 triumph at San Diego.

Hogeboom, challenging incumbent Danny White for the Cowboys' top spot, is expected to remain sidelined until at least the final preseason game, meaning

White — who completed 13 of 20 passes for 184 yards Saturday night — will get most of the playing time as Dallas prepares for its season opener against the Los Angeles Rams.

In other action Saturday night, Indianapolis defeated the New York Giants 28-20; New Orleans whipped Atlanta 31-21; Buffalo stopped New England 23-13; Green Bay trimmed Chicago 17-10; Tampa Bay beat Cincinnati 21-13; Seattle edged Detroit 28-24; Miami walked off Minnesota 29-7; Houston hammered the New York Jets 36-17; and Denver nipped San Francisco 21-20.

St. Louis defeated Kansas City 14-10 and the Los Angeles Raiders topped Washington 21-20 Friday night. Cleveland and the Rams collide tonight.

Woodley completed five of 14 passes for 126 yards, one touchdown and three interceptions in the first half of the Steelers' victory, while Malone hit six of 13 for 80 yards, no TDs and no interceptions.

"I think it's even right now based on our performances in the two games," Woodley said. "I think everything's going pretty good right now. I think obviously, we have a lot of things to work on ... There was some good and some bad."

Art Schlichter, meanwhile, was impressive in the Colts' triumph over the Giants as Indianapolis made its debut before a near sellout crowd in the 61,000-seat Hoosier Dome.

Schlichter, back from a one-year suspension for gambling activities, ran for one touchdown and set up another with pinpoint passing as he emerged as a candidate for the Colts' No. 1 job.

"I thought he threw awfully well, but I just hope people don't put too much pressure on him," Indianapolis Coach Frank Kush said after the 5-of-8, 95-yard passing performance. "It was a good game for Art. He needed it."

"But be patient with him," Kush added. "Don't expect him to be a miracle-worker every game."

New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips, meanwhile, watched offseason acquisition Richard Todd spark the Saints' victory over the Falcons after Ken Stabler left the game in the second quarter. Todd, obtained in a trade with the Jets, tossed a 36-yard touchdown pass to Lindsay Scott on his first series and later teamed with the speedy wide receiver on a 35-yard scoring play.

Todd Hernandez highlighted Atlanta's evening with a 103-yard kickoff return for a touchdown.

Joe Danelo kicked three field goals and Matt Kofler and Joe Dufek both hurled TD passes to help the Bills beat the Patriots and Houston's Warren Moon lofted a 61-yard scoring pass to Eric Mullins to launch the Oilers victory over the Jets.

"It could have been a blow out if we didn't bumle around ... The score camouflaged our errors," Oilers Coach Hugh Campbell said.

Rookie Chris Brewer dashed 66 yards for a score to highlight Denver's victory; QB Jack Thompson led Tampa over his former teammates from Cincinnati; Zachary Dixon's 2-yard run gave Seattle its triumph over Detroit, and Don Strock tossed a pair of TD passes and Uwe von Schamann kicked two field goals as Miami improved its preseason record to 2-0.

Owens, Lewis linked forever in historic gold

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Their names will be linked forever now. Jesse Owens and Carl Lewis. Four Olympic events — the 100 and 200-meter sprints, the long jump and the 400-meter relay. Four Olympic gold medals.

A meter is a meter. The distance was the same in 1936 as it is in 1984. So, strictly from an athletic standpoint, the accomplishments of Owens and Lewis in identical events certainly are comparable.

That is where the similarity ends. Owens' Olympic stunner at Berlin shone like a beam of light through the thickening war clouds that were gathering over Germany. Almost as important as the fact that he won an unprecedented four gold medals in track and field was the fact that he was a black man, whose successes had to embarrass Hitler.

There was a terribly delicious irony about Owens winning those medals on Nazi turf. Americans liked that. But, although the country exulted in his triumphs, it hardly made a difference to him when he returned to his homeland. He remained a black man scrambling to make a living in a country that, in those days, could hardly be described as racially enlightened.

Now, fast forward to 1984 and Lewis. He is about to reap a merchandising bonanza. He is an Olympic champion at a time when we package and sell our sports heroes like commercial commodities.

Lewis will tell you the money is secondary. "If I make 50 cents or $50,000, it doesn't make any difference," he said. "I have four gold medals and nobody can take that away from me."

That is nice, high-sounding, Olympic-spirit rhetoric. It also is no problem. Lewis won't have to worry about making 50 cents. His manager, Joe Douglas, will see to that.

You want Lewis? See Douglas. If the price is right, you can have him. An Australian asked if "King Carl" might be available for a meet in that country later in the year. Lewis is committed only through a five-meet European tour ending later this month in Cologne. Douglas talked of the stress and strain of the long season and how there were no plans for his man beyond that meet, "unless you want to offer a number."

Among the intriguing possibilities is the National Football League, where Lewis was drafted by the Dallas Cowboys but, because of the NFL's free-agent rules, could sign with any team he wants.

What would it take to deliver him there, Douglas was asked.

"A lot of money," Douglas said.

No kidding.

Owens wasn't drafted by the NFL. Blacks were off limits in professional sports in those days. Remember, he won his medals a decade before Jackie Robinson became the first black man to play organized baseball in this country.

Lewis' horizons seem to be unlimited; those of Owens, on the other hand, were very limited. He was a hero with no place to market his achievement. That will be no problem for the young man who has followed his lead.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Midland takes to the road for a five games in El Paso and Beaumont before coming home to wind up the season. Steels tripled, doubled and singled his first three times up, but no homer. In fact, he was called out in his fourth at bat for interference after colliding with Jones on a close play at first. If Varsbo had come up with two sensational defensive saves in the second inning of the second game, the Gators might still be batting.

Repairman can bring old typewriters back to life

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The large, airy front room of the store features state-of-the-art electronic typewriters and word processors, spread out on long counters. But in the back workshop of P&T Office Equipment in Arlington, Va., the past lives.

Typewriters of all ages and descriptions, in various stages of assembly, are strewn across banks of shelves. Empty typewriter casings and spare parts litter shelves, cabinets and desks. In the far corner, oblivious to the disorder, Jay Fowler sits calmly under a desk lamp, focuses on an electric model and prepares to take it apart.

At 74, Fowler has retained most of his dark, graying hair, the agility in his long fingers and an encyclopedic knowledge of the machines that have been his life's work. He peers through horn-rimmed glasses at his latest subject, a candidate for cleaning. Throughout the disassembly of the greasy machine, Fowler's clothing remains immaculate.

He speaks softly in the accents of his native Maine, which he left at the age of 19 "to seek my fortune in Boston." There he began to master his craft at what was then Remington-Rand.

WHEN HE RETIRED from Sperry-Rand two years ago, he began working full time at P&T in Arlington.

One of a dwindling number of typewriter repairmen, Fowler was trained in the pre-Apple age to service only manual and electric models. Electronic typewriters actually are easier to fix, according to Bob Hart, product service director for Smith-Corona in Connecticut. And while service for mechanical ones isn't difficult to find, Hart predicts that ultimately typewriter-repair training will focus exclusively on the new electronic machines.

When Fowler was assigned to Capitol Hill in the mid-1950s, the manual typewriter was king of the federal bureaucracy. He remembers repairing a machine at the White House with then-president Dwight Eisenhower in the next room, and seeing John F. Kennedy, then a senator, at the Capitol. "I found them all very nice," Fowler says.

In the post-World War II days after he returned to Boston and started his own shop, Fowler refurbished and sold typewriters that dated back as far as 1910. "There was such a demand that you couldn't get a typewriter — we repaired some terribly old machines," he recalls.

HE SMILES AS he recalls some of his early customers in New England. The 1930s took him to the Boston office of lawyer Thomas P. O'Neill Sr., father of the present House speaker. He kept President Franklin D. Roosevelt's sons' machines in order while they were at Harvard.

And a favorite stop in Wellesley, Mass., was the home of Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "Magnificent Obsession." Fowler's modest manner slips a little as he considers the creative role his handiwork played, however indirectly. "I've always thought that it was sort of great that I repaired Lloyd C. Douglas' typewriter," he says.

Jay Fowler, one of a dwindling number of typewriter repairmen, probes the innards of an old model at his workshop in Virginia.

DEAR ABBY

Waitresses say tips aren't treats, but survival

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a waitress who just returned home after putting in 10 hours at a restaurant. I started to relax with the newspaper when I read the letter in your column from a man signed, "Loves to Travel in Oak Park, Ill." He says he and "the wife" eat out a lot, and instead of leaving a tip, he leaves an inspirational religious tract! He says he and his wife have taken some lovely trips with the money saved on tips!

Abby, I've been a waitress for 13 years. My salary right now is $1.65 an hour. I am divorced and have three children to support, and I couldn't make it on my salary alone. I need my tips to live. I love to travel, too, but I haven't had a vacation in 13 years. — STEAMED IN RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a waitress and single parent in Seattle, raising four children on the money I earn from tips. In this state, restaurants are not required to pay minimum wages — and an employer can get away with paying as low as half the minimum wage. Many of the better restaurants here start their waitpersons at $2.30 an hour, and if the establishment serves cocktails, I have to split my tips with the bartender, the captain and the busboy. After the federal government takes 8 percent for assumed tips, there's not a heck of a lot left to take home.

If we could keep 100 percent of our tips, we would be overjoyed. But if we got religious tracts instead of money, we wouldn't even break even. — SUE IN SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: That Oak Park, Ill., chiseler who leaves "inspirational spiritual messages" instead of tips — but saves HIS tip money for a vacation — blew my mind!

I work 10 hours a day, no health insurance, no profit sharing, no paid vacations. My average paycheck for 40 hours is around $30 after taxes. I'd like to see somebody live on that for a week.

Believe me, no Christian feelings come from being "stuffed" when you depend on tips for a living.

I have a message for "Loves to Travel": If you can't afford to tip, stay home. We aren't working our butts off for inspiration! — MAD IN MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY: I am doing a slow burn. I'm a waitress in Philadelphia, and my salary is $1.85 an hour before taxes. My tips put the food on my table and the shoes on my children's feet.

If anybody left a religious tract for me instead of a tip, first I would tell him my name. Then I'd inform him that if he ever came back, he had better not sit in the station I serve because he would sit there until the second coming of Christ before I'd wait on him.

The guts of that cheapskate — using the word of the Lord as an excuse to get out of paying for service! — HATES HYPOCRITES

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Loves to Travel": Will you please tell my husband where he can turn your religious tracts in for cash? Our kids aren't goats — they don't eat paper.

My husband is a cab driver, and he takes home a third of what the meter reads — plus his tips. So if he doesn't get a tip, he is working for nothing.

Do me a favor, next time you need a cab: Take a bus! — CABBIE'S WIFE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: I've been a waiter in Las Vegas most of my adult life, and you are the only person who has ever come out and said that a tip is not a nice little "something extra" for the waiter or waitress, it's their bread and butter. Our salaries are peanuts. Don't blame the employers. If they did away with tipping and charged the customer what they had to in order to stay in business, the prices would be at least double — and probably more.

Thanks for educating the public, Abby. — NEVADA WAITER

DEAR ABBY: Please tell your readers (and especially that Bible-thumping miser who "Loves to Travel") that a tip is not a nice little "extra." It is survival. Also, 15 percent of the dinner check is the standard tip. A 20 percent tip for excellent service is appreciated more than you can imagine. Also, the tip is not the waiter's to keep. He has to share it with the busboy, bartender and captain.

Tell "Loves to Travel" to keep traveling, but please don't stop in Denver. — LOVES TO EAT

Limousines...

Pat Kirk, chauffeur for Regency Limousine, makes an early morning run to the airport with Midlanders on the road to a Hawaiian vacation.

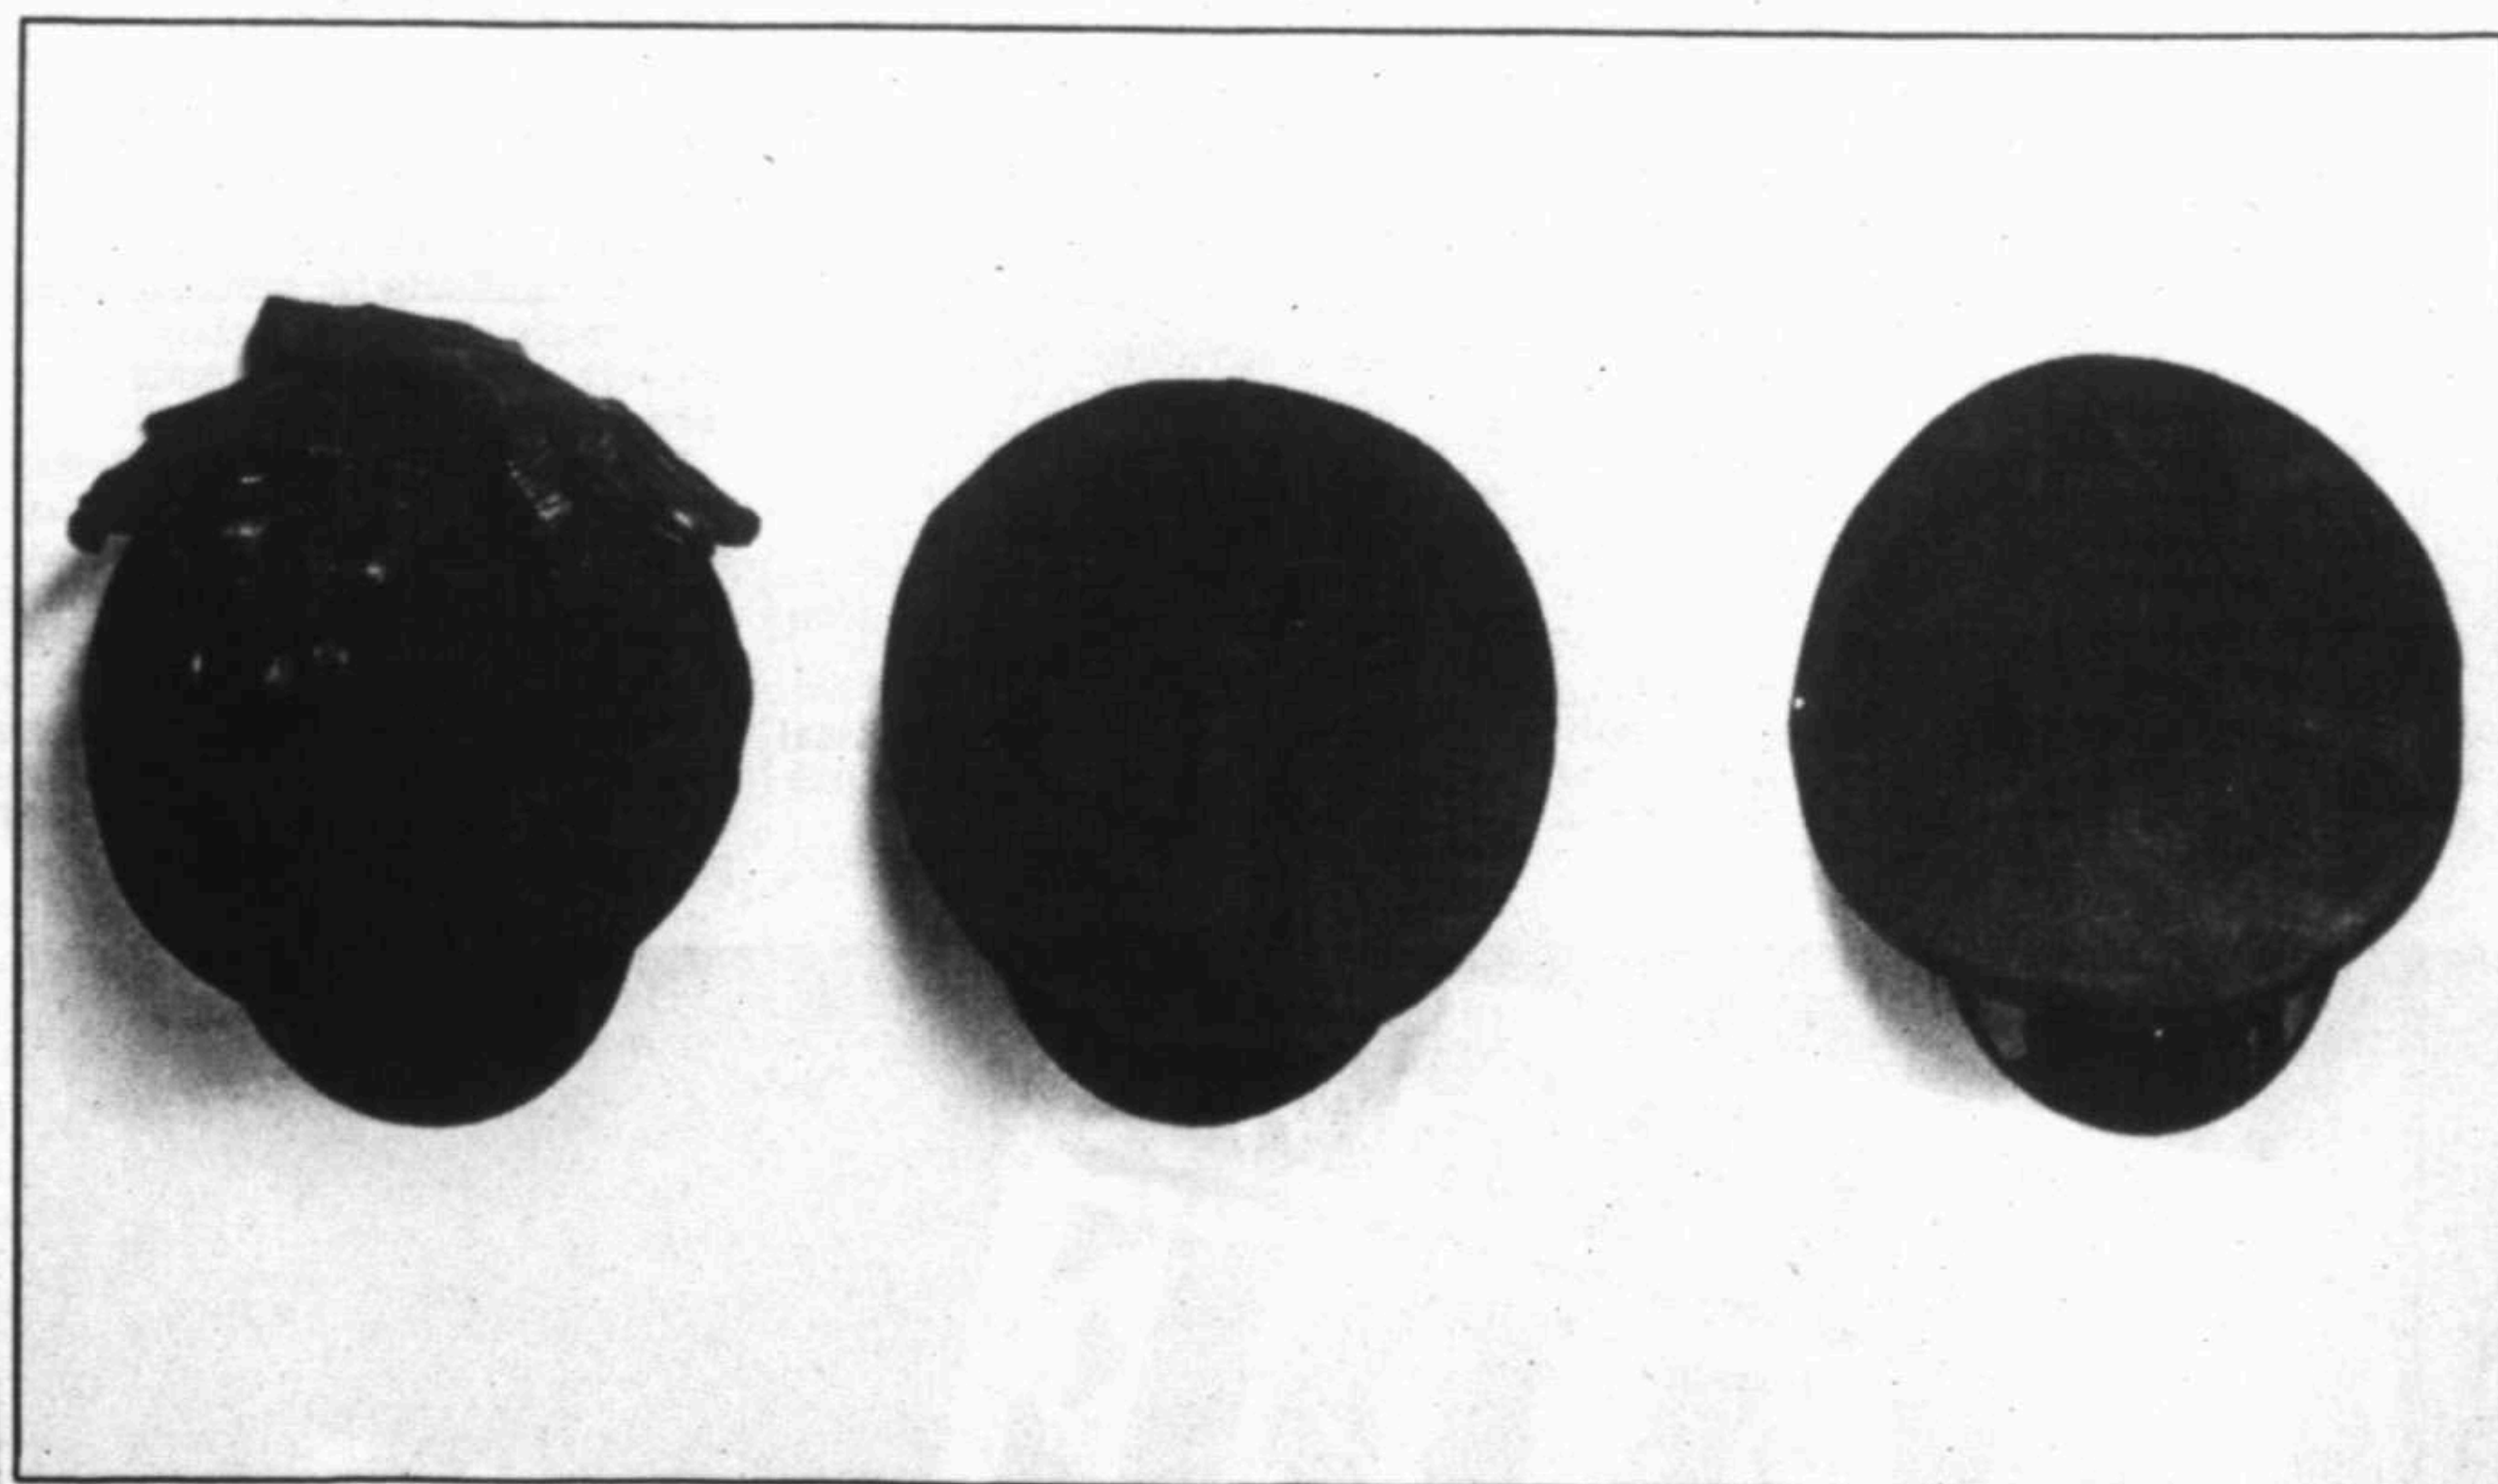

At your service, sir

Gloves, Ray-Bans, coat, tie and courteous tip of the cap make up the uniform of Omer Mickle, co-owner and driver for Classic Limousines Limited of Odessa.

To don when driving, the chauffeurs' be made a month or five minutes in caps await the next reservation, which can advance.

Text by Hallye Jordan
Photos by Kent Porter

They've hung around the parking lots of strip joints in Odessa, cruised around drive-ins in Midland and been put up in Lubbock's most lavish hotels.

They've had to disguise grins with discreet professionalism at red lights when the petition separating them from their passengers was closed, cutting off any communication with the rear of the car.

They've had to put up with drunks attending bachelors' parties, snooty stars, pubescent prom-goers, giggling brides and grooms, screaming kids watching Star Wars movies on the video cassette recorder and some nice people just wanting a ride to and from the airport without having to hassle with their luggage.

They are among the drivers for the four area limousine services and while transporting the Petroplex's elite, who shuck out anywhere from $45 on up for a minimum two-hour cruise, these chauffeurs have driven some pretty rough roads.

Although the local limousines may not be as extravagant as the long one in California with the midget bartender who walks up and down the drive shaft hump serving drinks to the passengers in the jacuzzi, the luxuries of local limousines seem sufficient for their clientele.

"You turn one of those cars on Monday and you wouldn't get there until Wednesday," said Barry Sykes, co-owner and driver for Classic Limousines Limited in Odessa.

TAKING CARE OF everything from the bar set-up with swizzle sticks, glasses, napkins and mixers (patrons furnish their own booze, which, in some stretch limos, is stored in the trunk and dispensed through electric wet bars) to buying roses and making theater, dinner and movie reservations, the chauffeurs open doors, escort passengers in and out and wait patiently for them to return to the car. Sometimes they spend their time wiping down the car, vacuuming it out, collecting cups and beer cans and emptying ashtrays. Sometimes they may, like Sykes a few weeks ago, get a quick glimpse of the opening celebrations of the Olympics from the back seat as they wait for a wedding reception to end.

Despite the constant "Pardon me, but do you have any Grey Poupon?" jokes from passing motorists, the drivers seem to enjoy the steady stream of passengers. Weddings are most preferred with some services offering sweetrolls and orange juice for the bride and groom on their way to the airport the morning after. A new mother going home from the hospital with her baby, husband and a single rose and businessmen with preferred clients who succeed in skipping the noontime parking problem also find the limousine service acceptable.

Limos have been sent to fetch a woman on her 60th birthday to take her to the wrestling matches. They've been backed up to stages to transfer celebrities to and from concerts. They've been used by locals who pretend (by waving a white sequined gloved hand or a tall cowboy hat out the moonroof on 42nd Street) they're celebrities being transferred to and from concerts. They've been used by ninth graders on the last day of school to be escorted forever away from the status of freshman.

H.C. Cotton, a driver for Continental Limousine in Odessa, said he had a couple celebrating the woman's birthday who rode around visiting friends before making the drag in Odessa to look for their children.

Please see LIMOUSINES, Page 2C

With the upholstered petition separating her from the chauffeur and tinted windows sheltering her from the eyes of the uninvited, Regency Limousine Public Relations Director Suzan Smith has complete privacy to watch TV or a video, pour a drink, listen to the stereo and catch some sun while watching the world roll by.

Minority businesses without GOP contracts

DALLAS (AP) — Minority-owned businesses are in the minority when it comes to contracts for the Republican National Convention.

In fact, the city and the Republican National Committee gave no minority business in any convention business, which has angered a city councilwoman.

"There should have been an aggressive pursuit of minority members of the community to take advantage of these monies that are being spent," said City Council member Diane Ragsdale. "This is a reflection of the total city situation as it relates to minority contracts."

Convention business will bring about $1.3 million for Dallas and $2.5 million for the GOP, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

The convention, scheduled for Aug. 20-23, has generated construction demands totaling $1.3 million, most by private donations funneled to the city from the Dallas Convention Fund Inc., which is raising money to pay for the city's portion of the convention.

GOP spokesman Gary Hoitsma said no minority businesses are among the national committee's list of contractors and subcontractors.

Officials could not estimate how much the party is spending on contracts, but it has a budget of $2.2 million for construction alone and is spending 55 to 60 percent of its total budget of $8 million in Dallas.

The only minority-owned business involved in a share of the official activities is Texas Novelty, which was given the right to sell souvenirs at the Dallas Convention Center.

The company's profits will come directly from sales and the firm will receive no money from city or party convention budgets.

Officials also said that the convention has failed to yield a bonus of additional jobs, officials said.

"A lot of black people are looking for jobs and opportunity," said Comer Cottrell, a member of the steering committee of the Dallas Welcoming Committee, a non-partisan group. "It appears they are not realizing those things."

Pierce was born Aug. 16, 1924, in Athens, was married to Willie Rushing on Aug. 8, 1942 in Athens, and moved to Lamesa in 1942.

He was a Baptist. He was a truck driver for Western Oil.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Bobby Pierce of Lamesa and Barry Pierce of Midland; three daughters, Barbara Schoonover and Jackie Calhoun, both of Lamesa, and Shirrel Gilliam of O'Donnell; his mother, Ora Lee Pierce of Lamesa; a sister, Doris Burton of Colorado City; four brothers, Alfred Pierce of Norwalk, Calif., Bill Pierce of Lamesa, Alvin Pierce of Bellflower, Calif., and Doyle Pierce of Dallas, and 12 grandchildren.

Bill Wells

Bill Wells, 57, a geologist and former Midland High School counselor, died Sunday in his Midland home following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the First Christian Church with the Rev. Steve Church officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Wells was born Nov. 7, 1926, in Oklahoma City, Okla., and attended schools in Midland before he moved to San Angelo, where he attended high school and played on the 1943 State Championship Football Team.

He served in the U.S. Navy in World War II, was married to Nita Wyatt in San Angelo on June 16, 1946, attended San Angelo Junior College and Texas Tech University, where he received the bachelor's degree in geology in 1950.

He returned to Midland, where he was employed as a consulting geologist by American Republic Corp., White Eagle, Mid-States Oil Corp., and Macdonald Oil Co.

In 1965, he received the master's degree in educational guidance from the University of Wyoming. He did graduate work at Sul Ross State University, Texas Tech University and the University of Texas at El Paso.

Wells was head counselor at Midland High School for 16 years before he became associated with the oil business as a development geologist with H.L. Brown Jr.

He was a member of the First Christian Church and was a lifetime member of the Texas State Teacher Association.

Survivors include his wife, Nita; a son, Jeff Wells of Midland; a daughter, Jane Korthauer of Midland, and three grandsons.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to the Hospice of Midland.

And Midlander Jim Miller, who started Milco, the oldest existing limousine service in the Midland-Odessa area, as an addition to his funeral transport service in 1975, still chuckles when he remembers the groom-to-be he took with friends to a strip joint in Odessa. The man apparently landed back in the limo with his glasses broken by a dancer, who didn't appreciate the location in which he tried to place a tip.

The ride isn't always smooth.

Eighty-nine miles were put on one car in one night on the Midland drag, according to Tom Redden, manager of Regency Limousine of Midland. It wasn't that bad, he said, adding it sure wasn't the first nor will it be the last time he drives the strip between Midland Park Mall and the parking lot of the UA Cine IV on Cuthbert.

"The kids under age who can't drink are OK," Redden said. "It's the ones that can drink that we don't like doing."

As an example, during one night of massive drinking in the back by a group of young adults, Redden and driver Ashley Cooper, who was riding shotgun, heard a lot of thumping going on. Thinking it was just heavy stomps to the stereo music, they rolled on.

When the source of the noise was determined to be that of footsteps on the roof, discovered when a male passenger's arms suddenly appeared swinging against the glass in front of them "playing like windshield wipers," Redden immediately braked and swerved to the curb. The guy, who had crawled out through the moonroof, settled back in the car when faced with a couple of options — mainly behaving or walking.

Lamont Furlow, another owner of Classic Limousines Limited, was kidded by a couple of strippers during a bachelor's party about having a French name, an idea that apparently appealed to them. A few weeks later, Lamont's brother, a man deeply involved in church activities who was feeling quite self-conscious about his presence in the parking lot of a strip joint, was worrying about the possibility of elders in the church passing by as he rubbed down the limo waiting for his party to return.

When the two dancers who had ridden with Lamont came out, spotted his brother and asked where their good friend was, his brother was really nervous. According to Sykes, the conversation was something along this road: "How do you know Lamont?" he spluttered. "I mean, he's married and everything."

According to Cooper, a call came into Regency from a woman who needed two passengers picked up and transported to a pre-party at an airport hangar. The passengers, the woman explained, were taking the place of her and her husband, who were afraid to fly, on a trip to Dallas with the group meeting at the hangar.

"When I got there, there was this big cage with two live brown chickens in it," Cooper said, laughing. They put a necktie around one and a scarf around the other and escorted them to the party.

Trips between Odessa and Midland bars can often take longer than those made in private car, according to a few limousine drivers. This usually is the result of excessive drinking in the back seat.

But when Sykes was making a trip down State Highway 191 shortly after the 4th of July and the passengers asked him to pull over, "I thought it was the same thing."

He was surprised: "They said they wanted to toast the United States of America because you couldn't do something like this in Russia," he said. "They opened a bottle of champagne and sang 'God Bless America.' I took my hat off and sang with them and then we all got back in."

When a group of football players for the New Orleans Saints came to play in a charity golf tournament in Big Spring recently, Redden was the driver of a car that picked them up at the Midland airport. Five of the players, including Richard Todd and Guido Merkins, rode in his limo.

When the group arrived in Big Spring an hour later, the football players got out and Redden began his routine clean-up.

"I pulled out 64 empty beer cans," he said, grinning. "And there were only five of them in the car."

Man killed in cycle accident

A young Midland man died and his female passenger was hospitalized when the motorcycle they were riding went out of control and hit a curb on Andrews Highway early Sunday morning.

Pronounced dead of massive injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital at 8 a.m. Sunday was Douglas Gregory, 18, of 3111 "B" West Storey. In serious condition this morning at MMH was 17-year-old Lenina Marie Massingill, also of 3111 "B" West Storey.

Ms. Massingill suffered head injuries and two broken ankles, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

City police said she was a passenger on a 1982 Honda driven by Gregory when it went out of control about 2:40 a.m. Sunday. The bike jumped the north curb of Andrews Highway in the 3500 block and hit a traffic sign before skidding to a halt.

Services for Gregory are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

White's assistant to head Mondale's state campaign

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas Democratic Party leaders will be running presidential candidate Walter Mondale's state campaign, an effort officials says will be spearheaded by Dwayne Holman, the special assistant to Gov. Mark White.

Holman, 40, has taken a leave of absence from the governor's office to work on the campaign, officials said.

Members of Mondale's national staff were scheduled to meet with Holman and other state campaign directors in Washington over the weekend to determine budgets, staffs, endorsements and other campaign matters, said Mark Farnen, the Texas field director for the Mondale-Geraldine Ferraro ticket.

"He (Holman) has good political sense," Farnen said. "He knows people all over the state."

Farnen said a Mondale-Ferraro statewide office was scheduled to open next week in Austin.

Holman directed the Mondale primary campaign last spring, when the former vice president easily won the state over Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Holman also headed White's successful statewide campaigns for attorney general in 1978 and governor in 1982.

White and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a former candidate for Mondale's running mate, have said they would actively work for the Mondale-Ferraro campaign.

Calvin Guest, former state Democratic Party chairman, and state Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple will remain Mondale's co-chairmen in Texas, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported Sunday.

Guest has close ties with White and Holman, who was executive director for the state party during part of Guest's chairmanship.

Businesses destroyed by fire

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — A fire that destroyed three bars and an antique store probably was caused by faulty wire, authorities said.

"Offhand, I'd have to rule out intentional cause," Fire Marshal Jimmy Buchanan told The Dallas Morning News. "We couldn't get into the (crawl space) ourselves when we inspected it before. I don't see how they could have done it. The logical conclusion would be electrical."

The fire broke out about 1:25 a.m. Sunday in the ceiling area of Charlie's, a bar located across the street from City Hall. It spread to the Happy Armadillo, the Showdown and to John Saul's Antiques and the antique shop's warehouse.

The blaze, which took 80 firefighters three hours to control, caused an estimated $1 million damage, Buchanan said.

Two volunteer firefighters were injured when a brick wall collapsed, Buchanan said. One was treated at the scene, while the other was transported to a Greenville hospital for treatment of an ankle injury.

Commerce firefighters were aided by 14 other area fire departments, law enforcement and emergency medical agencies, Buchanan said.

He said the fire spread quickly because the 60-year-old wood buildings were connected by attics with no fire walls to stop or slow down fires.

Stock explosion causes grinning

Hearst Feature Service

The current stock market explosion has White House occupants grinning like the proverbial Cheshire cat. They're throwing their hats into the air, reveling in a sumptuous dividend on the eve of the Republican convention in Dallas.

Meanwhile, that other sound you hear is the gnashing of teeth as some professional bears eat their hats. They have some tall explaining to do, but no doubt will be up to it. They'll point to hedge clauses in their market letters or note that markets in basic downturns often show powerful rallies, as in 1973. Bear Guy Granville, who put out a temporary buy signal three weeks ago, already has done that. He's expecting sharply lower prices later this year. Says he (once again): "Sell all stocks."

If it is of any comfort to the bears, only a few analysts anticipated this sudden spurt. Wall Street, quiet simply, was taken by surprise. That in itself is not exactly news; quite often, The Street is caught unawares. One reaction is predictable. Some of the bears will metamorphose into bulls, and a few who were right will say, "I told you so."

Los Angeles investment adviser Hugh Lynch Jr., who just launched a new letter, called this one correctly. He told me three weeks ago, bearing my scoff when he did, that stocks were about to explode with multi-point gains. And now he doesn't think it's over, although gains of course will be harder to achieve.

Robert Nurock, writer of The Astute Investor and an "elf" on public television's Wall Street Week, also called the turn. He phoned me excitedly two weeks ago with a judgment that the upward move will continue. He forecasts a record high in the Dow average. Nurock explains that an entire new class of investors who missed the move will be coming in. Also, institutions that sold heavily before the rally now will become big buyers. And "switch fund" advisers will be recommending a move from money funds to stock funds.

It might be that the gain in the bond market is even more important than the rally in stocks, although much less visible to the public. Bonds run on interest rates, and some rates have come down. That could have powerful political implications. The White House probably is cheering on the bond market more than the stock market. The bond rally is their vindication for budget deficits and other "irresponsibility" the Democrats are pointing a finger at.

Yet, there are historic relationships between stock prices and election results. Stocks usually rise in an election year, but if they do not, the incumbent often is in trouble. With only four exceptions since 1900, incumbents who ran were re-elected if the market was higher on the Monday before voting day than it was at the start of the year.

Yale Hirsch, who edits Smart Money, points out that most of the exceptions had unusual characteristics. Teddy Roosevelt split the party and lost in 1912, despite a good stock

This graphic illustrates the movement of the stockmarket during the past three weeks. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange reached 176.62 million shares Friday, the third largest total on record, against 131.19 million Thursday.

The market was depressed by the fall of France in 1940, yet Franklin Roosevelt won. The 1976 race was clouded by Richard Nixon's resignation two years earlier; despite a rising market, Gerald Ford lost. And Jimmy Carter lost in 1980, with the market up, but a third-party candidate was in the race.

Dollar shatters record; Gold down $5

LONDON (AP) — The American dollar, boosted by higher U.S. interest rates took off on a new record-shattering march in early European trading today. Gold prices tumbled some five dollars an ounce.

The dollar, surging against every currency, hit a new record high against the Italian lire, bettered its previous closing record against the French franc, and reached an 11-year high against the West German mark and a 10-year high against the Dutch guilder.

The dollar hit 1,795.00 Italian lire, compared with Friday's late rate of 1,778.00 and the previous record of 1,788.92, also recorded at the close on Aug. 7.

The dollar traded at 8.9665 French francs, up from late Friday's late 8.9100 and bettering the previous record of 8.9495 at the close on Aug. 7, but below its trading record of 8.9730.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar rose nearly two Japanese yen to close at 243.90 yen, compared with 242.15 on Friday.

USENCO to develop new oil projects

USENCO Inc. has reported that arrangements have been concluded for the first of two multi-well development projects. Estimated cost of the first project is $10,500,000. The largest acreage block is located in Reagan county, and is surrounded by Upper and Lower Spraberry and Dean production from 5600 feet to 8000 feet. The first well should commence drilling on October 1, 1984 and a minimum of 20 locations have been designated for the project.

A second multi-well development program has been tentatively arranged that will finance the drilling of 15 designated Spraberry wells located in Reagan, Martin and Upton counties.

Franchises not always right for blacks

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

For minority entrepreneurs, fast-food franchises would seem a foolproof way to enter the economic mainstream. In return for a relatively small investment, franchisees are provided a well-known product, guaranteed marketing support and professional advice on running a restaurant.

What's more, fast-food outlets such as McDonald's and Burger King dot corners in many urban communities. Many franchisers advertise in ethnic publications such as Ebony magazine, and most chains say they are increasing efforts to recruit more minority franchisees.

But as relative newcomers to the $39 billion-a-year fast-food industry, blacks have found success to be elusive.

They hold less than 2 percent of the nation's 44,159 franchised restaurants, according to a 1982 Commerce Department survey, the most recent figures available.

Black entrepreneurs complain of difficulty in borrowing to build restaurants. And some experts say black owners of fast-food restaurants cannot compete effectively with white counterparts because some franchisers steer minority franchisees to sites in inner-city neighborhoods, leaving choice suburban markets to longtime or wealthy multiple-franchise operators.

Franchisers admit that only a handful of minority entrepreneurs — no one is sure exactly how many — operate fast-food restaurants in predominantly white neighborhoods. But they deny that they have a policy of steering minority franchisees into ghetto areas. They say that most black entrepreneurs simply prefer to operate restaurants in black neighborhoods.

There's a "double standard in the industry," said Burger King Minority Franchise Association President Pettis Norman, operator of a Burger King in Dallas, who has followed the issue since 1963 when Burger King officials signed a non-discrimination policy with his group.

"The first problem is getting into the system," he said. But once in, "We do not want to be relegated just to our own communities. I've talked to a number of (franchisees) who say that their companies have a policy of steering blacks into black communities."

Adds Art Gunther, president of Wichita, Kan.-based Pizza Hut Inc., a PepsiCo Inc. subsidiary: "There's no question that with a lot of these (franchise) outfits, if you're black ... you end up with a place in a ghetto area where all the stores' windows are all boarded up."

"There's a lot more that needs to be done than just making the opportunity available to minorities. They face built-in handicaps...It's far easier for a white man to go into a bank and get a loan," for example, than it is for blacks, Gunther said.

The problems are not new. As far back as 1977, black owners of fast-food outlets were complaining that they were not offered restaurants outside black communities in hearings before an ad hoc subcommittee of the California Assembly Finance and Insurance committee.

Gas prices drop despite oil cutbacks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite Saudi Arabia's reduced oil production and U.S. motorists' increased fuel consumption, gasoline prices have dropped for the 13th consecutive week, an oil industry analyst said Sunday.

"There's an apparent anomaly of increased consumption, increased spot market prices and decreasing prices," said Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter. "Consumers will hardly register a protest over that."

The overall average price of gasoline, including all taxes, was $1.1785 per gallon on Aug. 10, a 3.4-cent-per-gallon decrease from the May 11 price of $1.2121, Lundberg said. His firm surveyed 16,000 of the nation's 210,000 gasoline stations Aug. 10.

"A 13th week of falling wholesale and retail prices indicates that the continuing oversupply of finished products — gasoline and diesel fuels — (is) having a greater impact on the marketplace than either increased spot prices or increasing consumption," he said.

But the price declines probably won't last much longer, Lundberg said, noting reports that Saudi Arabia, a mainstay of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, has reduced daily production from 5.5 million barrels to 4 million.

For now, however, some bargain prices are available with more than 1,300 of the 16,000 outlets surveyed charging $1 or less per gallon for regular leaded gasoline at self-serve pumps, he said.

Current overall prices are 7.4 cents lower than last August's level, 10.9 cents lower than the price in August 1982 and 15.9 cents less than the price of August 1981, Lundberg said.

However, the current average is still higher than the low of $1.1193 in March 1983 which was caused by disarray in OPEC, he said. That low occurred before a new 5-cent-per-gallon federal tax was imposed.

Fuel consumption has increased an estimated 3 percent this year, Lundberg said.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Texans optimistic about future, says banker

HOUSTON — Optimism among Texas consumers declined during the most recent quarter, but less than among consumers across the nation. As a result, at the end of the period, the typical Texas was slightly more optimistic than was the average American. The gap between the two groups is more pronounced when only expectations for the future, as opposed to current conditions, are considered, according to Charles T. Frankle, vice president and chief economist of First City Bancorporation of Texas.

Tandy shows annual increase of 6 percent

FORT WORTH — Tandy Corp. has announced that consolidated sales for the month of July were $190,050,000, an increase of six percent over the July 1983 sales of $179,559,000. Sales of Tandy's U.S. Radio Shack division declined one percent to $143,942,000 during July 1984 from $145,146,000 in July 1983. Sales of U.S. Radio Shack stores in existence more than one year declined three percent during July 1984.

Grandy's opens 100th store in Oklahoma

LEWISVILLE, Texas — Grandy's, one of America's fastest growing restaurant chains has opened its 100th store in Warr Acres, Oklahoma, a community in the northwest corner of the city. The opening marks the expansion of Texas-based Grandy's into 14 states across the country. By the end of 1986, when a current five-year expansion program is complete, the Grandy's organization will include a projected 244 locations.

FAA announces plans to end flight delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, trying to blunt criticism that it isn't doing enough to reduce airway congestion and flight delays, announced plans for new computer equipment and said it is reviewing whether more controllers might be needed to direct traffic.

But FAA Administrator Donald Engen cautioned that flight delays are not expected to ease soon in parts of the country such as the Northeast where the airways are heavily traveled.

T Bill yields rise in latest Treasury auction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose in the government's latest weekly auctions with rates on both three-month and six-month securities hitting their highest levels in two years.

The Treasury said Monday it sold $13.2 billion in new securities — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 10.55 percent, up from last week's 10.40 percent.

W.R. Grace to buy National Medical Care

The agreement calls for the group to pay $19.25 in cash for each of the estimated 18.7 million shares of National Medical Care common stock.
