Hospital's Cash Supply Melting

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ADMINISTRATORS predict Health Sciences Center Hospital may run out of cash by late August if financial problems continue, leaving an increase in taxes as the only alternative to closing the hospital's doors.

Lubbock County Hospital District board members met with the County Commissioners Tuesday morning to explain some of the hospital's financial problems and ask the commissioners for help.

The commissioners approved the hospital district's request for a "blue ribbon" financial advisory committee to study both alternate sources of revenue (which may include raising taxes) and the impact of the medical complex on the economic community.

LCHD Executive Director Gerald Bosworth has on several occasions said the teaching hospital faces a cash shortfall of almost $1 million by the end of the year. But board members meeting in an afternoon work session studied a more comprehensive projection of cash flow.

Cash Flow Anticipation

Hospital district finance committee chairman C. Wayne Smith said the predicted drying up of funds by August will occur if the teaching hospital continues to operate at the present rate of financial loss. He described the projected financial picture as the result of "the worst that could happen."

Smith added that the projection was made without taking into consideration any cost containment measures or alternate sources of revenues the board presently is considering.

Adminstrative staff members produced the financial prediction, described as a rough estimate, to help underline their bid to the County Commissioners for financial help. But concern that the forecast be accurate prompted the board to recommend an audutor's review of the projected figures.

Smith stressed that an auditing firm cannot approve such projections, nor can they give an opinion on the results. Auditors would only be allowed to review the process by which the predictions were made, he said.

It is estimated that such an auditing review would cost the hospital district about $1,750.

Board member Don McInturff hesitated to approve hiring the auditors if they could not offer an opinion on the forecast's accuracy.

"I frankly just don't see the desirability of paying someone to say 'I've read this'", McInturff said.

Third Party Review Urged

Bill Stinnett, the hospital's associate director for finances, said that to eliminate any possible accusations of bias, the projections on cash flow should probably be reviewed by a third party.

"We don't want anyone to think we've prepared some 'scare figures' to get the taxes raised," board member Jack Flygare added.

Board members agreed to meet in another work session before the next planned meeting of the County Commissioners to compile a list of everything being done to reduce expenditures as well as proposed measures to increase revenue.

Much of the discussion in Commissioners' Court Tuesday centered on the failure of HB 169 — a measure to provide funds for resident physicians in state teaching hospitals — to clear the Senate in the last few days of the legislative session. Many of the LCHD board members, as well as the commissioners, view the failure of the bill as a refusal by the state to support the training of its physicians.

Board members and hospital administrators alike were counting on the passage of HB 169 to alleviate some of the hospital's financial pressure. But LCHD Executive Director Gerald Bosworth repeatedly stresses that even with state support, the hospital will probably have to draw on extra county tax dollars.

"The current county tax base in Lubbock is small," Bosworth told the commissioners. He quoted Harris County (the Houston area) and Bexar County (San Antonio) as having proportionately

Prehistoric Cat's Bones Uncovered

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ARCHEOLOGISTS sifting through the silt at the Lubbock Lake site have uncovered the bone of a 12,000 year-old cat. The discovery marks only the second time that a prehistoric cat has been found in association with man.

The bone, which formed part of the cat's leg, indicates an animal twice the size of the modern American mountain lion, according to Dr. Eileen Johnson, project director.

She said the bone could be evidence of one of two types of saber-toothed tigers — an extinct jaguar or an ancient mountain lion. Positive identification of the cat will have to wait until fall, however, when Dr. Johnson is able to contact experts at universities around the country.

University Student's Find

The bone was found late Friday by Aline Carriere, a 19-year-old Brandeis University junior from Woonsocket, R.I. News of the discovery was held until Tuesday because of the holiday weekend.

An archeology and English student spending the summer at the Lubbock site, Miss Carriere said she thought she was "just cleaning a bone," and didn't realize the significance of the find until Dr. Johnson identified it.

The bone, specifically the "distal end of the humerus," dates to the Clovis period of prehistory, which ranges from 11,000 to 12,000 years ago.

Only one other record of such an animal found in association with man exists at the Blackwater Draw site at Clovis, N.M. Other remains of the cats have been found, but none displaying evidence that they were used by man in any way, explained Dr. Johnson.

Slaughter Evidenced

This cat probably was butchered, said Dr. Johnson, because the other animal bones uncovered at the site show evidence of slaughter for eating.

She said she hopes to uncover more of the cat's bones during the summer, and suspects they will be scattered throughout the site.

At the Clovis level, the Lubbock Lake Site also has revealed evidence of an extinct bear, Arctodus, also found in association with man. A tooth and parts of the front paw of that giant bear, which was twice the size of a grizzly, were found in 1976.

"The only large extinct animal we anticipate finding but have not, is the

Governors Gain Special Powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Tuesday he has signed an executive order giving the nation's governors authority to help alleviate gasoline shortages this summer.

At a nationally broadcast news conference, the president said the order gives the governors authority to require that some gasoline stations remain open on weekends, to set minimum purchases to avoid topping off tanks, and to institute an odd-even selling system to avoid long lines.

Carter, who also was called upon to defend his frequent travel by helicopter in a time of gasoline shortage, said the order would "simply make it more convenient for drivers to purchase gasoline" but will not save fuel.

Conservation Urged Through Summer

He said continued "care, planning and conservation" would be necessary throughout the summer to avoid lines at gasoline pumps as well as spot shortages.

The president said the nation could expect a "mild increase" in the supply of oil "which should help alleviate spot shortages." But he cautioned that "at best" the gasoline available would only equal last summer's supply, even though the demand has increased.

He again called upon Americans to conserve, saying the Memorial Day weekend just ended — when many travelers used public transportation — shows it is possible.

The White House later released a "fact sheet" specifying that the order allows governors to act in the absence of emergency powers granted by state legislatures.

Acting Federal Officers

"Governors who choose to exercise the authority delegated to them will be acting as federal officers, administering and enforcing federal law," the White House said.

The White House also listed 19 states that have not already given their governors emergency powers. They are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Asked pointedly why he has traveled by helicopter twice in recent weeks on fishing trips, Carter replied, "It's much less expensive."

Weekend Helicoptering

The president used his helicopter, Marine One, last weekend when he left Camp David, Md., for a fishing trip in central Pennsylvania. On May 14, he left Camp Hoover, Va., by helicopter for a fishing trip in the Atlantic Ocean off Virginia Beach, Va.

Marine One, a plush VIP helicopter that seats about 12, costs at least $752 per operating hour for fuel and maintenance. But a presidential journey by helicopter always requires two — one for the president and his party; a second identical helicopter for Secret Service agents.

Without citing the actual cost, Carter said helicopter travel was less expensive than a motorcade that required a "very large entourage including seven or eight carloads of press" as well as police guarding each intersection the motorcade passed. On private trips such as the fishing expeditions, however, the "pool reporters" who accompany the president are limited to two small vans.

"Not Enough" Escape

Asked how often he had "escaped the news media" for fishing expeditions, Carter quickly retorted: "Not enough."

An avid angler, Carter went fishing four times last weekend and four times the week of May 13. He said said that when he has "a rare opportunity" to go fishing, "it is not only good for me but for the country."

Turning to inflation, Carter said he intended to "stick with" his voluntary anti-inflation program though "it's going to require some time for it to be effective."

He said the alternative of mandatory wage-price controls was unacceptable, even though the current wage guideline of 7 percent falls far short of the increase in inflation. Over the past three months, prices have been increasing at an annual rate of 13.9 percent.

Despite opposition from House Democrats, the president also defended his decision to gradually lift price controls

Station's Gas Price Nears $1

By PHILIP BRASHER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MOTORISTS passing the Mars service station at 2315 4th St. may think the station's gas prices are as high as the planet, but the station manager says she is just charging what her boss in St. Louis told her to, even though she is selling little gas.

"We're selling a lot of cigarettes, but not too much gas," said manager Bennie Jester.

20-Cent Jump

Prices at the Mars pumps rose 20 cents just before the Memorial Day weekend to 91.9 cents per gallon for regular, 96.9 cents for unleaded and 98.9 cents per gallon for premium. Prices at other city stations generally range from 70 to 80 cents as the Mars station prices did last week.

Miss Jester said Herb Backhaus of the Midland Oil Company in St. Louis told her last week to hike her prices, even though she warned him nobody would buy gas at the higher prices.

Knows What He's Doing

"He knows it's not selling," she said. "He just said, 'I know what I'm doing.'"

She said she has no idea why Backhaus ordered the hike and said the station had little trouble this spring obtaining enough gas to sell.

Backhaus was unavailable for comment.

Ralph Olive, a station attendant who said he has worked for the station almost 11 years, said the station's business has flucuated since the price hike.

"It comes and goes," he said. "Someday we don't have very many and some-

Solar Energy Upgraded By Fuel Crunch

By SUE MORRISON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PEOPLE have been slow to accept solar energy because they are misinformed about its cost and uninformed about its benefits, Russel Smith, executive director of the Texas Solar Energy Society told a standing room only crowd here Tuesday night.

Smith spoke to about 200 residents at Hodges Community Center as part of the "Solar Energy for Your Home" program sponsored by the Texas Energy and Agricultural Extension Services.

Smith emphasized that the idea of solar energy is not new to today's society. The reason solar space-and water-heated homes have not been more thoroughly researched and built, he said, is because fossil fuels have been cheap and available so people haven't realized the need to explore alternate plans of energy sources.

Smith said one reason people have been slow to accept solar energy is because they are misinformed about the cost of solar heating systems.

A recent Newsweek magazine article "said the cost of solar heating was anywhere from $3,500 to $4,500, and that's just not true," he said. "Traveling throughout the country, the solar-heated systems I've seen have cost anywhere from $1,200 to $2,400."

Most home buyers don't realize that if they want a solar-heated home, a conventional electric or gas system also will be installed.

Henry Huneke, owner of First Manufactured Homes, said the conventional

Federal Judge Slain In San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal judge was shot and killed Tuesday as he left his apartment, the second time in seven months that an official involved in West Texas drug investigations was the target of a shooting.

The victim, U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., 63, had been under protection by federal marshals, but he recently told them he no longer needed their help. Wood's landlady at the Chateau Dijon apartments said, however, that the judge had told her he felt his life might be in danger.

Wood had been granted protection in November, after Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, chief prosecutor in the drug cases, narrowly escaped death when his car was riddled by bullets as he sat in it.

Federal officials said Wood had received threats at about the time of the Kerr shooting. U.S. marshals beefed up security around all federal judges Tuesday in the Western District of Texas.

President Carter and Attorney General Griffin Bell reacted with outrage, and Bell sent James J. Ingraham, a deputy assistant director of the FBI, to investigate.

"The killing of a federal judge ... is an assault on our very system of justice," Carter said. Bell said, "It's really a dark time in this country."

Law enforcement officers were searching for a man driving a small red car. Eyewitnesses told police the assailant was in his early 20s and had curly hair.

Wood apparently had tried to start his car and had gotten out when he was confronted by his killer, police said. He was shot once in the lower back and was pronounced dead on arrival at 9:30 a.m. at Northeast Baptist Hospital.

One person who heard the shot was Jim Spears, son of U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears of San Antonio, who was visitng his mother and sister at a condominium across the street.

Judge Spears said his son told him he heard the shot, rushed to the window and saw Wood lying on the ground. He said he called an emergency medical team and police before running to the scene. He said he arrived at the same time the judge's wife, Kathryn, arrived.

The FBI assumed control of the case and immediately threw a mantle of secrecy over it. Bell was in touch at one point with Judge Spears.

Wood, appointed to the bench in 1971, had been presiding over drug cases developed by the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio. The cases were based in El Paso, and a Midland grand jury also was investigating.

One of the most publicized cases was that of El Paso resident Jimmy Chagra, a professional gambler charged with conspiracy to possess, import and distribute cocaine and marijuana.

Wood was to preside over Chagra's trial, due to start in Austin July 23. The Special Protection Given Other Judges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, expressing shock and anger over the killing of a federal judge in Texas, dispatched one of the FBI's top criminal investigators to look into the matter and placed four other federal judges in the area under special protection.

"We cannot have a country where judges are assassinated or killed," Bell told a news conference. "If our society has become so lawless that you can just kill federal judges, or any judge for that matter, we haven't got a system of law. It's really a dark time in this country."

President Carter said that "the killing of a federal judge ... is an assault on our very system of justice. All Americans join me in condemning this heinous crime." He described the slain judge as "courageous, hard-working, tough-minded and fair."

Bell, himself a former federal judge, said, "We don't intend to leave a stone unturned." He said the shooting was the first known assassination of a federal judge.

Bell was joined by FBI Director William H. Webster, another former federal judge, in announcing that James O. Ingraham, deputy assistant director in the FBI's criminal division, will be in charge of investigating the killing of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Wood was shot to death Tuesday morning as he stepped from his car outside his apartment in San Antonio.

Bell, who described the incident as "such a dastardly act in a free country," said U.S. marshals were being assigned to protect four federal judges in the San Antonio area. Webster said every available agent in the San Antonio area, approximately 40 men, had been assigned to the case.

He and Webster said the FBI was investigating the possibility that the shooting was related to narcotics dealing and two previous shootings at federal law enforcement officials.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James W. Kerr Jr. of the western district of Texas escaped injury last November when his car was riddled with 19 to 21 shots from a .30 caliber automatic weapon. The fol-

SPC Radiologic Exams Set Friday

Required pre-entrance exams for fall classes in radiologic technology and respiratory therapy at South Plains College at Lubbock are scheduled for 9 a.m. Friday at SPC Lubbock, 1302 Main St., Room 601.

In addition to the examinations, applicants for the radiologic technology program must provide high school and/or college transcripts, ACT or SAT scores and meet for an interview with program coordinator Doyle Davis.

Courses offered in radiologic technology include orientation, professional ethics for radiology, nursing procedures pertinent to radiology, radiologic physics, exposure and positioning, clinical practice, special procedures, composite I-II, seminar and technical reviews, skull radiography and radiographic anatomy.

Respiratory therapy courses include clinical procedures, introduction to health sciences, basic physical science, respiratory procedures, applied anatomy and physiology, respiratory pathology, clinical applications and medical correlation.

For more information, contact Larry Rice at SPC Lubbock.

Sheriff, Deputies Adopt New Look

Lubbock County's sheriff and deputies stepped out in new uniforms this week, for the first time in the department's history.

County commissioners consistently have turned down Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard's request that either the county pay for new uniforms or provide deputies with a clothing allowance, so this year the department decided to buy their own uniforms.

Blanchard said Tuesday that he and his deputies wanted the uniforms so they would be more easily identified by the public.

"We've had too many people asking 'Who are you?' when we're trying to do our job," the sheriff said. "And wearing a uniform is one way of answering that question."

The identity problem particularly affected deputies who served civil warrants in unmarked cars, Blanchard said.

"By wearing uniforms we hope to ease some of the fears citizens may have when someone they don't know calls on them," Blanchard said.

Almost all the deputies will be wearing the brown western-style suits with the sheriff's department insignia on the left sleeve. Deputies had to pay about $150 for their uniforms.

Test Yet To Come For Maggie

BRITAIN'S ELECTION has not, as feared, produced a hair-thin parliamentary majority or, worse, a no-majority situation in which a patchwork coalition government would have been dependent for day-to-day survival upon a few votes scraped up from among the splintered minor parties.

Instead, Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives are firmly in control and with every prospect at this point of remaining there for the next five years.

And now, as she declared in taking possession of No. 10 Downing Street, "there's work to be done." And how. The sceptered isle has been coming apart at the political and economic seams for years.

THREE POSTWAR decades of social innovation, the handiwork of Labor and Tory governments alike, have created a complex and costly welfare structure which a no-growth economy cannot support.

If there is one attribute that has characterized the British national community in recent years, it is perhaps selfishness, the desire of each well-defined economic and social group to carve for itself the largest possible slice out of a shrinking pie.

Whether the British now have decided to change all of this, it is too early to say. Clearly they have voted a change. But that vote, as is so often the case in a troubled democracy, was essentially a negative vote.

It was more a rejection of Labor than it was a declaration of faith in the Tories or their leader—a woman who delights in the nickname "Iron Lady", bestowed upon her by the Soviets, no compliment intended.

MARGARET THATCHER'S oft-declared intent is to restore a sense of national and individual initiative that, she believes, alone can turn Britain around from its long years of economic decline, and stimulate the growth essential to its future.

Much is being made of the fact that she is Britain's and Europe's first woman head of government. But that is a matter of curiosity only, guaranteeing her at this point no more than a footnote in history.

Her eventual place will be determined by the extent to which she overcomes Britain's grave problems that contribute to the national regeneration Britain so desperately needs and the British so earnestly seek.

With her Celtic minorities truculently asserting identity and pressing for some measure of autonomy, at the expense of a national unity that has always been more of an English assumption than a British reality, it's a tall order that will require all the reserves of toughness and determination for which Maggie Thatcher has become noted.

Jailbirds On CETA Payroll

ANOTHER SHOCKING example of misuse of federal taxes has been exposed by U.S. Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb.

Prison inmates are being paid from Comprehensive Employment and Training Act appropriations, the Congressman said, and this misuse of CETA funds nationwide may run into millions of dollars annually.

Scandal-scarred CETA funding, a sweetheart of a program dreamed up by liberals for training hardcore unemployed persons, has thus far resisted all challenges to its continuation.

Even Congressman Cavanaugh's allegations have drawn nothing more than a noncommittal "we'll take a close look" at the situation from Labor Department bureaucrats who funnel CETA funds out by the billions.

LABOR DEPARTMENT officials even defended the use of CETA funds for training inmates who are about to leave prison.

Ignoring the fact that, ostensibly, the job of a prison is to rehabilitate a criminal and send him back into society with job skills and training, the federal bureaucrats see nothing wrong with paying a prisoner to take job training.

Oh, they conceded it may not do much good to pay prisoners who'll be in jail for years to come, but they pointed out that it is "legal" to pay those who will be released in a "reasonable" length of time.

According to Cavanaugh, an inmate in the District of Columbia's Lorton Reformatory —serving a life term for murder and robbery —was paid $9,838 a year to work as a central facility culinary cook.

ANOTHER INMATE, serving 27 to 84 years for rape, drew $9,838 a year, too, Cavanaugh said, to work at the prison as a plumber.

The Congressman listed 27 inmates who were paid more than $200,000 out of the CETA program. He said more than 170 inmates are receiving salaries this year.

Prisoners are never charged more than $2 a day for room and board and are not required to make support payments to their dependents, who quite likely are on the welfare, food stamp, free school lunch and breakfast, rent subsidy and/or a host of other public support programs back home.

Nor are the CETA-gouging prisoners required to make restitution to victims of their crimes.

"The criminal offender ends up being treated twice as good as the poor, hardworking, honest citizen attempting to learn a job skill and become a self-sufficient, contributing member of society," Cavanaugh said.

Need we say more?

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Lost City Of Atlantis 'Located' Many Times

THE SOVIET Union has announced that University of Moscow Prof. Georgiy Lindberg had located the "lost continent" of Atlantis. Tass, the Russian news agency, stated:

"Using new Soviet oceanographic techniques, the Soviet Union has found Atlantis. It is off Iceland in waters three miles deep." Hokus, hokey, hokum!

Not the Soviet but University of Athens scientist Anghelos Galanopoulos, a Greek, discovered Atlantis—and nowhere near Iceland.

The vanished island (also spelled Atalantis and Atalantica) has been variously identified with the Americas, Canary Islands, Palestine, Scandinavia, etc. And rumors of its existence are among the oldest in human life.

They go back to when men and women first followed the animals across the Bering Strait, which was once a "land bridge," to North America. They had neither horses nor wheels and their travels were slow.

THEY FOUND it difficult to travel through the steaming jungles of Alaska and our Pacific Northwest.

Not until men and women reached Mexico did a high civilization develop in either the Northern or Southern hemisphere. Yet traditions in both places hinted of an Atlantis.

When the Sahara dried up and drove its population to Africa's rivers and jungles, descendants hinted at an Atlantis.

Their legends placed Atlantis in the ocean beyond the Columns of Hercules (Gibraltar) and called it larger than Libya and Asia Minor combined.

Arab geographers placed Atlantis in the area of the Phoenicians. Plato, in both the "Timaeus" and the "Critias" gave the fullest description of Atlantis.

PLATO SPOKE of a hill in an area he called Metropolis and described a moat encircling this elevation.

Roman Caius Cornelius Tacitus wrote about the lost continent as "the extremity of our hemisphere where you can hear the sound made by the sun sinking into the sea."

Simeon of Syria, the first and most famous of the pillar saints, wrote of Atlantis. And the mystery held its momentum through the Dark Ages.

In fact, you will find references to Atlantis in the Erasmus papers in Switzerland's University of Basel.

After the Renaissance the land mass also appeared repeatedly on 14th and 15th century maps.

And, running into the 17th and 18th centuries the existence of Atlantis was debated and sometimes admitted, even by Buffon, Montaigne and Voltaire.

IN 1830 THE debate began all over again when a large volcanic island arose from nowhere in the sea opposite southern Sicily. French, British and Napolitans, one after another, planted their flags on it and claimed it.

But the struggle between the powers collapsed when, shortly thereafter, the island sunk between the waves.

Professor Galanopoulos reverted to Plato and claimed that the Greek islands, scattered throughout the entire Eastern Mediterranean, are the protruding tops of vanished Atlantis. Further, he claimed that the island of Thira, north of Crete, is the remnant of the main harbor of Atlantis.

To pin this down, Professor Galanopoulos enlisted the aid of Dr. James W. Mayor of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts. The purpose was to explore for Plato's Metropolis and, in the process, demote Moscow University Georgiy Lindberg and the Soviet.

Dr. Mayor led an American-Greek team aboard the Woods Hole Institution's research vessel.

And they found Plato's moat off neighboring Thira, precisely as Plato said. Atlantis lay at a depth of 1,300 feet and a "seismic profile" confirmed Professor Galanopoulos and Plato alike.

You can be sure the Russian people will read nothing about this.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Washington Hardball

EVANS

WASHINGTON—Just as Sen. Charles (Mac) Mathias of Maryland was about to enrage business lobbyists May 8 by voting out the bill they most hotly oppose, he pulled back the curtain to permit a glimpse of the hardball still being played backstage in Washington in this post-Watergate age of reform.

In casting his vote, Mathias disclosed that a business Political Action Committee (PAC) had threatened to withhold contributions for his re-election campaign next year unless he voted against the bill in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Mathias refused then and still refuses to disclose the name, but it happened to be the PAC of Bristol-Myers Co., the famous pharmaceutical firm.

The PACs, part of the elaborate new paraphernalia of financing politics, have been widely used by lobbyists playing hardball with legislators.

What was different in this instance was that the Bristol-Myers man played the game with too much zeal and too little finesse, and that Mathias, by blowing the whistle, did not play the game at all.

Specifically at issue was "Illinois Brick," beyond the ken of the general public but at the top of the agenda for both the business community and the Judiciary Committee's expansive new chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

KENNEDY HAS been pushing the bill to overturn a 1977 Supreme Court decision involving Illinois Brick Co. Applicable to thousands of companies, the bill would permit parties who are not direct purchasers to collect damages from an antitrust violator.

Besides involving billions in potential antitrust penalties, the bill also is a test case of whether chairman Kennedy can convert the committee, a fortress of reaction for 23 years under now retired James O. Eastland, into a battering ram of reform.

The committee's key vote was Mathias, a liberal Republican viewed by the business lobbyists as worse than any Kennedy Democrat.

ILLINOIS BRICK was in the air when William Greif, Washington-based vice president for governmental affairs of Bristol-Myers, recently conversed with one of Mathias' closest political supporters: Earl Brown, who owns a Bethesda, Md., advertising agency.

As Mathias later reported it to the Judiciary Committee: "You tell Mathias if he doesn't vote my way on Illinois Brick, he won't get any of my PAC money."

Nobody this side of television docu-dramas actually talks that way, suggesting that Mathias was exercising senatorial license.

But Brown did get the unmistakable impression that Greif was threatening grief for Mathias from corporate business interests in his 1980 re-election effort.

BUT RECORDS of Bristol-Myers' contributions show that like most PACs, its endorsements are not always discriminating; beneficiaries have included such doyens of the left as former Rep. Bella Abzug of New York and Rep. Andrew Maguire of New Jersey.

Greif also told us it was Brown who asked him for a Bristol-Myers PAC contribution to Mathias. "That is absolutely untrue," Brown responded to us. Actually, the Bristol-Myers PAC is not exactly Fort Knox.

Its high contribution in 1978 was $900 for Thurmond (and a mere $100 for Mrs. Abzug).

But a number of business PACs linked together can generate real money, and that is what bothers Mathias advisers on the eve of a possible Republican primary challenge.

DESPITE HIS protestations of innocence, Greif's name is now linked by his lobbyist colleagues to choice four-letter words for having been clumsy.

But the harsher curses are reserved for Mac Mathias whose vote provided the 9-to-8 margin by which a significantly watered-down version (suggested by Mathias) of Kennedy's Illinois Brick bill passed the committee.

That raises the question of why business lobbyists so adamantly resist compromises that would give senators a chance to cast a vote for the individual consumer without persecuting business.

The lobbyists in this case insisted on a full loaf, as a precedent-setting spanking for Teddy Kennedy's new chairmanship.

With the cash-filled sealed envelope now forbidden, such toughness is based on legal contributions by the PACs—provided, of course, they are used with a bit of finesse.

DONALD GRAFF:

Bloom Off Teaching

BACK IN 1965, there was no shortage of jobs in teaching.

That was when the postwar baby boom was echoing through the nation's schools, facilities were strained, some schools were on double shifts and the demand for teachers appeared inexhaustible.

To meet it more than 20 percent of students entering college intended to become teachers.

We all know what happened within a few years. The baby boom went bust, expensively constructed but now surplus plants had to be closed and the bloom has gone off teaching as a promising profession.

Enrollment of would-be teachers has dwindled by some two-thirds.

The current situation is not all bad, however. Contrary to the popular impression of a teacher glut and a job shortage, a recent report in the Council for Basic Education's "Bulletin" notes that the supply-and-demand situation is actually spotty.

MANY OPENINGS are going unfilled in certain specialized fields. This is particularly the case in mathematics and science. Vocational courses, special education and bilingual education are also reported to offer opportunities.

While a new teacher shortage is discounted, an upturn in teaching opportunities is foreseen with a major contributor being the increasing popularity of the "lifelong learning" concept.

Demand for continuing adult education in vocational and leisure fields as well as in traditional academic subjects promises to open up a wide-range of new teaching jobs.

These will, however, call upon more than the usual basic education skills.

For the professional educator, keeping up with the rapid changes in education is something of an education in itself.

ONE OF the recent developments in the Iranian revolution was word from its religious leadership that the nation's former ruler and his family were fair game for assassins.

A newspaper is now giving the black turbans an assist by holding a contest for would-be hit men.

The owner of Engelad Birang, published in Qum, the holy city from which the Ayatollah Khomeini oversees revolutionary law and disorder, has offered to reward anyone who kills the exiled shah.

The successful killer would receive an expenses-paid pilgrimage to Islam's holy of holies, Mecca.

He would still be only a runner-up, however. The inhuman excesses routinely being committed by the revolution in the name of religion already have taken the prize.

ANOTHER MINORITY, which is actually a majority of the population, is also making progress of sorts.

The number of women in the U.S. work force rose to 38.6 million in 1978, compared with 55.3 million male workers.

Of particular interest, notes an American Council of Life Insurance report, is a sharp rise in moonlighting. Some 1.3 million women last year, compared with 636,000 in 1970, were holding down more than one job.

But haven't they always?

JAY HARRIS:

The Loss Of Face

IN THE RUSH to keep up with "what's new," we often forget what has just happened, events which themselves help shape "what's happening" now.

With that in mind, we find an item by one Ronald Waring, "America's Loss of 'Face'—A European View," in the United States Industrial Council's Point of View publication most informative.

Here is Waring's thoughts on recent and past history...

"It has been said that President Franklin D. Roosevelt died with the conviction that the Soviet Union had no territorial ambitions. If this was so, this delusion was soon to be dispelled. The end of the 1939-45 war left America as the world's only unchallenged super power.

"FOR A VERY short time, the honeymoon of the wartime alliance with Russia was to last; and then, little by little, it was to dawn on the Western world that Lenin said what he meant when he decreed that the war against the capitalist society was to continue until final and total victory had been achieved, and the whole world united under Communism.

"Within four years, the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance was formed...The U.S. and her allies set up a vast network of bases all over the world. The southern flank of NATO was well defended, the trade routes around the Cape of Good Hope were protected...

"The sources of essential raw materials from Africa were in the hands of friends and allies. There was a strong military presence in the Middle East, and the U.S. and her allies covered the continents and the seas of the non-Communist world.

"At this time, the host countries, which leased bases, were delighted to have the American presence. The American dollar was the currency which everybody wanted and the host countries were under the protection of the world's most powerful nation—the one nation with the atomic weapon—and the leader of an alliance of enormous military might. Americans, if not universally loved, were welcomed.

"SOME 30 YEARS later, the picture has changed greatly.

"The dollar is no longer what it once was, and America is no longer the only super power. Due to rapid decolonization, the British are gone from Africa; so are the French, the Portuguese, and the Spanish, leaving behind new governments, frequently Marxist, and which in many cases are not at all friendly to the West. The sources of our raw materials have fallen into the hands of our enemies.

"The process has been repeated elsewhere. The Communists have made huge advances; nearly the whole of East Asia is in their hands. Communist regimes in Ethiopia, South Yemen and Aden, supported by thousands of Cubans, with Soviet commanders and East German technicians, have virtually secured the Horn of Africa as a Soviet fief. Angola and Mozambique, once Portuguese, are now Marxist..."

WARING GOES on to point out that the growing Soviet Navy now has key deep water harbors on both sides of Africa and can in effect sweep the South Atlantic.

It is this threat that makes the Cape route around the tip of South Africa so vital for Persian Gulf oil to the U.S. and Europe.

The story goes on: "The Shah of Iran, once a good friend to the West, has been hounded out of his country, which has been given over to religious fanaticism and anarchy loosely presided over by Ayatollah Khomeini, certainly no friend of America.

"During these years, the U.S. has steadily reduced the number of its overseas bases. Some are no longer required, but some cutbacks are due to political pressures in Congress. Above all, the reduction is due to radical changes of attitude in many countries towards an American military presence.

"THIS ATTITUDE is due to four factors.

"The first is a growing sense of nationalism in newly independent countries which finds the presence of foreign military bases offensive.

"The second is the growth of a vociferous leftwing in the host countries, a leftwing which is now sometimes in power. Then there is the dwindling attraction of the dollar, which has ceased to be the one currency universally desired.

"Finally, and most important, there is a lack of confidence in the capability, and will, of the U.S. to protect the host country against the Soviets or their surrogates."

A RECENT STUDY concluded that this attitude, projected into the next decade, would leave the U.S. with very few overseas bases.

The result would be that the U.S. Navy would be forced to become a seaborne force. The alternative would be to abandon the U.S. Navy's coverage of the world's oceans, an irrevocable step towards America abandoning her role as a world power. At the same time, the Soviets have expanded their Navy and their presence worldwide.

Where did America's "loss of face" start? Perhaps, Waring says, when the U.S. forced France and Britain to cease and desist in their conquest of the Suez. Also significant was the bitter disillusionment of the Hungarian people who in their uprising in 1956 saw their cries to the U.S. and West for help go unanswered and their hopes crushed by Russian tanks.

And of course the loss of the Vietnam War, was the crushing blow, a loss which should never have happened. Then there was the backing down in Angola, the Panama Canal Giveaway and the abandonment of Taiwan. President Carter's double standard "human rights" policy has contributed to the loss of face.

Can American change its course? Only if the American people wish to and make their leaders do so. It may already be too late...

CONSIDER the child from birth to age 14. The schools are in charge of said youngster's action for about 7,000 hours. The parents are in control, it is hoped, for 93,000 hours.

If the parents can't do the job right with all that time, how can the schools possibly do it? Shrug.

County Quits CETA Employment Program

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County at the close of the current fiscal year will end its participation in a local consortium responsible for operating employment and job training programs under the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1978.

Reversing a motion for continued membership in the consortium passed earlier this month, the Lubbock County Commilssioners voted Tuesday to remove the county from the job assistance programs administered by the South Plains Association of Governments.

Opposition to further participation in the South Plains Manpower Consortium centered around possible financial liability to be incurred by the county and the tight controls imposed by the federal government.

"It's a program that is impossible to figure out or keep track of," County Judge Rod Shaw said. "And the federal government is always giving you more responsibilities.

The commissioners also agreed to provide the County Sheriff's department with six portable red lights for squad cars, three red-light bars for the tops of cars, six car sirens and two "black lights" following a request for the equipment by Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard.

Blanchard said the black lights, one of which will be used in the office and one of which will be portable, are necessary for reading the identification on privately-owned property under the new crime prevention program.

Brazell said he believed the City of Lubbock can continue as the prime sponsor of the CETA-funded programs without further county participation in the local administration of it.

He said in the future we are likely "going to find" that all local participants in the CETA programs will be designated prime sponsors. This would impose the responibility for the administration of the entire local appropriation on each participating government body.

In the case of the three-county South Plains Manpower Consortium, Brazell said, Lubbock County might in the future be responsible for the administering of about $3.8 million rather than the $80,000 appropriated to the county from the CETA program.

By withdrawing from the consortium Lubbock County will not face financial responsibility for the proper administration of the federal job training programs in the county.

Despite the concern of the commissioners about this possible financial burden on the county, however, there was sentiment expressed for continuing membership in the consortium.

"It appears to me that with all the digging we've done in the last two years, it's going to go down the drain if we don't keep control of the thing," Commissioner Coy Biggs said. "And just because the governor's office is running it, it doesn't mean the same things aren't going to continue."

In the last year the CETA-sponsored programs have been the center of controversy in Lubbock County, and the target of charges of mismanagement of funds and fabrication of employee work records.

The motion to withdraw from the consortium at the end of the fiscal year passed three to one, with Shaw, Brazell and Commissioner Edgar Chance voting yea and Commissioner Jim Lancaster voting no. Biggs abstained from the vote.

Also Tuesday the commissioners reached an agreement to provide training for employees of the county jail.

A training period, to be comprised of one-hour sessions over four to five months, will be provided to jail officials at the existing facility to prepare them for the more sophisticated detention center scheduled to be opened in early 1980.

The training will be scheduled to be completed shortly before the new jail opening, and jail officials will be compensated at the completion of the training.

Jail Administrator Gary McGrew said the training was essential since the new facility contains a sophisticated central control unit, whereas the existing facility is completely manually operated.

Training will include instruction in security, evacuation procedures and emergency responses.

Oil, Gas Lease Sale Off California Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department says it will hold an oil and gas lease sale June 29 for 148 tracts on the Outer Continental Shelf off the coast of Southern California.

The U.S. Geological Survey says the lease sale area could contain 208 million barrels of oil and 819 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have $2,000 I would like to invest for one year. I am considering "investment notes" being offered for sale by a medium-size company which, among other things, is in the securities brokerage business. The notes pay 10 percent interest. The problem is they are not insured, as savings accounts and savings certificates are. Would this be a wise investment?

A. You're really asking me if the company whose notes you are considering buying will stay in business and meet its debt obligations over the next year. I'd say the chances of that happening are good. But I can't offer you a guaranty.

That company, like many others, is attempting to borrow money by selling those notes — a debt security — to the public. Becauses of the high interest rates prevailing these days, the company will have to pay 10 percent for one-year money.

If you buy $2,000 of those notes and the company stays out of bankruptcy over the next year, you'll get your money back — plus $200 interest. I'd count your risk as small. Nonetheless, the risk is there.

Just the same, if that $2,000 is all of your spare cash, you should ask yourself if you should take any risk with it. Money you absolutely need should be kept in insured saings accounts or savings certificates.

You can get up to 6 1/2 percent interest on savings certificates at savings and loan associations and savings banks. And, if interest is compounded continuously, the effective yield becomes 6.81 percent.

Of course, 10 percent is much better than 6.81 percent. On $2,000 for one year, 10 percent gets you $200 and 6.81 percent gets you $136.20.

Only you can decide whether the $63.80 differenoe makes it worthwhile to move your money from insured safety into something that involves some risk.

Q. A local company is offering for sale 1,000,000 shares of its common stock, at $1 a share, to residents of this state only. The offering circular states, "These securities are offered as a speculation and there is no assurance that a market for such common stock will develop."

I am thinking about buying 100 shares, as my first stock purchase, ever. What information can you provide?

A. The information is all in that offering circular — which spells out the company's history and all its financial details. It also has all the warning flags out — that the stock is a rank "speculation." That's a Wall Street word for "gamble."

So, study the offering circular. If, after digesting all the facts, you still want to take a chance, go to it. This column will never argue with a reader who wants to risk $100 in the stock market or at the dice tables in Atlantic City — as long as he or she is ready, willing and able to accept possible loss.

Q. How can I find out the cost of two stocks bought for me by my deceased father in the 1920s? I want to sell the stocks and need this information for tax purposes. Both stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

A. You'll find those prices in the big "industrial manuals" published by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Services. Many public libraries and most brokerage offices keep those manuals on file.

It takes a little doing to locate that kind of information in those manuals. Because you plan to sell those stocks and pay brokerage commissions on the sales, have the broker who will collect the commissions get that information out of the manuals for you.

Even with that information, the Internal Revenue Service might give you some flack for not having exact records — on the date and prices at which your father bought the stock for you. Good luck with the revenooers.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

SLEDS REACH PEAK

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Two Alaska mushers have become the first to top North America's highest peak with sled dogs. Joe Redington Sr. and Susan Butcher, both of Knik, Alaska, reached the summit of 20,320-foot Mount McKinley at 4 p.m. Monday with four dogs. The dogs and mushers are veterans of the 1,049-mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome.

Petrol Production Gains Fuel Allocation Priority

Diesel allocations necessary to oil and gas operations have been put in the emergency provisions category by the Department of Energy.

The Department of Energy announced Sunday that Special Rule Nine would be amended to include fuel provisions for the oil and gas industries along with surface passenger mass transit and agricultural trucking.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance was scheduled to meet with Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger this weekend to discuss the issue but cancelled the meeting when steps were taken to include the oil and gas diesel provisions, Hance's press secretary Don Richards said Tuesday.

Hance explained that if the oil and gas industries had not been placed on the emergency provisions list, restricted diesel supplies could have hampered production in Texas oilfields, including those in the Permian Basin.

Hance cited the recent shutdown of 30 Wyoming drilling rigs as his tip-off to the problem.

Today Last Day Of School Here

Students of Lubbock public schools begin their three-month summer vacation today.

The summer break begins when school ends at 11:50 a.m. for secondary school students and at 2 p.m. for elementary school students.

Report cards will be distributed to elementary students on Thursday. The students should report to their home schools after 1 p.m. to receive their grades.

Students who cannot get their report cards at that time should provide the principal of the school with a stamped, self-addressed envelope prior to the end of school so that the cards may be mailed.

Secondary school students should make arrangements within their schools to have their grades mailed to them.

Only regular route elementary school buses will run Thursday.

Iranian Students Stage Demonstration

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 250 Iranian students marched on the Capitol Tuesday, chanting, "Today Iran; tomorrow Palestine."

Their signs denounced Israel and Zionism, and spokesman Sasan Mobarez said the chant means they hope the Moslem revolution's next victory will be a separate Palestinian nation.

The Iranian students staged the demonstration at the Capitol partly to protest a Senate resolution condemning revolutionary courts' executions in Iran.

They distributed copies of a letter to the Washington Post arguing Iran's execution of some 200 people "has been incredibly gentle" compared to post-revolution executions in the Soviet Union, China, Cambodia, Indonesia and other countries.

Scoggin-Dickey Celebrates 50th Anniversary

BUICK DEALERS — John Scoggin, right, and Richard Dickey, who handle the overall management of Scoggin-Dickey Buick, stand beside one of the firm's top products, a 1979 Riviera. The dealership, founded in 1929 by A. L. Scoggin and J. Ray Dickey, currently is celebrating its 50th anniversary of business in Lubbock.

DEALERSHIP FOUNDERS — Scoggin-Dickey Buick, which opened in 1929 in Lubbock, currently is celebrating its 50th anniversary. Shown in the picture are the late A. L. Scoggin, left, and J. Ray Dickey, chairman of the board. The automobile was a forerunner of today's luxury automobiles.

Scoggin-Dickey Buick will celebrate its 50th anniversary of business in June.

The company, Lubbock's oldest franchised automobile dealership, opened in 1929, the year of the first graduating class of Texas Tech.

A. L. Scoggin and J. Ray Dickey, founders of the dealership, began business with a staff consisting of seven employes. During the first month of business, Scoggin-Dickey logged a total of 10 new car sales. The firm has set a sales goal of 150 new cars for June 1979.

Scoggin-Dickey is managed by the founders' sons, John Scoggin and Richard Dickey.

The staff, which numbers about 100, includes: Al Griggs, sales manager; Bill Holmes, used car manager; Wendell Fowler, service and parts director; Robert Karr, service manager; Cecil Khance, body and service manager; A. J. Carpenter, business manager; Cecil Kelsy, owner relations manager; and John Zwiacker, office manager.

Scoggin-Dickey, in addition to being the largest Buick parts distributor between Fort Worth and Los Angeles, is one of the nation's oldest metropolitan Buick dealers.

Thai Physician Award Recipient

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 72-year-old physician known as Thailand's chief conservationist is the latest recipient of the J. Paul Getty Wildlife Conservation Prize awarded annually by the U.S. affiliate of the World Wildlife Fund.

Dr. Boonsong Lekagul received the $50,000 award at ceremonies here Tuesday. The award cited his efforts to promote the cause of conservation and preservation of wildlife in Thailand through writing and other activities.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to think about your ambitions and how best to succeed with them. Discuss your policies and principles with a bigwig and you make big headway.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are highly creative now and can get much done along such lines. Be with persons you enjoy and have a good time. Learn to talk less and listen more and you learn more.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You make home conditions far better by the attention you place on them now. A good time to entertain friends but do it after business hours.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have new plants to advance and should discuss them with your associates for best results. Contact good friends and get their backing.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you think big you have a fine opportunity that can help to make you big if you truly apply yourself. Look to a bigwig for the financial assistance you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are able to impress others considerably because you are dynamic and charming now. Either accept social invitations or extend them now. Be the strutting Leo and get good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to elevate your consciousness to greater things and you can become an important person. An expert can give you fine advice which should be followed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen to what a bigwig has to suggest so that you gain a cherished personal aim. Be with good friends who can help you become more affluent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact an influential person who can assist you in furthering your career considerably. Handle community affairs intelligently and get fine results. Make sure financial affairs are in good order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to enlarge your scopes, plan a trip, be outgoing, advancing. Put that fine energy to work early. Make arrangements to meet fascinating people, worthwhile personalities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put your resources to work and become more successful. Get in touch with progressive people you know and make new allies. Bankers and business experts can be of real help to you also.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you listen to what a clever partner has to suggest, you can coordinate your efforts and gain greater benefits in the future. Being petty is foolish. Concentrate on larger issues.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can make headway in your career by applying more practical and progressive methods. Find a new treatment also that will improve the state of your health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will have tremendous charm and will be spoiled by everyone, so teach to stand on own feet and then this becomes a most successful life. Give praise for good work done. Plan for a fine academic education and give cultural benefits early in life.

"The stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Victim Identifies Accused Rapist

A former convenience store clerk testified Tuesday that aggravated rape defendant Billy Ray Lawson robbed her of $160 and then held a knife to her neck while he raped her in a back room of the store last December.

"I was hysterical," the 29-year-old woman said of when when the robber ordered her to go with him to the back of the 802 Ave. Q store. "I thought I was dead. I thought he was going to kill me. I just had that feeling."

She said the robber, whom she identified in 140th District Court as the 26-year-old Lawson, surprised her by ordering her to disrobe. She said he moved the knife from her side to her neck under her ear and stuck her with it each time she started to resist.

The woman said Lawson told her afterward that he was not going to hurt her and said, "Stay cool, mama," as he was going out the back door.

She said no one came into the store during the robbery and rape.

Lawson came into the store and bought a 25-cent sack of potato chips when there were customers in the store about 10 minutes before he came back and pulled the knife of her when she was alone, she said.

The woman said she was in the back of the store mopping when Lawson came in the second time.

Carpenter Re-Trial Begins In Lubbock

A retrial in the case of a 17-year-old aggravated robbery defendant began with jury selection Tuesday in 237th District Court.

Rayford Wayne Karpefter, whose April trial ended in a hung jury, is accused of the gunpoint robbery of a 4202 Boston Ave. service station Jan. 5.

Carpenter was found guilty in the first trial, but jurors were deadlocked on punishment, with 10 wanting to give him a penitentiary sentence and two wanting probation.

Prosecutors Mark McBride and Travis Ware are trying the case before Judge John R. McFall.

John J. O'Shea is the defense attorney.

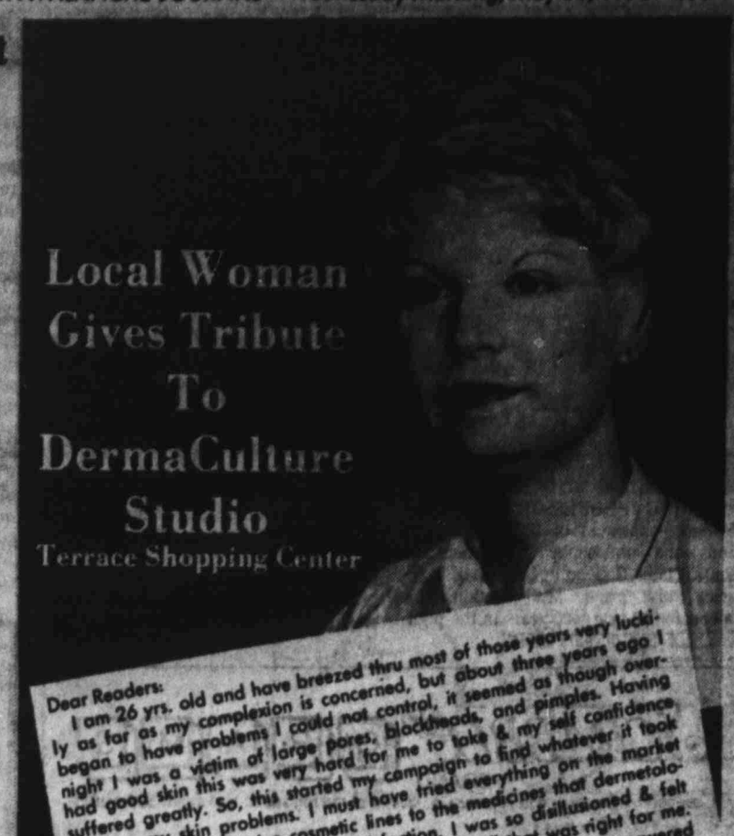
Local Woman Gives Tribute To DermaCulture Studio

Terrace Shopping Center



Dear Readers:

I am 26 yrs. old and have breezed thru most of those years very luckily as far as my complexion is concerned, but about three years ago I began to have problems I could not control, it seemed as though overnight I was a victim of large pores, blackheads, and pimples. Having had good skin this was very hard for me to take & my self confidence suffered greatly. So, this started my campaign to find whatever it took to solve my skin problems. I must have tried everything on the market from the most expensive cosmetic lines to the medicines that dermatologists prescribed with not much satisfaction. I was so disillusioned & felt there was no such thing as a "skin care program" that was right for me. Then, by accident I discovered DermaCulture. They were an answered prayer for me because they worked on my problem from the inside out which is where skin problems begin. My very first appointment I knew I had found real help for my complexion. The people there are so very knowledgable & professional. They are there for one reason only, to help the appearance and general health of your complexion. My complexion is now 100% better, so is my confidence. And the DermaCulture Cosmetics are fantastic too! I am now one of those "lucky" gals and I just smile when someone says "you have great skin."

Black Rhodesian Premier 'Confident Of Future'

RETIRING PROFESSOR — Frances Watkins, chairman of the communications and philosophy department at South Plains College in Levelland, is retiring this spring. Mrs. Watkins has taught for 40 years, 20 years in the public schools and 20 years at SPC.

SALISBURY (AP) — Bishop Abel Muzorewa was sworn in Tuesday as Rhodesia's first black prime minister and declared he was "'more confident and more hopeful every day" about the future of the troubled state he inherits after nine decades of white rule.

Josiah Gumede, elected Monday, first was sworn in as state president, then formally asked the black Methodist bishop-politician to form a government for the newly renamed Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

The outdoor ceremony at the State House, combining colonial-era pomp and tribal jubilation, was the last before the new government takes charge at midnight Thursday.

Sharing the stage with the black leaders were outgoing white Prime Minister Ian Smith, winding up 15 years as the stubborn chief of the white-minority government, and Chief Justice Hector MacDonald, resplendent in the white wig and red robe of British colonial days.

Rhodesia broke unilaterally from Britain in 1965 to avert black-majority rule.

The bishop is to announce his cabinet today, and of the five or six portfolios reserved for whites under the new constitution, one will go to Smith.

In brief speeches, Gumede and Muzorewa appealed for national unity, cooperation and peace.

Smith, who appeared relaxed and cheerful, told reporters he was "not the sort of person to sit around and mope."

"Let's be realistic," added the leader who once pledged never to relinquish white rule, "we live in changing times."

Behind the ceremony and optimism, reports of military clashes, an escalating white exodus and factional rifts among the newly elected black leaders pointed to stormy early months for the new govrnment:

—A government communique reported 1,628 whites had left Rhodesia in April, 700 more than the monthly average over the past year.

—The military command said seven black women dressed as guerrillas and carrying Soviet weapons were killed in a clash with Rhodesian troops Monday. They were among 18 guerrillas killed in the fight near the Mozambican border.

—Tribal and factional disputes have begun to plague Zimbabwe Rhodesia even before its birth.

Muzorewa has been challenged by dissidents within the ranks of his own United African National Council. The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole's ZANU Party is refusing to take its 12 seats in the new 100-seat Parliament, charging foul play in last month's election.

And the third black party in the assembly, Chief Kayisa Ndiweni's United National Federal Party, threatened for a while to reject seats in the cabinet.

Asked about the rifts in the government he will head, the bishop said such growing pains were to be expected. He added, however: "I am determined to solve such problems very determinedly and very ruthlessly." Asked to elaborate on "ruthlessly," he said "firmly."

The way Muzorewa handles these disputes could help the British and U.S governments decide whether his administration is democratic and effective, which could affect their decision on recognizing the new government.

Good Food Buy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Agriculture reports that onions now should be a particularly good food buy. The spring crop is 13 percent ahead of last year's harvest and 6 percent above average, officials said.

Diced, sliced, chopped, fried, sauteed, baked or boiled onions add flavor and variety to nearly any dish, department experts said.

Telephone Switching Office To Be Transferred

Southwestern Bell began work Tuesday on a facility which eventually will cause a prefix number change for some area phone patrons.

The switching office at Broadway and Avenue W is being moved to Frankford Avenue. The building breaks into self-contained modules of electronic switching equipment and will be moved by trucks on a route west on Broadway to University Avenue, north to 19th Street, west to Brownfield Highway and southwest to Frankford Avenue.

Lubbock division manager Bob Dunbar said the move is expected to require eight truck trips and should be completed within the week. The modules will be moved from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. to avoid traffic congestion.

The office movement is part of a project that will result in a new wire center and central office in the southwest area of Lubbock.

The office will serve about 3,800 customers in southwest Lubbock beginning in November when new directories are delivered. The office has a serving capacity of 10,000 customers.

The facility will be called the Lubbock Frankford 794 Wire Center and general numbers in southwest Lubbock will change when the facility begins operation.

Customers will receive a notice with their phone bills if their prefix number will change, Dunbar said.

Southwestern Bell also will complete a $537,000 long distance cable project from Lubbock to Idalou in June.

Facilities installed on 4th Street will increase the capacity of long distance cables between the two cities and provide for future long distance expansion.

The company began work on the project six months ago.

CABLE CAR HIATUS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The famed cable cars, which lure thousands of tourists to San Francisco, will be out of operation for up to three days to repair some overheated bearings, officials say.

Afrikaners Claim 'Apartheid' Policy Unfairly Criticized

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Apartheid, the "separate development" internal policy of the Republic of South Africa, has been "unfairly judged against a theoretical point of view," by the United States, said RSA Director of Information Carl Noffke Tuesday.

"We have been unfairly subjected to accusations that we are a major stumbling block to human rights," Noffke commented at a press conference in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

"South Africa should be judged against the background of Africa, not against standards which exist only in theory," he said.

"Our standard of living is the highest in Africa," Noffke said, citing statistics that the RSA contributes 22 percent of the total production on the continent of Africa, includung 90 percent of the steel and 60 percent of the electricity produced there.

He said the South African government has built more low income housing than any nation except Russia. In addition, some 3.5 million of South Africa's over 18 million blacks are in schools, and jobs for them are expanding at an ever increasing rate," Noffke said.

He admitted they may not be expanding quite fast enough, however, and his speech at Lubbock Christian College Tuesday night stressed reasons for multinational corporations to invest in South Africa.

Noffke, who is the official spokesman for the South African government in the U.S., also conceded a "craving for wider rights" exists in his country, but expressed the belief that it will be satisfied within the apartheid system.

Apartheid, which dates back to the country's inception in 1910, was designed to incorporate the country's many factions, allowing for political self-determination for all entities, while providing a larger unit to address economic needs, Noffke said.

TOUGHER POT LAWS

CARSON CITY (AP) — Nevada's legislature has turned up the heat on marijuana users even though the state already has one of the nation's toughest pot laws. And it's all by accident. As lawmaker rushed to adjourn this year's session, they discovered Monday that they'd voted to raise the possible fine for marijuana possession, already a felony, from $2,000 to $5,000 while approving a revamp of the state's criminal codes. Assemblyman Steve Coulter of Reno said the fine was buried in an obscure technical section of law which a legislative committee overlooked.

Benny Goodman Turns 70, Still Practicing Daily

NEW YORK (AP) — Could it be that Benny Goodman is still the "sensible Jewish boy" who "ran like hell all the way home" after smoking a marijuana cigarette outside a Chicago nightclub 55 years ago?

The King of Swing, who is turning 70 Wednesday, insists with a laugh: "I am not all that stable."

Yet that second reefer is still waiting to be smoked.

Decades after being recognized as the world's greatest jazz clarinet player, Goodman typically is taking nothing for granted. Daily practice sessions begin with the same musical scales he learned in Chicago when he was 10.

He maintains "every note counts" and advises: "You can't do it by memory. You have to work at it. Your fingers have to be limber. Your body has to be in shape."

BENNY GOODMAN — The King of Swing

They are old-fashioned messages from an old-fashioned man who always managed daring, new sounds on the clarinet.

The quiet man with the glasses, whose looks years ago were compared to those of an assistant chemistry professor, has always been the calm fixture in the middle of the swirling musical storm he created.

Frank Norris wrote in the Saturday Evening Post in May 1938:

"The Paramount audience began clawing at the chairs before the (Goodman) band got through its first chorus ... And then, trampling ushers, the children began to dance in the aisles. There were policemen in front of the bandstand, but some of the kids got by them and up on stage. They did the shag, the lindy hop, the big apple ... while Goodman grinned and dodged them."

His music has kept millions dancing through the night — yet these days Goodman usually goes to bed by 10 p.m., with his radio tuned to classical music.

Disco, he says, "is not for me. There's a sameness to it that's unbelievable. It's boring."

There is also a sameness to Benny Goodman's life.

Goodman was married to the same woman, Alice Hammond Duckworth, the granddaughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, for more than 35 years. She died last year.

He dresses like a Wall Street lawyer and insists, given the choice, he would pay for everything in cash, his recent "American Express" commercial notwithstanding.

Today's FOCUS

In fact, Benny Goodman is hardly taking credit for anything.

The King is reluctant to toot his own horn when he's not blowing the clarinet.

The man whose sweet, hot instrument ushered in the swing era in America jazz has played before millions of people around the world during the past 40 years.

Nikita Khrushchev heard Goodman's music in Moscow. Goodman played for — and then jammed with — the king of Thailand. Scores of prominent musicians have been in his band.

"I know I've arrived," Goodman said in an interview on the balcony of his 21st-story apartment overlooking Manhattan's East Side.

"Frankly, I know a lot of people are glad to see me when I walk out on stage. It's very nice. On the other hand, I try to play well. I always try to play well."

It is that kind of determination that, some say, made Goodman a difficult boss.

Vibraphonist Lionel Hampton once told an interviewer: "If a guy hit a wrong note, Benny would give him the ray. He'd look down over his glasses and stare at you — really nail you down with his eyes.... If you did something wrong the next time, he would pay you off on the spot for two weeks. He wouldn't give you any two weeks notice."

The fact is that even now, Benny Goodman is still trying hard.

Though he says "I don't really knock myself out," Goodman nowadays performs once or twice a week, traveling to Columbus, Ohio, or to Greensboro, N.C., or preparing to play at the Newport Jazz Festival here this summer.

His secret is no secret at all. His work ethic is as rigid and his work habits as steady as his clarinet-playing has always been experimental and spectacular.

"If you want to play in Carnegie Hall, then practice," he said.

Goodman still does, though he has been to the famed concert hall and back.

His first appearance in 1938 — when his band included Harry James, Hampton, Teddy Wilson and Gene Krupa — represented the first time jazz had ever been performed there.

It was hardly the peak of his career.

A few years earlier, Goodman and his band caught fire at the Palomar Ballroom in Los Angeles. Triumphant appearances followed in Chicago and at the Paramount in New York, and Goodman's career took off.

The popularity of jazz has waxed and waned in the succeeding four decades, but Goodman's popularity has continued practically unabated.

He was the subject of a four-page spread in the Saturday Evening Post in 1938, the focus of a profile in Time magazine in 1953, a New York Times "man in the news" in 1962, and the subject of a front-page feature story in the Wall Street Journal in 1974.

And he carries on today.

In 1957, the famed jazz musician was quoted as saying: "When do you have it made? The answer is never."

Last week, he said: "I think you're always striving for something, whatever it is. ... I do simply because one has to. ... When you give up, then you've had it."

Kahn Urges TV Specials On Inflation

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — When the inflation rate creeps upward a few more decimals, credit is tightened or food prices jump, it is Alfred E. Kahn who greets reporters' microphones and television cameras to deliver the gloomy news.

But Kahn, President Carter's chief ecomonic adviser, says television can actually help the situation instead of just reporting it.

"Television, I think, is in an excellent position to help our country combat inflation," Kahn writes in the June 2 issue of TV Guide magazine.

"There might even be half-hour programs on inflation — pograms that deal with one or more specific issues and explain them thoroughly," he suggests.

"Now having said all of that, I should add that I am worried about recommending half-hour shows about inflation, because I may be offering the perfect recipe for a zero Nielsen rating."

Regardless, inflation is an issue so complex it demands a broad forum for its analysis, says Kahn. Presently, there is a "tendency to give us headlines" and an emphasis on sensationalism, he says.

"If I use a word like 'depression' or 'catastrophe,' I can guarantee that I'll hear it in the news spot, but discouragingly often, without the rest of the sentence in which it appeared," he writes. "This sort of thing tends to make one nervous about speaking frankly."

Noting many American TV shows are broadcast to nations overseas, he asks: "How do the shows they see reflect our way of life? What do they see? Big cars, one-family houses, luxurious consumption, no car pools..."

Kahn argued that inflation is a matter of "demanding more than our economy can supply — more things, higher pay, bigger dividends, more government protections, subsidies, expenditures."

Video Shot Crasher Joseph Kaselak Dead At 60

CLEVELAND (AP) — Joseph E. Kaselak, who made a hobby of maneuvering his way into television shots during live network coverage of the past four Democratic national conventions, has died in Cleveland.

Millions of television viewers caught glimpses of Kaselak on the networks' televised convention reports beginning in 1964.

Until his death Sunday at age 60, he was executive secretary for Rep. Charles A. Vanik, managing the congressman's Cleveland office.

In 1968 in Chicago, Kaselak managed to appear on national television six times the first night of the convention. By the second night, he became selective about his appearances.

"I only appear on the NBC network," he was reported as telling a reporter. "I like to get on, standing right next to Frank McGee. He's a pleasant man."

Throughout the years Kaselak worked his way through delegates to stand behind politicians and television reporters when the camera's red light blinked on.

In 1964, Kaselak stood behind the late Frank McGee as the reporter stood in front of the Ohio delegation giving a report. Kaselak moved his lips occasionally as McGee continued his report, leading one delegate to ask what McGee was doing interviewing Joe Kaselak.

At the 1972 convention in Miami Beach, Kaselak wore a badge proclaiming him a "Photographer's Assistant." When someone remarked he didn't realize Kaselak was a photographer, Kaselak said, "I'm not, I assist."

Kaselak was considered such a personality that he was given a prominent part in Richard Reeves's book "Convention" describing the 1976 convention.

He is survived by his wife Martha; his parents, Paul and Elizabeth; a son, a daughter, two brothers and three grandchildren. Services are scheduled Thursday in Garfield Heights.

New Kind Of Hops Slated For Brewers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say new, extra-bitter hop plants may be around the corner, which they say should make beer drinkers happy. The hops contribute a certain bitterness to beer, providing much of its distinctive taste.

The Agriculture Department says that until now foreign hops "tend to surpass our domestic varieties in bitterness and, consequently, our varieties suffer in international competition."

Federal Aid Okayed For Rural Cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — Isolated rural areas will be able to seek financial help to instal cable television facilities through a new "one-stop service" provided by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Tuesday that the department's Rural Electrification Administration will provide services intended to "cut red tape and speed up the processing of loan applications."

Previously, applications had to be filtered through REA and the Farmers Home Administration, another department agency.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said in a statement issued by his office that the streamlined program was in response to President Carter's "Rural Development Initiatives program which includes improvement of modern communications to help overcome isolation in rural areas."

Marie Osmond Plans To Marry In August

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Marie Osmond, of the brother-sister singing act Donny and Marie, announced her engagement Tuesday to a 23-year-old Los Angeles actor attending Brigham Young University.

"Tell the world I love him and I've never been happier," the 19-year-old Miss Osmond said of her fiance Jeff Crayton, 23.

Family spokesman Ron Clark said the two became engaged Monday at the Osmonds' television studios in Orem, 30 miles south of Salt Lake City. Marie was rehearsing for upcoming concert appearances, Clark said.

Crayton, majoring in communications at BYU, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Crayton of Los Angeles. Clark said the couple met at a Hollywood party and plan to be married in the Salt Lake Mormon Temple in mid-August.

Donny Osmond, 23, was married a year ago. He and his wife are expecting their first child in July, Clark said.

Ex-FBI Chief Reluctant Star Of TV Commercial

MIAMI (AP) — Former FBI Director Clarence Kelley concedes it "smacks of commercialism" for him to serve as pitchman for a jewelry identification device, but he says the the product might help discourage thieves.

Kelley, who retired as the bureau's director last year, is to be in Miami today to appear in a television commercial for a jewelry firm.

The ad is to explain the benefits of a laser device that can photograph the interiors of precious jewels so that they can be identified quickly and accurately.

Kelley said from his Kansas City, Mo., home that he serves on the board of Gemprint Co. of Chicago, which markets the device. He said he's made commercials for the product in Cleveland and Pittsburgh and promotes it at conventions.

"Yes, it smacks of commercialism," Kelley said. "It is a position which is beneficial to me financially. But it also removes as a strong possibility the profit in stolen diamonds once it is known that this type of equipment is available."

He said the device was perfected by Israeli technicians and came to his attention in 1976. The FBI "cooperated" in perfecting the gemprint process, Kelley said.

Asked if he had misgivings about the commercial work, he said, "I don't want to do anything that would diminish the dignity of my former office."

Craig Carnevale, general manager of Gemprint, said the commercial produced in Miami will be used in other cities.

He said the laser device transmits a beam into the interior of a jewel and photographs the resulting sparkle. "It is really the only scientific method for identifying diamonds," he said.

Securities Analysts Hear Explanation Of NBC Schedule

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Silverman outlined NBC's 1979-80 prime-time schedule for securities analysts Friday describing the lineup as "a good base on which to build for the future, a step in the right direction but by no means the final answer."

Silverman, who took over as president of the struggling network almost a year ago, restated NBC's theme for coming season — stability — several times. He said NBC had retained 16 hours of programs from the recently completed season, 15 of those hours in the same time periods.

NBC finished the 1978-79 season a distant third to ABC and CBS.

"We have stability, we have strong 9 o'clocks, some very competitive 8 o'clock programs, we believe we will win three nights — Monday, Wednesday and Saturday — and have respectable peformances on other nights," Silverman told representatives of major of brokerage firms gathered in a studio at the network's headquarters.

Stocks Take Small Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined slightly in quiet trading Tuesday as energy worries kept a damper on the market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, coming off a 5.63 loss last week before the Memorial Day weekend, dropped another 3.73 to 832.55.

With two sessions left in the month, the average shows a loss of more than 32 points since the end of April.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 27.04 million shares, down from 27.81 million Friday.

The biggest loser among the Dow 30 was F.W. Woolworth, down 2 at 24¾. Late last week Brascan Ltd. encountered several legal setbacks in its bid to make a takeover offer for Woolworth.

Brascan class A shares fell 1⅛ to 20 on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex had a number of gainers, on the other hand, among North American energy stocks. Dome Petroleum rose 1⅜ to 34⅛; Imperial Oil class A 2 to 27⅝, and Mitchell Energy & Development 2⅛ to 27¾.

Such performances helped the Amex market value index climb 2.04 to 187.49, a new high since it was established at 100 in 1973.

New York (AP) — Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Grounding Ordered For U.S. DC-10s

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government ordered immediate grounding of all 134 U.S.-registered DC-10 airplanes Tuesday after the discovery of "grave and potentially dangerous deficiencies" in the assembly holding the planes' engines to the wings.

The order takes out of service all planes similar to the wide-bodied American Airlines jet that crashed near Chicago on Friday, killing at least 273 people in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

"I have no choice but to ground all U.S. DC-10s immediately," Federal Aviation Administration head Langhorne Bond announced at a news conference.

The grounding order also had applied to A-300 Airbuses, a European-made wide-bodied jetliner. But two hours after the FAA announcement, Charles Foster, deputy associate administrator of the FAA, said it was decided not to ground the twin-engine Airbuses because "there isn't sufficient commonality" in the engine-to-wing design of the Airbus and the DC-10.

Bond said the trouble with the DC-10s involves more than the engine-mounting bolt that broke as the doomed American Airlines flight was taking off Friday. After the bolt snapped, the plane lost an engine, crashed and erupted in flames.

Bond said inspections carried out since Friday's crash have turned up defects in the assemblies that hold the engines to the wings of an unspecified number of DC-10s owned by United and Northwest airlines.

Shortly before Bond announced the grounding of the planes, McDonnell Douglas Corp., manufacturer of the DC-10, said an inspection in Chicago had turned up a crack on an engine mounting on a United Airlines DC-10.

Full Inspection Set

Bond said all DC-10s would undergo a "comprehensive inspection" for possible problems in the engine-to-wing mountings. He said FAA officials would distribute new inspection procedures to the airlines.

Officials said each plane will be permitted to return to service after its inspection by airline mechanics, who are licensed by the FAA.

Even after the aircraft are returned to service, Bond said, the engine mountings will be inspected every 10 days or every 100 flying hours — whichever comes first — until the FAA develops a permanent inspection plan.

He declined to estimate how long his order would keep the planes on the ground, but said it was possible the jets could be back in the air in two or three days.

May Disrupt Traffic

"I hope that it will not disrupt U.S. air traffic. But if that is necessary, that will be the case," he said.

Dan Henkin, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the airline industry, said the grounding of the DC-10s represents the loss of about 12 percent of the available passenger capacity of U.S. airlines. He said there will be some inconvenience to passengers, but added that the airlines are trying to substitute other aircraft for DC-10s where possible.

Bond conceded that the engine mountings all have undergone periodic inspections, and cracks and other potential problems escaped attention.

"There is no question: somewhere along the line we didn't do it right," he said.

Inspection Ordered

On Monday, Bond had ordered inspection of the bolts that help hold the engines to the DC-10 wings and ordered mechanics to visually inspect the pylon area of the assembly at the same time. The engine is bolted to the metal pylon, which in turn is fastened to the wing.

"Now, two hours ago, I learned that those inspections are turning up grave and potentially dangerous deficiencies in many of the pylon mountings now being checked as a result of that order," Bond said at Tuesday's news conference.

"These problems are not just with the bolts, but also in other areas of the assembly that holds DC-10 engines to the wings."

Meanwhile, officials said the broken bolt from the engine mounting on the American Airlines plane that crashed was being flown to Washington for tests by National Transportation Safety Board officials.

Revision Possible

Bond said the safety board "may have revised" its earlier, preliminary finding that the bolt broke because of metal fatigue. But James King, who heads the board, said, "I haven't had a report yet."

"Metal fatigue" implies a weakening of metal parts or structures because of extended use, vibration, other stress or faulty manufacture.

Bond also said he was ordering a review of inspection procedures for engine mountings for all wide-bodied aircraft, including Lockheed's L-1011 and Boeing's 747, in addition to the McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s DC-10 and the Airbus.

Shortly before Bond made his announcement, McDonnell Douglas Corp. called for immediate additional inspections of the engine pylons of all DC-10s before they are flown again.

Judge's Killing Tied To Drug Crackdown

trial originally had been scheduled to start Tuesday.

Chagra's lawyers, in a pre-trial hearing in Midland in April, asked that Wood remove himself from the case. Wood refused, saying he would be unbiased.

Chagra's brother, Lee, was a lawyer who often defended clients charged with drug crimes. Lee Chagra was shot to death in his office Dec. 23. Three persons have been charged in that case.

In last November's shooting, two men opened the rear door of a van in front of Kerr's car and sprayed bursts of gunfire. Kerr escaped death by ducking beneath the dash.

U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez told the San Antonio News from Washington that he had given several warnings to the White House and Justice Department that the assassination attempt against Kerr was a "brazen defiance of the authority of the government and an attempt to initimidate prosecutors."

He said Kerr had visited him last week in Washington and he warned Kerr he remained in danger and that Wood was in "extreme danger."

"I do not believe it reflects a bad community attitude," U.S. District Judge William Sessions, in El Paso, said of the killing. "I think there are several persons who wish Judge Wood dead, and that is what they have accomplished."

Hospital's Cash Flow Dwindling

much higher tax bases than Lubbock County.

Lubbock's county tax contribution is insufficient to fulfill the hospital's role as the primary teaching hospital for the Texas Tech School of Medicine, he said, even when combiped with a healthy base of patient revenue — which Health Sciences does not have.

The current hospital district tax is 75.

Chairman of the LCHD Board of about $3 million a year.

Managers Jack Strong suggested the blue ribbon committee also be charged with garnering physicians' support for the hospital. Hospital administrators are currently facing an overabundance of empty beds which they say is due, in part, to a lack of support from physicians in admitting paying patients.

But Bosworth warned that even if the hospital has the physician support it needs to assure a healthy mix of paying patients, Health Sciences Center will still run short of the funds needed to provide the services included in its status as a teaching hospital.

Commissioner Coy Biggs hesitated to approve the committee's formation, saying if the committee members recommended a tax increase for the hospital district he would be hard pressed to turn them down. But when he asked Strong if there were any other alternatives to improving the patient mix or raising taxes, the chairman was pessimistic:

"About a year from now we'll lock the front door," Strong warned, if the financial situation does not improve drastically before long.

County Judge Rod Shaw said the commissioners could probably change the assessed property valuation without consulting the taxpayers, but added that a change in the percentage of tax money allocated to the district would probably require a vote and possibly state approval.

"Even if we have to take it to the people of Lubbock, we think they'll go for it," Strong speculated.

Special Guard Given Judges

lowing month. Assistant U.S. Attorney Barry Leibowitz of Washington, D.C., was shot and wounded outside the federal courthouse in Washington. Both men were involved in narcotics investigations.

Bell noted that Wood was placed under protection after the shooting at Kerr's car, but that the protection was removed three weeks later at Wood's request.

"We know drug traffic is a powerful influence," Bell said. He said far more money was involved in narcotics today than in illegal sales of liquor during prohibition.

He added that a number of judges were meeting soon at one place in Texas and would be given special protection also, but he declined to be more specific.

Bell and Webster said Wood was killed with a .22 caliber bullet, but they declined to say whether it came from a rifle or a handgun.

Webster refused to be specific about details of the investigation, but he said FBI agents had checked out Wood's car, which apparently failed to start moments before he was killed. Webster said the FBI was able to start the car.

Webster said police assume some risk but that the shooting of a judge was "intolerable."

'America's Sweetheart' Of 1920s Dies At 86

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Silent screen star Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart in the 1920s, died Tuesday at Santa Monica Hospital of a stroke. She was 86.

Miss Pickford had been in apparently good condition until Friday, when her husband, Buddy Rogers, entered her bedroom and found her in a failing condition, said the former movie queen's secretary, Linda Humphries.

He summoned a doctor, and Miss Pickford was rushed to the hospital, where her condition deteriorated. She died at about 4 p.m. CDT, her secretary said. Miss Pickford had entertained a house guest and was visiting with her every day until Friday.

"She was a strong-minded woman and she fought for her life," said the secretary. "But her age was against her."

Miss Pickford told friends she preferred to be remembered as she looked 50 or 60 years ago, when, in more than 200 films between 1909 and 1933, she invariably portrayed a sweet, spunky, innocent and wholesome young girl with golden tresses.

Howard Koch, president of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences — which Miss Pickford helped found — said her death was "a great loss to Hollywood. She was the only living legend of what we're really all about.

"I wish we could make the kind of movies she used to make — innocent love stories," Koch said.

With Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and D.W. Griffith, Miss Pickford formed United Artists, the distributing company she sold in 1956.

Her marriage with Fairbanks broke up in 1935.

She won two Academy Awards. In 1928, 20 years after she began her screen career and in the second year of the awards, she received her first Oscar for best actress in "Coquette." She received a special Oscar in March, 1976 "in recognition of her unique contribution to the film industry."

She was known as "America's Sweetheart," and earned more than a million dollars a year in her prime.

As "Queen of the Movies," Miss Pickford reigned with Fairbanks, whom she married in 1920, as virtual monarchs of the silent screen for 15 years. They lived at Pickfair, a mansion on a six-acre estate on a mountaintop overlooking Los Angeles.

In later years Miss Pickford lived for nearly a decade at the opulent estate as a recluse with Rogers, her husband of 40 years, and six servants.

Because of failing health she rarely left the estate, except for short rides, often in the evening around Hollywood and Beverly Hills.

Miss Pickford, born Gladys Mary Smith in Toronto on April 8, 1893, was one of America's first film superstars, beginning her career in 1909 with "Her First Biscuits."

"Those days were fun," she said of her film career in an interview in 1976, "and hard work. I miss them very much. I've had a beautiful career."

She made scores of films, including "Madame Butterfly" in 1915, "The Little Princess" in 1917, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" in 1917, "Pollyanna" in 1919, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in 1921, "Little Annie Roonie" in 1925, "My Best Girl" in 1927 and "Coquette" in 1928.

SILENT SCREEN STAR DIES — Silent screen star Mary Pickford, America's Sweetheart in the 20s, died Tuesday at Santa Monica Hospital in California of a stroke, her secretary said. Miss Pickford, 86, was rushed to the hospital Friday when her husband, Buddy Rogers, entered her bedroom and found her in failing condition. (AP Laserphoto)

Clements Declines Cut In Sales Of Gasoline

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements declined Tuesday to restrict gasoline sales after President Carter granted the nation's governors that power in an executive order.

Clements said the Legislature that ended Monday granted him the same emergency authority Carter gave state chief executives.

"I don't feel the need for going into drastic plans of odd-even days or odd-even numbered license tags, closing on weekends or closing on Sundays," Clements said.

Carter said Tuesday he has signed an order giving governors authority to make gasoline stations remain open on weekends, to set minimum purchases and to institute an odd-even selling system.

"It's interesting that Mr. Carter decided that instead of him retaining all this authority in Washington and handing down from the mouth, so to speak, daily bulletins of what we should be doing, that he is now delegating this authority to various governors of the states," Clements added.

The governor said he was not contacted directly by the White House about the president's order but learned about it from news reports.

Legislation consolidating all executive branch energy offices into one department also conferred broader emergency powers to the governor during energy shortages, he said.

"This is the first time we've ever had that authority," Clements said. The bill would allow governors to set up rationing plans, but Clements emphasized rationing would not be necessary.

The White House said 19 states, including Texas, have not granted their governors emergency powers.

"If I had to talk about the most important single thing about our supplies in Texas, it is that we are literally down approximately 20 percent from a year ago," he said. "This is not manufactured out of someone's imagination. No one is trying to rip anyone off."

Clements said his overall energy plan being developed by aide Ed Vetter will be ready in one week.

"This plan will be an evolving plan and will be flexible," he said. "The situation in July will not be the same as it is in May."

Cat's Bones Added To Dig's Finds

giant ground sloth," said Dr. Johnson.

Two kinds of extinct horses, a camel, an extinct box turtle and antecedents of the modern muskrat, pond turtles, fish, coyote, wolf and fox, also have been found in association with man at the site.

The seven-year-old project hopes to unearth and piece together the preyistoric culture and environment of the South Plains.

This summer some 25 students from the U.S. and Canada are digging at two sites within Lubbock Lake.

The latest find will be on display for visitors when tours begin June 2. The guided tours are from 9 to 11 a.m. each Saturday during the summer. They end August 4, and will not be conducted July 7.

Solar Heating Seen As Energy Solution

system is installed in a solar-heated home because a solar system has problems storing heat.

"This is the biggest technical problem with solar heating," Huneke said. "A solar system can store enough heat for a couple of days without sunshine, but after that, the heat stored begins to run out."

However, he said, a solar space-heating system will provide for 75 percent of space heating, and a solar water-heating system will provide for 80 to 90 percent of water heating.

"Of course, you have to keep in mind we're using those figures for the average family," Huneke said. "Some families will use more hot water and require more heating, and others won't."

Huneke said the best system of solar heating is the rock storage system, where heat is retained in a rock bed either under or next to a house.

To build a 1,280 square foot home with conventional and solar water and heating systems would cost about $10,000 to $11,000, Huneke said.

Smith said too many prospective homeowners won't consider solar heating because they are not thinking in long-range terms.

"One of the first questions someone will ask about solar heating is 'How soon will it pay for itself? If these people would only think about the long-term effects, they would seriously consider solar heating.

"People buy other things that use fuel and don't pay for themselves, such as boats, but they don't ask the same question. For whatever a person has to pay for a solar heating system, as soon as he's paid for it, his payments are through.

"Imagine the impact. As soon as a system is paid for, there are no more bills to pay other than periodic repairs. There's no company to hook up to for a solar heating system, so whatever a person was paying for heating costs to an electric or gas company doesn't have to be paid anymore," Smith said.

To air condition a solar heated house, a conventional system has to be used, although there are ways to generate electricity through solar heating.

"The problem with these systems are they are too expensive to be practical," Huneke said. "But one home we've built is being cooled by a two ton air-conditioning unit, which still is more economical than an entire conventional system."

Dr. Bill Stewart, an agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said prospective buyers of solar-heated homes should be responsible and knowledgeable about solar heating systems.

"Consider a builder's design and installment expertise, a good company track record, whether you receive a written warranty and whether convenient services are provided by the builder," Stewart said.

He also stressed a buyer should know if other customers are satisfied with their homes, if system operation and maintenence manuals are provided, if system starting and operational tests are performed and if the company will guarantee the product.

Gas Prices

day we have quite a few. I figure they (the oil company executives) know what they're doing."

But he added, "I don't buy gas here."

All prices at the station were within the federal limits posted on the pumps. The posted limits ranged from 95.9 for regular to 102.9 for premium to 109.9 for unleaded gasoline.

The station stays open seven days a week, 16 hours a day, Olive said. The only change the station made when the current fuel shortage began was to close two hours earlier each evening, Olive said.

Carter Urges State Powers

on domestic crude oil beginning Friday, saying it will help increase domestic production and cut down on imported oil.

On other topics, Carter said:

—He hoped the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would not increase prices at its upcoming meeting. "I think the OPEC nations in the long run hurt themselves by raising the price of oil excessively."

—He believes the Soviet Union will follow through on its agreement to release the families of five Soviet dissidents who were sent to the United States recently in exchange for Soviet spies.

—Criticism of him by fellow Democrats "is not my major concern." He added: "no president can expect to have unanimous support even within his own party."

—An independent Palestinian state in the Middle East would be a "destabilizing force" in the area, and the U.S. strategy in the new talks is to withhold its own position on the Palestinian future until Israel and Egypt exchange their views.

—Bert Lance, former director of the Office of Management and Budget who was indicted last week on 22 counts of violating banking regulations, "is still my friend." He refused further comment.

—He does not intend to "punish" congressmen who refuse to support administration programs by denying them special favors for their districts, saying that also would punish the people of the district.

—Nonetheless, he believes Congress will pass the main proposals he has sent, including implementation legislation for the transfer of the Panama Canal and hospital cost containment.

Lubbock Man Arrested As Robbery Suspect

Police arrested a 22-year-old Lubbock man Tuesday after he was identified as the suspect who robbed a woman at knifepoint shortly after midnight.

Charged with aggravated robbery in connection with the incident was Greg Allen Petty of 814 34th St., No. 12.

The victim, a 36-year-old Lubbock woman, told police she was robbed of $40 as she walked in the 500-block of 39th Street.

She said the suspect confronted her about 12:15 a.m. near 34th Street and Avenue H. Reports show the two walked together several blocks, but parted at 39th Street and Avenue H.

The woman said she was in the 500-block of 39th Street when the man ran up behind her, grabbed her neck, and said, "I want you to do me one big gigantic favor....strip."

The victim said the man then placed a small pocketknife to her neck and began cursing when she refused to undress. She told police the assailant tried to drag her to a vacant field, but that she sat down in the street and warned that a friend who lived nearby would be looking for her.

The woman said the man fondled her and ripped her blouse before grabbing her purse, which contained about $40, and running west on 39th Street.

Reports show the woman went to a friend's house to call police.

About 12:30 a.m. Tuesday, police spotted a man matching the suspect's description inside a motel office on 34th Street. The woman was taken to the location, where she identified the man as her assailant.

The victim's purse was recovered in a room at the motel.

In other activity Tuesday, police and fire officials determined that arson caused a fire at the Clean Machine Car Wash, 3620 50th St.

The owner, Jerry Lynn Haggard, told police that when he arrived at the car wash at 7:40 a.m. Tuesday, smoke was pouring from the building.

After the fire department extinguished the fire, officials found that someone had broken into the building's storage room by breaking the glass out of the door.

The arsonist apparently then piled old payroll records and other papers in a corner of the storage room and set them on fire, police said. The arsonist also set another pile of toilet paper and other papers ablaze five feet down the wall from the first pile.

The car wash owner said damage to the car wash could run as high as $1,000.

A security guard for the First National Bank told police someone during the weekend tried to pry open the seven cash drawers at the bank's drive-up windows. Damage was estimated at $1,500.

TRUCKERS PROTEST

DENVER (AP) — A dozen disgruntled independent truckers disrupted Tuesday morning rush-hour traffic in Denver, driving their rigs slowly through a busy highway intersection to protest the high cost of diesel fuel. Protest organizer Lewis Masterman was arrested when he led a group of trucks over to the side of the road and refused to obey an order from police officers to move on.

Clouds Across Area Produce Little Moisture

Thunderstorms moved quickly across the eastern portions of the South Plains late Tuesday afternoon, prompting a tornado warning for Crosby and Dickens counties. But area law enforcement officials said the storms caused no damage and left less than a quarter-inch of rain in their wake.

At 6:35 p.m., the National Weather Service reported a radar indication of a tornado about 10 miles northeast of Crosbyton, moving eastward into Dickens County.

However, the dispatcher with the Crosby County Sheriff's Office said the only severe weather associated with the storm that moved through the county was marble-sized hail. Deputies were on alert for severe weather, she said, but no damage was reported and apparently no resident sighted a funnel.

Sporadic light sprinkles dampened Lubbock early in the evening, but no measureable precipitation was recorded.

Similar weather developments are possible today, according the NWS, and a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms is included in the forecast.

By 4 p.m. Tuesday, a line of thundershowers from Plainview to Snyder had cropped up, but residents in the rainfall line said the heavy but short-lived showers produced only about .25 of an inch of moisture.

As the system moved through the Lubbock area, the temperature dropped from its afternoon high of 93 degrees to 85, and winds gusting from the northeast at 28 mph pushed some upper-level clouds into the region.

Fair skies should be the rule most of today. Forecasters anticipated that clouds would move into the region in late afternoon after an afternoon high in the upper 80s.

City Park Fee Schedule Recommended

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Parks and Recreation Board voted Tuesday to recommend that fees be charged for certain uses of city parks.

The city council had asked that fees be updated and re-evaluated annually.

If the council adopts the recommendations, city-sponsored softball leagues and adult baseball teams, Little League, and the West Texas Girls Amateur Athletic Association will be required to pay for electricity used to light fields for night games.

Anyone reserving an athletic field would be charged $7.50 to cover the cost of electricity, and YMCA softball teams would be charged $10 per game to cover costs of electricity, field maintenance and field marker dust.

Little League, Youth Soccer, WTGAA and Weekend Girls Softball would be charged $1 per player per season to offset those same costs.

Also, those using the radio-controlled airport or the equestrian area would be required to buy a $5 permit annually, and teens and children would have to pay $1 per person per class for community center classes.

Community Facilities Director Jim Weston predicted fee revision will be an annual event because city staffers are "under a mandate to look at all fees and update them yearly if warranted."

Weston said this is an attempt to generate more revenue from fees so the costs of providing the city services will not have to come from taxes.

Parks Director John Alford said the board's recommendation means fees would be placed on "those activities and facilities where we have expense involved."

"Since the fields are used by a restricted number, they should be the ones to pay for electricity if lights are required," Recreation Superintendent Jim Underwood told the board.

"In many cities there is not such a thing as a lighted field," he said.

Underwood said the parks department has recommended fees "where the impact on the individual would be less," adding those taking community center classes may be more likely to attend if they must pay for the instruction.

Also at the meeting, board members approved construction of a glazed clay mural portraying the history of blacks in this part of Texas.

The mural, to be funded with private contributions, will be built near Canyon Lakes Six, east of Quirt Avenue, in an area to be called the Estabanico Historical Area.

Eric Strong, president of the Lubbock Roots Historical Arts Council, said "Roots" author Alex Haley will visit Lubbock in June and may perform the groundbreaking for the mural.

Although the Roots council must get the parks board's final approval of construction plans, Alford said the glazed ceramic tile will be relatively vandal-proof because of its hardness.

Party House rental rates will be increased July 1 as a result of Parks Board action Tuesday. Weekend rates will be increased from $7 to $10 at A.B. Davis, Lou Stubbs and the barbecue pit.

Weekend rates, which were $7 at Mahon and at a proposed East Broadway Party House, will be increased to $12. Weekend rates at the Little Party House will be increased from $3.50 to $7.

Tech Registration Scheduled Monday

Registration for the first term of summer session at Texas Tech University is scheduled from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday in the Municipal Coliseum.

Registrar Don Wickard said registration packets will be available Monday in the Coronado Room of University Center.

Classes will begin Tuesday, but late registration will continue through June 8 at the registrar's office.

The first summer term will continue through July 14, with finals scheduled July 12 and 13. No classes will be held on July 4.

Scientists Revise Opinions About Planet Venus

VENUS ATMOSPHERE ILLUSTRATED — This artist rendering shows layers of air on Venus. Cells warmed by sunlight move from the equator to both poles at speeds of up to 400 mph to spread heat and motion through the planet's atmosphere. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have changed their minds about Venus being plain and drab compared to her sister planet, the earth. What had been considered the ugly twin actually has some beautiful features when you look past her veil of clouds.

Scientists said Tuesday that the Pioneer Venus spacecraft missions reveal a dynamic planet with soaring peaks, deep valleys and other wondrous features.

And the atmosphere of Venus appears to be powered by a unique wind machine with layers of air driving one another like a giant set of gears.

Dr. Harold Masursky of the U.S. Geological Survey said scientists have long considered Venus, which is about the same size and mass as earth, flat and featureless because their instruments only looked at a small part of it.

"Anything you say about a planet from looking at a small part of it is almost certainly wrong," Masursky said in an interview.

Now a broader look through the eyes of two robot spacecraft launched last year show how wrong a first impression can be, scientists said during a National Aeronautics and Space Administration briefing at the annual meeting of the American Geophysical Union.

Masursky said images constructed from radar scanning from a Pioneer spacecraft orbiting Venus show a giant plateau twice the size of the Tibetan plateau. This so-called Great Northern Plateau is a pear-shaped, flat, land rise more than 2,000 miles long and 1,000 miles wide.

Three mountain ranges sit atop this plateau, including one to the east informally called Maxwell. One peak rises more than 37,000 feet into the sulfur-burdened air, dwarfing 29,028-foot Mt. Everest.

Masursky said mountainous areas were spotted to the north and plains in the south. There are dark spots on the plains that appear to be ancient impact craters, including one about 500 miles in diameter and another half that size, he said.

"The southern lowlands are cratered and the great northern plateaus are not," he said. "This is exactly opposite from the other planets."

Scientists said this could indicate the planet's crust has shifted, lifting once low areas to higher elevations.

Dr. Alvin Seiff of NASA's Ames Research Center in California said Venus'satmospheric circulation system is different from any other planet.

On the earth, land absorbs sunlight and the resulting heat, coupled with the planet's rotation, drives atmospheric motion. Venus's slow rotation makes this much less a factor and clouds, not land, redistribute sunlight energy, Seiff said.

Layers of air between 30 and 33 miles above the surface absorb sunlight and flow north and south from the equator at speeds of up to 400 mph to propel heat and motion through the atmosphere, he said.

Above the equator, for instance, the top part of this layer flows north about three-quarters of the way to the North Pole before folding under and moving back south.

Seiff said the motion of this layer drives the layers above and below it in a gear action. While the main east-west flow of air about the planet is still the dominant factor, this north-south circulation helps hold it together, he said.

Pioneer Venus 1 has been in orbit since last December and continues to send back radar and other information. Pioneer Venus 2 arrived at about the same time and divided into five atmospheric probes, four of which reached the smoldering 900-degree-Fahrenheit surface.

Chinese Trade Panel Member, Carter Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met Tuesday with Chinese Vice Premier Kang Shien, terming the visit of the head of China's state economic commission "a very excellent way to continue the dialogue" between Peking and Washington.

Welcoming Kang to the White House Cabinet Room, Carter said he understood the official's prime purpose is to talk to private U.S. oil companies about the development of China's petroleum resources. "We will help in any way we can," the president said.

Carter Plays Hookey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter played hookey Saturday, sneaking off to a Pennsylvania trout stream while aides pretended he was at Camp David.

A White House source confirmed a report on the secret fishing expedition by the Altoona, Pa., Mirror, and said the press was not informed because Carter was visiting "private land."

The Mirror interviewed an unidentified farmer who watched Carter flycast in a rain-swollen creek behind the Spruce Creek Rod and Gun Club, about 30 miles east of Altoona — one of the few people in the world who knew where the president of the United States was for some seven hours Saturday.

The White House has an informal understanding with the press corps that it will notify reporters whenever the president intends to travel.

Wire service reporters stationed in the Thurmont, Md., vicinity of Camp David checked several times with White House spokesmen on Carter's activities Saturday. The spokesmen never let on Carter was anywhere but inside his Catoctin mountaintop compound.

The Mirror said Carter flew to the central Pennsylvania sports club, about 60-70 miles from Camp David, by helicopter, accompanied only by his personal physician, Rear Adm. William Lukash, and an unidentified fishing guide.

"He was just fishing on the stream all day," said a farmer, who declined to be identified. "I don't know how many trout he caught, but he did catch several."

Pat Walker's Presents: The Splendor of being Slender

'I feel younger than I have in 10 years!' — Carolyn Stinson

She lost 53 3/4 pounds and 49 1/2 inches at Pat Walker's.

Carolyn Stinson got an unpleasant shock when she stepped on the scales at her Doctor's office. Never faced with a weight problem in the past, she hadn't noticed as the pounds slipped on gradually over the years — and now she was frantic.

At a friend's insistence, she went to Pat Walker's for a complimentary treatment and figure analysis. Impressed by our relaxing passive exercise and sensible approach to good nutrition, she stayed with the program — and obviously has had great results.

"I went from size 16 to size 8 and firmed and toned over all," she reports. "Pat Walker's has changed my life. I feel younger and more energetic than I have in 10 years!"

Like Ms. Stinson, you can achieve your weight goal at Pat Walker's, without rigid diets or strenuous exercises. On our proven program of weight reduction, individualized to meet your needs, you can shape your figure privately in the luxurious comfort of our elegant salon.

Don't wait another day to find out what Pat Walker's can do for you; be our guest for a courtesy treatment and figure analysis. Call NOW to reserve time for your free appointment.

Use Care When Cooking Out

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Common mistake many outdoor cooks make is using too many briquettes for the amount of food to be cooked.

A single layer of briquettes extending about one inch around the outer edges of the food is ample, says the Chicago-based Barbecue Industry Association, a trade organization.

For roasts and other large cuts of meat, fish or poultry that need longer cooking time, the association suggests placing a few extra briquettes around the edge of the firebowl just before starting to cook. They should just touch the hot coals. They will ignite gradually as the food cooks and be available when the previously lit briquettes start to die down.

The association estimates cooking complete meals over coals can save one-half to one-third of the energy needed to cook the same foods on a kitchen range. How much you save depends both on the menu and the number of briquettes used.

Some other tips from the association:

— Before cooking meat and poultry, trim away as much visible fat as possible to prevent flare-ups. If they occur anyway, several measures should help: raise the rack higher or spread out the coals or remove some of the coals (use long-handled tongs in either of the last two cases).

If all else fails, remove the food to prevent charring, spray the coals or sprinkle them with with water or baking soda until the flames die, then return the food to the rack.

— Depending on brand, briquettes take varying times to reach cooking temperature. One way to determine fire temperature: Hold your hand, palm side down, at cooking height. If you can keep it there two seconds, the temperature is high; three seconds, medium high; four seconds, medium; and five seconds, low.

— To reduce cooking temperature, either raise the rack or spread out the coals with long-handled tongs.

— To increase cooking temperature, tap ash from the coals or push them closer together.

— For rotisserie cooking, place a foil drip pan in front of the coals in the fire box to catch drippings and help prevent flare-ups.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am not a silly teenager. I'm a woman in my early 60s, so please don't consider this letter frivolous. It's a real problem.

I have come across several people (all women) who, when they meet me for the second or third time, don't remember we have met before. Last night was the limit. This woman was brought over to me by a friend who said, "I'd like you to meet Mrs. X." Mrs. X said, "Pleased to make your acquaintance." I reminded her that we had met twice before — and then I told her where, when, and who else was there. The blank look on her face drove me crazy. She couldn't recall a thing. I felt like a plug nickel waiting for change.

I hate saying to people, "We've met before . . . " and then going through the paces of trying to refresh a poor memory. Is there a way I can avoid this embarrassment in the future? — Wisconsin Reader

Dear Reader: Yes, there's a way. Stop saying to people, "We've met before . . . " Simply accept the fact that you aren't one of The Reader's Digest's "Unforgettable People." It happens to everybody.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you received a letter about a four-year-old admirer who loved your columns. (She ate them.) Children with "strange" eating habits have a condition called pica, which is all too common and, unfortunately, a dangerous practice. These children can easily develop a variety of diseases — anemia, intestinal parasites, and even lead poisoning.

There is an analogous adult condition called geophagia (eating of clay or dirt) which is commonly seen in pregnant black women, particularly in the South. Clay for this purpose can even be purchased in some Washington, D.C., pharmacies. Although it is said to be associated with one or more nutritional deficiencies (iron and/or calcium), this is not always the case.

Although your reply was more than adequate, perhaps this information will be helpful to you and your readers. — Jay Arena, M.D., Duke University

Dear Jay: Thank you for this letter and for the many times you've responded to my requests for additional information on children's illnesses. You've been a generous and faithful consultant and I am enormously grateful.

Dear Ann Landers: This is in response to "Goodbye Depression, Hello Sunshine." There's another side and you owe it to your readers to print it. Girls aren't the only ones who suffer after losing the one they love. I'm a guy going through the same thing. Believe me, it hurts just as much. I'm 17 and went with a super chick for over a year. We were very close and then, like a fool, I broke up with her. I realized in a few days that I had made a mistake, but when I tried to straighten things out she said she didn't want to have anything more to do with me.

I hope this letter will let the world know that guys can get torn up over losing a love, the same as girls. Thank you. — Sad And Sorry

Dear S & S: Yes, that misery train runs both ways. Sorry about your problem. Maybe when "Super-Chick" sees your letter in print she will reconsider. I hope so.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The bidding is the sort that experts call scientific. If you have another name for it we aren't going to argue with you about it. In any event, six clubs is a fine contract, but one which is going to fail unless South gives the hand very special play.

The simple play is to draw trumps and try to set up hearts with one ruff. This play will fail if hearts are 4-1. How about trying to ruff two diamonds in dummy. This play looks awkward and will probably fail if hearts are 4-1.

Can anything be done about a 4-1 heart break?

South takes his king of hearts at trick two. Then he plays all the spades to discard his four of hearts. Now he ruffs a heart, enters dummy with a high trump, ruffs another heart, draws trumps, stopping in dummy and eventually loses one diamond.

This play works and is certainly ingenious, but it has one slight flaw.

With hearts 3-2 and trumps 4-1, this line would fail because the defender with four trumps would wind up with the last trump.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

(This is the second in a three-part series on what happens to missing socks. Today's column deals with "The Cause.")

According to a woman from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., the answer to disappearing socks is mathematically figured in subsets.

If you wash a pair of blue socks with a red stripe (BL/RD)2 and a pair of green angoras (GR/A)2 and a pair of white tennis socks (WH/T)2, all three pairs would be called X.

If Y had (GR/A)2 and (WH/T)2, then every element in Y is an element of X. Hence Y is a subset of X or X CY.

If there is a boldness in BL/RD2 somewhere between fill and spin dry, BL/RD2 splits.

That answer made more sense than most of the others sent in to determine what happens to socks in the washer.

Most of the writers zeroed in on sex. Like coat hangers and paper clips, socks were believed to have an active sex life — but only in water. Some believed they married, but they fooled around and often divorced in the dryer. No alimony was involved. Some stayed together through two or three washings, but suddenly turned into a swinging single. One writer believed that socks went through a sex change, coming out another color.

A large number embraced the Planned Obsolescence theory, that is a conspiracy between sock and washer manufacturers who incorporate sock disintegrators (right next to the button crusher) and sock sensors which grind up a sock and spit it out as lint. The newer models even have a reconstructed sock cycle which returns a sock lost five years ago.

There was a Sock Fairy theory for those of you who believe in Peter Pan, the Cloning theory where for every pair of socks an extra one is cloned driving you crazy with three socks of one color, and the Best Friend theory where your friend is secretly after your husband and both are trying to drive you whacko. There is the Reincarnation theory where it is believed that a sock returns in another form. (One woman swore that after five years of losing socks, they all came back one day as a sweater.)

Some believed socks had an identity crisis and split. Others leaned toward cannibalism. One writer went for the Steve Martin theory where socks, instead of getting high on detergent, got small and disappeared.

A great number believed socks to be a migratory species, activated by simply adding water.

And finally, one writer blamed the United States government for programming washers to eat socks and keep the economy alive. One blamed the Russians for undermining American women's stability. I'd have been disappointed if someone hadn't said that.

Tomorrow: The Solution.

1 can (13½ oz.) pineapple chunks
1 tbsp. lemon juice
½ cup halved pitted black olives

Dip frozen shrimp into cooking oil. Arrange on shallow baking pan. Broil about 3 inches from heat, for 8 to 10 minutes or until browned and hot, turning once. Melt margarine in saucepan. Add carrot and cook about 5 minutes. Stir in sugar, cornstarch, garlic salt and dry mustard. Add pineapple chunks with syrup and lemon juice. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Stir in olives; heat. Serve over hot shrimp. Makes 6 servings.

Researchers Study Weight Control In Teens

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

A group of overweight teenage girls in Lubbock should both enjoy and benefit from a program at Texas Tech University this summer.

A group of researchers at Texas Tech's College of Home Economics, who are conducting a research study on the effectiveness of weight-reduction plans, is looking for 50 local teenagers to take part in the study.

The research will be aimed at discovering the effectiveness of several weight-reduction plans, combinations of diet, exercise and behavior therapy counseling, and thus is expected to provide real benefits to the participants in terms of weight loss and extended weight control.

In order to participate in the program, girls should be 14, 15 or 16 years old and be at greater than 20 percent of their ideal body weight. A doctor's examination and permission will be required of each participant at her own expense; otherwise no cost will be involved.

Persons interested in more information about the program should call Toni Brown, Department of Food and Nutrition, Texas Tech University, 742-3041, or 762-2832. Miss Brown is principal researcher on the project, working under the direction of Dr. Jane Geders and Mrs. Clara M. McPherson, senior faculty members in the department.

"The problem of obesity seems to be increasing in our country in spite of our preoccupation with weight control," Miss Brown said in announcing the study. "The problem is not limited to any age, sex or socio-economic group. It is of particular concern in young people, however, because overweight is likely to be part of a way of life that continues into adulthood. Obesity of long duration is very difficult to treat successfully and becomes a more and more serious health problem."

"Although treatment programs which contain a high degree of structure and supervision appear to be most effective, few doctors have the time required to spend with an individual patient," she continued.

The danger is that teenagers with weight problems often turn to fad diets, crash diets, or over-the-counter "diet" preparations that may be dangerous to their health.

A successful diet program in a teenager would seem to require a lot of support and cooperation on the part of her family, Miss Brown continued. "Although the families will not be directly involved, we hope they will be interested in the program and supportive of the girls."

The reearch will include taking some family history, such as the weight of the child at birth, early weight gain patterns, knowledge of nutrition, family eating habits and weight patterns.

Girls participating in the program will be enrolled in different experimental groups, with different combinations of diet, exercise and counseling or behavior modification. (All records will be strictly confidential.) Blood pressure and blood testing will be done periodically, at the College, throughout the program. The weight reduction program is conservative and safe for the girls involved. Experts in various fields, such as physical education and nursing, are involved in the planning and implementation.

The behavior modification counseling part of the program will be simple and non-threatening, the reseachers explained. It will consist of assessing the girl's eating patterns, helping her evaluate her own feelings about food, and perhaps adopt simple self-help tips which she may use to modify her eating patterns. The company of other girls with similar problems, discussion groups, the exercise program which will include a variety of activity, should make the program fun for the participants, she said.

Results of the program, hoped to be completed by the end of summer, should provide valuable insights into effective means of weight loss and weight control among teenagers, Miss Brown said.

Consumer Update Lists Best Seasonal Buys

While pork and poultry supplies should be higher in the month ahead, beef production will continue low, according to the National Consumer Buying Alert of the White House Office of the Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs.

The consumers' guide to current trends in the marketplace is available to the public by writing Esther Peterson, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009.

According to the latest report, consumers may expect to see the following trends in consumer items during the next month:

MEAT: Beef production will continue low and prices for beef will continue to rise for some months to come. Pork and poultry, on the other hand, should be plentiful and prices may dip somewhat during the summer months.

FISH: Supplies of fish should increase during the spring and summer months. In the midwest, consumers should look for "best buys" in canned chunk-light tuna and frozen fish sticks; fresh butterfish fillets and fresh ocean perch fillets will be available in the southwest.

EGGS AND DAIRY PRODUCTS: Egg supplies should be above average and above last year. As consumers have turned to meat alternatives the demand for eggs has grown and the higher prices have attracted greater production. Milk production increases seasonally in May, with larger quantities of cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk expected over the summer months. Cheese prices are higher this year as a result of increased consumer demand; this trend should ease slightly.

FRUIT: Fruit supplies are low this spring. Strawberry supplies are adequate, but harvests of summer fruit are just beginning and plentiful low priced supplies are still several months away. Fresh apples and grapefruit supplies should be adequate but declining seasonally. Fresh winter pears and oranges are in light supply and higher priced. Banana prices are usually steady in May, but decline over the summer. Supplies of frozen orange juice concentrate are 60 percent above a year ago and sales are likely. When on sale, orange juice is a more nutritional alternative to fruit drinks, soda and ades. Raisin supplies are low because of rain damage to California's 1978 crop.

VEGETABLES: Potatoes are good buys with a wide range of types and sizes available. The spring crop is expected to be 23 percent more than last year's. Onions should be plentiful, boosted by a big Texas crop. Canned snap beans, sweet corn, tomatoes and tomato products should be adequate, but canned green peas and spinach will be in shorter supply.

GRAIN AND LEGUMES: Look for good supplies of dry beans and dry split peas, both reasonably priced protein sources. Rice, a good extender for meats, should be plentiful, as are peanuts and peanut butter.

OTHER CONSUMER TIPS: Prices on frozen prepared meals have gone up as the cost of meat has increased; in addition, the prices for frozen prepared meals are usually higher than the cost of similar meals prepared at home. Such dinners may be from 15 to 100 percent higher than the home-prepared meal, and often are neither as nutritious nor as good as the home-prepared product. Frozen vegetables and fruits, however, are economical alternatives to out-of-season produce. Frozen potatoes are often cheaper than those made at home with fresh potatoes, but additional ingredients — cheese, seasonings, etc. — cost more than if you added the extras in your own kitchen. While eating out continues to increase in popularity, such meals cost considerably more than the same foods would prepared at home.

BARGAIN CALENDAR: Good timing when shopping can save you money. Studies show prices may change as much as 40 percent during pre-season promotions and after-season clearances. Keep your eye on ads for women's raincoats, tires, sportswear, handbags and televisions. Some stores may feature lingerie, housecoats, rugs and carpets, fans and air conditioners, garden supplies, and outdoor furniture.

Offbeat Insurance Plans Offered

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — If you are in business, you can readily get liability insurance to cover officers and directors with protection from activists of all kinds — be they environmentalists demonstrating against nuclear plants, militant consumers, those seeking jobs for members of minority groups, or others.

There should be no surprise in this. As life gets increasingly risky, inevitably one group in the community is ready to help cut down on its hazards. That is why the insurance industry always manages to find a ready market among Americans, who today own almost nine-tenths of all the world's personal insurance.

All insurance, remember, boils down to one simple idea: You and your neighbors join together in sharing risks.

When risks are shared no family or individual will be overwhelmed when death or fire or some other disaster comes along. Each family or individual pays a small weekly sum regularly. From the accumulation of such sums in premiums, benefits are paid out to a stricken family or individual so no one must face a staggering burden with none but his own resources.

As the years go on, the companies keep coming up with new kinds of insurance, so that more and more risks of modern life can be shared in this way.

Here are some others that have been introduced, reflecting changes in American life-styles:

With so many American families moving about in mobile homes, special policies have been developed to give the owners protection against loss from fire, lightning, theft, and other troubles.

Organ transplants have been so accepted as part of current medicine in the US that you can get an insurance policy that will pay most of the costs if you or a member of your family needs a heart or kidney transplant.

With many cities promoting Operation Identification as a means of deterring burglaries by having householders engrave identifying numbers on their possessions, homeowner policies are being reduced by as much as 10 percent in cost for policyholders who join the plan.

With so many travelers going on charter or other bargain flights, you can get insurance that will pay off if you are unable to make the return flight because of sickness or injury.

Another travel policy will pay travelers who run into bad weather on trips abroad. The traveler collects when the Weather Bureau agrees there was "excessive rainfall" in the vacation area. The amount collected depends on the number of days of such excess.

If you are among the millions of Americans with stereo in their cars, you are now able to get insurance against theft of your recordings.

If you are a scuba diver, you don't necessarily have to pay higher life insurance rates because of the greater-than-normal risks you take, provided you don't go below 50 feet of water. After that, you will pay an extra premium — just as you will if you are a parachute jumping enthusiast.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I was stung by a bee some time ago and got a violent reaction. They told me to carry a pill of some kind because if it happened again it might be fatal. What is the latest serum used? What tablet should I have on hand for energency? — C.C.G.

That time of year again. Bees caused more than their share of problems last summer in the U.S.

Violent reactions to insect stings do occur, but thank goodness, serious ones are rare. Subsequent stings are usually more violent. For the serious reaction (when a person passes out, for example) the only effective treatment is an injection of epinephrine (Adrenalin). Among other things it helps restore proper breathing. You can buy kits, but these have to be prescribed by your doctor. They include a disposable syringe. People who've had kits longer than three years should have them replaced, because the medicine may lose potency in that time.

Antihistamines help for less severe reactions, but desensitization (the serum to which you refer) is wise for anyone prone to such insect-caused symptoms. You would receive several injections of weakened bee venom until your body learns to handle the substance without reaction.

Since the season is upon us, here are some tips for people like you.

Avoid light-colored clothing, perfume or fragrant toiletries.

Never go barefoot. Bees hidden in underbrush don't take kindly to being stepped on.

Wear protective clothing, but if you wear a covering net, be sure it is not loose, allowing bees to get under it. Trapped bees are angry bees.

In short, look and smell as little like a flower as possible. Be especially careful after a rainstorm, when bees are doing "catch up" work and may light on any likely object.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I read an article recently that said chocolate contained caffeine, the same as tea and coffee. Is this true and is it harmful to one's health? — J.M.K.

Chocolate contains a bit of caffeine. It contains more of another stimulant — theobromine. So you'd have to restrict it if you have to restrict caffeinated coffee. Either substance may cause a mild stimulation of the central nervous system nd act as a mild diuretic (increasing urine excretion). Caffeine is primarily found in coffee, tea and cola drinks.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 52-year-old man in good health. Last year I developed tendonitis in my shoulder. I was treated with heat, which didn't help. Later I got cortisone injections, with no help. My shoulder is still sore. The specialist I saw couldn't do anything for me, and said I needed exercise. I am a carpenter and feel I get plenty of exercise every day at work. Please advise. — M.P.

The doctor didn't mean the kind of exercise you are thinking of. Carpenters get plenty of that. He meant therapeutic exercise to prevent stiffness and a frozen shoulder. You should ask him to be specific. You don't mention rest. Continual heavy use can aggravate tendonitis of the shoulder. Often a week or two of rest along with heat is enough to restore joint use. Have you had x-rays to detect any calcium deposits that may have formed?

Dear Dr. Ruble: My father had gout. Now, at 37, I find I have it, too. My father told me he thought I'd get it, too, and he was right. How common is it for a father and son to have gout? — D.K.

There is some family relationship in gout, but not enough to predict that the son or daughter of a parent who had it will get it. Studies on this vary. Figures range from 6 peroent to 18 percent, meaning that, depending on the study, from 6 to 18 percent of gout patients have histories of it in their families.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Instead of buying ice for your ice chest your first day on the road when starting your trip, try making your own.

I wanted to fill my ice chest before we left so came up with the idea of filling zippered plastic bags three-fourths full of water and freezing them. I froze three bags which just covered the bottom of our ice chest.

I was then able to put lunch meat, milk, butter, etc., in the box before we left, without having to purchase ice.

Not only did this save time and money but there wasn't any messy water in the bottom of the ice chest. These bags stayed frozen for quite some time as well before we needed to buy ice.

We didn't even have to waste the water when the ice finally melted. We used it in the puppy's bowl, or to rinse our hands with. Once it came in handy to add to the car's radiator when it overheated. — Mrs. Dorothy Fortson

For saving money, a mess, and frustration for all of us, thank you, dear. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I must tell you what a clever husband I have!

On washday I would use an old frame that held a portable room fan to hang up clothes after removing them from the dryer and also to hang hangers. Not having enough room for everything, my husband solved my dilemma.

He purchased two inexpensive towel racks and attached them to the bottom of a high storage shelf located by the machine.

Now I've got room for all the clothes plus the hangers, and I can even hang my long gowns without them dragging. — Cindy Lozano

There are six couples that always go camping together, and we all have two children each. They are all in the same age group.

Needless to say, they are always playing in the woods or some distance away from camp.

Getting them in to eat, or just to help do something around camp, was really a problem until someone came up with a whistle (the kind used by referees).

Now all we have to do is blow the whistle, wait a few minutes, and generally they come running. — Mary Kelley

Circumstances Made Retiree Vintner

PALISADE, Colo. (UPI) — The quest for a tax break converted Navy Capt. George Zimmerman into a western Colorado peach farmer. An upheavel in economics and the mystic of wine are molding him into a vintner.

As his 1971 retirement date as a Navy pilot neared, Zimmerman picked up an Internal Revenue Service form on farming. He spent his last tour of duty marveling at the number of tax exemptions and pondering a likely crop.

He settled on peaches in Palisade, Colo., where acres of orchards are located in the Grand Valley, a sandy plain rimmed by rough-textured red mesas that protect the fruit trees from winter' worst.

But Colorado's false springs often nip early blossoms. And labor problems occasionally leave most of the crop rotting on the trees. Seven years of problems turned potential tax breaks into an economic loss for Zimmerman.

"And with food prices up, people want meat and bread. They could care less about fruit. It's not getting any better and the peach industry here is falling through a crack," he said.

While Zimmerman was discovering the darker aspects of agricultural tax exemptions, the Ivancie Winery of California was recruiting disenchanted peach farmers to try sample plots of grapes.

Under an agreement started in 1972, Ivancie paid half of the costs, from rootlings to trellis posts, in exchange for the option to buy the grapes for the next 10 years at the going California price.

In 1974, Ivancie went bankrupt and the half dozen Colorado growers, including Zimmerman, were left with a few acres each of young vines of various French hybrid grapes and no potential market.

But a series of grants provided technical help for the fledging enterprise, a few more peach growers joined the experiment and Denver wine seller Jim Seewald decided to open the Colorado Mountain Vineyards.

Zimmerman, like most of the growers in the pilot progam, had turned over two acres to wine grapes, all Cabernet Sauvignon. He estimates it costs $11,000 an acre in labor, plants and trellis work to establish wine grapes.

"It doesn't sound like much land, but there are two-acre plots in France that are priceless because they consistently produce premium grapes," he said.

The peculiarities of grape plants pose other challenges. Vines don't produce fruit for three years and reach peak production in five years. Last year, Palisade growers produced 9,000 pounds of grapes, enough for 400 cases of wine.

Production levels depend on the trunk and primary branches surviving the winter. A string of severe Colorado winters froze the young vines back to the ground, but Zimmerman has started withholding water from the plants in July to diminish "die-back."

"By July, the grapes are already out and lack of water won't hurt. It forces the plant to go dormant earlier. And with less water to freeze in trunk, the plant has a better chance to survive," he said.

And the past winter of record snows and long cold spells will test Zimmerman's methods.

"This would be their first year of maturity and full production. So, if they get through this year and they don't die, I think we will have it made. It will give all of us enough confidence to expand," he said.

Despite the setbacks, the lines of grape vines and their supportive trellis work are making steady inroads into Zimmerman's peach orchard. He hopes to add a few acres to grape production each year.

The Grand Valley has a 192-day growing season, compared to 155 days in California's Napa Valley, he said.

After the mid-April pruning, which involves cutting off dead branches and trimming surplus sprouts to maximize production, Zimmerman said the only labor requirement are daily rounds to tie the shoots along wire framework.

"We harvest in mid-September and eight men can pick two acres in five hours. You don't need ladders and there is no fuzz. And the harvest is right between the peach and apple season, so there is labor around."

The price for wine grapes varies from $800 to $900 a ton and each acre can produce about five tons at maturity. And Seewald has the first batch of Colorado wine marked at $6 to $8 a bottle.

For Zimmerman, grapes have an undefineable allure.

"You don't know whether your land is going to produce the best grapes in the valley or if it will be mediocre," he said. "That hope that it is the best drives you on."

Bacon Additive Violations Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Tuesday its latest preliminary tests showed three violations by processing plants in the amount of nitrosamines found in bacon after it is fried.

One of the plants, however, identified as Kahn's Inc., Cincinnati, Ohio, made "procedure changes" and now is in compliance with federal nitrosamine standards, officials said.

The others were listed as Kruse and Sons Inc., Monrovia, Calif., and Gold Kist Inc., Talmo, Ga.

According to department reports, nitrosamines formed when bacon is fried at high heat "are considered to be carcinogenic (cancer-causing) since laboratory animals administered these compounds develop cancer."

But some industry groups, including the American Meat Institute, along with some members of Congress object to release of the testing information on grounds it might be misleading to the public

Also, the institute says the amount of nitrosamines formed from bacon is too small to be harmful

In its latest weekly report, 20 plants were found to be in compliance with the nitrosamine limits set by the government.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURAL Employers last week in Washington expressed its views on labor-related problems in agriculture to about 70 congressmen and senators and/or their representatives from 25 states.

The occasion was an NCAE-sponsored "congressional awareness" breakfast.

Speaking with lawmakers from the High Plains was Ed Dean, field service director of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, an NCAE director and Executive Committee member.

Dean and other NCAE board members concentrated on informing lawmakers of legislative and administrative changes the council says is needed in the Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA), the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act (FLCRA), and the U. S. Employment Service (USES).

IN ADDITION, THE GROUP WAS UNANIMOUS in expressing strong opposition to the proposed federalizazion of state unemployment compensation programs, which the council contends would bring on higher costs to employers, unwanted federal controls, and a new mass of red tape.

Agricultural workers cannot be brought into the United States under the INA until after employers have staged a nationwide recruiting effort to prove the absence of available U. S. workers.

The NCAE seeks an amendment to this act which would permit the importation of labor when employers have proven the absence of able and willing workers within a radius of 200 miles of the need.

"With this change in the law and with its fair administration by the Department of Labor," Dean says, "foreign workers could become much more rapidly and readily available to agricultural employers when needed."

In a similar vein, Dean points out that agricultural employers find themselves in a "catch 22" situation with regard to the employment of illegal aliens.

EMPLOYERS ARE REQUIRED TO ACCEPT workers referred to them by the USES, but sometimes face penalties when it is later discovered that some of the workers have no legal U. S. status.

The NCAE seeks to have USES require its local offices to make positive identification of each worker's citizenship status before referrals are made.

The major problems, Dean explains, are that willing and qualified U. S. workers are increasingly difficult to find, while at the same time the U. S. Deqartment of Labor is making it increasingly difficult to obtain authorization for the use of temporary foreign workers.

Members of the Texas congressional delegation who were represented at the breakfast and who expressed support for NCAE positions, Dean says, included Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower, Reps. Kent Hance of Lubbock, Jack Hightower of Vernon and Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

COTTON TRADING ACTIVITY ON TELCOT was rather subdued Tuesday.

The volume about 3:30 p.m. was 1,833 bales. The cotton had sold for an average price of 52.62 cents per pound, or an average over the loan of 308 points. About one-third was 1977-crop cotton on which Commodity Credit Corp. loans are expiring.

A little flurry of export business was reported during the holiday period. Colombia, normally an exporter and not an importer, bought what some sources said was approximately 25,000 bales of U. S. cotton. Four firms were reported to have shared in the business.

MEANWHILE, COTTON FUTURES at New York rallied from a mid-session dip to finish more than a half-cent up from the lows.

Prices posted gains of 76 to 45 points.

Local offerings and long profit-taking, partly in response to a sharp sell-off in precious and base metals, pared an early morning rise. Prices were confined, however, to a tight trading range of a cent or less. Commission house and local buying re-asserted itself in later dealings.

Brokerage sources said futures trading remained very much a weather market, with operators cautiously watching effects of adverse weather in the Mid-South and long-range forecasts for more above-normal rainfall and below-normal temperatures.

New Yorker Appointed For U.S. Farm Position

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee unanimously approved Thomas F. McBride on last week as inspector general at the Agriculture Department, under a 1978 law that requires such a position there.

Previously, department secretaries in most cases decided whether to have an independent, internal investigator and who it would be. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland appointed McBride to the post at the Agriculture Department in October 1977.

McBride, a former member of the Watergate special prosecution team, served 18 months in the job before selling energy-company stocks considered potential conflicts of interest under that new ethics code.

President Carter's nomination of McBride now goes to the Government Operations Committee before a vote on confirmation by the full Senate.

Last month, to comply with a new ethics-in-government law, McBride sold his holdings in Kerr-McGee Corp., Barber Oil Corp. and Pittson Co., according to financial statements released by the committee last week.

His wife, Catherine H. Milton, at the same time sold her holdings in Kroger Co., a leading retail food-store chain. A former employee of the American Bar Association, she has been a Treasury Department official since October 1977.

McBride told Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Agriculture Department, that the stocks had been sold as indicated. Otherwise there were no questions about his holdings.

Bernhardt K. Wruble, director of the new Office of Government Ethics, told the committee April 23 that he believed McBride's stock portfolio "is in compliance with applicable laws and regulations governing conflicts of interest, subject to divestiture of his holdings" in those three companies and his wife's selling the Kroger stocks.

In addition to farm programs, the department is responsible for wide-ranging regulations on food processing and handling of food stamps by retailers and investigates prices and profits throughout the food industry.

It also underwrites research into alternative energy sources.

While associate special prosecutor from 1973 to 1975 on the team probing Nixon-administration scandals, McBride headed the campaign-contributions task force. The largest unit in the special prosecutor's office, it ultimately prosecuted more than 30 persons and 20 major corporations.

He also acted as liaison between the prosecutors and the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Internal Revenue Service and other federal agencies.

For the next two years, he was director of the Bureau of Enforcement at the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Disclosure statements required under the new ethics law show that McBride, in addition to making $46,593.60 as the Agriculture Department inspector general, earned dividends last year totalling $1,643 from stocks. The Kroger stock accounted for $356 of his wife's dividend income of $1,294.

McBride's holdings then included stocks of Houdaille Industries, Ohio Brass, Pittston, Bethlehem Steel, Mobil Oil Corp., K-Mart, Polaroid Corp., Halliburton Co., Kerr-McGee, Barber Oil, M. Lowenstein & Sons and Joslyn Manufacturing.

The documents said the Ohio Brass and Mobil stocks also have been sold. New holdings include 100 shares of Control Data Corp. and 300 shares of Sherwin-Williams Co. stock.

McBride, 50, was assistant district attorney of New York County, N.Y., for three years in the 1950s, worked at the Labor and Justice departments in the 1960s and was a deputy director of the Peace Corps from 1965 to 1968.

Irrigation Study Grants Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has awarded $146,000 in grants to research projects in three states aimed at finding new ways of conserving water and energy in irrigation.

At the University of Idaho, scientists will use $58,000 to modify an existing computer program on irrigation system planning and operation.

An additional $88,000 has been granted scientists at Clemson University in South Carolina and North Carolina State University to develop irrigation schedules for corn and soybeans, based on soil water management technology and soil and crop characteristics.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices moved higher on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday, spurred by continuing favorable export news.

Post-holiday trading was very quiet but export reports and expectations contributed some firmness in most contracts.

South Korea tendered for 400,000 metric tons of corn and the Agriculture Department Friday announced the sale of 150,000 tons of corn to unknown destinations.

Wheat prices were also supported by dry weather in the Southwest, which was delaying the wheat havest.

Farmer selling of grains and soybeans was reported light, with cash prices mostly unchanged.

At the close soybeans were 4 to to 10½ cents higher, with July contracts quoted at $7.38¾; wheat was 6¼ to 6½ cents higher, July $3.60¾; corn was 3¼ to 4¾ cents higher, July $2.68½, and oats were 1½ to 2½ cents higher.

Cattle Futures Decline Falls To April Levels

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 55 to 150 points lower led by various contracts at the daily limit level decline Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 25,548 cars. The market was lower from the start and fell to the lowest levels since early April.

Aggressive selling by locals and commission houses was triggered by continued weakness in cash cattle and beef. The downturn in gold following record highs was also a factor here. There was also pressure from the pork pits.

Wholesale beef was off 1 at 107½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were off $1.75 to up 75 cents with the best top $74.50 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 116,000 head. About 14,700 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 87 to 135 lower led by March and May on 3,815 contracts. Prices fell to 1½-week lows at limit losses in all contracts except April and May.

The market was lower from the start on limit lower live cattle futures and weakness in cash feeder cattle and beef. The sharp setbacks in gold futures were also noted.

There have been 715 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were off $10 to up $2 with the best top $135 per hundredweight. The major terminals are expecting about 3,300 head today.

Hog futures closed 2 to 50 lower led by October on 6,216 lots. The market was down 75 for a time after briefly gaining 37.

Some support was attracted on discount of futures to cash with pressure from heavy hog runs and lower prices along with weakness in the pork complex. Limit declines in cattle futures contributed to selling. New season's lows were posted in October, December and February as prices slipped to the lowest since last July.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 2 cents at 68 to 70 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs had the best top of $45 per hundredweight at Peoria. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 31,300 head. Kill was 318,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 72 to 200 lower with February

SuperSonics Boom Bullets In Overtime

SEATTLE (AP) — Guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson combined for 68 points, including eight in overtime Tuesday night, as the Seattle SuperSonics outfought the Washington Bullets 114-112 to take a 3-1 lead in the National Basketball Association's playoff finals.

The SuperSonics can wrap up the first championship in their 12-year history with a victory Friday night in Landover, Md. If Washington wins that game, the best-of-seven series would come back for game six Sunday at the Coliseum, where Seattle has won 25 of its last 26 outings.

The lone exception was Washington's 105-99 triumph in the deciding seventh game of last year's title series.

Wes Unseld's flip shot with 18 seconds to play in regulation had given Washington a 104-104 tie and sent the game into overtime. But Williams and Dennis Johnson wasted no time taking control in the five-minute extra period.

Dennis Johnson scored on an offensive rebound and Williams hit a breakaway layup to give Seattle a four-point lead. After Charles Johnson hit a basket for Washington, Dennis Johnson responded with a jumper from the foul line and Williams sank two free throws to put Seattle in front 112-106 with 2:08 to play in overtime.

Baskets by Tom Henderson and Kevin Grevey brought the Bullets within two, but a pair of free throws by Jack Sikma with 39 seconds to play gave the Sonics some breathing room.

Little-used veteran Phil Chenier scored from the right corner for Washington, his first basket of the final series, and Sikma missed a jumper to give the Bullets one last chance with six seconds to play.

After a time out, Grevey tried to drive down the right side but found his path blocked by Dennis Johnson. He threw up an off-balance 18-foot shot that missed everything and Sikma grabbed the ball as the final buzzer sounded.

Williams led the Sonics, as he has in each game of this series, with 26 points. Dennis Johnson scored 22 and Sikma added 20 points and 17 rebounds.

Elvin Hayes, Charles Johnson and Grevey led the Bullets with 18 points apiece.

It was a rugged, almost brutal game, with a host of players on each team getting in foul trouble. By the end, the Bullets' entire front line of Hayes, Unseld and Bobby Dandridge had fouled out.

Longhorns Top Diamond Poll

AUSTIN (AP) — No one could blame the Brigham Young Cougars if they didn't feel at home in Disch-Falk Field, the home diamond of the University of Texas baseball team.

With 5,500 partisan Texas fans and a rowdy group of UT supporters called the "Wild Bunch" shouting approval, country-western music blaring between innings and nachos, a Mexican delicacy, on sale at the concession stand, BYU must have felt they were in a foreign country.

Of the eight teams in the College World Series starting Friday in Omaha, Neb., Texas has the best record. And now the Longhorns have something else, the No. 1 ranking in the final "Collegiate Baseball" newspaper poll of the season.

Texas, 54-6, finished first in the poll with 496 of a possible 500 power index points in the voting of sportswriters, coaches and college sports information directors. The final results were released Tuesday.

Miami, Fla., also heading for Omaha, is second with 494 points. Seven of the eight teams going to the series are ranked in the top 10. Connecticut is the exception and it plays Texas in the first round.

California State at Fullerton is ranked third and will play fourth-ranked Mississippi State in the series' first round. Arizona, ranked fifth, plays Miami.

UCLA, which was beaten by Fullerton in the West regional, is ranked sixth. Arkansas is No. 7 and meets eighth-ranked Pepperdine in a first-round game Friday.

Completing the top 10 are No. 9 Clemson and Hawaii in 10th, neither goes to the series this year.

The Mormon Tabernacle Choir might have helped but Willie Nelson was the preferred singing artist Monday night as the Horns mauled the Cougars 6-2 in the finals of the NCAA Central Region Baseball Tournament and marched off to the College World Series for the 19th time.

Five-hit pitching by Ken Wright and Keith Creel and the bat work of Terry Salazar, Keith Walker and Jim Tjader propelled the Longhorns into the first round of the College World Series Saturday against Connecticut, the Northeast Regional champion.

"I knew they were a good hitting team, but I felt as long as I could keep the ball down they would hit it on the ground," said Wright, who held BYU to two hits until he yielded a two-run homer by Cliff Pastornicky in the sixth.

Weese Makes Dallas Trip

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Dean Weese, head coach of the Flying Queens at Wayland Baptist College the last six years, was in Dallas on Tuesday amid rumors that he had accepted a job as the head basketball coach of the newly formed Dallas Diamonds.

The Diamonds are one of six new teams now forming with the fledgling Women's Professional Basketball League. According to reports, Weese was to have informed the Diamond organization whether or not he had accepted their head coach offer on Tuesday.

But the Dallas franchise had reportedly planned to make the announcement of their head coach selection next week on June 5. Weese could not be located in Dallas on Tuesday.

According to reports in Plainview Tuesday, it seemed likely that Weese accepted the professional coaching job. However these reports could not be confirmed.

In six years at WBC Weese has posted an impressive 194-30 won-lost record — winning 87 percent of his games. Before coaching the Flying Queens he had been the head coach at Spearman for 15 years where his teams won 13 district titles and three state championships.

Leslie Makes Area Team

Tim Leslie, Lubbock Christian College's junior first-baseman, was named to the NAIA All-Area II team, released on Tuesday.

Leslie, who hit .390 and slammed 15 home runs this year, was one of four players named to the team for the second straight year.

The other repeater's were William Carey catcher Jim Celidonia, William Carey second baseman Rick McMullen and Southern Louisiana shortstop Michael Wood.

Leslie had 76 hits and drove in 64 runs this year as well as picking up an LCC record of 54 walks. He committed only seven errors in 535 chances this year in the field.

The complete Area II team includes NAIA Division's 4, 7, 8, and 30. The complete team reads:

Diving Classes To Begin

If you are 12 years old or older and like to jump off diving boards-and,oh, you know how to swim, then the diving classes offered this summer by the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department may be just what you need to consume that extra summertime energy.

Classes begin June 5 at Maxey swimming pool and Mike Harrison, a Parks and Recreation department staffer and former Texas Tech diver, will be the instructor. The four-week session will meet twice a week from 9-10:10 a.m.

Emphasis will be on beginning diving techniques and interested persons can register at K.N. Clapp swimming pool from 9 a.m. until noon and 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Stockton Packer Takes Crown

AMARILLO (Special)-Odessa's Stockton Packer softball team, compiled mostly of players from the Lubbock area, won the Memorial Day softball tournament here by defeating the Amarillo Argonauts 5-2, 5-1.

The next tourney for Stockton Packer will be in Wichita Falls in two weeks.

Big Spring Slates Softball Action

BIG SPRING (Special)— The Big Spring area Chamber of Commerce Sports Committee has announced that it will sponsor the first Big Spring Area Invitational Slow-Pitch Softball Tournament.

Committee members are hopeful that the event, which will be held June 8-10, can become an annual affair.

The tourney will be limited to the first 40 entrants and will be a double elimination affair. Entry fee is $55 per team and the deadline for entries is June 5.

For more information contact John D. Weeks, 1512 Stadium, Big Spring, Tx. 79720. Interested athletes can also call (915) 267-8323 or 263 2051.

North, Lopez Set Target Scores

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Several charities were the victors as four professional golfers, balmy weather, a great golf course and a large crowd teamed up.

The event was the National Golf Day Charities Round of Champions at the Oak Tree Golf Course here.

Men and women U.S. Open and PGA champions Andy North, Hollis Stacy, John Mahaffey and Nancy Lopez toured the demanding par 71 layout with 8,000 admiring fans.

North shot a one-under-par 70 to set the men's target score and Lopez a 73 with a closing, 30-foot birdie putt for the women's guideline in the annual "beat the pros" contest. Mahaffey and Stacy each shot 74.

HOLE-IN-ONE

Bill Pierce of Lubbock scored a hole-in-one at Cloud Country Golf Club in Cloudcroft, N.M. during the Memorial day weekend. He used a 6-iron on the 172 yd. par 3 hole. Pierce recorded the ace on the 12th hole. Tommy Mooreland of Lubbock witnessed the shot.

Borger Heads All-District List

CANYON (Special)-The district champion Borger Bulldogs paced the 1-AAA All-district baseball team as three players and the head coach were selected to the post season team, it was announced Tuesday.

Head coach Ray Murphree, who led Borger into the bidistrict playoffs where they loss to Pecos, was named coach of the year. Bulldog senior Nathan Bailey was named player of the year. The catcher batted .510 this season.

Other Borger honorees included pitcher Greg Fleming (6-1) and centerfielder Mike Tuten (.463).

Hector Limon (.451), Estacado's outstanding freshman leftfielder, was named newcomer of the year. Other Matador selections included second baseman Tony Gutierrez, first baseman Manuel Escamilla and utility infielder Brett Parker.

Levelland contributed four players to the team including junior leftfielder Gary Dockery (.529), and seniors Tommy Basey (.358) at shortstop and Wes Harley (468.) at third base. Levelland's senior hurler, Larry Hanna (4-1), was selected to the pitching staff. Harley shared the third base honor with Johnny Ceja of Dunbar. Ceja was the Panthers lone selection to the squad.

The other member of the pitching staff is Kent Hazen (3-4) of Dumas.

Dumas senior Bubba McDonald (392.) tied with Todd Nix (.327), a senior from Canyon, for high honors at the catcher slot. Senior David Dickey (.469), also from Dumas, joined Canyon junior Brad Talbutt (.322) at second base.

Tim Nichols of Levelland was chosen as the designated hitter.

'Fumble' Coach Ends Silence

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants coach responsible for "The Fumble," says he wouldn't hesitate to call the same play again, but doubts he'll get the opportunity.

"If I had to do it over again I suppose I'd probably make the same decision, call the same play I did then," Bob Gibson, former offensive coordinator, said recently.

The Giants were leading Philadelphia 17-12 with less than 30 seconds to go last Nov. 18. On third and two, Gibson called for quarterback Joe Pisarcik to hand off to fullback Larry Csonka instead of simply falling on the ball.

The connection between quarterback and fullback never was made, the ball popped loose and Philadelphia's Herman Edwards returned it for the winning touchdown.

"The Fumble," as it cynically became known, was the most costly play of the 1978 National Football League season. It cost the Giants a game, Gibson his job a day later and eventually the entire coaching staff was fired. Angry fans burned tickets.

Gibson, now a Florida real estate agent, had remained silent since the day of "The Fumble."

"We needed first and 10. Considering the time on the clock, field position, the way the game had gone, in my mind we needed to keep the football to win the game.

"People don't realize the pressure you're under in a situation like that. How little time you have to make a decision.

"I'd have to say it's over for me now. I was in the game a long time. I enjoyed it...I loved coaching."

Astros Squeeze Past Reds In Ninth Inning 2-1

By The Associated Press

Denny Walling's run-scoring single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning led the Houston Astros to a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Ellis Valentine hit a three-run homer to cap a five-run, fifth inning and the Montreal Expos rode the six-hit pitching of Steve Rogers to a 9-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday night.

Rogers triggered the fifth-inning outburst by leading off with a single against Dick Ruthven. He advanced to second on Andre Dawson's sacrifice, moved to third on Rodney Scott's single and both runners scored on Warren Cromartie's double.

Tony Perez then drew a walk but was forced at second on a fielder's choice by Gary Carter, setting the stage for Valentine's fifth homer of the season.

The Expos had provided Rogers with a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Chris Speier doubled in two runs. Perez and Valentine both hit RBI doubles in the seventh inning for Montreal's final runs.

John Stearns and Steve Henderson belted run-scoring dobles to highlight a four-run rally in the seventh inning and give the New York Mets a 6-2 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dave Parker drovein three runs with a homer and a double as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 8-0 behind the combined five-hit pitching of Don Robinson and Grant Jackson.

In the American League, Cecil Cooper hit a pair of bases-empty homers and Robin Yount added a two-run double off Catfish Hunter, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Lance Parrish snapped an 8-8 tie with a run-scoring single in the eighth inning following a two-out intentional walk to Jason Thompson to give the Detroit Tigers a 9-8 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. Bill Nahorodny doubled home two runs and Richard Wortham stopped Cleveland on four hits for eight innings to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 4-2 victory over the Indians.

Rich Dauer, Ken Singleton, Gary Roenicke and Lee May hammered home runs in support of Jim Palmer's pitching to lead Baltimore to an 8-1 victory over Kansas City and snap the Orioles' 10-game losing streak.

Two AL games were rained out — Texas at Boston and Oakland at Minnesota.

In the first game of an NL twi-night doubleheader on the West Coast, Dave Winfield homered and Gene Tenace cracked a two-run triple to help Gaylord Perry record his 271st career victory as the San Diego Padres defeated the Atlanta Braves 6-3.

In other late NL action, San Francisco was at Los Angeles. In the NL, California visited Seattle.

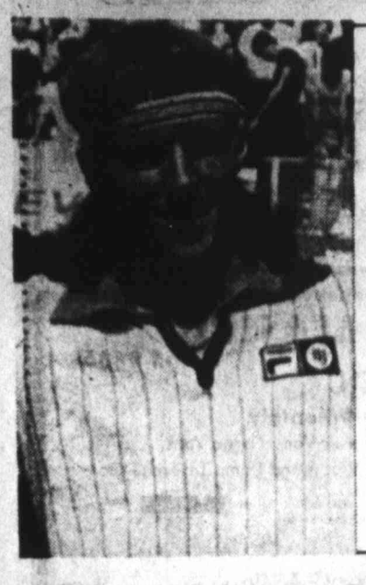
Connors, Borg Clear French Obstacles



The injury didn't worry me at all today. I have been resting, and last Saturday I had my first serious practice for eight days. The first round is difficult in any tournament. Clay is Smid's best surface so I knew he would be a hard man to play against.—BJORN BORG

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg, arch rivals for the world's top tennis honors, cleared their first obstacles in the French Open tennis championships on the slow clay courts of the Roland-Garros Stadium Tuesday.

Connrs was the most impressive of the two. He hit his way past fellow American left-hander Terry Moor 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Borg, back in action after a groin injury, had a harder task as he took almost three hours to tame Tomaz Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Connors and Borg could face each other in the final a week from Sunday for a first prize of $49,000.

Borg, the defending champion, is bidding for his fourth French Open win in six years.

"The injury didn't worry me at all today," the Swedish star said after his hard-earned win over Smid. "I have been resting, and last Saturday I had my first serious practice for eight days. The first round is difficult in any tournament. Clay is Smid's best surface so I knew he would be a hard man to play against."

Borg did not move around as quickly as usual, and there was a spell when the match was in doubt. After racing through the first set and leading 3-0 in the second, he lost control and Smid won seven of nine games to level at one set all.

Borg still had difficulty in the fourth set and Smid broke service to lead 3-2. But the Swede came bk with some of his most powerful topspin forehands to finish it off.

By the time Connors played, early in the evening, the crowd on the center court had grown to 12,000. The dynamic American gave them their money's worth, attacking every shot as if the title depended on it. His destruction of Moor was completed in 1 hour 35 minutes — quick work on these courts where rallies are long and progress slow.

"Any time you play on clay you have to be patient, and I was real patient today," he said.

Patience was rewarded, too, for America's two slow court specialists, Eddie Dibbs and Harold Solomon, who slugged away from their baselines and moved into the second round.

Dibbs eliminated Nick Saviano, another American, 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Working Stiff Set For Next Challenger

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes is just a working stiff like most people ... and most fighters.

That's why the World Boxing Council heavyweght champion thinks he should defend against relatively unknown Mike Weaver of Los Angeles in a June fight at Madison Square Garden that the major television networks wouldn't buy.

"You work at a job and you work to better yourself. Fightin' is the same way," said Holmes when asked why he would fight Weaver, who had an undistinguished 18-8 record, for a percentage which might add up to as high as $750,000 but which could be considerably lower depending on the live gate and closed-circuit television.

"I got to fight somewhere," said Holmes, when asked why he was going into the ring with out the million-dollar-plus guarantee that would come from a network-televison fight. "I've been working 11 years to get where I am."

"It doesn't really bother me. As long as people come, I'll be happy."

"He's 29. I can't put him on the shelf until the networks are ready," said Richie Giachetti, Holmes' manager. ABC will be ready Sept. 14 when it reportedly pay Homes $2.5 million to defend against Earnie Shavers ... should he get past Weaver.

People will have to come to the 21,000-seat Madison Square Garden in an almost sellout number and also show up in goodly numbers at closed-circuit locations for the Don King promotion to get its head above water.

To help draw the Latin crowd to the Garden and to closed-circuit locations, especially in California, King has signed former lightweight champion Roberto Duran of Panama and former welterweight champ Carlos Palomino of Huntington Beach, Calif., for a 10-round fight.

Duran is guaranteed at least $250,000 against the option of a pecentage. Palomino will get a flat $250,000 and Weaver $50,000.

"Money's really not the factor right now," said Holmes. "I want to be a people's champion. I want to give a man the opportunity."

As far as fighting opportunities are concerned, Holmes said he can't get fights with contenders Kallie Knotze and Gerri Coetzee of South Africa, John Tate of Knoxville, Tenn., or former champ Leon Spinks, who are in a tournament to determine a successor to World Boxing Association champion Muhammad Ali when, and if, Ali retired.

Cooke Announces Plans To Sell Forum, Teams

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Jack Kent Cooke, the man who built The Forum to house his basketball and hockey teams, announced Tuesday that he plans to sell the arena and the teams to a Los Angeles businessman.

Involved the sale, expected to be for $67 million and the largest transaction ever in sports history, are the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association, the Kings of the National Hockey League, the Forum and a ranch that Cooke owns in the California Sierra.

Jerry Buss, who previously owned the Los Angeles Strings of World Team Tennis, is the prospective buyer.

Cooke will retain his 80 percent majority interest in the Washington Redskins of the National Football League, plus other holdings.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle told Cooke he had to divest himself of other sports interests if he wanted to keep the Redskins. NFL rules prohibit an owner from having interests in other sports franchises.

However, Cooke was given time to settle a divorce suit. Then last March, his former wife, Barbara, was awarded one-half of his holdings, which were estimated at $100 million.

Buss, 46, is a chemical engineer who made a fortune in Los Angeles real estate holdings. He has a doctorate in physical chemistry from the University of Southern California.

In addition to owning the Strings of WTT, he also was part owner of franchises at San Diego, Anaheim and Indiana.

Cooke, now 66, built the Forum for $16 million in 1967 following disagreements with the Los Angeles Colisium Commission over his teams' use of the Sports Arena adjacent to the Coliseum.

Cooke's announcement confirmed reports during the weekend that a sales agreement had been reached but not yet finalized. The sale will require the approval of both the NBA and the NHL.

The announcement came via Cooke's office at the Forum in Inglewood although he is reported in the East and has been residing in Las Vegas, Nev.

Cooke said the sale includes none of his other business interests.

Originally from Canada, Cooke bought the Lakers from Minneapolis businessman Bob Short for a reported $5 million in 1967 and he paid $2 million to the NHL for the Kings as an expansion franchise the same year.

In addition to housing the teams, the Forum has been successful in luring conventions and shows by various groups.

Buss commented, "It might happen in a day or two or at the most two weeks. It may come to pass, but right now it is premature."

Earlier this year, he tried unsuccessfully to buy the Indiana Pacers of the NBA.

Golf Legend Becomes Eligible For Senior Citizen Tourneys

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A sudden, enormous interest in senior golf is being generated.

There are two reasons. One involves the success and acceptance of the Legends of Golf tournament in Austin, Texas.

The other is Sept. 10.

That's the date Arnold Palmer turns 50 and becomes eligible for certain senior events.

His hair is streaked with silver, now. His waist is thicker. The lines on the expressive face are deeper. His drives are shorter. The putts that once rattled into the cup with metronome regularity are now a sometimes-thing. His game is but a weak and watery imitation of the boldly colored instrument of excitement it once was.

He's gracefully slipped from the role of dynamic charger to that of elder statesman.

But he still exerts that unmatched magic on the gallery. And it isn't only the folks who remember Arnold when. Oh, yes, the grandmothers and the retirees are there, sometimes trudging with difficulty in the army now more hopeful than expectant. The matrons and the middle-aged executives are in his crowd. But there's kids, too, the 20-year-olds who never saw him at his best; the teens and sub-teens who know only the legend of the man.

He remains golf's greatest lure, it most recognizable attraction, its most salable commodity.

The sponsors and promoters and the committees and the money-men who make the game go know this.

And they want to capitalize on it.

Thus the big interest in the seniors.

The PGA has had a national seniors championship for some years. They've recently announced a reorganization of its seniors association to strengthen and expand its activities.

The plan, said PGA President Frank Cardi, is to "provide more places for seniors to play, to bolster the present PGA Seniors Tournament Program ..."

The U.S.G.A. has announced plans to inaugurate a Senior Open Championship (55 and older) next year.

And, of course, the PGA tour has plans for a 1980 Seniors tour — for which Arnold would be eligible — of some 3-6 events.

YOU CAN'T BEAT THE 200-SX FOR GREAT LOOKS OR BEAT Continental Motors FOR GREAT DEALS.

MOVE UP TO A 200SX

At any price, this Datsun 200-SX is positively one of the SX-iest machines on four wheels. Which is why it'll look even better when you get close enough to see our low sticker price. Now that's a figure with real SX-appeal. We are driven to give you the best price there is.

Standard Equipment:
• Power-assist front disc brakes • Steel-belted WSW radials • Full instrumentation including tachometer • AM/FM stereo radio • Fully reclining front bucket seats • Tinted glass all windows • Electric rear window defroster • Electric remote control door mirror • Console with armrest • Cut-pile carpeting • And much more

NOBODY DEMANDS MORE DATSUN WE ARE DRIVEN

Heartline

(Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you has a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: My wife and I are both retired on Social Security and we also receive our company's pension program. We are both over 65 so we are also on Medicare. Our financial situation is in very good shape, as we do not have to go into our savings account to meet our living expenses. The one thing that worries my wife and me is the possibility of a long sickness that will deplete our savings. The only insurance we now have is Medicare. Do you think we should buy some more health insurance to go with Medicare? — G.H.

Heartline cannot advises you to buy extra insurance to supplement the Medicare program. However, we can give you some facts and information that can assist you in making the decision.

Since each person's financial picture is different, insurance needs also vary. There are many types of insurance policies on the market that have a great variety of coverages. Heartline does feel that Medicare is inadequate for most people over age 65, and we feel that some type of extra insurance is desirable. Helen Alpers, associate editor of Retirement Living says that this type of insurance is not only desirable but essential for most retirees nowadays. An accident or sudden illness can quickly wipe out a persons's savings." Another reason for having this insurance is that health-care costs are headed for another doubling within the next six years and, as medical costs increase, Medicare coverage has been gradually decreasing.

Heartline has put together some facts and other pertinent information to assist you in your purchase of health insurance. For your free copy of this information, write to Heartline's Tips on Buying Health Insurance, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please send 25 cents to cover postage and handling.

HEARTLINE: Quite a few years ago I applied for and received a Social Security number. I got a number for a savings account I have. I never worked under Social Security because I was always a housewife. Now that my husband has retired I am drawing Social Security wife's benefits. I just turned age 65 and became eligible for Medicare. When my Medicare card came it had my name and my husband's Social Security number on it. Why is this? Have they made a mistake?— P.G.

No, your Medicare card should not have your Social Security number on it.It should have your husband's Social Security number on it. The number on your Medicare card (your husband's number plus the letter B is to be used only for your Medicare claims. This is done because you are eligible for Social Security and Medicare due to your husband's work record. This is only your Medicare claim number.

The Social Security number you were originally issued should be used for purposes of identification. Use your Medicare claim number only for making claims for coverage to Medicare.

Heartline has developed a simplified, easy-to-understand book on the whole Medicare program. To order, send $1.75 to Medicare Guidebook, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Great Wall Ride Vetoed

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of 13 young "skateboard ambassadors" has returned from a tour of China with just one disappointment. They weren't allowed to ride their skateboards on the Great Wall.

"They wouldn't let us because it's too steep," said Danny Rossner, 13, as the group from Bank Street School arrived Monday at Kennedy Airport from their 19-day trip, some carrying skateboards and wearing caps with red stars.

They said Chinese youngsters were fascinated by the skateboards, as well as by Frisbees and Yo-Yos, and gave them in return an album of photos and a collection of artwork by Chinese children.

The trip by seven boys and six girls, the youngest student group to visit China since travel to the mainland was resumed, was organized by Tang Yungmei, a China-born woman who has a child at the Manhattan school and heads its China studies project.

Half the $45,000 cost of the trip was paid by contributions, the rest by the students and their parents. Their itinerary included Peking, Shanghai, Nanking, Canton and Hangchoo.

Nat Koren, 13, said the thing that surprised him most was how obedient the Chinese children were.

"They trained their young to be very quiet and sit still," he said. "We visited a class of 5-year-olds and everyone sat with their hands behind their backs."

Convalescence Difficult

PARIS (AP) — The Duchess of Windsor is having a "slow and quite difficult convalescence" from a bacterial infection of the blood, a spokesman for the American Hospital here said Tuesday.

DUCHESS

But the spokesman said the condition of the 82-year-old American-born duchess, the former Wallis Warfield Simpson, is "stationary."

The duchess, for whom King Edward VIII gave up the throne of the British Empire in 1936, was admitted to the hospital May 19 for treatment of what was described as a slight bacterial infection.

She had undergone surgery at the hospital Feb. 24 and was released a month later.

That's A Big, Big 10-4

WEWAHITCHKA, Fla. (AP) — Old-time religion has hit the road through an organization of citizens band radio operators called "Breaker-Breaker Sweet Jesus International."

Its symbol is a cross draped with a CB cord and microphone.

Jim Sasser of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., said the idea of organizing a "CB outreach ministry" came to him when he met Jerry Arhelger, an evangelist who recorded the country music record, "Breaker-Breaker Sweet Jesus."

Sasser, 41, said he worked in sales and marketing in San Francisco and Mobile, Ala. before returning to his native Florida to devote full time to Christian work. He founded Fishnet Ministries in Fort Walton Beach.

He said CB evangelism chapters are organizing in several Florida cities, including Fort Walton Beach, Pensacola, Milton and Deltona and in St. Louis, Fairborn, Ohio, and Brewton, Ala.

He said the organization plans to monitor CB channel 3 for spiritual emergencies just as other groups keep an ear tuned to channel 9 for more conventional emergency calls.

"We're going to let people know that we're on there 24 hours a day, 365 days a year," Sasser said. "People can know if they have a need, they can get on there and just share the love of Jesus. We're not going to come down on them condemn what they're doing."

THEY'RE 'FONDA' EACH OTHER — If Henry and Jane Fonda were not father and daughter, they think they could have made a happy couple according to remarks made while taping interview on the NBC-TV "Today" show. (AP Laserphoto)

Oedipus Would Approve

NEW YORK (AP) — If Henry and Jane Fonda were not father and daughter, they think they could have made a happy couple.

While taping an interview with Henry and Jane Fonda, Tom Brokaw, host of NBC-TV's "Today" show, asked the actor if he "could have married and lived happily with a woman like Jane Fonda?"

Henry replied: "I think so, yes...you mean an activis...I think so."

Jane replied: "I don't know about living happily, we could have had a good affair."

The two-part interview with the Fondas, taped in Los Angeles last week, will be broadcast Wednesday and Thursday morning on the "Today" program.

Disc Jockeys Break Record

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — Two disc jockeys from a Gadsden radio station who spent 72 hours submerged in the Coosa River claim to have set a world record for underwater broadcasting.

Rick Sisk and Dennis Deason from WQEN-FM went underwater Friday in a tank dubbed the "Coosa Calypso" and delivered spot broadcasts every two hours.

The two disc jockeys, who emerged Monday, talked from their underwater compartment with a disc jockey in South Carolina who also was broadcasting from underwater.

Jim Stevens, a disc jockey for WRIX in Honea Path, S.C., spent 50 hours beneath the surface of Lake Hartwell in an eight-foot diameter fiberglass sphere before he emerged Monday.

Sisk's wife, Trish, who is a scuba diver, ferried supplies to the Gadsden disc jockeys during their three-day stay.

Sisk and Deason said the Guinness Book of World Records does not have a category for underwater broadcasting.

Grandma Plans Cycle Trek

SEATTLE (AP) — Grandmas tired of rocking chairs and crocheting can follow in the tire tracks of 53-year-old Hazel Kolb, who wheels around the country on an 800-pound motorcycle.

The mother of six and grandmother of 10, is off on a trip that will take her 12,000 to 15,000 miles. Mrs. Kolb, a retired school bus driver, is a spokeswoman for the motorcycle industry, touting safety and rider education. She is out to show that cyclists are "the neighbors next door, maybe the doctor on his way to the hospital to deliver your grandchild, not the Hell's Angels."

Mrs. Kolb left her home in New London, Mo., on April 3 and will end the journey in Rhode Island in July, where she plans to attend a national convention of Motor Maids, an organization of about 500 women cyclers.

Departing Legislature Draws Mixed Reviews

AUSTIN (AP) — It was a legislature that bit the bullet, according to Speaker Bill Clayton. The governor said it treated him pretty well for a rookie. But some lawmakers say they departed Austin in disgust.

As the mandatory adjournment hour of midnight Monday drew near, with all the 66th Legislature's "must" bills on the way to Gov. Bill Clements, Clayton felt called upon to make a speech.

There was no laundry list of accomplishments. And the speech, concluding a session that some say was more in tune with the business lobby than the public's needs, had a defensive ring.

"I want it recorded that in 1979, as Texas and America looked toward a new decade with the problems of yesterday clutching at us and more ominous threats looming ahead, this House did not shirk its duty. We faced the problems as our collective wisdom decreed," Clayton said.

As to whether the legislature led and served the people well, each member "must check our individual scorecard....These are questions that the voting public of Texas will be called on to decide before another legislature convenes," Clayton said.

Clements, who says he will call a special session on what he regards as unfinished business, was upbeat at a post-adjournment news conference, despite the failure of much of his program.

He didn't get the $1 billion he wanted for extra tax relief — indeed, the legislature used every penny that was available.

His anti-pornography program was virtually ignored.

His plans to make public schools more accountable and give greater stress to "basics" fell by the wayside.

But he raised his grade of the legislature from "F" to "B."

Of his 17 highest priority items, he said, 13 passed — "That's a batting average of .760 percent, and that ain't bad for a rookie!"

Clements said he was specially pleased that legislators placed in the general appropriation bill a statement of intent that state agencies reduce their staffs by 5 percent a year.

Lawmakers themselves gave the session a mixed assessment.

"The first thing you have to say is they took a dustpan and broom over to the vault in the state treasurer's office and used every last penny," said Rep. John Wilson, D-La Grange.

Wilson, who has announced plans to try to unseat Clayton in 1981, called it a leaderless session, one that "failed on many occasions to balance the public interest with special interests. ... Many bills became known not by number but by the names of the special interests that pushed them — the Montgomery Ward bill, the savings and loan bill, the automobile dealers bill."

Wilson accused Clayton of "traffic cop leadership — red light to this bill, green light to that one" — and said neither chamber had the kind of leadership that demands each legislator's best.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, remained bitter about the "Killer Bees" episode that prevented senators from voting on a bill creating a presidential primary separate from the regular primaries in 1980.

"I was shocked, frankly, that 12 persons would leave. I wasn't just being melodramatic about it. I just don't see the issue as being that important," Farabee said.

Clements is sure to feel pressure to include a presidential primary in a special session on initiative and referendum — direct lawmaking authority for the voters.

"Killer Bee" Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, said the episode was a healthy one for the tightly controlled Senate.

"People began to appreciate the fact that they had to deal with people," Sewartz said.

Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and part of Clayton's high command, said the legislature dealt in one way or another with all the "must" items.

He said no major issues were "special interest bills as I would define the term" but also said the business lobby was "probably more active this time than ever before."

Davis praised Clayton's leadership for the absence of "hostility and anger" that marks some legislative finales.

"One reason was that Clayton involved (Rep. Ron) Coleman (of El Paso) in the school finance process, which removed a major hurdle," Davis said. Coleman is a leader of the House's liberal faction.

Free Trash Haul Offered Fixers

A free trash haul-off is scheduled to kick off Clean-Up, Fix-Up, Paint Up Month June 2. The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the Board of City Development are sponsering the beautification effort, aided by the Marine Corps Reserve and local Explorer Scouts.

Local residents may call 762-7613 for free hauling of litter between 8 a.m. and noon.

In proclaiming the month of June Clean-Up, Fix-Up, Paint-Up Month, Mayor Dirk West said the Chamber of Commerce committee is initiating a campaign to rid the city of unsightly debris.

"The general good health and welfare of Lubbock citizens depend on a wholesome environment," West said.
