Winter storms icing records across nation

By The Associated Press

The North Pole's weather workshop turned out more raw cold and distributed bundles of brutal winter from the southern Sierras to Maine today, after chilling scores of cities — even Honolulu — with record lows and the latest blast in a week of killer storms.

The chain of storms has killed 98 people, including five who died on rain-slick New Jersey roads and a 97-year-old blind man found dead in his frigid St. Louis apartment Thursday.

In the northeastern United States, the mercury was falling sharply today, and blasting winds threatened up to a foot of snow in Maine and prompted gale warnings on Lake Erie, southern Lake Michigan and the Atlantic coast from New Jersey to Connecticut.

Forecasters called for a slight respite for parts of Texas and Oklahoma, two states where sub-zero cold has killed 17.

But despite the minimal warming in some places, there was little relief in sight from the coldest stretch of December weather in decades.

"At least through Christmas weekend it looks like pretty much the same thing: very cold temperatures," meteorologist Hugh Crowther of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

The unseasonable temperatures stretched as far south as the Rio Grande Valley, where fruit growers kept smudgepots lit early today and wrapped young trees against freezing.

Gusting winds were driving snow into near-whiteout conditions in parts of Michigan, where the Detroit Metropolitan Airport temperature at 12:55 a.m. plunged to 6 below, a new record.

"With the wind blowing across open fields..., you can't see anything," said state police Sgt. Ed Burke at Petoskey, Mich., where a five-mile stretch of U.S. 131 had to be closed Thursday.

The Weather Service said gusts were whipping from the Great Lakes to the mid-Atlantic coast today, as snow squalls menaced the lower Great Lakes and the upper Ohio Valley.

High temperatures throughout the region were expected to be freezing, glazing wet roads in areas including New Jersey, where five traffic deaths were blamed on heavy rain Thursday.

Commercial air and rail travel was delayed by the cold in many places as Americans sought to reach holiday destinations. The holdups lasted up to six hours on some California-bound Amtrak trains from the Midwest, and up to two hours at airports in cities including Chicago, officials said.

A Royal Canadian Air Force jet trainer skidded off an icy runway at Westover Air Force Base at Chicopee, Mass., on Thursday, injuring the pilot.

Snow was falling in northern New England, and a winter storm warning was in effect in Maine where up to a foot was expected. Similar accumulations were forecast in the upstate New York and Pennsylvania "snowbelt," the weather service said.

At the other end of the country, a winter storm watch was posted through Saturday for the southern Sierra Nevada.

Light snow was falling in the central plateau and the central Rockies today; spreading across to the central high Plains.

After reporting more than 70 record lows around the nation Thursday afternoon, the National Weather Service added eight marks late in the day and 14 more this morning, for a total of at least 95 cities. A 57-degree reading tied the record in Honolulu.

In Oklahoma City, Thursday's low of 3 degrees set a record for the third consecutive day.

Christmas conference

"Oooooo, yes, I've been very good this year, Santa," angelic-looking Jonathan Ellison appears to be saying as he contemplates what he would like to find under the tree. He is the three-year-old son of Ann Ellison, 3600 N. Loop 250.

'Santa!' He still answers

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Did you know Santa Claus has a West Texas drawl? Oh, yes.

He also has a branch office of the North Pole, complete with snow and reindeer, in Midland Park Mall.

Maybe last-minute shoppers bustling by see the animals are mechanical, the beard is removable and the boots are Western, but children have faith strong enough to make illusion a reality.

"Can you tell Santa what you want for Christmas?" the ruddy-cheeked man asked the child on his knee.

"Everything!" was the prompt reply from the freckle-faced, red-haired boy.

"Can you narrow that down a bit?"

The scene resembled a Norman Rockwell print.

Lined up to visit Santa are "children" from newborn to 80. Those who can't walk come in wheelchairs and strollers.

Some are eager, some nervous, some shy. A few babies seem unimpressed with the fact they're about to meet the most famous man on earth.

Some of the younger ones sit and stare with wide eyes at ol' St. Nick. Others shove fingers into their mouths and silently nod in answer to his soft-spoken questions.

One little girl spied him from several yards down the hall and ran with outstretched arms and sparkling eyes squealing "Santa!"

A little boy looked back longingly as his mother pulled him down the hall by his coats-leeve.

A few children hung back, hiding behind mother's leg and peeking shyly around it to study the bearded oddity. One lad inched just close enough to grab the proffered coloring book and then dashed back. After reaching the safety of his mother's side he looked back and smiled proudly over his brave deed.

The older, experienced children are more matter-of-fact. They come with long lists memorized and need no encouragement to tell Santa exactly what they expect under the tree Christmas morning.

They ask for everything from a ping pong ball to a computer. Of course, each of them has been especially good this year.

Postal carriers racing Christmas clock

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

In the gloom of the night and the glow of the frosty lights, Midland postal carriers may resemble Santa Clauses tonight and Christmas Eve as they hurry to deliver last-minute mail.

This week's ice storm closed roads and airports, halting not only people but also putting a freeze on mail delivery.

Midland Postmaster Bill Williams said business was so slow Wednesday and Thursday at the post offices that employees were allowed to take vacation time and go home. By late Wednesday afternoon, Williams was saying, "We haven't got any mail in except for surrounding towns. One truck and one airline just came in. The mail is just beginning to move now.

"Yesterday's Wall Street Journals came in today," he noted.

The downshift in work came just after the Post Office experienced its heaviest day on record. On Tuesday, almost 1 million pieces of outgoing mail — letters and packages — were handled here.

In fact, said Williams, the amount of parcel post has been up about 50 percent this year compared to 1982.

"The economy is much better this year," he said. "Our volume, our revenues, our packages are particularly up. I think people are buying more, sending more gifts. They're buying gifts for people they didn't buy for last year."

But that increase is placing a heavier burden on the postal carriers when the mail finally does arrive.

"The weather has really hurt us," Williams said.

Normally, mail comes in on four 18-wheel trucks each day from Dallas, in addition to the bundles that are shipped by air. But on Wednesday, the four trucks were frozen in Abilene and no airliner carrying mail came out of Dallas to Midland.

One truck finally began rolling in the afternoon.

Even Express Mail wasn't "express."

"We've got 600 pounds of Express Mail coming in on aircraft," he added.

Skid Row mission sees plenty of hunger

AMERICA'S HUNGRY

Part Three

EDITOR'S NOTE: The subject of hunger in America made recent headlines when Edwin Meese III, presidential counselor, gave his views on how little hunger the Task Force on Food Assistance has documented. This is the first in a series of articles on hunger with contributions from Hearst newspapers across the country.

By JOELLE COHEN
and RICK RUIZ
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Helen Ostruske has seen plenty of hunger along Los Angeles' Skid Row. The 34-year-old UCLA student, who began working there several months ago, has seen derelicts and alcoholics searching through trash cans and eating rotten tomatoes picked up off the street.

Inside the Union Rescue Mission, where Ms. Ostruske works with a group studying the Skid Row homeless, the air is a foul mixture of body odor and disinfectant.

The men and women who use the shelter — some of them drunks or former mental patients, some of them just down and out — spend the night sleeping in plastic chairs in the mission's chapel.

While working on her master's degree in social welfare, Ms. Ostruske has interviewed dozens of Skid Row indigents. Their stories have convinced her that White House counselor Edwin Meese III was wrong when he said people eat at soup kitchens because the food is free.

"I think he was totally out of line. He doesn't know what he's talking about," Ms. Ostruske said. "The people I've interviewed are out of work, or can't find a job, but almost all want to earn their own way. For the most part, these people are not here because they want to be."

There is plenty of hunger to go around in Los Angeles.

Dianne Wright, emergency food access organizer for the Southern California Ecumenical Council, said its impossible to get an accurate count of people using food banks and missions because "there are more than 500 places of all different sizes and people just trickle in." But she is sure that things are not improving.

"Again and again I kept hearing that this summer was worse than last winter," said Ms. Wright, who coordinates "pantries," mostly in churches and synagogues. "And this winter it's already getting even worse."

Another indication of need — food stamp applications — is rising dramatically, according to the person in charge of federal food stamp distribution for Los Angeles County.

Darrel Shultz, chief of special programs for the county's Department of Public Social Servies, said 228,669 households — representing 638, 643 individuals — received food stamps last month.

That's up from 195,000 households in 1981, when the figure had dropped from 208,000 after the Reagan administratin tightened food stamp eligibility.

The population of Los Angeles County is about 7.5 million, according to the 1980 census.

"We seem to be kind of leveling off now after a long increase" in applications, Shultz said. "When unemployment goes up, usually a few months later we start climbing, and when unemployment goes down, usually a few months later we start falling."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow for parts of the Northeast from the eastern Great Lakes to northern Maine and portions of the central Rockies are forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Rain is expected in the Southwest.

Another record cold day noted

"We're breaking records all over," an employee at the National Weather Service sighed.

Thursday was once again a record cold day for Midlanders when a new low low and a new low high were set for Dec. 22.

The eight-degree low topped by 10 the old record low of 18 set in 1930. The high of 21 was seven degrees colder than the previous low high of 28 recorded in 1963.

Midland's overnight low today was 15 degrees, two degrees too warm to break another record. The recorded low in 1953 was 13, and the all-time high for today was 79 set 50 years ago.

The weekend forecast calls for partly cloudy skies tonight with lows near 15 and northeast winds of 5 to 15 mph. Saturday should be cloudy and cold with highs in the middle 20s and northeast winds of 5 to 10 mph.

St. Nick's cheeks may be a little redder than usual when he flies over Midland. Continued cloudy skies and cold temperatures are predicted.

Freezing front blows into Valley

By The Associated Press

Texans shivered again today under icy temperatures that brought snow flurries to far Southeast Texas, freezing drizzle to Galveston and unusually cold conditions to the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where farmers kept a worried eye on their citrus crops.

Fruit growers in far South Texas lit smudgepots and wrapped young trees hoping to fend off freezing temperatures that threatened their crops.

The National Weather Service issued a freeze warning for the valley Thursday night, but a cloud cover remained over most of the area and readings hovered mostly in the lower and middle 30s early today.

Growers faced possible crop damage if temperatures dip to 28 degrees for more than six hours.

With the Christmas fruit market depleted two days before the holiday, growers said they had no reason to rush picking, but must try to protect the fruit on the trees.

Light snow flurries fell before dawn at the Jefferson County Airport in Southeast Texas and a travelers' advisory was posted for the Galveston area because of freezing drizzle.

A spokeswoman for the Galveston County sheriff said the causeway from the mainland to Galveston Island was closed for several hours early Friday because of ice. She said the bridge had been reopened, but was still icy in spots.

Snow was falling today around the space agency's Johnson Space Center 30 miles south of Houston and west of the city, a spokesman with the state highway department said. A freezing rain slowed travel over much of the rest of town.

Houston Lighting & Power contacted about 100 large industrial users Thursday, asking them to quit using heavy electric equipment, spokesman Graham Painter said.

The weather service predicted a warming trend today, giving the state a temporary break from record-setting low temperatures. But colder temperatures were on tap for Saturday, although forecasters discounted the possibility of a white Christmas.

The winter storms have claimed at least eight lives since Sunday.

Forecasters said highs in the 20s were expected today in the Panhandle, 30s across North Texas, 40s in South Texas, and 60s in far West Texas.

But Al Moller of the weather service office in Fort Worth said Texans would probably wake up Christmas day to another arctic blast.

However, extended forecasts called for much warmer weather beginning Monday and daytime temperatures could reach the 50s by Tuesday, the weather service said.

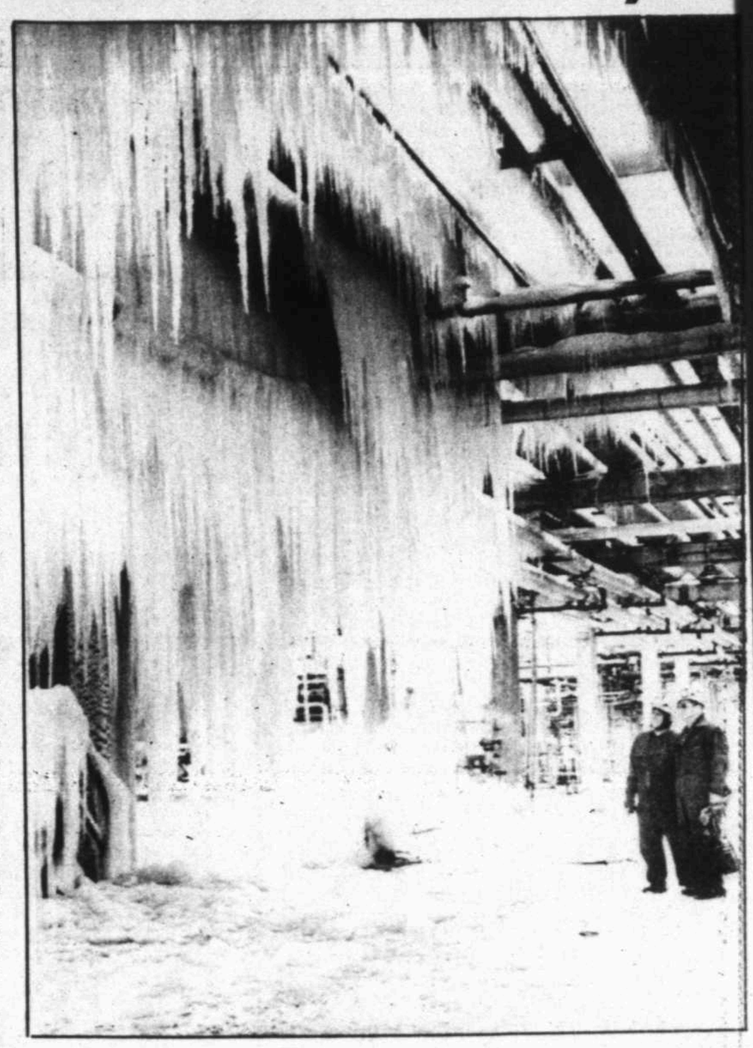

Sections of the Panhandle, South Plains and North Texas reported readings in the single digits before dawn today, while central sections were hovering in the middle to upper teens. Temperatures in the 20s and 30s were the rule in South Texas, while normal seasonable readings were noted west of the moutains in far West Texas.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 3 at Amarillo to 49 at El Paso. Amarillo's reading broke the record low temperature for Dec. 23 of 4 degrees, set in 1913.

Other record lows for the date today included 8 at Abilene; 6 at Wichita Falls; 18 at Waco; 15 at Austin; and 12 at San Angelo.

The record-setting cold forced several power plants to shut down Thursday and others were operating a reduced capacity. Several sporadic brownouts were reported.

"We've had an extraordinary demand," said Texas Power and Light spokesman Paul Freeman.

Weather delays many travelers

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

As Americans started for Christmas holiday destinations today, a week-long siege of winter storms delayed hundreds of travelers with icy roads and the bitter cold slowing passenger trains or causing cancellations and delays at many airports.

"Bring something to read," passengers were advised by United Airlines spokesman Joe Hopkins at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, where several airlines' flights were delayed today as many service vehicles froze up and refused to budge.

Flights were moving, he said, but "they come in late, so they go out late."

Meanwhile the National Safety Council estimated that between 300 and 400 people may die in traffic accidents over the holiday weekend. The counting period begins at 6 p.m. this evening and extends until midnight Monday.

Motorists faced hazardous and slow journeys in many places, with travelers' advisories for snowy weather posted from northern Nevada to Michigan and Vermont.

A Greyhound bus ran off icy Missouri 72 and toppled onto its right side Thursday, injuring 12 passengers, state police said. The accident occurred near Patton, 90 miles south of St. Louis.

The extreme cold — more than 30 below in some places — prompted Amtrak officials to order passenger trains to slow down, for fear of snapping or breaking super-chilled tracks under the weight of racing trains, railroad officials said.

The result was delays of up to several hours from the Midwest to California.

"Due to speed restrictions and so forth, our arrivals and departures are delayed from four to six hours," said Amtrak's James Glazier in Omaha, Neb.

In San Francisco, Amtrak spokesman Art Lloyd said there were two-hour delays on trains from Chicago. He added that most routes were sold out.

A chain reaction of delays blamed on sub-zero cold centered in the nation's midsection left travelers waiting in other airports, including those at Wichita, Kan., Detroit, Denver and Oklahoma City.

"I've seen ant hills more organized," said Oklahoma airport police Sgt. James Thomas, referring to an estimated 1,000 people milling in the Will Rogers World Airport terminal, waiting for flights or relatives.

Only one flight there was canceled late Thursday, Thomas said.

Ice and wind were delaying flights for up to two hours today at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, officials said.

Delays of up to an hour at Denver's Stapleton International Airport were "no more than what is normal" for the holiday period, said operations manager Ron Sano.

With the mercury at 18 below zero at O'Hare today, delays stretched to several hours for some flights.

Besides the problem of frozen parts on service vehicles, Hopkins said, "there's the human factor."

"A lot of things have to be done outside — loading baggage, fueling, putting the food on. Employees can only take so much."

Flights early Thursday from Wichita Mid-Continent Airport were held up or canceled because of freezing rain and snow elsewhere, officials said.

Karen Goodman, a ticket agent for American Airlines, guessed that three-quarters of American's passengers out of Wichita had been transferred to other flights while the Dallas-Fort Worth airport was closed.

"We found most everybody a flight out of here," she said, however.

Meanwhile, in Miami, where temperatures reached the 80s Thursday, Eastern Airlines spokesman James Ashlock noted a "surge of last-minute bookings."

"It looks like a lot of it is being sparked by this severe weather," he added.

Land mine injures medical team

Saudi Arabia's Mideast peace effort 'near breakthrough'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A land mine explosion injured three members of an International Red Cross medical team today as they fled an outbreak of fighting between Christian and Islamic Druse militiamen southeast of the capital.

The flareup came as Saudi Arabian peace efforts were reported nearing a breakthrough to disengage Lebanon's warring factions and put Italian and Greek cease-fire observers in Beirut and the Chouf mountains.

Red Cross spokeswoman Laure Speziale said a physician, a nurse and a Lebanese aide were injured when their car hit a mine near Wadi El-Zaineh along the Mediterranean coast. She said the physician suffered a serious leg wound while the other two escaped with minor injuries.

Ms. Speziale did not identify the three people, but said the physician was taken to American University Hospital in Beirut for treatment. The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio said the injured physician was a Frenchman, Pierre Duvrant, and that the nurse also was French and was named Clare Dinguere.

The radio said the mine blast occurred as the Red Cross team was racing toward southern Lebanon's coastal highway to flee the fighting between the rightist Christians and the leftist Druse.

In the northern port city of Tripoli, Syrian-backed PLO rebels were preparing to withdraw after forcing Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat and his 4,000 loyalists to abandon their last Middle East stronghold, reports by state and privately owned radio stations said.

Arafat, after a conciliatory meeting with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Cairo that set off a storm of criticism from Israel and within the PLO, was steaming down the Suez Canal with many of the exiled loyalists in Greek ships bound for North Yemen.

The Beirut radio stations and Beirut's leading newspapers said Saudi mediator Rarik Hariri was close to wrapping up a disengagement accord that would set the stage for reconvening a reconciliation conference in Geneva among Lebanon's principal warring leaders.

Hariri held a series of meetings Thursday here with Shiite Moslem and rightist Christian militia leaders to arrange for an exchange of kidnapped hostages betweeen the two factions. He also held lengthy telephone talks with Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt, who is in the Jordanian capital of Amman, the radios reported.

Most newspapers and radio stations gave no details of the disengagement agreement. But the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir said the plan primarily calls for:

— Withdrawal of Christian militia forces from all positions facing the Shiite-populated southern suburbs of Beirut and the closing of all their barracks in the hills overlooking the suburbs. Shiite militiamen, in turn, would pull back 700 yards from current front-line positions.

— Withdrawal of Christian militiamen from the Chouf Mountains and the Kharroub region overlooking the Israeli defense line in southern Lebanon to the Christian hinterland north of Beirut. Lebanese police would take over security functions in these regions, and Lebanese troops would control the highway linking Beirut with southern Lebanon.

— Reiteration of the pledge by all warring factions to neutralize Beirut International Airport, where U.S. Marines are based.

Once agreement on these points is signed by all parties concerned, the Lebanese government would ask Italy and Greece to provide about 400 observers each to police the ceasefire, mainly on the vacated front lines. Both nations had previously agreed in principle to provide the observers.

Newspaper reports said the disengagement plan was designed to ensure greater security in Lebanon and help clear the way for another session of reconciliation talks among the nation's principal Moslem and Christian leaders.

The foreign ministers of Lebanon, Syria, and Saudi Arabia are expected to meet in Riyadh on Jan. 8 to decide whether to resume reconciliation talks, newspapers here said.

The first session of the conference ended in Geneva last month. The conferees recessed to give President Amin Gemayel time to consult with the United States, France, Italy and Britain on how to ensure withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon. The four nations are furnishing peacekeeping troops in Beirut.

Arafat's evacuation from northern Lebanon on Tuesday was part of an agreement sponsored by Saudi Arabia and Syria to halt the PLO civil war and spare Tripoli from futher bloodshed.

State and privately owned radio stations in Beirut quoted an unnamed spokesman for the PLO rebels as saying they were "regrouping" their forces today to begin evacuating northern Lebanon in compliance with the Nov. 25 ceasefire accord.

The spokesman was quoted as saying the bulk of the rebel forces that drove Arafat out in a month-long offensive would "return to positions on the front line with Israel" in the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon.

He said, however, the rebels would leave small garrisons in the Palestinan refugee camps of Baddawi and Nahr El-Bared on Tripoli's outskirts to handle security affairs, the radios said. He did not specify how many guerrillas would be left in each camp.

But getting mail out of Midland then became the next problem. The postal hub at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport placed an embargo on mail heading for that destination, said Williams.

He explained the ice storm in that area kept postal employees at home while the mail began stacking up, awaiting distribution.

To keep the mail moving, Williams said Midland had shipped its mail Thursday to Denver, another postal hub.

But the two slow days here "really put a damper on our Christmas. We pride ourselves on trying to get out the mail," Williams said. "But the weather is something we had no control over.

"I have an idea we'll be swamped Friday and Saturday. We're going to do everything we can to get out the mail."

To help on last-minute packages, the Central Post Office will have a window open Saturday for persons who have received pink slips. Packages are filed by number, not name, and the slips are required to pick up a box, he said.

Sorting mail takes postal carriers about two hours each morning before they begin their routes. Now, said Williams, it probably will take 3-3½ hours, putting carriers almost two hours behind on their routes.

"The carriers will be running late Saturday, unless the weather holds us in again," said Williams. "I'm afraid we won't get stuff in time to be delivered by Saturday."

The blue-suited postal carriers and red-suited Santa might be racing Saturday to see who goes first: letters and small packages dropped in the mail slot or gifts down the chimney.

Santa answering seasonal call

Many come more than once, just to make sure Santa has their order right. "One mother had to bring her little boy all the way back from the other side of town because he had a fit because he forgot to tell Santa one little thing," the red-clad Claus chuckled.

Standing beside the camera, mothers do little dances and make funny noises and faces in an attempt to make their little darlings smile. Others are beaming lookers-on, convinced their child is the cutest Santa has ever encountered.

Pat McNary (he seemed reluctant to admit he was anything other than the genuine Santa) is a 20-year-old student at Midland College. But for the past couple of years he has traded in car for reindeer, textbooks for coloring books and bluejeans for a red velevet suit trimmed with white fur.

For six hours a day he coaxes the hesitant, comforts the frightened, waves at passers-by, listens to lisped requests for Cabbage Patch dolls and oozes Christmas spirit.

But his desire to spread good cheer doesn't end when he takes off his suit and beard. McNary is a nursing student who feels his seasonal job adds to the skills he'll need in his profession.

"I really enjoy this. Being Santa Claus, I get to see kids through another set of eyes basically. It's kinda like looking through a two-way mirror. I can see their reactions and what makes them nervous or scared and figure out how not to frighten them. I can really get to know what they're like."

Like any true Santa, he said he wants world peace for Christmas.

Hope entertains Marines in Beirut

ABOARD THE USS GUAM (AP) — "If you think you guys are fighting over here," Bob Hope told an audience of U.S. Marines just arrived from Beirut airport, "you should see them battling for Cabbage Patch dolls back home."

Hope, giving his first Christmas show to U.S. troops overseas since Vietnam, delighted the audience aboard this Navy ship with a patter of jibes aimed at President Reagan, Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, former Yankees baseball manager Billy Martin and the cease-fire in Lebanon.

The lights of Beirut could be seen just a few miles off the flight deck of this amphibious assault ship as the 80-year-old entertainer sprayed the hooting, cheering Marines and sailors with a rapid fire opening monologue.

Hope arrived aboard the Guam only hours before the Thursday night show and made a surprise visit to the sick bay. He was to hopscotch to the battleship USS New Jersey and the carriers USS Independence and USS John F. Kennedy for a series of shows.

During the day, a large segment of the audience was shuttled by helicopter aboard the Guam from duty at Beirut airport, where they frequently have been the target of artillery shelling.

Hope evoked a torrent of howls and whistles with the line: "Beirut — that's an Arabic word meaning 'Let's get the hell out of here.' "

Then he gave his definition of "semper fidelis," the Marine Corps motto: "That means Mr. T is a sissy."

Singers Ann Jillian and Cathy Lee Crosby wept at the standing ovation the Hope troupe received from the crew of a ship that has been at sea for 65 days and, after leaving its home port of Norfolk, Va., took part in the Grenada invasion.

Some in the crew-cut audience were brushing their eyes, too, when Miss Jillian led everyone in the singing of "Silent Night," which has closed every Christmas show of Hope's since 1943.

Plenty of hunger seen on Los Angeles' Skid Row

The state Department of Education, which administers free cheese distribution, puts the number of hungry in the county at 1.3 million, more than twice the number receiving food stamps.

Capt. Rudy Hedgren of the Salvation Army said most of his agency's 30-odd food distribution centers exhausted their 1983 allocation of food and money last month.

"We try not to turn andbody away," Hedgren said. "If we don't have it, we send them to someone else where we think they might be in better shape."

Much of the added pressure on soup kitches probably can be attributed to steadily increasing immigration from Mexico and Central America and new laws affecting immigrants' eligibility for government food aid.

Recent estimates place the number of refugees from El Salvador alone in Los Angeles at about 200,000. Illegal Mexicans are believed to number about 500,000, with 75,000 Guatemalans and 25,000 Nicaraguans also here illegally, according to government estimates.

Shultz said in the past, illegal immigrants could get food stamps while their status was being determined by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

A new law, however, requires would-be recipients of food stamps to show proof of citizenship or other legal status before the stamps can be given. And agencies must turn over to the INS the names of aliens whose food stamp applications are turned down, Shultz said.

"When word of that gets around, the illegals aren't even going to be applying for food stamps," Shultz said.

Willie Jordan said three-quarters of the rise in demand at the American Soul Clinic Mission has come from Hispanic familes.

"These are the snowbirds," said Mrs. Jordan, whose husband, the Rev. Fred Jordan, is pastor fo the mission.

"People don't want to freeze to death somewhere," Mrs. Jordan said. 'We have a lot of people who follow the crops. In the winter months, all the other farming areas in the country are shut down. If you have to live out the season without working, you'd rather live it out in reasonably comfortable weather than in the snow."

Business is booming at the 35-year-old mission, whose location near Greyhound and Trailways bus stations offers a good vantage point for immigrants to the area.

"We're serving 1,000 meals a day, up about 30 percent from last winter at this time," said Mrs. Jordan. "The biggest increase is of familes and young men. Our Skid Row population stays pretty much the same."

Mrs. Jordan was asked if people are just more gredy now, less willing to pay for their food.

"Anyone who is willing to humiliate themselves, to come to Skid Row with its filth and all and stand in line to wait for food, we don't ask for any qualifications, we figure they're hungry," Mrs. Jordan said.

"It's humiliation to have to stand and ask for something."

Chronic hunger can damage health

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst Feature Service

What happens biologically to the profoundly starved is as obvious as their hunger-bloated bellies, skeletal bodies and vacant stares.

Growth stops, fat disappears, muscles waste, the liver enlarges. With the loss of vital minerals and vitamins, there is metabolic chaos. Nature struggles to preserve the brain and the body's protein reserves, consuming all the stored fat and using what fuel there is only on the most critical tissue repair processes. Weakness, mental confusion and kidney failure follow, and in the end, irreversible damage, coma and death.

But what about those who are not starving to death but who are undernourished or semistarved, those who over long periods of time can't get quite enough to eat, or enough of the right foods?

What does hunger do to them?

After decades of experiments and studies with animals and human subjects, scientists have accumulated a large amount of evidence that even a moderate degree of calorie restriction — if it lasts long enough — can have serious, effects on physical and mental health.

The evidence, says Dr. Artemis P. Simopoulos, chairman of the Nutrition Coordinating Committee of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda and a former White House consultant on nutrition, leaves no room for doubt about the consequences.

Moreover, she adds, because malnutrition compromises the body's ability to fight infections, poisons and other assaults, incomplete diets may mean permanent damage to health.

And while outright starvation is rarely seen in the United States, warns Columbia University nutrition expert Myron Winick, experts are beginning to see significantly more cases of inadequate nutrition.

At every critical stage in the life cycle — fetal, adolscent, reproductive and elderly — the impact of hunger and malnutrition has been forcefully documented.

Babies can suffer impaired physical and mental development. The underfed and malnourished teenager is vulnerable to stunted growth or bone deformities, tooth and gum disease. Adults are more susceptible than usual to heart disease, some forms of cancer, anemia and certain disorders of the immune system.

For millions of older Americans, brittle bones, diabetes, infections, high blood pressure and digestive diseases are rooted in months or years of skimpy diets. Worse, said Dr. Robert Butler, director of the National Institute on Aging, symptoms of senility can result from malnutrition and, unless treated in time, often cause the permanent disability that requires long-term care.

There is evidence, though, that catch-up programs can restore health or at least prevent further deterioration in many cases.

At the University of Texas at Austin, scientists gave 16 retarded children a supplement of eight minerals and 11 vitamins and found the IQs improved an average 10 to 15 points.

Three of the four children with Downs syndrome gained 10 to 25 points and showed physical changes toward normal.

A Canadian study found years ago that nutritional support of pregnant women — even those malnourished before conception — contributed to healthier children. The evidence was so convincing it formed the basis of the women and infant children (WIC) program in the United States to supplement the diets of pregnant women.

In a study in Mexico, Dr. Winick found that nutritional supplements given within the first six months of life to children with acute, severe malnutrition produced normal head sizes, and, presumably, brain growth.

Providing older people about to undergo surgery nutritional supplements and good diets for several weeks before hospitalization has been shown to reduce post-operative infections and other complications.

Effects of war tell much about hunger

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst Feature Service

Some of the best information we have today about the biological effects of hunger and long-term protein/calorie restriction comes from the worst of human experiences — war.

During World War I, for example, the British naval blockade of the North Sea left Denmark without access to imported meats on which it depended for much of its diet.

To avoid starvation, three million Danes switched to what they considered an unsatisfying low-protein diet made up almost entirely of potatoes, cereals, green vegetables and a few dairy products.

Although people often felt hungry and protein starved, their bodies did just fine. The death rate in Copenhagen dropped 34 percent below pre-War levels. The wartime lack of alcohol and tobacco had something to do with the statistics. But most nutritionists felt this inadvertent experiment proved that animal protein and a full stomach were not needed to prevent starvation. In fact, fat-deprived population did their hearts and arteries a favor.

The lesson was reinforced during World War II when Norwegians went with little meat for five years. Again, the population relied on potatoes, cereals, vegetables and some fish. Deaths from cardiovascular diseases fell dramatically.

One of the most tragic legacies of the Nazi-imposed Warsaw ghetto in Poland has ironically become one of the most useful to scientists.

Jewish doctors, starved along with the rest of the ghetto's thousands of victims, studied and recorded every detail of what they called long-term hunger disease.

Dr. Myron Winick of Columbia University has published a summary of the doctors' cold, clinical report of humans suffering through the three stages of hunger disease:

During the first stage, the body uses up its fat and carbohydrate reserves for energy. In addition, muscle tissue is also broken down to supply needed fuel. This stage can last from a few days to many weeks, depending on how much fat tissue the person has to begin with.

The next stage lasts from two to three months in complete starvation to many years of minimal semi-starvation. It involves a series of changes in the overall metabolism of the body which are all aimed at using available energy in the most efficient manner possible.

Thus the basal (usual) metabolic rate, or the of energy expended at rest, drops.

Kennedy calls for new policies on hunger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that "we do not need another study to know there are hungry people in America," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is pressing a $2.5 billion proposal to reverse what he called the "inhumane...indecent" hunger policies of the Reagan administration.

Kennedy, D-Mass., detailed the 16-point program in a 177-page report released Thursday offering what he called "clear, undeniable and authoritative evidence of widespread and increasing hunger in America."

While the cost might seem high, Kennedy said, it still would amount to only 5 percent of the budget increase being sought by the Defense Department.

"Presumably, that increase is supposed to advance the national defense," Kennedy said. "But surely, the defense of this nation includes the health of our families as much as the size of our bombs; it means freedom from hunger for our own citizens at least as much as military assistance in Central America."

He also said the difference between the two budget items reflects what he called "a rather extraordinary attitude" by the administration "that we can solve all our problems overseas by spending money and solve all our problems here by cutting back."

Kennedy's proposal came on the same day Agriculture Secretary John Block, who oversees the nation's primary hunger-relief programs, was suggesting his department has not done a good enough job at making the public aware of the administration's concern for the poor and the hungry.

"I'll have to say I don't think we've done a very good job in achieving that public understanding," Block said at a news conference called to review his department's 1983 performance. "I haven't given up, but we're not there yet."

Block said the public perception comes despite $19 billion in spending over the past year for food assistance. That includes nearly $13 billion for food stamps, the largest hunger program; more than $4 billion for maternal and child nutrition; and almost $1.6 billion for giveaways of surplus commodities like cheese.

Using charts to brief reporters on his five-city hunger tour is Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., during a Thursday news conference on Capitol Hill.

Block claimed that is "a big record, not just a small record." He added: "I'm not saying it's enough. Maybe it is, maybe it isn't."

He declined to say whether he had evidence of widespread hunger in the United States. "I'm looking forward to the report of the hunger task force," he said. "I have confidence in them and the effort they are making."

Kennedy's report was prepared for the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, where he serves as the senior Democrat. It was based on visits he made in November to San Francisco, Minneapolis, Detroit, Pittsburgh and eastern Kentucky — where he said he found hungry people.

Some of them should have qualified for assistance programs, but did not because of outdated qualification standards, he said. Others received government assistance but were hungry nonetheless because of miserly benefit levels amounting to only 46 cents per meal for the average food stamp recipient, Kennedy said.

Kennedy sent a copy of the report to presidential counselor Edwin Meese, who said recently that there was no authoritative evidence of hunger in America and that many people going to soup kitchens do so because it is easier than paying for the food.

"I wish that you could have been there with me," Kennedy told Meese in an accompanying letter. "I wish that you could have seen the anguished faces and heard the awful stories of the many people who have somehow fallen through the 'safety net'."

ACT to go to court for children's TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Action For Children's Television is promising a court fight to overturn a government decision against requiring broadcasters to air a minimum number of weekday TV shows for children.

"We are going to court," Peggy Charren, president and founder of the child advocacy group said Thursday after the Federal Communications Commission announced its decision.

"We're going to appeal this decision, which we think is another example of the Reagan administration taking from the poor to feed the rich," said Ms. Charren, whose group pushed for the commission's rulemaking proceeding on children's programming that was begun in 1979 by former Chairman Charles D. Ferris, a Democrat.

"We think the commission has given a great big Christmas present to American broadcasters and that they're leaving a piece of coal in the stocking of every child in America," Ms. Charren said.

The decision was not unexpected. Mark S. Fowler, a Republican who succeeded Ferris as FCC chairman, has expressed the fear that a quota for children's programs might violate the First Amendment.

On Thursday, Fowler said a programming quota would require the FCC to determine what constituted a children's show and encourage broadcasters to sacrifice quality to meet numerical goals.

The FCC also voted 4-1 to loosen its 1974 requirement that TV broadcasters make a "meaningful effort" to air weekday programs geared to children of specific age groups.

The changes will also allow broadcasters to provide children's programs according to the "market situation" of their locality.

"I guess I would call it a raped 1974 Policy Statement," said Commissioner Henry M. Rivera, who cast the lone dissenting vote.

"This is a sad day for children in this country. The report and order adopted today writes, I think, the epitaph of the FCC's involvement in children's television," Rivera added.

Fowler said the growth of cable TV, public broadcasting and the number of independent stations meant there was no shortage of children's shows.

But Rivera disagreed.

"Children are not effective players in the commercial television marketplace and until commercial TV stations no longer form the backbone of our television system, the FCC must continue to rely primarily on these licensees to meet the special programming needs of children."

With only two of 176 deals left to play, Italy led the United States by 8 International Match Points in the final of the 1983 World Team Championships. There seemed to be no place where the United States could gain points, but bridge is a strange game.

Italy's great pair of the 1970s, Giorgio Belladonna and Benito Garozzo, were playing North-South for Italy. It had been a long, grueling tournament, and the great Belladonna, now 60, had been showing signs of weariness. He had gone down in two contracts which, only a few years ago, he would have brought home without batting an eye.

On this deal, Garozzo made a light opening bid of one spade with the South hand, and Belladonna knew that they were in the slam zone. His two no trump jump agreed spades. He intended his four no trump bid to be a general slam try but, according to Garozzo, in this sequence it was Blackwood, and he duly showed his ace. However, Belladonna thought Garozzo was cue-bidding first-round diamond control, so he bid the slam.

West led the queen of clubs. East won the ace and shifted to a heart, but that only delayed the inevitable. There was no place for declarer to put his losing diamond, and he had to concede a trick to the ace of that suit for down one.

In the other room, the U.S. North-South pair played in five spades after using Blackwood to learn that they were missing two aces. So a deficit of 8 IMPs was turned into a victory margin of 5 IMPs, and the Bermuda Bowl, symbol of world bridge supremacy, was on the way back to the United States.

Yes, Santa lives!

Eighty-six years ago, a little 8-year-old girl named Virginia O'Hanlon wrote a letter to the New York Sun questioning the validity of claims by her friends that Santa Claus does not exist.

The reply in the form of an editorial written by Francis P. Church, published Sept. 21, 1897, became a classic of editorial writing.

Today, in celebration of the Christmas season, we reprint the letter and the editorial for the enjoyment of our readers. We believe you'll find Mr. Church's reply as illuminating today as it was 86 years ago.

"Dear Editor:
"I am 8 years old.
"Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says 'If you see it in the Sun it's so.' Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O'Hanlon
115 West 95th Street
New York City"

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exists, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith, then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view — and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

Have safe Christmas

Today many Midlanders will join thousands of other Texans on the state's highways, traveling to holiday destinations where they plan to gather with family and friends for fun and merriment.

Each year, some of those families are grieved because of traffic accidents that kill or maim their loved ones. The holiday season tragically becomes something they'll remember not for joy and fellowship but for sadness.

Please drive carefully this year. Don't speed and don't drink, but do take frequent rest breaks and be certain to wear your safety belts.

Another View:
Iranian atrocity

One of the world's lesser-known, but most relentless, persecution campaigns is being waged by Iran's so-called "government of God" against the Bahai faith. The atrocity deserves condemnation by the international community.

Last Aug. 29, for instance, the Iranian government decreed that all teaching and organized religious activities of the Bahais would be considered "criminal acts." The decree was part of a pattern of persecution that has prevailed throughout the history of the revolutionary regime. In the last four years, 150 members of the Bahai faith have been executed, hundreds more have disappeared and thousands have been driven from their homes.

The revolutionary constitution specifically recognizes the Christian, Jewish and Zoroastrian religions, the latter being the traditional creed of ancient Persia. But, because the government is strongly and specifically Islamic, members of the other religions have been persecuted.

The Bahais are in an even worse position. Christianity, Judaism and Zoroastrianism are regarded, at least formally, as revealed religions, but Bahai is considered to be a heresy of Islam, according to one State Department specialist.

Moreover, many Bahais held prominent positions in the commerce of Iran during the reign of the shah. As such, they came to be resented, much as Jews in Central Europe and Chinese in Southeast Asia were resented.

For these and other reasons, the Bahais are under the gun. There are about 300,000 of them in Iran (out of a population of about 40 million), and they are virtually defenseless against persecution based on their religious beliefs.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
Viet group's terror growing

WASHINGTON — Former South Vietnamese soldiers, trained for combat by the U.S. Army, provide the enforcement muscle for a violent underworld organization that is terrorizing Vietnamese communities in this country. Law enforcement authorities refer to this criminal force simply as "The Association."

Jack Anderson

Gangs of thugs with such colorful names as "The Frogmen," "The Saigon Cowboys" and "The Pink Knights" extort money from hard-working, law-abiding Vietnamese refugees through terror and intimidation. So far, their illicit activities have been confined mainly to the refugee communities in urban areas, according to police reports.

But authorities told my associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson that the armed gangs are growing more brazen. Many of the U.S.-trained enforcers are experts in military weaponry; the Frogmen, for example, are former South Vietnamese marines and underwater demolition specialists.

The gangs are believed to be directed by former South Vietnamese generals. The Association's "boss of all bosses" is identified in an October 1979 organized-crime task force report as Nguyen Cao Ky, the former premier and air force chief of South Vietnam.

These high-ranking South Vietnamese officers were airlifted to the United States when their country was overrun by the communists in 1975.

Now these American-hatched chickens are coming home to roost. Authorities were concerned enough about The Association's operations in the refugee communities, but they now fear that the Vietnamese gangs are going to expand their depredations beyond the closely-knit exile settlements.

How dangerous are the gangs? The confidential task force report states: "Ky's enforcement groups do not make idle threats. Many in the Vietnamese community pay dues, which help run the organization. Ky rules the Vietnamese community through force and fear; thus, the Vietnamese people fear him and will not come forward to testify."

Police have developed contacts among the refugees, and some of the tips they get are alarming. Following a recent robbery in California in which sophisticated weapons were used, for example, police say they were warned by informants that the Vietnamese gangs are "going to take on the cops."

Some Vietnamese refugees, mostly the older ones, contribute to The Association willingly in the belief that it is planning an eventual military liberation of their homeland from the communists. But those who aren't anxious to contribute their hard-earned money soon get the message.

"These funds are collected through intimidation by appealing to the refugees that if they don't give money to this group which is trying to free the country, then these people must themselves be communists and will be dealt with accordingly," one internal police report compiled this past summer explains, adding: "Allegedly, this has been a very successful method of raising money."

Occasionally, an object lesson is needed. A Vietnamese communist sympathizer was assassinated two years ago in San Francisco, and police are convinced it was The Association's work.

Several sources said they have been told of small armies of Vietnamese being trained in this country and in the Philippines, presumably waiting to be unleashed against the communists. But officials suspect these rumors are fantasies spread by The Association to give legitimacy to its fund-raising operations.

The Vietnamese underworld organization is believed to have ties to anti-Castro Cuban exile groups, including one known as "Alpha 66." The task force report says the Cuban exiles provide weapons in return for jungle warfare training by the former South Vietnamese soldiers.

Footnote: Ky refused comment, but a family member said there was "no truth" to the charges that he is involved with a criminal organization.

FEUD OF THE WEEK: The long-standing feud between Federal Trade Commission Chairman James C. Miller III and his predecessor, Commissioner Michael Pertschuk, erupted again the other day. In a private letter to Rep. Douglas Barnard, D-Ga., Pertschuk listed "nine incomplete or misleading statements" Miller made in testimony before the congressman.

A commission spokesman characterized Pertschuk's charges as "nit-picking" and in some instances "just plain wrong." Essentially, the statements that aroused Pertschuk's pique were Miller's attempts to make the commission's record look better under his leadership than under Pertschuk's. For example:

— Miller said the FTC's 16 enforcement actions against misleading advertisements in 1983 constitute "a record that in both quality and quantity exceeds" that of past commissions. Pertschuk retorted that in 1981, his last year as chairman, 40 ad enforcement actions were brought.

INSIDE REPORT:
Reagan finds German ally

MUNICH, West Germany — A powerful pro-American political force in the person of Franz-Josef Strauss is moving discreetly for more influence in the coalition government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl, partly because of his anger at Kohl's refusal to support President Reagan on the Grenada invasion.

Rowland Evans

Strauss heads the virile Christian Social Union (CSU), long allied with Kohl's national Christian Democratic Union (CDU). He rejected Kohl's offer to become defense minister last March 21. Instead, the right-wing leader, who is simplistically hated by liberals as an implacable anti-communist, chose to try to exercise influence on Kohl from his post here as minister-president of Bavaria.

Robert Novak

But today, worried about a drift in Kohl's government and national divisiveness over deployment of the Pershing missiles, Strauss prepares to make his move. He has scheduled private meetings next week with Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Kohl's coalition partner as head of the Free Democratic Party (FDP).

Whether he finally ends up in the Cabinet, where he would quickly become the dominating force, or extracts new confessions from Kohl giving him major influence over national security policy, Strauss' move promises President Reagan stronger, much-needed support from Western Europe. Strauss advocates a dynamic Western "global policy" under U.S. leadership that widens the strategic scope of the industrial democracies in resisting Soviet expansion far beyond the sphere of NATO.

Next week's crucial conversations follow an unsuccessful attempt by Strauss on Nov. 29 to get a full explanation from Kohl of the real reason the West German government took its formal position against U.S. occupation of Grenada. In a talk with us here, Strauss declined to reveal details of Kohl's response.

Other politicians, however, claimed Kohl acknowledged that Genscher "put the screws" on him to make a public criticism of Reagan. Genscher needed to appease liberals in his own small party, even though Kohl's Cabinet had specifically agreed there should be no criticism.

Strauss, whose support for the NATO alliance and its American leadership is rock-hard, was outraged. When Strauss was told that parallel criticism from Great Britain and France was also a factor in Kohl's decision, Strauss told intimates that the Federal Republic of Germany "does not need an umbrella from London and Paris."

The corruption scandal that has enveloped Economic Affairs Minister Otto von Lambsdorff, soon to be charged with bribery, could put a trump card in Strauss' hand. Lambsdorff is a member of Genscher's FDP, but when he resigns from the Cabinet, the CSU could demand the seat for Strauss. The Bavarian party elected far more members to the Bundestag (Parliament) in the last election than the FDP, giving it a technical right to ask for at least one more Cabinet seat. Without Strauss' party, Kohl would not be able to govern.

Strauss is acknowledged to be fully competent for economic affairs minister. But his real concern is security for the democracies against worldwide Soviet expansion coupled with his conviction that Bonn must encourage economic development in Eastern Europe, particularly East Germany. It was Strauss, at considerable risk of attack from his own conservative colleagues, who took the lead in arranging last summer's billion-dollar commercial loan to East Germany.

Strauss is convinced that the Soviets cannot risk cutting Bonn's help to East Germany because the economic problems, rampant within Moscow's European empire, are so dangerous to the Kremlin. He believes that the "long-term chances of a political change in the communist-ruled parts of Europe" depend not on "war or revolution" but on evolution encouraged by Western help, continuously demonstrating "the superiority of our free economic and social order."

How much Strauss may be able to press these bold ideas on his own government is still not clear, but his moving to do so should encourage Washington.

It should particularly encourage Reagan, who probably is not even aware that the strongest, if not the only, defense by any European for the Grenada affair came when Strauss said: "One cannot demand from Ronald Reagan that he protect the vital interests of the free world and then at every opportunity call him a villain."

Faithful to that creed, not even over Lebanon, where Strauss is known to fear that Reagan may heedlessly be turning the entire Islamic world against the U.S., will he publicly rebuke Washington.

CHARLEY REESE
Crises may catch U.S. off guard

The United States generally fails to anticipate crises. For one thing, we have no grand strategy. For another, our intelligence agencies leave much to be desired.

We'd be better off if the CIA were as "bad" as its leftist critics claim. Instead, the CIA is easily the most benign and naive intelligence agency in the world.

Nevertheless, so you won't be surprised even if your government is, I will tell you about some of the crises to come.

Charley Reese

Eventually, the monarchies on and near the Persian Gulf will be overthrown. That includes King Hussein of Jordan. The sheiks and kings with whom American business has such a cozy relationship will flee to their Swiss bank accounts in thier private jets (the lucky ones, anyway). All of that oil and all of those advanced American weapons we've sold them will end up in the hands of either a leftist military dictator or a Moslem fundamentalist fanatic.

It is inevitable. The monarchies are anachronisms and they know it. Almost everybody knows it except the CIA, State Department and Pentagon which are still planning to protect the Persian Gulf states from an outsider threat. the threat is internal. Satellite cameras, AWACs and Rapid Deployment Forces will be useless. What we need is a very strong intelligence force with men in place and that we do not have.

Another coming crisis is the death of the Ayatollah Khomeini. Even a mean devil like him has to die and when he boards the late train for the Moslem Paradise, the Iranian civil war will re-erupt. Whether Iran then goes East or West depends on who's better prepared to take advantage of the situation — the Soviets or the United States.

Pakistan, using Libyan money, will dvelop an "Islamic atomic bomb." This will make India and Israel extremely nervous and neither of those countries is as hesitant as we are to take action against threats. That crisis will be a doozy.

Vietnam will eventually move against Thailand. Vietnamese forces are already massing to finish off Cambodia guerrillas as soon as the terrain dries out from the monsoons. It's only a matter of time before they make trouble for the Thais.

North Korea will invade South Korea. The Korean peninsula cannot remain divided indefinitely and tensions between the two divisions are increasing, not decreasing.

Much of Africa, beset by drought and unbelievable corruption and mismanagement, is sinking fast into catastrophic poverty. This will set off a brush fire of revolutions.

One or more of the major debtor nations — Brazil, Mexico and Argentina — will default on their foreign debt. This, too, is inevitable, although the form the default may take could vary.

Mexico is very likely to have a revolution, probably leftist. The ruling elite down there have just about run their course and made a mess of it. Unemployment and inflation are approaching intolerable levels.

These are just a few of the crises you can look forward to. The list is by no means definitive. In fact, it includes only the more obvious. Heaven only knows what surprises are in store for us.

The point is that there will be no rest for the weary or the nervous in the remainder of this decade. On the contrary, it will be downright hairy.

My advice is to cultivate some spiritual philosophy that will enable you to view unsettling events, turmoil, and danger with relative peiac of mind. I definitely recommend discarding materialism as people who put great stock in comfort are likely to be subjected at best to extreme anxiety.

El Paso officer's acquittal 'best Christmas present I ever had'

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso sheriff's Capt. Willie Hill says a jury's decision to acquit him of charges of tampering with evidence was the "best Christmas present I ever had."

"I'm too emotional to speak right now. My mind's totally blank," Hill said Thursday after a six-man, six-woman jury found him innocent. "Maybe later I can talk. Right now, it's just the best thing ever."

Hill, an 11½-year veteran of the sheriff's department, was indicted in October on charges of official misconduct and tampering with evidence after two deputies said he ordered they destroy a suspicious white powdery substance they found in County Judge Pat O'Rourke's car.

State District Judge Sam Callan dismissed the official misconduct charge Wednesday.

Hill had admitted on the witness stand that he did order the substance be destroyed but contended he did so because he thought it was a "setup."

The setup was aimed at one of the two deputies who discovered the substance last February and who was a key witness in a federal grand jury investigation into alleged inmate beatings at the El Paso County Jail in 1981, Hill said.

Deputy Dwight Jefferson testified against jailers, three of whom were indicted last week on charges of beating inmates, and "was very unpopular," Hill said.

"I had calls telling me they were going to kill a soul brother," Hill said. Both Hill and Jefferson are black.

Jefferson and Deputy Jim Boykin have said they found the unknown substance, which they believed to be heroin, inside a condom while they were installing a two-way radio in O'Rourke's car.

The two men, who were granted immunity from prosecution for testimony against Hill, said that when they told Hill of the discovery he ordered it destroyed.

Pilots' group questions airline's stock transactions

HOUSTON (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association is questioning stock transactions by top officials of Continental Airlines, but spokesmen for the reorganized carrier are branding the questions "silly."

Continental Executive Vice President Philip Bakes, meanwhile, is blaming the striking union for the breakdown in negotiations this week. According to Bakes, the union refused to withdraw a mandate that new pilots hired at Continental since the strike Oct. 1 be fired and pilots who have remained in the cockpits be demoted.

The exchanges are the latest salvos in the bitter dispute between the airline, which filed for protection under federal bankruptcy laws, and the pilots union, which struck rather than accept salary cuts and increases in working hours.

At news conferences Thursday in Houston, Washington, Denver and Los Angeles, ALPA raised questions about large sales of Continental stock by airline executives months before it filed for reorganization Sept. 24. ALPA offered a $5,000 reward for information on those sales.

"These transactions have been on the books for months," Bakes said in Houston. "There was absolutely nothing improper done," added Clark Onstad, a Continental vice president who responded to questions in Washington.

Questions about stock trading by company executives were raised by Susan Kellock of the Kamber Group, a consulting firm hired by the pilots to help organize their campaign against Continental.

She declined to characterize the stock sales as illegal insider trading, but said they do raise questions which should be explained in public.

Continental officials said the sale of 47,000 shares of stock in late 1982 by company chairman Frank Lorenzo were made to raise cash for a personal debt. Bakes said if Lorenzo was intent on making money in the deal, he would have held the stock for another two months and could have doubled his money.

"They're grasping for straws," he said of the ALPA questions. "This has absolutely no bearing on what's going on at Continental. It's silly, absolutely silly."

ALPA officials also accused the airline of refusing to engage in meaningful bargaining, but Bakes said the talks, which broke off Wednesday in Los Angeles, "appeared close on wages and work rules.

Border traffic up over last year

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Christmas traffic across the Rio Grande has far surpassed last year and consular officials say this is good news for Texas retailers and a positive sign that Mexico is on the road to economic recovery.

Two to three times more Mexicans have applied for visas to enter the United States this December than during December 1982, according to Chris Kauth, U.S. vice consul in Matamoros.

Most of the applicants are people who want to Christmas shop in the states rather than in their hometowns of Tampico and other cities in the State of Tamaulipas.

Kauth said the number of visas issued has swelled from an average of 43 per day to 135 per day during December. The rejection rate is low, he said, because most of the visa applicants exhibit the necessary degree of affluence.

Kauth estimated that about 1,800 visas will be issued during this holiday season compared to 806 issued last year. But, he said, the number is still well below the 4,200 visas issued in 1981 prior to the peso devaluations.

"It is certainly clear from the number of applicants that the Mexican economy has picked up from a year ago," Kauth said. "We are seeing people applying who used to make regular Christmas trips to the (Rio Grande) Valley, but did not do so last year because of economic hard times.

Lee press drops Bulldogs, 52-42

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sport Writer

District 4-5A defending champion Midland Lee used an effective full court press defense to set the pace for a 52-42 girl's basketball victory over Midland High Thursday night at Lee Gym.

The game was tied three times in the first quarter before Midland High took the advantage with 3:13 left to play when OJ Johnson capped a three-point play with her free throw after an inside bucket to take a 9-6 lead. Lee fought back with Stacy Harmon and Shelly Armstrong buckets to regain the lead at 10-9, but gave up two shots in the final 20 seconds.

Johnson took teammate Charlotte Hines' missed free throw and put it up for two and Denise Lanz stole the ball from Lee and went in for a layup and a 13-10 lead at the buzzer.

Terez Robinson hit a free throw to start the second quarter to increase the margin to 14-10 before the roof caved in on the Bulldogs.

Lee's Felicia Farias, averaging 19.6 points going into the game, hit an eight footer and a free throw to cut the margin to one and then took an assist off a steal by Stacy Harmon for another two and a 15-14 lead.

The Rebels never looked back, running off to a 22-14 lead before Midland High's Deidra Knapp hit a free throw with 1:50 left in the quarter. Lee outscored MHS 14-4 in the frame and it proved to be the difference of the game.

"Lee did a good job," said MHS coach Jane Young. "Their press got to us. We turned the ball over too many times and you can't win a ball game like that."

The press was responsible for 20 Bulldog turnovers in the first half, 29 for the game while Lee gave up a total of 21. What could have hurt the Rebels was the number of fouls the defensive alignment produced, 21 to Midland's 19, with the real damage falling on starters Harmon and Farias.

The two spent most of the first half on the bench with three personals. Harmon was able to go the rest of the way without picking up any more, but Farias was whistled early in both the third and fourth quarters to pick up her final two for an early sit down.

The loss of playing time produced Farias' only single digit scoring game of the season, eight points, while Harmon recovered to lead both teams with 14 points, her second best effort of the year. It also gave the two-year letterman a 10.1 average on the year, her highest to date.

"I think we got started a little slow," said Harmon. "All of us were a little nervous when we started but once we got going that's all it took. I think everyone played an excellent game tonight considering it was a hard fought game."

Harmon's best night of the year came in a pre-district victory over San Angelo when she scored 21 points.

WITH FARIAS and Harmon in foul trouble most of the night, Lee coach Shirley Stephenson sent in a lot of substitutes to fill the void. Though they didn't respond with a high-scoring effort, they kept Midland High from racking up the points.

"There are other kids on this team who can come through for us," said Stephenson. "They can pick up the slack. It's nice to have all the players out there. When we went to the Amarillo Tournament, the kids learned they could play without somebody."

In that particular tournament, the Rebels were without both Farias and Harmon. Farias stayed home to do some college testing and Harmon went down with an injury in the opening game against Lubbock Coronado.

"I'm just glad this one's over," said Stephenson. "We're just always glad when we get out of a game with Midland High a winner. There's no doubt about."

PICKING UP 19 fouls didn't exactly do the Bulldogs any good either. Starter and second-leading scorer (at 12.3 per game) Orvetta Johnson was sent to the bench 22 seconds into the fourth quarter, leaving top shooter Denise Lanz (13.9) to do most of the scoring. Lanz scored six of her 12 points in the final frame.

The Bulldogs managed only a 35 percent scoring effort from the field (16-of-46) while the Rebels hit 41 percent (21-51). Midland High did slightly better from the line at 45 percent (10-22) while Lee was 38 percent (8-of-21).

"We missed a lot of shots," said Young. "We didn't shoot very well."

THE REBELS' holiday vacation will end on Thursday when they compete in the the Slaton basketball tournament. Both Lee and MHS will return to 4-5A action on Jan. 2 when the Rebels host 0-2 (4-12 overall) Odessa High and MHS takes on 1-1 (6-9) Odessa Permian on the Mojo court.

In junior varsity action Thursday, Lee overcame a 16-10 Midland High lead in the first quarter with a 12-5 burst in the third enroute to a 46-44 victory. Becky White led Lee with 12 points while Liz Pratt scored 10 for MHS.

Hatfield tabbed for Razorbacks

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — For Air Force football Coach Ken Hatfield, hired away by Arkansas to head his alma mater's football program, this Christmas weekend may be the last he spends in Colorado.

The day after Christmas he heads for Fayetteville, Ark. If all goes according to plan, Hatfield will be spending future Christmases preparing the Arkansas Razorbacks for bowl game appearances.

Standing before reporters here Thursday, an emotion-choked Hatfield, 40, a native of Helena, Ark., said, "We called you here to tell you that Sandy (his wife) and I have decided...that we're going home."

Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles announced his choice of Hatfield on Thursday, despite indicating one day earlier that no one would be offered the job until after the Jan. 2 bowl games.

Hatfield guided Air Force to a 10-2 record this year, including a 9-3 victory over Mississippi in the Independence Bowl.

He succeeds Lou Holtz, who resigned, apparently under pressure, on Sunday after seven years at Arkansas. The Razorbacks were 6-5 this year and failed to go to a bowl for the first time since Holtz arrived. His seven-year record was 60-21-2.

"This is a good step for me, and I'm tremendously excited about the opportunity," said Hatfield, who played for Broyles at Arkansas in 1962-64 as a defensive back and punt returner.

"I'm anxious to get back home. When you're a Razorback, you're a Razorback forever. It's the only other place I would have considered, and that's what I told (AFA athletic director) John Clune when I asked for permission to talk to Arkansas.

"The hardest thing about this is leaving the academy. These are people I dearly love. I've been very blessed to have been here. My only hope is that we've left the football program here a heck of a lot better than when we started, that we've built a solid foundation for others to continue to build on. I don't think you've seen the best the academy can be yet."

Hatfield was offered the job by phone Thursday.

At a news conference later in the day, Hatfield said he would begin trying to recruit players for Arkansas immediately and would go to Fayetteville, Ark., next Monday, spending his last Christmas at the Air Force Academy before heading south.

He said he would ask his assistant coaches at Air Force to make the move with him to Arkansas but hasn't talked with them yet. He also plans to talk with Arkansas' present assistant coaches before putting together his Razorback coaching staff.

Hatfield visited Fayetteville on Tuesday to discuss the vacant position with Broyles. He was one of four former Razorback players who Broyles said were under consideration; the others were Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, Texas' Fred Akers and Oklahoma State's Jimmy Johnson. Switzer and Akers later removed themselves from contention.

Formerly an assistant at Army, Tennessee and Florida, Hatfield joined the Air Force staff under Head Coach Bill Parcells in December 1977. When Parcells resigned a year later, Hatfield was elevated to head coach.

His five-year coaching record at AFA was 27-31-1, but the last two seasons his teams were 8-5 and 10-2, including two bowl victories.

Hatfield's Falcon teams have run the wishbone but he said he isn't tied to that offense. "I've worked with the veer, the dropback, the 'I' and a lot of other things," he said.

In a statement, Broyles said, "Under Ken Hatfield's leadership, the future of our football program will be all we want it to be. Arkansas fans have taken tremendous pride in Ken Hatfield's accomplishments at the Air Force Academy. This high opinion of him does not stop here. Just this week, I have been told by some of the most prominent coaches and athletic directors in the nation that he is the best young coach in the country. His achievements cannot be overestimated.

"It is ironic to me that Kenny and I have had virtually no personal contact in the 19 years since he left the University of Arkansas. However, after visting with Ken this week, it is obvious he possesses the strong qualities which have made him successful. Not only is he a warm, caring and concerned person, but he has the mental toughness which is needed for success in this demanding profession."

"The game of football is a hobby to me. Pro football is a nice stepping stone, a nice way to make a living." — Placekicker Morten Andersen of the New Orleans Saints, whose 50-yard field goal 5:30 into overtime gave his team a 20-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"Football and sports is a lousy business. It's fun and cute and good for the ego. But it's a lousy business. Teams don't make money. We enjoy it. Rams remember Dallas playoffs

By RICH ROBERTS
(c) 1983, Los Angeles Times

The game's last break for commercials had just ended as the Rams broke their huddle in Texas Stadium on a cool December day in 1979.

As Vince Ferragamo recalls it: "There were two minutes to go in the game and we were trailing, 14 to 19. We just had one of our basic patterns called where (Billy) Waddy was coming over the middle, and they changed up into a 3-4 defense, and he got free over the middle and we connected on it.

"I hit him on the run. When he caught the ball he was in full stride and went right off Preston's (Preston Dennard) pattern and went right in."

Ferragamo, the Rams' quarterback then as now, was taking a quick glance down Memory Lane as the Rams prepared to return to Irving, Texas, for Monday's NFC wildcard match with the Dallas Cowboys.

"That was one of the biggest plays we've ever had here with the Rams," he said.

The series seems to be full of big plays, but most of them have gone the other way. The Rams have gone to the National Football League playoffs in nine of the last 11 seasons. This will be the seventh time they have met the Cowboys. They have beaten them twice.

To the Rams, the Cowboys always loom as a nemesis along the route to the Super Bowl. To the Cowboys, the Rams have usually been more like an annoyance, and sometimes not even that.

Larry Brooks, who played defensive tackle in all six of the previous games and now is an assistant coach for the Rams, noted: "We haven't blown them out, have we? We either win tight ball games or they blow us away."

The Rams' two victories were by two points each: 14-12 in 1976 and 21-19 in '79, both in Texas.

The Cowboys whipped the Rams twice at the the Los Angeles Coliseum, 37-7 in '75 and 28-0 in '78 and won convincingly at home, 27-16 in '73 and 34-13 in '80.

Brooks: "We played 'em in '80? Hm."

Jack Youngblood, Brooks' best friend, who also has played them all, explained Brooks' lack of memory.

"To tell you the truth, those are the type of games you block out," Youngblood said, laughing. "You really do. Those are nightmares."

NIGHTMARES OR not, the images remain in the attic of the mind, and there is an irresistible temptation to browse among the big plays and misplays that reaped joy and broke hearts. The details may be faded like old newsprint, but they don't really matter. Nostalgia can't be computerized.

It was 10 years ago that Chuck Knox took his first Rams team to the playoffs. (Knox took the Rams to the playoffs all five years he coached the team, but he never quite got to the Super Bowl.) John Hadl was the quarterback then, and Brooks recalled what happened when he dropped back to throw his first pass of the game.

"Hadl threw a pass out to (Lawrence) McCutcheon and it was picked off and run back for a touchdown," Brooks said. "That seems like a long time ago."

Actually, linebacker Lee Roy Jordan intercepted and returned it to the three-yard line, from where Calvin Hill ran it over for a quick 7-0 lead.

Then the Rams lost a fumble on their next possession to give the Cowboys another easy touchdown.

Brooks: "As the game went along we battled back into it, and it came down to one play at about the end of the game. Defensively, we had 'em stopped and they threw a pass down the middle. I think it was (cornerback) Eddie McMillan and (safety) Steve Preece who ran into each other."

Drew Pearson caught the ball and completed an 83-yard play to put the Rams away, 27-16.

"Drew Pearson's rookie year, (and) he went 83 yards," Brooks mused. "That dropped it in the bucket for that one."

Two years later, the Rams got the Cowboys at the Coliseum in the NFC championship game.

Brooks: "They didn't even give us a chance in that one. I don't remember much of the details except there was a lot of whipping going on, and it wasn't in our favor."

AH, BUT the next year was the Year of the Ram.

"We beat them down there," Brooks said. "One play I remember was the crucial fourth-down call where (strong safety) Dave Elmendorf and (free safety Bill) Simpson hit (tight end) Billy Joe DuPree on fourth down and stopped him just short (of a first down)."

That was in the closing moments right after McCutcheon had put the Rams in front, 14-10. The next day, Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said that his films showed that DuPree had made the first down — and that McCutcheon hadn't scored.

"It was a one-yard dive," said McCutcheon, who is now a Rams scout. "Twenty-five Lead was the play. Rod Phillips was the fullback. It never crossed my mind that I wasn't over. Next thing I remember, seven or eight of the Cowboys were pulling on me and trying to pull me back over the goal line, saying I wasn't over.

"After that touchdown, there was still two minutes left in the game, and I was just wondering and hoping that it wasn't gonna turn out like some of the others we had, losing in the last few minutes."

Brooks: "I remember the two blocked punts. Jack (Youngblood) and I were talking about that the other day. We were doing a pretty good job defensively that day, and when we were ready to go on the field we heard that double thud. Who was that punter?"

A name from the past: Rusty Jackson. "Yeah," Brooks said. "Had two of 'em blocked."

Both by Charlie Waters, the Cowboys' defensive back who also played on special teams at the time.

But in the game's final seconds, when the Rams had to punt, Waters could only pursue Jackson futilely as the latter ran around and then out of the end zone for an intentional safety.

Pacers nip Denver; end road skid

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

In 28 consecutive road games dating back to last Feb. 15, the Indiana Pacers left the court as losers. So when they finally won at Denver, they had reason to celebrate.

"We got in the locker room after the game and took the monkey off our back and beat it to death," said Kevin McKenna, who scored a career-high 21 points for the Pacers in their 133-132 National Basketball Association victory over the Nuggets Thursday night. "We're really glad to get it off. It's been there so long."

While jubilation reigned in the Pacers' dressing room, Denver Coach Doug Moe was dejected.

"I guess that's rock-bottom...what could be worse?" Moe said. "We did it again in the first quarter. We didn't come out ready to play and they scored 40 points. We give the other teams so much confidence they all think they can beat us."

Elsewhere in the NBA, New Jersey edged Dallas 101-98, Chicago ripped Milwaukee 116-99, Houston trimmed Seattle 116-112 and Golden State surprised Los Angeles 109-102.

George Johnson, who scored 17 points for the Pacers, took a pass from Herb Williams for an uncontested layup with 27 seconds left to win the game for Indiana, which is now 1-13 on the road this season and 6-20 overall. The Pacers' last previous triumph away from home was a 113-110 decision at Chicago last season.

After outscoring the Nuggets 40-34 in the first period, the Pacers led most of the way although their largest margin was only eight points.

"That's such a big victory for us," Indiana Coach Jack McKinney said. "It couldn't have come at a better time. Both teams really played great basketball. I really enjoyed the game."

Moe blamed the defeat on himself for not pushing the Nuggets hard enough in practice.

"I don't want to take anything away from Indiana, because they deserve some credit," Moe said. "It's not fair to say they didn't play well. But we didn't even try on defense, and that's all I can think about."

Indiana hit at a 54-percent clip against Denver, which could only connect on 43 percent of its shots from the field. All 10 players in the Pacer lineup scored at least eight points.

Denver's Kiki Vandeweghe, the league's No. 2 scorer, scored only 13 points while playing with a pulled back muscle. Alex English, who gave the Nuggets 130-129 and 132-131 leads with short bank shots late in the game, had a game-high 34 points.

McKenna, who started in place of injured regular Clark Kellogg, led Indiana with his 21 points, while Jerry Sichting added 20 for the Pacers.

Nets 101, Mavericks 98

At East Rutherford, N.J., the Nets broke a four-game losing streak as Albert King scored 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter against Dallas in his first reserve role of the season.

King, who had 10 rebounds, lost his starting job after being mired in a slump. With New Jersey ahead by two points, he rebounded a missed shot by Rolando Blackman and hit one of two free throws after being fouled with five seconds left.

Mark Aguirre led all scorers with 35 points for the Mavericks, who have lost four in a row and eight of their last 10 after a 13-4 start.

Bulls 116, Bucks 99

Chicago got 26 points from Quintin Dailey and 20 from Mitchell Wiggins in its victory at Milwaukee.

The Bulls, who have won four games in a row, outscored the Bucks 33-23 in the third quarter to widen a six-point halftime lead to 86-70. Milwaukee got no closer than 11 points in the fourth period.

The Bucks, who still lead the Central Division despite losing five of their last six games, were led by Sidney Moncrief with 29 points.

Warriors 109, Lakers 102

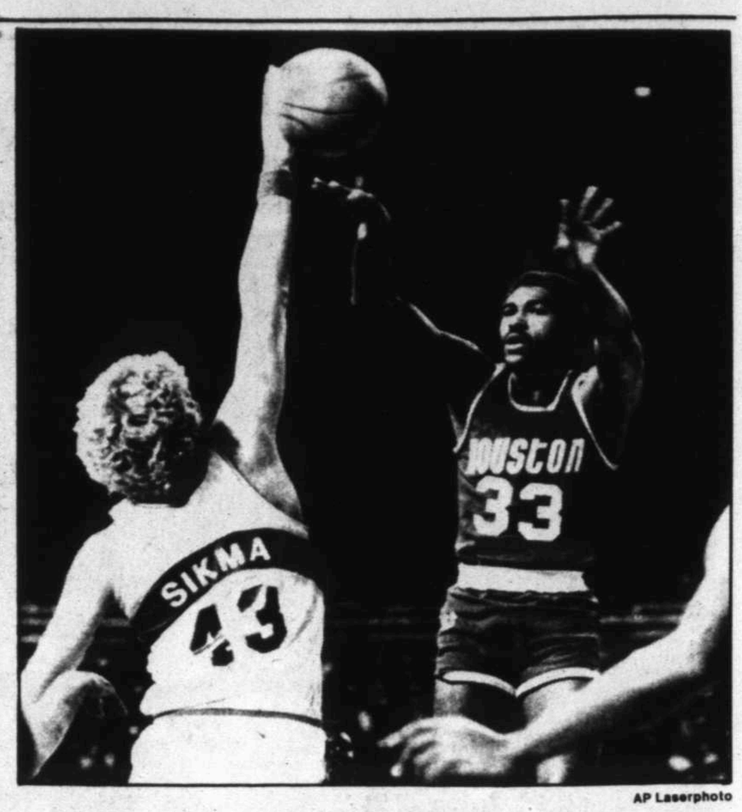

At Oakland, Purvis Short scored nine of his 28 points during Golden State's 23-2 third-period surge that lifted the Warriors over Los Angeles.

The Lakers, who lost to Golden State for the first time in seven meetings dating back to Oct. 29, 1982, led 56-54 at halftime. But the Warriors outscored Los Angeles 29-13 in the third period.

Rockets 116, Sonics 112

Lewis Lloyd scored 34 points and played all 48 minutes, while James Bailey tallied 11 of his total of 19 in the fourth period as Houston won at Seattle.

The SuperSonics, who got 26 points and 16 rebounds from Jack Sikma, led 104-103 midway through the final period before the Rockets scored six points in a row to go ahead for good.

Onsides kick helps Mounties over Kentucky

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Coach Don Nehlen believed Paul Woodside and believed in Jeff Hostetler, and the result was a 20-16 victory for West Virginia over Kentucky in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

The 18th-ranked Mountaineers trailed Kentucky 10-3 at the half Thursday night after Hostetler had thrown 10 passes with no completions and one interception.

Kentucky was to get the ball to start the second half, but Woodside, an All-American place-kicker, recovered his onside kick at the Wildcat 48.

"Coach, we can get it," Woodside told Nehlen before the kick. "So, I said, 'Let's try,' " Nehlen said. "We needed a lift, and we were kicking with the wind. It's a bowl game, so I said, 'Let's go after it.' "

After Woodside's kick, Tom Gray ran twice and then Hostetler completed his first pass. Four more runs by Gray led to Hostetler's 16-yard toss to Rich Hollins to tie the score.

"Nothing seemed to go right in the first half," Hostetler said. "But I'm proud that the team had confidence in me and the coaches stuck with me . . . After I completed the first couple of passes, I felt pretty good and knew I could move the team."

Nehlen said he "never had a game where we did not complete a pass in the first half, but I wasn't worried. Jeff is too good a quarterback, and I knew he would bring us through."

Hostetler later ran the ball 37 yards to the 2 and hit Rob Bennett on a scoring pass, and Woodside kicked his second field goal to give the 9-3 Mountaineers enough cushion to absorb Kentucky's final score, a 13-yard pass from Bill Ransdell to Joe Phillips.

Kentucky, 6-5-1 after going 0-10-1 in 1982 in Jerry Claiborne's first year as the coach, took its halftime lead on a 26-yard halfback pass from Tony Mayes to quarterback Randy Jenkins, a play that caught the Mountaineers off guard, and a 23-yard field goal by John Hutcherson.

Hutcherson had replaced the suspended Chris Caudell late in the season and had not previously attempted a collegiate field goal.

After his slow start, Hostetler completed 10 of his last 13 passes for 88 yards and was voted West Virginia's most valuable player, although Gray got 149 yards on 32 carries.

"I thought our effort was great," said Claiborne, whose Wildcats were picked to lose by 9½ points. "I can't fault the way our kids played. The only thing I fault is the score."

Young, BYU takes on Missouri

SAN DIEGO (AP) — College football's ultimate irresistable force — the Brigham Young offense — bumps up against Missouri's nationally ranked immovable object in tonight's sixth renewal of the Holiday Bowl.

Ninth-ranked Brigham Young, host of the game every year by virtue of winning the Western Athletic Conference title, has rung up some mind boggling numbers in winning 10 consecutive games after a season opening loss to 20th-ranked Baylor.

The Cougars' quarterback, All-American Steve Young, has gained more yards rushing and passing — 4,346, or 395 per game — than the entire Missouri team. He set national records with 306 pass completions and a 71.3 completion percentage.

BYU led the nation in total offense (584 yards per game) and passing (381 per outing) and was second to top-ranked Nebraska in scoring with a 44-point-per-game norm.

Even the BYU running attack, forever in the shadow of the passing game, netted 203 yards per game, only 16 less than ground-oriented Missouri.

But Young isn't expecting an easy outing against Missouri, which finished 7-4 overall and second to Nebraska in the Big Eight Conference. He mentioned seeing the Tigers' 10-0 shutout of Oklahoma earlier this year.

"Watching that game, I don't think anyone can beat them," Young said. "They're very aggressive and hard-hitting, they have speed and size up front and speed in the defensive backfield and at linebacker. We won't have an easy time.

"The big matchup, obviously, will be our offense against their defense — and that's not to take anything away from our defense and their offense," he added.

Young said he was particularly concerned with the size of Missouri's defensive front line, although that unit is outweighed 15 pounds a man by BYU's offensive line.

"They're one of the few teams we've played all year that has enough size in the defensive line and at linebacker that they don't have to bring extra people to put pressure on the quarterback," Young said. "Whereas other teams tried to bring six, seven or eight guys to put pressure on the quarterback, these guys have the size and quickness to put pressure on with five or six."

The chief headhunter for Missouri is linebacker Jay Wilson, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound senior who sees Young as the key to both team's efforts.

"If you don't contain him and he gets outside the pass rush, then you're in big trouble," Wilson said. "He'll have all kinds of time to throw or he can take off and run the ball. We've got to limit the things he can do and keep their offense below 400 yards."

If Missouri manages that, it will be a first. BYU's lowest offensive total this year was 477 yards in a 24-6 victory over Colorado State.

Henry leads Lee romp

ANDREWS — Midland Lee postman Alvin Henry was nearly unstoppable Thursday night as he canned 11-of-15 field goals and was perfect from the line in six attempts for a season-high 28 points as the Rebels defeated Andrews, 64-53, here.

"After this win, the lights on the Christmas tree are going to look a lot brighter at my house," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler, whose team is now 9-5 on the year. "That's three times more wins than we had last year."

The Rebels suffered through a 3-27 year in 1982-83 and have shown a vast improvement this year with all but two varsity players back from last year.

Against the Mustangs, Lee jumped out to a 12-10 lead in the first quarter and built it up to 24-19 at the half. The Rebels outscored Andrews 18-12 in the third quarter and both teams tallied 22 points in the fourth for the final margin.

"We played very well," said Stueckler. "We shot 52 percent from the field and 63 from the line. Alvin Henry had a great night and Anthony Dickens did a great job on the backboards. He got 14 rebounds and blocked five shots. Victor Brown had an outstanding defensive game and the Rebels are sure happy to win."

Lee will take its 9-5 record into the Clovis, N.M. basketball tournament Wednesday afternoon and pit it against New Mexico defending state champion Lovington at 1 p.m.

After the three tournament games, the Rebels will open District 4-5A play on Jan., 3 against Odessa High in Odessa.

Bouchard, Allison run different paths to win

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For Ray Allison, it was a rare night in the thick of things. For Daniel Bouchard, it was just another night at the office.

Allison and Bouchard were the driving forces behind home-ice victories by their National Hockey League teams Thursday night. Allison, a Flyers center who has ridden the bench more than he's played this season, scored two goals and goalie Pelle Lindbergh stopped 29 shots as Philadelphia blanked the New Jersey Devils 5-0.

Bouchard, making his 17th straight start in the Quebec goal, blocked 25 shots as the Nordiques downed their archrivals, the Montreal Canadiens, 4-1.

Doug Crossman had put Philadelphia on top with a first-period power-play goal, then Allison got his third and fourth goals of the season in a 77-second span of the second period. Allison sent a slapshot from the left faceoff circle past Devils goalie Glenn Resch at 10:07, then he pushed in a rebound at 11:24.

"The first goal really helped my confidence," said Allison. "It has been so long since I had scored. My limited playing time had been based on low numbers, and hopefully the numbers will increase with more playing time."

Flyers Coach Bob McCammon seems ready to provide that extra time.

"Ray Allison seems to play well as his confidence grows with increased playing time," McCammon asserted.

Lindbergh handed the Devils their second straight shutout loss; New Jersey has scored three goals in its last four games.

"My first thought was in winning the game, not a shutout," Lindbergh claimed. "I'm very pleased because a shutout seems so rare nowadays."

Nordiques 4, Canadiens 1

Bouchard didn't get a shutout but the Nordiques got their sixth home victory in a row. Michel Goulet increased his NHL lead in game-winning goals with his eighth.

"Daniel Bouchard has been great for us in goal," said defenseman Randy Moller. "I can't say whether he's feeling tired or not.

"I know he gets extra days off now and then, but I can say he certainly doesn't look tired on the ice."

Quebec killed off a five-minute Montreal power play when Louis Sleigher was given a major penalty for high-sticking Chris Nilan. Wilf Paiement scored a shorthanded goal during that time.

"When you come out of a five-minute power play one goal behind, you know you're doing something wrong," Robinson said. "Games are won and lost with your special teams."

Islanders 6, Capitals 1

Both the host Islanders and Capitals were singing the same tune after the Stanley Cup champions won their sixth straight game and 20th in the last 25. The Islanders had three shorthanded goals and two power play tallies. Washington has surrendered a league-high 15 shorthanded goals.

"It's become a real farce now," said Capitals coach Bryan Murray. "A three-goal game, we get an advantage and our defense gets caught flat-footed.

"We're pressing too much and getting caught. Specialty teams are the difference."

"Special teams are important in any sport," said Butch Goring, who got one of those shorthanded scores. Anders Kallur also connected on the same Caps' power play and John Tonelli collected the third shorthanded tally. "Tonight we won the battle in that respect."

Denis Potvin, who had two Islander goals, was carried from the ice on a stretcher with 50 seconds left but was not seriously injured. He had a headache and pain in the back of the neck after the game.

North Stars 4, Bruins 2

Minnesota rallied from a 2-0 hole with a four-goal third period, led by Brian Bellows' two scores. The North Stars beat goalie Pete Peeters four times in 6½ minutes, with defensemen Lars Lindgren and Curt Giles firing in the other goals.

Bellows' game-winner came when he backhanded home a rebound at 11:00, just 14 seconds after Lindgren tied it. Minnesota is 7-1-1 in its last nine road games.

Raiders' season success

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders have enjoyed a very successful season, winning the American Football Conference West championship and earning the home field advantage for all AFC playoff games.

And, in their first full season at the Los Angeles Coliseum, they were a financial success, too.

The Raiders ranked in the top 25 percent of National Football League teams in gross receipts, the Associated Press learned Thursday.

The team averaged $864,791 in revenues for its eight regular-season home games, apparently placing it no lower than the top seven of the NFL's 28 teams.

Through seven games, the leader was Denver, with an average of $983,166. Revenues from the Broncos' eighth home game weren't available.

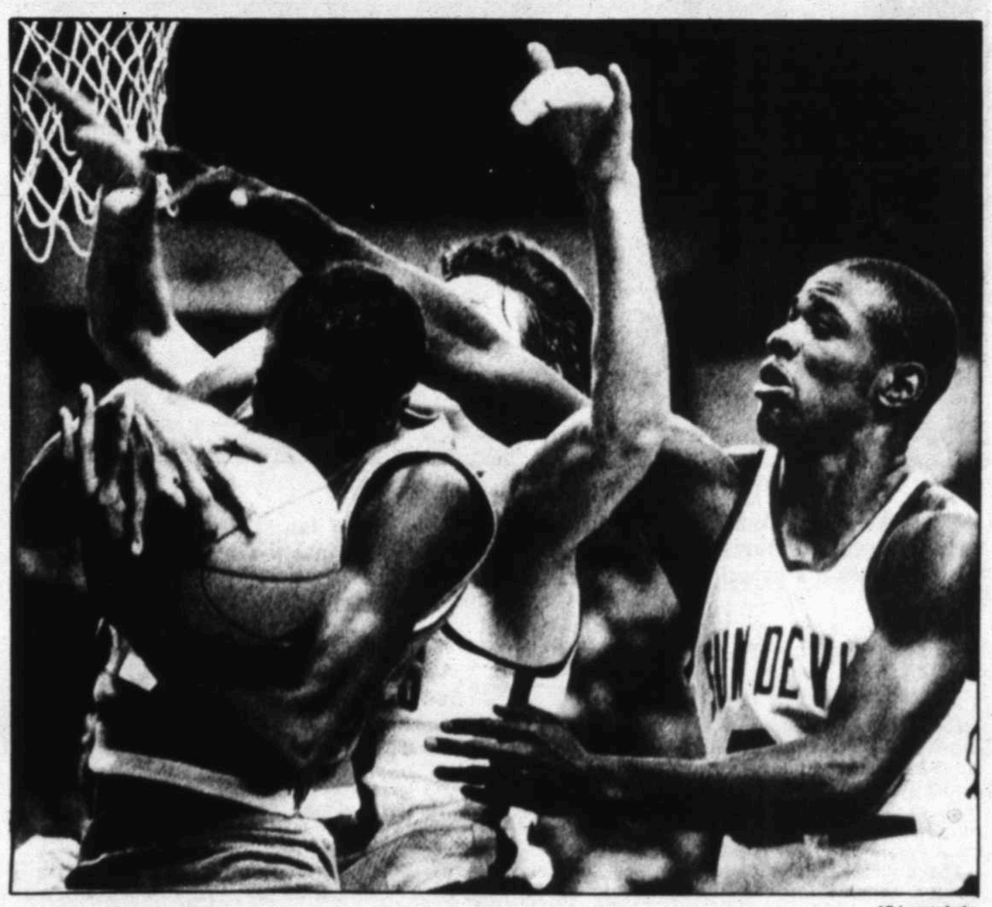

Through seven home games, Dallas was second with an average of $964,550. Through six games, Miami was third at $955,353, and Minnesota was 10th at $804,113.

Others in the top 10, with revenues of seven games available, were the Los Angeles Rams, the San Diego Chargers, the Cleveland Browns, the San Francisco 49ers and the New York Giants.

Al Davis, the Managing General Partner of the Raiders, said he was happy with the results of this year, all things considered.

"I think the fans have been great," said Davis. "The NFL, with their court cases, their pursuit of eminent domain, trying to put the Raiders in receivership, the harrassment and negative public utterances about our ability to stay in Los Angeles helped destroy the credibility of permanence in the minds of the fans and hindered our momentum.

"The dangling of expansion franchises locally, the bad faith and unfair dealing which was upheld unanimously by the (Superior Court) jury, are part of a myriad of unconscionable obstacles put before the Raiders.

"Valvano Rule" gets canned by committee

By The Associated Press

To the relief of most college basketball coaches, the NCAA changed its controversial free-throw rule before the major Christmas holiday tournaments. But there's a small backlash to the backlash that got the rule changed in the first place.

The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee decided Wednesday that a month of the college season was enough to determine that the new rule — making two free throws mandatory for all fouls in the last two minutes of college basketball games — wouldn't work. So it rescinded it and returned to the old rule — one shot plus a bonus if a team is over the six-foul limit.

The rule was intended to penalize trailing teams for fouling in the last two minutes in an attempt to get the ball back. Sometimes called the "Valvano Rule," it was installed after North Carolina State won the NCAA basketball championship last season, coming from behind when Coach Jim Valvano ordered his players to foul poor-shooting Houston players late in the game.

But most coaches agreed that all the new rule did was lead to more fouling.

It removed the penalty for intentional fouls and most teams just went after their opponents' worst foul shooter, with or without the ball. And it also lengthened games — coaches noted that it had taken more than half an hour to play the last two minutes of some contests.

A pair of Big Ten coaches, however, disagreed with the NCAA reversal.

"I think it's stupid to eliminate it," said Bill Frieder of 20th-ranked Michigan. "If you make a rule, stay with it for a year. Six or eight great coaches speak out and they change the rule."

Eldon Miller of Ohio State said he favored the two-shot rule.

"It eliminated judgment by the officials on whether it was a flagrant foul in the last two minutes and the more we eliminate officials' judgment calls the better we are." Of the NCAA's decision, he said:

"The only reason I can see them changing at this early point in time is that they were concerned about injuries. If they're having a problem of tackling people and not receiving a stiffer penalty than two shots, I can see where that might be a problem."

Some coaches approved the change, but suggested that more was needed.

George Raveling of Iowa noted the safety factor, saying the two-shot rule had "put the players' safety in jeopardy." And he added:

"In my opinion, it should have been an experimental rule. I don't think they should put a rule in any more unless we experiment with it first."

The overall response was largely in favor of the revocation of the new rule.

Corbin's 24 powers DePaul

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Tyrone Corbin says confidence is the key to his game. And he was confident enough to lead fourth-ranked DePaul over No. 7 Purdue.

"He's got so much confidence it's coming out of his ears," DePaul Coach Ray Meyer said of Corbin, a 6-foot-5 junior forward who scored a career-high 24 points in powering the Blue Demons to a 68-61 college basketball victory Thursday night.

"I think what helped the most is the confidence the coaches showed in me," Corbin said. "They gave me the confidence to back myself."

One member of the Associated Press' Top Twenty fell Thursday: Missouri upset Michigan State 79-66.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 9 UCLA defeated St. Mary's, Calif., 63-54 and No. 18 Texas-El Paso downed Arizona State 60-55.

Top Twenty

Malcolm Thomas scored 21 points and Ron Jones added 17 in Missouri's victory over Michigan State.

"It was very upsetting to our team," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote after four of his starters fouled out.

"The officials tried to take us out of the game with a lot of borderline calls. Notoriously, you come into this place and get homered. That is a fact."

It was DePaul's first game since the Blue Deamons played in a two-game tournament in Japan, where Corbin's game began to come together. Prior to the Asian trip, he said, "I was kind of doubting my shot . . . but now it's falling."

Against Purdue, Corbin sank nine of 11 shots from the field, including four straight in the second half. And when freshman Dallas Comegys' 12-foot fadeaway jumper was good at 11:26 in the second half, DePaul had the lead for good.

It was Purdue's second straight loss.

"I thought our kids played great basketball in the first half," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "We just didn't play good enough to win."

Freshman Reggie Miller came off the bench in the second half to score 11 points and spark UCLA's victory over St. Mary's. UCLA had a three-point lead, 42-39, with 9:07 left in the game before Miller took charge.

Four free throws in the final 24 seconds helped Texas-El Paso survive a second-half collapse to down Arizona State and give Coach Don Haskins his 400th career victory.

"I'm not concerned about personal goals," Haskins said. "And I'm not too happy about the way we played."

The Miners, 8-0, led 47-30 with 8:02 left in the game when Arizona State, led by guards Chris Beasley and Steve Beck, ran off a 16-3 streak to pull within 56-55 with 1:05 remaining.

But UTEP's Juden Smith sank two free throws with 24 seconds left and Kevin Hamilton connected twice from the line with six seconds remaining to save the victory.

"We're better than what you saw," Haskins said. "Arizona State just outplayed us in the second half."

Government outlook says energy consumption to increase in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are expected to use more energy next year for the first time since 1979, a demand that will require a 26 percent increase in imported oil, according to upcoming government predictions.

In its Short-Term Energy Outlook, the government's Energy Information Administration says gasoline and heating oil prices will remain stable in 1984.

But consumers can expect to pay 10 percent more for natural gas next winter atop a 9.2 percent boost this year and a whopping 25 percent increase last winter. And electric bills are expected to rise an average 7 percent in 1984, following a 4 percent increase this year.

The EIA, an independent arm of the Energy Department, made figures available Thursday from a report to be published Jan. 3.

"A projected improvement in the nation's economic growth could raise energy demand to the point where some reversals in five-and six-year downward trends could occur in 1984," said administrator J. Erich Evered. "But the projected levels of demand for petroleum and natural gas are still only beginning to approach 1981 energy demands."

U.S. energy consumption has dropped about 10 percent since 1979 when the world price of oil began to triple in response to a cutback in supplies because of the Iranian revolution.

But, assuming a 5.5 percent increase in the gross national product in 1984, the government is predicting consumption next year will rise about 4 percent, from 70.1 quadrillion British thermal units to 73 quadrillion Btu.

Oil imports, which fell from a high of 8.6 million barrels a day in 1977 to 4.3 million barrels a day last year, are expected to climb to an average of 5.5 million barrels a day in 1984, roughly one-third of the nation's oil supply.

The price of oil is expected to remain stable at roughly $29.40 a barrel, with gasoline prices predicted to rise a penny — from an average $1.23 a gallon this year to $1.24 in 1984. Home heating oil prices will increase an average 3 cents — from the current $1.06 a gallon to $1.09.

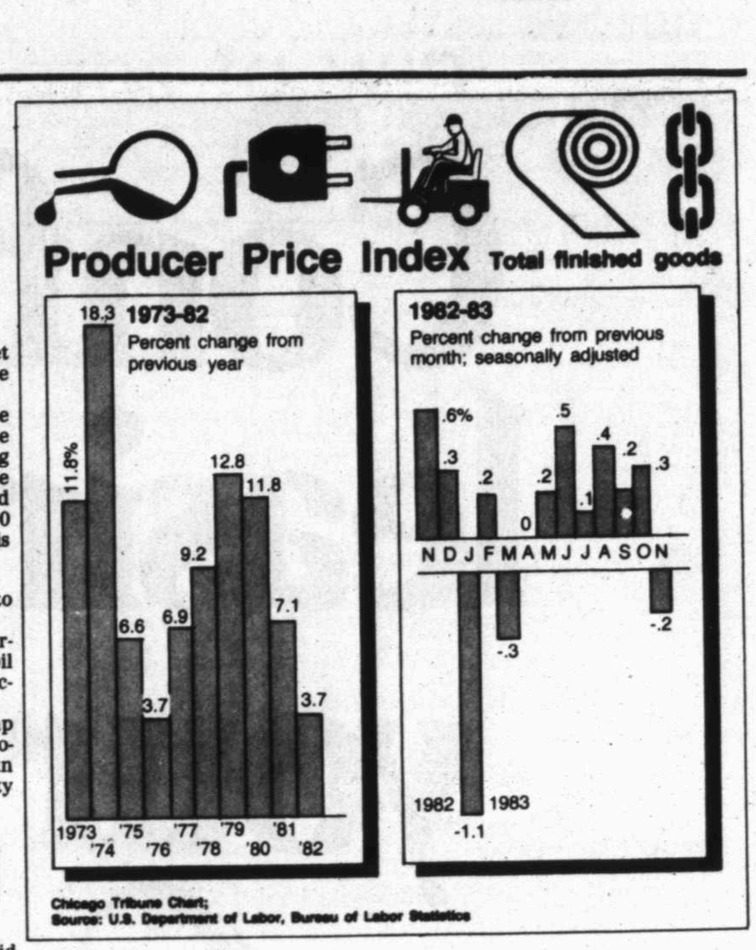

"World oil consumption is projected to increase for the first time since 1979," Evered said. "But the worldwide demand is expected to be comfortably met by the free market with no appreciable rise in the price during 1984."

Natural gas will continue show the most dramatic price increases. Since 1978, before Congress began lifting government price ceilings on the fuel, its residential price has jumped from an average $2.63 per 1,000 cubic feet to an average $6.68 this winter.

By next winter, it is expected to jump another 10 percent, to $7.33.

At $7.33, natural gas is still 9 percent cheaper than home heating oil and one-third the price of electricity.

Electric rates are forecast to jump from an average 7.12 cents per kilowatt-hour this year to 7.63 cents in 1984. The average price of electricity in 1982 was 6.86 cents per kwh.

Reagan administration sees 'solid years' ahead

The Reagan administration sees "six good, solid years" ahead for the economy, highlighted by lower rates of unemployment and only slightly higher inflation.

The forecast, released Thursday, assumes a continuation of the healthy economic signs that have made consumers — including holiday shoppers — generally more confident in the economy's future.

The latest positive economic signal was the Commerce Department's report Thursday that orders to factories for "big-ticket" items such as machinery parts rose 4 percent in November. It was the largest increase since June.

Also, the Labor Department said new claims for unemployment compensation fell by 40,000 in the week ended Dec. 10, to 365,000 — a good sign for the job market.

The auto industry, meanwhile, continues to exhibit strength. The industry journal Automotive News said U.S. manufacturers planned to assemble 68.5 percent more cars this week than a year ago. This week's total is 5.4 percent lower than last week because no Saturday overtime could be scheduled for Christmas Eve.

In its economic forecast, the Reagan administration said it expects the economic recovery to hold to a steady pace next year, producing a decline in unemployment — to an average of 7.8 percent compared with November's 8.4 percent — and a slight boost in inflation, to about 5 percent from the current 3.8 percent.

Martin Feldstein, the president's chief economist, said the forecast pointed to "six good, solid years" through 1989. But he emphasized it assumes congressional action to reduce budget deficits now running at nearly $200 billion a year. Feldstein is chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—British Airways, Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines said they would reduce fares to London from 11 U.S. cities by between 14 and 31 percent starting in January. Also, United said it would lower discount fares on some routes from Denver and Houston.

—The Conference Board, a business-sponsored research group, said the economies of the United States, Canada, Japan and France are giving signs of strong growth. The board said its indexes of the future direction of economies are climbing at double-digit rates in the United States, Canada, Japan and France.

—The Federal Trade Commission cleared the way for auto giants General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp. to jointly produce a new subcompact car in California. The commission, by a 3-2 vote, tentatively approved a consent agreement between the companies that would limit the venture to 12 years and production to 200,000 cars annually, as well as restrict some sharing of information.

Regulators agree risky banks, S&Ls should pay higher insurance premiums

WASHINGTON (AP) — Risky banks and savings and loans could wind up paying more for their government insurance premiums under recommendations agreed on by a group of key financial regulatory officials.

The recommendations, endorsed Thursday by a task force under the direction of Vice President Bush, would let the banking and thrift supervisors vary deposit insurance premiums based on the riskiness of an institution.

Premiums now are assessed on a flat-rate basis without regard to the financial health of an institution. Federally insured deposits are protected up to $100,000 per account.

The task force also endorsed a plan that would reduce over time the full protection that, for all practical purposes, large depositors now enjoy from the insurance system. They're fully covered because the insurance funds usually merge a failed institution with a healthier one, which means that all savings, even those above the $100,000 limit, are transferred to the new bank.

The group of a dozen regulators was formed to take a look at the present regulatory system that some fear isn't keeping up with the widespread changes going on in the financial services industry.

As securities firms and savings and loans move more into banking, critics contend the watchdog apparatus is too complex and cumbersome to deal effectively with today's problems.

In a statement, the task force said it had endorsed a package of about 30 recommendations for legislation to improve the current regulatory structure.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, vice chairman of the group, hailed the action as "a major step forward toward our goal of simplifying bank regulations and reducing wasteful duplication and unnecesary regulation."

The group, however, put off until next month the troublesome issue of how to reorganize the three agencies that regulate banks and especially what role the Federal Reserve Board would play in any restructuring.

Among other recommendations backed by the group:

—Requiring large S&Ls to keep a minimum amount of their assets in home mortgages to be eligible for regulation by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the S&L supervisor. Thrifts with portfolios more like commercial banks would be regulated by a bank agency. Small savings and loans would not be affected.

—Keeping the three insurance agencies separate but requiring the two that protect deposits in banks and S&Ls to move toward similar rules for capital requirements and accounting standards.

—Giving state regulatory agencies more responsibility over institutions chartered in their states and reducing the duplication of those agencies with the federal agencies.

—Consolidating securities regulation that applies to banks and S&Ls in the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Gov. White favors trying Mobil's case

AUSTIN (AP) — Now that a tentative agreement of a $1.7 billion lawsuit invoving Texas, Mobil Oil Corp. and a rancher has been delayed, Gov. Mark White says he likes the idea of taking the case to trial.

"I thought it was a good lawsuit," White told reporters Thursday. "Still do. And it's something that I think the facts are there to support the trial of the case."

The suit, challenging Mobil's oil and gas leases on Clinton Manges' Duval County ranch, was filed last year, and White, who was attorney general at the time, joined Manges' side because Texas owns some of the mineral rights involved in the case.

The governor said he was not surprised that Exxon intervened Tuesday and blocked the tentative settlement.

"If you own a third of the property and someone's making some shifts in the value to the property, I guess it's important that they have something to say about it," White said.

Attorney General Jim Mattox has criticized Exxon for stepping in "in the 11th hour" and delaying or possibly destroying the proposed agreement worked out between Manges and the state on one side, and Mobil on the other.

Mattox said Exxon, which owns a third of the mineral rights on Manges' ranch, had been repeatedly invited to enter the suit against Mobil, filed last year by Manges, but he said Exxon had always refused.

White said it wasn't like "inviting people to a party. You have to follow procedures." But he insisted he would not "be critical" of Mattox's role in the case.

"I think it's important that we try to strike the best deal, if he's not going to try the lawsuit," White said.

The lawsuit accused Mobil of violating a drilling schedule in a lease agreement dating back to 1932. After months of negotiations, the state, Manges and Mobil had reached an accord.

But when lawyers met Tuesday in Laredo to formalize the agreement in court, Exxon filed a cross-suit and a counter-claim, and the entire agreement was delayed.

Homemakers offer help, hope to abused children

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The holiday season may bring out good will and cheer for some, but for many the times are depressing and frustrating.

Christmas may be the highlight of a child's year, but some only suffer because of it.

A group of women, ranging in age from 25 to 55, offer solace for abused or neglected children. They are employees of Home Help Care of West Texas, a division of Upjohn Healthcare Services, and they are called homemakers.

The Texas Department of Human Resources Midland district office investigated more than 500 reported cases of child abuse and neglect in 1982. According to caseworkers in the Midland DHR office, the figure is running at 630 this year.

Covering a 17-county district is difficult for the DHR, but it is accomplished with the help of the homemakers.

Sometimes the women go to provide education and support to parents. Sometimes they sit by the bedside of a battered child in the hospital.

It is fortunate they are there. But it is unfortunate they are needed.

"They are a jack of all trades," said Pat Coleman, Home Help Care of West Texas coordinator. "The DHR does the investigations (into reported cases) and if they think a homemaker would benefit a family, we send her."

The case load consists only of families that have been reported on suspicion of child abuse and neglect. If the situation proves to be a risk for a child, the DHR, along with the proper authorities, arrange for custody of the child.

If, however, a dangerous situation does not exist, but the potential for it to develop is there, these homemakers often serve as deterrents.

"She does whatever the case worker thinks is best in the family's situation," Ms. Coleman said. "Take a young mother who, for whatever reason — a lack of education, a poor role model — doesn't know how to correctly take care of her child. Maybe there are really two children in the family — the child and the mother."

Lack of nurturing, contact and bonding are areas classified as neglect, although usually they are the result of ignorance.

Some families reported have mentally retarded members. Show and tell role models may be used to relate proper care to them. In other situations, family, mental, physical, emotional or financial stress may be the reason the child is abused or neglected.

"Helping them to learn how to cope" is the goal of these homemakers, Ms. Coleman said.

Since 1979, Home Help Care of West Texas and the DHR have contracted for a certain amount of hours per month. Presently the contract limit is 525 hours per month, "which isn't very many hours when you consider the number of cases."

Homemakers are matched as closely as possible in attitude and age with the mothers from the reported families. Proximity of a homemaker to a family's residence also is taken into account, although demand usually won't allow it.

"But I catch the closest homemaker I can and if she has to drive 300 miles, she does," Ms. Coleman said.

The women complete six hours of orientation before they begin. Forty hours of inservice training are required the first year. Because they need insight into family life, all are mothers.

Many of the families are reluctant to have someone from the state pry into their lives, causing the homemakers' roles to be difficult.

"You are not going to make any long-term goals until you develop trust and rapport — until something develops between the two," Ms. Coleman said.

"The homemaker is there as a social contact for them. She is there to be a friend, to be supportive and to increase these people's feelings of self worth and self esteem."

"It's always rewarding for them because of the kids," Ms. Coleman said. "They all love kids.

More cases reported in '82

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

More than 600 cases of child abuse and neglect were investigated by the Midland district office of the Department of Human Resources this year. The figure is up from those reported in 1982.

Across the state, 60 percent of the child abuse and neglect cases investigated prove valid.

While the number of reports tend to peak during the holidays and at the beginning and end of the school year, DHR case workers and Home Help Care of West Texas employees, who visit the homes of families with abuse and neglect tendencies, don't know why.

Persons who suspect child abuse or neglect are urged to call the state hotline at 1-800-252-5400, or the local DHR office at 683-5411.

All calls may remain anonymous and although the name of the caller is routinely asked, that information does not have to be given, according to Pat Coleman, coordinator of Home Help Care of West Texas.

Odessa's 'Sally' meets both physical, spiritual needs

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The "Sally" in Odessa long has responded to man's needs, and no time is it better exhibited than in the Christmas season.

It's the Salvation Army, which, says Major C. Glenn Proctor, is dedicated to addressing man's physical needs as well as spiritual ones.

"We try to render service to the whole man," he said. "That's an outgrowth of the Christian concern and love for people, simply because they ARE people. We feel like the proper response to our fellow man is to assist him physically. But on the other hand, we don't want to be another welfare organization; we want to address his spiritual needs as well as his physical needs."

But regardless of a person's spirituality or lack thereof, added Proctor, the "Sally" still feels the Christian obligation to assist.

"We render service to anybody, even if they're an atheist," he said. "What they believe has nothing to do with our assistance, though we feel like every man has a spiritual need."

This week, in addressing the whole man as are other Salvation Armies, the Odessa facility has distributed food orders to 800 families representing more than 3,000 needy persons.

"We didn't give them food as such; we gave them an order to a grocery store ranging from about $10 to $35, depending on the size of the family," said Proctor. "We stipulated on the orders that they could buy only food, not cigarettes or anything like that."

The orders were distributed following examination of those who applied during the first two weeks in December.

Proctor said that the depressed economy — and the fact fewer persons now flock to Odessa in search of possibly elusive employment — has not significantly altered the number of families served compared to last year.

"It's about the same, give or take a few," he noted. "I think we assisted some 795 families last year."

Most of those served in such a manner, said Proctor "are people who don't have a job at present or who have only marginal incomes, like people who are being supported by Texas Department of Human Resources monthly checks. So they're people who normally wouldn't have any extra money for a time like Christmas for food or toys."

Aim of the food giveaway, he said, is to ensure those families have a good Christmas dinner.

Additionally, he said, the Salvation Army presented the families with two toys apiece for their children.

The Salvation Army's efforts will culminate Christmas Day with a dinner at the facility from 12 noon-2 p.m.

"It's available for anyone who doesn't have a Christmas dinner or a whole family, for that matter," he explained. "Those people we don't investigate; we don't even take names. We just invite them to come in for dinner."

These special Christmas programs are icing on a year-round program which includes providing shelter for men and women nightly.

"We have sleeping facilities for 30 men and a separate facility for about 12 women and children," he said, adding that on an average eight or 10 persons are sheltered each night. "We don't have near as many as last year — they're just not coming to Odessa. I guess that's primarily because there's no incentive to come to Odessa. People know there's not a great deal of work here."

Funds for Christmas endeavors, said Proctor, are provided by the man in the street.

"They all come from the public, either from our Christmas kettles on the streets, or through the mail," he said. "It's a special effort we have at Christmas time. The funds we receive from United Way do not cover our appeal, so we make a special appeal."

Cabbage Patch Kid will be auctioned off to aid real children

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA - The toy children want more than any other this year for Christmas, the Cabbage Patch Kid, was among the items to be auctioned off today at 3:30 p.m. at Permian Mall. Proceeds will help pay medical bills of two girls badly burned in an Odessa house fire.

This is the latest in a string of acts of kindness by Odessans who have come to the aid of the Barraza family, forced from their home by an Aug. 23 fire which gutted the structure and left family members badly burned.

The coveted toy, donated by The Toy Shop, will be sold to the highest bidder. The decision to auction, rather than sell, the Cabbage Patch Kid was made after the store's management was made aware of the children's condition.

While shopping at the mall for clothing with $200 donated by the Ladies Oriental Shrine of Odessa, the girls - whose burned bodies are covered head-to-toe in special body suits - were spotted and the movement began.

"I know there's a lot of people that want to help people. I love it. Those little girls, they'll just kiss me through their masks and it just breaks your heart."

— Mrs. Wayne Beasley, coordinator of charity work for family

The single doll became available when one shopper was unable to pay for her entire collection of layaway gifts and chose not to keep it. "Instead of selling it, we decided to just find a way to get the money to charity where it would do the most good," said store manager Doug Lyman.

Since the fire at the home at 2701 N. Tom Green interrupted the Barrazas' life, many other people have donated time, money and merchandise in the combined effort to help the family during these hard times.

The Odessa Shrine Club flew Gina, 9, and Korina, 8, to the Shriners' Burn Hospital in Galveston where the girls underwent treatment.

The parents, Pedro and Maria Barraza, were flown at Shriner expense to be with their daughters at the Galveston doctors' recommendation. This marked the first time adults were treated at the hospital designed specifically for child burn victims.

Odessan Don Lindley has donated an apartment where the Barrazas can live until their home is rebuilt. Mrs. Wayne Beasley has been heading a variety of tasks from coordinating the charity work to spending time with the family.

The Shriners paid for the family to be flown back to Galveston in November after the Barrazas had returned to Odessa. Korina's wounds opened again, necessitating the return. The doctors have been flown to El Paso to treat the girls since that time.

Gifts, including food, fruit baskets and sheets, have been donated by Medical Center Hospital and a gift certificate and groceries by First Savings and Loan in Odessa. Texas Instruments provided the Barrazas' Christmas tree and an Odessa schoolteacher, Pam Hicks, has provided the girls with lessons on tapes and records.

So they can play the tapes, the J.C. Penney's marketing manager at Permian Mall is donating a cassette player during today's auction.

Medication needed for daily treatment of the burns, which cover much of the girls' bodies, was given by the First Baptist Church. "There are so many people helping, you just can't name them all," said Mrs. Beasley.

"I know there's a lot of people that want to help people," she said. "I love it. Those little girls, they'll just kiss me through their masks and it just breaks your heart."

MMH shows revenues of $27,700 in last fiscal year

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A loss of almost $1 million in hospital district expenses last year has given way to a gain of $1.7 million, according to an audit report made to Midland Memorial directors and trustees Thursday.

The hospital itself, which lost $2.7 million in operation expenses during fiscal year 1982, showed revenues of $27,700 during the last fiscal year.

"This has been an excellent year — and it was a building year for you," Randy Kurtz said. "I think it puts you in an excellent position to face the challenges of the '80s."

Kurtz, representing MMH auditors Arthur Andersen & Co. of Dallas, said "the $2.7 million turnaround couldn't have come at a better time." He cited the hospital district's debt load, construction costs, bonds and the demands of new laws concerning Medicare reimbursements.

As of Sept. 30, the district was financing $19.8 million in revenue bonds for construction of a 77-bed expansion and $8.5 million in general obligation bonds. In addition, notes payable, secured by land, building and equipment, totaled $752,515.

Another $2 million in junior lien revenue bonds was approved to finance the purchase of a CT scanner, renovation of an area to accommodate it, and a two-story parking garage.

Long-term debts as of Sept. 30 totaled $28 million.

Once the construction projects go into use, revenues will be generated from them, Kurtz said.

The change in Medicare laws, called the prospective payment system, went into effect at the beginning of MMH's fiscal year Oct. 1. Since then, the hospital showed a decrease in the average length of stay for patients.

Medicare patients stayed in the hospital an average of 8.6 days in fiscal 1983, compared to 6.3 during November. Adult and pediatric patients' length of stay dropped from 5.4 days to 4.8.

"One month does not a trend make and it is not possible to project with only one month's data," MMH president Ray Branson stated in his monthly report.

He also noted that while the total amount of minutes spent in the operating room during the first two months of this fiscal year have increased almost 50 percent, the actual number of surgical procedures is down from the same period last year.

That would indicate more complicated surgeries were being done, Branson said. "If we're doing more complicated work and sending them home faster — we've just got to wait a couple of more months (to determine the trend)."

According to Kurtz, the hospital faces four challenges in the future. With the prospective payment system, the government is monitoring the cost of in-patient care.

He advised hospital officials to look into alternatives for patient care such as home health agencies, hospices, same day surgeries and providing skilled nursing care as an affiliate with or in the district itself. These are ways to reduce the number of patients staying in the hospital and still provide quality care for them.

He also said close monitoring of expenses, comparing them to other hospitals of the same size, and watching interest rates for the best time to refund or restructure debts was necessary.

Midland Memorial, as the dominant health care facility in the area, also should be sensitive to the impact of services the competition provides, he said.

"You need to maintain that dominant position — for economic reasons and as a health care service."

Midland churches set celebrations of Christ's birth

From Staff Reports

By Saturday, all the gifts should be wrapped and under the tree, all the special food baked, all the decorations hung with care. And then Midlanders can settle down to enjoy the true meaning of Christmas — the celebration of Christ's birth.

Several churches are planning special Christmas Eve and Christmas Day services.

Unitarian Universalist Church will hold a Christmas Eve candlelight service starting at 7 p.m. The service will be based loosely on the medieval form of lessons and carols, consisting of ancient and contemporary readings and stories and several Christmas carols. The service will end with a candlelight ceremony.

Afterward, people will be able to gather around the wassail bowl and share Christmas goodies and conversation.

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will have two identical Chistmas Eve candlelight services Saturday — at 7:30 and 10 p.m. The services are built around St. Luke's familiar Christmas story with many carols being sung and candles lighted to remind people that Jesus, the light of the world, has come. On Christmas Day, Holy Communion will be celebrated at the 10 a.m. service. Carols also will be sung.

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., will celebrate a service of Holy Communion, carols and candlelighting in the sanctuary Christmas Eve, starting at 11 p.m.

The sermon, "How Far to Bethlehem?" will be delivered by Dr. Jarrell Sharp, pastor. Special music will be performed by Mona Ruth Dickson, organist, and Bert Bostic, minister of program and music. Selections will include "Ave Maria" by Bach-Gounod and "O Holy Night" by Stephen Adams.

Worship service on Christmas Day will begin at 10:30 a.m. Featured will be a Bach solo, "Christmas Joy," to be sung by Julie Griffith. The Chancel Choir, directed by Bostic, will sing the anthem, "Away in a Manger," arranged by John Ritter. Sharp's sermon topic is "Born for This."

St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St., will hold its traditional Christmas Eve service at 6 p.m. Saturday. The "Candles, Carols and Communion" service will be conducted by the Rev. William McReynolds. A nursery will be provided.

A "Come and Go" communion for family groups will be served from 6 to 7 p.m. Saturday at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive. Each family will be served together and will be free to return to family festivities after being served.

St. Paul will offer four worship services Christmas Sunday — 8:30, 9:40 and 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m. The evening service will be candlelight and directed by Tom Laney, minister of music.

The John Wesley Covenant Service will be celebrated from 11:15 p.m. to midnight New Year's Eve. Holy communion will be served.

First United Methodist Church is encouraging the public to watch a special Christmas Eve service being broadcast 11 p.m. to midnight Christmas Eve from Lovely Lane United Methodist Church in Baltimore, Md. It will be shown on KOSA-TV, channel 7, or channel 8 on cable.

Christmas Sunday services will be changed for Christmas Day. Sunday School will begin at 9:45 a.m. All youth and adult classes and grades 4, 5 and 6 will meet in Fellowship Hall to share wassail and cookies and to see a film. The younger children's classes will be divided into two groups to sing carols. Worship service will start at 10:35 a.m. with the sermon by Dr. Charles E. Lutrick. The Chancel Choir and Celebration Singers will perform as a combined choir.

First Baptist Church has scheduled its Candlelight Christmas Eve worship at 10 p.m. Saturday in the sanctuary, located at the corner of Louisiana and Garfield streets. Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor, will lead the celebration.

Non-payment of child support lands doctor in San Saba's jail

SAN SABA (AP) — Dr. Roy E. Lee says he is no different from hundreds of other divorced fathers who have been jailed because they cannot make their court-ordered family support payments.

But Lee's case drew attention in this town of 5,500. He is the only doctor.

And unlike others in the same position, Lee is friends with Houston defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, who promised to fly up to San Saba Thursday and try to spring the doctor from jail.

About a dozen townspeople braved sub-freezing temperatures to picket the courthouse Thursday, carrying placards that said, "Free Dr. Lee."

"There's not much I can do about it," said San Saba County Sheriff Brantley Barker, who has been ferrying Lee to San Saba Memorial Hospital to tend to medical emergencies.

"There's lots of support for me out there," Lee told the San Angelo Standard Times in a telephone interview from the jail Thursday. "(Country-western singer) Mickey Gilley called me this morning and offered to pay the money. So did lots of my doctor friends. But if I let anyone do that, then what would I do next month? Pretty soon those wells would dry up."

Lee says he wants to meet his obligation, but can't make any money in the jail. And his jailers say he will stay put until he makes a $4,000 payment for support of his estranged wife and 4½-year-old son, who live in Harris County.

"Other than having our troops in Beirut...this is the second most tragic thing happening this Christmas," Haynes said from his office Thursday. "This isn't my favorite Christmas story."

Barker set up a special telephone line for Lee to talk to nurses at the hospital. The line was kept busy Thursday, said assistant hospital administrator Wadene Ivy.

"Nurses can make no decisions without a doctor," Ms. Ivy said. "We're keeping the phone busy, like every minute. I didn't realize we talked to him so much."

Lee was jailed Wednesday after a court appearance. He said he had been ordered by State District Judge D.V. Hammond in a Dec. 7 order to make the support payment.

But Lee said he "couldn't make it and I didn't have the money."

"There are people marching around the courthouse carrying signs and placards," Lee said. "Most of them are women who work for me who have been having trouble collecting child support from their ex-husbands. The deputies tell me the signs they are carrying say 'Free Dr. Lee and lock up my ex-husband.' "

Attempted murder charges filed against Midland man

From Staff Reports

Attempted murder charges have been filed against a northside man accused of kicking his girlfriend's 13-year-old daughter, who remains in critical condition and on life support systems at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Charles Conaway, 28, of 1001½ N. Garfield, has been released from custody after posting a $40,000 bond set Thursday by Justice of Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

The teen-ager, Teresa Luscynski of the same address, was apparently thrown to a bedroom floor and kicked in the head during a disturbance at the residence shortly after 6 a.m. Wednesday, according to police.

Officers said they found the girl unconscious and not breathing when they got to the scene. Cardiopulmonary rescusitation was applied until paramedics arrived and took her to the hospital.

Police said Conaway lived with the mother of the 8th-grade student at San Jacinto Junior High.

Project begins after 30 years

BAY CITY (AP) — Construction on the Colorado River Jetties Project could begin in 60 to 90 days, more than 30 years after it was first proposed to build jetties where the river empties into the Gulf of Mexico.

The final step in clearing the way for construction came Thursday when the General Accounting Office rejected a protest to the awarding of a construction contract.

Army Corps of Engineers spokesman Jack Armstrong said the decision earlier this week should end the dispute over the contract for the $39 million project. The project could be completed in 700 working days, or about 2½ years, Armstrong said.

Misener Marine Construction, Tampa, Fla., received the initial $13.25 million contract last summer. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Co., Chicago, submitted a lower bid of $12.85 million and contested the decision.

The Corps of Engineers rejected the Great Lakes bid because the company failed to acknowledge an amendment attached by the Corps to the contract. The GAO upheld the Corps' rejection and supported the recommendation that the bid go to Misener.

Great Lakes appealed unsuccessfully to the chief counsel of the Corps of Engineers and then took its protest to the GAO.

This first phase of the project calls for construction of two jetties flanking the Colorado River where it empties into the Gulf of Mexico.

"The paperwork will start on the project very soon, I'm sure, but stone and more other more obvious work won't be started until the contractors can get a quarry open and stone hauled to the site," he said.

The two major features of the entire project are a navigation channel from the Gulf into the intracoastal waterway and a diversion channel sending fresh water from the Colorado River into Matagorda Bay.

Woman's work allows people to keep their 'old friends'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Throwing away a broken Hummel is like discarding an old friend, and a local artist says even the most battered of the German-made figurines remain tucked away on shelves and in drawers for years.

"No one ever throws a Hummel out, no matter how badly it's broken," says Mary Daughtry, who offers hope to Hummel collectors by repairing the valuable figurines.

Military families and insurance companies have beaten a well-worn path to the door of Ms. Daughtry's antique shop, where she spends much of her time repairing Hummels.

"It's surprising how many people bring me Hummels that were broken years ago," she said. "Hummels are like old friends, and everyone loves them."

Ms. Daughtry repaired her first Hummel in 1969 and her shop has been brimming with the broken figurines ever since.

"The repair work I do in my shop equals the profit of my sales," she said.

Ms. Daughtry said much of her Hummel repair work is for government employees whose figurines were broken in cross-country or overseas moves.

"Almost all service-connected people own between one and 100 Hummels," she said. "I do a lot of work for them and for moving and storage companies responsible for breaking the figurines."

Most Hummel owners, she said, regard a broken figurine as "a major tragedy."

Ms. Daughtry said she repairs an average of six Hummels each week for people who want their "old friends" in good shape.

"The value is not as good as if they had never been broken, but it is still more than if the figure was not repaired," she said.

The quaint figures of German children and small animals were first cast in 1923 and were modeled after the drawings of Berta Hummel, a nun.

Ms. Daughtry said the figurines began to be "seriously" produced in 1935 and have been in great demand ever since.

"The old Hummels are terribly expensive," she said. "They're very much worth collecting, because if a person had invested in a Hummel 10 years ago, he would have profited more than placing the money in a high-interest savings account."

Ms. Daughtry said it's not the value, however, that has created the demand for Hummels.

The bright-colored figures of rosy-cheeked children are endearing, she said.

"They're nostaligc and appeal to everybody," she said.

Ms. Daughtry said her love of antiques and porcelain led her into the Hummel repair business.

"I was so upset when I found a beautiful piece that was broken," she said. "I had taught art in my own studio for years and I already knew a lot about coloring so I decided to try my hand at repair."

Ms. Daughtry said she borrowed books on porcelain and china repair from the library and began to practice on "gunky things" that couldn't be salvaged.

"I started out practicing on junk I got at flea markets and went on like that for three years," she said.

After she felt she had mastered the art of repair, Ms. Daughtry began fixing friends' figurines at no charge.

The first item she repaired for profit was a Hummel with its head snapped off.

Ms. Daughtry said almost any broken Hummel, except those with chipped or cracked faces, can be salvaged.

TESCO asking customers to curtail energy usage

Although the situation isn't quite as critical, officials of Texas Electric Service Co. are still requesting customers to conserve energy.

"We're in fairly good shape," division customer service manager Gerald Gotcher said, "but we're still not ready to tell everyone to go back to normal operation."

The record cold weather that has hit the state put a strain on TESCO's reserves, and Thursday the company asked residents to cut their energy use to a minimum.

"There were a multitude of problems," Gotcher explained. Some power plants were not operating properly because the cold caused equipment to malfunction, others were being overhauled because this is normally a slow time, and customers were using more energy to heat their homes.

"It was a combination of all those things," he said.

The utility had used its reserves of natural gas and had to resort to burning less-efficient fuel oil, he said.

Odessan dies following accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Charles Frederick Smith, 27, of 22201 Stoner Road in Odessa, died shortly after 8 a.m. this morning in Odessa Medical Center of injuries sustained in a Thursday car-pedestrian accident.

According to an Odessa Police spokesman, Smith was struck by a pickup driven by Kenneth James Black, 48, of 2820 W. County Road, Odessa at 6:50 p.m.

Black's vehicle was westbound in the 5900 block of E. Hwy. 80 service road when the accident occurred. When struck, Smith was in the roadway six feet from the curb at a point 615 feet east of the Loop 338 exit, said the spokesman.

Widow files $2.5 million suit against TUGCO

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) — A lawsuit seeking $2.5 million in damages has been filed against Texas Utilities Generating Co. by the widow of an employee who was killed in an accident at one of the company's plants.

Joe Michael Morris, 30, and assistant mechanic James Chambless, 19, of Henderson, received second- and third-degree burns July 25 when hot gases escaped from a boiler at TUGCO's Martin Lake Steam Electric Station, a lignite-burning plant located about 25 miles south of Longview.

Kaye Morris' suit says the accident was caused by negligence on the part of the company. The suit alleges that TUGCO did not "fully advise and inform" Morris "of the risks and dangers involved in the work he was asked to perform."

The suit further contends that the company "failed to provide competent supervisors."

John Carlson, general manager of the plant, said he had not seen the suit and would not comment on it, except to say, "We still maintain that we're not at fault on this."

Small pipe bursts, ignites chemical plant's oil

AUSTIN (AP) — A small pipe on a hot oil boiler burst today and ignited the oil at a chemical plant. Wind carried the fumes away from a residential area and firefighters brought the blaze under control in 37 minutes, officials said.

The 2-alarm blaze at Texaco Chemical Corp.'s plant in north Austin broke out at 5:14 a.m., fire Lt. Jim Boynton said. No injuries were reported and no residents was evacuated.

Russ Lyon wheels his classic Lyon automobile down a country road. Lyon designed, cut and arc-welded the ladder and space frame chassis for his car. The basic price of the car is $135,000.

Dream car homemade

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

RAMONA, Calif. — There is a lazy colony near here where people create their satisfactions and live a simple, wholesome peace.

One couple camped in a tent for two years while slowly, lovingly, raising their fine, barn-shaped home of stained glass and golden woods. A neighbor's small freedom came with the windmill powering his new country home. Another urban escapee is raising sheep for spring feasts.

And among the wells, low hills, eucalyptus stands, guard geese, market gardens, milk goats and room to breathe, there are Russ and Sandy Lyon.

They have made their dream:

IT IS THE PERFECT motor car.

If not perfect, then let us say the pure motor car. That means no plastics, no fiberglass, no glues, no vinyl, no self-tapping screws or any modern shortcut that could compromise ancient crafts. Purity also translates to sparing neither expense nor pain to build a car for the most practical of impractical purposes: personal pleasure and sensory excitement.

"The old Alfas and Bugattis were four-wheeled motorcycles with life and feel and with their engineering solutions in plain view," Russ Lyon, 39, said. He studied physics at the University of California, Los Angeles; mechanical engineering at San Diego State and aerospace engineering at the University of California, San Diego and knows all about engineering solutions. "You could see the wheels and the chassis and the brakes and suspension, and that's what fascinates me."

Open cockpit biplanes, Vincent motorcycles, steam locomotives, the Thompson submachine gun and Rolls-Royce aero engines also fascinate Lyon as classics of industrial design. There is substance, purpose and honesty to their shapes. Similarly, his prototype roadster was formed in total pursuit of function. And permanence.

WHATEVER SCOOP, LOUVER vent, latch, pipe, tube or cable is on the car is plated, polished or enameled and is there to work. As much effort went into tuning the exhaust for a growling-rumbling purrrr as was devoted to show-plating its external plumbing and heat shields. Of course, the dash is hand-polished walnut and the upholstery is hand-sewn with attendant fragrances.

The Lyon is no replicar, no fiberglass shell bolted to a bread-and-butter power plant and chassis in bland imitation of a classic. Its supercharger is real and those fenders were hand-hammered on wooden formers and it takes 3,500 man-hours to sculpt this sports car of the '30s on an assembly line that is no more mechanical than right hand passing to left.

Nor is the Lyon a neoclassic, some great chunk of GM metal with coachwork by those art deco Pep Boys — Tiffany, Cartier and Gucci. Russ Lyon designed, cut and arc-welded the ladder and space-frame chassis for his car; spent two months just sanding and carving wooden patterns for the finned aluminum manifolds; and forged his own 15-inch brake drums (also finned and vented) because those beauties retired from the motoring scene years ago.

THEN THERE WAS Lyon's vehemment denial of glue, vinyl and pop rivets. To him, such high-tech conveniences represent cheap impermanence. "An often-strong drive in the human spirit is for permanence," Lyon said. "One hopes — although one probably is never supposed to confess to it — that if he builds enough quality into an object, it will be valued enough to somehow last forever."

Further to that philosophy, whatever component Lyon did not make is on the vehicle because it represents the aura and likely is the best product there is. Such as the straight-six, E-Type Jaguar engine and real magneto ignition by Vertex. Also instrumentation by Smith and Brooklands racing screens imported from England and mixing-bowl Lucas P100R headlights and two-inch, externally mounted SU carburetors....

Incidentally, the car blasts off the line in a classy impersonation of Shirley Muldowney and runs out at about Mach .2, which is around 130 mph.

"UP UNTIL ABOUT 18, growing up in San Diego, I'd been like any other California kid interested in hot rods and (Pontiac) GTOs and thinking they were exciting," Lyon said. Quiet-spoken, sandy-haired, a sport-shirt-and-tennis-shoe type, he was explaining where and how and why. "Then I read Ralph Stein's book, 'The Treasury of the Automobile,' and it sort of opened up a whole new area. There had been, I knew then, a time when cars did not separate you from your senses...as it is today with us heading so much toward remoteness in cars where we can make the weather remote, the engine remote, even the road remote."

To regain contact, Lyon decided to recapture a vehicle of the era. He devoured Stein. He scouted libraries and scalped ideas from the Briggs Cunningham Automotive Museum, Costa Mesa, Calif. He decided to build along the lines of a vintage Mercer runabout.

"It was fun. It took me three years to build, and I drove it for one year. But I wasn't satisfied with it. Then again, I didn't have enough money, tools or time to do it right." And soon there would be a master's degree to earn, a career to start and a marriage to form.

Then, in 1968, came an aluminum body around a Jaguar engine. Now here was something. This car had a certain feel to it. There was that chunky Brooklands flair of wire wheels and stiff handling and a radiator to point someplace.

THAT PRODUCED A verdict that would result in the formation of Lyon Motor Works Inc. and eventually the addition of a 2,700-square-foot workshop to their home and yet another cottage industry for an area where households deal primarily in indelible dreams.

"It was our decision to build from the ground up and not use an existing chassis," Russ Lyon said. "There would be no compromises anywhere — although one of the hardest parts of being an engineer is having to compromise for price — in following my idea of what the most exciting sports car would be.

"It would have to have excitement in terms of performance, in sound, in sight...the involvement of all your central functions. And with all the parts of the car exciting in addition to the whole."

LYON BEGAN DRAWING. He worked plans and dimensions like a police artist producing a facsimile.

"When I'm all done, I'd like to leave behind 25 or 30 cars that will be considered as desirable as, say, a Bugatti or a (Mercedes) SSK," Lyon said. "And I do hope it sells the way I have built it. I'm just not interested in falling back and doing it in fiberglass."

If the car does not sell, Lyon likely will return to working to the more wholesale, less discriminating demands of today's marketplace.

Silent demonstration

On Saturday, Christmas eve, Midland Jaycee Women will join other women Jaycee chapters across the country in lighting candles of remembrance for those servicemen who died in Lebanon and as a sign of hope for peace in 1984.

The organization is encouraging all Midland residents to join them in a silent demonstration by placing lighted candles in their windows.

Prompt thank you notes important

Christmas presents have been opened and the sweater from Aunt Minnie is perfect. The home-baked breads from the neighbors were the hit of the Christmas breakfast. The twins adore the sled from Grandpa.

Now is the time to start thinking about thank-you notes.

"It's important that the thank-you be conveyed as soon as possible following the giver's kindness," said Larry Salvaggio, a manager for stationery with the American Greetings Corp. "But too often sending the note is delayed because the sender just doesn't know what to write."

He offered the following hints on thank-you notes:

— Write the note within a few days of receiving the gift.

DEAR ABBY

Aunt's gift-giving thankless

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I need your help in handling this "slow burn" that's been building up over the years. How does one get young relatives to understand the importance of acknowledging gifts?

Having no children of my own, I have lavished generous gifts on nieces, nephews, great-nieces, great-nephews, etc. However, my regular outpouring of gifts for birthdays, graduations, weddings, Christmas, etc., was seldom acknowledged.

For too many years I have overlooked their rudeness by reasoning that their parents were too busy coping with big problems to train their children to write thank-you notes.

Though distance has often separated us, I know I am their favorite aunt and dearly loved in return. For this important gift I am truly thankful.

My concern is less for the hurt I have felt than for the awareness that such social insensitivity may be damaging to them. It seems to be perpetuating itself from generation to generation. How can I stop this from snowballing? — FAVORITE AUNT IN HAWAII

DEAR AUNT: Have you ever told them how you feel? If not, it's time you did, stressing that people who do not acknowledge gifts are considered ungrateful and ill-mannered. If they don't care what others think of them, that's their business, and they will have to live with the consequences.

In the future, give only for the joy you derive from giving, without regard for thanks. And if there is no joy in thankless giving, stop giving.

He used to dress well. Not anymore. Nothing fits him. He refuses to buy new clothes — he keeps wearing clothes that should have been discarded years ago.

I love my husband, but I have absolutely no desire to have sex with him. (It's like being crushed by a ton of bricks.) Please help me. Perhaps you or a reader can offer a workable solution. — DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Neither you, nor I, nor any reader can help your husband unless he wants to be helped. The longest march in the world begins with one step, and in this case, that step is to a physician's office for a complete checkup. The next step is a diet and exercise program. No amount of nagging or pleading will help. His is a do-it-yourself project. He may need a "shrink" to help him shrink the rest of him.

DEAR ABBY: Gil and I are living together to see if we are compatible enough for marriage. The one big problem is that he absolutely refuses to use any kind of birth control. I am afraid of the side effects of the pill and I do not like any of the other contraceptives. We can't afford a family right now, but someday we probably will, so Gil doesn't want a vasectomy, and I don't want to have myself sterilized.

Otherwise we get along great. We really love each other.

He says birth control is the woman's responsibility. I say it is just as much the man's responsibility as the woman's. Can you settle this? — FIGHTING IN FULLERTON

DEAR FIGHTING: The responsibility should be equally shared. Don't assume the role of the "victim." You have a choice. You can always say no. In the meantime, visit your nearest family planning clinic and take Gil with you. You both have much to learn.

AT WIT'S END

'Special meanings' clouded

By ERMA BOMBECK

We call our Christmas tree a "Memory Tree."

Each and every ornament on it has a special meaning to someone in our family and every year we unwrap them one by one and together gather these precious moments around us like spirited fireflies.

Last night as we lovingly placed each bauble on the tree we could again remember.

"Look at this," I said, holding a miniature pie tin with a crayoned picture of the Christ child with a message, "Oh Come Holy Spit" on it. "How old was Andy when he did this? Three? Four?"

"He was 15 years old, mom. He didn't spell 'spirit' until the year he learned how to drive."

"And look at this dear little snowman with the crocheted hat and scarf. I made that when I was in the hospital with Matt."

"You bought that at a half-price sale at Penney's after Christmas. I was with you. Besides you don't crochet."

Memories — they can't take that away from me.

Or can they?

Baby kidnapped from hospital found safe, sound

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A kidnapped newborn spent her first day at home today after a tearful reunion with her parents ended five days of frustration and misery for relatives, police and hospital workers who spread the word like brushfire — Amelia's been found!

Eight-day-old Amelia Leal Ramirez, whom police located in a suburban home with the help of an anonymous tip, was returned to Mercy Hospital in an unmarked police car Thursday. A jubilant crowd of several hundred people gathered to greet her.

As authorities booked a woman at the home where Amelia was found on suspicion of kidnapping, a ruggedly built detective — appearing somewhat stunned by the crush of people and whirring of cameras — delivered the child to her anxious parents.

"The best feeling I've ever had in 16 years with the force," said Detective Don Hanson.

nation

It was the first time Ramirez had seen her. He had been in Wisconsin when the child was born, and she was kidnapped from the hospital by a woman masquerading as a nurse before he could get to California.

"Thank you, thank you," he repeated as Ms. Leal devoted her full attention to her daughter.

Doctors examined Amelia and said she was in excellent health, and the reunited family was able to leave the hospital for home.

Meanwhile, hospital officials posted a 24-hour guard on the third-floor nursery from which Amelia had been taken.

Born just another baby on Dec. 14, three days later she became the most important person in town.

Seemingly everyone was worried about her. Had she been the victim of a daring baby-for-sale ring? Would a ransom be demanded? Would she survive the ordeal?

The San Diego Police Department and the FBI mounted a huge search. Thousands of copies of Amelia's picture and a sketch of her alleged abductor were circulated throughout California and into Arizona and Mexico.

Quadruplets bring joy

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Christmas will never be the same for Charles and Mary Ann Genrich, but that's just fine for the couple spending their first holiday season with quadruplets, born almost a year ago.

"This is a special Christmas," said Mrs. Genrich, 32. "We're not alone and we have four children to share Christmas with. And we're thankful that they are healthy."

However, sacrifices have been made to brace for the inquisitive nature of Nathan, Matthew, Andrew and Patrick, who arrived Dec. 29 to great fanfare as the first quadruplets born in the state.

The Genriches' traditional Christmas tree, which used to take up nearly half the living room, was the first item scratched when the couple began preparing for the yuletide.

"They would be at it all the time and would eventually knock it down," said Genrich, 34, a dentist. "Those little guys are so inquisitive and are into everything. When you would pull one away, there would be three more at it."

Four diminutive swing sets, with a stocking hanging from each, stand where the tree was in past years.

AL PACINO SCARFACE

In the spring of 1980, the port at Mariel Harbor was opened, and thousands set sail for the United States. They came in search of the American Dream.

One of them found it on the sun-washed avenues of Miami...wealth, power and passion beyond his wildest dreams.

He was Tony Montana. The world will remember him by another name ...SCARFACE.

He loved the American Dream. With a vengeance.

CAUTION "Scarface" is an intense film both in its use of language and depiction of violence. We suggest mature audiences.

nation in brief

Santa gets helping hand

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — With a little help from the Marines, the television show "Hill Street Blues" and other donors, Santa will be able to bring holiday toys to 37 homeless children who otherwise would have had no Christmas.

The 37 children at the Long Beach Emergency Shelter had feared St. Nick would pass them by, and director Jim Graham made their concerns public Tuesday, announcing that the center had no gifts to give them.

The response was immediate and generous, he said.

Graham said the Salvation Army will share in the bounty of the thousands of toys brought to the shelter, which offers temporary housing for unemployed men and women and their families.

Glenn conceding caucuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ohio Sen. John Glenn is ready to write off his chances of winning the leadoff Iowa caucuses in February, but intends to make a strong effort to prevent a third place finish that might seriously damage his campaign for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

Aides say polling completed for Glenn's campaign indicates the Ohio Democrat has virtually no chance of overtaking frontrunner Walter F. Mondale in Iowa, barring an unexpectedly large turnout at the caucuses now scheduled for Feb. 20.

But he has consistently run a solid second to Mondale in an eight-man field in polls both in Iowa and nationwide, and a third place finish would be extremely damaging to his status as the former vice president's principal rival for the nomination.

Mankind closer to disaster?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The editors of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists have advanced the minute hand of their "doomsday clock" to suggest mankind is edging closer to nuclear disaster.

At a news conference Thursday announcing the gesture, James Cracraft, an expert on the Soviet Union and a professor of history at the University of Illinois at Chicago, predicted that the outlook for pulling away from the nuclear abyss will not improve soon.

He said, "1983 was a bad year for U.S.-Soviet relations and 1984 promises to be even worse."

The movement of the clock's hands as they appear on the face of each issue of the magazine symbolize the editors' evaluation of the danger of nuclear warfare.

Blood alcohol test questioned

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Making a suspected drunken driver get out and try to walk a straight line is a more accurate way to determine how impaired he is than measuring blood alcohol level, researchers say.

Tests at the University of Colorado's Alcohol Research Center show that some people function as well when legally drunk as they do sober. Others suffer impairment while still below the legal standard for drunkenness, the recent study shows.

Blood alcohol tests are administered to suspected drunken drivers in many forms — by "Breathalyzer," a breath test, or by taking urine or blood samples.

But the Colorado study suggests that such tests give little indication of how impaired a person's judgment or physical responses are.

Different responses to alcohol are due to acquired tolerance and individual genetic differences. Erwin said tolerance can be built up through regular drinking.

Food stamp recipient generous

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A former teacher who ekes out a living on welfare and food stamps says he'll find someone to share his Christmas dinner even if he has to "tackle them on the street."

"I just wanted to have a couple of people over," said Richard Cole, 50, who has called a dozen churches, charities and colleges looking for someone less fortunate than himself to receive his hospitality.

Cole, who has been seriously ill for a decade, lives in a $230-a-month efficiency apartment and supports himself on a $270 monthly welfare check and $54 in food stamps. He cannot afford a telephone. He said Thursday that he has trouble scraping up enough cash to buy razor blazes and food for his cat.

About $222 billion concealed

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A congressional study claimed today that Americans conceal about $222 billion a year in earnings from the so-called "underground economy." This figure, however, is a lot smaller than some other estimates.

The report on the amount of economic activity shielded from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) was issued at a time of increasing concern over the size of the federal deficit, which is expected to be about $180 billion in fiscal 1984 alone. Congress is desperately searching for new revenue to help close that gap.

The Joint Economic Committee's (JEC) projections were smaller than the $600 billion estimate of earnings from the underground economy in at least one recent study. Other projections have ranged between $150 billion and $600 billion.

The study also claimed its findings "imply that current lost IRS revenues from the underground economy may not be as large as thought."

In releasing the document, Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Ia., questioned the validity of the higher figures in other studies, saying it is virtually impossible to determine how many people and how much money are involved.

Trucker charged with vehicle theft

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A truck driver who claimed he was tied to a tree for several hours in sub-zero weather while his truckload of hogs was hijacked was charged with theft of the vehicle because "there were some things that just didn't add up," police say.

Raymond L. Curbow, 47, of Nixa, has been charged in a state warrant with stealing a vehicle by deceit, Greene County Assistant Prosecutor Richard Monroe said Thursday.

Curbow was undergoing treatment at a Springfield hospital for ailments not related to exposure to the cold, Missouri Highway Patrol Lt. Ralph Biele said.

Donnie C. Collins, 31, of Nixa, Curbow's son-in-law, was charged in a warrant with felony theft, authorities said. Collins was being held in the Greene County Jail while awaiting his court appearance.

The case will be presented to a federal grand jury because it involved a charge of transportation of stolen property across state lines, said Max Geiman, spokesman for the FBI in Kansas City.

Curbow claimed he was taken hostage Monday night at a rest stop along Interstate 70 in central Missouri by two men and a woman armed with a knife. He said he was driven around in the truck for several hours before being tied to a tree off U.S. 65 north of Sedalia.

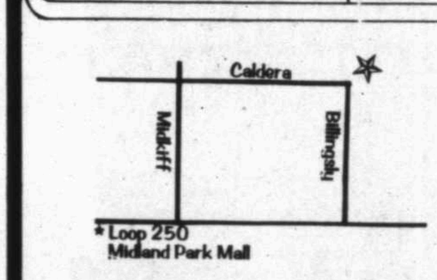

Although Curbow said he was tied to the tree for at least four hours before being freed by a passing motorist, authorities say they now doubt his story.

"After we really got into this, there were some things that just didn't add up," Biele said. "We don't believe that his truck was hijacked, and we don't think he was tied to the tree for very long."

Authorities received a call early Tuesday from someone who gave a location in Pettis County where a man could be found tied to a tree, and they believe the call was made from a truck stop on I-70 near the U.S. 65 interchange.

Before officers got to the scene, Curbow was rescued by the motorist and taken to the sheriff's office. He then was treated at a Sedalia hospital for hypothermia and possible frostbite and transferred to the Springfield facility.

U.S. nuclear missile controversy won't dampen Christmas spirit

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — About 4,000 lonely American soldiers will celebrate Christmas in West German homes in a program that thrives despite the bitter controversy over deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles.

Some host families suggest their desire to share the holiday is a statement of support for the missile deployment in West Germany and elsewhere in western Europe.

"We want to show the Americans that not all Germans are like the Greens, the Communists and the other riff-raff, and to show we support the U.S. presence in Germany," said Heidemarie Mueller, whose family will be host to an American soldier this Christmas for the first time.

The anti-NATO Greens party and the West German Communist Party have been at the forefront of months of protests against stationing 204 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany. The protests have included blockades and marches at a dozen U.S. military installations.

About 4,000 unmarried soldiers throughout the command will be taking part in the program in which local families, working through U.S. military authorities, invite American troops to join them for the holiday.

"THAT IS ABOUT THE same figure we have had for the past few years," said program organizer Claus Dornseiff.

He estimated that another 20,000 to 25,000 soldiers celebrate Christmas with the local population through private contacts not associated with the special Christmas program.

About half of the 220,000 U.S. Army troops in Europe are unmarried, and many of them are spending their first Christmas away from home, Dornseiff said in a telephone interview from the U.S. Army Europe's headquarters in Heidelberg.

Pfc. Neal Kammersgard, 20, of Santa Clara, Calif., is one of five soldiers in his unit, the 21st Replacement Battalion in Frankfurt, taking advantage of the invitations.

"I come from a big family and Christmas has always been something special around our house," Kammersgard said. "I felt left out last year because I heard about the program too late.

"But I'm looking forward to meeting a German family this year. It should be quite fun."

EVEN IN Schwaebisch-Gmuend, about a mile from the south German city of Mutlangen where the first Pershing 2 missiles are being deployed, the Christmas program is a success.

"The town has a U.S. military population of only 1,100 soldiers, and we have more invitations from the Germans than we can fill," said Army spokesman Guenther Schatz.

"The only difference this year is that many families are inviting more than one soldier because they feel the men will relax and enjoy themselves better with a friend," he said.

Schatz said that 65 families had extended Christmas invitations, and that 75 soldiers had signed on for the program. "Some families will just get one soldier, even though they wanted more," he said.

Anne Adams, community relations spokeswoman in Frankfurt, said about 55 U.S. soldiers will be joining German families there for private Christmas celebrations. She said the families and soldiers had already met at a pre-Christmas "warm-up party."

Marie Shaw, public affairs officer at Landstuhl, said 40 soldiers signed up at her office to spend Christmas in German homes.

"THE MAIN THING is that we get them out of the barracks," Ms. Shaw said. "We get a lot of soldiers who sign up on recommendations of others who had good experiences the year before."

Many German families feel Christmas is an ideal time to get to know Americans and show their hospitality.

In nearby Hanau, community relations spokeswoman Beverly James said that 63 German families have invited 80 soldiers to their homes, some for overnight stays. Another 211 Americans, single and married with familes, have been invited by 13 civic clubs in the Hanau area for Christmas parties and dinners, she added.

"About 25 percent of the families extending invitations were couples under 30 years old," Ms. James noted.

"Many of those sending invitations said that they wanted to show their support for the American presence here," she said.

Indians play vital role in fighting government

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Sandinistas' efforts to impose revolutionary rule in the jungles along the nation's Caribbean coast has transformed many of the once-peaceful Indians living there into anti-government militants.

The Miskito, Suma and Rama Indians, who number about 100,000 and populate half of the rugged Atlantic area of Nicaragua, are a world apart from the Spanish-speaking majority in the rest of this Central American country.

Along with Caribbean-oriented and conservative English-speaking blacks, they dominate Nicaragua's east coast which, until a couple of years ago, was unconnected even by a road to the populous Pacific side.

Their isolation — and their quiet existence as farmers and river people — ended with the 1979 overthrow of a U.S.-backed regime by the Sandinista National Liberation Front. The new leftist regime tried to bring the entire nation into the revolutionary process.

There was immediate resentment, which led to government charges that the Atlantic coast Indians were involved in the then-budding counterrevolutionary rebel armies forming in Honduras and Costa Rica.

STARTING IN 1981, whole villages of Indians were rounded up from their traditional riverside dwellings and herded into relocation camps.

Tens of thousands fled north to neighboring Honduras, and many filtered back to Nicaragua to join the anti-government rebels.

When the government sent Cuban advisers to the sleepy, steamy port town of Bluefields, anti-Cuban riots exploded there and troops were brought in to put them down.

Since then at least 20,000 Indians have fled to Honduras and the flow continues.

Violence and dissent has been a part of Nicaraguan life for years, but there had been little of it in the isolated east coast until recently.

BUT MOST TRAFFIC continues to float down the Escondido River on the "Bluefields Express," a riverboat that is a novelist's dream.

It floats leisurely, laden with watermelons, chickens, cases of rum, an odd pig and sometimes a coffin or two, through farmlands, shanty villages and tiny river landings on a five-hour ride that takes a passenger from Latin Central America to the Caribbean shantyworld of Bluefields that could as well be in Jamaica or Haiti.

More than the scenery changes.

On a Sunday night stroll through the unpaved streets of Bluefields, one can still hear Protestant hymns and tinkly pianos.

Commander Lenin Cerna, chief of the Niaragua's state security, during a press conference at the Casa de Gobierno Thursday blamed the C.I.A. for the supposed kidnapping of the American Bishop Salvador Schlaefer. The government claimed that rebels kidnapped Schlaefer. According the the U.S. State Department, Schlaefer was voluntarily leading about 2,500 Miskito Indians away from fighting.

New Congress repeals amnesty law

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The newly elected legislature has repealed the former military government's amnesty law, which had shielded security forces from prosecution for any role in the brutal anti-subversion campaign of the late 1970s.

The 46-member Senate voted unanimously late Thursday to overturn the amnesty law. The 254-member Chamber of Deputies had voted for repeal on Dec. 16.

The repeal is the first law passed by the new Congress since it was constituted after the Dec. 10 inauguration of President Raul Alfonsin. His election ended nearly eight years of military rule.

Local and international human rights groups blame security forces for the abduction, torture and summary execution of more than 6,000 people who disappeared in the years following the March 24, 1976, coup that ousted President Isabel Peron and brought the military to power.

The military had said its campaign, which it called the "dirty war," was needed to end Marxist subversion and terrorism. It virtually wiped out insurgent activity by its end in 1979.

Numerous protests have been mounted to demand information on the fate of those who disappeared. A group called the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo demonstrated regularly, carrying pictures of their lost children.

But the military refused to provide information about the missing, saying only that they were part of the toll from the war against subversion.

On Sept. 23, in anticipation of presidential elections in October, the ruling junta decreed that members of security forces could not be investigated, summoned to appear in court or charged with crimes resulting from their actions against presumed subversives. The amnesty also benefitted a small number of anti-government guerrillas active during the mid-1970s.

The military said the law was necessary in order to achieve national reconciliation.

Alfonsin, a former human rights activist, described the amnesty as "morally unacceptable" and promised during his election campaign to propose its repeal as unconstitutional.

The repeal was the latest in a series of actions the new president has taken to retrieve Argentina from the "public immorality" he has said plagued the country under military rule.

The president has named a panel to investigate the abductions and has ordered the prosecution on torture and murder charges of nine retired generals and admirals who served on the three successive juntas that ruled the country until 1982.

At least five retired generals or admirals, including former President Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, have been indicted by civilian judges in cases involving the disappearance of individuals in the years following the 1976 coup.
