Jury indicts former DA

Monahans attorney, informant face charges

■ Ward County lawyer is charged with misapplying 'reverse-sting' funds, tampering with governmental records.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

MONAHANS — Hal Upchurch, a 46-year-old Monahans lawyer and former Ward County district attorney, and Ronald Ray Tucker, a 44-year-old ex-lawman and Upchurch's one-time undercover informant, were indicted on Thursday by a grand jury in connection with a 'reverse-string' operation in 1989.

Upchurch was charged with misapplying funds from a reverse-sting operation and with tampering with governmental records.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department participated in that operation, but neither Sheriff Gary Painter nor his deputies were indicted or linked to misapplying funds or tampering with governmental records.

"None of us were involved in the indictment at all," Painter said. Painter, a personal friend of Upchurch, said the latest investigation represented "the fourth or fifth grand jury investigation into Upchurch's activities. They have been trying to find something to indict him on."

But Upchurch seemed somewhat relieved that the 1½-year attorney general's investigation into his handling of forfeiture drug funds was over.

"It sounds crazy," Upchurch said following the return of the indictment and his posting of $30,000 in bail, "because as horrible as the (indicting) experience is, my feelings today are of overwhelming relief. It's off dead center ... after 16 months."

Ironically, the indictments stemmed from an investigation that Upchurch said he called for after an auditor uncovered alleged discrepancies in forfeited drug funds handled by Upchurch's district attorney's office in 1989. Upchurch said the audit was flawed.

Upchurch was charged with misapplying $68,750 of Court rejects state appeal on districting

■ Ruling puts March 10 elections on track.

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The U.S. Supreme Court Thursday rejected the state's last-ditch appeal of a federal court-ordered redistricting plan for state Senate seats. The ruling puts a March 10 primary back on track.

Without comment, the Supreme Court denied the state's application for a stay blocking implementation of the court's plan. The state had sought to replace the federal court's plan with one generated in the Legislature.

Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat, expressed disappointment but not surprise about the ruling.

"We were told ... back in the regular session of the Legislature. They said it doesn't make any difference what the Legislature does, the federal court is going to write the plan anyway," the governor said.

Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer said it was "a great day for the citizens of Texas."

"It means we are going to have fair districts at least for the Senate," he said.

The Republicans said the court's plan for the state's 31 senatorial districts of-

City begins to thaw; bitter cold grips U.S.

Associated Press

Although there was a slight warming trend in the Permian Basin, a blast of Arctic air drove temperatures into the teens and below Thursday east of the Rockies and well into the South. Homeless shelters overflowed in Atlanta and many Michigan schools told students to take another day off.

Temperatures plunge to within two degrees of Midland's Jan. 15 record low.

At least 39 deaths have been blamed on snow, ice and cold since Tuesday.

Meanwhile, in Midland temperatures today were expected to reach the mid-40s and overnight lows were predicted to dip into the lower 20s.

Still, that's not as bad as Wednesday night when the low here reached 16 degrees, making it Midland's coldest night of 1992. It also was only two degrees above the all-time low for that date in Midland set in 1957.

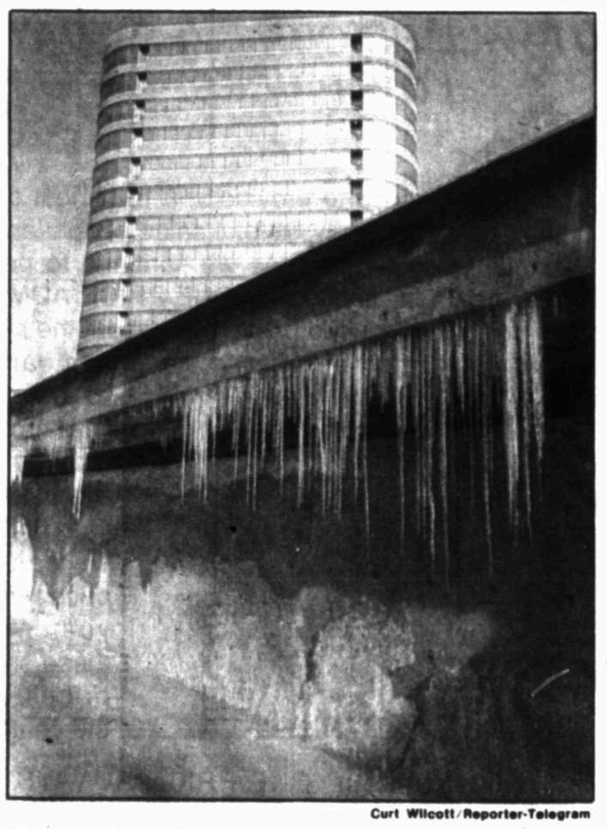

Across most of the nation, cold weather was the norm.

Tempertures ranged from the teens to the lower 30s across Georgia early Thursday, and wind chills made it feel more like 10 or 20 below in areas.

In Atlanta, the Task Force for the Homeless operated a shuttle service to move people from overcrowded shelters to those that still had room, said Joe Houston.

"Thus far we've been able to get everybody off the streets that

Bush's tax-cut plan sets new lines of battle

By David E. Rosenbaum
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The income-tax cut President Bush plans to propose this month would make families with incomes of more than about $50,000 the biggest winners, drawing a new line in his election year battle with the Democrats over who can develop the more attractive tax breaks for the middle class.

The Democrats, in Congress and on the presidential campaign trail, have not found a tax policy they can all support, but most of their proposals aim lower on the income ladder than the president's.

Butch, Sundance Kid clues lead to graves

By Malcolm W. Browne
N.Y. Times News Service

A team of forensic experts and historians has exhumed a pair of skeletons in Bolivia that may be those of two famous American outlaws, Butch Cassidy and "the Sundance Kid."

One of the expedition's members, Dan Buck of Washington, said a trail of documentary clues discovered in various parts of South America led the group last month to a cemetery in San Vicente, Bolivia, a remote mining village where the outlaws supposedly died in a 1907 gun battle.

The scientific leader of the expedition, Dr. Clyde Collins Snow, a forensic anthropologist, has taken the Governor marks first year, worries about school case

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards called her first year in office a success, but marked the anniversary Thursday worrying aloud about the effects of the judge-ordered redistricting plan. The U.S. Supreme Court refused Thursday to block the redistricting plan for the Texas Legislature, giving Republican their best chance in more than a century to win control of the state Senate.

Richards said, "I think there is no question in anyone's mind that the decision was made that would create an atmosphere in Texas that would make it more difficult for Democrats to win office."

Ms. Richards said the plan, ordered by a three-judge federal district court panel, appeared to be a "substitution of government of the few for government of the many."

In some of her toughest talk to date, Richards said the justices should write their own plan.

War anniversary

WASHINGTON — President Bush repeated his call Thursday for the overthrow of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in a message marking the anniversary of the war with Iraq but also aimed at boosting his image as he campaigns for re-election. Poll taps Clinton

WASHINGTON — A new survey shows that Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas has an edge with a very distinct group of voters: members of the Democratic National Committee, who are automatically delegates to the Democratic National Convention. The survey, conducted for National Journal, a Washington magazine, showed that Clinton was prefered by 38 percent of those who responded. Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa was the favorite of 28 percent, and Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska was backed by 18 percent. Former Senator Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts got the backing of 2 percent, and former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California had 1 percent.

BUSH: New details begin to emerge about president's budget package

(From 1A)

Democratic leader, assailed the president's policies in a speech Thursday. But pressed by reporters afterward, he declined to say what specific tax policy he would support.

On the heels of Bush's campaign trip to New Hampshire on Wednesday, the first of the election year and where he tried to find a firmer footing on domestic and economic issues, new details began to emerge about the budget package he will send to Congress Jan. 29.

For example, he plans to propose increasing the personal exemption for a family of four by a total of about $2,000, which would amount to a tax cut of up to $620.

Bush is expected to argue that a tax cut, which would be immediately reflected in withholding tables, would generate additional spending and stimulate the flagging economy. Democratic politicians tend to accept that view.

But most economists, regardless of their politics, say a tax reduction of $1 or $2 a day would do little to help the economy and would be an especially bad idea if it worsened the budget deficit.

Within the administration, moderates like Richard G. Darman, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, and Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady seem to have won out over conservatives like Vice President Dan Quayle and Jack F. Kemp, secretary of housing and urban development, who want much deeper tax cuts and much more costly investment incentives.

"The pro-growth wing of the administration is not very happy about the growth package," said an administration official who considers himself part of the conservative wing. "It's anemic." The official said that bold proposals had been "rejected by the Treasury for green eyeshade reasons."

But another official said Bush believed the conservatives had no real choice but to back him and that he was more concerned about losing the middle class to his Democratic challengers.

Budgets are always political documents, and that maxim is even more true in election years. For Bush, the budget this year is crucial to the image he is trying to sell to the American people.

He clearly hopes to use the budget to make several points to voters: that he is sensitive to how squeezed middle-income Americans feel, that he has a well-formed policy in areas like health and education to which his administration until now has paid relatively little attention and that he recognizes that the collapse of the Soviet Union will allow the United States to spend less on the military.

Democrats have harped on those issues on the campaign trail and in Washington, and the president feels the need to regain the offensive, his staff members say.

With that in mind, say administration officials and their allies in Congress, the president will propose these new measures in his budget:

- A total increase of about $2,000 in the personal exemptions that a family of four could claim on their income tax return. That would mean a tax cut of $300 for families in the 15 percent tax bracket with a total income below about $50,000, a $560 reduction for those in the 28 percent bracket with an adjusted gross income between about $50,000 and about $100,000, and a $620 tax cut for families in the 31 percent bracket with incomes between about $100,000 and $158,000. Only families with incomes below about $15,000 and above about $280,000 would get no help at all.
- Refundable tax credits for poor people and deductions for the middle class to help offset the cost of medical insurance.
- A tax break of several thousand dollars for first-time homebuyers who buy any but the most expensive houses.
- An additional tax incentive for savings by middle-income taxpayers that would actually raise revenue for the government in the first year but would cost money in the years ahead when today's budget rules would not apply.
- A change in depreciation rules to encourage businesses to invest in plants and equipment.
- Rules that would allow people actually in the real estate business to deduct their real estate losses from income earned from other businesses or investments.
- Cuts in military spending of about $30 billion beyond what was previously planned for the next five years.

The Democrats want much bigger reductions in military spending. But otherwise, except for their differences over tax policy, the Democrats differ with the president only in the details.

For example, Mitchell, in his speech at the National Press Club on Thursday, advocated 'a tax credit for business investments, savings incentives and help for first-time homebuyers.

But he called for a $100 billion cut in the military budget over the next five years, and he excoriated what he called the president's "trickle-down" tax policy.

"The American people," said Mitchell, in a line he repeats in almost all his speeches, "know they've been trickled on long enough."

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House press secretary, said Thursday that the president's budget proposals "have essentially been decided upon and completed."

But other officials said three issues still were not settled: how exactly to calculate the increased personal exemption, how much detail to include about medical insurance and how extensively to specify the nature of military spending reductions beyond the next fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

The officials said the personal exemption, now $2,300 per person, could be raised by about $500 a person, or it could be limited to children and raised by about $1,000 each. As a tax matter, personal exemptions are counted the same way as deductions. That means the higher one's tax bracket, the more the exemption is worth.

So an additional $2,000 worth of exemptions for a family of four would be worth less for a family in the 15 percent bracket (taxable incomes below $35,801, which means a total income before deductions of about $50,000) than it would for those in a 28 percent or 31 percent bracket.

Democrats tend to favor tax credits in the range of $300 to $450 for a family. A credit is subtracted directly from the taxes owed and is worth the same to all taxpayers. Most of the Democrats would finance these credits by raising the taxes of people with incomes above about $200,000, a policy Bush rejects.

Bush also plans to renew his perennial proposal for a cut in the tax on capital gains, the profits from the sale of investments. Many Democrats oppose such a tax break on the ground that the richer people are, the more likely they are to have investment profits.

But the White House argues that the economy benefits from encouraging investment through a capital gains tax break, and some Democrats have come around to that view.

Among them are at least three Democratic presidential candidates, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts.

Government, guerrillas sign comprehensive treaty

By Tim Golden
N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — The government of El Salvador and its guerrilla foes signed a comprehensive peace treaty here on Thursday, formally ending a 12-year civil war that turned their tiny Central American nation into the most violent theater of East-West conflict in the hemisphere.

Under the watch of world leaders whose presence reflected the shifting forces that helped bring years of negotiations to a close, the two sides pledged an end not only to the fighting that has left about 75,000 people dead, but also to the hatred that has fed its sometimes unspeakable brutality.

And after so many bitter years of referring to one another as terrorists and torturers, leftist guerrilla commanders and their conservative adversaries seemed on Thursday to find a new term: they called each other compatriots.

"We understand that what begins to happen now in El Salvador is not the re-establishment of a peace that existed before," President Alfredo Cristiani said at the end of a solemn ceremony that left some participants in tears, "but the beginning of a real peace founded on a social consensus."

As late as Wednesday night, senior aides to Cristiani had insisted that he would not sign the peace treaty himself. But after his six negotiators, the five top guerrilla commanders and their five negotiators had all carefully put their names to the bound documents in an ornate hall in Chapultepec Castle, the treaties were carried up to the podium where Cristiani sat with nine other heads of state. As the room filled with applause, he signed as well.

Then, upon finishing his speech, the 44-year-old son of El Salvador's wealthy, conservative elite — a graduate of Georgetown University and an old ally of the extremist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson — walked down from the podium. And for the first time, he shook hands with the guerrilla leaders who had fought tirelessly for his overthrow.

Under the final treaty made public on Thursday, a formal cease-fire is to begin on Feb. 1 and continue under international supervision until the rebel military force is fully dismantled nine months later.

During that time, elaborate measures are to pave the guerrillas' return to legal politics. The government will also begin a drastic reduction in the size and political influence of its armed forces, which have grown with more than $1 billion in United States military aid into perhaps the most powerful institution in the country.

In return for the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front's promise to lay down its arms, the government also agreed to other changes meant to address some of the social and economic inequities that were at the war's root. These range from consumer-protection policies to government purchases of land for peasants in zones dominated by the rebels.

"The agreements that we have signed contain the design of the new country that we Salvadorans wish for, of the life that we Salvadorans want to live," said Schafik Jorge Handal, an elderly communist guerrilla commander who began fighting against successive military dictators as a teen-ager.

Even in the ornate confines of Chapultepec Castle, where the ceremony was held, the ebullience seemed weighted by a recognition that the tortuous bargaining that produced the accords might prove easy compared with their implementation.

Already on Wednesday night, the members of a multiparty peace commission responsible for sorting out many details of the accords were locked in a dispute over the breadth of an amnesty by which the rebels would be ushered back into institutional politics.

Israelis leave bringing peace talks to close

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Israeli negotiators left Washington on Thursday, bringing to a close the third round of Arab-Israeli peace talks, where there was scant progress on substance and no agreement between the parties as to where or when to meet again.

In the last four days of talks in Washington, Israelis, Jordanians, and Palestinians finally overcame all of their procedural disputes over the shape of the table for their negotiations, but they failed to agree on an agenda for future discussions. There was no movement at all in the Israeli-Syrian and Israeli-Lebanese negotiations, which continued to wander aimlessly.

The most significant development of the week was that the Palestinians, for the first time ever, presented the Israelis on Wednesday with a plan for Palestinian autonomy, or self-rule, in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The plan was fully approved by the Palestine Liberation Organization, headed by Yasser Arafat.

Ever since the Camp David peace negotiations at the end of the 1970s, when the idea of Palestinian autonomy in the territories was first suggested as an interim solution, the PLO and the Palestinians have rejected such a formula, insisting on full independence. As a condition for taking part in these American-sponsored negotiations, though, the Palestinians had to accept autonomy as a five-year transition arrangement, before any final settlement.

The self-rule plan that the Palestinians submitted was tantamount to full independence, and therefore rejected by the Israelis, but the Israelis did agree to treat it as an opening bargaining position — once they and the Palestinians can agree on an overall agenda. That could take months.

The Israelis, for their part, were unable to present their own autonomy plan because of turmoil in the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Shamir appeared to lose his parliamentary majority on Thursday when another of his hardline coalition partners announced it was pulling out of his government to prevent it from offering self-rule to the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza.

It is not clear how the political situation in Israel will be resolved — whether with new elections or with a caretaker or national unity government.

Japanese premier begins Seoul visit

SEOUL, South Korea (NYT) — Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa of Japan arrived here Thursday on his first overseas trip since taking office, flying into a storm of indignation over the Japanese army's role in forcing Korean women to have sex with Japanese soldiers during World War II.

The main items on Miyazawa's agenda in talks with President Roh Tae-woo are Japan's trade surplus with Seoul and their joint approach to ending the confrontation between North and South Korea, South Korean officials said.

But Miyazawa's arrival coincided with revelations about Korea's "comfort girls," women who were forced to have sex with Japanese troops during the war. Japan was the colonial power in Korea from 1910 to 1945.

Small groups of mostly elderly protesters held demonstrations in Seoul as Miyazawa arrived, calling for an apology from the prime minister for the treatment of the women and for compensation from the Japanese government. Recent newspaper reports here say that school records showed that girls as young as 12 were involved.

At a dinner given by Roh Thursday, Miyazawa told his host: "We Japanese should first and foremost recall the truth of that tragic period when Japanese actions inflicted suffering and sorrow upon your people. We should never forget our feelings of remorse over this.

"As prime minister of Japan, I would like to declare anew my remorse at these deeds and tender my apology to the people of the Republic of Korea."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect clouds, low 40s today

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high between 40 to 45 degrees and north to northeast winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be decreasingly cloudy with a low in the lower 20s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be sunny with a high in the mid 40s.

After an overnight low of 16, Thursday's high reached 43 compared to the record high for that date of 79 set in 1971. The record low for that date is 14 set in 1957.

STATE

Sunshine returned Thursday to much of North Texas and West Texas in the wake of a cold front that brought snow and bone-chilling temperatures to North and West Texas.

However, a mixture of ice pellets, rain and snow pelted parts of South Texas from Laredo to Alice to Corpus Christi. The snow was heavy enough to collect on cars and enough to make a snowballs. Skies remained cloudy but no significant accumulation of precipitation was expected.

Southerly breezes returned to the state, building more cloudiness into North Texas that could result in freezing precipitation when another cold front arrives by the weekend, forecasters said.

High temperatures Thursday peaked in the mid-30s to near 60, with the warmer readings in Northwest Texas.

The North Texas forecast was for cloudy skies and lower temperatures through Saturday with a chance of rain, freezing rain, sleet and snow. High temperatures today were expected to range from 35 to 42 degrees with lows 24 to 28. Highs Saturday were to be 33 to 45.

NATION

Snow, strong wind and bitter cold gripped much of the nation east of the Rockies on Thursday. Temperatures dipped into the teens and below in parts of the South.

At midday, snow was falling in parts of New York state, western Pennsylvania, western Michigan, northern and central Minnesota, central and western Montana. Snow changed to freezing rain over west and central Montana, and rain was scattered over the Pacific Northwest.

The mercury fell to 4 in Gilbert, Ark, breaking the record for the date. Shreveport, La., tied a record with 17. Temperatures ranged from the teens to the lower 30s across Georgia.

Freeze warnings were posted for Thursday night in central Florida.

Wind chills in northern Maine ranged from minus 35 to minus 45 degrees.

As temperatures fell, business picked up for furnace repairmen in towns such as Parkersburg, W.Va. "Today we're getting flooded with calls," said Ed Kanitz, service manager for Steers Heating and Cooling.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

INDICT: Attorney is charged with misapplying funds

$275,000 in funds seized in a reverse-sting marijuana operation in Grayson and Ward counties in September 1989 and with tampering with government records by only reporting $206,200 of the $275,000 in seized funds.

The government charges that Upchurch and Tucker took $68,750 off the top of the $275,000 paid by Jeff Cahill, buyer of the marijuana in the sting operation, said Assistant Attorney General Shane Phelps who headed up the probe.

The $68,750 represents the informant's customary 25 percent fee of any transaction, here, $275,000.

Instead of turning the whole $68,750 over to the informant, Tucker is accused of splitting the fee with the informant in that Grayson County case, Phelps said. The indictment charges Tucker with theft of $34,375.

The indictment also charges Upchurch with making a false entry in governmental records by reporting only $206,200 for forfeiture proceedings by Judge Bob Parks of the 143rd Texas State District Court for Ward, Loving and Reeves counties.

By law, Phelps said, the informant is to be paid after drug funds have been forfeited in court and to allow the once-owner of those funds, Cahill, a chance to reclaim his drug money.

Tucker, a former Midland County deputy sheriff and a specialist in undercover sting operations, said Thursday he would be "glad to make a statement" on the indictment once he has talked to a lawyer.

At time of the 1989 incident, Tucker said he was an informant — not a peace officer — and therefore could not have violated any fiduciary trust as alleged in the indictment.

In Judge Parks' order following forfeiture of the $206,200, he ruled that the money be split in three $68,750 payments to the Grayson County Sheriff's Department in Sherman, to the Midland County Sheriff's Department, and to the District Attorney (Upchurch) of the 143rd Judicial District.

Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, who, along with the four other members of the Commissioners' Court, has tried to curtail Painter's out-of-county investigations, said he was saddened by Upchurch's indictment.

"I regret that a brother lawyer, former prosecutor and district attorney has been indicted on the allegations of misapplication of fiduciary property and tampering with government records," Seltzer said Thursday night. "My heart goes out to Mr. Upchurch and his family."

"However," Seltzer said, "this indictment tends to emphasize and reiterate one of the Commissioners' Court's concerns regarding reverse stings in general and the participation of the Midland County Sheriff's Office in these type of high-risk activities."

Seltzer said the Commissioners' Court was concerned about "possible liability that Midland County and the taxpayers of Midland County were being exposed to" and potential abuses in the operations.

"While Midland County sheriff's deputies were participating in these reverse stings, most of which occurred outside Midland County and some of which occurred in other states (Indiana, Illinois Oklahoma), those deputies were being paid from the (Midland County) General Fund," Seltzer said.

"In our (Commissioners' Court's) opinion, this constituted two types of abuse: First, when deputies are being utilized outside of Midland County, they cannot be enforcing the law in Midland County. Accordingly, the residents of Midland County are being denied the protection of those deputies, who are being paid and supported by local taxes. Second, when these out-of-county operations are being conducted, it means the taxpayers of Midland County are subsidizing law enforcement in other counties and, in some situations, other states."

Painter countered Seltzer's accusations.

"There's no case in Midland County that was overlooked or ignored while these operations were going on," Painter said. "'Bro' is trying to make it sound like everybody left the county, and that never occurred."

Painter, sheriff since 1985, launched reverse stings in 1987.

"Sometimes these deals (operations) took from two to five days, maybe," Painter said. "You might have one (deputy) or three or four. But at no times were the citizens of Midland County left unprotected. Patrol itself was never affected. We always had patrolmen on the streets, and we always had investigators to handle any situation."

All told, the sheriff has conducted fewer than 20 reverse stings, Painter said.

RICHARDS: Governor cites accomplishments

lic school education, they should have the guts to prescribe specifically what they believe has to be done so that we don't go through this charade any more," the governor said.

Because school tax payments are due Jan. 31, Richards said, rejection of the latest finance law by the high court could result in chaos.

"The schools of the state of Texas will close, and there is no way the state of Texas, the Legislature or anyone can act in time to keep that from happening," she said.

"The school districts are really hamstrung. . . . And the ones really being hurt by it are the children," she said.

But on other issues, Richards said, she is proud of accomplishments made since she was sworn into the state's highest office on Jan. 15, 1991.

Among them, she cited:

- Passage of tougher environmental protection laws.
- Building 25,000 new prison beds, including some 12,000 for drug and alcohol treatment.
- Cleaning up of what she called a scandal-ridden state Commerce Department.
- Overhauling the State Board of Insurance, which Richards said now "represents the people for a change instead of the industry."
- Closing of some unscrupulous nursing homes.
- Progress in reorganizing the state bureaucracy.

The governor said she also is happy with a new state ethics law, although some citizen watchdog groups have complained.

RULING: Court puts March 10 elections on track

fers more election opportunities for minorities. But Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, disagreed, saying, "This is an example of Republicans riding the backs of minorities — for the sake of Republicans." The five minority members in the Senate are Democrats.

James Harrington, an attorney for Hispanic plaintiffs who helped design the Legislature's plan, said the court plan is inferior. "It shows the way in which the Reagan-Bush courts can pervert the Voting Rights Act and stand it on it's head," he said.

Texas will be the most populous state to participate in the Super Tuesday presidential preference primary on the same day. The election can proceed now that the districting question is settled.

Attorney General Dan Morales said the state has no option but to conduct primary elections under the court's plan. But he added that the Legislature's plan for the Senate will be in effect for 1994 and beyond unless the Legislature makes revisions during the next regular session in 1993.

He did not discuss the possibility of the Republican Party challenging the plan again.

Democratic Party Chairman Ed Martin said there is at least some chance that the Senate districts could change between the primary and the November general election this year.

The Democrats seem to be pinning this hope on making a case that U.S. District Judge James Nowlin in Austin had improper assistance from a legislator in drawing the Senate boundaries. Affidavits making that allegation were submitted to the Supreme Court on Tuesday, but the court did not take up the matter.

Morales said he is continuing his investigation of whether San Antonio Rep. George Pierce assisted Nowlin's clerks in designing the plan that the three-judge federal panel handed down Dec. 24. Nowlin has declined to discuss the matter. Pierce denied having influenced the plan.

Such secret assistance could be cause for another federal court to overturn the plan and remove Nowlin from the case. Then, the Democrat scenario goes, another three-judge panel might impose the legislative plan for the general election.

"It's obvious Nowlin shouldn't remain on this case. If the people of Texas are going to be served, we need to find a judicial tribunal who will rule on the merits of this case," Martin said.

Analysts said the Legislature's plan would have assured a strong Democratic majority. Currently there are nine Republicans and 22 Democrats in the 31-member Senate.

Meyer said the court plan gives Republicans a shot at winning a majority of Senate seats. However, the Republicans have not fielded candidates in every Senate district they have a chance of winning, perhaps because of uncertainty about which plan would be in effect.

BANDITS: Forensic experts exhume 2 skeletons skeletons to his laboratory in Norman, Okla., where he plans to subject them to the same analytical techniques he and other scientists used in identifying the skull of the Nazi concentration camp doctor Josef Mengele.

The lives of Butch Cassidy and the "Sundance Kid" were portrayed romantically in a movie starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford, but the real careers of the outlaws are shrouded in mystery.

The two bandits, whose real names were Robert LeRoy Parker and Harry Longbaugh, carried out so many successful bank and railroad robberies in the late 1800s that large rewards were offered for their capture. Hotly pursued by Pinkerton agents, they fled the United States in 1901 with Longbaugh's mistress, Etta Place.

After arriving in Buenos Aires, the trio began robbing banks and trains all across South America, but at some point, their documented histories faded away into romantic legend. According to one theory, they returned to the United States and lived happily ever after.

But other evidence suggests that Parker and Longbaugh fought a final battle in 1907 with Bolivian police at San Vicente near Tupiza and were buried in unmarked graves in a mining cemetery, the one visited last month by Snow and his colleagues.

The historians of the group, Dan Buck and his wife, Anne Meadows, combed through documents of an old mining company, consulates and police departments in Bolivia, Chile and other countries, and the clues pointed to the cemetery in San Vicente, Buck said.

Buck, who is administrative assistant to Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., formerly served with the Peace Corps in Bolivia, where he began to gather information about the outlaws.

Buck said that witnesses to the 1907 gun battle had died, but that the son of one of them was able to identify not only the house where the two Americans died but the graves where they were buried. The team dug nine feet deep at the first of these sites and found a coffin containing the remains of the larger man, a man Snow believes to be the Sundance Kid. To avoid disturbing graves at shallower depths, the group then tunneled at the nine-foot depth in several directions and found the other set of bones.

Both skeletons, Snow has determined, are those of caucasians, not Indians. The cemetery contains mostly the bodies of Indian silver and lead mine workers, with a few European mine administrators interred among them.

Snow has determined that one of the skulls he disinterred has entry and exit holes from a bullet that passed through the temples, and the other has a smashed forehead, consistent with the head-on impact of a projectile. This evidence, he said, would tally with an account that both outlaws were badly wounded in a shootout after their robbery of the mine payroll, and that realizing they were lost, Cassidy shot the Kid and committed suicide.

Members of the expedition said in interviews that positive identification of the bodies, if at all possible, would take months. One of the techniques to be applied will be photo superimposition, in which the two skulls will be reconstructed and photographed from the same angles and distances at which the bandit's faces were photographed while they were alive.

Snow is known for his work on human rights abuses, particularly the identification of victims of political executions in Argentina and elsewhere in Latin America.

He and his colleagues hope to extract DNA from the San Vicente bones for comparison with possible remnants of hair or other material from the bandits. "We can't yet be sure what we've got," he said, "but I really believe we've got Butch and the Kid."

COLD: Shelters overflow

(From 1A)

wanted to," Houston said.

Shreveport, La., tied a record for the date with a high of 17 degrees. Gilbert, Ark., broke a record with a low of 4.

In Florida, some citrus and strawberry growers irrigated their crops to protect them from expected low temperatures in the upper 20s and low 30s.

"Our danger signal comes on when it gets 27 degrees or lower for four hours or more," said Mary Hartney, spokeswoman for Florida Citrus Mutual. "That is when we start seeing damage. We are not getting predictions of anything like that at this point."

Sixty-two Michigan school districts remained closed because of hazardous driving conditions, and crews were having a tough time keeping roads clear in the Detroit area, angering some stranded by the weather.

"People are very inconsiderate," said Irma Clark, a spokeswoman for Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara. "They think you can wave a magic wand and the snow is gone automatically. But with the wind and the snow, as soon as we plow over one lane, the next lane is blown over."

A storm dumped up to 8 inches of snow in Pennsylvania, closing schools and slowing morning rush-hour traffic in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Wind gusted to 50 mph in some areas.

A 52-year-old woman was found dead in her back yard in Anderson, Ind., on Wednesday. Authorities believe she was trying to feed or walk her dog. A dog chain was wrapped partly around her legs.

"It appeared she became tangled in the chain and was unable to free herself. It looked like she succumbed to exposure," Detective Rodney Cummings said.

Temperatures hovering near zero kept many people off the slopes at Canaan Valley Ski Resort near Davis, W.Va., spokeswoman Helen Arbogast said.

"It's real cold and the wind's blowing. We haven't sold too many tickets," she said.

Snowblower sales were skyrocketing at Reynolds Farm Equipment in Fishers, Ind. "These last couple of days we've sold more snow equipment than in the last couple of years," sales representative Jim Graham said.

Business picked up for furnace repairmen in towns such as Parkersburg, W.Va. "Today we're getting flooded with calls," said Ed Kanitz, service manager for Steers Heating and Cooling.

Plumbers including Bernard Mossow in Massena, N.Y., were busy repairing frozen or burst pipes.

"He was up before dawn and I don't expect I'll see him until late tonight," said his wife, Mary.

Yeltsin stands tough on economic reform

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Boris N. Yeltsin of Russia, fresh from encounters with angry shoppers during a tour of the country, vowed Thursday to continue his painful economic reform despite vocal opposition, and to crack down hard against the "mafia-type structures" that are trying to drag it off course.

In a report to the Russian Parliament, Yeltsin praised Russians for their patience and faith as they adjust to prices that have tripled and more since Jan. 2. But he warned, "The reform is still not irreversible, and is easily interrupted."

As leaders of other republics that make up the newly formed Commonwealth of Independent States gathered Thursday night for a meeting in Moscow, some complained that a lack of coordinated policy has endangered the reforms, reluctantly adopted across the former Soviet Union at Russia's lead.

"Each republic has begun to act on its own and has been putting up barriers in the way of traffic of goods and establishing various quotas and licenses," the Kazakhstan president, Nursultan A. Nazarbayev, told the news agency Interfax at the start of a meeting expected to focus on military matters.

Yeltsin, who returned Thursday night from a trip to St. Petersburg, complained that in some places, the local authorities were not enforcing new economic policies. He called for more vigorous intervention by law enforcement and a crackdown on trading monopolies that have conspired to fix prices and manipulate supplies.

"The market is being set up in difficult conditions," he said, listing an economic crisis, the collapse of the Soviet Union and the resistance of "mafia-like structures striving to keep their dominance in distribution, open sabotage and ideological opposition."

Nonetheless, he said, he concluded from his trips around the country that people still have faith in their government. A poll taken before his trip to St. Petersburg, and published Thursday in the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda showed that 40 percent of those surveyed in the city supported Yeltsin's policies, while 34 percent said they did not totally agree.

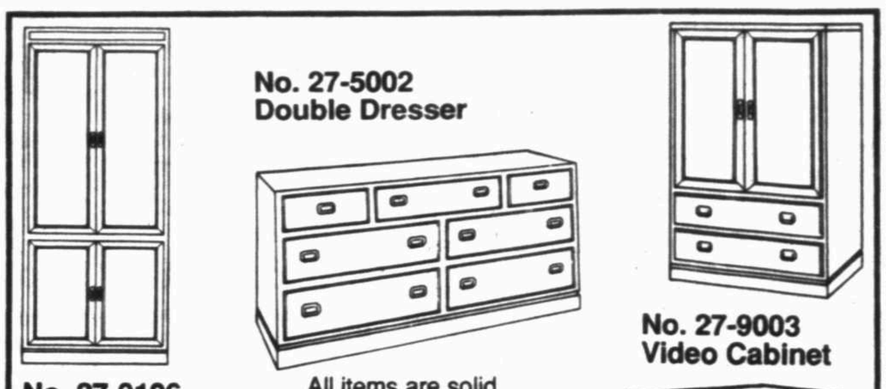

He was also critical of the slow pace of privatization, and called for a full-scale program that by the end of 1992 would put more than 70 percent of shops, restaurants and "trade centers" in private hands.

Yeltsin's program of shock therapy has come under attack from former allies, notably his vice president, Aleksandr Rutskoi, and the chairman of the Russian Parliament, Ruslan Khasbulatov. But several members of Parliament said Thursday that the criticism was not likely to force the government to back away from its course, or to resign, as Khasbulatov has called upon it to do.

"It is part of a normal process," said Yuri Zaitsev, a Moscow deputy.

Peace dividend may save streets

Maybe it was a result of the nation having been dulled by the never-ending violence and crime on our streets, but few trumpets were blown when U.S. Attorney William Barr recently announced that 300 FBI agents would confront street gangs in 39 cities. The agents are being redeployed from their counterespionage role in the Cold War.

Barr was highly optimistic, saying the agents had the "capacity to take out a criminal gang in one fell swoop." He predicted the FBI would produce some "knockout blows" against gangs.

That is a very powerful assessment, given the history of crime, drugs and gang violence in so many of our big cities. We hope, however, that it is not wishful thinking.

There is reason for optimism. A combination of federal, state and local programs are now in place to loosen the hammer-lock that gangs have held on areas in Los Angeles, New York, Washington, D.C., Detroit and elsewhere. They certainly now have the physical force to bring some semblance of security to threatened neighborhoods.

History, however, tells another story. When one gang has been decimated in the past by authorities, a new group has arisen to take its place. There is so much money involved in drugs and crime that, despite all counter-efforts, terrorists still stalk the streets killing innocent men, women and even children in their murderous gunfire.

There is reason to believe that the large new FBI thrust will do some good. But the real solution to terror involves communities themselves — average citizens — who must be in the forefront of taking back the streets from the gangs.

Perhaps, with FBI help, they will be able to do so in some neighborhoods. We certainly hope so. However, it must never be forgotten that this is a war and wars are usually not won easily.

We support this new crusade and hope it is successful. It is good to see an important "peace dividend" on our streets.

Plan has side benefit

Midland has always been a most caring, sharing community. Midlanders' prorata share of support for the United Way campaign, the arts, special needs, our churches, etcetera, is among the highest in the nation. We are fortunate to have such an abundance of citizens on all levels of incomes who believe in generous financial and volunteer assistance.

The "extras" that have tipped the scales for Midland's success in economic endeavors during the past three years have been (1) this high level of support from private financial resources, (2) our bargain-priced physical facilities and (3) a city council and chambers committed to the city's economic growth. This combination was the deciding factor for the relocation to Midland of Fuel Harvesters, Isotrol, Jacobs Electronics and even the CAF!

Bargain-priced real estate is a limited resource; there are only a very few vacant buildings left in our area that are large enough to attract even a small manufacturer. While this is fortunate in that it indicates a strengthening economy, it is unfortunate because it takes away an effective recruiting tool.

Private financial support is also a limited resource. Those of us who pledged Forward Midland and donated funds for the CAF relocation will certainly continue to support the community.

However, if everyone who benefits from a stable, growing business environment in Midland would assume the responsibility for financing economic growth through the proposed ¼-cent sales tax increase, private financial resources previously used could be diverted for additional support in other important areas — museums, health services, MCT, High Sky Children's Ranch, M.A.R.C., Symphony, etc.

A recent letter stated that a golden opportunity to attract potential industries was missed during the recent CAF Airshow and grand opening. I am concerned this writer did not realize that the relocation of the CAF itself was a powerful testament of what Midland has to offer — a private citizenry that most generously supports the community, a local government committed to a viable, strong economy and a wonderful quality of life. Please vote "yes" Saturday and help keep it this way!

Check mining towns

Midland is a mining town — 20 percent of all people employed here are employed by oil and gas operations. Retail and professional jobs, even jobs in schools, hospitals and local government are dependent on oil and gas.

What happens to mining towns? One only needs to look at the ghost towns of Nevada and Arizona. When the resource is gone, jobs disappear, real estate has little value — there is a lot of human misery. Nationally 17 percent of all people are employed in manufacturing. In Texas it is 14 percent, in Midland it is a meager 5.5 percent.

Manufacturing companies are needed to provide the jobs and revenue the Midland economy needs to survive. Our oil and gas resources are depleting, exploration is moving overseas. Without aggressive economic development efforts now, Midland is destined to become just another "old mining town." Vote FOR economic development on Jan. 18.

Where is old money?

As I understand the campaign for the ¼-cent sales tax, this will save Midland from extinction! My question then is what happened to the 1-cent sales tax we voted in some years ago?

The figures I have read say $2 million will be generated from the "new" ¼-cent tax; if this figure is real, then Midland should have $8 million a year from the "old" tax to attract new industry. I would like someone to explain where that money is currently being used!

Statements mislead voters

The days of bringing a manufacturer to town, wining and dining him, telling how much he is going to love living in Midland, and then expecting him to rush in and build his new plant here are over.

Proposed in the election Saturday is a conservative, modern economic development program, already adopted by 52 towns. Unfortunately, a few individuals continue to express mistaken views about existing organizations and the proposed program.

Edna Walger of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse (CATA) stated the city generously funds the chamber of commerce with the hotel-motel tax revenues and therefore the chmaber should take care of economic development. Hotel-motel funds pay for Midland Center and the Convention and Visitors Bureau and are strictly prohibited by law from being used for economic development. The chamber and Forward Midland do not have the funds necessary for economic development.

Mrs. Walger also states that the council plans to give the funds to Forward Midland. Under the law, there is no way these funds can be given to Forward Midland. They must be administered by the unpaid five-member board, appointed or removed by the city council.

Alan Boyd has asked if other means of raising funds have been considered. The industrial foundation, chamber, and Forward Midland have all sought funds for economic development for years.

Wayne Woodside states, as do most CATA members, that he agrees that we need economic development, but he won't vote for it because there is no "sunset" provision. Ten percent of the electorate can at any time force an election to "sunset" the program. This is the same procedure that was used in a recent election. In addition, four members of the city council can at any time call a "sunset" election on their own or at the request of the public. A "sunset" provision written into the corporation charter would automatically and permanently stop the program.

Scott Davis asks if we have something to hide by not discussing the Lubbock election. We do not. Their election provides that property taxes would be lowered by an amount equal to ⅛-cent sales tax increase. But the election is for ½-cent increase and ⅜-cent, or 50 percent more than in Midland, will go for economic development.

A few people are making misinformed statements. This is creating confusion when the citizens need to be able to clearly understand an issue vital to the future of our city. I, and many others, fully support the program and encourage everyone to vote "YES" on Saturday.

Carroll M. Thomas
Mayor
Midland

City council controls funds

Citizens have expressed concern about who will control the funds raised by the ¼-cent sales tax for economic development. Funds will be controlled by a five-member non-paid volunteer board appointed by and accountable to the city council. These people will provide special insight to the council regarding economic development and the financing of land, buildings, equipment, training facilities and utilities to industrial sites.

Some people argue this should not be delegated to such a board. I know how busy volunteer council members are dealing with city operations including police, fire, airport, sanitation, sewer and water, planning and zoning, personnel, parks and recreation and a host of other issues. A special board will be able to devote more time and energy to a job crucial to our city's future — economic diversification and job creation. We also can make appointments which will bring a wealth of private-sector expertise to this board.

Some people have argued that the appointments to the board should have been made in advance of the election. This was considered, but we wanted people to become familiar with the issue and we wanted to receive the names of people from throughout the community who are interested in serving. Additionally, we wanted this to be an election on a sales tax for economic development, not a popularity contest on board members.

The council retains strong control over the board. If four members of the council choose to do so, an election can be called to rescind the sales tax. We can appoint and remove members of the five-member board at will. We will require an annual audit, council approval of all policies and establish other forms of oversight authority.

I am confident that Texas law and council policy controls will ensure legal and ethical use of funds. I am pleased board members can be appointed to bring the time, expertise and energy to oversee the operations.

I strongly support the sales tax, not because I like tax increases, but because it will raise the funds we need to compete in creating jobs and diversifying our economy.

It's time for action, not talk

Since moving to Midland in 1976, I have seen the "boom," the "bust," and even occasional periods of economic stability. Through it all, one thing was constant — a lot of talk about the need to diversify our economy. Finally, we have a plan to actually do something about this problem and, more importantly, a plan to provide us the necessary funds to get something done. I am in favor of the proposed ¼-cent sales tax for economic development because without it, there would just be more talk.

I also favor diversification by attracting or developing manufacturing businesses. I am an accountant for one of the manufacturing companies which recently moved to Midland from California. This company has a substantial investment in plant and equipment which provides a badly-needed boost to our tax base. Also, we don't just employ welders and machinists. We also employ engineers, bookkeepers, salesmen, draftsmen, secretaries and technicians. We require legal services, banking services, printing services, advertising services, etc., and this obviously creates jobs in those businesses as well.

Manufacturers not only provide jobs, they provide many types of jobs — the types of jobs Midland wants. Let's vote for the tax increase and get these jobs created.

Barry Barton
Midland

Development will help all

What's in it for me? Why should I vote for economic development? I'm not in manufacturing — I'm a businessman, I'm an independent oil and gas operator, I work for a major oil company, I'm retired, or I work for a government entity. These are comments I hear most often from Midlanders with jobs.

Here are a few reasons why voters should support the ¼-cent sales tax for economic development:

Since 1986, the city's property tax base has decreased $1 billion, or almost 30 percent. As a result, we have raised taxes and fees, but we have also reduced many services — police and fire protection, senior citizens services, street repair, alley maintenance, and many others for which I receive numerous complaints.

If we are successful in creating new jobs, turning our economy around, and recovering the lost tax base, in the long run everyone will benefit. The property tax burden will prosper because more people will have money in their pockets. The city will be able to provide better services to its citizens. Midland Independent School District (MISD) will be able to pay teachers more and improve education. Memorial hospital will have fewer indigents because there will be more jobs. More importantly, there will be good-paying jobs for our children.

There are, however, no guarantees. If our pioneering families had demanded economic guarantees and absolute plans, Midland would not exist today. If our petroleum pioneers had demanded "sunset clauses" or quit after the first few dryholes, Midland would not have become a great leader in the petroleum industry.

Midlanders have always had great vision for the future. I am proud to be a member of Midlanders for Economic Opportunity. We do have a vision for economic development, we do have a definite plan for significant job creation, and we are positive about Midland's potential economic future.

Economically, Midland can grow or it can die. The petroleum industry has been great for many years, but it will not last forever. We must diversify and expand our economy now.

Please help us do something for Midland. Vote FOR economic development — for the future of Midland.

Midland, Lubbock differ

On Sunday, Jan. 12th, H. Scott Davis wrote a letter expressing concern that "the promoters of the sales tax increase in Midland do not wish to inform the voters of the property tax relief being offered by the City of Lubbock in return for the increase in sales tax. Maybe they have something to hide."

I have been in meetings regarding the Midland proposal. The Lubbock situation is very complex, but here it is.

In 1925, the Lubbock City Charter was amended creating a Board of City Development. The board and other city economic development efforts in Lubbock receive $1.4 million per year.

In the current election, voters in Lubbock are considering two propositions. In the first, the City of Lubbock is calling a sales tax election for a total of ½-cent. Of this ⅛-cent would be dedicated to a reduction in the current ad valorem rate. One eighth-cent in sales tax will yield approximately $2 million annually, which would be used to reduce the current ad valorem tax rate by a minimum of four cents. It is also proposed that the citizens approve a ⅜-cent sales tax for economic development, yielding approximately $6 million annually. In a second proposition, voters are asked to determine whether or not the Charter amendment of 1925 which authorizes the City Board of Development and allocates ad valorem taxes for its operation should be repealed. If repealed, the city can reduce ad valorem taxes an additional 3 cents. There are four possible outcomes for funding economic development in Lubbock — the current $1.4 million, $6 million, $7.4 million or nothing.

Midland and Lubbock differ substantially in their approaches to economic development. Historically, Midland has been providing less than $300,000 for economic development; Lubbock, $1.4 million. Midland is proposing ¼-cent which will yield $2 million. Lubbock proposes to add ⅜-cent which will yield $6 million. Lubbock can afford to rollback taxes, they are seeking a higher amount.

It takes money to compete and attract industry. Midland's approach is conservative. Texas law and local policy provide many important controls. Let me assure you no one is trying to hide anything. Many honorable people have spent hundreds of hours trying to develop a competitive strategy to diversify our economy and create jobs for the benefit of all Midlanders.

Tax will help Midland youth

I recently came back home to Midland for the holidays and learned about the proposed ¼-cent sales tax for economic development. It is this issue that inspired me to write and explain of how I was forced to unwillingly leave Midland.

Born and raised in Midland, I was educated through the Midland public schools system, and was convinced that I needed to have a college education to be able to obtain a good job. Subsequently, I entered Midland College and then went on to receive a bachelors degree in accounting from the University of Texas at Austin. I came back to Midland in search of that good job that had been promised to me. I interviewed for positions with Midland companies who had openings for accountants, no experience required. I later learned those positions were going to unemployed accountants with experience, displaced by the oil industry. After more than a year of searching I concluded that the Midland job market was such that I was not going to find this good job in Midland.

I felt betrayed but not discouraged. I moved to Dallas and in a matter of days I finally landed the good job that once had been promised. For a long time I felt my situation of not finding a job in Midland was a unique experience. I held this belief until this past summer when I returned for my 10-year high school reunion and found that a number of classmates had found themselves in the same predicament. They too had returned home to Midland with their college degrees and the illusion of finding those good jobs, only to find that the doors were closed. They also moved from Midland. Oddly enough several of us still have a desire to come back home to Midland sometime in the future.

The bottom line here, Midlanders, is that you are losing it! You will continue to lose it! I feel I have every right to impose some of my wisdom on the citizens of Midland and advise you to pass this ¼-cent sales tax so that you may attract some of these GOOD JOBS that were promised to us.

Accountants (bean counters as you like to call us), are known for being ultra conservative, and I am, but I'll bet all my beans you're still promising these non-existing GOOD JOBS to Midland's youth.

Ray Diaz

Economic plan has flaws

There can be no doubt that the idea of encouraging new businesses to locate and develop in Midland is deserving of the support of all Midlanders. The approval of the ¼-cent sales tax increase would be a small price to pay IF the program would be successful. My feeling at this time is that a vote FOR this increase in sales tax would be wrong for several reasons.

1. The city council is to appoint a board to control the expenditure of this amount, approximately $2 million a year. The taxpayers will be told later how the money was, is being or is to be spent.

2. There are some proposals to use part of the money to help struggling local businesses. Is this not a function of our banks?

3. The purpose of our chamber of commerce is to extol the benefits ov living and working in Midland. Maybe they should handle the expenditure of this money with strict accounting of its use to the city council on an annual basis, thereby allowing the program to be changed based on its success or the taxes stopped altogether based on its failure.

Every Midlander should give this taxation proposal strong consideration and make every effort to vote on Jan. 18th.

Vote no to boondoggle

I am fed up with the debate over the proposed sales tax increase. Let's all wake up, end the debate and vote NO for this boondoggle. The mission of government is not the promotion of economic development nor the offering of incentives for job creation. Those who claim otherwise have bankrupted our nation through entitlement and subsidy programs funded by confiscatory taxes.

Instead, it is incumbent upon government that it take no action which creates an incentive nor a disincentive for any type of legitimate economic activity. The best way to encourage investment in Midland is to make sure our local economic environment does not diminish the expected return on that investment. Ever-increasing local taxes are the fundamentally wrong response to the desire for economic development.

How many more tax (or user fee) funded pet projects will our "town fathers," both elected and non-elected, try to cram down our throats before we take action to control this fiscal irresponsibility?

Another tax is not answer

It is my observation that no matter which federal, state, county or city, they are all alike. They are obsessed with the idea that tax money will solve any problem.

It will be a cold day in July before I will ever vote to be taxed.

There must be a better way!

Serbia warns of risks but supports plan

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbian officials said Thursday that European recognition of Slovenia and Croatia would make it more difficult to end the Yugoslav crisis peacefully, but renewed their commitment to a U.N. peace plan.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic also promised that the Serb-led federal army would not intervene in Macedonia and Bosnia-Hercegovina, the other two independence-minded Yugoslav republics.

Milosevic, a former hard-liner in the Croatian war, has softened his stance in the face of international criticism and war-weariness at home.

"Serbia wants to use peaceful means to solve the crisis," he said while visiting Greece, his closest ally within the 12-nation European Community.

Milan Babic, leader of the autonomous Serb republic of Krajina in Croatia, whose rejection of parts of the U.N. peace plan caused him to split with Milosevic, also took a conciliatory stance Thursday.

"I expect the cease-fire to hold and the peace to be established," he told reporters, adding he hoped the needs of Croatia's minority Serbs would be considered.

While leaders in Croatia and Slovenia hailed their new status as sovereign states, Borisav Jovic, Serbia's representative on the Serb-dominated federal presidency, said recognition had not changed the facts of the conflict.

Fighting in the seven-month civil war in Croatia has nearly stopped since a U.N.-sponsored cease-fire took hold Jan. 3. Scattered exchanges were reported Thursday.

Belgrade television said Croatian snipers opened fire on army officers and European Community observers near Jasenovac, 50 miles southeast of Zagreb, seriously wounding one soldier. A Croatian sniper was killed when the soldiers returned fire, said the report, which could not be confirmed. The media of both sides frequently carry conflicting claims of truce violations.

The army and Croat forces exchanged nearly 90 prisoners near Pakrac, on the central battlefront.

Recognition by the European Community of the two northern republics "will represent quite a risk, will jeopardize solution of all problems by means of negotiations," Serbian Premier Radoman Bozovic told a news conference.

He was especially critical of the EC for what he said was recognizing the rights of Croats and Slovenes to self-determination while denying the same to Serbs.

Ousted president makes trip home, calls for march

MOSCOW (NYT) — Zviad K. Gamsakhurdia, the ousted president of Georgia, returned to his stronghold in western Georgia Thursday, raising the specter of renewed warfare in the tumultuous Caucasus republic.

Tass reported that Gamsakhurdia and his followers flew into Sukhumi, a city on the Black Sea, in the early morning, and from there drove to Zugdidi, center of the region from which he comes and where he has his strongest support.

There, Gamsakhurdia reportedly addressed a rally and called on his followers to march on Tbilisi, the Georgian capital, 150 miles away.

He fled the capital 10 days ago after two weeks of warring against a coalition of National Guardsmen, intellectuals and opposition politicians.

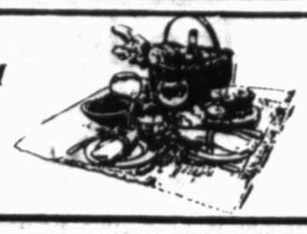

In the course of the fighting, more than 90 people were killed and Tbilisi's central boulevard was ravaged. Gamsakhurdia's flight brought the fighting to an end, but almost immediately his followers, especially in western Georgia, began to mobilize.

Several pro-Gamsakhurdia rallies have been reported in Sukhumi and Zugdidi, and the ousted President's followers have also tried to hold several demonstrations in Tbilisi.

In Tbilisi, the opposition formed a military council to run the Government and promised new elections sometime next spring. Members of the council, who include leaders of armed bands and of opposition parties, were reported in session Thursday to decide how to cope with Gamsakhurdia's new challenge.

After fleeing, Gamsakhurdia stayed in Armenia with a band of armed followers, insisting that he was still president. He reportedly flew to Sukhumi via Grozny, the capital of another strife-torn Caucasus region, Chechen-Ingushetia, which has declared itself independent of Russia and has supported Gamsakhurdia.

Fundamentalists denounce new Algerian leaders

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A 72-year-old war hero returned from exile Thursday to lead a military-backed ruling council, but Muslim fundamentalists denounced his improvised government as illegal.

The Islamic Salvation Front said it would not recognize any political, economic or diplomatic moves taken by the new leaders. After sweeping a first-round vote De. 26, the fundamentalists were poised to take control of parliament but the army canceled the elections.

The fundamentalists' acting leader, Abdelkader Hachani, rejected as "unrepresentative of the people" the five-man High State Council sworn into office Thursday at the presidential palace.

The council assumed the duties of former President Chadli Bendjedid, who was pressured into resigning last weekend after 13 years in power.

A security council took power after ousting Bendjedid, apparently in fear that he would cooperate with the fundamentalists in forming a new government.

Although the goals of the fundamentalists are not clear, there is widespread fear the North African country could become much more conservative, including a reversal in the rights of women and a ban on alcohol.

Mohamed Boudiaf, a hero of the war of independence against France exiled for 28 years in Morocco, is the nominal head of the new ruling council. He and the four other members placed their hands on the Koran and swore to defend the nation and Islam.

Boudiaf said in a five-minute address that he hoped to unify the nation. In what appeared to be a slap at the Salvation Front, he called Islam "the religion of everyone" and said, "It is not permissible that an individual or a group monopolize Islam."

Boudiaf received a head of state's welcome upon arrival at Algiers' airport, complete with a red carpet and military music.

"I salute the Algerian people," he said. "I believe that this people is capable of overcoming its difficulties and, together, achieving miracles."

Although Boudiaf will head the High State Council, it is likely to be dominated by the defense minister, Gen. Khaled Nezzar.

Special court acquits former premier in trial

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A court early today acquitted former Premier Andreas Papandreou of complicity in a major bank scandal, concluding a riveting two-year trial, much of it watched on television by an avid national audience.

Two of Papandreou's former Cabinet ministers were convicted on charges stemming from the scandal, which helped bring down his Socialist government in 1989.

The 13-judge court voted 7-6 to acquit Papandreou of a charge of instigating the loss of state company funds. He had been accused of ordering state company managers to deposit money with the Bank of Crete while its owner, George Koskotas, was accused of embezzling from the bank.

A central bank audit in late 1988 found that $210 million were missing.

"From no evidence did it arise that the defendant former premier knew that Koskotas was embezzling funds from the Bank of Crete," Supreme Court president Vassilis Kokkinos said, reading the verdict just after midnight.

The court also found Papandreou innocent of accepting bribes from Koskotas.

The trial was watched by a large television audience, often beating the most popular soaps in the ratings. Streets were nearly deserted Thursday night as people stayed home to wait for the verdict, carried live by all major networks.

The 72-year-old former premier boycotted the trial, saying the charges against him were a conspiracy by his political enemies.

In a defiant television statement, Papandreou accused the conservative New Democracy government of trying to destroy him and his party.

"With the excuse of a cleanup, the electoral will of the people was adulterated. The New Democracy majority is the result of the Greek people having been hoodwinked. The demand for elections is the demand of the people," Papandreou said.

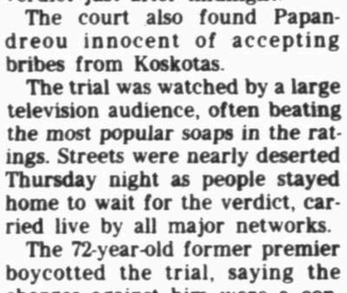

Papandreou leads the Socialist party, the main opposition party. He ruled Greece from 1981 to 1989, and his party polled nearly 40 percent in 1990 elections.

Papandreou could have been sentenced to life in prison if convicted.

Another accused Papandreou aide, former Deputy Premier Agamemnon Koutsogiorgas, died during the trial.

Testimony from 109 witnesses was televised over the last 10 months of the trial before supreme and appeals court judges.

The former finance minister, Dimitris Tsovolas, was found guilty of settling a debt for a Papandreou friend by overriding government procedures. He was sentenced to 2½ years in prison or a fine of $5,000. His political rights were suspended for three years, meaning he will have to resign from Parliament.

MISD ninth-graders top TAAS average

■ While ninth-graders scored above average on each part of the test, third-graders scored below average.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland's ninth-graders took the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test to task when they scored 6 to 9 percentage points above state average in each area examined.

Third-graders, however, did not fare so well, with pupils in six schools scoring below the state average in each of the three parts of the test — writing, reading and math. Third-graders' scores also varied widely from school to school.

For example, only 50 percent of the pupils at Washington Elementary School passed the math portion of the test while 99 percent of the pupils at Santa Rita Elementary School passed.

William Mauer, Ph.D., and principal of Santa Rita, said 134 of 136 third-graders taking the test at his school passed.

"We certainly can't complain about our math scores," Mauer said.

The principal said the math portion of the third grade TAAS test call reading skills into play. "There are word problems and students may be asked to identify what is reasonable, not just computations," he said.

Director finds flaw in new animal shelter

■ Humidity created by constant washing in dog kennel caused roof beams to rust.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

There's nothing like the smell of a wet dog.

That's why, little more than two months after its grand opening, a design flaw in the city's new Animal Control Shelter had Director Coy Willis and his staff howling.

Without exhaust fans to pull out the humidity created by the dog kennel's constant washings, the place was dripping wet. But it wasn't just a pooch problem — metal beams in the roof had already begun to rust.

"We're still flying high," however, said Willis, citing the many benefits of the brightly painted facility at 1200 N. Fairgrounds Road. "But we wanted to get on this thing before we created a problem that would last a while."

Since the City Council gave its OK Tuesday, Connolly & Company Architects has already installed four exhaust fans, with the cost to be shared by the city and the company.

City officials insisted that they only pay for materials and labor — almost $4,000 — as if the fans had been included in the original design. Connolly, then, agreed to pick up the $2,000 in building alterations necessary to install the fans.

"They didn't realize how much water we use, and this is a very tight building. There was no where for that humidity to go," Willis said. Workers spray out the cages thoroughly each morning and spot-clean throughout the day, often using steam.

The fans are expected to be complete in a day or two, although they are already in use and, Willis said, working fine. The beams will be cleaned, repainted and coated to prevent the same problem from occurring again, he said.

A new computer system, meanwhile, is expected to clear up about nine months' worth of records backlog, generating up-to-date lists of city pet licenses.

Councilmen approved purchase of the system Tuesday, after several months of discussion and a rec-

City needs pet facility volunteers

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland Animal Control staffers are hoping their new facility will attract the public — but not just to adopt pets.

Director Coy Willis said they are seeking volunteers to help with a variety of jobs, including some that do involve dealing directly with animals.

"We need those that have 'people skills,'" said Willis, describing several public relations jobs.

"We need someone to, when a customer comes in, help them find a dog, or their dog if they've lost it," he said. The city department also needs volunteers to make phone calls to

Jury convicts 3 in bogus check case

Associated Press

El Paso car king Maury Kemp and two associates were found guilty Thursday in federal court in Midland of conspiring to defraud two banks of $1.6 million in a scheme known as "check kiting."

A federal jury deliberated nine hours before convicting Kemp, Donna Frydenlund and Perry A. Pressley of filling out bogus checks for hundreds of thousands to keep three California car dealerships afloat.

The defendants, who were each found guilty on one count of conspiracy to commit bank fraud and one count of bank fraud, will be sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton March 24 in El Paso.

Guardianship to be subject of seminar

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When a relative or friend grows old and is no longer able to take care of himself, many people are faced with the question of what to do.

"It is a tough decision to make," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens.

"You find yourself between the devil and the deep blue sea. Guardianship and power of attorney should be explored."

Concern for the elderly is not the only time when a guardianship should be considered. Such is the case when a mentally retarded or disabled individual approaches 18 years of age.

Boxer Muhammad Ali indeed is 'the greatest'

When I first called up the sports wire on our computer system at the office a terrible thought raced across my brain.

"Ali is dead."

Ott

There could be no other explanation. Everywhere I looked there was another story on his life, his fights, his accomplishments. It read like a glowing obituary.

There were quotes from his peers calling him "the greatest fighter of all time." There were statements from political figures saying he was "a true international spokesman for peace." Others labeled him "an inspiration," "a role model," "a living legend." Even a former president, Jimmy Carter, was quoted.

All I could do was sit back in my chair and sigh, "Ali dead. I can't believe it."

But I read on.

Bit by bit, piece by piece, the puzzle began to come together. The picture became clearer. The real meaning more obvious.

Muhammad Ali didn't die. He turned 50.

You know a person has hit the big time when the newspapers treat his 50th birthday as if it was the beginning of World War III, the demise of communism, the marriage of one of those British royal persons.

It is a fine line, one I can't really explain even though I've been in the newspaper business for 17 years. There are just certain people in this world who command greater attention than others.

And being famous is not enough.

When your normal, run-of-the-mill celebrity turns 50, it usually gets a brief mention in the "People" section of the paper. You glance at it and then quickly move on to the next item. But when a Muhammad Ali turns 50, it somehow becomes a major news event. Commentators talk about it. Columnists write about it. Historians reflect on it.

Like I say, I can't explain it.

It just happens.

And without a doubt, Muhammad Ali, for better or worse, is one of those people. He is indeed special.

We all remember when he burst on the American scene, a brash kid from Louisville, Ky. He was named Cassius Clay back then and most people didn't like him. He called himself "The Greatest" and had the audacity to make up self-serving poems . . . "float like a butterfly, sting like a bee." Then he would predict in which round he would knock out his foe.

All the while, America — at the least the big white segment of it — fumed. Some called him a braggart. Others said he was uppity. A few even branded him "a national embarrassment." Most, though, were downright racist in their remarks.

You gotta remember, this was 1964.

A lot of things changed America during the years that followed. There was Vietnam, for example. And, Watergate and political assassinations and drugs, Woodstock and even Richard Milhous Nixon.

We — especially the young people who grew up during that period — started seeing things differently.

More than anything, we shunned authority like never before. Independence became the most precious commodity in our lives. We looked up to free thinkers, those people who dared to be different, who went against the grain, who thumbed their noses at the powers that be. We longed for the freedom to make our own choices, too.

Thus, a guy like Muhammad Ali became all the more appealing.

He was, if nothing else, his own man. He did things his own way. He was unique.

And slowly but surely, Middle America came to accept him, as well, even those people who just a few years earlier had despised everything he stood for.

Now, instead of viewing him as a loud-mouth braggart, more and more people considered him charming and witty and refreshing. We laughed at his one-liners and finally began to comprehend that the man was a master showman, an entertainer, a charismatic song-and-dance man who somehow made us feel better about ourselves just by having seen his performance.

There are those who would say he was much more than that. They would point to the influence he had on the anti-war campaign, the civil rights movement, the spread of Islam among black Americans.

They might be right. He was all of those things, and much more.

But for me, a 39-year-old product of the '60s, he will always be a man who could make me laugh when others, no matter how hard they tried, couldn't.

And if I could give him just one birthday gift today it would be his health. Oh, how I'd love to see him dance in the ring, scream into a microphone and announce for all the world to hear that he is indeed the greatest.

DEATHS

George Elliott II

Services for George Washington Elliott II, formerly of Midland, have been set for 11 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Masonic graveside services will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Elliott died Tuesday in Houston.

He was born May 8, 1906, in Midland to the late George Daniel Elliott and Hessie Scharbauer Elliott. He graduated from high school in El Paso and then attended the University of Texas at El Paso. In 1927 he and his father built the Elliott Hotel in Odessa. The property was sold in 1946.

Elliott was active in many civic activities in Odessa. He was president of both the Junior and Senior chambers of commerce. In 1940 he was the first president of the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang. In addition, he was past president of the Rotary Club of Odessa and the West Texas Hotel Association. He had been a director of the Texas Hotel Association and also was a member of the El Paso chapter of the Order of Demolay, the Fort Worth Lodge #148, AF & FM, Scottish Rite Bodies and the Moslah Shrine Temple of Fort Worth. He was a director of First State Bank of Odessa.

Elliott served in the Texas Legislature in 1947-48, representing 13 West Texas counties.

He was a member of First Baptist Church in both Midland and Odessa. He had managed Ramada Inns in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

He and his wife Fredonia McKinney Elliott were married for 56 years. She preceded him in death in 1985. Mrs. Elliott was the daughter of S.R. McKinney and Ada Estes McKinney. Her father was Odessa's first mayor and Ector County treasurer.

In recent years, Elliott lived in Houston to be near his son and daughter.

Survivors include his son, George W. Elliott III, of Houston; one daughter, Mary Ann Elliott Fendley of Houston; seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Velma Butler

Services for Velma "Val" Ann Marlin Butler of Midland are set for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel. Graveside services will follow at 11 a.m. in Big Spring at the Mount Olive Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Butler

She died Thursday in a local hospital.

She was born on Sept. 21, 1945, in Big Spring. She graduated from Big Spring High School in 1964 and attended Howard Junior College before going on to North Texas University in Denton, where she received a degree in education.

In 1969 she went to work at Roswell High School in New Mexico. On July 28, 1972, she married Michael Butler in Big Spring. In 1974 they came to Midland where she taught at Alamo Junior High, San Jacinto Junior High and was currently a seventh grade teacher at Goddard Junior High.

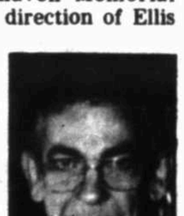

She was a professional member of Texas State Teacher's Association and a member of Midland Educators.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Sean Butler and Casey Butler, both of Midland and her mother, Mrs. W.W. Marlin of Big Spring.

Memorials may be directed to the American Heart Association.

Ray Morris

Services for Ray Morris of Midland are set for 4 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Morris

He died Wednesday at a Big Spring hospital.

He was born in 1927 in Idabell, Okla., and was raised in Nashville, Ark. He served in the U.S. Navy in the South Pacific. In the early 1950s he came to Midland where he worked with several local jewelers. He and his wife, Wene, established the Morris Jewelry and Gift Store in the early 1970s before their retirement from the Midland business community. He was a member of the Bowling Association, the American Legion, the V.F.W. and the Eagles.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Linda Lewis of Midland and Glenda Kinsey of Little Rock, Ark.; three sons, Bill Morris and David Morris, both of Midland, and Robert Morris of Las Vegas, Nev.; two stepsons, Grady Jennings of Riverside, Calif., and Bernie Jennings of Midland; six grandchildren and one great-grandson.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

Joyce Dwight

Services for Joyce Dwight of Midland have been set for 10 a.m. Saturday at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. Allen Whitman officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Dwight died Thursday at her residence.

She was born April 14, 1914, in Duncan, Okla., and she moved to White Deer in the Texas Panhandle when she was 3. When she was 5 the family moved to Amarillo where she attended grade school and later graduated from Amarillo High School. She also attended Amarillo Junior College and Texas Tech University.

In 1934, she married Gene Dwight in Amarillo and they moved to Midland in 1950, where her husband was an accountant with Yale E. Key. He died in 1974.

Mrs. Dwight was a Communicate of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Survviors include three sons, Donald G. Dwight of Muskegon, Mich.; James F. Dwight of Houston and Patrick H. Dwight of Dallas; eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church or a favorite charity.

W.D. Stovall

Services for W.D. Stovall of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. Saturday at Ellis Chapel North with the Rev. Jim Fields, pastor of Cottonflat Baptist Church, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Stovall died Thursday at his residence.

He was born Dec. 3, 1927, in Fort Worth where he was reared and educated. He enlisted in the U.S. Navy during World War II and following his discharge in 1945 he attended Texas Christian University. He graduated in 1949.

He married Virginia C. Braden in October 1950. They lived in Fort Worth until 1967 when they moved to Midland. He joined his brother and operated Panther City Office Supply until his retirement in 1985.

Stovall was a member of Cottonflat Baptist Church and served as a chaplain for the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, William D. Stovall III, of Midland and Allen Odom of McAllen; two daughters, Signa Myers of Tyler and Barbara Coats of Fort Worth; one brother, R.M. Stovall of Fort Worth and one sister, Louise Smith of Midland.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Midland Chapter of the Salvation Army.

Suzanna Johnson

Services for Suzanna Johnson of Midland are set for 11 a.m. Saturday at Trinity Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Bill Hedrick officiating.

She died Thursday at a local hospital.

She was born on May 31, 1924, in Graham. She married Ben Johnson in Graford in 1948. The Johnsons came to Midland in 1951.

She was a longtime employee and vice-president/treasurer of Leeper Oil Company. She was also a member of Trinity Presbyterian Church where she was an elder.

She was also involved in the Parent Teacher's Association, the Museum of the Southwest, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Daughters of the American Revolution and the Parliamentarians.

As a professional parliamentarian she served on many state and national organizations.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Sam Johnson of Grapevine; three daughters, Frances Griffith of Lubbock, Dyna Ingram of Andrews and Pat Mayne of Austin; nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family requests memorials be directed to the scholarship fund of Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Suda Roberts

Services for Suda M. "Sue" Roberts, 75, of Midland, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Roberts

She died Thursday at her residence.

She was born on Jan. 30, 1916, in Fisher County. She was the daughter of pioneer Fisher County settlers. She was a longtime employee of Grammar Murphy before retiring in 1976. At that time, she worked as a seamstress and bridal consultant. She retired from Julian Gold in 1982. She was preceded in death by her husband, Leo Roberts on Sept. 12, 1991.

Survivors include one son, James L. Roberts of Midland; two sisters, Alta L. Darden of Rotan and Grace Warren of Roby and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

James Montgomery

LOCAL/ AREA REPORTS

Suspended janitor remains in jail

Staff Report

Suspended Midland Lee High School janitor Rogelio G. "Roy" Rodriguez remained in the Midland County Jail Thursday night on a $30,000 bond, three days after he was arrested for possession of cocaine, jail officials said.

According to narcotics officers from the Midland County Sheriff's Department, $2,000 worth of cocaine was seized from Rodriguez's apartment at 1210 W. College Ave. in the Monday-night search.

A Crime Stoppers tip received earlier Monday led deputies to obtain a search warrant for the apartment, which they executed at 9:15 p.m. that night.

Most of the cocaine was wrapped in 68 $20 packets — which is indicative that the drug was being sold, officers said.

Rodriguez, 56, was suspended from his job without pay pending the outcome of his trial, Midland Independent School District officials said.

Fraud sentence

A 40-year-old Midland chiropractor was sentenced in U.S. District Court Thursday to six years imprisonment for one count of mail fraud, federal officials said.

Dr. Howard Gregory Cooper, who operated Cooper Chiropractic Clinic at 4411 W. Illinois Ave., was also ordered to pay a $5,000 fine and serve two years probation.

Following a six-month investigation by the FBI and the Department of Public Safety, Cooper was arrested in October for devising a scheme to defraud health insurance companies by submitting false medical claims through the mail.

He pleaded guilty to the charge in November.

Felony warrant

A Midland man was in custody Thursday on a felony warrant for burglary of an automobile, police said.

Nicholas Martin Rodriquez, age unknown, of 1206 E. Dormand Ave., was arrested at his home without incident Wednesday night, police said.

He was in the Midland County Jail with a $5,000 bond for burglary of a vehicle and a $1,500 bond for driving while intoxicated.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, jail officials said.

Drug sentence

A woman found guilty by a federal jury in November on crack cocaine charges was sentenced to 12½ years imprisonment Thursday in U.S. District Court, federal officials said.

Gloria Sherman was the sixth person to be sentenced for participating in what law enforcement officials described as a crack-sales organization.

Ms. Sherman was convicted of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine.

SEMINAR: Judge, lawyer to discuss guardianship

(From 1B)

That's why MARC will be sponsoring a free seminar on Monday to explain guardianship, power of attorney and estate planning.

"It is for anyone who has a family member or friend who may need a guardian," Unterbrink said.

That includes children with mental retardation or mental illness, people with Alzheimer's disease, and elderly parents losing the capability to take care of their finances or personal affairs.

Deciding on whether a guardianship is needed will be one of the topics discussed at the seminar.

"It needs to be a pretty well thought-out process," Unterbrink said.

"There is a time to get guardianship and a time not to, and that's what the seminar is about," he said.

For example, someone does not want to take away the rights of an individual when that person may still be capable of managing his affairs, Unterbrink said.

Other times it is a matter of when — as in the case of a mentally handicapped child.

"Parents don't need it till their child reaches 18 ... conversely some parents don't think they need guardianship after 18," Unterbrink said.

Even if a son or daughter is profoundly retarded, a parent cannot act on behalf of a child after age 18, something some parents are unaware of, Unterbrink said.

A guardianship would be required for such things as active treatment in residential care, medical and dental care, access to vital information, and financial management.

Based on the need, there are three types of guardianships: temporary, limited, and plenary (or full).

County Court at Law Judge Al Walvoord and Mike Morgan, a local attorney and MARC board member, will be conducting the seminar.

"It's not terribly difficult to get a guardianship," Walvoord said. "Where the problem occurs is after they are obtained," he said.

That's because of the regulation of guardianships, which includes making an annual report to the court, Walvoord said.

"It is harder to carry out than it first appears. You have a lot of duties," he said.

"You are giving away the liberties, freedoms and rights of an individual to another individual," Walvoord said.

But, for "people that really need it, there's no substitute," he said.

The seminar, open to the public, is scheduled from 7-9 p.m. Monday at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ Family Life Center.

TAAS: State changes test objectives

(From 1B)

The heavy emphasis on reading and thinking skills distinguishes the TAAS test from the old TEAMS test.

This is the second year students' mastery of writing, reading and math skills has been tested in the TAAS test that replaced the TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) test.

The test was administered in October to students in odd-numbered grades, which included grades three, seven, nine and 11.

"Since the TAAS is administered in October, it primarily tests the previous year's learning," according to Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

The State Board of Education (SBOE) adopted the TAAS test to emphasize higher-order thinking skills. It was administered to students for the first time last year.

The Texas Education Agency (TEA) also announced that achieving mastery on the test would be more difficult this year than last year. For example, the passing standard established by the SBOE last year was to answer 60 percent of the questions correctly for students in grades seven and nine. For pupils in grades three and five, a 65 percent score was considered passing. This year the passing score for students in all grades was raised to 70 percent, according to information from the TEA.

"A one or two percentile point difference in test averages is insignificant," Baressi said. "But five or more percentile points difference demonstrates a real difference in achievement."

Because of changes in scoring, MISD administrators have noted that comparing this year's scores to last year's won't give a fair indication of improvement or decline in mastering skills.

A TEA spokesperson said the TAAS test, which required greater mastery from students this year, "is designed to have results which will improve accordingly over time."

The spokesperson also said performance on the TAAS "is one measure the state will use when accrediting school districts and assigning performance ratings to individual school campuses."

In addition to raising the number of objectives needed to be mastered in order to pass the test, the format of the test also varied.

"They keep changing the test," Maurer said. "The format was changed. It's like somebody keeps changing the rules of the game. How can you get ahead?"

Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of testing, said the "technique of answering the questions was changed."

"An example is that students may have been asked to find an answer which was near correct, instead of the correct answer," he said. "It's one way to make the test more difficult. Teachers may have prepared students differently from textbooks. Usually at the end of a chapter there will be a test asking for the correct answers."

Cummins said success on the test is directly related to a student's ability to read and write well. "If they are having trouble with reading and writing, then they will have difficulty elaborating."

Retha Rae Wright, principal of South Elementary School, agreed. Only 25 percent of South's third-graders passed the writing portion of the TAAS test.

"Students couldn't elaborate or support their writing well enough," Ms. Wright said. "No one got a zero, they just didn't do well on the writing sample or multiple choice questions."

The principal said many of South's pupils have limited proficiency in English. "They have difficulty expressing themselves in either language (Spanish or English) — even verbally," she said.

"Our response to that is extending our school day to expand and develop the students' language. Because of the scores last year, this year's scores were no surprise. We are disappointed, but not deflated."

Cummins said the state will keep 70 percent as the passing grade next year, rather than changing the standards again.

"Next year we will be dealing with having the same set of standards for the second year," he said.

Greenwood students, who scored significantly above all their peers in the state last year, had scores this year which reflected the stiffer standards.

Greenwood students still topped state averages except in two areas. Fifth-graders scored just one point below the state average in reading and matched the state average in math.

CHECKS: Defendants face $1 million fine

(From 1B)

They each face up to 30 years in prison and up to $1 million in fines.

After the verdict, Kemp told his two associates "I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

Throughout the trial Kemp testified "the buck stopped with me. The others were simply taking orders from me."

Kemp testified Wednesday that he was playing the "float" — the time it took for the checks to clear — for funds while he tried to sell the dealerships.

He said he intended to repay the money being shuffled between checking accounts at MBank-El Paso, now State National Bank, and First Interstate Bank of California.

"I have more than ample equity. I absolutely always tried to pay my bills," he said.

Check kiting occurs when deposits are made in bank checking accounts with overdrawn checks. The practice gives the appearance of substantial balances when there is little or no money in an account.

Prosecutors said Kemp was simply milking the banks for funds without knowing when he could pay them back.

"Mr. Kemp's defense is like saying if the bank robber steals the money and then brings it back, there is no crime," said prosecutor Debra Kanof during closing arguments. "That's just not how the law works."

Prosecutors said the defendants shuffled as much as $50 million between the banks from April 24, 1990, to Jan. 4, 1991.

"Ninety-four percent were kited checks — in other words, money that wasn't there," said David Rosado, another prosecutor.

Kemp began fixing cars in high school and built a dealership empire after Ford Motor Co. chose him for an outlet in El Paso in the 1950s. Kemp had about 10 lots in several states in the 1980s.

Now he just owns one in El Paso and the three in California.

He later bought Knickerbocker Life Insurance Co., but it collapsed and was placed in conservatorship by the State Board of Insurance in 1987.

Investigations into that company's problems resulted in several indictments naming Kemp, including the check kiting charge.

A second indictment accuses Kemp and several other prominent El Pasoans of reaping nearly $10 million from selling false insurance annuities to investors, primarily Mexican families.

Another securities fraud indictment accuses Kemp of selling the annuities without a license.

He will be tried on those charges later this year.

ommendation of the city's computer advisory board. They settled on five terminals and access to an updated software program.

"They didn't have memory or the capacity they needed," said Susan Thorpe, assistant city manager. Animal Control's new system will be connected with the Health Department's computer, so the two can share software.

The $14,500 system — like the exhaust fans — will be purchased by the department's Fund 140, which collects $1 from every pet license.

If the department can keep better track of licenses and send reminders to owners, it can also replenish Fund 140. But at this point, after purchase of the computer, added to the cost of the fans and a set of stainless steel cat cages, the fund has dwindled, Thorpe said.

"I think we'll wait a while before using it again, to let it build up," she said. "After five or 10 years we could use that money to expand the kennel area if we needed it."

owners whose pets have been picked up.

"We have a couple of people who come in just to pet the cats, or visit the animals," Willis said.

He said at Animal Control, like department stores, browsing is encouraged.

Volunteers could work a few hours in the morning or afternoon Monday through Friday, or Saturday mornings, Willis said.

Paul Tryson, coordinator of the city's volunteer program, said he rarely gets calls from people interested in working at Animal Control. But the department may have had a stigma at its former location, where pests plagued the animals and aging wood rotted beneath visitors' feet.

At the new building, 1200 N. Fairgrounds Road, the walls are painted bright colors inside and out — specifically designed to attract drop-ins and create a better working environment for the staff.

For information about volunteering, call Tryson at 685-7425.

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents disagree with adult children's decision

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband was recently laid off by (large oil company) and he has handled it all very well. I think that I have handled it very well too. He did work in a book that the outplacement people suggested and as a result we both have decided to adopt a new line of work and life style. We are both scared but happy with our decision. We have sat up nights talking and planning and it's the closest we have been in our entire marriage.

May

I'm writing you because I'm having trouble with my parents. They grew up in the Depression and think that if you don't have a job, then you're going to die. I know that they had it rough when they were kids — I've got the stories memorized! They just don't understand that we have decided that we want to try operating our own small business. They are so full of "gloom and doom" that they made Christmas a nightmare for us.

We were all happy and joyous because for the first time in years we actually did our Christmas shopping together. We both enjoyed buying things for the kids and our families instead of me doing it all. My husband was like a new man until my parents arrived on the scene. They walked around with these long faces and kept talking about how important it was for "a man" to have a good job. We were so glad for them to leave we could hardly stand it.

I love my husband and I'm OK with his decision, but I want to tell my parents something to get their support too. We're not all that close but I've never seen them like this. My husband is a little mad and hurt because they didn't support him at all. I think that he and I are OK but I would like for my parents to be with us on this. Do you have any ideas on what I might tell them to help? WAS HAPPY

DEAR WAS: Congratualtions to you and your husband. You two seem to be doing very well in a difficult situation.

As for your parents, remember that the survivors of the Depression (especially those who were children faced with little to eat) have difficult and painful memories. You may want to read Dr. G.H. Elder's book, "Children of the Great Depression," for some additional insight into the effects of that economic disaster.

Many professionals are leaving the rat race to spend more time with their families and persue other interests. Many people seem to be interested in running small businesses for less money but more freedom. You might tell your parents that you two are part of a major trend in the United States. Of the more than 11 million businesses in America, about 10.8 million are small businesses. In his book, "Megatrends," John Naisbitt suggests that America is shifting from a managerial society to an entrepreneurial society.

I don't know if sharing this with your parents will help, but it might. You did not say what business you two are starting, but good luck! With hard work and a little luck you will survive and be happy.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I are considering a divorce. We don't really fight very much but our marriage is dead with a capital "D." Our children are both in high school and don't need us much anymore. We both still like each other but we haven't had any fun together in years. Each of us has our own jobs, our own friends and do our own thing.

The only real reason that we can think of for staying married is that we have been married almost 20 years and have accumulated lots of things that would be hard to separate out. What do you think about an amicable divorce? Does it hurt anyone if both parties are civilized about it? IT'S OVER

DEAR OVER: I believe that marriage is sacred, and we should do all we can do to save it. In many cases divorce does not solve any problems, but instead often creates additional new problems. Except in cases of abuse, the family is a very robust and workable unit. However, an on-going controversy exists concerning which is more harmful, a "bad marriage" or a divorce.

A proliferation of current research seems to support conflicting views of the effects of divorce on children. The findings are so diverse, I sense that almost any outcome is possible depending on the situation.

In spite of all that, I strongly believe every couple should work hard to address the problems in their marriage, whether by seeking individual or marriage counseling, marriage workshops or marriage seminars. The important thing is to make a sincere and concerted effort to solve the problems. I encourage you and your husband to seek counseling. Talk to your minister or other professional help. You two must have had something between you at one time for you to have been married so long. Have you just forgotten? Is it possible that you might remember? I encourage you both to try to remember!

DEAR ABBY

Mention of former spouses causes present irritations

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen this situation written up in your column: it's mothers-in-law who carry their ex-sons-in-law (or daughters-in-law) on a silver platter in front of the present son-in-law or daughter-in-law.

Van Buren

Why do they do this when they know it irritates the present son- or daughter-in-law? Also, if the "ex" was so terrific in the first place, they wouldn't be "ex" now, right?

Please print this, Abby. There are a lot of people who have this problem, and it hurts. — HURTING IN HOUSTON

DEAR HURTING: Where grandchildren are involved, it's in the best interest of the children to portray the absent parent in the best possible light.

Many mothers-in-law do go overboard extolling the virtues of the "ex" son- or daughter-in-law, because they're bitter and angry when they recall happier times before acrimony (and alimony) entered the picture.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I eloped in the '60s and we forgot to bring along a camera, so we have no pictures of ourselves for that big occasion. Our children are now grown and we even have grandchildren, and we are very much ashamed of not having any wedding pictures.

What I would like from you is the name of a company or a photographer who can take old pictures of my husband and me and superimpose the heads on another couple dressed in a nice tuxedo and wedding gown.

I am not looking for a wedding album — just a few pictures of a nice young couple getting married.

Please do not judge me for being deceitful. — NEEDS MEMORIES

DEAR NEEDS: I am not "judging" you, but there is no shame in admitting that you eloped and therefore have no wedding pictures.

Rather than attempting to have your heads superimposed on the bodies of another couple, why not renew your wedding vows on your next anniversary? You could rent a beautiful bridal gown and tuxedo and engage a photographer to capture the occasion.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 9 months. All we have heard from our relatives since we came back from our honeymoon is, "When is the baby due?"

This really upsets me and my husband because I may not be able to have children for physical reasons. My husband and I discussed this before we got married and he has no problem with the fact that we may not have any children. My question: What do we tell the relatives the next time they ask, "When is the baby due?" — NO CITY, USA

DEAR NO CITY: Tell them, "Maybe never — but we'll give you six month's notice."

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Believing in yourself is crucial

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: How important is it to believe in yourself?

ANSWER: There was a salesman who was "scared to death" about calling on big clients. In a counseling session, he was asked "would you physically get down on all fours and crawl into an Executives office, holding your hand out like a begger?"

Edwards

"Certainly not!" he bristled.

"Then why do you mentally cringe and crawl? You're doing the same thing when you're overly concerned about self approval, literally begging for approval and acceptance of yourself as a person."

So often we've sold ourselves short, not because of facts but because of our own negative thinking — our feelings of unworthiness. Remember our behavior and feelings spring from belief. So, if we believe that we should not be allowed to suffer indignities, then chances are we'll live that way also — liberated from our own false ideas about ourselves.

QUESTION: What are some common misconceptions about happiness?

ANSWER: One of the most common causes of unhappiness comes when you attempt to live your life on the deferred payment plan.

You don't live nor enjoy life now, but wait for some future occurrence like getting married, a better job, when the house is paid for, when the kids grow up — when some task or victory is won. But invariably, you're disappointed because happiness is a mental habit — an attitude — and if it's not learned and practiced in the present, it's never experienced.

Nor is happiness contingent upon our solving external problems because when one is solved, another only takes it place. You choose to be happy. It's not something earned or deserved; happiness comes because you've made the simple decision to be happy. It's truly an attitude — and as you learn to think positive and fill you mind with pleasant thoughts, so will your life become.

QUESTION: How can I gain more self confidence?

ANSWER: Confidence is built upon experiences of success. When we first begin any undertaking that's different, we're likely to have little confidence because so often we've not learned from experience that we can succeed. This is true of riding a bike, speaking in public or starting a new job.

It's true, success breeds success. Even our small successes are important because they're used as stepping stones to greater ones.

Likewise, it's crucial for us to form the habit of remembering past successes and forgetting our failures. We often destroy our self confidence by dwelling on past failures and forgetting the successes, not using our mistakes as a way of growing.

Learn to picture your past successes. And when beginning something new, remember the positive feeling, no matter how small that success might have been.

QUESTION: How can I appreciate life more?

ANSWER: By living today as best as you can. Or to put it another way — stop, look and listen! Practice becoming more consciously aware of what's around you. The sights, sounds, the beauty that's present right now, that maybe you're not concious of.

Become alert to the preciousness of life. How long has it been since you've really felt the grass beneath your feet or the cool breezes as you walk? The pioneers had to be alert in order to survive. So do we — not because of physical dangers, but from self imposed stress — the dangers which come from confused thinking, cluttered minds, from failure to live creatively and spontaneously without appreciation for life. Live today as best as you can. By doing so, you do the most within your power to make your tomorrows a lot more fulfilling.

QUESTION: How can I improve my concentration?

ANSWER: By focusing on only one major thing at a time! So much of our mental fatigue, confusion and anxiety comes from our absurd habit of trying to do too many things at one time. In school or business, we're constantly guilty of this. Instead of concentrating on one major task, we find ourselves thinking in the back of our minds about all those things we should accomplish today or this week. So much of our anxiety is not caused by the work itself, but by our mental attitude of thinking about all those things we've got to do.

The truth is, we can only accomplish one major task at a time. When we realize this truth, we mentally stop trying to do all those things that are next and focus all our awareness, responsiveness and concentration on what we're doing now. This attitude frees us to work and think at our best.

QUESTION: How can my older parents avoid being vulnerable to crime?

ANSWER: Older persons often don't feel that they're vulnerable to crime. Yet because of diminished physical capabilities, set routines, being alone, the most common scenario for crime takes place in the home during the day. So if you're an older person and want to feel safer and more secure:

- Don't advertise you're living alone.
- Vary your everyday routine.
- Keep doors and windows locked — even during the day — in both home and car.
- Have family and friends check on you daily.
- Keep emergency numbers on hand and report obscene or odd phone calls to the police.
- Use a direct deposit for regular checks.
- When walking, encourage friends to go.
- Use a peep hole or intercom to identify visitors, not a chain lock.

Everyone has the right to feel safe, so to make life more secure and enjoyable, be alert and be aware.

Pizazz in food important to elders

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

The horse you lead to water wants the water to be clear and sparkling before it will drink. The doleful senior citizen sitting in front of a bowl of scientifically correct pap actually needs familiar food presented so as to tactfully titillate the taste-buds. Our malnourished elder desperately requires fuel for his metabolic furnace, and all other factors become secondary. The withholding of food because of certain risk factors with resulting lack of basic nutrition negates all other esoteric care. Wobbly teeth, insensitive taste, lack of saliva, diminishing gastric juice and reactive depression all pose hurdles to proper eating habits. Add to this unpalatable meals and no wonder spiritual rebellion sets in.

Page

The remedy for this grievous situation is "go full speed ahead and damn the torpedos." After all, there is no pont in locking the barn door after the horse is stolen, so forget cholesterol, fat, sugar, salt, spices, alcohol, etc., unless there is an overwhelming contra-indication such as diabetes and heart failure. Serve everything in moderation and cooked according to local custom.

Then add the secret ingredient, PIZAZZ! This implies nice table appointments and the liberal use of garnish to enhance plate presentation. Color combination can add to eye appeal while herbs, spices and flavor enhancers such as table wines or vinegar enhance the flavor appeal. Certain spices can safely be used even in patients with peptie ulcers — namely cinnamon, allspice, mace, thyme, sage and caraway. Simultaneous hot and cold menu items add an interesting contrast.

Finally, try to identify what is psychologically appealing. I personally remember one depressed widower who revived when fed his long familiar breakfast of duck eggs; and likewise a centenarian who survived five more years by drinking beer for his main food staple.

A good example of pizazz is the old custom of serving lamb chops with paper covering the bony stem to protect dainty fingers. In other words, "put the panties on the lamb chops!"

AARP looks to start new chapter

Staff Report

Midlanders who are age 50 or older will have a new opportunity opening for them soon. The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) in the Midland area will be meeting 1 p.m. Thursday in the new Southwest Senior Center, 1803 E. Indiana, to discuss organizing a new AARP chapter.

AARP chapters offer members opportunities for community leadership and volunteer service, as well as a chance to meet others, to attend cultural events and go on outings. Chapters also help promote important information on such topics as health care, financial security, consumer protection, crime prevention, employment and retirement, long-term bare and the special needs of older women and minorities.

For more information, contact Ellen G. Smith at 685-7231 or Paul Gentry, assistant state director, at 694-5561.

Plano leader among mayors who meet with Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several U.S. mayors asked President Bush Thursday to divert at least $3 billion from defense cutbacks to grants for cities suffering from urban social problems.

The bipartisan group of mayors, all members of the National League of Cities, met for 20 minutes with Bush to request funding for community programs addressing troubled families and alienated youth.

"We feel that's a very reasonable amount of money," said Florence Shapiro, mayor of Plano, Texas, a wealthy suburb of Dallas.

"Let's reduce military spending. Let's take one B-2 bomber and give (the proceeds) to the cities," said Sharpe James, the mayor of Newark, N.J.

Ms. Shapiro, who is vice chairman of the NLC's advisory council, said money should be funneled directly to cities rather than to the states.

The NLC proposed to Bush that funds be distributed in a manner similar to the Community Development Block Grant program, which funnels money to cities for economic needs.

'(Bush) was very receptive to the ideas that we brought forward to him.'

— Plano Mayor Florence Shapiro

"(Bush) was very receptive to the ideas that we brought forward to him," Ms. Shapiro said. "He didn't talk much about the financial proposal."

The NLC asked Bush to establish a bipartisan commission to report back within 120 days on the possibility of funding city programs with $3 billion or more from the so-called "peace dividend."

The organization also proposed that Bush appoint a second commission comprised of municipal representatives and administration officials to take a long-term look at social problems.

The commission, which would report back in two years, would focus on the causes and ways to curb violence, gang warfare, school dropout and drug use.

"We believe the answers of the past don't apply, don't work any more," said Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

Added Ms. Shapiro, "The core problems that we have are family related and we must start focusing on the family. When the family situation is not good everything else rots around it."

Kidnapping suspect to be extradited

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man charged in three children's abductions will be returned to Texas by next week, authorities say.

Sammy Ray Hernandez waived extradition Wednesday in a Las Vegas court after he was ordered held without bond in the kidnappings of Valerie Ann Ramon, 11, and her two brothers, Daniel Jr., 9, and 7-year-old Samuel.

Hernandez, the children's former Sunday school teacher and baby sitter, will be picked up by Tarrant County sheriff's officers and brought back to Fort Worth, department Capt. Berta Gilbert said Thursday.

"We have been notified by North Las Vegas authorities that he (Hernandez) signed documents after waiving extradition," she said. "For the safety of the prisoner and deputies, we can't tell exactly when, but he will be back here by next week."

Hernandez, 20, was arrested Friday after police found him and the children sleeping inside the man's car, which had stalled along a Las Vegas road.

Police said the children were taken from their mother's north Fort Worth home Jan. 4. Hernandez told investigators he took the children because their mother was too strict with them.

Woman would rather move cattle than keep house

EDITOR'S NOTE: She's a middle-aged mother who had much rather be in the saddle pushing cows than cooking or sewing. And since her husband died a few years back she's been doing plenty of the former and little of the latter.

WOLCOTT, Colo. (AP) — As her horse bounds over the red, sagebrush-covered hills of the V11 Ranch, Evelyn Horn grips saddle and reins in her small, strong hands.

"Push 'em up! Push 'em up! Heeya!" she whoops at the cows, flinging an arm into the air. Riding nearby is her daughter, Trudy England, who helps her run the ranch and push the cows.

On a recent morning, mother and daughter moved a sea of red, brown, white and black cattle to a new pasture, up and down steep gullies, through shimmering stands of aspen and up hillsides, to join up with ranch foreman Ferris Kirby.

For six years since her husband's death, Horn has run the V11 Ranch. According to the U.S. Census Bureau's 1987 agricultural survey, less than one in 10 of the nation's cattle ranches are operated by women.

Horn, 54, grazes about 300 of her own cattle and several hundred belonging to other ranchers on the 1,200-acre ranch near Interstate Highway 70. She leases adjacent land from the federal Bureau of Land Management.

HORN ALSO owns a 1,800-acre ranch near Loma, where she moves the cattle every December. The cattle stay on that ranch, plus 18,200 adjacent acres Horn uses with a BLM permit, through the spring calving season.

As a cattlewoman, Horn haggles over water rights with neighbors and negotiates contracts with other ranchers and leases with the BLM. She rides fences, tracks market trends and decides when to sell the calves she helps deliver every spring.

Now is ideal time for transplantation

Now is an ideal time for planting most ground covers, vines, shrubs, and trees. The most critical aspect of any transplant effort is for the plant to re-establish an effective system of feeder roots before it is subjected to severe stress. By planting now, new plants will have several months during which to proliferate new feeder roots before the rigors of summer heat and drought set in.

Kiker

In fact, research indicates that planting now will give plants almost a full growing season advantage over planting next spring. Furthermore, materials planted now will have enough feeder root development by spring to be able to effectively use an early spring application of fertilizer for even faster growth.

Finally, nursery and garden center personnel usually have more time now to answer questions and help with specific landscape concerns than during the spring rush.

To get your landscaping project off to a good start, select some authoritative books on do-it-yourself landscaping. Most homeowners do not realize how large many trees and shrubs can get and, as a result, they plant too many too close together and thus dwarf the house.

Next choose tough, low-maintenance, pest-resistant plants that are adapted to local environmental conditions.

Smart homeowners will avoid poorly adapted, troublesome or pest ridden plants so common in today's marketplace. Arizona ash, sycamore, cottonwood, poplar, fruitless mulberry, umbrella tree or chinaberry, silver maple, tree-of-heaven, arborvitae and euonymus fall into this category.

When planting, dig generous holes, backfill with an open, well-drained growing mix, and mulch the soil surface with 6-8 inches of dry grass clippings, leaves, straw or other organic material to moderate soil temperature. Water regularly throughout the fall and winter.

To make your landscaping venture a smashing success, remember three things: enlightened planning, proper plant selection and a lot of tender loving care.

CATTLE: Woman takes over ranch

teacher, he taught me everything," she says over her kitchen table after a half-day's work moving cattle. "He kept business diaries and I read and read them."

It was her husband's diaries, she says, that enabled her to run the ranch. After Leonard Horn died in 1985, she used them as a date-by-date manual. Through the documents, Leonard told his wife when to move cattle, what pastures to use, and when to negotiate contracts.

"I was overwhelmed with the estate the first two years, getting all the papers to the attorneys," Horn says. "I rode with Leonard in really bad weather, and cold weather. That didn't scare me. I was scared about not knowing what would happen."

Yet Horn was confident she could run the ranch and everything would be fine. "Leonard taught me, 'It's your decision to make, so live with it and go on.' It's worked for me," she says. "The six years I've been ranching the markets have been up."

BEFORE LEONARD Horn died, Horn was part of a husband-wife team. She wrote checks, cooked and typed reports to the BLM. Team management is a common practice, with ownership lying with the husband and the wife in a supporting role.

'My husband (Leonard) was a very good teacher, he taught me everything. He kept business diaries and I read and read them . . . I was overwhelmed with the estate the first two years, getting all the papers to the attorneys. I rode with Leonard in really bad weather, and cold weather. That didn't scare me. I was scared about not knowing what would happen.'

— Evelyn Horn

"It's more substantial a role than you'd pick up by reading trade journals," says Jim Miller, spokesman for the Colorado Department of Agriculture. He says the female half of a ranching team "is more supporting, ranging from being a technical expert on something, to being basically a hired guy."

"It's not 50-50," says Horn, who readily admits she likes neither cooking nor sewing. She says she never was cut out to be a homemaker.

"It's your duty to do the housework, and get the breakfast, and pack the lunches. But he also wants you to saddle your horse."

After her husband underwent heart surgery, Horn rode with him every day. Keeping one eye on Leonard, Horn learned the ranch.

To keep the BLM leasing rights, Horn needed to run more cattle than her own herd, but she had trouble finding someone willing to entrust their cattle to her.

THEN A young man named Shane Wilson made a deal. "I had the feeling he thought he'd never see his cattle again," she says.

More than four years later, Horn is still running Wilson's cattle.

"She is smarter than most men," says David Christensen, a sheep rancher and longtime family friend. "Lots and lots of men ranchers are not producing calves anywhere near the weight she is. Ranches need to change. She can change."

But the land over which Horn runs her cattle is for sale. Leonard Horn's two daughters from a previous marriage, who share ownership of the V11 Ranch but live out of state, want to sell. The ranch, its water rights and BLM leases, are for sale for $2 million.

Horn says she likely will move down to the Loma ranch. Trudy England says she will go with her mother, taking her husband and son along.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF

MCT

A photographic exhibit opens at the theater Saturday in conjunction with the MCT 1992 membership kick-off from noon to 5 p.m. The photos will be on display at 2000 W. Wadley until Feb. 7.

The photo series "A Day in the Life at Midland Community Theatre" was prompted by a request from the Yokohama Theatre Institute in Japan as part of an exhibition entitled "The Community Theatre in the United States of America, Part III."

Copies of the photos were shipped to Japan where they will be on display until February 1. Some of them were chosen for use in the Yokohama Theatre Institute 1992 flier.

The Yokohama Theatre Institute is an organization of amateur theatre founded in 1952. Since its inception it has organized a variety of activities that include annual exhibitions to introduce the state of professional and amateur theater in the world.

Tony Lopez gets airborne.

Lopez soars high in BMX

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Many's the seventh grader content to consider his or her future in terms of tonight's menu, tomorrow's exam or — in the long term — summer vacation.

But bicycle motocross (BMX) enthusiast Tony Lopez has already drawn a far more complete sketch of what looms ahead.

"I'm aiming for No. 1 in the nation right now. After that I'll be aiming for No. 1 pro," said Tony, 13, a seventh-grade student at Alamo Junior High, whose wheeling has been dealing him in the same direction since he was seven years old.

That's when Tony became the age-group BMX state champion of the American Bicycle Association (ABA) for the first time. A lot has happened since then.

Nothing to prove

■ The Washington Redskins are out to remove any doubts that linger from Super Bowls won under strange circumstances.

By Richard Keil
AP Writer

HERNDON, Va. — The Washington Redskins say they have nothing to prove even though they've only won Super Bowls during strike years. The subject is on their minds, though.

To a man, they deny that their victories in the 1982 and 1987 Super Bowls were cheapened because they came under such bizarre cicumstances.

Do they think about it? That's something else.

"This is a good year for all of us, because there's no strike involved," quarterback Mark Rypien said. "We've gone out and won through 16 games, and no one can say anything about that."

As the Redskins prepare for their Jan. 26 matchup against the Buffalo Bills, the knock against them, if there is one, is that they deserve an asterisk next to their entries in the NFL championship ledger because they win the Super Bowl only in strange, wacky seasons.

In 1982, a strike wiped seven games

MHS teams take on San Angelo

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

While Midland Lee's second-place basketball teams are idle today, Midland High's boys and girls both hope to keep their playoffs hopes alive with wins tonight against San Angelo.

The MHS girls host the Lady Bobcats at 8 p.m. in the Bulldog gymnasium, and are 2-2 in District 4-5A play (16-6 overall). The Bulldog boys are on the road for an 8 p.m. game at the San Angelo gym.

The 'Dogs are 11-10 overall and a distressing 0-3 in district after a 92-78 loss to Odessa High Tuesday, a turn of events that boys head coach Jack Stephenson never would have guessed.

"We feel we can turn this thing around. The district race is certainly not over (Odessa Permian is 2-0 while Lee and Abilene High are both 2-1). But we have to put four quarters together to have a chance," he said.

"The kids understand we have got to do some things and get this thing back to the way it needs to be."

While the perennially strong MHS boys are struggling to get out of the district cellar, the Lady Bulldogs overcame two straight 4-5A losses for a 49-48 win at OHS Tuesday. That victory put MHS in third place behind AHS (18-4, 5-0) and Lee (8-8, 4-1).

And though girls head coach Jim Raughton may not like to overlook anybody, the outlook for tonight's game is optimistic.

San Angelo is 10-11 overall and 1-3 in district play. But being 3½ games out of first place may just give the Lady 'Cats the incentive to relish the spoiler role.

In their last outing, the MHS girls were led in scoring by 5-11 senior post Sally Gibson, who scored 14 points against OHS and is averaging 13.9 a game through MHS' 22 contests. Next in

Howard mum after Green's return visit

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Midland College Chaparrals continued their incredible turn around with a 90-83 win over the Howard College Hawks Thursday night at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum in Big Spring.

Freshman guard Terrance Rone led a fierce second half effort by the first-place Chaps, hitting two clutch three-pointers in the late going and converting two free throws that gave the Chaps an insurmountable lead with 18 seconds remaining.

In other Western Junior College Athletic Conference action, Odessa defeated Frank Phillips, 121-96; New Mexico Junior College downed Clarendon, 94-75, and South Plains trounced New Mexico Military, 103-57.

"This is great," MC head coach Steve Green said afterward. "I'd be lying if I said it wasn't."

Green, who coached at Howard for three years before making the move to Midland last spring, was greeted with a homecoming mum by the Howard cheerleaders in what was his first return visit to the school since leaving.

Rone scored 12 points, all of which came in the second half. Twice in the last 5:30, Rone's field goals gave MC the lead. The biggest was a three-pointer with 2:10 remaining that put the Chaps up, 84-83. Once Rone's trey found net, the Chaps never trailed again.

Three minutes earlier, Rone hit a two-pointer to give MC a 74-73 lead; the next trip down the floor, Rone aced a three-pointer from 24 feet to put the Chaps up 77-73.

And if his field goals weren't enough, Rone stepped to the line with 18 seconds remaining and made both free throws to virtually assure the MC victory by giving the Chaps an 88-83 lead.

"Terrance is like a boxer," Green said. "And he came out and sparred with 'em tonight."

Rone made a difference offensively for the second straight game. Against SPC Monday night, his steal at midcourt and subsequent layup in the late going gave MC a needed momentum shift.

Just prior to Rone's three which put the Chaps ahead, 84-83, Rone made the MC fans in attendance go pale by dribbling the ball off his foot and out of bounds at midcourt, giving Howard possession. The Hawks' Will Macon, though, was called for an offensive foul and the Chaps regained control.

"It was hard to hold," Rone said, "I don't know what happened. I couldn't get control.

"Monday we were the underdog. Today, with coach coming back to his old school, we really wanted this one for him, and for us."

The Chaparrals shot 62 percent in the second half, and finished the game having hit 30-of-55 for 54.5 percent. Howard connected on just 42.9 percent from the field.

"I think Kelon Haynie had his best game of the seaon," Green said. "He let the offense come to him instead of going to it."

Haynie, who came down with several key rebounds both offensively and defensively, finished the game with 14 points on 5-of-7 shooting from the floor.

Charles Gentry scored 11 of his 17 points in the second half before fouling out.

The game — which had 13 lead changes — was bogged down in more muck than a Louisiana bayou, thanks to 53 personal foul whistles and 70 free throw attempts.

"This was a difficult game to play," Green said. "There was no rythym to it whatsoever. It was marred by the action being stopped."

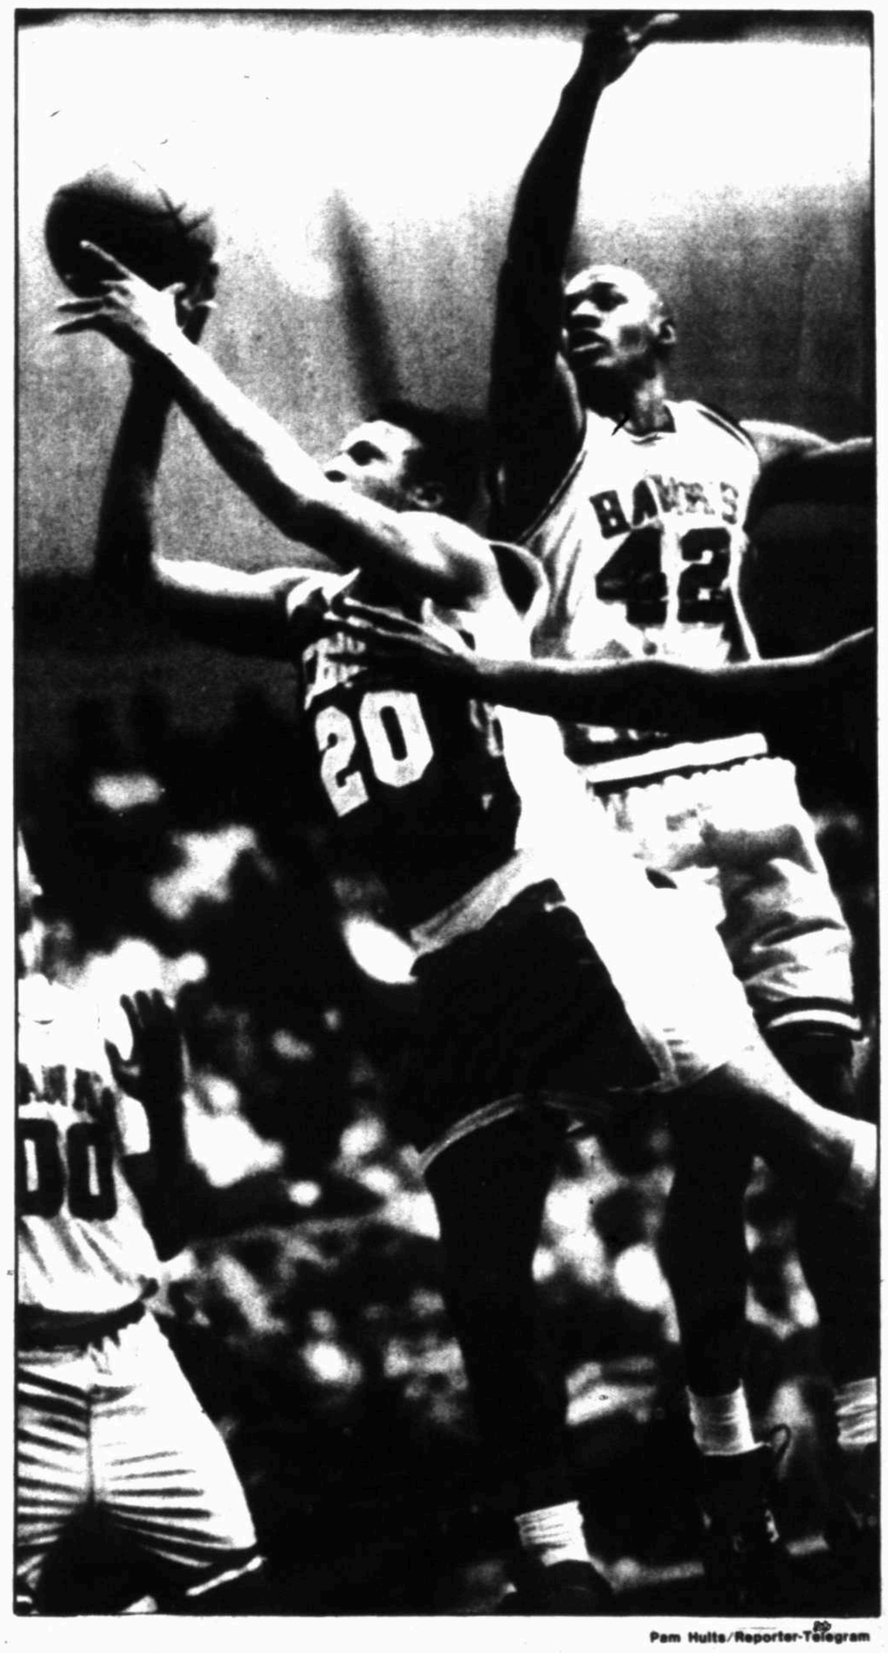

Howard had 21 free throw attempts in the first half, and it took roughly 12 minutes to play the first three minutes of the game. Both head coaches were called for technicals in the first 15 minutes.

The win marked the first time since the 1986-87 season that the Chaps have won five straight conference games. Last season after five WJCAC games, MC was 2-3.

"We just came out hyped," Haynie said. "They were messin' with our coach with that flower. It had a big 'X' in the middle of it."

Elkington wears look of hungry winner

By Jaime Diaz
NYT News Service

Hope Classic

BERMUDA DUNES, Calif. — Steve Elkington has never been accused of being the most ambitious player on the PGA Tour, but after winning the year's first event, he has decided to get greedy this week at the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

Elkington, who won the Tournament of Champions in a playoff with Brad Faxon last Sunday, shot a six-under-par 66 at Indian Wells Country Club on Thursday.

That was good enough to put him at 11-under-par 133 after two rounds, the lowest score among Thursday's early finishers.

Also finishing the second round of the five-round 90-hole event at 133 was Neal Lancaster. This 29-year-old journeyman, a three-year veteran of the PGA Tour, shot a 66 at Indian Wells that included a seven-under-par 29 on the back nine.

In the early group at 134 were Gene Sauers, Brian Claar and Kenny Perry.

Arnold Palmer, a five-time Hope winner who at age 62 created a sensation in Wednesday's opening round with a 66, faltered Thursday on his way to a two-over 74 at La Quinta Country Club and was at 140.

For the Australian-born Elkington, the possessor of one of the smoothest swings on tour, golf has never seemed particularly difficult. Despite having won two tournaments in his previous five years on tour, he has often been looked upon as an underachiever who didn't know his own ability.

But winning last weekend seems to have made Elkington hungry. Rather than bask in glory, he has come to the desert this week and made 11 birdies in 36 holes.

"Jack Burke said last night that my clubs don't know I won last week," said Elkington, who is trying to match what Steve Jones did in 1989 by winning the first two tournaments of the year. "I've found it hard to concentrate because of last week. But I want to do well here. I want to get greedy."

The conditions at the Hope, where bunches of birdies are mandatory for survival, are further fueling Elkington's aggressiveness.

"It's an attitude thing here," said Elkington of the perfect scoring conditions that prevail at the four courses being used in the tournament.

"You know you have to get at least two birdies on each nine to have a chance, so you better bring your putter with you."

Claar certainly did, although it was one he purported not to like. He shot a nine-under-par 63 at Bermuda Dunes that put him one shot behind Elkington and Lancaster.

"I played with a putter I didn't like today and I made everything," said Claar of a club that he perceives to be slightly bent. "I hate it when I put it down, especially on little putts. But for now, I'm going to leave it in the bag. I guess it ain't broke, so I'm not going to fix it."

Dodgers sign players

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Catchers Terry Steinbach and B.J. Surhoff agreed to one-year contracts Thursday, as did pitcher Jimmy Jones and infielder Casey Candaele.

The Los Angeles Dodgers signed first baseman Todd Benzinger, left-handed pitcher John Candelaria and infielder Lenny Harris to one-year contracts, reducing to 147 the number of players remaining in salary arbitration.

New York Mets infielder Dave Magadan, meanwhile, became the first player to exchange salary figures with his club. Magadan, who made $1.25 million in 1991, asked for a raise to $1.6 million while the Mets offered a 5 percent cut to $1,187,500.

Steinbach and Oakland agreed to a $1 million raise to $2.05 million. Surhoff's deal with Milwaukee happened late in the day and the terms weren't immediately available.

Jones and Candaele doubled their salaries with Houston, Candaele from $450,000 to $905,000 and Jones from $205,000 to $450,000.

Figures for Benzinger, Candelaria and Harris weren't immediately available.

The players remaining in arbitration will exchange figures with their clubs on Friday. For players and teams who don't settle, hearings will be held in the first three weeks of February.

Daly could face paternity suit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — John Daly, the surprise winner of 1991 PGA Championship, may soon face a palimony and paternity suit from his former girlfriend, lawyer Marvin Mitchelson said Thursday.

Daly and Bettye Fulford broke up "just before Christmas," said Mitchelson, who is known for handling suits involving the domestic discords of celebrities.

"We're trying to work out something right now and if we don't we're going to have to file an action next week, probably for palimony and paternity as well," he said from Los Angeles.

Mitchelson said Fulford is pregnant.

The term palimony, drawn from "alimony," refers to settlements reached between couples who have lived together but were not married.

BMX: Lopez gets factory sponsor

(From 1D)

In May of 1991 Tony was picked up for sponsorship by Robinson Racing, a factory team based in Huntington Beach, Calif.

And after capturing his sixth consecutive state ABA crown, he capped a banner '91 season with a national title in the 13-year-old Expert Division at the ABA Grand Nationals during Thanksgiving weekend in Oklahoma City.

Tony, who finished first among 13-year-olds in Cruiser Class (24-inch bikes) and Open Class (20-inch) in Oklahoma City, emerged from the Grand Nationals as the second-ranked ABA amateur racer in the nation as a 15-year old edged him by just two points in the Overall Division.

Grand National entrants ranged in age from three to 47 and each age group winner was eligible to compete in the Overall Division championship.

"I'm close, very close (to No. 1 overall). It will just take hard work and dedication," Tony said. "The more I ride the faster I'll get."

That belief is shared by Robinson Racing, which added Tony to its team of three amateurs and one-professional last May after a successful showing in El Paso, Tony's father Bob Lopez said.

"What got their (Robinson's) attention was the fact that Tony was winning all these state championships and doing so well at the national events we could afford to attend, and he was getting it done without the benefit of a local racing facility in Midland," Bob said.

"They signed him up when they noticed he was racing just a couple of times a month instead of every week, like some of the kids in California and other states, and was beating them."

Factory sponsorship put Tony on the fast track to national recognition in BMX racing.

National motocross rankings are determined through points garnered at over a dozen ABA sanctioned races in several different states each year. Before Robinson Racing entered the picture the Lopez' could not afford to take Tony to the number of events necessary to vie for a national points title.

Now the family drops him off at the airport and he takes off for ABA races on his own.

"It's great. They pay for my airplane flights, my room and board, my bikes and parts when I need them," said Tony, who began the 1992 season with a pair of first-place finishes in Reno, Nev. last weekend.

"He had to miss a day of school to go, but it's what he wants to do and we're behind him all the way," Bob said. "He has our blessing if he wants to become a professional. There's mega-bucks in contingencies, endorsements and prize money for the top racers.

"The team picks him up at the airport and they take good care of him. His fees, motels and uniforms are all paid for.

"And we keep in close touch when we can't be there," he added.

Robinson Racing, which with Tony's help took second-place team honors at the 1991 Grand Nationals with the minimum number of team members (four), also grabbed second-place honors at the season-opener in Reno. The next stop for Tony and Robinson Racing is in Phoenix, Ariz. in February.

Since amateurs cannot turn professional until they are 16 years of age, Alamo's basketball and football coaches don't have to worry about losing team member Tony just yet.

Yet some current motocross pros might be the ones most grateful for the ABA's age restrictions when Tony — who also happens to be the No. 1 rider in the National Bicycle League — says, "I don't worry about who I've got to race, I just beat them."

Errors end McEnroe's magic

Associated Press

Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia — Patrick McEnroe's magic at the Australian Open ran out in a draining five-setter against Andrei Chesnokov after 92 errors capped by a double-fault into the net on match point.

McEnroe, a semifinalist last year, fell 6-4, 1-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3 in a third-round match Friday about six hours before his brother John was scheduled to play against defending champion Boris Becker.

Chesnokov broke the younger McEnroe in his last three service games, the final time with the help of an unforced error wide by McEnroe on an easy backhand at deuce. That was followed by two weak serves on match point.

It was an error-filled baseline duel from the start, with Chesnokov making just fewer mistakes to take the first set. But the Russian recovered from a long lapse in the second and third sets to wear down McEnroe.

David Wheaton, happy with his $2 million prize at the Grand Slam Cup but hoping to win an actual Grand Slam title this year, reached the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 victory over Lars Koslowski. Wheaton pounded out five of his 10 aces in the final set.

Monica Seles' speed tennis show raced unimpeded into the round of 16.

Seles has spent barely three hours on court and hasn't dropped a set in her first three victories, the latest a 6-1, 6-1 romp in 50 minutes over Yayuk Basuki, the most improved woman player in the world last year in rising from 266 to 35 in the rankings.

Seles, the defending champion and top seed, used the match to sharpen her baseline game rather than the serve-and-volley style she's been working on in practice.

The neck muscle she strained last week is fine now, she said, though she's still getting treatment for it. But she simply didn't need to go to the net against Basuki, who made 42 errors to Seles' 15.

"When I go out for a match, I never try anything tactical," Seles said. "I just go out there and play. I never go into a match with a game plan."

Unsatisfied with merely clobbering her opponents, she worries about eliminating the few mistakes she's been making after a two-month layoff.

"Everybody from now on is a big threat," said Seles, who dropped only 15 points while winning nine straight games. "I tell myself to play a little better. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't."

Seles, who won all three of the Grand Slam events she entered last year, plus the Virginia Slims Championship, seems to be enjoying her status as the undisputed queen of tennis at age 18.

Not all her male counterparts are so enamored with the limelight, nor are they as much the center of attention.

Boris Becker, the defending Australian Open champion, dons a black wig so he won't be recognized away from the courts. Jim Courier simply doffs his baseball cap.

Courier, the anonymous American, walks around with hair as red as Becker's natural locks, and isn't even offered "G'day" from the fans, much less is he besieged for autographs.

They're backing Courier at the betting booth, cheering for him on the court, but they haven't a clue who is when he strolls hatless among them. Andre Agassi, popping up on television commercials during nearly every match, is one of the best-known American players, and he's never even played here.

REDSKINS: Players deny stigma of Super seasons

from the schedule in a season where the Redskins ended up defeating the Miami Dolphins in the Super Bowl. In 1987, replacement players took the field for three games; a bunch of unknowns helped the Redskins win all of those contests. Washington routed Denver in the Super Bowl that year.

No big deal, right? Wrong. As it happened, Washington's three games were against NFC rivals Phoenix, New York and Dallas; by going undefeated in those replacement contests, the Redskins were well on their way to clinching the NFC East.

To make matters worse, the Redskins stumbled in the years following their strike-tainted league titles.

The 1983 Redskins, many felt, was better than the team that won the year before. Then the Los Angeles Raiders upset Washington 38-9 in the Super Bowl.

"That was a fantastic year," wide receiver Art Monk said. "We kind of walked over everybody. I think we went in overconfident."

What does he recall from that debacle?

"I can see a punt being blocked, an interception," Monk said with a rueful smile. "Nothing good."

Things were even worse in 1988, when the Redskins suffered from an affliction that's become increasingly common in the NFL: Post-Super Bowl Syndrome. Like the New York Giants of 1987 and 1991, Washington (7-9) couldn't even get back in the playoffs in the season they defended their championship.

But most of the other Redskins steadfastly deny that they feel any stigma from winning only in years where talk of labor discord and picket line strategy outweighed discussions about touchdowns and defense.

"I don't think anybody feels any sense of being slighted because we've won in strike years," said center Jeff Bostic, one of eight Redskins to play on all three Washington Super Bowl teams under coach Joe Gibbs. "I think the thing with our team is, nobody really cares what everybody says. We know what we've accomplished."

The same refrain is heard from the coaching staff.

"He (Gibbs) is very proud of his other Super Bowl teams," said offensive line coach Jim Hanifan, who was the Cardinals' head coach when Washington last won the Super Bowl. "There are a lot of guys in the league who would like to be in that situation."

Even retired players chimed in.

"It's absolutely not" a factor, said former Redskin quarterback Joe Theismann, who led the 1982 and 1983 squads. "Everybody else in the league had the same opportunities, whether to come back strong after the strike in '82 or to field a good replacement team in 1987. No way does that change anything."

What about Gibbs, who has said this Super Bowl means more to him than the prior three?

"Oh, I don't want to get into that," he said. "This is special, more than the others, but the longer you're around, the more you appreciate them."

One thing is for sure: Gibbs isn't likely to allow his players to become cocky as they get ready for the Bills, and he's pointing to the 1983 team as an indication of how things can go wrong for even the strongest of clubs.

"I think we've shown that anybody can beat us, but at other times, we've played like we could beat anybody," Gibbs said. "It seems like in '83, there were a lot of games where it was over at halftime."

And, after all, 1983 wasn't a strike year.

MHS: Goodley leads in points

scoring line for the Lady Bulldogs is senior wing Ashley Chase with 9.8 ppg, while sophomore guard Julie Chancellor comes in with 6.7.

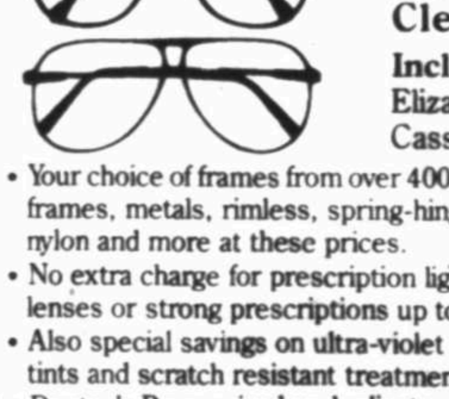

For the MHS boys, the key for a win on a hostile floor will be slowing 6-5 Bobcat Robert Smith, according to Stephenson. Smith enters the game averaging 22 points and 14 rebounds in district play.

"They've got probably one of the best players in the league in Robert Smith, he just plays everywhere. He can shoot the three, he can drive, post up — he's just an excellent player," Stephenson said. "We've got to control him, though they have some other kids who can score too."

Post Antwan Goodley, a 6-4 junior, is the leading Bulldog scorer with 15.3 points a game, while Mike Melzer is averaging 12.7. Senior Brian Rounding adds 8.7 ppg, while sophomore point guard Joseph Golding comes in with 7.6. Golding also is averaging 7.5 assists in district play.

"I don't think we've been playing poorly, we've just been shooting poorly. Each game we have had one quarter where that really hurt us. If we can cut that out, we will be all right," Stephenson said.

Spurs lift coach to 599th victory

Associated Press

NBA

MINNEAPOLIS — Terry Cummings had 23 points and 11 rebounds and David Robinson added 20 points as the San Antonio Spurs again beat the Minnesota Timberwolves, 125-111 Thursday night.

The Spurs won for the fifth time in six games. They are 11-1 overall against Minnesota.

The victory was the 599th in the professional coaching career of Larry Brown, who has spents 13 seasons in the NBA and old ABA. Brown will try for his 600th victory Friday night in Chicago.

Nuggets 101, Mavericks 90

DALLAS — Winston Garland scored 25 points and broke open the game with three straight buckets late in the fourth period as Denver defeated Dallas, the Mavericks' 10th consecutive loss.

The victory broke an eight-game road losing streak for Denver, which has won only two of its last seven games.

Garland took charge when the Mavericks made a fourth-quarter rally and hit three straight baskets to give Denver an 86-82 lead with 3:48 left.

Warriors 98, Rockets 91

HOUSTON — Tim Hardaway had 27 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists and Billy Owens led a late run that carried Golden State past Houston.

The Warriors overcame an early 17-point deficit and won for the seventh time in nine games. They are 12-5 on the road.

Bulls 100, Cavs 85

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Michael Jordan scored 35 points despite picking up his fourth foul early in the second half and Chicago beat Cleveland in a meeting of the NBA's two leading teams.

The win was Chicago's seventh straight, extending the Bulls' best start ever to 31-5. Cleveland (24-11) lost its second straight since matching a team record with 11 consecutive wins.

The Bulls have won their last 12 games against Cleveland.

Heat 102, Bullets 94

LANDOVER, Md. — Glen Rice scored 35 points, including the clinching basket with 1:20 left, to lead Miami past Washington.

Rice made 12 of 17 shots, including eight of 10 in the second half, as the Heat won their second straight after losing four in a row and eight of nine. Rice scored 21 points in the second half and 11 in the fourth quarter.

Rony Seikaly had 14 points and 20 rebounds for Miami, now 5-15 on the road.

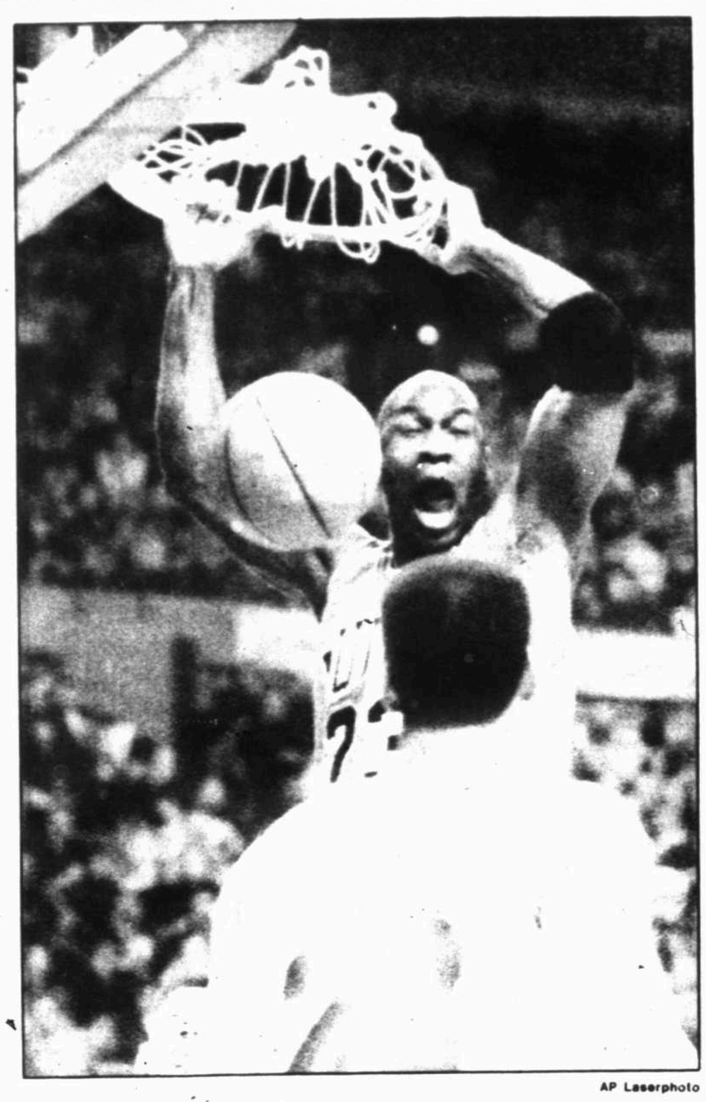

Jazz 116, Hawks 111

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 37 points and led a third-quarter rally that sent the Utah Jazz over Atlanta.

John Stockton added 21 points and 19 assists and Jeff Malone scored 21 as Utah improved to 15-1 at home.

Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 29 points, but only eight came in the second half. Duane Ferrell had 17 points.

The Hawks led 76-68 with 7:53 left in the third quarter.

Michael Jordan dunks on Larry Nance as the Chicago Bulls defeated Cleveland, 100-85 Thursday night.

Sonics 101, Clippers 98

SEATTLE — Shawn Kemp's four free throws in the final minute rallied Seattle over the Clippers.

The Clippers led 98-97 before Kemp made two free throws with 42.4 seconds left to put the Sonics ahead.

Ricky Pierce led the Sonics with 26 points and scored 10 of their final 14 points in Seattle's first game under interim coach Bob Kloppenburg. He replaced K.C. Jones, who was fired Wednesday.

Lakers' attendance up despite loss of Magic

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Showtime, as experienced by fans of the Los Angeles Lakers for the past 12 years, is over. With Magic Johnson retired, the Forum will never be the same.

Nevertheless, fans of the Lakers are turning out in greater numbers this season than they did last season. The average attendance through 18 home dates is 16,848, with four sellouts. Last year through 18 games, the attendance averaged 16,624 with two sellouts.

"I think to amplify this amazing statistic is we haven't had a lot of the top teams in here," longtime Lakers broadcaster Chick Hearn said before Wednesday night's game against the Charlotte Hornets. "We've still got Chicago, Boston, New York, Detroit, and several other good teams coming in.

"My mail indicates the fan support is very, very solid. I think a lot of it is a tribute to Magic. I think a lot of fans are like I am, they can't believe it yet. The shock hasn't worn off."

Hearn, who saw every game Johnson played with the Lakers, added sadly, "I think anybody would be a fool to tell you they're getting the same thrills now that they got the last 12 years. My job's a lot harder now."

Johnson announced his retirement on Nov. 7 because he had contracted the AIDS virus.

Even though attendance is up, it needs to get better in order to equal last year's attendance figures. The final average attendance for 41 home dates was 17,005 with 18 sellouts. The last five home games and 11 of the last 13 sold out.

The Lakers were 33-8 at home and 58-24 overall last season. Through 18 home dates, they were 14-4. This season, they're 12-6 at home and 22-14 overall.

There may be more fans, but there are also new sounds — like booing.

When the Lakers lost to Indiana 114-87 on Jan. 3, they were booed off the floor. And when they left trailing Orlando 56-46 last Sunday night, the boos were heard again.

"It's as bad as I've ever heard at the Forum," Hearn said of the boos following the Indiana game. "The shock of it was we hadn't heard it since Magic got here. The Lakers stunk out the joint that night. It didn't bother me as much as it did Jerry West."

West, the Lakers' general manager, was livid and said the Lakers weren't getting the kind of veteran leadership they needed.

"We were so bad, maybe the booing helped us," Hearn said. "It's like a baby who thinks he's never going to get spanked."

Since losing to the Pacers, the Lakers are 5-1.

Actor Jack Nicholson, perhaps the best-known Lakers fan, said before Wednesday night's 95-93 Los Angeles victory over Charlotte that he wasn't abandoning his team.

"It's fun, the game's fantastic," he said. "The fans are playing hurt, that's the real reaction. It's like wine, you go by the season. These are professionals. I'm supporting the ballclub.

"The NBA, man, it's a great evening's entertainment. You've got to have a rooting interest. Winning isn't everything. This is fun."

Sitting in a much more expensive seat near the court, Robert Rodriguez, a 31-year-old electromechanical engineer from Northridge attending the game with his 9-year-old son, said he would support the Lakers, win or lose.

"Through better or worse, you stay with them," he said.

James wins Bear Bryant Award

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Washington coach Don James didn't have to share anything with Miami's Dennis Erickson on Thursday night.

James, who led Washington to a 12-0 record and a share of the national championship, received the Bear Bryant Award as the college coach of the year, beating out Erickson and two other finalists, Georgia Tech's Bill Lewis and Florida's Steve Spurrier.

Washington was voted the No. 1 team in the nation in the coaches' poll by USA Today-CNN, and Erickson led the Hurricane to The Associated Press title for the second time in three years.

James said he wouldn't have objected to sharing again.

"I didn't mind sharing the last award," James said. "I'm going to be down in Miami soon. We might be able to tee it up on the golf course and decide the winner."

The Football Writers Association of America has presented the coach of the year award since 1957. Since 1986, the award has carried the name of Paul "Bear" Bryant, the former Alabama coach who died of a heart attack in 1983.

Washington completed its unbeaten season with an impressive 34-14 victory over Michigan in the Rose Bowl. The Huskies won the coaches' poll and they were the closest second place finisher in the history of the AP poll, finishing four points behind the Hurricane.

It was James' second trip to Houston in the past two months. He accompanied Husky All-American defensive tackle Steve Emtman to accept the Lombardi Award as the nation's top collegiate lineman.

"Steve told me there was pressure on me (to win) coming down here again," James joked.

The Huskies might have won the national title last season had they not lost to UCLA, a team they were favored to beat by three touchdowns, James said.

"Our team didn't want to have any valleys this season, and we didn't," James said. "We remembered if we'd beaten UCLA last season we might have won the national championship.

"We didn't want that to happen again."

Lewis completed his third season at East Carolina by leading the Pirates to a 10-1 record, followed by a 37-34 victory over North Carolina State in the Peach Bowl.

He then became the head coach at Georgia Tech, replacing Bobby Ross, the 1991 Bryan winner, who resigned to become head coach of the NFL San Diego Chargers. Lewis was an assistant coach at Georgia Tech in 1971-73.

Mavericks place Brad Davis on IR

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks placed guard Brad Davis on the injured list Thursday night and announced that 6-4 guard Tracy Moore, the leading scorer in the Continental Basketball Association, was expected to sign a 10-day contract on Friday.

Moore, who averages 30.7 points per game for the Tulsa Zone, is a 4-year CBA veteran. He played collegiately for the Tulsa Hurricane.

Davis is suffering from back problems and must sit out a minimum of five games. He will be eligible to return for the Jan. 29 game against San Antonio.

Past grid heroes make the College Hall of Fame

Associated Press

LARCHMONT, N.Y. — John Ralston, who coached at Stanford and Utah State, and Morgan State's Earl Banks were elected Thursday along with 11 former All-Americans to the College Football Hall of Fame.

Joining the coaches were quarterback Craig Morton of California; running backs Ron Johnson of Michigan and Bob Odell of Penn; defensive lineman Jack Youngblood of Florida; offensive linemen Lou Michaels of Kentucky, Loyd Phillips of Arkansas and Jim Weatherall of Oklahoma; linebackers Jim Lynch of Notre Dame and Larry Morris of Georgia Tech, and receivers Art Weiner of North Carolina and Howard Twilley of Tulsa.

Ralston compiled an 86-47-4 record in 13 years at the college level, including 31-11-1 at Utah State from 1959-62. Banks was 96-31-2 from 1960-73, including a 31-game winning streak from 1965-68.

Among the players, Lynch (1964-65) won the Maxwell Trophy.

Friend recalls Ali's frequent generosity

By George W. Hackett
AP Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — When he was a cop on the block, Joe Martin met a 12-year-old crying over a stolen bicycle. The boy was looking for the thief to punch him out.

"I told him he'd better come with me and learn how to fight first," said Martin, who spent his off-duty hours coaching kids for Golden Gloves competition.

The youngster was Cassius Clay.

Muhammad Ali turns 50 today and Martin, who sees him frequently, said, "He's wearing his age well, considering the pounding he's taken over the years. Ali was one of two world champions that I trained, and he's still the best man who ever climbed into a ring."

Martin, who will be 76 next month, said his early years with Ali were a mixture of hard work and fun. "He weighed about 80 pounds but I put muscle on him and developed his skills. He'd clown around with other boys in the gym and I'd let him get away with it, sometimes."

Martin also said he was responsible for removing the barrier that existed then between black and white amateur fighters.

"The blacks trained in one gym and the whites in another," he said. "Sheer foolishness. I brought them together in the Golden Gloves and on a local television show each Saturday. Ali was always a big hit."

Under Martin, Ali won six Kentucky Golden Gloves titles, two national Golden Gloves tournaments, two national AAU crowns and capped it off with a gold medal at the 1960 Olympics.

At that point. Martin stepped aside and Ali's future was placed in the hands of 11 businessmen who provided the money for him to turn pro.

"It was a unique contract," said Gordon Davidson, attorney for the group which gave Ali a $10,000 bonus for signing.

"We paid expenses, provided him with a year-around home in Florida, shared his income, and put 15 percent of his earnings, after taxes, into a trust fund. It couldn't be touched until he turned 35 or retired permanently."

Davidson said the sponsors, who put up $2,800 apiece, "were babes in the jungle but we survived. We made a very, very modest profit. The only arm-twisting we ever did on Ali was over the trust fund."

Ali eventually collected the money and turned it over to his family, Davidson said.

Ali's mother, Odessa Grady Clay, suffered a stroke after the death last year of her husband, Cassius Marcellus Clay Sr., a sign and billboard painter.

Their other son, Rahaman Ali, works for the city of Louisville. Both brothers converted to the Muslim faith after Ali won the first of his three heavyweight championships.

When Ali comes back to his hometown, he may stroll along the downtown boulevard that the city renamed for him or drop by the office of Mayor Jerry Abramson.

"We grew up together and used to shoot baskets behind my father's grocery. Ali was pretty good at it," Abramson said recently. "He also had a habit of running through the store and flipping open the doors on the ice chests, with dad in close pursuit."

Martin has dozens of stories he can tell about Ali, including his generosity and his love for kids. A police officer for 34 years, Martin laughs when he remembers Ali's stolen bike.

"That crime never was solved," he said.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A major career decision must be made in the next few weeks. A new approach could mean a magnificent victory by the summer. A financial matter will be settled in your favor next September. Travel sets the stage for happy romance in October. Although you love to spend time alone, you will benefit greatly from socializing more. Have friends over during the winter holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer Muhammad Ali, actor James Earl Jones, actress Betty White, puppeteer Shari Lewis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Diversification helps your finances and career. Swallow your pride and take a less-than-ideal job until something better comes along. Pursuing a new sport or hobby energizes you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not be surprised if someone wants to team up with you. Think this person's proposal over calmly. A period of meditation brings answers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There may be innumerable details to attend to if you have been away for any length of time. Play the role of peacemaker within the family circle. Kind words mend a rift.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remember what happened before when you took risks you could not afford. A cautious approach will save both your money and your reputation. Help an older person who is in distress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Recreational pastimes that take your mind off your daily duties are good for your health. If you like watching TV, check this weekend's programs. A "special" will give you a new perspective.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you have talent and are ready to face the public, refuse to lose any more time in getting started. Promote yourself. An influential person makes you an attractive offer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Welcome advice from your mate and other people who have years of experience behind them. Give your imagination a gentle nudge and new options will materialize. A romantic gesture enchants you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a new approach in your professional and personal life. A strong interest in community events makes life more exciting. Beware of getting entangled in a difficult emotional situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are in an excellent position to operate effectively from behind the scenes. Money plays a big role in a career decision. Cut through a romantic haze tonight. Ask direct questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The initiative is yours once again. You have learned the value of maneuvering with great subtlety. Crafts and board games are popular on the home front this evening. Be a good sport.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Decisions made in the morning could be overthrown in the afternoon. Speak up if disappointed. Do not change fiscal policies that have stood the test of time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Views on both sides may tally but other factors may prevent you from reaching an agreement. Clean out your emotional closet over the next few days. Exactly what is your romantic agenda?

TODAY'S CHILDREN are inventive and original, always looking for a new way to do things. Born survivors, these Capricorns can handle adversity better than most people. Although willing to work hard to achieve success, these Capricorns will not sacrifice family life for their careers. They know that a happy home is essential to their mental and spiritual well-being. Patient and generous, they make wonderful parents — swift to praise, slow to criticize.

The world's top-ranked player, Bob Hamman of Dallas, playing with Nick Nickell of Raleigh, N.C., added yet another title to his collection by winning the prestigious Blue Ribbon Pairs at the recent Fall North American Championships in Indianapolis. Had he failed to do so, he could have blamed his wife, Petra.

In the final session, Petra and her partner, Joan Jackson, gave the winners one of their few zeroes in the event. When the bidding revealed a double fit in the rounded suits, Jackson, South, bid an aggressive heart game which looked like it was going down because of a bad trump break.

Declarer ruffed the second spade and cashed the king and ace of trumps to get the bad news that there were two trump losers. However, the bidding had been revealing, and declarer made the most of it.

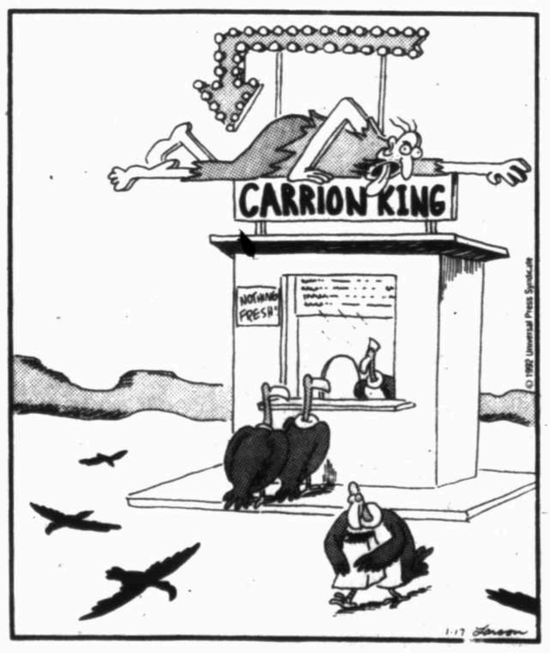

After crossing to the king of diamonds, declarer led the queen of clubs, covered by the king and taken with the ace. West's contribution of the eight to this trick did not go unnoticed. The ace of diamonds and a diamond ruff put declarer in dummy for a club lead. The seven was finessed successfully, and the seven was finessed successfully, and the coup de grace was swiftly administered.

Declarer exited with a trump, and that was that. Bob could cash his remaining trump winner, but then was forced to lead away from the 10 of clubs into declarer's J 9 tenace. Declarer lost only one spade and two trumps.

Duchess begins Florida visit

PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Duchess of York arrived in Florida on Thursday, pursued by a flap over her friendship with an American and encountering new controversy over a planned dinner at a club that excludes Jews and blacks.

Duchess of York

Prince Andrew's wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, was greeted by local dignitaries when she arrived from Miami after a flight from London.

The schedule of the duchess' four-day visit includes a private dinner-dance Saturday at the Everglades Club to honor actress and wildlife conservationist Stefanie Powers.

The Anti-Defamation League has complained to the British Embassy about the dinner at the exclusive club.

"The club's discriminatory record is well-documented and its ugly reputation is well known in Palm Beach," said Arthur Teitelbaum, southern U.S. director for the Jewish organization.

Teitelbaum said his organization made a formal complaint to the British Embassy.

The duchess won't change her plans, said British Embassy spokesman Michael Price.

"This is not a club function," Price said. "The host has simply chosen that venue. The duchess is simply one of a number of guests. Her attendance has nothing to do with the club as such."

Price said her appearance "is not in any way endorsing or not endorsing the club's membership policies."

Everglades Club officials declined to comment, as did Maggy Scherer, hostess of the dinner and organizer of the weekend's events.

The duchess left London amid a flap in Britain's tabloid press over her friendship with the adopted son of a Texas oil tycoon.

The Daily Mail reported Wednesday that photographs from a Mediterranean vacation in 1990 were found by a cleaner at a London apartment vacated by Steve Wyatt, son of Texas socialite Lynn Wyatt and adopted son of Houston oil tycoon Oscar Wyatt.

The newspaper said one photograph showed the 32-year-old duchess with her arm behind Wyatt's back and his arm around her shoulder.

The Mail's gossip columnist, Nigel Dempster, said the duchess and Wyatt became good friends in 1990 after she became "bored, lonely — and deeply depressed" while pregnant with her second child.

Buckingham Palace declined to comment.

SALT LAKE CITY — In discussing the film script of "This Is My Life," premiering Thursday night, first-time director Nora Ephron was told by veteran director Rob Reiner that children are happy if their mothers are happy.

She disagreed.

"Kids are happy if their mothers are there," she contended.

"If you give kids a choice — your mother in the next room on the verge of suicide vs. your mother in ecstasy in Hawaii — they'll choose suicide in the next room, believe me."

Reiner, who is a friend of Ephron and has no connection with the movie, told her to "put that in the script." She did.

The script was written by Ephron and her sister, Delia, and is based on a 1988 Meg Wolitzer novel of the same name. The movie was opening the annual Sundance Film Festival and will be screened nationally next month.

The film follows the story of Dottie Ingels, a single mother who works in the cosmetics department at Macy's but is determined to make it big as a stand-up comedian. It examines the relationship that develops between Ingels and her daughters as her career takes off.

The pledges will be displayed at a memorial to the slain civil rights leader erected at the King Center for Nonviolent Social Change in Atlanta.

Spock, whose books on child-rearing molded the baby-boom generation, is a part-time resident of the Virgin Islands.

The islands' government also commissioned an artist to decorate lottery sheets with portraits of King's life.

NEW YORK — Patricia Kluge, former wife of media tycoon John Kluge, will appear topless in the March issue of Penthouse, the magazine said Thursday.

Three or four small photos of her, taken in the 1970s when she was a model for a British men's magazine, will accompany the "U.S.A. Confidential" column by contributing editor Sharon Churcher, said Penthouse spokeswoman Catherine Koatz.

Described as a "political gossip column," the article will deal with Mrs. Kluge's friendship with Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder, Ms. Koatz said. Wilder was heavily criticized for his use of a state helicopter to visit Mrs. Kluge's secluded estate near Charlottesville in 1990.

Mrs. Kluge, 43, is "topless at least in a couple" of the photos, Ms. Koatz said.

Tar Heels master Wake Forest

Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — George Lynch got 14th-ranked North Carolina out of a shooting slump by making all six of his shots in the second half as the Tar Heels continued their mastery of Wake Forest with a 90-79 victory Thursday night.

Before Lynch got hot, the Tar Heels endured a cold spell that cost them a big lead in the first half. When Lynch found his touch, so did his teammates. He scored an ACC career-high 26 points on 11 of 13 shooting from the field.

North Carolina (12-2, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) hit 14 of its first 16 field goals in the second half and ran up a 19-for-24 effort for 79.1 percent.

As for the streak in the series, North Carolina has won its last nine games against Wake Forest, and 21 of the last 22. The Demon Deacons haven't beaten North Carolina since January 1988.

The Tar Heels were shooting at a 60 percent clip in the first 13 minutes of play, but went nearly the final seven minutes of the first half without a basket.

No. 2 UCLA 99, Oregon 71

LOS ANGELES — UCLA ran its record to 11-0 with a victory over Oregon and the Briuns also got a good omen — Ed O'Bannon made his highly anticipated debut.

Tracy Murray scored 21 points for the Bruins, who took control early and were in command all the way as they ran their Pacific-10 mark to 3-0. The Ducks (5-7, 1-2) lost for the fifth time in six games.

O'Bannon, regarded as one of the nation's finest prep players in 1990, had been unable to play for the Bruins because he underwent major reconstructive surgery on his left knee in October 1991.

His debut this season was delayed again when he experienced some soreness in the knee, and arthroscopic surgery was performed on Nov. 5.

No. 25 Louisville 60
South Florida 47

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Reserve center Brian Hopgood scored seven points during a 10-0 run in the second half that carried Louisville to its first Metro Conference victory.

Louisville (9-3 overall, 1-2 Metro) was clinging to a 45-44 lead when Hopgood completed a three-point play with 7:02 left.

South Florida (10-4, 0-2) turned the ball over 30 seconds later, and Hopgood came back with a layup off a pass from Keith LeGree for a 50-44 advantage.

Washington 62,
No. 7 Arizona 60

SEATTLE — Rich Manning sank a 15-foot jump shot from the side with one second to go and Washington stung Arizona.

Manning led the Huskies (8-4 overall, 2-0 Pacific-10) to their upset win with 16 points.

The Wildcats (10-3, 1-2), who had a 71-game homecourt winning streak broken by UCLA last Saturday, were led by Ed Stokes' 19.

Washington, which beat Arizona in Seattle for the second straight season, led 39-27 at halftime and was ahead 43-28 early in the second half.

No. 19 Tulane 80,
Virginia Tech 60

NEW ORLEANS — Pointer Williams and "The Posse" ran off 15 straight points midway through the second half, leading undefeated Tulane over Virginia Tech.

Tech (6-7 overall, 1-2 Metro Conference) turned the ball over on seven consecutive possessions against the pressure of Tulane's trapping defense, and the Green Wave (13-0, 2-0) got 15 points off the turnovers during the run.

Walsh accepts Cardinal rule

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Bill Walsh became the coach at Stanford University on Thursday, declining a chance to rejoin the San Francisco 49ers to return to the scene of his happiest coaching days.

Walsh, 60, wound up at Stanford less than a week after all but signing a contract with the 49ers to become a full-time consultant for the NFL team. Walsh coached the Cardinal for two seasons before taking over the 49ers in 1979, a team he led to three Super Bowl championships in 10 seasons.

"We have work that we do and I feel that I am still at my best relating to people, teaching the game of football to players and the coaches," Walsh said Thursday at Stanford. "I thoroughly enjoy the development of a young athlete and then putting the components together in an equation and then competing."

Walsh replaced Dennis Green, who left Stanford after three seasons to become the head coach of the Minnesota Vikings, and left the 49ers without someone who was expected to play a key role on their player personnel staff.

49ers owner Ed DeBartolo, team President Carmen Policy, and coach George Seifert attended the news conference introducing Walsh at Stanford, as did running back Roger Craig of the Los Angeles Raiders who formerly played for the 49ers.

"I had a gut feeling that he was going to come back (to Stanford)," said DeBartolo. "Every time I would talk to Bill he would say how much he likes to be around kids. He always talked about his days at Stanford.

"He would have been a big help with our offensive coordinator, but I'll think we'll be all right."

Choosing Stanford over the 49ers was by no means easy for Walsh.

"It was very difficult," Walsh said. "I love the 49ers. I love those men. I care very much for the players, Jerry Rice and Joe Montana, everyone of them, but there is a time and a place for those things."

Lee netter on scholarship list

Staff Report

Midland Lee tennis player Monisha Poudyal has been named one of 64 finalists in the Fina/Dallas Morning News All-State Scholar-Athlete Team.

The 64 finalists were chosen from 2,200 applicants from nearly 800 Texas public and private high schools. The All-State team will be comprised of 12 members and each member will receive a $3,500 college scholarship.

Poudyal qualified by playing tennis, earning top 10 percent academic status in her senior class with a grade average about 90 percent. Finalists were also judged on leadership and participation in school and community activities.

The 12-member All-State team and honorary team captain will be chosen from the 64 finalists in mid-March.

Economy keeps inflation down

■ The sluggish economy provides second-lowest inflation rate in 24 years.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans in 1991 enjoyed the second-lowest inflation in 24 years, a beneficial byproduct of the stagnant economy and the end of the Persian Gulf War.

Consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in December and 3.1 percent for the year, the Labor Department said Thursday.

Two-thirds of the improvement over 1990's 6.1 percent rate came from a 7.4 percent drop in energy prices.

The cost of gasoline and fuel oil had skyrocketed in 1990 when Iraq invaded Kuwait and then fell after Saudi Arabia increased its production to compensate.

"Saudi Arabia has been saying 'Thank you' to George Bush," said economist Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University.

Food and beverage prices, held back by a sharp drop in meat costs, rose a modest 2.5 percent last year, the smallest increase since 1976.

But even excluding the volatile food and energy sectors, inflation still declined. The so-called core rate was 4.4 percent in 1991, down from 5.2 percent in 1990.

The 1991 inflation rate for all consumer items was the best since 1986 when prices rose 1.1 percent and the second lowest since 1967.

"We have some problem areas like health care and college tuition, but if you take that out, you're really talking about a minuscule amount of inflation," said economist Lawrence Chimerine, senior adviser to DRI-McGraw Hill, a consulting firm in Lexington, Mass.

With most analysts expecting only a weak economic recovery this year, the prospect is good for only moderate inflation, between 3 percent and 3.5 percent.

During last year's economic stall, consumers were reluctant to borrow and spend. That's forced retailers to hold the lid on prices or watch already lackluster sales erode.

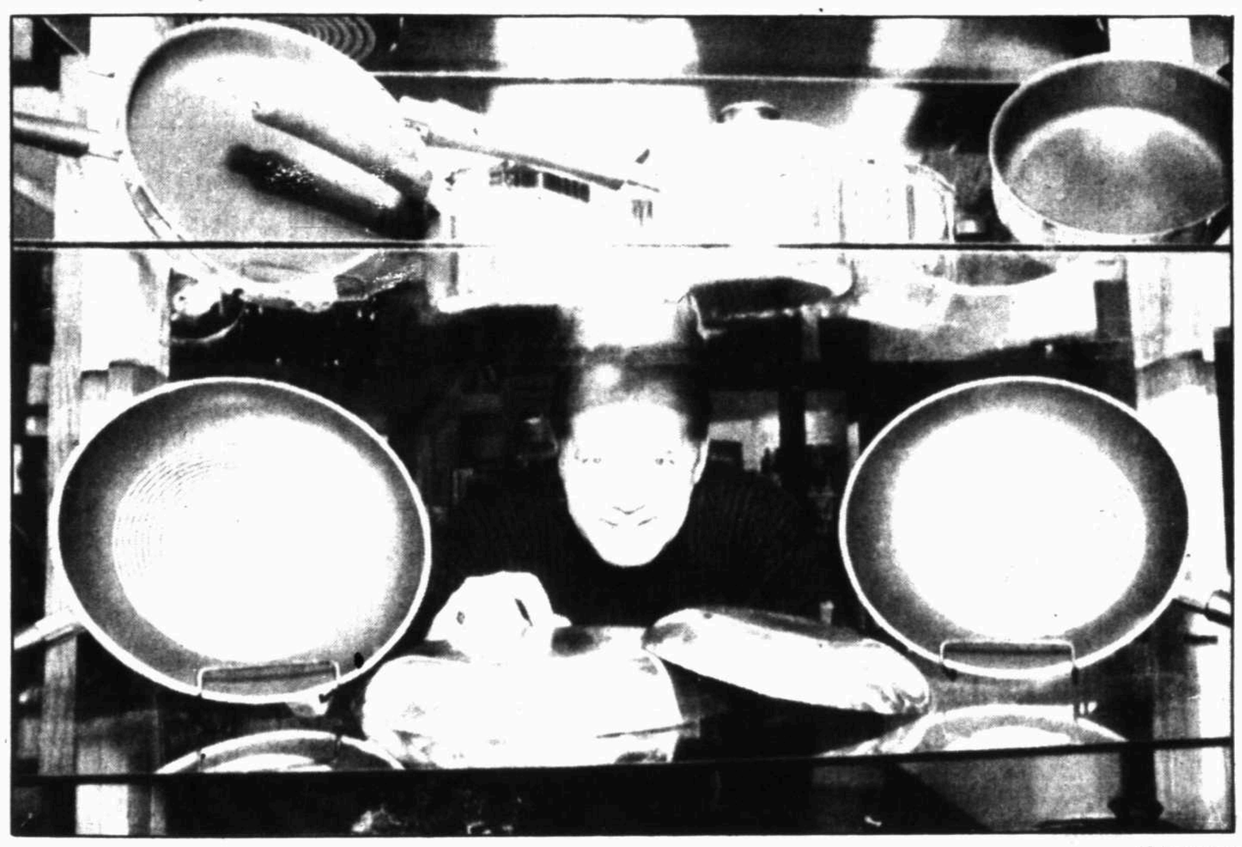

Meanwhile, rising unemployment has kept wages — and thus the price of services — from advancing as strongly as 1990.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration was "especially encouraged by the sharp deceleration in price increases." But, he acknowledged, "Obviously the unfortunate side of it is a good deal of that is because of the economic slowdown."

Fitzwater said the administration would welcome lower interest rates to stimulate the economy, but most economists think the Federal Reserve, following a big rate cut just before Christmas, will not reduce rates much further.

"If something terrible happens ... they might come down another notch or two," said economist David

EPA slaps Tenneco subsidiary with fine

HOUSTON (AP) — A Tenneco pipeline company has been fined a record $15.7 million by the Environmental Protection Agency for illegally using and dumping PCBs throughout the 1980s.

The EPA said Wednesday that Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Houston's Tenneco, used the toxic lubricant at 26 pipeline compressor stations in five states.

The company has 20 days to file a response to the allegations.

Tenneco said it expects the penalty to be reduced if the EPA credits it for cleanup work already performed, but a spokesman would not say if the company plans to appeal the fine.

PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls, began being used as a fireproof lubricant in the 1920s and within two decades were widely used in electric generators, adhesives, even copy paper.

Concern about the use of PCBs in some pesticides surfaced in the 1960s and accelerated with evidence linking the chemicals to cancer. In 1979, federal regulators banned the use of anything other than trace amounts of PCBs in the United States.

Tennessee Gas used a PCB-laced lubricant called Pydraul on its auxiliary compressor stations for more than three decades. The company said it stopped using the product in 1972.

But the EPA alleges that Tennessee Gas used and improperly disposed of PCBs as late as 1990.

In a prepared statement, Tenneco stressed that it has cooperated with the government in its PCB inquiry, even though it is not convinced the chemicals cause cancer. Tenneco said as of October, it had spent $60 million to identify and clean up PCB sites, including $25 million spent in 1991.

The Tennessee Gas administrative penalty comes amid a massive federal investigation into the use of PCBs at more than a dozen U.S. pipeline companies, Mike Walker, the EPA's enforcement counsel in Washington, said.

The government already has assessed millions of dollars in PCB-related penalties and fines, Walker said, and is preparing several other complaints to be filed before the end of 1992.

Banks, firms to pay nearly $5.2 million in fines

■ Some of the nation's largest banks and the biggest names on Wall Street were included in the SEC's investigation.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nearly 100 of the nation's top banks and securities firms will pay a total of almost $5.2 million in fines for widespread inflating of customer orders for quasi-government agency bonds, federal regulators said Thursday.

The companies, which neither admitted nor denied wrongdoing, agreed to halt any violations in the sale of bonds issued by government-sponsored agencies such as the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae.

The banks and securities firms also agreed to correct recording-keeping procedures and to pay $5.16 million in fines to the government.

Some of the nation's largest banks — Bank of America and the Mellon Bank — and some of the biggest names on Wall Street — Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Nomura Securities International — were among the 98 included in the settlement.

"We uncovered a practice that was nearly universal," Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Richard Breeden told a news conference.

Breeden said with the exception of one small firm that is still under investigation all of the firms accused of wrongdoing had agreed to the settlement.

The action is separate from the ongoing government probe of Salomon Brothers Inc.'s actions in the Treasury bond market. A joint regulators' report to Congress on that case is expected next week.

The firms and banks involved were also bidding for the bonds of other government-sponsored agencies: the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., or Freddie Mac; the Federal Farm Credit Banks Funding Corp.; the Federal Home Loan Banks; and the Student Loan Marketing Association, or Sallie Mae.

Collectively, those organizations are known as government-sponsored enterprises, private corporations created by Congress to facilitate lending for numerous "socially important" purposes including education, agriculture and housing.

The government alleged that the banks and securities companies provided the agencies with inaccurate information concerning their sales of the securities or the sizes of orders to obtain a bigger share of the bonds offered by the agencies.

Breeden said the companies had maintained "a phantom set of records."

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Oil prices fluctuated Thursday amid more production cuts by OPEC members.

West Texas Intermeidate for delivery in February settled at $18.91 per barrel, up 6 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude oil had moved as high as $19.30 per barrel in early trading, as the market responded to Nigeria's decision Thursday to cut 50,000 barrels a day from its crude production. Algeria also said it would cut production but did not specify the amount.

Other OPEC members, including Venezuela, Ecuador and Libya, have either announced modest production cuts or asked the whole cartel to slash output.

Despite those moves, crude prices eventually dipped into negative territory during Thursday's session, before showing a modest rebound. Traders were apparently unsure what to expect from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries when it meets next month.

The cuts introduced so far will not be enough to keep prices propped up unless Saudi Arabia reduces its enormous production, traders say, and the Saudis have thus far been unwilling to consider cutbacks.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in February settling at $1.350 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 5.6 cents.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK — The dollar closed lower Thursday in a volatile session dominated by selling of the German mark.

The mark gained against the dollar, which fell to 1.6170 marks in New York from 1.6260 late Wednesday.

The British pound also rose against the dollar, closing at $1.7627 in New York, up from $1.7520 on Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's rates, included: 1.4355 Swiss francs, down from 1.4455; 5.5120 French francs, down from 5.5430; 1.218.00 Italian lire, down from 1,224.25; and 1.15425 Canadian dollars, up from 1.15355.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The stock market turned mixed Thursday in the heaviest trading in more than two years, churning in place after its latest run to record highs.

Analysts said new government figures on inflation drew no clear-cut response either way from investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 72.90 points in the past two sessions, dropped 8.95 points to 3,249.55.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Don't risk 'timing market' for buying, selling

By Bill Doyle

Q. A recent magazine article offered advice on "timing the market." It said certain signals announce the time to buy and sell.

For example, according to that article, when the Dow Jones Industrial (DJI) Average sells at 30 or more times its dividends, stocks are expensive and near their peak; they are cheap and due to rally when the DJI is about 16 times dividends.

Doyle

Another is when the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index is selling at 28 or more times its earnings over the past 12 months, it's time to sell; at 12, it's time to buy.

What are your thoughts on these and other signals for a small investor like me, who deals only in mutual funds?

A. One thought comes through loud and clear: Stay with long-term mutual fund investing and forget about even attempting to time the market.

That timing process of trying to "buy low and sell high" is a sucker's game. It invariably leads to financial disaster. As for those signals, I'm reminded of that great Damon Runyon line: "My brother talks to horses."

The person who wrote that magazine article, no doubt, is a market technician who relies on technical analysis. That's the process of trying to predict stock prices by interpreting the signals mentioned above and many others.

Some professional market technicians, who devote full time to the job, have been successful. But most have been flops. Even the best have been awfully wrong sometimes. Face it. Anyone who could accurately predict the market consistently would become the world's richest person in a reasonably short time.

Q. I recently put $1,600 into a load mutual fund as an investment for my granddaughter's college education. She is now in kindergarten. I want to add $50 a month until she graduates high school.

I was told it may take five years to realize a positive gain on this investment, after commission, management fees and other costs. Can that be true?

A. That's possible, but most unlikely. For it to happen, the stock market would have to be in the doldrums for five years. I'd lay long odds against that happening.

You did start off at a disadvantage by going into a load fund. The one you named in your letter charges a 5.75 percent commission, also known as a load, on shares purchased.

As a result, $92 was taken right off the top of the $1,600 you paid in — leaving you with $1,508 worth of fund shares. The value of your shares will have to rise 6.1 percent for you to get even.

It's not unusual for mutual fund share values to climb 6.1 percent or more in just one year. Most funds did far better than that in 1991.

By this time you should realize it would have been wiser to invest in a no-load fund, where there is no commission charge.

Q. Do you agree that starting with a relatively small investment, such as under $2,000, in a mutual fund and adding to it monthly in amounts of $50 to $100 is a sensible way to invest?

A. Very much so. After the initial investment, you will be dollar cost averaging. That process of putting the same amount of money into the same security at fixed intervals means you get more shares when prices are low and fewer shares when prices are high.

You get a better than average price on all your purchases and, unless the share price goes down, down, down and never recovers, you come out ahead in the long run. Perhaps as important, you don't get ulcers trying to outguess the stock market.

Dollar cost averaging has long been my favorite method of investing.

Coca-Cola plans to sell soft drinks in kiosks in Russia

MOSCOW (NYT) — The Coca-Cola Co. hopes to make buying a Coke in this city as common as lines are now for buying bread. The Atlanta-based multinational has made history by becoming the first private company set up in Russia to produce consumer goods.

The new company, Coca-Cola Refreshments-Moscow, was unveiled Thursday.

Coca-Cola will invest $12 million to build a new factory here in the capital to supply Coca-Cola and Fanta to franchised kiosks and restaurants throughout the city.

For the first time, there is no government involvement in the deal. In the days of doing business with the Soviet Union under Communist rule, Coca-Cola had to deal with government companies largely through barter arrangements.

With the demise of the Soviet Union, Coca-Cola is now doing business "capitalist" style.

"This is a major commitment ... to building a free market economy in Russia," said Tore Bu, Coca-Cola's Nordic and Northern Eurasia Division said Thursday.

Coca-Cola will sell for rubles and doesn't plan to take its profits out of Russia in the short term. The ruble profit will be reinvested in expanding here.

The factory will not be working full steam until 1993, but Coca-Cola will license some kiosks to begin selling.

The Moscow venture is the second one launched by Coke recently in the former Soviet Union. In October, Coke announced a bottling venture with a government-owned operation in Kiev.

Coke's Fanta brand has been sold in Russia since 1979, and state-owned facilities began bottling Coca-Cola in 1987.

Pepsi, Coke's rival, has been doing business in the Soviet Union for years. Pepsi opened its first Soviet bottling plant in 1972.

It was clear that Muscovites were already hankering to have a Coca-Cola stand in their neighborhood. One Russian journalist tried to persuade Bu that the first kiosk should be located near his office.

Coca-Cola opted to invest in franchising street stands because it suits the market: Russians traditionally set up small stands — no bigger than a newspaper kiosk in a big American city — to sell their version of fast food. So far these kiosks have been government-owned and operated — and empty and unprofitable.

Such street stands are exactly the way the world's largest soft drink manufacturer started in the United States more than a hundred years ago.

Bu said 35 percent of Coca-Cola's sales in the United States are to restaurants and stands. He noted that there aren't enough of such outlets here to increase business so they are creating the outlets, which will in turn boost sales.

The company plans to open 2,000 kiosks here in the capital and generate employment in the long term for more than 4,000 people.

Although the company just announced its plans Thursday, General Director Craig Cohon said he had already received 30 resumes from people wanting to run franchises.

Most of this new company is owned by Coca-Cola. However, Russia's most famous eye surgeon owns 2.5 percent of it. Dr. Svyatoslav Fyodorov said he wanted to show his fellow Russians how to do business and because "I want to be a real man and I want to live well."

Bu predicted it won't take long for Coca-Cola to become more popular than its chief rival here, Pepsi.

INFLATION: Rate breaks 24-year record

(From 1E)

Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. But "I think essentially we are virtually at the end of the easing" in monetary policy.

Separately, the Labor Department said first-time claims for unemployment insurance fell to 403,000 for the week ending Jan. 4, down from 452,000 the previous week.

Analysts cautioned against reading too much into weekly fluctuations in the highly volatile claims number. Because it was a holiday week, laid-off workers had one less day than usual to file claims.

In a third report, the department said American's average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, increased 0.7 percent in December. But, over the year, real weekly earnings were up just 0.3 percent.

The Labor Department offered these details on prices in 1991:

- Meat fell 2.1 percent after rising 11.3 percent in 1990.
- Restaurant meals rose 2.9 percent, the smallest increase since 1964.
- Alcoholic beverages were up 9.9 percent, the most since 1974, because of increased federal excise taxes.
- Tobacco prices rose 11.1 percent.
- Fuel oil fell 19.9 percent after a gain of 29.9 percent in 1990.
- Gasoline dropped 16.2 percent after shooting up 36.8 percent.
- New car prices rose 3.2 percent, but auto financing costs fell 7.1 percent.

SEC: Banks, firms to pay $5.2 million

(From 1E)

"I think it's important to note that there are no charges of fraud here. There's no claim that anyone was injured by this practice," said Irvin Nathan, a Washington attorney representing several of the firms that settled.

"I don't think anyone profited from this practice. this was a uniform, competitive practice that was in existence for a long period of time and was either known or should have been known by the (enterprises) involved," he added.

Meanwhile, officials announced a restructuring of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and reprimanded the firms that sell its bonds, noting that future violations could lead to expulsion. A similar shakeup was announced in December by Fannie Mae. Freddie Mac previously levied fines totaling $1 million against dealers who falsified records.

The settlement was announced by the SEC, which oversees the nation's securities markets, and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve Board, which regulate banks.

"It is essential that the public be able to have confidence in the integrity of the government securities markets," said Robert Clarke, the comptroller of the currency, who oversees nationally chartered banks.

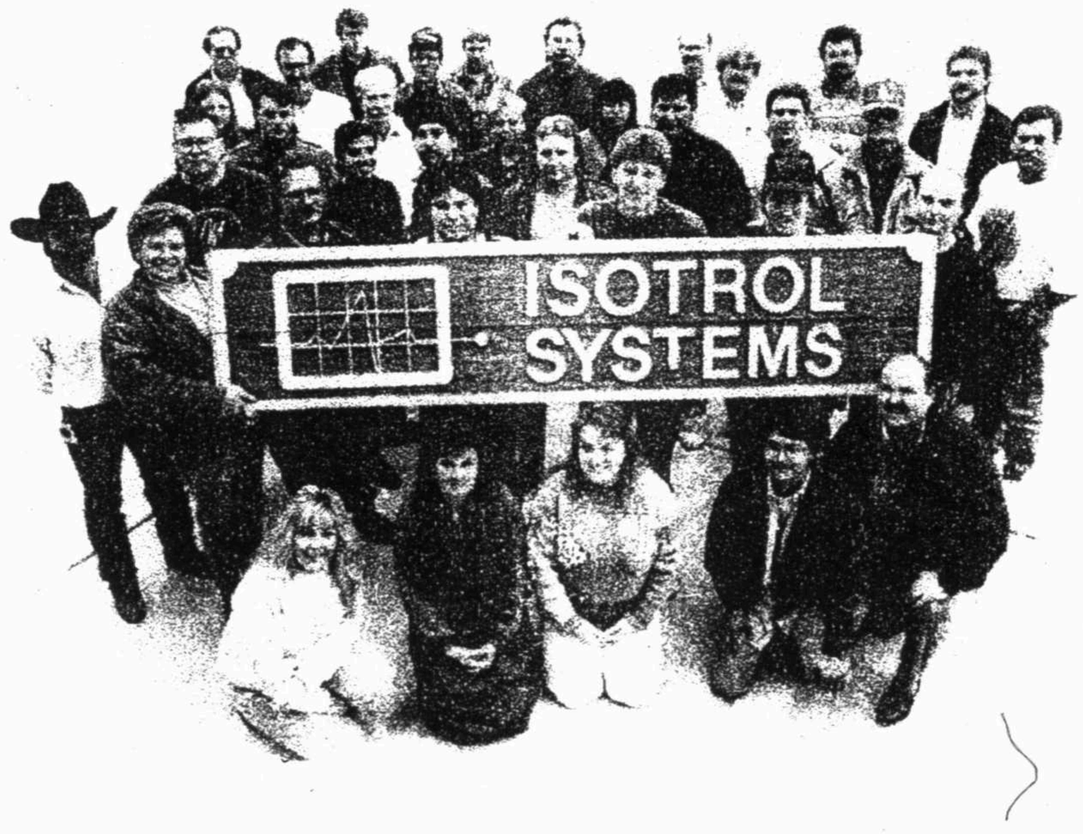

The fines ranged from $5,000 to $100,000, with most major concerns agreeing to $100,000 fines.

The investigation grew out of the Treasury Department bond-trading scandal involving Salomon, which was not part of the settlement. Breeden said that issue would be included in the continuing Salomon case.

Salomon, one of the nation's biggest government securities traders, shocked Wall Street in August when it admitted making illegal bids for such bonds at several Treasury auctions, which finance the nation's $3.5 trillion debt.

The SEC's investigation into Salomon widened after a large number of banks and securities companies acknowledged inflating their customer orders when bidding for such securities.

Bush calls for Saddam's overthrow

By Greg McDonald
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush repeated his call Thursday for the overthrow of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in a message marking the anniversary of the war with Iraq but also aimed at boosting his image as he campaigns for re-election.

Returning to the familiar and more comfortable ground of foreign policy, Bush sounded as tough as he did during the days of his high Desert Storm approval ratings, when he first vowed to keep pressure on Iraq to force Saddam from power.

Saying Iraq remains "a pariah among nations," Bush again encouraged the Iraqi people to overthrow their leader and he promised to work closely with the new government that replaces him.

"I remain determined to keep the pressure on Saddam until a new leadership comes to power. ... We salute the efforts of thousands of brave Iraqis who are resisting Saddam's rule both inside and outside Iraq," the president said. "The United States reiterates its pledge to the Iraqi people and the Iraqi military that we stand ready to work with a new regime."

In a prepared statement released by the White House, Bush went on to list the liberation of Kuwait, the security of the Persian Gulf region, and the Arab-Israeli peace talks as just a few of the accomplishments of the war. He said Americans should "take pride" in what Desert Storm achieved.

But Bush also sought to deflate his election-year challengers, who are fond of reminding voters that Saddam is still in power because Bush halted the ground war after three days.

"The coalition (of allies) fought a limited war for a limited but vitally important purpose. It prevailed," Bush declared.

He stressed that even though Saddam still holds power a year later, he remains a "weak and isolated" dictator unable to impose his "extremist policies on the region or the (Arab-Israeli) peace process."

Bush's statement defending his war decisions was similar but not as fiery as the comment he made Wednesday on the campaign trail when he lashed out at Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine and other "carping, little liberal Democrats" who opposed the use of military force in the gulf.

"If I'd have listened to the leader of the U.S. Senate, George Mitchell, Saddam Hussein would be in Saudi Arabia and you'd be paying $20 a gallon for gas," the president told one New Hampshire audience.

Thursday, Mitchell responded. "The statement is, of course, false," the majority leader said in a speech to the National Press Club, questioning whether Bush has the leadership qualities to guide America in the post-Cold War era.

"But even more, Mr. Bush sounds like a panicky candidate in a losing campaign for president rather than a president confidently seeking re-election."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater spent a large part of the day's press briefing underscoring the president's anniversary remarks. He said Bush plans to put the same kind of leadership effort behind solving the nation's economic problems as he used in building the successful United Nations coalition against Iraq.

Fitzwater acknowledged that the president — as he did in New Hampshire — plans to use the Gulf war as a major campaign theme to remind voters of what his leadership was able to accomplish.

Fitzwater also hit at critics who argue that the allied victory over Iraq won't be complete until Saddam is driven from power.

Saying the military objective of Desert Storm was never the overthrow of Saddam, the spokesman maintained that continuing the ground war would have bogged down the United States in a "Vietnam-style conflict." He said it would have been "irrational" to conduct a door-to-door search for Saddam.

He also suggested that the U.N. coalition would have broken apart because most members were not in favor of continuing the war effort.

The president's defense of his handling of the war comes at a time when many Americans are wondering why Bush has failed so far to tap the skills he used so successfully in the Gulf War to solve the nation's problems. Several recent national polls show that less than 50 percent of respondents believe Bush is capable of leading the country through difficult economic times.

Grand jury indicts 'Teech' star Phill Lewis

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A grand jury Thursday charged actor Phill Lewis, star of the television comedy "Teech," with homicide in the death of a woman in an auto accident last month.

Barry Hefland, the actor's lawyer, said his client planned to surrender to authorities Friday and plead innocent.

Police said Lewis was driving a car Dec. 28 that crossed the center line of a road in Bethesda and collided with another vehicle, killing the driver, Isabel Duarte, 21. Police have said alcohol was involved.

Jets' roar told troops war was on

By Robert Dvorchak
Aassociated Press writer

The starting gun for war was the high rumble of warplanes screaming toward Baghdad.

The deadline had passed for Saddam Hussein to get out of Kuwait, and paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division cheered the jets. "Get some!" the soldiers yelled in the middle of the night.

They knew something was up. They were ordered to start taking nerve agent pills — little white tablets from a cellophane package — that were supposed to make them 40 times more likely to withstand a chemical attack. They weren't needed, but they were a sobering companion.

Parts of the division were the first ground troops to arrive in a Saudi Arabian desert so hot it melted the camouflage paint from their faces. That was Aug. 8, 1990, and five grueling months of preparation and training awaited.

Even after the first strike, it would be 39 days before they got into action on the ground. But it was thoughts of going home, not a lust for war, that made them cheer the sound of jets.

"It's about time. Everyone wants to go home," said Specialist 4 Chris Lambert.

Most of a base the paratroopers called Champion Main was asleep when warplanes shattered the calm of a moonless night. In a warehouse that became their home, soldiers woke up at 3 a.m. to listen to President Bush's remarks broadcast on portable radios. Those faint words on dying batteries confirmed the war was on.

"It had to start to come to an end," mused Pfc. William Weaver of Cherry Hill, N.J.

There had been an air of anticipation. To lighten their rucksacks, paratroopers had burned letters from loved ones lest they fall into enemy hands and got rid of unnecessary gear.

Capt. Clint Esarey dictated a tape to his wife, saying that if he got killed he wanted to be buried in his uniform. Thankfully, it was an unnecessary request.

The training room at division headquarters had a sign attached to it that ominously said "Closed."

At the aviation brigade, AH-64 Apache helicopters were fueled and armed with Hellfire missiles. Crews had scribbled messages in chalk like "Up Yours, Saddam Baby" and "Here's For The Unwanted Vacation."

"He's made the last five months of my life miserable. Now it's his turn. Finally," said Specialist 4 John Hague of Oakland, Calif., in those opening moments of the war.

Clearly, the adrenalin was flowing among troops who didn't want to spend one day longer than necessary in a harsh environment 8,000 miles from home.

Jim Kersee, a warrant officer, made a play on Saddam's bluster of fighting the mother of all battles. "Tell him dad's coming to kick his mom's butt," said Kersee, of York, Pa.

"There's a certain excitement, almost a relief, that the dam has finally burst," said Maj. Baxter Ennis, who held his transistor to his ear during the pre-dawn hours to catch snippets of news.

No one knew how long the air war would last, and troops had been told they may not be involved right away. But clearly, they were ready to follow the Air Force.

"That's one step closer to going home. Now we can start counting the days," said Sgt. James Porter of Cherryville, N.C.

Anti-war groups mark date with vigils

Associated Press

A week before U.S. planes dropped bombs on Iraqi targets with pinpoint accuracy, Kate Stevens was leading an inter-religious congregation of hundreds in prayer for those who would die in Desert Storm.

A year and a week later, she was at it again. Stevens, minister of the United Church of Christ in Boston, organized a non-denominational prayer service Thursday, the anniversary of the start of Operation Desert Storm.

"The prayers are both for the Iraqis and all of those in the Middle East who have been affected, and for people here in this country who are not being served because we use all of our resources to fight in other countries," she said.

Anti-war organizations across the country — mostly small in number and limited in support — planned similar anniversary events.

"It's a vigil in which we try to understand what leads us to accept wars like this," said Milton Trimitsis of the Cambridge chapter of the American Friends Service Committee.

Magazine backs computer virus report

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. News & World Report said Thursday it is sticking by its story that U.S. intelligence agents tried to disable an Iraqi air defense network with a computer virus several weeks before the start of the Persian Gulf War.

The magazine said it had confirmed that the attempt was made, as reported in its Jan. 20 issue and later questioned, but had not been able to determine whether it was successful.

The original story, published Monday, quoted two senior U.S. officials as saying the virus "seems to have worked as planned."

Questions arose about the story after it was learned that the computer industry publication Infoworld spelled out a strikingly similar scenario in a column that ran as an April Fool's joke last year.

U.S. News editors said in a statement, "We took seriously questions which were raised about the accuracy of this story and have re-reported it.

"We have confirmed that, as we reported, a high-level intelligence operation based in Jordan was targeted at Iraqi air defenses," the editors said. "As we reported, a computer virus was inserted into a French-made computer printer that was to be smuggled into Iraq to disable its air defense system. What cannot be confirmed is whether the operation was ultimately successful."

Brian Duffy, the magazine's assistant managing editor for investigative projects, said the original sources believed the system must have worked because Iraqi air defense guns opened up before any U.S. airplanes had appeared.

He said the magazine checked with two senior Pentagon officers who confirmed the planting of the computer virus in the printer, but said it was not known whether the printer ever reached Iraq.

Shoppers ignore seafood risk

CHICAGO (AP) — A study that found raw seafood in stores is often spoiled might make consumers "a little more leery," one shopper said Thursday, but others shrugged off the risk.

"I'm careful to make sure it's thoroughly cooked," said Mary Dittbrenner, 74, who bought cod at a Dominick's grocery store on the North Side after hearing news reports about the Consumers Reports investigation.

"I have bought fish when I didn't think it was very fresh — both at Dominick's and other places. I have washed it and used it," she said, adding that it had never sickened her.

That was a view shared by other shoppers Thursday, whether or not they'd heard about the report in February's Consumer Reports. The magazine said it found nearly 30 percent of 113 samples it had taken in Chicago and New York City was spoiled and 9 percent was on the verge of spoiling.

The magazine also reported it found harmful levels of mercury in 90 percent of the swordfish samples. Its investigators found polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs — potential cancer-causing and reproductive hazards — in 43 percent of salmon tested, 25 percent of the swordfish and 50 percent of the lake whitefish.

"I trust the fish I buy," said Franklan Boatner, 42, a Chicagoan who bought Great Lakes whitefish Thursday at a Jewel Food Store on the North Side.

Boatner said he hadn't heard about the study. "But it does make you think. The next time you buy fish, you might be a little more leery," he said.

Boatner said he buys raw fish about once a week, including shrimp, scallops or whatever is on sale.

Most of those interviewed at the two stores were aware of the study, but it was impossible to tell if anyone had stayed away from seafood because of it.

A spokeswoman for Jewel Food Stores Inc., which sells raw seafood at all 209 of its Midwest stores, said the Consumer Reports article spurred it to review its handling of fish.

"If there are any problems, we'll take immediate steps to correct them," Dianne Maffia said from the company's suburban Melrose Park headquarters.

FCC clears space for two-way TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission cleared space on the airwaves Thursday for two-way television.

Soon, you should be able to shop, bank, pay bills, take classes and answer surveys through your TV set, no telephone necessary.

The FCC says it will start taking applications in three to six months from companies who can build these systems for each broadcast area.

As early as next year, some consumers could be signing up.

The action taken by the FCC — just the first step in a process that will take years to complete — stems from a petition by TV Answer Inc., of Reston, Va., which has a two-way system ready for market.

It's "the next logical generation of advanced television," said Fernando Morales, president of the firm.

The concept has been under development for many years and used minimally by some cable companies. But the FCC's action provides space near Channel 13 on the public airwaves used for television, which will make it available to more people.

The spot is sometimes referred to as the "backwater band" and was allocated to the maritime telecommunications system, which didn't use it.

TV Answer has said it would charge about $12.95 a month for the service.

Man charged in 2 murders is an enigma

N.Y. Times News Service

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — He cooked well but didn't like to. He was quiet among strangers but was a staunch friend to the few he had. He made a fair living but never had money to pay the rent. He elicited love from some young children but he killed one of his own.

William Lester Suff Sr., 41, emerged this week as an enigma; as conflicting a person as the descriptions offered by friends, acquaintances and trial testimony.

The convicted baby killer, who was paroled to California after serving nearly 10 years in a Texas prison, is accused of killing two of the 19 prostitutes dumped in western Riverside County in slayings that began in October 1986.

And although Suff told friends he had no need for a prostitute because he had plenty of good sex at home, he was arrested last week after trying to solicit a prostitute while cruising in this city's red-light district.

His wife is in seclusion, his family members either cannot be found or refuse to comment, and friends of the couple are left struggling to come up with answers.

"We're finding out now that everything I knew about him was lies. It's all lies," said Beth Fitzgerald, who grew up with Suff's 20-year-old wife, Cheryl. "I talked with his wife and he lied to her, too. She didn't know about anything."

Suff claimed to have spent his life in Lake Elsinore, a resort town about 30 miles southeast of Riverside and told everyone his name was Bill Lee Suff. Though he admitted being divorced, he mentioned no children and never mentioned Texas.

Local records show that Suff attended three years of high school in Lake Elsinore and graduated in 1968 from Perris High School, near Elsinore.

According to trial records during his 1974 Fort Worth, Texas, murder trial in the beating death of his infant daughter, DiJanet, Suff said that he enlisted in the Air Force, that he ended up at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth and was discharged in 1970.

In trial transcripts, Suff is quoted as saying his first wife, Teryl Rose Suff, was five months pregnant by another man when they married in December 1969. The couple decided to put the baby up for adoption because they were afraid it would harm their marriage.

Suff was depicted in the trial as a jealous man whose first marriage was plagued by adultery and suspicion. He said he experienced violent outbursts.

But that was a side of Suff that apparently none of his California friends saw.

He and his second wife and young bride, Cheryl, both of whom were living in Lake Elsinore, were married in Las Vegas, said Beth Fitzgerald who attended the March 17, 1990, wedding.

However, problems were soon evident. Immediately after they were married, Cheryl told Fitzgerald that they had to move in with her parents in Rialto because they had no money.

The 1/4¢ for Economic Development

WHAT REALLY IS GOING TO BE DONE WITH THIS MONEY?

Uses of the 1/4 cent sales tax money is limited by law to the encouragement of economic development and jobs creation.

By law funds will be directed to companies involved in manufacturing, processing or distribution.

Existing business as well as business relocating to Midland are eligible. Priorities will be placed on firms which meet the following criteria:

- Acquisition or construction of industrial facilities.
- Investment in land, buildings and training equipment for job training programs.
- Investment in land, utilities and roads to improve industrial sites for business.
- Investment in eqipment for business who increase employment.

State law limits promotional expentiture to 10% or less of the annual revenue.

WHAT CAN MIDLAND DO WITH $2 MILLION FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT?

Current funding for economic development gives Midland the capacity to respond to inquiries and to do limited advertising and promotion of Midland as an industrial location.

Industry expects more - our competition has it! We need the $2 million for capital items offered by other communities - industrial buildings, equipment, training facilities and sewer, water and roads to industrial sites. That is what it takes to win!

Competition for new jobs is tough - whether we like it or not. 52 Texas cities have already voted FOR economic development. They will have millions to help create and retain jobs. Even our neighbors in Big Spring have $750,000 to compete - Amarillo has $6.2 million - Abilene has $4 million.

If we don't get in the game, where will Midland be in the next five years? We'll have the spirit, determination and tenacity to compete for new jobs and industry. But the rest of Texas will have the money!

Saturday's vote isn't only about a tax. It's about Midlanders doing something positive for our economy.

If you care about Midland's future, vote FOR it!

THE CITY ALREADY FUNDS ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT...WHY DO WE NEED MORE?

A. The City currently invests about $300,000 - 1% of its general fund revenues - with the Chambers of Commerce for economic development. That amount is the maximum allowed by law. Even if you cut $2 million in services from the budget, it could not by law be spent on economic development.

B. With an economic development budget of $300,000 Midland cannot compete against cities similar to ours which have budgets of $4-6 millon. With massive layoffs throughout Texas and the nation, the creation and retention of jobs have become very competitive. (Witness the $30 million incentive package Arlington, Texas is offering General Motors to save 3800 auto workers jobs.) Regardless of whether Midlanders approve of competition between communities for jobs, it is a reality and it takes money to win. If we sit on the sideline and whine about how tough things are, Midland will be the loser.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 90% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $300-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
