ON THE SIDE

Stenholm gets post

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charlie Stenholm, D-Texas, was appointed deputy whip in the House Democratic leadership Wednesday.

STENHOLM

The move is an attempt by House Speaker Tom Foley and the leadership to bring conservative Democrats into the party's policy decisions. Stenholm, from Stamford, is the informal leader of the 51-member Conservative Democratic Forum.

There are 12 deputy whips that assist Foley and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt in vote counting and organizing member support for leadership policies. At the same time, however, the whips participate in the leadership discussions on policy.

Stenholm said, "I am honored to be brought to the table with other Democratic leaders. This position will improve my opportunities to bring a new, conservative voice to the negotiating table and I will be more directly involved in the early stages of legislation."

The conservative Democrats play a crucial role in determining House legislation because they have enough votes to give minority Republicans victory if they break ranks with the leadership.

Drug raid nabs four

BIG SRING — Four men were arrested on drug charges Wednesday after officers of a combined task force executed a search warrant on a northside residence.

Arrested on charges of possession of a controlled substance were: Almus Henry Hill, 45, 2000 N.W. Second St.; Ruben Ramon Gamboa, 33, 402 N.W. Sixth St.; Gilbert Bamboa, 39, 609 N.W. Fifth St.; and Raymond Ramirez, 39, 200 N.W. Second St. Hill was released on $10,000 bond this morning, bond was set but not made for Gilbert Gamboa at $10,000 and $15,000 for Ramirez and Ruben Gamboa.

Law officers seized several hundred dollars cash, two .38-caliber pistols and an undetermined amount of cocaine after executing a search warrant at a home in the 200 block of northwest Second Street, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said today. The arrests came after receiving information about possible drug possession there, he said.

Howard County Sheriff's deputies were assisted in the arrests by officers from the Big Spring Police Department and Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

Explosion lawsuit

ACKERLY — Negligence by an oil company resulted in an explosion that severely injured an Ackerly woman and damaged her home, according to a lawsuit filed in 118th District Court.

Ruth M. and W.C. Taylor filed suit against Ackerly Oil Company Inc. and Trio Fuels Inc., charging that failure of a representative of Ackerly Oil Company to inspect the propane gas system in the couple's house was responsible for a May 2 explosion.

The suit charges the explosion resulted in "severe, painful and disabling injuries and burns to Ruth M. Taylor." Because of the explosion, the Taylors were forced to spend money for medical bills, according to the suit.

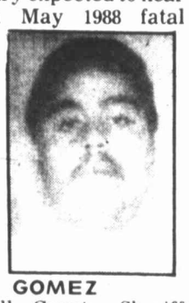

The couple charges in the suit that in April 1989 they noticed the smell of propane gas in the home. They asked an agent to determine if the odor they smelled was associated with their gas system, but the way he undertook his inspection was negligent and responsible for the explosion, the suit charges.

The Taylor's are seeking an undisclosed amount in damages, pre- and post-judgment interest and court costs.

Grand jurors to be named in Gomez case

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A Mitchell County grand jury expected to hear evidence in a May 1988 fatal shooting by police will be empaneled Friday, but the list of potential jurors remains undisclosed.

GOMEZ

The two people who have copies of the list of 50 potential grand jurors, Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant and 32nd District Clerk Bill Erwin have refused to release the names.

The Herald made written requests with both men for the information under the State Open Records Act, believing it is public record and should be a matter of general knowledge. Under provisions of the Open Records Act, the officials have 10 days to release the information or seek an opinion from the State Attorney General's Office.

Bryant, who said he has time left before the 10-day period expires, said today he is not able to release the names on the list under the order of Weldon Kirk, Mitchell County district judge.

Bryant said he has not requested an opinion from Kirk or the State Attorney General's Office.

"That's my decision and I'm still mulling it over," he said.

Erwin, whose department is at the end of a 10-day period to release the information or seek a legal opinion, said he will mail the information to the newspaper tonight. Erwin, who recently returned from vacation, said he was instructed by Kirk to hide the list from other employees in the district clerk's office.

The grand jury seated Friday will hear evidence into the May 13, 1988, fatal shooting of sexual assault suspect Sammy Gomez by a then part-time police officer with the Colorado City Police Department.

Police contend officer Billy Ray Williamson was forced to fire on Gomez three times after Gomez became abusive and then pulled a knife on Williamson and another officer as they attempted to arrest him in his aunt's house.

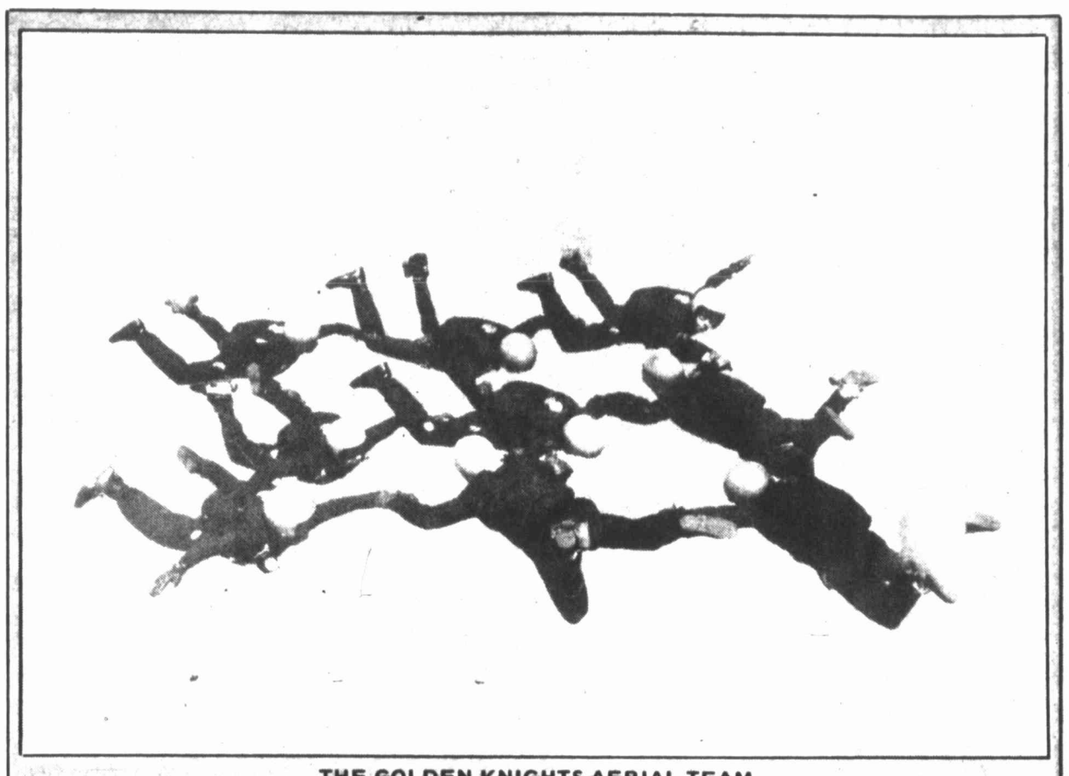

But local LULAC leaders charge the Williamson ended a longstanding personal vendetta against Gomez when he fatally shot the 27-year-old Colorado City man. A "throwdown" knife was placed at the scene as part of an attempted police coverup, they charge.

A first grand jury conducted one week after the shooting chose not to indict Williamson.

The grand jury empaneled Friday will be the next regularly scheduled grand jury, said Frank Conard, Mitchell County district attorney. The will hear all the grand jury cases for the next three to four months, including the Nov. 8 case devoted to the police shooting, he said.

After being empaneled Friday, the grand jury will immediately hear its first case, an investigation into possible possession of drugs by

THE GOLDEN KNIGHTS AERIAL TEAM

Golden Knights to highlight airshow

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

BIG SPRING — Men leaping out of a smoking airplane makes sense, but men leaping out of an airplane while trailing smoke from their bodies sounds crazy.

It's all in a day's work, however, for the Golden Knights, the famed U.S. Army parachute team. The group will perform Saturday and Sunday at the 1989 Vietnam Memorial Airshow.

Since being formed in 1959, the Golden Knights have earned a reputation as the finest precision freefall parachute team in the world — military or civilian. The team is the Army's answer to the well-know Air Force Thunderbirds and Navy Blue Angels.

Unlike those aerial showmen, however, the Golden Knights are mostly enlisted soldiers instead of officers. The group epitomizes the Army's theme of "be all you can be."

As a unit, the Army parachute team consists of about 80 men and women who make up six sections: two demonstration teams, the Black team and the Gold team; two competition teams, the Style and Accuracy team and the Relative Work team; an aviation section; and a headquarters section.

The Black and Gold demonstration teams perform in as many as 100 air shows each year before an annual audience of more than 5 million.

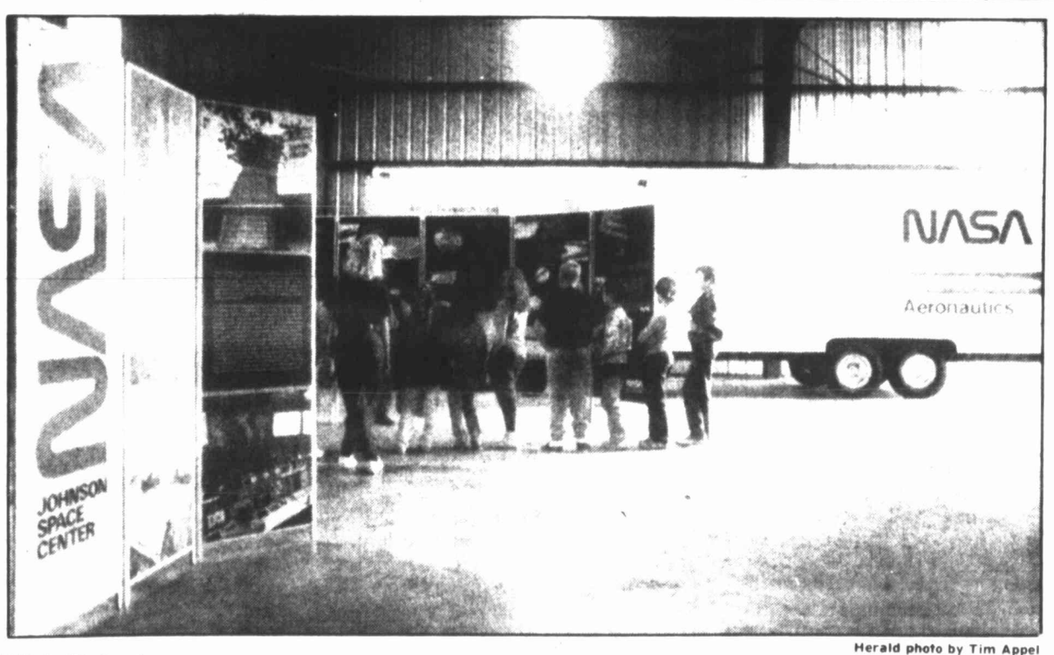

The Army considers its elite parachute teams as ambassadors of the military by demonstating unparalleled aerobatic skills with an unwaivering professional demeanor.

A typical Golden Knight air show begins with a single Knight descending gracefully with the American flag streaming from the suspension lines of his rectangular-shaped, black and gold parachute. Strains of the national anthem provide the perfect backdrop to his descent.

This patriotic opening is followed by aerial maneuvers developed and performed only by the Golden Knights.

Some of their eye-catching stunts include the baton pass, in which two jumpers exchange a 14-inch wooden baton during freefall; the cutaway, in which a

B-1 bomber flyby gives close-up view

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG SPRING — Events for the 1989 Vietnam Memorial Airshow begin today at 4:30 p.m. with a B-1 Bomber flyby.

Although the spectacular — and expensive — craft won't land, spectators can get a close-up view when it flies over the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.

The NASA Aero Van space exhibit still is open for tours from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at hanger 1161 on the west side of the airpark. Admission is free to the public.

Airshow activities begin Saturday, with gates at the airpark opening at 9 a.m. for viewing aircraft. The aerial portion of the show starts at 1 p.m., and includes performances by the Army parachute team, the Golden Knights, and the nationally famous duo of Jim Franklin and Johnny Kazian. Franklin is a pilot virtuoso from New Mexico, and Kazian is a dazzling showman known for his dare-devil wing-walking stunts.

Sunday's show also opens at 9 a.m., with aerial performances again beginning at 1 p.m. Both Saturday and Sunday's shows should conclude at about 4:30 p.m.

Displays by the U.S. Border Patrol and the National Guard will be included in the show, as well as exhibits by two local car clubs and a radio-controlled model airplane club.

Tickets at the gate will be $5 for adults, $4 for students age 7-12 and free for students 6 and under.

Tickets can be purchased before the show. They are $4 for adults and $3 for students.

Tickets are available at the following businesses: Cosden Credit Union, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, Bob Brock Ford, Saunders, Dribrell's, Bargain Mart, Elrod Furniture, Specs and Company, Citizens Federal Credit Union, Athletic Supply, and Williams Motors.

Stanton council, county join forces on landfill

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — The Martin County Commissioners Court and the Stanton City Council will begin having joint meetings, probably once a month, to try and find a solution to the city/county landfill problem.

A meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 30 in the courthouse.

The two governmental bodies will decide on the procedures involved in closing the old landfill before new Environmental Protection Agency regulations go into effect.

The decision to hold joint meetings was made at a commissioners meeting Monday which Coucilman Gene Wheeler attended.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Donald L. Tollison originally suggested that a committee be formed from the city council and the commissioners court in order to begin working on the landfill problems as soon as possible.

"When are we going to get together and form a committee to get this thing going?" he asked Wheeler. "Commissioners court and city council should be involved in everything (together right from the start)," he said.

"I think we all ought to meet once a month until this thing is done," Wheeler replied.

County Judge Bob Deavenport then recommended that the first meeting be next Monday at the courthouse.

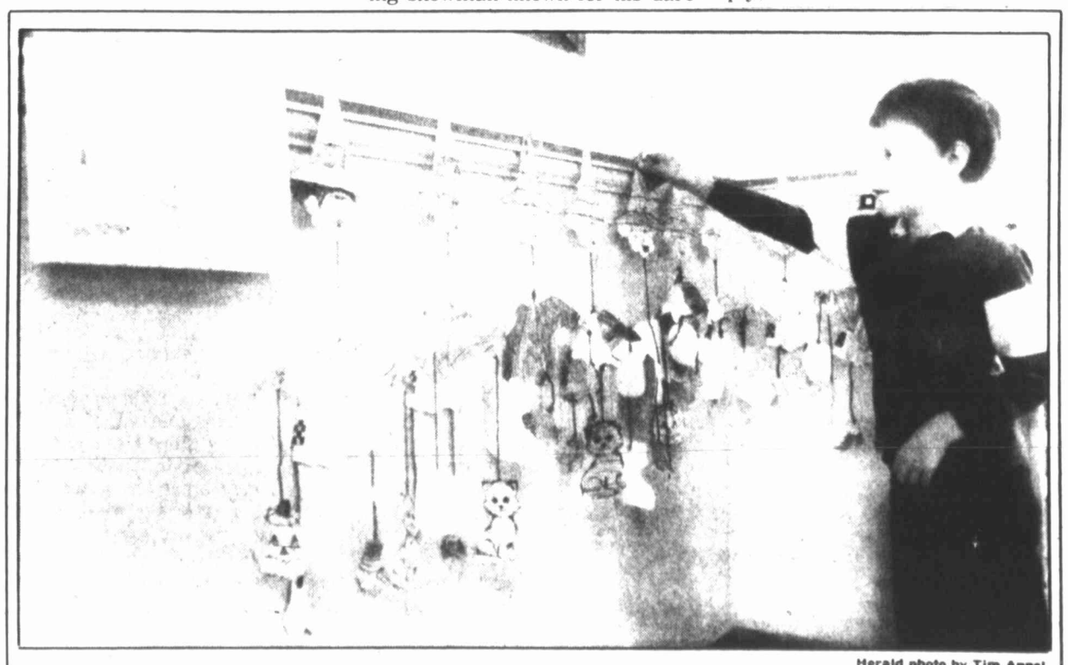

"If you don't mind, why don't we meet in here," he said. "We have to be in here in order to make any official decisions."

Wheeler suggested, "We can meet over here once a month and over there (at city hall) once a month."

Wheeler and county officials also expressed concern about closing the current landfill within the 18-month deadline which begins when the new EPA regulations go into effect.

If the landfill is closed after that deadline, it will have to be

How's that?

Q. Is a handwritten will legal in Texas?

A.Attorney Wayne Burns, who specializes in family law, said a handwritten will is called a holographic will. It is legal in Texas if the will is written entirely in the person's own handwriting; no portion of the will may be typed or written by another person. Burns does not recommend a holographic will, cautioning that this type of will can be dangerous, especially if the will is ambiguous. An ambiguous holographic will can cost more in legal fees to straighten out than it would cost to have a will written by a lawyer, he said.

Civil lawsuit could delay district court docket

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A $1.3 million civil lawsuit being tried in 118th District Court could hamper efforts to try some of the ten criminal and five civil cases set at docket call Tuesday afternoon, said William Dupree, Howard County assistant district attorney.

The week and a half long trial regarding the former owner's right to sell the Ramada motel is expected to continue for at least two more days and possibly carry into next week, Dupree said Tuesday. The former motel was changed to Homestead Inn and then converted to a detention facility operated by a private business in conjunction with the City of Big Spring to hold illegal aliens.

Criminal cases on the court docket could also be delayed because an attorney who represents people in five of the cases is ill, Dupree said. Those cases would most likely be postponed until the next court docket, he said.

Dupree said there is no special order of importance in the criminal cases which could be tried next week. Those facing possible trial are:

- Rickey Heffington on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.
- James Dyson on a charge of theft over $750 but less than $20,000.
- Ruth Ann Mobley on a charge of delivery of marijuana.
- Ruben Salas on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.
- Terry Louise Nall on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.
- Charles Earl Kelly on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.
- Joel Bergstrom on charges of possession of a controlled substance and possession of marijuana.
- Benny Lee Coleman on a charge of delivery of marijuana.
- Danny Heckler on a charge of possession of a controlled substance.

Court won't allow boy's confession of stabbing

FORT WORTH (AP) - A judge has ruled that a 12-year-old boy's detailed oral confession in the stabbing death of a school teacher cannot be admitted in his trial.

District Judge Scott Moore made the ruling Wednesday in the case of a boy arrested in the Aug. 28 stabbing death of Jana Simpson, 24, on the grounds of Glen Park Elementary School.

But the judge ruled that the boy's statement, "I killed the teacher. I killed the teacher" can be used because it was volunteered to officers before the boy was arrested.

Moore said he based his decision on a lack of corroborating evidence and officers' failure to follow juvenile protection guidelines.

The ruling leaves prosecutors with a case that hinges only on the single statement from the boy. Officers have been unable to find the weapon the boy said he discarded near the school and chemical tests did not turn up any trace of blood on the boy's clothing.

No other evidence in the case links the boy with the slaying, authorities say.

Assistant District Attorney Bob Gill said he is uncertain if the boy will ever stand trial in the slaying.

"A large part of our case is undermined by this decision," Gill said. "We're not going to be allowed to get in what is basically a confession to a murder."

In his ruling, the judge noted that police did not immediately take the boy to a juvenile detention center as required by law.

Police testified that during that questioning, the boy detailed to them how he repeatedly stabbed a teacher with a steak knife taken from his mother's kitchen.

Only minutes later, however, the boy recanted his statements to District Judge Louis Sturns and refused to sign a written confession.

Prosecutors will decide within the next two weeks, Gill said, whether to drop charges, seek a plea bargain arrangement or continue to press for a trial with the case they have. The trial had been tentatively set for the week of Nov. 6.

Earl "Ernie" Bates, the lawyer assigned to defend the boy, said he won't settle for a guilty plea to a lesser charge.

"There is not going to be any plea bargain whatsoever," Bates said. "We've entered a plea of not guilty and that's the way it's going to be — I guarantee it."

Fort Worth Police Chief Thomas Windham said that the appropriate questioning procedures may not have been followed because many officers did not learn of the new juvenile procedures until September.

"We probably erred, but there was no malicious intent on the part of these hardworking detectives," Windham said. "What this points out is that this is a very unforgiving, inflexible system, the criminal justice system."

"To the best of our abilities, this case has been solved and cleared," Windham added. "What happens subsequent to that in the juvenile system, someone else decides."

several individuals including two Big Spring residents, he said.

Conard said as part of their oath, grand jurors will be sworn to secrecy for their term of service and even after the grand jury panel has been dismissed. It is a misdemeanor offense if a grand juror should release information about the grand jury, and Conard said he expects the judge to issue a strong warning to panel members about discussing the case.

Conard said he understands there have been quite a few calls requesting exemptions for the upcoming grand jury. It's typical for people to request exemptions because of age, health, or status as a child care provider or full-time student, he said. Those who are exempt do not have to serve, but are not removed from the jury selection process automatically, he said.

It is conceivable, though not likely, that so many of the potential grand jurors could ask for exemptions that a new list of 50 people would have to be drawn, he said.

Conard said he assumes if not enough jurors are found, the district judge would again follow the unusual process of using a jury wheel rather than a jury commission to select names. It would be done in an effort to allay concerns by the local chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens, Conard said, who protested that previous grand jurors were cronies for the county rather than independent thinkers.

Conard said he understands that six of 12 on this jury list are Hispanic. He said he expects a fair outcome regardless of who sits on the grand jury.

"I still would expect a grand juror to set aside his or her personal beliefs and make a fair decision," he said.

The grand jurors promise to take their oath to be fair and unbiased, and their ability to hear testimony under oath and ask questions provides a fair process, he said.

"They'll just do (their job) in correct manner, that's the way I'll do mine," he said.

"What I want is justice here and a just outcome."

Conard said he plans to continue with the grand jury despite LULAC's objections to the proceedings as carried out in Mitchell County. LULAC leaders expressed outrage after learning they were not allowed to be present when a list of eligible voters was placed in a jury wheel used to select 50 possible grand jurors.

Erwin said LULAC leaders were excluded from the selection process as part of state law.

"I don't need LULAC's approval," Conard said, adding that the case has already faced much scrutiny. Most cases and most citizens do not have to undergo two grand juries for the same offense, he said.

monitored for pollution for a 30-year period as opposed to five years under the current rules.

"We need to get that done a year from now, not 18 months," Wheeler said. "If we get it inspected and there's something they (Texas Department of Health) don't like about it, we'll need another month or two to straighten it out. We need to get this thing started."

Another problem in closing the landfill, he pointed out, is that new facilities must first be procured. An option that would allow more time would be to operate a trench in a new landfill under the current EPA regulations until the rest of the landfill can be constructed according to the new specifications, he said.

"A trench can be closed in the new landfill as part of the older landfill," he explained to commissioners. "Another option is to take trash to Midland," he said.

"It would cost more to take it to Midland than to handle it here," said City Manager Jimmy Mathis after the Monday meeting. "It would double your contract right there because you had to carry so far."

At the meeting Tollison spoke of a need to get organized.

"Right now there's not a great deal of organization," he said. "We know that. We can do better than that."

jumper intentionally causes his parachute to malfunction, cuts or releases it away, then uses a second chute; the diamond track, in which two jumpers track or fly toward each other at a combined speed of more than 300 mph, missing each other by only a few feet; and finally, the diamond formation.

The diamond, which is the Knight's signature formation, concludes the aerial maneuvers as four jumpers freefalling together in tight formation separate on a signal toward the four corners of the earth, creating a bomb-burst effect.

After that, audience members are allowed the opportunity to meet and talk with representatives of the Army, the Golden Knights.

Each show is directly supported by the team's aviation section, which consists of six pilots and their supporting crews, who maintain a small fleet of two U21s and two F27 Fokkers. The U21s are used mostly by the competition teams, while the Fokkers, with their flashy black and gold finish, are most familiar to the spectators who've watched the Knights perform.

From beginning to end, a typical Golden Knight air show takes less than an hour.

Throughout the demonstration, one of the Knights — usually the first one to land — will narrate the entire show. Once the 12 men and women who make up this elite demonstration team on the ground, they line up and present the wooden baton previously passed in mid-air to a predesignated member of the audience.

Inside Texas

Jail suicide

ODESSA (AP) — An inmate at the Ector County Jail apparently hanged himself Wednesday night hours after being sentenced to 50 years in prison for raping a woman, according to Ector County sheriff's reports.

Nathaniel T. Winn Jr., 27, 814 E. Odessa St., was found hanging from a ripped sheet in the shower stall of his one-person cell at 9:07 p.m. Wednesday by jailer David Ellis, Sheriff's Inspector Herbert Gibson said Thursday.

Ellis, who also is a paramedic, pulled Winn down and attempted to revive him, Gibson said. Winn was taken to Medical Center Hospital and was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles at 10:20 p.m. Valles ordered an autopsy.

Ellis had made rounds at 9:05 p.m. and Winn complained to him that the light in his cell was not working, Gibson said. Ellis returned two minutes later to make another check before medication was handed out to inmates, according to jail records.

During the check, Ellis saw Winn inside the shower stall with a sheet hanging from the ceiling, Gibson said. Jailers check inmates every hour, Gibson said.

Winn was transferred to a single cell Wednesday after his sentencing because he told jailers he wanted to be alone and not face the ridicule of other inmates, Gibson said. There was no indication that he was suicidal, Gibson said.

Jail Administrator Capt. Carlos Padilla declined to comment on the death.

Artist slain

EL PASO (AP) — Manuel G. Acosta, a painter who was one of the Southwest's premier artists, was found beaten to death in his home, El Paso Police say.

Police Lt. Paul Saucedo said Acosta's body was found in the front room of his home by a nephew Wednesday evening.

Saucedo said no arrests have been made in connection with the slaying of the 68-year-old man. He also said officers have not been able to determine if Acosta's home was burglarized.

The artist was apparently beaten on the head with a blunt object and may have been dead "probably close to 12 hours," Saucedo added.

Acosta's van was missing when police found Acosta's body, Saucedo said.

John Meigs, a prominent Southwestern painter who lives in San Patricio, N.M., praised Acosta as "the finest Southwestern artist of this century."

"He was the only painter who painted the barrio with such intensity and knowledge," said Meigs, who had known Acosta 40 years and painted several murals with him.

Missing property

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Forty-eight weapons, a bus and enough kitchen equipment to start a small restaurant are some of the more than $650,000 in property missing from the Bexar County Sheriff's Department and county jail.

But sheriff's department officials say the items, which didn't appear in an in-depth inventory of the items dating back to the 1960s, may not have been taken by thieves.

"They could be missing, lost, sold, traded in, perhaps stolen. Or we may have missed it. We just don't know at this point," county Purchasing Agent Charles Eads said Wednesday. "What I am concerned about are the weapons and the bigger items."

Property missing from the sheriff's office and Bexar County Jail inventory total $670,838, Eads said.

Among the unaccounted for property was a GMC prisoner bus valued at $17,991 and bought in 1976.

"Who wants to take a bus home," Eads said with a chuckle. "I'm sure we'll find it was auctioned or traded in, and there's just no paper trail."

Also missing are two Plymouth cars, two Fords and two Dodge patrol cars. Thirty shotguns, 13 .38-caliber pistols and a .35-caliber Magnum pistol also found their way to the missing list.

Sheriff Harlon Copeland blamed most of the problem on poor record-keeping practices in the past, and said his administration was not at fault.

"When I got elected sheriff, I signed for everything we had on board. The stuff I signed for is still here. The other stuff has never been seen by me or my staff," Copeland said.

Folks in Odessa perplexed by rating

ODESSA (AP) — In Odessa, where a sound is something you hear and not something you cross on a ferry, people are perplexed by their new status as residents of the second least-livable major city in the United States.

Two other Texas cities — Laredo and Victoria — also made the bottom 10 in the list of 333 cities ranked by Places Rated Almanac. Only Pine Bluff, Ark., was deemed a worse city to live than Odessa.

The almanac, in its third quadrennial edition, said the country's most livable city is Seattle, known for Puget Sound, the Mariners baseball team and buckets of rain. San Francisco — whose main shortcoming has been obvious since last week — was ranked second on the list, which was compiled before the killer earthquake.

Odessa ranked 332nd. Laredo was 331st and Victoria was 328th. Texas was the only state with more than one city in the bottom 10.

The cities' officials questioned how the book's publisher, Prentice Hall Travel Books, came up with its results.

"We're very proud of our community," said Bill Fashing of Odessa's bureau of economic development. "We have a population of 130,000 and we like to think most of those people are here because they want to be. We enjoy it because it's a good place."

The almanac's criteria included crime, health care, environment, transportation, education, the arts, recreation and climate.

"The climate in California — well, this past week said something about that," said Mona Foust, director of Victoria's convention and visitors bureau.

Miguel Conchas, director of Laredo's convention and visitors bureau, said his city's ranking might have been damaged by a lack of mainstream American fine arts.

"Culturally, I don't know what they're referring to," Conchas said. "I guess if we have a philharmonic orchestra. We have some of that kind of thing, but not as much as, say, Dallas."

He added that Laredo is rich in Mexican culture and has a colorful history replete with gunfights and Spanish rulers.

Peggy Meeks, director of the convention and visitors bureau in Odessa, said she considered the ranking "kind of flattering" because of the attention paid the city.

"I don't know how valid these surveys are and I don't think people pay much attention to them," she said, adding that she doesn't think the ranking will affect the number of visitors and immigrants to the city.

Officials of Laredo and Victoria said they didn't think the rankings would harm their economies, either.

Conchas and Ms. Meeks pointed out that Laredo and Odessa have sunshine more than 300 days a year, compared to the relatively clammy climes of Seattle and San Francisco.

Ms. Foust acknowledged that Victoria is humid, but said other cities in Texas, such as Houston, San Antonio and Dallas, have the same problem. All three of those cities ranked in the top 100.

Border cities tended to rank low: McAllen-Edinburg-Mission was 314th, Brownsville-Harlingen, 258th and El Paso, 222nd.

The nation's bottom 10 areas, starting with the lowest ranking, were Pine Bluff, Ark.; Odessa; Laredo; Yuba City, Calif.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Victoria; Greeley, Colo.; Gadsden, Ala.; Casper, Wyo.; Albany, Ga.; and Naples, Fla., according to USA Today.

The top 10 were Seattle, San Francisco Pittsburgh, Washington, San Diego, Boston, New York, Anaheim-Santa Ana, Calif., Louisville, Ky., and Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y., according to the Pittsburgh Press and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Dallas ranked 40th, Houston 66th, San Antonio 100th, Lubbock 120th, Fort Worth-Arlington 137th, Austin 196th and Midland 319th.

Cause of Phillips explosion undetermined

PASADENA (AP) — Crews clearing tons of wreckage left by a huge plastics plant explosion found three bodies, bringing the number of confirmed dead to five, and continued to search today for 17 people believed killed.

Investigators in Texas have not determined the cause of the series of explosions Monday at the Phillips Petroleum Co. plant, which produced 4.5 million pounds of plastic a day.

Even experts were surprised at the extent of the destruction, apparently touched off somehow in leaking ethylene and isobutane gas.

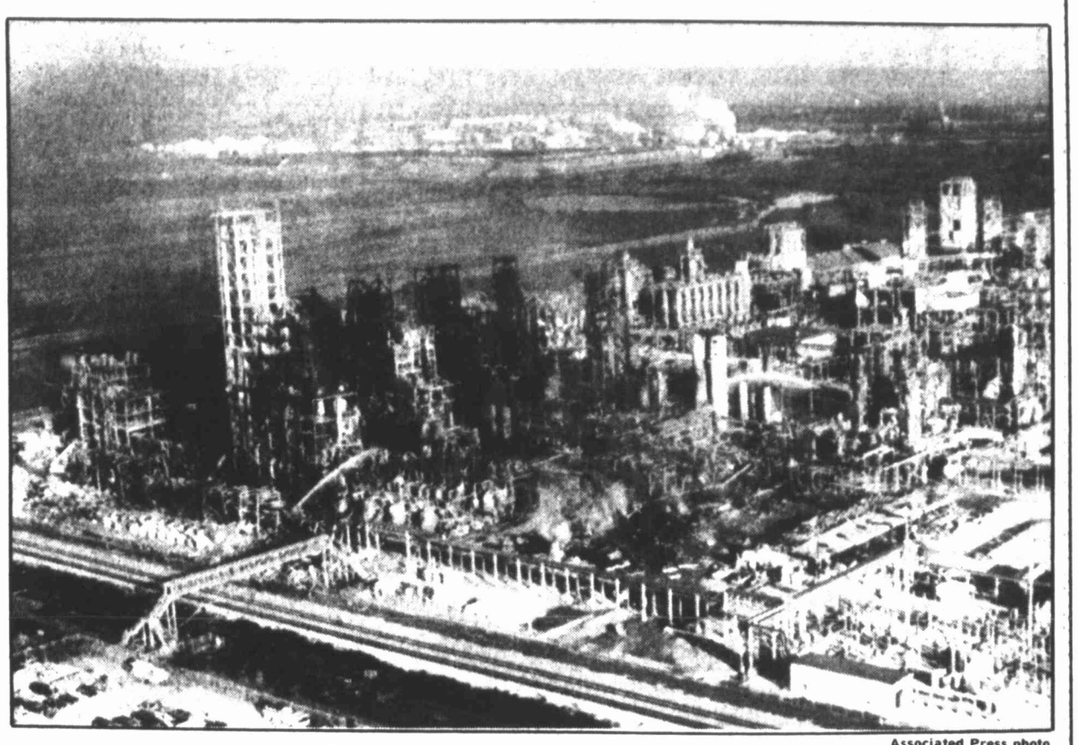

"It's total devastation," said Assistant U.S. Labor Secretary John Scannell, who heads the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"In 30 years of experience in the chemical industry, I've never seen such massive equipment twisted and strung about," said Scannell, who toured the plant on the Houston Ship Channel on Wednesday.

Fifteen OSHA investigators joined Phillips workers cleaning up the plant and searching for the cause of the explosion.

The clean-up continued around the clock, with big floodlights illuminating the scene at night as workers used hydraulic shears, cranes and other heavy equipment to cut through a tangle of metal beams and pipes.

Of the three bodies found Wednesday, two were near a storage area for polyethylene pellets manufactured at the plant, said company spokesman Bill Wicker. The third was in a maintenance area. Two others were found Monday and Tuesday.

PASADENA — Twisted metal and charred pipes are all that stand at the Phillips Petroleum plant in Pasadena.

An official of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union said plant employees had complained that staff shortages, long hours and an abundance of workers from outside contractors could have caused lapses in safety procedures.

The official, Bob Wages, vice president of the OCAW's oil section, didn't have specific safety complaints about the plant.

"It's symptomatic of what's going on in this industry," Wages said of the complaints. "I think companies are concerned about safety, but I think they have competing interests: profit and production."

A natural gas explosion in August killed a worker at the plant. Union officials said the accident was an example of poorly trained contract labor possibly endangering Phillips workers.

Plant manager Robert Benz said discounted any possible connection between the use of contract workers and the two explosions. He said contract workers get safety seminars twice a month.

Scannell said the recovery of victims could take weeks. Part of the problem is that when one piece of wreckage is moved, it sets off a chain reaction of falling debris, he said.

House votes to defer deportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of illegal aliens who fled civil strife in El Salvador, Nicaragua and China could be given haven in the United States for three years under an immigration package approved by the House.

The measure designed to protect as many as 750,000 exiles from deportation was approved 258-162 on Wednesday and goes to the Senate.

"These are people who need our help and we are in a position to help them," Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., said in urging support.

The bill would suspend for three years deportation of illegal aliens who fled El Salvador, Nicaragua and China if they were in the United States when the measure went into effect and if they registered within nine months.

It also would establish a system for extending temporary status to citizens of additional countries beset by armed conflict and natural disaster.

Approval came despite warnings from opponents that it would encourage job-hungry Central Americans to come north in the guise of political exiles.

"It isn't right to say to American workers that we are going to take your job away from you and give it to people who came here to take your job away from you in the first place," said Rep. Bob Walker, R-Pa.

Moakley noted that the measure has support from the AFL-CIO and a number of large labor unions.

"I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." — Voltaire

Views from around Texas

Intelligence, not assignation

Should the Central Intelligence Agency be given the authority to become involved in coups that result in the assassination of foreign leaders? A fornight after a failed coup attempt against Panamanian Gen. Manuel Noriega, the Bush administration seems bent on rescinding a 1976 order issued by President Gerlad Ford barring U.S. involvement in assassinations. Mr. Bush is entering a mine field. . .

Weakening the Ford directive would be a virtual invitation to the CIA to strike out on adventures that may ultimately be counter-productive. The temptation to assist in the elimination of despised foreign leaders would be great, but does the executive branch really want to get into the business of playing God? Not the least of the dangers is the real possibility of paybacks. . .It may be reasonably asked if CIA involvement in foreign assassinations might not result in foreign agents showing less restraint against U.S. political figures here.

. . .The United States should promote democracy by promoting democracy. That means giving encouragement to the opponents of dictatorships, teaching them about the principles of our system of government and helping promote the conditions under which democracy thrives. . .But under no circumstances short of outright war are the interests of democracy promoted by dialing CIA for murder.

Let foreign airlines compete

From now on, more airline passengers will have more options when traveling abroad, if the Transportation Department has its way.

The department has proposed allowing foreign airlines to fly to and from American cities that have so far been without international service. The idea is to shake up the domestic market with more competition, and it's a good one.

The proposal is also meant to discourage European countries from adopting protectionist policies toward U.S. airlines. With a little prodding, the Europeans might even begin to try deregulation for themselves. That would benefit not only European travelers, but Americans as well.

El Paso Herald-Post

Border area needs action

Though he's certainly not trying to sow panic, Texas' U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen thinks the situation along the Texas-Mexico border is ample cause for alarm — certainly sufficient to justify action by drug czar William Bennett declaring the region a high-intensity drug trafficking area.

Bentsen said last week, "Mexico has become a virtual trampoline for drug smuggling into the United States." He urged action upon Bennett, who has indicated he will defer any decision until February.

That, however, just won't get the job done, in the senator's view: "A delay in the drug war in Texas does not square with the explosive growth in drug smuggling along the Texas border."

Bentsen would appear to have the better of the argument. As the senator pointed out, "They're not talking about kilograms any more — they're talking about tons."

. . .The situation in South Texas is rapidly assuming the proportions of an emergency. Further delay in funneling federal assistance here would just give the traffickers that much more time to solidify their position. . .It's time for Bennett to move off dead center.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times

Another law open to abuse

Once again, the Legislature has perpetrated a law that is broadly and loosely written. . .

Earlier this year, legislators repealed a badly written law that allowed police authorities to withhold the names and addresses of crime victims from the public. . .

Early (Oct. 16), Express-News police reporter Jeff Davis was arrested by San Antonio police for doing his job: covering a shooting. Davis was jailed (for) photographing a woman who had been shot at another location. It was not even the scene of the crime.

Davis was arrested under a law that quietly took effect Sept. 1. He was charged with interfering with the duties of a public servant. The law makes it illegal for someone to "intentionally, knowingly, recklessly or with criminal negligence" interfere with or disrupt police, firefighters or paramedics at a scene.

This is so broad that an innocent passerby could be arrested.

Sponsors of the law are state Rep. Jack Harris, R-Pearland, and state Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria. Both said there was no intent to hinder news-gathering. . .

This is selective enforcement of a vague law from which nobody gains. The public loses two ways: by paying taxes for a waste of time and money and through loss of information. . .

Mom's Apple Pie needs protection

By ART BUCHWALD

Art Buchwald

Although the Senate killed a proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw the burning of the American flag, some right-minded people are not giving up. The day after the vote, I was handed a red, white and blue flyer on the street.

"We lost this round," the man told me, "but we hope to win the next one."

"Which is?"

"We want to ban the burning of Mom's Apple Pie."

"On what grounds?"

"Next to the flag, Mom's Apple Pie is the most sacred symbol this nation has, and it must be protected by the Constitution."

"I agree," I said. "But is there a lot of pie-burning going on?"

"More than of flags. Every minute of every day someone in this great land is burning an apple pie."

"I didn't know it was that frequent. Who is burning the pies — surely not the Moms?"

"Mostly their daughters," the man replied. "This generation has no idea how to bake an apple pie. Everytime someone from the female work force puts one in the oven, they let it catch on fire."

"Why a constitutional amendment? Wouldn't it be sufficient to have a law ensuring that anyone who desecrated the pie would get jail and a heavy fine?"

"A law doesn't have the same impact as an amendment. Some wise-guy lawyer will argue that burning your mother's pie should be permitted under the First Amendment which guarantees freedom of speech. The fact is this country could not have won any wars if our soldiers had not fought for their Mom's Apple Pie. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, our boys could smell the pie in the oven back home and, for that reason, they broke the backs of the Germans and the Japanese for all time."

"I can understand how revered Mom's Apple Pie is and how much you don't want it burned. My question is, under your proposed amendment, can someone eat the pie without desecrating it?"

"Of course. All we're trying to do is keep people from treating it with contempt."

"Okay, no one can argue with you on that, but since World War II every frozen food company has sold something they call 'Mom's Apple Pie.' A lot of them are not very good. Are we allowed to stomp on frozen pies after tasting them?"

The man answered, "We are talking about the Mom's Apple Pie that our doughboys yearned for, made with mother's gnarled hands. We couldn't care less about what you do with a frozen apple pie."

"Fine, but how do you plan to enforce this law?"

"The desecration has to be in public and witnessed by at least two TV anchormen."

"Will the Senate go along with you now that they have defeated the flag amendment?"

"We're sure of it. After all, there are a lot more senators who feel closer to their mothers than they do to the flag. We think we can get Bob Dole to lead the fight. He lost the flag battle so he's looking for any victory on the patriotism issue."

"What about President Bush?"

"He's a shoo-in. He's been for Mom's Apple Pie ever since he was tapped for Skull and Bones at Yale."

"As the 'education president,' I've decided to give only the money necessary for kids to learn to read...MY LIPS!"

Quotes

"They don't get it. For the men, it's all hypothetical." — Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., after the House sustained Bush's veto of a bill allowing federal funds for abortions for women who have been raped or are the victims of incest. Eighteen of 26 voting congresswomen voted to override, but their effort fell short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

"It is certainly my impression, and I think that I speak for all of us representing the United Nations in Nicaragua, that the goal of a free, fair and honest election is being taken seriously by all those concerned, in the government, in the parties, and among the people." — U.N. poll watcher and former U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson, refuting State Department claims that the leftist Sandinista government is rigging the February elections in Nicaragua.

"We are ready for a dialogue with all levels of society." — Guenter Schabowski, a member of the East German Communist Party's ruling Politburo, offering to meet with a member of the leading opposition group.

Show respect for death

To the editor:

I saw a funeral procession today. I was driving down Gregg Street, and I immediately saw the white limousines and hearses driving out of the funeral home. Naturally, I pulled over to the side of the road to show respect to the loved ones of the deceased. However, I was shocked by the rudeness of the other drivers who were there with me.

Not only did several of the cars around me continue to drive forward but the person stopped behind me actually honked her horn to try to get me to move on! As if that wasn't bad enough, people who were coming the other direction down Gregg Street were in such a hurry that they didn't even give the funeral procession time to get out of the parking lot before they began to drive on.

I waited until the procession had seemingly ended before I moved on down the street, but as I passed the funeral home I noticed that the oncoming traffic had interrupted the procession to such a degree that there was still a car trying to get out of the lot.

Sir, I think that the people of Big Spring need to begin to show more respect to the loved ones of a deceased person. I realize that many people are in a hurry to get to an appointment or something else, but how could they be in such a hurry that they don't have time to stop and pay their respects to a grieving family? After all, it only takes about 5 minutes for the procession to go by.

Big Springers need to treat other people the way that they would want to be treated if it was one of their loved ones who had passed away. For after all, someday it just might be you in the white limousine, and wouldn't you like for other people to show you a little respect?

A trip through the garden

"Man does not live by words alone, despite the fact that sometimes he has to eat them." — Adlai Stevenson.

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Hey, ho, whaddaya know? Well, ladies and germs, madames and monsieurs, Mr. and Mrs. America and all the ships at sea, do you know why I'm in such a good mood?

No, why?

Because it's time once again to open the dictionary and take a stroll through the Garden of Grammatical Delights, that's why.

Big whoopie.

Now, now, now. What kind of attitude is that? Do you think Columbus discovered the New World by saying, "big whoopie?" Do you think Edison said "big whoopie" when he invented the light bulb? Do you think . . .

Hey, Reagan . . .

What?

Cut the crap, will you? If we're going to do this, let's get on with it.

Well, OK. I guess a slightly sarcastic audience is better than no audience at all.

Thank you.

All right, let's get going. You know the rules: I provide a word, you provide the definition. Got it?

Yeah, yeah, yeah. Let's go.

OK. The first word is nomological. Now, class, what does it mean?

Oooh, I know that one. It means something that is less logical or as logical as something else. Like, "Your theory is nomological than mine." Right?

Sorry to rain on your parade, but that's not quite right. Nomological means pertaining to or expressing basic physical laws or rules of reasoning. But don't get discouraged. You're thinking (at least, I think you're thinking).

Well, let's try again, shall we? The next work is sinicize. Anyone care to venture a guess?

Uh, does it mean to make something or someone more sinister?

Nope.

Well, then how about make something more cynical?

Wrong again.

Well, OK, then, Mr. Know-it-all. What does it mean?

Snappish, aren't we? Sinicize means to modify by Chinese influence.

You know, Reagan, I could have lived just as long — and been just as happy — if I had never learned that.

I'd love to hear more of your insults, but time's a-wastin'. We have just enough space for one more word, and that one is eruct.

It's the past tense of erect, right?

No, sir. Eruct, to use the venacular, means to belch.

We know the feeling.

Bush signs quake aid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush today signed a $3.45 billion earthquake relief plan for California — Congress' largest disaster aid bill — after it was rushed through the House and Senate.

Besides providing earthquake recovery aid, the measure averted a federal government shutdown today and keeps the government operating through Nov. 15 while Congress and the White House complete some late spending bills.

"This bill is an unprecedented federal response to a disaster of unprecedented dimension," Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., said Wednesday.

But the Californians predicted they'd be back for more.

Many expect the San Francisco-area quake to rank as the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history, with estimates running above $7 billion.

Bakker adjusting to prison

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Jim Bakker seems to be adapting to a lifestyle much different from the one he lived as the leader of a multimillion-dollar religious empire.

Instead of silk, the PTL founder wears an orange jumpsuit, and he changed more luxurious quarters for a cell shared with another inmate.

Still, "he was in good spirits this morning when I met with him," said Brian Ross, a spokesman at the medium-security Talladega Federal Correctional Institution where Bakker on Wednesday served the first full day of his 45-year sentence.

Bakker arrived at the facility Tuesday night in handcuffs and shackles after a six-hour drive from Charlotte, N.C., where a federal judge banished him immediately to prison after imposing the sentence and a $500,000 fine.

Bakker's lawyer, Harold Bender, said prejudicial pretrial publicity will be the key issue on appeal, which he filed Tuesday. Moreover, he said, Bakker's sentence is excessive. "We believe because of his celebrity status that the sentence was in the range that it was," he told CBS News Wednesday.

41 injured in prison riot

CAMP HILL, Pa. (AP) — Hundreds of inmates ended a fiery seven-hour uprising after the warden agreed to meet with a small group about their complaints. Forty-two people were hurt during the siege and the prison was heavily damaged.

Eight guards were held hostage Wednesday in the state's second prison rampage in two days.

Robert M. Freeman, superintendent of the medium-security State Correctional Institution at Camp Hill, said 1,200 of the prison's 2,600 inmates joined the riot at various stages.

A new rule barring inmates' families from bringing in homemade food may have sparked the outbreak, said Freeman, who explained that the rule was established to prevent contraband from slipping into the prison.

The prison in Camp Hill, 3 miles west of Harrisburg, is about 45 percent above capacity.

WASHINGTON — Abortion-rights lawmakers speak at a news conference on Capitol Hill Wednesday following the House vote to sustain President Bush's veto of a bill that would have allowed federally financed Medicaid abortions for victims of rape and incest.

House fails to override veto on abortion funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion rights advocates in Congress say they're not giving up their bid to allow Medicaid abortions for rape and incest victims, despite falling far short of overriding President Bush's veto.

The House sustained Bush's veto Wednesday in a 231-191 vote, 51 fewer than the two-thirds majority needed to overturn a veto.

Rep. Chris Smith R-N.J., called the vote "a decisive victory for the pro-life movement" and evidence the political ground has not shifted on the abortion issue, as abortion rights advocates say.

But Democrats and Republicans who back the more liberal restrictions argued that public sentiment is on their side and that the vote will yield far-reaching political damage for Bush among younger voters.

"I am amazed," said Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., "to see the Republican White House hand over to the Democratic Party a political generation that's out there and awakening to this issue."

"President Bush may well have stumbled on the one issue that could cost him re-election," said a Republican, Rep. Bill Green of New York.

The vote followed Bush's veto on Saturday of the provision, which is but a paragraph in a $156.7 billion appropriations bill for health, education and labor programs for the 1990 fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The provision would loosen an eight-year ban on federal financing of abortions for poor women except in cases where the woman's life is endangered by her pregnancy. It would have permitted Medicaid abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest and who "reported promptly" to authorities.

Although it was designed to cover a relatively narrow group of women, the issue took on symbolic importance in the growing political struggle over abortion. Its approval by the House two weeks ago on a 216-206 vote marked the first time that body had voted the more liberal abortion language, although the Senate has repeatedly backed it.

With the agencies continuing to operate under a stopgap spending measure, the spending bill and vetoed abortion language were sent back to the House Appropriations Committee for revision.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., and other abortion rights leaders vowed to offer similar language on other bills and repeatedly put Bush on the spot.

Rebel offensive leaves six dead

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas stormed two northeastern towns then abandoned them, leaving at least six people dead in Colombia's worst rebel violence in two years.

The attacks Wednesday by the National Liberation Army, a pro-Cuban guerilla group, apparently were unrelated to the government's war against drug traffickers, now entering its 10th week.

The army has claimed for seven years, without producing proof, that some leftist guerrillas and drug traffickers work in tandem.

The government pressed ahead with the drug war Wednesday, notifying an alleged member of the Medellin cocaine cartel that he was being extradited to the United States and taking steps to protect presidential candidates from violence by traffickers.

According to TV Hoy, the government notified Jose Rafael Abello Silva, 34, of his impending extradition. Police have said Abello is the fourth most important figure in the Medellin cartel, in charge of its activities on Colombia's Atlantic coast.

Nixon to go to China Saturday

BEIJING (AP) - The Chinese Foreign Ministry announced today that former President Richard Nixon will arrive this weekend as a guest of the government.

The Chinese have regarded Nixon as a friend since he reopened bilateral relations by visiting as president in 1972.

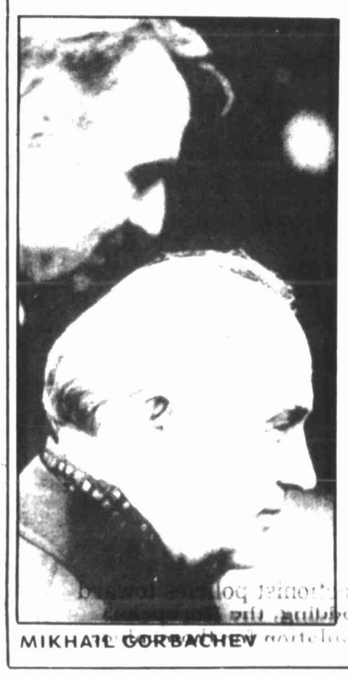

Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing announced that Nixon would arrive on Saturday but did not give any details of the agenda. Nixon likely will see all the top Chinese leaders, including senior leader Deng Xiaoping.

Nixon's spokesman, John H. Taylor, said Monday in the United States that Nixon would report to President Bush on his return home. The White House said Bush looked forward to hearing his report, but stressed that Nixon was traveling as a private citizen.

Bush banned high-level contacts with China after the Chinese army attacked pro-democracy demonstrators in June, killing hundreds and perhaps thousands.

Nixon has visited China six times since his historic 1972 trip.

Gorbachev unveils goodwill plan

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev of the Soviet Union today unveiled a major plan to rid the Baltic area of nuclear weapons, including removing four nuclear-armed submarines.

In a goodwill gesture to northern Europe, the Kremlin chief said the Soviet Union has removed all tactical nuclear missiles that could strike the region and will take certain types of sea-launched nuclear weapons out of the Baltic Sea.

He made these announcements in remarks prepared for delivery to 1,500 Finnish politicians, businessmen and other invited guests.

Gorbachev said the steps were being taken unilaterally and that they were a follow-up to a speech he gave two years ago in the Soviet port of Murmansk. Many of his proposals in that speech — including a call for a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe — were dismissed by NATO.

$30,000 pup stolen

HINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Thieves who stole a specially bred golden retriever and left behind a pumpkin won't face criminal charges if they return the puppy unharmed, its owner says.

While stealing the 9-week-old female Monday, the thieves also painted the words "Happy Halloween. Thanks for the dog. Sorry no money... Don't worry, be happy," police said.

The 18-pound pup, named Penny, is a top-of-the-line show dog, the product of 17 years of breeding, said owner Lynda Bennett, a breeder and veterinarian. She said the puppy is worth $30,000 to her but would not be worth as much to thieves because they lack documentation that it is a purebred.

She said she would drop all charges and ask no questions if Penny was returned.

"They've taken away my future on top of breaking my heart," said Bennett. "This puppy is like one of my babies. She's part of my family."

Fleshy felines

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A wildlife handler is offering abandoned cats free to anyone who will prove a good home for them. Problem is, these felines grow to 150 pounds.

Vernon Yates has accumulated eight cougars at his Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation complex and he's having trouble giving them away.

"I have a very hard time placing cougars — everybody does," he said.

He wound up with the big cats as part of his job trapping and housing unwanted exotic animals.

"They make good pets if you understand what you're dealing with," Yates said. "... They have the potential to severely hurt somebody, and, in the case of a small child, kill them."

Pet shops sold exotic cats until a couple years ago when stricter state laws were enacted. "Anybody could walk into a pet shop, lay down $1,000 and walk off with a cat," said Yates.

Now, to get a permit to own an exotic cat, the state requires three years of animal handling experience and a cage that meets certain specifications.

"Some people say that living in a cage isn't necessarily the best life for a cougar," Yates said. "But it's someplace to go. I'm trying to keep them from being destroyed.

"I believe there are people out there who will love them, even though they can't pet them."

Study: 1980s school reform produced only 'modest' gains

NEW YORK (AP) — States have made only modest gains toward school reform this decade, and few are heeding calls to shift more power and responsibility to local schools, a report says.

The report, "The Progress of Reform: An Appraisal of State Education Initiatives," found that only a few states such as Washington, Arkansas, Maine and Massachusetts have programs to encourage local districts to find creative ways of improving classroom instruction.

The study, released Wednesday, concluded that state efforts since 1983, when the federal report "A Nation at Risk" heralded the school reform movement, generally have lacked coherence.

It suggested that future items on the reform agenda such as more equitable distribution of school funds to poorer districts and giving teachers and parents more authority in school governance will be dauntingly difficult.

"If we're going to get those kinds of things, people are going to have to be willing to stay at it for a long time," said William A. Firestone, associate professor of education at Rutgers University and co-author of the report.

The study was produced by the Center for Policy Research in Education, a consortium of the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers, Michigan State University school of education, the Stanford University school of education, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison Center for Education Research.

It suggested that future items on the reform agenda such as more equitable distribution of school funds to poorer districts and giving teachers and parents more authority in school governance will be dauntingly difficult.

"High school curricula are more academically oriented, standards for entering the teaching profession are more selective, teachers' salaries are higher and state and local governments have boosted educational funding," the report said.

But "there are still doubts about the rigor and challenge of some of the new courses in academic subjects, the impact of reform on at-risk students, the quality of teachers and teaching and the equitable funding of schools."

Educators have said lately that the current reform movement passed through a "first wave" from 1982-86 during which states tightened teacher certification standards, boosted graduation requirements, and required students to pass more tests and demonstrate competency.

Since then, reformers have spoken of a "second wave" of educational improvements, often called "restructuring," during which schools themselves are being given more freedom to innovate and teachers and parents are being made more equal partners with administrators in school governance.

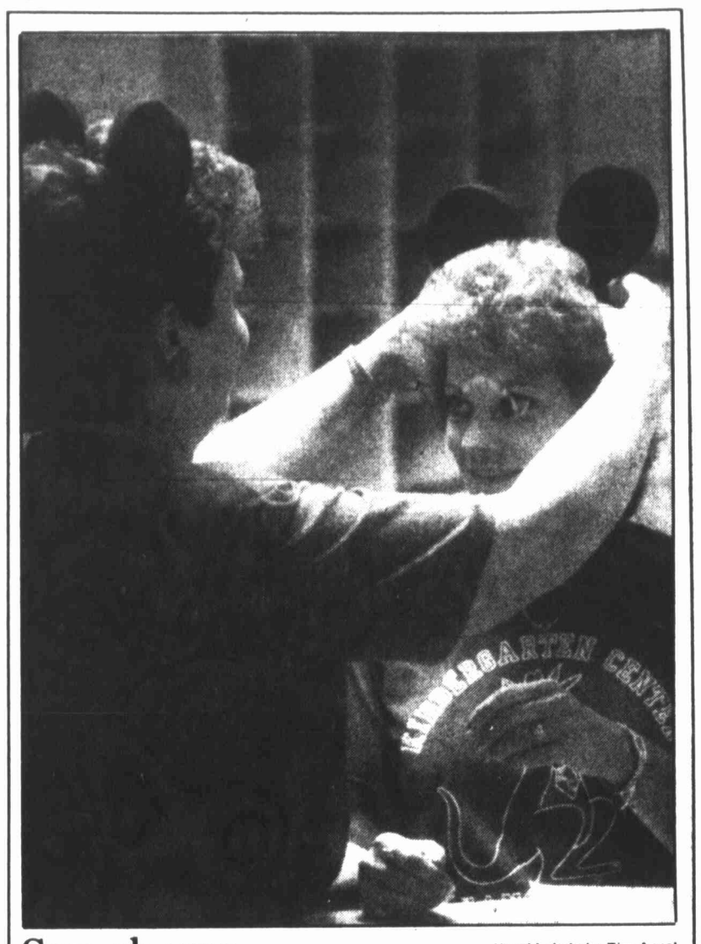

President Bush endorsed many of those "second wave" ideas at last month's "education summit" with the nation's governors.

But this latest study suggests that those principles remains wishful thinking in most states.

While a few pioneering districts such as Rochester, N.Y., Cincinnati, and Dade County, Fla., have local restructuring strategies, "states are still enacting policies more characteristic of the first wave of reform," according to the report.

"States are exhibiting no clear shift in direction from the first wave of reform to the second," the report said.

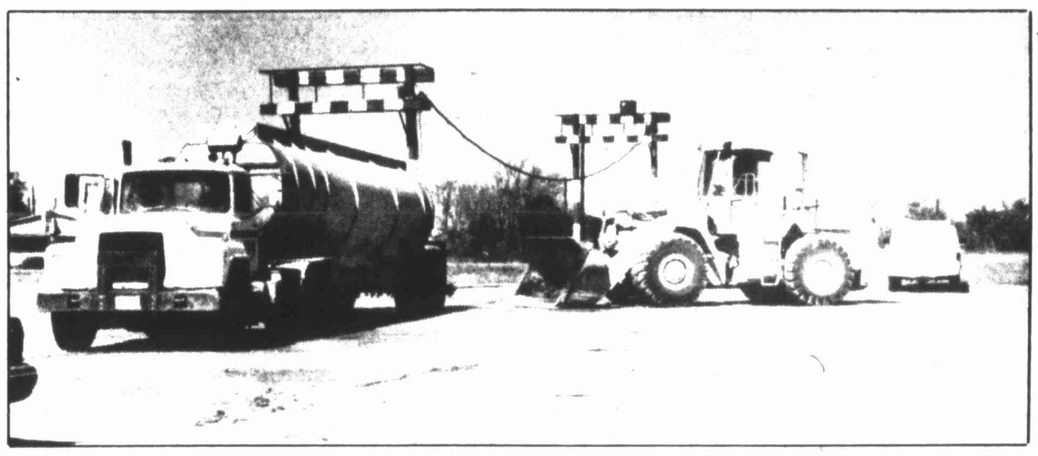

Its other authors were Susan H. Furhrman, professor of policy at Eagleton, and Michael W. Kirst, an education professor at Stanford.

Parmer accuses opponent Gramm of 'Grammscam'

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer has added "Grammscam" to the political dictionary in criticizing incumbent Phil Gramm's role in a bond sale to help the savings and loan industry.

State Sen. Parmer for some time has referred to "Grammstanding," which Parmer said refers to "a fellow who is willing to misrepresent things in order to promote his own political interests."

Larry Neal, a spokesman for Gramm, R-Texas, said Wednesday Parmer's "goofy research" on the bond issue demonstrates once again that Parmer "may be a prime candidate for dog catcher but not for the U.S. Senate."

Parmer, D-Fort Worth, told a news conference a Gramm maneuver to make the federal budget "look good" will cost the American taxpayer in extra interest.

Parmer said Gramm led a "smoke-and-mirrors" effort that pulled $30 billion in bonds from the budget by creating a quasi-government corporation to borrow the money for the savings and loan bailout.

A total of $4.5 billion in bonds were sold at auction Wednesday by the Resolution Financing Corp., and if the trend holds, the total additional interest after $30 billion in bonds are sold will be $2.52 billion, Parmer said.

The least expensive way to sell the bonds would have been through the U.S. Treasury Department but the total amount would show in the federal budget, Parmer said. Gramm didn't want that because it would have required an exception to the Gramm-Rudman budget execution law, Parmer said.

"The middle-class families of Texas will be the biggest losers from Grammscam," Parmer said. "They work hard and pay their taxes, only to see Phil Gramm waste their tax dollars and add a little more to their problems."

Mom argues husband grounds sports minded son too much, too often

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband uses "grounding" for every little infraction our 15-year-old son commits. "Rick" loves sports, and he's very good at basketball and soccer. He's on his high school teams for both sports.

My husband feels that when Rick is grounded he should not be able to go anywhere — including practice for sports or playing in the games. I feel that taking away Rick's TV and telephone privileges and going out in the evening is punishment enough. Besides, if Rick is grounded from practice and playing in sports, he'd be letting his school and teammates down. Being grounded from sports for two weeks could even cause him to lose out playing a whole season.

I think I have a fairly good chance of winning this argument, but I need your help. I hope you're on my side, Abby. Say what? — HIGH-SCHOOLER'S MOM

DEAR MOM: I think the punishment should fit the crime. If Rick's offense is serious — drinking, doing drugs or breaking the law — I'd say ground him all the way, sports included.

But for relatively minor offenses, denying Rick TV and telephone privileges, plus going out — other than for practice and games — is sufficient punishment.

DEAR ABBY: You advised a reader who was harassed by obscene telephone calls to report such calls to the telephone company. What do you expect it to do for her?

I was employed by the telephone company as a customer service representative for 25 years, and when people complained to us about such calls, we would refer them to the police department. The police department would then refer them back to the telephone company. Of course, customers would feel that they were getting the runaround — which they were.

The best thing to do is to change your telephone number — and there a charge for that. However, if the calls are life-threatening and a police report is filed, the phone company will change your number without charging you for it.

Most people think it's easy to trace a telephone number. It's not. It's a very involved procedure, and the telephone company and police department must work together in order to trace a call, but this is done only in life-threatening circumstances.

If the calls are obscene or harassing, the best way to discourage them is to keep a whistle near the phone and give the caller an earsplitting blast. — OLD REP FROM CALIFORNIA

DEAR OLD REP: Thanks. You reached out and touched a few million people.

Native Texas plant trail opened Tuesday

BIG SPRING — A half-mile native Texas plant trail was officially opened at Comanche Trail Park Tuesday by Howard County extension officials and members of area garden clubs in a special ceremony at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

"We hope it will be very popular here in town," Don Richardson, county extension agent for agriculture said previously. "We feel like it will be educational for our youth in our community as well as for older citizens."

Tuesday's event, sponsored by the Extension Horticulture Program Area Committee and the Rosebud Garden Club, recognizing leaders of the effort to develop the trail. Among them were Jane Thomas and Suncha Christensen, chairman of the Extension Horticulture Committee.

Funding for the trail was provided by private donations, with the city providing the land and Howard County paid for the markers.

Plaques by each of the about 50 plants along the trail tell the scientific and common names for the plant and the name of the person the plant is dedicated to.

On stage

MIDLAND — The sizzling drama Cat On A Hot Tin Roof will be on stage at Midland Community Theatre Nov. 10, 11, 16, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. with a Sunday matinee Nov. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

Cat On A Hot Tin Roof is MCT's seventh membership show of the 1989 season. Prize-winning author Tennessee Williams portrays a family in conflict. Brick (Christopher Goree) has long overshadowed his older brother, Gooper (Jim Bartlett). Gooper and his wife, Mae (Cindy Burger), have produced five grandchildren for Big Daddy (Bill Shaner) and for Big Mama (Marilyn Bassinger) while Brick and his wife, Maggie (Melissa Martin), are childless.

Dr. Baugh is played by Henry Goulet, Rev. Tooker is Scott Lunsford and the children are Eric Mees, Tanya Eustace, Jody Faulkner, Kimberly Gould and Gabe Godell. The scenes between Mae and Maggie provide bittersweet humor. Explosive scenes often occur between Big Daddy and Big Mama who have been married far longer than Big Daddy would wish. This show includes adult situations and adult language.

This Pulitzer Prize-winning drama is a challenging show for all audiences. Tennessee Williams doesn't pull any punches and Director Don Bachmann has worked with the outstanding cast to provide an evening of fast-paced entertainment. Pam Allen will stage manage. The play will open on Nov. 10 and will run Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday through Nov. 18 with performances beginning at 8 p.m. each evening and at 2:30 on Sunday, Nov. 12. The matinee is also a Reach Out! performance which is free for handicapped and disadvantaged with reservations.

Cat On A Hot Tin Roof is co-produced by United Bank. An opening night party will be sponsored by Catfish USA. All people who attend the performance Friday, Nov. 10 are invited to enjoy the complimentary catfish and barbeque from 7 to 8 p.m.

For ticket reservations or information call the MCT box office at 682-4111.

Comedy script contest

MIDLAND — Midland Community Theatre announces a nationwide competition for original, unproduced comedy scripts of any length in honor of the late Michael D. McLaren.

The prize will be a reader's theatre production of the play at MCT in July or August, 1990, a cash stipend of $400 and accomodations in Midland for the rehearsal period and during the reader's theatre.

Deadline for script submission is January 31, 1990. The winner will be announced April 1. Scripts should be typed with the name and address on the title page only. Scripts will not be returned unless accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The playwright retains all rights to the work submitted.

Mary Lou Cassidy, chairman of the competition, has announced that memorials for McLaren will be utilized in the competition. McLaren, who died in May, was a writer, actor and radio personality who often appeared on the Midland Community Theatre stage.

For more information about the McLaren Memorial Comedy Playwriting Competition, contact Midland Community Theatre's business office, 682-2544.

Ballerina in Midland

MIDLAND — Alexandra Danilova, one of this century's greatest and most beloved ballerinas, comes to Midland Oct. 30 through Nov. 4 to conduct master classes.

Her Midland stay will be highlighted by "An Evening with Danilova" Nov. 1 at the Petroleum Club. Proceeds from this event and from the master classes go to Ballet Midland, the local organization sponsoring her trip.

"This is an enormous coup for Ballet Midland and Midland itself," says Keith Martin, Ballet Midland's new artistic director. "She's retiring from teaching, and for us to have her last teaching before she officially retires and goes into coaching is just a little gift from God."

Madame Danilova left her native Russia in 1924, with George Balanchine, three other young dancers and a friend who acted as a manager. She never returned.

They eventually joined Serge Diaghilev's Ballets Russes, where Balanchine continued his tradition-shattering experiments with ballet. She danced with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo for nearly 20 years becoming its prima ballerina in 1938 and a star who was the toast of continents.

Netters headed to regional

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring High School tennis team gets its initial taste of team-tennis postseason play when it competes in the Region I-4A tournament Friday and Saturday in Lubbock.

This is the first time in the school's history, that anyone can remember, a Big Spring team has ever reached the regional tournament in team tennis play. Team tennis combines the results of nine boy's and nine girl's matches. The matches consist of six singles, and three doubles. It is the only sport in the University of Interscholastic League that the boys and girls work together to win.

And the Big Spring team has worked well together this season. A veteran boys team has shouldered the heavy burden, and a young, scrappy girls team has won the matches and sets when it has had to.

Under the direction of first-year coach Don Lawrence, Big Spring recorded a 7-0 district mark and 10-1 overall mark. The only loss was to Lubbock High early in the season, a 10-8 decision. Lubbock High is ranked in the top 25 teams in Class 5A.

San Angelo Lake View finished second in district behind Big Spring with a 6-1 record.

Lawrence, a nine-year coaching veteran, is a South Dakota native. His previous coaching stints were at Happy and Levelland.

The new Big Spring coach inherited a solid boys team, but his work with a very young goup of girls is one of the main reasons Big Spring is going to regional.

The boys are a seasoned group, led by junior Rocky Tubb, a three-year letterman and senior Danny Whitehead, a three-year letterman. They are seeded No. 1 and 2 respectively, and team together in doubles play.

Tubbs and Whitehead are followed by junior Steve Sims, junior Kevin Nichols, junior Chris Ficke and senior Lewis Hinojos. Also rounding out the squad are juniors Pacen Booth and Jay Ganaway.

Steers facing another passing team

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Steers go after their fourth consecutive district win when they travel I-20 to play the Pecos Eagles Friday at 8 p.m.

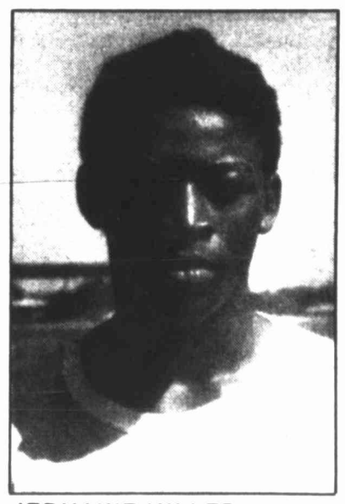

For the second consecutive week, coach David Thompson's Steers will face a passing-oriented team in the Pecos Eagles. Last week the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs tried to pass on the Steers, to no avail. Lake View did manage 211 yards in the air against the Big Spring secondary, but it was yards in the middle of the field.

Adding to the Chiefs woes were two interceptions by cornerback Michael Hilario and another theft by strong safety Pat Chavarria.

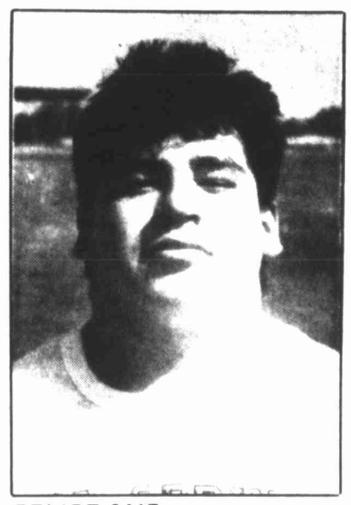

Last week Pecos, 3-3 overall and 1-2 in league play, got drubbed by Sweetwater 44-8. The Eagles had a little success throwing the ball, passing for 184 yards; but they were victimized by five Sweetwater interceptions.

Pecos coach Daylon Whitehurt makes no secret about it — he's going to have to throw the ball against Big Spring.

"Big Spring looks awesome to me," said Whitehurst. "Since the season has started, they've difinitely improved; since the season has started I think they've improved more than anyone in the district.

JERMAINE MILLER

FELIPE SAIZ

"Their kids on defense are a lot more aggressive. They're playing with a lot more confidence. We're going to have to pass on them. I don't think we can run."

Steers coach David Thompson is thinking on the same lines as Whitehurst.

"We feel like we'd better be ready to play the pass," said Thompson. "They do a good job of throwing the ball. Right now the are second in the district in passing, behind us.

"We're not going to totally ignore the run. We'll be ready to play the pass, but they can run the football."

Thompson said that his feeling about his team's defensive performance against Lake View has changed since viewing the films. "I really didn't think we played that good defensively, but after looking at the film, we didn't play as bad as I thought. We gave up some yardage, but I'm not going to worry about stats...we won the game 50-14."

Like the Steers, the Eagles have a balanced offensive attack, averaging 138 yards in the air and 117 on the ground. Pecos' three main offensive weapons are quarterback Monty Medanich, who's completed 47 percent of his passes for 710 yards, wide receiver Dani Talamantez and fullback Tommy Valdez.

Talamantez is the district's leading receiver, averaging 20.8 yards in 25 catches. Valdez, who's questionable because of a slight concussion suffered in the Sweetwater game, has rushed for 354 yards, averaging 4.8 yards per carry. If Valdez can't go, Tyrone Smith will take his place.

Big Spring has a few injuries of its own. Guard Santos Martinez won't be in the starting lineup because of a sprained ankle. He will be replaced by Lance Reeves. Safety Rye Bavin and starting defensive end Calvin Marion are also nursing ankle injuries. Bavin is doubtful but Marion will play.

Whitehurst says his most consistent blocker this season has been 5-foot-10, 175-pound senior guard Arturo Quintana.

After last week's 568-yard performance against Lake View, the Big Spring offense is averaging 332 yards per game — 225 on the ground and 107 in the air.

Last week the offense was flawless; quarterback Rance Thompson threw for 254 yards and four TD's, wingback Neal Mayfield had 243 yards in total offense, and

Big Spring quarterback named to AP Honor Roll

By The Associated Press

They are record-setters.

Quarterback Robert Ford and wide receiver Kenny Harrison are setting records at a school where the pass-catch standards are very high, Port Arthur Jefferson.

RANCE THOMPSON

The school produced an all-state wide receiver over a 5-year span beginning in 1979 and it has also produced outstanding quarterbacks.

Against this backdrop of tradition, Harrison caught 11 passes for 284 yards in a 21-15 loss to Baytown Sterling and broke the school receiving yards. He caught touchdown passes of 67 and 6 yards.

Ford completed 15 of 33 passes for 367 yards and two touchdowns, breaking the school's single game passing yards record.

The duo, both juniors, earn mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll along with Sudan's versatile quarterbacksafety Kyle Maxfield.

Harrison has caught 48 passes for 942 yards and is within reach of Duhon's single season record of 1,380 yards. He broke Brent Duhon's record of 278 yard against Vidor in 1979.

Ford has completed 86 of 190 passes for 1,571 yards and 13 touchdowns. He broke Craig Stump's passing yards record of 332 yards against LaPorte in 1982.

"I don't think there's anyone who can cover the guy," Port Arthur Jefferson coach Mike Owens said of Harrison. "This is his first year to play. He's come a long way since last year and a long way this year."

Maxfield scored five touchdowns on an 85-yard kickoff return, punt returns of 50 and 55 yards, a 30-yard interception return a and a 10-yard run in a 63-0 victory over Kress.

Maxfield also had seven tackles on defense. He quarterbacked for one series in the second half and then retired for the day.

"For us it's not that different," Sudan coach Royce McAdams said. "We see it all the time. We see that athleticism every week. He'll do something along that line every week."

Maxfield's second punt return proved McAdams' point.

"I kept trying to make moves, and it seemed like they were closing in on me," Maxfield said. "All of a sudden I spun off that last man and got in the open. I got some key blocks on that too."

Orangefield's Jeff Granger had a five-touchdown performance in a 35-33 victory over Port Arthur Austin.

Granger completed 13 of 23 passes for 211 yards and touchdowns of 39and 73 yards and rushed 51 yards on 11 carries and scored on runs of 11, 9 and 2 yards.

In other outstanding performances:

—Rising Star's Derrick White rushed 45 times for 356 yards and touchdowns of 1, 9, 1, 4, and 8 yards in a 49-0 victory over Lometa.

—A&M Consolidated junior Cliff Groce gained 260 yards on 24 carries and scored on runs of 6, 7 and 86 yards in a 35-0 victory over Brenham.

—Patrick Williams returned a kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and rushed 161 yards on 16 carries and touchdowns of 11 and 38 yards in a 33-0 victory over Iola.

—Big Spring's Rance Thompson, completed 10 of 15 passes for 254 yards and four touchdowns in a 50-14 victory over San Angelo Lake View.

—Mike Smith had an outstanding dual performance for Tulia. He rushed 118 yards on 16 carries and scored three touchdowns and added 14 tackles and an interception in a 41-29 victory over Friona.

—Freer's Mario Moreno rushed 212 yards on 18 carries and scored on runs of 12, 5 and 69 yards and caught a 52-yard touchdown pass in a 56-22 victory over Falfurrias.

—San Diego quarterback Michael Gonzalez completed 8 of 15 passes for 203 yards and touchdowns of 22, 27, 25 and 4 yards in a 36-6 victory over Premont.

Inside Sports

Tyson bout postponed

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Mike Tyson's Nov. 18 heavyweight title defense against Razor Ruddock has been postponed indefinitely after doctors found that the champion had come down with a suspected virus.

A painful inflammation of Tyson's rib cage felled the undisputed heavyweight king, who may have picked it up as he conducted roadwork in pre-dawn temperatures that sometimes dipped below freezing.

Promoter Garry Stevenson said during a news conference on Wednesday that he was confident the fight can be held, perhaps in January. For now, Tyson will return to Las Vegas for a few weeks and likely won't be able to resume training for a couple months.

More woes for Pokes

CARTHAGE (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson and owner Jerry Jones aren't having a good year. The team is 0-7; Herschel Walker's defected; star quarterback Troy Aikman has suffered a hand injury.

Now comes a Texas attorney who's threatening to sue because Jones hasn't turned the team around as he promised.

Attorney Robert Goodwin of Center is demanding refunds for disgruntled fans or he may go to court under the state's deceptive trade act.

The Cowboys are off to their worst start since they became a franchise in 1960. They were 3-13 last year, before Jones bought the team and promised they'd be competitive, if not Super Bowl contenders, before too long.

Well, they've failed, Goodwin says, and fans deserve their money back.

Ex-player slain

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Steve Moore, a former starting offensive lineman for the New England Patriots, was shot and killed after apparently being robbed outside a convenience store, police said.

Moore, 29, a tackle for the Patriots from 1983 through 1987, purchased several items at the store Wednesday night and then was shot outside as he returned to his car, Lt. Hank Arnold said.

The store clerk heard what he thought was a car backfiring, Arnold said.

Moore came back into the store and told the clerk he'd been robbed and shot, Arnold said.

"I'm dying," the clerk quoted him as saying.

Moore died at the Regional Medical Center at 10:09 p.m. EDT, an hour after the shooting.

There were no witnesses and police have no suspects, Arnold said.

Moore, a right tackle, was a starter on the Patriots' Super Bowl team that lost to the Chicago Bears 46-10 in Super Bowl XX in 1986.

He was a starter during the 1985 and 1986 seasons, but suffered an ankle injury and missed much of the 1987 season.

Moore was living in Memphis, where he had graduated from Fairley High School. He played at Tennessee State University in Nashville and was a third-round draft choice.

His sister, Monice Regina Hagler, said Moore moved back to Memphis three weeks ago. She said he was in the area of the store visiting his girlfriend, who lives nearby.

Teams try different approaches

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Oakland A's are going back to spring-training basics. The San Francisco Giants are going back to having fun.

A day before the World Series resumes, which way will win?

"The hardest thing is to sit down and figure out what's best to get your players ready to play," Giants manager Roger Craig said Wednesday. "I think every manager has to do what he thinks is right. The Athletics did what they thought was best and we're doing the same."

The Athletics, afraid of bad weather that never came, went to their spring training site in Phoenix. Under hazy skies that turned sunny, they played a simulated game and today planned to play against their instructional league team in Arizona.

"I'm not worried about motivation. This is the World Series. This is what you come to spring training thinking about," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "We're here to work."

The Athletics weren't totally serious, but they were all business. They lead the series 2-0 and plan to keep going Friday evening in Game 3.

The Giants seemed to do as much joking as hitting, pitching and fielding at their practice at sunny Candlestick Park.

"Like a bunch of kids on a sandlot. That's the kind of atmosphere I want, having fun," Craig said. "If they're mentally ready to play, the physical aspect will be there. If their hearts aren't in it, it won't matter."

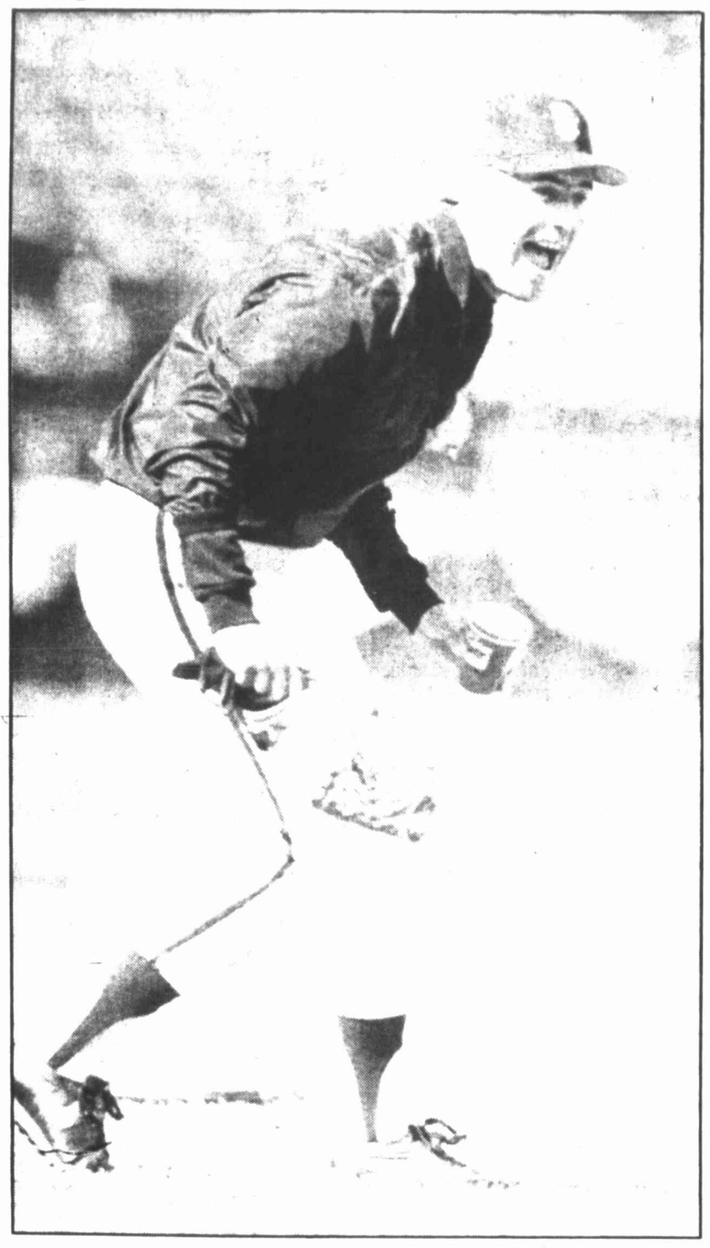

The weather is expected to be fine for Friday. The teams are just hoping everything else is OK.

For the second straight day, an aftershock bounced the Bay area. On Tuesday, it came shortly after 6 p.m., which would've been around the second inning if the World Series had resumed on the day baseball had originally hoped.

On Wednesday, the stadium slightly shook around 3 p.m. The Giants had left by the time that happened.

While the teams worked out, the Athletics tried to work out a compromise with the Rolling Stones. The two sides met Wednesday, but no resolution was announced.

The Rolling Stones are scheduled to play at the Oakland Coliseum on Nov. 4-5, and their contract allows them to move into the stadium five days beforehand to set up. If the Giants can force the series back to Oakland, there would be a conflict for Games 6 and 7 on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco Giants first baseman Will Clark pretends to throw a glass of water at a teammate during a practice session at Candlestick Park Tuesday. The third game of the World Series is set for Friday.

Candlestick Park, meanwhile, is ready. As the Giants practiced, maintenance crews cleaned the stadium of cups and hot dog wrappers left from Oct. 17, when the earthquake struck.

Once the 'Stick and Stones are set, all that remains is baseball.

The Giants planned an easy practice today.

"No simulated games. No intrasquad games. We tried that the first few days and some of the players were bitching, throwing bats," Craig said. "With the earthquake, they had other things on their minds and didn't want to being doing that.

"They didn't really enjoy it. You can't force them to do things they don't want to do," he said. "Today, they were having fun and got something out of it."

First baseman Will Clark saw some benefits.

"We were loosey-goosey today," he said. "Maybe that's a sign we're relaxed. But we still have a big job ahead."

Outfielder Kevin Mitchell said he has plenty of work to do, too.

"I'm not comfortable. I'm trying to find my swing," said Mitchell, the only Giants player with three hits in the series. "I think my body is trying to tell me I should be home by now. We're not used to playing this late."

The Athletics seem to be spending a lot more time on work than on play. Their practice sessions are more intense than Giants, but who knows whether that's good or bad. On Wednesday, catcher Ron Hassey was hit by a foul tip and left in the last inning of a simulated game.

"It's not perfect, but we're playing for the big prize," La Russa said. "We couldn't guarantee the weather was going to be good, so we came here. If it was going to be like it was today in the Bay area, it would've been easier to stay."

Craig said he spoke Tuesday with his good friend Don Zimmer, manager of the Chicago Cubs, the team San Francisco beat in the National League playoffs.

"I asked him how do you motivate a team in a position like this and he said, 'I don't know, but if anyone can, you can,'" Craig said. "That made me feel real good. I just hope he's right."

The NBA goes Italian

ROME (AP) — Brian Shaw took an outlet pass on the run from Danny Ferry, beat Mike D'Antoni with a stutter-step move and sailed past Bob McAdoo for a slam dunk.

The sellout crowd of 13,000 at the Palaeur arena erupted, breaking into a chant of "Forza Roma!" — Go Rome! — and setting off smoke bombs in the red and white colors of the team.

From Rome to Tel Aviv, NBA-style basketball has arrived overseas with a bang.

As a growing number of sought-after American stars opt to play abroad, basketball is even beginning to challenge the supremacy of soccer.

"The world of basketball has grown much closer," NBA Commissioner David Stern said during the McDonald's Open international tournament in Rome last weekend.

The center of the new basketball fever is Italy, where teams are laying out millions of dollars in a bidding war with the NBA. Once derisively known as the "Spaghetti League," the Italian divisions now include a crop of Americans who could make up a decent NBA team.

Former NBA players have been coming here for years, but the arrival this fall of Ferry and Shaw really put Italy on the basketball map.

Ferry, the Duke All-America and the second player chosen in last June's NBA draft, and Shaw, a starting guard for the Boston Celtics as a rookie last season, were the first big-name Americans to choose Italy in the prime of their careers.

It wasn't the pasta or the monuments that convinced them to join Il Messaggero Roma. It was the $1 million to $2 million a year offered by Raul Gardini, whose giant agribusiness conglomerate, Gruppo Ferruzzi, owns the club.

Those figures have not gone unnoticed by other players in the United States, who see Italy as a lucrative option and a bargaining chip with the NBA.

Center Benoit Benjamin flew to Italy last week ostensibly to sign with Philips Milan only to return to Los Angeles three days later in what was widely regarded as a ploy to get more money from the Clippers. Then Rick Mahorn, in a contract dispute with the Minnesota Timberwolves, traveled to Italy to negotiate with Glaxo Verona.

Veteran NBA stars Alex English and Walter Davis of the Denver Nuggets, who beat Jugoplastika Split for the championship of the McDonald's Open, said they would seriously consider playing in Italy.

"I want to come over here and play a couple of years," said the 35-year-old English. "I could really enjoy it."

Under Italian rules, a team can carry two foreigners on its roster. There are currently 28 Americans playing in Italy's premier 16-team A-1 division and another 26 in A-2.

Aside from Ferry and Shaw, the top U.S. stars in A-1 include McAdoo, the 38-year-old former three-time NBA scoring cham-

Tagliabue new NFL commissioner

By The Associated Press

It became a regular routine the past few years.

Everytime a sticky problem faced the NFL, Pete Rozelle summoned his top aides to discuss a solution. After everyone was heard, Rozelle asked one more question:

"What does Paul think?"

Paul, in this case is Paul Tagliabue, the self-effacing, low-profile lawyer who was selected Thursday to succeed Rozelle.

PAUL TAGLIABUE

It's ironic in a way that the 6-foot-5 inch former Georgetown basketball player, who from 1960 to 1962 wore the same "33" later worn by Patrick Ewing, emerged as the candidate of the dissident owners who in July blocked the election of Jim Finks, the president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints.

For the 48-year-old Tagliabue, a partner in the prestigious Washington law firm of Covington & Burling, has been a quiet but powerful NFL insider for 20 years — a voice that counts in the league office and a man whose role in the past few years has expanded beyond legal counsel to all-around advisor.

Finks, by contrast, has been a team executive, a breed sometimes given to complaint about high handedness emanating from the New York headquarters.

But, Tagliabue is hardly high-handed.

On the surface, he is quietly self-effacing; friendly, but reserved, a man whose athletic prowess was demonstrated primarily on the tennis court — against Finks, among others.

In fact, he never knew he was the seventh-leading rebounder in Georgetown history until he went to a game a few years ago with his son, Drew, who thumbed through the program, then turned to his father and asked: "Hey dad, did you know your name's in here?"

He also has a sense of humor, one that emerged after he met with the owners at a meeting in Grapevine, Texas, where they were trying to resolve the deadlock over who should be the new commissioner.

"I didn't promise them 'a chicken in every pot,'" he said later. "Read my lips, 'No Free Agency.' Read my lips 'more television money.' I'm not George Bush running for an office."

But, most often, he is cautious, lawyerly.

"He's very controlled, very logical," said Michael Chernoff, general counsel for the Indianapolis Colts. "But he's not just a pin-striped suit. I've seen him in docksiders with no socks."

Still, Tagliabue is hardly a preppie.

He grew up in Jersey City, N.J., and attended St. Michael's High School in blue collar Union City, where his basketball prowess earned him a scholarship to Georgetown, a school he otherwise could not have afforded to attend.

He averaged nine rebounds a game from 1960 to 1962, just two-tenths less than Ewing averaged 20 years later.

"We weren't as bad as everyone remembers," Tagliabue once said of those days in the pre-John Thompson era. "We would have gone to the NIT my senior year if we hand't had a couple of guys hurt and lost our last few games."

But basketball went out of Tagliabue's life quickly although sports didn't.

After college, he attended New York University Law School, where his roommate was Lamar Alexander, a future governor of Tennessee and he served as editor of the law review.

After graduation in 1965, he returned to Washington to serve as a clerk to Judge Oscar H. Davis in the U.S. Claims Court, then joined the Defense Department's internal security division.

In 1969, he joined Covington & Burling, one of the capital's "power" firms and almost immediately gravitated to the NFL account. After becoming a partner, he took over management of the league's Washington affairs.

It turned out to be a stepping stone to his election by bringing him into contact with just about all of the NFL's 28 owners.

"It's a very political position," Gary Roberts, a Tulane University law professor who worked with Tagliabue at the firm, said of Tagliabue's job. "The NFL is a difficult client because every owner wants to see the top dog on every little problem."

But Tagliabue has worked with more than every little problem for the NFL.

In the past decade, has was involved in all the major litigation that has plagued the league — the seemingly endless round of lawsuits that Rozelle cited as one reason for his premature retirement.

Steers

tight end Joe Downey snagged five receptions for 77 yards. Eight Steer runners carried the ball.

"The Mayfield kid looks looks a great athlete," said Whitehurst. "We're going to have to stop him. But they've got more weapons than him. They've got several fine runners, and the quarterback does a good job of running the offense."

Defensively Pecos is allowing 270 yards per game — 170 on the ground and 100 in the air. Pecos' leading defenders this season have been end Roger Salinas, and free safety Cruz Ablo.

Big Spring has the third leading defense in the district behind Snyder and Sweetwater. The Steers are allowing 233 yards per game — 133 on the ground, 100 in the air.

Last week middle linebacker Felipe Saiz let the team with 16 tackles. Tackle Pat Wilbert made 10 tackles, outside linebackers Kevin Rodgers and Jermaine Miller made 8 and 7 tackles respectively.

Coach Whitehurt says the game should be fun for offensive-minded fans. "I think there will be some points put on the scoreboard," he said. "Our defense has been kind of hot and cold, not as consistent as we would've have liked. Our offense has been pretty consistent. We're going to have to put some points on the board, because I don't think we can keep them from scoring."

Netters

Ragsdale and Paige Griffin.

The group had a bit of hard luck when third seed Moore twisted an ankle early last week. Coach Lawrence said she played some on the ankle this week, but it is still very tender. He added that if Moore can't go, Ragsdale will take her place.

"We've got some depth so we'll be all right," said coach Lawrence. He added, "the boys have played real well this year, they've got experience. The girls have taken it on the chin, but they've found out they can compete, and that's to our advantage."

Joining Big Spring and Lake View at the regional meet will be Hereford, Pampa, Brownwood, Granbury, Burkburnett, Cleburne, Waco Midway, Taylor, Fort Worth Brewer and Everman.

The playing sites will be at Coronado and Monterey tennis courts, the Tennis Center and the Tennis Center Annex, said Lawrence.

Coaches will get together Thursday night to figure the seedings. All the records and opponents will be taken into consideration, and four teams will receive byes.

Lawrence said that Waco Midway, Hereford and Brownwood have good chances of getting byes, simply because they competed in the tournament last year.

"Getting a bye can have both its good and bad points," Lawrence said. "It could be good from the standpoint that you will be fresh, but it can be bad because can't get rid of the jitters if you don't play."

Only the winner from the tournament will advance to the state tournament in Austin.

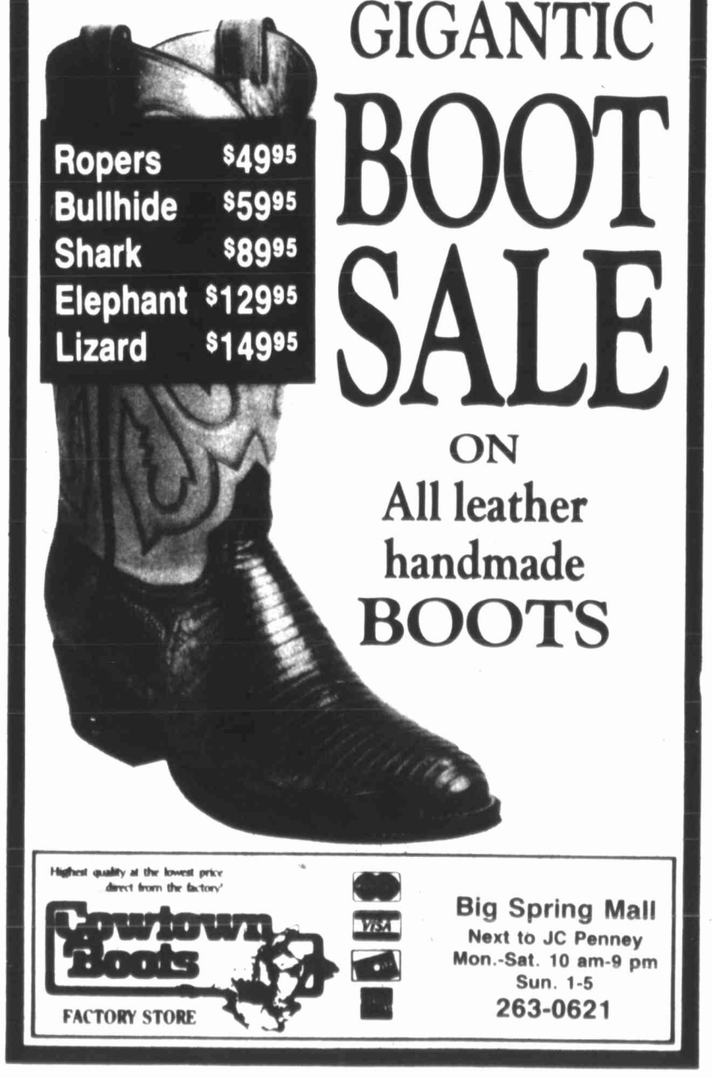

Lawrence feels good about his team's chances.

"It's like any other tournament — the draw is everything," he said. "If the kids have got it in their heads that they'll play good, then they'll probably play good.

"All year long we've come through, and the best thing about it is that it hasn't been the same people. Everybody wants to be that one that comes through, they don't want somebody else to do it for them.

"We want to get to the state tournament, we want to win. If you're not trying to win, why keep score? I want the kids to go out and play well give their best effort. We're tough enough mentally to get to the championship."

Action begins Friday at 10 a.m. If Big Spring wins its first round match, Lawrence said it will play again that afternoon.

pion who averages nearly 30 points per game for defending league champion Philips Milan; guard Micheal Ray Richardson, who was suspended from the NBA for drug use but has blossomed as an all-around player for Knorr Bologna; high-scoring forward Dan Caldwell of Viola Reggio Calabria; and Darwin Cook and Darren Daye of Scavolini Pesaro, the league's best backcourt tandem.

Former NBA players Darryl Dawkins, Mike Mitchell, Rafael Addison, Terry Tyler and Jeff Lamp are among the American stars in A-2.

The U.S. invasion is not limited to Italy. Americans are playing in Spain, Israel, France, Portugal and Greece, although both the pay and the quality of play are inferior.

The 24-team Spanish league, which also has a limit of two foreigners per club, is generally considered the second best in Europe behind Italy. Its ranks include former NBA players Audie Norris and Paul Thompson of Barcelona, Rickey Brown of Caja de Ronda and Larry Micheaux of Taugres of Vitoria. Former NBA coach George Karl is coaching Real Madrid.

Basketball has threatened to bump soccer as the No. 1 sport in Israel, where Maccabi-Tel Aviv has been the leading team for two decades, winning two European championships. The heavy reliance on U.S. imports has led to scandals involving Americans getting quickie marriages or hasty conversions to Judaism.

In Rome, Ferry and Shaw became instant celebrities but they have not been able to turn Messaggero into the instant winner that many fans envisioned. After an opening game victory, the team lost four straight regular season contests.

While no one is yet questioning their talent, there have been rumblings in Italy that the 6-foot-10 Ferry is not getting enough rebounds and that Shaw doesn't fit the playmaker role designed for him.

Both say they are still trying to adapt to the different style of play.

"We have to adjust to the rule changes, the different style of players," Ferry said. "There's not as much one-on-one play over here. The emphasis is more on passing. The Italians don't have Michael Jordan types. But they're very fundamentally sound. They're very good shooters."

Off the court, Ferry and Shaw are trying to learn Italian and cope with the death-defying Rome traffic.

"Language has been the biggest barrier," Ferry said. "But I'm learning how to order dinner pretty quickly. I love pasta. I have it every meal. I had to slow down after the first two weeks. The people here eat so much, but they stay so thin. I can't figure it out."

How long Ferry and Shaw will remain in Italy is anybody's guess. Ferry has a one-year contract with an option to extend, while Shaw has a two-year deal. Some expect Ferry to return to the NBA if he can get to the Washington Bullets, whose general manager is Danny's father, Bob Ferry.

But the impact of their move to Italy could be long lasting.

"I think in the future with teams owned by big companies like Ferruzzi and making attractive offers, it will be acceptable for top players to come to Italy," Ferry said. "We might have opened the door a little bit. It will take some more players to push it open completely."

Not all Italian clubs, however, have the money that Messaggero has to spend.

"In one sense, the NBA can rest easy," said Dan Peterson, an American who coached in Italy for 14 years and is now a popular sports broadcaster. "Not a lot of teams are going to compete for players like Ferry and Shaw. In the end, the NBA can't lose. It's still the best league with the most money."

While Italy has raided the United States for talent, the NBA has lured top players from Europe, including two Soviets and three Yugoslavs who joined the league this year.

"I think we will see an increase of players going to different countries as the world of basketball gets smaller," Stern said. "I don't see it as a drain on one particular country. It will be good for international basketball. It reflects what is happening in all sports and all avenues of life."

While Stern said the NBA has no current plans to put teams in Europe, the idea is gaining increasing support among people inside and outside the league.

"I think it would be terrific," Nuggets' coach Doug Moe said. "I think it's probably inevitable."

Coach John Thompson of Georgetown, who came to watch Messaggero's first home game, is convinced.

"With Danny and Brian coming over here, the distance between the two continents is becoming closer," he said. "I can see it (expansion) happening. All the signs are there. From college to the pro level, it's something you can't hold back. It's inevitable, it's going to happen. And anybody who's anybody in this business owes it to themselves to come over here to find out what's going on."

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Having Ruth Westheimer address an education conference on sex is like inviting Timothy Leary to speak on drugs, a state senator says.

Republican state Sen. James Donovan said Wednesday he's boycotting the annual conference of the state School Boards Association because the noted sex therapist is speaking there.

"I think her whole message is one that's immoral," the Utica legislator said. "There's no promotion of high moral standards. It's 'whatever feels good, do it,' notwithstanding your parents' instruction or generally how you feel about sex outside of marriage."

WESTHEIMER? KASHOGGI

Westheimer laughed when reached at her New York City office for a reaction to Donovan's statements.

"If issues of sexuality enter politics, that would make me very sad," Westheimer said. "I'm not a politician and I'm not a theologian. I don't judge other people's morals. What I am is an educator."

NEW YORK (AP) — Indicted Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi won a brief reprieve from his court-ordered confinement to his Manhattan penthouse, gaining a judge's permission to spend two weeks in Southern California.

Khashoggi's trip, scheduled to begin Friday, is an exception to travel restrictions attached to his release on $10 million bail while he awaits a March trial on charges he helped Imelda and Ferdinand Marcos defraud the Philippine treasury.

While in California, Khashoggi's movements will continue to be monitored.

Martin blood donations hit new record

"Several wives were anxious to have their husband's hearing tested. They wanted to know if they were just tuning them out or if there was really a problem." — Kathryn Burch, county extension agent

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — A donation record of 132 pints of bloods was reached at the Martin County Health Fair Oct. 21, the county extension office reported.

A total of 175 people attended the fair, which was crowded with exhibits, demonstrations and health tests.

"Blood donations hit a new high for the county," County Extension Agent Kathryn Burch said. "The public is to be commended for their outstanding support with 75 pints collected and 57 donor cards filled out at the health fair.

"That puts us well over our goal of 100 pints of blood for the year."

Personel from Martin County Hospital conducted the blood drive. It was organized by Janice Bundas, a receptionist at the hospital.

Also conducted at the fair were tests for hearing, cholesteral and glucose levels and for blood pressure.

Fifty people had their hearing tested by Orland Purcell, M.S., of Audio Acoustics in Midland and 73 had their cholesteral and glucose levels checked by members of the county hospital staff. No results were available on the blood pressure tests which were given by county emergency medical service technicians.

The hearing tests made a difference for at least one person, Burch said.

"I heard one mother exclaiming, 'I can't believe she can't hear one thing out of her left ear!' " Burch said. " With this information help is now on it's way for this child."

The hearing tests also helped soothe some suspicions, Burch said.

"Several wives were anxious to have their husband's hearing tested," she said. "They wanted to know if they were just tuning them out or if there was really a problem."

Of the people tested for cholesterol, 62 percent had readings over 200, reports showed.

"Readings over 200 are generally at risk," Burch's secretary said.

In addition to those tests, 23 mammogram tests were scheduled at the county hospital during the fair. And a third grade 4-H project measured people's heights and weights.

Other tests at the fair included a Stanton fifth grade class's computer program to detect the nutritional information of a person's daily diet and a Grady fifth grade 4-H project which analyzed diets using grocery store receipts.

Mark Hoelscher, manager of the Martin County Underground Water Conservation District, ran tests on water and the Stanton Future Homemakers did taste tests for caffeine in different teas.

Exhibits at the fair were on subjects ranging from teen pregnancy, drug prevention, cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and other emergency techniques, to an eye bank, a machine for checking the amount of oxygen going into the lungs, different kinds of milk, fats and unsaturated oils, and nutritional contents of breakfast cereals.

"The fair was definitely a success," Burch said. "Thanks to the 85 volunteers that made this fair possible. We're planning a bigger fair for next year."

The fair was organized by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service with assistance from the county hospital, she said.

Red Ribbon Week

Martin County kicked off its observance of "Red Ribbon Week" this past Saturday. The local tie-in with the national effort on the "My Choice — Drug Free" campaign involved a number of activities.

On Saturday two sororities participated in Red Ribbon activities at the local health fair. Xi Theta Nu manned a booth with the state winning videos from Stanton Elementary's entries in the Texan's War on Drug contests and other Red Ribbon material. Rho Xi sponsored the Red Ribbon Walk.

At noon Sunday members of the LUMC Children Department released red balloons with messages tied to them Sunday afternoon, members of the First United Methodist Youth Group posted red bows in the area of the local schools.

On Monday, all students received red ribbons with the logo "My Choice — Drug Free". The Stanton Evening Lions supplied over 1200 of the ribbons.

On Tuesday the Stanton Elementary School had a special assembly with the presentation of awards in the coloring and poster contests and a release of red balloons. Stanton Junior High also had an assembly program and recognized winners of their essay contest.

Stanton High School had a full week of activities. FFA and FHA members distributed the red ribbons to all classmates on Monday. The Health Class and the Home and Family Living Class were having special presentation during the week. On Thursday the Fellowship of Christian Athletes will present a film, "Athletes and Drugs", to a school assembly.

Lions hear Noyles

STANTON — Noon Lion Club was honored in having District Governor Bob Noyles as a guest and speaker for their Oct. 17 meeting.

He spoke of his objectives for the following year including the organization of Leo Clubs, with emphasis on high school students. He stressed Lions motto, "we serve".

Lions Clubs are international, Noyles said. Last year they participated in over 500,000 projects and spent over $250,000 in their communities. International Lions spent over 3½ million last year on humanitarian and disaster relief projects.

Two annual projects for area Lions are the summer camp for handicapped children and a camp for children with diabetes.

This year the Lions are very active against "Fight Against Drugs."

County, city eye landfill meeting

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — The Martin County Commissioners Court and the Stanton City Council will begin having joint meetings, probably once a month, to try and find a solution to the city/county landfill problem.

A meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 30 in the courthouse.

The two governmental bodies will decide on the procedures involved in closing the old landfill before new Environmental Protection Agency regulations go into effect.

The decision to hold joint meetings was made at a commissioners meeting Monday which Coucilman Gene Wheeler attended.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Donald L. Tollison originally suggested that a committee be formed from the city council and the commissioners court in order to begin working on the landfill problems as soon as possible.

"When are we going to get together and form a committee to get this thing going?" he asked Wheeler. "Commissioners court and city council should be involved in everything (together right from the start)," he said.

"I think we all ought to meet once a month until this thing is done," Wheeler replied.

County Judge Bob Deavenport then recommended that the first meeting be next Monday at the courthouse.

"If you don't mind, why don't we meet in here," he said. "We have to be in here in order to make any official decisions."

Wheeler suggested, "We can meet over here once a month and

Full house at jail

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Three people slept on mattresses laid on the floor of the Martin County Jail this weekend because of overcrowding.

Sheriff Dan Saunders said 18 people were packed into the 15-bunk jailhouse following four driving while intoxicated arrests and four arrests for public intoxication this weekend. Seven of those arrested have since been released, the county judge reported.

A clerk in the sheriff's department said that the four PI arrests were made Friday night. Two of the DWIs were made Saturday night and the other two were Sunday night.

"We handle a lot of DWIs because we're on the interstate," Saunders said Monday. "This morning we had four to take before the judge."

"We've already got it reduced now," County Judge Bob Deavenport said of the jail population. "It was a fluke situation where we had people waiting to go to TDC (Texas Department of Corrections) and an unusual amount of DWI arrests.

"The PIs that were arrested have already paid their fines. Three of the DWIs have pleaded out (guilty).

"One more will plead out today. What it was, we just couldn't get all the papers processed yesterday."

However, he said, the present prisoner population is still heavy.

"We've got people that haven't bonded out from the drug (roundup which began Oct. 6)," he said.

Saunders said three of the 12 people arrested in the roundup are still in jail, two for the sale of heroin

Special days highlight Grady homecoming

By HEATHER MADISON
Grady Correspondent

During the school week of Oct. 16-20 students at Grady High School prepared for Friday night's homecoming football game against Loop.

The Student Council prepared many different activities for the students to participate in.

Monday was Freshman Day. The "fish" tried their hardest to dodge upper classmen as they were told to carry books, carry lunch trays, feed them, and sing a solo of the school song.

Role Reversal Day was held Tuesday. Everyone caught a glimpse of what Grady guys would look like in miniskirts, make-up, and pantyhose. While Grady girls sported the best of dad's and boyfriends clothes.

Wednesday was Nerds Day and '50's Day. Students wore poodle skirts, bobby socks, letterman jackets, slicked back hair, plaid pants, and pocket protectors.

Career Day was held Thursday as the students acted out future jobs or just a pretend job. There was everything from lawyers to nurses, to a referee.

Friday was Senior Slave Day. During the week the students and teachers other than seniors bidded on the seniors. Friday the seniors were dressed however their owners chose and they obeyed their owners every command.

Brenna Hale Beasley, a 1984 graduate of Grady, was chosen as Coming Home Queen at Grady. Pictured above are Brenna and her escort, husband Randy Beasley of Stanton.

Thursday night Grady held their first fall open house. The school was open for parents, students, and community members to observe and talk with school personnel.

council and high school cheerleaders presented the 1989 homecoming pep rally. Beginning at 8:15 p.m. the pep rally was held in the gymnasium. The gymnasium was beautifully decorated in black, gold and silver metallic streamers. Balloons hung from the ceilings and railing in gold, black, and white. "Make a little noise" was the theme for the pep rally. Everyone was asked to bring their noisemakers for the event.

The Jr. High cheerleaders also joined the high school cheerleaders in performing chants, cheers, and a few fabulous stunts. During the pep rally principal, Mr. Richard Gibson presented the 1988-89 U.I.L. contestants that competed for Grady. Also during the week each high school class built a float from a little red wagon and presented their float in the little red wagon parade. The winning class was to be presented $50 from the student council.

At the end of the pep rally the high school football team joined the cheerleaders in the singing of the school song. Then the traditional snake dance led everyone to the bonfire. The students worked hard all week to gather wood, but soon it was all up in flames.

Grady School would like to ask anyone who is interested in helping in the V.I.P.S. (Volunteers in Public Service) program to be formed at Grady School, please contact the principal's office by calling 459-2445 or 459-2449. Your help and support would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

The Grady Jr. High cheerleaders and spirit club will be hosting a "Coke and Cookie Party" on Thursday, Oct. 26 in the Grady School Cafeteria. The party is held to honor the Jr. High Wildcat football team.

On Tuesday, Oct. 31, Halloween night, Grady will be holding their annual Halloween carnival. The carnival will be held from 6 - 9 p.m. in the old gymnasium. Jail and one for the sale of marijuana.

The roundup was conducted following a six-month investigation by the Stanton Police Department and the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

The other 10 people are in jail on charges ranging from burglary and theft to forgery, Saunders said. Two are women, including one for a parole revocation for possession of cocaine.

Two of those are awaiting transfer to Huntsville, including the woman being held for a parole revocation, he said. She has been in the Martin County Jail a week.

The other prisoner awaiting transfer is convicted of theft and has been held at the jail for four weeks, he said.

Asked if any action needed to be taken to alleviate jail overcrowding, Saunders said, "No, not at this time. If I get in a bind, I'll call on my good friend (Howard County Sheriff) A.N. Standard."

He said an overcrowding situation has happened only once before.

"One time two years ago we got overcrowded and we had to take two to Big Spring," he said. "Ordinarily we have a 4-½ daily average year round," he said of the county's normal prisoner population. "But on weekends we get up to 12-13.

"Sometimes we have long-term prisoners here. I can remember on three occassions we kept prisoners in the county jail for two years."

He said the most recent long-term prisoner was transferred to Huntsville Oct. 19. He had been imprisoned at the county jail for about one and one-half years.

Landfill

over there (at city hall) once a month."

Wheeler and county officials also expressed concern about closing the current landfill within the 18-month deadline which begins when the new EPA regulations go into effect.

If the landfill is closed after that deadline, it will have to be monitored for pollution for a 30-year period as opposed to five years under the current rules.

"We need to get that done a year from now, not 18 months," Wheeler said. "If we get it inspected and there's something they (Texas Department of Health) don't like about it, we'll need another month or two to straighten it out. We need to get this thing started."

Another problem in closing the landfill, he pointed out, is that new facilities must first be procured. An option that would allow more time would be to operate a trench in a new landfill under the current EPA regulations until the rest of the landfill can be constructed according to the new specifications, he said.

"A trench can be closed in the new landfill as part of the older landfill," he explained to commissioners. "Another option is to take trash to Midland," he said.

"It would cost more to take it to Midland than to handle it here," said City Manager Jimmy Mathis after the Monday meeting. "It would double your contract right there because you had to carry so far."

At the meeting Tollison spoke of a need to get organized.

"Right now there's not a great deal of organization," he said. "We know that. We can do better than that."

Airshow plans finalized

BIG SPRING — Plans for the Oct. 28-29 Vietnam Memorial Airshow are being finalized, and organizers hope to clear enough money to build a proposed Vietnam veterans memorial.

The 1989 airshow, the second held by the Vietnam Memorial Committee, will feature at least seven aerial acts, as well displayed aircraft, a NASA space exhibit, a U.S. Border Patrol display, and a display of National Guard equipment.

The show also includes a performance by radio-controlled model airplanes and displays by the Antique Car Club and the Big Spring Rod and Custom club.

Charlie Lewis, memorial committee member, said the airshow attractions will begin early this week with visits by the NASA Aero Van and will conclude Sunday with the final aerial performance.

Saturday and Sunday's show will be different," Lewis said. "We have six paid performers and one military performant," and Sunday's show will feature more military performances.

The show's guest of honor is Wilson Connell "Connie" Edwards, a West Texas airplane enthusiast.

The special guests of honor are the Gold Star Mothers, a group who lost sons or daughters during active duty in the Vietnam and Korean wars.

The show's final special guest of honor is Congressional Medal of Honor recipient Sandy Davis of Illinois.

Although the aerial performances will begin at noon on both days, the gates will open at 9 a.m. for viewing aircraft, he said.

"There'll be approximately 10 helicopters, other military fixed-wing aircraft and civilian aircraft."

The NASA Aero Van and Space Exhibit will be on display in hanger 1161 on the west side of the airpark beginning Tuesday. The displays are free to the public and open for viewing from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day.

DRUGS: THE UNFIT FRIEND

By Marla Keele

As many Americans across the United States sit in their homes not knowing about our terrible drug problem, there are many children, teenagers and parents selling these terrible little pick-me-ups. Most are not aware of what it can do; death, miscarriage, diseases and illness across the country. So, parents and teenagers, stay away from this unfit friend.

DRUG FREE — MY CHOICE

By Stacy Rivas

Drug free is my choice because it helps me excel in many things. Also, by being drug free I am helping my nation in the war against drugs. It is not cool to do drugs. It is cool to be drug free. I will never let anyone convince me to do drugs. If we all join together we can win this war. All we have to remember is to just say NO! It is that simple.

"DRUG FREE"

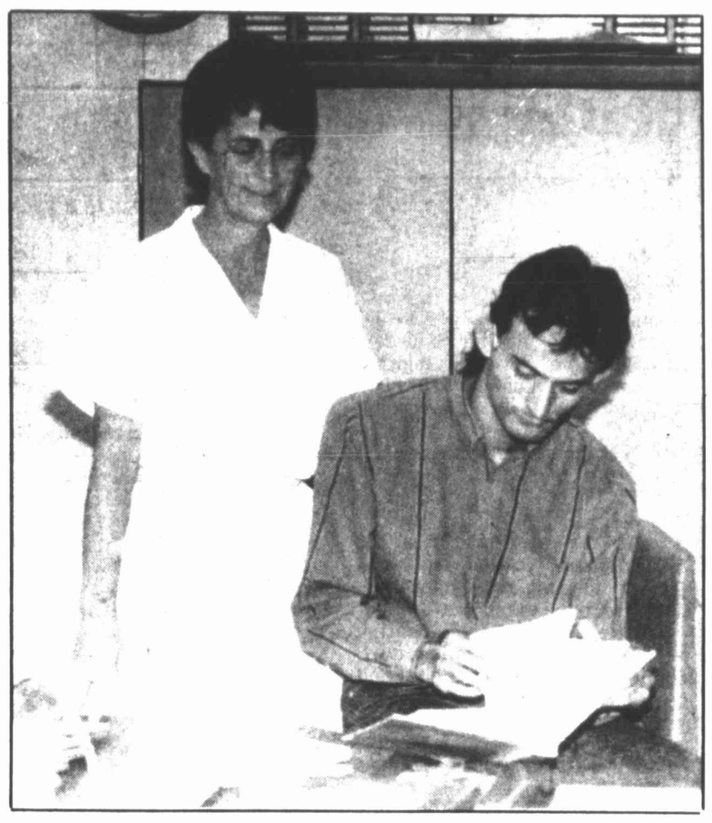

By Courtney Epley

My opinion on doing drugs is not to do them. Drugs can be — are very deadly. What's the point in feeling good for one minute and then dying. I also think people that deal drugs are dumb. Just to make a little money, you're messing up other people's lives. If anyone ever asks if you want drugs, please say NO!

DRUG FREE AND HAPPY

By Jennifer Rogers

Being drug free is my choice, and I choose to be drug free. If all the people in the world would fight to be drug free, we might not have any more drugs. I don't think people should take drugs because they mess your mind up. Everybody has a good mind to start with, but when they take drugs it makes their brain cells die. I do not understand why people take drugs if it kills them. It's just like committing suicide. If we keep up our hard work, we just might have a drug free population.

Depot news

By SALLY CARROL
Senior Citizens Center Director

Lillian Bevers and Leona Thomas went to Robert Lee October 14th to Mrs. Thomas' daughters house for a reunion and to celebrate Mrs. Thomas' birthday.

Leona Hightower is back after visiting several family members across the state. Her first stop was in Houston to visit some of her children and then she went on to the Galveston area to visit her brothers and sisters. Mrs. Hightower said they caught a lot of fish and had a good time. Her last stop before coming home was in Dallas to visit some more of her children. She was gone about a month and we are glad to have her back.

Ola Mae Maxwell, our most frequent traveler lately, is back after taking a trip to the Austin area with her daughter and son-in-law. They went to visit Ola Mae's grandson, Ronnie Dickenson. He will be teaching school there this year.

We had our annual Outreach Supper on Tuesday, Oct. 17 at the Community Center. We had a delicious meal of turkey and dressing with all the trimmings. We had some wonderful volunteers to make the dressing and everyone brought a dish. Margie Sims, Lorena Polk, Fay Rhodes and Erlene Saunders worked very hard getting the dressing all together. Dorothy Miller and Leona Hightower decorated the tables and Debbie Smith was a great help in getting prizes for our bingo game. All of the Stanton businesses were very generous in donating prizes for us. We really appreciate all the help we got. Our supper couldn't have been a success without our dedicated volunteers. We had about 60 people attend the supper and I hope some of those people will start coming to our center on a regular basis.

We need to retract a statement that was in the Depot News column. There was a mistake made in that, Buster Haggard accepted to play for a Senior Citizens Outreach meal, as entertainment during the meal. He didn't agree however to play for a dance that was not his intentions.

He only agreed to play during the meal.

We wanted everyone to understand this.

Our next event will be our Halloween party on Halloween night. We will all dress up and have a costume contest. We also hope to have some trick or treaters come by for some treats. Please come join us for a howling good time Tuesday night at 6:00.

Our activities for next week are: Monday-exercise 10:00 quilting 1:00.

Tuesday-singing-10:30 Halloween party-6:00.

Wednesday-exercise-10:00.

Thursday-Band-10:30, game night-6:00

Friday-exercise 10:00.

Skool daze

By PAM CANNON
School Correspondent

The holiday season will soon be upon us. Where did the time go? Soon, we will be searching our favorite grocery store for all the goodies needed to feed incoming relatives.

Well, the FFA has made it a little easier for us this year. Their annual fruit and turkey sale is going on now. Turkeys can be ordered for either Thanksgiving or Christmas. The fruit will be in shortly after Thanksgiving. The turkeys are excellent. They are smoked and range from eight to ten pounds. The succulent fruit will simply melt in your mouth. Cartons of oranges, grapefruit and/or apples may be purchased. An assorted mix is also available. The prices are reasonable and the money goes to a good cause. Order yours from any FFA member.

One eighth grade class will be putting together a booklet about the convent. This will be a major research project and any help from local residents would be greatly appreciated. Areas of interest are: early history, educational purposes, legends and superstitions, restoration, buildings and structures, etc. If you have any ideas or input, please contact me at the middle school. Even the tiniest bit of information would be helpful. Also, if you are willing to donate an hour of your time to talk to this class, the students would appreciate your time and the information.

Football season will be winding down soon. If you haven't been to a game, please try to get out to see at least one. All of the area teams have worked hard and have performed well. C'mom out and support the team of your choice.

On a solemn note, I would like to include a poem by Stephen Crane.

I SAW A MAN
PURSUING THE HORIZON

I saw a man pursuing the horizon;
Round and round they sped.
I was disturbed at this;
I accosted the man.
"It is futile," I said,
"You can never..."
"You lie," he cried,
And ran on.

This week is National Drug Awareness Week; wear your red ribbon proudly. As you know, drugs are a major concern to us parents and a major problem to society. Help us teachers impress upon not only students, but anyone who may be targets for drug traffickers, that drugs are not the answer. Use your influence to convince them that drugs are not the answer to "pursuing the horizon".

Convent cooking

The Annual Meeting of the Martin County Convent Foundation was held October 19 in the Texas Theater.

Miles Tollison, the MCCF's first president gave the annual report and presented the new slate of officers. Kyle Averitt will be taking over as president. Some of you may not know that Kyle was one of the initiators of the Convent project. The other officers will be Morgan Cox, vice-president; myself as secretary; and Jim McGilvray as treasurer. Yolanda Taylor and Brenda Webb will serve as assistant secretaries. Cox and McGilvray are returnees from last year's board. New board members were also announced and they will be: Todd Smith, Kathryn Burch, Bob Deavenport, Pamela Tollison, Steve Garlington, Morgan Cox, Dan Saunders, Gwen Sawyer, Gib Wheeler, Lora Bell Tom, Karen Graves, David Saunders, Ricky Fleckenstein, Kyle Averitt, Faye Wagner, Sharon Odom, Lester Baker and Danny Fryar.

Items included in the annual report were that the $10,000 roof has been paid for, the building has been secured with locks and boarded up, the exposed adobe has been covered, there has been mowing and brush removal around the Convent and the organizational structure has been worked on. Also, applications for the Texas Historical Commission Grant and National Trust for Historic Preservations have been sent in, we have had a site visit by Texas Historical Commission architect, Garron Hite and an architect, Killis Almond, has been selected.

Fund raisers that have been done are the cookbook, the Tasting Feast, the tour off the Convent and the Texas Theater, Buggy Rides at the County Fair and the Convent Gala — the luncheon and Fashion Show.

Awareness activities that have been accomplished are a float in the Old Settler's Parade which placed third; a booth at the County Fair which also placed third; news releases by Kathryn Burch and Ed Todd — his article went out on the wire and was picked up across the country, and this column.

Tollison also announced the organization of a support group for the MCCF. This group will answer the request of many citizens who have offered to help with the Convent project but did not have the time or desire to be a director. The supporters will prove to be a vital and important part of this project. Josie Deatherage will be in charge of the county-wide support group and Miles Tollison will co-chair with her and will be in charge of the support group made up of Stanton residents.

If you would like to be a member of the support group give Josie or Miles a call.

Approximately 175 people attended the Health Fair Saturday. Blood donations hit a new high for the county. The public is to be commended for their outstanding support.

With 75 pints collected at our last blood drive and 57 donor cards filled out at the health fair; that put us well over our goal of 100 pints of blood for the year. Congratulations to Martin County residents, Martin County Hospital and Janice Bundas for doing a great job.

Fifty people had their hearing tested. One mother was heard exclaiming, "I can't believe she can't hear one thing out of her left ear." With this information, help is now on it's way for this child. Several wives were anxious to have their husband's hearing tested. They wanted to know if he was just tuning them out or if there was really a problem. Dr. Percell of Audio Acoustics in Midland did the test free of charge.

Twenty-three mammograms were scheduled at Martin County Hospital. Mark Bevers Chevrolet donated $5 per mammogram to the American Cancer Society. Wheeler Buick donated $50 to the American Cancer Society for this endeavor.

Seventy-three cholesterol and glucose tests were done. Sixty-two percent of those tested had cholesterol readings over 200. Five were over 300. Readings over 200 are generally at risk of heart disease.

Several booth exhibits addressed this issue. An exhibit from the Texas Beef Council manned by 4-H'ers showed that wise selections of beef can be competitive with chicken in cholesterol count and saturated fat.

An exhibit set up by Grady Young Homemakers showed that whole milk at 3% butterfat has 485 of its calories coming from fat. Skim milk has 1% of its calories coming from fat. When you are trying to stay below 30% of your calories coming from fat sources, which one should you choose.

Did you know some breakfast cereals are high in fat while others have no fat. The 4th grade 4-H group urged people to read the label before you eat.

The United Methodist Women's group manned an exhibit which displayed posters from the Children's Defense Fund. The target was teens. One poster read "If you have trouble explaining a pimple, how do you think you are going to explain this?" The quotation was below a picture of a pregnant stomach. Done in black and white, the posters were graphic and to the point.

Xi Theta Nu manned a Red Ribbon Campaign booth. Videos of the last two years' Elementary School Winning Drug musicals were shown. Rho Xi Sorority organized the walk for the Red Ribbon Campaign. Lori Fleckenstein won the Walkman they gave away. Stanton 5th Grade 4-H foods project spent their time flipping through pages looking up nutritional information so the computer could analyze your diet.

Theresa Conway's health class did two excellent exhibits. One was on CPR. Rucessa Annie was on hand. Other emergency techniques were also illustrated.

Todd Matthis was on hand for the Area Medical Home Care. His office is located in the Lewis & Company building. He showed the variety of home health care items he carries. He also used an oximetry machine to check the amount of oxygen being taken into the lungs.

Stanton Future Homemakers did a taste test with different teas. Caffeine was the culprit here. Netha Mitchell and Carol Rawlings were on hand as sponsors.

The Evening Lions had an eye bank exhibit. Mark Hoelscher tested water and shared his love for bicycling with passers by.

Cap Rock Electric Co-Op was givine recognition for their efforts made in helping employees to stop smoking.

Our biggest crowd getter was the Rocking Horse Circle exercisers. Rhonda Ireton is to be commended for her efforts in getting the children and their parents out. We loved Pop Goes the Weasel. The fair was definitely a success. If you missed it this year, don't miss it next year. We are planning a bigger and better one. Thanks to the 85 volunteers that made this fair possible. The fair was organized by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service with the help of the Martin County Hospital.

Programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion or national handicap.

Stanton upsets favored McCamey

McCAMEY — The Stanton Buffalos played spoiler to the McCamey Badgers in two ways here Friday night. Stanton's 23-6 District 5-2A victory ruined McCamey's homecoming, and for all practical purposes, knocked the Badgers out of the playoff picture.

The Badgers, the preseason pick to win district, are off to an 0-2 start. Stanton, picked to finish fourth in the league, is now 2-0. McCamey is 3-4 overall and Stanton goes to 5-2.

Stanton quarterback Randy Nevarez tossed two touchdown passes, and the Stanton defense continually came up with the big play to nail the door shut on the Badgers.

Nevarez threw a 15-yard TD pass to sophomore wide receiver Kenny McCallister, and a 77-yard screen pass to running back Gary Don Thompson. Thompson got a crushing block from tackle Richard Villa, on his way to the score. Villa also booted a 73-yard punt in the game.

Mike Graham scored another Buffalo TD, late in the game on a two-yard run. The other Stanton score was a 30-yard field goal by Tony Moses.

The Stanton secondary came up with three big plays in the game. On McCamey's first possession of the game, cornerback Graham ended a scoring threat by picking off a pass in the end zone. Safties McCallister and Kelly Inman also killed scoring drives with fourth quarter interceptions.

John Paul Barry was Stanton's leading rusher with 53 yards in 13 carries. Thompson caught two passes for 88 yards and McCallister caught two passes for 40 yards.

"We were really worried about how we were going to play because McCamey is a tough team," said Stanton coach Dale Ruth after the win. "We scored early and came back with the big screen pass right before the half. I felt that was the big play of the game. We played hard."

Stanton will host Van Horn Friday.

Jesse Montez, No. 20 for the Stanton Buffalos, smiles after making his second touchdown in a recent game against Presidio. Stanton upset favored McCamey Friday in football action.

Stanton's Stallings qualifies

Even with ankle pain, Jeremy Stallings placed fourth in the district Cross Country Meet to win his first trip to regionals.

The Stanton freshman suffered an ankle injury last Thursday night during the JV football game. Jeremy ran the 3 mile course Saturday with it taped and hurting, knowing he just needed to be in the top 5 finishers to qualify for regionals. He ran a 18:37 time for a fourth place finish.

Jennifer Riddle ran a 15:04 in the district meet for 8th place in the varsity girls division.

In the 8th girls division, Sonia Hopper placed first with a time of 14:40, Brittany Brown placed third with 15:44, Maria Reyna placed 5th and Milanda Cannon 6th.

Stanton received the second place team award in the 7th girls division. Sandie Bundas ran a 15:26 for a fourth place finish, followed by Laura Herm in 7th place, Lupita Chapa in 9th, Traci Moore, 10th, Mary Villa 11th, Monica Moreno 13th and Shauna Butler, 14th.

Woody Crow and Jason Caffey placed 8th and 9th respectively in the 7th Boys Division.

Stallings will run at 9:00 a.m. in Lubbock at the Mac Simmons Park on Nov. 4th.

Grady loops noose over Longhorns

By SCOTT ROBINSON
Herald Editor

LENORAH — The Grady Wildcats were back in winning form Friday as they used a crushing defense and high scoring offense to defeat the Loop Longhorns 46-8 in district action.

The Wildcats rolled up 392 yards total offense while the defense limited the Longhorns to 126 total yards.

Scott Glaze led the offense charge with 11 carries for 132 yards, while Gilbert Cortez contributed 68 yards on seven runs. The receiving corp was led by Danny Valle's four catches for 65 yards and Scott Terrell's two receptions for 54 yards. Quarterback Len Garza completed 6 of 12 passes for 109 yards.

Coach Leandro Gonzales had words of praise for the blocking efforts of David White, Victor Garza, and Valle.

With 5:55 left in the first quarter, Scott Terrell excited the large homecoming crowd with a 39 yards punt return for a Wildcat touchdown. Loop was forced to punt on their next possession and Grady took over the ball at their 20 yard line.

On first down Scott Glaze took the ball around the right side of the line for sixty yards and another Wildcat touchdown. After another unsuccessful conversion attempt, the "Cats" led 12-0 with 3:10 remaining in the opening stanza.

The Grady defense played an important role in the early part of the game as the Longhorns were given several scoring opportunities on Wildcat miscues and penalties. The Longhorns took a first down near midfield after roughing the punter call was made against Grady. The defense dug down and held Loop on downs and Grady took the ball back at their own 28.

After driving down the field, Longhorn defender Bradley Crow intercepted a Garza to Terrell pass to give Loop the ball at their 27. The Longhorns moved the ball to the Grady eleven only to be denied again by a stubborn Wildcat defense. Taking over at their own ten yard line, the Wildcats fumbled and Jayson Newton recovered for Loop.

A group of Grady Wildcats put the finishing touches on an attempted run by a Loop Longhorn. Coming in to assist is No. 11 Len Garza for Grady. Grandy went on to win it's homecoming game defeating the Longhorns, 46-8.

The Longhorns scored their only touchdown of the night at this point when Juan Miranda carried the ball in from the two yard line. Crow kicked the extra point and with 4:45 to go in the first half, the Grady lead was cut to 12-8.

The Wildcats scored two more times in the half after Terrell gave the offense excellent field position returning the Loop kick to the 40 yard line and later returning a Longhorn punt 46 yards to the Loop 14 yard line.

The points were added when Glaze ran 3 yards for a touchdown and Terrell converted the extra point to make the score 20-8 with 2:48 remaining in the half. The other touchdowns came as Garza passed nine yards to Valle to move the Wildcats ahead 26-8 with only 31 seconds remaining in the half.

During halftime Grady crowned two 1989 queens. Brenna Hale Beasley, a 1984 graduate of Grady, was chosen as Coming Home Queen from a court consisting of herself, Sonya Deatherage Connell and Tamara Williams Garza. The 1988 Coming Home Queen, Kara Welch presented Beasley with bouquet of flowers.

High School students nominated for Homecoming Queen for 1989 included Kim Adkisson, Laurie Romine, Sherrie McMorries, Heather Madison and Melissa Romine. Laurie Romine was crowned 1989 Homecoming Queen by Jogay Tunnell the 1988 Homecoming Queen.

The nominees were escorted onto the field in a 1932 Ford Roadster donated by Jimmy and Donna Sawyer and driven by Roy Madison.

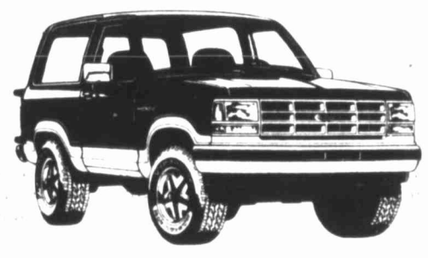

After the halftime festivities concluded, the Wildcats began their first possession at their own 29. With 7:55 remaining in the third quarter, Gilbert Cortez crossed the goal line on a one yard jaunt to move the Wildcats ahead 32-8.

Terrell scored the next Grady points on a 34 yard reverse play. The conversion kick once again failed and Grady led 38-8 with 9:19 left in the game.

Loop Quarterback Bradley Crow was then intercepted by Terrell to set up the last Wildcat touchdown. Grady took over the ball at the Loop 36. A few plays later Len Garza passed 31 yards to Terrell to capoff scoring for the Wildcats. David White kicked the conversion attempt successfully and the Wildcats led 46-8 with 7:18 remaining in the game.

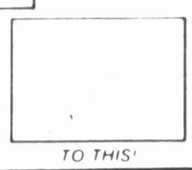

The Wildcat defense held the Longhorns totally ineffective the entire second half. Defensive coch Randy Peel contributed this largely to the hardnose play of Chad Wells, Mike McKaskle, and Gilbert Cortez. Wells led all defenders with 9 tackles and 10 assists. Cortez was very effective on pass defense.

The Wildcat record moves to 1-1 in district play and stands at 3-4 overall. Grady will travel to Klondike this Friday to battle the Cougars in their next district clash.
