Three killed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Falling beams killed three workers and seriously injured a fourth Tuesday at a construction site at Ohio State University, officials said.

Richard T. Lombardi, vice president of Turner Construction, which managed the construction site, said the workers were erecting beams for the glass and granite four-stor building when the accident occurred in the late morning.

He said it hadn't been determined how many beams fell or what caused them to collapse.

Work was halted at least for the day and federal investigators from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration were at the scene, Lombardi said.

FBI for HUD?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lamar Smith is one of two congressmen who say the FBI should investigate the Department of Housing and Urban Development's backing of retirement centers that are either in default on their loans or in financial trouble.

Smith, whose district includes Midland, called the retirement center funds "money wasted and possibly misused."

He responded to a report that an internal HUD probe had uncovered $600 million in failed or financially troubled retirement home projects backed by the federal agency.

Graziano dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocky Graziano, who briefly held the middleweight boxing crown but was better known as the subject of a movie and a pitchman for products from yogurt to auto mufflers, died Tuesday. He was 71.

Graziano died of cardio-pulmonary failure at New York Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Diana Goldin. He was hospitalized April 8 after suffering a stroke.

In his 11-year pro career, Graziano managed a 67-16 record with 52 knockouts.

He was elected to the Boxing Hall of Fame in 1971.

Clements axes school reform; Override fails

■ Governor blames "liberal legislators" for a disputed school reform measure he termed "more a tax bill than an education bill."

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the Legislature's school finance bill Tuesday and won a battle of wills in the Senate, where Sen. Carl Parker angrily withdrew a motion to override the governor.

Parker stormed from Senate chambers after denouncing several Republican and minority Democratic, whose unlikely coalition effectively killed the motion even before members voted.

"Y'all are playing your little political games, and I'm sick of it," said Parker, who needed 21 votes from 31 members for success.

"I care about little children that can't speak English and aren't fed well when the come to school," he said. "Some of you don't care, so you can do it without me. Let it be on your conscience."

Parker left the floor with reporters and aides trailing, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, gaveled a quick adjournment.

Earlier Tuesday, Clements finally vetoed the legislation he has held in his office during five days of negotiations with representatives of the House and Senate.

The governor said the bill "in a fundamental sense ... is a tax bill and not an education bill" and asserted it would lead to increased local property taxes and a state income tax.

He said talks broke down after "liberal legislators" continued to press for a half-cent sales tax hike, an idea the governor has repeatedly opposed.

House Speaker Gib Lewis joked afterward that "I have been called all kinds of thing in my life, but I never have been called a liberal."

Lewis, a Fort Worth Democrat, said the sales tax hike is the best way out of the dilemma because it would provide a continuing revenue "stream" that lawmakers could count on in coming years.

If the Legislature followed the governor's revenue proposals, which Lewis termed "smoke and mirrors," they would have to make up an additional $1 billion shortfall in the next regular session, he said.

"I would say the actions of the Legislature have been anti-personal income tax," said Lewis, "and the actions of the governor ... have been pro-income tax."

Said Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, "We were so close, and there were some things the governor could have given up."

Hearst Corporation, Izvestia exploring newspaper project

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The Hearst Corporation and Izvestia, the Soviet newspaper with 11 million daily circulation, have agreed to jointly explore the feasibility of publishing an uncensored weekly Soviet-American newspaper, it was announced Tuesday.

The newspaper, titled WE/Mbl (Mbl, pronounced "mwee," is the Russian word for "we"), would be distributed in both countries in their respective languages.

The prototype test issue of the publication is being prepared in Hearst's Washington, D.C., news bureau and will be published on Independence Day, July 4, 1990.

Frank A. Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation, said in a statement: "During the past few years, sweeping and dramatic changes in the Soviet Union have created a climate that makes this type of joint publishing venture an idea worth pursuing.

"Many details remain to be resolved before a regular publishing schedule can be set but the fact that such a newspaper could contribute significantly to mutual understanding and help foster democratic ideals makes this undertaking well worth the effort."

The prototype test issue of the newspaper will be jointly edited by Soviet and U.S. journalists and 25,000 copies of that issue will be distributed to key government, business and education leaders in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, plus Washington, D.C., and other U.S. cities.

WE/Mbl will be published in a standard size, broadsheet format with full-color availability.

The newspaper's editors are planning coverage of political, economic and social issues and trends, and will address U.S. and Soviet fashion, sports, arts and entertainment. Editorial features being considered include an English-language pullout tourist guide to Moscow and a guide for Russians in Washington, D.C., and New York.

"Today there is no widespread, direct access to the Russian people through any independent Western publication. That

City may expand public smoking ban

■ Broadening of local restrictions on smoking in public could include grocery stores, banks and shopping malls.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials may soon tighten the smoking belt a few more notches by banning the activity in grocery stores and other public buildings in Midland.

Councilmen and city managers said Tuesday they will study no-smoking ordinances in Austin, Dallas and San Antonio to decide what local areas may fall under the anti-smoking axe.

A city ordinance which went into effect May 1 outlawed smoking in all areas inside Midland International Airport except in remote corners and some food and drink sales areas. No timetable was set for when a proposal for an expanded ordinance could go before City Council for approval.

Councilman Jose Cuevas, a smoker, said the policy may be expanded to include places such as grocery stores, banks, Midland Center, Midland Park Mall and almost all other publicly used buildings.

Cuevas said he sees public no-smoking areas as the municipal wave of the future.

"All the other cities are going that way," Cuevas said. "I think smokers are kind of getting used to it."

He said the city may phase in a plan, starting with grocery stores and then expanding it to other buildings.

Roy Carley, a Midland accountant who presented the request to councilmen Tuesday, said area grocers would support a no-smoking ordinance for their stores.

In a telephone survey Carley conducted earlier this month, grocery store managers reported that smokers have left flicked ashes on produce, left cigarette butts on floors and bothered other shoppers.

The grocers said they would cautiously support the ordinance, Carley said. "They have a great fear of alienating any of their customers," he said.

Carley said creating a smoke-free environment for public buildings is critical to making the city a mecca for retired citizens.

"Certainly Midland is wanting to reach people wanting to retire here," he said. "A lot of older people are trapped. You're standing there in the grocery store line and this guy lights up a big cigar. He looks like a factory smoke stack."

Mayor Carroll Thomas said Carley is not the first to approach the city about a more extensive no-smoking ordinance.

"It's a somewhat touchy issue, but we need to give it some serious thought," Thomas said. "The trend is certainly in that direction. We've had people come to us the past few years wanting us to move in that direction."

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the city may go as far as letting the public decide the issue through an election.

It's best place for planes, CAF speaker says

■ The educational mission of the Confederate Air Force and the suitablity of the West Texas climate for preserving historic aircraft are underscored in a Midland rally.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The plains of West Texas have turned into the "Valhalla of the world for airplanes," retired U.S. Air Force Brig. Gen. Richard Ingram of Midland said at a Confederate Air Force (CAF) rally Tuesday.

"People say there are no lakes, no trees, no hills and all of that," Ingram said after CAF Executive Director Ralph Royce outlined the organization's history, goals and plans at a Midland Chamber of Commerce breakfast meeting in the Midland Center.

"And I say amen," asserted Ingram, who is director of joint development for the CAF and its American Air Power Heritage Foundation. "From an airplane's perspective, you don't want any of those things. You have uncongested air space and good weather — good flying weather."

The CAF's governing general staff, following the wishes of its member-colonels, voted to relocate its Ghost Squadron of 143 World War II-vintage "warbirds" from Valley International Airport in Harlingen.

The key issue which many people seem to overlook when they talk about Midland and West Texas as the home base for the CAF, is the welfare of the rare aircraft, Ingram said.

"You need to focus on the really big thing, which is, 'Is it good for the airplanes?' "

The leadership of the 8,000-member CAF and the city of Midland are fine-tuning contracts in readying for the CAF move to Midland and for the building of a world-class Interpretive Museum.

Grand opening is scheduled for Dec. 7, 1991, to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The role of the 1957-founded CAF is to preserve, in flying condition, remnants of America's WWII aircraft which represent the "air power that changed the course of Western civilization," CAF director Royce told the full-house chamber gathering.

The CAF "mission can be described as 'educational' — to teach that segment of American aviation history and heritage from 1939 to 1945," Royce said. In addition to the aircraft, the CAF has more than 30,000 artifacts, including the "world's largest nose-art collection, all original."

"The Confederate Air Force is a flying museum," Royce said. "The operative word here is 'flying.' "

The CAF was founded in Mercedes in South Texas in 1957 by two crop dusters, Lloyd Nolen and Lefty Gardner, and three farmers who "joined together to buy a surplus World War II fighter for $2,500.

That fighter was a North American P-51 Mustang — called "Old Red Nose" — which is still in operation and today "retails for about $550,00," Royce said.

Of the CAF's 143 warbirds, 99 are flying, 38 are in "heavy maintenance" or restoration, and six are in "deep storage" until funds are available to rebuild them.

"The CAF has become a true national treasure," Royce said, "and it is time to find that national treasure a new home."

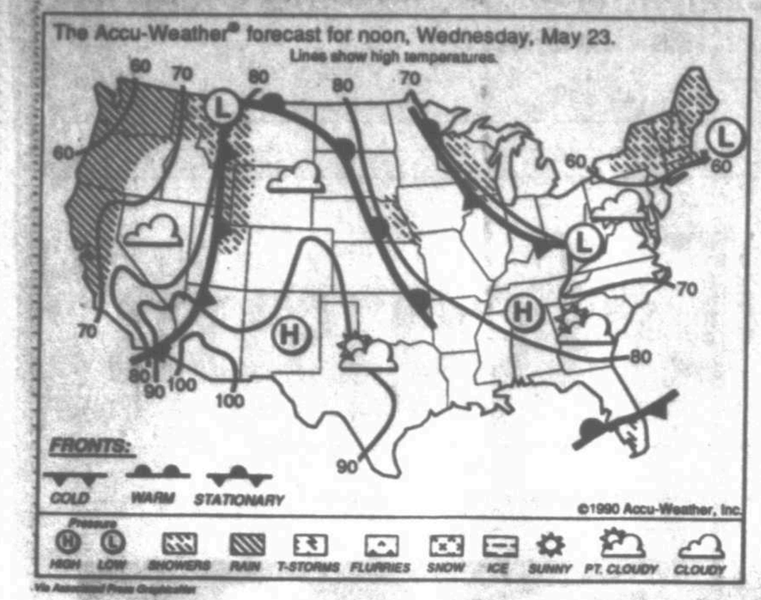

That home is Midland.

"Many of our folks, unfortunately, still think of the Permian Basin, Midland and Odessa, as the OK Corral — tumbleweeds and watering troughs, hitching rails, dirt streets," Royce said. "And that is a little bit of a challenge to the chamber to ensure and to assure that the word gets out

Bush renewing China's benefits

By Andrew Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush has decided to renew China's trade benefits for another year, concluding that the potential harm to American companies and to reform-minded Chinese outweighed a desire to register disapproval of Beijing's human-rights record, administration officials said Tuesday.

There is also a domestic political dimension to Bush's move to renew mowt-favored-nation trade status. The president, who has said he agonized over the decision, is calculating that Congress will not react with the outrage that greeted his overtures to China last year, officials said.

The White House has spent weeks laying political groundwork for the decision, and officials said their soundings of Congress indicated opposition would not be strong, although George J. Mitchell, the Senate majority leader, condemned Bush's decision Tuesday as "contrary to American interests and wrong."

Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., who led congressional opposition to Bush's China policy last year, said Tuesday that a resolution opposing the extension of the trade benefits would be introduced.

But other Democratic lawmakers and congressional aides said they could not gather enough votes to block the move as long as Bush found a way to make it clear that the act did not represent approval of Beijing's policies and that Washington might reconsider the issue next year if the situation in China did not improve.

Administration officials said Bush, whose decision was first reported in The Wall Street Journal on Monday, was prepared to offer such assurances when he sends his decision on trade with China to Congress.

They said he would also point out that other sanctions against China, including suspension of World Bank loans and a ban on military sales, would remain in effect.

Supported by intense lobbying from Hong Kong business interests and other groups promoting trade with China, the White House is also counting on its belief that any undecided lawmakers will be swayed by the profits that their home districts reap from $18 billion a year in trade with China.

Under a federal law known as the Jackson-Vanik amendment, China and other countries with non-market economies cannot be granted most-favored-nation status, which gives them the lower tariff rates granted to most American trading partners, unless the White House certifies that they are permitting free emigration.

That certification must be renewed each year and is due for China this year on June 3, the anniversary of the violence last year around Tiananmen Square.

Administration officials said that the White House and State Department were still completing formal documents on the trade issue for Bush to sign, but that the president had reached a decision to extend the trade benefits for another year.

After meeting with Bush at the White House today, senior Republican lawmakers suggested that Bush was prepared to approve the extension and said he promised to send his ruling to Congress before it recesses on Friday for the Memorial Day holiday.

Bush's decision follows an intense debate in the administration over the political and diplomatic ramifications of extending the trade benefits.

Some officials questioned whether the White House wanted to experience the kind of harsh criticism that surfaced over Bush's decision to send two aides to Beijing on two secret missions last year in hopes of improving relations.

Other officials, especially career diplomats in the State Department who opposed the extension of the trade benefits, argued that canceling most-favored-nation status would send a clear signal of American disapproval of the Chinese human-rights record.

To do otherwise, they said, would fly in the face of Bush's publicly expressed disappointment that his overtures to China have had little visible effect on Beijing's policies.

In the end, officials said Bush, a former envoy to Beijing who runs China policy personally from the Oval Office, followed his own inclination to keep diplomatic and economic channels open to Beijing. He concluded that imposing a trade sanction would not have much influence on the Chinese leadership.

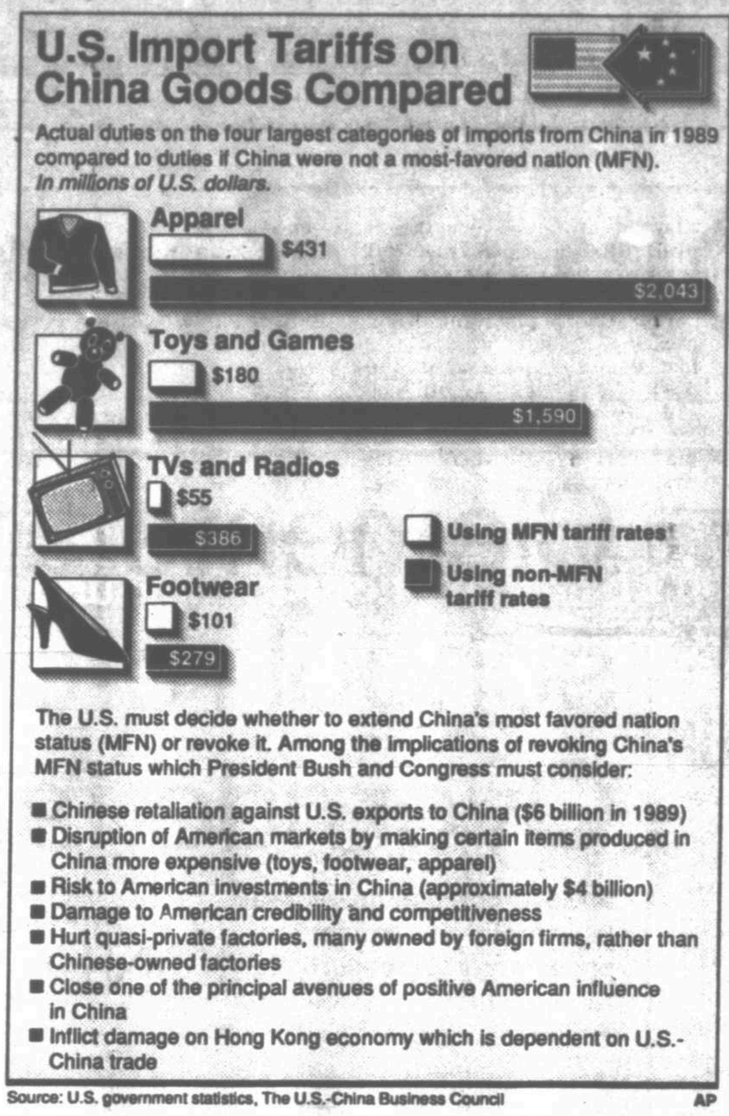

He also heeded arguments that canceling most-favored-nation status for China would cost $8 billion to $10 billion in the first year.

The administration has prepared statistics on how that will affect specific profits in individual lawmakers' districts.

The Hong Kong business lobby and other interested groups have been working assiduously on Capitol Hill to drum up support for Bush's decision, since Hong Kong is a transit point for some 60 percent of Chinese exports to the United States.

The administration argues that ending the trade benefits will cost Hong Kong tens of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars.

The administration further contends that increasing tariffs on Chinese goods will harm only the forces in China that America is trying to encourage — reform-minded politicians and entrepreneurs in South China who own the small companies that make most of the goods exported to the United States.

VETO: New direction sought

(From 1A)

Stiles mentioned in particular a $1.18 property tax rate proposed for districts to take maximum advantage of state aid.

Clements said the benchmark was too high and would lead to higher property taxes, but Stiles said it represented the best hope for tax relief for school districts whose tax rates are higher than $1.18.

Late Tuesday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, met with House Speaker Gib Lewis to determine the Legislature's next course of action.

Hobby afterward said the Senate would not try again to override Clements' veto and instead would concentrate efforts on new legislation he said would appeal more to Republicans.

Referring to Hispanic members who withheld their committments to Parker's motion, Hobby said, "the minorities pretty well overplayed their hand this morning."

Since the Senate must override the veto before the House can make an attempt, the decision effectively scotches any further override votes.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and chairman of the House Republican Caucus, said House leadership would have come up short, anyway. Craddick estimated about 60 members would have voted to sustain the governor when no more were 50 were needed to defeat the override move.

Parker said the new legislation likely will find an initial home in the Senate State Affairs Committee, which is chaired by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

Previous school finance legislation had originated in the Senate Education Committee, which Parker chairs.

Montford, after a Senate Democratic Caucus meeting that followed adjournment, signaled the change in strategy. "The more moderate Democrats are looking for middle ground," he said.

"Throughout this, we put resolution of poor district problems first," he said. Now, "We're not going to do that at the expense of our own backyards," he said.

One of the members who had withheld support from Parker, Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, said she thought any legislation developed in Montford's committee will have trouble before a court-appointed special master.

The Texas Supreme Court this past October found the current school finance system unconstitutional, thereby providing the basis for current legislative efforts.

Former high court Justice Bill Kilgarlin was appointed master to draw up a plan the court would impose if lawmakers and Clements fail to come to an agreement.

The plan also would serve as a fall-back position if poorer school districts challenge legislation that results from an agreement between Clements and the Legislature.

Zaffirini said she opposed the override motion because she felt Senate negotiators had given up too much in reaching a compromise with House conferees.

In particular, she said the law should call for a 95 percent level of equity among all school districts, but conferees opted only for 90 percent.

Parker in his Senate-floor tirade, singled out the vice chairman of the Senate Education Committee, Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

Parker said Truan had insulted him "as badly as I've ever been insulted on the floor of the Senate" with insinuations that Parker only was out to help his home district.

"I could have voted for 10 bills that would have helped by district," said Parker. "As far as I'm concerned, we will never speak again until I receive an apology," he told Truan.

Truan said later he does not intend to apologize to Parker.

"Sen. Parker unfortunately has a reputation of blasting out and trying to intimidate people," he said.

Parker "has a tendency to want to have a bill as if it were his baby — his child — and everybody ought to genuflect and kiss the child," he said. "And I'm not going to do that."

Parker said he expects Truan will be removed as Education Committee vice chairman by the next regular session.

SMOKING: Stores next target?

(From 1A)

Midland Police Department Chief Richard Czech said enforcing the policy would be easy.

"From a law enforcement standpoint, I've seen very few problems," Czech said, adding that smokers lighting up in a no-smoking zone usually extinguish their cigarettes when asked.

Butch Thompson, director of the Albertsons grocery outlet at 3317 N. Midland Drive, said smokers have posed no nuisance at his store. The store has posted signs asking patrons not to smoke.

"I haven't had any serious problems," Thompson said, adding that he would support a no-smoking ordinance for all Midland grocery stores. "We ask that people don't smoke while their in the store, but I don't enforce it."

Managers for local Furrs, M System and Skaggs Alpha Beta grocery stores declined comment on the proposed ordinace. They said expressing their opinions may drive off customers.

Rodney Johnson, 42, a Dairy Queen assistant manager who was smoking a cigarette as he shopped at a local grocery store Tuesday, said the ordinance would discriminate against smokers.

"It's really in a large area," Johnson said of smoking in grocery stores. "It's not confined, and it really shouldn't bother anybody."

Fellow shopper and smoker Don Mattlin, 53, of Lubbock, said he never smokes in grocery stores anyway.

"There's never any ashtrays around in here," Mattlin said. "I don't want to throw it on the floor."

He said another no-smoking ordinance would not bother him.

"I've grown accustomed to it," he said. "But it makes you wonder what's going to come next. Everything is either illegal, immoral or fattening."

Shopper Carolyn Britten, 53, of Midland, was excited about the prospect of creating more no-smoking zones.

"That would be wonderful," Ms. Britten said. "Smoking is not just a social, fun thing to do anymore.

"It's affecting everybody's health. Our taxpayer dollars end up paying for those who get sick."

CAF: Rally underscores purpose

about the wide open spaces, clean air, blues skies, good flying and friendly people" in West Texas. "I've been telling everybody."

The CAF has been suffering in its old home base, Harlingen, because the CAF there was "out of space" at the airport and because of "the lack of community understanding" and because of the "ambivalence toward our existence."

"In many ways, we are bringing 8,000 people to town — the worldwide membership," Royce said. "The life blood of the Confederate Air Force is its volunteers. The CAF could not exist without the volunteer man-hours," which annually totally more than 500,000.

"Without happy, cooperative, working volunteers, the CAF would wither and die," Royce said.

Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Joanne Langston said that the CAF is "really marvelous for our community, and the community is equally marvelous for the Confederate Air Force."

Ginger Brown, a Midland flying artist, said the move "will generate interest not only in men and women but especially in young children, who are our future aviators."

CAF Col. Bill Stepp, leader of the Desert Squadron of the CAF's West Texas Wing, said squadron members "are absolutely ecstatic over the move.

"We think these next years are going to be the most exciting years of our squadron's life," said Stepp, an Odessan who was an Air Corps P-51 Mustang pilot in World War II. "For our whole community, it's a tremendous thing."

PROJECT: First issue due July 4

is our audience," said John Wallach, foreign editor of Hearst Newspapers and one of WE/Mbl's founding editors.

"We want WE/Mbl to be a newspaper that presents issues and offers solutions through independent investigative reporting," said Jerrold L. Schecter, another of the founding editors. "The Soviet-American interchange has a vitality and tension derived from the clash of values, power drives, cultural differences and national interest. We intend to explore these differences and similarities in depth."

The Soviet participants also commented on the publication.

"Glasnost has opened tremendous opportunities and new opportunities demand new journalism. With this issue of WE/Mbl, we have started to push glasnost further and further — to the plain and simple press freedom we need," said Vladimir Nadeine, Washington correspondent for Izvestia.

Izvestia is affiliated with the Supreme Soviet and the Congress of People's Deputies, the two chambers of the Soviet legislature.

Spoleto's return marks Charleston rebound

By Bruce Smith

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Days after Hurricane Hugo smashed into this city, a banner appeared on the side of a pastel building on the edge of Calhoun Square.

"The opera ain't over 'til the fat lady sings," it said. "And we're not going to let her sing."

The banner, which remains until this day, reflects the spirit of this city as well as of the organizers of Spoleto Festival U.S.A.

As if to prove Charleston has recovered from the ravages of the storm, the curtain rises this week on the most ambitious Spoleto in the 14-year history of the American arts festival.

"The storm has not been able to allay the enthusiasm about the festival," which is keeping pace with last year's record box office, general manager Nigel Redden said.

'Media attention seems to be focused on the festival this year. I think that's one of the positive spinoffs of the hurricane.'

— Spoleto festival spokeswoman Ann Wilson

The Sept. 21 hurricane, which packed 135 mph winds and a 12-foot tidal surge, damaged hundreds of buildings, tore off roofs and toppled trees throughout the area. Repairs have been made and the historic district, where the festival events are staged, has been cleaned.

The festival, which opens Friday and runs through June 10, features more than 110 performances offering a little bit of everything from grand opera to multimedia events and some old favorites.

The festival was brought to Charleston in 1977 by composer Gian Carlo Menotti. He founded the Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, in 1957 with the aim of merging the cultural worlds of Europe and America.

In a departure from tradition, the first major event of the U.S. festival this year is not an opera, but a gala concert to celebrate the hurricane recovery.

The Friday evening event, which has been sold out for weeks, will feature Beethoven's Symphony No. 7.

One of the most extravagant events at this year's festival will be a five-hour production of Richard Wagner's opera "Parsifal" directed by Menotti.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning Menotti also will direct a revival of last year's hit, "The Marriage of Figaro."

House OK's access bill for nation's disabled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 403-20 Tuesday to approve legislation guaranteeing equal access to employment, transportation and other rights to millions of disabled Americans, including AIDS sufferers.

Passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act followed defeat, 227-192, of an administration-backed amendment that would have prevented disabled workers from seeking damages from employers who willfully discriminate.

The bill must go to House and Senate negotiators after the Memorial Day recess because of an amendment in the House that would keep AIDS-infected employees from handling food. The Senate passed its version of the bill 76-8 last September.

Three Democrats joined 17 Republicans in voting against the bill in the House.

The lead House sponsor of the bill, Rep. Steny H. Hoyer, D-Md., said he believes the Bush administration will support the overall bill despite defeat of the employer sanctions amendment.

"He will sign whatever he gets on the ADA, in my opinion," said Hoyer.

President Bush has urged speedy passage of the entire legislative package, which backers say would do for disabled Americans what the Civil Rights Act of 1964 set out to do for blacks and other minorities.

NATION

The disabilities bill would guarantee equal access to employment, business and services, telecommunications and transportation.

Congressional researchers estimate that at least one in six Americans — 43 million — is disabled.

The administration is concerned because the provision on employment discrimination says sanctions would be based on Title VII of the Civil Rights Act.

Congress is due to consider this year a new Civil Rights Act of 1990, which would change Title VII so that employers who intentionally violate anti-discrimination laws could be sued for damages. Workers could ask for a jury trial.

Currently, wronged employees may ask a judge only for back pay, reinstatement and attorney's fees. The defeated amendment by Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., would have deleted the Title VII reference and locked in the current remedies.

"It would be quite a hit to the business community to subject them to punitive and compensatory damages for a newly enacted and comprehensive piece of legislation," said Sensenbrenner.

The Senate version of the Americans with Disabilities Act was the result of negotiations between the White House and Senate supporters, and contains exemptions and timetables aimed at easing business concerns.

Last Thursday, however, the House approved an amendment by Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, that would let employers reassign workers with infectious diseases so they wouldn't be allowed to handle food.

NATION IN BRIEF

House puts curb on aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House symbolically voted Tuesday night to put sharp curbs on U.S. military aid to El Salvador, but reversed itself moments later and killed the bill to which the curbs had been attached.

The action came just a few hours after House and Senate negotiators completed a separate, $4 billion bill sending emergency aid to new democracies in Nicaragua and Panama.

The 250-163 vote to restrict Salvador aid was intended largely as a show of strength designed to increase pressure on the Bush administration.

2 shot at border

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — Two Mexican men have been shot since agents cracked a huge cocaine-supply pipeline by finding a 300-foot tunnel linking buildings here and in Agua Prieta, Mexico, but U.S. authorities said Tuesday they could not confirm that the shootings were tied to the tunnel.

Carlos Lopez Cruz, 33, the former owner of a bar in Douglas, was shot Monday afternoon in Agua Prieta.

Lopez, who was hit by five slugs from a .38-caliber pistol, was listed in critical condition at Tucson Medical Center.

The newspaper Expresiones reported in Cananea, Sonora, about 55 miles southwest of here, that Lopez had just left a cantina when an assailant walked up behind him and opened fire.

Inquiry underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is investigating 10 current or former Coast Guardsmen as part of a drug-smuggling probe, including one serviceman who has been part of a detail off President Bush's Maine home, Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost said.

Yost said at a news conference that those being investigated included four current and six former guardsmen. He said one of those being investigated had been relieved of his duties.

In a statement released before the news conference, Yost had said all four active-duty personnel had been relieved of their duties. However, responding to a question, Yost said only one had actually been relieved and that he would discuss with the U.S. attorney's office how to handle the others.

Thompson on trial

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — "Gonzo" journalist Hunter Thompson was ordered Tuesday to stand trial on drug and explosives charges.

Mesa County District Court Judge Charles Buss ruled there was sufficient evidence to try the author on five felony charges of possessing drugs and and storing explosives illegally.

The charges stem from complaints by a woman who also alleged Thompson assaulted her in his home in February.

Thompson, 53, fidgeted throughout the hearing and at times muttered under his breath, "That's bull" or "Ah, come on," particularly during testimony by his accuser.

Dairy bill deals with buy-outs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee voted Tuesday to establish a national dairy program that guarantees farmers $10.10 per hundred pounds of milk as long as surpluses stay below 5 billion pounds.

The section of the 1990 farm bill differs from a plan approved earlier by the panel's subcommittee on livestock, dairy and poultry.

That proposal included producer assessments and set up a two-tiered price support system that would have given farmers one price for the bulk of their milk and a lesser price for the amount considered excess by the government.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, chairman of the subcommittee, said the bill brought before the full committee was changed because so many people in Congress and the industry disagreed with the original plan.

"This is an effort to allow everyone to have an opportunity to have their opinion heard," said Stenholm, who presented the new plan with Rep. Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin, the ranking Republican on the subcommittee.

"This is a dairy support program to provide stability to producers," said Gunderson.

The two lawmakers successfully fought off amendments offered in committee that would have further redesigned the dairy program.

The government traditionally has supported dairy farmers by setting a price it will pay for storable dairy products, such as cheese, butter and non-fat dry milk, that aren't bought by processors in the open market.

However, overproduction has been an expensive problem for the government that lawmakers have been trying to correct.

Stenholm emphasized that the price support system does not include assessments or a rigid quota system. These portions of the earlier version of the bill were considered its main problem.

Deficit-cutters need to find $500 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House and congressional negotiators moved toward a consensus on Tuesday that they must find about $500 billion in new taxes and spending cuts over the next five years to balance the budget, participants said.

At the third round of high-level deficit-reduction talks in the Capitol, the Bush administration also unveiled a new, higher estimate of the costs of rescuing the savings and loan industry. The administration now says the bailout could cost as much as $61 billion next year, participants said, about $11 billion higher than previous estimates.

Democrats and Republicans remained divided over precisely how much savings would be needed to balance the budget within five years. Democrats said $500 billion or more was necessary, citing estimates by the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office.

Republicans said the total necessary could be between $400 billion to $500 billion. They relied on projections by the White House's Office of Management and Budget, which until now has been saying that an improving economy will allow the budget to be balanced by 1995. OMB presented figures Tuesday showing that unless action is taken, the budget would still be $32 billion in the red in 1995.

Nonetheless, both sides emerged from their meeting having narrowed their differences somewhat over the size of the deficit problem the government faces. They also spoke optimistically about their prospects for finding a solution.

"The future looks very good to me in terms of us being able to get it done," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

"There's no consensus yet, but I don't think we'd characterize the meetings as containing any sharp disagreements," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn.

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta called the $61 billion (S&L bailout) figure 'a real hit-and-miss number.'

Negotiators did not discuss proposals for how budget savings would be achieved, a stage that participants say is weeks away. Tuesday's three-hour session was dominated by technical discussions by White House and congressional budget experts about how large the federal deficit appears to be.

"We're continuing to define the problem," Sasser said.

Participants said the administration's new estimated costs of the savings and loan bailout remained uncertain. House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., called the $61 billion figure "a real hit-and-miss number."

Before Tuesday's meeting, Sasser said he believed Social Security benefits should be off-limits as negotiators search for ways to shrink next year's federal deficit.

Sasser, in stating his opposition to paring Social Security payments, raised an issue nearly as politically sensitive as the question of new taxes.

Members of both parties are reluctant to antagonize the nation's 39 million retirees who receive Social Security benefits. Republicans lawmakers in particular have been cautious on the issue ever since they backed an effort to limit benefits in 1985 from which then-President Reagan eventually backed away.

Sasser conceded that negotiators would "talk about everything, but said it would be unfair to turn to Social Security for deficit reduction.

The payroll tax paid by workers and their employers has been boosted this year, he said, noting that the Social Security system is running an annual surplus of tens of billions of dollars.

"I don't see the equity in that," Sasser said of benefit cutbacks.

Social Security is expected to cost the government about $265 billion next year, about one-fifth of the total budget. Advocates of trimming benefits as part of a deficit-reduction package argue that it comprises too large a portion of the budget to ignore.

The retirement system is expected to run a $74 billion surplus next year as it builds up a cushion to pay for retiring baby boomers in the next century. The payroll tax rate edged up by 0.14 percent in January to 7.65 percent.

It's likely to be several meetings before budget negotiators begin swapping proposals about cutting the deficit for the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. The opening discussions have focused on technical issues.

The goal of the talks is to find ways to reduce the 1991 shortfall to $64 billion, the target set by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

If the budget gap exceeds that amount by $10 billion, the law triggers whatever spending cuts are necessary to lower the gap.

New lake's name should echo past

For nearly 20 years, officials of the Colorado River Municipal Water District referred to the proposed lake to be created near Ballinger in Runnels and Concho counties as "Stacy Reservoir." Some residents of that area have referred to the planned lake by that name for much longer.

But that designation, while not removing the concerns of residents in that area over the loss of their land and — to a degree — their heritage, at least provided a living monument to the community of Stacy and all the people who lived there at some time.

Yet in the dedication ceremony Saturday in Ballinger for the impoundment that also will help provide water for Midland, Odessa and other West Texas communities, the name of Stacy was swept away as officials for the water district made the official designation for the dam S.W. Freese Dam and the lake it will impound O.H. Ivie Reservoir. Residents of the region around Stacy are understandably angered.

To brush aside the concerns being raised by the residents around Stacy is to say that history or historic places do not matter, which is exactly how residents around that area feel about the water district officials' decision.

But the people whose great-grandparents may have been some of the first settlers in that part of Texas, and whose fathers worked the soil to earn a living, built schools, homes and churches, and who have all put a measure of themselves into the tiny communities don't want their heritage resigned to the forgotten past.

They want the communities of Stacy and Leaday remembered in the names of the dam there now and the lake it created. They have a valid point. Their heritage should be remembered.

CRMWD officials justify their decision to name the lake after Ivie and the dam after Freese by noting their desire to honor the two men for their work toward bringing the Stacy project to completion, and their efforts in the interest of several other lake projects throughout the state. The work of both men has been highly important to the success of water projects in West Texas for years and in that regard they deserve additional recognition.

While the interest of the CRMWD in honoring Ivie and Freese is highly commendable, there are other more appropriate ways to extend gratitude to these two individuals.

Why not a plaque erected at the damsite or inside the CRMWD headquarters facility? If the officials do not think such a gesture would be enough of an honor for these two individuals whose services for the district were paid, they certainly could arrange some other means of expressing their thanks.

Regardless of what the official name is many West Texans who have a connection to the Stacy project will continue to call it by the name it has been known by for nearly two decades — Stacy Reservoir.

Stacy is not going to be forgotten.

Military talented at wasting money

WASHINGTON — If the Pentagon had its way, the "peace dividend" from the cutbacks in defense spending would all be squandered on doodads. The military has a boundless propensity for paying more for something than it is worth and spending billions on trinkets that we could all do without.

Anderson

Our recent report on the frills at U.S. military bases struck a chord with military personnel across the country. These are people who see the top brass wasting money on flowers and other fancy cosmetics while the rank and file live in substandard housing. We heard from the GIs who mow the lawns and prune the roses so the top brass can host debutante balls for their daughters.

Bolling Air Force Base is a regular offender. It is the home of the Defense Intelligence Agency and 12,000 Air Force personnel. Sources there tell us that the top brass will stop at nothing to make Bolling look good. They haven't been very successful, but it isn't for lack of spending. The base south of Washington, D.C., has all the charm of a railroad yard. Yet in the last year, our sources say, Bolling has spent at least $400,000 on aesthetic improvements.

There was the $213,000 spent on a curved brick wall and wrought-iron fence to make the front gate more imposing, and another $25,000 for landscaping the surrounding area.

The Bolling brass spent another $6,938 to build an elaborate brick walkway through a ceremonial lawn where special events such as retirement parties are held.

And then there was the approximately $210,000 spent to build four-foot brick walls around the patios at 30 homes on base that are occupied by officers.

Sources told us that $2,000 was spent to put new carpeting in a commissary that was scheduled to be replaced in a few months.

If that's the kind of spending that the brass does just to make Bolling pretty for themselves, you can imagine the flurry of activity last year when President Bush decided to visit Bolling.

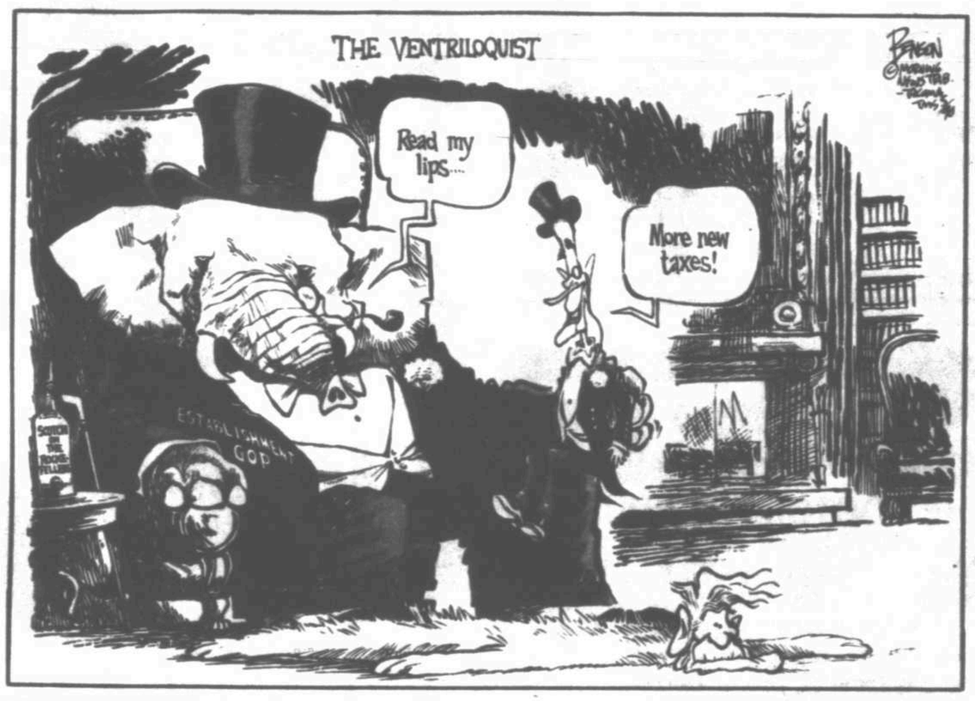

Bush was hosting King Hussein of Jordan and had taken the king on a tour of George Washington's Mount Vernon plantation. From Mount Vernon, the king, the president and the entourage were to sail a few miles up the Potomac River and dock at Bolling.

The base was pitched into a royal fever. Groundskeepers were dispatched to do a rushed landscaping job, and a few were handed cans of paint and pointed toward the dock where the boat would stop in a matter of a few hours. The crew had already begun the painting when officials realized that the paint would still be wet when Bush and Hussein stepped ashore. Since it wouldn't do to have the king and the president sticking to the dock, the painting project was stopped.

Fortunately, neither Bush nor Hussein stepped on the grass. One source at Bolling told our associate Scott Sleek that the grass was sprayed at the last minute with a chemical to make it look a deeper shade of green. Bolling officials denied that they painted the grass for the president.

Compared to the multibillion-dollar defense budget, the waste at Bolling is a drop in the bucket. But the Pentagon has filled millions of buckets with those drops to the point where the waste is monumental and the military is literally nickel and diming the taxpayers to the poor house.

Just hang up when you hear the beep

Not since Alexander Graham Bell invented the whatchamacallit has the phone system gone through so many gyrations. The big breakthrough recently is that companies are installing direct dialing so that you never get to speak to a live operator. Every employee has his or her own line and it's up to the caller to figure out how to get through.

Buchwald

The other day I needed to talk to Dumphries at my favorite utility company. This is how it went:

The recorded voice said, "You have reached the Darkness Unlimited Telephone Company. If you know the extension of the party you wish to speak to, you may key it in at any time. If you do not have that number, dial 233-5570 or 554-6784. If you wish to talk to the service department, ring 312-6789 or if you have questions regarding a bill, dial 908-7654 or 345-7890.

If you prefer to speak to the advertising department, or public relations, then ring (800) 234-5670. If you get a busy signal, drop the 800 and add area code 301 instead.

Any questions regarding the environment will be answered by calling our branch office in Toronto. You can obtain this number by requesting information through our Atlanta substation (900) 345-789-0000."

I wasn't having much luck finding Dumphries, so I telephoned his wife at home. She gave me his direct line at work, 897-6550.

My problem was far from solved. When I dialed his extension I got the recorded voice of Dumphries, "This is Harcourt Dumphries. I am sorry I am not at my desk right now. If you wish to leave a message, you may do so at the sound of the beep, and I will get back to you. If you don't hear from me within three days, call my secretary at 456-7800. If she's not there, you can leave a message with the receptionist at 403-4557. You'll know you have reached the correct number because she always plays 'Ride of the Valkyries' on her line when she asks you to wait."

Dumphries did not get back to me, so I called him again. He told me that he had received my call on his answering service but he could not return it because the tape jammed up.

"What gives with the direct dialing?" I asked.

"The company installed it for 10,000 employees because it enabled Darkness to lay off two telephone operators and save $1,200 a year."

"But it's so impersonal," I protested. "A caller feels a terrible loss trying to get through to the person he wants to contact."

"That's because you don't pay enough attention when you phone us. We give you the choice of every telephone number in the system. Next month we're going to put out a company phone book which you can buy for $9.95. Direct dialing is the wave of the future. The more live people a company eliminates from its telephone system payroll, the more efficient that company will become."

"No doubt, but I'm old-fashioned and I feel a lot less helpless when I hear a human voice at the other end of the line. Why couldn't customers have a choice the same as in restaurants? Instead of 'Smoking' or 'Non-Smoking' – we could choose 'Human' voice or 'Recorded' one. It would be wonderful for your clients."

Dumphries said, "We are not going to placate customers who are against computer technology. Direct dialing has been a breakthrough comparable to man landing on the moon. Just because the public is confused doesn't mean that the system is unworkable. The money saved is channeled into research to find better ways of dialing people without having to go through the switchboard.

"We try very hard to make our recorded voices sound human. We auditioned 200 applicants before we found a woman who could give us the perfect, 'All our lines are busy, please do not hang up.'"

Environment series provided insight

Thanks to Myra Salcedo and everyone involved with the informative and insightful articles on the environment. Myra has obviously done her homework! As one who has followed these issues over the past 15 years, I recognize the numerous and varied sources from which she has extracted information to compile her series.

I hope the Midland Reporter-Telegram can continue this service and keep us informed and educated. Perhaps a column or two on local happenings regarding environmental issues is called for to keep the momentum strong and cater to the many diverse groups in the area.

May I also mention that I enjoy the new Midland Reporter-Telegram format?

One final note: I am very concerned with the practices of the Meat and Dairy Industry. Unfortunately, those involved with animal agriculture have not been able to monitor their own business practices. We now have a "crazy and immoral" industry involved in raising veal never to see the light of day, shooting our meat foodstuff with over 55 percent of all the antibiotics manufactured, resulting in disease-resistant strains not to mention the steroids and pesticide residues found in over 99 percent of U.S. women's breastmilk (35 times higher than vegetarian moms), encouraging poor farmers in South America to slash and burn precious ecosystems that can't be replaced in our lifetime (while they eat less meat than the average U.S. housecat), and on and on.

I suggest John Robbins' book "Diet For A New America." In this age of information, there's really no excuse for ignorance on this matter. Most people in Biblical times ate very little meat, if any, and most of the world today consumes a rational amount of meat, if any.

Watching cattle graze peacefully in the West Texas sunset does not represent the practices of the American meat industry on the whole.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, May 23, the 143rd day of 1990. There are 222 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 23, 1934, bank robbers Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow were shot to death in a police ambush as they rode inside a stolen Ford Deluxe on a road in Bienville Parish, La.

On this date:

In 1430, Joan of Arc was captured by the Burgundians, who sold her to the English.

In 1533, the marriage of England's King Henry VIII to Catherine of Aragon was declared null and void.

In 1701, Capt. William Kidd was hanged in London after he was convicted of piracy and murder.

In 1788, South Carolina became the eighth state to ratify the United States Constitution.

In 1873, Canada's North West Mounted Police force was established.

In 1937, industrialist John D. Rockefeller died in Ormond Beach, Fla.

Naive horse trading betters Soviet stable

WASHINGTON — Why do you suppose Secretary of State James Baker's self-congratulations after his magisterial ministerial in Moscow — "real accomplishments," some "heavy lifting" — was met by a cool comment, "mixed reviews," from President Bush?

Safire

More is involved than a president's pique at being cast as a supernumerary at his own summit. Bush knows that Baker's claim to have "split the difference" with the Soviets is untrue; the vaunted negotiator caved in to basic Gorbachev demands all the way down the line.

Only a few months ago, Bush was making plain that his primary goal in foreign affairs — that great end for which he was willing to so prudently ignore the economic coercion in the Baltics, and to make valuable trade concessions in advance to the desperate Soviet economy — was to get the Soviet Army out of Eastern Europe, perhaps even demobilized, so as to make perestroika truly "irreversible" without a new invasion.

A strictly secondary goal was a new agreement limiting nuclear missiles, an area in which both superpowers spend only one-seventh of their arms budgets.

Our central purpose in that was to end the worst destabilizer of all: the Soviet monopoly on land-based, accurate intercontinental SS-18 heavy missiles, over 300 of which are always at the ready 30 minutes from the U.S.

In contrast, the central Soviet purpose was to delay promised withdrawal from Eastern Europe, including 600,000 troops in East Germany, until Germany could be neutralized.

The other Gorbachev goal was to focus on strategic arms reduction — not, as Bush hoped, on conventional troop drawdowns — to maintain the Soviet heavy missile advantage, and to stop the improvement of America's potentially countervailing cruise missiles.

On the eve of the Bush formalization of the Baker accords, where does each nation stand?

The U.S., dealing from a position of unprecedented relative strength, has failed to obtain what Bush used to say was our first priority: the end of the Red Army's occupation of Eastern Europe.

Forget about that conventional forces treaty; in the forgiving Baker formulation, "our counterparts apparently weren't able to respond meaningfully at this time."

The Soviet Union, having succeeded in changing the subject to nuclear arms, proceeded to take Baker to the cleaners on that.

Moscow retained the right to test and modernize its SS-18; even after reducing their number by half, the improved SS-18's will be as powerful a threat as today's 308 intercontinental missiles.

How about banning all land-based Mirved missiles? Don't even suggest it.

Nor would the Soviets then budge on the range of our air-launched cruise missiles.

The negotiating breakthrough claimed by our side — the allowance of our 770-km missile, "Tacit Rainbow" — is vitiated by the Bush promise, in a side letter, not to modernize.

We're way ahead of the Soviets in cruise technology; space-guided cruises with conventional warheads could knock out tank columns without devastating civilian areas.

To give up the right to improve our newest defensive weapon, while giving the Soviets the right to improve their most fearsome offensive weapon, is naive horse-trading.

How did Gorby do it? His strategy was daringly Orwellian: weakness is strength .

He stressed his political fragility and his economic straits; he pointed in horror to the sinister forces who would take over unless he had a free hand in Europe.

Incredibly, paralyzed by fear of the who-lost-Gorbachev charge, the Bush administration fell into the trap.

Gorbachev gets what he wants on upgrading his SS-18's, freezing our cruises, denying our on-site verification of production facilities, protecting his intercontinental Backfire bomber, and occupying Eastern Europe.

We get to offer trade and aid, to turn a blind eye to repression, and to say the cold war is over.

Armenians plan to protest Gorbachev's Bay area visit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Opera singers want to serenade Mikhail Gorbachev, a school is eager to put on a play for him, and businessmen hope to get close enough to whisper a few words about terrific deals.

But not everyone is planning a warm welcome for the Soviet leader when he arrives for a visit to Stanford University and the San Francisco Bay area June 3-4.

Gorbachev will make a six-hour stop in Minnesota and visit California after meeting with President Bush for summit talks in Washington. The visit will include speeches at Stanford and lunch in San Francisco with executives of 150 West Coast businesses, Mayor Art Agnos and Gov. George Deukmejian.

The Armenian community, with 20,000 people in the region, plans demonstrations to protest military rule and alleged human rights violations in Nagorno-Karabagh, an autonomous province in Soviet Azerbaijan.

Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians also are preparing protests to demand the independence of the Baltic states.

"We want (Gorbachev) to see what he's doing is really wrong, especially the (economic) blockade," of Lithuania, said Joe Sidas, of the new Baltic Alliance, an umbrella group for various organizations of the nearly 5,000 Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians in the Bay area.

Riho Martinson, vice mayor of Foster City who fled by boat to Sweden from his native Estonia in 1944, said he hoped local demonstrations would show Gorbachev "there are immense benefits both to the Soviet Union and the independent Baltic States from granting them independence ..."

The Soviet Jews Bay Area Council, angry about "virulent anti-Semitism" in the Soviet Union, considered protests, but decided not to because it wanted to acknowledge Soviet progress on Jewish issues, said spokesman Marshall Platt.

Instead, the council plans to collect petitions outside the Soviet consulate before Gorbachev's arrival and ask the consulate to submit them to him.

On Tuesday, local hosts and Soviet officials confirmed the scheduling of several events.

Gorbachev is to arrive the night of June 3, and meet for breakfast June 4 with former President Reagan and former Secretary of State George P. Shultz. Then he is to speak to the Stanford community during a visit to the campus from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and speak at a luncheon sponsored by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce with corporate executives, Agnos and Deukmejian.

Offers of American hospitality and entrepreneurship were rife.

Gorbachev's visit coincides with a previously planned "Soviet Silicon Summit" in Santa Clara, June 4-14, that will bring together leading Soviet and U.S. high-technology business leader to build trade relations.

Mark Muchnik, president of Global Development Corp., a co-sponsor of the event, said he's been talking with Soviet officials to get Gorbachev as a dinner speaker June 4. If Gorbachev agrees, Muchnik thinks he can pull together more than 2,000 executives to give the Soviet leader an important audience to develop business relations.

Inventors are calling Stanford, saying they have just the thing to revolutionize Soviet society. Artists want to donate works to hang behind him when he delivers a speech.

People want to camp out on campus, and no doubt there will be T-shirts, Soviet-American friendship plates and coffee mugs for sale.

Open cable market is 'imminent'

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal Communications Commission Chairman Alfred Sikes told cable television executives Tuesday that an era of increased competition is imminent in their industry.

The head of an industry association said, however, that he still believes Washington will avoid drastic regulatory changes.

Sikes told a meeting of the National Cable Television Association that it should accept government action to open the marketplace. The cable industry has been deregulated since 1984, though both Congress and the FCC currently are considering steps to reimpose some regulation.

"You cannot expect government to continue sanctioning, indeed, protecting and promoting cable as a sole-source provider of video services while at the same time foregoing the regulation that historically has been placed on monopoly operations," Sikes said.

"The American people, in short, will not tolerate an unregulated monopoly indefinitely."

Though cable TV has soared in popularity over the last decade — it is now received in 57.1 percent of all U.S. homes with television — the industry has been beset recently by complaints from consumers about poor service and rising rates.

Sikes said that during a visit last week to his home state of Missouri, he was besieged by questions — from people who usually care little about FCC issues — regarding cable TV.

The FCC is scheduled to take up cable issues at its July 26 meeting.

NCTA President James P. Mooney, whose association is holding its annual convention this week in Atlanta, said following Sikes' speech that the FCC chairman shed little new light for him on the cable regulation issue.

"I think we can say today it looks highly likely that Congress will support a moderate cable policy," Mooney told the NCTA gathering Monday.

If the cable industry resists opening the marketplace, it could find itself in a utility-style regulatory environment that would inhibit entrepreneurs, Sikes said.

MISD school meal prices to go up

■ Raising the price of student breakfasts and lunches is necessary to cover the payroll, rising food prices and a reduction in federal subsidies, MISD food service director says.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Although school lunches next year will cost more than ever, Midland Independent School District Food Services Director Patricia Grillos said the meals will remain a bargain.

"Where else can you go to buy a meal that's well-balanced for $1.25?" she asked.

Lunch prices will increase 15 cents and breakfast prices will increase 5 cents at all grade levels under a plan approved Tuesday by MISD trustees. Adult meal prices also will increase.

Ms. Grillos said the increases are necessary to cover payroll expenses, rising food prices, and a $100,000 reduction in federal cheese and milk donations.

She said she expects her department's budget to increase from $3.5 million this year to $3.8 million for 1990-91. The meal price hike will cover about half of the $300,000 increase, Ms. Grillos said.

Increases in federal subsidies should cover the rest, she said. About half of the food service budget comes from federal subsidies, she said.

Elementary school lunch prices will go from $1.10 to $1.25, a 13.6 percent increase. Secondary lunches will go from $1.20 to $1.35, up 12.5 percent.

Breakfast prices will go from 60 cents to 65 cents at all grade levels. Adult lunch prices will go from $1.50 to $1.75, and adult breakfast prices will go from 80 cents to 85 cents.

Lunch prices jumped a dime last year as well — from $1 to $1.10 in elementary school and from $1.10 to $1.20 in secondary schools. Prior to that, lunch prices had not increased since the 1984-85 school year, when they went up 5 cents at the elementary level and 10 cents at the secondary level, district figures show.

Ms. Grillos said a bigger increase is needed this year than in years past because fewer students are buying school lunches. However, the number of students receiving federally subsidized free and reduced-price lunches has gone up, she said.

Ms. Grillos predicted that Ector County Independent School District meal prices will go up next year as well, but the ECISD food services director was not available for comment Tuesday.

ECISD meal prices are 50 cents for elementary and secondary school breakfast, $1 for elementary lunch and $1.10 for secondary lunch.

Ms. Grillos cautioned against comparing MISD meal prices with those in other districts, however.

"You really can't compare the price of the meal in Midland and the price of the meal in Odessa," she said. "Midland's food service operation is self-sufficient, Odessa's is not."

She added that, in addition to being district subsidized, ECISD receives more federal dollars to pay for free and reduced-price meals for underprivileged students.

Parents want freshmen to be able to compete

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Are talented freshman athletes in Midland being denied the opportunity to fully develop their potential?

Some parents think so, and expressed that opinion to Midland Independent School District trustees Tuesday night.

They asked trustees to consider combining Midland and Lee freshman high schools with their respective senior high schools so ninth-graders can compete on varsity sports teams.

"We want the children who are capable of participating on a varsity level to be allowed to do that," said Bo Fennell, whose daughter will enter Midland Freshman High School next fall. "Are we giving all of our kids an equal opportunity to be the best they can?"

Fennell and others also complained about the lack of ninth-grade swimming, golf and tennis programs. They said freshman participants in these sports should be allowed to join the teams at Lee and Midland high school.

However, University Interscholastic League rules prohibit students who are not from the same school to be on the same team in UIL events.

Midland's freshman schools are not considered part of their respective senior high schools under UIL rules because each school has its own principal, said Maridell Fryar, MISD instructional services director.

"We're not talking about a situation in which freshmen have no opportunity to participate," Ms. Fryar said. She said freshmen compete against Odessa teams in football, basketball, volleyball and track.

"They do not have competitive opportunities in the swimming, tennis and golf areas," she conceded. "It is there that the gap exists and in which the developmental program may be lacking."

She said freshman bands can compete as non-varsity participants in state meets.

Alma Marshall, MISD human resource services coordinator, said changing the relationship of the freshman schools to the high schools might require court approval.

Midland is under a court-ordered desegregation plan which mandated the existence of the freshman schools.

For Midland freshmen to qualify for varsity competition under UIL rules, the freshman schools would have to be placed under the administrative control of the senior highs.

Ricardo Torres, MISD secondary operations director, said he did not support this idea.

"What has been proposed ... seems to affect a very small number of kids, and given that it affects such a small number of kids I would not favor a change," he said.

Trustees were not scheduled to take any action on parents' requests Tuesday evening.

Council approves buying $2.5 million police radio system

■ General Electric System will cut outside chatter and replace a 40-year-old communications system.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland police officers will come in louder and clearer than ever before through a $2.5 million radio system approved by city councilmen Tuesday, Chief Richard Czech said.

City Council unanimously awarded a contract to General Electric Co. for the system, which should be unleashed on the public safety airwaves by April 1991.

The system will be void of outside radio chatter and include five channels for the city, five for Midland International Airport and three for the new communication center at 601 N. Loraine St.

The center will house the Midland Police Department and enhanced 911 dispatchers by January 1991. All 911 calls now go to center dispatchers, who relay the call to fire, police, ambulance or Midland County Sheriff's Office officials.

Czech said the system has the capacity to meet the radio needs for all emergency agencies.

With the system in place, the city's communication center will be "a showplace for the United States," he said.

"We chose General Electric because we think we're getting more for our dollars," Czech said. "If we're going to spend that kind of money, we want to be on the cutting edge. We're going to have the finest system money can buy."

The chief said the city's current radio system is about 40 years old.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the system represents a major modernization for emergency services.

"It's going to improve efficiency," Thomas said. "In addition, we're able to bring in the sheriff's office."

In other action at Tuesday's meeting, councilmen awarded a contract for $1.9 million in certificates of obligation to First Southwest Co. of Dallas.

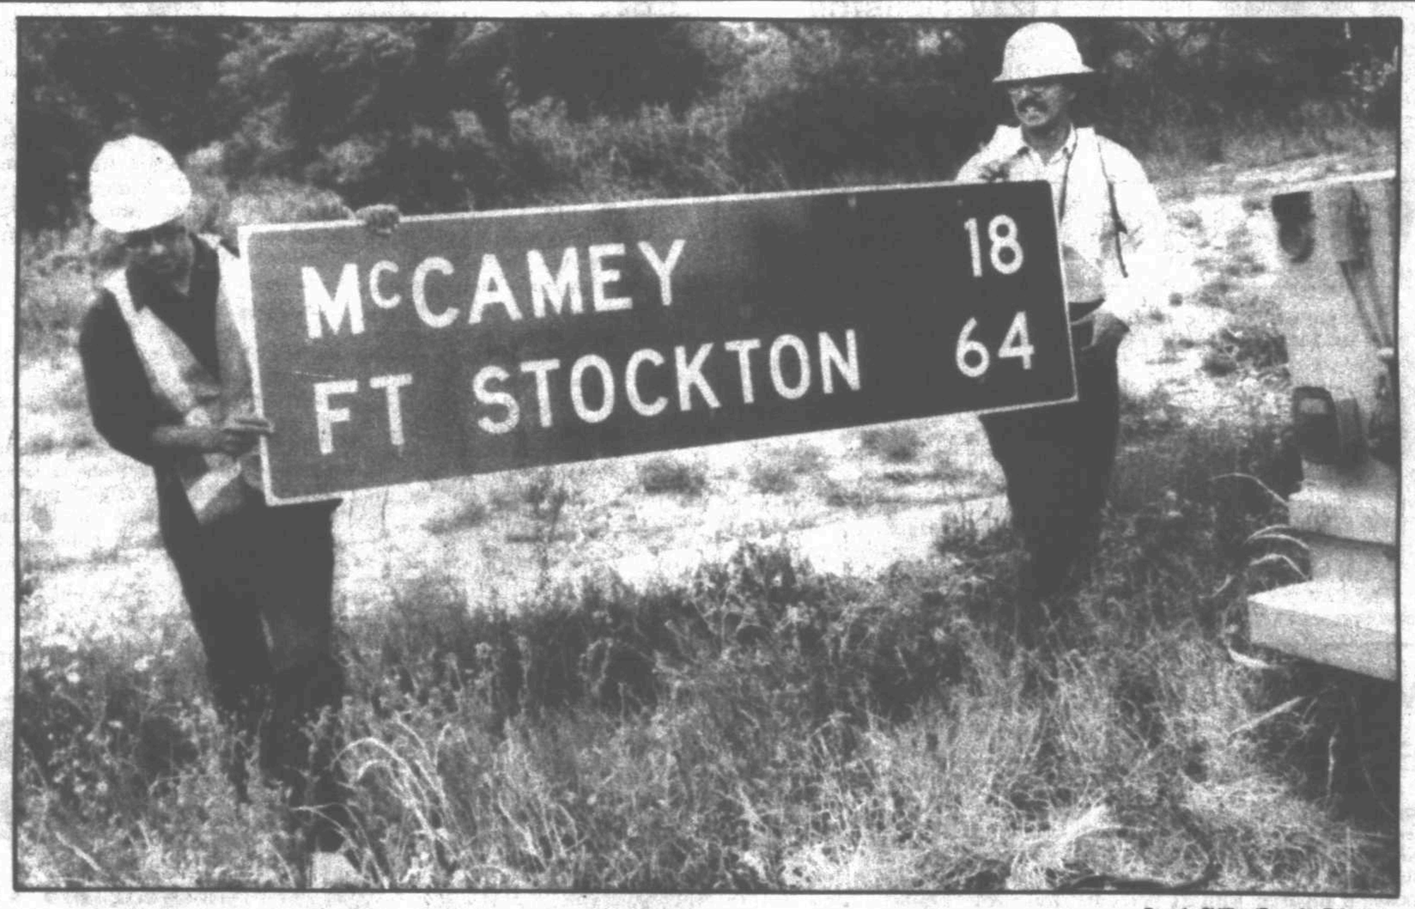

The company offered a 6.95 percent interest rate on the certificates, the lowest among the 11 bidders.

The $1.9 million will help pay for a new animal shelter, a senior citizens center for southeast Midland residents and remaining Loraine Center construction, city councilmen and managers have decided.

City officials have said construction on the $350,000 animal shelter is expected to begin in late November.

The $378,500 senior citizens center, to be located in Washington Park, south of East Highway 80 off East Indiana Avenue, will be completed in January 1991, officials have said.

About $1.2 million of the certificates money will be used to finish remodeling at the Loraine Center, officials have said.

Man accused of moving body released on bond

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Donald Wayne Bleckler, 31, who was indicted for allegedly helping move the strangled body of 8-year-old Gloria Castillo, was released from the Ector County Jail on $55,000 bond Monday, jail officials said.

Only $5,000 of Bleckler's bond was for the misdemeanor charge of "abuse of a corpse," in which he and the parents of Gloria Castillo are accused of moving the girl's body. Jose and Ninefa Castillo, and Bleckler were indicted May 7 by the Ector County grand jury for moving the body, following an accidental strangulation, sometime after the girl's reported disappearance April 14.

The Castillos have maintained that their daughter, whose decomposed body was discovered a week after her disappearance in a field about five miles from her home, was abducted.

The majority of Bleckler's bond — $50,000 — was for two felony counts of sexual assault of a child. Although the child is said to be a relative of Gloria and the indictments were handed down the same time as the misdemeanor charges, law enforcement authorities said the alleged assaults are unrelated to the death of Gloria.

Bleckler waived the right to an arraignment for the assault charges Monday, court officials said. An arraignment is held to read the accused their indictment and make sure they understand the charges.

Bleckler's pretrial hearing is scheduled for June 27 and trial is set for July 9 in 244th State District Court, officials said.

Midland employment improves slightly

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's employment picture showed marginal improvement in April, while the jobless rate in Odessa headed higher, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

According to the TEC, Midland's unemployment rate dropped a tenth of a percent, to 5.1 percent from 5.2 percent in March. The rate in April 1989 was 6.1 percent.

Odessa's unemployment rate rose from 5.9 percent in March to 6.3 percent in April, but was still down from the 8.4 percent rate seen last April.

"It's about the same, just a tenth of a percent — that's about 100 people," said Meris Kidd, office manager of the TEC's Midland office.

She noted, however, that her office was seeing fewer claims, and attributed that to two possibilities:

■ Employment in Midland is improving; and

■ Unemployed Midlanders have exhausted their claims and can't file again.

Asked why Midland's employment picture improved while Odessa's worsened, Kidd replied that "I think we're seeing more professional jobs being created."

The TEC reported that Midland's civilian labor force totaled 48,600 in April, up from 48,500 in March, but down from 49,400 a year ago.

Total employment was 46,100, up from 46,000 a month earlier and near the April 1989 total of 46,400. Total unemployment held steady at 2,500 a second month, and was down from the 3,000 reported last year.

In Odessa, the labor force totaled 50,600, down from 50,700 the previous month, and from 52,100 a year ago.

Total employment in Odessa was 47,400, down from 47,700, which was the total last April. Total unemployment was to 3,200 from 3,000 in March, but was still better than the 4,400 reported in April 1989.

Midland's employment rate helped raise its ranking among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas. Midland was ranked sixth, along with Waco and Sherman-Dennison. The Tall City had ranked 10th in March.

Odessa was ranked 10th, tied with Corpus Christi. The city had ranked 14th the previous month.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment rate in the state, 3.4 percent, followed by Lubbock with 4.2 percent. Victoria was third with 4.5 percent, and Fort Worth-Arlington was fourth with 4.8 percent. Dallas and Houston tied for fifth place with 4.9 percent each. The highest unemployment rate was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission, with 19.5 percent — down from 21.7 percent a month ago.

The state unemployment rate rose slightly, from 5.7 percent to 6 percent.

Statewide, April unemployment totaled 499,200, up from March's 472,500, the TEC said.

Sharp campaign rolls through Tall City

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp brought his campaign for state comptroller to Midland Tuesday.

Sharp told a gathering of local supporters he wanted to become comptroller because he would be able to have more impact on what happens in the state.

"The comptroller's office controls the state finances, and is able to impact just about whatever happens in the state," said Sharp. "If the comptroller does not sign off on a piece of legislation, it takes a four-fifths vote of both Houses to pass a bill."

He added that the two bills he sponsored to give companies incentive for enhanced oil recovery programs would not have stood a chance if Comptroller Bob Bullock had not signed on to the bills.

Sharp said the office of comptroller has a virtual de facto veto when it came to most legislation.

Still he feels the office does not have enough authority.

"If I were comptroller," said Sharp, "I would want authority to hire independent auditing firms to audit each school district for management performance to make sure the money they were getting was well spent."

He continued: "Part of the job of comptroller is to collect state revenues, the other part is to assure the taxpayers that it is being wisely spent. I don't think the people feel their money is being wisely spent."

Sharp also feels the comptroller's office should be involved in economic development in the state.

"The office can provide firms looking to move into a particular community all the information they need to execute an economic profile of that community."

A conservative Democrat, Sharp said he thought he would carry Midland, because of all the support he has given to the oil industry during his term on the Texas Railroad Commission.

He noted that he had been the fifth most conservative member of the Texas Senate and had won the support of the Texas Young Conservatives and had been honored by numerous oil and gas associations including the American Gas Association and the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners.

ANDREWS — Rosemary Hicks, 59, of Andrews, died in a Houston hospital Monday.

Graveside services will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday with the Rev. Don Laird, pastor of First Assembly of God Church, officiating. Burial will be at the Andrews Cemetery under the direction of Singleton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Hicks, a homemaker, was born August 16, 1930, in Roswell, N.M. She married R.J. Hicks in 1947 in Roswell. He preceded her in death on May 4, 1990.

Survivors include two sons, Jerry Hicks of Andrews, Donnie Hicks of Midland; a daughter, Sharon Pipkin of Houston; and seven grandchildren.

Lizzy Houston

Services for Lizzy Houston, 109, of Midland are pending with Baker-Jackson Funeral Home.

She died Monday at a local hospital.

Convicted Odessan waives first hearing

Staff Report

A preliminary hearing to determine whether a revocation hearing should be held for Willie Hammond, 49, was waived by the defense Tuesday.

Hammond, a former Ector County commissioner, is accused of violating rules of his probation imposed after a U.S. district court conviction in 1985 for malicious destruction of a building, an arson-related charge.

Because the U.S. magistrate hearing went uncontested, a revocation hearing will be scheduled in the U.S. district court. A date has not been set, according to the district clerk's office.

Following the hearing, Hammond, who is free on $25,000 bond, told a group of reporters that he violated his probation by not informing probation officers that he changed residence. "I didn't know I had to tell them," he added.

"A lot of personal things have happened to me in the last two or three months," Hammond said, adding that he did not report to his probation officer for two months.

Hammond would not elaborate on the nature of those personal problems.

The probation violation charge stems from allegedly not reporting to the U.S. probation office for three months, failure to pay a $10,00 fine, and moving without giving notification.

Trinity School expanding

Staff Report

Groundbreaking on a $5.2 million expansion of Trinity School, 3500 W. Wadley Ave., is scheduled for 2 p.m. today.

The five-year expansion project, which will include an enlargement of the school's secondary division, is expected to pump $15 million directly into the local economy, school officials predict.

The phased construction was developed in conjunction with the local architectural and planning firm Rhotenberry Wellen to meet three objectives: immediate space requirments, future building needs and continuity of construction.

The $579,000 first phase of construction will address the immediate need for classrooms for grades four through six, officials said. Several subsequent projects will depend other moves before they can be completed.

Joe Willard Wiley, 27, is wanted for violation of probation on a burglary of a vehicle charge. Wiley is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs about 170 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

Jennifer Shores, 20, is wanted for violation of probation on a burglary of a habitation charge. Shores is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs about 110 pounds and has brown hair and brown eyes.

Terrie Golden, 25, aka Terry Golden Royals, is wanted for violation of probation on a tampering with government records charge. Golden is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs about 137 pounds and has black hair and brown eyes.

BODY: Pretrial set for June 27

(From 1B)

Arraignment on the misdemeanor charges for the Castillos has been set for June 13, according to officials in the county attorney's office.

In addition to the abuse charges, the Castillos also were charged with making false reports to the Ector County Sheriff's Department and perjury, both misdemeanors.

According to law enforcement officials and testimony in a custody hearing for the Castillo children on May 5, Gloria was strangled by a rope attached to a post in the trailer park where she lived. Gloria's brother told sheriff officials that he saw his parents and Bleckler remove Gloria's body, lay it on a porch and put it in a pickup truck, officials said.

The Castillos deny the story, according to their lawyer and law enforcement officials.

MEALS: Odessa food service less expensive but subsidized

(From 1B)

Some 41 percent of ECISD students qualify for free or reduced meals, compared with 31 percent in MISD.

In other action Tuesday, trustees approved hiring three architectural firms to design a proposed elementary school and a number of school expansion projects. Estimated cost of the projects, expected to appear on a fall bond election ballot, is $12 million.

Associated Architects of Midland was hired to design and oversee construction of a new elementary school, expansion of the Lee High School library and renovations of Lee's science labs.

Vandergriff Group of Midland was hired to design an alternative center for dropouts and at-risk students. The company also will oversee science lab renovations at Midland High School and Lee Freshman High School.

Trustee George Staley cast the lone vote against hiring Vandergriff.

"I'd really rather not get into it other than to say there were some things in the last bond election that I didn't agree with that he (Vandergriff) was in charge of," Staley said.

Trustees also hired Harden Architects of Fort Worth to design additions to Bush Elementary School and multipurpose rooms and pods for 11 other MISD elementary schools.

Board members had voted to enter negotiations with these firms at a May 12 meeting.

In other action Tuesday, trustees elected Ken Morrison board president, James Fuller vice president and Larry Rusk secretary.

Honored teacher suspended

FORT WORTH (AP) — Reports that the Fort Worth Teacher of the Year hit her fourth-grade students without proper consent were brought up by disgruntled parents, says the leader of a teachers' association.

Joyce Williams was suspended with pay pending an investigation into allegations that she used her hand and a yardstick to strike students on the back, buttocks and arm.

Ms. Williams, 58, a teacher at Benbrook Elementary School, has taught in Fort Worth public schools for 22 years and at Benbrook for the last seven years.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Odessa store clerk robbed at gunpoint

Staff Report

ODESSA — A convenience store clerk was robbed at gunpoint about 1 a.m. Tuesday morning, Odessa police officials said.

Christopher L. Grissom was working at the Kent Kwik, 4203 N. Grandview Ave., when the suspect entered the store inquiring how late beer was sold, police said. After Grissom told the man that it was too late to purchase beer, the suspect unsuccessfully tried to persuade Grissom to do so, police said.

At this point, the suspect pulled out a small black semi-automatic handgun and demanded all the money in the store, police said. An undetermined amount of money was taken from two cash registers and a safe, police reported.

The robber was described as a white man in his mid-20s, about 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing about 140 pounds with collar length sandy blond hair and a thick mustache, police said. The suspect was said to be wearing wire-rimmed glasses, a yellow terry-cloth V-neck shirt, black jeans and boots, and a multicolored welder's cap, officials said.

Pyote men arrested

ODESSA — Two men wanted for aggravated robbery in Pyote were arrested here Tuesday, Odessa police said.

Robert James Scaringe, 40, and Paulino Alberto Guzman, 35, were in the Odessa jail each under a $25,000 bond set by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, police said. Both were in the process of being transferred to authorities in Ward County Tuesday afernoon, police said.

The men were apprehended after they asked an off-duty police officer watering his lawn where they could purchase drugs, police said.

Shortly thereafter police stopped the suspects and discovered they were driving a stolen truck and had outstanding warrants for aggravated robbery, officials said.

Dynagen strike averted

ODESSA — A strike by employees of Dynagen Corp. of Odessa was narrowly averted Tuesday when a contract agreement was reached ten minutes before the contract was set to expire at midnight Tuesday.

A spokesman for United Rubber Worker's Local 1124 said the strike would provide workers at the Dynagen plant better wages and benefits. He said that wages would increase $1.50 an hour the first year and 40 cents per hour the second and third year of the contract.

Dynagen Corp. is a division of General Tire Co. of Akron, Ohio.

Odessan re-appointed

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday reappointed Charles R. Perry of Odessa to the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission.

Perry's term will end Feb. 1, 1995.

Perry, 60, is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Perry Management Inc., Betona Aviation Inc. and Rivercourse Development Inc. He earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from the University of Oklahoma.

Perry is a member of the board of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, national president of the Council for a Secure America and chairman of the board of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. He is a former director of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

Blacks seek school official's ouster

EL PASO (AP) — A coalition of black community groups wants Ron McLeod, El Paso Independent School District superintendent, fired because they claim he is ineffective and insensitive to black teachers and students.

McLeod's ouster is being sought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance and the United Baptist Alliance. The two church groups represent about 50 congregations in El Paso.

"The whole board should stand for the people they represent or fall with McLeod," said the Rev. Johnnie Washington, president of the local NAACP.

McLeod has headed the 64,000-student district for 11 years, and is one of seven semifinalists for the superintendent's job in the Clear Creek Independent School District near Houston.

The Texas Education Agency in a recent accreditation report contended the El Paso district is failing to help black and Hispanic children pass the state's basic skills test. The state agency recently lowered EPISD's accreditation from "accredited" to "accredited-advised."

Flood victims crowd Red Cross assistance centers

HARDIN (AP) — Dozens of people forced from their homes by Trinity River flooding during the past two weeks lined up at Red Cross disaster assistance centers that opened Tuesday.

"You've got to laugh to keep from crying," Martha West said while waiting to be interviewed by Red Cross workers. "We don't know when this is going to stop. And if the water stands in our house long, all the floors are going to be rotted away and you're just going to have to build a new house."

In a second phase of its assistance program, the Red Cross is hoping to help flood victims out of agency shelters and back on their feet.

Five centers serving seven flood-ravaged southeast Texas counties began interviews Tuesday to arrange food deliveries, clothing, temporary housing, household furnishings, medical aid or other needs.

"We've got a madhouse here," said R.C. Sadler, who was directing the operations at the Hardin center, serving victims who live on the east side of the Trinity River. "But we were prepared. We knew what to expect."

People began queuing up hours before the center opened at 10 a.m., prompting Sadler to pass out numbers to those waiting in line so they could come later in the day. An hour after opening, Sadler was into the 60s.

"I've got five kids and couldn't get anybody to rent to me because of that," said Melba Scott, 24, who's been out of her South Liberty Oilfield home for two weeks. "I need a place to stay."

She was No. 23 in line and was waiting outside the Red Cross center under a shade trce for her turn to come.

"We waded in and out of our home last year but it wasn't as bad as this year," she said.

"I've got 30 inches of water in my house and everything I've got is there," said Hubert Zimmerman, who said he had a bad heart and was unable to lift household items to get them out. "I would sure like to get out of there."

City workers and volunteers form an assembly line for unloading sandbags around the Travis Park subdivision in Liberty Tuesday. The Trinity River continues to run at record levels.

"That's our home — our pride and joy. It's all we've got," added Anna Langley. "How are you going to start over again on a pension?"

Besides arranging for temporary housing, the Red Cross was distributing vouchers that would enable victims to purchase new furniture or find contractors to repair homes once the waters receded.

The Red Cross has estimated that more than 4,600 homes have been affected by flooding in Liberty, Polk, San Jacinto, Madison, Houston, Trinity and Walker counties, which are among 41 Texas counties eligible for disaster aid. The agency also has sheltered more than 500 people and provided meals to some 9,000 since the river was forced from its banks by torrential rains more than two weeks ago some 200 miles to the north.

"We hope we're peaking out," Jim Mitchum, Liberty County emergency management coordinator, said. "It should now start spreading out into the backwaters because there's no banks left for floodwaters to fill. It's flowing into places it has never gone before."

When the Trinity River filled Lake Livingston to record high levels, operators of a dam at the southern edge of the lake began releasing record amounts of water into the lower Trinity, flooding areas downstream.

Along the middle Trinity, north of the lake, water levels were reported down some two feet.

Trinity River Authority officials on Tuesday lowered the dam release to 93,600 cubic feet per second, down from 96,000 cfs on Monday and down from a peak of 100,800 cfs that began last week. One cubic square foot of water equals 7.5 gallons.

No deaths or injuries have been blamed on the floods in southeast Texas, although damage is likely to be in the tuns of millions of dollars, officials have said.

"We've boated through the house," said Lucille Flynn, whose house contains 42 inches of water, and who was seeking help from the Red Cross on Tuesday. "Our children are scattered. Our dogs are scattered. We can't keep anything together.

"We've all cried and hollered and screamed. What else are you going to do?"

El Paso DWI arrest, conviction records poor, MADD claims

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso lags behind three other comparable counties in arresting and prosecuting DWI offenders, state statistics show.

"If I ever get arrested for DWI, I want my case venue changed to El Paso," said Mike Walthall of the state Office of Court Administration in Austin. "That's what the conviction numbers tell me."

El Paso County trails Bexar (San Antonio), Travis (Austin), and Tarrant (Fort Worth) in DWI arrests along with misdemeanor and felony DWI convictions through 1989, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety and the State Office of Court Administration.

"El Paso is probably the softest on DWIs," said Ann Sledd Vigil, victims services coordinator for the state office Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

"Especially since El Paso is the only large Texas county that still uses pretrial diversion. That shows

"If I ever get arrested for DWI, I want my case venue changed to El Paso. That's what the conviction numbers tell me."

— Mike Walthall, Office of Court Administration

El Paso certainly searched for ways to get DWIs off peoples' records — when other counties did away with deferred adjudication."

Deferred adjudication keeps first-time DWI convictions off of criminal records after offenders complete non-jail sentences. Convicted DWI offenders do community service and take classes in exchange for clean driving and criminal records.

El Paso and Tarrant each have about 4,000 pending cases. Travis and Bexar each have about 7,000 cases pending.

"Those numbers on pending cases need to be questioned," said Nueces County prosecutor Dick Barry in Corpus Christi.

"These backlogs are due to two reasons: either prosecutors are not pushing cases or the courts and prosecutors are not pushing the defense attorneys to bring their clients to trial," he said. "It seems like El Paso is getting a reputation."

Nueces County had 45 DWI felony convictions in 1987 and 42 last year.

Only Tarrant recorded an increase in DWI arrests last year while Bexar and Travis had moderate declines in DWI arrests since 1987. El Paso had the largest drop in DWI arrests, from 3,823 in 1987 to 2,292 in 1989.

Lamar Smith seeks FBI probe of HUD centers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two congressmen say the FBI should investigate the Department of Housing and Urban Development's backing of retirement centers that are either in default on their loans or in financial trouble.

"The FBI needs to be into the retirement center affair all across the nation," said U.S. Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio.

"They need to be looking into each project as a part of a whole, not as individual projects."

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, called the retirement center funds "money wasted and possibly misused."

They responded to a report that an internal HUD probe had uncovered $600 million in failed or financially troubled retirement home projects backed by the federal agency.

HUD auditors cited Independence Hill Retirement Community in San Antonio as an example. Independence Hill is a $14.8 million, 250-unit project that has had only 20 residents and was in foreclosure in February.

A HUD audit showed financial problems in the agency's co-insurance program, which allowed private institutions to back mortgages on retirement centers.

"We identified approximately 190 HUD fully insured and co-insured (retirement centers) nationwide with mortgages totaling $1.6 billion," said one HUD inspector general's report.

"Calling it a scandal would be putting it mildly," Bustamante said Tuesday.

Smith, whose district includes Midland, said the Justice Department should spare no effort to determine what caused the multi-million-dollar leak in the federal budget.

In a February letter to C. Austin Fitts, the federal housing commissioner at HUD, Bustamante and Smith demanded to know what happened to $3.6 million in mortgage proceeds that were never put into the Independence Hill project, and what happened to $773,000 in Bexar County bond proceeds that the project never received.

Minority enrollment shows small increase at college

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Minority enrollment showed a slight increase at Midland College while it was mixed at Odessa College, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board said Tuesday.

Midland College reported an increase in enrollment from 3,680 in fall 1988 to 3,863 in fall 1989, with an increase of two black students, to 180, and an increase of 24 Hispanic students, to 519.

Blacks were 4.7 percent of the total enrollment, while Hispanics were 13.4 percent and whites were 80 percent.

Odessa College dropped from 4,732 students in 1988 to 4,593 in fall 1989, with 13 fewer black students, to 251, and 19 more Hispanics, to 920.

Blacks were 5.5 percent of the total enrollment, while Hispanics were 20 percent and whites were 72.8 percent.

Howard College at Big Spring increased from 1,526 students in 1988 to 1,586 in fall 1989, with 12 fewer black students, to 75, and two more Hispanic students, to 281.

Blacks were 4.7 percent of the total enrollment at Howard, while 17.6 percent were Hispanic and 76.6 percent were white.

Black and Hispanic students accounted for 44 percent of the 11,307-student increase in enrollment this past fall at Texas public community colleges, the board reported.

Black enrollment increased from 33,701 students in fall 1988 to 34,718 in fall 1989, a gain of 1,017 students. Hispanic enrollment grew from 68,230 to 72,237, an increase of 3,978 students.

CARDIAC ARREST

May 22, 23 & 24
9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Midland & Odessa

"Put Your Boss Behind Bars"

Arrest Your Sidekick!

Have your ever had the temptation to "do a number" on a friend, relative, co-worker or even the Boss? Well, this is your chance!

On May 22, 23, and 24, you can put your friends behind bars in the American Heart Association Cardiac Arrest!

For just $15, you can file a complaint and take out a warrant for your victim's arrest. An official Cardiac Arrest sheriff will serve the warrant, arrest and transport the accused to the nearest American Heart Association Jail. (There are four to choose from.) There, the accused will be arraigned before the judge (who sets the final bail) and then locked behind bars.

We Give You More Than One Phone Call

While in custody, the jailbird has unlimited use of the telephone to call friends and business associates to raise bail in pledges to the American Heart Association. (Be prepared. Your "victim" will undoubtedly call you first!)

Good Fun, Good Cause

It's all in good fun—but along with the fun arrests, we are still serious about "arresting" Heart Disease. All bail and arrest fees are tax deductible and go toward the American Heart Association's programs of research, education and community service. Many Petroplex community leaders have already agreed to be arrested. Won't you join some of the finest cell mates you'll ever meet!

Call 563-2008 or 689-7041.

ClayDesta National Bank, Midland
Bank One, Odessa
NCNB Texas, Midland
NCNB Texas, Odessa

How to File a Complaint

To have one of your friends or foes arrested, just complete the attached complaint form and mail it in with your $15 arrest fee by May 18. Or after May 18, call in the complaint to 563-2008 or 689-7041. We'll take care of the arrest!

How to Set Bail

As the complainant, you have the right to set the initial bail. Begin by thinking about how much your "victim" can raise. Who do they know? How many $50 calls could they make? How many $100 calls? Keep the bail high and worth their time. Remember, their debt to society is fighting heart disease. Most bails are set between $150 and $500, with a minimum bail of $50.

In any case, depending on the jailbird's charges, attitude or conduct at the jail site, the judge may set bail higher or lower! If you're stuck, call us at 563-2008 or 689-7041.

Gay rights group files suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A policy barring homosexuals from becoming Dallas police officers is discriminatory and is based on a law that might be unconstitutional, says a gay rights advocacy group that is suing the Dallas Police Department.

Tuesday, the organization filed a lawsuit against the state of Texas, the city of Dallas and Police Chief Mack Vines in which the group alleged that a woman was improperly denied employment as an officer because she is a lesbian.

"The Texas Department of Public Safety and the police departments of San Antonio and El Paso, to name just a few, all recognize, that anti-gay discrimination is unconstitutional, unfair, and counterproductive to the interests of taxpayers," said William Waybourn, president of the Dallas Gay Alliance, which supports the lawsuit.

Lambda, a New York City-based group promoting civil rights for homosexuals, filed the lawsuit Tuesday in state district court in Austin.

The plaintiff in the suit is Mica England, of Tulsa, Okla., who applied for a job as a Dallas police officer in March 1989.

A news release by Lambda said Ms. England, 25, was told the Dallas Police Department doesn't hire homosexuals because sodomy is illegal under Texas law. The law prohibits oral or anal intercourse between people of the same sex.

Lithuania rejects Soviet demand

Movement toward Baltic states' independence seems to be over

By Esther B. Fein
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Movement toward compromise on the Baltic republics' campaign for independence stopped on Tuesday, as Lithuania rejected demands to suspend its declaration of independence and President Mikhail S. Gorbachev warned all three Baltic republics that they must abide by Soviet law.

Lithuanian legislators voted in principle on Tuesday to suspend important laws enacted since the republic declared independence on March 11, as soon as Moscow agrees to begin negotiations. Parliament is expected to formally approve the text of a resolution on Wednesday, but none of the variations being considered includes any mention of freezing the declaration itself, and members of Parliament confirmed that such action had been ruled out.

Gorbachev has demanded that Lithuania place a moratorium on its declaration as a condition for beginning talks with Moscow about independence, and it seems unlikely that he will be satisfied by a move that puts a hold only on independence laws.

The Soviet leader had a brief and tense conversation on Tuesday with the president of Latvia, Anatolijs Gorbunovs, and the president of Estonia, Arnold Ruutel, and reaffirmed his intention to deal toughly with all three Baltic republics in their quest to leave the Soviet Union.

"Mr. Gorbachev confirmed his demand to the three Baltic states to abolish their decisions on independence," Ruutel told the Estonian news service on Tuesday night. He also described the 20-minute conversation as "unpleasant" for both sides, people who spoke with him said.

The Kremlin and the Baltic republics seemed to have struck more conciliatory tones toward one another during a visit by Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Moscow last week. During the Baker visit, Gorbachev met with Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene of Lithuania after the republic's Parliament proposed suspending independence legislation passed since its decision to break from the Soviet Union.

American and Lithuanian officials indicated that Baker had encouraged Mrs. Prunskiene to make some concession on the declaration itself, telling her that freezing the act did not amount to revoking it.

But in Tuesday's debate, only a handful of Lithuanian legislators proposed suspending the declaration and the vast majority agreed that there was no way to tamper with the independence declaration without leaving the republic vulnerable to Moscow.

"Let us be honest," Kazimieras Moteika, deputy chairman of the Lithuanian Parliament, told the legislators on Tuesday. "Having chosen the road of independence, we must be firm and remember that we will not veer off it."

Lithuanian officials said that the resolution being debated differs from the proposal brought to Moscow last week by Mrs. Prunskiene in that Parliament now says it is not only willing to, but in fact will suspend independence legislation when Moscow confirms that talks are to begin.

The Lithuanian decision was made despite the worsening effects of an economic blockade imposed by Moscow on the renegade republic more than a month ago.

Deputy Prime Minister Algirdas Brazauskas announced on Tuesday that, as a result of a continuing Soviet embargo on fuel, stricter gasoline rationing would go into effect on Wednesday.

Iliescu's big win stirs fears in Romanian party

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Interim President Ion Iliescu defeated the opposition in Romania's election by such a large margin that fears were raised Tuesday in his own party about entrenching democracy in this former Communist bastion.

Iliescu captured 85.9 percent of the vote in the three-way presidential race with nearly all ballots counted. His National Salvation Front party had more than two-thirds of the seats in the two-chamber Parliament.

The 60-year-old former Communist Politburo member had been expected to win Romania's first multiparty election in 53 years last Sunday, but his overwhelming victory astonished many Romanians and foreign observers.

Iliescu says he wants to turn Romania into a Swedish-style social democracy and that he will seek a coalition with the opposition.

But his two opponents said they will seek to nullify the election on grounds of fraud and indicated it was unlikely they would join a national unity government.

A monthlong protest by anti-Communist demonstrators in downtown Bucharest's University Square flared into what almost became a violent confrontation with government officials who tried to establish a dialogue. At least 4,000 protesters filled the square Tuesday night, shouting the election was a fraud.

Silviu Brucan, the Front's power behind the scenes and one of its campaign organizers, said the turnout of more than 85 percent meant Romanians "have passed magna cum laude the first class in democracy."

But he said the Front's share of the vote was too high.

"This is no good for democracy because I stick to my statement that a strong opposition is essential in a democracy, particularly at a time when that democracy is in the making," he said.

Iliescu, who announced Communist dictator nicolae Ceausescu's execution at the climax of December's revolution, capitalized on his personality and his grassroots support from industrial workers and peasants.

In an editorial, the outspoken independent daily Romania Libera said: "The Front has won the elections but apparently it definitely alienated suveral million voters and the country has lost a chance, the chance to have a genuine political opposition in Parliament."

Some foreign diplomats and observers monitoving the election said the Front's control of Parliament means it could overwhelm the process of writing a new constitution, which is to take place within 18 months.

"If the results are confirmed, this doesn't seem to be the result of a pluralist system and this worries me," said Adelaide Aglietta, a lawmaker from Italy's Green party, who was an observer for the European Parliament.

"I think people here were not helped to understand exactly what democracy means. They still think that other political parties are the enemies, and they haven't understood what a political dialogue in a democracy is," she told a news conference.

Andreas Khol, leader of the European Democratic Union observer group, drawing together Western Europe's powerful conservative parties, said in Vienna the election did not give Iliescu or the Front the legitimacy of new governments in Hungary or Poland.

He said it was an important step toward democracy but did not express "the free will of the Romanian people."

Did 'super gun' reports lead to attack?

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq and the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed Tuesday that Western allegations about a "super gun" said to be able to launch nuclear weapons at Israel were a prelude to an attack against Iraqi installations.

But Arab diplomatic sources, requesting anonymity, also said Tuesday that Iraq was behind a conciliatory message to be sent to the United States and Soviet Union at their summit May 30.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and the PLO's political department chief, Farouk Kaddoumi, linked Western charges about an Iraqi weapon to the influx of Soviet Jews into Israel, and the weekend killing of seven Arab laborers near Tel Aviv.

An increase in Jewish immigrants in Israel is seen as a threat to Arab settlers in Israeli-occupied territories. The two officials said these were anti-Arab developments that could lead to an attack on Iraq.

"There's no doubt that this political and propaganda campaign ... is a prelude for a strike against our technological and scientific installations," Aziz told the Arab foreign ministers.

They spoke at the inaugural session of an Arab foreign ministers meeting at the Al-Rashid Hotel. The meeting convened to prepare for a special summit of Arab leaders in Baghdad set for May 28.

The summit was called by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat to discuss the emigration of hundreds of thousands of Soviet Jews to Israel. Iraq asked that its confrontation with the West be included on the agenda.

"Jerusalem is calling you, O leaders of the Arab world," said banners flying in the streets of the Iraqi capital. Others said, "Arab unity is the shield against threats to our scientific development."

But efforts to achieve the long-sought unity suffered a setback Tuesday when Syria and Lebanon failed to show up.

Damascus had said it would not attend a summit in Iraq, its main Arab foe. Lebanon, two-thirds of its territory under c ontrol of 40,000 Syrian troops, had said it would participate if all other Arabs did.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein brushed aside the feud with Syria, ruled by a rival wing of the Arab Baath Socialist Party. He sent an envoy to Damascus on Monday to persuade President Hafez Assad to change his mind, but Assad refused.

Arafat had insisted the Arab meeting be held before the May 30-June 3 superpower summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Washington.

Arab diplomatic sources, insisting on anonymity, said the Arab leaders would send a message, drafted by Iraq, to Bush and Gorbachev.

It urges Bush and Gorbachev to work for reviving Arab-Israeli peace initiatives and to curtail Jewish immigration to Israel. The letter requests that the United States and Europe open their borders to some immigrants.

The message also reassures Washington and Moscow that Iraq's scientific and technological projects were for peaceful purposes.

Korean radicals battle police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radicals armed with firebombs and rocks fought police and burned a U.S. flag in Kwangju on Tuesday, and students in the capital declared a week of protests against the U.S. presence in South Korea.

Police tightened security at U.S. facilities and arrested eight radical students who tried to deliver a letter to the U.S. Embassy in Seoul.

Shouting "Drive out the Yankees!" the protesters unfurled an anti-American banner that demanded the U.S. apologize for South Korea's bloody suppression of a 1980 civil uprising in Kwangju.

Also in Seoul, police fired 23 blanks from an M-16 rifle at about 100 students who threw firebombs at a police station.

At a news conference in Seoul, student leaders said they would stage anti-U.S. protests through Sunday.

The student leaders said they would "seek the spread of anti-U.S. feeling among Koreans through various means during the period and unveil the true character of the United States."

In Kwangju, 155 miles south, groups of 100 to 500 students staged violent anti-U.S. protests in the city center after burning a U.S. flag. Police firing tear gas chased the protesters into alleys and sidestreets.

'Let's Eat In' designed for singles, families

By Melanie Barnard and Brooke Dojny
Copley News Service

We likened the publication of our first book "Sunday Suppers" to producing a baby, and the analogy still holds.

We are excited, happy, bursting our buttons with pride all over again with this second book, "Let's Eat In" (Prentice Hall Press, 1990), just as you are with that second baby.

Subtitled "Quick and Delicious Weekday Meals," the book is filled with the kind of simple, fast, realistic recipes that we try to give you each time we publish a recipe.

It has become a cliche to say that we're all too busy to cook anymore, but we believe that even in the most hectic households, making time a few evenings a week to sit down to a meal together is a comforting, civilizing and necessary ritual.

SO WHAT we've tried to do in "Let's Eat In" is to give you the tools to make eating at home not only possible but preferable. From updated versions of old favorites such as Alphabet Soup for Ned, Marianne's Spaghetti and Meatballs, and Real Sloppy Joes, to contemporary creations such as Caribbean Grilled Chicken with Pineapple Salsa, Swiss Nachos and Linguine Tonnato, "Let's Eat In" is geared to singles and couples, as well as families.

Here are two of our favorite recipes from "Let's Eat In."

Spring Chicken Soup is a perfect example of a very simple, yet absolutely delicious soup that can be put together in mere minutes.

Pasta Salad Nicoise, a takeoff on the classic Salade Nicoise, is beautifully easy and makes wonderful springtime fare.

We hope you like this second baby just as much as we do!

SPRING CHICKEN SOUP

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup chopped onion
2 stalks celery, thinly sliced
3 carrots, peeled and cut into small dice
6 cups chicken stock
2 cups water
10 ounces boneless chicken thighs or breast cut into thin strips
¾ teaspoon dried tarragon
2 cups frozen corn kernels
3 ounces (1 cup) thin egg noodles
½ teaspoon Tabasco
¼ teaspoon black pepper
Salt

Heat oil over low heat in large saucepan or soup pot. Add onion and cook gently for 4 minutes. Add celery and carrots and cook over low heat for about 4 minutes.

Add chicken stock and water and bring to simmer. Add chicken along with tarragon and simmer for 6 minutes. Add corn and noodles, bring to simmer and cook for 3 to 6 minutes or until chicken and noodles are cooked. Taste and season with Tabasco, salt and pepper.

PASTA SALAD NICOISE

SALAD:
12 ounces rotelle or similar pasta
8 ounces fresh green beans, cut into 1-inch diagonal pieces
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
½ cup sliced black olives
1 (13- to 14-ounce) can solid white tuna packed in oil, drained
DRESSING:
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 clove minced garlic
¼ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
½ cup olive oil
4 tablespoons minced parsley
4 tablespoons minced fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried
2 teaspoons small drained capers
GARNISH:
1 large ripe tomato, cut in wedges
1 (2-ounce) can flat anchovies
2 to 3 hard-cooked eggs, quartered (optional)
1 tablespoon minced parsley

Bring large pot of water to boil for pasta. Salt water, add rotelle and cook for about 10 minutes. Add beans and boil for 2 to 3 minutes more, until beans are crisp-tender and pasta is al dente. Drain well in colander, then run cold water over to stop cooking. Turn into large mixing bowl and add onion and olives. Break tuna into pieces and set aside to add to salad later.

To make dressing, whisk together vinegar, mustard, garlic and red pepper flakes. Whisk in oil. Stir in parsley, basil and capers.

Drizzle dressing over pasta salad and toss to combine. Add tuna and toss gently, taking care not to break up tuna too much.

To serve salad, spoon onto large platter or individual plates. Garnish with tomato, anchovies and optional egg wedges. Sprinkle with minced parsley.

NOTE: Salad can be made up to 4 hours ahead and refrigerated. Restore to cool room temperature before garnishing and serving.

Canned potato soup is basis for homemade meal

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Start with a can of potato soup to make this terrific quick-fix vegetable soup. Serve it with a chicken or turkey sandwich for lunch or supper. If your family goes for flavors on the spicy side, substitute monterey jack cheese with jalapeno peppers for the provolone.

CHEESY CREAM OF VEGETABLE SOUP

2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
1 cup frozen loose-pack whole kernel corn
½ cup chopped broccoli
¼ cup shredded carrot
¼ cup water
1 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of potato soup
1 cup milk
¼ cup shredded cheddar cheese (1 ounce)
1 ounce provolone cheese, cut up
Dash pepper

In medium saucepan cook onion in hot margarine or butter until tender but not brown. Add corn, broccoli, carrot and water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 10 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in soup, milk, cheeses and pepper. Cook and stir over medium heat until cheese is melted and mixture is heated through.

Czech food creation of many cultures

By Larry Lipson
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Checking out Czech food is not easy.

Gulasch is Viennese. Gulyas is Hungarian. Gulas is Czech. And goulash is American.

Paprikas is Hungarian, sometimes spelled paprikash in America. In a Czechoslovakian restaurant like Matuszek's in Hollywood, the chicken in paprika sauce — or chicken paprikash — is called kute na paprice.

Confused?

Czechoslovakian food cannot simply be defined because, like Czechoslovakia's Central and Eastern European neighbor nations, ethnic and cultural groupings have constantly straddled borders, leaving cooking heritages that are blurred and fuzzy.

The food of the Hapsburgs, the longtime rulers of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, is the food that characterized an area today recognized as Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Some food authorities add Yugoslavia, but that country, insisted chef-restaurateur Jan Matuszek, is "over 2,000 miles away."

There is no escaping the similarities of the first three cuisines, said Matuszek. A Czech dish like noky (dumplings) bears a remarkable familiarity to Austrian nockerln or Hungarian nockelli. And where did it really originate? How about even farther afield in Italy, where a dumpling like this is known as gnocchi.

Yet, getting familiar with Czech dishes can be a challenge. Their colorful names do not always jibe with the ingredients. For example, according to Matuszek, Moravian sparrow is a baked pork recipe prepared with onions, garlic and caraway seeds. Not a bird in sight.

And hair dumplings, he explained, are made from shredded, fresh potatoes.

In addition to the noky-from-gnocchi style, dumplings certainly abound. They fall right in with soups and stews as dominant items in the Czech diet.

Matuszek makes flour-bread dumplings and potato dumplings daily for his clientele.

The Czechs, he noted, also go for fruit dumplings, sometimes offered as a main course, sometimes as a dessert.

But don't look for Czech seafood, he advised. There is none.

Fresh-water fish, though, is another story. Trout is evident in Czech homes. Even more so is carp. Fried carp with potato salad is a traditional Christmas Eve dish in Czechoslovakia, said Matuszek. And Czech cooks favor carp soup.

Matuszek, a former lead singer and guitarist with a Czech folk-rock band called Bukanyri (the Buccaneers), and with 50 records, many television appearances and tours of the Eastern bloc countries to his credit, lived in Ostrava, an industrial town in Northern Moravia.

But in Hollywood, Matuszek is known for his tasty Czech fare, not his musical talents.

"And Czechoslovakia," he pronounced, "is a soup country."

Everyone, he said, has a bowl of soup to start the midday meal — the main one of the day — and may occasionally eat a salad with the entree dish.

Czech borscht differs from the clearer Russian version.

"It's thick," he said, naming beets, beef, bacon, onion and vegetables as the main ingredients of his version.

Sauerkraut, chicken, split pea and lentil are among the 150 soups popular in his country, along with numerous stews.

The musician-turned-chef said Czechs eat lots of stews, gulyas (or goulash) being the most renowned.

Czechs also like sausages. Prague, besides being famous for ham, is also where pragers were invented. The prager — varieties are named parky, vursty, taliany and klobasy — may well be the forerunner of the eminent frankfurter.

"Prague ham is the best in the world," boasted Matuszek. "But I have not seen it here."

What is here, though, is the famous Czech beer, Pilsener Urquell. Urquell means original, according to Matuszek. They have been making it in Pilsen, he said proudly, since 1292.

And Budweiser, said Matuszek, is also a Czech name, though the brand of beer with that label here in America is not anything like a Czech beer. In Czechoslovakia, he said, the original Budweiser beer is called Budvar.

Americans are definitely used to a hot dog and a Bud.

So it should not be difficult for them to get used to a prager and a Pilsener.

'Sloppy Joshes' are current favorite with children

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Kids love these sandwiches because they're simple enough for them to fix and they're fun to eat. Bulgur wheat — little nuggets of precooked cracked wheat berries — adds a little chewiness and nutty flavor. Easy go-withs to make a meal for family or the gang: tortilla chips, pickles, crisp vegetable sticks and milk.

SUPER SLOPPY JOSHES

1 pound lean ground meat (beef, pork, or turkey)
½ cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 to 3 teaspoons chili powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 6-ounce can tomato juice
½ cup shredded carrot
½ cup bulgur wheat
6 whole-wheat hamburger buns, split
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese (2 ounces)

In a 10-inch skillet cook meat and onion until meat is brown and onion is tender. Drain off any excess fat. Stir in mustard, chili powder and salt. Cook and stir for 1 minute. Add tomato sauce, tomato juice, carrot and bulgur wheat. Bring mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer meat mixture, uncovered, for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, toast hamburger buns, if desired.

To serve, spoon meat mixture onto toasted buns; sprinkle each sandwich with shredded cheese. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Bedroom privacy issue divides husband, wife

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Paul (not his real name) and I have been married for two months. Paul is 35 and I'm 27. This is my first marriage. Paul was married briefly in college and has a 14-year-old daughter who lives with her mother in another state. His daughter is coming to spend the summer with us. She's a sweet girl and I like her, but Paul has told me that while his daughter is here we will have to put our lovemaking on "hold."

Van Buren

At first I thought he was kidding, but he explained that he has this "little hang-up" — he can't perform sexually unless he has total privacy, which means there can be nobody in the next room, or even in the same house! I tried to tell him that it's perfectly normal for married people to make love, and it shouldn't matter whether somebody is in the next room or not.

Paul can't understand why I don't accept his little hang-up, but I'm losing sleep over his obsession for total privacy because it may be indicative of other little hang-ups I don't know about. Besides, we're still honeymooning.

Your opinion, please. — LOSING PATIENCE

DEAR LOSING: Paul could have been "surprised" during lovemaking at some time in his life, which may account for his obsession for total privacy. However, asking you to put your honeymoon on hold for the entire summer is expecting too much.

For his sake and yours, Paul should seek counseling from a psychiatrist or sex therapist in order to hang up this "little hang-up" once and for all.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "From Connecticut" who complained about screaming babies on airplanes. I have a feeling we've met before, and here's why:

While stationed in Wyoming with the USAF, my family had to fly to Connecticut for an emergency. The flight took all day, and we had to change planes twice. My husband took charge of our 2-year-old daughter and I carried our 5-month-old son in my arms. The baby began to scream the minute we took off. I did everything I could to calm him, but he continued to scream as though he were in terrible pain. I gave him infant pain relievers, his bottle, pacifiers — I walked and walked him, sang endlessly, jangled donated car keys before him, made faces, and even gave him a lollipop to suck on — and I don't normally give sweets to children. I did everything I could think of to quiet him, but to no avail.

Most passengers were sympathetic. One very kind woman even took a turn walking the baby for me. I received some angry glances from a few irritated passengers, which made me feel terrible.

When we landed, I took my sweaty, exhausted, crying baby into the ladies room to change his diaper. A woman who had been on my plane said, "I don't know where you're going, but you have no business taking that baby on an airplane!"

I was too shocked to reply. Then tears welled up. I was on my way home — to bury my mother. — STILL GRIEVING IN PA.

'Sampler' combines recipes with history

By Carol Deegan

NEW YORK (AP) — A taste of Nebraska's history is preserved in the "Prairie Kitchen Sampler," a cookbook that mixes Alice Mickish Hendrickson's recipes with 66 years of stories about farm life.

James Potter of the Nebraska State Historical Society says, "Alice's experiences will strike a familiar chord with anyone who treasures a rural, agricultural heritage."

The 431-page, hard-cover cookbook, published by Prairie Winds Press of Phoenix ($16.95), is a family project involving Alice's daughter E. Mae Fritz, who wrote the book; granddaughter Linda Fritz Corkery, who illustrated it; and granddaughter Krista Fritz Rogers, who supplied editorial support and has been doing promotional work.

The cookbook is now in its third printing.

"Prairie Kitchen Sampler" combines 375 recipes for breads, cakes, pies, sausages and soups, with stories about barn dances, shivarees, butchering day, Lilac Day — and more.

The story begins on Aug. 6, 1922, the day Alice Mickish celebrated her 18th birthday. On that day, Walter Hendrickson gave Alice a diamond solitaire in a pierced white gold mounting. They were married on Nov. 22, 1922. Alice had already started her handwritten recipe collection.

Stories and recipes are presented in four periods: 1922-1934; 1935-1949; 1950-1974; 1975-1988. Each section is preceded by a sketch and description of one of the four farmhouses where Mrs. Hendrickson fed family, friends, threshers, cornshellers and hired hands.

With this cookbook, you can stir up Tillie's Hardtimes Cake, and many other recipes, just like Mrs. Hendrickson did when she was a young bride. However, various recipes have been updated to incorporate modern ingredients and cooking methods.

The recipe for Carrie's Irish Oatmeal Bread has been changed "many times" in the last six decades, according to the author. The latest version is made with quick-cooking oatmeal. As Fritz explains in the prologue:

"In preserving the past, we need not always aim for a recipe to be prepared exactly the way grandmother made it; we may, instead, make it with whatever adaptations are necessary in order for it to be prepared in today's kitchens, so it may be served and enjoyed today — and in all of the tomorrows to come."

Other recipes included in the cookbook: Creamed Fresh Peas with New Potatoes (1922-1934 period), Frosty Tomatoes (1935-1949 period), Chicken Baked in a Paper Bag (1950-1974) and Cuke Casserole (1975-1988).

The recipe for Aunt Katie's Strawberry Shortcake came from "Lilac Day," which originated on the original Hendrickson homestead in Buffalo County, Neb., which Walter's grandfather John claimed under the Homestead Act of 1862.

"Since Nebraska had a noticeable lack of trees, improving land in this state carried an implied directive to plant trees, and since John's wife Mary was a flower-lover...John hauled baskets of spindly, pencil-sized lilac shoots across the Missouri River from Iowa and on into Central Nebraska where he set them in dense rows along the homestead's farmyard."

On a Sunday late in April or in early May, John and Mary's descendants gathered for a picnic — and "an exhibition of good foods" on what came to be called Lilac Day.

"The hungry crowd circled the old table, loaded their plates from platters of roast beef, baked ham, deviled eggs, pans of scalloped potatoes, baked beans, bowls of potato salad and home-canned vegetables and later came back to the table to choose a dessert from an assortment of cakes, pies, sometimes a freezer or two of homemade ice cream and Aunt Katie's Strawberry Shortcake."

It became a Lilac Day tradition for Aunt Katie to bring large bowls of hulled, washed and sugared berries and trays of her shortcakes. At serving time, the berries were ladled over the shortcakes, and pitchers of light cream were passed to top the dessert.

AUNT KATIE'S STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

2 cups flour
2 tablespoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
¾ cup milk

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. In a medium bowl sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Add butter. Cut in with two forks or a pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk. Stir with a fork just to moisten and until dough begins to come together in a loose ball. Turn dough out onto lightly floured board or pastry cloth. Knead dough very gently 4 or 5 times. Use fingers to gently pat dough out until it is 1-inch thick. Cut shortcakes with a 2½-inch round cutter and place ½-inch apart on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 15 minutes at 400 degree F or until shortcakes are lightly browned on top and test done. Makes 6 to 8 shortcakes.

(Recipe from: "Prairie Kitchen Sampler" by E. Mae Fritz)

New research gives dash of salt a better shakedown

By Jonathan Susskind
Hearst News Service

Salt is undergoing a shakedown in cooking and in science.

You can overdo it, food experts agree, but for many dishes the use of salt is desirable, even necessary.

"I think salt is absolutely essential in tuning up the taste of almost any dish — not every dish, but certainly savory dishes," said Marion Cunningham, author of "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook."

Not long ago her love of salt might have been castigated, because doctors and dietitians for decades have advised Americans to cut salt use. Sodium, an element in salt, was thought to cause high blood pressure. But recent research has shown that is not quite true.

For some people, salt use does indeed raise blood pressure, and a low-salt diet can lower it. Kidney disease patients, anyone taking prescription drugs for hypertension or those under a doctor's orders to reduce sodium in the diet should do so rigorously.

Hypertension, or high blood pressure, is a major cause of stroke, cardiovascular diseases and kidney failure.

Up to half of hypertensive people and up to one-fifth of otherwise healthy people are salt-sensitive.

Yet new studies show that lowering salt consumption may have almost no effect on blood pressure in healthy people, and may even raise it. Researchers also now say that only salt affects blood pressure, not other food additives containing sodium.

Most public health organizations still lump salt and sodium with fat and cholesterol, to be scrupulously avoided by all. You likely will hear that during May, which is National High Blood Pressure Month.

What you might not hear is that by cutting out the processed foods and salted snacks most Americans devour, you can slash sodium intake and still have plenty of room to use salt where it has the most flavor benefit — in the kitchen and at the table.

Some populations are prone to salt-sensitivity and hypertension, especially people with a family history of the condition, and blacks. Blood pressure also rises with age.

"What we feel confident with saying, at this point, is that there is only a certain portion of the population that is at risk for hypertension caused by sodium," said Marilyn Guthrie, spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association.

A link between salt and high blood pressure was shown in a study named Intersalt, published in 1988 in the British Medical Journal. Researchers studied sodium excretion in people around the globe, and concluded blood pressure rises with sodium intake, but only slightly.

But don't take that to mean you can sprinkle salt on everything. Salty foods can be bad for you in other ways. Some studies have linked very salty preserved or pickled foods with stomach cancer.

Slyker honored

Midland's Shelly Slyker has been named to the All-Texas Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tennis team.

Slyker

Slyker, who plays tennis for McMurry College in Abilene, was a first team selection. She was the Lady Indians' No. 1 singles player this year and the only McMurry player to gain first team recognition.

Slyker played her high school tennis at Midland Lee.

Drive friendly

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Saturday will bring the tradition warning from Indianapolis Motor Spped-way chief steward Tom Binford to the 33 drivers competing in the Indianapolis 500.

At the yearly pre-race drivers meeting, Binford will tell the entrants that the 500-mile race is not one in the first lap, when numerous wrecks have occurred over the past several years, including the 1988 race that saw three cars wiped out in the first curcuit around the 2½-mile track.

"We'd like to lead it," Means said of the initial dash for the the No. 1 corner, the first of 800 left turns on the 2½-mile oval. "If we can get there and run some clean air (without turbulence from other cars), that is important. That helps save your tires. But it really doesn't make any difference as far as the outcome of the race."

Pistons deflate Chicago

■ Joe Dumars scored 31 points to lead Detroit to a nine-point win over Chicago and the ailing Michael Jordan, giving the Pistons a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons took a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference finals as Joe Dumars scored 31 points in a 102-93 victory over the Chicago Bulls Tuesday night.

The best-of-7 series shifts to Chicago Stadium for games Saturday and Monday.

The Pistons, bidding to become only the third franchise in NBA history to repeat as champions, started the fourth quarter with 6-0 run — four of the points by Dumars — for an 80-69 lead.

The Bulls got it down to five points three times, but the Pistons answered on each occasion. Finally, they pushed the lead to 95-85 with 2:32 remaining.

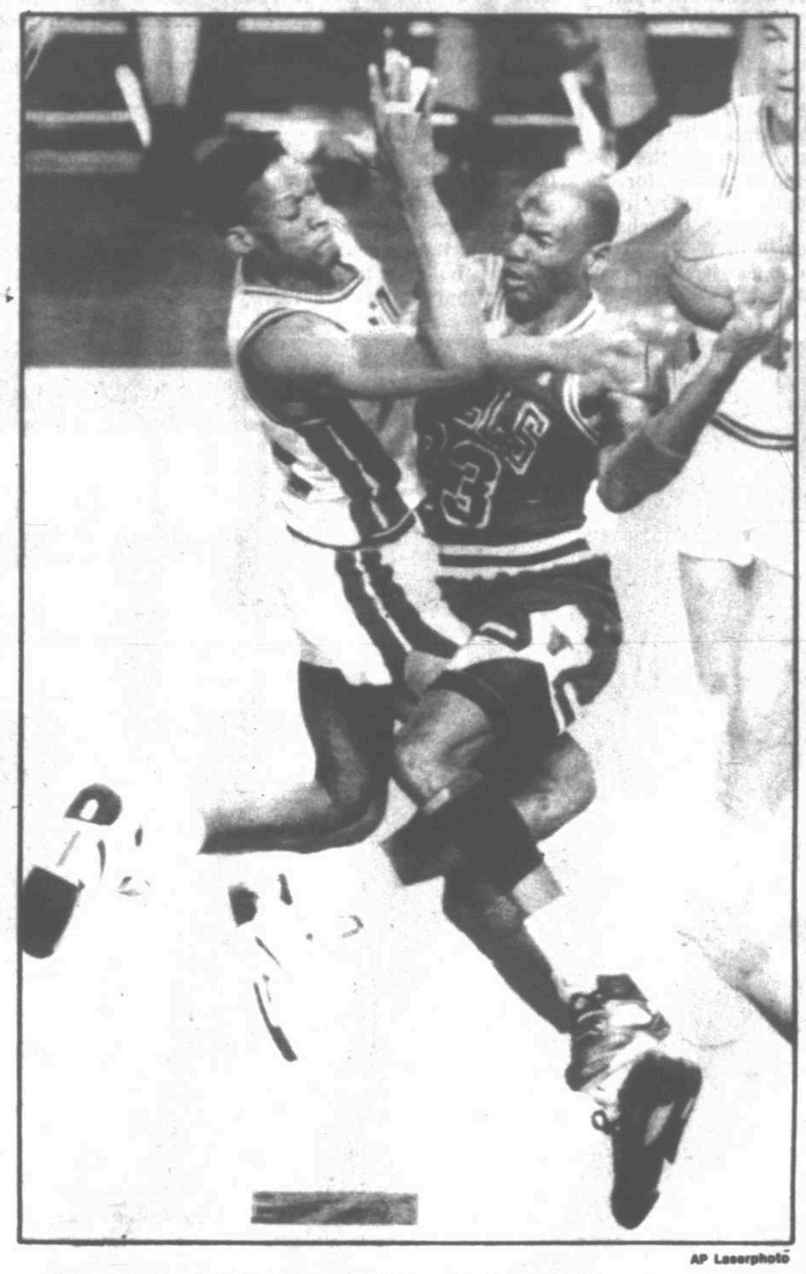

Dumars, who led the Pistons with 27 points in Game 1, was 12-for-19 from the field.

Chicago's Michael Jordan, playing despite a bruised left hip from a fall in Game 1, had only seven points in the first half and finished with 20 points, half his 39.6 playoff scoring average. He had just eight points in the second half of Game 1.

With Jordan scoring eight points, Chicago overcame a 53-38 halftime deficit in just over seven minutes, tying it 62-62 on a basket by Bill Cartwright with 4:49 left in the period. A 3-pointer by Craig Hodges at 3:35 gave Chicago its first lead, 67-66.

Stars hunt field

■ The Permian Basin Shooting Stars soccer team tentatively will call Hogan Park home for their 1990 outdoor season.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

"It's pathetic. The fields are rock-hard with hardly a blade of grass."

So says Permian Basin Soccer Association president Doug Leggett about the PBSA fields at Hogan Park.

No matter. To the Permian Basin Shootin' Stars soccer team, this pair of underdeveloped pieces of land tucked away in a corner of the park will be home. And to Shootin' Stars president John Dyer, any home — no matter how ramshackle — is better than no home at all.

Dyer was faced with that situation going into a hastily-called PBSA board meeting Tuesday in Midland. But after being turned down by both the Midland and Ector County Independent School Districts in a bid for facilities, the Stars entered into a tentative agreement with the PBSA to use the latter's two fields, pending city approval.

Midland Parks and Recreation Director George Logan late Tuesday said such approval shouldn't be a problem.

"This seems like a real good opportunity to promote soccer in Midland," Logan said. The city initially resisted the Stars' request to play home matches on city property for liability reasons, but Logan said bringing the PBSA into the picture solves the problem.

"The Shooting Stars will play under

Chap netters fall to Tyler in semifinals

Staff Report

TYLER — Midland College was edged by host Tyler Junior College here Tuesday in the semifinals of the 1990 National Junior College Athletic Association men's tennis team championship.

The Chaparrals fell 5-3 to the Apaches, who advanced to today's championship match against either Anderson College, S.C., or Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, Ga. MC will play the loser of Anderson-ABAC in a third place match at 2 p.m.

The Chaps were seeking to repeat as NJCAA champions, a title they earned here last year by edging Tyler. This is the first time the NJCAA championships have been determined in head-to-head team matches.

MC fell behind 4-2 after the singles and needed to sweep the doubles to oust Tyler. But the Apaches took the number three doubles match in straight sets after losing at number two doubles to move into the championship match. The number one doubles match was halted at that point.

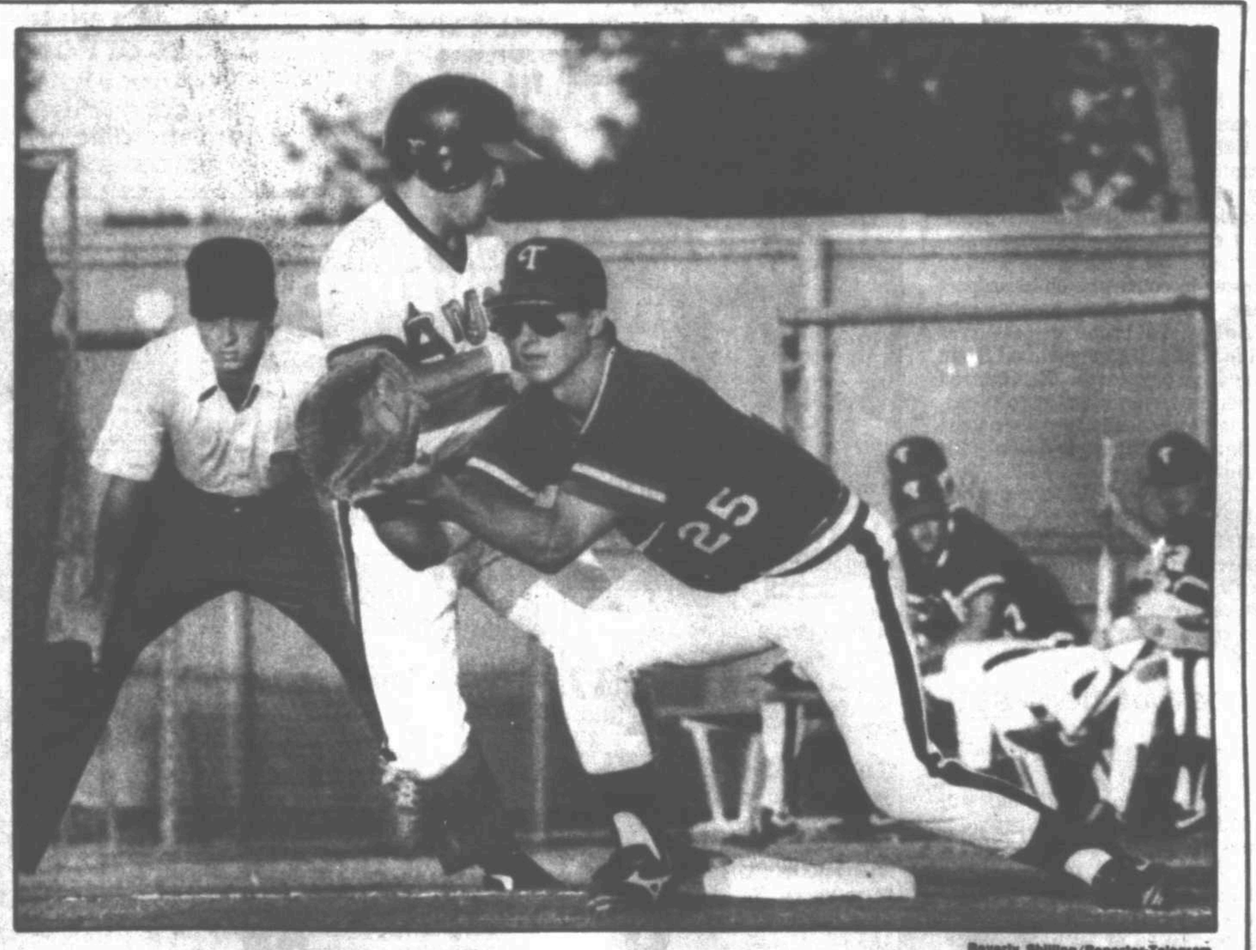

After Monday's grueling win over McLennan Community College, the Chaps were unable to show their usual power in the singles yesterday. MC's No. 1 player, Jesper Witt, lost in three sets to Joaquin Lopez, a player Witt had twice beaten in straight sets earlier this season.

Mohamed Ridaoui at No. 2 and James Homan at No. 6 were the only Chaps able to take singles victories. Lopez teamed with Miquel Valor to win the key No. 3 doubles match over Pepe Garcia and Homan. Tyler took a first-set tie-breaker 7-3 and then broke serve to begin the second set.

The Apaches ran out the set on serve the rest of the way for a 6-4 set and the victory. MC's No. 1 doubles team, Amin Kadiri and Ridaoui, had won its first set 6-4 and was on serve 4-3 in the second when the match was stopped.

The team match loss was only the third of the season for MC. The Chaparrals held a 6-3 win over Tyler in last fall's regional junior college tourney in Odessa. Their two previous losses were to New Mexico State and Texas-El Paso while they were playing shorthanded. But the Apaches defeated Midland here last year in the finals of the exhibition team match tournament that followed the national championships.

Action begins Thursday for individual national titles in six flights of singles and three flights of doubles. These matches, until this year, were the ones which counted for the national team title.

Midland Angel Ruben Amaro beats the throw back to first base in the Angels Tuesday game against Tulsa at Angels Stadium. The Angels won 5-4 in 11 innings.

Angels take extra-inning win

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The Midland Angels opened their 10-game homestand with an 11-inning bang Tuesday night.

The Angels came within one out of suffering a two-run defeat at the hands of the visiting Tulsa Drillers, but rallied for a game-tying pair in the bottom of the ninth and went on to win 5-4 on Ruben Amaro's single in the 11th.

"I was just looking for something I could drive," said Amaro, whose single off Mike Taylor (1-1) scored Edgar Alfonso with the winning run.

"This is a team that never gives up. They (Drillers) shut us down for most of the game, but when we had to do the job we did it," added Amaro, also the hero in the ninth.

Midland managed just six hits through the first eight innings off four Tulsa pitchers and trailed 4-2 entering the last half of the ninth. But after suffering what appeared to be a fatal double play to start the inning, Wylie Lee — pinch hitting for Scott Cerny — doubled to left and Mark Davis singled him home.

That brought Amaro to the plate, and the Angel left fielder fought Tulsa pitcher Steve Allen to a full count before sending a game-tying double to left.

Mark Zappelli, Midland's fourth pitcher, worked 3⅔ scoreless innings that kept his team in the 4-4 deadlock into the 11th inning. And Tim Meeks (5-1) got the win after facing two Drillers in the top of the 11th.

The victory lifts the Angels to 16-25 on the season, dropping the Western Division-leading Drillers to 22-15.

Tulsa held a 4-0 lead going into Midland's half of the eighth, enjoying single runs in each of the first three innings off Angel starter Kyle Abbott. The Drillers added another run in the top of the eighth when Monty Fariss tripled off reliever Luis Merejo and scored on a double play ball by Bill Haselman.

First lap lead historically makes little difference

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — On Saturday, in the final drivers' meeting before the Indianapolis 500, chief steward Tom Binford will give the 33 starters his traditional warning that the race is never won on the first lap.

On Sunday, when the green flag drops, signalling the start of the world's richest automobile race, the cars will scream into the first turn. With some luck, and maybe a subconscious recollection of Binford's plea for safety, all 33 still will be racing on the second lap.

Three cars were wiped out in a first-lap crash two years ago. Former winner Tom Sneva crashed on the parade lap in 1986. Former winner Mario Andretti and three other drivers went out in a pair of crashes as the field neared the starting line in 1982. Eleven drivers, including A.J. Foyt, were eliminated in a chain-reaction crash at the start of the 1966 race.

Three-time winner Rick Mears, for one, can't figure out the need for a first-lap scramble for the lead, although, like every other driver, he'd welcome the chance to set the early pace.

"We'd like to lead it," Mears said of the initial dash for the the No. 1 corner, the first of 800 left turns on the 2½-mile oval. "If we can get there and run some clean air (without turbulence from other cars), that is important. That helps save your tires. But it really doesn't make any difference as far as the outcome of the race."

He's right.

In the past eight years, the leader after the first lap has won the race only twice — Mears in 1984 and Emerson Fittipaldi in 1989. Over that span, the driver who started from the pole position has won the race just once (Mears in 1988), and the pole starter has led the first lap only twice (Teo Fabi in 1983 and Andretti in 1987).

Mears was on the pole last year, but Fittipaldi, starting from the outside of the front row, led the first 34 laps of the race. Four other drivers led at times after that — Mears wasn't one of them — before Fittipaldi took the lead for good on the next-to-last lap when he bumped Al Unser Jr. into the wall.

"It doesn't matter where you start in the front row," said Mears, well accustomed to that end of the lineup — he will be making a record 10th start from the front row. "The third spot is the best lane into the corner, but it's whoever gets there first. The position makes no difference.

"Five hundred miles, you've got all day for the race. The first corner doesn't mean anything. Nobody remembers the first corner."

Fittipaldi qualified at a record 225.301 mph this year, breaking Mears' year-old record of 223.885. Mears, trying to match the record four race victories of Foyt and Al Unser, qualified at 224.215. Luyendyk, a native of the Netherlands, qualified at 223.304.

None of Foyt's victories has come from a front-row start, while Unser has won once from the pole and once from as far back as 20th.

"The majority of it is fly by the seat of your pants. You have to be open to change at all times," Mears said. "You set up a little bit of a game plan. My normal game plan is basically playing it by ear. We'll start out the first segment to see what the car's like, what the conditions are like and start thinking about what the car needs.

"The first couple of stops, we'll do a little experimenting as we find out what the car does as conditions change a little bit. Then the second half of the race, hopefully, we'll have a good idea of what we need with the car and what changes we need to make."

Gators get official letter of inquiry

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida, under NCAA investigation for nearly a year, received an official letter of inquiry on Tuesday alleging rules violations in its football and basketball programs.

Such violations, if proven, could lead to suspension of the football or basketball program for a year or more, since the football program was placed on probation in 1984. Schools found to have committed major rules violations twice within a five-year period are liable for suspension, commonly termed the "death penalty."

The allegations include three substantive charges each against the football and basketball programs, Florida president John Lombardi said in a statement.

The NCAA also alleged two charges of unethical conduct — one each in football and basketball — and listed two charges against the university for lack of institutional control and compliance.

Lombardi said the university, which forced the resignations of football coach Galen Hall and basketball coach Norm Sloan last fall, has until July 20 to respond to the allegations.

"We will be further investigating and clarifying portions of these alleged infractions, all of which we are familiar with and some of which have been previously discussed in the media," Lombardi said. "However, it should be noted that these remain allegations until the NCAA and the university agree on all aspects of the charges and confirm details."

Hall resigned last October after admitting he violated NCAA rules by making unauthorized salary supplements to two former assistant coaches and arranging transportation for a player ordered to appear in court in a child-support case.

An internal probe of the entyre athletic department claimed Sloan three weeks later. He denied breaking NCAA rules at the time, but later acknowledged that some violations occurred during his tenure.

"We will continue to cooperate fully with the NCAA a0e that our athletic program conforms to the highest ethical standards," Lombardi said. He said officials won't discuss specifics of the probe until the response to the allegations is filed.

Shootout field set

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The 1990 Great Alaska Shootout will be held Nov. 23-26 and will include two NCAA tournament teams from last season — UCLA and Virginia.

The Shootout, hosted by the University of Alaska-Anchorage, will be played at Sullivan Arena.

In addition to UCLA, Virginia and UAA, other participating teams include California-Irvine, Nevada-Reno, Siena, South Carolina and Texas Tech.

UCLA, 22-11 last season, made it to the NCAA regional semifinals. Virginia, (20-12) made it to the second round. UAA, which went 22-8, participated in the Division II tournament.

In 1989, Michigan State won the Shootout and Kansas State was runnerup. Other past winners include Seton Hall, Arizona, Iowa and Alabama-Birmingham.

Last year, the Shootout attracted a record 29,653 fans.

Suns try to burn Blazers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — After all his team has overcome to get this far in the playoffs, Phoenix Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons figures a two-point road loss in the opener of the Western Conference finals is no big deal.

"We'll be fine," he said. "We've been here before. A man asked me how important is the first game? About as important as it was up in Utah when they won by 20."

The Suns came back from that opening-round loss to beat the Jazz in five games, then went on to stun the Los Angeles Lakers 4-1 in the conference semifinals.

But if they are keep their hopes for a first-ever NBA title alive, they're going to have to beat the Trail Blazers in Portland — something nobody has done thus far in the playoffs and something the Suns haven't done for six years.

The Blazers' 100-98 victory over the Suns Monday night was the 18th straight time Phoenix has lost in Portland. Game 2 is scheduled for Wednesday night.

"We have to get one here and take care of our home court, that's all," Fitzsimmons said. "We've gave them a good run, had a chance to steal one, and didn't do it. So we'll come back Wednesday and see what we can do."

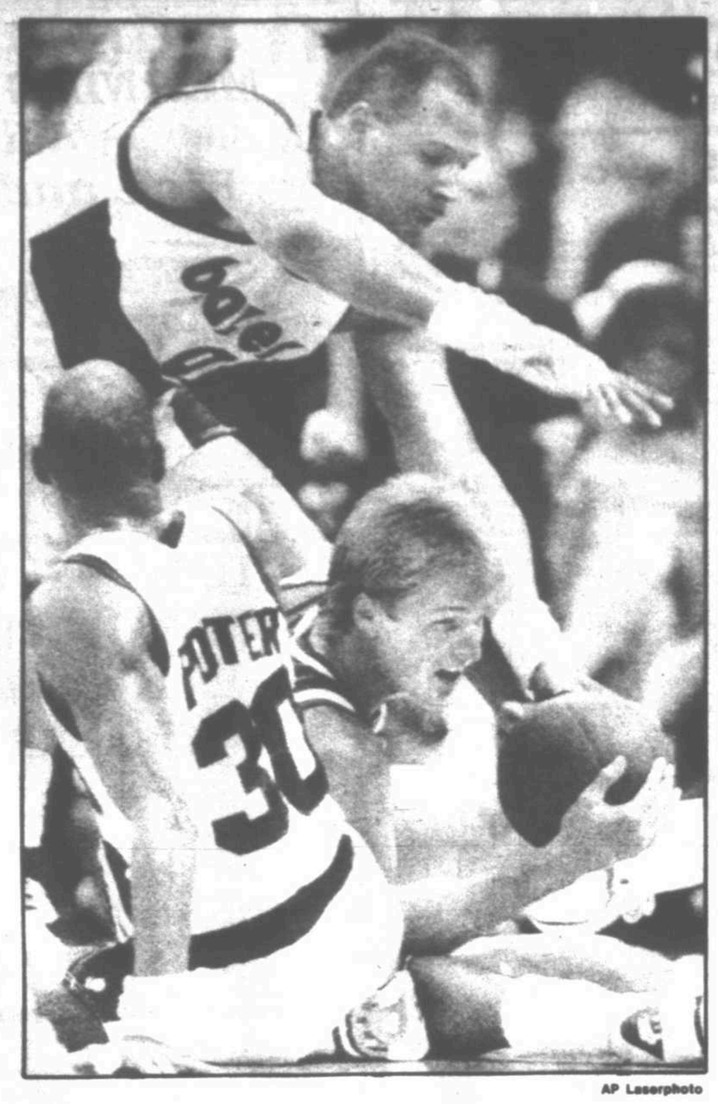

The Suns are one of the best shooting teams in basketball, but they went sour on Monday night, hitting just 41 percent from the field.

After making six of his eight shots in the first quarter, Kevin Johnson was just 2-for-12 the rest of the game. Tom Chambers scored 29 points but he missed 14 of his 24 shots, including a forgettable airball on a 3-point attempt. Eddie Johnson was just 3-for-11.

"All of us shot pretty poorly," Chambers said. "Usually we can find one guy to ride through on. I started off hot, but then I was as inconsistent as could be. Kevin started off hot, but he was the same way. Eddie couldn't shoot it."

Fitzsimmons said his team was rusty after a six-day layoff and lacked the execution necessary to counter Portland's tight defense.

"I thought we got hurt in two areas where I told you they'd hurt us," he said. "We got hurt off of our defensive boards, them jumping up over us and getting second and third shots, and we got hurt turning the ball over and letting them go out and get dunks. Those are killers. They killed us with defense."

Portland now has won four of its six meetings with Phoenix this season, but all of the Blazers' victories have been close. Two were by two points, one was by one point and one was by eight in overtime.

Blazers coach Rick Adelman isn't thrilled with the tight scheduling. The series opened just two days after Portland wrapped up its emotional seven-game semifinal series with San Antonio by winning in overtime.

"I don't know why we're playing every other day for the last two weeks and the next two weeks when in the other (Detroit-Chicago) series they get three days off before they play and they get three days off after the second game.

"I don't understand that. It doesn't make any sense to me. You should give a team a chance to be fresh."

Portland has struggled from the field in recent games, and much of Monday night's game was no exception. But, as they have all season, the Blazers relied on defense and rebounding to pull them through, then made the shots they needed down the stretch.

"We played great defense," Clyde Drexler said. "Rick did a super job of preparing us for their sets. Now we have to do the same thing on Wednesday."

Drexler had 20 points, 10 rebounds, three blocked shots and two steals in the victory, but said the return of centers Kevin Duckworth and Wayne Cooper was a key. Duckworth missed the first six games of the San Antonio series because of a broken bone in his right hand. Cooper missed three games because of back spasms.

"We're a little bit more confident because we have all our people," Drexler said.

Duckworth has been bothered by the injury, but he still made the biggest shot of Monday' night's game.

"I may not be a jumper like David Robinson or block shots like a lot of the others guys, but I contribute in my own ways," he said.

Weiss to guide Hawks

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Weiss is getting a second chance at coaching in the NBA, and he likes the prospects of succeeding a lot better than the first time.

Weiss, who won only 59 of 164 games in two seasons with the San Antonio Spurs before being fired in 1988, was named coach of the Atlanta Hawks on Tuesday. He agreed to a three-year contract.

Hawks president Stan Kasten said at a news conference that he was "very confident that this is the right choice for this team at this time."

"I don't think we have a process of rebuilding here," general manager Pete Babcock said. "It's more one of refining, particularly the chemistry, and I think hiring Bobby is the first step."

Weiss, an assistant with the Orlando Magic last season, takes over for Mike Fratello, who resigned April 23 after the Hawks finished 41-41 and missed the playoffs for the first time since 1985.

"It was a good experience at San Antonio," Weiss said. "I had two types of teams there, an old team on the decline in my first year, then the next year we went young, which also was a different experience.

"This is my third experience — a team with a lot more talent."

Known as a players coach, Weiss said he does not have a particular style.

"My style is to coach what the players can do and allow them to do it," Weiss, who played 12 seasons with six NBA teams. "I don't have a set style. The system I like best is an uptempo system and I believe the talent to play this type of game is here. There are some great open court players and we hope to take advantage of that."

Weiss said the Hawks were not all that bad last season. Especially when he compares them to the Magic.

"They beat us five times, but they had a lot of tough luck with injuries," he said. "It's a team with a lot of talented individuals."

And it will be Weiss who must get players like Dominique Wilkins and Moses to play within a team concept.

"There's no question he can relate to the players and motivate them," Kasten said. "It's a question of getting this talent together and playing hard. I expect to have a successful team this year."

Kasten said over the weekend that Weiss and New Jersey Nets vice president Willis Reed were the two finalists for the job. Reed, however, withdrew on Monday and was named senior vice president of the Nets.

Weiss, who retired as a player 1977, also was an assistant with the San Diego Clippers and Dallas before moving to the Spurs.

Paralysis of drag race driver likely permanent

MIAMI (AP) — Drag racer Darrell Gwynn will undergo spinal surgery to alleviate the pain from injuries caused by a 240 mph crash, but a reversal of his paralysis from the mid-chest down is unlikely, a specialist said Tuesday.

"The usual prognosis for this type of injury is that 93 to 95 percent of the people don't recover further function, except in the arms and possibly the hands," said Dr. Barth Green, director of neurosurgery at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

Gwynn, 28, suffered a broken neck and crushed spinal cord in the accident April 15 at Bedfordshire, England. Part of his left arm had to be amputated.

"He is electrically disconnected, so to speak, between the neck and the rest of his body," Green said during a news conference. "He does have sensation and some movement in his upper arms."

Gwynn underwent several weeks of treatment in England. He was flown Sunday to his hometown of Miami, where the world's largest center for paralysis research is located.

Green examined Gwynn several times, then scheduled major reconstructive spinal surgery for Friday.

"The purpose of the surgery is not necessarily to affect the paralysis," Green said, "but to stabilize his neck so he can begin to get out of bed and begin the rehabilitation process."

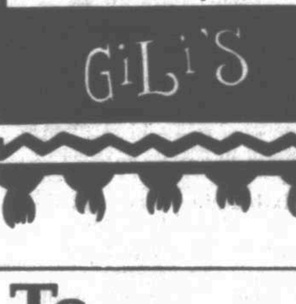

Gwynn now wears a halo brace and experiences considerable pain when he sits up, Green said.

Rehabilitation could increase movement in Gwynn's right wrist, which would help him eat and perhaps even drive, the doctor said.

Prior to his accident, Gwynn had volunteered his time and raised money to support the Miami Project.

Cubs survive in 16 innings

Associated Press

Cincinnati manager Lou Piniella finally ran out of luck.

Piniella ordered a record-tying seven intentional walks, including five, a major league record, to Andre Dawson. But the last one backfired, as Dave Clark followed with a game-winning single in the 16th inning Tuesday to give the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the Reds.

"How many did he have? Five? Oh, my God," Piniella said. "He just came up in situations all the time when there was an open base."

Ryne Sandberg singled with one out and moved to third when Mark Grace's ground ball went through Luis Quinones' legs for an error. Dawson was given the record-setting walk, but Clark spoiled the strategy with a single to center off Scott Scudder (1-1), who pitched the last 2 1-3 innings.

Bill Long (2-0), the sixth Chicago pitcher, pitched one scoreless inning for the victory.

Dawson, the National League leader with 13 homers and 41 RBIs, understood why Piniella kept walking him.

"As a young player I would have been upset about being passed over that many times, but as a veteran I understand you pitch around a hot hitter," he said.

No one has been hotter than Dawson, who was last week's NL Player of the Week after going 12-for-28, with 5 homers and 15 RBIs.

NL

Pirates 8, Astros 4

Barry Bonds hit the first grand slam of his career in the third and Jay Bell had a three-run triple an inning later to help Neal Heaton win his seventh game of the season as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Houston Astros 8-4.

Heaton (7-1) gave up four runs and four hits in 6 1-3 innings in handing Houston its 13th loss in 16 games. He tied Frank Viola of the New York Mets, Cincinnati's Jack Armstrong and Oakland's Dave Stewart for the most wins in the majors.

Loser Dan Schatzeder (1-2), making his first start of the season after 16 relief appearances, lasted 3 1-3 innings, yielding six runs — four unearned — and five hits. It was his first start since Sept. 29, 1987, when he pitched for Minnesota.

Phillies 4, Giants 2

Ken Howell scattered three hits in seven innings and Len Dykstra doubled twice and drove in a run as the Philadelphia Phillies beat San Francisco 4-2, handing the slumping Giants their fourth loss in a row.

The Giants, who started their eight-game homestand with four straight victories before losing to Montreal and Philadelphia, dropped to 6-15 at home this season. They were 53-28 at Candlestick Park in 1989 on their way to the National League championship.

Mets 8, Dodgers 3

Mike Marshall burned his former teammates with a grand slam and six RBIs and Bob Ojeda allowed four hits in six innings for his first win as the New York Mets beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3.

Marshall's seventh career grand slam, a drive over the fence in right-center, came on an 0-2 pitch from reliever Mike Hartley with two outs in the sixth inning. The homer was Marshall's fourth of the season, and the six RBIs matched his career high.

Expos 6, Padres 1

Hot-hitting Tim Wallach homered and drove in four runs and rookie Mark Gardner pitched seven strong innings, leading the Montreal Expos to a 6-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Wallach, who has seven homers and 20 RBIs in his last 15 games, hit his ninth homer of the season, a three-run shot off Ed Whitson (3-3), to give the Expos a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Cardinals 4, Braves 3

Jose DeLeon scattered four hits in eight innings and drove in t0ts to lift the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Expos' Martinez apologizes

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal pitcher Dennis Martinez apologized to Expos general manager Dave Dombrowski Tuesday about remarks the right-hander made last week following the demotion of Cuban-born catcher Nelson Santovenia.

However, the Nicaraguan-born Martinez, said he still believes Santovenia's demotion to Indianapolis of the American Association "was made easier because Santovenia was a Latin."

Martinez was quoted in Canadian newspapers last weekhe Expos were racist," he said. "What I said was Santovenia was demoted because he wasn't doing the job and because it was easier to demote a Latin than an American-born player."

Martinez spoke to the media following a 20-minute meeting with Dombrowski prior to Tuesday night's game with the San Diego Padres.

"I apologized to him after he made me believe that it's (racism) not the way here," Martinez said. "But I still believe it's out there in both life and in baseball."

Dombrowski said he has assured Martinez that Santovenia's demotion had "nothing whatsoever to do with ethnic reasons."

Santovenia, who grew up in Miami, was expected to be the Expos' starting catcher this season. However, after hitting .155 with one home run and eight RBIs and throwing out three of 26 baserunners, he was shipped to Indianapolis on May 14.

Martinez's accusations infuriated Montreal manager Buck Rodgers, who called a team meeting last Friday in San Francisco during which he dressed down Martinez and demanded that he repeat the charge in front of the entire team. Martinez refused.

At the time, Rodgers told reporters that Martinez's job was to pitch and that he, Rodgers, would made the decisions.

Martinez said Tuesday he would continue to speak his mind when he felt it was necessary.

"I'm not here j ust to pitch," Martinez said. "I'm a human being, too."

Asked if he considered the Expos to be a racist organization Martinez replied: "I don't want to say anything about it. I don't know if it is or it isn't."

Canseco smacks grand slam in win, Rangers stop skid

Associated Press

Jose Canseco hit the first regular-season grand slam of his career, a drive onto the roof of a restaurant beyond the center-field fence, as the Oakland Athletics beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4 on Tuesday.

The sixth-inning blast was the 15th homer of the year for Canseco, whose only other major league grand slam came against the Los Angeles Dodgers in the opening game of the 1988 World Series.

Canseco, who belted a three-run shot against Toronto on Monday, broke a 1-1 tie with his first-pitch grand slam off Frank Wills (3-2). He also drove in Oakland's first run with a fourth-inning single.

The Athletics loaded the bases on walks to Walt Weiss and Rickey Henderson and Carney lansford's infield single down the third-base line before Canseco's second home run in two games.

The Blue Jays made it 5-4 in the bottom of the sixth on solo homers by Manny Lee, Junior Felix and Kelly Gruber, his second of the game and 12th of the season.

Rangers 5, Red Sox 4

Rookie Jack Daugherty hit four consecutive singles and Ruben Sierra and Harold Baines ended mini-slumps in a three-run fourth inning, leading the Texas Rangers to a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers won for only the third time in 12 games. They have won just six of the last 21.

Bobby Witt (2-5), a former Greater Boston schoolboy star, allowed five hits, including solo homers by Tom Brunansky and Ellis Burks, in six innings for his first Fenway Park victory.

Witt, who struck out six but walked four and hit a batter, gave way at the start of the seventh to Kenny Rogers. Jeff Russell went 1 1-3 innings for his seventh save, giving up a run in the ninth on doubles by Wade Boggs and Brunansky.

The Rangers pounded rookie Dana Kiecker (0-1) for eight hits and four runs in 3 1-3 innings. They added an unearned run off Dennis Lamp in the seventh and hung on.

Brewers 3, Mariners 2

Bill Spiers' pinch-hit single drove in Glenn Braggs with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth and Mark Knudson scattered seven hits as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Seattle Mariners 3-2.

Braggs and Charlie O'Brien singled off Bill Swift (2-1) with one out in the ninth. Keith Comstock was brought in to face Spiers, who bounced a single over the head of first baseman Alvin Davis to score Braggs with the winning run.

Angels 8, Indians 3

Chuck Finley, pitching for the first time since an odd injury, won for the 13th time in his last 16 decisions and Wally Joyner homered and drove in four runs as the California Angels beat the Cleveland Indians 8-3.

Joyner hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning and was robbed of another home run in the eighth when right fielder Cory Snyder reached over the fence to make a catch. Joyner, who had three hits, and Johnny Ray each had two-run singles in the ninth.

Finley (6-2) missed a scheduled start Friday because of a sprained right ankle sustained when he slipped on wet pavement while walking to the SkyDome in Toronto.

Finley gave up three runs on six hits in 6 2-3 innings, walking none and striking out six. He carried a three-hitter and a 4-0 lead into the seventh, but left after RBI singles by Candy Maldonado and Snyder.

Yankees 5, White Sox 2

Bob Geren snapped out of a 2-for-29 slump with a three-run homer, and the Yankees beat the White Sox in a game interrupted by an animated argument between veteran White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk and rookie New York outfielder Deion Sanders.

Players from both benches and the bullpens streamed slowly onto the field and gathered near home plate while Fisk, 42, and Sanders, 22, exchanged words. No punches were thrown and the matter was settled within a minute. At one point, Sanders appeared to move his bat toward Fisk but never got close.

Orioles 10, Twins 2

Joe Orsulak hit two home runs and Mickey Tettleton had one to lead the Baltimore Orioles over the Minnesota Twins 10-2.

Ripken's two-run, two-out double gave Baltimore a 6-2 lead, and two batters later Orsulak capped a six-run fifh inning with a three-run homer on reliever Juan Berenguer's first pitch.

Ripken's hit, which broke an 0-for-18 slump, dropped inches in front of center fielder Kirby Puckett.

Honus Wagner card unearthed

PITTSFIELD, Maine (AP) — Twelve-year-old Arlo Quint has thousands of baseball cards, but he says he'll buy even more when he cashes in a rare 1909 Honus Wagner copy he unearthed.

A Wagner card "in real good shape" is worth $100,000, said Brad Shaw of the Puss-Budget Sportscards Center in Augusta. "Even one in rough shape is worth $10,000 to $15,000."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Business and career momentum will build in the months just ahead. By July, you will be reaping big financial gains. Take advantage of a golden investment opportunity in October. An unexpected visitor in December will bring romance back into your life. Devote more time and attention to your personal relationships. Travel enjoys favorable influences. Renew your passport. Check the references of anyone who offers to baby-sit your children or pets.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian Scatman Crothers, singer Rosemary Clooney, actress Joan Collins, bandleader Artie Shaw.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A project finally bears fruit. Reward those allies instrumental in your success. Financial negotiations go well. Draw closer to your colleagues and loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your co-workers and other business associates can help you achieve success now. Appearances count big today; make the most of your looks. You may strike it lucky! Love is within easy reach.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Play it safe with your money. Follow experts' advice. Discussions and study projects move along smoothly. Set your sights on cultivating new business and social contacts. Romance looks promising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not take "no" for an answer — you will get your way. Be receptive to new ideas; they could bring financial solutions. Domestic issues require tactful handling. Consider mate's point of view.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A great day for both buying and selling. Your quick thinking will serve you well. Improve your financial status through talks, letters and pacts. Being part of a large social gathering is appealing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not think for a minute that you should shy away from close relationships. New alliances can be very successful; cultivate them in both business and social circles. Your friends admire your thrift!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Communicating with people far away or new to you holds special promise. Expect a lucky break for your long-range plans. Renew contracts and sign agreements. Romance is in bloom. Your home is a haven.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Solitude could wilt your spirits today. Take part in a group event. Become a better team player and you will make new friends. It is time to mend your fences with family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make contact by phone or letter or meet face-to-face. Those who are in a position to help you will do so. Move forward with confidence. Make intelligent concessions to your mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A cooperative venture or an expert's advice can help you solve a personal problem. Use coupons to save on grocery costs. Establish certain ground rules at home. A pact may need "the quick sell."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good sense prevails today. Co-workers recognize your true worth. Timely communications bring results. A hunch is right on target. Assert yourself when you are right. A good day to make car repairs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Getting an early start today will give you the jump on the competition. Buy or sell real estate. You have a sixth sense about others' motives; put it to good use.

TODAY'S CHILDREN love shortcuts and are always looking for an easier way to do things. These Geminis will not follow directions if they consider them a waste of effort. Count on this trait to exasperate their teachers! Let these intelligent youngsters know when there are certain established procedures they must follow.

Bill Root is considered by many, this department included, to be the world's premier bridge teacher. If you want to get an idea why, read his new book on play, How to Play a Bridge Hand by William S. Root. (Published by Crown Publishers, it's available at your local bookstore or from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10024, $19.95 postpaid.)

As an example, take this kernel of advice from the chapter on The Crossruff. Before you start crossruffing, you should cash any winners in the side suits that you need to make your bid. It is that last phrase, omitted from most other books on play, that is the secret to winning declarer technique. Consider this hand.

"West's two-no-trump bid is the 'unusual no trump overcall' showing two long minor suits (presumably at least five diamonds and five clubs), so you should anticipate that the suits will not divide normally. West has at most three major-suit cards and East has at most three minor-suit cards. Before reading further, how would you play the hand?

"You can win eight tricks by crossruffing and, therefore, need only two side winners. The safest play is to cash the ace of clubs and only one high diamond before crossruffing.

"If you make the mistake of trying to cash the second high diamond, East will ruff it and lead a trump. You are now limited to seven spade tricks and will be set."

Kathleen Turner to reprise Broadway role for ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — Kathleen Turner, nominated for a Tony for her Maggie in the Broadway revival of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," will appear in an ABC version of the play next season, the network said Tuesday.

Turner

No date has been set yet for the start of production. The video version of Tennessee Williams' play was among 11 new TV movie projects announced by ABC.

Another will pair Vanessa Redgrave and her sister, Lynn, in a TV version of "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane," a dark comedy whose 1962 film version co-starred Bette Davis and Joan Crawford as feuding sisters.

Turner has starred in the films "Body Heat," "Peggy Sue Got Married" and "The Accidental Tourist."

Taylor

"She's stable and she's doing much better. Generally, on the whole, she's physically and psychologically better," said Miss Taylor's publicist, Chen Sam.

The 58-year-old actress has been hospitalized since April 9. Doctors at St. John's Hospital and Health Center said she was near death at one point.

Earlier this month, physicians said complications involving new infections would keep her hospitalized until late June. "If she continues to improve, that could be a shorter period, Ms. Sam said Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Mary Frann, the sweater-clad TV wife on CBS-TV's "Newhart," moves from innkeeper to vamp in the six-hour NBC-TV miniseries based on Jackie Collins' best seller "Lucky."

After seven years of playing Bob Newhart's wife, Joanna Loudon, on "Newhart," Miss Frann transforms herself into a seductive senator's wife who introduces a gangster to the joy of sex.

"In 'Newhart' I wore sweaters. In 'Lucky' I vamp around in lingerie. I just hope the set is warm," Frann said Monday, hours before the final "Newhart" episode aired.

"Lucky" is currently in development.

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — One trip to the top was enough for the son of the first climber of Mount Everest. Peter Hillary says he'll stick to smaller rocks in the future.

Hillary reached the top of the 29,029 foot high mountain May 10 with Robert Hall and Gary Ball, all members of a New Zealand team.

His father, Sir Edmund Hillary, first scaled Everest 37 years ago and Peter had been trying to climb it for the last eight years. He failed in his three previous attempts due to unfavorable weather and fatigue.

"The Himalayas are a serious place. If you don't get down, you are a dead man. The summit is only half the way," Peter Hillary said Monday.

"Now I have done my job on Everest in spite of extreme cold and fatigue, and this means we can move on to some other mountains. But not to that huge mountain again."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Jane Fonda received the Golda Meir Fellowship Award for her efforts to free Soviet Jews and said it was humbling to get a prize bearing the name of Israel's former prime minister.

"When somebody gives you an award associated with Golda Meir, it is awesome to say the least," Miss Fonda said during Monday's presentation.

The activist-actress was honored by Hebrew University's Women's Committee Builders of Scopus for her work campaigning for the release of Sowiet Jews, particularly refusenik Ida Nudel's right to leave that country.

The Golda Meir Award is bestowed on individuals who reflect the prime minister's dedication to public service as well as the lifelong pursuit of peace. Past recipients include Pearl Bailey, Greer Garson and Loretta Young.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Neill Acuff Jr., grandson of country musician Roy Acuff, admitted he began using drugs in the third grade at his sentencing on a cocaine conspiracy charge.

"This drinking and drugging has ruined my life," he told the court Monday. "I'm sorry I got involved in it."

U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Higgins on Monday sentenced Acuff to 63 months in prison to be followed by four years of probation.

Acuff was indicted last October on charges of conspiring to distribute cocaine and distributing the drug on nine occasions to undercover officers. He pleaded guilty March 5 to the conspiracy charge.

MC golf team set for nationals

Staff Report

Midland College received an at-large invitation Tuesday for the National Junior College Athletic Association's championship golf tournament.

The tourney is being hosted by Scottsdale, Ariz., Community College June 5-8 at McCormick Ranch Golf Courses. In addition to NJCAA regional champions and runners-up, only two at-large invitations were extended this year. The other went to Miami-Dade Community College, North Campus, of Florida.

MC finished third in the Region V tournament behind Odessa College and New Mexico Junior College. However the Chaparrals had competed with, and defeated, some of the top junior college teams in the country.

"We felt somewhat optimistic about the at-large berth since we played in such a strong conference," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss. "We also had four players returning from a team which finished sixth in the national championships last year, with two of them being All-Americans."

This year's tournament will feature Divisions 1, 2, and 3, with MC playing in Division 1. After two days and 36 holes, the field will be trimmed to the top 15 teams, as well as those within 15 strokes of the lead. The survivors then play two more days, 18 holes per day, for the championship.

Midland finished 13th in the 1988 tournament, its first appearance at the NJCAA golf championships. The Chaps were Region V champions in 1989 and finished sixth in the national tournament. Scottsdale has won the past two NJCAA titles.

"Midland College was notified several weeks ago that it had been selected to host the 1991 NJCAA Division 1 tournament. It gives us an automatic spot in the tournament field, but also a chance to bring some of the best young collegiate golfers to Midland for a week," Poss noted.

The Chaparrals are headed by sophomore Dean Robertson of Scotland, who was the Region V medalist and a returning NJCAA All-American. Robertson will join the other regional medalists in the East versus West medal play on June 4.

Sophomore Mike Johnson, a graduate of Midland High, also is a returning All-American player. Sophomores Brad Wells of Graham and Mark Kochan of Coquitlam, British Columbia, Canada, are the other returnees from last year's squad. The only freshman playing for Midland is Mark King of Scotland.

Other teams previously listed in the top 15 in the nation which have qualified for the tourney include Florida Community College; Abraham Baldwin of Georgia; Anderson, S.C.; and Brevard of Florida. Other teams which have qualified include Western Nebraska, San Jacinto of Pasadena, Tx., and Bossier Parrish, La.

Central region field frightens Gus

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas baseball Coach Cliff Gustafson says the other five teams in the NCAA Central Regional tournament field present a frightening lineup.

Among the haunting specters are 16th-ranked Cal State Fullerton; big Clemson hitters like Brian Kowitz and his .403 average; Creighton and Dan Smith, one of the nation's top pitchers.

And, Gustafson says, he's not too comfortable with Texas-Arlington because his Longhorns already have manhandled them.

"That's scary because we played them early," Gustafson said of the Longhorns' 15-1, 3-1 sweep of the Mavericks on Feb. 27.

"The first game was a blowout, but the second was really close. They had us 1-0 in the sixth inning before we beat them 3-1. I told our guys today if they want to take them lightly, just know that they beat TCU 13-4 two days before we played them (TCU)."

The Southland Conference champion Mavericks, 31-23, are sixth-seeded in the double elimination Central Regional and will play top-seeded Texas, 49-15, at 5 p.m. Friday.

Clemson, 42-20, opens the tournament at 1 p.m. Friday against Creighton, 46-20, which boasts 13-game winner Smith and his 1.71 earned-run average. In the 8 p.m. game, Big West winner Fullerton, 32-21, plays Old Dominion, 40-17, of the Sun Belt Conference.

The regional winner advances to Omaha, Neb., and the College World Series June 1-9.

Texas-Arlington, like fourth-ranked Texas, has struggled this season and was 9-17 at one point. However, the Mavericks have won 18 of 25 and swept Sam Houston State to win the Southland Conference by one game.

The Mavericks, who hit just .253 as a team, have a healthy respect for Texas. But Coach Butch McBroom said that's as far as it goes.

"We were really excited when we got paired against them. We'd much rather play somebody we know than (have the) fear of the unknown. We've always played pretty well and won a bunch of ballgames down there. Our kids respect Texas, but we're not afraid of them. We've never been intimidated down there," McBroom said.

Hogs seeded No. 1 in midwest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference and the Pac-10 South dominate a field of 48 teams vying for the NCAA Division I baseball tournament championship.

The only ACC team chosen as a top seed was North Carolina, while the Pac-10 had Stanford and Arizona State selected as No. 1 teams in the eight-regional, double-elimination tournament.

"Those conferences had such outstanding selections and well-deserved selections," said Gene McArtor, chairman of the NCAA Baseball Committee.

The pairings were announced Monday.

Conference winners got 26 automatic bids to the regional tournaments, which will be played May 24-28. Each regional will send its champion to the College World Series to be played at Roseblatt Stadium in Omaha, Neb., June 1-9.

The eight top seeds with region are: North Carolina, Northeast; Miami, Fla., Atlantic; Louisiana State, South I; Florida State, South II; Arkansas, Midwest; Texas, Central; Stanford, West I; and Arizona State, West II.

Defending champion and 13th-ranked Wichita State (44-17) will meet Georgia Southern (46-16) in the Midwest Regional in Wichita.

The ACC teams selected were 12th-ranked and top-seeded North Carolina (49-12), which goes against No. 6 Rutgers (33-17) at Waterbury, Conn.; No. 2 Clemson (42-20), which plays No. 5 Creighton (46-20) in the Central regional at Austin, Texas; No. 4 Georgia Tech (46-23), which goes against No. 3 Houston (41-21) in the South I regional at Baton Rouge, La.; and No. 2 North Carolina State (46-18), which plays No. 5 Citadel (40-12) in the Atlantic regionals at Coral Gables, Fla.

In addition to Stanford, the Pac-10 South teams chosen were second-ranked ane, Ariz.; No. 2 Southern Cal (37-20), which plays No. 5 Southern Mississippi (41-23) in the South I; and No. 4 UCLA (39-24), which plays No. 3 South Alabama (41-18) in the Midwest regionals.

"We looked at the regular-season performance as well as the conference in making the decision," McArtor said. "The committee looks at the total picture and tries to accommodate geographics."

Campbell, Texas-Arlington and Southern Mississippi are making their first appearances in NCAA regional competition.

The Big West, Missouri Valley, Southwest and Sun Belt conferences each has three teams in the playoffs, while the Big Ten, Metro, Trans America and West Coast conferences each has two teams.

NBA: Jordan held to 20 points

From 1D

ing 11 points in the third quarter. His basket with 2:37 left in the quarter put Detroit back on top and started an 8-2 run that gave Detroit a 74-69 edge heading into the fourth period.

The Pistons outrebounded the Bulls 44-34 and outshot them from the field 47 percent-41 percent.

The Bulls were as cold in the first half as were the Pistons in the third quarter.

Detroit hit 20 of 42 shots in the first half to Chicago's 12 of 34, outrebounded the Bulls 25-17 and forced 14 turnovers, half in the opening 9½ minutes as the Pistons built a 27-12 lead. The Bulls went 3 minutes, 42 seconds before scoring their first basket and hit only five of 18 shots in the opening period.

Dumars scored 10 points as Detroit built a 15-point first-period lead. Chicago cut the deficit to nine at the break, but Vinnie Johnson scored 10 in the second period as Detroit twice pushed the margin to 17.

Jordan was particularly ineffective, taking only seven shots and making but two, one in each period.

The Pistons always seem to bring out the worst in Chicago. The Pistons are 24-6 against the Bulls over the last three seasons, including playoffs.

During the regular season, the Bulls averaged 109.5 points per game but just 97.8 points against the Pistons. Jordan, who won his fourth consecutive NBA scoring title by averaging 33.6 points a game, managed only 26 a game against the Pistons.

The Pistons have held opponents below 100 points in nine of 10 playoff games and to 90 points a game. In 27 playoff games over two seasons, Detroit has allowed 100 points only three times.

STARS: Schools fields deemed out of question the guise of the PBSA, on PBSA fields, utilizing PBSA insurance," Logan said.

From 1D

If the Stars and PBSA had been unable to get together Tuesday, the Stars would have been in danger of either, 1) forfeiting all their home matches for a lack of a field, or 2) disbanding their franchise.

Dyer, an Odessa trucking executive who formed the Southwest Independent Soccer League franchise last fall, said Tuesday he has always intended to use a Midland facility as his team's outdoor home.

But, according to Dyer, the Midland Independent School District was not receptive to his club's needs.

Dyer told the board that he was especially disappointed in the reaction of MISD Athletic Director Jack Tayrien.

"He (Tayrien) kept coming up with excuses...and finally he said that he didn't want anything but football played there."

Tayrien said his decision was based on established MISD policy.

"I told him (Dyer) that we generally keep activities off that field in the summer, because that's our primary growing season.

"We have junior varsity and varsity football games every Thursday and Friday night during football season, and that puts a lot of strain on the playing surface."

With Memorial Stadium out of the question, Dyer turned to the Ector County ISD. He told the PBSA board that AD John Wilkins seemed "very negative" about the idea, though the two men never personally met. Dyer said he was later told by assistant AD Harold Green that the fields needed to be made ready for the junior high school football season.

Wilkins was unavailable for comment Tuesday evening.

With the use of school facilities out of the question, Dyer turned to the City of Odessa, which has been working on a pair of "all-purpose" fields at Comanche Trail Park for more than two years. But Dyer was told those fields would not be ready until the end of July — and the Stars' last home match is set for July 28.

By then, the PBSA's Leggett was acutely aware of the situation.

"It's us or nothing," he said at the outset of Tuesday's meeting.

After the meeting, Dyer was appreciative of the association's support.

"The PBSA really came through big-time," Dyer said. "They really came in over and above expectations."

So the Stars should open their 1990 outdoor season as scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Sunday against the Lubbock Lazers. Admission is free, but concessions will be available.

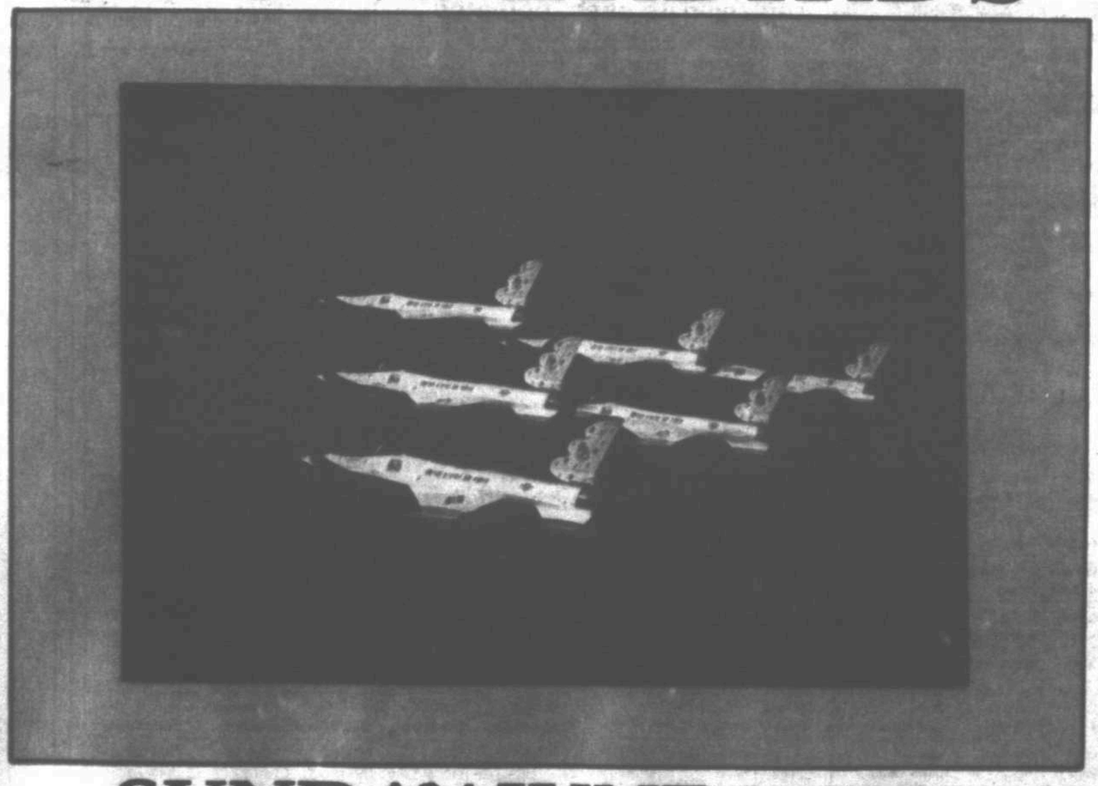

Oilers top Bruins, 5-1

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Edmonton took the lead with Glenn Anderson's speed, kept it with Bill Ranford's goaltending and moved one win away from its fifth Stanley Cup in seven years.

The Oilers, led by Anderson's two first-period goals and Ranford's stellar play, beat the Boston Bruins 5-1 Tuesday night for a 3-1 lead in the NHL finals.

Since the best-of-7 format was adopted in 1939, the only team to survive a 3-1 deficit in the finals was Toronto, which beat Detroit in 1942. Six teams in earlier rounds have overcome that obstacle.

Prices slipping

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices settled mixed Tuesday as the market was moved by largely technical factors.

The June contract for West Texas Intermediate fell sharply in New York Mercantile Exchange trading because it was expiring at the end of the session.

The contract tumbled 58 cents to close at $17.68 a 42-gallon barrel. The July contract for crude fell 12 cents, the August contract edged 1 cent lower but subsequent months advanced.

Prices for refined products traded on the exchange also were mixed.

Unleaded regular gasoline for delivery in June fell 0.31 cent to 63.04 cents a gallon. The July contract also slipped lower, but later months closed higher.

Southmark S&L

DALLAS (AP) — Southmark Corp. has declared its Houston-based San Jacinto Savings Association unit insolvent and says it won't be able to meet required minimums for capital despite earlier plans to pump $100 million into the savings and loan.

San Jacinto, under regulatory oversight since 1988, is one of the largest thrift institutions in the state that hasn't been sold or seized by federal regulators.

The disclosure Monday in a federal Securities and Exchange Commission filing raises new questions about Southmark's ability to keep control of San Jacinto after Southmark emerges from Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization, filed in 1989.

Dollar, gold up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose modestly Tuesday against other major currencies, except for the Japanese yen and Swiss franc, in European trading.

GOLD

Gold prices also were slightly higher.

Currency dealers said the dollar got a boost from a combination of technical factors and the weakness of the West German mark.

The dollar slid against the yen after a senior U.S. Treasury official indicated a further weakening of the dollar would be acceptable, although not necessarily a remedy to the U.S. trade deficit.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6915. By midday it was up to $1.69325.

Dollar rates in Europe: 1.6685 West German marks; 1.4175 Swiss francs; 5.8175 French francs; 1.8760 Dutch guilders; 1,225.25 Italian lire; and 1.4907 Canadian dollars.

Gold rose in London to a late bid price of $376 a troy ounce from $373.25 bid late Monday. In Zurich, gold rose to $376.35 an ounce from $373.50.

Dow's new high

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which on Monday gained 24.77 points to post its fourth record high in the past six sessions, was up 6.13 at 2,810.61.

S&L dump could siphon local taxes

■ Bargain sales of foreclosed S&L properties could mean huge tax losses for local governments.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Local governments could lose millions of property tax dollars because of bargain sales of foreclosed properties held by insolvent savings and loans, an economic forecaster says.

Don Reynolds, head of the Tarrant County Economic Development Commission, told Tarrant County commissioners that sales of land by the Resolution Trust Corp. are "a sleeping bombshell" that "literally will cost millions" to schools and other taxing bodies.

"I don't think we've really realized how big it is," agreed Jim Wells, vice chairman of the commission, which was appointed by county commissioners to advise them on economic matters.

Wells urged county commissioners Monday to name a special committee of area business leaders to study the problem and seek solutions.

"You may wonder why in the world county government would want to get into that," Wells said. "But there are dispossessed thousands of parcels of property and buildings that were held by insolvent thrifts.

The RTC has said it will sell repossessed real estate at steep discounts to get it off government hands.

The result could mean dramatic effects on large school districts, cities and counties in Texas, which rely heavily on property taxes, Wells said.

As an example, Wells cited a 90-acre property in North Richland Hills once owned by the failed Lamar Savings and Loan. Lost property value from that sale alone will cost the Birdville school district $95,000, he said.

The RTC, at the end of February, owned $16.4 billion in real estate and was expecting its portfolio to mushroom as it continued repossessing property posted as collateral for delinquent loans. The RTC has sold about $2.1 billion worth of such parcels.

Federal regulators have said they intend to lower property prices to boost sales, but they aim to avoid fire sales that could spook fragile real estate markets.

The RTC agreed to allow its managers to cut prices by 15 percent if a property goes unsold for six months. Four months will be allowed for single-family homes.

Microsoft unveils friendlier software

By Bart Ziegler

NEW YORK (AP) — Twice before, Microsoft Corp. unveiled computer software designed to give IBM computers and their clones the easy-to-use features of Apple Computer Inc.'s popular Macintosh. Both efforts fell short.

In its third try, to be unveiled Tuesday, Microsoft seems to have a hit.

Experts say the newest version of Microsoft's Windows successfully replaces the technical commands of most IBM computers with friendly on-screen graphics.

The development is being hailed by many computer experts as a watershed event for the Redmond, Wash.-based software company led by multibillionaire Bill Gates.

Microsoft will present Windows at news conferences Tuesday in New York and several other cities in the United States and around the world.

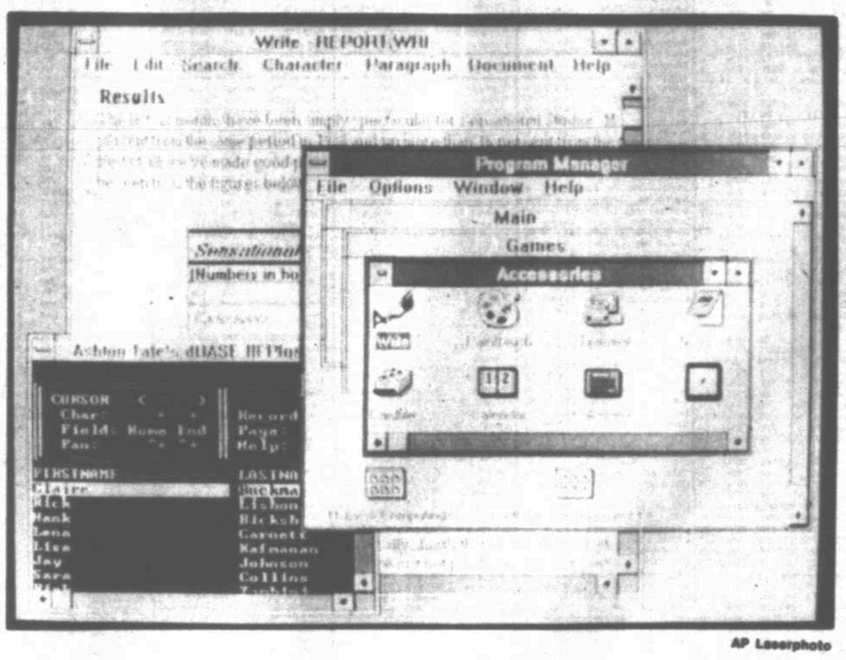

In addition to lots of publicity, the introduction of the new software has grabbed the attention of Microsoft's competitors and pushed the price of Microsoft shares to a new 52-week high.

Windows could spell trouble for Apple by ending the dilemma of many computer buyers: Whether to buy a user-friendly Macintosh, or an IBM or clone, which are harder to use but generally cheaper and compatible with many office systems.

For Apple, "it means they have seen their innovation lead in the market diminished," said Rick Sherlund, a computer analyst at Goldman, Sachs & Co.

PaineWebber Inc. analyst Stephen K. Smith last week downgraded his rating of Apple stock from "neutral" to "unattractive" due to Windows. Smith hailed

Greyhound asks for junk bonds

By John A. Bolt

■ Greyhound seeks to replenish its cash, depleted as a result of the bus drivers strike, by restructuring its balance sheet.

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc., seeking to replace cash spent on fighting a bus drivers' strike and avert bankruptcy, is asking junk bond holders to turn in their notes at a steep discount.

The company also said it will change its pay scale for drivers and withdraw proposed bonus and pension schemes to save money.

"The ability to restructure the balance sheet in some way is very important to avoid bankruptcy," said Michael Doyle, the company's chief financial officer.

"The cost of the strike has been pretty expensive," Doyle said, and cash is "very tight." Nevertheless, he said the only nationwide bus company is able to meet its payroll and buy fuel.

Greyhound issued a variety of junk bonds to refinance debt taken on in a leveraged buyout three years ago.

The bonds include $150 million due in 1995 that pay interest of 13 percent and $75 million of 12.5 percent bonds due in 1997. The two issues represented more than half of the company's total debt of $359 million at the end of 1989.

The company is technically in default on the first issue after missing a recent interest payment, and noteholders could force the company into bankruptcy.

As a result, Greyhound said it was making a cash tender offer to redeem the 13 percent notes at 54 percent of their face value and the 12.5 percent notes at 27.5 percent.

"The offers are being made in connection with an overall financial restructuring plan being developed by the company in an effort to avoid bankruptcy reorganization," Greyhound said.

Doyle said both offers are higher than prices currently quoted for the bonds in secondary markets.

The offer is conditibnal on its acceptance by a majority of noteholders.

American General wins proxy

■ The fourth largest insurance company, American General, has claimed victory in proxy fight with Torchmark Corp.

HOUSTON (AP) — American General Corp., which surprised shareholders last month by announcing the company was for sale, announced Monday that preliminary results of a proxy fight with rival Torchmark Corp. showed the American General board prevailed.

American General, the nation's fourth-largest insurance company based in Houston, said the results by the independent inspectors of the shareholder vote at the May 2 annual meeting indicated that the slate of six nominated by the company carried by a margin of 2-to-1.

Resolutions proposed by Birmingham, Ala.-based Torchmark calling for American General to hire an investment banking firm and appoint a committee of independent directors to evaluate acquisition proposals also were rejected, a statement by American General said.

Elected to the board of directors were Brady F. Carruth, president of Gulf Coast Capital Corp.; Richard J.V. Johnson, publisher of the Houston Chronicle; and Robert E. Smittcamp, president of Lyons-Magnus Co. Inc.

Re-elected to the board were American General's Chairman Harold S. Hook, Michael J. Poulos, American General president, and Henry S. Romaine, vice president and chief investment officer.

American General does not expect a change in the results, but said the election results remain subject to review and challenge.

American General announced at the annual meeting that the company was vulnerable to possible acquisitions at a discount price and therefore decided to offer itself for sale to realize the maximum value for stockholders.

Torchmark made an unsolicited $6.34 billion cash and stock offer for American General in March, but withdrew its offer, opting instead to wage a proxy fight to elect its own nominees to the 15-member board.

JA plans appreciation luncheon

By Mella McEwen

Kozmetsky

Dr. George Kozmetsky, executive associate for economic affairs for the University of Texas Systems will be the keynote speaker at the May 29 Junior Achievement Appreciation luncheon.

The luncheon will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

"We're excited about having someone of his stature in the business community," said Norma Webb, executive director of Junior Achievement.

The luncheon is intended to honor teachers, principals and school administrators as well as business leaders who volunteer their time, and corporations who help support JA. Webb oversees JA programs in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

According to Webb, Midland has a total of 1,962 students in Midland, well over half the 2,635 total students from the three cities. There are also 300 volunteers working with the students. She went on to note that JA has added a new program in the alternative schools in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

Over 96 percent of the DAIRY QUEENS in Midland and Odessa have entered the frozen yogurt market, and the company expects more than 2,000 Dairy Queen stores across the country to offer the non-fat, cholesterol-free yogurt by the end of the summer.

"We believe there is room for growth in the frozen yogurt segment," sayd International Dairy Queen president Michael P. Sullivan. He notes that industry research shows the number of frozen yogurt units has risen 400 percent in the last five years, yet half the population has not tried frozen yogurt. The nation's largest yogurt chain, TCBY, currently has 1,600 units.

Local Dairy Queens will offer vanilla-based yogurt in cones, sundaes and blended with fresh fruit or chocolate, or customers can choose the "Breeze," frozen yogurt blended with any "Blizzard" flavor.

The Dairy Queen company is preparing to celebrate its 50th birthday this year. The first store opened in Joliet, Ill. in 1940.

ANALYSIS

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Fresh declines in interest rates and a late buying surge helped the stock market extend its spring rally on Tuesday, propelling the Dow Jones industrial average to its fifth record high in seven sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which climbed 24.77 points to an all-time high on Monday, gained 7.55 points to set another record at 2,852.23.

Chances for another advance were in some doubt at midday as profit-taking eroded a strong early rally but buyers appeared in the last 30 minutes of trading to give the market a lift.

Advancing issues outnumbered losers by about 8 to 7 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 816 up, 689 down and 501 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 203.35 million shares, up from 166.28 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 242.36 million shares.

The market got an early lift from declining interest rates and a strong performance on stock markets in Tokyo and London.

In the credit markets, yyelds on 30-year Treasury bonds slipped toward 8.61 percent from 8.68 percent late Monday.

After the market opened, the Dow Jones industrials surged nearly 26 points higher in the first half-hour of trading before the rally stalled.

By noontime, the Dow Jones industrial average was slightly below Monday's closing level and it drifted in negative territory for most of the afternoon.

"There was probably a little too much exuberance at the beginning," said Newton D. Zinder, a market analyst for Shearson Lehman Hutton.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Municipal bonds ideal, 28%-33% tax bracket

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am in the 28 percent federal income tax bracket and have a $30,000 certificate of deposit paying 8 percent interest. The CD will mature soon. I do not need that money, but I do not want to take any risk seeking a higher return.

However, I feel it would be more advantageous for me to put the $30,000 into 7.2 percent AAA rated municipal bonds so that I would not have to pay income tax on the interest.

Do you agree?

Doyle

A. From a straight income point of view, the reply has to be a resounding "YES."

In your income tax bracket, 7.2 percent tax-free interest provides a good deal more income than 8 percent taxable interest. In fact, for you, 7.2 percent tax-free interest is equal to 10 percent taxable interest.

There's a relatively simple formula for figuring this out. It goes as follows. Municipal bond interest divided by 100 percent minus your percentage tax bracket equals "taxable equivalent yield."

Taking this step in two steps, we see that 100 percent minus 28 percent is 72 percent and 7.2 percent divided by 72 percent equals 10 percent.

The calculation gets much more complicated if you live where state and city income taxes are levied. In that case, you first must reduce your local tax bracket by your federal tax bracket — because you are allowed to deduct state and local taxes on your federal income tax return. Then add that reduced number to your federal tax bracket and use the resulting larger number as your percentage tax bracket number in the formula outline above.

The resulting formula works only if you own bonds issued in the state in which you live and there is no state or local income tax on those bonds.

Although this is complex, it's not nearly as bad as it was before the Tax Reform Act of 1986 reduced the number of federal income tax brackets from 15 to the present three — 15, 28 and 33 percent.

In a nutshell, it pays to own municipal bonds only if you are in the 28 or 33 percent federal income tax bracket.

Q. Are municipal bonds really safe?

A. Except for the disgraceful $2.25 billion story of Washington Public Power Supply System, defaults on municipal bonds have been relatively rare. When you buy a municipal bond you can be reasonably sure of collecting interest every six months and receiving the bond's face value when it reaches it maturity.

Just be aware that if you sell a "muni" before its maturity date, you might get more or less than you paid for it. That's known as "market risk."

SOFTWARE: Apple plans to fight back

the new version of Windows as the biggest software development since the advent of 1-2-3, the spreadsheet program from Lotus Development Corp. that is among the most popular computer applications.

Those opinions helped send Apple stock down $1.75 a share Friday in national over-the-counter trading to close at $39.75, while Microsoft shares, also traded over the counter, rose $3.50 to close at $68.25. By midafternoon Monday, Microsoft shares rose $2.25 more to $70.50; Apple was unchanged after adjusting for a dividend.

Coincidentally, Lotus announced late Friday it had called off its plan to merge with software maker Novell Inc. The merger was seen as providing a viable competitor for Microsoft for dominance of the personal computer software market.

Apple, meanwhile, isn't standing still. The Cupertino, Calif.-based company is expected to fight back later this year by introducing a low-price version of the Macintosh. Apple also filed a lawsuit against Microsoft in 1988 contending earlier versions of Windows — and, by implication, the new version — infringe on Macintosh patents. The case is pending.

Many experts say the Macintosh still is tops for graphics-intensive uses, such as desktop publishing.

"Any-useral Data Corp., a high-technology research firm.

Microsoft also denies it is trying to edge out the Macintosh. Russ Warner, a Microsoft executive who headed the Windows development unit, says it would be crazy for the company to target the 7 percent of the computer market that uses the Macintosh, instead of the estimated 85 percent that uses IBM computers and their clones.

"We're talking about getting those 85 percent to understand the benefits of graphics," Warner said.

Most IBM machines and compatibles use an operating system call, MS-DOS, which was developed by Microsoft. Operating systems allow a computer to perform such basic functions as opening files and responding to keyboard commands.

But MS-DOS is notorious for its complexity.

Bernard trades close call for role in NBC's 'Wings'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A real trouper is one who, despite a near-fatal gassing, can rebound almost immediately to audition for a good part.

Crystal Bernard fits that description. It's why she's now a co-star of NBC's "Wings," playing Helen Chappel, an aspiring cellist who runs the lunch counter at a small airport on Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Bernard, whose character is the long-time friend of Timothy Daly and Steven Weber, cast as owners of a one-plane commuter airline, considers herself lucky in more than one way.

She was working on the TV movie "Without Her Consent" on a day when filming was delayed because of lighting problems.

"I went to my trailer to lie down and I passed out because of carbon-monoxide poisoning," she said. "They found me in the trailer's toilet about three hours later. I was paralyzed. I couldn't move. They rushed me to one hospital, then to another, where I was put into an oxygen chamber.

"I was very close to dying. When I was released from the hospital, I had to have someone watch me at night to see that I didn't have a seizure. When I woke up the next morning, I found a script on my door. It was 'Wings,' and I went down immediately to read for it. I know that's ludicrous, but I loved it so much."

"Wings" was created by three former producers and writers for "Cheers" — David Angell, Peter Casey and David Lee — and follows "Cheers" on Thursdays.

The show, which runs for seven episodes, has gotten mixed reviews from critics, but Bernard, who spent five years on the syndicated comedy "It's a Living," is convinced it's going to make it despite tough competition from ABC's "Twin Peaks."

Bernard spent a year on "Happy Days," had a recurring role on "My Two Dads" and has appeared several times on "Paradise" as a school teacher. She co-starred with Michael J. Fox in the TV movie "High School U.S.A.," and earlier this year was seen in the movie pilot "Chameleons."

Her character on "Wings" is, like herself, from Texas. But unlike Bernard, she's a woman who has struggled to shed 60 pounds. She's also fiery and outspoken.

"Helen has a weight problem, and I kind of figure that's why she's fiery," Bernard said. "People would comment on her weight, and she'd fire back. Nobody has her number ..."

Bernard

Bernard says she has been cast in every comedy role she's auditioned for, but not every venture has been a success.

Once, on a visit to Los Angeles for a religious concert with her father, she tried to get the president of NBC on the telephone to tell him she wanted her own variety show.

Smits, others join 'Switch' cast

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Smits, JoBeth Williams and Lorraine Bracco have joined star Ellen Barkin in the cast of Blake Edwards' new comedy, "Switch."

"Switch" is a contemporary fantasy about a misogynist who dies and is reincarnated as a beautiful woman. As a female, he has to undergo all the highhanded, selfish treatment that he inflicted upon women in his earlier life.

Some fan mail must remain unanswered

Park Overall of "Empty Nest" would like to answer her fan mail, but she says her bosses won't let her. They're afraid her letters might send unbalanced admirers around the bend.

"I got the cutest letter from a prisoner in Attica," she says. "It was the sweetest thing.

"And I got a letter from somebody who wanted to hang my picture behind a bar. It just kills me not to answer, but I can't." — CNS

Gorbachev aides OK radical economic reforms

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's presidential council of advisers approved a plan Tuesday that would double food prices next year and introduce other radical reforms to ease the Soviet Union into a market economy by 1995.

The council stressed the need to help the poor survive the high prices by introducing compensation and indexing, the official news agency Tass reported.

The government plan will be presented to the Supreme Soviet legislature on Thursday by Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told reporters.

An accompanying resolution decrees that prices on bread, so cheap some of it is used to feed cattle, will be raised as early as July to offset higher grain prices. But it also calls for immediate compensation to help poor people buy bread, their main staple.

The resolution also says new laws are needed on free enterprise, anti-trust, foreign investment, income indexing, employment, banking and customs. It requires the laws be ready for passage in September.

The program is designed to rescue an economy plagued by huge shortages, strikes and ethnic conflicts.

While outlining major price increases and other reforms, the report emphasized the need to control inflation, unemployment and other social ills.

The government will continue to regulate the cost of basic foodstuffs, including meat, bread and cooking oil, a draft of the planned reforms said. The reforms would stagger the cumulative shock over five years instead of the two discussed earlier.

Soviet officials are wary lest abrupt increases in food prices set off riots and strikes, like those that toppled Polish Communist governments in the 1970s and 1980s.

The Kremlin's new readiness to take harsh measures become more understandable in the light of disturbing figures on current economic performance. In the first quarter of 1990, cash incomes grew by 13.4 percent while the gross national product declined, the report says.

Up to April, political strikes and inter-ethnic conflicts led to the loss of 9.5 million man-hours, compared to 7 million man-hours lost in all of 1989.

Prices in state stores for many basic foods presently are low. Potatoes cost as little as 8 cents a pound and beef $1.80 a pound.

Boris N. Yeltsin

Yeltsin calls for sovereignty

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin won applause from Russian congressional deputies on Tuesday with a call to wrest control of the republic — the Soviet Union's largest — from the Kremlin.

Yeltsin, a rival of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, is seeking the presidency of the republic, which includes Moscow, said communism "continues to cling to life though its time has passed, and has hurt Russia most of all."

Yeltsin's sovereignty proposal would allow the republic to have final say over whether Soviet laws and decrees are valid on its territory, which stretches from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean. The Russian republic embraces 11 time zones and the vast oil, gas, mineral and gold reserves.

Congress was expected to vote on various sovereignty proposals Wednesday or Thursday, then turn to nominations for president. The president is chosen by the Congress rather than in general elections.

Yeltsin is running against Russia's premier Alexander Vlasov and several others. He has said he believes about one-third of the Congress' 1,059 deputies support him.

A Yeltsin victory could mean a loss of face for Gorbachev, whose policies are frequently and stridently criticized by Yeltsin.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Multinational forces approved

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other NATO defense chiefs on Tuesday backed using their soldiers to form multinational armies in Europe to keep NATO solidarity alive.

The proposal, if enacted, would result in an overhaul of the 40-year-old pact's military structure.

Supporters say it is aimed at producing renewed political support for the alliance among member nations as they face the evaporation of the Warsaw Pact and as they prepare to welcome a unified Germany into their ranks.

"Given the changing threat, there is no alternative," said Cmdr. Stefan Lang, a spokesman for the West German defense ministry. "Existing forces will be hollowed out and we have to reconfigure them."

Gen. Vigleik Eide, who serves as chairman of the alliance's Military Committee, formally declared NATO's primary military foe conquered at the morning session, telling reporters, "It is our clear assessment that the threat from a united Warsaw Pact no longer exists."

New Yemen formed

ADEN, Yemen (AP) — North and South Yemen joined Tuesday to become one nation, the Republic of Yemen, an impoverised country sitting on newly discovered oil reserves.

Gen. Ali Abdullah Saleh, the president of the unified state, raised the new country's red, white and black flag atop the portside Presidential Council building at noon.

The republic is poor but has recently located oil reserves unofficially put at 2 billion barrels. The nation sits on the strategically located Bab al-Mandab, a strait at the southern outlet of the Red Sea into the Indian Ocean.

Saleh said at a rally that the republic will honor all treaties either of the former countries concluded.

First charges brought

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany on Tuesday accused a former top Communist official of squandering government money, the first formal criminal charges to be brought against a member of the old regime.

Also Tuesday, lawmakers from the ruling coalition called for the resignation of Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel for trying to use an ex-Communist spymaster as an adviser and for failing to fully dismantle the former government's system of police informers.

Peter Przbylski, a spokesman for the federal prosecutor's office, said Werner Krolikowski, 61, a member of the former Communist Party's ruling Politburo and a deputy prime minister, faces trial in an East Berlin city court on charges of abuse of trust.

No trial date has been set, he said.

Search called off

KAATSHEUVEL, Netherlands (AP) — Police on Tuesday called off a two-month search for two wallabies that have been running wild on the outskirts of this Dutch town for two months.

"It can't do any harm to let them live up in the dunes," Deputy Commander J. N. Boer of the National Police told The Associated Press after abandoning the search. "Besides, we have better things to do."

The wallabies are relatives of the kangaroo and are also native to Australia. They were the pets of a local resident until they hopped over his fence.

Police were concerned the sight of two 20-inch-high wallabies hopping down the highway might cause a traffic accident. They even called in a helicopter to ferret out the marsupials.

The wallabies eluded searchers.

"Last Thursday I was called to a house on the edge of a meadow where a kangaroo was unassumingly eating grass in the backyard," veterinarian Erik van der Kamp told the AP.

Ministry surrounded

MADRID, Spain (AP) — About 500 anti-apartheid demonstrators formed a human chain around the foreign ministry on Tuesday to protest an upcoming visit by South African President F.W. de Klerk.

The protesters formed a line from Madrid's main square to the foreign ministry and chanted slogans equating Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez with de Klerk.

The South African leader is scheduled to arrive Thursday as part of a nine-nation European tour and will meet with Gonzalez and King Juan Carlos before leaving the same day.

Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez and other top diplomats said they do not plan to lift economic and cultural sanctions against South Africa during the visit. The sanctions were imposed to protest against South Africa's system of racial discrimination.

One top diplomat said Spain would not change its sanctions "until the normalization in that country was irreversible."

Rights record better

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International said Wednesday that Pakistan's human rights record has improved under Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, but abuses reportedly persist, including torture, rape and whippings.

The report by the worldwide human rights group said 2,029 death sentences were commuted after Mrs. Bhutto took office in October 1988, thousands of prisoners were freed, and compensation was promised for torture victims.

But Amnesty said "scores of people were reportedly tortured in police stations last year, including at least eight women who were allegedly raped. Torture in prisons has decreased but is still likely to recur as those responsible have not been brought to trial."

Massacre alleged

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela accused the South African government Tuesday of massacring demonstrators and causing black-on-black violence.

Mandela also charged the government with defaming his wife, Winnie, in a murder and assault trial involving one of her former bodyguards, and said the ANC is not satisfied with reforms introduced by President F.W. de Klerk.

Mandela, speaking to reporters after returning from an eight-nation African tour, said de Klerk has no control over the police force. He accused police of "slaughtering" black people involved in political demonstrations.

He alleged it was government policy to keep ANC supporters fighting members of the Inkatha political organization in Natal province, where more than 5,000 people have died in the past five years.

"It is quite clear that the government does not want this violence to end," Mandela said.
