BYRD'S EXPEDITION RETURNS TO CIVILIZATION

Nation To Pay Taft Highest Honors In Symbolic Military Funeral Service

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

The Bible continues to be the best seller among the books sold in America, more than 14 million Bibles and Testaments having been sold last year.

And in the United States of the total of 10,187 titles published, 806 were religious books, these ranked third, behind 2,142 of fiction and 931 of children's books.

The continued heavy sales of Bibles and religious books shows that the great masses of the people are still clinging to the old revelations in their spiritual quest.

In all the tributes that are being spoken of the late Chief Justice Taft, his gentleness, his generosity and balance are being emphasized. Mr. Taft was intensely human, loving and lovable. His very quality of trustfulness was responsible for his failure of being a great executive. He appears to have been the nearest to the normal man of any who has been in the White House in a generation.

Dr. Berenger in his book "The Human Mind" tells us that none of us are perfectly normal, and that a perfectly normal man would be an abnormality.

Some of the greatest things in literature and some of the greatest accomplishments in statesmanship have been the results of deviations of normality in the individual. For instance all of the psychologists who have had anything to say about Woodrow Wilson have talked about his abnormalities, yet these very abnormalities, most of them admit, were among the forces that drove hime to some of the greatest accomplishments of any man who was ever president.

So if you sense some of your own abnormalities, don't worry too much about it. As an abnormal entity you are in a company that embraces all humanity, and perhaps your very abnormality will make you of greater service to you fellows.

Still we must admire the nearly perfectly balanced man or woman. We wonder if the standard or normal includes being gentle, generous and loving and lovable.

The fact that a building revival is getting under way in Wichita Falls is no indication that we need any laborers, either skilled or unskilled, to help in building them. There are still hundreds of unemployed men in Wichita Falls. It is hoped there will be enough work for all who are competent, but this hope is for the future. The man who comes to Wichita Falls looking for a job is coming to a place where there are already more men than jobs.

The same thing can be said and ought to be understood in reference to our charities. We have more people here needing charity than can be provided for, and with a scarcity of funds in our community chest there will be more searching inquiry into the origin of such cases. Those originating on the outside will have no chance of assistance.

Wichita Falls certainly does no more welfare work than it ought, but there are many communities and counties which do much less or nothing at all so that some come to Wichita Falls with the hope of getting help. That hope is futile.

Improvement in the employment condition will relieve some of the demands on the community chest. We believe that improvement in the condition is already on the way in Wichita Falls, but its got far to go, and the community chest funds have already stretched almost to the breaking point.

President Hoover is represented as waiting for the spring tonic of road building and construction work to improve employment conditions. It is reported that he has no thought of calling an unemployment conference. He believes that the future will be brighter. We hope so.

But if his attitude toward unemployment is one of "watchful waiting" he is taking some positive action toward attempting to stabilize agricultural prices. He has asked congress to appropriate an additional $100,000,000 to be used by the federal farm board in making purchases of farm crops. It is comforting to know that our president is capable of positive and aggressive action in some things at least.

BODY TO REST SEVERAL HOURS IN CAPITOL

Former President's Wishes For Services to Be Fulfilled Tuesday

BURIAL IN ARLINGTON

Army Caisson to Carry Remains From Church to Cemetery

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service Writer
WASHINGTON, March 9. (US)—In the rotunda of the nation's capitol the body of William Howard Taft, former president and former chief justice, will lie in state Tuesday.

On that day, funeral services will be held with full military honors, and the body laid at rest in historic Arlington cemetery.

Plans for the funeral were announced at the White House after conferences throughout the day between members of the family and Col. Campbell B. Hodges, military aide to President Hoover, and George Akerson, secretary to the president.

Tuesday, the casket will be taken from the Taft home at 9 a. m. and borne upon an army caisson to the capitol. It will be escorted by a troop of cavalry.

Services at Church

In the rotunda the body will lie in state until noon. It will then be taken to All-Souls Unitarian church on Sixteenth street, where funeral services will be held.

The Rev. Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of the church and personal friend of Mr. Taft will preach the funeral service.

The body will be taken from the church to Arlington cemetery for interment.

Such, in brief, were the arrangements for the final tribute to the departed former president.

Burial Plot Selected

This afternoon Mrs. Taft, the daughter, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning and the two sons, Robert A. and Charles P. Taft, journeyed to the cemetery with Colonel Hodges and there picked out the final resting place.

The pallbearers at the funeral will be four picked men from the army and four from the navy, two of them U. S. marines.

The honorary pallbearers will be the members of the United States supreme court.

At the capitol, a guard of honor consisting of 30 non-commissioned officers of the army and 20 from the navy will be posted in the rotunda, where thousands will pass in silent tribute before the flag-draped bier.

Troops to Mass

Outside on the capitol plaza will be massed the troops and the naval and marine escort. They will form the procession from the capitol to the church and later from the church to the cemetery, escorting the caisson bearing the flag-draped casket.

The family will not visit the rotunda. They will go from the home to the church for the services and then to the grave.

President and Mrs. Hoover and former President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge will attend the church services.

It was the family's wish that the services be held at the church rather than at the capitol. It was at the Unitarian church that Mr. Taft worshipped.

Full Military Ceremony

It will be Washington's first full military ceremony in many years.

Troops will lay the casket on an army caisson. Horses with stirrups and saddles reversed, symbolical of a dead warrior, will start the procession to Arlington National

DR. COLEMAN DIES SUNDAY

Third Stroke of Paralysis Fatal to Wichitan

Dr. N. H. Coleman, 46, who practiced orthodontia and general dentistry in Wichita Falls for about 10 years, died at the home of his father in Marshall, Texas, about 5:40 o'clock Sunday morning, according to information received by friends here. Funeral services and interment will be held in Marshall at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Dr. Coleman's death came as a result of a third stroke of paralysis within a period of a year. The first stroke came while he was en route to Wichita Falls from a dental convention at Denver, Colo., last July. After several weeks in a hospital here, he was removed to a Dallas hospital and later to the home of his father in Marshall.

Dr. Coleman was widely known in North Texas medical, civic and social circles. He was outstanding in this section of the state in the practice and study of orthodontia. He was a member of the Wichita Falls Rotary club, Pat Carrigan post of the American Legion, several Masonic bodies and Maskat Shrine temple.

Besides his father, he is survived by three sisters and two brothers. He was unmarried. He had many friends in all parts of the state.

AUSTIN, March 9. (UP)—The state board of education will meet here this week with N. M. Washer, member of the National Advisory committee on illiteracy, to formulate a plan to reduce the number of people in Texas who can neither read nor write.

There are 295,844 illiterates in Texas, Washer said. His plan calls for establishing night schools in every town, including the outlying rural districts. The national committee has prepared a manual of suggestions which will enable teachers to aid adults and children in reading and writing.

Nicholson's Men Build Big Ladder

CARLSBAD, N. M., March 9.—Material with which we will construct ladders has been carried in from the surface for us and we are now preparing for a 70-foot climb up the wall to the gaping entrance to our mystery chamber.

During the two-days' wait our curiosity has grown and there has been little speculation on what we will find in the vast room above which we can see but which we have as yet been unable to reach. Word has come to me that a careful check of records has been made of the depths of caverns throughout the world and the 1,350-foot lower level we discovered last week in the deepest level on record. This newly found depth therefore gives Carlsbad caverns the distinction of being the deepest cave ever discovered in addition to its importance as the largest and oldest known cavern in the world.

Brinkman, Okla., Fire Causes Heavy Loss

Special to The Record News.

MANGUM, Okla., March 9.—Fire at Brinkman, nine miles north of here, destroyed the north side of Main street with the exception of the First National bank today. Loss is estimated at $75,000. A general merchandise store, three groceries, two cafes and a barber shop were among the buildings destroyed. A bucket brigade of Brinkman citizens held the fire in check until the Mangum fire department could reach the scene. The Mangum firemen worked for an hour before the fire was under control. They were handicapped by lack of city water, but used chemicals. No one was hurt.

Legislature Reconvenes With Nothing Settled

AUSTIN, March 9. (UP)—With only 10 days of the fifth special session remaining, the Texas legislature will re-convene Monday, still confronted by prison bills and the problem of passing tax bills to give the state $3,000,000 additional income annually.

The main taxation bill, a levy on Texas produced sulphur, has been passed by both the senate and the house, the upper branch enacting a 50 cent per ton tax and the lower branch a $1 tax. Conference committees have failed to compromise.

The aged actor is a veteran of three wars and was born in Texas when the state was under Mexican rule. His eyesight and hearing are said to be almost perfect.

CROWDS PACK SHOW GROUNDS

Monday Set Aside for Young Stock Raisers

FORT WORTH, March 9. (AP)—Boys and girls who are making a study of raising pure bred livestock to develop the industry in the Southwest will have their day Monday at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show, which Sunday played to one of the largest crowds that has ever attended the annual event on a single day. They will be here in special delegations. Many of them have baby beeves, dairy cattle and other exhibits in the exposition pens.

The weather man was kind to the exposition Sunday. Clear skies, warm springlike weather arrived and the crowds on the grounds were comfortable. Traffic reports showed one of the largest "parades" of autos the vicinity of the show has ever received.

There was a rodeo of thrills at the matinee. Out came "Midnight," the big black horse that has never been ridden, when the bronc riding event was announced. The animal is still "never ridden." In less than five seconds Pete Forrester took a nose dive for the Tanbark arena.

The matinee show was packed with thrills. Three other riders were thrown and another disqualified when he "pulled leather." Dan Utley of Belton was knocked unconscious when he was bounced

STATE AGAIN ASKS DEATH FOR HOOBLER

Selection of Jury in Second Trial of Oklahoman Starts Today

VENUE UNDECIDED

Testimony of Veniremen to Decide Place for Hearing

Unless unexpected developments arise at the last moment to postpone the case, D. J. Hoobler will go to trial for the second time Monday morning for the murder of Arthur Pendergraft, wealthy Oklahoma farmer, near here on Jan. 19, 1929. Both the state and the defense Sunday expected to be ready, although Joe Carrigan, defense council, expressed fear that one of his witnesses from Oklahoma might not be able to appear.

150 Veniremen Called

Judge P. A. Martin has announced that he will let the answers of the 150 special veniremen summoned for the trial determine the question of a charge of venue, declaring that the court itself will move for a transfer if there is any evidence of failure to get a fair and impartial jury from among the number. Mr. Carrigan explained that Hoobler has no money, his attorneys are serving by the appointment of the court and the removal out of the county would involve considerable expense both to witnesses and lawyers.

Selection of the jury is expected to require at least the whole of one day, and the tiral proper will probably not be completed until after the middle of the week, attorneys believe. The state will again seek the death sentence, Sam Spence, district attorney, announced Sunday. Mrs. Pendergraft, widow of the slain man, will again be among the first witnesses called, the attorney said.

Hoobler was convicted of the charge and sentenced to death by a jury in the 89th district court last March. The case was reversed by the court of criminal appeals several weeks ago.

Claims Self Defense

The defendant was charged with the murder after the disappearance of Mr. Pendergraft, his employer, after the two set out together for East Texas last January. At the direction of Hoobler, officers found the body of the slain man near the head of Lake Wichita several days later. In a statement made to investigating officers, Hoobler said he fired in self-defense when Mr. Pendergraft attacked him with an automobile crank on the Henrietta road. The state contends that the hope of gaining possession of the slain man's property was the motive for the shooting.

Among the principal claims made by the defense in the former trial and carired to the higher courts was the contention that the statement was inadmissible because it was obtained by coercion, after the defendant had been kept awake for three days and nights and had been threatened with a mob attack.

SANFORD'S BODY TO TENNESSEE

Supreme Court Colleagues To Attend Rites

WASHINGTON, March 9. (US)—The body of Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court Edward Terry Sanford left here tonight at 10:35 for Knoxville, Tenn., where the distinguished jurist will be buried tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

The death of the Tennessee jurist occurred only five hours before the passing away of former Chief Justice Taft yesterday.

The present chief justice Charles Evans Hughes headed a delegation of the former justice's colleagues tonight when he and Justices McReynolds, Stone and Butler accompanied the body to its final resting place.

Out of courtesy of the funeral arrangements for Chief Justice Taft, the widow of Justice Sanford consented to have the funeral services for her late husband directly at the grave where Justice Sanford will be interred. This will enable the members of the supreme court to return to Washington by a train leaving Knoxville about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The chief justice and his colleagues will thus arrive in Washington Tuesday morning in ample time for their melancholy duty of attendance at the Taft obsequies.

Special railroad arrangements were made to hold a train at Knoxville especially for the justices so that they may be able to attend the grave side services and return immediately afterwards.

HUGE THRONGS GREET PARTY IN N. ZEALAND

Populace of Dunedin Out To Shower Honors on Explorers

GUESTS OF OFFICIALS

Island Dominion Lauds Work of Adventurers In Message

DUNEDIN, New Zealand (Monday), March 10. (UP)—Rear-admiral Richard E. Byrd arrived here at 3 p. m.

As the expedition's flagship, the Bark City of New York, entered the harbor, a great cheer went up from the throngs crowding the pier on which it docked.

Virtually the entire population of this city of 85,000 acclaimed Byrd as the first man to fly over both the North and South poles and the only man who has accomplished the latter feat. The barque City of New York and the steamer Eleanor Bolling were met at the harbor entrance by launches carrying city and government officials, who greeted the explorer and welcomed him back to civilization.

Bands played "The Star Spangled Banner" and "The Conquering Hero" as the two ships with their escort made their way up the harbor escorted by tugs, launches, ferryboats and steamers while thousands of persons on the headlands, jetties and wharves cheered.

Ships in the harbor sounded their horns, motor launches scurried about, sirens adding to the din.

The day was perfect for the arrival, clear and cool.

Throngs at Docks

A bright sun shone from a cloudless sky, and throngs gathered at the docks to catch a first glimpse of the Americans who had been so long at the bottom of the world."

Cabinet ministers, members of the harbor board, naval officers and the mayor of Dunedin waited to welcome Byrd. They had arranged a civic reception for him this evening. Tomorrow the rear admiral will be the guest of the harbor board and the chamber of commerce.

The government sent the following message to Byrd before he docked:

"Congratulations on the success which has crowned your efforts. We rejoice your venturesome undertaking was carried out without loss of life and with little or no sickness. It bears eloquent testimony to the skill and care with which the expedition was organized.

World to Benefit

"Although to your own country you bring primarily the honor, the glory of the work you accomplished is one in the benefit of which the whole world shares.

"You and your intrepid adventurers take your place among those who by their courage and resourcefulness have added materially to the sum of human knowledge. The full results of your labors have yet to be made known, but that they will be of great value in relation to a portion of the globe of which comparatively little is known there can be no doubt."

Open Forum Programs Assured Here With Pledging of Fund of $1,265

Subscription of $1,265, sufficient to assure the establishment of an open forum in this city, was reported and plans for the completion of a permanent organization to conduct its work were adopted by the general forum committee at a meeting held at the chamber of commerce Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The report of a tentative canvas made by committees of the Junior chamber of commerce was given by Overton Abernathy, chairman, and showed that approximately 200 voluntary pledges have been received totalling $1,215, and that additional pledges amounting to about $50 have been signed, but are not yet in the hands of the committee. These pledges to the open forum fund were obtained by extending to members of local civic clubs an invitation to participate in the movement, and by presenting the plan to about 100 other local citizens, it was said.

The response of the citizenship generally to the proposal to establish here a lecture-forum similar to that extant in Dallas, Houston, and other Texas cities, Mr. Abernathy said, indicates clearly that there is a wide and active interest in the movement.

Board of Directors

Incorporated in the report, which was adopted by the unanimous vote of those present Sunday, were several recommendations, based largely upon the views of Elmer Scott of Dallas, secretary of the Open Forum there and active in encouraging a similar organization

Tom Connally Raps Administration For Blaming Senate With Unrest

WASHINGTON, March 9. (AP)—Faced by an ever-changing majority, the senate will resume work on the tariff bills this week with virtually all the important industrial rates hanging in the balance.

The old coalition of Democrats and Republican Independents, which won almost every important contest in the last six months of debate only to run up against a new majority last week on sugar and cement, will be found maneuvering to regain these losses and to prevent further inroads on the bill they have rewritten.

The tariff bill was the object of an attack today by Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, who asserted it had become "increasingly clear that the bill will go to conferences as a Mellon-Grundy measure."

He assailed "attempts to saddle the administration's burden of unemployment on the so-called delay in the passage of the tariff," asserting they presented "a sorry spectacle in which Secretary of Labor Davis appears as the leading figure."

"His contradictory statements," Connally said, "have been debunked by virtually every American newspaper regardless of politics and branded as a cheap attempt at evasion."

"Originated under the pretext of aiding the farmer," he continued, "the present tariff bills bid fair to be converted into an engine of further oppression of the consuming public. It is a safe prediction that congress will pass the bill agreed upon in conference, as it always has done, and that the president will sign it."

Former President to Have Military Funeral cemetery. There he will keep the bivouac of the dead until reveille.

Mr. Taft will be the first president to rest in the hallowed ground where most of the country's heroic dead sleep.

Smiling and chatting a day before he died he asked his family to put him there.

Sons Arrive

His sons, Robert A., and Charles P. Taft arrived this morning. They were met at the train by Col. Campbell H. Hodges, aide to president Hoover and George Akerson, his secretary. The "boys" as the former president referred to his sons told them that their father wished to be buried at Arlington. His daughter Helen Taft Manning, said that the former commander in chief of the armed forces of the United States had expressed the same desire to her.

With the two sons of the former president, Colonel Hodges, military aide to President Hoover, went to Arlington National cemetery late today to select the place where Mr. Taft will be buried. It is to be near the Sheridan gate, named for the famous cavalryman of civil war days and a friend of the former president.

Impressive Cortege

The plot is in the northeast section of the cemetery. It overlooks the new Memorial bridge now under construction. There in a grove of large oak trees, the body will be laid at rest. Close by is the grave of Robert Todd Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln.

When the cortege moves it will be as impressive as any which ever has escorted a departed soldier there. All troops in the capital area, soldiers and friends of Spanish-American war days, the Philippine campaign, his time as secretary of war under Roosevelt will participate.

The President and Mrs. Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, the only surviving former president and first lady of the land, all personal friends of Mr. Taft will attend the funeral.

Washington was in official mourning today. In the churches everywhere there were services and prayers in tribute for the departed and for the consolation of the family.

Widow Bears Up

At the Taft home, it was stated that Mrs. Taft was bravely bearing up under her burden of sorrow. She and her daughter Mrs. Manning who had maintained the long vigil at the bedside, were comforted at the arrival of the two sons.

They were taken to the home immediately this morning in a White House car, accompanied by Secretary Akerson and Colonel Hodges.

In the afternoon Colonel Hodges visited the home to discuss the funeral arrangements.

During the day crowds of Washingtonians passed the Taft home. It is on Wyoming avenue, a modest brick house on a quiet residential street lined with beautiful trees.

Special details of police kept the traffic moving. Near the entrance were newspapermen and photographers.

From morning until late evening motor cars drove to the home, and friends entered to extend their condolences.

Florists and messengers came frequently and magnificent floral tributes were delivered.

Among the first callers was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Others who came included Associate Justice McReynolds, the Canadian minister, Vincent Massey, Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, Representative Dyer, of Missouri, Miss Mabel Boardman, of the American Red Cross.

Others who called during the afternoon were Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, speaker of the house, Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Edward Everett Gan, sister of Vice President Curtis, and the ambassador of Italy, Nobile Giacomo de Martino.

FAVORITE VERSE

WASHINGTON, March 9 (AP)—Here is the Bible verse which Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of William Howard Taft, believes to have been his favorite:

"What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

It is found in the eighth verse of the sixth chapter of Micah.

'It's Nothing Less Than Wonderful'

"Orgatone Ended My Awful Suffering and I Am Gaining in Health Daily," Says Waco Man

"I have gained so much in health and strength since taking Orgatone, and I feel like a man with a new lease on life," said J. G. Lotta, residing at 2416 Clay street, Waco, Texas, recently.

"I have been almost knocked out with stomach trouble for over a year," continued Mr. Lotta, "and my nerves were all on edge. My liver was not working right and I was so bilious and irritable that the least bit of noise would completely upset me, my health was simply going to pieces and my appetite was practically nothing, my stomach was so upset that there were many things I couldn't eat. I did all I could trying to get relief but nothing helped me.

"I tell you no one realizes until they have gone through this kind of suffering just what torture it is. A few weeks ago I began taking Orgatone and am still taking it, gaining in weight and strength all the time, and I have been improving regularly ever since the day I started on the medicine. All that billiousness and stomach disturbance is gone and I don't know what suffering is, any more. I can eat anything I want, as much as I please, and have gained in weight. I have no nervous feelings now, no sign of constipation or any other troubles. In fact, I'm a perfectly well man and feel that it's nothing less than wonderful what Orgatone has done for me. I can recommend Orgatone believing I am telling the people about a medicine that will help them and I wouldn't be without it again for any amount of money."

Texan Convicted of Slaying Duncan Boy in 1921 to Get Hearing Today

Eugene McNutt of Austin May Be Released on Evidence to Be Given by Friends and Officials

Special to The Record News.

DUNCAN, Okla., March 9.—Convicted of murder here eight years ago by circumstantial evidence and given a life term in prison, Eugene McNutt of Austin, who went to prison protesting his innocence will get a hearing for a pardon before the state penitentiary pardon board at McAlester Monday.

McNutt, then a youth of 23, was convicted of the murder of Ben Coleman, 13-year-old Duncan boy who was killed here the night of Sept. 15, 1921, when he resisted a hi-jacker who robbed him and six other boys of about $6.

Friends Helped

McNutt was not without powerful friends to aid at his trial, but those friends were able to do nothing except avoid the death penalty.

These same friends will appear before the pardon board at the hearing Monday. Among them are McNutt's attorneys, W. C. Lewis and C. L. McArthur. Lewis was state senator at the time of the trial and is now assistant attorney general.

Jim Brown, veteran Stephens county deputy sheriff and relentless foe of criminals, has always maintained that McNutt is innocent. Brown will appear before the pardon board to present his theory that a taxi driver who fled the country after the killing was the murderer.

McNutt was arrested the morning after the murder when he left a southbound freight train at Waurika. He was returned to Duncan with two other suspects and was taken immediately to jail in Oklahoma City to prevent possible violence from a crowd of over 1,000 men who were searching the country for the killer.

A negro boy who was near the scene of the murder identified McNutt as the killer. This and the fact that McNutt had come to Duncan the evening of the killing on a freight train was evidence enough for the jury to convict.

Now all of the jurymen who can be located, seven in number, have signed the petition for a pardon. Cham Jones, district judge who presided, and Paul Sullivan, county attorney who prosecuted McNutt, have also signed the petition. Several hundred Duncan citizens have also asked for clemency.

McNutt escaped from the state penitentiary at McAlester five years ago and was captured after he had been injured in a fall from a freight train. He lost a leg in the accident.

here. These recommendations pointed out, among other phases of the movement, the importance of making such a movement one for the entire Wichita Falls area, as well as this city. Citizens of communities within comfortable driving distance of Wichita Falls will be invited to attend such lectures and entertainments as the forum may provide. Direct supervision of the forum will be placed in the hands of a board of 50 directors, approximately one-half of which will be selected from communities outside Wichita Falls, according to the suggestions made Sunday. It was also recommended that upon completion of the board of directors, they be instructed to elect officers and effect a permanent organization immediately, in order that arrangement of the 1930-1931 program of lectures may be started. It was indicated that Mr. Scott will be asked to appear before this directorate, soon after its selection, to familiarize them with the details of the work of similar organizations in Dallas and other cities.

Walter Cline, temporary chairman of the general committee, was authorized by unaimous vote of Sunday's meeting, to appoint within the next few days nine other persons to serve on a committee of which he will be chairman, the duty of which will be the early nomination of directors. Those who have pledged subscriptions to the forum fund will be asked to elect directors. It was predicted that permanent organization of the forum will be accomplished before the end of this month.

Extent of the territory which the proposed forum will endeavor to serve, the official designation by which it will be known, and other details of its inauguration as a "going concern" will be left to the directorate, according to views expressed Sunday afternoon.

Plan Bookings

Bookings for the lecture programs of open forums in other cities of the state are now being made, it was said, and completion of the preliminary work here will be rushed as much as possible in order to enable the local group to obtain advantageous engagements in association with other organizations.

It was emphasized in discussion Sunday afternoon that no solicitation of contributions to the forum will be made ouside of this city. Free-will offerings will be taken at each of the lectures given, and aside from the amounts derived from that source, expense of the movement will be taken care of by local subscriptions. Out-of-town citizens who wish to may contribute to the annual forum fund, it was decided, but no pledges will be solicited in such territory.

Work of the Junior chamber of commerce committees which have done the work thus far accomplished toward providing for the opening of forum activities here next fall was commended by the general committee Sunday. Besides Mr. Abernathy, the forum committee consisted of Paul W. Hines, Shadie F. Hale and Dr. Bailey R. Collins. Members of this group appeared before various service clubs in this city to accept pledges to the proposed forum fund. A special committee consisting of Mrs. Winonah Roach Ware, Miss Maude Thomas, F. C. Pardo, Roy E. Carter, W. H. Bailey, W. B. Featherston, and Roy E. Bowmer presented the matter to about 100 citizens not reached in the presentations made by members of the forum committee proper.

In making his report, Mr. Abernathy praised the energetic efforts expended by members of the two committees in obtaining practically the amount of pledges required in less than three weeks. About 25 persons attended the meeting Sunday afternoon.

Fat Stock Show Draws Throngs

out of the saddle by Broken Box. Attendants carried him from the arena and to the emergency hospital, where his injuries were found to be slight.

Wild steers were wilder than usual at the matinee Sunday, several trying to leap the arena railings. An iron railing was broken by one determined steer. Two steers collided accidentally in a mixup during the steer riding event and one of them took the count. He soon revived, however, and trotted outside.

Bob Crosby, Abilene, registered the best time for the present show in calf roping, roping and tying a calf in 19 2-5 seconds. Jim Nesbit, Lofton, S. D., made the fastest time for the afternoon in bulldogging, throwing his steer in 13 2-5 seconds.

Judging of one of the largest livestock shows ever assembled in the United States, probably the third largest, will start Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Boys' and girls' baby beeves will be the first to pass before the judges.

Other judging events Monday will be: Individual steers, boys' and girls' lamb entries, sheep, fat wethers and carlots, and grand champion steer. Considerable interest centers upon the award to the grand champion steer as the animal will be sold at the auction block, probably at a handsome price. After the steer has been accorded the highest award the show can offer, he will be led to the auction block. His bidders will include representatives of many hotels, chain stores, clubs, dining cars and hotels. The grand champion steer will be the champion of all breeds and will be recognized as the best beef animal the Southwest can offer.

First of the auction sales will be Tuesday, when shorthorns will be offered at the show sales pavilion.

TAX SUIT TO OPEN MONDAY

Cook to Rule on Legal Pleas In $31,200 Claim

Selection of a jury for the trial of a $31,200 suit brought by W. R. Anderson against Wichita county in connection with a contract for the collection of delinquent taxes will begin in the 78th district court Monday morning. At that time Judge W. W. Cook will rule on questions of law argued before him Saturday.

Mr. Anderson claims that he would have earned the $31,200 in commissions on deliquent tax collections if a contract covering the years between 1923 and 1927 had been fulfilled. He claims to have made the collections during a part of 1923 and until April, 1924, when the commissioners court, acting on a ruling from the attorney general withdrew from the agreement on the grounds that the contract was unconstitutional.

The present suit followed a supreme court ruling upholding a similar contract in another county, it was explained. In the meantime the county attorney has collected $600,000 in delinquent taxes without any cost to the county, Wayne Somerville, county attorney announced. The county will be represented in the case by Mr. Somerville and Ralph Mathis, special counsel.

Doctor Cook Leaves Prison

the rescue of the crew of the ill-fated Italian dirigible Italia, had lost his life in the crash of his plane.

Captain Amundsen, a former exploring companion of Doctor Cook, is well enough educated in the ways of the North to live for two years on seals, and other northern game, and finally work his way across the ice to civilization, the physician declared.

Erect of figure, appearing 10 years less than his 65 years, Doctor Cook said he would dedicate his immediate future to a study of a cure for narcotic degeneration. As night interne in charge of medical services at the prison, the physician already has made some progress in his research.

Although admitting the urge for polar exploration still held a lure, Doctor Cook said he felt he was too old to again undertake such effort. His immediate destination, after leaving the prison, was Chicago, where he has been paroled to Dr. P. F. Thompson, a life-long friend and fellow explorer.

After spending some time in Chicago, the physician said he intended to return to Texas to make his home. He came to the Leavenworth prison under sentence of 14 years and 9 months for using the mails to defraud in connection with an oil promotion scheme in Fort Worth.

Upon first reporting the pole's discovery Dr. Cook said he had told of the complete absence of animal life, icebergs and land at the pole, all contrary to general expectation. These facts, together with detailed reports on ice conditions, temperatures, and general physical conditions, have been verified, since his incarceration, by dirigible and airplane exploring parties, he asserted.

Entertainment provided for Monday's program, which is in charge of Gerald Pond, will include musical numbers by Jack Ernest, accordion player with the KGKO radio studios.

GRANT STREET REVIVAL OPENS

Special Music Features First Services

Revival services conducted by Rev. C. W. Thomas, with special music under the direction of E. U. Smith, were opened at 7:30 Sunday evening before a large congregation at the Grant Street Methodist church.

Mr. Smith led the congregation in a half hour of old church hymns at the beginning of the service. The same musical program will be followed throughout the meeting, the singing to begin each evening at 7:30.

In his sermon Sunday night Rev. Mr. Thomas told his hearers that "we are busy decrying our surrounding rather than looking for the way to change them."

"We are dodging shadows, because we are looking down instead of forward.

"Satan is always trying to hinder. But we have an opportunity to overcome all. The person, the church, the state, the nation which looks forward by prayer succeeds. They that wait on the Lord shall be strengthened. So it is that we are able to conquer all through growth by prayer."

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of cold: is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad, tongue coated; or you're headach billous, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime? —Adv.

State Federation To Stress Program Of Beautification

A statewide beautification program is one of the objectives of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs as announced by the state president, Mrs. R. F. Lindsay of Mt. Pleasant. The particular planting stressed is of flowers, shrubs and trees native to the state.

Members of the federated clubs are urged to plant a clump of redbud, to see that a bluebonnet grows beside each Texas doorstep, to plant the flowering dogwood on home grounds, to work toward a rose garden for every home and to plant two flowers that make a riot of color when planted in masses, larkspur and verbena.

Mrs. Ben G. Oneal, president of the first district of the state federation, in the recent conference held in Wichita Falls, announced beautification as one of her objectives.

Mrs. P. P. Langford is chairman in a local department of the forum of a committee urging the planting of redbuds and crepe myrtle in Wichita Falls. Crepe myrtle has been particularly stressed as a shrub suited to this section of the state, where last year it bloomed so bountifully.

The state president's program is being carried down through the districts to the federated clubs and the movement is promising for Texas' beauty.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

All through the country roads, the annual resurrection of nature has begun. Plum and pear and peach trees are blooming in orchards—more beautiful than any man-made picture.

Along the river banks there are tones of misty rose and green. Trees put on spring clothes at varying times. One wears now a vivid green; a group is still in wintry grey and black with possibly a little underbrush of green; then there's a long row in just the silvery grey green that Whistler loved to paint.

More shades of green than any other color in nature. Restful to heated eyes and looking cool even if it is hot. There's a purpose it seems in even the coloring of a flower.

The Greeks translation of all the phenomena of nature into their beautiful myths was a wonderful thing. Those little stories of flowers and trees and sounds have opened the eyes of so many children to the natural beauties of the earth.

Yet we have wondered often that there are not in Grecian tales and myths, more of the household animals. We remember no dogs—those nearest friends of man.

On a current magazine cover is a picture of "Pointer Mary Blue," the national winner last year of the title of best bird dog in the United States. "A pale liver spotted statue of a dog, outlined in arrested motion against the background of the rolling country of the old Hancock place," in Grand Junction, Tenn.

Col. Lamar Fontaine of Lyons, Miss., used to tell of having seen a dog come to a point in mid-air as he jumped one of the old rail fences in Mississippi.

Every man who has a good bird dog thinks his is the best on earth. Tom Hassell of Clifton, Tenn., believed his was not only the best pointer but the best retriever in the country.

He told of a hunt where he killed a partridge and it fell into the Tennessee river. Both he and the dog could see it where it was caught against a mass of driftwood. The dog immediately jumped in but he was on the wrong side of the brush and the current was carrying him away from the bird. His owner said the dog had sense enough to come to land and go in above the brush and float down to the bird which he brought to his master.

We know what a "good hunter" means to his master. But to us, the dog's most beautiful characteristic is his fidelity. A dog recognizes man as his friend and one that has been raised by and lived with one master, is faithful to the death.

We have heard of dogs that lay mourning on their master's graves. And we have seen dogs grieve for a friend who is gone.

In Mississippi, it seemed to us that every negro had his yellow dog. The dog loved the darkey and the darkey loved the dog. He would divide his last scrap of "cawn pone" with his "coon dog."

To us, the little dogs—pets of the parlor and lap dogs—have never appealed, but we have seen beauty in the wistfulness of the eyes of a common cur. Such eyes have made us think of the theory of transmigration and wonder if an erring soul was prisoned in a vagabond dog.

But, as in beauty, what one thinks beautiful is what his eyes can see—so, in dogs, each dog is to man what that man may see in him.

Society Girl Wins Struggle

Determined to Go on Stage, She Battles Odds

By H. ALEEN SMITH

NEW YORK, March 9. (UP)—"It's enough," said Miss Elisabeth Upthegrove, daughter of a railroad president, graduate of Vassar and a debutante of the 1927 season, "to make one bite one's lower lip."

In the neat studio apartment which she shares with two other young women, Miss Upthegrove told the United Press correspondent today all about her long struggle to get a part in a Broadway play, how, after wearing out three pairs of shoes, she finally met with success and then how the Metropolitan Press as much as accused her of having a "drag."

The St. Louis society girl, who is blonde and easy to look upon, has a minor role in "The Infinite Shoeblack," which opened on Broadway Feb. 17, starring Helen Menken.

"I'll have you know," she said today, "I paced the streets of New York for three weeks before I got a place in a show. I lived in a girl's dormitory uptown and every morning I started the rounds of the casting agencies. I admit that I was lucky."

Miss Upthegrove has wanted to be an actress as far back as she can remember.

Despite parental objection, Elisabeth worked toward a definite end. She went to Vassar because her mother wanted her to go to college. At Vassar she specialized in dramatics, headed the dramatic club, and in the summers went to Gloucester and played with a stock company.

In 1927 she graduated. She went home and, again to please her mother, made her debut. Then she abandoned the round of St. Louis society parties and went to London, where she studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. That was last year.

Last November she came to New York determined to haunt the casting offices for at least two years. She got a room in the dormitory and made the endless rounds daily. Finally, in the Shubert offices, she was selected as being the type to portray an English nurse in "The Infinite Shoeblack." Her work in that part, although it is a secondary role, has gained the attention of critics.

Miss Upthegrove's parents, learning she was to appear in a Broadway play, came to New York for the opening and withdrew all objections, once they had seen her on the stage.

All Is Not Fair In Love, Noted Writer Declares

All Is Not Fair in Love Despite the Old Adage. Love Can Be the Cruelest Thing on Earth When One Person Deliberately Takes Advantage of Another to Satisfy Personal Vanity or Greed

The old adage says "all is fair in love and war."

This is not true so far as love is concerned. There is no other act so indefensible as deceit or double dealing in love. There is no crime so black as treachery in love. The game of hearts is of necessity a gentleman's game in which each player must trust to the other's honor, and it should be played honestly and squarely with all the cards on the table.

Of course, we must all recognize that our emotions are not subject to our control. We cannot love or cease to love at will. And often in our ignorance of our hearts we diagnose our symptoms incorrectly and mistake what is only a passing fancy for a deathless passion. Also we change, and without rhyme or reason lose our taste for some certain individual whom we thought we adored, so that the touch that once thrilled us leaves us cold and we have as little appetite for the kisses that we once hungered for as we have for a second helping of a suet pudding.

Very often love is not strong enough to endure the strain of a long engagement. Very often love cannot stand the wear and tear of matrimony.

Sometimes a boy who honestly thought himself in love with a girl finds out that her only attraction for him was that of a pretty face, and that it is out of sight out of mind with him. Sometimes the girl finds out that the man she thought her Prince Charming is just a passing stranger who has none of the qualities she desires in a husband.

And there are many pitiful cases where men and women mistake puppy love for the grand passion, or a physical attraction for an absorbing devotion and who marry wives and husbands who bore them to tears, with whom they have not a thought nor an idea in common, and whom they actually come to hate in the revulsion of their feelings and because they stand between them and real love.

These are just the blunderers in love. They are not the criminals. When a girl jilts a boy, or a man breaks an engagement; when a man falls out of love with his wife, or a woman ceases to care for her husband, the aggrieved one always accuses the party of the other part of being a cheat and of having deliberately broken a trusting heart. But it is oftener the misfortune rather than the fault of those who have ceased to love. They would prefer to go on loving if they could.

The real sinners in love are those who make playthings of love and, like Lady de Vere in the poem, break a country heart for pastime ere they go to town; who just for the kick they get out of watching a conflagration deliberately start fires that sear lives and leave them nothing but a heap of burnt-out ashes.

There are girls who make a graft of love and whose kisses are as mercenary as those of any woman of the street and as much for sale. They know that men are like sheep about following the leader and that the more popular a girl is the higher men value her. So these girls willfully encourage the attentions of men they never have the slightest intention of marrying in order to get gifts from them, in order to be taken around by them, in order to make them come-ons for richer and more eligible men.

They are the worst sort of cheats because they feed these men, who love them with all their honest hearts and souls, on half-words and half-promises that keep their love alive. They will not let them go. They keep them hanging on with vague promises and elusive hopes until they have accomplished their purpose of snaring the men they want and then they kick the man they have befooled out of their way as carelessly as they do the strip of carpet on which they have walked to the altar.

Then there are the girls whose vanity demands that a living human sacrifice shall be made to it. These are the girls who find a fiendish delight in flattering and cajoling some middle-aged man into being unfaithful to his wife. They tell him pretty lies about what a boy he is and how much too young for his wife and that they love him for himself alone. And it amuses them to see how big a fool they can make of him and to watch the agony of his poor jealous wife who sees all that she holds dear in life being taken from her. Many a girl wrecks a home and orphans children and ruins the lives of a man and woman just for sport.

Worse still is the middle-aged woman who preys on boys. It makes her feel young again to feed on the fresh hearts of young lads. It flatters her to think that she can take them away from girls of their own age. She enjoys their adoration, their blind faith, and she uses every art and wile that her long experience with men has taught her to snare them, and then, when she has drained their emotions dry, she laughs at them. And it is nothing to her that she has sullied their souls, that she has made them distrust all women, and that she has taken something beautiful out of their lives that can never come back into them again.

And there are the married men who, to add a little pep to their day, win the love of the girls who work for them. They are adepts in love-making that makes the boys' love-making seem crude and lacking in flavor. They know how to appeal to a girl's sympathy with a hard-luck story, how to woo her with gifts and delicate attentions. They know how to break down the barriers which convention and the moralities have built around a girl.

They can't marry her. They don't want to. They are not really in love with her, but it is amusing to them to have a pretty little playmate who trembles at their touch, and it is nothing to them that they fill a girl's heart so full of love for them that it will never have room in it for any other man, or that they have set another desperate girl's feet on the road to hell.

No. Everything isn't fair in love. Love can be the cruelest thing on earth. —DOROTHY DIX.

"Brought Back My Strength"

"My little daughter was born on a homestead in northern Alberta. I had four other children and I worked so hard that I suffered a nervous breakdown. The doctor's tonic did not seem to help me and when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to take that instead. I kept on until I felt well again. It brought back my strength. Today I can do anything, thanks to the Vegetable Compound." —Mrs. William Parent, 1415 W. 62nd Street, Seattle, Washington.

NOTICE

All Produce Dealers
All Real Estate Dealers

I want to build a produce house which will cost about $30,000, equipped so that I can furnish all dealers merchandise at lower prices than ever before. It doesn't make any difference whether you are interested in produce or not . . . you can afford to give me 5% of your wealth to have me stay here and keep Wichita Falls in the lead with any other city in the state of Texas. With their prices the railroads can afford to put up this building themselves, for I can have enough cars to come over their lines for me to inspect in place of them going from Oklahoma City and Kansas City down through Dallas and Fort Worth, whether I can use them or not.

I can build your city and with a foundation more solid than all millionaires in the country.

I have $7,500 off on the lot.

By paying the freight I can get more surplus produce shipped in Texas than we and all of Southern Oklahoma could use.

There must be something interesting for the people to stay here and freeze to death in winter and burn up in summer.

My advice to all business men would be worth the building itself. There was enough money lost dealing in the cotton futures last fall. And if some of them around here would have listened to me we could have saved enough money to have built this building a thousand times.

Splendid Program Given by League Of Floral Heights

At the Sunday evening meeting of the Young People's Epworth league of the Floral Heights Methodist church, an unusually interesting and informative program was given when leprosy in the missionary field was the subject of study.

Miss Estell McPhail gave the Bible lesson on prayer, telling the purpose of the world day of prayer on Friday, March 7.

Karl ten Brink talked on the great need of doctors in Africa, stressing the fact that there were only 140 doctors in that continent to 140 million people.

The new leper colony being organized in Africa was described by Benton Ross, who spoke of the one previously connected with one of the mission stations which held only 150 patients. The one being organized is separate from the station and will hold 1,500 lepers. He stated that almost that number of lepers were waiting to fill it.

The young people of Belgium who pay $70 each year to care for seven lepers in Africa were the subject of a short talk by Fred Sehmann, and Dorothy Cline told of the work being done in Brazil by the girls' missionary society of Bennett college, who during four years raised $800 and presented it to the society for the aid and prevention of Leprosy in Rio Janeiro.

The 20 deaconesses and missionaries from Scarrett who will be consecrated March 18 at the annual missionary council in Amarillo were an interesting topic given by Leroy Farabee.

Miss Mary Hyatt gave a humorous reading, "Courtin'."

In a business meeting a tennis tournament was planned in which there will be singles and doubles for both girls and boys. Fred Sehmann is manager and all names of those wishing to take part must be presented to him this week.

An attendance contest to run five Sundays was also arranged, Betty Jane Sehmann and Helen Simpson are leaders and the losing side will entertain the winners.

Marcus Ewing was a new member and about 40 were present.

Daily Editorial

THE NOMINATING committee of the hall of fame is reserving no niches for any present members of the U. S. senate.

But if Theodore Roosevelt were still with us, he'd find no difficulty in selecting, from that sordid squabble-nest, a dozen additional consecrates for the "hall of shame," to which he so impulsively consigned the late E. H. Harriman.

The framers of the constitution intended that the federal upper house should represent the creme de la creme of national vision, capacity and character. They designed to create an assembly where the public might concentrate the impeccable judgment, the supreme genius and the peak ability of the country.

Alexander Hamilton (who feared that the lower branch of congress would be too susceptible to popular clamor and inclined to expedient, rather than fundamental deliberation) insisted that senators, like supreme court justices, should be elected for life terms, thus removing their opinions from the specious influence of politics and partisan pressure. He couldn't put it across—and now see who's there.

Count 'em and weep. Look upon the ant hill descendant of that rock of Gibraltar, which once quartered garrisons of Websters and Clays and Calhouns and Conklins and Tildens and Evarts.

Behold the fruit of the primaries—the culls and windfalls who replace the cultivated and matured judgment to which the separate states recently and proudly confided power of attorney.

Contrast these peewits of 1930 with Morgan of Alabama, Davis of Minnesota, Hoar of Massachusetts, Dollivar of Iowa, White of Louisiana, Cockrell of Missouri, Foraker of Ohio, Cameron of Pennsylvania, Raynor of Maryland, Hill of New York, Fry of Maine, Culberson of Texas, Aldrich of Rhode Island and Ingalls of Kansas.

COUNT THE log-rollers, pork-swappers, demagogs, common scolds and special "interest" tools playing legislative give-and-take in the seats from which yesterday saw intellectual lightning flash and heard constructive patriotism thunder.

Measure contemporary senatorial competence and character with the same tape-lines that used to estimate the stature of candidates and discover how many pigmies are hidden in the togas the giants wore.

If business expresses disrespect of the senate's processes and challenges the integrity of its objectives, the senate need only search its own confused and exasperating record to ascertain the justification.

If a majority of the people are disgusted with and suspicious of the motives which inspire the senate's tariff jugglings, prohibition attitudes and administration disloyalty, the senate must lay the onus of responsibility upon its own undignified debates and internecine feuds. The senate has lost sight of its inherent obligation to preserve community rights from sectional selfishness.

The senate has degenerated into a defender and extender of special privileges.

The senate has forgotten the duty it owes national coherence and stability, to become an advocate of territorial spites, creeds and treasury grabs.

The senate is increasingly evincing an antagonistic trend toward executive direction.

In other words, the senate has finally reached the estate that Hamilton prophetically visioned, when his confreres in the constitutional convention concluded to adopt the Jeffersonian conception instead of the Federalist theory of an upper house.

LECTURE FOR SCOUTS

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, March 9.—All boy scout troops of Burkburnett will meet in joint session next Wednesday and go in a body to the Church of Christ where they will hear an addres of Batsell Baxter, president of Abilene Christian college of Abilene, Texas. Batsell will speak on the subject, "Training Our Children." Seats will be reserved for the scouts.

Sokolnikoff, the new Russian ambassador to London, has installed a dictaphone in his automobile so that he may dictate his letters. Now we are waiting for some patriotic Englishman to remark that he does his muttering in a British car.

"It ought to be as easy to buy a home as an automobile," says Ray M. Hudson of the U. S. bureau of standards. Yes, but it's more difficult to run a home.

A Philadelphia woman, suing her husband for divorce, states in her complaint that her husband refused to change the grease-soaked overalls he worked in. A good cause for olimony, we judge.

A Drama of Every-Day

OUR NEWSPAPERS never serve us so well as when they present those little dramas of every-day life that make us pause in our daily routine and give a thought to the struggles, the sorrows and the defeats of people who are not as fortunately placed as we are.

The other day in Philadelphia a man set out to look for work.

The home that he left that morning was a miserable little hovel of two rooms. In it remained the man's wife and three small children, hoping desperately that he would be able to find some sort of job.

Getting a job was a pressing necessity, because the family's finances totaled just 27 cents. The man left 18 cents of this with his wife, keeping nine cents for himself. Then he set out.

Up and down the streets he walked, all day long, looking for work. He went to place after place, and got the same answer at each place; no help wanted.

You can imagine that as the day wore on the man did some pretty serious thinking. This was not the first day he had put in this way; not by any means. He had been out of work for a long time. With four people besides himself to feed, and just 27 cents in all the world to do it with, you can see that things must have looked pretty black to him.

So, as he continued his hopeless quest, he got to thinking: why not try a holdup or a robbery? Other men do it, every day, and get away with it. Why not? Anything, surely, was better than seeing his family starve to death.

The longer he walked the more insistent this thought got. The man tried to put it out of his mind, as he had always been a sober, industrious working man; but it kept coming back, until finally he was afraid that he would leap at the throat of the next well-dressed stranger he met.

So, at last, afraid of what he might do, he went to a police station and asked to be locked up so that he would not commit a crime.

It is very comforting to be able to relate that the policemen, and the judge before whom they took this man, proved sympathetic. They took up a purse for him, and the judge saw to it that a job was found for the man; and so he was able to go back to his family with good news, after all.

But the thing to remember is that although this story had a "happy ending," many, many stories like it do not. This desperate chap, wondering if it might not be better to commit a crime than to let his family starve, is not the only American who has been in that dilemma lately—not by several thousands. It pays to keep that thought in mind.

Remembering that might make us look on some of our "criminals" with a little less prejudice. It might make us a little readier to keep cool the next time some agitators lead a group of jobless men into a riot.

Wise Labor Unions

SCORE another mark to the credit of organized labor. Two powerful and well-organized Cleveland unions the other day served their city very well by averting a pending tie-up in much needed construction work there.

The Electrical Workers' union had been granted an increase in pay, from $1.50 an hour to $1.65. The Bridge and Iron Workers' union had threatened to go on strike unless a similar increase were given them. For a time it looked as if a great deal of construction work would be held up, at a time when work was very badly needed.

So these two unions acted very sensibly. The bridge and iron workers voted to call off their scheduled walkout, and the electrical workers voted not to accept their wage increase.

These acts have done the whole cause of organized labor an incalculable amount of good. The men responsible deserve a vote of thanks.

No Cause for Excitement

APPARENTLY the news from the Dominican republic is not worth getting excited about. There has been, or still is, a revolution of some sort, but it seems to have been singularly bloodless. The guns that were fired went off in the air, and the populace of Santo Domingo, the capital seems well satisfied with what has been done.

Time was when the first rumblings of such an affair, however, would have drawn an American squadron to Santo Domingo, and hard-bitten marines would have been patrolling the streets within 24 hours. The government at Washington evidently has acquired more patience than used to be the case. So far, there seems to be no earthly reason why the present hands-off policy should not be continued indefinitely.

Still Going Up

AND STILL the casualties due to automobile traffic go up! Figures compiled by the Travelers Insurance company from 73 states show that approximately 31,000 people were killed by automobiles last year—an increase of more than 11 per cent over the figures for 1928.

"On the basis of last year's total number of motor vehicle deaths," says a bulletin issued by the company, "at least two persons out of each 10,000 of the country's population were killed in such mishaps. Two hundred persons out of each 10,000, or a ratio of one out of each 50 persons, were injured, 60 of the 200 being hurt seriously."

These figures speak for themselves. If they fail to stir the country to concerted action it can only be because we are shock-proof.

The Girl With The Red Hair by Rob Eden

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Pretty Gay Terris is forced to offer herself in marriage for a loan of $5,000 so that she may send her sick mother to Arizona. Her employer, Frank Patterson, wealthy bachelor of 50, learns of her plan and when assured of her earnestness takes her at her word. Gay shudders as she thinks of her three remaining months of freedom before she must marry Mr. Patterson as she knows she can never learn to love him. Nita Rollins, an office companion, suggests Gay live with her and Gay accepts. Nita is furious when Andy Grant, whom she loves, asks Gay to lunch.

CHAPTER IV

Patterson reached across the small table and patted her hand. Instinctively Gay wanted to pull it away, but instead, trembling a little she let it lie there, loathing the warm, moist, soft palm, fearing to raise her eyes lest he see her distaste in them.

The dinner had been excellent, and she was almost enjoying herself until this—until he had taken her hand. Almost forgotten with whom she was.

The restaurant, she had never been in it before, was interesting, women in beautiful gowns, men in evening dress, waiters scurrying obsequiously around, the music, caressingly soft, haunting, the murmur of conversation that rose and fell at intervals.

None of the noisy confusion she was accustomed to associate with places to eat. Quiet, calm, a violin humming gently. . . .

"You see, Gay—" he had called her Gay all evening—"I'm not so much older than you—" She looked at his thinning gray hair, the pouches under his small gray eyes. Not so much older. Older, all the same. "Only 47," he went on, "and that's the prime of life. You're 19. We should be very happy together—"

If only he wouldn't talk. If only he would sit and let her look around, listen to the music. Then, if he would take his hand away—

"I've admired you from the time you came into the office. My mother, of course, will think it strange that I choose as my wife a girl as young as you are. But she'll become reconciled—" Then he had a mother. She must be very old. Vaguely Gay wondered about her. She had never associated any sort of family with Mr. Patterson before. He had always been a man aloof, a man outside her world, far away from it.

He had paused significantly, evidently expecting some kind of an answer so she nodded slowly.

She had dreaded this night so much. Dreaded what he should say, what he should do. Suppose he kissed her? What would she do then?

Relief when he had called for her, and in the taxi to the restaurant they had talked about the weather.

What should she do, though, if when they reached her apartment.

No use struggling—it wouldn't do. He had bought her, and he might kiss her.

Again, he would want to kiss her? Silly for her to worry about, bother herself about it, when she knew, knew only too well what she had to do. Let him, of course. Wasn't she going to marry him? Wasn't she going to have to get used to his kisses? A bargain was a bargain, and it was too late to draw back. Her lips forced a hard smile, and Patterson answered it with another squeeze of his hand.

Would she ever learn to love him? She must. . . . Other girls married men they didn't love. Was it hard? How—

"I've always been so busy I could not think of marriage," Patterson was saying. "Now I have comparative leisure. We'll go away somewhere on our honeymoon. Europe, travel. You'd like that, wouldn't you?"

She tried to get some enthusiasm into her voice as she answered, but it mattered nothing to her—whether she went to Jersey City or Paris. They would both be the same—with Mr. Patterson.

She should be grateful, terribly grateful to him. Shouldn't feel like this. But she was grateful, and she would be much more grateful—if she didn't have to marry him.

No use struggling—it wouldn't do. He had bought her, and he might kiss her.

The violets he had sent her were beginning to wilt. The place was so hot. Every Friday night, he had said they would have dinner together, until they were married. Then, she thought rather too bitterly, they would have dinner together every night—

Here eyes wandered around the big room, lingering now at one table, now at another. They finally rested on a woman at the opposite corner, whose hair, like hers, was a ruddy hue. The woman was looking at her strangely. Something in her eyes that held Gay. Green, they seemed, although she could not be too sure. The woman was a good distance away.

A gold turban bound her head, but enough of her hair showed, so that Gay could compare it with her own. The woman was gowned gorgeously, a gleaming gold dress, identical with her turban.

The girl sighed. She had always wanted a gold dress. Gold and ruddy red. White arms, white shoulders, a white, lovely back. Only thin gold chain straps held up the dress. Something around the woman's neck. A greenish, swirling sort of chain. A snake of emeralds? Perhaps, because the glint of jewels shone against the pallor of the woman's skin.

Attractive.

Gay was the first to look away, but here eyes traveled back again to the woman, who was still gazing at her. Uncomfortable, she turned to Patterson, who was still talking.

"I've a little gift for you, Gay. Something you want, I know. Can you guess what it is?"

Gay couldn't. Mr. Patterson giving her something—already.

His right hand remained on hers, while his left hand searched in his pockets, finally drawing out a small velvet covered box. Gay took it and opened it, slipping her hand from under his as she leaned forward. That was better. In the box, a diamond ring lay on a white satin lining. She glanced up at him inquiringly.

"Your engagement ring," he smiled.

Engagement ring? Of course. She had let him put it on her finger, while she thanked him. But she hadn't expected it, she explained.

How could she explain the ring at the office? To Nita? She winced when she thought of Nita. There was still some little strained feeling between them, although Nita was overly polite. Andy Grant hadn't been at the house since, but Gay knew that Nita saw him. Foolish of Nita to make such a racket about nothing.

Patterson was putting her coat over her shoulders, his hands lingering on her bare arms. She had worn no hat. The ring felt strange on her finger. Heavy. Engagement ring. Hers. A fine diamond, too, she supposed. Mr. Patterson would buy a good one. Nita would want to know where she got it. The girls at the office would wonder. Well, she wouldn't wear it for awhile—not until after she was married. When she was out with Mr. Patterson, yes, but at other times she would keep it in her purse. Or around her neck on a chain.

Patterson was getting his coat at the checkroom, when the woman in the gold frock passed close to Gay. She had been right, her eyes were green and around her neck was a snake, made entirely of small emeralds. Two tiny rubies, for eyes, touched her bosom. Assuredly the woman was not beautiful, but there was something about her eyes that was arresting. Then that glistening snake at her neck . . . She was flinging a cloth of gold cape around her shoulders.

Now she had moved on with her escort, a vapid, dark haired youth, with a small black mustache.

"Ready?" Patterson was asking, and when she nodded, they stepped into a cab.

"Then you really liked the ring?"

Gay told him again that she did. His arm slid around her shoulders, and he drew her closer to him. Was he going to kiss her?

Her white face in the dark of the taxi was close to his. She tried to lean farther away.

"Gay, call me Frank! You've been calling me 'Mr. Patterson' all evening—"

"Frank," she said obediently, although she didn't mean it. Mr. Patterson would always remain "Mr. Patterson" to her. She supposed after she had married him it would be the same. Always she would think of him as "Mr. Patterson"—vice president of the firm of American Manufacturers, incorporated. Idly she wondered what the "B" in his name stood for. Well, she would find out one of these days.

"Gay, you're what I've always wanted." He was whispering passionately. "Youth—beauty. Youth—you're so lovely, Gay. Do you know how lovely you are?"

Andy Grant had told her she was lovely, too. Only Andy had said she was a pretty devil—

Nice to be told you're pretty. But she didn't like Mr. Patterson to tell her so . . .

His fingers tilted her chin, and she saw his lips close to hers. She closed her eyes. No use struggling—it wouldn't do. He had bought her, and he might kiss her.

When she was out of the taxi at last, and Patterson was on his way home, she flung the violets fiercely into the street. Then because she was sorry, because she couldn't bear to see them, lying in the gutter, she ran out and picked them up. Another taxi passed as she arose, and she was positive that the occupant was the woman in the gold dress . . . the gilded turban glistened in the light of the street lamp in front of the apartment.

But the taxi went on, and Gay started into the apartment, the violets crushed against her hot cheeks. The scent from them was lovely—and they were cool . . .

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Mr. Hoover's First Year

President Hoover has completed his first year in office. The results have not been bad. He has caught a 45-pound sailfish, taken off 10 pounds at handball, put the Mayflower out of commission, put the Rapidan on the map as a trout country, given the Washington fire department two of its best workouts in history and been pretty busy in every respect.

"The Man in the Green Hat" has been arrested, horseback-riding as a presidential hobby has been pretty well discredited, the hair-shirt has been put across as the outstanding novelty of the gent's furnishing business, and the biggest huddle of industrial leaders in history has been held in Washington.

Among the big things in the president's favor is the fact that he has at no time appeared in Indian or cowboy costume since taking office. Agents with Indian headgear have been given the gate and not a picture has appeared in press or newsreel showing Mr. Hoover with a wan smile trying to look like Chief Blue Eagle.

He has not been serenaded once by cowboys from the movie camps nor has he posed for the photographers pitching hay. That's something.

His first year in office has given the country the Wickersham report, the Babe Ruth salary holdout, the Scott-Sharkey fight, the Graf Zep flights, grandeur pictures, the naval disarmament parley, Art Shires and the first world's championship in years to the Philadelphia Athletics.

Mr. Hoover, too, has been the first president to introduce an entire running backfield of secretaries. Other presidents have had one secretary but Mr. Hoover uses three, which is in itself no mean trick.

Amos and Andy, the radio stars, may be credited to Mr. Hoover's administration, too, and the lighter golf ball.

All in all it's been a fair first year, October and November excluded. Of course to put Mr. Hoover over in a big way the country needs either a war or a Mississippi flood or something like that, but the results so far have been as good as could be expected.

May 1930 be even better, congress and Roger Babson permitting.

MANY BEYOND GOSPEL APPEAL

Church Should Teach Youth Says Speaker

Addressing 138 members of the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning, John Daniel Barron sought the reason for the "failure of organized Christianity to win a more unanimous, powerful, and influential body of adherents" at the end of 150 years of free preaching of the gospel. The speaker declared at the "comparative failure" of the gospel. The speaker declared at the "comparative failure" of the gospel lay in the quality of the men to whom it is preached, applying the old parable of the soils which was the theme of the day's study.

In answering his own question, "what is the matter with the church?" Mr. Barron declared that the trouble does not lie in the ministry nor in the present day interpretation of the teaching of Christ. He blamed, rather, the failure of the church and its adherents to reach the child, asserting that "we have blundered into our present state by letting men grow up, then trying to preach to them."

His address is given in full below:

"What is the matter with the church? What is the matter with the Christian ministry? Is organized Christianity worth exporting? These questions are being asked today by men who are deeply concerned about the Christian church and the progress of the Christian cause. The failure of organized Christianity to win a more unanimous and a more powerful and influential body of adherents leads the devout Christian to ask himself and his fellow Christians these searching questions. After a century and a half of preaching the gospel with the utmost freedom, we find that less than half the American people even so much as profess to be followers of Christ. Only one out of four profess Protestant Christianity. When one views this situation seriously one cannot help but ask, what is the matter?

"We occasionally find some one who is ready to say that the ministry is responsible for the comparative failure of the gospel. But I do not think the facts will support this position. We remember that the preaching of Jesus was clear, forceful, appealing, sympathetic, sincere, and true; yet the great multitudes passed him by. Certainly the ministry is not altogether to blame for the state we are in. I do not believe the Gospel was ever preached by a group of more intelligent, more religious, more sincere, and more eloquent men than it is today. The world has never surpassed this age for great men in the Christian pulpit. No, the trouble does not lie primarily with the ministry.

Reasons Discussed

"Neither does it inhere in the interpretation of the Christian religion we have today, as some will contend. Certainly no one could find fault with the interpretation of religion that Jesus preached to the men of His day. Yet the men of His day turned from Him in greater numbers than turned to Him. I hold the strong conviction that Christ is being better interpreted to the world and His principles are being more widely and intensely applied today than at any time since the apostles. No, the essential cause of the failure of the Christian religion to win more adherents is neither the type of Christian ministry, nor the quality of the Christian message.

"The failure of Jesus to win a large following raised in the minds of His disciples some searching questions. If He really is the Messiah, they reasoned, why is it the Jews fail to follow Him in any great numbers? Surely the real Messiah ought to have more than a small group of insignificant, despised, and persecuted followers. Jesus with His acute sense of fact was able to put His finger on the causes of the failure of His message to win the popular support. He was a keen observer of men; therefore, a good psychologist. He understood the inward meanings of the words, expressions, and responses of men. He read them as though they were an open book. He knew the motives of men. His analytic mind enabled Him to dissect one's spiritual mechanism and tell the relation of part to part. With His wonderful faculty for understanding men He looked upon the men of His generation and saw in them the chief obstacles to the gospel as He preached it. We are to find a part of our answer in the answer Jesus gave to His disciples concerning the comparative failure of His cause.

"In the first place, Jesus saw that large numbers of men had their minds hardened to His message. Social, political, moral and religious ideas had set their minds against the entire point of view presented by Jesus. Their minds were impervious to fresh truth. Jesus compared preaching to this type of mind to the farmer who sowed his seed on the hard road. As we look back upon those sad days when Jesus went preaching the good news we see that many seed fell upon the road and bore no fruit. His message went to minds that were set.

"Every Christian preacher faces a large group of men in his community with this same type of mind. The ceaseless march of ideas through their minds have beaten them into hard roads. If this type of mind ever comes to the church to hear the gospel preached, it comes with the ideals of the commercial world, of hard competition, of shady bargains, still beating upon it. The Gloria Patri is drowned out by the echo of the business world in which he lives all week. While he repeats the Lord's prayer his mind flits to thoughts of acquisition on the morrow. His mind is filled with the cluster of ideas expressed in such statements as "business is business" and "yes, but a man must live." When the gospel is preached to this type of mind it makes no visible impression. It falls upon the road. And in this we have one reason for the failure of Christianity to win larger numbers.

"Then Jesus observed another class of persons in His time to which the gospel had no appeal. It was that class with shallow lives. There was so little in them to appeal to. To preach to them was like sowing seed in stony soil.

Stony Soil

"We have this group with us today in abundance. They are flippant. They are forever on the run. They seek excitement, thrills, stimulation. Silence drives them to madness. If the radio is not belching jass tunes, or one of their group is not making whoopee, they are bored, they are miserable. Deep thought is unknown to them. If they read at all it is worse than reading nothing. They have no great purpose that steady them. They are adrift. This class is to be pitied. They are in search of the abundant life, and have set their weary feet in the wrong path. We see them daily. There is sadness in their faces. They have a great hunger that the husks they eat will not satisfy. No contentment is seen in their faces. They are seeking, asking, knocking, but at empty sources, deaf ears, and closed doors. They grow bitter, cruel, and cynical. Their sense of value is dull; their standard of value is low and material. Their feelings and appreciations are of the most elemental sort. They have staked their lives to nothing that will endure; all their foundations are built upon the sands. Their spiritual nature has become deadened and all but exterminated. Here is soil that offers little for the gospel seed. Sow as faithfully and efficiently as you will, and the harvest will be scant.

"Jesus saw in His day another class of persons that presented an obstacle to the triumph of His gospel, namely, the preoccupied. There was a large group in His day who with one consent prayed to be excused for they had other and conflicting interests. In the competition of interests, the non-Christian prevailed in many men of Jesus' time.

"I sometimes feel that pre occupation is the most inveterate enemy of the kingdom of God. Many men are friendly to the Christian cause, but are too occupied with things to take it seriously. It is easy for a man to so occupy himself with the good task of making an honest living that he will remain a spiritual infant till his dying day. It is true that a man's spiritual life and appreciations and sensitiveness can be as effectively stunted as his mental and physical life. I know of no better way to crowd out the spiritual interests than to just become deadly pre-occupied with things both essential and non-essential. Jesus says to preach to this class of men is like sowing seed among the thorns. The seed may come up but the plant will be choked to death by the thorns. Here is one of the reasons that the Christian religion does not win a larger following.

Still Jesus was hopeful for the ultimate success of the gospel in His day and I think we ought to share with Him this same optimism. His hopefulness was based on another class of persons whose minds and hearts were open and receptive to the gospel, who received it and were blessed by It. He said to preach to them was like sowing seed in the rich soil and reaping a great harvest. While the multitudes turned away a remnant turned to Him. He saw in them the hope for His gospel. It was a remnant that took up the fallen torch and it has been a remnant that has carried it to the ends of the earth. As a remnant was the hope in His day, so it is in our own. The work of the few has been the salvation of the world.

Sow Blindly

"However, I do not think we ought to be satisfied with a small remnant. I think it is time the church was breaking up the hard soil, fertilizing the poor, and grubbing out the thorns, and giving the gospel a chance. In other words, there ought to be a preparation for the seed. We ought not to sow blindly. I do not think the time to begin preparation is after the soil is hard, or becomes poor, or full of thorns. We ought to get at the soil before these obstacles get there, for after they get possession they are all but insurmountable. What I am saying is that we ought to prepare for and plant the gospel seed, in the days of childhood. We ought to get the jump on our inveterate enemies. If we wait till we are grown to Christianize them as has been the policy of the church in the past, ours is an unhappy and often disappointing task. Why not sow the seed in the rich soil of child-life where it has a chance? Here is no hardness, no shallowness, no pre-occupation. They are open and receptive. If the world is to be Christianized it must begin with the children. We have blundered into our present state by letting men grow up then trying to preach to them. Our way out is by the rich valley of childhood."

YOUR CHILD'S EYES

A great deal of good has been accomplished in the past few years through the dissemination of information about the care which should be given in protecting the eyes of the young child. Infections from carelessness at childbirth were formerly responsible for many thousands of cases of blindness each year with children who became blind even before one year of age.

In most states the laws require the physician to sterilize the baby's eyes as soon as the child is born. These laws usually compel the drugless practicioner or the midwife to use sterilizing measures even though they are not otherwise permitted to use medicinal preparations. It has been found that the use of a mild antiseptic to cleanse the eyelids will kill almost any kind of infection if it is applied immediately after birth.

The baby does not usually recognise objects until at about six months, and mothers are frequently alarmed because the eyes do not move in harmony when the baby is very young. Complete coordination of eye movements usually does not occur until the baby is about three months old.

Mothers must be warned to keep their babies' eyes protected from strong lights during the first few months of life and at least until the baby is old enough to sit up and strong enough to protect himself by turning away from strong lights.

In good health the baby's eyes are not apt to give much trouble, but if the feeding is improper, surroundings unhealthful, and sanitary habits not practiced, there may develop a chain of childhood disorders which not only affect the future health of the child, but also have a distinct effect upon producing errors in vision or eye diseases.

The diseases which more commonly affect children during early life are those which affect the conjunctiva, the membrance which lines the eyelids and extends over the outside of the eyeball. When these membranes become inflamed it is usually because the baby has been fed on a diet composed principally of devitalized foods. A plain milk diet, supplemented by orange juice feedings, will prevent conjunctivitis and in fact almost any of the diseases of the eyelids which are supposed to come from infections. Granular lids, although undoubtedly of an infection origin, will not develop if the child is properly fed and the eye kept clean by being washed with plain water two or three times daily.

It is wise for everyone to use care in not spreading infections through the use of common towels, and every member of the household should have both a fresh face and bath towel at least once daily.

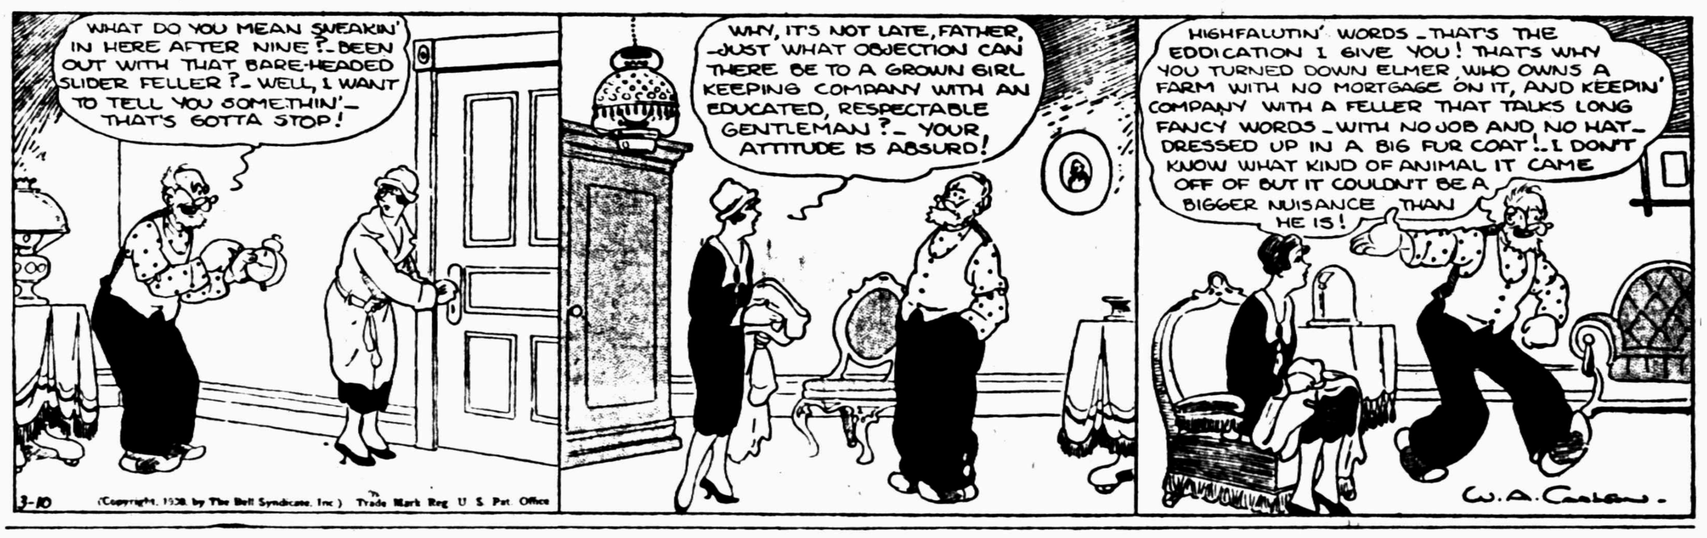

Children who suffer from eyestrain do so because of definite eye defects or because of a systematic acidosis which irritates the eyes the same as it affects other less sensitive parts of the body. A child who suffers from eye-strain may develop headaches, nervousness, irritability, drowsiness, digestive disturbances, dizziness, car-sickness, and be backward at school. If the eye defect continues, or the causative acidosis is not corrected, the eyes may lose their power for vision, may become tired each day, or there may be dread of light, watering, sties, crossed eyes, and often frequent blinking.

The remedy lies first in correcting any existent acidosis and then by the use of certain eye exercises. Several excellent books with illustrations have been written explaining these exercises. I have prepared a special article on exercising the eyes and I will send it to you upon request.

As soon as the child is able to read, he should be examined by an optometrist who will advise the proper care of the child's eyes so that defects may be corrected and the eyes strengthened to normal.

NEW SPUDDER SHORTSTOP STAGES FLASHY PERFORMANCE

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

The shouts of the fans down at the lot yesterday when Mr. James J. Levy did some wonderful things at short were apparently meant for Mr. Levy alone. But the handclapping and cheering may well be taken as the fans' approval of Prexy W. E. Huff's action in purchasing the whole infield of the Tulsa Oilers for this year's Spudder nine.

The baseball clientele here has been wondering for months just what kind of aggregation Mr. Huff had purchased, and though the majority were sure the president knew what he was doing, there were some few who hailed from Missouri. Ever since the training camp opened a week ago, the question of the hour has been "When will the Tulsans arrive and what can they do?"

Mr. Levy took it upon himself to answer the latter part of that question all by himself Sunday afternoon. His stop-the-ball-or-bust attitude was taken by the majority of the onlookers as revealing the spirit of the other members of the Tulsa quartet, and when the fans filed out after the practice session, many a critical cuss puffed at his cigar with a contented air.

Though Levy alone happened to ankle into the spotlight Sunday, two of his Tulsa comrades were there—and working very hard too. It was the first day in camp for Irvin Burns, the first baseman, but Walter Euller, the third member of the quartet, was in uniform for the second time, having arrived Saturday. When Linn Sorti, the Tulsa second baseman gets in, even a bigger show than Sunday's may be expected.

Prexy Huff was down at the lot Sunday to hear the crowd cheer Levy. His face slowly contracted into his characteristic gentle smile as he watched the newcomer perform. With him in the dugout sat J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league and last year's owner of the Spudders, who was likewise pleased with the performance.

Sunday was the first day the vast brigade of Spudders came under the scrutiny of a large number of fans. The fact that it was being watched seemed to put fire into the squad. Fully 350 followers of the game took advantage of the balmy afternoon and came to get a first-hand impression of the players, and the concensus of opinion seemed to be that enough first-rate material was on hand with which to construct a team this year that will go far towards entertaining the public.

Wisecracks and comebacks: Roland Flinn, the big six-foot three right-handed hurler from Maine, saw Levy pull his hit-the-dust play, and remarked: "And just think, this is his first day in camp, and he drove in a Ford all day yesterday getting here."

And the training camp wit retorted: "And just think what he would have done today if he had made the trip in a Caddillac!"

Someone was concerned the other day with the lack of room in the Spudder clubhouse. The hordes of rookies had all but occupied the whole structure. The dusky caretaker of the clubhouse was asked about it. "Where are you going to put 'em if the players keep coming in?"

"Don't worry about that," the caretaker replied. "Just wait 'till Mr. Williams gets to lookin' 'em over, and there won't be so many then."

While dispatches from other training camps in Texas tell almost every day of injuries to players, the Spudder squad has so far escaped with not a single serious injury. And the only minor injury reported came in the first of the practice sessions when Hurler Cy Smith caught a fast ball in the eye. The soreness was out the next day, however. The fact that none of our players has been seriously injured so far may mean we've just been lucky, but it also may mean that most of the candidates know how to put a ball where they want it to go.

Garden Bouts Hold Interest This Week

NEW YORK, March 9. (AP)—Madison Square garden has scheduled two shows this week to regain for New York the fistic leadership of the nation.

Tomorrow night, the garden presents a 10-rounder between Maxey Rosenbloom, light heavyweight contender, and Larry Johnson, Chicago negro, as the feature of a charity show. Johnson dropped a close decision to Pete Latzo in his last appearance here. Lou Scozza, Buffalo light heavyweight, takes on Rosy Rosales of Cleveland in the 10-round semi-final. Friday the garden's second show of the week will be headed by a 10-rounder between Tony Canzoneri, erstwhile featherweight champion, and Stanislaus Loayza, Chilean lightweight.

The team is composed of the following: pitchers, Steve Franklin and John Grey; catchers, R. J. King and Johnnie O'Neal; infielders, Flip Hoskins, Lee Adkins, Aulcy Thorn, J. A. Franklin and Edgar Satterwhite; outfielders, Lois Anderson, Malcom Maudlin, Paul Myers, Roy Bowling and Floyd Edwards.

Steve Franklin is manager of the team. Anyone desiring games with the team is advised to get in touch with him.

Play will resume tomorrow though the majority of the coaches had their squads on maple courts today for short practice periods.

FIVE PLAYERS ARE RELEASED

Skipper Williams Starts Slashing Squad

By FRED D. THOMPSON
The Record News Staff

The heroics of James P. Levy in The heroics of James J. Levy in tion, and the improvement of the squad's hitting featured a flashy workout of the Spudder army Sunday.

Levy, a member of the famed Tulsa infield purchased by the local club, drew the cheers and applause of some 350 fans who flocked to the grandstands and apparently got as much kick out of the rehearsal as they would from a contest.

Levy Thrills Gallery

The nimble shortstop, who arrived late Saturday afternoon from Kansas City, thrilled the gallery when, after diving for and missing a hot grounder, he dived for a second, caught it, hit the earth, and, recovering in a jiffy, hurled the pill to first. It was a flashy play.

Another shortstop, Felix Nevinsky, hailing from Philadelphia, pulled exactly the same play, though he was closer to the ball. He hit the dirt, however, and showed a speed of recovery that drew renewed cheers from the crowd.

Five Rookies Released

There will be five less rookies in the training camp Monday. Skipper Carl Williams, on his second day at the helm of the 1930 Spudders, brought down the axe for the first time. As a result, Norville Eckelcamp, Electra first sacker; Raymond Knottinger and Gus Taylor, local outfielders; Ivon Miller, Ryan, Okla., outfielder; and Roy Lliom, outfielder from Vivian, La., started wondering how and where to spend the rest of the season.

Skipper Williams was pleased with the improved hitting of his charges Sunday. The batting practice and the infield workout occupied the spotlight of the workout, although other members of the squad worked out in pepper games and at fungo hitting and running.

Sicola Maintains Pace

After the pitching staff had been loosened up in the batting inning, the infield workout got under way with Carroll Burrows at first, Bear Allday at second, Levy at short and Sicola, the Houston prodigy, at third. The youthful Sicola, a promising rookie, maintained his form and stride Sunday and was far from showing any signs of slipping. Ralph Butler showed speed and pep behind the bat. Later there were substitutions in the infield, and Skipper Williams himself grasped a mit and officiated at first, prodding his players to show more speed and accuracy in throwing. Nevinsky relieved Levy at short.

Irvin Burns, Tulsa first baseman, was another of the new infield quartet on the scene Sunday. He and Levy drove through from Kansas City. With Walter Euller, Tulsa third baseman, already here, only one member of the quartet, Linn Sorti, second baseman, is missing. Sorti is due to arrive any hour.

Windle Signs Up

DALLAS, March 9. (AP)—A big crowd of spring training railbirds took advantage of a marvelous spring day to cheer the workout of the Dallas Steers and celebrate the announcement that Wayne Windle, star third sacker obtained from Waco, had come to terms. Three more players also reported.

Jay Cats pushed his men hard, and they were in seeming good form for the second week of training.

Bob Tarleton, business manager, announced the signing of Windle. The agreement was said to call for a higher raise than the $25 a month increase over the Waco salary formerly received, but for less than the $500 a month the yearly holdout artist originally demanded.

Luther Harvel, outfielder who finished the 1929 season with the steers; J. H. Heinen; semi-pro outfielder from Farwell, Texas, and Tiny Schuble, first sacker from Ennis, Texas, were the new arrivals. Tiny is a brother of Heine Schuble, former Houston player who this year is on the Beaumont payroll.

Windle and Bert Grimm will report Monday.

Rookies Beat Cubs

WACO, Texas, March 9. (AP)—Featuring the hitting Ed Kallina, the rookies of the Waco Cubs defeated the regulars in the first practice game of the season at Katy park this afternoon by a score of 7 to 6. Kallina hit a homer and a single, but his work at first for the Yans was off color. Heath of the regulars also hit a home run.

Stapleton Signs

ORANGE, Texas, March 9. (AP)—Charley Wade, outfielder; Jay Hughes, rookie first baseman; Carl Bouton, infielder and Virgil Gilliland, Baylor university third baseman and former grid star reported today for the first workout of Exporter infielders and outfielders tomorrow. Others are expected before the morning squad does its stuff Monday at 10:30 o'clock.

The signed contract of Frank Stapleton, first baseman, has been received along with the information that the former Spudder will report on March 15. He asked for a little extra time to assist in settling the estate of his father who died last year.

Buffs Take Rest

HOUSTON, March 9. (AP)—The Houston Buff squad enjoyed a day of rest Sunday while the Giants and White Sox battled at the Bison stadium.

Bob Morrow, catcher obtained from the Rochester club, reported and will join Joe Schultz' herd Monday when the Houston manager will start whipping the Buffs into line for the first practice tilt of the season with the Rice Owls Wednesday.

Sports' Whites Win

SHREVEPORT, La., March 9. (AP)—Making their runs in clusters of four to an inning, the Whites, made up of younger members of the Sports' squad, won 12 to 4 over the Greys in their second victory of the spring exhibition series today. Hutson, McClanahan and Parks divided six of the nine hits of the Greys, while Starr, holdover from 1929 made three of the 14 hits for the Whites. Five double plays featured the game.

Cats Stage Battle

MINERAL WELLS, Texas, March 9. (AP)—Capt. Dick Sullivan's rookies gave the regulars a stiff battle in a six-inning game here today. The regulars won, 7 to 3. This was the first game of the year for Fort Worth, a practice session between the regulars and the rookies.

50 COYOTES IN GRID WORKOUT

Veterans Assist Holton in Spring Training

Over 50 candidates are on the daily practice roster at the local high school spring football camp supervised by Coach Barry Holton. The squad has been going through the paces set by the mentor for the past two weeks and is rapidly looking like championship material for next fall.

Believing that 50 per cent of the knowledge of football is gained in the spring session, the Coyote mentor is stressing the most important parts of the game. Veterans of last fall are assisting the coach in carrying on the work of teaching the green material fundamentals. One vet from each position on the line and in the backfield has full charge of a squad of youngsters and drills them in that certain position. C. L. King is in charge of the center aspirants, John Skeen the guards, Chick Holden the tackles, Raymond Allen the ends, Orion Smith the halfbacks, J. R. Holton the fullback candidates, and Dan Cox the signal barkers. These leaders take pains in their work with the "greenies," but after a few weeks more of instruction the green material may blossom into something that will show the regulars how to play the game. Coach Holton divides his time between the different groups, adding to the squad leader's instruction and dropping words of advice and encouragement.

Practice Games Planned

After the painful but necessary drill on the fundamentals of the game the squad is to be divided into teams and games between the two teams will be held three times each week. These games should give the inexperienced men a chance to get oriented and settle themselves.

After the season of inter-squad games is completed the coach will select 24 men who will be given an additional two weeks of practice under the personal direction of the coach.

An exceptionally large squad both in numbers and size add a rosy hue to the chances of the pack. Members of last year's squad and junior team or B squad are reporting for the workouts and are setting the pace for the less experienced aspirants. Only two veterans from last fall are on hand who expect to return for duty. Chick Holden at tackle and John Skeen at guard are both juniors and will return another year. It is doubtful whether Paul Dickey, stellar quarterback, will return next fall. He is the only doubtful one as the other eight lettermen of last fall will not be back. Although only two letter men are to return some 20 or 30 men will return who have been acquainted with the coaching of Holton and his methods by means of the sessions last fall.

Good Backfield Material

A wealth of backfield material is the main boast of the Coyote gridders. At least six veteran backfield men are bidding for berths on the first team and many more youngsters with experience are joining in the scramble. The line material is not as large as that of the ball toting department. Only a few men are bidding for places on the line, but the few that are bidding are serious about it.

The backfield aces who expect to carry the red and black on high against opposition next fall are having a hard time holding their places. J. R. Holton, fullback; Blondy Smith, halfback; Harlan Ray, halfback; Bennett Withrow, halfback and quarter, and Dan Cox at quarter and half are the members of last season's squad who are looking like real gridsters in the early practice.

This is the first time in the history of the school that such an extensive spring training session has been held. The move is expected to bring satisfactory results when the district one teams enter the scramble for the district championship.

DAWSON BEATS REYNOLDS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 9. (AP)—John Dawson of Chicago won the southeastern amateur golf championship here today by defeating Mally Reynolds Jr., of Jacksonville, 6 and 4, in the finals.

White Sox Defeat New York Giants, 12 to 5 in Houston Exhibition Game

Dallas Steers Likely Won't Get Jim Moore After All, Judging From His Sunday Performance

HOUSTON, March 9. (AP)—Dallas sport scribes apparently have wasted a lot of words in telling their readers how much brighter Dallas' prospects would be when the White Sox returned Jim Moore. Judging from Moore's play here, Dallas will get the handsome outfielder over the body of a dead Irishman, Skipper Donie Bush of the Chisox.

Chicago poured it on the New York Giants here Sunday, 12 to 5, and Moore furnished much of the victors' punch with two home runs and a single. His first wallop came in the seventh with two on, and sent Chicago into a 7 to 5 lead.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 6 (UP)—The Brooklyn Robins are ready for the team's spring exhibition schedule, Manager Wilbert Robinson said today. The opening game will be against Detroit Tuesday. The House of David nine will furnish opposition Thursday and the world champion Athletics will engage the Robins in two games Saturday and Sunday.

McLeod Reports

BILOXI, Miss., March 9. (UP)—Infielder Jimmy McLeod, purchased from the Little Rock Southern league club for $15,000 reported to the Washington Senators today. Manager Johnson said he probably would try McLeod at shortstop in next Friday's exhibition game against the New Orleans Pelicans.

Infielder Jack Hayes has signed his contract reducing the unsigned players to three, Garland Braxton, Goose Goslin and Roy Spencer. The Senator's infield lined up today with Judge at first, Myer at second, Hayes at short and Bluege at third. It was the best working combination Manager Johnson has yet put together.

All Reds Present

ORLANDO, Fla., March 9. (UP) George Kelly, veteran first baseman arrived here today and the Cincinnati Reds now have every player on the roster in camp. The Reds will begin their second week of training tomorrow.

Braves Name Captain

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 9. (UP)—Rabbit Maranville was appointed captain of the Boston Braves for the 1930 season by Manager Bill McKechnie today, dispelling rumors the pair would not be able to get along. Twice previously McKechnie managed Pittsburgh and the St. Louis Cardinals, he released Maranville. Detroit beat the Braves at Tampa today, 14 to 5. The Braves are still angling for a third baseman and a deal is pending with the New York Giants.

Susce Injured

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 9. (UP)—The first casualty in the Phillies' camp occurred today when George Susce, young catcher, suffered a fracture of the left clavicle when struck on the left shoulder by a foul tip. He will be laid up two weeks.

Susce was catching Pitcher Byron Speece in batting practice. He caught three more pitchers before he felt the effects of the fracture.

One long practice was held this afternoon. All of the pitchers worked on the mound in batting drill and then an infield composed of Whitney at third, Thevenow at shortstop, Friberg at second and Jack Baseman, chased flies in the outfield.

Accurate shooting and perfect team play of Featherstone, Wilfong and Robbins enabled the invaders to launch a whirlwind finish.

After his teammates brought the Wichita foursome up from behind to the big end of an 8-7 margin, Robbins chalked up the final brace of pointers to clinch the victory. Captain Barnhart, Elmer Jones and Jim Minnick were the outstanding performers for the losers.

URBANA, Ill., March 9. (UP)—Curtailment of collegiate football seasons in the interest of better health for the players was advocated here tonight by Dr. David Kinley, president of the University of Illinois, in his annual report.

He said his observations led him to believe the physical strain upon football players now is too great and that all colleges would benefit if the last week of the seasons were eliminated.

"—I went to the Canned Goods Fair,
The prunes and the tunes were there—"

HAVE you, too, heard the Cannery racket—the little tin-pad "Sound" operas and jazz numbers, so genially welcomed here by the delicatessen set?

To some theatre interests this is a heart-warming clamor. It means economy for them, hence greater profits.

To persons of sound musical taste, it is ludicrous and impudent—an affront to the intelligence and taste of the theatre-going public. They see in the talkies no excuse for resort to Canned Music.

Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

...the war against Spitting is a crusade of decency...join it. Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

The law says "No" to the spitter! But we all know there still exist hundreds of dirty places where the cigar-maker rolls the leaves with filthy fingers... and seals the ends with spit! In fact, more than half of all cigars made in this country are still made by hand, and therefore subject to the risk of spit!

Certified Cremo protects you against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!

Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Your physician has in mind a cigar like Certified Cremo when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.

Crush-proof... immaculate... foil-wrapped... Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly was thinking of when he said: "What this country needs is a good 5c cigar!"

FIRST BAPTIST SERVICES OPEN

Large Congregation Hears Two Speakers

Large congregations, with several additions to the membership at both morning and evening services, featured the opening of the annual church administration conference at the First Baptist church Sunday under the direction of Dr. P. E. Burroughs and Dr. Clay I. Hudson, both of Nashville, Tenn., secretary and associate secretary respectively of the department of church administration and Baptist Sunday school board.

Dr. Burroughs, whose father was instrumental in establishing the Baptist church here almost 50 years ago, and who in 1892 became pastor of the local Baptist congregation, spoke at the morning service. His subject was "The Character and Glory of the Church," and he discussed its gradual growth through the past 20 centuries as the "body and bride of Jesus Christ."

Dr. Hudson, at the evening service, spoke of the place of the Sunday school and church in the life of mankind, and of the dependence of that institution upon sincere consecration of individuals to its high purposes. Both Dr. Burroughs' and Dr. Hudson's sermons were spiritual rather than historical expositions of the church, and were laid as a foundation for the lectures to be given by them during the coming four days before representatives of the Baptist church in and near this city.

Beginning Monday and continuing through Thursday, meetings will be held at 7:30 o'clock each evening, with both the visiting executives discussing different phases of church building each night.

Don Chandler, 23, of Randlett, Okla., died in a Wichita Falls hospital about 7:30 o'clock Saturday morning as a result of injuries sustained early last week in an automobile crash near his home. The body was taken to Walters, Okla., Saturday for interment Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Chandler is survived by his parents and his widow, all of whom live in Randlett.

His death came as a result of a fracture of the skull and internal injuries suffered when the car he was driving overturned late last Tuesday night on the outskirts of Randlett. Martin Gives Modern Application Of Parable in Talk to Bible Class

In his address before the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, Judge P. A. Martin presented a modern application of the old parable of the sower. The speaker declared that much of the seed of the kingdom falls today upon the "unfruitful soil" of men and women who cling to the world while professing the Christian religion, and pointed also to the 75,000,000 people in the United States to whom the "seed" has made no appeal.

His discussion of the parable and its present-day significance is quoted in full below:

"A strange picture meets our eyes when we try to envision the setting of the lesson today. The greatest preacher who ever lived is sitting in one of the little ships, perhaps a fishing smack just off the shore of Galilee. Along the beach, sitting and standing is a great concourse of people, so many, in fact, that he has gone to the little ship to avoid being over-crowded. And there he delivers the great parable of the sower, trying to make them understand some of the "mysteries of the kingdom." He is attempting to establish in their hearts and lives. Of course this is but a small part of the great sermon preached there that day from the deck of the fishing boat, but it is so plainly taught the great lesson of the implanatation of the seed of the kingdom in the human heart, that the sacred writer has perpetuated the parable and its explanation for the benefit of the millions who were to follow, even to you and to me.

"Anybody can understand that seed devoured by the fowls can never germinate; that seed falling upon a thin light soil of no depth, though they may germinate, will soon die in the scorching rays of the sun, that seed sown among thorns will be choked out by the thorny growth, while seed sown upon good ground well prepared, will with proper cultivation give promise of a harvest; and by this simple illustration the Master classified the untold millions of men and women in this world who, sooner or later, would become the recipients of the word of God. And he exhorted 'who hath ears to hear, let him hear.'

"And the parable is just as applicable to you and to me as it was to those who first heard it standing by the Sea of Galilee. The only difference is that we are more responsible for the way we have heard it than they. It was a new thing to them. To us it is a story we have heard ever since we knelt at the knees of our mothers saying our first prayers. Probably many of that congregation never heard the great teacher but this one time, while we have heard of him every Sunday of our lives from pulpit or in class room and have read and reread his great discourses from the sacred writings.

"When I think of the tremendous responsibility of the men of our particular age I am lost in wonder at the mercy of our God we are so careless and indifferent to the things of His kingdom and the seed of the kingdom, and, at the same time cling tenaciously to all the things of the world they were used to before they entered the portals of the kingdom—try to hold to the altar with one hand, as it were, and the world with the other. They are "unfruitful" said the Master, and I sometimes think that this is one of the big reasons why the church, as a whole is not producing more fruit than it does.

"But I am thankful that, there are millions of the 'good ground' type, who have received the word in honest and earnest hearts, whose fallow ground has been all broken up by deep repentance and fully prepared for its reception; who have cultivated the sacred gift; have trained and nurtered the tender plant until it has grown to fruitage and is producing, 'some a hundred, some 60 and some 30 fold.' And I am thankful that our reward is not measured by the quantity of the harvest; for the man who had two talents received his reward just the same as the one who had 10. The reward will be measured by the boundless mercy and goodness of God, which is "without measure."

When Home Dollars Stay at Home

Wichita Falls Is Our Town

It belongs to us. We own it. We want to keep it. But can we unless we patronize the stores that mean progress and prosperity to Wichita Falls—the independent, locally-owned merchants?

When Wichita Falls was just an infant, swathed in the clothes of new prosperity, a prosperity created by home people with faith in their city, foreign owned chain stores were not here then. They were not here before Wichita Falls began to look bright, and when we were in the pioneer stage of paving streets, building schools, churches and hospitals, but once Wichita Falls became a power in this trade territory, and a city of great resources and financially able citizens, when streets and churches and hospitals and homes had been built, foreign owned chain stores came in to exploit our resources.

Do you ever wonder who gets the money that you spend for merchandise in a foreign owned chain? It is erroneous to believe that that money reverts to our city. All of the profits from this volume of business remain elsewhere. If this process is continued, this will mean ultimately the elimination of most independent merchants and every person of Wichita Falls will have to patronize the big chain system. This entire business district will be operated and controlled by capitalists, living in distant cities, and all employes in all stores will be a clerical and subordinate force. Towns and cities do not grow of their own accord. They are made by people who have an interest in them and faith in themselves. Chain stores have never built any cities or towns. They do no pioneering. Without our independent retail merchants and other home owned industries, this city would go down to ruin as a result of mergers and the chain system and the spirit of loyalty that made this city what it is will be gone.

they are constantly on duty circulating—paying the "Butcher, the Baker, the Candle Stick Maker"—and thousands of other folks in all walks of life.

But the FOREIGN CHAIN STORES are invading our country by leaps and bounds and our Home Dollars take wings for Wall Street. Our communities are being gradually seined causing financial stringencies in all parts of our country. IT'S TIME TO WAKE UP AND THINK.

This Association Is Composed of Two Classes of Memberships:

1. Those who are willing to make financial contributions.
2. Those who wish to lend their moral support toward the upbuilding of home-owned institutions.
