Shuttle Discovery chasing stray satellites

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Shuttle Discovery vaulted spectacularly into orbit today and began pursuit of two wayward satellites that free-flying jet-propelled astronauts are to retrieve in a daring salvage mission.

During eight days in orbit, the crew of four men and one woman also is to deploy two communications satellites for paying customers and conduct crystal-growing experiments that could lead to a major new industry in space.

With tens of thousands watching, Discovery roared away from this spaceport at 7:15 a.m. EST and rose swiftly through partly cloudy skies on 7 million pounds of thrust, darting eastward over the Atlantic Ocean.

Nine minutes after liftoff, mission control center in Houston reported the winged ship was in orbit 184 miles above the globe, speeding along at 17,400 mph.

"We look good," said astronaut Rick Hauck, mission commander.

Within an hour, the astronauts triggered Discovery's maneuvering engines in the first of 44 firings designed to track down two off-course satellites for the rescue attempts next week. They were to capture the first payload Monday after a chase of 1.6 million miles, 64 times around the globe.

Liftoff was a day late. The flight was postponed Wednesday, just 32 minutes before the planned launch time, because of strong high-altitude crosswinds which could have severely damaged the shuttle.

Shuttle managers decided later Wednesday to proceed with a new count after analysis of balloon and radar data showed the wind threat had vanished.

■ Another passenger chosen; Related story — Page 2A

The flight is the 14th in the shuttle program, the second for Discovery.

Hauck predicted in advance the flight would be one of "pure excitement."

The others in Hauck's crew are pilot David Walker and mission specialists Anna Fisher, Joe Allen and Dale Gardner. Gardner's 36th birthday is today, and Hauck said after Wednesday's scrub that the astronauts were looking forward to giving him "the biggest birthday candle of his life."

Mrs. Fisher, a physician, is the fourth American woman and first mother named to a space flight. She and her astronaut-physician husband, Bill, are parents of a 14-month-old daughter, Kristin.

The astronauts' goals during eight days in orbit are to deploy two commercial communications satellites for paying customers and to track down and capture the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 payloads, which have been drifting in useless orbits since last February.

They also will operate an experiment for 3M Company, exploring the properties and behavior of organic chemicals in space weightlessness.

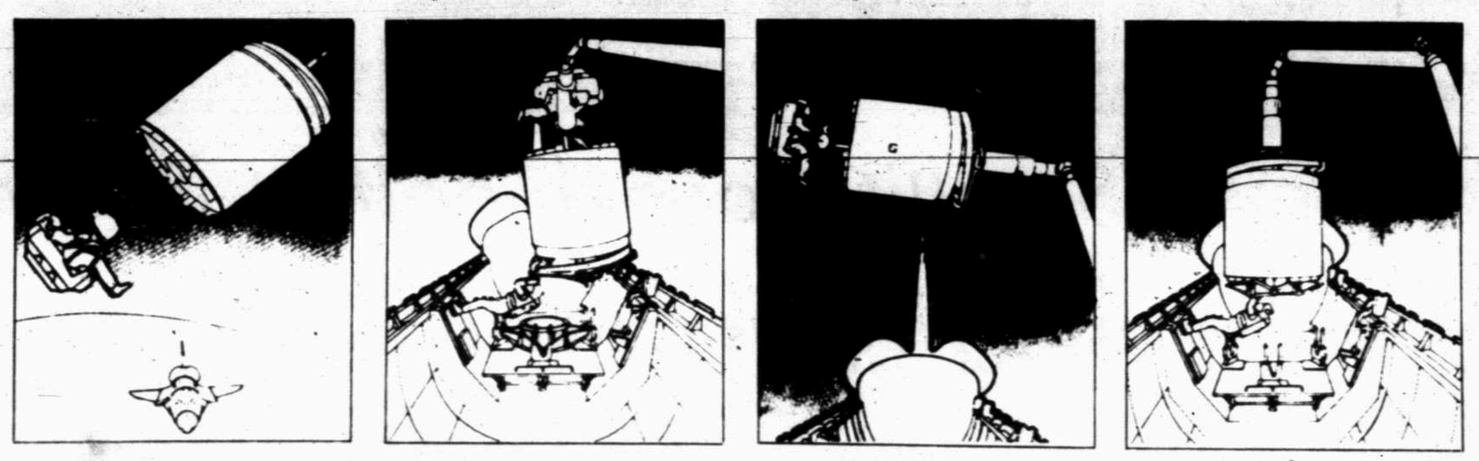

3M recently signed a multimillion dollar contract with NASA to conduct experiments on 72 shuttle missions over the next decade and to develop an industrial chemical research laboratory aboard the space station planned for the early 1990s.

On Friday and Saturday, the crew is to release into separate orbits the commercial satellites for Telesat of Canada and Hughes Communications Services Inc.

Then Hauck and Walker are to guide Discovery to the Palapa and Westar satellites, sent into off-course orbits by faulty booster rockets after being deployed successfully by a shuttle crew. They are 224 miles high, 690 miles apart.

Allen and Gardner are to make the rescue efforts during a pair of six-hour space walks Monday and Wednesday.

DESCRIPTION OF SATELLITE RESCUE ATTEMPT

1. Astronaut uses a "stinger" to latch onto and control a satellite, spinnng at the rate of a sweep-second hand.

2. Shuttle's manipulator arm grabs the stinger and holds satellite upside down above cargo bay, where a second astronaut (bottom) attaches a grapple device to the satellite.

3. Manipulator arm, after letting go of the stinger, grabs grapple device attached by astronaut (upper left.)

4. Astronaut (bottom) attaches adapter which will be used to lock the satellite onto a platform and hold it in place during flight back to earth.

Dockworkers in Corinto, Nicaragua, work routinely despite the presence of a Soviet freighter.

U.S. denies Sandinista charges its vessels shadowed freighter

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

CORINTO, Nicaragua — The Sandinista government claims U.S. warships, aircraft and speedboats violated Nicaraguan territorial waters while shadowing a Soviet freighter that the United States said may have brought MiG warplanes to Nicaragua.

The United States declared that it would view with "utmost concern" any delivery of Soviet-made advanced MiG 21 aircraft to the leftist-ruled country.

The Soviet freighter Bakuriani docked Wednesday at Corinto, a Pacific coast port 105 miles northwest of Managua. U.S. officials have said that intelligence data suggest the ship is carrying advanced MiG 21 warplanes, but that the data is inconclusive.

A Pentagon spokesman denied that any U.S. military ships or aircraft had been deployed in Nicaraguan waters or airspace in response to the freighter's arrival.

Nicaraguan security forces kept reporters from approaching the vessel as it unloaded, but journalists saw from a distance hundreds of sacks labeled "powdered milk" being unloaded and stacked onto trucks parked near the ship.

Dock workers told reporters that the cargo included dynamite. However, that report that could not be confirmed because of the security measures.

Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto denied that Nicaragua had received any MiGs, but he did not say what the Soviet ship was carrying. He made public the text of a diplomatic note he sent to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz protesting what he called a "flagrant violation of the national sovereignty" of Nicaragua by the United States.

The note said two U.S. Navy frigates "harassed" the Bakuriani "between 10 and 11 a.m. seven miles off the Nicaraguan coast."

Earlier, d'Escoto and Defense Ministry officials in Managua claimed that speedboats unloaded from U.S. Navy warships and North American aircraft harassed the Bakuriani and a Nicaraguan patrol boat inside territorial waters. A Nicaraguan military spokesman said a plane from a U.S. Navy warship was shadowing the Bakuriani as it neared Corinto.

State board to discuss grading plan complaints

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The State Board of Education today will attempt to curb dissension between parents and Texas school districts during a discussion and interpretation of state legislation requiring schools to redesign grading practices.

Angry parents and school board members across the state have expressed concern over the new grading system, which gives any student who earns below a score of 70 an F.

The new system, approved by the Texas Legislature last summer, was effective the beginning of the current school year. It is part of a new state law requiring Texas schools to redesign grading systems so that any grade below 70 is failing.

Among the areas to be interpreted are:

— School districts shall determine student academic achievement using a numerical score on a scale of 0-100. For grades 1-6, numerical scores shall be established for English, language arts, mathematics, science, social studies, fine arts, physical eduction and health.

— School districts shall develop procedures for determining student progress and reporting to parents for students at the kindergarten level.

— Grades in all subjects or courses shall be reported to parents and students at the end of each six week period. The report also shall include the number of absences.

—School districts may report grades to parents as numerical scores or may convert to letter grades. If districts choose to report letter grades, the following scale shall be used: 90-100 — A; 80-90 — B; 70-79 — C; below 70 — F.

Districts that choose to report letter grades to parents shall observe the following scale: 91-98 — A; 81-88 — B; 71-78 — C; below 70 — F.

Raymon L. Bynum, former commissioner of education for the Texas Education Agency, wrote in a letter addressed to various school districts, "The State Board of Education has identitified three areas of HB 72 as needing urgent attention: Promotion and Alternatives to Social Promotion, Student Absences; and Student Participation Extracurricular and Other Activities." He did not indicate whether the board would take action on any of the items to be discussed.

The Midland Independent School District, which raised its grading standards for students across the board, recently presented a three-part study which compared student grade fluctuations in Midland secondary schools during the past three years and showed college entrance requirements of several major universitites and colleges across the nation.

Currently, MISD grading procedures are as follows: 92-100 — A; 83-91 — B; 74-82 — C; 70-73 — D; below 70 — F. Previously, any MISD secondary student would have had to earn 59 or lower to fail a course.

Duane Moore, assistant superintendent of administrative services, said during a recent MISD Board meeting, "We discussed at length whether we should even have a 'D' grade. Other considerations were going to a 'plus and minus' system or to straight numerical grading but we decided against them."

Still, dissension arose between parents when the report presented by the board members revealed no real impact on grades. Data gathered by MISD administrators showed the number of each respectie letter grade given in secondary schools had basically not changed during the first six weeks of the school year when compared with the same time period in 1983 and 1982.

The study also showed that Midland's secondary schools are comparable in standards to 27 other Texas school districts, while 17 have higher grading standards. College entrance requirement listed from 10 major universities and colleges revealed that the new standard, which in some cases lowered grade point averages for students, consider class rank more important than GPA in accepting a student.

Florida prison inmate executed

Associated Press

STARKE, Fla. — Timothy Palmes, a jailhouse artist, was electrocuted in Florida's death chamber today for the murder of a store owner who was stabbed 18 times before his body was put in a wooden box and dumped in a river.

Palmes, 37, was put to death shortly after 10 a.m. in the state's eighth execution this year.

He was convicted of killing James Stone of Jacksonville and dumping his body in the St. Johns River in 1976.

Palmes' latest appeal was rebuffed by the U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday.

He ate a last meal of steak and eggs, and soon after, his head and right ankle were shaved to allow a clear path for the 2,000 volts of electricity.

Palmes, who during his years on death row had painted several portraits, appeared resigned to his fate.

Markets retreat as prime rate, oil prices cut

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The financial markets retreated in the first session following President Reagan's overwhelming election victory, despite a move by several major banks to reduce their prime lending rates.

Meanwhile, two more oil companies announced cuts in the prices they will pay for domestic crude, joining a spreading move that analysts said already has led to lower prices for gasoline and heating oil.

In the stock market Wednesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 27.50 points Monday and Tuesday, fell back 10.93 to 1,233.22.Declines outnumbered advances by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Prices also fell in the bond markets, with those on some actively traded 30-year Treasury bonds plunging as much as $17.50 per $1,000 in face value.

In the currency markets, the dollar slid to a two-month low in a decline analysts attributed to falling interest rates and to rumors, quickly denied, that Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker was about to resign.

Wednesday's retreat in the financial markets seemed to confirm the view that a Reagan victory at the polls had been fully anticipated by investors and that, if anything, there was some disappointment that Republicans did not score better in congressional elections.

That left the outlook uncertain for legislative action on any Reagan proposals in the president's second term.

The move to lower the prime lending rate was led by Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank. It lowered its prime, or base, lending charge to 11.75 percent from 12 percent. The reduction was quickly followed by Chase Manhattan, the third-largest bank, and seventh-ranked First National Bank of Chicago.

Fair conditions expected to continue in Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair conditions will continue in the Midland area as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects tonight's low to be in the mid-40s and Friday's high in the mid-70s Friday. Tonight's southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph will shift Friday to the west at 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

The record high of 88 set in 1963 was seven degrees warmer than the high recorded Wednesday. The record low set in 1938 was 26 degrees cooler than this morning's low of 48.

STATE

A few light rain showers developed in Southeast Texas early today and forecasters called for thundershower activity in Southeast Texas and western portions of North Texas today.

In addition to the early morning shower activity in Southeast Texas, heavier showers were reported off the Texas coast in the Gulf of Mexico between Port O'Connor and Galveston.

The main feature on the Texas weather map was a trough of low pressure extending from west of Childress southward to Sanderson in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. And a weak cold front moved into the Panhandle, dropping temperatures into the 40s.

Winds were southerly over the eastern two-thirds of the state and from the west and southwest elsewhere.

Early morning temperatures were on the warm side, mostly in the 50s and 60s, ranging from the middle 70s in South Texas to the mid 40s in the Panhandle. Extremes ranged from 46 at Amarillo to 76 at Corpus Christi.

Garn denies 'pressure' for flight

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — U.S. Sen. Jake Garn says he never unduly pressured NASA to let him ride on the space shuttle, but he admits the invitation resulted from his lobbying and the fact that he chairs the subcommittee that funds the space agency.

Garn, a Utah Republican, announced Wednesday that NASA administrator James M. Beggs asked him to consider "making an inspection tour and flight aboard the shuttle."

Garn said he has been lobbying for years for such an offer.

"But I didn't say to NASA, 'You can't have a shuttle unless you let me go,'" Garn said.

"It's a little difficult to believe," he said. "I've wanted to do this for so long, I feel like a little kid who's been waiting for Christmas."

In his acceptance letter to Beggs, Garn wrote, "My interest in making such a flight has been no secret since April 12, 1981, when Columbia made her maiden voyage. Naturally, I enthusiastically, eagerly and wholeheartedly accept your invitation."

Garn, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that funds the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said he has joked with NASA officials that he would consider their spending requests if they sent him into space.

A former Navy pilot and retired colonel in the Utah Air National Guard, Garn, 52, has logged more than 10,000 hours as a pilot and has flown many of the nation's most sophisticated military aircraft, including the F-14, F-15, F-16 and B-1 bomber.

On Aug. 27, President Reagan announced he had directed NASA to search for a schoolteacher to be the first "citizen-passenger" in space. NASA public affairs officers said it was not known whether Garn would fly before the teacher.

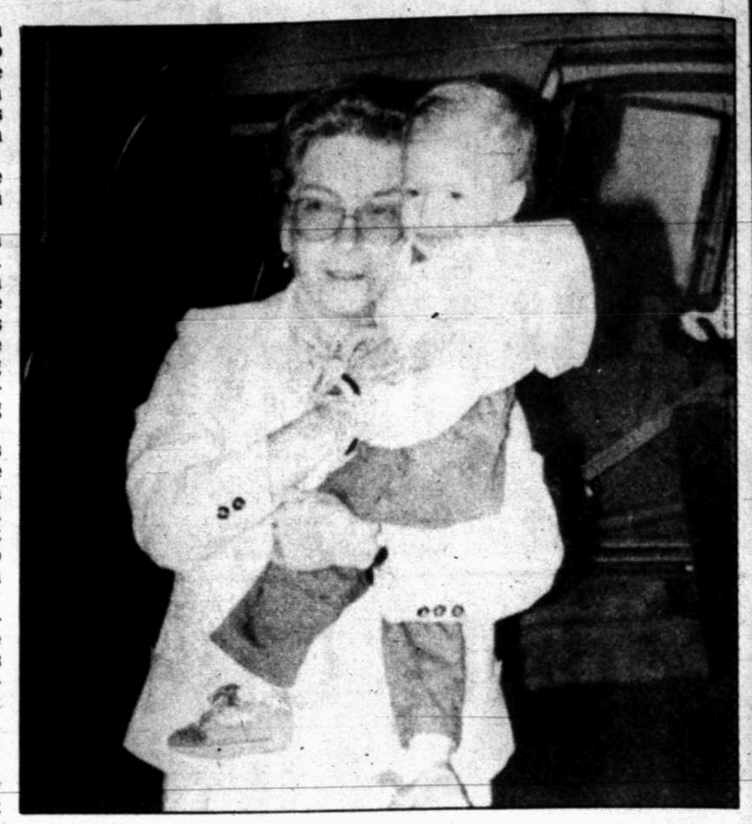

By pre-arrangement, the announcement came not from NASA, but from Garn's office.

Garn said he hoped to go on a Challenger flight scheduled for Feb. 12, when the Senate will be in recess. Beforehand, he said, he would undergo more than 100 hours of training at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. The training would include everything from coping with weightlessness to "finding the men's room," he said.

When Garn goes into orbit, his shuttle — like all shuttles — will be boosted by twin rockets made by a Utah firm, Morton Thiokol. NASA said the booster contract has meant more than $1.5 billion since 1973 to the company, located in Brigham City.

NASA said it is extending the invitation for a shuttle flight to the chairmen of any committees directly responsible for NASA activities. That would include Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass; Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash.; and Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo.

Several non-astronauts already have flown the shuttle. The first were two scientists — one German, one American — on the ninth shuttle mission a year ago. In September, the shuttle carried the first paying customer, industry engineer Charles D. Walker. Several others have been assigned to future trips.

Satellite launch halted by high winds

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The launch of a satellite to monitor Earth's weather and help locate plane crash and shipwreck survivors was scrubbed early today because of strong winds — the same problem that delayed launch of the space shuttle this week.

The NOAA-F satellite, mounted atop an Atlas-E rocket, was scheduled for launch from this coastal military base between 2:42 a.m. and 2:52 a.m., according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

But the launch was postponed 24 hours because winds at 40,000 feet were blowing at 120 knots, "just above the margin that we needed," NASA spokesman Jim Elliott said early today.

Surface winds of 30 knots also exceeded a 20-knot limit, Elliott said.

The launch was rescheduled for the same 10-minute window Friday morning.

The $56 million RCA Corp. satellite is destined for a near-polar orbit about 540 miles above the Earth, where it "will transmit data directly around the world for local weather analysis," NASA said in a statement.

The satellite is the sixth in a series of eight intended to provide scientists with the most comprehensive weather and environmental information since the start of the U.S. space program, NASA said.

NOAA-F also is equipped with special instruments to further test a satellite-aided search-and-rescue system for finding radio distress signals triggered by survivors of shipwrecks and plane crashes or other people stranded in remote areas. The satellite will assume the duties of a sister satellite that broke down last June, NASA officials said.

Similar service is available from three Soviet satellites and NOAA-F to nations around the world.

At least 318 lives have been saved by the multi-national satellite system, said Fred Flatlow of the Goddard Space Center in Greenbelt, Md. Federal regulations require the use of emergency locator transmitters on most ships and planes.

NOAA-F's weather and environmental monitoring equipment can make weather photographs and study Earth's surface, ocean and atmospheric temperatures, cloud cover, melting of mountain snowpacks and "backscatter" of solar radiation.

Texas Republicans enjoying successes

Associated Press

DALLAS — Texas Republicans were in a distinctly upbeat mood after trouncing Democrats in the presidential, U.S. Senate and 10 congressional races.

"We are witnessing something historic for Texas, a complete realignment of voting patterns," said Texas GOP Chairman George Strake.

GOP leaders said their party now speaks for the average Texan.

"I think this morning, given those election results, that the Republican Party is the party of the working men and women of Texas," Senate victor Phill Gramm said.

Gramm, 42, a three-term congressman from College Station, referred to those who voted for Republican candidates as "this new majority." He said it is important for the GOP leadership now to include those new voters in party business.

"We want them to come in and be part of the new wave of leadership," Gramm said.

From the top of the ballot down, GOP candidates forged a coalition of Republicans, independents and disaffected Democrats to score their victories. Relying on President Reagan's enormous popularity and appealing to conservative attitudes, the GOP logged its best performance in modern Texas history.

"I think the emotional factor is the new pride, the new confidence in Texas and America. You could see it in the rallies. You could see it in the building momentum," said Gramm, who swamped state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

With more than 99 percent of the vote tallied, Gramm recorded a 59 percent to 41 percent win, 3,033,434 votes to Doggett's 2,142,235. Doggett, an Austin liberal, compared his fate to "taking on a tidal wave."

In presidential balloting, Texans gave Reagan a landslide 64 percent to 36 percent win — 3,351,588 votes to 1,897,191 for Democrat Walter Mondale.

In the state's 27 U.S. House races, Republicans ousted three Democratic incumbents and gained a net total of four seats from Democrats — trimming the Democrats' lead from 21-6 to 17-10.

The GOP ousted 10-year Democratic veteran Jack Hightower of Vernon, dumped incumbent Bill Patman of Ganado and defeated first-term Democrat Tom Vandergriff of Arlington, while also capturing the seat held by outgoing conservative Democrat Kent Hance of Lubbock.

The Republicans carried their success to state legislative races as well, apparently picking up one seat for a total of six in the 31-member Texas Senate and possibly gaining one-third of the 150 House seats.

GOP chairman Strake, rumored to be considering a bid for governor in 1986, said Democratic Gov. Mark White should pay close attention to Tuesday's outcome and quit bragging about his upset win over GOP Gov. Bill Clements in 1982.

"He put his reputation on the line by backing Doggett and Mondale. His image as a giant killer, which he enjoyed for the last two years, has been permanently damaged. It puts him in a very tenuous position," Strake said.

White reflected the mood of many Democrats, saying the party needs to build "a new foundation."

While not abandoning "the fundamental ideals, beliefs and principles that guide us," White said, the party must now "reformulate those ideas along the lines which bridge new constituencies."

The Republican wave pumped unprecedented strength into GOP challenges for statewide offices, too, although Democrats clung to leads in those races.

Democrat John Hill, a former state attorney general, won the race for chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court over GOP challenger John L. Bates of Waco, 54.1 percent to 45.9 percent. In the race for Place 1 on the Court of Criminal Appeals, incumbent Sam Houston Clinton edged Republican Virgil Mulanax by a 51 percent to 49 percent spread.

Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace faced a surprisingly strong bid from John Thomas Henderson, 77, a Republican making his third try for the commission. Wallace had a narrow 50.35 percent to 49.64 percent margin.

Six of eight constitutional amendments received voter approval, including one which will provide $100 million annually for capital expansion projects at state colleges and universities.

Two amendments were defeated. Voters rejected a proposal to increase the daily expense payment for members of the Legislature during legislative sessions, a decision House Speaker Gib Lewis attributed to "the negative attitude the press has drawn of the Legislature over the years."

Also defeated was a a proposition to allow public funds to be used to pay mutual insurance companies' premiums.

'Christian Voice' claims credit for defeats

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Leaders of the religious right took credit Wednesday for defeating nine Democratic congressmen in Tuesday's elections and said they plan to package their "Texas plan" for others to use in the 1986 elections.

"We've only covered 10 percent of the potential so far," said Christian Voice executive director Colonel V. Doner of Pacific Grove, Calif., referring to the conservative Christian movement and its political activism.

Their goal is to expand the Christian activist network into other states by 1986 so it will be fully in place by the showdown presidential elections of 1988.

While they hope for more of a voice in President Reagan's second term, their long-range goal is laying the groundwork to capture the party for a conservative successor, with most Religious Right leaders leaning toward Rep. Jack Kemp, D-N.Y., rather than Vice President George Bush.

"Bush comes off looking like goldplated, not the real thing. Kemp is the real thing," said Gary Jarmin, field director for the new umbrella coalition of Religious Right activists, the California-based American Coalition of Traditional Values.

They consider their 1984 victories a good down payment on 1988, especially in Texas where hundreds of Christian activists worked in campaigns such as that of North Texas State University economics professor Richard Armey, who upset first-term Democratic Rep. Tom Vandergriff.

More than two years ago, the new Religious Right coalition established its first field office — in North Central Texas, an area characterized by strong economic growth, a major population influx from outside the state and a mushrooming nondenominational Can church movement.

They saturated the region's churches with "how-to" literature on not just registering to vote but taking over grass-roots, precinct-level structures of the Republican party. They formed a network of nearly 2,500 conservative pastors with such other special-interest blocs as the anti-abortion and prayer-in-school lobbies. And they distributed 2.5 million copies of their so-called Biblical Score Card that unfavorably compared Democrat Walter Mondale with Reagan and rated members of Congress on their support of Reagan.

By last spring, they targeted eight congressional seats in Texas where they hoped to defeat incumbent Democrats or keep Democrats from capturing open congressional seats vacated by three House members who ran for the Senate — one conservative Democrat and two Republicans, including Democrat-turned-Republican Phil Gramm who won the Senate race Tuesday.

On Tuesday, three conservative Democrats were surprise losers: Vandergriff and Reps. William Patman and Jack Hightower. Conservative Republicans also picked up all three open seats, with one victory a surprise.

These were among 21 victories claimed by the Christian activists at a post-election news conference. Gramm's election, the survival of New Right leader Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the upset defeat of Kentucky Sen. Walter Huddleston by political newcomer Mitch McConnell were among them.

Doner and Jarmin said they had out-registered the Democrats among first-time voters, signing up a minimum of 2.5 million Christian fundamentalists but possibly twice that many.

"The Democrats made a number of strategic errors and the 'women's vote' factor, the Ferraro Factor, was the key mistake," said Doner.

ECONOMY

The banking industry has cut its prime, or base, lending charge three other times in the past six weeks, and some credit analysts on Wall Street see the rate falling further by year's end.

The prime rate is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans. While not directly affecting the cost of most consumer loans, the widely followed rate is an indicator of the general direction of lending charges, including mortgage rates.

The reduction came as Federal Reserve Board policymakers gathered in Washington amid widespread expectations that they would lighten their grip on money supply growth.

Chevron Corp. and its Gulf Oil Corp. subsidiary said in separate announcements they each had lowered their posted price for West Texas Intermediate crude oil, the U.S. benchmark blend, by $1 a barrel to $29.

Since mid-October, when oil prices began tumbling on world markets, the average price of a gallon of gasoline has slipped about three-tenths of a cent in the United States, and further reductions are likely, analysts said.

In other economic news Wednesday:

—Union officials in Toronto said a new Canadian contract offer by Ford Motor Co. may avert a strike set for noon Friday by the 14,200 United Auto Workers members at Ford's Canadian subsidiary.

New Delhi, Punjab army units on alert

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India — Army units in New Delhi and troubled Punjab state were on alert against possible renewed rioting today as India's 13 million Sikhs — many mourning their dead from last week's Hindu rampage — observed their main religious holiday.

The army took over responsibility for security from police in the capital and other areas following the revenge massacre of hundreds of Sikhs triggered by the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by two security guards identified as Sikhs.

Sikhs were subdued today as they gathered at gurdwaras — Sikh shrines — across northern India for prayers and rituals on the 515th birthday of the sect's founder, Guru Nanak Dev.

"After so many people were killed, so much looted, there are no crowds here," said Manmon Singh as he stood before a Delhi gurdwara. "Normally Sikhs are so proud to go the gurdwara. People feel frightened. So they are not coming out of their homes."

The head of India's domestic intelligence service resigned from his post as Mrs. Gandhi's son and successor, Rajiv Gandhi, continued a sweeping purge of top security officers responsible for protecting the prime minister.

Rameshwar Nath Kao, the 70-year-old chief intelligence and security adviser to the prime minister and a close friend of the Gandhi family, oversaw the various civilian agencies tracking the terrorist wing of a Sikh separatist movement.

The Times of India reported that Kao, a Hindu, has been excluded from all high-level security consultations since Mrs. Gandhi's Oct. 31 assassination.

Kao's replacement was not immediately announced. But a commando unit of the special frontier force, an elite squadron that Kao trained for anti-terrorist work, continued to protect the prime minister and other top leaders.

The security measures were stepped up Wednesday following new threats against Indian leaders from the underground separatist movement.

Guru Nanak Dev's birthday is an official national holiday, but this year it lacked its usual festiveness. The customary parades were canceled because the government last week banned gatherings of more than five people in public places. Unauthorized fireworks displays were banned in New Delhi, and singing and dancing were called off as a sign of mourning for Mrs. Gandhi and the Sikhs who died in the communal violence.

Troops patrolled New Delhi's streets in trucks and guarded gurdwaras and main intersections as a precaution against any new riots.

WORLD in brief

Reagan repeats his offer for Soviet talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is urging Moscow to capitalize on "real possibilities" for improved relations between the superpowers, as President Reagan reiterates his willingness to meet with Soviet president Konstantin Chernenko.

In its first post-election comment on U.S.-Soviet relations, the department announced Wednesday that U.S. representatives will meet with Soviet economic and trade experts in early January in Moscow, a meeting that could lead to "better contacts and an increased flow of commercial information."

And at a news conference Wednesday in Los Angeles, Reagan said discussions are under way with the Soviet Union on establishing "some separate informal channel so that we could keep in touch" with the aim of getting arms control negotiations resumed.

Withdrawal talks open

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese and Israeli army officers opened negotiations in this border town today on arrangements that would allow Israel to withdraw its troops from south Lebanon after a 29-month occupation.

The talks, taking place at the headquarters of the United Nations peacekeeping force, are likely to be long and difficult.

Security was heavy as six Lebanese officers arrived by helicopter from Beirut and six Israeli officers drove up the narrow coastal highway from the Israeli border three miles to the south.

Police controls urged

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leaders are urging Poles to demand that the Communist government clamp down on the secret police in an effort to curb "political terror."

A statement signed by 18 senior officials and advisers of the outlawed labor federation was made public Wednesday, a day after government officials said three secret police officers were charged with murdering pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko.

Popieluszko, a popular 37-year-old Warsaw priest, was abducted Oct. 19 and police pulled his body from an icy reservoir in northern Poland 11 days later.

Chad charged in deaths

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today accused government forces in Chad of hundreds of killings, including burning people alive in a church where they had sought sanctuary.

The independent London-based human rights group, which won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize, said in a news release that the church burning took place at the town of N'Galo in the administrative district of Moyen-Chari in southern Chad.

It said the burning was among "hundreds of summary executions" carried out by government forces in the African country over the past two months.

Mexico reacts to election

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Reagan's landslide victory over Democratic candidate Walter Mondale was the top story of the day in Mexico Wednesday. Some news organizations suggested the re-election will lead to increased U.S. involvement in Central American fighting.

The official news agency Notimex said in an analysis out of Washington that "the next four years will be crucial politically for this country and it remains to be seen if the magic and the force of the personality, which secured President Reagan's re-election, will take the country where the voters want."

In a letter addressed to "Distinguished Mr. President and Good Friend," President Miguel de la Madrid sent his congratulations to Reagan on Wednesday. He also sent congratulations to President-elect Daniel Ortega in Nicaragua, winner of Sunday's election there.

Journalist to be released

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court today ordered the release without bail of a journalist jailed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos 13 months ago for reporting that opposition leader Benigno Aquino was killed by a soldier in an alleged military conspiracy.

Earlier, Marcos had revoked an order allowing the military to jail journalist Rommel Corro indefinitely on charges of inciting sedition. But the charges still are pending before a civilian court, and Justice Minister Estelito Mendoza wanted Corro to formally file a petition for bail and for a review of the sedition charges.

The Supreme Court's order overruled Mendoza.

Reporter's bail extended

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Supreme Court has extended interim bail for an Associated Press reporter charged by the government in connection with his reports about the Indian army assault against Sikh extremists at the Golden Temple in Amritsar in June.

The case involving Brahma Chellaney, an Indian national, did not come up for hearing in the Supreme Court on Tuesday as expected, but the court extended anticipatory bail until Nov. 20, when a hearing on permanent bail is scheduled.

On Wednesday, a lower-court judge in New Delhi denied a separate request for anticipatory bail.

Chile's broad restrictions ban opposition

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer

SANTIAGO, Chile — The military government clamped sweeping restrictions on public gatherings and the press today that effectively ban opposition political activity throughout Chile during a 90-day state of siege.

One decree banned six opposition magazines, imposed prior censorship on a seventh, and restricted political reporting and commentary by all other news media to official communiques.

Another measure outlawed all gatherings that lack previous authorization by regional governors, who are all military officers.

Public events such as movies, and family or social gatherings in private homes were exempt from the decree. But the measure said legally registered organizations were required to give five days' notice of meetings of their members.

The decrees, signed by President Augusto Pinochet and published in the Official Bulletin, marked the end of a political liberalization begun in the late 1970s and accelerated 15 months ago in response to growing opposition to his authoritarian rule. The plan called for legalization of political parties and the possible election of a congress while preserving Pinochet's constitutional tenure to rule until at least 1989.

The decrees prohibit dozens of newspaper columns and radio talk shows about politics that became popular features of the mainstream media under the liberalization.

On Wednesday, the government, operating under a state of siege declared by Pinochet the day before, raided headquarters of the Socialist Bloc and the Democratic Popular Movement, arresting 22 people, Chile's Human Rights Commission said. Leaders of the group went into hiding, members said.

Another 214 people were arrested in their homes in Santiago early Wednesday during a midnight-to-5 a.m. curfew and in the port city of Valparaiso after the state of siege was declared, newspapers reported. Defense Ministry sources were quoted in the reports as saying those arrested were "delinquents."

The government also barred the Rev. Ignacio Gutierrez, a Spanish priest who heads the Roman Catholic human rights agency, from returning to Chile.

Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle charged that Gutierrez, now traveling in Spain, made "public statements that constitute a clear intervention in the internal affairs of Chile." In Rome last week, Gutierrez condemned decrees prohibiting nearly 5,000 Chileans from coming home.

Monsignor Juan Francisco Fresno, the archbishop of Santiago and a powerful figure in this predominantly Roman Catholic country, issued a statement invoking his "moral authority" to ask that the decree against Gutierrez be lifted.

The Spanish government, in a diplomatic note made public by its embassy in Santiago, issued an "energetic protest" against the decree, demanding its revocation.

Gutierrez, a resident of Chile since 1973, was named last year to head the Santiago archdiocese Vicariate of Solidarity. That agency has monitored and denounced human rights abuses since the early years of the Pinochet regime, when thousands of leftists were killed and more than 600 disappeared.

The state of siege, reimposed Tuesday night after a six-year break, frees Pinochet's regime from judicial restraints to deal with what Pinochet called a Marxist-led insurrection.

Ferraro says her political strength undiminished despite loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Keeping her options open on the heels of defeat, Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro insists her political strength in New York is undiminished by the Democratic presidential ticket's failure to carry her home state.

Ferraro

"Let me suggest to you that the race was between Walter Mondale and Ronald Reagan," Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, said at an end-of-campaign news conference at the New York Hilton on Wednesday.

"I would have loved to have carried New York for the ticket," the New York congresswoman said. "I would have loved to carry the entire country for the ticket. I was not able to do that. The race was between Walter Mondale and President Reagan."

Ms. Ferraro declined to say whether she was considering a challenge to Sen. Alfonse D'Amato R-N.Y., in 1986. Asked about a return to public life, she said, "I'm not excluding that as a possiblity."

Perhaps more revealing was Ms. Ferraro's concession speech Tuesday night, in which she promised to remain politically active. "America is a great nation. But if there's one thing that our campaign has stood for it's that our country can be even greater," she said. "That cause — our country's cause — is never finish d. And I for one will continue to work for it."

NATION

On the campaign trail the past three months, Ms. Ferraro's occasional swipes at D'Amato fueled speculation that she had an eye on his seat. During a rally in Buffalo in September, for example, she called New York's senior senator, Democrat Daniel P. Moynihan, "a great senator.

"And when you have two senators," she added, pausing for effect, "one out of two ain't bad."

To hold an inside track on the Democratic nomination to challenge D'Amato, Ms. Ferraro must find a way to stay in the public eye the next two years, state party officials say. She may be able to capitalize on being the first woman to run on a major party's presidential ticket to remain visible.

Two other Democrats suggested as possible contenders for D'Amato's seat are state Attorney General Robert Abrams and Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman, who lost to D'Amato in 1980.

At his own news conference called to celebrate the GOP victory, D'Amato on Wednesday was noncommittal about a Ferraro challenge. "Que sera, sera; what will be, will be," he said. "I can't control that."

Questioned several times about her strength in the state, Ms. Ferraro said she was not concerned that Reagan had carried her own congressional district. She noted that the Republicans carried it in the last three presidential races.

In the short term, Ms. Ferraro said she would take a vacation, close out the congressional office she left to run with Mondale, then look over job offers with an eye toward "something in the legal profession."

"I'm going to clean up my congressional work," she said. "And then I'm going to sift through some offers that are coming in and lead a private life, for a while, anyway."

Mondale won't run again

Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Future presidential candidates will have to look good on television or they might as well not run, says Walter F. Mondale, who acknowledges he "never really warmed" to the cameras.

Saying he has no plans to run again, the losing Democratic presidential candidate conceded Wednesday that he never mastered the ability to effectively perform what he termed a "20-second gimmick" on the network news shows each night.

"I think you know I've never really warmed up to television, and in fairness to television, it's never really warmed up to me," he said.

"There is something about it I've never felt comfortable with," said Mondale, who flew from a news conference in St. Paul, Minn., to Washington on Wednesday before heading off on a family vacation in Caneel Bay in the Virgin Islands.

Despite losing to the largest Electoral College vote total in American history, Mondale was suprisingly cheerful at a post-election news conference and en route to Washington aboard his charter jet, the final flight for the plane dubbed the "Louisville Slugger" after his success in the first presidential debate in Kentucky.

Mondale was reminded of something the late Adlai Stevenson once said: "I'm too old to cry and and it hurts too much to laugh."

"There is a little of that," Mondale said, adding later, "In a sense, it's a relief that the campaign is over."

After his week in the Caribbean, Mondale planned another two or three weeks hunting in northern Minnesota.

Mondale, who has been faulted for a whiny voice and scowling, fatigued appearances on television, said, "I don't believe it's possible any more to run for president without the capacity to build confidence and communications every night (on the network news)."

Mondale also said that once President Reagan was credited with a credible performance in the second presidential debate Oct. 21, the election was decided.

"My chance of winning disappeared at the end of the second debate," Mondale said. In that matchup, Mondale said, "The president sufficiently reassured Americans."

While Reagan has interpreted his landslide victory as a mandate for a continuation of his conservative policies, Mondale said the vote is solely a verdict on the president's personality.

"I was running against an incumbent president who is very popular in the midst of what is perceived as good economic times and diminished international tensions," Mondale said.

At the same time, Mondale said Americans are "understandably looking for some kind of continuity."

Mondale conceded that he failed to get across his message of why higher taxes would be necessary to erase the federal deficits, and why he and not Reagan would be more likely to negotiate a nuclear arms agreement, especially to younger voters and political moderates.

But he said Reagan's insistence that no tax hikes will be necessary will backfire once the swelling federal deficits cause an economic crisis.

He predicted that Americans "are going to be very angry" when Reagan is forced to increase taxes of middle income Americans.

"One of the biggest meals of crow this administration will eat — and there will be several — is this one concerning revenues," he said. "That problem is the equivalent of a domestic hydrogen bomb."

Mondale added, "There has been no fundamental realignment" of the political parties in the election, citing the two-seat gain by the Democrats in the Senate and the modest number of GOP gains in the House.

He also recalled his bitter primary election battle with Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado.

With Hart and other competitors, "We went through a year of party blood-letting, daily attacking one another. I hated the whole process."

"I think it left scars that I carried with me through the rest of the campaign," he said.

He called for reforms, possibly regional primaries, which would "keep the best of the selection process and yet give the nominee some hope of winning when it's over."

Time to join hands

Free elections, while being the fairest and best method ever devised by man to peacefully select government leaders, create a stridently competitive situation that can divide a country or a community and leave behind bitterness for years. That's regrettable, but it's a necessary evil inherent in the system. Without it, there's less competition between candidates and a less informed electorate.

In a perfect world, politicians and their supporters wouldn't suffer hurt pride, indignation, rejection and the host of other emotions that can follow a hard-fought political contest. But this isn't a perfect world and more often than not in the aftermath of a heated election a deep depression can befall a community or the entire country.

It's at those times that the losers, their supporters and any others whose feelings were trampled during the campaign or the election need to remember some basic facts about the American political system. While the political system unavoidably puts candidates in an adversarial position, all should remember that this still is one nation and Americans are still one people. We all share a common interest — which is the best future possible for all present and future Americans. This country's people may differ in the way we propose to reach that goal, but the differences really are slight. We still have the common interest of this country's future at heart.

The 1984 campaign has been long and difficult at all levels — national, state and local. Now, though, the voters — the people — have made their choices known by choosing leaders for the next four years, in most instances.

Everyone who participated in the process deserves thanks because they have helped preserve this nation's political system. All the candidates — regardless whether they won or lost — deserve the appreciation of all Americans for offering themselves for public service.

Now the challenge changes. It's time to bury the past, forget animosities, cast aside hard feelings and join hands, as one people, to work for the future of this country, this state, this city and county — together.

A treasonable act

A wretched example of the problems faced by British Prime Minister Thatcher in dealing with labor problems surfaced last week with the revelation that an official of Britain's striking coal miners' union had been granted an audience by the despicable Libyan terrorist, Col. Muammar Khadafy.

The miners' spokesman has denied asking for, or receiving financial aid from the Libyan tyrant but acknowledged that Khadafy had promised support for the union until British miners "have been 'liberated' and their demands met."

If the union sought no actual aid from this international jackal — whose assassins murdered a young British policewoman in cold blood during a London confrontation which led to the severing of British-Libyan relations — then why go see him at all? And if the British miners are in straits as dire as they maintain, how were they able to fund such a junket?

The Khadafy talk was evidently arranged at a meeting in Paris between a Libyan delegation and Arthur Scargill, the head of the miners' union. One of Scargill's union colleagues then made the trip to Tripoli.

For this consorting with the avowed enemy of decency everywhere, Scargill and his henchmen should be censured and ostracized by every legitimate labor group in the Free World. And Mrs. Thatcher has clearly earned all possible support in facing down this treacherous band of conspirators masquerading as a union of working people.

Another View:

Creation of a martyr

Three Polish security police created a martyr, and possibly a saint, when they allegedly kidnapped and murdered the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko last month.

The killing of any priest by the communist secret police would be considered a grave provocation by Poland's overwhelmingly Roman Catholic populace. But the 37-year-old Rev. Popeiluszko — whose body was found in a lake on Oct. 30 — was an outspoken defender of the outlawed Solidarity movement. His sermons drew thousands of worshipers.

While the three suspects, a captain and two lieutenants, have been jailed, it still is unclear why the crime was committed. The policemen are thought to be hard-liners who were opposed to Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's recent policy of leniency toward Solidarity members. But the specter of KGB involvement also has been raised, since the Rev. Popieluszko was openly accused by the Kremlin propaganda machine of making "anti-Soviet broadsides."

If the Soviets are behind a movement to derail the amnesty policies of the Jaruzelski regime, the murder could have implications far beyond Poland's borders. One of Gen. Jaruzelski's goals is to end U.S. economic sanctions imposed by President Reagan in retaliation for the crushing of Solidarity in 1981. It would be difficult for the president to continue easing restrictions if the Soviets openly conspire to replace Gen. Jaruzelski with a hard-liner.

Both Solidarity Leader Lech Walesa and Cardinal Josef Glemp appear to have that fear in mind. They have urged Poles to remain calm and not provoke a confrontation with Polish police.

Regardless of the success of their appeals, the Popieluszko murder can only deepen the split between devoutly religious and nationalistic Poles and those who cling to the cutthroats in the Kremlin.

Polo gave man inside track

WASHINGTON — The problem the CIA spy masters faced was a toughie: How to get their man in Honolulu in a position where he'd be rubbing elbows with foreign potentates and millionaire businessmen.

The answer: polo.

Jack Anderson

According to Ronald Ray Rewald — a Honolulu investment counselor charged with fraud in the failure of what he insists was a CIA-front company — his bosses in the agency ordered him in 1980 "to use polo as a vehicle to cultivate social and business relationships" with prominent foreigners.

As it turned out, their Hawaiian eye did better than expected: He eventually became the owner of the polo club.

It wasn't all Pimm's cups and panatellas for Rewald, though. First he had to spend six months learning to ride horseback. This became trickier than usual when he discovered that he was allergic to horses, and had to avoid any skin contact with the critters.

But Rewald rose to the challenge, and soon acquired enough equestrian expertise to qualify as a participating member of the Hawaii Polo Club. Its well-manicured greensward has kissed the mallets of local and international polo pros, as well as titled aficionados like Prince Charles of Britain and King Edward of Malaysia.

In this exalted company, Rewald was soon mining a rich lode of useful information, useless tips and titillating gossip for the delectation of his superiors in Langley, Va. There were always half a dozen or more CIA agents at the polo club "working the foreign visitors," Rewald confided to a friend.

According to an affidavit filed by Rewald, other documents and intelligence sources interviewed by my associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Badhwar, four contacts made at the polo club were a particular bonanza for the CIA. They were the Guatamas, a wealthy Indonesian family; Saud Mohammed, a crown prince of the United Arab Emirates; Enrique Zobel, a leading Philippine banker, and Sultan Muda Hassanal Bolkiah of Brunei.

The sultan, an avid polo player, was a prestigious coup for Rewald and the CIA. His tiny country on the northern end of Borneo is one of the richest per capita in the world, thanks to its oil.

The friendship Rewald cultivated between chukkers paid off at a time when the United States was competing with other countries for the sultan's attention — and cash. Encouraged by Rewald, the sultan made his first visit to the United States, and the relationship has flourished since.

But it was Zobel, the Filipino banker, who was probably the greatest source of worthwhile information for Rewald and his CIA masters. One of the world's richest men and chairman of the Bank of the Philippine Islands, Zobel was a close friend of President Ferdinand Marcos and his influential wife, Imelda.

Tapping into the Marcoses had been difficult, because of the first lady's hatred and suspicion of the CIA. But it wasn't long before Zobel became, in Rewald's words, "a tremendous source of information on the thoughts and movements of President Marcos and his government."

Rewald told his attorney that Zobel "was not a fan of Marcos, but he had a close relationship with Marcos." He elaborated: "They would have dinner together, entertain other politicians and world leaders together. And he'd come back and tell me about it, with no idea in the world that I was with the CIA."

The two men went into business together, and Zobel even arranged a private meeting between the CIA spy and Marcos, Rewald said.

The cost to Rewald of his polo-playing assignment was a bad back from a head-on collision with another horseman, and a 100-count indictment from his collision with the securities laws.

The cost to the investors in Rewald's investment firm was at least $500,000, according to the indictment. Whether it was all worth it, only the CIA knows for sure — and the agency isn't talking.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: You've heard of the $64 Question and the $100 Misunderstanding, but how about the $4 billion appointment of Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., to the board of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp.?

Here's what happened: Corcoran, who is giving up his seat, is a fiscal conservative who has been at the forefront of the congressional effort to abolish Synfuels, or at least cut back drastically on its budget of $15 billion. Budget Director David Stockman wanted to hack $9 billion off the gigantic boondoggle, but ran into trouble from Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who is a conservative but appreciates the pork-barrel aroma of Synfuels spending.

So a deal was struck: Corcoran would be named to the board of the agency he wants to scuttle, and the Synfuels budget would be cut by only $5 billion. Synfuels board membership is only a part-time job, but some observers wonder if Corcoran will make a bid for the agency's president-chairman — a sinecure that pays up to $175,000 a year.

Meanwhile, has Synfuels cleaned up its act at all? Not that I've noticed. In fact, I've just come across an unpublished General Accounting Office report that blasts Synfuels for being too relaxed about possible conflicts of interest among its well-paid employees.

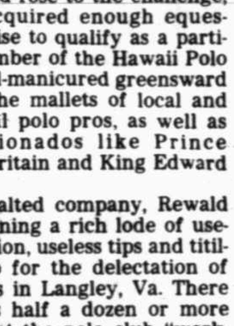

The GAO identified 27 Synfuels employees who should have been required to report their financial interests, but weren't.

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan's clear words convincing

WASHINGTON — In his 1980 concession statement, Vice President Walter Mondale said: "The people have peacefully wielded their staggering power." No one has been as blasted as Mondale by that power. Adlai Stevenson lost twice by a cumulative electoral vote total of 899 to 162. In Mondale's last two times on a national ticket he has lost 1,014 to 62.

George F. Will

Often after elections the sluice gates of criticism open as leaders in the losing candidate's party say, with an air of slighted genius, "If only he had listened to me." Not this time.

Mondale might have made it slightly closer with a more plausible (and a Southern) running mate, and a serious idea, such as radical tax simplification. Instead, the campaign that began with the appearance of him being bullied by women's groups ended with him promising to appoint a Hispanic to his Cabinet. Ye gods.

The traditional edifice of Democratic politics has been razed to the ground, the rubble has been plowed and salt has been sown. There should be no nonsense about the 1984 outcome being caused by tactical miscalculations. The Democratic Party is a refractory mule, but surely this third landslide in four elections will get its attention.

On election eve, Mondale told a crowd that Republicans never use the word "decent." Democrats would do well to quit using it. Mondale frequently said, "I would rather lose an election about decency than win one about self-interest." Such rhetoric, implying that Republicans are not just wrong but indecent, is the extreme moralizing of a party out of the habit of thinking and even arguing, and in the habit of asserting a moral monopoly.

The 1982 recession was bad for Democrats because it allowed them to think that they did not need to think–that they could coast, counting on the hammer blows of economic hardship to reassemble the old coalition. But by now it is bizarre, if common, for otherwise rational people to ask, "Are we on the verge of a 'realignment' in favor of the Republican Party?" Suppose Noah, in the 34th day of the 40 days of rain, had asked his wife, "Do you think we may get some rain?" Ye gods. At the presidential level, realignment is a fact.

Republicans have won four of the last five presidential elections. In the last four they have won 82.4 percent of the electoral votes, approaching Franklin Roosevelt's four-election achievement of 88.3 percent. And the Republicans have done it with three candidates, not just one political giant.

The nation was moderately conservative when it chose Eisenhower over Stevenson twice. Next it barely preferred Kennedy, a moderate Democrat, over Nixon. Johnson, the only post-Truman President with a Rooseveltian, liberal domestic agenda, was an accident of assassination and the perceived radicalism of his Republican opponent, Goldwater. Two years later Republicans gained 47 House and three Senate seats.

In 1968 the combined Nixon and George Wallace vote was 57 percent. In 1972 Nixon got 61 percent against McGovern. In 1976 the Democrat perceived as the most conservative in the nomination contest, Carter, was nominated and narrowly defeated a conservative Republican, Ford. Then came two conservative landslides.

Tuesday's election buried the most ideologically uniform and liberal ticket in American history. The ticket was a quixotic offering to an electorate even more conservative than the electorate has been at any point since 1952.

Many Democrats will say that the Republican run of successes is a fluke compounded of weak Democratic nominees and the unreasonably charming Reagan personality. But in four elections the Democratic Party has tried to sell the country McGovern, Carter twice and Mondale. Four such "aberrations" consecutively are not aberrations. They constitute a single propensity. It is the Democratic Party's propensity to disregard the public's thoughts — not thoughts about Reagan's smile, but about the issues.

Reagan has a right to feel as though he is sitting on a pink cloud over an ocean of joy with a rainbow draped around his shoulders. But Reagan will rightly insist that Democrats are deluding themselves when they say this was a rout produced by his smile rather than by his party's positions.

In the 19th century, an exasperated (and probably jealous) critic said: "Horatio Alger wrote the same novel 135 times and never lost his audience." In Reagan's long career he has demonstrated that in a democracy you build an audience by saying a few clear and convincing things 135,000 times. The lesson of Tuesday — a lesson so stark that it may be missed by persons in hot pursuit of subtleties — is that both Mondale and Reagan spoke clearly, but Reagan convinced.

ART BUCHWALD

Politician really just PAC man!

It was 6 o'clock Wednesday morning. Charlie Butterfingers had won a close congressional election and after a victory celebration which lasted until the early hours, he put his head on the pillow. The phone rang.

"Charlie, I just called to congratulate you on your wonderful victory last night."

"Who is this?" Charlie asked sleepily.

Art Buchwald

"Sam Dingbat, the head of the Christmas Bulb Political Action Committee. Remember, I gave you five grand at the shopping mall rally two weeks ago? Well, when are we going to get some action from you on the embargoing of foreign Christmas lights?"

"I was only elected at midnight. What do you expect me to do?"

"Look, if it was me, I wouldn't press you. But the boys in the PAC don't like to give money away without seeing some results. If you could just give me the wording of the bill you're going to propose, I'm sure it will satisfy them for a couple of weeks."

"I'll get back to you," Charlie said. No sooner did he hang up when the phone rang again. "Congressman Butterfingers? This is Lester Amos. I'd like to read you a speech we wrote for you to deliver on the House floor asking for a ten-year waiver on cleaning up sludge in Lake Wakitan."

"Who is we?"

"The Concerned Citizens for a Perfect Environment. We raised $25,000 for your campaign by holding a 'Butterfingers for Congress' square dance at the Grim Reaper Chemical Corporation canteen."

"Could we discuss your speech at some later time?" Butterfingers asked.

"When you needed the money you were willing to talk to us on the spot."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Amos. My victory went to my head. Send the speech over by messenger."

Butterfingers couldn't sleep, so he went to the kitchen for a glass of milk. He found a slip in the milk box. Written on it was, "Didn't want to wake you, but on behalf of the Milk and Cheese Deliverers Union of America, we hope your first order of business will be price supports for home delivery of milk. Our members did a lot of doorbell ringing for you, and you owe us a big one."

The front doorbell rang and Butterfingers answered it. A man handed him a telegram. Charlie signed for it and ripped the envelope open. "We knew you'd do it. The electorate has spoken and the best man won. Call our lobbyist Gladys Gleep in Washington, and she'll give you further instructions on how we want you to handle pending anti-cremation legislation. Have a nice day. Funeral Casket Makers of America."

Before Butterfingers could close the door, his neighbor Tommy Gordon barged in. "Wow, what a night. I thought I'd really be in trouble."

"Why would you be in trouble?"

"I went out on a limb persuading my minister to endorse you from the pulpit because I said you were in the bag when it came to tax credits for private schools. If you had lost I wouldn't have been able to go to church on Sunday morning."

"I never told you I would vote for tax credits."

"Your campaign manager did, and that was good enough for me."

After Tommy left, Butterfingers' wife came into the living room. "Well, how does the people's choice feel this morning?"

"I guess I should feel better than I do."

"You're just suffering from the post-election blues. You'll get over it. Don't forget, now that you've won the election you can be your own man."

Ad seeks donations to cover De Lorean's legal expenses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A full-page newspaper ad claims that John Z. De Lorean, the former automaker who successfully fought drug trafficking charges and is now tied up in a bankruptcy case, was slandered by the government and seeks donations of $5 to $100 to cover his legal expenses.

"It's a Horror Story!" says the headline on the advertisement in Wednesday's editions of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, asking readers to chip in through a post office box to the John De Lorean Defense Fund Inc.

The ad claims De Lorean has been "repeatedly libeled and slandered in the Government's campaign...to harass and ruin him," and "has been unable to work or to provide income for his family for the past two years."

De Lorean, 59, was acquitted Aug. 16 after a five-month cocaine trafficking trial, but still faces a grand jury investigation into his handling of De Lorean Motor Co. finances.

He reportedly owes defense attorneys Howard Weitzman and Donald Re about $1 million. In a bankruptcy case in Detroit, creditors claimed more than $17 million was diverted from the Northern Ireland-based car company.

"His once considerable resources have been confiscated and withheld from him pending the outcome of all litigation," the ad says.

De Lorean established the defense fund, wrote most of the ad himself and paid $5,000 for it, said Suzi Cozad of Cozad-Benskin & Associates in Encino, a public relations and advertising firm representing the former General Motors Corp. executive.

"We were given the non-profit rate" in the Herald Examiner, Ms. Cozad said. "Depending on how much money we raise, we hope to put out these ads nationally."

De Lorean was in Houston on Wednesday and would not return until today, she said. She would not say where he could be reached.

Karen Homer, Weitzman's secretary, refused to comment on the advertisement or on the attorney's bill.

"We don't know anything about it and we don't want to know anything about it," she said. "Howard's not even talking to anybody about it."

Ms. Cozad said she met with De Lorean several times at Weitzman's office, but that she had never met Weitzman. Another attorney, Sandra Stanley, handled the incorporation of the defense fund, she said. There was no answer Wednesday evening at Ms. Stanley's office in Van Nuys.

Secretary of State March Fong Eu approved the non-profit status of the organization in the past month, Ms. Cozad said.

The ad claims the U.S. government was out to destroy De Lorean:

"Without one single judgment against him, John De Lorean has turned into a modern day Job. His family is gone, his friends are gone, his assets are gone, his pride is gone; nothing remains but his undying faith."

De Lorean's wife, Cristina Ferrare, a model turned television talk show host, separated from De Lorean a month after he was acquitted and took their two children to live with her in Beverly Hills.

Ms. Ferrare, 34, and De Lorean have filed separately for divorce.

The ad says De Lorean's life "has been virtually destroyed by an outrageous pattern of police abuse, prosecutorial misconduct and non-stop government harassment, much of which was revealed to an astonished public during the five-month long criminal case in which he was falsely accused of taking part in a government- contrived and -created cocaine scheme."

'New Right' wants Helms to chair Foreign Relations Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the "New Right," rejoicing in the defeat of long-time Republican moderate Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois, are eager for conservative Sen. Jesse Helms to step into Percy's shoes as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The decision is up to Helms, who said repeatedly during his successful campaign for re-election in North Carolina that he would stay on as chairman of the Agriculture Committee instead. Helms was not available for comment Wednesday and an associate said he must be taken at his word.

Percy was one of two Republican senators defeated in Tuesday's election, as Democrats made a net gain of two seats. The GOP held onto control of the Senate by the diminished margin of 53-47.

In the House, Republicans netted 14 seats, whittling the Democratic majority to 253-182.

Helms is next to Percy in seniority among Republicans on the Foreign Relations panel, putting him in line for the chairmanship.

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, a middle-of-the-road lawmaker with support among both moderates and conservatives, is second to Helms, but Lugar is a leading candidate to succeed retiring Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee as majority leader.

John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said Helms "is going to have a tough decision to make" if Lugar is elected leader, leaving liberal GOP Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland in line for the chairmanship.

Other conservatives agreed and said they hoped Helms would reconsider.

"It is clear that I, and I think my colleagues, very much hope he will pursue this path, but his accountability is not to us, it is to the people of North Carolina, and I am sure he will decide on his own," said Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus.

"I would love to see him do it, but I don't want to put any pressure on him," said Paul Weyrich, chairman of the Committee for Survival of a Free Congress.

"I know of no conservatives who have spoken to him about it," Weyrich said. "A number have called me about it."

Dolan said: "We are doing nothing because we don't want it to seem like a conservative plot. It should come from within North Carolina and within the Reagan administration, and I think it will."

In response to questions in the closing days of his hard-fought campaign against Democratic Gov. James B. Hunt, Helms said over and over that he would stick to his agriculture chairmanship, important to North Carolina, a producer of tobacco, poultry and hogs.

"You have got to take him at his word on that," said Carter Wrenn, executive director of the National Congressional Club in Raleigh, N.C., a political action committee that is the basis of the Helms political organization. "He hasn't said anything at all to indicate otherwise."

Lugar, at a post-election news conference in his capacity as Republican Senate campaign chairman, discounted speculation that he would accept the Foreign Relations post.

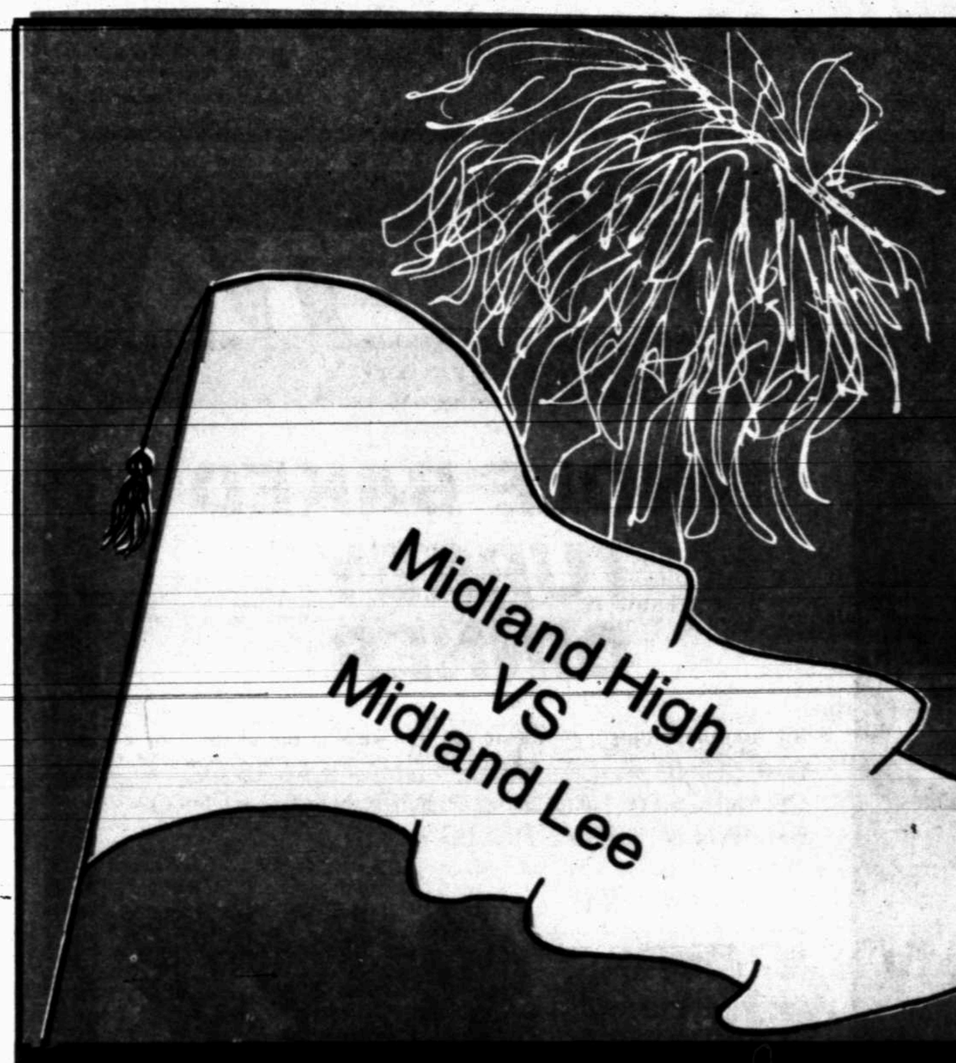

"It's Senator Helms' call," said Mark Helmke, Lugar's press secretary. "Lugar wants to be leader."

Lugar said Dolan's National Conservative Political Action Committee contributed to the defeat of Percy by encouraging voters to back a third party candidate, helping throw the election to Democratic Rep. Paul Simon.

Dolan said, "The defeat of Charles Percy in the long term for the Republican Party will be a great victory, making it a majority party, because it gets the dinosaurs out of the way. Percy and Mathias are dinosaurs."

Conservative fund raiser Richard Viguerie said he was "very excited and enthusiastic" about Percy's defeat and believed Helms should take the Foreign Relations post "for the sake of this country and the free world."

Helms, chairman of the Foreign Relations subcommittee on the Western Hemisphere, shares President Reagan's advocacy of a militant stance against communism in Central America, but blocked recommendations of a presidential commission calling for massive economic aid to the region.

Minister: 'I was called to be pastor,' not to go before judges

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A defrocked Lutheran minister who champions jobless steel workers, saying he was "called to be a pastor and not appear before judges," vows to stay in his church despite a court order banning him from conducting services.

Allegheny County Common Pleas Court Judge Emil Narick on Wednesday found the minister, D. Douglas Roth, guilty of contempt for defying an injunction banning him from conducting services at Trinity Lutheran Church in Clairton.

Narick ordered Roth to appear in court Friday or, "I'll have the sheriff do what it takes. This court is not powerless."

Roth was defrocked and dismissed by the Western Pennsylvania-West Virginia Synod of the Lutheran Church of America in late October after 71 of Trinity Lutheran's 190 members protested his involvement with a militant group that demands jobs for laid-off steel workers.

Narick told attorney Thomas A. Crawford that Roth could "purge himself" Friday by promising to obey the injunction, issued at the request of Lutheran authorities. Roth did not attend the two-hour hearing.

"I'm going to stay here at the church," Roth, 33, said Wednesday by telephone from the church, where he is holding a week-long vigil.

"I'm called to be a pastor and not appear before judges. The judge has no jurisdiction over this matter," he said. "I'm willing to go to jail for the unemployed. If they want to jail pastors who fight for the unemployed, then that's up to them."

Roth faces fines or a county jail sentence if he fails to appear or refuses to obey Narick's order.

The Denominational Ministry Strategy, composed mostly of Lutheran and Episcopal ministers and unemployed steel workers, has denounced U.S. Steel Corp. and Mellon National Corp., the nation's 12th-largest bank holding company, for allegedly failing to invest money to create new jobs in the industrialized Monongahela River Valley.

Black family trapped in apartment by neighbors on all-white block

CHICAGO (AP) — A black man who unknowingly moved onto an all-white block says his family was trapped in their apartment without a telephone for two nights by an angry crowd that shouted racial slurs and hurled bricks and rocks through the windows.

Spencer Goffer, 32, who moved with his wife and 8-year-old son into the apartment Monday, says he found out only later he had moved into an all-white, four-square-block area known as "the island."

"I saw all these blacks going into the stores. I walk into the drug store and there was a black guy working there. So I figured it was OK," Goffer said Wednesday.

Goffer, an auto mechanic, and his wife, Patricia, a word processor at Northwestern University's law school, spent most of Monday fixing up the West Side apartment, a modest 5-room, $280-a-month flat only a few blocks from his brother's home.

About 12:30 a.m. Tuesday, they awoke to "screaming and hollering," Goffer said. "We just figured it was a crowd coming out" of one of the bars across the street.

But then "someone threw a tire iron through the window, and it was nigger this and nigger that, and 'if you come out I'm going to blow your head off,' " Goffer said.

The angry voices died down after about an hour.

Tuesday morning, Goffer talked to his landlord, who said he'd tell police about the trouble. Goffer bought some glass to repair the broken window.

In the afternoon, a man came to his door.

"'There is no niggers ever lived on the island,' " Goffer said the man told him. " 'And there's not going to be any living here. If you think last night was something, wait 'til tonight.' "

At 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, it started again, Goffer said. Men shouted, "Get out of the neighborhood." A brick came through the glass Goffer had just replaced. Another brick. A rock. Three more bricks. One of the rocks hit his son in the head. A brick hit Goffer in the shoulder.

There was no way for the family to get help; they didn't have a telephone yet. "I told my wife, 'we are totally surrounded — cut off,' " Goffer said.

The barrage of bricks lasted for two hours.

"It was like a bunch of wild animals," Goffer said.

"My kid was screaming; my wife was crying," he said. "I barricaded us inside the center room," shoving furniture against the doors and mattresses against the windows.

At 8:45 a.m., Goffer peeked out one of the broken windows. The family fled the apartment, leaving everything, ran down an alley and went to Goffer's brother's nearby home.

"We were lucky to get out with our lives," said Goffer. He and his son suffered bruises, but did not seek medical treatment.

Goffer filed a police report, and a 24-hour squad car was put in the area at mid-day Wednesday, said Austin District Watch Commander William Corcoran, a police officer. But he noted that the protection was moot because the Goffers had left and are not planning to move back.

Cabbie in mental hospital

BOSTON (AP) — A cab driver was sent to a state mental hospital for observation after being arraigned on charges he fired gunshots at a Republican campaign worker and then shouted "Reagan's next!"

Wilfred Peters, 38, was arraigned Wednesday on charges of assault by means of a dangerous weapon and possession of a forged driver's license. He was ordered taken to Bridgewater State Hospital for 20 days of observation.

Peters was arrested by the FBI and the Secret Service on Tuesday when he arrived for work. The shots were fired Monday night after a fracas between supporters of President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale, police said.

Killers face life in prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men face life in prison when they are sentenced Nov. 27 on charges they murdered a 98-year-old Orthodox Jew, who was asphyxiated in 1974 when his yarmulke was shoved down his throat during a robbery.

Andrew Harris and James Jackson, both 33, were convicted Wednesday, mainly on the testimony of Harris' former girlfriend, Martha McCree, told authorities last year he confessed to her on Dec. 20, 1974, one day after Nathan Friedler's death.

Police hunt alleged killer

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — An alleged terrorist at large in the 1981 killing of a New Jersey state trooper became a "No. 1 priority" when a gun found in his Ohio home was identified as the murder weapon, police said.

The 9mm Browning semi-automatic pistol was seized from a trunk in Thomas W. Manning's bedroom, said state police Col. Clinton Pagano on Wednesday. A nationwide manhunt is on for Manning and his wife, Carol Ann, who reportedly fled before the raid.

Gang member faces death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An alleged gang member faces the death penalty if he is convicted on charges of being one of two men who broke into the wrong home and mistakenly killed the family of former football star Kermit Alexander.

Horace Edwin Burns, 20, was charged with four counts of murder by the District Attorney's office on Tuesday under special circumstances that could bring the death penalty.

Burns and Tiequon Cox, 18, who was arrested earlier, were being held without bail in the Aug. 31 slayings, described by police Chief Daryl Gates as "tragic" and "stupid."

Asbestos suit settled

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A group of shipyard workers who claimed their illnesses were caused by asbestos have reached a settlement in their $3 million damage suit against two asbestos makers, their attorney says.

Four workers from the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard and the estate of a fifth had sued Raymark Industries Inc. and H.K. Porter Co. Inc. A judge ordered that terms of the settlement not be disclosed, but the plaintiffs were "very satisfied," attorney William Mulvey said Tuesday.

A total of 290 other cases, all involving asbestos-related illnesses linked to the shipyard or Bath Iron Works of Maine, are pending in federal court here.

Drew leads Jazz rally past Spurs

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah spotted San Antonio a 17-point first-quarter lead, then roared back behind John Drew's 38 points to down the Spurs 136-124 in National Basketball Association action Wednesday night.

Darrell Griffith and Rickey Green had 24 points apiece for Utah and 7-foot-4 center Mark Eaton added 12 points, blocked 10 shots and pulled down 11 rebounds. San Antonio was led by George Gervin's 35 points. Artis Gilmore added 26 and Mike Mitchell 18 for the losers.

NBA

The victory evened Utah's record at 3-3 in the Midwest Division. The Spurs are now 5-2 in the same division.

Gervin scored 14 points in the first period and Gilmore and Mitchell combined for another 20 as the Spurs jumped to a 40-23 advantage. Drew scored 15 points in the second quarter as the Jazz came back to tie the score 63-63 at intermission.

Utah took advantage of a San Antonio cold spell to build a 98-88 lead after three periods.

Celtics 135, Clippers 108

BOSTON — Larry Bird scored 14 of his game-high 31 points in a decisive third period and the unbeaten Boston Celtics rolled to their fourth victory with a 135-108 decision over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Danny Ainge had 24 points — including 15 in the first period — Robert Parish had 21, Dennis Johnson 18, and Kevin McHale 15 for Boston's defending NBA champions.

Boston opened a 34-26 first-period lead and widened the advantage to 54-43 late in the first half.

The Clippers then rolled off 11 points in a row for a 54-54 tie before Parish hit from the outside, and Johnson added a free throw for a 57-54 Boston lead at intermission.

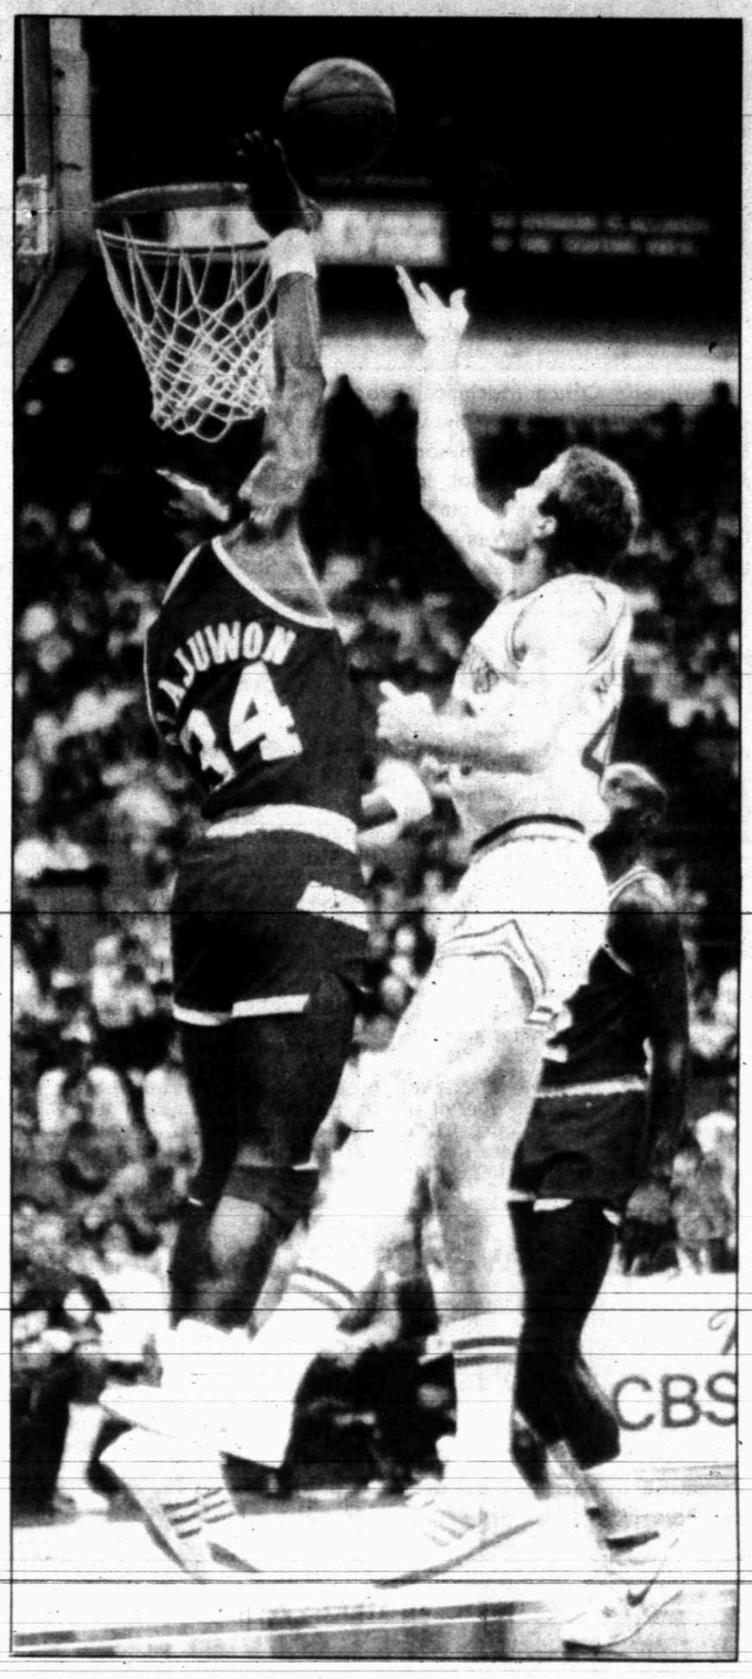

The Celtics took charge at the outset of the second half with Bird scoring two quick baskets and Parish another.

Parish helped Bird key a 33-point quarter with 10 points, pushing Boston to a 90-79 lead.

The Celtics widened the margin to 121-99 before Coach K.C. Jones cleared his bench with 3½ minutes remaining.

The Clippers, 3-3, were led by Marcus Johnson with 25 points. James Donaldson had 21, Derek Smith 19 and Junior Bridgeman 17 for Los Angeles.

Like his college days, Akeem Olajuwon can still swat a shot.

He's big in NBA too

Akeem lifts Rockets to 5-0

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Houston Rockets are the biggest surprise story in the National Basketball Association's young season, and observers don't have to look hard to see why.

With the addition of a seven-foot rookie from Africa, the Rockets have gotten off to the best start in the NBA. That rookie is Akeem Olajuwon, the former University of Houston All-American who seems to become a better basketball player every time he steps onto a court.

"I have to eliminate my faults," said Olajuwon recently, although he hasn't evidenced too many failings yet.

The Rockets are currently 5-0 after Tuesday night's 108-94 home win over the Kansas City Kings, the second Houston victory over the Kings this year. The Rockets have also knocked the Dallas Mavericks down twice, so already are off to a sound start against Midwest Division enemies.

OLAJUWON HAS been a major role in the success of a team that had a won-lost record of 43-121 the past two seasons. In the season opener, he fouled ten seconds into the game and played only five minutes in the first half at Dallas. But in the second half he was unstoppable and scored 22 of his game high 24 points.

Against the Kings and former University of Texas foe LaSalle Thompson he was more devastating. He shot 10-11 and scored 25 points while holding Thompson to eight points and eight rebounds. He also rejected six shots.

Not only that, but Houston's fast getaway is the best in club history, surpassing the Moses Malone-led juggernaut of a few years ago. Those Rockets got so far as a runner-up finish in the 1981 NBA finals to Boston. But after that Malone was traded to Philadelphia.

That trade appeared to benefit all. In Malone's first season in Philadelphia the Sixers won the NBA title while the Rockets won only 14 games.

While the trade gave Houston the worst team, it also set up the drafting of Ralph Sampson two years ago. And last year while Sampson struggled but was still named Rookie-of-the-Year, the Rockets wound up with another number one pick, courtesy of a second-consecutive won coin toss for the first pick.

Enter Olajuwon.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

This time the "in-your-face" isn't a dunk shot as a defender's hand slaps Akeem Olajuwon while he watches his shot fall in.

AFTER HIS junior year at the University of Houston, Olajuwon suddenly found critics at every turn. And the college game had gotten almost easy for a young man who led his team into the elite Final Four in each of his three seasons.

So Olajuwon went pro. And after the draft, he only had to move his sizable feet a short distance from Hofheinz Pavilion to the Summit.

It has been a pleasing situation for Olajuwon. "Sometimes it seems like magic. It seems perfect, too perfect.

"I like competition and I think the NBA is the only place that I can find it now. I was ready for a new challenge and I think I am prepared. I can play against anybody."

THE ROCKETS have found that they didn't waste a draft pick.

"We have to leave him out there to play for us. It's important to build his confidence, and it's important to the guy who paid $19 to see him play," said Rockets coach Bill Fitch. Fitch's compassion for the paying fan is admirable, but he isn't suffering by playing Akeem.

Through the Rockets' five games, Olajuwon is shooting 56.2 percent from the floor and averaging 19.4 points a game. He's also rebounding to the tune of 10.4 boards per game. Both figures are better than last year's top rookie Sampson is posting. Sampson is scoring 17.0 points a night with a 9.4 rebound average.

Olajuwon was noted as a shot-blocking terror in college, and he's also playing NBA-level in that department thus far with an average of 3.2 per outing.

And so Fitch won't feel he's short-changing the NBA's paying customers. His big Nigerian is playing 32 minutes a game.

And strangely, Sampson has been somewhat overlooked, if a man standing 7-4 can be that. It is Olajuwon's entry that has Houston buzzing and the Rockets unbeaten.

"I'm not sure what this will mean to me," said Sampson. "But I think it will give me the opportunity to do a lot more. The other teams won't be able to stop both of us from going under the boards."

Sampson has helped the budding star make the transition. "He played my position last year so he gives me encouragement and helps me on the plays," Olajuwon said. "We like to rebound with each other and when we do that it gives me confidence."

After the season opener with Dallas, he was asked what he thought he would remember years from now when the excitement of the fast lane could be viewed in perspective. "It wasn't eventful. I can play better."

That should scare the NBA.

He also realizes that things are very different as a pro.

"So far, learning the plays has been very difficult. They are very important. There is not just one or two, but a lot of them. If I can just learn my way around the floor, I can play the way I am supposed to."

OLAJUWON SPEAKS in the eerie English lilt as spoken in his hometown of Lagos, Nigeria, a huge, impoverished place. But his zooming career has taken him far from that life. It's an adjustment he seems to be making with ease and enthusiasm.

"It's just the beginning," he said. "I'm just looking forward to the season."

Indeed, Olajuwon's future appears quite rosy. He signed a contract that will give him over six million dollars in the next six years. And he is playing the game he has come to love and soon could dominate in the city of his choice.

"With two seven-footers in there," Sampson said a few weeks ago, "It should be pretty tight across the boards."

The wins should follow.

Reliever Aase selected 14 times in first two rounds

Sutter, Sutcliffe find passing interest in their availablity

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Aase, a relief pitcher for the California Angels, was selected six times in the first round and eight times in the first two as major league baseball began its free-agent re-entry draft today.

Aase, who was 4-1 with eight saves and a 1.62 earned run average, outstripped his more prominent counterparts, most notably Bruce Sutter of the St. Louis Cardinals, who was chosen by Texas and Toronto in the opening round and by Atlanta and the New York Yankees in the second.

Rick Sutcliffe, the Chicago Cubs' Cy Young Award-winning pitcher, was named three times in the first round — by Atlanta, Kansas City and National League champion San Diego.

AASE WAS selected in the opening round by Montreal, Los Angeles, Oakland, St. Louis, Baltimore and Boston. In the second round, the Rangers and Chicago White Sox added his name to their lists.

The New York Mets, the Cubs and the world champion Detroit Tigers passed in the first two rounds and were out of the draft.

The Padres, who lost in five games to the Tigers in the World Series when their starting pitching collapsed, went for two of the starters who guided the Cubs to the NL East title — Sutcliffe, who was 16-1 for Chicago and 20-6 overall last year, and, in the third round, Steve Trout, 13-7 in 1984.

The San Francisco Giants, baseball's worst club last year, opened the draft by selecting Oscar Gamble, a first baseman-designated hitter who went through this procedure a year ago, was totally ignored at that time by all 26 clubs and then was re-signed by the Yankees. It was Gamble's third go-round in the free agent system. His first time, in 1977, he eventually signed a seven-figure contract with San Diego.

Lee Lacy, who batted .321 in 137 games for Pittsburgh in 1984, was selected by Milwaukee with the second pick.

NEW YORK (AP) — Selections in Thursday's major league baseball reentry draft (teams passing in two consecutive rounds are ineligible for picks in subsequent rounds):

First Round

San Francisco, Oscar Gamble. Milwaukee, Lee Lacy. Cincinnati, passed. Texas, Bruce Sutter. Pittsburgh, John Stearns. Chicago White Sox, passed. Montreal, Don Aase. Seattle, Ed Whitson. Los Angeles, Don Aase. Cleveland, Tim Stoddard. Houston, Sixto Lezcano. Oakland, Don Aase. Atlanta, Rick Sutcliffe. Minnesota, Andre Thornton. Philadelphia, Steve Trout. California, Al Bumbry. St. Louis, Don Aase. Kansas City, Rick Sutcliffe. New York Mets, passed. Baltimore, Don Aase. San Diego, Rick Sutcliffe. Boston, Don Aase. Chicago Cubs, passed. New York Yankees, Ed Whitson. Toronto, Bruce Sutter. Detroit, passed.

Second Round

San Francisco, John Grubb. Milwaukee, Andre Thornton. Cincinnati, Steve Trout. Texas, Don Aase. Pittsburgh, Ed Whitson. Chicago White Sox, Don Aase. Montreal, Bill Almon. Seattle, Tim Stoddard. Los Angeles, Bobby Castill. Cleveland, Steve Trout. Houston, passed. Oakland, Al Bumbry. Atlanta, Bruce Sutter. Minnesota, passed. Philadelphia, Ed Whitson. California, John Grubb. St. Louis, Lee Lacy. Kansas City, Andre Thornton. New York Mets, passed. Baltimore, Dennis Eckersley. San Diego, passed. Boston, Lee Lacy. Chicago Cubs, passed. New York Yankees, Bruce Sutter. Toronto, Steve Trout, Detroit passed.

CINCINNATI PASSED the first time but chose Trout in the second round, and the Rangers, selecting fourth in the opening round, chose Sutter.

Fifty-six free agents, the most since the 89 in 1977, were available to the teams, drafting in reverse order of their 1984 won-loss percentage, with the National and American leagues alternating selections.

There was no limit to the number of players a team was permitted to draft, nor was their a limit to the number of times a player could be drafted. Any player chosen by fewer than four teams is free to negotiate and sign with anyone.

In answer to your question...

Questions readers ask and carefully considered responses...

Q—As a University of Houston alumnus I take violent exception to your implication that the Cougars, by winning in the SWC, are giving the conference a bad name. I dispute the assertion that because Houston lost to Louisville and Rugters razed Louisville that UH couldn't even get into the Yankee Conference. I demand an imediate retration.

A—In view of the fact that Houston held TCU to a 21-14 victory last week, a reappraisal of the Cougars is indeed in order. Not only are the Cougars better than I gave them credit for, but I definitely think they can play in the Yankee Conference...maybe in basketball as well as football.

Q—Last week in commenting about the Texas Sports Writers Association's writing contests, you contended that the big city newspapers had a big advantage because of more glamorous subject matter at their disposal. You cited A&M, Rice, the Houston Rockets, Texas Rangers, UTEP, etc. as examples of the glamor of sports in the big city. It appears to me that you haven't been counting your blessings...what about the Midland Cubs?

A—As Bob Uecker would say, "Bingo!". You are right. The Cubs left Midland, which shows how quickly we forget.

Q—Last week, one of the front pages of the sports section was all NBA. Don't you guys realize this is football season?

A—Some members of the sports staff feel the "only" season is the NBA season. I don't necessarily agree, but do feel that the Dallas Mavericks are currently filling a necessary void in Lone Star athletics created when the Texas Rangers stopped playing in September.

Q—Photographer Ron Jaap seems to be overly-sensitive about how you pick games involving West Virginia. Since you took Virginia and points over the Mountaineers, has he stopped talking to you?

A—Not only has he stopped talking to me, but my hopes of his coming through with the Emory & Henry t-shirt he promised me have evaporated....that's what really hurts.

Q—We have been reading of your weekend travels to college and pro football games and would like to send you a paid roundtrip fare on Southwest Airlines to any weekend destination you wish as long as you use the name of the airline in your subsequent retelling of the trials and tribulations encountered.

A—Strange. It was sent by Muse Air.

Q—We are concerned with your safety in traveling to weekend football games in Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth or whereever and hereby enclosed is a free roundtrip on Muse to the games of your choice. Just give credit where credit is due.

A—Just another of example of how hard it is to get good secretarial help these days. This one was signed by Southwest.

Q—I notice the other night you coached the White team to a victory in the Midland College intrasquad Sneak Preview basketball game. That makes two game out of three...how do you explain the game you lost?

A—That was the year I got stuck with a 5-4 guard...a coach can do just so much.

Q—A Reporter-Telegram writer said in a story recently former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach went to West Point. Is that true? I thought he grew up to be a sailor and attended Coast Guard Academy?

A—That was Lana Cunningham's story. Roger made a reference to attending a "miltary academy", and she assumed it was West Point. Actually, Roger went to New Mexico Military Academy and then to Navy. Lana admits the error, but says if he didn't go to West Point he should have, "He'd have gone great in the same backfield with Blanchard and Davis...they'd have been unbeatable."

Sorry, Lana, Army's Blanchard-Davis teams were unbeatable even without Roger.

Q—Last Saturday, a picture of a stadium was run in the SportScan with the admonition to "name the stadium", but no answer was ever given. Is this a contest?

A—This is an unusual contest in that anyone correctly identifying a stadium is required to transport the sports editor to that particular stadium. Last week there was a winner, but the transportation offered was in one of his trucks, which carries hazardous waste materials, so he was told he did not correctly identify the stadium. It was not true, but don't tell him.

The team, with Ambrose's comments:

OFFENSE

Center, Gerald Ford: "Slow of foot and hopelessly clumsy, his great asset is determination coupled with dedication, something he displayed during his four years with the Michigan Wolverines."

Guards, Ulysses S. Grant and Teddy Roosevelt: "Both are short, squat with bulldog tenacity. Roosevelt, at San Juan Hill; Grant, in the Wilderness, showed a marked ability to charge the enemy and knock him backwards, thereby opening holes."

Tackles, Lyndon Johnson and Grover Cleveland: "Size, brute strength and stubborness — both have this in abundance. Every team needs at least one tackle who has that sixth sense about when the ref isn't looking, so he can get away with holding. LBJ is our man."

Tight end, Abraham Lincoln: "He had everything. He was big, raw-boned, fast, loved physical contact. A solid, all-around athlete specializing in wrestling, complete with eye-gouging. Well over 6 feet, he makes an excellent target."

Split end, John F. Kennedy: "Small, slow and easily injured, he's still one of the most competitive of all presidents, with a drive that helped make him a respectable athlete. He learned his excellent moves playing touch football."

Tailback: Ronald Reagan: "Who else but Ronnie Reagan?"

Halfback, Dwight Eisenhower: "Fanatic about sports, he was a high-school football and baseball star. His playing career at West Point was cut short by a knee injury, but he continued to coach football for nearly 20 years."

Quarterback, George Washington: "First of all, you can't ignore the mighty arm, capable of throwing a pass across the Rappahannock. Also, he's the only man who has the absolute, unqualified respect of all the others. They'd follow him anywhere. Never one to panic, he'd be a master of the two-minute drill."

Fullback, John Adams: "He was short enough to run under the defense. Although roly-poly in his movevments, and not much of an athlete, his great asset is undying loyalty to Washington. He belongs in the backfield primarily for pass protection."

Substitute, Richard M. Nixon: "The most famous bench rider of all (four years at Whittier College), he'd be willing to play anywhere, despite weight disadvantage, not to mention speed, coordination and self-confidence."

DEFENSE

Ends, Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren: "A big Scot and a big Dutchman, a lovely combination to have rushing the passer."

Tackles, William Howard Taft and William McKinley: "At 300 pounds, Taft is a natural to hold down the middle of the line."

Linebackers, Harry Truman, Jimmy Carter, Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Jefferson: "I see Wilson and Jefferson as outside linebackers in a 4-4-3 setup because of their height. Truman has the pugnacious quality necessary for an inside linebacker as well as another vital asset, his association with the policy of containment. I had to put Jimmy Carter somewhere, and here is where he'll do the least harm."

Cornerbacks, Herbert Hoover and Calvin Coolidge: "Hoover was always on the defensive, so at least he's used to it. Coolidge liked to fish."

Safety, Warren G. Harding: "A good safety knows how to steal a pass every now and then. Harding is the best we ever had at stealing."

COACH, Franklin D. Roosevelt: "His legs precluded active participation, but his abilities to rally dispirited men, organize and carry through a game plan, and deal successfully with strategic problems, make him ideal for this position. He'd make 'em forget the Bear."

Cash may not be enough for Sutter

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

For Sale: One relief pitcher.

Credentials: A record-tying 45 saves and a minuscule 1.54 earned run average last season.

Price: More than just money.

Oh, Bruce Sutter won't come cheaply in today's free agent draft. Of that, you can be sure. But teams simply waving fistfuls of cold cash under his nose might just get the cold shoulder in response.

That's because Sutter doesn't need the free agent draft to get wealthy. Salary arbitration took care of that a long time ago.

There was a time when the master of the split-finger fastball was just one of baseball's working stiffs, toiling for a merely mortal salary with the Chicago Cubs. In 1979, though, he had the great good sense to win the Cy Young Award at a time when his three-year contract permitted him the right to re-negotiate terms for its final season or go to salary arbitration.

Arbitration is baseball's version of Russian roulette. The rules are simple. The two sides present their figures and their arguments to the arbitrator. He picks one or the other. There is no compromise, no in-between.

The Cubs offered $350,000, a sizeable and, they felt, a generous increase over Sutter's previous salary. The pitcher asked for double that — $700,000.

The gun was loaded.

After swallowing hard, the Cubs made their argument and Sutter's side made theirs. The arbitator listened and decided in the pitcher's behalf.

Bang!

Just like that, Sutter was thrust into baseball's high-rent district, hardly a familiar neighborhood for the pitcher who grew up in Lancaster, Pa., surrounded by the simple way of life in Amish country.

The shellshocked Cubs lived with the arbitrated terms for one year and then shipped Sutter to St. Louis where Whitey Herzog had a blank check to spend Gussie Busch's brewery money in constructing a winner for the Cardinals.

Herzog gave Sutter a four-year $3.5 million contract which, with bonuses, has made the reliever a seven-figure man. So today's free agent fortunes hold no particular allure for his wallet.

But winning. Now that's another thing. Winning can be addictive. Sutter caught its scent in 1982 when the Cards won the world championship. And now, he wants to win again.

"I definitely want to play on a contending team," he said. "I want to play in another World Series. I don't think I can help a team that's not a contender. I'm not a gate attraction. I'm only as good as the rest of the team. If we're not ahead in the seventh, eighth or ninth inning, I'm of no use to a team."

St. Louis, of course, qualifies as a contender and Sutter does not rule out staying with the Cardinals. There was one exchange of offers between the pitcher and the team at the end of the season but nothing since then.

"There were considerable differences between where we were and where the Cardinals were," said Jim Bronner, one of Sutter's agents. "There was a lot of difference in structure and money. The Cardinals decided to wait (until after the draft). If they come back with a proposal, we'll listen. Once the draft takes place, the Cardinals are no better, no worse than any other team. We'll listen to everybody."

Provided, of course, they are contenders. Also-rans need not apply.

In the meantime, Sutter can use the $10,000 he picked up from Seagram for winning its baseball player of the year award, based on a statistical computation.

"This will come in handy if I don't get drafted," he joked.

That will not be a problem. He will be drafted and by teams with the potential to win.

Some '88 Olympic events must go off in morning

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Organizers for the 1988 Summer Olympic Games said Thursday that programming some final events for morning hours "is inevitable" for technical, health and other reasons.

There have been reports that Seoul Olympic organizers were proposing to stage some popular final competitions in morning hours to accommodate television's prime viewing time in the United States because of the time difference.

Published reports have said, however, that some international sports organizations were opposed to the idea on the ground that competitions in morning hours are hazardous to the athletes' health.

These reports also said if all finals are scheduled for afternoon or evening hours, the organizers would not be able to raise as much revenue as they expect from U.S. television networks.

In a statement, the organizers said it is "hardly possible" to schedule all the finals of 232 events "for a fixed time every day in the latter part of the games" because of limited time.

It also said "in Korea's autumn the morning weather is brisk and refreshing" while humidity and temperatures rise in the afternoon.

Rangers edge Capitals, 4-3

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pierre Larouche extended his point-scoring streak to nine games with two goals Wednesday night, leading the New York Rangers to a 4-3 National Hockey League decision over the Washington Capitals.

Larouche connected in the first and third periods on perfect setups by Jan Erixon. The two goals gave Larouche six goals and 10 assists in those nine games.

NHL

New York took a 1-0 lead when Larouche, Erixon and Reijo Ruotsalainen combined on a pretty, three-way pass play at 9:13 of the opening period. Larouche finished off the play with a short shot past goalie Al Jensen.

Ruotsalainen made it 2-0 on a power play 2:19 later when his 45-foot slap shot slipped past Jensen, who had opened the game in place of scheduled starter Pat Riggin. Riggin was hit by a puck during pregame practice.

Don Maloney gave the Rangers a 3-0 lead at 15:36 with a 10-foot wrist shot from the slot after Dave Gagner passed to Maloney from behind the Washington net.

Bobby Gould beat Rangers goalie Glen Hanlon when he knocked a rebound out of midair for the Capitals' first goal at 17:28. After a scoreless second period, Larouche made it 4-1 on a breakway 5½ minutes into the final period.

Gary Sampson got Washington's second goal midway through the third period and Mike Gartner scored on his own rebound with 14 seconds left to complete the scoring as the Capitals saw a three-game winning streak end.

Winnipeg 3, Hartford 0

HARTFORD, Conn. — Winnipeg goalie Marc Behrend posted his first shutout as the Jets defeated the Hartford Whalers 3-0.

Behrend, a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, stopped 29 shots, including 11 during four Hartford powerplays, as the Jets evened their record at 5-5-2.

Laurie Boschman, Bengt Lundholm and Dale Hawerchuk scored for Winnipeg to hand Hartford its third setback in its last four games. The Whalers fell to 6-6-2.

Boschman's first goal came at 7:57 of the first period, converting a 2-on-1 break with linemate Scott Arniel. Lundholm made it 2-0 at 2:56 of the second period as Doug Smail tied up the defense and Lundholm scored from short range.

Hawerchuk's rebound goal came on a power play with five minutes remaining.

The Whalers had numerous early scoring chances in the game, but Behrend stopped 13 shots in the opening period, including six during two Hartford power play opportunities.

Behrend's last shutout was during the 1982-83 season at the University of Wisconsin.

Black Hawks 5, Flames 3

CALGARY, Alberta — Chicago center Denis Savard scored one goal and added an assist as the Black Hawks defeated the Calgary Flames 5-3.

After Kent Nilsson gave Calgary a 1-0 lead with a power-play goal at 12:03 of the first period, Troy Murray tied it with a short-handed effort a minute later.

Steve Larmer put Chicago ahead 2-1 with a power-play goal late in the first period and Savard's seventh goal of the season gave the Black Hawks a two-goal lead 1:28 into the middle period.

Calgary's Hakan Loob and Chicago's Curt Fraser traded goals later in the second period.

Ed Olczyk of the Black Hawks and Colin Patterson of the Flames each scored in the third period.

Goalie Warren Skorodenski, who played with the Calgary Wranglers of Western Hockey League, was outstanding for Chicago. He made 36 saves, 12 more than Don Edwards of the Flames.

Sabres 9, North Stars 6

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Jim Wiemer scored two power-play goals in the first period as the Buffalo Sabres showcased the top power play in the NHL with four goals during Minnesota's first four penalties, triggering a 9-6 victory over the slumping North Stars.

Minnesota rallied with a four-goal barrage in the third period, but failed to catch Buffalo after spotting the Sabres a 4-0 lead.

Wiemer, just recalled from the minor leagues, notched his first goal 36 seconds into the game. He scored on another power play with 2½ minutes left in the first period to put Buffalo ahead 4-0 and out of reach.

The victory was the first on the road this season for Buffalo. The North Stars are 1-7-2 in their last 10 games.

Buffalo chased Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche with four goals on 16 shots in the first period, compared to only three shots for Minnesota.

Buffalo has notched a power-play goal in all 13 games this season, including two or more in the last five outings.

Wiemer sailed in a 45-footer to start the first-period flurry. Then, with Meloche out of position, John Tucker made it 2-0 at 14:06.

Only 45 seconds later, Phil Housley whacked home a slapshot off a face-off pass from Gilles Hamel.

Wiemer's second goal, another long-range bullet, made it 4-0.

Don Beaupre replaced Meloche to start the second period and allowed goals to Mike Ramsey and Gil Perreault in the second period.

Mal Davis scored on a goalmouth flick in the third period and Craig Ramsay iced the victory with his second goal of the year with less than three minutes to go. Brent Peterson scored Buffalo's ninth goal with 1½ minutes to go.

Minnesota got second period goals from Mark Napier and Dennis Maruk to make it 6-2 and four third period goals from Neal Broten, Brian Bellows, Steve Payne and Craig Hartsburg to pull within 7-6 with four minutes to go.

Maple Leafs 4, Canucks 4

TORONTO — Miroslav Frycer's goal with one second to play gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 4-4 tie with the Vancouver Canucks.

Toronto pulled goalie Ken Wregget with 50 seconds left in the third period, but the strategy almost backfired when Vancouver's Stan Smyl missed an open net with 28 seconds left.

After the Leafs forced a faceoff in the Canuck zone with seven seconds to play, Bill Derlago outdueled Peter McNab and got the puck back to Jim Benning for a shot from the blue line. After a scramble in front of Vancouver goalie Frank Caprice, Frycer grabbed the loose puck and backhanded it into the net at 19:59.

Rick Vaive scored twice and Danny Daoust once for the Leafs while Smyl, Thomas Gradin and Moe Lemay had goals for the Canucks as the teams skated to a 3-3 tie after two periods.

Defenseman Michel Petit gave Vancouver a 4-3 lead with his first goal of the season at 7:05 of the third period.

Sockers defeat Sidekicks, 8-4

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas managed to hold San Diego's Steve Zungul, the league's top scorer, to one goal and two assists but the Sockers beat the Sidekicks 8-4 in Major Indoor Soccer League play here Wednesday.

Dallas' Manny Andruszewski was named the defensive star of the game. The offensive star was San Diego's Branko Segota, who scored two goals.

Steve Gardner, who arrived from Sweden Friday, scored one goal in what was only his second game with the Sidekicks and his first as a starter.

Dawkins placed on injured reserve

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets have placed center Darryl Dawkins on the injured reserve list and activated forward Albert King, who has been sidelined all season, the National Basketball Association club said Wednesday.

Dawkins has been out of action since the second game with back spasms, and recently was hospitalized for tests.

"Originally he went into the hospital with back spasms and leg pains, which indicate nerve irriation," said Dr. Kim Sloan, the team's orthopedic consultant. "We placed him in traction and we began giving him conservative therapy. He has shown improvement, but still feels uncomfortable."

Davenport hires 3 to complete staff

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jim Davenport, new manager of the San Francisco Giants, said Wednesday he has completed his coaching staff by hiring Chuck Hiller, Rocky Bridges and Bob Miller.

Hiller, a former Giant, will be third base coach and Miller, the Giants' minor league pitching instructor, will hold the same post with the parent team.

Time hasn't caught up on Youngblood

By RICH ROBERTS
Los Angeles Times

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Rams have come and Rams have gone in 14 seasons, but one has endured: Jack Youngblood at left defensive end.

Never mind who was president when Youngblood joined the Rams. Tommy Prothro was the coach. Eric Dickerson was in the fifth grade. The best seats cost $7.

Seven Pro Bowls and 139 quarterback sacks later, Youngblood, 34, will play in his 198th consecutive game when the Rams meet the Chicago Bears at Anaheim Stadium here Sunday, matching the club record held by Merlin Olsen. The streak astounds even the man.

"That's really an amazing number," Youngblood said. "I really have had to be blessed to survive this long (considering) the injuries you can get and all the other things that can happen to affect your career."

Funny, but all those things did happen to Youngblood. Still, he has never missed a game, although Lord knows he could have. Or should have.

St. Louis Cardinal Coach Jim Hanifan last week called him "a future Hall of Famer, the John Wayne of pro football." Some rookies call him "Mr. Youngblood."

IT'S HARD to imagine the Rams without him — his pickup truck parked in its unofficial private place by the trash dumpster, his tenor laughter echoing off the brick walls of Rams Park. He is a fixture.

In 1971 the Fearsome Foursome was on its last legs when Herbert Jackson Youngblood III came out of the University of Florida as one of the Rams' two first-round draft choices, along with linebacker Isiah Robertson. Last Sunday at St. Louis he played one of the best games of his career, sacking Neil Lomax three times and blocking the potential tying field goal on the day's last play.

In between he survived a series of crises from a broken leg to a blood clot to his own holdout to a coach who did not think he was a very good pass rusher. It wasn't easy getting from then to now, but Youngblood, laughing at himself, voices a simple philosophy:

"I'm just trying to make it until Tuesday."

Reviewing his career, he counts seven "crises," and here is how he describes them, in his own words:

1 — Country Come to Town

"Actually getting a grant-in-aid to go to school was an amazing situation for me. I didn't think I was that big of a football star at that time. And then to be drafted No. 1 out here was even more phenomenal. Alabama was the farthest I'd ever been. When I came to Los Angeles, it was definitely country come to town.

"I wanted to play, but the opportunity didn't appear to be there, playing behind Deacon Jones. Then Deacon got hurt that year and I got to play in his spot, beside Merlin. They traded Deacon the next year. Freddie (Dryer) came in.

"Coy Bacon was the right end. The theory Prothro had for a while was that Freddie was a better pass rusher than I was and that I was a better run player. So if he thought a team was going to run he'd play me. If he thought they were going to pass, he'd play Freddie.

"Then the next year Chuck Knox came in (as coach) and they traded Coy. Freddie moved to right (end), his natural position, and I stayed at left. Chuck said, 'You're my left end and you're my right end, and here we go.' Things just started falling into place."

2 — The One-Armed Man

"It was never brought up that I lost 50 to 60 percent (use) of my left arm in the '78 season. I pinched a nerve so severely that my arm actually atrophied. I lost motor sensory in my fingers and my arm. I played one-armed for like three years. I couldn't bench-press 225 pounds.

"I was still in the 4-3, so I could compensate for what I had to do. I played always from the outside in, and the only time I had to use my left arm was when they downblocked from outside in."

3 — The Broken Leg

"It (a fractured left fibula) happened in the divisional playoff game down at Dallas (in '79), in the second quarter. It's unusual, somebody trying to play this game with a broken bone in his leg.

"It was extremely painful (Note: He took no pain-killing injections), but being in the post-season playoffs, which are so hard to get to, it was a fear that I would never have that opportunity again ... and I wanted to go out and help my teammates, no matter what the cost.

"Now that we went all the way in that one season — went to the Super Bowl — I would have liked to have been healthy. I know I could have contributed more."

4 — Gone Fishin'

(In 1980 the Rams signed rookie safety Johnnie Johnson to a six-year, million-dollar contract. Four veterans — Youngblood, his best friend Larry Brooks, Jim Youngblood and Dennis Harrah — held out from training camp. The first two spent most of the time fishing in Florida.)

"Everybody thought it was because of Johnnie's contract, and it really had nothing to do with that, nothing at all. It was a time when the salary structure of the game had started to change.

"The four of us who did hold out that year were basically vested veterans who had been locked into long-term contract situations. Younger players were coming in and starting at a much higher level. For us, that quantum leap would never come without some drastic measure.

"It looked bad, but we figured, 'Who needs training camp?' And we'd never had a summer off in seven years. We had a legitimate excuse. 'They're forcing us to do this, so we're gonna go fishin'." We had a good time fishing and made a few dollars."

5 — The Blood Clot

(In the off-season spring of '81 Youngblood got the scare of his life when a clot blocked the subclavean vein that drains blood from his left arm back to his heart.)

"The nerve and the artery and the vein all come together up under the shoulder blade, and when it was pinched (in '78) it pinched all three of them. The nerve was the most notable at the time, but it created a scar on the inside of the vein.

"One night I slept on it wrong and pinched it completely off. That's the reason the blood clot formed. It took two days for it to become really obvious. My hand and arm got bluer and bluer and started swelling — like twice its normal size. I looked at it and said, 'This is the damnedest thing I've ever seen.'

"I came in and said, 'Tut (trainer Gary Tuthill), look at this thing.' I thought I'd been bitten by a spider. He called Toby (team physician Dr. Toby Freedman) and they panicked and said, 'We're settin' you up for surgery.'

"I basically tried to run and hide. I'd never gone through surgery in my adult life. They finally got me to the hospital that night late, and Toby literally had to come out to the parking lot. I told him, 'That's your medical opinion, but I think it'll go away.' He said, 'You're going to (do it) or you and I are going to fight.'

"And I had only one arm to fight with."

6 — Old Dog, New Tricks

(At the '83 spring mini-camp Youngblood was introduced to a new coach, John Robinson, and a new defense, the 3-4. "I can't do this," he said.)

"I didn't think I could. I really didn't, because I'd always been a finesse person. I relied on my quickness and my speed and my knowledge of the game and how I read. I totally had to change my concept of how to play the game.

"This scheme of things is more or less brute strength and total reaction to one thing happening in front of you. Very little finesse, although in Fritz's (defensive coordinator Fritz Shurmur) scheme of things he's allowed for some of that, because he's molded the defense to his personnel, to some extent. I think I've made the adjustment."

7 — HOW LONG?

(The Rams were coming off two losing seasons when Robinson arrived in '83. Youngblood's enthusiasm was revived. He quit smoking — he dips snuff these days — and increased his conditioning program.)

"Two things happened there. One, the most evident, was that we were basically a failure at our profession. I never wanted to walk away from the game with a thought by the peers I competed against that they had beaten me.

"Two, I realized that through age and injuries, if I was going to continue to play to the level I expected myself to play to, I had to take better care of this asset I had here.

"I'd work out, anyway. I really do enjoy it (as) part of my daily routine. I like the feeling of being in shape.

"It's so much easier when you're young, like the old saying, 'If you had it to do over again, would you do any differently?' Hell, yes, I'd do it with much greater intensity.

"I'll play as long as God will allow me to play, and I don't know how long that is. I really don't. As long as I can play like it's supposed to be played, I believe I should play. I don't want to leave any of this talent on the table.

"Right now I feel like I can still play with the best of 'em. There's nothing like before a game, to have that sensation in your gut that war is about to begin."

Rangers trade Hostetler to Expos for lefty Welsh

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers have traded Dave Hostetler, who rode the bench and spent a stint in the minor leagues after leading the team in home runs in 1982, to the Montreal Expos for a left-handed pitcher.

Southpaw pitcher Chris Welsh, 29, was assigned to the Rangers' Triple-A American Association team in Oklahoma City.

The trade, announced Wednesday, will take Hostetler, 28, a first baseman-designated hitter, back to the organization that originally signed him. The Rangers obtained him in 1982 when they traded Al Oliver for Larry Parrish and Hostetler.

Welsh spent last season at Indianapolis, compiled a 13-4 record with a 3.01 ERA in 29 games, including 26 starts.

Hostetler split the 1984 season between the Rangers and Oklahoma City. He started the year with Texas, was optioned to the 89ers on July 1, and returned to the Rangers Sept. 1.

He batted .220 with three homers and 10 RBIs in 37 games with Texas and .304 with 11 homers and 43 RBIs in 64 games at Oklahoma City.

BOWLING BEAT

Three break 700 barrier in October

By RANDY ISENBERG

Bill Theobald, Phil White and Randy Canales all broke the 700 barrier to cap the month of October bowling.

Theobald was the city's leader with a 719 series on games of 246-258-215 while bowling in the Keglers Mixed. He also is the city's highest average leader with at 203.

White, also rolling in the KM, totaled 716 with games of 205-244-267. Canales, in the Oil Star Scratch, bowled a 713 with games of 232-226-255.

Sandy Crenshaw currently holds claim as the outstanding female bowler for October with a 617 series in High Sky Ladies while Brenda Weeks in KM had a 610. Each are averaging 179 to be among the Midland leaders. The high game for the ladies went to Sue Elliott with a 255 in Mop & Broom.

UPCOMING EVENTS: Entry forms for the Miller National Doubles tournament are available at each bowling center in Midland. The tournament offers a total prize fund of $150,000 with $50,000 going to the winners. Levels of qualifying are In-House, Regional and State.

Troubled times for L.A., Flores

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — These are difficult times for the Los Angeles Raiders, who could find themselves on the outside looking in when it comes time for them to begin defense of their Super Bowl championship.

The Raiders have lost two straight games — the first time that's happened since 1981 — and are about to face a team that has shut out its last two opponents in a game that could make or break their playoff chances.

And that's not all. As of Wednesday, Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores was uncertain as to who would start at quarterback for the Raiders when they play at Seattle next Monday night.

It will probably be Marc Wilson, but it could be Jim Plunkett. And it's possible it could be Jerry Golsteyn.

"Marc Wilson's thumb was much better yesterday, the swelling has gone down," Flores said at his weekly meeting with reporters. "At this point, I'm optimistic about his playing Monday night."

The Raiders bring a 7-3 record into the game and a loss would make even slimmer their already slim chances of winning the American Football Conference's Western Division championship.

The Seahawks are 8-2 and in second place in the AFC West, one game behind 9-1 Denver, which plays at San Diego on Sunday.

Five games remain in the National Football League season after this weekend. Even if the Raiders beat the Seahawks, it could be that the best they'll be able to do is battle for one of the two AFC wild-card playoff berths.

Wilson became the regular Los Angeles quarterback late in the first quarter of the Raiders' 28-14 victory over Seattle on Oct. 7 when Plunkett suffered a torn abdominal muscle.

Wilson bruised the thumb on his throwing hand during the Raiders' 17-6 loss at Chicago last Sunday, and might not have returned to the game had backup quarterback David Humm not suffered a knee injury.

Wilson played the final minute of the first half and the entire second half, but because of the injury had problems throwing.

"If Marc can go (against Seattle), he certainly will go," Flores said. "If he can't grip the ball at all until Monday, we'll have to prepare to go with Golsteyn, unless Jim is ready."

Golsteyn was signed earlier this week as a replacement for Humm, who was placed on the Los Angeles injured reserve list. Golsteyn has been out of football since being cut by the Raiders in the preseason.

Plunkett, who was placed on the injured reserve list after being hurt, is eligible to come off this week. But Flores said he wasn't certain that Plunkett was ready to play and a decision on activating the veteran quarterback hasn't been made.

"Jim says it has not bothered him," Flores said of Plunkett's injury. "I just have to take a closer look at him, watch him carefully. He has been working out, but I don't know if he's ready to go."

The Raiders lost to the Bears a week after being beaten 22-19 by Denver in an overtime game. If Los Angeles and Denver tie for the division title, the Broncos would be the champions by virtue of their two wins over the Raiders.

"Right now we're struggling a little bit," Flores admitted. "Last year at this time, we were 7-3, but we were in first place. This year, we're 7-3 but we're in third place.

"Hopefully things will turn around like they did last year (the Raiders finished the regular season with a 12-4 record and went on to win the Super Bowl)."

As far as playing the Seahawks is concerned, Flores said: "I don't have to tell you how important this game is. They're selling Raider Hater T-shirts in Seattle. That's the way it is every week. Chicago was all fired up for us.

"I don't know if we need to reflect on the Chicago game. It's one I'd like to forget. The memory still haunts me."

Tigers, Padres split shares from World Series booty

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Champion Detroit Tigers split their $1,970,003.93 World Series booty into 29 full shares of $51,381.36 and also voted full or partial shares or cash grants to 13 uniformed and 40 non-uniformed personnel.

Meanwhile, the San Diego Padres voted 31 full shares of $42,425.56 from the Series players' pool of $5,472,233.22, the baseball commissioner's office said Wednesday. The Padres voted 17 full or partial shares or cash grants to 17 uniformed or nonuniformed personnel.

The players' pool came out of total net receipts of $6,776,564.10 from the World Series plus $4,371,918.95 from the playoffs. The four division champions and the second-place and third-place teams in each division share in it. The players share in the gate receipts from the first three playoff games and first four World Series games.

The Kansas City Royals, swept by Detroit in the American League playoffs, and the Chicago Cubs, five-game losers to the Padres in the National League playoffs, each voted 32 full shares — the Royals' $17,125.46 apiece and the Cubs' $17,621.49 — out of the clubs' pool shares of $684,029.15. The difference between the full shares results from the different number of coaches and partial shares.

Cougars expect big crowd

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Houston Cougars could play before their largest crowd since 1978 if Saturday's match with the Texas Longhorns at Memorial Stadium turns into the expected sellout of 80,000, team officials said.

The 1978 Cougar crowd record was set when 83,053 fans watched UH defeat the University of Texas 10-7 at Memorial Stadium. It was also a record crowd for a Texas sporting event.

Meanwhile, injured Texas running back Edwin Simmons sat out practice Wednesday. Soreness forced him to sidelines after his heralded return to practice Tuesday after a year in which he underwent three operations.

Barnes sues to block reprint of photographs

Barnes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Priscilla Barnes took the path of Marilyn Monroe and Ann-Margaret by posing nude to break into show business, says an attorney arguing for Penthouse magazine's right to republish her 1976 pictures.

Penthouse and Miss Barnes, 29, sued each other in federal court after the actress tried to block a second publication of the pictures which first appeared in 1976 when she was "pet of the month."

"She chose her path — like Marilyn Monroe, like Ann-Margret, like Suzanne Somers — to pose nude for a photographer," Penthouse attorney James E. Merriman argued Wednesday.

"We applaud Miss Barnes because she took a path, she followed it and she succeeded," Merriman said, adding that she could not now try to "erase the past."

Miss Barnes, of television's "Three's Company," contends she allowed Penthouse to publish the pictures with the understanding her identity would not be revealed. She was identified by a pseudonym at the time.

But Merriman said she signed a release containing the phrase "with my own or a fictitious name."

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Former football star Joe Namath has completed a pass at Deborah Lynn Mays and says his marriage to the actress is the "once-in-a-lifetime thing" he's been waiting for.

Namath, 41, who in 1969 led the New York Jets to a Super Bowl upset over the Baltimore Colts, and Miss Mays, 22, of Elizabeth City, N.C., exchanged vows Wednesday at the home of a mutual friend. It was the first marriage for both.

"I haven't been married in the past because I think marriage is very sacred and special and should be a once-in-a-lifetime thing," Namath said. "And this is it."

The couple met last year in Los Angeles while they were studying voice.

Namath, who also played briefly for the Los Angeles Rams, retired from football after the 1977 season to concentrate on his acting career.

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter says his vice president lost the election by raising negative issues, while President Reagan told Americans what they wanted to hear — "that everything is OK."

"It is always the case in a presidential campaign like this," Carter said Wednesday after Walter Mondale's crushing defeat. "The challenger comes across as negative — wanting to negotiate with those dirty Communists in Moscow on arms control, concerned about Central America, wanting to remind people that we had a debacle in Lebanon.

"So I think Mondale or any other Democrat would have had to bring a kind of negative message to the people while Reagan was bringing a message of apple pie and motherhood and waving the flag and saying Americans are superior because God wants them to be."

LONDON (AP) — The fur flew when Bolivia's Miss World contestant Erika Weise wore a leopard-trimmed hat and jacket on her arrival for the Nov. 15 pageant, angering the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"We are very much against the taking and killing of animals to provide luxury coats for humans. Fur is a moral issue," said Liz Coates, press officer for the 160-year-old society whose patron is Queen Elizabeth II.

"People in Bolivia like animals but they don't care much about this sort of thing," an unrepentant Miss Weise, 21, fired back Wednesday. "Women in this country walk around in fur coats, so why can't I?"

Miss World contest organizer Julia Morley, trying to calm the furor, said Miss Weise's father is a doctor, who was given the skin by local villagers after he "cured a number of children thought to be beyond hope.

"She is only wearing the fur in honor of the villagers and to keep her warm in the English winter."

Family carries on mortician tradition

LOWES, Ky. (AP) — The Lowe family has been in the funeral business in this town of 130 souls for four generations, and 78-year-old Roy Lowe is keeping up the tradition, burying the descendats of settlers buried by his great-grandfather.

He grumbles — "People don't hardly die anymore" — but gives no thought to retirement. And he's seen his daughter and granddaughter take up the business.

"My granddaughter was one of the first women to graduate from the embalming school in New Albany," he said. "They didn't used to have women in the business."

When Lowe was a child, his father sold pine caskets from the back of his general store. "He'd ask the people what color they wanted — white or black. There weren't no other colors."

When someone died, the family would measure the casket using a stick cut to the length of the body.

"They all had tape measures, but they wouldn't use them," he said. "They'd always go cut a stick. I'd see two or three men coming up to the store carrying a stick and I'd say, 'Daddy, somebody's dead.'"

That had changed by the time Lowe entered the business, but the preparation of the dead for funerals was still commonly done at home.

Lowe introduced embalming in 1926, and built the town's first funeral home in 1940. "It was a little place not big enough to whip a cat in," he said.

Some rural communities viewed the new methods with apprehension, but not the people of Lowes.

"They were tickled to death by it," he said. "It made everything so much easier on the family."

Lowe used to carry bodies from houses to the cemetery in a horse-drawn hearse built in 1890, but traded it in for a motorized model in 1928. He still keeps the horse-drawn vehicle in a nearby barn, and old-timers regularly ask if he would haul it out for their funerals.

"It's got to be pulled by horses, and nobody's got the time now to follow behind that thing. I remember you'd spend four or five hours just getting from somebody's house to the churchyard in that thing."

Lowe has kept a record of every person he's buried, but has no idea how many names are in the thick notebooks piled around his office.

"It's up into the thousands, all right," he said.

His funeral home used to handle hundreds of services a year, in the time when influenza and pneumonia were lethal diseases. Now, it's about 60 funerals a year.

"So many people used to die young that to be 40 was to be an old man," he said. "Now, most teen-agers have never seen a dead person."

His daughter, Judy Milner, owns the Milner Funeral Home in Bardwell with her husband, Billy. Lowe's granddaughter, Andrea Orr, runs the Milner Funeral Home in Wickliffe with her husband, Randy.

Mrs. Orr, 25, said her parents thought the family business had come to an end after they had four daughters.

Sailors to receive chips off the ol' dock

CARROLLTON, Ga. (AP) — Sailors who have spent long months at sea aboard the aircraft carrier USS America are looking forward to a special shipment to ease their last few days before docking — 10,000 chocolate chip cookies.

Organizers of the shipment had planned to send the cookies to the Persian Gulf, where the America had been on patrol about four months, but mailing them would take so long there was no guarantee the goodies would arrive in time.

"We're working directly with the admiral now and it looks like we've got the help we need to finish the job," coordinator Mike Meyer said Wednesday as he prepared to haul the cookies to Jacksonville, Fla., for delivery.

Meyer, a columnist for the Times-Georgian, got the idea for the "I Love America" effort when his son, one of 5,300 sailors aboard the ship, said the main thing they missed was home cooking.

"I know this present will be much appreciated," said Navy spokesman Nick Young. "Unless you've been at sea, you can't imagine what the last two days of a long deployment are like. I'm sure they will enjoy the cookies very much."

Performers will recreate old comedy sketches

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Gilford stood on the edge of the set and prepared to re-create a sketch he originated in a Broadway-bound play 34 years ago.

"We were in Boston before going to New York," he said. "We were in a revue called 'Alive and Kicking.' I joined the show late and they put me and the sketch into a matinee with 60 people in the house. It stopped the show."

That show stopper, called "I Never Felt Better," is one of about 15 sketches from Broadway revues and television that are being assembled into a show called "Sketches" for Home Box Office. Gilford will do the sketch with his wife, Madeline Lee, and James Coco.

"We'd hoped to get the same straight man from the 1950 show," Gilford said, "but he wasn't available. "He changed the punch line. His name is Carl Reiner."

"Some of these sketches go back to the 1920s, and some were in the 'Ziegfeld Follies,'" said Deborah Oppenheimer, who is producing for Lorimar Productions. "We're doing this like a theater production because most of our people are stage trained."

"We had to track down a lot of this material," Miss Oppenheimer said. "Some of it wasn't even written down. We also had to deal with a lot of widows who are very reverential about their husband's work. We had to assure them we'd treat it with respect. Those sketches that have lasted are timeless and universal."

"These are the cream of the sketches. They're great to do," says Coco. "In a play you have one character. Here you may do 13 characters and you really have to rev yourself up. It's like doing 13 plays. I hope the revue is coming back, both on television and on the stage."

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

Nines and tens don't have an assigned value in the point count. However, that doesn't mean you should overlook them in either the bidding or the play. Consider this hand.

North risked losing a 4-4 heart fit when he chose to show his better spade suit at his first turn — modern theory is to bid four-card suits up the line regardless of quality. He had as little as the law allows for his raise to three no trump.

West led the top of his heart sequence, and declarer did not like his chances. Even if the club finesse were to succeed, he would still need two diamond tricks for his contract. The normal way to play this combination is to lead twice toward the king-queen, but there was only one entry in dummy and that was needed for the club finesse.

Fortunately, dummy's ten of diamonds provided an alternative. If West held the jack of diamonds, declarer could set up two tricks in the suit by force by simply leading a low diamond up to the ten. So declarer won the king of hearts and led a diamond. West was a dead duck — whether he rose with the jack of diamonds or not, declarer was sure to get two tricks in the suit. And since the club king was onside and the defenders could not get more than two tricks each in hearts and diamonds, nine tricks became a cinch.

There is another, equally common, situation for this type of play. Suppose that declarer has A-Q-x-x in a suit and dummy J-x-x, and declarer needs three tricks from the suit. If he runs the jack, he can make three tricks only if the suit divides 3-3 (East, of course, covers the jack if he has the king). But he can guarantee three tricks whenever the suit breaks 3-3 or when West has the singleton or doubleton king by simply leading low toward the knave.

Bulls 122, Pistons 118

PONTIAC, Mich. — Rookie Michael Jordan scored all of his 25 points in the second half to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 122-118 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

The Pistons pulled to within two points on a Bill Laimbeer dunk with five seconds remaining in the game. But the Pistons were forced to foul Chicago's Quintin Dailey, who iced the game with two free throws.

The Pistons took a 96-94 lead with 7:43 left on two free throws by Isiah Thomas, who led all scorers with 35 points. But three straight baskets by Chicago erased the lead for good.

The Bulls first took command of the game with 11 straight points late in the third quarter to make it 88-77. Jordan scored nine of those points, including three straight dunks, and had an assist when his pass to Steve Johnson resulted in another dunk.

With Jordan on the bench in foul trouble, the Bulls overcame a 12-point first-quarter deficit to tie the score 61-61 at the half behind the hot hand of reserve guard Wes Matthews, who scored all 10 of his points in the second quarter.

Dailey led the Bulls with 29 points, a figure matched by Kelly Tripucka for the Pistons.

76ers 134, Pacers 113

PHILADELPHIA — Moses Malone scored 25 points and Sedale Threatt a career-high 19 as the unbeaten Philadelphia 76ers took an early lead and went on to rout the Indiana Pacers 134-113.

In winning their fifth straight, the 76ers broke a 9-9 tie and led the rest of the way.

Tony Brown scored 25 points for the Pacers, who slipped to 1-4 in the early-season competition.

From 9-9, the 76ers outscored the Pacers 25-15 to take a 34-24 first-period lead. Malone collected 10 points and grabbed six rebounds, and Threatt and Julius Erving six points each in the quarter as Philadelphia outrebounded Indiana 20-10.

The Pacers forged to within five points, 37-32, with 7:32 left in the second period. But the 76ers pulled away again with a 13-7 rally to lead 50-39 with 6:01 to go in the half.

Erving scored 17 and Clint Richardson 12 for the 76ers, while rookie Terence Stansbury, a hometown boy from Temple, collected 14 for the Pacers.

Bucks 103, Hawks 99

MILWAUKEE — Terry Cummings scored six points during a 13-3 spurt midway through the third period to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to their fourth straight victory, a 103-99 triumph over the Atlanta Hawks.

After Atlanta sliced a 14-point deficit to 66-60, Sidney Moncrief hit a 20-footer to ignite the Bucks on their way to a 79-63 lead. The scoring spree ended on Cummings' baseline jumper with 3:34 to go in the third quarter.

Cummings finished with 10 points in the third period, which ended with the Bucks leading 83-71.

Atlanta moved to within 97-90 with an 8-0 run late in the fourth quarter, keyed by Eddie Johnson's three layups. The Hawks, 2-4, could get no closer than the final score, on Walker Russell's 40-footer just before the final horn.

Milwaukee, 5-1, was topped by Paul Pressey's 26 points, followed by Cummings with 20 and Moncrief with 15.

Johnson paced Atlanta with 21 points, while Glenn Rivers added 19, Dominique Wilkins had 16 and Sly Williams 14.

Milwaukee scored the first six points of the game but Atlanta rallied to go ahead 10-9 on Williams' 14-footer with 7:40 left in the first period. The Bucks came back to lead 23-22 at the close of the quarter.

Milwaukee, with a hook shot by Paul Mokeski and a dunk and layup by Pressey, went on a 7-2 spurt to go up 48-40. The Hawks cut the margin to 54-50, but Pressey hit two free throws with five seconds left in the half and followed with a layup off a steal to give the Bucks a 58-50 halftime edge.

Lendl acquires help from Navratilova's nutritionist

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl is taking a leaf out of Martina Navratilova's book in a relentless bid to get back to the top-ranked position in men's tennis.

Lendl, currently ranked third in the world, has acquired the services of Navratilova's nutritionist, Robert Haas, to try to improve his strength and stamina.

Under the guidance of Haas, the 24-year-old Czech has lost 15 pounds in the past two months as a result of a strict diet that has seen him cut out several foods, including red meat, eggs, salt and fats.

"After Wimbledon this year, I just felt weak and it got worse," Lendl told reporters after making a successful debut Wednesday in the $315,000 Benson and Hedges tennis tournament.

"I'd practice for many hours and just feel tired. Mr. Haas gave me a blood test just before the U.S. Open and said that for a normal person I was fine but that for an athlete I was terrible.

"He put me on a strict diet and I began feeling the benefit after just 10 days. I used to have steak for lunch and dinner every day. Now I don't miss it at all."

Two weeks ago, Lendl's car was demolished in an automobile accident in his adopted home town of Greenwich, Conn.

He needed 14 stitches in the face but was otherwise unhurt.

"I was trying to avoid a squirrel in the road. The squirrel was lucky but I hit a tree," he said.

Lendl has won only two tournaments this year — including the French Open — but was far too strong for Britain's Colin Dowdeswell.He took the opening set in just 18 minutes, dropping only 10 points, and eventually won 6-0, 6-4.

Jimmy Connors, seeded to meet Lendl in Saturday's semifinals, also had a comfortable first-round victory despite going on the court with a heavy cold.

Progress made in strike talks

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Some progress has been made in talks aimed at ending the occasionally violent strike by some 6,400 aerospace workers at the General Dynamics plant here, union officials say.

Union spokesman Jim Conley said Wednesday negotiators have discussed sick leave, vacations, grievance procedures and other issues since talks were resumed earlier this week.

But Conley said pay raises, the main issue that triggered the strike by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, have not been discussed.

No details were given concerning the actual negotiations, but Dean Girardot, an international union representative, said "Anytime you talk, there's progress."

But Girardot was not optimistic about an early settlement of the strike that began Sunday night.

"Don't expect anything overnight. We're talking, and I think both sides are willing to keep at it," Girardot said. "But we have some days of hard bargaining ahead of us."

There were no arrests on the picket line outside the plant Wednesday, the first day that no one had been arrested on various charges such as blocking traffic.

The first two days of the strike were marked by rock-throwing and other violence.

"I think we've pretty much gotten that under control," said Pat Lane, president of District Lodge 776 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Bob Salinas, interim city manager at White Settlement, the Fort Worth suburb where the plant entrance is located, said unruly demonstrators outside the maker of the F-16 jet fighter threw rocks and bottles at cars entering and leaving the plant late Tuesday afternoon.

Salinas said there were nine arrests Tuesday, primarily for blocking traffic, but he said there was no need to use fire hoses and tear gas to break up the mob as police had done on the first day of the strike Monday.

The strike is the first at the plant since 1946. General Dynamics, with more than 16,000 workers, is Fort Worth's largest employer.

A construction schedule of 15 F-16s a month has been maintained "so far" by non-striking hourly employees, salaried and supervisory personnel, said company spokesman Z. Joe Thornton.

Lane says the union has insisted on a 2½-year contract instead of a 3-year pact offered by the company. He also said the company had offered a 3 percent cash bonus in lieu of general wage increases, which the union wanted in increments of 8 percent, 5 percent and 5 percent over the life of the contract.

The average wage scale at General Dynamics Fort Worth Division is $12.01, about 85 cents an hour below the next lowest for his union's members in the industry, Lane said.

Interest rates at lowest level since April

NEW YORK (AP) — Chemical Bank today joined a move in the banking industry to reduce the prime lending rate to 11.75 percent, the lowest level since early April.

The move by the nation's sixth-largest bank came a day after No. 2 Citibank initiated the cut from the 12 percent level, which had prevailed since Oct. 26. Citibank was followed later Wednesday by No. 3 Chase Manhattan, No. 7 First National Bank of Chicago and several regional banks.

The banking industry has cut its prime, or base, lending charge, three other times in the past six weeks, and some credit analysts on Wall Street see the rate falling further by year's end.

The prime rate is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term loans. The most creditworthy customers often borrow at below the prime rate, while small businesses often are charged more than the prime.

While not directly affecting the cost of most consumer loans, the widely followed rate is an indicator of the direction of lending charges generally, including mortgage rates.

Inmann says innovation causes competition

SAN ANTONIO—Admiral Bobby Ray Inmann (USN, Ret.) recently told engineering students at the University of Texas at San Antonio that America needs to be more innovative in developing new technology and transforming it more quickly into production in order to be more competitive economically.

General Motors X-car trial drags on into third month of debates

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent cartoon featuring a recalcitrant donkey locking his rear "brakes" and refusing to budge found perhaps its most appreciative audience in courtroom No. 2 of the federal courthouse in Washington.

It offered a rare moment of comic relief for lawyers representing General Motors Corp. and the government. The attorneys are pitted daily against one another in the trial of charges that GM sold more than a million 1980 X-cars with dangerous rear brakes that it knew could lock too quickly during routine stops.

According to the government, the alleged defect can cause 1980 models of the Chevrolet Citation, Buick Skylark, Pontiac Phoenix and Oldsmobile Omega to spin out of control. It has been linked to at least 3,563 complaints involving 1,108 accidents, 323 injuries and seven deaths.

The non-jury trial opened to a capacity crowd in federal district court last March, but the courtroom is nearly empty nowadays as time drags on, tempers wear thin and the government and GM wade through reams of technical data and thousands of documents.

The donkey cartoon, shared among the attorneys during a trial recess, was a rare item on which the two sides did not disagree.

Even U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson has privately chided both sides for dragging out the hard-fought case — which thus far has been at trial 65 days — and both sides now vow to be done before Christmas.

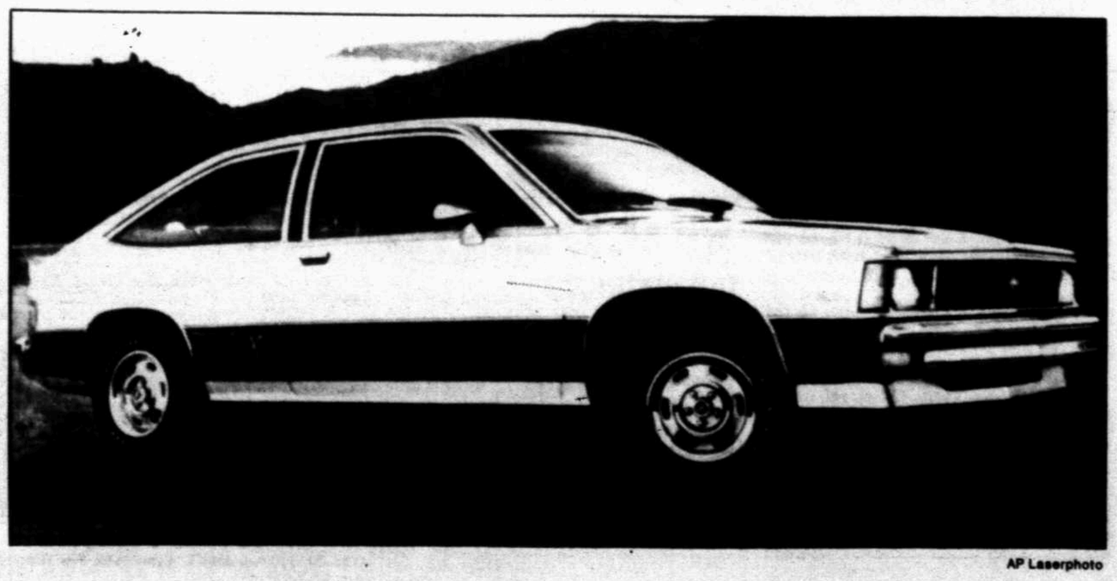

The lawsuit, filed by the Justice Department on behalf of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, asks Jackson to order all 1.1 million 1980 X-cars recalled and fixed, and GM fined $4 million.

The stakes actually are higher. The government sees the lawsuit as a chance to put all domestic carmakers on notice that they will be held to their duty to make safe cars; the world's largest automaker hopes to win vindication.

Neither side will disclose its legal costs to date.

"The reason this case is so important ... is it deals with the responsibility of manufacturers to act on their own (on safety problems) without the government ordering them to do so," says Justice Department attorney Lawrence Moloney. "If that doesn't happen, then the public isn't going to be protected very well, it's as simple as that."

Counters Thomas Gottschalk, GM's top litigator on the case: "What makes this case unique and always has is the slanderous attack by the government on GM in its decision to release the car ... You can never go back and undo the harm that's been done."

AP Laserphoto

Attorneys are pitted daily against one another in Washington, D.C. in the trial of charges that General Motors sold more than a million 1980 X-cars, like this Chevrolet Citation X-II, with dangerous rear brakes that it knew could lock too quickly during routine stops.

Moloney said the government's case is anchored in the reports of typical drivers who experienced unusual and unexpected skidding with their X-cars when they applied the brakes.

"The numbers of people and the complaint rates for the X-car make it stand out like a sore thumb," he said.

Twelve unhappy X-car owners took the stand at the trial's onset, after which the government introduced thousands of pages of internal GM documents which it says show that the automaker knew that the cars were unsafe but sold them anyway.

Gottschalk discounts the implications of the consumers' reports, the numbers of complaints linked to rear-wheel lockup, and the government's interpretation of company documents.

"They (consumers) undoubtedly are sincere in reporting a skidding incident, often a frightening incident that they had on a slick road or a wet road, but the fact that people skid ... in no way suggests that there's a defect in the car," Gottschalk said.

GM, midway through its defense, does not dispute that company records show that its own drivers experienced instances of rear-brake lockup on company tests prior to production of the cars. But the automaker has tried to convince the judge that the problems were caused by the severity of the tests and never foreshadowed a safety problem.

"The types of events ... that occurred in our durability schedules were directly due to the severity of those schedules," Gottschalk said.

Consumer confidence near record high

HOUSTON — Consumer sentiment across Texas was virtually unchanged during the latest quarter, while across the nation confidence rebounded to within a hair of the 18-year peak established in March.

In Texas, dampened sentiment in enery-dependent regions along the Gulf Coast and in East Texas ascribed to the slowness of recovery there but was offset by greater optimism elsewhere, most notably in North and West Texas, according to figures released by Charles T. Franckle, vice president and chief economist of First City Bancorporation of Texas, in his First City Index of Consumer Confidence in Texas.

The index is a quarterly indicator of residents' feelings of financial well-being and buying plans based on 1,020 telephone interviews conducted throughout Texas between September 24 and October 11.

The index was reported at a level of 96.1, nominally below the 96.2 of a quarter earlier. The latest figures compares with the 100.9 September level of the University of Michigan's national index of consumer sentiment.

Within Texas, the biggest shift came in the Gulf Coast region, which includes Houston. One quarter ago, consumers in this area were the most optimistic in the state. In the latest poll, however, their ebullience trailed that of residents of central, north, south and west Texas (in descending order).

ECISD alters disciplinary rules to comply with law

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The state Legislature has taken to telling school districts how to discipline students in the aftermath of Ross Perot and the resulting law.

Discipline programs in all Texas school districts are to be changed to follow the dictates of House Bill 72 — at least until the Legislature or State Board of Education comes up with something more agreeable.

The Ector County Independent School District formalized the discipline management program, which one board member said "takes the teeth out of our discipline program, in my opinion" during a board meeting Wednesday.

The Midland Independent School District has been following the law since the beginning of the current school year without formally changing policy, said Assistant Superintendent Duane Moore of the MISD.

Where the ECISD had a sliding suspension scale of three, five and nine days and the MISD suspended students for as many as 10 days before the new law, both must now limit their short-term suspensions to five school days to stay within the law.

"Any student who is in possession or under the influence of, purchases, or procures an illegal substance will be place on unsupervised home-based instruction" for no more than five days, according to the new law.

A key difference between suspension and "home-based instruction," said Assistant ECISD Superintendent Lloyd McKee, is that the student would not receive an unexcused absence. During the period out of the normal classroom, the student would be continuing coursework or required to make up all work missed, said ECISD attorney Bob Cox.

"This takes the teeth out of our discipline program, in my opinion," said trustee Sam Gipson, who abstained on formal adoption of the policy, which the ECISD apparently has been following since school opened this fall.

"I will not vote for that, nor will I vote against state law," said Gipson.

Cox said the Legislature could be changing the law, which was its final act during the special summer session. Moore said the MISD had drafted the revisions in its policy to comply with the law, but was waiting for the State Board of Education's interpretation.

McKee explained to the ECISD board that the complexity of H.B. 72 and its passage so close to the opening of school forced the administration to make the move before bringing the issue before them. He said the full ramifications on discipline management would not be in effect until the fall of 1986, but that these changes they were discussing had to be made immediately.

A uniform code of conduct, calling for input from parents and teachers, will be developed in accordance with H.B. 72 for the fall 1986 school opening, said McKee.

The new discipline management techniques cover:

— In-class discipline.

— Disciplinary actions of principals.

— Removal of "incorrigible students" to alternative education programs.

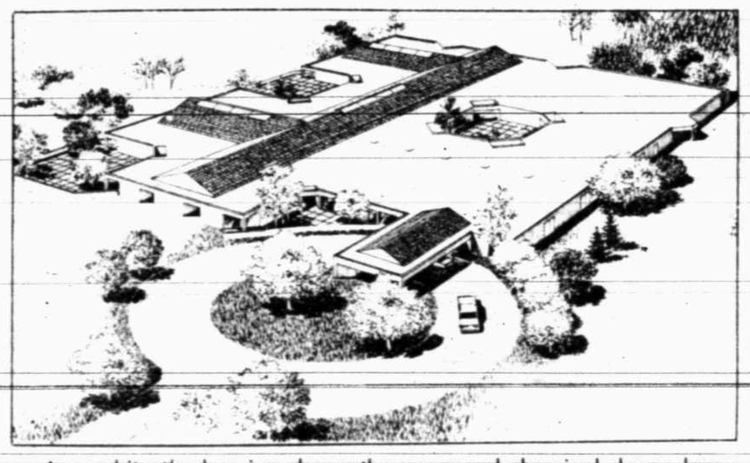

— Emergency removal (for up to 5 days).

— Expulsion of "incorrigible students."

The district is required to follow specific guidelines in declaring that the student is incorrigible before removing the student from his or her regular classroom environment (except under emergency removal provisions).

Contract negotiations over planned MMH drug treatment center end

An architect's drawing shows the proposed chemical dependency unit to be built by Midland Memorial Hospital and two Arizona-based partners. The new facility, to be located near Loop 250 and Thomason Drive, will offer treatment for 18 adolescents and 32 adults. The 36,500-square-foot center will include an auditorium, four classrooms, exercise rooms and group therapy rooms. Construction, which will take seven months, will begin within the next two weeks.

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The closing of contract negotiations over a planned drug and alcohol abuse center will take place today in Phoenix, Ariz., according to Midland Memorial Hospital officials.

The 36,500-square-foot facility, to be built on land donated by Scharbauer Brothers Inc., is the result of more than three years of planning by the Midland County Hospital District.

"The Scharbauers have been extraordinary in helping to put this deal together," said Ted Kerr, MMH's attorney.

Kerr has been working with the hospital board and joint venture partners, Camelback Hospitals and Samaritan Health Services, on contract agreements.

According to hospital reports, "The fence around the site is up and construction should begin sometime within the next 14 days."

"No name has been selected," said a hospital spokesman, "but it will probably include Midland, Camelback and Samaritan."

September sales tax receipts show drop in Midland, Odessa

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Sales tax receipts for the month of September showed a drop in both Midland and Odessa, according to a report from State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Midland's sales tax rebate check was made out for $854,777.54, which was about a $50,000 drop from the $914,080.64 received for the same month last year. For the year to date, payments are still running ahead with $7,320,368.04. This is about 11.31 percent above last year's $6,576,678.30.

Odessa didn't fare quite as well as Midland as its rebate check was made out for $763,925.18, compared to 1983's $860,543.72. As with Midland, the rebates for the year to date still total slightly more than last year. For 1984 the figure is $6,803,843.33, a 2.34 percent increase over 1983's $6,648,584.05.

Midland Finance Director Troy Gifford said he was disappointed in Midland's amount and that he had anticipated a check for $900,000 to $920,000.

Part of the difference between the November checks for the two years could be attributed to the reporting change made by the State Comptroller's Office. Several businesses that once were waiting until the end of the quarter, such as September, to turn in their reports now must do it each month. But November's check still fell below what had been received in August, which reflected June's end-of-quarter report. That August check had been for $911,139.04.

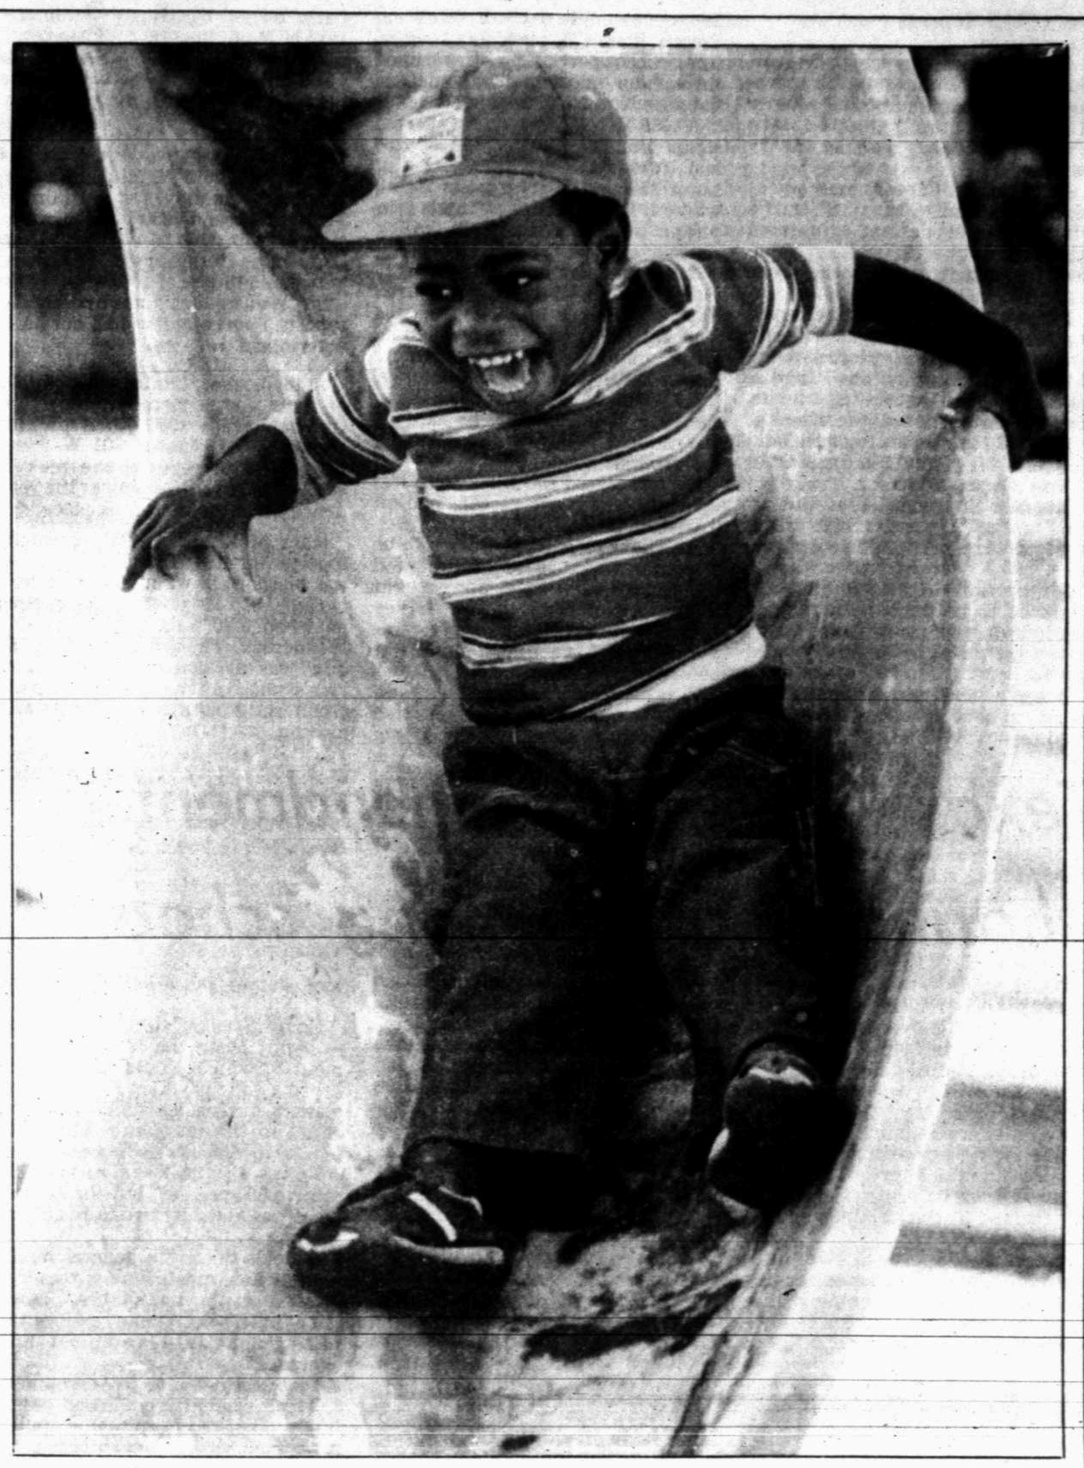

Gifford keeps a three-month average on a chart, and he said November's check will move that average down slightly. Instead of the $675,000 he had projected, it will be $640,000, he said, noting that it still is running ahead of last year's average.

"We need $700,000 next month to make budget this year," he said of the city's estimated $8.4-8.7 million in the 1984-85 fiscal year. But in reality he is expecting only $500,000.

Bullock said the cities which charge this 1 cent sales tax, collected by his office and then rebated to the cities, should be receiving slightly larger checks starting in December. That is when his office "begins sending them receipts we collect for the new items and services that became taxable Oct. 2. We'll be getting this extra money later in November and sending it to the city halls in December."

Gifford said Midland didn't expect to receive a windfall from those extra taxable items and had included only an additional $250,000 in its budgeted revenues.

"We'll have to wait two to three months to see how the additional items in the sales tax affect the checks," he said.

Park and slide

Thrill-seeking Terrance Green, above, enjoys a fast ride down the slide at Dennis the Menace Park Wednesday. Outsiders' criticism of Midland incenses me

The other day, I got a bit annoyed by a couple of outsiders who came into Midland and criticized our fair town. I didn't appreciate it one iota even though certainly I'm not a native, have no family other than dear friends and my loving cats, and have never viewed Midland as Utopia or even home. To me, home for now is some place I'll never, in reality, go back to in East Texas. But Midland is my town, and I'm fond of its peculiarities, including its divergent class system, which occasionally I'm privileged to invade like a stealthy observer.

Now and then, I get into forbidden places, such as jails and country clubs. Fortunately, I am confined to neither. I just visit.

As a Midlander, I can survey the territory and, paradoxically, relish what I like and don't like about this town. But I am incensed by insensitive outsiders who, in their reverie, foolishly think they are superior. They talk about their city in terms of hundreds of thousands or millions of people rather than in terms of hundreds or thousands. They talk about the night life and number of night clubs on Neon Row, how many daily editions "their" newspaper has, and how sophisticated their politics are.

Well, they can go right back and wallow in their own reality and fantasy. The thing is they don't seem to have the knack of appreciating a thing, be it town or situation, for what it is. If they did, they wouldn't criticize out of their own misguided ignorance. Now, I'm not haughty enough or knowledgeable enough to say I truly appreciate all or even most situations. To do so would imply almost complete understanding. But I'm willing to have a go at it.

I really try to appreciate Midland even though I don't always like or understand the rationale of its people or their persuasions. But they are fellow townspeople, and we're traveling along the same railroad, albeit in different cars and berths.

Here's a few obvious quirks about Midland:

Midland's politics, as a whole, are unimaginative and tightfistedly conservative. In Midland, if you're not a conservative of the Reagan ilk, you're a socialist. Tommyrot.

Those so-called do-gooders who sacrifice their precious time to serve on community-service boards sometimes seem to be misguided by their power — their little regimes in a niche of society. Specifically, I seem to recall community-spirited board members who got into a tussle with community folk over an abandoned house and ended up doing it their way. They had the Naomi Lancaster House razed and physically carted off into oblivion. It's unlikely the scar of its removal will fade for a generation or so. But Midland is our town, and we can squabble over issues. But keep the outsiders out of our business.

I don't even want to talk about the streets, traffic signals, or the water. No amount of complaining has resolved the problems with them. So, I guess we'll just have up put up with traveling over potholes, dodging barricades, putting up with retarded traffic lights and buying bottled water.

Now, what's good about Midland? It's in America: the old U.S. of A. You can go into a trade and be as radically conservative, liberal or fascist as you please (or displease) and no one is going to shut you up or down as along as you're not seditious and don't tread on folks or their territory. But most people don't want to displease strangers or friend; they're relatively quiet and meek. They try to be unobtrusive and fade into the background.

Maybe we should speak out more and just see how free our society is. Even outsiders are privileged to complain. So am I.

Two men in custody after Midland woman reports sexual assault

From Staff Reports

A 32-year-old man and a 20-year-old man were in custody this morning in Midland County Jail after a Midland woman reported late Wednesday she was sexually assaulted.

According to Capt. Tommy Jones of the Midland County Sheriff's Office, a teletype was sent from Martin County with warrant numbers for the two men, who were arrested.

The woman, who first reported the assault to Midland police shortly before midnight, was referred to the sheriff's office when she said the attack occurred outside city limits. Sheriff's deputies determined it took place 10 miles north of Midland on State Highway 349 in Martin County, Jones said.

The case was transferred to Martin County. Time and details of the incident were not available at press time.

Jones said the two men were expected to be formally arraigned this morning before a Justice of the Peace on charges of aggravated assault.

Boxes of shotgun shells and two television sets were reported stolen Wednesday in a burglary of the West Texas Gun Club on West County Road 170, according to sheriff's office reports. Entry was gained through an unlocked door sometime between Nov. 2 and Monday.

A 1983 Mercury Marquis, reported stolen Monday, was located at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday at the intersection of Loop 250 and Fairgrounds Road, where it had been driven into a telephone pole, according to police reports.

A Midland man had told police the vehicle, owned by Broadwater Cathodic Protection Service, was stolen at 11:30 p.m. Monday when he left it running while he went into a convenience store at the corner of FM 714 and U.S. Highway 80. When the man came outside, he said he saw the car being driven north on Fairgrounds Road.

Reports stated the windshield was damaged where two persons had hit it with their heads during the accident. The passenger, presumed to be a woman because of high-heeled footprints at the scene, was thought to be sitting next to the driver because the rear-view mirror was damaged where her head hit it before striking the windshield.

In other police activity, tires and wheels valued at $840 were reported stolen from a 1978 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, owned by Sammy Quilimaco, 1917 N. Main. Reports indicate Quilimaco had parked the vehicle in his yard and the theft took place between 3 p.m. Monday and 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Franklin Farrow, owner of La Casa Verde, 2615 N. Midland Drive, reported a money bag containing $470 in cash and $250 in checks was stolen from the tree and garden shop. The burglary took place between 5:15 p.m. Tuesday and 8:45 a.m. Wednesday, according to reports. Point of entry had not been determined.

A toolbox containing $300 worth of tools was reported stolen from the back of a 1981 Ford pickup owned by E.E. Lester, 401 W. Pine. According to reports, the pickup was parked in a driveway at the residence when the theft took place.

Mark McKinney, 4425 Norwood, reported his 1983 Honda Accord LX was burglarized while it was parked in the YMCA lot at 800 N. Big Spring between 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. The driver's side window was broken out and a $200 man's suit, containing a wallet with credit and identification cards, was missing.

Texas voters pass amendment 'sharing wealth' among schools

DALLAS (AP) — Texas voters ended years of feuding over millions of Permanent University Fund dollars by voting in favor of a compromise constitutional amendment that shares the wealth among state universities.

By an overwhelming 72 percent, voters approved creation of a $100 million annual appropriation for capital expansion projects at schools not covered by the $2 billion endowment.

Voters also approved five other constitutional amendments ranging from aligning state banking regulations with federal statutes to abolishing the county treasurer office in two counties, but rejected two others that would have cost additional state revenue.

State schools not covered by the PUF, which was built with oil and gas revenues, lost their expansion funding in 1982 when the state property tax was dumped.

Creation of the $100 million compromise fund was endorsed by both political parties and all the state's major universities.

"We're very pleased about it (the vote), especially considering that the amendment's wording was so obfuscating," said UT President Peter Flawn. "It may seem like a breeze now, but we put a lot of work into it."

House Speaker Gib Lewis wasn't as happy about the fate of Amendment 8, which would have established a daily payment for state lawmakers during legislative sessions equal to the maximum allowable federal income-tax deduction.

Texas lawmakers currently receive $30 per day, but the amendment was killed by two-thirds of the voters.

"I don't think the general public realizes how much time is required to serve in the Legislature," Lewis said. "I don't think many realize the salary schedule and cost and expenses."

Texans also said no to Amendment 6, which would have allowed public funds to be used to pay some mutual insurance companies' premiums. That proposal was rejected by about 65 percent of the voters.

Inmate doused with gasoline

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate suffered second-degree burns after being doused with gasoline and set on fire by his cellmate, while another inmate was stabbed several times today in two separate jail incidents, a prison spokesman says.

Alonzo Medina, 18, received second-degree burns over about 30 percent of his upper body in Wednesday's attack at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ferguson Unit near Midway, said spokesman Charles Brown.

"The officer of the cellblock extinguished the fire by putting blankets on him," Brown said.

Homeowners' insurance rates to decrease in 1985

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Homeowners in Midland County will receive an average decrease of 11.9 percent in homeowners insurance rates, effective March 15.

State Board of Insurance members Wednesday approved SBI staff recommendations on homeowners, farm and ranch owners, fire and extended coverage rate changes, which will result in an average decrease of 8.6 percent in homeowners rates statewide.

Changes for various coverages in the rating territory which includes Midland County show the following:

— Homeowners, minus 11.9 percent (statewide change, minus 8.6 percent).

— Tenant homeowners, plus 16.9 percent (plus 19.2 percent).

— Farm and ranch owners, minus 8.2 percent (minus 9.2 percent).

— Fire, minus 13.0 percent for dwellings; minus 0.3 percent for farms; plus 9.9 percent for cotton; plus 18.3 percent for all other classes. The average for all classes is minus 4.9 percent (statewide, the changes are identical).

— Extended coverage, average, minus 7.5 percent (plus 2.4 percent). Within this category, changes include: frame, minus 6.1 percent (plus 4.7 percent); brick, minus 6.5 percent (minus 3.2 percent); wind and storm resistant, minus 4.6 percent (plus 1.1 percent); dwellings, minus 1.1 percent (minus 4.2 percent); farms, plus 2.0 percent (no change); and all other subcategories, minus 9.7 percent (plus 6.2 percent).

Changes in other coverages which would be constant in all rating territories include additional extended coverage, minus 8.3 percent; special extended coverage endorsement, minus 11.4 percent; and office contents endorsement, plus 25.0 percent.

The average change for all coverages is minus 5.3 percent, which means a savings of $70 million for the state's insurance customers.

An example of the savings for the Midland owner of a brick-veneer home (one-year policy under "homeowners Form B"):

— For a $50,000 home, the present rate is $339, the proposed rate is $300.

— For a $75,000 home, the present rate is $509, the proposed rate, $451.

A new corporation, Midland Camelback Samaritan Group Inc., was formed recently, consisting of representatives from each party involved. Camelback and Samaritan will have responsibility for the development and operation of the facility, while MMH will maintain input through the new corporation.

"Midland Memorial Hospital will be renting the land to Camelback and Samaritan for $1 a year," said Kerr. "If they want to make changes (a new physician's office for example), they must get approval from the Midland County Hospital District."

Plans call for four classrooms, an auditorium, two group therapy rooms, an exercise room and locker rooms with whirlpool, and conference room. The 50-bed center will offer treatment to both adolescents and adults.

"There is a real problem in Midland with alcohol and drug abuse," said a MMH spokesman.

MMH first filed a certificate of need more than three years ago requesting permission from the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency for health-related capital expenditures.

The hospital originally planned to add 20 beds for chemically-dependent patients as part of an expansion program, but later opted to build a separate facility when the oil boom of 1981 brought fears of bed shortages. Plans were changed to a 50-bed, $3.4 million center to be built between Wadley and Tremont streets.

In 1983, the hospital board approved a plan for a 77-bed expansion at a cost of $15 million. This decision, coupled with competition from other groups also seeking approval of chemical dependency facilities, caused MMH to shelve its plans.

In early 1984, MMH began searching for a joint partner to develop the CDU. A conceptual agreement with Camelback Hospitals and Samaritan Health Service, both of Phoenix, Ariz., was reached in July.

The center will be built on 10 acres of land near Loop 250 and Thomason Drive. Completion is expected in the early summer of 1985.

ECISD

A hearing or hearings is to be held. Students are to be judged incorrigible when:

— Their presence in the classroom "presents a clear, present and continuing danger of physical harm to themselves or others."

— They have misbehaved consistently and their behavior threatens the educational environment. Also, they must have violated school policy and have been exposed to other discipline management techniques.

A truant who has missed more than five days in a semester or more than 10 in a school year can be recommended for removal to an alternative education program by the principal. Membership in an unsanctioned fraternity, sorority or "secret society" can also qualify the student for alternative education, according to the law.

The alternative education can mean transfer to another campus, "long-term unsupervised home-based instruction" or placement in a juvenile detention facility. A series of hearings and appeals are available to the student and parents.

Expulsion for the rest of the semester (no provision allows expulsion for the remaining school year) is allowed under the law when:

— The student "who has assaulted a teacher or other person" is judged to be a continuing danger.

— The incorrigible student in the alternative education program continues to violate rules hindering the education of other students involved in the program. A hearing is required before expulsion and the student can appeal the decision.

While these guidelines do mean changes in districts' discipline programs, the changes may only be temporary should the Legislature alter the controversial bill.

"We're in kind of a peculiar position here," said Moore of being faced with making policy changes that likely will be obsolete after another legislative session.

Gardendale man killed in mishap

From Staff Reports

A 19-year-old Gardendale man was killed Wednesday night in a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of West Loop 338 and West 22nd Street in Odessa.

Timothy Pollock was pronounced dead at 8:07 p.m. at Odessa Medical Center Hospital by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee of Odessa. His body was taken to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in Odessa.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, Pollock was northbound on West Loop 338 at 7:15 p.m. when his 1976 Chevy two-door collided with a vehicle traveling west on 22nd Street.

Odessan Harold Sligar, no age available, had stopped his 1982 Ford four-door at the stop sign on 22nd Street before pulling into the intersection. He collided with the right side of Pollock's car, causing it to strike a culvert before overturning twice on the median.

Pollock was thrown from his car.

DPS Trooper Luis Carrillo of Odessa investigated the accident.

Officer in satisfactory condition

From Staff Reports

A Midland police officer assaulted early Tuesday morning by a 28-year-old man was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hosptial this morning.

Wren Calhoun, 32, suffered internal bruises after she reportedly was assaulted by Samuel Craig Walker outside a convenience store at 3 a.m. Tuesday. Police said Ms. Calhoun was responding to a report that Walker was threatening a man for dating Walker's ex-wife.

Walker was charged Tuesday with aggravated assault on a peace officer and released after posting a $50,000 bond.

A 6-year-old girl seriously injured in a church van accident Oct. 30 has been released from MMH, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Evelyn Weatherspoon, 1917 E. Nash, suffered closed head injuries in the accident, which killed an 8-year-old girl and resulted in the hospitalization of three other children, who also have been released.

Firm, employees give to United Way

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., its employees and members of the Communications Workers of America (CWA) have pledged $31,362 to the United Way of Midland for 1985.

"Literally thousands of people are helped each year by the services supported by United Way," said Larry Armstrong, CWA chief steward, who along with Bell District Staff Manager Don Blanton co-chaired the company's United Way drive. "We feel this year's joint effort by the CWA and the company was a complete success."

United Way agencies serve all segments of the community — "Not just the poor, the handicapped or the disadvantaged," said Blanton. "United Way agencies strive to meet the needs of the community as a whole."

Southwestern Bell has pledged nearly $1.7 million to support over 95 United Way and Community Chest organizations in Texas, and employees and CWA members are expected to pledge almost $1 million in additional funds.

Officials check out dumping of sealant

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Local and state officials were checking out the apparent dumping of petroleum-based road sealant along the banks of the San Antonio River.

San Antonio River Authority analyst Chuck Walgren said Wednesday the 50-foot stretch of black liquid and tar-like solids may have been dumped by a city road crew working less than a mile away.

"It looks like the city is dumping leftover slurry sealant," Walgren said after inspecting the site.

Texas major contributor to GOP gains in House

DALLAS (AP) — Texas was a major contributor to the Republican Party gains in Congress, giving the GOP four of the 15 seats it picked up on Election Day.

Although Republicans fell short of their goal of regaining the 26 seats they lost in 1982, they won each of the four races the party had emphasized most heavily in Texas.

Going into the election, Democrats held a 266-167 lead in the House, with two vacancies. In the Texas delegation, the Democratic margin was 21-6.

Now, Texas Republicans are beaming after increasing their share of the state delegation to 10 and knocking off three incumbent Democrats in the process.

Winners and losers alike said the congressional candidates rode the crest of President Reagan's landslide victory.

Besides ousting the incumbents, the GOP picked up the open Lubbock-area seat vacated by Democrat Kent Hance, held onto two other open seats that had been occupied by Republicans and kept four Republican incumbents in office.

State GOP Chairman George Strake called the results of the election "just beyond my fondest dreams."

Jack Hightower of Vernon, one of the "boll-weevil" Democrats who supported Reagan's economic policies, was swept from office after 10 years. Amarillo attorney Beau Boulter won 53 percent of the vote.

Two-term Congressman William Patman of Ganado, formerly the area's long-time state representative, was caught napping by a big-spending Republican challenger, Mac Sweeney of Wharton, who won 51 percent of the vote.

Freshman Democrat Tom Vandergriff, the popular former mayor of Arlington who surprised Republicans by winning the newly created seat in 1982, was recalled by voters in favor of conservative Richard Armey of Denton. Armey garnered 51 percent.

One Democrat targeted for defeat by the Republican Party, freshman Ron Coleman of El Paso, defeated his GOP challenger, banker Jack Hammond, with 57 percent of the vote.

Republican Larry Combest, a former aide to retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower, defeated former Hance aide Don Richards, in a hotly contested race for Hance's seat. Combest won 58 percent of the votes.

Political newcomer Joe Barton, who barely won his party's nomination with a 10-vote margin in a runoff, surprised 14-year Legislature veteran Dan Kubiak to give the GOP continuing control over the seat Phil Gramm left to run for the Senate. Barton won with 57 percent.

Republican Ron Paul's Houston-area seat, vacated after Paul ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate, remained firmly in GOP hands with a decisive win by former state Rep. Tom DeLay, who defeated Democrat Doug Williams.

Republican incumbent Jack Fields easily fended off a challenge by Democrat Don Buford after an often-acrimonious battle for control of the northeast Houston district.

Republican freshman Steve Barlett, from a Dallas district considered one of the most Republican in the country, had no trouble with Democrat James Westbrook, a retired Army colonel from Highland Park.

Veteran Republican incumbent Bill Archer swept past Billy Willibey, who ran on the Democratic ticket but said he was supported by the independent Lyndon LaRouche organization.

Republican Tom Loeffler, who represents the sprawling Southwest Texas district that runs from San Antonio to Big Bend, easily defeated perennial candidate Joe Sullivan.

Democratic incumbent Martin Frost of South Dallas topped Republican challenger Robert Burk, an airline pilot from Irving.

Democratic incumbent Charles Wilson of Lufkin, scared in the primary after a year-long drug investigation which eventually was dropped, posted an easy general-election win over former Orange County District Attorney Louis Dugas Jr.

Democrat Jack Brooks of Beaumont, the dean of the delegation, elected in 1952, won another term by defeating Republican Jim Mahan, a Galveston attorney.

Reagan 'wears well,' says political veteran

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan has the know-how to make long-lasting political use of his latest landslide win, according to a Texas veteran of a presidential landslide that fell apart not long after the election.

"Reagan is an unusually popular president. He wears well," said George Christian of Austin, who served as President Lyndon Johnson's press secretary. "He got millions of Democratic votes. He will use that popularity. He and his people know how to do it."

With 99 percent of the Texas vote tallied, Reagan led Democrat Walter Mondale 3,395,417 to 1,923,329. That meant 64 percent of the state vote went to the GOP incumbent.

The national result was similar to Johnson's 1964 blitz of Republican Barry Goldwater. But Reagan's mandate had greater "staying power" than Johnson's because Reagan already has had four years to establish his power, according to Christian.

Johnson's win came a year after he replaced President John F. Kennedy. Christian said Johnson moved quickly after his win, aware that his popularity would fall. Eventually, the Vietnam War forced LBJ not to seek re-election.

"He was a wise old political candidate from a long time back. He knew that popularity doesn't last. You've got to do what you want as quickly as you can," said Christian.

A look at Tuesday's Texas vote shows just how popular Reagan is in the state.

— He carried all regions of the state, including the Panhandle with 75 percent, North Central Texas with 67 percent, East Texas with 59 percent, the Upper Gulf area with 63 percent, South Texas with 56 percent, Central Texas with 62 percent, West Central Texas with 72 percent and West Texas with 68 percent.

— He carried three of the eight counties with the highest September unemployment rates. Reagan took 53 percent of the vote in Cameron County, where unemployment was 13.3 percent. He took 70 percent of the vote in Garza County, with a jobless rate of 13.6 percent. Reagan pulled 58 percent of the Terrell County vote, where unemployment was at 13 percent.

— He won the seven counties with the largest voter registration increases — Coryell, Hays, Lubbock, Midland, Rockwall, Walker and Williamson.

Gramm: Budget can be cut; Texas can still get base

DALLAS (AP) — Conservative Republican Phil Gramm says $20 billion can be cut from the defense budget — and Texas can still get a new naval base.

Gramm also said his election to U.S. Senate Tuesday is a mandate for conservative causes, including running the Pentagon "like a business."

"I'm going to cut waste everywhere it needs to be cut," Gramm said. "This is not a victory of an individual. This is not a victory of a party. It's a triumph of philosophy."

Gramm said he would be meeting next week with officials from the U.S. Navy to discuss which site along Texas' Gulf Coast would be best to locate a naval base.

"I'm going to work to see that Texas gets every consideration. It could be Port Arthur, it could be Corpus Christi, it could be Brownsville," he said.

Gramm said he plans to be his usual outspoken self while offering unwavering support for President Reagan and trying to fill the void in Texas' influence left by U.S. Sen. John Tower's surprising retirement.

The three-term College Station congressman said his victory signified a dramatic shift in Texas' political makeup.

Gramm, once rated the most conservative member of Congress by the non-partisan National Journal, trounced Democratic state Sen. Lloyd Doggett with nearly 59 percent of the 5.2 million votes cast in one of the state's most acrimonious, and costliest, races ever.

Gramm said his victory, Reagan's romp over Walter Mondale and gains by Republican congressional candidates mean that Texas Republicans have "forged a new coalition" over the once-dominant Democrats.

"The Republican party is the party of working men and women in Texas, those people who do the work, pay the taxes and pull the wagon," Gramm said. "I think that is a position we can maintain if we provide the leadership."

Gramm, 42, first leapt onto the national political scene in 1981 when, as a Democrat, he co-sponsored Reagan's first budget and gave GOP leaders reports on Democratic strategy sessions.

In return, the party leadership stripped him of his soap box — a seat on the House Budget Committee. So Gramm resigned from Congress, switched parties and came home to win re-election as a Republican last year.

Gramm's supporters presented the jubilant candidate Tuesday night with a large snow shovel, symbolic of one of his favorite campaign pitches in which he asked voters for a "larger shovel" because of "all the digging I did in the House with a smaller shovel."

The Georgia native said he believed about $20 billion could be cut from defense spending in the next three to five years "without doing anything to America's readiness."

Gramm said he would try to accomplish that by tripling the amount of "competitive bidding" on defense contracts and tightening restrictions on spare parts purchasing.

The Pentagon, he said, should be operated "as a business and not as a political machine."

The former Texas A&M University economics professor said he would return to Washington "more determined than ever" to work for a balanced federal budget.

Gramm said he would be looking to see which seats on the various committees would be open, but was interested in four: finance, appropriations, armed services and agriculture.

Tower was chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Doggett and Gramm had spent an estimated $12 million this year on the race for the seat first held by Sam Houston and later by Lyndon Johnson. Gramm outspent his Democratic opponent about 2-to-1.

GOP chairman says roots planted for more growth

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans used to joke about holding their legislative caucus in a telephone booth. Now, after Tuesday's election, one out of three legislators is a member of the GOP, and the party chairman says the roots are planted for more growth.

Chairman George Strake said Wednesday Republicans had gained at least 16 seats in the House and one in the Senate.

"I think we have planted the roots of organization both urban and rural to make this the party of the future, really," Strake told a news conference outside the House chamber.

The election gains raise the GOP membership in the 150-member House to 53 and in the 31-member Senate to six.

"With this kind of election success...it's going to bring more of the Eagle Scouts out to run on the Republican ticket — it's going to encourage more of our quality candidates to run as Republicans, so it's a situation of success begetting success," Strake said.

He credited President Reagan, who carried the state with approximately 64 percent of the vote, for giving Republicans a "broad and deep grassroots victory."

"Obviously, we had the best candidate we've ever had running for president in Ronald Reagan, and I'm ready to give him full credit for what he did," Strake said.

He said Republican Cyndi Krier's election to the Senate from San Antonio "is like icing on the cake." Ms. Krier defeated Sen. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, to become the only woman in the Senate and first GOP state senator from Bexar County.

"Cyndi Taylor Krier is, in my opinion, one of the outstanding candidates that has ever run — certainly on the Republican ticket, maybe on either ticket," Strake said.

He also hailed Republican Bob Richardson's defeat of Rep. Russ Tidwell, D-Austin, as a "super victory" because the two were running in the hometown of Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett.

Ron Givens defeated incumbent House member Froy Salinas of Lubbock to become the first black Republican state representative in this century, and Strake said that "is the beginning of inroads we intend to make in the black community."

Couple jailed for two months ends silence

HOUSTON (AP) — A couple jailed for two months for refusing to testify before a grand jury in their son's murder case will stay in jail until at least Friday, prosecutors say.

Bernard and Odette Port ended 63 days of silence Wednesday and testified before a Harris County grand jury investigating the June 7 slaying of postal carrier Debora Sue Schatz.

John Holmes Jr., Harris County district attorney, told the Houston Chronicle "there has been some progress" in the case, but refused to say whether the Ports might be freed soon.

State District Judge I.D. McMaster must reverse the Ports contempt of court citation — an action that could occur as early as Friday.

Although Holmes refused to disclose the exact nature of Mrs. Ports' testimony before the grand jury, he said she was "asked questions and she's giving some answers."

McMaster cited the Ports with contempt for refusing to testify before the grand jury in the case against their 17-year-old son David, charged with murder in Ms. Schatz' death.

Prosecutors have wanted the Ports to appear before the grand jury to determine if capital murder charges could be filed.

But Holmes agreed there was a possibility defense attorneys would take the position that the elder Ports are not obligated to answer questions which do not pertain specifically to a possible capital murder charge.

The attorney representing David Port, Jack Zimmermann, said an appellate court would be more likely to free the Ports if the grand jury asked questions in an attempt to raise the charge to capital murder.

The Ports' attorney, Randy Schaffer, said his clients decided to testify because "we had to do something. We couldn't just let them gather dust in jail for three months."

Statewide voter turnout lower than predicted

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas turnout in the general election fell some 700,000 votes short of predictions, according to the Secretary of State's office.

Secretary of State Myra McDaniel on Monday predicted that close to 6 million voters would cast ballots, based on a projected turnout of 72 percent to 75 percent.

Actually, more than 68 percent of Texas' 7.9 million registered voters went to the polls, the Secretary of State's office said Wednesday.

With only one precinct in Kaufman County missing, a total of 5,385,605 votes had been tallied late Wednesday.

In the last presidential election of 1980, the voter turnout was 65 percent.

Moroccan says he had affairs with two victims

DALLAS (AP) — Abdelkrim Belachheb said he had had affairs with two of his murder victims, a defense witness testified in the Moroccan native's trial.

Belaccheb, 39, has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to six counts of murder and one of attempted murder at a private Dallas nightclub on June 29.

Dr. Gil King, a psychological anthropologist who testified for the defense Wednesday, said Belachheb said he "was engaged in intimate relations" with victims Marcell Ford and Linda Lowe.

On the evening of the shootings, Belachheb told King, one of the women invited him to Ianni's Restaurant and Club to discuss a job as a chauffeur of exotic cars.

"But then he approaches one of the women and is rebuffed in a clear and sharp way," King said.

In an Arab culture where women are considered property, King said, "that's a big no-no." King said Belachheb went out of control in reaction to the rebuff.

In Morocco, King testified, the horror of the Ianni's tragedy would be "blunted at large by the understanding that it was preceded by an insult to his personality."

Witnesses to the shootings testified earlier that Belachheb and Ms. Ford had been engaged in animated conversation and that Ms. Ford had pushed Belachheb away.

On cross examination Assistant District Attorney Norman Kinne questioned both the liaison between Belachheb and the two victims and the validity of King's findings.

"The only source for this information is the defendant himself?" Kinne asked. "You haven't checked it out in any other way?"

King said the media, defense attorney Jackson, Mrs. Belachheb and examining psychiatrists were also sources of information.

Under further cross-examination, King said Belachheb also may have been in culture shock when he was arrested in Belgium 11 times for assaults between 1965 and 1967.

"Mr. Belachheb spent 1976-78 in a Kuwaiti prison for robbery," Kinne said. "Was that some kind of Kuwaiti culture shock?"

"The mainstream Arab culture is very different from his own," King answered.

Another defense witness, psychologist Kevin Karlson, said Wednesday that Belachheb suffered brain damage that prevented him from knowing the shootings were wrong.

Karlson testified that Belachheb told him he suffered the brain damage at age 10 when he emulated an African rite he had seen by burying an ax in his own skull.

Years later, Belachheb was severely beaten by employees of the Moroccan Embassy in Lucerne, Switzerland, Karlson said the defendant told him.

Karlson said he diagnosed Belachheb as a paranoid schizophrenic and psychotic personality with organic brain damage and an intelligence quotient (IQ) of 76.

Belachheb's wife also testified Wednesday that her husband "was a powder keg ready to go off," said Joanne O'Brien Belachheb. "I knew this man was sick enough to kill — I was begging people for help...but I didn't have the money for treatment. That was the bottom line."

Mrs. Belachheb described her relationship with her husband as "loving," but said he was prone to violent outbreaks. On one occasion, she testified, Belachheb fractured her skull when he hit her head against the back of a sofa, sending her to the hospital for three days.

Man finally succeeds with hot-air proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — It didn't exactly turn out the way it was planned, but Tom Jones succeeded in his unusual way of asking Angela Branch to marry him.

Jones, 35, owner and president of Summit Properties, put a huge yellow banner reading "Angela please marry me. Love Tom" on the bottom of a hot air balloon and had the balloon hover near a highway where Ms. Branch would see it on her way to work Wednesday.

He also planned for the two of them to take a ride in the ballon after she accepted his unusual proposal.

But Ms. Branch didn't see the balloon on her way to work and winds kept the two from taking the balloon ride.

Co-workers managed to get Ms. Branch, the editor of Austin Living magazine, to go back to the location where she finally saw the balloon.

It was a struggle to keep the balloon in the air long enough for Ms. Branch to see it.

'Garbo Talks' ironic title for film about famous, reclusive star's fan

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Garbo Talks" is the ironic title of a new movie about the legend of the actress who has become known as the Silent Swede.

The plot of the MGM/UA release concerns a lifelong Greta Garbo fan who is on the brink of death, played by Anne Bancroft. Her last wish is to be able to converse with Miss Garbo. The fan's devoted son, played by Ron Silver, strives against all odds to have it happen.

Miss Garbo, who has avoided all public contact since her 1941 retirement, is portrayed in the film from a rear view. Her full face is seen only once, and then through foliage. And her film persona talks — one brief line in the final scene.

The film trade wondered how any studio, even the one for which the actress toiled throughout her Hollywood career, could portray a living legend who zealously guards her privacy.

According to Catherine Hicks, who co-stars in the movie, director Sidney Lumet talked to Miss Garbo.

"She apparently told him that she would not cooperate with the movie, but she wouldn't fight it, either," Miss Hicks said.

The figure in the final scene, said Miss Hicks, is Betty Comden, who writes music with Adolph Green.

As explained in the movie script, "Garbo Talks" was the ad line for the actress' first talkie in 1930, "Anna Christie." Miss Garbo had remained off the screen for two years as the film industry converted to sound, and it was feared that she would be a casualty, along with other foreign-born stars.

Her first words to the bartender in a waterfront saloon were: "Gimme a whiskey — ginger ale on the side — and don't be stingy, baby." The transition was made, and Miss Garbo became an even greater star in talkies.

But as her career grew, she became more silent. When she first came to Hollywood, she had been tossed into the publicity mill, even posing in a track suit at a local college. As an artist she rebelled.

Interviews virtually stopped after 1928, when she complained about a reporter's story: "I do not like to see my soul made bare on paper."

But the legend grew, even affecting her fellow stars. In a recent interview, James Stewart told of how he yearned to catch a glimpse of Miss Garbo during his early MGM years. All of his attempts failed until a fellow worker tipped him off that she was leaving her set. Stewart raced to the stage door just as she emerged.

"I not only bumped into her, I knocked her down," Stewart said. "All I could do was just stand there and think that here I'd finally met Garbo, and all I'd done was knock her down."

The late Joan Crawford also idolized Miss Garbo and once encountered her in the hallway of the stars' building. "I looked at that serene face, and I was tongue-tied," Miss Crawford said.

After scoring a hit with "Ninotchka," Miss Garbo tried another comedy, "Two-faced Woman," in 1941. It was a flop.

Her films had always been marginal moneymakers in the United States though they were popular in Europe. With the European market lost in World War II, Louis B. Mayer decided to buy off her contract. According to her frequent director, Clarence Brown, Mayer offered her $200,000 and she refused it, saying, "No, Mr. Mayer, I did not earn it."

Kincaid retrospective continues at MC

Midland College is presenting a retrospective showing of paintings by Clarence E. Kincaid through Dec. 2.

Most of the paintings are from the Kincaid estate and have never been shown before. Others have been loaned by area collectors. Some are available for purchase.

Born July 22, 1927, in Oklahoma City, Okla., Kincaid was raised in the Texas Panhandle. A graduate of West Texas State University, he attended the University of New Mexico and received his doctorate from Penn State University.

The influences of the tri-ethnic culture of northern New Mexico is deeply ingrained in his work.

In speaking of his paintings a few years ago, Kincaid said, "Content is the distilled essence of what an artist wants to say. I personally search for content through an intensified identification with the subject matter."

While most of his works depict Southwest landscape forms, Kincaid often turned his attention to still life, portraiture and abstraction.

"A student of art history with a strong knowledge of painting styles, he considered and experimented with many schools and styles of expression," said Dr. Charles Stewart, chairman of MC's fine arts department. "While his research enriched his work, he deliberately sought to avoid any single style of expression or schema."

His work was handled for many years by the Baker Gallery of Lubbock, the Talisman Gallery of Bartlesville, Okla., and the Mission Gallery of Taos, as well as other galleries in the Southwest. He exhibited widely and had over 21 one-man shows. Both private collectors and museums collected his works.

Kincaid died Nov. 28, 1983, at the age of 56. He is the subject of the entire November 1984 issue of Texas Trends, the official magazine of the Texas Art Education Association. A second retrospective exhibition is planned by the West Texas Museum in Lubbock for 1985.

Violinist to be guest at second symphony concert

Violinist Miriam Fried will join the Midland-Odessa Symphony for its second subscription concert of the season. Performances are set for Midland's Lee High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tuesday and Odessa's Bonham Junior High at 8 p.m. Nov. 15.

The program will include Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries," Bruch's Violin Concerto No. 1 in G minor, Vivaldi's The Four Seasons: "Autumn," "Winter," and Respighi's "Pines of Rome."

Miss Fried has performed with, among others, the Chicago Symphony, the Boston Symphony, the Cleveland Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Vienna Symphony and the London Symphony.

She is well known for her violin and piano recitals with the internationally acclaimed pianist Garrick Ohlsson.

Also coming up on the symphony's programming this fall is the second concert in the Thouvenel String Quartet series. The performance is set for 8 p.m. Nov. 17 at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium. The quartet members all play with the symphony.

Single admission tickets for both performances will be sold at the door.

Higher costs mean higher ticket prices

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — For Americans, London's West End is a bargain compared to Broadway, and the difference can be attributed to an undeniable fact of theatrical life — higher production costs mean higher ticket prices.

In New York, theatergoers who saw "Kipling," Alec McCowen's recent one-man show about the eminent English author, paid $30 for a top-priced ticket. In London, a ticket for the same show was $13.40. But it cost $200,000 to produce "Kipling" on Broadway and only $65,000 in the West End.

"Blockheads," the American-produced musical about Laurel and Hardy that ended an unsuccessful London run Nov. 3, closed at a loss of $500,000. On Broadway, the loss would have tripled, and so would the top ticket price: $45 in New York vs. $15 here.

"It's part of the reason there are only 20-odd shows on Broadway now, compared to 33 or so on the West End," said British producer Ray Cooney.

"Ultimately, I think there will be less theater in both New York and London," said British producer Duncan Weldon, who said that it will cost $1.25 million to open "Aren't We All?" — his hit London revival co-starring Rex Harrison and Claudette Colbert — on Broadway in 1985.

At London's Theater Royal Haymarket, the play cost Weldon about $137,000 to mount — one-tenth the projected New York sum.

But the American ticket-buyer is also likely to be earning a proportionally greater salary than his British cousin.

"The average wage is about 50 percent higher in New York," said Cooney, pointing out that ticket prices must be seen in relation to what an audience is capable of paying.

According to London's Department of Employment, a weekly wage here averages about $180. In New York, the average wage in 1980 — the last year for which figures are available — was $350 per week, the U.S. Census Bureau says.

"The English public thinks 15 pounds a ticket is dear, and Americans think $45 is dear," said Weldon. "Everything is proportional.

"What happens is that Americans come to London and think we're giving the tickets away, because they're only paying 40 percent of what it would cost to see the same shows at home," he said. "Londoners go to New York and find they can't afford to go to the theater."

"Everything to do with people in New York costs more," agreed British producer Michael White, who opened the Rodgers and Hart musical "On Your Toes" in London for approximately $760,000 "as opposed to over double that in New York."

In London, "Kipling" had a six-person production staff at the 650-seat Mermaid Theater, where house expenses — including ushers and box office personnel — amounted to the equivalent of $3,900.

At Broadway's 1,066-seat Royale Theater, a production staff of 11 was required to put on a show whose house expenses totaled $4,000 to $15,000 a week.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

'Texas West of the Pecos' to open at Odessa museum

ODESSA — "Texas West of the Pecos," an exhibition of photographs by Jim Bones Jr., opens Nov. 20 at The Presidential Museum. The show will hang through Jan. 5.

Bones captures the beauty of the more than 30,000 square miles of dry, wildly eroded flatlands, hills and mountains bound together by intermittently life-giving streams.

A resident of Santa Fe, Bones is a photographer, writer and wilderness guide who has studied with such notables as Russell Lee and Eliot Porter.

Special exhibit at museum

"South of Winter" will be at the Petroleum Museum Nov. 13 through Dec. 31.

This special exhibit from the American Museum of Natural History, sponsored by Conoco and circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, includes photographic scenes from the Arkansas, Texas, Wildlife Refuge.

The exhibit is making its sixth appearance on a three-year schedule.

Deep Purple has signed a four-album deal with Mercury Records.

The tour will begin in November in New Zealand. The group arrives in the United States in mid-January for 10 weeks.

Nuts low in saturated fats, cholesterol

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to know what part nuts play in the diet of a person who does not have a weight problem but who would like to reduce his intake of fat. Thanks for all your help. — Sam, Charlotte, N.C.

Der Sam: Nuts are low in saturated fat and, as a plant food, are free of cholesterol; however, they are classified as high-fat foods.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How do you account for the fact that a person who has spent years studying plants should get sick from eating wild mushrooms? This happened to a biology professor I know who is supposed to be an expert on poisonous and nonpoisonous plants. How can you tell if a mushroom is safe to eat? — Jeff, Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Jeff: There is no reliable way for the average person to tell if a mushroom is safe to eat or is poisonous. As you note in your letter, even people who are supposed to be experts at identifying wild mushrooms may wind up very sick or even worse.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is a diabetic and his doctor has told him to lose some weight. He is starting on a high-fiber diet now, and he says that this is the most important thing he can do for his condition. May I have your comment? — Mrs. J.R., Boston

Dear Mrs. R.: Dr. Albert I. Mendeloff, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, says that excess weight is the most serious problem among adult-onset diabetics. It is possible that an increase in dietary fiber will have some effect on your husband's appetite and he may therefore lose some weight, but weight loss is the most important consideration.

For Charlie, Columbia, Md: Vitamins by themselves do not provide energy; however, they help transform foods into energy.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Sweeteners issue still in bitter controversy

By LINDA ANDERSON

First, it was the wonder of the century. Then it was linked to terrible diseases and other bodily ills — at least in laboratory rats ...

And now ... the next chapter of "The Continuing Controversy Over Artificial Sweeteners!"

Many people who consume sugar substitutes are not prepared to sacrifice diet soft drinks and other artificially-sweetened items, but at the same time they are concerned about the safety of these sweeteners.

The American Council on Science and Health, which claims it is an independent, non-profit consumer education group to promote scientifically balanced evaluations on food, chemicals, environment and health, has published "Low-Calorie Sweeteners."

The publication reveals its findings on saccharin, aspartame and even cyclamates, which were banned in the United States in 1970.

The ACSH concluded "saccharin should be regarded as a safe food additive" because "extensive scientific research has failed to confirm the suspicion that the use of saccharin might increase the risk of bladder cancer in humans."

According to the brochure, the ACSH concluded edivence did not justify the ban in 1979. And since that time, research has been more extensive. ACSH's executive director is quoted as saying "results have been uniformly reassuring. They further strengthen the case for saccharin's safety."

According to the brochure, testing of aspartame, the substance contained in the brand NutraSweet, proved to be a safe food ingredient. With the exception of persons victim of medical problems which require a low-phenylaline diet, the ACSH concluded adults and children can consume aspartame safely.

The brochure also addresses the subject of cyclamates and speculates "favorable possibilities" for its reapproval, because "substantial scientific evidence contradicts the suspicion of carcinogenicity which led its ban in 1969-70."

It seems the ACSH findings concluded all three artificial sweeteners are safe in "normal" use.

A copy of the brochure "Low-Calorie Sweeteners" is available to consumers by sending a self-addressed stamped (37-cents postage) business-size envelope to Low-Calorie Sweetener Report, ACSH, 47 Maple St., Summit, N.J. 07901.

Remember, though, this controversy will probably continue...

CURIOUS SHOPPER

There's more than one way to decaffeinate coffee

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I read the question and reply regarding decaffeinated coffee that was in your column. I understand that different companies use other methods of decaffeination besides the one described by Ann Dries of Nestle's.

I would very much appreciate a list of the different brands of decaffeinated coffee in which each brand is followed by the method and solvent used. Then I will be able to make an intelligent decision as to which one I prefer to use. Since I have had to eliminate caffeine from my diet because of a heart problem, this is important to me. Virginia Olson, Pensacola, Fla.

A. The decaffeinating method described by Ann Dries in a previous column employs the chemical methylene chloride, which is a simple but powerful solvent.

According to an article in "FDA Consumer" by Chris Lecos, "Most if not all companies use methylene chloride to extract caffeine. Trichloroethylene (TCE) was widely used until the mid-1970s when the National Cancer Institute issued a 'memorandum of alert' that high doses of TCE induced liver cancer in mice. Companies voluntarily stopped using it after 1975."

The director of technical services at the MJB Company informs us that they, too, use methylene chloride to extract caffeine from their coffee, and according to the Food and Drug Administration regulations, residues of this chemical in roasted coffee beans must not exceed 10 parts per million. Jay LeVan of MJB claims their coffee contains much less than that.

Procter & Gamble's Donald Tassone of the public affairs department reports that his company, which makes High Point decaf, uses a different chemical called ethyl acetate. This is also a simple but powerful solvent.

Tassone likes to describe it this way: "Ethyl acetate occurs naturally in a number of foods such as apples, bananas and pineapples. Ethyl acetate has been used as a decaffeinating agent for many years in Europe, and is approved as safe and effective for this use in the U.S."

Tassone claims that only trace amounts of the chemical remain in the coffee, and that you would have to drink more than 500 cups of instant High Point to consume the amount of ethyl acetate found in one banana.

Nestle, makers of Nescafe decaf and Taster's Choice decaf, uses still another process to decaffeinate coffee. Carol Epstein of their consumer affairs department reports that Nestle has developed a process which utilizes only natural substances, and is done with a component occurring naturally in the coffee bean itself, not involving the addition of any foreign substance or solvent.

"Since it is of a proprietary nature, with patents pending," says Epstein, "we are unable to provide additional information at this time."

One decaffeinating method apparently not used by the major companies is the water extraction method. Hot water is recycled continuously through the beans until 97 percent of the caffeine is removed. The water draws the caffeine out. The water then becomes heavily laden with caffeine, and in order to save the caffeine so it can be sold to drug companies, the solvent methylene chloride is used to draw the caffeine off the water.

The water is then recycled, almost free of chemicals but not quite. Then this water, with its trace amount of chemical solvent in it, is recycled through the beans again.

Beans decaffeinated by the water extraction method are sold at some health-food stores and are advertised as chemical-free beans. They are quite expensive.

The caffeine content of decaf coffees varies by brand of coffee. High Point claims 1 to 3 mg per cup; Sanka, 2 to 5 mg per cup; Nescafe and Taster's Choice, 5 to 6 mg per cup.

Q. My husband and I have crossed the country many times by car and we always take hard-boiled eggs with us. We keep them in a bag on the front seat and don't keep them cold in any way, yet they always taste good.

We were wondering how long eggs, hard-boiled, can stay good both with refrigeration and without refrigeration. Would a hard-boiled egg still be good after a year in the refrigerator?

A. Kay Englehardt, test kitchen supervisor at the American Egg Board, says that you are extremely lucky in not having experienced a serious encounter with food poisoning.

Contrary to popular opinion, hard-cooked eggs spoil more quickly than raw eggs. The reason for this is that cooking removes the protective coating on the egg shell and spoilage organisms can enter through the pores of the shell. An egg shell contains at least 7,500 tiny pores, and although the shell looks impenetrable, it is not.

Based on the Egg Board's research studies on the storage life of hard-cooked eggs, the board recommends a week to 10 days for hard-cooked eggs which have been cooled and refrigerated immediately after cooking, and a maximum of 16 hours if unrefrigerated.

Q. Every Christmas I make candied orange peels for friends. I never realized that oranges have a coat of wax on them until I read this column. Now I'm wondering whether to make these treats again. Can I possibly get this wax off? May Blount, Waterbury, Conn.

A. The Sunkist people say there is nothing to be concerned about, that the wax they put on their oranges is edible and there is no reason to remove the wax before using the peel.

Barbara Torres, a registered dietitian with Sunkist, says that this waxing is not a new practice. It was started in 1922, and just about all the citrus fruit grown in California has been waxed since the 1940s.

To get dust and debris off the oranges when they come in from the orchard, the fruit goes through a soak in detergents plus a scrubbing, which removes the natural wax coating. A man-made wax is then put on the oranges, a highly refined paraffin from which harmful components have supposedly been removed.

It is difficult for me to see how oranges coming in from the orchard would be so covered with dust and debris that a detergent scrubbing is in order.

I should think a simple water rinsing would suffice, unless the intent is to remove the natural wax coating so that a glossier, heavier wax could be applied, making the orange brighter and fresher looking. Since the man-made wax has a petroleum base, I think I would give the oranges another detergent scrubbing before making the candied peels.

Marriage attributes listed

Copley News Service

Dr. Robert Lauer, dean of the School of Human Behavior at USIU, and his wife, Jeannette, associate professor of history at USIU, have studied the characteristics of a long-lasting happy marriage.

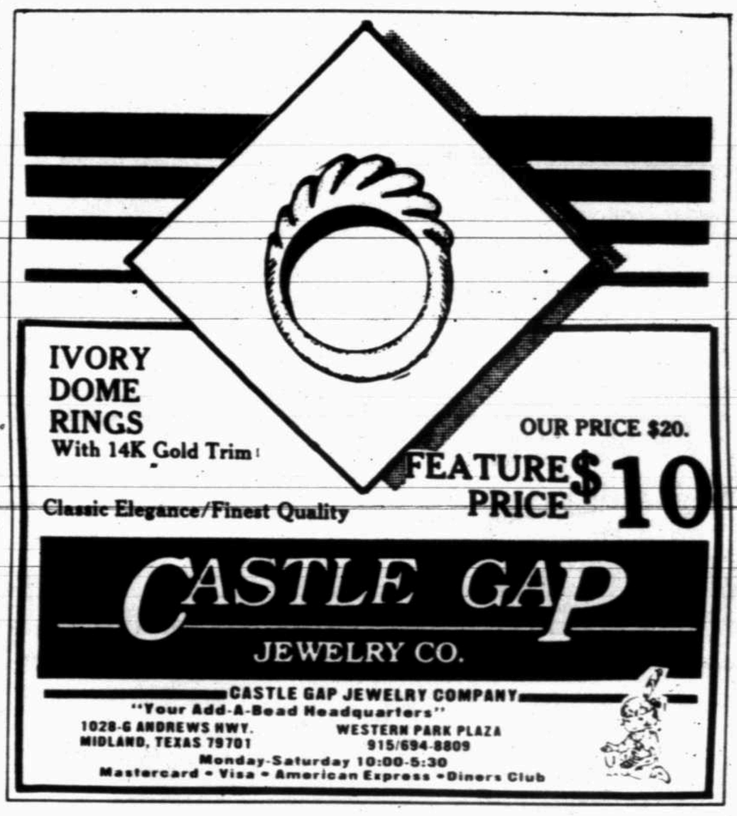

Their interviews with more than 300 couples in marriages lasting at least 15 years revealed that:

— Couples in a happy marriage genuinely like and respect each other. Husband and wife consider their spouse to be their best friend and generally would rather be in the company of that person than with anyone else.

— Happy couples had their major conflicts over the years, but always kept in mind that "the relationship was more important than any issue that came up," Robert Lauer said. Happy couples would argue by focusing on the issue rather than the person.

— Happy couples tended to spend most of their leisure time together.

— And they realized that marriage is rarely a 50-50 proposition. Said Lauer: "They seemed to know that sometimes you have to give 80 percent and get only 20 percent and realize that over time, it tends to balance out."

Vitamins should meet guidelines

Copley News Service

While the amounts and varieties of vitamins taken vary from person to person, the reasons for taking them are often the same.

Nutritional insurance, say the majority of Americans surveyed. Other reasons, in order of preference: to increase strength and vitality, to improve health, to compensate for stress, to prevent disease and to treat such maladies as colds or the flu.

The majority of people take multivitamins in safe dosages, reports Charles Marshall, Ph.D., author of "Vitamins and Minerals: Help or Harm?" But the multivitamins they are taking vary considerably in levels of nutrients, according to a study by Linda Schaffer Bell, a registered dietitian at Yale-New Haven Hospital who analyzed 41 adult multivitamin supplements.

She found that seven of the 41 had what she considered appropriate levels of vitamins and found that eight contained the recommended daily allowance for iron, a difficult nutrient to obtain from dietary sources.

Bell considered a supplement appropriate if it supplied 50 percent to 200 percent of the RDA for 10 vitamins and a variety of minerals. She found that stress supplements were the most inconsistent in content, with only a few containing folic acid, iron or vitamin E.

Drycleaning problems not always cleaner's fault

By LINDA TRUITT

Most of us go through life and never have a problem with drycleaning. We take our garments to the cleaners confident our property will be returned and ready to use again.

Unfortunately drycleaning complaints do occur. People occasionally complain to the Better Business Bureau that their garments were damaged by the drycleaning process and they hold the drycleaner responsible. While in some cases this is true, in most instances the drycleaner is not at fault.

The legal liability of a drycleaner is limited to the use of ordinary care in the handling of your merchandise. Without evidence that he has been negligent or failed to use accepted methods in servicing your garments, the cleaner is not liable for damage — actual or imagined — to your goods.

If the garment is damaged in the drycleaning process, others might be responsible — including you. I recall taking a scarf to be drycleaned assuming it was not washable. Drycleaning made the colors fade and mix together. Before complaining I read the fabric tag that instructed me to "Hand wash — Do not Dry-clean." I learned to always read the care tag.

Also, chemical damage is responsible for many problems. Spills from medicines, certain food substances and household cleaning products will cause stains that are insoluble in nature.

In many instances the problem is caused by the manufacturer who makes garments which are sometimes constructed of non-serviceable materials and fabrics. Using nonfast dyes and combining incompatible fabrics causes many consumers to complain.

Blaming the cleaner or retailer for non-serviceable merchandise is unfair, and getting the manufacturer to accept responsibility is often difficult.

The International Fabricare Institute in Maryland, an independent organization, provides help. Experts will examine damaged garments and objectively report on the cause and responsiblity. If the problem is determined to be the manufacturer's fault, the consumer can use this evidence to negotiate a settlement.

Here are some common-sense, but often neglected, hints for receiving the best drycleaning service:

— Decorative buttons or ornaments should be removed prior to drycleaning in order to retain their beauty and prevent damage.

— Customers should tell the drycleaner the nature of special stains if known and whether first-aid measures have been tried. Old stains that have "set" can be stubborn or impossible to remove.

— Objects which may be damaged or lost, such as cuff links or belts should be removed.

— Consumers should handle launderable garments with care. Manufacturers recommend washing methods which should be followed.

— If an article needs to be restored to a like-new condition, the customer should ask about the cleaner's special services.

— Knitted garments should be measured if there is any question of shrinkage. These can be restored by shaping.

Fake birth control pills recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pharmaceutical company is recalling more than 1 million birth control pills because low-strength counterfeit versions that may not prevent pregnancy are in circulation, according to the Food and Drug Administration.

The counterfeiting is under investigation by the agency and the FBI has been notified, the FDA said Thursday. But the supplier of the counterfeit versions of two lots of Ovulen-21 has not been located.

The G.D. Searle Co., based in Skokie, Ill., is recalling voluntarily all packages of Ovulen-21 with the lot numbers 441 and 489 following the expiration date on the right side of the foil blister pack which contains the tablets.

The FDA said the numbers are not found on the outside envelope containing the foil blister pack. It said the numbers should not be confused with the number 401 that is imprinted on one side of each tablet.

Persons with tablets from the two Ovulen lots are to contact their pharmacists. Pharmacists will receive information from the company to enable them to determine whether the pills are counterfeit.

Complaints to the manufacturer about abnormal bleeding — two cases in Olathe, Kan., and one in Clearwater, Fla. — led to the discovery of the counterfeiting.

A pharmacist in Racine, Wis., reported having received a forged product and one in Chicago inquired about why his latest batch of pills cost so much less than did earlier lots.

Middle names given for different reasons, tastes

Hearst News Service

Do the names John Quincy Adams, William Henry Harrison and James Knox Polk ring a bell? All were presidents to be sure, but they had something in common besides the presidency. Of the first 17 U.S. presidents, they were the only ones to have middle names.

Nowadays, it would be unlikely to run for president or do anything else without a middle name. Nearly all of us have them. And since Calvin Coolidge was elected 30th president in 1924, all presidents have had middle names.

A middle moniker is a fairly recent invention. No one on the Mayflower had a middle name, and only three of the signers of the Declaration of Independence — Francis Lightfoot Lee, Richard Henry Lee and Robert Treat Paine — had one. As any onomast (one who studies the science of proper names) can tell you, the ancient Romans used middle names. But in western Europe, middle names began appearing around the time of the Renaissance.

"The middle name did not grow up in western Europe till rather late, certainly later than the 1400s, and in England around the time of the English renaissance, between 1500 and 1550," said Kelsie Harder, professor of English at State University of New York-Potsdam and editor of "Names," the journal of the American Name Society.

But if people managed for centuries without them, why did parents begin hanging a second given name on their offspring?

"One important purpose was to distinguish two Johns or Henrys from one another, particularly for people with common names like Smith or Jones," said Elsdon C. Smith, who has written several books on names. "Another reason was to give a person a choice in later life. A lot of people use (as their first name) what started out as a middle name."

For example, Woodrow Wilson was born Thomas Woodrow Wilson. But the ranks of those who chose a middle name to go by is by no means restricted to presidents and politicians.

As a young man, the author of "Main Street" was an unimpressive Harry S. Lewis, Christopher Andersen points out in his book, "The Name Game." Dropping his first name and spelling out his second, Harry S. became Sinclair Lewis.

According to Smith, use of an initial between the given name and surname is a distinctly American custom, serving the useful purpose of identifying an individual among others with the same names.

The letter "S" that parts Harry S Truman's name stood for nothing; it was his middle name. The letter was a compromise worked out by the future president's parents so as not to offend either of his grandparents.

Robots will become farm workers

SOLON, Ohio (AP) — Advanced farm technology will be needed to help feed the world's growing population, and the key to increased productivity will be "space age" electronics, according to a maker of electronic components.

Trevor O. Jones of TRW says, "Driverless tractors, harvesting by robots, computer feed of animals, and satellite-fed weather information will be commonplace on America's farms in 1990."

DEAR ABBY

Should America change her tune?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I think it's time we changed our national anthem because "The Star-Spangled Banner" is practically unsingable. Also the tune was taken from an old English drinking song.

At the last presidential inauguration, Willie Nelson left out "the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air."

Abby, if professional singers goof up, how can we expect school children to remember the words?

Some alternatives:

"America the Beautiful." But with all those references to God, I suppose the atheists would object.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" would be wonderful; the "Glory, glory, hallelujah" part is very inspirational. Children would love it.

"God Bless America" would be the easiest to sing, but the atheists wouldn't approve of that one either.

How did "The Star-Spangled Banner" get to be our national anthem, anyway? And what would it take to change it? — PATRIOTIC IN SAN ANGELO, TEXAS

DEAR PATRIOTIC: An act of Congress was signed into law by President Hoover in 1931 making "The Star-Spangled Banner" our national anthem.

In order to change it, that law would have to be repealed and another law passed to replace it.

In the past, attempts have been made to oust "The Star-Spangled Banner," but they fell flat, so the melody lingers on.

DEAR ABBY: As the activity director of the Hillcrest Nursing Home in Twin Lakes, Wis., it's my responsibility to provide our 84 residents with entertainment and activities to make their golden years more enjoyable.

Two years ago I started what we call the Dear Abby Hour. It is very popular among our residents since many can no longer read. I turn to your column in the Kenosha (Wis.) News, and first I read aloud the "problem" that was written in. Then the residents take turns supplying the advice.

We discuss all the subjects that come up in your column — politics, sex, marriage, free love, child abuse and whether or not there is a left sock and a right sock. Some of the answers our 80- and 90-years-olds think up are better than yours, and funnier, too.

I thought you might like to know that the attendance at our Dear Abby Hour is higher than our current events sessions.

So thank you, from all of us, for the fun and entertainment your column provides. — K.I. IN TWIN LAKES, WIS.

DEAR K.I.: Thank you, K.I., and all the residents at Hillcrest. I just hope none of you decides to start a new career in your golden years.

DEAR ABBY: This letter concerns the Pennsylvania Dutchman's 80-year-old cousin who fathered a son by his 24-year-old wife.

A rather reliable source once told me of this big-game hunter on a safari who wandered away from camp with only a walking cane. He was confronted by a huge tiger ready to pounce on him, so he raised his cane, aimed it between the tiger's eyes and the beast fell dead at his feet! There was another hunter behind him with a REAL gun.

Perhaps the 24-year-old wife encountered another hunter with a real gun, too. — JERROLD F. JACOB, BELLEVIEW, FLA.

Prepare autos for winter

Hearst News Service

When it comes to outfitting your car for winter, experts say a penny-wise-pound-foolish attitude that discounts the value of preventive maintenance and minor repairs may catch up with you on a frigid night as you sit waiting for a tow truck.

Minor repairs left undone have a way of swelling to major proportions. A cracked engine block caused by overheating brings with it a $1,000 repair bill. Not all repairs are that drastic or expensive, but aside from the obvious safety considerations of driving a car that's unprepared for winter, it's much cheaper to replace a bulging radiator hose before it ruptures than to find yourself stranded, helplessly watching the fluid pour out. A good rule-of-thumb for hoses is: If it's over four years old, replace it!

Experts generally agree the place to start with your winter prep is a general tune up, oil change and lube. Check all drive belts for frays, cracks and proper tension. Include a timing check and reset the timing to conform with the specifications in your owner's manual.

Faulty batteries, damaged wires, cracked distributor caps and worn spark plugs can contribute to starting problems and sudden breakdowns. In-line filters, which filter out water from fuel, should be replaced. If you don't routinely use a multi-viscosity motor oil, put in winter-weight oil and change the filter.

Batteries take a beating in cold weather. At 0 degree F, a battery produces about half as much power as one at 80 degrees F. Have the battery charge and fluid level checked. Battery terminals, posts and cable clamps should be clean and tight. A home-grown method is to make a paste of baking soda and water and use a toothbrush to clean terminals. Even with self-contained "freedom batteries," it's a good idea to have the starting voltage checked.

All exterior lights should work. Turn them on and then walk around the car to see if they're all functioning.

Advice on anti-freeze varies. Some experts recommend changing anti-freeze if it's rusty or more than a year old. Others advise flushing out radiators and putting in new anti-freeze every two years because of chemical breakdown. With unleaded fuel, which runs hotter than leaded, chemical breakdown is faster. Put in enough coolant to protect the engine down to -30 degrees F.

Reduced visibility coupled with salt spray from salt-treated icy roads makes new windshield wiper blades essential. If your blades streak the window, replace them. Flush the washer reservoir with clean water and refill with new washing solution that is freeze resistant.

Check the exhaust and heating system for leaks to prevent carbon monoxide from getting into the passenger compartment. If you find yourself stuck in the snow, and are running the engine, be sure to open a window, get out of the car and clear the exhaust pipe. And make sure both the heater and defroster systems are in good working order.

Crime insurance recovers losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Hotels and motels, which incur an average annual loss of $750 per bed because of employee theft, are frequently unaware of special insurance that can help recover the losses, according to an official of an insurance and crime investigation firm.

Sandy Beck of Royal-Schutt International says fidelity bonding for employees can often recoup losses, but that many hotel security officials are not aware of how to fulfill the requirements of those policies to proceed in obtaining reimbursement.

'Places in the Heart' based on family history

By LESLIE BENNETTS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When Robert Benton was a little boy growing up in Waxahachie, family-stories were as much a part of the atmosphere around him as the heat and dust of a scorching Texas summer. His family had lived in Waxahachie for five generations, and there were several times as many tales as there were aunts and uncles and cousins and grandparents and great-grandparents, since there were at least two or three versions of each story — like the one about his daddy's brother, who started having an affair with a very young lady and was shot to death by her outraged father, or the one about his daddy's other brother, who was also shot to death, this time by a man who chased him down Main Street in a Model-T Ford, firing all the way, for reasons never entirely clear but having to do with the bootlegging wars raging in the area at the time.

Then there was the story of little Robert's great-grandfather, the local sheriff, who got called away from Sunday dinner one quiet afternoon to go down to the railroad track and pacify a drunk. The drunk shot him; the sheriff's body was brought home and laid out on the dining room table, and his killer — who was black — was caught and murdered by a grim white mob that dragged his body through the streets of town, right past the house of the sheriff's widow and four horrified children, so they could see that vengeance had been taken.

Former Beatle Paul McCartney, left, chats with Julian Lennon — son of the late John Lennon, also a former Beatle — during a break in taping sessions for segments of NBC-TV's "Friday Night Videos" which will air Nov. 16. Their meeting was accidental and came about because Lennon was caught in traffic and arrived late for his taping session. It was the first time they had met in 10 years.

ROBERT BENTON grew up to live on Manhattan's Upper East Side, leaping in the space of a few years infinitely farther from the topography and spirit of Waxahachie than his ancestors had traveled in generations. The grandson of a tenant farmer-and-saloon-keeper, he himself became a film writer and director, earning his first Academy Award nomination for co-writing the screenplay of "Bonnie and Clyde" and winning double awards for writing and directing "Kramer vs. Kramer."

But Waxahachie had retained an indelible hold on Benton's imagination as well as his emotions, and two years ago — the year he turned 50 — the filmmaker began to work in earnest on his own tribute to his family's past. The result is "Places in the Heart," the critically acclaimed movie which stars Sally Field as Edna Spalding, a gentle young mother suddenly left to support her children alone when her husband, the town sheriff, is accidentally shot to death by a drunk down at the railroad track one peaceful Sunday afternoon.

The film actually had its genesis nine years ago in a lunch conversation with Arthur Penn, who directed "Bonnie and Clyde" and is a close friend of Benton's. "I was telling stories about Texas, and he said, 'You ought to put those stories down — they'd make a wonderful movie,' " Benton recalls.

Over the next few years, he did a good deal of research, primarily into bootlegging, about which he became something of an expert. "There was a time when I could have brewed my own liquor," Benton says with a smile.

But he grew increasingly dissatisfied with his initial version of the script. "I had become very worried, because I felt the bootlegging story had gotten too violent," Benton reports. "So I remembered these stories about my great-grandmother and thought, 'Why don't I see if I can bring her in as a minor character.' And from the time I put her into the script, she began to push the bootleggers out."

She ended up ousting them entirely; there is not even the merest whiff of a bootlegger in "Places in the Heart." There is, however, much historical reality. As in that long-ago real life, the sheriff is shot by young black man who is killed and dragged through the streets by a wagon, then strung up from a tree. The panicky young widow, who doesn't even know how to write a check, learns to support her family by farming and by selling home-grown produce, preserves, eggs, milk and bread. As in life, she is taught to farm — and to cope — by a black hired hand named Moses.

IN THE MOVIE, Moses is finally run out of town by the local Ku Klux Klan, which consists of the town's most prominent citizens, who cannot forgive the black man for being a better cotton farmer and a smarter businessman than they are. However, the heightening of underlying racial attitudes for dramatic effect is one of the filmmaker's fictional contributions. "The real Moze was never driven out of town by the KKK," Benton notes. "He stayed and took care of my mother as she was growing up, which is how a lot of the stories came down to me."

Another of the film's major characters, a young blind man who comes to live on the farm as a boarder, is based on Benton's great-uncle, from whom the filmmaker borrowed mannerisms, habits and even his profession as one who supports himself by caning chairs and making brooms.

However, Benton has set his film during the hard Depression years of the mid-1930s, rather than in his great-grandmother's 19th century, for a simple reason — "because I could remember that time very well," he explains.

2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.
