COMING SUNDAY

Penny-ante-up

A shortage of pennies in Midland, as elsewhere in the nation, could concern more than just piggy-bank peddlers and poker players. Virtually everyone could suffer — slightly — under the shortage. Read about it in Sunday's business section.

Band-ing together

Not only is it hot marching in those heavy band uniforms, but it also gets a little warm when wearing only shorts and T-shirts. Read about the long, sweltering month of practice put in by Midland's high school bands in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Well-wrested

Tuesday night wrestling at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum is based on the premise that anyone will believe anything if it's packaged just right. Find out about the blood, sweat and jeers that mark this sporting event in Sunday's Lifestyle section.

Law revisions allow Odessa to buy 6 MEV

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Recent changes in federal legislation will enable Medical Center Hospital in Odessa to purchase a 6 MEV (6 Million Electron Volt Accelerator), after a two-year heated battle between Midland and Odessa over whether the cancer therapy machine would be a duplication of Midland Memorial Hospital's 6 MEV.

John Neel, general counsel for the Texas Health Facilities Commission, said today THFC has adopted the congressional revisions, which will be effective Oct. 1.

According to a Washington spokesman for Rep. Kent Hance, whose district includes Midland, the July 31 revisions in health planning systems was included in the Reconciliation Package Bill HR 3982. A small part of that bill involved raising the ceiling on hospital expenditures without requiring state approval.

Among the amended provisions, item two of the four revisions involves hospital expenditures and calls for raising the threshold for mandated review of captial expenditures from 150,000 to $600,000; lifting the ceiling for major medical equipment purchases from $150,000 to $400,000 and upping the limit for operational costs associated with new services from $75,000 to $250,000.

These changes would allow Medical Center Hospital to update its cancer equipment without a certificate of need from the THFC.

But, according to MMH Administrator Ray Branson, "The hospital's attorney said no law has been changed in the state of Texas, nor has a rule been promulgated to effect this increased limits."

Branson added that if these changes do occur, "it would appear through the relaxation of these rules we will be in a situation similar to the period prior to the planning laws when hospitals could acquire equipment and make physical changes as they basically saw fit."

Midland and Odessa had maintained a continuous battle for the 6 MEV, state-of-the-art, cancer thera-

Meeting sought on Korean incident

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The U.N. military command called today for a meeting of the Military Armistice Command that oversees the truce between North and South Korea, hours after the United States said one of its spy planes may have been fired at.

There was not any accompanying statement indicating that the reported firing of a missile from North Korea in the vicinity of an American spy plane would be the subject of the meeting.

The command said only that North Korea had not yet replied to the request for a meeting Saturday at Panmunjom, the truce village in the demilitarized zone dividing South and North Korea.

In Tokyo, the Kyodo News Service reported that North Korea had not issued any comment, officially or unofficially, on the report that it tried to shoot down a an American SR-71 aircraft. In a dispatch from the North Korean capital of Pyongang, the Japanese news service reported that there was no mention of the report in the nation's mass media.

A Pentagon announcement in Washington said a missile apparently launched from North Korea exploded in the vicinity of a U.S. Air Force reconnaissance plane Wednesday. It said the missile missed the high-altitude jet by several miles.

Kyodo also said that North Koreans neither confirmed nor denied the report to reporters covering an International Conference on Agriculture in Nonaligned and Developing Countries under way in Pyongyang. North Korean President Kim Il Sung gave a banquet for conference delegates today, the nation's official Korean Central News Agency said.

The South Korean Defense Ministry, meanwhile, denounced what it called an attack on the American plane as a serious military provocation.

The report from Washington said the SR-71 aircraft, known as the "Blackbird," was flying a routine mission in South Korean and international air space. It said the incident posed no threat to the plane, which later landed safely.

While not directly accusing the North Koreans of firing at the plane, the Pentagon said that if a missile was launched it could have come from any of a number of launching sites in North Korea.

Activities of the SR-71 aircraft normally are not acknowledged publicly here. The Washington account said it was known that the plane has been used in past years to spy on China and Vietnam, and there have been unconfirmed reports that it had been used to make photographs of North Korea.

The armistice commission was established to deal with violations of the truce that ended the fighting in the 1950-53 Korean war.

South Korean Defense Ministry spokesman Park Chong-shik claimed the latest incident, as well as the reported intrusion of North Korean MiG jet fighters over Paengnyong Island Aug. 12, "Proved that the communist North is always committing military adventures."

High interest rates nation's worst woe

WASHINGTON (AP) — High interest rates, called a side-effect of President Reagan's cure for inflation, now are showing signs of becoming the worst economic woe themselves.

The latest quarterly survey conducted for the National Federation of Independent Businesses says inflation, the leading economic enemy of the 1970s, has given way to interest rates as the top problem of companies.

The president of the National Association of Home Builders, whose members have been especially hard hit, complained this week that "exorbitantly high interest rates are replacing inflation as the nation's No. 1 problem."

And the U.S. Chamber of Commerce says it is receiving more calls about interest rates than inflation.

Some economists and politicians suspect consumers also are starting to regard interest rates as the economy's leading problem, particularly people who are unable to buy a house because of record mortgage rates.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said last week that interest rates could be the "sleeper issue" of the 1982 congressional elections unless they come down soon.

"I am very much concerned that we are going to be identified as the party of high interest unless the issue is addressed at a high level by the president," Pressler warned other Republicans.

Reagan acknowledged the concern Thursday night at a California GOP fundraiser but said the government suffers, too, because high interest rates drive up the federal deficit.

"They are hurting us in what we are trying to do as much as they are hurting everyone else," he said.

Worries about interest rates have intensified in the past few months because the cost of borrowing money is persisting at record levels despite a significant decline in the inflation rate.

Inflation is now running just under 10 percent a year, down from 13.3 percent in 1979 and 12.4 percent in 1980. But short-term borrowing rates are sticking at 20 percent or higher and mortgage interest rates have climbed in recent months to a record 17 percent.

Administration economists say the high rates are a painful but necessary side-effect of Reagan's plan to bring inflation down by restricting the growth of the nation's money supply.

This tight-money policy has produced high interest rates, but only temporarily, according to the administration, which insists interest rates are bound to fall sooner or later as inflation continues to recede and as the president's tax cut encourages increased personal savings that can be tapped for lending.

Lozano's injuries possibly accidental

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The lethal injuries suffered by an allegedly berserk 27-year-old Ector County jail inmate Larry Lozano more than 2½ years ago while he was being quelled by several lawmen could have been by mishap.

"Could they have been accidentally inflicted?" defense attorney Jim Nelson asked Houston pathologist Dr. Joesph A. Jachimczyk in closing testimony during the federal civil case here late Thursday afternoon.

"Yes, sir," replied Dr. Jachimczyk.

"Would those injuries be consistent with someone banging their head against a window?"

"Yes, sir," the pathologist again answered.

The civil case, which cropped up after Lozano sympathizers failed to get Odessa jailers and sheriff's deputies indicted at the state and federal level and failed to prove that his civil rights were violated, pits the Pecos man's two sons against a score of lawmen and former lawmen, including ex-Sheriff Elton Faught.

The jurors were to hear final arguments this morning before retiring to deliberate on the case being presided over by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Ruben Sandoval, the Mexican-American advocate-lawyer who is attorney for Lozano's two sons in the wrongful-death case, is seeking to convince a federal jury that Lozano's civil and constitutional rights were violated while he was an inmate and that his death was due to negligence and undue force to contain Lozano, who supposedly was a "very" powerful man.

TESTIMONY Thursday indicated that Lozano had suffered 115 wounds while he was an inmate for 12 days in the jail. He had been arrested following a traffic mishap after his pickup truck ran off a road and into a field.

"What's your opinion?" Sandoval asked Jachimczek of the causes of Lozano's injuries to his face, neck, arms, legs and abdomen.

"They were not self-inflicted," the doctor said. "The cause of death was trauma — injury to the neck."

In the wake of Lozano's death in January 1978, Sheriff Elton Faught had called a news conference to announce that the man's death was a suicide.

Jachimchek's findings were based on reviews of autopsy reports by pathologists Dr. Kris Challapalli of Odessa and Dr. Frederick Bornstein of El Paso, by his examination of microscopic slides of Lozano's tissue and his voice-box. He had testified that Lozano died of asphyxia — suffocation — presumably while the lawmen were trying to protect Lozano from himself.

ANOTHER PATHOLOGIST, Dr. R. Santos of McAllen, who examined photographs, slides and autopsy reports, said Lozano's injuries may

Hinckley enters plea of not guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. pleaded innocent today to charges of shooting President Reagan and three others and his attorney said defense psychiatrists feel the 26-year-old former drifter is competent to stand trial.

In a firm voice, Hinckley responded "not guilty" after the 13-count indictment was read to him as he stood, sometimes straight, sometimes crossing one leg over the other, before U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker.

Parker ruled that Hinckley was competent to participate in the arraignment, but has not yet ruled on his competency to stand trial.

Hinckley's attorney, Vincent J. Fuller, told the judge in response to a question that "in my opinion and the opinion (of defense psychiatrists) Mr. Hinckley is presently competent."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger M. Adelman told Parker "there's no information he's not competent" and added that a sealed psychiatric report on Hinckley "provides the basis also to find him competent."

Hinckley's white bullet-proof vest showed through his dark blue suit.

Defense attorney Fuller said Hinckley may plead not guilty by reason of insanity, but added that he needs an additional 30 days to have defense psychiatrists complete their examination of Hinckley to decide whether such a defense will be raised.

"I'm not at that point now where I can raise an insanity defense," Fuller told Parker. "They (the psychiatrists) can tell me in 30 days."

Parker told Fuller to file any pre-trial motions within 30 days and Fuller said he would probably ask that the trial be postponed indefinitely because of pre-trial publicity and ask that Hinckley be released on bail.

Parker set a hearing for Tuesday to argue a motion by Fuller that contends Hinckley's constitutional rights were being violated because prison officials were reading what he wrote while in prison. The bail motion also will be argued Tuesday.

Fuller and Adelman at one point haggled over Hinckley's place of confinement with Fuller asking that the defendant be kept at the brig at the Quantico, Va., Marine base where he's currently being held so that the defense could have easy access to Hinckley.

Adelman said the government "objects strenuously" to an order naming a specific place of confinement because "it may be in the future that we have to move him elsewhere."

Adelman told the judge he expected the government to present its case in three or four days, but added the trial could take considerably longer if Fuller raises an insanity defense and turns the testimony into a battle of competing psychiatrists.

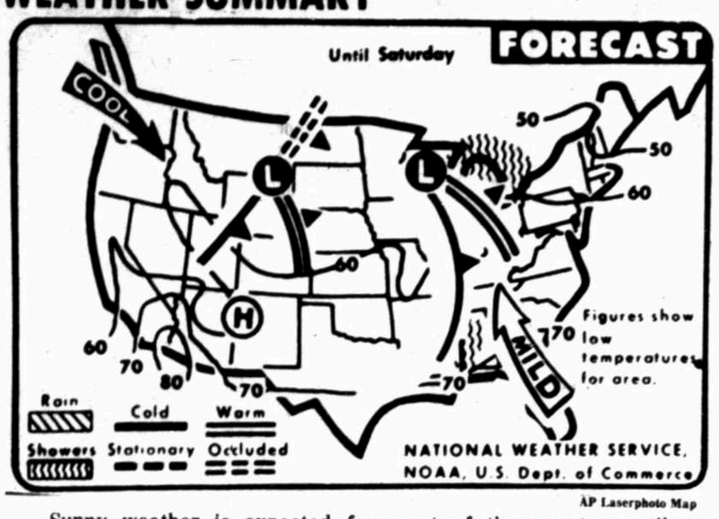

Before dawn today, Hinckley was moved from the Marine brig to the federal courthouse to await his arraignment.

Five of the 13 charges in connection with the March 30 shootings carry a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Heavy security, including metal detectors and bomb-sniffing dogs, was in place for today's appearance at the same federal courthouse where the Watergate trials were held. Extra contingents of police were called and the belongings of people entering the building were searched.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Hinckley was moved by "surface transportation" from the Quantico, Va., Marine base to the lock-up at the U.S. District Court building, avoiding reporters and spectators and arriving shortly after midnight Thursday.

Braniff to reduce non-Texas services

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International promises to unveil a new strategy next week that company excutives say could make the financially strapped airline an aggressive competitor in the Texas and Southwest market.

"A whole new Braniff will take off in September," Braniff president John J. Casey said Thursday.

He said the airline, which gave a hint of things to come with announcement of a new flight schedule Thursday, would detail its new strategy on Tuesday.

"The industry and the public demands are changing and we are meeting those changes with a very competitive and substantial improvement in our service," said Casey.

Company sources said Braniff is removing first-class seats from approximately 50 of its aircraft and replacing them with high-density coach seating for shorter, heavily traveled routes, company sources said.

The airline also plans a more competitive fare structure, the sources added.

Casey said Thursday Braniff would suspend service to Atlanta, Boston, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Albany, N.Y., Hartford, Conn. and Tucson, Ariz. But he said while Braniff will drop 10 daily flights to those cities, it will add flights to an unspecified number of cities it already serves.

He said the airline also will resume service to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and, temporarily, to Brownsville — two of nine routes suspended after the air controllers strike began Aug. 3.

However, Braniff vice president of routes and regulatory authority Robert Club said the airline would seek permission to stop service to Brownsville and fly instead to Harlingen, 20 miles north, to "better serve the whole (Rio Grande) Valley area.

"We are trying to consolidate the Valley operation and we feel that flying into a central location, like Harlingen, would best serve the entire area," Culp said.

Airline to resume service in Midland-Odessa area

Braniff International will resume its schedule of four daily flights on Sept. 9 to and from the Midland-Odessa area according to Mike Jolly, Braniff International sales director.

Two of Braniff's flights were temporarily suspended because of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers illegal walkout Aug. 3. Two days prior to the strike, Braniff began a new 4:50 p.m. flight which will now be resumed along with the previously canceled 6:25 a.m. flight.

Westbound to the Permian Basin flights at 3:20 p.m. and 9:35 will also resume on Sept. 9.

Officials lift the casket containing the body of Dennis McNell from a grave at the Forest Hills Annes Cemetery in Bridgton, Maine, Thursday. New York City officials requested the exhumation of the body to see whether foul play was involved with his death.

McNell autopsy shows death not caused by beating

NEW YORK (AP) — An autopsy showed that Dennis McNell, whose brothers' allegations of stock fraud led to the resignation of the CIA's top spy, did not die as a result of a beating, sources said today.

But the sources said specimens have been taken from McNell's body, which underwent an autopsy Thursday in Augusta, Maine, for further study. They said the results of those tests are expected some time next week.

At the time of McNell's death, the attending physician said he died of natural causes due to alcoholic cirrhosis and alcoholic hepatitis. The sources said the autopsy had revealed nothing to change that finding.

The autopsy, ordered after allegations of foul play in McNell's death surfaced, was performed after two days of unsuccessful efforts by McNell's family to block the exhumation from Forest Hills Cemetery near Bridgton, Maine.

Dr. Elliot Gross, New York City's chief medical examiner, and District Attorney John J. Santucci of the New York City borough of Queens were in a meeting today at the prsecutor's office.

Representatives for both men declined to comment but said a statement was expected later in the day.

Gross conducted the autopsy with Henry Ryan, Maine's chief medical examiner.

McNell, 41, collapsed at his Queens, N.Y., home May 31 after jogging. He died the next day at Queen's Elmhurst General Hospital. No autopsy was performed, and he was buried two days later.

Authorities began to suspect foul play after McNell's two brothers told The Washington Post that Max C. Hugel, who was then director of covert operations for the CIA, had illegally given them stock market information.

Hugel denied the allegations and resigned. The two brothers, Thomas and Samuel McNell, disappeared. The FBI said more than $3 million in funds were missing from a company Thomas McNell founded.

A former business associate of the McNell family told the Chicago Tribune Dennis McNell had been beaten on at least two occasions. The former associate said he thought the beatings were "a warning for the McNells to cool it with Hugel."

Gross, in a letter to Queens County District Attorney John Santucci, had said earlier that McNell died of a "possible ruptured spleen."

Sheriff calls out for election on courthouse steps

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A little bit before lunchtime today, Gregg County Sheriff Bobby Weaver was ordered to embarrass himself by standing on the steps of the courthouse and obeying the law.

That law required him to bellow out an order for all attorneys within earshot to gather around and hold an election.

And the man who ordered Weaver to make a spectacle of himself, County Court-at-law Judge Larry Starr, says he had no choice in the matter.

The sticky situation began earlier this month when the district attorney's office filed charges in Starr's court, accusing three members of the Gregg County Commissioners Court of violating the Texas Open Meetings Act.

Then, because Starr's salary and official budget are set by commissioners, the district attorney asked Starr to disqualify himself from hearing the cases.

"To avoid any taint, any color of interest, I determined that I should disqualify myself," Starr said, adding that he was then required to choose a special judge to hear the cases.

The qualifications were straightforward — county resident, licensed attorney, active in the practice of law for at least five years — but the method of selection is not.

"If the parties to the cases had been able to agree on a special judge then it (the appointment) would have been done by agreement," Starr continued. "But they were not able to agree. So, under the rather archaic statutes of the State of Texas and Article 30.03 of the Texas Code of Criminal procedure, it is necessary for me to call an election, conducted by 'the lawyers of the court present.'

"The election is proclaimed by the sheriff at the courthouse steps," said Starr, only slightly embarrassed by the old-fashioned procedures he was describing. "The law says such lawyers shall organize and elect a special judge."

But Starr admits he hedged his bets when it came to getting the lawyers together.

"I didn't have to, but I did write all the attorneys in the county and tell them what was going to happen so they would receive a little better notification than the sheriff yelling from the courthouse steps," he said.

Starr said an act introduced in the last session of the Legislature would have streamlined the procedures and jurisdictions of the 100 or so county courts at law in Texas. The measure failed, however.

Last of nerve gas bombs shipped

DENVER (AP) — The final shipment of deadly Weteye nerve gas bombs and GB nerve agent was sent from Colorado to Utah today after several delays this week due to bad weather, a spokesman for the Rocky Mountain Arsenal said.

Art Whitney, spokesman for the arsenal where the bombs have been housed, said the first shipment arrived at the Dugway Proving Grounds in western Utah at about 7:03 a.m. MDT, followed by the arrival of a second shipment five minutes later.

The last of the controversial shipments included 65 bombs.

Sunny weekend in forecast

For people who like to bronze their skin under blazing rays of the sun, it should be another beautiful weekend in Midland and the surrounding areas.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, skies should be fair tonight and sunny on Saturday.

The thermometer should dip to the middle 60s tonight and climb into the low 90s on Saturday.

Winds will be light and variable through Saturday.

Thursday's high of 91 missed the record high of 100 set for that date in 1977 by nine degrees. The record low of 60 set in 1970 was four degrees cooler than today's low of 64.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for most of Texas today as a weak cool front continued to move slowly southward.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies, scattered showers and thunderstorms and warm temperatures. Highs were to be mostly in the 90s except in the Panhandle where the mercury was expected to remain in the 80s.

Heavy thunderstorms were reported during the night in thee Panhandle and near Waco in Central Texas, but most of the heaviest activity died out before dawn. The heaviest rainfall during the night was at Waco where .81 of an inch fell.

Except for the Panhandle and Central Texas, most of the state had clear pre-dawn skies.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s in the western half of the state and in the 70s in northern and southern sections of the state.

Changes in federal legislation enable Odessa to buy 6 MEV

py machine since Midland first applied for a certicate of need in 1979. Since November 1980, when Odessa applied for the same machine, the controversy grew into a heated fight. Under health planning regulations, Odessa's application was viewed as duplicating services already provided in the Permian Basin area through Midland's Allison Cancer Therapy Center.

April hearings in Austin led to a THFC 2-1 denial of the application. Residents of Odessa appealed for a reconsideration of the decision and were again denied a certificate of need in early June. The board of commisioners, on June 26, upheld the 2-1 vote to deny the machine to Odessa when MCH officials appealed on their own behalf.

The previous limit of $150,000 for medical equipment required MMH to apply for a certificate of need from the THFC for its 6 MEV costing about $250,000. But with the ceiling increased by the federal government, MCH — or any hospital — can now purchase medical equipment costing up to $400,000 without gaining state approval.

"Indeed, if this is the case, we will be able to purchase the replacement equipment to update our cancer therapy facilities, but we will still remain at the same (facility) level," MCH Administrator Sam Glenney said.

But Branson still contends the equipment is a duplication of services in the Permian Basin Health System Agency Area 12.

"As far as Odessa duplicating the 6 MEV housed in the Allison Cancer Center, if these changes are in fact law, then they have the privilege of making that decision irrespective of what may exist in the area," Branson said. "It still remains true that this represents a duplication and that it does in fact upgrade the service provided by their cobalt."

Glenney said the hospital will update its cancer therapy equipment with a $358,000 6 MEV "probably in four to six months, or as long as nine months depending on the purchase ordering time."

Larry Lozano's injuries may have been accidental

have been both intentional and accidental.

"Can you tell if they were accidental or intentional," Sandoval asked Santos.

"Some of them may have been intentional," he said. "I believe injuries to the neck were the results of compression."

All told, the Lozano side summoned 27 witnesses, including the ex-sheriff, jailers, deputies and Lozano's ex-wife. The defense, which represented the lawmen, brought in seven witnesses, including Jachimczyk.

THE EX—WIFE, Rufina Lozano, characterized Lozano as a good, concerned father of their two sons, Randy Rene, 7, and Lawrence Derek, 10. The suit was filed in their behalf.

Mrs. Lozano said that she and Lozano were married in Pecos in January 1970 and were divorced in January 1977, a year before his death.

She was queried about his emotional-mental state.

"He had some nervous breakdown or something like that (in August 1977)," she testified, "and he committed himself to Austin State Hospital.

However, testimony by Austin Policemen Randy Malone and Gary Duty suggested that Lozano was committed for treatment to the hospital after he was arrested for simple assault on Aug. 3, 1977, at an Austin gasoline station.

Testimony by Elvis Shaw, a semi-professional football player who was an attendant at the station then, indicated that Lozano got upset after he found out the station would put differential grease in his car, as the station had no ramp for such serving.

THE 6-FOOT-3 SHAW, who weighs 255 pounds, said Lozano was considerably smaller and lighter than he, but was strong.

Shaw had tried to wrest Lozano off Malone, after the officer was summoned to the station to quell Lozano.

"I'm pretty big, a whole lot bigger than he was," Shaw said. "I thought I was pretty strong. I hope I don't meet many guys like him."

On his second try to fell Lozanzo, Shaw said he was able to pull him and Malone to the ground.

"Had he (Lozano) got up, I wouldn't be there," Shaw said.

Malone had characterized Lozano "an extremely powerful man." The 6-foot Lozano weighed about 200 pounds.

Malone said he had struck Lozano in the face about 50 times but apparently did not faze the man. "My hitting him had no effect on him," said Malone, who at 5-foot-9 is about three inches shorter than Lozano and weighed about 220 pounds in 1977.

After Lozano was subdued and handcuffed, he became "very friendly."

"As soon as we put the 'cuffs on him, he calmed down. He was totally a different person."

The assault charges were dropped in order to get Lozano admitted to the hospital, the officer testified.

IN ONE OF THE defense's last moves, attorneys Perry Davis and Nelson showed the three-man, three-woman jury a video tape of Jail Capt. Furman Davis shattering the ⅜-inch thick, four-plate laminated 5-by-9-inch glass window in the padded isolation "Green Room" where Lozano spent his final hours.

On his second fling of a brass ring from a cell toilet drain, the glass shattered.

One contention is that Lozano had shattered a similar glass with the brass ring. Another version is that Lozano had broken the glass by using his head as a ramming rod.

San Antonio engineer P.K. Schneider had testified on Wednesday that the glass was virtually unbreakable. He said the glass might shatter if hit by a 200-pound man traveling at 140 mph.

Escaped convict back home

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — An escaped convict who spent his 27 years of freedom as a model citizen before his recapture earlier this week is back home today with his wife and two young sons.

Charles Rape was released from prison Thursday and placed on a 90-day "pre-discretionary leave," allowing him to return to his family and his job at a service station in the southeast Alabama city of Dothan.

Hopper said Rape's case will be placed on the state Pardon and Parole Board docket. He said Rape will be eligible for parole after a month.

California officials may seek damages for spread of fly

AP Laserphoto

Los Angeles County Agricultural commissioner Paul Engler gestures during a news conference Thursday in El Monte, Calif., during which he recommended that a 165-square-mile quarantine be established in Los Angeles County to fight the spread of the medfly. In the background a poster illustrates the medflies and the larvae and has information on how residents may report further outbreaks.

By LORETTA NOFFSINGER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A panel of government farming experts urged California to double its fruit-fly quarantine area, while state officials considered seeking damages from the federal government or a Peruvian laboratory for the spread of the pests.

State authorities have taken no action on the recommendation Thursday by an advisory group of federal and state agriculture experts that a 3,600-square-mile quarantine area be established around the site of latest Mediterranean fruit-fly finds in Baldwin Park, a Los Angeles suburb.

The state has already quarantined 3,249 square miles, mostly in the San Francisco Bay area where the infestation had been limited before the new find.

Los Angeles County officials will put into effect today a 165-square-mile quarantine. Agricultural officials said residents inside the area will be on their honor not to carry produce outside it. No checkpoints will be set up.

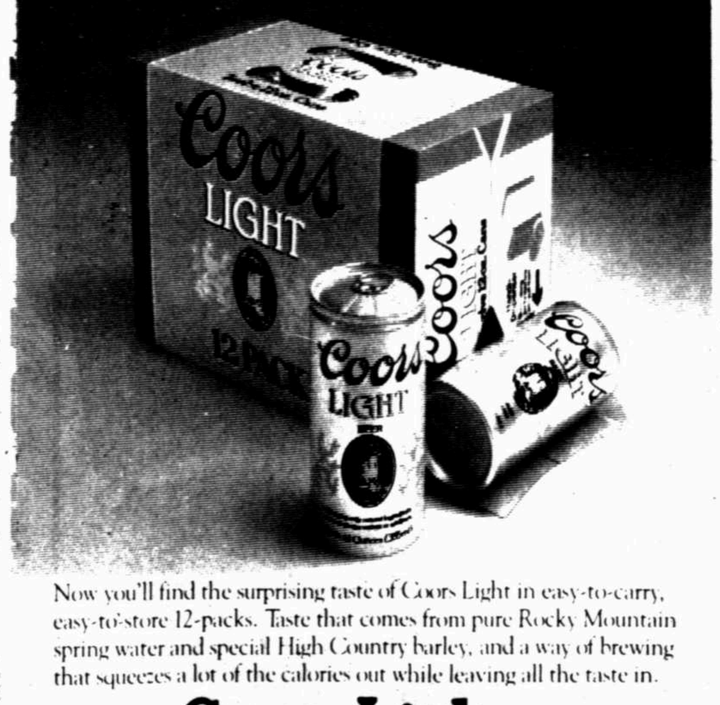

The panel reached its decision during a closed meeting in Los Gatos. No explanation for the recommendation was given by the panel members, who did not respond to reporters' questions.

Meanwhile, authorities in the state's capital said they may seek damages from the federal government or a Peruvian laboratory resulting from the release in the state of 50,000 supposedly sterile medflies from the lab. Billions of sterile flies were released in an effort to interfere with the pest's breeding cycle.

The state auditor is trying to find out if the Peruvian flies actually were fertile when they were released as part of the eradication program. The flies were obtained by the state through the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Salt intake ups blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've just come from my annual physical examination. Except for a moderately high blood pressure, that my doctor described as borderline, I'm in pretty good shape. He did suggest that I cut down on my intake of salt, although I don't have to cut it out altogether, and he gave me a list of food to avoid. He also said that most people would be better off if they limited their salt intake, and this leads me to my question: If an excessive intake of salt can be harmful for so many people, why doesn't the government do something about it? At least they put warning labels on cigarettes. — Bill, Anchorage, AK

Dear Bill: There is no doubt that salt or, more specifically, sodium — contributes to high blood pressure which, in turn, may be a factor in heart attacks and strokes. And the government is being urged to do something about it.

For example, representatives of the Center for Science in the Public Interest have petitioned the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to place a limit on the amount of sodium permitted in processed foods. They have also asked that the sodium content of foods be shown on the label so that consumers will have some idea of what they are buying.

The FDA does not dispute the connection between sodium and high blood pessure, and apparently is considering various alternatives to dealing with the problem. Meanwhile those like yourself who should limit their intake of sodium would do well to avoid adding salt at the table, and to stay away from food such as canned soups that are notoriously high in sodium.

Dear Dr. Solomon: With all the separations and divorces that we read about, not to mention the number of people dying, it seems that an awful lot of children must be losing a parent somewhere along the way. Does this have any effect on them when they become adults? — Grace, Scranton, PA

Dear Grace: A study by Dr. Alec Roy, of the University of Toronto, indicates that loss of a parent may lead to depression. He bases his conclusions on a comparison of more than 100 depressed patients and a group of nondepressed neurotic patients. The depressed patients had experienced significantly more parental loss before the age of 17.

Safe driving needed during Labor Day

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

During the up-coming Labor Day holiday, many families will be taking their final "vacation" before school gets into full swing. Texas highways, which experience a wreck every 74 seconds, will probably average a wreck more often than that this long weekend...unless we use our common sense while driving.

What four areas will be most significant for each of us to pay attention to this holiday: speed, drinking, seat belts and driving strategy. No great lectures involved, just quick reminders.

Speed: going a reasonable speed...depending on road conditions yet never over the posted limit...gives us more time to see, react, avoid danger and stop. Take stopping distance for instance. With good brakes, at 30 mph we could stop in 88 feet; at 50 mph, 243 feet; at 70 mph, 532 feet. The final graphic example against speed over the reasonable and legal limit is this: an accident at 30 mph would throw us with the force equal to a fall from a three story building; an accident at 60 mph would thow us with a force equal to driving off a nine-story building. We certainly wouldn't do that, so why do we take chances with inappropriate speed?

Drinking: alcohol is a causative factor in over half of all fatal traffic accidents. So, if we drive after drinking, we risk our life and the lives of others. We don't have to be drunk to be in trouble; small amounts effect us immediately as far as slower reactions, impaired vision, weakened concentration and dulled judgement. Driving while in full control of our senses is tough enough, why complicate it with alcohol? Further yet, why let it complicate our friends' driving to?

Seat belts: ah, the seat belt! As far as safety goes, the seat belt is second only to our good senses in making driving safer. Seat belts can make a difference in the unfortunate event we're in a crash. 40 percent of front seat passenger deaths could be avoided if everyone used seat belts; 57 percent of injuries could be avoided if we all wore lap and shoulder belts. Note: for young children and infants, that seat belt should be used in conjunction with a crash tested child restraint device.

Driving Strategy: Strategy involves knowing your route, paying attention, moving with the flow, establishing safe following distanve, signaling your intentions, yielding right-of-way, establishing reasonable speeds and "driving friendly."

Troops rescue girls

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops stormed a motel room and rescued two girls — one of them a millionaire's daughter — held for a week by kidnappers who demanded the equivalent of $875,000 in ransom, the military said today.

The soldiers overpowered two of the kidnappers, one of them a former policeman, a military spokesman said. Authorities launched a manhunt for six other people believed involved in the kidnapping.

The raiders found the girls unharmed and cowering in a corner of the room, he said.

Rescued were Philippine food and textile magnate John Gokongwei's 20-year-old daughter Robina and her cousin Celina Chua, 18, both university students, who were kidnapped from a family van Aug. 20 while on their way to school.

The military said the kidnappers, posing as policemen, stopped the van for an alleged traffic violation and drove off with the girls and the driver, who was released the following day.

The gang demanded the ransom by telephone, but before it could be paid, troops of the army's special weapons and tactics unit located the motel hideout, on the basis of an informant's tip, the military spokesman said.

JUST FOR FUN: In the Soviet Union a group of taxi, ambulance and funeral car drivers walked off the job, not because of working conditions, but because their biorhythm charts showed it was a critical day for them.

Relief for motorists

Action Tuesday by Midland City Council, clearing the way for one-way streets in the downtown business district, marks the start of what the experts say will be relief for motorists in that highly congested area of the Tall City.

Midland's population growth in recent years and the resulting increase in traffic has created something of a bottleneck for motorist in the downtown area, particularly at rush-hour times but anymore, it seems, throughout the day.

The change to one-way streets has not overjoyed all Midlanders. There are concerns about safety during the transition period. But the fact remains that one-way streets are conducive to the orderly and timely flow of traffic and what downtown motorists are experiencing now is not.

Before motorists can expect to start getting into and out of downtown quicker, though, some things remain to be done. Public Works director Fred Baker noted that it probably will be three to six months before the change can be made. He pointed out that it will take at least 60 days just to aquire the necessary signs, which then must be installed.

And, of course, the driving public in Miland must be made aware of the change, well in advance, so it can be brought about as smoothly as possible, hopefully with no or, at least, only a few resulting traffic mishaps. The unavoidable delay in getting the change made appears ideal for just such a driver orientation campaign.

Members of the city council realize, of course, that the change to one-way streets in the downtown area will not alleviate all of Midland's traffic congestion problems. At the rate the city is growing, the traffic flow situation needs to be monitored on a continual basis with an eye toward upgrading potential problem traffic areas before the individual situations become serious.

This change is one which was sorely needed and we believe most residents recognize that fact. By its action, the council has taken a progressive step at alleviating one problem many Midlanders encounter on a daily basis.

'Falcon's' wings clipped

The capture of Christopher John Boyce was the pay-off for a long, expensive and often frustrating manhunt conducted by federal officials.

At the end, the net closed quickly and without violence. The fugitive was surprised and taken as he was eating in his car outside The Pit Stop, a fast-food shop in Port Angeles, Wash.

Port Angeles is on the Olympic Peninsula, one of the few remaining areas of the United States in which peregrine falcons can be found in the wild.

Boyce's obsession with the ancient art of falconry was well known. He even called himself "The Falcon." For that reason, the search focused from the start on the Olympic Peninsula.

An informer played a key role in bringing the investigation to a successful conclusion. There were indications that Boyce was robbing banks to finance his life as a fugitive.

Twenty-eight years old, handsome, highly intelligent, "The Falcon" had escaped last January from Lompoc federal prison in Southern California. He had been serving a 40-year term for espionage, having sold Central Intelligence Agency secrets to the Soviet Union.

He was a resourceful quarry who easily could have disappeared entirely. But he was caught, in part because of his obsession and because of a determined and resourceful effort by federal agencies, particularly the U.S. Marshals Service.

Due to their efforts the falcon may not fly again.

CHARLEY REESE

Not every problem has a solution

One of the most cherished myths of our time is that every problem has a solution.

Charley Reese

We expect life to be like fiction and to be resolved. We are worshippers of the false God, Solution, and we pursue indefinitely the search for the solutions to the problems of crime, of war and peace, of inflation, of aging, of birth — well, you name a problem and I can point to an organization pursuing a solution. We are convinced that solutions do exist and as soon as we find them or elect politicians who can find them, everything will be hunky-dory. We are a straight-line-on-the-graph society.

I suspect this optimistic view of man derives from our Western religions, Judaism and Christianity. Judaism is stubbornly optimistic that God is good and man will get better. Christianity has an equally obstinate belief in redemption and salvation.

I don't question the validity of these religious beliefs, but I know that when we transfer this religious optimism to secular affairs, we are cruising for a bruising of our expectations. When you look at history, you don't see straight lines. You see circles. You see endless repetitions of the same behaviors. Man, as a critter, has not evolved a whit socially. The only thing that has changed has been technology.

Julius Caesar built the first pontoon bridge over the Rhine River. We learned how to build better bridges. But about 2,000 years later, we were still crossing the Rhine River for the same reason Caesar crossed it — and with about the same, ultimately inconclusive results. The Emperor, Marcus Aurelius, spent much of his life on the frontier in Europe, facing east. Today, we also station armies on the frontier of Europe, facing east.

The sameness of human nature is amusingly in evidence when you examine that great American industry of self-improvement. You can read all the books and attend all the classes and seminars on self-realization and how-to-be-happy-though-whatever and you won't find a single tip or insight that isn't found in the Bible and/or the writings of the Greeks, Romans and Oriental sages. If people only realized it, they could pick up a Gideon Bible, read the book of Proverbs, and save themselves hundreds of dollars.

I had a good chuckle recently listening to a lecture by a modern guru on his "new" insights and discoveries on relationships. He had dressed it all up in modern jargon, but his message was that when the outside world does not meet our inner expectations, we make ourselves unhappy. A Roman slave, Epictetus, figured that out about 1,900 years ago and I'm sure even he wasn't the first.

The major differences between us and our distant ancestors are clothes and tools. Even in the area of science, we haven't advanced as far as is popularly supposed. Thanks to our tools, we have a better grasp of our ignorance than the ancients had.

Even our fads are not new. Everyone is excited these days about the appointment of a woman to the Supreme Court. Sir John Glubb reports in a study he has done that at the height of the Medieval Arab empire, appointing women as judges and teachers became a common practice. As a matter of fact, Glubb Pasha, as the Arabs call him, believes that was indication of the empire's decline.

There are, of course, some solutions to some problems, but they usually prove to be temporary and some problems have no solutions. I don't advocate passitivity. Trying to solve problems is part of the fun of living. Still, we could live much more peacefully and gracefully if we gave up entirely the notion of final solutions and Utopias.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Boiler rooms' prosper as stockpile grows

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's determination to rebuild the nation's stockpile of strategic materials has helped to open up lucrative opportunities for fly-by-night operators preying on unwary investors.

Jack Anderson

Working out of "boiler rooms" of telephone banks, these smooth-talking hucksters make a beguiling pitch to individuals with a few thousand dollars to invest: They explain to the victim that the administration's plan to spend $100 million to restore the dwindling strategic stockpile will soon drive up world prices for the various commodities.

In a typical case, the investor will send the persuasive pitchman $5,000 or $10,000 for a certain quantity of some scarce material. In return, the customer gets a warehouse receipt showing the stuff is being stored in Amsterdam, along with a document indicating the purchase is insured by Lloyd's of London. The investor is instructed to wait six months, then call back either to take delivery of the commodity or collect the profit from rising prices.

But when the unwitting victim calls at the end of the six-month period, he discovers that the telephone has been disconnected. The supposed investment house has disappeared. The investor then discovers that both the warehouse receipt and the impressive insurance policy are fakes.

Authorities have uncovered six of these boiler-room operations recently in New York City and Miami. There are also problems with the strategic stockpile itself:

— General Services Administration inspectors reported that the government doesn't seem interested in getting the best possible price for the sale of surplus material from the stockpile. A recent audit showed that between 1975 and 1979, out of 57 contracts for the sale of surplus tin, manganese and tungsten, all but seven were awarded on the basis of noncompetitive "sole source" offers.

To make matters worse, the GSA investigators and sleuths for Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, found that buyers of surplus materials are regularly given discounts that are not justified by contract records. For example, in one 43-month period, $3 million in unjustified discounts and allowances were granted to 14 purchasers of surplus magnanese.

"This practice of granting discounts fails to guard against windfall profits by the purchaser," says an internal GSA report reviewed by my reporters Tony Capaccio and Vivian Marino.

— In a June 30 GSA audit, marked "Official Use Only," investigators concluded that there are serious deficiencies in the stockpiling of synthetic ruby and sapphire jewel bearings, which are critical in the manufacture of many weapons and precision instruments.

This is despite the fact that the William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant in North Dakota has been turning out bearings by the millions since the 1950s. The trouble, auditors found, is that "of 68.7 million stockpiled jewel bearings, as many as 53.4 million may be obsolete or substandard." Furthermore, the North Dakota plant is entirely dependent on foreign suppliers for its basic raw materials — the very situation the strategic stockpile was designed to prevent.

UNIVERSITY FOULUPS: As the nation's college students head back to campus next month, it might be worthwhile for their universities' accountants to join them in the classroom. Recent audits by the Education Department's inspector general show that some of the most prestigious schools in the land have been managing the money they get from Uncle Sam in ways that can charitably be described as slipshod. Here are a few examples.

— Harvard University: Out of $37 million Harvard's public health school charged the government for salaries and supplies from 1975 to 1977, the auditors found they were unable to "express an opinion as to the reasonableness or unreasonableness" of $15.5 million. The auditors did make up their minds about nearly $2 million; they asked that it be refunded.

— Over a six-year period, the Illinois Institute of Technology got $14 million from the federal government. The auditors could not determine whether more than $10 million was "reasonable or acceptable."

— Texas Tech University in Lubbock charged nearly $10 million to the federal government between September 1975 and August 1977. But government auditors concluded that the school's bookkeeping was so sloppy that it "did not provide a material degree of certainty" that costs charged to the taxpayers were "reasonable and allowable." The auditors questioned $5.2 million of the $10 million provided by Uncle Sam.

— The University of Nebraska at Lincoln charged the feds $20 million from 1976 to 1978. But because the school "had not established the necessary accounting controls," the auditors decided that $426,576 had been improperly billed. They couldn't make up their minds about another $2.6 million.

All the universities accused of poor bookkeeping practices have assured the government they're taking steps to improve — with one predictable exception: Harvard responded to the criticism with the huffy statement that its systems were "adequate" and not in need of any improvement.

INSIDE REPORT:

Bill Smith's Justice Department running 'out of control'

WASHINGTON — The incongruity of Ronald Reagan's Justice Department withdrawing the asylum granted a teenaged Ukranian boy a year ago by the Carter administration comes as no surprise to a White House benumbed by the peculiar regime of Attorney General William French Smith.

Rowland Evans

"It's out of control," lamented chief of staff James Baker III July 21 to conservative activists complaining that Reagan was being undercut by his Justice Department. The treatment of 13-year-old Walter Polovchak follows a variety of issues where the department has strictly hewed to the liberal Carter line.

Robert Novak

Baker's complaint, frequently expressed in the privacy of the White House, is that Justice ignores political leadership from the Oval Office. But he also shares the conservative movement's complaints about the substance of policy at Justice. If the Interior Department under James Watt is most faithful to Reaganism, the Justice Department under Bill Smith is least so.

Since Smith is the president's close friend and longtime personal attorney, the runaway Justice Department would seem an enigma. In fact, it shows shortcomings of the Reagan Cabinet system in wholesale delegation of authority. When a Cabinet officer does not translate Reaganism into active policy, the president can be left high, dry and unknowing.

Ironically, the selection of Smith at first looked like a return to presidents naming campaign managers and brothers to run the Justice Department (in contrast to Gerald Ford, whose non-partisan attorney general hurt him badly in the 1976 election). But while Smith's loyalty to Reagan is unquestioned, his judgment, his competence or both are dubious. Called a "society lawyer" by Reagan aides, he was instantly swallowed by the department's liberal bureaucracy.

That became clear at an early Cabinet meeting when Smith recited opinions from career government lawyers that the proposed legislative veto over almost all Executive Branch actions is unconstitutional. Smith should have been aware that the veto was part of both candidate Reagan's and the conservative movement's program. Seven months later, the administration's position remains unresolved.

New to government and Washington, Smith has delegated responsibility for running the department to his deputy attorney general, Edward Schmults, a Wall Street lawyer with Ivy League credentials and 1980 campaign support for George Bush. Schmults also was offered the No. 2 post at the Treasury (where he served in Nixon-Ford days). While Reaganites were shunned, establishment figures such as Schmults were in intense demand.

Given a free hand in staffing the Justice Department, Schmults moved with deliberation noteworthy even in this slow-moving administration and with care to exclude all but one or two Reaganites. The environmentalist Sierra Club's only foothold in the Reagan administration is at Justice where a longtime member, Carol Dinkins, is assistant attorney general for lands. In charge of the drive to recodify the criminal code is Deputy Assistant Attorney General Ronald Gainer, a Carter holdover.

The "permanent government" that Reagan repeatedly warned Cabinet members to adjure remains in the saddle at Justice. Chicago's desegregation plan was turned down as inadequate. Virginia legislative redistricting was twice vetoed. Federal judges are being picked without regard to political philosophy. The Justice Department lobbies against right-wing social issues that candidate Reagan committed himself to.

The Polovchak case stunned conservatives who thought they were inured to the Smith-Schmults regime. They wonder how a Republican U.S. attorney in Chicago appointed by Reagan could agree that this teenage boy must be sent back to the Soviet Union against his will if the courts eventually grant custody to his parents. Asked that question by an associate, Schmults agreed it was shocking. But he expressed doubt whether proper procedure should be breached by overruling a district attorney.

All this has left Baker shaking his head. But what made him furious was the Justice Department decision — just before key votes in the House — to send some 60 Haitians to custody in Big Spring, Texas, deep in the heart of pro-Reagan Democratic Rep. Charles Stenholm's district. Stenholm's constituents were outraged: it was no feather in the Justice Department cap that he voted with Reagan on the tax bill anyway.

Whenever Baker and other White House senior aides call the Justice Department to protest, Schmults has retorted that such interventions by the White House are improper. He is harkening back to the bad old days when Attorney General Edward Levi neglected to notify President Gerald Ford of a federal investigation of spurious corruption charges against Ford sure to surface in the heart of the 1976 campaign.

That type of Justice Department may indeed be the preference of the bar, but critics are asking these questions: Is it Ronald Reagan's? Does he really disapprove of the legislative veto? Does he favor forced busing in Chicago? Does he want a U.S. district attorney going into court to send Walter Polovchak back to Russia? The guess in Washington is that the president never has raised one of these questions with his old pal Bill.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

I understand the lumber industry is developing a chemical spray which makes trees grow faster so they can be harvested like carrots and tomatoes. Sounds unnatural. As Orson Welles might put it — "We will cut no tree before it's time."

●

You start using steroids on trees and it will lead to killer carrots, man-eating asparagus and the tomato plant that had to be put to sleep after devouring Portland, Oregon.

●

A lumber man might say — "You want 8 million two-by-fours? You got 'em. They'll be 20 feet long by Tuesday. A ton of sawdust? Comin' right up. Do you want regular or extra crunchy?"

●

In Oregon, the trees are so tall that if a baby bird falls out of the nest, he learns to fly before he hits the ground.

●

Those folks have been planting trees and cutting them down for generations. As soon as a baby starts walking, he is given a little Winnie the Pooh chainsaw to break out of his crib with.

●

When are we going to learn that even Johnny Appleseed never lived to taste his own apples. When we see a 700 pound woodpecker, that's when.

Baby panda doing fine

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Five weeks after its birth, the only living panda bred normally in captivity is still leading a sheltered existence, isolated with its mother in an air-conditioned cage and kept away from a multitude of Mexican admirers.

On a closed-circuit TV screen at Mexico City's Chapultepec Zoo, the tiny creature born July 21 looks somewhat like a big white rat. It has grown to 2 pounds 10 ounces, 12 times its weight at birth, and is just over a foot long. But still unable to walk or open its eyes, it lives on its belly, nurses every hour, and struggles futilely twice a day to stand up.

"La Cria is growing normally and doing fine," said Dr. Gabino Vazquez, the zoo's administrator.

La Cria, which means suckling in Spanish, is what the caretakers are calling their baby until the Mexican government decides on a name.

Six zookeepers take turns watching La Cria on the TV monitor around the clock. They refuse go near the baby, or to put it on public view, until it gets old enough to stray from the mother, Ying-Ying, a milestone expected in December, Vazquez said. Even Pe Pe, the father, is kept in a separate cage.

The precautions are being taken to prevent a repetition of the tragedy that befell the first offspring of Ying-Ying and Pe Pe. Viewed by visitors from the time of its birth on Aug. 11, 1980, it was crushed to death by Ying-Ying eight days later. Veterinarians say the spectators may have made her nervous.

The panda is a black and white mammal of the raccoon family that grows to 300 pounds. There are only about 250 in the world, most of them in the wilds of southern China or northern Burma, the rest in zoos. Successful breeding in captivity may help save them from extinction.

The Chinese have produced at least one cub in captivity by artificial insemination. But Ying-Ying and Pe Pe, gifts of the Chinese government in 1976, are the only pandas that have bred normally in captivity. Mating efforts at the London, Moscow and Washington zoos have failed, although London Zoo officials said this week that their female, Ching Ching, may be pregnant by artificial insemination.

Reagan doesn't like to bear bad news

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan doesn't like to be the bearer of bad news.

From welcoming back the American hostages in Iran at the opening of his administration to the highly visible and successful lobbying campaign for his tax and budget cuts before going on vacation, the president usually has an upbeat message when he turns up in front of television cameras.

But when the news is bad or likely to stir a controversy, chances are that someone else winds up as the administration's spokesman.

Cutbacks in Social Security, deployment of the neutron warhead, easing of clean air regulations, a new immigration policy, plans to sell sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia and other thorny issues were left to Reagan's lieutenants and Cabinet secretaries.

In a White House staffed with public relations specialists, it's no surprise the president's men work to build up his popularity and try to keep him being linked with issues that could detract from his image.

It's been a goal in other administrations, but usually not pursued with the zeal of the Reagan White House. For his part, Reagan makes no excuses about dropping a hot potato in someone else's lap.

For example, the president made a rare trip to the White House press room to personally announce he had chosen a woman — Sandra O'Connor — for a Supreme Court vacancy. But he came only to read a prepared statement and brought along the attorney general to field reporters' questions.

As Reagan tried to leave the podium, a reporter asked if he agreed with Mrs. O'Connor's stand on abortion.

"I said that I was going to turn over all questions to the attorney general here and let him answer the questions," Reagan replied, moving toward the door.

"But the right-to-life people object," the reporter persisted, "and we just wonder if — "

"All those questions the attorney general is prepared to answer," the president insisted.

Finally, under more questioning, Reagan said he was "completely satisfied" with her position. With that, he was gone.

Reagan generally has been insulated from foreign policy flaps — ranging from the congressional uproar over the proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia to the Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's call for the United States to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. deals with those issues.

When the administration decided to get tough with striking air traffic controllers, it was the president who warned them they were violating an oath and would be fired if they refused to go back to work.

In this case, the administration calculated the president's stand would be politically popular and show Reagan as a strong, decisive leader.

On domestic policy, most of Reagan's public appearances have been devoted to his economic program, with a series of speeches and televised addresses to mobilize public support.

Even in the economic area, however, Reagan was portrayed by his staff as an overall orchestrator of policy instead of as a man involved in the line-by-line details of budget cuts and tax tradeoffs.

Reagan never publicly discussed the number of people who would be affected by cuts in food stamps, school lunches, welfare, housing subsidies, health programs, Social Security and other areas.

Those details were handled by budget director David A. Stockman, who became an easy target for cartoonists to lampoon.

In the heat of negotiations on Capitol Hill on the tax cut, Reagan spoke to a group of businessmen at the White House about his program. Citing another appointment, he excused himself early and left Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan behind to answer questions.

Reagan went upstairs, changed clothes and within a half-hour was heading for an afternoon of horseback riding.

5 drifters sought in plot to kill 11 city officials

FORT SCOTT, Kan. (AP) — Five drifters are being sought for questioning about an alleged elaborate plot to gun down 11 city officials and business leaders in this small southeast Kansas town, Police Chief James Carnes says.

"It was an intricate plan. They wanted everything down so it would work the first time. Whether there had been any rehearsals as to the killings, we don't know," Carnes said Thursday.

Carnes said police learned of the alleged plot Saturday from an inmate in the county jail, who heard about it through the jail's grapevine. He said police immediately placed one city official under protection and, by day's end, added protection for 10 others believed to be on a "hit list."

The chief said his 18-member department has been working 18 hours a day since Saturday to provide protection and investigate the case.

"They go home and eat, change clothes, get a couple hours sleep, then they're right back on the job," he said of his officers.

"We don't know who the hit men could be," said Carnes, who said the jail informant passed three lie detector-type tests. "We have indications someone is being brought in from out of town."

Carnes said police had "only one motive" under investigation but refused to elaborate. He confirmed four persons were picked up for questioning Tuesday night but released without charges being filed.

Carnes said information to date leads to "three people, silent partners." He said one of the three had been questioned.

Names of the informant and those being questioned were not released.

Community leaders were "shocked and alarmed" when they learned that they might be targets of a death plot, said Fort Scott City Manager Don Munsell. Munsell said police still are trying to determine whether the plot was real or merely a hoax.

Munsell said authorities should be able to find out by some time today whether it was a hoax.

Bourbon County Attorney Dan Meara refused comment on the incident.

The chief said there are indications the plot was hatched in February and first came to light following the arrest of a man in July and his incarceration in the county jail.

Talk of the alleged hit list spread through the jail, and someone tipped officers, the chief said. Police questioned the inmate and began checking his story.

"Everything that was given us proved he knew what he was talking about," Carnes said.

He said police have found some written evidence showing routes some of the officials take to work and when they leave home. He said police also "know the weapon, a rifle," that supposedly was to be used in the killings and have a good description of it, but haven't found it.

Carnes said the 11 people on the alleged hit list have been told to alter their routes to work and their work schedules "to try and mess up their plans."

Carter agrees with Reagan's China policy

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — Former President Carter said today that President Reagan's decision to sell U.S. arms to China was consistent with what he would have done if he had been re-elected.

"Recent developments of the Reagan policy have been very reassuring to me," Carter told a news conference prior to leaving for Xian, China's ancient capital.

Asked whether the Reagan administration was in danger of straying from his administration's agreement to normalize relations with the Communist regime, Carter said, "During the campaign in 1980 and perhaps early in 1981, there seemed to be a deviation from the normalization commitment, but my own assessment now is that the policy of the present administration is compatible with the agreement consummated between me and Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping at the time of normalization."

Carter, who established diplomatic relations with China in 1979, said he did not detect "among the Chinese leaders any quandary about the Reagan policy because apparently Secretary (of State Alexander) Haig explained it very well" on his visit here earlier this year when he offered to sell U.S. arms to China.

On the sensitive issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, Carter stressed that any weapons sold there must not pose a threat to the mainland.

"I recognized that China is facing a possible threat from the north and the south and we don't want to provide a new threat from the east," Carter said. But he told reporters Thursday night that his administration had made clear, when it established diplomatic relations with Peking, that the United States would continue to sell defensive weapons to the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

"We all expressed at the time that ... there was no time limit on the sale of defense weapons" to Taiwan, he said.

The Peking government contends that U.S. arms sales to the Nationalists violates the U.S. government's recognition, in the normalization agreement, that Taiwan is part of China and that the government in Peking is the only legal government of China.

"We look at this (Taiwan controversy) as a very difficult and sensitive issue that must be resolved by the Chinese people without interference from my country," Carter said in an interview broadcast on Chinese television Thursday night.

Carter, who met Thursday with Deng, China's most powerful political leader, and with the new Communist Party chairman, Hu Yaobang, said he found no deviation from the goals of normalization among Chinese leaders.

There were areas of disagreement, most notably over Taiwan, he said, "but those differences are clearly defined and were clearly defined in December 1978," when he announced normalization.

Carter, the first American to meet Hu since he became head of the party, said he had an "enjoyable visit" with him.

"He is an extremely interesting, very lively and colorful exponent of the Chinese interests and positions and I learned a great deal about the inner workings of the party," he said.

Hu was elected by the party in June to replace Hua Guofeng, who Mao Tse-tung had designed to be his successor.

Carter, making his first trip to China, arrived in Peking Monday. He goes to Shanghai on Sunday and to Japan next Thursday, where he will spend five days.

Soviet missile accuracy may have passed U.S.

By John Harris
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Air Force officials, fighting hard against a possible scaling-down of the planned MX missile system, are warning that long-range Soviet nuclear accuracy has achieved pinpoint precision and may now have surpassed that of the United States.

An Air Force spokesman vigorously rejected an argument, advanced by critics of the MX system, that Soviet missiles targeted on United States missile sites might land far from their targets because their flight path — over the North Pole — is impossible to test during peacetime.

Soviet missiles are generally tested over the northern Pacific Ocean. Most American missile tests are conducted from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., over the central and south Pacific, while others are conducted over the Atlantic Ocean from Cape Canaveral.

"I don't buy the argument that Soviet missiles won't land on target," the spokesman said. "Soviet missiles, like ours, can land within hundreds of feet of their targets. They may have the edge.

"We know the exact accuracy of both ours and theirs, but we keep this information officially secret. But I don't dispute reports that a Russian missile on a 5,500-mile flight could be made to land inside the five-acre central courtyard of the Pentagon."

The courtyard, where many Pentagon employees spend their lunch hour in good weather, is often referred to — perhaps with fatalistic humor — as "ground zero," the military term for the impact point of a nuclear warhead.

The Air Force warning came amid reports that President Reagan is nearing a decision to build a severely limited version of the originally proposed MX system, which was designed to lessen the possibility of Soviet destruction of the American strategic missile force.

The present force is made up of more than 1,000 Minuteman missiles in immobile silos. The original MX system envisions shuttling 200 missiles among 4,600 protected shelters in Nevada and Utah. It has been criticized on environmental grounds, and also on grounds that deficiencies in Soviet missile accuracy make it unnecessary.

"There is no way to ensure that the accuracies of missiles obtained from test firings can be duplicated with totally new targets and flight paths," noted the Council on Economic Priorities, a Washington-based research organization that contends the MX is unnecessary.

"The problem of 'bias,' i.e. missiles drifting from their flight paths because of unforeseen atmospheric and other physical conditions, is considered by many scientists to be insurmountable without substantial testing, which is of course impossible in a surprise attack."

The Air Force spokesman rejected the "drift" argument, too, saying that such elements are "factored into the equation," meaning that they are compensated for in computer calculations governing missile flights, both by the Soviet Union and the United States.

Arguments have also been advanced that some Soviet missiles would fail to launch, fail to fly and that some warheads would fail to detonate, meaning that the degree of reliability in a missile attack is an inestimable factor.

Canned disasters

By Ann Combs
Hearst Feature Service

We might as well admit it; disasters are exciting. If they weren't folks wouldn't run after fire engines. They wouldn't gather around Florida's sink holes to watch another three bedroom split level slide into the pit. And they wouldn't charter small planes to buzz around the crater of Mount St. Helens.

But disasters are only exciting at a comfortable distance. Fell a hemlock across your own roof and the thrill evaporates immediately. Which is why Brad Small and Rick Goode of Los Angeles think folks will enjoy their new product called, "Earthquake in a Can." This earthquake isn't one that will topple your chimney, flatten your garage, or send your grandmother's Haviland china crashing to the floor. It's simply a can that sits on your coffee table lurching, rumbling and coming up with aftershocks. You get all the excitement with none of the cleanup.

I think it's a marvelous idea, and no doubt it will soon lead to other canned, bottled and packaged disasters. But nature has only so many tricks up her destructive sleeve, and if they aren't careful Messrs. Small and Goode will soon run out of horrendous occurences to reproduce. So in the interest of exhilaration without participation, I'd like to offer them a few man-made disasters for their repertoire.

For one thing they could vacuum pack the sound of someone blurting out, "Guess what dear? I'm pregnant again." That should send chills up and down the spine of several million citizens.

They could reproduce the sound of a brand new car backing into a telephone pole, and once the can had stopped shaking and rattling a small voice could plead, "But Mom, how was I to know the car was in reverse?"

People who spend their summers cooking, cleaning and changing the sheets in the guest room might enjoy a can that rumbles up the driveway, echoes with the sound of car doors slamming, and ends with a, "Hi there. We're friends of your cousin from Topeka, and she said to be sure and stop by if we were ever out this way."

Housewives would get a vicarious case of the cold shivers if Brad and Rick came up with a can that washes and spins in the background while a voice says, "There you go Ma'am. I think I have it working again." And for an extra thrill the voice could add, "That will be $27.50 for parts and $314 for labor."

There could be a disaster can for fathers that trills, "Daddy, this is Zeke. He raises goats, makes bent nail sculptures, and has a worm farm. We're in love."

Or he might prefer one that duplicates the sound of his chisel being used to split rocks, his golf clubs breaking a trail through high grass and Scotch broom, and his tape measure springing from its casing.

Children would have to have their own disaster cans of course, and I can think of none more chilling than one that chugs across their bedroom floor like a school bus. It could pause every now and then to explode with the noise of a new batch of passengers embarking.

Plan would enable states to regulate abortion

DALLAS (AP) — The Senate judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Orrin Hatch has begun drafting a revised version of a proposed constitutional ban on abortion that would enable states to regulate abortion, a Dallas newspaper reported Friday.

The compromise measure is intended to broaden the political appeal of the proposed constitutional ban and is considered likely to win more votes than either current versions of the amendment or a pending bill that would outlaw the medical practice by defining life as beginning at conception, The Dallas Morning News said.

The "states rights" version might also be more palatable to the Reagan administration, which opposes abortion and endorses states rights as the foundation of a "new federalism," the newspaper said.

Anti-abortion groups are expected to lobby heavily against the proposal, however. The groups see the states rights approach as a means by which some states might legalize abortion "havens" — as some did before a 1973 Supreme Court decision legalized abortions on demand.

The language of the new bill reportedly will contain a section preserving the right of the federal government to make decisions on abortion, The News said.

Supporters of the states rights approach say it is appealing because it would let the people of each state decide the issue, and end the congressional controversy over when life begins. The bill also would end arguments over whether to make exceptions for women who are impregnated during acts of rape or incest.

Medical examiner sorry for ruling

HOUSTON (AP) — A county medical examiner who issued a mistaken murder-suicide ruling that took 19 months of investigation to overcome has told the Harris County Commissioners Court that he regrets the error.

Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk issued the ruling in a 1979 case, theorizing that Diana Wanstrath shot her husband, John, and 14-month-old adopted son, then turned the gun on herself.

"I'm truly sorry," Jachimczyk told the panel Thursday. "I can assure you it was not an off-the-cuff decision. It was not an arbitrary decision. And for sure it was not a capricious decision or a malicious decision."

Allen Wayne Janecka has since been convicted of capital murder in the baby's slaying. In a related case, Markham Duff-Smith, accused of hiring Janecka, was convicted of capital murder for paying for his mother's 1975 slaying.

The prosecution argued that Duff-Smith plotted to inherit the Wanstraths' wealth.

The apology came after friends of Mrs. Wanstrath, angered over the damage done to her reputation by the erroneous initial ruling, demanded an investigation of the medical examiner's action.

No gun was found at the scene of the killings. Jachimczyk said he had believed someone had removed it from the scene to save the family embarrassment.

School opens with new faces

ANTLER, N.D. (AP) — It was much like any other opening day of school in the tiny town of Antler — except for 21 new faces that wouldn't have been there at all if a local farmer hadn't taken matters into his own hands.

When it became clear the Antler Public School, faced with a shortage of students, would close this year, 72-year-old Harley "Bud" Kissner decided to save the school by importing some out-of-town students.

"What's a town without its children, without its school?" Kissner asked.

Kissner thus offered three 9-acre and three 5-acre plots of land to families with school-age children who would come to the north-central North Dakota town and settle in.

He was besieged by telephone calls and letters from families who liked the idea, and earlier this summer the Antler School Board voted to reopen the school after Kissner presented them with a list of the families he had chosen.

"This year has started out just like any other, except for the publicity," said Arlene Watland, a teacher at the school for 15 years. Two national television networks followed the students to school Wednesday.

"The new students adjusted very well with the other children, but it's always a little hard the first day of school," Ms. Watland said.

Thirty-four students started school Wednesday. Last year's enrollment was 21, she said.

Most of the families have found temporary housing in the Antler area, Ms. Watland said. She said two of the families have purchased mobile homes, and the others intend to wait out the cold North Dakota winter before building homes next spring.

South African units return from Angola

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — South African forces were withdrawing from Angola today after killing "many hundreds" of black nationalist guerrillas during five days of fighting, the South African military command said.

Defense commander Gen. Constand Viljoen said advance South African units already had returned to neighboring South-West Africa after completing a "limited task" in Angola, the South African Press Association reported.

South Africa's domestic news agency quoted him as saying the withdrawal "will be completed soon" provided no further attacks are made on South African forces.

Viljoen said his troops killed "many hundreds" of guerrillas and seized or destroyed "hugh quantities" of land mines, weapons and ammunition. He said eight South African soldiers died in the fighting but that he could not say how many Angolan casualties there were. SAPA said some Angolan units attacked the South Africans but were repulsed.

Viljoen's statement was the first detailed South African comment on the military action, which South African defense spokesmen had described as a follow-up operation against Angolan-based black nationalist guerrillas fighting for South-West Africa's independence from South Africa.

The general disputed Angolan claims that tens of thousands of South African troops had entered the Marxist-ruled country, and that Angolan soldiers resisting the assault destroyed a South African tank.

Angop, the official Angolan news agency, said the Angolan Defense Ministry announced that its troops shot down a South African fighter-bomber and a helicopter Thursday during the second day of bombing attacks to soften up the town of Ngiva for a ground assault.

The dispatch Thursday from Luanda, the Angolan capital, said a South African armored column was on the outskirts of Ngiva, 20 miles from the border with South-West Africa (Namibia). It said one tank was destroyed in "violent combat."

Angop also reported that South African planes and troops destroyed the town of Xangongo, 62 miles north of the border, and captured a strategic bridge on the road to Huila province.

A spokesman for the South African defense forces refused to comment on the Angolan claims.

A South African newspaper, the Johannesburg Star, said military analysts it did not identify told it the South African forces were attempting to knock out radar installations at the bases in Angola of the South-West African People's Organization, or SWAPO, the army of guerrillas that has been fighting for 15 years to end South African rule in their arid, mineral-rich homeland between South Africa and Angola.

South Africa's white government denied Angola's charge that it sent two armored columns into southern Angola on Monday as the prelude to a large-scale invasion to seize Angolan territory. South Africa said it was a "follow-up operation," like other raids its forces had made in the past to destroy SWAPO bases.

South Africa has administered South-West Africa, or Namibia, as the rest of Africa and the United Nations call it, under a League of Nations mandate given it after World War I. The U.N. Assembly voided the mandate in 1966, but South Africa has refused to give up the territory on its northwest border. The United States, Britain, West Germany, France and Canada have been trying without success to get South Africa and SWAPO to agree on a plan for elections and independence.

Angola's representative at U.N. headquarters in New York delivered a request Thursday for an urgent meeting of the Security Council to demand the withdrawal of all South African forces from Angolan territory.

The message from President Eduardo dos Santos said the situation had taken a "turn for the worse," and South Afircan mechanized units had penetrated more than 60 miles into Angola. This was 33 miles less than Angola claimed on Tuesday, when the Defense Ministry said one South African armored column advanced 93 miles beyond the border and occupied the village of Catequero.

Dos Santos said the South Africans were attacking with 135 tanks, 38 helicopters and 140 transport and "attack cars."

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim cut short a vacation in Austria and returned to New York, but his office said a date for the council meeting had not been set.

Youths arrested for firing at police car

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — Three teen-age boy were taken into police custody Thursday after they allegedly fired several gunshots at a patrol car attempting to stop their stolen vehicle for a traffic violation, authorities said.

The youths, described as being in their mid-teens, were driving the car along a side road near U.S. Highway 80 in Mesquite about 5 p.m. when a patrol car gave chase. The youths allegedly answered the patrol car's flashing lights with several shots from a handgun or handguns.

The youths stopped their vehicle and attempted to flee on foot, but two of them were taken into custody within minutes, police said. The third youth was arrested about 1 1/2 hours later after a search that involved a Department of Public Safety helicopter and a Dallas Police Department canine unit.

A search of the abandoned car yielded several shotguns and rifles and a box filled with jewelry, police said.

Gas leak causes evacuation

ACTON, Mass (AP) — Several hundred people in Acton and Concord were evacuated voluntarily from their homes today after styrene oxide chemical gas began leaking from a large underground industrial tank, police said.

The leaking vapor is non-toxic, said Acton police Sgt. John McNiff, but it can cause eye irritation, nausea, skin irritation, headaches and "it stinks like hell."

McNiff said the gas started leaking at 10:30 p.m. Thursday from an underground tank at the W.R. Grace plant in South Acton, near the Concord line.

Firefighters and company officials tried twice to stop the leak but were unsuccessful, McNiff said. He said they would try again after dawn.

About 100 people in Acton were evacuated voluntarily from their homes and went to the Acton-Boxboro Regional High School, McNiff said.

Close to 300 people in Concord also voluntarily left their homes and went to the Concord-Carlisle Regional High School, said Concord Sgt. John Foster.

Man asked about rapes

HOUSTON (AP) — Sheriff's officers here have been questioning a 33-year-old man charged with three counts of aggravated rape in connection with at least 11 other rapes and attempted rapes.

James Donald McClean, arrested on an anonymous tip about 7:10 p.m. Thursday, was being questioned about a series of incidents, Harris County Sheriff's Capt. J.D. Peyton said.

Peyton said because the crimes occurred in a single area, the assailant has been dubbed the "Northside rapist."

Molly Bedrich, Kerry Kay Cook and Carol Ann Hunt, from left, discuss the new VIPS program being initiated in the secondary schools. Scene was a recent workshop for VIPS chairmen and PTA presidents. Volunteers are needed in both the elementary and secondary schools in Midland. VIPS is a project of the Midland City Council PTA.

VIPS program begins again with opening of fall school term

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) program, highly successful in recruiting during past years, begins its fifth year of operation this school year.

The program was formed to meet a need: to encourage its participants to learn to better understand the schools, learn to share their talents, to grow in their understanding of young people and to learn new skills.

"Come Grow With Us" is this year's theme, which is an expansion of last year's "Let Yourself Grow" theme, according to Nell Furgeson, chairman of the VIPS program.

"Goal is to improve the quality of education through encouragement of more parent and citizen involvement," she said.

VIPS is the major project of the Midland City Council Parent-Teacher Association (PTA). Patti DeFrance is president.

Mrs. Furgeson said that the education of a child requires, time, effort and responsibility on the part of the school, home and concerned Midland citizens.

She emphasized the importance of participation through voluntarism, whether in large or small ways.

"The schools need volunteer help in a variety of ways," she said. "There's always a need."

"The opportunity is there, but volunteers are desperatey wanted."

She said that many parents are under the mistaken belief that there are plenty of volunteers in the school, but this is not so. "In some schools, there is even a problem in getting volunteers to help plan the school parties. We only have two parties a year for each room and that may seem like a little thing to work for, but to the children, it's very important and something they look forward to and remember."

Volunteers are needed in many projects: as a room mother, to assist in the Halloween carnival, in library, classroom, principal's office, school improvement and beautification projects and as a Helping Hand.

Assistance is also needed in such programs as Partners-In-Reading, SPARK, Carver Centr's education enrichment program, Head Start, etc.

Newest aspect of the program this year is the addition of the secondary schools to the VIPS program. "Mothers who have been active in volunteer work during their child's elementary years are still needed while their child enters high school," said Mrs. Furgeson.

Fathers are also needed in the VIPS program.

She explained that parents who are interested in entering the program will receive forms carried home by the school students Sept. 8.

Mrs. Furgeson said that this is a good time to "take a bite of the apple."

The City Council PTA has a VIPS coordinating team which has stayed busy throughout the summer setting goals and objectives for the VIPS program. The team is responsible for preparing materials and training elementary and secondary school volunteer chairmen.

Fall workshop for participants has been scheduled for Oct. 8.

The VIPS program received much community support last year through businesses, banks and other civic groups. Their financial support provided for a volunteer newsletter, fall workshop and spring luncheon.

Mystic seaport has program on education

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — Mystic Seaport Museum, the nation's largest maritime museum, offers a variety of educational programs from preschool to postgraduate level.

Museum teachers visit school classrooms to give lectures on such topics as whaling, 19th-century life at sea or ashore and shipbuilding, tailored to the age level of the students.

In the seaport's Children's Museum, visiting youngsters are invited into a re-created "captain's day cabin" aboard a ship, where they may play with replicas of antique toys, clothing and books and learn about children who went to sea a century ago.

Skater's handicap no bar to winning

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Judges in roller-skating dance competitions don't immediately notice that Stan Dilbeck has congenitally deformed arms.

In a sport built on finesse and precision, Dilbeck and his wife, Susan, learned to fool the judges and wow the crowds.

The Dilbecks won the compulsory dance championship in the novice division of the 1981 Southwest Pacific Region even though Dilbeck has two fingers on each hand, his left arm does not bend and both arms are shorter than normal.

"Sometimes we have to do a move differently than other dance skaters because of my arms, but we're able to do it in such a way that it still lets the dance flow," said Dilbeck, 38, a city planning supervisor.

"The judges know what we are doing, but we do it in such a way that they don't realize it until it's already done. "Of course, the length of my arms would prohibit any lifts."

Dilbeck said lifts are not required.

The couple work to camouflage the handicap in their routine, apparently with success. They placed first in each of five elimination rounds held since January, successfully bettering their eighth-place regional finish last season.

"We had a lot of personal problems," said Dilbeck, reflecting on last season. "Catastrophe after catastrophe, including our house burning down."

"And I had my appendix out just before that," said Mrs. Dilbeck, an Internal Revenue Service accounting technician.

But their devotion to skating was greater than the setbacks. They met at a roller rink, skated together for the next 12 years, and even got married on skates.

She considers the partnership the key to good skating.

"The matching of the couple is what's important — doing the same thing at the same time and doing it the way it's in the rule book," she said. "The footwork and the dance patterns are the dominant things."

Two members of the Texas Cowgirls, an organization composed of former Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders, will make an appearance Saturday in Midland. They are visiting here in conjunction with the grand opening activities of Midland Home Lumber Co, 401 S. Main. Pictured is Patty Taylor. She will appear with JudyTheisen. Both women keep a busy schedule, from making appearances in Japan for Mitsibushi Automobile promotion to starring as their former selves in the movie, "North Dallas Forty." They have also appeared in Playboy Magazine.

Bundle of joy costs a bundle

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

A poster in a maternity ward greets new parents with the message: "Welcome to your $78,000 investment." In a phrase that little bundle of joy is going to cost you a bundle.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates it costs $78,000 to $134,000 to raise a child born in 1981 to age 18. And that's in "current" dollars. Inflation, if it continues on its present course, will increase those figures.

The birth of a child represents the beginning of a costly endeavor, one that is further escalated by inflation, says a recent Cornell University study. The study shows the direct expenditures involved in raising a child have increased by 33 percent since 1977 for a family maintaining a moderate spending level.

The figures are based on USDA estimated food budgets for several levels or standards of living; on the costs of clothing, housing, transportation, health and medical services; and in some instances, the cost of a four-year college education is included.

Most articles about child raising center on the joys of parenthood. Few focus on the economic realities.

Cornell has taken this close up look at the cost of raising a child, not to discourage people from having children, but to help them think through the effect of children on economic as well as social and emotional levels, says Josephine Swanson, a department extension leader in consumer education at Cornell.

Interestingly, Swanson notes, while dollar costs are not the primary consideration used by most couples when deciding whether or not to have a child, they are the primary reason cited not to have additional children, although each additional child would cost less in terms of family expenses, since most of the initial baby equipment has been purchased for the first child.

The study notes that the benefits of adding a child to the family is a factor that must be considered, and one to which you cannot add a dollar amount. Swanson said the study found people had children for the following reasons: the fulfillment of adulthood, expansion of self, the satisfaction of contributing to the well-being of others, for emotional security and identity, social prestige, and for the satisfaction of establishing a family unit.

The economic benefits of having a child have diminished because of the nature of our economy and society, the Cornell extension leader noted. But some persons interviewed for the study indicated children could contribute to household work and provide some possible economic support to the parents later in life.

Swanson said there are non-economic costs that accompany the arrival of a child, some of which are expected and some not. The changes in lifestyle, psychological and emotional changes, the loss of privacy, and the fatigue parenthood can bring.

Cornell research shows there are 19,000 additional hours spent on household work for care of a child by non-employed persons over the 18 years of childhood.

Supporting a child to age 18 is the largest category of direct costs, the study notes. Within this category, said Swanson, housing is the leading item in child-rearing expenses, followed by food and transportation costs.

Another cost that is likely to be overlooked is the "opportunities for advancement because the career has been interrupted to raise a child, said Swanson.

The study concludes however, despite the rather gloomy predictions about the economic and emotional costs of parenting, the non-economic benefits of having those little bundles of joy must be at least as great as their economic costs, since the birthrate continues to rise.

Teens and makeup

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Most girls have started wearing makeup by age 14, a survey of 1,500 teens between the ages of 12 and 20 indicates.

The poll, conducted by 'Teen magazine's Teen Research Gang, found that 93 percent of all teen-age girls use lip makeup, more than half using it daily, and 85 percent had started by age 14. Other statistics show that the overwhelming majority also were using eye and face makeup by that age.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

A portable crib

DEAR HELOISE:

As a new mother of 10 months, I have discovered other wonderful and economical uses for the plastic oval or oblong laundry basket besides its original purpose.

When our baby was small (till she was about four months old) I would bring the basket along with me when going for overnight (or longer) visits. I'd put a pillow on the bottom, then a blanket on that. Soft! It makes a handy portable crib.

Now that our daughter is older (10 months), I use the basket for a toy-box. I've covered the outside with juvenile printed material for a decorative touch.

The basket is easy to put away when company comes, and it's also easy for my daughter to get at her toys. — Pamela Stenger

+ + +

Clever Mommy! These baskets are lightweight and inexpensive and can serve several purposes. You've shared a couple of good ones. Thanks! — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: In a book on the Middle Ages, which I read recently for a Humanities course, a chapter on knights' equipment contained the following information:

To de-rust a hauberk (coat-of-mail) put it into a leather bag with sand and vinegar, then toss it around for exercise, like a medicine ball.

Do you suppose you could have written a household hints column in a former life? — Alice Wright

+ + +

Maybe so, especially since vinegar is mentioned! Have to admit, though, that even I hadn't heard of that use for it, but it must have worked! Thanks for a chuckle. — Heloise

DOUBLE DUTY

Dear Heloise: Just the other day when taking my clothes out of the dryer, I started to discard my dryer fabric softener sheets when I thought of a thrifty idea.

The used sheets could serve as interfacings in cuffs, pocket flaps, etc!

Now, I put them in my sewing drawer instead of the trash! — Buns Miller

HOT SPOTS

Dear Heloise: I am a male homemaker, living alone and cooking for myself most of the time, and I have a problem.

How do you scoop the insides out of a soft-boiled egg without burning the skin off two fingers and a thumb?

Yes, I have tried holding the one half in a towel or something, but that method is so messy and the yolk usually gets on the towel.

So would you get the gals to help, or better yet, have one of them show me!

Read you every day. — Scotty

+ + +

Hm-m-m-m... Oh, well, till something better comes along, just wear lined rubber gloves when handling the hot eggs. No muss! No fuss!

And to cut the eggs in half, dip your sharpest knife in boiling water and then cut. The shell won't break or crumble if you do this. — Heloise

FREEZE BAKED POTATOES

Dear Heloise: I would like to share my favorite method of freezing potatoes, which my family thinks better than any other.

I cook the potatoes just as I would when serving them baked, allow them to cool thoroughly, then wrap each one in foil and freeze them.

In the Supreme Court, there are only eight of them against all of her.

DEAR ABBY

Readers give critical churchgoer the 'needle' about complaint

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with DISGUSTED IN YAKIMA, who wrote to you complaining about the woman who did needlework during church services.

The critical one should be paying attention to the service rather than rubbernecking around to see what others in the congregation are doing. It is entirely possible that the needlework lady is getting more out of the service than her critic who is so easily distracted. (One can knit and still listen to what's being said.)

Moreover, the critic appears to be judging her fellow (or sister) worshiper. It's none of her business what others are doing, so long as there is no audible distraction.

I doubt if the minister would be disturbed if he knew there was a needleworker in his congregation. Speaking as a minister myself, I'd much rather have a busily knitting needleworker in church than at home among the absentees. — THE REV. C.W. KIRKPATRICK, UNION CHURCH OF CHRIST, LUDLOW, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: I owe you and your column a debt of gratitude. Because of the letter from DISGUSTED IN YAKIMA, denouncing the young woman who did handiwork in church while listening to the sermon, I now understand what Christianity is all about!

Ecclesiastical platitudes such as "Love thy neighbor," "Judge not lest ye be judged" and "Satan finds work for idle hands," not to mention "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass..." no longer have any meaning.

DISGUSTED's signature was off a bit. Since this saintly person has obviously been commissioned by heaven to establish rules of conduct when in church and to monitor the deportment of fellow worshipers rather than pay attention to the sermon, the letter should have been signed, "The Perfect Christian"! — (Signed) A MERRY OLD SINNER NAMED R. F. BARRY, KEWANEE, ILL.

DEAR SINNER: Hallelujah, brother. And amen.

DEAR ABBY: DISGUSTED IN YAKIMA has a point. I, too, would find knitting in church a distraction. In fact, any kind of motion would prevent me from concentrating. Were I to encounter a knitter in church, my only defense would be to close my eyes. But then, I wouldn't dare. Others might think I was snoozing. — EMILY IN OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: DISGUSTED should tend to her own knitting. I know several women who do handicraft work during church services, and they donate the items to Children's Hospital or the Rescue Mission, or they simply clothe their own children.

It is entirely possible to listen to an entire sermon without dropping a stitch. — IN STITCHES IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the busybody who was disgusted with the lady who took her needlework to church and worked on it during the sermon: I needlepoint because I feel guilty if I just sit and do nothing.

Doing needlepoint made it possible for me to quit smoking.

Doria divers find ship's safe

NEW YORK — Divers probing the wreck of the Andrea Doria Wednesday found a Bank of Rome safe in a debris-strewn lounge of the luxury liner and hope to raise it to the surface by the end of the week.

A team of divers, which also found a large quantity of china bowls and plates in a pantry of the vessel, is still looking for a second safe, used by the ship's purser to protect passengers' valuables, in the same first-class lounge.

Since the Andrea Doria sank in 1956 in waters 45 miles south of Nantucket after being rammed by Swedish liner Stockholm, it has been rumored that the two safes contained a fortune in jewelry. The Bank of Rome safe was said to contain cash being transported to New York. Fifty-two passengers on the Anrea Doria died in the accident.

Peter Gimbel, producer and principal photographer of a planned new film on the vessel, said last month that he hoped to raise both safes to the surface, and torch them open on live television. According to maritime law, the contents o the safes could b claimed by anyone wh retrieves them.

Gimbel photographe and produced "The Mys tery of the Andrea Doria" in 1975; he said this documentary will be titled "The Andrea Doria: The Final Chapter." He said he hoped to settle two rumors about the vessel — that the safes contained valuables, and that the 700-foot liner sank because a key watertight door was missing. Gimbel also made the critically acclaimed "Blue Water, White Death," a film about the Great White Shark.

The captain of the Sea Level II, the surface-support vessel anchored over the wreck, told a reporter Wednesday that Gimbel and his wife, Elga Andersen, were busy and could not speak on the radio. He said divers were working feverishly to finish the project by Monday, the day the Sea Level II is scheduled to return to Montauk, N.Y.

The film company's Manhattan spokeswoman, Lillian Pickard, said divers retrieved a large quantity of china in the ship's pantry. She said the items were gold rimmed but "fairly simple" in design.

A hodge-podge of treasures, trivia

ALICE BONNER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When a wealthy Englishman named James Smithson willed 152 years ago that his entire estate of over $500,000 be spent setting up a museum in Washington, little did he realize that it would eventually become the repository for:

— 6,012 pelts from dogs, wild hogs and other animals.
— 5,832 hand tools.
— 2,587 musical instruments.
— 34,146 nests and eggs.
— 4,785 sea sponges.

Neither, for that matter, did the Smithsonian Institution, the museum created by his bequest, until three years ago when it began the first-ever top-to-bottom tally of the treasures and trivia that have been squirreled away in its attics and basements over the 135 years of its existence.

Today, with the cataloguing barely half completed, Smithsonian officials say they believe they have about 78 million items, ranging from antique light bulbs to the pickled brains of two former curators (the curators willed them to the Smithsonian) stashed away in dusty cabinets and on display in museum hallways. But they won't know for sure until the count is completed in early 1983.

"For the first time in the history of the museum we'll know what we have on the shelf," said Fred Collier, collections manager of paleobiology in the Museum of Natural History, where the vast majority — 60 million — of the Smithsonian's items are kept. "We are finding things that are not gone, but just misplaced, and once you misplace something in four or five floors of fossils. ..."

The Smithsonian's philosophy throughout its existence could well fit the axiom that it's better to have it and not need it than to need it and not have it.

Trouble is, the nation's attic keeper has never quite known what all it has in its 13 museums, which include the National Zoo; the Museum of American History; History and Technology; the National Portrait Gallery; National Collection of Fine Arts; the Hirshhorn; Renwick and Freer galleries; the Air and Space Museum; and the Cooper-Hewitt Museum, located in New York City.

The opportunity to rectify that situation was presented to the Smithsonian when it decided in 1978 to build a $29 million storehouse in suburban Maryland. That facility, scheduled to open in 1983, will house essentially everything that is not on display in the Smithsonian's consortium of museums. Since only about 1 percent of the Smithsonian's collections are actually viewable by the public, that meant there would be an enormous amount that had to be stored — and kept track of.

So, for the last three years, inventory technicians — specialists in counting and recording — have been filling Smithsonian computers with information about the number of locomotives, pieces of graphic arts, textiles, and even barges (there is one from the Battle of Lake Champlain) in the Smithsonian's possession.

Among those things recorded so far have been 14 million postage stamps, a full-scale, water-driven sawmill; a dozen or more Zuni Indian rabbit sticks (boomerang-like sticks believed to have been used to stun game); 65,000 medical science items; and 120,000 pieces of political history memorabilia.

The Smithsonian has saved the hides of street dogs, mountain lions and coyotes. They hang by the nose — along with the precious pelts of river otters, seals and other large mammals — down in the Natural History Museum's fur vault.

Smithsonian personnel, whose attitudes toward the monumental task range from deadly earnestness to amusement, unanimously emphasize that the project is much greater than a simple count. The vast and varied collection that has steadily grown from the time Smithson's dream was realized with the founding of the museum in 1846 has never been fully catalogued. The count is complicated by the fact that many of the items have not been properly preserved.

Assistant secretary Paul Perrot said in an interview that discovery was actually "one of the byproducts of the inventory. ... We're determining the condition of our collections and realizing in a dramatic way that objects have a life of their own and unless properly housed will go the way of all flesh."

"Only in the last 10 years or so have we been confronted with the knowledge that conservation is more than just putting something in a reasonably dry place," Perrot said.

Alice Thompson, a staffer in the ethnology section of the Museum of Natural History's anthropology department, recently showed a reporterbaskets made by long-vanished California Indians — which was kept in one drawer of the ethnology section.

The baskets were carefully arranged and wrapped in plastic only because a graduate student used them recently for her doctoral research. Then she opened another drawer nearby. The similarly valuable collection inside was jumbled and disorderly.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3♣	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

Contract bridge is a simple game—it's the players who make it complicated. East posed an unnecessary problem that his partner was unable to solve—at the cost of an opposing game.

We are not unqualified admirers of North's three club opening bid because the hand is too strong and the suit a card short. No one can fault South's decision to bid three no trump, and the final contract was not without merit.

West had to choose between the major suits for his opening lead, and did well when he selected a spade rather than the top of his heart sequence. He reasoned that he had to develop tricks quickly, and he needed only to find his partner with a high spade honor to have a chance to take three tricks in the suit.

East's king of spades won the first trick, and the return of the deuce was won by declarer. When the club finesse lost, East continued with the three of spades, allowing partner to cash two more tricks to complete the defensive book.

Unfortunately, West was saddled with the lead and he didn't know which red suit to shift to. He chose to exit "safely" with the jack of hearts, and East went to bed with his two diamond tricks.

In the post-mortem, East maintained that his three of spades, rather than the five, played on the third round of the suit, was a "clear suit-preference signal" for diamonds. In the highest of circles, he might have had a valid point—an expert might distinguish between the five and the three as having suit-preference connotations. But we fault East for not defeating the contract.

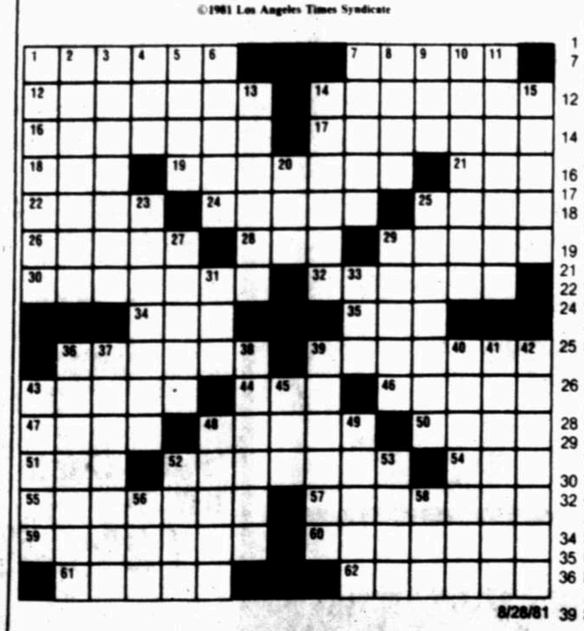

At rubber bridge, an extra 50 points above the line is peanuts compared to the opponents making a game. East should have reasoned that the early play marked West with both the queen and jack of spades. Thus, East could count five tricks for the defense if he simply cashed the ace of diamonds after winning the king of clubs and before returning a spade. That would have prevented the opponents from becoming vulnerable and struck a blow for partnership confidence by relieving partner of an opportunity to go wrong.

Rubber bridge clubs through out the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Disparity discovered in Social Security funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just a few days' difference in age could cost workers retiring next year as much as $110 a month in Social Security.

It depends on when they turn 65.

People who turn 65 and retire in 1982 are discovering they will get smaller checks than those who turn 65 this year.

The disparity stems not from any of the recent cuts the Reagan administration and Congress have made in Social Security, but from the overhaul of the benefit formula that Congress adopted in 1977 to bail the program out of an earlier fiscal crisis.

Workers born in 1916 or earlier were allowed to keep benefitting from the formula that computed their checks using both the average growth in wages and price increases. The new formula, for all those born in 1917 or later, used only the wage figures in calculating the benefits.

The old method overcompensated retirees for inflation, experts agreed. But the lawmakers failed to provide a smooth transition from the old formula to the new, creating what the experts called a "notch."

Two workers born only days apart, on Dec. 31, 1916, and on Jan. 2, 1917, who held the same jobs and paid the maximum payroll tax into Social Security from its inception in 1937, could get benefits that vary by from $1,300 to $2,000 a year.

If both retire next January, the older senior citizen will get $789 a month from Social Security, while the worker just a few days younger will draw only $679.

Should the two keep working, the gap will grow. If they retire in January 1983, one would get $920 and the other $771, a $149 difference. In 1984, the difference widens to $175: $1,065 versus $890.

The notch already has affected to lesser degrees those who took early retirement in the past two years. It will affect the World War I baby generation for years to come. With 1.6 million Americans retiring on Social Security each year, the number affected is in the millions.

Jack Biethan, 62, who retired last February as a sheet metal worker for the Portland, Ore., schools, compared notes with fellow workers and was shocked to find that some born months apart were getting markedly different benefits.

"This starts kind of a rhubarb," said Biethan, of Aloha, Ore. The plumbers, electricians and other tradesmen he worked with "are irate almost to the point of socking people in the jaw. They're really mad about it."

Social Security officials say they have not gotten many complaints, probably because most people are unaware of the notch.

Deputy Commissioner Robert J. Myers said the agency is investigating ways to keep the notch from widening without eliminating it.

One possible cure would be to allow all retirees to take advantage of the old law for a few more years, but the agency has ruled that out because it would cost $7 billion and aggravate the system's fiscal crunch.

Myers said that no matter what the size of their benefit checks, "everybody in essence is getting a bargain now compared to what they paid for....It's just that some are getting more of a bargain than others. I don't think it's a good situation, but on the other hand it isn't as though somebody is being robbed."

The maximum Social Security tax on workers since 1937 totaled $14,765. A 65-year-old retiree could recoup that in 18 months.

Myers, then a private citizen, warned Congress about the notch in 1977 and again in 1979, but no one anticipated it would be this precipitous.

"Those 1977 amendments were awfully complicated, and by and large they did a good job," he said. "This was one thing that was messed up on."

Social Security's 'notch'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some examples from the Social Security Administration of how the Social Security "notch" affects those born only a month apart.

The figures are the monthly benefits for low wage earners born in December 1916 and January 1917 if they retired:

— In January 1980 at age 63, $254 versus $242.

— In January 1981 at age 64, $324 versus $298.

— In January 1982 at age 65, $400 versus $355.

— In January 1983 at age 66, $459 versus $401.

— In January 1984 at age 67, $534 versus $458.

For average wage earners born in the same months, the gaps are:

— In January 1980 at age 63, $388 versus $365.

— In January 1981 at age 64, $500 versus $449.

— In January 1982 at age 65, $623 versus $535.

— In January 1983 at age 66, $731 versus $605.

— In January 1984 at age 67, $836 versus $691.

For maximum wage earners born in the same months, the gaps are:

— In January 1980 at age 63, $493 versus $463.

— In January 1981 at age 64, $635 versus $570.

— In January 1982 at age 65, $789 versus $679.

— In January 1983 at age 66, $920 versus $771.

— In January 1984 at age 67, $1,065 versus $890.

Here is how the notch affects those born in December 1917 and January 1918. For low wage earners, the gaps on retirement are:

— In January 1980 at age 62, $225 versus $212.

— In January 1981 at age 63, $278 versus $264.

— In January 1982 at age 64, $333 versus $318.

— In January 1983 at age 65, $391 versus $378.

— In January 1984 at age 66, $437 versus $430.

For average wage earners born in the same months, the gaps are:

— In January 1980 at age 62, $339 versus $316.

— In January 1981 at age 63, $419 versus $393.

— In January 1982 at age 64, $502 versus $475.

— In January 1983 at age 65, $588 versus $565.

— In January 1984 at age 66, $659 versus $646.

For maximum wage earners born in the same months, the gaps are:

— In January 1980 at age 62, $430 versus $402.

— In January 1981 at age 63, $532 versus $498.

— In January 1982 at age 64, $637 versus $604.

— In January 1983 at age 65, $751 versus $724.

— In January 1984 at age 66, $848 versus $833.

ACORN upset with Bell

Old, sick can't pay more for phone service

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Old and sick people on fixed incomes cannot find any more money to send to Southwestern Bell each month, according to several witnesses who made emotional pleas to the Public Utility Commission.

"This is the fourth time in a row that we've had to be here to stop the largest and hungriest corporation in the world from squeezing the low and moderate income people of Texas," said Hannah Lovejoy of Houston.

The Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) asked PUC Hearing Examiner Carolyn Shellman on Thursday to recommend no rate hike. The phone company wants $469.8 million in increases, including a $5.45 per month jump in residential rates.

ACORN is particularly upset with Bell's "measured service" proposal, under which local bills would be calculated according to time of day, duration and distance. Measured service would replace so-called "lifeline" service — flat-rate, lower cost service for customers who make fewer than 25 calls per month.

"If we don't have the bucks to pay ($5.45 more per month), we can just agree to pay for every minute that we're on the phone," said Mrs. Lovejoy. "And if we don't like that we can lump it, because Bell is the only phone business in town."

Paul Roth, Bell vice president for revenues in Texas, said customers now getting lifeline service would be allowed to keep it, but no new connections would be made, if the rate hike package is approved.

ACORN witness Ida Mae Crow complained that Bell is making life harder for the poor, who already face cutbacks in social services.

"The president is trying to kill us and so is everyone else," she said. "God's a living God and he's looking at all evil things. If that ain't evil, tell me what is evil."

James Tippett of Houston said, "Bell's got plenty of money. They're just robbing the poor."

James Miller of Dallas brought letters of support for ACORN from Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, and Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas.

Ms. Shellman told the witnesses she would try to "balance all the interests in an equitable way."

The rate hearing began Monday and could last four to six weeks.

Roth met with reporters after the ACORN testimony and said, "We certainly have no intention to rob the poor. We're not as uncaring and unfeeling as those comments indicate."

Reps. Paul Colbert and Debra Danburg, both Houston Democrats, showed up at the hearing to support ACORN. Colbert said the measured service proposal is a bad idea for several reasons.

He complained about the added bookkeeping expense of measuring local calls. That expense, he said, is not outweighed by any advantages of the proposal.

Colbert also said measured service could be an invasion of privacy.

Canadian controllers renew U.S. unsafe claim

OTTAWA (AP) — A Tokyo-bound Northwest Orient Airlines flight wound up in a Canadian rocket firing range near Victoria, British Columbia on Aug. 8 because of delayed action and lack of knowledge by U.S. air traffic controllers in Seattle, a Canadian fact-finding report says.

The report, released Thursday, lists dozens of incidents that were investigated by Canadian union-management teams who recommended improvements in procedures at air traffic control centers in Seattle, Anchorage, Salt Lake City, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Boston and Winnipeg.

The American control centers are being manned by supervisors, nonstrikers and military personnel who replaced members of the striking U.S. air traffic controllers' union. The strikers were fired by the Reagan administration for violating a no-strike pledge.

Canada's 2,100-member Air Traffic Control Association, which is in sympathy with the U.S. strikers, released the fact-finding report, sparking a renewed dispute with the Canadian government over whether U.S. airspace is safe.

The Canadian controllers say it is unsafe because regular controllers have been replaced by inexperienced newcomers. The government denies U.S. airspace is unsafe and has rejected the union request to stop handling flights to and from the United States.

According to the report, the fact-finding teams found none of the irregularities they investigated led to a loss of separation, in which aircraft fail to maintain safe distances between them.

The fact-finders made several recommendations including the need for fast answers to Canadian requests about flying aircraft. In many cases reviews of control procedures are recommended.

In the case of the Tokyo-bound Northwest Orient airlines flight 901, for example, the investigators found Seattle controllers were apparently unaware of the rocket range, designated a danger zone. The controllers also failed to transfer communication and control of the aircraft properly and waited too long to turn the aircraft clear of the dangerous airspace, the report said.

The investigators recommended that Seattle review its radar coordination with Vancouver, ensure their control transfers are made at the right moment and familiarize themselves with the radar systems and the danger zones.

PATCO files appeal on complaint dismissal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The air traffic controllers union has appealed the dismissal of its unfair labor practices complaint against the Federal Aviation Administration.

Alexander T. Graham, Washington regional director of the Federal Labor Relations Authority, had ruled that union charges that the FAA failed to bargain in good faith "cannot be sustained."

In response to Graham's decision, Richard Leighton, an attorney for the Professional Organization of Air Traffic Controllers, filed an appeal Thursday with FLRA general counsel Stephan Gordon.

Leighton said in a telephone interview that PATCO would seek to question whether there was a sufficient investigation of the union's charges before Graham arrived at his decision.

Poland's loan payments to U.S. to be deferred

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The United States and Poland have signed an agreement to defer most loan payments due from the communist government in 1981 for five to eight years, the official PAP news agency reported.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy, who declined to be named, said today the payments involved $380.9 million. He said he did not know Poland's total debt to the United States this year, and PAP did not mention a dollar figure either.

PAP said Thursday that under the agreement "90 percent of these credits will be rescheduled for the years 1986-1989."

"The rescheduling of these payments will considerably relieve pressure on the Polish balance of payments," PAP said.

Poland's overall indebtedness to the West is estimated at between $23 billion and $26 billion depending on the value of the dollar, with about 60 percent of that amount owed to commercial banks and 40 percent to governments.

Earlier this year Poland, the United States and 14 other Western creditor nations agreed on terms to reschedule some $2.5 billion in Polish debts falling due this year. The agreement has to be ratified by each government, which the United States did Thursday, PAP said.

The Communist regime is still negotiating with Western banks to delay payment of $3.1 billion in debts due this year.

Poland's economy has been crippled by the staggering foreign debts, production cutbacks and labor disputes.

The government averted the latest threatened strike by agreeing Thursday to discuss compensation for workers injured or fired during food riots in the city of Radom in 1976.

El Salvador to get four more U.S. helicopters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is sending four more helicopters to El Salvador to help its government battle leftist guerrillas the State Department says are stepping up attacks on non-military targets.

The four UH1H "Huey" choppers will bring to 10 the number shipped to El Salavador. Pentagon sources say seven of the 10 are grounded because of combat damage and maintenance problems.

In San Salvador Wednesday, Salvadoran Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia appealed to the United States for more helicopters.

"They sent up four, but we need more," Garcia said.

The latest shipment was announced Wednesday by State Department spokesman Dean Fischer, who also said the administration is considering additional military and economic aid to the government of Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Fischer said the guerrillas apparently are trying to paralyze the Salvadoran economy by systematically attacking the electrical, communications and transportation systems.

This "reveals a cynical disregard for Salvadoran noncombatants and a willingness by the guerrillas to attempt to destroy the country if they can't overthrow the government," Fischer said.

He said the Duarte government is repairing the damage as it occurs but that the short- and long-term social costs are obvious.

"The loss of water, light and power to hospitals, for example, has daily implications," he said.

Fischer said guerrilla activity in El Salvador has increased, adding that the resupply of arms and munitions "appears to have become easier."

The U.S. helicopters are used mostly to resupply government troops in rural areas, according to Fischer.

Last Friday, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told an interviewer that Salvadoran troops needed additional mobility.

MIDLAND COUNTY
NOTICE TO DAY CARE CENTER OPERATORS

Midland County has received Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to construct a day care center building in southeast Midland to serve low/moderate income clients. Construction of the facility should be completed within 12 months.

Midland County is seeking proposals from qualified persons, groups and agencies interested in operating a non-profit day care center in this new facility. The day care center must serve 100-150 children of all ages, including infants of ages 6 weeks through preschool, and may also provide after-school care for older children. It is anticipated that the operator of the day care program in the new County building will seek Title XX funds from the Texas Department of Human Resources (TDHR) in order to make the day care services more affordable to lower income persons. The day care center operator will be responsible for operating and normal maintenance expenses in connection with the day care center. The day care center operator must have or be capable of receiving a license from the TDHR. The selected program operator will be required to sign an agreement with the County to operate the day care center for at least 5 years.

Interested persons, groups and agencies should submit a proposal to Midland County by the close of business on Tuesday, September 11, 1981. Proposals should, at a minimum, indicate the name, address and phone number of the proposed operator; previous experience in operating day care programs; evidence of current or proposed non-profit status; letters of reference; resources which would be brought to the new day care center (e.g. furniture, equipment, supplies, etc.); proposed sources of operating funds and a proposed staffing and administrative plan. Other pertinent data will also be considered.

Proposals should be submitted to William B. Adhers, Midland County Judge, Midland County Courthouse, 200 W. Wall, P.O. Box 421, Midland, Texas 79702. Proposals will be reviewed by the County's CDBG Day Care Center Committee and discussed at the Commissioners Court meeting on October 12, 1981. For further information, contact Judge Adhers at 915/682-9481.

Midland's 3 in 9th beats El Paso, 7-6

Cubs wind up with Chicken Delight

Dave Owen

Midland's Cubs were their old irreverent selves from Down Neck before 1,398 approving Beer Night fans as they struck for three ninth inning runs to beat El Paso, 7-6, at Cubs Stadium Thursday night.

Jim Tracy, hitting in his ninth straight game, singled home the game-winner with the bases loaded on a blow up the power alley that could have produced a couple of more, if they had been needed. But first, Mel Hall, responded to a midgame presentation of an $800 Seiko watch from Kruger Jewelry as the Cubs' most popular player by tying it with a bases loaded two-run single.

A pitch before, Hall had sliced a drive over the left field fence, foul by a foot.

But the Cubs also had other heroes, like Dave Owen, coming off the bench to play a new position and supply the spark with a walk, single, double and two stolen bases and his presence on first after a single so unnerved pitcher Weldon Swift that he threw to the bag 14 times in an effort to keep him from taking off.

And, then, there was Jon Perlman, going through a lost season, who came away still looking for his second victory, but found his rhythm with 8 1/3 innings of eight-hit, eight-strikeout pitching, although four walks were to almost spoil it for him.

THE WIN pulled the Cubs to within four games of the Texas League West lead after San Antonio beat Amarillo and gave Midland a 3-1 lead going into tonight's final game with the Diablos, one at which the San Diego Chicken will be back to delight the fans.

El Paso took an early 4-0 lead when Stan Davis hit a three-run behind a couple of walks in the first as Perlman flirted just out of the strike zone low before settling down to whiff John Hanson and Bill Schroeder for the final two outs and then add three more whiffs in the second.

"I don't know what happened," said the Perlman, an off season law student at Baylor who was 13-7 at Midland last yeer. "But even though I didn't get the win, I felt satisfied that I found the rhythm I lost at Iowa early in the year and I had a groove."

John Skorochocki's double and a Davis fly led to a 5-0 lead in the third, but after that Perlman surrendered nothing until Hanson got an infield single and Jerry Lane doubled him home in the ninth to make it 6-4. Rob Blyth, 8-5, came in to get the final two outs and was the vulture of record when Tracy made it a W instead of a L.

"He could have won it, but for those walks and that first inning homer that would have been a fly ball out any place else," said roving pitching coach Jim Napier.

TRACY, WHO spent the baseball strike learning to fish in Lake Michigan and proudly had his first five-pound bugle-mouth bass (sometimes referred to as a carp by less discerning anglers) stuffed and mounted, has gradually found his groove, too, after a two-month layoff.

Tracy hit .295 in games he started for the Chicago Cubs and was 3-for-20 as a pinchhitter, "I hit three or four line drives that were caught, but it's tough coming into a game cold off the bench. Sure, I was disappointed being sent down, but we had several outfielders come off the disabled list and I was the only one with options left."

The Cubs spoiled Weldon Swift's shutout in the fourth when Owen opened with a double, took third on a passed ball and scored on Hall's single. Walks to Jack Upton and Fritz Connally with two out loaded the bases and then Joe Carter's wicked shot off Swift's ankle caromed toward third for a hit that scored Hall while Upton came home on a passed ball.

"That run in the fifth was all Owen. He walked, stole second and took third on a wild pitch that most players wouldn't have run on and then scored on (Carmelo) Martinez' single," said Manager George Enright. "If we had 23 guys who wanted to play as much as he does..."

OWEN IS a typical example of why Herman Franks, new GM of the Chicago Cubs, wants another farm club. The UT—Arlington product from Cleburne has spent much of the season on the bench and should be playing somewhere. He got into the game Thursday when Enright rested Javier Fierro at second, a new position for him and had a big night at bat and afield, turning a double play in the fourth and robbing Terry Shoebridge of a hit in the sixth.

Langer comes out of tree

German shares first with Rogers, Irwin.

By GEORGE STRODE

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Bernhard Langer concedes his first appearance on the American Tour was unnerving, but he handled it with the talent that has made the West German a world class golfer at the age of 24.

It couldn't have been more unnerving, however, than last week when he climbed a tree to make a shot and salvage a bogey at York, England.

Langer was matched with two of the United States' best players, Masters champion Tom Watson and PGA winner Larry Nelson. The tournament was the $400,000 World Series of Golf and the course was Firestone Country Club South, one of the most feared, most respected layouts in the world.

LANGER cleared all of those hurdles. He shot 2-under-par 68 for a share of the first-round lead Thursday with British Open winner Bill Rogers and Hale Irwin, the winner of the Buick Open last week.

Langer beat Nelson by three shots and Watson, the defending champion here, by six.

"I was nervous on the first tee. But you have to play your own game. I enjoy the competition," said Langer, a pro since he was 15 and already the winner of four international tournaments.

An 8-iron shot from a fairway bunker to within two inches of the cup for an opening birdie quieted Langer's nerves, although he said he never shed them completely.

"But it's not bad to be a little nervous," said the first West German ever to play on the PGA Tour. "You concentrate more. I played quite well. I'm not complaining."

IRWIN AND Rogers, veterans of competition over this 7,173-yard monster, were surprised Firestone did not yield lower scores.

"There was no wind," Irwin said. "We didn't have the tremendous rough that we've had here. The greens are holding well. I don't understand why this quality field did not shoot lower."

Only five players in the invitational field of 27 could better par of 70. Ed Fiori and Curtis Strange had 69s. Just two more, Peter Oosterhuis of England and Jerry Pate, matched par.

Raymond Floyd, Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Australian Greg Norman joined Nelson at 71. David Graham, the U.S. Open champion, settled for 72, Bruce Lietzke shot 74 with Watson, and Lee Trevino had a 78.

IRWIN HIT a 6-iron shot around a spruce tree from the rough on the 18th hole to within six inches of the cup for a birdie and a share of the lead.

"That last hole reflected my day," he said. "I hit some bad shots and some fantastic shots in the same round. Rogers played solidly. I was the antithesis of him."

Super Dog Night

Memorial Stadium will be the site of the 1981 Midland High School pep rally known as Super Dog Night 7 p.m. Saturday for fans wishing to show their support for the Bulldog football squad.

Head coach Pat Culpepper will be on hand along with his coaching staff and team. During the evening, the players will be introduced while the cheerleaders and MHS band perform to keep spirits high.

Tickets for the rally night are $2.50 per person and are available at the stadium.

Bill Rogers blasts from a sand trap on eight at Firestone.

CFA gives beleagured grid fan a break, but...

TED BATTLES BATTLE SCENE

The College Football Association, despite the tidal wave of criticism that has greeted its greedy grasp for green, may have done the right thing for the wrong reason.

In their alleged lust for more loot, the nation's 61 football powers...all of the big ones...may have struck a blow for the fireside fan, both the guy who is genuinely stuck at home and the guy who misses all the good games on tv because he's out supporting his favorite neighborhood club, be it Texas Tech, Texas, McMurry, or Elon on Saturday afternoon.

So what's wrong with football on all three networks, especially if one of the networks (NBC) wants to enter the prime-time Saturday night field, which has been studiously ignored except for those rare doubleheaders or special situations staged by ABC?

It would mean members of the Big 61 would be assured of two TV appearances during the four years of the contract. So be it if relations with the NCAA are ruptured. For the guarantee of exposure to such mighties as Rutgers, Army, Virginia Tech, Kansas, Syracuse, and Vanderbilt, it's little enough sacrifice.

And therein, such powers as the aforementioned, is where the rub lies.

One of the contentions of the CFA is that the Wichita States of the football world can not compete with the Oklahomas, and they are foolish to try. The Oklahomas, Penn States, Alabamas, Nebraskas of big time college football have different needs and are hogtied by vetoing Yales, Princetons, Wichita States, Randolph-Macons and other colleges with more modest football ambitions.

If protests that monetary benefits from an NBC TV affiliation are not the primary consideration, the CFA obviously wants to control its own destiny...size of coaching staffs, quantity and quality of scholarships and other kindred considerations. As matters stand, the programs of the big time state universities are "impeded" by such annoyances as the 30-a-year, 90-limit scholarship rules and regulations that restrict the size of the coaching staffs.

So in the future when a Nebraska or LSU complains that with a 40-man coaching staff and 350 players in uniform, revenues need to be increased and when the straining-to-keep up Rices, Kansas States, Vandys, and Georgia Techs protest, will they be told that they can not play with the Oklahomas of college football and they have no business trying?

Just how many of the original 61 will be able to operate under the no restrictions basis of the free-spenders? And where will those biggies be when the cannon fodder, the substance of those glossy No. 1 rankings, are no longer on the schedule? On whom do they feed? Certainly, not one another.

On the other hand, what of the dire predictions of those poor unfortunates not among the get-rich-61. Would a CFA-NBC alliance really have the damaging effects predicted, schools in wholesale numbers dropping football?

Or would, the remaining colleges, unencumbered by the outrageous demands of the national dreadnaughts, simply bring sanity back to the game by abandoning platoon football, which automatically would reduce scholarships and coaching staffs and make the game once more an athletic contest instead of a glorified exhibition of athletes with supberbly refined, but severely restricted, talents?

And how will pro football regard all of the possibilities, especially the abandoning the game by lesser endowed athletic programs. The NFL would frown on any move that would disrupt the even flow of talent from the world's greatest athletic feeder system, high school and college football.

The repercussions of discarded college football programs, if it came to that, would be felt all the way back to the high school level. With only CFA members and the remanants of the NCAA members handing out football scholarships, today's high school football player might be tempted to turn to basketball, baseball, track, golf or tennis, or, perish the thought, something else. The CFA could be the soccer's long-awaited foot-in-the-door chance.

Jan Stephenson grimaces at missed putt.

Sex symbol plays pretty good golf, too

DENVER (AP) — Once more renowned as the sex symbol of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, Jan Stephenson has turned serious about her craft, with some eye-opening results.

Two weeks ago, she set an LPGA record with an 18-under-par 198 to win the Mary Kay Classic in Dallas by a whopping 11 strokes. It was Stephenson's second victory of the year and helped boost her into the No.6 spot on the 1981 money list.

Stephenson moved into position for a third triumph by firing a 4-under-par 68 Thursday to share the first-round lead with Julie Stanger Pyne in the 72-hole, $150,000 Columbia Savings Classic.

They shared a 1-stroke edge over veteran Janet Coles, with eight golfers another shot back at 2-under 70, including Nancy Lopez-Melton and former champions JoAnne Carner and Sandra Haynie.

Donna Caponi, the leading money winner on the tour this year, and runnerup Pat Bradley were among 10 golfers grouped at 71. Defending champion Beth Daniel, suffering a triple-bogey after hitting into water on the par-3 10th hole, had an even-par 72.

STEPHENSON HAS been bothered by a back injury, but you wouldn't know it from her recent performances. In the past four tournaments, she owns one victory and two second-place finishes, making her the hottest player on the tour.

"I had a bad back all last year," she explains, referring to a season when she finished a disappointing 34th on the money list. "It's still pinching me a little bit. But I've been doing aerobic dancing three times a week, and that helps keep my back stretched. I'm seeing a doctor in Dallas and it's been feeling much better."

She said she was distracted by the turmoil that surrounded her posing in some revealing pictorials in Fairway Magazine last year, but also admits she liked the attention she received.

Rebs host Andrews

Bulldogs face Brownwood at San Angelo

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels and Midland High Bulldogs hope to find out tonight if all the work done last spring and this month were worthwhile when both teams compete in their only scrimmage of the year against an outside opponent.

The Rebels will host Andrews around 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. The junior varsities are set to start at 6 p.m. and the varsity scrimmage will follow. Meanwhile, the Bulldogs will travel to San Angelo to face the AAAA power of Gordon Wood's Brownwood at 6:30 p.m. at a practice field located just north of San Angelo Stadium.

It is an important night for both teams despite the fact that the scrimmages do not count on the season record of the teams involved. Through the spring and pre-season workouts this month, the two teams have had only teammates to workout against. Tonight they will find out how all that translates into positives and negatives against some outsiders.

Both Andrews and Brownwood should offer good tests for the locals. Both were playoff participants last year.

"We will be looking for execution both offensively and defensively in the scrimmage with Andrews," said Lee coach Spike Dykes. "We would like to see if the conditioning is where it ought to be at this stage of things and you never really know until you see them play.

"After the scrimmage, we would like to feel that some of the cream has come to the top at some positions and we hope we are physical enough to play because we don't have great size."

Dykes is pleased so far with the progress of his team. "We got off to a good start with 11 good practices that we were proud of and we had no major injuries. The kids showed a lot of enthusiasm and I think they are right on schedule at this point, but you never know. Andrews' coach Bill Shipman always has a fine outfit and I imagine they will give us all we want. They should be a little ahead of us since they have already had one scrimmage."

Dykes was not sure just what kind of format will be used in tonight's scrimmage. "I think each team will get the ball for 20 or 30 plays and see what they can do with it. We may play some of it by ear. The main thing is that we want the kids to get a good workout and get a good feel for playing another team. I think that is important for us right now."

Pat Culpepper, the Bulldog boss, is also excited about his scrimmage with Brownwood. "I expect Gordon Wood, who has over 350 victories in his coaching career, to run some things we haven't been able to work against. We've had only two or three days to prepare for an opponent and that isn't enough time to work on all of their tendencies.

"I would like to see a sound defense on our part and not give up the long play. I would also like to see the offensive line coming off the ball well. If we do that, I think we will accomplish something because something will have to happen."

It will be a controlled scrimmage with each team running 12 plays from around the 30-yard line and if the offense fails to gain a first down the ball will be moved up 10 yards to create a different situation. There will be some series run inside the 10-yard line also. Culpepper noted that there is a lack of lighting at the field they will be using so the junior varsity will run plays against Brownwood's No. 2 varsity team at times, so there will not be two scrimmages.

Shipman looks for Van Pearcy replacement at Andrews

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — Andrews High School suffered heavy losses at graduation time but the Mustangs are still alive, ready to battle preseason favorite Monahans and the rest of the District 2-AAAA schools for the title in 1981.

Last year, Andrews won the district, finishing the regular season undefeated in 10 contests before Lubbock Estacado ended the Mustangs' season in a bi-district clash.

Bill Shipman, starting his third year at the helm, has to rebuild the Mustangs minus all-state selection Van Pearcy. Pearcy, who set the district on its ear for three years running from tailback, is now performance in front of the critical eyes of Notre Dame coaches in South Bend, Ind.

SHIPMAN MUST find a way to replace Pearcy's 1,150 yards and 12 touchdowns along with replacements for eight other offensive starters and five defense mainstays. Shipman stated, "It's difficult to replace a back like Pearcy. But we feel like we have some backs that can do a good job. We will split up the ball carrying load a little more this year."

The situation may not be as bleak at Andrews as some have painted it. Shipman's football cupboard is not completely barren of quality football players.

For starters, Shipman has one of the quickness quarterbacks in West Texas in Keith Brooks. All Brooks did in 1980 was rush for 657 yards on 135 carries and score 82 points for a club that averaged 302.4 yards per game and scored at a 27.4 clip in eight district games. Concerning Brooks, Shipman said, "With Brooks we have one of the best quarterbacks in Texas." "And I'm not the only one saying that," added Shipman.

Brent Petross (165, junior) and Adam Smith (170, senior) are expected to step into starting roles in the backfield while Darrell Ray (155, junior) is slated to take over Marty Keesee's wingback job.

OFFENSIVELY, ANDREWS will most likely take advantage of Brooks' ability to run in an effort to loosen up defenses. Shipman stated, "We will throw the ball more and run more options. Brooks is a good sprint out quarterback and is very good at reading defenses which mades him a good option quaterback."

When the Mustangs go to the air, you can count on senior tight end Jeff Ashabranner (6'0", 205) being somewhere near the thrown ball. Smith should play a major role in the aerial attack from his wingback slot while seniors Ronnie Wallace (160), Randy Nelson (160) and Floyd Cornejo (152) will provide depth at wide receiver.

Up front, Shipman is looking for good things from senior guard Marty Slaton (195) and senior tackle Rumaldo Falcon (180). Newcomers that are expected to make their presence felt on the line are seniors Tommy Gatlin (165 guard) and Chuck Steard (185 center) while junior Roland Hamilton (200) is being counted to nail down a starting berth at tackle.

SHIPMAN SAID, "We have average size in our lines and the backfield isn't real big. What may hurt us is a lack of depth. We only have 30 on the varsity and only 11 are lettermen. We have 19 newcomers that have to be brought along."

Defensively, the Mustangs will be average size but have some quick linebackers and an excellent secondary. According to Shipman, the secondary of Brooks, Jamie Gonzales (5'11", 155, senior), Jaime Vela (5'5", 140, senior) and Petross should be more of the best in the district; if not in West Texas.

Basically Shipman says, "We should be pretty good. We won't be as strong as we were last year but not to far from it."

One of the keys for Andrews will be staying away from injuries. Last year, the Mustangs were lucky — they started the same lineup for eleven straight weeks. Shipman noted, "That (lack of injuries) really helped." He hopes that the streak continues through the 1981 season.

The Mustangs looked sharp in their opening scrimmage last Friday when they tripped AAA Slaton 4-2. Shipman noted that he saw some things that he was happy with and then, there were some things that displeased him also.

ANDREWS, WHO defeated Midland High in a regular season game last year will be looking to hand another Tall City team a defeat when the Mustangs journey to the Midland tonight to scrimmage with Spike Dykes' Midland Lee Rebels. Shipman said, "This scrimmage should tell us a lot about our football team. Lee is an excellent 5-5A team. If we play well against them, we should be able to play well in our district." Shipman added, "We are in good health and I hope that Lee has everyone healthy and ready to play. It should be an excellent test for us."

In District 2-AAAA, Shipman views Monahans as the legitimate favorite with "four or five of the rest of us as even as you could stack them."

After tonight's scrimmage, Andrews will be looking for their season opener Sept. 4 when the Mustangs travel to Seminole. On Sept. 11 the Mustangs host Midland High in a return engagement before opening the district race at home against Snyder.

Lefferts, Mongtomery go in Cubs final home game

The Cubs rallied for the win in the ninth when Mike Diaz reached first on an error, David Pagel singled to left and Owen walked to load the bases. That brought up Hall, who almost won it with one swing, but settled for tying it by lashing a two-run single up the middle.

BRUIN BREWIN's—Craig Lefferts, 11-12, will go for Midland tonight against El Paso's Larry Montgomery, 5-5...Plate umpire Pam Postema ejected Al Manning in the fourth after he protested a strike call on the same play that saw catcher Diaz almost knock Perlman out of the game. With runners on first and second, Manning squared away to bunt. Perlman charged the plate and Diaz lowbridged him with an attempted pick off throw to second....The Chicken had never been rained out until his first scheduled appearance here last year and he suffered his third rainout here earlier this month. The other rain out? Would you believe Tucson?.

Dodgers' Valenzuela four hits Cubs for sixth shutout

Ex-Cub Burris just misses hill gem

By The Associated Press

One-time Midland Cubs pitcher Ray Burris held Cincinnati to one hit for eight innings — a one-out single by Ken Griffey in the seventh — and rookie Terry Francona drove in the first three runs of his major league career as the Montreal Expos completed a three-game sweep of the Reds with a 12-0 victory Thursday night.

Burris, 6-5, lost his no-hitter when Griffey blasted a single to left field after one out in the seventh inning. Burris struck out three batters and walked one for his third straight victory of the second season. Jeff Reardon replaced Burris in the ninth.

THE EXPOS scored six runs in the third inning as Warren Cromartie singled home a pair of runs and John Milner crashed a two-run homer against starter Frank Pastore, 3-5.

Also in the National League, Frank Taveras singled home the tying run and Hubie Brooks followed with a game-winning double in the eighth inning to give the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

In the American League, Willie Aikens hit a two-run homer and knocked in two more runs with a double and a single to lead the Kansas City Royals to an 11-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays, their fifth consecutive loss.

Doug DeCinces' grand-slam home run and a pair of infield singles by Al Bumbry led the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-2 victory over the California Angels.

Dwight Evans capped a Boston comeback with a two-run homer with two out in the eighth inning, rallying the Red Sox to a 6-5 victory over the Oakland A's. Evans unloaded on a 3-0 pitch by Oakland reliever Tom Underwood, sending a towering drive over the screen in left for his 15th homer. It marked the third time this year Evans has homered on a 3-0 pitch.

A PAIR of two-run doubles by Jorge Orta highlighted a 12-run Cleveland outburst in the first three innings and the Indians went on to a 12-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners, who suffered their seventh straight defeat.

Leon Roberts, batting .163 during the second half of the season, drove in four runs with a homer and a double and Danny Darwin pitched a four-hitter to lead the Texas Rangers to a 5-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Dave Engle scored all the way from first base on Pete Mackanin's two-run single with two out in the ninth inning, capping a four-run Twins rally that carried Minnesota past the Detroit Tigers 4-3.

Greg Luzinski belted a three-run homer in the eighth inning to bring the Chicago White Sox from behind for a 3-1 victory over the New York Yankees in a game called in the eighth inning because of rain.

FERNANDO VALENZUELA fired a four-hitter for his sixth shutout of the season, pitching Los Angeles to a 6-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs, the Dodgers' fourth straight victory. The Dodgers rookie left-hander struck out 10 and walked only two in becoming the major leagues' first 11-game winner.

George Hendrick knocked in all of St. Louis' runs with a two-run double and a solo homer in the top of the 13th inning to give the Cardinals a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Jack Clark had a three-run double, then hit a solo homer in the 13th inning to give the San Francisco Giants a 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Cowboys anticipating Oiler infantry assault

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys fully expect the Houston Oilers to jump back into their ground-oriented I-Formation for Saturday night's National Football League exhibition game in Texas Stadium.

"We wouldn't be surprised to see them in a two tight-end attack, even with John Reaves starting at quarterback," said the Cowboys' Ermal Allen, an assistant coach who scouts upcoming teams for Coach Tom Landry.

"With the Snake (Kenny Stabler) coming back you've got to figure they will want to start getting their blocking down for the regular season," he said.

WITH GIFFORD Nielsen out at least a month, John Reaves is expected to start for the Oilers.

Stabler, who came out of retirement to sign a two-year contract, will be in uniform and available, although he probably won't play.

"I made my decision to come back after Gifford was hurt," said Stabler. "This team deserves to win. The players on this team want to win really badly, and I hope I can help them."

Stabler helped the Oilers to an 11-5 record last year under Coach Bum Phillips, who now is at New Orleans.

New Coach Ed Biles, who was the Oilers' defensive coordinator under Phillips, designed a split backfield for this season which was designed for a more balanced pass-run attack.

All-pro running back Earl Campbell was not expected to carry as big a load as he had in the past.

However, Stabler's re-emergence signals the return to a ground control offense with percentage, short passes.

JIM SHOFNER, the former head coach at Texas Christian and now Oiler offensive coordinator, is re-drawing the Houston offense.

The Oilers are 1-2 in the preseason, the same record the Cowboys have compiled.

Houston lost 27-17 last week to Tampa Bay as Nielsen suffered his shoulder injury, and Dallas whipped Pittsburgh 24-14 behind the passing of quarterback Danny White.

The annual Governor's up matchup will be nationally televised and already is a sellout.

Dallas leads the annual preseason series with the Oilers 10-4, including victories the past two years of 20-13 and 16-13, respectively.

The Cowboys are 2-1 over Houston in the regular season.

Following Nigeria's decision

Other OPEC oil prices may decline

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Nigeria's decision to lower its crude oil prices $4 a barrel may be the start of a downward trend in OPEC prices that could benefit American motorists, analysts said Thursday.

"It puts very strong pressure on other (OPEC) countries to lower their prices," one Middle East oil analyst said of the Nigerian announcement Wednesday.

Nigeria's action, while cutting the price of its basic grade of crude oil to $36 a barrel from $40, should have no noticeable effect on American gasoline prices for the moment, analysts said. But it places other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — particularly Libya and Algeria — under intense pressure to reduce their prices.

If both Algeria and Libya follow Nigeria's lead, gasoline prices in the United States could fall two or three pennies a gallon, analysts in the United States suggested. Libya, the third largest source of U.S. crude oil imports, and Algeria curently charge $40 a barrel — the highest in OPEC.

Pressure for price cuts also may build on such countries as Iran, Iraq, Kuwait and Qatar, all of which charge $36 a barrel.

Nigeria is the United State's second-largest foreign source of crude oil, behind Saudi Arabia. But its exports have dropped sharply in recent months, to an estimated 400,000 barrels a day currently, from an average of about 840,000 barrels daily in the first four months of the year.

Nigeria's action was not unexpected and had been widely predicted in the oil markets. The West African nation had been having trouble finding customers for its high-priced oil and its economy suffered from the reduced exports.

"This is obviously a unilateral action, but it may signal the start of some kind of shake-out on oil prices," the Middle East analyst added, requesting that he not be identified.

An oil source in Saudi Arabia said the Nigerian move is probably the harbinger of a phase of "destructive out-bidding among OPEC members" which he predicted would last until the December OPEC meeting.

Saudi Arabia, which charges $32 a barrel, the lowest in OPEC, tried unsuccessfully at last week's OPEC meeting in Geneva, Switzerland to convince the other cartel members to agree on a compromise base price of $34 a barrel.

As a result of Nigeria's price-cutting, said one industry source in the United Arab Emirates, "everyone is headed steadily toward the Saudi price standard of $34."

"I would say the Nigerian move marks the start of a four-month trend during which oil prices will keep going down until we are able to check the trend — I hope — in Abu Dhabi next December," he added. The next scheduled OPEC meeting is set for Dec. 10 there. The source asked that he not be identified.

In Kuwait, industry sources said Nigeria's price cut indicated a surrender to pressure from Western oil importers which "is likely to extend to all other oil exporters unless an overall accord on pricing is achieved by all OPEC members before December."

With a worldwide oversupply of crude oil that allowed customers to look elsewhere, analysts said, Nigeria was losing as much as $40 million or $45 million a day in oil revenues — jeopardizing costly development plans in the nation of 90 million people.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, acted to lessen the oversupply on the world oil market when Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, announced last week a 10 percent cut in production for the month of September.

Saudi Arabia is currently pumping more than 10 million barrels a day, nearly half OPEC's combined daily production of between 21 million and 22 million barrels. OPEC production accounts for about 40 percent of the world oil market.

"It would be muchbetter for us all," said an oil source in one OPEC nation, "to arrange a concerted price standard, rather than plunge into the turmoil of trying to outprice one another and forfeit OPEC unity."

'Honor system' may be losing government millions

By ELEANOR RANDOLPH
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The government and several Indian tribes may be losing up to $1 million a day in oil and gas royalty payments under an antiquated "honor system" that requires oil companies to report their oil and gas finds with little supervision, a federal commission was told Thursday.

The system of royalties, operated under the U.S. Geological Survey for more than 20 years, is "fraught with longstanding financial management problems," Milton J. Socolar, the acting comptroller general, told the Commission on Fiscal Accountability of the Nation's Energy Resources at its first hearings on royalty losses.

"The Geological Survey is not collecting all oil and gas royalties and hundreds of millions of dollars in royalty income are not collected when due, thus increasing government interest costs," Socolar told the commission which was established last month by Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt.

Socolar said the Geological Survey was revamping its royalty payment system, but that it would be five years before the revisions could be in operation throughout the country. Meanwhile, he said there are only 47 inspectors to review 44,000 producing wells, which means the inspectors must rely "almost entirely" on production and sales data provided by the oil and gas companies.

"In short, the oil companies are essentially on an honor system to report accurately and to fully pay royalties when due," Socolar said.

A former inspector now employed by the Black Feet Indians of Wyoming, Charles Thomas, said a principal cause of oil thefts was that Geological Survey inspectors are not even investigating discrepancies in information provided by the companies.

"One recommendation is that you get those coffee-drinking rascals (at the Geological Survey) out of there and stop them flirting with their fat little secretaries and get some people in there who can do some work," Thomas told the commission.

Thomas said most of the loss in royalties is the work of operators "who know damn good and well nobody's ever going to check up on them."

Thomas, a resident of Thermopolis, Wyo., has been credited with helping launch a federal investigation of oil stolen from the Wind River Reservation in western Wyoming. The investigation resulted in the indictment last March of four men, who pleaded guilty to stealing 5,600 barrels of oil from the reservation.

Howard M. Smith of Lovell, Wyo. one of the four, was fined and put on probation for four years after he admitted that his company had "a silent acceptance or understanding that we were taking unauthorized oil from the bottom of tanks" owned by lease holders.

"Most of the reports on these problems were from Wyoming," Donald Kash, former director of the Conservation Division of the Geological Survey, told the commission. "But quite frankly, I think many of these things could have happened in any state."

Kash also said the Geological Survey recently began trying to charge interest for late payments. However, Darby Smith, a supervisory auditor from the General Accounting Office told the commission that no late charges had been collected as of July 15.

Commission chairman David F. Linowes told a reporter that estimates of nationwide losses from oil theft and accounting mistakes range up to $1 million, a day.

Because of the increasing worth of oil and the deregulation of natural gas, total royalties paid in 1981 are expected to be more than $4 billion. In two years, as much as $12 billion will be collected annually, Linowes said.

The commission, which must report to Watt within six months, may determine that the Geological Survey, which is basically an agency of scientists who specialize in geology and topography, or map making, should not be administering an increasingly sophisticated accounting system.

"It is a terribly complex system," admitted Kash, a Carter administration appointee who left his job last spring. "And a great deal of progress is being made. But frankly, it would all move faster if (the Geological Survey) weren't always being investigated."

NRC moves to set back deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission moved on Thursday to set back by seven months a deadline for placing accident warning systems around nuclear power plants. It acted eight weeks after an initial deadline passed with only six of 48 operating plants complying.

The NRC's unanimous vote for a Feb. 1, 1982, deadline came after a meeting where nuclear industry representatives urged an even longer delay and foes of atomic power suggested harsh fines for those not meeting the initial July 1, 1981 date.

The commission agreed to send letters declaring 10 plants in violation of the original deadline because they did not tell the NRC they could not comply by then. There is no penalty for such a violation, however.

The NRC had indicated it would modify the deadline by ordering its staff Aug. 11 to prepare an order setting a new date. Its vote Thursday was to submit the Feb. 1 date for public comment for 30 days before taking final action.

The initial deadline came in an order last August requiring sirens, special radio transmitters or similar systems to warn the public for 10 miles around a plant of a nuclear accident within 15 minutes after it happens.

Such systems were urged by two panels that studied the nuclear accident 2½ years ago at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania.

On July 1, just six plants had fully operating warning systems. Six others have installed them since, and five more have partially operating systems. Seventeen plants had not even ordered the needed equipment by July 1.

Richard Udell of the Critical Mass Energy Project had urged $5,000 per day fines for plants ordering equipment but not meeting the deadline. He called for $10,000 a day fines for those that did not even order the equipment.

Two representatives of utilities asked the commission to extend the deadline to July 1, 1982.

Trade balance narrowed amid falling oil imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Falling oil imports narrowed the nation's trade deficit to $1.46 billion in July, the government reported Thursday.

Oil imports ran at an average of 5.1 million barrels a day in July, the lowest level since the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, Commerce Department officials said.

The previous recorded low was 5.5 million barrels a day in May 1975, they said.

The U.S. deficit in merchandise trade — generally oil, farm produce and manufactured goods — was $20.5 billion for the first seven months of the year, the Commerce Department report said.

Commerce Department analyst David Lund said the decline in oil imports reflected "a continuing weakness," attributed to large inventories and reduced demand.

Non-oil imports were generally flat last month, he said.

The Commerce Department is expecting the trade deficit for the entire year to be "several billion dollars" higher than last year's $36.4 billion.

Exports were running about 7 percent ahead of last year's level, whileimports were about 6 percent ahead.

In July, exports were down 3 percent from June, reflecting big declines in exports of aircraft, spacecraft and parts. Imports last month fell 9.9 percent, reflecting the sharp decline in energy products, said the report.

Lund said the value of the dollar has risen 21 percent, against the currencies of major industrial nations, from mid-October to mid-August.

Antitrust chief disputes claims of 'merger wave'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's antitrust chief has disputed assertions that a "merger wave" has developed in response to the administration's reluctance to challenge mergers.

William F. Baxter, assistant attorney general for antitrust, called statements that merger activity is gaining speed "rather dubious."

He cited figures showing that mergers in the first half of this year in constant dollars were worth $38 billion, compared to $52 billion in 1968.

Baxter said the Justice Department is concerned about some mergers between direct competitors, known as "horizontal mergers," but has little interest in challenging "vertical mergers" between producers and distributors or conglomerate mergers.

"We are not going to be activist in areas where the department previously was activist," he told a House Judiciary subcommittee.

Baxter criticized past Justice Department policy to challenge the legality of some vertical agreements. He called this "interference with producer-distributor arrangements" and said, "We do not intend to repeat the errors of the past."

Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., was among those saying merger activity has increased rapidly since the administration said "bigness is not necessarily badness" in business.

Rodino said this repeated statement by administration officials "seems to have been a signal to many in the business world" that antitrust enforcement will be relaxed. "In any event, there has been a well-publiicized rash of extraordinary large mergers this year ...

"While record-breaking interest rates are driving independent businessmen into bankruptcy and denying many Americans the opportunity to buy homes, large oil companies can obtain billions of dollars to search through Fortune 500 for likely acquisitions," Rodino said.

Motion to dismiss lawsuit to ban windfall profits tax denied

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Ewing T. Kerr on Thursday denied a government motion to dismiss a lawsuit aimed at eliminating the windfall profit tax on oil.

That means government lawyers now must file a response within 30 days to the lawsuit, which was filed on behalf of the states of Texas and Louisiana by the Denver-based Mountain States Legal Foundation, a conservative public interest law firm.

Roger J. Marzulla, foundation president, said that with Kerr's decision behind it, the foundation has cleared its first obstacle to resolving the lawsuit.

"We are now free to address the real issue: that the windfall profit tax actually is an unfair burden on domestic oil production, and increases reliance on foreign oil," he said.

Marzulla said that if the tax is not eliminated, it will return $227.3 billion to the federal treasury by the end of 1988.

Former AT&T head testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former chairman of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. denied before a federal judge Thursday that the company's responses to a series of regulatory decisions in the 1970s were guided by a desire to block competition.

John D. deButts, who led AT&T as its chairman from 1972 until 1979, maintained the company's responses to decisions that broke down AT&T's monopoly consistently showed the firm was concerned about the effect of competition on its ability to serve the public at large.

AT&T was never concerned that it could not compete if it had to, he added.

DeButts acknowledged under cross-examination by prosecutor Gerald Connell that the timing of competition was a matter of concern since AT&T did not have a comprehensive marketing strategy in the early 1970s.

But he maintained that AT&T tried to slow proceedings at the Federal Communications Commission only because the FCC was not taking an overall look at how a loss of revenue to the Bell System would affect the average consumer.

"In essence, each of these decisions involved a weighing of the long-term consequences which increased competitive activity would be likely to have upon the availability, quality and cost of nationwide telephone service," deButts said.

"Notwithstanding this lawsuit, in which the government has found fault with my decisions...I do not in good conscience believe I could have done otherwise than I did," he added.

Color Tile reports drop in earnings

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Color Tile Inc. recorded a drop in earnings despite a 9.9 percent increase in sales for the fiscal year ending June 30, officials of the home improvement products company announced Thursday.

Sales totaled $227.5 million, compared with $207 million for the previous year, according to the lates report. Earnings were $11.4 million, or $1.05 per share, a 15.7 percent decrease over thw prior year's earnings of $13.55 million, or $133 per share.

Comany officials blamed the decreased earnings on a softened market for products dealing with larg-dollar home improvements.

Wounded Voyager 2 laid up for repairs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — As scientists reveled today in the dazzling complexity of Saturn's shining sheets of rings, storming clouds and battered moons, flight engineers said they'll need several days to heal their wounded spaceship.

"We're looking at days, at least," said project manager Esker Davis of his team's efforts to repair — from a billion miles away — the crucial camera-aiming platform. It somehow was knocked out of service as Voyager 2 sailed behind Saturn Tuesday night after taking humanity's best-ever look at the distant world.

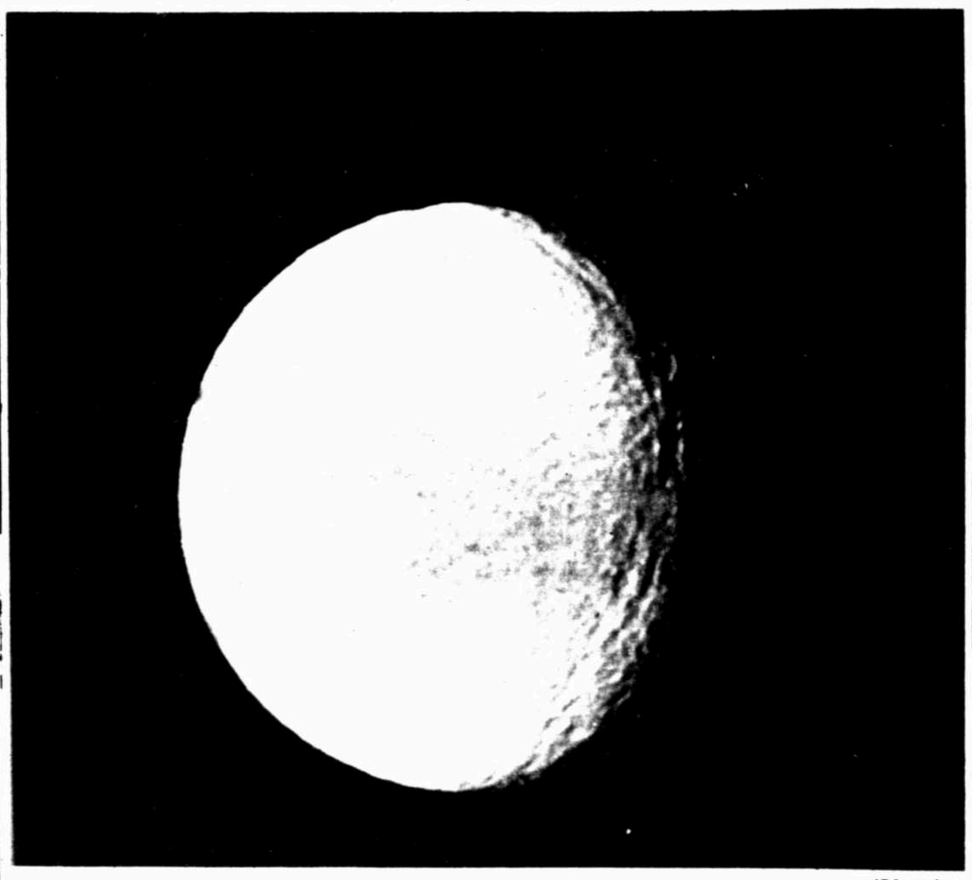

But the news, Davis said, is still "a little upbeat and positive," since the troublesome platform no longer is jammed. However, he said, its jerky and unreliable movements mean "we are not yet at the place where we can say we are fixing the problem...There's a lot of work to do yet."

Voyager was leaving the planet far behind as it raced still deeper into the solar system on a journey of 1.7 billion miles to Uranus. Chief scientist Ed Stone said repairs were being done with special care since "we do not want to take any risks that could in any way keep us from operating the scan platform at Uranus" in 1986.

The malfunction could mean the sacrifice of planned snapshots Sept. 4 of Phoebe, the most distant of Saturn's 17 known moons.

Engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here were trying today to unlimber the platform with high-torque maneuvers that slowly swivel it short distances back and forth through the "sticky point." Davis said that's about like putting a car in low gear and rocking it forward and back to get unstuck from a mud-hole.

Though the cameras and three other instruments are seeing none of their post-Saturn targets, scientists already have proclaimed the mission a resounding triumph.

AP Laserphoto

Voyager 2 obtained this image of Tethys when the spacecraft was 380,000 miles from this Saturn satellite. Tethys shows two types terrain — bright, denselycratered regions and dark, lightly cratered planes that extend across the satellite. Also visible is a trough is parallel to the day-night boundary. This photo was taken Aug. 25.

Convicted murderer investigated

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Don Smith, former attorney for convicted capital murderer Vernon McManus, and Regina Smith, McManus' ex-wife, are being investigated by the Harris County District Attorney's officer for possible perjury and bigamy, a Beaumont newspaper reported today.

The investigation stems from the Smiths' Aug. 25, 1978, marriage and Regina Smith's subsequent court testimony that they were married on March 15, 1979, said Harris County assistant prosecutor Don Stricklin, the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal reported.

Vernon McManus, a former star football player and coach at Lamar University in Beaumont, and Regina McManus were divorced in a Harris County state District Court on Feb. 27, 1979.

Stricklin said the grand jury is examining evidence of both perjury and bigamy in its inquiry.

Stricklin said he has "verified the existence" of a Nevada marriage certificate in the names of Don Smith and Regina Lynn McManus dated Aug. 25, 1978 — six months before a Texas divorce was granted to Mrs. McManus and her former husband.
