Memo linked arms with hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — A memorandum prepared for President Reagan in January 1986 drew an unmistakable link between shipments of U.S. arms to Iran and the release of American hostages in Lebanon. It also asserted that arms transfers would stop unless all U.S. captives were freed after the first delivery.

The memo, dated Jan. 17 and kept secret by the White House until Friday, said Israel suggested selling arms to moderate elements in Iran and it documented a feud among top Reagan administration officials about the wisdom of the proposal.

The White House released the document in the wake of published and broadcast accounts of its details, based on a draft Senate Intelligence Committee staff report summing up that panel's investigation of clandestine arms sales to Iran and diversions of sales proceeds to Nicaraguan rebels.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, the committee's vice chairman, said some of the statements in the Senate report "were not consistent with my understanding of the facts." He added that distribution of the document would hamper future investigations because it would give future witnesses a "roadmap" by which to tailor their testimony.

Related stories, Page 7C

And he criticized the White House for insisting on release of the report.

"The White House is interested in shifting the burden of disclosure of the facts to either the House or the Senate for its own tactical purposes," Cohen said.

Reagan, who insisted from the beginning of his presidency that he would not make concessions to terrorists, has repeatedly denied that he swapped arms for hostages. Instead, he has argued that the weapon shipments were part of a larger initiative to establish contacts with "moderate" elements within the fundamentalist government led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

However, the memo makes clear that the delivery of U.S. arms was the foundation of renewed American ties to Tehran.

"In that we have been unable to exercise any suasion over Hizballah (a radical faction) during the course of nearly two years of kidnappings, this approach through the government of Iran may well be our only way to achieve the release of the Americans held in Beirut," the memo said.

In fact, all of the U.S. hostages in Lebanon were not released after the first arms delivery, and there were at least four more transfers of arms after the Jan. 17 intelligence "finding" was signed by Reagan. The administration has not explained why it persisted in selling arms to Tehran.

Clements hopeful that prison suit can be resolved

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

TYLER — A meeting Friday between state officials and the federal judge overseeing a prison lawsuit provided no concrete solutions, but officials were optimistic that the state could avoid millions of dollars in fines and that Gov.-elect Bill Clements could end the long-running litigation.

Clements and Attorney General Jim Mattox met with U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to discuss the 15-year-old "Ruiz" inmate lawsuit against the Texas Department of Corrections and find ways to avoid contempt of court fines that could add up to $24 million a month starting in April.

"We asked him (Justice) to keep an open mind, that we were willing to move forward in good faith," Clements said after the meeting, which also was attended by Bill Turner, the inmates' attorney, assistant attorney general Scott McCown, prison special master Vincent Nathan, Clements' general counsel Rider Scott and Mitchell Day of the U.S. Justice Department.

Clements said he wants to add about 10,000 beds to the overcrowding prison system during his four-year tenure as governor that starts Jan. 20. But the new beds will not necessarily be "in the mode of maximum security," Clements said.

While all the parties said they reached a "meeting of the minds" in the unprecedented meeting with the judge, no specific deals were cut in the 40-minute meeting with Justice or the 2-hour, 40-minute meeting afterward between the parties.

Mattox said they did not ask the judge for more time to comply with his orders or for a change in his ruling.

"Nothing was before the judge, he didn't decide anything," Turner emphasized. "There was no horse trading, there were no negotiations, there were no commitments other than the governor would approach the problem in good faith."

But Clements said he wants to put the lingering inmate lawsuit behind him and come into compliance with most of Justice's orders. Mattox has said the state will appeal some of Justice's decisions that he feels are unfair.

Justice's contempt of court ruling Monday against TDC called for mammoth fines against the state if the system does not comply with all his orders by April 1. Justice, who declined to talk about Friday's meeting, ordered TDC to hire more guards, improve medical care, provide better recreational facilities and tighten up classification of inmates to separate violent and non-violent convicts.

"The prison system and getting into compliance is a No. 1 priority," Clements pledged. "Let's don't presume we're going to be fined $1 million a day or $1 a day."

Turner, to the amusement of many of the observers here, said he is a fiscal conservative and doesn't think TDC needs more prisons. He said 80 percent of inmates in TDC are non-violent and the state should find other punishments for lesser offenders.

Clements, however, implied that Texas would build more prisons and estimated Thursday after a meeting between him, Mattox, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis that the state should spend an additional $400 million during the next several years on improving TDC.

State's jobless rate at 9.6 percent, Labor says

DALLAS (AP) — Continued decline of the Texas economy kept the state's jobless rate relatively unchanged through the end of 1986 at 9.6 percent, the Labor Department said Friday.

Unemployment last month was 9.5 percent. The December total was 2.6 percent higher than unemployment for the same month one year ago, officials said. Civilian unemployment nationwide fell to 6.7 percent last month in a long-awaited rally.

"The current figure indicates that there were 236,000 more (Texas) workers out of jobs and actively searching for work than a year earlier," said Bryan Richey, regional commissioner for the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' southwest region.

He said the preliminary estimate for average Texas unemployment last year is 8.9 percent. The jobless rate was 7 percent in 1985 and 5.9 percent in 1984.

Smith pleased with committee appointments

By Rick Brown
Assistant City Editor

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The excitement of swearing-in ceremonies and appointment to two meaty congressional committees punctuated the first week in office of Midland's representative to the U.S. Congress, Lamar Smith.

Lamar Smith

But the freshman Republican congressman from San Antonio is happy simply to have an office.

"Yes, it has been inconvenient," said Smith, whose staff was unable to fully move into its assigned quarters in the Cannon House Office Building until another congressman's staff moved out Friday.

Smith's press spokesman, David Hawkings, explained that in the round robin of congressional quarters maneuvering, one office holder had failed to vacate premises. "About eight moves had to take place until we could move into this office," Hawkings said.

In the meantime, Smith's staff had to share quarters with Rep. Jim Saxton, R-New Jersey, who was waiting for a new office of his own, Hawkings said. "We've been relying on the good graces of Mr. Saxton, who is sharing desks and coffee cups with us."

Said Smith, "Basically, we've been camping out in the lobby of this office and holding staff meetings on the couch."

Predicted deficit doesn't alter Clements' stance

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov.-elect Bill Clements Friday reaffirmed his no-new-taxes stance despite an official estimate that lawmakers will be $5.8 billion short of balancing the 1988-1989 budget when they convene here next week.

The 70th Texas Legislature will have $35.1 billion to finance the state's 1988-1989 operations, down $200 million from 1986-1987 levels, Comptroller Bob Bullock announced Friday. That revenue estimate includes the first projected drop in tax collections in at least 30 years.

"Whether this means there will be a deficit — or what size it might be — rests squarely with the Legislature because they set the level of spending," Bullock said. The Constitution requires lawmakers to balance the budget.

A spokesman for Clements, who spent the day in Tyler discussing pressing prison problems with Federal District Judge William Wayne Justice, said the incoming governor expected Bullock to announce the decline in state revenues.

"His feeling is we're going to proceed on track," said press secretary Reggie Bashur. "At this point he is not in favor of any taxes."

Bashur said streamlining government operations and restructuring state spending remains Clements' top priority. "You've got to get the cuts through first," he said.

Bullock based the $5.8 billion shortfall figure on the Legislative Budget Office's suggestion for spending $28 billion in major funds over the two-year budget cycle. Bullock projected major fund income will total $23.2 billion, $4.8 billion under the LBO's spending figure. Adding in the $1 billion deficit lawmakers left at the end of last summer's special sessions brings the possible shortfall to $5.8 billion.

"The final story will be determined by how the Legislature mixes and matches income with costs," he said.

The comptroller predicted oil and gas income — based on $15-to-$16-a-barrel oil — will fall 21 percent to $2.07 billion. He forecast sales tax collections will climb only 2.5 percent to $9.3 billion. Overall tax collections — which account for about 55 percent of the state's revenues — should total about $20 million, off 2.9 percent from 1986-1987 levels.

Lovesick moose no longer cowed by desire

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The desire that made a lovesick moose devote 76 days to wooing Jessica the cow apparently dropped off with his antlers, and he deserted the Hereford of his dreams the next morning.

"He looks like he's hit the road," Donald Gallus, a Vermont game warden, said Friday. "It appears he is...going home."

The 700-pound moose showed up at Larry Carrara's hilltop farm in Shrewsbury in October during mating season and took a shine to Jessica.

The moose was last seen at the farm Wednesday night. On Thursday morning, the moose was on the loose about a mile from the farm.

The moose's departure, say wildlife biologists, was apparently triggered by the loss of his antlers Wednesday. Gallus said once a moose loses his antlers, he loses his defenses — and sexual urges.

But during the courtship, more than 75,000 people went to Carrara's farm to get a glimpse of the odd couple, and those who couldn't visit could hear a song called "Lovesick Moose" written about the pair.

Biologists said it is impossible for a moose and a cow to produce offspring, but the moose nevertheless closely shadowed Jessica, often nuzzling her and making certain she got her share of food.

Jessica has 10 cows for company in her field but on Friday appeared a little lost without her moose, said Carrara's wife, Lila.

"I think she was out there looking this morning, looking for him. She acted like she was a little lonesome, looking away," she said.

The Carraras also are taking the moose's departure hard.

"We had a pretty sad night last night. It was 76 days we had him with us," she said. "We got very attached to him, we really did."

Carrara, who returned to work last week after a two-month leave of absence from his job as a maintenance worker at a General Electric plant, speculated that the moose may have left because he was no longer around during the day.

Gallus and Charles Willey, Vermont's moose expert, disagreed.

Willey had said last year once the moose lost his antlers, he probably would leave.

"He's really lost his ability to defend himself," Willey said.

Bull moose lose their antlers every winter and grow them again in the spring and summer.

SMITH

Now firmly ensconced in the Cannon building, Smith said he is "extremely pleased" with his appointments to the House Judiciary and House Science and Technology Committees, "especially since each will have such a significant impact on the 21st Congressional District and Texas," he said.

Hawkings said the House Judiciary Committee holds jurisdiction on issues of immigration, criminal justice, federal courts and constitutional amendments. Serving on the House Science and Technology Committee, Smith will deal with legislation on energy development, agricultural research, nuclear power, the nation's space program and overall industrial scientific research and development, Hawkings said. The press spokesman pointed out that Smith is the only Texas Republican to sit on each commmittee.

While Smith believed that it is too early to anticipate legislation he may introduce in conjunction with the committees, he said, "They're an absolute ideal combination for this district.

"These appointments, combined with my service as (Republican) Freshman Whip, should yield great dividends for my constituents."

Surveying the coming legislative session, Smith said that the federal government deficit and budget considerations will be the big issues that Congress will have to address.

"It's essential for us to put our economic house in order," he said. "I stand firmly behind the concept of the need to reduce the deficit."

On issues that impact his district and Texas at large, Smith spoke of the "energy crisis" that has thrown the state into an economic tailspin. "As long as the price of oil stays at it's low level, Texas — and in particular West Texas — is going to suffer."

The congressman said he is on record in support of a temporary oil import fee that would "put a floor on the price of oil of perhaps $22 a barrel."

He acknowledged that prospects for implementation of the fee "aren't great," but "If the energy crisis continues and if the administration begins to feel a more intense political heat, that could change," he said.

DEFICIT

"Neither state finances nor the Texas economy are as vibrant as they have been in the past and the state's economy will expand modestly in the next two years," Bullock said.

Because state law and the Constitution earmark nearly 82 percent of revenues for such programs as public schools, highways, retirement programs — and paying off the $1 billion debt from fiscal 1987 — Bullock said lawmakers will have just $6.4 billion to spend as they please. That is $4 billion less than what was available for the 1986-1987 budget.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, and a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said he expects lawmakers to trim spending by up to $1 billion by merging some agencies, laying off some upper-level state employees and centralizing some services. Stiles also predicted Clements will ask the Legislature to extend the temporary sales and gas tax increases passed during last summer's special sessions and scheduled to expire Aug. 31.

"That's a given," Stiles said. A spokesman for Bullock said the 1.125-cent sales tax increase and nickle-a-gallon gasoline tax increase would bring in $2.5 billion to $2.9 billion over the two-year budget period.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring and also a member of the Appropriations Committee, said he expects that panel to wait for Clements' plan. Shaw said he is not optimistic that the new governor can cover the debt without new taxes.

"I wish I could be, and it's nothing partisan," Shaw said. "Six billion in cuts to me looks like it would be pretty devastating."

Senate Finance Committee member Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, also called for extension of the temporary taxes and said lawmakers should work on a one-year, rather than two-year, budget. "Then we look around and see what programs folks are willing to do without."

MEMO

The memo said that the release of hostages was "in some respects a by-product of a larger effort to develop ties to potentially moderate forces in Iran."

Stressing that point, a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Friday, "The hostage release is in some respects a byproduct. It is inadvertent, it is fallout from a larger effort to develop — a spinoff from — a larger effort to develop ties to potentially moderate forces in Iran. That is what this whole memo is about."

In another development, the United Nicaraguan Opposition, the leading U.S.-backed Contra rebel group, has informed the Justice Department that it paid for its Washington operations last year with money from "unknown" foreign sources.

UNO's statement deepens the mystery of where the Contras obtained money to pay for their political activities in the United States and the possible role of fired White House aide Oliver L. North, who allegedly masterminded the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to the Contras.

In a filing this week with the Justice Department's foreign agent registration office, UNO said it paid its office expenses over a six-month period ending Nov. 14 with $91,608 provided through three deposits — May 9, Aug. 11 and Nov. 6 — "from foreign source."

The sworn UNO declaration, signed by its Washington representative, Ernesto Palazio, last Monday, added: "Sources of UNO support unknown to registrant," which is listed as UNO, the political umbrella group for most Nicaraguan rebel forces.

The Central Intelligence Agency, in an unusual public statement, took exception to reports that a Senate Intelligence Committee draft report found the agency's top officials misrepresented to Congress when they first knew about diversion of Iranian arms money.

Gunman still at large after Odessa robbery

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A lone gunman who held up an east side savings and loan institution Friday afternoon and escaped with an undetermined amount of money remained at large late Friday night, police said.

According to teller Janna Mosley, a man entered the Odessa branch of the Andrews Savings & Loan Association, 2514 N. Grandview Ave., about 4:32 p.m., walked up to her teller position, produced a handgun and demanded money.

Ms. Mosley said she gave the man the money she had in the drawer, and he left. The gunman was last seen walking north from the savings institution.

No one was injured in the holdup, according to Odessa Police Sgt. C.A. Burns.

Ms. Mosley said the suspect was in his mid-30s, 5 feet 11 inches to 6 feet tall, weighed about 155 pounds and had short blond hair and a slim build.

Odessa Police Det. Sgt. Richard Hirst said the same man responsible for Friday's robbery may also have held up the Odessa Savings and Loan Association branch on East 42nd Street last December.

Burns said the FBI had been notified and was taking charge of the robbery investigation.

Reports indicate the gunman may have escaped in a small yellow vehicle, possibly a Toyota, after leaving the scene of the robbery.

Richey said five of eight economic sectors that represent about 60 percent of the state's jobs remain in decline. They are mining, construction, manufacturing, trade, and transportation and public utilities.

"The bottom line is in my view, until we experience significant improvement in those sectors that have been hurt the most or until we can create job opportunities that can, we will see a continuation of relatively high unemployment in Texas," said Richey.

He said about 155,000 jobs were lost over 1986 in the five sectors. Currently, there are 796,000 out-of-work Texans in a labor force of about 8.3 million.

Area counties declared disaster areas, aide says

From Staff Reports

WASHINGTON D.C. — Seven West Texas counties were among the 50 declared disaster areas announced by Secretary of Agriculture Richard D. Lyng late Friday afternoon.

Farmers in the declared counties — Upton, Pecos, Brewster, Reeves, Crane, Crockett, Reagan and Terrell — may be eligible for federal assistance because of crop damage attributed to weather.

Lyng's declaration will enable farmers to receive relief from local offices of the Farm Home Administration and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, David Hawkings, press aide to Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, said Friday.

Hawkings said the aid will be for farmers who suffered crop loss last year due to inclement weather from January to November 1986.

Galaxies discovered hidden in zone behind Milky Way

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists have discovered 10 galaxies in a hidden zone of the universe behind the Milky Way, and say tens of thousands more could be revealed by a full-scale search.

The star systems were found when astronomers used a radio telescope to peer into the "zone of avoidance," the quarter of the sky hidden from optical telescopes by dust, gas and billions of stars surrounding Earth in the flattened spiral of our own galaxy, the Milky Way.

Discovery of the galaxies by University of Maryland astronomer Frank Kerr and graduate student Patricia Henning opens a previously hidden zone of the universe, said Steve Maran, spokesman for the American Astronomical Society and a senior scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

Kerr announced the findings Tuesday during the society's annual meeting.

While 10 is a very small number of galaxies in a universe believed to contain billions, the discoveries are significant because they were made during a pilot attempt to explore the zone of avoidance, Maran said.

Kerr said a full-scale search of the zone probably would find tens of thousands more galaxies. The hunt would cost several hundred thousand dollars and take at least five years, he said.

Finding new galaxies is important because it will help astronomers learn about "the large-scale structure of the extragalactic universe," which, in turn, will help reveal how galaxies and stars are born, Kerr said.

Kerr and Henning discovered the 10 galaxies using the 300-foot, dish-shaped radio telescope at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory in Green Bank, W.Va.

Optical telescopes can't locate galaxies behind the Milky Way because of the intervening starlight, dust and gas. So Kerr and Henning searched for radio signals with wavelengths known to be generated by hydrogen gas in certain types of galaxies. They discovered the 10 star systems during observations in July and December of about 1,000 randomly chosen points behind the Milky Way.

A complete search would involve surveying 300,000 such points, Kerr said.

Kerr and Henning tested their method by also aiming the telescope at randomly selected parts of the sky that aren't blocked by the Milky Way. They found another 11 galaxies, at least six of which have been identified previously. The other five may be new discoveries, but that won't be known until they are checked against lists of known galaxies, Kerr said.

About 1 million galaxies have been identified previously, he added.

The 10 new galaxies are located between 5 million and 50 million light years from Earth, or roughly 30 million trillion to 300 million trillion miles away, Kerr said.

Maran said that while finding 10 new galaxies may not sound impressive, it is when you realize that each galaxy contains hundreds of billions of individual stars.

Marijuana grower leads life of solitude, sees no wrong

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — The man considers his chosen profession for a moment, carefully weighing his words before answering.

"I'm just a farmer," he says. "I'm not getting ahead. I've had too many bad years."

Too little rain when you need it, too much when you don't, he laments. If that isn't enough, he tells you there are wild animals eager to prey on his crops.

"There are animals out there — mice, deer, rats, rabbits — who can tear down a crop faster than you can plant one," he says.

"You have to contend with Mother Nature — she's the hardest thing you'll have to put up with," he adds. "Your rip-offs are No. 2. The third one would be the police."

This is no corn farmer leaning against a hoe, contemplating life down on the farm.

His crop is marijuana, his farm a remote mountainside hideaway.

From his perspective, he is no more than a farmer, albeit tending an illegal crop. And he strongly rejects the suggestion he is doing anything wrong.

"I love the woods and I want to have a little money," he says. "...To me, marijuana is an herb. It shouldn't be placed in the drug category."

State officials estimate there are upwards of 20,000 commercial pot growers in Oregon. This summer, law enforcement officials harvested 5,000 marijuana plants in the Siskiyou National Forest.

That harvest may account for a large portion of the illegal pot gardens in the forest, the local grower acknowledges.

Although there is no marijuana grapevine among growers, he feels most of the plants seized on Siskiyou lands were not planted by veteran commercial growers.

"The majority of the people getting caught are youngsters who don't know what they are doing," he says. "They find water and plant them right there. Those plants are found."

His largest crop was 20 pounds, netting him $16,000 tax free at $800 a pound for high-grade marijuana. And there have been seasons netting only $7,000.

South African government orders New York Times bureau chief out

Cowell

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government ordered New York Times bureau chief Alan Cowell to leave the country by Saturday and refused an entry visa to his designated successor. No explanation was given.

Cowell said Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha told him Dec. 23 that his work permit would not be renewed and set the departure deadline. Cowell's permit expired June 19, but he had been allowed to continue working pending a decision on his renewal application.

Also on Dec. 23, the government informed The New York Times it had would not grant an entry visa to Cowell's designated replacement, Serge Schmemann.

"I regret the fact I have to leave in this way," Cowell said Friday.

The Foreign Correspondents Association issued a statement that said, in part: "The government's action in barring firsthand reporting on South Africa by one of the world's major newspapers is a cause for regret among all who value free speech."

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said in Washington: "We deplore this decision and the peremptory manner in which it was made. It is particularly regrettable that the South African government has thus far refused to reply to requests for a formal explanation of the expulsion and to the newspaper's request to meet with South African officials to discuss the matter."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, on a tour of black African nations, said in Nairobi, Kenya, the expulsion was "a very negative" event.

Cowell, 39, was the newspaper's bureau chief in South Africa since 1983 and is to become correspondent in Athens, Greece, next month. Schmemann, formerly the Moscow bureau chief, was to have replaced Cowell Jan. 1.

Schmemann worked for The Associated Press from 1972-80, covering South Africa in 1977-79.

Gerrie van Zil, director general of the Home Affairs Ministry, said Botha would not be available for comment until Monday. After repeated queries, he issued this statement:

"It is announced that the representative of the New York Times in South Africa, Mr. Alan Cowell, is temporarily resident in South Africa since 18 October 1983 and that his work permit was renewed at regular intervals.

"The validity of his last work permit expired on 19 June 1986.

"After thorough consideration his application for the renewal thereof was finally refused by the minister of home affairs, Mr. Stoffel Botha...and he was given until 10 January 1987 to leave South Africa.

"An application for a work permit from a successor for Mr. Cowell has also been refused by the minister."

The government often accuses foreign news media of distorting the social conflict in South Africa.

Israeli jets hit PLO positions, church, school

MAGHDOUSHEH, Lebanon (AP) — Six Israeli jets attacked Palestinian positions Friday, killing four guerrillas in this Christian hill town overlooking the south Lebanon port of Sidon.

Police listed another guerrilla as missing and said eight were wounded in the 10-minute rocket attack at 9:20 a.m. Thick black smoke billowed from the stricken guerrilla posts.

Direct hits reduced the front of the Virgin Mary Church to rubble and destroyed a primary school run by the Greek Catholic denomination to which most of the townspeople belong.

The local commander of Fatah guerrillas, known by his code name Youssef, said at least 11 rockets were fired at the church and added: "I cannot understand why the Israelis rocketed the church. We don't have any presence in such a sacred place."

He acknowledged, however, that his men had positions opposite the church. Fatah is led by Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The statue of the Virgin Mary atop the hill was not damaged, but rockets struck several guerrilla positions below it.

Israel's military command said its pilots reported good hits on Palestinian targets and returned safely from the raid 30 miles north of the border.

In Beirut, police said a barrage of shells struck the airport Friday for the second straight day and aviation authorities closed the facility indefinitely.

Police said 14 shells crashed into the runways five minutes after a Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 landed, but all 102 passengers and 24 crew members who arrived from Larnaca, Cyprus, sprinted to safety in the terminal as the shells burst around the white-and-red aircraft.

A news photographer said the first shell hit as the passengers were departing and they ignored the bus waiting to take them top the terminal and "ran toward the building, some of them dropping bags and other personal affects."

The plane was not damaged, but an empty Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 was set afire and burned when it was hit by three artillery shells in Thursday's bombardment.

Airline officials declared the airport closed "pending the improvement of security conditions." The airport is the nation's only public air transport facility.

It had been closed for 30 hours following Thursday's attack, and airline President Salim Salam had only announced the resumption of operations an hour before the jetliner arrived from Larnaca at 4:10 p.m.

No group asserted responsibility for the latest attack, but it occurred during an artillery duel between Moslem and Christian militias.

Christian forces denied any involvement in the attacks, but Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Amal militia of Shiite Moslems blamed the Lebanese Forces, the nation's dominant Christian militia.

NASA 'has turned the corner,' Fletcher says

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's top official said Friday the agency is "growing stronger every day" as it rebounds from the Challenger accident of nearly a year ago.

"We have turned the corner in our recovery efforts," administrator James C. Fletcher said in a "State of NASA" report at a news conference. "Step by step, in a systematic and orderly way, we are reshaping and rebuilding the agency to prepare the nation for a new era of space flight, one more stable, more reliable and safer than before."

A key element in the recovery, he said, has been the overhaul of top management, including a new administrator, a new deputy administrator, new directors for the space shuttle and space station programs, new directors at the three major shuttle field centers, the assignment of several astronauts to top positions and the concentration of shuttle and station authority in Washington headquarters.

Fletcher and deputy administrator Dale D. Myers announced several new management initiatives Friday, including the appointments of Philip E. Culbertson and Robert O. Aller to the new associate administrator posts.

Culbertson, who has been NASA general manager, will take over policy and planning. Aller, who has managed the agency's tracking and data network, will plan space flight operations.

Myers said eventually the agency will combine the shuttle and station offices.

Fletcher cited these items as examples of how NASA and its centers are "getting our act together:"

— The booster rocket joint blamed for the Challenger accident is being redesigned and tested under the review of several panels of outside experts.

The shuttle exploded 73 seconds after liftoff, killing the crew of seven. Investigators found that flame escaped through the faulty booster joint to trigger the eruption.

— Experts are studying possible crew escape systems.

Five veteran astronauts named to next shuttle crew

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Five astronauts who have flown some of the most ambitious shuttle missions ever attempted were named Friday as the crew of the first U.S. space flight since the Challenger accident.

Frederick H. Hauck, who led a 1984 shuttle mission which plucked two broken communications satellites from orbit and returned them to Earth, will command the crew, NASA administrator James Fletcher said at a Washington, D.C., news conference monitored here.

The other members of the crew are Air Force Col. Richard O. Covey, 40, the pilot; and mission specialists John M. Lounge, 40, and George D. Nelson, 36, and Marine Maj. David C. Hilmers, 36, the space agency said.

It was the first time a space shuttle crew was comprised entirely of astronauts who had flown in space before.

Shuttle flights were halted after the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion of Challenger that killed all seven crew members. The flights are scheduled to resume in February 1988, but some experts believe that first mission may be delayed until later in the year.

"The naming of the crew for the next flight is a major event in the process of returning the shuttle to flight," said Richard H. Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. "I am particularly pleased to assemble a group of such experienced individuals, led by one of our senior space flight veterans, and I am very proud of them."

Hauck, 45, has been acting as associate administrator of NASA for external affairs since August. He is a Navy captain who flew as pilot on a shuttle mission in 1983, and commanded the satellite recovery the following year.

In November 1984, Hauck guided the space shuttle to a rendezvous with the Westar and Palapa communications satellites. The broken craft were captured and placed into the cargo bay of the shuttle for a return to Earth.

The satellites had been launched by an earlier shuttle, but failed to achieve the proper orbit after rocket engine malfunctions. The satellites were refurbished and have since been sold and scheduled for relaunch.

In a 1984 spacewalk, Nelson flew untethered on a jet backpack from the shuttle and attempted to capture the ailing Solar Max satellite by hand. A capture device failed, and the satellite was later snared using the shuttle's robot arm.

Medicare, Medicaid cuts may lead to closing of some El Paso hospitals

EL PASO (AP) — Some hospitals in this border city may have to shut down because of a surplus of beds, partly as a result of government cutbacks in Medicare and Medicaid payments, an administrator said.

The situation is aggravated by competition for patients between private hospitals and the Beaumont Army Medical Center, which serves active and retired military people and their families. Beaumont serves about 20 percent of the El Paso population.

The combination will result in some hospitals closing, said Robert Richardson, executive vice president and administrator of Providence Memorial Hospital, a non-profit facility.

The city's civilian hospitals have 1,858 beds for a population of about 400,000 not served by Beaumont, an average of 4.6 beds per 1,000 people. Nationally, the average is four beds per 1,000 population.

Beaumont has 479 beds for active and retired military people and their families.

By 1995, the national average is expected to drop to two beds per 1,000 people, said Ken Bopp, assistant professor of health services management at the University of Missouri. If hospitals want to stay open, they will have to cut back on the number of beds and staff and become more cost effective, Bopp said.

Richardson said the federal government expected 1,000 hospitals to close by the end of the century when it changed the Medicare-Medicaid payment system. Two years ago, the government was faced with possible bankruptcy of Medicare and Medicaid and the Social Security Administration, which oversees both.

The government limited how much it would pay hospitals for each type of treatment. If hospitals charged more, the government would not pay. Many hospitals had to lower their charges and cut costs to make a profit.

Outpatient care, in which patients are treated and released immediately, and outpatient clinics, which did not have beds for overnight care, became popular.

However, other colleagues of Richardson did not share his opinion, including Tom Doody, executive director of United Blood Services.

Doody said many cities have a few large hospitals, "and we don't have any large hospitals in El Paso." Beaumont is the city's largest hospital.

Most, though, agree the nation will lose hospitals.

"Everything that we see is that a shakeout is going on," said David McFadden, spokesman for Hospital Corp. of America, which owns Sun Towers, Vista Hills and Sun Valley hospitals in El Paso.

Oscar Amparan, president of Southwest Medical Development Corp., which owns MedPlus, said he expects hospitals to open their own clinics. Hotel Dieu Medical Center already has one in nearby Santa Teresa, N.M.

Other hospitals are cutting staff to lower costs. In El Paso, 131 healthcare jobs were lost between last August and November.

HHS refuses to 'pit one program against another'

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Refusing to "pit one program against another," the Texas Board of Human Services Friday rejected a request from Gov.-elect Bill Clements to prioritize its programs for possible budget cuts.

"(We) are being asked to decide which of our programs — which of our children — shall live or die," Board Chairman J. Livingston Kosberg said in an emotional speech to a packed house.

"How do we prioritize an unwed mother in need of food for her baby against a woman beaten black and blue by her husband?" he said.

At a Dec. 10 meeting, Clements directed officials of the 13 largest state agencies to submit a list prioritizing their programs for possible cutbacks.

"We must not trample on the needy and cast out the afflicted for the sake of the bottom line," Kosberg said Friday.

Instead, the Human Services board decided to submit a line-by-line appropriations document listing possible reductions in programs and the effects. The appropriations package, although "not exactly what was requested," should help Clements' staff in analyzing the impact of reductions on clients and providers, Human Services Commissioner Marlin Johnston wrote in a memo to board members.

Clements spokesman Reggie Bashur was in transit Friday and could not be reached for comment.

The documents, for example, point out that a minimum reduction in 1987 of $5.2 million in state spending and a resulting $6.5 million cut in matching federal funds in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program would eliminate 1,614 Texans from the program. The $11.7 million reduction, listed as a minimal cutback, would affect another 459,280 clients by reducing the average grant from $57 to about $52.

"If AFDC benefits are reduced, many destitute parents and children will have no alternative to help meet basic needs," said Verna Mainprize, deputy commissioner for Services to Families and Children. "The current AFDC recipient grant of $57 is woefully inadequate by any reasonable standard, ranking Texas as the fifth lowest in the nation."

Lawmaker seeks sanction for state King holiday

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawmaker on Friday once again urged his colleagues to enact legislation proclaiming the third Monday in January an official state holiday honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

In the meantime, Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, urged the heads of all Texas state agencies to allow employees — if they wish — to substitute King's birthday on Jan. 19 for another state holiday as provided in the general appropriations bill.

Wilson noted at a news conference that Jan. 19 will mark the second national observance of King's birthday under a federal law passed by Congress in 1985.

Houston teen held in shooting death of parents

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old remained in custody Friday in connection with the shooting deaths of his parents, who apparently were killed by a rifle they gave him for Christmas in 1985, officials said.

The teen-ager gave Harris County Sheriff's officials a statement about the deaths after deputies recovered the rifle that is believed to have been used to kill Edward Vitek, 46, and Judy K. Vitek, 44, Sgt. J.J. Freeze said.

The .22-caliber rifle was found in a shallow pond Thursday, officials said.

"It's a statement," Freeze said. "We don't want to call it a confession."

The couple's bodies were found Thursday morning in their northwest Harris County home after the teen-ager drove to a nearby junior high school and told faculty members his parents were dead.

The teen-ager and his 19-year-old brother were questioned Thursday, but the older son was released that night, officials said. The younger son remained in custody in the Harris County Juvenile Ward.

Freeze declined to give details about the youth's statement.

Iran troops claim beachhead on Iraqi side of waterway

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran thrust across the Shatt al-Arab waterway into Iraq on Friday for the second time in two weeks, but Iraq said it pushed the invaders back and killed thousands.

The Iranians said their troops seized a beachhead and continued to hold positions on the Iraqi side of the Shatt al-Arab, a fast-flowing channel that forms the southern border. An Iraqi attack across the Shatt in September 1980 began the war.

Iranian communiques claimed the assault force repulsed six counterattacks, killed or wounded 6,500 Iraqis and captured 500, shot down 12 warplanes and destroyed 38 tanks. The Iraqis admitted the loss of one fighter-bomber.

Baghdad radio conceded that the Iranians had established "footholds" on Iraqi territory, but later Iraqi communiques said the Iranians were pushed back after 16 hours with most of four Revolutionary Guards divisions wiped out. A division usually numbers 10,000 men.

Conflicting battle claims often are greatly exaggerated and cannot be reconciled. Neither side allows Western correspondents into battle areas except on occasional guided tours.

The official Iraqi News Agency said fleeing Iranians left "mountains of bodies" behind, and a correspondent reported from the scene that the battlefield was a "horrible massacre zone."

State television broadcast film of what it said was the battlefield strewn with scores of Iranian dead.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the attack began at 1 a.m. in the Shalamcheh region 22 miles southeast of Basra, Iraq's second largest city and the southern provincial capital.

It reported later that a second thrust was made in the marshlands of the Kushk region 45 miles north. The Iranian news agency said Iranian units overran the two main Iraqi defense lines before dawn, but it gave no other details.

The Iraqi communiques made no mention of fighting in the Kushk region, and it was not mentioned in subsequent Iranian communiques.

IRNA said the offensive's purpose was to avenge Iraqi poison gas attacks it claimed had occurred in recent days and to "crush the enemy fighting machine."

It did not give the number of men involved in the drive across the Shatt al-Arab, which is Iraq's only outlet to the sea, but it did not appear to be the "final offensive" Tehran has vowed to begin by March 21.

Israeli leaders may be ready for military involvement in Lebanon

By MASHA HAMILTON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A year and a half after Israeli troops left Lebanon following the most unpopular war in the nation's history, government leaders are warning that Israel may again be on the brink of deeper military involvement in Lebanon.

The warnings come after two Israeli air raids in south Lebanon this week, a surge of attacks against a small Israeli-supported Lebanese militia and the growing presence of Palestinian fighters who were blamed by Israel for the rockets fired into northern Israel on Wednesday.

But renewed Israeli entanglement in Lebanon is likely to meet strong resistance within Israel, where hundreds of thousands protested the three-year Lebanon war in which 654 Israeli soldiers were killed.

Thirteen members of the Israeli-allied South Lebanon Army militia were killed this week, bringing to more than 100 the number of militiamen killed since Israel set up its "security zone" in south Lebanon just before pulling out most of its soldiers in June 1985.

Israel, which still keeps about 1,000 soldiers in south Lebanon, has blamed the Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem Hezbollah guerrillas for the attacks on the mostly Christian South Lebanon Army. Hezbollah bases were targeted in an Israeli air raid Sunday in which three people were killed.

On Friday, Israeli planes bombed Palestinian guerrilla positions at Maghdousheh near Sidon, about 30 miles north of the Israeli border.

"Elements that provoke us and step up their terrorist activity will be punished," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned on Israel television.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin also told reporters after touring south Lebanon that the attacks against the South Lebanon Army "necessitate a stepping-up of activity in various security spheres."

Neither Shamir nor Rabin was specific about how Israel might respond to the Shiite attacks.

Four months ago, when the South Lebanon Army was hit by a similar series of attacks, Israel massed troops along its northern border in a show of support and sent several hundred extra Israeli soldiers briefly into south Lebanon.

Attacks on the South Lebanon Army have severely demoralized the 1,500-member force. Israeli military sources say that in the last four months, 250 militiamen have quit the force which patrols a 6-to-10-mile strip north of the Israeli border.

"Inherent in the new situation is the danger of creeping Israeli reinvolvement in southern Lebanon," said military analyst Hirsh Goodman, writing in the Jerusalem Post. "If the Shiites maintain or intensify their campaign against the South Lebanon Army, Israel will have to respond along a broader front."

But Israeli newspapers have editorialized against sending more soldiers into Lebanon. "This is a poor option," the daily Maariv newspaper said."

Ortega signs constitution, invokes emergency

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega signed a new constitution Friday but then announced that a state of emergency nullifying many civil liberties would be reimposed because of the "continued North American aggression."

Speaking before thousands of people gathered in the Plaza of the Revolution, Ortega said of his Sandinista government, "We do not wish to have to maintain the national state of emergency, but we are forced to do it."

The state of emergency, in effect since 1982, was automatically voided upon the signing of the constitution. Ortega had vowed earlier to reimpose the order, but did not say in his speech when the the new state of emergency would be decreed.

Critics had denounced the constitution as a document they said would be used as a propaganda tool to guarantee continued leftist rule based on the government's battle with U.S.-backed rebels known as Contras.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Phyllis Oakley said, "the new constitution is merely a mask for total control of Nicaragua by the Sandinista Party. It provides the legal justification for the consolidation of one-party, totalitarian rule in Nicaragua.

"As with the Soviet constitution, the key factor is the use of those in power make of it. Past Sandinista behavior would indicate that those provisions would be manipulated, suspended, or simply ignored by the Sandinista consolidation. The civil rights of those who oppose Sandinista policies have not been respected. There is no reason to think they will be in the future.

"Unfortunately, the new constitution offers little hope for a process of national reconciliation which can bring an end to the civil war."

President Alan Garcia of Peru was among the invited guests at the plaza to watch Ortega sign the nation's first constitution since the Sandinistas came to power in July 1979.

Garcia said before the signing that it was a "highly important step in institutionalizing the course for this nation.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mexico consumer prices soar 105.7 percent in 1986

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Consumer prices soared 105.7 percent last year, the worst one-year inflation in Mexico's history, the nation's central bank announced.

The 1986 inflation, announced late Thursday by the Bank of Mexico, topped the record 98.8 percent reached in 1982 when Mexico plunged into economic crisis over its inability to meet payments on its foreign debt.

Government planners had begun 1986 hoping to hold inflation below 1985's total of 63.7 percent, but prices rose faster every month during 1986 than they had a year earlier.

Among the biggest increases in the year were transportation, 117.4 percent; health and personal care, 113.7 percent; furniture and electrical appliances, 109.3 percent; food, beverages and tobacco, 108.7 percent; and education and leisure, 106.6 percent.

Many of those hikes reflected the government's policy last year of boosting prices controlled by the public sector and slashing subsidies on basic goods, to make up for revenue lost in early 1986 from plunging oil prices.

Suspected Nazis named

TORONTO (AP) — A news report Friday said 29 Canadian citizens have been interrogated as possible Nazi war criminals by a federal commission whose report is now in the hands of the government.

The report of the Commission of Inquiry into Alleged Nazi War Criminals was delivered to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Progressive Conservative government on Dec. 30, but remains under wraps.

According to the Toronto Star, the names of the 29 suspects are contained in a private addendum to the 1,000-page report and may not be made public unless the government decides to act against them. The newspaper attributed its report to sources in the federal government in Ottawa.

Angel Dostaler, a spokeswoman for Justice Minister Ray Hnatyshyn, dismissed the story as speculation. She told The Associated Press the commission's report will be released "very soon" after Parliament returns from its holiday recess on Jan. 19.

Copter shooting denied

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — The manager of a Greek cargo ship said Friday that his vessel was not involved in the firing of a missile at a U.S. Navy helicopter in the southern Persian Gulf.

Vassilis Constantacopoulos, director-manager of the Piraeus-based Costamare shipping company, said that no arms of any kind were on board the Greek-flag container ship Norasia Karsten.

"There isn't even a pistol on board the ship. There is no missile. There is a flare gun on board and nothing else," Constantacopoulos told The Associated Press.

U.S. Defense Department sources in Washington said Thursday that U.S. Navy investigators believed that the ship that fired a missile at the U.S. helicopter was Greek and named the Norasia Karsten. The missile missed and the helicopter returned safely to the destroyer O'Bannon.

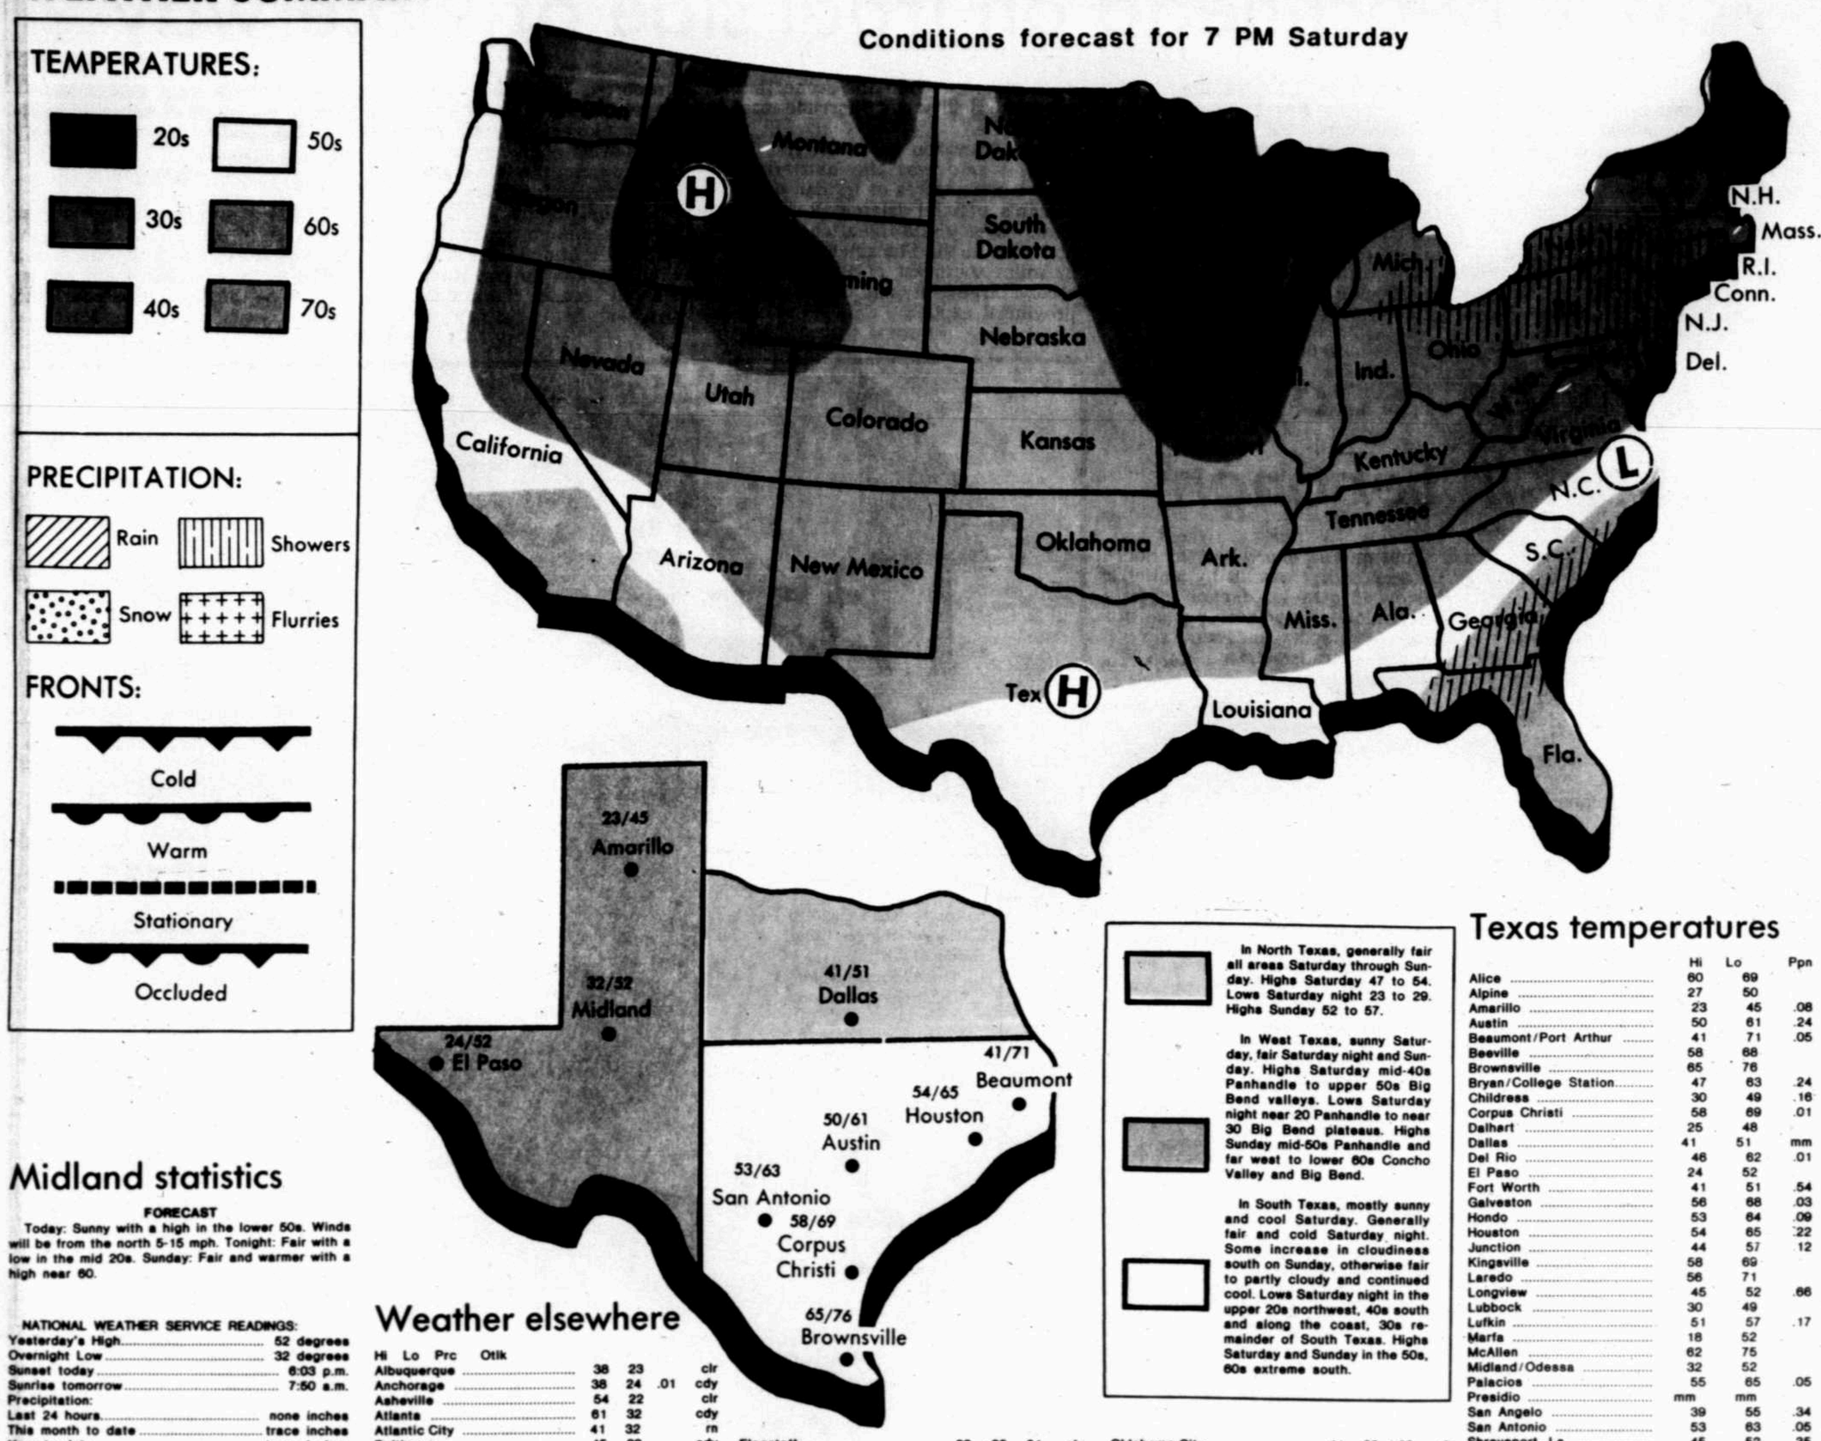
WEATHER SUMMARY



Skies expected to remain clear this weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies are expected to remain clear, and warmer daytime temperatures are expected through the weekend, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be sunny with a high in the lower 50s, with winds from the north at 5-15 mph. Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-20s.

Sunday is expected to be fair and warmer with a high near 60.

Friday's low of 32 was 27 degrees warmer than the record low set in 1962, a frigid five degrees. Friday's high of 52 was nearly 30 degrees cooler than the record high of 79 set in 1948.

STATE

A travelers' advisory remained in effect because of icy roads, and snow that fell Thursday night still covered the ground in some areas of the Panhandle Friday afternoon.

A low pressure system moved from East Texas to the northeast, but a weak cold front associated with the low pressure extended off the Gulf Coast, the National Weather Service said.

This cold front produced mostly cloudy skies in southeastern Texas and along the coast. Most of Texas had clear skies due to high pressure building over the state. The wind was generally from the northwest at 10 to 25 mph.

Temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s over the northern part of the state and in the 60s in South Texas, except for some readings in the 70s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

A winter storm brought heavy snow to the central Plains and the lower Missouri Valley on Friday, and headed northeast toward the Ohio Valley.

Snow was occurring from eastern Kansas across southeastern Nebraska, and from central and eastern Iowa through much of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

Snow was mixed with sleet and freezing rain over southern parts of Illinois and Indiana.

Terre Haute, Ind., picked up an inch of snow in less than an hour, while Belleville, Ill., reported 5 inches of snow and 4 inches were reported at Springfield, Ill.

The storm deposited 6 to 7 inches of snow or more across south-central and east-central Kansas.

Sun City, Kan., received 9 inches of snow, while Inman and Chase in central Kansas picked up 8 inches of snow. Seven inches of snow fell on Wichita, Emporia and Salina, all in Kansas.

Snow, wind for playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — Windy, cold weather, with possible rain or snow, is forecast for Sunday's NFC Championship game between the New York Giants and Washington Redskins in East Rutherford, N.J.

Giants Stadium has an artificial surface.

CLEVELAND — Cleveland's Bernie Kosar and Denver's John Elway may be throwing an icey football in the AFC championship game Sunday while the running backs may be knee-deep in power at Municipal Stadium on the shore of Lake Erie.

The state was under a winter storm watch that began Friday and was supposed to extend to Saturday. The storm center was expected to be in the northern part of the state Saturday, adding to overnight accumulations.

O'Grady takes lead

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Mac O'Grady regained the lead with a 72—207 for a one-shot lead over Rick Fehr after three rounds of the $500,000 Tournament of Champions tournament. Fehr had a bad day on the greens.

"I don't think I had a day like this all last year," he said after slipping to a 73—208. "Just a day when I didn't do anything well. It was a struggle all day long." the 24-year-old Fehr said.

Butch Baird salvaged a 72—210 to lead by three strokes after the third round of the Seniors section of the Tof C. Don January had a 73—213...

NHL expels Quinn

NEW YORK — Los Angeles Kings Coach Pat Quinn was expelled from the NHL pending an investigation of charges that he signed a contract and accepted money to become GM next season of the Vancouver Canucks.

NHL President John Ziegler said the Kings would be precluded from filing tampering charges, however, because Quinn's contract is not on file with the league. "... There is a bigger and more important issue present by these facts, Mr. Quinn is directly responsible for the preparation and conduct of the Los Angeles Kings NHL game competition. Despite these responsibilities, he has committed himself to assume the responsibilities of a general manager for a competing team in this league, has accepted money therefrom and yet has continued to attempt to discharge his responsibilities for the Los Angeles Kings...

Robinson too tall to fly

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Navy informed star center David Robinson that he is too tall to serve on a ship or in airplanes, and will have to serve his commission ashore. Navy officials would not speculate on whether the 7-foot-1 inch basketball player will be able to play professionally. But Navy spokesman Ken Pease said Robinson would be able to seek outside employment with the permission of his commanding officer.

"But outside employment can't interfere with military duties or be a conflict of interest."...

MHS girls explode against Permian

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs put together an explosive first half at the MHS gym Friday night to defeat the Odessa Permian girls by a 69-57 margin, setting up a District 4-5A showdown with San Angelo Tuesday in a battle that will be for the league lead.

After Friday's victory over Permian, MHS still owns sole possession of first place in the league standings with a perfect 4-0 mark while San Angelo is 3-0 after a win over Abilene High Friday night in Abilene.

Against 0-3 Permian, the Bulldogs raced to a big 41-20 first half margin, hitting 46 percent from the field. Then they let it go to their heads with a meager 33 percent second half shooting eye as the Lady Panthers outscored the Bulldogs by a 37-28 margin.

Still, the 41 first half points by MHS buried Permian in a hole and the Panthers couldn't climb out of with a ladder.

"I thought the girls played well and I'm proud to be where we are right now," said MHS coach Jane Young. "We did let down a bit in the second half, but I had to take out Amy (Cumings) when she got a cramp in her foot. Anytime I have to take out Amy, Brenda (Rodriquez) or Sebrenia (Finch), we feel it.

"Besides, Permian didn't come over here to lay down. I thought they did a good job on us in the second half."

Cumings, who suffered a cramp in her right foot in the third quarter, led the Bulldogs with 23 points. Finch had 16 and Rodriquez 14 in another MHS formula three-pronged attack that has been effective all year. Sophomore Kim Jackson also contributed with nine points.

"I thought we played very well," said Finch. "We slacked off in the second half because we thought they couldn't catch up and our shots weren't going in like in the first half because we weren't executing as well."

Permian got 14 points from Chris Griffin and 10 more from Tracy Bowser off the bench. Had the Panthers been able to control the Bulldogs better in the first half, Permian might have had a shot at a major upset.

Permian hit only 33 percent in the first half and took only 58 shots compared to Midland's 70 in the game as the Bulldogs dominated the boards on both ends of the court.

But now MHS turns its thoughts to San Angelo.

"We're really worried about San Angelo," said Finch. "They have a young team, but they are good. We have to play them down there and that has to be to their advantage, but we're looking forward to the game. It will be for first place.

In junior varsity action, Permian's Delina Hanes hit the winning basket with seven seconds left in the game in a 42-40 matchup. Permian's Delores Ornelas had 11 points while Midland High's La Shauna Bradley led all scorers with 14 points.

Lee knocks off Odessa, 53-43

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Defense is the king at Midland Lee in the early stages of the District 4-5A basketball season.

Like the Midland High game on Tuesday, a 53-43 Rebel win, Friday's encounter with Odessa High was not won by the smooth jumper from 15 feet or the pressure free throw. No, the 41-36 Lee victory was won by defense.

Normally, a defensive score of 41-36 would mean a slow-down, work-for-the-shot attack. Not so for the Rebels and Bronhcos. They ran the ball up and down the court, passed a couple of times and shot. They just couldn't hit and, when they did, the ball wouldn't fall.

Against the Broncho defense, Lee could only manage a 33 percent field goal night (15-of-45) and only hit 55 percent from the line (11-of-20). Odessa wasn't any better, also hitting 33 percent from the field (16-of-48) but only 25 percent free throws (4-of-12).

"We haven't been shooting the way we were in the early part of the year," said Lee head coach Paul Stueckler. "Our percentage is way down. We were shooting around 45 percent. But, you've got to expect that when you go into district. The team is a little more up tight and teams prepare for the game a little better. They take away a lot of the things you like to do and work against your weaknesses."

Stueckler, whose Rebels are atop the 4-5A standings at 2-0 (10-9 on the year) thinks some of the problem may be carry over from the Midland High game.

"We had a highly emotional game Tuesday against Midland High," said Stueckler, "and, it's not uncommon to be flat after a game like that."

THE REBELS did indeed start out flat, hitting only 3-of-11 shots in the first quarter to trail OHS 10-6. Things started looking bleak in the following period as the Bronchos rolled to a 21-9 lead before Lee could rebound and cut the margin to 25-19 at the half.

It was the third quarter that belonged to Lee, especially to guard Danny Allen who scored eight of his game-high 15 points to spark Lee into the lead, 35-30. The Bronchos managed to pull within three twice in the final frame, with the last time coming with 4:16 left to play, 39-36.

Allen may have been hot from the field, 7-of-12 for the night, but, like most of his teammates, had trouble hitting from the line, 1-of-6.

"I need to work on my free throw shooting and my outside shot," said Allen. "I just need to spend a little more time in the gym."

Still, it was his efforts from the field that brought the Rebels back. His 15-footer with five minutes left in the quarter tied the game at 27 and he gave Lee it's first lead in the game at 4:34, with a layup.

Allen, who is one of Lee's top scorers this season, sees a few offensive problems that need to be corrected if Lee is to continue among the leaders in the 4-5A race.

"We're rushing our shots a little, not taking our time, not picking our shots like we usually do," said Allen. "We like to have more balance outside and and inside so a team can't cheat on one facet of our game."

And, Allen is giving credit where it's due, to the Rebel defense.

"Our wins have come from defensive hustle, from scrapping for the ball when it's on the floor," he said.

Allen was the only double figure scorer for Lee while Nicky Sanchez and Mark Van Cott scored eight each. Van Cott also added 13 rebounds. For Odessa High, Victor Dancer scored 12 and Tracy Blaylock added 10.

In junior varsity action, Midland Lee claimed a 62-59 victory. Darren Dortch led the way with 18 points while Calvin Gary added 11 and Cregg MaGaha scored 10. For OHS, Lester White scored 16 followed by Derrick Ellis with 12 and Reggie White with 10.

For the sopohomores, OHS kept it from being a clean sweep with a 59-40 win. Marion Davis scored 18 followed by Shea Maner with 12, Walt McCoy with 11 and Jeremy Epitriam with 10. Lee's Mark Lathan scored 10.

On Tuesday, the Rebs hit the road for the first time in district play when they travel to Abilene to take on Cooper at 6:15 and 8 p.m.

Watkins' 30 points paces Permian over Midland High

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ODESSA — No one is close to conceding a repeat District 4-5A title to Odessa Permian, even Midland High coach Jack Stephenson. But Friday night, the Panthers showed why they are more than capable of making a serious bid to defend the crown they won in 1985-86.

Permian's Lance Watkins poured in 30 points on a brilliant 11-of-15 performance from the floor as the Panthers knocked off Midland High, 85-62, to boost their record to 2-0 in 4-5A. MHS fell to 0-2, 6-13 overall.

Watkins, a 5-11 senior, swished his first seven shots and didn't miss until there was just 2:53 left in the first half, by then Permian had built a comfortable lead. Watkins was also perfect from the free throw line, hitting on eight-of-eight.

"I wouldn't say they are better than the rest of the district, but anytime you've got a player like Lance Watkins, you've got a chance," Stephenson said. "He makes you do a lot of things that you don't want to do. I've seen everyone in the district play, and he's by far the best player. He's not tall, but he is some kind of shooter."

With Watkins leading the way from the outside, Permian led 36-23 with about three minutes to go in the first half. But the Bulldogs put on a run just before intermission and trailed by just five, 38-33 at the half.

BUT COMING out for the third period, MHS seemed to find itself in a landslide. The Panthers went on a 20-10 spurt that left MHS buried the rest of the way.

"There was a communication breakdown after halftime," said Bulldog guard Eric Boyt. "Coach wanted us to do one thing, and we went out doing another."

"We got mixed up on our defenses and it was my fault for not explaining it more clearly," Stephenson said. "We were supposed to be in a zone press but we were in a man press. By the time we got it straightened around it was nearly too late.

"I thought we played a fine first half and I can't ask for any better effort than we gave out there."

Panther coach Charles Pattillo also made some halftime adjustments, installing a man-to-man defense and a press, turning the game into a shootout, a style that MHS was not suited to play.

"We went to the press at halftime, but we thought they would handle it better than they did," Pattillo said. "It was the press that really turned it around for us."

The Bulldogs played without their two leading scorers, David Lujan and Michael Ball, who have been suspended for two weeks for disciplinary reasons. Ball and Lujan have been combining for 23.5 points per game.

IN THEIR absence, forward Greg Arrell picked up the scoring punch,

Would anyone dare pick against Giants?

Battles

After what the New York Giants did to the San Francisco 49ers last week, 49-3, only someone who is convinced the Giants played their game-of-the-year and can't possibly have another like it left in their system, could pick the Redskins Sunday.

Either that or the skeptic suspects the old "it's tough to beat a team three times in the same season" rule applies in this instance.

Even so, it would take a lot of moxie to pick against the Giants.

If the Chicago Bears were impressive last season on the way to the Super Bowl, and in the Super Bowl, the Giants were no less so in disassembling the 49ers.

It's just that the Giants haven't been as consistently awesome as the Bears were a year ago. Remember that tight squeak against the below .500 Cowboys in the Meadowlands?

THEN, TOO, the Redskins are not the 49ers. True, they lost twice to the Giants, but they weren't hospital cases after it was over. As a matter of fact, they weren't even convinced.

Meanwhile, out in Cleveland, the Denver Broncos, because of John Elway, are the people's choice to win over the guys wearing the high tops and leather helmets. The Cleveland Browns are the guys with the tradition of winning playoff games, but unless you've got a few years behind you, that tradition may come as a surprise.

After World War II, the Browns replaced the Rams, who fled to Los Angeles, in Cleveland, but they didn't replace the Rams in the NFL. Cleveland was a member of the new All-American Conference.

THE BROWNS won everything in sight but failed to convince any one in the old established NFL.

When asked to comment on the Browns' domination of the All-American Conference, the NFL commissioner at the time, Bert Bell or Elmer Layden, suggested "Let them get a football."

When the inevitable merger finally came, it turned out the football the Browns were using was more genuine than anything they had in the NFL. Cleveland still continued to win.

But the names that made the Browns great then are missing now. There's no Paul Brown, Otto Graham, Marion Motley, Lou Rymkus or Jim Brown, just young Bernie Kosar. He may be enough.

OF COURSE, the Redskins and Browns must win Sunday to set up the ultimate irony.

Can't you envision how it will be? The Super Bowl comes down to the final seconds and Mark Moseley comes off the bench to break the tie with his toe. He misses a 20-yarder. Overtime.

The Browns drive to the five with the kickoff. Moseley again comes in and then, head down, trots off to the bench as the Giants take over.

The Browns hold and again drive...here comes Moseley, the kicker the Redskins jettisoned in mid-season, for another chip shot.....

All-star contests attract pro scouts

Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — Penn State and University of Miami players, intense rivals at the Fiesta Bowl, join college stars from around the country seeking to boost their stock for the NFL draft in today'ss 62nd annual East-West Shrine Football Classic.

Miami center Gregg Rakoczy will be blocking for Penn running backs D.J. Dozier and Steve Smith on an East team that also features linebacker Don Graham of the national champion Nittany Lions.

NFL scouts will be among the expected 70,000 spectators at Stanford Stadium, and they will be taking a close look at quarterbacks Tracy Ham of Georgia Southern, Dave Yarema of Michigan State and Jeff Van Raaphorst of Arizona State.

The rivalry felt by Miami and Penn players apparently has been left behind.

For Reggie Rogers, the game brings him close to the end of a long season made more difficult by having to cope with the cocaine death last summer of his 23-year-old brother Don, a former Cleveland Browns defensive back.

"It made my year a lot harder," the 22-year-old said. "In the beginning of the season I didn't feel I should be up there playing. I felt like I should've been home with my mom. It was hard for me to go to class because I always felt funny. People were staring at me. They always did stare at me, I guess because of my size, but it just felt a little different because of Don's death.

In other All-Star games this weekend, Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde will lead the East against the West in the Japan Bowl at the 30,000 seat Yokohama Stadium in Tokyo. The East roster also includes Alabama quarterback Mike Shula.

Last year, the East downed the West 31-14 for only its third victory in 11 Japan Bowls.

Hawaii's warm sunshine and sandy beaches have lured some of the players at the top of the pro scouts' lists.

Heading the list is Paul Palmer, the Temple running back who was the nation's leading rusher and was runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

Others who the scouts have put high on their lists include center Ben Tamburello of Auburn, safety Thomas Everett of Baylor, fullback Roger Vick of Texas A&M, running back Spencer Tillman of Oklahoma, and placekicker Jeff Jaeger of Washington.

Big names miss Hula Bowl game

HONOLULU — Competition from two other all-star games has diluted the big-name talent for Saturday's Hula Bowl, but NFL scouts say it isn't the big names they came to see anyway.

"We're all here to find out how the less publicized players handle themselves," said Tom Boisture, director of player personnel for the New York Giants.

Gedman bids bye, bye to Red Sox

BOSTON — Catcher Rich Gedman, a key player in Boston's charge to the American League pennant last year, virtually bid farewell to the Red Sox Friday, saying he expected to sign as a free agent with another major league club for the start of the 1987 season.

Raines rejects Expos

MONTREAL — Tim Raines, last season's NL batting champ, said there is no way he will ever play baseball again for the Montreal Expos.

"Montreal is completely out of the picture now," Raines said in a conference-call interview from the Los Angeles apartment of his agent Tom Reich. "We gave them every opportunity to reach a deal."I have no bitter feelings towards them. I love the time I was there. But there comes a time when you have to make a decision and I'm doing that right now."

Peach eyes Jan. 1

ATLANTA — Lee Ayres, executive director of the Peach Bowl, has recommended moving the game to New Year's Day.

The game has been played on New Year's Eve. Ayres said the arguments against keeping that date are that the weather tends to be too cold at night; weekend games compete with the NFL playoffs and people who work on New Year's Eve find it difficult to attend.

Moving the game to new Year's Day is the most feasible option to boost attendance and attract a corporate sponsor, he said.

GENERAL— Rudy Davalos, 48, became the fourth University of Houston AD in eight years....

FIGHTING— Boston City Council President Bruce Bolling has proposed making pro athletes subject to arrest for fights during games "any professional athlete engaged in competition in the city of Boston shall be subject to immediate arrest ... upon the completion of any violent act during said competition."

Bolling did not envision police officers arresting many players on the ice or on the court, but would rather see the NHL, NBA and NFL curb the growing number of fights during games...

BASKETBALL— Indiana Coach Bob Knight says it's impossible to operate a program with the new NCAA limit of 13 scholarships, and that Division 1 participants need to form a new organization. "They're not cutting it like they did football; they already cut it from 24 to 15."...

Nuggets rally to gain 116-113 win over Mavs

Associated Press

DALLAS — Danny Schayes hit a layup with 1:19 to play and Mike Evans added a pair of free throws a minute later to lift the Denver Nuggets to a 116-113 NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

The game ended in controversy when referee Bill Saar called an offensive foul on Mavericks guard Derek Harper with three seconds to play, negating Harper's three-pointer that would have tied the game at 116.

Alex English led the Nuggets with 26 points. Mike Evans and Schayes added 19 each.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 33 points and Harper had a career-high 29.

Denver trailed 103-102 when Mike Evans hit a three-pointer with 4:31 left. After Mavericks forward Sam Perkins missed a three-pointer, English sank a 15-footer for a 107-103 edge.

NBA

Celtics 109, Kings 99

BOSTON — Robert Parish, taking charge in the absence of an injured Larry Bird, scored 28 points and grabbed 25 rebounds as Boston rolled to its seventh consecutive NBA victory, 109-99 over the Sacramento Kings.

Kevin McHale, going over 20 points for the 31st time in 32 games, added 26 as the Celtics hiked their Boston Garden record to 14-1.

Knicks 94, 76ers 84

PHILADELPHIA — Patrick Ewing scored 26 points and Bill Cartwright added 22.

It was the Knicks' first victory at the Spectrum since Dec. 16, 1981, having lost 15 straight games in Philadelphia, including two NBA playoff contests. New York also had dropped eight straight games to the 76ers.

Knight eyes Braves

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Ray Knight, the most valuable player in the 1986 World Series who became a free agent after failing to reach an agreement with the New York Mets, said Friday he would like to sign with the Atlanta Braves.

"I would reject an offer of more money from Baltimore or Detroit to play in Atlanta, even for a lesser role," said Knight, an Albany native. "I've always had a dream to play in Atlanta, and if (Manager) Chuck Tanner and (General Manager) Bobby Cox want me to play, money will not be a factor."

Knight, 34, batted .391 in the World Series and drove in five runs. He hit a crucial seventh-game homer and had a key single in the 10th inning of the sixth game as the Mets rallied from a two-run deficit to win.

Ex-Bruins square off in NFC game

Giants-Skins

By DAVE GOLDBERG

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Herb Welch was standing on the sidelines at RFK Stadium a year ago when a new quarterback trotted onto the field for the Washington Redskins after Joe Theismann was carried off with a broken leg.

"I saw saw this guy run onto the field and thought to myself, 'Hey, wait a minute! I know this guy from somewhere,'" Welch said.

The guy turned out to be Jay Schroeder and somewhere turned out to be the Westwood section of Los Angeles in the spring of 1984. Schroeder, now the Redskins' quarterback will meet Welch, free safety for the New York Giants, again in the NFC Championship game at Giants Stadium.

The route has been an odd one for both of them.

WELCH, a too-small, too-slow defensive back at UCLA, was an afterthought in the 1985 draft, taken by the Giants on the 12th round, one round after they had selected at the same position a basketball player named Al Young who had not played a minute of football since high school.

In fact, Welch hadn't even expected to be drafted — he was in the school library when some friends came in holding a big apple and played a game of charades to get him to guess which team had chosen him.

SCHROEDER, meanwhile, had dropped out of UCLA after two years after the Toronto Blue Jays made him the third pick in the 1979 baseball draft. But he was unable to advance beyond Class A and unwilling to take the Blue Jays' advice that he become a pitcher, he decided to try football again and returned to California.

"I just started working out with some of the guys at UCLA," he says. "I remember Herbie from there. Sometimes he'd run patterns for me and sometimes he'd cover someone else who was running a pattern."

"A lot of the time it would be Jay and me out there, but I had know idea what had happened to him," says Welch. "I had no idea he had aspirations to be a pro quarterback," "He was just a guy out there there throwing a football around."

Schroeder, in fact, had been taken on the third round of the 1984 NFL draft — the third quarterback picked, although his only on-field experience that year was an exhibition game against New England in which he completed three passes in five attempts. He had thrown eight passes in 1985 in mop-up roles before he entered the game in Theismann's place and completed 13 of 20 for 221 yards, including a 44-yard completion on his first pass and a 14-yard touchdown pass to Clint Didier that gave Washington a 23-21 win.

WELCH, who had made the Giants as a special teams player and defensive back — long after Al Young had been sent home — remembers that game vividly.

I don't think anyone on our team had ever seen him," he says. "I kept running up and down the sideline telling people. 'Watch it. This guy can really throw.'"

In his second season, Welch has emerged as a valuable member of a team that won the NFC East title over the Redskins with a 14-2 record then routed San Francisco 49-3 in its first playoff game.

Risien enjoys Browns' football resurgence

Broncos-Browns

By BARRY WILNER

CLEVELAND (AP) — Like just about everyone else in football-crazy Cleveland, Cody Risien is enjoying the resurgence of his Browns. Risien, a Pro Bowl tackle, gets to view it from the inside.

What he has seen, and what the Denver Broncos will see on Sunday in the AFC Championship game, is a balanced attack, a blossoming defense and a frenzied crowd that makes 80,000-seat Cleveland Stadium not a very nice place to visit if you are trying to get to the Super Bowl.

"We didn't start out like the Jets and tail off at the end," said Risien, who is in his seventh NFL season. "We grew each week and we were red hot at the end of the season."

Risien didn't mention that, like the Jets, who once were 10-1 before losing five straight, the Broncos had a mediocre second half of the season. Denver was only 5-5 down the stretch.

"We've got that magic feeling," Risien said, fully aware that Cleveland's last pro football title was in 1964; the Browns never have been to the Super Bowl. "It's probably similar to what New England had last season."

THE PATRIOTS won three road games as a wild-card team to qualify for last January's Super Bowl. But they lost that magic touch this season and were beaten last Sunday by Denver.

The Browns claim they have drawn inspiration and added confidence from last Saturday's sensational comeback victory over the Jets, who led 20-10 with two minutes left before falling in double overtime.

"That was the greatest lift we could possibly have gotten," Risien said. "Confidence comes with success, there's no mystery about that."

The Denver defense, which was No. 1 in the AFC against the run, could provide some mysteries for Cleveland. Under defensive coordinator Joe Collier, it is one of the most active, unpredictable defenses in the league.

"They have good athletes on defense with good speed," Risien's said. "They're always trying to blow up things on you and get penetration.

13 teams share in Series pool

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen teams shared a record World Series players' pool of nearly $8.7 million and 28 members of the 1986 champion New York Mets each received $86,254.

Distributions from the pool were made to the World Series participants, the League Championship Series runners-up and the second- and third-place finishers in each of baseball's four divisions.

An extra team shared in the $8,646,928.30 pool from postseason play in 1986 because the Kansas City Royals and Oakland A's tied for third place in the American League West.

The Mets, the National League East champions, divided $3,112,894.18, giving out 28 full shares, as well as one three-quarter share, three half shares, six one-quarter shares and three cash grants to current and former members of the team. In addition, the series winners handed out three full shares, 14 partial shares and five cash grants to non-uniformed personnel.

American League champion Boston divided $2,334,670.64. The Red Sox gave 27 full shares of $74,985.65, five partial shares and 10 cash grants to team members and one full share and eight cash grants to non-uniformed personnel.

The previous records were all from 1985 when the Royals beat the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series. The teams split up $7,805,371.25, with Kansas City's full shares worth $76,341.71 and the Cardinals paying out $54,921.76 per full share.

The AL West-winning California Angels and the Houston Astros, who won the NL West, each split up a total of $1,080,866.04. The Angels gave 29 full shares of $27,790.12, while the Astros handed out 25 full shares of $28,289.76.

The second-place finishers, the New York Yankees, Texas Rangers, Cincinnati Reds and Philadelphia Phillies, divided $205,364.55 apiece, while the third-place Detroit Tigers, Cardinals and San Francisco Giants each shared in $54,043.30.

The Royals and A's each got half of that — $27,021.65 — to divide.

Though there's no moonshine in Moonshine, spirits are high

By DAVE DELANEY

MOONSHINE, Ill. (AP) — There's no moonshine in Moonshine. In fact, you can't even buy a six-pack of beer here. The sale of booze of any sort is illegal in the Orange Township community in west-central Clark County.

Moonshine is so small it makes a hamlet seem metropolitan. Only two people live here — Roy and Helen Tuttle.

Helen runs Moonshine's only business, the Moonshine Country Store, a two-story structure built in 1912. The top half serves as their residence.

Roy farms and pushes dirt around for area folks with a small fleet of bulldozers.

Most people are surprised to learn the town's name has nothing at all to do with homemade whiskey.

One version of the story is that the crossroads was named after the moon shining on swampy land near the store. But longtime area resident Florence Crandall Adkisson says she believes it was named by a Philadelphia area family that arrived in the 1850s.

That family's hometown had a Moonshine Street and a Moonshine Church, and, like many settlers, the family named their community after something back home.

"We've lived in this area most of our lives," said Mrs. Tuttle, store proprietress since 1982.

Her husband also likes the pace of country living, the kind of life he grew up with.

"I suppose we have a hundred regular customers we see every day," said his wife, whose trade includes strangers passing through on the paved road leading to Martinsville 12 miles north.

Many people appear at midday.

"Helen cooks a hamburger that's really good," said customer Janet Wolfe. "It hangs over the bun."

The store is also a gathering place after Thanksgiving and before New Year's for people who buy candy ordered from Hulman & Co. of Terre Haute, Ind. Mrs. Tuttle says she sells a half-ton of it in a few months.

A lot of conversation goes on during the course of a day here. "We've got some pretty good story tellers," said Ronnie Ulrey, who often fills in for Mrs. Tuttle so she can get out from behind the counter.

And the store is a focal point for an annual fall pig roast that attracts 150 or more to the Moonshine crossroads.

"We change the date of the roast each year so we won't get too many people," said customer Ansel Buckner. About 150 people is just about the right number to fill the store and a grassy area near the parking lot.

"When I was a child we used to walk a quarter mile to the store every Saturday night," said Rose Penrod, an area resident since childhood. "Everybody in every direction came to just visit."

In her recollection, almost 100 youngsters would congregate on those long-ago Saturdays, playing party games while the older folks sometimes hauled out fiddles, banjos and guitars for entertainment.

"These old stores are getting scarce," said Buckner. "There used to be one of them every three or four miles. Most of them are all gone now. If this store ever closed, it would be devastating."

"Sometimes I'll come in here three times a day," said retired farmer Clyde Purcell, who has frequented the store for 40 years.

"We used to come in here to watch television," said Ulrey. "They had the first one in this area right here in this store."

Alert woman credited with helping capture rape suspect

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman who became suspicious when a man followed her to the hallway outside her 18th-floor apartment was credited by police Friday with helping capture a suspect in as many as 11 rapes.

"She became very suspicious when he rode the elevator to her floor and got off," said Detective Thomas Piekarski. "She got back on, went downstairs and told the building manager to call police."

Eugene Booker, apprehended outside the building, was charged with six counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault and one count of unlawful restraint after being identified by seven women who had been attacked in the past 11 months, Piekarski said.

Since February, authorities had been searching for a man, dubbed the "dreadlock rapist" because of his hair style, suspected in the series of rapes in apartment buildings along the lakefront on the North Side.

Booker, 31, also known as Shahid Al-Amin, wears his hair in the "dreadlock" style.

A search of his apartment turned up several items that had been taken from victims in the series of rapes and robberies, detectives said.

The woman credited with aiding in Booker's arrest told police that the man rode the elevator with her Wednesday night, then pretended to have keys to an apartment on the same floor.

She returned to the ground floor and told the building manager to call police, who arrested Booker near her building.

The woman was not identified.

Cmdr. Edward Wodnicki said the rapist's method generally was to follow a woman onto the elevator in an apartment building, and then get off on the same floor with the intended victim and pretend to be trying to enter a nearby apartment.

When the woman unlocked her own apartment door, the rapist would push her inside, rape her and then rob her, Wodnicki said.

Some people are plagued by warts. There are all kinds of home remedies to remove warts-They usually don't work. Worry seems to rule many peoples lives. Such people are sometimes called worrywarts. They need to apply God's remedy for worry-faith. It is not enough to apply this medicine of faith once or twice. It must be applied many times. When it is, worry-worn people discover that faith really works.

Man's ventures in art merely imitate the magnificence of God's designs. No museum can offer a winter landscape to rival God's own etching.

The works of the Divine Artist not only bring us beauty, peace and inspiration. They teach us fundamental lessons for every-day living. The love so evident in nature's beauty is a love we can all share. The orderliness of creation inspires unity, trust, brotherhood.

For all our spiritual searching you and I cannot match the touch of the Almighty. But following lines He has drawn for us—perhaps one day our human scene will look more like something God etched.

Study shows spiritual world 'real, inhabited'

RELIGION

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Most modern thought assumes the world is a closed, natural system in which such things as heavenly appearances and voices simply don't happen, at least not anymore.

But private human experiences, rarely discussed, defy that blanket naturalistic view, researchers find.

Both a new scientific national sampling and a concentrated study in an ordinary Midwestern town found that a big proportion of people report they've had strange experiences that don't square with assumed reality.

The Rev. Ben Johnson, a St. Cloud, Minn., Lutheran minister with a Harvard doctorate, says his findings indicate the spiritual "world is real and inhabited by personalities."

He told fellow academics at a recent meeting that such a thesis sounds "heretical" in an intellectual climate that almost universally assumes the "world view of the Bible is hopelessly outmoded."

But he said an intensive survey in St. Cloud, with 2,000 responses, suggested "there indeed may exist a spiritual world, normally invisible to us, which may interpenetrate our space and manifest itself on occasion."

His survey, in 14 Roman Catholic and Protestant congregations in that town of 45,000, found that 30 percent of the people reported some extraordinary experience such as religious visions, prophetic dreams, heavenly voices or visitations.

"Two centuries after the intellectual world has said that these kinds of things do not happen, they show up among almost a third of the population in a conservative Midwestern city," Johnson told a recent joint meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature and American Academy of Religion.

"What does it mean? Most people do not even want to think about it. The closed system in which we have lived since the enlightenment has become comfortable. We do not want to reckon with the kind of stories that emerge from our survey."

Besides those local findings, a national survey by the University of Chicago's National Opinion Research Center finds that 42 percent of Americans say they have been in contact with someone who has died.

That's up from 27 percent 11 years ago. Even higher percentages report psychic experiences, 67 percent having experienced extra-sensory perception, up from 58 percent in 1973.

Such "paranormal experiences" now seem to be normal, writes the Rev. Andrew Greeley, a center research associate for the January-February Issue of the magazine, American Health.

"It's even happening to elite scientists who insist that such things cannot possibly happen," he writes. "Indeed the nation is living with a split between scientific belief and personal reality."

In the studies, he says, those reporting paranormal experiences were "ordinary Americans, somewhat above the norm in education and intelligence and somewhat less than average in religious involvement."

He adds that much of academia and the media "find it unthinkable that a sizeable proportion of the people they see every day believe they have experiences outside the accepted limits of science."

"The discomfort has made it hard to carry on serious academic discussion about the mystical experiences of ordinary Americans," he says.

In a similar vein, Johnson said the Western world limits such occurrences to fiction or psychological theorizing, but that more serious examination is needed.

Even most biblical research "is predicated on a closed system," he said, but the "comparative frequency of religious experiences in our time ought to be considered as raising the question about ancient religious phenomena."

"I am suggesting that our current materialistic world view restricts our ability to interpret the Bible or religion in any time or place," he added.

He said "it might be fun and advance our discipline if a group began to do religious studies with the hypothesis that there may be somebody — maybe a lot of somebodies — on the other end of the line."

He said researchers should "suspend methodological atheism" that has become the common yardstick and "allow ourselves to imagine the world of the spirit as real."

Such open, impartial study should examine seriously "the possiblity that the Bible may know what it's talking about in ways we can only begin to imagine. ...Otherwise we may become religious pygmies who look back upon religious giants and do not understand."

Johnson left a professorship at Trinity Lutheran Seminary in Columbus, Ohio, for his St. Cloud pastorate to test academic assumptions that supernatural experiences are part of bygone mythology.

He says his findings indicate otherwise, suggesting "a possible direct link between Scripture and Christian experiences through the ages, rooted in the existence of an invisible world which overlays the visible."

Sociologist Milo Brekke, who helped Johnson design the survey questionnaire and who is supervising analysis of the data for a forthcoming book, says:

"It seems that we may have uncovered rather strong evidence of widespread occurrence of certain forms of Christian experience that many people in the theological community in recent years have ignored or ruled out because of their beginning assumptions."

LIFESCOPE

Some Say The Bible Is Boring. Lifescope Says It Offers The Only Way To A Meaningful Life.

Man shall not live by bread alone; but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of the Lord. The Word of God is living and active. Sharper than any double-edged sword, it penetrates even to dividing soul and spirit, joints and marrow; it judges the thoughts and attitudes of the heart. Nothing in all creation is hidden from God's sight. Everything is uncovered and laid bare before the eyes of Him to Whom we must give account.

How can a young man stay pure? By reading Your Word and following its rules. I have tried my best to find You, (O Lord) don't let me wander off from Your instructions. I have thought much about Your words and stored them in my heart so that they would hold me back from sin.

The entrance of Your words gives light; it gives understanding to the simple. Open my eyes to see wonderful things in Your Word. Direct my steps by Your Word, and let no iniquity have dominion over me. The punishment You gave me was the best thing that could have happened to me for it taught me to pay attention to Your laws. They are more valuable to me than millions in silver and gold!

I have refused to walk the paths of evil for I will remain obedient to Your Word. No, I haven't turned away from what You taught me; Your words are sweeter than honey. And since only Your rules can give me wisdom and understanding, no wonder I hate every false teaching. Your words are a flashlight to light the path ahead of me and keep me from stumbling. I've said it once and I'll say it again and again: I will obey these wonderful laws of Yours.

Your Word has given me life.

Prayer Warriors' motto: 'Riding for the Son'

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — They may look like any other jeans-clad bikers, but the 15 members of the Rolling Prayer Warriors have just found a way to mix two of their favorite things — motorcycles and the Scripture.

The born-again Christians pack their Bibles in their motorcycle saddlebags, ready to spread the word of God on the road. The group's motto is "Riding for the Son."

"This is not a hard Bible-thumping group," said the Evansville club's chaplain, Joseph Bradley, 41. "We evangelize to anyone who is interested in listening. We don't do anything violent or off-color."

For Bradley, a construction worker and student at Trinity Theological Seminary in Newburgh, the group formed last year has provided an opportunity to unite his "two greatest loves," which he found were in conflict several years ago.

At that time, he said, he sold his motorcycle because it created too strong a conflict with his faith. Now he has begun shopping for a new motorcycle to use for evangelism.

Dennis Keltner, 59, of Newburgh, a member of the national Christian Motorcyclists Association who helped spearhead the Evansville club, said the only requirement for membership in the Rolling Prayer Warriors is being a born-again Christian.

"You don't even have to have a motorcycle," he said.

Motorcyclists in the association are recognized by patches they wear on their vests, a triangle with a hand, a cross and a Bible. Otherwise, they may look like any of thousands of other motorcycle enthusiasts, Keltner said.

"A lot of times we pull into rest parks and people start asking questions and we witness to them," said Keltner.

He said he became interested in the Christian Motorcyclists Association when he met an evangelist at a motorcycle gathering in central Indiana about 10 years ago.

Since then, the association has held services at several motorcyclist organizations around the country. This summer, the Evansville chapter plans to carry its message cross-country.

"Sadly, a lot of people who see some people riding motorcycles together have the wrong impression. We are different," Keltner said. "We are witnessing not only for good motorcycling, but for Christ as well."

Two Americans serving as Vatican's guardians of faith

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Two Americans serving on the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith are the Rev. Thomas Herron of Philadelphia and the Rev. Michael Swalina of St. Louis.

Herron, 40, was educated at the Pontifical Biblical University in Rome and holds a degree in the Scriptures. He taught at a seminary before coming to the Vatican in 1982.

Swalina, 40, holds a doctorate in sacramental theology from the Pontifical Gregorian University and served as a diocesan priest at home before joining the congregation in 1984.

His recent speaking engagements include: The festival of Worship & Witness, Minnesota, 1983; Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, 1984; the 13th National Convention of the American Lutheran Church, 1986, where he was a storyteller and consultant.

White is the author of "Speaking in Stories: Resources for Christian Storytellers," 1982; and "Stories for telling: A Treasury for Storytellers," 1986.

Hosey was ordained in Rome, Italy, in 1956, after having studied theology at the Gregorian University and completed undergraduate work at St. Mary's, Cincinnati, Ohio. He has been, for the past 13 years, a leader of retreats and renewal sessions.

He serves as a member of the Ecumenical Prayer Team speaking on the need for contemplative prayer for today. Hosey has been involved in Marriage Encounter & Marriage Enrichment Programs for the past six years and was, for 10 years, assistant pastor in Lafayette, Logansport and Elwood, Ind.

Everyday problems addressed

"Making Things Right, When Things Go Wrong" — a full-color film series about problems everyone faces — will begin Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., at the Westside Church of Christ.

These five films feature the advice of Paul Faulkner and are based on his years of counseling experience and research studies. It is designed to be a step-by-step guide for "putting a wide range of life's concerns back in order, no matter how tangled things may have become," according to a spokesman of the church.

Faulkner heads one to four programs in Texas certified by the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapists to supervise counselor training. His first film series, "Marriage Enrichment Series," also featuring Carl Brecheen, has been viewed by more than three million people in the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, according to the spokesman.

The series was produced by Earl Miller, producer of James Dobson's "Focus on The Family."

Westside Church of Christ is located at 4410 W. Illinois.

FUM begins Dobson film series

"Turn Your Heart Toward Home," a film series by James Dobson, producer of the "Focus on the Family" series, will be shown at First United Methodist Church beginning Wednesday.

The films will begin at 6:15 p.m. each Wednesday through Feb. 25. The first film in the series is "Power in Parenting: The Young Child." A discussion led by the Rev. Bill Weir will follow each film session.

First United Methodist Church is located at the corner of Main and Illinois streets in downtown.

Ninth graders study sexuality

"'...and God created them male and female...' and Now What!," a human sexuality study for 9th grade youth from a Christian perspective is being presented by Christian Life Enrichment Resources, under the sponsorship of the Midland Association of Churches.

This 13-week sexuality course will be offered in four different churches and one outreach agency beginning Monday and ending the week of April 5. The classes will be held from 7 to 8:45 p.m. at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church and Memorial Christian Church on Mondays, Midland Lutheran Church on Tuesdays, Trinity Presbyterian Church on Wednesdays and Casa de Amigos on Thursdays.

The class to be held at Casa de Amigos is free of charge to low-income youth and the remaining four classes will have a $25 per-student fee. The additional costs have been paid by the Midland Association of Churches.

All classes are limited to 20 students. For more information, or to enroll, call Linda Goddard, 697-5078.

Three churches pick up series

The powerful, six-part film series "Turn Your Heart Toward Home" is being shown at three area churches, the First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave., Greenwood Church of Christ, 1.5 miles west of Greenwood School, and Greenwood Baptist Church beginning Sunday.

Over 50 million concerned parents and family groups have benefited from Dr. James Dobson's enlightening film series, "Focus on the Family." Now building on that nationwide groundswell of interest, Word Publishing and Focus on the Family, Inc., present "Turn Your Heart Toward Home."

"In this bold new film series, America's most trusted family life expert brings his vast experience to bear on one of society's most pressing challenges — the protecting and strengthening of family relationships," says a spokesman for Dobson. "It is the purpose of this powerful new film series to challenge those individuals to return to the traditional values upon which families are best created and nutured."

The titles of the remaining films in the series are "Power in Parenting: The Young Child," "Power in Parenting: The Adolescent," "The Family Under Fire," "Overcoming a Painful Childhood" and "The Heritage."

The films are being shown at 6 p.m. Sundays through Feb. 8 at First Church of the Nazarene, pastored by the Rev. Harold L. Quarles and at Greenwood Church of Christ. The series is being shown at 7 p.m. Sundays through Feb. 8 at Greenwood Baptist Church.

Greenwood United Methodist Church currently meets at the Greenwood High School auditorium on Highway 307, east of Midland.

KENT radio is now signed on

Midland recently became the home of a new radio station: KENT, 920 KC on the AM dial. KENT, which features Christian music and light contemporary music, signed on the air Jan. 1.

Station manager and president of Southwest Educational Media of Texas Inc., T.K. Atkins, said, "The overall purpose of KENT is to be a Christian ministry to the community rather than a money making venture."

"It is our conviction," he continued, "that the 'religion for sale' " approach of some Christian broadcasters is inconsistant with the Biblical teachings of grace and faith. Therefore, KENT's programming will be uninterupted by commercial spot announcements. We are going to operate...as a listener-supported ministry."

Atkins went on to say that the station will be affiliated with the Criswell Radio Network, which originates in Dallas.

St. Paul UMC presents singers

The Liberated Wailing Wall will be in concert at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Dr., Thursday at 7 p.m.

The Liberated Wailing Wall is a musical group composed of Christian Jews. It began in 1972 as a part of the Jews for Jesus movement. "When people wouldn't listen to our preaching on street corners and campuses, we decided to sing the gospel to them," said Moishe Rosen, the leader of the Jews for Jesus mission.

The music of the group is unique as far as Christian music goes because the members and the music are Jewish. "After all, we wanted to do music that could relate the gospel of the Jewish Messiah to our parents and Jewish friends as well as to all other people," said Stuart Dauermann, composer of many of the songs the group sings.

There is no admission charge to the concert, though an offering will be received that will go to the evangelic work of Jews for Jesus.

Ranchland gets new pastor

Denton

The Rev. D.H. "Rocky" Denton is the new pastor at Ranchland Heights Baptist Church. Denton comes to Midland from Fort Worth.

He has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Texas at Arlington. In 1974 he earned his master of divinity from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. His master of religious education was earned from SBTS in 1979.

He and his wife, Linda, have three daughters.

The public is invited to attend services at the church located one block west of The Country Store on south Midkiff Road.

Mid-East nations visited said to be open to peace

NEW YORK (AP) — A church delegation back from a 19-day visit to the Middle East says religious passions are increasingly involved in conflicts there.

However, the group said that leaders of several of the seven nations visited are open to religious efforts at peace-making, especially when Christians, Moslems and Jews work together.

The Rev. Arie R. Brouwer, general secretary of the National Council of Churches who headed the 11-member delegation, said such efforts were encouraged by several foreign ministers and parliamentary leaders.

They felt the ministry of the three religious groups "is extremely important" because of existing "fears, distortions and misunderstandings that government officials find it most difficult to address," Brouwer said.

The trip was made at the invitation of the Middle East Council of Churches and a request from the World Muslim League.

Doctor testifies he would have told woman with MS not to have child

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A doctor, testifying Friday in the custody battle between a couple and the surrogate mother they hired to bear a child, said he would have advised the couple against pregnancy because the woman has multiple sclerosis.

However, James Donaldson, chief of neurology at John Dempsey Hospital in Farmington, Conn., said that if Elizabeth Stern, a 41-year-old pediatrician, had been younger, he would have favored her becoming pregnant.

Donaldson did not treat Mrs. Stern, but was called by the couple's attorney as an expert witness. He reviewed Mrs. Stern's medical records.

Mrs. Stern and her husband, William, agreed to pay Mary Beth Whitehead $10,000 to be artificially inseminated with Stern's sperm and bear a child for them. But after giving birth, Mrs. Whitehead refused to give up the baby.

The custody battle for the 9-month-old baby — named Sara by Mrs. Whitehead, Melissa by the Sterns and referred to in court papers as Baby M — is expected to produce the first U.S. court ruling on the validity of a surrogate motherhood contract.

Mrs. Stern has testified that she sought a surrogate at the Infertility Center of New York because she has multiple sclerosis and feared that if she tried to give birth she could become paralyzed or die.

She testified that she has suffered mild symptoms of multiple sclerosis, such as numbness in her legs and a partial loss of vision in her right eye.

Donaldson said that at least two studies have shown women with multiple sclerosis have a chance of experiencing symptoms of the disease during pregnancy and after giving birth.

However, he also said that two other studies show pregnancy has no effect on multiple sclerosis and that the extent of any possible symptoms is unknown.

"It's Russian roulette," said Donaldson. "We never know which of the areas might be hit."

Donaldson, also an associate professor at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine, said he has interviewed Mrs. Stern and reviewed her medical history.

Phyllis Shaw, a spokeswoman for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society in New York, has said there is no reason for a woman with multiple sclerosis to avoid pregnancy unless she is so disabled she cannot care for a newborn infant.

Under cross-examination, Donaldson said that he would have recommended Mrs. Stern go through with a pregnancy had she been younger.

Donaldson disputed contentions made in court papers by doctors expected to testify on Mrs. Whitehead's behalf that pregnant women with multiple sclerosis have a minuscule or less than 5 percent chance of suffering symptoms after giving birth.

Harold Cassidy, an attorney for Mrs. Whitehead and her husband, Richard, has said that Mrs. Stern was capable of bearing her own child and decided to tell the court of her disease only to justify hiring a surrogate.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Freshman Congressman Fred Grandy, a former actor on the television series "Love Boat," is engaged to marry Catherine Mann, a novelist and television reporter, Grandy's office announced Friday.

The wedding is set for March 28 at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Sioux City, Rich Myers, Grandy's press secretary, said from Washington, D.C.

Grandy, 38, portrayed the character Gopher Smith on "Love Boat" before abandoning show business to pursue a political career. He met Ms. Mann four years ago when she interviewed him for the television program "Entertainment Tonight," Myers said.

Ms. Mann now reports for the program "PM Magazine" and a sydicated news service, "Entertainment Report." She also is the author of the novel "Tinsel Town" and is working on a second book, Myers said.

Ms. Dorssey has asked for an unspecified amount of damages.

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Entertainer Joan Rivers' national TV campaign on behalf of a miniature horse spurred more than 100 calls to city officials from as far as Anchorage, Alaska, and Chattanooga, Tenn.

On Wednesday's broadcast of "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers," Miss Rivers urged viewers to telephone officials and protest an order that "Ragtime," a 27-inch American miniature horse, be removed from owner Patty Fairchild's home.

"Everyone is always for the underdog," Miss Rivers said. "I'm for the underhorse."

On Thursday, operators at the Thousand Oaks municipal switchboard fielded 102 calls on the issue.

Councilman Alex Fiore said the city's code enforcement office ordered Ms. Fairchild to remove the gray-and-white purebred after it received complaints from neighbors. Municipal law forbids horses in her neighborhood, he added.

'Internal problems' won't hinder arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman notified the Soviet Union on Friday that "the internal problems" confronting the Reagan administration would not result in American concessions in the next round of arms control talks.

Referring to the Iran-Contra affair, Kampelman said that President Reagan remained strong and "we have no intention of acting in any way other than to carry out our objectives."

He said he would reopen talks next Thursday in Geneva with a Soviet delegation headed by Viktor P. Karpov without any new U.S. proposals.

"Somehow we have to always come in with new initiatives," Kampelman said. "This is not a way to have negotiations. We are not doing that."

The negotiations deal with U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range and long-range nuclear arms as well as space-based defenses.

Kampelman said Reagan would not give up his search for a missile defense because the nation had to be protected against Soviet "cheating" on any weapons reduction agreement as well as against Libya and other potential enemies.

The Soviets have suggested they are prepared to agree to reduce nuclear arms if the U.S. program is confined to the laboratory.

Kampelman was interviewed by West European journalists on Worldnet, a televised news conference produced by the U.S. Information Agency.

"What we are concerned about," Kampelman said, "is that the Soviets not miscalculate. For if they should conclude that (because of) the internal problems we are now debating...the United States would be making concessions we would not otherwise make, that were not in our interest, they would be making a very serious error."

"I hope they do not miscalculate," Kampelman said. "The United States is strong. The president is strong. We have no intention of acting in any other way than to carry out our objectives. We will not make concessions that are not otherwise in our interest."

Kampelman said the Soviets always approach the reopening of talks in Geneva with demands for new U.S. initiatives. "If they should come to believe that every time we come back we are coming with something new, that provides an incentive to them not to respond to us now because we are coming with a concession tomorrow," he said.

"We will not, we will not," Kampelman said, repeating for emphasis. "They know what they have to do. They've not done it. They have to respond to our proposals."

Kampelman said he was not pessimistic about reaching an arms-reduction agreement. "There has been a tremendous amount of movement" in the 22 months since the talks opened, he said.

But the U.S. negotiator did not single out any issue as on the verge of settlement. He also was critical of Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, for not fulfilling a commitment to Reagan to come to Washington for a summit meeting.

"Mr. Gorbachev, for his own reasons, decided he would go back on the promise to come to the United States," Kampelman said. "That's his right...

"If they want a summit, let them respect Mr. Reagan's invitation. There it is, on the table. We're not eager for it. We're willing to have it. We think it will be useful to have. And if he thinks he is doing the United States or Mr. Reagan a favor by coming here, this is no way to proceed..."

The two leaders agreed on back-to-back visits at a summit meeting in Geneva in November 1985. Gorbachev was to come here last year, with Reagan to reciprocate by traveling to the Soviet Union in 1987.

In the meantime, they met in Iceland last October and reached informal understandings to reduce their arsenals. Kampelman said that should be the basis for the next round of negotiations.

"He is not doing us any greater favor than he is doing himself by sitting down and talking to us," Kampelman said. "And we cannot understand at all this game they are playing about summitry."

Marine personnel sift through the wreckage of a Marine Corps CH-53E Super Stallion helicopter Friday which crashed Thursday near Brawley, Calif.

Marine copter crashes, killing five people

BRAWLEY, Calif. (AP) — A Marine transport helicopter practicing night landings crashed and burned, killing all five aboard, officials said Friday.

The CH-53E Super Stallion crashed on the southwest shore of the Salton Sea at the Salton Sea Naval Test Range at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, officials said.

Maj. Anthony Rothfork, a Marine spokesman in Washington, D.C., said the accident was being investigated.

The helicopter was part of Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 465, based 120 miles to the west at Tustin Air Station in Orange County, 40 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

The three-engine helicopter is manufactured by Sikorsky Aircraft Co. of Stratford, Conn., and is capable of carrying 56 troops or hauling 32,000 pounds of cargo.

NATION IN BRIEF

School boycott launched to protest paint, asbestos

CHICAGO (AP) — All but 15 youngsters stayed home Friday from a preschool for 377 children of low-income families under a boycott launched by their parents, who say asbestos and lead paint are making their children sick.

"All we're saying is that if the school board says the building is safe, we want proof," said Effie Kirk, president of the Wheatley Child-Parent Center parents' advisory council.

The parents became concerned when lead paint was found on two walls and asbestos was found in air ducts in the 42-year-old building last May. They also reported to city health officials that their children seemed prone to illness.

The school, serving children aged 3 to 5 in an impoverished South Side neighborhood, is run by the Chicago Board of Education.

School officials say the lead paint and asbestos have been cleaned up, but parents say they are not convinced. They pulled their children out of school Dec. 15 and resumed the boycott Monday after a two-week Christmas break.

ABC ends Nielsen contract

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC is unhappy with some of the numbers it is getting from the A.C. Nielsen Co. and has notified the ratings service that it is canceling its contract for national ratings as of Aug. 31.

Marvin Mord, ABC's vice president for research and marketing services, said Friday that the network's options include buying the new ratings service from Audits of Great Britain, returning to Nielsen or simply doing without national ratings for a time.

The ratings are used to set rates for advertising, and often determine which shows are canceled and which will remain on the air.

"We are indicating to (Nielsen) our concern about their development of the main service that they're going to be producing, the people meter service, and the impact it is having on the existing service," Mord said.

Mord cited the network's unhappiness with data on its "Monday Night Football" broadcasts, which appear to show that while ratings are about the same as a year ago, fewer men were watching with no corresponding increase in female or teen viewing.

Copter pilot tried to land

POLLOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The pilot of a medical helicopter that crashed and killed all four people aboard apparently was trying to land the aircraft in a clearing, a forest ranger said Friday.

The Bell Long Ranger helicopter crashed in remote woods in eastern North Carolina on Thursday night as it was carrying a 3-month-old girl from the U.S. Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune to Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville after she suffered epileptic seizures. The crash also killed the pilot and two nurses.

Firm calls results 'major step' in AIDS research

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pharmaceutical company released preliminary results Friday of experimental clinical drug tests that seemed to help AIDS-prone patients avoid developing the disease, but the news was greeted with caution in the scientific and financial worlds.

ICN Pharmaceuticals Inc. did not claim its clinical trials of the drug ribavirin show it is a cure for AIDS, but one official, Dr. Weldon Jolley, said at a news conference that the results represent "a major step forward in understanding this disease."

However, a New York-based AIDS victim support organization — Gay Men's Health Crisis — pronounced itself puzzled by the action of ICN officials.

"We are deeply concerned that they displayed insensitivity to the hundreds of thousands of individuals affected by AIDS," the group said in a statement.

"We cannot understand why they chose to raise the hopes of so many people by releasing their clinical trial information through a press conference instead of a more responsible manner such as an appropriate medical journal."

Samuel Broder, a leading authority on AIDS drug research at the National Cancer Institute, declined to react to the details released to reporters.

"I would be very happy to see the primary data as soon as the investigators can make it available to the scientific community," he said.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. There is no known cure. As of Dec. 1, AIDS had been diagnosed in more than 28,000 Americans, of whom about half have died since 1979, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control.

North belonged to wealthy group of Contra backers

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North was part of a low-profile, behind-the-scenes national organization that served to bring together wealthy conservatives and Nicaraguan rebel leaders, it was reported.

The Baton Rouge State Times, in a copyright article in Thursday's editions, said the Council for National Policy was headed for nearly four years by State Rep. Woody Jenkins.

The organization served as a forum for political conservatives to meet behind the scenes with North, Nicaraguan rebel leaders and Afghan freedom fighters, the newspaper said.

As one member described it to the newspaper, the Council was a vehicle for people who needed a way to meet others who could provide those financial help. Among those who came in need was Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

The State-Times said it obtained a confidential roster for the organization showing it had a 401-member governing board as of mid-1985. The roster gives unlisted phone numbers, addresses, business or organization affiliations, and in some cases contact personnel.

Members on the list included North, the National Security Council aide who was fired by President Reagan for his role in the Iran-arms-Contra affair; fellow NSC staff member John Lenczowksi; and Faith Ryan Whittlesey, former special assistant to Reagan.

CIA takes exception to NBC report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency, in an unusual public statement, took exception Friday to reports that a Senate Intelligence Committee draft document found the agency's top officials misrepresented to Congress when they first knew about diversion of Iranian arms money.

And two members of the panel condemned the leaking of the report to NBC News, saying it was misleading and incomplete and was an attempt to manipulate public opinion. They declined to make copies of the document available.

"We do not think the staff document that has been released is an accurate reflection of all the testimony and documents in the custody of the committee," Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the panel, told a news conference.

CIA spokesman George Lauder issued a statement contending that agency officials, including Director William J. Casey, had heard only "speculation" about the diversion of arms sale proceeds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, before they were told officially of the diversion on Nov. 25.

"It is time for the agency to set the record straight publicly," Lauder said, adding that Casey and Deputy Director Robert Gates had made "full disclosure" in their December congressional testimony "about speculation that had reached them in October about a possible diversion of funds and what they had done about that information."

The statement said that when Casey and Gates heard "tenuous speculation" about the diversion in the fall of 1986, "they took appropriate action. They reported their concerns to the (National Security Council) several times in October, and Director Casey recommended that the White House review the program."

Lauder concluded: "No credible evidence of a diversion of monies ever came to the attention of the agency. Most importantly, there was no indication whatsoever that CIA was involved in any diversion of funds, that CIA misused its funds or violated any law."

The draft report as cited by NBC in a broadcast Thursday concluded that Casey had more solid knowledge than he had admitted to congressional investigators, and it criticized him for a lack of candor in his testimony.

NBC News on Friday night quoted the Senate Intelligence Committee report as saying that Casey met with retired Air Force Major Gen. Richard Secord, who ran the Contra resupply operation, at least twice in the last year.
