Picture of Peace--Lest We Forget

Unspectacular, but of potent import for Americans, is this picture of peace. Merely a random shot, taken on the White House lawn, its spirit is commonplace in America, but hardly to be found anywhere else in the world. For where else do mothers and children stroll and play, without gas masks and fear of death from the air? And where else are ordinary folk allowed on the front lawn of the country's head man? And where else is food so plentiful that people can share it with birds and animals. Yes, this is a picture of the American way.

NAZI AIRMEN ATTACK NAVAL UNIT, CLAIMED

Direct Hit on British Warship Reported by Germans

BERLIN, May 6 (AP).—The German air force Sunday attacked a British naval unit off Narvik, and scored a direct hit on an English battleship, German sources asserted. Heavy smoke rising from the warship showed the effect of the bomb. British troops also were subjected to attack by German airmen, Germans said, and bombs dropped on an enemy encampment exploded a munitions dump.

BRITISH DENY BATTLESHIP SUNK

LONDON, May 6 (AP).—The admiralty Sunday night formally denied Saturday's official German claims that a British battleship and heavy cruiser had been sunk by German air bombs off the west coast of Norway. It said in a communique: "The German claim to have sunk a British battleship and a cruiser of the York class in the operations off Namsos is untrue."

NAZIS INSIST REPORT TRUE

BERLIN, May 6 (AP).—Straight in the face of Britain's official denial, authoritative sources here declared Sunday night that a British battleship was sunk off Namsos, Norway, by dive bombers Friday and that the high command statement in that respect would not be changed.

At the same time it was learned the Germans had planned Saturday to have one of the pilots participating in the attack on the battleship describe the event to a press conference, but that attack group was called on "another mission," the nature of which was not disclosed. It was said there still is a possibility that one of the pilots might appear before the foreign press to describe the attack.

Baptist Revival Closes Sunday

The First Baptist spring revival closed Sunday evening with baptismal services after the evening worship period.

The meeting, according to the Rev. Judson Prince, pastor, was the best within the church in a number of years, both in attendance and in spirit.

The two weeks' services resulted in 31 decisions including conversions who did not join the church, those who came by letter, and for reconsecration.

Three additions, one for baptism and two by letter, were had Sunday.

Mary Martin Weds Movie Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev., May 6 (AP).—Mary Martin, who won her way into the movies by singing My Heart Belongs to Daddy on Broadway, was married here Sunday to Richard Halliday, film studio story editor.

Miss Martin hails from Weatherford, Texas, and formerly was married to Ben Hageman, a lawyer there. They have a son 8 years old.

Halliday was transferred here from the New York offices of Paramount six months ago. He is a graduate of Dartmouth university.

They were returning by automobile Sunday night to Hollywood, where the bride begins work Monday in a picture with Bing Crosby.

H-SU A Capella Choir to Be Here

The a capella concert choir from Hardin-Simmons university, directed by Lola Gibson Beaton, will present a 45-minute concert at the high school auditorium Tuesday morning at 9:35, it was announced today. A small admission will be charged.

Dewey Meets G. O. P. 'King Maker'

Thomas E. Dewey, New York City's racket-busting district attorney, continues to set a hot pace in race for G. O. P. presidential nomination, and meets the titular head of republican party while in Wichita, Kans., to speak before annual banquet of Friends university.

COUNTY DEMOS TO MEET AT 2 P. M. TUESDAY

Delegates to State Convention Will Be Selected

Eastland county democrats will hold their presidential nominations convention at Eastland tomorrow at 2 o'clock on the third floor of the court house. The convention, composed of delegates from the various precinct conventions, will choose delegates to the state convention from which delegates will be sent from Texas to the national convention where candidates of the party for president and vice president will be chosen. Oscar Lyster is county democratic chairman.

Delegations from both of Cisco's two voting boxes will go to the convention unopposed as to candidates or issues.

Following are the delegations: West Cisco—J. T. Elliott, R. W. Mancill, Will St. John, Mrs. Will St. John, Virgil Heyser, Mrs. Virgil Heyser, J. M. Williamson, Omar Burkett, B. A. Butler, J. H. Reynolds, R. L. Ponsler, Jim Flournoy, Mrs. Jim Flournoy, Chas. Kleiner, Karl Armstrong, Leith Morris, F. D. Wright, Mrs. F. D. Wright, Geo. P. Fee, Mrs. Geo. P. Fee, Yancey McCrea, Mrs. Yancey McCrea, R. W. Burkett, W. J. Armstrong, Mrs. W. J. Armstrong, R. N. Cluck, Mrs. R. N. Cluck, L. V. Siddall, J. A. Warren, J. E. Spencer.

East Cisco—F. W. Dill, Mrs. F. W. Dill, H. S. Stubblefield, J. R. Burnett, Mrs. J. R. Burnett, R. W. H. Kennon, Doss Pelfrey and Charles Guinn.

Greece Opens Strategic New Railway Line

ATHENS, May 6 (AP).—A strategic new railway line, which would give British and French troops an additional route northward if they were landed at Salonika in the event of the extension of the war to southeastern Europe, was opened Sunday by King George II and members of the Greek cabinet.

The new rail line, which starts at Salonika, runs north through the Struma river valley into Bulgaria.

Opening of the line coincided with circulation throughout the Balkans of reports, apparently German in origin, that debarkation of British and French troops at Salonika actually was imminent.

There was no indication either in Athens or Salonika to indicate that the Greek government expected a landing. Fishermen returning to the port said they had seen no signs of preparation for such an operation.

However, they did report sighting additional British war vessels on patrol duty in the Aegean sea, where a number of British ships have been stationed since the start of the war.

With all of the Balkan states anxiously watching developments in the eastern Mediterranean, Greece, like her neighbors, is hoping to preserve her neutrality, but at the same time is preparing to fight if an enemy should be thrust upon her.

Allied Troops Hurry To Narvik Attack

BERLIN, May 6 (AP).—Detachments of British and French troops, apparently left behind in the allied withdrawal from Namsos, are hurrying northward in what may be an attempt to launch an attack on Narvik from the south, DNB, official news agency, reported Sunday.

The movement of the allied troops, it said, was discovered in scouting operations, while the main force of the German army of occupation pushed its hold on Norway as far as the railheads of Namsos and Grong, north of Trondheim, and continued mop-

FRENCH SAY NAZI THRUST IS REPULSED

PARIS, May 6 (AP).—The French high command reported Sunday night that German troops attacking in increasing force on the Western front were driven off by a spirited counter attack after the nazis had succeeded momentarily in penetrating the line of French advance posts.

The German stab early Sunday morning at French positions in the wooded valleys where the Saar river bends into France was the second nazi attack in force within 24 hours at the central sector of the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine.

The field-gray-clad Germans attacked behind what the French communique described as "heavy artillery fire."

The fact that they were able to break through the gaps between the French advance posts and surround three of them indicated the attack was considerably more concentrated than that of the morning before, when two companies of Germans were forced back by the crossed fire of French machine guns and automatic rifles.

Small sections of French troops, pinned within the advance posts by the encircling Germans, kept up a steady stream of fire until the French counterattack could be organized from the resistance line to the rear.

This attack, led by light scouting units trained to come to close grips with the enemy, drove off the nazis, the official communique reported.

Sunday night's communique declared the Germans encircling three French outposts before they were driven off by a counterattack.

Mrs. Powell Wins Luncheon Service

Mrs. Troy Powell was awarded the Fiesta luncheon set for the best essay submitted in the Lowe Brothers contest sponsored here through Burton - Lingo Lumber company, it was announced today. Thirty essays were submitted, and these were judged at Fort Worth.

Mrs. Powell received her beautifully decorated luncheon service this morning.

Band Parents To Meet Tonight

The Cisco Band Parents club will meet at the high school at 7:30 this evening, it was announced today. All members are urged to attend.

"Dangerous," Red Papers Say of British "Game"

MOSCOW, May 6 (AP).—The newspaper Red Navy charged Sunday that British "imperialists in the near east continue a dangerous game dependent on maximum expansion of the war—a game which may bring serious consequences to its initiators."

"Events in Scandinavia have not removed the question of the near east from the question of the day," the newspaper said. "Notes of alarm more and more frequently are met with in the British press. They indicate some serious worries of British imperialists in the near east."

"Sweet speeches on defense of minor nations in the light of recent events in Norway can hardly deceive anybody. The direct question at the present is maintaining British strategic positions in preparation for a new base of attack, and also for oil."

"Having strengthened her most important economical positions and taken into her hands the oil resources of Iraq and Iran, Britain would have liked to locate big garrisons there for protection of British strategic positions. But Britain had to renounce this policy even after the first World war."

"England is strengthening her positions there by concentrations of troops in territories and countries under British influence, through a 'purse' policy of granting loans not only to Turkey, but also to Iraq, Iran and Saudi Arabia, and, finally by bribing small feudal princes."

The authoritative newspaper Trud asserted that Norway is the

Norge Fortress Near Trondheim Surrenders

BERLIN, May 6 (AP).—Surrender Sunday of a die-hard group of Norwegian soldiers in the rock-ribbed fortress of Hegra, twenty miles east of Trondheim, was announced Sunday by DNB, official German news agency.

Surrounded by German mountain troops, a force of fifteen officers and 160 men in the fortress capitulated, the agency said.

Hegra fortress, guarding the railroad to the Swedish border from Trondheim, had been under German pressure for more than two weeks.

As long ago as April 22 the Germans were reported attacking from two sides, but the Norwegians, favored by the difficult terrain, were able to withstand them. With the withdrawal of allied forces from Andalsnes and Namsos, south and north of Trondheim, the Hegra garrison lost hope of being relieved.

Norway is a good deal nearer Britain than the Mediterranean, and the traditional British confi-

DEMAND PROBE OF CAMPAIGN IN NORWAY

LONDON, May 6 (AP).—Two key cabinet ministers of the fugitive Norwegian government arrived in London Sunday for consultation with the British government as strong demands for a "grand inquiry" in parliament on the allied conduct of the campaign were made throughout gloomy Great Britain.

Here to talk for Norway's government-in-hiding are its foreign minister, Dr. Halvdan Koht, to whom the German ambassador in Oslo last month presented demands that Norway capitulate, and Defense Minister Col. Birger Ljungberg.

The Norwegians came to a Scottish port on a British warship. Word of their journey was closely guarded for several hours after their arrival.

With the two ministers was the British minister to Norway, Sir Cecil Dormer, who had been with the Norwegian regime since it fled Oslo a jump ahead of the Germans at the start of the nazi invasion April 9.

A message to the Norwegian people not to lose "patience" and counseling them to put their trust in the allies was broadcast from London by Dr. Koht, who last month defied Germany's demand that Norway submit to the nazi occupation and then fled with his king and government before the gray-clad nazi warriors.

The foreign minister said in the broadcast after the conferences that the allies had promised Norway "full aid" and that it was a point of honor for them to fulfill that promise.

Press criticism of the British government's handling of the Norwegian campaign which saw the allies abandon southern and central Norway to the nazis presaged a torrid meeting of parliament Tuesday for a two-day debate.

But in the midst of the editorial and oratorical furor, the admiralty and air ministry remained silent on the war and a war office communique said only:

"There is nothing of importance to report from Narvik, where operations are continuing. There has been slight enemy air activity in this area."

The average Briton appeared more concerned over the strategic reverse in Norway and the potentialities of German domination there than any danger in the Mediterranean, where the allies concentrated naval strength last week.

With the withdrawal of allied forces from Andalsnes and Namsos, south and north of Trondheim, the Hegra garrison lost hope of being relieved.

"There Are No Children Any More . . ."

By WILLIS THORNTON

THE brandished fist, traditional salute of the communist party and in general of all Marxist parties devoted to inevitable class war, is a symbol which suggests defiance and violence, hatred and death.

In New York's May day parade, a tiny girl of five or six was carried on the shoulders of an elder, waving a tiny fist.

Must the very babies be dragged down into the weltering mass of antagonisms and hatreds which we, their elders, have created? Then what hope is there that they will do better than we?

It is true, bitterly true, that we elders have robbed millions of children of their right to a happy childhood. It is true that numberless children are victims of war, and greed, and stupidity. But it is not their fault. Nor can they, as babies, do anything about it. It is our fight, the fight of the mature, to do better for them than we have done.

Soon enough, too soon, the children will find themselves pitchforked into the struggles, the antagonisms, the prejudices and hatreds that are not natural to them, but which they acquire from contact with life. Must we force hatred into their lisping mouths in the very cradle?

Rather than teach them as babies the shibboleths of class and racial hatreds, ought not we to dress ourselves manfully to the task of eliminating the injustices from which those hatreds spring? Their turn to fight will come in time, and may they fight with greater understanding and clearer vision than ours.

"Know you what it is to be a child?" asked Shelley. "It is to be something very different from the man of today. It is . . . to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, to believe in belief . . ."

Surely there are enough to hate, and fight, and brandish fists. Surely we can afford to let the children wait their turn.

The work of the relief agencies for the unfortunates in Europe is inspiring. But what are they doing for Hitler, the Have-Nots, who has nothing but five squirming nations tucked in his vest pocket?

Scientists report violent submarine earthquakes eroding the floor of the Atlantic Ocean. These eruptions are small stuff compared to what's going on on the surface these days.

What's more embarrassing for the office boy who is caught at the ball game, after giving the old excuse, is to be caught there with the modern grandmother who insisted on coming along.

Jimmy Cromwell, the New Jersey candidate, announces that the wife is expecting. It is the farsighted politician who, remembering he must kiss babies, provides his own to practice on.

murky dawn, was excitedly waiting for her. "Miss Sherry, we're all ready; we be the first to leave. We jes' takin' one horse—others takin' a stableful. We got the road in front of us—clean; and I knows ev'ry turn 'n' short cut. But Miss Sherry," his voice dropped to a worried tone, "that 'ar Mistah Paul Wharton wuz here two-three minutes ago, a-frownin' at our trailer."

"Frowning? What did he say?" "He say—but here he be, now." Sam turned away as a wiry figure in light tweeds came out of the morning mists.

Paul Wharton was all business. He strode up to Sherry, ignored everyone else, said brusquely: "Lucky I've an extra stall in my head van—next to Red Soldier. You can put Pepper Boy in there. I'll charge you only your share of transportation costs—won't be much."

Sherry bridled at his manner, and at the memory of yesterday. "Lucky, eh? You are big-hearted," she said, moving away from him. Wharton, ignoring her coolness, followed her. "Every other trailer on the track has asked me for a van room—I've the best vans, most careful drivers—turned 'em all down. It's either your horse, or nobody's, Sherry."

"Lucky me! But you forget I've a van of my own." She nodded toward the stable. Sam had already backed the trailer against a small loading platform, now was hitching the big car to it. Ted, woman-like, was neatly piling the contents of the tack room into the car; now Sam was bringing Pepper Boy, blanketed, out of his stall. Uncle Willie directed him up the ramp, onto the loading platform, then onto the trailer, where he was securely haltered.

"We're just about ready to move, Paul," Sherry was saying crisply, when a lanky figure called: "Heh, what's up?"

Sherry would have known the voice even if she hadn't recognized the rolling gait of the speaker. "Hello, Shep!" she called. "We're heading for the Downs."

Shep Grant came over to them looking sharply at Paul Wharton. "What are you trying to talk Sherry into now?" he drawled. Wharton stepped back, deliberately looked Shep Grant over from his rider's English boots, whipcord riding breeches, black coat molded to the waist, the white stock and tie, to the hat resting jauntily on his thick, fair

Collie Will Seek Re-Election to State Senate

EASTLAND, May 6.—Senator Wilbourne B. Collie of Eastland has announced his intentions to again seek his post in the state senate from the 24th district. Collie is now serving his second term and he is the only senator to have ever been reelected from this district.

Collie emphasized the importance of experience and training and the value of familiarity with the rules and precedents in legislative procedure in his announcement.

"Patrick Henry once said: 'I have but one light by which my hair, Paul grinned broadly, asked: "Where's the show ring, Grant? I thought this was a race track."

"Grant made no answer. "Come, you two," Sherry said quickly. "It's no fair scrapping before breakfast."

"Well," exclaimed Shep Grant, with a bright smile at Sherry. "I'll wait until you're free, Sherry." He walked away.

"Sorry, Sherry—Grant's all right," Wharton said evenly. "Now, about that trailer, Sherry. I don't like it. Those light, two-wheel affairs with no tops—they're dangerous."

"Getting quite fussy, aren't you, Paul? Thanks for your solicitude." "Sorry," his manner changed. He smiled, took his hat in his hand a moment. "Guess I am—fussy. I'll try to do better."

He took her hand. His voice dropped low. "Sherry, before you go—I must tell you— "My dear Paul!" Sherry's voice lost its ice, "do you know the time's flying—and we must be moving. You are going, too, this morning, aren't you?"

"Yes, we go, too, in a little while," He spoke awkwardly. "Then I'll break the trail for you. And Paul, the best of luck! We'll see you in Kentucky."

Wharton's eyes were saying a lot, but the only words his lips would frame were, "Good luck, Sherry." "Good luck, Paul," she repeated softly.

"Darling!" he whispered, but she stopped him. "I'll see you at the Downs, Paul." She nodded graciously, turned aside. He watched her for a moment, then moved swiftly off.

feet are guided and that is the lamp of experience; I know of no way to judge the future except by the past. The people can best judge whether a man will be a faithful public servant in the future by determining whether he has been a faithful public servant in the past.

"During the years I have been in the senate, which service has been co-extensive with the far reaching reforms, beginning in 1933 in the state and nation, I have sought to serve the people with all the zeal, diligence and ability that I possess. I am now before them to present an accounting of my stewardship with the hope that my record merits continuance of their support."

Reviews Record
Collie briefly reviewed the achievements and legislation which has received his support.

"Judging by the history made during this period, is there justification for believing that under similar circumstances and with similar differences of opinion, any more practical results would or could have been achieved with respect to the policy of doing fair and equal justice to all men, be they rich or poor?"

Collie has been one of the most active members and a leader in the senate for social reforms, but is regarded as conservative in appropriations and revenue bills. He was a supporter of the famous S. J. R. 12, but has consistently opposed a sales tax. He stated, however, that it was democratic to submit such a controversial matter to the people themselves for determination.

"I am in favor of paying the social security obligation," he said, "preferably by a tax upon the Jeffersonian fundamental that taxes shall be borne by those best able to pay—in other words those who have the most and who receive the most—should carry the main part of the load. I prefer a tax upon the corporate interests and reasonable increases upon the natural resources rather than a general sales tax because a sales tax bears most heavily upon the present day army of unemployed, the day laborer, and the mass of our population and would reduce their purchasing power and lower even more their standard of living.

Why A Candidate
The senator asks the question: "Why am I a candidate for another term?" and answers it by saying: "If only the honor of holding this office was involved, there would be no point in my running again because the people have been kind enough to bestow that honor on me already. But because the people have chosen me as their senator, I have been able to serve on the important committees of the senate and gain a knowledge of government, an experience in public matters, I hope, a maturity which comes with duties and responsibilities."

Collie is a member of twelve senate committees and is chairman of the rules, public lands and land committee and the senate investigating committee.

"In view of the highly important question so vital to the happiness of our people which MUST be solved by the next legislature, I feel it is my duty to tender my services to the district again, should the people care to avail themselves of such knowledge as I have acquired and such experience as I have gained."

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SHERRY BOND — Society girl, owner of race horse, Pepper Boy.
PAUL WHARTON—Rival owner, determined to teach Sherry that racing is not a woman's game.
SHEP GRANT — Young gentleman rider.
WILLIE BOND—Sherry's uncle, a turf "adviser."

YESTERDAY: Sherry's new-found cousin, Ted Bond, appoints herself chaperone for Sherry. Sherry argues against her making the trip to the Derby, but Ted insists. As Sherry admits Willie Bond, she laughs at the way her stable is growing.

CHAPTER X

Freshly barbered, a white flower in his button-hole, William Bond strode across the threshold, the spirit of arrogant prosperity. "Ted, this is Uncle Willie—"

Uncle Willie gave one sharp look at the lanky girl—listened with only casual interest as Sherry explained their connection. He nodded, said, "How do?" then turned and beamed on Sherry.

"Good news, my dear. Discovered a one-horse, two-wheel trailer available at the track, just the thing to ship Pepper Boy to the Downs in."

"How nice! What will it cost and where is the money coming from?" "It will cost you nothing. Your Uncle William makes it as his contribution to the Lone Tree stable. Ye shall leave tomorrow—early. Made all arrangements. Sam will drive your car. We'll hitch the trailer to it and roll."

"Willie Bond, what have you been up to? Have you been gambling?" "Well, now—" Uncle Willie preened himself shamelessly. "I had a hunch; thought Pepper Boy would surely run second, at least—and he did. I invested $12—"

"You gambled $12," Sherry said without mercy. "I put up $12 at 3 to 1. I continued undaunted. Won $36 but got back my $12, making a total of $48."

spoke in awed accents: "I think the major is wonderful—"

Sherry saw Uncle Willie expand at the use of the title—he even smiled at the homely teacher, who added: "It took me three years to save my first $300."

He turned to her, beamed: "And you have it still, haven't you, my dear?" Sherry saw the teacher's face glow at Uncle Willie's manner. "Yes—I have."

"Right! Hard come by, it stays forever. Easy come—quick go. I wouldn't have had mine—tomorrow afternoon."

He threw a big arm around Sherry, spoke to the world at large: "Sherry took me in—gave me bread. So my dear, I bought the trailer—got it for $225—and here's the $20 you advanced yesterday." He forced a bill into her hands. "And here—this is money your horse won today—after I paid stable expenses. He thrust more bills into her hands."

Sherry stepped from his sheltering arm. "Willie Bond I—darn it! You ought to be spanked for gambling. It's a fool's game—you know that. The money in racing—if there is any—comes from breeding, or owning a great stake horse. You only go broke—betting."

"Yes, yes, my dear. I shall try to refrain—in the future." "Sherry," Ted was speaking out. "I'm certain this was just a little excursion of the major's."

"Oh, are you! So soon?" Sherry looked at Ted Bond with amusement. Ted blushed furiously. The major didn't understand at all. Men are dumb that way.

WHEN Your Boy Grows Up!

All mothers and fathers want their children to have worthwhile employment when they grow up. The Texas oil business is manned by Texans . . . the Texas boys and girls of yesterday. 225,000 of them earn good livings for themselves and their families—a yearly payroll of $271,000,000. Oil pays good wages . . . maintains reasonable working hours . . . and offers opportunity for promotion. Old age retirement and unhampered development of the oil business will provide many new jobs each year for our young Texas workers. But the growing tax burden is a serious factor in wages and employment, since the Texas oil industry now pays taxes equal to 36 per cent of its labor payrolls. Unwise laws and excessive taxes can retard and stop the growth of this industry which means so much to the future employment of our boys and girls.

Cecilian Club Has Annual Tea Saturday

The Cecilian Singers entertained with their annual Spring tea Saturday afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30 in the home of Mrs. R. C. Hayes, honorary member of the organization. Mrs. W. W. Wallace was general chairman in charge of arrangements.

The receiving line was composed of Mmes. Hayes, O. L. Stamey, W. B. Statham and Yancey McCrea. Assisting in the living room were Mmes. John E. Walter, A. E. Jamison, R. B. Carswell, James Mobley and J. J. Tableman, and in the dining room, Mmes. Leon Maner, Charles Clark, W. D. Johnston, R. N. Cluck, Misses Elizabeth Daniel, Marian Chambliss and Ella Andres.

Iris, larkspur and other seasonal flowers were used to decorate the receiving rooms. In the dining room the table was laid with an imported handmade lace cloth and centered with an attractive arrangement of pink peonies in a crystal bowl, placed on a reflector. The centerpiece was flanked by rose candles in crystal holders.

A large container of talisman roses dominated the buffet.

At intervals during the afternoon Hjalmar Bergh, director-accompanist for the Cecilian Singers, sang the following selections, playing his own accompaniment: "Come Raggio di Sol," by Caldara; "O Cessate di Piagnere," by Scarlatti; "Ultima Rosa," by Spier; "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Old Black Joe," by Foster; "Loch Lomond," "There Was a Bonnie Lass," and "It is Na, Jean, Thy Bonnie Face," by Park; "Trees," by Rasbach; "Smilin' Through," by Penn; "A Perfect Day," by Bond, and an encore, "Mighty Lak A Rose," by Nevin.

Approximately 80 called during the afternoon including the following honorary and associate members, Mmes. Lee Clark, John Shertzer and Abbie C. Daniel.

Hjalmar Bergh Appears In Organ Concert

Hjalmar Bergh appeared on a fine arts program at the First Baptist church in Eastland Sunday afternoon, the program sponsored by the Eastland Music Study club in observance of national music week.

Sunday's program was the first in a series of three to be held there this week, the other two being held Tuesday and Friday nights at the high school auditorium and First Methodist church, respectively.

Mr. Bergh played the following organ selections: "Choral Prelude" and "Priore A Notre Dame," from Suite Gothique by L. Boellman; "Herzlich Thut Mich Verlangen," by Bach; "Nocturne," by Stanley Avery, and "Chant Heroique," by C. Franck.

Others appearing were Mrs. Victor Ginn of Eastland, soprano soloist, accompanied by Mrs. D. L. Kinnaird; and Elwood R. Priesing of Ranger, pianist.

Ciscoans who attended were Mmes. O. L. Stamey, C. P. Cole, Joe Hanrahan, John E. Walter, R. C. Hayes, R. F. Gilman, James Mobley, W. B. Statham, Dr. and Mrs. W. I. Ghormley, Misses Miriam Ghormley, Billye Cole, Joellen Hanrahan, Ella Andres and Freda Fern Erwin.

Cathryn Shepard Is MM Hostess

Miss Cathryn Shepard entertained members of the Double M club in their regular weekly meeting Saturday afternoon at her home. After the usual order of business, games were played and refreshments served.

Members present were Misses Patty Boyd, Betty Slicker, Allene Ely, Gloria Graham, Jacqueline Ruppert, Peggy Jean Gallagher, Wanda June Bond, Dorothy Jean Anderson and the hostess, Cathryn Shepard.

Personals

Miss Laura Lu Waring of Dallas spent the week-end here.

Miss Johnnie Sue Slaughter of Abilene spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Slaughter.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Goldberg left Sunday afternoon for a visit with relatives in Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Frazier, Sr., of Llano, visited friends here briefly en route to their home from Oklahoma.

challenge. It is not a new political maneuver. It has been employed quite often. But rarely has the occasion for employing it thrown into such relief the issue that it now suggests. Sooner or later, the people of the United States are going to really demand the solution. They have a habit of getting down to fundamentals when things have gone badly long enough.

And that is when the answer to the president's clever challenge will come. It may not be altogether what the New Deal is expecting. But it will be what the statesmen are expecting—if there are any left.

ping-up action in central and southern Norway. DNB asserted that the British and French detachments had been cut off from the main expeditionary force by German aerial attacks on the embarkation operations at Namsos last Wednesday and Thursday.

German military quarters speculated whether the British and French would attempt to reach Narvik.

To do so, these isolated allied troops would have to make their way through more than 500 miles of the most mountainous, difficult terrain in Norway. A single highway runs north as far as Bodø, on the coast. But there is no road for the 100 miles from there to Narvik, and the intervening country is dotted with mountains and rendered even more difficult to negotiate by numerous deep-running fjords, streams and lakes.
